Death Ends Active and Useful Career

JOHN B. CLASSEN.

part in political affairs. His first offices were as township trustee and assessor.

In 1895 he was elected to the lower house of the Iowa legislature, serving two terms and then an extra session. In 1900 he was elected to the Iowa senate, without opposition, serving until 1904. As a member of the Iowa house he served in the special session of 1896, when the code of Iowa was revised, and was chairman of the committee on county and township organization, which proved an important committee in that session. While in the senate he was chairman of the committee on highways and was a member of the ways and means, agriculture, military and other committees.

When the Marshall County Fair Association was organized he was elected as its first president and was re-elected for five years in succession.

Successful in Business.

In addition to his political activities, Mr. Classen found time to engage in business. He was a stockholder and director in the Marshalltown State Bank for many years, and was long interested in the Producers' Savings Bank of Green Mountain, being vice president of the latter institution for several years and its president last year. He was also a member of the Farmers' Elevator Association at Green Mountain and was at one time its vice president.

Miss Belle Classen, an adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Classen, survives. A nephew, F. B. Foster, city, and a niece, Mrs. William Semple, of Yankton, S. D., also survive.

Funeral Wednesday Afternoon.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon from the Congregational church, in charge of Rev. Willis K. Williams. The church will be open to friends at 1:30. The G. A. R. will be in charge of the services at the grave. Burial will be in Marshalltown.

STYLE NOTES

Fashions in jewelry include the wearing of a pearl comb in the back of the hair and a pearl necklace in which the clasp may be placed at any point in the string. Then there is a bracelet formed of topaz links alternated with those of white gold edged in white and black enamel.

Vanilla, cream and banana are not a combination of candy but shades that are popular in sartorial circles. All are in the old ivory family, the banana being the creamy tone of the inside of the fruit. They are particularly alluring in satin and are thus used for evening gowns.

Extremely wide velvet ribbon, particularly black, is a pleasing expression of the collar devised for formal coats and wraps for afternoon wear. They are developed in looped jabots, revers and huge bows, or else are draped in deep collars that fall over the shoulders.

Three-piece suits of dark colored satin are favored by one of the prominent houses of Paris. Straight little satin coats with pleated skirts and matching satin, hip-length blouses are shown, the latter generously embroidered in gold, silver and colors. Satin buttons are used on them, but as fasteners not merely as trimming.

London women are wearing detachable cuffs with their evening dresses. A "period" frock of leaf green velvet seen at a London theater was made in this style with detachable gauntlet cuffs of the same velvet. An outstanding collar across the back of the neck emphasized the effect.

Jeanne Lanvin has created an organdy dress for the sweet girl graduate. It is formed of many scalloped tiers. A deep three-tiered collar carries out the idea of the old-fashioned modern girl. The original model was in rose pink, but white and other pastel shades are equally effective.

The president's printing allowance is $3,000.
