wind ripped off a metal awning over the front door and sent it soaring over the house high into a willow tree in the back yard about 100 feet away.

Temperatures were held down by the wind, with the early afternoon reading at 52 degrees after an overnight low of 43.

The Weather Bureau warned of possible frost or freeze here,

"Anyone who has put house plants outside, however, better bring them in," he warned.

If the temperature drops below 32 degrees, owners of fruit trees will be "in trouble," he said, "but there's not much that can be done about it."

Tulips are pretty hardy and shouldn't suffer damage, he added.

Elthon Dies; Once Governor

By a Staff Writer

MASON CITY, IA. — Leo Elthon of Fertile, former governor of Iowa, died Sunday night in a Mason City hospital at the age of 68.

LEO ELTHON

A Republican leader in state government, Mr. Elthon had been ill since suffering a heart attack three years ago. He underwent surgery last December at Rochester, Minn.

Mr. Elthon was serving at Iowa's lieutenant governor when Gov. William S. Beardsley was killed Nov. 21, 1954, in an auto accident.

Mr. Elthon served as governor for 53 days — the second shortest gubernatorial term in the state's history.

He remained in office until Jan. 13, 1955, when Leo Hoegh, who had been elected before Gov. Beardsley's death, was installed as Iowa's chief executive.

Mr. Elthon then returned to the lieutenant governor's post to which he had been re-elected for a second 2-year term. His return as its presiding officer was marked by the entire Iowa Senate standing and applauding, a unique honor in senate history.

"First Love"

Mr. Elthon described the Senate on that occasion as "my first love and interest in governmental service."

Mr. Elthon was elected to the Senate in 1932 and represented Howard, Mitchell and Worth Counties until his election as lieutenant governor in 1952. Between 1946 and 1950, he was Republican floor leader.

In 1951, Mr. Elthon received the first Des Moines Press and Radio Club award for outstanding service in the senate.

Heart Attack

After leaving state government, Mr. Elthon served as mayor of Fertile until 1963 when he returned to the Legislature as a senator and remained in that post until suffering a heart attack in 1964.

Born at Fertile, Mr. Elthon farmed in Worth County most of his life and was in the quarry business. He also taught school at Clear Lake and was principal at Fertile High School. In his

39 Trucks Collect Rest Of Rubbish

City crews, unable to complete a special trash pick-up on the city's west side last Saturday, were attempting to get the job finished Monday.

Saturday was to have been the final day of "clean-up, paint up, fix-up week," during which city crews collected rubbish all over the city.

Leo Johnson, city director of public works, said the crews were unable to complete the pick-up in the last area on the west side, which is bounded on the east by Thirtieth street north of and Thirty-first street south of University, on the west and north by the city limits, and on the south by the Raccoon River.

Quit at 3 p.m.

Johnson said that about half the rubbish placed at curbside in the final area was collected Saturday. He said city workers were working on an overtime pay basis Saturday and because it appeared the work would take until midnight to complete the crews were sent home at 3 p.m.

Johnson said 36 city trucks aided by three garbage trucks were sent out to make the collections Monday. Garbage trucks were not used before, he said, because regular garbage collections were being made.

Some Added?

Johnson said it appeared that some placed rubbish on the curb after crews had already made collections Saturday. The rubbish was to have been placed a
