—A large stock and low prices. That's Ben Major's bid for business. Who makes a better?

—We print the Local [illegible] on green paper this week for several reasons. First of all because green denotes life and growth. The [illegible] is getting there, Eli, with both feet right along. Then again, we know it will be a [illegible] advertisement, because every Democrat and Republican crank in the county will be talking about it, and many of them will want one. There's nothing like being advertised. Nothing like having people talk about a [illegible] They abuse him. It makes people want to take the paper to see what he has to say back. Many people have wondered why we reprint every mean thing said about us. We do it because it pays. It pays to let people know that certain fellows are fighting you. It pays to have some fellows abuse you. As the Democrat and Republican are not issued this week, we print enough extra copies to send to most of their readers, so they shall not be without a local paper. Don't forget to talk about the green paper. Show it to your neighbor. Have them read it carefully. When your copy is worn out, come in and get a new one. If necessary, you might put in a word occasionally about the green edition. It won't hurt [illegible] and it may delight some poor creature who hasn't an ambition above a [illegible] So shout! Fight it! Shoot the green paper. And when you come to town, come in and see where it is printed.

—When you are tired of paying six prices for goods, take a rest and trade with the Chicago Clothing Company. They have only one price for all.

—This Notice. Don't you forget it. We don't want any more hay on subscription or any other way.

—Come right along, friends, with your subscription. We need the money to pay our bills.

—Trade with the Chicago Clothing Company.

—Dont fail to see Lanberg's [illegible] display of holiday goods.
