eived guests at the DeSota, while s. Grant was driven to her old home. Th concluded the afternoon proceed- gs, and the occasion was a proud one r our sister city of Galena.

GALENA AN NIGHT.

Thousands of windows brilliantly illum ated, transparencies in all directions, aring appropriate welcomes, cannon oming, sky-rockets shooting into the r, bands playing, are the main features the evening's entertainment. At the rant residence the family are receiving eir friends and talking over old times. is a night of general celebration, and ill be kept up until early morn. At urner Hall a large ball is being held honor of the great man. Such a car- ival of mirth has not raged since 1856, nd it is doubtful if it did then. Galena onors her illustrious son, and has hown it in to-day's work. Well may he be proud of General Ulysses, as there s n ation in the world that has ever ad a more pppular or greater man.

GEN. GRANT'S INTENTIONS.

He will remain in Galena until the 12th inst., when he will proceed to Chi- cago to attend the reunion. After the Chicago reception he will visit Indianap- olis, and then proceed to Kentucky. From Kentucky he goes to Cincinnati; and next a visit to Washington, Phila- delphia and other Eastern cities. He will spend part of the winter in visiting Florida and Havana, and Mexico. Next summer will be occupied by a trip to the Sandwich Islands. So Mrs. Gen. Grant informed Mrs. Gen. Logan.

GRANT ITEMS.

Gen. Grant bears the honors showered upon him with the greatest modesty. He appears the least concerned of any.

The old tattered flags which floated over the head of the General on the plat- f , were relics from Gen. Logan's di- vision, and went through the entire service. The shot and shell before Vicksburg tore them into rags.

Gov. Gear made a noble effort, and re- ceived an applause which did him credit.

IN MEMORY

Of Hon. Dennis A. Mahony, Whose Death Occurred on Yesterday.

A Brief Sketch of a Few of the Leading Incidents of a Long and Useful Life.

The long failing health of Hon. Dennis A. Mahony has been a fact known and regretted throughout this community, and while the news of his death yesterday created a widespread and profound sorrow it brought little surprise to those who had been long prepared to hear the sad intelligence which announced Mr. Mahony's death at 2 o'clock yesterday morning at his residence on Seminary Hill. Several years ago his health became enfeebled and continued to fail until the fall of 1877, when his disease assumed a more alarming form, and during the remainder of the year and winter he was unable to leave his house, although he attended to his editorial duties of the Telegraph, of which he had been editor since 1871. During the spring of 1878, there was a marked improvement in Mr. Mahony's health, which encouraged his family and friends to hope for his ultimate and entire recovery to the strength and vigor which had so strongly marked his mental and physical life through his many active years in literary, editorial and political pursuits. These hopes were doomed to disappointment, and later Mr. Mahony's health so perceptibly failed again that at the urgent request of physicians and friends he dropped his busy pen and sought change and repose from labor at the home of his daughter in St. Louis and later visiting Perry Springs, Illinois, where he remained several months and returned to his home with every prospect of a favorable and permanent change in his condition, still, however, much debilitated and finding himself in the harness duties which had, for so many

Gov. Gear made a noble effort, and received an applause which did him credit.

THE TIMES reporter is greatly inde 1 to Mrs. Gen. Logan and Mr. Davis, Harper's sketch artist, for several points. Mr. Davis went through the entire war sketching battle scenes for Harper. And last but not least Mr. W. Giles, who assisted THE TIMES reporter by taking down the speech in shorthand, at which he is expert.

The locomotive of the Grant train was handsomely decorated with flags and foliage. Over the top of all hung two black flags, in kind remembrance of Michigan's late Senator, Hon. Zach. Chandler.

Galena will never see another day like Wednesday, Nov. 5.

Senator Allison was compelled to step to the front and make a few remarks. If he had not the crowd might still be yelling frantically for the popular Iowa statesman. His remarks were chosen or and met with great favor.

Dubuque Miss was the first to shake the hand of the hero. Dubuque enterprise again.

General Grant will give Dubuque a visit, but it will be an impromptu one.

General Logan resembles Judge Pollock, only our Judge is better looking.

The Galena Gazette was not issued. Too much enthusiasm among its workmen.

Old solid Dubuque county Democrats were in Galena yesterday and cheered loud and long for the great hero.

The Knights of Pythias from Dubuque made an imposing appearance and assisted greatly in lending beauty to the procession. A finer looking organization was not present yesterday.

Newspaper reporters were thick in Galena and worked like beavers. They came from all parts of the country.

Captain Girdon had his residence handsomely decorated. He is one of the wide-awake citizens of Galena.

The Dubuque Veteran Corps felt happy to again follow their old commander. While the band played the "Star Spangled Banner" the boys sang it while on his home with every prospect of a favorable and permanent change in his condition, still, however, much debilitated and finding irksome the business duties which had, for so many years enlisted his close attention and unremitting interest, the results having given him a far reaching reputation as one of the most able, fearless and conscientious editors and writers of the western press. The disease, which seemed to be wholly one of the digestive organs, made sure and rapid inroads upon the naturally strong and resisting constitution of Mr. Mahony, until October, 1878, when he made his last visit to the office of the Telegraph, although continuing to prosecute his editorial labors at intervals for many months.

During the past spring and summer, disease and native strength have fluctuated and struggled for supremacy, until at last weary nature tired with its conflict ceased to oppose the hand of the approaching destroyer and for a month it seemed apparent to Mr. Mahony and his friends that the end was drawing rapidly near, and several weeks ago necessary preparations for the final summons were made. The deceased was a life-long and devout Catholic and died in the faith which he had so consistently and ardently espoused in life. He remained conscious to the latest breath and passed peacefully away from the scene of an active, eventful and useful life.

Mr. Mahony was born at Ross, County Cork, Ireland, January 20, 1821. At a very early age he removed with his parents to this country, coming to Iowa in the autumn of 1843, being engaged in the few early years of his residence as a teacher in the Catholic schools of this city and Jackson county. He studied law in Philadelphia and for a time in this place under the instruction of the well-remembered firm of Davis & Crawford. Later Mr. Mahony became editor of the Miners' Express, a pioneer paper of Dubuque, and of Iowa. The Dubuque Herald was the offspring of this paper, which Mr. Mahoney, associated with Messrs. Dowling, Wolfe and Adams, continued to manage. The Express was afterward manage. The Express was afterward purchased by the company, and the two were merged into the Express and Herald, as one paper. In 1848 Mr. Mahoney was elected to the Iowa Legislature by the citizens of Jackson county. He was also the first President of the Board of Education in this city.

He also held the position of Sheriff of this county for several years and during his last term established the St. Louis daily Times, of which he was for nearly two years the editor and one of the proprietors. He sold his interest in the paper and returned to Dubuque, purchasing the Telegraph, as we have stated, in 1871, continuing in the capacity of editor and proprietor to the time of his death.

In the many responsible positions which Mr. Mahony has filled during his connection with this community he has ever elicited the confidence and respect of his fellow citizens, whether knowing him personally or through the influence which he exercised in no small degree throughout the country. This was especially recognized in the editorial pursuits to which the later years of Mr. Mahony's life has been devoted. He was a profound thinker, an honest writer; swift to uphold what his principles declared to be right, and as quick to unsparingly denounce wrong and injustice where he believed it had existence, and where his influence, by pen or tongue, could uproot it. His life has been one of usefulness, industry and kindly association in his family and friendly relations. He has left a stainless record, over which the living may point with honest pride, of deeds that will live in loving remembrance long after the snows and suns of the changing seasons have shed their fleeting tokens over the grave of a good and sincerely-lamented man.

Mr. Mahony leaves a devoted and sorrowing widow and a family of three sons and four daughters to mourn for the considerate and loving husband, the watchful and indulgent father that is no more. The remains will be consigned to their last earthly resting place in the Catholic cemetery at Garryowen on Friday.
