cracy that Apollo 8 leads the onrushing mass of the moon by only 69 miles.

"It's like running in front of a locomotive close enough to knock a fly off the cow catcher without getting hurt," one engineer said.

After a 69-hour trip to the moon, the pilots are to trigger their main spaceship engine to kick into an egg-shaped lunar orbit ranging from 69 to 196 miles above the lunar surface. After twice circling the moon, the engine is to be triggered again to adjust the path to a 69-mile-high circular orbit.

The astronauts said they had no objection to attempting the flight at Christmastime, on a religious holiday.

"I can't think of a better religious aspect to the flight than to further explore the heavens," said Lovell. "I feel also that, as a Christmas present, I think it would be a very good one for the country."

If successful, the pilots will have proved that the Saturn 5 is capable of safely launching men to the moon and the manned space flight tracking network is capable of finding targets at lunar distances.

More film and photographic equipment than ever carried before will rocket moonward with Apollo 8.

While Anders takes photographs, Lovell plans to spend most of his time seeing how well astronauts can navigate in lunar orbit and locate landing sites.

After a six-day, three-hour mission, the pilots are to land in the Pacific Ocean, appropriately near Christmas Island, where recovery ships will be standing by.
