SEC. 1189. Approval by county auditor. When any official bond shall be presented after the final adjournment of the January session of the board of supervisors, except those of the county auditor and treasurer, the auditor may approve the same, reporting his actions in the premises to the board at its next session, and, unless disapproved by it, such bond shall continue in force as though approved by the board in the first instance; if disapproved, the new bond must be given within five days from the date of such decision, but this old bond shall stand good for all acts done up to the time of the approval of the new bond. [C. '73, § 680; R., §§ 367, 560; C. '51, § 330.]

SEC. 1190. Failure of board to approve—application to judge. If the board of supervisors refuse or neglect to approve the bond of any county officer, he may within five days thereafter, or the expiration of the time allowed for such approval, present the same for approval to a judge of the district court of the proper district, who shall fix a day for the hearing. Notice of such hearing shall be given the board of supervisors, and return made in the same manner as in a civil action, and the court or judge at the time fixed shall, unless good cause for postponement be shown, proceed to hear the matter and approve the bond, if found sufficient, and such approval shall have the same force and effect as an approval by the board of supervisors. [C. '73, § 681.]

SEC. 1191. Where filed. The bonds and oaths of state officers shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, except those of the secretary, which shall be filed and recorded in the office of the auditor; those of the county and township officers in the county auditor's office, except those of the county auditor, which shall be kept in the county treasurer's office, and those of justices of the peace, which shall be filed by the auditor in the office of the clerk of the district court, after the same have been approved and recorded. [C. '73, § 682; R., § 553; C. '51, § 333.]

SEC. 1192. Want of compliance. No official bond shall be void for want of compliance with the statute, but it shall be valid in law for the matters contained therein. [C. '73, § 689; R., § 567; C. '51, § 337.]

A bond which is not good as a statutory obligation may be good as a bond at common law: State v. Fredericks, 8–553.

The fact that the bond of a public officer was acknowledged and sworn to before a person not qualified to administer oaths, held a mere irregularity which was waived by the acceptance and approval of the bond: State v. Minton, 49–591.

The giving of a bond to the "people of Woodbury county," instead of to the county, held not such a mistake as to vitiate the security: Charles v. Haskins, 11–329.

Where a bond was given by a county treasurer "unto the county of Warren and state of Iowa," held, that it was for the security of the county and not the state: State v. Henderson, 40–242.

Irregularity in the election in pursuance of which the officer claims the office and executes the bond cannot be urged as a defense to the bond, either on behalf of principal or surety: Boone County v. Jones, 54–699.

SEC. 1193. Accounting before approval. When the incumbent of an office is re-elected, he shall qualify as above directed; but when the re-elected officer has had public funds or property in his control, under color of his office, his bond shall not be approved until he has produced and fully accounted for such funds and property to the proper person to whom he should account therefor; and the officer or board approving the bond shall indorse upon the bond, before its approval, the fact that the said officer has fully accounted for and produced all funds and property before that time under his control as such officer. [C. '73, § 690; R., § 568; C. '51, § 338.]

An officer when he enters upon a subsequent term must be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have on hand all the funds with which he is chargeable, and proof of the amount which should have been on hand at that time will be prima facie proof that it was on hand. The fact that his bond is approved without his having produced and accounted for all funds and property, as here required, will not exempt his sureties from liability: District T'p v. McCord, 54–346.

While it is the duty of the board of supervisors to require an officer to account for all public funds which have come into his hands under color of his office, before approving his bond for the second term, neither the failure to perform that duty, nor a false representation that it has been performed, will release the sureties on the bond from liability for a defalcation occurring subsequently to the approval of the board: Palmer v. Wood, 75–402.

The settlement with the county provided for by § 1458, in case of an officer holding over, is conclusive against him and the sureties on his new bond that he has the amount of money on hand which is shown by such settlement: Boone County v. Jones, 54–699.

But if such settlement is procured upon the production of checks, certificates of deposit, etc., without any effort to ascertain whether they really represent money, it is not binding upon the sureties, and they may show that the defalcation had taken place prior to the giving of their bond. But the treasurer himself is estopped from showing that he did not have the money on hand as he represented he had, even though the board knew of his fraud and participated therein: Webster County v. Hutchinson, 60–721. This estoppel, however, does not apply in a criminal prosecution for embezzlement, and the treasurer may, notwithstanding his statements to the board, show that the embezzlement occurred during a previous term, and at such time as that the prosecution therefor is barred by the statute of limitations: State v. Hutchison, 69–478.

The provision of § 1458, for indorsement upon the bond of an officer, that he has accounted for public funds previously coming into his hands, is directory; and where it appeared that there was no defalcation at the previous semi-annual settlement, held, that the sureties insisting that such defalcation had taken place before the acceptance of the bond signed by them, had the burden of proving that fact: Carroll County v. Rugles, 69–269.

The term for which an incumbent holding over is to occupy the office and qualify is not a full term, but only until the vacancy can be legally filled by election: Dyer v. Bagwell, 54–487; Boone County v. Jones, 58–373.

When an officer was elected at a regular meeting of the directors of a school district, and the meeting adjourned to a certain day for the purpose of learning whether he would accept or not, and at the adjourned meeting he refused to accept, held, that his refusal was the same as if made at the regular meeting, and the board had the same power to elect another person as if no ballot had been cast; and the fact that such election was at an adjourned meeting would not give the incumbent a right to qualify and retain the office for another term: Carter v. McFarland, 75–196.

Where a holding-over officer executed a bond with sureties for the entire period of the term of the person in whose place he held over, under a mistaken belief that he was entitled to hold for the entire term of such officer, and at the next election was duly elected to fill the vacancy in such office, and executed a new bond, held, that the sureties on the first-named bond were not co-sureties with those on the second bond for the period subsequent to the last election, and could not be compelled to contribute for a defalcation occurring during that time: Boone County v. Jones, 58–373.

The duty of an officer not to approve the bond until the person qualifying has accounted as required in this section is a duty to the public only, and neglect thereof will not render such officer liable to the sureties on the new bond: Held v. Bagwell, 58–139.

A surety is not liable for defalcation prior to the giving of the bond on which he becomes surety: Ibid.

An officer holding over after re-election and failing to file a new bond is still an officer de facto, and not a person falsely assuming to be an officer under § 4901, at least until his office is declared vacant: State v. Bates, 23–96.

In an action to recover money belonging to the county, alleged to have been obtained by defendant by fraudulent collusion with the county treasurer, statements made by the treasurer at the time of his semi-annual settlements with the board of supervisors, though some of such statements were made prior to the last satisfactory settlement, held properly admitted in evidence as tending to show the amount of money for which the treasurer was liable at different times, and as tending to show, in connection with other facts, the dealings between the treasurer and defendant: Taylor County v. Standley, 79–666.

As to liability of sureties upon the original bond of an officer holding over after the expiration of his term, see note to § 1183.

SEC. 1194. Temporary officer. Any person temporarily appointed to fill an office, during the incapacity or suspension of the regular incumbent, shall qualify, in the manner required by this chapter, for the office so to be filled. [C.'73, § 691.]

SEC. 1195. Officer holding over. When it is ascertained that the incumbent is entitled to hold over by reason of the non-election of a successor, or for the neglect or refusal of the successor to qualify, he shall qualify anew, within the time to be fixed by the board or officer who approves the bond of such officer. After the adjournment of the board of supervisors, such time shall be fixed by the county auditor in all cases where such board, if in session, would have fixed such time. [C.'73, § 690; R., § 568; C.'51, § 338.]

SEC. 1196. Recording. The auditor of each county shall keep in his office a book, to be known as the record book of officers' bonds, and record in said book the official bonds of all county officers, including justices of the peace, constables and assessors, filed in his county; and also keep an index to said book, in which, under the title of each office, shall be entered the names of each principal and his sureties, and the date of the filing of the bond. [C.'73, § 683.]

SEC. 1197. Penalty for not giving bond. It shall be a misdemeanor for any officer who is required to give bond to act in such official capacity without giving such bond as is provided by law, and he shall be liable to a fine for an amount not exceeding the amount of the bond required of him. [C.'73, § 684.]

OF CONTESTING ELECTIONS.

SECTION 1198. Grounds of contest. The election of any person to any county office, or to a seat in either branch of the general assembly, may be contested by any person eligible to such office; and the election of any person to a state office, or to the office of presidential elector, by any eligible person who received votes for the same office; and the grounds therefor shall be as follows:

1. Misconduct, fraud or corruption on the part of judges of election in any precinct, or of any board of canvassers, or any member of either board, sufficient to change the result;

2. That the incumbent was not eligible to the office at the time of election;

3. That the incumbent has been duly convicted of an infamous crime before the election, and the judgment has not been reversed, annulled or set aside, nor the incumbent pardoned, at the time of election;

4. That the incumbent has given or offered to any elector, or any judge, clerk or canvasser of the election, any bribe or reward in money, property or thing of value, for the purpose of procuring his election;

5. That illegal votes have been received or legal votes rejected at the polls, sufficient to change the result;

6. Any error in any board of canvassers in counting the votes, or in declaring the result of the election, if the error would affect the result;

7. Any other cause which shows that another person was the person duly elected. [22 G. A., ch. 49, § 1; C.'73, §§ 692, 718, 730, 737; R., §§ 569, 571, 598, 610, 617; C.'51, §§ 339, 341, 368, 380, 387.]

Since the enactment of the statute which authorizes women to hold school offices, a woman claiming to have been elected to such office may contest the election of another, although she is not an elector, within the terms of this and other sections relating to such contests. The statute making women eligible to such offices must be regarded as as having amended these sections in that respect: Brown v. McCollum, 76–479.

Where the disqualification for holding office is removed subsequently to the election to that office and prior to the entering upon the discharge of its duties, the person may properly hold the office: State ex rel. v. Van Beek, 87–569.

Where before election a candidate for a county office offered and held out as an inducement to obtain votes that he would perform the duties of the office for a less amount than the fees provided by law, and turn the balance of the fees into the county treasury, held, that this was the offer of a bribe by the officer to the electors, and his election might be contested under this section: Carrothers v. Russell, 53–346.

It does not constitute bribery at an election to relocate a county seat for persons interested in the location at a particular place to agree to give or furnish facilities for the convenience of the whole county, such as to agree to give property or money which will be for the advantage of the whole county, as, for instance, land on which to erect buildings, money for the erection of a bridge and high school building, etc.: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212; Hawes v. Miller, 56–395.

Where an agent authorized to represent a railway company in securing the adoption of a proposition to levy a tax in behalf of such railway held out as an inducement to voters to vote the tax that the company would pay them fifty per cent. on the dollar for their certificates when issued, and thereby influenced the action of some of the voters at such election, held, that the tax was thereby rendered illegal: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67–728.

Where, at an election to pass upon a contract for the sale of swamp land, improper inducements by way of personal advantage were held out to the electors of the county, held, that the contract thus ratified by them could not be enforced: Palo Alto County v. Harrison, 68–81.

To constitute a fraud in the submission of a proposition at a special election there must be some showing of artifice to conceal material facts within the knowledge of the persons submitting the proposition to vote, and which are not open and obtainable by others. There cannot be deemed to be a fraudulent concealment of matters which are public, and can be as well known to the people and voters as to the officers submitting the question to vote: Starr v. Board of Supervisors, 22–491.

SEC. 1199. Incumbent. The term "incumbent" in this chapter means the person whom the canvassers declare elected. [C.'73, § 693; R., § 570; C.' 51, § 340.]

SEC. 1200. Change the result. When the misconduct, fraud or corruption complained of is on the part of the judges of election in a precinct, it shall not be held sufficient to set aside the election, unless the rejection of the vote of that precinct would change the result as to that office. [C.'73, § 694; R., § 572; C.'51, § 342.]

SEC. 1201. Court—how constituted. The court for the trial of contested county elections shall be thus constituted: The chairman of the board of supervisors shall be the presiding officer, and the contestant and incumbent may each name a person who shall be associated with him. [C.'73, § 695; R., 573; C.'51, § 343.]

SEC. 1202. Clerk. The county auditor shall be clerk of this court, and keep all papers, and record the proceedings in the election book, in manner similar to the record of the proceedings of the district court, but when the county auditor is a party, the court shall appoint a suitable person as clerk, whose appointment shall be recorded. [C.'73, § 696; R., § 571; C.'51, § 344.]

SEC. 1203. Statement of contest. The contestant shall file in the office of the county auditor, within twenty days after the day when the incumbent was declared elected, a written statement of his intention to contest the election, setting forth the name of the contestant, and that he or she is qualified to hold such office, the name of the incumbent, the office contested, the time of the election, and the particular causes of contest, which statement shall be verified by the affidavit of the contestant, or some elector of the county, that the causes set forth are true as he verily believes. The contestant must also file with the county auditor a bond, with security to be approved by said auditor, conditioned to pay all costs in case the election be confirmed, or the statement be dismissed, or the prosecution fail. When the auditor is a party, the clerk of the district court shall receive such statement and approve such bond. [C.'73, § 697; R., § 575; C.'51, § 345.]

It is the intention that the statement of contest must be filed within twenty days after the day when the canvass of the votes was made that determined the result as to the particular office in question: Clark v. Tracy, 64 N. W., 290; Ferguson v. Henry, 64 N. W., 292.

Therefore, held in a contest as to the office of county attorney that the twenty days commenced to run from the canvass of the returns by the board of supervisors and not from the canvass of the ballots by the judges of election: Ibid.

The contestant may, after the expiration of the twenty days allowed for filing written statement of contest, amend the grounds of contest stated: Brown v. McCollum, 76–479.

SEC. 1204. Names of voters. When the reception of illegal or the rejection of legal votes is alleged as a cause of contest, the names of the persons who so voted, or whose votes were rejected, with the precinct where they voted or offered to vote, shall be set forth in the statement. [C.'73, § 698; R., § 576; C.'51, § 346.]

SEC. 1205. Trial—notice. The chairman of the board of supervisors shall thereupon fix a day for the trial, not more than thirty nor less than twenty days thereafter, and shall cause a notice of such trial to be served on the incumbent, with a copy of the contestant's statement, at least ten days before the day set for trial. [C.'73, § 699; R., §§ 577, 579, 580; C.'51, §§ 347, 349, 350.]

SEC. 1206. Judges. The contestant and incumbent shall each file in the auditor's office, on or before the day of trial, a written nomination of one associate judge of the contested election, who shall be sworn in manner and form as trial jurors are in trials of civil actions; if either the contestant or the incumbent fails to nominate, the presiding judge shall appoint for him. When either of the nominated judges fails to appear on the day of trial, his place may be filled by another appointment under the same rule. [C.'73, § 700; R., §§ 577–8; C.'51, §§ 347–8.]

SEC. 1207. Postponement. The trial shall proceed at the time appointed, unless postponed for good cause shown by affidavit, the terms of which postponement shall be in the discretion of the court. [C.'73, § 701; R., § 583; C.'51, § 353.]

SEC. 1208. Procedure—powers of court. The proceedings shall be assimilated to those in an action, so far as practicable, but shall be under the control and direction of the court, which shall have all the powers of the district court necessary to the right hearing and determination of the matter, to compel the attendance of witnesses, swear them and direct their examination, to punish for contempt in its presence or by disobedience to its lawful mandate, to adjourn from day to day, to make any order concerning intermediate costs, and to enforce its orders by attachment. It shall be governed by the rules of law and evidence applicable to the case. [C.'73, § 702; R., §§ 584, 588, 591; C.'51, §§ 354, 358, 361.]

The provisions of this and other sections plainly imply that contestant may, after the expiration of the twenty days allowed for filing statement of grounds of contest, amend such statement by setting out additional grounds: Brown v. McCollum, 76–479.

SEC. 1209. Testimony. The testimony may be oral or by deposition, taken as in an action at law in the district court. [C.'73, § 703; R., § 581; C.'51, § 351.]

SEC. 1210. Subpœnas. Subpœnas for witnesses may be issued at any time after the notice of trial is served, either by the clerk of the district court or by the county auditor, and shall command the witnesses to appear at....., on....., to testify in relation to a contested election, wherein A..... B..... is contestant and C..... D..... is incumbent. [C.'73, § 704; R., §§ 582, 586; C.'51, §§ 352, 356.]

SEC. 1211. Sufficiency of statement—amendment. The statement shall not be dismissed for want of form, if the particular causes of contest are alleged with such certainty as will sufficiently advise the incumbent of the real grounds of contest. If any part of the causes are held insufficient, they may be amended, but the incumbent will be entitled to an adjournment, if he states on oath that he has matter of answer to the amended causes, for the preparation of which he needs further time. Such adjournment shall be upon such terms as the court thinks reasonable; but if all the causes are held insufficient and an amendment is asked, the adjournment shall be at the cost of contestant. If no amendment is asked for or made, or in case of entire failure to prosecute, the proceedings may be dismissed. [C.'73, § 705; R., §§ 585, 591; C.'51, §§ 355, 361.]

SEC. 1212. Process—fees. The style, form and manner of service of process and papers, and the fees of officers and witnesses, shall be the same as in the district court, so far as the nature of the case admits. [C.'73, §§ 706, 724; R., §§ 586, 604; C.'51, §§ 356, 374.]

SEC. 1213. Place of trial. The trial of contested county elections shall take place at the county seat, unless some other place within the county is substituted by the consent of the court and parties. [C.'73, § 703; R., § 587; C.'51, § 357.]

SEC. 1214. Sheriff to attend. The court or presiding judge may direct the attendance of the sheriff or a constable when necessary. [C.'73, § 708; R., § 589; C.'51, § 359.]

SEC. 1215. Voters testify. The court may require any person called as a witness, who voted at such election, to answer touching his qualifications as a voter, and, if he was not a qualified voter in the county where he voted, then to answer for whom he voted; and if the witness answer such questions, no part of his testimony on that trial shall be used against him in any criminal action. [C.'73, § 709; R., § 590; C.'51, § 360.]

SEC. 1216. Compensation of judges. The judges shall be entitled to receive four dollars a day for the time occupied by the trial. [C.'73, § 710; R., § 593; C.'51, § 363.]

SEC. 1217. Costs. The contestant and the incumbent are liable to the officers and witnesses for the costs made by them, respectively; but if the election be confirmed, or the statement be dismissed or the prosecution fail, judgment shall be rendered against the contestant for costs; and if the judgment be against the incumbent, or the election be set aside, it shall be against him for costs. [C. '73, § 711; R., § 594; C. '51, § 364.]

SEC. 1218. How collected. A transcript of the judgment, filed and recorded in the office of the clerk of the district court as provided in relation to transcripts from justices' courts, shall have the same effect as there provided, and execution may issue thereon. [C. '73, § 712; R., § 595; C. '51, § 365.]

SEC. 1219. Certificate withheld. If notice of contesting the election of an officer is filed before the certificate of election is delivered to him, it shall be withheld until the determination of the contest. [C. '73, § 713; R., § 597; C. '51, § 367.]

SEC. 1220. Judgment. The court shall pronounce judgment whether the incumbent or any other person was duly elected, and adjudge that the person so declared elected will be entitled to his certificate. If the judgment be against the incumbent, and he has already received the certificate, the judgment shall annul it. If the court find that no person was elected, the judgment shall be that the election be set aside. [C. '73, § 714; R., § 592; C. '51, § 362.]

Ineligibility at the time of election which may be and is removed before the person elected is required to enter upon the discharge of the office will not be a ground for contest: State ex rel. v. Van Beek, 87–569.

If such disqualification might be removed and is not, the effect will be the same as though the officer elected should fail to qualify in any other respect: Ibid.

SEC. 1221. How enforced. When either the contestant or incumbent shall be in possession of the office, by holding over or otherwise, the presiding judge shall, if the judgment be against the party so in possession of the office and in favor of his antagonist, issue an order to carry into effect the judgment of the court, which order shall be under the seal of the county, and shall command the sheriff of the county to put the successful party into possession of the office without delay, and to deliver to him all books and papers belonging to the same; and the sheriff shall execute such order as other writs. [C. '73, § 715.]

SEC. 1222. Appeal. The party against whom judgment is rendered may appeal within twenty days to the district court, but, if he be in possession of the office, such appeal will not supersede the execution of the judgment of the court as provided in the preceding section, unless he gives a bond, with security to be approved by the district judge, in a sum to be fixed by him, and which shall be at least double the probable compensation of such officer for six months, which bond shall be conditioned that he will prosecute his appeal without delay, and that, if the judgment appealed from be affirmed, he will pay over to the successful party all compensation received by him while in possession of said office after the judgment appealed from was rendered. [C. '73, § 716.]

Whether notice of appeal in such case should be in writing, quære; but where verbal notice was given at the time the judgment of the court of contest was rendered, and the parties then agreed as to disposition to be made of the ballot-box, held, that the notice was sufficient under the circumstances: McIntosh v. Livingston, 41–219.

The fact of good faith and claim of right on the part of the officer de facto will not affect the right of the officer de jure to the emoluments of the office: McCue v. Wapello County, 56–698.

The contestant having assumed the burden of showing that he had received a greater number of votes than the incumbent and having put in evidence certain ballots relied upon by him as having with other ballots given him a majority of the votes, the proof that such ballots have been preserved as required by law makes out for him a prima facie case that they were the ballots cast for him at the election, but it is open to the opposite party to discredit this evidence by showing that such ballots have been changed since they were counted, and it is not necessary that such fact be alleged by way of pleading: Ferguson v. Henry, 64 N. W., 292.

The question of the genuineness of the ballots should be submitted to the jury on the trial in the district court in an appeal from the decision of the board of contest, but the jury are not to determine the validity of the ballots so far as such validity depends upon the marking thereof or the condition thereof when cast: Ibid.

SEC. 1223. Judgment on appeal. If, upon appeal, the judgment is affirmed, the district court may render judgment upon the bond for the amount of damages, against the appellant and the sureties thereon. [C. '73, § 717.]

SEC. 1224. State court of contest. The court for the trial of contested state elections, except of governor and lieutenant-governor, shall consist of three judges, not interested, of the supreme court or district court, or any of them, as may be convenient. [C. '73, § 719; R., § 599; C. '51, § 369.]

SEC. 1225. Clerk. The secretary of state shall be the clerk of this court; but if the person holding that office is a party to the contest, the clerk of the supreme court, or, in case of his absence or inability, the auditor of state, shall be clerk. [C. '73, § 720; R., § 600; C. '51, § 370.]

SEC. 1226. Statement filed. The statement must be filed with such clerk within thirty days from the day when incumbent was declared elected. [C. '73, § 721; R., § 601; C. '51, § 371.]

SEC. 1227. Time of trial—notice. The clerk shall, as soon as practicable, ascertain which three of the judges residing nearest the seat of government can attend the trial, fix a time therefor, and notify the judges, and cause a copy of the statement and a notice of the time fixed for trial to be served upon the incumbent, and a notice of the time to be served upon the contestant, at least twenty days before the day of trial, and returns thereof to be made to him; when convenient, the service of the above papers may be made by the clerk of this court. The time for the trial shall not be set beyond the last Monday of January following the election. [C. '73, § 722; R., § 601; C. '51, §§ 371–2.]

SEC. 1228. Subpœnas—depositions. The secretary of state, the several clerks of the supreme and district courts, under their respective seals of office, and either of the judges of the supreme or district courts, under their hands, may issue subpœnas for witnesses to attend this court; and disobedience to such process may be treated as a contempt. Depositions may also be taken as in the case of contested county elections. [C. '73, § 723; R., § 603; C. '51, § 373.]

SEC. 1229. Place of trial. The trial shall take place at the seat of government, unless some other place be substituted by consent of the court and both parties. [C. '73, § 725; R., § 605; C. '51, § 375.]

SEC. 1230. Compensation of judges. The judges shall be entitled to receive for their travel and attendance the sum of six dollars each per day, with such mileage as is allowed to members of the general assembly, to be paid from the state treasury. [C. '73, § 726; R., § 606; C. '51, § 376.]

SEC. 1231. Judgment filed—execution. A transcript of the judgment rendered by such court, filed in the office of the clerk of the supreme court, shall have the force and effect of a judgment of the supreme court, and execution may issue therefrom in the first instance against the party's property generally. [C. '73, § 727; R., § 607; C. '51, § 377.]

SEC. 1232. Power of judge. The presiding judge of this court shall have authority to carry into effect any order of the court, after the adjournment thereof, by attachment or otherwise. [C. '73, § 728; R., § 608; C. '51, § 378.]

SEC. 1233. Contest as to member of general assembly. The contestant for a seat in either branch of the general assembly shall, within thirty days after the incumbent was declared elected, serve on the incumbent a statement as required in relation to county officers, except the list of illegal votes, which shall be served with the notice of taking depositions relative to them, and if no such deposition is taken, then twenty days before the first day of the next session. [C. '73, § 731; R., § 611; C. '51, § 381.]

SEC. 1234. Subpœnas. Any judge or clerk of a court of record may issue subpœnas in the above cases, as in those before provided, and compel the attendance of witnesses thereunder. [C.'73, § 732; R., § 612; C.'51, § 382.]

SEC. 1235. Depositions. Depositions may be taken in such cases in the same manner and under the same rules as in an action at law in the district court, but no cause for taking the same need be shown. [C.'73, § 733; R., § 613; C.'51, § 383.]

SEC. 1236. Return of depositions. A copy of the statement, and of the notice for taking depositions, with the service indorsed, and verified by affidavit if not served by an officer, shall be returned to the officer taking the depositions, and then, with the depositions, shall be sealed up and transmitted to the secretary of state, with an indorsement thereon showing the nature of the papers, the names of the contesting parties, and the branch of the general assembly before whom the contest is to be tried. [C.'73, § 734; R., § 614; C.'51, § 384.]

SEC. 1237. Statement and depositions—notice. The secretary shall deliver the same unopened to the presiding officer of the house in which the contest is to be tried, on or before the second day of the session, regular or special, of the general assembly next after taking the depositions, and the presiding officer shall immediately give notice to his house that such papers are in his possession. [C.'73, § 735; R., § 615; C.'51, § 385.]

SEC. 1238. Power of general assembly. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to abridge the right of either branch of the general assembly to grant commissions to take depositions, or to send for and examine any witness it may desire to hear on such trial. [C.'73, § 736; R., § 616; C.'51, § 386.]

SEC. 1239. Contest as to governor or lieutenant-governor. The contestant for the office of governor or lieutenant-governor shall, within thirty days after the proclamation of the result of the election, deliver to the presiding officer of each house of the general assembly a notice of his intent to contest, and a specification of the grounds of such contest, as before directed. [C.'73, § 738; R., § 618; C.'51, § 388.]

See Const., art. IV, § 5.

SEC. 1240. Notice to incumbent. As soon as the presiding officers have received the notice and specifications, they shall make out a notice, directed to the incumbent, including a copy of the specifications, which shall be served by the sergeant-at-arms. [C.'73, § 739; R., § 619; C.'51, § 389.]

SEC. 1241. Houses notified. The presiding officers shall also immediately make known to their respective houses that such notice and specifications have been received. [C.'73, § 740; R., § 620; C.'51, § 390.]

SEC. 1242. Court—how chosen. Each house shall forthwith proceed, separately, to choose seven members of its own body in the following manner:

1. The names of members of each house, except the presiding officer, written on similar paper tickets, shall be placed in a box, the names of the senators in their presence by their secretary, and the names of the representatives in their presence by their clerk;
2. The secretary of the senate in the presence of the senate, and the clerk of the house of representatives in the presence of the house, shall draw from their respective boxes the names of seven members each;
3. As soon as the names are thus drawn, the names of the members drawn by each house shall be communicated to the other, and entered on the journals of each house. [C.'73, § 741; R., § 621; C.'51, § 391.]

SEC. 1243. Powers and proceedings of committee. The members thus drawn shall constitute a committee to try and determine the contested election, and for that purpose shall hold their meetings publicly at the place where the general assembly is sitting, at such times as they may designate; and may adjourn from day to day or to a day certain, not more than four days distant, until such trial is determined; shall have power to send for persons and papers, and to take all necessary means to procure testimony, extending like privileges to the contestant and the incumbent; and shall report their judgment to both branches of the general assembly, which report shall be entered on the journals of both houses. [C.'73, § 742; R., § 622; C.'51, § 392.]

SEC. 1244. Testimony. The testimony shall be confined to the matters contained in the specifications. [C.'73, § 743; R., § 623; C.'51, § 393.]

SEC. 1245. Judgment. The judgment of the committee pronounced in the final decision on the election shall be conclusive. [C.'73, § 744; R., § 624; C.'51, § 394.]

SEC. 1246. Contest as to presidential electors. The court for the trial of contested elections for presidential electors shall consist of the chief justice of the supreme court, who shall be presiding judge of the court, and four judges of the district court not interested, to be selected by the supreme court, two of whom, with the chief justice, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the court. If the chief justice should for any cause be unable to attend at the trial, the judge longest on the supreme court bench shall preside in place of the chief justice; and any question arising as to the membership of the court shall be determined by the members of the court not interested in the question. The secretary of state shall be the clerk of the court, or, in his absence or inability to act, the clerk of the supreme court. Each member of the court, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, shall take an oath before the secretary of state, or some officer qualified to administer oaths, that he will support the constitution of the United States and that of the state of Iowa, and that, without fear, favor, affection, or hope of reward, he will, to the best of his knowledge and ability, administer justice according to law and the facts in the case. [22 G. A., ch. 49, § 2.]

SEC. 1247. Statement. The contestant shall file the statement provided for in this chapter in the office of the secretary of the state, within ten days from the day on which the returns are canvassed by the state board of canvassers, and, within the same time, serve a copy of the same, with a notice of the contest, on the incumbent. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1248. Trial. The clerk of the court shall, immediately after the filing of the statement, notify the judges herein named, and fix a day for the organization of the court within three days thereafter, and also notify the parties to the contest. The judges shall meet on the day fixed, and organize the court, and make and announce such rules for the trial of the case as they shall think necessary for the protection of the rights of each party and a just and speedy trial of the case, and commence the trial of the case as early as practicable thereafter, and so arrange for and conduct the trial that a final determination of the same and judgment shall be rendered at least six days before the second Monday in January next following. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1249. Judgment. The judgment of the court shall determine which of the parties to the action is entitled to hold the office of presidential elector, and shall be authenticated by the presiding judge and clerk of the court and filed with the secretary of state; and the judgment so rendered shall constitute a final determination of the title to the office, and a certificate of appointment shall be issued to the successful party as an elector. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1250. Provisions applicable. All the provisions of this chapter in relation to contested elections of county officers shall be applicable, as near as may be, to contested elections for other offices, except as herein otherwise provided, and in all cases process and papers may be issued to and served by the sheriff of any county. [22 G. A., ch. 49, § 6; C.'73, §§ 729, 745; R., §§ 609, 626; C.'51, §§ 379, 396.]

CHAPTER 8.

OF REMOVAL FROM OFFICE.

SECTION 1251. Causes. All county, township, city and town officers, elected or appointed, may be removed upon charges made in writing and trial thereunder, for the following causes:

1. For habitual or wilful neglect of duty;
2. For any disability preventing a proper discharge of the duties of his office;
3. For gross partiality;
4. For oppression;
5. For extortion;
6. For corruption;
7. For wilful misconduct or maladministration in office;
8. Upon conviction of a felony;
9. For a failure to produce and fully account for all public funds and property in his hands at any inspection or settlement. [C. '73, § 746; R., § 628; C. '51, § 397.]

SEC. 1252. Complaint. Any resident of the county, township, city or town, of which the person to be charged is an officer, may make such complaint, by petition in the district court, in the name of the state, in which one or more charges against the same officer may be united, and which shall contain specifications under each charge, and may be amended as in ordinary actions. It shall state the name of the accuser, and the accused officer shall be named as defendant. The county attorney shall file such petition whenever he believes there is just cause therefor, and may be required to do so by the court or judge thereof upon the suspension of any officer by such court or judge. If the petition is filed by a person other than the county attorney, it shall be verified, and he shall file a bond for the costs, with sureties to be approved by the clerk. [C. '73, §§ 747, 749, 757; R., §§ 629, 631, 640; C. '51, §§ 398, 400, 409.]

SEC. 1253. Notice. The original notice shall state, in substance, that the defendant is required to appear and answer a petition charging him with "official misdemeanors, "and shall be served as an original notice. [C. '73, § 750; R., § 632; C. '51, § 401.]

SEC. 1254. Trial. The charges, when filed, shall be tried as a law action, and all the proceedings shall, as nearly as may be, conform to the rules governing the trial of such actions, and the costs shall be taxed against the losing party, unless otherwise ordered, but in no event shall they be taxed against the county attorney. The form of the general verdict shall be "guilty," or "not guilty," and, when "guilty," a judgment of removal from office shall be immediately entered against the accused, and a copy thereof shall be certified to the county auditor, who shall cause it to be entered in the election book. Either party may appeal to the supreme court, in the same manner and time as in other proceedings, which shall be heard and determined as a law action. [C. '73, §§ 748, 754, 755; R., §§ 630, 636–7; C. '51, §§ 399, 405–6.]

SEC. 1255. Clerk of court. If the accused is clerk of the district court, the charge may be filed with the county auditor; both he and the deputy clerk may issue subpœnas for witnesses, and the county auditor shall deliver the papers to the judge of the district court on its sitting. [C. '73, § 751; R., § 634; C. '51, § 403.]

SEC. 1256. Suspension—clerk or sheriff summarily. When charges are thus made, the district court of the proper district, or judge thereof, may suspend the accused from the function of his office until the determination of the matter, if sufficient cause appear from the testimony or affidavits presented, and, on his own motion, may suspend from office any clerk of the district court, or sheriff of a county, for any of the causes mentioned in this chapter, coming to his own knowledge, or manifestly appearing from the papers or testimony in any proceeding in court. [C, '73, §§ 752, 756; R., §§ 635, 639; C.'51, §§ 404, 408.]

In case of suspension of sheriff the person appointed by the board as here provided, and not the deputy sheriff, is authorized to act: McCue v. Circuit Court, 51-60.

The board may so appoint in case an officer is suspended by the judge on his own motion: Ibid.

SEC. 1257. Temporary officer. Upon such suspension, the board of supervisors in case of a county or township officer, and the council in case of a city or town officer, shall temporarily fill the office by appointment, and, in case of a suspension of a clerk or sheriff, the district court or judge thereof may supply such place by appointment until a temporary appointment shall be made by the board of supervisors. Such orders of suspension and temporary appointment of county and township officers shall be certified to the county auditor, and be by him entered in the election book; those of city and town officers, certified to the clerk and entered upon the records. [C.'73, §§ 752–3, 758; R., §§ 635, 638, 641; C.'51, §§ 404, 407, 410.]

SEC. 1258. Municipal officers. Any councilman, marshal, police matron, or other officer of a city or town, may be removed from office for any of the foregoing causes, or when charged with the commission of any crime, upon charges preferred in writing to the council, and a hearing thereon, by a vote of five members of the town council or a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to the city council. The council may, by ordinance, provide as to the manner of preferring and hearing such charges. No person shall be twice removed by the council from the same office for the same cause, but proceedings before the council shall not be a bar to proceedings in the district court as in this chapter provided. [25 G. A., ch. 13, § 2; 25 G. A., ch. 15, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 3, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 20, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 33, § 1; C.'73, § 516; R., § 1087.]

OF SUSPENSION OF STATE OFFICERS.

SECTION 1259. Accounts examined by commission. The governor shall, when of the opinion the public service requires it, appoint a commission of three competent accountants, who shall examine the books, papers, vouchers, moneys, securities and other documents in the possession or under the control of any state officer. Such accountants shall make out a full, complete and specific statement of the transactions of said officer with, for or on behalf of the state, showing the true balances in each case, and report the same to the governor, with such suggestions as they may think proper. [C.'73, § 759; R., §§ 46, 47, 55, 56.]

SEC. 1260. Powers. Said commission shall have power, when in session, to issue subpœnas, call any person to testify in reference to any fact connected with their investigation, and require such person to produce any papers or books which the district court might require to be produced. [16 G. A., ch. 20; C.'73, § 765; R., § 54.]

SEC. 1261. Defalcation—suspension. If it shall report that any officer has been guilty of any defalcation or misappropriation of the public money, or that his accounts, papers and books are improperly or unsafely kept, the governor shall forthwith suspend such officer from the exercise of his office, and require him to deliver all the moneys, books, papers and other property of the state to him, to be disposed of as hereinafter provided, and thereafter it shall be unlawful for such officer to exercise or attempt to exercise any of the functions of his office until such suspension shall be revoked; and any attempt to exercise such office by the suspended officer shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment. [C. '73, §§ 760–1; R., §§ 48–9.]

These provisions contemplate suspension and not an entire removal of the officer, and the section is therefore not unconstitutional as applied to officers whose election and term of office are provided for by Const., art. IV, § 22: Brown v. Duffus, 66–193.

SEC. 1262. Temporary appointment. In every such case, the governor shall appoint some suitable person to temporarily fill the office, who, having qualified as required by law, shall perform all the duties and enjoy all the rights belonging to the said office, until the removal of the suspension of his predecessor, or the appointment or election of a successor. [C. '73, § 762; R., § 51.]

SEC. 1263. Duty of governor. When the governor shall suspend any public officer, he shall direct the proper legal steps to be taken to indemnify the state from loss. [C. '73, § 763; R., § 52.]

SEC. 1264. Compensation of commissioners. The commissioners provided for in this chapter shall each receive the sum of three dollars per day for the time actually employed in the performance of their duties. [C. '73, § 764; R., § 53.]

CHAPTER 10.

OF VACANCIES IN OFFICE.

SECTION 1265. Holding over. Except when otherwise provided, every officer elected or appointed for a fixed term shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified, unless he resigns, or is removed or suspended, as provided by law. [C.'73, § 784; C. '51, § 241.]

An officer who holds over after his term on account of a failure to elect a successor only holds until the vacancy in the office can be legally filled by election: Dyer v. Bagwell, 54–487.

See Const., art. III, § 3; art. IV, §§ 2, 15, 22; art. V, §§ 3, 5, 12, 13.

Where the ballots supplied to voters at an election were not such as required by the Australian ballot law, held, that the election was entirely invalid and that the officers whose successors would be chosen at such election would hold over under this section. [It is assumed in the case without discussion that the corresponding section of Code of '73 was applicable to city and town officers as well as those of the state and county]: State ex rel. v. Smith, 63 N. W., 453.

SEC. 1266. What constitutes vacancy. Every civil office shall be vacant upon the happening of either of the following events:

1. A failure to elect at the proper election, or to appoint within the time fixed by law, unless the incumbent holds over;

A resignation in writing made to the proper officer creates a vacancy without any formal acceptance on the part of such officer: Gates v. Delaware County, 12–405.

The acceptance by an officer of another office which is incompatible with that which he holds would vacate the one first held; but the incompatability must be such as arises from the nature of the offices or their relation to each other; and held, that the office of captain in the military service of the United States was not so incompatible with that of district attorney as that an acceptance of the one should necessarily make a vacancy in the other. (Decided before the passage of 9 G. A., ch. 54, being subd. 7 of this section): Bryan v. Cattell, 15–538.

The legislature may add to or change the methods in which vacancies may occur, and make such changes applicable to existing offices and those holding them: Ibid.

2. A failure of the incumbent or hold-over officer to qualify within the time prescribed by law;

3. The incumbent ceasing to be a resident of the state, district, county, township, city, town or ward by or for which he was elected or appointed, or in which the duties of his office are to be exercised;

4. The resignation or death of the incumbent;
5. The removal of the incumbent from, or forfeiture of, his office, or the decision of a competent tribunal declaring his office vacant;
6. The conviction of incumbent of an infamous crime, or of any public offense involving the violation of his oath of office;
7. The acceptance by the incumbent of a commission to any military office, either in the militia of this state or in the service of the United States, which requires the incumbent in the civil office to exercise his military duties out of the state for a period not less than sixty days. [C. '73, §§ 504, 686, 781; R., §§ 564, 662, 1132; C. '51, §§ 334, 429.]

SEC. 1267. Possession of office. When a vacancy occurs in a public office, possession shall be taken of the office room, the books, papers, and all things pertaining thereto, to be held until the qualification of a successor, as follows: Of the office of the county auditor, by the clerk of the district court; of the clerk or treasurer, by the county auditor; of any of the state officers, by the governor, or, in his absence or inability at the time of the occurrence, as follows: Of the secretary, by the treasurer; of the auditor, or superintendent of public instruction, by the secretary; of the treasurer, by the secretary and auditor, who shall make an inventory of the money and warrants therein, sign the same, and transmit it to the governor; and the secretary shall take the keys of the safe and desks, after depositing the books, papers, money and warrants therein, and the auditor shall take the key of the office room. [C. '73, § 788; R., § 671; C. '51, § 444.]

SEC. 1268. Resignations. Resignations in writing by civil officers may be made as follows, except as otherwise provided:
1. By the governor, to the general assembly, if in session, if not, to the secretary of state;
2. By state senators and representatives, and all officers appointed by the senate or house, or by the presiding officers thereof, to the respective presiding officers of the senate and house, when the general assembly is in session, and such presiding officers shall immediately transmit to the governor information of the resignation of any member thereof; when the general assembly is not in session, all such resignations shall be made to the governor;
3. By senators and representatives in congress, all officers elected by the qualified voters in the state or any district or division thereof larger than a county, or chosen by the general assembly, all judges of courts of record, all officers, trustees, inspectors, and members of all boards and commissions now or hereafter created under the laws of the state, and all persons filling any position of trust or profit in the state, for which no other provision is made, to the governor;
4. By all county and township officers, to the county auditor, except that of the auditor, which shall be to the board of supervisors;
5. By all councilmen and officers of cities and towns, to the clerk or mayor. [17 G. A., ch. 107, § 1; C. '73, § 782; R., § 663; C. '51, § 430.]

The county attorney, held to be a county officer whose resignation is to be made to the board of supervisors: State v. Kovolosky, 92–498.

SEC. 1269. Vacancy in general assembly. When a vacancy shall occur in the office of senator or representative in the general assembly, except by resignation, the auditor of the county of his residence shall notify the governor of such fact and the cause. [C. '73, § 790.]

SEC. 1270. Vacancy in board of state institutions. In case of a vacancy from any cause, other than resignation or expiration of term, occurring in any of the boards of trustees or directors of state institutions, the secretary thereof shall immediately notify the governor; but this section shall not apply to vacancies in the board of regents of the university. [17 G. A., ch. 107, § 2.]

SEC. 1271. Duty of governor. An officer receiving any resignation, or notice of any vacancy, shall forthwith notify the general assembly, board, tribunal or officer, if any, empowered to fill the same by appointment. If the general assembly is not in session, such notice shall be sent upon its next convening. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1272. Filling vacancies. Vacancies in the offices of clerk and reporter of the supreme court shall be filled by the supreme court; in all other state offices, judges of courts of record, officers elected in districts larger than a county, except state senators and representatives, officers, trustees, inspectors, and members of all boards or commissions, officers chosen by the general assembly if the legislature is not in session, and all persons filling any position of trust or profit in the state, by the governor, except when some other method is specially provided, and he shall issue the proper commission to the appointee; in county offices, including those of justices of the peace and constables, by the board of supervisors; and in the membership of such board, by the clerk of the district court, auditor and recorder; and when by death, or otherwise, a vacancy occurs in the office of the clerk of the district court, said court, or judge thereof, may, by order entered of record in the court journal, appoint a suitable and proper person to act as clerk until the vacancy shall be filled in the manner provided by law; in all other township offices, including trustees, by the trustees, but where the offices of the three trustees are all vacant, the county auditor shall appoint; in the office of councilman or mayor of any city, and all other elective city offices, when there are sixty days of an unexpired term, by special election, to be called by the council as soon thereafter as practicable, and the council may appoint some qualified elector to act as mayor until the qualification of the officers elected at such special election; if such unexpired term is less than sixty days, except in case of councilmen, then such vacancy shall be filled by the council; in all city appointive offices, unless otherwise provided by law, in the same manner as the original appointment was made; in all town offices, by the council at its first regular meeting after such vacancy occurs, or as soon thereafter as practicable. [24 G. A., ch. 1, § 1; 23 G. A., ch. 3, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 124, § 1; C. '73, §§ 390, 530, 783, 794–5; R., §§ 664, 1101; C. '51, § 436.]

See Const., art. IV, § 10.

The governor has no power to create a vacancy for the purpose of filling it. There must be a vacancy before the right or power to fill it can exist: Bryan v. Cattell, 15–538.

Where an elective officer is appointed by the board of supervisors to fill a vacancy he is not subject to removal by such board at pleasure, but is entitled to hold for the residue of the unexpired term unless removed for cause: State ex rel. v. Chatburn, 63–659.

In case of failure of an officer to enter upon his office at the time provided by law there is a vacancy which should be filled by appointment. The incumbent is not entitled to hold over, and the sureties on his bond are not liable if he hold over after the term for which they are bound has ceased: Wapello County v. Bigham, 10–39.

SEC. 1273. Person removed not eligible. No person can be appointed to fill a vacancy who has been removed from office within one year next preceding. [C. '73, § 787; R., § 669; C. '51, § 441.]

SEC. 1274. Appointments. Appointments under the provisions of this chapter shall be in writing, and filed in the office where the oath of office is required to be filed. [C. '73, § 785; R., § 667; C. '51, § 439.]

SEC. 1275. Qualification. Persons elected or appointed to fill vacancies, and officers entitled to hold over to fill vacancies occurring through a failure to elect, appoint or qualify, as provided in this chapter, shall qualify within ten days from such election, appointment, or failure to elect, appoint or qualify, in the same manner as those originally elected or appointed to such offices. [C. '73, § 786; R., § 668; C. '51, § 440.]

SEC. 1276. Successor chosen. An officer filling a vacancy in an office which is filled by election of the people shall continue to hold until the next regular election at which such vacancy can be filled, and until a successor is elected and qualified. Appointments to all other offices, made under this chapter, shall continue for the remainder of the term of each office, and until a successor is appointed and qualified; except that, when the office is one to be filled by the general assembly, the appointee shall hold only until the general assembly elects. [19 G. A., ch. 124, § 2; C.'73, §§ 530, 781, 785; R., §§ 662, 667, 1101; C.'51, §§ 429, 439.]

SEC. 1277. Officers to fill vacancies. Officers elected to fill vacancies, either at a special or general election, shall hold for the unexpired portion of the term, and until a successor is elected and qualified, unless otherwise provided by law. [C '73, § 513; R., § 1083.]

SEC. 1278. Municipal officers. If a vacancy occurs in an elective office in a city, town or township ten days, or a county office fifteen days, or any other office thirty days, prior to a general election, it shall be filled at such election, unless previously filled at a special election. [19 G. A., ch. 124, § 2; C.'73, §§ 530, 789, 794–5; R., §§ 672, 1101; C.'51, §§ 35, 431–5.]

SEC. 1279. Election to fill vacancies. A special election to fill a vacancy shall be held for a representative in congress, or senator or representative in the general assembly, when the body in which such vacancy exists is in session, or will convene prior to the next general election, and the governor shall order such special election at the earliest practicable time, giving ten days' notice thereof. [C.'73, § 789; R., § 672; C.'51, §§ 35, 431–5.]

OF ADDITIONAL SECURITY AND THE DISCHARGE OF SURETIES.

SECTION 1280. Additional security. Whenever the governor shall deem it advisable that the bonds of any state officer should be increased and the security enlarged, or a new bond given, he shall notify said officer of the fact, the amount of new or additional security to be given, and the time when the same shall be executed; which said new security shall be approved and filed as provided by law. [C.'73, § 772; R., § 660.]

SEC. 1281. New bond. Any officer or board who has the approval of another officer's bond, when of the opinion that the public security requires it, upon giving ten days' notice to show cause to the contrary, may require him to give such additional security by a new bond, within a reasonable time to be prescribed. [C.'73, § 773; R., §§ 349–50; C.'51, §§ 418–19.]

SEC. 1282. Effect. If a requisition made under either of the foregoing sections be complied with, both the old and the new security shall be in force; if not, the office shall become and be declared vacant, and the fact be certified to the proper officer, to be recorded in the election book or township record. [C.'73, § 774; R., §§ 651, 661; C.'51, § 420.]

SEC. 1283. Sureties relieved. When any surety on a bond required by law, except as otherwise provided, conceives himself in danger, and desires to be relieved of his obligation, he may petition the approving officer or board above referred to for relief, stating the ground of his apprehension. [C.'73, § 775; R., § 652; C.'51, § 421.]

SEC. 1284. Notice. The surety shall give the principal at least twenty-four hours' notice of the presenting and filing of the petition, with a copy thereof. At the expiration of this notice the approving officer may hear the matter, or may postpone it, as justice requires. [C.'73, § 776; R., § 653; C.'51, § 422.]

SEC. 1285. Hearing—order—effect. If, upon the hearing, there appears substantial ground for apprehension, the approving officer or board may order the principal to give a new bond and to supply the place of the petitioning surety within a reasonable time to be prescribed, and, upon such new bond being given, the petitioning surety upon the former bond shall be declared discharged from liability on the same for future acts, which order of discharge shall be entered in the proper election book, but the bond will continue binding upon those who do not petition for relief. [C. '73, § 777; R., § 655; C.'51, § 424.]

Sureties upon the new bond are not liable for moneys coming into the principal's hands before such new bond was executed: Thompson v. Dickerson, 22–360.

SEC. 1286. Failure to comply. If the new bond is not given as required, the office shall be declared vacant, and the order to that effect entered in the proper election book. [C. '73, § 778; R., § 656; C. '51, § 425.]

SEC. 1287. Justice of the peace. If the proceedings relate to a justice of the peace, and he is removed from office, the county auditor shall notify the proper township trustees or clerk of the removal. [C. '73, § 779; R., § 657; C. '51, § 426.]

SEC. 1288. Subpœnas. The approving officer may issue subpœnas in his official name for witnesses, compel them to attend and testify, in the same way an officer authorized to take depositions may. [C. '73, § 780; R., § 658; C. '51, § 427.]

CHAPTER 12.

OF GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO COMPENSATION.

SECTION 1289. Salaries paid monthly. The salaries of all officers authorized in this code shall be paid in equal monthly installments at the end of each month, and shall be in full compensation for all services, except as otherwise expressly provided. [C. '73, § 3780.]

SEC. 1290. Commissioners to appraise property. Every appraiser or commissioner appointed or selected to appraise damages or property, unless otherwise provided, shall receive the same compensation and mileage as jurors in courts of record, but when called to appraise property taken on judicial process, shall receive twenty-five cents per hour. [C. '73, § 3813; R., § 4158; C. '51, § 2550.]

SEC. 1291. General fees. Any officer legally called on to perform any of the following services, in cases where no fees have been fixed therefor, shall be entitled to receive:

1. For drawing and certifying an affidavit, or giving a certificate not attached to any other writing, twenty-five cents;
2. For affixing his official seal to any paper, whether the certificate be under seal or not, thirty-five cents;
3. For making out a transcript of any public papers or records under his control for the use of a private person or corporation, or recording articles of incorporation, for every one hundred words, ten cents. [C. '73, § 3819; R., § 4132; C. '51, § 2523.]

SEC. 1292. Conveying prisoner to jail. Every officer or person who shall arrest any one with a warrant or order issued by any court or officer, or who shall be required to convey a prisoner from a place distant from the county jail to such jail on an order of commitment, shall be allowed the same fees and expenses as provided for in case of such services by the sheriff. [C. '73, § 3820.]

SEC. 1293. Publication of legal notices. The compensation, when not otherwise fixed, for the publication in a newspaper of any notice, order, citation or other publication required or allowed by law, shall not exceed one dollar for one insertion, and fifty cents for each subsequent insertion, for each ten lines of brevier type, or its equivalent, in a column not less than two and one-sixth inches in width. For publication of the official ballot, forty cents for each ten lines of brevier or its equivalent may be charged, the space necessarily occupied thereby being measured as if it were in brevier type set solid. In no case shall the cost of publishing the official ballot exceed thirty dollars for each of the two papers in which it shall be published, except in presidential years, when it shall not exceed the sum of fifty dollars for each of said papers. Weekly publications may be made in a daily or weekly newspaper. The plaintiff or executor, in all publications concerning actions, executions and estates, may designate the newspaper in which such publication shall be made. If any newpaper refuse to make publication thereof, when copy therefor, with the cost or security for payment of the cost, is tendered, such publication may be made in some other newspaper of general circulation at or nearest to the county seat, with the same effect as if made in the newspaper so refusing. [25 G. A., ch. 105; C.'73, § 3832.]

Under § 3832 of Code of '73 providing a rate of compensation for publication of legal notices based on a "square of ten lines of brevier type or its equivalent," held, that it was not proper to measure the space actually occupied by one such square and make that the unit of measure, regardless of the size of type or kind of matter. The square thus described is made the standard of compensation, and other kinds of printing are to be paid for accordingly. Thus the printing of tabulated matter would be paid for at a higher rate for the same space than if it were "straight" matter: Brown v. Lucas County, 62 N.W., 694.

The plaintiff has the right to designate the newspaper in which publication of original notices or notices of execution sales shall be made: Herriman v. Moore, 49–171. And see § 4024.

SEC. 1294. Receipt for fees paid. Every person charging fees shall, if required by the person paying them, give him a receipt therefor, setting forth the items, and the date of each. [C.'73, § 3836; R., § 4157; C.'51, § 2549.]

SEC. 1295. When fees payable. When no other provision is made on the subject, the party requiring any service shall pay the fees therefor upon the same being rendered, and a bill of particulars being presented, if required. [C.'73, § 3837; R., § 4164; C.'51, § 2557.]

Where an attorney in a case requires services, his client, and not the attorney, is liable therefor: Doughty v. Paige, 48–483.

If a justice of the peace has prepared and certified a transcript on appeal he cannot be required to deposit it with the clerk until his fees therefor are paid: McKay v. Maloy, 53–33. To the same effect as to clerk of court of record, see Dickerson v. Shelby, 2 G. Gr., 460.

If an officer, entitled to the remedy provided by this section, seeks to recover his fees by an ordinary action, he must bring his action within five years: State Ins. Co. v. Griffin, 84–602.

SEC. 1296. Setting up advertisements. In all cases where an officer in the discharge of his duty is required to post an advertisement or notice, he shall, when not otherwise provided, be allowed twenty-five cents, and the same mileage as a sheriff, and if an advertisement is required to be published in a newspaper, the cost thereof shall be paid by the party, and may be taxed in the bill of costs. [C.'73, § 3838; R., § 4165; C.'51, § 2558.]

SEC. 1297. Taking higher fees. Any officer who wilfully takes higher or other fees than are allowed by law is guilty of a misdemeanor. [C.'73, § 3840; R., § 4166; C.'51, § 2559.]

Any contract for higher fees than those provided, or for an amount which might prove to be higher, would be void: Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 40–200.

SEC. 1298. Fees paid in advance. No officer or person is entitled to receive any fees in advance where the same grow out of a criminal prosecution, or where the fees or compensation is payable by the state or county, or when the orders, judgments or decrees of courts or justices of the peace are to be entered or performed, or their writs executed; but in all other cases he may do so, if he demand them. Witnesses subpœnaed for the defendant in criminal cases may demand their fees in advance as in civil cases, unless the subpœna shows that it is issued under the order of the judge. [C.'73, § 3842.]

An officer may waive the right to demand fees in advance: Horne v. Pudil, 88–533.

SEC. 1299. Fee bill. After the expiration of sixty days from the rendition of a final judgment not appealed, removed or reversed, the clerk of the court, or a justice of the peace in whose office the judgment is entered, may, and, upon demand of any party entitled to any part thereof, shall, issue a fee bill for all costs of such judgment, which shall have the same force and effect as an execution issued by such officer, and shall be served and executed in the same manner. [Same.]

The party against whom the judgment is rendered is primarily liable for all the costs to the parties entitled thereto. They may issue their fee bill therefor, and failing in that they may, by motion, require the successful party to pay such of the costs as accrued at his instance, as provided in § 3855. The statute does not contemplate the issuance of a fee bill against a party against whom no judgment has been rendered: McConkey v. Chapman, 58–281.

Where a justice, more than ten years after the rendition of judgment in his court, and after a transcript thereof had been filed in the clerk's office, caused a fee bill to issue, and on its return unsatisfied, commenced suit against the successful party to recover such costs, held, that the lapse of time barred any right to recover: State Ins. Co. v. Griffin, 84–602.

SEC. 1300. Fees payable by state or county. In all cases where fees or compensation, except a fixed salary, are by the provisions of this code to be paid any officer or other person out of the county or state treasury, no part of the same shall be audited or paid until a particular account has been filed in the auditor's office of the county or state, verified by affidavit, and showing clearly for what services such fees or compensation is claimed, and when the same was rendered. [C.'73, § 3843.]

The account should show a claim against the county and in favor of the claimant and be verified by him: Hegele v. Polk County, 92–701.

A claim for the fees of a justice of the peace, in state cases, must be verified by himself. The successor of the justice entitled to the fees cannot make the certificate and verification required by § 4599: Labour v. Polk County, 70–568.

SEC. 1301. Report of fees. All officers required by the provisions of this code to collect and pay over fines and fees shall, except as otherwise provided, on the first Monday in January in each year, make report thereof under oath to the board of supervisors of the proper county, showing the amount of fines assessed, and the amount of fines and fees collected, together with vouchers for the payment of all sums collected to the proper officer. [C.'73, § 3973; R., § 4314.]

SEC. 1302. Report of forfeited bonds. Clerks of district, superior and police courts, mayors of cities and towns, and justices of the peace shall, on the first Monday in January in each year, make report in writing to the board of supervisors for their respective counties of all forfeited recognizances in their offices; of all fines, penalties and forfeitures imposed in their respective courts, which by law go into the county treasury for the benefit of the school fund; in what cause or proceeding, when and for what purpose, against whom and for what amount, rendered; whether said fines, penalties, forfeitures and recognizances have been paid, remitted, canceled or otherwise satisfied; if so, when, how and in what manner, and if not paid, remitted, canceled or otherwise satisfied, what steps have been taken to enforce the collection thereof. Such report must be full, true and complete with reference to the matters therein contained, and of all things required by this section to be reported, and be under oath, and any officer failing to make such report shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [C.'73, § 3974.]

TITLE VII.

OF THE REVENUE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE ASSESSMENT OF TAXES.

SECTION 1303. Levy—amount of. The board of supervisors of each county shall, annually, at its September session, levy the following taxes upon the assessed value of the taxable property in the county:

1. For state revenue, such rate of tax as shall be fixed by the executive council as hereinafter provided;

2. For ordinary county revenue, not more than six mills on a dollar in counties having a population of less than twenty thousand, and in counties having a population of twenty thousand or more, four mills, with a poll tax in either case of fifty cents on each male resident over twenty-one years of age. But in any county in which the levy is limited to four mills the board of supervisors may, at any general election, submit the question of increasing such levy to six mills or less to a vote of the electors, and if such proposition is adopted the board of supervisors may make the next general levy at the proposed rate;

3. For support of schools, not less than one nor more than three mills on a dollar;

4. For making and repairing bridges, not more than three mills on a dollar; but such tax shall not be levied upon any property assessable within the limits of any city of the first class, and none of such bridge tax shall be used in the construction or repair of bridges within the limits of such city. [25 G. A., ch. 114; 22 G. A., ch. 43; 20 G. A., ch. 182; 18 G. A., ch. 13; 15 G. A., ch. 28; C.'73, § 796; R., § 710; C.'51, § 454.]

Authority: These provisions contain and confer the only power given by law to the board of supervisors to levy county taxes for any purpose, except under §§ 448, 449. Section 3973 does not authorize the levy of a tax in excess of the limit here imposed: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39–124.

What constitutes: As to what action of the board is sufficient to constitute a levy, see West v. Whitaker, 37–598.

A motion in a city council "to levy a tax," which is adopted, constitutes a present levy: Snell v. Fort Dodge, 45–564.

Where there is a sufficient levy of taxes, mere irregularities will not affect their validity: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45–168.

Actual levy required: Where a tax is authorized by special vote it must be actually levied, the act of the electors in authorizing the levy not being alone sufficient: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Woodbury County, 39–172.

When to be made: The statutory provisions as to the time for making the levy are only directory, and a levy at a meeting preceding that at which the levy should be made will not be void, no prejudice having resulted to the party complaining: Easton v. Savery, 44–654.

So where a schoolhouse tax was not levied by the board of supervisors at the meeting at which it should have been levied, held, that it might be levied afterward with the annual levy of the next year; Perrin v. Benson, 49–325.

After a final adjournment of a meeting of the board of supervisors, the members have no power to assemble or to transact any business required to be transacted in session until the next regular meeting, unless they be convened in special session in the meantime in the manner prescribed by statute, and any action taken by them by way of making a levy without being so convened will be void: Scott v. Union County, 63–583.

Record: The record of a levy need not be signed individually by the persons authorized to make the levy. An entry of the action upon the proper record is sufficient: Martin v. Cole, 38–141.

It is not competent to prove the fact of levy by parol evidence where none appears of record: Moore v. Cooke, 40–290.

Absence of all record of a levy will not conclusively show that none was made, but absence of the record is a circumstance tending to show that none was made, and may be sufficient to overcome the prima facie evidence in favor of the levy which is afforded by a tax deed: Hintrager v. Kiene, 62–605.

The provision found in § 839 of Code of '73 directing that the levy should be recorded in the proper book [not retained in this Code], held directory, and that a record kept upon loose sheets of paper containing the essential facts of a levy and preserved in the proper office constituted a sufficient levy to support the tax: Prouty v. Tallman, 65–354. And see Higgins v. Reed, 8–298.

The record of the action of the board in a particular case showing a recommendation of the committee for the voting of a tax, and the adoption of such report, held sufficient to show a valid levy: West v. Whitaker, 37–598.

Where the records of a board of officers authorized to make a levy showed that they met on a certain date, forming a board to levy taxes for the year 1859, and "decided as follows," the number of mills of tax for special purposes being mentioned, held, that such record sufficiently showed the making of a levy for that year: Tallman v. Cooke, 43–330.

Effect: After the levy of taxes by a county to which another county is attached for revenue, and the placing of the tax lists in the treasurer's hands, the county thus attached cannot by subsequent separation acquire any rights in such taxes: Hilliard v. Griffin, 72–331.

SEC. 1304. Exemptions. The following classes of property are not to be taxed:

1. The property of the United States and this state, including university, agricultural college and school lands, and all property leased to the state; the property of a county, township, city, town or school district or militia company, when devoted entirely to public use and not held for pecuniary profit; public grounds, including all places for the burial of the dead, crematoriums, the land on which they are built and appurtenant thereto not exceeding one acre, so long as no dividends or profits are derived therefrom; fire engines and all implements for extinguishing fires, with the grounds used exclusively for their buildings and meetings of the fire companies;

2. All grounds and buildings used for public libraries, including libraries owned and kept up by private individuals, associations or corporations for public use and not for private profit, and for literary, scientific, charitable, benevolent, agricultural and religious institutions, and societies devoted solely to the appropriate objects of these institutions, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres in extent, and not leased or otherwise used with a view to pecuniary profit, but all deeds or leases by which such property is held shall be filed for record before the property above described shall be omitted from the assessment; the books, papers and apparatus belonging to the above institutions, used solely for the purposes above contemplated, and the like property of students in any such institution used for their education; moneys and credits belonging exclusively to such institutions, and devoted solely to sustaining them, but not exceeding in amount or income the amount prescribed by their charters or articles of incorporation;

3. The farm produce of the person assessed, harvested by him, and all wool shorn from his sheep, within one year previous to the listing; all poultry, ten stands of bees, all swine and sheep under six months of age; and all other domestic animals under one year of age not hereinbefore exempt; obligations for rent not yet due, in the hands of original payees, private libraries, professional libraries to the actual value of three hundred dollars; family pictures; household furniture to the actual value of three hundred dollars and kitchen furniture; beds and bedding requisite for each family; all wearing apparel in actual use; and all food provided for the family; but the exemptions allowed in this subdivision shall not be held to apply to hotels and boarding houses except so far as said exempted classes of property shall be for the actual use of the family managing the same;

4. The polls or estates, or both, of persons who by reason of age or infirmity may in the opinion of the assessor be unable to contribute to the public revenue, such opinion and the fact on which it is based being in all cases entered on the assessment roll, and subject to reversal by the board of review;

5. The farming utensils of any person who makes his livelihood by farming, the team, wagon and harness of the teamster or drayman who makes his living by their use in hauling for others, and the tools of any mechanic, not in any case to exceed three hundred dollars in actual value;

6. Government lands entered and located, or lands purchased from this state, for the year in which the entry, location or purchase is made;

7. The homestead, not to exceed eight hundred dollars in actual value, of the widow of any Union soldier or sailor who died during the late war while in service, or who has died since; also the homestead, not to exceed eight hundred dollars in actual value, of any honorably discharged Union soldier or sailor, unable to perform manual labor and dependent thereon for the support of himself and family; but the value of any other real estate owned by him shall be deducted from such exemption. In case of the living soldier or sailor, the assessor shall note the fact of the claim to exemption on the assessment roll, and the same shall be subject to reversal by the board of review. [26 G. A., ch. 29; 21 G. A., ch. 97; C. '73, § 797; R., § 711; C. '51, § 455.]

Public property: Lands held by the United States in trust for grantees are subject to taxation as property of such grantees. A valid legal title is not necessary to authorize taxation: Stockdale v. Treasurer of Webster County, 12-536.

Prior to the expiration of five years from the filing of a declaratory statement in case of an entry of public lands under the homestead law, a person seeking to avail himself of the provisions of the homestead act acquires no taxable interest in the land: Moriarty v. Boone County, 39-634.

Where public lands were entered by forged scrip, and the entry subsequently canceled on that account and a new entry allowed, held, that the lands were not taxable in the hands of the pre-emptor prior to the valid entry: Reynolds v. Plymouth County, 55-90.

If a party gets a land warrant from the government which, because of his own fraud, is canceled, but afterwards by a proper application gets a warrant giving him an equity in the land, he is not liable for taxes on the land for the time between the issue of the first and second warrants: Bronson v. Kukuk, 3 Dillon, 490; Pitts v. Clay, 27 Fed., 635.

In such a case the second warrant cannot be regarded as a substitute for the first, nor is there any estoppel against the party obtaining the warrant towards a purchaser under a tax sale from asserting the invalidity of the first warrant: Ibid.

One whose entry has been canceled but who, by rule of the land department is entitled to priority in order to make another entry if he sees fit to do so, does not have such title to the land as to subject the land to taxation. In such case the patent subsequently issued on a new entry would not relate back to the time of the original entry: Durham v. Hussman, 88-29; Hussman v. Durham, 165 U. S., 144.

A tract of land omitted by mistake in making entry under a certificate, and which was subsequently, by compromise, entirely omitted from such location, another tract being substituted in its place, held not subject to taxation: Scott v. Chickasaw County, 46-253.

The provisions of the act of congress admitting Iowa into the Union, exempting bounty lands granted for military services from taxation for a term of three years from the date of the patent, held not applicable to lands entered upon military land warrants by the assignees thereof: Sands v. Adams County, 11-577.

Under similar provisions, held, that the actual date of the patent when issued, and not the date of the entry under which title vested in the grantee, was to be considered in determining the time when the land became taxable in the hands of patentees: Fisher v. Wisner, 34-447.

Where lands granted by the United States to aid in the improvement of the Des Moines river were conveyed to the state, to be conveyed by it to the parties entitled thereto as the work should progress, held, that until such conveyance was actually made by the state the lands were not subject to taxation: Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Polk County, 10-1.

Under the railroad land grant acts, by which, upon the completion of a twenty-mile section of road, the company became entitled to certain sections of public land as therein provided, held, that such land was taxable in the hands of the company from the time of the completion of the section of road, although certificates for it were not obtained until afterward: Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21-221; Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Webster County, 21-235.

Lands granted to a railroad on condition that it comply with certain terms in the construction of its road become taxable as soon as such terms are complied with, although the lands are not yet certified or patented: Whitehead v. Plummer, 76-181.

Public lands entered by a military land warrant continue exempt from state taxation under the statutes of this state until three years after the patent issues thereon, it being so provided by the act of congress admitting the state into the Union: Churchill v. Sowards, 78-472.

Facts in a certain case held to show that the lands were reserved and the title withheld by competent authority, and therefore held, that the lands were taxable: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Fitchpatrick, 52-244.

But where at the time the railroad became entitled to land under the grant it was occupied by a party claiming a homestead entry thereon, held, that it did not thereupon become subject to taxation, the United States holding it in trust for one or the other of the parties, and having still a duty to perform with reference thereto: Dickerson v. Yetzer, 53–681.

The fact that during nearly a month there was no adverse claim, and during that time the railroad company neglected to procure title, held not to render the land taxable to the company, in the absence of any showing that the neglect to procure title was for the purpose of escaping taxation: Ibid.

Railroad lands earned by the construction of the road, but not certified, and held by the government on account of conflicting claims, are not taxable while so withheld, and a tax title acquired at the sale thereof during such time is void: Doe v. Iowa R. Land Co., 54–657; Grant v. Iowa R. Land Co., 54–673.

Land which is held by the government to which a company or individual may ultimately acquire title by reason of a grant, but which has never been certified or set apart, and is incapable of identification, is not subject to taxation: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Woodbury County, 29–247.

Under a grant of lands to a state to aid in the construction of a railway, which lands were by the state granted to the company, held, that a patent by the governor to the company was evidence that the lands conveyed thereby were then earned by such company, and that the patent issued as soon as the lands were earned, and that parol evidence was only admissible to show that the company had fraudulently prevented the issuance of a patent at the proper time for the purpose of avoiding payment of taxes upon the land earned: McGregor & M. R. R. Co. v. Brown, 39–655.

Where a railroad land grant provided that the property be patented by the governor to the company entitled to the same upon the completion of its road, held, that in the absence of any showing of fraud upon the part of the company in causing a delay in the conveyance of title, the land became subject to taxation only upon actual conveyance by the governor, although such conveyance was delayed beyond the time when the company was entitled to the same: Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co. v. Plymouth County, 40–609. See also notes to § 1308.

The property of the state is not subject to special assessment for improvement of streets: Polk County Savings Bank v. State, 69–24.

Agricultural college lands leased for a term of years, with a provision for forfeiture on non-payment of rents, and with the privilege to lessee of purchasing at the expiration of the lease, held not subject to taxation: Trustees of Agl. College v. Webster County, 34–141. [But now see § 1351.]

Property of counties: The statutory provision that property of a county shall be exempt from taxation when devoted entirely to public use, and not held for pecuniary profit, amounts to a declaration that before there was such statutory provision lands held by one county situated within another were not subject to taxation: Guthrie County v. Carroll County, 34–108.

Taxes levied by the county upon lands to which it has an equitable title are void, and the purchaser thereof at tax sale, being affected with notice of such fact, acquires no title: Gibson v. Howe, 37–168.

Land acquired and held by a county in order to secure to it an amount due from a defaulting officer is not taxable: Ibid.

Where a county repudiates a contract of sale made by it, it cannot subject the land to taxation: Moore v. Morledge, 42–26.

Swamp lands owned by the county at the time of an assessment of real property are not subject to taxation as against a subsequent purchaser thereof: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Story County, 36–48.

And where the sale of such land did not embrace the entire amount thereof held by the county, and the portions of the land sold were not yet determined upon, held, that the portions afterwards conveyed in pursuance of such sale were not subject to taxation until they were designated: Ibid.

Swamp land is not liable to taxation so long as it is held and owned by the county. Where it is conveyed by the county after the close of the assessment, it should be passed as not subject to taxation for that year: Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45–453.

Swamp lands belonging to one county situated in another would be exempt from taxation were it not for the provision inserted in § 1308 declaring such lands taxable: Guthrie County v. Carroll County, 34–108.

Certain land being exempt from taxation, as swamp land belonging to the county, held, that acts of officers of the county in assessing it for taxation would not estop a subsequent purchaser of the county from asserting his title under the swamp land grant: Hayes v. McCormick, 83–89.

Property devoted to public use: Property devised to trustees of a town in trust for the improvement of a public park, to be held as a perpetual fund for that purpose, interest and revenues only to be used, is not exempt from taxation in the hands of such trustees. To be exempt, the property in such case must be devoted entirely to public use and not held for pecuniary profit: Mitchellville v. Board of Supervisors, 64–554.

The exemption of the property of a school district, used for school purposes, from taxation, by reason of its being property devoted to a public use, extends only to general taxes and does not relieve it from a special tax assessed by a municipal corporation within which it is situated for building sidewalks: Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55–150.

The property of a water company which is authorized to furnish water to a city and its citizens, its rates being under the control of the council and its property being subject to be bought by the city at a certain price, is not public property in such sense as to be exempt from taxation: Appeal of Des Moines Water Co., 48–324.

Property of educational and religious institutions: The residence of a professor owned by a college, and a parsonage owned by a church, are so devoted to the appropriate objects, of such institutions as to be exempt from taxation: Trustees of Griswold College v. State, 46-275.

Where the officiating pastor of a church held the legal title to certain lots in his own name, and allowed the same to be used by such church and the school connected therewith, without charge, held, that the property was not exempt from taxation: Laurent v. Muscatine, 59-404.

Property conveyed to a religious society as a gift, with no conditions as to the use to which it shall be devoted, remaining vacant and unimproved at the time of taxation and sale, is not exempt: Kirk v. St. Thomas Church, 70-287.

Where property was acquired by a religious institution under such circumstances as to be exempt from taxation, but had already been subject to taxation for seven months of the year, held, that its acquisition by such association did not relieve it from liability for the taxes of the year in which it was thus procured: First Cong. Church v. Linn County, 70-396.

The exemption from taxation in such a case was not intended to act retrospectively, and relieve from prior taxes or prior liability for taxes, but only to relieve the property from future liability: Ibid.

The word "public" as used in this section in regard to the exemption of libraries, grounds and buildings of literary, scientific and religious institutions, etc., designates a class of libraries and does not refer to the grounds and buildings of the institutions and societies named. A vacant lot which is unused cannot be deemed devoted solely to the appropriate objects of a literary institution and being held for sale with a view to pecuniary profit it is not exempt from taxation. Foy v. Coe College, 64 N. W., 636.

The fact that the title deed by which the property is held is filed for record as required by this section should be averred. There is no legal presumption in this respect in favor of the party claiming the exemption: Nugent v. Dilworth, 63 N. W., 448.

Lots purchased with the purpose of erecting a church building thereon but afterwards mortgaged to raise money with which to erect a church building elsewhere, and held for sale with the intention of applying any additional amount that may be realized therefrom towards the same purpose, are not exempt from taxation. The requirement of the statute is that the property which is exempt shall be directly and not indirectly devoted to the designated purpose: Ibid.

Church property leased for other purposes is subject to taxation: See § 2902.

Burying grounds: As to a certain portion of property in controversy, which it was shown was used as a burying ground, held, that it was exempt from taxation and a tax sale thereof was void: but as to the balance of the property, which was held in trust for a church but was not used as church property, held, that it was not exempt: Mulroy v. Churchman, 52-238.

Property of charitable and benevolent societies: Where a charitable society invested its "widows' and orphans' fund" in real property, which was leased for business purposes, the proceeds being strictly applied to the proper objects of the fund, held, that such property was not exempt from taxation: Fort Des Moines Lodge v. Polk County, 56-34.

Property of insane persons: Where the assessor omits to assess the land of an insane person on the ground that it is within the exemption of this section in favor of persons who, by reason of age or infirmity, are unable to contribute to the public revenue, the treasurer has no authority to enter such land for taxation, the act of the assessor being only reversible by the board of equalization: Ordway v. Smith, 53-589.

Tools: The term "tools" in this section, held to include the press, types, imposing stones and other implements of a printer necessary to carry on his business: Smith v. Osburn, 53-474.

Lands purchased from state or U. S.: The terms "entry" and "location" when applied to acquisition of lands from the government have a fixed and certain meaning, and cannot be applied to the grant of land by a congressional act, and therefore lands acquired by a congressional grant operating in præsenti to pass the title without conveyance or other assurance are not exempt from taxation under subd. 6 of this section: Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654; Goodnow v. Litchfield, 67-691.

It has not been decided by the courts of Iowa, in such cases, that government lands are not taxable until a year after they are patented. The time of patenting does not affect the question as to their taxability: Ibid. (Criticising Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S., 773.)

Therefore, held, that lands claimed by railroad companies under grants from the state in 1858, by virtue of a supposed grant from congress, which grant was made effectual by act of congress in the year 1861, were taxable for that year: Ibid.

It was held, however, in a similar case by the supreme court of the United States, that such lands were not taxable until the year 1862: Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S., 773.

Although the technical title to lands above the Raccoon forks, claimed under the Des Moines river grant, did not pass from the United States until the passage of the additional act of 1861, yet the claimants to such lands under the original grant had such title that the lands in their hands were subject to taxation before the passage of the later act. The confirmatory act of 1861 related back to the first grant and perfected the title from that date: Stryker v. Polk County, 22-131; Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40-66.

The latter case was reversed, however, in the supreme court of the United States: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 101 U. S., 781.

Prior to the enactment of subd. 6 of this section, held, that such lands acquired after the close of the assessment for the current year were not liable to taxation for that year: Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Polk County, 10–1; Tallman v. Treasurer, 12–531; Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45–453.

Construction of exemptions: The legislature having declared the liability of property to taxation, courts are not justified in indulging in fine distinctions in defeating the legislative will. The exemption must rest upon some clear and just ground: Morseman v. Younkin, 27–350.

A statute exempting property from execution or order of sale upon a judgment or decree of court cannot be construed to exempt it from taxes, or sale therefor: Slane v. McCarroll, 40–61.

If property taxable under a previous general statute is afterwards claimed to be exempted by a later statute, the exemption must be shown to be clearly and unequivocally expressed: Davenport Nat. Bank v. Mittelbuscher, 4 McCrary, 361.

An exemption from taxes being an exception is strictly construed; therefore, held, that such exemption applied only to general taxes and not to special assessments for local improvements: Cassady v. Hammer, 62–359.

Taxation is the rule, exemption is the exception, and the statute under which exemption is claimed should therefore be strictly construed: Trustees of Griswold College v. State, 46–275; Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55–150.

Taxation is the rule and exemption is the exception; therefore strict construction of the statute under which the exemption is claimed is also the rule: Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co., 66 N. W., 176.

Therefore, held, that a general exemption from taxation will not extend to and embrace special assessments for street improvements. Ibid.

Exemption from taxation is not in the nature of a contract between the state and the property owner, and does not prevent subsequent legislation altering the law and removing the exemption: Shiner v. Jacobs, 62–392.

Therefore, held, that an exemption to the owner of land by reason of the planting of trees thereon might be limited by a subsequent statute applicable to land planted before the passage of the later act: Ibid.

Tax sale of exempt property: The purchaser at tax sale of property exempt from taxation acquires no lien thereon for taxes voluntarily paid for subsequent years, although the property had passed to a third person who could not claim the exemption: Byington v. Wood, 12–479.

SEC. 1305. Valuation. All property subject to taxation shall be valued at its actual value, which shall be entered opposite each item, and shall be assessed at twenty-five per cent. of such actual value. Such assessed value shall be entered in a separate column opposite each item, and is to be taken and considered as the taxable value of such property, and the value at which it shall be listed and upon which the levy shall be made. Actual value of property as used in this chapter shall mean its value in the market in the ordinary course of trade.

SEC. 1306. Levy and indebtedness not to be increased. Should the assessed valuation of the property of any county, township, city, town, district or other political or municipal corporation for the year 1898 or subsequent years exceed the average assessed valuation for the years 1896 and 1897, the maximum rates of levy for such corporation for each of the various purposes for which taxes are levied shall, until otherwise provided by law, be so reduced that the amount of taxes raised for each of said purposes shall not exceed the amount which might have been raised on the average assessed valuation for the years 1896 and 1897 under the maximum rates of levy then existing; and the percentage limitation of indebtedness of such corporation shall be so reduced that such indebtedness shall not exceed the amount which by law might have been incurred on the assessed valuation for the year 1897. The county auditor shall prepare an abstract of the average valuation for the years 1896 and 1897 for the entire county and for each township, city, town or district in the county, for the use of the board of supervisors, city and town councils for the year 1898 and subsequent years, and said board, city or town council shall, in making levies for county, city or town purposes, or other levies certified to them by the officers or boards of the several local districts, carefully examine and reduce any such levies or estimates of the required funds in such an amount as may be necessary to prevent a greater rate of levy than the maximum herein provided for. Where boundaries shall be changed after the assessment in the year 1897 and before the assessment in the year 1898, the county auditor shall make up said valuation from the separate real estate embraced in the assessment districts created by said change of boundaries, and from the personal property therein, so far as may be practicable. It shall be unlawful for any officers or boards charged with the duty of levying taxes or issuing bonds in any county, township, city, town, district or other political or municipal corporation, to levy a higher rate of taxes for any one year than the maximum rate provided for above, or to incur indebtedness in excess of the amount herein allowed.

SEC. 1307. Remission in case of loss. The board of supervisors shall have power to remit in whole or in part the taxes of any person whose buildings, crops, stock or other property has been destroyed by fire, tornado or other unavoidable casualty, if said property has not been sold for taxes, or if said taxes have not been delinquent for thirty days at the time of the destruction. But the loss for which such remission is allowed shall be such only as is not covered by insurance. [15 G. A., ch. 66; C. '73, § 800; R., § 818.]

Where a taxpayer makes application, after he has paid his taxes, to have them refunded under this section, the treasurer may refuse to pay such rebate on a simple order of the board that it be refunded without a direct order upon him to that effect: Crosby v. Floete, 65–370.

SEC. 1308. What taxable—lands of other counties. All other property, real or personal, is subject to taxation in the manner prescribed, and this section is also intended to embrace: Ferry franchises and toll bridges, which, for the purpose of this chapter are considered real property; horses, cattle, mules and asses over one year of age; sheep and swine over six months of age; money whether in possession or on deposit; and credits, including bank bills, government currency, property or labor due from solvent debtors on contract or judgment, mortgages or other like securities, accounts bearing interest, property situated in this state belonging to any bank or company, incorporated or otherwise, whether incorporated in this or any other state; corporation shares or stocks not otherwise assessed or excepted; public or municipal bonds, stocks or loans; household furniture, beds and bedding made use of in hotels and boarding houses and not hereinbefore exempted; gold and silver plate, watches, jewelry and musical instruments; every description of vehicle, including bicycles; threshing machines; boats and vessels of every description, wherever registered or licensed, and whether navigating the waters of the state or not, if owned either wholly or in part by inhabitants of this state, to the amount owned in this state. All lands in this state which are owned or held by any other county or counties claiming title under locations with swamp land indemnity scrip, or otherwise, shall be taxed the same as other real estate within the limits of the county. [26 G. A., chs. 30, 31; C.'73, § 801; R., § 712; C. '51, § 456.]

What property is taxable: A valid legal title is not necessary to authorize taxation. Lands held by the United States in trust for grantees are subject to taxation as property of such grantees: Stockdale v. Treasurer, etc., 12–536.

Title to public land may be acquired by a purchaser so as to render the land subject to taxation prior to the issuance of a patent: Barrett v. Kevane, 69 N. W., 1036.

A party who acquires a right to possession of property belonging to a city is to be regarded as the owner, and liable for the taxes thereof: Muscatine v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 79–645.

Under the railroad land grant acts by which upon the completion of a twenty-mile section of road the company became entitled to certain sections of public land as therein provided, held, that such land was taxable in the hands of the company from the time of the completion of the section of road, although certificates for it were not obtained until afterwards: Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21–221; Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Webster County, 21–235; Whitehead v. Plummer, 76–181. And see notes to § 1304.

Mortgages held by nonresidents are not taxable in this state: Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 12–539.

A purchase money mortgage is not exempt from taxation. To tax such security is not, at least as to the person owning the mortgage, double taxation: McGregor v. Vanpel, 24–436.

The taxation of a mortgage debt in the hands of the mortgagee, and also of the property in the hands of a mortgagor, is not double taxation: Meyer v. Dubuque County, 49–193.

Where, under a bond for a deed or instrument of a similar nature, the vendee goes into possession as owner and becomes liable for the taxes, the grantor should be taxed for the unpaid purchase money as moneys and credits: Ibid.

Under particular facts indicating that conveyance of real property to a taxpayer was intended as between the parties merely as security for a loan, held, that the board of equalization was authorized to assess the property to the former owner, and the purchase price to the presumed purchaser as moneys and credits: Waller v. Jaeger, 39–228.

Notes which are left in another state for safe keeping are still subject to taxation in this state to the owner residing here. The debts exist independently of the notes themselves and follow the owner, though as to moneys and credits under the control of an agent in another state for the purpose of investment for profit, the rule might be different. (See § 1320): Hunter v. Board of Supervisors, 33–376.

Manuscript books containing abstracts of title which are salable for a money value and are employed at a profit in the business of furnishing abstracts, are taxable: Leon Loan Co. v. Equalization Board, 86–127.

Where the owner of a farm had made an executory oral agreement to convey the same at a future time, a part of the consideration being paid, the balance to be paid at the time of conveyance, held, that the unpaid purchase money was a credit within the meaning of this section, although payment could not be demanded until conveyance was tendered: Perrine v. Jacobs, 64–79.

Railway property: The right of way of a railroad company, and land held by it for depot purposes, are subject to taxation. Although they are taken for public use they are the property of the corporation: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12–112.

Therefore, held, under a statute providing for taxation of railway property only through the shares of stock of the company that its depot grounds might be subjected to a sidewalk tax: Ibid.

Under former statutes by which the property of corporations was taxable only through the shares of stock of its stockholders, held, that land owned by a railroad company was not taxable as real property: Tallman v. Treasurer, 12–531; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Dubuque, 17–120; Faxton v. McCosh, 12–527; Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 12–539. Also held, that the provision of the Code of '51, that stock owned by nonresident stockholders in railroad and similar corporations in this state should be taxable in the county where either terminus of the road was situated, was valid: Faxton v. McCosh, 12–527.

Under the Revision the property of railroads was to be assessed and taxed in the same manner as the property of individuals: Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21–221; Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Webster County, 21–235.

As to whether the track, depot grounds, buildings, etc., of a railway corporation, situated within the limits of a city, were under 9 G. A., ch. 173, which imposed a tax of one per cent. per annum upon the gross earnings in lieu of all taxes for any and all purposes, subject to municipal taxation, the supreme court were equally divided: Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 16–348; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Dubuque, 17–120.

But under 12 G. A., ch. 196, similar to the act last referred to, it was held that such property was subject to taxation for municipal purposes and that the one per cent. was only in lieu of state and county taxes: Dunleith & Dubuque Bridge Co. v. Dubuque, 32–427; Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633; Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47–196; and that 14 G. A., ch. 26, § 9, by which it was sought to release railway companies from such taxes previously levied, was unconstitutional: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39–56.

As to whether, under the acts of 1862 and 1868 above referred to, the rolling stock of a railway corporation was subject to municipal taxation in the city where the company had its principal place of business, see the cases of Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co.; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Dubuque; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., supra.

As to taxation of railway property under present law, see §§ 1334–1342.

Corporation property and stocks: Under prior provisions, held, that the real property of a private corporation for pecuniary profit is taxable as other property, and the shares of stock in such companies were also taxable under § 813 of Code of '73. As to whether both might be taxed at once, and whether that would be double taxation, quære: Appeal of Des Moines Water-Works, 48–324.

Although the taxation of the property of a corporation to the corporation, and the shares of its capital stock to its stockholders, may amount to double taxation, yet such a provision is not unconstitutional: Cook v. Burlington, 59–251.

Premiums received by an insurance company, being a gross income, are not taxable property so as to permit of a tax levy thereon by a municipal corporation under an authority to collect taxes upon "taxable property:" Dubuque v. Northwestern L. Ins. Co., 29–9; Burlington v. Putnam Ins. Co., 31–102.

Assets of a life insurance company consisting of loans, notes taken for premiums, bonds, cash, etc., were subject to taxation as belonging to the class of moneys and credits, but the company was entitled to deduct therefrom liability to its stockholders and policyholders: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74–178.

The assessment of stock in a mutual loan and building association cannot be diminished by the deduction of the debts of the owner: Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72–42.

As to the taxation of bank and corporation stock, see §§ 1322, 1323.

Swamp lands of another county: Prior to the enactment in 1873 of the provision as to lands held by a county under the swamp land grant, such lands were not liable to taxation in another county: Guthrie County v. Carroll County, 34–108; Callanan v. Wayne County, 73–709.

Further, see notes to § 1304.

SEC. 1309. Credits defined. The term credit, as used in this chapter, includes every claim or demand due or to become due for money, labor or other valuable thing, every annuity or sum of money receivable at stated periods, and all money or property of any kind secured by deed, title bond, mortgage or otherwise; but pensions of the United States or any of them, or salaries, or payments expected for services to be rendered, are not included in the above term. [C.'73, § 802; R., § 713; C.'51, §457.]

The term "credits" as here used includes shares of corporate stock: First Nat. Bank v. City Council of Albia, 85–736.

In general as to the term "credits," see Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74–178.

SEC. 1310. Moneys—credits—annuities—bank notes—stock. Moneys, credits and corporation shares or stocks, except as otherwise provided, cash, circulating notes of national banking associations, and United States legal tender notes, and other notes, and certificates of the United States payable on demand, and circulating or intended to circulate as currency, notes, including those secured by mortgage, accounts, contracts for cash or labor, bills of exchange, judgments, choses in action, liens of any kind, securities, debentures, bonds other than those of the United States, annuities, and corporation shares or stocks not otherwise taxed in kind, shall be assessed as provided in this chapter. [C.'73, § 813; R., § 721; C. '51, § 466.]

Although the taxation of the property of a corporation to the corporation, and the shares of its capital stock to its stockholders, may amount to double taxation, yet such a provision is not unconstitutional: Cook v. Burlington, 59–251.

The shares of stock of such companies are, under this section, taxable in the hands of the owners thereof. Whether both shares and property may be taxed, and whether that would amount to double taxation, quære: Appeal of the Des Moines Water Co., 48–324.

The stockholder is taxable upon his interest in the corporate property, including surplus, as well as upon his capital stock: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74–178.

Under prior provisions the shares of stock of a stockholder in a bank incorporated under the general incorporation laws of the state were to be taxed to the owner as his individual property: Henkle v. Keota, 68–334. [But see § 1322.]

Under the provisions of the Code of '51, held, that a banking corporation doing business within the limits of a city was subject to the payment of municipal taxes: McGregor v. McGregor Branch of State Bank, 12–79.

Stock in a national bank should be assessed at its market value, whether that be above, below, or at par: First Nat. Bank v. City Council of Albia, 86–28.

Any portion of the capital of a bank which is invested in U. S. bonds should be exempted from taxation: Ottumwa Savings Bank v. Ottumwa, 63 N. W., 672; Campbell v. Centerville, 69–439; German Am. Savings Bank v. Burlington, 54–609.

While it may be true that one of the inducements for the purchase of such bonds is their non-taxable quality, yet it does not constitute fraud on the part of the bank that it thus invests its capital in such bonds, at least where it appears that such investment was a legitimate use of its funds: Ottumwa Savings Bank v. Ottumwa, 63 N. W., 672.

Where the property of the corporation is not otherwise assessed it is not error to assess it to the company under the mistaken designation of corporate stock: Robbins v. Magoun, 70 N. W., 700.

SEC. 1311. Deducting debts. In making up the amount of money or credits which any person is required to list, or to have listed or assessed, including actual value of any building and loan shares, he will be entitled to deduct from the actual value thereof the gross amount of all debts in good faith owing by him, but no acknowledgment of indebtedness not founded on actual consideration, and no such acknowledgment made for the purpose of being so deducted, shall be considered a debt within the intent of this section, and so much only of any liability of such person as security for another shall be deducted as he believes he will be compelled to pay on account of the inability of the principal debtor, and if there are other sureties able to contribute, then so much only as he in whose name the list is made will be bound to contribute; but no person will be entitled to any deduction on account of any deposit or security note given in aid of the organization of a mutual insurance company for the premiums of insurance, nor on account of any unpaid subscription to any institution, society, corporation or company; and no person shall be entitled to any deduction on account of any indebtedness contracted for the purchase of United States bonds or other non-taxable property. [C. '73, § 814; R., § 722; C. '51, § 467.]

This provision for the deduction of debts is not in conflict with the constitutional prohibition against local or special laws for the assessment or collection of taxes: Macklot v. Davenport, 17–379.

One who is taxed as a merchant under § 1318 cannot deduct his debts: McConn v. Roberts, 25–152.

Where the taxpayer having been acting as an agent for a nonresident for the loaning of money, and having been taxed as agent for such money, executed notes to the persons who had been principals, by which he became personally liable as borrower for the money in his hands for investment, and then set off, as against such money in his hands, the amount of his individual indebtedness on the obligations thus executed, held, that it not appearing that there was any fraud or want of good faith, he was not subject to assessment for such property, the amount of his indebtedness being greater than the amount of his moneys and credits as thus estimated: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 67–37.

Whether a taxpayer is entitled to have an acknowledgment of indebtedness entered into by him deducted from the amounts of moneys and credits which he is required to list for assessment depends upon whether it is founded upon an actual consideration. If it is founded upon such consideration, and evidences an actual indebtedness, he is entitled to have it deducted regardless of the motive which may have influenced him to incur the obligation: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 67–182.

Where property of a nonresident was under the control and management of an agent in the state, within the provision of § 1320, held, that the fact that he gave a note to his principal for the amount of such notes for the purpose of exempting them from taxation, such note not representing any real indebtedness, would not entitle such agent to deduct from the amount of the notes under his control the amount of such fictitious indebtedness: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66–35.

Under prior provisions held, that stock in a corporation was not to be classed as credits under this section in such a sense that debts of the owner could be set off against its value for purposes of assssment: Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72–42. But quære; see Primghar State Bank v. Rerick, 64 N. W., 801.

To the contrary it has been held that the holder of stock in a national bank may set off against it indebtedness owing by him: First Nat. Bank v. City Council, 86–28; Farmers & Traders Nat. Bank v. Hoffman, 61 N. W., 418; Richards v. Rock Rapids, 31 Fed., 505. As to taxation of stock in national and state or savings banks respectively, see § 1322 and notes.

A corporation being bound to pay to its stockholders all its capital and profits upon the winding up of its affairs, the amount which the stockholders would receive were the corporation wound up is an indebtedness which may be deducted from the amount of moneys and credits belonging to the corporation. Therefore, held, that the assets of a life insurance company, consisting of securities, premium notes, cash, etc., were subject to deduction for the purpose of taxation, of the amount of liability of the corporation to its stockholders and also its liability to its policy-holders: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74–178.

So held, also, in case of a fire insurance company: Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 75–770.

The obligation which a corporation owes to its stockholders to pay to them the surplus over and above the capital stock cannot be deemed an indebtedness which may be set off as against such surplus and thus relieve the corporation from taxation therefor: Iowa State Savings Bank v. Burlington, 61 N. W., 851.

In case of a banker the excess of deposits and bills payable over cash and bills receivable may be deducted from moneys and credits: Campbell v. Centerville, 69–439.

The moneys and credits of a corporation from which are to be deducted its liabilities do not include real estate and other property for which taxation is specifically provided: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74–178.

SEC. 1312. Listing—by whom. Every inhabitant of this state, of full age and sound mind, shall list for the assessor all property subject to taxation in the state, of which he is the owner, or has the control or management, in the manner herein directed: The property of one under disability, by the person having charge thereof; that of a married woman, by herself or husband; that of a beneficiary for whom the property is held in trust, by the trustee, and the personal property of a decedent by the executor or administrator, or if there is none, by any person interested therein; that of a body corporate, company, society or partnership, by its principal accountant, officer, agent or partner, as the assessor may demand. Property under mortgage or lease is to be listed by and taxed to the mortgagor or lessor, unless listed by the mortgagee or lessee. [C. '73, § 803; R., § 714; C. '51, § 458.]

It is the duty of the mortgagor of real property to pay the taxes thereon: Porter v. Lafferty, 33–254; Dayton v. Rice, 47–429.

While property which is under mortgage or lease may be assessed to the mortgagor, the mortgage itself is to be assessed as personal property to the mortgagee, and if he be a nonresident it cannot be assessed in this state: Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 12–539.

Where a purchaser of real estate under contract for a deed takes possession thereof, he is liable for the taxes thereon, and on subsequently taking the deed cannot require the vendor to covenant against such taxes: Miller v. Corey, 15–166.

The personal property of a decedent should, as a rule, be assessed in the county of which he died a resident, and not in the county where the executor resides: McGregor's Ex'rs v. Vanpel, 24–436.

As to listing real property of decedent, to his heirs without naming them, see § 1353.

Where the administrator is a resident of the same county where decedent died, but of another township, the personal property coming into possession of the administrator should be assessed in the township where the administrator resides: Cameron v. Burlington, 56–320.

Where there are two executors both having actual possession of personal property of the decedent and both residing in the same county but in different taxation districts each should return to the assessor of his district or township such personal property of decedent as may be in his immediate possession in such township: Burns v. McNally, 90–432.

It does not follow that property which though in possession of an executor has a fixed and abiding place or location in another township than that of executor's residence will necessarily be assessable in the township of such residence: Ibid.

The personal property of a ward is to be assessed in the county where his guardian lives although the ward has a legal residence in another county: Hinkhouse v. Wilton, 62 N. W., 782.

SEC. 1313. Place of listing. Moneys and credits, notes, bills, bonds, and corporate shares or stocks not otherwise assessed, shall be listed and assessed where the owner lives, except as otherwise provided, and except that, if personal property not consisting of moneys, credits, corporation or other shares of stock, or bonds, has been kept in another assessment district during the greater part of the year preceding the first of January, or of the portion of that period during which it was owned by the person subject to taxation therefor, it shall be taxed where it has been so kept.

Decisions prior to adoption of this Code: The rule as to the place of taxing movable property is hard to fix, but it is not dependent upon the location of the property: Rhyno v. Madison County, 43–632.

As a general rule personal property is taxed where the owner resides: Ament v. Humphrey, 3 G. Gr., 255.

Moneys and credits are assessable and taxable at the place of the owner's residence and not elsewhere, and an assessment at another place is void: Barber v. Farr, 54–57.

A debt of which a note is evidence is subject to taxation where the creditor resides, although the note itself is deposited in another state for safe keeping: Hunter v. Board of Supervisors, 33–376.

Where plaintiff had been residing with his family at Osceola, but afterwards went to Chicago, engaging in business there without removing his family, held, that he was still subject to taxation in Osceola: Nugent v. Bates, 51–77.

Facts in a particular case as to domicile and residence held sufficient to show that the property of plaintiff was not assessable in the township where he was assessed: Babcock v. Township Board of Equalization, 65–110.

Where the wife of a naval officer whose husband was absent from the state left the state to join him without intention of returning, still owning the home in which they had resided and some furniture therein, held, that she was not a resident of the state so as to be subject to taxation: Remey v. Board of Equalization, 80–470.

Property in transitu from or through a state cannot be taxed. Hence, corn cribbed in Iowa as an incident to its shipment through or from the state is not taxable. If, however, it is put in cribs with no purpose of immediate shipment, but to await the future course of the markets, or for the purpose of avoiding taxation, the transit will be considered as at an end: Ogilvie v. Crawford County, 2 McCrary, 148.

A stock of merchandise located within a district should be taxed there for school purposes, although the owner resides in a different district: Ament v. Humphrey, 3 G. Gr., 355; Lemp v. Hastings, 4 G. Gr., 448.

If personal property has no established locality, and is used in doing business in a county or district in which the owner does not reside, it is to be listed and assessed at the place at which the owner resides; but if it has a known locality, and is used in doing business in that locality, it must be listed and taxed in the county or district where it is thus used: Lemp v. Hastings, 4 G. Gr., 448.

Where a taxpayer sought by replevin to recover a horse seized for municipal taxes, held, that he could not recover in the absence of an averment that the personal property on which such tax was levied was not habitually used within the city: Buell v. Schaale, 39–293.

Where personal property within a city is owned by a nonresident the officer or agent who has control thereof stands in the place of the owner, and its situs as to taxation, unless otherwise prescribed, is his place of business: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39–56, 67.

It is the province of the general assembly to determine what property actually in the state is taxable. Money loaned and invested within the state and under the control and management of an agent here may be taxed under the provisions of statute: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

Notes which are left in another state for safe keeping are still subject to taxation in this state to the owner residing here. The debts exist independently of the notes themselves, and follow the owner, though as to moneys and credits under the control of an agent in another state for the purpose of investment for profit the rule might be different: Hunter v. Board of Supervisors, 33-376.

SEC. 1314. Who deemed owners—commission merchants. Commission merchants, and all persons trading and dealing on commission, and assignees authorized to sell, and persons having in their possession property belonging to another subject to taxation in the assessment district where said property is found, when the owner of the goods does not reside in the county, are, for the purpose of taxation, to be deemed the owners of the property in their possession. [C. '73, § 804; R., § 715; C. '51, § 459.]

SEC. 1315. Grain, ice and coal dealers. Each grain, ice or coal dealer shall be assessed upon the average amount of capital used by him in conducting his business. In estimating the amount of capital so used, there shall be taken into consideration the increase and decrease of the value of grain held in store, and upon the value of his warehouses, ice houses, granaries or cribs situated upon lands leased from railway companies or other persons, and upon the value, if any, of such leasehold interest.

SEC. 1316. Listing property of another. Any person required to list property belonging to another shall list it in the same county in which he would be required to list it if it were his own, except as herein otherwise directed; but he shall list it separately from his own, giving the assessor the name of the person or estate to which it belongs. [C. '73, § 805; R., § 716; C. '51, § 461.]

See notes to § 1312.

SEC. 1317. Business in different districts—partners. When a person, firm or corporation is doing business in more than one assessment district, the property and credits existing in any one of such districts, or arising from business done in such district, shall be listed and taxed in that district, and the credits not existing in or pertaining especially to the business in any district shall be listed and taxed in that district where the principal place of business may be. The personalty, moneys and credits connected with or growing out of all business transacted directly or indirectly by or through the servants, employes or agents of any person, firm or corporation engaged in the banking business, having an office or agency in more than one assessment district for the transaction of business, shall be taxable as provided in this chapter for the taxing of private banks and bankers, in the assessment district where said branch business is done. An assessment made in such district shall be considered and proper deduction made in determining the taxable property of such person or firm, or shares of stock of such corporation, at its principal place of business. The stipulation for the payment of obligations growing out of the business of such agency, in another district than the place where such agency is located, shall not determine where the property or credits of such parties shall be taxed. Any individual of a partnership is liable for the taxes due from the firm. [C. '73, § 806; R., § 717; C. '51, § 463.]

A similar provision (§ 806 of Code of '73), held of somewhat doubtful application where the person was doing business in more than one county unless the business in the different counties was of the same kind. Capital invested in the manufacturing business located in one county by a person who resides in another is taxable where the business is located, though it may be temporarily suspended during a part of the year: Dean v. Solon, 66 N. W., 182. And see notes to § 1313.

SEC. 1318. Merchants. Any person, firm or corporation owning, or having in his possession, or under his control within the state, with authority to sell the same, any personal property purchased with a view of its being sold, or which has been consigned to him from any place out of this state to be sold within the same, or to be delivered or shipped by him within or without this state, shall be held to be a merchant for the purposes of this title. In assessing such stocks of merchandise, the assessor shall require the production of the last inventory taken, and in the assessment roll shall state the date thereof, and if in the judgment of the assessor such is not correct, or if such time has elapsed since the inventory was taken that it shall have ceased to be reliable as to the value thereof, he shall appraise the same by personal examination. The assessment shall be made at the average value of the stock during the year next preceding the time of assessment, and, if the merchant has not been engaged in business so long, then the average value during such time as he shall have been so engaged, and, if commencing, then the value at the time for assessment, and the provisions of this section shall apply and constitute the method of taxation of a corporation whose business or principal business is of a like character, and shall be in lieu of any tax on the corporate shares. [C. '73, § 815; R., § 723; C. '51, § 468.]

Under the Revision which did not have in the following section the express provision as to packing of meats, held, that a person engaged in buying and packing pork was a merchant within the meaning of this section, and the fact that the property was held with a view of selling it out of the state did not affect the liability of the owner to taxation upon such property. And that the fact that the property was purchased on credit or on borrowed capital would not relieve the owner from taxation thereon. Debts can only be deducted from moneys and credits: McConn v. Roberts, 25–152.

If a person resides in one county and is conducting a mercantile business in another the stock of merchandise should be taxed in the county where the business is done: Dean v. Solon, 66 N. W., 182.

SEC. 1319. Manufacturers. Any person, firm or corporation who purchases, receives or holds personal property of any description for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by any process of manufacturing, packing of meats, refining, purifying, or by the combination of different materials, with a view to making gain or profit by so doing, and selling the same, shall be held a manufacturer for the purposes of this title, and he shall list for taxation such property in his hands; but the average value thereof to be ascertained as in the preceding section, whether manufactured or unmanufactured, shall be estimated upon those materials only which enter into its combination or manufacture. Machinery used in manufacturing establishments shall, for the purpose of taxation, be regarded as real estate. Corporations organized under the laws of this state for pecuniary profit, and engaged in manufacturing as defined by this section, and which have their capital represented by shares of stock, shall, through their principal accounting officers, list their real estate, personal property and moneys and credits in the same manner as is required of individuals. The owners of capital stock of manufacturing companies, as herein provided for, having listed their property as above directed, shall be exempt from assessment and taxation on such shares of capital stock. [18 G. A., ch. 57, §§ 1, 2; C. '73, § 816; R., § 724; C. '51, § 469.]

The property taxable under this section is such only as is held for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by the process of manufacturing and with a view to a gain of profit by such manufacture and the sale thereof. Such things as do not become a part of the commodity when ready for sale are excluded: Dean v. Solon, 66 N. W., 182.

A company manufacturing and selling sewer pipe and drain tile is a manufacturer within the provisions of this section and not a merchant under the preceding section: Appeal of Iowa Pipe and Tile Co., 70 N. W., 115.

Fuel used in manufacturing is not to be estimated as part of the material entering into the manufacture: Ibid.

SEC. 1320. Agent personally liable. Any person acting as the agent of another, and having in his possession or under his control or management any money, notes and credits, or personal property belonging to such other person, with a view to investing or loaning or in any other manner using or holding the same for pecuniary profit, for himself or the owner, shall be required to list the same at the real value, and such agent shall be personally liable for the tax on the same; and if he refuse to render the list or to swear to the same, the amount of such money, property, notes or credits may be listed and valued according to the best knowledge and judgment of the assessor. [C.'73, § 817; R., § 725.]

These provisions are not unconstitutional. The property involved being protected by the laws of the state to the same extent as any other property, and the rate of taxation being the same, it cannot be said that the property may, by such provision, be appropriated to public use without compensation: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66–35.

Although for some purposes the situs of moneys and credits is deemed to be where the owner resides, yet such property may be deemed within the state for the purpose of taxation and may be taxable as well as other kinds of personal property situated within the state under the control and management of an agent: Ibid.

An agent cannot escape taxation on the money thus under his management and control by executing to his principal a note for the amount of such money not representing any real indebtedness on the part of the agent. Such fictitious indebtedness would not be within the statutory provision allowing a setting off of debts as against moneys and credits: Ibid.

In a particular case, held, that the party did not have the possession, management and control of the property of another as agent in such sense as to make him liable for taxes thereon: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 67–182.

Section applied: Hunter v. Board of Supervisors, 33–376.

SEC. 1321. Private bankers. Private banks or bankers, or any persons other than corporations hereinafter specified, a part of whose business is the receiving of deposits subject to check, on certificates, receipts, or otherwise, or the selling of exchange, shall prepare and furnish to the assessor a sworn statement, showing the assets, aside from real estate, and liabilities of such bank or banker on January first of the current year, as follows:

1. The amount of moneys, specifying separately the amount of moneys on hand or in transit, the funds in the hands of other banks, bankers, brokers or other persons or corporations, and the amount of checks or other cash items not included in either of the preceding items;

2. The actual value of credits, consisting of bills receivable owned by them, and other credits due or to become due;

3. The amount of all deposits made with them by others, and also the amount of bills payable;

4. The actual value of bonds and stocks of every kind and shares of capital stock or joint stock of other corporations or companies held as an investment, or in any way representing assets, and the specific kinds and description thereof exempt from taxation;

5. All other property pertaining to said business, including real estate, which shall be specially listed and valued by the usual description thereof;

The aggregate actual value of moneys and credits, after deducting therefrom the amount of deposits and of debts owing by such bank as provided in this chapter, and the aggregate actual value of bonds and stocks, after deducting the portion thereof exempt, or otherwise taxed in this state, and also the other property pertaining to the business, shall be assessed at twenty-five per cent. of the actual value of the same, not including real estate, which shall be listed and assessed as other real estate. [15 G. A., ch. 63; C.'73, § 812; R., §§ 719, 720; C.'51, §§ 460, 465.]

Under § 812, of Code of '73, by which private bankers were taxable on the average value of their moneys and credits during the year, an assessment on average deposits was not authorized: Branch v. Marengo, 43–600.

SEC. 1322. National, state and savings banks. Shares of stock of national banks shall be assessed to the individual stockholders at the place where the bank is located. Shares of stock of state and savings banks and loan and trust companies shall be assessed to such banks and loan and trust companies and not to the individual stockholders. At the time the assessment is made, the officers of national banks shall furnish the assessor with a list of all the stockholders and the number of shares owned by each, and he shall list to each stockholder under the head of corporation stock the total value of such shares. To aid the assessor in fixing the value of such shares, the corporations shall furnish him a verified statement of all the matters provided in the preceding section, which shall also show, separately, the amount of capital stock, and the surplus and undivided earnings, and the assessor, from such statement and other information he can obtain, including any statement furnished to and information obtained by the auditor of state, which shall be furnished him on request, shall fix the value of such stock, taking into account the capital, surplus and undivided earnings. In arriving at the total value of the shares of stock of such corporations, the amount of their capital actually invested in real estate, owned by them, shall be deducted from the real value of such shares, and such real estate shall be assessed as other real estate, and the property of such corporations shall not be otherwise assessed. [23 G. A., ch. 39; 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 28; 15 G. A., ch. 63; C.'73, §§ 812, 818–20; R., §§ 719, 720; C.'51, §§ 460, 465.]

Previous statutory provisions as to taxation of shares in national banks held inoperative for the reason that the capital and not the shares of stock of state banking institutions were under the state statutes then existing subject to taxation, and therefore, under the national banking act, shares of stock in national banks could not be taxed: Hubbard v. Board of Supervisors, 23–130; Olmstead v. Board of Supervisors, 24–33; Lauman v. Des Moines County, 29–310.

But under subsequent state statutes, held, that shares in state banks became subject to taxation so that stock in national banks became taxable: Morseman v. Younkin, 27–350.

Under the act of congress with reference to the taxation of national banks, the shares of stock and the real estate of such banks are alone subject to taxation. Personal property belonging to such associations cannot be taxed: National State Bank v. Young, 25–311.

To render the assessment of shares of stock in national banks void, as in violation of R. S. of U. S., § 5219, it must be shown there is, in fact, a higher burden of taxation imposed upon the money thus invested than is assessed upon other moneyed capital. It is not sufficient to show that the method of taxation is different: Richards v. Rock Rapids, 31 Fed., 505.

The assessment against a shareholder does not authorize the seizure of property of the bank for its liquidation: First Nat. Bank v. Hershire, 31–18.

The bank is not absolutely liable for the taxes upon shares, but to render it liable it must be shown that it has, or has had, dividends or other money or property belonging to the delinquent shareholder: Hershire v. First Nat. Bank, 35–272.

A stockholder in a national bank cannot be taxed at a greater rate than is assessed on other moneyed capital, and this implies that the assessment of shares in national banks is to be to the stockholder and not to the bank, even though the bank is required to pay the tax out of money due the stockholder: Farmers' & Traders' Nat. Bank v. Hoffman, 61 N. W., 418.

The obligation of a national bank to pay the tax of the stockholder does not require that it use funds of its own, except such as may be fairly held to belong to the stockholder either as set apart to him as dividend or otherwise designated as his: Ibid.

The fact that stock in a national bank is assessed to the shareholder, whilst savings banks are taxed upon their capital stock and their shares are not taxable, does not render the tax on the national bank stock illegal, it not appearing that the tax in one case is greater than in the other: Davenport Nat. Bank v. Board of Equalization, 123 U. S., 83; S. C., 64–140. And see Davenport Nat. Bank v. Mittelbuscher, 4 McCrary, 361.

As to whether debts of the stockholder may be deducted from the assessment of bank stock, see notes to § 1311.

This provision for taxing shares of capital stock in a state bank to the bank is not unconstitutional even though there is no provision as there is with reference to the taxation of national bank stock that the bank shall be liable only to the extent to which it has dividends or other property of the stockholder which it may apply to such assessment and even though the owner of the stock should be thereby deprived of the privilege of setting off indebtedness in reduction of the tax on such stock: Primghar State Bank v. Rerick, 64 N. W., 801.

The capital of a state bank is really owned, by the stockholders and is itself reduced by the amount paid for taxes. The shareholders do in effect pay the taxes and equality of taxation to that extent exists as between the state bank and the national bank: Ibid.

In determining what is the capital stock, of a savings bank to be taxed to the bank, undivided profits or surplus is to be included: Iowa State Savings Bank v. Burlington, 61 N. W., 851; Ottumwa Savings Bank v. Ottumwa, 63 N. W., 672.

SEC. 1323. Shares of corporation stock. The shares of stock of any corporation organized under the laws of this state, except those which are not organized for pecuniary profit, and except corporations otherwise provided for in this act, shall be assessed to the owners thereof, at the place where its principal business is transacted, the assessment to be on the value of such shares on the first day of January in each year; but in arriving at the total value of the shares of stock of such corporations, the amount of their capital actually invested in real estate owned by them, either in this state or elsewhere, shall be deducted from the real value of such shares, and such real estate shall be assessed as other real estate, and the property of such corporation, except real estate situated within the state, shall not be otherwise assessed. Every such corporation annually, on or before the twenty-fifth day of January, shall furnish to the assessor of the assessment district in which its principal place of business is located a verified statement, showing specifically, with reference to the year next preceding the first day of January then last past:

1. Total authorized capital stock and number of shares thereof;
2. Number of shares of stock issued and par value of each;
3. Amount paid into the treasury on each share and the total capital paid in;
4. Description and value of each tract of real estate owned by said corporation;
5. Date, rate per cent. and amount of each dividend declared, and the amount of capital on which each such dividend was declared;
6. Gross and net earnings, respectively, during the year, and amount of surplus;
7. Amount of profit added to sinking fund;
8. Highest price of sales of stock between the first and tenth days of January of the current year;
9. Highest price of sales of stock during the preceding year, and average price of such sales.

For decisions as to taxation of corporate stock under prior provisions which contained no express direction on the subject, see notes to § 1308.

There is no distinction in the case of ordinary corporations between capital stock and surplus and the whole property of the corporation is liable to taxation as its capital, to be reached through taxation of its stock: Iowa State Savings Bank v. Burlington, 61 N. W., 851.

SEC. 1324. Valuation of corporation stock. If the assessor is not satisfied with the appraisement and valuation furnished as provided in the preceding sections, he may make a valuation of the shares of stock based upon the facts contained in the statements above required, or upon any information within his possession, or that shall come to him, and shall, in either case, assess to the owners the stock at the valuation made by him. If the officers of any corporation refuse or neglect to make the statement required, the assessor shall make a valuation of the capital stock of the defaulting corporation from the best information obtainable. In deducting, under the provisions of this chapter, the value of real estate from the actual value of the properties, shares or capital stock of any person, firm, association or corporation, the actual value at which said real estate is valued by the assessor or other taxing officer or body where the same is assessed shall be the value thereof.

SEC. 1325. Corporation liable. The corporations described in the preceding sections shall be liable for the payment of the taxes assessed to the stockholders of such corporations, and such tax shall be payable by the corporation in the same manner and under the same penalties as in case of taxes due from an individual taxpayer, and may be collected in the same manner as other taxes, or by action in the name of the county. Such corporations may recover from each stockholder his proportion of the taxes so paid, and shall have a lien on his stock and unpaid dividends therefor. If the unpaid dividends are not sufficient to pay such tax, the corporation may enforce such lien on the stock by public sale of the same, to be made by the sheriff at the principal office of such corporation in this state, after giving the stockholders thirty days' notice of the amount of such tax and the time and place of sale, such notices to be by registered letter addressed to the stockholder at his post-office address, as the same appears upon the books of the company, or is known by its secretary.

SEC. 1326. Stock of building and loan associations. The shares of stock of mutual building and loan or savings and loan associations, exclusively engaged in such business, shall be assessed and taxed to the individual holders thereof at their place of residence. When such association maintains a reserve, expense or other fund, or its equivalent, the total amount of such fund or funds shall be subject to taxation at the principal place of business of the association, and shall be assessed against the association as other personal property, the tax of same to be paid by the association. It shall be the duty of such association to keep a correct list of the owners of the stock thereof, with their post-office addresses, and on or before the thirty-first day of January of each year the officers of all domestic and domestic local associations shall make the same verified statement as other corporations are required to make and furnish the assessors, and in addition thereto shall state the total amount of their reserve, expense or other fund, or its equivalent, and the actual value of its shares of stock, and furnish the same to the assessor of the assessment district in which its principal place of business is located. And on or before the fifteenth day of February of each year the secretary or president of such domestic or domestic local associations shall make, by mailing to them, postage prepaid, a verified statement to the county auditors of the name and post-office address of every stockholder of said associations residing in their respective counties, together with the number of shares owned by each person, and the actual value of each share of said stock on the first day of January preceding. The auditor of state shall, on or before the tenth day of February of each year, send to the county auditor of each county a statement of the name and post-office address of each stockholder of a foreign building and loan or savings and loan association residing in their respective counties, together with the number of shares owned by each person on the first day of January preceding, and the actual value of each share of stock on said first day of January, which facts shall be as reported to him by such associations under the law governing building and loan or savings and loan associations. It shall be the duty of the county auditor to immediately furnish to each assessor in his county the name of each stockholder in any such association residing in such assessor's district, together with the number of shares held by each person, and the actual value of each share on the first day of January preceding.

SEC. 1327. Real estate of corporations. All real estate owned by corporations, returned in their statements as part of their assets for purposes of taxation, shall be valued therein for such assessment as other real estate, except as otherwise provided, and shall not be otherwise assessed.

Without any express provision on the subject, held, that where a portion of the capital stock of a national bank was invested in land which was subject to taxation, the bank might be taxed upon the actual value of its stock, diminished by the proportionate value of the real estate owned by the bank. First Nat. Bank v. Council of Albia, 86-28.

SEC. 1328. Telegraph and telephone companies. Every telegraph and telephone company operating a line in this state shall, on or before the first day of May in each year, furnish to the auditor of state a statement verified by its president or secretary showing:

1. The total number of miles owned, operated or leased within the state, with a separate showing of the number leased;
2. The average number of poles per mile, and the whole number of poles on their lines in this state;
3. The total number of miles in each separate line or division thereof, also the average number of separate wires thereon;
4. The whole number of stations on each line, and the value of the same, including furniture;

5. The whole number of instruments on each separate line, and the gross rental charges per instrument, where the same are rented to patrons of the company making the return, together with the number of stations maintained, other than railroad stations;

6. The gross receipts and operating expenses of said company for the year ending December thirty-first next preceding on business originating and terminating in this state;

7. The gross receipts and operating expenses of said company for the year ending December thirty-first next preceding, and not included in the statement made under subsection six hereof;

8. The total capital stock of said company;

9. The number of shares of capital stock issued and outstanding, and the par or face value of each share;

10. The market value of such shares of stock on the first day of January next preceding, and if such shares have no market value, the actual value thereof;

11. All real estate and other property owned by such company and subject to local taxation within this state;

12. The specific real estate, together with the permanent improvements thereon, owned by such company and situated outside this state and taxed as other real estate in the state where located, with a specific description of each piece, where located and the purpose for which the same is used, and the actual value thereof in the locality where situated;

13. All mortgages upon the whole or any part of its property, together with the dates and amounts thereof;

14. a. The total length of the lines of said company;

b. The total length of the lines of said company outside this state. [17 G. A., ch. 59, §§ 1, 2.]

Before the taxation of telephone companies' was expressly provided for it was held that the provisions as to taxing telegraph companies were applicable to them: Iowa Union Telephone Co. v. Board of Equalization, 67–250.

SEC. 1329. Failure to make statement. Upon the receipt of said statements from the several companies, the auditor of state shall lay the same before the executive council, and if it shall deem the same insufficient and that further information is requisite, it shall require the officer making same to make such other or further statement as it may desire. In case of failure or refusal of any company to make out or deliver to the auditor of state the statements required in this chapter, such company shall forfeit and pay to the state of Iowa one hundred dollars for each day such report is delayed beyond the first day of May, to be sued and recovered in any proper form of action in the name of the state, and on the relation of the auditor of state, and such penalty, when collected, shall be paid into the general fund of the state. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1330. Assessment by executive council. The executive council shall, at its meeting on the second Monday in July in each year, proceed to find the actual value of the property of such companies in this state, taking into consideration the information obtained from the statements above required, and any further information they can obtain, using the same as a means for determining the actual cash value of the property of such companies within this state; also taking into consideration the valuation of all property of such companies, including franchises and the use of the property in connection with lines outside the state, and making such deductions as may be necessary on account of extra value of property outside the state as compared with the value of property in the state, in order that the actual cash value of the property of the company within this state may be ascertained; and, after finding the actual cash value of the property of the company within this state, it shall deduct from the total amount of same the actual cash value of the property belonging to the company assessed for taxation in local taxing districts in this state, and shall assess the property of such company at its taxable value as thus found.

SEC. 1331. Rate of tax—when due. The council shall also at said meeting determine the rate of tax to be levied and collected upon said assessments, which shall be equal, as nearly as may be, to the average rate of taxes, state, county, municipal and local, levied throughout the state during the previous year, which rate shall be ascertained from the records and files in the auditor's office, and said tax shall be in full of all taxes, except on real estate and special assessments, and shall become due and payable at the state treasury on the first day of February following the levy thereof, and if not so paid the state treasurer shall collect the same by distress and sale of any property belonging to such company in the state, in the same manner as is required of the county treasurers in like cases; and the record of the executive council in such case shall be sufficient warrant therefor. [17 G. A., ch. 59, §§ 4, 5.]

SEC. 1332. Line operated by railroad. No telegraph line shall be assessed which is owned and operated by any railroad company exclusively for the transaction of its business, and which has been duly reported as such in its annual report under the laws providing for the taxation of railroad property. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 1333. Insurance companies. Every insurance company or association organized or incorporated under the laws of any state or nation other than the United States, and every other insurance company whose charter may be owned or a majority of whose stock may be controlled or whose business shall be carried on in the interest or for the benefit of any insurance company or association incorporated under the laws of any state or nation other than the United States, shall, at the time of making the annual statements as required by law, pay into the state treasury as taxes three and one-half per cent. of the gross amount of premiums received by it for business done in this state, including all insurance upon property situated in this state and upon the lives of persons resident in this state during the preceding year. Every insurance company incorporated under the laws of any state of the United States other than the state of Iowa, not including associations operating under the provisions of chapter seven, title nine of this code, or fraternal beneficiary associations doing business in the United States, shall, at the time of making the annual statements as required by law, pay into the state treasury as taxes two and one-half per cent. of the gross amount of premiums received by it for business done in this state, including all insurance upon property situated in this state and upon the lives of persons resident in this state during the preceding year. Every other insurance company or association doing business in this state, not including those otherwise taxed under the provisions of this section, and not including county mutuals and fraternal beneficiary associations, shall at the time of making the annual statements as required by law, pay into the state treasury as taxes one per cent. of the gross amount received by it on assessments, fees, dues or premiums for business done in this state, including all insurance upon property situated in this state and upon the lives of persons resident in this state during the preceding year, after deducting amounts actually paid for losses and the amount of premiums returned. At the time of paying said taxes, said companies and associations shall take duplicate receipts therefor, one of which shall be filed with the auditor of state, and upon filing of said receipt, and not till then, the auditor shall issue the annual certificate as provided by law, and the taxes provided in this section shall be in full for all taxes, state and local, against such corporations or associations, except taxes on real estate and special assessments. No deduction or exemption from the taxes herein provided shall be allowed for or on account of any indebtedness owing by any such insurance company or association. [C. '73, § 807; R., § 718; C. '51, § 464.]

SEC. 1334. Railway companies. On the first Monday in March in each year, the executive council shall assess all the property of each railway corporation in the state, excepting the lands, lots and other real estate belonging thereto not used in the operation of any railway, and excepting railway bridges across the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, and excepting grain elevators; and for the purpose of making such assessment its president, vice-president, general manager, general superintendent, receiver or such other officer as the council may designate, shall, on or before the fifteenth day of February in each year, furnish it a verified statement, showing in detail, for the year ended December thirty-first next preceding:

1. The whole number of miles of railway owned, operated or leased by such corporation or company within and without the state;

2. The whole number of miles of railway owned, operated or leased within the state, including double tracks and side tracks, the mileage of the main line and branch lines to be stated separately, and showing the number of miles of track in each county;

3. A detailed statement, showing the amount of real estate owned or used by said railway in the operation thereof in each county within the state, including the right of way, roadbeds, bridges, culverts, depot grounds, station-houses, yards, section and tool houses, roundhouses, machine and repair shops, water tanks, turntables, gravel beds and stone quarries, and for all other purposes, and the estimated value thereof, in such manner as may be required by the council;

4. A full and complete statement of the cost and actual present value of all buildings of every description owned by said railway company within the state not otherwise assessed;

5. The total number of ties per mile used on all its tracks within the state;

6. The weight of rails per yard in main line, double tracks and side tracks;

7. The number of miles of telegraph lines owned and used within the state;

8. The total number of engines, and passenger, chair, dining, official, express, mail, baggage, freight and other cars, including hand cars and boarding cars used in constructing and repairing such railway, in use on its whole line, and the sleeping cars owned by it, and the number of each class on its line within the state, each class to be valued separately;

9. Any and all other movable property owned by said railway within the state, classified and scheduled in such manner as may be required by said council;

10. The gross earnings of the entire road, and the gross earnings in this state;

11. The operating expenses of the entire road, and the operating expenses within this state;

12. The net earnings of the entire road, and the net earnings within this state. [C.'73, §§ 810, 1317, 1318.]

Decisions under prior statutes: The sections relating to the taxation of railway property, held not unconstitutional as providing for the taxation of the property of a corporation otherwise than that of individuals: Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47–196.

But a former statutory provision releasing railway companies from payment of municipal taxes previously levied, held unconstitutional: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633.

However questionable may be the constitutionality of provisions exempting railway companies from all other burdens by the payment of a definite sum annually, whether that sum be greater or less than its share of taxation, it is clear that such an exemption does not render void the general tax levied on other property: Muscatine v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 1 Dillon, 536.

The order of the board of supervisors declaring the length of the main track and the assessed value of the railroad lying within each city, town, township or lesser taxing district in the county, and transmitted to the city council or trustees of each city or incorporated town or township, becomes the basis for the levy of taxes upon the railroad property without such property being placed upon the assessment books of the township or city: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45–168.

Although these sections relate to the assessment of the right of way, which is real property, and which, according to the general law as to assessments, would be assessed only once in two years, yet they are not unconstitutional, being applicable to all railway companies: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67–199.

The provisions of this section are applicable to railway bridges in general, but those of § 1342 apply to those therein mentioned: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74–283.

As to taxation of property not used in operating the road, and of railway bridges over the Mississippi or Missouri rivers, see § 1342.

As to taxation of railway property in general, see notes to § 1308.

SEC. 1335. Operating expenses—amended statement. There shall not be included in said operating expenses any payments for interest or discount, or construction of new tracks except needed sidings, for raising or lowering tracks above or below crossings at grade in cities or towns, for new equipment except replacements, for reducing any bonded or permanent debt, nor for any other item of operating expenses not fairly and reasonably chargeable as such in railway accounts. The council may demand, in writing, detailed, explanatory and amended statements of any of the items mentioned in the preceding section, or any other items deemed by it important, to be furnished it by such railway corporation within thirty days from such demand, in such form as it may designate, which shall be verified as required for the original statement. The returns, both original and amended, shall show such other facts as the council, in writing, shall require. [C. '73, § 1318.]

SEC. 1336. Valuation. The said property shall be valued at its actual value, and the assessments shall be made upon the taxable value of the entire railway within the state, except as otherwise provided, and shall include the right of way, road bed bridges, culverts, rolling stock, depots, station grounds, shops, buildings, gravel beds and all other property, real and personal, exclusively used in the operation of such railway. In assessing said railway and its equipments, said council shall take into consideration the gross earnings per mile for the year ending January first, preceding, and any and all other matters necessary to enable said council to make a just and equitable assessment of said railway property. If a part of any railway is without this state, then, in estimating the value of its rolling stock and movable property, they shall take into consideration the proportion which the business of that part of the railway lying within the state bears to the business of the railway without this state. [C.'73, § 1319.]

SEC. 1337. Statement sent county auditors. On or before the twenty-fifth day of March of each year, the council shall transmit to the county auditor of each county, through and into which any railway may extend, a statement showing the length of the main track within the county, and the assessed value per mile of the same, as fixed by a ratable distribution per mile of the assessed valuation of the whole property. [16 G. A., ch. 153; C.'73, § 1320.]

SEC. 1338. Levy and collection of tax. At the first meeting of the board of supervisors held after said statement is received by the county auditor, it shall cause the same to be entered on its minute book, and make and enter therein an order stating the length of the main track and the assessed value of each railway lying in each city, town, township or lesser taxing district in its county, through or into which said railway extends, as fixed by the council, which shall constitute the taxable value of said property for taxing purposes; and the taxes on said property, when collected by the county treasurer, shall be disposed of as other taxes. The county auditor shall transmit a copy of said order to the council or trustees of the city, town or township. [C.'73, § 1321.]

The order of the board becomes the basis for the levy of taxes on railway property for all purposes, and the assessment need not be placed upon the assessor's books: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45–168, 177.

The valuation upon which a railway company is to be taxed within any corporation or taxing district is to be determined from the number of miles of main track within the corporation or district, as determined by the order of the board of supervisors, and the value per mile as fixed by the executive council. The order of the board determining the number of the miles of track is not, in any sense, an assessment of valuation, and the provision of statute exempting agricultural and horticultural lands lying within the limits of incorporated towns and cities from taxation for city purposes have no application to railway property. The taxes due from the railroad company for such purposes cannot be reduced by reason of the fact that the track runs for a portion of the way within the city limits through land that is not platted or laid out into lots: Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Hamilton County, 73-313.

SEC. 1339. Rate. All such railway property shall be taxable upon said assessment at the same rates, by the same officers and for the same purpose as the property of individuals within such counties, cities, towns, townships and lesser taxing districts. [C. '73, § 1322.]

SEC. 1340. Number of sleeping and dining cars. In addition to the matters required to be contained in the statement made by the company for the purposes of taxation, such statement shall show the number of sleeping and dining cars not owned by such corporation, but used by it in operating its railway in this state during each month of the year for which the return is made, the value of each car so used, and also the number of miles each month said cars have been run or operated on such railway within the state, and the total number of miles said cars have been run or operated each month within and without the state. [17 G. A., ch. 114, § 1.]

SEC. 1341. Assessment by executive council. The council shall, at the time of the assessment of other railway property for taxation, assess for taxation the average number of cars so used by such corporation each month, and the assessed value of said cars shall bear the same proportion to the entire value thereof that the monthly average number of miles such cars have been run or operated within the state shall bear to the monthly average number of miles such cars have been used or operated within and without the state. Such valuation shall be in the same ratio as that of the property of individuals, and shall be added to the assessed valuation of the corporation, fixed under the preceding sections. [Same, §§ 2, 3.]

Prior provisions as to taxation of sleeping cars held constitutional, and not an interference with interstate commerce: Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Twombly, 29 Fed., 658.

SEC. 1342. Real property of railways. Lands, lots and other real estate belonging to any railway company, not used exclusively in the operation of the several roads, and all railway bridges across the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, and grain elevators, shall be subject to assessment and taxation on the same basis as property of individuals in the several counties where situated. [C. '73, § 808.]

The right of the railway company to use the government bridge over the Mississippi river at Davenport, held not taxable, except as railroad property under § 1334: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Davenport, 51-451.

The provisions of this section relate to the bridges mentioned, while those of § 1334 apply to other railway bridges. This section is not unconstitutional on the ground that it is not of uniform operation: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74-283.

These bridges are to be taxed as bridges and not as a part of the railroad, whether owned by the railroad or by private individuals: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Sabula, 19 Fed., 177.

While the United States supreme court has decided that it is the duty of the Union Pacific Railroad Company to operate its whole line, including the bridge at Council Bluffs, yet so much of the bridge as is in Iowa may be taxed under the Code of Iowa as a bridge, and not merely the bridge as a part of the road, more especially since that railroad enjoins in relation thereto all the substantial franchises of a bridge company: Union Pacific R. Co. v. Pottawattamie County, 4 Dillon, 497.

The portion of a railway bridge over the Mississippi river between Iowa and Illinois which is taxable in Iowa is determined by the middle of the main navigable channel or channel most used and not by the middle of the great bed of the stream as defined by the banks of the river: Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Clinton, 88-188.

SEC. 1343. Water and gas works—electric plants—street railways. The lands, buildings, machinery and mains belonging to individuals or corporations operating water works or gas works; the lands, buildings, machinery, tracks, poles and wires belonging to individuals or corporations furnishing electric light or power; the lands, buildings, machinery, poles, wires, overhead construction, tracks, cables, conduits and fixtures belonging to individuals or corporations operating railways by cable or electricity, or operating elevated street railways; and the lands, buildings, tracks and fixtures of street railways operated by animal power, shall be listed and assessed in the assessment district where the same are situated. But where any such property except the capital stock is situated partly within and partly without the limits of a city or town, such portions of the said plant shall be assessed separately, and the portion within the said city or town shall be assessed as above provided, and the portion without the said city or town shall be assessed in the district or districts in which it is located. All the personal property of such individuals and corporations used or purchased by them for the purposes of such gas or water works, electric light plants, electric or cable railways, elevated street railways or street railways operated by animal power, including the rolling stock of such railways and street railways, and the animals belonging to such street railways operated by animal power, shall be listed and assessed in the assessment district where usually housed or kept. The actual value of the capital stock over and above that of the above listed property shall be listed and assessed as prescribed in section thirteen hundred and twenty-three hereof.

SEC. 1344. Roadbeds and highways. No real estate used by railway corporations for roadbeds shall be included in the assessment to individuals of the adjacent property, but all such real estate shall be the property of such companies for the purpose of taxation; nor shall any real estate occupied as a public road be assessed and taxed as part of adjacent lands. [C. '73, § 809.]

SEC. 1345. Express companies. Any person or persons, joint stock association, company or corporation conveying to, from or through this state, or any part thereof, money, packages, gold, silver, plate, or other articles by express on contract with any railroad or steamboat company, or the managers, lessees, agent or receiver thereof, not including railroad or steamboat companies engaged in the ordinary transportation of merchandise and property in this state, shall be deemed to be an express company. [26 G. A., ch. 32, § 1.]

SEC. 1346. Statements. Every such express company shall, on or before the first Monday in May of each year, make and deliver to the auditor of state a statement, verified by the oath of the officer or agent making such report, showing the entire receipts for business done within this state of each agent of such company doing business in this state, for the year then next preceding the first day of March, for and on account of such company, including its proportion of gross receipts for business done by such company in connection with other companies; but nothing herein contained shall release such express companies from the assessment and taxation of their tangible property in the manner that other tangible property is assessed and taxed. Such company making statement of such receipts shall include as such all sums earned or charged for the business done within this state for such preceding year, whether actually received or not. Such statement shall contain an abstract of the amount received in each county, and the total amount received for all the counties. In case of the failure or refusal of such express company to make such statement before the first Monday of May, it shall then be the duty of each local agent of such express company within this state annually, between the first day of May and the first day of June, to make out and forward to the auditor of state a similar verified statement of the gross receipts of his agency for the year then next preceding the first day of March. When such statement is made, such express company shall, at the time of making the same, pay into the treasury of the state the sum of one dollar on each one hundred dollars of such receipts. And any such express company failing or refusing for more than thirty days after the first day of June in each year to render an accurate account of its receipts in the manner above provided, and to pay the required taxes thereon, shall forfeit one hundred dollars for each additional day such statement and payment shall be delayed, to be recovered by an action in the name of the state of Iowa on the relation of the auditor of state in any court of competent jurisdiction, and the attorney-general shall conduct such prosecution; and such express company so failing or refusing shall be prohibited from carrying on said business in this state until such payment is made. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1347. Peddlers—amount of tax. Peddlers plying their vocation outside a city or town shall pay for the use of the county an annual tax of ten dollars; those with a vehicle drawn by one animal, twenty-five dollars; those with two and less than four animals, fifty dollars; and those with four or more animals, seventy-five dollars. But the board of supervisors of any county may remit the tax where it is deemed that the articles to be sold are of an educational nature, or where the parties desiring to peddle are, because of age or infirmity, incapacitated for manual labor. Nothing in this section shall be held to apply to parties selling their own work or production, either by themselves or employes, nor to persons who have served in the Union army or navy, or to persons selling at wholesale to merchants, nor to transient vendors of drugs. [15 G. A., ch. 62; C. '73, § 906; R., § 791; C. '51, § 510.]

SEC. 1348. License. A certificate for one year shall be issued to any such peddler by the county auditor upon the presentation of a receipt showing the payment of the proper tax to the county treasurer, and any person peddling outside the limits of a city or town without such certificate, or after the expiration thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, whether he be the owner of the goods sold or carried by him or not, and, on conviction thereof, shall forfeit and pay into the county treasury, in addition to the penalty imposed therefor, double the amount of the tax for one year as fixed in the preceding section. The certificate shall be good only in the county in which issued, and shall not authorize peddling in cities and towns. [C. '73, § 907, R., § 792; C. '51, §§ 511, 512.]

SEC. 1349. Public shows. No person shall exhibit any traveling show or circus, nor show any natural or artificial curiosity, or exhibition of horsemanship in a circus or otherwise for any price, gain or reward in any county outside the limits of a city or town, until he shall have obtained a license therefor from the county auditor, upon the payment to the county treasurer of such sum as may be fixed by the board of supervisors, not exceeding one hundred dollars for each place in the county at which such show or circus may exhibit, and any person exhibiting any such show without first having obtained such license shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall also forfeit and pay to the county treasurer double the amount fixed for such license, for the benefit of the school fund. [16 G. A., ch. 131, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 1350. Personal property—real estate—buildings. Property shall be taxed each year, and personal property shall be listed and assessed each year in the name of the owner thereof on the first day of January. Real estate shall be listed and valued in each odd-numbered year, and in each year in which real estate is not regularly assessed the assessor shall list and assess any real property not included in the previous assessment, and also any buildings erected since the previous assessment, with a minute of the tract or lot of land whereon the same are situated, and the auditor shall thereupon enter the taxable value of such buildings on the tax list as a part of the real estate to be taxed; but if such buildings are erected by another than the owner of the real estate, they shall be listed and assessed to the owner as personal property. [15 G. A., ch. 63; C. '73, § 812; R., §§ 719, 720; C. '51, §§ 460, 465.]

Personal property: A tax based upon an assessment of personal property to the person owning the same at the time of assessment, but who did not own it on January 1st preceding, is illegal and its collection may be enjoined. Personal property brought into the state after January 1st is not taxable for that year: Wangler v. Black Hawk County, 56–384.

A person should not be assessed for any year upon personal property not owned by him on the 1st day of January of such year: Tackaberry v. Keokuk, 32–155.

The provision that "all taxable property shall be taxed each year, etc.," does not make it proper to assess property to one who is not the owner thereof: Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Newton, 66 N. W., 784.

Real estate: Real estate not liable to assessment at the time the assessment is closed should be passed without assessment that year: Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45–453; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Polk County, 10–1; Tallman v. Treasurer, 12–531.

The land, buildings, machinery or water mains of a water company are all real estate and appurtenant to the lot on which the main works are located, and are to be assessed in that township although the mains extend into another township: Appeal of Des Moines Water Co., 48–324.

Thus, also, gas mains and pipes are appurtenant to the lots on which the gas works are situated: Capital City Gas Light Co. v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 51–31.

The entry by the assessor upon his list of town lots by number is a sufficient description to embrace not only the lots proper, but everything appurtenant thereto: Ibid.

Where waterworks were erected upon premises outside of the city, leased for use as long as needed for the purpose, held, that the entire plant, together with the mains, pipes, etc., was assessable as real property in the township in which the main works were located: Oskaloosa Water Co. v. Board of Equalization, 84–407.

Where a guardian under authority of court to make a sale of real property agreed with the proposed purchaser that the conveyance and purchase money mortgage should be dated back, and in such form the sale was confirmed by the court, held, that taxes on the property for the period between the date of the conveyance and the confirmance of the sale could not be assessed against such purchaser: Ordway v. Smith, 53–589.

There can be no new and independent valuation of real property by the assessor in even-numbered years, unless it be as to such as has been omitted in the previous assessment. Even as to such property it is doubtful whether the assessor has anything to do therewith. As a matter of convenience he might list it, but he is not required to do even this: Snell v. Fort Dodge, 45–564.

Land purchased from the government may become subject to taxation for the year in which land is not regularly assessed: Barrett v. Kevane, 69 N. W., 1036.

Under prior provisions Improvements made upon real estate during the first year after an assessment could not be taxed until the next regular assessment, although the personal property of the owner subject to taxation was decreased by that much. Notwithstanding the provision that "all taxable property shall be taxed each year," the enhanced value of real estate was not regarded as taxable property until the real estate was assessed in the manner provided: Richards v. Wapello County, 48–507.

A party cannot complain that he is prejudiced in the fact that his land and improvements thereon, which constitute a part of the realty, are assessed separately: Robertson v. Anderson, 57–165.

Nursery stock is not personal property, but a part of the realty, and should be included with the realty in making the assessments: Wilson v. Cass County, 69–147.

However, the rate of taxation upon realty and personalty being the same, held, that the valuation of such stock as personalty instead of realty under an aggregate valuation was an irregularity which should have been corrected by an application to the board of equalization, and did not authorize an injunction against the collection of such taxes: Ibid.

Provisions as to the assessment of real estate are not applicable to the assessment of the right of way of a railway company. The entire property of the railway company is to be assessed as personal property each year: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67–199. See § 1334.

The board of equalization has no authority to equalize assessments of real estate in the years when such assessments are notauthorized to be made: Goold v. Lyon County, 74–95.

SEC. 1351. Agricultural college lands. In all cases where land belonging to any state institution has been leased and the leases renewed, containing an option of purchase, the interest of the lessees therein shall be subject to assessment and taxation as real estate. The value of such interest shall be fixed by deducting from the value of the lands and improvements the amount required by the lease to acquire the title thereto, which leasehold interest so assessed and taxed may be sold for delinquent taxes, and deeds issued thereunder as in other cases of tax sales, and the same rights shall accrue to the grantee therein as were held and owned by the tenant. [20 G. A., ch. 72, § 3; 19 G. A., ch. 169, § 1.]

SEC. 1352. Listing property—valuation. Each assessor shall enter upon the discharge of the duties of his office immediately after the second Monday in January in each year, and shall, with the assistance of each person assessed, or who may be required by law to list property belonging to another, enter upon the assessment rolls furnished him for that purpose the several items of property required to be entered for assessment. He shall personally affix values to all property assessed by him. [C. '73, § 822; R., § 733; C. '51, § 471.]

Valuation of real property: It is the duty of the assessor to value different pieces of real property in accordance with his own judgment, and it is not proper for the county board of equalization to fix the values upon different classes of real property: Burnham v. Barber, 70–87.

Therefore it is not proper for the board to fix the valuation each assessor shall place upon the different classes of real property, such as improved, unimproved, etc.: Ibid.

The assessor is not required to examine each forty-acre tract, but of necessity must arrive at the value from information derived from others, having regard to the elements of value prescribed by statute: Beeson v. Johns, 59–166.

Description of real property: A description of property as the "N. W. part of the N. E. ¼ of the N. E. ¼, containing three acres," is not sufficient to support a tax title: Roberts v. Deeds, 57–320.

Where it is admitted that property is subject to taxation and lawfully assessed, mere insufficiency in the description under which it is assessed to enable a stranger to identify it will not defeat the tax: Shaw v. Orr, 30–355.

Under a previous statute, held, that the fact of non-assessment might be shown to defeat the tax title; and if the description of the property assessed did not cover the description of the property conveyed in the deed, there was no assessment in fact: Immegart v. Gorgas, 41–439.

A town lot entered upon the assessment books by description carries with it mains, pipes, etc., of water or gas works situated thereon as appurtenances, although such mains and pipes extend beyond such lot or even into another township: Appeal of the Des Moines Water Co., 48–324; Capital City G. L. Co. v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 51–31.

The description of the property is important, first, to advise the owner of the claim made upon such property; second, that the public in case of sale may know what land is offered, and third, that the purchaser may obtain a sufficient conveyance. If the description is sufficient under the first of these provisions, it is usually sufficient with respect to the others: Rath v. Martin, 61 N. W., 941.

Where the same land was assessed twice under different descriptions, in one description to the real owner, and under the other description to unknown owners, and the tax was paid by the owner, held, that the assessment to unknown owners was invalid, and would not support a sale: Ibid.

A mistake in designating the kind of property will not defeat a collection of taxes justly due: Robbins v. Magoun, 70 N. W., 700.

An assessment of land by the government description which has previously been assessed by lot and block in a town plat, such plat having been amended will not be erroneous: Cahalan v. Van Sant, 87–593.

Under the circumstances of a particular case, held, that the description of property in the assessment of a special tax thereon was sufficient: Muscatine v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 79–645.

As to sufficiency of description in general, see notes to § 1442.

Assessment essential: The assessment or recorded valuation of property by an officer having power to make such assessment or valuation is an indispensable step in the exercise of the taxing power. Such recorded valuation constitutes the basis of the levy, and without it there cannot properly be a levy. It is the taxpayer's right to have the amount of his tax entered upon the record provided by law for the same, that he may know in advance the amount which can be collected and govern himself accordingly. It is not enough that the alleged tax is a proportionate part of the burden which the property may be called upon to bear: Worthington v. Whitman, 67–190.

Therefore, held, that where the assessor had failed to assess the personal estate of a person deceased the treasurer could not recover the taxes on the property of the estate by presenting a claim therefor to the executor for allowance: Ibid.

The county cannot recover from the estate of a decedent under a claim that his property was not all assessed for taxation, the amount claimed not being based upon any actual assessment or levy: Appanoose County v. Vermilion, 70–365.

Time and manner: It is competent for the legislature to provide that one kind of property shall be assessed once in two years, and another kind assessed every year. It is also competent to provide that property belonging to railway companies shall be assessed in a different manner than the same kind of property belonging to other owners. or that the property of railway companies shall be assessed by a special tribunal provided by statute: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67–199.

Evidence: A book shown to be in fact the assessment book of the township is receivable in evidence, although it does not show the name of the assessor nor that he was sworn: Brown v. Scott, 34–575.

In the absence of any showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the entry of taxes upon the tax list was made at the proper time and by lawful authority: Silcott v. McCarty, 62–161.

Where it was sought to show that a tax deed was void because the property had not been assessed for the year for which it was sold for taxes, held, that evidence that no assessment books for the year were found in the proper office twenty years afterward was not sufficient to overcome the presumption in favor of the regularity of the tax deed confirmed by the fact that the land appeared on the tax lists for that year: Slocum v. Slocum, 70–259.

Entries on the assessor's book are not competent evidence in a suit regarding the title to real property to show the ownership of such property: Adams v. Hickox, 55–632; Hecht v. Eherke, 64 N. W., 650; Eherke v. Hecht, 64 N. W., 652.

By wrong assessor: Where an assessor, elected for an incorporated town, assessed land not situated within the town limits, held, that the assessment so far as it included land outside of the town was illegal, even though the officer was an assessor de facto, and that a sale for taxes based upon such assessment was void: Bailey v. Fisher, 38–229.

Irregularity: The taxpayer will not be granted relief on account of irregularity in the assessment, where it does not appear that the assessment was excessive or unjust: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40–66.

The question as to what is a mere irregularity in exercising the taxing power is of such character that each case must be determined upon its own peculiar facts and circumstances: Capital City Gas Light Co. v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 51–31.

Where personal property was owned jointly by several persons, the respective interests of each not being readily ascertainable, and was assessed to one of such owners alone, held, that no part of such assessment was illegal: Meyer v. Dubuque County, 49–193.

Curative act: Held, that a statute authorizing an assessment to be made in 1858 for the taxes of 1857 rendered valid an assessment made in that manner: Peirce v. Weare, 41–378.

Classification: Under provisions of § 821 of Code of '73, (not now retained) for classification of property by the board of supervisors, held, that such classification was for the guidance of the assessor: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74–283; McCutcheon v. Board of Supervisors, 63 N. W., 455.

The obvious purport of such provision was that like property should be put in the same class: Cassett v. Sherwood, 42–623.

The board of supervisors could not acting as a board of equalization, so change assessments that money and credits in all the townships should be taxed at their face value, while other property was taxed at only fifty per cent. of its value: Manson Loan & Trust Co. v. Heston, 83–377.

The purpose of this classification was that like property should be put in the same class. It must precede the assessment. Whether a classification of real property was authorized was not determined: McCutcheon v. Board of Supervisors, 63 N. W., 455.

SEC. 1353. Unknown or deceased owners. When the name of the owner of any real estate is unknown, it shall be assessed without connecting therewith any name, but inscribing at the head of the page the words "owners unknown," and such property, whether lands or town lots, shall be listed as nearly as practicable in the order of the numbers thereof. No one description shall comprise more than one town lot, or more than the sixteenth part of a section or other smallest subdivision of the land according to the government surveys, except in cases where the boundaries are so irregular that it cannot be described in the usual manner in accordance therewith. The real estate of persons deceased may be listed as belonging to his estate or his heirs, without enumerating them. [C. '73, §§ 805, 826; R., §§ 716, 737; C. '51, § 461.]

It is doubtful whether the assessor is required to look to the records for the purpose of ascertaining the state of the title in order to assess real property in the name of the owner thereof. The fact that he assesses a tract described as the smallest governmental subdivision to unknown owners, when in fact the record shows that it is owned in two parcels by different owners, will not render the sale in pursuance thereof void: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44–622.

Where the same tract is assessed to "unknown owner" and also in the name of the real owner, the former assessment is invalid and a sale thereunder void: Nichols v. McGlathery, 43–189.

Land of a known owner need not be assessed in forties, but may be assessed in a body: Corbin v. De Wolf, 25–124; Bulkley v. Callanan, 32–461.

It would be presumed from the fact that the name of the owner is not shown by the assessment that the intention of the assessor was to assess the property to an unknown owner; Burdick v. Connell, 69–458; Griffin v. Tuttle, 74–219.

Where there are duplicate assessments of the same land for the same tax, one of which is in the name of the owner, and the other to unknown owners, the one in the name of the owner is valid, the other void: Rath v. Martin, 61 N. W., 941.

SEC. 1354. Duty of assessor—owner to assist. The assessor shall list every person in his township, and assess all the property, personal and real, therein, except such as is heretofore exempted or otherwise assessed, and any person who shall refuse to assist in making out a list of his property, or of any property which he is by law required to assist in listing, or who shall refuse to make the oath required by the next section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not to exceed five hundred dollars. [C. '73, § 823; R., § 734.]

The assessment is not invalid, although the assessor may employ another to make the valuations of property, if they are afterwards submitted to him for correction and approval; and it is no objection that the mere clerical duty of listening was performed by another: Snell v. Fort Dodge, 45–565.

The assessor should not assess and need not list real property assessed the preceding year: Ibid.

The property which a party is required by law to assist in listing as distinguished from his own includes personal property which he holds in a fiduciary capacity as executor or trustee, and, therefore, property of decedent who was a resident of the county at the time of his death, in the hands of his executor, should be assessed in the township of the residence of such executor: Cameron v. Burlington, 56–320.

All property, personal and real, is subject to be listed for purposes of taxation except such as is exempted from taxation by statute: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74–178.

Under particular facts, held, that the person assessed was a resident of the county in which the assessment was made: King v. Parker, 73–757.

SEC. 1355. Oath. The assessor shall administer the oath or affirmation printed on the assessment rolls hereinafter prescribed to each person assessed, and require the person taking such oath to subscribe the same, and in case any one refuses so to do, he shall note the fact in the column of remarks opposite such person's name. [C. '73, § 824; R., § 735; C. '51, §§ 474–5.]

Under prior provisions it was not required that the property owner subscribe to the oath. The statute being penal should be strictly construed. And, held, that a party who simply refused to sign a printedaffidavit did not render himself li able for the penalty provided: Marion County v. Kruidenier, 72–95.

Under prior provisions, held, that if a person was requested to make oath as provided, and refused, he was liable for the forfeiture. It was not necessary that the oath be actually administered to him and he could not escape liability by showing irregularities in the qualification of the assessor, if the officer was such de facto. The fact that the assessor was such officer and was acting in that capacity might be established by his own testimony: Washington County v. Miller, 14–584.

SEC. 1356. Notice of valuation. The assessor shall, at the time of making the assessment, inform the person assessed, in writing, of the valuation put upon his property, and notify him, if he feels aggrieved, to appear before the board of review and show why the assessment should be changed. [18 G. A., 109, § 2.]

An assessor has no authority to require an oath or affirmation, or administer the same, until he has given information of the valuation placed upon the taxpayer's property, and advised him if he feels aggrieved, to appear before the board of equalization and show wherein the assessment should be changed. In an action to recover the penalty for refusing to make such oath or affirmation it must appear that the assessor gave such information and notice and had authority to administer the oath: Marion County v. Galvin, 73–18.

SEC. 1357. Refusal to furnish statement. If any corporation or person refuse to furnish the verified statements in this chapter required, or to list his property, or to take or subscribe the oath in this chapter required, the executive council, or assessor, as the case may be, shall proceed to list and assess such property according to the best information obtainable, and shall add to the taxable valuation one hundred per cent. thereof, which valuation and penalty shall be separately shown, and shall constitute the assessment; and if the valuation of such property shall be changed by any board of review, or on appeal therefrom, a like penalty shall be added to the valuation thus fixed. [17 G. A., ch. 59, § 7; C. '73, §§ 823, 1318; R., § 734.]

SEC. 1358. False statement. Any person making any verified statement or return, or taking any oath required by this chapter, who knowingly makes a false statement therein, shall be guilty of perjury.

SEC. 1359. Meeting of assessors. The county auditor of each county shall, before the third day of January annually, issue a call to all the assessors of his county to meet at his office, or some other place at the county seat, within ten days for consultation, and to receive from such auditor such information as shall tend to the proper discharge by them of their official duties. It shall be the duty of each of such assessors to attend such meeting, and they shall be allowed pay of one day for such attendance, and mileage at six cents per mile one way.

SEC. 1360. Assessment rolls and books. The auditor shall procure and furnish to each assessor a supply of blank assessment rolls, on which to enter, separately, the names of all persons, partnerships, corporations or associations assessed, which rolls shall be made in duplicate, and separated by a perforated line, except that the oath form in the original shall be omitted and the following inserted in lieu thereof: "If you are not satisfied that the foregoing assessment is correct, you can appear before the board of review, which meets at.....on the first Monday of April next. Dated.....day of.....18..... ..... Assessor." Said duplicate shall be signed by the assessor, detached from the original, and delivered to the person assessed. He shall also furnish to each assessor a supply of blanks in this chapter described as "Assessment Roll, Form No. 2," which shall be in duplicate, and subject to the same conditions as the roll above provided for. The auditor shall also furnish to the assessor two assessment books, each page of which shall be headed "Assessor's book for.....township,.....County, Iowa, independent district of.....," and shall contain columns ruled and headed for the information required by this act, which rolls and books shall be substantially in the following form:

SEC. 1361. Schedules returned. The assessor shall furnish to each person, partnership, corporation or association, except those otherwise assessed as provided by law, a blank known as "Assessment Roll—Form No. 2," as provided in the preceding section, upon which such person, partnership, corporation or association shall enter and set out all moneys and credits of whatsoever kind or nature belonging to such person, partnership, corporation or association, and such liabilities as they claim should be deducted from the total of their moneys and credits. The assessor shall carry the aggregate of taxable moneys and credits of such persons, partnerships, corporation or associations to the regular schedule. The assessor shall return all schedules with the assessment books to the county auditor as is provided in this chapter, and the county auditor shall carefully keep all schedules known and described in this chapter as "Assessment Roll—Form No. 2," for the period of five years from the time of filing of the same in his office.

SEC. 1362. Instructions. The state board of review shall from time to time prepare and certify to each county auditor such instruction as to a uniform method of making up the assessment rolls as it thinks necessary to secure a compliance with the law and uniform returns, which shall be printed upon each assessment roll, and also prepare instructions for the same purpose as to making up the assessment books, which shall be printed therein.

SEC. 1363. Statistics. In each odd-numbered year the county auditor shall deliver to each assessor the necessary blanks for recording, as to each person whose property is listed, statistics of the previous year as to the number of acres of winter wheat, spring wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, flax, potatoes, timothy, clover, prairie hay and pasturage, for publication in the official register. The assessor shall require each person whose property is listed to make answers to such inquiries as may be necessary to enable him to return the foregoing statistics; and said blanks with such entries shall be returned with the assessment book to the county auditor, who shall tabulate the same by townships, and forward the returns thereof to the secretary of state. The secretary of state shall provide and cause to be delivered to the county auditors on the first week in January of the proper years the blanks required by the two preceding sections. [24 G. A., ch. 57, § 1.]

SEC. 1364. Plat book. The county auditor shall furnish to each assessor a plat book on which shall be platted the lands and lots in his assessment district, showing on each subdivision or part thereof written in ink or pencil, the name of the owner, the number of acres, or the boundary lines and distances in each, and showing as to each tract the number of acres to be deducted for railway right of way and for roads. [C. '73, § 821; R., §§ 732–3.]

SEC. 1365. Completion of assessment. The assessment shall be completed by the first day of April, and the assessor shall attach to the assessment rolls his oath in the following form:

I, (A..... B.....), assessor of.....county of.....and state of Iowa, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the actual and taxable values of all property, money and credits, of which a statement has been made and verified by the oath of the person required to list the same, is herein truly set forth in such statement; that in every case, where I have been required to ascertain the amount or value of any property, I have diligently, and by the best means in my power, endeavored to ascertain the true amount and value, and as I verily believe the actual and taxable values thereof are set forth in the annexed return; in no case have I knowingly omitted to demand of any person, of whom I was required to do so, a statement of the items of his property which he was required by law to list, nor to administer the oath to him, unless he refused to take it, nor in any way connived at any violation or evasion of any of the requirements of the law in relation to the assessment of property for taxation.

Subscribed and sworn (or affirmed) to this.....day of.....A. D....., before me.

Real estate not liable to assessment at the time the assessment is closed should be passed without assessment for that year: Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45-453; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Polk County, 10-1; Tallman v. Treasurer, 12-531.

SEC. 1366. Assessors' books returned. Such rolls shall be laid before the local board of review on or before the first Monday of April in each year for correction, and when such correction has been completed the assessor shall proceed to make up the assessor's books in duplicate from such assessment rolls, allotting a sufficient number of pages to each letter, footing each column of numbers and values on each page, and entering such footings in recapitulation sheets in said books, and not later than the fifteenth day of April return one of such books to the township clerk, and to the city or town clerk not later than the tenth day of May, and the other, together with the assessment rolls, plat book, and all statements which have been furnished to him in connection with the assessment, to the county auditor. [C. '73, § 825; R., § 736; C. '51, § 478.]

The object of the statute is to have the assessor's list before the council when sitting as a board of equalization and a taxpayer who has had an opportunity to be heard to object to his assessment can not complain that the assessor's book was not completed and delivered on the day fixed: Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Burlington, 70 N. W., 628.

SEC. 1367. Penalty. If any assessor or member of any board of review shall knowingly fail or neglect to make or require the assessment of property for taxation to be of and for its taxable value as in this act provided or to perform any of the duties required of him by this act, at the time and in the manner specified, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of five hundred dollars, to be recovered in an action in the district court in the name of the county and for its use, and the action against the assessor shall be against him and his bondsmen. [C. '73, § 827; R., § 738.]

SEC. 1368. Examination of assessors. It shall be lawful for the boards of supervisors, the trustees of townships, and councils of cities and incorporated towns as boards of review to summon any assessor or assessors to appear before them, respectively, to be inquired of under oath with respect to the method by which he or they has or have ascertained and fixed any valuation or valuations returned by him or them, and as to the correctness of any such valuation or valuations, and to administer the oath by any one of their members to the assessor or assessors so summoned before them; and any assessor so summoned who shall fail without good cause to appear, or, appearing, shall refuse to submit to such inquiry, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished accordingly.

SEC. 1369. Publication of revenue laws. The auditor of state shall publish in pamphlet form the revenue laws of the state, for the benefit of the assessors and boards of review, and distribute them to the county auditors, who shall distribute the same to the assessors and boards of their respective counties. [C. '73, § 828.]

SEC. 1370. Local board of review. The township trustees shall constitute the local board of review for the township or the portion thereof not included within any city or town, and the city or town council shall constitute such board for such city or town. The board shall meet on the first Monday of April, at the office of the township, city or town clerk or recorder, and sit from day to day until its duties are completed, which shall be not later than the first day of May, and shall adjust assessments for the township, city or town by raising or lowering the assessment of any person, partnership, corporation or association as to any or all of the items of his assessment, in such manner as to secure the listing of property at its actual value and the assessment of property at its taxable value, and shall also add to the assessment rolls any taxable property not included therein, assessing the same in the name of the owner thereof, as the assessor should have done. [C. '73, §§ 829, 830.]

The township board possesses the power to equalize the assessments of persons to the same extent as it was possessed by the board of supervisors under Revision, § 739: Keck v. Board of Supervisors, 37-547.

The board is authorized to add to the assessment of the taxpayer's moneys and credits and increase his assessment as based thereon: King v. Parker, 73-757.

The board has no authority to equalize assessments of real property in even-numbered years: Goold v. Lyon County, 74-95.

The provisions of this section as to cities do not apply to cities acting under special charter (arguendo): State v. Finger, 46-25.

Under statutes relating to cities acting under special charter, held, that the city council was authorized to act as a board of equalization as in cities under the general incorporation law: Kinsey v. Sweeney, 63-254.

The irregular exercise of the powers here conferred upon the city council will not deprive a party of the right of appeal under § 1373: Ingersoll v. Des Moines, 46-553.

Under Revision, § 739, which gave the board of supervisors authority to equalize the assessments of individuals, held, that they might raise or lower the assessments of particular persons when they believed that the assessment was too low or too high; and that, while they might properly receive evidence before doing so, they were not required to receive evidence in all cases, and that their discretion in such matter could not be controlled by proceedings under writ of certiorari, but only upon appeal, if at all: Smith v. Board of Supervisors, 30-531.

A taxpayer is bound to know that his property has been assessed, and if he feels aggrieved thereby to appear before the board of equalization. In case of an over-assessment the taxpayer cannot first apply for its correction to the board of supervisors: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74-283.

Where the taxpayer attacks the action of the board of equalization in raising his assessment on the ground that it has not jurisdiction, it is for him to prove the fact upon which the alleged want of jurisdiction rests, for instance, that there was not a quorum present, or that the majority did not concur, or that there was no proper evidence to act upon: King v. Parker, 73-757.

The fact that a particular class of property is assessed to owners thereof at less than is proper will not authorize the board to increase the assessment on such property in the case of one particular taxpayer. Such a change would increase rather than diminish the irregularity of assessment: Ingersoll v. Des Moines, 36-553.

Where, under previous statutes, the board of supervisors were given similar powers to be exercised at their "June meeting," held, that the provision specifying the meeting was directory only, and that the exercise of the power at a subsequent meeting was not void: Easton v. Savery, 44-654, 658; Hill v. Wolfe, 28-577.

Whether or not the board has a right to appoint a committee to hear complaints, the fact that it does appoint such committee can not be made an objection on the part of a taxpayer who had an opportunity to be heard by the board: Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Burlington, 70 N. W., 628.

Members of the city council acting as a board of equalization are not entitled to compensation in addition to that provided for them by law as members of the council: Council Bluffs v. Waterman, 86-688.

SEC. 1371. Clerk—correction of assessments. The clerk or recorder of the township, city or town, as the case may be, shall be clerk of the board of review, and keep a record of its proceedings, and the assessor shall be present at its meeting and make upon the assessment rolls all corrections or additions directed by the board. At such meetings it shall be the duty of the assessor to read each and every taxpayer's name and assessment on the assessor's books, and, if the assessment is approved, pass to next name. After checking the same, the board shall then take up the unchecked names in alphabetical order, and raise or lower the same as in their opinion will be just; checking off each taxpayer as the same is adjusted. [18 G. A., ch. 109, § 1; C. '73, § 831; R., § 740.]

The provision as to the record of the action of the board is directory, and the fact that the record does not show any action on the part of the board will not prevent an appeal where there has been a controversy determined before them: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

SEC. 1372. Notice of assessments raised. In case the assessed value of any specific property or the entire assessment of any person, partnership, corporation or association is raised, or new property is added by the board, the clerk shall give immediate notice thereof by mail to each at the post-office address shown on the assessment rolls, and at the conclusion of the action of the board therein the clerk shall post an alphabetical list of those whose assessments are thus raised and added, in a conspicuous place in the office or place of meeting of the board, and enter upon the records a statement that such posting has been made, which entry shall be conclusive evidence of the giving of the notice required. The board shall hold an adjourned meeting, with at least five days intervening after the posting of said notices, before final action with reference to the raising of assessments or the adding of property to the rolls is taken, and the posted notices shall state the time and place of holding such adjourned meeting, which time and place shall also be stated in the proceedings of the board. [18 G. A., ch. 109, § 3.]

Where the property owner appears before the board and is heard on the matter in controversy, he cannot afterward object to want of the notice here provided for. It was intended by this provision to give the taxpayer an opportunity to be heard before the assessment made by the assessor could be lawfully increased by the addition of supposed omitted property, or by an increase of the assessment, and such notice must be given before the board can act. A notice that the board has increased the assessment is not sufficient: Henkle v. Keota, 68-334.

If the taxpayer is present at the time of the action of the board, and is heard as to matters in controversy, he cannot afterwards object to want of notice: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

Where a board of equalization at their first meeting raised an assessment from fifteen dollars to fifty-three hundred and thirty-four dollars and entered the assessment as changed upon the records, and afterwards posted the notice of the change in the assessments, with time and place of hearing objections to the same, held, that as the entry upon the records at the first meeting was not designed to prevent plaintiff from having a hearing before final action was taken, and at best was a mere irregularity not affecting a substantial right, it should not be allowed to avoid the proceeding: Rockafellow v. Board of Equalization, 77-493.

Where the assessor decided to list certain bank stock of plaintiff for taxation, and it was agreed between him and the plaintiff that the question as to whether it should be taxed should be submitted by the assessor to the board of equalization, and such board thereupon included the stock in plaintiff's assessment, held, that the case was not one of raising the assessment in such sense that plaintiff was entitled to notice: Jackson v. Chizum, 78–209; Keihl v. Chizum, 78–213.

SEC. 1373. Complaint to board of review—appeal. Any person aggrieved by the action of the assessor in assessing his property may make oral or written complaint thereof to the board of review, which shall consist simply of a statement of the errors complained of, with such facts as may lead to their correction, and any person whose assessment has been raised or whose property has been added to the assessment rolls, as provided in the preceding section, shall make such complaint before the meeting of the board for final action with reference thereto, as provided in said section, and appeals may be taken from the action of the board with reference to such complaints to the district court of the county in which such board holds its sessions, within twenty days after its adjournment. Appeals shall be taken by a written notice to that effect to the chairman or presiding officer of the reviewing board, and served as an original notice. The court shall hear the appeal in equity and determine anew all questions arising before the board which relate to the liability of the property to assessment or the amount thereof, and its decision shall be certified by the clerk of the court to the county auditor, who shall correct the assessment books in his office accordingly. [Same, § 1; C. '73, § 831; R., § 740.]

Other remedies; when allowable: Where the assessment is erroneous merely as being excessive, the only remedy is an application to the board of equalization, and if necessary an appeal therefrom. The fact that the party has no knowledge of the assessment until too late to make such application makes no difference: Nugent v. Bates, 51–77.

A mere error of the assessor in assessing, as personalty, property which should properly be included with the realty is such an error as must be corrected, if at all, by application to the board of equalization: Wilson v. Cass County, 69–147.

Failure to appear before the board of equalization to have an over-assessment corrected will not defeat the action of a party against an assessor for maliciously making such over-assessment, when the fact of the over-assessment was not known: Parkinson v. Parker, 48–667.

Where land was sold for taxes, a part of which was the personal tax of one not the owner of the land, and which was not a lien upon the land, held, that the owner might, after redeeming from the sale, sue for the recovery from the county of the part erroneously included in the sale, and it was not necessary that he should have gone before the board of equalization: Brownlee v. Marion County, 53–487.

In case of erroneous assessment, as, for instance, where property properly assessable to a firm in one county is also assessed to one of the partners in another county, the only remedy is by a proceeding before the board of equalization. An action to recover back taxes erroneously assessed cannot be maintained in such case: Harris v. Fremont County, 63–639.

Where the property owner does not appear before the board of equalization but appeals to the county treasurer for the refunding of the amount of taxes deemed excessive, he is entitled to no relief and any amount paid to him by the treasurer may be recovered by an action in the name of the county: Polk County v. Sherman, 68 N. W., 562.

Replevin: The right to levy taxes may be questioned by an action of replevin to recover back property claimed to be illegally seized for such taxes: Buell v. Ball, 20–282.

But in such an action the property owner cannot contest the tax by showing that the ordinance under which the tax was levied was procured by fraud: Ibid.

In an action of replevin against a county treasurer for property seized under a tax warrant, plaintiff, though erroneously assessed, cannot inquire into the regularity of a tax levied by a board having authority and jurisdiction: Bilbo v. Henderson, 21–56.

The taxpayer must apply for relief from erroneous taxation to the board of equalization, and without doing so cannot, in an action of replevin, recover for property seized for such taxes: Buell v. Schaale, 39–293.

Injunction: The proper remedy for an erroneous and excessive assessment is by application to the board of equalization and not by injunction. But in case the law authorizing the tax is unconstitutional or the levy is without authority or jurisdiction, other remedies may be pursued: Macklot v. Davenport, 17–379.

One who has failed to avail himself of his right to appear before the board of equalization and have an erroneous assessment corrected cannot afterwards take advantage of such error in an action to restrain the collection of the tax: Smith v. Marshalltown, 86–516.

Injunction is not the proper remedy for determining the distribution of taxation among the several townships. The board of supervisors being a board of equalization for that purpose their action can only be reviewed by certiorari or upon appeal: District T'p v. Brown, 47–25.

A court of equity will not interfere by injunction to release the taxpayer from a tax erroneously or irregularly levied, but may do so when the tax is wholly void, as, for instance, when it is levied upon exempt property or under an unconstitutional law: Powers v. Bowman, 53-359; Smith v. Osburn, 53-474.

But an assessment against personal property not taxable in the county, being without authority of law, is void, and equity will entertain jurisdiction to enjoin its collection. The jurisdiction of the board of equalization in such cases is not exclusive: Barber v. Farr, 54-57.

The collection of taxes which are illegal may be enjoined by action in equity: Wangler v. Black Hawk County, 56-384.

Equity will not interpose to prevent the collection of a tax on account of mere irregularities. If the tax is unauthorized by law, or is imposed upon exempt property, or is fraudulently assessed, equity will relieve: Conway v. Younkin, 28-295.

For mere irregularities in the apportionment of the taxes of a municipal corporation, the collection of its revenues cannot be enjoined by a taxpayer: Morrison v. Hershire, 32-271.

A court of equity will not interfere to prevent the collection of taxes authorized by law, and to which the property is lawfully liable, on account of errors or irregularities in the assessment: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

In such cases, if it does not appear that there is a want of power to levy the tax or that the property is not justly liable thereto or that the tax is excessive, equity will not grant relief: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40-66.

If a tax is illegal and not merely irregular, its enforcement may be restrained by injunction. So held where the county board of equalization had exceeded its powers in raising an individual assessment: Rood v. Board of Supervisors, 39-444.

Injunction may properly be granted to restrain the enforcement of an illegal tax. An action of replevin to regain possession of property distrained for the payment of the tax is not a full and complete remedy at law, such as will deprive the taxpayer of his equitable remedy: Spencer v. Wheaton, 14-38.

A court of equity will not relieve a taxpayer from the payment of proper and just taxes against his property on account of irregularities in the manner of placing the tax upon the tax book: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112.

It is not necessary in seeking relief from an unauthorized assessment to apply to the board of equalization in the first instance. The case is different from that of erroneous or excessive assessment. A proceeding to enjoin may be resorted to in such cases, and in such proceeding the county treasurer is a proper party defendant: Hubbard v. Board of Supervisors, 23-130.

In an action by taxpayers against the county officers to restrain the levying of a tax to pay railroad bonds, the bondholders must be made parties to the suit in order to bind them, though they may not be absolutely necessary parties: Ex parte Holman, 28-88.

Residents and taxpayers have such direct legal interest in the question of the validity of taxes that they are authorized to join in an action to declare them void: Wilkinson v. Van Orman, 70-230.

Mandamus: A party may by mandamus compel the board to act, but their discretion cannot be controlled by such action: Meyer v. Dubuque, 43-192.

Certiorari: Where the board orders a reduction of the taxation of an individual, but the assessor fails to make the correction in accordance with such order, and his books are turned over to the auditor, the taxpayer may maintain an action of certiorari, to have the error corrected: Keck v. Board of Supervisors, 37-547.

Where a county board of equalization acts in a case not within its jurisdiction certiorari is the proper remedy: Royce v. Jenney, 50-676.

But where the board has jurisdiction the exercise of its discretion cannot be reviewed in this manner: Smith v. Board of Supervisors, 30-531.

Where the board assessed for taxation a person who was not a resident of the state, held, that it acted without jurisdiction and that certiorari was the proper method of review: Remey v. Board of Equalization, 80-470.

If the board has jurisdiction its action cannot be reviewed by certiorari, no matter what the motive is under which an assessment is changed: Polk County v. Des Moines, 70-351.

A taxpayer is a proper party to maintain an action to question the validity of the proceedings of the city council acting as a board of equalization in reducing the taxes upon individual property: Collins v. Davis, 57-256.

The party seeking relief from an erroneous assessment must appear before the board of equalization and make known his grievance in order to be entitled to appeal, but no special form of complaint is required, and if the objections are called to their attention it is sufficient: Burns v. McNally, 90-432.

Where the board of equalization on its own motion raised the assessed value of a taxpayer's property, (there being at that time no provision as to notice such as is now found in the preceding section) held, that no appearance before the board to have such action corrected was necessary to entitle the taxpayer to appeal: Ingersoll v. Des Moines, 46-553.

In case of appeal from the action of a city council acting as a board of equalization, notice of the appeal may be served upon the mayor: Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Newton, 66 N. W., 784.

Appearance cures any defect in the service of the notice of appeal: Richards v. Rock Rapids, 72-77.

No bond is required upon the taking of such appeal: Ingersoll v. Des Moines, 46-553.

The amendment limiting the right of appeal to the time specified took away such right in cases in which that time had elapsed without any appeal being taken prior to the taking effect of the amendment: Slocum v. Fayette County, 61-169.

Procedure: While the statute does not provide for any written pleadings on such appeal yet it does not say that such pleadings when filed shall be stricken from the files. The lower court in the exercise of its discretion may allow such pleadings to be filed and in such case copy fees may properly be taxed: Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Newton, 66 N. W., 784.

This section does not prescribe the formalities to be pursued, and when proper notice of appeal is served the court to which the appeal is taken acquires jurisdiction and may properly overrule any motion to dismiss the appeal for irregularity: Bremer County Bank v. Bremer County, 42-394.

Upon such an appeal evidence may be introduced by the parties in addition to the matter shown by the record, and the court becomes an assessing tribunal clothed with authority to determine anew the sum in which the taxpayer is to be assessed: Grimes v. Burlington, 74-123.

In such an appeal the property owner has no right to a jury trial. The duty of the court is to do what it is claimed the board failed to do, that is, make a just and equitable assessment. On appeal to the supreme court that court has the same duty and must weigh the evidence as an original question, as is done in equity cases, and determine therefrom what is the just and equitable value of the property for the purpose of taxation: Davis v. Clinton, 55-549; Dunlieth, etc., Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55-558.

A taxpayer whose real property is assessed at more than its true cash value may still have redress, on appeal from the board of equalization, if his property is taxed as high as other property of greater value. And in a particular case, held, that under such circumstances the supreme court would, on appeal, reduce the valuation of plaintiff's real estate in order that it might correspond to other property: Burham v. Barber, 70-87.

The city council, while acting as a board of equalization, represents the city and may, if an appeal is taken from its action, support it in the appellate court, and the city solicitor may properly appear for the council in such matter: Kinnie v. Waverly, 42-437.

Upon appeal by a person seeking to have his assessment reduced the court has no authority to increase the assessment: Appeal of Des Moines Water Co., 48-324; German Am. Savings Bank v. Burlington, 54-609.

Where plaintiff was assessed a certain sum, by the town council, upon merchandise, and appealed from the assessment on the ground that he had no goods and merchandise, and it appeared that he had sold his merchandise, held, that the court was not authorized to change the assessment from merchandise to moneys and credits, and could not try any other issue than that presented by the appeal: Brown v. Grand Junction, 75-488.

It is the duty of the district court upon the hearing of the appeal to make a just and equitable assessment of the property and it is in no way to be affected in its action by the action of the board of equalization: Lyons v. Board of Equalization, 70 N. W., 711.

The right of appeal is purely statutory and perhaps an appeal by the city or its board of equalization is not authorized, but under the general provisions as to appeal to the supreme court from the action of the district court the city may appeal from the district court to the supreme court as to a decision of the district court adverse to the action of the board of equalization: Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Newton, 66 N. W., 784.

Where a corporation was assessed by the assessor, with its consent in the sum of $1,000 on moneys and credits, and subsequently the assessment was raised by the board, but on application to them, and on appeal to the district court it was finally reduced to that amount, held, that the corporation could not object, on appeal to the supreme court, that such assessment was not proper: Phelps Mfg. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 84-610.

An appeal to the supreme court from the district court in a proceeding to review the action of the board of equalization is triable de novo: First Nat. Bank v. City Council of Albia, 86-28; Lyons v. Board of Equalization, 70 N. W., 711.

SEC. 1374. Withholding property from assessment — penalty. When property subject to taxation is withheld, overlooked, or from any other cause is not listed and assessed, the county treasurer shall, when apprised thereof, at any time within five years from the date at which such assessment should have been made, demand of the person, firm, corporation or other party by whom the same should have been listed, or to whom it should have been assessed, or of the administrator thereof, the amount the property should have been taxed in each year the same was so withheld or overlooked and not listed and assessed, together with six per cent. interest thereon from the time the taxes would have become due and payable had such property been listed and assessed, and upon failure to pay such sum within thirty days, with all accrued interest, he shall cause an action to be brought in the name of the treasurer for the use of the proper county, to be prosecuted by the county attorney, or such other person as the board of supervisors may appoint, and when such property has been fraudulently withheld from assessment, there shall be added to the sum found to be due a penalty of fifty per cent. upon the amount, which shall be included in the judgment. The amount thus recovered shall be by the treasurer apportioned ratably as the taxes would have been if they had been paid according to law.

SEC. 1375. County board of review. The board of supervisors shall constitute a county board of review, and shall adjust the assessments of the several townships, cities and towns of their county at their regular meeting in June, and add to or deduct from the assessed value of the property substantially as the state board adjusts assessments of the several counties of the state. [C. '73, § 832; R., § 739.]

The action of the county board of equalization can only be reviewed upon appeal or by certiorari, not by injunction: Macklot v. Davenport, 17–379; District T'p v. Brown, 47–25.

The board of supervisors has not the authority to change assessments of moneys and credits so that such moneys and credits shall be taxed at their full value, while other property is assessed at fifty per cent. of its value: Manson Land & Trust Co. v. Heston, 83–377.

Action of the board once taken should not subsequently be rescinded by it by way of expunging from the records its resolution, without hearing from the parties interested, and upon the mere individual recollection of the members of the board: Ridley v. Doughty, 85–418.

The board has no power to raise or lower the assessment of an individual taxpayer: Royce v. Jenney, 50–676: and a tax based thereon is void: Rood v. Board of Supervisors, 39–444.

A taxpayer cannot apply to the board of supervisors for relief against an over-assessment: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74–283.

The board of supervisors have no jurisdiction to determine the right of a municipal corporation to assess taxes, and they cannot remit taxes on the ground of absence of such right: District T'p v. Moore, 39–605.

Where two townships, being included within the corporate limits of a city, constitute but one assessorial district, the board has no authority to increase the assessment of one of such townships. It may only equalize as between different assessorial districts: Getchell v. Board of Supervisors, 51–107.

Under the authority to equalize, held, that the board of supervisors might not raise the assessment of particular property, such as a particular kind of real estate, at least where such change was not based on a classification adopted before assessment under the provisions of § 821 of Code of '73 (not now retained): McCutcheon v. Board of Supervisors, 63 N. W., 455.

Therefore held, that an order of the board "raising the assessment on all farm lands inside of the limits of the incorporated town uf Rock Rapids one hundred per cent. above the valuation fixed by the assessor and board of equalization of said incorporated town" was invalid: Ibid.

The board may equalize by adding to, or deducting from, the valuation of different classes of property in the different townships, as well as by increasing or diminishing the aggregate valuation of all the property therein: Harney v. Board of Supervisors, 44–203.

While the township trustees have power to equalize assessments of taxpayers within their township, yet the board of supervisors may overrule their action for the purpose of securing uniform taxation throughout the county upon the different classes of property: Cassett v. Sherman, 42–623.

Therefore held, that where bank stock was assessed at sixty per cent. of its par value in all townships except one, the county board of equalization might raise the assessment of bank stock of holders thereof in that township to the same per cent: Ibid.

SEC. 1376. Appeals. Appeals may be taken from any action or decision of a county board of review by the board of review of any city, town or township aggrieved thereby, within the same time and in the same manner as appeals are taken from the local board of review.

SEC. 1377. Abstract. Each auditor shall, on or before the third Monday in June, make out and transmit to the auditor of state an abstract of the real and personal property in his county, in which he shall set forth:

1. The number of acres of land and the aggregate actual and taxable values of the same, exclusive of town lots, returned by the assessors, as corrected by the county board of review;
2. The aggregate actual and taxable values of real estate in each township, city and town in the county, returned as corrected by the county board of review;
3. The aggregate actual and taxable values of personal property;
4. An abstract as to the number and value of all animals as the same are returned by the assessor, showing the aggregate actual and taxable values and number of each kind or class, and such other facts as may be required by the state board of review. [C. '73, § 833; R., § 741.]

SEC. 1378. State board of review. The executive council shall constitute the state board of review, and shall meet at the seat of government on the second Monday of July in each year. The auditor of state shall be the clerk of the board, and shall lay before it the abstracts transmitted to him by the auditor, as required by the preceding section. [C. '73, § 834; R., § 742; C.'51, §§ 481–2.]

The state board has no power to equalize personal property: Harney v. Board of Supervisors, 44–203.

SEC. 1379. Adjusting valuation in counties. It shall adjust the valuation of property of the several counties, adding to or deducting from the valuation of each kind or class of property such percentage in each case as will bring the same to its taxable value as fixed in this chapter. [Same.]

SEC. 1380. State levy. It shall be the duty of the general assembly at each regular session, by statute or joint resolution, to definitely fix the amount to be expended for general state purposes during the biennial period next ensuing. The executive council shall annually fix the rate per cent. upon the valuation of the taxable property within the state to be levied to raise such amount, after deducting the receipts for the general revenue fund received from other sources, and certify such rate to the auditor of each county. [26 G. A., ch. 109; 25 G. A., ch. 114; C. '73, § 835; R., § 743.]

SEC. 1381. Levy to pay municipal bonds. Whenever any municipal corporation, board or tribunal is charged with the duty of levying a tax to pay any bonds or interest thereon, and fails to make such levy, the holder thereof may, after obtaining final judgment thereon, in addition to any other remedies he may have, file a transcript thereof with the auditor of state, taking his receipt therefor, and the same shall be registered in his office, and the state board of review at its regular annual session shall levy upon the taxable property of the county, city, town or school district for which such bonds were issued a sufficient rate of taxation to realize the amount of interest, or principal and interest, due or to become due on the bonds so filed, prior to the next levy, and the money arising from such levy shall be known as the bond fund, and collected as a part of the state tax, paid into the state treasury, and placed to the credit of such county, city, town or school district for the payment of said bonds and interest, and shall be paid out as the interest installments or the principal may mature, by warrants drawn by the auditor of state in favor of the holder of such bonds, as shown by the register in his office, until the same shall be paid; and, when paid, the bonds and coupons shall be canceled and returned to the treasurer of the county, city, town or school district issuing the same, who shall receipt therefor. [24 G. A., ch. 14, § 7; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 7.]

SEC. 1382. Certifying result to county auditor. The board shall keep a record of its proceedings, and finish its review and adjustment on or before the first Monday of August, and the auditor of state shall thereupon transmit to each county auditor a statement of the percentage to be added to or deducted from the valuation of each kind or class of property in its county, and shall certify the rate of state tax fixed as required by law. The county auditor shall thereupon add to or deduct from the valuation of each kind or class of property in his county the required percentage, rejecting all fractions of fifty cents or less in the result, and counting all over fifty cents as one dollar. [C.'73, § 836; R., § 743; C. '51, § 183.]

Where the board of equalization reduces the valuation of property, it is the duty of the auditor to enter in the tax list the valuation upon which the tax is estimated and collected, and upon his failure or neglect to do so, the owners of the property have a remedy by mandamus: Ridley v. Doughty, 77–226.

SEC. 1383. Tax list. All taxes which are uniform throughout any township or school district shall be formed into a single tax, and entered upon the tax list in a single column, to be known as a consolidated tax, and each receipt shall show the percentage levied for each separate fund. Before the first day of January in each year, the county auditor shall tran-scribe the assessments of the several townships, towns or cities into a book, to be provided at the expense of the county for that purpose, to be known as the tax list, properly ruled and headed, with distinct columns in which shall be entered the names of taxpayers, descriptions of lands, number of acres and value, number of town lots and value, value of personal property and each description of tax, with a column for polls and one for payments, and shall complete the same by carrying out the totals and footings of columns. At the end of the list for each township, town or city he shall make an abstract thereof, and apportion the consolidated tax among the respective funds to which it belongs, according to the number of mills levied for each. [C. '73, §§ 837–9; R., §§ 745–6; C. '51, §§ 485–6.]

Where the collection of a road tax was authorized, but owing to a change in the method of assessment of railway corporations no one was authorized to put the tax for a certain year upon the tax list, held, (under Rev., § 745) that such duty devolved upon the clerk of the board of supervisors: Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kossuth County, 41-57, 66.

The auditor may correct errors found in the assessments upon transcribing them, and insert the name of an owner in the tax book: Adams v. Snow, 65-435.

Where property is duly assessed to the owner, the omission of the name of the owner in transcribing the tax upon the tax list will not invalidate the assessment: Parker v. Cochran, 64 757.

[The provision found in § 839 of Code of '73 as to levy of tax and making record thereof is not retained. It seems to be substantially covered by § 1303, which was § 796 of Code of '73.]

SEC. 1384. Tax for bonded indebtedness. The board of supervisors shall not in any one year levy a tax of more than three mills on the dollar for the payment of any bonded indebtedness or judgments rendered therefor, except as provided in chapter one, of title four, of the code, unless the vote authorizing the issuance of the bonds fixes a higher rate. [C. '73, § 840.]

The limit here imposed does not apply to a levy to pay bonds issued in satisfaction of a judgment: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 52-26.

SEC. 1385. Errors corrected. The auditor may correct any error in the assessment or tax list, and when such correction affecting the amount of tax is made after the books shall have passed into the hands of the treasurer, he shall charge or credit him, as the case may be, therefor, and report the same to the board of supervisors. [C. '73, § 841; R., § 747.]

Where a correction of the rate of taxation was authorized, but, owing to a change in the method of assessment of railway corporations, no one was authorized to put the tax for a certain year upon the tax list, held, that such duty devolved upon the clerk of the board of supervisors (now the auditor): Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kossuth County, 41-57.

The auditor is authorized to correct errors found in the assessment upon transcribing it, and the name of the owner may be inserted by him in the tax book: Adams v. Snow, 65-435.

Where the assessor omitted to insert in his list the name of one of two joint owners of property, held, that the assessment book might properly be corrected in that respect: Conway v. Younkin, 28-295.

To authorize a correction in the assessment or tax book as to the valuation of property there must be an error or mistake shown. An averment that the valuation was not fair or reasonable is not sufficient to justify a change: Jones v. Tiffin, 24-190.

Where it appeared that the assessment roll had been corrected by some one, and that as so corrected it had remained on file as a record in the auditor's office, and been regarded in subsequent proceedings as correct, held, that a party objecting to the correction as not made by proper authority had the burden of showing that it was incorrect and that the taxes assessed were inequitable or unjust, it appearing that unless covered by such correction the land had been entirely omitted from assessment: Beeson v. Johns, 59-166.

Where the lands of nonresidents were not returned on the assessment rolls for a particular year, and at the time of transcribing the assessments such lands were entered on the tax list by the county auditor, who listed the lands and fixed the valuation thereof, and delivered the tax list, including such lands, to the county treasurer, upon which sales for delinquent taxes were made, held, that such assessment and sales thereunder were valid: Robb v. Robinson, 66-500.

The powers conferred upon the auditor to correct errors in the assessment include the power to insert property which has been omitted and is subject to taxation. The time within which the auditor may make this correction is not limited by statute, and it may be made after the levy of the tax: Parker v. Van Steenburg, 68-174.

The power here given to the auditor includes the power to determine when a mistake has been made: Fuller v. Butler, 72–729.

The authority given to the auditor to correct the tax books may be exercised after the books have passed into the hands of the treasurer: Ridley v. Doughty, 85–418.

This provision does not authorize the auditor to correct an error by which a taxpayer is assessed too much or too little on a particular piece of property. Such error is to be corrected by application to the board of equalization: Polk County v. Sherman, 68 N. W., 562.

SEC. 1386. Sale shown. The auditor when making up the tax list, before it is placed in the hands of the county treasurer, shall designate each piece or parcel of real estate sold for taxes, and not redeemed, by writing opposite the same the year in which it was sold in a column made for that purpose and headed "sold in." [C. '73, § 842.]

A failure of the officer to so designate a parcel as sold and not redeemed when he should do so does not affect the sale previously made: Playter v. Cochran, 37–258.

SEC. 1387. Tax list delivered. He shall make an entry upon the tax list showing what it is, for what county and year, and deliver it to the county treasurer on or before the thirty-first day of December, taking his receipt therefor; and such list shall be a sufficient authority for the treasurer to collect the taxes therein levied. But no informality therein, and no delay in delivering the same after the time above specified, shall affect the validity of any taxes, sales, or other proceedings for the collection of such taxes. [21 G. A., ch. 132; C. '73, § 843; R., § 748; C. '51, § 487.]

The tax list is a complete protection to the treasurer in making distress and sale thereunder: See § 1403.

The tax warrant provided for under the corresponding section of the Revision was held not essential, the power of the treasurer to sell being derived from the statute directly: Parker v. Sexton, 29–421; Johnson v. Chase, 30–308; Hurley v. Powell, 31–64; Rhodes v. Sexton, 33–540; Madson v. Sexton, 37–562; Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41–153.

After the tax duplicate is made out and is placed in the treasurer's hands it constitutes the best and only evidence in whose name any particulur tract of land is taxed, and it remains such at least until there is another assessment, which for the time, and until another tax duplicate is made out, becomes the evidence in whose name real estate is taxed: Fuller v. Butler, 72–729.

When tax books are placed in the hands of the county treasurer for collection he is charged with the taxes and is required to collect and account for them, and his duty to do so cannot be divested by separation of a portion of the territory over which the taxes have been assessed and levied: Hillard v. Griffin, 72–331.

SEC. 1388. Aggregate valuation certified. At the time of delivering the list to the treasurer, the auditor shall furnish to the auditor of state a certified statement, showing separately the aggregate full and taxable valuations of the real and personal property in the county, and also the aggregate amount of each separate tax as shown by the tax list. [C. '73, § 844; R., § 748.]

SEC. 1389. Treasurer to enter delinquent taxes. The treasurer, on receiving the tax list, shall enter upon the same in separate columns opposite each parcel of real estate or person's name, on which or against whom any tax remains unpaid for any preceding year, the year or years for which such delinquent tax so remains due and unpaid, and such tax shall not be or remain a lien on such real estate or upon other real estate of the owner, unless so brought forward; but to preserve such lien it shall only be necessary to enter such tax opposite such person's name, or any tract upon which it was a lien. Any sale for the whole or any part of such delinquent tax not so entered shall be invalid. [C. '73, § 845; R., § 750; C. '51, § 488.]

Under this section a personal tax which is a lien upon realty, as well as a real property tax, is to be brought forward and entered as against the property: Cummings v. Easton, 46–183.

The treasurer should thus bring forward any personal tax which has become a lien upon real property, and enter it opposite such real property, although the personal tax was not assessed against the person who was the owner of such property at the time the assessment was made, nor the person owning the property at the time of making the entry: Ibid.

Although under such provision any sale for the whole or any part of a delinquent tax not thus brought forward is declared to be invalid, the right to enforce a performance of the duty of entering upon the tax books taxes remaining unpaid for preceding years cannot be barred so long as the right to enforce the taxes exists. So held in an action to compel the treasurer to enter up and collect a railroad tax: Harwood v. Brownell, 48–657.

Where a person purchases land against which no delinquent taxes appear, the treasurer cannot, by afterwards bringing forward delinquent taxes which had not been properly brought forward, make them a lien upon the property as against such purchaser. Taxes not thus brought forward cease to be a lien: Jiska v. Ringgold County, 57–630.

The provision of § 1417, for refunding to the purchaser at a tax sale taxes illegally exacted, are applicable to taxes not carried forward as thus required, and for which the sale is therefore illegal: Parker v. Cochran, 64–757.

The lien of previous taxes not included in the sale is divested by the sale, and such previous taxes cannot be enforced: See § 1418 and notes.

A tax sale for delinquent tax of previous years not carried forward on the tax books is invalid: Gardner v. Early, 69–42; Barke v. Early, 72–273; Hooper v. Sac County Bank, 72–280; Buckley v. Early, 72–289; Sac County v. Hooper, 77–435; Snell v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 88–442; Nicodemus v. Young, 90–423.

A sale for taxes not carried forward is not void but voidable, and advantage of the objection should be taken within five years under the provisions of § 1448: Griffin v. Bruce, 73–126; Collins v. Valleau, 79–626; Lawrence v. Hornick, 81–193: Guthrie v. Harker, 27 Fed., 586.

Even though the sale is for taxes which have remained unpaid for want of bidders, as provided in § 1425 it will be invalid if the taxes have not been brought forward as here required: Paxton v. Boss, 57 N. W., 428.

But under the Revision such sales were valid: Hunt v. Gray, 76–268.

Where personal property taxes were never carried forward except that they were entered in a separate book showing the names of persons so taxed and the amount of such taxes and the page on which the tax appeared on the tax lists in the office, held, that such entries did not constitute a carrying forward of the taxes as required by this section and that a sale therefor was invalid: Dows v. Dale, 74–108.

Failure to carry forward a delinquent tax will not make the sale invalid when the tax book was not in the hands of the treasurer before the sale: Babcock v. Bonebrake, 77–710.

In such a case entry on the books of the fact of sale is sufficient, for at the time of the entry the taxes have been paid by the sale: Hoben v. Snell, 62 N. W., 739.

SEC. 1390. Treasurer to collect. The treasurer, after making the entry, shall proceed to collect the taxes, and the list shall be his authority and justification against any illegality in the proceedings prior to receiving the list; and he is also authorized and required to collect, as far as practicable, the taxes remaining unpaid on the tax books of previous years. [C. '73, § 846; R., § 751.]

SEC. 1391. Penalty on taxes not brought forward. No penalty or interest shall be collected upon taxes remaining unpaid four years or more from the thirty-first day of December of the year in which the tax books containing the same were first placed in the treasurer's hands. [15 G. A., ch. 29, § 1.]

This provision does not release the treasurer from liability for not collecting such taxes, and is not therefore void as impairing the obligation of contracts. Nor is it a special law for the assessment and collection of taxes within the meaning of article III, § 30, of the constitution. Nor is it void as against public policy as encouraging delinquencies in the payment of taxes: Beecher v. Board of Supervisors, 50–538.

SEC. 1392. Notice of previous sale. Each county treasurer, when any person offers to pay taxes on any real estate marked "Sold," shall notify him of such fact, and inform him for what taxes and when the sale was made. [C. '73, § 847.]

The neglect of the treasurer to thus notify a party paying taxes does not affect a sale already made nor authorize a redemption therefrom after the time for redemption has expired: Playter v. Cochran, 37–258.

SEC. 1393. Certificate of taxes due. The county treasurer, when requested to do so by any one having an interest therein, shall certify in writing the entire amount of taxes and assessments due upon any parcel of real estate, together with all sales of the same for unpaid taxes or assessments shown by the books in his office, with the amount required for redemption from the same, if still redeemable, if he is paid or tendered his fees for such certificate at the rate of fifty cents for the first parcel in each township, town or city, and ten cents for each subsequent parcel in the same township, town or city, and in computing such fees each description in the tax list shall be reckoned a parcel. [C. '73, § 848.]

SEC. 1394. Effect. Such certificate, with the treasurer's receipt showing the payment of all the taxes therein specified, and the auditor's certificate of redemption from the tax sales therein mentioned, shall be conclusive evidence for all purposes, and against all persons, that the parcel of real estate in said certificate and receipt described was, at the date thereof, free and clear of all taxes and assessments, and sales for taxes or assessments, except sales whereon the time of redemption had already expired, and the tax purchaser had received his deed. [C. '73, § 849.]

SEC. 1395. Treasurer liable. For any loss resulting to the county, or any subdivision thereof, or to any tax purchaser, or taxpayer, from an error in said certificate or receipt, the treasurer and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond. [C. '73, § 850.]

SEC. 1396. Information as to taxes due. The treasurer, when applied to by letter and receiving thirty cents in postage stamps or money, and ten cents additional for each tract of one hundred and sixty acres in excess of three hundred and twenty acres, in no case to exceed fifty cents, shall correctly answer the same by mail, giving the amount and interest of unpaid taxes and of any tax sales thereof as the same appear upon the tax list in his office, and upon the return of the letter or a copy, before the last day of the current month, with the demand due as shown therein, he shall pay the taxes and forward to the sender a tax receipt without further charge. [C. '73, § 3794.]

SEC. 1397. Penalty. Any treasurer who shall neglect for twenty days after the receipt of any such letter, with money or stamps inclosed as aforesaid, to answer the same fully as required in the preceding section, or who shall directly or indirectly receive or be concerned in receiving any greater compensation for the service mentioned than as above provided, shall forfeit to the person aggrieved, for each offense, the sum of fifty dollars, which may be recovered in a civil action. [C. '73, § 3795.]

SEC. 1398. Assessment of omitted property. The treasurer shall assess any real property subject to taxation which may have been omitted by the assessor, board of review or county auditor, and collect taxes thereon, and in such cases shall note, opposite the tract or lot assessed, the words "by treasurer," but such assessment shall be made within four years after the tax list shall have been delivered to him for collection, and not afterwards, if the property is then owned by the person who should have paid the tax. [C. '73, § 851; R., § 752; C. '51, § 851.]

The omission of the words "by treasurer" does not render the assessment so made by him invalid, in view of the duty imposed upon the owner by the following section: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41–153.

SEC. 1399. Duty of owner. In all cases where real estate subject to taxation has not been assessed, the owner, by himself or agent, shall have the same done by the treasurer, and pay the taxes thereon; and if he fails to do so the treasurer shall assess the same and collect the tax assessed as he does other taxes. And no failure of the owner to have such property assessed or to have the errors in the assessment corrected, and no irregularity, error or omission in the assessment of such property, shall affect in any manner the legality of the taxes levied thereon, or affect any right or title to such real estate which would have accrued to any party claiming or holding under and by virtue of a deed executed by the treasurer as provided by this title, had the assessment of such property been in all respects regular and valid. [C. '73, § 852; R., § 753.]

An error in assessments does not affect the validity of a tax sale: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27–160, 172.

An error of the assessor under § 1353, in assessing land to unknown owner, is cured by this section: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44–622, 632.

This section is applicable to taxes levied for construction of drains, etc., under § 1946: Patterson v. Baumer, 43–477.

In view of the various provisions making it the duty of the owner or the proper officer to enter land on the assessment book, it will be presumed in support of a tax deed that land subject to taxation was so entered, until the contrary is made to appear: Lathrop v. Irwin, 65 N. W., 972.

If the real owner stands by, knowing that another is asserting rights to the property, such as seeing that the property is listed in his name, and paying the taxes thereon, he is estopped from maintaining ejectment for the land: Conklin v. Wehrman, 38 Fed., 874.

Land acquired from the government should be entered for taxation for the year in which land is not regularly assessed, if it becomes subject to taxation for that year: Barrett v. Kevane, 69 N. W., 1036.

As to effect of illegality of part of a tax upon the sale, see notes to § 1417.

SEC. 1400. Lien of taxes. Taxes upon real estate shall be a lien thereon against all persons except the state. Taxes due from any person upon personal property shall be a lien upon any and all real estate owned by such person or to which he may acquire title. As against a purchaser, such liens shall attach to real estate on and after the thirty-first day of December in each year. Taxes upon stocks of goods or merchandise shall be a lien thereon and shall continue a lien thereon when sold in bulk, and may be collected from the owner, purchaser or vendee. [21 G. A., ch. 133; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 1; C. '73, §§ 853, 865; R., § 759; C. '51, § 495.]

Taxes are not, prior to the date specified, a lien against which the covenants of grantor's deed operate. Therefore, where a contract of sale was made prior to that date and a deed executed subsequently and in pursuance thereof, held, that such taxes were not covered by the covenants of the deed: Sackett v. Osborn, 26–146.

This provision does not necessarily relieve the vendor from personal liability for taxes upon property which is sold by him before the date specified. When a portion of the property on which the tax is levied remains undisposed of, the collector having no authority to apportion it, the vendor remains liable for all: Shaw v. Orr, 30–355.

Where land is conveyed after the date specified the grantor is liable under the covenants of his deed for the taxes assessed for that year, but is not liable to the purchaser of his grantee for personal taxes of the latter, for which, together with the realty tax due thereon, the land has been sold at tax sale and from which the last purchaser has redeemed: Baldwin v. Mayne, 42–131.

That taxes are a personal obligation see notes to § 1403.

A personal tax is not a mere personal claim against the person taxed, but is a charge upon his real property: Garretson v. Schofield, 44–35; Cummings v. Easton, 46–183; Paulson v. Rule, 49–576.

Personal property taxes become a lien on land acquired subsequently to the assessment: Cummings v. Easton, 46–183.

Such taxes do not become a lien upon real property of the taxpayer until they are due, and they cannot be deemed due before a levy thereof is made: Castle v. Anderson, 69–428.

Personal property taxes of a partnership being due from each partner become a lien upon the real estate of a member: Bibbins v. Clark, 90–230.

It is a general rule appertaining to the law of taxation that taxes are not a lien upon property of the taxpayer, unless a lien is expressly created or provided for by statute; and as no lien upon personal property is provided for, taxes are not a lien thereon: Jaffray v. Anderson, 66–718.

Taxes are not a lien upon personalty until distraint therefor is made after the mode pointed out by statute; hence a person purchasing personal property before distraint has been made for taxes is protected against a subsequent distraint for taxes assessed against his vendor, and a mortgagee of personal property who takes possession under his mortgage and sells the property, either directly or through a decree or order of the court, before any distraint is made is entitled to the proceeds so far as they may be necessary to pay his claim as against the taxes assessed against the mortgagor: Maish v. Bird, 22 Fed., 180.

Taxes are not a lien upon personal property and therefore do not have priority over other claims against such property when in the hands of a receiver. The special statutory provisions with reference to assignments for the benefit of creditors (§ 3078) are not applicable in such case: Howard County v. Strother, 71–683.

A lien for taxes on personal property of the owner of real estate does not take priority over existing mortgages on such real estate, and a purchaser at a sale of the real estate for such taxes acquires only the owner's equity of redemption. (Overruling New England Loan & Trust Co. v. Young, 81–732;) Bibbins v. Clark, 90–230; Bibbins v. Polk County, 69 N. W., 1007.

The lien of the tax provided for in the mulct law is subordinate to that of a pre-existing mortgage: Smith v. Skow, 66 N. W., 893.

As to priority of tax in case of assignment for benefit of creditors, see § 3078.

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE COLLECTION OF TAXES.

SECTION 1401. Payment. Auditor's warrants shall be received by the county treasurer in full payment of state taxes, and county warrants shall be received by the treasurer of the proper county for ordinary county taxes, but money only shall be received for the school tax. Road taxes, except the portion payable in money, may be discharged and road certificates of work done received, as provided by law. [C.'73, §§ 854, 1779; R., §§ 754, 2057, 2059; C.'51, § 489.]

SEC. 1402. What receivable. The treasurer is authorized and required to receive in payment of all taxes by him collected, together with the interest and principal of the school fund, the circulating notes of national banking associations organized under and in accordance with the conditions of the act of the congress of the United States, entitled, "An act to provide a national currency secured by the pledge of the United States stocks, and to provide for the redemption thereof," approved February 25, 1863, and acts amendatory thereto, United States legal tender notes, and other notes and certificates of the United States payable on demand and circulating or intended to circulate as currency. [C.'73, § 855.]

SEC. 1403. Payment—installments. No demand of taxes shall be necessary, but it shall be the duty of every person subject to taxation to attend at the office of the treasurer, at some time between the first Monday in January and the first day of March following, and pay his taxes in full; or one-half thereof before the first day of March succeeding the levy, and the remaining half before the first day of September following; but in all cases where the half of any taxes has not been paid before the first day of April succeeding the levy, the whole amount charged against such entry shall become delinquent from the first day of March after due; and in case the second installment is not paid before the first day of October succeeding its maturity, it shall become delinquent from the first day of September after due. In all cases where taxes are paid by installment, each of such payments, except road taxes, shall be apportioned among the several funds for which taxes have been assessed in their proper proportions. [C.'73, § 857; R., § 756; C.'51, § 492.]

The tax list is sufficient warrant, even when the tax is a special one, to protect the treasurer in his proceedings thereunder from liability for any irregular or illegal proceedings of the officers connected with the levy of the tax, provided such levy is authorized: Games v. Robb, 8–193.

Where a tax has been legally ordered by officers de jure certainly, if not de facto, against a person liable to be tae d, and the officer has been duly chosen and qualified to collect such tax, he will, in the absence of fraud on his part, be protected, and is not answerable for any irregularity in the proceedings: Hershey v. Fry, 1–593.

The tax a debt: A tax lawfully levied becomes a debt which may be recovered by action at law, even though its collection is otherwise provided for, unless the special remedies provided by statute are made exclusive: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39–56.

Taxes are a personal indebtedness and constitute a claim which should be paid by the administrator of the estate of a deceased person. Therefore the devisee of property is entitled to have taxes which are a lien thereon paid out of the estate: Findley v. Taylor, 66 N. W., 744.

That special assessments for street improvements are a personal claim against the owner of the property, see notes to § 829.

Equitable remedy: Where the statutory remedy for collection of taxes is plain, adequate and speedy, a court of equity will not interfere to enforce their collection: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41–153.

Working out: The fact that a railroad has not been notified to work out the part of the road tax which might be paid in work will not authorize the restraining of the collection of the entire tax. Perhaps, upon a proper offer to work out the proportion which may be paid in work, the collection of that part might be enjoined: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45–168.

Personal taxes: A tax upon personal property becomes a lien against the owner thereof from the time of his assessment at the place of his residence, and a subsequent removal before the payment of the tax will not relieve him from liability: Toothaker v. Moore, 9–468.

Payment by mortgagor: It is the duty of the mortgagor of real property to pay the taxes thereon: Porter v. Lafferty, 33–254; Dayton v. Rice, 47–429.

The mortgagor is the party primarily liable to pay the taxes on the mortgaged property, even after foreclosure sale, during the period of redemption, and any tax title acquired by the mortgagor during that time will be held as having been acquired by him in trust for the purchaser at the forclosure sale, and he cannot set up such title in opposition to the title of such purchaser: Dayton v. Rice, 47–429.

Lienholder: A mortgagee is entitled to pay taxes on the mortgaged property, and upon redemption being made from him by the holder of the junior lien, is entitled to have such taxes reimbursed: Strong v. Burdick, 52–630.

A junior incumbrancer paying taxes due upon the premises acquires a first lien for the amount thereof: Evans v. Burns, 67–179.

Assignee for benefit of creditors: Where taxes were levied on property after an assignment for the benefit of creditors, held, that as by § 3078 the assignee was authorized to pay such taxes as a preferred claim, he should be required to pay to the mortgagee of lands upon which such taxes became a lien, and who had been required to redeem the land from sale for such taxes, the amount levied upon personal property covered by the assignment with six per cent. interest: Brooks v. Eighmey, 53–276.

No claim for taxes is required to be filed before the assignee, nor need any demand be made. The assignee must, at his peril, ascertain whether the property or fund in his hands is liable for assessments or levies of taxes: Huiscamp v. Albert, 60–421.

Application: Taxpayers are authorized to rely upon the county treasurer for the proper application of money given him for the payment of taxes, and they will not be allowed to lose their property through the mistake of such officer in a misapplication of payment: Henderson v. Robinson, 76–603.

Vendee: Where a purchaser of real estate under contract for a deed takes possession thereof, he is liable for the taxes thereon, and on subsequently taking the deed cannot require the vendor to covenant against such taxes: Miller v. Corey, 15 166.

While, as between vendor and vendee in possession under contract of sale, it is the duty of the latter to pay the taxes, yet the former may pay them to protect his title, and for any amount paid in removing tax incumbrances with six per cent. interest thereon, he is entitled to a lien upon the land after decree for a conveyance in performance of the contract: Lillie v. Case, 54–177.

Where the personal property taxes of a partnership became a lien on the real estate of one partner, held, that a subsequent grantee of such real estate being compelled to pay the taxes in order to protect the property might recover the taxes paid from his grantor but not from another member of the partnership, the payment as to other members being voluntary: Bibbins v. Clark, 90–230.

The vendor is not necessarily relieved from personal liability for taxes upon property sold by him before the time when taxes become a lien on real property, under § 1400. If a portion of the property on which a tax is levied remains undisposed of, the collector having no authority to apportion the tax, the vendor remains liable for all: Shaw v. Orr, 30–355.

The vendee being deemed in equity to be the owner and entitled to possession must pay his proportion of the taxes accruing upon the land from the date his right to possession arose: Sherman v. Savery, 2 McCrary, 107.

Where the title was wrongfully conveyed by the vendor to another, although he was held by a court of equity to be the trustee for the vendee proper, yet the payment of taxes by him was held not to be voluntary, and he was allowed to recover for taxes paid while the relation existed: Ibid.

Purchase subject to: The purchaser of land upon which taxes are due and unpaid takes subject to the lien of such taxes, but does not become personally liable therefor: Ritchie v. McDuffie, 62–46.

Under a lease providing that the tenant should pay all the taxes assessed against the property during the continuance of the lease, held, that he was liable for special assessments for local improvements, such as paving and curbing of adjacent streets: Cassady v. Hammer, 62–359.

A purchaser of land on which taxes are due does not become personally liable therefor: Ritchie v. McDuffie, 62–46.

Lien: This section does not make taxes upon personal property a lien thereon: Jaffray v. Anderson, 66–718.

As to the lien of taxes in general, see § 1400 and notes.

Payment by person not the owner: Taxes paid by one claiming title adversely to the real owner without his consent cannot be recovered back from the owner after the adverse title is declared void. The mere fact that the real owner knew that the adverse claimant was paying the taxes under claim of title is not sufficient ground for inferring a promise to repay: Garrigan v. Knight, 47–525; Read v. Howe, 49–65.

A party who pays tax upon land without any right to do so, and having no claim whatever to the property, cannot recover the taxes paid from the rightful owner who has purchased the land since the payment of such taxes. No request to pay can be presumed in such a case: La Rue v. King, 74–288.

A party who pays taxes upon the land of another, whose title is of record, cannot claim that the owner is thereby estopped from asserting his title: Merrill v. Tobin, 30 Fed., 738.

One who claims title without payment of taxes, allowing an adverse claimant who is in possession to continue for years the payment of taxes on the land, becomes thereby estopped from asserting as against the occupant his claim of title: Knapp v. Paine, 63 N. W., 575.

While a mere stranger has not the right to pay taxes, yet if payment be made by such an one, and received by the treasurer, the property cannot be afterward sold for such tax: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Guthrie, 53–383.

Payment by one not the owner made before the taxes become delinquent held not recoverable as against a subsequent owner of the land: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Davis, 71 N. W., 229.

Payment under supposed title: Where title to land was for a long time in litigation between parties claiming title under conflicting grants, and one of them paid the taxes, and it was finally decided that the title was in the other, held, that the one who paid the taxes might recover the amount so paid from the one adjudged owner of the land: Goodnow v. Moulton, 51–555; Goodnow v. Plumbe, 52–711; Goodnow v. Wells, 54–326; Goodnow v. Stryker, 61–261; Goodnow v. Stryker, 62–221; Goodnow v. Wells, 76–774; S. C. 78–760.

Under such circumstances, held, that the payment of taxes voluntarily made by the person claiming title to the property, with full knowledge of the adverse claimant of the title, and made under belief on the part of the person making such payment, arising from a mistake of law, that he had such title, might be recovered back from the adverse claimant upon the title being determined to be in the latter: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63-275; Iowa Homestead Co. v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co., 63-285; Goodnow v. Chapman, 64-602; Goodnow v. Wolcott, 65-201; Goodnow v. Oakley, 68-25.

Although where one of two parties holding the title to property has paid the taxes, and the other afterwards establishes his title to the property, the one who has made payment cannot claim the right to recover from the other on account of such payment, yet, if the successful party accepts the benefit of such payment, an action to recover the payments may be maintained against him by the party making them: Goodnow v. Stryker, 61-261.

Where a company to which lands were certified under a railroad grant paid the taxes thereon, and subsequently the title was found to be in another under the swamp land grant, held, that the taxes paid by the former company under the belief that it had a legal title and in ignorance of the swampy character of the land, which fact alone defeated its title, could be recovered from the party holding the swamp land grant, who had made no offer to pay such taxes: American Emigrant Co. v. Iowa R. Land Co., 52-323.

One who, while making an honest claim to be the owner of real estate, pays taxes thereon, it afterward being determined that the title is in another, is entitled to be reimbursed for such expenditure: Fogg v. Holcomb, 64-621; Leather v. Ross, 74-630.

In such case, the payments being made for the protection of the property and redounding to the benefit of the real owner, he ought and will be required to reimburse the person who made them for the amount paid: Bradley v. Cole, 67-650.

So held where the title to property was claimed under an execution sale and sheriff's deed which were afterwards held defective: Ibid.

Where the purchaser of property at execution sale makes redemption from a previous tax sale of the property he cannot recover from the former owner the amount paid: Barr v. Patrick, 59-134.

Where it appeared that at the time when taxes were paid by the plaintiff on premises subsequently decreed to belong to defendant, there was a controversy between plaintiff and defendant as to the title, which was only settled by such decree, held, that plaintiff might, in an action brought within five years after the rendition of such decree, recover the taxes paid by him on the premises, which defendant would have been required to pay under the title as claimed by him: Wood v. Curran, 76-560.

In an action to quiet title against one who claimed title under a judicial sale, which was adjudged to be void, and who had paid taxes under such claim, held, that she was entitled to recover the taxes with six per cent. interest from the time of the respective payments, and that the same should be a lien on the land: Cassidy v. Woodward, 77-354.

Where a nonresident claiming ownership paid taxes on the land, which was not inclosed, and the only assertion of adverse title was that made by cutting hay and stacking it upon the land, and such other acts of dominion over it as it was susceptible of in its wild state, held, that the nonresident claimant whose title was afterwards declared invalid by reason of a defect in the title of his grantor could recover the taxes paid by him from the one who was found to be the rightful owner of the land: Merrill v. Tobin, 82-529.

Also, held, that a grantee taking premises with full knowledge of all the facts in connection with the payment of taxes, it not appearing that any of the intervening grantors were innocent purchasers, took subject to the obligation to pay such taxes, and they should be made a lien upon the land: Ibid.

Where swamp lands were improperly listed for taxation and taxes were paid thereon, held, that a subsequent purchaser of such land from the county, asserting his title thereto as against a prior invalid grant, was not bound to refund to the adverse claimant taxes paid by the latter during the time when the land was not subject to taxation: Hays v. McCormick, 83-89.

The right of the person paying taxes on land which is afterwards adjudged not to belong to him, to have such taxes refunded and to a lien on the land therefor, is not a right passing with the land, so that the grantee of the person paying such taxes can establish a lien therefor upon the land against the purchaser in good faith from the real owner: Brown v. Poole, 85-412.

Where the payment of taxes is pleaded by defendant as a matter in defense of plaintiff's right to have his title quieted, and no affirmative relief is asked, the court will not give defendant judgment for such taxes, but leave the right thereto to be determined in another proceeding: American Emigrant Co. v. Fuller, 83-599.

Where there are two claimants to property and each pays the taxes thereon, the one who is adjudged not to be the owner cannot recover from the other the amount of taxes thus paid. A request by him to the other to make payment, which is the basis of recovery in such case, cannot be inferred under the circumstances: Montgomery County v. Severson, 68-451.

Where recovery is had by one claimant of property who has paid the taxes, against another who has been adjudged to be the legal owner, interest on the amount paid by the unsuccessful claimant at the legal rate may be recovered, commencing at the date of payment: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63-275; Iowa Homestead Co. v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co., 63-285; Goodnow v. Stryker, 63-569; Goodnow v. Plumbe, 64-672; Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654; Goodnow v. Oakley, 68-25; Leather v. Ross, 74-630.

The amount which a party making payment of taxes is entitled to recover should be made a lien upon all the land collectively for the gross amount of the payments made: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63–275; Goodnow v. Stryker, 63–569; Goodnow v. Plumbe, 64–672; Goodnow v. Oakley, 68–25; Leather v. Ross, 74–630.

The grantee of a person who is entitled to recover taxes thus paid is not, in the absence of express assignment of the right thereof, entitled to recover them from the person who has been adjudged the rightful owner of the property: Seymour v. Shea, 62–708.

A recovery of taxes thus paid cannot be had as against one who was not the owner of the premises at the time the payments were made, but has subsequently become such owner: Fogg v. Holcomb, 64–621; Iowa R. Land Co. v. Davis, 71 N. W., 229.

But the grantee of a person who has been adjudged to have been the real owner at the time the taxes were paid, and acquiring his title by quitclaim, stands in the shoes of his grantor, and the lands in his hands are subject to the claim or lien of the party thus paying the taxes; but such grantee is not to be held personally liable for the taxes paid before the purchase of the property by him: Bradley v. Cole, 67–650.

The relief which may be had by a party paying taxes by reason of a mistake respecting the title as against the person benefited is not valid as against a third person purchasing the land without notice that there is any claim thereon for taxes so paid, and the taxes so paid will not be a lien as against such purchaser: Bowen v. Duffie, 66–88.

The statute of limitations as against an action by a party who has paid taxes on land on a claim of ownership, but has been held not to be the owner, to recover such taxes from the party adjudged to be the owner, commences to run from the time the title to the property as between the claimants is judicially determined: Goodnow v. Stryker, 62–221; Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63–275; Bradley v. Cole, 67–650; Goodnow v. Oakley, 68–25.

A party cannot recover from the owner of the title taxes which he has paid on land more than five years prior to the time of bringing action to recover the same: La Rue v. King, 74–288; Iowa R. Land Co. v. Davis, 71 N. W., 229.

As to the claim made in some of these cases that there had been a previous adjudication of the right to recover the taxes, see Goodnow v. Wells, 67–654.

SEC. 1404. Lien on personal property of nonresident. All personal property, the owner of which is a nonresident of the state, and which property is by the owner thereof intended for sale or consumption at a place or shipment to a place other than where said property is located, shall be assessed in the owner's name, if the owner is known, and if the owner is unknown or uncertain the same shall be assessed to "unknown owner," and shall be by the assessor sufficiently described so that said property may be identified. A lien for the tax upon said property as herein provided shall relate back to and exist from the first day of January of the year for which it is assessed, and if any one seeks to remove the said property from the county before the tax for said year shall be paid, the tax shall immediately become due and collectible. It shall be the duty of the assessor to notify the county auditor if said property is being, or is about to be, removed from the county. In such event, or if the knowledge of the removal of or intent to remove said property shall come to him in any other authentic manner, the said auditor shall certify such fact to the county treasurer, with a full description of the property as the same appears on the assessor's books, giving assessment district, where located, and the amount of said assessment, and the county treasurer shall thereupon proceed by distress to restrain the removal of said property and secure the lien of the tax due or to become due. If at the time of such distress the levy for the year is unknown, the auditor is authorized to release the lien of such tax upon a good and sufficient bond, with sureties resident of the county, being filed with said auditor, to be by him approved, which bond shall obligate all parties thereto to pay all taxes due on said property when same are payable. Upon the filing and approving of such bond, the auditor shall make a certificate releasing the said personalty from the lien of such tax. The payment of said tax shall be a bar against the collection of taxes for same year on said property in any other county in this state.

SEC. 1405. Receipt. The treasurer shall in all cases make out and deliver to the taxpayer a receipt, stating the time of payment, the description and assessed value of each parcel of land, and the assessed value of personal property, the amount of each kind of tax, the interest on each and costs if any, giving a separate receipt for each year; and he shall make the proper entries of such payments on the books of his office. Such receipt shall be in full of the first or second half or all of such person's taxes for that year, but the treasurer shall receive the full amount of any county, state or school tax whenever the same is tendered, and give a separate receipt therefor. [C. '73, § 867; R., § 760.]

The receipt of a deputy collector should have the same force and effect as that of the treasurer: Jones v. Welsing, 52–220.

Payment of taxes may be proved by parol. So held, even under a statute requiring the taxpayer to take a duplicate receipt and file it with the county judge and obtain his indorsement upon the original, and providing that no receipt without such indorsement should be receivable in evidence: Adams v. Beale, 19–61.

Entry of payment by a county treasurer in his books does not operate to discharge the taxes, and only those misled by such entry, or who act upon the faith thereof, can in equity claim to be prejudiced by such entry, when the taxes are not in fact paid: Amber v. Clayton, 23–173.

Where a party in ignorance of a tax sale pays the taxes for which the sale was made and receives the treasurer's receipt therefor, such payment does not defeat the sale: Jones v. Welsing, 52–220.

A taxpayer has the right to direct the application of any sums paid by him to the payment of such taxes as he sees fit: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Carroll County, 39–151.

The stub of a tax receipt is evidence showing the payment of the tax such as to defeat a subsequent sale of the property: Harrison v. Sauerwein, 70–291.

In a particular case, held, that evidence did not sufficiently show previous payment of taxes to render the sale void: Slocum v. Slocum, 70–259.

In an action to set aside a tax sale and deed on the ground that the plaintiff had paid the taxes for which the land was sold, before the sale, and where, in support of his claim, he offered a tax receipt showing the payment of the taxes upon the lot in question with a number of other lots, held, that the evidence was sufficient to show the payment of the taxes, although the stub of the tax receipt failed to show either the description of the lot or the payment of the taxes: Bright v. Slocum, 77–27.

SEC. 1406. Sale of personal property. If any one neglects to pay his taxes at or before maturity, the treasurer may collect the same by distress and sale of his personal property not exempt from taxation, and the tax list alone shall be sufficient warrant therefor. When the treasurer distrains goods, and the owner refuses to give a sufficient bond for the delivery of the same on the day of sale, he may keep them at the expense of the owner, and shall give notice of the time and place of their sale within five days after the taking, in the manner constables are required to give notice of the sale of personal property under execution. The time of sale shall not be more than twenty days from the day of taking, but he may adjourn the sale from time to time, not exceeding five days in all, and shall adjourn at least once when there are no bidders, and, in case of adjournment, he shall post up a notice thereof at the place of sale, announcing the time to which the adjournment is ordered. Any surplus remaining above the taxes, charges of keeping, and fees for sale, shall be returned to the owner, and the treasurer shall, on demand, render an account in writing of the sale and charges. [20 G. A., ch. 194, § 1; C. '73, §§ 857–8; R., §§ 756–7; C. '51, §§ 492–3.]

SEC. 1407. Collectors—sheriff. Immediately after the taxes become delinquent, each county treasurer shall proceed to collect the same by distress and sale of the personal property of the delinquent taxpayers, and for this purpose he may appoint one or more collectors to assist him in collecting the same. Each collector appointed shall receive for his services and expenses the sum of five per cent. on the amount of all taxes collected and paid over by him, which percentage he shall collect from the delinquent, together with the whole amount of delinquent taxes and interest; and pay the same to the treasurer at the end of each month, and in the discharge of his duties as collector, should it become necessary to make the delinquent taxes by distress and sale, or should no collector be appointed, or should the collector fail to institute proceedings to collect said delinquent taxes, the treasurer shall place the same in the hands of the sheriff, who shall proceed to collect the same, and either shall be entitled to receive the same compensation, in addition to the five per cent., as constables are entitled to receive for the sale of property on execution. [C. '73, § 859.]

The fact that lands have been advertised for sale for taxes does not prevent a sale of personal property to pay the same. If the lands, however, had been actually sold to pay the taxes, personal property could not be subjected to their payment: Emerick v. Sloan, 18–139.

A failure of the treasurer to collect the taxes by distress and sale of personal property, when he might do so will not invalidate a subsequent sale of real property for such taxes: Stewart v. Corbin, 25–144.

The receipt of a deputy collector should have the same force and effect as that of the treasurer: Jones v. Welsing, 52–220.

A person appointed to collect taxes cannot recover from a private person additional fees for services performed under an alleged contract to pay such additional compensation in consideration of his remaining in office and performing the duties thereof: Fawcett v. Eberly, 58–544.

Where the treasurer had commenced to enforce the payment of taxes by distress of personal property of the taxpayer, and had discontinued such proceedings on the promise of one who was about to purchase said property, that he would become personally responsible therefor, held, that such promise was not binding, as the inducement thereto was the abandonment by the officer of the discharge of his legal duty: Cass County v. Beck, 76–487.

SEC. 1408. Resistance. If the treasurer, his deputy, or collector is resisted or impeded in the execution of the duties of his office, he may require any person to assist him therein, and if such person refuses, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding ten dollars, to be recovered by civil action in the name of the county, and the person resisting shall be punished as in the case of resisting an officer in the execution of legal process. [C.'73, § 860; R., § 758; C.'51, § 494.]

SEC. 1409. Taxes certified to another county. In all cases of delinquent taxes in any county, where the person upon whose property the same were levied shall have removed into another county, leaving no property within the county where the taxes were levied out of which the same can be made, the treasurer of the county where said taxes are delinquent shall make out a certified abstract thereof, and forward the same to the treasurer of the county in which the delinquent resides or has property, when the treasurer transmitting said abstract has reason to believe that said taxes can be collected thereby. [C.'73, § 861.]

SEC. 1410. Collection in such case. The treasurer forwarding and the one receiving said abstract shall each keep a record thereof, and, upon receipt and filing in the office of the treasurer to whom sent, it shall have the effect of a levy of taxes in that county, and the collection of the same shall be proceeded with in the same manner as in the collection of other taxes. [C.'73, § 862.]

SEC. 1411. Penalty. The officer collecting taxes so certified into another county shall, in addition to the penalties on delinquent taxes, assess and collect the further penalty of twenty per cent. on the whole amount of such taxes, inclusive of the penalties thereon. [C.'73, § 863.]

SEC. 1412. Return. The officer receiving said abstract shall, when in his opinion the taxes are uncollectible, return the same with the indorsement thereon "uncollectible," and, if collected, he shall remit the amount to the treasurer of the county where said taxes were levied, less the penalty provided by the preceding section. [C.'73, § 864.]

SEC. 1413. When taxes delinquent—penalties. If the first installment of taxes shall not be paid by April first, the whole shall become due and draw interest as a penalty of one per cent. per month until paid from the first of March following the levy; and if the first half shall be paid when due, and the last half shall not be paid by October first following such levy, then a like interest shall be charged from the date such last half became delinquent; and the tax with all penalties shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner; but no interest as a penalty shall be added to taxes levied by any court to pay a judgment on county, city, town or school district indebtedness, other than the interest which such judgment may draw, nor upon taxes levied in aid of the construction of any railroad. All road taxes payable to the county treasurer shall be due with the first installment of other taxes, and subject to the penalty for non-

Interest and penalties on taxes should be computed only from the time such taxes are placed on the tax list, and not from the time when they should have been listed and were not: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41–153.

Where taxes, void when levied, are subsequently made valid by a curative act, penalties for non-payment attach for the period prior to the time that the act takes effect: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39–124; Iowa R. Land Co. v. Carroll County, 39–151.

If a valid tender is made of the amount due for any specified tax, such tender stops interest on that tax without reference to whether it is good as to other taxes or not: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Carroll County, 39–151.

Failure of the county to sell land for taxes when it may do so will not defeat its right to recover penalties thereafter accruing on the same taxes: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41–153.

The fact that the title to land is doubtful or in dispute will not be a ground for relieving a person asserting a right thereto from penalties for non-payment of taxes: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40–66.

Where the title of the owner to one portion of his estate is disputed by the state, and to the other by the United States, and the state in view of these facts assures him that no legal steps will be taken to enforce payment of taxes until his title is adjusted, he will not be compelled to pay more than the statutory interest allowed for the non-payment of ordinary debts, and not the penalty for the non-payment of taxes: Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S., 773.

Where the state refuses payment for a series of years unless payment of taxes be made for the time between the entry and the quieting of the title by act of congress, penalties are not recoverable: Ibid.

Where a new revenue law was passed retrospective in its operations, held, that the method of collecting penalties already accrued should be in accordance with the previous law, and that penalties accruing under the new law on taxes previously levied should be enforced in accordance with such new law: Bartruff v. Remey, 15–257.

The repeal of a statute under which delinquent taxes have accrued, and the enactment of a new statute providing for the collection of taxes with interest, will not operate to remit the interest accrued, although the new law contains no express saving clause: State ex rel. v. Stewart, 11–251.

The right of a county to the penalty accrued on delinquent taxes is not impaired by the repeal of the statute providing for such penalties: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41–153; Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69–648.

But such repeal terminates the right to additional penalties: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69–648.

So held in regard to the amendment of § 866 of Code of '73 by 20 G. A., ch. 194: Ibid.; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hartshorn, 30 Fed., 541 (overruling Snell v. Campbell, 24 Fed., 880).

The last clause of the section relating to railroad aid taxes, held unconstitutional as applied to contracts executed before that provision took effect: Lansing v. County Treasurer, 1 Dillon, 522, 528.

SEC. 1414. Collection. The treasurer shall collect all delinquent taxes by distress or sale of any personal property belonging to the person to whom such taxes are assessed, and not exempt from taxation, or any real or personal property upon which they are a lien, but he shall continue to receive the same until collected, and any owner or claimant of any real estate advertised for sale may pay to the county treasurer, at any time before the sale thereof, the taxes due thereon, with accrued penalties, interest and costs to the time of payment. [20 G. A., ch. 194, § 1; C. '73, §§, 865–6, 879; R., §§ 759, 760, 769; C. '51, §§ 495, 497.]

SEC. 1415. Apportionment. On or before the tenth day of each month, the treasurer shall apportion the consolidated tax of each township, city, town or school corporation collected during the preceding month among the several funds to which it belongs, according to the number of mills levied for each fund, and enter the same, with the other taxes collected during the same period, upon his cash account and report the amount of each tax to the county auditor, who shall charge him with the same. [C. '73, § 868.]

SEC. 1416. Separate funds. The auditor shall keep a complete account with the treasurer, with each separate fund or tax by itself, and in each account he shall charge him with the amounts in his hands at the opening of such account whether it be delinquent taxes, notes, cash or other assets belonging to such fund, the amount of each tax for each year when the tax list is received by him, and all additions to each tax or fund, whether by additional assessments, interest on delinquent taxes, amount received for licenses, or other items, and upon proper vouchers shall credit him for money disbursed for double and erroneous assessments, including all improper and illegal assessments the correction or remission of which causes a diminution of the tax, and for unavailable or uncollectible taxes, as directed by the board of supervisors. [C. '73, § 869; R., § 761.]

SEC. 1417. Refunding erroneous tax. The board of supervisors shall direct the treasurer to refund to the taxpayer any tax or portion thereof found to have been erroneously or illegally exacted or paid, with all interest and costs actually paid thereon. In case any real estate subject to taxation shall be sold for the payment of such erroneous tax, interest or costs, the error or irregularity in the tax may be corrected at any time provided in this chapter, but such correction shall not affect the validity of the sale or the right or title conveyed by a treasurer's deed, if the property was subject to taxation for any of the purposes for which any portion of the taxes for which the land was sold was levied, and the taxes were not paid before the sale, or the property redeemed from sale. [C. '73, § 870; R., § 762.]

This section authorizes the refunding of illegal or erroneous taxes, though voluntarily paid, and even after they have been divided up and distributed among the state, school, road and other funds, and where the supervisors refuse to refund the same the sum may be recovered from the county: Lauman v. Des Moines County, 29–310; Richards v. Wapello County, 48–507; Isbell v. Crawford County, 40–102; Tallant v. Burlington, 49–543.

Where a tax is illegal through the erroneous action of the board in raising an assessment, it may be recovered back: Dickey v. Polk County, 58–287.

Failure to pursue remedies to arrest the collection of such taxes will not waive or forfeit the right to recover them: Ibid.

Taxes not brought forward as required by § 1389, and which are therefore erroneously included in the amount for which property is sold, may be recovered back by the tax purchaser from the county: Parker v. Cochran, 64–757.

Where relief is sought from a tax levy which is in excess of the limit imposed upon taxation, relief will be granted as against the excess of the tax over the constitutional limit, and the tax will be sustained to the extent to which it is valid. After the tax has been paid, such sums as are in excess of the limit, may be recovered back: McPherson v. Foster, 43–48.

Where property was sold for an amount of tax, part of which was not a lien thereon, held, that the owner might recover from the county the amount of such tax, with costs, interest and penalties, which he was compelled to pay in order to redeem: Brownlee v. Marion County, 53–487.

This section does not apply when the taxpayer has voluntarily redeemed from a sale absolutely void by reason of the taxes having been previously paid, and the money so paid in redemption cannot be recovered: Morris v. Sioux County, 42–416; Sears v. Marshall County, 59–603.

Where payment of taxes is voluntarily made with knowledge of all the facts, under the belief that by law the property belongs to the person paying the taxes, such person cannot afterward recover back the money so paid upon the title being adjudged to be in another. Such taxes cannot be deemed erroneous or illegal: Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 40–16.

Where, although the assessment is illegal, and the payment of the taxes could not be enforced, they have been voluntarily paid, the party thus paying them can not recover them back: Newcomb v. Davenport, 86–291.

Where a tax purchaser subsequently paid personal taxes of the previous owner which were a lien upon the land, but his tax title was not effective because of the insufficiency of the description of the land, held, that he was not entitled to recover back the subsequent taxes paid on the ground of mistake or error: Lindsey v. Boone County, 92–86.

One who has a lien upon property prior to the lien of personal property taxes of the owner and pays such taxes to protect his own interests as against a senior lienholder is to be deemed to have paid such taxes voluntarily and can not recover from the county the amount: Bibbins v. Polk County, 69 N. W., 1007.

Where a tax is not merely informal and irregular, but is illegal and void as being levied upon property not liable to taxation, and the owner of the property makes payment under protest, the rule is that he may recover it back, although there is no distraint or seizure of his property: Winzer v. Burlington, 68–279; Thomas v. Burlington, 69–140.

The holder of a tax title, which is adjudicated to be void, cannot recover from the county taxes paid by him upon the property subsequently to the acquisition of his tax title: Scott v. Chickasaw County, 53–47.

Where the purchaser of property at a tax sale paid taxes thereon for a subsequent year, but the sale was afterwards declared void for the reason that the property was not subject to taxation for the year for the taxes for which it was sold, held, that the subsequent tax was not erroneously or illegally exacted or paid in such sense that the county was under obligation to refund it: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Guthrie, 53–383.

The statutory provision for the recovery of illegal taxes paid is not applicable to a case of erroneous assessment made in the exercise of lawful authority. The only relief in such cases is by application to the board of equalization: Harris v. Fremont County, 63-639.

Where a taxpayer had indebtedness which he might in a proper manner have offset against property for which he was taxed, but took no steps to have such deduction allowed, either by the assessor or by the board of equalization, and about two years after the payment of the taxes under the assessment, applied to have refunded to him the amount thus paid in excess of what would have been his proper assessment, held, that such application was too late, and that as there was no error or illegality in the assessment, the recovery of the amount could not be had: Leonard v. Madison County, 64-418.

Where an illegal tax has been collected for the benefit of the county and has been expended, it would be proper to refund it from other funds belonging to the county. So where an illegal tax has been collected for the state or for a school or road district, and has been paid over, it would be proper to refund it, if necessary to do so, from other funds belonging to the state or the school or road district which has thus received and enjoyed the benefit of the illegal tax: District T'p v. District T'p, 56-85.

Where it became necessary to refund a tax which had been paid over to a school district and it appeared that the original school district was no longer in existence, the territory having been divided into three districts, held, that the treasurer should have apportioned the tax among the districts formed out of the original territory and repaid the tax pro rata from the funds coming to each, and that having repaid it entirely from the funds of one of the districts, that district was entitled to maintain an action for contribution against the others: Ibid.

The money which is to be returned to the taxpayer should be taken from the particular fund or funds into which it went when the tax was collected: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Woodbury County, 64-212.

No judgment can be rendered against a county on account of taxes illegally or erroneously collected for any of the public organizations or corporations for whose benefit the county treasurer collects taxes, without proof that there remain in the treasury funds belonging to such organizations or corporations which might properly be applied to the extinguishment of such judgment: Ibid.

The board of supervisors has no authority to refund a road tax out of the county funds: Stone v. Woodbury County, 51-522.

Bridge taxes are to be collected and disbursed by the county and constitute a part of the county funds and should be refunded out of the county treasury: Dickey v. Polk County, 58-287.

Although a special tax cannot be refunded out of other taxes, yet where it was shown that there remained a sufficient amount in the treasury to refund out of a particular fund the amount illegally paid going to such fund, held, that a recovery was proper: Ibid.

Under similar provisions in a city charter, held, that taxes illegally exacted might be recovered back, although they had been paid over to the contractor who had made the improvements for which the tax was levied: Tallant v. Burlington, 39-543.

A special tax in aid of a railroad which has been paid over by the treasurer to the company cannot be refunded: Butler v. Board of Supervisors, 46-326.

In such case the tax cannot be refunded out of the county treasury, nor can the county devote other taxes collected for such company, and still in the treasury, to the paymegt of that illegally collected: Des Moines & M. R. Co. v. Lowry, 51-486.

A special tax voted in aid of a railway company should, when paid, be kept as a distinct fund subject to the rights of the company and taxpayer. In no event can the county acquire any beneficial interest therein, and the claim of the taxpayer to have such taxes refunded to him is a claim against the treasurer who has received the tax, and not against the county: Barnes v. Marshall County, 56-20.

The liability of the county for taxes illegally paid does not depend upon whether or not the money that has been collected has been paid out: Eyerly v. Supervisors of Jasper County, 77-470.

But this section has no application in cases where the tax is held as a trust fund for the benefit of a railroad and the money has been paid over: Ibid.

The board of supervisors can order the refunding of taxes only by the treasurer in office, not by a treasurer who has gone out of office. So held with reference to railroad aid taxes: Eyerly v. Board of Supervisors, 81-189.

The supervisors being authorized to require the treasurer to refund taxes illegally collected, a suit against the county for the recovery of such taxes cannot be maintained, the proper proceeding being against the officers to compel the proper action by them: Eyerly v. Jasper County, 72-149.

A claim against the county for refunding of taxes paid must be presented to the board of supervisors before action can be brought thereon whether such claim is liquidated or not: Bibbins v. Clark, 90-230.

The cause of action against the county for illegal or erroneous taxes paid accrues at the very moment of payment of taxes, if at that time the taxes are erroneous and illegal. The statute of limitations against such action commences to run then, and not from the time that the error or illegality is adjudicated: Callanan v. Madison County, 45-561; Hamilton v. Dubuque, 50-213; Scott v. Chickasaw County, 53-47.

A party cannot, by neglecting to demand the refunding of such tax, delay the running of the statute: Beecher v. Clay County, 52-140.

And the ignorance of plaintiff that the levy was illegal will not enable him to take advantage of the exception of the statute of limitations in case of fraud or mistake provided in § 3448: Ibid.

Where taxes have been paid but the land is sold by the treasurer for such taxes by mistake, the owner has five years from the discovery of the mistake in which to bring the action: Storm Lake Bank v. Buena Vista County, 66-128.

By the latter part of this section a sale for aggregate taxes, only a part of which are illegal and erroneous, is valid: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160: Parker v. Sexton, 29-421: Sulley v. Kuehl, 30-275; Hurley v. Powell, 31-64; Rhodes v. Sexton, 33-540; Genther v. Fuller, 36-604; Madson v. Sexton, 37-562.

A sale will be upheld if any portion of the tax for which the land is sold is valid; Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44-622; Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

As to recovery by person paying taxes on property, of which he is found not to be the owner, from the person who derives the benefit from such payment, see notes to § 1403.

SEC. 1418. Tax sale—when and how made. Annually, on the first Monday in December, the treasurer shall offer at his office at public sale all lands, town lots or other real property on which taxes of any description for the preceding year or years are delinquent, which sale shall be made for the total amount of taxes, interest and costs due and unpaid thereon. But in counties having two county seats and divided into two districts for the collection of taxes, such sale may be made by the deputy treasurer and the recorder or his deputy at the county seat where the taxes for the district are collected, and the records thereof shall be kept thereat. Such deputy treasurer and the recorder or his deputy shall have all the powers conferred by law upon the treasurer and auditor in relation to the collection of the revenue, sales for delinquent taxes, redemption therefrom, the execution of tax deeds thereunder, and every other matter connected therewith. [20 G. A., ch. 194, § 2; 15 G. A., ch. 46; C. '73, § 871; R., § 763; C. '51, § 496.]

Whence power derived: The tax warrant provided for in the Revision was not essential to the power to sell, the power of the treasurer in that respect being derived from the statute directly: Parker v. Sexton, 29-421; Johnson v. Chase, 30-308; Hurley v. Powell, 31-64; Rhodes v. Sexton, 33-540; Madson v. Sexton, 37-562; Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

The power to make a tax sale is not derived from the tax list but from the statute. Under previous statutes, held, that the tax warrant was a material step, and the legislature could not make a tax deed conclusive as to the existence of such warrant: Corbin v. Hill, 21-70.

Also, held, that the clerk could sign a tax warrant as acting county judge: Ibid.

Also, held, that it was not essential that it appear from the warrant when signed by the clerk in place of the county judge that the latter was absent or incapacitated from acting: Ibid.; Sully v. Kuehl, 30-275.

Under the act of 1847 sale for delinquent taxes could only take place in pursuance of a judgment in the district court against the land for taxes due and unpaid for the term of two years from the first of January next after the delinquent tax list had been filed in his office: Bleidorn v. Able, 6-5.

Under the statutory provision of 1858 a sale for taxes delinquent less than two years was invalid: Williams v. Gleason, 5-284.

Further as to previous statutes on the same subject, see Scott v. Babcock, 3 G. Gr., 133.

The treasurer of a newly organized county has no authority to collect taxes which were delinquent before the organization of the county, and has no power to sell the land for such delinquent taxes: Collins v. Storm, 75-36.

Repeal of statute: Where a statute authorizing sale for taxes is repealed without any clause preserving the provisions at the time existing for the collection of taxes levied and delinquent and the new law contains no provision for selling land for taxes previously delinquent, a sale after such repeal for previous delinquent taxes will be invalid: Bleidorn v. Able, 6-5.

A sale takes place under the law in force at the time it occurs, and the legislature may modify and change the provision as to sale for taxes already delinquent: Sully v. Kuehl, 30-275.

Taxes in fact paid: The delinquency of the owner to pay the taxes is an essential fact upon which the power of sale rests, and proof that the taxes were in fact paid may be made for the purpose of defeating the sale; but under statutes providing for the foreclosure of a tax title by action in court, held, that the owner was precluded by the decree from afterwards setting up and proving the fact of such payment: Gaylord v. Scarff, 6-179.

A tax deed made pursuant to a sale for taxes which had been paid prior to the sale conveys no title: Walton v. Gray, 29-440.

In such case the sale is void: Morris v. Sioux County, 42-416; Patton v. Luther, 47-236.

And this is so whether payment has been made by the owner or by one having no interest in the land; so where the taxes were paid by one holding under a tax sale subsequently declared void, and the tax thus paid for that year was refunded, held, that the property could not afterwards be sold for the taxes for that year: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Guthrie, 53-383.

Where the same property is assessed under two descriptions, the one to the owner, and the other to unknown owners, and the assessment to the owner is paid, a sale under the other assessment will be invalid. Rath v. Martin, 61 N. W., 941.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence showed that the tax for which the sale was made had been paid and the deed was therefore held void: Harber v. Sexton, 66-211.

In such case, held, that the holder of the tax title should be repaid by the holder of the legal title for taxes paid by him as the holder of such tax title, with six per cent. interest thereon from the time of payment, and that the right of recovery was not barred by the statutory limitation: Ibid.

Where a portion of the tax which should have been assessed upon certain real property was by mistake assessed as personal tax, and the part of the tax appearing as the part assessed against the property was paid, held, that a sale of such property for delinquent taxes due thereon was invalid. Capital City Gas Light Co. v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 51-31.

The fact that the owner pays the taxes and takes receipt after sale of the property therefor does not invalidate the sale nor prevent a deed from issuing to the purchaser: Jones v. Welsing, 52-220.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that taxes for the year for which sales in controversy were made belonged to Woodbury county and not to Sioux county, and consequently sales for such taxes by Sioux county were void and no titles passed thereunder: Hilliard v. Griffin, 72-331; Pitts v. Lewis, 81-51; Ellsworth v. Nelson, 81-57.

That a deed in pursuance of such sale is void, see § 1444 and notes.

For taxes not brought forward: Failure of the treasurer to enter on the tax list the fact of previous taxes being delinquent and unpaid, as required by § 1389, will render the sale for such delinquent taxes invalid and void. Such a sale is without authority and void, and yet it may be true that it would by lapse of time ripen into a perfect title: Gardner v. Early, 69-42.

It is the duty of the treasurer to sell for all the taxes of the years preceding which are due at the time of sale and the sale relieves the owner of the land from liability for any taxes already due not so included: Phillips v. Wilmarth, 66 N. W., 1053.

Failure to sell personal property: A failure of the treasurer to collect taxes by distress and sale of personal property, when he might do so, will not invalidate a subsequent sale of real property for such taxes: Stewart v. Corbin, 25-144.

The treasurer is not bound to seize and sell personal property for personal property tax, but he may sell real property therefor: Garrettson v. Scofield, 44-35.

Sale of personal property: The fact that lands have been advertised for sale for taxes does not prevent a sale of personal property to pay the same. If the lands, however, had been actually sold to pay the taxes, personal property could not be subjected to their payment: Emerick v. Sloan, 18-139.

Public sale: Where there was no offering for sale and no bidding, but the treasurer marked the land as sold, held, that there was no valid sale: Besore v. Dosh, 43-211.

A sale which is private instead of public is void, and is not such a one as is contemplated or required by the statute: Chandler v. Keeler, 46-596.

Where the treasurer on the date of the annual sale announced an adjournment from day to day, and posted notice of that fact, and several months afterward, without any intervening adjournment, and without further notice, sales were made to persons furnishing lists of land without publicly reading from the list or announcing the description, held, that the sale was not public and was void: Butler v. Delano, 42-350.

Where it appeared that lands were not bid off in separate parcels, nor publicly offered, but the sale was left open from day to day and not adjourned to any particular time, and there was no adjournment of the prior sale to the date at which the sale was claimed to have been made, which was not the legal date of sale, held, that the proof was sufficient to overcome the prima facie evidence of regularity presented by the deed, and that it sufficiently appeared that there was no sale and the deed was void: Thompson v. Ware, 43-455.

Where in such case it was shown that the agent of the purchaser applied at the treasurer's office and selected certain tracts of land which were marked and entered upon the books as having been sold to him and a certificate issued, held, that the sale was absolutely void, not being such a public sale as the statute requires: Miller v. Corbin, 46-150.

Where by arrangement between the treasurer and the land owner certificates were issued to the purchaser without any actual offering of the land or any payment of the taxes by the purchaser, held, that there was no sale: Hogdon v. Green, 56-733.

Where the sale was a public sale held in pursuance of law, and there was in fact a sale of the land in controversy without fraud, held, that an irregularity in the manner of sale and an error in the recital of the date on which it was made would not defeat the title acquired: Phelps v. Mead, 41-470.

Where there is something constituting a sale done at the proper time and place and in a public manner, the sale will not be deemed void, though irregular: Slocum v. Slocum, 70-259.

So held, where, at the proper time and place, the treasurer checked off to a party not present, but who had previously authorized him to do so, tracts of land as sold to such person and afterward issued to him a certificate therefor: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that although the evidence tended to show that no sale had been advertised to be held on the first Monday in October, and that the sale in question was not an adjourned sale, but that it was advertised to take place at the time it did, it was not void: Ibid.

That fraud of the officers, or of the purchaser, will avoid the sale, see § 1445 and notes.

For what taxes: There must be but one sale for the total amount of taxes due and unpaid. A second sale for taxes which were due, and delinquent at the time of a previous sale, would be void. Such taxes cease to be a lien: Preston v. Van Gorder, 31-250: Bowman v. Thompson, 36-505.

By a sale the lien of taxes for previous years is extinguished: see notes to § 1444. And this is true as well in favor of the owner who redeems from such sale as the purchaser: Hough v. Easley, 47–330.

The same property cannot be twice sold at the same sale for the taxes of two different years; Shoemaker v. Lacy, 38–277: S. C., 45–422.

The tax sale does not divest the owner of title, but it remains in him until the tax deed is executed. Williams v. Heath, 22–519; Lake v. Gray, 35–44.

Where taxes were levied by a county to which another county was annexed for taxing purposes, and afterwards the new county sold the land for the non-payment of such taxes, held, that the new county not having any right to collect the taxes, the sale was void, and the deed founded thereon conveyed no title: Hilliard v. Griffin, 72–331.

The fact that the land is not sold for all the delinquent taxes existing at the time of the sale is an irregularity merely which cannot defeat a sale after the execution and recording of the deed made in pursuance thereof: Kessey v. Connell, 68–430.

The provision of § 1425, for sale of land for a portion of the taxes due thereon, where, upon being offered for two years for the whole amount of the taxes due, it has remained unsold for want of bidders, does not imply that a sale in other cases for a portion of the tax delinquent at the time of the sale will be invalid: Ibid.

A subsequent sale for taxes subsequently becoming delinquent will not divest the rights of a previous purchaser unless a deed is issued in pursuance of such subsequent sale. If such sale is redeemed from, the rights of the prior tax purchaser remain unaffected: Gray v. Coan, 30–536.

Redemption from a subsequent tax sale will not defeat the lien of a prior sale: Gray v. Coan, 40–327.

Sale for taxes, a part of which are legal, is valid: See notes to § 1417.

Subsequent sale: The power to sell lands for delinquent taxes is not limited to the sale at which such lands are first subject to be sold for such taxes, but may be exercised at any subsequent sale: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40–66.

Where two tax sales are made of the same property for the same taxes, and the first is void on account of fraud committed at such sale, a second sale may be valid: Mallory v. French, 44–133.

A second sale for railroad taxes is legal: Cowell v. Merrill, 60–53.

A tax deed for property sold for state and county taxes does not convey to the purchaser a title free from the lien of unpaid city taxes, nor does the city tax deed, made in pursuance of a sale for city taxes of one year, divest the lien of the city for taxes for prior years: Dennison v. Keokuk, 45–266.

As to the tracts in which the sale shall be made, see § 1422 and notes.

As to sufficiency of description, see notes to § 1442.

SEC. 1419. Notice. Notice of the time and place of such sale shall be given by the treasurer, and shall contain a description of each separate tract to be sold as taken from the tax list, the amount of taxes for which it is liable delinquent for each year, and the amount of penalty, interest and costs thereon, the name of the owner, if known, or the person, if any, to whom it is taxed, by publication in some newspaper in the county for three consecutive weeks, the last of which shall be at least one week before the day of sale, and by immediately posting a copy of the first publication thereof at the door of the court-house, if there be one, if not, at the door of the place where the last term of district court was held. The compensation for such publication shall not exceed twenty cents for each description, and shall be paid by the county. The amount paid therefor shall be collected as a part of the costs of sale and paid into the county treasury. If the treasurer can not procure the publication of the notice for the sum herein fixed, then the notice may be given by posting the same in four of the most public places in the county, to be selected by him, for four weeks, and filing a copy thereof with the auditor before the day of sale, with his verified statement thereon that it had been posted as and for the time herein required, and that he could not obtain a publication thereof at the legal rate. [20 G. A., ch. 194, § 3; C.'73, §§ 872–4, 3833; R., § 764; C.'51, § 498.]

Land should be advertised in the same tracts or parcels in which it is entered in the tax book and assessed: Corbin v. De Wolf, 25–124; McClintock v. Sutherland, 35–487; and should be sold and deeded by the same description as set out in the advertisement: Martin v. Cole, 38–141.

Town lots situated in the same block and lying contiguous may be assessed at a gross amount and advertised together: McClintock v. Sutherland, 35–487.

Under the provisions of a former statute requiring the treasurer in advertising lands taxed to unknown owners to embrace the largest quantity practicable in the description, held, that a sale in pursuance of advertising in that manner was valid: Henderson v. Oliver, 32–512.

The treasurer should so advertise as to incur as little expense as possible consistently with a due compliance with the law; therefore, held, that the whole or a part of a section of land in a contiguous body belonging to the same owner should be advertised as one tract and not in its smallest subdivisions: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39–124; Cedar

This was formerly the provision also as to land assessed to unknown owners, but this provision was omitted in the Code of '73, the Code commissioners saying that it "is entirely inconsistent with the settled policy of our law in regard to such sales, under the decision of the supreme court 'that lands are to be advertised and sold under the descriptions and in the tracts or parcels in which they are entered in the tax book:'" See Code Com'rs' Rep. of '73.

Property is to be advertised but once, and the sale of such as is advertised may be made at a sale held any time thereafter pursuant to adjournments regularly made: Hurley v. Street, 29–429.

An omission to include certain lands in the advertisement, held not sufficient to defeat a deed made in pursuance of a sale thereof, the owner being bound to know that his taxes are delinquent: Shawler v. Johnson, 52–472.

The publisher of a newspaper cannot by mandamus compel the publication of the advertisement of sales in his newspaper, though it be the only one in the county: Welch v. Board of Supervisors, 23–199.

The tax deed is conclusive as to fact of advertisement: See notes to § 1444.

SEC. 1420. Certificate of publication. The treasurer shall obtain a copy of the notice of sale, with a certificate of the publication thereof, from the printer or publisher, and file it in the office of the auditor, which certificate shall be substantially in the following form:

I, A ..... B....., publisher (or printer) of the ....., a newspaper printed and published in the county of ..... and state of Iowa, do hereby certify that the foregoing notice and list were published in said newspaper once in each week for three successive weeks, the last of which publications was made on the ..... day of ....., A. D....., and that copies of each number of said paper in which said notice and list were published were delivered by carrier or transmitted by mail to each of the subscribers to said paper, according to the accustomed mode of business in this office.

A..... B.....

STATE OF IOWA, }
..... County. } SS.

The above certificate of publication was subscribed and sworn to before me by the above named A..... B....., who is personally known to me to be the identical person described therein, on the..... day of....., A. D. .....

[C. '73, 881; R., § 771.] Auditor ..... County, Iowa.

A failure to comply with the provisions of this section does not invalidate the tax deed: Hurley v. Powell, 31–64.

SEC. 1421. Advertisement. In all entries required to be made by the auditor, treasurer or other officer, letters and figures may be used to denote townships, ranges, sections, parts of sections, lots, blocks, date, and the amount of taxes, interest and costs. No irregularity or informality in the advertisement shall affect the legality of the sale or the title to any real estate conveyed by the treasurer's deed under this chapter, and in all cases its provisions shall be sufficient notice to the owners of the sale thereof. [C. '73, § 880; R., § 770.]

SEC. 1422. Offer for sale. The treasurer shall on the day of the sale, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at his office, offer for sale, separately, each tract or parcel of real estate advertised for sale on which the taxes and costs shall not have been paid. [C. '73, § 875; R., § 765; C. '51, § 499.]

The sale should be in the same tracts or parcels in which the land is assessed and advertised: Martin v. Cole, 38–141.

Where the owners of land are known its assessment in larger tracts than the smallest government subdivision is authorized, and a sale in the tract in which it is thus assessed will be valid: Corbin v. De Wolf, 25–124; Stewart v. Corbin, 25–144; Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27–160; Bulkley v. Callanan, 32–461; Smith v. Easton, 37–584.

Where the law authorizes the assessment of land in larger subdivisions than forty-acre tracts it may be so sold: Ware v. Thompson, 29–65; Johnson v. Chase, 30–308.

Under a former statutory provision requiring the advertisement of land assessed to unknown owners, to be made in the largest practicable quantities, held, that in such cases an entire section might be advertised, sold and deeded in one tract, the term parcel or tract being properly applicable to the whole section: Martin v. Cole, 38–141.

Where the use and nature of lots require them to be regarded as one parcel the law will so treat them, and the sale of such property as one lot will be held valid: Weaver v. Grant, 39–294.

Although a sale in gross of two separate tracts of land is prima facie void, and a deed made thereon showing such fact is also void upon its face, yet such sale and deed may be supported and shown to be valid by evidence that the two tracts were occupied and used as one parcel and for one purpose: Greer v. Wheeler, 41–85.

Where lands were sold en masse, held, that the objection that the sale was void on that account should not be considered upon appeal, where no objection was made in the petition attacking the tax title, and no relief was asked for upon that ground: Wallace v. Berger, 25–456.

As to deed of lands sold in gross, see notes to § 1444.

SEC. 1423. Bid—purchaser. The person who offers to pay the amount of taxes which are a lien on any parcel of land or town lot for the smallest portion thereof shall be the purchaser, and when such purchaser shall designate the portion of any tract of land or town lot for which he will pay the whole amount of taxes for which it may be sold, the portion thus designated shall be an undivided portion. [C. '73, § 876; R., § 766; C. '51, § 501.]

Purchase by county: A county cannot become the purchaser of lands at tax sale: Bruck v. Broesigks, 18–393.

Bid: Under this section the bid of a purchaser is to be for an undivided portion of the entire tract, if for less than the whole, and he acquires that undivided interest in the whole tract: Brundige v. Maloney, 52–218:

Therefore, held, that an offer to pay taxes on a forty-acre tract offered for sale for "fourteen acres" was so uncertain as to render void a deed executed in conformity with such bid, and a notice given in pursuance thereof: Poindexter v. Doolittle, 54–52.

An undivided interest cannot be sold for taxes on the whole property: Cragin v. Henry, 40–158.

The sale of an undivided interest in land on which the taxes remain unpaid, the taxes having been paid upon the other undivided interest, is competent and proper: Peirce v. Weare, 41–378.

Where it appears that the sale is not for the whole amount of the tax it will be presumed in support of the deed, that the sale was made under the provisions of § 1425: Griffin v. Tuttle, 74–219.

Where the tax-sale record showed that certain bids upon lands sold for taxes were for fractions of the tracts, held, that the law would regard them as undivided interests, although from the list of lands advertised for sale it appeared that the bids were for acres and fractional parts of acres: Jenswold v. Doran, 77–692.

Description: Where the description of property to be sold was indefinite, held, that the owner of the land could not make objection, on that ground, to the sale of the premises for a valid tax: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v Spearman, 12–112.

Sale by a municipal corporation for taxes, held invalid for the reason that the register of sales and the officer's certificate indicated that there was not a sufficient description of the property: Vaughan v. Stone, 55–213.

A description of property sold for taxes which does not designate what part of the property is sold is insufficient: Cornoy v. Welmore, 92–100.

But held that an insufficient description as to one tract would not vitiate the sale as to other tracts included in the same deed which were taxed separately: Ibid.

Further as to description see notes to § 1442.

Sale of homestead: Under a prior provision exempting the homestead from liability for any taxes except those due upon it exclusively, neither an officer making a tax sale nor the person purchasing thereat could extend the liability of the homestead by a sale and purchase of it in connection with other lands: Penn v. Clemans, 19–372.

Two or more lots jointly composing the homestead may be sold as one tract, and the sale will not be invalid as being in mass: Weaver v. Grant, 39–294.

Unless the homestead was listed separately all the taxes against the owner became liens thereon as upon any other real property: Salter v. Burlington, 42–531.

[The provision of § 876 of Code of '73 by which the homestead if separately listed was only liable for the taxes thereon, seems not to be retained.]

SEC. 1424. Sale continued. The treasurer shall continue the sale from day to day as long as there are bidders, or until the taxes are all paid. [C. '73, § 877; R., § 767; C. '51, § 499.]

Whether it was illegal or even improper for the treasurer to regard all sales made under a continuance as of the date of the commencement of such sale, quære: Phelps v. Meade, 41–470; and the deed is conclusive that continuances were properly made, etc.: See notes to § 1444.

As to adjournments and sales on the first Mondays of subsequent months, see §§ 1428 and 1431.

SEC. 1425. Sale of property remaining unsold. Each treasurer shall, on the day of the regular tax sale each year or any adjournment thereof, offer and sell at public sale, to the highest bidder, all real estate which remains liable to sale for delinquent taxes, and shall have previously been advertised and offered for two years or more and remained unsold for want of bidders, general notice of such sale being given at the same time and in the same manner as that given of the regular sale. Any taxes on such real estate, in excess of the amount for which the same was sold, shall be credited to the treasurer by the auditor as unavailable, and he shall apportion such excess among the funds to which it belongs, and if any of such excess belongs to the state, it shall be reported by him to the auditor of state as unavailable, who shall give the county credit therefor. [20 G. A., ch. 194, § 6; 16 G. A., ch. 79, §§ 1, 3.]

The deed being presumptive evidence that the sale was lawfully made it will be presumed that the sale was made under the provision of this section if it appears to have been for less than the whole amount of taxes due: Griffin v. Tuttle, 74-219.

A sale of this kind for taxes not brought forward is invalid as in other cases of tax sale in violation of § 1389: Paxton v. Ross, 89-661.

As to redemption from such sales see §1437.

SEC. 1426. Resale. The person purchasing any parcel or part thereof shall forthwith pay to the treasurer the amount bid, and on failure to do so the same shall at once be again offered as if no such sale had been made. Such payments may be made in the funds receivable in payment of taxes. [C.'73, § 878; R., § 768; C. '51, § 502.]

SEC. 1427. Record of sales. The auditor shall attend all sales of real estate for taxes, and keep a record thereof in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, therein describing each tract of real estate on which the taxes and costs were paid by the purchaser as they are described in the copy of the notice on file in his office, stating in separate columns the amount, as obtained from the treasurer's tax list, of each kind of tax, interest and costs for each tract, how much and what part of each parcel was sold, to whom, and date thereof. The treasurer shall also keep a book of sales in which he shall make the same record. He shall also note in the tax list, opposite the description of the property sold, the fact and date thereof. [C.'73, § 882; R., § 772.]

The record of sales is receivable in evidence: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356, 375; Chandler v. Keeler, 46-596.

A failure to make the record of the fact of sale as here required will not enable a subsequent purchaser at an execution sale to take title paramount to that of the tax purchaser, where the tax deed is recorded prior to the execution sale; but if such deed was not recorded, and the purchaser at execution sale had no notice, actual or otherwise, it would seem that he would be protected: Negus v. Yancy, 23-417.

SEC. 1428. Sale adjourned. When all the real estate advertised for sale has been offered, and a part remains unsold for want of bidders, the treasurer shall adjourn the sale to some day not exceeding two months from adjournment, due notice of which day shall be given at the time thereof, and by keeping such notice posted in a conspicuous place in his office, and no further notice shall be necessary. On the day fixed by the adjournment, the same proceedings shall be had as in the first instance. Further adjournment shall be made from time to time, not exceeding two months, and the sales thus continued until the next regular annual sale, or until all the taxes are paid. [20 G. A., ch. 194, § 4; C. '73, § 883; R., § 773.]

While it may not be essential to the validity of a sale made at an adjournment to show that a record of the adjournment has been made, still it is proper that such an entry should be made on the register of sales, and the fact that no such entry appears thereon is a circumstance tending to show that there was no such adjournment. It is proper, therefore, on such a question, to admit the register of sales in evidence: Chandler v. Keeler, 46-596.

A written memorandum of the adjournment of a sale kept by the treasurer is not a record, and is incompetent to overthrow the presumption of regularity raised by the deed: Clark v. Thompson, 37-536.

An averment in an answer attacking the validity of a tax sale, that it was made on a day not authorized by law, precludes the supposition that it may have been made on a day authorized by reason of adjournment: Plympton v. Supp, 55-195.

The tax deed is conclusive that continuances were properly made: See notes to § 1444.

As to sales on the first Monday of succeeding months, see § 1431 and notes.

SEC. 1429. Penalty for misconduct of officers. Any treasurer or auditor failing to attend a sale of lands in person or by deputy shall forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred dollars, to be recovered in an action in the name of the county and for its use. If such officer or deputy shall sell or assist in selling any real estate, knowing it is not subject to taxation, or that the taxes for which it is sold have been paid, or shall knowingly and wilfully sell or assist in selling any real estate for taxes to defraud the owner thereof, or shall knowingly and wilfully execute a deed for property so sold, he shall, upon conviction, be fined in a sum of not less than one thousand nor more than three thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year,, or both fined and imprisoned, and shall be liable to pay the injured party all damages sustained by him on account thereof, and all such sales shall be void. [C. '73, § 884; R., § 774.]

SEC. 1430. Fraud of officers. If any treasurer or auditor shall be directly or indirectly concerned in the purchase of any real estate sold for the non-payment of taxes, he and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond for all damages sustained by the owner of such property, and all such sales shall be void. In addition thereto, the officer so offending shall, upon conviction, be fined in a sum of not more than one thousand dollars. [C. '73, § 885; R., § 775.]

The act of the treasurer in bidding off land as the agent of another for compensation constitutes sufficient fraud to invalidate the deed: Corbin v. Beebee, 36–336.

And where a party sent a sum of money to the treasurer with instructions to bid off for him the amount sent, for which services he was to be paid a commission, and the sale was thus made, held, that the treasurer was "concerned in the purchase," and the sale was void: Everett v. Beebee, 37–452.

Where it appeared that land was marked on the record of the tax sale as sold to a party who was not present and did not bid, and did not have knowledge of nor consent to the sale, and the certificate of sale was issued in the name of that party, but retained by the deputy treasurer making the sale, and afterward an assignment by such party to him was procured, and it appeared that the name of the party was used to enable the officer to acquire title, held, that the sale was void for fraud: Ellis v. Peck, 45–112.

Where the deputy treasurer as guardian of a minor son caused property to be bought in at a tax sale, and paid the amount of the bid out of the funds of such minor, causing a certificate of purchase to be assigned to him, held, that he was so far concerned in the purchase as to render the sale void: Kirk v. St. Thomas Church, 70–287.

The act of an employe in the treasurer's office in bidding in land for another in which he afterwards acquired an interest, he being at the time of the bid not a deputy, but merely employed in clerical services, held, not sufficient to render the sale invalid: Lorain v. Smith, 37–67.

In view of the lapse of time in a particular case and the expiration of the five-year limitation, held, that it was too late to question the right of the treasurer to buy in the certificate of a tax sale, and execute a deed to himself: Guthrie v. Harker, 27 Fed., 586.

Evidence in a particular case, held, insufficient to show fraud in a sale made twenty-two years before the action to set it aside was brought: Easton v. Doolittle, 69 N. W., 672.

Where the sale is void as provided in the last clause of this section, for fraud, the owner may set up and show such fraud to defeat the tax title in any action in which the holder thereof relies upon such title: Corbin v. Beebee, 36–336.

Where a combination of purchasers at the sale to defeat a tax title is relied on the burden is on the person resisting the title to show the alleged combination: Krueger v. Walker, 63 N. W., 320.

The word "void" is here used in the sense of voidable. A tax deed which might be void for fraud in the hands of the original purchaser will be good in the hands of a subsequent purchaser in good faith without notice of the fraud: Ellis v. Peck, 45–112.

The limitation of actions attacking tax titles (§ 1448) is applicable to an action attacking a deed for fraud of officers at the sale: Lawrence v. Hornick, 81–193; Waggoner v. Mann, 83–17.

And further as to fraud of officers or purchasers and the effect thereof, see § 1445 and notes.

SEC. 1431. Subsequent sale. If from neglect of officers to make returns, or other good cause, real estate cannot be advertised and offered for sale on the first Monday of December, the treasurer shall make the sale on the first Monday of the next succeeding month in which the required notice can be given. [C. '73, § 886; R., § 776.]

A deed reciting a sale as made on the first Monday of a subsequent month to that on which the regular sale is directed to be made by statute will not be deemed void as showing a sale at a time not authorized by law: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27–160.

A tax sale held subsequently to the first Monday in October will not be void although there is no record of a sale being commenced on the date required by law, nor of an adjournment from that date to the actual date of sale: Easton v. Savery, 44–654.

Where it appears from the deed that the sale was made on the first Monday of some month subsequent to October, it will be presumed that a proper cause existed for holding the sale at such time. The reason therefor need not appear of record: Ibid.; Sully v. Kuehl, 30–275; Love v. Welch, 33–192.

If the non-existence of these conditions can in any event be shown to defeat the tax title, the burden of proof is upon the party who assails it: Love v. Welch, 33–192.

SEC. 1432. Certificate of purchase. The treasurer shall prepare, sign, and deliver to the purchaser of any real estate sold for the non-payment of taxes a certificate of purchase, describing it as shown in the record of sales, giving the part of each tract or lot sold, the amount of each kind of tax, interest and costs for each tract or lot as described in such record, and that payment has been made therefor. If any person is the purchaser of more than one parcel, he may have the whole included in one certificate, but each parcel shall be separately described. [C.'73, § 887; R., § 777; C.'51, § 503.]

The certificate does not pass the title to the purchaser, but it remains in the owner until the execution of a deed: Williams v. Heath, 22–519; Lake v. Gray, 35–44.

The purchaser of land at tax sale acquires no right or interest therein until he receives a deed. While the property is subject to redemption he has but a chattel interest, and such interest does not pass by an attempted conveyance of the property itself: Rice v. Bates, 68–393.

The certificate of purchase simply gives the purchaser a lien for the taxes, interest, costs and penalties, etc.: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27–160; Mallory v. French, 38–431.

A certificate issued under a tax sale which omitted the name of the town or addition, but was correct in other particulars, held, competent and sufficient to prove that said premises were redeemed, in an action of right based upon such redemption: Rice v. Nelson, 27–148.

The fact that the description of the land in the tax list and in the certificate is so indefinite and uncertain that no title passes, does not entitle the purchaser to a refunding from the county of the amount paid. The tax purchaser buys at his own risk: Lindsey v. Boone County, 92–86. And as to description see § 1442.

The certificate is evidence of the facts recited therein, but in case it is found to be in conflict with the record of sales the latter will prevail: McCready v. Sexton, 29–356, 374; Henderson v. Oliver, 32–512.

Where the holder of a certificate of purchase at tax sale brought action for waste in removing a building from the premises sold, and got judgment which was made a lien upon the building and the premises to which it had been removed, held, that his lien upon the building thereby became junior to that of a mortgagee taking his mortgage subsequently to the sale but before judgment: Phillips v. Myers, 55–265.

The owner of the certificate may recover treble damages for waste or trespass: See §§ 4311, 4312.

The tax certificate and the stub book are sufficient evidence as to the amount paid at the tax sale: Cornoy v. Wetmore, 92–100.

SEC. 1433. Assignment. The certificate of purchase shall be assignable by indorsement, and an assignment thereof shall vest in the assignee or his legal representatives all the right and title of the original purchaser; and the statement in the treasurer's deed of the fact of the assignment shall be presumptive evidence thereof. In case the certificate is assigned, the assignment shall be noted in the register of tax sales in the treasurer's office. [C.'73, § 888; R., § 778.]

A certificate of purchase at tax sale possesses none of the peculiar characteristics of negotiable paper, and the transferee is not protected as the indorsee of such instruments: Watson v. Phelps, 40–482.

One who takes by assignment a certificate of purchase of property at a tax sale acquires no greater right than the purchaser at the sale, and as to all the infirmities thereof stands in the shoes of the purchaser: Light v. West, 42–138; Besore v. Dosh, 43–211.

An assignee by indorsement of the certificate without notice of a prior transfer thereof acquires a better title thereunder than one who had previously taken the assignment of such original certificate: Griswold v. Wilson, 36–156.

Where the purchaser at tax sale did not pay the amount bid, but such amount was subsequently paid by another, and an assignment of the certificate by the bidder was thereupon procured to be made to such third person, held, that the bidder had no interest in the sale, and that the fact that prior to the assignment he had executed a deed for the property covered thereby under another title would not defeat the claim of the assignee of the certificate: Lloyd v. Bunce, 41–660.

Under the provision of the Revision of 1860, which did not require the recording of the assignment of a tax certificate, held, that the assignee from the tax purchaser after the assignment of such certificate to another was not protected: Smith v. Stevenson, 45–645.

Assignment of the certificate of purchase to a person who has purchased the property subsequently to the sale amounts to a redemption: Bowman v. Eckstien, 46–583.

A certificate of purchase of tax sale in the hands of an assignee is chargeable with all the defenses that would effect it in the possession of the original holder: Doud v. Blood, 89–237.

A purchase of such certificate by one who was under obligations to pay the taxes for which the sale was made amounts to a redemption from such sale and no tax title can be acquired thereunder: Ibid.

The fact that a party who has no right to redeem procures an assignment of the certificate of purchase under the representation that he is entitled to and will redeem, but does not do so, will not entitle persons adversely claiming title to any relief: Curtis v. Smith, 42–665.

The statute does not make the record of the assignment constructive notice of the rights of the assignee. The owner of the property may effect redemption by contract with the holder of the certificate instead of in the mode pointed out by statute. But if he elects to take that course he must know at his peril that the person with whom he deals is the owner of the certificate: Swan v. Whaley, 75–623.

If the treasurer executes a deed to the person entitled to the certificate of purchase, it will be valid though no written assignment is recorded: Ibid.

Where at the time a certificate was assigned there appeared indorsed thereon an agreement not to sell or transfer it, nor procure a treasurer's deed under it, the assignor having already sold and conveyed the same premises by warranty deed, held, that the title under such conveyance was superior to that acquired by a tax deed taken by the assignee of the certificate: Soukup v. Union Inv. Co., 84–448.

A valid indorsement in blank of the certificate and the possession thereof by another than the purchaser is presumptive evidence of the assignment of such certificate: American Exchange Nat. Bank v. Crooks, 66 N. W., 168.

The statement in the treasurer's deed of the fact of the assignment is presumptive evidence thereof: Ibid.

SEC. 1434. Payment of subsequent taxes. The treasurer shall also prepare, sign, and deliver to the purchaser of any real estate sold for taxes duplicate receipts for taxes, interest and costs paid by him after the date of his purchase for any subsequent year or years, one of which receipts shall be filed in the office of the auditor and noted on the register of sales therein. If such duplicate receipt is not so filed before redemption, such tax shall not be a lien upon the land, and the person paying the tax shall not be entitled to recover it of the owner of the real estate. [C.'73, § 889.]

Where the duplicate receipt for subsequent taxes paid by the tax purchaser is not filed, etc., the owner may redeem without paying such taxes: Kennedy v. Bigelow, 43–74.

This provision as to filing duplicate receipts does not apply to payment of taxes by purchaser or owner of the land after the execution of the tax deed: Barke v. Early, 72–273.

The purchaser cannot pay taxes for years previous to the sale which have not been included in the amount for which the property was sold, and thereby compel the owner, in redeeming, to pay such taxes: Sheppard v. Clark, 58–371.

These provisions as to filing the duplicate tax receipts are not applicable as to taxes paid after issuance of the deed: Thode v. Spofford, 65–294; Elliott v. Parker, 72–746.

Taxes paid by the purchaser after redemption is made by the owner cannot be recovered, and if he pays them upon the supposition that the redemption is illegal he does so at his peril: Byington v. Allen, 11–3; Byington v. Walsh, 11–27.

A purchaser of property exempt from taxation acquires no such interest by such purchase as will give him the right to a lien for taxes paid for subsequent years, though the property has passed to a third person who cannot claim the exemption: Byington v. Wood, 12–479.

Where tax purchaser paid personal taxes of the owner which were a lien upon the land purchased, but his tax title was found to be defective on account of insufficient description of the premises, held, that he was not entitled to recover from the county the subsequent tax thus paid. Such payment must be deemed voluntary: Lindsey v. Boone County, 92–86.

As to recovery of taxes paid under a sale which is not valid, see notes to §§ 1444, 1446.

SEC. 1435. School, agricultural college or university land. When any school, agricultural college or university land sold on credit is sold for taxes, the purchaser shall only acquire the interest of the original purchaser therein, and no sale of any such lands for taxes shall prejudice the rights of the state, agricultural college or university. In all cases where the real estate is mortgaged or otherwise encumbered to the school, agricultural college or university fund, the interest of the person who holds the fee shall alone be sold for taxes, and in no case shall the lien or interest of the state be affected by any sale thereof. The foregoing provision shall include all lands exempt from taxation by law, and any legal or equitable estate therein held, possessed, or claimed for any public purpose, and no assessment or taxation of such lands, nor the payment of any such tax by any person, or the sale and conveyance for taxes of any such lands, shall in any manner affect the right or title of the public therein, or confer upon the purchaser or person who pays such taxes any right or interest in such land. [25 G. A., ch. 110, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 169, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 101, §§ 1, 2.]

As against a mortgage to the school or university fund, only the interest of the person holding the fee-title can be sold for taxes: Crum v. Cotting, 22–411.

Such purchaser takes subject to the mortgage: Jasper County v. Rogers, 17–254.

And acquires only the right to redeem from such mortgage: State v. Shaw, 28–67, 76.

The state purchasing at foreclosure sale under such mortgage takes free from the lien of delinquent taxes, and a conveyance from it passes title to the purchaser discharged from such liens: Helphrey v. Ross, 19–40; Miller v. Gregg, 26–75.

Any purchaser at a foreclosure sale under such mortgage, equally with the state, takes free from the lien of delinquent taxes: Lovelace v. Berryhill, 36–379.

A purchaser at tax sale of premises covered by a school-fund mortgage has a lien thereon junior to that of the mortgage, and in an action to foreclose the school-fund mortgage must be made a party or his right of redemption will not be extinguished: Ayers v. Adair County, 61–728.

Where real estate is mortgaged to the school fund, the interest of the person who holds the fee shall alone be sold for the taxes, and the lien or interest of the school fund is not affected by such sale: Winnebago County v. Brones, 68–682.

A mortgage designed to be a security to the university fund is within the provisions of the statute relating to the sales of land in such cases, whether made directly to the institution or to its proper officer: Lovelace v. Berryhill, 36–379.

Where the surety of a note given for the purchase of school lands, who has a mortgage thereon for security, buys in the land at foreclosure sale under such mortgage, he acquires a title free from claims of a purchaser at the tax sale: La Rue v. King, 74–288.

SEC. 1436. Redemption—how effected. Real estate sold under the provisions of this chapter may be redeemed at any time before the right of redemption is cut off, by the payment to the auditor, to be held by him subject to the order of the purchaser, of the amount for which the same was sold and eight per cent. of such amount added as a penalty, with eight per cent. interest per annum on the whole amount thus made from the day of sale, and the amount of all taxes, interest and costs paid by the purchaser or his assignee for any subsequent year or years, with a similar penalty added as before on the amount of the payment for each subsequent year, and eight per cent. per annum on the whole of such amount or amounts from the day or days of payment; but the penalty for non-payment of taxes of any subsequent year or years shall not attach, unless the same shall have remained unpaid until the first day of March after they become due and have become delinquent, nor shall said penalties apply to taxes voted in aid of the construction of any railroad. In redeeming from a sale of a leasehold interest in agricultural college land, the amount to be paid shall include any amount paid by the holder of the certificate as interest or principal due by the terms of the lease or otherwise to prevent a forfeiture thereof, as provided by law, and for which proper voucher shall have been filed with the auditor, with interest thereon at eight per cent. per annum from date of payment, which amount shall be paid by the auditor to the holder of the certificate, and the certificate of redemption shall show the amount so paid by the party redeeming. [19 G. A., ch. 45; C. '73, § 890; R., § 779; C. '51, § 505.]

Redemption of whole: Where a party, by reason of owning any interest in the property, has a right to redeem, he may redeem the whole, and the purchaser may require him to redeem the whole, if any: Curl v. Watson, 25–35; Rice v. Nelson, 27–148.

Redemption of part: A sale of several distinct subdivisions or parcels of land in gross is irregular, and neither the officer who makes the sale nor the purchaser thereat will be permitted to take advantage of such wrongful act so as to defeat the right of redemption to a portion of the land so sold: Penn v. Clemans, 19–372.

In such case the purchaser or the officer has the right to receive only the amount pro rata paid at the sale with the penalty and interest thereon, and this, too, whether the property was assessed and taxed for more or less than its actual or relative value: Ibid.

The owner of an undivided interest in property cannot be required to pay the taxes due upon the whole property, and if a sale is made for taxes upon the whole he may redeem his interest: Cragin v. Henry, 40-158.

Amount to be paid: Where the proper notice is not given of the expiration of the period of redemption, and the owner subsequently seeks to make redemption, the amount to be paid is the amount for which the land was sold and the penalties and interest provided by law. The fact that part of the taxes to be included in the amount to be paid in making redemption were paid more than five years before the time of redemption will not relieve the owner from the obligation to pay them. The redemption is from the sale and not from the claim for taxes: Long v. Smith, 67-22.

The owner in redeeming must pay the penalty upon the taxes paid by the purchaser subsequently to the sale, as well as upon the amount paid at the sale: Mulligan v. Hintrager, 18-171.

Under former provisions, held, that the holder of a certificate of purchase was not entitled to receive repayment of city taxes paid by him upon the property, but that the provision as to repayment of taxes paid by the purchaser related only to state and county taxes: Byington v. Rider, 9-566.

Where land was sold for a portion only of the taxes delinquent at the time of the sale, and the purchaser immediately thereafter paid the balance of the delinquent taxes, held, that the party redeeming must pay to the purchaser the amount of such taxes paid by him with six per cent. interest: Kessey v. Connell, 68-430.

Where the duplicate receipt for subsequent taxes paid by the tax purchaser is not filed, etc., the owner may redeem without paying such taxes: Kennedy v. Bigelow, 43-74.

Redemption can only be made by payment of the amount required by law. The auditor cannot issue a certificate which shall have the effect to cut off the right of the holder of the certificate of purchase when no money is paid. Therefore, held, that where the board of supervisors directed the auditor to draw a warrant upon the county treasurer for a sum sufficient to redeem the property of a pauper from tax sale, and the auditor, without having issued such warrant or received any money for the redemption, issued a certificate of redemption of the land to the county, such certificate was not valid: Reeves v. Bremer County, 73-165.

The provisions of this section and of § 1434 are simply that when a person entitled to redeem has paid to the auditor the amount necessary to effect the redemption as shown by the duplicate receipts on file in the auditor's office, the redemption is completed, and no other claim can be asserted against him or the land for taxes which have been paid by the purchaser of the property. But these provisions have no application to cases in which the redemption is effected by suit in equity, in which case the redemptioner is required to pay the interest and penalty provided by this section on each installment of taxes which has been paid by the purchaser, although, such taxes being paid after the issuance of the deed, no certificate thereof has been filed with the auditor: Slyfield v. Barnum, 71-245.

Where the owner applying to the auditor to redeem paid the amount stated by the officer to be necessary, held, that such redemption was effectual although the amount was by mistake of the officer less than required, and the redemptioner refused on subsequent application to pay the balance: Hintrager v. Mahoney, 78-537.

Where the holder of a tax certificate advised the owner as to the amount necessary to redeem, and received that amount from the owner, held, that his rights under the certificate would thereby terminate, and no valid tax title could be acquired by him or his assignees: Hunt v. Seymour, 76-751.

Where the officer receives an amount less than that required to make redemption and that amount is accepted by the purchaser, he can not afterwards recover from the redemptioner. Darrow v. Union County, 87-164.

Effect of redemption: The sale of land for taxes does not divest the title of the owner, and if redemption is made the title remains free from such lien in all respects as if the taxes had been paid before sale: Lake v. Gray, 35-44.

Redemption by one lienholder inures to the benefit of all, and after the redemption is made the title and liens stand in the same manner as though no sale had taken place: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Redemption from a subsequent tax sale does not defeat the lien of a prior sale: Gray v. Coan, 30-536; S. C., 40-327.

Certificate of purchase; rights of holder: Until the execution of a tax deed the title to the property remains in the original owner, even though the period of redemption has expired without redemption being made, and such owner may maintain ejectment against the holder of a tax certificate whose title has not been perfected by the issuance of a deed: Williams v. Heath, 22-519.

Assignment of certificate; redemption by claimant of property: The assignment of a certificate of purchase to a tenant in common, or the husband of such tenant in possession receiving rents and profits, and therefore under obligation to pay the taxes, amounts to a redemption: Burns v. Byrne, 45-285.

The assignment of a tax certificate during the period for redemption to one who has purchased the land subsequently to the sale amounts to a redemption, and such purchaser does not hold the land free from the lien of prior taxes not included in such sale: Bowman v. Eckstien, 46-583.

Where one of two tenants in common in real property bid off the same for much less than the amount of taxes due, and afterwards conveyed his interest to his co-tenant and assigned to him his tax certificate, held, that money paid by the latter in satisfaction of the amount paid by his co-tenant and subsequent taxes, with the purpose of making redemption, and paid back to him as holder of the certificate, could be recovered from him by the county: Emmet County v. Griffin, 73-163.

The procuring of a tax title by one under obligation to satisfy the taxes will be deemed a redemption from the sale: Beacham v. Gurney, 91–621.

By agreement: It is competent for a tax purchaser and the land owner to agree that redemption may be made after the time when the right of redemption has expired, and as to the rate of interest to be paid upon making such redemption: Shoemaker v. Porter, 41–197.

Where a similar provision was found in the charter of a city, held, that no right of action accrued against the auditor until he received the money under the arrangement for redemption, and that the fact that such money was received from a predecessor in office would not allow him to interpose the bar of the statute of limitations by reason of an action not having been brought against such predecessor: Hintrager v. Richter, 85–222.

And in such case, held, that the city might enter into a compromise with the taxpayer for the redemption of his property, and that such compromise would be binding: Ibid.

Voluntary: Money paid in redeeming land from a tax sale which is entirely void for the reason that no taxes were due on the property at the time of sale is voluntarily paid and cannot be recovered back: Morris v. Sioux County, 42–416.

Construction: The most liberal and benign construction is to be given to the statutory provisions for the redemption of real estate sold for taxes: Burton v. Hintrager, 18–348; Penn v. Clemans, 19–372; Rice v. Nelson, 27–148; Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44–622; Foster v. Bowman, 55–237; Burke v. Cutler, 78–299.

SEC 1437. Redemption from sale for part of tax. In case a redemption is made of any real estate sold for a less sum than the taxes, penalty, interest and costs, the purchaser shall receive only the amount paid and a ratable part of such penalty, interest and costs. In determining the interest and penalties to be paid upon redemption from such sale, the sum due on any parcel sold shall be taken to be the full amount of taxes, interest and costs due thereon at the time of such sale, and the amount paid for any such parcel at such sale shall be apportioned ratably among the several funds to which it belongs. Real estate so sold shall be redeemable in the same manner and with the same penalties as that sold for the taxes of the preceding year. [16 G. A., ch. 79, §§ 1, 2.]

Under this section the owner in making redemption must pay the amount due on the real estate at the time of sale, and that amount must be regarded as the full amount of interest, taxes, penalties and costs as provided by the existing law: Soper v. Espeset, 63–326. See § 1425.

SEC. 1438. Certificate of redemption. The auditor shall, upon application of any party to redeem real estate sold for taxes, and being satisfied that he has a right to redeem the same upon the payment of the proper amount, issue to such party a certificate of redemption, setting forth the facts of the sale substantially as contained in the certificate thereof, the date of the redemption, the amount paid, and by whom redeemed, and make the proper entries in the book of sales in his office, and immediately give notice of such redemption to the treasurer. The certificate of redemption shall then be presented to the latter, who shall countersign it, noting such fact in the sale book opposite the entry of the sale, and no certificate of redemption shall be evidence of such redemption without the signature of the treasurer. [C. '73, § 891; R., § 780.]

Who may redeem: In construing the redemption laws providing as to who may redeem from a tax sale, the word "owner" is held to be a generic term which embraces the different species of interest which may be carved out of a fee simple estate: Adams v. Beale, 19–61.

A party having any right or interest in the property may redeem, but a mere stranger to the title cannot: Byington v. Bookwalter, 7–512.

A payment made under contract for conveyance of property will entitle the grantee to redeem from a tax sale thereof: Lynn v. Morse, 76 665.

A mere volunteer making payment in an attempt to redeem from a tax sale in which he has no interest is not entitled to recover from the owner of the land the amount paid: Ellsworth v. Randall, 78–141.

A person having no interest in the property has no right to redeem, and if he pays money for that purpose the act neither vests title in him nor divests that of the tax purchaser, nor does it inure to the benefit of one having the right to redeem: Penn v. Clemans, 19–372.

A purchaser at a tax sale may disregard a redemption by a stranger to the title, and at the expiration of the period of redemption demand the execution and delivery of the proper treasurer's deed. If, however, the tax purchaser should consent to the redemption being made by a stranger, and should accept payment of the redemption money from him, thereby intentionally giving up his claim to the land and receiving money paid in eqchange therefor, this would in effect be a redemption and would inure to the benefit of the true owner of the property: Wood v. Welpton, 29 Fed., 405.

The wife has such an interest in the homestead belonging to the husband as to entitle her to redeem: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

The right of the wife to redeem from a tax sale of the homestead continues until one year after she becomes discovert: Pfiffner v. Krapfel, 23-37.

Wherever the right of dower will be cut off by a tax sale, the widow who is entitled to dower or her assignee may redeem, although the dower has not yet been assigned or admeasured: Rice v. Nelson, 27-148.

A lessee under a lease made subsequently to a sale may redeem the leased premises, even without the knowledge or consent of the owner: Byington v. Rider, 9-566.

Purchase of property under execution against the owner, whether made before or after a tax sale, gives the purchaser such an interest as to entitle him to redeem: Byington v. Walsh, 11-27.

Where a party buys land at execution sale which has been sold for taxes, he cannot, after making redemption, recover the amount so paid from the former owner: Barr v. Patrick, 59-134.

The holder of the patent title may redeem although there is an outstanding tax title acquired under a prior sale: Lancaster v. County Auditor, 2 Dillon, 478.

A person coming into possession under color of title after a tax sale and before the expiration of the period for redemption has such an interest in the property as to be entitled to redeem: Foster v. Bowman, 55-237.

An heir of a mortgagee has sufficient equitable interest to be entitled to redeem: Burton v. Hintrager, 18-348.

Where the guardian of a minor had, by order of the court, sold lands of his ward, taking a mortgage to secure deferred payments of purchase money; held, that the ward had such interest in the land so sold as to be entitled to redeem from a tax sale: Witt v. Mewhirter, 57-545.

The administrator of a party holding a mortgage upon real estate has a right to redeem: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

An executor under the will of the deceased owner of real property, in which will disposition of the property is directed to be made by such executor, has a sufficient interest in the land to make redemption: White v. Smith, 68-313.

Title of party claiming right to redeem held sufficient: Viele v. Van Steenberg, 31 Fed., 249.

Act of officer in redemption: Failure of the treasurer to enter a memorandum of redemption on the list of sales will not make it invalid: Byington v. Bookwalter, 7-512.

If the owner pays the proper amount to redeem, such redemption is not defeated by error of the officer in issuing the certificate of redemption as to what sales or taxes are redeemed from: Corbin v. Stewart, 44-543.

Where land has been redeemed from sale, but by reason of failure of the officer to make proper entry thereof the fact of redemption does not appear, a deed issued in disregard of such redemption is void and passes no title to the purchaser: Fenton v. Way, 40-196.

The right of the auditor to allow a redemption cannot be questioned, nor the redemption set aside, in an action to compel the treasurer to make a deed. The treasurer cannot disregard the action of the auditor: Hartman v. Anderson, 48-309.

Where a certificate of redemption was issued by a person assuming to act as deputy but whose authority was not otherwise shown, and it appeared that such certificate was received by the land-owner from an agent of his authorized to make redemption, and who charged him with the amount paid therefor, the payment not being shown, however, by the proper record, held, that the fact of redemption was sufficiently shown to defeat the tax title: Burke v. Cutler, 78-299.

And in such case, held, that under the circumstances there had not been such laches in asserting the owner's right to the property as to defeat his action to have his title quieted against the holder of the tax title: Ibid.

The law authorizing redemption is to be liberally construed in favor of the landowner, and after payment of the money for redemption misconduct and neglect of public officers will not be allowed to divest the owner of his property: Ibid.

Discretion of officer: When one seeks to redeem from a tax sale under an equity or a claim not based upon a recorded title, which the law provides shall support the right of redemption, the county officers must permit the redemption if they are satisfied he in good faith relies upon such equity or claim. The county officers cannot eqercise judicial functions and cannot determine questions of title of this kind. Moreover, in cases wherein the county officers are authorized and required to permit redemption, the courts will allow and enforce the right. It cannot be possible that in a case wherein the officers would be required to permit redemption, the courts would deny the right: Cummings v. Wilson, 59-14.

Cancellation: A party who has taken the proper steps to make redemption is not bound by the action of the auditor in canceling the redemption certificate upon the stub thereof, unless he acquiesces therein and surrenders the certificate, and receives the money paid in making the redemption: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Stub as evidence: The stub of a redemption certificate is admissible in evidence to show the fact of redemption: Ibid.

Ratification: The acceptance by a tax sale purchaser of the amount of redemption money paid in to redeem operates as a ratification of the treasurer's act in issuing the certificate of redemption: Byington v. Hampton, 13-23.

SEC. 1439. Minors and lunatics. If real property of any minor, lunatic or person of unsound mind is sold for taxes, it may be redeemed at any time within one year after such disability is removed, in the manner specified in the following section, or redemption may be made by the guardian or legal representative under the third preceding section at any time before the delivery of the deed. [C.'73, § 892; R., § 779.]

The right of a minor or lunatic to redeem, under this section, is limited to his own interest in the property, and does not extend to that of other owners or tenants in common: Jacobs v. Porter, 34–341; Stout v. Merrill, 35–47; Miller v. Porter, 35–166.

The simple production from the custody of the guardian of a minor, who was a near relative, of an acknowledged conveyance, held not to make out a prima facie case of ownership in the minor entitling him to redeem: Walker v. Sargent, 47–448: Harding v. Vaughn, 36 Fed., 742.

Where a minor holds a mortgage upon land sold at tax sale, he may redeem to the extent of such interest: Lloyd v. Bunce, 41–660.

To entitle a minor to redeem after the general time of redemption has expired, he must have been the owner of the property sold at the time of the sale: Burton v. Hintrager, 18–348; Tallman v. Cooke, 39–402; Pearsons v. American Investment Co., 83–358.

Where the rights of a minor in the property sold are acquired after the sale, whether by conveyance or descent, the time for redemption is not extended: Stevens v. Cassady, 59–113.

Where two minors were owners in common of land sold for taxes and one of them died before majority, held, that the other inheriting the interest of the deceased owner in common was only entitled to one year within which to bring action to redeem from tax sale, the exemption by reason of minority terminating one year after the death of the owner, and the other owner had no exemption by reason of her own minority as to the interest inherited by her: McGee v. Bailey, 86–513.

The grantee of a minor has only five years from his purchase of the property to bring the action: McCaughan v. Tatman, 53–508.

The extension of time for bringing the action in favor of the minor does not operate to the benefit of the purchaser as against such minor, and such purchaser must bring any action on his tax title within five years from the execution and recording of his deed: Ibid.

The disability of a minor is removed by his death, and the year within which redemption must be made commences to run from that time, and not from the time when he would have come of age: Gibbs v. Sawyer, 48–443.

The right of a minor to redeem is assignable and will pass by conveyance: Stout v. Merrill, 35–47, 57.

Redemption by a guardian may be made, before the execution of the tax deed, under the general provisions as to redemption, or after the execution of the deed, by equitable action: Witt v. Mewhirter, 57–545.

This section simply prescribes when the right to bring the action shall terminate, but does not provide that it can only be brought during the year after the minor comes of age. It may be brought by the guardian or the minor before the minor attains majority: Ibid.

The fact that a minor may redeem at any time within a year after the removal of disability will not entitle him to possession against the holder of a valid tax deed. His interest in the land is an equity to be enforced, if at all, in a court of equity: McCaughan v. Tatman, 53–508.

Where, in an equitable action to redeem on account of minority, plaintiff offers to redeem if he shall be required to do so, and defendant denies his right of redemption and claims to hold an absolute title, the costs should be taxed to defendant upon judgment being rendered in plaintiff's favor: Strang v. Burris, 61–375.

SEC. 1440. Equitable action. Any person entitled to redeem lands sold for taxes after the delivery of the deed shall do so by an equitable action in a court of record, in which all persons claiming an interest in the land derived from the tax sale, as shown by the record, shall be made defendants, and the court shall determine the rights, claims and interest of the several parties, including liens for taxes and claims for improvements made on the land by the person claiming under the tax title. No person shall be allowed to redeem land sold for taxes in any other manner after the service of the notice provided for by the next section and the execution and delivery of the treasurer's deed. [C.'73, § 893.]

Mistake and other grounds: The fact that the owner of property was a citizen in North Carolina, residing there during the civil war, held sufficient to entitle him to redeem property sold at tax sale after the period of redemption had expired: Finley v. Brown, 22–538.

Equitable action to redeem, on the grounds of insufficient notice of expiration of time of redemption and service thereof may be maintained under this section: Babcock v. Bonebrake, 77–710; Griffith v. Utley, 76–292. The fact that other relief is asked in regard to the land will not take the case out of these provisions. Such an action cannot properly be brought under the statutory provisions with reference to quieting title, and therefore § 4205, with reference to new trials in actions to quiet title, under which no notice of motion for new trial is required, is not applicable to a motion for new trial in a case brought under this section, and notice of such motion must be given: Callanan v. Lewis, 79–452.

The right to make equitable redemption on proper grounds is not cut off by service of expiration notice: Lynn v. Morse, 76–665.

A taxpayer is authorized to rely upon the treasurer for the correct application of the money sent to him to pay taxes, and his failure to pay taxes and to make such application is ground upon which the taxpayer may redeem from the tax sale for such delinquent taxes: Henderson v. Robinson, 76–603.

Where, through mistake of the officer, the owner failed to redeem from a valid sale, but redeemed from a subsequent invalid one, which he supposed was the only sale, he was allowed to redeem after the deed had been executed, it being held that the mistake lying at the door of the officer was sufficient ground for equitable relief: Noble v. Bullis, 23–559.

Where the record showed two different sales of the same property for taxes for the same year, and it appeared that the land owner had in good faith redeemed from one of the sales believing that was the only one, held, that he might in equity maintain an action to redeem from the deed issued in pursuance of the other sale, and should be permitted to do so by paying the amount for which the land sold at the other sale, with the legal interest and penalties, but without costs of sale: Shoemaker v. Lacey, 38–277.

A party making redemption may rely upon the representations of officers as to the facts of the sale, and their mistake, error or negligence is sufficient ground to support a right of redemption by action after the execution of the tax deed: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44–622.

Where a person making redemption from a tax sale paid the amount of subsequent taxes given him by the auditor as having been paid by the tax purchaser, and received a certificate of redemption, and supposed that by such redemption all the taxes upon the land were satisfied, when in fact one item of tax for one of the years was not paid, and the land was afterwards sold therefor, held, that such owner might have the deed under the latter sale set aside and be allowed to redeem therefrom: Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co. v. Storm Lake Bank, 55–696.

Mere mistake on the part of the land owner in failing to pay his taxes when they become due and omitting to redeem from the tax sale is not sufficient ground to entitle him to redeem in equity: Playter v. Cochran, 37–258.

Where the purchaser at the sale made inquiry as to taxes upon the property but not as to tax sales, held, that he was not entitled to redeem from a deed issued in pursuance of such a sale: Moore v. Hamlin, 38–482.

Where defendant had asked the treasurer to offer a certain tract of land for sale, and he had refused on the ground that no taxes were delinquent thereon, which was a mistake, and the land was subsequently offered and bid in by plaintiff, after which, with knowledge of the tax sale and within the time to redeem, defendant had bought the patent title to the property, held, that there was no ground for setting aside plaintiff's tax title at the suit of defendant: Gow v. Tidrick, 48–284.

In a particular case, where a party claimed the right to redeem in equity from a tax deed on the ground of certain unsuccessful offers to make redemption before the expiration of the time, consisting of visits to the auditor's office, which was found closed, etc., held, that the fact that twenty-six days elapsed after the making of such offer, and before the expiration of the time for redemption, without further steps being taken, precluded equitable relief: Harrison v. Owens, 57–314.

Where an owner on applying to pay the taxes was told that such taxes had been paid but afterwards had knowledge that the property had been sold for such taxes, held, that after the expiration of the statutory period for redemption he was not entitled to any relief: Easton v. Doolittle, 69 N. W., 672.

Where the owner of land concealed his interest for twenty-eight years, and failed to pay the taxes and redeem the land from tax sale because he did not deem it of sufficient value to justify the expense, and others had expended money in acquiring title and improving the land, held, that he would be estopped by his own conduct from questioning the sufficiency of the tax deeds by which others had acquired title to the land: Baird v. Ellsworth, 81–629.

Inaccuracy of statement in a letter by the treasurer to a property owner as to the amount which would be necessary to redeem the property from the tax sale, held, not sufficient to entitle such property owner to redeem in equity after the expiration of the statutory period: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63–675.

Where taxes are by mistake paid on other land than that intended, and the land of the owner goes to sale without payment, such owner has no relief against his mistake: Maxwell v. Hunter, 65–121.

Where plaintiff sought to redeem from a tax sale after the time fixed by statute had expired, because of a mistake of the clerk in not stating such sale in response to a general offer to pay all taxes and redeem all property sold, held, that such general offer, without any request to redeem from the specific sale in question, and the mistake of the clerk or negligence of the owner in not having the sale in question redeemed from under such general offer, would not raise an equity in favor of plaintiff as against an innocent purchaser: Bolinger v. Henderson, 23–165.

Tender: In an action to redeem from a tax sale to avoid liability for the costs of the action tender should be made of the amount due defendant for taxes paid: Curl v. Watson, 25–35; Poindexter v. Doolittle, 54–52.

Where a party was allowed by equitable action to redeem from a tax sale after the deed had been issued, on the ground of a bona fide attempt to redeem in proper time, which was rendered unavailing by error of the officer, held, that he should pay in making redemption the amount which he should have paid at the time of the offer to redeem with six per cent. interest, and that as no offer to pay such amount had been made he should pay the costs of the action: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44–622.

Offer to pay: Where the party attacking a tax title at the same time offers to redeem therefrom, and afterwards succeeds in defeating such title on the issue made by the other party as to its validity, he should not be subjected to the costs of trial of that issue: Broquet v. Sterling, 56–357.

An offer on the part of one seeking to make equitable redemption to repay the holder of the tax title all the taxes which such holder is entitled to recover from the party seeking redemption will be sufficient: Nicodemus v. Young, 90–423.

In an equitable proceeding to redeem it is not required that there be actual tender of the amount to be paid, but an offer in the pleading to pay the amount found due is all that is required: Crawford v. Liddle, 70 N. W., 97.

Amount to be repaid: Where a party seeks relief from a tax title under which the purchaser has procured a deed and is in possession, such redemption will be allowed only upon payment of a sum which would be sufficient to pay all taxes if they had not been paid by the purchaser: Thode v. Spofford, 65–294.

The rule that a party who succeeds in defeating a tax deed must pay to the person holding under such deed the amount which the owner would have had to pay if such purchaser had not paid the taxes at the sale is not applicable where a party seeks by equitable action to redeem from an illegal sale before the tax deed is issued. The treasurer's certificate of sale does not vest in the purchaser the title and interest of the state and county. The amount which plaintiff should be required to pay in such a case is the taxes which the owner was legally bound to pay, with six per cent. interest: Roberts v. Merrill, 60–166.

In an equitable action to redeem after execution of the deed the party seeking to redeem should be required to refund to the purchaser the amount of taxes paid by him subsequently to the execution of the deed, with interest and penalty thereon, whether duplicate receipts for such taxes have been filed with the auditor or not: Elliott v. Parker, 72–746.

Where a sale was void for uncertainity, the bid being for the undivided eighteen acres of the tract offered, held, that the purchaser was not entitled to recover anything from the owner of the land, seeking to set aside such sale, the owner not being the person against whom the tax was assessed, but a subsequent purchaser of the property, not personally bound to pay such tax: Smith v. Blackiston, 82–240.

Where a party holding a tax deed appearing to be valid on its face had in good faith paid taxes for fifteen years, held, that the owner of the land redeeming from such tax sale in an action in equity should be required to repay the tax thus paid by the holder of the tax title: Buck v. Holt, 74–294.

There is to be a full equitable adjustment of the rights of the parties; and rents and profits, as well as claims for improvements, are to be taken into consideration in the action to redeem in equity. Where such rents and profits have been more than sufficient to repay all the taxes, interest and penalty which the law imposes, the owner may have his title quieted against the holder of the tax title without further redemption: Strang v. Burris, 61–375.

Where the tax purchaser has not received any rents and profits from the land, and the person making redemption has enjoyed its use, the holder of the title from whom redemption is made is entitled to the taxes paid with interest without deduction on account of rents and profits: Cornoy v. Wetmore, 92–100.

But the mere receipt of rents and profits, held, not sufficient to constitute redemption where they were derived largely from improvements: Babcock v. Bonebrake, 77–710.

The real owner recovering possession of premises detained from him under a void tax sale may have as damages the rental value of the land during such detention and not merely the amount actually received by the defendant during his possession: Bradley v. Brown, 86–359.

If the tax purchaser has enjoyed the use of the land, there should be no deduction for rents and profits: Cornoy v. Wetmore, 92–100.

Where the owner, prior to the expiration of the time of redemption, offers to redeem, and such offer is refused by the holder of the certificate, he may afterwards be allowed to redeem in equity by paying the amount due: Butterfield v. Walsh, 36–534.

Where the owner of an undivided one-half interest in property covered by a tax sale and deed was allowed to redeem therefrom in an equitable action, held, that such owner was properly required to pay one-half the value of improvements made by the tax purchaser, and entitled to be credited with the rental value of the property exclusive of the improvements while occupied by the tax purchaser; and in such case further held that as plaintiff could not have ascertained in advance and tendered the amount necessary to redeem, one-half the cost might properly be taxed to defendant: Elliott v. Parker, 72–746.

In an equitable action to redeem under this section the question of improvements is to be considered. It is not to be left to be determined under the occupying claimant law: Serrin v. Brush, 74–489.

In an action to quiet title, where the tax deed under which defendant claimed was declared void, held, that judgment should be entered quieting title in plaintiff upon payment of the amount paid by defendant for taxes and six per cent. interest; but the question as to improvements should be adjudicated in a subsequent action, as the case falls within the statute in regard to occupying claimants, and is not governed by this section: Collins v. Storm, 75–36.

Costs: Where in an equitable action to redeem on account of minority the plaintiff offers to redeem if he shall be required to do so, and defendant denies his right of redemption, and claims to hold an absolute title, the costs should be taxed to defendant upon judgment being rendered in favor of plaintiff: Strang v. Burris, 61–375.

The costs necessarily incurred in establishing plaintiff's right to redeem under this section constitute part of the expense of redemption and ought to be paid by the party who exercises such right: Serrin v. Brush, 74-489.

As to the right of the party whose tax title is declared void to recover the taxes paid by him, see notes to § 1444.

Equitable redemption from parties holding in trust: A party charged with the payment of taxes as agent cannot acquire a tax title to his principal's land; and under the facts of a particular case, held, that the party acquiring a tax title was the agent of the owner, and therefore that his title was void: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675.

Where the guardian of a minor purchased a tax title by quitclaim deed from the purchaser at the sale, which deed was made to him as guardian, held, that the conveyance inured to his ward's benefit and that a purchaser from him was chargeable with notice thereof and could not hold the lands as against the ward; Rankin v. Miller, 43-11.

A guardian purchasing property of his ward at tax sale cannot, by transfer of such certificate, enable the transferee to acquire the title adversely to the ward: Dohms v. Mann, 76-723.

An attorney acquiring by assignment a tax certificate at the time when he was giving his client information with reference to the taxes to be paid on the land, and not advising him as to the sale, held to be the trustee as to the title acquired by such assignment, so that the owner of the land could redeem from a deed issued in pursuance of such certificate, even as against the grantees of the attorney: Lynn v. Morse, 76-665.

A vendee taking possession under title bond and enjoying the rents and profits is, as between himself and the vendor, liable for the payment of accruing taxes, and cannot therefore acquire, or cause to be acquired, a tax title as against his vendor: Hunt v. Rowland, 22-53.

Neither can a third person bid in the land for taxes at the dictation of such vendee, with the proceeds of produce from the land, and hold it as against the vendor: Ibid.

A mortgagor cannot acquire a tax title to the prejudice of a mortgagee; neither can a vendee who is in possession under a title bond, with the agreement to pay taxes, acquire as against the vendor a tax title under a sale made prior to the bond for a deed. The duty of the vendee under such circumstances would be to redeem the property, and money so paid would be applied as a payment on the purchase money: Cowdry v. Cuthbert, 71-733.

One who acquires the certificate of purchase on property on which he is under obligation to pay the taxes thereby in effect redeems from such sale and cannot acquire title under such certificate: Doud v. Blood, 89-237.

Where the money necessary to redeem from a tax sale was paid to the holder of a tax certificate on condition that the latter would procure a tax deed and transfer the title to the owner of the land, held, that such payment would be regarded in equity as a redemption, though not made in the manner or at the time prescribed by statute: Leas v. Garverich, 77-275.

One who owns the land at the time he acquires a tax certificate thereto, even though he was not the owner at the time of the tax sale, and holds it subject to the liens of others, is deemed to acquire such certificate by way of redemption and cannot perfect a transfer by tax title which shall take priority over the claims of such lien holders: Manning v. Bonard, 87-648.

It is the duty of the holder of a life estate to pay the taxes, and he cannot acquire a tax title against the reversioner: Olleman v. Kelgore, 52-38.

A purchaser of property at forclosure sale cannot afterwards acquire a valid tax title as against a junior mortgagee, and the latter may be allowed to redeem upon payment of the taxes paid by such purchaser: Anson v. Anson, 20-55.

The obligation to pay taxes due before the sale or mortgage of the property is upon the vendor or mortgagor, and does not pass to one who purchases with an agreement to pay off the mortgage: Porter v. Lafferty, 33-254.

But the vendee having knowledge of the mortgage and its covenants, and therefore knowing that his vendor was under obligation to pay the taxes, undertaking to discharge the mortgage, cannot afterwards acquire a valid tax title by purchase at tax sale for such unpaid taxes so as to defeat the mortgage: Ibid.

The mortgagor or his grantee who assumes the payment of the mortgage cannot acquire a valid tax title as against the lien of the mortgagee: Bowen v. Kurtz, 37-239.

A mortgagee having the right to pay taxes for the protection of his security, a purchase by him at a tax sale of the property will be regarded merely as a payment of the taxes made for that purpose, by which neither he nor any person holding under him can acquire a tax title: Eck v. Swennumson, 73-423.

A person in possession of and claiming title to land can acquire no additional right to a tax deed if the taxes were a lien upon the land when he took possession. It is the duty of the person acquiring the title and possession of land to pay the taxes, and he can acquire no right or title against the mortgagee by neglect of such duty: Stears v. Hollenbeck, 38-550.

One purchasing land subject to the lien of taxes, and releasing his grantor from obligation to pay the same, is presumed to have assumed their payment: Ibid.

The mortgagor or his grantees with knowledge of the mortgage cannot acquire a tax title as against the mortgagee: Ibid.; Fair v. Brown, 40-209.

Although the mortgagee is under no obligation to pay the taxes upon the premises, yet he is authorized to redeem from a tax sale, and cannot, by acquiring title through such a sale, defeat the lien of prior mortgages: Fair v. Brown, 40-209.

A junior mortgagee who has paid taxes on the property, upon redemption being made from him can recover only, as to taxes, the amount paid with six per cent. interest. He is not entitled to recover statute penalties: Garrettson v. Scofield, 44–35.

Where a creditor takes a tax title to property of the debtor under the agreement that he is to hold the same as security, not only for advances before procuring it, but also for a judgment held by him against the debtor, such title will be deemed in equity as a mortgage, and the debtor will be allowed to redeem therefrom: Jordan v. Brown, 56–281.

In such cases, while the deed will not be absolute against the holder himself, it will be absolute against other claimants to the land who do not take advantage of the right to redeem: Ibid.

Tax deeds procured by fraud and collusion on the part of the mortgagor and the tax purchaser may be set aside at the suit of the mortgagee sought to be defrauded thereby: Connolly v. Connolly, 63–202.

Where plaintiff sought to subject lands occupied by defendant to a debt contracted by defendant's father, and defendant asked in a cross-bill to have the title quieted in her, it appearing that plaintiff had, pending litigation, redeemed the land from tax sale, held, that, upon confirming defendant's title, the latter must pay to plaintiff the amount paid in such redemption: Semple v. McCrary, 46–37.

An action which does not question the validity of the sale and deed, but attacks the right of the person claiming thereunder to acquire title thereby, is not barred by the provisions of § 1448: Sorenson v. Davis, 83–405.

As to the requirement that a party attacking a tax deed must show title, and the payment of taxes upon the property, see § 1445 and notes.

Persons not debarred from acquiring tax title: A person who is not in possession of real estate, but who claims title thereto under a void tax deed, can become a purchaser at a subsequent tax sale, procure a treasurer's deed, and thereunder claim title; Neal v. Frazier, 63–451.

While an owner of land, or one under obligation to pay taxes thereon, cannot acquire a tax title so as to defeat incumbrancers, or others setting up a title adverse to him, yet one who has no interest in the land and is under no obligation to pay the taxes, and is a stranger to the owner, may acquire a tax title thereon, even though he is in possession: Curtis v. Smith, 42–665.

A party who had held the legal title to premises, but whose title had been declared invalid, and who had executed a quitclaim deed, held not thereafter debarred from acquiring a tax title to such premises: Seymour v. Harrison, 85–130.

Acquiring tax title by tenant in common: A tax title acquired by a tenant in common upon the common property will inure to the benefit of his co-tenants. He cannot thereby defeat their title: Weare v. Van Meter, 42–128; Flinn v. McKinley, 44–68; Fallon v. Chidester, 46–588; Shell v. Walker, 54–386; Smith v. Smith, 68–608: Clark v. Browne, 70–139; Van Ormer v. Harley, 71 N. W., 241.

Where one of two or more tenants in common under a tax title is trustee of the legal title for the real owners, so that he cannot hold the tax title against such owners, his co-tenants are equally incapacitated from asserting such tax title: Sorenson v. Davis, 83–405.

A co-tenant who would be incapacitated originally from taking a tax title cannot afterwards purchase a tax title to the prejudice of his co-tenants: Ibid.

The grantee of a tenant in common cannot acquire a tax title against co-tenants of his grantor: Austin v. Barrett, 44–488.

The husband of a tenant in common in possession with his wife in the enjoyment of the profits cannot, by neglecting to pay the taxes and purchasing the property at tax sale, acquire a valid title as against her co-tenants: Burns v. Byrne, 45–285.

A tax deed acquired by a tenant in common is not sufficient in equity to divest the interest of a co-tenant, even though the holder of the deed may have acquired the tax certificate before becoming tenant in common: Tice v. Derby, 59–312; Flinn v. McKinley, 44–68.

Under particular facts, held, that a tax purchaser was to be considered a tenant in common of the property, and therefore that the other party interested therein might make redemption from him upon payment of the proper amount: Conn v. Conn, 58–747.

A tenant in common not in possession may purchase an outstanding tax title for his own benefit: Alexander v. Sully, 50–192.

While the tenant in common cannot acquire a tax title against his co-tenants nevertheless held, that such rule did not apply where by agreement of the co-tenants one of them was authorized to acquire and hold title to the premises in that manner: Howe v. Howe, 90–582.

Under the circumstances of a particular case, held, that defendant having purchased from one whom he knew to have an undivided interest and gone into possession, was a tenant in common with the owners of the remaining interest, and a tax title acquired by him would be presumed to be held for the benefit of all: Shell v. Walker, 54–386.

Relief against a tenant in common who has procured a tax title upon the common property is not barred by the statute of limitations as to actions on tax titles, the real ground of the remedy being fraud of the tenant in attempting to acquire a tax title against his co-tenant: Austin v. Barrett, 44–488.

Until the co-tenant who has acquired a tax title has demanded from his co-tenants payment of their respective portions and such payment has been refused the statute of limitations as to actions to set aside the tax deed (§ 1388) does not commence to run in favor of such co-tenant: Phillips v. Wilmarth, 66 N. W., 1053.

Contribution as to taxes paid by co-tenant: The tenant in common acquiring a tax title will be regarded as holding the title thus acquired in trust for his co-tenants until the presumption is rebutted by their refusal to contribute, and the tenant holding the title thus acquired can enforce contribution by action: Weare v. Van Meter, 42–128; Phillips v. Wilmarth, 66 N. W., 1053.

Where a person purchased an undivided interest in real property without any notice or knowledge that any claim would be made for taxes previously paid by the owner of the other undivided interest, held, that the latter could not recover a portion of such taxes from the former, or make them a claim against the land: Stover v. Cory, 53-708.

Where a co-tenant pays the taxes upon the whole property he will be limited in his recovery of the proportionate share due from other co-tenants to the amount paid, with legal interest: Oliver v. Montgomery, 39-601.

A tenant in common paying taxes upon the common property acquires a lien thereon for reimbursement: Oliver v. Montgomery, 42-36.

Amount to be paid in redeeming in such cases: In making redemption from a tax title acquired by one whose relations to the owner are such that he cannot acquire a valid tax title against such owner, and who has paid subsequent taxes on the premises, the owner should pay to the holder of the title the same amount he would have to pay to the treasurer in case the taxes had not been paid by the claimant under the tax sale: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675.

Where plaintiff bought certain land at a tax sale, and defendant, with fraudulent intent procured from a former owner a quit-claim deed, and on the strength thereof redeemed the land from plaintiff just before the expiration of the period of redemption, it appearing that the property had passed from defendant to an innocent purchaser, held, that plaintiff, upon proving the fraudulent character of the transaction, might recover from defendant the value of the land at the time of redemption less the amount paid him to redeem: Burgan v. Smith, 47-286.

Estoppel: One who buys property at a tax sale cannot claim an estoppel against one who, holding a tax deed of the property sold, was present and bid against him and gave no notice of his title under the tax deed, unless the former can show that he was not fully aware of the latter's title, or that he relied upon his action, or was in some way deceived or injured thereby: Case v. Albee, 28-277.

Conclusive: A redemption by action to which all persons appearing of record to have an interest in the property are made parties is conclusive evidence, and will be binding upon an assignee of notes secured by a mortgage on the premises whose assignment is not recorded, although he is not a party: Van Gorder v. Hanna, 72-572.

SEC. 1441. Notice of expiration of right of redemption. After two years and nine months from the date of sale, the holder of the certificate of purchase may cause to be served upon the person in possession of such real estate, and also upon the person in whose name the same is taxed, if such person resides in the county where the land is situated, in the manner provided for the service of original notices, a notice signed by him, his agent or attorney, stating the date of sale, the description of the property sold, the name of the purchaser, and that the right of redemption will expire and a deed for the land be made unless redemption is made within ninety days from the completed service thereof. Service may be made upon nonresidents of the county by publishing the same three times in some newspaper of said county, or by personal service thereof elsewhere in the same manner original notices may be served; but any such nonresident may in writing appoint a resident of the county in which said land is situated an agent, and file said appointment with the treasurer of said county, who shall forthwith record the same in a record kept in his office therefor, and index the same, after which personal service of said notice shall be made upon said agent. Service shall be complete only after an affidavit has been filed with the treasurer, showing the making of the service, the manner thereof, the time when and place where made, and under whose direction the same was made; such affidavit to be made by the holder of the certificate or by his agent or attorney, and in either of the latter cases stating that such affiant is the agent or attorney, as the case may be, of the holder of such certificate; which affidavit shall be filed by the treasurer and entered upon the sale book opposite the entry of the sale, and said record or affidavit shall be presumptive evidence of the completed service of said notice, and the right of redemption shall not expire until ninety days after service is complete. Any person knowingly and wilfully swearing falsely to any fact or statement contained in said affidavit shall be guilty of perjury. The cost of serving the notice and affidavit of publication shall be added to the amount necessary to redeem. The fee for serving the notice shall be the same as for service of an original notice, including copy fee and mileage. The treasurer shall, upon the filing of proof of service and statement of costs, forthwith report the same in writing to the auditor, who shall enter it in the sale book against the proper tract of real estate. The holder of the certificate of sale or his agent may report in writing to the county auditor the amount of costs incurred in giving such notice, and the auditor shall enter the same in the sale book as aforesaid, and no redemption shall be complete until such costs are paid. [25 G. A., ch. 81; C. '73, § 894; R., § 781.]

Time for redeeming: The right to redeem is terminated after the expiration of ninety days from completed service of notice whether the deed be then executed or not: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Under former statutes, held, that redemption could not be made after the expiration of three years from the time of sale, although the deed had not been taken by the purchaser: Pearson v. Robinson, 44-413; Scofield v. McDowell, 47-129.

Under the same provisions, held, also, that the fact that the purchaser did not record his deed would not entitle the owner to redeem after the three years allowed, and that the fact that the purchaser went into possession and received rents and profits, before the recording of his deed, to an amount sufficient to satisfy the tax, interest and penalties, would not entitle the owner to redeem in an equitable action: Spengin v. Forry, 37-242.

The law in force at the time of sale regulates the time within which redemption may be made, and not that in force at the time of the assessment: Negus v. Yancey, 22-57.

Where the period allowed for redemption by the laws under which a tax sale was made was three years, held, that a statute enacted before the expiration of that time after the sale, extending the time to four years, was unconstitutional. Whether a statute reducing the time, or abrogating it entirely, would not likewise be unconstitutional, quære: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

Where a statute gave to married women an extended time within which to redeem, held, that a repeal of such statute did not operate to take away the right of redemption from sales previously made: Myers v. Copeland, 20-22.

By express statutory provision (see § 1019) the requirements of this section are applicable to tax sales in cities under special charter: Crawford v. Liddle, 70 N. W., 97.

If land is taxed by county authorities to an owner, redemption notice must be served although the city has taxed the land to unknown owners. Ibid.

Persons under disability: Where a person has the right to redeem within a time given by the general clause of the statute, such person may, if within either of the classes of persons to whom, by reason of disability, a greater time is given, redeem within such additional time: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

Further as to redemption by minors, lunatics, etc., see § 1439 and notes.

Notice of expiration of time for redemption; when necessary: The provision for service of notice of the expiration of the period of redemption is applicable only where such service is possible, and where it is impossible the time of redemption will expire without notice, as, for instance, where the property is assessed to an unknown owner and is not in the actual occupancy of any one, and in such cases a deed may issue in consummation of the sale after the expiration of the three years allowed for redemption: Tuttle v. Griffin, 64-455; Chambers v. Haddock, 64-556; Meredith v. Phelps, 65-118; Walker v. Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot, etc., Co., 65-563; Burdick v. Connell, 69-458.

In such cases the right of redemption expires at the end of three years, and redemption can not afterward be made, although no deed has yet been executed: Meredith v. Phelps, 65-118.

When land is unoccupied and taxed to unknown owners, there is no person on whom notice can be served, and the authority of the treasurer to execute the deed is not dependent upon the service of notice: Garmoe v. Sturgeon, 65-147.

Where it is claimed that a tax deed was fraudulent because the notice was fraudulently served on a person who was not the owner, held, that notice being properly served on the person in possession, the other notice was immaterial, and the deed was valid: Clifton Heights Land Co. v. Randell, 82-89.

To necessitate notice, there must be some person in possession or the property must be taxed in the name of some person who resides in the county where the land is situated: Brown v. Pool, 81-455; Cahalan v. Van Sant, 87-593.

If the land is taxed to an unknown owner notice is not required. The fact that a blanket notice, which would be insufficient if notice were required, is served, will not defeat the sale: Lawrence v. Hornick, 81-193.

The fact that in an action based on such a sale it is claimed that notice was given will not estop the tax title purchaser from showing that notice was not required: Walker v. Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot, etc., Co., 65-563.

No notice is required to be served upon persons not in possession of the property and in whose names the property is not taxed: Burdick v. Connell, 69-458.

The statute does not require the service of a notice to redeem upon the person who will at the proper time be entitled to receive the deed: Knight v. Campbell, 76-730; Brown v. Pool, 81-455; Seymour v. Harrison, 85-130.

These statutory provisions whereby parties may be deprived of their property must be fully complied with: Medland v. Walker, 64 N. W., 797.

The word "notice" used in this section means a written paper containing the statements or recitals necessary to inform the person notified of the facts required to be communicated or declared to him. It should be addressed to the person to be served, or his name in some manner should appear therein: Steele v. Murray, 80-336.

Person in possession: The provision as to notice to the person in possession does not depend in any way upon whether the property is assessed in the name of any one: Cahalan v. Van Sant, 87-593.

Possession in the owner is presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary: Ibid.

Where one is in possession, notice must be served upon him without regard to whether he is rightfully in possession or not: Brown v. Pool, 81-455.

Where a party herded cattle upon and over a range of uncultivated land, including the land in question, without any claim of right to do so, held, that his possession was not such as entitled him to notice: Ibid.

The requirement of this section in regard to service of notice upon the party in possession is absolute, and where notice was served personally upon the owner, but was not served on the person in actual possession, held, that a deed made in pursuance of such notice was absolutely void: Bradley v. Bunn, 75-180.

Notice of the expiration of time of redemption must be served upon the party in actual possession of the land, whether the possession is rightful or not, and where there were no buildings on the land, and the only evidence of occupancy or possession was a growing crop of corn, held, that this was evidence of a satisfactory kind, and sufficient to entitle the person raising the crop to notice: Callanan v. Raymond, 75-307.

Under the facts in a particular case, held, that a lot was sufficiently occupied in connection with other premises so that notice of redemption ought to have been given to the person thus occupying: Shelley v. Smith, 66 N. W., 172.

The requirement that the notice shall be served upon the owner in actual possession is not complied with by service of a notice upon a husband of the owner, she being in possession: Medland v. Walker, 64 N. W., 797.

Where a timber lot not suitable for cultivation is used by a person in such way as such land is ordinarily used, he is to be deemed in possession, and is to be served with notice: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Notice is only required to be given to persons in actual possession, not to one who is merely in constructive possession: Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

Where property is taxed to unknown owners, and the owner thereof is not in possession at the time of the sale, notice is not required to be given to such owner, although he has, after the expiration of three years but prior to the execution of the deed, gone into possession of the property: Meredith v. Phelps, 65-118.

Where a railway company is in possession of a portion of the premises, condemned for right of way, it has the right of redemption, and such right cannot be cut off without notice of the expiration of the period for redemption. A tax deed executed without such notice would not extinguish the right of the company: Garmoe v. Sturgeon, 65-147.

A person who, at the time of the service of notice had no possession except such as had been exercised by ploughing two furrows on the land in question, without any right to do so being made to appear, held not sufficiently in possession to be entitled to notice: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

Acts of the owner of city property, actually occupied as such, in causing weeds to be cut and hauled therefrom, held sufficient to show that he was in possession and entitled to notice: Sapp v. Walker, 66-497.

Where a part owner of property was a member of the family of a brother residing upon the land, but had no control over it, held, that she was not in possession in such a sense that it was necessary to serve notice upon her. The possession contemplated by this section is actual and not constructive. It involves the occupying and controlling of the land and not mere residence upon it: Rowland v. Brown, 75-679.

That a person be in actual possession it is not necessary for him to live on the land or have some person representing him stay upon it. The owner of cultivated land who leases it, reserving part of the crop as rent, is in actual possession when it is surrendered to him, even though he does not remain on the land: Whities v. Farsons, 73-137.

Even though the petition of plaintiff asking to redeem on account of failure to give notice to him as the person in possession of the land does not aver that he was in possession, he may prove such fact under such allegation made by him in his answer to defendant's cross-petition: Ibid.

Where land was taxed to an estate as owner and it appeared that by the will of the deceased owner it was within the control and disposition of the executors of the estate, held, that notice of redemption was required, such notice to be given to the executor. Notice must be given in all cases where service is possible: Crawford v. Liddle, 70 N. W., 97.

Subsequent changes: If the notice is served on the proper person, the right of the holder to a deed at the end of ninety days after the proof of such service is filed cannot be affected by any changes which may occur as to the taxation of the property or its ownership, between the time of such service and the proof of service or issuance of the deed, even though there is delay in making the proof of service: Rice v. Bates, 68-393.

Mortgagee: The notice required to be served before a tax deed can be made need not be served on the mortgagee unless he is in possession: Hall v. Guthridge, 52-408.

Person to whom taxed: Where land is not taxed in the name of the owner, the omission to serve notice upon such owner not in possession will not invalidate the deed: Parker v. Cochran, 64-757; Seymour v. Harrison, 85-130.

Where at the time of the service of notice the land was listed and assessed for taxation to a purchaser of the same holding by a deed not recorded, and the assessor's book so showing was in the auditor's office, held, that notice must be served upon him although the land was still in possession of his grantor, upon whom notice was properly served: Heaton v. Knight, 63-686.

Notice should be addressed to the person in whose name the land is taxed even though taxed in his name by mistake: American Ex- change National Bank v. Crooks, 66 N. W., 168; Seymour v. Harrison, 85–130.

A notice when served in an even-numbered year should be served upon the person in whose name the lots were taxed as appears on the tax list: Medland v. Walker, 64 N. W., 797.

A party cannot, by procuring a quitclaim to property on which he holds a certificate and having it assessed to himself and then collusively assigning his certificate to another, have valid notice served upon himself which shall entitle the assignee to a deed and give such assignee a title which he can then transfer to the original holder of the certificate: Cummings v. Browne, 61–385.

Where the junior motgagee bid in the property at forclosure, and then secured the purchase of the property at tax sale in the name of another for his benefit, and had notice of the expiration of the period of redemption served upon himself as the owner, held, that such notice was insufficient, and the tax deed should be set aside: Frank v. Arnold, 73–370.

The object of the law being to give notice to the owner of the land, it is the duty of a purchaser to examine the records and ascertain in whose name the land is taxed and give notice to such person. It may properly be considered that until it is listed for taxation it is taxed to the same person as in the previous year; but when it is listed for taxation in the name of another person and assessed to him, and the assessment returned to the auditor, then from the time of such listing it may properly be said to be taxed to that person: Heaton v. Knight, 65–434; Adams v. Snow, 65–435.

Where there is a conflict between the assessor's books and the tax duplicates placed in the treasurer's hands, the property is to be deemed taxed to the person whose name appears on the tax duplicate: Fuller v. Butler, 72–729.

Where no person is in possession of the land and it is taxed to an unknown owner, the tax purchaser is entitled to a deed without giving any expiration notice. He is not bound to look back of the assessment: Griffin v. Tuttle, 74–219.

Where the land was taxed to "H. Corlis," and the expiration notice was directed to "H. Corless," held, that the two names were substantially the same and the notice was sufficient: Nycum v. Raymond, 73–224.

Where the land was listed in the treasurer's office for the taxes of 1884 in the name of N. F. C., while for the taxes for 1885 it was listed by the assessor in the name of M. F. C., and the notice of the expiration of the time for redemption was published in July, 1885, and was directed to N. H. C., held, that such notice should have been directed to M. F. C., and was not sufficient: Lynn v. Morse, 76–665.

A name written by the auditor in the assessor's book in June, opposite the description of the land, held, not to constitute a correction of the name of the owner, even if the auditor had power to make such correction, as it was not placed in the column for owners' names: Ibid.

Where land was taxed to an unknown owner and the holder of a tax certificate had paid subsequent taxes and the treasurer had entered his name in the column marked "names of owners," merely as a matter of convenience, held, that the fact of his name being placed in such column would not justify the inference that the land had been taxed to him: Irwin v. Burdick, 79–69; Irwin v. Dakin, 79–72.

Where a party owned land appearing on the treasurer's books as taxed to persons unknown, but the records showed his ownership and that he had been owner for several years, during which the land had been taxed in his name, held, that the taxation in the name of such party held good until a subsequent taxation of the land in the name of some other party, and the subsequent taxation of the property to an unknown owner would not relieve the holder of the certificate from the obligation to give notice to such owner: Hartley v. Boynton, 5 McCrary, 453.

In an action to redeem from tax sale on the ground that proper notice of the expiration of the time of redemption was not given before the issuance of the tax deed, plaintiff should aver that the land was taxed in the name of some one for the year when the notice should have been given. If not taxed in the name of any owner at the time the notice is to be given, notice is not required: Grove v. Benedict, 69–346.

Where the notice was served upon the owner of the legal title, the land being assessed for that year to unknown owners, and it not appearing that any one else was in possession, held, that the owner of the legal title would be presumed to be in possession and that the service was sufficient: Hall v. Guthridge, 52–408.

Notice is to be given to the person in whose name the land is taxed, but it is not required that such person shall be the owner of the land: Kessey v. Connell, 68–430.

The tax deed being prima facie evidence of the regularity of all proceedings prior to its execution, it must be presumed in the absence of a showing to the contrary that the notice was served upon the person in whose name the land was taxed: Soukup v. Union Inv. Co., 84–448.

Actual knowledge of the publication of notice will not obviate the necessity of service of notice in cases where such service is required by statute: Reed v. Thompson, 56–455.

Uncertainty of notice: Where the bid on which a forty-acre tract of land was sold was for "fourteen acres" thereof, and the notice so described it, held, that the notice was void for uncertainty in the description: Poindexter v. Doolittle, 54–52.

A notice sufficiently describing the land except that it designates it as containing thirty acres instead of forty acres, where the description would be complete without any designation of the quantity, will not be rendered insufficient by reason of such mistake: Rowland v. Brown, 75–679.

Who to give notice: To constitute a person the holder of the certificate of purchase so as to authorize him to make affidavit as to the publication of notice to redeem, it is not necessary that he have physical possession of the instrument. By that term is meant the owner of it, or the one who at the proper time will be entitled to a deed under the sale, and where the holder of a certificate had surrendered it to the treasurer for cancellation upon the issuance of a treasurer's deed, which was without authority at the time, held, that he was not afterwards precluded from serving notice as holder of the certificate: Rice v. Bates, 68-393.

Also held, that the fact that such holder had executed a conveyance of the property covered by the certificate of purchase to a third person did not preclude his giving notice and receiving the deed, his right as purchaser before receiving a deed not being such an interest in the property as would pass by a conveyance thereof: Ibid.

By the expression "lawful holder" is meant one who in law is the holder of the certificate and entitled to the rights and benefits which may accrue under it. To make a person such lawful holder it is not necessary that he have the formal assignment of the certificate provided for in § 1433: Swan v. Whaley, 75-623.

Who may serve notice: Service made by the holder of the tax certificate in person is not prohibited and is sufficient: Hall v. Guthridge, 52-408.

The provision that the notice shall be served in the manner prescribed for the service of original notice relates to the mode of service and does not prescribe any rule as to the person or officer who shall make the service or as to the return Service can be made only by the holder of the certificate, his agent or attorney, and the affidavit of one of these parties as to service by him is the only competent method of proving such service: Ellsworth v. Van Ort, 67-222.

Notice by publication; name: If land is taxed by mistake in the wrong name, and the case is a proper one for giving notice of the expiration of the period of redemption by publication, the published name should be that of the person in which the land is taxed, and not that of the owner: Hillyer v. Farneman, 65-227.

The practice of writing only the initial letters of given names has become so common that a notice directed to a person in such manner should not be deemed on that account insufficient: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

The provision for serving notice by publication is permissive, and personal service in lieu of such publication is sufficient: Seymour v. Harrison, 85-130.

Blanket notice: The statute evidently contemplates that a notice shall be given by the holder of each certificate of purchase, and a fair construction of it requires that a separate notice shall be given to each person in possession or to whom each tract of land is taxed. A mere blanket notice covering numerous pieces of land, directed to different owners collectively, is not sufficient: White v. Smith, 68-313; Adams v. Burdick, 68-666.

Where the notice of the expiration of the time for redemption covered more than one sale of more than one tract, but was single as to the party who purchased the lands, and the person to whom they were taxed, held, that the notice was sufficient: Jenswold v. Doran, 77-692.

Proof of service: The affidavit required by statute to constitute proof of completion of service of notice must be by the holder of the certificate, his agent or attorney, and an affidavit by the proprietor of the paper in which the notice was published, in case of service by publication, is not sufficient: American Missionary Ass'n v. Smith, 59-704; Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675; Sweeley v. Van Steenburg, 69-696; Viele v. Van Steenburg, 31 Fed., 249.

A mere request by the holder of a tax certificate to the foreman of a newspaper in which publication of notice is made, to make an affidavit and return it to the treasurer, will not constitute such foreman an agent of the holder so as to render the proof of publication sufficient: Chambers v. Haddock, 64-556.

Where the affidavit of proof of service referred to another affidavit, not proper to be received in itself to show service, held, that such service was sufficient to incorporate the latter into the former, and that the papers together showed proper service: Stull v. Moore, 70-149.

Where proof of the service of a notice consisted of an unverified return made thereon and an affidavit of the holder of the certificate stating that service had been made as shown by the return, that was held sufficient: Rowland v. Brown, 75-679.

Where there was a mistake in the affidavit as to the name of the land-owner, but reference was therein made to the notice attached thereto, which was the notice served by publication, and in such notice the name was correctly inserted, held, that the proof was sufficient: Rice v. Haddock, 70-318.

The proof of service of the notice need not show the county in which the service was made, the place of actual service not being material: Rowland v. Brown, 75-679.

An affidavit of the holder of the certificate that the publication was made for three consecutive weeks, but which did not state when the publication was made, held not sufficient: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675.

Where the affidavit stated the date of the first publication, and stated that three publications in a weekly newspaper had been made, held, that it was sufficient: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

Where the affidavit of publication showed that the paper in which the publication was made was "A weekly newspaper published in said county," held, that it sufficiently appeared that it was a newspaper printed in said county: Nycum v. Raymond, 73-224.

Where the publisher of the newspaper in which the notice is published makes an affidavit of publication, and the owner of the certificate makes affidavit in which reference is made to the notice and affidavit of the publisher, all of the papers may be considered together in determining whether the proof of service is sufficient; and where the affidavit made by the holder of the certificate was on a separate sheet of paper attached to the affidavit of the publisher on which was pasted a slip containing a description of the premises and referred to such notice, held, that it was sufficient: Smith v. Heath, 80-231.

Affidavit in a particular case, held to sufficiently refer to the paper containing the notice: Johnson v. Brown, 71-609.

It is not necessary to attach a copy of the notice to the affidavit of service: Knudson v. Litchfield, 87-111.

Where the affidavit does not state where the newspaper in which such notice was inserted was published, nor the date of the publication of the notice, it is wholly insufficient to authorize the treasurer to issue the deed: Kessey v. Connell, 68-430.

It is the duty of a purchaser to make some showing which will authorize the treasurer to make a deed, and he should make such a record as upon its face shows authority for the treasurer to act: Ibid.

Failure to enter upon the record the affidavit showing service will not invalidate a deed. The notice itself as well as the record thereof is to be taken as evidence of the fact, and if the affidavit be lost it may be shown by copy duly proven, although not entered on the record: Baker v. Crabb, 73-412.

Where the return of service on the notice does not show on what date service was made, but contains a general statement only that the notice was served, a deed issued in pursuance of such notice will not be valid: Wilkin v. Wilkin, 91-652.

Failure to give notice: A deed issued without competent evidence being filed of the service of notice to redeem is without authority: Rice v. Bates, 68-393.

The requirement of notice is absolute and a failure to observe it will afford ground for setting aside a tax deed and the lapse of five years will not bar an action by the owner of the land to redeem under § 1448: Shelley v. Smith, 66 N. W., 172.

A treasurer's deed issued before expiration of ninety days from the filing of an affidavit of service of notice is invalid: Swope v. Prior, 58-412; Cummings v. Wilson, 59-14.

Until the statute with reference to notice is complied with, the statutory period of redemption cannot expire: Cornoy v. Wetmore, 92-100.

So held where notice upon one of the owners was not properly served: Ibid.

Where a deed is void because prematurely issued, the surrender and cancellation of the certificate is also void, and the certificate has the same force and effect as though it had never been surrendered. If, thereafter, proper notice is given, or the party is prevented by an injunction at the suit of the owner, to whom notice would be given, from giving such notice, the time of redemption will expire ninety days from the giving or attempting to give such notice: Long v. Smith, 62-329.

And if the person securing an injunction against the giving of notice and procuring a deed by the taxpayer neglects to make or offer to make redemption until after the time when a deed could have been procured if not prevented by such injunction, he will not be entitled to redeem at all: Ibid.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to justify the court in finding that the tax register showed, when examined by the agent or owner before making redemption, that the affidavit required by statute was filed at such a date as to make his redemption proper: Ellsworth v. Green, 59-622.

In ordinary cases mere lapse of time may not estop the owner of land from asserting his title against a tax deed issued upon insufficient notice; but where the owner for twenty-eight years concealed his interest in the land and stood silently by and allowed others to pay the taxes and expend money and labor in acquiring title and improving the land, held, that he was estopped by his own conduct from questioning the sufficiency of the tax deed: Baird v. Ellsworth, 81-629.

Effect of defective proof: Where there has been sufficient notice of the expiration of the time for redemption, but although there is an attempt to comply with the statute with reference to proof of service of notice, such proof is not in accordance with the statutory requirements by reason of not stating facts required to be stated, the period of limitation of five years will run in favor of the holder of a deed executed in pursuance of such defective notice. In such case the tax deed is not void in the sense that it is executed without authority: Trulock v. Bentley, 67-602.

Before the treasurer can properly issue a deed the facts essential to his authority to do so should appear in the files of his office and if the notice does not appear to be given by the tax purchaser the authority of the person giving the notice to do so should also appear. Parol evidence is not admissible to show such authority: Stevens v. Murphy, 91-356.

Where the proof of notice is not such as is required, but the deed is nevertheless issued, although it shows on its face that the proof was improper, yet the deed is not to be deemed void, and the period of limitation of an action to attack the same commences to run from the time of its execution: Bolin v. Francis, 72-619.

Where the description of the premises in the notice was that of an undivided portion of a tract, held, that the notice was insufficient for want of certainty, and the right to redeem was not thereby cut off: Griffith v. Utley, 76-292.

Further as to sufficiency of description, see notes to § 1442.

New proof of service: Where the affidavit of proof of service of the notice was not complete by reason of lacking the signature of the affiant, held, that the filing of new proof of service, and the expiration of the ninety days thereafter, without payment by the owner, of the amount required to redeem, did not cut off the rights of such owner, where it appeared that the owner had an equitable right to redeem, which he had been continuously asserting: Lynn v. Morse, 76-665.

Where the purchaser of land at a tax sale gave proper notice of the expiration of the time for redemption, but failed to file sufficient proof of such notice in the treasurer's office, but a tax deed was issued by the treasurer; and where, more than four years after the tax deed was issued, the purchaser filed a second proof of service, and received new deeds from the treasurer, held, that the purchaser never having assigned his certificate was the proper person to file the second proof of the service of notice, although he had previously conveyed the land: Babcock v. Bonebrake, 77-710.

Presumption as to notice: The statute does not require that the affidavit shall show the facts necessary to justify service by publication, as, for instance, that a person served was a nonresident. It is only required to show the service and mode thereof. If the facts are such that the mode of service was not justifiable, the deed can be impeached, but it is made presumptive evidence of its own validity in that respect, and the party asserting it has the burden of showing the impeaching facts: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

The deed is prima facie evidence that the notice has been properly and sufficiently served on the right person: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178; Baker v. Crabb, 73-412.

One who contests the title under a tax sale on the ground that the expiration notice was not sufficient has the burden of proof: Knudson v. Litchfield, 87-111.

The deed is at least prima facie evidence of the proper giving of notice, and the party attacking a deed for want of service of the required notice upon the owner must show that the land was assessed to some owner by name, and not to an unknown owner: Fuller v. Armstrong, 53-683.

Where the notice and proof of service on their face are regular, and a deed is issued in accordance therewith, the burden of overthrowing this prima facie evidence is upon the person attacking the deed: Wilson v. Crafts, 56-450.

In the absence of proof that the land was occupied or taxed to some person, it will be presumed in support of the deed that the facts were such as that service of notice was not required: Chambers v. Haddock, 64-556; Garmoe v. Sturgeon, 65-147.

Notice may be served personally or by publication; and where it appears that notice by publication is made, but is defective, a deed being presumptive evidence of sufficient service, it will be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary that personal notice was given: Baker v. Crabb, 73-412.

The presumption must obtain that the land was taxed to and notice served on a living person: White v. Smith, 68-313.

The tax deed is not conclusive evidence of the giving of notice as required: Reed v. Thompson, 56-455.

Where it appeared that the land was taxed to a known owner for the year for the taxes for which the sale was made, and that there was an attempt to serve notice of the expiration of the period of redemption upon such owner, which was insufficient, and an action to quiet title was brought against him, held, that it sufficiently appeared that the land was not taxed to an unknown owner to overcome the presumption in favor of the deed: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 65-303.

Change of statute: Notice as required in this section of Code of '73 held not necessary where the sale was made before its enactment, although the deed was not executed until after that Code took effect: Robinson v. First National Bank, 48-354.

SEC. 1442. Deed executed. Immediately after the expiration of ninety days from the date of completed service of the notice hereinbefore provided, the treasurer then in office shall make out a deed for each lot or parcel of land sold and unredeemed, and deliver it to the purchaser upon the return of the certificate of purchase. The treasurer shall receive twenty-five cents for each deed made by him, and may include any number of parcels of land purchased by one person in one deed, if desired by him. [C.'73, § 895; R., §§ 781-2; C.'51, §§ 503-4.]

When land has been redeemed: The treasurer has no authority to make a deed for land which has been redeemed, and such deed would be void: Fenton v. Way, 40-196.

Without notice to redeem: Unless a notice has been served on the person in whose name the land is taxed, the sheriff is not authorized to execute the deed. As long as the right of redemption exists there is no complete sale, and the period of limitation provided by § 1448 does not commence to run: Slyfield v. Barnum, 71-245.

If the notice to redeem, required by the statute, has not been served, or if the proof of the service of the notice required by law is not on file in the treasurer's office when the deed is executed, the land remains subject to redemption, but the deed is not void. It conveys title to the purchaser, who holds it subject to be defeated by the redemption of the land, when the right of redemption is established and exercised in the manner provided by law: Ibid.; Bowers v. Hallock, 71-218.

Second deed: When the first deed executed by the treasurer is so imperfect or informal as not to pass the title, he has the power and it is his duty to execute a second and corrected deed conveying the title: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356; Parker v. Sexton, 29-421; Hurley v. Street, 29-429; Johnson v. Chase, 30-308; Gray v. Coan, 30-536; Genther v. Fuller, 36-604.

If the sale is legal the purchaser has the right to be clothed with the legal title, which can only be done by the execution of a valid deed. If the deed executed is void from any cause existing in the form of the body of the deed, or of the acknowledgment, the treasurer has the right to execute a valid deed, provided he can do so in conformity with the actual facts of the sale: Lorain v. Smith, 37-67

Where the treasurer has made a valid deed he has no authority to make a second one, and if a second one should be made it could have no effect upon the title conveyed by the first: Bulkley v. Callanan, 32–461; Martin v. Cole, 38–141.

The authority to execute a second deed is conferred upon the treasurer in order to enable him to correct errors committed in the first. A second deed not executed to correct either mistake, misdescription, incorrect recital or other matter in the first deed in conflict with the facts, but for the object of perverting the truth and falsifying the tax record, will be void: Gould v. Thompson, 45–450.

A person who claims title to real estate of which he is not in possession, under a void tax deed, may become the purchaser at a subsequent tax sale and procure a treasurer's deed, and thereunder claim title: Neal v. Frazier, 63–451.

Description: The lot or parcel of land in which the property is to be described in the deed is to be the same as that under which it was advertised and sold: Martin v. Cole, 38–141.

Where a tax deed is given for several tracts which are taxed and sold separately, a description as to one will not vitiate the deed as to the others: Cornoy v. Wetmore, 92–100.

If the description is fatally defective the purchaser cannot recover from the county the taxes paid by him. He buys at his peril: Lindsey v. Boone County, 92–86.

Parol evidence is admissible to apply the description contained in the certificate of purchase to its subject-matter: Judd v. Anderson, 51–345.

Defective description in assessment and tax books, and deed, cannot be cured by extraneous evidence: Roberts v. Deeds, 57–320.

Uncertainty: Where the certificate of sale and the tax deed describe land having no necessary identity with that which has been taxed and is delinquent, they do not of themselves constitute sufficient evidence of a sale to uphold a tax deed, but rather negative it. Likewise, where the tax list shows that land is taxed by a description which is void for uncertainty, no title will pass under the sale or deed: Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Scott, 44–143.

Where the purchaser at the sale offered to pay the tax on a forty-acre tract for "fourteen acres," and the land sold was thus described in the notice and deed, held, that the deed was void for uncertainty in its description, and in the notice required by statute to be served before its execution: Poindexter v. Doolittle, 54–52.

A description of property as the northwest part of the N. E. ¼ of the N. E. ¼, etc., containing three acres, held insufficient in an assessment and sale and tax deed to support a tax title, and that such title would be void for such defective description, although the sale was made for delinquent taxes of the owner of the property, which were a lien thereon. Such an objection goes to the validity of the tax title irrespective of the validity of the taxes: Roberts v. Deeds, 57–320.

A tax sale under an assessment of a certain number of acres in a certain corner of a subdivision can apply only to that number of acres in the form of a square, and a deed of the tract in any other form executed under such a sale will be valid only so far as the land conveyed therein is embraced in such square: Immegart v. Gorgas, 41–439.

Where a tax deed contained the following description of the land it attempted to convey: "The west fract. 1-2 quarter of the N. W. quarter of section 7, in township 96 north, of range 41 west," held, that the description was so indefinite that no title was conveyed by the deed: Collins v. Storm, 75–36.

Where the premises sold were described in the deed as "the undivided thirty-nine and one-half acres of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter," etc., held, that the deed was invalid for uncertainty in the description: Griffith v. Utley, 76–292. To same effect, Ellsworth v. Nelson, 81–57.

"The undivided 18 acres" of a tract offered for tax sale is not a sufficient description in a tax deed to convey any interest to the purchaser: Smith v. Blackiston, 82–240.

Where the description was "west part, northeast quarter northwest quarter, twenty acres," held, that it was sufficiently definite: Soukup v. Union Inv. Co., 84–448.

In a particular case, held, that the description was so indefinite that the sale was invalid: Hintrager v. Nightingale, 36 Fed., 847.

Abbreviations: Abbreviations such as are in general and common use in the description of land, and are not misleading, may be used in the deed: Jenkins v. McTigue, 22 Fed., 148.

Where there was no word or mark prefixed to the figures representing the value of the property upon the assessor's book, but it was not shown or claimed that the omission of the dollar mark in any way actually misled plaintiff, or prevented him from paying whatever sum was properly assessed against his property, held, that the figures occurring in the column headed "value of land" rendered the assessment sufficient: Ibid.

Specific performance: In an action in the nature of a proceeding to enforce specific performance of tax sale by the execution of a tax deed, held, that the amount bid for the property being a grossly inadequate price therefor, equitable relief would not be granted: Harper v. Sexton, 22–442.

Undivided interest: The treasurer has no authority to deed an undivided interest in property for taxes due upon the whole. Cragin v. Henry, 40–158.

Delay: Where property was sold for a city tax claimed to have been levied fourteen years prior, and it did not appear upon the book of delinquent taxes which the city had adopted as a standard, held, that the city must be considered as having abandoned such taxes, and that the tax title was void: Bradley v. Hintrager, 61–337.

Where a tax deed was not taken for eleven years after the party claiming under the sale was entitled thereto, if at all, held, that as against those dealing with the owner of the land it must be presumed that the right to the deed had been abandoned: Ockendon v. Barnes, 43–615.

Laches; Where the purchaser of land at tax sale neglects to secure a deed, and the land is subsequently bid in by a purchaser at another sale who takes a deed under such sale, the rights of the first purchaser to a deed having become barred before the second deed is issued, the first purchaser cannot set up any rights under his certificate, to defeat the title of the second purchaser: Johns v. Griffin, 76–419.

SEC. 1443. Form of. Deeds executed by the treasurer shall be substantially in the following form:

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, that the following described real estate, viz.: (here follows the description), situated in the county of..... and state of Iowa, was subject to taxation for the year (or years) A. D. ...., and the taxes assessed thereon for the year (or years) aforesaid remained due and unpaid at the date of the sale hereinafter named; and the treasurer of said county, having on the .... day of ....., A. D....., by virtue of the authority in him vested by law, at (an adjournment of) the sale begun and publicly held on the first Monday of December, A. D. ...., exposed to public sale at the office of the county treasurer in the county aforesaid, in substantial conformity with all the requirements of the statute, the real property above described, for the payment of the taxes, interest and costs then due and remaining unpaid on said property, and at the time and place aforesaid A..... B....., of the county of ..... and state of ....., having offered to pay the sum of .... dollars and .... cents, being the whole amount of taxes, interest and costs then due and remaining unpaid on said property, for (here follows the description of the property sold) which was the least quantity bid for, and payment of said sum having been made by him to said treasurer, the property was stricken off to him at that price; and the said A..... B..... did, on the .... day of ....., A. D. ...., duly assign the certificate of the sale of the property as aforesaid and all his right, title and interest to said property to E..... F..... of the county of ..... and state of .....; and by the affidavit of ....., filed in said treasurer's office on the .... day of ....., A. D. ...., it appears that notice has been given more than ninety days before the execution of these presents to ..... and ..... of the expiration of the time of redemption allowed by law; and three years having elapsed since the date of said sale, and said property having not been redeemed therefrom:

Now, I, C..... D....., treasurer of said county, for the consideration of said sum to the treasurer paid as aforesaid and by virtue of law, have granted, bargained and sold, and by these presents do grant, bargain and sell to the said A..... B..... (or E..... F.....), his heirs and assigns, the real property hereinbefore described, to have and to hold unto him (or E..... F.....), his heirs and assigns, forever; subject, however, to all the rights of redemption provided by law. In witness whereof, I, C..... D....., treasurer as aforesaid, by virtue of the authority aforesaid, have hereunto subscribed my name on this.....day of....., A. D.....

..... County. } ss.

I hereby certify that before me, ..., in and for said county, personally appeared the above named C..... D....., treasurer of said county, personally known to me to be the treasurer of said county at the date of the execution of the above conveyance, and to be the identical person whose name is affixed to and who executed the above conveyance as treasurer of said county, and acknowledged the execution of the same to be his voluntary act and deed as treasurer of said county, for the purposes therein expressed.

Given under my hand (and seal) this.....day of....., A. D.....

SEC. 1444. Effect of deed—vests title. The deed shall be signed by the treasurer as such, and acknowledged by him before some officer authorized to take acknowledgments, and when substantially thus executed and recorded in the proper record in the office of the recorder of the county in which the property is situated, shall vest in the purchaser all the right, title, interest and estate of the former owner in and to the land conveyed, and all the right, title, interest and claim of the state and county thereto, and shall be presumptive evidence in all the courts of this state in all controversies and actions in relation to the rights of the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, to the land thereby conveyed, of the following facts:

1. That the real property conveyed was subject to taxation for the year or years stated in the deed;
2. That the taxes were not paid at any time before the sale;
3. That the real property conveyed had not been redeemed from the sale at the date of the deed;
4. That the property had been listed and assessed;
5. That the taxes were levied according to law;
6. That the property was duly advertised for sale;
7. That the property was sold for taxes as stated in the deed.

It shall be conclusive evidence of the following facts:

1. That the manner in which the listing, assessment, levy, notice and sale were conducted was in all respects as the law directed;
2. That the grantee named in the deed was the purchaser;
3. That all the prerequisites of the law were complied with by all the officers who had, or whose duty it was to have had, any part or action in any transaction relating to or affecting the title conveyed or purporting to be conveyed by the deed, from the listing and valuation of the property up to the execution of the deed, both inclusive, and that all things whatsoever required by law to make a good and valid sale and to vest the title in the purchaser were done, except in regard to the points named in this section wherein the deed shall be presumptive evidence only. [C.'73, § 897; R., § 784; C.'51, § 503.]

I. FORM.

Acknowledgment is essential to the validity of the tax deed, and any defect therein is not cured by a general act legalizing defective acknowledgments: Goodykoontz v. Olsen, 54–174.

A statute legalizing acknowledgments by county auditors, held not operate to validate a tax deed acknowledged in that manner: Long v. Schee, 86–619.

Indexing: As to what is a sufficient indexing of the tax deed, see Peirce v. Weare, 41–378.

What law governs: The validity of acts affecting the assessment, levy and delinquency of taxes and tax sales is determined under the laws in force at the time the acts were done: Penn v. Clemans, 19–372.

II. WHAT VESTS IN PURCHASER.

Effect: The title conveyed by the tax sale is not derivative, but a new title in the nature of an independent grant by the sovereign authority, and the purchaser takes free from any incumbrances, claims or equities connected with the prior title: Crum v. Cotting, 22–411.

A title based upon a tax sale and deed is not derivative. It is a breaking up of all titles. When made in conformity with the requirements of the law it is available, not only against the owner of the patent title, but against all liens based upon the patent title: Bull v. Gilbert, 79–547; Willcuts v. Rollins, 85–247.

A tax title is not a derivative, but a new and independent title. A right of action for breach of warranty under a deed by which the owner holds the land does not pass to the tax purchaser: Bellows v. Litchfield, 83–36.

The tax deed conveys to the purchaser the lien of the state and county and if valid vests in him a new and independent title: Hefner v. Northwestern Life Ins. Co., 123 U. S., 747.

A tax title is a perfect title and extinguishes a patent title, and the fact that a person making a contract to convey has only a tax title will not constitute a breach of such contract: Kramer v. Ricke, 70–535.

It is the deed, and not the sale, that vests the title in the purchaser: Lake v. Gray, 35–44.

Until the deed is executed the title remains in the original owner: Williams v. Heath, 22–519.

A tax deed issued to a person as holder of the certificate of sale who is already deceased conveys no title to him or his heirs: Butterfield v. Walsh, 36–534.

Rights of purchaser under: When plaintiff claiming title under a bond for a deed against which the statute of limitations had run was seeking to redeem from a tax deed made during his minority, held, that the tax deed conveyed to the defendant the right of interposing the statute of limitations against such title bond, as the holder of the legal title himself might have done in an action by plaintiff against him: Byington v. Stone, 51–317.

A purchaser by tax title takes all the chances. There is no warranty: Hussman v. Durham, 165 U. S., 144.

The purchaser buys at his own risk and a defect in the description such as to defeat the title will not entitle him to recover from the county the amount paid: Lindsey v. Boone County, 92–86.

Taxes on personal property attach as a lien upon real property of the same owner subordinate to other existing liens (see § 1400 and notes), and a purchaser of the real property thus sold for personal property taxes gets no higher interest in the property than that of the owner for whose personal property taxes the real property is sold: Bibbins v. Polk County, 69 N. W., 1007.

Innocent purchaser: A purchaser under a tax deed which is void because of payment of the taxes before the sale cannot claim protection as an innocent purchaser as against the owner of the property: Harrison v. Sauerwein, 70–291.

Property assessed: The deed cannot be effectual as a conveyance beyond the property actually assessed: Judd v. Anderson, 51–345.

Taxes paid: If the taxes for which the sale is made have in fact been paid the deed is invalid: See notes to §1418.

Lien of prior taxes: The purchaser takes all the interest of the state and county in the property, and therefore takes it free from the liens of all taxes unpaid at the date of sale: Bowman v. Thompson, 36–505.

Such prior taxes cease to be a lien, and a subsequent sale therefor would be void: Preston v. Van Gorder, 31–250.

But where a party purchased land subsequently to a tax sale thereof, and then procured the assignment to himself of the tax certificate, held, that the land was not in his hands discharged from the lien of taxes due prior to the sale, and by mistake omitted in making such sale, but that the assignment of the certificate operated merely as a redemption from the sale: Bowman v. Eckstien, 46–583.

In a city acting under a special charter, which authorized a separate sale by the city for city taxes, held, that a sale for state and county taxes did not divest the property of the lien of such city taxes, and that the purchaser took subject thereto: Dennison v. Keokuk, 45–266.

Recovery of subsequent taxes paid under a void tax title: Subsequent taxes paid in good faith by the holder of a void tax title may be recovered of the owner: Claussen v. Rayburn, 14–136.

The tax purchaser may recover such taxes, whether paid for and on account of the holder of the patent title or his assignor or grantor: Guise v. Early, 72–283.

A tax purchaser may maintain an action after eviction against the real owner for taxes paid on the property in good faith, and if by such payment he has relieved the land from the lien of such taxes he should have a lien thereon for the amount paid. This is especially true where the owner asks and obtains affirmative relief by cancellation of the tax deed. Where a party asks equity he should be required to do equity: Orr v. Travacier, 21–68.

A tax purchaser whose title is held void may recover of the property owner the taxes paid by him in good faith subsequently to the acquisition of his title: Stewart v. Corbin, 38–571.

In such case the party who has paid the taxes may, in an action in which the invalidity of his deed is declared, have a decree against the owner for taxes paid with six per cent. interest thereon: Harrison v. Sauerwein, 70–291.

Where a party seeks in an equitable action to set aside a tax deed which is valid on its face he should be required to pay the amount of the taxes paid by the purchaser in pursuance of such sale: Gardner v. Early, 69–42.

Where a party failed to recover the property under his tax title because equity would not sustain it, held, that he still might recover the amount expended in the acquisition of the title and for taxes paid on the land: Hunt v. Rowland, 28–349.

A party who in a pleading asking the setting aside of a tax title, offers to repay to the holder of such title the amount paid by him, with interest, etc., should be required to pay that amount upon a judgment in his favor setting aside the tax title: Corbin v. Woodbine, 33–297.

Where, until the answer was filed, the record failed to show that plaintiff had any knowledge of the tax title set up therein, held, that it was sufficient to make an offer to refund the taxes in a replication to such answer: White v. Smith, 68–313.

The purchaser cannot pay taxes for years previous to the sale which have not been included in the amount for which the property was sold, and thereby compel the owner in redeeming, to pay such taxes: Sheppard v. Clark, 58–371.

Where a life estate was vested in the occupant of property with the provision that the owner of the fee should pay the taxes thereon, and the title of the owner of the fee was sold on foreclosure of a mortgage, held, that the purchaser at the foreclosure sale was under obligation to pay the taxes to the holder of the life estate who had paid them, and that upon the failure of the purchaser to make such payment they might be recovered back from such purchaser: Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. King, 66–322.

Where the holder of a tax title conveyed the land with covenants of warranty, and the title was afterwards found to be invalid, but the holder of the tax title recovered judgment for the taxes paid, held, that the payment of the taxes did not give him an interest in the land, and his grantees by reason of the covenants of warranty did not obtain any interest in the money paid by their grantor for taxes, and which was repaid to him in pursuance of the decree: Pierce v. Herrold, 75–504; Hooper v. Sac County Bank, 72–280.

Where there are conflicting claims to property and one party allows the taxes to become delinquent, the other cannot, after enforcing his claim against the property and buying it in at execution sale, recover the amount of taxes which he is compelled to pay to redeem the property from the former owner: Barr v. Patrick, 59–134.

Taxes paid by the purchaser after redemption is made by the owner cannot be recovered, and if he pays them upon the supposition that the redemption is illegal he does so at his peril: Byington v. Allen, 11-3: Byington v. Walsh, 11-27.

A purchaser of property exempt from taxation acquires no such interest by such purchase as will give him the right to a lien for taxes paid for a subsequent year, though the title has passed to a third person who cannot claim the exemption: Byington v. Wood, 12-479.

A purchaser at tax sale who has in good faith paid the subsequent taxes on the property may, after eviction by the owner, recover the amount so paid: Claussen v. Rayburn, 14-136.

The fact that in an action upon a tax title such title is held void is not an adjudication defeating the tax purchaser's right to recover the taxes paid: Stewart v. Corbin, 38-571.

Where defendant acquiring title by assignment of a bond for a deed agreed to pay certain taxes, but bought the property in at tax sale for such taxes, and afterward at suit of the wife of the assignor, who did not join in the assignment, it was held void as being a conveyance of the homestead, held, that defendant could only recover the amount of taxes paid and interest at six per cent., and not a higher interest or penalty: Stinson v. Richardson, 48-541.

Where through his own laches a purchaser has failed to perfect his title within the requisite time, so that the deed does not convey the property, he cannot recover for taxes paid more than five years before he seeks reimbursement therefor, at least as against one who is not an owner of the property at the time the taxes were levied: Hintrager v. Nightingale, 36 Fed., 847.

Amount of recovery: In recovering for taxes subsequently paid the tax purchaser is entitled to only six per cent. interest: Orr v. Travacier, 21-68; Early v. Whittingham, 43-162; Thompson v. Savage, 47-522.

Where it was found in a proceeding to redeem from tax sales that the first sale was invalid while the other two were valid, it was decided that plaintiff should pay the amount of legal taxes upon the land which defendant had paid under the first sale and six per cent. thereon; and should also pay the statute penalty and interest upon the other sales, and also the subsequent taxes paid by the defendant: Curl v. Watson, 25-35.

As the tax deed vests in the purchaser all the right, title and interest of the state and county, the tax purchaser may, upon his deed being declared void on account of fraud or other defect in the sale for taxes due upon the property, recover from the owner the full amount which the owner would have to pay the treasurer to satisfy taxes for which the sale was made, and taxes subsequently paid, if they had not been paid by the purchaser: Everett v. Beebe, 37-452; Light v. West, 42-138; Besore v. Dosh, 43-211; Sexton v. Henderson, 45-160; Miller v. Corbin, 46-150; Springer v. Bartle, 46-688; Crumb v. Davis, 54-25; Walker v. Beaver, 50-504.

But this rule has no application where the land was not subject to taxation for the year for the taxes for which it was sold: Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45-453.

Nor does the rule apply where the title is void for the reason that there was no assessment, levy or sale: Early v. Whittingham, 43-162.

In cases where sales were or could have been lawfully made for taxes, but were rendered void by reason of fraud or other causes, the holder of the tax deed may recover the tax, interest and penalty provided by statute in the payment of delinquent taxes. Even if the taxes for which the land was sold were not a lien on the land, the purchaser may recover the taxes actually paid subsequently to the sale, with six per cent. interest thereon, and no more. The purchaser paying taxes due after the execution of the tax deed may recover on the ground that the land owner ought to reimburse him for the money he expended in good faith for the benefit of the land owner. Where the deed, assessment and other proceedings are void, the purchaser claiming under them can not recover for subsequent taxes paid by him, for the reason that the taxes were not a lien, and the owner was under no obligation to pay them: Barke v. Early, 72-273.

The sale and deed convey the interest of the state and county in the property, but not the tax itself, and a tax purchaser is not entitled to recover from the owner the tax paid where the sale and deed, owing to defective description, are void: Roberts v. Deeds, 57-320.

A tax title being held void for the reason that no taxes were levied for the year for which the land was sold, held, that a tax purchaser could not recover from the owner the amount of taxes paid at the sale, but could only recover taxes paid by him for years subsequent to the sale and within five years next preceding the commencement of an action to recover the same: Thompson v. Savage, 47-522.

Where the sale is void the purchaser is only subrogated to the rights of the county, and therefore his action against the owner to recover the taxes paid must be brought within five years after such taxes become delinquent: Ibid.; Brown v. Painter, 44-368; Sexton v. Peck, 48-250.

An action by the purchaser at a tax sale to recover for taxes paid by him is barred in five years; but held, that where plaintiff, in an action to set aside tax deeds under which defendant claimed, offered to pay defendant the amount of all taxes paid by him which might be found legally due from plaintiff to defendant, the plaintiff could not set up the bar of the statute as to the claim for taxes thus paid: Barke v. Early, 72-273.

Payment of taxes made more than five years before bringing suit to recover them back, and not made for the protection of the title in behalf of the rightful owner, but for the purpose of depriving him of title, cannot be recovered back: Thode v. Spofford, 65-294.

The statutory provisions requiring the filing of a certificate of taxes by the purchaser do not apply to taxes paid by him as owner after he acquires a tax deed: Ibid.

Where a tax title is at the suit of the holder of the legal title declared void on the ground that the taxes for which the sale was made had in fact been paid, the holder of the legal title should be required to repay to the holder of the tax title all the taxes paid by him on the land with six per cent. interest thereon, and such repayment should not be limited to taxes paid within five years. The obligation to repay being merely an incidental equity is not subject to the bar of the statute: Harber v. Sexton, 66-211.

The rule in regard to recovery of taxes paid, in case the sale is irregular or the deed is void by reason of some inherent invalidity which limits the recovery to taxes paid within five years prior to the bringing of action, does not apply where the owner seeks to redeem from a tax sale which has not culminated in a deed by reason of the failure of the tax purchaser to give notice of the expiration of the period of redemption. In such case the amount paid at the sale with the taxes and interest as provided by law must be paid without regard to the length of time which may have expired after the sale: Long v. Smith, 67-22.

Purchaser not subject to: Where a tax sale was held void and the title declared to be in the original owner, and thereafter the tax purchaser commenced action for taxes paid by him subsequent to the purchase, held, that an innocent purchaser of the land from such original owner after the judgment would not be deemed to have notice of the claim for the recovery of taxes paid: Thompson v. Savage, 47-522.

The record showing the payment by the holder of the tax title will not constitute constructive notice to such purchaser so as to charge him therewith: Forey v. Bigelow, 56-381.

Recovery by claimant of property of taxes paid thereon from person afterwards adjudged owner: See notes to § 1403.

III. DEED AS EVIDENCE.

Presumption: The tax deed may be made presumptive evidence of the regularity and validity of all prior proceedings; and as to minor matters relating to the mode or manner of exercising the power of taxation, which may be dispensed with, it may be made conclusive, but there are some indispensable requisits which must be observed, and as to these the deed cannot be made conclusive: Allen v. Armstrong, 16-508.

The corresponding section of the Revision (§ 784), which declared that the tax deed should be conclusive evidence of the regularity of all prior proceedings, held, unconstitutional in so far as it attempted to make the deed conclusive as to the existence of the essential prerequisites of the taxing power, such as assessment, levy, sale, etc., as depriving a person of his property without due process of law; but it was held that as to non-essentials, or matters simply directory, the deed may be made conclusive. Also held, that it was competent for the legislature to make such deed prima facie evidence of its own validity and the regularity of prior proceedings: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356, 385.

Under the same statutory provision, held, that the deed was prima facie evidence of those things of which it was improperly declared to be conclusive: Hurley v. Woodruff, 30-260.

Whether the legislature can make a tax deed, which is false in fact, conclusive evidence of the matters therein recited, quære: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

The provisions of this section as to the effect of the deed as evidence apply in equity as well as at law: Clark v. Thompson, 37-536.

It is competent for the legislature to declare that the acts of de facto officers shall be valid: Allen v. Armstrong, 16-508.

The presumption is in favor of the validity of a tax deed: Grove v. Benedict, 69-346.

As evidence: One asserting title under a tax deed has but to introduce it in evidence and the law puts upon his adversary the burden of showing its invalidity. He will not be guilty of fraud in asserting title under it, only as he has actual knowledge that it was invalid, or introduces it in evidence with intent to accomplish some unlawful purpose: Brownell v. Storm Lake Bank, 63-754.

The tax deed is competent evidence of the assignment of the certificate of purchase to the grantee of the deed: Stahl v. Roost, 34-475.

A tax deed is prima facie evidence of title in the grantee, and where a vendor had agreed to make good title in his vendee, and introduced in evidence the tax deed to himself to show compliance with such contract, held, that the burden of proving any fact defeating such deed was upon defendant: Hunt v. Gray, 76-268.

Where by city charter under ordinance the collection of taxes is made presumptive evidence of the regularity of prior proceedings, a party claiming that a deed is void because of irregular assessment of a special tax must allege and prove the same: McNamara v. Estes, 22-246.

Where the special charter of a city under which property was sold for taxes provided that its collector's deed should have the same force and effect as a treasurer's deed, and also that a demand of the tax must be made before sale, held, that although the deed might be prima facie evidence of the regularity of prior proceedings it was not concluclusive as to the fact of demand, and might be overthrown by evidence on that point: Lathrop v. Howley, 50-39.

Prima facie evidence: The deed is prima facie evidence of assessment: Madson v. Sexton, 37-562. The fact that the assessment book does not show all the facts necessary to establish the assessment does not prove that such facts do not exist: Genther v. Fuller, 36-604.

The production of the treasurer's deed properly acknowledged and recorded makes out in favor of the holder a presumptive case that the land was assessed: Mathews v. Burdick, 38 Fed., 894.

And held, that negative evidence consisting of the fact that the assessment books or records for the year were not to be found, would not overcome such presumption: Ibid.

In view of the presumptive validity of a tax deed it will be assumed that land subject to taxation was entered in some form upon the assessment books unless the contrary is made to appear: Lathrop v. Irwin, 65 N. W., 972.

The presumption in support of a tax deed will sustain a sale for taxes which might properly have been assessed on the property, it not appearing whether or not such property was assessed for taxation, the records on which such assessment would appear having been destroyed: Barrett v. Kevane, 69 N. W., 1036.

The deed is prima facie evidence as to the fact of sale: Leavitt v. Watson, 37-93.

A treasurer's deed is presumptive evidence of the fact that the property sold for taxes has been listed and assessed, and the introduction of the deed in the proper form casts upon the other party the burden of proving that in fact no legal assessment has been made: Jenkins v. McTigue, 22 Fed., 148.

The deed is presumptive evidence that the taxes for which the sale is made, if for prior years, have been properly brought forward, and if such objection is not made until the time within which the deed can be attacked has elapsed, the property owner cannot afterwards question the sale on that ground: Guthrie v. Harker, 27 Fed., 586.

The deed is prima facie evidence as to the fact of assessment, listing and levy, but it is conclusive as to the manner: Robinson v. First Nat. Bank, 48-354.

Where the tax deed shows a sale for less than the whole amount due it will be presumed that such sale was made under the provisions of § 1425: Griffin v. Tuttle, 74-219.

Where the deed shows on its face that it was made at a sale begun on the first Monday of a month subsequent to October, it is prima facie evidence that some of the reasons mentioned in § 1431 existed for commencing the sale at such subsequent day: Lorain v. Smith, 37-67.

A party attacking the deed on the ground that the sale was not made at the proper time must at least show that the facts which would have authorized a sale at the date when the sale appears to have been made did not exist: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160; Love v. Welch, 34-192: Bullis v. Marsh, 56-744.

While the tax sale register is admissible in evidence, yet its failure to show the offering of the land on the first Monday of October, which is the regular day for tax sale, does not overcome the prima facie evidence of regularity arising from the deed itself: Bullis v. Marsh, 56-747.

The deed is presumptive evidence, not only of the fact of giving the expiration notice required by § 1441, but also that the notice was in due form: Knudson v. Litchfield, 87-111.

It will be presumed in the absence of a showing to the contrary that the redemption notice was served upon the person in whose name the land was taxed: Soukup v. Union Inv. Co., 84-448.

The tax deed is at least prima facie evidence of the fact of service of notice of expiration of the period of redemption: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Even though the evidence of notice by publication shows that such publication was not sufficient it will be presumed that personal notice was given which was sufficient in the absence of evidence to the contrary: Baker v. Crabb, 73-412.

A party claiming adversely to the deed must prove that the land was assessed in some name in order to create a necessity for proof of service of notice on such person: Fuller v. Armstrong, 53-683; Chambers v. Haddock, 64-556.

Where such notice and proof of service appear on their face to be regular, and a deed is issued in accordance therewith, any person asserting the invalidity of the deed upon the ground that the service was not made as the proof shows, or that the person served was not the right person, has the burden of overcoming the prima facie evidence furnished by the papers: Wilson v. Crafts, 56-460.

May be rebutted: Where it appears that an essential step in the proceeding has not been complied with, the prima facie effect of the deed is overcome: Rayburn v. Kuhl, 10-92.

A failure to recite a certain fact in an attempt to recite the performance of all the requisite steps toward the execution of a tax deed is evidenced by implication that such fact did not exist, and repels the prima facie effect of the deed: Long v. Burnett, 13-28.

Evidence of a failure, after search, to find any record of a tax sale for the year in which the sale is claimed to have been made, throws upon the holder of the tax deed the burden of proving such essential step, and overcomes the prima facie evidence of the deed: Ibid.

Facts in a particular case held sufficient to overcome the presumption as to assessment arising from the deed: Easton v. Savery, 44-654.

Where a record is required to be made of any fact essential to the validity of the tax, parol evidence of the existence of that fact cannot be substituted. So in regard to a levy, where the records being introduced were found not to contain any evidence of a levy, held, that the presumption of levy arising from the execution and recording of the deed was overcome, and the burden of proving a levy in fact was thrown upon the party claiming under the deed, which he could sustain only by showing that a record once existed which had been lost or destroyed: Moore v. Cook, 40-290.

Where the evidence showed the entire absence of the records which would exist in case assessment of property, levy of tax, and sale for non-payment thereof, had been made, and it did not appear that such records had been lost or destroyed, held, that the prima facie evidence furnished by the deed was sufficiently overcome: Early v. Whittingham, 43-162.

When, upon the introduction of the assessment books, it appears that the description of the property is void for uncertainty, such evidence shows a want of assessment of the land described in the deed, and throws upon the party claiming under the deed the burden of proving that the property assessed was the same as that deeded: Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Scott, 44-143.

A levy of the tax being essential to the validity of the sale, the deed is only presumptive evidence of such levy, and as a valid levy cannot be established by parol evidence, if no record of a levy can be found in the proper office, the presumption that there was a levy arising from the deed is overcome: Prouty v. Tallman, 65–354; Williams v. Poor, 65–410.

But in a particular case, held, that a sheet of paper containing an order of the properly authorized board making a levy was a sufficient record without having been recorded in a book: Prouty v. Tallman, 65–354.

Conclusive evidence: A deed reciting the fact of a lawful sale of the property is conclusive evidence of such sale: Gould v. Thompson, 45–450.

The fact that the treasurer does not proceed to collect the taxes by distress and sale will not render invalid a deed made in pursuance of a subsequent sale of land therefor; as to that matter the deed is conclusive: Stewart v. Corbin, 25–144.

Under the provisions of the Revision which authorized a warrant of sale being issued to the county treasurer under which the sale was to be made, held, that as such warrant was not an essential part of the taxing power and might have been dispensed with by the legislature, the tax deed might properly be held conclusive evidence of the regularity of such warrant: Hurley v. Powell, 31–64.

The tax deed is conclusive as to the notice or advertisement: Allen v. Armstrong, 16–508; Madson v. Sexton, 37–562; Scofield v. McDowell, 47–129; Bullis v. Marsh, 56–747.

That a certain tract of land, the taxes upon which are delinquent, is not contained in the advertisement will not render a sale thereof void. The owner being presumed to know that the taxes on his land were delinquent, and that such land was subject to be sold at the sale as advertised, cannot complain of want of notice: Shawler v. Johnson, 52–472.

The tax deed is conclusive as to the copy of the advertisement having been filed as required by statute: Hurley v. Powell, 31–64.

It is also conclusive as to the manner of assessment: Easton v. Perry, 37–681.

And as to the manner of sale: Ware v. Little, 35–234; Smith v. Easton, 37–584.

Where by the deed it appears that the sale was of an entire tract which might have been sold en masse if assessed to unknown owners, the deed will be conclusive evidence that the assessment was in such manner as that the proceedings were valid: Easton v. Perry, 37–681.

The deed is conclusive as to the regularity of prior proceedings: Leavitt v. Watson, 37–93; Martin v. Cole, 38–141.

And as to the regularity of the assessment, listing and levy: Robinson v. First Nat. Bank, 48–354.

It is conclusive that the sale was made at the proper time: Clark v. Thompson, 37–536; Phelps v. Meade, 41–470; Shawler v. Johnson, 52–472; Slocum v. Slocum, 70–259.

A mistake in the recital as to the date of sale will not invalidate the deed: Hurlburt v. Dyer, 36–474.

The assessment, levy and sale being admitted in fact, the deed is conclusive as to the manner thereof: Bulkley v. Callanan, 32–461.

Where a deed shows that a sale was made in a manner which, under some circumstances would be proper, those circumstances, are conclusively presumed to have existed and the deed is valid: Ware v. Little, 35–234.

If there has been a sale in fact the deed is conclusive as to the manner, for instance, as to the method of offering the lands for sale. So held where it appeared that lands were struck off to parties who had furnished written bids: Leavitt v. Watson, 37–93.

If there was a bona fide sale in substance and in fact, the tax deed is conclusive evidence that it was done at the proper time and manner, the provisions as to these matters being merely directory and not fundamental: Phelps v. Meade, 41–470; Callanan v. Hurley, 93 U. S., 387.

Where the assessor left off from the head of his book the words "owners unknown," but entered the lands without connecting them with any name, fixed the value of the lands for the purpose of taxation, and entered them with the proper valuation upon the tax list, and entered the amount of the various taxes properly therein, held, that such entry related to the manner in which property of unknown owners was to be listed and assessed and that, consequently, the treasurer's deed was conclusive: Jenkins v. McTigue, 22 Fed., 148.

The statutory provisions making a tax deed conclusive evidence as to certain facts is applicable in equity as well as at law, and a court of equity can not set the deed aside for matters as to which it is properly made conclusive evidence: Clark v. Thompson, 37–536.

Not conclusive: The deed cannot be made conclusive as to the fact of assessment: Powers v. Fuller, 30–476.

Although the tax deed is conclusive as to the regularity of the assessment, yet where land was assessed in the name of the owner, and also to owner unknown, held, that the latter assessment was entirely void, and a deed issued in pursuance of a sale thereunder was not valid: Nichols v. McGlathery, 43–189.

Recitals in the deed are not conclusive as to whether the property was in fact sold: McNamara v. Estes, 22–246.

A tax deed is not conclusive evidence that a sale, private in its nature, is a public sale such as is required. It is always competent to show fraud committed by the officers, or any arrangement between the officers and the purchaser which substitutes a private for a public sale such as the law contemplates. Such a purchase is a fraud upon the owner of the land and renders the sale invalid: Butler v. Delano, 42–350.

The deed is conclusive as to manner of sale to only a limited extent. It is always competent to defeat it by showing fraud of the officer or purchaser at such sale: Ibid.; Thompson v. Ware, 43–455; Chandler v. Keeler, 46–596.

The deed cannot be regarded as conclusive evidence of a sale which the treasurer had no power to make: Gardner v. Early, 69–42.

It is not conclusive evidence of the regularity of proceedings which are shown upon its very face to have been irregular, as, for instance, a sale in gross: Boardman v. Bourne, 20-134.

It is not conclusive evidence of the giving of notice of expiration of the time of redemption. The notice of which the statute makes a deed conclusive evidence is notice of sale: Reed v. Thompson, 56-455.

Sale in gross: A tax deed showing upon its face a sale of distinct tracts in gross is void: Boardman v. Bourne, 20-134; Byam v. Cook, 21-392; Ferguson v. Heath, 21-438; Harper v. Sexton, 22-442; Ackley v. Sexton, 24-320; Hurlburt v. Dyer, 36-474; Gray v. Coan, 30-536; Royce v. Aplington, 90 352.

Where several distinct and separate tracts of land are sold en masse, the sale and deed thereunder are void: Rankin v. Miller, 43-11.

In a particular case, held, that the recitals of the deed showed a sale in a quarter-section tract, although it also recited the amount of tax due on each forty-acre subdivision thereof: Clark v. Thompson, 37-536.

But the deed is not conclusive that the sale was made in gross, and the sale may be valid although the deed is void: Ware v. Thompson, 29-65.

That a tax certificate shows the sale to have been made in parcels does not estop the treasurer who has executed the deed from denying its validity: Byam v. Cook, 21-392.

A sale in gross of tracts larger than forties if assessed to a known owner is not void, and unless it appears from the deed that the owner was unknown that fact will not be presumed: Smith v. Easton, 37-584; Bulkley v. Callanan, 32-461.

Where a deed shows a sale in parcels it is conclusive, and proof that the sale was actually in gross will not be received: Rima v. Cowan, 31-125; Sibley v. Bullis, 40-429; Clark v. Thompson, 37-536; Chandler v. Keiler, 44-371.

The legislature having authorized sales in tracts larger than the smallest government subdivision in certain cases a tax deed is conclusive evidence as to the regularity of the sale in that respect: Martin v. Cole, 38-141.

No objection to the validity of the tax title can, after the expiration of five years from the time of sale, be made on the ground that the deed shows upon its face that several tracts of land were sold for a gross sum: Monk v. Corbin, 58-503.

As to sales en masse see also notes to § 1422.

Prior payment of taxes: Proof of payment of taxes before the sale will overcome the deed and defeat the purchaser's title: Gaylord v. Scarff, 6-179.

In such a case the deed is void: Patton v. Luther, 47-236.

If it be shown that the land was in fact redeemed the deed will be void, notwithstanding a failure of the officer to make proper entry of redemption: Fenton v. Way, 40-196.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence showed that the taxes for which the sale was made had been paid, and the deed was therefore held void: Harber v. Sexton, 66-211.

Further to the effect that the deed is void when the taxes have in fact been paid, see notes to § 1418.

SEC. 1445. Who may question. In all actions involving the title to real estate claimed and held under a deed executed substantially as aforesaid by the treasurer, the person claiming title adverse to the title conveyed thereby shall be required to prove, in order to defeat the title, either that the real property was not subject to taxation for the year or years named in the deed, that the taxes had been paid before the sale, that the property had been redeemed from the sale and that such redemption was had or made for the use and benefit of persons having the right of redemption, or that there had been an entire omission to list or assess the property, or to levy the taxes, or to give notice of the sale, or to sell the property; but no person shall be permitted to question the title acquired by a treasurer's deed without first showing that he, or the person under whom he claims title, had title to the property at the time of the sale, or that the title was obtained from the United States or this state after the sale, and that all taxes due upon the property have been paid by such person, or the person under whom he claims title; but in any case where a person had paid his taxes, and through mistake in the entry made in the treasurer's books, or in the receipt, the land upon which the taxes were paid was afterward sold, the treasurer's deed shall not convey the title; and in all cases where the owner of the lands sold for taxes shall resist the validity of the tax title, he may prove fraud committed by the officer selling the same, or in the purchaser, to defeat the same, and, if fraud is established, the sale and title shall be void. [Same.]

Party must show title: The provision of this section that no person shall question the title acquired under a tax deed without first showing that he or the person under whom he claims had title to the property at the time of the sale, etc., is intended to prevent a stranger from questioning the tax title, but the holder of a prior tax title is not thereby prohibited from questioning the title of a subsequent tax purchaser: Adams v. Burdick, 68-666.

The object of the provision that no person shall question a tax title without showing title in himself is to prevent a stranger from questioning the tax title and to make it secure against all except the true owner: State v. Havrah, 70 N. W., 618.

It cannot be presumed that by this provision the legislature intended to deprive any person of a remedy for actual fraud existing independently of the statute. While the section gives a remedy only to the owner of the land, it cannot be held to deny a similar remedy to others. If fraud has been committed, and by it some one has been injured, a remedy is provided by the general principles of equity jurisprudence: Singer Mfg. Co. v. Yerger, 2 McCrary, 583.

Where defendant claims under a treasurer's deed, upon its face sufficient to convey title, the court cannot consider any evidence of the invalidity of the deed, without finding that plaintiff was holder of the patent title: Foster v. Ellsworth, 71-262.

A legal title, though not of record, is sufficient to entitle the holder to defend against a tax title: Chandler v. Keeler, 46-596.

The provision that no person shall be permitted to question a tax title without first showing that he or his grantors had title at the time of sale has repeatedly been applied in accordance with the letter of it: Baird v. Law, 61 N. W., 1086.

Possession will not be sufficient to show title if it is by virtue of a void deed: Ibid.

Where the record on appeal does not show the instrument through which the party assailing the tax title claims it will not be presumed that such instruments were defective: Medland v. Walker, 64 N.W., 797.

Where the person taking a tax title shows title in himself by a chain of conveyance the fact that one of the conveyances in his chain of title does not show that the grantor was not married or that the premises were not a homestead will not be sufficient defect in his title to prevent a questioning of the sufficiency of the tax title: Nicodemus v. Young, 90-423.

One who has had no possession of the land, has paid no taxes thereon, and has acquired an apparent title thereto for speculative purposes only is not entitled to question the validity of a tax title to such land: Krueger v. Walker, 63 N. W., 320.

No person can question the title acquired by tax deed without first showing that he or the person under whom he claims had title to the property at the time of sale. The title required to be shown is such a one that a party claiming thereunder, if plaintiff, could recover on the strength thereof: Lockridge v. Daggett, 54-332.

Possession under a claim of right which is sufficient to constitute color of title for the statutory period of limitation is sufficient to show title required as a basis for attacking a tax deed: Shelley v. Smith, 66 N. W., 172.

One who would question the validity of a tax title acquired under a treasurer's deed must show that he has a title or interest in the lands in dispute: Robinson v. Bailey, 26 Fed., 219.

Where a person attacking a tax sale fails to establish a patent title in himself, he cannot have relief against such tax title: Varnum v. Shuler, 69-92.

Where plaintiff failed to introduce any evidence tending in any manner to prove that he had title to the land at the time of sale, held, that he could not be allowed to prove fraud committed at the sale for the purpose of defeating a tax title: Pitt's Sons Mfg. Co. v. Beed, 69-546.

Where the person calling in question the title acquired by a tax deed testifies that he is the owner of the property claimed by him, and this testimony is admitted without objection, it is prima facie sufficient to show title to the property authorizing him to question the validity of the deed: Hintrager v. Kiene, 62-605; Pitts v. Seavey, 88-336.

But the testimony of claimant that he owns under deed from another, who it appears has no title is not sufficient: Baird v. Law, 61 N. W., 1086.

A patent issued by the state, accompanied by a copy of the patent issued by the United States to the state, duly authenticated by the commissioner of the general land office, held sufficient evidence of title to warrant the person claiming such title in questioning the validity of a tax title: Callanan v. Wayne County, 73-709.

The transferee of a tax title cannot demand a decree quieting his title without showing that he is the grantee of the original holder of the tax title: Krueger v. Walker, 80-733.

On the other hand a person seeking to attack a tax title must show that he is the owner of the patent title; and where a party appeared to be the grantee of persons claiming to be heirs of the holder of the patent title, without any showing that the holder of the patent title was dead and that the grantors were his heirs, held, that the right of the grantee to question the tax title was not sufficiently shown: Ibid.

Where plaintiff in an action to quiet title alleges ownership of the premises under a tax deed, and defendant denies generally, the validity of the tax deed is thereby put in issue: Pitts v. Lewis, 81-51.

Proof of title in the party seeking to redeem held sufficient: Bowers v. Hallock, 71-218.

In an action to redeem in equity from a a tax sale the plaintiff need not show absolute title in himself as any right or interest in the property is sufficient to entitle him to make redemption: Paxton v. Boss, 89-661.

The word owner, used in an agreed statement of facts, held to mean a person having title as required by this section: Frank v. Arnold, 73-370.

One who has a certificate of purchase at tax sale which he has neglected to convert into a deed within the time allowed for that purpose has not such title that he may question the sufficiency of the tax title of a subsequent purchaser of the same land: Johns v. Griffin, 76-419.

In a particular case, held, that the title of the person seeking redemption from a tax deed was sufficiently shown to entitle him to attack the deed: Henderson v. Robinson, 76-603.

The provisions of this section as to who may question a tax deed apply to formal defects therein as well as otherwise: Lynn v. Morse, 76-665.

And under the facts of a particular case, held, that plaintiff showed such title in the property as to entitle him to question the sufficiency of defendant's tax deed: Ibid.

Payment of taxes must be shown: One who has not paid taxes upon the land is not entitled to relief as against a tax deed: Lathrop v. Irwin, 65 N. W., 972.

The provisions of this section, that a person questioning the title acquired by the treasurer's tax deed shall first show that all taxes due upon the property have been paid by him or the person under whom he claims title, is applicable as to any taxes remaining unpaid and due to the state or county, but it does not require that the property owner seeking to question a tax title must first pay to the holder of the title all the taxes which the latter has paid, with interest and penalties. It is sufficient in such case that the person seeking to set aside the tax title shall aver his readiness and willingness to pay any amount of taxes which shall be found to have been paid by the holder of the tax title: Taylor v. Ormsby, 66-109; Adams v. Burdick, 68-666.

A defendant who has a right to demand from plaintiff the payment of taxes which it is claimed are unpaid must raise the objection that it does not appear that all the taxes due upon the property have been paid, by demurrer, or such objection will be deemed waived: Adams v. Burdick, 68-666.

It is a sufficient compliance with this provision requiring that a person attacking a tax title shall show that taxes due on the land have been paid, that the party acting for the plaintiff made a tender of the amount and an offer to pay taxes due on the land in controversy to the county auditor after the treasurer's deed was executed, and in his petition offers to pay whatever amount is found due: Heaton v. Knight, 63-686.

Where the taxes have all been paid by the holder of the tax title, the person seeking to attack it will not be precluded from doing so on the ground that he has not paid the taxes where he offers to pay the taxes paid by the tax title holder for which such holder is entitled to recover in case the person attacking the title is allowed to redeem therefrom. Nicodemus v. Young, 90-423.

The provision as to a party who has not paid the tax due upon the land not being allowed to question the validity of the deed, refers to the taxes due to the state, and county, and not to such taxes as have been paid by the tax sale purchaser. Lynn v. Morse, 76-665; Wilkin v. Wilkin, 91-652.

Where the party seeking relief against the deed has made every reasonable effort to pay all the taxes due upon the property, he will not be defeated by the fact that owing to the action of the officers, some of the taxes on the property have not been discovered, such party offering to pay any taxes which may be found due: Cahalan v. Van Sant, 87-593

The fact that taxes for years preceding the sale were not paid by the party seeking to set aside the deed will not be a bar to such action inasmuch as taxes not included in a subsequent sale are released: Phillips v. Wilmarth, 66 N. W., 1053.

Tender of the sum due is equivalent to payment, and if for any reason the amount cannot be ascertained, plaintiff may ask the court to ascertain and determine it, averring his readiness to pay the amount so ascertained. But it is not sufficient to aver that complainant is unable to ascertain the amount due without stating facts showing such inability and without offering any proof upon the subject: Lawler v. Brett, 20 Fed., 219.

The defense of fraud contemplated in the last proviso of this section may be shown to defeat the title whenever it is resisted by the owner, and it is not necessary for the owner to show in such case that the taxes have been paid: Corbin v. Beebee, 36-336; Miller v. Corbin, 46-150.

Such proviso is not applicable where the party claiming adversely to the tax purchaser seeks to defeat the tax deed on a ground which will render it invalid. It does not apply where the tax title is defeated by an estoppel which would have been equally effective as against any other title: Bullis v. Noble, 36-618.

Under the corresponding provisions of the Revision, held, that a land owner might set up the fact that there was no assessment in fact without showing payment of the taxes: Immegart v. Gorgas, 41-439.

Where a tax title is asserted under a deed which is void, the owner is not required to show that the sum necessary to redeem the land was tendered: Adams v. Snow, 65-435.

The purpose of the provision that no person shall question the title acquired by a treasurer's deed without showing that all taxes upon the property have been paid by him or the person under whom he claims is to enforce the payment of taxes and stimulate land owners to discharge the duty imposed on all citizens to pay taxes levied upon their lands. It is not sufficient in the petition attacking a tax title to offer to pay taxes if plaintiff is found to be entitled to redeem. This requirement applies to all action in which it is sought to redeem from a tax sale on the ground that the tax deed was issued without notice of the expiration of the time for redemption: Maxwell v. Palmer, 73-595.

Where the fact that plaintiff asking to redeem from a tax sale has not paid the taxes on the property appears on the face of the petition is not taken advantage of by demurrer, it cannot afterwards be relied on to defeat such action: Medland v. Walker, 64 N. W., 797.

If the objection is not raised by demurrer or answer it is waived: Lynn v. Morse, 76-665.

The taxes contemplated are those due when the action attacking the title is commenced: Ibid.

Fraud: Fraud of the purchaser as referred to in this section does not render the tax title absolutely void, but voidable only, and an attack thereon must be made within the period of limitation fixed by § 1448: Waggoner v. Mann, 83-17.

As to what constitutes fraud of officers and the effect thereof upon the sale, see § 1430 and notes.

As to what constitutes a public sale, see notes to § 1418.

Fraud of purchaser: A purchaser, either in person or by agent, at a sale where the bidders form themselves into a ring and take turns in bidding, is presumed to be a party to such unlawful proceeding, whether it is affirmatively shown that he entered into any agreement sanctioning it or not, and his title will be void: Kerwer v. Allen, 31–578.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held, that there had been such a combination at the sale as to render it void: Easton v. Mawkinney, 37–601.

A tacit understanding among bidders that they will not bid against each other will invalidate a sale: Johns v. Thomas, 47–441; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Yarger, 2 McCrary, 584; Frank v. Arnold, 73–370.

The fact that at the tax sale one person bids in property for two others, indicating the person for whom he bids, in each instance, does not amount to a combination constituting fraud in the absence of any fraudulent agreement between the purchasers for whom the bids are made, nor does the fact that at such sale two different agents make purchases for the same person constitute fraud: Pearson v. Robinson, 44–413.

The fact that the principal and his agent are both present at the tax sale bidding in the property will not render the purchase by the agent for the principal invalid: Jury v. Day, 54–573.

A tax title will not be affected by the fact that the agent who bought in the property for the principal himself stood in such relation to the property that he could not have purchased it: Ibid.

The fact that all the tracts sold at a tax sale were bought in for the full amount of the tract, held not to prove combination among the bidders: Holsey v. Gordon, 47–693.

It appearing that there were three bidders at a tax sale, and that they did not bid against each other, and this being the only evidence of a fraudulent combination, held, that it was not sufficient and that fraud could not be presumed: Beeson v. Johns, 59–166.

Facts in a particular case held not sufficient to show fraud in procuring a tax title so as to render it inferior to a prior mortgage: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Wright, 54–606.

Testimony of a witness in an action to defeat a tax sale, that the purchaser by his conduct prevented competition in reference to many pieces of land bid for by him, etc., held, to be immaterial and properly excluded, there being no offer to connect it with the piece in controversy: Eldridge v. Kuchl, 27–160.

Effect of fraud: Where the sale is void for fraud, under the provisions of statute, the owner may set up and show such fraud to defeat the tax title in any action in which the holder thereof relies upon such title: Corbin v. Beebee, 36–336.

A ring sale, being voidable but not void, cannot be questioned after the lapse of the five-year period of limitation: Bullis v. Marsh, 56–747.

Innocent purchaser not affected with fraud: A tax title which is void for fraud, as provided by statute, will nevertheless be held good in the hands of a purchaser for value without notice of such fraud, the word "void" being construed as voidable: Van Shaack v. Robbins, 36–201; Sibley v. Bullis, 40–429; Ellis v. Peck, 45–112; Huston v. Markley, 49–162.

A purchaser in good faith from the tax purchaser, without notice of irregularities, will not be affected by the fact that the sale was in gross, or not publicly made: Martin v. Ragsdale, 49–589.

Where assessment has been made and other essential jurisdictional steps have been taken the sale can not be regarded as absolutely void although fraudulent and the innocent purchaser is therefore protected; but where there is a fatal defect, as, for instance, a want of levy, the sale is absolutely void, and a good faith purchaser for value acquires no title. The defects of such a tax title appear of record, and the purchaser acquires no equity as against the land owner: Ellis v. Peck, 45–112.

Where the treasurer, in pursuance of a proposition made by a party before the sale opened, to take all lands not sold to others, made out certificates to such party after the sale was completed, there being no bids, such party not being present nor represented, and paying no money, but simply issuing receipts of the railroad company for whose benefit the tax was originally voted, held, that there was no sale, and that an innocent purchaser, under a tax deed issued in pursuance of such transaction, would not be protected: Truesdale v. Green, 57–215.

The title of a person who claims as grantee of one acquiring title by tax sale can not be attacked on the ground that the transfer to him is by deed without acknowledgment, the person attacking his title being the grantee under a quitclaim deed and having notice of the rights of the holder of the tax title: Kreuger v. Walker, 63 N. W., 320.

Purchaser by quitclaim: A grantee by quitclaim deed, of a party holding a tax title void for fraud takes subject to all equities against his grantor: Watson v. Phelps, 40–482; Besore v. Dosh, 43–211, 212; Springer v. Bartle, 46–688.

Burden of proof: The holder of title under a fraudulent tax sale, claiming to be a bona fide purchaser has the burden of proof as to that fact: Light v. West, 42–138.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to affect the purchaser of tax title without notice of fraud in the sale, both by circumstances sufficient to put him on his guard and by notice of the agent through whom the purchase was negotiated: Crumb v. Davis, 54–25.

The assignee of a certificate of tax sale takes it subject to all the infirmities by which it would have been affected in the hands of the tax purchaser: Singer Mfg. Co. v. Yarger, 2 McCrary, 584.

Estoppel: Where an owner supposes an adverse tax title on his property to be defective, but has reason to believe that persons claiming under such title have no knowledge of the defect, his silence will estop him from asserting such defect as against the persons claiming under the tax title: Mathews v. Culbertson, 83–434.

Where the owner of the title has for many years failed to make objections to the validity of a tax title under which the claimant has gone into possession of the land he will be estopped from objection to such title and the claimant under the tax deed may have his title quieted: Hewitt v. Morgan, 88–468; Pitts v. Seavey, 88–336.

Where the land was unimproved and unoccupied, held, that omission of the party attacking a tax title thereon for several years to pay the taxes on the property was not such as to defeat his right to relief: Nicodemus v. Young, 90–423.

SEC. 1446. Sales wrongfully made—purchaser indemnified. When, by mistake or wrongful act of the treasurer, land has been sold on which no tax was due at the time, or when land is sold in consequence of error in describing it in the tax receipt, the county shall hold the purchaser harmless by paying him the amount of principal, interest and costs to which he would have been entitled had the land been rightfully sold, and the treasurer and his bondsmen shall be liable to the county therefor to the amount of his official bond; or the purchaser, or his assignee, may recover the same directly of him and his bondsmen. [C.'73, § 899; R., § 785; C.'51, § 509.]

This authorizes the purchaser to recover from the county in such cases the amount paid by him with interest, but not the penalties which would have accrued subsequently to the time of sale if the tax had been legal and the sale had not been made: Corbin v. Davenport, 9–239; Coulter v. Mahaska County, 17–92.

The purchaser at tax sale may thus recover from the county the portion of taxes included in the amount for which the sale is made which could not be rightfully included therein by reason of not having been brought forward by the treasurer: Parker v. Cochran, 64–757.

Where a tax title is void, the holder thereof cannot recover from the county, taxes paid by him upon the property subsequently to the acquisition of such title: Scott v. Chickasaw County, 53–47.

The owner by voluntarily redeeming from such a sale does not become subrogated to the rights of the purchaser against the county: Morris v. Sioux County, 42–416, 418.

An action by the purchaser to recover from the county the taxes, interest and costs for which the sale is made in case the sale is void because no taxes were due by reason of mistake in the description, is not barred until five years from the discovery of the mistake: Storm Lake Bank v. Buena Vista County, 66–128.

A defect in the description of the premises sold such as to prevent title passing will not entitle the purchaser to a refund from the county of the amount paid. Such a case is not one of mistake or wrongful act: Lindsey v. Boone County, 92–86.

Nor in such case is the purchaser entitled to recover from the county subsequent taxes paid on the land: Ibid.

SEC. 1447. Land not subject to taxation. When it shall be made to appear to the treasurer, before the execution of a deed for real estate sold for taxes, or if the deed be returned by the purchaser, that any tract or lot was sold which was not subject to taxation, or upon which the taxes had been paid, he shall make an entry opposite such tract or lot on the sale book that the same was erroneously sold, and such entry shall be evidence of the fact therein stated, and the purchase money shall be refunded to the purchaser. [C.'73, § 901; R., § 789.]

This section contemplates a return of taxes paid by purchaser at tax sale when it is disclosed that the land was not subject to taxation: Hussman v. Durham, 165 U. S., 144.

SEC. 1448. Limitation of actions. No action for the recovery of real estate sold for the non-payment of taxes shall be brought after five years from the execution and recording of the treasurer's deed, unless the owner is, at the time of the sale, a minor, insane person or convict in the penitentiary, in which case such action must be brought within five years after such disability is removed. [C.'73, § 902; R., § 790.]

What statute applicable: A tax deed having been executed while the Revision was in force, held, that the provisions of the Revision and not of the Code of '73 should determine when the period of limitation against the tax title commenced to run: Bailey v. Howard, 65–290.

Constitutionality: This section is not unconstitutional: Barrett v. Love, 48–103.

In what cases applicable: The provision as to limitation of actions with reference to tax titles applies to a sale which is simply voidable but not void, and such sale cannot be questioned after the lapse of five years: Bullis v. Marsh, 56–747.

After the lapse of five years no objection to the validity of the tax title can be made on the ground that the deed shows upon its face that several tracts of land were sold for a gross sum: Ibid.; Monk v. Corbin, 58-503.

This section does not apply to an action in equity by one tenant in common to redeem from a tax sale to his co-tenant on payment of his proper portion of the amount paid by the co-tenant: Phillips v. Wilmarth, 66 N. W., 1053.

A party relying on the bar of the statute must plead it: Nicodemus v. Young, 90-423.

If the failure of the treasurer to make proper entry of the years for which taxes are delinquent is not taken advantage of, and a deed issues, then the statute of limitations begins to run in favor of such deed, and after five years it cannot be questioned on account of such defect: Guthrie v. Harker, 27 Fed., 586.

This section applies only to cases where real property has been "sold for the nonpayment of taxes," and therefore the limitation does not run where there has been actually no sale whatever: Case v. Albee, 28-277.

Nor is the provision applicable where the taxes for which the sale was made had in fact been paid: Patton v. Luther, 47-236; Rath v. Martin, 61 N. W., 941.

Nor where the tax title is void by reason of there having been no assessment, levy or sale: Early v. Whittingham, 43-162; Nichols v. McGlathery, 42-189.

But the fact that the deed shows on its face irregularities in the manner of assessment, levy or sale will not prevent the limitation from running against it: Thomas v. Stickle, 32-71; Douglass v Tullock, 34-262; Peirce v. Weare,41-378; Bullis v. Marsh, 56-747.

Failure to carry forward taxes renders the sale not void but voidable, and does not operate to arrest the running of the statute: Lawrence v. Hornick, 81-193.

Where a tax title has been declared invalid because the delinquent taxes for which the land was sold were not brought forward, the running of time under the statute of limitations will not make the tax title valid, as the rights of the parties were fixed by the former adjudication: Sac County Bank v. Hooper, 77-435.

Where the tax title is absolutely void on account of fraud of the officers, or otherwise, the provisions of this section do not apply; but if there is an irregularity rendering the title voidable only, as, for instance, the fraud of the purchaser, this limitation can be pleaded: Waggoner v. Mann, 83-17.

An action which does not attack the validity of a tax sale and deed, but questions the capacity of a person claiming under such sale and deed, to acquire title thereby, is not barred under the provisions of this section: Sorenson v. Davis, 83-405.

The limitation applies to an action by the holder of the deed as well as to one brought by the original owner of the land: Brown v. Painter, 38-456; Laverty v. Sexton, 41-435; Barrett v. Love, 48-103.

The defense of the limitation of this section is not confined to actions for the recovery of the property, but is available to the holder of the tax title, not only against the owner of the patent title, but against all liens based thereon: Bull v. Gilbert, 79-547.

It is not intended by this section to secure to the owner five years within which to attack the tax title, and the holder of the tax deed may, within that time, institute proceedings to quiet his title against such owner: Stevenson v. Bonesteel, 30-286.

An action by a tax purchaser against the owner to recover taxes paid by the former upon his tax title is barred in five years from such payment: Brown v. Painter, 44-368; Hamilton v. Dubuque, 50-213.

The fact that the deed was executed and recorded more than five years before the commencement of the action does not constitute a valid objection to the introduction of the deed in evidence. Whether the party gains possession under such deed depends upon whether or not the owner of the patent title was in possession at the expiration of five years from the execution of the deed: Monk v. Corbin, 58-503.

Where the rights of the tax purchaser are barred he cannot assert any claim thereunder to have his tax title established as paramount to any other title, nor can he be permitted to redeem from a foreclosure sale: La Rue v. King, 74-288.

Where there is want of power to make a sale it is void and the limitation of this section does not apply, but where the sale is simply voidable it cannot be questioned after five years from the recording of the deed. A sale for taxes of past years not properly carried forward on the tax books is of the latter class: Griffin v. Bruce, 73-126.

A tax deed issued after redemption from the sale is actually made is void, and the title thereunder is not protected by virtue of the limitation contained in this section: Burke v. Cutler, 78-299.

Any defect in the proof of service of the notice of expiration of redemption is cured by the five years' limitation provided for by this section: Bull v. Gilbert, 79-547.

Where the tax deed is improperly executed by reason of the proof of service of notice not being such as is required by statute by reason of a mere defect in such proof, the service of notice having been actually made and a deed issued in pursuance of such notice, the holder of the tax title is protected after the expiration of five years from the execution of such deed: Trulock v. Bentley, 67-602; Rice v. Haddock, 70-318; Bolin v. Francis, 72-619; Shelley v. Smith, 66 N. W., 172.

But where there has been no notice the deed is void and the limitation does not validate it: Wilson v. Russell, 73-395; Slyfield v. Healy, 32 Fed., 2.

Where action to recover property claimed by a tax purchaser under an invalid sale was brought before the expiration of the period of redemption, held, that the filing of an amendment in such action after the period of limitation had elapsed for the purpose of alleging tender of taxes paid by defendant would not render the action subject to the bar of the statute: Barke v. Early, 72-273.

In mandamus: The right of action by mandamus to compel the execution of a deed is barred in three years, and such period commences to run from the time when the holder of the certificate of purchase might, by proper steps on his part, become entitled to the execution of the deed. Therefore, held, that where by ordinance of a city a deed for property sold for municipal taxes might have been executed at a certain time by the giving of ninety days' notice, the failure to give such notice would not prevent the statutory period from commencing to run at the time when, by proper notice, the deed might have been procured: Hintrager v. Traut, 69–746.

When period commences to run: Under the Revision, which limited the action to five years from "the date of the sale," held, that the limitation did not commence to run until the sale was complete, that is, until the delivery and recording of the tax deed: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27–160; Henderson v. Oliver, 28–20; McCready v. Sexton, 29–356, 373.

Under that provision the action of the purchaser for the recovery of the land was barred after five years from the time when the right of the purchaser to a deed became perfect: Thornton v. Jones, 47–397.

Also held, under that provision, that the purchaser could not, by his own act in failing to take a deed when he became entitled thereto, prevent the limitation commencing to run against him: Hintruger v. Hennessy, 46–600.

Under the provisions of the Code of '51 as to the limitation of actions to foreclose a tax deed, held, that the right of action accrued six months after the purchaser became entitled to his deed under the sale: Atkins v. Paige, 50–666.

The change in the language of this section from that of the corresponding section of the Revision in regard to the limitation of action in such cases was simply the adoption of the judicial construction put upon the law as it was contained in the Revision: Griffith's Ex'r v. Carter, 64–193.

The statute of limitations under this section begins to run against a purchaser at a tax sale at the time when he might obtain a deed; that is, three years after date of sale; and after five years after the time it begins to run not only is the tax title extinguished but all right dependent upon it: Innes v. Drexel, 78–253; Doud v. Blood, 89–237.

The tax purchaser cannot, by delaying, extend the time allowed by the statute for bringing the suit: Hintrager v. Nightingale, 36 Fed., 847.

To constitute a commencement of action under this section the notice must be actually served: Ibid.

Where it does not appear that the deed has been recorded the statute does not begin to run. The burden of showing the recording of the deed so that the statute has begun to run devolves upon the party relying upon the statutory bar: Scroggs v. Garver, 69–680.

The statute of limitations begins to run against the tax purchaser from the time he might have been entitled to a deed if he had pursued the course prescribed by statute: La Rue v. King, 74–288.

Although the limitation as against the holder of a tax deed commences to run from the time he becomes entitled to his deed, the same rule does not apply as against the owner, and he may assert his right to the land by taking possession within five years from the recording of the deed: Griffith's Ex'r v. Carter, 64–193; Cassady v. Sapp, 64–203.

Until some one is in actual possession of the land the purchaser at a tax sale is not required to bring an action to prove his right of possession. If the owner of the patent title takes possession within five years after the tax deed is executed and recorded, then if the holder of the tax title fails to bring action within five years from such time, his right of action is barred: Adams v. Griffin, 66–125.

Where the tax purchaser took his deed in 1876, but such deed was improperly issued for the reason that due proof of service of notice of expiration of the time of redemption had not been filed, and afterward, in 1883, such proof was filed, and in 1884 a deed was issued, and a few days thereafter the holder of the patent title took possession of the property which had before that time been unoccupied, held, that an action by the holder of the tax title to quiet his title being brought within five years from the filing of proper proofs, and the issuance of the second deed, was not barred: Ibid.

Where action was commenced by the holder of a tax title within five years after his deed was recorded, but more than five years after he was entitled to receive his deed, and after it was actually executed, and it appeared that defendant went into possession within five years after plaintiff was entitled to take it, held, that the action was not barred. The rule established is, that if the validity of a tax title is disputed within five years from the date when the treasurer's deed might have been taken, the one claiming thereunder must commence his action for the recovery of the land within that period. But this rule can have no application to a case where the validity of the title is disputed for the first time after the expiration of that period: Francis v. Griffin, 72–23.

The limitation commences to run at the execution and recording of the tax deed, irrespective of the question of possession, and if at that time the property is unoccupied, and during the five years the owner of the fee takes actual possession and holds it until the expiration of the period of limitation, the right of the holder of the tax title to recover under his deed is completely barred: Barrett v. Love, 48–103; Barrett v. Holmes, 102 U. S., 651.

But if the land remains unoccupied until the expiration of the period of limitation, the title of the holder of the tax deed becomes complete, and an action by him against the original owner taking possession after that time is not barred under the statute: Moingona Coal Co. v. Blair, 51–447; Lewis v. Soule, 52–11; Bullis v. Marsh, 56–747; Goslee v. Tearney, 52–455.

The holder of a tax deed to unoccupied land is presumed to have constructive possession thereof: Rice v. Haddock, 70–318.

When land is open, wild, and unoccupied and remains in such condition till the expiration of the period of limitation the bar of the statute cannot be interposed as against the holder of the tax title: Dorweiler v. Callanan, 91-299.

But where it appeared that by the authority of the holder of the patent title another went upon the wild and unoccupied land and cut and stacked hay thereon and plowed a strip around the stacks for the purpose of protecting them from fire, such facts constituted an assertion of possession on the part of the holder of the title which would enable him to plead the limitation as against the tax title holder who had not taken possession within the five years: Ibid.

Where the land sold was unoccupied prairie of which the patent owner took actual possession after the recording of the deed, and an action was brought against him by the owner of the tax deed within five years from the date of its recording, held, that the action was not barred, although not brought within five years from the time of the execution of the deed: Strabala v. Lewis, 80-510.

There can be no constructive possession where the actual possession is in another. Therefore, where a person who owns an undivided half interest in land, and claims title to the whole, is in actual possession, his possession will not inure to the benefit of the holder of the tax title of the other half, they not being tenants in common: Willcuts v. Rollins, 85-247.

If the owner of the patent title is in the actual adverse possession of the land at the expiration of the five years from the time the tax purchaser had a right to a tax deed, the tax title is barred: Beedle v. Cowley, 85-540.

Where the premises constitute the homestead, the rights of the wife by virtue of the occupancy as a homestead for the period of limitation after the tax title purchaser becomes entitled to his deed will not be defeated by any act of the husband in leasing the land from the tax purchaser: Ibid.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that the possession relied on by plaintiff to defeat defendant's rights under his tax title was sufficient: Clifton Heights Land Co. v. Randell, 82-89.

Before a party can claim that the holder of a tax title has forfeited his rights by failure to take possession within five years after the record of his deed or to bring action to recover possession in that time, it must appear that such party is the owner of the land: Schee v. La Grange, 78-101.

A tax deed is presumed to be valid in the absence of a showing to the contrary, and the holder is presumed to be in constructive possession of unoccupied land, and until the former owner does something indicating an intention to dispute his title and ownership of the property he has no cause of action against him: Griffin v. Turner, 75-250.

Therefore, where defendants claimed title to land by virtue of a tax deed and plaintiffs claimed the patent title, but made no claim to the land until two days before the expiration of five years from the recording of the tax deed, when he took possession of the land, held, that such entry upon the land was in the nature of a trespass, and defendants were not estopped from asserting their tax title as a defense: Ibid.

And if the owner of the patent title does not, either by taking actual possession or by bringing action, question the validity of the tax deed within the period of limitation, the bar of the statute becomes complete in favor of the holder of the tax deed, and possession taken by the former owner after the period of limitation has expired will be ineffectual: Moingona Coal Co. v. Blair, 51-447; Lewis v. Soule, 52-11; Goslee v. Tearney, 52-455; Zent v. Picken, 54-535; Maxwell v. Hunter, 65-121.

Possession of land necessary to bar an action under a tax title is not required to be of the adverse, hostile and exclusive character required under the general statute of limitations. Its validity depends not so much on the extent and character of the improvements of the land as on the possession which would enable the holder of the tax title to commence his action for the land: Griffith's Ex'r v. Carter, 64-193.

If the tax deed is absolutely void it works no change in the constructive possession which is considered to be in the holder of the patent title, and after five years have elapsed without the taking of possession, such void deed is barred by the statute of limitations and no rights can be asserted thereunder: Patton v. Luther, 47-236.

Where the original owner has been continuously in possession of property by reason of the exercise of such ownership thereover as the nature of the property admits of, no acts of control on the part of the tax purchaser, such as taking wood therefrom and the like, will constitute adverse possession in him: Brett v. Farr, 66-684.

In such cases the fact that by diligence or otherwise the tax purchaser has succeeded in paying the taxes on the property subsequently to the purchase before the owner has been able to do so will not constitute evidence of possession so as to support a plea of limitation under the statute: Ibid.

The holder of a tax deed has no occasion to take any action for the establishment of his right in the property until such right is disputed: Francis v. Griffin, 72-23.

As the right to redeem is not cut off until the service of notice required by § 1441, the period of limitation provided by this section does not commence to run, although the deed has been issued without the requirement as to notice being complied with: Slyfield v. Barnum, 71-245.

Quieting title: After the limitation has run against the tax title the original owner, remaining in possession, may maintain an action against the holder of such title to remove the cloud of the tax deed and quiet the title. Such action is not barred by the limitation provided in the statute: Peck v. Sexton, 41-566; Laverty v. Sexton, 41-435; Wallace v. Sexton, 44-257; Patton v. Luther, 47-236; Tabler v. Callanan, 49-362.

Where a party in possession under tax deed asks to have his title quieted against a party claiming adversely the latter cannot rely upon the limitation to bar the action: Wright v. Lacy, 52–248.

Where plaintiff, in possession under a tax deed more than five years old, brought action to quiet title against defendant claiming under the patent title, held, that defendant in such action was barred by the statute of limitation from attacking the deed as fully as if it were attacking such deed in a direct action: Shawler v. Johnson, 52–472.

An action brought within five years for quieting title in the tax purchaser wherein a decree is rendered in his behalf, establishes his rights as fully as would taking possession, and a tenant of the premises who has previously been holding for the owner of the patent title may become the tenant of the holder of the tax deed: Knudson v. Litchfield, 87–111.

An action to quiet title as against a person holding under a tax deed on the ground that such deed is void, the holder of the title being in possession, cannot be maintained after the five years have expired: Jeffrey v. Brokaw, 35–505.

Where plaintiff, claiming under a tax title, brought action against the original owner to quiet his title, and the original owner, being then in possession, pleaded the limitation and also asked affirmative relief against the plaintiff's title, held, that the fact that defendant was barred affirmative relief would not prevent his defeating plaintiff's action by showing that plaintiff's title was void, and he was allowed thereupon to have his title quieted as against the plaintiff: Miller v. Corbin, 46–150.

In an action to quiet title, where defendant sets up a tax title, plaintiff may set up the bar of the statute: Keokuk & D. M. R. Co. v. Lindley, 48–11.

Where a licensee bought in a tax title more than five years after the execution of the tax deed, held, that as the possession of the licensee was that of his licensor, the holder of the patent title, and as the owner had thus been in possession more than five years, the tax title was barred and the licensee aquired no rights thereunder: Ibid.

A subsequent purchaser from the holder of a tax deed whose rights are barred, taking with notice of the possession of the owner, is bound thereby: Thode v. Spofford, 65–294.

The purchaser from a minor of land sold for taxes may avail himself of the exception of the statute limiting action to property sold at tax sale to five years from the execution and recording of the tax deed in favor of the minor, but such purchaser must bring his action within five years from the date of his purchase: McCaughan v. Tatman, 53–508.

But neither this extension nor the fact that the minor has a year after the removal of the disability in which to redeem from the sale will operate in favor of a person claiming under the tax title as against the minor, and such person must bring his action within five years as specified in the statute: Ibid.

Strangers to the title: The limitation as to the right of action applies only as between the tax purchaser and the owner at the time of sale or one deriving title from such owner. When a person not the owner and having mere color of title comes into possession, the holder of the tax title may have the same time as the holder of any other valid title to test the right of the occupant: Lockridge v. Daggett, 47–679; S. C., 54–332.

A plaintiff who has failed to establish a competent title in himself cannot dispute the tax title, and have his title quieted upon the ground that the right of action of the holder of the tax title has become barred: Varnum v. Shuler, 69–92.

A party who has no title cannot defeat a tax title by five years possession: Baird v. Law, 61 N. W., 1086.

Where a conveyance of a tax title is made after the expiration of five years from the recording of the deed the grantee cannot assert the bar of the statute in support of such title, unless his grantors were entitled to rely upon such bar: Knight v. Campbell, 76–730.

The object of this section is to set at rest all questions between one claiming under a treasurer's deed and those who dispute his right thereunder. It has no application as to a stranger to the title, who during the period of limitation enters into possession of the property; but as against such a party, the right of action, for the recovery of the property continues until barred by the general statute of limitations: Ibid.

Laches: If the tax purchaser through his own laches permits the statutory period to expire without completing the requisite evidence of his purchase and bringing the necessary suit for possession, he can derive no benefit from his purchase at the tax sale. Hintrager v. Nightingale, 36 Fed., 847.

SEC. 1449. Officers de facto. In all actions and controversies involving the question of title to real property held under a treasurer's deed, all acts of assessors, treasurers, auditors, supervisors and other officers de facto shall be of the same validity as acts of officers de jure. [C. '73, § 903; R., § 786.]

See Peirce v. Weare, 41–387.

The stub of a redemption certificate is admissible in evidence under this section: Ellsworth v. Low, 62–178.

The tax certificate and the stub book are sufficient evidence as to the amount paid at the tax sale: Cornoy v. Wetmore, 92–100.

SEC. 1450. Assessment to wrong person. No sale of real estate for taxes shall be invalid on account of its having been taxed in any other name than that of the rightful owner, if it is in other respects sufficiently described. [C. '73, § 904; R., § 787.]

SEC. 1451. Certified copies of records. The books and records belonging to the offices of the auditor and treasurer, or copies thereof properly certified, shall be sufficient evidence to prove the sale of any real estate for taxes, the redemption thereof, or the payment of taxes thereon. [C.'73, § 905; R., § 788.]

SEC. 1452. Cancellation of sale. After eight years have elapsed from the time of any tax sale, and no action has been taken by the holder of a certificate to obtain a deed, it shall be the duty of the county auditor and county treasurer to cancel such sales from their tax-sale index and tax-sale register.

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE SECURITY OF THE REVENUE.

SECTION 1453. County responsible to state. Each county is responsible to the state for the full amount of tax levied for state purposes, excepting such amounts as are certified to be unavailable, double or erroneous assessments. [C.'73, § 908; R., § 793.]

SEC. 1454. Defaulting treasurer. If any treasurer prove to be a defaulter to any amount of state revenue, such amount shall be made up to the state within the next three years by additional levies in such manner as to annual amounts as the board of supervisors may direct. [C.'73, § 909; R., § 794.]

Whether the state may have recourse to the treasurer's bond, quære: State v. Henderson, 40–242.

The provision of this section does not apply where a county treasurer fails to pay over or account for taxes collected to aid in the construction of railways. They constitute a special fund to be paid to the treasurer of the railway company, and the county is not liable therefor: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. R. Co. v. Cowan, 77–535.

SEC. 1455. Interest on warrants. When interest is due and allowed by the treasurer of any county or the state treasurer on the redemption of auditor's warrants or county warrants, the same shall be receipted on the warrants by the holder, with the date of the payment, and no interest shall be allowed by the auditor of state or board of supervisors except such as is thus receipted. [C.'73, § 910; R., § 795.]

SEC. 1456. Discounting warrants. If the state treasurer or any county treasurer, by himself or through another, discounts auditor's warrants, either directly or indirectly, he shall upon conviction be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars. [C.'73, § 911; R., § 796.]

The offense defined in this section and the following is different from that under § 4840. These sections are applicable to cases where no loss to the state or county occurs: State v. Brandt, 41–593, 612.

SEC. 1457. Loaning or depositing public funds. A county treasurer shall be liable to a like fine for loaning out, or in any manner using for private purposes, state, county or other funds in his hands, except that, when permitted by the board of supervisors by resolution entered of record, he may deposit such funds in any bank or banks in the state, to any amount fixed by such resolution; but before such deposit is made such bank shall file a bond with sureties, to be approved by the treasurer and the board of supervisors, in double the maximum amount permitted to be deposited, conditioned to hold the treasurer harmless from all loss by reason of such deposit or deposits. Said bond shall be filed with the county auditor, and action may be brought thereon either by the treasurer or the county, as the board of supervisors may elect. And the state treasurer shall be liable to a fine of not more than ten thousand dollars for a like misdemeanor. But nothing done under the provisions of this section shall alter or affect the liability of the treasurer or the sureties on his official bonds. [17 G. A., ch. 155; C.'73, § 912; R., § 797.]

Under this section a county treasurer is prohibited from depositing county funds in a bank, and where such deposit was made and funds lost by the failure of the bank the treasurer was held liable therefor. (Decided before the amendment of this section): Lowry v. Polk County, 51–50.

Where a bond is given under this section and allowed to stand it constitutes security not merely for the first deposit, but for other deposits which may subsequently be made: Poor v. Merrill, 68–436.

Demand upon the person in charge of the bank where the deposit is made is sufficient to show a breach of the bond: Ibid.

Where a certificate of deposit is issued for the repayment of the deposit when presented, but no objection to the payment of the money is made on the ground of the failure to return such certificate, the fact that it is not returned will not defeat the right to recover, it being afterwards surrendered: Ibid.

This section does not forbid the county treasurer to take other security in addition to the bond, if in his judgment it is demanded: Richards v. Osceola Bank, 79–707.

Money deposited under the provisions of this section is not to be deemed a special deposit. The bank becomes the debtor of the treasurer, and the sureties of the treasurer cannot insist on the money deposited being treated as a trust fund: Cadwell v. King, 84–288; McHenry v. King, 85–717.

SEC 1458. Settlement with treasurer. At the meetings in January and June of each year, the board of supervisors shall make a full and complete settlement with the treasurer, and shall certify to the auditor of state all credits to him for double or erroneous assessments and unavailable taxes, and all dues for state revenue, interest, or delinquent taxes, sales of land, peddlers' licenses, and other dues, the amounts collected therefor, and revenues still delinquent, each year to itself, which reports shall be forwarded by mail. [C.'73, § 913; R., § 798; C.'51, §§ 157–8.]

This settlement with the county is conclusive upon the treasurer and his sureties, and they cannot show that it was fraudulent for the purpose of showing that the defalcation subsequently appearing had really occurred before such settlement: Boone County v. Jones, 54–699. See, also, notes to § 1193.

A settlement with the county treasurer on the basis of a draft or other evidence of money on deposit will not be sufficient where the board had reason to suspect that the accounts of the treasurer are short: District Township v. Morris, 91–198.

SEC. 1459. Payments to state treasurer. The treasurer of each county shall, on or before the fifteenth day of each month, prepare a sworn statement of the amount of money in his hands on the last day of the preceding month belonging to the state treasury, and forward the same by mail to the auditor of state, and shall pay into the state treasury, on or before the fifteenth day of each month, all money due the state remaining in his hands on the last day of the preceding month; he shall also, at any time when directed by the auditor of state, forthwith pay into the state treasury, or treasury of any county, any or all the money due the state and remaining in his hands, and the treasurer of state or any county treasurer is hereby required to receive on such payments the same kinds of money and notes which the county treasurer is authorized and required by law to receive in payment of taxes. In case the treasurer of any county shall fail to prepare and forward the statement required in this section, he shall forfeit and pay for each and every failure a sum not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, to be recovered in an action brought in the name of the state auditor against him and his bondsmen. [20 G. A., ch. 194, § 5; 17 G. A., ch. 122, § 1; C.'73, § 914; R., § 799.]

SEC. 1460. Statement of account. The state auditor shall prepare and transmit to each county auditor, on the first day of May of each year, a statement of the county treasurer's account with the state treasurer, which account shall be submitted by said auditor to the board of supervisors at its next meeting, and, if it finds the same to be incorrect, it shall forthwith certify the facts in relation to the same to the auditor of state. [C.'73, § 916; R., § 801.]

SEC. 1461. Settlement with county treasurer. When a county treasurer goes out of office, he shall make a full and complete settlement with the board of supervisors, and deliver up all books, papers, moneys, and all other property pertaining to the office, to his successor, taking his receipt therefor. The board of supervisors shall make a statement of state dues to the auditor of state, showing all charges against the treasurer during his term of office, and all credits made, the delinquent taxes and other unfinished business charged over to his successor, and the amount of money paid over to his successor, showing to what year and to what account the amount so paid over belongs. It shall also see that the books of the treasurer are correctly balanced before passing into the possession and control of the treasurer elect. [C.'73, § 917; R., § 802.]

The board of supervisors may accept from a treasurer who is in default a promissory note for the amount of his indebtedness; and such note will not be void for want of consideration: Sac County v. Hobbs, 72–69.

SEC. 1462. Each fund kept separate. The state treasurer shall keep each fund coming into his possession as public money in a separate apartment of his safe, and at each quarterly settlement with the state auditor he shall count each fund in the presence of the auditor to see if the same agrees with the balance found on the books. The total amount acknowledged to belong to each fund shall be exhibited before the count. County treasurers shall account with such persons as the board of supervisors may direct in like manner, and a report of such accounting shall be made to the board at its next meeting by the person so appointed. [C.'73, § 918; R., § 804.]

SEC. 1463. Penalty for official delinquency. If any auditor or treasurer or other officer shall neglect or refuse to perform any act or duty specifically required of him, such officer shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, and he and his bondsmen shall be liable on his official bond for such fine, and for the damages sustained by any person through such neglect or refusal. [C.'73, § 919; R., §§ 744, 749, 805.]

SEC. 1464. Refunding to counties. The auditor of state shall draw his warrant on the state treasury in favor of any county in the state for the amount of any excess in any fund or tax due the state from said county, excepting the state taxes. [16 G. A., ch. 113, § 1.]

SEC. 1465. Warrant. When it shall appear from the books in the office of the auditor of state that there is a balance due any county in excess of any revenue due the state, except state taxes, he shall draw his warrant for such excess in favor of the county entitled thereto, and forward the same by mail, or otherwise, to the county auditor of the county to which it belongs, and charge the amount so sent to such county. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1466. Delivered to treasurer. The auditor to whom said warrant is sent shall immediately, upon receipt thereof, deliver it to the treasurer of his county, and charge the amount thereof to the treasurer, and shall acknowledge the receipt of the amount to the state auditor. [Same, § 3.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION OF COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX.

SECTION 1467. Rate. All property within the jurisdiction of this state, and any interest therein, whether belonging to the inhabitants of this state or not, and whether tangible or intangible, which shall pass by will or by the statutes of inheritance of this or any other state, or by deed, grant, sale or gift made or intended to take effect in possession or in enjoyment after the death of the grantor or donor, to any person in trust or otherwise, other than to or for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant, adopted child, the lineal descendant of an adopted child of a decedent, or to or for charitable, educational or religious societies or institutions within this state, shall be subject to a tax of five per centum of its value, above the sum of one thousand dollars, after the payment of all debts, for the use of the state; and all administrators, executors and trustees, and any such grantee under a conveyance, and any such donee under a gift, made during the grantor's or donor's life, shall be respectively liable for all such taxes to be paid by them, respectively, except as herein otherwise provided, with lawful interest as hereinafter set forth, until the same shall have been paid. The tax aforesaid shall be and remain a lien on such estate from the death of the decedent until paid. [26 G. A., ch. 28, § 1.]

SEC. 1468. Lien. It shall be the duty of the executor, administrator or trustee, immediately upon his appointment, to make and file a separate inventory, any will to the contrary notwithstanding, of all the real estate of the decedent liable to such tax, and to cause the lien of the same to be entered upon the lien book in the office of the clerk of the court in each county where each particular part of said real estate is situated, and no conveyance of said estate or interest therein, which is subject to such tax before or after the entering of said lien, shall discharge the estate so conveyed from the operation thereof. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1469. Appraisal. All the real estate of the decedent subject to such tax shall, except as hereinafter provided, be appraised within thirty days next after the appointment of an executor, administrator or trustee, and the tax thereon, calculated upon the appraised value after deducting debts for which the estate is liable, shall be paid by the person entitled to said estate within fifteen months from the approval by the court of such appraisement, unless a longer period is fixed by the court, and, in default thereof, the court shall order the same, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay such tax, to be sold. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1470. Remainders. When any person whose estate, over and above the amount of his just debts, exceeds the sum of one thousand dollars shall bequeath or devise any real property to or for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant, adopted child, or lineal descendant of such child, during life or for a term of years, and the remainder to a collateral heir or to a stranger to the blood, the court, upon the determination of such estate for life or years, shall, upon its own motion or upon the application of the treasurer of state, cause such estate to be appraised at its then actual market value, from which shall be deducted the value of any improvements thereon, or betterments thereto, if any, made by the remainder man during the time of the prior estate, to be ascertained and determined by the appraisers, and the tax on the remainder shall be paid by such remainder man within sixty days from the approval by the court of the report of the appraisers. If such tax is not paid within said time, the court shall then order said real estate, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to pay such tax, to be sold. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1471. Life estate. Whenever any real estate of a decedent shall be subject to such tax, and there be a life estate or interest for a term of years given to a party other than named in the preceding section, and the remainder to a collateral heir or stranger to the blood, the court shall direct the interest of the life estate or term of years to be appraised at the actual market value thereof, and, upon the approval of such appraisement by the court, the party entitled to such life estate, or term of years, shall within sixty days thereafter pay such tax, and in default thereof the court shall order such interest in said estate, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to pay such tax, to be sold. Upon the determination of such life estate or term of years, the same provision shall apply as to the ascertainment of the amount of the tax and the collection of the same on the real estate in remainder as in like cases is provided in the preceding section. Whenever any personal estate of a decedent shall be subject to such tax, and there be a life estate or interest for a term of years given to a party other than named in the preceding section, and remainder to a collateral heir or stranger to the blood, the court shall inquire into and determine the value of the life estate or interest for the term of years, and order and direct the amount of the tax thereon to be paid by the prior estate and that to be paid by the remainder man, each of whom shall pay their proportion of such tax within sixty days from such determination, unless a longer period is fixed by the court, and in default thereof the executor administrator or trustee shall pay the same out of said property, and hold the same from distribution, and invest it at interest under the order of the court until said tax is paid, or until the interest on the same equals the amount of such tax, which shall thereupon be paid. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1472. Executors or trustees. Whenever a decedent appoints one or more executors or trustees and in lieu of their allowance or commission, makes a bequest or devise of property to them which would otherwise be liable to said tax, or appoints them his residuary legatees, and said bequests, devises or residuary legacies exceed what would be a reasonable compensation for their services, such excess shall be liable to such tax, and the court having jurisdiction of their accounts, upon its own motion or on the application of the treasurer of state, shall fix such compensation. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 1473. Legacies charged upon land. Whenever any legacies subject to said tax are charged upon or payable out of any real estate, the heir or devisee, before paying the same, shall deduct said tax therefrom and pay it to the executor, administrator, trustee or treasurer of state, and the same shall remain a charge and be a lien upon said real estate until it is paid; and payment thereof shall be enforced by the executor, administrator, trustee or treasurer of state in his name of office, in the same manner as the payment of the legacy itself could be enforced. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 1474. Payment by executor or trustee. Every executor, administrator or trustee having in charge or trust any property subject to said tax, and which is made payable by him, shall deduct the tax therefrom, or shall collect the tax thereon from the legatee or person entitled to said property, and he shall not deliver any specific legacy or property subject to said tax to any person until he has collected the tax thereon. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 1475. Payment to state. All taxes imposed by this chapter shall be payable to the treasurer of state, and those which are made payable by executors, administrators or trustees shall be paid within fifteen months from the death of the testator or intestate, or within fifteen months from assuming of the trust by such trustee, unless a longer period is fixed by the court. All taxes not paid within the time prescribed in this act shall draw interest at the rate of eight per centum per annum until paid. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 1476. Method of appraisement. All appraisements of real estate subject to such tax shall be made and filed in the manner provided for appraisement of personal property. When such real estate is situated in another county, the same appraisers may serve, or others may be appointed. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 1477. Collection. It is hereby made the duty of all executors, administrators or trustees charged with the management or settlement of any estate subject to the tax provided for in this chapter, to collect and pay to the treasurer of state the amount of the tax due from any devisee, grantee or donee of the decedent, except in cases falling under the provisions of sections fourteen hundred and seventy and fourteen hundred and seventy-one hereof, in which cases the treasurer of state shall collect the same. Applications may be made to the district court by such executor, administrator, trustee or state treasurer to sell the real estate subject to said tax in an equitable action, or, if made to the court having charge of the settlement of said estate, the proceedings shall conform as nearly as may be to those for the sale of the real estate of a decedent for the settlement of his debts. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 1478. Property certified to treasurer. Whenever any real estate of a decedent shall so pass, either in possession and enjoyment or in remainder as to be subject to such tax, the executor, administrator or trustee, within six months after he has assumed the duties of his trust, shall file with the treasurer of state a description of such real estate, giving the name of the county where the same is situated, the name of the decedent, the name of the person or persons to whom it so passes, whether the same passes in possession and enjoyment in fee, for life or for a term of years (naming the term of years), and if a prior estate is created, he shall give the name of the remainder man. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 1479. Copy of appraisement. As soon as any such real estate is appraised it shall be the duty of the executor, administrator or trustee, if he has not been discharged, and if he has been finally discharged, then it shall be the duty of the clerk, to file with the treasurer of state a copy of such appraisement, stating also the amount of tax to be paid and within what time ordered to be paid. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 1480. Settlements with executors or trustees. No final settlement of the account of any executor, administrator or trustee shall be accepted or allowed unless it shall show, and the court shall find, that all taxes imposed by the provisions of this chapter upon any property or interest therein belonging to the estate to be paid by such executors, administrators or trustees, and to be settled by said account, shall have been paid, and the receipt of the treasurer of state for such tax shall be the proper voucher for such payment. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 1481. Jurisdiction of court. The district court having either principal or ancillary jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of the decedent shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions in relation to said tax that may arise affecting any devise, legacy or inheritance, or any grant or gift, under this chapter, subject to appeal as in other cases, and the treasurer of state shall in his name of office represent the interests of the state in any such proceeding. [Same, § 15.]

TITLE VIII.

OF ROADS, BRIDGES AND FERRIES, AND THE DESTRUCTION OF THISTLES.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE ESTABLISHMENT, ALTERATION AND VACATION OF ROADS.

SECTION 1482. Jurisdiction over. The board of supervisors has the general supervision of the roads in the county, with power to establish, vacate and change them as herein provided, and to see that the laws in relation to them are carried into effect. [C. '73, § 920; R., § 819; C. '51, § 514.]

The board of supervisors is given power to establish highways along streams where it is practicable to thus avoid bridging such stream: See §§ 427, 428.

Easement: A highway is nothing but an easement, comprehending the right of all the individuals in the community to pass and repass, with the incidental right of the public to do all acts to keep it in repair. The fee remains in the original owner: Dubuque v. Maloney, 9-450; Overman v. May, 35-89.

The prescriptive right to use material to keep the road in repair does not include the right to take material from the right of way for the repair of other public highways. Therefore, held, that the prescriptive right to span a river with a bridge, and use such bridge, did not include the right to quarry stone under the bed of the river under such bridge for general use in the repair of highways: Overman v. May, 35-89.

Nothing passes as incident to the grant of an easement but what is requisite to its fair and reasonable enjoyment. Therefore, where a party dedicating a street reserved the right to construct a mill-race across it, held, that the reservation should be construed in the same way as the grant of a like privilege, and that the party was under obligation to restore the street, as nearly as possible to its former condition by the construction and maintenance of a bridge across it: Waterloo v. Union Mill Co., 59-437.

A public highway being presumed to be for the benefit of the land owner is not an encumbrance on the title from which recovery can be had by the grantee under a warranty deed making no exception of the highway: Harrison v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 91-114.

Where the highway becomes impassable the public has the right to go upon adjoining premises for the purpose of passing, and such act will not constitute trespass upon such adjoining premises: Irwin v. Yeager, 74-174.

The fact that a party has himself obstructed a highway so as to prevent its use in one direction in which it has fallen into disuse will not estop him from proceeding to abate as a nuisance and recover damages for obstructions placed by others in another portion of the highway which is capable of independent use: Miller v. Schenck, 78-372.

What constitutes: Something more than the mere right to use land for the purpose of travel is necessary to constitute a highway. It must be traveled or at least capable of use in that way to make it such: State v. Shinkle, 40-131.

By § 1572, bridges are a part of the public highway, and are therefore under the general supervision of the board of supervisors. The board cannot be compelled by mandamus to build, that being discretionary: State ex rel. v. Morris, 43-192.

Public highways: It is the duty of the legislature to establish public highways for the passage and intercourse of the people of the state. It may properly provide for the establishment of such highways as are necessary to enable every citizen to discharge his duties to the state, have access to market, school, church, etc., and in that case it may properly provide for the taking of private property, although in a particular case but one person is primarily or principally benefited: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

A citizen has the right to have access to the public roads, and the public has the right to have access to him, and a road which is the only one between a citizen and the public may properly be deemed a public road, although he is the only person reached: Johnson v. Board of Supervisors, 61-89; Pagels v. Oaks, 64-198.

Private ways: A former statute (11 G. A., ch. 127), providing for the establishment of roads which were denominated private, to be established on the petition of the applicant alone, and at his cost, and which the public was not bound to work or keep in repair, and over which the party securing their establishment might exercise exclusive control, held unconstitutional as authorizing the taking of private property for a private and not a public use: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

Where the sole object of a proposed way was to give the owner of a tract of land a more convenient outlet, he having already access to his premises by a public highway, held, that such proposed way was a private way, and the establishment thereof under the provisions for public highways was unconstitutional: Richards v. Wolf, 82–358.

Jurisdiction: All the jurisdiction in relation to roads and highways formerly exercised by county judges is now conferred upon the board of supervisors: Kennedy v. Dubuque, C. & M. R. Co., 34–421.

Under particular statutes, held, that the power to establish a highway within the corporate limits of a city existed in the same tribunal which had authority to establish highways outside of such corporate limits: Knowles v. Muscatine, 20–248.

A county has power to grade and improve its public roads, and issue warrants in payment therefor: Long v. Boone County, 32–181.

Boards of supervisors have no authority to establish highways within the corporate limits of cities or incorporated towns: Gallaher v. Head, 72–173; and see § 751.

Dedication: A highway may exist in this state arising from dedication and prescription, notwithstanding the provisions of the statute for the establishment of highways: Mosier v. Vincent, 34–478; Baldwin v. Herbst, 54–168.

A highway may be established by the dedication of land for that purpose and its acceptance by the public: Casey v. Tama County, 75–655.

Where acts indicating the intent of the party to dedicate for a highway are shown, the party should be allowed to explain the intention with which such acts were done: Goodfellow v. Riggs, 88–540.

So acts and declarations of the party may be shown on his own behalf for the purpose of negativing an intent which might otherwise be inferred from his acts: Ibid.

Where the dedication of right of way for a highway is claimed to have been made by the land owner, proof of use may be competent to show an acceptance, and the lapse of any particular period of time is unnecessary if the evidence is otherwise sufficient to show an intention to dedicate. If the owner of land knows for a series of years that the public are using and making a road thereon as a highway and expending money in its improvement, and he acquiesces in what they are doing, such facts will be considered evidence tending to show actual dedication: State v. Birmingham, 74–407.

The provisions of § 3004 as to the acquisition of easements by adverse possession relate to titles claimed by prescription and not to dedication, but evidence that the claimed highway was traveled to some extent by the public with the knowledge of the owner will not be sufficient to show a dedication where the land has not been thrown open and the road has remained practically impassable as a highway: Gray v. Haas, 67 N. W., 394.

The construction of a culvert and other work upon the highway fitting it for travel constitutes a sufficient acceptance: Devoe v. Smeltzer, 86–385.

Proof of use in connection with other facts is competent to prove title by dedication: Duncombe v. Powers, 75–185.

And held that knowledge of the use might be inferred from the use of the road by the public in such manner that a reasonable man would see and learn of it: Ibid.

Adverse possession: Failure of the public to assert any right to land by reason of a claim in regard to a highway for thirty years, and long-continued adverse use and occupation by plaintiff and his grantors in good faith, held sufficient to estop the public from asserting any right to such land as a highway: Smith v. Gorrell, 81–218.

Where a strip of land was recognized by the land-owner as a highway, by constructing bars at each end thereof for the use of the public, and by abstaining from cultivating the same, and was used for that purpose by the public without objection, held, that although it thus remained inclosed, the owner could not claim rights therein adversely to the public by reason of his possession: Hempsted v. Huffman, 84–398.

Where a survey has been accepted by the parties and the public as correct, and the highway used in accordance therewith for ten years, the lines of such survey will be recognized as binding: Crismon v. Deck, 84–344.

Where a highway had been used for more than twenty years and had been generally believed to be upon a certain line, though not upon that line, held, that the claim of the public was confined to the true line, and as the use must correspond to the claim of right, the public had gained no title by prescription: Bolton v. McShane, 79–26.

Under particular circumstances, held, that the fact that a road on the line, claimed by defendant to be the line of the public highway, was worked and traveled by the defendant for twenty-five years without objection on the part of the plaintiff, and the further fact that plaintiff built and so maintained his fences as to indicate an intention not to claim any of the land so used as against the public, raised a strong presumption in favor of defendant's claim, which was not overcome by the evidence; and held that, even had no steps been taken to establish a highway on the land in question in the manner provided by law, the court would be justified in finding that it had been established by the acts of the plaintiff and of the public, and by the lapse of time: Sherman v. Hastings, 81–372.

Where a highway was used for many years without being fenced, bridged or worked and houses were built with reference to it as traveled and it subsequently appeared that it was not on the line of the original location, held, that the line of travel would govern as against the record of the location, the original location being in dispute: Tueger v. Riepe, 90–484.

The fact that one who claims to have had possession of a highway adverse to the public for such length of time as to have acquired adverse title allowed the public to pass through his inclosed premises by letting down and putting up bars will not defeat the claim of adverse possession: Neff v. Smith, 91–87.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence did not show a sufficient adverse user of the land in question to authorize a finding that the public had acquired a right to the same as a public highway: Ladd v. Osborne, 79–93.

A land-owner who signs the petition and accompanying deed of dedication for the land covered by the highway cannot be heard to say that so much of the road as passes over his land is not duly established where the road has been actually used from the time of such proceedings; and a grantee of such owner is in the same position: Miller v. Schenck, 78–372.

Where it appeared that a public highway had been claimed and used adversely to defendant for the statutory period, held, that a highway by prescription was thereby shown. McAllister v. Pickup, 84–65.

See, also, as to adverse possession, notes to § 3447.

The public may lose its right to all or part of a legally established highway by non-use: Larson v. Fitzgerald, 87–402.

SEC. 1483. Width. Roads hereafter established, unless otherwise fixed by the board, shall be at least sixty-six feet wide, and in no case less than forty; within those limits they may be increased or diminished in width, altered in direction, or vacated, by pursuing the course herein prescribed. [C.'73, § 921; R., §§ 820, 821; C.'51, §§ 515, 516.]

The auditor has no power to establish a highway of less width than sixty-six feet, and if he attempt to do so the board of supervisors may set aside his action: State v. Wagner, 45–482.

Although the road is established by the auditor, and is less than sixty-six feet in width, if the record of his action is read over to and approved by the board, such action becomes substantially the action of the board, and is proper: State v. Barlow, 61–572.

The fact that the road as established is wider than authorized does not render the order establishing it void. It is an irregularity which cannot be taken advantage of in a collateral proceeding: Knowles v. Muscatine, 20–248.

The statute (§ 2026) authorizing street railways to extend their lines beyond the city limits over highways which are of the width of one hundred feet or more contemplates and authorizes the establishment of highways more than sixty-six feet in width: Linn County v. Hewitt, 55–505.

A road supervisor may be enjoined from erecting a bridge at the side of the highway where it will cause injury to a hedge of an adjoining land owner, and render necessary the destruction of shade trees in front of his premises, when it might, with some additional expense, be constructed in the middle of the highway without causing such damage: Quinton v. Burton, 61–471.

There is no presumption that a highway originating by prescription is of the width required in case of highways laid out under the statute. The width of such highway is a question of fact for the jury, to be determined from the facts and circumstances. The court cannot, as a matter of law, say that a road acquired by prescription or use is of any particular width beyond such portion as is actually used by the public: Davis v. Clinton 58–389.

Where, by agreement constituting dedication of a highway to public use, it was stipulated that the road should be established as it had been used, and the width as thus used was found to be twenty-six feet, held, that the highway as established by the dedication was properly determined to be of that width: Hugh v. Haigh, 69–382.

Where an order of the county court establishing a highway was based upon the plat of the commissioner, upon which plat it was described as thirty-three feet in width, held, that it must be presumed to have been intended to establish a highwav of that width although not so specified in the order of establishment: State v. Schilb, 47–611.

Non-use of a strip of land included within the highway and occupancy thereof by an adjoining owner will not bar the rights of the public in such strip. The adjoining owner is charged with knowledge that by law the highway is sixty-six feet in width: Rae v. Miller, 68 N. W., 899.

As to width of bridges, see § 1572 and notes.

SEC. 1484. Petition. Any person desiring the establishment, vacation or alteration of a road shall file in the auditor's office of the proper county a petition, in substance as follows:

To the board of supervisors of ..... county:

The undersigned asks that a road commencing at ..... and running thence ..... and terminating at ..... be established, vacated, or altered (as the case may be). [C.'73, § 922.]

Before a highway can be lawfully established a petition asking its establishment must be presented to the board of supervisors. Until this is done the board has no jurisdiction or power to establish a highway, and if it does so its action is absolutely void. And where the petition asked for the opening and re-establishment of a highway, held, that proceedings thereunder to establish were not authorized. Also held, that in such cases the county could not be estopped by the acts of its auditor, and the board, from setting up the illegality of the proceeding: Curtis v. Pocahontas County, 72–151.

Where a petition with reference to a highway is blank as to what is asked it will not confer jurisdiction on the board and the action of the board in establishing a highway in pursuance to such petition will be void: Lehmann v. Reinhart, 90-346.

While the establishment need not be asked in terms there must be something in the petition clearly indicating the relief sought: Ibid.

The petition for a highway need not follow the precise language of the statute: McCollister v. Shuey, 24-362.

If it asks for the appointment of a commissioner to locate a highway, etc., instead of for the establishment of the highway, it is not so materially defective as to invalidate the proceedings: State v. Pitman, 38-252.

It is not improper to ask in the petition the change of a highway instead of the location of a new highway and the vacation of one already established: Harris v. Mahaska County, 88-219.

Where the notice was that a petition would be presented for a new road, and the petition asked that a commissioner be appointed and the necessary steps taken to open the road, held, that there was a substantial compliance with the statute: Stevens v. Board of Supervisors, 41-341.

The petition need not specify the width of the proposed highway. Such specification is surplusage: State v. Wagner, 45-482.

A petition will not be insufficient to give the board jurisdiction merely because it runs to the county auditor, who is the clerk of the board, instead of to the board itself, or because it does not expressly ask for the establishment of the road, when its object is abundantly evident, in that it states that the road is needed and asks for the appointment of a commissioner: State v. Barlow, 61-572.

Under former statutes requiring that the petition for the establishment of a highway should be signed by at least twelve householders of the county, held, that the absence of an allegation that the petitioners were householders, or of a recital of such fact in the record, was not a fatal defect, if the road was otherwise a legal one: Keyes v. Tait, 19-123.

Where a petition for the establishment of a highway has been filed and the commissioner appointed has reported adversely, a subsequent request for the appointment of a new commissioner can not be considered a new petition in such sense as to render valid the action of the auditor or supervisors on a favorable report by a second commissioner thus appointed: Devoe v. Smeltzer, 86-385.

A proceeding to establish a public highway being in its nature public and for the benefit of the whole public, a contract by the party who has commenced such proceeding, for its abandonment, is contrary to public policy and void: Jacobs v. Tobiason, 65-245.

SEC. 1485. Bond. Before filing such petition, the auditor shall require the petitioner to give a bond, with sureties to be approved by him, conditioned that all expenses growing out of the application will be paid by the obligors, in case the contemplated road is not finally established, altered or vacated, as asked in the petition. [C. '73, § 923; R., § 826; C. '51, § 521.]

A failure to require the bond here mentioned will not invalidate the proceedings: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32-130.

If the auditor allows the petition to be filed without a bond, and proceeds to act upon it, his action cannot be said to be without jurisdiction, the provision in regard to a bond being simply directory: State v. Barlow, 61-572.

SEC. 1486. Commissioner. When the foregoing requirements have been complied with, the auditor shall appoint some suitable and disinterested elector of the county as commissioner, to examine into the expediency of the proposed establishment, alteration or vacation, and report accordingly. [C. '73, § 924; R., § 828; C. '51, § 523.]

SEC. 1487. Expediency. The commissioner is not confined to the precise matter of the petition, but may inquire and determine whether that or any road in the vicinity, answering the same purpose and in substance the same, be required; but no road shall be established through any burying-ground, nor through any garden, orchard, or ornamental ground contiguous to any dwelling-house, or so as to cause the removal of any building, without the consent of the owner. [18 G. A., ch. 50; C. '73, § 925; R., § 830; C. '51, § 525.]

Under the corresponding section of Code of '51, held, that the commissioner had no authority to lay out a highway beyond the termini fixed in the petition, and the proceedings as to any such portion would be void: State v. Molly, 18-525.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence did not justify the finding that at the time the examination and report of the commissioner were made the highway extended through garden, orchard, or ornamental grounds contiguous to a dwelling house. Improvements afterwards placed in the proposed highway not being so placed in good faith and for a proper purpose, should not be permitted to defeat the establishment of the road: Ballou v. Elder, 64 N. W., 622.

SEC. 1488. Report. In forming his judgment, he must take into account the public and private convenience, and the expense of the proposed road, and, if he thinks the public convenience requires it, shall proceed at once to lay the same out, if the circumstances are such as to enable him to do so without having the same surveyed; but if, in his judgment, such road should not be established, or the alteration or vacation made, he shall proceed no further, and in either case shall, within thirty days after the day of his appointment, file his report in the auditor's office. [19 G. A., ch. 80; C.'73, §§ 926–8, 934; R., §§ 831–3, 840–1; C. '51, §§ 526–8, 535–6.]

An adverse report ends all proceedings under the petition, and the report of another commissioner appointed by the auditor would have no validity: Cook v. Trigg, 52–709.

A report against a road by the commissioner is an official determination, and the application cannot be considered as longer pending: Morgan v. Miller, 59–481.

Where it appeared that upon proper petition a commissioner was appointed to view and lay out a road, and that he made a survey and report, but that no further action was taken, held, that this was not sufficient to show the establishment of the highway: Carey v. Weitgenant, 52–660.

Where the commissioner reports against the establishment of a proposed highway the proceedings under the petition are terminated, and the appointment of another commissioner and his report in favor of its establishment will not give the auditor or supervisors any jurisdiction to act: Devoe v. Smeltzer, 86–385.

SEC. 1489. Survey made—commissioner sworn. If the precise location of the road cannot otherwise be given, he must cause the line thereof to be surveyed and plainly marked out, and, if he is a person other than the county surveyor, must be sworn to faithfully and impartially discharge his duty, and, after thus qualifying, he shall have authority to swear any assistants employed, to faithfully and impartially perform their duties in aiding him in laying out or altering the road. [C.'73, §§ 929, 930; R., §§ 834–5; C. '51, §§ 529, 530.]

That the officer by whom the commissioner was sworn was not qualified to administer oaths is not such irregularity that the proceedings will be set aside on that account: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32–130.

SEC. 1490. Mile posts and stakes. Mile posts must be set up at the end of every mile, and the distance marked thereon, and stakes must be set at each change of direction, on which shall be marked the bearings of the new course. Stakes must also be set at the crossing of fences and streams, and at intervals in the prairie not exceeding a quarter of a mile each; in the timber the course must be indicated by trees suitably blazed. [C. '73, § 931; R., § 836; C. '51, § 531.]

The provisions of this section and the one following are directory only, and the failure to comply with them will not render the proceedings illegal or void. Whether it is intended that they shall be followed when the commissioner proceeds to lay out the highway without the aid of a surveyor (under § 1488) may well be questioned: McCollister v. Shuey, 24–362.

SEC. 1491. Bearing trees—monuments. Bearing trees must, when convenient, be established at each angle and mile post, and the position of the road relative to the corners of sections, the junction of streams, or any other natural or artificial monument or conspicuous object, must, as far as convenient, be stated in the field-notes and shown on the plat. [C. '73, § 932; R., § 837; C. '51, § 532.]

SEC. 1492. Plat and field-notes. A correct plat of the road or alteration, together with a copy of the field-notes of the surveyor, if one has been employed, must be filed as a part of the commissioner's report. [C. '73, § 933; R., § 838; C. '51, § 533.]

SEC. 1493. Report—objections—claims for damages. If the commissioner's report is in favor of the establishment, alteration or vacation of the road, it shall show the number of bridges required, and the probable cost thereof; and the auditor shall appoint a day, not less than sixty nor more than ninety days from such time, when the petition and report will be acted upon, on or before which day all objections to the establishment, alteration or vacation of the road, and all claims for damages by reason of its establishment or alteration, must be filed in the auditor's office. [19 G. A., ch. 80; C. '73, § 934; R., §§ 840–1; C. '51, §§ 535–6.]

Where final action appeared to have been had at a date subsequent to the one fixed, held, that it would be presumed that by proper resolution action was postponed to the day upon which it was had: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32–130.

The fixing of the date for final hearing less than sixty days distant is an irregularity which will not invalidate subsequent proceedings, nor render them subject to collateral attack: State v. Kinney, 39–226.

Where an auditor set a day for final hearing one day beyond the limit here fixed, and afterward, in a proceeding to enjoin the road supervisor from opening the road so laid out, there was a trial involving the validity of the road, and the opening of the same was perpetually enjoined, held, that the same was a binding adjudication that no road had ever been established: Dicken v. Morgan, 59–157.

A party whose claim is not filed within the time fixed has no constitutional right to damages: See notes to § 1501.

SEC. 1494. Day fixed. The time for the commissioner to commence the examination shall be fixed by the auditor, and if he fails to so commence, or so report as prescribed in the preceding section, the auditor may fix another day, or extend the time for making such report, or may appoint another commissioner. [C. '73, § 935; R., § 829; C. '51, § 524.]

SEC. 1495. Notice served. Within twenty days after the day is fixed by the auditor as above provided, a notice shall be served on each owner of land lying in the proposed road, or abutting thereon, as shown by the transfer books in the auditor's office, who resides in the county, in the manner provided for the service of original notices. If the owner of the land as thus shown does not reside in the county, similar notice shall be served upon any person who is in the actual occupancy of such land. In any case, notice shall be published for four weeks in some newspaper printed in the county. The notice may be in the following form:

To all whom it may concern: The commissioner appointed to locate, vacate, or alter (as the case may be) a road commencing at.....in..... county, running thence (describe in general terms all the points as in the commissioner's report, giving the names of the owners of the land through which the proposed road passes as they appear upon the transfer books of the auditor's office), and terminating at....., has reported in favor of the establishment, vacation, or alteration thereof, and all objections thereto, or claims for damages, must be filed in the auditor's office on or before noon of the.....day of....., A. D....., or such road will be established, vacated, or altered without reference thereto.

County Auditor.

[19 G. A., ch. 109; C.'73, § 936.]

The provision authorizing the establishment of a road upon notice by publication is not in conflict with the constitution: State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 80–586.

There is nothing in the statute requiring the seal of the auditor to the notice to be served by publication, and such seal is therefore not necessary: Ibid.

When notice is given to the persons appearing by the transfer books to be the unconditional owners of the land, and also by publication, the jurisdiction becomes complete. Notice to conditional owners, or others not shown by the transfer books (and not occupants), is not necessary: Wilson v. Hathaway, 42–173.

One whose ownership is not shown upon the transfer books and who does not appear to have been a resident of the county cannot complain of want of personal notice: McKinney v. Baker, 69 N. W., 683.

Such notice should be served personally upon the owner as shown by the transfer books, when he resides in the county, but if he be a nonresident, then upon the actual occupant of the land, although the name of such occupant does not appear from such books: Alcott v. Acheson, 49–569.

Under § 519 of the Code of '51, requiring that notice of the presentation of the petition for laying out a highway be posted for four weeks, held, that the notice appearing by the record being insufficient, it would not be presumed that there was other notice, but that the proceeding would be deemed invalid: State v. Waterman, 79–360.

Under the Code of '51, held, that a notice of presentation of a petition for a highway was fatally defective in failing to specify the time when the application would be made: Ibid.

A domestic corporation owning and operating a railway is in notorious occupation of its right of way and is entitled to notice, being deemed a resident of the county through which its line runs. This is true although its ownership of its right of way does not appear on the transfer books: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Ellithorpe, 78–415.

It is only residents of the state, in actual occupancy of land, who are entitled to personal notice. Notice need not be given to a foreign railway company across whose right of way the highway passes, by personal service upon its officers or agents. Publication of notice is sufficient in such case. Also held, that as the railway company did not appear from the transfer books to be owner of its right of way, it was not entitled to notice: State ex rel. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 68–135.

Where a railway company does not appear by the transfer books to be the owner of land over which a highway is to be established, no personal notice to such railway is required, whether it be a domestic corporation or a foreign corporation which has filed its articles of incorporation with the secretary of state: State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 80–586.

The provisions in regard to notice for the establishment of a highway have no application to the state: Snyder v. Foster, 77–638.

Where by the transfer books title is shown in one who is deceased, notice to one who by the records appears to be heir is not required: Starry v. Treat, 71 N. W., 350.

A railroad incorporated in the state and operating its road through the county is a resident of the county in such sense that notice should be served upon such company of the location of a highway across the company's right of way, it being in occupation of the land and the owner not being a resident of the county: State ex rel. v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 91–275.

Error in the description of the starting point of the highway in the petition and notice, held sufficient to render the proceedings thereunder void, although such error was discoverable by careful examination on the face of the petition and notice: Butterfield v. Pollock, 45–257.

Under a previous statute, requiring thirty days' notice to be given of the filing of a petition for the highway, but containing no provision requiring the recording of such notice and proof of posting thereof, held, that the court would be warranted from the evidence of the appointment of commissioners, and the giving of notice, and the long lapse of time during which the right of the public had remained unchallenged, in inferring that the requisite proof had been made and lost: Keyes v. Tait, 19–123.

Under such statute, held, that proof of the method of posting the notice might be made to the board of supervisors by parol evidence, and it would be presumed that proof in that manner was made, although the affidavits filed showing proof were not sufficient: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32–130; Carr v. Fayette County, 37–608.

In order to enable the auditor to act it is not necessary that there be filed formal proof of publication of the notice required by statute; his determination that notice has been duly published, while not conclusive, is sufficient to cast upon anyone questioning his action the burden of proving want of publication: Pagels v. Oaks, 64–198.

Under the Revision held, that a recital in the record that due notice had been given was prima facie evidence of that fact: State v. Pitman, 38–252.

The failure to give notice as required renders the action in establishing the highway void, and notice will not be presumed from the fact of establishment alone: State v. Anderson, 39–274; State v. Weimer, 64–243; McBurney v. Graves, 66–314; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Ellithorpe, 78–415.

The notice is jurisdictional and will not be presumed from the fact of the establishment but where the order of establishment rests upon a finding that the prerequisites of the law have been complied with it will be presumed that the board determined that the proper notice was given and this will be sufficient to show the fact of notice unless the contrary appears: State v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 88–689.

Jurisdiction will be presumed if it be shown by the record that the tribunal establishing the road decided that sufficient notice had been given and that if the record shows that notices were posted it will be presumed that proper proof was introduced to show that they were put up in the manner required by law: Larson v. Fitzgerald, 87–402.

The giving of the notice required is necessary in order to confer jurisdiction on the board of supervisors to act in the matter: Moffit v. Brainard, 92–122.

Injunction to restrain the enforcement of the order in such a case is a proper remedy: Ibid.

Under the provisions of the Code of '51 requiring notice to be given at the time when the commissioner will make the examination, a failure to give such notice of the fact of the examination at the time specified will not render the subsequent establishment of the highway invalid: Larson v. Fitzgerald, 87–402.

The statutory provisions for vacation of highways requiring notice, etc., are not applicable to vacation of streets and alleys which by statute are under the control of the city council: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66–687.

SEC. 1496. Auditor may act—approved by board. If no objections or claims for damages are filed on or before noon of the day fixed therefor, and the auditor is satisfied the provisions of the preceding section have been complied with, he shall proceed to establish, alter or vacate such road as recommended by the commissioner, upon the payment of costs. If such costs are not paid within ten days, the auditor shall report his action in the premises to the board of supervisors at its next session, who may affirm the action of the auditor, or establish such road at the expense of the county. [C. '73, § 937.]

The auditor has no power to fix the width of a highway established by him at less than sixty-six feet: See § 1483 and note.

Under 12 G. A., ch. 160, held, that the action of the auditor was subject to review by the board: Brooks v. Payne, 38–263; and that an appeal from the action of the auditor did not lie, but only from the action of the board: Newell v. Perkins, 39–244.

In order to enable the auditor to act, it is not necessary that there be filed formal proof of publication of the notice required by the preceding section; his determination that notice has been duly published, while not conclusive, is sufficient to cast upon any one questioning his action the burden of proving want of publication: Pagels v. Oaks, 64–198.

SEC. 1497. New notice given. If the auditor is satisfied that the notice has not been given, he shall appoint another day, and cause such notice to be served or published as required in the first instance, and thereafter proceed as provided above. [C. '73, § 938.]

SEC. 1498. Objections or claims. If objections to the establishment of the road or claims for damages are filed, the further hearing of the application shall stand continued to the next session of the board of supervisors held after the commissioners appointed to assess the damages have reported. All claims for damages and objections to the establishment, alteration or vacation of the road must be in writing, and the statements in the application for damages shall be considered denied in all subsequent proceedings. [C. '73, §§ 939, 941; R., § 842; C. '51, § 537.]

The fact that the only claim for damages which is filed is paid will not authorize the auditor to establish the highway, but the hearing must be continued to the next meeting of the board: Ressler v. Hershire, 52–568.

This section and § 1501 do not provide in what cases damages shall be allowed, and do not authorize the recovery of damages, either by an adjacent property owner or any other person for the vacation of a highway: Brady v. Shinkle, 40–576; Ellsworth v. Chickasaw County, 40–571; Grove v. Allen, 92–519.

SEC. 1499. Appraisers appointed. Upon the expiration of the time for filing claims for damages, if any are filed, the auditor shall appoint three disinterested electors of the county as appraisers, to assess the amount of damages any claimants may sustain by reason of the establishment or alteration of such road, and shall give them notice of their appointment, and fix a day and hour at which they shall meet at his office, or that of some justice of the peace, to qualify; and if they do not all appear at the time and place named, or within one hour thereafter, the auditor or justice, as the case may be, shall fill any vacancies by the appointment of others, and swear such appraisers to faithfully and impartially assess the damages claimed. Such appraisers shall proceed at once to perform their duties, and, after assessing the damages sustained by the claimants, respectively, shall report the amount sustained by each, in writing, to the auditor, within thirty days from the date of their appointment. [C. '73, §§ 940, 942–3; R., §§ 843–7; C. '51, §§ 538–42.]

Timber growing upon the land appropriated for the purpose of a public highway remains the property of the former owner, and is not to be taken into account in estimating his damages: Deaton v. Polk County, 9–594.

Where, upon failure of one of the appraisers to meet with the others on the day fixed, they adjourned instead of filling his place, held, that, in the absence of any proof of prejudice caused thereby, the proceedings would not be treated as erroneous upon a review by certiorari: Johnson v. Board of Supervisors, 61–89.

Claimants for damages have a direct interest in the appointment of appraisers and the statute intends that the appraisers shall be appointed on the day fixed for filing claims and an earlier appointment will constitute error: Abney v. Clark, 87–727.

Where, upon the absence of one of the appraisers, instead of his place being filled, action was postponed to another date, when he was present and acted, held, that in the absence of a showing of prejudice there was no error: Johnson v. Supervisors, 61–89.

SEC. 1500. Postponement—costs. Should the report not be filed in time, or should any good cause for delay exist, the auditor may postpone the time for final action on the subject, and may, if necessary, appoint other appraisers. Should no damages be awarded the applicants therefor, all the costs growing out of their claims shall be paid by them. [C. '73, §§ 944–5; R., §§ 848, 850; C. '51, §§ 543, 545.]

SEC. 1501. Final action. When the time for final action arrives, the board may hear testimony, receive petitions for and remonstrances against the establishment, vacation or alteration, as the case may be, of such road, and may establish, vacate or alter, or refuse to do so, as in their judgment, founded on the testimony, the public good may require. Said board may increase or diminish the damages allowed by the appraisers, and may make such establishment, vacation or alteration conditioned upon the payment, in whole or in part, of the damages awarded; or expenses in relation thereto. [C.'73, § 946; R., § 851; C.'51, § 546.]

Proceedings before the board: Where two applications are, in effect, for the same road, by different routes, they may be considered together: Brown v. Ellis, 26–85.

Where, in a proceeding before the board, one of the members refused to be sworn as a witness unless required to, but it appeared that his evidence, if given, would have been cumulative, and the action in the premises was not dependent upon it, held, that the discretion of the board in the matter would not be interfered with: Ibid.

Dismissal: The proceeding is not for the benefit of the person commencing it, but is by the state for the benefit and advantage of the public, and the petitioner acquires no rights or advantages by it. Therefore, an agreement by him for a consideration to abandon the proceeding is against public policy and void: Jacobs v. Tobiason, 65–245.

The fact that previous proceedings for establishment of a highway have been dismissed by the board will not bar their right to establish a highway over the same lines, upon a subsequent application: Pagels v. Oaks, 64–198.

Time for hearing: Where final action appeared to have been had at a date subsequent to the one fixed, held, that it would be presumed that, by proper resolution, action was postponed to the day upon which it was had: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32–130.

The fixing of the date for final hearing less than sixty days distant is an irregularity which will not invalidate subsequent proceedings, nor render them subject to collateral attack: State v. Kinney, 39–226.

Where, upon failure of one of the appraisers to meet with the others on the day fixed, they adjourned instead of filling his place, held, that, in the absence of any proof of prejudice caused thereby, the proceedings would not be treated as erroneous upon a review by certiorari: Johnson v. Board of Supervisors, 61–89.

Conditional establishment: Where the establishment is conditioned on the payment of the expenses thereof, it is not necessary that the time for such payment be fixed in the order: Brown v. Ellis, 26 85.

Where the proceedings did not definitely locate a portion of the highway upon the ground, but left it to be located by the petitioners, held, that such establishment as to the portion thus left to be located not being shown, the highway could not be deemed established in any part: Barnes v. Fox, 61–18.

Where a highway is established upon conditions, it is not to be regarded as fully established so as to become a legal highway until the conditions are complied with: State v. Glass, 42–56.

A final order once made as contemplated by statute acquires the character of an adjudication as to the establishment of the highway and the amount of damages, if any, and the parties cannot again litigate the question in a new proceeding. The judgment is conclusive until set aside: Hupert v. Anderson, 35–578.

Although the road is established on a different line from that requested and recommended, the action, while it may be erroneous, will not be void: Davenport Mutual Savings, etc., Ass'n v. Schmidt, 15–213.

If upon an appeal from the action of the board as to the amount of damages, the circuit court increase the amount allowed, the board may reconsider their action and refuse to establish the highway: Nelson v. Goodykoontz, 47–32.

An order for the establishment of the highway, conditioned upon payment of damages, etc., is such a final order as may be appealed from under § 1513. It is not necessary to wait for the unconditional order contemplated in the following section: McNicols v. Wilson, 42–385.

The statute does not authorize the board to reconsider its action at a previous meeting establishing a highway; and where a highway had been fully established, and at the second regular meeting of the board thereafter proceedings were taken to change such action, held, that such proceedings were invalid, being in the nature of new and independent proceedings taken to vacate a road duly established, and without due notice: Miller v. Schenck, 78–372.

Consent to the establishment of a highway will not confer jurisdiction to establish a particular line contemplated, and in the absence of proper notice the proceeding will be void: Barnes v. Fox, 61–18.

Where a highway was established by consent in pursuance of a written contract executed through mistake of fact, held, that a court of equity might reform and correct the written contract, and enjoin the laying out of the highway as established: Mastelar v. Edgarton, 44–495.

Record: The record with reference to the establishment of a road is admissible in evidence where it shows substantially the same route as petitioned for, and the petition need not be offered to render the record admissible, if it appears that it was presented, filed and acted upon: State v. Lane, 26–223.

Vacation of highway: Where the auditor acts improperly in establishing a highway, the board may set aside his action and vacate the highway thus improperly established: State v. Wagner, 45–482.

The statutory provisions by which the same steps are required to vacate as to establish a highway are not applicable to the vacation of streets and alleys. The city council has authority to vacate streets and alleys by ordinance: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66–687.

Where two roads were established on the same line, and upon due notice one of them was vacated, held, that such order of vacation would not operate upon both but only upon the road as to which notice was given: Larkin v. Harris, 36-93.

Under the provisions of a former statute, that if money was advanced for the payment of damages caused by the location of a highway the highway could not be discontinued without repayment of such damages, and that the claim for the refunding of the damages was a lien on the land covered by the highway, held, that an action in equity to recover the amount paid to the land owner for a highway afterwards discontinued might be maintained: Brown v. Bridges, 36-279.

Where a highway was vacated upon certain conditions to be complied with, held, that it appeared that the board were of the opinion that the public good did not require such vacation, and that their action, in the absence of compliance with the conditions, did not affect the right of the public to treat the road as still existing: Hayes v. Tyler, 85-126.

Damages: In estimating the damages resulting from the fact that the location of a highway will render the construction of fences by the adjoining property owner necessary, the jury may be limited to considering the cost of constructing such fence as is proper under the circumstances, and should not estimate the cost of a fence sufficient to turn sheep and hogs, they not being permitted to run at large. The fact that a fence which will become necessary upon the establishment of a highway will be of advantage to the owner cannot be taken into consideration in estimating his damages: Bland v. Hixenbaugh, 39-532.

It is improper in estimating the damages to allow the owner as part of his compensation a certain amount for fence thereby made necessary. If by the establishment of the road the land is thrown open and left unfenced, this fact may enter into the consideration in determining the depreciation in value of the remaining premises. But the owner should not be allowed for the cost of fence, as such: Hanrahan v. Fox, 47-102.

One of the owners in common of land may recover damages caused by the establishment of a highway to the extent of his ownership, although no claim for damages is made by the other one: Ibid.

If the land owner, after the assessment of damages and pending an application to establish the road, erects a fence upon the proposed highway, he cannot have damages for the removal thereof allowed to him on appeal: Holton v. Butler, 22-557.

Timber growing upon the land appropriated for the purpose of a public highway remains the property of the former owner, and is not to be taken into account in estimating his damages: Deaton v. Polk County, 9-594.

It is the duty of the jury assessing the compensation for real estate appropriated to the use of the public as a street to personally examine the premises: Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153.

Damages for relocation: The true rule for estimating damages in case of relocation of a highway over land of the same party is to determine the amount which the damages for the new or relocated line would exceed the damages sustained by reason of the old one: Jewett v. Israel, 35-261.

And this rule is applicable whether damages for the location of the first line were allowed or not. But the damages by reason of the location of the new line are not to be diminished by reason of advantages and benefits which tend to increase the value of the land to be set off against damages caused by the relocation: Israel v. Jewett, 29-475.

Damages for vacation: A party whose right to the use of a highway is simply that enjoyed by the general public cannot recover damages for its vacation, whether his land abuts upon a part of the highway not vacated or upon a portion of the highway actually vacated: Ellsworth v. Chickasaw County, 40-571; Brady v. Shinkle, 40-576; Barr v. Oskaloosa, 45-275; Grove v. Allen, 92-519; McKinney v. Baker, 69 N. W., 683.

A claim for damages cannot be considered after the final order of establishment: Smiths v. Dubuque County, 1-492.

Where no claim for damages is filed, or the claim is disallowed because not filed within proper time, or if, upon consideration of the claim, no damages are allowed by the appraisers, a property owner cannot object to the establishment of the highway on the ground that his property is taken without compensation. While he has a constitutional right of compensation, it must be claimed and established in the manner pointed out by law: McCrory v. Griswold, 7-248; Connolly v. Griswold, 7-416; Dunlap v. Pulley, 28-469; Abbott v. Board of Supervisors, 36-354.

The land owner may, by appeal from the appraisement, have the amount of his damages assessed by a jury of twelve. If he fails to take such appeal and have such assessment, he cannot afterwards complain that his property is taken for public use without due process of law: Tharp v. Witham, 65-566.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held, that the amount allowed on the assessment of damages in behalf of the land owner on appeal from the action of the board of supervisors was not sufficient: Adkins v. Smith, 64 N. W., 761.

Review of proceedings: The board of supervisors is not a proper party in an action to enjoin the opening of a highway in accordance with their order establishing such highway. The action of the board in the establishment of highways is largely judicial: Everett v. Board of Supervisors, 61 N. W., 1062.

The question as to the propriety of establishing the road, and the legality of the proceedings to that end, may be reviewed by certiorari: McCrory v. Griswold, 7-248.

The discretion of the board in granting a change of the highway cannot be inquired into on certiorari where the board has jurisdiction to act: Harris v. Mahaska County, 88-219.

An order establishing a highway is a matter affecting the public only, and an individual can have no interest in that question such as to warrant him in appealing from the order of establishment, but he may be entitled to an appeal from the action of the board in regard to the allowance of damages:

Ball v. Humphrey, 4 G. Gr., 204; Myers v. Simms, 4–500.

Upon a writ of certiorari from the proceeding of the board, it is not proper to review its decision upon the question whether the public interests demand a proposed road, or whether it is practicable and expedient to establish it. The court can only determine whether the board is proceeding within its jurisdiction or not: Tiedt v. Carstensen, 61–334.

Where a certiorari proceeding is instituted against the board of supervisors, calling in question their action in establishing a highway, and such action is held to be illegal, the costs should be taxed, not against the board, but against the petitioners for the highway: Tiedt v. Carstensen, 64–131.

The action of the board in allowing or refusing damages can only be reviewed on appeal. See notes to § 1513.

Change of location by prescription: Where there have been proceedings to locate a highway and it has been established and used as such, pursuant to such proceedings, and by mistake the highway as used varies slightly from the one established, the use will not constitute a prescriptive right outside of the limits of the established highway: State v. Welpton, 34–144; State v. Gould, 40–372; State v. Schilb, 47–611.

Where by request of a land owner the supervisor, in opening an established highway, deflects therefrom upon the land of such owner, and the road so located is worked and used by the public, the action of the owner amounts to a dedication as to the portion outside of the established highway: Ryan v. Kennedy, 62–37.

Where the public have traveled and used a road different from the established highway for the period of prescription, it acquires a right by prescription in the road thus traveled: Kelsey v. Furman, 36–614.

A mistake as to the location of the line used, by reason of which it varies from the section line on which the land owner supposed he was allowing it to be used, will not give rise to a prescriptive right to the road as used, and the owner may correct the mistake and confine the travel to the intended line without being guilty of obstructing the highway: State v. Crow, 30–258.

The fact that a fence is built along a highway at the time it is laid out and thus remains for twenty years is sufficient evidence to show that it is not upon the highway, although by subsequent location from field-notes the fence appears to be within the limits of the highway: Cattell v. Wilhelm, 39–288.

See, also, notes to § 1482.

A curative act to render valid defective proceedings for the establishment of highways is constitutional: Bennett v. Fisher, 26–497.

SEC. 1502. Unconditional order. In the latter case, a day shall be fixed for the performance of the condition, which must be before the next session of the board, and, if the same is not performed by that day, it shall at such session make some final and unconditional order in the premises. [C.'73, § 947; R., § 852; C.'51, § 547.]

SEC. 1503. Record. Any order made or action taken in the establishment, alteration or vacation of a road shall be entered in the road record, distinguishing between those made or taken by the auditor and those by the board of supervisors. [C.'73, § 948.]

SEC. 1504. Plat and field-notes recorded—road opened. After a road has been finally established or altered, the plat and field-notes must be recorded by the auditor, who shall certify the same to the township clerk, and the supervisors of roads shall be directed by him to have the same opened and worked, subject to the provisions of the next section. [15 G. A., ch. 19; C.'73, § 949; R., § 855; C.'51, § 550.]

SEC. 1505. Fences—crops. A reasonable time must be allowed to enable the owners of land to erect the necessary fences adjoining the new road; and when crops have been planted or sowed before the road is finally established, the opening thereof shall be delayed until the crop is harvested. [C.'73, § 950; R., §§ 856–7; C.'51, §§ 551–2.]

A land owner is not liable to indictment for obstructing a highway in not removing the fences where a newly established highway crosses his land, at least until he has had reasonable notice from the supervisor to do so: State v. Ratliffe, 32–189.

SEC. 1506. Minors—insane persons. The rights and interests of minors and insane persons in relation to the establishment, vacation and alteration of roads, and all matters connected therewith, are under the control of their guardians. [C.'73, § 951; R., § 860; C.'51, § 555.]

SEC. 1507. Streets in villages. All public streets of villages are a part of the road; and all road supervisors or persons having charge of the same, in the respective districts or villages, shall work the same as provided by law. [C.'73, § 952.]

SEC. 1508. In cities or towns. Such portions of all roads as lie within the limits of any city or town shall conform to the direction and grade and be subject to all regulations of other streets in such town or city. [C. '73, § 953; R., § 916.]

There is a clear distinction between streets and highways in cities and incorporated towns and in unincorporated towns; the latter are regarded as a part of the highways of the county, while the former are subject to the exclusive control of the officers of the municipality: Gallaher v. Head, 72–173.

See in general, § 751 and notes.

SEC. 1509. By trustees of state institutions. The trustees or commissioners of the institutions belonging to the state may vacate, alter, change or establish public highways through the lands belonging to the state, and for the use of such institutions, as the said board of trustees or commissioners may deem for the best interests of the state and the public, subject, however, to the approval of the board of supervisors of the county, or the city council of the city, wherein such lands are situated. [26 G. A., ch. 45, § 1.]

SEC. 1510. County line roads. The establishment, vacation or alteration of a road, either along or across a county line, may be effected by the concurrent action of the respective boards of supervisors in the manner above prescribed. The commissioners in such cases must act in concert, and the road shall not be established, vacated or altered in either county until it is so ordered in both. [C. '73, § 955; R., § 861; C. '51, § 556.]

SEC. 1511. General control—concurrent action. All roads, whether established by the trustees of state institutions under the statute or by the county authorities, are subject to the provisions of this chapter, and those established by the joint action of boards of supervisors of two or more counties can be altered or discontinued only by the joint action of the boards of the counties in which situated. Subject to these provisions, they shall be in all other respects treated, managed and controlled as provided in this title. The term "road," as used in this code means any public highway, unless otherwise specified. [C. '73, § 956; R., § 879.]

SEC. 1512. Consent highways. Roads may be established without the appointment of a commissioner, if the written consent of all the owners of the land to be used for that purpose be first filed in the auditor's office; and the board, if satisfied that the proposed road is of sufficient public importance to be opened and worked by the public, shall make an order establishing the same. If a survey is necessary, the board, before ordering the same, may require the parties asking such establishment to pay or secure the payment of the expenses thereof. [C. '73, §§ 957–8; R., §§ 858–9; C. '51, §§ 553–4.]

SEC. 1513. Appeals—from what taken. Any applicant for damages caused by the establishment or alteration of any road may appeal from the final decision of the board to the district court of the county in which the land lies, notice of which appeal must be served on the county auditor within twenty days after the decision is made. If the road has been established or altered on condition that the petitioners therefor pay the damages, such notice shall be served on the four persons first named in the petition, if there be that many residing in the county, in the manner in which an original notice may be served. [C. '73, § 959; R., § 873.]

Appeal: The propriety of the action, with reference to the allowance of damages, can only properly be raised by appeal: McCune v. Swafford, 5–552; Warner v. Doran, 30–521.

Petitioners may properly be permitted to withdraw their appeal if they so desire: Ellis v. Carpenter, 89–521.

Upon an appeal, not only the amount of damages, but also the right to any damages, may be determined: Spray v. Thompson, 9–40.

An appeal brings up nothing for determination except the claim for damages. The action of the board of supervisors in establishing the road cannot be reviewed: Pollard v. Dickinson County, 71–438.

An appeal lies from the action of the board entirely rejecting a claim for damages: Vancleve v. Clark, 37–184.

Therefore, held, that an appeal from the action of the board in disallowing a claim for damages on the ground that claimant was not the owner of the land, but in which it was expressly stated that no objection was made to the amount of the damages assessed by the jury, properly raised the question as to the correctness of the action of the board in rejecting the claim for damages: Ibid.

An order for the establishment of the highway conditioned upon the payment of damages is such a final order as may be appealed from. It is not necessary to wait for the unconditional order which follows the payment of the damages: McNichols v. Wilson, 42–385.

The fact that petitioners for the highway have renounced all right thereto that they might have by the action of the board in making the location conditional upon their payment of the damages assessed does not defeat the right of the claimant to prosecute his appeal from the assessment of damages, where petitioners do not entirely retire from the controversy and renounce all benefits which may arise from any action in the premises: Ibid.

Under previous statutory provisions allowing the county auditor to act in the matter of establishing highways, subject to the final approval of the board of supervisors, held, that an appeal would not lie from the order of such auditor, but only from the final action of the board: Newell v. Perkins, 39–244.

It appears from this section that no damages are to be allowed for vacation of a highway, inasmuch as no provision for an appeal in such a case is made: Grove v. Allen, 92–519; and see notes to § 1501.

Improper action of the auditor in appointing appraisers before the time fixed by statute for such appointment could not be raised on an appeal from the final action of a board of supervisors and therefore objection may be taken on that ground by certiorari: Abney v. Clark, 87–727.

As to reviewing the action of the board by certiorari, see notes to § 1501.

Notice of appeal: The twenty days within which notice of appeal may be served commences to run from the time of making the conditional order for the establishment of the highway, upon payment of damages, and not from the making of the final unconditional order, after such damages have been paid: McNichols v. Wilson, 42–385.

Where a claim for damages is disallowed by the commissioners, and its payment is not required by the order establishing the highway, it is not required that service of notice of an appeal by the claimant be made upon the petitioners: Raymond v. Clay County, 68–130.

The provision that notice shall be served on the four persons first named in the petition is mandatory and has no reference to the extent of the interest of the parties in the proposed highway, and a notice upon a less number, or upon others than the four first named, will not give the court jurisdiction: Finke v. Zeigelmiller, 77–251.

The record on appeal must in order to show jurisdiction make it appear that notice was served on the four persons who first signed the petition: Ellis v. Carpenter, 89–521.

Under § 959 of the Code of '73 the notice required was personal notice and notice by leaving a copy at the residence as provided for in the case of original notice was not sufficient: Ibid.

There does not appear to be any express provision as to the time which shall elapse between the service of notice of appeal and the first day of the term at which the case shall be deemed triable, but it seems it should be at least ten days: Scott v. Lasell, 71–180.

Appearance: Where the notice is served within twenty days, and the only objection is as to the sufficiency of proof of such service, an appearance and objection to the service confers jurisdiction: Libbey v. McIntosh, 60–329.

If the notice is not served upon the applicant within proper time he may appear and move to dismiss the appeal, and such appearance will not confer jurisdiction, nor waive his rights: Spurrier v. Wirtner, 48–486.

SEC. 1514. By petitioner. An appeal may be taken by the petitioner as to amount of damages, if the establishment or alteration has been made conditional upon paying the damages, by serving notice thereof on the county auditor and applicant for damages, in the manner in which original notices are served, and within twenty days after the decision of the board, and filing a bond in the office of such auditor, with sureties to be approved by him, conditioned for the payment of all costs occasioned by such appeal, if the appellant fails to recover a more favorable judgment in the district court than was allowed him by such board. [C. '73, § 960; R., § 874.]

If the notice is not served upon the applicant within proper time he may appear and move to dismiss the appeal, and such appearance will not confer jurisdiction nor waive his rights (explaining Robertson v. Eldora R. & Coal Co., 27–245): Spurrier v. Wirtner, 48–486.

SEC. 1515. Transcript filed. When an appeal has been taken, the auditor shall, within ten days thereafter, make out and file in the office of the clerk of said court a transcript of the papers on file in his office, and proceedings of the board of supervisors in relation to such damages. The claimant for damages shall be plaintiff and the petitioners defendants, except the damages have been ordered paid out of the county treasury, in which case the county shall be defendant. [C.'73, § 961; R., § 873.]

Parties to the appeal: It is not proper to make the road itself defendant in the appeal: Myers v. Old Mission, etc., Road, 7–315.

The county is not a proper party to the appeal unless the damages have been ordered paid out of the county treasury, in which case the statute provides that the county shall be defendant: Deaton v. Polk County, 9–594.

Although a claim for damages is disallowed and no order for its payment made in establishing the road, the county should be made defendant on an appeal by the claimant: Raymond v. Clay County, 68–130.

Transcript: The fact that the transcript is made out and filed with the clerk of the court before the service of the notice of appeal upon the auditor is a mere irregularity, in no manner affecting the jurisdiction of the court: Libbey v. McIntosh, 60–329.

Failure of the appellant to file notice of appeal with the auditor after the service thereof, until there are not ten days remaining between the service of notice and the first day of the next term, will not prevent the cause being triable at such term. It is the duty of the appellant to file the notice in time to allow a transcript to be filed: Scott v. Lasell, 71–180.

Filing fee: A rule of court providing that, upon failure of appellant to pay the filing fee, appellee might pay it and have the appeal dismissed, held not applicable where the appellant had paid the fee before motion to dismiss by appellee was filed: Cole v. Laub, 35–590.

The proceeding in which an appeal is taken may be denominated a civil case within the rule providing for payment of filing fee by appellant on the first day of the term: Scott v. Lasell, 71–180.

SEC. 1516. Proceedings in court. The amount of damages the claimant is entitled to shall be ascertained by the court in the same manner as in actions by ordinary proceedings, and the amount ascertained shall be entered of record, but no judgment rendered therefor. The amount thus ascertained shall be certified by the clerk to the board of supervisors, who shall thereafter proceed as if such amount had been by it allowed the claimant as damages. [C.'73, § 962.]

Trial of the appeal: The owner of the land is entitled to have his damages assessed anew upon appeal although no damages whatever were allowed by the appraisers: Deaton v. Polk County, 9–594.

The question as to the amount of damages may be tried de novo upon appeal: Prosser v. Wapello County, 18–327.

The appellant is entitled to a new assessment of his damages by jury upon the appeal: Des Moines v. Layman, 21–153.

It is not necessary, in order to secure a hearing, upon appeal, as to the amount of damages, that a motion should have been made before the board to set aside the report of the appraisers: Sigafoos v. Talbot, 25–214.

It is necessary that the party claiming damages on the appeal, if he seeks to recover damages to the tract out of which the right of way is taken, should show that he is owner thereof, and if the evidence fails to establish title in him he can recover only for such immediate and necessary damages as result to him as an occupant of the land: Costello v. Burke, 63–361.

The damages herein referred to must be estimated with reference to the extent of the interest of the claimant in the property from which the appropriation is to be made, and the claimant must therefore allege and prove the extent of his interest: Ibid.

Damages must be ascertained, on appeal, in view of the rights of the parties as settled by the supervisors; and where by subsequent action of the supervisors, after the determination of his damages, the amount of damages was increased, held, that the claimant might, by amended pleadings on the appeal, claim additional damages. The claimant may on appeal plead as in an action by ordinary proceedings, and therefore he is entitled to amend so as to ask more than was claimed before the board: Pollard v. Dickinson County, 71–438.

If, pending an application to establish a road, and after the damages have been assessed, a land owner erects a fence upon the proposed highway, he cannot have damages for the removal of such fence allowed on appeal: Holton v. Butler, 22–557.

Final action after determining damages on appeal: When the amount of damages has been fixed by the trial of the appeal, the board of supervisors may proceed to final action as if that amount had been originally allowed by them: McNichols v. Wilson, 42–385.

If the amount of damages is increased on the appeal, the board may reconsider their action and refuse to establish the highway: Nelson v. Goodykoontz, 47–32.

The county cannot be prejudiced by the recovery by claimant on an appeal of damages greater than allowed by the supervisors, for the reason that the road cannot be established until the trial of the appeal. The supervisors may make the establishment of the road conditioned on the payment of the damages: Pollard v. Dickinson County, 71–438.

SEC. 1517. Costs. If the appeal be taken by the petitioners, they shall pay the costs, unless the claimant recovers a less amount than was allowed them by the board. In all other cases the taxing of the costs shall rest in the discretion of the court. [26 G. A., ch. 44; C. '73, § 963; R., § 873.]

The recovery of costs by the claimant upon his appeal is not made contingent upon whether the amount of his damages is increased by the court: Hanrahan v. Fox, 47–102.

Neither the petitioner nor the county can be made to pay the costs of the appeal until the appeal has been determined and the costs have been adjudged. The appellant should advance the filing fee: Scott v. Lasell, 71–180.

SEC. 1518. Lost field-notes—resurvey. When, by reason of the loss or destruction of the field-notes of the original survey, or of defective surveys or record, or of numerous alterations since the original survey, the location of any road can not be accurately determined, the board of the proper county may cause it to be resurveyed, platted and recorded, as hereinafter provided. [C.'73, § 964; R., § 913.]

Where the necessary steps were taken to establish a road, but the clerk failed to record the field-notes, and no record of the final order was found, held, a proper case for the supervisors to order a resurvey: Balke v. Bailey, 20–124. But where a highway has never been in fact establish a resurvey thereof is of no effect: Carey v. Weitgenant, 52–660.

The board cannot vary the line of road as originally surveyed to conform it to a way acquired by prescription. The alterations referred to in the provisions as to resurvey have reference to such changes in the road as have occurred by orders or surveys made after the original survey, and which tend to such confusion that the location of the road is not accurately defined or pointed out by the record: Blair v. Boesch, 59–554.

But it is competent for the board to hear evidence as to where the original survey was actually made, and being satisfied from the evidence that the resurvey is upon the line as originally surveyed, to approve and confirm such survey, although it does not conform to the original field-notes: Ibid.

Proceedings for resurvey will be void where there was no original establishment of the highway sought to be resurveyed. It is not the office of such proceedings to cure original proceedings which were fatally defective: Barnes v. Fox, 61–18.

Where a portion of the record of the establishment of a highway was lost, and the resurvey showed the highway to be not on the section line, as indicated by a portion of the record remaining, and the evidence showed that the resurvey corresponded with the original survey, held, that the resurvey was properly confirmed: Ackerson v. Van Vleek, 72–57.

SEC. 1519. Plat and field-notes filed—notice given. A copy of the field-notes, together with the plat of any road surveyed under the provisions of the preceding section, shall be filed in the office of the county auditor, and thereupon he shall give notice, in some newspaper published within the county, that at some term of the board therein named, not less than twenty days from the publication, it will, unless good cause be shown against so doing, approve of such survey and plat, and order them to be recorded as in cases of the original establishment of a public road. [C.'73, § 965; R., § 914.]

SEC. 1520. Proceedings—record. In case objection shall be made by any person claiming to be injured by the survey so made, the board shall have power to hear and determine the matter, and may, if thought advisable, order a change to be made in the survey. If, upon the final determination, the board shall find said survey is correct, it shall approve the same, and cause the field-notes and plat thereof to be recorded as in case of the establishment or alteration of roads, and thereafter such records shall be received by all courts as conclusive proof of its establishment according to such survey and plat. [C.'73, § 966; R., § 915.]

SEC. 1521. Road plat book. If the same has not been heretofore done, the county auditor shall cause every road in his county, the legal existence of which is shown by the records and files in his office, to be platted in a book to be obtained and kept for that purpose and known as the "road plat book." Each township shall be platted separately, on a scale of not less than four inches to the mile, and such auditor shall have all changes in or additions to the roads legally established immediately entered upon said plat book, with appropriate references to the files in which the papers relating to the same may be found. The auditor shall, from time to time, notify the clerk of each township of all changes made in the roads thereof, and on receipt of such notice he shall immediately make corresponding changes on the highway plat book in his office, and shall, in case such plat book is lost or is found to be substantially inaccurate, procure a new one, or cause corrections to be made, at a reasonable expense, to be paid out of the general township fund. [C.'73, §§ 967–8; R., § 889.]

The clerk is to furnish the supervisor with a plat of his district: See § 1539.

SEC. 1522. Sidewalks on highways. Any owner of land adjoining a public road outside the limits of a city or town may construct a sidewalk on and along said road, which shall not exceed four feet in width, and be located along the side thereof, of any material suitable for a foot-walk, but it shall not be so constructed as to interfere with the proper use and enjoyment of any lands or premises along which it is laid. The person building such walk shall keep the same in repair. [20 G. A., ch. 147, § 1.]

SEC. 1523. Penalty for injury to. Any person who shall destroy, injure, drive or ride upon a sidewalk so constructed, except at road crossings, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than five dollars for each offense, and shall be liable to the party who has built or maintained said sidewalk for all damages caused thereby. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1524. Cattle-ways across highways. Upon application to the board of supervisors of any county by any person for permission to construct a cattle-way across, over or under any public road, it may grant the same upon condition that such way shall not interfere with the public travel; that the grade of the road over the cattle-way shall not exceed one foot in ten feet; and that it shall not obstruct watering at any running stream. The applicant shall construct the same at his own expense, and be responsible for all damages that may arise from its construction, or from the same not being kept in repair. [16 G. A., ch. 111, § 1.]

One who constructs a cattle pass without permission is subject to the same liability as is here imposed: Gould v. Schermer, 70 N. W., 697.

SEC. 1525. Repairs. If the person on whose land such cattle-way is constructed fails to keep the same in repair, it shall be the duty of the road supervisor to make all necessary repairs, and charge the same to the owner of the land upon which such way is constructed, and, upon his refusal or failure to pay, the supervisor shall recover the same in an action brought in his own name, which money, when collected, shall be expended in improving or repairing the public roads in the road district where such cattle-way is constructed. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1526. Application for. Any person desiring to build a cattle-way across a public highway, under any township bridge, may apply to the board of trustees of the township wherein the same is to be located, at any meeting thereof, and it may grant such application, and prescribe such conditions in regard to the maintenance of said bridge as it may think proper. [22 G. A., ch. 92, § 1.]

SEC. 1527. Laying out public highways—fees. The following fees shall be paid persons engaged in laying out and changing roads:

1. Commissioners, for each day, two dollars;
2. Surveyor, for each day, four dollars;
3. Chain carriers, markers, and other assistants, for each day, one dollar and fifty cents.

If the road extends into more than one county, such expenses when so adjudged shall be paid by the several counties in proportion to the length of time occupied on the road in each county. [C. '73, § 3824; R., §§ 872, 877.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF WORKING ROADS.

SECTION 1528. Powers and duties of trustees. The township trustees of each township shall meet on the first Monday in April, or as soon thereafter as the assessment book is received by the township clerk, and on the first Monday in November, in each year. At the April meeting, said trustees shall determine:

1. The amount of property tax to be levied for roads, bridges, guideboards, plows, scrapers, tools, and machinery adapted to the construction and repair of roads, and for the payment of any indebtedness previously incurred for road purposes, and levy the same, which shall not be less than one nor more than four mills on the dollar on the amount of the township assessment for that year, which, when collected, shall be expended under the direction and order of the township trustees;

2. Whether any portion of said tax shall be paid in labor, and, if so, what portion;

3. The amount that will be allowed for a day's labor done by a man, and by a man and team, on the road. To certify to the board of supervisors the desire for an additional road tax, of not to exceed one mill, to be levied in whole or in part by the board of supervisors as hereinafter provided. At the November meeting, they may divide their respective townships into such number of road districts as may be necessary for the public good, and shall settle with the township clerk and supervisors of roads. [26 G. A., ch. 43; 25 G. A., ch. 22; C. '73, §§ 969, 971; R., §§ 880, 891, 895; C. '51, § 568.]

A road district cannot be sued: White v. Road District, 9-202; Wilson v. Jefferson County, 13-181.

The power of the trustees to divide the township into road districts does not extend to such portions as are embraced within a city. And they have no power to levy a road tax in such portions. The city council have control of the highways and streets of the city (§ 753): Marks v. Woodbury County, 47-455; Hawley v. Hoops, 12-506.

Township trustees have no authority to borrow money for the improvement of highways, or to make the improvements in one district a charge upon the other districts of the township: Cass County Bank v. Conrad, 81-482.

As incorporated towns are given power to provide for grading and repair of their streets (§§ 753, 782), they must have control over such streets, and the road supervisor and township trustees have no authority over them: Clark v. Epworth, 56-462.

Road tax may be levied upon the property of railway companies, although such property is not placed upon the assessor's book: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168, 177.

SEC. 1529. General township fund—clerk to give bond—custody of implements. The trustees shall set apart such portion of the tax provided in the preceding section as may be necessary for the purpose of purchasing the tools and machinery and paying for the guideboards mentioned therein, and the same shall constitute a general township fund; and they shall require the township clerk to give bond in such sum as they think proper, conditioned as the bonds of the county officers, which bond, and the sureties thereon, shall be approved by them. Said clerk shall have charge of and properly preserve and keep in repair such tools, implements and machinery as may be purchased, and may determine at what time the supervisors of the several road districts may have the use of the same or any part thereof, and he shall be responsible for the safe keeping of the same when not in the custody of some one of the supervisors, and shall receive such compensation as they shall provide, to be paid out of such fund. [C. '73, § 970.]

The "general fund" is the money set apart for that purpose as here contemplated, and does not embrace money received by the clerk from the county treasurer under § 1543: Henderson v. Simpson, 45-519.

The orders provided for by § 1567 are not payable out of the general fund contemplated by this section. The township trustees have no control over the road fund, except that part of it which may be set apart for general township purposes. The balance is to be expended by the road supervisors: Bradley v. Love, 76-397.

An order upon the township clerk signed by the township trustees payable out of the general township fund does not give rise to any personal liability on the part of such trustees, it being manifest from the whole instrument that there was no intention to assume a personal liability: Willett v. Young, 82-292.

The trustees have no authority to contract indebtedness for the purchase of tools and machinery, until a tax is levied and set apart for that purpose. "Indebtedness previously incurred," in the preceding section, does not refer to such indebtedness for tools and machinery. The trustees may, after the tax is levied and set apart, anticipate the collection of the tax and purchase tools and machinery upon credit: Wells v. Grubb, 58-384; Hanks v. North, 58-396; Revolving Scraper Co. v. Tuttle, 61-423.

The clerk might maintain an action for funds belonging to his township in the hands of third persons. If he deposits such funds in his individual name, without notice to the banker of their character, such act amounts to a conversion. The deposit belongs to the clerk individually, and if seized by garnishee process under attachment on his individual debt, without notice of its character, cannot be recovered back as public funds: Long v. Emsley,57–11.

The township clerk is the proper party to bring an action against a road supervisor for moneys received by him belonging to the general township fund which he fails to pay over: Wells v. Stomback, 59–376.

And it seems that in such case the clerk might sue on the supervisor's bond: Kellogg v. Bare, 62–468.

As to taxation of property within a city or town for road purposes see § 890.

Each road district is required to keep up and repair its own roads, except that tools, scrapers, etc., are owned and controlled by the township at large. They are under the control of the township clerk, and he is required to determine at what time or times the supervisors of the several districts shall have the use of them: Bradley v. Love,76–397.

SEC. 1530. County road fund—how levied and paid out. The board of supervisors of each county may, at the time of levying taxes for other purposes, levy a tax of not more than one mill on the dollar of the assessed value of the taxable property in its county, including all taxable property in cities and incorporated towns, which shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner as other taxes, and be known as the county road fund, and paid out only on the order of the board for work done on the roads of the county in such places as it shall determine; but so much of the county road fund as arises from property within any city or incorporated town shall be expended on the roads or streets within such city or town, or on the roads adjacent thereto, under the direction of the city or town council; and the county treasurer shall receive the same compensation for collecting this tax as he does for collecting corporation taxes. In case the board of supervisors do not make a levy for county road fund, or levy less than one mill for said county road fund, the board of supervisors shall levy such an additional sum for the benefit of such townships as shall have certified a desire for such additional levy, as provided for in section fifteen hundred and twenty-eight of this chapter; but the amount for the general township fund and the county road fund shall not exceed in any year five mills on the dollar. [25 G. A., ch. 22; 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 1.]

SEC. 1531. Expenditure. It shall, at the regular meeting in April, determine from the auditor's and treasurer's books the amount of money collected and credited to said road tax fund. It shall also determine the manner in which said tax shall be expended, whether by contract or otherwise. [20 G. A., ch. 200, § 2.]

SEC. 1532. One road district plan. The board of township trustees, at its regular meeting in April, may consolidate the road districts thereof into one road district, and it may, at such meeting, subdivide, returning to the former plan of road work, after a three years' trial of the single district system. If this system shall be adopted, the road fund belonging to the several road districts shall at once become a general township road fund, out of which all claims for work done or material furnished for road purposes prior to the change, and unsettled, shall be paid. [Same, §§ 4, 11.]

This provision is not mandatory. It devolves upon the board a discretionary duty after jurisdiction once attaches: Dunham v. Fox, 69 N. W., 436.

The taxpayer may maintain proceedings to set aside an illegal order of the board under these provisions without showing that he is specially prejudiced thereby: Ibid.

A board of trustees in acting under these provisions is a board exercising judicial functions and certiorari will lie to test the validity of its action: Ibid.

Before the petition is acted upon the petitioners have the right by remonstrance to express to the board the fact that they do not desire to be considered as petitioners: Ibid.

SEC. 1533. Duty of trustees. Where the one road district plan is adopted, the board of township trustees shall order and direct the expenditure of the road funds and labor belonging or owing to the township; may let, by contract, to the lowest responsible, competent bidder, any part or all of the work on the roads for the current year, or may appoint a township superintendent of roads, with one or more assistants, to oversee, subject to the direction of the board, all or any part of the work, but it shall not incur an indebtedness for such purposes unless the same has been or shall at the time be provided for by an authorized levy; and may order the township road tax for the succeeding year paid in money and collected by the county treasurer as other taxes. It shall cause both the property and poll road tax to be equitably and judiciously expended for road purposes in the entire road district; shall cause at least seventy-five per cent. of the township road tax to be thus expended by the fifteenth day of July in each year; shall cause the noxious weeds growing in the roads to be cut twice a year, when necessary, and at such times as to prevent their seeding, and it may allow any land owner a reasonable compensation for the destruction thereof, when growing in the roads abutting upon his land, and credit him therefor on his road tax for that year. If a superintendent of roads and an assistant are employed, it shall fix the term of office, which shall not exceed one year, and compensation, which shall not exceed three dollars a day; and no contract shall be made without reserving the right of the board to dispense with his services at its pleasure. [Same, §§ 5–10, 17.]

Prior to the enactment of this statute no authority was vested in the township trustees to expend any of the road tax excepting that part which constituted the general township fund: Cass County Bank v. Conrad, 81–482.

SEC. 1534. Qualification of officers. The trustees shall require the township clerk, contractor and superintendent, contemplated in this plan, each to qualify as other township officers, and to execute a bond with approved sureties for twice the amount of money likely to come into their hands, respectively. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 1535. Day's work. Eight hours' service for a man, or man and team, shall be required for a day's work; but except on extraordinary occasions no person shall be required to go more than three miles from his place of residence to work, and, for the purposes of the one road district plan, the residence of a man with a family shall be construed to be where his family resides, and for a single man, it shall be at the place where he is at work. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 1536. Contractors and superintendents. The powers, duties and accountability imposed on road supervisors, so far as may be, under the one road district plan, shall apply to contractors, superintendents and assistants. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 1537. Township system takes effect. In all cases where the one road district plan for the township shall have been adopted, it shall be competent for the township trustees to designate when the same shall take effect as to the working of the roads. [Same, § 16.]

SEC. 1538. Compensation of trustees, treasurer and clerk. The trustees shall receive the same compensation per day for time necessarily spent in looking after the roads as they do for other township business; the county treasurer shall receive the same per cent. for collecting the road taxes here contemplated that he does for collecting corporation taxes; and the township clerk shall receive two per cent. of all the money thus coming into his hands and by him paid out for road purposes. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 1539. Furnish plat. The township clerk shall furnish each road supervisor a copy of so much of the map or plat furnished him by the auditor as relates to the roads in his district, and from time to time shall mark thereon the changes in or additions to such roads as the same are certified to him by the auditor, which map or plat shall be transferred to his successor in office. [C. '73, § 972; R., § 890; C. '51, §§ 573–4.]

This map is not essential to the authority of the supervisor and gives him no additional power: Mosier v. Vincent, 34–478.

It is in no legal sense a process, and is no protection to him in opening a highway indicated thereon: Campbell v. Kennedy, 34–494.

Copy of plat book for the township to be furnished by the auditor to the township clerk: See § 1521.

SEC. 1540. Tax list. He shall, within four weeks after the trustees have levied the property tax, make out a tax list for each road district in his township, which shall be in tabular form and alphabetical order, having distinct columns for lands, town lots and personal property, and contain in a separate column the amount of the tax on each piece of land and town lot, and that on the amount of personal property, belonging to each individual, and in another column the amount of tax to be paid in money due from each individual. This list shall contain the names of all persons required to perform two days' labor upon the road as a poll tax. To enable him to make out such tax list, the assessor shall furnish the clerk of each township, on or before the first day of April in each year, a correct copy of the assessment lists of said township for that year, which shall be the basis of such tax list. The county auditor shall furnish the several township clerks of his county with the necessary printed blanks. [C.'73, § 973; R., § 892.]

SEC. 1541. Collection of tax. He shall make an entry upon such tax list, showing what road district and year it is for, and attach thereto his warrant under his hand, in general terms requiring the supervisor of such district to collect the taxes therein charged, and no informality in the above requirements shall render any proceedings for the collection of such taxes illegal. He shall cause such lists to be delivered to the proper supervisors of his township within thirty days after the levy, and take receipts therefor; and such list shall be sufficient authority for the supervisor to collect all taxes therein charged against resident property holders in his district. [C.'73, § 974; R., § 893.]

SEC. 1542. Delinquent tax certified. He shall, on or before the second Monday in November in each year, make out a certified list of all lands, town lots and personal property on which the road tax has not been paid, and the amount of tax charged on each parcel of land, town lot or personal property, designating the district in which the same is situated, and transmit the same to the auditor, who shall enter the amount of tax the same as other taxes, and deliver the same to the county treasurer, charging him therewith, which shall be collected by him in the same manner that county taxes are collected. In case the township clerk shall fail or neglect to make such return, he shall forfeit and pay to the township for road purposes a sum equal to the amount of tax on said land, which may be collected by an action on his bond. [26 G. A., ch. 43; C.'73, § 975; R., § 898.]

Irregularities in the making of returns by the township clerk, or in the manner of placing the taxes upon the treasurer's books, will not render the tax invalid: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41–153, 177; Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39–124; Same v. Carroll County, 39–151, 154.

SEC. 1543. Taxes paid to clerk. The county treasurer shall, on the last Monday in April and October in each year, pay to the township clerk all the road taxes belonging to his township which are at such time in his hands, taking the duplicate receipts of such clerk therefor, one of which shall be delivered by the treasurer to the trustees on or before the first Monday in May and November in each year. [22 G. A., ch. 45; C.'73, § 976; R., § 910.]

These taxes when collected become no part of the county fund and cannot be appropriated or disbursed by the county. If illegally collected, they cannot be refunded to the taxpayers out of the county revenue, and the county is not liable in an action for their recovery: Stone v. Woodbury County, 51–522.

The clerk may maintain an action for funds belonging to his township in the hands of third persons. If he deposits the funds in his individual name without notice to the banker of their character, such act amounts to conversion and the deposit belongs to him individually, and if seized by garnishment process under attachment on his individual debt, without notice as to the character of the fund, they cannot be recovered back: Long v. Emsley, 57–11.

The township clerk is the proper party to bring suit on the supervisor's bond for failure to account for taxes. Such duty does not pertain to the trustees: Wells v. Stomback, 59–376; Keller v. Bare, 62–468.

Road taxes collected by the county treasurer and paid over to the township clerk, except as far as they belong to the general fund, are to be distributed in the same manner as other road taxes, without any special action of the township trustees: Henderson v. Simpson, 45–519.

A road supervisor who fails to pay over the proportion of the road taxes collected by him, which has been by the trustees apportioned to the general fund, is liable therefor in an action on his bond, although he may have expended for road purposes all the money collected by him: Wells v. Stomback, 59–376.

SEC. 1544. Road taxes apportioned. The county auditor shall provide a column in the tax list, in which shall be shown the road districts to which the road taxes belong, and the treasurer, when he pays the same to the several township clerks, shall furnish each a statement, showing the district or districts to which the money belongs, and the amount to each. [18 G. A., ch. 36.]

SEC. 1545. Supervisor—qualification. Each road supervisor shall give bond in such sum and with such security as the township clerk may require (but in no case shall a township trustee sign such bond as surety), conditioned that he will faithfully and impartially perform all the duties required of him, and devote all moneys that may come into his hands by virtue of his office, according to law. If a vacancy occurs in any road district, the clerk shall fill the same by appointment, but no person shall be required to serve as such supervisor who is exempt from performing labor on the roads. [16 G. A., ch. 167; C. '73, §§ 977–8; R., §§ 881, 884.]

The township trustees may redistrict the township, and if by such redistricting the supervisor of the district becomes a resident of another district than that for which he was elected, his office becomes vacant: Mauck v. Lock, 70–266.

A supervisor is subject to the same liability for improper or careless exercise of his powers as a city or town is in relation to its streets; and held, that he was personally liable for damages to an adjacent land owner resulting from the diversion of a stream of water from his land, by reason of alteration in the highway made by the supervisor: McCord v. High, 24–336.

A road supervisor may be guilty of trespass in removing an obstruction, as, for instance, a dwelling-house, if the act is not done for the purpose of opening the highway, but for the malicious purpose of injuring the owner: Wilding v. Hough, 37–446.

As incorporated towns are given power to provide for grading and repairing their streets, they must have control over such streets, and the road supervisors and township trustees have no power over them: Clark v. Epworth, 56–462.

A road supervisor may be restrained by injunction from repairing the highway in such a manner as to interfere with the rights or wishes of an adjoining owner: Bills v. Belknap, 36–583.

Further as to removing shade-trees, see § 1556.

The trustees have no authority to receive the taxes collected by the supervisor and are not the proper parties to bring suit on his bond for failure to account for such taxes. Such suit should be brought by the clerk: Keller v. Bare, 62–468.

SEC. 1546. Notice to—penalty for refusing to serve. Within five days after his election or appointment, the township clerk shall notify the road supervisor elected or appointed thereof, and if he shall fail to appear and qualify, as required by law, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of five dollars, and in case of refusal to pay the same his successor shall collect it by action, and apply the same to the repairing of roads in his district. [C. '73, § 979; R., § 883.]

SEC. 1547. Posting tax list. The road supervisor shall, within ten days after receiving the tax list, post up in three conspicuous places within his district written notices of the amount assessed to each taxpayer in said district. [C. '73, § 980; R., § 894.]

SEC. 1548. How tax expended. The road supervisor shall cause all taxes collected by him to be expended for road purposes on or before the first day of November of that year, seventy-five per cent. of which shall be expended before the fifteenth day of July, except the portion set apart for a general township fund, which shall be by him paid over to the township clerk from time to time as collected, and his receipt taken therefor. [26 G. A., ch. 43; C. '73, § 981.]

A road supervisor who fails to pay over the proportion of the road taxes collected by him, which has been by the trustees apportioned to the general fund, is liable therefor in an action on his bond, although he may have expended for road purposes all the money collected by him: Wells v. Stomback, 59–376.

SEC. 1549. In each district. The money tax levied upon the property in each district, except that portion set apart as a general township fund, whether collected by the road supervisor or county treasurer, shall be expended for road purposes in that district only. [C. '73, § 982; C. '51, § 578.]

Road tax collected by the county treasurer and paid over to the clerk, except so much thereof as belongs to the general fund (under § 1528), is to be distributed in the same manner as other road tax, without any special action of the trustees: Henderson v. Simpson, 45–519.

The supervisor is the collector of the road tax, and is not required to pay any part of it to the township clerk except the portion set apart as a general fund. The balance must be expended for highway purposes in the road district in which it was levied, and no part of it shall be expended for the benefit of another district: Bradley v. Love, 76–397.

Each road district is required to keep up and repair its own roads, except that tools, scrapers, etc., are owned and controlled by the township at large: Ibid.

One district cannot be compelled to expend its tax indirectly in another district, and therefore orders issued in pursuance of § 1567 are not payable out of the general fund of the whole township, but only out of the funds of the particular district on account of which they are issued: Ibid.

SEC. 1550. Who to perform labor. The road supervisor shall require all able-bodied male residents of his district, between the ages of twenty-one and forty-five, to perform two days' labor upon the roads, between the first days of April and September of each year. [C. '73, § 983.]

SEC. 1551. Notice of time and place—receipts. The road supervisor shall give at least three days' notice of the day or days and place to work the roads to all persons subject to work thereon, or who are charged with a road tax within his district, and all persons so notified must meet him at such time and place, with such tools, implements and teams as he may direct, and labor diligently under his direction for eight hours each day; and for such two days' labor the supervisor shall give to him a certificate, which shall be evidence that he has performed such labor on the public roads, and exempt him from performing labor in payment of road poll tax in that or any other road district for the same year. The road supervisor shall give any person who may perform labor in payment of his road tax a receipt, showing the amount of money earned by such labor, which shall be evidence of the payment of said tax to the amount specified in the receipt. [C. '73, § 984; R., §§ 886, 896; C. '51, § 588.]

A failure to notify the taxpayer to work out the portion of his tax which may be paid in work will not authorize the restraining of the collection of the entire tax: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45–168, 177.

A man who is not able-bodied is not liable to the penalty for not appearing to work on the highway when summoned. The fact that he does not make known his condition when summoned, or sends a substitute who is rejected as incompetent, will not deprive him of the benefit of his exemption: Martin v. Gadd, 31–75.

SEC. 1552. Penalty for failure to attend or work. Each person liable to perform labor on the roads as poll tax, who fails to attend, either in person or by satisfactory substitute, at the time and place directed, with the tools, implements or teams required, having had three days' notice thereof, or, appearing, shall spend his time in idleness, or disobey the road supervisor, or fail to furnish him, within five days thereafter, some satisfactory excuse for not attending, shall forfeit and pay him the sum of three dollars for each day's delinquency; and in case of failure to pay such forfeit within ten days, he shall recover the same by action in his name as supervisor, and no property or wages belonging to such person shall be exempt from execution therefor. Such action shall be before any justice of the peace in the proper township. The money, when collected, shall be expended on the public roads. [16 G. A., ch. 21; C. '73, § 985; R., § 887.]

SEC. 1553. Compensation of supervisor. The road supervisor shall be allowed the sum of two dollars per day for each day's labor, including the time necessarily spent in notifying the hands and making out his returns, which sum shall be paid out of the road fund, after deducting his two days' work. When there is no money in the hands of the clerk with which to pay him, he shall be entitled to receive a certificate for the amount of labor performed, which shall be received in payment of his own road tax for any succeeding year. [20 G. A., ch. 200, § 3; C.'73. § 986; R., § 888; C. '51, § 2547.]

When there is no money in the hands of the clerk with which to pay the supervisor his compensation for labor he is not entitled to an order on the township fund payable out of such fund when collected in the future, but only the certificate which may be used by him in the payment of his taxes. It is only for expenses incurred by the supervisor that he is entitled to an order payable out of funds to be collected in the future; Howegler v. Greiner, 89-476.

SEC. 1554. Report. The supervisors of the several districts of each township shall report to the township clerk on the first Monday of April and November of each year, which report shall embrace the following items:

1. The names of all persons in his district required to perform labor on the public road, and the amount performed by each;
2. The names of all persons against whom actions have been brought, and the amount collected of each;
3. The names of all persons who have paid their property road tax in labor, and the amount paid by each;
4. The names of all persons who have paid their property tax in money, and the amount paid by each;
5. A correct list of all lands and town lots belonging to nonresidents of the district on which the road tax has been paid, and the amount paid by each;
6. A correct list of all lands and town lots belonging to nonresidents of the district on which the road tax has not been paid, and the amount on each piece;
7. The amount of all moneys coming into his hands by virtue of his office, and from what sources;
8. The manner in which moneys coming into his hands have been expended, and the amount, if any, in his possession;
9. The number of days he has been employed in the discharge of his duty;
10. The condition of the roads in his district, and such other items and suggestions as he may wish to make, which report shall be signed and sworn to by him, and filed by the township clerk in his office. [26 G. A., ch. 43; C. '73, § 987; R., § 897; C. '51, § 580.]

SEC. 1555. Tax certified and collected. If it appears from such report that any person has failed to perform the two days' labor required, or any part thereof, and that the road supervisor has neglected to collect the amount in money required to be paid in case of such failure, the clerk shall add the amount required to be paid to such person's property tax, and certify the same to the auditor, who shall enter it on the proper tax list, and the treasurer shall collect the same. [C. '73, § 988.]

SEC. 1556. Shade trees—timber—drainage. The road supervisor shall not cut down or injure any tree growing by the wayside which does not obstruct the road, or which stands in front of any town lot, inclosure or cultivated field, or any ground reserved for any public use, and shall not enter upon any lands for the purpose of taking timber therefrom without first receiving permission from the owner or owners of said lands, nor destroy or injure the ingress or egress to any property, or turn the natural drainage of the surface water to the injury of adjoining owners; but it shall be the duty of the supervisor to use strict diligence in draining the surface water from the public road in its natural channel, and to this end he may enter upon the adjoining lands for the purpose of removing obstructions from such natural channel that impede the flow of such water. [26 G. A., ch. 49; 21 G. A., ch. 87, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 28, § 1; C. '73, § 989; R., § 901; C. '51, § 587.]

Shade trees which do not obstruct the highway, and the removal of which is not necessary to properly improve it, are not to be removed in opposition to the wishes of an adjoining owner on whose portion of the highway the trees are growing: Bills v. Belknap, 36-583; Everett v. Council Bluffs, 46-66.

Shade trees at the side of the highway which would not obstruct or interfere with the traveled track, if it were located in the middle of the highway, should be permitted to stand: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

Where a hedge was planted after a highway was in use, and for the purpose of fencing between a field and the highway, held, that the planting and maintenance of the hedge amounted to a dedication of the land outside of the hedge for the purpose of the highway, although at the time the hedge was planted a fence for its protection wa maintained outside of the hedge: Ibid.

So long as shade trees do not obstruct the road and prevent its use, they should not be removed against the wishes of the owner: Crismon v. Deck, 84-344.

This section was designed to protect the owner in the use and enjoyment of his property, and prevent interference on the part of the road supervisor; but it is not intended to prevent necessary improvements in the highway, where they can be made without material injury to the adjacent property, even though some inconvenience might result to the owners of such property: Randall v. Christiansen, 76-169.

A supervisor is not to be held liable for treble damages under § 4306 for cutting down trees in the highway where it does not appear that the act was wanton and without reasonable excuse: Werner v. Flies, 91-146.

SEC. 1557. Liability for unsafe bridge or highway. When notified in writing that any bridge or portion of the public road is unsafe, the road supervisor shall be liable for all damages resulting therefrom, after allowing a reasonable time for repairing the same. If there is in his district any bridge erected or maintained by the county, he shall, on receiving written notice of its unsafe condition, obstruct the passage thereon, and notify at least one member of the board of supervisors, in writing, of its condition. If he fails to obstruct and notify, he shall be liable for all damages growing out of the unsafe condition thereof, occurring after the time he is so notified and while he neglects to obstruct such passage. Any person who shall remove such obstruction shall be liable for all damages occurring to any person resulting therefrom, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to relieve the county from liability for the defects of said bridge. [17 G. A., ch. 52; C.'73, § 990; R., 902; C.'51, § 582.]

The road supervisor is required to build only such bridges as can be built from the limited means at his disposal. Other bridges are to be deemed county bridges: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

The degree of care required of a road supervisor in constructing a bridge is ordinary and reasonable care: Gould v. Shermer, 70 N. W., 697.

It is a question of fact for the jury to determine whether to construct a bridge without railings or barriers is negligence in view of its construction and the use to which it is put: Ibid.

It is not the duty of the supervisor to build bridges requiring a large expenditure of money, nor is he liable for failure to keep such bridges in repair when such repair would involve a considerable expense. Such matters are under the control of the board of supervisors: Wilson v. Jefferson County, 13-181. And see § 422 ¶ 18.

A highway supervisor, who in constructing a bridge violated the terms of the grant in pursuance of which the original bridge had been constructed, held, to be affected with notice of the terms of such grant, and liable in damages: Ague v. Seitsinger, 85-305.

SEC. 1558. Extraordinary repairs. For making such repairs as are required in the preceding section, the road supervisor may call out any or all of the able-bodied men of the district in which they are to be made, but not more than two days at one time without their consent, and persons so called out shall be entitled to receive a certificate from him of the number of days' labor performed, which shall be received in payment for road tax for that or any succeeding year, at the rate per day established for that year. [C.'73, § 991; R., § 903; C.'51, §§ 583, 586.]

Where a township trustee borrowed money with which to repair the highways in his district, held, that such transaction was illegal, and the fact that the township used the highways, and thus received and enjoyed the benefits which the use of the money conferred, would not render the township liable: Cass County Bank v. Conrad, 81-482.

SEC. 1559. Penalty. Any able-bodied man, duly summoned, who fails to appear and labor by himself or substitute, or send satisfactory excuse therefor, or pay the value thereof in money before an action is brought, shall forfeit and pay ten dollars, to be recovered in an action in the name of the road supervisor, and for the use of the road fund of the district. [C.'73, § 992; R., § 904; C. '51, § 585.]

A man not able-bodied is not liable to the penalty here prescribed. The fact that he does not make known his condition when summoned, or sends a substitute who is rejected as incompetent, will not deprive him of the benefit of his exemption: Martin v. Gadd, 31–75.

SEC. 1560. Obstructions removed. The road supervisor shall remove all obstructions in the roads, but must not throw down or remove fences which do not directly obstruct travel, until notice in writing, not exceeding six months, has been given to the owner of the land inclosed in part by such fence. [C. '73, § 993; R., § 905; C. '51, § 594.]

Notice: The statutory provision as to notice regarding removal of obstructions is applicable in case of obstructions placed in a highway after it is opened, and a fence directly obstructing travel cannot be thrown down without notice, although the party maintaining it may be liable to indictment for obstructing the highway: Mosier v. Vincent, 34–478.

Where a highway has been laid out but not yet opened, a person has not the right to take the law into his own hands and force his way over the land against the will of the owner; and held, that the act of such owner in forcibly opposing a person riding through his land under such circumstances did not constitute an assault: State v. Stoke, 80–68.

The reasonable notice required to be given by a supervisor in case of opening a highway is such notice and for such a length of time as, under all the facts and circumstances of the case, is reasonably proper to enable the party notified to perform the act which the notice is intended to give him opportunity to perform, and in the ordinary manner. It need not be six months in all cases: Blackburn v. Powers, 40–681.

The verdict in a particular case finding that a notice of three days for the removal of a fence was sufficient notice, held, not reversible error in the absence of the evidence on which the jury acted: Mosher v. Vincent, 39–607.

The notice here required is for the benefit of the land owner. One who seeks to hold the supervisors liable in damages for not having opened the road as required cannot complain if the notice to the land owner allows the full six months for opening the road: Cook v. Gaylord, 91–219.

Obstruction: The obstructions which the supervisor is authorized to remove in opening the highway are obstacles, impediments, or hindrances, or anything impeding progress thereon. They need not be such as to render the highway impassable: Patterson v. Vail, 43–142.

The supervisor may be compelled by mandamas to perform the duty of opening the highway as required by statute: Ibid.; Larkin v. Harris, 36–93.

Proof of a mutual mistake as to the line of a highway, as used, by which it varies from that intended, and that an obstruction in the highway, as used, is an attempt to correct such mistake, will make the obstruction legal: State v. Crow, 30–258.

If the right to use a way is acquired by the public, but its nature is such that the right cannot be exercised on account of natural obstacles, a person cannot be held guilty of the crime of obstructing such highway, as it cannot be said that the public are by his acts prevented from using it: State v. Shinkle, 40–131.

A party cannot be prevented by injunction from closing or obstructing a highway that is in such condition that it cannot be used by the general public: Prince v. McCoy, 40–533.

But where a highway was impassable as laid out, by reason of standing timber, and a track was used for the period of prescription, crossing the highway at different points, held, that the existence of such natural obstruction in the highway as laid out would not excuse the obstruction of the traveled track, whether upon the established highway or upon the line used by prescription: State v. McGee, 40–595.

Relief against unlawful obstruction: Equity will afford relief to one specially injured by the erection of an obstruction upon a highway, by directing and requiring its removal and enjoining its continuance. Such obstructions are public nuisances and will be abated and enjoined by a court of equity at the suit of a party agrieved thereby: Houghan v. Harvey, 33–203.

An unlawful obstruction of a public highway is a public nuisance not generally actionable, and a private person has a right of action only when he suffers an injury distinct from the public as a consequence of the wrongful act: Ingram v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 38–669.

A party does not, in an action for mandamus, show himself entitled to have a public highway opened by showing that such highway is located near his lands and that the public travel is upon his lands and not upon the highway. It would not follow that such travel would be upon the highway even if opened: Moon v. Cort, 43–503.

Criminal obstruction: The land owner is not liable to indictment for obstructing the highway by reason of his not removing fences where a newly established highway crosses his land, at least until he has had reasonable notice from the supervisor to do so: State v. Ratliff, 32–189.

Failure to remove an obstruction placed in a highway by another, for instance by a former owner, does not, at least in the absence of notice, constitute the offense of obstructing a highway: State v. Robinson, 52–228.

SEC. 1561. Condition—guide-boards. The road supervisor shall keep the roads in as good condition as the funds at his disposal will permit, and shall place guideboards at cross roads and at the forks of the roads in his district, which shall be made out of good timber, well painted and lettered, and placed upon good substantial hard-wood posts, to be set four feet in, and at least eight feet above, ground. [C.'73, § 994; R., § 907; C.'51, § 577.]

While the public have a right to the full width of the highway they cannot use it so as to injure adjoining property, and if the construction of a bridge at one side of the road would cause injury to the property on that side the supervisor may be required to build it in the center of the highway: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

The judgment of the road supervisor must govern as to the construction, etc., of the highway, and no one has a right to make a material change in his plans without being guilty of defacing the highway within the meaning of the statute (§ 4808): State v. Hunter, 68-447.

The acts of a supervisor in the exercise of his ministerial duties in the construction of bridges, etc., are subject to control by an action to enjoin the improper exercise of his powers: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

Threatened illegal action of a supervisor in opening a highway, removing fences, interfering with water-courses, etc., in the discharge of his official duty, may be restrained by injunction: Bolton v. McShane, 67-207.

SEC. 1562. Canada thistle. The road supervisor, when notified in writing that any Canada thistles or any other variety of thistles are growing upon any lands or lots within his district, vacant or owned by nonresidents, the owner, agent or lessee of which is unknown, shall cause the same to be destroyed, and make return in writing to the board of supervisors of his county, with a bill for his expenses or charges therefor, which in no case shall exceed two dollars per day for such services, which shall be audited and allowed by said board and paid from the county fund, and the amount so paid shall be entered up and levied against the lands or lots on which said thistles have been destroyed, and collected by the county treasurer the same as other taxes, and returned to the county fund. [24 G. A., ch. 45; C. '73, § 995.]

SEC. 1563. Russian thistle. No owner or occupant of any land or lots, or corporation or association of persons owning, occupying or controlling land as right of way, depot grounds or other purposes, or public officer in charge of any street or road, shall allow to grow to maturity thereon the Russian thistle or salt wort (salsoli kali, variety tragus). It shall be the duty of every person or corporation so owning, occupying or controlling lands, lots or other real property, or any road supervisor or other public officer having charge of any street or road, to cut, burn or otherwise entirely destroy such thistle growing on said premises, right of way, road or street, before the same shall bloom or come to maturity; and any person, corporation or public officer neglecting to destroy all such thistles as aforesaid, after receiving notice in writing of their presence, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished accordingly. It shall be the duty of any person knowing of the presence of Russian thistles upon any premises, lands, lots, street, roads or elsewhere, at any time after the first day of July, to give notice in writing to the owner, occupant, or person or corporation in possession or control thereof, and if not destroyed by such owner or occupant or person in possession in proper time to prevent maturity, to give notice in writing immediately to any member of the board of trustees of the township in which the said thistles are growing; or if within a city or town, then to give notice in writing to the mayor, recorder or clerk thereof; who shall within five days after the receipt of said notice cause their total destruction, the costs thereof, together with the costs of serving notice, to be paid out of the county fund upon the certificate of the township trustees or the council, as the case may be, to the board of supervisors; which board shall cause the sum so paid to be levied as a special tax against the premises upon which the thistles are growing, and against the person or corporation owning or occupying the same; which amount shall be collected by the county treasurer as other taxes, and paid into the county fund. Where township trustees have received notice, as aforesaid, of the presence of such thistles upon lands owned by the United States or this state, it shall be their duty to cause their destruction, and the costs thereof, upon proper certificate of the amount, shall be paid out of the county fund. [26 G. A., ch. 78; 25 G. A., ch. 91, §§ 1–3.]

SEC. 1564. Information—bulletin. A bulletin shall be prepared by the professor of agriculture of the agricultural college, briefly describing by words and cuts the Russian thistle, with the best known means of staying its progress and effecting its extermination, which shall be printed by the state printer at public expense, from time to time, in such numbers as the secretary of state and said professor of agriculture may direct to supply the demand. A sum of money sufficient to pay for the cost of printing and making suitable plates for illustrating said bulletin is hereby appropriated from any funds in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated. [25 G. A., ch. 91, § 4.]

SEC. 1565. Distribution. The secretary of state shall furnish to the agricultural college such number of said bulletins as it may desire to circulate, and also to county auditors, on their requisition, such number as may be necessary to supply all township and town or city officers with copies, and a sufficient number to distribute to all farmers desiring the same. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1566. Settlement with supervisor. The road supervisor shall, on the first Monday in November, meet the township trustees, at which time there shall be a settlement of their accounts connected with the road fund, and after payment the trustees may order such distribution of the fund remaining in the hands of the township clerk as may be expedient for road purposes, which shall be paid out as ordered by them. [26 G. A., ch. 43; C.'73, § 996; R., § 909.]

The fund here referred to is the balance of the general fund provided by the trustees under § 1529, and does not include moneys coming into the clerk's hands from the county treasurer as taxes collected by the latter, except so far as such moneys properly belong to the general fund: Henderson v. Simpson, 45–519.

The clerk is the proper party to bring suit on the supervisor's bond for failure to account for taxes: Keller v. Bare, 62–468.

The authority conferred by this section relates to the distribution of the general township fund: Cass County Bank v. Conrad, 81–482.

SEC. 1567. Orders issued. If upon this final settlement there is no money in the treasury, the trustees shall direct the township clerk to issue orders for the amount due them. The orders so issued shall be numbered with that of the district to which they belong, and shall be received in payment of road tax in the district to which they are issued. [C.'73, § 997.]

Such orders are payable in money out of the general township fund. If such fund is not sufficient, the trustees may be compelled to levy a tax for their payment. The provision that they are receivable in payment of highway tax is merely an aditional method of payment, and the supervisors cannot be compelled to secure payment in that way: Tobin v. Township of Emmetsburg, 52–81.

The orders here authorized are not payable out of the general fund. The holder may use them in payment of road taxes or wait until such time as there are funds on hand belonging to the respective districts, with which they may be paid: Bradley v. Love, 76–397.

This section relates to the district fund and if the supervisor has incurred expenses for guide boards and other proper purposes out of such fund he is entitled to an order to be paid therefrom when collected. But he is not entitled to such an order out of the district fund for his per diem under § 1553 as amended: Howeyler v. Greiner, 89–476.

SEC. 1568. Neglect of duty—penalty. A supervisor failing to perform the duties required of him by this chapter shall forfeit and pay, for the use of the road fund of his district, the sum of ten dollars, to be collected by an action by the township clerk in his name. [C.'73, § 998; R., § 900.]

SEC. 1569. Turning to right. Persons on horseback or vehicles meeting each other on the public roads shall give one-half of the same, turning to the right. A failure in this regard shall make the delinquent liable for all damages resulting therefrom, together with a fine not exceeding five dollars, which fine shall be devoted to the repair of the roads in the district where the violation occurred, but no prosecution shall be instituted except on complaint of the person wronged. [C.'73, § 1000; R., § 908.]

A person meeting another is entitled to one-half the full width of the highway, but it does not follow that in all cases where two persons approach each other on the highway with the intent of passing, it is the duty of each to use only the part of it which is on his right of the center, and if either should pass the other on the left of such line he would violate the statute. It is only in the case of meeting that the parties are to turn to the right. Either party has the right to use any portion of the highway not occupied or desired for the use of another: Riepe v. Elting, 89–92.

The general rule seems to be that where the collision occurs between the horse or vehicle of the person on the wrong side of the road and that of the person coming toward him the presumption is that it is caused by the negligence of the person who is on the wrong side, but his presence on that side may be explained and justified. Therefore where two persons on horseback heard a vehicle coming toward them in the darkness and separated one going to the left hand side of the road so far out of the way that under ordinary circumstances there would be ample room for the vehicle to pass but his horse was struck by the shafts of the vehicle and killed, held, that the rider of the horse was not in the wrong in such sense as to defeat recovery for the injury: Ibid.

SEC. 1570. Trimming hedges. Owners of osage orange, willow, or any other hedge fence along the public road, unless the same shall be used as a wind-break for orchards or feed lots, shall keep the same trimmed, by cutting back within five feet of the ground at least once in every two years, and burn or remove the trimmings so cut from the road.

Upon a failure to comply with the foregoing provision, the road supervisor shall immediately serve notice in writing upon the owner of the hedge to trim the same, and if he fails to do so for sixty days thereafter, such supervisor shall cause the same to be done at a cost not exceeding forty cents per rod, which shall be paid for out of the road fund, and make return thereof to the township clerk, who shall, in certifying the lands upon which the road tax has not been paid, include the lands along which the hedge has been trimmed, together with the amount paid therefor, which shall be collected by the county treasurer in the manner other county taxes are collected.

Where the one district system is adopted as provided in this chapter, it shall be the duty of the township trustees to enforce the foregoing provisions. [26 G. A., ch. 48; 25 G. A., ch. 88, §§ 1, 2; 24 G. A., ch. 40.]

SEC. 1571. Steam engines on roads. Whenever any engine driven in whole or in part by steam power is being propelled upon a public road, or is upon the same, the whistle thereof shall not be blown, and those having it in charge shall stop it one hundred yards distant from any person or persons with horses or other stock in or upon the same, and at a greater distance away if they exhibit fear on account thereof, until they shall have passed it, and a competent person shall be kept one hundred yards in advance of such engine to assist in any emergency arising from frightened animals, and to prevent accidents. In crossing any bridge or culvert in the public road, or plank street-crossing in any city or town, four sound strong planks not less than twelve feet long, each one foot wide and two inches thick, shall be used, by placing and keeping continuously two of them under the wheels. A failure to comply with either of the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor, and, in addition, all damages sustained may be recovered in a civil action against the violator, and in no case shall the county be liable for damages occurring to any engine or separator. [25 G. A., ch. 21, §§ 1, 2; 24 G. A., ch. 68, §§ 1–4.]

Sec. 1571

The requirement that a man is to be kept in front of the engine should not be construed to require that he shall always be in advance, and he should render assistance as to approaching teams from whichever direction they may come. The object of the statute is to make safe the passing of teams: State v. Kowolski, 65 N. W., 306.

The duty of keeping the man on the lookout is imperative and its disregard is a violation of the law: Ibid.

The statutory obligation to stop the engine on the approach of a team is applicable to a team approaching from either direction and is not excused by the fact that the steam engine is in such condition that it cannot be stopped without risk of stalling: Ibid.

The failure to do the various acts required by this statute may be conjunctively charged in one indictment: Ibid.

There is no provision for the punishment of the violation of these requirements except on the part of the owner of such engine: State v. Orr, 89-613.

CHAPTER 3.

OF FERRIES AND BRIDGES.

SECTION 1572. Bridges—width. Bridges erected or maintained by the public constitute parts of the road, and must not be less than sixteen feet in width. [C. '73, § 1001; R., § 822.]

Boards of supervisors have power to provide for the erection of bridges only on public highways where the use of the land has been secured in the manner provided by law, and are not authorized to erect bridges over navigable waters unless such power is expressly conferred by statute: Snyder v. Foster, 77-638.

Bridges are a part of the highway: Brown v. Jefferson County, 16-339; and are therefore under the general supervision of the board of supervisors, under § 1482. They can not be compelled by mandamus to build: State v. Morris, 43-192.

As to liability of county for defects in county bridges, etc., see notes to § 422, ¶ 18.

The statutory provision as to the width of bridges is not to be construed to mean that a bridge is not required to be constructed under any circumstances more than sixteen feet in width. If the circumstances require that it shall be of greater width, and it is so constructed, the liability for defects therein will not be limited to sixteen feet but extend to the whole width: Rusch v. Davenport, 6-443.

The act of a board of supervisors in contracting for a bridge of less than the statutory width, though erroneous, is not void, and such error will not defeat a recovery by the other parties to the contract in an action thereon: Mallory v. Montgomery County, 48-681.

Bridges in a public highway ought to be broad enough to permit all farm machinery to be drawn over them, and for the passage of all vehicles and machinery in use which are drawn upon the public highways: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

The trustees have no authority to fix the width of a bridge at less than sixteen feet. Gould v. Schermer, 70 N. W., 697.

Whether the use of a bridge by one who causes a steam engine and heavy machinery to pass over it is such negligence or improper use as to prevent a recovery by him for injury done due to the breaking down of the bridge is a question for the jury. Yordy v. Marshall County, 86-340.

SEC. 1573. Fast driving. Any person riding, except on bicycles, or driving, faster than a walk, across any bridge maintained at the public charge, shall be subject to pay the following penalties: When the bridge is twenty-five feet in length and does not exceed one hundred, the sum of one dollar for each offense; when over one hundred and not exceeding two hundred feet, the sum of three dollars; when over two hundred and not exceeding three hundred feet, the sum of five dollars; and the further additional sum of one dollar for each offense for every hundred feet in length in excess of three hundred, to be recovered by civil action in the name of and for the county in which the bridge is situated. If the bridge is situated in more than one county, the action is maintainable in or by either. [C. '73, § 1002; R., § 823.]

SEC. 1574. Toll bridges—how established. The board of supervisors may grant licenses for the erection of toll bridges across any water courses or other obstruction which justifies the establishment thereof, and which will require an expense too large for the county to bear. In granting such licenses, preference shall be given to the owner of the land on which the bridge is proposed to be located, if he applies for the privilege and is, in other respects, a competent person to erect the same. [C. '73, § 1003; R., § 1214; C. '51, § 726.]

If a person is given authority or license from the county to erect a toll-bridge, his failure to compensate the land owner for damages sustained on account of the property taken for the purpose of such erection would not warrant the land owner in tearing down and removing the bridge so erected. The remedy to the land owner would be complete and ample by legal proceedings: Beebe v. Stutsman, 5-271.

SEC. 1575. License—right of way. When any corporation or individual shall obtain from the board of supervisors license for the construction of a toll bridge across any of the streams of this state, such corporation or individual may take and appropriate so much private property as shall be necessary for a right of way therefor and all approaches thereto, in such width as such corporation or individual may desire, not exceeding sixty feet. [C.'73, § 1004.]

SEC. 1576. Damages assessed. If the owner of property over which such way extends shall refuse to grant the same, and the damages therefor cannot be settled by agreement, all damages which the owner, or any person having an interest in or improvement upon the property to be taken, will sustain by reason of the appropriation thereof shall be assessed and the right of way taken on the application of either party, under the provisions of this code for taking private property for works of internal improvement. [C.'73, § 1005.]

SEC. 1577. Between different counties or states. Where the extremities of the bridge lie in different counties, a license must be procured from each, and if different rates of toll are fixed by the different boards of supervisors, each has power to fix the rates of travel which is going from its own county. A similar principle shall be observed where only one of the extremities of the bridge is within this state. [C.'73, § 1006; R., § 1216; C.'51, § 728.]

SEC. 1578. Limitation of license—tolls. Such licenses may be granted to continue for any period, not exceeding twenty-five years, and the rate of toll may be fixed in the first instance in such a manner as to be inalterable within any stipulated period, not exceeding ten years; after that time, it shall be under the control of the board of supervisors. [C.'73, § 1007; R., § 1217; C.'51, § 729.]

SEC. 1579. Exclusive privilege. The board of supervisors may stipulate in the license that no other bridge or ferry shall be permitted across the same stream or obstruction within any distance not exceeding two miles thereof, and for a period not exceeding ten years. Any violation of the terms of such stipulation is a nuisance, and the person causing it is guilty of a misdemeanor. [C.'73, § 1008; R., § 1218; C.'51, § 730.]

SEC. 1580. Failure of duty. When, upon ten days' notice to the person licensed, it is made to appear to the board of supervisors that he fails in any material manner to perform his duties according to law, it may revoke his license. [C.'73, § 1009; R., § 1212; C.'51, § 724.]

SEC. 1581. Day or night—rate of toll. Toll bridges must be regulated so as to allow persons to pass at all hours of the night or day, but the board of supervisors, in its discretion, in fixing the rates of toll, may permit a greater charge to be made during certain hours of the night. [C.'73, § 1010; R., § 1222; C.'51, § 734.]

SEC. 1582. Railway bridges across boundary rivers. Any railway or bridge company incorporated under the laws of the state, or of Wisconsin, Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas or South Dakota, may construct a railway bridge across the Mississippi, Missouri or Big Sioux river, connecting with the eastern or western terminus, as the case may be, of any railway terminating on the Iowa bank of either of said rivers, at such place as shall be designated therefor by the board of supervisors of the county wherein such terminus is made, and extending toward a point on the opposite bank that may be selected by such company. [C.'73, § 1031.]

SEC. 1583. Plan to be approved. No bridge shall be built under the provisions of the preceding section, until the plan thereof has been submitted to and approved by the board of supervisors of the county in which the bridge is to be partly located. [C.'73, § 1032.]

SEC. 1584. For teams and passengers—toll. Any such company may, with the consent of the board of supervisors, construct such bridge with suitable roadways and footways for teams and foot passengers, and charge such rates of toll therefor as may be approved by said board. [C. '73, § 1033.]

SEC. 1585. Railway ferry. Any such company may establish a ferry across any of said rivers at or near the terminus of its road, for the sole purpose of crossing the freight and passengers of such roads until the bridge is ready for use. [C. '73, § 1034.]

SEC. 1586. Obstruction of navigation. No bridge erected under the provisions of this chapter shall be so located or constructed as to unnecessarily impede, injure or obstruct the navigation of said rivers. [C.'73, § 1035.]

SEC. 1587. Bonds and stock. Any such company may issue its bonds or obligations for an amount not exceeding the cost of such bridge, and of its roads in the state, and may secure the payment thereof by a mortgage on the same, and issue certificates of common and preferred stock; the preferred stock to be only on condition that the holders of the common stock give their written consent thereto. [C.'73, § 1036.]

SEC. 1588. Resident director—process. Any company acting under the provisions of this chapter shall elect at least one director who shall be a citizen of and reside in this state, and such company shall be liable to be sued in any court of competent jurisdiction, and service of original notice on said resident director shall be sufficient notice to the company of the pendency of the action. [C. '73, § 1037.]

SEC. 1589. Ferries—license. The board of supervisors may grant such ferry licenses as may be needed within its county, for a period not exceeding ten years, and prescribe the rates of ferriage, as well as the hours of the day or night during which the ferry must be attended, both of which may, from time to time, be changed at the discretion of the board. [C.'73, §§ 1011–12; R., §§ 1200–1; C. '51, §§ 712, 713.]

The rights of a riparian owner, at common law and under the statute, in relation to a ferry franchise, discussed; and held that a stranger has no right to land ferry-boats upon the soil of such owner, nor can he use a highway laid out across the land of such owner, without compensation to him: Prosser v. Wapello County, 18-327; Prosser v. Davis, 18-367.

A ferry franchise is not lost by the death of the party to whom it is granted, but passes to his personal representatives: Lippencott v. Allander, 27-460.

The revocation of a ferry license by a board of supervisors may be appealed from: Lippencott v. Allander, 25-445.

SEC. 1590. Exclusive privilege. In granting a ferry license, the board of supervisors may make the privilege granted exclusive for a distance not exceeding one mile in either direction from it. After twenty days' notice to the person who has obtained such privilege, if it is made to appear to the board that the public good requires other ferries, a new license may issue therefor. The notice required must be served personally upon the owner, or on the person in charge of the ferry boat. [C.'73, § 1013; R., § 1202; C.'51, § 714.]

Grants of exclusive ferry licenses, even over navigable streams as the Mississippi river are upheld on grounds of public necessity or advantage: Burlington, etc., Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48-133; United States ex rel. v. Fanning, Mor., 348.

The grant of a ferry franchise necessarily implies the right to exclusive privileges within the prescribed limits: Phillips v. Bloomington, 1 G. Gr., 498.

If a ferry license does not purport to confer an exclusive privilege, an exclusive right cannot be inferred: McEwen v. Taylor, 4 G. Gr., 532.

The use of a navigable river for a public highway is of paramount importance and will prevail over a privilege granted for a ferry. If the mode of operating the ferry is such as to encroach upon the free navigation of the stream, the owner of the ferry must yield to such free navigation, although the owner of a boat navigating the stream would be liable for any wilful injury done to the ferry: Steamboat Globe v. Kurtz, 4 G. Gr., 433.

A person not possessing a franchise may, within the limits of an exclusive franchise granted to the owner of the ferry, transport his own teams and conveyances, for instance, where he is a carrier of the United States mails, but he cannot make such private individual right the medium or cover for carrying passengers whose transportation legally belongs to the owner of the franchise: Weld v. Chapman, 2-524.

SEC. 1591. Preference. In granting a ferry license, preference must be given to the keeper of a previous ferry at the same point, and, if a new one, to the owner of the land; but if there is none such, or if, after giving the same notice as is required by the last section, he fails to make application therefor, or if, in the opinion of the board, he is an improper person to receive the same, it may be conferred on any other proper applicant. [C.'73, § 1014; R., § 1203; C.'51, § 715.]

SEC. 1592. Between different counties. Where the opposite shores of a stream are in different counties, a license from either is sufficient, and the board of supervisors first exercising jurisdiction by granting a license will retain it during the term of such license. [C.'73, § 1015; R., § 1204; C.'51, § 716.]

SEC. 1593. Between different states. Where but one shore of the river is within this state, the board of supervisors possesses the same power, so far as it is concerned, as though the river lay wholly within this state. [C.'73, § 1016; R., § 1205; C.'51, § 717.]

In such case the grant of a franchise gives no rights beyond the limits of the state: Weld v. Chapman, 2–524; Burlington, etc., Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48–133.

SEC. 1594. Bond. The board of supervisors, upon being satisfied that the requirements of this chapter have been complied with, and that a ferry is needed at such place, and that the applicant is a suitable person to keep it, must grant the license; which, however, shall not issue until the applicant files a bond, with sureties to be approved by the board or auditor, in a penalty not less than one hundred dollars, with the condition that he will keep the ferry in proper condition for use, and attend the same at all times fixed by the board for running it; that he will neither demand nor take any illegal tolls; and that he will perform all other duties which are or may be enjoined on him by law, which shall be filed in the county auditor's office. [C.'73, § 1017; R., § 1207; C.'51, § 719.]

SEC. 1595. Public business—mail. Every ferryman must transport the public expresses of the United States and of this state, and the United States mail, at all hours. [C.'73, § 1018; R., § 1209; C.'51, § 721.]

A public ferryman is a common carrier and charged with the duties and liabilities of such: Slimmer v. Merry, 23–90.

SEC. 1596. License recorded. All licenses for ferries and toll bridges must be entered upon the records of the board of supervisors, and shall contain the rates of toll allowed. [C.'73, § 1019; R., § 1208; C.'51, § 720.]

SEC. 1597. Posting rates. The rates of toll must be conspicuously posted up at each extremity of the bridge, or, if a ferry, on the boat, door of the ferry house, or some other conspicuous place near the ferry. [C.'73, § 1020; R., §§ 1210, 1220; C.'51, §§ 722, 732.]

SEC. 1598. Penalty. The failure to have such list posted up as above provided will justify any person in refusing the payment of tolls, and where such failure is habitual, the proprietor of such bridge or ferry shall be liable to pay a penalty of twenty-five dollars, to be recovered in the name of the county against him, or against him and the sureties on his bond; which amount, when recovered, shall be paid into the county treasury and credited to the school fund. [C.'73, § 1021; R., §§ 1211, 1220; C.'51, §§ 723, 732.]

SEC. 1599. Notice of application. Before a license can be granted for either a bridge or ferry, notice thereof must be posted up in at least three public places on each side of the river, if both are within the state, and in the township and neighborhood in which the proposed bridge or ferry is to be erected or kept, at least twenty days prior to the making of such application. [C.'73, § 1022; R., §§ 1206, 1219; C.'51, §§ 718, 731.]

SEC. 1600. Penalty for taking illegal toll. The taking of illegal toll by any licensee shall subject the offender to a penalty of twenty-five dollars for every such offense, to be recovered by action on his bond, or against him individually, by the person who paid the illegal toll, for his own benefit; or he may bring an action in the name of the county, in which case the proceeds shall go to the county treasury. [C.'73, § 1023; R., § 1236; C.'51, § 748.]

SEC. 1601. Forfeiture. A failure in other respects to substantially comply with the terms fixed by the board shall work a forfeiture of any of the licenses herein authorized, and shall subject the party guilty of such failure to damages for all injury resulting therefrom, for which he shall be liable on his bond. [C.'73, § 1024; R., § 1237; C.'51, § 749.]

SEC. 1602. Refusal to pay tolls—penalty. Any person who refuses to pay the regular tolls established and posted up in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, or who shall run through or pass around the toll gates with a view of avoiding their payment, shall forfeit the sum of five dollars for every offense, which, together with costs, may be recovered by the person entitled to such toll; but nothing herein contained shall prevent a person from fording a stream across which a toll bridge or ferry has been constructed. [C.'73, § 1025; R., § 1238; C.'51, § 750.]

SEC. 1603. Rules established. The proprietor of any bridge or ferry authorized by this chapter may establish reasonable rules for the regulation of passengers, travelers, teams and freight passing or traveling thereon. [C.'73, § 1026; R., § 1239; C.'51, § 751.]

SEC. 1604. Franchise sold. Any of the franchises contemplated in this chapter are subject to execution, and may be sold as personal property, and be subject to the same rights and consequences, except that the purchaser may take immediate possession of the property, and the sale thereof shall carry with it all the material, implements, rights of way and works of whatever kind necessary for or ordinarily used in the exercise of such franchise. [C.'73, §§ 1027–8; R., §§ 1240–1; C.'51, §§ 752–3.]

SEC. 1605. Free ferry. Nothing in this chapter contained shall be so construed as to prevent any company, person, city, town or village from establishing a free ferry at any point where a license to keep a ferry has been granted, but when such free ferry is established, such company, person, city, town or village shall pay a reasonable compensation to the persons owning the same for all boats, ropes and other material, if the same be fit for use; and when a free ferry is established at a point at or near where a license has been granted to an individual, such individual shall be exonerated from any further obligation to maintain it. Bond and security shall be given in like manner by the person or company establishing the free ferry as required in this chapter. [C.'73, § 1029; R., § 1245; C.'51, § 757.]

SEC. 1606. Mill owners. Nothing in this chapter shall be so construed as to prevent owners of mills from crossing themselves or customers free of charge. [C.'73, § 1030; R., § 1246; C.'51, § 758.]

TITLE IX.

OF CORPORATIONS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF CORPORATIONS FOR PECUNIARY PROFIT.

SECTION 1607. Who may incorporate. Any number of persons may become incorporated for the transaction of any lawful business, but such incorporation confers no power or privilege not possessed by natural persons, except as hereinafter provided. [22 G. A., ch. 86, § 2; C. '73, § 1058; R., § 1150; C. '51, § 673.]

Under this section any number of people may become incorporated for the transaction of any legal business, including business as a mutual insurance company: Corey v. Sherman, 60 N. W., 232.

SEC. 1608. Single person. Except as otherwise provided by law, a single person may incorporate under the provisions of this chapter, thereby entitling himself to all the privileges and immunities provided herein, but if he adopts the name of an individual or individuals as that of the corporation, he must add thereto the word "incorporated." [C. '73, § 1088; R., § 1179; C. '51, § 702.]

SEC. 1609. Powers. Among the powers of such corporations are the following:

1. To have perpetual succession;
2. To sue and be sued by its corporate name;
3. To have a common seal, which it may alter at pleasure;
4. To render the interests of the stockholders transferable;
5. To exempt the private property of its members from liability for corporate debts, except as otherwise declared;
6. To make contracts, acquire and transfer property,—possessing the same powers in such respects as natural persons;
7. To establish by-laws, and make all rules and regulations necessary for the management of its affairs. [C. '73, § 1059; R., § 1151; C. '51, § 674.]

Powers: A corporation is presumed to be clothed with the usual powers necessary and proper to enable it as such to carry out the purposes of its existence: Home Ins. Co. v. Northwestern Packet Co., 32–223.

Therefore, held, that an insurance company had authority to acquire, by assignment, the claims of a shipper of goods insured by it against the common carrier in whose hands they were destroyed: Ibid.

Corporations are invested with such powers only as are expressly conferred upon them and such other powers as are necessary to carry out those powers expressly granted: Teachout v. Des Moines Broad Gauge St. R. Co., 75–722.

For the purpose of effecting the objects of a corporation its powers are as broad and comprehensive as those of an individual, unless the exercise of the asserted power is expressly prohibited: Thompson v. Lambert, 44–239.

Where an agricultural society was organized for the proper objects of such a corporation, the power to borrow money and execute notes and mortgages not being expressly assumed or prohibited, held, that it had by implication authority to exercise such powers as to indebtedness created for the necessary and proper purposes of carrying out the objects of the corporation: Ibid.

The simple act of going surety for another is out of the line of the prosecution of any business: Lucas v. White Line Transfer Co., 70–541.

For a proper purpose a corporation has power to borrow money by executing notes and mortgages: Thompson v. Lambert, 44–239.

The power to mortgage the property of the corporation is incident to the ordinary powers of such corporation: Dunham v. Isett, 15–284.

And where the power to borrow money may necessarily be implied, it may be exercised by issuance of negotiable bonds: Des Moines Gas Co. v. West, 50–16.

Under a charter by which a corporation had authority to purchase, etc., "any real estate or other property," etc., held, that it was not beyond its power to purchase its own stock: Iowa Lumber Co. v. Foster, 49-25.

A corporation having the general powers provided for in this section has the right to deal in, acquire and possess shares of stock in another corporation: Calumet Paper Co. v. Stotts Investment Co., 64 N. W., 782.

Where the articles of incorporation of a college did not expressly give it power to raise and control funds by taking endowment notes, held, by a divided court, that it had the power to accept and enforce payment of such notes: Simpson Centenary College v. Bryan, 50-293.

Unless restrained by statute, a corporation may sell or dispose of its property, and one corporation may purchase property from another corporation, both possessing in this respect the same power as individuals. It will not, therefore, constitute fraud upon creditors that the property of the corporation is conveyed by it to another corporation in which its stockholders own stock: Warfield v. Marshall County Canning Co., 72-666.

A stockholder in a corporation may maintain an action to restrain the corporation from acts in excess of its corporate power: Teachout v. Des Moines Broad Guage St. R. Co., 75-722.

Corporations of all kinds may be bound by contracts not under seal. They may make a binding contract in writing not under seal, and may also be held liable under verbal contracts. So, also, they may ratify and adopt as their own a contract made by an officer out of the usual scope of his duties: Merrick v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 11-74.

The recital as to the making of a contract, not entered on the record at the time it was originally written, by the secretary, but at a subsequent meeting directed to be entered on the record, will not be receivable as against the other party to such contract: Colfax Hotel Co. v. Lyon, 69-683.

Where a party with the knowledge and consent of the directors of a corporation borrowed money on his individual note for the use of the corporation, which money was used by it in paying its debts, held, that the corporation was bound to repay to such party the money so borrowed by him: Humphrey v. Patrons, etc., Ass'n, 50-607.

Corporations may ratify contracts made without their authority and thus become bound thereby like natural persons. Thus an acceptance of payment for services rendered under a contract and in accordance with its terms may amount to a ratification of such contract: Athearn v. Independent Dist., 33-105.

Where a corporation became the successor to an individual in the manufacture and sale of buggies, held, that it had authority to accept from the individual whom it succeeded an order accepted by him upon particular terms: Cook Mfg. Co. v. Randall, 62-244.

Held, that a corporation organized for the manufacture and sale of musical instruments, and not having the power to engage in the business of loaning money, might still take from its agent, in payment of an indebtedness due from him, the note of a third party belonging to him: Western Organ Co. v. Reddish, 51-55.

Corporations can make contracts and transfer property, possessing the same powers in such respects as private individuals. A corporation has therefore the right to prefer one creditor to another, and the fact that the preference is exercised in favor of a shareholder or director is immaterial, although the shareholder or director may have voted for the proposition, and the security given was to secure an indebtedness to himself: Warfield v. Marshall County Canning Co., 72-636.

Power as to real property: The power of a railway corporation to whom public lands are granted to hold such lands is a question between the corporation and the government, and cannot be raised as against the corporation by a third party in an action by the company for possession of the lands so granted: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lewis, 53-101.

The grant, by the law under which a corporation is organized, of the power to make contracts gives it the power to make a sale of its real property and convey the same: Buell v. Buckingham, 16-284.

A limitation upon the power to sell operates also as a limitation on the power to convey: Middleton Savings Bank v. Dubuque, 15-394.

Exemption of property of members from liability for debts: The corporation may exempt the private property of its members from liability for corporate debts: Spense v. Iowa Valley Const. Co., 36-407; Larson v. Dayton, 52-597.

The only case in which the private property of members becomes liable for corporate debts is that specified in the statute relating to failure to take proper steps in organizing (§ 1616): First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43-424, 436.

A stockholder can be made liable to the creditors of a corporation only to the extent of his unpaid subscription to the capital stock: Warfield v. Marshall County Canning Co., 72-666.

Where a statute exempted from liability for corporate debts stockholders in corporations organized under the general incorporation laws, held, that in order that the stockholders of the corporation should be exempt from liability it must appear that the corporation was organized under such general statute: Kaiser v. Lawrence Savings Bank, 56-104.

A provision in articles of a mutual insurance company relieving members from liability for corporation debts is not applicable with reference to their liability for assessments, the assessments in such case not being a debt of the corporation but a debt of the individual members: Montgomery County Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Milner, 90-685.

Where a corporation is stockholder in another corporation, the stockholders of the former are not thereby individually stockholders in the latter, and cannot be held liable as such: Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49-317.

The power to sue and be sued: A corporation must sue and be sued in its corporate name: Chicago, D. & M. R. Co. v. Keisel, 43–39.

Corporate name: A variance from the true style of a corporation will not have the effect to defeat its contract if it appears that the corporation was intended to be bound by and described in the instrument: Athearn v. Independent Dist., 33–105.

Where a note was made payable to the order of "The Equitable Life Insurance Company of Iowa at its office," and was dated at the "Office of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, Des Moines, Iowa," held, that although the two names were not identical, yet it was reasonably apparent that they referred to the same corporation: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Gleason, 56–47.

Where the name of the corporation consists of a number of words, the omission, alteration or transposition of any of the words in the name used, if the words in the name used are synonymous with the true name of the corporation, is not a misnomer: Martin v. Central Iowa R. Co., 59–411.

The use of the word "railroad" instead of "railway" in naming a corporation in an indictment for embezzling the funds of such corporation, held not to be material: State v. Goode, 68–593.

A railroad company cannot, in a legal proceeding, be properly designated by the initial letters of the words constituting its name, even though it may be possible to show that it is popularly known by its initial letters: Accola v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70–185.

Change of name: Where a note given in aid of a corporation operating a college provided that upon the payment of a proportion of the note a scholarship in the college should be issued, and afterward the corporate name of the institution was changed, held, that the new corporation succeeding to the rights of the old might sue upon such note, and the maker would be entitled to a scholarship therein according to the same terms: Trustees of Northwestern College v. Schwagler, 37–577.

The corporate name is that which is adopted in the articles of incorporation. If the name is changed it must be done by changing the articles, and the best evidence as to the contents of the articles is the articles themselves; therefore, held, that parol evidence of a change of name was not sufficient: Chicago, D. & M. R. Co. v. Keisel, 43–39.

By-laws: One who has notice of a by-law, as for instance an officer of the corporation, is bound thereby: Des Moines Nat. Bank v. Warren County Bank, 66 N. W., 154.

SEC. 1610. Articles adopted and recorded. Before commencing any business except their own organization, they must adopt articles of incorporation, which must be signed and acknowledged by the incorporators, recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county where the principal place of business is to be, in a book kept therefor, and the recorder must, within five days thereafter, indorse thereon the time when the same were filed, and the book and page where the record will be found. Said articles thus indorsed shall then be forwarded to the secretary of state, and be by him recorded in a book kept for that purpose. Such corporation shall pay to the secretary of state, before a certificate of incorporation is issued, a fee of twenty-five dollars, and, for all authorized stock in excess of ten thousand dollars, an additional fee of one dollar per thousand. Should any corporation thereafter increase its capital stock, it shall pay a fee to the secretary of state of one dollar for each one thousand dollars of such increase, but in no event shall a fee in excess of three hundred and fifty dollars be charged under the provisions of this section. The recording fee shall be paid in all cases. Farmers' mutual co-operative creamery associations shall be exempt from the payment of the incorporation fee provided herein. [26 G. A., ch. 98; 17 G. A., ch. 23; C. '73, § 1060; R., § 1152; C. '51, § 675.]

A failure to file the articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state does not, under § 1616, render the stockholders individually liable (the section being discussed in the opinions of a divided court): First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43–424; followed in Eisfeld v. Kenworth, 50–389.

Where a corporation failed to record its articles of incorporation as required by statute, and the directors borrowed money in excess of the capital stock, giving their note for the same, which, when the company became insolvent, they paid, in an action by the directors against the other shareholders for an accounting and for contribution of their pro rata share of the debt paid by plaintiffs, held, that, as between themselves, their contractual relation was to be determined by what they had adopted as their agreement, and therefore, though the articles of incorporation were unrecorded, its provisions were binding upon them; and where one of the articles limited the amount of indebtedness to sixty-five per cent. of the capital stock, the directors who violated this agreement were in no position to demand contribution from the shareholders: Heard v. Owen, 79–23.

One of the incorporators cannot rely by way of defense in an action against him for the assessment upon his stock, that the articles were not recorded in the office of the secretary of state: State Bank Building Co. v. Peirce, 92–668.

As to change of articles see § 1615 and notes.

SEC. 1611. Limit of indebtedness. Such articles must fix the highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which the corporation is at any one time to be subject, which in no case, except risks of insurance companies, and liabilities of banks not in excess of their available assets, not including their capital, shall exceed two-thirds of its capital stock. But the provisions of this section shall not apply to the bonds or other railway or street railway securities, issued or guaranteed by railway or street railway companies of the state, in aid of the location, construction and equipment of railways or street railways, to an amount not exceeding sixteen thousand dollars per mile of single track, standard gauge, or eight thousand dollars per mile of single track, narrow gauge, lines of road for each mile of railway or street railway actually constructed and equipped. Nor shall the provisions of this section apply to the debentures or bonds of any company incorporated under the provisions of this chapter, the payment of which shall be secured by an actual transfer of real estate securities for the benefit and protection of purchasers thereof; such securities to be at least equal in amount to the par value of such bonds or debentures, and to be first liens upon unincumbered real estate worth at least twice the amount loaned thereon. [21 G. A., ch. 57; 20 G. A., ch. 22; C. '73, § 1061; R., § 1153; C.'51, § 676.]

The incurring of liabilities greater than herein provided does not render the stockholders individually liable: Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49–317.

A private corporation is liable, at least to the extent of the consideration received, for indebtedness contracted in excess of the limit imposed by the articles of incorporation. In such case the corporation is estopped from setting up the limit: Humphrey v. Patrons', etc., Ass'n, 50–607.

The debt of a corporation beyond the limits of its indebtedness is not invalid even though held by the director of the corporation. The director in this respect occupies no different position from that of any other creditor, if the debt was contracted in good faith: Garrett v. Burlington Plow Co., 70–697; Warfield v. Marshall County Canning Co., 72–666.

The theory of this section seems to be that if bonds of the corporation are secured upon real estate worth at least twice the amount loaned thereon, they will be paid out of this security, and thus there will be left for the benefit of other creditors the security derived from the capital stock of the corporation. First Nat. Bank v. Sioux City Terminal R. & W. Co., 69 Fed., 441.

Failure to make in the articles a statement of the highest amount of indebtedness to which the corporation may be subjected is such a failure to comply with the requisites in relation to the organization of the company as to render the stockholders liable under § 1616; Heuer v. Carmichael, 82–288.

It is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section that the articles provide the limit of indebtedness, except as shall be determined by a majority of the stockholders at a meeting: Thornton v. Balcom, 85–198.

SEC. 1612. Place of business—list of officers. If the corporation transacts business in this state, the articles shall fix its principal place of business, which must be in this state, and in charge of an agent of the corporation, at which place it shall keep its stock and transfer books and hold its meetings. The corporation shall annually, in January, file with the secretary of state a list of its officers and directors, and any change in the location of its place of business made by a vote of the stockholders.

SEC. 1613. Notice published—what to contain. A notice must be published for four weeks in succession in some newspaper as convenient as practicable to the principal place of business, which must contain:

1. The name of the corporation and its principal place of business;
2. The general nature of the business to be transacted;
3. The amount of capital stock authorized, and the times and conditions on which it is to be paid in;
4. The time of the commencement and termination of the corporation;
5. By what officers or persons its affairs are to be conducted, and the times when and manner in which they will be elected;
6. The highest amount of indebtedness to which it is at any time to subject itself;
7. Whether private property is to be exempt from corporate debts.

Proof of such publication, by affidavit of the publisher of the newspaper in which it is made, shall be filed with the secretary of state, and shall be evidence of the fact. [C.'73, §§ 1062–3; R., §§ 1154–5; C. '51, §§ 677–8.]

It seems that acts of a corporation will not be valid as corporate acts unless publication of notice of the organization is made as required by law: Eisfeld v. Kenworth, 50–389.

A failure to publish the statutory notice of incorporation does not invalidate indebtedness created within the statutory limits, but only renders the stockholders individually liable: First Nat. Bank v. Sioux City Terminal R. & W. Co., 69 Fed., 441.

Failure to state in the published notice the highest amount of indebtedness for which the corporation may be rendered liable is such a failure to comply with the law in regard to publicity as to render the stockholders liable under the provisions of § 1616: Heuer v. Carmichael, 82–288.

Where a notice specified that the indebtedness of the corporation should not exceed a certain sum, while the articles provided that it should not exceed that sum except as authorized by a vote of the majority of the stockholders at a meeting, held, that such notice was sufficient: Thornton v. Balcom, 85–198.

A statement that the limit of the company's indebtedness shall be "two-thirds of the amount of the capital stock prescribed" is a sufficient statement of the highest amount of indebtedness to which the corporation is at any time to subject itself: Park v. Zwart, 92–37.

The publication of the articles themselves is a sufficient compliance with this section if the articles contain all the required statements: Ibid.

Where the articles of incorporation did not state the principal place of business, or the time of commencement of business, held, that the publication of such articles was not sufficient notice, and that there was such failure to comply with this section as to render the stockholders individually liable under § 1616: Clegg v. Grange Co., 61–121.

As to contracts in excess of the limit of indebtedness, see notes to § 1611.

SEC. 1614. May begin business. The corporation may commence business as soon as the certificate is issued by the secretary of state, and its acts shall be valid if the publication in a newspaper is made within three months from the date of such certificate. [17 G. A., ch. 23; C. '73, § 1064; R., § 1156; C. '51, § 679.]

Failure to file articles in the office of secretary of state within three months does not render the acts of the corporation void, nor deprive it of its franchises without proceedings being instituted for that purpose: First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43–424.

A corporation may lawfully commence business on compliance with the terms of this section. Its authority to do so is not made dependent upon all of its stock being subscribed: Johnson v. Kessler, 76–411.

The rights of parties are not made dependent upon the publication of notice required upon the filing of the articles. If the publication is inserted in a newspaper within three months, it seems that it ought not to be held a failure to substantially comply with the statute, though the last publication is not made within that time: Thornton v. Balcom, 85–198.

SEC. 1615. Change of articles. Changes in any of the provisions of the articles may be made at any annual meeting of the stockholders or special meeting called for that purpose, and they shall be valid only when recorded, approved, and published as the original articles are required to be. Such changes, however, need only be signed and acknowledged by such officers of the corporation as may be designated to perform such act by the stockholders. [22 G. A., ch. 88; C. '73, § 1065; R., § 1157; C. '51, § 680.]

A change in the articles made in the manner therein provided, and properly recorded and published, is as binding upon stockholders who do not as upon those who do consent thereto: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. White, 5–409.

If a corporation procures an alteration to be made in its charter by which a new and different business is superadded to that originally contemplated, such of the stockholders as do not assent to the alteration will be absolved from liability on their subscriptions to the capital stock: Ibid.

But where a change in the charter merely related to the time of payment of installments of subscriptions to stock, held, that by the subscription under the charter the subscriber assented to the change afterward made in pursuance of such provisions: Ibid.

Where the corporation has assumed to make a contract authorized by its amended articles, and has received the consideration therefor, it cannot escape liability upon the ground that such amended articles had not been recorded: Humphrey v. Patron's, etc., Ass'n, 50–607.

Articles of incorporation of a company organized for pecuniary profit can be amended only by an instrument signed and acknowledged by the person or persons duly authorized so to do and recorded: Day v. Mill Owners' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 75–694.

A material or radical change in the objects of a corporation will release the subscriber of stock from liability thereon, but immaterial changes which cannot possibly prejudice such subscriber will not affect him: Union Ag'l, etc., Ass'n v. Neill, 31–95.

An amendment to a charter not materially changing the original purposes of the corporation, held not sufficient to excuse stockholder from liability for stock subscribed: Peoria & R. I. R. Co. v. Preston, 35-115.

Amendments to the articles of incorporation of a college in accordance with provisions made therein for amendment, affecting the method in which trustees were to be appointed, but not the general purposes and objects of the corporation, held not sufficient to release the maker of a scholarship note from his liability thereon: Washington College v. Duke, 14-14.

SEC. 1616. Individual property liable. A failure to substantially comply with the foregoing requirements in relation to organization and publicity shall render the individual property of the stockholders liable for the corporate debts; but corporators and stockholders in railway and street railway companies shall be liable only for the amount of stock held by them therein. [C.'73, § 1068; R., §§ 1166, 1338; C.'51, § 689.]

Under this section, held, that a failure to file the articles did not alone render the stockholders individually liable: First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43-424; Eisfeld v. Kenworth, 50-389; Stokes v. Findlay, 4 McCrary, 205.

Failure to state in the articles and in the published notice the highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which a corporation may be subjected will render the stockholders liable to a creditor under the provisions of this section: Heuer v. Carmichael, 82-288.

In the clause "in relation to organization and publicity," the word "and" should be construed as "or." A failure in either respect will render the stockholders individually liable: Eisfeld v. Kenworth, 50-389.

So held in case of a failure to publish any notice whatever: Ibid.; Marshall v. Harris, 55-182.

Failure to publish the statutory notice renders stockholders individually liable, but does not invalidate indebtedness created: First Nat. Bank v. Sioux City Terminal R. & W. Co., 69 Fed., 441.

The statement of the articles duly published that the indebtedness of the corporation shall not exceed "two-thirds of the amount of capital stock prescribed" is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of § 1613 to relieve the stockholder from liability under the provisions of this section: Park v. Zwart, 92-37.

The fact that a creditor has sought relief against the corporation on his claim will not estop him from recovering against the stockholders under the provisions of this section. These provisions are not limited to cases where the corporation has not a legal existence as such. After recovering a judgment against the corporation the creditor may pursue his remedy as against the stockholders: Heuer v. Carmichael, 82-288.

A provision in the articles as to the indebtedness for which the corporation may be made liable excepting "by a majority vote of the stockholders present" at a meeting is a sufficient statement under § 1611, and will not render the stockholders liable under this section: Thornton v. Balcom, 85-198.

Failure to secure subscriptions for stock to the full amount authorized by the articles will not render the stockholders liable where there is no requirement in the articles that all the stock shall be subscribed before the company commences business, nor that any definite sum shall be subscribed: Ibid.

But such a condition is precedent to the right to commence business and incur debts, unless it is provided in the articles that the corporation may do so when a specified amount of stock is subscribed. The fact that the stock is not all subscribed does not constitute a failure to comply substantially with the requirements in relation to organization and publicity: Sweney v. Talcott, 85-103.

Where the articles of incorporation did not state the principal place of business or the time of commencement of business, held, that the publication of such articles was not sufficient notice, and that there was such failure to comply with the requirements as to notice as to render the stockholders individually liable: Clegg v. Grange Co., 61-121.

Failure to comply with the statutory requirements as to posting a copy of the by-laws and a statement of the amount of capital stock subscribed, etc., will not render the stockholders liable: Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49-317; McKellar v. Stout, 14-359.

A failure to properly keep the books, as required by statute, does not render the stockholders individually liable. If the books are fraudulently kept, those guilty of participation in the fraud may be held liable: Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49-317.

Nor does the incurring of liabilities greater than allowed by statute render the stockholders individually liable: Ibid.

While there may be irregularities or omissions to comply with provisions merely directory, which would be sufficient to sustain an action brought to declare a forfeiture, but are insufficient to sustain an action to enforce individual liability of a stockholder, yet if the attempt to incorporate is under a general law, and there is a material non-compliance therewith, then there is such want of incorporation that exemption from individual liability is not secured: Kaiser v. Lawrence Savings Bank, 56-104.

In case of suit against individuals claiming exemption from liability on the ground of their having become a corporation under a general statute, a stricter measure of compliance with the statutory requirements must be shown than in case the plea of nul tiel corporation is set up in a suit between the corporation and the stockholder or other individual, on liability contracted: Ibid.

Where a contract is made with an unincorporated association, or a part of the members thereof, the other contracting party is bound thereby: Reding v. Anderson, 72–498.

Stockholders in railway companies are, by express provision, not liable beyond the amount of stock held by them in such companies: First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43–424.

A construction company having power under its articles to construct and operate a railway is a railway corporation within the meaning of the statute: Ibid.; Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49–317.

SEC. 1617. Dissolution—notice of. A corporation may be dissolved prior to the period fixed in the articles of incorporation, by unanimous consent, or in accordance with the provisions of its articles, and notice thereof must be given in the same manner and for the same time as is required for its organization. [C.'73, §§ 1066–7; R., §§ 1159–60; C.'51, §§ 682–3.]

The sale of the corporation business will not necessarily operate as a dissolution of the corporation, and if good ground for such sale exists it may be made by act of the majority of the stockholders and will not be restrained on a complaint of the minority. Price v. Holcomb, 89–123.

SEC. 1618. Duration—how renewed. Corporations for the construction of any work of internal improvement, or for the transaction of the business of life insurance, may be formed to endure fifty years; those for other purposes, not to exceed twenty years; but in either case they may be renewed from time to time for the same or shorter periods, within three months before or after the time for the termination thereof, if a majority of the votes cast at any regular election, or special election called for that purpose, be in favor of such renewal, and if those wishing such renewal will purchase the stock of those opposed thereto at its real value. [C.'73, § 1069; R., § 1158; C.'51, § 681.]

Whether the provisions of this section as to renewal are applicable to such corporations as are described in § 1642, quære: Byers v. McCartney, 62–339.

SEC. 1619. Legislative control. The articles of incorporation, by-laws, rules and regulations of corporations hereafter organized under the provisions of this title, or whose organization may be adopted or amended hereunder, shall at all times be subject to legislative control, and may be at any time altered, abridged or set aside by law, and every franchise obtained, used or enjoyed by such corporation may be regulated, withheld, or be subject to conditions imposed upon the enjoyment thereof, whenever the general assembly shall deem necessary for the public good. [C.'73, § 1090.]

The provisions of this section do not authorize a city council to amend or repeal an ordinance granting a franchise in the streets of the city for a public purpose: Levis v. Newton, 75 Fed., 884.

While the power to regulate corporate franchises is here provided for yet it seems that such regulation must be reasonable or they will be invalid: Des Moines v. Des Moines Water Works Co., 64 N. W., 269.

A statute imposing upon a street railway company additional burdens in regard to paving its tracks is not unconstitutional: Sioux City St. R. Co. v. Sioux City, 78–742; S. C., 78–367: affirmed, 138 U. S., 98.

SEC. 1620. Fraud—penalty for. Intentional fraud in failing to comply substantially with the articles of incorporation, or in deceiving the public or individuals in relation to their means or their liabilities, shall be a misdemeanor, and shall subject those guilty thereof to fine and imprisonment, or both, at the discretion of the court. Any person who has sustained injury from such fraud may also recover damages therefor against those guilty of participating in such fraud. [C.'73, § 1071; R., § 1163; C.'51, § 686.]

To render stockholders liable for fraud in deceiving the public as to the means or liabilities of the corporation, there must be something done with the fraudulent intention of deceiving. The intention to deceive is not sufficient. There must be some act fraudulently done: Miller v. Bradish, 69–278.

Fraud in such cases is not to be presumed. The fact that a person is a stockholder in an insolvent corporation does not, of itself, render him liable: Spense v. Iowa Valley Const. Co., 36–407.

Where it is sought to recover from individual officers of a corporation the amount of a judgment against the corporation, under a claim that such officers have rendered themselves liable by fraud, proof of absence of intentional fraud and diversion of assets to their own use will relieve defendants from liability. This section applies only to officers or others guilty of intentional fraud: Hoffman v. Dickey, 54–135.

And held, that in an action for damages under this section, the particular respect in which there was a failure to comply with the articles, etc., resulting in damage to plaintiff, or the particular act of deception, etc., must be specified: White v. Hosford, 37–566.

The rule that, when there is no principal who can be made legally responsible, the agent who attempts to act for and bind the principal will himself be personally chargeable, applied to the case of officers of a bank illegally organized: Allen v. Pegram, 16–163.

Where the directors of a mutual benefit association, without authority, merged the same into another association of the same character, it appearing that such directors had a reserve fund and also received money from the other company for such consolidation, held, that a certificate-holder in the original company could recover by way of damages from such directors the amount paid in on such certificate, but not the prospective value thereof: Grayson v. Willoughby, 78–83.

The fact that officers of an incorporation incur indebtedness in excess of the limit prescribed in the articles or published notice does not constitute such fraud as to render them liable to the persons giving such credit. The officers of the corporation are not agents or trustees of the creditors in such sense as to be answerable to them either for the management of the affairs of the company or the disposition of its property: Frost Mfg. Co. v. Foster, 76–535.

The fact that after credit is extended the officers mismanaged the corporate affairs so as to render it insolvent does not make them answerable to the creditors therefor: Ibid.

SEC. 1621. Diversion of funds. The diversion of the funds of the corporation to other objects than those mentioned in its articles and in the notice published, if any person be injured thereby, and the payment of dividends which leaves insufficient funds to meet the liabilities thereof, shall be such fraud as will subject those guilty thereof to the penalties of the preceding section; and such dividends, or their equivalent, in the hands of stockholders, shall be subject to such liabilities. If the directors or other officers or agents of any corporation shall declare and pay any dividend when such corporation is known by them to be insolvent, or any dividend the payment of which would render it insolvent, or which would diminish the amount of its capital stock, all directors, officers or agents knowingly consenting thereto shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of such corporation then existing, but dividends made in good faith before knowledge of the occurring of losses shall not come within the provisions of this section. [C.'73, §§ 1072–3; R., §§ 1164–5; C.'51, §§ 687–8.]

To render officers liable for diversion of funds or paying dividends so as to leave insufficient funds to meet liabilities, it must appear that the entire property of the corporation is not sufficient to pay its indebtedness. A dividend may lawfully be declared although the corporation does not have cash on hand sufficient to pay all its liabilities: Miller v. Bradish, 69–278.

The word "liability" as used in this section means existing indebtedness the payment of which can be enforced, and does not include the corporate liability for payment of capital stock, such liability being remote and contingent. The amount of the capital stock is therefore not to be included in determining whether the liabilities of the corporation exceed its funds so as to render the declaration of a dividend illegal: Ibid.

If the corporation has sufficient assets to pay all its debts at the time a dividend is paid, then the payment of such dividend cannot be held illegal, nor a diversion of the funds to objects other than those authorized: Ibid.

As mutual insurance company funds are raised and to be used for specific purposes it cannot by contract with a similar company agree to use its funds for the payment of losses in such other company even by arrangement by which it is to acquire the membership of such other company: Twiss v. Guaranty Life Asso., 87–733.

In the absence of express statutory authority courts of equity do not have jurisdiction to disolve corporations or wind up their affairs and the statutory provisions in this state give no such express authority: Wallace v. Pierce-Wallace Pub. Co., 70 N. W., 216.

There are cases in which a receiver will be appointed for the property of the corporation, as for instance where the officers have been guilty of the misappropriation of the funds or a breach of trust in the discharge of official duties, but in general a receiver of a corporation will not be appointed while it is solvent and a going concern, merely on the ground of dissensions among the stockholders: Ibid.

SEC. 1622. Forfeiture. Any intentional violation by the board of directors or the managing officers of the corporation of the provisions of the two preceding sections shall work a forfeiture of the corporate privileges, to be enforced as provided by law. If the indebtedness of any corporation shall exceed the amount of indebtedness permitted by law, the directors and officers of such corporation knowingly consenting thereto shall be personally and individually liable to the creditors of such corporation for such excess. [C.'73, §§ 1074–5; R., §§ 1167–8; C.'51, §§ 690–1.]

SEC. 1623. Keeping false accounts. The intentional keeping of false books or accounts shall be a misdemeanor on the part of any officer, agent or employe of the corporation guilty thereof, or of any one whose duty it is to see that such books or accounts are correctly kept. [Same.]

SEC. 1624. By-laws posted. A copy of the by-laws of the corporation, with the names of all of its officers, must be posted in the principal places of business subject to public inspection. [C. '73 § 1076; R., § 1161; C. '51, § 684.]

This provision is for the benefit of the public and it is the duty of the corporation to comply with it for the protection of persons who might be affected by the by-laws. Therefore, held that a purchaser of corporate stock, having no notice of a by-law providing that the corporation should have a lien on the stock for any indebtedness due from the stockholder, was not bound by such provision in a by-law when not posted as required by this section, even though such transfer was not entered on the books of the company, and the certificate of stock recited that it was subject to the by-laws and articles of incorporation of the company: Des Moines Nat. Bank v. Warren County Bank, 66 N. W., 154.

SEC. 1625. Statement of stock and indebtedness. A statement of the amount of capital stock subscribed, the amount of capital actually paid in, and the amount of the indebtedness in a general way, must also be kept posted in like manner, which shall be corrected as often as any material change takes place in relation to any part of the subject-matter thereof. [C. '73, § 1077; R., § 1162; C. '51, § 685.]

A failure to comply with this, or with the preceding section, does not render the private property of stockholders liable: See notes to § 1616.

SEC. 1626. Transfer of shares. The transfer of shares is not valid, except as between the parties thereto, until regularly entered upon the books of the company, showing the name of the person by and to whom transferred, the numbers or other designation of the shares, and the date of the transfer; but such transfer shall not exempt the person making it from any liability of said corporation created prior thereto. Its books must be so kept as to show the original stockholders, their interests, the amount paid on their shares, and all transfers thereof; which books, or a copy thereof, so far as the items mentioned in this section are concerned, shall be subject to the inspection of any person desiring the same. When any shares of stock shall be transferred to any person, firm or corporation as collateral security, such person, firm or corporation may notify in writing the secretary of the corporation whose stock is transferred as aforesaid, and from the time of such notice, and until written notice that said stock shall have ceased to be held as collateral security, said stock so transferred and noticed as aforesaid shall be considered in law as transferred on the books of the corporation which issued said stock, without any actual transfer on the books of such corporation of such stock. In such case, it shall be the duty of the secretary or cashier of the corporation or of the person or firm to which such stock shall have been transferred as collateral security at once, upon its ceasing to be so held, to inform the secretary of the corporation issuing such stock of such fact. The secretary of the company whose stock is transferred as collateral shall keep a record showing such notice of transfer as collateral, and notice of discharge as collateral, subject to public inspection. No holder of stock as collateral security shall be liable for assessments on the same. [26 G. A., ch. 81; C. '73, § 1078; R., § 1169; C. '51, § 692.]

The provision of statute as to the transfer of shares is intended as a protection to the company, and only applies where the sale or transfer in some way conflicts with the interests of the corporation: Mooar v. Walker, 46–164.

The transfer may between the parties be valid without it. No statute gives to the bank a lien upon its stock for liability of the stockholder and if such a provision is made by the by-laws it will be valid only where the by-laws are posted, as is required by § 1624: Des Moines Nat. Bank v. Warren County Bank, 66 N. W., 154.

A transfer of stock is not valid as against the levy of an execution until it is regularly entered upon the books of the company: Moore v. Marshalltown Opera House Co., 81–45.

But in a particular case, held, that the transfer was sufficient to preclude an execution creditor from afterwards acquiring rights against the assignee, such transfer having been made before the written notice of the levy was served on the officers of the company: Ibid.

A provision of the by-laws of a corporation that no transfer of stock shall be valid unless approved by the board of directors, may be enforced to protect the rights of the corporation, but can not be used to defeat the rights of others and operate as a restraint upon the disposition of the stock. The transferee may hold the stock and enforce a transfer thereof in proper form in the absence of any right or lien of the company to or upon such stock: Farmers', etc., Bank v. Wasson, 48–336.

In the absence of any contract and provisions of the charter and by-laws, a corporation has no implied lien upon the shares of a stockholder indebted to it to secure such indebtedness, and a transfer of stock by such stockholder to secure his individual debt will not be fraudulent as to the corporation in the event that he is indebted to it, and will be valid although not assented to and approved by its directors as required by its by-laws: Ibid.

This section refers to the liability of the corporation for debts created prior to the transfer. It is not the liability of the stockholder under § 1631 which is intended. Therefore a stockholder is liable to corporate creditors after the corporate property is exhausted for corporate debts already incurred, to the amount remaining unpaid on his stock at the time of the transfer thereof: White v. Greene, 70 N. W., 182.

Bonds of the corporation not matured at the time of the transfer are nevertheless to be treated as liabilities of the corporation in determining the obligations of the stockholder: Ibid.

Where the corporation has not reserved any lien on stock for the indebtedness due from a stockholder it does not acquire priority over a pledgee of such stock by taking a subsequent assignment thereof, even thought he first transfer by way of pledge is not entered on the transfer book. In such case the second assignment to the corporation would entitle it only to a surplus after satisfying the claim of the pledgee under the first assignment: Des Moines Loan & Trust Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 66 N. W., 914.

Although the by-laws may give the corporation a lien on stock for indebtedness due from the stockholder yet such lien may be waived by the acts of officers of the corporation in allowing a third person to acquire a lien on such stock without asserting the claims of the corporation: Ibid.

Shares in the capital stock of the corporation are the property of and under the control of the shareholder. Even though the by-laws of the association require that in order to constitute a valid transfer the same must be entered upon the stock-book, yet this does not limit the absolute right of sale and alienation by the stockholder: Hershire v. First Nat. Bank, 35–272.

The written assignment and delivery of the certificates of stock, coupled with authority to transfer the same upon the books of the company, is sufficient to vest in the transferee the right to the stock: Courtright v. Deeds, 37–503.

The transfer of stock on the books of a corporation upon surrender of a previous certificate, without the issuance of a stock certificate in conformity therewith, is sufficient to bind the corporation and third persons to such transfer: First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47–575.

Although a transfer not entered on the books of the company is valid as between the parties thereto, it will not be valid as against an attaching creditor, who proceeds in the manner provided by § 3894, to attach the stock as the property of the person who appears on the books to be the owner thereof. If the attaching creditor or a purchaser had knowledge of the transfer it may be that a court of equity would protect the transferee's rights: Ft. Madison Lumber Co. v. Batavian Bank, 71–270.

Where a valid title to corporate stock has been acquired by attachment levied thereon and sale under execution, a transferee whose title does not appear on the books of the company cannot defeat it; but if it appears that the title asserted under the execution sale is not valid, the transfer may be good as between the parties thereto: Commercial Nat. Bank v. Farmers', etc., Nat. Bank, 82–192.

Where plaintiff agreed to purchase shares of stock in a corporation of a stockholder, and gave his promissory note for the same, and the certificate of stock was placed in the hands of a third party to be delivered to plaintiff when the note was paid, and where it appeared that the note had never been paid or the stock transferred, held, that while plaintiff had an interest in the stock, he never owned it, and was not liable to the corporation for unpaid assessments made on account of it: Connac v. Western White Bronze Co., 77–32.

A failure to properly keep the books, as here provided, does not render the stockholders individually liable. If the books are fraudulently kept those guilty of participation in the fraud may be held liable under § 1620: Langan v. L. & M. Const. Co., 49–317.

A stockholder is entitled to the inspection of the original record, and transfer books and the record of the financial condition of the company and to have his attorney and the clerk of such attorney assist him in making an examination of such books at reasonable times: Ellsworth v. Dorwart, 63 N. W., 588.

SEC. 1627. Amount paid in. No certificate or shares of stock shall be issued, delivered or transferred by any corporation, officer or agent thereof, or by the owner of such certificate or shares, without having indorsed on the face thereof what amount or portion of the par value has been paid to the corporation issuing the same, and whether such payment has been in money or property. Any person violating the provisions of this section, or knowingly making a false statement on such certificate, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and shall stand committed to the county jail until such fine and costs are paid.

SEC. 1628. Non-user. Any corporation organized under this chapter shall cease to exist by non-user of its franchise for two years at any one time, but omission to elect officers or hold meetings at any time prescribed by its articles or by-laws shall not work a forfeiture, if such election is held within two years of the time appointed therefor. [C. '73, § 1079; R., § 1170; C. '51, § 693.]

Where a railroad company did not commence to build its road for more than two years after its incorporation, and the stockholders did not pay up their subscriptions or take certificates of stock, but during the time the company expended money and made persistent and continuous efforts to procure additional means to construct the road, held, that these acts were such an exercise of its franchises as to prevent a forfeiture: Young v. Webster City & S. W. R. Co., 75–140.

SEC. 1629. Expiration. Corporations whose charters expire by limitation or the voluntary act of the stockholders may nevertheless continue to act for the purpose of winding up their affairs. [C. '73, § 1080; R., § 1171; C. '51, § 694.]

A corporation will be kept alive by statute for the purpose of discharging its contracts and disposing of its property: Muscatine Western R. Co. v. Horton, 38–33, 45.

The voluntary dissolution of a corporation does not take away its power to act for the purpose of winding up its affairs, nor affect the right of a creditor, in equity at least, to be released from the inequitable consequences of such dissolution: Muscatine Turnverein v. Funk, 18–469.

SEC. 1630. Sinking fund. For the purpose of repairs, rebuilding, enlarging, or to meet contingencies, or for the purpose of creating a sinking fund, the corporation may set apart a sum which it may loan, and take proper securities therefor. [C. '73, § 1081; R., § 1176; C. '51, § 699.]

SEC. 1631. Liability of stockholders. Neither anything in this chapter contained, nor any provisions in the articles of corporation, shall exempt the stockholders from individual liability to the amount of the unpaid installments on the stock owned by them, or transferred by them for the purpose of defrauding creditors; and execution against the company may, to that extent, be levied upon the private property of any such individual. In none of the cases contemplated in this chapter can the private property of the stockholders be levied upon for the payment of corporate debts while corporate property can be found with which to satisfy the same; but it will be sufficient proof that no property can be found, if an execution has issued on a judgment against the corporation, and a demand has been thereon made of some one of the last acting officers of the body for property on which to levy, and he neglects to point out any such property. In suits by creditors to recover unpaid installments upon shares of stock against any person who has in any manner obtained such stock of the corporation, the stockholder shall be liable for the difference between the amount paid by him to the corporation for said stock and the face value thereof. [C. '73, § 1082; R., § 1172; C. '51, § 695.]

Apportionment: In an action by a creditor of the corporation against a stockholder to compel payment of the balance due on stock, held, that under an allegation that the plaintiff was enforcing his claim unequally against different stockholders, and accepting settlements with others without crediting the payment thereof upon his claim, a receiver should be appointed and the prosecution of plaintiff's action be enjoined until the amounts due from all the stockholders could be ascertained and reported so that a pro rata apportionment might be made: Hablitzel v. Latham, 35–550.

Stock issued at less than par: The officers of the corporation cannot issue to a creditor stock of the corporation to be accepted by him at less than its par value in payment of his claim, with the agreement that it is to be paid up stock, and the creditor thus accepting stock becomes liable as the holder of unpaid stock to the extent that the par value exceeds the debt for which it is taken: Jackson v. Traer, 64–469.

A creditor thus accepting stock becomes a stockholder although he has not subscribed for stock. A subscription for stock is only necessary to render a person a stockholder where the stock is not delivered: Ibid.

The fact that the stock was, at the time of its issuance and acceptance, worthless, would not relieve a stockholder, accepting it, from liability. Ibid.

A corporation may dispose of its stock to a creditor for less than its par value in full payment of his debt without any liability on his part to other creditors for the excess of the par value above the amount of his debt. (Disapproving Jackson v. Traer, 64-469); Clark v. Bever, 139 U. S., 96; S. C., 31 Fed., 670.

The officers of a corporation cannot, without express authority, sell the stock of the corporation at a less rate than its par value as fixed by the charter: Oliphant v. Woodburn Coal, etc., Co., 63-332.

A creditor who accepts stock issued to him by the officers of the corporation below par in payment of his debt holds the same as unpaid stock to the extent that its par value exceeds his claim: Jackson v. Traer, 64-469.

The public has a right to assume, where the stock of a company has all been issued as full-paid stock, that it has been paid for in full, either in money or in property at a fair value; but while the fact that full-paid stock has been issued upon a partial payment of its face might be ground for proceeding in the interest of the public to wind up the company, it is not a ground upon which the stockholder who has received paid-up stock can object to the validity of the contract for the purchase of such stock: Goff v. Hawkeye Pump, etc., Co., 62-691.

Unpaid installments: Where all the capital stock of a corporation outstanding was such as had been issued to stockholders who had conveyed to the corporation the patent-right for an article which the corporation was authorized to manufacture, and such patent-right had become worthless, held, that such stockholders could not claim that their stock was paid up, and were liable for the amount of their stock: Chisholm v. Forney, 65-333.

An action against a stockholder, even after the corporation has ceased to exist, need not be brought in equity, but may be brought at law: Tama Water Power Co. v. Hopkins, 79-653.

An action against a stockholder for an unpaid installment of stock is properly maintained at law and in such action the corporation, its creditors and other stockholders are not necessary parties: National Park Bank v. Peavey, 64 Fed., 912.

In an action by creditors of a bank located in South Dakota, brought in Iowa to charge defendants with a balance of unpaid stock of said bank, owned by them, it was held that as the statute of South Dakota fixed the liability of holders for unpaid stock, and did not provide a special remedy for enforcing such liability, such liability might be enforced in the courts of this state against persons over whom they have jurisdiction: Latimer v. Citizens State Bank, 71 N. W., 225.

Officers of the corporation cannot, by agreement with a stockholder, release him, to the prejudice of creditors, from his obligation to pay his subscription, unless the transaction is characterized by the utmost fairness. Therefore, held, that conveyances of real estate made to a corporation by directors and other stockholders in full payment of their stock, at a price largely in excess of its real value, did not release such stockholders from liability for the excess of their subscriptions over the real value of the property conveyed, even to creditors becoming such after the conveyance: Osgood v. King, 42-478.

Where the president of a corporation gave a mortgage to the corporation in payment of shares of stock to the amount of such mortgage, and the same was included in the statement of the company's assets, held, that he could not afterward surrender such stock and receive back the mortgage after insolvency of the company: Burnham v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 36-632.

Although the mortgage in such case provided that it was payable in the capital stock certificates of the company, yet, held, that as those doing business with the company had not an opportunity to know the terms of the mortgage, it could not be discharged as to the creditors of the company by surrender of the identical shares of stock which had been issued therefor: Ibid.

It is not necessary to show a subscription for stock in the corporation to render an individual liable as a stockholder. It is sufficiet if stock has been actually issued to him, even though issued to be held as collateral security: Calumet Paper Co. v. Stotts Investment Co., 64 N. W., 782.

Under the national banking act making stockholders liable, in case of failure of the bank, in an amount equal to the amount of stock held by them, a holder of stock at the time of the dissolution of the bank becomes liable for the indebtedness thus arising upon such stock, although he holds the shares as collateral security, or as a trustee: Hale v. Walker, 31-344.

Subscription payable in property: The fact that a subscription for stock was to be paid in property instead of money does not relieve the subscriber from liability, if the property was not turned over as agreed. The company cannot, by any arrangement or action upon its part, release the subscriber from his liability: Singer v. Given, 61-93.

Set-off: The subscriber cannot, as between himself and the creditor, set up claims for services, or for use of property, for which the corporation is indebted to him: Ibid.

Release of subscriber: A railroad corporation may make, if acting in good faith, a valid and binding contract, releasing a stockholder from liability upon his subscription to the stock of the corporation, either with or without the consent of the creditors and stockholders: Gelpcke v. Blake, 19-263.

Enforcement of liability: An execution against the company can only be levied on the private property of a stockholder after a judgment has been obtained against him as provided in § 1632: Bayliss v. Swift, 40-648; and see Hampson v. Weare, 4-13; Bailey v. Dubuque Western R. Co., 13-97.

The primary object of these provisions is to protect creditors of the company. Where by agreement between the company and the stockholders shares of stock were sold at much less than their par value and upon conditions by which the stockholders were not to be liable to any additional amount, and one of such stockholders became a creditor of the company for services rendered, and assigned his claim to plaintiff, on which plaintiff got judgment against the company, held, that plaintiff was not entitled to enforce, as against another of such conditional stockholders, payment on his stock contrary to the conditions on which it was purchased. The liability of the plaintiff's assignor on the stock held by him being as great as that of any other stockholder, his assignee should not be allowed to compel payment of the entire liability from the holders of stock: Callanan v. Windsor, 78-193.

Where there is a failure to comply with the requirements of the statute with reference to organization and publicity, such as to render the stockholder individually liable, he becomes primarily liable, and may be sued in the first instance. His relation to the creditor is not different from what it would have been if no attempt had been made at incorporation: Marshall v. Harris, 55-182.

Where stock is issued to a promotor and organizer for property which is taken at a gross overvaluation the transaction is fraudulent against creditors of the corporation if it be insolvent, and the stockholder who receives such stock with knowledge of the consideration paid for it will be liable to such creditors as to the stock he holds for the difference between its par value and the amount actually paid to the corporation for it, and this rule is applicable to those who acquire stock with knowledge of the facts as well as to the original stockholders: Wishard v. Hansen, 68 N. W., 691.

In a particular case, held, that statements on the back of the stock certificate showing that the stock was still subject to assessments although it purported to be fully made up, were sufficient to put the holder on inquiry: Ibid.

In a particular case, held, that although it appeared that stock was issued as fully paid up to a stockholder for property transferred to the corporation, nevertheless as a matter of fact the value of the property was understood to be only one-third of the par value of the stock issued, and that therefore the stockholder was liable to creditors of the corporation for the unpaid balance on his stock: Boulton Carbon Co. v. Mills, 78-460.

Where the stockholder has become a creditor of the corporation he cannot set off as against claims of other creditors for the unpaid balance due on his stock the amount of indebtedness of the corporation to him: Ibid.

SEC. 1632. Corporate property exhausted. Before any stockholder can be charged with the payment of a judgment rendered for a corporate debt, an action shall be brought against him, in any stage of which he may point out corporate property subject to levy; and, upon his satisfying the court of the existence of such property, by affidavit or otherwise, the cause may be continued, or execution against him stayed, until the property can be levied upon and sold, and the court may subsequently render judgment for any balance which there may be after disposing of the corporate property; but if a demand of property has been made as contemplated in the preceding section, the costs of said action shall, in any event, be paid by the company or the defendant therein, but he shall not be permitted to controvert the validity of the judgment rendered against the corporation, unless it was rendered through fraud and collusion. [C.'73, §§ 1083–4; R., §§ 1173–4; C. '51, §§ 696–7.]

The fact of demand and refusal may be shown by the official return upon the execution. Such return, as between the corporation and the creditor, must be regarded as conclusive. Evidence may be introduced to show that no such return was made, but it is not competent to dispute it by showing that no demand was made as therein stated: Singer v. Given, 61-93.

Where the corporation is notoriously insolvent, and its assets have been seized upon legal process, and it had ceased to do business, creditors are not required to exhaust their remedy against it before pursuing their remedy against the stockholders: Latimer v. Citizens' State Bank, 71 N. W., 225.

An execution against the company can only be levied on the private property of a stockholder after a judgment has been obtained against him as provided by statute: Bayliss v. Swift, 40-648; and see Hampson v. Weare, 4-13; Bailey v. Dubuque Western R. Co., 13-97.

The action against the stockholder, here contemplated, is an ordinary action, followed by an ordinary judgment; after which an execution against the corporation may, to the extent of such judgment, be levied upon the private property of the stockholder, as provided in § 1631: Bayliss v. Swift, 40-648.

An action against the stockholder to enforce in behalf of a creditor his liabilities for unpaid installments of stock is properly brought by ordinary proceedings: Calumet Paper Co. v. Stotts Investment Co., 64 N. W., 782.

Where there had been a defective organization and an indebtedness incurred and subsequently a regular organization of the corporation, held, that judgment against the corporation was proper and was binding upon the stockholders: Ibid.

This section contemplates the rendition of a judgment against the stockholder, and not merely the awarding of an execution against him: Singer v. Given, 61-93.

A prior statute upon the same subject considered: Donworth v. Coolbaugh, 5-300.

To charge a stockholder it must appear that there was a valid claim against the corporation: Corse v. Sanford, 14-235.

SEC. 1633. Indemnity—contribution. When the property of a stockholder is taken for a corporate debt, he may maintain an action against the corporation for indemnity, and against any of the other stockholders for contribution. [C. '73, § 1085; R., § 1175; C. '51, § 698.]

SEC. 1634. Franchise sold on execution. The franchise of a corporation may be levied upon under execution and sold, but the corporation shall not become thereby dissolved, and no dissolution of the original corporation shall affect the franchise, and the purchaser becomes vested with all the powers of the corporation therefor. Such franchise shall be sold without appraisement. [C. '73, § 1086; R., § 1177; C. '51, § 700.]

It seems that this provision has reference to the franchise of a corporation obtained by the adoption of the articles of incorporation and not to a special franchise granted to a corporation, as for instance, a privilege of maintaining and operating waterworks in a city. A franchise of the latter character could be sold or transferred without statutory provision: Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Iowa Water Co., 78 Fed., 881.

SEC. 1635. Production of books. In proceedings by or against a corporation or a stockholder to charge his private property, or the dividends received by him, the court may, upon motion of either party, upon cause shown for that purpose, compel the officers or agents of the corporation to produce the books and records of the corporation. [C. '73, § 1087; R., § 1178; C. '51, § 701.]

SEC. 1636. Estoppel. No person or persons acting as a corporation shall be permitted to set up the want of a legal organization as a defense to an action against them as a corporation, nor shall any person sued on a contract made with such an acting corporation, or sued for an injury to its property, or a wrong done to its interests, be permitted to set up a want of such legal organization in his defense. [C. '73, § 1089; R., § 1181; C. '51, § 704.]

A party contracting with a corporation cannot deny its corporate existence: Howe Machine Co. v. Snow, 32-433; Courtright v. Deeds, 37-503, 511.

A person sued upon such contract cannot set up want of legal organization, etc.: Washington College v. Duke, 14-14.

Among acts which would constitute acting as a corporation, such as by statute would prevent the corporation from denying its legal existence, would be the adoption and use of a corporate seal, the taking of subscriptions and the issue of certificates of stock; but the acts of persons as members of a religious society in holding business meetings, and acquiring property, receiving and paying out money, appointing agents to make settlements, etc., held not sufficient to constitute such "acting as a corporation;" also held, that the passage of by-laws is not an assumption of distinctive corporate powers; nor is the attempt to incorporate: Kirkpatrick v. United Presb. Church, 63-372.

Where the corporation has assumed to make a contract authorized by its amended articles, and has received the consideration therefor, it cannot escape liability upon the ground that such amended articles had not been recorded: Humphrey v. Patrons', etc., Ass'n, 50-607.

The fact that a member of the board of directors has been irregularly elected constitutes no defense in an action against the corporation for indebtedness created: Carrothers v. Newton Mineral Spring Co., 61-681.

When a corporation seeks to enforce the bequests in a will, duly admitted to probate, its claim cannot be resisted on the ground that it has not been legally organized. Such objection can be taken only by a proceeding by quo warranto: Quinn v. Shields, 62-129.

The estoppel provided for by this section certainly applies only to a body of men acting as a corporation for pecuniary profit. Whether the section can be applied to persons acting as a corporation other than for pecuniary profit, quære: Kirkpatrick v. United Presb. Church, 63-372.

SEC. 1637. Foreign corporation—filing articles—process. Any corporation for pecuniary profit, other than for carrying on mercantile or manufacturing business, organized under the laws of another state, or of any territory of the United States, or of any foreign country, which has transacted business in the state of Iowa since the first day of September, 1886, or desires hereafter to transact business in this state, and which has not a permit to do such business, shall file with the secretary of state a certified copy of its articles of incorporation, duly attested, accompanied by a resolution of its board of directors or stockholders authorizing the filing thereof, and also authorizing service of process to be made upon any of its officers or agents in this state engaged in transacting its business, and requesting the issuance to such corporation of a permit to transact business in this state; said application to contain a stipulation that such permit shall be subject to the provisions of this chapter. Before such permit is issued, the said corporation shall pay to the secretary of state the same fee required for the organization of corporations in this state, and if the capital of such corporation is increased, it shall pay the same fee as is in such event required of corporations organized under the law of this state. Any corporation transacting business in this state prior to the first day of September, 1886, shall be exempt from the payment of the fees required under the provisions of this section. The secretary of state shall thereupon issue to such corporation a permit, in such form as he may prescribe, for the transaction of the business of such corporation, and upon the receipt of such permit said corporation shall be permitted and authorized to conduct and carry on its business in this state. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent any foreign corporation from buying, selling and otherwise dealing in notes, bonds, mortgages and other securities. [21 G. A., ch. 76, § 1.]

SEC. 1638. Permit. No foreign corporation which has not in good faith complied with the provisions of this chapter and taken out a permit shall possess the right to exercise the power of eminent domain, or exercise any of the rights and privileges conferred upon corporations, until it has so complied herewith and taken out such permit. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1639. Penalty. Any foreign corporation that shall carry on its business in violation of the provisions of this chapter in the state of Iowa, by its officers, agents or otherwise, without having complied with this statute and taken out and having a valid permit, shall forfeit and pay to the state, for each and every day in which such business is transacted and carried on, the sum of one hundred dollars, to be recovered by suit in any court having jurisdiction; and any agent, officer or employe who shall knowingly act or transact such business for such corporation, when it has no valid permit as provided herein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for such offense shall be fined not to exceed one hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, and pay all costs of prosecution. Nothing contained in this chapter shall relieve any person, company, corporation, association or partnership from the performance of any duty or obligation now enjoined upon or required of it, or from the payment of any penalty or liability created by the statutes heretofore in force, and all foreign corporations, and the officers and agents thereof, doing business in this state shall be subject to all the liabilities, restrictions and duties that are or may be imposed upon corporations of like character organized under the general laws of this state, and shall have no other or greater powers. [Same, § 4.]

Where an Iowa corporation and a Nebraska corporation were organized to operate a joint enterprise and the Iowa corporation transferred its interest in the enterprise to the Nebraska corporation, which continued to operate the business in Nebraska and Iowa, held, that the Nebraska corporation was guilty of a violation of this statute in failing to procure a license under which to carry on the enterprise in Iowa, but that in view of the fact that it appeared not to have acted in bad faith it should have a reasonable time in which to comply with the statute before being ousted of its privileges and franchises: State v. Omaha & C. B. R. & B. Co., 91–517.

The original statute containing a provision that the license should be forfeited on removal of a suit by the corporation to a federal court, held unconstitutional for the reason that it made the stipulation not to remove cases to the federal courts a condition for obtaining the permit to do business: Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S., 186.

SEC. 1640. Dissolution—receiver. Courts of equity shall have full power, on good cause shown, to dissolve or close up the business of any corporation, and to appoint a receiver therefor, who shall be a resident of the state of Iowa. An action therefor may be instituted by the attorney-general in the name of the state, reserving, however, to the stockholders and creditors all rights now possessed by them.

SEC. 1641. Ownership of property. Corporations organized in any foreign country, or corporations organized in this country the stock of which is owned in whole or in part by aliens or nonresidents, shall have the same rights, powers and privileges with regard to the purchase and ownership of real estate in this state as are granted to nonresident aliens in section twenty-eight hundred and ninety, chapter one, title fourteen, of this code.

CHAPTER 2.

OF CORPORATIONS NOT FOR PECUNIARY PROFIT.

SECTION 1642. Organization—purposes—name. Any three or more persons of full age, a majority of whom shall be citizens of the state, may incorporate themselves for the establishment of churches, colleges, seminaries, lyceums, libraries, fraternal lodges or societies, temperance societies, trades' unions or other labor organizations, agricultural societies, farmers' granges, or organizations of a benevolent, charitable, scientific, political, athletic, military or religious character, by signing, acknowledging, and filing for record with the county recorder of the county where the principal place of business is to be located, articles of incorporation, stating the name by which the corporation or association shall be known, which shall not be the same as that of any such organization previously existing, its business or objects, the number of trustees, directors, managers or other officers to conduct the same, and the names thereof for the first year. [22 G. A., ch. 87; 21 G. A., ch. 71; C. '73, §§ 1091–2, 1095, 1100; R., §§ 1187–8, 1190–1, 1193, 1197; C. '51, §§ 708–9.]

For the purpose of effecting the objects of such corporation it has power to borrow money by executing notes and mortgages: Thompson v. Lambert, 44–239.

An agricultural society has not, in the absence of express authority in its articles, any power to employ persons to convey people to the fair held by such society, and is not liable for negligence of persons thus employed: Bathe v. Decatur County Ag'l Soc'y, 73–11.

The provisions of § 3270 which limit the power of associations or corporations not for pecuniary profit to take by will more than one-fourth of the estate of a person leaving a wife, child or parent surviving, are applicable to voluntary associations of that kind whether incorporated or not: Byers v. McCartney, 62–339.

Whether the provisions of § 1618, as to renewal of corporations, are applicable to corporations such as herein specified, quære: Ibid.

A corporation organized not for pecuniary profit such as a public library association may be for the public welfare and charitable, and the purposes of its creation may be germane to the objects of a municipal corporation, so that the latter may by devise take funds for the benefit of such association even though the municipal corporation could not appropriate public moneys to its support: Phillips v. Harrow, 61 N. W., 434.

SEC. 1643. Powers—duration. Upon filing such articles, the persons signing and acknowledging the same, and their associates and successors, shall become a body corporate, with the name therein stated, and may sue and be sued. It may have a corporate seal, alterable at its pleasure, and may take by gift, purchase, devise or bequest real and personal property for purposes appropriate to its creation, and may make by-laws. Corporations so organized shall endure for fifty years, unless a shorter period is fixed in the articles, or they are sooner dissolved by three-fourths vote of all the members thereof, or by act of the general assembly, or by operation of law. [22 G. A., ch. 87; 21 G. A., ch. 71; C. '73, §§ 1070, 1091, 1096, 1101; R., §§ 1185, 1187, 1190–1, 1194, 1198; C. '51, § 708.]

SEC. 1644. For agricultural, horticultural, and cemetery purposes. Corporations organized for agricultural or horticultural purposes, and cemetery associations, shall not own to exceed nine sections of land, and the improvements and necessary personal property for the proper management thereof; and the articles of incorporation shall provide a mode by which any member may at any time withdraw therefrom, and also the mode of determining the amount to be received by such member upon withdrawal, and for the payment thereof to him, subject to the right of creditors of the corporation; and their duration shall be without limit, unless terminated by act of the general assembly. [C.'73, § 1070; R., § 1185.]

SEC. 1645. Dividend. No dividend nor distribution of property among the stockholders shall be made until the dissolution of the corporation. [C.'73, § 1093; R., § 1188; C.'51, § 710.]

SEC. 1646. Degrees conferred. Corporations of an academical character may confer the degrees usually conferred by such institutions. [C.'73, § 1094; R., § 1189; C.'51, § 711.]

SEC. 1647. Trustees or managers. Such corporation may, annually or oftener, elect from its members its trustees, directors or managers, at such time and place and in such manner as may be specified in its by-laws, who shall have the control and management of its affairs and funds, a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. When a vacancy occurs in its governing body, it shall be filled in such manner as shall be provided by the by-laws. When the corporation consists of the trustees, directors or managers of any benevolent, charitable, scientific or religious institution which is or may be established in the state, and which is or may be under the patronage, control, direction or supervision of any synod, conference, association or other ecclesiastical body in any state established agreeably to the laws thereof, such ecclesiastical body may nominate and appoint such trustees, directors or managers, according to the usages of the appointing body, and may fill any vacancy which may occur among them; and when any such institution may be under the patronage, control, direction or supervision of two or more of such synods, conferences, associations or other ecclesiastical bodies, they may severally nominate and appoint such proportion of such trustees, directors or managers as shall be agreed upon by the bodies immediately concerned, and any vacancy occurring among such appointees last named shall be filled by the synod, conference, association or body having appointed the last incumbent. [C.'73, § 1097; R., § 1195.]

Where a corporation is organized for the purpose of holding and disposing of the property of a religious society, and its officers are elected by the members of the church, the courts will not interfere by mandamus to restore to membership in the corporation a person expelled from the church organization for an alleged offense where there are no property rights involved: Sale v. First Regular Baptist Church, 62–26.

The civil courts will not revise the decisions of churches or religious associations upon ecclesiastical matters, but will interfere with the action of such associations when rights of property or civil rights are involved: Bird v. St. Mark's Church, 62–567.

SEC. 1648. Academical—meetings. Any corporation of an academical character, the membership of which shall consist of lay members and pastors of churches, delegates to any synod, conference or council holding its annual meetings alternately in this and one or more adjoining states, may hold its annual meetings for the elections of officers and the transaction of business in any adjoining state, at the place where such synod, conference or council holds its annual meeting; and the election and business transacted shall be of the same effect as if held and transacted at its place of business in this state. [C.'73, § 1098.]

SEC. 1649. Election of officers. If an election of trustees, directors or managers shall not be made on the day designated by the by-laws, the society for that cause shall not be dissolved, but such election may take place on any other day directed in the by-laws. [C.'73, § 1099; R., § 1196.]

SEC. 1650. Reincorporation. The trustees, directors, or members of any corporation organized under this chapter may reincorporate the same, and all the property and rights thereof shall vest in the corporation as reincorporated. [C.'73, § 1102; R., § 1199.]

SEC. 1651. Changing name. Any corporation organized under this chapter may change its corporate name or amend its articles of incorporation by a vote of a majority of the members, in such manner as may be provided by its articles. If the trustees, directors or managers of such corporation are appointed by two or more synods, conferences, associations or other ecclesiastical bodies, such amendment or change shall not be made without the concurrence of a majority of those appointed by each such body. [15 G. A., ch. 40, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 1652. Record—effect. The change or amendment provided for in the preceding section shall be recorded as the original articles are recorded. From the date of filing such change or amendment for record, the provisions of the previous section having been complied with, the change or amendment shall take effect as a part of the original articles, and the corporation thus constituted shall have the same rights, powers and franchises, be entitled to the same immunities, and liable upon all contracts to the same extent, as before such change or amendment. [Same, §§ 3, 4.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES AND STOCKBREEDERS' ASSOCIATIONS AND STATE DAIRY ASSOCIATIONS.

SECTION 1653. Meeting of state agricultural society. There shall be held annually at the seat of government, on the second Wednesday of January, a meeting of the board of directors of the state agricultural society, together with the president of each county society or a delegate therefrom accredited in writing, who shall be a resident of the county, and in counties where there are no agricultural societies the board of supervisors may appoint a delegate to represent the county, who shall be a resident of the county, who shall, for the time being, be members of the board, at which officers and directors shall be chosen, the place for holding the next annual exhibition determined, premiums on essays and field crops awarded, and all questions relating to the agricultural development of the state considered. [25 G. A., ch. 111; C.'73, § 1103; R., § 1701.]

SEC. 1654. Officers—terms. The officers chosen at such meeting shall be a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and five directors. The president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer shall serve one year and be directors by virtue of their office. The other directors shall serve two years, so that the entire number shall always be ten, one-half of whom shall be chosen annually, and five of whom shall constitute a quorum. The president shall have power to call meetings of the board when necessary. [C.'73, § 1104; R., § 1700.]

SEC. 1655. Premium list. The premium list and rules of exhibition shall be determined and published by the board of directors prior to the first of April in each year. [C.'73, § 1106; R., § 1702.]

SEC. 1656. Annual report. The board shall annually report to the governor the proceedings of the society, its doings for the past year, a general view of the condition of agriculture throughout the state, accompanied with such recommendations and reports as to it may appear interesting or useful; which report shall be published by the state under the supervision of the society. One-half of such reports shall be bound in muslin covers in style uniform with the reports of the horticultural society, and the remainder in board covers similar in style to the acts of the general assembly. A financial committee consisting of three members shall be appointed by the executive council, whose duty it shall be to pass upon all financial business of the society prior to the annual meeting thereof, and make their report to the governor. No member of such committee shall be a director or officer of the society. [C.'73, § 1107; R., § 1703.]

SEC. 1657. Distribution of reports. The secretary of state shall distribute ten copies of the printed report provided for in the preceding section to the state university, ten to the state library, ten to the agricultural college, one to each member of the general assembly, and the remainder to the secretary of the society, to be distributed by him to the county agricultural societies, and one to the board of supervisors of each county in which there is no such society. [C.'73, § 1108.]

SEC. 1658. County societies—premiums. County agricultural societies may annually offer and award premiums for the improvement of stock, tillage, crops, implements, mechanical fabrics, articles of domestic industry, and such other articles and improvements as they may think proper, and so regulate the amount thereof and the different grades as to induce general competition. [C.'73, § 1109; R., § 1697.]

Such societies may offer a premium to the winner at a horse-race held on its grounds during its annual fair: Delier v. Plymouth County Ag'l Soc'y, 57–481.

SEC. 1659. List of awards. Each county society shall annually publish a list of the awards, and an abstract of the treasurer's account, in one or more newspapers of the county, with a report of its proceedings during the year, and a synopsis of the awards. It shall also make a report of the condition of agriculture in the county to the board of directors of the state agricultural society, which shall be forwarded on or before the first day of December in each year to the secretary of said society. The auditor of state, before issuing a warrant in favor of such societies for any amount, shall demand the certificate of the secretary of the state society that such report has been made. [C.'73, § 1110; R., § 1698.]

SEC. 1660. Appropriation from county. When a county agricultural society shall have procured in fee simple, free from incumbrance, land for fair grounds, not less than ten acres in extent, or hold and occupy such amount of land by virtue of a lease, and own and have thereon buildings and improvements worth at least two thousand dollars, the board of supervisors of the county may appropriate and pay to it a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars for every thousand inhabitants in the county, to be expended by it in fitting up or purchasing such fair grounds, but for no other purpose; but the aggregate amount so appropriated shall not exceed one thousand dollars to any one society. [C.'73, § 1111.]

SEC. 1661. State aid to district or county society. When a county or district agricultural society composed of one or more counties has made its report to the state society as provided in this chapter, and raised during the year any sum of money for actual membership, it shall be entitled to an equal sum, not exceeding two hundred dollars, from the state treasury, upon filing with the auditor of state the affidavit of the president, secretary and treasurer, showing that such sum was raised for the legitimate purposes of the society during the current year, accompanied by the certificate of the secretary of the state society that it has reported according to law; but in case it shall be proven that any society has permitted gambling devices, or other violations of state law, they shall not be entitled to such appropriation. [C.'73, § 1112; R., § 1704.]

The benefit provided for in this section in behalf of agricultural societies under certain conditions is not limited to one society in each county, but two or more societies may receive the benefit provided for if they come within the conditions of the statute: Poweshiek County Cent. Ag'l Society v. Shaffer, 86 –377.

SEC. 1662. Report to supervisors. Each society receiving such appropriation shall, through its secretary, make to the board of supervisors a detailed statement, accompanied with vouchers, showing the legal disbursement of all moneys so received. [C.'73, § 1113.]

SEC. 1663. Permits. The president of a district or county agricultural society may grant a written permit to such persons as he thinks proper, to sell fruit, provisions, and other articles not prohibited by law, under such regulations as the board of directors may prescribe. [C. '73, § 1115.]

SEC. 1664. Police power. The president of any such society may appoint such number of peace officers as may be necessary, and may arrest or cause to be arrested any person violating any of the provisions of this chapter, and cause him to be taken before some justice of the peace to be dealt with as provided by law; and he may seize or cause to be seized all intoxicating liquors, wine, or beer of any kind, with the vessels containing the same, and all tools or other implements used in any gambling, and remove or cause to be removed all shows, swings, booths, tents, carriages, vessels, boats, or any other thing that may obstruct or cause to be obstructed, by collecting persons around or otherwise, any thoroughfare leading to the inclosure in which such agricultural fair is being held. Any person owning, occupying or using any of such things causing such obstruction, who shall refuse or fail to remove the same when ordered to do so by the president, shall be liable to a fine of not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars for every such offense. During the time the fair is being held, no ordinance or resolution of any city or town shall in any way impair the authority of the society, but it shall have sole and exclusive control over and management thereof. [23 G. A., ch 125; C. '73, § 1116.]

The society having no power to authorize the arrest of persons for any other offenses than selling intoxicating liquors, gambling and horse racing within its grounds an arrest by its officers and agents for any other offense, such as that of assault will not render the society liable: Hern v. Iowa State Ag'l Society, 91-97.

The society is an arm or agency of the state organized for the promotion of the public good and for the advancement of the agricultural interests of the state. Its funds should not be used to pay damages arising out of the commission of wrongful acts by its officers and servants who are in no way connected with the objects and purposes of its creation: Ibid.

SEC. 1665. Fraudulent entries of horses. No person, partnership, company or corporation shall knowingly enter or cause to be entered any horse of any age or sex under an assumed name, or out of its proper class, to compete for any purse, prize, premium, stake or sweepstake offered or given by any agricultural or other society, association, person or persons in the state, or drive any such horse under an assumed name, or out of its proper class, where such prize, purse, premium, stake or sweepstake is to be decided by a contest of speed. [24 G. A., ch. 67, § 1.]

SEC. 1666. Penalty. Any person convicted of a violation of the preceding section shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary for a period of not more than three years, or in the county jail for not more than one year, and be fined in a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1667. Entry under changed name. The name of any horse, for the purpose of entry for competition in any contest of speed, shall not be changed after having once contested for a prize, purse, premium, stake or sweepstake, except as provided by the code of printed rules of the society or association under which the contest is advertised to be conducted, unless the former name is given. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1668. Class determined. The class to which a horse belongs for the purpose of an entry in any contest of speed, as provided by the printed rules of the society or association under which such contest is to be made, shall be determined by the public record of said horse in any such former contest. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1669. Horticultural society—meetings. The horticultural society shall hold its meetings each year for the transaction of business at such time as it may fix, at which a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and librarian shall be elected, who shall serve one year; also one-half of a board of directors, the full board not to exceed twelve in number, who shall serve two years, but vacancies may be filled for the unexpired term. [23 G. A., ch. 44; C. '73, § 1117.]

SEC. 1670. District and county societies. The society shall encourage the organization of district and county societies, giving them representation therein, and in every way further the fruit and tree growing interests of the state. [C.'73, § 1118.]

SEC. 1671. Annual report. The secretary shall make an annual report to the governor, containing the proceedings of the society, with an itemized account showing all the expenditures and the purpose for which the same were made during the year, the general condition of horticultural interests throughout the state, together with such statements and recommendations as he may think useful, to be published by the state, under the supervision of the society, on or before the fifteenth day of February of each year. [25 G. A., ch. 85; C.'73, § 1119.]

SEC. 1672. Printing and distribution. There shall be printed four thousand copies of the report, which shall be bound, one-half in muslin covers, uniform in style with the reports heretofore made, and the remainder in board covers similar to the acts of the general assembly, which shall be distributed by the secretary of state, as follows: Six copies each to the governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, auditor, treasurer, attorney-general, judges of the supreme court, and each member of the general assembly; one hundred to the agricultural college, five copies to the university, two to each incorporated college in the state, one to each auditor, and clerk of the district court, to be kept in his office, and one to each newspaper published in the state; the remainder to be distributed by direction of the society. [18 G. A., ch. 6; C.'73, § 1120.]

SEC. 1673. Appropriation for. The sum of twenty-five hundred dollars is hereby appropriated annually for the use and benefit of said society, which shall be paid upon the warrant of the auditor of state, upon the order of the president of said society, in such sums and at such times as may be for the interests of said society. [20 G. A., ch. 128; C.'73, § 1121.]

SEC. 1674. Publication of proceedings of improved stock breeders' association. The state shall print annually three thousand five hundred copies of the proceedings of the association of improved stock breeders, such publication not to exceed three hundred pages and to be bound in pamphlet form, which shall be distributed,—to the governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, auditor of state, state treasurer, each member of the general assembly, state horticultural society, state agricultural society, state library, university, and agricultural college, each ten copies; to each county auditor, to be kept in the office, each public library, each incorporated college in the state, each president and secretary of each county and district fair, and each president and secretary of each dairymen's or stock growers' association, two copies; the remainder to be distributed under the direction of the association. [20 G. A., ch. 134.]

SEC. 1675. Farmers' institutes. When forty or more farmers of a county organize a farmers' county institute, with a president, secretary, treasurer, and an executive committee of not less than three outside of such officers, and hold an institute, remaining in session not less than two days in each year, which institute may be adjourned from time to time and place to place in said county, the county auditor, upon proof of such organization and such institute having been held, together with an itemized statement, showing the manner in which the money herein appropriated has been expended, shall certify the same to the auditor of state, who shall remit to the treasurer of such county his warrant for not to exceed fifty dollars, and there is hereby appropriated, out of the moneys in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum not to exceed fifty dollars annually for such institute work in each county. No officer of any such farmers' institute shall receive, directly or indirectly, any compensation from said state fund for services as such officer. [24 G. A., ch. 58, § 1.]

SEC. 1676. Appropriation. The money appropriated and paid into the county treasury shall be designated as a farmers' institute fund, and no

warrant shall be drawn thereon, except by an order signed by a majority of the members of the executive committee. In case two or more organizations shall claim recognition as farmers' institutes in any county, a bill shall be audited by the board of supervisors, who shall divide said state fund as nearly as possible equitably, but in no case shall more than three institutes be held in one year in any county under the provisions of this chapter. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1677. Weather and crop service. There is established, under the supervision of the board of directors of the state agricultural society, a weather and crop service, which shall coöperate with the national weather bureau for the purpose of collecting weather and crop statistics and meteorological data, and disseminating the weather forecasts and storm and frost warnings among the people, and to promote the growth of knowledge of meteorological science and the climatology of the state. [23 G. A., ch. 29, § 2.]

SEC. 1678. Director. The central station shall be at the seat of government, under the charge of a director and assistant, to be appointed by the governor for a term of two years, upon the recommendation of the board of directors of the state agricultural society; the assistant to be an officer of the United States weather bureau, if one shall be detailed for that purpose. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1679. Stations—bulletins. The director shall coöperate with the board of directors of the state agricultural society to establish volunteer stations at one or more places in each county in the state, and in appointing observers thereat; to supervise such stations, receive reports of meteorological events and crop conditions therefrom, and tabulate the same for permanent record; to issue weekly weather and crop bulletins during the season from April first to October first, and to edit and cause to be published at the office of the state printer a monthly weather and crop review, containing meteorological and agricultural matter of public interest and educational value. The state printer shall print three thousand copies thereof, which shall be distributed from the office of said society. The directors may require a larger issue for such subscribers as will pay the expense thereof. The director shall have advisory power to coöperate with the farmers' institute organizations of the several counties of the state, for the purpose of arranging dates and providing speakers or lecturers, with a view to economy of time and travel in attending institutes; such institutes to be held as nearly as practicable in circuits, and at such dates as will enable speakers to attend two or more such institutes each week. [24 G. A., ch. 63, § 2; 23 G. A., ch. 29, § 4.]

SEC. 1680. Report. The director shall compile and make an annual report to the governor, which shall contain a complete review and summary of the results of the service for the year, which may include articles and papers upon subjects of meteorological science and climatology, and extracts from approved works and publications on such subjects, which shall be printed and bound in such numbers as the executive council shall direct, the expenses to be paid as in case of other reports. [23 G. A., ch. 29, § 5.]

SEC. 1681. Appropriation. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two thousand seven hundred dollars annually, to be drawn and expended upon the order of the president and secretary of the agricultural society, for such service, including the salary of the director, which shall not exceed fifteen hundred dollars per annum. [24 G. A., ch. 63, § 1.]

SEC. 1682. Publication of proceedings of state dairy association. The annual proceedings of the Iowa state dairy association, including accepted essays and addresses, together with the reports of discussions, are hereby authorized and directed to be printed by the state under the supervision of the association, as the reports of the agricultural and horticultural associations are published under the provisions of this chapter. [26 G. A., ch. 101, § 1.]

SEC. 1683. Distribution. The number of copies so published shall be limited to thirty-five hundred annually, not to exceed three hundred pages each,—five hundred copies to be bound in cloth, the remainder in double-thick paper covers. They shall be distributed as follows: To the governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, each member of the general assembly, the state horticultural society, the state agricultural society, the Iowa improved stock breeders' association, the state library, the university, and the agricultural college, each ten copies; to each county auditor, to be kept in the office, to each public library, to each incorporated college in the state, to each president and secretary of each county and district fair, two copies each; and to each county and district farmers' institute, ten copies each; the remainder to be distributed under the direction of the association. [Same, § 2.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF INSURANCE OTHER THAN LIFE.

SECTION 1684. Proceedings for incorporation. Corporations formed for the purpose of insurance, other than life insurance, shall be governed by the provisions of chapter one of this title, except as modified by the provisions of this chapter. [C. '73, § 1122.]

SEC. 1685. Articles—approval. Each such organization shall present to the auditor of state its articles of incorporation, which shall show its name, objects, location of its principal place of business and amount of its capital stock, who shall submit it to the attorney-general for examination, and if found by him to be in accordance with the provisions of this title, the laws of the United States, and the constitution and laws of the state, he shall certify such fact thereon and return the same to the auditor, and no articles shall be approved by the auditor or recorded unless accompanied with such certificate. [Same.]

SEC. 1686. Certificate—recording. If the auditor approves them, he shall so certify, and the articles with the certificates of approval shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state as articles of other corporations are, who shall indorse thereon his certificate thereof, as is required in case of other corporations for pecuniary profit. [C. '73, § 1123.]

SEC. 1687. Name. If the auditor finds the name of the company to be so similar to one already appropriated by a corporation of the same character as to be likely to mislead the public or to cause inconvenience, he shall refuse his certificate to its articles on that ground. [C. '73, § 1122.]

SEC. 1688. Recording with state auditor. The articles, when thus certified by the secretary of state as recorded in his office, or a copy thereof certified by him as such, shall be filed in the office of the auditor of state and remain therein. [C. '73, § 1123.]

SEC. 1689. Kind of company. Every insurance company organized as provided in this chapter shall, if it be a mutual company, embody the word "mutual" in its title, which must appear upon the first page of every policy and renewal receipt; and every company doing business as a stock company shall, upon the face of its policies, express in some suitable manner that such policies are issued by a stock company. [C. '73, § 1140.]

SEC. 1690. Stock or mutual. No company shall be organized to do business upon both stock and mutual plans; nor shall a company organized as a stock company do business upon the plan of a mutual company; nor shall a company organized upon the mutual plan do business or take risks upon the stock plan. [C. '73, § 1159.]

Where a company organized on a mutual plan issued policies of insurance on the stock plan, held, that such policies were invalid and that members of the company were not subject to assessment for losses under such policies: Cory v. Sherman, 64 N. W., 828.

SEC. 1691. Capital required. No stock company shall be incorporated under the provisions of this chapter with a less capital than fifty thousand, nor larger than one million dollars, as may be specified in the articles of incorporation, which stock shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, of which capital not less than twenty-five per cent., and in no case less than twenty-five thousand dollars, shall be paid up in cash. The balance of the capital may consist in the bonds or notes of solvent stockholders. [C.'73, § 1124.]

SEC. 1692. Premium notes of mutual company. No mutual company shall commence business until agreements have been entered into for insurance with at least two hundred applicants, the premiums upon which shall amount to not less than twenty-five thousand dollars, of which at least five thousand dollars shall have been paid in cash, the balance of which may be in cash or secured notes or bonds in the possession of the company, which notes or bonds shall be of solvent parties, founded upon actual applications for insurance made in good faith. No one of the notes so received shall be for more than five hundred dollars, and no two thereof for the same risk, or made by the same person or firm, except where the whole amount does not exceed the sum of five hundred dollars; nor shall any note be regarded or represented as assets unless a policy be issued upon the same within thirty days after the organization of the company, taking the same upon a risk for no shorter period than twelve months. Each of said notes shall be payable, in whole or in part, at any time when the directors shall find the same necessary for the payment of losses and such incidental expenses as may be necessary for transacting the business of the company. [Same.]

While it is improper and unauthorized in a mutual company to make contributors to a guarantee fund members of the corporation and require directors to be selected from their number, yet it is not in itself illegal to create a guaranty fund and provide for the repayment of money so advanced by the contributors to such fund when it can be raised by assessments on the members, and the invalid provisions making such guarantors members of the company will not render the guaranty fund notes given by them void: Berry v. Anchor Mut. F. Ins. Co., 62 N. W., 681.

Failure of a party giving such guaranty note to pay an assessment thereon without notice may by the terms of the contract forfeit prior payments made and credits received by him and defeat his right to recover such payments from the company: Ibid.

SEC. 1693. Certificate as to notes. No note shall be accepted as part of the capital of a stock company nor as a premium note taken for the purpose of organization of a mutual company, unless accompanied by a certificate of the clerk of the district court or other court of record of the county in which the person executing it resides, to the effect that the person making it is in his opinion pecuniarily good and responsible therefor in property not exempt from execution. [Same.]

SEC. 1694. Subscriptions of stock—applications. Having published the notice of incorporation contemplated by chapter one of this title, and filed the publisher's affidavit thereof with the auditor of state, together with the articles of incorporation as required in this chapter, the persons named in such articles as incorporators, or a majority of them, shall be authorized to open books for the subscription of stock to the company, if a stock company, or to take applications and premiums or premium notes for insurance, if a mutual company, to the extent hereinbefore required, at such times and places as to them may seem convenient, and keep them open until the full amount required is subscribed or taken. [C.'73, § 1125.]

SEC. 1695. Directors. The affairs of a company organized under the provisions of this chapter shall be managed by not less than five nor more than twenty-one directors, all of whom shall be stockholders therein, if a stock company, or policy holders, if a mutual company. Within thirty days after the subscription book shall have been filled, if a stock company, or after applications and premiums or premium notes for insurance, if a mutual company, shall have been taken to the extent hereinbefore required, a majority of the subscribers, or policy holders if a mutual company, shall hold a meeting for the election of directors, each share of stock or policy of insurance on separate property, as the case may be, entitling the holder thereof to one vote, and the directors then elected shall continue in office until their successors have been duly chosen and accepted the trust. [C. '73, § 1126.]

SEC. 1696. Annual meetings. The annual meetings for the election of directors shall be held during the month of January, at such time as the by-laws of the company may direct; but if for any cause no election is held, or there is a failure to elect at any annual meeting, then a special meeting for that purpose shall be held on the call of a majority of the directors, or of those persons holding a majority of the stock, or of a majority of policy holders if a mutual company, by giving thirty days' notice thereof in some newspaper in general circulation in the county in which the principal office of the company is located, and the directors chosen at any such annual or special meeting shall continue in office until the next annual meeting, and until their successors are elected and have accepted. [C. '73, § 1127.]

SEC. 1697. Powers of directors—president. The directors shall elect by ballot from their own number a president, and fill all vacancies occurring in the board or presidency thereof; and the board of directors thus constituted, or a majority of them, when convened at the office of the company, shall be competent to exercise all the powers vested in them by this chapter. [C.'73, § 1128.]

SEC. 1698. Secretary and other officers—by-laws—records. The board of directors shall have power to appoint a secretary and any other officers or agents necessary for transacting the business of the company, paying such salaries and taking such security of them as is reasonable; it may adopt such by-laws and regulations not inconsistent with law as shall appear to them necessary for the regulation and conduct of the business, and shall keep full and correct entries of their transactions, which shall at all times be open to the inspection of the stockholders if a stock company, or policy holders if a mutual company, and to the inspection of persons invested by law with the right thereof. [C.'73, § 1129.]

The directors of an insurance company organized under this chapter, whether doing business under the ordinary or mutual plan, have the right to ordain and establish by-laws and regulations. The parties may by contract mutually agree to the waiver of a by-law: Houdeck v. Merchants' and Bankers' Ins. Co., 71 N. W., 354.

SEC. 1699. Funds invested. Any company organized under this chapter may invest its capital and funds in notes or bonds, secured in either case by mortgage on unincumbered real estate in the state worth double the sum loaned thereon, exclusive of buildings, unless such buildings are insured in favor of the company to the amount at which such buildings are estimated in determining the value of such property; also in United States bonds, or treasury notes, or the bonds of this state, or any county or municipal corporation thereof, authorized by law, and it may loan the same upon pledge of like bonds, or notes or bonds secured by mortgage as aforesaid, and not otherwise, except that the surplus funds may be invested in or loaned upon the pledge of the stock or bonds or other evidences of indebtedness of any solvent dividend paying corporation organized under the laws of the state, or of the United States, worth at their current market value ten per cent. more than the amount at which they are estimated in determining the assets of the company, but such investment shall not be made in the company's own stock. [C. '73, § 1130.]

SEC. 1700. Examination by auditor—statement. Upon receiving notification that the requirements of the preceding sections have been complied with, the auditor of state shall make or cause to be made by some disinterested person by him appointed an examination, and if it shall be found that the capital or assets herein required of the company named, according to the nature of the business proposed to be transacted by such company, have been paid in, and are possessed by it in money or such stock, notes, bonds and mortgages as are required by the preceding sections of this chapter, he shall so certify; but if the examination is made by another than the auditor, the certificate shall be by him, and under oath. The corporators or officers of any such company or proposed company shall be required to state to the auditor of state under oath that the capital or assets exhibited to the persons making the examination were actually and in good faith the property of the company examined. The certificate of examination of a mutual company shall be to the effect that it has received and is in the actual possession of the cash premiums, premium notes, actual contracts of insurance and other securities, as the case may be, to the extent and value hereinbefore required. The corporators or officers of such mutual company shall file the statement under oath required of stock companies, which shall also show the name and residence of the maker and amount of each premium note forming part of its proposed assets. The certificate and statement above contemplated shall be filed in the auditor's office, who shall thereupon deliver to the company a certified copy of the same, with his written permission for it to commence the business proposed in its articles of incorporation, which permission, being recorded by the recorder of the county in which the company is to be located, in the book provided for the recording of articles of incorporation, shall be its authority to commence business and issue policies. Such permission shall be renewed and recorded annually on the first day of March, a copy of which, certified by the auditor, shall be admissible in evidence for or against a company with the same effect as the original. [C. '73, § 1131.]

SEC. 1701. Capital increased. When the directors of a stock company with less than the maximum capital allowed in this chapter desire to increase the amount, they shall, if authorized by the holders of a majority of the stock to do so, file with the auditor of state an amendment of its articles authorizing such increase, not exceeding the maximum authorized capital, and thereupon shall be entitled to have the increased amount of capital fixed by such amendment, and the examination of securities constituting the increased capital stock shall be made in the same manner as provided for the original capital stock. [C.'73, §1135.]

SEC. 1702. Dividends. The directors or managers of a stock company incorporated under the laws of this state shall make no dividends, except from the profits arising from their business; and in estimating such profits there shall be reserved therefrom a sum equal to forty per cent. of the amount received as premiums on unexpired risks and policies, which amount so reserved shall be unearned premiums; and there shall also be reserved all sums due the corporation on bonds and mortgages, bonds, stocks and book account, of which no part of the principal or interest thereon has been paid during the year preceding such estimate of profits, and upon which suit for foreclosure or collection has not been commenced, or which, after judgment has been obtained thereon, shall have remained more than two years unsatisfied, and on which interest has not been paid; and such judgment with the interest due or accrued thereon and remaining unpaid, shall also be reserved. Any dividend made contrary to these provisions shall subject the company making it to forfeiture of its franchise. [C. '73, § 1136.]

SEC. 1703. May own real estate. No company organized under this chapter shall purchase, hold or convey any real estate, save for the purpose and in the manner herein set forth:

1. Such as shall be required for the transaction of its business;
2. Such as shall have been mortgaged to it in good faith by way of security for loans previously contracted, or for money due;
3. Such as shall have been conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the legitimate business of the company, or for money due;
4. Such as shall have been purchased at sales upon judgments, decrees or mortgages obtained or made for such debt, or obtained by redemption as junior judgment creditor or mortgagee; but it may convey real estate which shall be found in the course of its business not necessary therefor, and all such last mentioned real estate shall be sold and conveyed within three years after the same has been determined, by the auditor of state, unnecessary, unless the company shall procure a certificate from him that the interest of the company will materially suffer by a forced sale, in which event the sale may be postponed for such a period as he may direct in such certificate. [C. '73, § 1137.]

SEC. 1704. Premium notes in mutual company. All premium notes deposited with any mutual insurance company at the time of its organization, as above provided, shall remain as security for all losses and claims until the accumulation of the profits from investments allowed by this chapter shall equal the amount of cash capital required to be possessed by stock companies organized thereunder, unless the obligation of the maker thereof, under the terms of the contract of insurance in said company, shall have sooner expired. [C. '73, § 1138.]

SEC. 1705. Policy holders members. The directors of any mutual company shall have the right to determine the amount of the note to be given, in addition to the cash premium, by any person insured therein, and every person effecting such insurance, and his heirs, administrators and assigns continuing to be insured, shall be members of the company during the period of insurance, and bound to pay for losses and necessary expenses accruing to the company in proportion to his or their premium note. [Same.]

SEC. 1706. Settlement of losses. The directors shall as often as necessary, after receiving notice of any loss or damage, determine the sums to be paid by the several members thereof as their respective portions of such loss, assess the same against them, respectively, and notify them thereof in such manner as they shall determine or the by-laws prescribe; but the sum to be paid by each member shall always be in proportion to the original amount of his premium note, and be paid to the officers of the company within thirty days after the giving of said notice. [C. '73, § 1139.]

SEC. 1707. Failure to pay assessments. If any member shall neglect or refuse to pay the sum assessed upon him as his proportion of any loss, as provided in the preceding section, for thirty days after demand has been made by registered letter or personal notice, the directors may sue and recover the amount due from the member under such assessment. The bringing of such suit or the recovery of judgment thereunder shall not affect the liability of the member under his premium note for other assessments to pay subsequent losses, but no such member shall be held liable in the aggregate by assessments in a sum exceeding the amount of his premium note, and if from an assessment made to pay any particular loss sufficient is not realized therefor, the claimant for the loss shall receive only the proportional amount due under his policy which the sum realized shall be sufficient to pay. It may be provided by the by-laws of the company that failure to pay an assessment under the provisions of this section shall operate as a forfeiture of the insurance of the member failing to make such payment. But the premium notes given at the organization of the company, and estimated in determining whether such company is entitled to commence business, shall not be canceled or released within one year, and until all losses accruing during the continuance of the note are paid. [Same.]

SEC. 1708. Cash premiums. Any mutual company organized under the provisions of this chapter may accept cash premiums in place of premium notes for any term of insurance not exceeding one year, the amount of cash to be paid to be determined by the directors of the company.

SEC. 1709. Kinds of insurance—limitation of risk. Any company organized under this chapter or authorized to do business in this state may:

1. Insure houses, buildings and all other kinds of property against loss or damage by fire or other casualty, and make all kinds of insurance on goods, merchandise or other property in the course of transportation, whether on land or water, or any vessel or boat wherever the same may be;

2. Insure the fidelity of persons holding places of private or public trust, or execute as surety any bond or other obligation required or permitted by law to be made, given or filed, except bonds required in criminal causes. None but stock companies shall engage in fidelity and surety business;

3. Insure the safe keeping of books, papers, moneys, stocks, bonds and all kinds of personal property, and receive them on deposit;

4. Insure horses, cattle and other live stock against loss or damage by accident, theft or any unknown or contingent event which may be the subject of legal insurance;

5. Insure against personal injuries, disablement or death resulting from traveling or general accidents by land or water, and insure employers against loss in consequence of accidents or casualties of any kind to employes or other persons, or to property resulting from any act of an employe, or any accident or casualty to persons or property, or both, occurring in or connected with the transaction of their business, or from the operation of any machinery connected therewith, except such insurance as is provided for in the next paragraph;

6. Insure against loss or injury to person or property, or both, growing out of explosion or rupture of steam boilers. [25 G. A., ch. 32; 24 G. A., ch. 29; C. '73, § 1132.]

An association organized by a railroad company for the benefit of employes who participate therein by payment of indemnity in case of accident or death is not within the provisions of the statutes as to insurance: Maine v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70 N.W., 630.

SEC. 1710. Kind of risk—limitation. No company organized by either of the methods provided in this chapter or authorized to do business in the state shall issue policies of insurance for more than one of the six purposes mentioned in the preceding section, or expose itself to loss on any one risk or hazard to an amount exceeding ten per cent. of its paid up capital, unless the excess shall be reinsured in some other good and reliable company. The restrictions as to the amount of risk a company may assume shall not apply to companies organized to guarantee the fidelity of persons in places of public or private trust, nor to companies that receive on deposit and guarantee the safe keeping of books, papers, moneys and other personal property. [C. '73, § 1132.]

SEC. 1711. Loans—reinsurance. Such company may lend money on bottomry or respondentia, and course itself to be insured against any loss or risk it may have incurred in the couse of its business, and upon the interest which it may have in any property on account of any such loan, and generally to do and perform all other matters and things proper to promote these objects. [Same.]

SEC. 1712. Policies. All policies or contracts of insurance made or entered into by the company may be made either with or without the seal of said company, but shall be subscribed by the president, or such other officer as may be designated by the directors for that purpose, and be attested by the secretary thereof. [C. '73, § 1133.]

SEC. 1713. Transfer of stock. Transfers of stock made by any stockholder or his legal representative shall be subject to the provisions of chapter one of this title relative to transfer of shares, and to such restrictions as the directors shall establish in their by-laws, except as hereinafter provided. [C.'73, § 1134.]

SEC. 1714. Annual statement. The president or the vice-president and secretary of each company organized or authorized to do business in the state shall annually, on the first day of January of each year or within thirty days thereafter, prepare under oath and file with the auditor of state a full, true and complete statement of the condition of such company on the last day of the preceding month, which shall exhibit the following items and facts:

First—The amount of capital stock of the company;

Second—The names of the officers;

Third—The name of the company and where located;

Fourth—The amount of its capital stock paid up;

Fifth—The property or assets held by the company, specifying:

1. The value of real estate owned by the company;
2. The amount of cash on hand and deposited in banks to the credit of the company, and in what bank deposited;
3. The amount of cash in the hands of agents and in the course of transmission;
4. The amount of loans secured by first mortgage on real estate, with the rate of interest thereon;
5. The amount of all other bonds and loans and how secured, with the rate of interest thereon;
6. The amount due the company on which judgment has been obtained;
7. The amount of bonds of the state, of the United States, of any county or municipal corporation of the state, and of any other bonds owned by the company, specifying the amount and number thereof, and par and market value of each kind;
8. The amount of bonds, stock and other evidences of indebtedness held by such company as collateral security for loans, with amount loaned on each kind, and its par and market value;
9. The amount of assessments on stock and premium notes, paid and unpaid;
10. The amount of interest actually due and unpaid;
11. All other securities and their value;
12. The amount for which premium notes have been given on which policies have been issued;

Sixth—Liabilities of such company, specifying:

1. Losses adjusted and due;
2. Losses adjusted and not due;
3. Losses unadjusted;
4. Losses in suspense and the cause thereof;
5. Losses resisted and in litigation;
6. Dividends in scrip or cash, specifying the amount of each, declared but not due;
7. Dividends declared and due;
8. The amount required to reinsure all outstanding risks on the basis of forty per cent. of the premium on all unexpired risks;
9. The amount due banks or other creditors;
10. The amount of money borrowed and the security therefor;
11. All other claims against the company;

Seventh—The income of the company during the previous year, specifying:

1. The amount received for premiums, exclusive of premium notes;
2. The amount of premium notes received;
3. The amount received for interest;

4. The amount received for assessments or calls on stock notes, or premium notes;

5. The amount received from all other sources;

Eighth—The expenditures during the preceding year, specifying:

1. The amount of losses paid during said term, stating how much of the same accrued prior, and how much subsequent, to the date of the preceding statement, and the amount at which such losses were estimated in such statement;

2. The amount paid for dividends;

3. The amount paid for commissions, salaries, expenses and other charges of agents, clerks and other employes;

4. The amount paid for salaries, fees and other charges of officers and directors;

5. The amount paid for local, state, national and other taxes and duties;

6. The amount paid for all other expenses, including printing, stationery, rents, furniture, or otherwise;

Ninth—The largest amount insured in any one risk;

Tenth—The amount of risks written during the year then ending;

Eleventh—The amount of risks in force having less than one year to run;

Twelfth—The amount of risks in force having more than one and not over three years to run;

Thirteenth—The amount of risks having more than three years to run;

Fourteenth—The dividends, if any, declared on premiums received for risks not terminated;

Fifteenth—Each accident insurance company, or company insuring against accidents, shall keep a register of tickets sold or policies issued by its officers or agents, which register shall show the name and residence of the person insured, the amount of insurance, the date of issue of such ticket or policy, and the time the same will remain in force; and the annual statement of each such company shall show the number of tickets sold and policies issued by it during the year, and the aggregate amount of insurance evidenced by such tickets and policies, classified as to the length of time for which such insurance is given. [C.'73, § 1141.]

SEC. 1715. Certificate refused. The auditor of state shall withhold his certificate or permission of authority to do business from any company neglecting or failing to comply with the provisions of this chapter.

SEC. 1716. Annual statements of foreign company. The annual statement of foreign companies doing business in this state shall also show, in addition to the foregoing matters, the amount of losses incurred and premiums received in the state during the preceding period, so long as such company continues to do business in this state. [C.'73, § 1146.]

SEC. 1717. Statement of stock and premium notes. The statement of any stock company the capital of which is composed in whole or in part of notes shall, in addition to the foregoing, exhibit the amount of notes originally forming the capital, and also what proportion of said notes is still held by such company and considered capital. Each mutual company shall in its annual statement show the aggregate amount of premium notes held by it on which assessments may be made. [C.'73, § 1143.]

SEC. 1718. Inquiry by auditor. The auditor of state shall address any inquiries to any insurance company in relation to its doings and condition, or any other matter connected with its transactions, which he may deem necessary for the public good, or for a proper discharge of his duties, and any company so addressed shall promptly reply in writing thereto. [C.'73, § 1142.]

SEC. 1719. Statements published—printed forms. He shall cause to be prepared and furnished to each company organized under the laws of this state, and to the attorney or agent of each company incorporated in other states and foreign governments, who may apply therefor, printed forms of statements required by this chapter, and may from time to time make such changes in the forms as shall seem to him best adapted to elicit from the companies a true exhibit of their condition in respect to the several points hereinbefore enumerated. [C. '73, § 1157.]

SEC. 1720. Auditor's report. He shall cause the information contained in the statements required of the companies organized or doing business in the state to be arranged in a tabular form, and prepare the same in a single document for printing, which report shall be made to the governor on or before the first day of May of each year. [16 G. A., ch. 164; C. '73, § 1158.]

SEC. 1721. Foreign companies—capital required. No insurance company, association or partnership incorporated, associated or organized under or by the laws of any other state or any foreign goverment, for the purposes specified in this chapter, shall directly or indirectly take risks or transact any business of insurance in the state, unless possessed of two hundred thousand dollars of actual paid up capital, exclusive of any assets deposited in other states and territories for the special benefit or security of the insured therein; but the provisions of this section shall not apply to mutual insurance companies or associations specifically organized for the purpose of and insuring a single class of property only; and companies organized to insure plate glass exclusively are not required to have a greater capital than one hundred thousand dollars; but such companies organized to insure against personal injury, disablement or death resulting from traveling or general accidents by land or water exclusively, having an actual paid up capital of one hundred thousand dollars and one hundred thousand dollars cash surplus safely invested, exclusive of any assets deposited in other states and territories for the special benefit or security of the insured therein, shall be deemed to be possessed of two hundred thousand dollars actual paid up capital within the meaning of this section. [21 G. A., ch. 145; 16 G. A., ch. 60; 15 G. A., ch. 55; C. '73, § 1144.]

SEC. 1722. Service of process—statement. Any foreign company desiring to transact the business of insurance under this chapter, by an agent or agents in the state, shall file with the auditor of state a written instrument, duly signed and sealed, authorizing such auditor to acknowledge service of notice or process for and in behalf of such company in this state, and consenting that service of notice or process may be made upon the auditor of state, and when so made shall be taken and held as valid as if served upon the company according to the laws of this or any other state, and waiving all claim or right or error by reason of such acknowledgment of service. Such notice or process with a copy thereof may be mailed to the auditor of state at Des Moines, Iowa, in a registered letter addressed to him by his official title, and he shall immediately upon its receipt acknowledge service thereon on behalf of the defendant foreign insurance company by writing thereon, giving the date thereof, and shall immediately return such notice or process in a registered letter to the clerk of the court in which the suit is pending, addressed to him by his official title, and shall also forthwith mail such copy, with a copy of his acknowledgment of service written thereon, in a registered letter addressed to the person or corporation who shall be named or designated by such company in such written instrument. And such company shall also file with the auditor a certified copy of its charter or deed of settlement, together with a statement under oath of the president or vice-president or other chief officer and the secretary of the company for which they may act, stating the name of the company, the place where located, the amount of its capital, with a detailed statement of the facts and items required from companies organized under the laws of this state, and a copy of the last annual report, if any, made under any law of the state by which such company was incorporated; and no agent shall be allowed to transact business for any company whose capital is impaired by liabilities as specified in this chapter to the extent of twenty per cent. thereof, while such deficiency shall continue. [Same.]

Where a state prescribes conditions upon which a foreign corporation may do business within it, such corporation thereafter doing business in the state will be presumed to have assented to the conditions prescribed and will be bound accordingly: Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 63 N. W., 565.

It is within the power of a state to prescribe the method by which corporations doing business within its jurisdiction may be brought into court and to designate the officer or agent of such corporation upon whom the process necessary to commence an action may be served: Ibid.

The fact that a policy is issued and accepted in violation of a law prohibiting a company from doing business which has not complied with certain statutory requirements will not be void as between insured and the company, the latter not being allowed to take advantage of such objection, the penalty for violation of the law being imposed upon the company alone: Pennypacker v. Capital Ins. Co., 80–56.

A foreign company has no right to take risks in this state without complying with the requirements of the law whether the contract for such risks are made in this state or not: Seamans v. Zimmerman, 91–363.

Premium notes taken by a company not authorized to do business in this state cannot be enforced in an action by a foreign receiver of such company in the courts of this state: Barker v. Lamb, 68 N. W., 686.

A company which has transacted business in the state cannot question the validity of service of notice upon it on the ground that it had not appointed agents, etc., as required by the statute: Sparks v. National Masonic Acc. Assn., 69 N. W., 678.

By complying with these provisions as to the designation of an agent upon whom service may be made, the corporation becomes subject to the laws of the state, and to treatment in many respects as a domestic corporation, and liable to be sued in all respects as such a corporation would be: German Bank v. American F. Ins. Co., 83–491.

Service of process may be made upon any agent of the company within the state: Niagara Ins. Co. v. Rodecker, 47–162.

SEC. 1723. Foreign mutual companies. Any foreign mutual company possessed of cash assets safely invested, amounting to at least two hundred thousand dollars over and above all its liabilities, including the reserve for reinsurance required by the laws of the state, shall be held to be possessed of two hundred thousand dollars of actual paid up capital, within the meaning of the two preceding sections, and may be authorized to take risks and transact the business of insurance in the state on complying with the provisions of law applicable to them and relating to foreign insurance companies. [Same.]

SEC. 1724. Certificate. When any foreign company has fully complied with the requirements of law and become entitled to do business, the auditor of state shall issue to such company a certificate of that fact, which certificate shall be renewed annually on the first day of March, if the auditor is satisfied that the capital, securities and investments of such company remain unimpaired, and the company has complied with the provisions of law applicable thereto. [C. '73, § 1146.]

SEC. 1725. Agent to have certificate of authority. No agent shall directly or indirectly act for any insurance company referred to in this chapter, in taking risks or transacting business of insurance in the state, without procuring from the auditor of state a certificate of authority to the effect that such company has complied with all the requirements of this chapter. [C. '73, § 1145.]

SEC. 1726. Insurance notes. All notes taken for policies of insurance in any company doing business in the state shall state upon their face that they have been taken for insurance, and shall not be collectible unless the company and its agents have fully complied with the laws of the state relative to insurance. [C. '73, § 1146.]

A negotiable note which does not state upon its face that it has been taken for insurance will not be subject, in the hands of an innocent holder, to the defense here indicated. The maker must have that fact appear upon the face of the note if he desires to rely upon such defense: Cook v Weirman, 51-561.

The provisions of this section with reference to notes given for policies of insurance are not applicable to the premium notes taken by a mutual benefit company for policies of insurance issued by them: Corey v. Sherman, 64 N. W., 828.

SEC. 1727. Forfeiture of policies. No policy or contract of insurance provided for in this chapter shall be forfeited or suspended for non-payment of any premium, assessment or installment provided for in the policy, or in any note or contract for the payment thereof, unless within thirty days prior to or on or after the maturity thereof the company shall serve notice in writing upon the insured that such premium, assessment or installment is due or to become due, stating the amount, and the amount necessary to pay the customary short rates, up to the time fixed in the notice when the insurance will be suspended, forfeited or canceled, which shall not be less than thirty days after service of such notice, which may be made in person, or by mailing in a registered letter addressed to the insured at his post-office as given in or upon the policy, and no suspension, forfeiture or cancellation shall take effect until the time thus fixed and except as herein provided, anything in the policy, application or a separate agreement to the contrary notwithstanding. [18 G. A., ch. 210, §§ 1, 2.]

It appears that the legislature intended to provide for constructive notice by mail, to be completed either when the registered letter is mailed or as soon thereafter as it shall be received at the office of its destination by due course of mail: McKenna v. State Ins. Co., 73–453.

The time when the service of notice of forfeiture is complete is the time of mailing the letter in accordance with the provisions of the statute, and not the time when such letter would in due course of mail have reached its destination (arguendo): Ross v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 83–586; and see Holbrook v. Mill Owners' Mut. Ins. Co., 86–255.

The notice is complete when registration of the letter is made under the rules of the post-office department which require that not only shall receipt have been given therefor but that it shall have been numbered: Ross v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 61 N. W., 852.

A notice which did not advise the insured that if the payment was not made the policy would be suspended, held not sufficient to entitle the company to take advantage of a forfeiture on account of such non-payment: Marden v. Hotel Owners' Ins. Co., 85–584.

An insurance company seeking to declare a forfeiture of a policy by reason of the non-payment of the premium note must not only give the maker notice of the proposed suspension of his policy on account of such non-payment, but must also notify him of the amount necessary to pay the customary short rates, including the expense of taking the risk, up to the time the policy will be suspended, in order to cancel the policy: Boyd v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 70–325.

In a particular case, held, that an application by insured for extension of time, and the fact that it was not granted, did not waive the provision as to notice just referred to: Ibid.

The condition in a policy that it shall be suspended on failure of assured to pay the premium note cannot be disregarded except as provided by statute. This statutory provision simply prevents such condition taking effect until thirty days after the specified notice has been given: Harle v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 71–401.

In general as to these provisions, see Lewis v. Burlington Ins. Co., 71–97.

SEC. 1728. Cancellation of policy. At any time after the maturity of a premium, assessment or installment provided for in the policy, or any note or contract for the payment thereof, or after the suspension, forfeiture or cancellation of any policy or contract of insurance, the insured may pay to the company the customary short rates and costs of action, if one has been commenced or judgment rendered thereon, and may then, if he so elect, have his policy and all contracts or obligations connected therewith, whether in judgment or otherwise, canceled, and they and each of them thereafter shall be void; and in case of suspension, forfeiture or cancellation of any policy or contract of insurance, the assured shall not be liable for any greater amount than the short rates earned at the date of such suspension, forfeiture or cancellation and the costs herein provided. [Same, § 3.]

The right of assured to cancel the policy and recover back premiums paid in excess of customary short rates cannot be exercised by assigning to another the right to cancel such policy and collect the unearned premium. The assignment would avoid the policy and terminate the right to recover. Nor can such unearned premium be recovered after the policy has been rendered void by taking other insurance: Colby v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 66–577.

If the company elects to enforce a premium note instead of cancelling the policy for non-payment as herein provided, it thereby waives a stipulation in the policy that the insurance shall be forfeited on failure to pay the note as agreed. By accepting payment in pursuance of legal proceedings, even after the loss the company waives the right to avail itself of the condition of forfeiture: Bloom v. State Ins. Co., 62 N. W., 810.

It is optional with the company to allow a policy to remain uncanceled, and to accept payments when made, without waiving its right to insist upon prompt payment at any time thereafter: Morrow v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 84–256.

SEC. 1729. Short rates. The auditor of state shall prepare and publish a table of the short rates provided for in the two preceding sections, which, when published, shall be for the guidance of all companies covered in this chapter, and the rate to be given in the notice therein provided, and no greater sum than thus fixed shall be demanded or collected. A copy of said short rates shall be printed on or attached to each policy.

SEC. 1730. Policy restored—contract not valid. At any time before cancellation of the policy for non-payment of any premium, assessment or installment provided for therein, or in any note or contract for the payment thereof, or after action commenced or judgment rendered thereon, the insured may pay to the insurer the full amount due, including court costs if any, and from the date of such payment, or the collection of the judgment, the policy shall revive and be in full force and effect, provided such payment is made during the term of the policy and before a loss occurs. No provision, stipulation or agreement to the contrary in or independent of the policy or contract of insurance shall avoid or defeat the right of any insured to pay short rates and costs of action, if any, and have the policy and all contracts connected therewith, including judgments rendered thereon, canceled. [18 G. A., ch. 210, § 3.]

SEC. 1731. Examination—dissolution. The auditor of state shall, when he finds it expedient, appoint one or more persons, not officers, agents or stockholders of any insurance company doing business in the state, to examine into the affairs and condition of any such company incorporated or doing business therein, or make such examination himself, and the officers or agents thereof shall produce their books for the inspection of the examiners and otherwise assist therein, so far as they can do so; and in conducting the investigation they may examine under oath the officers or agents of any company, or others, relative to the business and condition of the company, and the result thereof shall be published in one or more papers in the state, when the auditor believes the public interest requires it. When it appears to the auditor from such examination that the assets and funds of any company incorporated in this state are reduced or impaired by its liabilities, as defined under the head of liabilities in the statement required by this chapter, more than twenty per cent. below the paid up capital stock required, he shall direct the officers thereof to require the stockholders to pay in the amount of such deficiency within such a period as he may designate in such requisition, or he shall communicate the fact to the attorney-general, who shall apply to the district court or if in vacation to one of judges thereof, for an order requiring the company to show cause why its business shall not be dissolved. The court or judge, as the case may be, shall thereupon proceed to hear the allegations and proofs of the respective parties; and in case it appears to its or his satisfaction that the assets and funds of said company are not sufficient, as aforesaid, or that the interest of the public requires it, it or he shall decree a dissolution of said company and a distribution of its effects, and appoint a receiver therefor. The application of the attorney-general may be by the court or judge sent to a referee to inquire into and report upon the facts stated therein, which report shall be made to the court or judge. [C. '73, § 1149.]

SEC. 1732. Requisition on stockholders. Any company receiving such a requisition from the auditor shall forthwith call upon its stockholders for such amounts as will make its paid up capital equal to the amount fixed by this chapter or the articles of incorporation of said company; and in case any stockholder shall refuse or neglect to pay the amount called for after notice personally given, or by advertisement in such time and manner as the auditor shall approve, it shall be lawful for the company to require the return of the original certificate of stock held by such stockholder, and in lieu thereof to issue new certificates for such number of shares as the said stockholder may be entitled to in the proportion that the ascertained value of the funds of the said company may be found to bear to its original capital, the value of such shares for which new certificates shall be issued to be ascertained under the direction of the auditor, the company paying for the fractional parts of shares, and the directors of such company may issue new stock and dispose of the same, and issue new certificates therefor, to an amount sufficient to make up the original capital of the company. In the event of additional losses accruing upon new risks, taken after the expiration of the period limited by the auditor in the aforesaid requisition for the filling up of the deficiency in the capital of such company, and before said deficiency shall have been made up, the directors shall be individually liable to the extent thereof. [C. '73, § 1150.]

SEC. 1733. Mutual companies—dissolution. If, upon such examination, it shall appear to the auditor that the assets of any company organized or operating upon the plan of mutual insurance under this chapter are insufficient to justify the continuance of such company in business, he shall proceed in relation to such company in the same manner as herein required in regard to stock companies; and the trustees or directors of such company are made personally liable for any losses which may be sustained upon risks taken after the expiration of the period limited by the auditor for filling up the deficiency in the assets or premium notes, and before such deficiency shall have been made up. [C.'73, § 1151.]

SEC. 1734. Transfers of stock pending investigation. Any transfer of the stock of any company organized under this chapter, made pending any investigation above required, shall not release the party making the transfer from any liability for losses which may have accrued previous to such transfer. [Same.]

SEC. 1735. Revocation of certificate of foreign company. The auditor of state shall be authorized to examine into the condition and affairs of any insurance company, as provided for in this chapter, doing business in this state, not organized under its laws, or cause such examination to be made by some person or persons appointed by him having no interest in any insurance company; and when it shall appear to his satisfaction that the affairs of any such company are in an unsound condition, he shall revoke the certificates granted in its behalf, and cause a notification thereof to be published in some newspaper of general circulation, published at the seat of government, and no agent or agents of such company after such notice shall issue policies or renew any previously issued. [C.'73, § 1152.]

SEC. 1736. Laws of other states—reciprocity. When, by the laws of any other state, any taxes, fines, penalties, licenses, fees, deposits of money, securities or other obligations or prohibitions are imposed, or would be imposed, on insurance companies of this state doing or that might seek to do business in such other state, or upon their agents therein, so long as such laws continue in force the same obligations and prohibitions of whatever kind shall be imposed upon all insurance companies of such other state doing business in this state or upon their agents here. [C. '73, § 1154.]

Section applied: State v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 77-648.

SEC. 1737. Certificate of auditor published. Every insurance company of the character provided for in this chapter, doing business in the state, organized under the laws of this or any other state or country, shall publish annually, before the first day of March, in two newspapers of general circulation, to be approved by the auditor of state, one of which shall be published at the seat of government, and, in case of companies organized in the state, one in the county where the principal office is located, a certificate from the auditor that such company has in all respects complied with the law of the state relating to insurance, and an affidavit of such publication made by the publisher or foreman of such newspaper shall be filed in the office of the auditor within thirty days from the date of such publication. Said certificate shall also contain a statement made up from the annual report of said company of the actual amount of paid up capital, the aggregate amount of assets and liabilities at the date of such report, together with the aggregate income and expenditures of such company for the preceding year as shown by said report. [C. '73, § 1155.]

SEC. 1738. False statement of assets. No company transacting the business of fire insurance within the state shall state or represent by advertisement in any newspaper, magazine or periodical, or by any sign, circular, card, policy of insurance or renewal certificate thereof or otherwise, any funds or assets to be in its possession and held available for the protection of holders of its policies unless so held, except the policy of insurance or certificate of renewal thereof may state as a single item the amount of capital set forth in the charter or articles of incorporation or association or deed of settlement under which it is authorized to transact business. [17 G. A., ch. 111, §§ 1, 3.]

SEC. 1739. Statement of capital and surplus. Every advertisement or public announcement, and every sign, circular or card issued or published by any foreign company transacting the business of fire insurance in the state, or by any officer, agent or representative thereof, which shall purport to make known its financial standing, shall exhibit the capital actually paid in in cash, and the amount of net surplus of assets over all its liabilities actually held and available for the payment of losses by fire and for the protection of holders of fire policies, and shall also exhibit the amount of net surplus of assets over all liabilities in the United States actually available for the payment of losses by fire and held in the United States for the protection of holders of fire policies in the United States, including in such liabilities the fund reserved for reinsurance of outstanding risks, and the same shall correspond with the latest verified statement made by the company or association to the auditor of state. No such company shall write, place or cause to be written or placed any policy or contract for insurance upon property situated or located in this state except through its resident agent or agents. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1740. Penalty. Any violation of the provisions of the two preceding sections shall for the first offense subject the company, association or individual guilty thereof to a penalty of five hundred dollars, to be recovered in the name of the state, with costs, in an action instituted by the county attorney, either in the county in which the company, association or individual is located or transacts business, or in the county where the offense is committed, and such penalty, when recovered, shall be paid into the school fund of the county in which action is brought. Every subsequent violation of said sections shall subject the company, association or individual to a penalty of one thousand dollars, to be sued for, recovered and disposed of in like manner. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1741. Copy of application. All insurance companies or associations shall, upon the issue or renewal of any policy, attach to such policy, or indorse thereon, a true copy of any application or representation of the assured which, by the terms of such policy, are made a part thereof, or of the contract of insurance, or referred to therein, or which may in any manner affect the validity of such policy. The omission so to do shall not render the policy invalid, but if any company or association neglects to comply with the requirements of this section it shall forever be precluded from pleading, alleging or proving any such application or representations, or any part thereof, or falsity thereof, or any parts thereof, in any action upon such policy, and the plaintiff in any such action shall not be required, in order to recover against such company or association, either to plead or prove such application or representation, but may do so at his option. [18 G. A., ch. 211, § 2.]

The provisions of this section are applicable to all kinds of insurance and policies, including those issued by benefit associations upon the mutual assessment plan: Newman v. Covenant Mut. Ins. Ass'n, 76–56; McConnell v. Iowa Mut. Aid Ass'n, 79–757. (See now § 1819.)

The requirements of this section as to attaching the application to or indorsing it upon the policy are applicable to fraternal associations acting in a dual character involving the element of insurance, as well as mutual benefit associations: Grimes v. Northwestern Legion of Honor, 66 N. W., 183. (See now § 1826.)

This and the preceding section of this act apply to all kinds of insurance and not merely to fire insurance: Cook v. Federal L. Ass'n, 74–746.

It is incompetent, in defense to an action upon a policy, to plead or prove statements made in the application, where such statements are not reduced to writing and a copy thereof is not attached to or indorsed upon the policy: Ellis v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 64–507. And see Wallace v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 66–139.

Where one premium note was given for two policies on the same property, one against loss by fire and lightning, and one against loss by tornado, and a copy of the note was attached to the former and not to the latter, held, that in an action on the tornado policy, non-payment of the premium note as required could not be relied on: Lewis v. Burlington Ins. Co., 80–259.

Where answers in the application are filled up by the agent taking such application from his own knowledge, the fact that a copy of the application is attached to the policy which is delivered to insured will not bind him to statements thus made, although he fails to notify the company of their falsity. The assured is not required to prove the statements made in the application to be true, and he is therefore not required to examine the copy of the application indorsed on the policy: Donnelly v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 70–693; and see Bennett v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 70–600.

The conditions of the policy itself may be shown, although they are not contained in an application a copy of which is attached to the policy. Thus a failure to disclose the state of the title may be a representation appearing in the policy itself and may be shown though not appearing in the application attached to the policy: McKinnon v. Mutual F. Ins. Co., 89-170.

The provisions of this section are broad enough to cover any renewal or reinstatement of the policy of insurance which has become invalid: Goodwin v. Provident Savings Life Assurance Society, 66 N. W., 157.

SEC. 1742. Evidence of value—proofs—action. In any action brought in any court in this state on any policy of insurance for the loss of any building so insured, the amount stated in the policy shall be received as prima facie evidence of the insurable value of the property at the date of the policy: provided, the insurance company or association issuing such policy may show the actual value of said property at date of policy, and any depreciation in the value thereof before the loss occurred; but the said insurance company or association shall be liable for the actual value of the property insured at the date of the loss, unless such value exceeds the amount stated in the policy. And in an action on such policy it shall only be necessary for the assured to prove the loss of the building insured, and that he has given the company or association notice in writing of such loss, accompanied by an affidavit stating the facts as to how the loss occurred, so far as they are within his knowledge, and the extent of his loss. [Same, § 3.]

Evidence of value: It is error to instruct the jury with reference to the prima facie fact of the value of the property as stated in the policy, as applicable to personal property: Warshawky v. Anchor Mut. F. Ins. Co., 67 N. W., 237.

A policy is not prima facie evidence as to the value of personal property insured. The provisions of this section as to presumption of value are applicable only to buildings: Joy v. Security F. Ins. Co., 83–12; Martin v. Capital Ins. Co., 85–643.

As to buildings covered by the insurance the burden is on the company to show that the property was not worth the amount for which it was insured: Des Moines Ice Co. v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 68 N. W., 600.

The law fixes prima facie the measure of recovery in case of loss of a building and it is immaterial in making out plaintiff's case to show what the kind of building was or the material of which it was constructed or how long it had been in use: Davis v. Anchor Mut. F. Ins. Co., 64 N. W., 687.

The policy being prima facie evidence of the value of the insured building, it is not incumbent upon the plaintiff in the first instance to prove such value, but evidence in respect to the value being introduced by the defendant, plaintiff may introduce evidence on that point in rebuttal: Martin v. Capital Ins. Co., 85–643.

Under particular facts, held, that the evidence as to the value of the property was sufficient, in connection with the prima facie evidence supplemented by the valuation stated in the policy, to support the recovery: Hagan v. Merchants', etc., Ins. Co., 81–321.

It seems that an appraisement agreement relating exclusively to the value of buildings can not be relied on by reason of the terms of this statute to prevent the bringing of suit on the policy: Harrison v. German American F. Ins. Co., 67 Fed., 577.

Proofs of loss; notice: Proofs of loss which comply with the requirements of the statute are sufficient although they do not meet the requirements of the policy. Technical objections founded upon unreasonable requirements in the policy will not be considered: Warshawky v. Anchor Mut. F. Ins. Co., 67 N. W., 237.

Proofs of loss in a particular case which did not give an account of the loss nor state how the fire originated nor state the actual cash value of the property destroyed were held not to constitute such proofs of loss as were required by the statute or by the terms of the policy: Brock v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 64 N. W., 685.

While it may be sufficient in a suit on a policy to allege in general the performance of the conditions of such policy (see §§ 3626, 3628) and the failure to perform any particular condition must then be specifically alleged by defendant, yet if the plaintiff sets out specifically the furnishing of the proofs required, and the defendant denies in general the allegations of the petition an issue as to the sufficiency of the proofs is raised: Ibid.

Where a policy of insurance required that, if loss should occur, the assured should give the company immediate notice of the fact, and that as soon as possible after the fire proofs of loss under oath should be prepared and sent to the company, and in an action on the policy the petition showed that the proof of loss was not given within the time or in the manner required by statute, held, that a demurrer to the petition should have been sustained: Von Genechtin v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 75-544.

Where the agent of an insurance company informed the assured that the loss would be adjusted, but it was not shown that such agent had any authority to adjust losses or bind the defendant in the adjustment of losses, held, that the promise of the agent that the loss would be adjusted was not a waiver of the condition as to proofs of loss: Ibid.

In an action upon a policy of insurance where the petition did not show the lapse of time for the maturity of the claim required by the policy nor that required by the statute, held, that it was sufficient ground for demurrer: Ibid.

An instruction that the jury must find that the notice of loss was given to the company within a reasonable time, although the policy required the notice to be given forthwith, held not erroneous, the terms being so nearly synonymous that no prejudice could have resulted therefrom: Pennypacker v. Capital Ins. Co., 80-56.

The proofs of loss are not admissible on the trial to establish the facts connected with the loss; but in a particular case, held, that they were admissible to prove by an indorsement thereon the time of their receipt by the company: Lewis v. Burlington Ins. Co., 80-259.

Formal proof of service of the proofs of loss is not required. All that is necessary is that they be given or rendered to the company; and if found in the possession of the company and produced by it upon the trial that is sufficient: Runkle v. Hartford Ins. Co., 68 N. W., 712.

Where there is an issue as to whether notice and proofs of loss were given and there is no evidence in behalf of plaintiff on such question, it is error to submit the question to the jury: Heusinkveld v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 64 N. W., 769.

Where the policy required the giving of notice to the secretary, held, that a notice to the company was a sufficient compliance: Lewis v. Burlington Ins. Co., 80-259.

Evidence that notice and proofs of loss were deposited in the mail is admissible as showing that they were received, although their receipt is denied by the officers of the company: Pennypacker v. Capital Ins. Co., 80-56.

The notice and affidavit required by this section are solely for the benefit of the insurer; and if, without objection to the sufficiency thereof, the company advises insured that it will proceed to settle the loss, it thereby waives any objection on account of defect in such proofs: Harris v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 85-238.

Where insured stated by letter to the company that he had no knowledge of the particulars of the fire and its origin, but did not comply with the requirement as to the proof by affidavit, and the company made no objection on that ground, held, that it thereby waived its right to further proof: Green v. Des Moines F. Ins. Co., 84-135.

It is not necessary that the notice and affidavit shall be attached together and delivered at the same time, but it is sufficient that they shall be both in the hands of the company within the time prescribed for giving notice: Russell v. Fidelity F. Ins. Co., 84-93.

As to whether a stipulation in the policy requiring an appraisement as a condition precedent to the bringing of action thereunder would be valid, in view of the statute, quære: Zalesky v. Home Ins. Co., 71 N.W., 566.

Waiver: Waiver of proofs of loss cannot be shown under an allegation that they have been furnished: Welsh v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 71-337.

Under an allegation of the furnishing of proofs of loss evidence of the waiver of such proofs is not admissible: Heusinkveld v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 64 N. W., 769.

Where insured was told by the secretary on requesting blank proofs of loss that such proofs were unnecessary and that there was nothing more for the owner to do but wait until he heard from the company, held, that this constituted a waiver of proofs of loss. Scott v. Security F. Ins. Co., 66 N. W., 1054.

Requirements of the statute and of policies of insurance as to notice and proof of loss may be waived by the insurer through its authorized agents. Held, under the facts of this case, that the adjuster of the company bound the company by his acts and statements so far as they were authorized. The general manager of an insurance company, having full charge of its business in certain territory, may waive proofs of loss and notice, and also may waive a written indorsement required by the terms of the policy: Ruthven v. American F. Ins. Co., 71 N. W., 574.

By furnishing proofs of loss the insured does not waive or abandon the right to rely on an alleged waiver of such proofs. He may plead both the fact of furnishing proofs and the fact of waiver, and rely upon whichever defense the evidence establishes: Warshawky v. Anchor Mut. F. Ins. Co., 67 N. W., 237.

Under an allegation that proofs of loss have been furnished, it is not competent to introduce evidence showing the waiver of such proofs: Heusinkveld v. Capital Ins. Co., 64 N. W., 594.

The provisions as to the prima facie effect of the value of buildings as stated in the policy is applicable in cases where there has been a waiver of proofs of loss as well as where proofs of loss have been made. Scott v. Security F. Ins. Co., 66 N. W., 1054.

It may be that notice can be given to the agent who issued the policy, but such an agent would not have authority to waive the affidavit of loss: Ruthven v. American F. Ins. Co., 92–316.

A special agent authorized to adjust losses could not delegate his authority to an adjuster of another company so that a waiver by the latter of proofs would be binding: Ibid.

SEC. 1743. Conditions. Any condition or stipulation in an application, policy or contract of insurance, making the policy void before the loss occurs, shall not prevent recovery thereon by the insured, if it shall be shown by the plaintiff that the failure to observe such provision or the violation thereof did not contribute to the loss: provided, however, that any condition or stipulation referring to any other insurance, valid or invalid, or to vacancy of the insured premises or the title or ownership of the property insured, or to liens or incumbrances thereon created by voluntary act of the insured and within his control, or to the suspension or forfeiture of the policy during default or failure to pay any written obligation given to the insurance company for the premium, or to the assignment or transfer of such policy of insurance before loss without the consent of the insurance company, or to the removal of the property insured, or to a change in the occupancy or use of the property insured, if such removal, change or use makes the risk more hazardous, or to the fraud of the insured in the procurement of the contract of insurance, shall not be changed or affected by this provision. No recovery on a policy or contract of insurance shall be defeated for failure of the insured to comply, after a loss occurs, with any arbitration or appraisement stipulation as to fixing value of property, unless it be pleaded and proved that the insurance company gave written notice to the insured of its election to determine the amount of loss by appraisement or arbitration as provided in the policy, and thereafter the insured failed to comply with such requirements. No arbitration shall take place except where the property was situated at the time of loss. Any agreement, stipulation or condition in any policy or contract of insurance by which any insurance company reserves or has the right to rebuild shall be void and of no effect in case of total loss. Nothing herein shall be construed to change the limitations or restrictions respecting the pleading or proving of any defense by any insurance company to which it is subject by law. The provisions of this section shall apply to all contracts of insurance on real and personal property.

SEC. 1744. Time of bringing action—provisions not affected by contract. The notice of loss and proof thereof required in the preceding section, and the notice and proof of loss under oath in case of insurance on personal property, shall be given within sixty days from the time loss occurred, and no action for such loss shall be begun within forty days after such notice and proofs have been given to the company, nor shall the time within which action shall be brought be limited to less than one year from the time when a cause of action for the loss accrues. No provisions of any policy or contract to the contrary shall affect the provisions of this and the three preceding sections. [18 G. A., ch. 211, § 3.]

The limitation contained in this section as to the time for bringing the action pertains to the remedy, and cannot be controlled by stipulations in the policy of insurance: Vore v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 76–548; Wilhelmi v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 86–326; Worley v. State Ins. Co., 91–150.

The receipt of proofs of loss by the company and the assertion by it that the policy is void cannot be regarded as a waiver of this statutory provision as to the time in which action may be brought: Vore v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 76–548.

The fact that another action on the policy would be barred by reason of limitations in the policy as to time of bringing action will not estop the company from insisting that an action commenced within the prescribed period is prematurely brought, and that plaintiff cannot recover therein: Ibid.

These provisions as to the time when action may be brought for the loss, are applicable to actions for loss of goods as well as for loss by reason of damages to the realty: Wilhelmi v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 86-326.

Action cannot be brought before the expiration of the time fixed, even on the refusal of the company to pay: Quinn v. Capital Ins. Co., 71-615; Finster v. Merchants & Bankers Ins. Co., 65 N. W., 1004.

Making proofs and giving notice within the prescribed time constitute conditions precedent to the right of action: Ruthven v. American F. Ins. Co., 92-316.

The requirement of the statute as to the time within which an action on the policy may not be brought cannot be waived and a suit within the prescribed period is premature: Blood v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 69 N. W., 1141.

The effect of this provision as to the time when action may not be brought is to fix the time when the loss becomes due and payable. It does not affect the maturity of the contract, but is a legislative prohibition of the action before the time specified, and if action is brought before the expiration thereof it is prematurely brought and must fail. The objection may be raised by motion in arrest of judgment, without being pleaded as a defense: Taylor v. Merchants' & Bankers' Ins. Co., 83-402.

Where an amended petition properly setting out the cause of action, was filed before the expiration of the time for bringing action and demurred to, held, that the company had sufficient notice of the amendment so that the cause of action set up therein must be deemed to have been brought within the proper time: Jamison v. State Ins. Co., 85-229.

This section with reference to time after which action may be brought is applicable to life insurance: Christie v. Life Indemnity, etc., Co., 82-360.

Therefore, held, that an action commenced on a certificate in a benefit company within sixty days after presenting notice of loss was prematurely brought and would be abated: Ibid.

Also held, that these provisions were not unconstitutional on the ground that the subject matter was not expressed in the title or that the act embraced more than one subject, or that it was not of uniform operation: Ibid.

If defendant claims that by reason of the proofs of loss not being sufficient the action is prematurely brought, he should set that out in a distinct division of his answer and not in connection with the defense that the defendant cannot recover by reason of defective proofs: McComb v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 83-247.

The fact that a suit had been prematurely brought and is subsequently dismissed on that ground, does not entitle the plaintiff to institute another suit after the time limited by the policy for suing thereon, even though the second suit is within six months of the dismissal of the first. Section 3455 has no application to such a case: Heusinkveld v. Capital Ins. Co., 64 N. W., 594; Harrison v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 71 N. W., 220.

The person who thus maintains an action prematurely brought is negligent, within the provisions of § 3455: Wilhelmi v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 68 N. W., 782.

Where an action was brought in proper time upon a policy of insurance, but subsequently, on discovery that the property was misdescribed, such action was dismissed and an action in equity to reform the policy and recovery thereunder was commenced within a reasonable time, held, that such second action would not be barred under the provisions of the policy with reference to time for bringing action thereon: Jacobs v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 86-145.

The objection that the suit was prematurely brought may be raised by motion in arrest of judgment and is not waived by failing to interpose it earlier in the progress of the case: Woodcock v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 66 N. W., 764.

A provision in the policy for arbitration in case of disagreement as to the amount of loss does not make an arbitration a condition precedent to the bringing of an action: Lesure Lumber Co. v. Mutual F. Ins. Co., 70 N. W., 761.

But as to whether appraisement may be made an absolute condition to the right of action, quære: Zalesky v. Home Ins. Co., 71 N. W., 566.

Where the court acquired jurisdiction of the action only by appearance of the defendant, held, that the action was to be deemed commenced only when defendant appeared: Lesure Lumber Co. v. Mutual F. Ins. Co., 70 N. W., 761.

The notice and proofs of loss herein contemplated include the affidavits showing the facts in regard to the loss which must accompany such notice and proofs and mere notice is not sufficient to determine the commencement of the period within which suit cannot be brought: Wilhelmi v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 86-326.

Where a petition in an action on a policy of fire insurance stated that the loss occurred "on or about April 14, 1886," and that notice and proofs of loss were given "on or about June 19, 1886," held, that the petition did not show that more than sixty days had intervened between the loss and the notice and proof thereof: District Tp. v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 75-647.

The time of limitation fixed by the policy is not extended where proofs are neither furnished nor waived: Cornett v. Phenix Ins. Co., 67-388.

SEC. 1745. Forms of policies. The auditor of state shall examine the form of policies issued or proposed to be issued by any insurance company doing business within the state, and shall refuse to authorize it to do business or to renew its permission to do business when the form of policy issued or proposed to be issued does not provide for the cancellation of the same at the request of the insured upon equitable terms, and the return to the insured of any premium paid in excess of the customary short rates for the insurance up to the time of cancellation, or the release of the insured from any liability beyond such short rates, or for losses after the cancellation of the policy if the insurance be in a mutual company; and in case any company or association shall issue any policies not containing such provision, it shall be the duty of the auditor to revoke the authority of such company or association to do business. [17 G. A., ch. 39, § 1.]

SEC. 1746. Other insurance—prorating. Any provision, contract or stipulation contained in any policy of insurance, issued by any insurance company doing business in the state under the provisions of this chapter, providing or stipulating that the insured shall maintain insurance on any property covered by such policy to any extent, or shall to any extent be an insurer of the property insured in such policy, or shall bear any portion of the loss on the property insured, shall be void; and the auditor of state shall refuse to authorize any such company to do business or to renew the authority or the certificate of any such company when the form of policy issued or proposed to be issued contains any such provision, contract or stipulation. No condition or stipulation in a policy of insurance fixing the amount of liability or recovery under such policy with reference to prorating with other insurance on property insured shall be valid except as to other valid and collectible insurance, any agreement to the contrary notwithstanding. [25 G. A., ch. 31.]

SEC. 1747. Doing business without compliance. Every insurance company organized under the laws of or doing business in this state shall conform to all the provisions of this chapter and to other laws of this state, whether now existing or hereafter enacted, applicable thereto, and when necessary any existing company shall change its charter and by-laws so as to conform thereto, by a vote of a majority of its board of directors. Any officer, manager or agent of any insurance company or association who, with knowledge that it is doing business in an unlawful manner, or is insolvent, solicits insurance with said company or association, or receives applications therefor, or does any other act or thing towards procuring or receiving any new business for such company or association, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for every such act, on conviction thereof, shall be adjudged to pay a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment. [C. '73, § 1147.]

This does not prevent the officers of a company which has not complied with the law from reinsuring their risks in another company and transferring to such company the premium notes received therefor: Davenport F. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 50–619.

SEC. 1748. Officers punished. Any president, secretary or other officer of any company organized under the laws of this state, or any officer or person doing or attempting to do business in this state for any insurance company organized either within or without this state, failing to comply with any of the requirements of this chapter, or violating any of the provisions thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, and be imprisoned in the county jail for a period not less than thirty days nor more than six months. [Same.]

SEC. 1749. Advertisements—soliciting agents. Every agent of any insurance company shall, in all advertisements of such agency, publish the location of the company, giving the name of the city, town or village in which it is located, and the state or government under the laws of which it is organized. Any person who shall hereafter solicit insurance or procure application therefor shall be held to be the soliciting agent of the insurance company or association issuing a policy on such application or on a renewal thereof, anything in the application, policy or contract to the contrary notwithstanding [C. '73, § 1148.]

SEC. 1750. Who deemed agent. The term agent used in the foregoing sections of this chapter shall include any other person who shall in any manner directly or indirectly transact the insurance business for any insurance company complying with the laws of this state. Any officer, agent or representative of an insurance company doing business in this state who may solicit insurance, procure applications, issue policies, adjust losses or transact the business generally of such companies, shall be held to be the agent of such insurance company with authority to transact all business within the scope of his employment, anything in the application, policy, contract, by-laws or articles of incorporation of such company to the contrary notwithstanding. [18 G. A., ch. 211, § 1.]

One soliciting insurance and taking applications therefor is the agent of the company issuing the policy, without regard to any provisions found in the policy: Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Chamberlain, 132 U. S., 304.

This provision is applicable to life insurance companies: Ibid.

It is a matter of general knowledge that the soliciting agent as a rule prepares the application for the owner, and what he does in that respect is within his powers, and binds his principal: Jamison v. State Ins. Co., 85–229.

An insurance company is chargeable with knowledge of facts made known to its agent at the time of taking the application, and an instruction requiring more proof of the agent's authority than was necessary, held not prejudicial to defendant, although erroneous: Key v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 77–174.

Under these provisions, held, that the agent of one company, who, by authority of his customer, applied to an agent of another company authorized to issue policies, for insurance on the property of his customer, was the agent for the company issuing the policy, and a mistake as between him and the agent issuing the policy was chargeable to the company, and not to the person for whose benefit the policy was issued: St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Shaver, 76–282.

If the laws of the state make the agent soliciting or negotiating insurance the agent of the company issuing the policy no condition in the policy in terms making such agent the agent of the assured only, will be valid: Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 63 N. W., 565.

Where an insurance agent in Wisconsin negotiated for insurance on property in that state through an insurance agent in another state without designating the company in which the insurance should be taken and the second agent placed the insurance in a foreign company, held, that the first agent became, under the laws of Wisconsin, the agent of the company in which the insurance was placed in such sense that notice of the suit against the company might be served upon such agent so as to give the Wisconsin courts jurisdiction of such suit: Ibid.

SEC. 1751. Provisions applicable to associations. The provisions of the foregoing sections relative to insurance companies shall apply to all such companies, partnerships, associations or individuals, whether incorporated or not. [C. '73, § 1147.]

SEC. 1752. Fees. There shall be paid to the auditor of state for services required under the provisions of this chapter the following fees, which shall be accounted for by him in the same manner as other fees received in the discharge of the duties of his office:

1. For filing and examination of the first application of any company and accompanying articles of incorporation for organization in this state, and the issuing of the permission to do business, ten dollars;
2. For filing application of any foreign company for certificate to do business in this state, and the accompanying certified copy of charter or article of incorporation, twenty-five dollars;
3. For permission to foreign company to do business in this state, or certified copy thereof, two dollars;
4. For filing annual statement of a domestic company, and issuing the renewal of the permission required by law to authorize continuance in business, three dollars;
5. For filing annual statement of a foreign company, and issuing renewal of permission, twenty dollars;
6. For each certificate of authority to agent of foreign company, two dollars;
7. For each certificate of authority to agent of domestic company, fifty cents;

8. For official examination of either domestic or foreign company, the actual expense incurred;

9. For every copy of any paper filed, the sum of twenty cents per folio, and for affixing the official seal to such copy and certifying the same, one dollar. [C. '73, § 1153.]

SEC. 1753. Expenses of examination. The necessary expenses of any examination of any insurance company made or ordered to be made by the auditor of state under this chapter shall be certified to by him, and paid on his requisition by the company so examined; and in case of failure of the company to make such payment, the auditor shall suspend such company from doing business in this state until such expenses are paid. If such expenses are not paid by the company, they shall be audited by the executive council and paid out of the state treasury. But in no case shall any foreign insurance company be examined except by order of executive council. [16 G. A., ch. 37; C. '73, § 1156.]

SEC. 1754. Combinations. It shall be unlawful for two or more fire insurance companies doing business in this state, or for the officers, agents or employes of such companies, to make or enter into any combination or agreement relating to the rates to be charged for insurance, the amount of commissions to be allowed agents for procuring the same, or the manner of transacting the fire insurance business within this state; and any such company, officer, agent or employe violating this provision shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall pay a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for each offense, to be recovered in the name of the state for the use of the permanent school fund. [26 G. A., ch. 22, § 1.]

SEC. 1755. Revocation of authority. The auditor of state is authorized to summon before him, for examination under oath, any officer, agent or employe of any such company suspected of violating any of the provisions of the preceding section, and, on complaint to him in writing by two or more residents of this state charging such company under oath upon their knowledge or belief with violating the provisions of the preceding section, he shall summon any officer, agent or employe of said company before him for examination under oath; if upon such examination, and that of any other witness produced and examined, he shall determine that such company is guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of the preceding section, or if any such officer, agent or employe after being duly summoned shall fail to appear or submit to examination, the auditor shall forthwith issue an order revoking the authority of such company to transact business within this state, and it shall not thereafter be permitted to do the business of fire insurance in this state at any time within one year therefrom. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1756. Appeal. Either party may appeal from the decision of the auditor, made pursuant to the preceding section, to the district court of the county where the same was made, within twenty days from the time of the rendition of such decision, by serving a written notice of such appeal on the opposite party and on the auditor, and filing with the clerk of said court a good and sufficient bond for the payment of all costs on the appeal in case the decision shall be affirmed. On such appeal said court shall try the case de novo, as equitable causes are tried, and on such evidence as either party may produce, and may reverse, modify or affirm the decision of the auditor. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1757. Evidence. The statements and declarations made or testimony given by any such officer, agent or employe in the investigation before the auditor, or upon the hearing and trial before the district court, as provided in the two preceding sections, shall not be used against the person making the same in any criminal prosecution against him. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1758. Insurance in unauthorized companies. No action shall be maintained in any court in the state upon any policy or contract of fire insurance issued upon any property situated in the state by any company, association, partnership, individual or individuals that have not been authorized by the auditor of state to transact such insurance business, unless it shall be shown that the insurer or insured, within six months after the issuing of such policy or contract of insurance, has paid into the state treasury two and one-half per cent. of the gross premium paid or agreed to be paid for such policy or contract of insurance. [26 G. A., ch. 23.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF MUTUAL FIRE, TORNADO AND HAILSTORM ASSESSMENT INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS.

SECTION 1759. For what purposes. Any number of persons may, without regard to the provisions of the preceding chapter, enter into contracts to and with each other for their insurance from loss or damage from fire, tornadoes, lightning, hailstorms, cyclones or windstorms, but such associations of persons shall in no case insure any property not owned by one of their own number, except such school or church property within the territory in which they do business as may be approved, and the reinsurance of risks of similar associations. [22 G. A., ch. 93; 20 G. A., ch. 11; 17 G. A., ch. 104; 16 G. A., ch. 103; C. '73, § 1160.]

Under § 1160 of Code of '73, mutual companies were contemplated which should not be subject to other provisions of the general chapter on insurance: Corey v. Sherman, 64 N. W., 828.

Where the articles of incorporation showed that the company was organized to do a mutual insurance business and insure only the property of its members, held, that the articles contained no authority to insure the property of any one not a member, and that the issuance of policies of insurance on the stock plan was invalid: Ibid.

Even though the relation between such mutual association and a member thereof is a personal one, not passing to the legal representative, yet the association may ratify and confirm it in the hands of the personal representative of the deceased member, and will be held to do so if it makes assessments of such personal representative as a member: Harl v. Pottawattamie County Mut. F. Ins. Co., 74–39.

Companies organized to do business on the mutual plan cannot issue policies of insurance on the stock plan (§ 1690), and the members of a mutual company are therefore not liable for the payment of losses under such policies: Corey v. Sherman, 64 N. W., 828.

Where it is not required by the articles and by-laws, notice of assessment need not be given before the assessment is made: Ibid.

The members of a mutual insurance company are presumed to have knowledge of its articles of incorporation and by-laws, and general misstatements as to the solvency of the company and its method of doing business will not constitute such fraud as to relieve the members from their obligation to pay assessments on their deposit notes: Ibid.

SEC. 1760. County and state associations. Any association incorporated under the laws of this state for the purpose of furnishing insurance as provided for in this chapter, doing business only within the county in which is situated the town or city named in its articles of incorporation as its principal place of business, or the counties contiguous thereto, shall, for the purposes of this chapter, be deemed a county mutual assessment association; all other associations operating hereunder shall, for the purposes of this chapter, be deemed state mutual assessment associations.

SEC. 1761. When authorized to do business. No association organized for the purpose of doing business under this chapter shall issue policies until applications for insurance to the amount of one hundred thousand dollars have been made if the same be a state mutual assessment association, and fifty thousand dollars if the same be a county mutual assessment association, and their articles of incorporation and form of policy submitted to the auditor of state, and a certificate of approval received from him.

SEC. 1762. Annual report. Each association doing business under the provisions of this chapter shall annually, in January, report to the auditor of state the following facts:

1. Name and objects of company;
2. Place of doing business;
3. Names of president and secretary;
4. Address of president and secretary;
5. Date of commencing business;
6. Amount of risks in force at beginning of year;
7. Amount of risks written during year;
8. Amount of risks expired and canceled during the year;
9. Amount of risks in force at the end of the year;
10. Amount of losses paid during the year;
11. Amount received by agents for services during the year;
12. Amount received by officers and employes during the year;
13. Amount of other expenses;
14. Total expenses during the year;
15. Amount of losses adjusted but not yet paid;
16. Number and amount of losses resisted or in litigation;
17. Cost per thousand during the year;
18. Cost per thousand for the past five years;
19. The amount of receipts from assessments;
20. Receipts from all other sources. [17 G. A., ch. 104; C.'73, § 1160.]

SEC. 1763. Publication. The report referred to in the preceding section shall be tabulated by the auditor, the county companies, the state companies, and the companies doing an exclusive tornado or an exclusive hailstorm business, being separately classified and published by him in his annual report on insurance, one copy of which shall be sent by him to each such company. [17 G. A., ch. 39.]

SEC. 1764. Fees—certificates. Such associations shall pay the same fees for annual reports and annual certificates of authority as are required to be paid by domestic companies organized and doing business under the preceding chapter, which certificate shall expire March 1st of the year following the date of its issue. [17 G. A., ch. 104; C.'73, § 1160.]

SEC. 1765. Fees and assessments. Such associations may collect policy and survey fees and such assessments as may be provided for in their articles of incorporation and by-laws, and provide for such expenses and losses as may be necessary in the conduct of their business. [Same.]

SEC. 1766. Inquiries by auditor—examinations—expenses. The auditor of state may address inquiries to any association in relation to its doings and condition, and any association so addressed shall promptly reply, in writing, thereto. And the auditor of state, whenever he may deem it necessary, may personally, or by some person or persons not officers, agents or stockholders of any insurance company doing business in the state, to be designated by him, examine the conditions, affairs, character, business methods and books of any state association operating under this chapter, at the home office. If the auditor appoints some one not receiving a regular salary in his office to make the examination provided for in this section, he shall be entitled to receive five dollars per day for his services, in addition to his actual traveling and hotel expenses, but if a regular employe of his office, he shall be paid only his actual traveling and hotel expenses, to be paid by the association examined, or by the state upon the approval of the executive council, if the association fails to pay the same. If it should appear to the satisfaction of the auditor, after due examination, that the affairs of any such association are in an unsound condition, or that it is doing an unauthorized business, he shall revoke its certificate of authority. Receiving new business after the revocation of its certificate will subject each of the officers of said company or association to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months.

SEC. 1767. State companies—bonds of officers. Any state company or association contemplated by this chapter, before being authorized to do business in the state, shall require its secretary and treasurer to each give bond in such sum as the directors shall deem sufficient, which bond shall be given to the association, and shall not be for a less sum than ten thousand dollars, and which bond, after being approved by the president of such company or association and the auditor of state, shall be deposited with the auditor of state, to be security for the faithful performance of the duties of the secretary and treasurer in handling the funds of such company or association. Should the auditor consider the surety on said bonds, or the amount thereof, insufficient, he may require additional security to be furnished or the amount of the bond to be increased within thirty days after notice has been given to the association, and, on failure to give such additional surety or increase the bond, the auditor may revoke its certificate.

CHAPTER 6.

OF LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES.

SECTION 1768. On level premium plan. Every life insurance company upon the level premium or the natural premium plan, created under the laws of this or any other state or country, shall, before issuing policies in the state, comply with the provisions of this chapter applicable to such companies. [C.'73, § 1161.]

SEC. 1769. Stock companies—capital. Stock companies organized under the laws of this state shall have not less than one hundred thousand dollars of capital subscribed, twenty-five per cent. of which shall be paid up and invested in bonds of the United States or this state, or in bonds and mortgages upon unincumbered real estate in the state, worth, exclusive of improvements, at least double the sum loaned thereon, which securities shall be deposited with the auditor of state, and upon such deposit, and evidence by affidavit or otherwise satisfactory to the auditor that the capital is all subscribed in good faith, and that the company is the actual and unqualified owner of the securities representing the paid up capital, he shall issue to such company the certificate hereinafter provided for, but no part of the twenty-five per cent. aforesaid shall be loaned to any stockholder or officer of the company. The remainder of such capital shall be paid within such time as the directors or trustees of the company may order, and until paid it shall be secured by the notes of the stockholders of the company. [C.'73, § 1162.]

SEC. 1770. Mutual companies—conditions. Level premium and natural premium life insurance companies organized under the laws of this state upon the mutual plan shall, before issuing any policies, have actual applications on at least two hundred and fifty lives for an average amount of one thousand dollars each, a list of which, giving the name, age, residence, amount of insurance, and annual premium of each applicant shall be filed with the auditor of state, and a deposit made with him of an amount equal to three-fifths of the whole annual premium on said applications, in cash or the securities required by the foregoing section; and on compliance with the provisions of this section, the auditor shall issue to such mutual company the certificate hereinafter prescribed. [C.'73, § 1163.]

SEC. 1771. Stock or premium notes. No note shall be accepted as part of the capital of a stock company, nor as a premium note for the purpose of organizing a mutual company, unless accompanied by a certificate of the clerk of the district court or other court of record, of the county in which the person executing it resides, to the effect that the person making it is in his opinion pecuniarily good and responsible therefor in property not exempt from execution.

SEC. 1772. Foreign companies—capital or surplus—investments. No company incorporated by or organized under the laws of any other state or government shall transact business in this state unless it is possessed of the actual amount of capital required of any company organized by the laws of this state, or, if it be a mutual company, of surplus equal in amount thereto, and the same is invested in bonds of the United States or of this state, or in interest paying bonds, when they are at or above par, of the state in which the company is located, or of some other state, or in notes or bonds secured by mortgages on unincumbered real estate within this or the state where such company is located, worth double the amount loaned thereon, which securities shall, at the time, be on deposit with the superintendent of insurance, auditor, controller or chief financial officer of the state by whose laws the company is incorporated, or of some other state, and the auditor of this state is furnished with a certificate of such officer, under his official seal, that he as such officer holds in trust and on deposit for the benefit of all the policy holders of such company the securities above mentioned. This certificate shall embrace the items of security so held, and show that such officer is satisfied that such securities are worth one hundred thousand dollars. Nothing herein contained shall invalidate the agency of any company incorporated in another state by reason of its having exchanged the bonds or securities so deposited with such officer for other bonds or securities authorized by this chapter, or by reason of its having drawn its interest and dividends on the same. [C. '73, § 1164.]

SEC. 1773. Annual statement. The president or vice-president and secretary or actuary or a majority of the directors of each company organized hereunder shall annually, by the first day of March, prepare under oath and file in the office of the auditor of state a statement of its affairs for the year terminating on the thirty-first day of December preceding. Showing:

1. The name of the company and where located;
2. The names of officers;
3. The amount of capital, if a stock company;
4. The amount of capital paid in, if a stock company;
5. The value of real estate owned by the company;
6. The amount of cash on hand;
7. The amount of cash deposited in banks, giving the name of the bank or banks;
8. The amount of cash in the hands of agents, and in the course of transmission;
9. The amount of bank stock, with the name of each bank, giving par and market value of the same;
10. The amount of bonds of the United States, and all other bonds and securities, giving names and amounts, with the par and market value of each kind;
11. The amount of loans secured by first mortgage on real estate, and where such real estate is situated;
12. The amount of all other bonds, loans, how secured, and the rate of interest;
13. The amount of premium notes and their value on policies in force, if a mutual company;
14. The amount of notes given for unpaid stock, and their value in detail, if a stock company;
15. The amount of assessments unpaid on stock or premium notes;
16. The amount of interest due and unpaid;
17. The amount of all other securities;
18. The amount of losses due and unpaid;
19. The amount of losses adjusted but not due;
20. The amount of losses unadjusted;

21. The amount of claims for losses resisted;
22. The amount of money borrowed and evidences thereof;
23. The amount of dividends unpaid on stock;
24. The amount of dividends unpaid on policies;
25. The amount required to safely reinsure all outstanding risks;
26. The amount of all other claims against the company;
27. The amount of net cash premiums received;
28. The amount of notes received for premiums;
29. The amount of interest received from all sources;
30. The amount received from all other sources;
31. The amount paid for losses;
32. The amount of dividends paid to policy holders, and the amount to stockholders, if a stock company;
33. The amount of commissions and salaries paid to agents;
34. The amount paid to officers for salaries and other compensation;
35. The amount paid for taxes;
36. The amount of all other payments and expenditures;
37. The greatest amount insured on any one life;
38. The amount deposited in other states or territories as security for policy holders therein, stating the amount in each state or territory;
39. The amount of premiums received in this state during the year;
40. The amount paid for losses in this state during the year;
41. The whole number of policies issued during the year, with the amount of insurance effected thereby, and total amount of risk;
42. All other items of information necessary to enable the auditor to correctly estimate the cash value of policies, or to judge of the correctness of the valuation thereof. [15 G. A., ch. 2, § 2; C. '73, § 1167.]

SEC. 1774. Valuation of policies. As soon as practicable after the filing of such statement, the auditor shall ascertain the net cash value of every policy in force upon the basis of the American table of mortality and four and one-half per cent. interest, or actuaries' combined experience table of mortality and four per cent. interest, in all companies organized under the laws of this state. For the purpose of making such valuation he may employ a competent actuary, who shall be paid by the company for which the service is rendered; but the company may make such valuation and it shall be received by the auditor upon satisfactory proof of its correctness. The net cash value of all policies in force in any such company being ascertained, the auditor shall notify it of the amount, and within thirty days thereafter the officers thereof shall deposit with the auditor the amount of the ascertained valuation in the securities specified in section eighteen hundred and six, chapter eight, of this title. No stock company organized under the laws of this state shall be required to make such deposit until the cash value of the policies in force, as ascertained by the auditor, exceeds the amount deposited by it as capital. [21 G. A., ch. 169; 17 G. A., ch. 47; C. '73, § 1169.]

This section recognizes the existence of a debt from the company to its policy-holders: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74–178.

SEC. 1775. Annual certificate. On receipt of such deposit and statement, and the statement and evidence of investment of foreign companies, all of which shall be renewed annually, by the first day of March, the auditor shall issue a certificate setting forth the corporate name of the company, its home office, that it has fully complied with the laws of the state and is authorized to transact the business of life insurance for the ensuing year, which certificate shall expire on the first day of April of the ensuing year, or sooner upon thirty days' notice given by the auditor of the next annual valuation of its policies. Such certificate shall be renewed annually, upon the renewal of the deposit and statement by a domestic company, or of the statement and evidence of investment by a foreign company, and compliance with the conditions above required, and be subject to revocation as the original certificate. [15 G. A., ch. 2, § 3; C. '73, § 1170.]

SEC. 1776. Penalty—dissolution. Upon a failure of any company organized under the laws of this state to make the deposit or file the statement in the time herein stated, the auditor shall notify the attorney-general of the default, who shall at once apply to the district court of the county where the home office of such company is located, if the court is in session, if not, to any judge thereof, for an order requiring the company to show cause upon reasonable notice, to be fixed by the court or judge, as the case may be, why its business shall not be discontinued. If, upon the hearing, no sufficient cause is shown, the court shall decree its dissolution. Companies organized and chartered by the laws of a foreign state or country, failing to file the evidence of deposit and statement within the time fixed, shall forfeit and pay the sum of three hundred dollars, to be collected in an action in the name of the state for the use of the school fund, and their right to transact further new business in this state shall immediately cease until the requirements of this chapter have been fully complied with. [15 G. A., ch. 2, § 4; C. '73, § 1171.]

SEC. 1777. Examination by auditor—receiver. The auditor at any time may make a personal examination of the books, papers, securities and business of any life insurance company doing business in this state, or authorize any other suitable person to make the same, and he or the person so authorized may examine under oath any officer or agent of the company, or others, relative to its business and management. If upon such examination the auditor is of the opinion that the company is insolvent, or that its condition is such as to render its further continuance in business hazardous to the public or holders of its policies, he shall advise and communicate the facts to the attorney-general, who shall at once apply to the district court of the county or any judge thereof, where the home office of a domestic company or an agency of a foreign company is located, for an injunction to restrain the company from transacting further business except the payment of losses already ascertained and due, until further hearing, and for the appointment of a receiver, and, if a domestic company, for the dissolution of the corporation. The judge of such court may grant a preliminary injunction with or without notice, as he may direct, and the court, on the final hearing, may make decree subject to the provisions of the following section as to the appointment of a receiver, the disposition of the deposits of the company in the hands of the auditor, and its dissolution, if a domestic company. [C. '73, § 1172.]

In an action to close the business of a corporation for failure to comply with the provisions of chapter 5, title IX, of the Code of '73, held, that it must be assumed that the corporation was duly organized: State ex rel. v. Iowa Mutual Aid Association, 59–125.

SEC. 1778. Securities. The securities of a defaulting or insolvent company, or a company against which proceedings are pending under the preceding section, on deposit shall vest in the state for the benefit of the policies on which such deposits were made, and the proceeds of the same shall, by the order of the court upon final hearing, be divided among the holders thereof in the proportion of the last annual valuation of the same, or at any time be applied to the purchase of reinsurance for their benefit. [C. '73, § 1173.]

SEC. 1779. Change of securities. Companies shall have the right at any time to change the securities on deposit by substituting a like amount of the character required in the first instance. If the annual valuation of the policies in force shows them to be less than the amount of security deposited, then the company may withdraw such excess, but twenty-five thousand dollars must always remain on deposit. [C. '73, § 1174.]

SEC. 1780. Interest collected. Companies having on deposit with the auditor bonds or other securities may collect the dividends or interest thereon, delivering to their authorized agents the coupons or other evidence of interest as the same become due, but if any company fails to deposit additional security when and as called for by the auditor, or pending any proceedings to close up or enjoin it, the auditor shall collect such dividends or interest and add the same to such securities. [C. '73, § 1175.]

SEC. 1781. Auditor's report. Before the first day of May the auditor shall make an annual report to the governor of the general conduct and condition of the companies doing business in the state, and include therein an aggregate of the estimated value of all outstanding policies in each of the companies, and in connection therewith prepare a separate abstract thereof as to each company, and of all the returns and statements made to him by them. [C. '73, § 1176.]

SEC. 1782. Discriminations. No life insurance company shall make or permit any distinction or discrimination between persons insured of the same class and equal expectancy of life in the amount or payment of premiums or rates charged for policies of life or endowment insurance, or in the dividends or other benefits payable thereon, or in any other of the terms or conditions of the contract it makes; nor shall any such company or agent thereof make any contract of insurance agreement, other than as plainly expressed in the policy issued; nor shall any such company or agent pay or allow, directly or indirectly, as an inducement to insurance, any rebate of premium payable on the policy, or any special favor or advantage in the dividends or other benefits to accrue thereon, or any valuable consideration or inducement whatever, not specified in the policy or contract of insurance. [23 G. A., ch. 33, § 1.]

SEC. 1783. Penalty. Every corporation, officer or agent thereof who shall knowingly violate any of the provisions of the preceding section shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, to be recovered by an action in the name of the state for the benefit of the school fund, and the license may be revoked for three years, in the discretion of the court. [Same, § 2.]

CHAPTER 7.

OF STIPULATED PREMIUM AND ASSESSMENT LIFE INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS.

SECTION 1784. Defined. Every corporation organized upon the stipulated premium plan or assessment plan, for the purpose of insuring the lives of individuals or furnishing benefits to the widows, heirs, orphans or legatees of deceased members, or accident indemnity, shall be styled an association, and any corporation doing business under this chapter which provides for the payment of policy claims, accumulation of a reserve or emergency fund, the expense of management and prosecution of the business, by payment of stipulated premiums, assessments or periodical calls, as provided in the contracts, and wherein the liability of the insured to contribute to the payment of policy claims is not limited to a fixed amount, shall be deemed to be engaged in the business of life insurance upon the stipulated premium plan, or assessment plan, and shall be subject to the provisions of this chapter, and chapter eight, of title nine. [21 G. A., ch. 65, § 1.]

Under the constitution of the association known as the Ancient Order of United Workmen, held, that such association, notwithstanding its fraternal character was in effect a mutual insurance company, and that the supreme lodge of that corporation, being incorporated under the laws of Kentucky, was not authorized to exercise any powers or do business in Iowa without compliance with the laws of Iowa with reference to life insurance companies: State ex rel. v. Miller, 66–26.

Where one of the objects of an association is to pay to the beneficiaries a sum of money upon the death of a member which is to be raised by assessments upon other members it is to be deemed an insurance company: Grimes v. Northwestern Legion of Honor, 64 N. W., 806.

Former provisions of this character, held applicable to a fraternal society such as the Ancient Order of United Workmen, having life insurance and insurance against sickness and disability as its main object: State ex rel. v. Nichols, 78–747.

Mutual aid associations organized to furnish financial aid and benefits to the families of deceased members on the payment of membership fees, dues and assessments, held, not to be within the former provisions as to life insurance companies: State ex rel. v. Iowa Mut. Aid. Ass'n, 59–125. And see § 1798.

A railroad relief association organized by the railroad company for the benefit of employes who participate therein is not a life insurance company: Maine v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70 N. W., 630.

An employe, member of such association who has accepted the benefits provided for by his contract of membership is bound by the terms of such contract: Ibid.

SEC. 1785. Articles of incorporation—certificates. "Certificates of membership" or "certificate," when used in this chapter with respect to the insurance of the members, shall be taken to mean and include policy of insurance. The articles of incorporation of any such association shall show its plan of business, and be submitted to the auditor of state and the attorney-general, and if they are found by those officers to comply with the provisions of this title, chapter and of law, they shall approve the same. When the articles are thus approved, they shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state, and a notice published within ninety days in the manner and for the time provided in the general incorporation laws. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1786. Name. No such association shall take any name in use by another organization, or one so closely resembling it as to mislead the public as to its identity. [Same, § 3.]

The action of the auditor in determining the name under which the association may do business is not conclusive as to another association claiming a prior right to the use of the same or a similar name: Grand Lodge v. Graham, 65 N. W., 837.

Therefore held, that plaintiff, an association of the character contemplated in this section and authorized to do business under the name of the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen of Iowa, could not enjoin an unincorporated society or voluntary association from using the name, it appearing that defendant had a prior right to the use of such name: Ibid.

SEC. 1787. Conditions for commencing business. Before issuing any policy or certificate of membership, if the association at the time has not a membership sufficient to pay the full amount of its certificate or policy on an assessment, it shall cause all applications for insurance to have printed in red ink, in a conspicuous manner along the margin thereof, the words: "It is understood that the amount of insurance to be paid under this application, and certificate or policy issued thereon, shall depend upon the amount collected from an assessment therefor." It must have actual applications upon at least two hundred and fifty lives for at least one thousand dollars each; and it shall file with the auditor of state satisfactory proof that the president, secretary and treasurer have each given a good and sufficient bond for five thousand dollars for the faithful discharge of their duties as such officers, sworn copies of which shall be filed with him. It shall also file with him a list, verified by the president and secretary, of the applications, giving the name, age and residence of each applicant, the amount of insurance applied for by each, together with the annual dues and the proposed assessments thereon. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1788. Assessments. The articles and by-laws of each such association and its notices of assessment shall state the objects to which the money to be collected is to be devoted, and no part of the proceeds thereof shall be applied to any other purpose than as stated, and the excess, if any, beyond payment of the benefit, shall be set aside and applied only to like purposes. [Same, § 6.]

The liability of a member of a mutual benefit company is to be determined by an assessment on the basis of membership at the time of the loss and not at the time an assessment is made by order of court to pay such loss: Collins v. Bankers' Acc. Assn., 64 N. W., 778.

Even though the association has on hand enough money to pay a death loss, it is not proper to render judgment against it for the amount of the loss but only to compel an assessment to pay such loss: Courtney v. United States Masonic Ben. Ass'n, 53 N. W., 238.

Where provisions are made for canceling certificates upon failure to pay assessments after actual notice, the obligation to give such notice is upon the company and the obligation to pay the assessments does not attach until the notice is given: Ibid.

Therefore, where the certificate holder, at the time notice was sent to him by mail, was not in such condition that he could understand such notice, held, that notice was not effectual: Ibid.

Provisions as to the method of giving notice of assessments for the purpose of fixing a forfeiture, which are provided for at the time of the issuance of the certificate cannot be subsequently changed without the consent of the insured unless there is a stipulation providing that insured shall be bound by such subesquent provisions: Ibid.

Where it was provided that the failure to pay assessments did not work an absolute forfeiture till the expiration of six months, held, that the receipt of intermittent dues during the six months was not a waiver of the default where the member did not, during the six months, take the steps necessary for reinstatement: Leffingwell v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 86-279.

Where the contract was between the subordinate lodge and the member, held, that the member had no right to offset, as against dues, compensation due him under a contract with the Grand Lodge: Ibid.

SEC. 1789. Insurable age—beneficiary—assignment of policy. No association organized or operating under this chapter shall issue a certificate of membership to any person under fifteen nor over sixty-five years of age, nor unless the beneficiary named in the certificate is the husband, wife, relative, legal representative, heir, creditor or legatee of the insured member, nor shall any such certificate be assigned. Any certificate issued or assignment made in violation of this section shall be void. The beneficiary named in the certificate may be changed at any time at the pleasure of the assured, as may be provided for in the articles or by-laws, but no certificate issued for the benefit of a wife or children shall be thus changed so as to become payable to the creditors. [Same, § 7.]

A "relative" for whose benefit a certificate may be taken includes a stepfather, after the death of the wife, on whom the relationship depends: Simcoke v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 84-383.

The provision that the beneficiary may, by the consent of the society, be changed without the consent of the person who has been such beneficiary, is in accordance with the law previously existing with reference to the effect of such certificates: Brown v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 80-287; Carpenter v. Knapp, 70 N. W., 764.

The provisions of § 1741, requiring the application of the assured to be indorsed on or attached to the policy, applies to all policies and contracts for life insurance, including those of mutual benefit associations issued upon the assessment plan: McConnell. v Iowa Mut. Aid Ass'n, 79-757; Grimes v. Northwestern Legion of Honor, 64 N. W., 806. And see now §§ 1819, 1826.

Where it was provided in the certificate of a mutual benefit society that it should be void in case the beneficiary named was not a natural heir of the member taking the certificate, held, that knowledge on the part of the society that the beneficiary named was not an heir of the member taking the certificate without objection on the part of the society, and continuing to collect assessments, and continuing to treat the certificate as valid, constituted a waiver of such condition. (Decided prior to the enactment of these provisions): Lindsey v. Western Mut. Aid Soc., 84-734.

Also held, that where such certificate was forfeited for non-payment of dues after the taking effect of the statute, but payment was subsequently accepted by the company, and the member was restored, such restoration did not amount to the making of a new contract, but was a waiver of the forfeiture, and the former certificate continued in force: Ibid.

Also held, that statements of the member with reference to good health, on which such restoration was made, were not false in such sense as to render such restoration void: Ibid.

SEC. 1790. Report to auditor of state—examination. The annual business of such association organized under the laws of this state shall close on the thirty-first day of December of each year, and it shall within sixty days thereafter prepare and file in the office of the auditor of state a detailed statement, verified by its president and secretary, giving its assets, liabilities, receipts from each assessment and all other sources, expenditures, salaries of officers, number of contributing members, death losses paid and amount paid on each, death losses reported but not paid, and furnish such other information as the auditor, who shall provide blanks for that purpose, may require, so that its true financial condition may be shown, and shall pay, upon filing each annual statement, the sum of ten dollars.

He shall publish such annual statement in detail in his report, and for the purpose of verifying it he may make or cause to be made an examination of the affairs of any such association at its expense, which shall be, if done by him or his clerk, necessary hotel and traveling expenses only, if by a person not regularly employed in his office, the actual cost thereof, not exceeding five dollars per day for the time required, and actual expenses. If the auditor regards it necessary for the safety of the funds of the association, he may require the bonds of the officers to be increased to an amount not exceeding double the sum for which they are accountable, and he may also require supplemental reports from such association at such time and in such form as he may direct, and it shall be the duty of its officers to furnish the bonds and reports when thus required. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 1791. Investment of accumulations. Any association accumulating any moneys to be held in trust for the purpose of the fulfillment of its policy or certificate, contract, or otherwise, shall invest such accumulations in the securities provided in section eighteen hundred and six, chapter eight, of this title, and deposit the same with the auditor of state, as therein provided. But such association may invest in real estate in Iowa such a portion of said accumulation as is necessary for its accommodation in the transaction of its business to be owned by said association, and in the erection of any building for such purpose may add thereto rooms for rental.

SEC. 1792. Change of securities. Such association may at any time change its securities on deposit by substituting a like amount in other securities of the same character, and the auditor shall permit a withdrawal of the same, upon satisfactory proof in writing filed with him that they are to be used for the purpose for which they were originally deposited. [Same, §§ 10, 11.]

SEC. 1793. Collection of interest. The auditor shall permit the associations owning the bonds or other securities to collect and retain the interest accruing thereon, delivering to them the evidences of interest as the same become due; but on default of any association to make or enforce such collection, he may collect the same and add it to the securities in his possession, less the expense thereof. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 1794. Foreign companies. Any association organized under the laws of any other state to carry on the business of insuring the lives of persons, or of furnishing benefits to the widows, orphans, heirs or legatees of deceased members, or of paying accident idemnity, or surrender value of certificates of insurance, upon the stipulated premium plan or assessment plan, may be permitted to do business in the state by complying with the requirements hereinafter made, but not otherwise. It shall file with the auditor of state a copy of its charter or articles of incorporation, duly certified by the proper officers of the state wherein it was organized, together with a copy of its by-laws, application and policy or certificate of membership. It shall also file with the auditor a statement, signed and verified by its president and secretary, which shall show the name and location of the association, its principal place of business, the names of its president, secretary and other principal officers, the number of certificates or policies in force, the aggregate amount insured thereby, the amount paid to beneficiaries in the event of death or accident, the amount paid on the last death loss and the date thereof, the amount of cash or other assets owned by the association and how invested, and any other information which the auditor may require. The statement, papers and proofs thus filed shall show that the death loss or surrender value of the certificate of insurance or accident indemnity is in the main provided for by assessments upon or contributions by surviving members of such association, and that it is legally organized, honestly managed, and that an ordinary assessment upon its members or other regular contributions to its mortuary fund are sufficient to pay its maximum certificate to the full limit named therein. Upon its complying with the provisions of this section, and of section eighteen hundred and eight, chapter eight, of this title, and the payment of twenty-five dollars, the auditor shall issue to it a certificate of authority to do business in this state, provided the same right is extended by the state in which said association is organized to associations of the same class in this state. When the auditor doubts the solvency of any foreign association, and the failure to pay the full limit named in its certificate or policy shall be such evidence of its insolvency as to require the auditor to investigate it, he shall for this or other good cause, at the expense of such association, cause an examination of its books, papers and business to be made, and if upon such examination he finds that the association is not financially sound, or is not paying its policies or certificates in full, or is conducting its business fraudulently, or if it shall fail to make the statement required by law, he may revoke its authority and prohibit it from doing business until it shall again comply with the provisions of this chapter. If the auditor appoints some one not receiving a regular salary in his office to make this examination, such examiner shall receive five dollars per day for his services in addition to his actual traveling and hotel expenses, to be paid by the association examined, or by the state on the approval of the executive council, if the association fails to pay the same. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 1795. Proceedings to control or wind up. When any association organized under this title and chapter fails to make its annual statement on or before the first day of March, or is conducting its business fraudulently or not in compliance with law, or is not carrying out its contracts with its members in good faith, the auditor shall promptly communicate the fact to the attorney-general, who shall at once commence action before the district court of the county in which such association has its principal place of business, giving it reasonable notice thereof, and if upon a hearing it is found to be advantageous to the holders of certificates of membership therein, said court or judge may remove any officer or officers, and appoint others in their place until the next annual election. If it is advantageous to the holders of certificates that the affairs of said corporation be wound up, the court or judge shall so direct, and for that purpose may appoint a receiver who shall treat all legal claims for death benefits as preferred. The receiver may also, with the approval of the court or judge, transfer the members of such association who consent thereto to some like solvent association of the state, or divide the surplus accumulated in proportion to the share due each certificate at the time. [Same, § 16.]

The fact that a mutual benefit association is doing business without complying with the law cannot be taken advantage of in an action against it by another association to restrain the use by defendant of a name common to the two, it appearing that plaintiff has no prior right to the use of such name: Grand Lodge v. Graham, 65 N. W., 837.

SEC. 1796. Certificate. Upon compliance with the provisions of this chapter by any association, the auditor shall issue to it a certificate setting forth: First, the corporate name of the association; second, its principal place of business; third, the number of certificates or policies in force at the date of its last report; fourth, the sum of money which an ordinary assessment for payment of a single certificate or policy would produce in each class; fifth, the amount paid on its last death loss as evidenced by proof on file in his office, and the date of such payment; sixth, the amount of securities deposited in his office, and for what purpose; seventh, that it has fully complied with the provisions of this chapter, and is authorized to transact business for a period of one year from April first of the year of its issue, which certificate shall be published by the association once a week for four weeks in a newspaper of general circulation published at its principal place of business. [Same, § 18.]

SEC. 1797. Distribution of surplus—surrender value. Any association which provides in the main for the payment of death losses or accident indemnity by assessments upon its members, or stipulated premium plan, may provide for the equitable distribution of any surplus or advance insurance fund accumulated in the course of its business, which may be paid in cash or applied in the reduction or payment of future premiums, paid up or extended insurance, as its rules or contracts may provide, and for an equitable surrender value upon the cancellation of a certificate or policy, provided the terms and conditions thereof are set forth in such policy or certificate of membership, and such surrender value shall in the main be accumulated during the term of such policy or certificate. [Same, § 20.]

Since the enactment of this provision a mutual life company has no authority to stipulate in its policies that an assessment shall be made for the purpose of paying an endowment: Dishong v. Iowa Life & Endowment Ass'n, 92–163.

And where prior to the passage of this statute endowment contracts had been made by such a company, and the risks of such company were afterward reinsured in another mutual company, which issued a different policy, held, that the second company was under no obligation to make an assessment for the payment of such endowment: Ibid.

SEC. 1798. Benevolent societies. Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to apply to any association organized solely for benevolent purposes and composed wholly of members of any one occupation, guild, profession or religious denomination, but any such society may, by complying with the provisions hereof, become entitled to all the privileges thereof, in which event it shall be amenable to the provisions of this chapter so far as they are applicable. [Same, § 21.]

CHAPTER 8.

OF PROVISIONS APPLYING TO LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

SECTION 1799. Annual statement. Every company or association organized under the laws of any other state or country and doing business in this state shall annually, by the first day of March, file with the auditor of state a statement of its affairs for the year terminating on the thirty-first day of December preceding, in the same manner and form provided for similar companies or associations organized in this state. The auditor may amend the form of the annual statement required to be made by companies or associations doing business in this state, and propose and require such additional matter to be covered therein as he may think necessary to elicit a full exhibit of the standing of any such company or association. [15 G. A., ch. 2, § 1; C.'73, § 1166.]

SEC. 1800. Agent's certificate. No person shall, directly or indirectly, act within this state as agent, or otherwise, in receiving or procuring applications for insurance, or in doing or transacting any kind of life insurance business, for any company or association contemplated in the two chapters preceding, except for the purpose of taking applications for organizations, unless the company or association for which he is acting has received a certificate from the auditor of state authorizing it to transact business therein, nor until he shall have received from said auditor a certificate showing that such company or association has complied with the provisions of law, and that such person is authorized to act for it. [Same.]

SEC. 1801. Penalty for acting without certificate. Any such company or association that does or solicits new business without the certificates required by the two preceding chapters shall forfeit five hundred dollars for every day's neglect to procure the same. Any person knowingly soliciting applications or making insurance for any company or association having no such certificate from the auditor as required, shall forfeit and pay the sum of three hundred dollars, and any person acting for any company or association authorized to transact business without having the agent's certificate prescribed in the preceding section in his possession, shall be liable to pay twenty-five dollars for each day's neglect to procure the same during the time he thus acts. [15 G. A., ch. 2, § 5; C.'73, § 1177.]

SEC. 1802. Recovery of penalties. Actions brought to recover any of the penalties provided for in this chapter shall be instituted in the name of the state by the county attorney of the county, under the direction and authority of the auditor of state, and may be brought in the district court of any county in which the company or association proceeded against is engaged in the transaction of business, or in which the offending person resides, if it is against him. The penalties, when recovered, shall be paid into the state treasury for the use of the school fund. [15 G. A., ch. 2, § 6; C.'73, § 1178.]

SEC. 1803. Real estate. No such company or association organized under the laws of this state shall purchase, hold or convey real estate, except for the purposes and in the manner herein set forth:

1. Such as is required for its use in the transaction of its business;
2. Such as shall have been mortgaged to it in good faith by way of security for loans previously contracted in the course of its dealings;
3. Such as shall have been conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its dealings;
4. Such as shall have been purchased at sales under execution issued upon judgments and decrees based upon debts due it, or obtained by redemption as junior judgment creditor or mortgagee. [C.'73, § 1180.]

SEC. 1804. When to be sold. All real estate acquired which is not necessary for such company or association in the convenient transaction of its business shall be sold within five years after it acquired title thereto, unless it procures a certificate from the auditor of state that its interests will suffer by a forced sale thereof, in which event the time may be extended as the auditor shall direct in said certificate. [C.'73, § 1181.]

SEC. 1805. Policy exempt from execution. A policy of insurance on the life of an individual, in the absence of an agreement or assignment to the contrary, shall inure to the separate use of the husband or wife and children of said individual, independently of his creditors. The proceeds of an endowment policy payable to the assured on attaining a certain age shall be exempt from liability for any of his debts. Any benefit or indemnity paid under an accident policy shall be exempt to the assured, or in case of his death to the husband or wife and children of the assured, from his debts. The avails of all policies of life or accident insurance payable to the surviving widow shall be exempt from liability for all debts of such beneficiary contracted prior to the death of the assured, but the amount thus exempted shall not exceed five thousand dollars. [24 G. A., ch. 28; 18 G. A., ch. 5; C.'73, §§ 1182, 2372; R., § 2362; C.'51, § 1330.]

This section contemplates a case where the policy is payable to deceased, or his or her legal representatives, and not a case where the policy is payable to another person for his use and benefit, in which case it can not be otherwise disposed of by will: McClure v. Johnson, 56–620.

Where the contract of insurance provides the method by which insured may change the beneficiary entitled to the proceeds of the policy, and such method is not pursued, a direction in the will of the assured making such change will be without effect: Stephenson v. Stephenson, 64–534.

Where absolute power is given to a member of a mutual benefit association to designate who the beneficiary shall be, such direction can not be disregarded, although the articles of incorporation of the association provide that its object shall be to provide for the widows and orphans of deceased members, and the beneficiary designated is not a widow or child of the deceased member: Mitchell v. Grand Lodge, 70–360.

The assured can not by direction in his will provide for payment of the proceeds of a policy on his life to another beneficiary than the one mentioned in the policy. The contract with the company can not thus be altered without its consent: Wilmaser v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 66–417.

The assured can not change the beneficiary by will unless it is so provided in the contract of insurance: Wendt v. Iowa Legion of Honor, 72–682.

Where a decedent left a wife but no children, held, that the proceeds should go to the wife alone, and not be divided among all the distributees of his estate: Rhode v. Bank, 52–375.

The proceeds of life insurance are exempt to heirs generally and not merely to wife and children, to whom they are distributed free from the debts of the deceased: Larrabee v. Palmer, 70 N. W., 100.

The proceeds of the policy when realized by the person entitled thereto, are not exempt from execution for the debts of such person. The exemption exists only as to the debts of the person insured: Smedley v. Felt, 43–607; Murray v. Wells, 53–256.

This section does not exempt the avails of a policy of insurance from the debts of a beneficiary when such beneficiary is a person other than the assured: Murdy v. Skyles, 70 N. W., 714.

Therefore a benefit payable to the member of an association and by him transferred to his wife is not exempt from the debts of the wife: Ibid.

The exemption to the wife as against her own antecedent debts relates only to cases of death of the husband who is the assured: Ibid.

Under a policy of insurance for the use and benefit of the wife of assured, the sum stipulated being payable to said assured or her legal representatives "or if the said assured be not then living the said sum shall be payable to her children or to their children if under age," held, that the wife and the children being dead before the death of insured the proceeds of the policy were payable to the grandchildren and were not subject to the debts of the deceased wife: In re Conrad's Estate, 89–396.

Where a certificate of insurance in a mutual benefit company was made payable to the "legal" heirs of assured, held, that the widow of assured was not within such description, but that the proceeds of such certificate should go to the children of deceased: Phillips v. Carpenter, 79–600; but see now § 3313.

In a particular case held, that the evidence did not show a contract to subject the proceeds of a life policy to the payment of a debt: Herriman v. McKee, 49–185.

Where the proceeds of a policy of life insurance are used to release other property from a claim under which it is held, the property so released becomes subject to the payment of debts: Friedlander v. Mahoney, 31–311.

The proceeds of a life policy are assets of the estate, and only differ from other assets in the manner of their distribution: Kelley v. Mann, 56–625.

Further as to disposition of proceeds as assets of the estate, see § 3313.

SEC. 1806. Investment of funds. The funds required by law to be deposited with the auditor of state by any company or association contemplated in the two chapters preceding, and the funds or accumulations of any such company or association organized under the laws of this state, held in trust for the purpose of fulfilling any contract in its policies or certificates, shall be invested in the following described securities and no other:

1. The bonds of the United States;
2. The bonds of the state or of any other state when such bonds are at or above par;
3. Bonds and mortgages and other interest bearing securities being first liens upon real estate within the state or any other state in which such company or association is transacting an insurance business, worth at least double the amount loaned thereon and secured thereby exclusive of improvements, or two and one-half times such amount including the improvements thereon, if such improvements are constructed of brick or stone; but no such improvements shall be considered in estimating the value unless the owner shall contract to keep the same insured in some reliable fire insurance company or companies authorized to do business in the state, during the life of the loan, in a sum at least double the excess of the loan above one-half the value of the ground exclusive of the improvements, the insurance to be made payable in case of loss to the company or association investing its funds, as its interests may appear at the time of loss;
4. Bonds or other evidences of indebtedness of any county, city, town or school district within the state or any other state in which such company is transacting an insurance business, where such bonds or other evidences of indebtedness are issued by authority of and according to law and bearing interest, and are approved by the executive council;
5. In the stock of solvent national banks organized under the laws of the United States, but not more than five per cent. of the assets of such company or association shall be thus invested;
6 Loans upon its own policies, in an amount not to exceed the net terminal reserve or advance insurance fund against the same, as shown by the valuation thereof made under the direction of the auditor of state; but no such loans shall be made on policies of insurance that have not been issued and in force three years. If such a loan is made, the company shall leave with the policy holder a copy of his policy and of the writing which evidences such loan. All such securities shall be deposited with the auditor of state, who shall furnish the company or association depositing them a certificate, under the seal of his office, showing the purpose of the deposit and to what fund the same is to be applied when paid. [25 G. A., ch. 33; 24 G. A., ch. 30; 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 9; 21 G. A., ch. 169; 17 G. A., ch. 47; C. '73, § 1179.]

SEC. 1807. Investment in land and buildings. Such organization may purchase such real estate in the state with a portion of its accumulations as may be necessary for its use in the transaction of its business, and in the erection of a building thereon for such purpose, to which rooms for rent may be added. [21 G. A., ch. 65, § 9.]

SEC. 1808. Service of process. Every life insurance company and association organized under the laws of another state or country shall, before receiving a certificate to do business in this state or any renewal thereof, file in the office of the auditor of state an agreement in writing that thereafter service of notice or process of any kind may be made on the auditor of state, and when so made shall be as valid, binding and effective for all purposes as if served upon the company according to the laws of this or any other state, and waiving all claim or right of error by reason of such acknowledgment of service. Such notice or process, with a copy thereof, may be mailed to the auditor of state at Des Moines, Iowa, in a registered letter addressed to him by his official title, and he shall immediately upon its receipt acknowledge service thereon on behalf of the defendant foreign insurance company by writing thereon, giving the date thereof, and shall immediately return such notice or process in a registered letter to the clerk of the court in which the suit is pending, addressed to him by his official title, and shall also forthwith mail such copy, with a copy of his acknowledgment of service written thereon, in a registered letter addressed to the person or corporation who shall be named or designated by such company in such written instrument. [21 G. A., ch. 65, § 13; C. '73, § 1165.]

SEC. 1809. Provisions additional. The provisions of the preceding section are merely additions to the general provisions of law on the subjects therein refered to, and are not to be construed to be exclusive.

SEC. 1810. Laws of other states—reciprocity. If by the laws of any state, or the rulings or decisions of the appropriate officers thereof, any burden, obligation, requirement, disqualification or disability is put upon any company or association of any class organized in this state affecting its freedom to do business in that state, then the same or like burden, obligations, requirement, disqualification or disability shall be put upon every such company or association of the same class from that state doing or seeking to do business in this state; and the auditor of state shall enforce the provisions of this section, and in doing so may refuse or revoke the certificate of such company or association of such other state; and it shall be unlawful for the auditor of state to impose upon companies or associations organized under chapter seven of this title any rules or regulations, requirements or limitations, that shall not be imposed with equal force upon like companies or associations from other states doing a like business in this state. [21 G. A., ch. 65, § 13.]

SEC. 1811. Defenses to actions on policies—intoxication. In any action pending in any court of the state on any policy or certificate of life insurance, wherein the defendant seeks to avoid liability upon the alleged ground of the intemperate habits or habitual intoxication of the assured, it shall be a sufficient defense for the plaintiff to show that such habits or habitual intoxication of the assured was generally known in the community or neighborhood where the agent of the defendant resided or did business, if thereafter the company continued to receive the premiums falling due thereon. [16 G. A., ch. 55, § 1.]

SEC. 1812. Physician's certificate. In any case where the medical examiner, or physician acting as such, of any life insurance company or association doing business in the state shall issue a certificate of health or declare the applicant a fit subject for insurance, or so report to the company or association or its agent under the rules and regulations of such company or association, it shall be thereby estopped from setting up in defense of the action on such policy or certificate that the assured was not in the condition of health required by the policy at the time of the issuance or delivery thereof, unless the same was procured by or through the fraud or deceit of the assured. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1813. Misrepresentation of age. In all cases where it shall appear that the age of the person insured has been misstated in the proposal, declaration or other instrument upon which any policy of life insurance has been founded or issued, then and in such case the person or company issuing such policy shall, upon the discovery of such misstatement, be permitted to demand and collect the difference of premium, if any, which would be due, with interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum, and payable on account of the true age of the assured, from year to year, according to the rates of premium of such person or company upon which such policy was issued; or such person or company so issuing the policy may, after the decease of the assured, deduct from the amount payable by such policy the difference of premium, if any, with interest, which would so have been payable from year to year, by reason of any difference of age at time of issuance of such policy; and no other defense or deduction by such person or company issuing such policy shall be permitted, after the death of the person assured, on account of such misstatement of age of the assured, notwithstanding any warranty of such statement of age by terms of policy or otherwise, except when it be shown by the person or company insuring that the policy was procured by fraud in fact. [Same, § 3.]

Section applied: Seiverts v. National Benefit Assn., 64 N. W., 671.

In an action in this state on a policy issued in another state it will be presumed in the absence of a showing to the contrary that statutes in the other state contain a similar provision with reference to the age of the assured: Ibid.

SEC. 1814. Illegal business. Any officer, manager or agent of any life insurance company or association who, with knowledge that it is doing business in an unlawful manner or is insolvent, solicits insurance with said company or associations, or receives applications therefor, or does any other act or thing towards procuring or receiving any new business for such company or association, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for every such act, on conviction thereof, shall be adjudged to pay a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment. All contracts, promises and agreements made by any person to or with any such company or association concerning any premium, policy or certificate of new business, after the revocation of its certificates or denial of authority to do business, shall be null and void, and all payments of premium or assessments advanced or made by any person on account of any such policy, certificate of new business, or upon any arrangement therefor, may be recovered from such company or association, or its agent to whom payment was advanced or made, or from both of them, and in addition thereto plaintiff may recover an equal amount as liquidated damages, together with a reasonable fee to plaintiff's attorney for services in the case.

SEC. 1815. Advertisements—who deemed agent. The provisions of sections seventeen hundred and forty-nine and seventeen hundred and fifty of chapter four, of this title, shall apply to life insurance companies and associations. [18 G. A., ch. 211, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 1816. Penalty for fraud in procuring insurance. Any agent, physician or other person who shall knowingly, by means of concealment of facts or false statements, procure or assist in procuring from any life insurance organization any policy or certificate of insurance, shall be punished by a fine of not to exceed one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed one year, or by both, in the discretion of the court. [21 G. A., ch. 165, § 19.]

SEC. 1817. Conspiracy to defraud. If two or more persons conspire to defraud or obtain any money from any life insurance company or association by means of false statements as to the death of any person insured, or the false appearance of the death of any such person, each shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not to exceed ten years. Any person who by such means obtains any money or property on the policy or certificate of the person so insured shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not to exceed fifteen years. Any person who thus attempts to obtain money from any such company or association shall be punished by like imprisonment not to exceed seven years.

SEC. 1818. Fees. When not otherwise provided, each life insurance company doing business in this state, except those organized under the laws thereof, shall pay to the auditor of state the following fees:

1. Upon filing declaration or certified copy of the charter or articles of incorporation, twenty-five dollars;
2. Upon filing the annual statement, twenty dollars;
3. For each certificate of authority and certified copy thereof, two dollars;
4. For each agent's certificate, two dollars;
5. For every copy of any paper filed, the sum of twenty cents per folio, and for certifying and affixing the official seal thereto, one dollar;
6. For valuing policies, ten dollars for each million dollars of insurance or fraction thereof.

Companies organized under the laws of the state shall pay the following fees:

1. For filing an examination of the first application and the issuance of certificate thereon, ten dollars;
2. For filing each annual statement and issuance of renewal certificate, three dollars;
3. For each agent's certificate, fifty cents.

The provisions of the chapter on insurance other than life shall apply as to fees under this and the two preceding chapters, except as modified by this section. [C. '73, § 1183.]

SEC. 1819. Copy of application. All life insurance companies or associations organized or doing business in this state under the provisions of the preceding chapters shall, upon the issue of any policy, attach to such policy, or indorse thereon, a true copy of any application or representation of the assured which by the terms of such policy are made a part thereof, or of the contract of insurance, or referred to therein, or which may in any manner affect the validity of such policy, or, upon reinstatement of a lapsed policy, shall attach to the renewal receipt a true copy of all representations made by the assured upon which the renewal or reinstatement is made. The omission so to do shall not render the policy invalid, but if any company or association neglects to comply with the requirements of this section, it shall forever be precluded from pleading, alleging or proving such application or representations, or any part thereof, or the falsity thereof, or any part thereof, in any action upon such policy, and the plaintiff in any such action shall not be required, in order to recover against such company or association, either to plead or prove such application or representation, but may do so at his option.

See notes to § 1741.

SEC. 1820. Limitation of action. No stipulation or condition in any policy or contract of insurance or beneficiary certificate issued by any company or association mentioned or referred to in this chapter, limiting the time to a period of less than one year after knowledge by the beneficiary within which notice or proofs of death or the occurrence of other contingency insured against must be given, shall be valid.

SEC. 1821. Taxes, how paid. In case this or any other state shall impose or levy any tax on any company or association, the same may be paid from any surplus or emergency fund of such company or association.

CHAPTER 9.

OF FRATERNAL BENEFICIARY SOCIETIES, ORDERS OR ASSOCIATIONS.

SECTION 1822. Defined. A fraternal beneficiary association is hereby declared to be a corporation, society or voluntary association, formed or organized and carried on for the sole benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, and not for profit, and having a lodge system, with ritualistic form of work and representative form of government. Such association shall make provision for the payment of benefits in case of death, and may make provision for the payment of benefits in case of sickness, temporary or permanent physical disability, either as a result of disease, accident or old age, provided the period of life at which payment of physical disability benefits on account of old age commences shall not be under seventy years, subject to the compliance by members with its constitution and laws. But the provisions of this chapter shall not be construed to include fraternal orders which only provide for sick and funeral benefits. [26 G. A., ch. 21, § 1.]

For decisions having some application to such associations see notes to §§ 1784, 1788, 1789.

SEC. 1823. Assessments. The fund from which the payment of such benefits shall be made and the expenses of such association defrayed shall be derived from beneficiary calls, assessments or dues collected from its members. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1824. Insurable age—beneficiary. No fraternal association created or organized under the provisions of this chapter shall issue any certificate of membership to any person under the age of fifteen years, nor over the age of sixty-five years, nor unless the beneficiary under said certificate shall be the husband, wife, relative, legal representative, heir or legatee of such member. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1825. Statutes applicable. Such associations shall be governed by this chapter, and shall be exempt from the provisions of the statutes of this state relating to life insurance companies, except as hereinafter provided. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1826. Copy of application. All such associations shall, upon the issue or renewal of any beneficiary certificate, attach to such certificate or indorse thereon a true copy of any application or representation of the member which by the terms of such certificate are made a part thereof. The omission so to do shall not render the certificate invalid, but if any such association neglects to comply with the requirements of this section it shall not plead or prove the falsity of any such certificate or representation or any part thereof in any action upon such certificate, and the plaintiff in any such action, in order to recover against such association, shall not be required to either plead or prove such application or representation. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1827. Where suable. Such associations may be sued in any county in which is kept their principal place of business, or in which the beneficiary contract was made, or in which the death of the member occurred; but actions to recover old age, sick or accident benefits may, at the option of the beneficiary, be brought in the county of his residence. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 1828. Exemption of proceeds. The proceeds of any beneficiary certificate issued by any such association, and of any claims for benefits, shall be exempt from execution and attachment, to the same extent as the proceeds of any policy of life or endowment insurance, as is now or may hereafter be provided by the laws of this state. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 1829. Foreign companies. Any such association organized under the laws of any other state shall be permitted to do business in this state, when it shall have filed with the auditor of this state a duly certified copy of its charter and articles of association, and a copy of its constitution or laws, certified to by its secretary or corresponding officer, together with an appointment of the auditor of this state as a person upon whom process may be served as hereinafter provided, if such association shall be shown to be authorized to do business in the state in which it is incorporated or organized. The auditor of state may personally, or by some person to be designated by him, examine into the conditions, affairs, character and business methods, accounts, books and investments of such association at its home office, which examination shall be at the expense of such association, and shall be made within thirty days after demand therefor; and the expense of such examination shall be limited to five dollars per day and the necessary expenses of travel and for hotel bills. If the auditor, after such examination, is of the opinion that no permit should be granted to such association, he may refuse to issue the same. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 1830. Report. Every such association doing business in this state shall, on or before the first day of March of each year, make, and file with the auditor of state, a report for the year ending on the thirty-first day of December immediately preceding. All reports shall be upon blank forms to be provided by the auditor of state, or may be printed in pamphlet form, and shall be verified under oath by the authorized officers of such association, and shall be published, or the substance thereof, in the annual report of the auditor of state under the separate title "Fraternal Beneficiary Associations," and shall contain answers to the following questions:

1. Number of certificates issued during the year, or members admitted;
2. Amount of indemnity effected thereby;
3. Number of losses or benefit liabilities incurred;
4. Number of losses or benefit liabilities paid;
5. The amount received from each assessment for the year;
6. Total amount paid members, beneficiaries, legal representatives or heirs;
7. Number and kind of claims for which assessments have been made;
8. Number and kind of claims compromised or resisted, and brief statement of reason;
9. Does association charge annual or other periodical dues or admission fees;
10. How much on each one thousand dollars annually, or per capita, as the case may be;
11. Total amount received, from what source, and the disposition thereof;
12. Total amount of salaries, fees, per diem, mileage, expenses paid to officers, showing amount paid to each;
13. Does the association guarantee, in its certificates, fixed amounts to be paid regardless of amount realized from assessments, dues, admission fees and donations;
14. If so, state amount guaranteed, and the security of such guarantee;
15. Has the association a reserve or emergency fund;
16. If so, how is it created, and for what purpose, the amount thereof, and how invested;
17. Has the association more than one class;
18. If so, how many, and amount of indemnity in each;

19. Number of members in each class;
20. If voluntary, so state, and give date of organization;
21. If organized under the laws of this state, under what law and at what time, giving chapter and year and date of passage of the act;
22. If organized under the laws of any other state, territory or province, state such fact and the date of organization, giving chapter and year and date of passage of the act;
23. Number of certificates of beneficiary membership lapsed during the year;
24. Number in force at beginning and end of year; if more than one class, number in each class;
25. Names and addresses of its presidents, secretary and treasurer, or corresponding officers.

The auditor of state is empowered to make any additional inquiries of any such association relative to the business contemplated by this act, and such officer of such association as the auditor of state may require shall promptly reply in writing, under oath, to all such inquiries. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 1831. Service of process. Any such association permitted to do business within this state, and not having its principal office within this state, and not organized under the laws of this state, shall appoint, in writing, the auditor of state to be attorney in fact, on whom all process in any action or proceeding against it shall be served, and in such writing shall agree that any process against it which is served on said attorney in fact shall be of the same validity as if served upon the association, and that the authority shall continue in force so long as any liability remains outstanding in this state. Copies of such certificate, certified by said auditor of state, shall be deemed sufficient evidence thereof, and shall be admitted in evidence with the same force and effect as the original. Service upon such attorney shall be deemed sufficient service upon such association. When legal process against any such association is served upon said auditor of state, he shall immediately notify the association of such service by letter, postage prepaid, directed and mailed to its secretary or corresponding officer, and shall within two days after such service forward in the same manner a copy of the process served on him to such officer. The auditor of state shall keep a record of all processes served upon him, which record shall show the day and hour when such service was made. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 1832. Annual certificate. The auditor of state shall, upon the application of any such association, issue to it a permit in writing, authorizing it to do business within this state for a period of one year from April first of the year of its issue, for which certificate and all proceedings in connection therewith such association shall pay to said auditor the fee of twenty-five dollars, and for each annual renewal thereof a like sum shall be paid. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 1833. Agents. Such association shall not employ paid agents in soliciting or procuring members, except in the organization or building up of subordinate bodies, or granting members inducements to procure new members. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 1834. Changing beneficiary. No contract between a member and his beneficiary that the beneficiary or any person for him shall pay such member's assessments and dues, or either of them, shall deprive the member of the right to change the name of the beneficiary. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 1835. Meetings in other states. Any such association organized under the laws of this state may provide for the meetings of its legislative or governing body in any other state, territory or province wherein such association shall have subordinate bodies, and all business transacted at such meetings shall be valid, in all respects, as if such meetings were held within this state; and where the laws of any such association provide for the election of its officers by votes to be cast in its subordinate bodies, the votes so cast in its subordinate bodies in any other state, territory or province shall be valid, as if cast within this state. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 1836. Proceedings for violations of statute. Any such association refusing or neglecting to make the report as provided in this chapter shall be excluded from doing business within this state. The auditor of state must, within sixty days after failure to make such report, or in case any such association shall exceed its powers, or shall conduct its business fraudulently, or shall fail to comply with any of the provisions of this chapter, give notice in writing to the attorney-general, who shall immediately commence an action against such association to enjoin the same from carrying on any business. No association so enjoined shall have authority to continue business until such report shall be made, or overt act or violation complained of shall have been corrected, nor until the costs of such action be paid by it, provided the court shall find that such association was in default, as charged; whereupon the auditor of state shall reinstate such association, and not until then shall such association be allowed to again do business in this state. Any officer, agent or person acting for any such association or subordinate body thereof within this state, while such association shall be so enjoined or prohibited from doing business pursuant to this chapter, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. [Same, § 16.]

SEC. 1837. Illegal business—agents. Any person who shall act within this state as an officer, agent or otherwise for any such association which has failed, neglected or refused to comply with or which has violated any of the provisions of this chapter, or shall have failed or neglected to procure from the auditor of state proper certificate of authority to transact business as provided for by this chapter, shall be subject to the penalty provided in the last preceding section for the misdemeanor therein specified. [Same, § 17.]

SEC. 1838. False representations by officers or agents. Any officer, agent or member of such association, who shall obtain any money or property belonging thereto by any false or fraudulent representation, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars and costs, and stand committed until such fine and costs are paid, or may be imprisoned in the county jail not more than six months. [Same, § 18.]

SEC. 1839. Physician's certificate. Every applicant for membership in any association organized in this state shall first be examined by a physician holding a certificate from the state board of medical examiners. [Same, § 19.]

CHAPTER 10.

OF SAVINGS BANKS.

SECTION 1840. How formed. Corporations designated savings banks may be formed by not less than five persons of lawful age, a majority of whom shall be citizens of the state, and must be organized as provided in this chapter. [15 G. A., ch. 60, §§ 1, 3.]

SEC. 1841. Business. Savings banks may receive on deposit the savings and funds of others, preserve and invest the same, pay interest or dividends thereon, and transact the usual business of such institutions, but shall not have power to issue bank notes, bills or other evidences of debt for circulation as money. [Same, §§ 2, 16.]

SEC. 1842. Articles of incorporation. The articles of incorporation of a savings bank shall be signed and acknowledged by the corporators before some officer authorized to take acknowledgment of deeds, and give the corporate name, the object for which it is formed, the amount of capital, the time of its existence, which shall not exceed fifty years, the number of its directors, the name and post-office address of each person or officer who shall manage its affairs until the first election, and the name of the city, town or village, and the county, in which the principal place of business is to be located. Such articles shall be filed and recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county of the principal place of business, and in the office of the secretary of state. Notice of its incorporation shall be given by publication in some newspaper published in the county wherein the bank is located, for four consecutive weeks, which notice shall state, in substance, the matters required to be given in the articles of incorporation. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1843. Capital. The paid up capital of any savings bank shall not be less than ten thousand dollars in cities, town or villages having a population of ten thousand or less, nor less than fifty thousand dollars in cities having a greater population. The corporation may commence business when its first directors or officers named in its recorded articles of incorporation shall have furnished the auditor of state proof, under oath, that the required capital has been paid in and is held in good faith by said bank, and he has satisfied himself of such fact, for which purpose he may make a personal examination, or cause it to be made, at the expense of such bank, and he is also satisfied that the preceding sections of this chapter have been complied with, and has issued a certificate to that effect, naming therein its first board of directors, notice of which certificate shall be given by the publication thereof for four consecutive weeks in some newspaper printed in the county where its articles are recorded, at the expense of such bank, and proof of such publication by the oath of the publisher or his foreman filed with such auditor. [Same, §§ 2, 3.]

SEC. 1844. Powers. The corporators and their successors shall be a body corporate with the right of succession for the period limited, and shall have power:

1. To sue and be sued;
2. To have a corporate seal and alter it at pleasure;
3. To purchase, hold, sell, convey, and release from trust or mortgage such real and personal estate as provided for in this chapter;
4. To appoint such officers, agents, employes and servants as the business of the corporation shall require, to define their powers, prescribe their duties, fix their compensation, and to require of them such security as may be proper for the performance of their duties;
5. To loan and invest the funds of the corporation, to receive deposits of money, to loan and invest the same as provided in this chapter, and to repay such deposits without interest, or with such interest as the by-laws or articles may provide;
6. To make by-laws for the management and regulation of the corporation, its property and affairs, prescribing the condition on which the deposits will be received and interest paid thereon, and the time and manner of dividing the profits, and for carrying on all business within its power. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1845. Management—officers—meetings. The business and property of such banks shall be managed by a board of directors of not less than five nor more than nine, all of whom shall be shareholders, and at least three-fourths of the directors must be citizens of the state. No person shall be eligible as director of any savings bank, nor can he qualify or serve as such, unless he owns in his own right shares of stock in such bank, as follows: In those having a capital of less than twenty thousand dollars, one share; in those having a capital of twenty thousand dollars or over, but less than thirty thousand dollars, two shares; in those having a capital of thirty thousand dollars or over, but less than forty thousand dollars, three shares; in those having a capital of forty thousand dollars or over, but less than fifty thousand dollars, four shares; in those having a capital of fifty thousand dollars or over, five shares. Each director, before acting as such, shall take an oath that he will diligently, faithfully and impartially perform the duties imposed upon him by law, that he will not knowingly violate or willingly permit to be violated any of its provisions, that he is the bona fide owner in his own right of the number of shares of stock required to be owned by him as provided in this chapter; that the same is not hypothecated nor in any manner pledged as security for any loan obtained or debt owing by him,—which oath shall be signed by each director and certified by the officer before whom it is taken, and filed with and preserved in the office of the auditor of state. The call for the first meeting of the directors or trustees shall be signed by one or more persons named in the auditor's certificate, stating the time and place of meeting, and be delivered personally to each director, or published at least ten days in some newspaper in the county wherein the principal place of business of the corporation is located.

At their first meeting, and as often thereafter as the by-laws require, they shall elect from their number a president and one or more vice-presidents for the ensuing year, and appoint a treasurer or cashier, and such other officers and employes as may be required, who shall hold their office during the pleasure of the board, and give such security for the faithful performance of their duties as may be required of them by the by-laws. [22 G. A. ch. 89; 15 G A., ch. 60, § 6.]

SEC. 1846. Directors. All vacancies in the board of directors shall be filled at its next regular meeting after such vacancy shall arise from among the stockholders, and the person receiving a majority of the votes of the whole number of directors shall be duly elected to fill such vacancy. The directors to succeed those named in the auditor's certificate shall be elected at the first annual meeting thereafter, at such time and place, in such manner and upon such notice as shall be provided by the by-laws, and shall hold office until their successors are elected and qualified, which shall be annually thereafter. All such elections shall be by ballot, and the persons receiving the greater number of votes cast shall be directors. If an election of directors shall not be held on the day designated, it may be held on any other day, after giving the notice required by the by-laws. A majority of directors shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but in no case shall a measure be declared carried unless receiving three affirmative votes. [Same.]

SEC. 1847. Stockholders' meetings. At all stockholders' meetings, and all elections held thereat, each share of stock shall be entitled to one vote. Any stockholder may vote upon his shares in person, or by proxy in writing. Shares belonging to an estate may in like manner be voted by the administrator thereof, and shares belonging to a corporation, association or society may be voted by any person authorized by its board of directors to do so, but no stockholder shall be entitled to vote who owes the bank any past due indebtedness. [22 G. A., ch. 89; 15 G. A., ch. 60, §§ 6, 13, 14.]

SEC. 1848. Deposits. All savings banks organized under this chapter may receive on deposit money equal to ten times the amount of its paid up capital, and no greater amount of deposits shall be received without a corresponding increase of paid up capital, which capital shall be a guaranty fund for the better security of depositors, and invested in safe and available securities. The deposits so received shall be paid to such depositor or his representative, when requested, with such interest and under such regulations as the board of directors shall, from time to time, prescribe, not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter, which shall be printed and conspicuously exposed in the business office of the bank, in some place accessible and visible to all; and no alteration which may at any time be made in such rules and regulations shall affect the rights of depositors acquired previously thereto in respect to deposits or interest thereon. Savings banks may require sixty days' written notice of the withdrawal of deposits, but when there are sufficient funds on hand the officers thereof may, in their discretion, waive this requirement. They may close any account, upon such written notice as may be provided for in the by-laws, directing a depositor to withdraw his deposits, after which it shall cease to draw interest. But nothing in this chapter shall prevent such banks, in their discretion, issuing certificates of deposit payable upon demand. [15 G. A., ch. 60, § 7.]

SEC. 1849. Limitation as to interest. All accounts upon which no deposit or drafts shall be made for a period of ten years in succession shall be so far closed that neither the sum deposited, nor the interest that shall have accrued thereon, shall be entitled to any interest after the expiration of the ten years from the date of the last deposit or draft. This provision, however, shall not apply to endowments for children, to trust estates, nor to other cases where special provision is made therefor at the time of the deposit thereof. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 1850. Investment of funds. Each savings bank shall invest its funds or capital, all moneys deposited therein and all its gains and profits, only as follows:

1. In bonds or interest bearing notes or certificates of the United States;
2. In bonds or evidences of debt of this state, bearing interest;
3. In bonds or warrants of any city, town, county or school district of this state, issued pursuant to the authority of law; but not exceeding twenty-five per cent. of the assets of the bank shall consist of such bonds or warrants;
4. In notes or bonds secured by mortgage or deed of trust upon unincumbered real estate in this state, worth at least twice the amount loaned thereon;
5. It may discount, purchase, sell and make loans upon commercial paper, notes, bills of exchange, drafts, or any other personal or public security, but shall not purchase, hold or make loans upon the shares of its capital stock;
6. In all cases of loans upon real estate, all the expenses of searches, examination and certificates of title, or the inspection of property, appraisals of value, and of drawing, perfecting and recording papers, shall be paid by such borrowers; if buildings are included in the valuation of real estate upon which a loan shall be made, they shall be insured by the mortgagor for at least two-thirds of their value, in some solvent company, and the loss, if any, under the policy of insurance shall be made payable to the bank or its assigns, as its interests may appear. When the mortgagor neglects to procure the insurance as above provided, the mortgagee may procure the same in the mortgagor's name for its benefit, and the premium so paid therefor shall be added to the mortgage debt. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 1851. Real estate. A savings bank may purchase, hold and convey real estate only as follows:

1. The lot and building in which its business is carried on;
2. Such as shall have been purchased at sales upon foreclosure of mortgages owned by it, or upon judgments or decrees obtained or rendered for debts due it, or such as shall be conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its dealings, or such as it may obtain by redemption as junior mortgagee or judgment creditor, and which shall be sold by said bank within ten years after the title shall be vested in it. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 1852. Interest—dividends. No dividend shall be declared or paid to stockholders, save out of the surplus on hand after paying or setting apart sums sufficient for the payment of all expenses in operating the bank, and of interest to depositors according to the rate fixed therefor by the board of directors from time to time. The bank shall pay interest to the depositors, when due, upon presentation of deposit book or certificate. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 1853. Shares. The capital of savings banks shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, issued or acquired only upon full payment of the sums represented by them, transferable on the books of the corporation in such manner as shall be prescribed by law and in its by-laws. Stock owned by any corporation, association or society may be transferred by any person authorized to do so by its board of directors or trustees. [Same, §§ 12, 14.]

SEC. 1854. Deposits by executors, minors, etc. Deposits made by a person as executor, administrator, or in any other official capacity, shall be payable to him as such official; if personally made by a minor, to him, although he have no guardian, or his guardian shall not have authorized such payment, and the check, receipt or acquittance of the minor therefor shall be valid and binding. If a deposit be made in her own name by a woman, then or afterwards married, payment shall be made to her upon her check or receipt; if made by any corporation, association or society, to any person authorized by its board of directors or trustees to receive the same. [Same, §§ 14, 15.]

SEC. 1855. Indebtedness. No savings bank, its directors or trustees shall contract any debt or liability against the bank for any purpose whatever, except for deposits and the necessary expenses of managing and transacting its business, and to pay obligations incurred for the purpose of obtaining money with which to pay deposits. [Same, § 16.]

SEC. 1856. Increasing capital stock. The capital of savings banks may be increased by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the shares thereof, at a stockholders' meeting, called upon a notice signed by the officers of the bank and a majority of its directors, specifying the object of the meeting, its time and place, and the amount of the proposed increase, published once a week for four consecutive weeks before the time fixed in some newspaper of the county where the bank is located. If at such meeting the required vote is given, a certificate of the proceedings showing compliance with the foregoing provisions, the amount of capital paid in, the amount to which it is to be increased, and the manner thereof, shall be signed and verified by the affidavit of the chairman and secretary of the meeting, certified to by a majority of the board of directors, and filed and recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county, and with the secretary of state, and a certificate shall thereupon be issued by him in the manner required in the original organization of the bank. When this is done, the stock shall be increased to the amount stated in the certificate. [Same, § 29.]

SEC. 1857. Dissolution. Savings banks may be dissolved prior to the period fixed in the certificate of incorporation, by the affirmative votes of the stockholders holding three-fourths of the capital, at a meeting of stockholders to be called for this purpose in the manner and after publication of notice as required in case of the increase of its capital. In case of dissolution of the bank or proceedings to close the same as authorized in this chapter, no receiver appointed thereunder shall be allowed to sell the assets thereof at forced sale, but he shall collect the same with all diligence, and make distribution of the proceeds from time to time to those entitled thereto. [Same, § 30.]

SEC. 1858. Reorganization. Any bank existing under any law of the state may be reorganized under the provisions of this chapter, by filing with the recorder of deeds of the county in which the business is to be conducted articles of incorporation as required for the organization of savings banks, or such amendment of its articles as will comply with the provisions of this chapter; but such articles or amendment shall be signed by a majority of the directors of such bank, acknowledged before some officer authorized to take the acknowledgment of deeds, and recorded in the office of the proper recorder of deeds and secretary of state, as if the original articles, whereupon the auditor of state shall issue his certificate, as in case of the original organization of savings banks, which, when received and published as in such cases required, shall authorize it to transact business, and all the provisions relating to savings banks shall apply to banks thus reorganized, and all its securities, real estate, or property may be then transferred to such new organization; but such reorganization shall not discharge the original bank, its directors or stockholders from any liability to its depositors or any other person; and such new savings bank shall be liable for every claim or demand existing against such former organization. [Same, § 31.]

SEC. 1859. Unauthorized use of name. Any bank, banking association, private banker or person, not incorporated under the provisions of this chapter, or any officer, agent, servant or employe thereof, who shall advertise, issue or circulate any card or other paper, or exhibit any sign as a savings bank or savings institution, and any savings bank advertising in any way a greater amount of capital than it has actually paid in, shall forfeit and pay one hundred dollars for each day the offense is continued, to be recovered in a suit brought in the name of the state, by the county attorney, of and for the use of the school fund of the county where such bank is located, and, in addition thereto, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor for each day the same is done or continued. [Same, §§ 20, 21, 32.]

SEC. 1860. Reserve. Savings banks doing a commercial business, located in towns having a population of less than three thousand inhabitants, shall at all times keep a cash reserve fund equal to fifteen per cent. of their commercial deposits, and eight per cent. of their savings deposits, and all such banks located in cities and towns having a population of three thousand or over shall at all times keep a cash reserve fund equal to twenty per cent. of their commercial deposits, and eight per cent. of their savings deposits. Savings banks doing an exclusive savings bank business shall at all times keep a cash fund equal to eight per cent. of their deposits. Three-fourths of such reserve fund provided for in this section may be kept on deposit, subject to call, with other banks organized under state or national laws.

OF STATE BANKS.

SECTION 1861. Name. Associations organized under the general incorporation laws of this state for transacting a banking business, buying or selling exchange, receiving deposits, discounting notes and bills, other than savings banks, shall be designated state banks, and shall have the word "state" incorporated in and made a part of the name of such corporation; and no such corporation shall be authorized to transact business unless the provisions of this code have been complied with. [21 G. A., ch. 72, § 1.]

SEC. 1862. Others not to use. No partnership, individual or unincorporated association engaged in buying or selling exchange, receiving deposits, discounting notes and bills, or other banking business, shall incorporate or embrace the word "state" in its name, but this section shall not apply to associations organized under the laws of the United States. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1863. Articles. State banks may be hereafter organized by not less than five persons of lawful age, who shall, prior to the commencement of business, sign and acknowledge articles of incorporation before some officer authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds. Such articles of incorporation shall state:

1. The object of the incorporation and the name by which it shall be known;
2. The principal place of business;

3. The time of the commencement and termination of the corporation, which shall in no case exceed twenty years;

4. The amount of capital stock authorized, and the times and conditions in which it shall be paid in;

5. By what officers and persons the affairs of the corporation are to be conducted, and the times at which they will be elected;

6. The highest amount of indebtedness to which the corporation may at any time subject itself;

7 Whether private property, in addition to the liability fixed by law, shall be liable for corporate debts;

8. The name and post-office address of each officer or person who shall manage the affairs of the corporation until the first election;

9. Such other provisions, not contrary to law, which the corporation may adopt for the conduct of the business of the corporation;

10. Such articles shall be filed and recorded, and notice of incorporation given, as provided in section eighteen hundred and forty-two of chapter ten of this title, in reference to savings banks.

SEC. 1864. Capital—certificate. No state bank shall be organized under the provisions of this chapter with a less amount of paid up capital than fifty thousand dollars, except in cities or towns having a population not exceeding three thousand, where such association may be organized with a paid up capital of not less than twenty-five thousand dollars. But no such association shall have the right to commence business until its officers or its stockholders shall have furnished to the auditor of state a sworn statement of the paid up capital, and, when the auditor of state is satisfied as to that fact, he shall issue to such association a certificate authorizing it to commence business, and it shall cause said certificate to be published in some weekly newspaper printed in the city or town where the association is located, for at least four weeks, or, if no newspaper is published in such city or town, then in a weekly newspaper published nearest thereto in the county.

SEC. 1865. Shares. The capital of state banks hereafter organized shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, issued or acquired only upon full payment of the sum represented by them.

SEC. 1866. Directors. The business and property of each state bank shall be managed by a board of directors of not less than five, all of whom shall be shareholders. No person shall be eligible as director of any state bank, nor shall he qualify or serve as such, unless he owns in his own right shares of stock in such bank, as follows: In those having a capital of twenty-five thousand dollars or over, but less than thirty thousand dollars, two shares; in those having a capital of thirty thousand dollars or over, but less than forty thousand dollars, three shares; In those having a capital of forty thousand dollars or over, but less than fifty thousand dollars, four shares; in those having a capital of fifty thousand dollars or over, five shares. Each director, before acting as such, shall take an oath that he is the bona fide owner in his own right of the number of shares of stock required in this chapter; that the same is not hypothecated nor in any manner pledged as security for any loan or debt; which oath shall be signed by each director and certified by the officer before whom it is taken, and filed with and preserved in the office of the auditor of state.

SEC. 1867. Reserve. All state banks located in cities and towns having a population of less than three thousand inhabitants shall at all times maintain a reserve of not less than ten per cent. of their total deposits, and all such banks located in cities and towns having a population of three thousand or more shall at all times maintain a reserve of not less than fifteen per cent. of their total deposits. Three-fourths of said reserve may be kept on deposit subject to call with other banks organized under state or national laws.

OF BANKS.

SECTION 1868. Misnomer. The misnomer of any savings or state bank in any instrument shall not vitiate or impair the same, if such bank be sufficiently described to ascertain the intention of the parties. [15 G. A., ch. 60, § 19.]

SEC. 1869. Pay of and loans to officers. Officers of savings and state banks may receive for their services a reasonable compensation, to be fixed from time to time in the by-laws, or by vote of the board of directors, but no director, as such, shall be paid for his services. No officer or employe of the bank shall in any manner, directly or indirectly, use its funds or deposits, or any part thereof, except for the regular business transactions of the bank, and no loan shall be made by it to them except upon the express order of the board of directors, made in the absence of the applicant, duly entered in the records of the board proceedings, and only upon the same security as required of others. Any officer or employe of the bank violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of embezzlement. [25 G. A., ch. 30, § 1; 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 17.]

SEC. 1870. Limit of liabilities. The total liabilities to any savings or state bank of any person, corporation, company or firm, for money borrowed, including in the liabilities of a company or firm the liabilities of the several members thereof, shall at no time exceed twenty per cent. of the actually paid up capital of such bank; but the discount of bona fide bills of exchange drawn against actually existing value, and the discount of commercial or business paper actually owned by the person or persons, corporation, company or firm negotiating the same, shall not be considered money so borrowed. [25 G. A., ch. 30, § 2; 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 18.]

SEC. 1871. Examinations. The board of directors of each savings and state bank shall, at its annual meeting, appoint from its members an examining committee of not less than two, which shall examine the condition of the bank, at least every quarter, and report the same in writing duly signed to the board, who shall cause said report to be recorded in the directors' minute book of the bank. Members of such examining committee shall receive for their services a reasonable compensation, to be fixed by the board at its annual meeting, but in no case shall such compensation exceed five dollars per day for each day's actual service to each member. [25 G. A., ch. 30, § 4.]

SEC. 1872. Quarterly statements. All savings and state banks shall make a full, clear and accurate statement of the condition of the bank, verified by the oath of the president, vice-president, cashier, or assistant cashier, and attested by the signatures of at least three of the directors, or verified by the oath of two of its officers and attested by two of the directors, which statement shall contain:

1. The amount of capital actually paid in;
2. The amount of debts of every kind due to banks, bankers, or persons other than regular depositors;
3. The amount due depositors, including sight and time deposits;
4. The amount subject to be drawn at sight then remaining on deposit with solvent banks or bankers of the country, specifying each city and town and the amount deposited in each and belonging to such bank;
5. The amount of gold and silver coin and bullion belonging to such bank at the time of making such statement;
6. The amount then on hand of legal tender and national bank notes and subsidiary coin;
7. The amount of drafts and checks on other solvent banks, and other cash items not dishonored, then on hand and belonging to such bank;

8. The amount of bills, bonds and other evidences of debt discounted or purchased by such bank, and then belonging to the same;

9. The value of real or personal property owned by such bank, specifying the amount of each;

10. The amount of undivided profits, if any, then on hand;

11. The total amount of liabilities to such association on the part of the directors thereof.

Which statement shall be transmitted to the auditor of state within ten days after the receipt of a request or requisition therefor from him, and by him filed in his office. [15 G. A., ch. 60, § 22; C. '73, § 1570; R., § 1636.]

SEC. 1873. Examination by auditor. The auditor of state may, at any time he may see proper, make or cause to be made an examination of any savings or state bank, or he shall call upon it for a report of its condition upon any given day which has passed, as often as four times each year, which report shall contain the information under the preceding section, and the auditor shall cause it to be published in one regular issue in some daily or weekly newspaper in the city or town where such bank is located, or, if there be none in such city or town, then, in one regular issue of some daily or weekly newspaper printed in said county, and the expense of such publication shall be paid by the bank. [15 G. A., ch. 60, § 23; C. '73, § 1571.]

SEC. 1874. Special reports. The auditor of state shall also have power to call for special reports from savings and state banks whenever in his judgment the same are necessary in order to obtain a full and complete knowledge of their condition, which reports shall be verified and attested in the same manner as required in this chapter.

SEC. 1875. Examiners. The auditor of state may appoint one or more bank examiners, to hold office at his pleasure, who shall give bond to the state, conditioned for the faithful discharge of their duties, in the sum of two thousand dollars, which shall be filed with and the sureties therein approved by said auditor. [23 G. A., ch. 50, § 1.]

SEC. 1876. Costs. Each of such banks shall pay the expense of its examination, which, when made by the auditor of state, shall be his necessary expenses only; when such examination is made by an examiner, he shall receive, from banks having a paid up capital of fifty thousand dollars or under, the sum of fifteen dollars; from banks possessing a paid up capital of more than fifty thousand and under one hundred thousand dollars, twenty dollars; from banks possessing a paid up capital of one hundred thousand and under two hundred thousand dollars, twenty-five dollars; and from banks possessing a paid up capital of two hundred thousand dollars or over, thirty dollars. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1877. Proceedings against by state—receivers. When it shall appear to the auditor of state that any savings or state bank has refused to pay its deposits in accordance with the terms on which such deposits were received, or has become insolvent, or that its capital has become impaired, or has violated the law, or is conducting its business in an unsafe manner, he shall, by an order addressed to such bank, direct a discontinuance of such illegal or unsafe practices, and require conformity with the law. The auditor of state may appoint an examiner to investigate the affairs of any savings or state bank, who shall have power to administer oaths to any person whose testimony may be required on such examination, and to compel his attendance for the purpose thereof, by subpœna or attachment, in the manner now authorized in respect to witnesses in the courts of the state, and all books and papers which it may be found necessary to inspect on the examination so ordered shall be produced, and their production may be compelled in like manner; all expenses thereof shall be paid by the banks examined, in such amount as the auditor of state shall certify to be just and reasonable, but costs taxed as such shall not exceed those allowed for like services in the district court. If any such bank shall fail or refuse to comply with the demands made by the auditor of state, or if the auditor of state shall become satisfied that any such bank is in an insolvent or unsafe condition, or that the interests of creditors require the closing of any such bank, he may authorize a bank examiner appointed by him to take possession of any such bank, whereupon the right of levy, of execution, or attachment against such bank or its assets shall be suspended, and the auditor of state may, forthwith, with the assent of the attorney-general, apply to the district court or judge thereof for the appointment of a receiver for such bank, and its affairs shall be wound up under the direction of the court, and the assets thereof ratably distributed among the creditors thereof, giving preference in payment to depositors. The auditor of state, with the assent of the attorney-general, shall have authority to apply for the appointment of receivers of savings and state banks, who shall be residents of the county where the bank is located; and no general assignment for the benefit of creditors shall be of any validity. [15 G. A., ch. 60, § 25; C. '73, § 1572.]

A court of equity may appoint a receiver at the suit of a stockholder: Dickerson v. Cass County, 64 N. W., 395.

A creditor cannot, by obtaining judgment, interfere with distribution by the receiver. Richards v. Osceola Bank, 79–707.

SEC. 1878. Assessments. Should the capital stock of any state or savings bank become impaired by losses or otherwise, the auditor of state may require an assessment upon the stockholders, and shall address an order to the several members of the board of directors of such bank, fixing the amount of assessment required, and the board of directors shall, within thirty days after the receipt of such order, cause such deficiency to be made good by a ratable assessment upon the stockholders for the amount of stock held by them, by giving such stockholders notice in writing, signed by the president or vice-president, attested by the cashier or secretary of the bank, under its seal, if it have one, and deposited in the post-office, addressed to the last known residence of the stockholders, proof thereof to be made by the affidavit of the person so making the deposit, which notice shall state the entire sum to be raised, and the amount due from the addressed stockholder. [25 G. A., ch. 29, § 1.]

SEC. 1879. How enforced. Should any stockholder neglect or refuse to pay his assessment within ninety days from the date of mailing notice thereof, the board of directors shall cause a sufficient amount of the capital stock held by such stockholder to be sold at public auction to make good the deficiency, after giving thirty days' notice thereof by posting the same in the bank, and publishing it in some newspaper of the county in which the bank is located, which notice shall recite the assessment made, the amount due thereunder from the stockholder, and the time and place of sale; proof of all which may be made in the manner provided in the preceding section. After such deficiency is made good, the balance of the proceeds of said sale, if any, shall be paid to the delinquent stockholder. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1880. Directors liable. Should the board of directors of such bank having an impaired capital neglect or refuse to proceed as above provided for a period of thirty days after receipt of such order from the auditor of state, they shall become severally liable for any deficiency, which liability may be enforced at law by any creditor of or stockholder in the bank, or receiver appointed to wind up its affairs. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1881. Auditor to report. It shall be the duty of the auditor of state to communicate to the governor in his biennial report a statement of the condition of every bank from which reports have been received for the preceding year, and to suggest any amendments in the law relative thereto which, in his judgment, may be necessary or proper to increase the security of depositors. [15 G. A., ch. 60, § 24.]

SEC. 1882. Liability of shareholders. All stockholders of savings and state banks shall be individually liable to the creditors of such corporation of which they are stockholders over and above the amount of stock by them held therein and any amount paid thereon, to an amount equal to their respective shares, for all its liabilities accruing while they remained such stockholders; and should any such association or corporation become insolvent, its stockholders may be severally compelled to pay such deficiency in proportion to the amount of stock owned by each, not to exceed the extent of the additional liability hereby created. The assignee or receiver of any such corporation, or in case there is none, or of his failure or refusal to act, any creditor thereof, may maintain an action in equity to determine the liability of the stockholders, and the amount to which each creditor shall be entitled; and all parties interested shall be brought into court. [18 G. A., ch. 208, §§ 1, 3; 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 12.]

The provisions of the constitution, art. VIII, § 9, rendering stockholders in a banking corporation or institution individually liable to an amount equal to their respective shares, is held to apply to banks of issue, and not to banks merely of discount and deposit: Allen v. Clayton, 63–11.

Under such constitutional provisions the liability of a stockholder in a bank is not limited in an action against him by a creditor to the proportional sum that can be collected from another stockholder, nor is it affected by the fact of fraudulent acts of the receiver or officers of the bank, nor can such stockholder delay the collection of the amount for which he is liable in order to secure contribution from other stockholders also liable: Stewart v. Lay, 45–604.

The court may make an assessment on the stockholders in an ex parte proceeding in connection with the appointment of a receiver subject to the right of each stockholder to contest his liability to such assessment when a demand is made to enforce it against him: State ex rel v. Union Stock Yards State Bank, 70 N. W., 752.

The liability of the stockholders is not directly to the creditor but arises on the insolvency of the bank and an assessment may be made in the discretion of the court for the payment by the receiver of the bank's indebtedness: Ibid.

The stockholder in a bank who by virtue of these provisions would become liable in the event of the insolvency of the bank may maintain a suit in equity for the appointment of a receiver of such bank when it becomes insolvent and is being operated at a loss: Dickerson v. Cass County Bank, 64 N. W., 395.

SEC. 1883. Distribution of proceeds. Should the whole amount for which the stockholders are made individually responsible, as provided by the preceding section, be found in any case to be inadequate to the payment of all the debts of any such association or corporation, after the application of its assets to the payment of such debts, then the amount due from such stockholders, on account of their individual liability created by said section, as such, shall be distributed equally among all the creditors of such corporation in proportion to the several sums due them. [18 G. A., ch. 208, § 2.]

SEC. 1884. Deposits not to be received by insolvent bank. No bank, banking house, exchange broker, deposit office, firm, company, corporation, or person engaged in the banking, brokerage, exchange or deposit business, shall, when insolvent, accept or receive on deposit, with or without interest, any money, bank bills or notes, United States treasury notes or currency, or other notes, bills, checks or drafts, or renew any certificate of deposit. [18 G. A., ch. 153, § 1.]

These statutory provisions as to fraudulent banking are applicable to national as well as to state banks: State v. Fields, 62 N. W., 653.

SEC. 1885. Penalty. If any such bank, banking house, exchange broker, deposit office, firm, company, corporation or person shall receive or accept on deposit any such deposits, as aforesaid, when insolvent, any owner, officer, director, cashier, manager, member or person knowing of such insolvency, who shall knowingly receive or accept, be accessory, or permit, or connive at receiving or accepting on deposit therein, or thereby, any such deposits, or renew any certificate of deposit, as aforesaid, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of not more than ten years, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment. [Same, § 2.]

On an indictment under this provision against partners doing a banking business for receiving a deposit while insolvent, evidence is admissible that such deposit was received by a duly authorized agent in the conduct of the business; and it is not necessary to aver in the indictment the fact that such deposit was received by an agent: State v. Cadwell, 79–432.

It is a crime under this section to receive, after insolvency, money on time deposit, for which a certificate of deposit is issued, as well as to receive general deposits: Ibid.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors, made five months after the receipt of the deposit, is admissible in evidence, for the purpose of showing in connection with other facts that the bank was insolvent at the time the deposit was made: Ibid.

The opinion of an expert book-keeper, based on the examination of the books which are in evidence, as to the fact of insolvency, is admissible: Ibid.

Where the defendants were a firm carrying on two banks, held, that, for the purpose of showing insolvency at the time of the receipt of a deposit, the condition of both banks was properly inquired into: Ibid.

Any bank whose affairs are so situated that it cannot meet its demands in the usual course of business, is, within the meaning of the law prohibiting the receipt of deposits, insolvent; and if deposits are received with the knowledge of such condition, a crime is committed: Ibid.

The crime consists in the deposit being received "therein or thereby" and is committed by the receipt of money on deposit if taken outside the bank rooms as well as within them: State v. Yetzer, 66 N. W., 737.

If an officer of the bank with knowledge of its insolvency directs a clerk without such knowledge to receive deposits and they are so received the ignorance of the clerk does not affect the guilt of the officer. It is not in such case the act of the clerk in receiving the deposit that constitutes the crime, but the act of the officer in directing it: Ibid.

A banker knowingly accepts and receives a deposit which is received by his clerk without authority if after having knowledge of such receipt he does not offer to return the deposit: State v. Eifert, 65 N. W., 309; S. C., 71 N. W., 248.

If the money is deposited for the owner by another the owner is to be deemed the depositor and may be so named in the indictment: Ibid.

The language of the section is such as to be applicable to any officer or managing party. An officer is within the scope of the section although he is not a managing party: State v. Yetzer, 66 N. W., 737.

SEC. 1886. Neglect of officers. Any officer or officers whose duty it is to make statement of the condition of its bank, and make publication of same, who shall wilfully neglect or refuse to perform such duties imposed upon them or either of them, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not less than three months nor more than three years in the penitentiary.

SEC. 1887. Penalty for false statements. Any owner, director, officer, agent, employe or clerk of any bank, who shall knowingly subscribe or make any false statements or false entries in the books thereof, or knowingly subscribe or exhibit false papers with intent to deceive any person authorized to examine its condition, or shall knowingly subscribe and make false reports, or shall knowingly divert the funds of the bank to other objects than those authorized by law, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars, and be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, and be forever after barred from holding any office created by this chapter. [25 G. A., ch. 30, § 3; 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 26.]

SEC. 1888. Intentional fraud. Any owner, director, officer, agent, employe or clerk of any bank, who is guilty of intentional fraud, or of deceiving the public or individuals in relation to the means or liabilities of such bank, or who aids, assists or consents to the payment of dividends which leave insufficient funds with which to meet the liabilities of the bank, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment of not less than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court; and such act shall cause a forfeiture of all the privileges of said bank, and the court may proceed to close the same in the manner prescribed by law. [15 G. A., ch. 60, § 27.]

SEC. 1889. Statement—doing business—loan and trust companies. The president and cashier of every savings and state bank shall cause to be kept at all times a full and correct list of the names and residences of the officers, directors, examining committee, and of all the stockholders in the bank, and the number of shares held by each, in the office where its business is transacted. Said list shall be subject to the inspection of all the stockholders and creditors of the bank during business hours of each day in which business may be legally transacted. A copy of such list, verified by the oath of the president or cashier, shall be transmitted to the auditor of state within ten days after each annual meeting. No corporation shall engage in the banking business, receive deposits, and transact the business generally done by banks, unless it is subject to and organized under the provisions of this title, or of the banking laws of the state heretofore existing, except that loan and trust companies may receive time deposits and issue drafts on their depositaries, but such companies shall be subject to examination, regulation and control by the auditor of state, like savings and state banks, and their stockholders shall be liable to the creditors of such companies as provided in section eighteen hundred and eighty-two of this chapter for stockholders in savings and state banks. Any corporation violating this section shall forfeit its charter at the suit of the attorney-general, and said corporation, its officers, directors and agents, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment of not less than two years in the penitentiary, or by both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court; provided that loan and trust companies organized under the general incorporation laws of the state, which were engaged in the banking business prior to the first day of January, 1886, and have continued therein since said date, may, by the proper additions to their articles of incorporation, become state banks within the provisions of this title, without incorporating the word "state" in the names of such corporations.

CHAPTER 13.

OF BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

SECTION 1890. Defined. Corporations organized for the purpose of furnishing money to their members upon sufficient security shall be known as building and loan or savings and loan associations. Domestic local building and loan or savings and loan associations shall include corporations, societies, organizations or associations incorporated under the laws of this state for the purpose of and doing business only within the county in which is situated the town or city named in its articles of incorporation as its principal place of business: provided that, where the town or city named in its articles of incorporation as the principal place of business is situated in more than one county, and the business of the association is restricted to the town or city and to the county within which is located its principal office, said association shall be deemed a domestic local building and loan or savings and loan association within the meaning of this chapter. Domestic building and loan or savings and loan associations shall include corporations, societies, organizations or associations incorporated under the laws of this state for the purposes herein provided, the business of which is not restricted to the county in which is situated the town or city named in its articles of incorporation as its principal place of business. Foreign building and loan or savings and loan associations shall include corporations, societies, organizations or associations incorporated under the laws of another state, territory, country or nation for the purposes specified herein. [26 G. A., ch. 85, § 1.]

SEC. 1891. Organization. Any number of persons not less than five, residents of the state of Iowa, may become incorporated as building and loan or savings and loan associations under the general incorporation laws of this state, except as otherwise herein provided, and upon complying with the provisions of this chapter. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1892. Capital. The capital named in the articles of incorporation shall be taken to mean the authorized capital, and the association may commence business when one hundred shares thereof have been subscribed and the other provisions of this chapter in relation thereto have been complied with. Such associations shall be governed by a board of directors who shall be elected annually by the stockholders, and who shall hold their office for not less than one nor more than five years, and, if for a longer period than one year, it shall be so arranged that the terms of an equal number thereof, as nearly as may be, shall expire each year. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1893. Articles. The articles of incorporation shall show:

1. The names and residences of the incorporators;
2. The name of the association and its principal place of business;
3. The purpose for which such association is formed;
4. The terms and plan of becoming and continuing a member;
5. The plan of making loans;
6. The plan of distributing profits;
7. The plan of equalizing losses;
8. The plan and terms of withdrawal of members;
9. The plan of providing for payment of expenses;
10. The number of shares into which capital stock is to be divided;
11. The classes into which its capital stock is to be divided, and the terms of paying for the same by subscribers;
12. The term of corporate existence;
13. The manner of electing officers and filling vacancies. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1894. Certificate of executive council—amendment of articles. Such articles of incorporation with the by-laws of the association shall be presented to the executive council, and if it finds they are in conformity with the law, and based upon a plan equitable in all respects to its members, it shall attach thereto its certificate of approval, and thereupon such articles and by-laws shall be filed in the office of the auditor of state, who shall issue a certificate authorizing the association to transact business. Amendments to such articles may be made from time to time at any regular or special meeting of the stockholders, and shall in like manner be submitted to the executive council and approved by it. The council shall keep a record of its proceedings with reference to such associations. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1895. Bonds of officers—liability of directors. The officers of any domestic building and loan or savings and loan association who sign or indorse checks or handle any funds or securities of such association shall give such bonds or fidelity insurance for the faithful performance of their duties in such sum as the board of directors may require, and no such officer shall be deemed qualified to enter upon the duties of his office until his bond is approved by the board of directors and by the state auditor. Said bond shall be deposited and filed with the auditor of state. All such bonds shall be increased or additional securities required by the board of directors or the auditor of state when it becomes necessary to protect the interests of the association or its members, and no director shall be accepted as surety on such bonds, and no person shall be accepted as surety on the bond of more than one officer of said association. The directors shall be individually liable for loss to the association or its members caused by their failure to require a compliance with the provisions of this section. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 1896. Same. The officers of any domestic local building and loan or savings and loan association who sign or indorse checks or handle any funds or securities of said association shall give such bonds or fidelity insurance for the faithful performance of their duties in such sum as the board of directors may require, and no such officer shall be deemed qualified to enter upon the duties of his office until his bond is approved by the board of directors and the clerk of the district court of the county of the principal place of business of said association. Said bonds shall be deposited with the said clerk, and it is hereby made the duty of the said clerk to approve said bonds and to receive the same as herein provided. No person shall be accepted as surety on the bond of more than one officer of said association. All such bonds shall be increased or additional securities required by the board of directors or by the clerk of said district court when it shall be deemed necessary to protect the interests of the association or its members. The directors shall be individually liable for loss to the association or to its members caused by their failure to require a compliance with the provisions of this section. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 1897. Banking prohibited. It shall be unlawful for any building and loan or savings and loan association to receive deposits of money without issuing shares of stock for the same, or to transact a banking business. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 1898. Nature of business—statement. All building and loan or savings and loan associations, upon receiving the certificate from the auditor, shall have power, subject to the terms and conditions contained in their articles of incorporation and by-laws, to issue stock to members to be paid for in single, stated, or monthly payments, but not more than ten thousand dollars of stock, computed at par value, of any kind shall be issued to one person; to assess and collect from members such dues, membership fees, fines, premiums, and interest on loans as may in the articles of incorporation and by-laws have been provided, and the same shall not be held to be usurious; to permit members, other than holders of guarantee stock, to withdraw all or a part of their stock deposits upon such terms and at such times as the articles of incorporation and by-laws may provide; to acquire, hold, encumber and convey such real estate and personal property as may be necessary for the transaction of their business; to make loans to members on such terms, conditions and securities as the articles of incorporation and by-laws provide; said loans to be made only on real estate security, or on the security of their own shares of stock, not to exceed ninety per cent. of the withdrawal value thereof. It shall be the duty of the secretary of every such association doing business in this state to prepare, on or before February fifteenth of each year, a duly verified statement, showing the book value and withdrawal value of a share of each class of stock in said association, for each monthly period up to January first preceding, and file the same with the auditor of state, which shall be preserved in his office. And the said association shall, on or before February fifteenth of each year, mail to each shareholder a written or printed copy of the same. In case of foreclosure, the borrower shall be charged with the full amount of the loan made to him, together with the dues, interest, premium and fines for which he is delinquent, and he shall be credited with the same value of his pledged shares as if he had voluntarily withdrawn the same. In event that judgment is obtained against a borrower from a building and loan association, no greater recovery shall be had than the net amount of principal actually received, with interest thereon at a rate not greater than twelve per centum per annum on the net amount of loan actually received by and paid to borrower, with statutory attorney fees; no evasion of this provision shall be had by means of any dues, membership fees, premiums, fines, forfeitures or other charges, any agreement to the contrary notwithstanding. [Same, § 9; C.'73, §§ 1185, 1186.]

Former provisions as to such associations held, not to authorize the taking of interest upon the premium bid for the loan. If the interest charged is more than lawful interest upon the amount actually loaned, the contract is usurious: Hawkeye Benefit and Loan Ass'n v. Blackburn, 48–385; Burlington Mut. Loan Ass'n v. Heider, 55–424.

SEC. 1899. Investment of funds. All funds, except those necessary to defray the expenses of the association, shall be invested for the benefit of the shareholders. For every loan made a non-negotiable note or bond secured by first mortgage on real estate shall be given, unless the prior mortgage is to the same association; then a second mortgage may be taken to secure said note, except when such loan is on the withdrawal value of stock only. Said note or bond shall be accompanied by the transfer of the shares of stock of the borrower to the association, to be held as collateral security. [26 G. A., ch. 85, § 10.]

SEC. 1900. Voting shares of stock. Each member shall have one vote for each one hundred dollars of stock par value owned and held by him at any election, and may vote the same by proxy, but no person shall vote more than ten per cent. of the outstanding shares at the time of said election. Any one depositing or transferring stock to the association as collateral security shall be deemed the owner of such stock within the meaning of this section. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 1901. Guardians—executors—trustees. Any guardian, executor, administrator or trustee shall have the right to vote, manage and control the shares held by him in his representative capacity. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 1902. Expenses—dividends. The expenses of every such association shall be paid from the earnings, or from a fixed charge provided for in the by-laws, and said expenses shall not exceed eight dollars for the maturing of every one hundred dollars of installment stock, said sum to be equitably distributed over the maturity period; and two dollars per year for every one hundred dollars for full paid or prepaid stock. The net earnings of such association shall be apportioned as a dividend, annually, semiannually or quarterly, to members, in such manner as the articles of incorporation and by-laws may provide. Membership fees and expenses incurred in making loans shall not be deemed a part of the expenses of the association. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 1903. Dues—premiums—losses. Dues, fines, premiums, and interest less current expenses, shall accrue to the shareholders, and any net loss shall be deducted before declaring any dividend. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 1904. Examination. At least once in each year the auditor of state shall, by himself or some competent person appointed by him, make an examination of all domestic and foreign building and loan and savings and loan associations doing business in this state, and may examine under oath any officer, agent or employe of the association, or other person, and may compel the production of its books and papers, and for this purpose such examiner shall have the same power as the district court to secure the attendance of witnesses and the production of such books and papers, and to punish as for contempt. If the examination is made by the auditor in person, he shall receive his actual expenses. If by another, his actual expenses and five dollars per day, which in either case shall be paid by the association examined: provided, the expense charged for such examination to any one association shall not exceed two hundred dollars for any one year. A record of such examination shall be kept in the auditor's office, showing in detail as to each association all matters connected with the conduct of the business, its financial standing and everything touching its solvency, plan of business, and integrity. If the report is made by another than the auditor, it shall be under oath. Examinations may be made at such other times as the auditor may order. If any such association refuse to submit to such examination, the auditor shall revoke its certificate of authority. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 1905. At request of shareholders. When twenty shareholders of any domestic local building and loan or savings and loan association shall in writing request the auditor of state, he shall have the same authority and shall proceed to make an examination of the affairs of such association in the manner provided in this chapter for the examination of domestic associations, and the costs and penalties shall be the same. [Same, § 16.]

SEC. 1906. Auditor's report. The auditor shall, in his biennial report to the governor, state the general conduct and condition of the building and loan or savings and loan associations doing business in the state, with such suggestions as he may deem expedient. Such report shall also include the information contained in the statements of the associations, arranged in tabulated form, with the names and compensations of the clerks employed by him, the entire income, the source whence derived, and the expense during the year ending on the thirty-first day of December, in detail. [Same, § 17.]

SEC. 1907. Proceedings against, by state. When any building and loan or savings and loan association is conducting its business illegally, or in violation of its articles of incorporation or by-laws, or is practicing deception upon its members or the public, or is pursuing a plan of business that is injurious to the interests of its members, or its affairs are in an unsafe condition, the auditor of state shall notify the directors thereof, and, if they shall fail to put its affairs upon a safe basis, he shall advise the attorney-general thereof, who shall take the necessary steps to wind up its affairs in the manner provided by law. [Same, § 18.]

SEC. 1908. Foreign companies. If any foreign building and loan or savings and loan association, as herein defined, desires to transact business within this state, it shall furnish to the executive council a certified copy of its articles of incorporation, or charter and by-laws, and a certified copy of the state laws under which it is organized, together with a report for the year next preceding, verified by its president, vice-president, secretary, and at least three directors, which report shall show:

1. The amount of its authorized capital stock and the par value of each share;
2. The number of shares sold during the year;
3. The number of shares canceled or withdrawn during the year;
4. The number of shares in force at the end of the year;
5. A detailed statement of all funds received during the year and all disbursements;
6. The salaries paid each of its officers;
7. A detailed statement of its assets and liabilities at the end of such year and the nature thereof;
8. Any other matters of fact which the council may require. Upon receipt of such report the council, if it finds therefrom that the association is properly managed, that its financial condition is satisfactory, and that its business is conducted upon a safe and reliable plan and one equitable to its members, shall so certify upon such copy and statement, and, the same being filed with the auditor, he shall issue a like certificate as in the case of domestic associations. [Same, § 19.]

SEC. 1909. Securities deposited. Every such foreign building and loan or savings and loan association, before the state auditor shall issue to it a certificate, shall comply with the following provisions:

1. It shall deposit with the auditor of state one hundred thousand dollars, either in cash, or bonds of the United States or of the state of Iowa, or of any county or municipal corporation of the state of Iowa, or notes secured by first mortgage on real estate, or a like amount in such other security as shall be satisfactory to said auditor.
2. Such foreign association may collect and use the interest on any securities so deposited as long as it fulfills its obligations and complies with the provisions of this chapter. It may also exchange them for other securities of equal value and satisfactory to said auditor. [Same, § 20.]

SEC. 1910. Liability for claims. The deposit made with the auditor shall be held as security for all claims of resident shareholders of the state of Iowa against said association, and shall be liable for all judgments or decrees thereon, and subject to the payment of the same. [Same, § 21.]

SEC. 1911. Service of process. Such foreign association shall also file with the auditor of this state a duly authenticated copy of a resolution adopted by the board of directors of such association, stipulating and agreeing that, if any legal process or notice affecting such association be served on the said state auditor, and a copy thereof be mailed, postage prepaid, by the party procuring and issuing the same, or his attorney, to said association, addressed to its home office, then such service and mailing of such process or notice shall have the same effect as personal service on said association within this state. When proceedings have been commenced against or affecting any foreign building and loan or savings and loan association, as contemplated herein, and notice has been served upon the auditor of the state, the same shall be by duplicate copies, one of which shall be filed in his office, and the other mailed by him, postage prepaid, to the home office of such association. [Same, § 22.]

SEC. 1912. Filing amendments to articles. All foreign building and loan or savings and loan associations shall file with the auditor of state, within ten days after their adoption, a duly certified copy of any amendment or amendments to their articles of incorporation or by-laws that may have been adopted. [Same, § 23.]

SEC. 1913. Fees. Foreign building and loan or savings and loan associations shall pay to the auditor of state the following fees, which shall be paid by him into the state treasury: For each application to do business in this state, one hundred dollars; for each certificate of authority and each annual renewal thereof, fifty dollars; for filing each annual statement of the assets of the association, as shown by the statement filed, amounts to fifty thousand dollars or less, three dollars; if more than fifty thousand dollars and less than one hundred thousand dollars, five dollars; if more than one hundred thousand dollars and less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, ten dollars; if more than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and less than five hundred thousand dollars, twenty dollars; if more than five hundred thousand dollars and less than one million dollars, thirty dollars; and if more than one million dollars, fifty dollars. Domestic building and loan or savings and loan associations shall pay to the auditor of state the sum of twenty-five dollars for each certificate of authority and each renewal thereof, and for filing each annual statement, ten dollars. Domestic local building and loan or savings and loan associations shall pay to the auditor of state for filing each annual statement the sum of five dollars. [Same, § 24.]

SEC. 1914. Annual statement. All building and loan or saving and loan associations doing business in this state shall, on or before the first day of February of each year, file with the auditor of state a detailed report and financial statement of their business for the year ending the thirty-first day of December next preceding, and such report shall be verified by the president and secretary or by three directors of the association, and such report shall show:

1. The date when the association was incorporated and the par value of each share of stock;
2. The number of shares sold during the year;
3. The number of shares canceled or withdrawn during the year;
4. The number of shares in force at the end of the year;
5. A detailed statement of receipts and disbursements, showing specifically from what source received and in what manner applied;
6. A statement of the assets and liabilities at the end of the year;
7. The salary paid to each of its officers during the year;
8. All foreign building and loan or savings and loan associations shall, in addition to the above, report the name of each shareholder of such association residing within the state of Iowa, together with the post-office address of each, and the number of shares owned by each of said persons on the first day of January preceding, and the cash value of each of said shares on said date. [Same, § 25.]

SEC. 1915. Penalty. If an association shall fail or refuse to furnish to the auditor of state the report above required, it shall forfeit the sum of twenty-five dollars for every day such report shall be withheld, and the auditor of state may maintain an action in the name of the state to recover such penalty, and the same shall be paid into the treasury of the state. [Same, § 26.]

SEC. 1916. Laws of other states—reciprocity. When by the laws of any other state, territory, country or nation, or by the decision or rulings of the appropriate and proper officers thereof, any greater taxes, fines, penalties, licenses, fees, deposits of money or other securities, or other obligations or prohibitions, are demanded of building and loan or savings and loan associations of this state, as a condition to be complied with before doing business in such other state, territory, country or nation, or their agents therein, than are imposed upon foreign associations doing business in this state, so long as such laws continue in force, the same requirements, obligations and prohibitions of whatever kind shall be imposed on all building and loan or savings and loan associations of such other state, territory, country or nation doing business in this state, and upon their agents. It is hereby made the duty of the auditor of state to enforce the provisions of this section. [Same, § 27.]

SEC. 1917. Revocation of certificate. If a certificate of authority to do business shall have been issued to any association, and it shall violate any of the provisions of this chapter, the auditor of state shall revoke the same. [Same, § 28.]

SEC. 1918. False statements. If any officer, director or agent of any building and loan or savings and loan association shall knowingly and wilfully swear falsely to any statement in regard to any matter in this chapter required to be made under oath, he shall be guilty of perjury. If any director of any such association shall vote to declare a dividend greater than has been earned; or if any officer or director or any agent or employe of any such association shall issue, utter, or offer to utter, any warrant, check, order or promise to pay of such association, or shall sign, transfer, cancel or surrender any note, bond, draft, mortgage, or other evidence of indebtedness belonging to such association, or shall demand, collect or receive any money from any member or other person in the name of such association without being authorized to do so by the board of directors in pursuance of its lawful power; or if any such officer, director, agent or employe shall embezzle or convert to his own use, or shall use or pledge for his own benefit or purpose, any moneys, securities, credits, or other property belonging to the association, or shall knowingly do or attempt to do any business for such association that has not procured and does not hold the certificate of authority therefor as in this chapter provided, or shall knowingly make or cause to be made any false entries in the books of the association, or shall, with the intent to deceive any person making an examination in this chapter required to be made, exhibit to the person making the examination any false entry, paper or statement, or shall knowingly do or solicit business for any building and loan or savings and loan association which has not procured the required certificate therefor, he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years, or punished by both such fine and imprisonment. [Same, § 29.]

SEC. 1919. Associations in existence. All building and loan or savings and loan associations having heretofore transacted business in this state, which shall not have complied with the provisions of this chapter, shall have the right to close up their business and fulfill their contracts heretofore entered into with the residents of this state, without being subject to the penalties prescribed in this chapter. [Same, § 32.]

SEC. 1920. Taxation of shares. Shares of stock issued by building and loan or savings and loan associations shall be classified as moneys and credits for the purposes of taxation. [Same, § 33.]

TITLE X.

OF INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF MILL DAMS AND RACES.

SECTION 1921. Petition. Any person who owns land on one or both sides of a water course, and desires to erect or heighten any dam thereon, or construct or enlarge a race therefrom, for the purpose of propelling any mill or machinery, erected or to be erected thereon, by the water thereof, may file in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county in which such mill or machinery is, or is to be erected, a petition, designating himself as plaintiff and the owners of lands affected thereby as defendants, and describing with reasonable certainty the locality where such mill or machinery is or is to be erected, with that of such dam or race, and also of the lands that will be overflowed or otherwise affected thereby. [C. '73, §§ 1188–9; R., §§ 1264–5, 1274.]

The action here contemplated is to be commenced by the mill-owner. The land owner is left to his common-law remedy or his remedy in equity. And the mill-owner may, after proceedings are commenced, dismiss them without the consent of the other party: Hunting v. Curtis, 10–152.

The statute does not require that the petition should be sworn to: Gammell v. Potter, 2–562.

The dam, when erected in accordance with these provisions, will not be a nuisance, but may be so erected and maintained as to become such: State v. Close, 35–570.

This and the following sections are not unconstitutional: Burnham v. Thompson, 35–421; the use, though for private profit, is such a public one as to authorize the taking of public property therefor (arguendo): Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30–9.

Before the utilization of steam, the establishment of mills and manufactories and the use of water-power was deemed a public necessity for which private property might properly be condemned. If such statutes were now enacted for the first time it is possible, if not probable, that they would not be sustained: Fleming v. Hull, 73–598.

There is no limitation as to the purpose for which the mills and other machinery are to be used: Burnham v. Thompson, 35–421.

The proceedings need not necessarily be had before the work is commenced, but may be instituted while it is in progress: Ibid.

In the proceeding compensation for damages arising after the filing of the petition and before the assessment by the jury should be allowed: Ibid.

It is only injuries to lands which will be directly affected by the erection of the dam which are contemplated. And the owner of lands remote from the dam and not fronting upon the river need not be made party to the proceedings and cannot afterwards recover for injuries suffered, as, for instance, saturation by percolation: Wilson v. Hanthorn, 72–451.

SEC. 1922. Order for a jury—notice. The clerk shall thereupon issue an order, with a copy of the petition attached, directed to the sheriff, commanding him to summon a jury of twelve disinterested electors of his county to meet on a day fixed therein, and upon the lands described, which order, including the copy of the petition, shall be served on the defendants in the same manner and for the same length of time previous to the day fixed in the order as is required for the service of original notices. When service is made upon a minor or insane person having no guardian, the clerk at the time of issuing the order shall, by indorsement made thereon, appoint a suitable person to make defense for him. [C. '73, § 1190; R., §§ 1266, 1270.]

Where the husband is made party to the proceeding as the owner of the land the fact that he afterwards has the title vested in his wife collusively will not enable him to bring action for damages in disregard of proceedings for condemnation: Lummery v. Braddy, 8–33.

If, upon motion, the writ is quashed, the court should award another, no original notice of such second writ being necessary: Burnham v. Thompson, 35–421.

SEC. 1923. Lands in another county. If any of the lands are situated in a different county than that in which the petition is required to be filed, the proceedings shall apply thereto to the same extent as if such lands were situated in the county where it is filed. [C. '73, § 1191; R., § 1270.]

SEC. 1924. Action of jury. The jury shall be sworn to, and shall, impartially and to the best of their skill and judgment view the lands described in the petition, and ascertain and appraise the damages each of the defendants will sustain by reason of such lands being overflowed or otherwise injuriously affected by the dam or race, or heightening or enlarging the same, and ascertain whether the dwelling-house, outhouse, orchard, or garden of any defendant will be so affected, and, if so, whether the same has been placed there for that purpose. [C.'73, § 1192.]

It is not necessary that the inquisition of the jury shall say how far the lands of the claimant may be affected by the overflow: Gammell v. Potter, 2–562.

The overflow of agricultural land and the consequent damage is not the only matter to be looked at in estimating the damages. The flooding of a coal bed or stone quarry, or loss of a spring, or the destruction of a ford, should be taken into consideration: Walters v. Houck, 7–72.

SEC. 1925. Evidence—report. The jury may, in addition to examining the premises, hear and examine witnesses, and shall report their findings in writing, and attach the same to the order, which shall be returned by the sheriff to the clerk. [C.'73, § 1193.]

Failure of the jury to estimate damages which should be included must be taken advantage of either in an application to the court to set aside the verdict and award a new inquiry, or else under the provision giving a right of action to the applicant for any loss or damage resulting, but not actually foreseen by the jury, nor estimated by them on the inquest: Gammell v. Potter, 6–548.

SEC. 1926. Appeal. Either party may appeal from such assessment of damages to the district court within thirty days after the assessment is made, in the manner, and the proceedings on such appeal shall be, as provided in case of appeals from assessment of damages in taking property for works of internal improvement. [15 G. A., ch. 22, C. '73, § 1194.]

SEC. 1927. Cause shown. When the report of the jury is filed, the clerk shall issue an order, directed to the defendants, requiring them to appear at the next term of court and show cause why a license should not be granted to construct or heighten the dam, or construct or enlarge the race; which order shall be served in the same manner as the original order in the proceeding. [C. '73, § 1195; R., § 1268.]

SEC. 1928. Objections filed—pleadings—another jury. On or before the day fixed in the order to show cause, the defendants may file any objections they see proper to the prior proceedings, or to granting the license. The petition and objections shall constitute the pleadings, and may be amended upon such reasonable terms as the court may order; and if the proceedings of the jury are found defective in substance, it may direct a new jury to be impaneled and prescribe the terms of the notice to be given. The return of the sheriff may be amended at any stage of the proceedings in accordance with the facts. [C. '73, § 1196.]

A defendant may plead and prove, by way of objection, facts tending to show that the granting of the license would be unreasonable or not for the public benefit; but he cannot thus set up matters legitimately involved in the question of damages submitted to the jury, and pertinent only to an application to set aside their finding and award a new inquiry. Until set aside their ascertainment must be considered conclusive: Gammell v. Potter, 6–548.

The overruling by the court of a motion to set aside the verdict of the jury and quash the writ may be appealed from, without any final judgment having been rendered: Burnham v. Thompson, 35–421.

SEC. 1929. Evidence taken. Evidence may be taken, to be introduced on the final hearing before the court, in the same manner as in equitable actions. [C.'73, § 1197.]

SEC. 1930. License granted. If the court shall find that neither the dwelling-house outhouse, garden or orchard of any defendant will be overflowed or injuriously affected, or that the same were placed on the premises for the purpose of being thereby overflowed or injuriously affected, and the same is reasonable and for the public benefit, license shall be granted to construct such dam or race thereon, the plaintiff paying to the rightful parties the damages found by the jury and decreed by the court. [C. '73, § 1193, 1198; R., § 1269.]

SEC. 1931. Forfeiture of. If the plaintiff does not begin within one year from the granting of the license to construct said dam or race, and finish and have in operation the mill or machinery within three years thereafter, and afterwards keep it in good repair for the accommodation of the public, or, in case it or the machinery is destroyed, he shall not begin to repair or rebuild the same within one year, and finish it within three years, the license shall be forfeited. [C.'73, § 1199; R., § 1269.]

SEC. 1932. Continuance. If the order shall not be executed by the sheriff on the day therein mentioned, he may, from time to time, appoint another day, notice thereof being given to the parties interested as hereinbefore provided; and if the inquest cannot be completed in one day, the sheriff shall adjourn the same from day to day until it is. [C. '73, § 1200; R., § 1270.]

SEC. 1933. No bar to action. No proceedings under this chapter shall bar an action which could have been maintained if this chapter had not been enacted, unless the prosecution or action was actually foreseen and estimated upon the inquest. [C. '73, § 1201; R., § 1271.]

This section does not bar an action for damages accruing before the proceeding. But where the jury found that certain land would be affected, but allowed no damages, held, that nevertheless, an action for damages subsequently suffered must have been foreseen and estimated, and that such action was therefore barred: Watson v. Van Meter, 43–76.

The fact that the land owner is entitled to recover damages not foreseen and estimated by the jury does not entitle him to maintain an injunction to restrain the maintenance of the claim: Lummery v. Braddy, 8–33.

SEC. 1934. New party. Any owner of land affected by any proceedings under this chapter, who has not been made a party thereto, may be brought in by proper proceedings at any time before final decree. [C. '73, § 1202; R., § 1272.]

SEC. 1935. Costs. Costs and fees under this chapter shall be the same as in other cases for like services, and shall be paid by the plaintiff. [C. '73, § 1203; R., § 1273.]

SEC. 1936. Right to repair. Where the water backed up by any dam belonging to any mill or machinery is about to break through or over the banks of the stream or race, or to wash a channel, so as to turn the water of such stream or race, or any part thereof, out of its ordinary channel, whereby such mill or machinery will be materially injured or affected, the owner or occupant of such mill or machinery, if he does not own such banks or the land lying contiguous thereto, may, if necessary, enter thereon, and erect and keep in repair such embankments and other works as may be necessary to prevent such water from breaking through or over the banks, or washing a channel as aforesaid; such owner or occupier committing thereon no unnecessary waste or damage, and being liable to pay all damages which the owner of the lands may actually sustain by reason thereof. [C. '73, § 1204; R., §§ 1275–6.]

SEC. 1937. Penalty for injuring embankment. If any person shall injure, destroy or remove any such embankment or other works, the owner or occupier of such mill or machinery may recover of such person all damages he may sustain by reason thereof. [C. '73, § 1205; R., § 1277.]

SEC. 1938. Fall below dam. Any person owning and using a water power for the purpose of propelling machinery shall have the right to acquire, maintain and utilize the fall below such power for the purpose of improving the same, in like manner and to the same extent as provided in this chapter for the erection or heightening of mill dams. After such right has been acquired, the fall shall be considered part and parcel of said water power or privilege, and the deepening or excavating of the stream or tail race, as herein contemplated, shall in no way affect any rights relating to such water power acquired by the owner thereof prior to such change. [C. '73, § 1206.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF LEVEES, DRAINS, DITCHES AND WATER COURSES.

SECTION 1939. Supervisors to locate. The board of supervisors of any county may locate and cause to be constructed levees, ditches or drains, or change the direction of any water course in such county, whenever the same will be conducive to the public health, convenience or welfare. [19 G. A., ch. 44, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 1; C. '73, § 1207.]

The provisions of this chapter are constitutional: Hatch v. Pottawattamie County, 43–442.

The work is not to be undertaken for private advantage, but for the public good: Patterson v. Baumer, 43–477.

The county is not liable for damages to land caused by a ditch becoming obstructed: Dashner v. Mills County, 88–401.

The remedy of the person damaged in such case would be to make application for the repair of the ditch and to have a special assessment made for that purpose: Ibid.

SEC. 1940. Proceedings—bond—survey—notice. A petition signed by a majority of the persons resident in the county, owning land abutting upon such proposed improvement, shall be first filed in the office of the county auditor, setting forth the necessity for the same, the starting point, route and terminus, together with a bond, with sufficient sureties to be approved by him, conditioned to pay all costs and expenses incurred in case the supervisors refuse to grant the prayer of the petition. The auditor shall thereupon place a copy of the petition in the hands of the county surveyor or a competent engineer, who shall make a survey of the proposed improvement, and return a plat and profile thereof to the auditor; which return shall set forth a full and detailed description thereof, its availability, necessity and probable cost, with a description of each tract of land owned by different persons, through or abutting upon which the improvement is proposed to be located, how it will be affected thereby, and its situation and elevation as compared with that of adjoining lands, with such other facts as he may deem material. The auditor shall immediately thereafter cause notice in writing to be served on the owner of each tract of land, through or abutting upon which the proposed improvement is to be located, who is a resident of the county, of the pendency and prayer of said petition, and the session of the board of supervisors at which the same will be heard, which notice shall be served ten days prior to said session in the same manner that original notices are required to be served. In case any such owner is a non-resident of the county, such notice as to him shall be published for two consecutive weeks in some newspaper published in the county, proof thereof being made by affidavits as in case of legal notices published in newspapers, which proof shall be filed with the board. [19 G. A., ch. 44, § 2; C. '73, § 1208.]

1952

A petition to the court signed by the residents interested in the improvements as prescribed in this section is a jurisdictional matter. Unless the requirements of the statute in this respect are complied with the supervisors can obtain no jurisdiction. In the absence of a showing by the record of the board or in some other manner authorized by law, no presumption will be exercised of the existence of the jurisdictional facts necessary to show that the supervisors acquired authority to act, such as that the petition was signed by the required number of residents: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70–627.

A person who signs a petition and afterwards a remonstrance must be regarded not as a petitioner but as a remonstrant: Ibid.

The petition must be signed by a majority of the persons residing in the county owning land adjacent to the proposed improvement, otherwise the board will not have the jurisdiction to levy taxes: Shaw v. Supervisors of Johnson County, 72–763.

Where the proceedings of a board of supervisors for the construction of a levee were void for want of jurisdiction because a petition was not filed in the office of the county auditor, signed by a majority of the persons residents of the county owning lands adjacent to the improvement, setting forth the necessity for the same, and the starting point, route and termini, held, that as the legislature might have dispensed with this requisite in the first instance, it was within its power to do so by a subsequent curative act: Richman v. Supervisors of Muscatine County, 77–513.

Action by certiorari to review the action of the board of supervisors in levying a tax to pay for the construction of a ditch, the proceedings for the establishment of which are void, may be brought within one year after the levy of the tax: Shepard v. Supervisors of Johnson County, 72–258.

SEC. 1941. Location—damages. The board, at the session set for hearing said petition, shall thereupon proceed to hear and determine the petition, and, if necessary, view the premises, and if they find such improvement conducive to the public health, convenience or welfare, and no claims shall have been made for damages as provided in the next section, they shall locate and establish the same on the route specified in the plat and return of the county surveyor or engineer. But if any such claim has been made, further proceedings shall be adjourned to the next regular session, and the county auditor shall forthwith appoint appraisers to assess such damages, who shall proceed in the manner provided by law for the assessment of damages in the opening of roads; and the sum so assessed in favor of said claimant shall be paid in the first instance by the parties benefited by such improvement, or secured to be paid upon such terms and conditions as the county auditor may deem just and proper; and the board shall, at the next regular session after such damages have been assessed and paid, or secured, as aforesaid, proceed to locate and establish the improvement as hereinbefore provided, and place a competent engineer in charge of the work. [19 G. A., ch. 44, § 3; C. '73, § 1209.]

SEC. 1942. Claim for damages. Any person claiming damages as compensation for land required for the construction of such improvement, or for injury sustained by the change of direction of any such water course, shall make his application in writing therefor to the board of supervisors, on or before the first day of the session at which the petition has been set for hearing, and on failure to make the same shall be held to have waived his right thereto. [19 G. A., ch. 44, § 4; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 2; C. '73, § 1210.]

SEC. 1943. Work divided. When the board shall have established any such improvement, it shall divide the same into suitable sections, not less in number than the number of tracts of land of different owners through which the same may be located, and prescribe the time within which work upon each section shall be completed. [19 G. A., ch. 44, § 5; C. '73, § 1211.]

SEC. 1944. Letting work—payment. The auditor shall cause notice to be given of the time and place of letting, the kind and approximate amount of work to be done on each section, and the time fixed for its completion, by publication for thirty days in some newspaper printed in said county, and shall let it upon each separate section to the lowest bidder therefor, who shall be required to execute a bond, with sufficient sureties, in an amount equal to ten per cent. of the estimated cost of the work so let, or deposit such amount in cash with the auditor, as security for the performance of his contract. The engineer in charge of the construction shall furnish the contractor monthly estimates of the amount of work done on each section, and upon the filing of the same with the auditor, he shall draw a warrant in favor of the contractor for eighty per cent. of the value of the work done, according to the estimate; and when said improvement is completed to the satisfaction of the engineer in charge, and so certified by him to the auditor, he shall draw a warrant in favor of said contractor upon the levee or drainage fund for the balance due, as provided in the following section. If any person to whom any portion of said work has been let shall fail to perform the same as, and in the time, specified in his contract, the cash deposited by him shall be forfeited to, or the penalty named in the bond may be recovered in an action thereon by, the county auditor, for the benefit of the levee or drainage district, on said contract, as liquidated damages, and it shall be relet by the auditor in the manner hereinbefore provided. [19 G. A., ch. 44, § 6; 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 8; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 1; C. '73, § 1212.]

SEC. 1945. Costs and fees—how paid. The auditor and engineer shall each be allowed for their services such sum as may be fixed by the board of supervisors, and all other fees or costs shall be the same as is provided by law for like services in other cases, and if the county surveyor performs service in relation thereto, the same as is provided by law; all of which, together with damages assessed, shall be paid out of the county treasury from the fund collected for that purpose, upon the order of the county auditor. [16 G. A., ch. 140, § 3; C. '73, § 1213.]

A payment out of the general funds contrary to the provisions of this section does not render the tax provided by the next section invalid: Patterson v. Baumer, 43–477, 481.

SEC. 1946. Assessment of costs and damages. When any levee, ditch, drain, or change of direction of any water course shall have been located and established, as provided in this chapter, or when it shall be necessary to cause the same to be repaired or reopened, the auditor shall appoint three persons, one of whom shall be a competent civil engineer, and two who shall be resident freeholders of the county, not living within the township or townships where the improvement is or is to be located, and not interested therein or in a like question, nor related to any party whose land is affected thereby, who shall within twenty days after such appointment personally inspect and classify as "dry," "low," "wet," or "swamp" all the land benefited by the location and construction of the improvement, or the repairing or reopening of the same, and shall make an equitable apportionment of the cost, expenses, cost of construction, fees, and damages assessed for the construction of any such improvement, or of repairing or reopening the same, and make report thereof in writing to the board of supervisors; which apportionment shall be assessed among the owners of the land along or in the vicinity of such improvement and to be benefited thereby, in proportion to the benefit to each of them, and levied upon the lands of the owners so benefited in said proportions, and collected in the same manner as other taxes are levied and collected for county purposes; which fund so collected shall be kept separate from other county funds, and shall be paid out only for purposes properly connected with the improvement, on the order of the county auditor, on claims properly certified by the engineer in charge of the improvement as in this chapter provided, or on the order of the board of supervisors. The engineer shall receive for each day's service, while so engaged, five dollars, and the other commissioners shall each receive two dollars per day, to be paid out of the funds so collected. [21 G. A., ch. 139; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 7; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 4; C. '73, § 1214.]

"Vicinity," as used in this section, does not mean adjoining to or abutting on, but near by, close by, or neighboring country. The board being vested with the power to determine what land in the vicinity should be assessed has a large discretion as a local tribunal and may assess one parcel of land more, another less, and others not at all: Lambert v. Mills County, 58–666.

As the county has thus ample power to provide for the payment of a debt incurred for the construction of a ditch by the levy of a special tax therefor, a judgment may be rendered against it upon a warrant issued, payable out of the special fund for the construction of such improvement. Demand on the board to levy a tax to pay such warrant is not necessary before maintaining such action. It seems, however, that the creditor, after obtaining judgment on such warrant, could not by mandamus compel the treasurer to pay such judgment out of the general funds of the county, a method of raising funds for the payment of such claims being provided by statute: Mills County Nat. Bank v. Mills County, 67–697.

Where the board of supervisors makes an equitable apportionment of the cost of a ditch and levy a tax therefor, an original petition for an injunction to restrain its collection, when the only ground of complaint is that the ground is not benefited is not the proper remedy: Hatch v. Pottawattmie County, 43–442.

By ordering payment the board of supervisors determines that the work has been completed, and this is a matter within their authority to determine, and their action can not be reviewed in a proceeding to enjoin the collection of taxes: Patterson v. Baumer, 43–477.

Irregularity in letting of one contract should not render the tax levied by the county for payment of a ditch constructed void, when the tax levied was to pay for the entire work: Ibid.

Land owners in the vicinity of an improvement must be presumed to have notice of the action of the county in ordering the work and causing it to be prosecuted, and of any irregularities in the letting of the contracts therefor, and by failure to object before the expenditure of money and labor by the county and the contractors, they will be estopped from objecting to the collection of the taxes: Ibid.

The statute does not prescribe that in proceedings for the reopening and repair of a ditch a petition shall be presented asking that the work be ordered, etc. These things are required when the ditch is first established and the work done, but not in case of repairs ordered: Yeomans v. Riddle, 84–147.

The supervisors, by the petition, notice and other prior proceedings, acquired jurisdiction of the matters involved, and of the lands and land holders, and the ditch having been constructed, the statute empowers them to keep it in existence in the manner prescribed in this section: Ibid.

When it becomes necessary to reopen or repair a ditch, the auditor has power, without petition, and without direction of the supervisors, to appoint the commissioners contemplated by this section, who shall make an apportionment of the expenses and report to the board, whose duty it then becomes to assess such expenses and costs upon the owners of the lands benefited: Ibid.

The repair of the ditch may involve work to be done elsewhere than in or at it. Its faults and imperfections may be removed by subsequent repairs and changes. It may become necessary to seek a new outlet and terminus in order to find the necessary fall: Ibid.

The assessment under this section for repairs is in the nature of a tax, and the taxpayer is not entitled to notice of the levy. The right to appeal protects his interests: Ibid.

The provisions of this section cover an assessment for the repairing or reopening a ditch as well as for its original construction and one whose property is likely to be damaged by obstructions in the ditch should take proper proceedings to have the ditch repaired by an assessment for that purpose: Dashner v. Mills County, 88–401.

Lands which are indirectly benefited by a levee, by the improvement of means of access by roads, and by the reclaiming of low, wet lands in the vicinity, may be assessed a proper proportion of the cost of the construction of the levee: Chambliss v. Johnson, 77–611.

After the assessment is made, it is not allowable, upon appeal, to show that the lands assessed were not benefited by the improvement, the only question which can be raised being as to whether or not they were assessed in the proper proportion: Ibid.

SEC. 1947. Appeals. An appeal may be taken to the district court from the order of the board of supervisors in fixing the assessment upon lands, in the same manner appeals may be taken in the location of roads, and within the same time. But on such appeal it shall not be competent to show that the lands assessed were not benefited by the improvement. The petitioners, or any of them, and claimants for damages as compensation for lands taken or injuries sustained in any such proceedings, may in like manner appeal from the order locating and establishing such improvement, or refusing so to do, or from the amount of damages allowed, and the county auditor shall keep a full and complete record of all proceedings in each case, and, upon an appeal being taken, shall make out transcripts thereof as provided in appeals taken from the assessment of damages in cases of the location of roads. [21 G. A., ch. 139; 19 G. A., ch. 44, §§ 7, 8, 11; 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 4; 16 G. A., ch. 140, §§ 4, 5; C. '73, §§ 1214–16.]

After the assessment is made the only question which may be raised as to the assessment is whether the land in question has been assessed in its proper proportion: Chambliss v. Johnson, 77–611.

No appeal from the action of the board in assessing the cost of the improvement upon land in the vicinity is provided for in behalf of the party whose land is assessed: Lambert v. Mills County, 58–666.

SEC. 1948. Nuisance. Any ditch, drain or water course which is now or may hereafter be constructed so as to prevent the surplus and overflow waters from the adjacent land from entering the same, is hereby declared a nuisance, and the same may be abated as such; and the diverting, obstructing, impeding, or filling up of such ditches, drains, or water courses, or breaking down of such levees in any manner by any person, without legal authority, is hereby declared a nuisance, criminally punishable as such. [21 G. A., ch. 139; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 7; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 4; C. '73, §§ 1214, 1216.]

SEC. 1949. Through two or more counties. When the improvement petitioned for extends into or through two or more contiguous counties, or parts thereof, the boards of supervisors of each of the counties, upon the presentation of the petition, shall appoint a commissioner, and the commissioners thus appointed, within twenty days after the selection of the one last named, shall meet and locate the same through or into said counties. They shall appoint a competent engineer, who shall have charge of the construction of the work, and with him shall make a survey of the proposed levee, ditch, drain, or change of water course, and make written return thereof to the county auditors of the several counties in which the location shall be made in whole or in part; which return shall in all respects be the same as is required in case of the location of such improvement in but a single county; and thereafter all subsequent proceedings relating to the condemnation or taking of land, the compensation therefor, damages on account of the work, assessment of lands for taxation, and in every other matter and thing, shall in all respects be the same as in like cases where the improvement is situated in but one county. Appeals in such case may be taken to the district court of the county where the land is situated. [19 G. A., ch. 44, §§ 9–11; 18 G. A., ch. 85, §§ 2–5; 17 G. A., ch. 121.]

The provisions of this section do not dispense with the necessity for a petition signed by a majority of the residents interested in the improvement: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

SEC. 1950. Apportionment of assessments. If the first assessment made by the board of supervisors of the several counties is insufficient to pay the cost of construction, additional assessment may be made in the same ratio as the first; and they shall make additional assessments in like manner for repairing said improvements, when needed; if a greater amount is collected in either county by such assessments than is required to pay for the work actually done therein, or if more work be done than the equitable tax in that county will pay for, then the boards of supervisors of the counties interested shall jointly meet and ascertain in which the excess and deficiency exist, and the excess shall be transferred to the county having a deficit, or, if there be more than one, then ratably to such counties. [19 G. A., ch. 44, § 11; 18 G. A., ch. 85, §§ 6, 7.]

SEC. 1951. Levees, ditches or drains in public highway. Levees, ditches, drains and embankments may be located and constructed within the limits of public highways, on either or both sides of and along the same, to be so built as not materially to interfere with the public travel thereon, by taxation and assessment under the provisions of this chapter, and, when constructed, shall be under the control of the board of supervisors of the county in which they are situated; and it shall have power to grant a right of way thereon to any railway that will maintain them while used by it, subject to any claim for damages against the company in any condemnation proceedings which shall be instituted, and the damages awarded, paid, or secured to be paid before possession shall be given, but the county shall not be required on account thereof or otherwise to keep up such improvements at its expense. [20 G. A., ch. 186, § 1.]

The board acquires jurisdiction of the proceedings to establish such drainage within the territory and through the land in question as it deems proper to effect the object of reclaiming all swamp and overflowed land in the locality to be drained: Butts v. Monona County, 69 N. W., 284.

If the right of appeal exists when the tax is levied the statute is not unconstitutional as to such tax: Ibid: Yeomans v. Riddle, 84-147.

SEC. 1952. Petition for drain—proceedings. When the petition of one hundred voters of the county, setting forth that any body or district of land in said county, described by metes and bounds or otherwise, is subject to overflow, or too wet for cultivation, and the public health, convenience or welfare will be promoted by draining, ditching or leveeing the same, or changing a water course, and also a bond conditioned as required in case of proceedings for the location of levees, drains, ditches, and changes of water courses shall be filed with the county auditor, he shall appoint a competent engineer or commissioner, who shall proceed to examine the lands described, and may survey and locate such improvement as may be necessary for the reclamation of such lands or any part thereof, and for the public health, convenience or welfare, and shall make substantially the same report, and the same proceedings shall be had, as is provided by law for the location and construction of ditches, drains, and changes in water courses, and two or more counties may in the same manner unite in such work. [Same, § 2.]

The jurisdiction of the board to act attaches as of the date of the filing of the petition, and if the signatures to the petition are sufficient to confer such jurisdiction, the subsequent filing of a remonstrance signed by a portion of the petitioners will not deprive the board of jurisdiction to act: Seibert v. Lovell, 92-507.

It is not required that the petitioners should reside near or be interested in the proposed improvement: Ibid.

SEC. 1953. Drainage bonds. If the board of supervisors shall determine that the estimated cost of reclamation of such district of lands is greater than should be levied in a single year upon the lands benefited, it shall fix the proportion that should be levied and collected each year, and may issue drainage bonds of the county, bearing not more than eight per cent. annual interest, and payable in the proportions and at the times when such taxes so apportioned will have been collected, and may devote the same at par to the payment of the work as it progresses, or may sell the same at not less than par and devote the proceeds to such payment; and should the cost of such work exceed the estimate, a new apportionment of taxes may be made, and other bonds issued and used in like manner; but in no case shall the bonds run longer than fifteen years, and at least ten per cent. in amount of those issued on the first estimate shall be payable annually. The board may divide the land to be benefited into drainage districts, which shall be accurately described and numbered, and such drainage bonds shall be in sums of not less than fifty dollars each, numbered consecutively, and issued as other county bonds are, and shall specify that they are drainage bonds, and designate by number the drainage district on account of which they are issued. In no case shall the amount of the bonds issued exceed fifty per cent. of the value of the lands in the drainage district, as shown by the last assessment for taxation. Each bond so issued shall express on its face that it shall only be paid by taxes assessed, levied and collected on the lands within the district so designated and numbered, and for the benefit of which district such bond was issued. In no case shall any tax be levied or collected for the payment of such bond or bonds, or the interest thereon, on any property outside of the district so numbered, designated and benefited. [22 G. A., ch. 97; 20 G. A., ch. 186, § 3.]

SEC. 1954. Tax to pay bonds. The board shall levy each year on the lands benefited a tax sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds, and so much of the principal as falls due in the succeeding year; and such tax shall be collected in the same manner as other county taxes, and carried to the credit of the drainage district on account of which the bonds are issued, and be used to pay the principal and interest of said bonds as the same fall due, and any surplus may be devoted to payment for works of reclamation in said district, or repairs thereof. [20 G. A., ch. 186, § 4.]

SEC. 1955. Drains through land of another—application—notice. When any person who is the owner of any swamp, marsh or wet land which, on account of its condition, may endanger the public health, or is not for that reason in a proper condition for cultivation, shall desire to construct any open ditch, tile or other underground drain for the purpose of draining such swamp land through the land of another, and shall be unable to agree in regard thereto with the owner of such land through whose land he desires to construct the same, he may file with the clerk of the township in which said land is situated an application therefor, giving a description of the land through which it is desired to construct said drain, and the general course, character, size and depth of the same. The township clerk shall forthwith notify the trustees of the township of such application, who shall fix a time for the hearing of the same, not more than forty nor less than ten days distant. They shall cause the clerk to notify the parties, or their agents if the parties are not in the county, of the time and place of such hearing. In case a party is absent from the county and has no agent therein, service may be had by posting written notices in three public places in the township, at least thirty days before the hearing, one of which places shall be upon the said land. Whenever any railroad crosses the land of any person or persons who desire to drain their land for any of the purposes set forth in this section, the party or parties desiring such drain or drains shall notify the railroad company by leaving a written notice with the nearest station agent, stating in such notice the starting point, route and termination of such drain or drains, and if the railroad company refuse or neglect for the space of thirty days to dig across their right of way a drain of equal depth and size of the one dug by the party who wishes to drain his land, then the party who desires to drain the land may proceed to dig such drain, and the railroad company shall be liable for the cost of the construction of such drain, to be collected in any court having jurisdiction. [22 G. A., ch. 96, §§ 1, 6; 20 G. A., ch. 188, §§ 1, 6.]

Provisions authorizing proceedings by which a land owner may acquire the right to locate underground drains through the land of another in other cases than where such drainage is required in the interest of the public health by reason of land being wet or swampy would be unconstitutional: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

SEC. 1956. Hearing—action of trustees. At the time set for said hearing, if the trustees are satisfied that the provisions of the preceding section have been complied with, they shall proceed to hear and determine the merits of said application, objections thereto, and claims for damages that may be occasioned by the improvement contemplated. They shall have power to issue subpœnas for witnesses, examine them under oath, and enforce their attendance, in the same manner as a justice of the peace; said witnesses to be paid the same fees as are allowed witnesses before justices of the peace. They shall adjourn from day to day, if to them it shall seem advisable, but no adjournment shall be for a longer period than fifteen days. At the conclusion of the hearing, or so soon thereafter as practicable, the trustees shall make a decision in said matter, and, if they shall find that it will be beneficial to the public for said drain to be constructed, shall locate the same, and fix the points of entrance and exit on said land, the course of the same through the said land, the size and depth thereof, when it shall be constructed, how kept in repair, what connections may be made therewith, what compensation, if any, shall be made to the owner of such land for damages by reason of such construction, and any other question arising in connection therewith. They shall reduce their decision to writing, which shall be filed with the clerk of said township, who shall record it in his book of records and cause it to be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which said land is situated, and said decision shall be final, unless appealed from as hereinafter provided. [Same, §§ 2, 3.]

All the different facts enumerated as calling for a ditch should exist in a given case to justify its establishment; and where the record does not show that the township trustees found that the lands to be drained were a source of disease, and that their drainage would promote the public health, the establishment of the ditch will be invalid: Hull v. Baird, 73-528.

The presumption will be that there was not a finding by the trustees upon any fact not made of record: Ibid.

SEC. 1957. Appeal. Either party may appeal to the district court from any such decision by causing to be served, within ten days from the time it was filed with the clerk, a notice in writing upon the opposite party of the taking of such appeal, which notice shall be served in the same manner as is provided for the service of original notices. If the appellant is the party petitioning for the drain, he shall also file a bond, conditioned to pay all costs of appeal that may be assessed against him, which bond, if good and sufficient, shall be approved by the township clerk. The cause shall be tried in the district court by ordinary proceedings, upon such pleading as the court may direct, each party having the right to offer such testimony as shall be admissible under the rules of law. If the appellant does not recover a more favorable judgment in the district court than he received in the decision of the trustees, he shall pay all the costs of appeal. [Same, § 7.]

A prior statute provided for an appeal only in case damages were awarded, and was therefore unconstitutional because it denied the land owner the right of trial by jury and deprived him of his property without due process of law: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

SEC. 1958. Transcript. In case of appeal, the township clerk shall certify to the district court a transcript of the proceedings before the trustees, which shall be filed in said court with the appeal bond, the party appealing paying for said transcript and the docketing of said appeal, as in other cases. The party claiming damages shall be the plaintiff, and the applicant shall be the defendant; and the court shall render such judgment as shall be warranted by the verdict, the facts, and the law upon all the matters involved, and make such orders as will cause the same to be carried into effect. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 1959. Costs and damages paid. The applicant shall pay the costs of the trustees and clerk and for the serving of notices for hearing, the fees of witnesses summoned by the trustees on said hearing, and the recording of the finding of said trustees by the county recorder. He shall pay all damages awarded, before entering on the construction of the drain through the land of another. If, after the decision of the trustees locating said drain, the party applying therefor shall pay to the party through whose land said drain is to be constructed the damages awarded to said party, or shall pay the same to the trustees for his use, he may proceed to construct said drain in accordance with the decision of the trustees, and the taking of an appeal shall not affect his right to proceed with the construction of the same. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 1960. Repairs. In case any dispute shall thereafter arise as to the repair of any such drain, the same shall be determined by said trustees upon application in substantially the same manner as in the original construction thereof. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 1961. Penalty for obstructing. Any person who shall dam up, obstruct or in any way injure any ditch or drain so constructed, shall be liable to pay to the person owning or possessing the swamp, marsh or other low lands, for the draining of which such ditch or ditches have been opened, double the damages that shall be sustained by the owner, and, in case of a second or subsequent offense by the same person, treble such damages. [C.'73, § 1227.]

SEC. 1962. Connecting drains. When any water course or natural drainage line crosses the boundary line between two adjoining land owners, and both parties desire to drain the land along such water course or natural drainage line, but are unable to agree as to the junction of the lines of drainage at the boundary line aforesaid, the township trustees shall have full power and authority, upon the application of either party, to hear and determine all questions arising between such parties, after giving due notice to each of the time and place of such hearing, and may render such decision thereon as to said trustees shall seem just. [22 G. A., ch. 96, § 4; 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 4.]

SEC. 1963. Along highways. Any person shall have the right to go upon any public road to construct an outlet to a drain, but he shall leave the road in as good condition as it was before the drain was constructed, the question as to such condition to be determined by the supervisor of roads of the district where the work is done. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1964. Drains across highways. When any water course or natural drain crosses any public road in the state, and the adjoining or abutting land owner wishes to cross said road with an underground tile drain, he shall notify the road supervisor having supervision over the road to be crossed, in writing, specifying the depth of drain and size of tile to be used in crossing said road, and give the road supervisor twenty days' time to construct said underground drain. [21 G. A., ch. 55, § 1.]

SEC. 1965. Supervisor shall construct. When the road supervisor receives said written notice, he shall order said drain constructed across said road, and pay for the tile and construction of the same out of any money or fund in his hands. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1966. Construction by owner. If the supervisor fails to construct said drain within twenty days' time, then the abutting or adjoining land owner may go upon the road and construct the same across said road, and he shall receive pay for constructing the same, including tile used in crossing said road, out of any money or fund belonging to such road district; provided he shall leave the road in as good condition as it was before the drain was constructed. [Same, § 3.]

DRAINAGE OF COAL LANDS OR LEAD MINES.

SEC. 1967. Damages assessed. Any person or corporation owning or possessing any land underlaid with coal, who is unable to mine the same by reason of the accumulation of water in such mine, may drain the same through, over or under the surface of land belonging to another person, and if such person or corporation and the owner of the land cannot agree as to the amount of damages that will be sustained by such owner, the parties may proceed to have the necessary right of way condemned and the damages assessed in the manner provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement. [C. '73, § 1228.]

SEC. 1968. Compensation. Any person or corporation who by machinery, such as engines or pumps, or by making drains or adit levels, or in any other way, shall rid any lead bearing mineral lands or lead mines of water, thereby enabling the miners and the owners of mineral interest in said lands to make them productive and available for mining purposes, shall receive one-tenth of all the lead mineral taken from said lands as compensation for said drainage. [C. '73, § 1229.]

SEC. 1969. Setting apart. The owners of the mineral interest in said lands, and persons mining upon and taking lead mineral from said lands, shall jointly and severally set apart and deliver from time to time, when demanded, the said one-tenth part of the mineral taken from said lands to the person or corporation entitled thereto, and the owners of the mineral interest therein shall allow the party entitled to such compensation and his agents at all times to descend into and examine said mines, and to enter any building occupied for mining purposes upon any of said lands, and examine and weigh the mineral taken therefrom. [C. '73, § 1230.]

The provision giving one-tenth of the lead mineral as compensation in such cases is not unconstitutional as depriving the owner of his property without due process of law: Ahern v. Dubuque, etc., Mining Co., 48–140.

SEC. 1970. Penalty. Upon the failure or refusal of any owner of the mineral interest in said lands, or of any person taking the mineral therefrom, to comply with the provisions of the preceding section, the person or corporation entitled to said compensation may recover the value of said mineral. And if it shall appear that the defendant obstructed the plaintiff in the exercise of the right to examine such mines, and to weigh such mineral, or concealed or secretly carried away any mineral taken from them, the court shall render judgment for double the amount proved to be due from such defendant. [C. '73, § 1231.]

SEC. 1971. Notice to smelters. The person or corporation entitled to said drainage compensation may at any time leave with any smelter of lead mineral in this state a written notice, stating that said person or corporation claims of the persons named in said notice the amount to which said person or corporation may be entitled, which notice shall have the effect of notices in garnishment, and also authorize the said smelter to retain, for the use of the person entitled thereto, the one-tenth part of the mineral taken from said land and received from the person named in said notice. The payment or delivery of the one-tenth part of the mineral taken from any of said lands by any one of the persons whose duty it is hereby made to pay or deliver the same, shall discharge the parties liable jointly with him, except liability to contribute among themselves. [C.'73, § 1232.]

SEC. 1972. Right of way. Any person or corporation engaged as aforesaid in draining such mines and lead bearing mineral lands, when he or they shall find it necessary for the prosecution of their work, shall have the right of way upon, over or under the surface of such mineral lands, and the contiguous and neighboring lands, for the purpose of conveying the water from said mineral lands by troughs, pipes, ditches, water races or tunnels, and the right to construct and use shafts and airholes in and upon the same, doing as little injury as possible in making said improvements. [C.'73, § 1233.]

SEC. 1973. Damages. If the said person or corporation engaged in draining as aforesaid, and the owner of any land upon which said right of way may be deemed necessary, cannot agree as to the amount of damages which will be sustained by the owner by reason thereof, the parties may proceed to have the same assessed in the manner provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement. [C. '73, § 1234.]

SEC. 1974. Consent of owners. The foregoing provisions shall not be construed to require the owners of the mineral interest in any of said lands to take mineral therefrom, or to authorize any other person to take the mineral from said lands without the consent of the owners. [C. '73, § 1235.]

UNITED STATES LEVEES.

SEC. 1975. Assistance by counties. In any case where the United States may have undertaken, or may hereafter undertake, the work of building a levee along or near the bank of a navigable stream forming a part of the boundary of this state, the board of supervisors of any and every county through which the same may pass shall have the right and power to aid in procuring the right of way for the same, maintaining the same, and providing a system of internal drainage made necessary or advisable by the construction of such levee, whenever in their judgment such work will be conducive to the public health, convenience or welfare. [26 G. A., ch. 46, § 1.]

SEC. 1976. Proceedings. Proceedings as contemplated by the preceding section may be begun by filing with the county auditor a petition asking the board of supervisors to form a drainage district, for any of the purposes in section nineteen hundred and seventy-five hereof specified, of the lands in the petition described, which shall also be shown on a map or plat to be filed with such petition. This petition shall be signed by not less than twenty-five owners of lands lying within the limits of such proposed district, as shown by the transfer books in the auditor's office; and a bond with satisfactory sureties shall also be filed with the county auditor and approved by him, conditioned for the payment of all costs and expenses incurred, in case the board of supervisors shall refuse to grant the prayer of the petition. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1977. Commission. At their next regular session held after the filing of such petition, or at a special session called for the purpose, the board of supervisors shall, if the foregoing provisions have been complied with, appoint a commission of three disinterested freeholders of the county, one of whom shall be, if practicable, a competent civil engineer or surveyor. This commission shall, after being duly sworn, proceed to examine the lands within such proposed district, lay out the work required, and make an estimate of the probable cost of the same. They shall make a full report to the board of supervisors, and may recommend that such district be formed as prayed, or that it be enlarged or diminished, as in their judgment will best subserve the general good and promote the general welfare. They shall also classify the lands within the limits of such district as they recommend, grading the same as "dry," "low," and "wet," making such classification. so far as practicable, in forty-acre tracts, by government subdivisions. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1978. Notice. Upon the filing of the report of the commissioners, the county auditor shall fix a time, not less than twenty days thereafter, when the board of supervisors will proceed to take final action on the petition. At least ten days' notice of such hearing shall be given to each owner of land lying within such proposed district, as shown by the transfer books in the auditor's office. Such notice shall be over the hand and seal of the county auditor, shall state in brief the substance of the petition, the recommendation of the commissioners, and the time when the board of supervisors will proceed to a hearing on the same. This notice shall be served by the sheriff, if the person named can be found in the county, but, if the sheriff shall return that any such person cannot be found in the county, the notice shall then be served by posting two copies thereof at least fifteen days before the time fixed for the hearing, one to be posted at the front door of the court-house, and the other at some public place in the township within which such lands are situated, and within the limits of such proposed drainage district; a copy of such notice, with an affidavit of the posting of the same, to be filed with the county auditor before the hearing: provided, however, that service of such notice may be acknowledged in the manner provided for the service of an original notice, and substituted service of such notice may be made under the circumstances and in the manner provided for substituted service of an original notice. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1979. Hearing. At the time named, or at such other time to which the board of supervisors may adjourn the matter, they shall proceed with the hearing, and any of the parties interested may appear in person or by counsel and be heard, and may file written pleadings. The board of supervisors shall hear and determine the matter, and if they determine against the formation of such district, they shall dismiss the proceedings at the cost of the petitioners. If they shall decide to form such district, they shall proceed and fix the boundaries of the same, and shall classify the lands as "dry," "low," and "wet," according to the evidence, making such classification, as far as practicable, in forty-acre tracts and in government subdivisions, and they shall enter their findings and classification on their records. At such hearing the recommendation of the commissioners shall be competent evidence, but shall not be conclusive. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1980. Appeal. Any person aggrieved by such action of the board of supervisors may, within twenty days after such action is taken, appeal to the district court of the county in which such lands are situated, where such appeal shall be heard on its merits, regardless of technicalities, and appeal may be taken from the district to the supreme court, but under and subject to the restrictions now imposed by law upon appeals generally. The appeal to the district court shall be taken by serving notice of such appeal on the county auditor and the three persons first named among the signers to the petition specified in section nineteen hundred and seventy-six hereof. If the appeal is taken by the petitioners, notice of such appeal shall be served on the county auditor and any three of the successful remonstrants, if there be so many, but on all if they be less than three. Upon service of notice of such appeal, the county auditor shall file with the clerk of the district court a copy of the petition, written objections filed by the parties complaining, or complained against, and of the action taken by the board of supervisors, all certified by him; these may constitute the pleadings, and the clerk of the district court shall docket the same, as in case of any other action brought, entitling the same in the names of the three first signing the petition, on behalf of all, and against the remonstrants who are successful, or who appeal, as the case may be. Such appeal, however, shall not interfere with the board of supervisors in the prosecution of the work, unless the same shall have been taken by not less than one-half of the acreage lying within the limits of such proposed district, but if so taken by not less than one-half such acreage, then the board of supervisors shall so enter upon their records, and shall also enter an order suspending all proceedings pending the final disposition of such appeal. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 1981. Work carried on—land condemned. After entering the order as provided in section nineteen hundred and seventy-nine hereof, unless further proceedings are suspended as provided in section nineteen hundred and eighty hereof, the board of supervisors shall proceed and adopt such plan or system as in their judgment is proper and best under all the circumstances, and cause the work to be done, causing such ditches to be dug, channels opened, embankments erected, fills made, and such other work done as in their judgment will most efficiently promote the general good and the public welfare. They shall have power, in the manner now provided by law, chapter four of title ten, of this code, to condemn any land which they deem it necessary to take or use in the prosecution of such work, including any that may be required to aid the United States in completing such levee, the costs and expenses of which shall be paid out of the drainage fund pertaining to such district as hereinafter provided. In the doing of this work the board of supervisors shall have power to employ such help and assistance as they deem necessary, and to fix compensation for the same. All the work to be done which shall involve an estimated expenditure of five hundred dollars or over shall be let by contract, after advertising the same for three weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in the county, to the lowest bidder who shall furnish satisfactory security for the performance of the contract: provided, however, that the board of supervisors may reject all bids, and do the work themselves whenever, in their judgment, the work can be so done at a substantial saving. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 1982. Costs assessed. The entire costs and expenses incurred under this chapter shall be assessed against the lands lying within such drainage district on the following basis: The lands classed as "low" shall be assessed twice as much per acre as the lands classed as "dry," and the lands classed as "wet" shall be assessed twice as much per acre as the lands classed as "low," and in tracts as classified by the board of supervisors, as provided in section nineteen hundred and seventy-nine hereof. The commissioners provided for in section nineteen hundred and seventy-seven hereof shall be allowed three dollars a day, each, which shall be included as part of the expenses of such work: provided, that if the petition shall be dismissed by the board of supervisors then the compensation of such commissioners shall be paid by the petitioners. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 1983. Collection of tax. The assessment required under section nineteen hundred and eighty-two hereof shall be made by the board of supervisors at the time of levying general taxes, after the work has been authorized, and the same shall be entered on the records of the board of supervisors, then entered on the tax books by the county auditor as drainage taxes, and shall be collected by the county treasurer at the same time, in the same manner, and with the same penalties, as general taxes; and if the same is not paid he shall sell all such lands upon which such assessment remains unpaid, at the same time, and in the same manner, as is now by law provided for the sale of lands for delinquent taxes, including all steps up to the execution and delivery of the tax deed for the same. The land owners shall take notice of and pay such assessments, without other or further notice than such as is provided for in this chapter. The funds realized from such assessments shall constitute the drainage fund, as contemplated in this chapter, and shall be disbursed on warrants drawn against that fund by the county auditor, on the order of the board of supervisors. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 1984. Installment. If the amount required under section nineteen hundred and eighty-two hereof shall not exceed a rate based on twenty-five cents per acre on the "wet" lands, it shall be levied and paid in one year; if it shall be over twenty-five cents, and under fifty cents per acre on such basis, it shall be payable one-half in one, and one-half in two years, and if it shall exceed fifty cents per acre on such basis, then it shall be divided into three equal annual payments. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 1985. Bonds. If the entire amount required under this chapter cannot be collected in one year, the board of supervisors of such county shall have the power to issue drainage bonds for all which cannot thus be provided for in one year, in substantially the manner and form as provided in section nineteen hundred and fifty-three, chapter two, title ten, of this code, such issue to be determined upon by them before the levy, and an amount sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds shall be estimated and included in the assessment. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 1986. Cost of maintaining. The board of supervisors shall have the right and power to keep up and maintain any such levee, ditches, drains, or system of drainage, either in whole or in part, as may in their judgment be required, and to levy the expense thereof upon the real estate within such drainage district as herein provided for, and collect and expend the same: provided, however, that no such work which shall impose a tax at a rate exceeding one based on ten cents per acre on the "wet" lands shall be authorized by them, unless the same is first petitioned for and authorized in substantially the manner required by this chapter for the inauguration of new work. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 1987. Districts. The petitioners who proceed under section nineteen hundred and seventy-six hereof may ask that the lands described in the petition be formed into more than one drainage district, and, whether they do so or not, the board of supervisors shall have the right and power to arrange said lands, or the lands which they shall finally determine to bring within the provisions of this act, into two or more districts, the boundaries of which shall be so fixed as will, in the judgment of the board, tend to a more equitable and just apportionment of the burdens to be imposed. It shall be the duty of the commissioners provided for in section nineteen hundred and seventy-seven hereof to report whether, in their judgment, there should be more than one such district formed, and to make their plans and estimates according to such districts as they recommend. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 1988. Apportionment of cost. In case more than one such district is created as provided in section nineteen hundred and eighty-seven hereof the board of supervisors shall require separate accounts to be kept of the costs and expenses incurred in each, making an equitable apportionment of such as is not susceptible of exact division, and the lands in each drainage district shall be liable to assessment for the costs and expenses incurred in such district only. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 1989. Through two or more counties. The boards of supervisors of any two or more adjoining counties may carry on the work provided for in this chapter concurrently; provided that they first agree upon a plan or system, and a basis of equitable apportionment of the work to be done, and the share of the cost and expenses of the same to be borne by each of such counties. [Same, § 15.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF WATER POWER IMPROVEMENTS.

SECTION 1990. Taking land for. Any person, or any corporation organized for the purpose of utilizing and improving any water power within this state, or in the streams lying upon the borders thereof, may take and hold so much real estate as may be necessary for the location, construction and convenient use of its canals, conduits, mains and water ways, or other means employed in the utilization of such water power, and for the construction of such buildings and their appurtenances as may be required for the purposes aforesaid. Such person or corporation may also take, remove and use, for the construction and repair of its said canals, water ways, buildings and appurtenances, any earth, gravel, stone, timber or other materials on or from the land so taken. Compensation shall be made for the lands and materials so taken and used by such person or corporation, to the owner, in the manner provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement. [C. '73, § 1236.]

SEC. 1991. Use of highways. Such person or corporation may use, raise or lower any road for the purpose of having its said canals, water ways, mains and pipes pass over, along or under the same, and in such case shall put such road, as soon as may be, in good repair and condition for the safe and convenient use of the public. Any such person or corporation may construct and carry its canals, conduits, water ways, mains or water pipes across, over or under any railway, canal, stream or water course, when it shall be necessary for the construction or operation of the same, but shall do so in such manner as not to impede the travel, transportation or navigation upon, or other proper use of, such railway, canal or stream. But the powers conferred in this section can only be exercised in cities and towns with the consent and under the control of the council. [C. '73, § 1237.]

SEC. 1992. Public lands. Such person or corporation is authorized to pass over, occupy and enjoy any of the school, university and saline or other lands of this state, whereof the fee or any use, easement or servitude therein is in the public, making compensation therefor. But no more of such land shall be taken than is required for its necessary use and convenience. [C. '73, § 1238.]

SEC. 1993. Powers. Such corporation, in addition to other powers, shall have the following: To borrow money for the purpose of constructing, renewing or repairing its works; to make, execute and deliver contracts, bonds, notes, bills, mortgages, deeds of trust, and other conveyance charging or incumbering its property, including its franchises, or any part or parcel thereof; to erect, maintain and operate canals, conduits, mains, water ways, mills, factories, and other buildings and machinery, including water ways, sluices and conduits for the purpose of carrying waste water off from said premises to the stream from which the same was taken, or other convenient place; to let, lease, or sell and convey, any portion of their water supply, and any of the buildings, mills or factories, or machinery, for such sums, prices, rents, tolls and rates as shall be agreed upon between the parties; and to lay down, maintain and operate such water-mains, conduits, leads and service pipes as shall be necessary to supply any building, village, town or city with water; and the grantee of any such person or corporation, or purchaser of said property, franchise, right and privileges under and by virtue of any judicial sale, shall take and hold the same as fully as the same were held and enjoyed by such person or corporation. [C. '73, § 1239.]

SEC. 1994. Completion of work—legislative control. Such person or corporation shall take, hold and enjoy the privilege of utilizing and improving the water power and the rights, powers and privileges aforesaid, and shall proceed in good faith to make the improvements and employ the powers above conferred, and shall, within two years from the date of acquiring such powers, provide the necessary capital, complete the preliminary surveys, and actually commence the work of improving and utilizing the water power and furnishing the supply of water as contemplated; and said water works and canals shall be completed within five years thereafter. The rights, powers, and priveleges conferred by this chapter shall be at all times subject to legislative control. [C. '73, § 1240.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF TAKING PRIVATE PROPERTY FOR WORKS OF INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT.

SECTION 1995. By railway—limit of. Any railway corporation organized in this state, or chartered by or organized under the laws of the United States or any state or territory, may take and hold under the provisions of this chapter so much real estate as may be necessary for the location, construction and convenient use of its railway, and may also take, remove and use for the construction and repair of said railway and its appurtenances, any earth, gravel, stone, timber or other materials on or from the land so taken. The land so taken, otherwise than by the consent of the owners, shall not exceed one hundred feet in width, except for wood and water stations, unless where greater width is necessary for excavation, embankment or depositing waste earth. [17 G. A., ch. 126; C. '73, § 1241; R., § 1314.]

Provisions constitutional: The use for which land appropriated for a right of way is taken is a public one although it is for private profit, and the provisions authorizing the taking of private property for such purpose upon compensation being made are therefore constitutional: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

Nature and extent of right: The railway company procuring the right of way is the owner of its right of way so long as it is used for railway purposes, and the owner of the land taken has no right to go thereon for the construction of fences or other purposes: Heskett v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 41-467.

The company may take, remove and use for the construction and repair of its railway and appurtenances any earth, gravel, stone, timber or other material on or from the land condemned, and is not limited as to the quantity of such materials to be used in the construction and repair of its road. The limitation to so much as is necessary implied under this section relates to the quantity of land to be taken: Winklemans v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 62-11.

It would seem that the company may sink wells on its right of way, for the purpose of supplying its engines with water, and would not be liable in damages for thus diverting percolating water from a spring upon the adjoining land of the person granting the right of way: Hougan v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 35-558.

Timber standing upon the property taken for right of way, other than that necessary for the construction of the railway, remains the property of the owner of the land: Preston v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 11-15.

The statute by express language authorizes the taking of material for the construction and use of the railway, but under a right of way deed granting an easement "for all purposes connected with the construction, use and occupation of the railway," held, that the railway company was not authorized to take sand for use in constructing a roundhouse, but the owner might take such sand so far as not interfering with the use of the land for railroad purposes: Vermilya v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 66-606.

By the condemnation proceedings a corporation acquires the right to the exclusive use of the surface of the land, and the condemnation is made on the theory that this use of the surface will be perpetual: Hollingsworth v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-443; Cummings v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-397; Clayton v. Chicago, I. & D. R. Co., 67-238.

The conveyance to a railway of a right of way conveys only an easement: Brown v. Young, 69-625.

Constitutes an incumbrance: The right of way over land for a railway is an incumbrance for which a grantee of the land may recover on a covenant against incumbrances, although he knew of the existence of such right of way at the time of purchasing: Barlow v. McKinley, 24-69; Jerald v. Elly, 51-321; Flynn v. White Breast Coal, etc., Co., 72-738.

The doctrine that the right of way for a railroad is an encumbrance on the premises from which it is taken for which a grantee may recover under a warranty deed though he has knowledge of such incumbrance is not applicable to a public highway: Harrison v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 91-114.

The mere use and exercise of a right of way over the property is not sufficient to establish such right or raise a presumption of its existence: Jerald v. Elly, 51-321.

Subject to foreclosure proceedings: Where a railway company takes a deed for a right of way, and enters into possession pending foreclosure proceedings against the property, it is bound by decree and sale thereunder, though not made a party: Jackson v. Centerville, M. & A. R. Co., 64-292.

Width which may be taken: Under the statutory provision allowing the condemnation of a strip of land one hundred feet in width, the company is not limited to fifty feet on each side of its track, but the track may be located anywhere on the tract taken: Stark v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 43-501.

Additional width: Where a company has the power to build an additional lateral road auxiliary to the original road, the construction and maintenance of which is possible only upon an independent right of way, the right of way statute, limiting the width of right of way to one hundred feet, does not prevent the condemnation of land for such additional road; and the same power may be exercised by another corporation, even though it derives all its means from the first, and builds the road with the express design of leasing it: Lower v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 59-563.

Where a company entered into possession of and constructed its road over a right of way thirty feet in width acquired by deed, and subsequent proceedings to condemn a right of way seventy feet wide were instituted, held, that the subsequent preceedings must be considered as intended to secure a right of way in addition to that acquired by deed: Gray v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 37-119.

When a railway company applies for a hundred feet or less in width for a right of way, it must be conclusively presumed that the amount applied for is necessary, and the fact that the company owns land on one side of such right of way will not limit the amount which it may condemn: Stark v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 43-501.

Depot grounds: Under a previous statute, held, that a company had no right to condemn additional land for depot grounds, and that therefore any proceedings for that purpose might be enjoined: Forbes v. Delashmutt, 68-164. See now § 1998.

Use by another road: Where right of way over land has been acquired by one railroad the owner cannot have an injunction against another road for using such right of way under agreement with the road to which it belongs: Holbert v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 38-315.

Appropriation of right of way by another company: The easement acquired by a railroad company is acquired to public use, and is in the nature of a grant from the state for the uses and purposes provided by law, and when the company fails to carry out the purposes of the grant, the legislature may transfer the easement to another company upon making compensation to the former company: Noll v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 32-66; Central Iowa R. Co. v. Moulton & A. R. Co., 57-249.

Transfer to another road: Where a right of way has been deeded to one railway company in consideration of the benefit to be derived from the construction of its line, such right of way cannot be transferred by that company to another proposing to construct a different line not running in the same direction: Crosbie v. Chicago, I. & D. R. Co., 62-189.

Who entitled to condemn: It is sufficient under the statute to allege that the party seeking to secure a right of way is a corporation duly organized, and engaged in building a railroad: Chicago, N. & S. W. R. Co. v. Mayor of Newton, 36-299.

A foreign corporation could not, before the amendment of this section, procure right of way by condemnation proceedings, and might be restrained by injunction from using property for right of way until the right was in some other manner procured: Holbert v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 45-23.

Before the change in the statute allowing foreign corporations to condemn land for right of way, held, that where nothing appeared to the contrary it would be presumed that the condemnation was properly made on behalf of a corporation duly authorized to institute the proceedings: Kostendader v. Pierce, 37-645.

Horse railways: The provisions for condemning right of way for the use of railway companies are applicable to railways operated by animal power as well as those operated by steam: Clinton v. Clinton & L. H. R. Co., 37-61.

Railways in cities: By § 767 the method of assessing damages for right of way is made applicable to damages caused to abutting owners from the construction of a railway upon the streets of a city, and such proceedings can be instituted only by the company and not by the property owner, who may have an action for damages without regard to the method of assessment thus provided: Mulholland v. Des Moines, A. & W. R. Co., 60-740.

Further as to the rights of railway companies to construct their tracks over the streets of cities and towns, see notes to § 767.

Parol license: Where the company by parol license enters upon ground to construct its railway the subsequent payment of the damages assessed gives it an easement by contract, which, though arising upon parol, cannot be revoked: Slocumb v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 57-675.

In such case a subsequent purchaser takes subject to the right of way, whatever it is, if it does not exceed the statutory width, and cannot set up non-user by the company of a portion, and adverse possession thereof, to defeat its rights: Ibid.

Presumption: Where a railway company is conceded to be in rightful possession of a right of way it will be presumed that it has an easement acquired either by condemnation or purchase: Drake v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Co., 63-302.

Subsequent condemnation: Where the compensation for the right of way has not only been agreed upon, but also paid to the land owner by the corporation, and he has conveyed the right of way, proceedings to condemn such right of way cannot be instituted, and would be entirely void for want of jurisdiction: Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co. v. Bentley, 62–446.

In an action against a railroad by an adjacent owner for damages for the occupation of a street in which such adjacent owner holds the fee, it is error to reject a deed from such owner to the company for right of way over his premises: Frith v. Dubuque, 45–406.

The occupation of premises taken for right of way cannot be enjoined for failure to pay therefor under proceedings which have been declared void where the company has a deed granting it a right of way substantially the same as that occupied: Bentley v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 61–229.

Where a railway company having a right of way thirty feet in width instituted proceedings to condemn a right of way seventy feet in width, held, that such proceedings must be considered as intended to secure an additional right of way, and that payment of the damages assessed in such proceedings did not cancel the obligationentere d into by the company in accepting the deed: Gray v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 37–119.

SEC. 1996. For reservoirs. It may also take and hold additional real estate at its water stations, for the purpose of constructing dams and forming reservoirs of water to supply its engines. Such real estate shall, if the owner requests it, be set apart in a square or rectangular shape, including all the overflowed land, by the commissioners as hereafter provided; but the owner of the land shall not be deprived of access to the water or the use thereof, in common with the company, on his own land. And the dwelling, outhouse, orchards and gardens of any person shall not be overflowed or otherwise injuriously affected by any proceeding under this section. [C.'73, § 1242.]

SEC. 1997. Pipes. Any such railway corporation may lay down pipes through any land adjoining the track of the railway, not to a greater distance than three-fourths of a mile therefrom, unless by consent of the owners of the land through which the pipes may pass beyond that distance, and maintain and repair such pipes, and thereby conduct water for the supply of its engines from any running stream; and shall, without unnecesasry delay after laying down or repairing such pipes, cover the same so as to restore the surface of the land through which they may pass to its natural grade, and, as soon as practicable, replace any fence that it may be necessary to open in laying down or repairing such pipes; and the owner of the land through which the same may be laid shall have a right to use the land through which such pipes pass in any manner so as not to interfere therewith. Said pipes shall not be laid to any spring, nor be used so as to injuriously withdraw the water from any farm. Such corporation shall be liable to the owner of any such land for any damages occasioned by laying down, regulating, keeping open or repairing such pipes, to be recoverable, from time to time, as they may approve. [C.'73, § 1243.]

SEC. 1998. Additional depot grounds. Any railway corporation owning or operating a completed railway shall have power to condemn lands for necessary additional depot grounds in the same manner as is provided by law for the condemnation of the right of way. Before any proceedings shall be instituted therefor, the company shall apply to the railway commissioners, who shall give notice to the land owner, and examine into the matter, and report by certificate, to the clerk of the district court in the county in which the land is situated, the amount and description of the additional lands necessary for the reasonable transaction of the business, present and prospective, of such company; whereupon the company shall have the power to condemn the lands so certified by the commissioners. [20 G. A., ch. 190, § 1.]

The railroad commissioners are authorized to allow the condemnation of additional land for depot purposes although there be no depot or station yet established at that place and therefore as yet no "depot grounds:" Jayer v. Dey, 80–23.

It is competent for a city to extend a street through the depot grounds of the railroad company, under proceedings for condemnation: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Starkweather, 66 N. W., 87.

SEC. 1999. Manner of condemnation. If the owner of any real estate necessary to be taken for either of the purposes mentioned in this chapter refuses to grant the right of way or other necessary interest in said real estate required for such purposes, or if the owner and the corporation cannot agree upon the compensation to be paid for the same, the sheriff of the county in which such real estate may be situated shall, upon written application of either party, appoint six freeholders of said county, not interested in the same or a like question, who shall inspect said real estate, and assess the damages which said owner will sustain by the appropriation of his land for the use of said corporation, and make report in writing to the sheriff of said county; and, if the corporation shall, at any time before it enters upon said real estate for the purpose of constructing said railway pay to the sheriff, for the use of the owner, the sum so assessed and returned to him as aforesaid, it may construct and maintain its railway over and across such premises. [C. '73, §§ 1244–5; R., §§ 1317–18.]

Measure of damages: The damages contemplated are the "just compensation" provided for by Const., art. I, § 18. The owner is to have a fair equivalent in money for the injury done him by the taking of his property. It is the right of way which is appropriated, not the fee in the land: but the right of way is such as is peculiar to a railroad, and is the right to all freedom in locating, constructing, using and repairing such road and its appurtenances, and taking and using for that purpose only, any earth, gravel, stone, timber, etc., on or from the land taken, and the right to make cuts, embankments, etc., and includes the rights incident to rapid locomotion as against the owner of the fee. It seems that the right of way is intended to be in perpetuity: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288.

The question as to the proper measure of damages in such cases discussed and the true measure declared to be the difference between the market value of the land entire, and its market value after the right of way is carved out: Ibid.; Sater v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 1-386.

The amount of damage to be allowed is what will compensate plaintiff for the appropriation of the right of way. It may be more or less than the value of the property taken: Gear v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 39-23.

Where the damages to a leasehold estate are to be assessed, the proper measure of damages is the difference in value of the annual use of the property, before taking and after: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49-664.

The land owner is entitled to the full and fair value of the land appropriated, and, in addition thereto, to such sum as will compensate him for the depreciation in value of his adjoining land by reason of the right of way, irrespective of any benefits of the road to the land; but speculative, contingent or future damages, not affecting the market value, cannot be allowed: Smalley v. Iowa Pacific R. Co., 36-571.

Increased danger of injury to or destruction of the property by reason of exposure to fire or other dangers incident to the operation of a railroad are elements of damage for which compensation should be made: Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 50-338, 334; Dreher v. Iowa Southwestern R. Co., 59-599; Dudley v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co., 77-408. But increase in rate of insurance on farm buildings should not be considered: Pingery v. Cherokee & D. R. Co., 78-438.

It is error to take into account the value of special property, such as a grove or house, which might be destroyed by fire: Lance v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 57-636.

The value of growing crops upon the right of way to be taken may be considered in assessing the compensation: Ibid.

The question whether, because of the construction of the road, the land is made more wet than it otherwise would be is a proper one, it not being sought to show that such damages were a result of the improper construction of the road: Britton v. Des Moines, O. & S. R. Co., 59-540.

The fact that the road-bed is constructed in a cut is a proper fact to be shown in estimating damages: Cummins v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-397.

While the land owner is not entitled to prove the proximity of the depot or the number of tracks as independent elements of damage, yet such evidence may be admissible in determining the extent to which the company would probably use the ground taken in carrying on its business: Ibid.

As the company acquires the right to occupy and use the whole of the right of way, it cannot have the damages assessed on the theory that it will in fact use but part, and therefore that the occupation of buildings situated upon the right of way will not be disturbed: Ibid.

Unless it appears that the reversionary right of the land owner is of some value, as, for instance, by reason of the land being underlaid by coal or mineral, it is not error to disregard such reversionary interest and assess the damages at the market value of the property taken: Ibid: Hollingsworth v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-443.

The company may take, remove and use for the construction and repair of its railway and appurtenances any earth, gravel, stone, timber or other material on or from the land condemned, and is not limited as to the quantity of such materials to be used in the construction and repair of its road. The limitation to so much as is necessary, implied under this section, relates to the quantity of land to be taken: Winklemans v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 62-11.

Although the right of way taken is an easement and the fee remains in the owner, yet, unless it is made to appear that the fee burdened with the easement is of some determinable value, the assessment of damages should be based on the full value of the land actually taken, and it is not error to re fuse to instruct the jury on the theory that the fee remains in the owner, and that at some time in the future the land may cease to be used for railway purposes and revert to such owner: Clayton v. Chicago, I. & D. R. Co., 67-238.

Where a railway company was seeking to condemn a right of way between the property of a riparian owner and the Mississippi river, held, that the owner was entitled to damages caused to an embankment constructed by him extending out to a crib in the river: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49-664.

The owner is not invested with the right to cross the right of way after its appropriation at his pleasure. Whatever right he has in that respect is subservient to that of the company using the road for the running of its trains: Ibid.

The question of the right of passage, as affected by the taking of the right of way, may be shown as affecting the damages: Bell v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74-343.

Various items of damage held properly taken into account by a witness in testifying as to the market value of land after taking the right of way: Smalley v. Iowa Pacific R. Co., 36-571.

The prices at which other lands in the vicinity of the premises had been sold about the time of the commencement of the proceedings is not receivable in the absence of evidence that there was any similarity between the lots in question and those which it was claimed had been sold: Cummins v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-397: Hollingsworth v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-443.

It is proper for the court to state the law governing damages in such cases as found in the constitution and statutes of the state, no matter what evidence is introduced: Ball v. Keokuk & N. W. R. Co., 74-132.

The recovery of the property owner is not limited to the damages which he has sustained if the property were to be used only for the purposes to which it is devoted when such proceedings are had, but the value of the property for any purpose for which it is available may be considered. Therefore, held, that the value of the land as coal land might be taken into account, it not being attempted to show the value of the coal underlying the right of way: Doud v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 76-438.

Damages which have resulted from an improper construction of the road cannot be considered in assessing the damage for right of way already taken. Therefore, held, that in such case the fact that the railroad company had excavated for a considerable distance through plaintiff's premises outside of its right of way could not be shown: Ibid.

The damages contemplated by the law to be allowed are the same before as after the road was built, except that in the latter case interest may be allowed: Ibid.

The proper rule in estimating the amount of damages is to confine the damages recoverable to those which naturally result from the taking and rightful use of the right of way and the proper construction of the road: Ibid.

The fact that different portions of the land are adapted to different uses, and only one of such portions is covered by the right of way, will not preclude the whole of the premises being considered in determining the damages: Ibid.

Market value: In determining the damages the proper rule is to first ascertain the fair market value of the premises over which the proposed improvement is to pass, irrespective of the improvement, and also the like value of the same in the condition in which the premises will be after the land for the improvement has been taken, irrespective of the benefit which will result from the improvement, and the difference in value will constitute the measure of compensation: Sater v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 1-386.

The owner may be a witness generally as to the value of the land before and after appropriation, leaving the opposite party, by his right of cross-examination, to learn the ability of the witness to judge in the premises and what he takes into consideration in making up his judgment: Ibid.

It is improper to ask the plaintiff what the damage was to him by the taking of the right of way. A witness who is shown to be properly qualified may be allowed to give an opinion as to the value of property, but not as to the amount of damage: Hartley v. Keokuk & N. W. R. Co., 85-455.

In determining the amount of damage the witness may be allowed to testify as to the value immediately before the right of way was taken and immediately after, not taking into consideration the benefit to the land: Harrison v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 36-323.

The opinion of a witness as to the value before taking is admissible: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288, 311.

It is usual to take the testimony of the witness upon questions of the value of property when he states under oath that he knows its value or that he knows the value of like property: Ball v. Keokuk & N. W. R. Co., 74-132.

Witnesses who were shown to be farmers, and acquainted with the land in question and the value of lands in that county, held to be competent to testify as to the value of land before and after location of the road: Pingery v. Cherokee & D. R. Co., 78-438.

Evidence as to the value of land which is taken for right of way is to be considered in assessing the damages: Ibid.

Evidence as to the character of netting or screens used in the smoke-stacks of the company's engines is not admissible: Ibid.

Evidence as to the belief of the company or its mistake with reference to the ownership of the land is immaterial: Ibid.

The question as to whether the company will or will not furnish proper and suitable crossings cannot be considered: Ibid.

It is not proper in such proceedings to show by evidence at what price the purchase of right of way from adjoining tracts has been secured, unless it is shown that such tracts were of like character or that the right of way had a uniform and marketable value in that neighborhood: King v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 34–458.

In ascertaining the damages to land used, improved and occupied together as one farm, witnesses cannot be asked as to the value of detached parcels: Winklemans v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co, 62–11.

Witnesses who were jurors for the assessment of damages in the first instance cannot be required to state on a trial of the case on appeal whether their report of the assessment made to the sheriff correctly expressed their judgment as to the amount of damages sustained: Ibid.

The fact that on the prior assessment the land owner made no claim for damages which were afterwards assessed upon appeal, held not objectionable, as it did not appear on the original assessment that such damages would result from the taking of the right of way: Ibid.

While it is competent to show the situation and general surroundings of the land, its character and the roads leading thereto, etc., yet where the land was situated beyond the limits of a city and was not in the market as residence property, held, that evidence as to the character of improvements being made upon the street leading toward the land, but which would not if extended come within eighty yards of it, was improper in determining the damages caused to the land: La Mont v. St. Louis, D. M. & N. R. Co., 62–193.

The inquiry is not as to any special value of the property to the owner growing out of ownership of other distinct and separate property, nor that of the particular premises over which the road passes as intended to be put in the future to a particular use in connection with other distinct and separate pieces of land. Regard must be had to the immediate and not the remote damages of the appropriation: Fleming v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 34–353.

Evidence of increased fire risk in connection with the use of the premises intended to be made in the future cannot be taken into account: Ibid.

It is not competent to show the assessed valuation of the property, and although the assessor may be a competent witness, he must be introduced as such: Dudley v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co., 77–408.

And in a particular case a verdict of $1,700 damages to a farm of three hundred and eighty acres, held not excessive: Ibid.

Entire premises: Damages to the entire premises necessarily and properly used by the owner in his business should be estimated, although such premises are divided by a street or highway: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49–664.

Where the right of way passes through a farm the owner may show as damages depreciation in value of the whole farm, and is not limited to the damages to the governmental subdivision through which the road runs: Hartshorn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 52–613; Ham v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 61–716.

The whole tract is to be taken into account in the consideration of the damages, although the notice may specify only a portion of such tract: Ellsworth v. Chicago, & I. W. R. Co., 91–386.

Although the property is unimproved it may have a special value as a whole and there may be occasion to take into account the damages to the whole tract although the right of way covers only one subdivision thereof. Whether or not there are such special damages to the whole tract will be a question for the jury: Ibid.

Evidence showing the effect which the building of a railway will have upon a tract as a farm and the manner of carrying it on, may be competent, and, therefore, evidence showing the cuts and fills which the construction of the railroad will require and their effect upon farming operations is admissible: Ibid.

The doctrine that where a portion of a tract of land which is owned and used together is taken for right of way the damages are to be assessed with reference to the injury to the entire tract is not applicable to a case where the right of way of a railway is crossed at one or more points by the track of another company and the former company is not entitled by way of damages to the depreciation in value of its entire right of way due to the construction of the second road: Chicago, I. & D. R. Co. v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co., 86–500.

If a railway company applies to have the damages assessed, and, in its application, designates the land known as the farm of the adverse party, or if the jury is called under an agreement of both parties, and it is therein specified that the damages to the land owner in consequence of the location across his farm shall be assessed, the railway company will afterwards be estopped from confining the assessment to the immediate portion of land over which the railroad crosses, and also from denying defendant's ownership of such land, the damages to which they have agreed shall be assessed: Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Byington, 14–572.

Where different portions of land belonging to the same owner were adapted to different uses, and only one of such portions was crossed by the right of way, held, that the portion not crossed could not be taken into consideration in determining the damages: Haines v. St. Louis, D. M. & N. R. Co., 65–216.

Several parcels: Where farm land is crossed by a railroad, the owner is not limited in his right of recovery to the subdivision of land crossed or touched by the right of way, but the entire farm, if it is in one tract, may be considered in the assessment of damages and the same rule is applicable to town lots: Cox v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 77–20.

And where plaintiff, in an application for the appraisement of damages, asked that they might be assessed on his lots, caused by the location of the railroad of defendant across certain lots designated by number, held, that he asked the assessment of all legal damage resulting therefrom and did not limit his claim to the damage to the lots designated: Ibid.

Where plaintiff owned all the lots in a block, and several of them were crossed by the railroad, held, that he was entitled to recover for damage to the whole block, and testimony tending to show such damage was properly admitted: Ibid.

Where a right of way through parcels of real estate treated as an entirety is sought to be taken by statutory proceedings, the landowner's right of recovery is not limited to the land through which the right of way is to pass, but extends to all the tracts as a whole: Peden v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 78-131.

Therefore, held, by analogy, that where a right-of-way deed for a strip of land through a certain eighty-acre tract provided that the grantee should carry off the water in a certain manner, a breach of such contract entitled the grantor or his grantees to damages to the entire tract of which the eighty acres formed but a part: Ibid.

Where two lots are improved and used as one property and a notice of proceedings to condemn a right of way to one lot only is given, and the right of way is taken entirely from such lot, nevertheless the commissioners may properly include both lots in their assessment and return: Cummins v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-397.

In such cases it will be presumed that the title to both lots is in the owner against whom the proceedings with reference to one lot is instituted, without proof on his part of that fact, the finding of the commissioners as to the ownership of the property not having been questioned on appeal: Ibid.

Cost of fencing: The cost of building additional fence and keeping the same in repair should not be allowed as part of the damages: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288; Kennedy v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-521; Hanrahan v. Fox, 47-102.

Although the cost of fencing is not to be taken directly into account, yet, if the land was before fenced, and, by the taking of the right of way, it is thrown open and left in a manner unfenced, this fact will be taken into consideration in arriving at the depreciated value of the remaining premises: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288, 310.

Damages for improper construction: The damages to be awarded include those only from the appropriation and lawful use of the premises taken, and do not embrace injuries which may result from unlawful acts for which the company would be liable to the party injured: Fleming v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 34-353.

Damages consequent upon the negligent construction of the road are not to be considered. Only such damages are to be included as arise from its proper construction: King v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 34-458; Miller v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 63-680.

Obstruction of highway: The obstruction of a public highway is not a proper element of compensation to the owner of the property in this proceeding: Gear v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 43-83; Fleming v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 34-353.

Trespass: If a subcontractor in constructing the road, without authority from the company, goes outside of the right of way and commits trespass on land not condemned, the company is not thereby rendered liable. In order to render the company liable it must be made to appear, in some way, that it consented to the trespass or had such knowledge of it at the time it was done that its consent might be presumed: Waltemeyer v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 71-626.

Diversion of watercourse, etc.: The right which the owner of land has to a watercourse flowing over it is a freehold right which cannot be taken from him for public use either directly or by diminution or diversion from its natural channel, without adequate compensation: McCord v. High, 24-336.

The fact that a right of way is asked across land crossed by a stream of water does not authorize the assessment of damages for the diversion of the stream from its natural channel when such diversion would not be absolutely necessary. The mere fact that such diversion would be convenient or advantageous in the construction of the road will not authorize the implication that the company desires to acquire the right to make such diversion and pay the damage therefor rather than construct its road by bridging or otherwise, so as to render such diversion unnecessary: Stodghill v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 43-26.

The right to obstruct the passage of surface water is not presumed to be acquired in a condemnation proceeding, and the damages assessed do not cover damages resulting from such stoppage. The owner is not presumed to have been paid therefor, upon the theory that the company preferred to protect him against this incidental injury, and the enjoyment of the easement carries with it from day to day the obligation to furnish this protection: Drake v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 63-302. And see S. C., 70-59.

Where in violation of the stipulations of a right of way deed the surface water was thrown by the railway company upon plaintiff's premises, held, that it was competent to show by witnesses how much more the land of plaintiff would have been worth if the water had been kept off plaintiff's land: Peden v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 78-131.

Damages resulting from overflows caused by the negligent construction of a culvert cannot be considered as having been included in the damages for right of way: Hunt v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 86-15.

Interference with wells: Where a railway company had acquired right of way over land, held, that in connection with such right of way it might dig wells and would not be liable for thereby interfering with the percolation of water supplying springs upon the premises of the land owner: Hougan v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 35-558.

The fact that the construction of a railway destroys a valuable spring may be shown in evidence in determining the amount of damages. It will not be presumed that the spring was unnecessarily destroyed in the absence of evidence to that effect: Winklemans v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 62-11.

Consequential damages: Regard must be had only to the immediate and not to the remote consequences of the appropriation. The value of the remaining premises is not to be depreciated by heaping consequence on consequence: Sater v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 1-386.

Damages are not limited to the value of the land taken, but include such damages as result proximately from the use for which it is taken: Kucheman v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 46-366, 376.

Obstructing a view or interfering with the owner's privacy, and the noises of approaching trains, are matters for which the land owner may have compensation. As to such matters he is not injured merely as a member of the community in general: Ham v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 61-716.

Evidence in regard to how the railroad affects a farm over which it passes, aside from the mere value of the land taken, is admissible: Dreher v. Iowa Southern R. Co., 59-599.

Incidental injury from smoke and dust and the noise of moving trains gives no right for the recovery of damages where there is no other injury to which the smoke, etc., is incident. So held where the land condemned had not yet been actually occupied or interfered with by the railway company: Dimmick v. Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co., 58-637.

Damages not connected with the taking of land: Whatever inconveniences a property owner may suffer by the construction of a railway upon the property of another, no carelessness or negligence in such construction appearing, such injuries will not entitle such property owner to compensation in damages: Barr v. Oskaloosa, 45-275.

When assessment proper: While the statute only contemplates an assessment where the owner refuses to grant the right of way, or when the parties cannot agree as to the compensation, yet where it appears that the land owner contests the right of the company to take his land on the terms fixed by the appraisers and attacks the regularity of the proceedings of such appraisers, and that the appraisers were only to assess damages in cases where the owners had refused to grant the right of way, held, that the refusal to grant the right of way sufficiently appeared to show the jurisdiction of the court: Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rosseau, 8-373.

Where the compensation for the right of way has not only been agreed upon, but also paid to the land owner by the corporation, and he has conveyed the right of way, proceedings to condemn such right of way cannot be instituted, and would be entirely void for want of jurisdiction: Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co. v. Bentley, 62-446.

The phrase "owner of any real estate" includes a mortgagee, and if not made a party to the proceedings he is not bound thereby: Severin v. Cole, 38-463.

This section refers to land taken and appropriated for right of way. The provisions of § 767, with reference to assessing damages to the abutting property owner by reason of the construction of a railroad track along the streets of a city, do not authorize such abutting property owner to have his damages assessed in this manner: Stough v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-641.

Respective interests of joint owners: Where the respective interests of tenants in common appear of record or can be conveniently ascertained, the company, if it applies for the appointment of commissioners to assess damages, should by its application cause such damages to be assessed separately to each owner: Ruppert v. Chicago, O. & St. J. R. Co., 43-490.

A sheriff's jury cannot apportion the damages between the owner and the person holding a mortgage upon the land. They are to estimate the right of way only, and where the mortgagee is not made a party he may voluntarily assert his right to the money in the hands of the sheriff: Sawyer v. Landers, 56-422.

Who may recover: Where land is mortgaged and the mortgage debt remains unpaid and the land is not sufficient to pay it and the mortgagor is insolvent, damages assessed for a right of way may be recovered by the mortgagee, and the lien of the mortgagee is superior to that of an attaching creditor: Schafer v. Schafer, 75-349.

Where a party in interest appears in the proceeding and prosecutes an appeal he cannot object for want of notice served upon him or upon the person from whom he derives his right to the property: Ellsworth v. Chicago & I. W. R. Co., 91-386.

Under particular circumstances, held, that the claimant for damages was the owner of the property in such sense as to be entitled to receive whatever the company was liable to pay for the right of way: Hartley v. Keokuk & N. W. R. Co., 85-455.

Foreclosure of railroad mortgage: Also held, that it did not appear that the company had ever acquired a right of way by virtue of proceedings commenced by another company: Ibid.

Also held, that the foreclosure deed made to defendant while the proceeding was pending, the claimants in such proceeding not having been made parties to the foreclosure, was of no effect as determining the rights of such parties: Ibid.

Enforcement of payment: Where it had been agreed that the compensation to be paid for the right of way should be fixed by a third person, and under such agreement the railway company went into possession, but the amount of compensation was never fixed, held, that the land owner might, by condemnation proceedings, enforce payment of the compensation to which he was entitled: Corbin v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 66-269.

The agreement between the parties in such case as to the amount of damages might be interposed as a defense to the claim for damages in excess of the amount agreed upon, but such agreement need not be specially pleaded: Ibid.

New assessment: Where, upon condemnation of a right of way over agricultural college land, the damages assessed were deposited with the sheriff, held, that without return of the amount thus deposited the grantee of the land could not have another assessment of damages for the use of the premises by another railway company without a return of the money thus deposited: Chicago, M. & St. P. R.Co. v. Bean, 69-257.

Even though the land owner is seeking to set aside a deed previously made, on the ground of fraud or otherwise, he cannot disregard the previous transaction and have a new assessment: Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co. v. Bentley, 62-446.

A land owner who has received compensation which has not been refunded by him cannot recover the second time: Dubuque & D. R. Co. v. Diehl, 64-635.

Homestead exemption: Damages assessed for a right of way over the homestead are exempt from execution to the same extent that the homestead is: Kaiser v Seaton, 62-463.

Liability of commissioners: The commissioners should not be put to costs for doing in a regular and legal way what they are required to do, and in a certiorari proceeding to review their action an answer setting out the notice in the proceeding under which they are acting is sufficient: Forbes v. Delashmutt, 68-164.

Nature of proceeding: Where plaintiff sought to enjoin defendants from prosecuting an ad quod damnum proceeding to recover the value of certain land occupied in the construction of plaintiff's railroad, held, that plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law, as all questions involved in the issue could have been determined in the ad quod damnum proceeding: Keokuk & N. W. R. Co. v. Donnell, 77-221.

A refusal by the owner to grant a right of way is not necessary to confer upon the sheriff and jury power to act. The land owner is authorized to institute a proceeding after the railway has completed its road, and when there is no intention of treating the company as a mere trespasser, and it is sufficient in such case to allege that the owner and the company could not agree upon the compensation to be paid: Hartley v. Keokuk & N. W. R. Co., 85-455.

Dismissal of proceedings: Where the company has not entered upon the land to construct the road, no right to the amount of damages assessed becomes vested in the land owner until the decision on the appeal, and pending the appeal the company may dismiss the proceedings: Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Sater, 1-421.

A proceeding for the condemnation of land for a railway simply fixes the price upon payment of which, within a reasonable time, the company may take the right of way. The company cannot be compelled to pay the damages and take the way, but may waive the rights acquired by the proceedings, being liable, however, for costs and for any damages actually suffered by the land owner: Gear v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-523.

Judgment for the amount of damages, even though entered in the usual form of a judgment in an action of debt, passes no title to the company before payment, nor does it compel the acceptance of or payment for the land: Ibid.

Where, in proceedings to assess the damages for a right of way already occupied, the amount assessed is paid to the sheriff, and an appeal is afterwards taken, the railroad company cannot, by abandoning its right of way, defeat the land owner's right to the amount so paid, but such abandonment may be considered in determining the damages to which the land owner shall be entitled upon the trial of such appeal, and it would be error to enter a judgment for additional damages contingent upon the re-occupation of the land by the company; and held, that such re-occupation should not be made without a new assessment of damages: Hastings v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 38-316.

A proceeding instituted by a railway company to condemn a right of way may be dismissed as any other action without prejudice, and will not defeat a subsequent proceeding of the same character to condemn the right of way over such property: Corbin v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R Co., 66-73.

Remedies of land owner. The proceedings may be instituted by the land owner after the railway iscompleted: Hibbs v. Chicago & S W. R. Co,39-340.

The method provided for ascertaining and compelling the payment of the damages is exclusive, and none other can be pursued. But the owner is not deprived of his right to bring action for the possession of his property when taken withoutcompensation: Daniels v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 35-129.

A party has, by appeal, an adequate remedy against any irregularities which may occur in the proceedings or any injustice which may be done him in the award, and if he has personal notice this remedy is exclusive as to all such matters, and he cannot rely upon irregularities as a ground for restraining the construction of the road in accordance with such proceedings: Phillips v. Watson, 63-28.

If the company enters upon the land before the damages are paid it may be treated as a trespasser. The owner is not compelled to resort to an injunction or an action for the amount: Henry v.Dubuque & P. R.Co , 10-540.

Where the occupancy of a right of way is commenced and continued without right, the company is a mere trespasser, and the land owner or his grantee may maintain an action for damages for the occupation of the land: Donald v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 52-411.

If the company enters before payment of the damages assessed it may be held liable in damages as for a tort: Dimmick v. Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co., 62-409.

In an action to recover possession of land occupied without condemnation by the company, plaintiff may recover damages for the use of the premises. It is not necessary that such damages be assessed in a condemnation proceeding: Birge v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65-440; Rush v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 57-201.

On failure of the company which is already in possession and use of the premises for right of way to pay the amount assessed, it may be restrained by injunction from further using the premises: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 10-540; Richards v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 18-259.

The question whether the land is subject to condemnation for right of way may be raised in the condemnation proceedings and [illegible] an injunction to prevent such proceedings being instituted against the premises on the ground that they are otherwise appropriated to the public use will not lie: Waterloo Water Co. v. Hoxie, 89–317.

While equity will not interfere by injunction with condemnation proceedings where the right of the parties can be properly determined in such proceeding, yet where by such proceeding one railway was seeking to secure the right to cross another at grade, held that a court of equity might interfere upon a showing that such crossing would improperly obstruct the business of the company and might make provision for an under or over crossing: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, Ft. M & D. M. R. Co., 91–16.

The same right to an injunction will accrue to the land owner in case he institutes proceedings for assessing the damages: Hibbs v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 39–340.

The land owner is not estopped from maintaining proceedings to recover compensation for land taken for right of way by the fact that he has allowed the railway company to go upon and use his land for that purpose, and make improvements thereon: Ibid.

In such cases he may maintain an injunction restraining defendant from further using the right of way without making compensation, or maintain ejectment for the possession of the premises, if it appears that damages have been assessed and nothing but payment is wanting to entitle the company to the continued use of its right of way. It is proper to provide that no execution for the possession of the premises under such circumstances shall issue in the action of ejectment if the damages are paid within a limited time: Conger v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 41–419.

By agreement of parties an appeal was taken from the assessment of damages and judgment for the amount assessed was entered in such appeal, and execution thereon was stayed for two years, and the railroad was constructed through the property without objection. Held, that upon failure to pay the amount of the judgment at the time specified, the owner could proceed by injunction to restrain any further use of his property until compensation should be made: Irish v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 44–380.

A railway company may be dispossessed of its right of way by a judicial sale in a proceeding to enforce the land owner's right. So held where the owner of land had agreed to give the right of way in consideration of the performance of certain conditions by the company which had not been performed, and action was brought by the owner to foreclose his vendor's lien. Also, held, that the vendor's lien in such case was superior to the title of the purchaser of the railroad at foreclosure sale: Varner v. St. Louis & C. R. R. Co., 55–677.

No provision is made for the determination of the question whether the owner refuses to grant the right of way or whether the owner and the corporation cannot agree upon the compensation to be paid. If the parties appear in the condemnation proceedings it is an indication that they could not agree; but at any rate the finding in the condemnation proceeding cannot be attacked on the ground that these preliminary facts did not exist: Carlile v. Des Moines & K. C. R. Co., 68 N. W., 784.

Deposit of damages assessed: The fact that the company deposits the sum found due with the sheriff will not prevent the land owner from recovering, on appeal, the actual damage to the property and interest thereon from the time it is taken, even though the amount of the original damages is found to be less than that assessed by the sheriff's jury: Noble v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61–637.

The sheriff, in receiving the money deposited as security cannot be regarded as the agent of the owner, but he is the agent of the railway company, and if, through the unfaithfulness or mistake of the sheriff, the money is lost before reaching the hands of the land owner, such loss does not fall upon him but upon the company making the deposit: White v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 64–281.

For moneys paid to a sheriff by the company the land owner may maintain action against him at any time after the expiration of the thirty days allowed for appeal. The statute of limitations, therefore, runs against such an action from that time, and the fact that the land owner has refused the money and attempted by injunction to restrain the taking of his land will not prevent the running of the statute: Lower v. Miller, 66–408.

SEC. 2000. Assessment of damages—notice. The freeholders appointed shall be the commissioners to assess all damages to the owners of real estate in said county, and said corporation, or the owner of any land therein, may, at any time after their appointment, have the damages assessed in the manner herein prescribed, by giving the other party ten days' notice thereof in writing, if a resident of this state, specifying therein the day and hour when such commissioners will view the premises, which shall be served in the same manner as original notices. [C. '73, § 1245; R., § 1318.]

Where a mortgage upon the property appears of record, notice must be given to the mortgagee, or he will not be bound by the proceedings: Severin v. Cole, 38–463. And see Cochran v. Independent School Dist., 50–663.

Where the proceedings are based upon the assumption that the owner is a nonresi-dent and unknown, such assumption will be deemed true on certiorari unless the contrary is made to appear: Everett v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 28–417.

The notice must name the person whose land is affected by the proceedings. It is not sufficient that it be directed to all persons having an interest in certain described property: Birge v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65–440.

Where a right of way over agricultural college land in possession of a lessee was condemned in proceedings to which the college was a party, and afterwards, the lessee's right being forfeited, the premises were sold to another, held, that the condemnation proceedings were binding on the subsequent purchaser of the premises: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Bean, 69–257.

SEC. 2001. Minor or insane owner. If the owner of any lands is a minor, insane, or other person under guardianship, the guardian of such minor, insane or other person may, under the direction of the judge of the district court, agree and settle with said corporation for all damages by reason of the taking of such lands for any of the purposes aforesaid, and may give valid conveyances of such land. [C.'73, § 1246; R., § 1316.]

SEC. 2002. Nonresident owner. If the owner of such lands is a nonresident of this state, no demand of the land for a right of way or other purpose shall be necessary, except the publication of a notice, which may be in the following form:

Notice for the appropriation of lands for railway purposes.

To (here name each person whose land is to be taken or affected) and all other persons having any interest in or owning any of the following real estate (here describe the land by its congressional numbers in tracts not exceeding one-sixteenth of a section, or, if the land consists of lots in a town or city, by the numbers of the lot and block).

You are hereby notified that the.....has located its railway over the above described real estate, and desires the right of way over the same, to consist of a strip or belt of land.....feet in width, through the center of which the center line of said railway will run, together with such other land as may be necessary for bermes, waste banks and borrowing pits, and for wood and water stations (or desires the same for any other purpose for which property is authorized by this chapter to be taken), and unless you proceed to have the damages as to the same appraised on or before the .....day of....., A. D..... (which time must be at least four weeks after the publication of the notice), said company will proceed to have the same appraised on the.....day of.....A. D.....(which must be at least eight weeks after the first publication of the notice), at which time you can appear before the appraisers that may be selected.

By.....Attorney, or.....Agent, ...Railway Company.

[C.'73, § 1247.]

Where proceedings were based upon the assumption that the owner was a nonresident and unknown, held, on certiorari, that the contrary not being made to appear, the proceedings were not irregular: Everett v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 28–417.

The notice must name the person whose land has been taken or affected. It is not sufficient that it is directed to all other persons having an interest in the property described: Birge v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65–440.

SEC. 2003. Notice published. Said notice shall be published in some newspaper in the county, if there is one, if not, then in a newspaper published in the nearest county through which the proposed railway is to be run, for at least eight successive weeks prior to the day fixed for the appraisement at the instance of the corporation. [C.'73, § 1248.]

SEC. 2004. Appraisement. At the time fixed for either of the aforesaid notices, the appraisement of the lands described may be made and returned; but the appraisement and return may be in parcels larger than forty acres belonging to one person and lying in one tract, unless the agent or attorney of the corporation or the commissioners have actual knowledge that the tract does not belong wholly to the person in whose name it appears of record; and in case of such knowledge the appraisement shall be made of the different portions as they are known to be owned. [C. '73, § 1249.]

That damages to the entire premises of a property owner, and not merely to the government subdivision through which the road passes, are to be assessed, see notes to § 1999.

SEC. 2005. Dwelling-house, garden, or orchard. If it appears from the finding of the commissioners that the dwelling-house, outhouse, orchard or garden of the owner of any land taken will be overflowed or otherwise injuriously affected by any dam or reservoir to be constructed as authorized by this chapter, such dam shall not be erected until the question of such overflowing or other injury has been determined in favor of the corporation upon appeal. [C. '73, § 1250.]

SEC. 2006. Vacancies filled. In case of the death, absence, neglect or refusal of any of said freeholders to act as commissioners as aforesaid, the sheriff shall summon other freeholders to complete the panel. [C. '73, § 1251; R., § 1319.]

SEC. 2007. Costs. The corporation shall pay all the costs of the assessments made by the commissioners and those occasioned by the appeal, including reasonable attorney fees to be taxed by the court, unless on the trial thereof the same or a less amount of damages is awarded than was allowed by the commissioners. [C.'73, § 1252; R., § 1317.]

Where the damages allowed on the appeal are less than those awarded in the assessment, in the absence of any showing that either party has made an offer, the costs should be apportioned: Noble v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61-637.

If, on the trial of an appeal by the land owner, a less amount of damages is given than was awarded by the commissioners, the court is not bound to tax all the costs of appeal to him, but may distribute them according to the general rules of law without reference to this section: Jones v. Mahaska County Coal Co., 47-354.

The purchaser of a railroad pending an appeal from allowance of damages for right of way becomes liable for the payment of costs incurred in such proceeding: Frankel v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 70-424.

Where the costs were taxed to one party, and the court was not asked to make an apportionment, held, that the order of the court would not be disturbed upon appeal: Cox v Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 77-20.

SEC. 2008. Report recorded. The report of the commissioners, where the same has not been appealed from, and the amount of damages assessed and costs has been deposited with the sheriff, or if an appeal is taken, and the amount of damages assessed on the trial thereof has been paid to the sheriff, may be recorded in the records of deeds in the county where the land is situated, and such record shall be presumptive evidence of title in the corporation of the property so taken, and shall constitute constructive notice of the rights of such corporation therein. [C.'73, § 1253.]

The company cannot be compelled to pay the damages assessed and take the right of way, but may waive the rights acquired by the proceedings, being liable, however, for costs, and any damages actually suffered by the land owner: Gear v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-523.

The recording of the award, if done by mistake, does not pass any title to the company so as to raise an implied contract to pay the amount of the award; certainly not until the fact of the mistake has become known to the company and it has had a reasonable time to correct it: Dimmick v. Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co., 58-637.

Where a portion of plaintiff's land was included in the right of way condemned, but the road was not actually constructed over any portion of his land, which remained fenced and was not entered upon, held, that an appropriation did not appear, and title to the right of way did not pass to the company until it had made payment: Ibid. And see S. C., 62-409.

SEC. 2009. Appeals—how taken. Either party may appeal from such assessment to the district court, within thirty days after the assessment is made, by giving the adverse party, or, if such party is the corporation, its agent or attorney, and the sheriff notice in writing that such appeal has been taken. The sheriff shall thereupon file a certified copy of so much of the appraisement as applies to the part appealed from, and said court shall try the same as in an action by ordinary proceedings. The land owner shall be plaintiff and the corporation defendant. [C.'73, § 1254; R., § 1317.]

Waiver: Objections to the jurisdiction of the sheriff's jury are not waived by appearance on appeal: Stough v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-641.

Exclusive remedy: The remedy by appeal is conclusive of all other remedies as to the manner and method of taking advantage of irregularities in the proceeding: Phillips v. Watson, 63-28.

An appeal is a plain, adequate and speedy remedy when the claim is that insufficient damages are given. Irregularities in the proceding cannot be corrected by certiorari: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co. v. Whelan, 64-694.

Joint assessment: Where the damages are assessed jointly in favor of two owners, one of them cannot properly prosecute an appeal without joining the other as appellant or making him a party to the proceedings by notice. Upon failure to do so the appeal should be dismissed on motion: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hurst, 30-73.

A subsequent settlement with a part of the owners in common where the assessment is not apportioned, will not defeat an appeal by those not settled with: Ruppert v. Chicago, O. & St. J. R. Co., 43-490.

By mortgagee: The owner may take an appeal without joining a mortgagee therein, although an award has been made in favor of the owner and mortgagee jointly: Lance v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 57-636.

Where damages for right of way are awarded jointly to the owner and the mortgagees of the land, upon notice to all of them, the mortgagor may maintain an appeal from the award without making the mortgagees parties thereto: Dixon v. Rockwell, S. & D. R. Co., 75-367.

By person not party: A person not a party to the proceedings, although interested in the property, cannot appeal. Such person might perhaps, make himself a party before the commissioners, but he cannot make himself a party merely by appealing: Connable v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-27; Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-35.

Whether, where publication of notice is authorized to be made to parties interested, all persons interested are to such extent parties as that they may appeal, quœre: Ibid.

As to part of damages: Where the assessment covers the entire damage to two contiguous tracts used together and owned by the same person, an appeal cannot be taken from an assessment as to one tract only: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-35.

The sheriff is not a party to the condemnation proceedings, and is not disqualified from serving notice of appeal therein: Ibid.

Notice: Whether the giving of notice to the deputy-sheriff would be sufficient, quœre: Waltmeyer v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 64-688.

But where it appeared that notice was brought to the sheriff's attention and he directed the deputy to accept service, held, that the notice was sufficient: Ibid.

Notice of appeal may be properly served on the engineer in charge of the survey and location of the railroad, and transacting business connected with securing the right of way in the county where the appeal is taken: Jamison v. Burlington & W. R. Co., 69-670.

Where the notice of appeal describes the premises in the same way as they are described in the application for condemnation, the land owner is not limited in his recovery of damages accruing to the portion of his premises described, but may show the damages to his entire farm: Dudley v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co., 77-408.

The time for taking the appeal begins to run from the time the assessment is in fact made, reduced to writing, and made public, or in some legitimate manner comes to the knowledge of the parties interested: Ibid.

Upon motion being made to dismiss the appeal because not taken in time, affidavits of jurors for making the assessment are receivable to show when the assessment was actually made: Ibid.

Filing papers: Where the appeal has properly been taken by notice, the appellant should not be prejudiced by a failure of the officer to file the papers at the time required by statute: Robertson v. Eldora R., etc., Co., 27-245.

Change of venue may be had on the appeal the same as in civil actions: Whitney v. Atlantic Southern R. Co., 53-651.

Assessment of damages on appeal: On appeal the question of damages is to be determined upon its merits, and the regularity of prior proceedings, such as the selection of commissioners, etc., is not to be called in question. That can only be done by certiorari: Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rosseau, 8-373. And see Runner v. Keokuk, 11-543.

The assessment of damages upon appeal is to be made without any reference to that appealed from: Hahn v. Chicago, O. & St. J. R. Co., 43-333.

The notice of apppeal is presumptive evidence of an assessment from which an appeal can be taken: Ibid.

An appeal by the land owner from the assessment of the commissioners cures any defect in regard to giving notice of the assessment to such owner: Borland v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 8-148.

In the proceedings on appeal an offer to confess judgment may be made with the consequences provided in § 3818, with reference to costs: Harrison v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 36-323.

The company may dismiss the proceedings at any time before judgment upon payment of costs: Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Sater, 1-421.

It would seem that a land owner appealing need not give bond; but even if that be necessary, the failure to give bond at the time the appeal is taken ought not to work the dismissal of the appeal: Robertson v. Eldora R., etc., Co., 27-245.

Judgment: Where, under the provisons of a previous statute, general judgment was rendered against the company on the appeal, held, that it could have no greater effect than an assessment of damages: Gear v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-523.

Allowance of interest: In case of an appeal by the railway company the proper measure of damages is the value of the land at the time of its appropriation, with interest thereon to the date of judgment: Daniels v. Chicago, I. & N. R. Co., 41-52.

Interest may be allowed on the damages awarded from the time of condemnation, provided the damages are greater than those allowed by the sheriff's jury: Hartshorn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 52-613.

Interest on the assessment does not begin to run from the time of assessment, but only from the time of taking possession: Haye v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 64-753.

In estimating the damages upon appeal the jury may consider the injury as originally sustained, and the interest which the original sum would have borne during the delay: Noble v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61-637.

Where the court simply directed the jury to allow plaintiff the market value of the land taken at the time that it was taken, held, that such instruction was proper, and that interest should be allowed on the amount of the verdict from the time of the appropriation: Hollingsworth v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-443.

The damages are to be assessed as of the date of the assessment by the sheriff's jury, and then upon the rendition of the verdict the court should make the proper order touching the question of interest. Such order should fix the date when the interest begins to run, which should be when the company deprives the property owner of the use of his property: Reed v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 25 Fed., 886.

After a final adjudication of the claim for damages on an appeal to the district court and payment of the amount awarded the claimant cannot maintain an original action to recover interest on the amount thus awarded nor can the cause be redocketed for that purpose: Jamison v. Burlington, & W. R. Co., 87-265.

In the proceeding all the rights of the parties should be adjusted, and the land owner is not entitled after appeal to bring another action to recover interest on the money deposited in accordance with the condemnation proceedings: Jamison v. Burlington & W. R. Co., 78-562.

SEC. 2010. Deposit—Acceptance. An appeal shall not delay the prosecution of work upon said railway, if said corporation pays or deposits with the sheriff the amount assessed. The sheriff shall not pay such deposit over to the person entitled thereto after the service of notice of appeal, but shall retain the same until the determination thereof. An acceptance by the land owner of the damages awarded by the commissioners shall bar his right to appeal. [C. '73, §§ 1255-6; R., § 1317.]

If an appeal is taken to the lower court and the damages awarded are greater than were allowed by the commissioners, the company desiring to appeal to the supreme court must deposit the additional amount with the sheriff, and is not relieved from the obligation to do so by giving a supersedeas bond: Downing v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 63-177.

The right of the owner to receive the amount so deposited is suspended until the appeal is decided. The property is not taken, in an absolute sense, until the final assessment is paid, and the section is, therefore, not unconstitutional: Peterson v. Ferreby, 30-327.

The sheriff holds the deposit not as agent of the owner, but as agent of the company, and if it does not come into the hands of the owner, or is for any reason lost or misappropriated, such loss must be sustained by the company: White v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 64-281.

For moneys paid to a sheriff the land owner may maintain action against him at any time after the expiration of thirty days allowed for appeal. The statute of limitations, therefore, runs against such action from that time, and the fact that the land owner has refused the money and has attempted by injunction to restrain the taking of his land will not prevent the running of the statute: Lower v. Miller, 66-408.

The fact that the owner of the property accepts the money awarded will defeat an appeal by him, but not an appeal of the company; on an appeal by the latter the owner is not estopped from claiming any increased amount of damage to which he may appear to be entitled: Burns v. Chicago, Fort M. & D. M. R. Co., 70 N. W., 728.

Before there was any statutory provision on the subject, it was held that acceptance of the damages awarded would bar an appeal by the land owner: Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Byington, 14-572.

SEC. 2011. Trial—judgment—costs. On the trial of the appeal, no judgment shall be rendered except for costs. The amount of damages shall be ascertained and entered of record, and if no money has been paid or deposited with the sheriff, the corporation shall pay the amount so ascertained, or deposit the same with the sheriff, before entering upon the premises. Should the corporation decline to take the property and pay the damages awarded on final determination of the appeal, then it shall pay, in addition to the costs and damages actually suffered by the land owner, reasonable attorney's fees, to be taxed by the court. [C. '73, § 1257.]

Under the Revision (which contained no similar provision), held, that where a general judgment was rendered against the company on appeal, it could have no greater effect than an assessment of damages as contemplated by the statute: Gear v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-523.

Interest may be allowed on the damages awarded from the time of condemnation, provided such damages are greater than as found by the sheriff's jury: Hartshorn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 52-613.

Further as to interest, see notes to § 2009.

In such a proceeding no judgment can be rendered except for costs. After the assessment, the company, by paying the costs and damages, may relieve itself from further liability. Therefore the statute of limitations does not apply to such a proceeding: Hartley v. Keokuk & N. W. R. Co., 85-455.

SEC. 2012. Additional deposit. If, on the trial of the appeal, the damages awarded by the commissioners are increased, the corporation shall pay or deposit with the sheriff the whole amount of damages awarded before entering on, or using or controlling, the premises. The sheriff, upon being furnished with a certified copy of the assessment, may remove said corporation, and all persons acting for or under it, from said premises, unless the amount of the assessment is forthwith paid or deposited with him. [C.'73, § 1258.]

Where the amount of damages awarded by the commissioners is paid to the sheriff and the company enters upon the land, if upon appeal by the land owner a larger sum is awarded, the company may be enjoined from further use of the property until it pays such further sum: Richards v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 18-259.

The federal court will not order its marshal to oust the railway company from the possession of the premises for non-payment of damages for the right of way fixed in that court on appeal, when the remedy of the statute, by application to the sheriff, is open to the property owner: Reed v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 25 Fed., 886.

If appeal is taken from the award and the damages awarded are greater than were allowed by the commissioners, the company desiring to appeal to the supreme court must deposit the amount with the sheriff, and is not relieved from the obligation by giving a supersedeas bond: Downing v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 63-177.

SEC. 2013. Damages reduced. If the amount awarded by the commissioners is decreased on the trial of the appeal, the reduced amount only shall be paid the land owners. [C. '73, § 1259.]

SEC. 2014. Channels or ditches along right of way. In any case where it would have the right to dig a channel or cut a ditch, so as to change and straighten the course of a stream or water course too frequently crossed by such road, for the purpose of protecting the right of way and road-bed, or promoting safety and convenience in operation of the road, it may, if it cannot agree with the owners of the land to be crossed by such channel or ditch, either as to its location or the price to be paid for land taken, condemn an amount sufficient and convenient for such purpose, in the same manner that lands for the right of way for the road-bed may be condemned; and such condemnation shall be made with the same rights of appeal as in other cases of condemnation of land for right of way uses. Nothing in this section shall give the corporation the right to change the course of any stream or water course where such right does not otherwise exist, nor to turn such stream or water course off from any cultivated meadow, or pasture lands, when it only touches such lands at one point, unless the owner or owners thereof consent to such diversion. [18 G. A., ch. 191.]

This section, at least in so far as it applies to cases where the right of way is taken, as provided for the purpose of promoting the safety of the traveling public, is not unconstitutional as authorizing the taking of private property for other than a public purpose: Reusch v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 57-687.

SEC. 2015. Non-user of right of way. Where a railway constructed in whole or in part has ceased to be operated for more than five years; or where the construction of a railway has been commenced and work on the same has ceased and has not, in good faith, been resumed for more than five years, and remains unfinished; or where any portion of any such railway has not been operated for four consecutive years, and the rails and rolling stock have been wholly removed therefrom; it shall be treated as abandoned, and all rights of the person or corporation constructing or operating any such railway, over so much as remains unfinished or from which the rails and rolling stock have been wholly removed, may be entered upon and appropriated as provided in the next section. If the railway or any part thereof shall not be used or operated for a period of eight years, or if, its construction having been commenced, work on the same has ceased and has not been in good faith resumed for eight years, the right of way, including the road-bed, shall revert to the owner of the land from which said right of way was taken. [18 G. A., ch. 15; 15 G. A., ch. 65; C.'73, § 1260.]

This section defines what shall be regarded as an abandonment of a right of way, and nothing less than non-user for eight years will authorize the owner of the land from whom the right of way was taken to retake possession. If he does so, the company may at any time within eight years enter upon the land again and resume its use: Fernow v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 75–526.

These provisions apply to the case of a railroad which has been commenced and abandoned before the enactment of the statute. The time which had expired before the enactment and after the abandonment of the work is to be taken into account in computing the eight years. A railroad company has no vested right by contract to hold a right of way which it has abandoned, and the section is not unconstitutional in that respect: Skillman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 78-404.

In the absence of statute non-user for any length of time would not work a forfeiture, but if without intention to resume the use it would constitute an abandonment; and therefore under this section mere non-user, without other evidence of intention to abandon, will not constitute an abandonment unless it has continued for eight years when it will constitute an abandonment without regard to the intent: McClain v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 90–646.

But the statute does not apply to an agreement between the parties for forfeiture upon other terms than those provided in it and a stipulation that abandonment shall follow if the grantor shall cease permanently to use the right of way for the purposes for which it is conveyed will be effectual without regard to the length of time of non-use: Ibid.

The easement being acquired by express grant is not barred by a failure to use the same for ten years, and a possession of the property, during that time, by the original owner, in the absence of any act of his preventing the use: Barlow v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 29–276; Noll v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 32–66.

A land owner who has received damages for a right of way and has entered into an agreement by which another company has taken and used such right of way is not in position to rely on an abandonment by the first company: Marling v. Chicago, C. R. & N. R. Co., 67–331.

A portion of a line may become abandoned. Whether it is so or not is a question of fact: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Moulton & A. R. Co., 57–249.

SEC. 2016. Condemning abandoned right of way. In case of abandonment, as provided in the preceding section, any other corporation may enter upon such abandoned work, or any part thereof, and acquire the right of way over the same, and the right to any unfinished work or grading found thereon, and the title thereto, by proceeding as near as may be in the manner provided in this chapter; but parties who have previously received compensation in any form for the right of way on the line of such abandoned railway, which has not been refunded by them, shall not be permitted to recover the second time. The value of such road-bed and right of way, excluding the work done thereon, when taken for a new company, shall be assessed for the benefit of the former company or its legal representative. [C.'73, § 1261.]

Where, upon condemnation of a right of way over agricultural college land, the damages assessed were deposited with the sheriff, held, that without return of the amount thus deposited the grantee of the agricultural college could not have another assessment of damages for the use of the premises by another railway company: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Bean, 69–257.

A land owner who has received compensation which has not been refunded by him cannot recover the second time: Dubuque & D. R. Co. v. Diehl, 64–635.

SEC. 2017. Raising or lowering highways. Any such corporation may raise or lower any turnpike, plank road or other road for the purpose of having its railway cross over or under the same, and in such cases said corporation shall put such road, as soon as may be, in as good repair and condition as before such alteration. [19 G. A., ch. 122; 15 G. A., ch. 47; C. '73, § 1262; R., § 1321.]

This section as it originally stood, authorizing a railway corporation to raise or lower a highway "for the purpose of having its railway pass over or under the same," was construed to confer upon railway companies the right to construct their tracks upon the public highways, including the streets of a city, without compensation to an abutting property owner, where he did not own the fee in the highway or street: Milburn v. Cedar Rapids, 12–246; Gear v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 39–23.

But as now amended, by substituting "cross" for "pass," it cannot be construed as authorizing such use of highways or streets without other express legislative authority: Stanley v. Davenport, 54–463.

The objection imposed by the statute upon a railway company constructing and operating its railway, to construct at all points where the highway crosses it sufficient and safe crossings, is binding upon all corporations using railways in the state: Farley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 42–234.

The embankment constructed as a necessary approach to the crossing is a part of the crossing and the company is required to keep it in repair: Ibid.

The company is bound to keep crossings in a safe condition, and this obligation extends to the approaches to a bridge: Newton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66–422.

The company is under obligation to build and keep in repair an overhead crossing and the approaches thereto, provided the grade crossing is unsuitable and the overhead crossing is necessary to put the street in proximately as good repair and condition as before the railroad was built: Ibid.

The burden of putting the highway into proper condition is imposed upon the railway company and attaches when the railway is constructed and the burden is so connected with the right to maintain and operate the railway that liens acquired by creditors on the railway property are subject to it: Ft. Dodge v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 87–389.

In a proceeding by mandamus to compel the railroad company to put in an overhead crossing, the company being in the hands of a receiver appointed by the same court, may be directed by the court as to the plans and specifications in accordance with which such crossing shall be constructed: Ibid.

As the railway has the right to raise or lower highways at crossings, an indictment charging the company with obstructing the public highway with digging, plowing and scraping such highway, throwing up embankments and making excavations, etc., at points where the railway crosses such highway, does not state facts sufficient to constitute the crime of obstructing the highway: State v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 63–508.

In an action for personal injuries received at a public crossing, the fact that the crossing is not as good as the highway was before the construction of the railway is admissible for the purpose of showing what vigilance was required of the railway as to the use of signals and the operation of trains in approaching such crossing: Funston v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61–452,

Where by reason of there not being sufficient service of notice a highway which is located across the right of way is not legally established the company is not under obligation to put in a crossing: State ex rel. v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 91–275.

The company has no right to cross a street in a city or town diagonally without making compensation to abutting property owners for damages as required by § 767: Enos v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co, 78–28.

A railroad may cross a street in a city without the consent of the city council required by § 767: Gates v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 82–518.

The company may raise or lower the highway for the purpose of having its road cross over or under the same, but not for the purpose of making a grade crossing higher or lower than the grade of the highway: Ibid.

While the company may raise a highway crossing for the purpose of having its railway pass under, it is required to put such highway in as good condition as before the alteration. This authority does not exempt the company from damages for which it is otherwise liable under the provisions of § 767, with reference to the construction of railways in streets: Nicks v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 84–27.

The owner of property abutting on a street over which a railway is constructed under the provisions of § 767, not being the owner of the fee of the street, cannot recover unless he can show actual damages: Cook v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 83–278.

And see notes to § 767, as to damages to abutting owners where the track is laid in a street.

The railway has no right to fence its track where it crosses streets or alleys properly laid out, whether they have been improved and used by the public or not: Lathrop v. Central Iowa R. Co,. 69–105. And see notes to § 2055.

Highways may be laid out across the right of way: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Starkweather, 66 N. W., 87.

But the company cannot be compelled to construct a viaduct crossing: Albia v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 71 N. W., 541.

SEC. 2018. Further repairs. If the supervisors, trustees, city council, or other person having jurisdiction over such road, require further or different repairs or alterations made thereon, or if the same, in their opinion, is unsafe, they shall give notice thereof in writing to any agent or officer of the corporation, and, if the parties are unable to agree respecting the same, either may apply by petition, setting out the facts, to the district court or judge thereof, and such court or judge shall cause reasonable notice to be given the adverse party of the application. The petition shall be filed in the clerk's office, and may be answered as in other cases. The court shall determine the matter in a summary way, and make the necessary orders in relation thereto, giving such corporation, if found at fault, a reasonable time to comply therewith, and, upon failure to do so, it may enjoin the corporation from using so much of its road as interferes with any such roads, and may award costs in favor of the prevailing party. [C.'73, § 1263; R., §§ 1322-3.]

SEC. 2019. Temporary ways. Every such corporation, when employed in raising or lowering any road, or in making any other alteration by means of which the same may be obstructed, shall provide and keep in good order suitable temporary ways to enable travelers to avoid or pass such obstructions. [C.'73, § 1264; R., § 1324.]

SEC. 2020. Crossing railways, canals, etc. Any such corporation may construct and carry its railway across, over or under any railway, canal or water course, when it may be necessary in the construction of the same, and in such cases it shall so construct its crossings as not unnecessarily to impede the travel, transportation or navigation upon the railway, canal or stream so crossed. Said corporation shall be liable for the damages occasioned to any person injured by reason of said crossing. [C.'73, § 1265; R., § 1325.]

The requirement of § 2073, that trains shall come to a full stop at crossings of other railroads, necessarily renders crossings on grade an impediment, to some extent, to travel and transportation, but the inconvenience and delay arising from their use must be borne by the company. The company constructing an intersecting line is required to so construct the crossing as not to unnecessarily interfere with the crossing of the other road. Whether such crossing shall be made at grade, or over or under the other, must depend upon circumstances; and under particular facts, held, that a requirement that an under-crossing be constructed was not unreasonable: Humestone & S. R. Co. v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 74-554.

The right of a railway to cross another is subject to the limitation that the crossing shall be so made as not unnecessarily to interfere with the use of the railway crossed and where such interference is plain it is within the jurisdiction of a court of equity to prescribe the method and conditions under which such crossing may be made: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, Ft. M & D. M. R. Co., 91-16.

SEC. 2021. Bridges—damages. Every such corporation shall maintain and keep in good repair all the bridges, with their abutments, which it may construct for the purpose of enabling its railway to pass over or under any turnpike, road, canal, water course or other way, and shall be liable for all damages sustained by any person in consequence of any neglect or violation of the provisions of this chapter. [C.'73, §§ 1266–7; R., §§ 1326–7.]

The provisions of this section do not extend the liability of the corporation to the acts of those not its agents or servants: Callahan v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 23-562.

SEC. 2022. Private crossings. When any person owns land on both sides of any railway, the corporation owning the same shall, when requested so to do, make and keep in good repair one cattle-guard, and one causeway or other adequate means of crossing the same, at such reasonable place as may be designated by the owner. [C.'73, § 1268; R., § 1329.]

When required: It is evident that the provisions of this section are not intended to apply to streets in cities and towns: Gates v. Chicago, St. Paul & K. C. R. Co., 82-518.

The company need not provide a crossing unless the landowner requires it: Henderson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 48-216.

The obligation to erect a private crossing by reason of the provisions of this section, and not under contract between the parties, is a public obligation of such a nature that the board of railroad commissioners has jurisdiction to investigate the question and make an order with reference thereto: State v. Mason City & Ft. D. R Co., 85-516.

The remedy by mandamus in such a case is not exclusive: Ibid.

The duty of the company to construct a private crossing may be enforced by mandamus: Boggs v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 54-435.

And in the particular case, held, that a request of the person owning land on both sides of the railway track, for an open crossing at a particular point, was not unreasonable, and compliance therewith might be enforced: Ibid.

The owner of land is authorized to designate the place where the crossing for his benefit shall be made, and the limitation put upon his choice of location is that the place designated shall be a reasonable one: Van Vrankin v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 68-576.

The location and character of a crossing must be determined with due regard for all the interests involved in its construction and maintenance, and the reasonable use which the land owner desires to make of it, its expense and the effect it will have upon the operation of the railroad and the safety of life and property, and in a particular case, held, that while a crossing would be a great convenience to the land owner, yet the inconvenience and danger to the operation of trains by the company was such that it should not be required: Truesdale v. Jensen, 91-312.

Where the only means a citizen has of reaching a highway is across the railway, he may insist that an open crossing be provided for him by means of which he may reach the highway without stopping to open gates or remove bars: Gray v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 37-119.

Where a party owning land on opposite sides of a highway maintains a lane and fences in such manner as to indicate that he prefers an open crossing instead of one closed by gates, the company will not be liable to him for failure to maintain such gates: Tyson v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 43-207.

Where a railroad passes through a pasture the owner is not, as a matter of course, entitled to an open crossing for his stock, regardless of any other means of crossing. To entitle him to such a crossing it must appear that there is no provision for passing from one part of the field to the other, which is adequate under the circumstances: Curtiss v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 62-418.

The words "one cattle guard" do not mean a single structure on one side of the causeway, but such guard as will prevent stock from going over the causeway on to the track on either side: State ex rel. v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 68 N. W., 819.

One grade crossing for each land owner whose land is divided by the right of way with gates and grade is the rule in this state and it is only when a grade crossing is inadequate that other or additional means may be ordered. Therefore, held, that where the only objection to such crossing was the inconvenience of opening and closing the gates it was error for the commissioners to order the railroad to construct an under grade crossing: Ibid.

While there may be cases where an overhead crossing can properly be required, yet in view of the fact that grade crossings are the rule, it would require a strong case to warrant the court in holding an overhead crossing to be reasonable and just: State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 86-304.

A company required to maintain and construct proper cattle-guards cannot by contract with another company, whose road it purchases, relieve itself from the right or obligation to do so: Downing v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-96. As to cattle-guards, see also notes to § 2054.

Gates and bars at private crossings: If the company undertakes to and does construct fences, gates, crossings and cattle-guards, etc., for a private owner, a request for their construction may be presumed, and the company will be required to keep them in repair: Miller v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66-546.

Under the provisions of a previous statute, differing from the present one as to private crossings, held, that a company had a right to construct fences at such crossings, but must provide the same with gates: McKinley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47-76, 78.

The duty to maintain gates at private crossings is a part of the duty to fence, and the company will be liable for damages to stock injured by reason of failure to construct such gates or keep them in repair: Ibid.; Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

Where the claim was that stock escaped upon the track by reason of the gate at a private crossing being insufficient, as originally constructed, held, that no evidence of knowledge of the defective condition was necessary, as it would have been in the case of a failure to repair: Morrison v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 84-663.

A land owner driving cattle in through the gate at one crossing and along the right of way for the purpose of turning them out at the gate at another crossing is guilty of negligence; and in a particular case, held, that there was not such negligence on the part of the employes of the company after they were aware of the cattle being on the track as to render them liable for damage in killing some of the cattle: Davidson v. Central Iowa R. Co., 75-22.

As to the liability for failure to fence in general, see § 2055.

Where it is the duty of a railway company to keep closed a gate in a fence of its right of way it will be liable for injury to stock due to negligence in performing that duty: Manwell v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 89-708.

The obligations imposed upon the company to fence and to provide private crossings are correlative, and if it does each as well as it can consistently with the other it is not liable: Henderson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 39-220.

Where the company is required to put in a private crossing and erect proper gates and bars, it will not be liable for negligence of a person for whom the crossing is constructed in habitually leaving such gates or bars open, further than that it must use reasonable diligence and care in keeping them closed: Ibid.

But the company is not responsible in the absence of negligence, although it knows that the land owner or other persons are in the constant or usual habit of leaving the gates open: Henderson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-620.

Where the company nailed up the gates at a private crossing for the reason that they had been habitually left open, and the land owner tore down the fence so that the gates should be open, held, that it was error to instruct the jury as to the effect of the abandonment by the land owner of his crossing: Ibid.

The sufficiency of the gates provided at a private crossing is a question of fact for the jury; and held, that it was error to instruct the jury that such gates were sufficient in view of the fact that the land owner gave no notice to the company of objection thereto, and himself believed them sufficient: McKenly v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-641.

Under particular facts, held, that it was not sufficiently shown that injury to stock resulted from defect in the gate through which they escaped upon the track: Bothwell v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 59-192.

In an action for injuries to stock from failure to maintain a gate a at private crossing in good condition, evidence of the condition of the gate two or three days after the accident, it not being shown that its condition as to security was different from what it was at the time of the accident, was held proper: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54–540.

Where the company constructs a gate at a private crossing without fastenings, and in such manner that it may be blown open by the wind, it is not proper to charge the jury that the responsibility for keeping the gate closed is upon the person for whose convenience it is constructed, and that he cannot recover for injuries to his stock coming upon the track through such gate: Hammond v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 43–168.

Where it appeared that a gate at a private crossing had been constructed without fastenings and the wind had sometimes blown it open, held, that it was improper to exclude from the jury the question as to whether the company was guilty of negligence in thus constructing it, and that the proof of the habit of an adjoining owner to leave the gate open would not preclude recovery on account of such negligence in the original construction, it not appearing that it had been left open by such owner in the particular instance when the damage occurred: Ibid.

A company may be liable without knowledge of the defect in the fence if, in the exercise of reasonable care, such knowledge would have been acquired. If the fence was originally defective the company is chargeable with knowledge thereof without express notice: Ibid.

The company is only liable for negligence in failing to put up the bars at a private crossing, which have been left down, after acquiring knowledge of their condition, or in not ascertaining their condition, and the burden of proving such negligence is upon the plaintiff: Perry v. Dubuque Southern R. Co., 36–102.

Proof of the mere fact that bars have been left down by some person, and that through them cattle have strayed upon the track and been injured, does not make a prima facie case of liability on the part of the company. Such liability, if it exists at all, arises from the conduct of the company after the bars have been left down, either in failing to put them up after acquiring knowledge that they were down, or in neglecting to use reasonable diligence to ascertain such condition: Ibid.

Where the employes have closed a gate at a crossing they may assume that it will not be opened by persons passing through without right and the company is not liable for injuries to stock escaping on the track through such gate subsequently left open, the employes not having notice as to such gate being open: Harding v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 69 N. W., 1019.

And as to a like rule in regard to failure to repair fences, see notes to § 2055.

It is erroneous to instruct the jury that a person whose stock has been injured upon the track makes a prima facie case against the company by showing that the gate through which stock came upon the track was out of repair previous to the accident. Proof of such fact does not cast upon defendant the burden of showing that the accident did not result by reason of the gate being open. Such fact would be a circumstance tending to show that it was open through defendant's fault which might have much or little weight according to circumstances; but the burden of proof would remain upon plaintiff to show negligence of defendant causing the injury: Johnson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55–707.

The fact that the bars are left down by the land owner will not as to third persons discharge the company from its obligation to keep them closed: Bartlett v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20–188.

But the land owner could not recover for injuries resulting therefrom, and might be liable to a third person injured by such bars being open: Russell v. Hanley, 20–219.

If, by reason of the act of the land owner in wrongfully removing a gate at a private crossing on his land, stock of a third person gets upon the track and is injured, and the company is held liable therefor, it may recover from such land owner the amount which it has been compelled to pay: Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dunn, 59–619.

SEC. 2023. Right of way for canal, turnpike, or bridge. When any corporation or person desires to construct a canal, turnpike, graded, macadamized or plank road, or a bridge, such corporation or person may take such private property as may be necessary for right of way, not exceeding one hundred feet in width, by pursuing the course prescribed in this chapter. [C. '73, § 1269; R., §§ 1278–88; C. '51, §§ 759–779.]

This section does not authorize the taking of private property for landings for a public ferry: Sandford v. Martin, 31–67.

SEC. 2024. State may condemn. Whenever in the opinion of the governor the public interest requires the taking of any real estate for the making or construction of any drain, sewers, yards, walls, buildings or other improvements or conveniences for the use or benefit of the penitentiaries, hospitals for the insane, or other institutions of the state, upon or across private property, the same proceedings may be had in the name of the state as provided in this chapter, and the proceedings shall be conducted by the county attorney of the county in which the land is situated, whenever directed by the governor, or he may appoint some other person for that purpose. [16 G. A., ch. 75; C. '73, § 1271.]

SEC. 2025. Damages. When the amount of the damages is finally determined, the sheriff or clerk, as the case may be, shall certify the amount thereof to the governor, who shall, by an order indorsed thereon, direct the payment of the same, and the auditor of state shall issue a warrant on the treasury for the amount, which shall be paid with any money not otherwise appropriated, and when paid to the sheriff or person entitled thereto, the state, through its proper officer or agent, may enter on the premises and construct the desired work. [C. '73, § 1272.]

SEC. 2026. Street railways over highways. Any corporation organized under the laws of this state to operate a street railway in any city or town may, for the purpose of extending its railway beyond the limits thereof, locate, build and operate, by animal or other power, its road over and along any portion of the public road which is one hundred feet or more wide. It shall as soon as practicable put the road in as good repair as it was before its use for such railway. Boards of supervisors are authorized to accept for road purposes conveyances of land adjoining any such road or part thereof sufficient to increase the same to the width of one hundred feet; but in any county in which such company desires to operate its line of railway over a road not less than sixty feet in width, for a distance not over two miles beyond the limits of a city or town to any state institution, the board of supervisors may grant the right to it to operate its line over said road, not exceeding two miles, under such rules and regulations as said board may prescribe. The board shall have the power to rescind or modify such grant, rules and regulations at any time. [18 G. A., ch. 32, § 1.]

SEC. 2027. Damages to abutting owners. Unless the owners of the land abutting each side of said road shall consent to such use, the railway company shall pay all damages sustained by the land owners caused by building said road, which shall be ascertained and paid in the same manner as is provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement, and it shall also be liable for all damages resulting from the carelessness of its officers, agents or servants in the construction or operation of its railway. [24 G. A., ch. 22; 23 G. A., ch. 21; 18 G. A., ch. 32.]

The last provision of this section would be unnecessary if § 2071 were to be construed as applicable to street railways, but that section and other sections of the same chapter were evidently enacted without having in contemplation their application to street railways: Manhattan Trust Co. v. Sioux City Cable R. Co., 68 Fed., 82.

SEC. 2028. Ways to lands which have none. Any person, corporation or copartnership owning or leasing any land not having a public or private way thereto, may have a public way to any railway station, street or highway established over the land of another, not exceeding forty feet in width, to be located on a division line or immediately adjacent thereto, and not interfering with buildings, orchards, gardens or cemeteries; and when the same shall be constructed it shall, when passing through inclosed lands, be fenced on both sides by the person or corporation causing it to be established. [25 G. A., ch. 18; 15 G. A., ch. 34, § 1.]

No authority is given by this act to construct a private way. The way, when condemned, is to be a public one, and the act is therefore not invalid: Jones v. Mahaska, etc., Coal Co., 47–35.

A road or way established under the provisions of this statute is a public way, in the sense that the public may use and enjoy it in the manner in which roads and highways are ordinarily used by it, and the mine owner who procured it to be established must use the special privilege which the act confers on him in such a way as not to destroy this right of the public or prevent its enjoyment, and the statute is therefore constitutional. Nor can the construction of the railway in accordance with these provisions be enjoined on the ground that it prevents the owner of the land from constructing a railway thereon for his own use: Phillips v. Watson, 63–28.

11 G. A., ch. 127, which provided for the establishment of private ways was held unconstitutional; but, held, arguendo, that to afford an outlet to a citizen or acess to mineral wealth, a public way might properly be established: Bankhead v. Brown, 25–540.

SEC. 2029. Proceedings to condemn. If the owner of any real estate necessary to be taken refuses to grant the right of way, or if he and the person, partnership or corporation asking its establishment cannot agree upon the compensation to be paid therefor, the sheriff of the county in which said real estate is situated shall, upon the application of either party, appoint six freeholders of the county, not interested in the same or a like question, who shall assess the damage which said owner will sustain, and make report thereof in writing to the sheriff, and, if the applicant for such way shall, before entering upon said real estate for the purpose of constructing such way, pay to the sheriff for the use of the owner the sum assessed, said road may be at once constructed and maintained. [15 G. A., ch. 34, § 2.]

SEC. 2030. Provisions applicable. The application to the sheriff, and all other proceedings relating thereto, the result of non-user, and the rights and duties as to other roads, shall be the same as provided in this chapter in relation to the taking of private property for the right of way of railroads, the effect of non-user or abandonment of such rights of way and road-beds, and in the chapter or chapters of this code relating to roads, except that the report of the commissioner and the record thereof shall confer no title upon the applicant for the land so taken, but shall be presumptive evidence of the establishment of such way. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 2031. Railway established. Any owner, lessee or possessor of lands having coal, stone, lead or other mineral thereon, who has paid the damages assessed for roads established as above provided, may construct, use and maintain a railway thereon, for the purpose of reaching and operating any quarry or mine on such land and of transporting the products thereof to market. In giving the notices required in such cases, the applicant shall state whether a railway is to be constructed and maintained on the way sought to be established, and, if it be so stated, the jury shall consider that fact in the assessment of damages. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 2032. Rights of riparian owners. All owners and lessees of lands or lots situated upon the Iowa banks of the Mississippi or Missouri rivers, upon which any business is carried on which is in any way connected with the navigation of either of said rivers, or to which such navigation is a proper or convenient adjunct, are authorized to construct and maintain, in front of their property, piers, cribs, booms and other proper and convenient erections and devices for the use of their respective pursuits, and the protection and harbor of rafts, logs, floats and other water crafts, in such manner as to create no material or unreasonable obstruction to the navigation of the stream, or to a similar use of adjoining property. [15 G. A., ch. 35, § 1.]

SEC. 2033. Construction of railroad. No person or corporation shall construct or operate any railroad or other obstruction between such lots or lands and either of said rivers, or upon the shore or margin thereof, unless the injury and damages to owners or lessees occasioned thereby shall be first ascertained and compensated in the manner provided in this chapter for taking private property for works of internal improvement. [Same, § 2.]

Whether the preceding section is in conflict with act of congress (U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5254), relating to the construction of cribs, piers, etc., on the Mississippi river, quære. But even if it is, this section is not thereby rendered void. If a riparian owner is engaged in business connected with the navigation of the river it is not essential to his right to recover under this section that he should have erected a crib or pier in front of his property. The rule recognized in Tomlin v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 32-106, is no longer applicable, Revision, § 1328, being now repealed: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49-664: S. C. 102 U. S., 108.

CHAPTER 5.

OF THE CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF RAILWAYS.

SECTION 2034. Change of name. Any corporation organized under the laws of this state for the purpose of constructing and operating a railway may, with the consent of two-thirds of all the stockholders in interest, change the corporate name thereof, but no such change shall be complete until the president and secretary shall file in the office of the secretary of state a statement under oath showing the consent of the stockholders thereto and the new name adopted, with a certified copy of the proceedings in relation thereto as appears in the records thereof, and from that time the corporation by its new name shall be entitled to all the rights, powers and franchises that it possessed under the old one, and by such new name shall be liable upon all contracts and obligations entered into by or binding upon such corporation under the old name to the same extent and in the same manner as if no change had been made. [C.'73, § 1273.]

SEC. 2035. Record. The secretary of state shall immediately record in the proper book in his office matter filed under the preceding section, making references to the record of the articles of incorporation. [C.'73, § 1274.]

SEC. 2036. May join or consolidate. Any such corporation may join, intersect and unite its railway with that of any other corporation at such point upon the boundary line of this state as may be agreed upon, and, with the consent of three-fourths in interest of all the stockholders, by purchase, sale or otherwise, may merge and consolidate the stock, property, franchises and liabilities of such corporations, making the same one corporation, upon such terms as may be agreed upon, not in conflict with law. [C.'73, § 1275; R., § 1332.]

A railroad corporation organized under the general law may, after constructing a line, sell the property and continue the object of its incorporation by the construction of a new line: Mahaska County R. Co. v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 28-437.

Where the articles of incorporation of the company provided for the sale of the property with the limitation that "no sale shall be valid until all debts of the company shall be paid or arranged for," held, that the indebtedness being a very inconsiderable sum, if anything, and the purchaser having inquired if there were any debts, and being always ready to pay any that might be established, a sale under such circumstances was valid: Ibid.

Where a railway company through its directors sold its property to another company and the directors and stockholders of the former stood by with knowledge of all the facts and saw the latter company make large expenditures on the property, held, that they were estopped from seeking a recovery of the property because of an irregularity in the sale: Ibid.

A company buying in the franchise of property of a railroad at a foreclosure sale does not become privy to any agreement on the part of the original company except so far as it may be incorporated into the deeds of conveyance under which the title is held: Close v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 64–149.

Where two railroad companies were consolidated under the arrangement that stock in the new company should be issued to stockholders in the old companies, and the new company should acquire the property of the old, held, that a stockholder in one of the old companies did not, by such transfer of property, acquire a vendor's lien thereon: Cross v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 58–62.

The purchaser of a railway at foreclosure sale acquires no better rights than the company whose franchise it purchases, and where the predecessor had occupied the streets of a city by its track without having paid damages assessed to an abutting property owner, and such property owner had recovered judgment for damages, held, that he might maintain an action against the successor to enjoin it from the use of the streets until payment of such judgment: Harbach v. Des Moines & K. C. R. Co., 80–593.

The fact that the previous company was allowed to occupy the street by the property owner without payment of damages would be a favor to it only and not a right passing to its successor by a foreclosure sale: Ibid.

SEC. 2037. Connections. Any such corporation which has constructed or may construct its railway so as to meet or connect with another railway in an adjoining state at the boundary line of this state, may make such contracts and agreements therewith for the transportation of freight and passengers, or the use of its railway, as the board of directors may see proper, and not inconsistent with law. [C.'73, § 1276; R., § 1334.]

SEC. 2038. Extension. Any such corporation organized for the purpose of constructing a railway from a point within the state may construct or extend the same into or through any other state, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the laws of such state, and its rights and privileges over said extension in the construction and use thereof, and in controlling and applying the assets, shall be the same as if its railway was constructed wholly within the state. [C. '73, § 1277; R., § 1333.]

SEC. 2039. Duties and liabilities of lessees. All the duties and liabilities imposed by law upon corporations owning or operating railways shall apply to all lessees or other persons owning or operating such railways as fully as if they were expressly named herein, and any action which might be brought or penalty enforced against any such corporation by virtue of any provisions of law may be brought or enforced against such lessees or other persons. [C. '73, § 1278.]

The obligation to fence (under § 2055) rests upon the lessee as much as upon the lessor, and the lessee is liable to damages done by its train, although as between it and the lessor the duty of fencing rests upon the latter: Clary v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 37–344.

Where the owner and a lessee each runs trains over the road, each is liable only for stock injured by its own trains by reason of the failure to fence: Stephens v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 36–327.

The remedy given against the lessees by statute is merely cumulative, and the right of action for negligence causing the injury of a passenger exists as against the company in whose name the road is being operated, although it may, in fact, have been leased to and be under the control of a lessee: Bower v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 42–546.

Prior to express statutory provision, held, that the statute imposing a liability for injuries to stock where the right of way is not fenced was applicable to a lessee: Liddle v. Keokuk, Mt. P. & M. R. Co., 23–378.

But further, held, under the same statutory provision, that where the lessee had the exclusive right to run, operate and control the road, and had built and maintained fences along the road, and had the same power to protect itself that the lessor would have, it was liable for injury to stock to the same extent as though it were owner of the road: Stewart v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 27–282.

The company whose engines set out fire are liable for damages from the fire thus set out, although the line is owned and operated by another company and fire starts on the right of way by reason of combustible material allowed to accumulate thereon by such other company: Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60–215.

Where a railway company incorporated under the laws of Iowa leases its road to a foreign corporation, the lessor is a necessary party to an action for breach by the lessee of a contract entered into originally with the lessor. The statutory provision as to the liability of a lessee does not discharge lessor from liability, but in effect makes both the lessor and the lessee jointly liable: Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Crane, 113 U. S., 424.

A lessee of a railroad can exercise no right that its lessor could not, and if the lessor was subject to injunction against operating its road at the suit of the land owner whose property had been taken without compensation, the lessee is subject to the same restriction: Hibbs v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 39–340.

The company owning a railroad, and in whose name it is being operated, is liable in an action for personal injuries received thereon, although the road is leased to and operated by a lessee: Bower v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 42–546.

Where a railroad was leased to defendant under a contract by which he was to manage the same and apply the profits, after paying operating expenses, to the payment of certain advances made by him, etc., held, that he was a trustee and was not individually liable as lessee for operating expenses: United States Rolling Stock Co. v. Potter, 48–56.

The receiver of a railroad, and not the company, is liable for injuries to stock, under the provisions of § 2055: Brockert v. Central Iowa R. Co., 82–369; Schurr v. Omaha & St. L. R. Co., 67 N. W., 280.

A receiver operating a railway under direction of the court is liable to judgment for personal injuries received by an employe from the negligence of other employes engaged in the operation of the road, under the statutory provision on such subject: Sloan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 62–728.

For similar provisions, see § 2066.

SEC. 2040. Offices. The offices of secretary and treasurer or assistant treasurer and general superintendent of railway corporations organized under the laws of the state shall be where its principal place of business is or is to be, in which the original record, stock and transfer books and all the original papers and vouchers thereof shall be kept. Such treasurer or assistant treasurer shall keep a record of the financial condition of the corporation, which shall be open to inspection by any stockholder, or any committee appointed by the general assembly, at all reasonable times. It may keep a transfer office in any other state, with a duplicate transfer book, but no transfer of shares of stock shall be legal or binding until the same is entered in the one kept in the state. The secretary and treasurer or assistant treasurer and general superintendent shall reside in this state. [C. '73, § 1279.]

It is the absolute right of any person under this section to examine the stock and transfer books of a company, whether he shows himself interested therein or not and especially has a stockholder the right at all reasonable hours to inspect the records showing the financial condition of the corporation. Perhaps he has not the right to examine the original papers and vouchers, but as to the original record, stock, and transfer books and the record of the financial condition of the company the right is unquestionable, unless it clearly appears that the purpose of asking such examination is to perplex, annoy, or harass the officers of the company having the records in charge. The stockholder may have the assistance of his attorney and the clerk of such attorney in making examination of such records: Ellsworth v. Dorwart, 63 N. W., 588.

SEC. 2041. Bonds—mortgages. Any such corporation may issue its bonds for the construction and equipment of its railway in sums of not less than fifty dollars, payable to bearer or otherwise, with interest not exceeding eight per cent. per annum, and making them convertible into stock, and sell the same at such prices as is thought proper. If such bonds are sold below par they shall, nevertheless, be valid, and no plea of usury shall be allowed in any action or proceeding brought to enforce the collection thereof. Such corporation may also secure the payment of the bonds by mortgages or deeds of trust upon the whole or any part of its property and franchises. [C.'73, § 1283; R., § 1339.]

SEC. 2042. After-acquired property. Such mortgages or deeds of trust may by their terms include and cover not only the property of the corporation making them, owned at the time of their date, but all property real and personal which may thereafter be acquired, and they shall be as valid and effectual for that purpose as if the property was in possession at the time of their execution. [C. '73, § 1284; R., § 1340.]

SEC. 2043. Execution of mortgages. They shall be executed in the manner the articles of incorporation or the by-laws of the corporation may provide, and be recorded in each county through which the railway of the company may be located, or in which any property mortgaged or conveyed may be situated, and when recorded shall be constructive notice of the rights of all parties thereunder, and for this purpose the rolling stock and personal property of the company belonging to the road shall be deemed a part thereof, and such mortgages and deeds so recorded shall protect the lien of the mortgagee or grantee upon the personal property to the same extent that it does upon real estate thus mortgaged or conveyed. [C. '73, § 1285; R., § 1341.]

The rolling stock of a railroad is not personal property in such sense as to be subject to a landlord's lien under a lease of terminal facilities used by such railroad: Trust Co. v. Manhattan Trust Co., 77 Fed., 82.

Whether the rolling stock of a railroad is subject to a landlord's lien in favor of the owner of terminal facilities which are leased to the company owning the rolling stock, quære: Manhattan Trust Co. v. Sioux City & N. R. Co., 68 Fed., 72.

SEC. 2044. Preferred stock. Any such corporation, with the consent of the holders of two-thirds of all its stock, having no funds with which to pay the interest on its bonded debt or the principal thereof, or of other debts, may issue preferred stock equal to its bonded debt and ten thousand dollars per mile upon its completed road, and exchange the same for its bonds at par, and pay its other debts therewith at par, and such stock shall be entitled to such annual dividends as the directors may determine, not exceeding eight per cent., payable from the net profits of the business of the road each year; but the earnings of any one year shall not be used in whole or in part to pay dividends on any past or future year, nor shall the dividends be paid thereon until all the interest on its interest bearing indebtedness not represented by such stock shall have been paid. The dividends at the rate determined by the directors shall be paid on such stock before any can be paid on the common stock. [15 G. A., ch. 20; C. '73, § 1286.]

SEC. 2045. Conversion into common stock. Such preferred stock and any income or mortgage bond of the corporation shall, at the option of the holder, be convertible into common stock on such terms as the board of directors may prescribe, but the aggregate amount of the common and preferred stock shall not exceed the total amount of stock which the corporation may be authorized by law, or the articles of incorporation, to issue. [C.'73, § 1287.]

SEC. 2046. Selection of directors by bondholders. Any railway corporation organized under any law of the state, including consolidated corporations created pursuant to the laws of this and any adjoining state, may in such manner, under such regulations, and to such an extent as may be prescribed by its board of directors, and consented to by at least two-thirds of the capital stock then outstanding, confer upon the holders of its bonds or other evidences of indebtedness, or upon the holders of any particular class of such bonds or evidences of indebtedness, the right to vote for directors thereof, one or more of whom may be chosen from among such bondholders. [25 G. A., ch. 23.]

SEC. 2047. Corporation may own stock. Any railway corporation organized under the law of the state, or operating a road therein under the authority of the laws thereof, may acquire, own and hold either the whole or any part of the stock, bonds or other securities of any other railroad company of this or any adjoining state. [25 G. A., ch. 24.]

SEC. 2048. Foreign railway companies—privileges. Any railway corporation organized or created by or under the laws of any other state, owning and operating a line or lines of railroad in such state, may build its road or branches into this state, and shall possess all the powers and privileges, and be subject to the same liabilities, as like corporations organized and incorporated under the laws of this state, if it shall file with the secretary of state a copy of its articles of incorporation, if incorporated under a general law of such state, or a certified copy of the statute incorporating it where the charter thereof was granted by statute. [18 G. A., ch. 128.]

A foreign railroad company doing business in Iowa may be sued in the federal courts in Iowa as a foreign corporation, service of process being made upon an agent of the company: Dinzy v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 61 Fed., 49.

A railway company complying with these requirements is not entitled to personal service of notice in a proceeding to locate a highway over its land where its ownership thereof does not appear by the transfer books. It is no better position than a domestic railway company in this respect: State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 80–589.

SEC. 2049. Bonds secured by mortgage. Any railway corporation organized under the laws of the state may mortgage its property and franchises, in whole or in part, to secure bonds issued by it to pay or refund its indebtedness, to improve or develop its property, or for the purpose of effecting the object of its incorporation, to be issued in such amounts, run for such length of time, be payable within or without this state, and bear such rate of interest, not to exceed the legal rate in the state at the time of issue, as the company issuing the same shall determine. [25 G. A., ch. 26, § 1.]

SEC. 2050. Mortgage to secure bonds of lessee. Any railway corporation organized under the laws of the state may mortgage its property and franchises, in whole or in part, to secure bonds issued by any other railway corporation of this or any other state, which, at the time, is operating the road of such mortgagor under lease thereof, such bonds to be issued to refund or to secure the means to pay the indebtedness of such lessor, or improve or develop its property, for the purpose of effecting the object of its incorporation. Such bonds may be issued in such amounts, run for such length of time, be made payable within or without the state, and bear such rate of interest, not exceeding the legal rate in this state at the time they are issued, as may be determined by and be acceptable to such lessee. The lessee may secure the bonds issued by it for any of the purposes aforesaid by a mortgage of its leasehold interest in the property and franchises of the lessor. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2051. Conditional sale or lease of equipment or rolling stock. In any contract for the sale of railroad or street railway equipment or rolling stock it may be agreed that the title thereto, although possession thereof be delivered immediately or at any time or times subsequently, shall not vest in the purchaser until the purchase price shall be fully paid, or that the seller shall have and retain a lien thereon for the unpaid purchase money. In any contract for the leasing or hiring of such property, it may be stipulated for a conditional sale thereof at the termination of such contract, and that the rentals or amounts to be received under such contract may, as paid, be applied and treated as purchase money, and that the title to the property shall not vest in the lessee or bailee until the purchase price shall have been paid in full, and until the terms of the contract shall have been fully performed, notwithstanding delivery to and possession by such lessee or bailee; but no such contract shall be valid as against any subsequent judgment creditor, or subsequent bona fide purchaser for value without notice, unless:

1. The same shall be evidenced by an instrument executed by the parties and acknowledged by the vendee, or lessee, or bailee, as the case may be, in the same manner as deeds are acknowledged or proved;
2. Such instrument shall be filed for record in the office of the secretary of state;
3. Each locomotive engine or car sold, leased or hired as aforesaid shall have the name of the vendor, lessor or bailor plainly marked on each side thereof, followed by the word "owner," "lessor" or "bailor," as the case may be. [25 G. A., ch. 28, § 1.]

SEC. 2052. Recording. The contracts herein authorized shall be recorded by the secretary of state in a book of records to be kept for that purpose, and, on payment in full of the purchase money and the performance of the terms and conditions stipulated in any such contract, a declaration in writing to that effect may be made by the vendor, lessor or bailor, or his or its assignee, which declaration may be made on the margin of the record of the contract, duly attested, or it may be made by a separate instrument, to be acknowledged by the vendor, lessor or bailor, or his or its assignee, and recorded as aforesaid. For such services the secretary of state shall be entitled to a fee of one dollar for recording each of the contracts and each of said declarations, and a fee of one dollar for noting such declaration on the margin of the record. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2053. Prior contracts. The two preceding sections shall not be held to invalidate or affect in any way any contract of the kind referred to in the last preceding section but one, made prior to April 24, 1894, and any such contract made before said date may, upon compliance with these provisions, be recorded as herein provided. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 2054. Cattle-guards—crossings—signs. Every corporation constructing or operating a railway shall make proper cattle-guards where the same enters or leaves any improved or fenced land, and construct at all points where such railway crosses any public road good, sufficient and safe crossings and cattle-guards, and erect at such points, at a sufficient elevation from such road as to admit of free passage of vehicles of every kind, a sign with large and distinct letters placed thereon, to give notice of the proximity of the railway, and warn persons of the necessity of looking out for trains. Any railway company neglecting or refusing to comply with the provisions of this section shall be liable for all damages sustained by reason of such refusal or neglect, and it shall only be necessary, in order to recover, for the injured party to prove such neglect or refusal. [C.'73, § 1288; R., § 1331.]

Cattle-guards: This section makes it necessary that cattle-guards be constructed not only where the track goes through outside fences but also at division fences: Smith v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 38–518.

Where the track passes through the lands of two owners fenced in common, and subsequently a division fence is constructed, it is the duty of the company upon notice to put in a cattle-guard, and it will be liable for the value of crops destroyed by reason of the failure to do so: Donald v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 44-157.

Where a railroad is constructed across unimproved or uninclosed land, and the land is afterwards improved or inclosed, the railway company is under obligation to construct cattle-guards just as it would have been under obligation to do if the land had been inclosed at the time the road was constructed: Heskett v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 61-467.

Whether notice of the company to construct cattle-guards is necessary after the land has been thus inclosed, quære; but, if necessary, the service of notice upon the station agent is sufficient: Ibid.

This provision as to cattle-guards applies to cases where the corporation fences its right of way. When it does so there is fenced land, and, upon entering or leaving, the law requires a cattle-guard: Robinson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 67-292.

The statute is imperative, and the court will not engraft an exception upon it relieving a company from obligation to put in a cattle-guard on the ground that it is not fit, proper and suitable to do so in a particular case: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57-718.

Where it appeared that plaintiff's horses were put temporarily in a field, from which they escaped through a defective fence, and were injured by reason, as alleged, of an insufficient cattle-guard, in a county where cattle were not allowed to run at large, held, that the facts did not necessarily show contributory negligence defeating plaintiff's right to recover: Timins v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 72-94.

There is nothing in this section requiring a company to make cattle-guards at a private crossing: Bartlet v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-188. (But see § 2022.)

A railroad company is required to use ordinary care and diligence to keep the cattle-guards on its track free from snow and ice, after it has notice, or could have acquired notice in the exercise of ordinary care, that they are obstructed thereby: Grahlman v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 78-564; Robinson v. Chicago, C. I. & P. R Co., 79-495; Giger v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 80-492.

Method of construction: The term cattle-guard as used in the statute imports a guard or protection extending the whole width of the right of way. The owner is under no obligation to construct a fence up to the track upon the right of way: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57-718: Heskett v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 61-467.

The fact that an animal passes over the cattle-guard is not of itself evidence of improper construction or insufficiency: Barnhart v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 66 N. W., 902.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that there was no negligence shown in the construction of a cattle-guard of ties laid on stringers over a pit, although such cattle-guards may be no longer in general use: Strong v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 63 N. W., 699.

The duty of connecting a cattle-guard with the right of way fence devolves upon the company, and is implied in the duty to construct the guard itself: Miller v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66-546.

Where the right of way and public highway intersect obliquely, the company should fence to the point where the highway crosses the track, and construct the cattle-guard there, and not at the point where the highway intersects the right of way: Andre v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-107.

As to liability of company for defect in cattle-guard causing injury to employe, see Ford v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 71 N. W., 332.

Further as to cattle-guards, see notes to § 2022.

Crossings: Where a railway impinged upon a highway some twenty rods from the place where it finally crossed it, held, that all the intervening highway was not to be deemed a part of the crossing, within the meaning of this section: Beatty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 58-242.

It is the duty of the company to repair the crossings and keep them in a safe condition: Farley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 42-234.

The embankment constructed as a necessary approach to the crossing is a part of the crossing, and the company is required to keep it in repair: Ibid.

These provisions have reference to grade crossings and do not require the company to construct a viaduct where a highway crosses its track: Albia v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 71 N. W., 541.

Purchasers of a road at judicial sale take subject to any oral obligations to maintain crossings, etc., made by the former company in connection with the acquisition of the right of way: Swan v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 72-650.

Negligence: Where plaintiff's cow was injured by a wild-train at a highway crossing, held, that it was a question for the jury whether it was negligence in the plaintiff to allow his cow to be at such crossing at the time when no regular train was due: Courson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 71-28.

While the language of this section seems to preclude proof of contributory negligence as a defense in an action to recover for personal injuries at a defective highway crossing (that is, negligence of plaintiff contributing, with that of defendant, to cause the injury), it does not preclude defendant from showing that the injury was due to plaintiff's fault and not to the defective condition of the crossing: McKelvy v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 84-455.

Contributory negligence is a defense in an action brought for injuries at a crossing where the company has been guilty of neglect in maintaining a safe crossing, or in operating its trains: Reeves v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 92-32.

In an action for an injury received by reason of a defective crossing defendant has the right to show negligence of the injured party as a defense to the action: McKelvy v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 58 N.W., 1068.

Perhaps the degree of care required of one in attempting to cross a street railway track is not the same as that required in crossing steam railways and what would amount to negligence in the latter case might not be so regarded in the former. In the former case the question is peculiarly one of fact for the jury: Orr v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co., 62 N. W., 851.

Evidence in a particular case, held sufficient to sustain a verdict against a railroad company for injury to a horse at a cattle-guard: Meade v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 45-699.

Evidence in a particular case that the crossing was so constructed as to permit the hoof of a horse to catch between the rail and the plank, held, sufficient to support a verdict for damages for the death of a horse killed at such crossing: Criss v. Chicago N. W. R. Co., 88-741.

Where the sufficiency of a cattle-guard was in question, held, that the fact that a similar guard situated on other premises was sufficient to, and did, keep out stock, was not material or relevant: Downing v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-96.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held, that it was for the jury to say whether or not the cattle-guard was reasonably sufficient for the purpose for which it was constructed: Timins v. Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co., 72-94.

Measure of damages: As the owner of the land has no legal right to construct cattle-guards across the track, he is not bound to do so in order to protect himself from damages for want thereof, but may recover whatever damages he may sustain by reason of his land being left open and unfenced: Raridon v. Central Iowa C. Co., 65-640; Downing v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-96.

To make out a prima facie case against the railway under this section for an animal killed at a crossing, it must appear that the animal was killed at such crossing and not at a place where the company had the right to fence, and unless such fact is shown the company is not liable, even if it should appear that the crossing is defective: Croddy v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 91-598.

The fact that stock has previously been killed at the same crossing prior to the accident in question, is not admissible: Ibid.

Measure of damages for failure to erect a cattle-guard at a partition fence between two fields, one of which might have been used for pasture, held to be the difference between the value of the pasture in the condition in which the inclosure was left by the company and what the value would have been if the cattle-guards had been maintained: Raridan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-527.

Where the land owner seeks to recover the entire value of a crop which he alleges to have been totally lost by reason of the failure of the company to construct cattle-guards, the question of how much less value the crop is by reason of such failure is a question of proof. The fact that a claim is made for the entire loss will not prevent the owner from recovering whatever loss is suffered: Raridon v. Central Iowa R. Co., 65-640.

The measure of damage for crops destroyed by reason of failure to put in a cattle-guard where a partition fence is erected subsequently to the completion of the road is the value of the crop destroyed by reason of such failure; Donald v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 44-157.

Double damages: A cattle-guard is not to be deemed a part of the fence required by other statutory provisions, and the company is not liable in double damages for failure to construct such cattle-guard as it is in case of failure to construct a fence: Moriarity v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-696; Rhines v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 75-597.

Contract: A company required to maintain and construct proper cattle-guards cannot, by contract with another company whose road it purchases, relieve itself from the right or obligation to do so: Downing v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-96.

Signs: This section only renders the company liable for damages sustained by reason of the failure to erect such signs: Lang v. Holiday Creek R. etc., Co., 49-469.

The failure to erect a sign renders the company absolutely liable in a case wherein it is shown that a person was injured at a crossing. Evidence of the injury and of the company's neglect to erect the sign establishes its liability, and it is not necessary for plaintiff to show his own care. (As the case arose, however, under a previous statute, this point was not involved): Payne v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 44-236.

Under a previous statute which did not contain the provision that proof of the neglect to erect a sign should be sufficient to entitle the injured party to recover for injuries received at such crossing, held, that proof of failure to erect a sign established negligence on the part of the company, but did not relieve plaintiff of the necessity of showing that his own negligence did not contribute to the injury: Dodge v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 34-276; Correll v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 38-120; Payne v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 39-523; S. C., 44-236.

SEC. 2055. Failure to fence—liability for stock killed—speed at depots. Any corporation operating a railway, and failing to fence the same against live stock running at large and maintain proper and sufficient cattle-guards at all points where the right to fence or maintain cattle-guards exists, shall be liable to the owner of any stock killed or injured by reason of the want of such fence or cattle-guards for the full amount of the damages sustained by the owner on account thereof, unless it was occasioned by his wilful act or that of his agent; and to recover the same it shall only be necessary for him to prove the loss of or injury to his property. If such corporation fails or neglects to pay such damages within thirty days after notice in writing that a loss or injury has occurred, accompanied by an affidavit thereof, served upon any officer or station or ticket agent employed by said corporation in the county where such loss or injury occurred, such owner shall be entitled to recover from the corporation double the amount of damages actually sustained by him. No law of the state or any local or police regulations of any county, township, city or town, relating to the restraint of domestic animals, or in relation to the fences of farmers or land owners, shall be applicable to railway tracks, unless specifically so stated in such law and regulation. Upon depot grounds necessarily used by the public and the corporation, the operating of trains at a greater rate of speed than eight miles an hour where no fence is built shall be negligence, and shall render such corporation liable for all damages occasioned thereby, in the same manner and to the same extent, except as to double damages, as in cases where the right to fence exists. [C. '73, § 1289.]

Failure to fence: This section makes the fact of the injury or destruction of stock on the railway track prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the corporation, and the burden of proof is upon the defendant to establish the building of a good and sufficient fence: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-530.

In order to render the company liable for injury to stock, negligence must be shown, but it is sufficient to make out a prima facie case to show the injury and that it occurred by reason of the omission to fence. Thereupon the burden is upon the company to show freedom from negligence in the matter of a fence: Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 50-338.

It is error to instruct the jury with reference to negligence of the agents or employes of a railroad company when the question is simply as to whether the stock was killed by reason of the failure to fence: Wall v. Des Moines & N. W. R. Co., 89-193.

The statute is not designed to dispense with all proofs on the part of the owner excepting as to injury or destruction of his property, and it is error to quote the language of the statute in such way as to give that impression to the jury: Ibid.

If a railroad company fails to fence its road it is absolutely liable for stock injured, in the absence of wilful act of the owner: Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co, 30-459.

Liability for injury under this section attaches where the want of a fence in connection with some act of the company is the proximate cause of the injury. If it is claimed that defendant is liable for negligence in so constructing a bridge as to render it dangerous for stock running at large, such negligence must be directly alleged: Asbach v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74-248.

Before the enactment of this statute it was held that to permit cattle to run at large did not impute negligence on the part of the owner, and that cattle would not be trespassers if found upon the unfenced track of a railway; that if the track was unfenced the company would be held to the use of ordinary care and diligence in running its trains to avoid injuring such stock, but if its track was fenced it would only be liable for injury resulting from gross or wilful negligence: Cussell v. Hanley, 20-219; Alger v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 10-268.

The railroad company is required to fence its track for the protection of "crazy" horses as well as for the protection of animals possessing good "horse sense." The fact that the animal is injured by reason of failure to leave the track through want of natural intelligence will not show that the injury did not result from want of a fence: Liston v. Central Iowa R. Co., 70-714.

This section does not require railway companies to fence their roads, but subjects them to certain liabilities if they fail to do so. Failure to fence cannot, therefore, be imputed to the company as negligence in a case where a child, playing on an unfenced track of a road, is run over by one of the company's trains: Walkenhauer v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 3 McCrary, 553.

A railway company does not owe to its employes the duty to fence its right of way, and employes are supposed to contract to operate the road in its unfenced condition so far as it is unfenced. Any additional exposure on that account must be presumed to have been taken into consideration upon entering into the employment: Patton v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73-306. (By §§ 2057-8 fencing is now obligatory).

Animals not struck by train: It may be said that an animal is injured by reason of the failure of the company to fence when the want of a fence in connection with the acts of the defendant is the proximate cause of the injury. Therefore, where a horse going upon a track where there was a failure of the company to fence, being frightened by a coming train, ran upon a bridge and was injured, there being no other practicable means of escape for the animal, held, that the company was liable: Young v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 44-172.

Circumstantial evidence in a particular case held, sufficient to show that an animal found dead on the right of way had been killed by being struck by defendant's train. Kennedy v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 90-754.

Under the circumstances of a particular case, held that although there was no direct evidence of the injury of the animal by the train, yet the jury were justified in finding that the death of the animal was caused in that manner: Anderson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61 N. W., 1058.

Liability of the company exists without regard to negligence. It is only the wilful act of the owner or his agent that will exempt the company from liability: Ibid.

It is for the jury to say whether or not in a particular case an animal injured upon the track without being struck by the train was injured by defendant's negligence: Kraus v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 55–338.

The fact that the train does not strike the animal does not relieve the company of liability for the injury: Liston v. Central Iowa R. Co., 70–714.

The absence of a collision of the train with the stock will not relieve the railway company from liability if the death of the animals results from the want of a fence: Van Slyke v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 80–620.

Under the evidence of a particular case, held, that it sufficiently appeared that the death of the animal was due to defendant's train: Ibid.

In an action to recover the value of a mare alleged to have been killed by defendant's train, where it appeared that the animal was found in a cattle-guard so injured that she afterwards died, held, that there was an absolute want of evidence to show that she was injured by the train in any way: Brockert v. Central Iowa R. Co., 75–529.

In an action to recover damages for the killing of an animal by defendant in the operation of its railroad, where the evidence for plaintiff was wholly circumstantial, while defendant's employes testified that no accident had occurred, held, that the jury were authorized in finding that the injury occurred by reason of contact with the train in some way: Cox v. Burlington & W. R. Co., 77–478.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that there was sufficient evidence of the fact that the animal in question had been killed in the operation of the railroad to support the verdict against the company: Brockert v. Central Iowa R. Co., 82–369.

Negligence: Plaintiff may ask recovery for stock killed, on the ground that the road was not fenced, pleading the facts entitling him to such recovery, and also on the ground of the negligent manner in which the train was operated, and he may then introduce evidence to sustain both or either of these causes of action: Scott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68–360.

Where it is claimed that stock was injured by reason of defective fence plaintiff may without proof of that fact recover the value of the stock killed if it is shown that the injury of the stock was due to negligence of the employes of the company operating the train: Baker v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 73–389.

The fact that cattle have previously been found at a crossing does not make it incumbent upon the railroad company to run its trains at such rate of speed as to subsequently avoid injury of stock at such crossing. An owner who allows his stock to frequent a crossing is responsible for recurring accidents at such place: Connyers v. Sioux City C. P. R. Co., 78–410.

Recovery under this section will not be defeated by mere negligence on the part of the owner of the stock, but the act must be one immediately connected with the injury: Moody v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 77–29.

Therefore, where plaintiff's cow, being at large, strayed upon defendant's unfenced railroad track, and defendant did all in its power to stop the train, but failed to do so, and when plaintiff knew that the animal had gone upon the track and had both the opportunity and power to prevent the injury, he wilfully neglected to do so, held, that his act was a "wilful act" connected with the injury, and he was not entitled to recover: Ibid.

The burden of proof is upon plaintiff to show that the injury occurred at a place where defendant had a right to fence and did not, and that it was caused by defendant's negligence: Comstock v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 32–376.

An agreement with the land owner by which he undertakes to erect and maintain a fence will not prevent liability on the part of the company to other persons for double damages for stock injured where such land owner has failed to fence or repair, even though the owner of the stock has placed them for pasture upon the landof the person agreeing to maintain the fence: Warren v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 41–484.

Negligence of land owner: Where a company is compelled to pay for injuries to animals of a third person which have got upon the track through a gate at a private crossing, wrongfully removed by the land owner for whom the gate was constructed, it may recover from such land owner the amount so paid: Chicago & N. W. R. Co., v. Dunn, 59–619.

The fact that there were two gaps in a railroad fence within four hundred feet of each other, made by the plaintiff in the prosecution of work connected with such railroad, held, not to preclude the owner from recovering damages for injuries to his stock by their escape upon the railroad track through a gap in the fence intermediate the two made by him and for which he was not responsible: Accola v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70–185.

The land owner may by his conduct release the railway company from liability for its failure to build and maintain a fence, and a tenant who has a right to occupy and use the land jointly with the owner, with knowledge of such facts, acquires no greater rights than the lessor himself: Manwell v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 80–662.

Sufficiency of fence: The fence contemplated is such as is reasonably sufficient to prevent live-stock from going on the railroad track. It is error to charge the jury that when fences are constructed along the right of way by the company they must, in order to relieve it from liability for injuries to stock, be such as to absolutely prevent stock from getting under, through or over the same: Shellabarger v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66–18.

The company is required to do no more than erect such fence as under ordinary circumstances will keep live-stock from its track, and it is not rendered liable by the fact that snow-drifts cover the fence so that it no longer restrains stock from passing over. It is not required to remove such drifts: Patten v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 75–459.

Where it appeared that the fence was in good condition in the evening and stock escaped through it during the night, held, that there was not negligence in failing to repair: Davidson v. Central Iowa R. Co., 75-22.

Where the land owner in the evening opened the wire fence along the right of way at a place which was not a crossing, in order to put his animals into a field, and during the night the animals escaped at the same place and some of them were killed, held, that the company was not liable, and if the fence was insufficient at that place by reason of the lowest wire being too high from the ground, plaintiff could not recover after having himself taken down the wire and replaced it in its original position: Ibid.

While there may be facts justifying the opening of the fence along the right of way at a place not a crossing, yet where plaintiff does not make the claim in his petition as a ground of negligence on the part of the company that the crossing is defective, he cannot afterwards show that there was a ditch in such crossing as a reason for taking down the fence: Ibid.

In a particular case, held, that it did not appear that the employes of a railway were negligent, after discovering animals which had come upon the track through the fence, in not avoiding injury to such animals: Ibid.

Where the claim was that stock escaped upon the track by reason of the gate at a private crossing being insufficient, as originally constructed, held, that no evidence of knowledge of the defective condition was necessary, as it would have been in the case of failure to repair: Morrison v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 84-663.

While it is not necessary that the railroad company fence all of its right of way yet where it leaves a portion unfenced and in such form as to prove a trap to animals outside of the fence it may be liable in damages for injury resulting therefrom: McCracken v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 91-711.

The fence must not only be sufficient to turn horses and cattle, but must be sufficient to turn swine, or the company will be liable for swine killed: Fritz v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 34-337.

The fence must be sufficient to turn live-stock of any kind in order to exonerate the company from liability for injuries to such live-stock. It is not sufficient that the fence be such as is described by statute as a lawful fence: Lee v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 66-131.

A bluff, a hedge, a trench, a wall, a trestle, or the like, may constitute a sufficient fence. The question whether the fence is sufficient is for the jury: Hilliard v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 37-442.

The fact that the fences and track are so constructed that stock having once entered upon the right of way cannot, when frightened and driven before the engine, find a safe place to leave the track will not render the company liable: Gilman v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 62-299.

The fact that the fastening of a gate in the fence is placed on the inside may be a proper matter to be considered by the jury in determining whether the fence is sufficient: Butler v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-206.

As to negligence of company with reference to gates at private crossings, see notes to § 2022.

Replacing fences destroyed: The allegation that the road is unfenced at the time of the accident is supported by proof of the removal or destruction of the fence before the accident: Fritz v. Kansas City, C. B. & St. J. R. Co., 61-323.

Where the fences were swept away by a flood, failure to rebuild them within two months after the road was repaired and operated, held sufficient to render the company liable: Ibid.

If a fence constructed by the company falls by reason of its insufficiency, it is immaterial that it was not down such length of time before the animal passed through that the company might, in the exercise of due diligence, have had knowlege thercof: Libby v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-323.

Where a railway was fenced only upon one side, and the animal injured was confined in a field inclosed in part by such fence, and escaped therefrom by reason of the fence being blown down by a storm, held, that the railroad not being fenced as required, the company was liable without regard to whether it was negligent in repairing the fence which was blown down, for the reason that the road was not properly fenced, and the animal after escaping from the inclosure was running at large: Tredway v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 43-527.

Failure to repair fences: While the company is liable for stock injured or killed on its track by reason of its failure to keep in repair the fences which it has erected on the line of its road, yet before such liability will attach the company must have knowledge, either express or implied, that the fence is out of repair, and a reasonable time after such notice to put it in repair: Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 30-459; Hilliard v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 37-442.

Knowledge that the fence is out of repair may be shown by the lapse of such time as to afford reasonable presumption thereof: Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 30-459; Davis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 40-292.

The company having constructed a sufficient fence is only liable for failure to exercise reasonable care and diligence in maintaining it: Lemmon v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 32-151.

It is error to instruct the jury that the company would be liable if it failed to erect and maintain a fence sufficient to keep cattle from its right of way, and the cattle were injured by reason of such failure. The jury must be allowed to consider whether the defect in the fence was occasioned by want of repair, and if so, whether the company had discovered that it was out of repair, or should have discovered it in the exercise of reasonable care, and had had a reasonable time afterward to make the repair: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-625.

Where the track has been properly fenced and the fence has been destroyed, the company is liable, in case of a failure to use reasonable and ordinary diligence and care in rebuilding it. Reasonable time must be allowed: McCormick v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 41-193.

Burden of proof: Liability of the company for injuries caused by bars being left down at private crossings exists, if at all, either in failing to put them up after acquiring knowledge that they are down, or neglect to use reasonable diligence in ascertaining such condition, and the burden of proving these facts is upon the plaintiff seeking to recover damages for such negligence: Perry v. Dubuque Southwestern R. Co., 36-102.

In case of an injury to stock by reason of a gate being open the burden is on plaintiff to show that the gate became open by defendant's fault. The fact that the gate was defectively constructed, unless it became open by reason of such construction, is not sufficient to entitle plaintiff to recover: Butler v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-206.

A railway is required to exercise due care to keep gates closed and obtain knowledge of their condition. If it fails to exercise such care and through its negligence remains ignorant of the fact that a gate is open, it will be chargeable with having knowledge of that fact which due care would have given it. It is the duty of the company in such cases to close a gate after gaining knowledge that it is open, whether left open by its own employes or others. The question whether it should have had knowledge is for the determination of the jury: Wait v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 74-207.

Further as to gates and bars at private crossings, see § 2022 and notes.

An instruction to the effect that defendant was not liable unless there was neglect in failing to repair the fence within a reasonable time after notice of the defective condition, held proper, as the jury must have understood therefrom that the burden of showing neglect rested upon the party seeking to recover: Dunn v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 58-674.

Where issue is taken upon the facts as to the place where the stock was killed or injured, and the right to fence at such place, and whether the stock was running at large, the burden is on the plaintiff to sustain the averments of his petition by proofs: Taylor v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 76-753.

But where defendant in an action for such damages admitted that six of the seven animals claimed to have been injured were killed by trains operated on its road, and added a general denial as to the facts not admitted, pleading a tender as to the animals killed, held, there was no issue except as to the injury of the seventh animal: Ibid.

Instructions in a particular case as to what the jury must find in order to return a verdict for plaintiff, held to sufficiently indicate the rule as to burden of proof: Scott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 78-199.

Evidence of the condition of the fence subsequent to the time of the injury is admissible only where it is shown that there had been no change in the condition: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-625.

Evidence of the condition of the fence at the time of the accident is admissible for the purpose of showing that the company was negligent in allowing it to get out of repair, and such evidence need not be confined to the particular portion of the fence through which the stock escaped: Lemmon v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 32-151.

Where damages are claimed by reason of the injured stock having escaped upon the right of way by reason of the fastening of a gate in the fence of the company being defective, evidence is admissible to show that other like fastenings have proved insufficient, and it is not competent for defendant to show that the fastening used was of the kind generally in use: Payne v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 72-214.

Facts in a particular case considered on the question whether the animals killed were struck on a crossing or on a portion of the track where the company had the right to fence: King v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 88-704; Daugherty v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 87-276.

Ownership of stock: In an action against a railway company for damages for stock killed by its train, the ownership of the stock is an issuable fact, and while possession might make out a prima facie case of ownership, yet there must be such proof of possession or other proof of ownership to entitle plaintiff to recover: Welch v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53-632.

The administrator of the estate is the owner of the animals belonging to the estate, within the meaning of this section: Morrison v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 84-663.

Proof of tender by the company made to plaintiff, held sufficient to show plaintiff's ownership: Scott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 78-199.

Stock running at large: The company is only liable for injuries to stock "running at large," and not when it is in charge of the owner and being driven by him at the time of the injury: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 34-96.

Where the driver of a team became so intoxicated that he had no control over the animals, and they wandered out of the road and upon a railway track, where it was not fenced as it should have been, held, that the animals were not running at large in such sense that the owner could recover double damages: Grove v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 75-163.

Where colts escaped from a pasture through a defective gate upon defendant's track, the gate having been carelessly and negligently constructed by defendant, in an unskillful manner and of unsound and unsafe material, held, that such colts were running at large within the provisions of this section: Morrison v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 84-663.

Stock which escapes from the inclosure of the owner upon the track of the company is "running at large:" Hinman v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 28-491.

And so, too, is stock which is in a field through which the railway passes and where the company has failed to fence: Swift v. North Missouri R. Co., 29-243.

The words "running at large" mean "not under control of the owner." A mule which had escaped from its owner, and which he was unable to catch, held, to be running at large: Hammond v. Chicago, & N. W. R. Co., 43–168.

Allegations in a petition that the animal injured escaped upon the railroad track, held to be in effect an allegation that he was running at large: Liston v. Central Iowa R. Co., 70–714.

A horse may be regarded as running at large where he has escaped from the control of his owner and cannot be caught by him. So held where the horse injured had on a bridle and an untied halter rope: Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53–632.

Where a person in charge of a herd of cattle left them temporarily, and before the person who was to succeed him in their care took possession of them one of them escaped from the herd and was very soon afterwards killed on defendant's railway track, not having been missed from the herd, held, that such animal was running at large within the meaning of this section: Valleau v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73–723.

A suckling colt may be considered as running at large within the provisions of the statute, although its mother is under the control of the owner: Smith v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 58–622.

A team of horses hitched to a wagon and which have escaped from the control of their owner are, within the terms of this statute, "live-stock running at large:" Inman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60–459.

It is error to instruct the jury that it is the duty of the company to build and maintain fences sufficient to keep cattle off the track under all ordinary circumstances, and that it is liable for all injury to cattle occasioned by its failure to perform that duty. The instructions should be qualified by limiting the liability to injuries caused to animals running at large: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68–530.

Proof of injury: When stock is killed at a place where the company has failed to fence, it will be presumed, prima facie, that the injury occurred "by reason of the want of such fence:" Spence v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 25–139.

The evidence in a particular case as to stock killed by a train, having been struck by the train going in a particular direction and carried upon a bridge, held sufficient to support a verdict for damages: Martin v. Central Iowa R. Co., 59–411.

In an action against the company for injury to stock, there being no direct evidence as to whether the injury was caused by defendant's train, the jury may consider the character of the injury for that purpose, but evidence that when animals are struck by moving trains there is always some indication left along the track of the collision is not proper: Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & N. R. Co., 55–455.

To entitle the stock owner to recover, he must do more than merely prove the injury or destruction to his property, but the statute enables him to make a prima facie case by proving fewer facts than would be necessary were it not for the statutory provision: Karr v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 87–298.

It is the duty of the plaintiff in an action for injury to stock to allege and prove prima facie the failure of the company on which reliance is placed for recovery. It is not sufficient to prove merely that the stock went upon the company's right of way and was there killed by a locomotive: Schmitt v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 68 N.W., 715.

Where from the evidence it appears that the gate through which the stock injured came upon the right of way was open and it does not appear that the gate was in any way defective, liability of the company is not shown: Koenigs v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65 N.W., 314; S. C. 67 N.W., 399.

Double damages; constitutionality: The provision as to double damages is constitutional. It is uniform in its operation as to all persons or companies pursuing a particular business: Jones v. Galena, & C. U. R. Co., 16–6; Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53–632.

The provision as to double damages is not unconstitutional as authorizing a person to be deprived of his property without due process of law or denying him the equal protection of the law: Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S., 26.

The provision for double damages being penal in its character will not be considered as applicable to any case not coming clearly within its provisions. Therefore, held, that double damages could not be recovered for injuries resulting from failure to construct and keep in repair a proper cattle-guard as required by the statute with reference to cattle-guards: Chines v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 75–597.

Nor does such provision deny to railway companies, or persons operating railways, equal protection of the laws: Tredway v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 43–527.

Where the owner of stock expends time and money in proper efforts to heal the injured animals he is entitled to recover double damages with reference to such injuries, as well as with reference to the loss in value: Manwell v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 80–662.

This provision does not conflict with the constitutional guaranties for the protection of property; Mackie v. Central Railroad of Iowa, 54–540.

Payment: Where the owner of stock killed and the agent of the railroad company agreed as to the amount of damages, and the agent gave to the owner a due-bill for that amount, which he said would be paid in a few days, and the due-bill remained unpaid, and no demand of payment thereof was made, held, that the owner could not maintain an action against the company for double damages, and in such action no recovery could be had on the due-bill: Shaw v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 82–199.

There is no obligation upon the person claiming damages for injuries to stock, who has served his notice upon the company, to remain in readiness for each of the thirty days elapsing after the giving of the notice to meet the agent of the company and negotiate a settlement of such loss. The fact that the agent of defendant calls at the residence of claimant to pay the amount of damage, and does not make such payment by reason of not finding him at home, does not excuse the defendant as against the claim for double damages: Hammans v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 83-287.

Not a penalty: The statute giving the owner double damages is not unconstitutional, as in conflict with the provision that all fines and penalties shall be paid into the school fund. Such damages are not a fine or penalty, and the legislature may determine the measure of damages to be recovered as in other particular cases: Ibid.

No part of the double damages is a statute penalty in such sense as to bring the action therefor within the provisions of the statute of limitations as to actions to recover such penalties. The period of limitation for such action is five years: Koons v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 23-493.

Not applicable in other cases: The provision for double damages being penal in its character will not be considered as applicable to any case not coming clearly within its provisions. Therefore, held, that double damages could not be recovered for injuries resulting from failure to construct and keep in repair a proper cattle-guard as required by the section with reference to cattle-guards; Moriarty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-696.

Neither can the provision be construed so as to authorize the recovery of double damages for injuries to stock on depot grounds where the company has no right to fence, caused by negligence in operating trains thereon: Miller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 59-707.

Double damages can be recovered only when stock has been injured or killed by reason of the want of a fence, and not when the injury results by reason of the company having fenced where it should not: Davis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 40-292.

For failure to repair: A railway company is liable in double damages for injuries caused by negligence in failing to keep a fence in repair as well as by reason of failure to fence: Bennett v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 61-355; Payne v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 72-214.

In a particular case, held, that there was negligence on the part of the railroad in not putting its fences in repair after the destruction thereof by a storm: Peet v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 88-520.

Interest: As this statutory provision establishes the measure of recovery in the cases contemplated, the court or jury cannot, in addition to the damages authorized, allow interest on the amount of recovery from the time of the accident, or from the time of the expiration of the thirty days allowed after notice in which to pay the damages: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-530.

Assignment: The right of the owner to recover double damages may be assigned, and the assignee may serve the notice and affidavit required to authorize such recovery: Everett v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73-442.

Laws of another state: An action for double damages may be maintained in the courts of this state for injury occurring in another state which has a statute authorizing the recovery of such double damages: Boyce v. Wabash R. Co., 63-70.

Tender: Where stock was killed and before suit tender was made and kept good of a sum less than the value of the stock as found by the jury on the trial, such tender being made as in full payment, held, that plaintiff was entitled to double damages in the full amount found by the jury, and that a tender to be sufficient must be of an amount large enough to discharge defendant's full liability: Brandt v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 26-114.

Where a gross sum is tendered by the railway company in payment of damages caused by injuries to two different animals of the same owner, but it does not make a separate tender as to each, and the jury find the aggregate damage to be greater than the amount tendered, such tender cannot be considered as sufficient for either: Shuck v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 73-333.

Notice and affidavit: The written notice required by statute to entitle the owner to recover double damages is only necessary when double damages are sought: Rodemacher v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 41-297.

The statute is silent as to the method of service, and such service may be made by reading the original and delivering a copy: Van Slyke v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 80-620.

The notice should advise the corporation of the loss of which complaint is made and of the demand of the person injured on account of it, and in an action in such a case to recover double damages plaintiff's recovery should be limited to double the amount named in the notice: Manwell v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 80-662.

The service of a notice in a particular case, held sufficient; and held, that there being no conflict as to the facts, the question of whether the service of notice was sufficient or not was for the court and not for the jury: Brockert v. Central Iowa R. Co., 82-369.

The affidavit required to entitle a party to double damages may be made by any one acquainted with the facts: Henderson v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 36-387.

It is not necessary that the affidavit designate the place of the injury: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57-718.

The notice and affidavit need not be separate. If the notice contains the statements necessary in the affidavit, and is sworn to, that is sufficient: Mendell v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 20-9.

It is only necessary that the notice be such as to inform the company of the injury. It need not be stated therein that the animals were running at large or were destroyed without the wilful act of the owner: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

The fact that the amount claimed in the notice is greater than the value of the animal as stated in the petition is not sufficient in itself to show bad faith. If defendant claims that plaintiff's demand was made in bad faith such fact should be pleaded and issue joined thereon, and the same submitted to the jury: Valleau v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73–723.

A notice addressed to the company by the initials of its name, the body of which however states the name of the company in full is sufficient: Anderson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61 N. W., 1058.

A return stating service of the notice upon a person named, "being the station agent of said road," etc., sufficiently shows service upon the station agent "employed in the management of the business of the corporation," as provided for by statute: Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53–632; Schlengener v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 61–235.

An amendment to an affidavit for the purpose of perfecting the jurat may be allowed, but the company will not become entitled to the thirty days after the amendment in which to pay the claim and escape double damages, where it is clear that there was a bona fide attempt on the part of the owner to bring himself within the provisions of the statute, and it was so understood by defendant: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57–718.

The original of the affidavit and notice of loss should be delivered to the agent upon whom service is made. The delivery of a copy is not sufficient: McNaught v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30–336; Campbell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 35–334.

The original of the affidavit must be served upon the company or its agent and a copy thereof introduced in evidence. The introduction in evidence of a paper similar to that served upon the company is not sufficient: Kyser v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 56–207.

The officer making service may, by oral testimony show that he served the original, although his return states the service of a copy: Liston v. Central Iowa R. Co., 70–714.

Service of the affidavit and notice should be made by delivering them to the agent of the company. It is not necessary to read them and deliver a copy: Mendell v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 20–9.

As the statute does not prescribe the manner of service, a service by simply delivering the notice and affidavit to the person upon whom service is to be made is sufficient: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68–530.

Service of the affidavit may be made by the claimant or any other person: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57–718.

Whether proof of service of notice and affidavit upon the company can be made by an ex parte affidavit, quære: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58–625.

The notice and affidavit will be admissible as proof of service if the return of the officer serving the same be regularly indorsed thereon: Brandt v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 26–114.

Evidence that a paper was read and given to the agent similar to that introduced in evidence is a sufficient proof of service of the notice of which the paper introduced is a copy: Keyser v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 56–440.

The original of notice and affidavit of loss which have been served upon defendant's agent are not evidence of such service in such sense that notice upon the defendant to produce them must be shown before other evidence thereof can be introduced to show double liability of the company: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58–625; Smith v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 58–622; McLenon v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 69–320.

Pleading: In an action before a justice of the peace for killing stock for which the company is liable in double damages, the notice and affidavit may be introduced in evidence though not mentioned in the pleadings, as no petition need be filed: Brandt v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 26–114.

On the trial of an action against the company to recover double damages, the fact that the notice required by statute was not attached to the petition must be raised by demurrer, if at all, and cannot be raised as an objection when the notice is offered in evidence: McKinley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47–76.

Where the case is tried on the theory that defendant was liable if its employes had failed to close a gate after it was left open by some unknown person, the sufficiency of such statement of the cause of action not having been raised by demurrer, cannot be afterward questioned: Foley v. Hamilton, 89–686.

While a railroad is not liable for stock killed by reason of its failure to properly fence where the stock is not running at large, yet where that fact is assumed and no objection on account of the failure to plead or prove it is taken, it will be deemed waived: Daugherty v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 87–276.

Question for jury: Although the sufficiency of the service of the notice is a question of law for the court, yet where the fact of service is in issue its determination may properly be left to the jury: Cole v. Chicago, & N. W. R. Co., 38–311.

Fencing at depot grounds: The company is not required to fence where it would not, in view of public convenience, be fit, proper or suitable for it to do so. Depot and station grounds may be left uninclosed when the business of the road and the interests of the public so require: Latty v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 38–250; Smith v. Chicago, R. I & P. R. Co., 34–506; Davis v. Burlington, & M. R. R. Co., 26–549; Rogers v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 26–558; Durand v. Chicago, & N. W. R. Co., 26–559.

Whether the public convenience and interest of the road require that grounds used in connection with the depot but not the ordinary place for receiving and delivering freight shall be left uninclosed is a question of fact properly submitted to the jury: Rhines v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 75–597.

In the absence of proof of want of ordinary care, a company is not liable for stock killed on depot grounds: Packard v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 30–474.

Where it appeared that stock was killed one and one-fourth miles from a station, held, that it might be presumed that the place at which it was killed was not within depot grounds in the absence of any evidence upon the question: Smith v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60–512.

The burden is upon the company to show that the place where stock is injured and where there is no fence is a portion of the station grounds. The fact that a switch is there maintained will not necessarily give it that character: Comstock v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 32–376.

Where the company has its depot grounds surveyed and definitely allotted, the survey or allotment and use constitute a very strong presumptive proof of their necessary boundaries: Cole v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 38–311.

The fixing of cattle-guards at long distances beyond the switches and failing to fence between such guards and the switches cannot be regarded as setting apart that part of the main line as station or depot grounds, unless it be necessary for the purpose of transaction of business with the public that such part of the line remain unfenced. It is no reason for not fencing beyond such switch that in the operation of trains it would be inconvenient and possibly more hazardous to couple and uncouple cars if the track beyond the switches was fenced and provided with a cattle-guard: Peyton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70–522.

Negligence at depot grounds: As between the owner of cattle and the company, the latter cannot be required to keep a watch or guard at depot grounds, any more than it can be required to fence the same: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 34–506.

Speed at depot grounds: By this section a railroad company is liable for all stock killed on depot grounds by trains when running at a rate of speed greater than eight miles per hour; but if the stock is killed at a place where the company has a right to fence, although nearly adjacent to the depot grounds, the provisions as to the rate of speed have no application, and it is not negligence in the company that its trains are running at a higher rate of speed, even at such rate that they must necessarily enter on the depot grounds running faster than eight miles an hour: Monahan v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 45–523.

The provision making the company liable for stock killed on depot grounds by trains running at a greater rate of speed than eight miles an hour applies only to cases where the stock is killed on such grounds: Ibid.

The fact that a train running at a higher rate of speed than is allowed at depot grounds runs into a team which is being driven across the track in such grounds will not render the company liable in double damages: Johnson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 75–157.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to show that the train of defendant causing injury to stock was running at the depot grounds at a greater rate of speed than eight miles per hour: Story v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 79–402.

If by excessive speed upon the station grounds animals are stampeded and run upon the track, and without checking the speed are run down and killed, the cause and effect are so closely connected that it may be said that the unlawful speed of the train is the proximate cause of the injury, although the animals are not actually killed or injured upon the depot grounds: Ibid.

If the train comes upon the depot grounds at a greater rate of speed than eight miles per hour, a verdict for damages for stock killed may be sustained, although at the time of the injury to the stock the train had nearly stopped. The jury might be authorized in such case to find that the train would have been stopped entirely if it had entered the grounds at a speed not exceeding the lawful rate: Miller v. Chicayo & N. W. R. Co., 59–707.

The provisions in this section with reference to speed at depot grounds have reference only to cases where there is injury in such depot grounds to animals running at large by reason of the running of trains at a greater speed than that specified and do not render the company liable for injuries to persons or animals not running at large by reason of the greater rate of speed where such rate is not in itself negligent. The regulation of speed at depot grounds for other purposes than with reference to animals running at large is for the city under § 769: Cohoon v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 90–169.

As to what rate of speed will be negligent aside from statutory provisions is a question of fact under the circumstances of each case: Ibid.

An ordinance regulating the rate of speed of cars within city limits is applicable to the switch yards of the company, and is not to be limited to places where the public have a right to travel: Crowley v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 65–658.

Fencing at highway crossings: The company is not required to fence where its track crosses a public highway, whether such highway be one de jure or only de facto: Soward v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 33–386.

The company has no right to fence its line so as to obstruct a public street, whether such street is actually opened for public travel or not: Long v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64–657.

A railway company has not the right to fence across platted streets and alleys within city or town limits, even though such streets or alleys are not opened or used: Lathrop v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69–105.

A railroad corporation does not have a right to fence its track in cities and towns where it is intersected and crossed by streets and alleys: Blanford v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 71–310.

But the company has the right to fence within the corporate limits of a town so far as its line runs through lands situated beyond streets or other highways, and it will be liable in damages for injuries to stock at such places if it has failed to fence: Coyle v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 62–518.

In a particular case, held, that an instruction that if the animal killed was the property of plaintiff, was running at large, and was injured by defendant outside of the station grounds, plaintiff would be entitled to recover, was erroneous, it not appearing but that the animal might have been killed at some point outside of the station grounds where defendant had no right to fence: Smith v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 58-622.

Negligence at highway crossings or depot grounds: The company is bound to use ordinary and reasonable care to avoid injuring stock at points where it is not required to fence: Whitbeck v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 21-103; Balcom v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 21-102.

The company is not liable in double damages under the statute for cattle killed at a place where it has no right to fence its track: Soward v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-551.

Where an animal is killed on the depot grounds, negligence must be shown on the part of the company in order to make it liable: Cleveland v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 35-220; Plaster v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 35-449.

In an action to recover for stock killed upon a railway the burden rests upon plaintiff to show that the injury was caused at a point where the company is required to fence its track: Kyser v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 56-207; Comstock v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 32-376.

Evidence considered and held sufficient to show that the animal killed was struck at a highway crossing, and not in the field where the marks of blood were found: Sullivan v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 58-602.

In case of the killing of stock at a point where the railway has not the right to fence, the burden of proof is upon plaintiff to show negligence of the company: Schneir v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 40-337.

The failure to give signals at crossings does not in itself establish negligence on the part of the company nor render it liable for stock killed at such crossings. In such cases it is necessary, in order to hold the company liable, that the jury find that the failure to give signals, under the circumstances, constituted negligence, and also that such negligence, if any, was the cause of the injury: Jackson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 36-451.

Under particular facts, held, that the company was not guilty of any negligence in connection with the injury received from its train to stock, at its crossing, and was, therefore, not liable: Plaster v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 35-449; Schneir v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 40-337.

In a particular case, held, that there was not such absence of proof of negligence causing the injury to stock at a crossing, on the part of the company, as to require the setting aside of a verdict against it for damages: Lawson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 57-672.

The fact that an engineer, in the exercise of his judgment, believes he can frighten stock from the track without reversing his engine or stopping the train, will not show that there is not negligence unless it appears that he possesses and exercises ordinary judgment: Parker v. Dubuque Southwestern R. Co., 34-399.

In an action for negligence causing injuries to stock at a place where the company was not entitled to fence, held, that it was not improper to instruct the jury that, if defendant's employes saw the animal upon the track, and so near that it might reasonably be supposed, under all the circumstances, that the animal would be in danger, and could, by the use of ordinary care and prudence, have avoided the injury, and did not do so, the defendant was liable: Edson v. Central R. Co., 40-47.

The question whether negligence is shown under such circumstances is one of fact for the jury: Ibid.

Negligence or wilful act of stock owner: Contributory negligence of stock owner, not amounting to a wilful act, will not defeat his right to recover for stock injured where the company has a right to fence: Inman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-459.

The mere fact that the owner, by his voluntary act, exposes the animal to danger, will not necessarily make the act wilful. If the act of the owner was for a lawful purpose, and the danger was merely incidental, it should not be considered wilful so as to defeat recovery: Smith v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 58-622.

The provisions of this section of the statute exclude all defenses in such cases except such as arise from the wilful act of the owner. This implies something more than mere negligence. It is an act in some way connected with the injury, such as driving live-stock upon the track, or permitting the animals to escape for the purpose of going upon the track: Ibid.

The fact that the owner of swine allows the animals to run at large on his premises, in close proximity to the railroad track, does not constitute a wilful act such as to defeat his recovery: Lee v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 66-131.

The act of the owner in permitting stock to run at large is not evidence of contributory negligence: Whitbeck v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 21-103; Evans v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 21-374; Stewart v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 32-561; Searles v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 35-490.

The liability of the company for stock killed where it has a right to fence exists regardless of the negligence of the owner. It is only upon a showing that the injury is the result of the wilful act of the owner or his agent that the company is excused from liability: Spence v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 25-139.

It is contributory negligence on the part of the owner of cattle to allow them to frequent places of danger such as depot grounds: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 34-506.

But where plaintiff allowed a blind horse to run at large and it was killed by defendant's train on its depot grounds, held, that the question whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence was for the jury, and that such act was not, as a matter of law, negligence sufficient to defeat recovery: Hammond v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 49-450.

The fact that a party knowingly allows his animals to be upon and frequent depot and station grounds does not necessarily constitute contributory negligence such as to defeat recovery for injury to such animals: Miller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 59–707.

That a stock owner allows his stock to run at large with the knowledge that a crossing is dangerous, and that his animals frequent such crossing, does not constitute negligence even though the statute makes the owner liable for all damage resulting from his animals being at large: Kuhn v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 42–420.

Where the owner of stock turned it loose upon the portion of his farm which was fenced, and it broke through the fence and strayed upon the railroad track, and it did not appear that the fence was reasonably sufficient, held, that plaintiff having no knowledge that his animals had escaped until they were killed, could not be considered guilty of contributory negligence: Moriarty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64–696.

Stock unlawfully at large: The fact that sheep and swine are not allowed to run at large will not defeat the owner's right to recover for injuries to such animals: Spence v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 25–139; Stewart v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 27–282; Fernow v. Dubuque & S. W. R. Co., 22–528; Lee v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 66–131.

Where animals allowed to run at large in violation of a city ordinance, come upon the track they are trespassers, and the company owes no duty with reference to them and is not liable for injuries received by them, even though occasioned by a train running at greater speed than eight miles per hour, it not appearing that such improper speed was wanton or reckless: Vanhorn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 59–33; S. C.; 63–67.

To defeat recovery from a railroad company for killing on its depot grounds an animal which it is unlawful to allow to run at large, it is necessary to show that the animal is at large by the owner's sufferance: Pearson v Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 45–497.

The fact that plaintiff's horse was at large in the night-time on the premises of another in violation of the herd law in force in the county, and was killed by defendant's train without fault or negligence of defendant, at a point where defendant had a right to fence, but did not, held not sufficient to defeat plaintiff's right of recovery: Krebs v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 64–670.

It is not contributory negligence sufficient to defeat the owner's right of recovery that the animal is at large within the city limits in violation of an ordinance of the city, if it is at large by accident and not intentionally: Doran v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73–115.

Operation of the road; construction train: The railway company is liable for stock killed by a construction train by reason of the failure to fence, although the road is not completed: Glandon v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68–457.

Receiver: Where a railroad is being operated by a receiver, the receiver, and not the company, is liable under the provisions of this section: Brockert v. Central Iowa R. Co., 82–369; Schurr v. Omaha & St. L. R. Co., 67–280.

SEC. 2056. Damages by fire. Any corporation operating a railway shall be liable for all damages sustained by any person on account of loss of or injury to his property occasioned by fire set out or caused by the operation of such railway. Such damages may be recovered by the party injured in the manner set out in the preceding section, and to the same extent, save as to double damages. [C.'73, § 1289.]

Setting out fires: The effect of this section is not to make the company absolutely liable for damages from fires set out, but to render the injury prima facie proof of negligence on part of the company, which may be rebutted by showing freedom from such negligence: Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 50-338; Slosson v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 51–294; Libby v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 52–92.

The negligence of the company is presumed if the fire proceeds from one of its engines, and it is not necessary for the plaintiff in the first instance to prove more than that it did so proceed: Rose v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 72–625.

Plaintiff in the reasonable attempt to save the property of another from destruction by a fire set out by defendant's negligence received severe personal injuries. Held, that such injuries were so far the proximate result of defendant's negligence in setting out the fire that recovery could be had therefor: Liming v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 81–246.

In an action to recover damages for destruction of property by fire set out by an engine of a railroad company, held, that the question to be determined was whether the engine of the defendant set out the fire, and if so, whether it was properly constructed and operated, and in good condition: Metzgar v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 76–387.

And held, that the duty of the railroad company to use the best devices available to prevent the escape of fire would not depend in any manner upon the usage of other roads; and evidence that the same kind of an engine as that setting out the fire was in general use on other roads was not admissible: Ibid.

In an action to recover for loss of property destroyed by fire from an engine, held, that the petition need not allege negligence on the part of the defendant, as the fact that the fire was set out in the operation of its railroad was prima facie evidence of negligence sufficient to authorize a recovery in the absence of evidence overcoming the legal presumption: Seska v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 77–137.

In case of damages from fires, the presumption is that the corporation operating the road is guilty of negligence. It is not necessary for plaintiff to allege negligence, nor will such unnecessary allegation of negligence change the rule of proof: Engle v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 77-661.

Where part of an instruction, considered alone, appeared to hold a railroad company liable for the consequences of slight negligence in setting out a fire, but where the whole instruction considered together expressed the rule that it was held only to ordinary care and diligence, held, that the objectionable clause was no ground for reversal: Ibid.

It is sufficient for plaintiff suing in such cases to set forth in his pleading simply the occurrence of the injury. The presumption of liability arising from the occurrence itself is not necessarily overcome by the proof merely that the company was not guilty of negligence in the matters which were the immediate cause of the injury, as permitting combustible material to accumulate and remain on the right of way. The burden of proving such fact is not upon plaintiff even though he may allege it in his petition: Ibid.

This prima facie evidence may be rebutted by defendant, the effect of the statute being simply to change the burden of proof. As to whether the rebutting evidence showing due care, etc., on the part of the company is sufficient is a question for the jury and not for the court: Babcock v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 62-593.

The good condition of the engine, the diligence of defendant's employes and other facts are evidence of care. When such evidence is introduced on the part of the defendant after the fact of the injury is proven by plaintiff, a conflict in the evidence arises which may be determined by the jury: Ibid.

The burden is upon defendant, upon proof that the fire originated from its engine, to show that it was free from negligence and in a particular case, held, that the evidence was not sufficient to show such fact: Hockstedler v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 88-236.

The fact that the right of way is procured from the owner of the land does not preclude recovery of damages for fires set out in the operation of the railway to fences not then built and timber situated a mile from the track. Such damages could not have been considered in estimating damages in proceedings for condemning the right of way: Rodemacher v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 41-297.

A railroad company is liable for damages from fire communicated by its negligence to a building of a third person and from such building to buildings of plaintiff, and negligence of the third person owning the intermediate building in not keeping it in the proper condition will not defeat plaintiff's right to recover: Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55-582.

This section does not render invalid a contract between the railroad company and a person who is given a license to erect any building on its right of way relieving the railroad company from liability for injury to such building by fire caused by negligence of its employes: Griswold v. Illinois Central R. Co., 90-265.

Company operating road: The company whose engine sets out the fire is liable for the damages resulting, although it is operating a line owned and used by another company, and the fire originates on the right of way by reason of combustible matter allowed to accumulate thereon by such other company: Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215.

Contributory negligence: If, by plowing around stacks in a field or otherwise protecting them, the owner could have prevented destruction of them by reason of fire originally set out by sparks from a locomotive spreading to such stacks, and the omission to protect them was negligence, then plaintiff cannot recover for their destruction; the question whether failure to thus plow around the stacks for their protection was negligence being a question for the jury: Kesee v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-78.

It is not, as a matter of law, contributory negligence on the part of the owner of grain stacked upon the open prairie to fail to take certain precautions to guard against the approach of fire, as by plowing around it, etc. The question whether such omission constitutes negligence in a particular case is one of fact for the jury: Garrett v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 36-121.

The right of recovery for an injury caused by fire set out in the operation of a railroad is not defeated by the mere contributory negligence of the injured party: West v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 77-654; Engle v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 77-661.

Whether, under the section as it now stands, differing from the provisions under which preceding cases were decided, it is necessary for plaintiff suing to recover damages to his property for fire set out by an engine to prove absence of contributory negligence on his part, quære: Ormond v. Central Iowa R. Co., 58-742.

Evidence as to whether other farmers had plowed around their stacks at the time plaintiff's stacks were destroyed by fire, held not admissible: Ibid.; Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215.

Held, also, that it was error to instruct the jury in such cases that plaintiff's act in stacking his wheat in a field where it was grown and adjacent to a railroad, without plowing around his stacks, would not constitute negligence defeating his recovery unless the act was such as ordinarily prudent and cautious men would not have done in like manner under similar surrounding circumstances: Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215.

The party from whose land the right of way is taken would not be negligent, as a matter of law, in sowing wheat upon the right of way and allowing the stubble to remain there after the wheat was removed: Ibid.

Constitutional: These peculiar provisions as to liability of railway companies for damages from fires are not in conflict with the constitution, being applicable alike to all persons or companies engaged in such business: Rodemacher v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 41-297.

Evidence: The frequent occurrence of fires caused by the same engine on the same trip may be shown for the purpose of proving that it was defective in its construction, or that it was out of repair or negligently handled: Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215; Lanning v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 68-502; West v. Chicago & N. W. R'y Co., 77-654; Johnson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 77-666.

But, in such a case, it is not competent to show that other fires occurred along the right of way in the same vicinity shortly after the engine passed over the road and before the fire that destroyed plaintiff's property: Bell v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 64-321.

Plaintiff, in introducing evidence to rebut the evidence of the railway company tending to show want of negligence on its part causing fire set out by its locomotives, may do so by facts of a circumstantial character, as it is not usually possible to introduce witnesses who can testify from personal knowledge. Therefore evidence which might not be free from difficulties in other cases open to clearer proofs, might be considered sufficient: Babcock v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 62-593.

There being no question as to where and how the fire originated, and it not being alleged as negligence that the right of way was in an improper condition, held error to refuse an instruction to the effect that the question as to whether or not the right of way was clean and free from grass and other combustible matter was immaterial: Comes v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 78-391.

In an action to recover damages from defendant for fire claimed to have been communicated to plaintiff's premises, either directly or indirectly from defendant's engine, held, that evidence that charred shingles, after the fire and on the same day, were found a quarter of a mile beyond the house burned and in the direction the wind was blowing, was admissible to show that the fire was communicated from the defendant's engine, or burning timbers on defendant's right of way about four hundred feet distant: Knight v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 81-310.

Where it was shown that large cinders were thrown out through the smoke-stack of the engine, and that the spark-arrester of the engine, permitting such cinders to escape, was out of repair, held, that the jury might infer that the employes operating the engine observed such cinders and sparks and were thereby informed of the defective condition of the engine: Ibid.

Proof that fire started in a field about one hundred and sixteen feet from the railroad track a few minutes after a train had passed, held evidence that such fire originated from such engine: Greenfield v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 83-270.

Proof of damage in such case is prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the company: Ibid.

In order that the company may negative its negligence in such case so as to escape liability, it must negative every fact the proof of which would justify the finding of negligence: Ibid.

Evidence of the occurrence of the fire may be sufficient to discredit the testimony of the engineer as to the engine being in good condition: Ibid.

Evidence in a particular case, held sufficient to sustain a verdict for damages caused by fire on the theory that such fire was set out by the locomotive engine of the defendant: Hemmi v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 70 N. W., 746.

Where there is a prima facie case of negligence on the one side and the direct evidence of the defendant as to care and diligence on the other, the conflict should be submitted to the jury: Ibid.

Sufficiency of evidence in particular cases considered: Johnson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 77-666; Fish v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 81-280.

As to admissibility of the record of inspection of engines, see Tyler v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71 N. W., 536.

Measure of damages: The measure of damage for property destroyed by such a fire is the difference between the value before and the value after the fire, so that in regard to damage to growing timber, held, that it was the loss of value of the growing timber as growing, and not the value it would have had as cut up into cord-wood, that was the measure of damage: Greenfield v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 83-270.

In an action to recover the value of trees destroyed by fire set out by defendant's engines, held, that a witness was properly permitted to testify that it would be difficult to grow trees in the place of those destroyed, by reason of the shade of other trees, as such evidence would have a bearing upon the value of the trees destroyed: Leiber v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 84-97.

Where damages were claimed for injuries to meadow, grass and trees, held, that evidence might properly be received as to the depreciation in value of the meadow, trees, etc., by reason of the fire, and that the cost of restoration was not the proper measure: Hamilton v. Des Moines & K. C. R. Co., 84-131.

The measure of damages to an orchard destroyed by fire, is the difference between the fair market value of the farm upon which it is situated, immediately before the fire, and such value immediately after the fire. In such a case plaintiff may, in an examination in chief of a witness, show the value of the land before and after the fire; and may, at his election, show the facts upon which the witness based his judgment as to such values: Rowe v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71 N. W., 409.

Since the enactment of the provision relating to liability for damages from fires, contributory negligence of the person injured cannot be shown as a defense: West v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 77-654; Engle v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 77-661; Johnson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 77-666.

Title of property: Where it appeared that plaintiff had as a trespasser cut and stacked hay upon the land of another which he had no title to, and of which he was not in possession, held, that he could not maintain an action against a railroad company for its negligence resulting in the destruction thereof by fire: Murphy v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 55-473; Lewis v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 57-127; Comes v Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 78-391.

Where hay destroyed in such a fire had been cut by plaintiff upon uninclosed prairie land, under a license, held, that he had sufficient title to recover damages for the destruction thereof although the license was given by one who had no authority to convey an interest in the land: Metzgar v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 76-387; Bullis v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 76-680.

Where plaintiff suing to recover for destruction of hay by fire set out by defendant in the operation of its road showed that such hay was cut and stacked upon land leased by him from the person claiming to be owner thereof, held, that he was entitled to recover without proving title in his landlord, there being no adverse claim made: Johnson v. Chicago & N. W R. Co., 77-666.

In an action by the tenant to recover the value of a crop destroyed by fire set out by the company's engines, it appearing that plaintiff did not pay cash rent, held error to refuse to allow plaintiff to be cross-examined as to whether he was to give a share of the grain for rent: Ormond v. Central Iowa R. Co., 58-742.

Where it does not appear that title to the premises injured is in dispute, oral evidence of such title not objected to may be sufficient to show plaintiff's title to recovery, and an objection to such evidence of plaintiff's title, not made until by motion to take the case from the jury, is too late: Fish v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 81-280.

Negligence: Before the enactment of this statutory provision, it was held that the burden of proof in an action against the company for such damages was upon plaintiff to show negligence of the company, and that proof of the injury alone was not sufficient to make out a prima facie case: Gandy v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-420; McCummons v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 33-187; Garrett v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 36-121.

But in such case, held, that as in the nature of the case plaintiff must labor under difficulties in making proof of the fact of negligence, and as that fact itself is always a relative one, it might be satisfactorily established by evidence of circumstances bearing more or less directly upon the fact of negligence, and which might not be satisfactory in other cases, free from difficulty and open to clear proof: Gandy v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-420.

A party using a dangerous instrument, body or element will be held to use greater care and prudence than when using a less destructive agency. Fire being a destructive element, persons using it are required to exercise all reasonably careful precautions against its spread, and the care and prudence required by law to prevent the spread of fire from a locomotive are not deemed to be exercised unless some proper precautions are used for that purpose: Jackson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 31-176.

Ordinary care and prudence require the use of the best contrivances known, and unless such are used it will be considered negligence; but what amounts to negligence in such cases is a question of fact for the jury: Ibid.

Also held, that to allow dried grass, weeds, and other matter, the natural accumulations of the soil, to remain upon the right of way, was not negligence per se, but that there might be such peculiar or unusual circumstances in a given case as that such acts would amount to negligence in fact, and that when such circumstances existed they might properly be submitted to the jury to establish the fact of negligence: Kesee v Chicago & N. W. R. Co, 30-78.

Also held, that the question of negligence, such as to render the company liable for damages resulting from such fires, was to be determined by the jury, and that it was not proper to enumerate facts and circumstances which as matter of law would be sufficient to charge the company with negligence: McCormick v. Chicago R. I. & P R. Co., 41-193.

SEC. 2057. Fences required. All railway corporations owning or operating a line of railway within the state shall construct, maintain and keep in repair a suitable fence of posts and barb wire or posts and boards, or any other fence which the fence viewers shall determine to be equivalent thereto, on each side of the track thereof, so connected with cattle-guards at all public road crossings as to prevent cattle, horses and other live stock from getting on the railroad tracks. Such tracks shall be fenced within six months after the completion of the same or any part thereof. Such fences, when of barb wire, shall be of five wires securely fastened to posts set not more than twenty feet apart, the top wires to be not less than fifty-four inches high; or of five boards securely nailed to posts set not more than eight feet apart, the fence to be not less than fifty-four inches high. Fences repaired or rebuilt shall conform to the foregoing provisions. Nothing in this or the two following sections shall be construed to compel a railway company operating a third-class line to fence its road through the land of any farmer or other person who, by written agreement with such company, waives the fencing thereof. [22 G. A., ch. 30, § 1.]

Where the only repairs made after 1888 in a railroad fence which had never been fifty-four inches high, consisted in nailing on loose boards and replacing defective boards with others brought from another portion of the fence, held, that such acts did not constitute a repairing of the fence within the meaning of this section so as to render it necessary that the fence should be made of the statutory height: Moeckley v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 92–748.

As to fencing in general see notes to § 2055.

SEC. 2058. Penalty—killing of stock. If the corporation, officer thereof or lessee owning or engaged in the operation of any railroad in the state refuses or neglects to comply with any provision of this chapter relating to the fencing of the tracks, such corporation, officer or lessee shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars for each offense, and every thirty days' continuance of such refusal or neglect shall constitute a separate and distinct offense; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to relieve the corporation from liability arising from the killing or maiming of live stock on said track or right of way by its negligence or that of its employes, nor shall anything in this chapter interfere with the right of open or private crossings, or with the right of persons to such crossings, nor in any way limit or qualify the liability of any corporation or person owning or operating a railway that fails to fence the same against live stock running at large for any stock injured or killed by reason of the want of such fence. [23 G. A., ch. 20; 22 G. A., ch. 30, §§ 2, 3.]

SEC. 2059. Railway crossings near Mississippi river. When, in the construction of a railway, it becomes necessary to cross another railway near the shore of the Mississippi river, each shall be so constructed and maintained at the point of crossing that the respective road-beds thereof shall be above high water in such river, but where the crossing occurs within the limits of cities containing six thousand or more inhabitants, the council thereof may establish the crossing grade. [C. '73, § 1290.]

SEC. 2060. Interlocking switches. When in any case two or more railroads cross each other at a common grade, or a railroad crosses a stream by swing or draw bridge, they may be equipped thereat with an interlocking switch system, or other suitable safety device rendering it safe for engines or trains to pass thereover without stopping, and if such interlocking switch system or other safety device shall have been approved by the railroad commissioners, then the engines and trains of such railroad or railroads may pass over such crossings or bridge without stopping, the provisions of any other law to the contrary notwithstanding, and the provisions of the three following sections also are not applicable in such a case. [25 G. A., ch. 25, §§ 1, 6.]

SEC. 2061. Proceedings to establish. In any case where the tracks of two or more railroads cross each other at a common grade, any company owning one of such tracks and desiring to unite with others in protecting the crossing with interlocking or other safety device, and being unable to agree with such others thereon, may file in the district court of the county in which the crossing is located a petition, stating the facts and asking the court to order such crossing to be protected by interlocking or other safety device. Said petition shall be accompanied by a plat showing the location of all tracks and switches, and upon the filing thereof notice shall be given by the petitioner to every other company or person owning or operating any track involved in such crossing. The court, or a judge thereof if the petition is filed in vacation, shall thereupon appoint a commissioner to examine into the necessity for such system, and report the facts and his recommendation in such time as the court or judge may direct, and, as soon as practicable thereafter, the court or judge shall appoint a time and place for the hearing of such petition. The proceedings shall be in equity, and subject to all the rules of equity practice, except that the court shall require the issues to be made up at the first term after the petition is filed, and give the proceeding precedence over other civil business and try the action thereat, if possible. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2062. Decree. After allowing all parties full opportunity to show cause why such system should or should not be ordered thereat, the court shall, if it is found the plaintiff should prevail, enter its decree ordering the establishment of such system as it may prescribe, the time within which it shall be begun and finished, and the proportion of the expense thereof to be paid by each company or person interested in the crossing, and make such division of the costs as may be equitable. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2063. Proposed crossing. In case one railway company desires to cross with its tracks those of another at grade, and such companies cannot agree to the terms thereof, the company desiring to cross shall, upon the application of the company whose track it is desired to cross, in a proceeding instituted as provided in the two preceding sections, be compelled to interlock such crossing, and the court therein shall make such orders and decree as may be required to secure public safety and the preservation of the properties of the roads, and prescribe the terms upon which such crossing shall be maintained after being made. The provisions of this and the two preceding sections shall not apply to side tracks. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 2064. Apportionment of costs. If in any case contemplated in the three preceding sections the crossings shall be of two railroads only, then the court shall not apportion to either less than one-third of the cost, and if more than two roads are involved, the court shall not apportion to any one less than two-thirds of an equal share of such cost. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 2065. Modification of decree. Any decree made pursuant to the four preceding sections shall be subject to changes or modifications at any subsequent term, on due cause shown therefor, upon a petition filed in the same proceedings, setting forth the reasons therefor and arising subsequent to entry of the decree therein. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 2066. Sale or lease of railroad property—joint arrangement. Any railway corporation may sell or lease its property and franchises to, or make joint running arrangements not in conflict with law with, any corporation owning or operating any connecting railway, and any corporation operating the railway of another shall be liable in the same manner and extent as though such railway belonged to it. [C. '73, § 1300.]

Where a line of road has been built by aid of taxes levied for that purpose, the line in aid of which the tax is voted must be operated as a whole, and a portion thereof cannot be leased and operated separately to the injury of any locality on the line. Any railroad company availing itself of such aid assumes relations to the public different from those resulting from a mere private contract: State v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71–410.

Further as to this section, see Treadway v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 21–351; and, in general, notes to § 2036.

SEC. 2067. Mortgage of contract or lease. Any contract, lease or benefit derived under the authority given in the preceding section may be mortgaged for the purpose of securing construction bonds in the same manner as other property of the corporation. [C. '73, § 1301.]

Where a railroad has been constructed by the aid of taxes the obligation to operate it as an entire line attaches to it in the hands of a purchaser thereof at sale under foreclosure: State v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71–410.

Where a railroad was bought in by a new corporation at foreclosure sale under a mortgage, held, that such purchaser could be compelled to comply with the decree rendered against the former company, while in the hands of a receiver, directing the operation of its road between certain points: State v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 83–720.

Under a contract for the transfer of a line of railroad from one company to another, held, that the transferee assumed any liability existing against the transferrer for injury to an employe: Knott v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 84–462.

SEC. 2068. Effect of change of name. If any railway company is organized under a corporate name, and has made contracts for payments to it upon delivery of stock therein, and shall subsequently thereto change its corporate name, or if the real ownership in the property, rights, powers and franchises has passed legally or equitably into any other company, no such contracts shall be enforced until tender or delivery of stock in such last named corporation or company is made. [C. '73, § 1302.]

Cases are contemplated in this section where payments are to be made to the company upon delivery of stock, and it also contemplates that the ownership of property rights, powers and franchises may legally pass to another company while such contracts for payments exist. The section embraces obligations for payment of taxes voted, and also voluntary conveyances by one company to another, in which the delivery of stock to taxpayers shall be provided for. Therefore, held, that a transfer by the company in whose favor a tax was voted to another company did not forfeit the tax voted, stock in the new company of equal or greater value than that of the company to whom the tax was voted being offered to the taxpayer: Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co., 78–48.

SEC. 2069. Report. When any railway has been completed and opened for use, the corporation owning, operating or constructing it shall report under oath to the next general assembly the total cost thereof, specifying the amount expended for construction, engines, cars, depots and other buildings, and the amount of all other expenses, together with the length of the railway, the number of planes with their inclination to the mile, the greatest curvature, the average width of road-bed, and the number of ties per mile. [C. '73, § 1303.]

SEC. 2070. Rights reserved. All contracts, stipulations and conditions regarding the right of controlling and regulating the charges for freight and passengers upon railways, heretofore made in granting land and other property or voting taxes to aid in the construction of or franchises to railway corporations, are expressly reserved, continued and perpetuated in full force and effect, to be exercised by the general assembly whenever the public good or the public necessity requires such exercise thereof. [C. '73, § 1306.]

SEC. 2071. Liability for negligence or wrongs of employes. Every corporation operating a railway shall be liable for all damages sustained by any person, including employes of such corporation, in consequence of the neglect of the agents, or by any mismanagement of the engineers or other employes thereof, and in consequence of the wilful wrongs, whether of commission or omission, of such agents, engineers or other employes, when such wrongs are in any manner connected with the use and operation of any railway on or about which they shall be employed, and no contract which restricts such liability shall be legal or binding. [C.'73, § 1307.]

In general: Without this statutory provision the company would not be liable to an employe for injuries resulting from negligence of a co-employe, and the intention of the statute is merely to give to the employe a right of action in such cases, and not to change the degree of care necessary, which is, as between master and servant, that of ordinary care and diligence only: Hunt v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 26–363.

The company is liable to an employe for damages resulting from the negligence of a co-employe whose duty it was to keep a bridge in order, in the performance of such duty: Locke v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 46–109.

A railway company cannot avoid liability for the negligence of its employes by requiring of an employe injured by reason of such negligence more than reasonable care in the discharge of his duties: Scagel v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 83–380.

It seems that this section is not applicable to street railways: Manhattan Trust Co. v. Sioux City Cable R. Co., 68 Fed., 82.

These provisions are entirely immaterial as applied to a case where the evidence fails to show any negligence on the part of the railroad company: Hamilton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61 N. W., 415.

Person or company operating railway: A receiver who is managing a railway under the direction of a court is within this section and may be charged, and a recovery obtained against him, as a person operating a railway. And though his liability could not be personal, a judgment against him might be satisfied out of the property in his hands if the court by whom he was appointed should so direct: Sloan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 62–728.

The fact that a lessee may be held liable under this section does not prevent recovery against the owner of the road. The actions are cumulative: Bower v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 42–546.

The running of special trains over the railway by a construction company in constructing it is operating a railroad within the meaning of the statutory provision: McKnight v. Iowa & M. R. Constr. Co., 43–406.

Persons not employes: The language of the section is so broad that it includes any and all persons, employes and others, who may be injured by the negligence of the agents or servants of the railway company or persons operating the railway: Rose v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 39–246.

If the act of the employe is within the scope of his authority the company is liable for injuries therefrom to a third person even though the act is wilfully wrongful: Marion v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64–568.

If the employes perform their duty in operating a train in a manner so unusual or reckless as to endanger lives of persons upon the train they are guilty of negligence, and if in direct consequence of such negligence a person is injured the company will be liable even though the person was on the train without right. This section renders the company liable for all damages sustained by any person in consequence of the neglect of agents, etc.: Way v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 73–463.

It is not material that plaintiff, claiming to recover by virtue of this section, was not employed in the operation of the road. It is sufficient if it appears that he was injured by the operation of the road and by negligence of the parties charged with responsibility with respect to the movement of trains: Pierce v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73–140.

One riding on a train by fraud or stealth without payment of fare takes upon himself all the risk of the ride and if injured by an accident not due to recklessness and wilfulness on the part of the company, he cannot recover notwithstanding the provisions of this section: Condran v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 67 Fed., 522.

Employes engaged in operating road: This section affords a remedy only to such employes as are employed, at the time of receiving the injury, in the business of operating a railroad: Malone v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 65–417.

So that to entitle an employe to recover against the company for injuries which he has sustained, he must show, first, that he belonged to the class of employes to whom the statute affords a remedy, and second, that the company which occasioned the injury was of a class of companies for which the remedy is given: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that an employe whose duty was to wipe off engines, open and close the doors of the engine house, and remove snow from the turn-table and tracks and operate the turn-table, and who was injured by reason of the negligence of a co-employe causing the door of the engine house to fall upon him, was not engaged in the operation of the road in such a sense as to be within the statutory provisions: Ibid.

The change from the common law made by this section extends no further than to employes engaged in the business of operating a railway, and not to persons employed by the corporation without regard to the nature of their employment. Such corporation may be engaged in any other business, which may be within the scope of their organization, but not at all, or very remotely, connected with the use of their road, and in such cases employes by whom such affairs are conducted acquire no rights under the statutory provision, as their occupation does not expose them to the hazards incident to the use of railways, and the statute was not designed for their protection and benefit: Schroeder v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 41–344.

It is error for the court to instruct the jury that, as a matter of law, the nature of plaintiff's service and employment bring him within the terms of the statute. The character of his employment, whether in connection with the use of defendant's railroad, or whether thereby he is brought within the provisions of the statute, are questions of fact to be determined by the jury: Ibid.

These provisions apply no further than to employes engaged in the business of operating a railroad, and do not apply to employes in a machine-shop of the company. In such case the common-law rule exempting the employer from liability for injury to an employe resulting from the negligence of a co-employe is still in force: Potter v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 46–399.

The words "where such wrongs are in any manner connected with the operation or use of any railway" apply not only to wilful wrongs, but also to negligence of agents, etc., and in order to entitle an employe to recover for injuries received from a co-employe, it must appear that he was engaged in a service connected with the use and operation of the railroad: Foley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64–644.

Therefore, held, that an employe whose duty it was to repair cars while standing upon the track and side track of the company, while not in motion, and who was sometimes required to ride on the trains of the company from place to place for the purpose of making such repairs at different places, was not employed in the operation of the road in such sense as to bring him within the protection of the provision: Ibid.

Injuries to one employe by reason of negligence of another, both engaged in the work of repairing a track, such injury not resulting from the operation of the railroad, held not within the provisions of the statute: Matson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 68–22.

Employes engaged in hoisting coal in a coal-house for the purpose of filling a car are not so engaged in the hazardous business of operating a railroad as that one can recover for injuries caused by the negligence of the other: Luce v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co., 67–75.

In order to render a company liable for injuries to an employe by reason of negligence of a co-employe, the negligence complained of must be that of an employe and affect a co-employe, who are in some manner performing work for the purpose of moving a train, as loading or unloading it, or superintending, directing or aiding its movement. The persons must be connected in some manner with the moving of trains. Work preparatory thereto, which may may be done away from the train, is not connected with its movement: Stroble v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 70–555.

Therefore, held, that where employes were engaged about elevating coal to a platform to supply the engine, their duties were not so connected with the use and operation of the railroad as that one of them could recover for injuries received from negligence of the other: Ibid.

Where a section hand was injured by the negligence of a co-employe while engaged in loading a car, held, that it did not sufficiently appear that his employment was of such character as to entitle him to recover: Smith v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 59–73.

Where an employe was injured by appliances connected with the round house, held, that it was not error to instruct the jury that if they found it was a part of plaintiff's duty to keep such appliances in a safe condition, or that it was the duty of another employe of the same kind to do so, and that they both, or either of them, neglected to do so, then the plaintiff could not recover, the employes not being engaged in the operation of the road: Manning v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 64–240.

An employe in the round house engaged in putting a spring into an engine is not engaged in the operation of the road within the meaning of this section: Hathaway v. Illinois Central R. Co., 92–337.

One who is employed in a round house as clinker man, and in the course of his duty is injured while coupling together tanks in the round house, moved by engines, is within the terms of this section and can recover for injury done to him, due to the negligence of a co-employe: Butler v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 87–206.

A person engaged in working on a bridge of the company and required, in the course of his employment, to ride on its trains, is within the statutory provision: Schroeder v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47–375.

And so is a section hand: Frandsen v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36–372.

And so is a hand engaged in shoveling gravel from a gravel train: McKnight v. Iowa & M. R. Constr. Co., 43–406.

Or a hand engaged in connection with the operation of a dirt train: Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36–52.

Where the plaintiff was employed on a train used for hauling sand, and was injured by the falling of a bank of sand where he had been shoveling, held, that the case was within the provisions of this section: Handelun v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 72–709.

An employe required to go upon a train for the purpose of unloading cars is within the scope of this section and may recover for injuries received by reason of negligence of a co-employe: Raben v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73–579.

Where the employe was injured while engaged in operating a derrick situated on a flat car, the operation of which involved the movement of the car upon the track, held, that he was within the scope of this section: Nelson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73–576.

A section foreman whose work is along and on a track on which trains are operated, and has reference to train movements in the keeping of the track in repair and in condition therefor, is engaged in the operation of the road in such sense as to come within the provisions of this section: Haden v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 92–226.

A private detective injured while walking along the track, in accordance with directions of the company, to a certain place where he was to try to detect persons accustomed to place obstructions on the track, and who, while so walking to the place designated, was prostrated by sunstroke on the track and negligently run over and injured by defendant's engine, held to be so engaged as to subject him to the hazard peculiar to the business of operating the railway, and to be within the protection of the statutory provision: Pyne v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 54–223.

Where a "wiper" is in temporary charge of an engine, the railroad company is liable for his negligence resulting in injury to a brakeman in coupling cars: Whalen v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 75–563.

And it is immaterial in such case whether the train was being made up at the usual and proper time or not: Ibid.

A workman employed to shovel snow for the clearing of the track, and being transported on defendant's train for the purpose of performing such service, is engaged in the operation of the road in such sense as entitles him to recover for injuries received by reason of negligence of employes operating the train: Smith v. Humeston & S. R. Co., 78–583.

A section-hand, while riding on a hand-car holding a shovel for the purpose of clearing snow from the rail, is engaged in the operation of the road within the provision of this section, so as to be entitled to recover for injuries received by reason of negligence of the foreman in charge of the car: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., v. Artery, 137 U. S., 507.

This statute is upheld on the ground that it is applicable to all employes of a certain class; that is, those engaged in employment which exposes them to the peculiar dangers and perils of the operation of a railroad and it has not been limited to train crews only. It applies to section men who have nothing to do with the movement of trains by which they are injured, and to other like employes: Keatley v. Illinois Central R. Co., 63 N. W., 560.

Therefore, held that it was applicable in case of injury to one of the gang of section men engaged in constructing an abutment who was injured by the employes of the defendant negligently running a train at a dangerous rate of speed upon an unfinished, insecure and unsafe bridge, by reason of which the cars left the track and caused the death of such employe: Ibid.

Recovery by an employe for injuries due to negligence by co-employe is not limited to cases where the injury was received by movement of cars or engines on the track, nor even to cases where the employe who was injured was engaged in the operative department of the road: Canon v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 70 N. W., 755.

Therefore, held, that a car inspector whose business was to inspect the cars of a train while standing on the track might recover for injuries caused by the cars being moved while he was discharging his duty and that his right of recovery was not defeated by the fact that he had consented that some of the cars of the train might be taken out: Ibid.

Injury to foreman from negligence of subordinate: The fact that an employe of a railroad company is the foreman of a crew of workmen with power to direct the men under him in their work and to hire and discharge them at will does not prevent his being a co-employe with such workmen, within the meaning of this section, and he may recover for injuries received from the negligence of the men in his employ: Houser v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 60–230.

Contributory negligence: This statutory provision does not exonerate the injured party from the necessity of exercising reasonable care. Its purpose is to extend the liability of railroads to injuries to employes for which, at the common law, they were not liable: Murphy v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 45–661.

In case of death: Where the injury results in death, the company is liable to the personal representatives of deceased: Philo v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33–47.

Constitutionality: This provision is not unconstitutional, as subjecting railroad corporations to penalties and liabilities other than those imposed on other business corporations engaged in a like business: being applicable to all persons or corporations engaged in a peculiar business it is not open to such objection: McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20–338; Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36–52; Bucklew v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64–603; Pierce v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73–140; Raben v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73–579.

Liability of company for negligence of superior or inferior employe: If the employe of a railroad company is injured while riding on a hand-car, through the negligence of the boss in charge thereof, the company is liable: Hoben v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 20–562.

Instructions based upon the hypothesis that a person for whose death damages were sought to be recovered from the company for injuries received while acting in obedience to the directions of an employe having authority to control him, held applicable where deceased was a fireman accompanying the engineer and discharging his duty while upon the engine under the control of such engineer: Cooper v. Central R. of Iowa, 44–134.

Where an accident by which an employe is injured is caused by the act of an inferior employe acting under the direction of such superior, the latter cannot recover for an injury received: Dewey v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 31–373.

Where the foreman of a crew of men employed by the company in the repair of bridges brought action against the company for injury received from negligence of one of the men under his control, held, that the fact that he was in charge of the workman did not defeat his right to recover for such negligence under this section, giving a right of action for the negligence of a co-employe: Houser v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 60–230.

It may be that a mere foreman, as the word is generally understood, that is, a laborer with power to superintend the labor of those working with him, is a co-employe so far as his own mere labor is concerned, but it is error to exclude from the jury the consideration of the question whether there is negligence of such foreman, acting as a superior: Baldwin v. St. Louis, K. & N. R. Co., 68–37.

A person who has charge and full control of a timber-yard of a railroad company is to be regarded as a vice-principal, and one who has the care and management of the business in his absence is a temporary vice-principal, and the railroad company is liable for injuries to a subordinate employe caused by the negligence of either of these persons: Baldwin v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co., 75–297.

And notice to the person temporarily in charge of the yard of the defective piling of the timber which caused the injury would be notice to the company, regardless of the fact as to whether or not such person in charge of the business was charged with any duty in regard to piling the timber: Ibid.

Release of claim: A written release of all claim for damages resulting from an injury, executed for a consideration will be binding on the person injured in the absence of fraud, even though it is not read over by him before signing it: Gulliher v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 59–416.

Contract: A written contract between a company and an employe by which he agrees to hold the company harmless for injuries received in doing certain acts which he is advised are dangerous is admissible for the purpose of showing the existence of the rule on the subject, and notice of it to the employe and also notice to the employe of such danger: Sedgwick v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 73–158.

A contract between the employe and the company by which a privilege which the employe has of enjoying, on payment of dues, participation in a benefit fund conditioned on his not prosecuting an action against the company for injuries received in its employ, is not a contract which is invalid under this section. Such contract does not limit the right of action against the company, but relates only to the participation in the benefit fund: Donald v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 61 N. W., 971.

The conditiou on which the benefit of the fund is to be enjoyed operates against the legal representatives of one whose death is caused by injuries as well as against the beneficiary himself: Ibid.

SEC. 2072. Signals at road crossings. A bell and a steam whistle shall be placed on each locomotive engine operated on any railway, which whistle shall be twice sharply sounded at least sixty rods before a road crossing is reached, and after the sounding of the whistle the bell shall be rung continuously until the crossing is passed; but at street crossings within the limits of cities or towns the sounding of the whistle may be omitted, unless required by ordinance or resolution of the council thereof; and the company shall be liable for all damages which shall be sustained by any person by reason of such neglect. Any officer or employe of any railway company violating any of the provisions of this section shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars for each offense. [20 G. A., ch. 104.]

This section imposes a duty, the omission of which is negligence; but before the person injured by it can recover, he must show that his negligence did not contribute to the injury: Sala v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 85–678.

Where there is failure to ring the bell upon approaching a crossing and an injury results, such failure will be negligence for which defendant will be liable unless exonerated by some negligence of plaintiff: Reed v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co., 74–188; Cuse v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 69 N. W., 538.

The whistle should be sounded and the bell rung as a warning before reaching the crossing and a danger signal after the danger to a person attempting to cross is discovered is not sufficient: Hughes v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 88–404.

The ringing should be continued from the time of reaching the sixty-rod limit until the crossing is reached: Lapsley v. Union Pacific R. Co., 50 Fed., 172.

A party about to cross the railroad track has the right to proceed upon the assumption that the signals for the highway crossings will be given: Harper v. Barnard, 68 N. W., 599.

The signal is not only for the benefit of persons who are on or about to cross the track, but for those who are lawfully using teams near the track: Lonergan v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 87–755; Ward v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 65 N. W., 999.

If a traveler about to cross the track, who has looked and listened within a reasonable distance from the crossing without seeing or hearing an approaching train is run upon and injured by reason of negligence to blow the statutory whistle, the company is liable: Winey v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 92–622.

SEC. 2073. Stopping at railway crossings. All trains run upon any railroad in this state which intersects or crosses any other railroad upon the same level shall be brought to a full stop at a distance of not less than two hundred nor more than eight hundred feet from the point of intersection or crossing, before such intersection or crossing is passed, except as otherwise provided in this chapter. Any engineer violating the provisions of this section shall forfeit one hundred dollars for each offense, to be recovered in an action in the name of the state for the benefit of the school fund, and the corporation on whose road such offense is committed shall forfeit the sum of two hundred dollars for each offense, to be recovered in like manner. [20 G. A., ch. 163.]

SEC. 2074. Contract or rule limiting liability. No contract, receipt, rule or regulation shall exempt any railway corporation engaged in transporting persons or property from the liability of a common carrier, or carrier of passengers, which would exist had no contract, receipt, rule or regulation been made or entered into. [C. '73, § 1308.]

A contract such as is prohibited by this section is void whether it is with or without consideration: Brush v. Sabula, A. & D. R. Co., 43–554.

A contract limiting the amount of recovery for loss of baggage is invalid: Davis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 83–744.

Where a bill of lading was executed in Dakota, valid according to the laws of Dakota, for the transportation of goods from that state into Iowa, held, that stipulations therein relating to liability for loss of the goods would be recognized in an Iowa court with reference to the loss occurring in Iowa, although contrary to the Iowa statute: Hazel v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 82–477.

Whether this section would be applicable to a contract made in Iowa but to be wholly performed in another state, quære; but it was held applicable to a contract to transport cattle from Clinton, Iowa, to Chicago, on the ground that it was to be partly performed in Iowa: McDaniel v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 24–412.

This section is not invalid as to a contract made within the state although such contract relates to transportation of a person to a point without the state: Solan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 63 N. W., 692.

A company is not prohibited from providing by contract that it shall not be liable beyond the terminus of its road: Mulligan v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 36–181, 187.

The common law liability of a common carrier attaches to a carrier of live-stock, so far as the rule is not inapplicable by reason of the peculiar character of the property. Responsibility for the carriage of stock cannot, therefore, be restricted by contract: McCoy v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 44–424.

A rule or custom limiting liability for injury to all stock, including such as is of especial value as being blooded, to the value of common stock, is void: McCune v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 52–600.

This section does not render the carrier liable for loss occurring by the act of the owner: Hart v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 69–485.

Whether a carrier, in the absence of any statute restricting his powers, can, by rule, regulation or contract, limit the amount for which he will be liable in case of loss of the property, quære. But the statutory provision prohibits the making of such contract: Ibid.

This statutory provision is applicable to contracts for transportation from a point within to a point without the state, and is not unconstitutional in that respect: Ibid.

This section has no application to the case where the railroad company grants to a person a license to erect a building on its right of way for business purposes with the stipulation that it shall not be liable for injury to such building by fire caused by negligence in its employes in the operation of its road: Griswold v. Illinois Central R. Co., 90–265.

SEC. 2075. Lien of judgment. A judgment against any railway corporation, or any street railway corporation or copartnership, for an injury to any person or property shall be a lien within the county where recovered on the property of such corporation, and such lien shall be prior and superior to the lien of any mortgage or trust deed executed since the fourth day of July, 1862, and prior and superior to the lien of any street railway mortgage or trust deed executed after the adoption of this code. [C. '73, § 1309.]

Where action is brought for recovering from the company damages for breach of a contract under which the right of way was conveyed to it, the judgment may be made a lien on the portion of the line conveyed: Varner v. St. Louis & C. R. R. Co., 55–677.

A judgment for damages for breach of contract by a railway company for failure to fence its right of way and construct cattle-guards becomes a lien on the property of the company, but the party is not entitled to such lien for damages caused by negligent construction of the road causing an overflow of his land, nor for trespass in going upon his land outside the right of way: Hull v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 65–713.

A right of action, or an action pending for such injury, is not a lien, and a purchaser of the road before the rendition of judgment takes it free from the lien of such judgment when rendered: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Verry, 48–458; White v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 52–97.

This section is not applicable to street railways: Manhattan Trust Co. v. Sioux City Cable R. Co., 68 Fed., 82.

A company buying in a railroad at foreclosure sale, does not take it subject to any obligation to pay debts of the former company not reduced to judgment, nor in any way preserved at the time the deed is made, nor does the receipt from the receiver of the former company of the balance of the proceeds of the management of the property under the receivership, render the new company liable for such claim although reduced to judgment against the receiver before the payment by him of the balance of the funds in his hands: Brockert v. Iowa Central R. Co., 61 N. W., 405.

On foreclosure of the mortgage the new company became entitled to the funds in the receiver's hands as a portion of the property: Ibid.

This section is not unconstitutional: Central Trust Co. v. Sloan, 65–655.

SEC. 2076. Rates of fare and freight. All railway corporations doing business in this state, their trustees, receivers or lessees shall be limited in their maximum charges to the rates of compensation for the transportation of passengers and freight herein prescribed. All railroads in the state shall be classified according to the gross amount of their several annual earnings within the state, per mile, for the preceding year, as follows: Class "A" shall include those whose gross annual earnings per mile shall be four thousand dollars or more; class "B" shall include those whose gross annual earnings per mile shall be three thousand dollars or any sum in excess thereof less than four thousand dollars; class "C" shall include those whose gross annual earnings per mile shall be less than three thousand dollars. [15 G. A., ch. 68, § 1; C. '73, § 1305.]

The state cannot by statute regulate rates of transportation under one entire contract from a point within to a point without the state. Such regulation would be an interference with the power of the federal government to regulate interstate commerce: Carton v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 59–148; Keiser v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 5 McCrary, 496.

Where the railway obligates itself to carry to another point within the state and deliver to a connecting carrier, its contract is not one for transportation to a point beyond the state: Heiserman v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 63–732.

The regulation by a board of railroad commissioners that rates of transportation from a point without to a point within the state shall conform to like distances within the state is unconstitutional and interferes with interstate commerce: State v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 70–162.

Where a contract for transportation by a carrier provided for transportation of the goods from one point within the state to another point also within the state, and the rates of transportation were in excess of those fixed by statute, held, that the excess of charges paid might be recovered back, although it was shown that the intention was that the property should be delivered by the carrier receiving it to a connecting carrier and continuously transported to a point without the state, and although the charge for the entire transportation would have been a reasonable one: Heiserman v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 63–732.

Where the statute defines the charges which can lawfully be made by a railway company, charges in excess of those prescribed are unlawful and may be recovered back in an action for the excess. The amount fixed by statute will be conclusively presumed to be the limit of reasonable compensation: Ibid.

The enactment of a statute imposing penalties for excessive charges recoverable by the party injured, and providing a punishment against the agent of a carrier for exacting and collecting excessive charges, does not take away the right existing at common law to recover money paid in excess of a reasonable charge: Ibid.

In such case an action will not be barred in two years under the provision relating to suits to recover a statute penalty, but will stand on the same footing as any action on implied contract: Ibid.

In an action to recover excessive charges paid, the plaintiff need not show objection or protest prior to or at the time of making payment which is in excess of a reasonable compensation: Ibid.

Under a statute imposing upon any railway company charging excessive rates a forfeiture to be recovered by the person injured, and providing that any agent or officer of such corporation violating or being a party to the violation of any of the provisions of the act should be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished accordingly, held, that where an agent was himself a shipper and accounted and turned over to the company charges for shipments made by him at illegal rates, he and the company were in pari delicto as to such charges, and that he could not recover the same in an action against the company: Steever v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 62–371.

Such regulations, held not an impairment of the charter of a railroad granted before its enactment, for the reason that as the charter of the company did not establish the maximum charges, it was competent for the legislature to do so afterwards. Nor is such legislation unconstitutional by reason of not being of uniform operation: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S., 155.

SEC. 2077. Maximum rates of fare. All railroad corporations according to their classifications as herein prescribed shall be limited to compensation per mile for the transportation of any person with ordinary baggage not exceeding one hundred pounds in weight, as follows: Class "A" three cents; class "B" three and one-half cents; class "C" four cents, and for children twelve years of age or under, one-half the rate above prescribed. A charge of ten cents may be added to the fare of any passenger when the same is paid upon the cars, if a ticket might have been procured within a reasonable time before the departure of the train. [15 G. A., ch. 68, § 2.]

The regulation that a passenger shall pay full rate upon failure to procure and present a ticket which he might have purchased from the agent at a reduced rate is not unreasonable: State v. Chovin, 7–204.

The carrier may make a regulation requiring passengers to procure a ticket before taking passage in a caboose car attached to a freight train, and may eject from the car, in a proper place and manner, any person failing to comply with such regulation: Law v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 32–534.

A railway company is allowed to collect an additional sum over the regular rate of fare from passengers who fail to purchase tickets, and the reasonableness of such regulation is not a question for the jury: Hoffbauer v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 52–342.

In an action to recover for being ejected from a train for want of a ticket, where the plaintiff claimed that he was not able to procure such ticket on account of the failure of the company to have its ticket office open before the starting of the train, held, that it was proper to allow defendant to introduce evidence of the character of the station and whether the facilities extended to the traveling public to purchase tickets were such as required for the convenience of the public. While it is required that the office should be open for business a sufficient time before the departure of the train, in order to enable passengers to procure their tickets, receive and count their change, if any, and prepare to board the train, without unnecessary interference with each other, yet it is not required that the office shall remain open up to the instant the train moves off. Unfitness of the station cannot be relied on as an excuse for not procuring a ticket, that reason not having been alleged to the conductor: Everett v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 69–15.

The failure of the company to sell a ticket to a passenger before entering the cars cannot be made a ground for recovery of damages where the passenger afterward tenders with his fare to the conductor the extra amount required on account of not having a ticket: Curl v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 63–417.

SEC. 2078. Annual statement. Each railway corporation operating a railroad in the state shall annually, during the month of January, make and return to the governor a statement, verified by its president and superintendent, showing the gross receipts on its entire road within the state for the preceding year ending with the thirty-first day of December, and a detailed exhibit of the entire receipts for transporting freight and passengers, and all other sources of income of the road. A failure to comply with this section shall subject the corporation to a penalty of one hundred dollars per day for each and every day after the report is due until it is made, to be recovered in an action in the name of the state for the benefit of the school fund. If the executive council upon examination shall be satisfied of its correctness, it shall be the duty of the council to classify the different railroads as hereinbefore provided, and the governor, when there shall be any change in classification, shall issue a certificate to any corporation or corporations affected by such change, certifying the class to which they are respectively assigned; and any change of rates by any railroad corporation pursuant to any change of classification shall take effect and be in force from and after the fourth day of July following such changes. [Same, § 7.]

As to annual statement for purposes of taxation, see § 1334.

Automatic Couplers and Brakes.

Sec. 2079. On new or repaired cars. No corporation, company or person operating any line of railroad within this state, or any car manufacturer or transportation company using or leasing cars therein, shall put in use any new car or any old one that has been to the shop for general repairs to one or both of its drawbars, that is not equipped with automatic couplers so constructed as to enable any person to couple or uncouple them without going between them. [24 G. A., ch. 23, § 1; 23 G. A., ch. 18, § 1.]

Sec. 2080. On all cars. After January 1, 1898, no corporation, company or person, operating a railroad, or any transportation company using or leasing cars, shall have upon any railroad in this state any car that is not equipped with such safety automatic coupler. [Same, § 2.]

Sec. 2081. Driver brake on engines. No corporation, company or person operating any line of railroad in the state shall use any locomotive engine upon any railroad or in any railroad yard in the state that is not equipped with a proper and efficient power brake, commonly called a "driver brake." [Same, § 3.]

Sec. 2082. Power brake on cars. No corporation, company or person operating a line of railroad in the state shall run any train of cars that shall not have therein a sufficient number of cars with some kind of efficient automatic or power brake to enable the engineer to control the train without requiring brakemen to go between the ends or on the top of the cars to use the hand brake. [Same, § 4.]

Sec. 2083. Penalty. Any corporation, company or person operating a railroad in this state and using a locomotive engine, or running a train of cars, or using any freight, way or other car contrary to the provisions of the four preceding sections, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be subject to a fine of not less than five hundred nor more than one thousand dollars for each and every offense; but such penalties shall not apply to companies hauling cars belonging to railroads other than those of this state which are engaged in interstate traffic. Any railway employe who may be injured by the running of such engine, train or car contrary to the provisions of said sections shall not be considered as waiving his right to recover damage by continuing in the employ of the corporation, company or person operating such engine, train or cars. [23 G. A., ch. 18, § 6.]

Taxes in Aid of Railroads.

Sec. 2084. May be voted. Taxes not exceeding five per cent. on the assessed value of any township, town or city may be voted to aid any railway company which is or may become incorporated under the laws of the state, to aid in the construction of a projected railroad within the state, as hereinafter provided. [25 G. A., ch. 27; 24 G. A., ch. 18; 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 2.]

Constitutionality: Under the constitution of 1846, held, that counties might, by a public vote, be authorized to issue bonds in aid of a railway to be constructed through the county: Dubuque County v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 4 G. Gr., 1.

Also, held, under the provisions of Code of '51, that counties had authority by popular vote to issue bonds in subscription for the stock of a railway: Clapp v. Cedar County, 5–15; Ring v. Johnson County, 6–265.

Where such bonds were issued, held, that they were valid in the hands of a purchaser, and he need not go behind the records of the county to ascertain whether authority had been properly conferred upon the county officers to issue such bonds: Clapp v. Cedar County, 5–15.

Under the cases holding that the county had authority to subscribe for stock in aid of railway corporations, held, that irregularities in submitting the proposition to subscribe to such stock to the electors of the county might be cured by a legalizing act of the legislature: McMillen v. Boyles, 6–304; S. C., 6–391.

Held, also, that the county might vote taxes in aid of railroads: Games v. Robb, 8–193.

Where a county voted the issuance of bonds in aid of a railroad under the agreement that the county should receive certificates of stock of like amount, held, that delivery of such certificates was not a condition precedent to the delivery of the bonds: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 9–288.

It was held also that the power to subscribe for stock of a railroad and issue bonds in payment therefor might be conferred upon the county by the legislature, and, if conferred, the bonds issued in pursuance of such authority, or duly legalized if issued originally without authority, would be valid: Stokes v. Scott County, 10–166.

But, held, that a county had no authority without legislative grant to issue bonds in subscription for stock of a railway company: Ibid.

And, held, that the case above cited, upholding the authority of the county to issue bonds or vote a tax in aid of railroads, were erroneously decided, and that such power was not conferred by the provisions of the Code of '51: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that where, in the pursuance of the submission of such a proposition to vote, and the adoption thereof by the voters of the county, bonds were being issued which had not yet passed into the hands of purchasers, an injunction should be granted to restrain their issuance: Ibid.; State ex rel. v. Wapello County, 13–388.

Further, held, that the legislature had no constitutional power to authorize the levy of taxes by counties, cities or townships in aid of railroads: State ex rel. v. Wapello County, 13–388; McMillan v. Boyles, 14–107; Smith v. Henry County, 15–385; Ten Eyck v. Mayor of Keokuk, 15–486; Hanson v. Vernon, 27–28; King v. Wilson, 1 Dillon, 555.

But under a subsequent similar statute, held, that such provisions were not unconstitutional, overruling the previous cases: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30–9; McGregor & S. C. R. Co. v. Birdsall, 30–255; Bonnifield v. Bidwell, 32–149; Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 47–511.

The present statute to the same effect is also upheld: Snell v. Leonard, 55–553; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67–728.

The fact that the company in favor of which the tax is voted is organized as a railroad and telegraph company will not affect its validity: Snell v. Leonard, 55–553.

Repeal of statute: Where, prior to the repeal of the act authorizing the levy of taxes in aid of a railroad in pursuance of a popular vote, the company in favor of which the tax is voted has expended money in constructing its road, relying upon such tax, it has a right, notwithstanding the repeal of the statute, to have the tax levied and collected in its favor: Burges v. Mabin, 70–633.

Where a tax was voted in December, 1883, and the law under which it was voted was repealed in April following, and after the voting of the tax the company engaged as actively in the preparation for the work of construction as it could well do at that season of the year, and in the opening of the spring prosecuted its works with energy and complied with the contract on its part, held, that the expenditures and work on the faith of the tax voted were sufficient to entitle the company to such tax: Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co., 78–48.

The right to the tax and penalties and interest thereon is not taken away by the repeal of the statute under which the tax is voted, but repeal of the statute terminates the right to additional penalties: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69–648.

The statute of limitations, as against an action to enforce a tax voted under a statute afterwards repealed, held to commence to run only in accordance with provisions of new statute: Harwood v. Brownell, 48–657.

Where a railroad was constructed by another corporation than that in whose behalf the tax was voted, and it did not appear that such construction was made in reliance upon the tax voted, or that the right to the tax was transferred to the other contracting road, held, that such tax could not be levied or collected after repeal of statute under which it was voted: Barthel v. Meader, 72–125.

Cities under special charter may vote a tax as here provided: Bartemeyer v. Rohlfs, 71–582.

As to taxation of railroads, see §§ 1334–1341.

SEC. 2085. Petition—notice—submission—certificate—levy—collection. When a petition is presented to the trustees of any township or the council of any town or city, signed by a majority of the resident freehold taxpayers of such township, town or city, asking that the question of aiding any railroad company incorporated under the laws of the state in the construction of a projected railroad within it be submitted to the voters thereof, it shall be the duty of the trustees or council, as the case may be, immediately to give notice of a special election, by publication in some newspaper printed in said township, town or city, if any there be, and, if not, then in some newspaper published in the county, and also by posting copies of said notice in five public places in such township, town or city at least ten days before such election, which shall state the time and place of holding the same, the name of the company, and the line of the road proposed to be aided, the rate per cent. of the tax to be levied, whether one-half thereof shall be collected the first year and one-half the following year, or whether the whole is to be collected in one year, the amount of work required to be done and when and where the same shall be done, to what point said railroad shall be fully completed, and any other conditions which shall be performed before such tax or any part thereof shall become due; and in no case shall such tax become due until such railroad is fully completed according to the conditions in said notice. The trustees or council, as the case may be, shall cause to be prepared the form of the proposition to be submitted. The proposition shall be printed and placed upon the ballots and the election shall be conducted in the same manner as provided with respect to like or similar propositions in the chapter on elections; and if a majority of the votes polled be for the adoption of the proposition, then the clerk of the township, city or town, or the clerk of election, shall forthwith certify to the county auditor the result thereof, the rate per cent. of tax voted, the year or years during which the same is to be collected, the name of the company to which voted, and the time, terms and conditions upon which the same, when collected, is to be paid under the conditions and stipulations in said notice, together with an exact copy of the notice under which the election was held, which the county auditor shall at once cause to be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds; the expense thereof, and of publishing the notice, and all the expenses of the election, shall be paid by the railway company to which it is proposed to vote the tax. When such certificate has been made and recorded, the board of supervisors of the county shall, at the time of levying the ordinary tax next following, levy such taxes as are voted under the provisions hereof, as shown by said certificate, and cause the same to be placed on the tax lists of the proper township, town or city, indicating in their order thereupon when and in what proportion the same are to be collected, and upon what conditions the same are to be paid to the railway company, a certified copy of which order shall accompany the tax lists. The taxes shall be collected at the time or times specified in the order, and in the same manner, and subject to the same laws after they are collectible, as other taxes, or as may be stated in the petition and notices for the election, except as otherwise provided. [20 G. A., ch. 159, § 3.]

Petition for tax: A resident taxpayer of the township may sign the petition for an election by the township to vote a tax in aid of a railroad, although he is also a resident and a voter of an incorporated town or city within the limits of such township: Ryan v. Varga, 37–78.

Under a previous statute, held, that one-third of the taxpayers and not one-third of the resident taxpayers must sign the petition: Zorger v. Township of Rapids, 36–175.

Action of trustees: The action of the township trustees in calling an election in pursuance of the petition, held to be of a judicial or quasi-judicial character, so that the question whether such action was illegal or without jurisdiction might be determined on certiorari: Jordan v. Hayne, 36–9.

The trustees may decide this question upon their own knowledge: Ibid.

Where a proper petition was presented and acted upon at a called meeting of the trustees of which one member had no notice on account of being out of the township, held, that the action of the majority was valid: Young v. Webster City & S. W. R. Co., 75–140.

Although the petition is not signed by the requisite number of taxpayers, if the trustees have decided it to be sufficient and ordered an election, and the tax has been voted and levied, the validity of the tax cannot be assailed for such defect in the petition. The defect can only be taken advantage of in some method provided for direct review: Ryan v. Varga, 37–78; West v. Whitaker, 37–598.

But where the finding of the trustees was that the petition was signed by one-half of the resident freehold taxpayers, when the statute required that it be signed by a majority, held, that although they ordered an election, subsequent proceedings were void: Slack v. Blackburn, 64–373.

Township embracing incorporated town: If the township embraces an incorporated town, and it is proposed that a township shall aid in the construction of the road, the voters in the corporation are entitled to vote at such election: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67–728.

Notice: The statute provides that the notice shall specify to what point the road shall be fully completed before the tax can be collected, and if the notice does not so specify the election will be void: Allard v. Guston, 70–731.

The statute prescribes no time during which the publication shall be made; it is to be done immediately, but the time will depend upon the day of the issue of the paper. The statute does not require the newspaper publication to be made ten days before the election: Johnson v. Kessler, 76–411.

Where the notice specified that the road should be built between a certain city and a point on another road so as to make a continuous line of railroad from said city to certain coal mines of the latter road, held, that the construction of a road from the city to the junction with the other road was all that was required: Young v. Webster City & S. W. R. Co., 75–140.

Where the notice does not state to what point the road is to be fully completed before the tax shall become due and payable, it is not sufficient: Kleise v. Galusha, 78–310.

Ballots: Where the ballots upon the question of voting a tax in aid of a railroad were "taxation" and "no taxation," held, that the form of ballots was sufficient: West v. Whitaker, 37–598.

In a particular case, held, that the ballots were sufficient although they contained matter not necessary: Cattell v. Lowry, 45–478.

Undue influence at election: Where it appeared that an agent authorized by the company for whom the tax was being voted to represent it in procuring the voting of the tax for a compensation agreed upon made promises to voters that all resident taxpayers who voted for the tax would receive fifty cents on the dollar on their certificates when issued, and thereby induced some of the voters to change their minds as to the vote which they would cast with reference to such tax, held, that the tax was thereby rendered illegal: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67–728.

Where the submission of the proposition and its adoption are procured by false statements and fraudulent representations of the company and its agents the tax cannot be enforced: Sinnett v. Moles, 38–25.

Expenses of election in townships for the purpose of voting aid to railroads are not chargeable to the county: McBride v. Hardin County, 58–219.

Certificate as to result of election: The certificates of the clerk of election required by the statute in order to authorize the board of supervisors to levy a tax should set out the conditions under which the tax was voted, and it is not sufficient to attach and refer to the notice of the election in which such conditions are stated: Minnesota & I. S. R. Co. v. Hiams, 53–501.

Where the township clerk filed with the county auditor such records of proceedings as showed what was required to be certified by such clerk, held, that the certificate was sufficient to support the tax, although not contained in one paper; a substantial compliance with the law being deemed sufficient: Shontz v. Evans, 40–139.

Where there is a certificate which is defective, and the board of supervisors has determined that the certificate sufficiently complies with the law, the correctness of such decision cannot be collaterally attacked by an action to enjoin the collection of the tax: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67–728.

Where by mistake of the clerk the certificate has been improperly issued the collection of the tax may be restrained by injunction: Cattell v. Lowry, 45–478.

Levy: Where certain taxes were properly voted and certified, and the board of supervisors levied "all . . . railroad taxes that have been certified according to law," and the railroad tax in question was accordingly placed upon the tax list, held, that the levy was sufficient: Casady v. Lowry, 49–523.

The levy of a railroad aid tax held sufficient in a particular case, it being mentioned in the resolution enumerating the different taxes as "railroad tax," and being made certain as to amount by reference to the proper records of proceedings of the township for voting such tax: Shontz v. Evans, 40–139.

Where a committee of the board of supervisors recommended in a report that certain taxes be levied, which included the tax in question, and it appeared from the record that the report was adopted, the names of those voting in favor thereof being given, held, that the levy was sufficient: West v. Whitaker, 37–598.

A levy of taxes in different townships is to be considered as distinct, even though such separate levies are made by one resolution: Woodworth v. Gibbs, 61–398.

The action of the board in making the levy is not judicial but purely ministerial; their action in so doing may be questioned in a collateral proceeding, and held void for want of power to do it at the time it was done: Scott v. Union County, 63–583.

Authority to vote and levy the tax rests upon a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute in the performance of the conditions upon which the authority is granted: Allard v. Guston, 70–731.

Under 12 G. A., ch. 48, held, that no levy by the board of a tax properly voted by a township was necessary, and that therefore such levy could not be compelled by mandamus: Chicago, D. & M. R. Co. v. Olmstead, 46–316.

Where a tax in aid of a railway was voted in March, held, that the levy was properly made upon the assessment of the same year, although the books were not returned until after that date: Parsons v. Childs, 36–108.

Without fixing any definite rule for all cases the court held (by a majority opinion) that where a tax was voted in December, 1883, it was properly levied on the assessment of that year: Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co., 78–48.

As to levy, see Bartemeyer v. Rohlfs, 71–582.

Entry of tax on tax list, held not necessary under 12 G. A., ch. 48: Harwood v. Brownell, 48–657.

Validity: Where the validity of such a tax has been adjudicated in an action against the treasurer and the board of supervisors by parties claiming the tax, it cannot, in the absence of collusion or fraud, be again called in question in an action by a taxpayer against the treasurer to enjoin its collection: Lyman v. Faris, 53–498.

Collection of tax: Although it may be the duty of the treasurer to proceed to collect the tax when due, he could not, under previous statutes, be compelled by the company to do so until it had showed itself entitled thereto: Harwood v. Case, 37–692.

Under a subsequent statute the tax did not become delinquent until the company was entitled to the tax and the whole amount thereof, and as to taxes levied before the passage of such act, held, though retrospective, it was not invalid: Ibid.

Where it appeared that the company was entitled to only a part of the tax, and such part was not claimed merely as an installment, held, that the part claimed would not be regarded as an installment. but in satisfaction of the whole tax, and as such might be collected: Casady v. Lowry, 49–523.

The county has no interest in the tax collected, and if it is to be refunded it should be refunded by the treasurer without any warrant or order of the board of supervisors. In the case of misappropriation by the treasurer the loss would not fall upon the county: Barnes v. Marshall County, 56–20.

A claim for the refunding of a portion of the tax is against the fund and not against the county: Ibid.

The county cannot be made liable for any part of a railroad tax paid into the county treasury. Where a railroad tax illegally collected remains in the treasury the proper officer may be compelled to refund the same by an action against him, but an action for the amount cannot be maintained against the county: Eyerly v. Jasper County, 72–149.

Where such taxes do not remain in the hands of the treasurer as a distinct fund, but have been placed in the general fund and expended in paying ordinary indebtedness of the county, judgment may be rendered against the county therefor: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74–24.

In an action of mandamus to compel a county treasurer to pay over to plaintiff certain taxes collected for its use by his predecessor in office, and transferred by such predecessor to the county fund by order of the board of supervisors, held, that the transfer to the county fund was such an appropriation of the money as to release defendant from all liability to plaintiff on account of it: Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Becket, 75-183.

As to the effect of alienation of the road upon the right to a tax, see notes to § 2088.

Conditions and stipulations: No contract, stipulation or reservation could, under the previous act, be set up to defeat the tax unless it was in writing; Muscatine Western R. Co. v. Horton, 38–33; Harwood v. Quinby, 44–385.

The omission to state in the levy the condition upon which it is to be paid to the company will not render the levy invalid when the condition was complied with before the levy: Burges v. Mabin, 70–633.

Where a condition on which the taxes in aid of a railroad was that "the road should be built and in operation" by the time fixed, held, that such condition was sufficiently complied with if the trains were running by the time specified, although it was necessary in order to the completion of the road that it be ballasted and additional ties put in: Muscatine Western R. Co. v. Horton, 38–33.

Where the road is completed in accordance with the conditions of a written contract between the company and the township voting the tax, a failure of the company to comply with the just expectations of the voters which have not been embodied in such contract will not forfeit the tax: Ibid.

Where one of the conditions on which a tax was voted was that the road should be constructed and operated, and a depot located within a town named, on or before a certain day, and by that date the depot was partially erected and a track was laid for the distance of a mile from such depot, and the road was operated, although not in a first-class manner, the track not being ballasted, held, that there was a sufficient compliance with the conditions of the tax to entitle the railway to the same: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67–728.

In a particular case, held, that the construction of the road was not such as to constitute a compliance with the conditions on which the aid tax had been voted: Cox v. Forest City & S. R. Co., 66–289.

Where a tax was voted to be expended in three townships mentioned, held, that it appearing that more than the amount of tax voted had been expended in the township in question, the company was entitled to the tax in that township although nothing had been expended in the other two townships: Merrill v. Welsher, 50–61.

Also, held, that the fact that the line of the road was changed so that it did not pass through one of the townships specified, would not prevent the collection of the tax in the township through which it did pass: Ibid.

Also, held, under a special statute that a mere suspension of work and failure to build the road for the period of four years mentioned in such statute was not the nonfulfillment of a special contract or agreement as therein specified, and did not amount to a forfeiture of the tax: Ibid.

Where the articles of incorporation of the company declared its purpose to be to construct a railroad by the way of Newton, in Newton township, and the petition and notice for the voting of a tax in that township specified that it was for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the road to be expended in Newton and another township named, held, that without the construction of the line to Newton the tax in Newton township could not be enforced, although double the amount of such tax had been expended in the other township: Lamb v. Anderson, 54–190.

Where the articles of a corporation in whose favor a tax was voted specified its objects to be to construct, operate and maintain a railroad from Dubuque in a westerly and northwesterly direction through Iowa, Minnesota and Dakota to a junction with the Northern Pacific, and the road was accordingly constructed, extending from Dubuque to St. Paul, the reaching of the point specified not being a condition of the payment of the tax, held, that there was not such failure to comply with conditions as to work a forfeiture: Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co., 78–48.

It is a sufficient designation of the terminal point of a proposed line to state that it is to run in a certain direction to the connection with another line. It is sufficient completion of the line that the track is laid and cars run thereon: Yarish v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co., 72–556.

Where a paper was signed by the president of a company, bearing the seal of the corporation, and was circulated among the electors on the day of election, containing certain stipulations in regard to the construction of the road for which the tax was being voted, held, that the provisions of such paper became binding upon the company: Meeker v. Ashley, 56–188.

Where the president of the company made statements at a public meeting called to discuss the voting of a tax in aid of a railway, which tended to induce taxpayers to believe that the road, if built, would be located upon a line already surveyed and known to them, and afterwards the road was built upon a different line, less advantageous to the taxpayers, held, that the collection of the tax could be enjoined: Curry v. Supervisors, 61–71.

A taxpayer cannot restrain the collection of taxes voted in aid of the construction of the road on the ground that the company has not complied with the conditions of the notice, and completed the road within the time prescribed: Johnson v. Kessler, 76–411.

When a railroad company expends large sums of money in the construction of its road, taxpayers, before the completion of the road, having made no objection, are estopped to deny the validity of the tax: Ibid.

As to notice, see Bartemeyer v. Rohlfs, 71–582.

Narrow gauge: Where a tax was voted in aid of a railroad between certain termini and a narrow gauge road was constructed, held, that that fact would not defeat the company's right to the tax, it not having been specified in the notice of election what the gauge of the road should be, and it appearing that the road as constructed answered the purpose of the taxpayers: Meader v. Lowry, 45–684.

And in such case, held, that the township trustees were not guilty of any fraud in certifying the construction of the road as contemplated in the notice submitting the question of levying the tax: Ibid.

The construction of a narrow gauge road having sufficient capacity for all the business to be done, and capable of doing it as economically as a road of any other gauge, is a sufficient compliance with the provisions for the voting of the tax, where no stipulation as to the gauge is made, to entitle the company to the tax voted: Casady v. Lowry, 49–523.

Estoppel: Where conditions and representations have not been complied with, the taxpayer will not be estopped from enjoining the collection of the tax by the fact that the road has been built, where it appears that notice was given to the company before the construction of the road upon the new line that the tax would be contested on the ground of fraud and false representations: Curry v. Supervisors, 61–71.

Where it is not shown that the party objecting to the validity of a railroad aid tax had any knowledge thereof at the time it was expended, he will not be estopped from questioning its validity afterward: Truesdell v. Green, 57–215.

Purchase or leasing of another road: The leasing or purchase and operation of a line of road as a part or whole of the line for the construction of which the tax is voted will not constitute a compliance with the agreement to construct such road: Lamb v. Anderson, 54–190; Meeker v. Ashley, 56–188; Iowa, M. & N. P. R. Co. v. Schenck, 56–628; Lawrence v. Smith, 57–701.

Alienation: Where the company to which a tax has been voted has, upon the faith of the tax, constructed the road and put it in operation, such company becomes entitled to the tax, and this right is not forfeited by a subsequent alienation of the road to another company: Parsons v. Childs, 36–108.

The fact that a road in aid of which taxes are voted is sold at or before the time of its completion to another company will not defeat the right of the company in whose favor the tax is voted to receive the same: Muscatine Western R. Co. v. Horton, 38–33.

The alienation of the road before the payment of the tax, so that shares of stock in the road for which the tax was voted can no longer be issued to those holding certificates for the payment of such taxes as provided by statute, is a ground for setting such tax aside and releasing the taxpayer from his burden: Manning v. Mathews, 66–675; Blunt v. Carpenter, 68–265.

The right of the taxpayer to receive such certificates of stock in exchange for his receipts for taxes paid cannot be set aside by agreement or waiver: Blunt v. Carpenter, 68–265.

But a consolidation under terms securing to the taxpayer equivalent stock in the consolidated company will not avoid the tax (see § 2068): Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co., 78–48.

But the lease of the road in favor of which the tax is voted in perpetuity to another road, by which the latter agrees to operate the line and pay the lessor company a per cent. of the gross earnings, it not appearing that the contract of lease is inequitable or not beneficial to the company constructing the road, will not deprive the company of the right to the tax: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67–728.

The county having collected a railroad aid tax cannot resist payment of it to the company on the ground that the company has sold and conveyed its property and franchises. Such a defense can only be interposed by the taxpayer: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74–24.

Change of line: The fact that, after a tax in aid of a railroad is voted, the location of the line in a part of its course is changed, which change, however, is not in conflict with any of the conditions upon which the tax is voted, will not affect its validity: Shontz v. Evans, 40–139.

A private individual cannot, on account of private injuries to him alone, maintain an action of mandamus to compel a railway company which has received the benefit of taxes voted by the public to operate its line as it was originally located: Crane v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 74–330.

SEC. 2086. Notice—conditions—limit of tax. The stipulations and conditions in the notices prescribed in this chapter must conform to those set forth in the petition asking for the election; and the aggregate amount of tax voted in any city, town or township shall not exceed five per cent. of the assessed value of the property therein, respectively. [25 G. A., ch. 27; 24 G. A., ch. 18; 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 4.]

Under the statutory provision that a township, town or city, having voted a tax to the amount of five per centum upon its taxable property in aid of railroads, cannot impose another tax upon property for that purpose, held, that the power conferred to levy such taxes ceases upon a levy of taxes to that amount, but that taxes duly levied which have been abandoned or become uncollectible cannot be taken into account: Dumphy v. Supervisors of Humboldt County, 58–273.

An increase in value of taxable property after levy of the five per centum of taxes does not confer the power to make an additional levy: Ibid.

Taxes levied under a prior act providing for such taxation, although such act contained the same limitation as the present act, cannot be taken into account in determining whether the limit fixed in the present act has been exceeded: Scott v. Union County, 63–583.

Where, at the time of voting the tax under one act, a prior tax of five per cent. stood uncanceled, but before the levy of the tax thus voted the prior tax was canceled, held, that the second tax was valid. The statute should be construed as if it provided that the aggregate amount of tax to be voted and levied shall not exceed five per cent.: Williams v. Poor, 65–410.

Penalties accruing on a railroad aid tax are not to be taken into account in determining whether the amount of the tax exceeds the limit fixed by statute: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69–648; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hartshorn, 30 Fed., 541.

SEC. 2087. Money paid out—certificate. The moneys collected under the provisions of this chapter shall be paid out by the county treasurer to the treasurer of the railway company for whom the same was voted, upon the orders of the president or managing director thereof, at any time after the trustees of such township or council of such town or city voting the same, or a majority thereof, shall have certified to the county treasurer that the conditions required of the railway company and set forth in the notice for the special election have been complied with, which certificate said township trustees or council of such town or city shall make when conditions have been sufficiently complied with to entitle the railway company thereto, or when the conditions are fully complied with on the part of the railway company; but if the costs and expenses of holding the election and of recording the certificates have not been paid, then the treasurer shall first deduct from the moneys collected the amount thereof, and pay same to the parties entitled thereto. [20 G. A., ch. 159, § 5.]

Fee for collection: The treasurer is not authorized to deduct from the tax collected three per cent. for its collection. Sec. 490 does not authorize such deduction: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74–24.

Certificate: The certificate of the township trustees of the compliance of the company with the terms on which the tax is voted need only be properly signed. It need not appear that there is a previous resolution or order authorizing its issuance: Merrill v. Welsher, 50–61.

Under a certificate in such case that the company had "so complied with the act as to entitle it to draw the sum of," etc., held, that as the company could not have been entitled to draw any sum until it had complied with the act, the certificate was sufficient: Casady v. Lowry, 49–523.

The certificate of the trustees is not a judicial act and is not conclusive, its only purpose being to authorize the treasurer to pay over the funds collected. It has nothing to do with the treasurer's right to collect the tax: Lamb v. Anderson, 54–190.

The duty of the trustees as to giving a certificate of completion of a road is only to determine whether it is completed, and they should not refuse to give it on the ground of fraud in the election, or in the certificate of the engineers: Harwood v. Quinby, 44–385.

An action to enforce the duty imposed on the trustees to make such certificate does not become barred as to a tax already voted until three years after the passage of the act limiting the time for making such certificate: Ibid.

The fact that the certificate of the trustees is given at a place outside of their township will not render it absolutely void: Meader v. Lowry, 45–684.

Also, held, that the proper trustees to make the certificate were those of the township which had voted the tax, although afterward portions of the township were organized into or transferred to another township: Ibid.

Assignment: The claim for a railroad aid tax is assignable: Merrill v. Welsher, 50–61.

The assignment of such a tax does not discharge the assignee of the equities between the company in favor of which the tax was voted and the taxpayers, and in a suit by a taxpayer to invalidate such a tax because of the non-fulfillment of conditions precedent on the part of the railroad company, the company in whose favor the tax was voted and the assignee of such tax are necessary parties. So, also, the township trustees and the county treasurer are to be made parties defendant: Sully v. Drennan, 113 U. S., 287.

Trust fund: Where money is paid in aid of the construction of railroads, such money in the hands of the treasurer is a trust fund, and the taxpayer and the railroad company are beneficiaries: Eyerly v. Supervisors of Jasper County, 77–470.

And where an action was commenced to test the legality of a tax as voted in aid of a railroad, held, that while such action was pending, the statute of limitations did not commence to run against an action of mandamus to compel the supervisors to refund the money: Ibid.

A railroad company entitled to the proceeds of a tax paid into the treasury may recover the amount thereof on the bond of the treasurer to whom the money is paid. The company cannot maintain mandamus against the successor of such treasurer, who has never received the money collected: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. R. Co. v. Cowan, 77–535.

SEC. 2088. Certificates of taxes exchangeable for stock or bonds. The county treasurer when required shall, in addition to a tax receipt, issue to each taxpayer, on the payment of any taxes voted under the provisions of this chapter, a certificate showing the amount of tax paid, the name of the railway company entitled thereto, and when the same was paid; and he may charge twenty-five cents for each certificate issued. Said certificates shall be assignable, and, when presented by any person holding the legal title thereto to the president, managing director, treasurer or secretary of the railroad company receiving the taxes paid, as shown by such certificates, in sums of one hundred dollars or more of taxes, it shall issue or cause to be issued to said person the amount of stock of the company desiring the benefit from said taxes, to the amount of said certificate or certificates, and if the taxes paid as shown by said certificate or certificates amount in the aggregate to more or less than any certain number of shares of stock, then the holder thereof shall be entitled to receive the full number of shares of stock covered by said certificates, and may make up in money the balance of any share when the certificates held by him are not equal to one full share of such stock, which stock for such purpose shall be estimated at par. When it shall be proposed in the petition and notice calling an election to issue first mortgage bonds not exceeding the sum of eight thousand dollars per mile for a railroad of three feet gauge, and not exceeding the sum of eighteen thousand and five hundred dollars per mile for the ordinary four feet eight and one-half inch gauge in lieu of stock, it shall be lawful to issue bonds of the denomination of one hundred dollars, in the same manner as is provided for the issue of stock, and in such case the petition and notice shall state the amount of bonds per mile to be issued, the rate of interest, and the time of payment of the interest and principal thereof. [23 G. A., ch. 19, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 6.]

If the company to which a tax has been voted transfers its property and franchises so that the taxpayer cannot secure the stock to which he is entitled, the collection of the tax cannot be enforced. The taxpayer cannot be compelled to take stock in another corporation, even though more valuable: Manning v. Matthews, 66–675; Blunt v. Carpenter, 68–265.

The taxpayer must be held to a knowledge of the law at the time the tax was voted by which (§ 2068) the company has the right to transfer the road, and therefore the obligation of payment by taxpayers will depend upon the readiness of the purchasing company to deliver the stock, where there is a condition in the contract of transfer by which stock in the consolidated line of equal or greater value than that in the company in whose favor the tax is voted is to be issued: Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co., 78–48.

An action by taxpayers who are entitled to stock for taxes paid to declare stock and bonds issued by the company fraudulent must be brought within five years after knowledge of the issuance of such stock and bonds; and as to the bonds a recording of the mortgage securing them will impart notice of their issuance: Allen v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 90–473.

SEC. 2089. Liability of directors. The board of directors of any railway company receiving taxes voted in aid thereof under the provisions of this chapter, or any member thereof, who shall vote to bond, mortgage or in any manner incumber said road to an amount exceeding the sum of eight thousand dollars per mile for a railroad of three feet gauge, or exceeding the sum of eighteen thousand five hundred dollars per mile for the ordinary four feet eight and one-half inch gauge, not including in either case any debt for ordinary operating expenses, shall be liable to the stockholders or either of them for double the amount, estimated at its par value, of the stock by him held, if the same should be rendered of less value or lost thereby. [23 G. A., ch. 19, § 2; 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 7.]

Incumbrances placed on a road prior to the payment of taxes by the taxpayers might be a ground for refusing to pay such taxes, but are not prohibited by this section, which is intended to apply to cases where bonds are issued in excess of the limits named after the company has received taxes voted in its aid, and in which, therefore, the stockholder has no other remedy: Walker v. Birchard, 82–388.

Under particular facts, held, that any fraud on the part of the officers of the company in issuing stock or bonds might have been discovered by due diligence of taxpayers who were entitled to stock and that delay in bringing action for the statutory period would bar recovery: Allen v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 90–473.

SEC. 2090. Forfeiture of tax. Should the taxes voted in aid of any railroad under the provisions of this chapter remain in the county treasury for more than one year after the same have been collected, the right to them by the railroad company shall be forfeited, and the persons who paid the same entitled to receive back from the county treasurer their pro rata shares thereof remaining, and in all cases where any taxes have been voted or levied upon the real or personal property in any township, town or city to aid in the construction of any railroad, and the road in aid of which they were voted or levied has not been built, completed or operated into or through such township, town or city, it shall be the duty of the board of supervisors of the county where said taxes have been voted and levied and still remain on the tax books to give the railway company in aid of which the tax was voted at least thirty days' notice in writing, to be served like original notices, of their intention to cancel such taxes, and thereupon to cause the same to be canceled and stricken from the tax books of the county, which cancellation shall remove all liens created by the levy thereof. In all cases where the railway company to whom taxes have been voted neglects or refuses to receive such taxes, or to require or permit the same to be collected and certificates therefor to be issued, for the period of one year after they become due and collectible, and in all cases where taxes have been voted in aid of any railroad, and the conditions upon which the same were voted have not in fact been complied with, and the time in which said conditions were to be fulfilled has expired, the same shall be forfeited, and the county officers of the county in which they have been levied and entered upon the tax books shall enter cancellation thereof upon the proper records; and in all cases where any taxes to aid in the construction of any railroad may be voted upon the inducement or promise offered on the part of said railroad company, or any duly authorized agent thereof, for any rebates or exemptions from said tax or any part thereof, or any agreed price to be paid for the stock that may be issued in lieu of said tax, or a division of said tax, or any portion or percentage thereof, with any of the voters or taxpayers as an inducement to procure said tax to be voted, all taxes so procured to be voted shall be void. [20 G. A., ch. 159, § 8.]

The fact that a portion of the tax voted in aid of the railroad has been paid, and, after having lain in the treasury two years uncalled for, has been refunded to the taxpayer as provided by statute, does not operate as a forfeiture of taxes not so paid: Merrill v. Welsher, 50–61.

Where the road has been completed and there has been a continuing demand of taxes received by the treasurer, the right to recover taxes received will not be defeated by the fact that they have remained in the treasury more than two years. The provision was intended to secure the speedy and prompt building of the road: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74–24.

Under a former statute, held, that the county had no interest in the tax collected; that it was to be paid to the county treasurer, and in proper case should be refunded by him without any warrant or order of the board of supervisors; that in case of misappropriation by the county treasurer the loss would not fall upon the county, and that the claim of plaintiff for the refunding of his proportion of the tax forfeited was strictly against the fund, and not against the county: Barnes v. Marshall County, 56–20.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence did not show that taxpayers were induced to sign the petition and to vote for the tax, upon any offer or promise of exemption from payment: Young v. Webster City & S. W. R. Co., 75–140.

Where the county treasurer, having in his hands money paid by the taxpayers under the levy of a railroad aid tax, disbursed the same in part to the railroad company and in part to a person claiming to be the assignee of such company and then went out of office, held, that an action of mandamus against the board of supervisors was not the proper remedy, the taxes not having been paid into the county fund nor used by the county: Eyerly v. Board of Supervisors, 81–189.

Under a previous statute, held, that the provision that taxes remaining in the treasury more than two years after collection should be deemed forfeited was applicable equally in a case where the company had complied with the conditions of the vote, by building its road, as to a case where such taxes remained uncalled for by reason of a failure to perform such conditions: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co., v. Elseffer, 84–510.

Held, also, that the courts would not hesitate in upholding such a provision on the ground that it was in the nature of a forfeiture, it not being a forfeiture in the usual signification of that term: Ibid.

Also held, that under the facts of the case, the company could not be relieved from the provisions of the statute on the ground of a mistake on the part of the officers of the company as to its being entitled to the tax: Ibid.

Also held, that this provision of the statute was not repealed by a subsequent statute on the same subject: Ibid.

SEC. 2091. Taxes paid in labor or supplies. Nothing contained in this chapter shall preclude any taxpayer who may contract with a railroad company for which taxes may be voted to pay his tax, or any part thereof, in labor upon the line of said railroad, or in material for its construction, or supplies furnished or money paid for the construction thereof, in pursuance of the terms and conditions stipulated in the notices of election, in lieu of a payment to the county treasurer. Upon presenting to the county treasurer a receipt from such railroad company or its duly authorized agent, specifying the amount of such payment, the same shall be credited by the treasurer on his tax, with the same effect as though paid to him in money, and when such receipts have been presented and credited they shall have the same validity in his settlement with the board of supervisors as the orders from the railroad company provided for in this chapter. Laborers shall have a lien upon any tax voted in aid of a railroad company for the amount due them for labor performed in the construction of said railroad. [Same, § 9.]

Where the company issued to a taxpayer a receipt for taxes paid directly to the company, to be presented to the county treasurer in payment of the taxes, held, that such receipts were in the nature of advance receipts for the taxes, and that no action thereon against the company or the assignor of such instrument could be maintained thereon, at least until demand has been made on the treasurer that they be received for taxes: Lisle v. Iowa, M. & N. P. R. Co., 54–499.

RELOCATION OF LINE.

SEC. 2092. Petition. Any railroad desiring to change or remove the line of its road, after the same has been permanently located and constructed, may file a petition in the district court in any county wherein the change or removal is proposed to be made, describing with reasonable accuracy that portion of its line which it seeks to have changed or removed, and asking the court to grant authority to make such change or removal. All trustees, mortgagees and other lien holders, and all townships, cities and counties which have aided by taxation to build the road, must be made defendants and served with notice as in other actions. [16 G. A., ch. 118, § 1.]

SEC. 2093. Notice. A public notice to all whom it may concern of the time of filing such petition, the object thereof, and the term of court at which the application will be made for authority to make the change, and requiring all persons desiring the repayment of money or return of property, as in this chapter provided, to appear and present their claims therefor, must be published in a newspaper printed in each county in which the change is to be made, for a period of ten successive weeks before the term of court at which the application is to be heard. The court may order any additional notice or publication that it may think proper. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2094. Conditions. No railway company shall be allowed to change or remove its line of road, after a permanent location and construction, without repaying all moneys, and restoring all property, or its value, which were donated to the company building the same exclusively in consideration of said railroads being located and constructed on such line, to the parties donating the same, their heirs or assigns, nor without first procuring the consent of all parties having liens upon the railroad, and of any township, city or county that by taxation or by the issuing of bonds has contributed money to aid in the construction thereof; but the consent of such township, city or county shall be necessary only with reference to the change to be made within its own territorial limits. [Same, § 3.]

The obligation to operate a railway is incurred by accepting taxes: State v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71–410.

SEC. 2095. Order of court. If the court finds that notice has been given, and the consent of the proper parties has been obtained, it shall ascertain the amount of money or property contributed to the company by any person or party thereto or appearing therein that was so contributed exclusively in consideration that the road should be located on the line from which it is proposed to remove it, which shall be repaid in case of money, and returned if property, or its value fixed, and in either case shall render judgment therefor, and may also enter a decree authorizing, if the public interest demands it, the removal of or change in the line of said road upon condition that all judgments above provided for be first paid or satisfied, and foreclosing all persons or parties not appearing in the action, and forever barring them from asserting any claim against such company on account of the contributions or donations herein mentioned. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 2096. Effect. All mortgage liens or other incumbrances on the line of road which the company is authorized by the court to change shall attach to the line to which said road is removed, and have the same priority over other liens that they held on the original line. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 2097. Notice to township trustees—vested rights. For the purpose of this chapter, the trustees of each township shall be served with notice and shall represent and act for it. No vested right of any person or persons living on and along the line of any railroad thus removed shall be defeated or affected by the removal. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 2098. Cuts and banks. When any railway company shall take up its track and relocate the same under the provisions of this chapter, it shall within two years therefrom fill up the cuts and level down the banks, or cause the same to be done; but the provisions of this section shall not apply to any railroad which has its initial point in any town upon the Mississippi river, and which had in the year 1859 sixty-three miles and no more of completed track from such initial point, and this exemption shall only apply to the sixty-three miles of road from the initial point thereof. [17 G. A., ch. 152, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 118, § 7.]

UNION RAILWAY DEPOTS.

SEC. 2099. Corporations formed. Any number of persons or railway corporations, or both persons and railway corporations, may form a body corporate under the laws of this state relating to corporations for pecuniary profit, for the purpose of acquiring, establishing, constructing and maintaining at any place in the state union station-houses or depots for freight or passengers, or both, with necessary offices for express, baggage or postal rooms in the same or separate buildings, and railroad tracks and other appurtenances of such depots. Any railroad company operating a road in the state, or interested therein, whether organized under its laws or elsewhere, may become a stockholder in such corporation. A copy of the by-laws, if any are adopted, shall be posted in the passenger or waiting rooms of the depot and in the office of the company. [20 G. A., ch. 139, § 1.]

SEC. 2100. Powers. Every corporation formed under the provisions of the preceding section shall have power to take and hold, for the purposes therein mentioned, such real estate as may be found necessary by the railroad commissioners for the location of its depot and approaches, which it may acquire by purchase or condemnation as provided for the taking of private property for works of internal improvement. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2101. Connecting tracks. Such corporations, with the consent of the council of any city or town in which any such depot is located, shall have the right to lay its tracks to make necessary connection with all railways desiring to use such depot, upon the streets or alleys of such city or town, and, by and with the consent of the council, may erect such depot upon or across any street or alley; but no railway track can thus be located, nor can any such depot be so erected, until after the injury to property abutting upon the streets or alleys thus appropriated has been ascertained and paid in the manner provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 2102. Liability for damages. Nothing in this chapter contained, or in the articles of incorporation or by-laws of such corporation, shall release the railroad companies using such union depots, tracks or appurtenances from the same liability for all damages on account of injuries to persons, stock, baggage or freight, or for the loss of baggage or freight in or about such union depot grounds, as they would be under if said depot tracks and appurtenances belonged to and were operated by the railway companies using the same. [Same, § 4.]

STATION-HOUSES AT CROSSINGS.

SEC. 2103. At joint expense—connecting tracks. All railway corporations shall, at all points of connection, crossings or intersection with the roads of other corporations, unite therewith in establishing and maintaining suitable platforms and station-houses for the convenience of passengers desiring to transfer from one road to the other, and for the transfer of passengers, baggage or freight, whenever the same shall be ordered by the railroad commission; and shall, when ordered by it, keep such depot or passenger house warmed, lighted and opened a reasonable time before the arrival, and until after the departure, of all trains carrying passengers; and said railway companies shall stop all trains at said depots for the transfer of passengers, baggage and freight when so ordered by the commission. The expense of constructing and maintaining such station-houses and platforms shall be paid by such corporations in such proportions as may be fixed by the commission. Such corporations whose roads so connect or intersect shall, when ordered by the commission, so unite and connect the tracks of the several roads as to permit the transfer of cars from the track of one to that of the other. [20 G. A., ch. 24, § 1; 15 G. A., ch. 18; C.'73, §§ 1292–6.]

The provisions of 20 G. A., ch. 24, § 1, leaving the matter to the discretion of the commissioners' superseded prior provisions on the subject: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 86–202.

As to whether the commissioners have authority to require the establishment or maintenance of stations elsewhere than at crossings, quære: State v. Des Moines & K. C. R. Co., 87–644.

SEC. 2104. Penalty. Any railway corporation or company which, after having received ninety days' notice from the commissioners, shall neglect or refuse to comply with the provisions of the preceding section shall, for every day it fails, neglects or refuses to comply therewith, forfeit and pay the sum of twenty-five dollars, which may be recovered in the name of the state for the use of the school fund of the county wherein such crossing or intersection is situated, and the county attorney of such county shall prosecute the same. [20 G. A., ch. 24, § 2.]

CHANGING NAMES OF STATIONS.

SEC. 2105. By commissioners. In all cases where any railway company shall fail or refuse to make the name of the railway station conform to the name of the village, incorporated town or city within the limits of which it is situated, it shall be the duty of the railway commissioners of the state to order a change of the name of said railway station to effect such uniformity, within sixty days after a petition in writing by the town council of said incorporated town or city, or, in the case of a village, by the township trustees, asking for such order, is filed with said railway commissioners. [26 G. A., ch. 35; 24 G. A., ch. 26; 22 G. A., ch. 31, § 1.]

SEC. 2106. Notice. When the commissioners shall order a change in the name of a railway station, they shall give the company owning or operating the same notice of such order, and if it is not complied with within thirty days from the date of service of such notice, the commissioners shall notify the attorney-general thereof, who shall begin proceedings in the proper court to compel the enforcement of said order. [22 G. A., ch. 31, § 2.]

SEC. 2107. Penalty. A failure to comply with the order of the commissioners within thirty days from service of such notice shall also be a misdemeanor, for which said company shall be subject to a fine of one thousand dollars, and non-compliance for each thirty days thereafter shall constitute a separate and distinct offense, subject to a fine of one thousand dollars. [Same, § 3.]

TERMINAL OFFICES.

SEC. 2108. General offices. All railroads terminating in the state shall establish and maintain at such terminus general freight and passenger offices, and express or telegraph offices when operating an independent express or telegraph company, at localities accessible and convenient to the public, and there keep for sale tickets over their respective roads, and, in advertising, correctly set forth their true connections, starting or terminal points, time-tables, and freight tariffs. [16 G. A., ch. 68, § 1.]

SEC. 2109. For sale of sleeper tickets. All railroad and sleeping car companies, running or operating sleepers or sleeping cars within the state upon railroads terminating therein, shall establish, maintain and keep open to the public, at such termini, ticket offices at accessible and convenient places, in which they shall keep a diagram of the berths and staterooms in such sleepers or sleeping cars, and shall at all times during the daytime keep them open for the sale of tickets for such berths and staterooms. [18 G. A., ch. 169, § 1.]

SEC. 2110. Penalty. If any officer, agent or employe of any such company, or any lessee, engaged in operating any sleeper or sleeping car line terminating or operated within the state, shall neglect or refuse to comply with any of the provisions of the two preceding sections, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, and imprisoned not more than six months. [18 G. A., ch. 169, § 2; 16 G. A., ch. 68, § 2.]

CHAPTER 6.

OF THE BOARD OF RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.

SECTION 2111. Election—organization. The board of railroad commissioners shall consist of three persons having the qualifications of electors, who shall be elected in the same manner as other state officers, and shall each hold his office for three years. Immediately after the new member has qualified, the board shall organize by electing one of its members as chairman, and appointing a secretary who shall take the same oath as the commissioners; but this, or a part of this, may be done at a subsequent meeting. Any person ineligible to the office of commissioner shall be ineligible to the office of secretary of the board. The board shall have power to employ such additional clerical help as it may find necessary. No person in the employ of any common carrier, or owning any bonds, stock or property in any railroad company, or who is in any way or manner pecuniarily interested in any railroad corporation, shall be eligible to the office of railroad commissioner, and the entering into the employ of any common carrier, or the acquiring of any stock or other interest in any common carrier by any officer under this chapter, after his election or appointment, shall disqualify him to hold the office and to perform the duties thereof. [22 G. A., ch. 29, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 2.]

SEC. 2112. Supervision. The board shall have the general supervision of all railroads in the state operated by steam, express companies, car companies, sleeping car companies, freight and freight line companies, and any common carrier engaged in the transportation of passengers or freight by railroad, street railroads excepted, and shall investigate any alleged neglect or violation of the laws of the state by any railroad corporation doing business therein, or by the officers, agents or employes thereof. [17 G. A., ch. 77, § 3.]

SEC. 2113. Powers and duties. It shall from time to time carefully examine into and inspect the condition of each railroad, its equipment, and the manner of its conduct and management with regard to the public safety and convenience in the state; make semiannual examination of its bridges, and report the condition thereof to the company to which they belong; and if found by it unsafe it shall immediately notify the railroad company whose duty it is to put the same in repair, which shall be done by it within ten days after receiving such notice. If any corporation fails to perform this duty, the board may forbid and prevent it from running trains over the same while unsafe. When, in the judgment of the board, any railway corporation fails in any respect to comply with the terms of its charter or articles of incorporation or the laws of the state; or when in its judgment any repairs are necessary upon its road; or any addition to its rolling stock, or addition to or change in its stations or station-houses, or change in its rates of fare for transporting freight or passengers, or change in the mode of operating its road or conducting its business, is reasonable and expedient in order to promote the security, convenience, and accommodation of the public, the board shall serve a notice upon such corporation, in the manner provided for the service of an original notice in a civil action, which notice shall be signed by its secretary, of the improvements and changes which it finds to be proper; and a report of such proceedings shall be included in its annual report to the governor as provided in the next section; but nothing in this section shall be so construed as relieving any railroad company from its present responsibility or liability for damage to person or property. [Same.]

While there is here no provision for commissioners making orders other than in an advisory way, yet the commissioners have authority to consider whether a railroad should put in a private crossing for a land owner whose land is divided by the right of way: State v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 85–516.

The commissioners may act on a matter within their jurisdiction on the petition of a party aggrieved or on their own motion and in the absence of any complaint, but whether their action is based on complaint or upon facts within their knowledge, their record should show what the complaint is so the company may be able to make answer thereto and the court before which an action is brought to enforce the order of the commissioners in such matter may be properly advised as to the subject of the investigation. New grounds of complaint are not to be introduced into the proceeding in the court: State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 86-641.

SEC. 2114. Report. The board shall annually, on or before the first Monday in December, make a report to the governor of its doings for the preceding year, containing such facts, statements and explanations as will disclose the working of such systems of railroad transportation in the state, and their relation to the general business and prosperity of the citizens thereof, with such suggestions and recommendations in respect thereto as may to the board seem appropriate. Said report shall also contain, as to every railroad corporation doing business in this state:

1. The amount of its capital;
2. The amount of its preferred stock, if any, and the condition of its preferment;
3. The amount of its funded debt and the rate of interest;
4. The amount of its floating debt;
5. The cost and actual present cash value of its road equipment, including permanent way, buildings and rolling stock, all real estate used exclusively in operating the road, and all fixtures and conveniences for transacting its business;
6. The estimated value of all other property owned by it, with a schedule of the same, not including lands granted in aid of its construction;
7. The number of acres originally granted it by the United States or this state in aid of the construction of its road;
8. The number of acres of such land remaining unsold;
9. A list of its officers and directors, with their respective places of residence;
10. Such statistics of the road and of its transportation business for the year as may, in the judgment of the commissioners, be necessary and proper for the information of the general assembly or as may be required by the governor;
11. The average amount of tonnage that can be carried over each road in the state with an engine of given power.

Which report shall exhibit and refer to the condition of such corporation on the first day of July of each year, and the details of its transportation business transacted during the year ending June thirtieth. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 2115. Examinations. The board shall have power, in the discharge of its duties, to examine any of the books, papers or documents of any railway corporation, or to examine, under oath or otherwise, any officer, director, agent or employe thereof; to issue subpœnas,—the cost thereof as well as of the investigation to be first paid by the state, upon the certificate of the board,—and to enforce obedience thereto in the performance of its duties as courts of law may. Any person who shall wilfully obstruct it or its members in the performance of their duties, or who shall refuse to give any information within his possession that may be required by them within the line of their duty, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, in the discretion of the court. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 2116. Duty of railroad to transport. Every railway corporation shall, when within its power to do so, and upon reasonable notice, furnish suitable cars to any and all persons who may apply therefor, for the transportation of any and all kinds of freight, and receive and transport such freight with all reasonable dispatch, and provide and keep suitable facilities for the receiving and handling thereof at any depot on the line of its road; and shall also receive and transport in like manner the empty or loaded cars furnished by any connecting road, to be delivered at any station or stations on the line of its road, to be loaded or discharged or reloaded and returned to the road so connecting; and for compensation it shall not demand or receive any greater sum than is accepted by it from any other connecting railroad for a similar service. [Same, § 10.]

The duty of one railway to transport the cars of another road may be enforced by mandatory injunction, and the fact that the receiving of such cars by the former road will cause a strike of its employes will constitute no defense: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 34 Fed., 481.

A railroad company, being under obligations to carry animals when offered on proper terms is not liable in damages for bringing into the state an animal affected with Texas fever where it does so without negligence, § 5021 making such action a misdemeanor and rendering the company liable for damages resulting only makes the act prima facie proof of negligence which may be rebutted by the company: Furley v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 90–149.

For construction of prior provisions, see Bond v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 67–712.

SEC. 2117. Examination of rates. The board shall, upon the application of the mayor and council of any city or town, or the trustees of any township, make an examination of the rate of passenger fare or freight tariff charged by any railroad company, and of the condition or operation of any railroad, any part of whose location lies within the limits of such city, town or township; and if twenty-five or more voters in any city, town or township shall by written petition request the mayor and council of such city or town, or the trustees of such township, to make the said complaint and application, and they refuse, they shall state the reason therefor in writing upon the petition, and return the same to the petitioners, who may thereupon, within ten days from the date of such refusal and return, present the same to the board of commissioners, who shall, if it thinks the public good demands the examination, proceed to make it in the same manner as if called upon by the mayor and council of any city or town, or the trustees of any township. Before proceeding to make such examination, it shall give to the petitioners and the corporation reasonable notice, in writing, of the time and place of entering upon the same. If, upon such an examination, it shall appear to the board that the complaint is well founded, it shall, within ten days, inform the corporation operating such railroad of its finding, and shall report its doings to the governor. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 2118. Cumulative. Nothing in this or the succeeding chapter shall be construed to estop or hinder any persons or corporations from bringing action against any railway company for any violation of the laws of the state for the government of railroads. [Same, § 17.]

SEC. 2119. Orders of commissioners enforced. The district courts of this state shall have jurisdiction to enforce, by proper decrees, injunctions and orders, the rulings, orders and regulations affecting public rights, made or to be made by the board, such as are now, or may hereafter be, authorized to be made by them for the future direction and observance of railroads in this state. The proceedings therefor shall be by equitable action in the name of the state of Iowa, and shall be instituted by the attorney-general, whenever advised by the board that any railway corporation, or person operating a line of road in this state, is violating and refusing to comply with any rule, order or regulation made by the board, and applicable to such railroad or person. It shall be the duty of the court in which any such cause shall be pending to require the issue to be made up at the first term of the court to which such cause is brought, which shall be the trial term, and to give the same precedence over other civil business. If the court shall find that such rule, regulation or order is reasonable and just, and that in refusing compliance therewith said railway company is failing and omitting the performance of any public duty or obligation, the court shall decree a mandatory and perpetual injunction, compelling obedience to and compliance with such rule, order or regulation by said railroad company, or other person, its officers, agents, servants and employes, and may grant such other relief as may be deemed just and proper. All violations of such decree shall render the company, persons, officers, agents, servants and employes who are in any manner instrumental in such violation, guilty of contempt of court, and the court may punish such contempt by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars for each offense, and may imprison the person guilty of contempt until he shall sufficiently purge himself therefrom. And such decree shall continue and remain in effect and be enforced until the rule, order or regulation shall be modified or vacated by the board. [20 G. A., ch. 133, § 1.]

The statute clearly contemplates that only such orders of the railroad commissioners as are reasonable and just shall be enforced. And the reasonableness and justness of such an order can only be for the determination of the courts, when it is made by the commissioners, and proceedings are taken for its enforcement. The proceeding in the courts for the enforcement of such an order is an equitable one, and the reasonableness or the justness of the order is to be determined from equitable considerations. So far as the public are concerned, the judgment of the commissioners is conclusive: State v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 84-419.

In a particular case, held, that an order of commissioners requiring the rebuilding of a portion of the track of a road which had received a land grant for the construction of such road was unreasonable, where it appeared that by means of the operation of a leased track, parallel with the track washed away, the road was furnishing the same accommodations to the public that it would furnish if such portion of its track should be rebuilt: Ibid.

Where a decree was entered during the time a railroad was in the hands of a receiver, compelling such railroad and its officers, etc., to operate a certain part of the line, and afterwards another company purchased the franchise and property on the foreclosure of a mortgage, held, that the decree could be enforced as against such purchaser: State v. Iowa Central R. Co., 83-720.

A decision of the railroad commissioners with reference to the obligation of a company to put in a private crossing for one whose land is divided by the right of way is a ruling affecting a public right within the meaning of this section: State v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 85-516.

While mandamus is a proper remedy in such a case it is not exclusive: Ibid.

The finding of the railroad commissioners in a particular case that an overhead crossing was proper and should be constructed, held not supported by sufficient evidence, such crossing not being usual: State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 86-304.

Where the case presented to the commissioners is not such as to call for any exercise of their powers, an order made by them should not be enforced on application to the court: Ibid.

The court being required to determine whether the orders of the commissioners are just and equitable must do so upon the record presented to it in an action to enforce such orders although the commissioners may have had in mind and acted upon facts not appearing in such record: Ibid.

In general as to enforcement of orders, see State v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71-410.

SEC. 2120. Costs—attorney's fees. Whenever a decree shall be entered against a railroad company or person under the preceding section, the court shall render judgment for costs, and attorney's fees for counsel representing the state. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2121. Salaries. The board shall keep an office in the capitol at the seat of government, and each commissioner shall receive a salary of twenty-two hundred dollars a year. The secretary of the board shall receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year. [17 G. A., ch. 77, § 6.]

CHAPTER 7.

OF THE REGULATION OF CARRIERS BY RAILWAY.

SECTION 2122. To what applicable. The provisions of this chapter shall apply to the transportation of passengers and property, and to the receiving, delivering, storing and handling of property wholly within this state, and shall apply to all railroad corporations, express companies, car companies, sleeping car companies, freight or freight line companies, and to any common carrier engaged in this state in the transportation of passengers or property by railroad therein, and to shipments of property made from any point within the state to any point within the state, whether the transportation of the same shall be wholly within this state or partly within this state and partly within an adjoining state. The term "railroad" and "railway" as used in this chapter shall include all bridges and ferries used or operated in connection with any railroad, and also all the road in use by any corporation, receiver, trustee or other person operating a railroad, whether owned or operated under contract, agreement, lease or otherwise; and the term "transportation" shall include all instrumentalities of shipment or carriage; and the term "railway corporation" shall mean all corporations, companies or individuals owning or operating any railroad in whole or in part in this state; and the provisions of this chapter shall apply to all persons, firms and companies, and to all associations of persons, whether incorporated or otherwise, that shall do business as common carriers upon any of the lines of railway in this state, street railways excepted, the same as to railroad corporations herein mentioned. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 16.]

The jurisdiction of the commissioners extends to regulating rates for the transportation of goods between two places in the state over a line of railroad which between those points passes out of the state: Campbell v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 86–587.

SEC. 2123. Charges to be reasonable. All charges made for any service rendered or to be rendered in the transportation of passengers or property in this state, or for the receiving, delivering, storage or handling of such property, shall be reasonable and just, and every unjust and unreasonable charge for such service is prohibited and declared to be unlawful. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 2.]

In an action to recover overcharges from a railway company where it appears that the rates in fact charged did not exceed the rates specified in the commissioners' schedule of rates, but were, in fact, excessive, it was held that the rates fixed by the commissioners were, both as to the shipper and carrier, only presumptively reasonable, and if such commissioners' rates are in fact excessive, such overcharges may be recovered by the shipper: Barris v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 71 N. W., 339.

The law requires reasonable rates, and the defendant may show that the rate fixed by the commission is unreasonable. The prima facie evidence that it is reasonable will not prevail when it is shown that it is in fact not so: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82–312.

SEC. 2124. Unjust discrimination. If any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter shall directly or indirectly, by any special rate, rebate, drawback or other device, charge, demand, collect or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for any service rendered, or to be rendered, in the transportation of passengers or property subject to the provisions of this chapter, than it charges, demands, collects or receives from any other person or persons for doing for him or them a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic, such common carrier shall be guilty of unjust discrimination, which is hereby prohibited and declared to be unlawful; but this section shall not be construed as prohibiting a less rate per one hundred pounds in a car-load lot than is charged, collected or received for the same kind of freight in less than a car-load lot. [Same, § 3.]

As to construction of provisions against unjust discriminations in a former statute, see Paxton v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 56–427.

Under prior provisions, held, that a cause of action to recover unreasonable and excessive charges accrued when the charges were paid and not when the discrimination was discovered: Carrier v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 79–80.

But where the company had fraudulently concealed the fact that the amount paid by plaintiff was unreasonable and in excess of that paid by other shippers, held, that the statute of limitations did not begin to run until the fact was discovered: Ibid.

As to treble damages see § 2130.

SEC. 2125. Undue preferences—switching charges. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter to make or give any preference or advantage to any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality, or any particular description of traffic, in any respect whatsoever, or subject any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality, or any particular description of traffic, to any prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever; but this shall not be construed to prevent any common carrier from giving preference as to time of shipment of live stock, uncured meats, or other perishable property. All common carriers subject to the provisions of this chapter shall, according to their respective powers, afford all reasonable, proper and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines, and for the receiving, forwarding and switching of cars, and for the receiving, forwarding and delivering of passengers and property to and from their several lines, and to and from other lines and places connected therewith; and shall not discriminate in their accommodations, rates and charges between such connecting lines. Any common carrier may be required to switch and transfer cars for another, for the purpose of being loaded or unloaded, upon such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the board of railroad commissioners. [Same, § 4; 15 G. A., ch. 18; C.'73, §§ 1292–6.]

Switching charges cover movement of cars within the yard limits or outside of such limits where the engine and cars may be run without orders from the train dispatcher but such service does not include the running of switch engine and cars on the main track where they must be controlled by the regulations relating to the operation of regular and special trains: State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 88-445.

SEC. 2126. Long and short haul—fair rate. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of passengers or a like kind of property for a shorter than for a longer distance over its railroad, all or any portion of the shorter haul being included within the longer, and shall charge no more for transporting freight to or from any point on its railroad than a fair and just rate, compared with the price it charges for the same kind of freight transportation to or from any other point. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 5.]

SEC. 2127. Pooling contracts. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter to enter into any contract, agreement or combination with any other common carrier or carriers for the pooling of freight of different and competing railroads, or divide between them the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings of such railroads, or any portion thereof; and in case of an agreement for the pooling of freights as aforesaid, each day of its continuance shall be a separate offense. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 6; C.'73, §§ 1297–9.]

SEC. 2128. Schedules of rates and fares. Every common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter shall print and keep for public inspection schedules showing the rates, fares and charges for the transportation of passengers and property which it has established, and which are in force at the time upon its railroad. The schedules shall plainly state the places upon its roads between which property and passengers will be carried, and shall contain the classification of freight in force upon such road, stating separately any terminal charges, and any rules and regulations which in anywise change, affect or determine any part of the aggregate of such rates, fares and charges. Such schedules shall be plainly printed in large type, of at least the size of ordinary pica, and a copy for the use of the public shall be kept in every freight office and passenger station on such road, where it can be conveniently inspected; and it shall keep a printed notice posted in every such freight office and passenger station indicating where therein the same can be found. No advance shall be made in the rates, fares and charges which have been established and published as aforesaid by any common carrier except after ten days' public notice, which shall plainly state the changes proposed to be made in the schedules then in force, and the time when the increased rates, fares or charges will go into effect; which proposed changes shall be shown by printing new schedules, or shall be plainly indicated upon the schedules in force at the time and kept for public inspection. Reduction in such published rates, fares or charges may be made without previous public notice, but, when made, notice thereof shall be immediately and publicly posted, and such changes made public by printing new schedules, or be plainly indicated upon the schedules at the time in force and kept for public inspection. When any such common carrier shall have established and published its rates, fares and charges, it shall not charge, demand, collect or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for the transportation of passengers or property, or for any services in connection therewith, than is specified in such published schedule of rates, fares and charges as may at the time be in force. Every common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter shall file with the board of railroad commissioners copies of its schedules of rates, fares and charges established and published, and shall promptly notify said board of all changes made in the same. Every such common carrier shall also file with the board copies of all contracts, agreements or arrangements with other common carriers in relation to any traffic affected by the provisions of this chapter to which it may be a party. If passengers and freight pass over continuous lines or routes in this state, operated by more than one common carrier, and the several common carriers operating such lines or routes have established joint tariffs of rates, fares or charges for such continuous lines or routes, copies of such joint tariffs shall also be filed with the board. Such joint rates, fares and charges on such continuous lines shall be made public by such common carriers, when directed by said board, in so far as in its judgment may be practicable, and it shall from time to time prescribe the measures of publicity which shall be given to such rates, fares and charges, or to such part thereof as it may think practicable for such common carriers to publish, and the places in which they shall be published; but no common carrier, party to any such joint tariff, shall be liable for the failure of any other party thereto to observe and adhere to the rates, fares or charges thus made and published. If any such common carrier shall neglect or refuse to file or publish its schedule or tariffs of rates, fares and charges, or any part of the same, it shall, in addition to other penalties herein prescribed, be subject to a writ of mandamus, to be issued by any district court of this state in the judicial district wherein its principal office is situated, or wherein such offense may be committed. If such common carrier be a foreign corporation, then such writ may be issued by any district court in the judicial district where it accepts traffic and has an agent to perform such service, to compel compliance with the provisions of this section—such writ to issue in the name of the state, at the relation or upon the petition of the board of railroad commissioners; and the failure to comply with its requirement shall be punishable as for a contempt, and shall make said corporation liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars for each day's failure to comply therewith; and when any such writ of mandamus shall be applied for no bond shall be required. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 7; C.'73, § 1304.]

A former statute, similar to this section, considered and held not to be in conflict with the U. S. Const., as being an attempt to regulate commerce between the states: Fuller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 31–187.

Under such statute, held, also, that the receiving of higher rates than those posted, subjected the company to the penalties imposed by the statute without it being shown that such overcharge was wilful: Fuller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 31–211.

SEC. 2129. Continuous shipments. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter to enter into any combination, contract or agreement, expressed or implied, to prevent, by change of time schedules, carriage in different cars, or, by other means or device, the carriage of freights from being continuous from place of shipment to the place of destination in the state; and no break of bulk, stoppage or interruption made by such common carrier shall prevent the carriage of freights from being treated as one continuous carriage from the place of shipment to the place of destination, unless such break, stoppage or interruption was made in good faith for some necessary purpose, and without any intent to avoid or unnecessarily interrupt such continuous carriage, or to evade any of the provisions of this chapter. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 8.]

SEC. 2130. Penalty in treble damages. In case any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter shall do, cause, or permit to be done anything herein prohibited or declared to be unlawful, or shall omit to do anything in this chapter required to be done, it shall be liable to the person or persons injured thereby for three times the amount of damages sustained in consequence, together with costs of suit, and a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court, on appeal or otherwise, which shall be taxed and collected as part of the costs in the case; but in all cases demand in writing shall be made for the money damages sustained before action is brought for a recovery under this section, and no action shall be brought until the expiration of fifteen days after such demand. [Same, § 9; 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 13.]

This section is not applicable to interstate commerce: Cook v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 75–169.

In an action brought to recover excessive charges for interstate transportation, held, that plaintiff might by amendment abandon the claim therefor under this section and ask the relief to which he would be entitled at common law: Ibid.

The legislature may constitutionally prescribe rules permitting recovery of attorney's fees in a particular class of cases and denied in all others: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82-312.

In an action to recover excessive charges evidence is not admissible showing the charges for carrying like commodities on other roads: Hopper v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 91-639.

While juries are allowed to give three times the actual damage, they are not to include in the verdict an additional sum: Ibid.

In an action for unjust and unreasonable charges under the common law, aside from statute, plaintiff cannot recover on proving that another person carrying on a similar business in connection with the railroad was allowed to have goods carried free: Kelley v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 61 N. W., 957.

The penalty in treble damages is not applicable to a case of refusal to furnish under § 2116: Bond v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 67-712.

As to the penalty this provision is not to be extended by implication: Ibid.

As to recovery of excessive charges paid, see notes to § 2123.

SEC. 2131. Remedy—evidence. Any person claiming to be damaged by any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter may either make complaint to the board of railroad commissioners, or may bring action in his own behalf for the recovery of damages for which any such common carrier may be liable under the provisions hereof; but he shall not have the right to pursue both of said remedies at the same time. In any such action, the court before whom the same shall be pending may compel any director, officer, receiver, trustee or agent of the corporation or company defendant in such suit to attend as a witness and to testify, and may compel the production of the books and papers of such corporation or company; and the claim that any such testimony or evidence may tend to criminate the person giving the same shall not excuse him from testifying or producing said books and papers, but no person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for and on account of any transaction, matter or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise; provided that no person so testifying shall be exempted from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 10.]

SEC. 2132. Criminal liability. Except as otherwise specially provided for in this chapter, and unless relieved from the consequences of a violation of the law as provided herein, any common carrier subject to the provisions hereof, or, when such common carrier is a corporation, any director or officer thereof, or any receiver, trustee, lessee, agent or person acting for or employed by such corporation, who, alone or with any other corporation, company, person or party shall wilfully do or cause to be done, or shall wilfully suffer or permit to be done any act, matter or thing in this chapter prohibited or declared to be unlawful, or who shall aid or abet therein, or shall wilfully omit or fail to do any act, matter or thing in this chapter required to be done, or shall cause or willingly suffer or permit any act, matter or thing, so directed or required by the provisions of this chapter to be done, not to be so done, or shall aid or abet any such omission or failure, or shall be guilty of any infraction of the provisions of this chapter, or shall aid or abet therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than five thousand nor less than five hundred dollars for each offense. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 2133. Inquiry by commissioners. The board of railroad commissioners shall inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of this chapter, and keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted, and have the right to obtain from them full and complete information necessary to enable the board to perform its duties and carry out the object for which it was created; shall have power to require the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of all books, papers, tariffs, schedules, contracts, agreements and documents relating to any matter under investigation; and may invoke the aid of any court of this state in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers and documents; and any court within the jurisdiction of which such inquiry is carried on shall, in case of refusal to obey a subpœna or other proper process issued to any common carrier or person subject to the provisions hereof, issue an order requiring such carrier or person to appear before said board and produce books and papers, if so ordered, and testify touching, or in relation to, the matter in question; and a failure to obey such orders of the court shall be punished as for a contempt thereof. The claim that any such testimony or evidence may tend to criminate the person giving it shall not excuse him from testifying, but no person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for and on account of any matter or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise; provided that no person so testifying shall be exempted from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 2134. Complaint. Any person, firm, corporation or association, or any mercantile, agricultural or manufacturing society, or any body politic or municipal organization, complaining of anything done or omitted to be done by any common carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter in contravention thereof, may apply to said board by petition, briefly stating the facts; whereupon a copy of the complaint with the damages, if any are claimed, shall be forwarded by the board to such carrier, who shall be requested to satisfy the complaint, or answer the same in writing within a reasonable time to be fixed by the board. If such carrier within the time specified shall make reparation for the injury alleged to have been done, or shall correct the wrong complained of, it shall be relieved of liability to the complainant for the particular violation complained of. If it shall not satisfy the complaint within the time fixed, or there shall appear to be any reasonable ground for investigating the complaint, the board shall inquire into the matters complained of in such manner and by such means as it shall think proper. Whenever it has sufficient reason to believe that any carrier is violating any of the provisions of this chapter, it shall at once institute an inquiry, as though complaint had been made. No complaint shall at any time be dismissed because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant. [Same, § 13.]

The grounds of complaint, whether made to the commissioners or considered by the commissioners on their own motion, must appear in their record. The mere statement that the complainant desires a portion of the right of way for coal sheds, without showing the facts entitling him thereto, does not show any ground of complaint against the company, and if other grounds do not appear on the commissioners' records, the proceeding in court to enforce an order of the commissioners, based on such defective complaint, can not be maintained: State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 86-641.

SEC. 2135. Investigations—report. When an investigation is made by the board after notice, it shall make a report in writing, stating its conclusions, which shall include the findings of fact upon which the conclusions are based, together with its recommendations or orders as to what reparation, if any, shall be made by the carrier to any party who may be found to have been injured; and such finding shall thereafter in all judicial proceedings be prima facie evidence of every fact found. All reports of investigations made by the board shall be entered of record, and a copy furnished to the party who complained, and any other person directly interested, and to any carrier that may have been complained of. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 2136. Orders. If in any case in which an investigation shall be made by the board it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of such board, either by the testimony of witnesses or other competent evidence, that anything has been done or omitted to be done, in violation of the provisions of this chapter, or of any law cognizable by the board, by any common carrier, or that any injury or damage has been sustained by the party complaining, or by other parties, in consequence of any such violation, it shall be the duty of the board forthwith to cause a copy of its report in respect thereto to be delivered to such carrier, together with a notice to it to cease from such violation, or to make reparation for the injury found to have been done, or both, within a reasonable time, to be fixed by the board. And if within the time fixed it shall be made to appear to the board that such carrier has ceased from such violation of law, and has made reparation for the injury found to have been done, in compliance with the report and notice of the board, or to the satisfaction of the party complaining, a statement to that effect shall be entered of record by it, and the carrier shall thereupon be relieved from further liability or penalty for such particular violation of law. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 2137. Enforcement of orders. Whenever any common carrier as defined in this chapter shall violate or refuse or neglect to obey any lawful order or requirement of the board, it shall be the duty of the board, and lawful for any company or person interested in such order or requirement, to apply, in a summary way, by petition, to the district or superior court in any county of this state in which the common carrier complained of has its principal office, or in any county through which its line of road passes or is operated, or in which the violation or disobedience of such order or requirement shall happen, alleging such violation or disobedience, as the case may be; and the said court shall have power to hear and determine the matter, on such short notice to the common carrier complained of as the court shall deem reasonable; and such notice may be served on such common carrier, his or its officers, agents or servants, as the court shall direct; and said court shall proceed to hear and determine the matter speedily as a court of equity, and without the formal pleadings and proceedings applicable to ordinary suits in equity, but in such manner as to do justice in the premises; and, to this end, such court shall have power, if it think fit, to direct and prosecute, in such mode and by such persons as it may appoint, all such inquiries as the court may think needful to enable it to form a just judgment in the matter of such petition; and on such hearing the report of the board shall be prima facie evidence of the matter therein, or in any order made by them, stated; and if it be made to appear to such court on such hearing, or on the report of any such person or persons, that the order or requirement of the board drawn in question has been violated or disobeyed, it shall be lawful for such court to issue a writ of injunction, or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, to restrain such common carrier from further continuing such violation or disobedience of such order or requirement of the board, and enjoining obedience to the same, and in case of any disobedience of any writ of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, it shall be lawful for such court to issue a writ of attachment, or any other process of said court incident or applicable to writs of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, against such common carrier, and, if a corporation, against one or more of the directors, officers or agents of the same, or against any owner, lessee, trustee, receiver or other person failing to obey such writ of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise; and said court may, if it think fit, make an order directing such common carrier or other person so disobeying such writ of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, to pay any sum of money, not exceeding for each carrier or person in default the sum of one thousand dollars for every day, after a day to be named in the order, that such carrier or other person shall fail to obey such injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise; and such moneys shall, upon order of the court, be paid into the treasury of the county in which the action was commenced, and one-half thereof shall be transferred by the county treasurer to the state treasury; and the payment thereof may, without prejudice to any other mode of recovering the same, be enforced by attachment or order, in the nature of a writ of execution, in like manner as if the same had been recovered by a final decree in personam in such court, saving to the board and any other party or person interested the right of appeal to the supreme court of the state, under the same regulations now provided by law in relation to appeals to said court as to security for such appeal, except that in no case shall security for such appeal be required when the same is taken by the board; but no appeal to said supreme court shall operate to stay or supersede the order of the court, or the execution of any writ or process thereon; and such court may in every such matter order the payment of such costs and attorney and counsel fees as shall be deemed reasonable. Whenever any such petition shall be filed or presented, or be prosecuted by the board, or by their direction, it shall be the duty of the attorney-general of the state to prosecute the same, and in such prosecution he shall have the right to have the assistance of any county attorney of the county in which any such proceedings are instituted, and it is hereby made the duty of any such county attorney to render such assistance; and the costs and expenses, on the part of the board, of any such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriations for the expenses of the board. [Same, § 16.]

In all cases instituted by the board of railroad commissioners to enforce orders and rulings made by them, the action should be brought in the name of the state: State v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 90–594.

But in a particular case, held, that the fact that the action was brought by the commissioners would be disregarded, they being permitted to amend by substituting the state as plaintiff: Ibid.; Smith v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 86–202.

The owners of the road should not be interfered with in regard to the location and change of stations unless it appears that the patrons of the road have been deprived of reasonable facilities for transacting business with it: State v. Des Moines & K. C. R. Co., 87–644.

SEC. 2138. Commissioners' schedules of rates—effect. The schedules of reasonable maximum rates of charges for the transportation of freight and cars, together with the classification of such freights now in effect, shall remain in force until changed by the board according to law, which, in all actions brought against railway corporations, wherein there are involved the charges thereof for the transportation of any freight or cars, or any unjust discrimination in relation thereto, shall be taken as prima facie evidence in all courts that the rates fixed therein are reasonable and just maximum rates of charge for which said schedules have been prepared. The board shall from time to time, and as often as circumstances may require, change and revise such schedules, but the rates fixed shall not be higher than established by law. The board shall give notice of its intention to revise or change such schedules, by publishing a notice thereof in two weekly newspapers published at the seat of government, for two consecutive weeks, and the last publication of such notice shall be at least ten days before the time fixed for considering the matter, and such notice shall contain, in general terms, a statement of the matters the board proposes to consider, and the date when and the place where the matter will be taken up, and shall be addressed to all persons interested therein. When any schedule is thus revised the board must cause notice thereof to be published for two successive weeks in some public newspaper printed at the seat of government, which shall state the date of the taking effect thereof, and it shall take effect at the time so stated. A printed copy of such revised schedule shall be conspicuously posted by said common carrier in each freight office and passenger depot upon all lines affected thereby, and, when certified by the board that the same is a true copy prepared by it for the railway company or corporation therein named, and that notice thereof had been published as required by law, shall be received in evidence in all actions as prima facie the schedule of such board. [Same, § 17.]

A schedule of rates having been adopted by the commissioners remains in force until the publication of a change in rates as herein provided: Hopper v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 91–639.

The certificate provided for to authorize the receipt in evidence of the schedule may be made by the secretary of the commission under its seal: Ibid.

The original schedule went into effect without publication of notice: Ibid.

As to whether the schedule of rates established under the previous provisions on the subject were valid and could be enforced, see Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 35 Fed., 866; Chicago, B & Q. R. Co. v. Dey, 38 Fed., 656.

SEC. 2139. Complaint of violation of schedule. When any person in his own behalf, or in behalf of a class of persons similarly situated, or a firm, corporation or association, or any mercantile, agricultural or manufacturing society, or any body politic or municipal organization, shall make complaint to the board of railway commissioners that the rate charged or published by any railway company, or the maximum rates fixed by the board in the schedule of rates made by it, or the maximum rate fixed by law, is unreasonably high or discriminating, the board shall investigate the matter, and, if the charge appears to be well founded, fix a day for hearing the same, giving the railway company notice of the time and place thereof by mail, directed to any division superintendent, general or assistant superintendent, general manager, president or secretary of such company, which notice shall contain the substance of the complaint, also the person or persons complaining. [Same, § 18.]

SEC. 2140. Hearing—evidence. Upon the hearing the board shall receive any evidence and listen to any arguments offered or presented by either party relevant to the matter under investigation, and the burden of proof shall not be upon the person or persons making the complaint; but it shall add to the showing made at such hearing whatever information it may then have, or can obtain from any source, including schedules of rates actually charged by any railway company for substantially the same kind of service, in this or any other state. The lowest rates published or charged by any railway company for substantially the same kind of service whether in this or another state, shall, at the instance of the person or persons complaining, be accepted as prima facie evidence of a reasonable rate for the services under investigation; and if the railway company complained of is operating a line of railroad beyond the state, or has a traffic arrangement with any such railway company, the same shall be taken into consideration in determining what is a reasonable rate; if it be operating a line of railway beyond the state, the rate charged or established for substantially a similar or greater service by it in another state shall also be considered. [Same, § 19.]

SEC. 2141. Determination. After such hearing and investigation, the board shall fix and determine the maximum charges to be thereafter made by the railroad company or common carrier complained of, which charge shall in no event exceed the one now or hereafter fixed by law; and the board shall render their decision in writing, and shall spread the same at length in the record to be kept for that purpose; such decision shall specifically set out the sums or rate which the railroad company or common carrier so complained of may thereafter charge or receive for the service therein named, and including a classification of such freight; and the board shall not be limited in their said decision and the schedule to be contained therein to the specific case or cases complained of, but it shall be extended to all such rates between points in this state, and whatever part of the line of railway of such company or common carrier within this state may have been fairly within the scope of such investigation; and any such decisions so made and entered on record of the board, including any such schedules and classifications, shall, when duly authenticated, be received and held in all suits brought against any such railroad corporation or common carrier, wherein is in any way involved the charges of any such corporation or carrier mentioned in said decisions, in any of the courts of this state, as prima facie evidence that the rates therein fixed are reasonable maximum rates, the same as the schedule made by the board as provided in section twenty-one hundred and thirty-eight hereof; and the rates and classifications so established, after such hearing and investigation, shall, from time to time thereafter, upon complaint duly made, be subject to revision by the board, the same as any other rates and classifications. [Same, § 20.]

SEC. 2142. Proceedings of commissioners. The board may in all cases conduct its proceedings, when not otherwise prescribed by law, in such manner as will best conduce to the proper dispatch of business and the attainment of justice. A majority of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but no commissioner shall participate in any hearing or proceeding in which he has any pecuniary interest. It may from time to time make or amend such general rules or orders as may be necessary for the preservation of order and the regulation of proceedings before it, including forms of notice and the service thereof, which shall conform as nearly as may be to those in use in the courts of the state. Any party may appear before it and be heard in person or by attorney. Every vote and official action thereof shall be entered of record, and, upon the request of either party or person interested, its proceedings shall be public. It shall have a seal, of which courts shall take judicial notice. [Same, § 21.]

SEC. 2143. Annual reports from companies. The board shall require annual reports from all common carriers subject to the provisions of this chapter to be made at the same time they make report to the executive council, to cover the same period, and prescribe the manner in which specific answers to all questions upon which it may need information shall be made. Such report shall show in detail the amount of capital stock issued, the amounts paid therefor, and manner of payment; the dividends paid; surplus fund, if any; number of stockholders; the funded and floating debts and the interest paid thereon; the cost and value of the carrier's property, franchises and equipment; the number of locomotive engines and cars used in the state, and the number supplied with automatic safety couplers, and the kind and number of brakes used, and the number of each; the number of employes and the salaries paid each class; the amounts expended for improvements each year, how and where expended and the character of such improvements; the earnings and receipts from each branch of business and from all sources; the operating and other expenses; the balance of profit and loss, and a complete exhibit of the financial operations thereof each year, including an annual balance sheet. Such reports shall also contain such information in relation to rates or regulations concerning fares or freights, or agreements, arrangements or contracts with other carriers, and other statistics of the road and its transportation, as the board may require; and it may prescribe uniformity and methods of keeping accounts, as near as may be, and fix a time when such regulations shall take effect. The board may also require of any and all common carriers subject to the provisions of this chapter such other reports, and fix the time for filing the same, as in its judgment shall be necessary and reasonable, which reports shall be in such form, and concerning such subjects, and be from such sources as it shall direct, except as otherwise provided herein. Any corporation, company or individual owning or operating a railway within the state, neglecting or refusing to make the required reports by the date fixed, or fixed by the board, shall be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each and every day of delay in making the same after the date thus fixed. [24 G. A., ch. 27; 23 G. A., ch. 18; 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 22; 17 G. A., ch. 77, §§ 5–7; C.'73, §§ 1280–2.]

SEC. 2144. Extortion—penalty. If any railway corporation or carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter shall charge, collect, demand or receive more than a fair and reasonable rate of toll or compensation for the transportation of passengers or freight of any description, or for the use and transportation of any railway car upon its track or any of the branches thereof, or upon any railroad within the state which it has the right, license or permission to use, operate or control, or shall make any unjust and unreasonable charge prohibited in this chapter, it shall be deemed guilty of extortion, and be dealt with as hereinafter provided; and if any such railroad corporation or common carrier shall be found guilty of any unjust discrimination as defined in this chapter, it shall, upon conviction thereof, be dealt with as hereinafter provided. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 23; 17 G. A., ch. 77, §§ 12, 13.]

SEC. 2145. Discrimination—punishment. If any such railway corporation shall charge, collect or receive for the transportation of any passenger or freight of any description upon its railroad, for any distance within the state, a greater amount of toll or compensation than is at the same time charged, collected or received for the transportation in the same direction of any passenger or like quantity of freight of the same class, over a greater distance of the same railway; or if it shall charge, collect or receive at any point upon its road a higher rate of toll or compensation for receiving, handling or delivering freight of the same class and quantity than it shall at the same time charge, collect or receive at any other point upon the same railway; or if it shall charge, collect or receive for the transportation of any passenger or freight of any description over its railway a greater amount as toll or compensation than shall at the same time be charged, collected or received by it for the transportation of any passenger or like quantity of freight of the same class being transported in the same direction over any portion of the same railway of equal distance; or if it shall charge, collect or receive from any person a higher or greater amount of toll or compensation than it shall at the same time charge, collect or receive from any other person for receiving, handling or delivering freight of the same class and like quantity at the same point upon its railway; or if it shall charge, collect or receive from any person for the transportation of any freight upon its railway a higher or greater rate of toll or compensation than it shall at the same time charge, collect or receive from any other person or persons for the transportation of the like quantity of freight of the same class being transported from the same point in the same direction over equal distances of the same railway; or if it shall charge, collect or receive from any person for the use and transportation of any railway car or cars upon its railroad for any distance, a greater amount of toll or compensation than is at the same time charged, collected or received from any other person for the use and transportation of any railway car of the same class or number, for a like purpose, being transported in the same direction over a greater distance of the same railway; or if it shall charge, collect or receive from any person for the use and transportation of any railway car or cars upon its railway a higher or greater compensation in the aggregate than it shall, at the same time, charge, collect or receive from any other person for the use and transportation of any railway car or cars of the same class for a like purpose, being transported from the same original point in the same direction, over an equal distance of the same railway; all such discriminating rates, charges, collections or receipts, whether made directly or by means of any rebate, drawback, or other shift or evasion, shall be received as prima facie evidence of the unjust discriminations prohibited by this chapter; and it shall not be a sufficient excuse or justification thereof on the part of said railway corporation that the station or point at which it shall charge, collect or receive less compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of such passenger or freight, or for the use and transportation of such railway car the greater distance than for the shorter distance, is a station or point at which there exists competition with another railway or other transportation line. This section shall not be construed so as to exclude other evidence tending to show any unjust discrimination in freight or passenger rates. The provisions of this section shall apply to any railway, the branches thereof, and any road or roads which any railway corporation has the right, license or permission to use, operate or control, wholly or in part, within this state; but shall not be so construed as to prevent railway corporations from issuing commutation, excursion or thousand-mile tickets, if the same are issued alike to all applying therefor. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 24.]

SEC. 2146. Discrimination as to quantity. No such common carrier shall charge, collect, demand or receive more for transporting a car of freight than it at the same time charges, collects, demands or receives per car for several cars of a like class of freight over the same railway, for the same distance, in the same direction; nor charge, collect, demand or receive more for transporting a ton of freight than it charges, collects, demands or receives per ton for several tons of freight under a car-load of a like class over the same railway, for the same distance, in the same direction; nor charge, collect, demand or receive more for transporting a hundred pounds of freight than it charges, collects, demands or receives per hundred for several hundred pounds of freight, under a ton, of a like class, over the same railway, for the same distance, in the same direction; and all such discriminating rates, charges, collections or receipts, whether made directly or by means of any rebate, drawback, or other shift or evasion, shall be received as prima facie evidence of the unjust discrimination prohibited by this chapter; but for the protection and development of any new industry within the state, such railway company may grant concessions or special rates for any agreed number of car-loads, which rates shall first be approved by the board of commissioners, and a copy thereof filed in its office. [Same, § 25.]

SEC. 2147. Penalty for discrimination. Any such corporation guilty of extortion, or of making any unjust discrimination as to passenger or freight rates, or the rates for the use and transportation of railway cars, or in receiving, handling or delivering freights, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars for the first offense, and for each subsequent offense not less than five thousand nor more than ten thousand dollars,—such fine to be imposed in a criminal prosecution by indictment; or shall be subject to the liability prescribed in the next succeeding section, to be recovered as therein provided. [Same, § 26.]

SEC. 2148. Forfeiture. Any such railway corporation guilty of extortion, or of making any unjust discrimination as to passenger or freight rates, or the rates for the use and transportation of railway cars, or in receiving, handling or delivering freights, shall forfeit and pay to the state not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars for the first offense, and not less than five thousand nor more than ten thousand dollars for each subsequent offense, to be recovered in a civil action in the name of the state; and the release from liability or penalty provided for in this chapter shall not apply to a criminal prosecution under the last preceding section, or to a civil action under this section. [Same, § 27.]

SEC. 2149. Suits by commissioners. When the board has reason to believe that any railway corporation or carrier subject to the provisions of this chapter has been guilty of extortion or unjust discrimination, it shall immediately cause actions to be commenced and prosecuted against such railway corporation or carrier, which may be brought in any county of the state through or into which the line of the corporation sued may extend, and it may on behalf of the state employ counsel to assist the attorney-general in conducting such actions. No actions thus commenced shall be dismissed unless they and the attorney-general consent thereto. The court in its discretion may give preference to such actions over all other business, except criminal cases. [Same, § 28.]

SEC. 2150. Free transportation or reduced rates. Nothing in this chapter shall apply to the transportation, storage or handling of property free or at reduced rates for the United States, this state, or municipal governments, by common carriers, nor for charitable purposes, or to and from fairs and expositions for exhibition thereat, nor for the employes thereof or their families, or private property or goods for the family use of such employes, nor from giving reduced rates to the quartermaster-general of Iowa for the transportation of officers or enlisted men of the Iowa national guard, when traveling under the orders of the commander-in-chief, or to ministers of religion, nor from giving free transportation to their own officers and employes, and their families dependent upon them for support, nor to persons in charge of live stock being shipped, from point of shipment to destination and return, nor to prevent the officers of any railway company from exchanging passes or tickets with other railroad companies for their officers and employes; and nothing in this chapter shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions thereof are in addition to such remedies. [26 G. A., ch. 34; 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 29.]

SEC. 2151. Commissioners transported free. The commissioners and their secretary shall be carried free, while performing their duties, on all railroads and trains in the state, and may take with them experts or other agents, who shall be carried free. [22 G. A., ch. 28, § 30.]

SEC. 2152. Joint rates. The preceding sections of this chapter shall not be construed to prohibit the making of rates by two or more railway companies for the transportation of property over two or more of their respective lines within the state; and a less charge by each of said companies for its portion of such joint shipment than it charges for a shipment for the same distance wholly over its own line within the state shall not be considered a violation of said chapter, and shall not render such company liable to any of the penalties thereof; but the provisions of this section shall not be construed to permit railway companies establishing joint rates to make thereby any unjust discrimination between the different shipping points or stations upon their respective lines between which joint rates are established, and any such unjust discrimination shall be punished in the manner and by the penalties provided by this chapter. [23 G. A., ch. 17, § 1.]

SEC. 2153. Connecting lines. All railway companies doing business in this state shall, upon the demand of any person or persons interested, establish reasonable joint through rates for the transportation of freight between points upon their respective lines within this state, and shall receive and transport freight and cars over such route or routes as the shipper shall direct. Car-load lots shall be transferred without unloading from the cars in which such shipments were first made, unless such unloading into other cars shall be done without charge therefor to the shipper or receiver of such cars lots, and unless such transfer be made without unreasonable delay; and less than car-load lots shall be transferred into the connecting railway's cars at cost, which shall be included in and made a part of the joint rate adopted by such railway companies, or established as provided in this chapter. [Same, § 2.]

This provision relating to the establishment of joint rates over connecting lines within the state, held not unconstitutional: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82-312.

It will be presumed that the railroad commissioners will rightly discharge their duties, and will fix reasonable and just joint through rates. If these officers fail in their duty, from errors of judgment or from other causes, the railroads may cause their action to be reviewed and corrected: Ibid.

The railroad companies are not compelled to enter involuntarily into contract relations with each other, but the statute simply provides that in case of failure to adopt joint rates, the railroad commissioners shall prescribe them, and the company shall not be permitted to charge more: Ibid.

SEC. 2154. Reasonable through rates—no discrimination. When shipments of freight to be transported between different points within the state are required to be carried by two or more railway companies operating connecting lines, such railway companies shall transport the same at reasonable through rates, and shall at all times give the same facilities and accommodations to local or state traffic as they give to interstate traffic over their lines of road. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2155. Schedules of joint rates. In the event that said railway companies fail to establish through joint rates, or fail to establish and charge reasonable rates for such through shipments, it shall be the duty of the board of railroad commissioners, upon the application of any person interested, to establish such rates for the shipment of freight and cars over two or more connecting lines of railroad in the state; and in the making thereof, and in changing or revising the same, they shall be governed, as nearly as may be, by the provisions of the preceding sections of this chapter, and shall take into consideration the average of rates charged by said railway companies for shipments within this state for like distances over their respective lines, and rates charged by the railway companies operating such connecting lines for joint interstate shipments for like distances. The rates established by the board shall go into effect within ten days after the same are promulgated, and from and after that time a schedule thereof shall be prima facie evidence in all the courts of this state that the rates therein fixed are just and reasonable for the joint transportation of freight and cars upon the railroads for which such schedules have been fixed. [24 G. A., ch. 25; 23 G. A., ch. 17, § 3.]

The joint rates fixed by commissioners are not absolute, but prima facie evidence only of their reasonableness and justness: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82-312.

A rate fixed to govern two or more roads as to the shipment which passes over all of them is in legal effect a joint rate and a schedule for such rates is to be adopted in pursuance of the provisions of these sections and not under other sections authorizing the commissioners to establish a general schedule: State v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 90-594.

Therefore a schedule of such joint rates can be adopted on notice only as required by these sections and cannot be treated as an amendment or modification of the schedule of rates under the general sections providing for a schedule even though the rates under the joint rate schedule are simply a proportion of the rates under the general schedule: Ibid.

SEC. 2156. Division of joint rates. Before the promulgation of such rates, the board shall notify the railroad companies interested of the schedule of joint rates fixed, and give them a reasonable time thereafter to agree upon a division of the charges provided for therein. If such companies fail to agree upon a division, and to notify the board thereof, it shall, after a hearing of the companies interested, decide the same, taking into consideration the value of terminal facilities and all the circumstances of the haul, and the division so determined by it shall, in all controversies or actions between the railway companies interested, be prima facie evidence of a just and reasonable division thereof. [23 G. A., ch. 17, § 4.]

SEC. 2157. Unreasonable charges—penalty. Every unjust and unreasonable charge for the transportation of freight and cars over two or more railroads in this state is prohibited, and every company making such unreasonable and unlawful charges, or otherwise violating the provisions of this chapter, shall be punished as provided in this chapter for the making of unreasonable charges for the transportation of freight and cars over a single line of railroad by a single railway company. [Same, § 5.]

CHAPTER 8.

OF TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE LINES.

SECTION 2158. Right of way. Any person or firm, and any corporation organized for such purpose, within or without the state, may construct a telegraph or telephone line along the public roads of the state, or across the rivers or over any lands belonging to the state or any private individual, and may erect the necessary fixtures therefor. When any road along which said line has been constructed shall be changed, the person, firm or corporation shall, upon ninety days' notice in writing, remove said lines to said road as established. The notice may be served upon any agent or operator in the employ of such person, firm or corporation. [19 G. A., ch. 104; C.'73, § 1324; R., § 1348; C.'51, § 780.]

Both telegraph and telephone are used for distant communication by means of wire stretched over different jurisdictions. The fundamental principle in each, by which communication is procured, is the same, and prior to any mention of telephone companies it was held that the statutes with reference to telegraph companies were in general applicable to telephone companies: Iowa Union Telephone Co. v. Board of Equalization, 67–250; Franklin v. Northwestern Telephone Co., 69–97.

As to taxation of such companies, see §§ 1328–1332.

SEC. 2159. How constructed. Such fixtures shall not be so constructed as to incommode the public in the use of any road or the navigation of any stream; nor shall they be set up on the private grounds of any individual without paying him a just equivalent for the damage he thereby sustains. [C.'73, § 1325; R., § 1349; C.'51, § 781.]

SEC. 2160. Damages assessed. If the person over whose lands such telegraph or telephone line passes claims more damages therefor than the proprietor of such line is willing to pay, the amount thereof may be determined in the same manner as provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement. [C.'73, § 1326; R., § 1350; C.'51, § 782.]

SEC. 2161. Liability for refusing to transmit messages. If the proprietor of any telegraph or telephone line within the state, or the person having the control and management thereof, refuses to furnish equal facilities to the public and to all connecting lines for the transmission of communications in accordance with the nature of the business which it undertakes to carry on, or to transmit the same with fidelity and without unreasonable delay, the law in relation to limited partnerships, corporations, and to the taking of private property for works of internal improvement, shall not longer apply to them, and property taken for the use thereof without the consent of the owner may be recovered by him. [C.'73, § 1327; R., § 1351; C.'51, § 783.]

SEC. 2162. Penalty. Any person employed in transmitting messages by telegraph or telephone must do so with fidelity and without unreasonable delay, and if any one wilfully fails thus to transmit them, or intentionally transmits a message erroneously, or makes known the contents of any message sent or received to any person except him to whom it is addressed, or his agent or attorney, or wilfully and wrongfully takes or receives any telegraph or telephone message, he is guilty of a misdemeanor. [C.'73, § 1328; R., § 1352; C.'51, § 784.]

This does not excuse an operator from producing the telegrams which have passed between parties when subpœnaed as a witness in an action between them as to the transaction to which they relate: Woods v. Miller, 55–168.

SEC. 2163. Liable for mistakes. The proprietor of a telegraph or telephone line is liable for all mistakes in transmitting or receiving messages made by any person in his employment, or for any unreasonable delay in their transmission or delivery, and for all damages resulting from failure to perform the foregoing or any other duty required by law, the provisions of any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. [C. '73, § 1329; R., § 1353; C. '51, § 785.]

A telegraph company enjoys a public use and eminent domain may be exercised in its behalf, and its rates may be regulated by legislation. Also it is bound to serve all alike and to exercise due care in the discharge of its duties: Mentzer v. Western Union Tel. Co., 62 N. W., 1.

While it is not an insurer of the delivery of messages, it is liable for negligence in transmitting or delivering, and this liability is either in contract or tort: Ibid.

Whether the action against the company is founded in contract or in tort, it is liable for mental suffering which could reasonably have been anticipated as the consequence of the negligent failure to deliver a message: Ibid.

A company may insert, in a contract under which a message is sent, a condition exempting it from liability for mistake made from unavoidable causes, provided proper instruments have been used and proper care and skill exercised by the company's employes to avoid or prevent mistake; but it cannot make general printed regulations which shall have the effect to relieve it from liability for improper conduct or negligence of its servants: Sweatland v. Ill. & Miss. Tel. Co., 27-433; Manville v. Western Union Tel. Co., 37-214.

Where the company has been released from liability except for its own negligence the party seeking to recover from it must make out such negligence: Ibid.

A telegraph company may contract to restrict its liability, but it cannot contract against its own negligence in failing to transmit and deliver a message: Harkness v. Western Union Tel. Co., 73-190.

A telegraph company, cannot, by contract, excuse itself from liability for negligent failure to transmit a message: Garrett v. Western U. Tel. Co., 83-257.

Where the company failed to send a message directing that the markets be forwarded to the sender, he being a cattle buyer, held, that the company was liable for loss of the sender incurred in the purchase of cattle by reason of not being advised as to the market price: Ibid.

To entitle a party to recover for a mistake in the transmission of a message he must prove something more than mistake and damage. He must show that the mistake was caused by the fault of the company, and that it might have been avoided if defendant's instruments had been good ones and its agents had been skillful operators and exercised the proper diligence in respect to the transmission and receipt of the message in question: Aikin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 69-31.

An instruction imposing liability upon a company upon proof of a mistake without evidence of negligence, and also the burden of proving that there was no negligence by reason of the mistake occurring through uncontrollable causes, held erroneous: Ibid.

In an action to recover damages for mistake in the transmission of a message, held, that the plaintiff to whom the message was delivered might testify as to what the message directed, as tending to show his good faith in acting thereunder, such evidence bearing upon the question whether the plaintiff, in the exercise of ordinary diligence and intelligence was authorized to interpret the language of the dispatch as he did: Ibid.

An action for mistake in the transmission of a message from a broker to his principal may be brought by the principal in his own name: Ibid.

Where an agent sends or receives a telegram for the benefit and use of an undisclosed principal, such principal may recover damages sustained by reason of the negligence or delay of the company in delivering it, and the recovery cannot be limited to the amount which the agent could have recovered for damages sustained by him individually: Harkness v. Western Union Tel. Co., 73-190.

The action against a telegraph company for non-delivery of a message may be brought by the person to whom the message is addressed: Mentzer v. Western Union Tel. Co., 62 N. W., 1.

The person to whom a dispatch is sent, even though sent by one under no obligation to send it may recover from the telegraph company damages caused by delay in the transmission: Herron v. Western Union Tel. Co., 90-129.

Knowledge that a telegram relates to a proposed sale of property will charge the company with notice of any damages resulting from failure or delay to deliver it: Ibid.

The property proposed to be sold not having a market value, the damage will be the difference between what the property might have been sold for if the telegram had been promptly delivered and what it was actually sold for afterward in the exercise of reasonable diligence to effect a sale, the expense of keeping the property until such sale is effected being added: Ibid.

Failure to deliver promptly under the circumstances of the case, held, to have been the result of negligence on the part of the agent charged with delivering it: Ibid.

Where a person telegraphed a commission firm with which he was in the habit of doing business and with which he had an arrangement that when he telegraphed for market reports a failure to respond should indicate that there were no changes since the previous report, held, that there having been negligence on the part of the company in failing to deliver the telegram and the market having fallen the company was liable for the loss estimated on the basis of the fall of the market price, it having been known to the agent of the company that the plaintiff was in the business of buying cattle and was in the habit of telegraphing for the price on which to base such purchases: Garrett v. Western Union Tel. Co., 92-449.

Also held, that the damage should be based on the difference in price in the Chicago market for which the cattle were bought and not on the prices in the Kansas City market where the cattle were actually purchased: Ibid.

SEC. 2164. Negligence presumed—notioe of claim. In any action against any telegraph or telephone company for damages caused by erroneous transmission of a message, or by unreasonable delay in delivery of a message, negligence on the part of the telegraph or telephone company shall be presumed upon proof of erroneous transmission or of unreasonable delay in delivery, and the burden of proof that such error or delay was not due to negligence upon its part shall rest upon such company; but no action for the recovery of such damages shall be maintained unless a claim therefor is presented in writing to such company, officer or agent thereof, within sixty days from time cause of action accrues. [26 G. A., ch. 108.]

CHAPTER 9.

OF EXPRESS COMPANIES.

SECTION 2165. Subject to regulations. All express companies operating and doing business in this state are hereby declared to be common carriers, and all laws, so far as applicable, now in force or hereafter enacted, regulating the transportation of property by railroad companies, shall apply with equal force and effect to express companies. [26 G. A., ch. 33, § 1.]

As to taxation of such companies, see §§ 1345, 1346.

SEC. 2166. Supervision by railroad commissioners—schedule of rates. The railroad commissioners of this state shall have general supervision of all express companies operating and doing business in this state; and shall inquire into any unjust discrimination, neglect or violation of the laws of this state governing common carriers, by any express company doing business therein, or by the officers, agents or employes thereof; and said railroad commissioners are empowered and directed to make for each express company doing business in this state, as soon as practicable, a schedule of reasonable maximum charges or rates for transporting any kind of property carried by such express company. [Same, § 2.]

TITLE XI.

OF THE MILITIA.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE MILITIA.

SECTION 2167. Who constitute—exemptions. The military force of the state shall consist of all able-bodied male citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, not exempt from such service under the laws of the United States, except honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines of the United States, who shall be exempt from military service in this state at their option. The assessors shall return to the auditor with the annual assessment a complete enumeration of such persons, which may be revised and corrected by the board of supervisors at its June session in each even-numbered year, or at such other time as the governor may direct, and the auditor shall certify to the adjutant-general a true copy of such corrected list, and in each odd-numbered year he shall certify the number of names on the list. But no person having conscientious scruples against bearing arms shall be compelled to do military duty in time of peace. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 74, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 2168. Iowa national guard. The active militia shall be designated "The Iowa National Guard," hereinafter referred to as "the guard," recruited by volunteer enlistments, and shall consist of four regiments of infantry, and, at the discretion of the commander-in-chief, of two batteries of artillery and two troops of cavalry, and the necessary staff departments, with such other officers and enlisted men as are hereinafter prescribed. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 6; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 2; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 9.]

SEC. 2169. Governor to call out. When a requisition shall be made by the president of the United States for troops, the governor, as commander-in-chief, shall order into service the national guard of the state, or such portion thereof as may be necessary, and, if insufficient, so many of the militia as is required, designating the same by draft if a sufficient number shall not volunteer, and shall organize the same and commission officers therefor; and while so in service the national guard and militia shall be subject to the same regulations and receive from the state the same compensation and subsistence as the army of the United States receives. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 2; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 3.]

SEC. 2170. When. The commander-in-chief shall have power in cases of insurrection, invasion or breaches of the peace, or imminent danger thereof, to order into the service of the state such of its military force as he may think proper, and under the command of such officers as he shall designate. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 3; 18 G. A., ch 74, § 4.]

If the national guards are called out by the governor to prevent breaches of the peace, their compensation and expenses are to be paid out of the state treasury by the order of the executive council. (See § 170): Prime v. McCarthy, 92–569.

SEC. 2171. Sheriff may call. In case of any breach of the peace, tumult, riot or resistance to process, or imminent danger thereof, the sheriff of any county may call for aid upon the commanding officer of any military company within his county, immediately notifying the governor of such action, and such officer shall order into service the military force, or any part thereof under his command, in aid of the civil authority. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 4; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 5.]

SEC. 2172. Command. The command of any force called into service under this chapter shall devolve upon the senior officer of such force, unless otherwise ordered by the commander-in-chief. [26 G.A., ch. 102, § 5; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 6.]

SEC. 2173. Brigades—enlistments. The guard shall be organized into not more than two brigades, each to be commanded by a brigadier-general, to which the commander-in-chief shall assign all regiments, battalions and companies. All enlistments therein shall be for three years, and re-enlistments for one, two or three years, as the soldier may elect, and made by signing enlistment papers prescribed by the adjutant-general and taking the following oath or affirmation, which may be administered by the enlisting officer, to wit: "You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will bear true allegiance to, and that you will support, the constitution of the United States and that of the state of Iowa, and will, as a member of the Iowa national guard, serve the state of Iowa faithfully during your term of service, unless sooner discharged, or you cease to be a citizen thereof, and that you will obey the orders of the commander-in-chief and of such officers as may be placed over you, and the laws governing the military forces of Iowa." [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 7; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 3; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 10.]

SEC. 2174. Staff of commander-in-chief. The staff of the commander-in-chief shall consist of an adjutant-general, quartermaster-general, inspector-general, commissary-general, a surgeon-general, a judge-advocate-general, a general inspector of small arms practice, a chief of engineers, a chief signal officer, a military secretary, and seven aides. They shall be appointed and commissioned by the commander-in-chief, and shall hold office until their successors are appointed and commissioned. The adjutant-general shall have rank of brigadier-general. In time of peace, the chiefs of departments shall have rank of colonel, the military secretary shall have rank of major, and the aides shall have rank of colonel. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 8; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 4; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 43; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 11.]

SEC. 2175. Adjutant-general. The adjutant-general shall issue and transmit all orders of the commander-in-chief, and shall keep a record of appointments, of all officers commissioned by the governor, of all general and special orders and regulations, and of such matters as pertain to the organization of the military force and his duties. He shall reside at the capital and hold his office at the pleasure of the governor; except in times of war or public danger, he shall perform the duties of quartermaster-general. He shall have charge of the state arsenal and grounds, and receive and issue all ordnance stores and camp equipments on the order of the commander-in-chief. The adjutant-general shall furnish at the expense of the state such blanks and forms as shall be approved by the commander-in-chief. He shall in each odd-numbered year make out a detailed report for the preceding two years of the transactions of his office, the expenses thereof, and such other matters as shall be required by the governor, who may at any time require a similar report. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 9; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 4; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 43; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 11.]

SEC. 2176. Generals—election and staff of. The brigadier-general of each brigade shall be elected by the officers and enlisted men thereof, and shall hold his office for five years, or until his resignation shall have been accepted or he is dismissed by sentence of court-martial. On recommendation of the brigade-commander, the governor shall appoint and commission two aides, with rank of first lieutenant, as the personal staff of the brigade-commander. The commander of each brigade shall appoint by warrant, countersigned by the assistant adjutant-general, such non-commissioned staff officers as the commander-in-chief may think proper, and may enlist two men to serve as orderlies. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 10; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 5; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 12.]

SEC. 2177. Regiments—officers of. A regiment shall consist of not less than eight nor more than twelve companies. A colonel and lieutenant-colonel of the regiment and a major for each battalion shall be elected by the officers and enlisted men of the regiment, and each officer shall hold office for five years, or until his resignation shall have been accepted or he is dismissed by sentence of court-martial. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 11; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 6; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 13.]

SEC. 2178. Regimental staff—band. The regimental staff shall be appointed and commissioned by the governor on recommendation of the regimental commander, and shall consist of an adjutant, with rank of captain; a chaplain, with rank of captain; a quartermaster, with rank of first lieutenant; a commissary of subsistence, with rank of first lieutenant; and an adjutant, with rank of first lieutenant for each battalion. The commander of each regiment shall appoint by warrant, countersigned by the adjutant, the non-commissioned staff, consisting of a regimental sergeant-major, and a sergeant-major for each battalion, a quartermaster-sergeant, a commissary-sergeant, a color-sergeant, an ordnance-sergeant, and a chief trumpeter. The commissions of regimental staff officers shall expire when the officer nominating them, or his successor, shall make new nominations for their respective offices, and such nominations shall be confirmed by the commander-in-chief. Each regimental commander may cause to be enlisted and organized a band composed of a chief musician, two principal musicians, a drum major, and not more than twenty privates, under the leadership of such chief musician. The members of such bands shall be subject to the same regulations as other enlisted men. The regimental commander, on the recommendation of the captain, shall appoint the non-commissioned officers of each company, by warrant countersigned by the adjutant. [26 G. A., ch. 102, §§ 12, 13; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 6; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 13.]

SEC. 2179. Company—officers of. A company shall consist of a captain, a first lieutenant, a second lieutenant, five sergeants, four corporals, two musicians, and not less than forty nor more than sixty-four privates and non-commissioned officers. A company of cavalry or artillery shall have the same officers and non-commissioned officers, and a commissary-sergeant, a veterinary sergeant, and a saddler sergeant. In time of war or public danger the commander-in-chief may increase the enlisted strength of such companies as he may deem necessary. The company officers shall be elected by the officers and enlisted men of the company, and shall hold office for five years, unless their resignation shall have been accepted or they are dismissed by sentence of court-martial. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 14; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 8; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 15.]

SEC. 2180. Elections of officers. All elections of company officers shall be ordered by the regimental commander. All elections of field and general officers shall be ordered by the commander-in-chief. Such orders shall be sent to the commanding officer of the company in which said election is ordered, who shall issue his order for such election, giving at least six days' notice thereof, by posting in three public places accessible to the members of his command, and, where practicable, the same shall be published in one or more newspapers in the county where said company is located. All voting shall be in person and by ballot, and a majority of all votes cast shall elect. The senior officer present at such election shall preside. The returns of elections attested by the presiding officer shall be made within five days from the date thereof to the commanding officer of the regiment, who shall promptly forward the same through military channels to the adjutant-general, who, upon approval of the commander-in-chief, shall issue commissions accordingly. At the organization of a new company, the election shall be conducted under such regulations as the adjutant-general shall prescribe. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 15; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 8; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 15.]

SEC. 2181. Medical and staff departments. The medical department, in addition to the surgeon-general, shall consist of a deputy surgeon, with rank of lieutenant-colonel, for each brigade; one surgeon, with rank of major and an assistant surgeon for each regiment, and an additional assistant surgeon for each twelve-company regiment. Assistant surgeons for the first five years of commission shall have rank of first lieutenant, after which they shall have rank of captain. The enlisted men of the medical department shall consist of a hospital steward for each regiment, and one acting hospital steward for each assistant surgeon, and such number of privates as the commander-in-chief may prescribe. The other staff departments, in addition to the heads of departments and personal aides and regimental staff, shall be as follows: an assistant adjutant-general, with rank of major; an assistant inspector-general, with rank of major; a judge-advocate, with rank of major; an inspector of small arms practice, with rank of major; an engineer officer, with rank of captain; a signal officer, with rank of captain; a quartermaster, with rank of captain; and a commissary of subsistence, with rank of captain, for each brigade; and an inspector of small arms practice, with rank of captain; an engineer officer, with rank of first lieutenant; a signal officer, with rank of first lieutenant, for each regiment, and such non-commissioned officers and enlisted men as the commander-in-chief may prescribe, for engineer and signal departments. The commander-in-chief shall detail the officers and enlisted men of the staff department for duty with the brigades and regiments upon recommendation of their respective chiefs. All staff officers except heads of departments, aides to the commander-in-chief, regimental staff and personal aides to brigadier-general, shall be appointed and commissioned by the commander-in-chief for five years on the recommendation of the chiefs of their respective departments, selected by examination under such rules as the chiefs may prescribe. [26 G. A., ch. 102, §§ 30, 43–5.]

SEC. 2182. Rules. Every company and regimental band may make rules for its own government, not in conflict with this chapter and general orders or regulations, subject to the approval of the regimental commander. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 16; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 16.]

SEC. 2183. Term of service—resignation—discharge. Every officer of the guard shall be held to duty for the full term of his commission, unless his resignation shall have been sooner accepted, or he shall have been dismissed by sentence of court-martial. Every enlisted man of the guard shall be held to duty for the full term of his enlistment from the time he becomes an active member thereof, unless regularly discharged for good and sufficient cause by the regimental commander, approved by the commander-in-chief. All members thereof, serving the full term for which they are commissioned or enlisted in the guard, shall, on application, be entitled to an honorable discharge exempting them from military duty except in time of war or public danger. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 17; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 9; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 17.]

SEC. 2184. Parades—encampments. The guard may parade for encampment or drill not less than three nor more than ten days annually, by company, battalion, regiment or brigade as ordered by commander-in-chief. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 18; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 10; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 4; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 21.]

SEC. 2185. Transportation. The quartermaster-general shall provide transportation to and from the encampments and points of active service. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 19; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 10; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 4; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 21.]

SEC. 2186. Discipline. The organization, equipment, discipline and military regulations of the guard shall conform to the regulations for the government of the army of the United States, except as otherwise provided.

The commander-in-chief may at any time change the organization of regiments, battalions or companies so as to conform as nearly as practicable to the organization of the United States army, or that prescribed by the authorized military authority of the United States, or by authority of congress. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 20; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 18.]

SEC. 2187. Field duty. The commanding officer of any force of the guard in active service, or at any encampment, may require those under his command to perform any field or camp duty. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 21; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 22.]

SEC. 2188. Penalties. Any person who shall trespass on the encampment grounds or the camp grounds of the guards in active service or interrupt, molest or interfere with any member of the guard in the discharge of his duties, or sell any malt, spirituous or other intoxicating liquors within one mile of such encampment or camp, except under permit already issued by lawful authority, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and the commanding officer of such force may order the arrest of such person and cause him to be delivered to a peace officer or magistrate as soon as practicable. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 22; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 22.]

SEC. 2189. Special duty—drill. The commander-in-chief may, whenever the exigencies of the public service require it, detail any officer or soldier for special duty, and the expenses and proper compensation therefor may be paid under such provisons as the commander-in-chief may prescribe. The regimental commander may order semimonthly or weekly day or evening drill by the companies of his command, but the members shall receive no compensation therefor. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 23; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 11; 18 G. A, ch. 74, § 20.]

SEC. 2190. Arms, equipments and ammunition. Upon the organization of any company or regiment of the guard, on the requisition of its commanding officer and the approval of the governor, the adjutant-general shall issue necessary arms, equipments and ammunition, and the commanding officer shall deliver to the adjutant-general a bond therefor, payable to the state, in sufficient amount, with sureties to be approved by the governor, conditioned for their proper use, and, upon request of the proper officer, for their return in good order, wear, use, unavoidable loss and damage excepted. All arms and other property issued by the state shall be kept at the company or regimental armory. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 24; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 24.]

SEC. 2191. Inspection—school of instruction. Such inspections and schools of instruction for officers and enlisted men of the guard shall be held as the commander-in-chief may from time to time direct. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 25; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 12; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 25.]

SEC. 2192. Embezzlement of state property. Any officer or soldier of the guard knowingly making any false certificate or muster or false return of state property in his hands, or wilfully neglecting or refusing to apply all money drawn from the state treasury for the purpose named in the requisition therefor, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by fine in the amount of money not so applied, or both such fine and imprisonment, and all costs of prosecution. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 26; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 26.]

SEC. 2193. Uniforms. The guard shall adopt the uniform of the army of the United States, subject to such modifications as shall be prescribed by the commander-in-chief. The field, staff and company officers thereof shall provide themselves with the uniform prescribed within ninety days from the date of commission. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 27; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 13; 18 G. A., ch. 74, §§ 27, 28.]

SEC. 2194. Penalty for failure to return arms, etc. Every member of the guard who shall wilfully neglect to return to the armory of the company, or place in charge of the commanding officer of the company to which he belongs, any arms, uniform or equipment, or portion thereof, belonging to the state within six days after being notified by said commanding officer to do so, shall be fined not more than fifty dollars or imprisoned not more than thirty days. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 28; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 29.]

SEC. 2195. Fines for absence or misconduct—suit for. Every soldier absent from any tour of active service, parade, drill or encampment, without leave or sufficient excuse, shall be fined two dollars for each day of absence; and for any unsoldierly conduct during any such service he may be fined not more than ten dollars. Such fines shall be collected by civil action in the name of the state for the use of the company to which the soldier fined belongs; but in no case shall the state pay the costs of such action. Any company or band may impose such fines upon its members as it may think proper in its by-laws, which may be enforced in the manner above provided. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 29; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 31.]

The fine here provided for is to be assessed by the court and not by the superior officer, and the court has the power to determine whether sufficient excuse existed for absence from duty: State v. Ryan, 69 N. W., 1123.

SEC. 2196. General courts-martial. Any member of the guard charged with a military offense as defined in this chapter or in the articles of war and general regulations governing the army of the United States, or any regulations promulgated by the commander-in-chief under authority of this chapter, may be tried by a general court-martial ordered and appointed by the commander-in-chief. The organization of the court and the forms of procedure shall, as far as practicable, be those prescribed in said articles of war and regulations. The punishment fixed in the sentence shall not be other than dismissal or dishonorable discharge from the service, reduction to the ranks if a non-commissioned officer, suspension from duty and forfeiture of compensation, or confinement for a period named in the sentence, or reprimand, according to the gravity of the offense. Witnesses duly served with subpœna, signed by the judge-advocate, shall appear and testify as if duly served with subpœnas to appear and testify in the district court, and shall receive the same fees and mileage therefor, to be taxed as costs, which, with other necessary expenses of the judge-advocate and the court, shall be taxed and certified by the president of the court-martial, and paid by the state treasurer upon the auditor's warrant issued therefor to the judge-advocate, who shall pay the expenses of the trial. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 31; 18 G. A., ch. 74, §§ 22, 33, 44.]

SEC. 2197. Inferior courts-martial. Inferior courts-martial are hereby authorized, and the constitution, composition, jurisdiction and proceedings thereof shall be assimilated to courts of the same nature in the army of the United States, but no stoppage of pay or confinement shall exceed that provided for in similar courts by the United States army regulations. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 32.]

SEC. 2198. Sentence. The proceedings of all general courts-martial shall be submitted to the commander-in-chief, who shall approve or disapprove the same, or he may mitigate or remit any punishment imposed by the sentence of said court. The proceedings of inferior courts-martial shall be approved or disapproved by the commanding officer, who may in like manner mitigate or remit the punishment fixed in the sentence. In all cases, the record of the proceedings of the court-martial, with the order of the commander-in-chief or commanding officer accompanied therewith, shall be preserved as a permanent record in the office of the adjutant-general. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 33; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 34.]

SEC. 2199. Military board. An examining board of three or more competent officers, appointed by the commander-in-chief, shall convene at such times and places as he shall direct, whose duty it shall be to examine into the capacity, qualifications, propriety of conduct and efficiency of commissioned officers who shall be ordered before it, and, upon the report of said board, if adverse to such officer and approved by the commander-in-chief, the commission of such officer shall be vacated. No officer shall be eligible to sit on such board whose rank or promotion would in any way be affected by the proceedings, and two members at least shall be of equal or superior rank to the officer examined. If any officer shall refuse to report himself before said board when directed, the commander-in-chief may, upon the report of such refusal by such board, vacate his commission. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 34; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 14; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 35.]

SEC. 2200. Military organizations. It shall be unlawful for any body of men, other than the regularly organized volunteer militia of this state and the troops of the United States, to associate themselves together as a military company or organization within the limits of this state without the written permission of the governor, which he may at any time revoke; but this provision shall not prevent civic, social or benevolent organizations from wearing uniforms and swords. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 35; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 36.]

SEC. 2201. Payment for uniforms. Uniforms in kind may be issued by the state under such provisions as the commander-in-chief may direct, or, in lieu thereof, there may be annually paid to each officer and soldier of the guard the sum of four dollars to be paid under like provisions, but in no event will the state be liable for the payment of any money in lieu of uniforms, or for any purpose contemplated in this chapter, unless such payment can be made without exceeding the annual appropriation provided by this chapter. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 36; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 15; 18 G. A., ch. 74, §§ 37, 38.]

SEC. 2202. To belong to state. All uniforms and other military property furnished by the state, or for which an allowance has been made, shall belong to the state, and shall be used for military purposes only, and each officer and soldier, upon receiving a discharge, or otherwise leaving the military service of the state, or upon demand of his commanding officer, shall forthwith surrender such state military property in his possession to said commanding officer. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 37; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 15; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 39.]

SEC. 2203. Allowance for headquarters. There shall be allowed annually for postage, stationery and office incidentals to each brigade headquarters the sum of twenty-five dollars; to each regimental headquarters the sum of twenty-five dollars, and to each company headquarters the sum of ten dollars. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 38; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 40.]

SEC. 2204. Allowance for company and band. There shall be allowed annually to each company and band for armory rent, fuel, lights and like necessary expenses, the sum of two hundred dollars. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 39: 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 17; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 41.]

SEC. 2205. Regulations. The commander-in-chief is authorized to make and publish regulations for the government and discipline of the guard, not in conflict with existing laws. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 40; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 43.]

SEC. 2206. Companies may be disbanded. The commander-in-chief shall disband any company of the guard when it shall fall below a proper standard of efficiency, and he may order special inspections with a view of determining such efficiency. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 41; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 3; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 45.]

SEC 2207. Words construed. In this chapter the word "soldier" shall include musicians and all persons in the guard or in the militia when called into service, except commissioned officers, and the word "company " shall include battery of artillery and troop of cavalry. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 42; 24 G. A., ch. 31, § 18; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 46.]

SEC. 2208. Loan of arms to schools and colleges. Subject to such regulations as the governor may direct, the adjutant-general may loan the surplus arms and accouterments of the state to military schools and colleges in good standing within the state which include military drill in their course of instructions; but when any arms or accouterments are delivered to such an institution, the proper officers thereof shall deliver to the adjutant-general a bond to the state in such amount and with such sureties as the governor approves, conditioned for the proper use of such arms and accouterments and the return of the same in good order, wear and use excepted, upon the request of the adjutant-general. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 46; 24 G. A., ch. 32.]

SEC. 2209. Exemptions and privileges. Every officer and soldier of the guard shall be exempt from jury duty and poll tax during his term of service, and, except in cases of treason, felony or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during his attendance at drill, parades, encampments, active service, election of officers, and in going to and in returning from the same. The uniform, arms and equipments of every member of the guard shall be exempt from attachment, execution or sale for debt or taxes. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 47; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 19.]

SEC. 2210. Penalty for injuring or disposing of arms, etc. Every person who shall wilfully or wantonly injure or destroy any article of uniform, arms, equipment or other military property of the state, and refuse to make good such injury or loss, or who shall sell, dispose of, secrete or remove the same with the intent to sell or dispose of it, or shall unlawfully break or enter any armory or place where any such arms or equipments are stored, with the intent to remove the same therefrom, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two months, or by both fine and imprisonment. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 48; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 30.]

SEC. 2211. Compensation of adjutant-general and assistants. The adjutant-general shall receive an annual salary of fifteen hundred dollars. Such assistance shall be employed in the adjutant-general's and quartermaster-general's department as shall, in the opinion of the commander-in-chief, be actually necessary, and any person so employed shall receive for the time actually and necessarily on duty such compensation as the commander-in-chief may prescribe. [26 G. A., ch. 102, §§ 49, 50; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 43; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 11.]

SEC. 2212. Compensation of officers and men. The military force, when in the active service of the state in time of insurrection or invasion or immediate danger thereof, shall be paid the following compensation for every day actually on duty: Each general, field and staff officer, four dollars; every other commissioned officer, two dollars and fifty cents; every non-commissioned officer, two dollars; every other enlisted man, one dollar and fifty cents; and necessary transportation, subsistence and quarters; the same to be paid out of any money especially appropriated for that purpose. When in actual service of the state in case of riot, tumult or breach of the peace or imminent danger thereof, pursuant to the order of the governor, they shall receive the same compensation, transportation, subsistence and quarters, to be paid out of the state treasury, and for such services rendered upon the call of the sheriff, they shall receive the same compensation, transportation, subsistence and quarters, to be paid from the treasury of such county; claims being audited and allowed in the former cases by the executive council, and in the latter by the board of supervisors, at its next session. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 51; 18 G. A., ch. 74, §§ 7–8.]

This section does not provide for subsistence of troops in actual service, but only the per diem to be paid for services in time of insurrection or invasion or immediate danger thereof. It does not embrace services rendered in suppressing or preventing breaches of the peace, and in such case the compensation and expenses are to be paid out of the state treasury by the executive council under the provisions of § 170: Prime v. McCarthy, 92-569.

Compensation is to be paid by the county when military forces within the county are called upon by the sheriff to render services pursuant to his order. If called out by the governor, the county is not liable: Ibid.

SEC. 2213. Compensation during encampments. For the time spent in each annual encampment or drill, compensation to be paid under such provision as the commander-in-chief may direct, and graded according to length of continuous service therein, shall be allowed as follows: To each officer and soldier of less than three years' continuous service, one dollar per day; to each officer and soldier of more than three years', and less than five years', continuous service, one dollar and fifty cents per day; to each officer and soldier of more than five years' continuous service, two dollars per day. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 52; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 4; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 21.]

SEC. 2214. Appropriation. There is appropriated out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of fifty thousand two hundred dollars per annum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the support of the guard under the provisions of this chapter not applying to active service, which shall be drawn by a warrant, drawn by the auditor of state on the state treasurer, upon the certificates of the adjutant-general approved by the governor, showing for what purpose each draft is to be or has been used, and no indebtedness shall be created in excess of such annual appropriation. [26 G. A., ch. 102, § 53; 26 G. A., ch. 103; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 5; 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 51.]

The appropriations here made are not intended to cover the expense involved in the employment of the national guards to suppress breaches of the peace. When the guards are called out by the sheriff for that purpose the expense is to be paid by the county, otherwise it may be paid out of the state treasury by the order of the executive council under the provisions of § 170: Prime v. McCarthy, 92-569.

SEC. 2215. Time of taking effect. That part of the military code affecting the reorganization of the staff departments shall not take effect until the expiration of the present term of office of the commander-in-chief.

TITLE XII.

OF THE POLICE OF THE STATE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE SETTLEMENT AND SUPPORT OF THE POOR.

SECTION 2216. Who liable to maintain. The father, mother and children of any poor person, who is unable to maintain himself or herself by labor, shall jointly or severally relieve or maintain such person in such manner as, upon application to the township trustees of the township where such person has a residence or may be, they may direct. [C. '73, § 1330; R., § 1355; C. '51, § 787.]

A child is not liable for the support of a parent except as provided by statute, and such liability can be enforced only in the manner specified; but the obligation of a parent to support a child until maturity is a perfect common-law duty: Dawson v. Dawson, 12–512.

Where one was afflicted with disease and cruelly treated by the members of his family, so that he was driven from home, held, that he was a poor person within the meaning of this section, although he had property which was appropriated and withheld from him by such family; and therefore that his son was liable to an action by the county for support furnished to him, and that the county, although having the right of action against the wife, might waive it and enforce recovery against the son: Jasper County v. Osborn, 59–208.

SEC. 2217. Same. In the absence or inability of nearer relatives, the same liability shall extend to grandparents, if of ability without personal labor, and to the male grandchildren who are of ability by personal labor or otherwise. [C. '73, § 1331; R., § 1356; C. '51, § 788.]

SEC. 2218. Proceeding to compel. Upon the failure of such relatives so to relieve or maintain a poor person who has made application for relief, the township trustees may apply to the district court of the county where such poor person resides or may be, for an order to compel the same. [C. '73, § 1333; R., § 1357; C. '51, § 789.]

SEC. 2219. Notice—hearing—order—appeal. At least ten days' notice in writing of the application shall be given to the parties sought to be charged, service thereof to be made as of an original notice, in which proceedings the county shall be plaintiff and the parties served defendants. No order shall be made affecting a person not served, but, as to such, notice may be given at any stage of the proceedings. The court may proceed in a summary manner to hear all the allegations and proofs of the parties, and order any one or more of the relatives who shall be able, to relieve or maintain him or her, charging them as far as practicable in the order above named, and for that purpose may bring in new parties when necessary. The order may be for the entire or partial support of the applicant, may be for the payment of money or the taking of the applicant to a relative's house, or may assign him or her for a certain time to one and for another period to another, as may be just and right, taking into view the means of the several relatives liable, but no such assignment shall be made to one who is willing to pay the amount necessary for support. If the order be for relief in any other form than money, it shall state the extent and value thereof per week, and the time such relief shall continue; or the order may make the time of continuance indefinite, and it may be varied from time to time by a new order, as circumstances may require, upon application to the court by the trustees, the poor person, or the relative affected, ten days' notice thereof being given to the party or parties concerned. When money is ordered to be paid, it shall be paid to such person as the court may direct. If support be not rendered as ordered, the court, upon such fact being shown by the affidavit of one or more of the proper trustees, may render judgment and order execution for the amount due, rating any support ordered in kind at the valuation previously made. An appeal may be taken from the judgment rendered to the supreme court. Support for later periods under the same order may be, as it becomes due, applied for and obtained in the same manner. [C.'73, §§ 1334–42; R., §§ 1358–66; C.'73, §§ 790–8.]

SEC. 2220. Abandonment—order as to property. Whenever a father or mother abandons children, husband his wife, or wife her husband, leaving them a public charge or likely to become such, the trustees of the township, upon application to them, may make complaint to the clerk of the district court or judge thereof in the county in which such abandoned person resides, or in which any property of such father, mother, husband or wife is situated, for an order to seize such property, and, upon proof of the facts alleged, the clerk or judge shall issue an order, directed to the sheriff of the county, to take and hold possession of said property, subject to the further orders of the court, which order shall be executed by taking possession of chattel property wherever found, and shall entitle the officer serving the same to collect and hold the rents accruing upon real property. Statement of the issuance of the order and a description of any real estate sought to be affected thereby, shall be entered in the incumbrance book, and from the date thereof shall be superior in right to any conveyance or lien created by the owner thereafter, and return shall be made of said order to the proper court, where the order of seizure, upon investigation, may be discharged or continued; if continued, the entire matter shall be subject to the control of the court, and it shall from time to time make such orders as to the disposition of the personal property seized, and the application of it or the proceeds thereof, as it may seem proper, and of the disposition of the rents and profits of the real estate. Should the party against whom the order issued thereafter resume his or her support of the person abandoned, or give bond with sureties, to be by the clerk approved, conditioned that such person shall not become chargeable to the county, the order shall be by the clerk discharged and the property remaining restored. [C.'73, §§ 1343–8; R., §§ 1367–72; C.'51, §§ 799–804.]

SEC. 2221. Trial by jury. In all cases the party sought to be charged with the support of another may demand a jury trial upon the question of his obligation and ability to render such support, the alleged abandonment, and the liability of the person abandoned to become a public charge; such trial to be had upon demand, which may be made at the time of the hearing of the application for the order, or at such other time as may be directed by the court, upon notice to the defendant. [C.'73, § 1349; R., § 1373; C.'51, § 805.]

SEC. 2222. Recovery by county. Any county having expended any money for the relief or support of a poor person, under the provisions of this chapter, may recover the same from any of his kindred mentioned herein, from such poor person should he become able, or from his estate; from relatives by action brought within two years from the payment of such expenses, from such poor person by action brought within two years after becoming able, and from such person's estate by filing the claim as provided by law. [C.'73, § 1350; R., § 1374; C.'51, § 806.]

The kindred may be made liable as here provided without any proceedings having been instituted under § 2218 et seq.: Boone County v. Ruhl, 9–276.

Under the Code of '73 there was no provision making a pauper liable to the county for aid furnished him as such, and he could not be held liable on an implied promise: Bremer County v. Curtis, 54–72.

Nor could the county recover from his estate for such aid; and this was true notwithstanding the provision as to the liability of relatives: Ibid.

A poor person may be a county charge although the county may be able to recover from the relatives the sum charged as paid for his support: Tweedy v. Fremont County, 68 N. W., 921.

SEC. 2223. By relative. A more distant relation, who may have been compelled to aid a poor person, may recover from any one or more of the nearer relatives, and one so compelled to aid may recover contribution from others in the same degree, and a recovery may be had against the poor person or his estate, if, after such aid or support has been given, the person aided or supported becomes able to repay the same; but proceedings to recover therefor must be brought within two years from the time a cause of action accrues. [C.'73, § 1351; R., § 1375; C.'51, § 807.]

SEC. 2224. Settlement—how acquired. A legal settlement once acquired continues until lost by acquiring a new one, and may be acquired as follows:

1. Any person having attained majority, and residing in this state one year without being warned as hereinafter provided, gains a settlement in the county of his residence;

2. A married woman follows and has the settlement of her husband, if he have any within the state, and if she had a settlement at the time of the marriage it is not lost by the marriage;

3. A married woman abandoned by her husband may acquire a settlement as if she were unmarried;

4. Legitimate minor children follow and have the settlement of their father, if he has one, but if he has none, then that of the mother;

5. Illegitimate minor children follow and have the settlement of their mother, or, if she has none, then that of their putative father;

6. A minor whose parent has no settlement in this state, and a married woman living apart from her husband and having no settlement, and whose husband has no settlement in this state, residing one year in any county, gains a settlement in such county;

7. A minor bound as an apprentice, immediately upon such binding, gains a settlement where his master has one. [C.'73, §§ 1352–3; R., §§ 1376–7; C.'51, §§ 808–9.]

The residence contemplated in this section is his "personal presence in a fixed, permanent abode:" Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 50–439.

Facts considered as showing what was the county of residence of the person receiving relief: Cerro Gordo County v. Hancock County, 58–114.

A prima facie case of settlement is made by proving residence, unless it be proven or conceded that the party is a married woman; in such case it might be necessary to prove either that her husband resides in the same county or that she has been deserted by him: Scott County v. Polk County, 61–616.

The provisions of this section are applicable to the case of an insane person who becomes a county charge: Ibid.

A person choosing a residence while sane, and removing there, acquires a settlement as provided in this section, although he becomes insane and is removed to the hospital before the expiration of the year. Such removal to the hospital is not an interruption of his residence: Washington County v. Mahaska County, 47–57.

A person who is insane and helpless and does not voluntarily change his place of residence, but is a simple, passive subject without exercise of volition, does not acquire a settlement upon being removed from one county to another at the expense of the former: Fayette County v. Bremer County, 56–516.

If taken from one county to the other at the suggestion of the former county, merely that the charge of the person may remain with the same party who has had such charge, the settlement will remain as though no such change had been made: Ibid.

The fact that a minor is emancipated does not enable him to acquire by residence a settlement distinct from that of his father: Clay County v. Palo Alto County, 82–626.

SEC. 2225. Foreign paupers. A person coming from another state, and not having become a citizen of nor having a settlement in the state, applying for relief, may be sent to the state whence he came, at the expense of the county, under an order of the district court or judge; otherwise he is to be temporarily relieved in the county where he applies. [C.'73, § 1354; R., § 1379; C.'51, § 811.]

SEC. 2226. Warning to depart. Persons coming into the state, or going from one county to another, who are county charges or are likely to become such, may be prevented from acquiring a settlement by the authorities of the county, township or city in which such persons are found warning them to depart therefrom. After such warning, such persons cannot acquire a settlement except by the requisite residence of one year without further warning. [C.'73, § 1355; R., § 1380; C. '51, § 812.]

SEC. 2227. How served. Such warning shall be in writing, and may be served upon the order of the trustees of the township, or of the board of supervisors, by any person; and such person shall make a return of his doings thereon to the board of supervisors, which, if not made by a sworn officer, must be verified by affidavit. [C. '73, § 1356; R., § 1381; C.'51, § 813.]

A warning for the purpose of preventing a pauper coming into the county from obtaining a settlement may be served upon the order of the trustees of the township, but the service of such warning signed by the trustees themselves does not constitute a sufficient order by them: Bremer County v. Buchanan County, 61–624.

SEC. 2228. Contest as to settlement. When relief is granted by a county to a poor person having a settlement in another county, the auditor shall at once by mail notify the auditor of the county of his settlement of such fact, and, within fifteen days after receipt of such notice, such auditor shall inform the auditor of the county granting relief if the claim of settlement is disputed. If it is not, the poor person, if able, may be removed to the county of his settlement, or, at the request of the auditor or board of supervisors of the county of his settlement, he may be maintained where he then is at the expense of such county, and without affecting his legal settlement. If the alleged settlement is disputed, then, within thirty days after notice thereof as above provided, a copy of the notices sent and received shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county against which claim is made, and a cause docketed without other pleadings, and tried as an ordinary action, in which the county affording the relief shall be plaintiff, and the other defendant, and the burden of proof shall be upon the county granting the relief or making the removal. [C.'73, §§ 1357, 1359–60; R., §§ 1382, 1384–5; C.'51, §§ 814, 816–17.]

Notice by one county to another that a poor person having a settlement in the latter has become a county charge in the former, and is receiving relief, and that the county of settlement will be held responsible, imposes on the latter county the duty of making an order for removal. It is, in such case, not obliged to serve upon the other county notice of intention to contest the order for removal. If, instead of making the order for removal, the county furnishing the relief gives notice that the pauper has become a county charge and is receiving relief, and that the county of settlement will be held responsible, it may recover of the county of settlement, but the burden is upon it to show that the person relieved had a settlement in the defendant county: Winneshiek County v. Allamakee County, 62–558.

In the petition in an action by one county to recover from another the expenses of the support of a pauper it must be averred that the defendant county is the county of the pauper's settlement. An averment that plaintiff is informed that the pauper has a settlement in defendant county is not sufficient: Ibid.

Notice from the auditor of one county to the auditor of the other that relief was being furnished to a poor person having a residence in the latter county, held sufficient: Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 50–439.

It does not follow that, because a person is obliged to apply to the county for relief where he has no settlement, he should be removed at once to the county of his settlement regardless of distance, expense or other circumstances. The county furnishing the relief should have a right of action upon the county of the settlement for relief so furnished, without obligating the supervisors of the latter county to make an order of removal; and it should be allowable in such cases to give notice of such claim for relief furnished, without requiring removal. The county auditor may give such notice, but the notice for the order of removal can only be given by the township trustees or county supervisors: Scott County v. Polk County, 61–616.

Where a party removes from one county to another, and, before obtaining a settlement in the new county, receives assistance, the county from which the person removes is liable therefor, although the person to whom the relief is furnished did not have a "pauper record" prior to such removal: Hardin County v. Wright County, 67–127.

The county applied to for relief may make an order of removal to the county of the pauper's settlement, and give notice thereof, or it may give to the county of the settlement notice that such pauper has become a county charge. In the latter case the county notified is not under obligation to give notice of its intention to contest the removal: Winneshiek County v. Allamakee County, 62–558.

Under the section as it stood before the abolition of the circuit court that court had exclusive jurisdiction, and the case could not be taken to the district court even by consent of parties: Ibid.; Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 59–485.

SEC. 2229. County of settlement liable. The county where the settlement is shall be liable to the county rendering relief for all reasonable charges and expenses incurred in the relief and care of a poor person, and for the charges of removal and expenses of support incurred after notice is given. [C.'73, § 1358; R., § 1383; C.'51, § 815.]

Action cannot be brought by one county against another for charges, etc., as here contemplated, until the claim is presented to the board of supervisors of the county liable, and payment demanded as provided in § 3528: Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 50–439.

Ignorance of the fact of the pauper's settlement will not prevent the statute of limitations from running against such claim: Washington County v. Mahaska County, 47–57.

In the petition in an action by one county to recover from another the expenses of the support of a pauper it must be averred that the defendant county is the county of the pauper's settlement. An averment that plaintiff is informed that the pauper has a settlement in defendant county is not sufficient: Winneshiek County v. Allamakee County, 62–558.

The fact that the county furnishing support does so without the claim therefor being approved by the township trustees does not preclude such county from recovering from the county of the settlement: Clay County v. Palo Alto County, 82–626.

SEC. 2230. Relief by trustees—overseer of the poor. The township trustees of each township, subject to general rules that may be adopted by the board of supervisors, shall provide for the relief of such poor persons in their respective townships as should not, in their judgment, be sent to the county poor-house. But where a city is embraced, in whole or in part, within the limits of any township, the board of supervisors may appoint an overseer of the poor, who shall have within said city, or part thereof, all the powers and duties conferred by this chapter on the township trustees. The relief may be either in the form of food, rent or clothing, fuel and lights, medical attendance, or in money, and shall not exceed two dollars per week for each person for whom relief is thus furnished, exclusive of medical attendance. They may require any able-bodied person to labor faithfully on the streets or highways at the rate of five cents per hour in payment for and as a condition of granting relief; said labor shall be performed under the direction of the officers having charge of working streets and highways. When medical services are rendered by order of the trustees or overseers of the poor, no more shall be charged or paid therefor than is usually charged for like services in the neighborhood where such services are rendered. No supervisor, trustee or overseer shall be directly or indirectly interested in any supplies furnished the poor. [18 G. A., ch. 133; C.'73, § 1361.]

30 Ia, 1, 15

Where a board of supervisors appoints an overseer of the poor for a city of the first or second class the power conferred upon such overseer is exclusive of that of the trustees of the township in which such city is located: Hoyt v. Black Hawk County, 59–184.

The township trustees having provided relief, the board of supervisors cannot limit the amount of such relief unless they establish a limit before the relief is rendered as may be done by § 2232. If no limit is established the board must pay the reasonable value of the services rendered: Hunter v. Jasper County, 40–568.

"Medical attendance" is not restricted to the services of a physician, but may include nursing, etc., and the expense thereof is not limited to two dollars per week: Scott v. Winneshiek County, 52–579.

The board of supervisors have power to determine under § 2234 whether they will continue or deny the relief thus granted: Ellison v. Harrison County, 74–494.

SEC. 2231. Soldiers or families. No person who has served in the army or navy of the United States, or their widows or families, requiring public relief shall be sent to the poor-house, when they can and prefer to be relieved to the extent above provided, and other persons and families may, at the discretion of the board, also be so relieved. [17 G. A., ch. 37; 16 G. A., ch. 26; C.'73, § 1362.]

SEC. 2232. County expense. All moneys expended as contemplated in the two preceding sections shall be paid out of the county treasury, after the proper account rendered thereof shall have been approved by the boards of the respective counties, and in all cases the necessary appropriations therefor shall be made by the respective counties. But the board may limit the amount thus to be furnished. [C.'73, § 1363.]

Any limit to the amount of relief to be furnished must be fixed in advance, otherwise the board must pay the reasonable value of the services rendered: Hunter v. Jasper County, 40–568.

SEC. 2233. Township trustees—duty. The trustees in each township, in counties where there is no poor-house, have the oversight and care of all poor persons in their township, and shall see that they receive proper care until provided for by the board of supervisors. [C. '73, § 1364; R., § 1387; C. '51, § 819.]

SEC. 2234. Application for relief—action of supervisors. The poor must make application for relief to the trustees of the township where they may be, and, if the trustees are satisfied that the applicant is in such a state of want as requires relief at the public expense, they may afford such relief, subject to the approval of the board of supervisors, as the necessities of the person require, and shall report the case forthwith to the board of supervisors, who may continue or deny relief, as they find cause. The board of supervisors may examine into all claims, including claims for medical attendance, allowed by the township trustees for the support of the poor, and, if they find the amount allowed by said trustees to be unreasonable, exorbitant or for any goods or services other than for the necessaries of life, they may reject or diminish the claim as in their judgment would be right and just, and this act shall apply to all counties in the state, whether there are poor-houses established in the same or not. This act shall apply to acts of overseers of poor in cities as well as to township trustees. [22 G. A., ch. 101; C. '73, § 1365; R., § 1388; C. '51, § 820.]

Under prior provisions the township trustees might bind the county for medical services rendered at their instance to poor sick persons in their township while the board of supervisors was not in session. Whether the physician employed by the trustees had a right to compensation for services rendered after the trustees ought to have reported to the board, though he was not notified of their failure to do so, quære: Coolridge v. Mahaska County, 24–211.

With the trustees rests, in the first instance, the determination of the question whether a poor person needs aid, and the nature of the relief to be given, and if made in good faith it binds the board of supervisors (so held under the Revision): Armstrong v. Tama County, 34–309.

Where the board of supervisors, as a matter of precaution and in the interest of economy, employ a convenient and competent physician, in advance, to furnish to all poor persons of the county all medicines and medical aid that they may require, the trustees cannot disregard such employment and render the county liable for services rendered by a physician employed by them: Mansfield v. Sac County, 59–694; Gawley v. Jones County, 60–159.

When the trustees authorize aid to be furnished to a poor person, it may be continued, if done in good faith, until the board of supervisors otherwise order, even though the trustees fail to report the case to the board; and the trustees, in such case of failure to report, will be held liable to the county for damages arising from continuance of aid to persons not properly entitled to it: Mansfield v. Sac County, 60–11.

Recovery cannot be had for aid furnished before application is made to the trustees, and the furnishing of such aid is authorized by them: Ibid.

The board have the authority to continue or deny the relief to persons to whom relief has been granted by the township trustees under the provisions of § 2230: Ellison v. Harrison County, 74–494.

Written orders of the township trustees for relief upon which the board of supervisors act are valid although not made of record as required in general with reference to the action of the trustees by § 576: Bremer County v. Buchanan County, 61–624.

The duty of the township trustees when applied to for relief for the poor is not to be determined by very rigid rules; they must, in the exercise of a wise discretion, grant relief where they judge that humanity requires it. Where they act in good faith, or without abuse of discretion, their action is not subject to review: Hardin County v. Wright County, 67–127.

The fact that the party to whom relief is furnished has, in fact, property, will not render the furnishing of relief necessarily improper: Ibid.

A pauper resident of one township who receives an injury while temporarily in another township may lawfully receive aid by order of the trustees of the latter: Mussel v. Tama County, 73–101.

In a particular case, held, that the application for support made by another in behalf of the person by whom the support was furnished was sufficient: Clay County v. Palo Alto County, 82–626.

SEC. 2235. Payment of claims. All claims and bills for the care and support of the poor shall be certified to be correct by the proper trustees and presented to the board of supervisors, and, if they are satisfied that they are reasonable and proper, they shall be paid out of the county treasury. In no case shall a trustee, or either of the trustees, nor overseer of the poor, draw an order upon himself, or upon either of the board, for supplies for the poor, except such trustees or overseer has a contract to furnish such supplies. [22 G. A., ch. 101; C.'73, § 1365–6; R., §§ 1388–9; C.'51, §§ 820–1.]

The obligation of the county to support the poor is purely statutory: Cooledge v. Mahaska County, 24-211.

Under prior statutes, held that neither the county judge nor county court had jurisdiction over the settlement or support of the poor, such jurisdiction being vested in the board of supervisors: Lucas County v. Ringgold County, 21-83.

The action of the board in allowing claims for care and support is of a quasi-judicial character, but the claimant having presented his bill is not limited to an appeal from the action of the board, but may bring suit against the county by ordinary proceedings: Armstrong v. Tama County, 34-309.

The certificate of the trustees required by that section to be presented with the claim to the board need not be made at a regular meeting: Hunter v. Jasper County, 40-568.

The board of supervisors may waive such certificate: Collins v. Lucas County, 50-448; Bradley v. Delaware County, 57-552.

A recommendation by the trustees that a bill be paid is not equivalent to the certificate required, and is not sufficient to entitle claimant to payment of his claim from the county: Mansfield v. Sac County, 60-11.

A certificate signed by the trustees, to the effect that they had ordered the services specified in claimant's bill for medical service to poor persons, but not stating that the charges were correct, held not a sufficient certificate as required by statute: Sloan v. Webster County, 61-738.

The duty of determining who are to be relieved at the public expense pertains to the trustees and cannot be delegated to a physician or any other person; and where blank certificates were filled out by two trustees and left with a third person in order to be filled up by the physician [illegible] services to poor persons as he should [illegible]nate, held, that such certificates were not sufficient to entitle the physician to recover from the county: Ibid.

Where the liability of the county is directly put in issue, a member of the board of supervisors cannot be regarded as having waived the certificate: Ibid.

A certificate of the trustees showing that the aid was furnished at their request and by their order is conclusive in that respect, and cannot be contradicted by parol evidence: Mussel v. Tama County, 73-101.

The provision that bills shall be certified by the township trustees is not a limitation upon the right of the board to allow the claim without such certificate, and in such case, the county paying the claim is not precluded from recovery therefor from the county of the settlement of the poor person: Clay County v. Palo Alto County, 82-626.

SEC. 2236. Allowance. If a poor person of mature years and sound mind is likely to become a charge, the board may pay him such an annual allowance as will not exceed the cost of maintenance in the ordinary way. [C.'73, § 1367; R., § 1390; C.'51, § 822.]

SEC. 2237. Appeal to supervisors. If any poor person, on application to the trustees, is refused the required relief, he may apply to the board of supervisors, who, upon examination into the matter, may direct the trustees to afford relief, or it may direct specific relief. [C.'73, § 1368; R., § 1391; C.'51, § 823.]

SEC. 2238. Contracts for support. The board of supervisors may make contracts with the lowest responsible bidder for furnishing any or all supplies, medical attendance or services required for the poor, for a term not exceeding one year, or it may enter into a contract with the lowest responsible bidder, through proposals opened and examined at a regular session of the board, for the support of any or all the poor of the county for one year at a time, and may make all requisite orders to that effect, and shall require all such contractors to give bonds in such sum as it believes sufficient to secure the faithful performance of the same. [C.'73, § 1369; R., § 1393; C.'51, § 825.]

SEC. 2239. Supervision. When a contract is made for the support of any or all the poor, the board shall, from time to time, appoint some person to examine and report upon the manner the poor are kept and treated, which shall be done without notice to the person contracting for their support, and if upon due notice and inquiry, the board find that the poor are not reasonably and properly supported and cared for, it may, at a regular or special session, set aside the contract, making proper allowances for the time it has been in force. [C.'73, § 1370; R., § 1394; C.'51, § 826.]

SEC. 2240. Employment. Any such contractor may employ a poor person in any work for which he is physically able, subject to the control of the board of supervisors, who may place said contractor under the supervision of the township trustees. [C.'73, § 1371; R., § 1395; C.'51, § 827.]

SEC. 2241. Poor-house established. The board of supervisors of each county may order the establishment of a poor-house in such county whenever it is deemed advisable, and also the purchase of such land as may be deemed necessary for the use of the same, and may make the requisite contracts and carry such order into effect, provided the cost of said poor-house and land, if in excess of five thousand dollars, shall be first estimated by said board and approved by a vote of the people. [C.'73, § 1372; R., § 1396; C.'51, § 828.]

SEC. 2242. Contracts—government. The board of supervisors, or any committee appointed by it for that purpose, may make all contracts and purchases requisite for the poor-house, and may prescribe rules or regulations for the management and government of the same, and for the sobriety, morality and industry of its occupants. [C.'73, § 1373; R., § 1401; C.'51, § 833.]

SEC. 2243. Steward appointed. The board may appoint a steward of the poor-house, who shall be governed in all respects by the rules and regulations of the board and its committees, and may be removed by the board at pleasure, and who shall receive such compensation, perform such duties, and give such security for his faithful performance as the board may direct. [C.'73, § 1374; R., § 1402; C.'51, § 834.]

The steward of the poor-house is also steward of the poor-farm: State v. Platner, 43–140.

The board cannot make such contract with the steward as to deprive themselves of the power of removal at pleasure: Ibid:

SEC. 2244. Admission to poor-house—labor. The steward shall receive into the poor-house any person producing an order as hereafter provided, and enter in a book to be kept for that purpose the name and age, and the date of the reception of such person; he may require of persons so admitted such reasonable and moderate labor as may be suited to their ages and bodily strength, the proceeds of which, together with the receipts of the poor-farm, shall be appropriated to the use of the poor-house in such manner as the board may determine. No person shall be admitted to the poor-house except upon the written order of a township trustee or member of the board of supervisors, and relief is to be furnished in the poor-house only, when the person is able to be taken there, unless in the cases hereinbefore otherwise provided. [C.'73, §§ 1375–7; R., §§ 1403–5; C.'51, §§ 835–7.]

SEC. 2245. Discharge. When any inmate of the poor-house becomes able to support himself, the board must order his discharge. [C.'73, § 1379; R., § 1408; C.'51, § 840.]

SEC. 2246. Visitation of poor-house. The board shall cause the poor-house to be visited at least once a month by one of its body, who shall carefully examine the condition of the inmates and the manner in which they are fed and clothed and otherwise provided for and treated, ascertain what labor they are required to perform, inspect the books and accounts of the steward, and look into all matters pertaining to the poor-house and its inmates, and report to the board. [C.'73, § 1380; R., § 1410; C.'51, § 842.]

SEC. 2247. Expenses—tax. The expense of supporting the poor shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as other disbursements for county purposes; and in case the ordinary revenue of the county proves insufficient for the support of the poor, the board may levy a poor tax, not exceeding one mill on the dollar, to be entered on the tax list and collected as the ordinary county tax. [21 G. A., ch. 10; 17 G. A., ch. 166; C.'73, § 1381; R., § 1412; C.'51, § 844.]

SEC. 2248. Letting out. The board is invested with authority to let out the support of the poor, with the use and occupancy of the poor-house and farm, for a period not exceeding three years. [C.'73, § 1382; R., § 1415; C.'51, § 847.]

SEC. 2249. Education of children. Poor children, when cared for at the poor-house, shall attend the district school for the district in which such house is situated, and a ratable proportion of the cost of the school, based upon the attendance of such poor children to the total number of days' attendance thereat, shall be paid by the county into the treasury of such school district, and charged as part of the expense of supporting the poor-house. [17 G. A., ch. 166; C.'73, § 1381; R., § 1412; C.'51, § 844.]

SEC. 2250. Illegitimates. The word "father" in this chapter includes the putative father of an illegitimate child, and the question of parentage may be tried in any proceeding to recover for or compel the support of such a child, and like proceedings may be prosecuted against the mother independently of or jointly with the alleged father. [C.'73, § 1332; R., § 1356; C.'51, § 788.]

The county is not required to thus proceed against the father of an illegitimate child before proceeding against the mother: McAndrew v. Madison County, 67-54.

After recognition of an illegitimate child the father is chargeable with its support, ths same as with that of a legitimate child: State v. Hastings, 74-574.

SEC. 2251. Who deemed trustee. The word "trustees" in this chapter shall be construed to include and mean any person or officer of any county or city charged with the oversight of the poor. [C.'73, § 1333; R., § 1357; C.'51, § 789.]

SEC. 2252. "Poor person" defined. The word "poor" and "poor person" as used in this chapter shall be construed to mean those who have no property, exempt or otherwise, and are unable, because of physical or mental disabilities, to earn a living by labor; but this section shall not be construed to forbid aid to needy persons who have some means, when the board shall be of opinion that the same will be conducive to their welfare and the best interests of the public.

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE CARE OF THE INSANE.

SECTION 2253. Hospitals—trustees. The hospital for the insane at Mount Pleasant shall be known by the name of "The Hospital for the Insane at Mount Pleasant"; the one at Independence, "The Hospital for the Insane at Independence"; the one at Clarinda, "The Hospital for the Insane at Clarinda"; and the one at Cherokee, "The Hospital for the Insane at Cherokee"; each of which shall be under the management of five trustees, two of whom may be women, one of whom shall be a resident of the place in which the hospital is located. [25 G. A., ch. 80; 22 G. A., ch. 75, §§ 1, 2; C. '73, § 1383.]

SEC. 2254. Meetings—officers. The several boards of trustees shall hold at the respective hospitals an annual meeting on the second Wednesday in July, at which one of their number shall be chosen president and one secretary, and shall elect a treasurer who shall be a resident of the county in which the hospital for which he is treasurer is situated. Each shall hold his position for the ensuing year and until a successor is elected and qualified. Said board shall hold quarterly meetings on the second Wednesdays in October, January and April. [20 G. A., ch. 66; 17 G. A., ch. 100, § 1; C.'73, § 1384.]

SEC. 2255. Visitation—reports—management. Each board of trustees, or a majority thereof, shall inspect the hospital under its charge at each quarterly meeting, but a committee may visit the hospital monthly; it shall make a record of its proceedings in books kept for the purpose, and, at the annual meeting preceding the regular session of the general assembly, make a report to the governor of the condition and wants of the hospitals, which shall be accompanied by full and accurate reports of the superintendents and treasurers, with an account of all money received and disbursed; have the general control and management of the hospitals under their charge; make all regulations necessary for the government of the same, and conduct the affairs of the institutions in accordance with the rules and regulations thereof; shall appoint a superintendent, and, upon the nomination of the superintendent, shall appoint an assistant physician or physicians, who shall reside in the hospital, and a steward and a matron, and they shall be styled resident officers of the same, and be governed by and subject to all regulations for the government thereof. The same person shall not hold the office of superintendent and steward. Each board may also, in its discretion and upon the nomination of the superintendent, appoint a chaplain and prescribe his duties; and shall, from time to time, fix the salaries and wages of the officers and other employes of the hospital, and certify the same to the auditor of state, and may remove any officer of such institution. [15 G. A., ch. 53, § 1; C.'73, §§ 1385–6.]

SEC. 2256. Trustees ineligible. No trustee of the hospitals shall be eligible to the office of steward or superintendent thereof during the term for which he was elected, nor within one year after his term shall have expired. [C.'73, § 1389.]

SEC. 2257. Treasurer—requisitions. The treasurer shall execute a bond to the state of Iowa for the use of the hospital (naming which), in double the highest amount of money likely to come into his hands, and with such securities as the executive council shall require, conditioned that he will faithfully perform the duties of his office, and pay over and account for all money that shall come into his hands, and the same shall be filed with the secretary of state, and he shall serve without compensation. Upon authority granted by the board, he may draw upon the state treasury, out of money not otherwise appropriated, upon his order, approved by the superintendent and not less than two of the trustees, and under seal of the hospital, a sufficient amount quarterly in advance for the purpose of defraying the current expenses of the hospital, but the amount of each requisition shall in no case exceed fourteen dollars per month for each public patient in the hospital, taking the number of such patients on the fifteenth day of each month for the previous three months as the average number on which the estimate shall be made, the number then in the hospital to be certified to the auditor of state by the superintendent and steward, which certificate shall accompany the requisition. But no part of the money so drawn for current expenses shall be used in making improvements. Upon the presentation of such order to the auditor of state, he shall draw a warrant upon the treasurer of state for the amount therein specified, not exceeding the amount for each patient hereinbefore specified. But no requisition shall be issued earlier in any one quarter of the year than the first day of February, May, August and November. [26 G. A., ch. 56; 17 G. A., ch. 100, § 2; C.'73, § 1390.]

SEC. 2258. Superintendent. The superintendent shall be a physician of acknowledged skill and ability in his profession, and authorized to practice medicine in the state. He shall be the chief executive officer of the hospital, and shall hold his office for six years, unless sooner removed. He shall have the entire control of the medical, mental, moral and dietetic treatment of the patients, and shall see that the several officers of the institution faithfully and diligently discharge their respective duties. He shall employ attendants, nurses, servants, and such other persons as may be necessary for the efficient and economical administration of the affairs at the hospital, assign them their respective places and duties, and may at any time discharge any of them from service, and provide an official seal, upon which shall be inscribed the name of the hospital under his charge, and the name of the state. He shall keep a book in which shall be entered all moneys or supplies received for account of any patient, and a detailed account of disposition of the same. He shall annually, in the month of December, make to the county auditors of the respective counties from which he has patients a report of the mental and physical condition of each patient, and the probable safety of removing any patient to the county hospital. The salary of the superintendent shall in no case exceed three thousand dollars per annum. [C.'73, §§ 1391, 1393.]

SEC. 2259. Steward. The steward, under the direction of the trustees and superintendent, shall make all purchases for the hospital on the best terms that can be made, keep the accounts, pay all employes, and have a personal superintendence of the farm; and shall take duplicate vouchers for all purchases made and for all wages paid by him, which he shall submit to the trustees at each of their quarterly meetings for their examination and approval. Such settlement of accounts shall be made by the board of trustees in open session, and shall not be intrusted to a committee. The trustees shall, after examining and approving such vouchers, file one set of them with the auditor of state. The books and papers of the steward and treasurer shall at all times be open to the inspection of any one of the trustees, state officers, or members of the general assembly. [15 G. A., ch. 53, § 1; C. '73, § 1392.]

SEC. 2260. Assistant physicians. The assistant physicians shall be of such character and qualifications as to be able to perform the ordinary duties of the superintendent during his absence or inability to act. [C.'73, § 1394.]

SEC. 2261. County commissioners of insanity. In each county there shall be a board of three commissioners of insanity, and in counties having two places where district court is held there shall be one such board of commissioners at each place, consisting of the clerk of the district court, or his deputy, who shall be clerk of the same, also one physician in actual practice and of good professional standing in the community, and one lawyer in actual practice and of good standing in his profession and in the community, residing as convenient as may be to the county seat, to be appointed by the judge of the district court. Such appointment may be made during a session of the court, or in vacation; if made in vacation, it shall be by written order, signed by the judge and recorded by the clerk. The appointment shall be for two years, and so that the term of one commissioner shall expire every year. The appointment of successors may be made at any time within three months prior to the expiration of the term of the incumbent. In the temporary absence or inability to act of two commissioners, the commissioner present may call to his aid temporarily a person possessed of the qualification required for a member, who, after qualifying as in other cases, may act in the same capacity. But if one of the absent members is a clerk, his deputy shall act. The record in such cases must show the facts. The members shall organize by choosing one of their number president, and hold their meetings at the office of the clerk, unless for good reasons they shall fix on some other place, and shall also meet on notice from the clerk or his deputy. [26 G. A., ch. 53; C. '73, §§ 1395–6.]

SEC. 2262. Clerk. The clerk of said board, or in his absence his deputy, shall sign and issue all notices, appointments, warrants, subpœnas or other process required to be given or issued by the board, affixing thereto his seal as clerk of the court; shall file and preserve in his office all papers connected with any inquest by the commissioners and properly belonging to his office, with all notices, reports and other communications; and shall keep separate books in which to minute the proceedings of the board, and his entries therein shall be sufficiently full to show, with the papers filed, a complete record of its findings, orders and transactions. The notices, reports and communications herein required to be given or made may be sent by mail, unless otherwise expressed, and the facts and date of such sending and their reception must be noted on the proper record. [C. '73, § 1397.]

SEC. 2263. Jurisdiction and power. The commissioners shall have cognizance of all applications for admission to the hospital, or for the safe keeping otherwise of insane persons within their respective counties, except in cases otherwise specially provided for. For the purpose of discharging the duties required of them, they shall have power to issue subpœnas and compel obedience thereto, to administer oaths, and do any act of a court necessary and proper in the premises. [C. '73, § 1398.]

SEC. 2264. Admission to hospital. Applications for admission to the hospital must be made in the form of an information, verified by affidavit, alleging that the person in whose behalf the application is made is believed by the informant to be insane, and a fit subject for custody and treatment in the hospital, and that such person is found in the county, and shall also state the place of residence of such person, or where it is believed to be, or that the same is not known, according to the facts. [C. '73, § 1399.]

SEC. 2265. Investigation—certificate of physician. On the filing of such information, the commissioners may examine the informant and other witnesses under oath, and, if satisfied that there is reasonable cause therefor, at once investigate the grounds thereof, and may require that the person for whom such admission is sought be brought before them, and that the examination be had in his presence. They may issue their warrant therefor, and provide for the custody of such person until their investigation shall be concluded, which warrant may be executed by the sheriff or any constable of the county; or, if they shall be of the opinion from such preliminary inquiries as they make that such course would probably be injurious to such person, or attended with no advantage, they may dispense with such presence. In their examination, they shall hear testimony for and against such application, if any is offered. Any citizen of the county, or relative of the person alleged to be insane, may appear and resist the application, and the parties may appear by counsel, if they elect. The commissioners, whether they dispense with the presence before them of such person or not, shall appoint some regular practicing physician of the county to visit him and make a personal examination touching the truth of the information and his actual condition, who shall forthwith report to them thereon. He may or may not be of their number, and shall certify that he has made a careful, personal examination as required, and that he finds the person in question insane, if such is the fact, and if otherwise, not insane; and, in connection with his examination, shall endeavor to obtain from the relatives of the person, or from others who know the facts, correct answers, so far as may be, to the interrogatories hereinafter required to be propounded, which interrogatories and answers shall be attached to his certificate. [C. '73, § 1400.]

The interrogatories and answers appended to the certificate of the physician are not competent evidence as to whether the party was insane previous to the examination: Butler v. St. Louis L. Ins. Co., 45–93, 96.

The law contemplates the presence of the person whose insanity is sought to be established in all cases unless upon inquiry it is made to appear that such presence would probably be injurious to the person, or attended with no advantage to him. The fact that the proceeding may be had without the presence of defendant in the cases specified does not render the statute unconstitutional, and it will be assumed that the absence of the person was justified by the facts: Chavannes v. Priestley, 80–316.

SEC. 2266. Finding of commissioners—warrant—confinement. On the return of the physician's certificate, the commissioners shall, as soon as practicable, conclude their investigation and find whether the person is insane; whether, if insane, a fit subject for treatment in the hospital; whether the legal settlement of such person is in their county, and, if not, where it is, if ascertained. If they find such person is not insane, they shall order his immediate discharge, if in custody, but if insane, and a fit subject for custody and treatment in the hospital, they shall order his commitment to the hospital in the district in which the county is situated, and unless he or some one in his behalf shall appeal therefrom, shall forthwith issue their warrant and a duplicate thereof, stating such finding, with the settlement of the person, if found, and, if not found, their information, if any, in regard thereto, authorizing the superintendent of the hospital to receive and keep him as a patient therein. Said warrant and duplicate, with the certificate and finding of the physician, shall be delivered to the sheriff, who shall execute the same by conveying such person to the hospital, and delivering him, with such duplicate and physician's certificate and finding, to the superintendent, who shall, over his official signature, acknowledge such delivery on the original warrant, which the sheriff shall return to the clerk of the commissioners, with his costs and expenses indorsed thereon. If the sheriff and his deputy are both otherwise engaged, the commissioners may appoint some other suitable person to execute the warrant, who shall take and subscribe an oath faithfully to discharge his duty, and shall be entitled to the same fees as the sheriff. The sheriff, or any person appointed, may call to his aid such assistance as he may need to execute such warrant; but no female shall thus be taken to the hospital without the attendance of some other female or some relative. The superintendent, in his ackowledgment of delivery, must state whether there was any such person in attendance, and give the name or names, if any. But if any relative or immediate friend of the patient, who is a suitable person, shall so request, he shall have the privilege of executing such warrant, in preference to the sheriff or any other person, without taking such oath, and for so doing shall be entitled to his necessary expenses, but no fees. No person who shall be found to be insane shall, during investigation or after such finding, and pending commitment to the hospital, or when on the way there, be confined in any jail, prison or place of solitary confinement, except in cases of extreme violence, when it may be necessary for the safety of such person or of the public; and if such person be so confined, there shall, at all times during its continuance, be some suitable person or persons in attendance in charge of such person; but at no time shall any female be placed in such confinement without at least one female attendant remaining in charge of her. [22 G. A., ch. 68, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 152, § 6; C. '73, § 1401.]

The provisions made for appeal, and the further provisions contained in §§ 2304 and 2306, allowing subsequent investigation of the question of sanity, prevent this section from being in conflict with the constitutional guaranties against deprivation of personal liberty without due jury trial: Black Hawk County v. Springer, 58–417.

An adjudication by the commissioners of insanity raises at least a presumption of the fact, and such finding may be shown in evidence in a divorce case to establish the fact of insanity: Tiffany v. Tiffany, 84–122.

SEC. 2267. Appeal from finding. Any person found to be insane in proceedings herein authorized may appeal from such finding to the district court by giving the clerk thereof, within ten days after such finding has been made, notice in writing that an appeal is taken, which may be signed by the party, his agent, guardian or attorney, and, when thus appealed, it shall stand for trial anew. [18 G. A., ch. 152, §§ 1, 2.]

The actual fact as to insanity may be inquired into on a habeas corpus proceeding, and if in such proceeding it is determined that the person is insane, it is not necessary to reinvestigate that question in an appeal from the action of the commissioners: In re Bresee, 82–573.

On such appeal the court can take judicial notice of the proceedings in a habeas corpus case before a judge of the court and filed in the court as required by law: Ibid.

SEC. 2268. Custody pending appeal. If an appeal shall be taken, the appellant, pending the appeal, shall be discharged from custody, unless the commissioners find that he cannot with safety be allowed to go at large, in which case they shall require him to be suitably provided for in the manner hereinafter specified. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 2269. Final order. If upon the trial of the appeal such person is found sane, he shall be immediately discharged, if in custody. If found insane, and a fit subject for custody and treatment in the hospital, an order of commitment shall be entered, and the clerk shall issue a warrant therefor, and the proceedings thereunder shall be as provided in cases before the board. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 2270. Settlement in another county. If the commissioners find that the person committed to the hospital has or probably has a legal settlement in some other county, they shall, after the time allowed for an appeal, or, in case an appeal is taken, after the same is finally disposed of, immediately notify the auditor of such county of such finding and commitment, and the auditor so notified shall thereupon inquire and ascertain if possible whether the person in question has a legal settlement in that county, and shall immediately notify the superintendent of the hospital and the commissioners of the county from which such person was committed of the result of such inquiry. If the legal settlement of a person committed cannot for a time be ascertained, and is afterwards found, the notices required shall then be given. The residence of any person found insane who is an inmate of any state institution shall be that existing at the time of admission therein. [24 G. A., ch. 24, § 2; C. '73, § 1402.]

Notice to the county of settlement is a condition precedent to the right of recovery: Poweshiek County v. Cass County, 63–244.

SEC. 2271. Custody outside hospital. If any person found to be insane and a fit subject for custody and treatment in the hospital cannot at once be admitted therein, or, in case of appeal from the finding of the commissioners, if such person cannot with safety be allowed to go at liberty, the commissioners shall require that such person shall be suitably provided for otherwise until such admission can be had, or until the occasion therefor no longer exists. Such patients may be cared for as private patients whose relations or friends will obligate themselves to take care of and provide for them without public charge. In such case, the commissioners shall in writing appoint some suitable person special custodian, who shall have authority to, and shall in all suitable ways, restrain, protect and care for such patient in such manner as to best secure his safety and comfort, and to best protect the persons and property of others. In the case of public patients, the commissioners shall require that they be in like manner restrained and protected and cared for by the board of supervisors at the expense of the county, and they may, accordingly, issue their warrant to such board, who shall forthwith comply with the same. If there is no poor-house for the reception of such patients, or if no more suitable place can be found, they may be confined in the jail of the county in charge of the sheriff; but no female may be confined in such poor-house or jail unless at all times under the personal care of a suitable female attendant, who shall hold a key of the apartment in which said person is confined. [22 G. A., ch. 68, § 2; C. '73, § 1403.]

Where an adult is adjudged insane and a fit subject to be treated in the hospital, but cannot be admitted there, and is otherwise maintained and treated, his father is not liable for the expense of his maintenance although he is appointed custodian: Speedling v. Worth County, 68–152.

SEC. 2272. Same. On application to the commissioners in behalf of persons alleged to be insane, whose admission to the hospital is not sought, made substantially in the manner above prescribed, and asking that provision be made for their care as insane, either public or private, within the county, and on proof or their insanity and need of care, the commissioners may provide for their restraint, protection and care, as in case of other applications. [C. '73, § 1404.]

SEC. 2273. In case of need. On information laid before the commissioners of any county that an insane person in the county is suffering for want of proper care, they shall forthwith inquire into the matter, and, if they find that such information is true, they shall make all needful provisions for the care of such person as provided in other cases. [C.'73, § 1405.]

SEC. 2274. Transfer to hospital. Insane persons who have been under care, either as public or private patients, outside of the hospital, by authority of the commissioners of any county may, on application, be transferred to the hospital, whenever they can be admitted thereto, on the warrant of such commissioners. Such admission may be had without another inquest, at any time within six months after the inquest already had, unless the commissioners shall think further inquest advisable. [C.'73, § 1406.]

SEC. 2275. Application for admission to hospital. In each case of application for admission to the hospital, correct answers to the following interrogatories, so far as they can be obtained, shall accompany the physician's certificate; and if, on further examination after the answers are stated, any of them are found to be erroneous, the commissioners shall cause them to be corrected:

1. What is the patient's name and age? Married or single? If any children, how many? Age of youngest child?
2. Where was the patient born?
3. Where is his (or her) place of residence?
4. What has been the patient's occupation?
5. Is this the first attack? If not, when did the others occur, and what was their duration?
6. When were the first symptoms of this attack manifested, and in what way?
7. Does the disease appear to be increasing, decreasing or stationary?
8. Is the disease variable, and are there rational intervals? If so, do they occur at regular periods?
9. On what subjects or in what way is derangement now manifested? State fully.
10. Has the patient shown any disposition to injure others?
11. Has suicide ever been attempted? If so, in what way? Is the propensity now active?
12. Is there a disposition to filthy habits, destruction of clothing, breaking of glass, etc.?
13. What relatives, including grandparents and cousins, have been insane?
14. Did the patient manifest any peculiarities of temper, habits, disposition or pursuits before the accession of the disease?—any predominant passion, religious impressions, etc.?
15. Was the patient ever addicted to intemperance in any form?
16. Has the patient been subject to any bodily disease; epilepsy, suppressed eruptions, discharges of sores, or ever had any injury of the head?
17. Has restraint or confinement been employed? If so, what kind, and how long?
18. What is supposed to be the cause of the disease?
19. What treatment has been pursued for the relief of the patient? Mention particulars and effects.
20. State any other matter supposed to have a bearing on the case. [C.'73, § 1407.]

SEC. 2276. Discharge from hospital. On the application of the relations or immediate friends of any patient in the hospital who is not cured, and who cannot be safely allowed to go at liberty, the commissioners of the county where such patient belongs, on making provisions for the care of such patient within the county as in other cases, may authorize his discharge therefrom; but no patient who may be under criminal charge or conviction shall be discharged without the order of the district court or judge, and notice to the county attorney of the proper county. [C.'73, § 1408.]

SEC. 2277. Discharge from custody. Whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the commissioners of insanity of any county that cause no longer exists for the care within the county of any person as an insane patient, they shall order his immediate discharge, and shall find if such person is sane or insane at the time of such discharge, which finding shall be entered of record by the clerk of the commission. [C.'73, § 1409.]

SEC. 2278. Warrant and certificate. The warrant of the commissioners of insanity, authorizing the admission of any person to the hospital as a patient, accompanied by a physician's certificate as herein provided, shall shield the superintendent and other officers of the hospital against all liability to prosecution of any kind on account of the reception and detention of such person in the hospital in accordance with law and the regulations for its management, but no person shall be detained therein who is by the superintendent thereof found to be sane or cured. [C.'73, § 1411.]

SEC. 2279. Insane prisoners—inquiry—confinement. On a written application made by any citizen, stating under oath that a person confined in any prison within the county, charged with a crime but not convicted thereof nor on trial therefor, is insane, the commissioners shall cause said prisoner to be brought before them, and if they find that he is insane they shall direct his removal to and detention in one of the hospitals for the insane, issuing their warrant therefor, and stating therein that he is under criminal charges, and the superintendent of the hospital designated in such warrant shall receive and keep such prisoner as a patient. The warrant shall be executed by the sheriff or his deputy by delivering the prisoner to the superintendent in person. After an investigation such as contemplated in this section, the commissioners shall not entertain a like application within six months on behalf of said person. [C '73, § 1412; R., §§ 1458–9.]

SEC. 2280. Notice of recovery. When any insane person shall be confined in either hospital under the preceding section, the superintendent in whose charge he may be shall, as soon as such person is restored to reason, issue his warrant to the sheriff of the county from which such person is received, directing him to return such person to the jail of said county, which shall be done by said sheriff as soon as practicable, when the accused shall be returned to the jail of the proper county to answer to the charge against him. The sheriff shall make his return of service in writing thereon, and deliver such warrant and return to the clerk of the district court of his county, who shall forthwith make a copy of the warrant and return, and mail the same to said superintendent, who shall file and preserve it. [C.'73, § 1413; R., § 1460.]

SEC. 2281. Expenses—county of settlement liable. When the superintendent of the hospital has been notified that a patient sent to the hospital from one county has a legal settlement in another county, he shall thereafter hold and treat such patient as from the latter county; and such holding shall apply to expenses already incurred in behalf of such patient and remaining unadjusted. [C.'73, § 1417.]

SEC. 2282. Recovery. Expenses incurred as hereinafter provided by one county, on account of an insane person whose legal settlement is in another, shall be refunded, with lawful interest, by the county of such settlement, and shall be presented to the board of supervisors of the county sought to be charged, allowed, and paid the same as other claims. If the settlement is denied by the latter board, it may serve a notice similar to that provided for in cases of removal in the chapter relating to poor persons, and all the provisions of that chapter in regard to the determination of the disputed claim upon an order of removal shall apply to the change of settlement of an insane person. [C.'73, § 1418.]

Before the abolition of the circuit court it did not have exclusive jurisdiction of this action, although it did of the action provided for by § 2228: Winneshiek County v. Allamakee County, 62–558.

As to liability of county of settlement, see notes to § 2228.

SEC. 2283. At expense of state. Patients in a hospital having no legal settlement in the state, or whose legal settlement cannot be ascertained, shall be supported at the expense of the state. If a person has a legal settlement within another state, the commissioners of insanity may direct the sheriff to remove such person to the place of his legal settlement, and the sheriff shall receive as compensation therefor three dollars per day and his actual expenses, which shall be itemized and sworn to and filed with the county auditor, and the same shall be paid as other claims against the county. The trustees of any asylum may authorize the superintendent to remove any patient who has no legal settlement within the state. The cost of such removal to be paid directly from the state treasury, upon a sworn statement of the superintendent and the approval of the trustees appended to each voucher. [21 G. A., ch. 47; C.'73, § 1419.]

SEC. 2284. Special care. All patients in a hospital shall stand upon an equal footing, and the several patients, according to their different conditions of mind and body, and their respective needs, shall be provided for and treated with equal care; but if the relatives or friends of any patient shall desire it, and shall pay the expense thereof, such patient may have special care and may be provided with a special attendant, as may be agreed upon with the superintendent. In such cases, the charges for such special care and attendance shall be paid quarterly in advance. [C.'73, § 1420.]

SEC. 2285. Expenses paid by relatives. The relatives or friends of any patient in a hospital shall have the privilege of paying any portion or all of the expenses, and the superintendent shall cause his or her account to be credited with any sum so paid. [C.'73, § 1421.]

SEC. 2286. Discrimination in reception. If at any time it is necessary to discriminate in the general reception of patients in a hospital, a selection shall be made as follows:

1. Cases of less duration than one year shall have the preference over all others;
2. Chronic cases, where the disease is of more than one year's duration, presenting the most favorable prospect for recovery, shall be next preferred;
3. Those for whom application has been longest on file, other things being equal, shall be next preferred;
4. Where cases are equally meritorious in all other respects, the indigent shall have the preference. [C.'73, § 1422.]

SEC. 2287. Escape. If any patient shall escape from a hospital, the superintendent shall cause immediate search to be made for him, and if he cannot soon be found, shall cause notice of such escape to be forthwith given to the commissioners of the county where he belongs, and, if found in their county, the commissioners shall cause him to be returned, and shall issue their warrant therefor, as in other cases, unless the patient shall be discharged, or unless for good reasons they shall provide for his care otherwise, of which they shall notify the superintendent. [C.'73, § 1423.]

SEC. 2288. Discharge when cured. Any patient who is cured shall be immediately discharged by the superintendent, who shall furnish him with a certificate to that effect, and forward a copy thereof at once to the clerk of the district court of the county from which the patient was committed, and he shall record the same at length in the insane record in connection with the record of commitment. Such record shall be prima facie evidence of the recovery of such person, and restore him to all his civil rights. Upon such discharge the superintendent shall furnish him, unless otherwise supplied, with suitable clothing and a sum of money not exceeding twenty dollars, which shall be charged with the other expenses of such patient in the hospital. The relatives of any patient not susceptible of cure by remedial treatment in the hospital, and not dangerous to be at large, shall have the right to take charge of and remove him by the consent of the board of trustees. In the interim of the meetings of the board, the consent of two trustees shall be sufficient. [C.'73, § 1424.]

SEC. 2289. Discharge of incurables. The board of trustees shall order the discharge or removal from the hospital of incurable and harmless patients whenever it is necessary to make room for recent cases. In the interim between the meetings of the board, the superintendent, in connection with two trustees, shall possess and exercise the same power. [C.'73, § 1425.]

SEC. 2290. Notice to commissioners. When patients are discharged from the hospital by the authorities thereof without application therefor, notice of the order of discharge shall at once be sent to the commissioners of the county where they belong, and the commissioners shall forthwith cause them to be removed, and shall at once provide for their care in the county as in other cases, unless such patients are discharged as cured. [C.'73, § 1426.]

SEC. 2291. Compensation for keeping. The trustees for the hospital shall, from time to time, fix the monthly sum, not exceeding fourteen dollars, for the board and care of patients therein; which sum shall be paid therefor, when certified by the superintendent under the attestation of the hospital seal, and this certificate shall be competent evidence of the amount due for the time therein stated. [17 G. A., ch. 84; C.'73, § 1427.]

SEC. 2292. Charged to counties—tax levied. Each superintendent shall certify to the auditor of state on the first day of January, April, July and October the amount, not previously certified by him, due to the hospital under his charge from the several counties having patients chargeable thereto, and said auditor shall pass the same to the credit of the hospital, and thereupon notify the county auditor of each county so owing of the amount, and charge the same to said county; and the board of supervisors shall levy a tax therefor, and pay the amount due the state into the state treasury. Should any county fail to levy such tax, the auditor of state shall charge the delinquent county with a penalty of three per cent. per month upon the indebtedness six months due, until the debt and penalty be paid. If any county shall fail for one year to levy a tax, at the time of levying other county taxes, to meet any debt thus created, it shall be the duty of the attorney-general, upon request of the executive council, to bring an action in the name of the state and against the county to compel the same. Taxes thus levied and collected cannot be used for any other purpose, and the amount of indebtedness for which such levy was made shall be paid over to the state treasurer at the time and in the manner required for the payment of state taxes. [17 G. A., ch. 183, §§ 1–3; 16 G. A., ch. 28; C.'73, § 1428.]

Under an early statute, held, that no authority was given to the board of supervisors to levy an independent or special tax for the purposes here specified: Iowa Land Co v. Carroll County, 39–151.

SEC. 2293. Fees of superintendent as witness. When the superintendent of the hospital, in obedience to a subpœna, attends any court of the county in which the hospital is situated, as a witness for either party in the case of a person on trial for criminal offense, and the question of the sanity of such person is raised, he shall be allowed on such account his necessary and actual expenses, and such daily pay as is allowed to other witnesses, which shall be paid by the state. When compelled so to attend in civil cases, he shall be entitled to the same compensation, to be paid by the party requiring his attendance. [C.'73, § 1429.]

SEC. 2294. Seal. The superintendent shall affix the seal of the hospital to any notice, order of discharge, or other paper required to be given by him or issued. [C.'73, § 1430.]

SEC. 2295. Blanks. The trustees of the hospital shall provide for furnishing the commissioners of the counties entitled to send patients to the hospital with such blanks for warrants, certificates and other papers as will enable them with regularity and facility to comply with the provisions of this chapter, and also with copies of the regulations of the hospital, when printed. [C.'73, § 1431.]

SEC. 2296. Rules. The superintendents of the hospitals and the governor of the state shall adopt such regulations as they may deem expedient in regard to which patients or class of patients shall be admitted to and provided for in the respective hospitals; or from what portion of the state patients, or certain classes of patients, may be sent to any hospital, and in regard to the transfer of patients from one hospital to another, whenever such transfer becomes proper or necessary; they may change such regulations from time to time as they think best, and shall make such publication of these regulations as necessary for the information of those interested, and the regulations so adopted shall be conformed to by the parties interested. [24 G. A.; ch. 48, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 76; C.'73, § 1432.]

SEC. 2297. Estates of patients liable. The provisions herein made for the support of the insane at public charge shall not be construed to release the estates of such persons nor their relatives from liability for their support; and the auditors of the several counties, subject to the direction of the board of supervisors, are authorized and empowered to collect from the property of such patients, or from any person legally bound for their support, any sums paid by the county in their behalf, as herein provided; and the certificate from the superintendent, and the notice from the auditor of state, stating the sums charged in such cases, shall be presumptive evidence of the correctness of the sums so stated. If the board of supervisors in the case of any insane patient who has been supported at the expense of the county shall deem it a hardship to compel the relatives of such patient to bear the burden of his support, or charge the estate therewith, they may relieve such relatives or estate from any part or all of such burden as may seem to them reasonable and just. The estates of insane or idiotic persons who may be treated or confined in any county asylum or poor-house, and the estates of persons legally bound for their support, shall be liable to the county for the reasonable expense, or so much thereof as may be determined by the board of supervisors. [26 G. A., ch. 52; 15 G. A., ch. 26; C.'73, § 1433.]

The "relatives" contemplated in § 1433 of Code of '73 (which is here substantially reenacted) were only such as were legally bound for the support of the insane person. A father is not legally bound to support his adult children. The provisions of § 2216 et seq., as to the support of paupers, have no application under this section: Monroe County v. Teller, 51–670.

Under 15 G. A. ch. 26, a husband was not liable for the expense of treating an insane wife sent to the hospital by the commissioners of insanity. Such expense is not a family expense within the meaning of § 3165: Delaware County v. McDonald, 46–170.

The claim of the county becomes a lien from the commencement of the suit by the county for the expense of support, and collection is to be made like any other claim by action, judgment and execution. There is no lien until it is allowed by the court: Thode v. Spofford, 65–294.

Pension money of an insane person received from the United States, after the taking effect of 20 G. A., ch. 23 (§ 4009), cannot be appropriated to reimburse the county for expenses incurred and paid by the county for the support of such person. Whether such money can be appropriated by an order providing for expenses to be thereafter incurred for the support of such insane person, quære: Fayette County v. Hancock, 83–694.

Neither can pension money received after such act took effect be appropriated for expenses incurred and paid by the county for the support of an insane pensioner before that time: Ibid.

The liability of the estate is to the county for what the county has paid in its behalf. There is no relation between the estate and the state, and the statute of limitations commences to run from the time of the payment by the county to the state: Harrison County v. Dunn, 84–328.

Although the board may relieve the estate, the failure to do so will not affect the operation of the statute of limitations: Ibid.

There is no common law liability on the part of the estate of an insane person for the support of such person either in the state institution or under provisions made by the county, and where the statute declared liability only as to support in the state institution, held, that there could be no recovery by the county for support furnished at the county poor house: Jones County v. Norton, 91–680.

The certificates and notices provided for in this section are presumptive evidence of the correctness of the sums so charged in an action by a county against the estate of an insane person even though such certificates are not made until the time of bringing suit: Cedar County v. Sager, 90–11.

The estate of the insane person is liable for his support and remains so until the board of supervisors releases it by action taken for that purpose and notice of the consideration of the question by the board is not required: Ibid.

SEC. 2298. Meaning of terms "insane" and "idiot." The term "insane" as used in this chapter, includes every species of insanity or mental derangement. The term "idiot" is restricted to persons foolish from birth, supposed to be naturally without mind. No idiot shall be admitted to a hospital. [C. '73, § 1434.]

A person who, of sound mind until nine years of age, then became affected with epilepsy and gradually lost her mind until she was unable to take the slightest care of herself, held insane within the meaning of this section: Speedling v. Worth County, 68–152.

SEC. 2299. Visiting committee. There shall be a visiting committee of three, at least one of whom shall be a woman, appointed by the governor, to visit the insane asylums of the state at their discretion, and without giving notice of their intended visit, and one visit by at least one member shall be made each month, who may, upon such visit, go through the wards unaccompanied by any officer of the institution, with power to send for persons and papers, and to examine witnesses under oath to ascertain whether any of the inmates are improperly detained in the hospital, or unjustly placed there, and whether the inmates are humanely and kindly treated, with full power to correct any abuses found to exist; and any injury inflicted upon the insane shall be treated as a criminal offense, as the like offense would be regarded when inflicted upon any other citizen outside of a hospital. They shall have power to discharge any attendant or employe who is found to have been guilty of an offense meriting such discharge; and, in all these trials of misdemeanor, offense or crime, the testimony of patients shall be taken and considered for what it is worth, and no employe at a hospital shall be allowed to sit on any jury before whom these cases are tried. Said committee shall make an annual report to the governor. [C. '73, §§ 1435, 1441.]

A visiting committee has no authority to punish witnesses for contempt in refusing to testify before it: Brown v Davidson, 59–461.

SEC. 2300. Inmates allowed to write. The names of this visiting committee and their post-office addresses shall be kept posted in every ward in each hospital, and every inmate therein shall be allowed to write once a week what he pleases to this committee and to any other person he may choose; but the superintendent in his discretion may send letters addressed to other parties to the visiting committee for inspection before forwarding them to the individual addressed. Any member of this committee who shall neglect to heed the call of a patient to him for protection, when proved to have been needed, shall be discharged by the governor. [15 G. A., ch. 53, § 2; C. '73, § 1436.]

SEC. 2301. Writing material furnished. Every person confined in any hospital shall be furnished by the superintendent or party having charge of such person, at least once in each week, with suitable materials for writing, inclosing, sealing and mailing letters, if he requests the same, unless otherwise ordered by the visiting committee, which order shall continue in force until countermanded by said committee. [C. '73, § 1437.]

SEC. 2302. Letters to and from inmates. The superintendent, or the party having charge of any person under confinement, shall receive, if requested to do so by the person so confined, at least one letter in each week, addressed to one of the visiting committee, without opening or reading the same, and without delay deposit it in a post-office, with a proper postage stamp affixed thereto, and deliver to said person any letter or writing addressed to him. But such letters written to the person so confined may be examined by the superintendent, and if, in his opinion, the delivery of such letters would be injurious to the person so confined, he shall return the letters to the writer with his reasons for not delivering it. [15 G. A., ch. 53, § 2; C. '73, § 1438.]

SEC. 2303. Inquest. If a death shall occur suddenly and without apparent cause, or a patient die and his relatives so request, a coroner's inquest shall be held as provided by law, but in the latter case the relatives making the request shall be liable for the expenses of the same, and payment therefor may be required in advance. [C. '73, § 1439.]

SEC. 2304. Commission of inquiry—appointment by court. On a statement in writing, verified by affidavit, addressed to a judge of the district court of the county in which the hospital is situated, or of the county in which any person confined in a hospital has his legal settlement, alleging that such person is not insane and is unjustly deprived of his liberty, such judge shall appoint a commission of not more than three persons, in his discretion, to inquire into the merits of the case, one of whom shall be a physician, and if two or more are appointed, another shall be a lawyer. Without first summoning the party to meet them, they shall proceed to the hospital and have a personal interview with such person, so managed as to prevent him, if possible, from suspecting its object; and they shall make any inquiries and examinations they may deem necessary and proper of the officials and records of the hospital, touching the merits of the case. If they shall judge it prudent and advisable, they may disclose to the party the object of their visit, and, either in his presence or otherwise, make further investigation of the matter. They shall forthwith report to the judge making the appointment the result of their examination and inquiries, such report to be accompanied by a statement of the case, made and signed by the superintendent. If on such report and statement, and the hearing of testimony if any is offered, the judge shall find a person not insane, he shall order his discharge; if the contrary, he shall so state, and authorize his continued detention. The finding and order of the judge, with the report and other papers, shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the court over which such judge presides, who shall enter a memorandum thereof on his record, and forthwith notify the superintendent of the hospital of the finding and order of the judge, and the superintendent shall carry out the order. The commissioners appointed as provided in this section shall be entitled to their necessary expenses and a reasonable compensation, to be allowed by the judge, and paid by the state out of any funds not otherwise appropriated; but the applicant shall pay the same if the judge shall find that the application was made without probable ground, and shall so order. [C. '73, § 1442.]

Whether the supreme court could, under any circumstances, under the provisions of this section, appoint a commission to inquire into the sanity of a person confined in the hospital for the insane, quære. But, held, that where the case before the court was an appeal from the finding of commissioners, no such proceeding was necessary: In re Bresee, 82–573.

SEC. 2305. How often. The commission above provided for shall not be repeated oftener than once in six months in regard to the same person; nor shall such commission be appointed in the case of any patient within six months of the time of his admission. [C. '73, § 1443.]

SEC. 2306. Habeas corpus. All persons confined as insane shall be entitled to the benefit of the writ of habeas corpus, and the question of insanity shall be decided at the hearing. If the judge shall decide that the person is insane, such decision shall be no bar to the issuing of the writ a second time, whenever it shall be alleged that such person has been restored to reason. [C. '73, § 1444.]

Where a finding of insanity had been made by the commissioners, and upon habeas corpus before the judge of the district court the whole question had been investigated and the insanity of the party determined, held, that, on appeal from the action of the commissioners, it was not necessary to re-investigate the case, but the action of the judge in the habeas corpus proceeding might properly be accepted as conclusive: In re Bresee, 82–573.

SEC. 2307. Punishment for cruelty or official misconduct. If any person having the care of an insane person, and restraining him, whether in a hospital or elsewhere, with or without authority, shall treat him with unnecessary severity, harshness or cruelty, or in any way abuse him, or if any officer required by the provision of this chapter to perform any act shall wilfully refuse or neglect the same, or if any member of a board of supervisors or any county treasurer shall violate any provision of this chapter, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined not to exceed five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed three months, and pay the costs of prosecution, or be both fined and imprisoned at the discretion of the court; and if any member of the visiting committee, superintendent of the hospital, or other person in charge of an insane person confined in the hospital, shall knowingly and wilfully violate any provision of this chapter by failing and refusing to furnish material for writing, failing or refusing to allow a party to write letters, to mail letters written, to receive and deliver letters written as provided herein to such person so confined, or in any other way, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not to exceed three years, or pay a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars, or be both fined and imprisoned. [17 G. A., ch. 183, § 4; C.'73, §§ 1415–16, 1440, 1445.]

SEC. 2308. County insane fund. The board of supervisors, when levying taxes for general purposes, shall include therein a tax of one-half mill or less, as may be necessary, for the purpose of raising a fund for the support of such insane persons as are cared for and supported by the county in the insane ward of the county poor-house, or elsewhere outside of any state hospital for the insane, which shall be known as the county insane fund, and shall be used for no other purpose than the support of such insane persons.

SEC. 2309. Compensation and fees. The commissioners of insanity shall be allowed at the rate of three dollars per day, each, for all the time actually employed in the duties of their office. They shall also be allowed their necessary and actual expenses, not including charges for board. The clerk, in addition to what he is entitled to as commissioner, shall be allowed one-half as much more for making the required record entries in all cases of inquest and of meetings of the board for any purpose, and for the filing of any papers required to be filed. He shall also be allowed twenty-five cents for each notice or process given or issued under seal, as herein required. The examining physician shall be entitled to the same compensation as a commissioner, and to mileage at the rate of five cents per mile each way; but if such examining physician be a member of the board of commissioners, he shall be entitled to no other fee than the pay as such commissioner. Witnesses shall be entitled to the same fees as witnesses in the district court. Fees on appeal shall be the same as in ordinary actions. The compensation and expenses provided for above, and the fees of the sheriff provided for in such cases, shall be allowed and paid out of the county treasury in the usual manner. Whenever the commissioners issue their warrant for the admission of a person to the hospital, and funds to pay the expenses thereof are needed in advance, they shall estimate the probable expense of conveying such person to the hospital, including the necessary assistance, and not including the compensation allowed the sheriff, and on such estimate, certified by the clerk, the auditor of the county shall issue an order on the county treasury for the amount, as estimated, in favor of the sheriff or other person intrusted with the execution of such warrant; the sheriff or other person executing such warrant, shall accompany his return with a statement of the expenses incurred, and the excess or deficiency may be deducted from or added to his compensation, as the case may be. If funds are not so advanced, such expenses shall be certified and paid in the manner above prescribed on the return of the warrant. When the commissioners order the return of a patient, compensation and expenses shall be in like manner allowed. [C.'73, §§ 1410, 3825.]

The fees of the clerk not held additional to his salary: Moore v. Mahaska County, 61-177: and see § 297.

SEC. 2310. Compensation of visiting committees. Members of all visiting committees to the hospitals shall be allowed four dollars for each day actually and necessarily engaged in the performance of their official duties, and mileage at the same rate as is allowed members of the general assembly. The disbursing officer of each hospital shall pay the per diem and mileage allowed such visiting committee, and each member of such visiting committee shall certify under oath to such disbursing officer the number of days he has served and the number of miles traveled. [C.'73, § 3826.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF DOMESTIC ANIMALS.

SECTION 2311. Meaning of terms. As used in this chapter, the term "owner," used with reference to animals, means any one entitled to the present possession thereof, the one having care or charge of them, and the person holding the legal title to them, and as to land the person having title thereto, or the lessee or occupant thereof; the term "stock" means cattle, horses, mules and asses; the term "animals" means all animals which may be distrained under this chapter; and "trespassing stock or animals" means those unlawfully upon land, or running at large contrary to law or police regulations. [15 G. A., ch. 70, §§ 4, 7; C.'73, §§ 1450, 1453.]

The provision that the word stock shall include cattle, horses, mules and asses is only applicable in the connection in which it is used, and is not to be deemed a limitation upon the meaning of the word as found in other statutes. As generally used it includes swine as well as the animals referred to: State v. Clark, 65-336.

SEC. 2312. Male animals running at large. The owner of any stallion, jack, bull, boar or buck shall restrain the same, and any person may take possession of any such animal running at large in the county in which such person resides, or in which he occupies or uses real estate, and give notice thereof to any constable in the county where taken, who shall sell the animal so taken at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, having given ten days' notice of the time and place of sale, describing the property, by posting the same in three public places in the township wherein such animal was found at large. Out of the proceeds of sale he shall pay all costs and any damage done by said animal, to be investigated and determined by him, and pay the remainder into the county treasury for the use of the county. If legal proof be made to the county auditor by the owner of said animal of his right thereto at any time within twelve months from the sale, he shall order the proper amount to be paid to the owner out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. If the owner, or any person for him, shall, on or before the day of sale, pay the costs thus far made, and all damages, to be determined by the constable if the parties cannot agree, and make satisfactory proof of his ownership, the constable shall release the animal to him. [C.'73, § 1447; R., §§ 289, 1522.]

Under a somewhat similar provision it was said that the law did not contemplate that the officer should have a process in order to make the sale provided for: Dalby v. Wolf, 14-228.

The provisons as to stallions is not applicable to colts until they are of such age as to be troublesome to mares or dangerous to be at large: Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 30-459.

SEC. 2313. Distraint damage feasant—recovery. Any animal trespassing upon land fenced as provided by law may be distrained by the owner of such land, and held for all damages done thereon by it, unless it escaped from adjoining land in consequence of the neglect of such land owner to maintain his part of a lawful partition fence. The owner of the land from which such animal escaped shall also be liable for such damages if it escaped therefrom in consequence of his neglect to maintain his part of a lawful partition fence, or if the trespassing animal was not lawfully upon his land, and he had knowledge thereof. If there be no lawful partition fence, and the line thereof has not been assigned either by the fence viewers or by agreement of the parties, any animal trespassing across such partition line shall not be distrained, nor shall there be any liability therefor. [15 G. A., ch. 70, § 3; C. '73, §§ 1448-9; R., §§ 1548-9; C. '51, §§ 913-14.]

In this state, aside from statute, cattle are free commoners, and may lawfully be permitted to run at large, and the rule of the common law that every man is bound to keep his cattle within his own inclosure or be responsible in damage for injuries arising from their being abroad is not applicable to the condition and circumstances of the people and is not in force: Wagner v. Bissell, 3-396; Heath v. Coltenback, 5-490; Alger v. M. & M. R. Co., 10-268; Russell v. Hanley, 20-219; Smith v. C., R. I. & P. R. Co., 34-506. Therefore, unless stock is prohibited from running at large, the owner of land can only maintain an action for trespass by cattle by showing that his fence was such as is required by statute: Farzier v. Nortinus, 34-82. But if cattle, after breaking over a sufficient fence into one field, go thence into another of the same owner, through a fence which is not sufficient, the action for their trespass upon the second field will lie: Herold v. Meyers, 20-378.

Cattle being free commoners, the mere fact of permitting them to run at large is not a ground of imputing negligence to the owner: Haughey v. Hart, 62-96.

The right of the owner of cattle or other stock to pasture them upon the commons is a permissive and not an abstract right. And while the owner of an inclosure cannot maintain an action for trespass against the owner of cattle entering thereon from the commons unless his fence is such as is required by statute, yet there is no obligation on his part to fence, and there can be no recovery for injuries to the cattle from feeding upon growing crops: Herold v. Meyers, 20-378.

If animals, though lawfully on adjoining land, escape therefrom and do damage, and their escape is not in consequence of the neglect of the person suffering the damage, their owner is liable therefor. It is not necessary that the fence surrounding the land of the person injured is throughout a lawful fence, if it is shown to have been such at the place where the cattle broke through. And this will be true where the owner of the adjoining land and the owner of the cattle are the same person and the fence broken through belongs to him: Noble v. Chase, 60-261.

It is only persons whose lands are inclosed by a lawful fence who are authorized to distrain domestic animals injuring their premises (where stock are not prohibited from running at large). If lands are not so inclosed there is no right to distrain, and possession acquired by such distraint is unlawful. The rightfulness of the distraint may therefore be inquired into in an action of replevin; it is not a matter for the exclusive determination of the fence viewers. But if the distraint is found to be legal the property may be remanded to the distrainor, and the damages may be assessed by the township trustees subject to the right of appeal as provided for in §§ 2318 and 2319: Syford v. Schiver, 61-155.

Cattle, when they of their own accord go upon the unfenced land of another, do not render their owner liable to an action by the owner of the land, and the owner of the cattle may rightfully enter to remove them; and if they have crossed the unfenced land of one and gone on to that of another they may be driven back across the land they crossed in entering: Camp v. Flaherty, 28-520.

Where plaintiff, claiming to own certain real estate, sought to recover damages from defendant for maliciously, wrongfully and unlawfully breaking down and destroying the fence and turning his cattle upon such land without plaintiff's consent, held, that an instruction, in substance, that if the land was the property of plaintiff, as to which the jury were directed to inquire, and if they found the land was fenced and the defendant broke down the fence and thereby allowed the cattle to go upon the land, or if the land was fenced and the fence was broken down without defendant's fault, and he drove his cattle upon the land, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover, was not erroneous: Erbes v. Wehmeyer, 69-85.

The owner of the land may have his remedy by action against the owner of the stock as here provided, or by distraining the animals as provided in § 2314 et seq. If he pursue the former course the ordinary rules as to proof, etc., apply, and he need not have the damages ascertained by the township trustees, as provided in § 2317: Quinton v. Van Tuyl, 30-554.

A land owner in a county where stock is prohibited from running at large is not relieved of his obligation to maintain partition fences, and if stock rightfully in an adjoining inclosure escape upon his land by reason of his failure to maintain such fence he cannot recover damages from the owner of the stock: Duffees v. Judd, 48-256.

The servant of a land owner, who distrains stock as agent of such owner, may justify as such agent in an action of replevin brought against him to recover the stock: Bearinger v. O'Hare, 26-250.

As to damage from bull unlawfully at large, see note to § 2314.

SEC. 2314. What animals not permitted to run at large. Swine, sheep and goats at all times, and, during the time and as required by a police regulation adopted according to law, stock shall be restrained from running at large. Animals thus prohibited from running at large, when trespassing on land, or a road adjoining thereto, may be distrained by the owner of such land, and held for damages done by them, and for the costs provided in this chapter; but stock shall not be considered as running at large so long as it is upon unimproved lands and under the immediate care and efficient control of the owner, or upon the public roads for travel or driving thereon under like care and control. But where a partition fence is required by law to be erected or maintained, stock escaping across such partition line shall be dealt with as provided in the preceding section. [18 G. A., ch. 188, § 1; 15 G. A., ch. 70, §§ 2, 3, 6; C. '73, §§ 1446, 1448, 1452.]

Goslar v Cook, 179 N.W. 621

Held that the original section as contained in 13 G. A., ch. 26, was applicable without a submission to vote of the question of restraining stock from running at large, and that it was immaterial whether the premises were inclosed with a lawful fence or not: Little v. McGuire, 38-560; Hallock v. Hughes, 42-516.

The owner of a thoroughbred cow, which is got with calf by an ill-bred and unpedigreed bull, unlawfully running at large, may recover damages from the owner of such bull, which are to be measured by the difference in the value of the cow, for the purpose of breeding of fine stock, before meeting such bull and afterwards: Crawford v. Williams, 48-247.

The fact that an eighty-acre tract of land is surrounded by a single ploughed furrow, and includes a few acres under cultivation, will not render it all improved or cultivated land within the meaning of this section; but in such cases the owner of the land may recover damages from the owner of cattle who herds and confines them upon such land: Otis v. Morgan, 61-712.

While trespass is not committed when cattle running at large enter upon uninclosed land in counties where the herd law is not in force, yet the act of herding and pasturing cattle upon such uninclosed land against the consent of the owner will constitute trespass for which the wrong-doer may be liable in damages: Harrison v. Adamson, 76-337.

In an action for damages against defendant for having herded his cattle upon plaintiff's uninclosed and unimproved land without plaintiff's consent, it appearing that other persons herded cattle upon the land during the time it was used by defendant, and there being no evidence as to how long the land was so used by defendant, and how many cattle he had herded, and the value of such use, held, that any verdict, except for nominal damages, would have been without evidence, and therefore the action of the court in refusing to submit the case to the jury for a verdict, and in directing a verdict for the defendant, would not be reversed on appeal: Williams v. Brown, 76-643.

In an action for damages from an animal running at large, it is not necessary to show that the road in which he is at large is a legal highway, but it is sufficient to show that it is open to the public; and an animal loose in such highway is running at large, and if vicious the owner is liable for injuries inflicted by such animal on a person passing by: Meier v. Shrunk, 79-17.

The fact that stock is running at large in violation of the provisions of the herd law does not absolutely preclude recovery from a railway company for injuries to such stock, caused by the operation of a train upon station grounds at an unlawful rate of speed: Story v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 79-402.

In an action for damages by reason of personal injury to plaintiff by defendant's bull running at large, held, that evidence that defendant frequently permitted the animal to run at large in the road was admissible on the question as to whether he was at large with defendant's permission when plaintiff was injured; that evidence as to the character and general reputation of the animal as being vicious was admissible to show whether the attack on plaintiff was without provocation, or was due, as claimed by defendant, to plaintiff's negligently provoking the animal, and that plaintiff's information as to the disposition of the animal might be shown to indicate whether he acted negligently: Meier v. Shrunk, 79-17.

Whether in such case it was negligent in plaintiff to strike the animal with his cane would depend upon attending circumstances as to his reasonable belief that he would thereby avoid danger: Ibid.

SEC. 2315. Recovery of damages. Instead of distraining trespassing stock or animals, the injured person may recover all damages caused thereby in an action against the owner thereof, and may join therein the owner of the land from which it escaped, if he is liable therefor. If distrained stock or animals escape or are released without the consent of the distraining party, he may recover his damages as above provided, with costs, and the costs of distraint made prior to such escape or release. [15 G. A., ch. 70, § 3; C. '73, § 1448.]

SEC. 2316. Apportionment of damages. If there is more than one owner of distrained stock or animals, each may pay his ratable share of the damages and costs, and release his animals. If the injured party elects to sue therefor, he may join in one action all or any of such owners who have not paid their proportion of the damages and costs. [18 G. A., ch. 188, § 1; 15 G. A., ch. 70, § 6; C. '73, § 1452.]

SEC. 2317. Assessment of damages—sale. Within twenty-four hours after an animal has been distrained, Sunday not included, the person distraining, or his agent, shall notify the owner of the animal thereof, and, if he fails to satisfy the damages and costs, such person shall within twenty-four hours after such notice to the owner, verbally or in writing, request the township trustees to appear upon the premises to view and assess the damages. When two or more trustees have met, one of them having previously informed the owner of the animal of the time and place of meeting, they shall assess the damages and costs. If the owner of the distrained animal refuses or neglects for two days thereafter to pay the amount thus assessed, one of said trustees shall put up in three conspicuous places in the township notices, describing the property, and naming a time and place of sale, which place shall be where the property is distrained, and time not less than five nor more than ten days thereafter, that said property will be sold between the hours of one and three o'clock in the afternoon. At the time and place of sale, one of said trustees shall offer for sale and sell the property at public outcry to the highest bidder for cash, but no sale shall be made after having realized a sufficient sum with which to pay the damages and costs, any remaining animals unsold to be at once returned to the owner, and also the surplus remaining, if any, out of any sold. If for any reason a trustee cannot sit, the remaining trustees may appoint any disinterested citizen having the qualifications of a juror to act in his place. [C.'73, § 1454.]

Upon the hearing before fence viewers to assess the damages caused by stock running at large, the question as to whether the stock was improperly at large, as well as the amount of damage done, is before the fence viewers, and such question may also be considered on appeal from their action: Duffees v. Judd, 48-256.

This section does not confer special authority upon the township trustees to inquire into and determine the lawfulness of the fence inclosing the injured premises, and that matter may be determined in an action of replevin to recover the property from the person making distraint, when it is claimed that his premises are not surrounded by a lawful fence: Syford v. Schiver, 61-155.

Failure to serve notice upon one of the trustees, who might have been served, will render the action of the other two entirely void, as being without jurisdiction: Barrett v. Dolan, 71-94.

Notice to the owner of the stock of the amount of damages assessed by the trustees, and the demand from him that he pay such damages, are not necessary to warrant a sale: Miller v. Dale, 72-470.

Where a party distrained a trespassing animal and gave notice to the person who had charge of the animal and the one who owned the farm on which it was usually kept, held, that the notice was sufficient to authorize the trustees to assess the damages: Lyons v. Van Gorder, 77-600.

A trespassing animal should not be treated as an estray, where the party distraining knows who has charge of the animal and where it is kept, although the owner is unknown: Ibid.

SEC. 2318. Assessment made—appeal. The trustees shall make their assessment in writing, and file the same with the township clerk, which shall be recorded by him. Any person aggrieved by the action of the trustees may appeal to the district court of the county. The appeal bond, conditioned to pay all costs and damages, shall be filed with and the sureties approved by the township clerk, in a penalty double the value of the property distrained, or, if the value of the property exceeds the amount of the damages claimed, then double the amount of the damages and costs. Notice of such appeal shall be given within five days, and in the same manner as in appeals from a judgment of a justice of the peace. The appellant shall file an appeal bond within three days, Sunday not included, from the filing of the finding of the trustees, and, when an appeal is thus taken by the claimant, the distrained stock or animals shall be held for the satisfaction of such judgment as may be rendered on appeal, but the owner of said stock or animals may release the same at any time, before judgment, by filing with the township clerk before the appeal is certified, or with the clerk of the district court thereafter, a bond with sufficient sureties to be approved by the clerk with whom filed, conditioned to pay all damages and cost recovered in said cause on appeal. The clerk receiving such bond shall file the same, and forthwith certify the fact to the person having charge of the distrained stock or animals, who shall thereupon release the same to the owner. Where the owner appeals and files a bond, as herein provided, it shall operate as a supersedeas, and the distrained stock or animals shall be released to him. Within five days after the taking of the appeal, the township clerk shall make out a certified transcript of the record of the finding of the trustees, and file the same, together with the notice of appeal, if in writing, and the bond with the clerk of the district court. [C.'73, § 1455.]

Under provisions for appeal to the circuit court, held, that not only the amount of damages, but also the question whether the stock were in fact trespassers, and the sufficiency of the fences, might be reviewed: Duffees v. Judd, 48-256.

Where the assessment of damages caused by a trespassing animal had been filed with the township clerk, but the original could not be found, held, that the record of the original made by the township clerk was admissible to prove the award of the trustees: Lyons v. Van Gorder, 77-600.

SEC. 2319. Escape or release—recapture. If any distrained animal escape or is unlawfully released, the injured person may recapture the same, and proceedings under this chapter shall continue until the assessment of damages is made, which shall be conclusive, unless appealed from. Notice of the sale of such animal shall be given by the trustees as soon as possession thereof is regained by the distrainor, and the property sold accordingly, unless he regains such possession before the day of sale as originally fixed, in which event the property shall be sold under the first notice.

SEC. 2320. Punishment for unlawful release. If any one, without leave of the person having any animal under distraint, release the same, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [18 G. A., ch. 188, § 2.]

SEC. 2321. Estrays. Any animal of an unknown owner running at large or trespassing within a lawful inclosure is an estray, and may be taken up by any householder in the county, except an unbroken animal between the first day of May and the first day of November, where such unbroken animal is not required to be restrained by a police regulation. [C. '73, §§ 1456, 1464.]

A distinction is here contemplated between a broken and an unbroken animal. The former may be taken up if found running in the highway: Knudson v. Gieson, 38-234.

An animal stolen from its owner and afterwards abandoned by the thief may lawfully be treated as an estray: Kinney v. Roe, 70-509.

SEC. 2322. Taking up. If any animal, liable to be taken up as an estray, comes upon any householder's premises, any person may notify him of the fact, and, if he fail to take up such estray for more than five days thereafter, any other householder in the same township may take it up and proceed with it as if taken upon his own premises, if he shall produce proof to a justice of the peace of the service of such notice. All persons taking up stray animals shall state under oath before said justice where the same were taken up. [C. '73, § 1465.]

An estray is an animal whose owner is unknown, and therefore a person cannot take up an animal as an estray when the owner of such animal is known to him. In such case the owner may replevin without tendering costs: Walters v. Glats, 29-437.

SEC. 2323. Notices posted. Any person taking up an estray shall within five days thereafter post up a written notice in three of the most public places in the township, which notice shall contain a full description of said animal, and a statement as to where the same was taken up. Unless such estray shall have been previously claimed by the owner, the person taking it up shall within ten days go before a justice of the peace in the township in which the estray was taken up, or, in case there is no justice in the township, then before the next nearest justice in the county, and make oath to the correctness of said notice, together with a statement attached thereto as to whether the marks or brands of said animal have been altered to his knowledge, either before or after the same was taken up, which notice shall be recorded by the justice in his estray book, and within five days forwarded by him to the county auditor, who shall enter the same in the estray book in his office, and shall cause a copy of said notice to be posted at the court-house door. [C.'73, § 1466.]

SEC. 2324. Publication. If the estray is stock, the auditor shall cause the notice to be published once each week for three weeks in some newspaper in the county. [C.'73, § 1468.]

SEC. 2325. Fees and expenses. The person taking up an estray shall pay the fee of the justice for administering the oath, recording the notice in his estray book, and forwarding the notice to the auditor, and shall also pay to the justice, to be transmitted to the auditor, the fee of the auditor for entering the notice in his estray book, and for posting a copy of the notice, and also, if the estray is stock, the sum of one dollar and fifty cents to cover the expense of publishing the notice, which amount so paid in advance for fees and expenses, together with the compensation allowed by law, shall be refunded to the person taking up such estray by the owner of it, in case restitution is made to him. If two or more estrays are taken up at the same time by the same person, they shall be included in one notice, and but one fee shall be paid therefor, and if only a part of the stock thus included is restored to the owner, a proportionate amount of such fees and expenses shall be refunded. [C.'73, §§ 3822–3; R., § 1520.]

SEC. 2326. Property vests when. If the estray be stock, and be not claimed by the owner within one year, or, being any other domestic animal, be not claimed by the owner within six months from the time it is taken up, the property therein shall vest in the taker-up, if he has complied with the provisions of this chapter. [C.'73, §§ 1471–2.]

SEC. 2327. Recovery by owner. At any time before the property in the estray vests in the person who has taken it up, the owner shall be entitled to recover possession of it on paying to the person who has taken it up the compensation to which he is entitled by law, and the fees and expenses which he has paid out in advance, together with any reward which has been offered by the owner, and a reasonable allowance for the expenses of keeping such estray, taking into account the use which the person taking up has had of it, which allowance shall be made by the justice of the peace before whom a proceeding to recover the animal shall be brought in the event the owner and the taker-up cannot agree with reference thereto. [C.'73, § 1474.]

SEC. 2328. Value recovered. At any time within six months after the property in an estray has vested in the taker-up, the owner shall be entitled on demand to be paid by the said taker-up the value of the estray, not including any increased value which has accrued since it was taken up, after deducting therefrom the compensation, reward, fees and expenses referred to in the preceding section; or the taker-up may, at his option, elect to surrender the estray, if still in his possession, in which case the owner must pay such compensation, reward, fees and expenses. [C.'73, § 1475.]

SEC. 2329. Use or appropriation. Any person legally taking up an estray may use or work it, if he does so with care and moderation, and does not abuse or injure it. But if any person unlawfully take up any estray, or take up any estray and fail to comply with any of the provisions of this chapter, or use or work it in any manner contrary to this chapter, or work it before having it appraised, or keep it out of the county for more than five days at any one time before he acquires a title to it, he shall forfeit to the county twenty dollars, to be sued for by any person in the county; and the owner of the estray may also recover of such offender double the amount of the injury sustained, with costs. Estrays adapted thereto may be bred and milked by the taker-up. [C.'73, § 1473.]

SEC. 2330. Finder not liable. If any estray, legally taken up, escape from the finder or die without any fault on his part, he shall not be liable for the loss. [C.'73, § 1476.]

SEC. 2331. Penalty against finder. If any person shall sell, trade or take out of the state any estray before the legal title shall have vested in him, he shall forfeit to the owner double its value, and shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor. But the auditor may authorize the taker-up to transfer the estray to another, who shall take the place of his predecessor. [C.'73, § 1477.]

SEC. 2332. Penalty against officer. If any printer, auditor or justice of the peace fail to perform the duties enjoined upon him in this chapter in relation to estrays, he shall forfeit to the county not less than five nor more than fifty dollars, to be sued for by any person in the county. [C.'73, § 1478.]

SEC. 2333. Bond to release. Before any property held under this chapter vests in the taker-up it may be released at once upon the owner giving to the holder a bond to be approved by the justice of the peace before whom the proceedings concerning the property have been had, conditioned to pay to the holder of the property, within twenty days after such approval, all costs and damages to which he is entitled on account of his action and loss in the matter. [C.'73, § 1486.]

SEC. 2334. Marks and brands. The board of supervisors of each county shall procure, at the expense of the county, a book for each civil township, to be in the custody of the township clerk, in which to record the marks and brands of horses, sheep, hogs and other animals. [C.'73, § 1479.]

SEC. 2335. Record. Any person wishing to mark or brand his domestic animals with any distinguishing mark may adopt his own mark, and have a description thereof recorded by the clerk of the township in which the owner lives, for which such clerk shall receive a fee of twenty-five cents. [16 G. A., ch. 61; C.'73, § 3809; R., §§ 909, 911.]

SEC. 2336. Mark previously recorded. No person shall adopt a mark or brand previously recorded to another person residing in the same township, nor shall the clerk record the same one to two persons, unless on their joint application. [C.'73, § 1481; R., § 1557; C.'51, § 922.]

SEC. 2337. Abandoned animals. Any person may take charge of any animal whose owner has abandoned it, or fails to properly take care and provide for it, and may furnish the same with proper shelter, nourishment and care at the owner's expense, and shall have a lien on such animal for the same, which, at the expiration of three months, shall become a perfect title to the property. [C.'73, § 1482.]

SEC. 2338. Food and water supplied. In case any animal impounded or otherwise confined shall be without necessary food or water for more than twelve successive hours, it shall be lawful for any person, as often as necessary, to enter the pound, inclosure or building, and supply it with necessary food and water so long as it shall remain so confined, and the reasonable cost of the same may be collected by him of the owner of the animal. [C.'73, § 1483.]

SEC. 2339. Diseased animals killed. The sheriff, constable, police officer, officer of any society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, or any magistrate shall destroy any horse or other animal disabled and unfit for further use. [C.'73, § 1484.]

SEC. 2340. Dogs killed. It shall be lawful for any person to kill any dog caught in the act of worrying, maiming or killing any sheep or lamb, or other domestic animal, or any dog attacking or attempting to bite any person, and the owner shall be liable to the party injured for all damages done by his dog, except when the party is doing an unlawful act. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any damage done by a dog affected with hydrophobia. [25 G. A., ch. 84; C. '73, § 1485.]

To justify the killing of a dog under this section he must be not only trespassing but actually engaged in one of the acts mentioned: Marshall v. Blackshire, 44–475.

A person who has a dog in his possession or harbors him on his premises, as owners usually do with their dogs, is to be considered the owner within the meaning of this section. In determining the question of ownership the jury must consider the party's former treatment of the animal, his declarations concerning him, and the habits of the dog as to staying at such person's place: O'Harra v. Miller, 64–462.

Aside from this provision a person who has in his charge a vicious dog, knowing his character, and fails to restrain him is absolutely liable for an injury inflicted. It makes no difference whether the person has charge of the animal as owner or only as bailee: Marsel v. Bowman, 62–57.

The owner of a dog who wilfully and maliciously and with full knowledge of his ferocious and vicious habits and practices makes no effort to restrain him or protect the public from his attacks, is liable to damages caused by the running away of a team frightened by such animal: Cameron v. Bryan, 89–214.

It is competent to show the general reputation of the animal as being vicious and dangerous as tending to raise an inference that the owner had knowledge of his vicious propensities: Ibid.

This section does not create an absolute liability. Contributory negligence of the person injured may constitute a defense, and therefore in an action to recover damages on account of such an injury, the plaintiff must aver and prove his own care, that is, freedom from contributory negligence: Gregory v. Woodworth, 61 N. W., 962; Stuber v. Gannon, 67 N. W., 105.

Dogs may be personal property and have value, and such value may be shown in an action for injury thereto: Anson v. Dwight, 18–241.

Under provisions not now retained by which a tax on dogs was collected and held as a fund from which to pay damages caused by dogs, held, that it was only when the owner was unknown or unable to respond in damages that the injured party was entitled to indemnity out of the special fund, and then not because of any common law liability upon the part of the county. The claims were not strictly claims against the county but against the fund, therefore allowance could be made only by the board of supervisors, and no action could be maintained therefor: Hodges v. Tama County, 91–578.

SEC. 2341. Registration of pedigrees. Any owner or keeper of a stallion or bull for public service, who represents him to be pure bred, thoroughbred, or standard bred, of any breed of horses or cattle that has a stud or herd book for the registration of pedigrees, shall place a copy of a certificate of registration on the door of the stall or stable where such animal is usually kept, giving the registration number, name of breeder, name of animal, and the volume and page of the stud or herd book in which such animal is recorded, and, when requested to do so, shall give to any patron a copy of such certificate. Any violation of the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor. [22 G. A., ch. 102.]

SEC. 2342. Publishing false pedigrees. Any person who shall post or publish or cause to be posted or published, or shall cause to be recorded in any public record kept as a record of pedigrees, any false pedigree of any horse, cattle, sheep or swine shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars and costs, and be imprisoned in the county jail till said fine is paid, but not exceeding three months. [24 G. A., ch. 66.]

SEC. 2343. Sheep inspector. The board of supervisors of any county, when notified in writing by five or more sheep owners of such county that sheep diseased with scab, or any other malignant, contagious disease, exist in such county, shall, at any regular or special meeting, appoint a suitable person as county sheep inspector, who shall take the oath of office, whose duties shall be as hereinafter prescribed, and whose term of office shall be for two years and until his successor is appointed and qualified. [24 G. A., ch. 49, § 1.]

SEC. 2344. Treatment of diseased sheep. It shall be the duty of the sheep inspector, upon the complaint of three or more sheep owners that any sheep within his jurisdiction have the scab or any other malignant, contagious disease, to immediately inspect and report in writing the result of his inspection to the county auditor, to be filed by him for reference by the board of supervisors or any party concerned. And if he deem it necessary, in order to prevent the spread of the disease to the sheep of the other owners, he shall command the owner or agent to dip or otherwise treat such diseased sheep, and shall inspect such diseased sheep every month thereafter until such disease shall be eradicated. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 2345. Expenses. It shall be the duty of the sheep inspector to dip or otherwise treat such diseased sheep, should the owner or agent refuse to do so, and all costs, expenses and charges, together with a per diem of three dollars per day, shall be charged against the owner of such sheep, and shall be a lien thereon, and may be recovered in an action. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 2346. Compensation of inspector. Such compensation for the inspector shall be three dollars per day, and shall be paid by the owner of the sheep, or his agent, if the disease is found to exist. In case no disease is found to exist, the complainants shall pay such fee. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 2347. Inspection of sheep from outside the state. Upon the arrival of any flock of sheep within the state from a distance of more than twenty miles outside the boundaries of the state, the owner or agent shall notify the inspector of the county in which such sheep are being held, and he shall inspect the flock at the expense of the owner or agent; and if the sheep are found sound shall furnish the owner or agent a certificate, which shall be a passport to any part of the state; but sheep in transport on board of railroad cars, or passing through the state on such cars, shall not come within the provisions of this section. Any violation of, or failure to comply with, the provisions of this and the four preceding sections by the owner of any sheep shall subject him to a forfeiture of not to exceed one hundred dollars, which shall be a lien on such sheep, and shall be recovered in an action by the county attorney in the name and for the use of the county. [Same, §§ 3, 6.]

SEC. 2348. Bounties. A bounty of five dollars shall be allowed on the skin of an adult wolf, two dollars on that of a cub wolf, and one dollar on that of a lynx or wild cat, to be paid out of the treasury of the county in which the animal was taken, upon the certified statement of the facts, together with such other evidence as the board of supervisors may demand showing the claimant to be entitled thereto. The person claiming the bounty shall produce such statement, together with the whole skin of the animal, to the auditor of the county wherein such wolf, lynx or wild cat was taken and killed, and he shall destroy or deface the same so as to prevent their use to obtain for the second time the bounty herein provided. Any person who shall demand a bounty on any of the above mentioned animals killed or taken in another state or county, or on a domesticated animal, shall be fined not more than one hundred nor less than fifty dollars. [24 G. A., ch. 37; C. '73, §§ 1487, 1488; R., §§ 2193–5.]

In an action to recover from the county additional bounty offered for wolf scalps, held, that the certificate of a justice of the peace showing the delivery to him of the scalps and that he had destroyed the same was sufficient evidence of the fact that such wolves were caught and killed in the county, and that the scalps had ears: Murray v. Jones County, 72–286.

SEC. 2349. Compensation under this chapter. The compensation for services under this chapter shall be as follows:

1. For distraining stock, fifty cents for each head not exceeding two, and twenty-five cents for each additional head taken on one distraint;

2. For distraining each stallion, jack or bull, one dollar; for distraining each boar or buck, fifty cents;

3. For distraining any other animals, twenty-five cents each, not exceeding four, and ten cents for each additional head;

4. For keeping male stock named in section twenty-three hundred and twelve of this chapter, fifty cents a day, and all other stock twenty-five cents a day, from the time the same is taken up;

5. For keeping any other animals, ten cents a day from the time the same is taken up;

6. For posting notices and selling male animals, the same fees as are allowed constables for like services upon execution;
7. For taking up as an estray one head of stock, fifty cents, and twenty-five cents for each additional head at one time;
8. For taking up any other kind of estray animals, fifteen cents each;
9. To the justice of the peace, for all services in each case of taking up estrays, fifty cents;
10. To the county auditor, for all services in each case of estrays, including posting and publishing notice, but not including the fee of the printer, fifty cents;
11. To the township trustees, for posting notices, twenty-five cents, and services not otherwise provided for, the same fees as are allowed in assessing damages done by trespassing animals, with five cents mileage each way;
12. To the township clerk, ten cents per each hundred words entered of record, the same fees for a copy thereof, and in addition twenty-five cents for his certificate thereto, and fifty cents for filing and approving an appeal bond. [C.'73, §§ 3821, 3822; R., § 1520.]

Eradication of Hog Cholera.

[The next five sections constitute a special act entitled: "An act to co-operate with the United States in eradication of hog cholera or swine plague." It took effect by publication May 4, 1897.]

Sec. 2350. Regulations accepted. The governor is hereby authorized to accept, on behalf of the state, any rules and regulations prepared by the secretary of agriculture of the United States for the eradication of hog cholera or swine plague, in one or more counties of this state, and he, together with the state veterinary surgeon, may coöperate with the government of the United States for the objects of this act.

Sec. 2351. Federal inspectors. The inspectors of the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture shall have the right of inspection, quarantine and condemnation of animals affected with hog cholera or swine plague, or suspected to be so affected, or that have been exposed to this disease, and for these purposes are hereby authorized and empowered to enter upon any ground or premises. It is hereby made the duty of sheriffs, constables and peace officers to assist such inspectors when so requested; and said inspectors shall have the same powers and protection as peace officers while engaged in the discharge of their duties.

Sec. 2352. Diseased animals destroyed—compensation. Whenever any swine in the district specified in the regulations are found to be affected with or to have been exposed to hog cholera or swine plague, said swine may be condemned and destroyed; and the owners of all swine destroyed under the provisions of this act shall be entitled to receive a reasonable compensation therefor, but not more than the actual value in the condition when condemned. In case of failure on the part of the inspector and the owner to agree as to the amount of compensation, the swine shall be appraised by a board of citizens of this state, one of whom may be appointed by the inspector, one by the owner of the swine, and the two thus appointed shall select a third, and these together shall proceed to appraise the amount to be paid to the owner for the animals destroyed. Such appraisal shall be made under oath, and shall be final when the value of the animals does not exceed one hundred dollars, but in all other cases either party shall have the right of appeal to the district court, but such appeal shall not delay the destruction of the diseased or exposed animals.

Sec. 2353. Expenses. All expenses of quarantine, condemnation and destruction of swine under the provisions of this act, and the expenses of any and all measures that may be used to eradicate hog cholera, shall be paid by the United States, and in no case shall this state be liable for any damages or expenses of any kind under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 2354. Penalty. Any person violating any order of quarantine made under this act, or any regulations prescribed by the secretary of agriculture and accepted by the governor of this state for the eradication of hog cholera, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars.

CHAPTER 4.

OF FENCES.

SECTION 2355. Partition fences. The respective owners of adjoining tracts of land, except timber land not used otherwise than for the timber thereon, from which each derives any revenue or benefit, shall be compelled to erect and maintain partition fences, or contribute thereto, and keep the same in good repair throughout the year, and if said fence be hedge, the owner thereof shall trim or cut it back once in two years to within five feet from the ground, unless such owners otherwise agree in a writing to be filed with and recorded by the township clerk. [25 G. A., ch. 104; 22 G. A., ch. 95; C. '73, §§ 1489, 1494–5, 1508; R., §§ 1526, 1531–2; C. '51, §§ 895, 900–1.]

There is no provision in the statute for delivering formal possession of a partition fence, and where a contract with reference to such a fence was made, and the person agreeing to pay for his share thereof adopted and acknowledged the benefits of the fence, held, that the contract was sufficiently performed to take it out of the statute of frauds: Bodell v. Nehls, 85–164.

The partition fences required by this section are only lawful fences. If one desires the fence to be made tight as against sheep and swine he should follow the provision of § 2367: Panther v. Trauman, 89–101.

SEC. 2356. Powers of fence viewers. The fence viewers shall have power to determine any controversy arising under this chapter, upon giving five days' notice in writing to the opposite party or parties, prescribing the time and place of meeting to hear and determine the matter named in said notice. Upon request of any land owner, the fence viewers shall give such notice to all adjoining land owners liable for the erection, maintenance, rebuilding, trimming or cutting back, or repairing of a partition fence, or to pay for an existing hedge or fence. At said time and place the fence viewers shall meet and determine by written order the obligations, rights and duties of the respective parties in such matter, and assign to each owner the part which he shall erect, maintain, rebuild, trim or cut back, or pay for, and fix the value thereof, and prescribe the time within which the same shall be completed or paid for, and, in case of repair, may specify the kind of repairs to be made. [C. '73, §§ 1490, 1492, 1496, 1503; R., §§ 1527, 1529, 1533, 1540; C. '51, §§ 896, 898, 902, 909.]

The duty of maintaining partition fences as provided in this chapter being one created solely by statute, the method prescribed by the statute for enforcing such duty must be followed. A party cannot proceed by action in court instead of by application to the fence viewers: Lease v. Vance, 28–509.

It is not necessary that the complaint to the fence viewers be in writing and made matter of record: Tubbs v. Ogden, 46–134.

Unless due notice is given to the adverse party of the meeting of the fence viewers to examine the fence the subsequent proceedings cannot constitute the basis of a recovery against him: Lookhart v. Wessels, 46–81. As to what is due and sufficient notice, see Tubbs v. Ogden, 46–134.

Fence viewers have jurisdiction only when a controversy arises between the respective owners of land about the partition fences: Anderson v. Cox, 54–578.

Where the parties have agreed to maintain a certain kind of fence the trustees may determine whether such agreement has been performed and decide as to time and manner of performance: Huber v. Wilkinson, 46–458.

The evidence of fence viewers is competent in regard to a matter upon which they are authorized to form an opinion: Phillips v. Oystee, 32–257.

An apportionment of the obligation to maintain a partition fence, made after the adoption of the herd law, which is acquiesced in and complied with by both parties, remains binding on them until in some manner the parties are relieved therefrom: Barrett v. Dolan, 71–94.

Where a party has complied with the finding of the fence viewers, he should not be heard to question their jurisdiction to make the finding on the ground of insufficiency of notice to him; at any rate, he should not, in an action on the finding, be allowed to question such jurisdiction without showing that he had no knowledge of the proceedings by reason of the notice not having been served on him: Brown v. Petrie, 86–581.

The finding assigning to each his share, etc., need not be in writing, though it would be the better practice to put it in that form: Talbot v. Blacklege, 22–572; Gantz v. Clark, 31–254.

And held, that a party at whose house the viewers met, and who was verbally notified by them of making a division, and, on being asked whether he had received notice, admitted that he had, could not object to want of a written notice. Also held, that where parties were verbally notified, and knew of the action and decision of the fence viewers, and such decision was reduced to writing and duly recorded, objection as to want of notice thereof could not be considered: Talbot v. Blacklege, 22–572.

Under a former statutory provision, held, that notice of a meeting of the fence viewers to determine the value of a fence erected in pursuance of their direction, not being expressly required, was not necessary: Ibid.

When exercising power granted to them, the proceedings of fence viewers are to be considered by the court as to all matters of form with at least the same tender and indulgent consideration which is extended to proceedings before a justice of the peace: Ibid.

The decision of the fence viewers is not conclusive as to the true division line, and in an action by one land owner against an adjoining owner to recover the proportion of the cost of building a partition fence, in accordance with the direction of the fence viewers, the defendant may show, as a defense, that the fence was not erected upon the true line: Peschongs v. Mueller, 50–237.

The adjoining owner is only under obligation to contribute towards the portion of the fence of a neighboring proprietor which is used in common between them and if the action of the fence viewers in apportioning liability is based on an estimate which includes fence not thus in common, it is invalid: Farmer v. Young, 86–382.

SEC. 2357. Assignment of portions. In case a land owner desires to erect a partition hedge or fence when the owner of the adjoining land is not liable to contribute thereto, the fence viewers may assign to each owner the part which he shall erect, maintain, rebuild, and repair, trim or cut back, by pursuing the method provided in the preceding section; but the adjoining owner shall not be required to contribute thereto until he becomes liable so to do, as elsewhere in this chapter provided. [22 G. A., ch. 95, § 1; C. '73, § 1495; R., § 1532; C. '51, § 901.]

Adjoining owners could not be considered as occupying their premises in severalty, within the meaning of § 1496 of the Code of '73, unless there was a partition fence of such character that the proprietor was able to keep his stock upon his own premises. Therefore, held, that a hedge which had not attained sufficient perfection to prevent stock from passing through it did not constitute a partition fence, and the owners were therefore holding in common within the meaning of the statute: Miner v. Bennett, 45–635.

Where one of the owners of adjacent property inclosed in common intentionally put his animals into the common inclosure, by which the property of the other owner was injured, held that he was liable therefor, and it was immaterial whether the fence inclosing the common inclosure was a lawful fence or not: Broadwell v. Wilcox, 22–568.

One who purposely turns his cattle upon his land, from which they go upon the land of another, inclosed in common, and do damage, is liable, though there was no intention that they should go upon his neighbor's land. And where the land trespassed upon is inclosed in common with that of the owner of the cattle, without partition fence, by agreement, the liability is the same as though their lands were separated by a lawful partition fence. The agreement stands as and for the fence: Winters v. Jacobs, 29–115.

In counties where a herd law is in force a party desiring to use his ground for purposes not requiring a fence in such county, for instance, for raising crops alone, cannot be compelled to contribute to the erection of a partition fence between his land and that of an owner who desires to use his premises for purposes requiring fencing, as, for instance, raising stock: Syas v. Peck, 58–256.

Land is to be deemed as not used in common where the use is such that means must be taken to preserve the crops. Where there is no regulation prohibiting stock from running at large, the party desiring to use his land for the raising of crops which must be protected from such stock must contribute to a partition fence. Where it did not appear that stock was not prohibited from running at large, held, that such fact would not be presumed for the purpose of establishing error in the judgment below: Hewit v. Jewell, 59–37.

SEC. 2358. Default—double damages. If the erecting, rebuilding or repairing of such fence be not completed within thirty days from and after the time fixed therefor in such order, the adjoining owner may do or complete the same, and the value thereof may be fixed by the fence viewers, and unless the sum so fixed, together with all fees of the fence viewers caused by such default, as taxed by them, is paid to the land owner so erecting, rebuilding, trimming or cutting back or repairing such fence, within ten days after the same is so ascertained; or when ordered to pay for an existing fence, and the value thereof is fixed by the fence viewers, and said sum, together with the fees of the fence viewers, as taxed by them, remains unpaid by the party in default for ten days, the person entitled thereto may recover double said sum, together with the fees so taxed, in an action by ordinary proceedings. [C.'73, §§ 1491, 1493, 1496, R., §§ 1528, 1530, 1533; C.'51, §§ 897, 899, 902.]

The action of the fence viewers is conclusive where they have jurisdiction; but they cannot conclude a party by determining that to be a partition fence which, in fact, is not: Bills v. Belknap, 38-225.

The adjudication by the trustees as to the sufficiency of the fence should be by them sitting as a board, and as a result of personal inspection, but the inspection need not be made by them in a body. A record of the adjudication should be made by the clerk, but it is not necessary that such adjudication be reduced to writing and certified by them. The certificate of the viewers as to the value of the fence should be filed with the clerk and will then be sufficient evidence of complainant's rights and notice to the adverse party: Tubbs v. Ogden, 46-134.

Prior to the present Code there was no appeal from the action of fence viewers, but the fact that prior statutes thus made decisions of the fence viewers conclusive did not render the statutes unconstitutional: McKeever v. Jenks, 59-350.

The statute does not make the fence viewers sole judges of the sufficiency of the fence in an action brought for damages caused by trespassing cattle. The sufficiency may be proved like any other fact: Noble v. Chase, 60-261.

Where a party, without availing himself of the provisions of the statute as to fence viewers, gave notice to an adjoining land owner to build one-half the fence between their lands, and such adjoining owner, in compliance with his demands, built his one-half the fence and afterwards built the remainder of the fence, which should have been built by the party giving the notice, held, that the party thus building the fence might recover, from the party serving the notice, the value of one-half the fence built: Schnare v. Gehman, 9-283.

SEC. 2359. Service of notice. The notices by the fence viewers provided for in this chapter may be served upon any owner nonresident of the county where his land is situated, by publication thereof for two consecutive weeks in a newspaper printed in the county in which the land is situated, proof of which shall be made as in case of an original notice and filed with the fence viewers, and a copy delivered to the occupant of said land, or to any agent of the owner in charge of the same.

SEC. 2360. Orders—notice. All orders and decisions made by the fence viewers shall be in writing, signed by at least two of them, and filed with the township clerk. All notices in this chapter required to be given shall be in writing, and return of service thereof made in the same manner as notices in actions before a justice of the peace. Such orders, decisions, notices and returns shall be entered of record at length by the township clerk, and said record, or a copy thereof, certified to be such by such township clerk, shall be competent evidence in all courts.

SEC. 2361. Division recorded. The several owners may, in writing, agree upon the portion of partition fences between their lands which shall be erected and maintained by each, which writing shall describe the lands and the parts of the fences so assigned, be signed and acknowledged by them, and filed and recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county or counties in which they are situated. [C.'73, § 1499; R., § 1536; C. 51, § 905.]

The agreement here referred to is one between the owners as to the amount of fence each shall maintain; and held, that an agreement that there should be a lane and no partition fences need not be in writing: Bills v. Belknap, 38-225.

[But § 1506 of Code of '73, under which this decision was made, is not now retained.]

SEC. 2362. How far binding. Any order made by the fence viewers, or any agreement in writing between adjoining land owners, when recorded as in this chapter provided, shall bind the makers, their heirs and subsequent grantees, except, if the land of either shall cease to be used as a means for revenue or benefit, the same shall be inoperative while not thus used. [Same.]

SEC. 2363. Lands in different townships. When the adjoining lands are situated in different townships in the same or different counties, the clerk of the township of the owner making the application shall select two trustees of his township as fence viewers, and the clerk of the other township one from his township, who shall possess, in such case, all the powers given to fence viewers in this chapter, but all orders, notices and valuations and taxation of costs made by them must be recorded in both townships. [C.'73, § 1500; R., § 1537; C.'51, § 906.]

SEC. 2364. Fence on another's land. When a person has made a fence or other improvement on an inclosure, which is found to be on land of another, such person may enter upon the land of the other and remove his fence or other improvement and material, upon his first paying, or offering to pay, the other party for any damage to the soil which may be occasioned thereby, and the value of any timber used in said improvement taken from the land of such other party, if any; and if the parties cannot agree as to the damages, the fence viewers may determine them as in other cases; such removal shall be made as soon as practicable, but not so as to expose the crops of the other party. [C.'73, §§ 1501-2; R., §§ 1538-9; C.'51, §§ 907-8.]

SEC. 2365. Line fences. A person building a fence may lay the same upon the line between him and the adjacent owners, so that it may be partly on one side and partly on the other, and the owner shall have the same right to remove it as if it were wholly on his own land. [C.'73, § 1504; R., § 1541; C.'51, § 910.]

SEC. 2366. Fence on one side of line. The provisions concerning partition fences shall apply to a fence standing wholly upon one side of the division line. [C.'73, § 1505; R., § 1542; C.'51, § 911.]

If parties use a fence as a partition fence between their farms, it is wholly immaterial whether it is on the exact boundary line, so far as the obligation to maintain the fence or contribute to its construction is concerned: Card v. Dale, 67-552.

One of the adjacent proprietors cannot evade the law or defeat it by purposely making his fence a few feet from instead of upon the dividing line: Talbot v. Blacklege, 22-572.

Where defendant in inclosing his premises left a private way entirely on his own land, next to his neighbor's, held, that he could not be required, in addition to fencing such right of way over the remainder of his own land, to construct his share of the partition fence between such right of way and his neighbor's land: Bland v. Hixenbaugh, 39-532.

A party who fences across a public alley in a village, separating his lot from his neighbor's, so as to make use of his neighbor's fence, does not thereby make such fence a partition fence, nor render himself liable to pay for a share thereof: Anderson v. Cox, 54-578.

SEC. 2367. Lawful fence defined. A lawful fence shall consist of three rails of good substantial material, or three boards not less than six inches wide and three-quarters of an inch thick, such rails or boards to be fastened in or to good substantial posts, not more than ten feet apart where rails are used, and not more than eight feet apart where boards are used, or wire either wholly or in part, substantially built and kept in good repair, or any other kind of fence, which, in the opinion of the fence viewers, shall be equivalent thereto, the lowest or bottom rail, wire or board not more than twenty nor less than sixteen inches from the ground, the top rail, wire or board to be between forty-eight and fifty-four inches in height, and the center rail, wire or board not less than twelve inches nor more than eighteen inches above the bottom rail, wire or board; or it shall consist of three wires, barbed with not less than thirty-six iron barbs of two points each, or twenty-six iron barbs of four points each, on each rod of wire, or of four wires, two thus barbed and two smooth, the wires to be firmly fastened to posts not more than two rods apart, with not less than two stays between posts, or with posts not more than one rod apart, without such stays, the top wire to be not more than fifty-four nor less than forty-eight inches in height. All partition fences may be made tight by the party desiring it, and, at his election, the added material may be removed. In case adjoining owners or occupants of land shall use the same for pasturing sheep or swine, each shall keep his share of the partition fence in such condition as shall restrain such sheep or swine. Upon the application of either owner, after notice given as prescribed in this chapter, the fence viewers shall determine all controversies arising under this section, including the use of partition fences made hog and sheep tight. [18 G. A., ch. 47; 17 G. A., ch. 124; 16 G. A., ch. 101; C. '73, § 1507; R., § 1545.]

A bluff, a hedge, a trench, a wall, a trestle or the like may be held to be in fact a lawful fence: Hilliard v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 37-442.

The evidence of fence viewers is competent in regard to a matter upon which they are authorized to form an opinion: Phillips v. Oystee, 32-257.

Rev., § 1544, construed in regard to height there required: Ibid.

There is no obligation as to the public resting upon the owners of growing crops to fence them; and in an action by the owner of an ox which had broken through an insufficient fence into a cornfield, and died from the effects of eating the corn, brought against the owner of the field for damages, held, that defendant was not liable: Herold v. Meyers, 20-378.

A party desiring to have a partition fence made tight as against swine and sheep has the right to do so at his own expense and may whenever he chooses restore the fence to the condition of a lawful fence: Panther v. Trauman, 89-101.

As to obligation to fence generally, see notes to § 2313.

Prior provisions as to hedges, held not to be so construed as to defeat recovery by a party on the ground that on some point on his line a hedge could not be grown for a short distance: McKeever v. Jenks, 59-300.

SEC. 2368. Where stock restrained. This chapter shall be construed the same in counties where stock is restrained from running at large as where not so restrained. [25 G. A., ch. 104; 22 G. A., ch. 95, § 2.]

SEC. 2369. Appeal. An appeal may be taken to the district court from any order or decision of the fence viewers by any person affected, in the same manner appeals are taken from justices of the peace, except that the appeal bond shall be approved by the township clerk, in which event the township clerk, after recording the original papers, shall file them in the office of the clerk of the district court, certifying them to be such, and the clerk shall docket them, entitling the applicant or petitioner as plaintiff, and it shall stand for trial as other cases.

SEC. 2370. Record kept—fees of clerk. The township clerk shall enter all matters herein required to be made of record in his record book, and shall receive ten cents for each one hundred words in entering of record and making certified copies of the matters herein provided for, and twenty-five cents additional for his certificate thereto when required.

Before the incorporation of this provision, held, that an assignment made by the fence viewers was binding upon the parties thereto without being recorded: Gantz v. Clark, 31-254.

CHAPTER 5.

OF LOST GOODS.

SECTION 2371. Taking up rafts, logs and lumber. If any person shall stop or take up any vessel or water craft, or any raft of logs, or part thereof, or any logs suitable for making lumber or hewn timber, or sawed lumber, found adrift within the limits or upon the boundaries of this state, of the value of five dollars or upwards, including the cargo, tackle, rigging and other appendages of such vessel or water craft, such person, within five days thereafter, provided the same shall not have been previously proved and restored to the owner, shall go before some justice of the peace in the township where such property is found, and make affidavit setting forth the exact description of such property; where and when the same was found; whether any, and if so what, cargo, tackle, rigging or other appendages were found on board or attached thereto; and that the same has not been altered or defaced, either in whole or in part, since the taking up, either by him or by any other person to his knowledge; and the said justice shall thereupon issue his warrant, directed to some constable of his township, commanding him to summon three respectable householders of the neighborhood, who shall proceed without delay to examine and appraise such property, including cargo, tackle, rigging and other appendages if any there be, and to make report thereof under their hands to the justice issuing such warrant, who shall enter the same, together with the affidavit of the taker-up, at large in his estray book, and within five days shall transmit a certified copy thereof to the county auditor of the proper county, to be by him recorded in his estray book and filed in his office. [C. 73, §§ 1509, 1512; R., § 1506.]

SEC. 2372. Advertisement—title vests—sale. In all cases where the appraisement of any such property shall not exceed the sum of twenty dollars, the taker-up shall advertise the same on the door of the court-house, and in three other of the most public places in the county, within five days after the appraisement, and if no person shall appear to claim and prove such property within six months of the time of taking up, it shall vest in the taker-up; but if the value thereof shall exceed the sum of twenty dollars, the county auditor, within five days from the time of the reception of the justice's certificate at his office, shall cause an advertisement to be posted on the door of the court-house, and at three other of the most public places of the county, and also a notice to be published for three weeks successively in some public newspaper printed in this state; and if such property be not claimed or proved within ninety days after the advertisement of the same, as aforesaid, the taker-up shall deliver the same to the sheriff of the county wherein it was taken up, who shall thereupon proceed to sell it at public auction to the highest bidder for ready money, having first given ten days' notice of the time and place of sale; and the proceeds of all such sales, after deducting the costs and other necessary expenses, shall be paid into the county treasury. [C. '73, § 1513; R., § 1507.]

SEC. 2373. Lost goods—money. If any person shall find any lost goods, money, bank notes or other things of any description whatever, of the value of five dollars and upwards, such person shall inform the owner thereof, if known, and make restitution thereof without compensation, except the same be voluntarily given; but if the owner be unknown, such person shall, within five days after such finding, take such goods, money, bank notes or other things before some justice of the peace of the county where the property was found, and make affidavit of the description thereof, the time and place when and where the same was found, and that no alteration has been made in the appearance thereof since the finding; whereupon the justice shall enter a description of the property and the value thereof, as nearly as he can determine it, in his estray book, together with the affidavit of the finder, and shall also within five days transmit to the county auditor a certified copy thereof, to be by him recorded in his estray book. [C. '73, § 1514; R., § 1508.]

A trespassing animal should not be treated as an estray, when the party distraining knows who has charge of the animal and where it is kept, although the owner is unknown: Lyons v. Van Gorder, 77–600.

SEC. 2374. Disposition of property unclaimed. In all cases where such lost goods, money, bank notes or other things shall not exceed the sum of ten dollars in value, the finder shall forthwith advertise the same on the door of the court-house and in three other of the most public places in the county where the same was found; and if no person shall appear to claim and prove such money, goods, bank notes or other things within twelve months from the time of such advertisement, the right to such property, when the same shall consist in goods, money or bank notes, shall be vested in the finder; but if the value thereof shall exceed the sum of ten dollars, the county auditor, within five days from the receipt of the justice's certificate, shall cause to be posted upon the court-house door, and in three of the most public places in the county, a notice thereof, which shall also be published for three weeks successively in some public newspaper printed at the county seat; and if the said goods, money, bank notes or other things be not reclaimed within six months after the finding, the finder, if the same shall consist in money or bank notes, shall deliver the same to the county treasurer, after deducting the necessary expenses hereinafter provided for; if in bills, notes of hand, patents, deeds, mortgages, or other instruments of value, the same shall be delivered to the county auditor to be preserved in his office for the benefit of the owner when an applicant shall prove his title thereto; if in goods or merchandise, the same shall be delivered to the sheriff of the county, who shall thereupon proceed to sell the same at public auction to the highest bidder for ready money, having first given ten days' notice of the time and place of such sale; and the proceeds of such sale, after deducting the costs and other expenses, shall be paid into the county treasury. [C.'73, §§ 1510, 1515; R., § 1509.]

SEC. 2375. Advertisement—title vests. In all cases where any vessel, water craft, logs or lumber shall be taken up, or any goods, money or bank notes shall be found as aforesaid, which shall be of a value less than five dollars, the finder shall advertise the same by posting a notice of such finding in three of the most public places in the neighborhood; but in such cases he shall keep and preserve the same in his possession, and shall make restitution thereof to the owner, without fee or reward, except the same be given voluntarily when the owner claims the same, provided it shall be done in three months from such taking up or finding; but, if no owner shall claim such property within the time aforesaid, the exclusive right to it shall be vested in the finder or taker-up. [C.'73, § 1516; R., § 1510.]

SEC. 2376. Ownership settled. In any case where a claim is made to property found or taken up, and the ownership of the property cannot be agreed upon by the finder and claimant, they may make a case before any justice of the peace in the county, who may hear and adjudicate it, and if either of them refuses to make such case the other may make an affidavit of the facts which have previously occurred, and the claimant shall also verify his claim by his affidavit, and the justice may take cognizance of and try the matter on the other party having one day's notice, but there shall be no appeal from the decision. This section does not bar any other remedy given by law. [C.'73, § 1517; R., § 1504.]

SEC. 2377. Compensation. As a reward for the taking up of boats and other vessels, and for finding lost goods, money, bank notes and other things, before restitution of the property or proceeds thereof shall be made, the finder shall be entitled to ten per cent. upon the value thereof, and for taking up any logs or lumber, as hereinbefore described, twenty-five cents for each log not exceeding ten, twenty cents for each exceeding ten and not exceeding fifty, fifteen cents for each exceeding fifty, and fifty cents per thousand feet for sawed lumber; in addition to which allowance the owner shall also be required to pay to the taker-up or finder all such costs and charges as may have been paid by him for services rendered as aforesaid, including the cost of publication, together with reasonable charges for keeping and taking care of such property, which last mentioned charge, in case the taker-up or finder and the owner cannot agree, shall be assessed by two disinterested householders of the neighborhood, to be appointed by some justice of the peace of the proper county, whose decision, when made, shall be binding and conclusive on all parties. [C.'73, §§ 1511, 1518; R., § 1514.]

SEC. 2378. Proceeds. The net proceeds of all sales made by the sheriff, and all money or bank notes paid over to the county treasurer, as directed in this chapter, shall remain in the hands of the county treasurer in trust for the owner, if any such shall apply within one year from the time the same shall have been paid over; but, if no owner shall appear within such time, the money shall be forfeited, and the claim of the owner thereto forever barred, in which event the money shall remain in the county treasury for the use of the common schools in said county. [C. '73, § 1519; R., § 1516.]

SEC. 2379. Taker-up not accountable. If the taker-up of any water craft, logs or lumber, or finder of lost goods, bank notes or other things, shall take reasonable care of the same, and any unavoidable accident happens thereto without the fault or neglect of the finder or taker-up before the owner shall have an opportunity of reclaiming the same, such taker-up or finder shall not be accountable therefor, if in cases of accident as aforesaid he within ten days thereafter shall certify the same to the county auditor, who shall make an entry thereof in his estray book. [C. '73, § 1520; R., § 1517.]

The sole object of this notice to the auditor is to advise the owner of the property, when examining the estray book, of the loss or accident, and when he has actual knowledge of the loss without such notice there is no necessity for it: Howes v. Carver, 3–257.

SEC. 2380. Penalty for selling. If any person shall trade, sell, loan or take out of the limits of this state any such property taken up or found as aforesaid, before he shall be vested with the right to the same according to the foregoing provisions, he shall forfeit and pay double the value thereof, to be recovered by any person in an action, one-half of which shall go to the plaintiff and the other half to the county. [C. '73, § 1521; R., § 1518.]

SEC. 2381. Penalty for failure to comply. If any person shall take up any boat or vessel, or any logs or lumber, or shall find any goods, money, bank notes or other things, and shall fail to comply with the requirements of this chapter, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered in an action by any person who will sue for the same, one-half for the use of the person suing and the other half to be deposited in the county treasury for the use of the common schools; but nothing herein contained shall prevent the owner from having and maintaining his action for the recovery of any damage he may sustain. [C. '73, § 1522; R., § 1519.]

A failure to take the steps here contemplated will not render the finder guilty of larceny under § 4839, where the owner was not known at the time of the taking: State v. Dean, 49–73.

CHAPTER 6.

OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

SECTION 2382. Manufacture, sale or keeping for sale prohibited. No one, by himself, clerk, servant, employe or agent, shall, for himself or any person else, directly or indirectly, or upon any pretense, or by any device, manufacture, sell, exchange, barter, dispense, give in consideration of the purchase of any property or of any services or in evasion of the statute, or keep for sale, any intoxicating liquor, which term shall be construed to mean alcohol, ale, wine, beer, spirituous, vinous and malt liquor, and all intoxicating liquor whatever, except as provided in this chapter, or own, keep, or be in any way concerned, engaged or employed in owning or keeping any intoxicating liquor with intent to violate any provision of this chapter, or authorize or permit the same to be done; and any clerk, servant, employe or agent engaged or aiding in any violation of this chapter shall be charged and convicted as principal. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 143, §§ 10, 11; 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 4; C.'73, §§ 1523, 1540–2, 1554–5; R., §§ 1559, 1562, 1581, 1587; C.'51, §§ 929–31.]

What liquors: The sale of cider when intoxicating is forbidden. These provisions include intoxicating liquors of every kind: State v. Hutchinson, 72-561.

The inference from these provisions is that there is but one kind of beer and that it is intoxicating, and a liquor denominated beer, without anything in its name tending to show it is not to be intoxicating, may be refused by the common carrier for tranportation: Milwaukee Malt Extract Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 73-98.

The statute classes beer as an intoxicating liquor; and if there are kinds of beer not in fact intoxicating, the burden is upon the person charged with the sale of such liquor to show that it is not in fact that kind, if he so claims: State v. Cloughly, 73-626.

The term intoxicating liquors includes beer without regard to the question whether or not beer is an intoxicating beverage: State v. Lindoen, 87-702.

Alcohol is an intoxicating liquor, and however it may be diluted it is within the terms of the statute, when used as a beverage. Proof that liquor in question contains alcohol is sufficient to show that it is an intoxicating liquor: State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 76-243.

So long as liquors retain their character of intoxicating liquors capable of use as a beverage, notwithstanding other ingredients may have been mixed therewith, they fall within the provisions of the statute prohibiting the sale of such liquors. But when they are so compounded with other substances as to lose the character of intoxicating liquors and are no longer desirable for use as a stimulating beverage, and are, in fact, medicine, then their sale is not prohibited: State v. Laffer, 38-422.

Under former provisions by which the manufacture and sale of beer, cider from apples, or wine from grapes, currants or other fruits grown in this state, was not prohibited, held, that wine was presumed to be an intoxicating liquor, unless it was shown that it was manufactured from grapes or fruit grown in this state: Worley v. Spurgeon, 38-465.

Held, also, that, in an indictment for the sale of wine made from fruit grown out of the state, an allegation that it was intoxicating was mere surplusage: State v. Curley, 33-359.

The distinction formerly made between wine made from native and that from foreign grapes, did not render the regulations as to sale of the latter void, as an improper regulation of interstate commerce in violation of the federal constitution: State v. Stucker, 58-496.

The meaning put by former provisions upon the term intoxicating liquors, so as to include those that were spirituous and vinous, excluding malt liquors, held to be purely arbitrary, as the latter are known to be in fact intoxicating: Jewett v. Wanshura, 43-574.

Also held, that the limitation in regard to the place where the materials were grown did not apply to beer: State v. Brindle, 28-512.

A defendant relying upon such proviso as to beer and native wine must allege and prove the facts bringing him within its provisions, and it was not necessary that the prosecution charge and prove, in the first instance, that the case did not fall within the proviso: State v. Stupp, 29-551; State v. Curley, 33-359; State v. Miller, 53-84. See § 2424.

The statute does not make knowledge on the part of the seller of the character of the liquor an element of the offense. If liquor which is in fact intoxicating is sold intentionally by one having no authority to sell the offense provided for by the statute is committed: State v. Valure, 64 N. W., 280; State v. Lindoen, 87-702.

Statutes constitutional: The provisions of the Code of '51 prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors by the glass, held constitutional: Zumhoff v. State, 4 G. Gr., 526.

The provisions of the prohibitory liquor law are not in conflict with the constitution nor laws of the state nor the United States: Santo v. State, 2-165; State v. Carney, 20-82; State v. Baughman, 20-497; State v. Jordan, 72-377.

As to the effect of United States internal revenue license, see notes to § 2427.

The statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors cannot be said to deprive the owner of his property therein without compensation in violation of constitutional guaranties, unless such property was owned by him prior to the prohibitory act of 1855: McLane v. Leicht, 69-401.

The power of the legislature to enact laws for the suppression of the general traffic in intoxicating liquors within the state has been recognized and affirmed by this court for more than twenty-five years. It has uniformly been held that the state, in the exercise of its police power, might regulate the traffic, or prohibit it entirely; and when the power to prohibit the traffic is recognized, the power to enact whatever laws may be necessary to make the prohibition effectual follows necessarily: McLane v. Bonn, 70-752.

The effect of the statute is to prohibit manufacture of intoxicating liquors for sale outside the state. And in this respect it is not unconstitutional as a regulation of interstate commerce: Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S., 1.

The state may prohibit or restrict the manufacture of intoxicating liquors within her limits and prohibit all sale and traffic in them within the state, without abridging the liberties or immunities of citizens of the United States or depriving any person of property without due process of law: Ibid.

Laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors are regarded as police regulations, and the state may in its discretion prohibit the sale of one kind of liquor and allow the sale of another kind, and the fact that it prohibits the sale of wine from foreign grapes, while permitting the sale of native wine, will not render the legislation unconstitutional as an improper regulation of interstate commerce: State v. Stucker, 58-496.

The restrictions as to the sale of intoxicating liquors were adopted not for the purpose of securing an undue advantage to the citizens of the state, but for the purpose of preventing violations of the prohibitory laws of the state, and although, in effect, the citizens of other states are debarred from selling in Iowa liquors to be resold for legal purposes, this is but an incidental result of a valid exercise of police power by the state, and no provision of the federal constitution is thereby violated: Kohn v. Melcher, 29 Fed., 433.

The prohibitory law as amended so as to cover manufacture and sale of beer which was previously legal is constitutional. (Following Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S., 623): Kaufman v. Dostal, 73–691.

Prior provisions prohibiting sales within two miles of city limits, held constitutional: State v. Shroeder, 51–197; Centerville v. Miller, 51–712; Toledo v. Edens, 59–352. And as to such statutory provisions see, also, Albia v. O'Harra, 64–297.

What selling or keeping prohibited: A sale of liquor to be used as a beverage is a violation of law, regardless of the quantity to be used and the extent to which it is to be diluted. Therefore, held, that the sale of beer by one having a permit for use in manufacturing a beverage not intoxicating was illegal: State v. Yager, 72-421.

One having no authority to sell to any person for any purpose cannot show by way of justification that the liquors were sold for an innocent purpose. The allegation in an indictment of sales "as a beverage" held to be surplusage so far as the purpose was stated: Craig v. Plunket, 82–474.

When liquors are so compounded with other substances as to lose their characteristics as intoxicating liquors, and are no longer desirable for use as a stimulating beverage, their sale is not prohibited; but if, notwithstanding other ingredients have been mixed therewith, they retain their character and are capable of use as a beverage, they fall under the ban of the law. The question is one for the jury: State v. Leffer, 38–422.

Even when manufacturing was lawful, the manufacturer was not authorized to sell at retail without a permit: Becker v. Betten, 39–668.

No one holding a permit has any right to sell or dispense intoxicating liquors for any purpose, and physicians are not excepted, though selling as a medicine in good faith and according to the needs of their patients: State v. Benadom, 79–90. [But now see § 2401.]

Any person has the right to own and keep liquors unless he owns and keeps them with intent to sell without lawful authority: Wakeman v. Chambers, 69–169.

The offense under this section and that under § 2384 are not the same, and a conviction for one will not bar a prosecution for the other: State v. Graham, 73–553.

As the keeping of intoxicating liquors for sale within the state is unlawful in itself, unless the party thus keeping and offering for sale is authorized to sell, an indictment charging the keeping of intoxicating liquors in the state with intent to sell the same will be sufficient, and the indictment need not negative the authority to sell: State v. Collins, 11–141.

Held, that the expression in an indictment, "kept intoxicating liquors to sell," was sufficient to charge the offense: Vaughan v. State, 5–369.

An indictment charging that "defendant did keep and was concerned, etc., in owning and keeping intoxicating liquors to sell," held, to charge but one offense: Ibid.

An information charging defendant with keeping intoxicating liquors "for the purpose of sale," instead of "with intent to sell the same," as provided in the statute, held sufficient to support a conviction: State v. Mohr, 53–261.

One who acts as agent or clerk of a social club, to keep and deal out its liquors to members purchasing and presenting tickets, may be indicted and punished under this section: State v. Mercer, 32–405.

Where a druggist has a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, but makes unlawful sales, the fact that the owning and keeping is with intent to make unlawful sales, and therefore unlawful in itself, may be presumed: State v. Sartori, 55–340.

To authorize the forfeiture of liquors it must be shown that they are kept with intent to sell in violation of law: State v. Harris, 36–136.

The keeping of intoxicating liquors with no intent to sell within the state in violation of law is not forbidden. In the absence of such intention the possession is lawful and will be protected: Niles v. Fries, 35–41.

This section prohibits the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors except as permitted or authorized by statute, and manufacture for exportation from the state not being permitted or authorized, such manufacturing is illegal even though the manufacturer holds a permit to manufacture for lawful purposes: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72–348. And see Craig v. Werthmueller, 78–598.

Since the passage of the prohibitory liquor law cities have no power to pass laws regulating the business of keeping saloons for the sale of intoxicating liquors, but they may regulate saloons kept for other purposes: Clinton v. Grusendorf, 80–117.

Original packages: Prior to the passage of the act of congress known as the Wilson bill subjecting liquor imported into a state to state regulations, a state had no power to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors, sold by the importer in the original packages in which they were brought into the state (overruling Collins v. Hills, 77–181; Grousendorf v. Howot, 77–187; Leisey v. Hardin, 78–286; State v. Zimmerman, 78–614; State v. Bowman, 79–556): State v. Caldwell, 81–759; Leisey v. Hardin, 135 U. S., 100.

Under the facts in a particular case, held, that bottles of liquor constituted original packages; State v. Coonan, 82–400.

In a particular case, held, that a barrel of liquor addressed to defendant, being transported for delivery by a carrier, was an original package: State v. Corrick, 82–451.

A sale of beer in bottles which are imported into the state in cases is a sale in the original package: State v. Miller, 86–638.

Where liquors were sold in bottles, which were opened by the purchasers, the contents being drunk on the premises, held, that this was not a sale in original packages: Stommel v. Timbrel, 84-336.

Where it appeared that defendant had liquor brought into the state in bottles, and sold it by the bottle to customers, who opened and drank it on the premises, held, that the case was not one of selling in original packages, but of keeping a saloon, and defendant was properly convicted: Hopkins v. Lewis, 84-690.

The decision in Leisey v. Hardin, 135 U. S., 100, did not declare the state prohibitory law invalid in toto, and upon the passage of the the Wilson bill it became effectual, without re-enactment, as applied to liquors sold in original packages: In re Spickler, 43 Fed., 653; In re Jordan, 49 Fed., 238. And see In re Rahrer, 140 U. S., 545.

The act of congress so far changes the law under which Leisey v Hardin supra was decided as to make liquors brought into the state a part of the general property of the state and subject to the state law: Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Stevens, 71 N. W., 186.

Buyer not punished: The statutes punishing the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor are applicable to the seller and not to the buyer of such liquors, and the buyer is not guilty of a crime as accessory to the sale in such sense that he may be excused from testifying as to his purchase of such liquor on the ground that such testimony would tend to criminate him: Wakeman v. Chambers, 69-169. And see § 2424.

One who buys intoxicating liquor from a person illegally selling the same does not become an accomplice in the crime of the illegal sale, and therefore the speaking of words charging a person with such purchase does not constitute slander actionable per se: Sterling v. Jugenheimer, 69-210.

Property in intoxicating liquors: While the commerce in intoxicating liquor as an article of beverage is unlawful, its character as property is not thereby destroyed; and where such liquor was seized on execution for the debt of one not its owner, held, that the owner might recover it by replevin, although it was kept for sale in violation of the statute: Monty v. Arneson, 25-383.

That intoxicating liquors are held for an unlawful purpose is no answer to an indictment for stealing the same: State v. May, 20-305.

That liquors are unlawfully kept is not a defense to an action of trespass for destroying them: Turner v. Hitchcock, 20-310.

Where liquor had been seized by an officer under an information which had subsequently been held defective and a return of the liquor ordered, held, that in an action by the owner against such officer to recover damages for a failure to return the property as so ordered, the plaintiff could not recover without proving that he owned and kept the liquor with a lawful intent: Walker v. Shook, 49-264.

In an action against a common carrier to recover the value of intoxicating liquors lost or destroyed by it, it is necessary for plaintiff to prove that he owned or possessed such liquors with lawful intent: (Overruling Bowen v. Hale, 4-430): Sommer v. Cate, 22-585.

Intoxicating liquors cannot be recovered by the owner unless he shows that they were in his possession with lawful intent, and that he was illegally deprived of them: Funk v. Israel, 5-438, 452.

The keeping of intoxicating liquors with no intent to sell within the state in violation of law is not forbidden. In the absence of such intention the possession is lawful, and will be protected. And it is immaterial that they were bought of one not authorized to sell: Niles v. Fries, 35-41.

Any person has the right to own and keep liquors unless he owns and keeps them with intent to sell them without lawful authority: Wakeman v. Chambers, 69-169.

As to contracts and payments for intoxicating liquors, see § 2423.

Venue: The jury may find from facts and circumstances testified to by the witnesses that the illegal sale of liquor was in the county of the prosecution although the evidence as to that fact is not explicit: State v. Hopkins, 62 N. W., 656.

Where orders for intoxicating liquors are taken by an agent in one county, subject to approval by the principal in another county, the sale in either county being illegal, the offense is partly committed in each county (under § 5157), and the courts of either have jurisdiction of the offense: State v. Kriechbaum, 81-633.

Without permit: This section contains the only provision under which a party can be punished criminally for an act of sale of intoxicating liquors, and by its express language it is applicable only to persons not holding permits. Persons holding permits are subject to the penalties prescribed for owning or keeping liquors with unlawful intent, or for keeping or maintaining a place in which such liquors are sold or kept for sale unlawfully: State v. Douglass, 73-279. [See § 2399.]

Sales by clerks: Under provisions for the punishment of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, held, that the fact that defendant acted as the clerk of another or as volunteer and without pecuniary reward would be no defense, clerks being liable equally with their principals. Nor would it be any defense that the principal has been convicted for the same act: State v. Finan, 10-19.

One who acts as agent or clerk of a social club, to keep and deal out its liquors to members purchasing and presenting tickets, may be indicted and punished under this section: State v. Mercer, 32-405; Cantril v. Sainer, 59-26.

The holder of a permit is liable for illegal sales made by his clerk: State v. McConnel, 90-197.

Where the only evidence of illegal sale was the testimony of a clerk in defendant's drug store that he sold at that store a half-pint of liquor to a certain person, it not appearing that defendant knew of such sale or kept intoxicating liquors for sale, or that there were any such in his possession or kept by him for any purpose, held, that the conviction could not be sustained: State v. Findley, 45-435.

The provision of this section does not make an agent liable under § 2423 for money paid for intoxicating liquors, sold in violation of law, where the agent does not actually receive such money or purchase price: Schober v. Rosenfield, 75–455.

An agent who solicits orders for intoxicating liquors in one county, subject to the approval of his principal in another county, is subject to prosecution for illegal sales, although such sales are not complete, and regardless of whether or not the principal holds a permit: State v. Kriechbaum, 81–633.

Where orders for liquor were taken in this state for a firm doing business in another state who reserved the right to accept or refuse such orders, held, that the sales were not made in Iowa, and that the person taking such order was not punishable for illegal sales: State v. Colby, 92–463.

Giving: Under a similar statutory provision, held, that the giving of intoxicating liquor to another was not an offense unless it was "in consideration of the purchase" of other property as specified in the statute, and that the fact that the liquors were so given, if such was the case, should be averred: State v. Finan, 10–19.

There is no provision making a gift of intoxicating liquors not in consideration of the purchase of any other property illegal, except the provisions of the section with reference to minors: State v. Hutchins, 74–20. [See § 2403.]

SEC. 2383. Penalty—second offense. Whoever is found guilty of violating any of the provisions of the preceding section, for the first offense shall pay a fine of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars, and costs of prosecution, and stand committed to the county jail until such fine and costs are paid; for the second and each subsequent offense he shall pay upon conviction thereof a fine of not less than three hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and costs of prosecution, or be imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed six months. [20 G. A., ch. 143, §§ 1, 10, 11; C. '73, §§ 1525, 1540, 1542; R., §§ 1561–2.]

Under a previous act, held, that while a person holding a permit was liable on his bond for selling for improper purposes, he was also liable to a criminal prosecution: State v. Adams, 20–486.

A person selling without a license may also be punished for the crime of keeping a nuisance under § 2384, either independently of or in addition to the punishment for the illegal sale: State v. Waynick, 45–516.

Where a previous conviction was not shown, held, that it was erroneous to impose a greater fine than authorized for the first offense: Walters v. State, 5–507.

But where, on appeal, the prosecution offered to remit the excess, the supreme court modified the judgment in accordance with such offer and affirmed it: State v. Shaw, 23–316.

Under the section as it now stands the length of imprisonment for non-payment of a fine is as provided generally in § 5440: Ex parte Tuicher, 69–393.

The provision that defendant shall stand committed until the fine and costs are paid does not take the offense out of the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace. Although such imprisonment may extend beyond thirty days, it is not as a punishment for the offense but only as a method of enforcing the payment of the fine: Albertson v. Kriechbaum, 65–11.

This section so far as it provides for imprisonment for failure to pay the costs of a prosecution is not unconstitutional as authorizing imprisonment for debt in a civil action: Boyer v. Kinnick, 90–74.

SEC. 2384. Nuisance—penalty—abatement—attorney's fee. Whoever shall erect, establish, continue or use any building, erection or place for any of the purposes herein prohibited, is guilty of a nuisance, and upon conviction shall pay a fine of not less than three hundred nor more than one thousand dollars and costs of prosecution, which shall include a reasonable attorney's fee to be taxed by the court, and stand committed to the county jail until such fine and costs are paid, and the building, erection or place, or the ground itself, in or upon which such unlawful manufacture or sale or keeping with intent to sell, use or give away said liquors is carried on or continued or exists, and the furniture, fixtures, vessels and contents, are also declared a nuisance, and in addition to the penalties hereinbefore affixed, shall be abated as hereinafter provided. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 4; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 12; C. '73, § 1543.]

What constitutes nuisance: The act of selling, or keeping with intent to sell, in a building or place, as here defined, is a nuisance, while the keeping with intent to sell and selling, as defined by § 2382 is not a nuisance: State v. Harris, 64–287.

In order to convict for a nuisance it must be shown that the liquors were sold or kept with intent to sell in a building or place frequented by persons desiring to procure intoxicating liquors: Ibid.

This section provides a punishment for keeping nuisances for the sale of intoxicating liquors, which is a different crime from that of the unlawful sale, and the first as well as subsequent offenses are punishable by indictment: State v. Howarth,70-151; State v. Adams, 81-595.

It is illegal for any person to sell for any purpose intoxicating liquors without a permit from the board of supervisors, and the use of a building for such illegal sales is a nuisance. So held as to a druggist selling intoxicating liquors for medicinal purposes: State v. Waynick, 45-516.

To constitute the offense of nuisance it is not sufficient that defendant used and kept a place with the intent and for the purpose of selling intoxicating liquors therein contrary to law. It must be charged and shown that he manufactured, or sold, or owned and kept with intent to sell, contrary to law. The presence of the liquor in the building is essential: State v. Hass, 22-193; State v. Harris, 27-429; State v. Tierney, 74-237.

A previous conviction or acquittal of the crime of owning or keeping with intent to sell will not bar a prosecution for a nuisance: State v. Harris, 64-287.

An instruction that any building where any kind of intoxicating liquors is kept for the purpose of sale or is sold is a nuisance is erroneous as not referring to lawful sales under permit. But such error will be without prejudice where it does not appear that defendant had any permit to sell: State v. Wambold, 74-605.

To constitute the crime of nuisance in unlawfully keeping for sale and selling intoxicating liquors, the existence of intoxicating liquors in the place described is essential; but where there was no question on the trial that liquors were thus kept, held, that an instruction was not erroneous which did not call the attention of the jury to the necessity of proving that fact: State v. Shank, 79-47.

To constitute an offense under this section, it is not necessary that the intent be to sell in and from the building where kept. But a keeping for illegal sale elsewhere within the state will be sufficient. If one house is used for the sale of liquors which are kept in another, both are nuisances: State v. Viers, 82-397.

This section is designed to prevent and punish the erection, maintenance and use of buildings or other places for the purpose of doing therein those things which are prohibited by the preceding section. It does not require that such places be resorted to by persons desiring to buy intoxicating liquors in order to constitute the crime of a nuisance, and the offense may therefore be committed in a place kept and resorted to for other purposes: State v. McEnturff, 87-691.

Proof of a single unlawful sale within the building is sufficient to make out a place kept for that purpose and therefore a nuisance: State v. Russell, 64 N. W., 281.

An instruction which stated to the jury that "under the law of this state, any person who, without a permit, sells intoxicating liquors in a building or place, or keeps intoxicating liquors in such place with intent to sell the same, is guilty of a nuisance," held not to state the law accurately, as it is the keeping of the place, rather than the doing of the acts, which constitutes the offense; but in view of the evidence and other instructions, the jury could not have been misled, and defendant was in no manner prejudiced by the instruction: State v. Price, 75-243.

The giving away may constitute a nuisance if an invasion of the law :State v. Fleming, 86-294.

Pharmacists: In an action to enjoin a liquor nuisance, where it was shown that defendant, a registered pharmacist, had made illegal sales himself, and that as a man possessed of ordinary intelligence and business tact he must have known that his clerk had made illegal sales, held, that the fact that the clerk who had made the sales was discharged a few weeks before the commencement of the suit to enjoin the nuisance, when no other change in the business was shown, would not defeat the action on the ground that no nuisance existed when it was commenced: Elwood v. Price, 75-228.

Where a witness testifies that he purchased liquor of a registered pharmacist, the state should be allowed to interrogate him further as to the object for which the purchase was made, and inquire into the facts for the purpose of showing that the alleged object was a mere pretense, and that the seller knew or had grounds for knowing that fact: State v. Cummins, 76-133.

It is for the jury to determine, in a prosecution against a pharmacist for illegal sales, whether from the frequency of sales to the same persons, and from the appearance of the persons to whom the sales were made, and from the fact as to whether the sales were with or without a prescription of a physician, it appears the sales were or were not for the actual necessities of medicine: State v. Huff, 76-200.

Where defendant was indicted and convicted for keeping a nuisance, and it appeared that he held a certificate as pharmacist and a valid permit to sell intoxicating liquors for lawful purposes, and where there was no evidence tending to establish unlawful sales, held, that the verdict should have been set aside upon defendant's motion: State v. Flusche, 79-765.

Where a registered pharmacist was convicted of keeping a nuisance, and it appeared that he held a permit under a statute authorizing registered pharmacists to sell intoxicating liquors for medicines only, without having obtained a permit from the board of supervisors, held, that sales for any other purpose were forbidden and punishable under this section: State v. Salts, 77-193.

Under the evidence, held, that it sufficiently appeared that the place of business of defendant as a registered pharmacist was commonly resorted to for the purpose of procuring intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and that it was properly suppressed as a nuisance: State v. Oder, 92-767.

One holding a permit, but selling for unlawful purposes, is subject to punishment under this section: State v. Webber, 76-686. And see § 2399.

Sales by clerk: A barkeeper or clerk, having no interest in the business, may be convicted of the crime of nuisance for the mere sale by him of intoxicating liquors in a building used for that purpose: State v. Stucker, 33–395.

Where liquors are lawfully kept for sale and with intent to sell them for lawful purposes, an illegal sale by an agent without the knowledge or consent of the principal will not render such principal criminally liable for keeping a nuisance: State v. Hayes, 67–27.

Under particular facts, held, that the defendant was not interested as principal in the business of which complaint was made, but that his only connection therewith was that of a wholesale seller to the person who kept the place where the liquors were sold, and that a decree against defendant was improper: State v. Hart, 84–215.

One who voluntarily and as an accommodation makes illegal sales of liquor for another is guilty of nuisance under this section: State v. Herselus, 86–214.

Owner of premises: The allegation of knowledge of the purpose for which the premises were being used not being denied by the owner of the premises, no evidence of that fact is necessary in order to sustain the decree against him: Overton v. Schindele, 85–715.

Where it appeared that the owner of premises had knowledge of and permitted the violation of an injunction by an occupant of a building, held, that he was properly punishable for contempt: DeFrance v. Traverse, 85–422.

In a particular case, held, that there was nothing to require the court to assume the existence of a homestead right in the premises, and they were properly subjected to a lien for the fine: Ibid.

Where it appeared that the owner knew of the unlawful use to which his premises were being put, or was wilfully ignorant thereof, held, that an injunction might properly be granted against him: State v. Grim, 85–415.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence showed that the building complained of as a nuisance was built upon the defendant's lot, without his knowledge or consent, and had not been occupied under a lease, and that defendant had no knowledge that it was being used for illegal sales of liquors: State v. Lawler, 85–564.

In a particular case, held, that there had not been such knowledge and consent on the part of the owner of the premises as to render him liable: Morgan v. Koestner, 83–134.

In such case the premises where the liquors are kept and sold should be declared a nuisance, and the nuisance abated regardless of the liability of the owner: Ibid.

Where it appeared that defendant and his family occupied parts of the premises as a residence and the evidence left no doubt but that defendant was conducting the illegal business that was there carried on, held, that the court did not err in refusing to receive in evidence a deed for the premises from defendant to his wife, as such deed would not raise the presumption that the wife and not the defendant was the proprietor of the business illegally conducted: State v. Neeson, 64 N. W., 409.

Indictment: The offense of nuisance may be committed by the manufacture, or the sale, or the keeping with intent to sell, contrary to law. While an indictment charging the offense as committed in any of these three ways would be sufficient, yet one charging its commission by any two, or all three, of the specified unlawful acts, charges but one offense, and is not bad for duplicity: State v. Becker, 20–438; State v. Baughman, 20–497.

The indictment may charge selling and keeping for sale where both charges have reference to the same building: State v. Niers, 87–723.

An indictment charging the establishing, continuing and using "a building, erection, place and railroad car with intent," etc., charges the keeping in a building also in a railroad car and is therefore objectionable on the ground of duplicity as charging distinct offenses: State v. Chapman, 62 N. W., 659.

Two indictments charging the offense as committed in two different ways charge the same and not two separate offenses; and the fact that the acts set out in the indictments are charged as committed at different times is not conclusive that the offenses are separate and not the same, since the time need not be proved as alleged: State v. Layton, 25–193.

An allegation that a certain building was used by defendants as a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors, and that they did then and there keep said intoxicating liquors for sale in said building with intent to sell, held sufficient without further averment that said building was under their control: State v. Schilling, 14–455.

An indictment charging the offense as committed by using and keeping a room and place for the purpose of selling and by selling therein intoxicating liquors in violation of § 2382, held sufficient: State v. Freeman, 27-333.

And so held, also, where the indictment, similar to the foregoing, charged the acts as "contrary to law," without specifying the section: State v. Allen, 32–248.

It is not necessary that the nuisance should continue up to and exist at the time of the indictment to make it punishable: State v. Schilling, 14–455.

An indictment charging the keeping and using of a "certain building or place," or "a certain frame building," for the purposes prohibited, is sufficiently definite: Ibid.; State v. Kreig, 13–462.

A matter of local description, though it need not have been stated, must be proved as laid: State v. Crogan, 8–523.

But on the trial of an indictment under this section, which charged the use of a building, etc., "next door west of Chamber's store," etc., while the proof was that the building was next door west from "Chamberlain's store," the court was equally divided as to whether the variance was fatal: State v. Verden, 24–126.

In an indictment for the crime of nuisance under this section it is not necessary that the premises be particularly described, although such description may be necessary where an order of abatement is desired: State v. Waltz, 74-610; State v. Arnold, 67 N. W., 252.

Where the indictment charged that the nuisance consisted in keeping a place for the illegal sale of liquors consisting of a three-story brick building, and the proof showed that the three-story part on the first floor was used as a cigar stand and restaurant, while the one-story addition used in connection with the three-story part as a kitchen was the place where the liquors were kept, held, that there was not a fatal variance between the allegations and the evidence: State v. Gurlagh, 76-141.

The indictment need not state the names of the persons to whom liquor was sold: State v. Becker, 20-438; State v. Jordan, 39-387.

The statute which prohibits the sale of beer and the keeping of that liquor for sale did not take effect until July 4, 1884, and where an instruction stated that defendant might be convicted if the evidence showed that he maintained a nuisance within three years before the finding of the indictment, March 24, 1887, held, that it was erroneous as permitting a conviction of defendant on proof that he did an act which was not prohibited by law when done: State v. Jacobs, 75-247.

An indictment for maintaining a nuisance which charged that defendant did unlawfully establish, keep, use and maintain a certain building and place in which he owned and kept intoxicating liquor with intent to sell and give the same away in violation of law, and did at the aforesaid times and place so unlawfully sell and give away such intoxicating liquor, held, to sufficiently charge the keeping of the place in which the forbidden acts were done: State v Price, 75-243.

Where two indictments were returned for the crime of nuisance as here described, one for maintaining such nuisance prior to the date of the taking effect of the act of the Twenty-first General Assembly amending this section, and the other for a time subsequent to such amendment, held, that an acquittal under an indictment for the time subsequent to the taking effect of the statute would not bar a prosecution under the other indictment: State v. Webber, 76-686.

The allegation in the indictment of a certain time within which the nuisance was maintained will not limit the prosecution to proof of maintenance of the nuisance during the time specified, but evidence is admissible as to the nuisance prior to the time specified but within the statutory limitation: State v. Arnold, 67 N. W., 252.

Venue: Where an indictment charged the keeping of a certain building as a nuisance on a certain date and on divers other days and times between that date and the finding of the indictment, and then stated that "the building is situated in Franklin county, Iowa," held, that the indictment alleged with sufficient certainty that the offense was committed in Franklin county: State v. Jacobs, 75-247.

The provisions of § 5157 as to public offenses committed within five hundred yards of the boundary line of adjoining counties are applicable to this offense: State v. Rockwell, 82-429.

Evidence: Proof of the manufacture, sale, or keeping with intent to sell, in violation of law, is presumptive proof of the offense of nuisance: State v. Guisenhause, 20-227; State v. Baughman, 20-497.

And this is true even though the sale be secret and by clerk: State v. Freeman, 27-333. Proof of actual sale is presumptive evidence of illegal sale, and the burden of proving that the sales made were legal is upon defendant: Shear v. Green, 73-688.

The proof of a single sale will warrant a conviction for nuisance. Such sale will show unlawful intent as well as keeping: State v. Reyelts, 74-499, Evidence as to the control of the place in question by defendant, and that bottles, glasses, etc., were there found, held sufficient to warrant conviction of defendant for the crime of keeping a nuisance: State v. Wambold, 74-605.

Unlawful intent may be presumed from unlawful sales, and it is not sufficient for a registered pharmacist to show that sales were made on written applications stating that the purchaser was not a minor or in the habit of becoming intoxicated and that the liquor was desired for use as a medicine: State v. Thompson, 74-119.

The fact that defendant believed in good faith that he had the right to sell for the purposes for which sales were made will not constitute a defense in a prosecution for keeping a place where illegal sales were made: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271.

As proof of the finding of liquor in the possession of accused, in any place except the private dwelling, is by § 2427 presumptive evidence that such liquor is illegally held for sale, the proof of such finding will be sufficient evidence of a nuisance committed by "keeping with intent to sell:" State v. Norton, 41-430.

The state is not bound to show affirmatively that the liquors were not kept in the original vessels or packages, or that they were not sold for proper purposes, these being proper matters of defense: State v. Becker, 20-438.

Certificates on which sales of liquors by a pharmacist have been made are admissible in evidence, even though they are not shown to be public records, when they are identified by the witnesses as certificates on which they purchased liquors from defendant. They constitute evidence in the nature of admissions by defendant that he made the sales of which they purport to be certificates: State v. Huff, 76-200; State v. Cummins, 76-133.

In such case the burden is on defendant to show that such sales are legal: State v. Cummins, 76-133.

In an action to enjoin a nuisance where the testimony showed that defendant kept a public eating-house and restaurant, that he paid an internal revenue tax as a retail liquor dealer, and that the reputation of his place was that of a place where intoxicants were kept and sold, held, that the evidence as to actual sales, added to the presumptions which arise under the statute from these facts, fully established the allegations of the petition, and an injunction should issue and judgment for costs and an attorney's fee: State v. Matheison, 77–485.

For the purpose of showing whether sales under a permit have been illegal, the extent of the business done cannot be taken into account: Craig v. Werthmueller, 78–598.

In a prosecution for maintaining a nuisance by selling and keeping with intent to sell intoxicating liquors in a blacksmith shop, held, that the fact that defendant was there receiving money and giving orders for liquors to be delivered elsewhere would show that he was selling intoxicating liquors and using the shop for that purpose, that being the place where the business was transacted, and an instruction directing the jury that they might consider such facts as evidence tending to show the offense as charged was not erroneous: State v. Briggs, 81–585.

An instruction that in such case it was unlawful to give away any intoxicating liquor to be used as a beverage, held erroneous: Ibid.

Evidence that liquors seized at a time prior to the finding of the indictment were restored by the officer, held not admissible, it not appearing that the violation of the law charged in connection with the prior seizure was the same as that charged in the indictment: State v. Zimmerman, 78–614.

The right to transport liquor into the state under the constitutional provisions as to interstate commerce does not extend to the sale in the state for illegal purposes: Ibid.

The mere fact that the only evidence showing the illegal keeping for sale and selling of intoxicating liquors is the uncorroborated testimony of a witness employed and paid for procuring evidence, and who is by reason of a stipulation of the parties not put on the stand and subjected to cross-examination, will not justify the court in refusing to grant an injunction, the evidence of such witness not being contradicted nor impeached: Dickinson v. Bentley, 80–482.

The fact that a witness in a prosecution for illegal keeping and selling of intoxicating liquors testifies to having bought liquor of defendant does not necessarily prevent an injunction being granted on his evidence alone. If the witness had induced the defendant to do the acts which rendered his place a nuisance, with a view to prosecution, the case might be different; but where the evidence as to the purchase was simply for the purpose of disclosing the character of the place, it will not render it improper to act thereon: Ibid.

Evidence of sales in appurtenant buildings is admissible: State v. Arnold, 67 N. W., 252.

Evidence in a particular case, held sufficient to show that defendant was employed or engaged in unlawfully selling or keeping for sale intoxicating liquors on the premises in question: State v. Wright, 68 N. W., 440.

Evidence in a particular case including proof of conversations and declarations of defendant as to the business he was carrying on, held sufficient to show that he was keeping a liquor nuisance: State v. Cleary, 66 N. W., 724.

In a prosecution for maintaining a saloon nuisance, it appearing that defendant illegally kept for sale and sold intoxicating liquors at his place of business, held, that evidence of finding intoxicating liquors on other premises where defendant resided with his father was admissible: State v. Illsley, 81–49.

Evidence of the reputation of the place is not admissible in a prosecution under this section: State v. Fleming, 86–294. [But such evidence is admissible in an action to enjoin the keeping of the place as a nuisance. See § 2406.]

Further as to evidence in liquor prosecutions see § 2427 and notes.

Punishment: The punishment for the crime of nuisance, as defined in this connection, is that provided in § 5081 for the crime of nuisance generally: State v. McGrew, 11-112; State v. Collins, 11–141; State v. Schilling, 14-155; State v. Little, 42–51, 54; State v. Dean, 44–648.

A party may be punished for the offense of keeping a nuisance either independently of or in addition to the punishment for illegal selling: State v. Waynick, 45–561.

A pharmacist may be indicted and punished for illegal sales as constituting a nuisance: State v. Mullenhoff, 74–271.

This section authorizes commitment until both fine and costs are paid in case of a conviction for nuisance, but not in case of punishment for contempt: Goetz v. Stutsman, 73–693.

Under an indictment not specifying whether the offense was committed before or after the date of the change of this section, held, that evidence was admissible to prove the commission of the offense prior to such change, and that defendant was properly sentenced under the law as then in force; State v. Reyelts, 74–499.

Attorney's fee: In the absence of some showing that an attorney fee as taxed by the court is excessive, the court's action will not be interfered with; therefore held, that an allowance of sixty dollars to the attorney for the prosecution would not be set aside on appeal: State v. Arnold, 67 N. W., 252.

The fee is to be taxed by the court and the amount assessed is to be reasonable, depending upon the skill, time and labor the attorney has properly devoted to the case. Where there is a controversy in regard to the value of the services, it should be determined upon the record of the case and the evidence which may be submitted. In a particular case, held, that an allowance of twenty-five dollars was too small: State v. McEnturff, 87–691.

SEC. 2385. Permits. Persons holding permits may sell and dispense intoxicating liquors, not including malt liquors for pharmaceutical and medical purposes, and to permit holders for use and resale by them, only for the purposes authorized in this chapter; they may also sell and dispense alcohol for specified chemical and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental uses. Registered pharmacists, physicians holding certificates from the state board of medical examiners and manufacturers of proprietary medicines may buy from permit holders intoxicating liquors (not including malt) for the purpose of compounding medicines, tinctures and extracts that cannot be used as a beverage, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the manufacture or sale of any preparation or compound, under any name, form or device, which may be used as a beverage, and which is intoxicating in its character. [26 G. A., ch. 60; 25 G. A., ch. 63; 23 G. A., ch. 35, §§ 2, 13; 22 G. A., ch. 71, §§ 1, 15.]

SEC. 2386. Pharmacists—manufacturers of proprietary medicines. If any such registered pharmacist or manufacturer of proprietary medicines shall sell, barter, give, exchange, dispose of or use intoxicating liquors in any manner or for any purpose other than authorized in the preceding section, he shall be liable to all the penalties and proceedings provided for in this chapter, and, upon proof of such violation by a registered pharmacist, the clerk of the district or superior court shall transmit to the commissioners of pharmacy a certified copy of the record thereof within ten days after its entry, and upon receipt of such certified copy said commissioners shall strike his name from the list of registered pharmacists and cancel his certificate. The commissioners of pharmacy are empowered to make such further rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, with respect to the purchase, keeping and use of intoxicating liquors by registered pharmacists and manufacturers of proprietary medicines, as they shall think proper to prevent abuses of the privilege, and shall revoke the certificate of registration of any pharmacist for repeated violations of this chapter. Said commissioners are authorized to draw from the state treasury an amount not exceeding fifty per cent. of the clear proceeds of all fees collected and paid into the treasury of any county on account of violations of the provisions of this chapter or the chapter regulating the practice of pharmacy, prosecuted by the commissioners, the amount so drawn to be used solely in prosecutions instituted by them for failure to comply with the provisions of such chapters. The court or clerk thereof, before whom any prosecution is instituted or prosecuted by the commissioners of pharmacy, shall certify to the auditor of state all such cases, and the amount of fees imposed and collected therein. The expenses thus incurred by the commission shall be audited by the executive council, and the amount thereof shall be drawn from time to time upon the warrants of the state auditor. [23 G. A., ch. 35, §§ 13, 17; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 18.]

SEC. 2387. Application for permit. All applications for a permit to sell intoxicating liquors for the purposes allowed in this chapter shall be by petition, signed and sworn to by the applicant, and filed in the office of the clerk of the district or superior court of the county or city in which the buying and selling is to be carried on, at least ten days before the term at which the matter is to be for trial, which petition shall set out the name of the applicant, his residence and business and that for the two previous years, the place, particularly describing it, where the business is to be conducted, that he is a citizen of the United States and of this state, that he is a registered pharmacist, that now and for the six months last past he has been lawfully conducting a pharmacy in the township, town or city wherein he proposes to engage in the business under the permit applied for, that he has not been adjudged guilty of any violation of the law relating to intoxicating liquors within the two years next preceding the making of his application, is not the keeper of a hotel, eating house, saloon, restaurant or place of public amusement, and that he is not addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and desires a permit to buy, keep and sell liquors for lawful purposes only. If the applicant has previously held a permit which has been revoked, his petition, in addition to the foregoing requirements, shall state that he has not, within the last two years next before making the application, knowingly been engaged, employed or interested in the unlawful manufacture, sale or keeping with intent to sell of intoxicating liquors. [23 G. A., ch. 35, §§ 4, 20; 22 G. A., ch. 71, §§ 3, 9.]

SEC. 2388. Notice. Notice of an application for a permit must be published for three consecutive weeks in a newspaper regularly published and printed in the English language, and of general circulation in the township, town or city where the applicant proposes to conduct the business, or, if none be regularly published therein, then in one of the papers selected by the board of supervisors for the publication of its proceedings, the last publication of which shall be not less than ten nor more than twenty days before the first day of the term at which the hearing is to be had. This notice shall state the name of the applicant, with the firm name, if any, under which he is doing business, the purpose of the application, the particular location of the place where the proposed business is to be carried on, and that the required petition is or will be on file in the clerk's office of the court (naming it) at least ten days before the first day of the term (naming it) when the application will be made. A copy of such notice shall be served upon the county attorney in the same manner and for the same length of time as is required of original notices in said courts. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 2.]

Where the application stated that the business was to be conducted in a certain brick building situated upon a lot and block named and the notice described the place as a certain building on the same lot and block, held, that the notice was sufficient although there were two buildings on such lot and one of the buildings contained two store rooms. The object of the statute in requiring the particular place to be named is that the public may know the location of the place so that remonstrances may be interposed if it is thought that the place is an improper one for that business or that there are other grounds for opposing the application. The applicant being in possession of the room in question the notice was sufficient to identify the place referred to: Whitlock v. Bartholemew, 91-246.

SEC. 2389. Hearing—remonstrances. Upon the return day of the notice, the court having, from an inspection of the record, ascertained that due and timely service thereof has been made, shall, if no remonstrance has been or is offered to be filed, unless for cause postponed to some other day in the term, proceed to hear and try the application. Any remonstrance against or objection to the granting of the permit must be in writing and filed in the clerk's office by noon of the first day of the term, unless further time be given, and shall be so filed before the date fixed for the trial. Such remonstrance or objections may be made by any citizen of the county wherein the application is made, specifically stating the reasons therefor, and the court shall fix a day in the term for the trial, and all applications shall be tried at the first term after completed service has been made of the required notice, if the business of the court shall allow. No permit shall be granted unless the court shall find from competent evidence that all the averments in the petition are true, that the reasonable convenience and necessities of the people, considering the population and all the surroundings, make the granting of the permit proper, and that the applicant is possessed of the character and qualifications required, worthy of the trust to be reposed in him, and likely to discharge the same with fidelity. The county attorney shall appear in such cases, and any number of persons, not less than five, filing any remonstrance or objection, may also appear by counsel and resist the application. If more than one permit is applied for in the same locality, the applications shall be heard at the same time, unless for cause shown it be otherwise ordered. If for any reason the application can not be tried in term time, the same may be heard by the judge in vacation, at a time to be fixed by the court and made of record, and in all applications for permits the court may grant or refuse any or all applications, as will best subserve the public good. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 71, §§ 5, 6.]

The provision of a former statute that a permit should be granted only to a person of good moral character was held not unconstitutional: In re Ruth, 32–250.

Under a former statute, held, that any citizen of the county who appeared to resist the granting of a permit might make a showing with reference to either of the questions which the board of supervisors was required to determine in granting such permit, and might introduce evidence to negative either of the facts which the statute provided must be proven before the permit should be granted. He, in effect, became a party to the proceeding and had sufficient interest in the matter to authorize him to institute a proceeding by certiorari to have any errors and irregularities by the board in granting the permit reviewed: Darling v. Boesch, 67–702.

SEC. 2390. Bond. No permit shall issue until the applicant shall execute to the state a bond in the penal sum of one thousand dollars, with good and sufficient sureties to be approved by the clerk of the court, conditioned that he will well and truly observe and obey the laws of the state now or hereafter in force in relation to the sale of intoxicating liquors, that he will pay all fines, penalties, damages and costs that may be assessed or recovered against him for a violation of such laws during the time for which the permit is granted, and the principal and sureties in said bond shall be liable thereon, jointly and severally, for all civil damages and costs that may be recovered against the principal in any action brought by a wife, child, parent, guardian, employer or other person under the provisions of this chapter. The bond, after being approved by the clerk, shall be deposited with the county auditor, and suit may be brought thereon at any time by the county attorney, or by any person for whose benefit the same is given. The clear proceeds of all other money which may be collected for breaches of the bond shall go to the school fund of the county. If at any time the sureties on the bond shall file with the court or clerk a written request for release, or become insolvent, or be deemed insufficient by the court granting the permit, or its clerk, such court or clerk shall require a new bond to be executed within a reasonable time to be fixed. If the permit holder fails or neglects to furnish a new bond within the time so fixed, the permit shall from that date become null and void. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 4.]

In an action on such bond under former provisions, held, that the assignment of a breach thereof by selling intoxicating liquors to divers persons whose names were unknown, to be by them used as a beverage, etc., was sufficient: Jones County v. Sales, 25-25.

In case of a sale for purposes not specified in the permit, the defendant is not only liable on his bond, but also to a criminal prosecution for selling in violation of law: State v. Adams, 20–486; State v. Stutz, 20–488.

Under the provisions of the Code of '73, it was held that action on the bond might be brought by any citizen of the county: State ex rel. v. Martland, 71–543.

Under previous provisions, held, that the law did not require the bond to specify the purposes for which the permit should authorize liquors to be sold, nor the place of sale; and the fact that the bond was altered by inserting words indicating such purpose and place would not constitute a material alteration, such as to relieve the surety from liability: Starr v. Blatner, 76–356.

SEC. 2391. Oath of applicant. In addition to giving the bond required, the applicant shall take and subscribe the following oath, which shall be indorsed upon the bond: "I,....., do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will well and truly perform all and singular the conditions of the within bond, and keep and perform the trust confided in me to purchase, keep and sell intoxicating liquors. I will not sell, give or furnish to any person any intoxicating liquors otherwise than as provided by law, and especially I will not sell or furnish any intoxicating liquors to any person who is not known to me personally, or duly identified, nor to any minor, intoxicated person, or persons who are in the habit of becoming intoxicated; and I will make true, full and accurate returns of all certificates and requests made to or received by me as required by law; and said returns shall show every sale and delivery of such liquors made by me, or for me, during the months embraced therein, and the true signature to every request received and granted; and such returns shall show all the intoxicating liquors sold or delivered to any and every person, as returned." [23 G. A., ch 35, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 7.]

SEC. 2392. Permit issued. Upon taking said oath and filing said bond, the clerk of the court granting the same shall issue a permit to the applicant, authorizing him to keep and sell intoxicating liquors as in this chapter provided. The permit so issued shall specify the building, give the street and number or location in which intoxicating liquors may be sold by virtue of the same, and the length of time the same shall be in force, unless sooner revoked. [23 G. A., ch. 35, §§ 5, 16; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 7.]

A permit issued to a member of a partnership will not authorize sales made by another member who has no permit: State v. McConnell, 90–197.

Liquors held for the purpose of lawful sale under a permit are not subject to seizure, and the possession thereof may be lawful although they be bought of one not authorized to sell: Niles v. Fries, 35–41.

An indictment for unlawful sale need not negative the authority of defendant to sell under a permit. Such authority must be pleaded in defense: State v. Beneke, 9–203; State v. Collins, 11–141.

Under former provisions a person having a permit to sell was only bound to exercise due diligence and act in good faith in determining whether the person buying intended to use the liquors for a lawful purpose: Taylor v. Pickett, 52–467; State v. Blair, 72–591.

Selling without a permit may be punished both under § 2382 and § 2384: State v. Waynick, 45–516.

The legislature may change a law under which a permit has been granted so as to impose other regulations upon the holder of such permit. A permit is not a vested right: State v. Mullenhoff, 74–271.

SEC. 2393. Record—costs. The clerk of the court granting the permit shall preserve as a part of the record and files in his office all petitions, bonds and other papers pertaining to the granting or revocation of permits, and keep suitable books in which bonds and permits shall be recorded The books shall be furnished by the county like other public records. Whether said permit be granted or refused, the applicant shall pay the costs incurred in the case, and, when granted, he shall make payment before any permit issue, except the court may tax the cost of any witnesses summoned by private persons resisting said application, and the fees for serving such subpœnas, to such persons, when it is shown that such witnesses were summoned maliciously, or without probable cause to believe their evidence material. The fees in such cases shall be as provided in actions at law in the district court. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 9; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 10.]

SEC. 2394. Requests to purchase. Before selling or delivering any intoxicating liquors to any person, a request must be signed by the applicant, in his true name, truly dated, stating the applicant is not a minor, his residence, for whom and whose use the liquor is required, and his true name and residence, and, where numbered, by street and number if in a city, the amount and kind required, the actual purpose for which the request is made, and for what use desired, and that neither the applicant nor the person for whose use requested habitually uses intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and attested by the permit holder who receives and fills the request. The request shall be refused unless the permit holder has reason to believe the statement to be true, and in no case granted unless the permit holder filling it personally knows the person applying is not a minor, intoxicated, nor in the habit of using intoxicating liquors as a beverage; or, if the applicant is not so personally known, before filling the order or delivering the liquor, he shall require identification, and the statement in writing of a reliable and trustworthy person, of good character and habits, known personally to him, that the applicant is not a minor, nor in the habit of using intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and is worthy of credit as to the truthfulness of the statements in the application; and this statement so made shall be signed by the witness in his own name, stating his residence correctly. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 10; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 12.]

SEC. 2395. Penalties. If any person shall make any false or fictitious signature, or sign any name other than his own to any paper required to be signed, or make any false statement in any paper or application signed to procure liquors, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars and costs of prosecution, and shall be committed until said fine and costs are paid, or shall be imprisoned not less than ten nor more than thirty days. If any permit holder or his clerk shall make false oath touching any matter required to be sworn to, the person so offending shall be punished as provided by law for perjury. If any person holding a permit under this chapter shall purchase or procure any intoxicating liquor otherwise than as herein authorized, or make any false return to the county auditor, or use any request for liquors for more than one sale, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished accordingly. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 18; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 19; C. '73, § 1559; R., § 1577.]

SEC. 2396. Transportation by permit holder. Every permit holder is hereby authorized to ship to registered pharmacists and manufacturers of proprietary medicines intoxicating liquors to be used by them for the purposes authorized by law. All railway, transportation and express companies and other common carriers are authorized to receive and transport the same upon presentation of a certificate from the clerk of the district or superior court of the county where the permit holder resides, that such person is permitted to ship intoxicating liquors under the law of this state. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 14.]

SEC. 2397. Returns by permit holder. On or before the fifteenth day of January, March, May, July, September and November of each year, each permit holder shall make full returns to the county auditor, under oath, of all requests filled by him and his clerks during the two preceding months, which oath shall be in the following form: "I, ..., being duly sworn, on oath state that the requests for liquors herewith returned are all that were received and filled at my pharmacy (or place of business) during the months of....., A. D.....; that I have carefully preserved the same, and that they were filled up, signed and attested at the date shown hereon, as provided by law; that said requests were filled by delivering the quantity and kinds of liquors required, and that no liquors have been sold or dispensed under color of my permit during said months except as shown by the requests herewith returned, and that I have faithfully observed and complied with the conditions of my bond and oath taken by me thereon indorsed, and with all the laws relating to any duties in the premises. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 13.]

The provisions of § 1537 of Code of '73 (now repealed), as it originally stood, with reference to the time when the report of sales by a person having a permit should be made, where directory, and a failure to file such report at the time specified would not subject such person to the penality provided, if it was in fact filed before action for the penalty was commenced: Abbott v. Sartori, 57–656.

But after the amendment of that section so as to require the return to be made on the day specified or within five days thereafter, held, that the provisions as to the penalty must be regarded as mandatory, and a failure to make return within the time would render a party liable for the statutory penalty: State ex rel. v. McEntee, 68–381; State ex rel. v. Chamberlin, 74–266.

Under provisions of the Code of '73, now repealed, held, that it was the duty of a pharmacist holding a permit to make returns of prescription sales as well as of others: State ex rel. v. Chamberlin, 74–266. Also, that failure to make reports and selling at illegal profit would not render the seller liable to punishment for illegal sales which were otherwise lawful: State v. Von Haltschuherr, 72–541.

SEC. 2398. Account of purchases and sales. Every permit holder shall keep strict account of all liquors purchased or procured by him in a book kept for that purpose, which shall be subject at all times to the inspection of the commissioners of pharmacy, the county attorney, any grand juror, sheriff or justice of the peace of the county, and such book shall show of whom such liquors were purchased or procured, the amount and kind, the date of receipt and amount sold; also the amount on hand of each kind for each two months, and at the same time he returns requests to the county auditor he shall file a statement of such account with such auditor, except that the items of sales need not be embraced therein, but the aggregate amount of each kind shall be, and such statement shall be verified. All forms necessary to carry out the provisions of this chapter not otherwise provided for shall be as may be provided by the commissioners of pharmacy. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 11.]

Applications for the purchase of liquor produced by the county auditor and signed by the person to whom it is claimed the illegal sales were made, and addressed to defendant, held admissible in a particular case, although not accompanied with the sworn certificate of the defendant: State ex rel. v. Oeder, 80–72.

Certificates on which sales of liquors by a pharmacist have been made are admissible in evidence even though they are not shown to be public records, when they are identified by the witness as certificates on which liquors have been purchased from defendant. They constitute evidence in the nature of admissions by defendant that he made the sales of which they purport to be certificates: State v. Huff, 76–260; State v. Cummins, 76–133.

SEC. 2399. Illegal sales by permit holder—evidence. Every permit holder or his clerk shall be subject to all the penalties, forfeitures and judgments, and may be prosecuted by all the proceedings and actions criminal and civil, whether at law or in equity, provided for or authorized by this chapter, and the permit shall not shield any person who abuses the trust imposed by it or violates the law. In case of conviction in any proceeding, civil or criminal, the liquors in possession of the permit holder shall by order of the court be destroyed, and on the trial of an action or proceeding against any person for manufacturing, selling, giving away or keeping with intent to sell intoxicating liquors in violation of law, or for any failure to comply with the conditions or duties imposed by law, the requests for liquors and returns made to the auditor, the quantity and kinds of liquors sold, or kept, purchased or disposed of, the purpose for which liquors were obtained by or from him and for which they were used, the character and habits of sobriety or otherwise of the purchasers, shall be competent evidence, and may be considered, so far as applicable to the particular case, with any other recognized, competent and material facts and circumstances bearing on the issues involved in determining the ultimate facts. In any suit, prosecution or proceeding under this chapter, the court shall compel the production in evidence of any books or papers required to be kept, and shall compel any permit holder, his clerk, or any person who has purchased liquors of either of them, to appear and give evidence, but such oral evidence shall not be used against such person or witness on the trial of any criminal proceeding against him. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 12; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 14.]

Where a party who was a registered pharmacist was convicted of keeping a nuisance by the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, and a fine of one thousand dollars imposed, and where there was evidence of sales, but none that such sales were unlawful, held, that the statute did not require the highest penalty to be fixed in such cases; and held also, that the evidence was not sufficient to justify the finding that defendant had abused his trust: State v. Hoagland, 77–135.

Evidence in a particular case as to sales to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated, held sufficient to identify the sales as made to such person and to warrant a conviction: State ex rel. v. Oeder, 80–72.

It is for the jury to say whether the taking of applications, showing that the purchaser desires the liquor for a lawful purpose, is evidence tending to show proper care and caution on the part of the seller, and the disposition to obey the law: State v. Aulman, 76–624.

It is proper to instruct the jury that in deciding whether sales under a permit are lawful, they may take into consideration the habits of the purchasers as to the use of liquors as a beverage as known to the seller, and the business or condition of the purchaser as known to the seller. In a particular case, held, that there was evidence to justify the finding of the jury that the defendant knew that sales of liquor made by him were not for a lawful purpose: Ibid.

It is permissible to show the habits of the witness who has bought liquor with reference to the use of intoxicating liquor: and the use of liquor other than that bought from the defendant may be shown: State v. McConnell, 90–197.

A witness who is shown to have made frequent purchases may be asked whether he was in the habit of buying intoxicating liquors as a drink for the purpose of showing that he belonged to a class to which sales could not legally be made and other evidence as to the habits of such witnesses may be introduced: Ibid.

As to the purpose and effect of the provisions of this section with reference to "the character and habits as to sobriety or otherwise," quære: State v. Fleming, 86–294.

SEC. 2400. Revocation of permit. Permits shall be deemed trusts reposed in the recipients, and may be revoked upon sufficient showing by order of a court or judge. Complaint may be presented at any time to the district or superior court, or a judge thereof, which shall be in writing and signed and sworn to by three citizens of the county in which the permit was granted. A copy of the complaint shall, with a notice in writing of the time and place of hearing, be served on the accused five days before the hearing, and if the complaint is sufficient, and the accused appear and deny the same, the court or judge shall proceed without delay, unless continued for cause, to hear and determine the controversy. If continued or appealed at the instance of the permit holder, his permit may, in the discretion of the court, be suspended pending the controversy. The complainant and accused may be heard in person or by counsel, or both, and proofs may be offered by the parties; and if it shall appear upon such hearing that the accused has in any way abused the trust, or that liquors are sold by the accused or his employes in violation of law, or dispensed unlawfully, or he has in any proceeding, civil or criminal, since receiving his permit, been adjudged guilty of violating any of the provisions of this chapter, the court or judge shall revoke and set aside the permit; the papers and order in such case shall be immediately returned to and filed by the clerk of the court, and, if heard by a judge, the order shall be entered of record as if made in court; and if in this or any other proceeding, civil or criminal, it shall be adjudged by the court or judge that any registered pharmacist, proprietor or clerk has been guilty of violating any provision of this chapter, such adjudication may be by the commissioners of pharmacy regarded as sufficient, if repeated, to work a forfeiture of his certificate of registration. It shall be the duty of the clerk to forward to the commissioners of pharmacy transcripts of such judgments or orders without charge therefor, and as soon as practicable after final judgment or order has been made and entered. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 7; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 8.]

In a proceeding to revoke a permit, defendant is not entitled to trial by jury. The permit is not property in such sense that by its revocation the party is deprived of his property without due process of law: State v. Schmidtz, 65–556.

The proceeding to revoke a permit is not a criminal proceeding, but a special proceeding of a civil nature. The revocation, therefore, cannot be suspended by giving bail, nor by a supersedeas bond on appeal, for the reason that the judgment is self-executing and no process is necessary in order to carry it out. A supersedeas bond would, however, suspend the execution of the judgment for costs: Ibid.

A judgment revoking a permit, being a final order in a special proceeding affecting a substantial right, may be appealed from: Ibid.

SEC. 2401. How business conducted—clerks—physicians. A permit holder may employ not more than two registered pharmacists as clerks to sell intoxicating liquors in conformity to the permit and the law; but in such cases the acts of clerks in conducting the business shall be considered the acts of the permit holder, who shall be liable therefor as if he had personally done them, and in making returns, the verification of such requests as may have been received, attested and filled by the clerk must be made by such clerk, and the clerk who transacted any of the business under the permit must join in the general oath required of the employer, so far as relates to his own connection therewith. If for any cause a registered pharmacist who holds a permit shall cease to hold a valid and subsisting certificate of registration or renewal thereof, his permit shall be forfeited and be null and void. Nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed to prevent licensed physicians from in good faith dispensing liquors as medicines to patients actually sick and under their treatment. In case a permit holder shall die, his personal or legal representative may continue the business, subject to the provisions hereof, through the agency of any reputable registered pharmacist, upon the approval of the court granting such permit, or the clerk thereof, and the giving of a bond as hereinbefore provided. [23 G. A., ch. 35, §§ 2, 15; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 16.]

The holder of the permit is liable for illegal sales made by his clerk: State v. McConnell, 90–197.

The statute requires that licensed physicians shall dispense liquor as medicine only to patients actually sick and in that respect the physician must act at his peril: State v. Field, 89–34.

SEC. 2402. Intoxication punished. If any person shall be found in a state of intoxication he is guilty of a misdemeanor, and any peace officer shall, without a warrant, take him into custody and detain him in some suitable place until an information can be made before a magistrate, and a warrant of arrest issued, under which he shall at once be taken before the magistrate issuing the same, or, if for any reason he cannot act, to the next nearest one, where he shall be tried, and, if found guilty, shall be fined in the sum of not less than five nor more than twenty-five dollars and costs of prosecution, or imprisoned in the county jail not more than thirty days. The penalty, or any portion of it, may be remitted by the magistrate before whom the trial is had, and the accused discharged from custody, upon his giving information in writing and under oath, stating when, where and of whom he purchased or received the liquor which produced the intoxication, and the kind and character of this liquor, and, in addition, giving bail for his appearance before any court to give evidence in any action or complaint to be commenced or preferred against such party for furnishing the same. [15 G. A. ch. 37; C.'73, § 1548; R., §§ 1568, 1586.]

The word "drunkenness," in warrant of commitment, held to have the same legal signification as the word "intoxication:" Smith v. Bigelow, 19–459.

An instruction defining "intoxication" discussed: State v. Huxford, 47–16.

A person is drunk in a legal sense when he is so far under the influence of intoxicating liquor that his passions are visibly excited and his judgment impaired: State v. Pierce, 65–85.

A person found in a state of intoxication may be lawfully arrested under this section, although he may be also liable to arrest under the ordinances of a city for being intoxicated in a public place: State v. Garrett, 80–589.

SEC. 2403. Selling or giving to minor or intoxicated person or person in the habit of becoming intoxicated. No person by himself, agent or otherwise, shall sell or give any intoxicating liquors to any minor for any purpose, except upon written order of his parent, guardian or family physician, or sell the same to any intoxicated person or one in the habit of becoming intoxicated. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred dollars, to be collected by action against him, or, if a permit holder, against him and the sureties on his bond. Such action may be brought by any citizen of the county. One-half of the amount so collected shall go to the informer and one-half to the school fund of the county. [20 G. A., ch. 143, § 9; C.'73, § 1539.]

This section applies not only to persons having permits to sell liquors, but to all persons: Cobleigh v. McBride, 45–116, 120.

To constitute the offense it is not necessary that defendant should have known that the person to whom sale was made was a minor. Knowledge of such fact need neither be charged nor proved: Jamison v. Burton, 43–282. So, in case of sale to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated, it is immaterial whether the seller knew the habits of such person. He sells at his peril: Dudley v. Sautbine, 49–650.

A defendant charged with such sales cannot excuse himself on the ground of his ignorance of the fact that the person to whom such sales were made was a minor or an inebriate: State v. Ward, 75–637; State v. Thompson, 74–119.

In case of sale to a minor the consent of the parent will be no defense unless it is in writing: State v. Coeman, 48–567.

The principal is liable for a sale made by an agent in violation of this section, although the agent was positively forbidden to sell to such persons generally, or to the particular person to whom sale was made: Dudley v. Sautbine, 49–650.

The sale of wine or beer to one of the classes of persons here mentioned, resulting in injury such as is contemplated in § 2418, will give a right of action under that section: Jewett v. Wanshura, 43–574.

Under § 2431, this section is to be construed as prohibiting the giving as well as the sale to an intoxicated person: Church v. Higham, 44–482.

The action for the benefit of the school fund may be brought by a citizen as well as by the treasurer: Ibid.

Under this section the seller of liquor to an intoxicated person will be liable, although the liquor is bought and paid for by a third person by way of treating such intoxicated person: State v. Hubbard, 60–466.

Evidence of intoxication at a period subsequent to the sale of the liquor should not be received to prove that the person to whom it was furnished was intoxicated at the time of such sale: Ibid.

No section of the statute save this forbids the giving away of intoxicating liquors, except it is done as an evasion of the penalties for selling or as a subterfuge to conceal unlawful sales: State v. Hutchins, 74–20.

A corporation is a person within the meaning of this section. Therefore, held, that where the defendant corporation ordered and conducted a ball at which the principal officer and member of the managing committee and other officers thereof sold beer, the proceeds of which were received by the corporation, the action provided by this section might be maintained against it: Stewart v. Waterloo Turn Verein, 71–226.

Sales of liquors to the class of persons enumerated in this section are not by its terms declared to be misdemeanors, and the penalty imposed by it can be enforced only by civil action by a citizen of the county: State v. Douglass, 73–279.

Whether allegation of plaintiff's citizenship is sufficiently put in issue by a mere general denial of the allegation of the petition, quære: Kirk v. Litterst, 71–71. But in actions under § 2406, it is held that a general denial does not put in issue plaintiff's citizenship as alleged in the petition: See notes to that section.

Where action is brought to recover the penalty for breach of the bond, and such action is settled, the informer is entitled to a share of the proceeds in the same way as though the action had proceeded to judgment: Hull v. Welsh, 82–117.

The provisions as to penalty are applicable to an action on the bond of a pharmacist for the illegal sale of liquors: Ibid.

SEC. 2404. Club room. Every person who shall, directly or indirectly, keep or maintain, by himself or by associating or combining with others, or who shall in any manner aid, assist or abet in keeping or maintaining, any club room, or other place in which intoxicating liquors are received or kept for the purpose of use, gift, barter or sale, or for distribution or division among the members of any club or association by any means whatever, and every person who shall use, barter, sell or give away, or assist or abet another in bartering, selling or giving away, any intoxicating liquors so received or kept, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than six months. [20 G. A., ch. 143, § 15.]

SEC. 2405. Action to abate nuisance — injunction — contempt. Whenever a nuisance is kept, maintained or exists, as defined in this chapter, any citizen of the county may maintain an action in equity to perpetually enjoin and abate the same. In such action the court, or a judge in vacation, shall, upon the presentation of a petition therefor, allow a temporary writ of injunction without bond, if it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court or judge, by evidence in the form of affidavits, depositions, oral testimony or otherwise, as the plaintiff may elect, unless the court or judge, by previous order, shall have directed the form and manner in which it shall be presented, that the nuisance complained of exists. Three days' notice in writing shall be given the defendant of the hearing of the application, and, if then continued at his instance, the writ as prayed shall be granted as a matter of course. When an injunction has been granted, it shall be binding on the defendant throughout the judicial district in which it was issued, and any violation of the provisions of this chapter by manufacturing, selling or keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors anywhere in said district shall be punished as a contempt, as provided in this chapter. [22 G. A., ch. 73, §§ 3, 4; 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 2; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 12; C.'73, § 1543.]

Injunction; constitutionality: The provision for an injunction in such cases in an action in equity is not unconstitutional as depriving defendant of the right of trial by jury: Littleton v. Fritz, 65–488; State v. Jordan, 72–377.

An action to enjoin a nuisance caused by the selling and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors contrary to law, held not to involve a federal question in such sense as to authorize a removal of the cause to the federal court: Lemen v. Wagner, 68–660; Schmidt v. Cobb, 119 U. S., 286 (the supreme court of the United States being equally divided).

While the penalty of five hundred dollars for the violation of an injunction in such cases is extraordinary, the statute imposing such a penalty is not unconstitutional: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69–177.

The state has jurisdiction of actions commenced under this section to enjoin a liquor nuisance, although the property is held by an assignee in bankruptcy appointed by the federal court in a foreign state: Radford v. Thornell, 81–709.

An allegation in a petition for injunction that defendant had established and was maintaining a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors contrary to the statutes of the state, and that he kept such liquors for sale contrary to law and there sold the same unlawfully, not being controverted must be deemed true: Bloomer v. Glendy, 70-757.

Temporary injunction: It was held before the statutory provision expressly authorized it, that a preliminary injunction might be granted as in other proceedings for an injunction: Littleton v. Fritz, 65-488.

A temporary injunction should not be awarded against the premises. The injunction against the occupant and owner is all that is contemplated at that stage of the proceedings: Gray v. Stienes, 69-124.

Where it appears that defendant has been maintaining a nuisance which would warrant the granting of an injunction, the fact that on the application for a temporary injunction he testifies that he has a few days previously quit the business will not be sufficient ground for refusing the application: Judge v. Kibs, 71-183.

Where by consent of defendant a temporary injunction was issued and subsequently a permanent injunction was granted, which defendant claimed was issued without proper proceedings, held, that in a proceeding to punish for the violation of the injunction, the defendant's objection was immaterial, as the violation would be punishable under the temporary writ, even though no permanent injunction was properly awarded: Cunningham v. Gaynor, 87-449.

Where the petition and affidavit make proper showing for preliminary injunction, and there is no order of the court in regard to the evidence on which such injunction will be issued, the injunction should be granted: Tibbetts v. Burster, 76-176.

The filing of an answer denying that the defendant is at the time of answering maintaining a nuisance as alleged, but not denying the maintenance of such nuisance at the time of the filing of the petition, is not sufficient to show a defense: Ibid.

Owner of the property: Where leased property is being used as a place for the unlawful sale of liquors, the landlord may be made a party defendant to the action to abate such place as a nuisance without regard to his previous knowledge of such use. The building becomes a nuisance and its continuance as such may be enjoined and prevented: Martin v. Blattner, 68-286.

The owner of the building in which unlawful sales of liquor are conducted, permitting such sales by a tenant, may properly be enjoined from further permitting such use: Gray v. Stienes, 69-124.

A decree abating premises as a nuisance and providing for the destruction of property should not be entered when some of the owners of the property are not parties to the suit: Shear v. Green, 73-688.

If persons not parties to the suit have an interest in the real property involved therein a decree should not be made for removal and sale of fixtures constituting a part of the realty: Danner v. Hotz, 74-389.

Facts in a particular case, held sufficient to warrant a decree against the owner of the property: Littleton v. Harris, 73-167.

Where premises are leased for a lawful purpose, to render the owner liable to the penalties herein provided, it is not sufficient to show that he knew of their unlawful use without taking steps to prevent it, but it must appear that, after he became aware of such illegal use, he did some act or made some declaration affirmatively assenting thereto: State v. Ballingall, 42-87.

In an action to enjoin the use of leased premises as a liquor nuisance, where it appeared that the lessors knew that the building was fitted up with a bar and other appliances for the sale of drinks, held, that such evidence was sufficient to authorize an injunction against them, in the absence of any showing that they acted in good faith in leasing the property: State v. Douglass, 75-432.

When the owner of the building has knowledge of the character of the business conducted therein, an injunction is properly granted against such owner as well as against the person carrying on the business: Ibid.; McQuade v. Collins, 61 N. W., 213.

Judgment should not be rendered in an injunction proceeding against the owner of the premises who has not had knowledge of and permitted the unlawful acts. The reputation of the place will not be sufficient to charge the owner with such knowledge if the owner is not so situated as to have knowledge of such reputation: State v. Price, 92-181.

Where the owner of the premises had knowledge that intoxicating liquors were being kept on the premises and sold in violation of the law and the place was shown to have been notoriously used as a saloon for such a length of time that in reason the owner would as a citizen have known the fact and notice of the fact was left at his house, held, that he had such knowledge that an injunction might be granted against him: Hamilton v. Baker, 91-100.

Under particular facts, held, that while the owner of the premises was not shown to have actual knowledge of the illegal business conducted therein he had such reason to believe that the business was illegal as to warrant the granting of an injunction against him with reference to maintaining a nuisance on the premises: State v. Williams, 90-513.

Where the owner had frequently been in and about the building and appeared to occupy a room in it, and the general reputation of the place was that intoxicating liquors were sold and drank there, held, that such knowledge on the part of the owner was shown as to warrant the issuance of an injunction: Carter v. Steyer, 61 N. W., 956.

As to what knowledge on the part of the owner is sufficient to render the property subject to a judgment against the occupant, see § 2422.

Permanent injunction: An injunction should not be issued against a building in which a nuisance has been maintained by a tenant when the owner of the building upon being informed of the nuisance has taken steps to have it abated, and there is nothing tending to show that this was not done in good faith: Shear v. Brinkman, 72-698.

The fact that the owner of property ceases to use it for improper purposes only about the time the case is reached for trial does not render it erroneous to enter a decree for abating the property as a nuisance: Danner v. Hotz, 74–389.

Where the evidence shows that a nuisance is being maintained in the building the personal property used about the premises is subject to sale upon the judgment. A violation of the law works a forfeiture of the permit, and the premises used for the purpose of illegal manufacture may be closed even for the purposes of legal manufacture: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72–348.

In an action to enjoin a liquor nuisance, where the findings of the court are fully sustained by the evidence and warrant the granting of a permanent injunction, it is error not to grant the injunction: Farley v. O'Malley, 77–531.

An injunction declaring premises to be a nuisance will not be set aside on appeal because of doubt as to whether defendant had been guilty of illegal sale of liquors thereon where he has by his own conduct permitted the surroundings of his premises to be such as to furnish ground for believing that he is maintaining a nuisance thereon: Nichols v. Thomas, 89–394.

Where an appeal is taken from a final order granting a perpetual injunction, it will not be reversed because the court granted a temporary injunction without notice: State v. Douglass, 75–432.

Where plaintiff sought to enjoin defendant from keeping a saloon for the sale of intoxicating liquors, and defendant admitted facts sufficient to entitle plaintiff to a decree, but pleaded in abatement the pendency of a former action, held, that, as defendant failed to sustain his plea in abatement, an injunction should be granted: Farley v. Hollenfeltz, 79–126.

A writ which enjoined defendant from unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors on "part of lot number two, in the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section twenty-three," held not void for uncertainty, as the writ prohibited the doing of certain acts, and would be violated by doing them upon any part of the lot: Ver Straeten v. Lewis, 77–130.

Effect of injunction: The provisions of this section making the injunction binding on the party throughout the judicial district are applicable to an injunction granted in an action commenced before the taking effect of the statute. An injunction is not a quasi punishment for an act done, the punishment is for the violation of the injunction after it is granted: McGlassen v. Johnson, 86–477.

In order that the decree shall be binding throughout the judicial district as provided in this statute, it is not necessary that the decree shall so provide: Ibid.

An injunction against the defendant does not operate upon the property and a subsequent purchaser cannot be punished for contempt in making unlawful use of it, although he has knowledge of the injunction: Buhlman v. Humphrey, 86–597; Newcomer v. Tucker, 89–486.

One who is restrained by an injunction from keeping a liquor nuisance upon his premises is guilty of contempt in allowing such nuisance to be maintained upon his premises with his knowledge and assent: England v. Johnson, 86–751.

SEC. 2406. How brought and tried—evidence—attorney's fee. Actions to enjoin nuisances may be brought in the name of the state by the county attorney, who shall prosecute the same to judgment, or any citizen of the proper county may institute and maintain such a proceeding in his name. The action when brought shall be triable at the first term of court after due and timely service of notice of the commencement thereof has been given; and in such action evidence of the general reputation of the place described in the petition shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the existence of such nuisance. If plaintiff is successful in the action, an attorney's fee of twenty-five dollars shall be taxed as costs in his favor. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 1.]

Citizenship of plaintiff: The action by a citizen to obtain an injunction, although prosecuted in the name of such citizen as a private party, is for the public benefit, and it cannot be maintained except by a citizen of the county. A wife who has been injured in her means of support by illegal sales cannot maintain the action for an injunction if she is a resident of another county: Applegate v. Winebrenner, 66–67.

In an action to restrain a liquor nuisance, held, that a Methodist clergyman who resides in a county of the state for the purpose of preaching there for one year, but subject to removal at any time, is a citizen of the county within the meaning of this statute: Fuller v. McDonnell, 75–220.

An allegation that plaintiff is a citizen of the county is not put in issue by a general denial, but only by specially alleging facts showing the allegation of the petition in this respect not to be true: Littleton v. Harris, 73–167: Shear v. Green, 73–688.

Averment by defendant of want of knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to plaintiff's citizenship is not sufficient to put that matter in issue: Craig v. Hasselman, 74–538.

While the right to institute proceedings is dependent upon residence or citizenship of the plaintiff in the county, yet when that right has attached and the suit has been instituted, the right to prosecute it to judgment does not terminate by plaintiff's removal to another county: Judge v. Kahl, 74–486.

Upon the death of a party in whose name a suit to abate a liquor nuisance has been maintained, his administrator or heirs are not entitled to substitution in his place, but, on the application of a person duly authorized, the name of the state may be substituted. And held, that the same principle was applicable where suit was brought to set aside the decree rendered in such action: Geyer v. Douglass, 85–93.

A citizen maintaining an action under this section has the right to employ counsel not only in the original proceeding but in a subsequent proceeding to punish for contempt in the violation of the injunction: Maloney v. Traverse, 87–306.

It is not necessary in an action by a citizen in his own name to allege notification to the county attorney and failure on his part to bring the suit: Wood v. Baer, 91–475.

Suits brought by private persons to enjoin the maintenance of liquor nuisances are in behalf of the public and defendant cannot set up by way of defense improper motives which have actuated the plaintiff in the institution of the proceeding: McQuade v. Collins, 61 N. W., 213.

The proceeding, although brought by a citizen, is of a public nature and for the public benefit: Cameron v. Kapinos, 89–561.

An action to make the fine imposed in a contempt proceeding a lien upon the real estate of one knowingly permitting the premises to be used in violation of the injunction may properly be brought also in the name of a citizen: Ibid.

So long as a former decree enjoining defendant from keeping and maintaining a nuisance by unlawfully selling liquors on certain premises is in force, a second suit for abatement of the same nuisance, brought by another citizen, should not be allowed in the absence of any showing that the former decree was obtained by collusion with the intent of defeating the purposes of the law: Dickinson v. Eichorn, 78–710; Steyer v. McCauley, 71 N. W., 194.

While an injunction may be granted against the defendant which will be valid throughout the judicial district, yet where after such injuction was granted, another action was brought to enjoin defendant as keeper and another person as owner of premises from maintaining a nuisance on such premises, held, that the former injunction would not bar the subsequent action: Carter v. Steyer, 61 N. W., 956.

Method of trial: Whether this statute changes the general rule as to the method of trial of equity causes in this class of cases or not, it is error to continue a case for the purpose of taking depositions without making an order for the trial of the cause upon depositions: Ellwood v. Price, 73–84.

Evidence: The provisions of this section permitting evidence of the reputation of the place are not applicable to prosecutions for maintaining a nuisance under § 2384: State v. Fleming, 86–294.

Attorney's fees are taxable against the defendant in all cases for the enjoining or abatement of a liquor nuisance, whether such action is prosecuted in the name of the state or of a private citizen of the county: State v. Douglass, 75–432; State v. Boyd, 85–740.

The provisions of this section as to general reputation and attorney's fees and closing the building, held applicable to actions which were pending at the time they went into effect: Farley v. O'Malley, 77–531; Farley v. Geisheker, 78–453; Drake v. Jordan, 73–707.

Under former provisions the attorney was entitled to reasonable fees for services rendered in the case, not less than $25 in any court, and where an action was commenced in the district court, removed to the federal court, appealed to the supreme court of the United States and remanded to the district court where it was instituted, held, that an attorney's fee of $350 was not unreasonable: Farley v. O'Malley, 77–531.

In a particular case where it appeared that action was brought and a trial was had, involving, however, only the introduction in evidence of the answer filed by defendant, held, that an attorney fee of $25 was sufficient: Farley v. Geisheker, 78–453.

The allowance is to the plaintiff and not to his attorney, and an attorney acts for the plaintiff and not in his own right in receiving the fee allowed: Root v. Heil, 78–436.

Acceptance by the attorney for the plaintiff of the amount taxed in favor of plaintiff as attorney fees, held to constitute a waiver of plaintiff's right to appeal: Ibid.

Where there was no controversy as to the amount of attorney's fees, held that the judge might, upon the record and his own knowledge of the services in the case, fix the amount without testimony; but that where there was a contention as to the amount to be taxed, testimony should be heard and the amount determined on the record and testimony alone: Craig v. Werthmueller, 78–598.

The allowance of the attorney fee was not to be limited to services in the trial court but might be made also for services in the supreme court: Hamilton v. Baker, 91–100.

As to the services in the supreme court, the court might judge of their value without necessity for the introduction of evidence: Ibid.

Under this section, attorney's fees are taxable, whether the suits are prosecuted in the name of the state, or in the name of a citizen of the county: Newman v. Des Moines County, 85–89.

Such fees are a part of the costs, and if not recoverable from defendant are to be paid by the county, as other costs in criminal cases: Ibid.

This provision as to attorney fees relates to civil proceedings by a citizen to secure an injunction: State v. McEnturff, 87–691.

As to the method of assessing the fee in criminal prosecutions, see note to § 2384, and in general as to attorney's fees in such cases, see § 2429.

SEC. 2407. Violation of injunction. In case of the violation of any injunction granted under the provisions of this chapter, the court, or in vacation a judge thereof, may summarily try and punish the offender. The proceedings shall be commenced by filing with the clerk of the court an information under oath, setting out the alleged facts constituting such violation, upon which the court or judge shall cause a warrant to issue, under which the defendant shall be arrested. The trial may be had upon affidavits, or either party may demand the production and oral examination of the witnesses. A party found guilty of contempt under the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than three nor more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 3.]

This section expressly authorizes the examination in court of witnesses in contempt proceedings. In such case it is sufficient if the evidence is taken down by the shorthand reporter and filed with the certificate of the judge thereto, followed at a later time by the filing of the reporter's transcript of his shorthand notes certified to by him: Goetz v. Stutsman, 73-693.

The proceeding to punish a contempt of the process of a court is criminal in its nature and by it a disobedience to civil authority is punished. It is merely incidental to the original proceeding and need not be entitled as of the original cause. It is properly brought in the name of the state as plaintiff, and a party making the original affidavit as the basis of the proceeding is competent to do so although not a citizen: Fisher v. Cass County District Court, 75-232.

It is erroneous for the court on rendering judgment of a fine for violating an injunction to include in such judgment a provision for the suspension of execution at the pleasure of the court: State v. Voss, 80-467.

It is not error to refuse to consider affidavits where a demand that the witness be brought before the court for examination is not complied with: Cotant v. Hobson, 67 N. W., 255.

The provision for punishment for contempt without a jury trial is not in violation of the federal constitution: Eilenbecker v. Plymouth County, 134 U. S., 31.

A party may be punished for contempt in the violating of an injunction resting upon property with reference to its use for the sale of intoxicating liquors, although he was not a party to the injunction proceedings, and had no knowledge thereof. The decree granting the injunction is a restriction upon the use of the property which follows it as a burden into whosesoever hands it may come: Silvers v. Traverse, 82-52.

An order imposing a fine and imprisonment for contempt in violating an injunction may be made by the judge in vacation: McLane v. Granger, 74-152.

An order punishing, or refusing to punish, under this section is reviewable upon certiorari, and not on appeal: Currier v. Mueller, 79-316; State v. District Court, 84-167.

Where the district court refused to punish for a violation of an injunction restraining a liquor nuisance on the ground that an appeal and filing of a supersedeas bond prevented a punishment for contempt, held, that the proceeding could be reviewed by certiorari: Lindsay v. Clayton District Court, 75-509.

The only means of reviewing an order of court punishing a person for contempt for violating an injunction issued under this section is by certiorari, and the district court does not have authority to admit the defendant to bail pending such proceeding. Such authority is possessed only by the court which can issue a writ of certiorari: State v. District Court, 84-167.

A supersedeas bond given on appeal to the supreme court from a decree granting an injunction does not suspend the injunction nor prevent a violation thereof from being punishable: Lindsay v. Clayton District Court, 75-509.

The punishment for contempt in the violation of an injunction is not quasi-criminal in such sense that the party is entitled to the time provided for in criminal procedure before pronouncing judgment: McGlasson v. Johnson, 86-477.

The fact that an act in violation of an injunction is done in good faith, in consequence of the advice of counsel, is no defense in a proceeding to punish for contempt. The statute gives to the court no discretion where the violation of an injunction is shown, except as to the amount of fine or term of imprisonment: Lindsay v. Hatch, 85-332.

Prior provisions imposing a fine of not less than $500 for contempt in violating an injunction, held constitutional: Johnson v. Circuit Court, 69-177; Grier v. Johnson, 88-99.

SEC. 2408. Abatement. If the existence of the nuisance be established in a civil or criminal action, an order of abatement shall be entered as a part of the judgment in the case; which order shall direct the destruction of the liquor, the removal from the building or place of all fixtures, furniture, vessels or movable property used in any way in conducting the unlawful business and sale thereof, in the manner provided for the sale of chattels under execution, and the effectual closing of the building, erection or place against its use for any purpose prohibited in this chapter, and so keeping it for a period of one year, unless sooner released. If any one shall break or use a building or place so directed to be closed, he shall be punished as for contempt as provided in the preceding section. For removing and selling the movable property, the officer shall be entitled to charge and receive the same fees as he would for levying upon and selling like property on execution, and for closing the premises and keeping them closed, a reasonable sum shall be allowed by the court. [22 G. A., ch. 73, § 1; 21 G. A. ch. 66, § 5; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 12; C.'73, §§ 1523, 1543; R., § 1559.]

A judgment, upon a conviction for maintaining a liquor nuisance, ordering the destruction of the liquor found on the premises and ordering its removal and the sale of all furniture and fixtures and all movable property used in or about the premises in carrying on the unlawful business, and ordering the closing of the building as against its use for saloon purposes for one year unless sooner released, is fully authorized by this section: State v. Adams, 81–595.

Such an action is against the thing as well as the person, and as the person has had notice and his day in court upon which to defend the forfeiture of his property as well as the punishment of himself, the provision for forfeiture is not unconstitutional: Craig v. Werthmueller, 78–598.

A writ for the seizure and destruction of whatever property may be found on the premises on which the illegal business is carried on is sufficiently definite: Ibid.

Where a brewery was used without permit for the manufacture of beer, held, that it could be closed under these provisions: Ibid.

In an action to restrain and abate a liquor nuisance, where a nuisance is found, it is error for the court to refuse to provide for the abatement of the nuisance in the decree: McClure v. Braniff, 75–38.

The decree should order the abatement of the nuisance even though it should appear that the owner of the premises is not responsible therefor: Morgan v. Koestner, 83–134.

Where leased premises were used for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, but without the knowledge of the lessors, who were nonresidents, and who, upon learning of such unlawful use, in good faith caused the premises to be vacated a few days after the action to enjoin the nuisance was commenced, and they were thereafter used only for lawful purposes, held, that it was error to perpetually enjoin the lessors from maintaining a nuisance on said premises and render a judgment against them for costs: Eckert v. David, 75–302.

Where an action was commenced to enjoin a liquor nuisance, but was not tried for more than a year and a half afterwards, and defendant continued to maintain the nuisance until three or four days before the trial, held, that a reformation of so brief a duration was not sufficient to justify a refusal to grant an injunction restraining the nuisance and abating it: Halfman v. Spreen, 75–309.

In a particular case, held, that an agreement to dismiss the prosecution was not sufficiently established to make a subsequent decree erroneous: Geyer v. Douglass, 85–93.

The provisions as to abatement of the nuisance are applicable to acts committed before the enactment of those provisions: McLain v. Bonn, 70–752; Drake v. Jordan, 73–707.

SEC. 2409. Proceeds—how applied. The proceeds of the sale of the personal property, as provided in the preceding section, shall be applied, first, in payment of the costs of the action and abatement; secondly, to the satisfaction of any fine and costs adjudged against the proprietor of the premises and keeper of said nuisance, and the balance, if any, shall be paid to the defendant. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 6.]

Where a judgment provided that the proceeds of the personal property should be used to pay the fine and costs adjudged against defendant, and that the balance, if any, should be paid to him, held, that the provision was authorized by this section: State v. Adams, 81–595.

SEC. 2410. Abatement by owner. If the owner appears and pays all costs of the proceeding, and files a bond with sureties to be approved by the clerk in the full value of the property, to be ascertained by the court, or, in vacation, by the clerk, auditor and treasurer of the county, conditioned that he will immediately abate said nuisance and prevent the same from being established or kept therein within a period of one year thereafter, the court, or, in vacation, the judge, may, if satisfied of his good faith, order the premises closed under the order of abatement to be delivered to said owner, and said order of abatement canceled so far as the same may relate to said property; and if the proceeding be an action in equity, and said bond be given and costs therein paid before judgment and order of abatement, the action shall be thereby abated. The release of the property under the provisions of this section shall not release it from any judgment, lien, penalty or liability to which it may be subject by law. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 7.]

A decree of abatement should be rendered against the premises even though the owner is not responsible for the nuisance. He may under the provisions of this section, release the property from the effect of such decree: Morgan v. Koestner, 83–134.

SEC. 2411. Second offense. Any person who shall have been convicted of keeping a nuisance under this chapter, or who shall have been enjoined as herein provided, and shall again directly or indirectly engage in keeping a nuisance or selling intoxicating liquors in violation of this chapter, in any county in this state, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not less than three months nor more than one year. But no equitable proceeding, order or judgment shall be construed as a conviction under the provisions of this section. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 2412. Prepayment of fees not required—costs taxed to plaintiff. In an action brought by a citizen to enjoin a nuisance, as defined in this chapter, no officer or witness shall be entitled to receive in advance fees for service or attendance. If the prosecution fails, or the costs cannot be collected of the defendant, they shall be paid in the same manner as in criminal causes. If, however, the court shall find that the case was commenced without probable cause, or was maliciously brought, it may tax the costs to the plaintiff. [22 G. A., ch. 73, § 2.]

Failure to pay or secure in advance the fees of the clerk for a transcript on appeal in such case will not defeat the appeal: Searles v. Lux, 86-61.

The costs here provided for are to be paid by the county under the terms of § 512 and such costs include the attorney's fees, which may be taxed under the provisions of § 2406: Newman v. Des Moines County, 85-89.

Where the prosecution is not actuated by malice or without probable cause the costs should not be taxed to the plaintiff: Clark v. Riddle, 70 N. W., 207.

SEC. 2413. Search warrant—seizure. If any credible resident of any county shall, before a justice of the peace for the same county, make written information, supported by his oath or affirmation, that he has reason to believe, and does believe, that any intoxicating liquor, described as particularly as may be in said information, is in said county, in any place described as particularly as may be in said information, owned or kept by any person named or described in said information as particularly as may be, and is intended by him to be sold in violation of the provisions of this chapter, said justice shall, upon finding probable cause for such information, issue his warrant of search, directed to any peace officer in the county, describing as particularly as may be the liquor and the place described in said information, and the person named or described in said information as the owner or keeper of said liquor, and commanding the said officer to search thoroughly said place, and to seize the said liquor, with the vessels containing it, and to keep the same securely until final action be had thereon; whereupon the said peace officer to whom such warrant shall be delivered shall forthwith obey and execute, as effectually as possible, the commands of said warrant, and make return of his doings to said justice, and shall securely keep all liquors so seized by him and the vessels containing them until final action be had thereon. If the place to be searched be a dwelling-house in which any family resides, and in which no tavern, eating house, grocery or other place of public resort is kept, such warrant shall not be issued unless said complainant shall, on oath or affirmation, declare before said justice that he has reason to believe and does believe that within one month next before the making of said information intoxicating liquor has been, in violation of this chapter, sold in said house, or in some dependency thereof, by the person accused in said information, or by his consent or permission; nor unless, from the facts and circumstances disclosed by such complaint, the said justice shall be of the opinion that said complainant has adequate reason for such belief. [C.'73, § 1544; R., § 1565.]

Information: Although the section requires that the information be filed by "a credible resident of" the county, it is not necessary that either the information or the warrant should state that it is made by such a person. That fact may be found by the justice before whom information is filed, upon proof independent of the information, or from personal knowledge: State v. Thompson, 44-399; Weir v. Allen, 47-482; State v. Blair, 72-591.

Warrant: Proceedings under a warrant will not be rendered invalid by the fact that the officer searched for and seized the liquor before having such warrant. Nor is it material whether the liquor was in possession of the person claiming to be owner thereof, it appearing that the owner had no right to keep or sell such liquor: State v. Ward, 75-637.

What subject to seizure: It is only liquors which are kept with the intention of selling the same in violation of law that may be seized: State v. Harris, 36-136.

The fact that the owner has been selling liquors in violation of law is not a ground for their condemnation, and is simply evidence of the unlawful intent with which they were kept: State v. Blair, 72-591.

The information must charge some specific person as owner or keeper of the intoxicating liquor with an illegal intent, and the liquor cannot be destroyed unless the evidence shows that the person who is charged as owner or keeper had such intent: State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 64-300.

If a pharmacist sells liquors for purposes other than as medicine, search and seizure of liquors owned by him may be made as provided in this section: State v. Ward, 75-637.

It will not be presumed that the place to be searched is a dwelling-house, etc., from the mere fact that the information avers that the liquors are kept in "a certain house or place, known," etc: Sanders v. State, 2-230, 277.

If a pharmacist who holds a permit sells liquor for any other purpose than medicine which is actually necessary as such, he is liable to the utmost rigors of the law in force at the time the sales were made, and search may be made for and the liquor seized: State v. Ward, 75-637.

Even though liquors be not subject to seizure, yet an action of replevin cannot be maintained to recover possession thereof from an officer holding them under a search warrant in a proper proceeding: Lemp v. Fullerton, 83-192.

Although prior to the passage of the so-called Wilson bill authorizing the regulation by the states of intoxicating liquors shipped from one state into another, the statutory provisions for seizure of liquor were unconstitutional as to liquor shipped from one state into another, yet an officer acting in good faith under such statutes was not liable for such act: Anheuser-Busch Brewing Assn. v. Hammond, 61 N. W., 1052.

A previous conviction of the owner of the liquors for selling the same will not bar a proceeding, under this section, against the liquors themselves: Ibid.

The jurisdiction here conferred upon justices of the peace is not exclusive, but may also be exercised by police justices in cities acting under special charter: Weir v. Allen, 47-482.

Seizure: Liquors seized as here contemplated cannot be taken from the officer by replevin: Funk v. Israel, 5-438; State v. Harris, 38-242; Weir v. Allen, 47-482; Fries v. Porch, 49-351.

Liquor in the hands of the sheriff by virtue of a search warrant cannot be recovered on replevin: Schoenhofen Brewing Co. v. Armstrong, 89-673.

Nor can the owner recover their value from such officer by way of damages in an action of trespass, unless he show that he possessed them with lawful intent, and was unlawfully deprived of them: Plummer v. Harbut, 5-308.

Liquors in the hands of an officer by virtue of a seizure cannot be taken from him by writ of replevin from a federal court: Senior v. Pierce, 31 Fed. 625.

A judgment rendered against the officer holding the liquor by stipulation on his part should be set aside on motion of the attorney representing the prosecution in the case against the liquors: Fries v. Porch, 49-351

Where intoxicating liquors held for sale are seized in the custody of an express company, in a proceeding to condemn them it is immaterial whether the officers of the company knew the character of the property and the use to which it was to be put. It is the duty of such company, under the statute, to know whether goods it receives for shipment are such as the law authorizes to be bartered and sold: State v. United States Ex. Co., 70-271.

Such a proceeding is not a criminal one against the express company, and it becomes a party voluntarily, if at all, to the case: Ibid. As to property in intoxicating liquors see notes to § 2382.

Proceeding criminal: These proceedings for the condemnation of intoxicating liquors illegally kept with intent to sell are criminal in their nature, and the defendant has the rights of the defendant in a criminal prosecution. For instance, a verdict of the jury for defendant should not be set aside upon motion in arrest of judgment in behalf of the prosecution: State v. Harris, 40-95.

A proceeding for the seizure, condemnation and destruction of intoxicating liquors kept for sale in violation of law is a criminal action, and the jurisdiction of the justice does not, therefore, depend on the amount in controversy: State v. Arlen, 71-216.

SEC. 2414. Information for search warrant—defects. The information and search warrant in such case shall describe, with reasonable particularity, the place to be searched, as well as the liquors to be seized. When any liquors shall have been seized by virtue of any such warrant, the same shall not be discharged or returned to any person claiming the same by reason of any alleged insufficiency of description in the warrant of the liquor or place, but the claimant shall only have a right to be heard on the merits of the case. [C. '73, § 1545.]

The expression "as particularly as may be" conveys the idea of the greatest degree of certainty, and this section is therefore not in conflict with Const., art. I, § 8, as authorizing a search warrant to issue without the particularity of description there required; nor as authorizing unreasonable search and seizure: Santo v. State, 2–165, 212.

SEC. 2415. Notice—trial—judgment—appeal. In the event of a seizure under said warrant, the officer shall forthwith make a return of his acts thereunder, and within forty-eight hours thereafter the justice who issued the warrant shall cause to be left at the place where said liquor was seized, if said place be a dwelling-house, store or shop, posted in some conspicuous place on or about said buildings, and also to be left with or at the last known and usual place of residence of the person named or described in said information as the owner or keeper of said liquor, if he be a resident of this state, a notice, summoning such person, and all others whom it may concern, to appear before said justice at a place and time named in said notice, which time shall not be less than five nor more than fifteen days after the posting and leaving of said notices, and show cause, if any they have, why said liquor, together with the vessels in which the same is contained, should not be forfeited; and said notice shall, with reasonable certainty, describe said liquor and vessels, and shall state where, when and why the same were seized. At the time and place prescribed in said notice, the person named in said information, or any other person claiming an interest in said liquor and vessels, or any part thereof, may appear and show cause why the same should not be forfeited. If any person shall so appear, he shall become a party defendant in said case, and said justice shall make a record thereof. Whether any person shall so appear or not, said justice shall, at the prescribed time, proceed to the trial of said case, and said complainants or either of them may, and upon their default the officer having such liquor in custody shall, appear before said justice and prosecute said information, and show cause why such liquor should be adjudged forfeited. The proceeding in the trial of such case may be the same, substantially, as in cases of misdemeanor triable before justices of the peace, and if any person shall appear and be made a party defendant as herein provided, and shall make written plea that said liquor, or a part thereof claimed by him, was not owned or kept with intent to be sold in violation of this chapter, such party defendant may, at his option, demand a jury to try the issue, and if, upon the evidence presented, the said justice or jury, as the case may be, shall, by verdict, find that said liquor was, when seized, owned or kept by any person, whether said party defendant or not, for the purpose of being sold in violation of this chapter, the said justice shall render judgment that said liquor, or said part thereof, with the vessels in which it is contained, is forfeited. If no person be made defendant in manner aforesaid, or if judgment be in favor of all the defendants who appear and are made such, then the costs of the proceeding shall be paid as in ordinary criminal prosecutions where the prosecution fails. If the judgment shall be against only one party defendant appearing as aforesaid, he shall be adjudged to pay all the costs of proceedings in the seizure and detention of the liquor claimed by him, and trial, up to the time of judgment. But if such judgment shall be against more than one party defendant claiming distinct interests in said liquor, then the costs of said proceedings and trial shall be, according to the discretion of said justice, equitably apportioned among said defendants, and execution shall be issued on said judgments against said defendants for the amount of the costs so adjudged against them. Any person appearing and becoming party defendant as aforesaid may appeal from said judgment of forfeiture, as to the whole or any part of said liquor and vessels claimed by him and so adjudged forfeited, to the district court, as in ordinary cases of misdemeanor. [C. '73, § 1546.]

Even though a search is fruitless, the officer making the search is entitled to his fee therefor, which is to be paid by the county as in other criminal prosecutions when the prosecution fails: Byram v. Polk County, 76–75.

SEC. 2416. Destruction of liquor and vessels. Whenever it shall be finally decided that liquor seized as aforesaid is forfeited, the court rendering final judgment of forfeiture shall issue to the officer having said liquors in custody, or to some other peace officer, a written order, directing him forthwith to destroy said liquor and vessels containing the same, and immediately thereafter to make return of said order to the court whence issued, with his doings indorsed thereon. Whenever it shall be finally decided that any liquor so seized is not liable to forfeiture, the court by whom such final decision shall be rendered shall issue a written order to the officer having the same in custody, or to some other peace officer, to restore said liquor, with the vessels containing the same, to the place where it was seized, as nearly as may be, or to the person entitled to receive it, which order the officer shall obey, and make return thereon to the court of his acts thereunder, and the costs of the proceeding in such case attending the restoration, as also the costs attending the destruction of such liquor in case of forfeiture, shall be taxed and paid in the same manner as is provided in case of ordinary criminal prosecutions where the prosecution fails. [C.'73, § 1547.]

SEC. 2417. Liability for care of intoxicated person. Any person who shall by the manufacture, sale or giving away of intoxicating liquors, contrary to the provisions of this chapter, cause the intoxication of any other person, shall be liable for and compelled to pay a reasonable compensation to any person who may take charge of and provide for such intoxicated person, and one dollar per day in addition thereto for every day such intoxicated person shall be kept, in consequence of such intoxication, which sums may be recovered in a civil action before any court having jurisdiction thereof [C.'73, § 1556.]

A physician called to attend a person for an injury received, or for sickness resulting from intoxication, has no claim against the person selling the liquor, as contemplated by this section: Sansom v. Greenough, 55–127.

SEC. 2418. Civil action for damages by wife, parent, child, etc. Every wife, child, parent, guardian, employer or other person who shall be injured in person or property or means of support by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of the intoxication, habitual or otherwise, of any person, shall have a right of action in his or her own name against any person who shall, by selling or giving to another contrary to the provisions of this chapter any intoxicating liquors, cause the intoxication of such person, for all damages actually sustained, as well as exemplary damages; and a married woman shall have the same right to bring suits, prosecute, and control the same and the amount recovered, as if a single woman; and all damages recovered by a minor under this section shall be paid either to such minor or his parent, guardian or next friend, as the court shall direct, and all suits for damages under this section shall be by civil action in any court having jurisdiction thereof. [C.'73, § 1557.]

Right of action: The cause of action is the selling of the liquors, yet the foundation of the action is the wrongful act of defendant in causing the intoxication of the husband, father or other person, which is a personal injury to him, and the action is one for injury to the person in such sense that it must be brought within two years as provided by the statute of limitations in reference to that class of actions: Emmert v. Grill, 39–690.

In an action by a plaintiff suing as wife, the fact of marriage is not essential, and she may recover without proof thereof: Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43–580.

By the provisions of this section a right of action was given for the sale of wine and beer to minors or intoxicated persons when sales of those liquors were in general not prohibited: Jewett v. Wanshura, 43–574.

Before the passage of the present law prohibiting entirely sales of wine and beer there was no cause of action for injuries due to the sale of beer, unless it was sold in violation of § 2403, prohibiting the sale to minors, intoxicated persons, etc.; Myers v. Conway, 55–166.

And before the enactment of that statutory provision there was no liability whatever to civil damages for injury resulting from the sale of beer: Woody v. Coenan, 44–19.

Giving: Damages arising from the giving as well as from the sale of intoxicating liquors may be recovered: Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56–11.

Under circumstances indicating that liquor furnished to plaintiff's husband was for a pecuniary compensation, although not directly paid for nor charged to him, held, that it was not error to allow the wife to recover damages for such act: Rafferty v. Buckman, 46-195.

It seems that the giving of intoxicating liquors to a person already intoxicated would subject the giver to liability under this section for damages resulting: Miller v. Hammers, 61 N. W., 1087.

For what injuries: The wife may recover damages resulting from the death of her husband caused by intoxication: Ibid.

In order that a right of action may exist, the liquor sold must cause or contribute to intoxication, and the wife must sustain some injury by the intoxication: Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56-11.

The damages sustained "in person" as contemplated by the statute mean in body, and threatening language, vulgar conduct, etc., directed towards plaintiff by her husband, but not resulting in physical injury or impairment of health, will not entitle her to either actual or exemplary damages as against the person causing the intoxication of her husband: Calloway v. Laydon, 47-456; Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56-11.

For wounded feelings, disgrace, etc., not resulting from injury to the person, no recovery can be had, but for mental anguish, shame or suffering resulting from violence to the person, plaintiff is entitled to recover: Ward v. Thompson, 48-588.

Plaintiff may recover for injuries to person, property and means of support, but not for wounded feelings or disgrace or loss of standing in society: Jackson v. Noble, 54-641.

The occupation and business capacity of the husband may be shown, and the manner in which he supported plaintiff previous to the intoxication, as showing of what plaintiff was deprived by reason of such intoxication: Ibid.

If it is shown that defendant has deprived plaintiff of the assistance of her husband in the support of herself and family by causing his frequent intoxication, her means of support would thus be shown to have been injured to that extent without reference to her condition before such injury: Woolheather v. Risley, 38-486.

The fact that plaintiff's husband has been for a long time habitually drunk cannot be shown in evidence for the purpose of affecting the wife's damages, but evidence as to the previous habits of the husband was material in such cases under the statute by which sale of beer was legal, except to persons in the habit of becoming intoxicated: Huff v. Aultman, 69-71.

Exemplary damages: This statutory provision gives a new and peculiar remedy not only for actual but also for exemplary damages. The injury is of a peculiar character not recognized or redressed by the common law: Dunlavey v. Watson, 38-398.

Exemplary damages may be allowed although no tort or breach of the peace has resulted: Goodenough v. McGrew, 44-670.

Under this section exemplary damages are to be given as a matter of right in case actual damage is found: Thill v. Pohlman, 76-638.

If actual damages are given, the jury must allow exemplary damages. They are the sole judges of the amount of exemplary damages to be allowed, keeping in view the object of punishing the wrong done, and making it an example that will prevent others from doing a like wrong in the future: Miller v. Hammers, 61 N. W., 1087.

While threatening language and vulgar conduct by the husband towards the wife may result in the impairment of health, and thus amount to an injury for which damages might be recovered, yet such words and conduct unaccompanied with physical injury will not entitle her to actual damages, and therefore they cannot be a ground for exemplary damages, even where damages on other grounds are recovered. The exemplary damages in such case must be such as are called for under the circumstances under which the actual damages are sustained: Calloway v. Laydon, 47-456.

Where it appeared that defendant sold plaintiff's husband intoxicating liquor when he was in a state of intoxication, and continued to sell him liquors, knowing that he was in the habit of becoming intoxicated, held, that a verdict for exemplary damages was not erroneous: Weitz v. Ewen, 50-34.

Exemplary damages may be awarded in every case brought under this section where there has been a wilful violation of the statute which has occasioned injury for which a right of action is given. The party injured is entitled to exemplary damages in a proper case, and the awarding of them is not left to the discretion of the jury: Fox v. Wunderlich, 64-187.

No special prayer for exemplary damages is required: Gustafson v. Wind, 62-281.

Who liable: The right of action is given against any person who actually makes the sale of the intoxicating liquor, whether he be the owner, or the son, clerk or servant of such owner: Worley v. Spurgeon, 38-465.

It is sufficient to hold a defendant liable if it be shown that liquor sold by him contributed to the intoxication complained of: Woolheather v. Risley, 38-486.

A party is liable if he contributes to actual specific fits of intoxication as a direct result of liquor sold by him in part, even if the intoxication had become habitual, but not for contributing to the habit of drinking without intoxication, but leading to other drinking resulting in intoxication: Cox v. Newkirk, 73-42; Arnold v. Barkalow, 73-183.

In an action for damages for selling plaintiff's husband intoxicating liquor, held, that if defendant furnished the intoxicating liquor to plaintiff's husband under the direction of a third party, or furnished it to others from whom the plaintiff's husband obtained it, this was sufficient to maintain the action: Judge v. Jordan, 81-519.

In an action by a wife to recover damages for the sale of intoxicating liquors to her husband, the husband having testified in a former trial, held, that, although the wife called him as a witness in the former trial, that did not obligate her to call him in this, nor commit her to the statements in his former testimony: Ibid.

Joint liability: A joint action will not lie against several defendants having independent places of business, where the injuries are successive and not the result of one particular intoxication. Section 3463 is not applicable to such cases: La France v. Krayer, 42–143.

Where a joint action will not lie, each party is liable for the damages which he occasions, and a settlement with one does not bar an action against another: Jewett v. Wanshura, 43–574.

But defendant may show that plaintiff has brought actions and obtained judgments against others for causing the same habitual intoxication, not by way of defense or mitigation of damages, but to show the actual extent of the damage caused by defendant's own act, and that he was not responsible for the entire damage resulting from such intoxication: Ibid.; Ennis v. Shiley, 47–552; Engleken v. Webber, 47-558.

The fact that plaintiff has brought another action against another person covering injuries caused in the same manner, and during the same time, is not a matter which may be shown by way of defense: Ward v. Thompson, 48–588.

While defendant in such action may show that he was only liable for part of the injuries resulting from the intoxication on the ground that plaintiff received compensation in other suits for injuries from the same intoxication, he should prove that such sales for which the other suits were brought were made during the same time as those sued for during the pending action, and if defendant desires to rely upon such partial defense, it is questionable whether he should not set it up in his answer; Jackson v. Noble, 54–641.

Where the intoxication causing the damages sued for was produced on some occasions by defendant and at other times by others, the defendant should only be held liable for the damages to which he contributed, and the difficulty of thus apportioning the damages will not render him liable for the whole: Huggins v. Kavanagh, 52–368.

If the damage is the proximate result of a particular intoxication, all parties contributing thereto are jointly liable, but not if it is the result of a besotted condition: Hitchner v. Ehlers, 44–40.

Where a wife sued for damages from the suicide of her husband caused by intoxication, held, that if the act resulted from the particular intoxication during which it was committed, all persons who contributed to such intoxication by selling him liquor were jointly liable for the injuries she sustained in her means of support, but if it resulted not alone from that particular intoxication but from a besotted condition, those contributing to such besotted condition but not to the immediate intoxication would not be jointly liable with those who did contribute to such particular intoxication: Ibid.

Where plaintiff did not rely on or prove any specific act or acts of intoxication, but it appeared that her husband had been in the habit of becoming intoxicated for many years, procuring liquor from any person who would let him have it, held, that the several persons who had sold him liquor could not be considered as joint wrong-doers, but that each was severally liable for the damage caused by his own acts: Richmond v. Shickler, 57–486.

Persons who have contributed to habitual intoxication are not to be held responsible as joint wrong-doers, but each is liable for the part of the damages caused by his acts: Ennis v. Shiley, 47–552; Flint v. Gauer, 66–696.

Plaintiff contributing to injury: The wife cannot recover damages where she has herself contributed to her husband's intoxication: Engleken v. Hilger, 43–563; Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43–580.

The fact that during the period covered by the wife's action for damages for sale of intoxicating liquors to her husband she herself bought liquors for him will not be such contribution on her part to the injury as to defeat her recovery if she had reason to believe that she would thereby keep him away from saloons and prevent the injuries for which she sues: Ward v. Thompson, 48–588.

In such case the fact that the wife has contributed to the condition of the husband by at times giving him permits to buy liquor will not absolutely defeat her recovery. Such connivance or assent will only defeat recovery for damages resulting from or caused by intoxication contributed to or connived at by her: Rafferty v. Buckman, 46–195.

The fact that the wife gives to the husband at his request sums of money belonging to him and placed by him in her custody, with knowledge on her part that portions thereof will be used for the purpose of procuring intoxicating liquors, will not necessarily constitute a voluntary contribution on her part to the intoxication of her husband, so as to defeat her right of recovering damages against the persons causing such intoxication: Huff v. Aultman, 69–71.

Evidence: In an action by the wife for damages for a sale of intoxicating liquors to her husband, the burden of proof is upon plaintiff to establish the fact that defendant sold liquor to the husband, and also that such liquor produced or contributed to produce the intoxication complained of: Macleod v. Geyer, 53-615.

In an action by the wife, held not error to allow the husband as a witness to state about how much money he had paid defendant for liquor, such fact being material as tending to show the injury to plaintiff's means of support, but not otherwise: Ward v. Thompson, 48–588.

Held, that in such cases indictments against defendant and convictions thereon for illegal sales of intoxicating liquors were not admissible in evidence against defendant, at least where it was not shown that the indictments were founded upon unlawful sales made to plaintiff's husband: Applegate v. Weinbrenner, 67–235.

Evidence of an assault committed upon the wife by the husband, held not admissible in an action by the wife against defendant for the recovery of damages for illegal sale of liquors to the husband, it not appearing that at the time of the assault the husband was intoxicated, nor that his intoxication, if any, was contributed to by defendant: Ibid.

The evidence necessary or competent to establish the injury and its extent is not confined within the bounds admissible to establish a common-law tort: Dunlavey v. Watson, 38-398.

Evidence as to the age, condition, circumstances, etc., of the husband, his habits of industry and his ability to support his wife before and after the acts complained of, may be received: Ibid.

It is error, in an action by the wife, to allow evidence as to number, age, etc., of children: Huggins v. Kavanagh, 52-368; Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56-11.

The wife may show the number and ages of her children belonging to her family if she also shows that defendant had knowledge of the facts, and that they were in danger of being injured or compelled to leave home, and after such knowledge wantonly continued to sell liquor to the husband, by reason of which the right of action arose, such evidence being pertinent to the question of exemplary, not of actual, damages: Ward v. Thompson, 48-588.

Life tables: It is doubtful whether the Carlisle life tables are admissible as evidence in determining the amount of damages in such an action, the measure of actual damage being the amount which would, from a pecuniary point of view, compensate the wife for the injury: Rafferty v. Buckman, 46-195.

SEC. 2419. Transportation to one not holding permit. If any express or railway company, or any common carrier, or person, or any one as the agent or employe thereof, shall transport or convey to any person within this state any intoxicating liquors, without first having been furnished with a certificate from the clerk of the court issuing the permit, showing that the consignee is a permit holder and authorized to sell liquors in the county to which the shipment is made, such company, common carrier, person, agent or employe thereof, shall, upon conviction, be fined in the sum of one hundred dollars for each offense and pay the costs of prosecution, including a reasonable attorney's fee to be taxed by the court. The offense herein created shall be held committed and complete and to have been committed in any county in the state in which the liquors are received for transportation, through which they are transported, or in which they are delivered. The defendant in a prosecution under this section may show by a preponderance of the evidence as a defense that the character, circumstances and contents of the shipment were not known to him, or that the person to whom the shipment was made had complied with the provisions of this chapter relating to the mulct tax. [22 G. A., ch. 73, § 6; 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 10; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 14; C. '73, § 1553; R., § 1580.]

A prior similar provision was held unconstitutional so far as it applied to the bringing of liquor from another state because an interference with interstate commerce: Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 125 U. S., 465.

The statute does not forbid the transportation of liquors out of the state, but it does forbid the manufacture of liquors for purposes other than for sale according to the provisions of the statute. This construction does not render the statute unconstitutional as an interference with interstate commerce: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72-348.

A person employed by a wholesale dealer, not as a mere servant, but as the owner of means of transportation, to deliver liquor sold to purchasers, is a carrier within the meaning of this section: State v. Campbell, 76-122.

The right to bring liquor into the state in pursuance of interstate commerce involves also the right to sell the same in original packages: Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S., 100. As to selling in original packages, see notes to § 2382.

Liquors which are in the hands of the carrier for transportation into the state cease to be exempt from seizure, as a part of interstate commerce, when they are placed by the carrier in its warehouse for delivery to consignee: State v. Creeden, 78-556.

Where it appears that a railway agent received at the railway platform and put into the depot a package which he had reasonable grounds to believe contained intoxicating liquor not shipped according to law, held, that he was properly convicted under this section: State v. Rhodes, 90-496.

Under the statute of the United States liquor shipped from another state becomes subject to state legislation with reference to the keeping and sale of intoxicating liquor the moment it crosses the boundary and enters the state: Ibid.

SEC. 2420. False statements. If any person, for the purpose of procuring the shipment, transportation or conveyance of any intoxicating liquors within this state, shall make to any company, corporation or common carrier, or to any agent thereof, or other person, any false statements as to the character or contents of any box, barrel or other vessel or package containing such liquors; or shall refuse to give correct and truthful information as to the contents of any such box, barrel or other vessel or package so sought to be transported or conveyed; or shall falsely mark, brand or label such box, barrel or other vessel or package in order to conceal the fact that the same contains intoxicating liquors, for the purposes aforesaid; or shall by any device or concealment procure or attempt to procure the conveyance or transportation of such liquors as herein prohibited, he shall, upon conviction, be fined for each offense one hundred dollars and costs of prosecution, and the costs shall include a reasonable attorney fee to be taxed by the court, which shall be paid into the county fund, and be committed to the county jail until such fine and costs are paid. Any peace officer of the county under process or warrant to him directed shall have the right to open any box, barrel or other vessel or package for examination, if he has reasonable ground for believing that it contains intoxicating liquors, either before or while the same is being so transported or conveyed. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 11.]

SEC. 2421. Packages labeled. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier or other person to transport or convey by any means, within this state, any intoxicating liquors, unless the vessel or other package containing such liquors shall be plainly and correctly labeled or marked, showing the quantity and kind of liquors contained therein, as well as the name of the party to whom they are to be delivered. And no person shall be authorized to receive or keep such liquors unless the same be marked or labeled as herein required. The violation of any provision of this section by any common carrier, or any agent or employe of such carrier, or by any other person, shall be punished the same as provided in the second preceding section, and liquors conveyed or transported or delivered without being marked or labeled as herein required, whether in the hands of the carrier or some one to whom they shall have been delivered, shall be subject to seizure and condemnation, as liquors kept for illegal sale. [22 G. A., ch. 73, § 7.]

SEC. 2422. Lien of judgments—liability of sureties—costs—evidence. For all fines and costs assessed or judgments rendered of any kind against any person for a violation of any provision of this chapter, or costs paid by the county on account of such violation, the personal and real property, whether exempt or not, except the homestead, as well as the premises and property, personal and real, occupied and used for the purpose, with the knowledge of the owner or his agent, by the person manufacturing, selling, giving, contrary to the provisions of this chapter, or keeping with intent to sell intoxicating liquors contrary to law, shall be liable, and the same shall be a lien on such real estate until paid. And where any one is required under the provisions of this chapter to give a bond, the principals and sureties shall be jointly and severally liable for all civil damages and costs which may be adjudged against the principal for any violation of any of the provisions of this chapter. Costs paid by the county for the prosecution of actions or proceedings, civil or criminal, under this chapter, as well as the fines inflicted or judgments recovered, may be enforced against the property upon which the lien attaches by execution, or by action against the owner of the property to subject it to the payment thereof. In actions under this section, evidence of the general reputation of the place kept shall be admissible on the question of knowledge of the owner, and written notice given him or his agent by any citizen of the county shall be sufficient to charge him with the same. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 12; C. '73, §§ 1552, 1558; R., § 1579.]

The right to make the judgment a lien upon the property where the business is carried on rests in the exercise of the police power and not in the right of eminent domain: Polk County v. Hierb, 37–361.

Property can only be made liable after it has been established in a competent court by a legal jury that it was used for the illegal purpose with the knowledge or consent of the owner, and the statute does not, therefore, authorize the taking of private property without a trial: Ibid.

That under this section a party is liable to a pecuniary forfeiture does not constitute the act or omission so punished a crime. This section is not an ex post facto law, nor does it impair vested rights: Ibid.

Method of proceeding: The party injured by the illegal sale may bring action against the seller alone, and by subsequent action against the owner enforce the judgment previously obtained; or may join the seller and the owner of the building in the same action: La France v. Krayer, 42–143.

An action to make a fine imposed in a contempt proceeding for violation of an injunction a lien upon the premises may properly be brought by a citizen under § 2406: Cameron v. Kapinos, 89-561.

Such action may be maintained although the owner of the real estate was not a party to the injunction or contempt proceedings if the illegal use was with the owner's knowledge: Ibid.

The action for damages against the person selling may be joined with that against the person owning the premises in which sales are made and against which it is sought to have the judgment established as a lien: Loan v. Hiney, 53-89.

If a joint action is brought, either party is entitled to a jury trial on the question of the illegal sale and the damages, and the owner is entitled to a jury trial also on the question as to whether such use of the premises was with his consent and knowledge: Ibid.

Where plaintiff brought action for damages for sale of intoxicating liquors against three defendants jointly as sellers, and joined with them as defendant the owner of the property in which the business was carried on, and two separate judgments were rendered at separate trials against two sellers respectively, and at a third trial the judgments were made a lien against the property of the owner, held, that on appeal of the owner from final judgment against him, he could not set up the fact of recovery of the former judgment against another one of the sellers by default: Putney v. O'Brien, 53-117.

In such case, held, that plaintiff might elect which judgment she would enforce and the other would be treated as satisfied: Ibid.

Where it is sought to subject property alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed for the purpose of evading the lien of a judgment to the payment of the same, the action against the grantee is equitable in its nature, and the defendant cannot demand a jury trial: Buckham v. Grape, 65-535.

In such an action against the holder of the legal title, who was not a party to the original action in which judgment was recovered, the record of the judgment in the former action may be introduced in evidence for the purpose of showing that the plaintiff has recovered judgment against the defendant in such former action, but not as evidence of the amount for which the lien should be established, except that in no event can the lien be established for any greater amount: Ibid.

The court establishing the lien of a judgment for illegal sale of liquors against the premises in which the same were sold should ascertain specifically the property upon which the lien shall attach. Such a judgment should not be entered where there is no evidence on the trial showing the title to be in defendant, and that fact is only shown by an affidavit filed after the verdict: Flint v. Gauer, 66-696.

The court should specifically ascertain and fix the property upon which the lien shall attach: Engleken v. Webber, 47-558, 561.

In a proceeding to have a judgment for fine and costs decreed a lien, under this section, it is not necessery to show that the indictment and judgment of conviction describe the premises sought to be charged. Parol evidence is admissible to identify the place where the nuisance is actually kept: State v. Manatt, 84-621.

The statute does not contemplate that judgment against the wrong-doer may be split up and a part only charged as a lien upon the premises. It is sufficient that the landlord furnished the liquor seller, in part, the means of committing the injury: Arnold v. Barkalow, 73-183.

Knowledge of owner: A judgment in a proceeding to recover penalties for illegal sales to minors or intoxicated persons is not a lien upon the premises where such sales were made, unless the owner had knowledge of and consented to illegal sales of that character. His knowledge of and consent to sales without permit would not be sufficient. The owner should be shown to have had knowledge of and to have consented to the unlawful act on account of which the judgment was recovered: Cobleigh v. McBride, 45-116; Meyers v. Kirt, 64-27.

Both knowledge and assent, on the part of the owner of the premises unlawfully used, must be shown to render them subject to the lien of the judgment: Meyers v. Kirt, 57-421.

Facts in a particular case held to show knowledge and assent on the part of the owner of the building: Putney v. O'Brien, 53-117.

The consent of the owner need not be shown by any positive or affirmative act, but may be inferred from circumstances and knowledge of the illegal sales under such conditions as properly to call forth a protest, and a failure to make any objection: Loan v. Etzel, 62-429.

Knowledge and consent of the owner of the property cannot be inferred from circumstances tending to show knowledge alone: Cox v. Newkirk, 73-42.

In a particular case, held, that there was not such knowledge on the part of the owner as to render the premises liable for the costs of a proceeding for the abatement of a nuisance: Morgan v. Koestner, 83-134.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence was sufficient to show that a wife who owned the property in which a saloon was openly and notoriously kept was chargeable through her husband, who acted as her agent in the management of the property, with a knowledge of its improper use, so as to render it liable under the provisions of this section: Johnson v. Grimminger, 83-10.

Where the owner by reason of absence from the state was not aware of the improper use being made of his building, and so soon as he became aware of such use removed the tenant, held, that he was not liable for costs: Drake v. Kingsbaker, 72-441.

The provisions of this section permitting evidence of the reputation of the place are not applicable to prosecutions for maintaining a nuisance under § 2384: State v. Fleming, 86-294.

The knowledge to which the owner is entitled may be shown by proving the general reputation of the place or by proving that a written notice by any citizen of the county was given to him or his agent. The propery is only liable for fines, costs and judgments assessed or rendered for violations of the law occurring after the owner is chargeable with knowledge that the property is being used for prohibited purposes: Judge v. O'Connor, 74-166.

It is sufficient, in order to make out a prima facie case, to show that the unlawful use was with the knowledge of the owner. If, notwithstanding that fact, the property is not liable, the burden of showing it is on the owner: Ibid.; Judge v. Flournoy, 74-164.

When the property of one not a party to the suit is seized on process issued on a judgment on the ground that the property was used with the knowledge of the owner for purposes in violation of statute, the officer makes such seizure at his peril, but is protected if he can show that the property has been so used that under the law it is liable: Snedaker v. Jones, 74-235.

The effect of this section is to subject the property to a judgment when the unlawful act or business on which it was based was done and carried on with the knowledge or consent of the owner or his agent. And if the whole business is in violation of law the property will be subject to judgment, without knowledge on the part of the owner of the particular illegal sale causing the damage: Wing v. Benham, 76-17.

There is no liability of the landlord in civil damages for the sale of intoxicating liquors on premises owned by him other than the subjection of his property to the payment of the judgment: McVey v. Manatt, 80-132.

In a proceeding to subject the property of a landlord to the lien of a judgment for civil damages, if he resists the relief asked costs may be taxed against him personally, although he is not liable to personal judgment for damages: Ibid.

Lien attaches when; conveyance subject to: A purchaser of the property occupied and used for purposes of illegal sale, who purchases pending an action against the seller and the owner, in which it is sought to make any judgment recovered a lien upon the property, takes subject to the lien of any such judgment. The doctrine of lis pendens applies: O'Brien v. Putney, 55-292.

The lien of the judgment upon the premises attaches only on the rendition thereof, and is subordinate to that of a mortgage previously executed: Goodenough v. McCoid, 44-659.

Judgments for fines rendered in justice courts under this section do not become liens on real estate until a transcript of the judgment is certified and filed in the office of the clerk of the district court: State v. McCulloch, 77-450.

Where a conveyance of property on which it is sought to establish a lien is made pending the action, that fact is no defense for the original owner, against whom a lien is sought to be established: Myers v. Kirt, 68-124.

Where a party takes a deed or mortgage of property, after an action is begun against the owner for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors on the premises, the grantee or mortgagee takes the same subject to any judgment which may be rendered against the owner in the action: McClure v. Braniff, 75-38.

The homestead: Where a homestead owned by a husband is used by him for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, it is liable for fines, costs and judgments rendered against him for such illegal sale, and the fact that the unlawful use is without the consent of the wife will not exempt the homestead from such liability, when the husband is owner: Ibid.

The homestead when not used for the purpose of the violation of the liquor law is exempt from judgment therefor; but when used or kept for such purpose, with the consent of the owner, it is subject to such judgment: Arnold v. Gotshall, 71-572.

The fact that a portion of the homestead is illegally used for the sale of intoxicating liquors will not subject it to sale under judgment in favor of a creditor: Groneweg v. Beck, 62 N.W., 31.

Extent of lien: Where it appeared that no portion of the premises was occupied as a homestead, held, that the lien for costs should attach to the whole house and not merely to the portion of the cellar in which the liquors were illegally kept for sale: Cameron v. Gminder, 89-298.

SEC. 2423. Payments—contracts—negotiable paper. All payments or compensation for intoxicating liquor sold in violation of this chapter, whether such payments or compensation be in money or anything else whatsoever, shall be held to have been received in violation of law, and to have been received upon a valid promise and agreement of the receiver to pay on demand to the person furnishing such consideration the amount of said money, or the just value of such other thing. All sales, transfers, liens and securities of every kind which either in whole or in part shall have been made for or on account of intoxicating liquors sold in violation of this chapter shall be null and void against all persons, and no rights of any kind shall be acquired thereby. No action shall be maintained for intoxicating liquors or the value thereof, sold in any other state or country, contrary to the law of said state or country, or with intent to enable any person to violate any provision of this chapter, nor shall any action be maintained for the recovery or possession of any intoxicating liquor, or the value thereof, except in cases where persons owning or possessing such liquor with lawful intent may have been illegally deprived of the same. Nothing, however, in this section shall affect in any way negotiable paper in the hands of holders thereof in good faith for valuable consideration, without notice of any illegality in its inception or transfer, or the holders of land or other property who may have taken the same in good faith, without notice of any defect in the title of the person from whom the same was taken, growing out of a violation of the provisions of this chapter. [C. '73, § 1550; R., § 1571.]

Recovery of payments: The statutory provision as to recovery of money paid for intoxicating liquors is not unconstitutional on account of being in any way a regulation or restriction of commerce among the states: Connolly v. Scarr, 72–223.

A claim for money paid for intoxicating liquors may be set up by way of counterclaim in an action on account: Tolman v. Johnson, 43–127.

In an action by way of counterclaim by such buyer against the seller for previous payments made for such illegal sales, held, that seller was not entitled to offset as against the buyer's counterclaim the value of kegs, packages, etc., not returned by the seller to the buyer in accordance with the terms of the contract of sale: Gipps Brewing Co. v. De France, 91–108.

A manufacturer not being allowed to sell without permit, even to one having such permit, held, that money paid on such sale might be recovered back: Becker v. Betten, 39–668.

The giving of a note for liquors does not constitute payment, even when it has been sold and transferred by the payee, and until it is actually paid the maker cannot maintain an action for the amount thereof: Carlin v. Heller, 34–256.

The action to recover money paid will not be barred until five years from time of payment: Woodward v. Squires, 41–677.

One who has exchanged property for liquors sold in violation of law may, instead of suing upon a promise to pay therefor, treat the transaction as void and sue for the value of the property; and if accord and satisfaction is then set up as a defense, he may, in reply, set up the illegal nature of the transaction: Smith v. Grable, 14–429.

The action to recover money paid is civil, and not quasi-criminal in character: Woodward v. Squires, 39–435.

A party who has made payments for illegal sales of liquors and is entitled to recover back the purchase money paid, being garnished for the indebtedness thereupon arising to him from the person to whom the payments were made, it must be shown, in order to warrant judgment against him as garnishee, that the liquors were intoxicating and sold in violation of law: Church v. Simpson, 25–408.

The provisions for recovery of money paid do not apply to a non-resident selling liquor without permit to a registered pharmacist for lawful purposes and receiving payment therefor in another state: Kohn v. Melcher, 29 Fed., 433.

An agent who sells intoxicating liquors in violation of law, but who does not receive the money or purchase price, is not liable for the amount of the purchase price, at the suit of the purchaser: Schober v. Rosenfield, 75–455.

An action cannot be maintained for the recovery of money paid for intoxicating liquors sold in violation of law, without first making demand for the money thus paid: Ibid.

The claim for money paid is assignable: Sellers v. Arie, 68 N.W., 814.

Sales, securities, etc., void: Under the provision with reference to sales, securities, etc., being void, held, that the word securities includes promissory notes: Taylor v. Pickett, 52–467.

A promissory note given in part for intoxicating liquors is wholly void: Ibid.; Braitch v. Guelick, 37–212.

A note, part consideration of which is the sale of intoxicating liquors, is entirely void: Koster v. Seney, 68 N. W., 824.

But where a note was given for the amount due on an account, some of the items of which were legal and others illegal as being for intoxicating liquors, and the account was continued and payments afterwards made on accounts generally, held, that the note being void, the legal items of account included therein should be regarded as still due on account and the subsequent payments applied thereto: Quigley v. Duffey, 52–610.

An assignment of a contract against a third person, made for intoxicating liquors sold in violation of law, is void, and the assignee cannot recover against such third person thereon: Davis v. Slater, 17–250.

A judgment recovered on a claim founded upon the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors is not void. The defense must be interposed before judgment or it is lost: Smith v. Leddy, 50–112.

A person who has sold another intoxicating liquor in violation of law cannot, on the ground that the sale is void, recover them back in an action of replevin from attaching creditors of his vendee. Being particeps criminis, the law will leave the seller where it finds him: Marienthal v. Shafer, 6–223.

In an action on a note in which defendant pleaded that it was given to him for liquors sold in violation of law, held, that an indictment against him for nuisance committed in the sale of intoxicating liquors was not competent evidence in his behalf: Taylor v. Pickett, 52–467.

In an action to foreclose a mortgage where the defense was that the notes were given for intoxicating liquors sold in violation of law, held, that the burden of proof was on defendant to show the alleged illegality, and having failed to do so, it was unnecessary to decide whether this section is applicable to a case of this kind or not: Ressegieu v. Van Wagenen, 77-351.

In an action on the bond of an agent for the sale of liquors in Iowa on behalf of a principal in Wisconsin, held, that as the agent had no authority to sell under the laws of Iowa, the bond was void: Fred. Miller Brewing Co. v. Stevens, 71 N. W., 186.

Bona fide purchasers: A party claiming the benefit of the provision in such section protecting bona fide holders for value has the burden of showing that he is such holder without notice: Rock Island Nat. Bank v. Nelson, 41-563.

An assignee after maturity is not protected: Barlow v. Scott's Adm'rs, 12-63.

Sale made in another state: A contract for the sale of liquors, made in another state, with the intention of violating the laws of this state, will not be enforced in our courts, although good where made: Davis v. Bronson, 6-410.

Where the contract of sale is made outside of the state, it must, to render the contract void, be made to appear affirmatively that the vendor intended thereby to enable the vendee to violate the laws of this state: Whitlock v. Workman, 15-351.

It must be shown not only that the vendor knew of the laws of this state, but that he made the sale with the intention of enabling the purchaser to violate them: Second Nat. Bank v. Curren, 36-555.

But while mere knowledge on the part of the vendor that the purchaser intends to violate the liquor law of this state may not vitiate the sale, yet it is a fact from which the jury might infer the intent to enable the buyer to violate such law: Tegler v. Shipman, 33-194, 200.

Evidence that one of the partners in the firm making the sale had been in this state before the sale was made and had knowledge of the existence of the law in this state with reference to the suppression of intemperance, held admissible in order to show that he must have known that under the circumstances stated to him the sale of the liquor by the purchaser in Iowa would be illegal: Rindskoff v. Curran, 34-325.

A sale of intoxicating liquors in violation of law, made in this state by an agent of a firm in another state, is void: Second Nat. Bank v. Curren, 36-555; Taylor v. Pickett, 52-467; Schuenfeldt v. Junkermann, 20 Fed., 357.

If the order for liquor is taken in this state by such agent, but subject to the approval or disapproval of his principal, the sale will be held as made in the state where the principal resides, and will be enforceable in Iowa unless made with intent to violate its laws: Tegler v. Shipman, 33-194; Schuenfeldt v. Junkermann, 20 Fed., 357.

Where a sale was made in another state, but notes in payment of the purchase money were executed in Iowa and forwarded to the seller, held, that the place where the contract and delivery was made, and not the place where the notes were executed, was the place of contract: Whitlock v. Workman, 15-351.

Where liquors are ordered by mail by a resident of one state, the contract is deemed made in the place where the order is received and the goods delivered to the carrier for shipment; and the same rule applies to a contract taken by an agent at the place of residence of the buyer, but subject to the approval of the principal in another state from which the goods are to be shipped in case of the approval of the contract: Engs v. Priest, 65-232.

Where it appears that the contract for sale of liquor was made in Iowa it will be presumed that payment therefor was intended to be made and was afterwards made at the place where the contract was entered into: Connolly v. Scarr, 72-223.

An order or conditional agreement for liquor to be executed and filled in another state is not a contract in violation of the laws of Iowa: Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. De France, 90-395.

If the sale in pursuance of which the money is paid was made in another state, the money paid cannot be recovered although the seller intended to assist the buyer in the violation of the laws of this state. The contract for such a sale would be invalid, but the sale is not in violation of the laws of this state as provided by this section: Wind v. Iler, 61 N. W., 1001.

With reference to sales of liquor sent into Iowa from another state prior to the taking of effect of the act of congress, which subjected such commerce to state regulations, this section would not be applicable as it would be an interference with interstate commerce: Ibid. But now see Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Stevens, 71 N. W., 186.

Where the proposition of a seller in another state to the proposed buyer living in Iowa was to furnish beer at certain prices on the track at the city of the buyer's place of business, held, that an acceptance of such a proposition made a contract to be performed in Iowa and therefore illegal, the buyer having no right to engage in the sale of such liquors: Gipps Brewing Co. v. De France, 91-108.

Sales under permits: Where orders were taken in different parts of the state by a firm having authority to sell within a particular county, held, that it would be presumed that the sale was made in that county, and was completed when the orders were taken, unless the contrary was made to appear: Gross v. Scarr, 71-656.

Where orders for liquors sent to a druggist were filled by a third person having a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, and that fact was known to the purchaser, held, that he could not recover from the druggist money paid for liquors the sale of which to him was illegal: Hurlburt v. Fyock, 73-477.

This section refers to sales in violation of the liquor law, and not to illegal sales by pharmacists. The provision is not for the benefit of the vendee: Kohn v. Melcher, 43 Fed., 641.

Property in intoxicating liquors and the recovery thereof: While the commerce in intoxicating liquor as an article of beverage is unlawful, its character as property is not thereby destroyed; and where such liquor was seized on execution for the debt of one not its owner, held, that the owner might recover it by replevin, although it was kept for sale in violation of the statute: Monty v. Arneson, 25–383.

That intoxicating liquors are held for an unlawful purpose is no answer to an indictment for stealing the same: State v. May, 20–305; nor to an action of trespass for destroying them: Turner v. Hitchcock, 20–310.

Where liquor had been seized by an officer under an information which had subsequently been held defective and a return of the liquor ordered, held, that in an action by the owner against such officer to recover damages for a failure to return the property as so ordered, the plaintiff could not recover without proving that he owned and kept the liquor with a lawful intent: Walker v. Shook, 49–264.

In an action against a common carrier to recover the value of intoxicating liquors lost or destroyed by it, it is necessary for plaintiff to prove that he owned or possessed such liquors with lawful intent (overruling Bowen v. Hall, 4–430): Summer v. Cate, 22–585.

Intoxicating liquors cannot be recovered by the owner unless he shows that they were in his possession with lawful intent, and that he was illegally deprived of them: Funk v. Israel, 5–438, 452; and as to action of replevin or trespass against officer seizing liquors, see notes to §§ 2382 and 2413.

SEC. 2424. Requisites of indictment or information—testimony of purchaser. In any indictment or information under this chapter, it shall not be necessary to set out exactly the kind or quantity of intoxicating liquors manufactured, sold, given in evasion of the statute, or kept for sale, nor the exact time of manufacture, sale, gift or keeping for sale, but proof of the violation by the accused of any provision of this chapter, the substance of which violation is briefly set forth, within the time mentioned in said indictment or information, shall be sufficient to convict such person; nor shall it be necessary in any indictment or information to negative any exceptions contained in the enacting clause or elsewhere, which may be proper ground of defense; and, in any prosecution for a second or subsequent offense, as provided herein, it shall not be requisite to set forth in the indictment or information the record of a former conviction, but it shall be sufficient briefly to allege such conviction; nor shall it be necessary in every case to prove payment in order to prove a sale within the true meaning and intent of this chapter, and the person purchasing any intoxicating liquor sold in violation of this chapter shall in all cases be a competent witness to prove such sale. [C.'73, § 1549; R., § 1569.]

Indictment or information: An information charging defendant with selling intoxicating liquors is sufficient: Foreman v. Hunter, 59–550.

It is not necessary in an indictment for the illegal sale to specify the kind of liquor sold: State v. Whalen, 54–753.

However, if the kind of liquor is specified it must be proven as charged: State v. Hesner, 55–494.

An information charging defendant with selling, etc., is sufficient without stating the method in which the sale was accomplished. A selling committed in any of the different methods referred to by statute constitutes one and the same offense: Devine v. State, 4–443.

Any information for the offense of illegal sales should charge that defendant sold, etc., to some person, giving the name, if known: State v. Allen, 32–491.

An indictment charging defendant with keeping for sale and selling intoxicating liquors is good without the allegation that they were so kept and sold in violation of law: State v. Jordan, 39–387.

Where the information charges the sales of liquor to different persons named, on certain dates, the jury may convict on proof of sales to any of the persons named at any time within the statute of limitation and prior to the filing of the information: State v. Johnson, 69–623.

Negativing exceptions: For applications of the general principle that it is not necessary in the indictment to negative exceptions, but that they must be proved by way of defense, see State v. Becker, 30–438; State v. Miller, 53–84; State v. Curley, 33–359; State v. Stapp, 29–551; State v. Collins, 11–141; State v. Benecke, 9–203.

Subsequent convictions: Before defendant can be found guilty of the offense of a second sale he must be charged, convicted and fined for the first offense of selling: State v. Leis, 11–416.

Under an information charging a second or third offense and a former conviction, defendant may be found guilty of a first offense: State v. Ensley, 10–149; State v. Gaffeny, 66–262.

In such case the offense of a first sale may be regarded as included in the offense of a second sale charged in the indictment: Ibid.

Purchaser as witness: The purchaser is a competent witness to prove the illegal sale: Wakeman v. Chambers, 69–169; Sterling v. Jugenheimer, 69–210.

SEC. 2425. Several counts—second conviction. Informations or indictments under this chapter may allege any number of violations of its provisions by the same party, but the several charges must be set out in separate counts, and the accused may be convicted and punished upon each one as on separate informations or indictments, and a separate judgment shall be rendered on each count under which there is a finding of guilty. The second or subsequent convictions provided for in this chapter shall be convictions on separate informations or indictments, and, unless shown in the information or indictment, the charge shall be held to be for a first offense. [23 G. A., ch. 35, § 12; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 14; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 10; 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 7; C.'73, § 1540; R., § 1562; C.'51, § 930–1.]

Any number of violations may be charged in separate counts and a separate conviction had on each: Walters v. State, 5–507.

Under an ordinance providing a punishment for the sale of spiritous, vinous or malt liquors not prohibited by statute, held, that more than one offense might be included in the same complaint: Jackson v. Boyd, 53–536.

But the first and second, or second and third, offenses cannot be charged in the same indictment or information: State v. Leis, 11–416.

The separate counts should show that the offense charged in each is different from those charged in the others, and where a number of counts were identical in language so that the charge in each would be proven by the same evidence, which would establish that alleged in any of the others, held, that a demurrer to the information should have been sustained, or the state should have been restricted in the introduction of evidence to such as was intended to sustain a single sale: State v. Van Haltschuherr, 72–541.

An attorney entitled to recover the fee provided by § 2428 can recover but one such fee for each prosecution, although several counts for different offenses are embraced in the same information or indictment: Schulte v. Keokuk County, 74–292.

Where an information for selling intoxicating liquors contained several counts and defendant was tried before a justice of the peace and found guilty on the first count, held, that by legal inference he was acquitted on the other counts, and upon an appeal to the district court could only be tried on the first count: State v. Severson, 79–750.

SEC. 2426. Termination of lease. Upon a violation of any provision of this chapter committed upon real estate occupied by a tenant, his agent, servant, clerk, employe or any one claiming under him, the landlord of such premises, by himself or agent, within thirty days after a judgment therefor is entered of record in any case, civil or criminal, may, in writing, notify such agent, tenant, or the person in possession of said leased premises, to the effect that he has terminated such lease and demands possession thereof within three days after the giving of such notice, and, after the expiration of said three days, may recover possession thereof in an action of forcible entry and detainer, without further notice to quit, upon proof of the record of such judgment and of the giving of such notice, but such termination of the lease shall not divest the property of any lien which has attached by reason of said judgment. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 5; 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 8.]

SEC. 2427. Evidence of illegal selling or keeping—license. In all actions, prosecutions and proceedings under the provisions of this chapter, proof of the actual manufacture, sale or gift in evasion of the statute of intoxicating liquors by a person not authorized to manufacture, sell or give the same shall be presumptive evidence of illegal manufacture or sale, and the finding of intoxicating liquors in the possession of one not legally authorized to sell or use the same, except in a private dwelling-house which does not include or is not used in connection with a tavern, public eating house, restaurant, grocery, or other place of public resort, or the finding of the same in unusual quantities in a private dwelling-house or its dependencies of any person keeping a tavern, public eating house, grocery, or other place of public resort, shall be presumptive evidence that such liquors are kept for illegal sale. The fact that any person not authorized to keep for sale and to sell intoxicating liquors for lawful purposes, engaged in any kind of business, has or keeps posted in or about his place of business a receipt or stamp showing payment of the special tax levied under the laws of the United States upon the business of selling distilled, malt or fermented liquors, or shall have paid such special tax for the sale of such liquors in this state, shall be presumptive evidence that the person owning or controlling such receipt or stamp, or having paid such special tax, is engaged in keeping for sale or selling intoxicating liquors contrary to the provisions of this chapter. [21 G. A., ch. 66, § 8; 21 G. A., ch. 113, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 11; C.'73, § 1542; R., § 1583.]

Evidence: On proof of the sale of intoxicating liquors in defendant's place of business, the burden is upon him to prove that the sales were lawful: State v. Cloughly, 73-626.

In a prosecution for the illegal sale it is proper to ask a witness whether he purchased such liquor of defendant and whether he knows of defendant selling such liquor to any one. It is also proper to ask a witness what defendant's business was: State v. Roben, 39-424.

The testimony of a witness in a prosecution for illegal sale that he bought and drank in defendant's saloon what, in his opinion, was whisky, held not incompetent as being merely an opinion. A man who resorts to a saloon for intoxicating liquors may be presumed to be qualified to express an opinion as to the liquor supplied him: State v. Miller, 53-84.

In a prosecution for the illegal sale of liquors, against a party holding a permit, the fact of sales being made not being questioned, held, that the burden of proof was upon defendant to show that the sales were for authorized purposes, and as no such evidence was offered, it would be presumed that the sales were unlawful: State v. Kriechbaum, 81-633.

The provision that the finding, etc., shall be presumptive evidence, etc., is not unconstitutional: Santo v. State, 2-165, 214. But it would seem that such presumption would not attach to liquor in transitu, and it is doubtful whether it may be made except upon the trial of an indictment or information. In an action against a carrier for damages for the loss of liquor delivered to it for transportation, held, that the carrier could not set up as a defense that the keeping of such liquor was unlawful: Bowen v. Hale; 4-430; but see Sommer v. Cate, in notes to § 2423.

An instruction that the fact that liquors are kept by a person not legally authorized to make sales and not in a private dwelling house is presumptive evidence of keeping for illegal sale, held proper, although defendant was a registered pharmacist and entitled at the time, by law, to keep liquors for use in his business, that fact being properly explained in another portion of the charge: State v. Shank, 79-47.

Held, also, that it was proper for the jury to consider the quantity of liquor kept by defendant in connection with the legitimate demands of his business in determining whether or not such liquors were kept for unlawful purposes: Ibid.

Instruction in a particular case with reference to the presumption from the finding of liquors, held correct: State v. Illsley, 81-49.

The finding of intoxicating liquors in a room occupied and used by defendant is evidence tending to connect him with the illegal owning and keeping for sale: State v. Hale, 91-367.
