PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION.

This edition of the Code is published under the provisions of Chapter 211 of the Acts of the Twenty-ninth General Assembly as found in the 1902 Supplement to the Code at page three and contains all the matter of the first edition with additional tables.

The committee, under the authority of said act, has caused to be prepared by John R. Carter, editor of the 1902 Supplement, and to be printed with this edition of the Code, a table of corresponding sections, so far as it has been practicable to arrange them, of the Code of 1873, and of the matter contained in the Session Laws from the Fifteenth to the Twenty-sixth General Assemblies inclusive, with the Code of 1897; also a table of cases giving, in alphabetical order under the name of plaintiff only, all the Iowa cases found among the annotations of the Code of 1897 and cited by reference only to the Northwestern Reporter, showing the volume and page where found in the official reports; also a table giving the sections and parts of the Code of 1897 which have been amended or repealed by the Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth General Assemblies, with the proper references.

These tables have been inserted immediately following the table of corresponding sections as printed in the first edition of the Code of 1897.

PREFACE.

The Extra Session of the First General Assembly of the State of Iowa enacted a law, approved January 25, 1848, appointing Charles Mason of Des Moines County, Wm. G. Woodward of Muscatine County and Stephen Hempstead of Dubuque County, a committee "to draft, revise and prepare a code of laws for the State of Iowa." This committee duly made report, and the Code of 1851 was enacted.

In 1857 the new constitution was adopted and the Seventh General Assembly, at the beginning of the session, passed a joint resolution appointing Wm. Smith of Linn County, W. T. Barker of Dubuque County and Chas. Ben Darwin of Des Moines County, "commissioners to prepare and report to the judiciary committee of the two houses a code of civil and criminal procedure, and such changes as may seem necessary to harmonize existing laws and adapt them to the new constitution, and to revise and codify the general laws of the state so far as practicable." These commissioners finding it impossible to complete their work during the session, a law was enacted directing them to publish their report by the first of September, 1858.

They reported to the Eighth General Assembly, in January, 1860, having construed the statute and joint resolution prescribing their duties to authorize a revision only, saying, "We add nothing to the law—subtract nothing therefrom—make no change of word or phraseology—merely of the arrangement of the existing law." The "Revision of 1860" was then published.

The Thirteenth General Assembly passed a law, approved April 7, 1870, appointing Wm. H. Seevers of Mahaska County, John C. Polley of Clinton County and Wm. J. Knight of Dubuque County, as commissioners "to carefully revise the statutes of this state, rewrite the same, omit obsolete parts, insert all amendments, transpose words and sentences, and when necessary to change the phraseology." The report of this commission was the basis of the Code of 1873 enacted at the adjourned session of the Fourteenth General Assembly.

Since that time there has been no revision or codification of the laws of Iowa, but in 1880 there was issued by Mr. Emlin McClain an annotated compilation including the Code of 1873 and subsequent statutes, and about the same time a similar compilation by the late Judge Wm. E. Miller. These compilations, familiarly known as McClain's and Miller's Code, respectively, were authorized by the general assembly and came into general use throughout the state. A second edition of McClain's Code was issued, and later a supplement.

After the year 1880 the Code of 1873 was practically out of use, although it, with subsequent session laws, was still in the hands of township, county and other officers, as the only means of ascertaining the law.

The Twenty-fourth General Assembly enacted a law appointing a commission to revise the revenue laws, and report to the Twenty-fifth General Assembly, which was done.

It became apparent to the members of the Twenty-fifth General Assembly that the laws could not be revised piecemeal, and that a general revision and codification of all the laws was necessary. A bill was passed providing for the appointment of a commission of five persons, "to carefully revise and codify the laws, rewrite the same and divide them into appropriate parts and arrange them into titles, chapters and sections, omit all parts repealed or obsolete, insert all amendments to make the laws complete, transpose words and sentences, arrange the same into sections or paragraphs, number them, change the phraseology and make any and all alterations necessary to improve, systematize, harmonize and make the laws clear and intelligible."

This commission consisted of Emlin McClain, appointed by the Senate, John Y. Stone and Charles Baker, appointed by the House, and H. S. Winslow and H. F. Dale, appointed by the Supreme Court.

The commission presented to the general assembly a "Proposed Code" with an "Explanatory Report." The Twenty-sixth General Assembly, at its regular session, in addition to its ordinary work entered upon the consideration of revision and codification; but at the end of the customary period found itself unable to complete the work, and a concurrent resolution was adopted setting forth the difficulties and labor involved, that the value of the work would depend upon the care exercised, that its importance demanded ample time for thorough consideration, that it was deemed advisable to secure the benefit of the knowledge, experience and work of members of the Twenty-sixth General Assembly, and that the public interests required that the Code should be adopted and published at as early a date as possible.

In December, 1896, Gov. F. M. Drake issued a call for an Extra Session, to convene January 19, 1897, for the purpose of making necessary appropriations for public buildings destroyed by casualty, and of completing the revision and codification of the laws. In obedience to the call of the Gov ernor, the Twenty-sixth General Assembly convened in Extra Session on that date and took up the work which had been laid down at the adjournment of the regular session. As the work progressed, it was found to be more arduous and difficult than had been at first supposed; that many changes of great importance were deemed necessary to be made in the laws for the purpose of adapting them to the changed conditions and interests of the people of the state, and of bringing about many needed reforms; therefore the session was necessarily extended until the eleventh day of May, 1897, when a recess was taken until July 1, 1897. The General Assembly finally adjourned July 2, 1897, the laws under the constitution taking effect ninety days thereafter.

When the bill for the appointment of the commission to revise and codify the laws was under consideration in the Twenty-fifth General Assembly, it was proposed by its author and others that the state should, when the work of revision was completed, publish and sell, at a moderate price, a complete annotated code.

Toward the close of the Extra Session a concurrent resolution was adopted providing for the appointment of a joint committee of five to investigate the subject and report a bill for annotating, editing, publishing and distributing the Code. L. A. Ellis and Jas. H. Trewin, of the Senate, H. K. Evans, C. C. Dowell and W. I. Hayes, of the House, composed this committee, and made an exhaustive report recommending the passage of the bill known as Substitute for Senate File No. 1, which was enacted substantially as reported, and is printed in this Code under the heading, "Provisions Relating to the Code and Subsequent Statutes."

Under this law, Mr. E. C. Ebersole, having especial qualifications for the work, was elected editor by the general assembly. Jas. H. Trewin and Lyman A. Ellis were elected by the Senate, and Parley Finch, W. W. Cornwall and John T. P. Power by the House, as Code Supervising Committee, to have general supervision of the entire work of editing, annotating and publishing the Code.

The editor and committee immediately entered upon the discharge of their duties. The editor first carefully read the laws, correcting punctuation and all manifest errors. An accurate and exhaustive index being of paramount importance, the committee relieved him from all other duties and for more than two months he labored incessantly and has produced an index which it is thought will meet all requirements.

Mrs. C. A. Neidig and Miss Capitola Mardis, clerk of the committee, read the proofs by the enrolled bills.

By authority of the general assembly, the committee made a contract with Mr. Emlin McClain to annotate the Code—his preëminent qualifications for the work being universally recognized. Mr. McClain read the proofs of his annotations.

Although the time allowed for so great an undertaking was very short, and many difficulties were encountered, yet the utmost care has been exercised and the possibility of error reduced to a minimum.

The publication of the Code, including annotations, in the manner provided, has reduced the cost to the public from thirteen dollars to five dollars per volume. It will cost the state only about two dollars and fifty cents per volume. The sale to the public is expected ultimately to reimburse the state.

The pages of the Code have been electrotyped and the plates deposited with the Secretary of State, and another edition can be produced for the cost of paper, presswork and binding.

The limits of this note admit of only the briefest mention of the evolution of the laws of Iowa, and not even a summing up of the numerous and weighty reasons for the codification of 1897.

The Code is the result of the best efforts of all connected with its production and is by authority of the Twenty-sixth General Assembly presented to the public in the hope it will be fairly judged and generally approved.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

In turning over my work as editor of the Code, there are many things which I might with propriety say. Some of them have been sufficiently referred to by the members of the Supervising Committee in their prefatory statement, others, of more interest, perhaps, to myself than to the public, I have concluded to leave unsaid. A few matters by way of acknowledgment cannot well be omitted.

The synopsis of the Constitution of the United States, printed in the "Prefix," was taken, substantially, from Hough's American Constitutions. As credit for its use was inadvertently omitted in the proper place, it is given here.

In the preparation of the index. I did not hesitate to avail myself of all the helps and suggestions to be derived from other indexes of substantially the same subject-matter. This I deemed to be my personal privilege, if not, indeed, my public duty. It is nevertheless proper that I should make public acknowledgment of the fact.

As I bid adieu to the work, I have nothing to say by way of apology. Conscious that I have done the very best I could within the allotted time, I am content to submit the results of my labors to the judgment of an intelligent and considerate people.

E. C. EBERSOLE.

TABLE OF CASES.

The following table of cases gives in alphabetical order, under the name of plaintiff only, all of the Iowa cases found among the annotations of the Code of 1897, which are cited by reference only to the Northwestern Reporter. Immediately following the title of the case appears the number of the volume of Iowa Reports in figures, and the page thereof separated with a hyphen, where the case is reported. There are a few cases cited by reference to the Northwestern Reporter, which are not found in any of the official Iowa Reports. These are inserted in the table with reference to the Northwestern Reporter and the words "Not officially reported" in parentheses.

A TABLE

Showing sections and parts of the code of 1897, that have been amended or repealed, and substitute enactments passed, by the Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth, and Twenty-ninth General Assemblies, with a reference to the chapter of the acts of the particular General Assembly where the same occurs.

PROVISIONS

RELATING TO THE CODE AND SUBSEQUENT STATUTES.

SUMMARY.

AN ACT to provide for the annotation, indexing, publication, distribution and sale of the code and statutes hereafter enacted, and the appointment of a supervising committee and the election of an editor, and prescribing their duties.

Be it Enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa:

SECTION 1. Former revisions and codes shall be cited and designated as follows "Code of 1851," "Revision of 1860," "Code of 1873," and the revision and codification passed and adopted at the extra session of the twenty-sixth general assembly, the "Code."

SEC. 2. The twenty-sixth general assembly shall, on or before the third legislative day after the passage of this act and before the day of the adjournment of the extra session thereof, convene in joint session and select by viva voce vote in a non-partisan manner, upon a roll call of the members, an editor of the code, who shall perform the duties hereinafter defined. A joint committee, consisting of two members of the senate and three of the house, shall be elected by the senate and the house, respectively, to have general supervision of the work of annotation, indexing and publication of the code, and the members thereof shall be allowed actual expenses for attending its meetings, which shall be at the capitol, and such committee shall be known and designated as the code supervising committee

SEC. 3. The secretary of state shall, as soon as possible, cause all the enrolled bills comprising the code to be bound by the state binder in such volumes as shall be most convenient, which shall be delivered only to the chairman of the code supervising committee, who shall be responsible therefor, and keep the same safe from fire or loss or damage by other cause, and shall return the same, upon completion of his work, free from interlineation, memoranda, erasure or alteration whatever, except as herein provided.

SEC. 4. The code supervising committee shall cause the code to be annotated, and require the persons employed for that purpose, as hereinafter provided, to classify and cite immediately under each section, giving the names of parties, book and page, all of the decisions of the supreme court of Iowa which may aid in understanding or explaining the same, stating briefly the pertinent points decided; also the decisions of the supreme court of the United States, of the United States circuit court of appeals, and, as far as practicable, of the United States circuit and district courts construing statutes of Iowa.

SEC. 5. For the purpose of accomplishing such annotation so that the work shall be done in time to be published as a part of said code, the code supervising committee shall employ three competent attorneys to annotate said code, the committee designating the titles and parts of the code for the different annotators to be employed upon, so as to keep the printers constantly supplied with copy and accomplish dispatch in the prosecution of the work; the committee to have the authority to employ additional annotators or editorial assistance, stenographers and clerks necessary to complete the work by the time required, and to direct generally the prosecution of the work, in all not to cost to exceed seven thousand five hundred dollars for such annotation.

SEC. 6. The compensation of such persons so employed to make and provide such annotation shall be not to exceed one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars each, and actual railway expenses of meeting and conferring together and with the code supervising committee. It shall be the duty of such persons, so employed to annotate, to proceed immediately to the discharge of their respective duties, to the end that the same be completed on or before the first day of October, 1897. For any failure to properly prosecute their work with diligence, the code supervising committee may discharge such attorney or attorneys and employ others in their stead, and for like reasons may discharge any successor. The said annotators shall be compensated only for the time actually employed, not to exceed ten dollars per day for each calendar day, and their accounts for such service to be sworn to, and then audited and allowed by the code supervising committee and approved by the executive council. Such persons so employed to annotate shall furnish their manuscript typewritten.

SEC. 7. The code supervising committee shall supervise in all things the entire work of editing and annotating the code, and, in case of neglect or inability to act on the part of such editor, said committee may discharge him and employ another editor in his stead, and for like reasons may discharge any successor.

SEC. 8. The editor shall arrange and number consecutively, and in a convenient and suitable manner, sections, subdivisions, titles and parts of the code, and the chapters of each title shall be numbered separately, and he shall cause to be printed in parentheses at the end of each section the numbers of corresponding sections of the code of 1873, the revision of 1860, and the code of 1851, in the order named, and references to session laws so far as practicable.

SEC. 9. He shall prepare suitable catch words to be printed at the beginning of each section in black-faced type; he shall read the proofs; correct all manifest grammatical and clerical errors in the code, and attend to its proper punctuation, but shall not change the meaning thereby; and shall note all such corrections, or changes in punctuation, on the enrolled bills in red ink. He shall sign any corrections, except in punctuation, made by him, with his name, and any unauthorized correction or change made on the enrolled bills by the editor, or any change made by any other person than the editor, shall be deemed a forgery, and punished accordingly

SEC. 10. He shall prepare for publication with the code the rules of the supreme court, with annotations.

SEC. 11. He shall also prepare for publication and publish with the code a prefix thereto, which shall contain the declaration of independence, the constitution of the United States, the statutes of the United States relating to citizenship and naturalization, and those relating to the authentication of statutes, records and the like, the ordinance of 1787 and the articles of compact, the organic law of Michigan, of Wisconsin and of Iowa, and amendments thereto, the act for the admission of Iowa into the Union, the constitution of the state of Iowa, annotated as hereinbefore provided for the code, and this act; and an analysis of the contents and table of abbreviations. He shall also copyright the code of 1897, its indexing, numbering of titles, chapters and sections, annotations, and its entire arrangement and publication, and assign such copyright to the state of Iowa. The editor shall also prepare a suitable, exhaustive and plain index to said code with cross references in the usual manner of indexing statutes and codes of laws, accomplishing, as near as practicable, with extraordinary care and diligence, a perfect index.

SEC. 12. The code supervising committee shall cause said code to be well made of first-class materials, printed and bound in full law sheep in one volume, to be hand-sewed, and in accordance with the best workmanship and methods of publishing law books. The main body of the code, the prefix, index and appendices shall be printed in new, clear cut, plain long primer type, and the annotations in brevier of same quality, double columns, all set solid, on paper of the size as near as may be, to the supplement to the revised statutes of the United States, the leaves to be seven and one-half inches in width by ten and three-quarters in length, the printed matter to be five inches by eight and one-half inches. The state binder shall furnish all the material and do all the work of binding these codes in the manner herein provided for the sum and price not to exceed one dollar a volume. The state printer shall furnish the type and set the same and do all the work of printing the codes in the manner herein provided for the sum and price not to exceed thirty-eight cents a copy or volume; the state to furnish the paper for such codes, and the electrotypes and the work of electrotyping the same.

The state printer shall deliver the type in page forms to the person employed by the code supervising committee to electrotype the same. The code supervising committee shall procure the pages of the code to be electrotyped; the state to furnish the metal and own the electrotypes, which shall be in the custody of the secretary of state and be carefully preserved by him; the bills for electrotyping to be verified and audited and allowed by the code supervising committee and approved by the executive council.

If the printed pages of the code exceed in number two thousand pages, the state printer shall receive pro rata compensation for such excess.

The work must be done to the satisfaction and approval of said code supervising committee, and to commence as soon as matter or copy is furnished, and continue as rapidly as practicable, so that the code of 1897 shall be ready for distribution on or before the first day of October, 1897.

SEC. 13. The editor shall begin to deliver manuscript of the code and annotations to the printer within thirty days from the time of receiving the enrolled bills from the chairman of the supervising committee, and the work of publication, printing and binding the code shall be done as speedily as is consistent with good work, and the whole shall be completed and ready for distribution and sale on or before October 1, 1897.

SEC. 14. The state binder shall deliver one thousand copies to the secretary of state within ten days after receiving the last printed matter, and at the rate of two thousand five hundred per week thereafter until all are completed.

SEC. 15. The editor of the code shall be provided with a stenographer or clerk, whose compensation shall be not to exceed the sum of fifty dollars per month, or the aggregate sum of two hundred and fifty dollars.

SEC. 16. As soon as five hundred copies of the code are printed and bound to the satisfaction of the editor and code supervising committee, the same shall be deposited with the secretary of state, and so on until all are completed, and the secretary of state shall be the custodian thereof, and shall distribute the same as follows: To the governor, all judges of the supreme court and judges of the United States circuit and district courts in Iowa, two copies each; state officers, district and superior courts, members of the twenty-sixth and succeeding general assemblies, the secretary of the senate, clerk of the house, state or territorial libraries in the United States, county officers, mayor of each city or town, justices of the peace, township clerks, public libraries of the state, each one copy; to the state library twenty copies, state university ten copies; to the agricultural college and the state normal school, each two copies; and to each of the other public institutions of the state, one copy. And said code shall be sold to the public generally at the uniform price of not more than five dollars; the price to be fixed by the executive council, and the proceeds of said sale shall be accounted for to the secretary of state and paid into the state treasury.

SEC. 17. For the convenience of distribution, the secretary of state shall deliver to the auditor of each county the requisite number therefor, to be distributed as herein provided, who shall in turn deliver the same to the persons entitled thereto, and take their receipts for the same, and keep a memorandum thereof on file in his office.

SEC. 18. The secretary of state may also deliver to each county auditor such number of copies of the code as, in his judgment, will be required to supply the demand, who shall sell such copies at the price fixed under the provision of section sixteen hereof, at not more than five dollars per copy, and pay the proceeds into the county treasury, on or before the fifteenth day of November of each year. Each county auditor shall, upon receipt of the copies transmitted to him, execute receipts therefor in duplicate, one of which he shall immediately transmit to the secretary of state, and the other to the state auditor.

SEC. 19. The said county auditor shall also, on or before the fifteenth day of November of each year, make out in writing under oath a statement of the number of copies sold by him and not before accounted for, and the number remaining on hand, and the amount paid to the county treasurer, and transmit such statement to the auditor of state, who shall charge the county treasurer with such amount, and the secretary of state shall certify to the auditor the number of copies transmitted to each county auditor, and the state auditor shall charge each county auditor therewith, and subsequently credit him with such as may be sold or otherwise lawfully disposed of.

SEC. 20. When the county auditor goes out of office having any such copies remaining, he shall deliver them to his successor, taking his receipt therefor in duplicate, one of which shall be sent to the state auditor, which shall be his sufficient discharge for the same; and every county officer, justice of the peace, and mayor of city or town, and township clerk receiving a copy shall give his receipt therefor, and shall pass the copy to his successor, or deliver it to the auditor for the use of subsequent officers, and each shall be liable therefor on his official bond.

SEC 21 The editor of the code shall receive as his compensation the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars, to be audited by the code supervising committee and executive council, and paid as the work progresses. Said sum shall be in full for the entire service to be rendered by the editor under the provisions of this chapter, and for all his work of editing said code and indexing the same.

SEC. 22. There shall be published fifteen thousand copies of the code.

SEC. 23. The executive council, with the advice of the editor and code supervising committee, shall select and approve the paper and other materials for said code, and shall audit all bills for the same; and shall approve all bills for expenses of printing, binding and distribution.

SEC. 24. The twenty-ninth general assembly and each third general assembly thereafter shall select, in a manner as provided in section two hereof for the selection of editor, some competent and suitable person to compile, annotate and superintend the publication of the statutes of a general or permanent nature enacted after the adoption of the code.

SEC. 25. Such compilation shall in all respects, so far as applicable, be numbered, annotated, indexed, printed, bound, published and distributed to the same persons, and sold and accounted for in the same manner, as herein provided for the code, and the price thereof shall not be more than one dollar and fifty cents each.

SEC. 26. The code supervising committee shall audit and allow all bills contracted under the provisions of this act as the work progresses, subject to the approval of the executive council.

SEC. 27. The code. as herein provided to be published and distributed, shall be the official edition and the only authoritative publication of the existing laws of the state, and no other publication of the laws of the state shall be used in the courts or referred to in the decisions, by title, chapter or section, in the reports of the same; and the secretary of state and all other persons are hereby prohibited from delivering or permitting to be copied any acts or resolutions, or copies thereof passed at this special session of the general assembly, except as herein provided, until after the code goes into effect; and the code or any part thereof shall be published only in the manner herein or hereafter provided by the general assembly; and the rules of the supreme court providing for the citations of sections of the laws of this state shall designate the same as contained and numbered in the official code of 1897. No public money shall be paid or expended for any publication of the laws of the state except for those published by authority of the state, and any such purchase or publication herein prohibited shall be a misdemeanor.

SEC. 28. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise apppropriated, an amount sufficient to defray all expenses incurred in carrying out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 29. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

This act took effect by publication May 5, 1897.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776.

THE UNANIMOUS DECLARATION OF THE THIRTEEN UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

[Adopted by the Continental Congress July 2, and authenticated and proclaimed July 4, 1776.]

WHEN in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that, whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and, accordingly, all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies, and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present king of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world:

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained, and, when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature—a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the repository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused, for a long time after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise; the state remaining, in the mean time, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their offices and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation—

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them, by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states;

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing taxes on us without our consent;

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury;

For transporting us beyond seas, to be tried for pretended offenses;

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province; establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies,

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments;

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here by declaring us out of his protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is, at this time, transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun, with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress, in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts, by their legislature, to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity; and we have conjured them, by the ties of our common kindred, to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in general congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that, as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

ARTICLES OF CONFEDERATION

AND PERPETUAL UNION BETWEEN THE STATES.

[Adopted by the Congress of the United States November 15, 1777, and submitted for ratification to the several states. Ratification consummated and proclaimed March 1, 1781.]

SUMMARY.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME, WE THE UNDERSIGNED, DELEGATES OF THE STATES AFFIXED TO OUR NAMES, send greeting:

Whereas the delegates of the United States of America in congress assembled did, on the fifteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven, and in the second year of the independence of America, agree to certain articles of confederation and perpetual union between the states of New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, in the words following, viz:

ARTICLES OF CONFEDERATION AND PERPETUAL UNION, BETWEEN THE STATES OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, MASSACHUSETTS BAY, RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS, CONNECTICUT, NEW YORK, NEW JERSEY, PENNSYLVANIA, DELAWARE, MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, NORTH CAROLINA, SOUTH CAROLINA AND GEORGIA:—

ARTICLE 1. The style of this confederacy shall be "THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA."

ART. 2. Each state retains its sovereignty, freedom and independence, and every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by this confederation expressly delegated to the United States, in congress assembled.

ART. 3. The said states hereby severally enter into a firm league of friendship with each other for their common defense, the security of their liberties, and their mutual and general welfare, binding themselves to assist each other against all force offered to or attacks made upon them, or any of them, on account of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretense whatever.

ART. 4. The better to secure and perpetuate mutual friendship and intercourse among the people of the different states in this union, the free inhabitants of each of these states, paupers, vagabonds and fugitives from justice excepted, shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of free cititizens in the several states; and the people of each state shall have free ingress and regress to and from any other state, and shall enjoy therein all the privileges of trade and commerce, subject to the same duties, impositions and restrictions as the inhabitants thereof respectively: provided that such restrictions shall not extend so far as to prevent the removal of property imported into any state to any other state of which the owner is an inhabitant: provided, also, that no imposition, duties or restriction, shall be laid by any state on the property of the United States, or either of them.

If any person guilty of or charged with treason, felony or other high misdemeanor in any state shall flee from justice, and be found in any of the United States, he shall, upon demand of the governor or executive power of the state from which he fled, be delivered up and removed to the state having jurisdiction of his offense.

Full faith and credit shall be given in each of these states to the records, acts and judicial proceedings of the courts and magistrates of every other state.

ART. 5. For the more convenient management of the general interests of the United States, delegates shall be annually appointed, in such manner as the legislature of each state shall direct, to meet in congress on the first Monday in November, in every year, with a power reserved to each state to recall its delegates, or any of them, at any time within the year, and to send others in their stead for the remainder of the year.

No state shall be represented in congress by less than two, nor by more than seven, members; and no person shall be capable of being a delegate for more than three years in any term of six years; nor shall any person, being a delegate, be capable of holding any office under the United States for which he, or another for his benefit, receives any salary, fees or emolument of any kind.

Each state shall maintain its own delegates in a meeting of the states, and while they act as members of the committee of these states.

In determining questions in the United States in congress assembled, each state shall have one vote.

Freedom of speech and debate in congress shall not be impeached or questioned in any court or place out of congress, and the members of congress shall be protected in their persons from arrests and imprisonments, during the time of their going to and from and attendance on congress, except for treason, felony or breach of the peace.

ART. 6. No state, without the consent of the United States in congress assembled, shall send any embassy to, or receive any embassy from, or enter into any conference, agreement, alliance or treaty with, any king, prince or state; nor shall any person holding any office of profit or trust under the United States, or any of them, accept of any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatever, from any king, prince or foreign state; nor shall the United States in congress assembled, or any of them, grant any title of nobility.

No two or more states shall enter into any treaty, confederation, or alliance whatever between them, without the consent of the United States in congress assembled, specifying accurately the purposes for which the same is to be entered into, and how long it shall continue.

No state shall lay any imposts or duties which may interfere with any stipulations in treaties, entered into by the United States in congress assembled, with any king, prince or state, in pursuance of any treaties already proposed by congress, to the courts of France and Spain.

No vessels of war shall be kept up in time of peace by any state, except such number only as shall be deemed necessary by the United States, in congress assembled, for the defense of such state, or its trade, nor shall any body of forces be kept up by any state, in time of peace, except such number only as in the judgment of the United States, in congress assembled, shall be deemed requisite to garrison the forts necessary for the defense of such state, but every state shall always keep up a well regulated and disciplined militia, sufficiently armed and accoutred, and shall provide and constantly have ready for use, in public stores, a due number of field-pieces and tents, and a proper quantity of arms, ammunition and camp-equipage.

No state shall engage in any war, without the consent of the United States in congress assembled, unless such state be actually invaded by enemies, or shall have received certain advice of a resolution being formed by some nation of Indians to invade such state, and the danger is so imminent as not to admit of a delay, till the United States, in congress assembled, can be consulted; nor shall any state grant commissions to any ships or vessels of war, nor letters of marque or reprisal, except it be after a declaration of war by the United States in congress assembled, and then only against the kingdom or state, and the subjects thereof, against which war has been so declared, and under such regulations as shall be established by the United States in congress assembled, unless such state be infested by pirates, in which case vessels of war may be fitted out for that occasion, and kept so long as the danger shall continue, or until the United States, in congress assembled, shall determine otherwise.

ART. 7. When land forces are raised by any state for the common defense, all officers of or under the rank of colonel shall be appointed by the legislature of each state, respectively, by whom such forces shall be raised, or in such manner as such state shall direct, and all vacancies shall be filled up by the state which first made the appointment.

ART. 8. All charges of war, and all other expenses that shall be incurred for the common defense or general welfare, and allowed by the United States in congress assembled, shall be defrayed out of a common treasury, which shall be supplied by the several states, in proportion to the value of all land within each state, granted to, or surveyed for, any person, as such land and the buildings and improvements thereon shall be estimated, according to such mode as the United States in congress assembled shall, from time to time, direct and appoint.

The taxes for paying that proportion shall be laid and levied by the authority and direction of the legislatures of the several states, within the time agreed upon by the United States in congress assembled.

ART. 9. The United States, in congress assembled, shall have the sole and exclusive right and power of determining on peace and war, except in the cases mentioned in the sixth article; of sending and receiving ambassadors, entering into treaties and alliances, provided that no treaty of commerce shall be made whereby the legislative power of the respective states shall be restrained from imposing such imposts and duties on foreigners as their own people are subjected to, or from prohibiting the exportation or importation of any species of goods or commodities whatsoever; of establishing rules for deciding, in all cases, what captures on land or water shall be legal, and in what manner prizes taken by land or naval forces in the service of the United States shall be divided or appropriated; of granting letters of marque and reprisal in times of peace; appointing courts for the trial of piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and establishing courts for receiving and determining finally appeals in all cases of captures: provided that no member of congress shall be appointed a judge of any of the said courts.

The United States, in congress assembled, shall also be the last resort on appeal in all disputes and differences now subsisting, or that hereafter may arise, between two or more states concerning boundary, jurisdiction, or any other cause whatever, which authority shall always be exercised in the manner following. Whenever the legislative or executive authority or lawful agent of any state in controversy with another shall present a petition to congress, stating the matter in question, and praying for a hearing, notice thereof shall be given by order of congress to the legislative or executive authority of the other state in controversy, and a day assigned for the appearance of the parties by their lawful agents, who shall then be directed to appoint, by joint consent, commissioners or judges to constitute a court for hearing and determining the matter in question; but, if they cannot agree, congress shall name three persons out of each of the United States, and from the list of such persons each party shall alternately strike out one, the petitioners beginning, until the number shall be reduced to thirteen; and from that number not less than seven nor more than nine names, as congress shall direct, shall, in the presence of congress, be drawn out by lot; and the persons whose names shall be so drawn, or any five of them, shall be commissioners or judges to hear and finally determine the controversy, so always as a major part of the judges who shall hear the cause shall agree in the determination; and if either party shall neglect to attend at the day appointed, without showing reasons which congress shall judge sufficient; or, being present, shall refuse to strike, the congress shall proceed to nominate three persons out of each state, and the secretary of congress shall strike in behalf of such party absent or refusing; and the judgment and sentence of the court to be appointed in the manner before prescribed shall be final and conclusive; and if any of the parties shall refuse to submit to the authority of such court, or to appear or defend their claim or cause, the court shall nevertheless proceed to pronounce sentence, or judgment, which shall in like manner be final and decisive; the judgment or sentence and other proceedings being in either case transmitted to congress, and lodged among the acts of congress, for the security of the parties concerned: provided that every commissioner, before he sits in judgment, shall take an oath, to be administered by one of the judges of the supreme or superior court of the state where the cause shall be tried, "well and truly to hear and determine the matter in question, according to the best of his judgment, without favor, affection or hope of reward:" provided, also, that no state shall be deprived of territory for the benefit of the United States.

All controversies concerning the private right of soil, claimed under different grants of two or more states whose jurisdictions, as they may respect such lands, and the states which passed such grants, are adjusted, the said grants or either of them being at the same time claimed to have originated antecedent to such settlement of jurisdiction, shall, on the petition of either party to the congress of the United States, be finally determined, as near as may be, in the same manner as is before prescribed for deciding disputes respecting territorial jurisdiction between different states.

The United States, in congress assembled, shall also have the sole and exclusive right and power of regulating the alloy and value of coin struck by their own authority, or by that of the respective states, fixing the standard of weights and measures throughout the United States; regulating the trade and managing all affairs with the Indians, not members of any of the states: provided that the legislative right of any state, within its own limits, be not infringed or violated; establishing and regulating post offices from one state to another, throughout all the United States, and exacting such postage on the papers passing through the same as may be requisite to defray the expenses of the said office; appointing all officers of the land forces in the service of the United States, excepting regimental officers; appointing all the officers of the naval forces, and commissioning all officers whatever in the service of the United States; making rules for the government and regulation of the said land and naval forces, and directing their operations.

The United States, in congress assembled, shall have authority to appoint a committee, to sit in the recess of congress, to be denominated "A Committee of the States," and to consist of one delegate from each state; and to appoint such other committees and civil officers as may be necessary for managing the general affairs of the United States under their direction; to appoint one of their number to preside: provided that no person be allowed to serve in the office of president more than one year in any term of three years; to ascertain the necessary sums of money to be raised for the service of the United States, and to appropriate and apply the same for defraying the public expenses; to borrow money or emit bills on the credit of the United States, transmitting every half year to the respective states an account of the sums of money so borrowed or emitted; to build and equip a navy; to agree upon the number of land forces, and to make requisitions from each state for its quota, in proportion to the number of white inhabitants in such state, which requisition shall be binding; and thereupon the legislature of each state shall appoint the regimental officers, raise the men, and clothe, arm and equip them, in a soldier-like manner, at the expense of the United States; and the officers and men, so clothed, armed and equipped, shall march to the place appointed, and within the time agreed on, by the United States, in congress assembled; but if the United States, in congress assembled, shall, on consideration of circumstances, judge proper that any state should not raise men, or should raise a smaller number than its quota, and that any other state should raise a greater number of men than the quota thereof, such extra number shall be raised, officered, clothed, armed and equipped in the same manner as the quota of such state, unless the legislature of such state shall judge that such extra number can not be safely spared out of the same, in which case they shall raise, officer, clothe, arm and equip as many of such extra number as they judge can be safely spared, and the officers and men, so clothed, armed and equipped, shall march to the place appointed, and within the time agreed on, by the United States, in congress assembled.

The United States, in congress assembled, shall never engage in a war, nor grant letters of marque and reprisal in time of peace, nor enter into any treaties or alliances, nor coin money, nor regulate the value thereof, nor ascertain the sums and expenses necessary for the defense and welfare of the United States, or any of them, nor emit bills, nor borrow money on the credit of the United States, nor appropriate money, nor agree upon the number of vessels of war to be built or purchased, or the number of land or sea forces to be raised, nor appoint a commander-in-chief of the army or navy, unless nine states assent to the same, nor shall a question on any other point, except for adjourning from day to day, be determined, unless by the votes of a majority of the United States, in congress assembled.

The congress of the United States shall have power to adjourn to any time within the year, and to any place within the United States, so that no period of adjournment be for a longer duration than the space of six months, and shall publish the journal of their proceedings monthly, except such parts thereof relating to treaties, alliances or military operations as in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the delegates of each state, on any question, shall be entered on the journal, when it is desired by any delegate; and the delegates of a state, or any of them, at his or their request, shall be furnished with a transcript of the said journal, except such parts as are above excepted, to lay before the legislatures of the several states.

ART. 10. The committee of the states, or any nine of them, shall be authorized to execute, in the recess of congress, such of the powers of congress as the United States, in congress assembled, by the consent of nine states, shall, from time to time, think expedient to vest them with: provided that no power be delegated to the said committee, for the exercise of which, by the articles of confederation, the voice of nine states, in the congress of of the United States assembled, is requisite.

ART. 11 Canada, acceding to this confederation and joining in the measures of the United States, shall be admitted into and entitled to all the advantages of this Union; but no other colony shall be admitted into the same, unless such admission be agreed to by nine states.

ART. 12. All bills of credit emitted, moneys borrowed and debts contracted by or under the authority of congress, before the assembling of the United States in pursuance of the present confederation, shall be deemed and considered as a charge against the United States, for payment and satisfaction whereof the said United States and the public faith are hereby solemnly pledged.

ART. 13. Every state shall abide by the determinations of the United States, in congress assembled, on all questions which by this confederation are submitted to them. And the articles of this confederation shall be inviolably observed by every state, and the Union shall be perpetual; nor shall any alteration at any time hereafter be made in any of them, unless such alteration be agreed to in a congress of the United States, and be afterwards confirmed by the legislatures of every state.

And whereas it hath pleased the great Governor of the world to incline the hearts of the legislatures we respectively represent in congress to approve of, and to authorize us to ratify, the said articles of confederation and perpetual union, Know ye, that we, the undersigned delegates, by virtue of the power and authority to us given for that purpose, do, by these presents, in the name and in behalf of our respective constituents, fully and entirely ratify and confirm each and every of the said articles of confederation and perpetual union, and all and singular the matters and things therein contained. And we do further solemnly plight and engage the faith of our respective constituents that they shall abide by the determinations of the United States, in congress assembled, on all questions which by the said confederation are submitted to them; and that the articles thereof shall be inviolably observed by the states we respectively represent, and that the Union shall be perpetual. In witness whereof, we have hereunto set our hands, in congress.

THE CONSTITUTION

OF THE UNITED STATES.

[Recommended by the convention of the states to congress Sept. 11, 1787, and by it submitted to the states for ratification, which, by the concurrence of nine states, was consummated and proclaimed Sept. 13, 1788.]

SUMMARY.

WE, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a congress of the United States, which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives.

SEC. 2. (1)* The house of representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states; and the electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

(2) No person shall be a representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

(3) [Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this union according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons.]* The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each state shall have at least one representative, and, until such enumeration shall be made, the state of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware one, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.

(4) When vacancies happen in the representation from any state, the executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

(5) The house of representatives shall choose their speaker and other officers, and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SEC. 3. (1) The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, chosen by the legislature thereof for six years; and each senator shall have one vote.

(2) Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the legislature of any state, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

(3) No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state for which he shall be chosen.

(4) The vice-president of the United States shall be president of the senate, but shall have no vote, unless they be equally divided.

(5) The senate shall choose their other officers, and also a president pro tempore, in the absence of the vice-president, or when he shall exercise the office of president of the United States.

(6) The senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the president of the United States is tried, the chief justice shall preside; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

(7) Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment, according to law.

SEC. 4 (1) The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof, but the congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing senators.

(2) The congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

SEC. 5. (1) Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

(2) Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

(3) Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house on any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

(4) Neither house, during the session of congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

SEC. 6. (1) The senators and representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall in all cases, except treason, felony and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place.

(2) No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased, during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

SEC. 7. (1) All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the house of representatives, but the senate may propose or concur with amendments, as on other bills.

(2) Every bill which shall have passed the house of representatives and the senate, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the president of the United States; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and, if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house, respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the president within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

(3) Every order, resolution or vote to which the concurrence of the senate and house of representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the president of the United States, and, before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the senate and house of representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

SEC. 8. The congress shall have power:—

(1) To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

(2) To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

(3) To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes;

(4) To establish an uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States;

(5) To coin money, regulate the value thereof and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures;

(6) To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States;

(7) To establish post-offices and post roads;

(8) To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries;

(9) To constitute tribunals inferior to the supreme court;

(10) To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offenses against the law of nations;

(11) To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water;

(12) To raise and support armies; but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years;

(13) To provide and maintain a navy,

(14) To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces,

(15) To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions;

(16) To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States; reserving to the states, respectively, the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by congress;

(17) To exercise exclusive legislation, in all cases whatsoever, over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular states and the acceptance of congress, become the seat of the government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock yards and other needful buildings; and—

(18) To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

SEC. 9. (1) The migration or importation of such persons as any of the states now existing shall think proper to admit shall not be prohibited by the congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person.

(2) The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

(3) No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed.

(4) No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

(5) No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state.

(6) No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to or from one state be obliged to enter, clear or pay duties in another.

(7) No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

(8) No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of the congress, accept of any present, emolument, office or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince or foreign state.

SEC. 10. (1) No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make any thing but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

(2) No state shall, without the consent of the congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws; and the net produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any state on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the congress.

(3) No state shall, without the consent of congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another state, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. (1) The executive power shall be vested in a president of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the vice-president chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

(2) Each state shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state may be entitled in the congress; but no senator or representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector.

The electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each; which list they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate. The president of the senate shall, in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such majority, and have an equal number of votes, then the house of representatives shall immediately choose, by ballot, one of them for president; and if no person have a majority, then, from the five highest on the list, the said house shall, in like manner, choose the president. But in choosing the president the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the president, the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the vice-president. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the senate shall choose from them, by ballot, the vice-president.

(3) The congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes; which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

(4) No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall be eligible to the office of president; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

(5) In case of the removal of the president from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice-president, and the congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation or inability, both of the president and vice-president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed or a president shall be elected.

(6) The president shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

(7) Before he enter on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of the United States."

SEC. 2. (1) The president shall be commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several states when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion in writing of the principal officer in each of the executive departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices; and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

(2) He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the senate shall appoint, ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the supreme court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for and which shall be established by law. But the congress may, by law, vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the president alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

(3) The president shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the senate, by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session.

SEC. 3. He shall from time to time give to the congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses, or either of them; and, in case of disagreement between them with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper. He shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers. He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed; and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

SEC. 4. The president, vice-president, and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court, and in such inferior courts as the congress may, from time to time, ordain and establish. The judges, both of the supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior; and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

SEC. 2. (1) The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under this constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states, between a state and citizens of another state, between citizens of different states, between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens or subjects.

(2) In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state shall be a party, the supreme court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases, before mentioned, the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the congress shall make.

(3) The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state, the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed.

SEC. 3. (1) Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

(2) The congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

SEC. 2. (1) The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states.

(2) A person charged in any state with treason, felony or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime.

(3) No person held to service or labor in one state, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

SEC. 3. (1) New states may be admitted by the congress into this Union; but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state, nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states, or parts of states, without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned, as well as of the congress.

(2) The congress shall have power to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting, the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States or of any particular state.

SEC. 4. The United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and, on application of the legislature, or of the executive (when the legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

The congress, whenever two-thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several states, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this constitution, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the congress: provided that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article; and that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the senate.

ARTICLE VI.

(1) All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this constitution as under the confederation.

(2) This constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.

(3) The senators and representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several state legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

The ratification of the conventions of nine states shall be sufficient for the establishment of this constitution between the states so ratifying the same.

Done in convention, by the unanimous consent of the states present, the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven and of the independence of the United States of America the twelfth. In witness whereof, we have hereunto subscribed our names.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

[*Proposed by congress, and ratified by the legislatures of the several states, pursuant to the fifth article of the original constitution. For dates of ratification see foot note.]

ARTICLE I.

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE II.

A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

ARTICLE III.

No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

ARTICLE IV.

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated; and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

ARTICLE V.

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject, for the same offense, to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

ARTICLE VI.

In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

ARTICLE VII.

In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved; and no fact, tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

*The first ten of these amendments were proposed by congress to the legislatures of the several states September 25, 1789, and were ratified by all of the states, except Connecticut, Georgia and Massachusetts, before the end of the year 1791, thereby becoming a part of the organic law, pursuant to the fifth article of the original constitution.

The eleventh amendment was in like manner proposed September 5, 1794, and was, in a message of the president to congress, January 8, 1798, declared to have been duly ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states.

The twelfth amendment was in like manner proposed December 12, 1803, in lieu of the original third paragraph of the first section of the second article, and September 25, 1804, was proclaimed by the secretary of state to have been duly ratified.

The thirteenth amendment was proposed February 1, 1865, and was December 18, 1865, by the secretary of state proclaimed to have been duly ratified.

The fourteenth amendment was proposed June 16, 1866, and was July 28, 1868, by the secretary of state proclaimed to have been duly ratified.

The fifteenth amendment was proposed February 27, 1869, and was March 30, 1870, by the secretary of state proclaimed to have been duly ratified.

ARTICLE VIII.

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

ARTICLE IX.

The enumeration in the constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE X.

The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people.

ARTICLE XI.

The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another state, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state.

ARTICLE XII.

SECTION 1. The electors shall meet in their respective states, and vote by ballot for president and vice-president, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as president, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as vice-president; and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as president, and of all persons voted for as vice-president, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate; the president of the senate shall, in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for president shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as president, the house of representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the president. But in choosing the president, the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. And if the house of representatives shall not choose a president, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the vice-president shall act as president, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the president.

SEC. 2. The person having the greatest number of votes as vice-president shall be the vice-president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list, the senate shall choose the vice-president; a quorum, for that purpose, shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice.

SEC. 3. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of president shall be eligible to that of vice-president of the United States.

ARTICLE XIII.

SECTION 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

SEC. 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE XIV.

SECTION 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

SEC. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each state, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for president and vice-president of the United States, representatives in congress, the executive and judicial officers of a state, or the members of the legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such state, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such state.

SEC. 3. No person shall be a senator or representative in congress, or elector of president and vice-president, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any state, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any state legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any state, to support the constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each house, remove such disability.

SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any state shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void.

SEC. 5. The congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

ARTICLE XV.

SECTION 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

SEC. 2. The congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

CITIZENSHIP.

REVISED STATUTES OF THE UNITED STATES OF 1878.

SUMMARY.

SECTION 1992. All persons born in the United States and not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are declared to be citizens of the United States.

SEC. 1993. All children heretofore born or hereafter born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, whose fathers were or may be at the time of their birth citizens thereof, are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States.

SEC. 1994. Any women who is now or may hereafter be married to a citizen of the United States, and who might herself be lawfully naturalized, shall be deemed a citizen.

SEC. 1995. All persons born in the district of country formerly known as the territory of Oregon, and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States on the 18th May, 1872, are citizens in the same manner as if born elsewhere in the United States.

SEC. 1996. All persons who deserted the military or naval service of the United States and did not return thereto or report themselves to a provost-marshal within sixty days after the issuance of the proclamation by the president, dated the 11th March, 1865, are deemed to have voluntarily relinquished and forfeited their rights of citizenship, as well as their right to become citizens; and such deserters shall be forever incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under the United States, or of exercising any rights of citizens thereof.

[Subsequent statutes provide for the removal, upon certain conditions, of the disabilities imposed by section 1996.—See Sup. to Rev. St. U. S., vol. 1 (2d Ed.), pp. 692 and 901; and vol. 2, pp. 54 and 425.]

SEC. 1997. No soldier or sailor, however, who faithfully served according to his enlistment until the 19th day of April, 1865, and who, without proper authority or leave first obtained, quit his command or refused to serve after that date, shall be held to be a deserter from the army or navy; but this section shall be construed solely as a removal of any disability such soldier or sailor may have incurred, under the preceding section, by the loss of citizenship and of the right to hold office, in consequence of his desertion.

SEC. 1998. Every person who hereafter deserts the military or naval service of the United States, or who, being duly enrolled, departs the jurisdiction of the district in which he is enrolled, or goes beyond the limits of the United States, with intent to avoid any draft into the military or naval service, lawfully ordered, shall be liable to all the penalties and forfeitures of section nineteen hundred and ninety-six.

SEC. 1999. Whereas the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and whereas in the recognition of this principle this government has freely received emigrants from all nations, and invested them with the rights of citizenship; and whereas it is claimed that such American citizens, with their descendants, are subjects of foreign states, owing allegiance to the governments thereof; and whereas it is necessary to the maintenance of public peace that this claim of foreign allegiance should be promptly and finally disavowed: Therefore any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officer of the United States which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of the republic.

SEC. 2000. All naturalized citizens of the United States, while in foreign countries, are entitled to and shall receive from this government the same protection of persons and property which is accorded to native-born citizens.

SEC. 2001. Whenever it is made known to the president that any citizen of the United States has been unjustly deprived of his liberty by or under the authority of any foreign government, it shall be the duty of the president forthwith to demand of that government the reasons of such imprisonment; and if it appears to be wrongful and in violation of the rights of American citizenship, the president shall forthwith demand the release of such citizen, and if the release so demanded is unreasonably delayed or refused, the president shall use such means, not amounting to acts of war, as he may think necessary and proper to obtain or effectuate the release; and all the facts and proceedings relative thereto shall as soon as practicable be communicated by the president to congress.

NATURALIZATION OF ALIENS.

REVISED STATUTES OF THE UNITED STATES OF 1878.

SUMMARY.

SECTION 2165. Any alien may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States in the following manner, and not otherwise:

First. He shall declare on oath, before a circuit or district court of the United States, or a district or supreme court of the territories, or a court of record of any of the states having common law jurisdiction, and a seal and clerk, two years, at least, prior to his admission, that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and, particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which the alien may be at the time a citizen or subject.

[Declaration before clerk of any of the courts named in this paragraph authorized and legalized by amendment incorporated in sixth paragraph of this section. See post.]

Second. He shall, at the time of his application to be admitted, declare, on oath, before some one of the courts above specified, that he will support the constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty; and, particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which he was before a citizen or subject; which proceedings shall be recorded by the clerk of the court.

Third. It shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court admitting such alien that he has resided within the United States five years at least, and within the state or territory where such court is at the time held one year at least; and that during that time he has behaved as a man of a good moral character, attached to the principles of the constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; but the oath of the applicant shall in no case be allowed to prove his residence.

Fourth. In case the alien applying to be admitted to citizenship has borne any hereditary title, or been of any of the orders of nobility in the kingdom or state from which he came, he shall, in addition to the above requisites, make an express renunciation of his title or order of nobility in the court to which his application is made, and his renunciation shall be recorded in the court.

Fifth. Any alien who was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States before the twenty-ninth day of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, may be admitted to become a citizen, on due proof made to some one of the courts above specified, that he has resided two years, at least, within the jurisdiction of the United States, and one year, at least, immediately preceding his application, within the state or territory where such court is at the time held; and on his declaring on oath that he will support the constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and, particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty whereof he was before a citizen or subject; and, also, on its appearing to the satisfaction of the court, that during such term of two years he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; and where the alien, applying for admission to citizenship, has borne any hereditary title, or been of any of the orders of nobility in the kingdom or state from which he came, on his, moreover, making in the court an express renunciation of his title or order of nobility. All of the proceedings, required in this condition to be performed in the court, shall be recorded by the clerk thereof.

Sixth. Any alien who was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States, between the eighteenth day of June, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and the eighteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and twelve, and who has continued to reside within the same, may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States without having made any previous declaration of his intention to become such; but whenever any person, without a certificate of such declaration of intention, makes application to be admitted a citizen, it must be proved to the satisfaction of the court, that the applicant was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States before the eighteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and twelve, and has continued to reside within the same; and the residence of the applicant within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States, for at least five years immediately preceding the time of such application, must be proved by the oath of citizens of the United States, which citizens shall be named in the record as witnesses; and such continued residence within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States, when satisfactorily proved, and the place where the applicant has resided for at least five years, shall be stated and set forth, together with the names of such citizens, in the record of the court admitting the applicant; otherwise the same shall not entitle him to be considered and deemed a citizen of the United States. [Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That the declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, required by section two thousand one hundred and sixty-five of the revised statutes of the United States, may be made by an alien before the clerk of any of the courts named in said section two thousand one hundred and sixty-five; and all such declarations heretofore made before any such clerk are hereby declared as legal and valid as if made before one of the courts named in said section.]

SEC. 2166. Any alien, of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, who has enlisted, or may enlist in the armies of the United States, either the regular or the volunteer forces, and has been, or may be hereafter, honorably discharged, shall be admitted to become a citizen of the United States, upon his petition, without any previous declaration of his intention to become such, and he shall not be required to prove more than one year's residence within the United States previous to his application to become such citizen; and the court admitting such alien shall, in addition to such proof of residence and good moral character, as now provided by law, be satisfied by competent proof of such person's having been honorably discharged from the service of the United States.

SEC. 2167. Any alien, being under the age of twenty-one years, who has resided in the United States three years next preceding his arriving at that age, and who has continued to reside therein to the time he may make application to be admitted a citizen thereof, may, after he arrives at the age of twenty-one years, and after he has resided five years within the United States, including the three years of his minority, be admitted a citizen of the United States, without having made the declaration required in the first condition of section twenty-one hundred and sixty-five; but such alien shall make the declaration required therein at the time of his admission; and shall further declare, on oath, and prove to the satisfaction of the court, that, for two years next preceding, it has been his bona fide intention to become a citizen of the United States; and he shall in all respects comply with the laws in regard to naturalization.

SEC. 2168. When any alien who has complied with the first condition specified in section twenty-one hundred and sixty-five, dies before he is actually naturalized, the widow and the children of such alien shall be considered as citizens of the United States, and shall be entitled to all rights and privileges as such, upon taking the oaths proscribed [prescribed] by law.

SEC. 2169. The provisions of this title shall apply to aliens [being free white persons, and to aliens] of African nativity and to persons of African descent.

[The words in brackets are inserted by the act of February 18, 1875.]

SEC. 2170. No alien shall be admitted to become a citizen who has not for the continued term of five years next preceding his admission resided within the United States.

SEC. 2171. No alien who is a native citizen or subject, or a denizen of any country, state, or sovereignty with which the United States are at war, at the time of his application, shall be then admitted to become a citizen of the United States; but persons resident within the United States, or the territories thereof, on the eighteenth day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twelve, who had before that day made a declaration, according to law, of their intention to become citizens of the United States, or who were on that day entitled to become citizens without making such declaration, may be admitted to become citizens thereof, notwithstanding they were alien enemies at the time and in the manner prescribed by the laws heretofore passed on that subject; nor shall anything herein contained be taken or construed to interfere with or prevent the apprehension and removal, agreeably to law, of any alien enemy at any time previous to the actual naturalization of such alien.

SEC. 2172. The children of persons who have been duly naturalized under any law of the United States, or who, previous to the passing of any law on that subject, by the government of the United States, may have become citizens of any one of the states, under the laws thereof, being under the age of twenty-one years at the time of the naturalization of their parents, shall, if dwelling in the United States, be considered as citizens thereof; and the children of persons who now are, or have been, citizens of the United States, shall, though born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, be considered as citizens thereof; but no person heretofore proscribed by any state, or who has been legally convicted of having joined the army of Great Britain during the revolutionary war, shall be admitted to become a citizen without the consent of the legislature of the state in which such person was proscribed.

SEC. 2173. The police court of the District of Columbia shall have no power to naturalize foreigners.

SEC. 2174. Every seaman, being a foreigner, who declares his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States in any competent court, and shall have served three years on board of a merchant vessel of the United States subsequent to the date of such declaration, may, on his application to any competent court, and the production of his certificate of discharge and good conduct during that time, together with the certificate of his declaration of intention to become a citizen, be admitted a citizen of the United States; and every seaman, being a foreigner, shall, after his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, and after he shall have served such three years, be deemed a citizen of the United States for the purpose of manning and serving on board any merchant vessel of the United States, anything to the contrary in any act of congress notwithstanding; but such seaman shall, for all purposes of protection as an American citizen, be deemed such, after the filing of his declaration of intention to become such citizen.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS.

CHINESE NOT TO BE NATURALIZED.

Sup. to Rev. St. U. S., vol. 1 (2d Ed.), p. 342.

That hereafter no state or court of the United States shall admit Chinese to citizenship; and all laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

NATURALIZATION OF ALIENS SERVING IN NAVY OR MARINE CORPS.

Sup. to Rev. St. U. S., vol. 2, p. 206.

Any alien of the age of twenty-one years and upward who has enlisted or may enlist in the United States navy or marine corps, and has served or may hereafter serve five consecutive years in the United States navy or one enlistment in the United States marine corps, and has been or may hereafter be honorably discharged, shall be admitted to become a citizen of the United States upon his petition, without any previous declaration of his intention to become such; and the court admitting such alien shall, in addition to proof of good moral character, be satisfied by competent proof of such person's service in and honorable discharge from the United States navy or marine corps.

AUTHENTICATION OF RECORDS.

REVISED STATUTES OF THE UNITED STATES OF 1878.

SECTION 905. The acts of the legislature of any state or territory, or of any country subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, shall be authenticated by having the seals of such state, territory, or country affixed thereto. The records and judicial proceedings of the courts of any state or territory, or of any such country, shall be proved or admitted in any other court within the United States, by the attestation of the clerk, and the seal of the court annexed, if there be a seal, together with a certificate of the judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate, that the said attestation is in due form. And the said records and judicial proceedings, so authenticated, shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts of the state from which they are taken.

SEC. 906 All records and exemplifications of books, which may be kept in any public office of any state or territory, or of any country subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, not appertaining to a court, shall be proved or admitted in any court or office in any other state or territory, or in any such country, by the attestation of the keeper of the said records or books, and the seal of his office annexed, if there be a seal, together with a certificate of the presiding justice of the court of the county, parish, or district in which such office may be kept, or of the governor, or secretary of state, the chancellor or keeper of the great seal, of the state, or territory, or country, that the said attestation is in due form, and by the proper officers. If the said certificate is given by the presiding justice of a court, it shall be further authenticated by the clerk or prothonotary of the said court, who shall certify, under his hand and the seal of his office, that the said presiding justice is duly commissioned and qualified; or, if given by such governor, secretary, chancellor, or keeper of the great seal, it shall be under the great seal of the state, territory, or country aforesaid in which it is made. And the said records and exemplifications, so authenticated, shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court and office within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts or offices of the state, territory, or country, as aforesaid, from which they are taken.

THE ORDINANCE OF 1787.

AN ORDINANCE FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE TERRITORY OF THE UNITED STATES NORTHWEST OF THE OHIO RIVER.

[Adopted by Congress July 13, 1787.]

SUMMARY.

ARTICLES OF COMPACT.

(1) Be it ordained by the United States, in congress assembled, That the said territory, for the purposes of temporary government, be one district; subject, however, to be divided into two districts, as future circumstances may, in the opinion of congress, make it expedient.

(2) Be it ordained by the authority aforesaid, That the estates, both of resident and non-resident proprietors in the said territory, dying intestate, shall descend to and be distributed among their children, and the descendants of a deceased child, in equal parts; the descendants of a deceased child or grandchild to take a share of their deceased parent in equal parts among them; and where there shall be no children or descendants, then in equal parts to the next of kin, in equal degree; and among collaterals, the children of a deceased brother or sister of the intestate shall have, in equal parts among them, their deceased parent's share; and there shall, in no case, be a distinction between kindred of the whole and half blood; saving, in all cases, to the widow of the intestate her third part of the real estate for life, and one-third part of the personal estate; and this law relative to descents and dower shall remain in full force until altered by the legislature of the district. And until the governor and judges shall adopt laws, as hereinafter mentioned, estates in the said territory may be devised or bequeathed by wills in writing, signed and sealed by him or her in whom the estate may be (being of full age), and attested by three witnesses; and real estates may be conveyed by lease and release, or bargain and sale, signed, sealed and delivered by the person, being of full age, in whom the estate may be, and attested by two witnesses, provided such wills be duly proved, such conveyances be acknowledged, or the execution thereof duly proved, and be recorded within one year after proper magistrates, courts and registers shall be appointed for that purpose; and personal property may be transferred by delivery; saving, however, to the French and Canadian inhabitants, and other settlers of the Kaskaskias, Saint Vincents, and the neighboring villages, who have heretofore professed themselves citizens of Virginia, their laws and customs now in force among them relative to the descent and conveyance of property.

(3) Be it ordained by the authority aforesaid, That there shall be appointed, from time to time, by congress, a governor, whose commission shall continue in force for the term of three years, unless sooner revoked by congress; he shall reside in the district, and have a freehold estate therein in one thousand acres of land, while in the exercise of his office.

(4) There shall be appointed from time to time, by congress, a secretary, whose commission shall continue in force for four years, unless sooner revoked; he shall reside in the district, and have a freehold estate therein in five hundred acres of land, while in the exercise of his office. It shall be his duty to keep and preserve the acts and laws passed by the legislature, and the public records of the district, and the proceedings of the governor in his executive department; and transmit authentic copies of such acts and proceedings, every six months, to the secretary of congress. There shall also be appointed a court, to consist of three judges, any two of whom to form a court, who shall have a common law jurisdiction, and reside in the district, and have each therein a freehold estate in five hundred acres of land, while in the exercise of their offices; and their commissions shall continue in force during good behavior.

(5) The governor and judges, or a majority of them, shall adopt and publish, in the district, such laws of the original states, criminal and civil, as may be necessary and best suited to the circumstances of the district, and report them to congress from time to time; which laws shall be in force in the district until the organization of the general assembly therein, unless disapproved of by congress; but afterwards the legislature shall have authority to alter them as they shall think fit.

(6) The governor, for the time being, shall be commander-in-chief of the militia, appoint and commission all officers in the same below the rank of general officers; all general officers shall be appointed and commissioned by congress.

(7) Previous to the organization of the general assembly, the governor shall appoint such magistrates and other civil officers, in each county or township, as he shall find necessary for the preservation of peace and good order in the same. After the general assembly shall be organized, the powers and duties of the magistrates and other civil officers shall be regulated and defined by the said assembly; but all magistrates and other civil officers, not herein otherwise directed, shall, during the continuance of this temporary government, be appointed by the governor.

(8) For the prevention of crimes and injuries, the laws to be adopted or made shall have force in all parts of the district, and for the execution of process, criminal and civil, the governor shall make proper divisions thereof; and he shall proceed from time to time, as circumstances may require, to lay out the parts of the district in which the Indian titles shall have been extinguished, into counties and townships, subject, however, to such alterations as may thereafter be made by the legislature.

(9) So soon as there shall be five thousand free male inhabitants of full age in the district, upon giving proof thereof to the governor, they shall receive authority, with time and place, to elect representatives from their counties or townships, to represent them in the general assembly: provided that for every five hundred free male inhabitants there shall be one representative, and so on, progressively, with the number of free male inhabitants, shall the right of representation increase, until the number of representatives shall amount to twenty-five, after which the number and proportion of representatives shall be regulated by the legislature: provided that no person be eligible or qualified to act as a representative, unless he shall have been a citizen of one of the United States three years, and be a resident in the district, or unless he shall have resided in the district three years, and in either case shall likewise hold in his own right, in fee simple, two hundred acres of land within the same: provided, also, that a freehold in fifty acres of land in the district, having been a citizen of one of the states, and being resident in the district, or the like freehold and two years' residence in the district, shall be necessary to qualify a man as an elector of a representative.

(10) The representative thus elected shall serve for the term of two years; and in case of the death of a representative, or removal from office, the governor shall issue a writ to the county or township for which he was a member, to elect another in his stead, to serve for the residue of the term.

(11) The general assembly, or legislature, shall consist of the governor, legislative council, and a house of representatives. The legislative council shall consist of five members, to continue in office five years, unless sooner removed by congress; any three of whom to be a quorum. And the members of the council shall be nominated and appointed in the following manner, to-wit: as soon as representatives shall be elected, the governor shall appoint a time and place for them to meet together, and, when met, they shall nominate ten persons, residents in the district, and each possessed of a freehold in five hundred acres of land, and return their names to congress; five of whom congress shall appoint and commission to serve as aforesaid; and whenever a vacancy shall happen in the council, by death or removal from office, the house of representatives shall nominate two persons, qualified as aforesaid, for each vacancy, and return their names to congress; one of whom congress shall appoint and commission for the residue of the term. And every five years, four months at least before the expiration of the time of service of the members of the council, the said house shall nominate ten persons, qualified as aforesaid, and return their names to congress; five of whom congress shall appoint and commission to serve as members of the council five years, unless sooner removed. And the governor, legislative council and house of representatives shall have authority to make laws, in all cases, for the good government of the district, not repugnant to the principles and articles in this ordinance established and declared. And all bills, having passed by a majority in the house, and by a majority in the council, shall be referred to the governor for his assent; but no bill or legislative act whatever shall be of any force without his assent. The governor shall have power to convene, prorogue and dissolve the general assembly, when in his opinion it shall be expedient.

(12) The governor, judges, legislative council, secretary, and such other officers as congress shall appoint in the district, shall take an oath or affirmation of fidelity and of office; the governor before the president of congress, and all other officers before the governor. As soon as a legislature shall be formed in the district, the council and house assembled, in one room, shall have authority, by joint ballot, to elect a delegate to congress, who shall have a seat in congress, with a right of debating, but not of voting, during this temporary government.

ARTICLES OF COMPACT.

And for extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, which form the basis whereon these republics, their laws and constitutions are erected; to fix and establish those principles as the basis of all laws, constitutions and governments which forever hereafter shall be formed in the said territory; to provide also for the establishment of states, and permanent governments therein, and for their admission to share in the federal councils, on an equal footing with the original states, at as early periods as may be consistent with the general interest:

It is hereby ordained and declared, by the authority aforesaid, That the following articles shall be considered as articles of compact between the original states and the people and states in the said territory, and forever remain unalterable, unless by common consent, to-wit:

ARTICLE 1. No person demeaning himself in a peaceable and orderly manner shall ever be molested on account of his mode of worship, or religious sentiments, in the said territory.

ART. 2. The inhabitants of the said territory shall always be entitled to the benefits of the writ of habeas corpus and trial by jury, of a proportionate representation of the people in the legislature, and of judicial proceedings according to the course of the common law. All persons shall be bailable, unless for criminal offenses where the proof shall be evident, or the presumption great. All fines shall be moderate; and no cruel or unusual punishments shall be inflicted. No man shall be deprived of his liberty or property but by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land; and should the public exigencies make it necessary for the common preservation to take any person's property, or to demand his particular services, full compensation shall be made for the same. And in the just preservation of rights and property, it is understood and declared that no law ought ever to be made or have force in the said territory, that shall in any manner whatever interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements, bona fide, and without fraud, previously formed.

ART. 3. Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged. The utmost good faith shall always be observed towards the Indians; their lands and property shall never be taken from them without their consent, and in their property, rights and liberty they never shall be invaded or disturbed, unless in just and lawful wars, authorized by congress; but laws founded in justice and humanity shall, from time to time, be made for preventing wrongs being done to them, and for preserving peace and friendship with them.

ART. 4. The said territory, and the states which may be formed therein, shall forever remain a part of this confederacy of the United States of America, subject to the articles of confederation, and to such alterations therein as shall be constitutionally made, and to all the acts and ordinances of the United States, in congress assembled, conformable thereto. The inhabitants and settlers in the said territory shall be subject to pay a part of the federal debts, contracted, or to be contracted, and a proportional part of the expenses of government, to be apportioned on them by congress, according to the same common rule and measure by which apportionments thereof shall be made on the other states; and the taxes for paying their proportion shall be laid and levied by the authority and direction of the legislatures of the district or districts, or new states, as in the original states, within the time agreed upon by the United States, in congress assembled. The legislatures of those districts or new states shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil by the United States, in congress assembled, nor with any regulations congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to the bona fide purchasers. No tax shall be imposed on lands, the property of the United States; and in no case shall non-resident proprietors be taxed higher than residents. The navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and St. Lawrence, and the carrying places between the same, shall be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said territory as to the citizens of the United States and those of any other states that may be admitted into the confederacy, without any tax, impost or duty therefor.

ART. 5. There shall be formed in the said territory not less than three nor more than five states; and the boundaries of the states, as soon as Virginia shall alter her act of cession, and consent to the same, shall become fixed and established as follows, to wit: the western state in the said territory shall be bounded by the Mississippi, the Ohio, and Wabash rivers; a direct line drawn from the Wabash and Post Vincents, due north to the territorial line between the United States and Canada; and by the said territorial line to the Lake of the Woods and Mississippi. The middle state shall be bounded by the said direct line, the Wabash from Post Vincents to the Ohio, by the Ohio, by a direct line drawn due north from the mouth of the Great Miami to the said territorial line, and by the said territorial line. The eastern state shall be bounded by the last mentioned direct line, the Ohio, Pennsylvania and the said territorial line: provided, however, and it is further understood and declared, That the boundaries of these three states shall be subject so far to be altered that, if congress shall hereafter find it expedient, they shall have authority to form one or two states in that part of the said territory which lies north of an east and west line drawn through the southerly bend or extreme of Lake Michigan. And whenever any of the said states shall have sixty thousand free inhabitants therein, such state shall be admitted, by its delegates, into the congress of the United States, on an equal footing with the original states, in all respects whatever; and shall be at liberty to form a permanent constitution and state government: provided, the constitution and government so to be formed shall be republican, and in conformity to the principles contained in these articles; and so far as it can be consistent with the general interest of the confederacy, such admission shall be allowed at an earlier period, and when there may be a less number of free inhabitants in the state than sixty thousand.

ART. 6. There shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in the said territory, otherwise than in the punishment of crimes, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted: provided always that any person escaping into the same, from whom labor or service is lawfully claimed in any of the original states, such fugitive may be lawfully reclaimed and conveyed to the person claiming his or her labor or service, as aforesaid.

Be it ordained by the authority aforesaid, That the resolutions of the twenty-third of April, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-four, relative to the subject of this ordinance, be, and the same are, hereby repealed and declared null and void.

DONE by the United States, in congress assembled, the thirteenth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of their sovereignty and independence the twelfth.

WILLIAM GRAYSON, Chairman.

CHARLES THOMPSON, Secretary.

ORGANIC LAW OF MICHIGAN.

AN ACT TO DIVIDE THE INDIANA TERRITORY INTO TWO SEPARATE GOVERNMENTS.

[Approved January 11, 1805.]

SUMMARY.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the thirtieth day of June next, all that part of the Indiana territory which lies north of a line drawn east from the southerly bend or extreme of Lake Michigan, until it shall intersect Lake Erie, and east of a line drawn from the said southerly bend through the middle of said lake to its northern extremity, and thence due north to the northern boundary of the United States, shall, for the purpose of temporary government, constitute a separate territory, and be called Michigan.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there shall be established within the said territory a government in all respects similar to that provided by the ordinance of congress, passed on the thirteenth day of July, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, for the government of the territory of the United States, northwest of the river Ohio; and by an act passed on the seventh day of August, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine, entitled "an Act to provide for the government of the territory northwest of the river Ohio;" and the inhabitants thereof shall be entitled to and enjoy all and singular the rights, privileges and advantages granted and secured to the people of the territory of the United States, northwest of the river Ohio, by the said ordinance.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the officers for the said territory, who by virtue of this act shall be appointed by the president of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, shall respectively exercise the same powers, perform the same duties, and receive for their services the same compensations as, by the ordinance aforesaid and the laws of the United States, have been provided and established for similar officers in the Indiana territory; and the duties and emoluments of superintendent of Indian affairs shall be united with those of governor.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed so as, in any manner, to affect the government now in force in the Indiana territory, further than to prohibit the exercise thereof within said territory of Michigan, from and after the aforesaid thirtieth day of June next.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That all suits, process and proceedings which, on the thirtieth day of June next, shall be pending in the court of any county which shall be included within the said territory of Michigan; and also all suits, process and proceedings which, on the said thirtieth day of June next, shall be pending in the general court of the Indiana territory, in consequence of any writ of removal or order for trial at bar, and which had been removed from any of the counties included within the limits of the territory of Michigan aforesaid, shall, in all things concerning the same, be proceeded on, and judgments and decrees rendered thereon, in the same manner as if the said Indiana territory had remained undivided.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That Detroit shall be the seat of government of the said territory, until congress shall otherwise direct.

ORGANIC LAW OF WISCONSIN.

AN ACT ESTABLISHING THE TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENT OF WISCONSIN.

[Approved April 20, 1836.]

SUMMARY.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the third day of July, next, the country included within the following boundaries shall constitute a separate territory, for the purposes of temporary government, by the name of Wisconsin; that is to say: Bounded on the east by a line drawn from the northeast corner of the state of Illinois, through the middle of Lake Michigan, to a point in the middle of said lake, and opposite the main channel of Green Bay, and through said channel and Green Bay to the mouth of the Menomonie river; thence through the middle of the main channel of said river to that head of said river nearest to the Lake of the Desert; thence in a direct line to the middle of said lake; thence through the middle of the main channel of the Montreal river to its mouth; thence with a direct line across Lake Superior, to where the territorial line of the United States last touches said lake northwest; thence on the north, with the said territorial line, to the White-earth river; on the west, by a line from the said boundary line following down the middle of the main channel of White-earth river, to the Missouri river, and down the middle of the main channel of the Missouri river to a point due west from the northwest corner of the state of Missouri; and on the south, from said point, due east to the northwest corner of the state of Missouri; and thence with the boundaries of the states of Missouri and Illinois, as already fixed by acts of congress. And after the said third day of July next, all power and authority of the government of Michigan in and over the territory hereby constituted shall cease: provided that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to impair the rights of person or property now appertaining to any Indians within the said territory, so long as such rights shall remain unextinguished by treaty between the United States and such Indians, or to impair the obligations of any treaty now existing between the United States and such Indians, or to impair or anywise to affect the authority of the government of the United States to make any regulations respecting such Indians, their lands, property or other rights, by treaty, or law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to the government to make if this act had never been passed: provided that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to inhibit the government of the United States from dividing the territory hereby established into one or more other territories, in such manner, and at such times, as congress shall, in its discretion, deem convenient and proper, or from attaching any portion of said territory to any other state or territory of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the executive power and authority in and over the said territory shall be vested in a governor, who shall hold his office for three years, unless sooner removed by the president of the United States. The governor shall reside within the said territory, shall be commander-in-chief of the militia thereof, shall perform the duties and receive the emoluments of superintendent of Indian affairs, and shall approve of all laws passed by the legislative assembly before they shall take effect; he may grant pardons for offenses against the laws of the said territory, and reprieves for offenses against the laws of the United States, until the decision of the president can be made known thereon; he shall commission all officers who shall be appointed to office under the laws of the said territory, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be a secretary of the said territory, who shall reside therein, and hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the president of the United States; he shall record and preserve all the laws and proceedings of the legislative assembly hereinafter constituted, and all the acts and proceedings of the governor in his executive department; he shall transmit one copy of the laws and one copy of the executive proceedings, on or before the first Monday in December in each year, to the president of the United States; and, at the same time, two copies of the laws to the speaker of the house of representatives, for the use of congress. And in case of the death, removal, resignation or necessary absence of the governor from the territory, the secretary shall have, and he is hereby authorized and required to execute and perform, all the powers and duties of the governor during such vacancy or necessary absence.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power shall be vested in a governor and a legislative assembly. The legislative assembly shall consist of a council and house of representatives. The council shall consist of thirteen members, having the qualifications of voters as hereinafter prescribed, whose term of service shall continue four years. The house of representatives shall consist of twenty-six members, possessing the same qualifications as prescribed for the members of the council, and whose term of service shall continue two years. An apportionment shall be made, as nearly equal as practicable, among the several counties, for the election of the council and representatives, giving to each section of the territory representation in the ratio of its population, Indians excepted, as nearly as may be. And the said members of the council and house of representatives shall reside in and be inhabitants of the district for which they may be elected. Previous to the first election, the governor of the territory shall cause the census or enumeration of the inhabitants of the several counties in the territory to be taken and made by the sheriffs of the said counties, respectively, and returns thereof made by said sheriffs to the governor. The first election shall be held at such time and place, and be conducted in such manner, as the governor shall appoint and direct; and he shall, at the same time, declare the number of members of the council and house of representatives to which each of the counties is entitled under this act. The number of persons authorized to be elected, having the greatest number of votes in each of the said counties for the council, shall be declared, by the said governor, to be duly elected to the said council; and the person or persons having the greatest number of votes for the house of representatives, equal to the number to which each county may be entitled, shall also be declared, by the governor, to be duly elected: provided, the governor shall order a new election, when there is a tie between two or more persons voted for, to supply the vacancy made by such tie. And the persons thus elected to the legislative assembly shall meet at such place on such day as he shall appoint; but, thereafter, the time, place and manner of holding and conducting all elections by the people, and the apportioning the representation in the several counties to the council and house of representatives according to population, shall be prescribed by law, as well as the day of the annual commencement of the session of the said legislative assembly; but no session, in any year, shall exceed the term of seventy-five days.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That every free white male citizen of the United States, above the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been an inhabitant of said territory at the time of its organization, shall be entitled to vote at the first election, and shall be eligible to any office within the said territory; but the qualifications of voters at all subsequent elections shall be such as shall be determined by the legislative assembly: provided that the right of suffrage shall be exercised only by citizens of the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power of the territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of non-residents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents. All the laws of the governor and legislative assembly shall be submitted to, and, if disapproved by, the congress of the United States, the same shall be null and of no effect.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That all township officers and all county officers, except judicial officers, justices of the peace, sheriffs and clerks of courts, shall be elected by the people, in such manner as may be provided by the governor and legislative assembly. The governor shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council, shall appoint, all judicial officers, justices of the peace, sheriffs, and all militia officers, except those of the staff, and all civil officers not herein provided for. Vacancies occurring in the recess of the council shall be filled by appointments from the governor, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the legislative assembly; but the said governor may appoint, in the first instance, the aforesaid officers, who shall hold their offices until the end of the next session of the said legislative assembly.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That no member of the legislative assembly shall hold or be appointed to any office created or the salary or emoluments of which shall have been increased whilst he was a member, during the term for which he shall have been elected, and for one year after the expiration of such term; and no person holding a commission under the United States, or any of its officers, except as a militia officer, shall be a member of the said council, or shall hold any office under the government of the said territory.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the judicial power of the said territory shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, probate courts, and in justices of the peace. The supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and two associate judges, any two of whom shall be a quorum, and who shall hold a term at the seat of government of the said territory, annually, and they shall hold their offices during good behavior. The said territory shall be divided into three judicial districts; and a district court or courts shall be held in each of the three districts by one of the judges of the supreme court, at such times and places as may be prescribed by law. The jurisdiction of the several courts herein provided for, both appellate and original, and that of the probate courts and of the justices of the peace, shall be as limited by law: provided, however, that the justices of the peace shall not have jurisdiction of any matter of controversy when the title or boundaries of land may be in dispute, or where the debt or sum claimed exceeds fifty dollars. And the said supreme and district courts, respectively, shall possess chancery as well as common law jurisdiction. Each district court shall appoint its clerk, who shall keep his office at the place where the court may be held, and the said clerks shall also be the registers in chancery; and any vacancy in said office of clerk, happening in the vacation of said court, may be filled by the judge of said district, which appointment shall continue until the next term of said court. And writs of error, bills of exception, and appeals in chancery causes, shall be allowed in all cases from the final decisions of the said district courts to the supreme court, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law; but in no case removed to the supreme court shall a trial by jury be allowed in said court. The supreme court may appoint its own clerk, and every clerk shall hold his office at the pleasure of the court by which he shall have been appointed. And writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of the said supreme court shall be allowed and taken to the supreme court of the United States, in the same manner, and under the same regulations, as from the circuit courts of the United States, where the value of the property or the amount in controversy, to be ascertained by the oath or affirmation of either party, shall exceed one thousand dollars. And each of the said district courts shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, in all cases arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States. And the first six days of every term of the said courts, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, shall be appropriated to the trial of causes arising under the said constitution and laws. And writs of error, and appeals from the final decisions of the said courts, in all such cases, shall be made to the supreme court of the territory, in the same manner as in other cases. The said clerks shall receive, in all such cases, the same fees which the clerk of the district court of the United States in the northern district of the state of New York receives for similar services.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That there shall be an attorney for the said territory appointed, who shall continue in office four years, unless sooner removed by the president, and who shall receive the same fees and salary as the attorney of the United States for the Michigan territory. There shall also be a marshal for the territory appointed, who shall hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the president, who shall execute all process issuing from the said courts when exercising their jurisdiction as circuit and district courts of the United States. He shall perform the same duties, be subject to the same regulations and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees, as the marshal of the district court of the United States for the northern district of the state of New York; and shall, in addition, be paid the sum of two hundred dollars, annually, as a compensation for extra services.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the governor, secretary, chief justice and associate judges, attorney and marshal, shall be nominated, and by and with the advice and consent of the senate appointed, by the president of the United States. The governor and secretary, to be appointed as aforesaid, shall, before they act as such, respectively, take an oath or affirmation before some judge or justice of the peace in the existing territory of Michigan, duly commissioned and qualified to administer an oath or affirmation, to support the constitution of the United States, and for the faithful discharge of the duties of their respective offices; which said oaths, when so taken, shall be certified by the person before whom the same shall have been taken, and such certificate shall be received and recorded by the said secretary among the executive proceedings. And afterwards the chief justice and associate judges, and all other civil officers in said territory, before they act as such, shall take a like oath or affirmation before the said governor or secretary, or some judge or justice of the territory who may be duly commissioned and qualified, which said oath or affirmation shall be certified and transmitted by the person taking the same to the secretary, to be by him recorded as aforesaid; and, afterwards, the like oath or affirmation shall be taken, certified and recorded in such manner and form as may be prescribed by law. The governor shall receive an annual salary of two thousand five hundred dollars for his services as governor and as superintendent of Indian affairs. The said chief justice and associate judges shall each receive an annual salary of eighteen hundred dollars. The secretary shall receive an annual salary of twelve hundred dollars. The said salaries shall be paid quarter-yearly, at the treasury of the United States. The members of the legislative assembly shall be entitled to receive three dollars each per day, during their attendance at the sessions thereof, and three dollars each for every twenty miles' travel in going to and returning from the said sessions, estimated according to the nearest usually traveled route. There shall be appropriated, annually, the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars, to be expended by the governor to defray the contingent expenses of the territory, and there shall also be appropriated, annually, a sufficient sum, to be expended by the secretary of the territory, and upon an estimate to be made by the secretary of the treasury of the United States, to defray the expenses of the legislative assembly, the printing of the laws, and other incidental expenses; and the secretary of the territory shall annually account to the secretary of the treasury of the United States for the manner in which the aforesaid sum shall have been expended.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the inhabitants of the said territory shall be entitled to, and enjoy, all and singular, the rights, privileges and advantages granted and secured to the people of the territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio, by the articles of the compact contained in the ordinance for the government of the said territory, passed on the thirteenth day of July, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven; and shall be subject to all the conditions and restrictions and prohibitions in said articles of compact imposed upon the people of the said territory. The said inhabitants shall also be entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities heretofore granted and secured to the territory of Michigan, and to its inhabitants, and the existing laws of the territory of Michigan shall be extended over said territory, so far as the same shall not be incompatible with the provisions of this act, subject, nevertheless, to be altered, modified or repealed by the governor and legislative assembly of the said territory of Wisconsin; and, further, the laws of the United States are hereby extended over and shall be in force in said territory, so far as the same, or any provisions thereof, may be applicable.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the legislative assembly of the territory of Wisconsin shall hold its first session at such time and place in said territory as the governor thereof shall appoint and direct; and at said session, or as soon thereafter as may by them be deemed expedient, the said governor and legislative assembly shall proceed to locate and establish the seat of government for said territory at such place as they may deem eligible, which place, however, shall thereafter be subject to be changed by the said governor and legislative assembly. And twenty thousand dollars, to be paid out of any money in the treasury, not otherwise appropriated, is hereby given to the said territory, which shall be applied by the governor and legislative assembly to defray the expenses of erecting public buildings at the seat of government.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That a delegate to the house of representatives of the United States, to serve for the term of two years, may be elected by the voters qualified to elect members of the legislative assembly, who shall be entitled to the same rights and privileges as have been granted to the delegates from the several territories of the United States to the said house of representatives. The first election shall be held at such time and place or places, and be conducted in such manner, as the governor shall appoint and direct. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be declared by the governor to be duly elected, and a certificate thereof shall be given to the person so elected.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That all suits, process, and proceedings, and all indictments and informations, which shall be undetermined on the third day of July next, in the courts held by the additional judge for the Michigan territory, in the counties of Brown and Iowa; and all suits, process and proceedings, and all indictments and informations, which shall be undetermined on the said day of July, in the county courts of the several counties of Crawford, Brown, Iowa, Dubuque, Milwaukee and Des Moines, shall be transferred to be heard, tried, prosecuted and determined in the district courts hereby established, which may include the said counties.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That all causes which shall have been or may be removed from the courts held by the additional judge for the Michigan territory in the counties of Brown and Iowa, by appeal or otherwise, into the supreme court for the territory of Michigan, and which shall be undetermined therein on the third day of July next, shall be certified by the clerk of the said supreme court, and transferred to the supreme court of said territory of Wisconsin, there to be proceeded in to final determination, in the same manner that they might have been in the said supreme court of the territory of Michigan.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the sum of five thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by and under the direction of the legislative assembly of said territory, in the purchase of a library for the accommodation of said assembly, and of the supreme court hereby established.

ORGANIC LAW OF IOWA

AND AMENDMENTS THERETO.

SUMMARY.

ORGANIC LAW OF IOWA.

AN ACT TO DIVIDE THE TERRITORY OF WISCONSIN, AND TO ESTABLISH THE TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENT OF IOWA.

[Approved June 12, 1838.]

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That, from and after the third day of July next, all that part of the present territory of Wisconsin which lies west of the Mississippi river, and west of a line drawn due north from the head waters or sources of the Mississippi to the territorial line, shall, for the purposes of temporary government, be and constitute a separate territorial government, by the name of Iowa; and that, from and after the said third day of July next, the present territorial government of Wisconsin shall extend only to that part of the present territory of Wisconsin which lies east of the Mississippi river. And, after the said third day of July next, all power and authority of the government of Wisconsin, in and over the territory hereby constituted, shall cease: provided that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to impair the rights of person or property now appertaining to any Indians within the said territory, so long as such rights shall remain unextinguished by treaty between the United States and such Indians, or to impair the obligations of any treaty now existing between the United States and such Indians, or to impair or anywise to affect the authority of the government of the United States to make any regulations respecting such Indians, their lands, property or other rights, by treaty, or law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to the government to make if this act had never been passed: provided that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to inhibit the government of the United States from dividing the territory hereby established into one or more other territories, in such manner and at such times as congress shall, in its discretion, deem convenient and proper, or from attaching any portion of said territory to any other state or territory of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the executive power and authority in and over the said territory of Iowa shall be vested in a governor, who shall hold his office for three years, unless sooner removed by the president of the United States. The governor shall reside within the said territory, shall be commander-in-chief of the militia thereof, shall perform the duties and receive the emoluments of superintendent of Indian affairs, and shall approve of all laws passed by the legislative assembly before they shall take effect; he may grant pardons for offenses against the laws of said territory, and reprieves for offenses against the law of the United States, until the decision of the president can be made known thereon; he shall commission all officers who shall be appointed to office under the laws of the said territory, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be a secretary of the said territory, who shall reside therein, and hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the president of the United States; he shall record and preserve all the laws and proceedings of the legislative assembly hereinafter constituted, and all the acts and proceedings of the governor in his executive department; he shall transmit one copy of the laws and one copy of the executive proceedings, on or before the first Monday in December in each year, to the president of the United States; and, at the same time, two copies of the laws to the speaker of the house of representatives, for the use of congress. And in case of the death, removal, resignation or necessary absence of the governor from the territory, the secretary shall have, and he is hereby authorized and required to execute and perform all the powers and duties of the governor during such vacancy or necessary absence, or until another governor shall be duly appointed to fill such vacancy.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power shall be vested in the governor and a legislative assembly. The legislative assembly shall consist of a council and house of representatives. The council shall consist of thirteen members, having the qualifications of voters as hereinafter prescribed, whose term of service shall continue two years. The house of representatives shall consist of twenty-six members, possessing the same qualifications as prescribed for the members of the council, and whose term of service shall continue one year. An apportionment shall be made as nearly equal as practicable among the several counties, for the election of the council and representatives, giving to each section of the territory representation in the ratio of its population, Indians excepted, as nearly as may be. And the said members of the council and house of representatives shall reside in and be inhabitants of the district for which they may be elected. Previous to the first election, the governor of the territory shall cause the census or enumeration of the inhabitants of the several counties in the territory to be taken and made by the sheriffs of the said counties, respectively, unless the same shall have been taken within three months previous to the third day of July next, and returns thereof made by said sheriffs to the governor. The first election shall be held at such time and place, and be conducted in such manner, as the governor shall appoint and direct; and he shall, at the same time, declare the number of members of the council and house of representatives to which each of the counties or districts are entitled under this act. The number of persons authorized to be elected, having the greatest number of votes in each of the said counties or districts for the council, shall be declared by the said governor to be duly elected to the said council; and the person or persons having the greatest number of votes for the house of representatives, equal to the number to which each county may be entitled, shall also be declared by the governor to be duly elected: provided, the governor shall order a new election when there is a tie between two or more persons voted for, to supply the vacancy made by such tie. And the persons thus elected to the legislative assembly shall meet at such place and on such day as he shall appoint; but thereafter the time, place and manner of holding and conducting all elections by the people, and the apportioning the representation in the several counties to the council and house of representatives according to population, shall be prescribed by law, as well as the day of the annual commencement of the session of the said legislative assembly; but no session in any year shall exceed the term of seventy-five days.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That every free white male citizen of the United States above the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been an inhabitant of said territory at the time of its organization, shall be entitled to vote at the first election, and shall be eligible to any office within the said territory; but the qualifications of voters at all subsequent elections shall be such as shall be determined by the legislative assembly: provided that the right of suffrage shall be exercised only by citizens of the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power of the territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of non-residents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents. All the laws of the governor and legislative assembly shall be submitted to, and, if disapproved by, the congress of the United States, the same shall be null and of no effect.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That all township officers, and all county officers except judicial officers, justices of the peace, sheriffs and clerks of courts shall be elected by the people in such manner as is now prescribed by the laws of the territory of Wisconsin, or as may, after the first election, be provided by the governor and legislative assembly of Iowa territory. The governor shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council, shall appoint all judicial officers, justices of the peace, sheriffs, and all militia officers, except those of the staff, and all civil officers not herein provided for. Vacancies occurring in the recess of the council shall be filled by appointments from the governor, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the legislative assembly; but the said governor may appoint, in the first instance, the aforesaid officers, who shall hold their offices until the end of the next session of the said legislative assembly.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That no member of the legislative assembly shall hold, or be appointed to, any office created, or the salary or emoluments of which shall have been increased, whilst he was a member, during the term for which he shall have been elected, and for one year after the expiration of such term; and no person holding a commission or appointment under the United States, or any of its officers except as a militia officer, shall be a member of the said council or house of representatives, or shall hold any office under the government of the said territory.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the judicial power of the said territory shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, probate courts, and in justices of the peace. The supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and two associate judges, any two of whom shall be a quorum, and who shall hold a term at the seat of government of the said territory annually; and they shall hold their offices during the term of four years. The said territory shall be divided into three judicial districts; and a district court or courts shall be held in each of the three districts, by one of the judges of the supreme court, at such times and places as may be prescribed by law; and the said judges shall, after their appointment, respectively, reside in the districts which shall be assigned to them. The jurisdiction of the several courts herein provided for, both appellate and original, and that of the probate courts, and of the jutices of the peace, shall be as limited by law: provided, however, that justices of the peace shall not have jurisdiction of any matter of controversy when the title or boundaries of land may be in dispute, or where the debt or sum claimed exceeds fifty dollars. And the said supreme and district courts, respectively, shall possess a chancery as well as a common law jurisdiction. Each district court shall appoint its clerk, who shall keep his office at the place where the court may be held, and the said clerks shall also be the registers in chancery; and any vacancy in said office of clerk, happening in the vacation of said court, may be filled by the judge of said district, which appointment shall continue until the next term of said court. And writs of error, bills of exception, and appeals in chancery causes, shall be allowed in all cases from the final decisions of the said district courts to the supreme court, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law; but in no case removed to the supreme court shall trial by jury be allowed in said court. The supreme court may appoint its own clerk, and every clerk shall hold his office at the pleasure of the court by which he shall have been appointed. And writs of error and appeals from the final decision of the said supreme court shall be allowed and taken to the supreme court of the United States, in the same manner and under the same regulations as from the circuit courts of the United States, where the value of the property or the amount in controversy, to be ascertained by the oath or affirmation of either party, shall exceed one thousand dollars. And each of the said district courts shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction in all cases arising under the constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States. And the first six days of every term of the said courts, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, shall be appropriated to the trial of causes arising under the said constitution and laws. And writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of the said courts, in all such cases, shall be made to the supreme court of the territory, in the same manner as in other cases. The said clerk shall receive in all such cases the same fees which the clerks of the district courts of Wisconsin territory now receive for similar services.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That there shall be an attorney for the said territory appointed, who shall continue in office four years, unless sooner removed by the president, and who shall receive the same fees and salary as the attorney of the United States for the present territory of Wisconsin. There shall also be a marshal for the territory appointed, who shall hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the president, who shall execute all process issuing from the said courts when exercising their jurisdiction as circuit and district courts of the United States. He shall perform the same duties, be subject to the same regulations and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees as the marshal of the district court of the United States for the present territory of Wisconsin; and shall, in addition, be paid the sum of two hundred dollars annually as a compensation for extra services.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the governor, secretary, chief justice and associate judges, attorney and marshal shall be nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, appointed, by the president of the United States. The governor and secretary, to be appointed as aforesaid, shall, before they act as such, respectively take an oath or affirmation before some judge or justice of the peace in the existing territory of Wisconsin, duly commissioned and qualified to administer an oath or affirmation, or before the chief justice or some associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, to support the constitution of the United States, and for the faithful discharge of the duties of their respective offices; which said oaths, when so taken, shall be certified by the person before whom the same shall have been taken, and such certificate shall be received and recorded by the said secretary among the executive proceedings. And, afterwards, the chief justice and associate judges, and all other civil officers in said territory, before they act as such, shall take a like oath or affirmation, before said governor, or secretary, or some judge or justice of the territory, who may be duly commissioned and qualified, which said oath or affirmation shall be certified and transmitted, by the person taking the same, to the secretary, to be by him recorded as aforesaid; and, afterwards, the like oath or affirmation shall be taken, certified and recorded in such manner and form as may be prescribed by law. The governor shall receive an annual salary of fifteen hundred dollars as governor, and one thousand dollars as superintendent of Indian affairs. The said chief judge and associate justices shall each receive an annual salary of fifteen hundred dollars. The secretary shall receive an annual salary of twelve hundred dollars. The said salaries shall be paid quarter-yearly, at the treasury of the United States. The members of the legislative assembly shall be entitled to receive three dollars each, per day, during their attendance at the session thereof, and three dollars each for every twenty miles travel in going to and returning from the said sessions, estimated according to the nearest usually traveled route. There shall be appropriated annually the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars to be expended by the governor to defray the contingent expenses of the territory; and there shall also be appropriated annually a sum sufficient, to be expended by the secretary of the territory, and upon an estimate to be made by the secretary of the treasury of the United States, to defray the expenses of the legislative assembly, the printing of the laws, and other incidental expenses; and the secretary of the territory shall annually account to the secretary of the treasury of the United States for the manner in which the aforesaid sum shall have been expended.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the inhabitants of the said territory shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities heretofore granted and secured to the territory of Wisconsin, and to its inhabitants; and the existing laws of the territory of Wisconsin shall be extended over said territory, so far as the same be not incompatible with the provisions of this act, subject, nevertheless, to be altered, modified or repealed by the governor and legislative assembly of the said territory of Iowa; and, further, the laws of the United States are hereby extended over and shall be in force in said territory, so far as the same, or any provisions thereof, may be applicable.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the legislative assembly of the territory of Iowa shall hold its session at such time and place in said territory as the governor thereof shall appoint and direct; and at said session, or as soon thereafter as may by them be deemed expedient, the said governor and legislative assembly shall proceed to locate and establish the seat of government for said territory, at such place as they may deem eligible, which place, however, shall thereafter be subject to be changed by the governor and legislative assembly. And the sum of twenty thousand dollars, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, is hereby granted to the said territory of Iowa, which shall be applied by the governor and legislative assembly thereof to defray the expenses of erecting public buildings at the seat of government.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That a delegate to the house of representatives of the United States, to serve for the term of two years, may be elected by the voters qualified to elect members of the legislative assembly, who shall be entitled to the same rights and privileges as have been granted to the delegates from the several territories of the United States to the said house of representatives. The first election shall be held at such time and place or places, and be conducted in such manner, as the governor shall appoint and direct. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be declared by the governor to be duly elected, and a certificate thereof shall be given to the person so elected.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That all suits, process and proceedings, and all indictments and informations, which shall be undetermined on the third day of July next, in the district courts of Wisconsin territory, west of the Mississippi river, shall be transferred to be heard, tried, prosecuted and determined in the district courts hereby established, which may include the said counties.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That all justices of the peace, constables, sheriffs, and all other executive and judicial officers, who shall be in office on the third day of July next in that portion of the present territory of Wisconsin which will then, by this act, become the territory of Iowa, shall be, and are hereby authorized and required to continue to exercise and perform the duties of their respective offices, as officers of the territory of Iowa, temporarily, and until they or others shall be duly appointed to fill their places by the territorial government of Iowa, in the manner herein directed: provided that no officer shall hold or continue in office by virtue of this provision over twelve months from the said third day of July next.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That all causes which shall have been or may be removed from the courts held by the present territory of Wisconsin, in the counties west of the Mississippi river, by appeal or otherwise, into the supreme court for the territory of Wisconsin, and which shall be undetermined therein on the third day of July next, shall be certified by the clerk of the said supreme court, and transferred to the supreme court of said territory of Iowa, there to be proceeded in to final determination, in the same manner that they might have been in the said supreme court of the territory of Wisconsin.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That the sum of five thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by and under the direction of the governor of said territory of Iowa in the purchase of a library, to be kept at the seat of government, for the accommodation of the governor, legislative assembly, judges, secretary, marshal and attorney of said territory, and such other persons as the governor and legislative assembly shall direct.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That, from and after the day named in this act for the organization of the territory of Iowa, the term of the members of the council and house of representatives of the territory of Wisconsin shall be deemed to have expired, and an entirely new organization of the council and house of representatives of the territory of Wisconsin, as constituted by this act, shall take place as follows: As soon as practicable, after the passage of this act, the governor of the territory of Wisconsin shall apportion the thirteen members of the council, and twenty-six members of the house of representatives, among the several counties or districts comprised within said territory, according to their population, as nearly as may be (Indians excepted). The first election shall be held at such time as the governor shall appoint and direct, and shall be conducted, and returns thereof made, in all respects according to the provisions of the laws of said territory, and the governor shall declare the person having the greatest number of votes to be elected, and shall order a new election, when there is a tie between two or more persons voted for, to supply the vacancy made by such tie. The persons thus elected shall meet at Madison, the seat of government, on such day as he shall appoint, but thereafter the apportioning of the representation in the several counties to the council and house of representatives according to population, the day of their election, and the day for the commencement of the session of the legislative assembly, shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That temporarily, and until otherwise provided by law of the legislative assembly, the governor of the territory of Iowa may define the judicial districts of said territory, and assign the judges who may be appointed for said territory to the several districts, and also appoint the time for holding courts in the several counties in each district, by proclamation to be issued by him; but the legislative assembly, at their first or any subsequent session, may organize, alter or modify such judicial districts, and assign the judges, and alter the times of holding the courts, or any of them.

AMENDMENTS TO THE ORGANIC LAW.

AN ACT TO ALTER AND AMEND THE ORGANIC LAW OF THE TERRITORIES OF WISCONSIN AND IOWA.

[Approved March 3, 1839.]

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That every bill which shall have passed the council and house of representatives of the territories of Iowa and Wisconsin shall, before it become a law, be presented to the governor of the territory; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it with his objections to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered; and if approved by two-thirds of that house it shall become a law. But, in all such cases, the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays; and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journals of each house, respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the governor within three days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the assembly by adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not be so construed as to deprive congress of the right to disapprove of any law passed by the said legislative assembly, or in any way to impair or alter the power of congress over laws passed by said assembly.

AN ACT TO AUTHORIZE THE ELECTION OR APPOINTMENT OF CERTAIN OFFICERS IN THE TERRITORY OF IOWA, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

[Approved March 3, 1839.]

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the legislative assembly of the territory of Iowa, shall be, and are hereby, authorized to provide by law for the election or appointment of sheriffs, judges of probate, justices of the peace and county surveyors within the said territory, in such way or manner, and at such times and places, as to them may seem proper; and, after a law shall have been passed by the legislative assembly for that purpose, all elections or appointments of the above named officers thereafter to be had or made shall be in pursuance of such law.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the term of service of the present delegate for said territory of Iowa shall expire on the twenty-seventh day of October, eighteen hundred and forty; and the qualified electors of said territory may elect a delegate to serve from the said twenty-seventh day of October to the fourth day of March thereafter, at such time and place as shall be prescribed by law by the legislative assembly, and thereafter a delegate shall be elected, at such time and place as the legislative assembly may direct, to serve for a congress, as members of the house of representatives are now elected.

AN ACT FOR THE ADMISSION OF THE STATES OF IOWA AND FLORIDA INTO THE UNION.

[Approved March 3, 1845.]

WHEREAS the people of the territory of Iowa did, on the seventh day of October, eighteen hundred and forty-four, by a convention of delegates called and assembled for that purpose, form for themselves a constitution and state government; and whereas the people of the territory of Florida did, in like manner, by their delegates, on the eleventh day of January, eighteen hundred and thirty-nine, form for themselves a constitution and state government, both of which said constitutions are republican; and said conventions having asked the admission of their respective territories into the union as states, on equal footing with the original states:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the states of Iowa and Florida be, and the same are hereby, declared to be states of the United States of America, and are hereby admitted into the union on equal footing with the original states, in all respects whatsoever.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the following shall be the boundaries of the said state of Iowa, to wit: beginning at the mouth of the Des Moines river, at the middle of the Mississippi, thence by the middle of the channel of that river to a parallel of latitude passing through the mouth of the Mankato or Blue-earth river, thence west along the said parallel of latitude to a point where it is intersected by a meridian line, seventeen degrees and thirty minutes west of the meridian of Washington city, thence due south to the northern boundary line of the state of Missouri, thence eastwardly following that boundary to the point at which the same intersects the Des Moines river, thence by the middle of the channel of that river to the place of beginning.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said state of Iowa shall have concurrent jurisdiction on the river Mississippi, and every other river bordering on the said state of Iowa, so far as the said rivers shall form a common boundary to said state and any other state or states now or hereafter to be formed or bounded by the same: such rivers to be common to both; and that the said river Mississippi, and the navigable waters leading into the same, shall be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of said state as to all other citizens of the United States, without any tax, duty, impost or toll therefor, imposed by the said state of Iowa.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That it is made and declared to be a fundamental condition of the admission of said state of Iowa into the union, that so much of this act as relates to the said state of Iowa shall be assented to by a majority of the qualified electors at their township elections, in the manner and at the time prescribed in the sixth section of the thirteenth article of the constitution adopted at Iowa City the first day of November, Anno Domini eighteen hundred and forty-four, or by the legislature of said state. And, so soon as such assent shall be given, the president of the United States shall announce the same by proclamation; and therefrom, without further proceedings on the part of congress, the admission of the said state of Iowa into the union, on an equal footing in all respects whatever with the original states, shall be considered as complete.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That said state of Florida shall embrace the territories of East and West Florida, which, by the treaty of amity, settlement and limits between the United States and Spain, on the twenty-second day of February, eighteen hundred and nineteen, were ceded to the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That, until the next census and apportionment shall be made, each of said states of Iowa and Florida shall be entitled to one representative in the house of representatives of the United States.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That said states of Iowa and Florida are admitted into the union on the express condition that they shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the public lands lying within them, nor levy any tax on the same whilst remaining the property of the United States: provided that the ordinance of the convention that formed the constitution of Iowa, and which is appended to the said constitution, shall not be deemed or taken to have any effect or validity, or to be recognized as in any manner obligatory upon the government of the United States.

AN ACT SUPPLEMENTAL TO THE ACT FOR THE ADMISSION OF THE STATES OF IOWA AND FLORIDA INTO THE UNION.

[Approved March 3, 1845.]

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the laws of the United States, which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the state of Iowa as elsewhere within the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said state shall be one district, and be called the district of Iowa; and a district court shall be held therein, to consist of one judge, who shall reside in the said district, and be called a district judge. He shall hold, at the seat of government of the said state, two sessions of the said district court annually, on the first Monday in January, and he shall, in all things, have and exercise the same jurisdiction and powers which were by law given to the judge of the Kentucky district, under an act entitled "An act to establish the judicial courts of the United States." He shall appoint a clerk for the said district, who shall reside and keep the records of the said court at the place of holding the same; and shall receive, for the services performed by him, the same fees to which the clerk of the Kentucky district is by law entitled for similar services.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be allowed to the judge of the said district court the annual compensation of fifteen hundred dollars, to commence from the date of his appointment, to be paid quarterly at the treasury of the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed in the said district a person learned in the law to act as attorney for the United States; who shall, in addition to his stated fees, be paid annually by the United States two hundred dollars, as a full compensation for all extra services; the said payments to be made quarterly, at the treasury of the United States.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That a marshal shall be appointed for the said district, who shall perform the same duties, be subject to the same regulations and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees, as are prescribed and allowed to marshals in other districts; and shall, moreover, be entitled to the sum of two hundred dollars annually as a compensation for all extra services.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That, in lieu of the propositions submitted to the congress of the United States by an ordinance passed on the first day of November, eighteen hundred and forty-four, by the convention of delegates at Iowa City, assembled for the purpose of making a constitution for the state of Iowa, which are hereby rejected, the following propositions be, and the same are hereby, offered to the legislature of the state of Iowa, for their acceptance or rejection; which, if accepted, under the authority conferred on the said legislature, by the convention which framed the constitution of the said state, shall be obligatory upon the United States.

1. That section numbered sixteen in every township of the public lands, and, where such section has been sold or otherwise disposed of, other lands equivalent thereto, and as contiguous as may be, shall be granted to the state for the use of schools.

2. That the seventy-two sections of land set apart and reserved for the use and support of a university, by an act of congress approved on the twentieth day of July, eighteen hundred and forty, entitled "An act granting two townships of land for the use of a university in the territory of Iowa," are hereby granted and conveyed to the state, to be appropriated solely to the use and support of such university, in such manner as the legislature may prescribe.

3. That five entire sections of land, to be selected and located under the direction of the legislature, in legal divisions of not less than one quarter section, from any of the unappropriated lands belonging to the United States within the said state, are hereby granted to the state for the purpose of completing the public buildings of the said state, or for the erection of public buildings at the seat of government of the said state, as the legislature may determine and direct.

4. That all salt springs within the state, not exceeding twelve in number, with six sections of land adjoining, or as contiguous as may be to each, shall be granted to the said state for its use; the same to be selected by the legislature thereof within one year after the admission of said state, and the same, when so selected, to be used on such terms, conditions and regulations as the legislature of the state shall direct: provided that no salt spring, the right whereof is now vested in any individual or individuals, or which may hereafter be confirmed or adjudged to any individual or individuals, shall, by this section, be granted to said state: and provided, also, that the general assembly shall never lease or sell the same, at any one time, for a longer period than ten years, without the consent of congress.

5. That five per cent. of the net proceeds of sales of all public lands lying within the said state, which have been or shall be sold by congress, from and after the admission of said state, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be appropriated for making public roads and canals within the said state, as the legislature may direct: provided that the five foregoing propositions herein offered are on the condition that the legislature of the said state, by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by the convention which framed the constitution of the said state, shall provide by an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that the said state shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, nor with any regulations congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to the bona fide purchasers thereof; and that no tax shall be imposed upon lands the property of the United States; and that in no case shall non-resident proprietors be taxed higher than residents; and that the bounty lands granted, or hereafter to be granted, for military services during the late war, shall, while they continue to be held by the patentees or their heirs, remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under the authority of the state, whether for state, county, township, or any other purpose, for the term of three years from and after the date of the patents, respectively.

ACCEPTING PROPOSITIONS OF CONGRESS.

AN ACT AND ORDINANCE ACCEPTING THE PROPOSITION MADE BY CONGRESS ON THE ADMISSION OF IOWA INTO THE UNION AS A STATE.

[Approved January 15, 1849.]

SECTION 1. Be it enacted and ordained by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa, That the propositions to the state of Iowa on her admission into the union, made by the act of congress, entitled "An act supplemental to the act for the admission of the states of Iowa and Florida into the union," approved March 3, 1845, and which are contained in the sixth section of that act, are hereby accepted in lieu of the propositions submitted to congress by an ordinance, passed on the first day of November, eighteen hundred and forty-four, by the convention of delegates which assembled at Iowa City on the first Monday of October, eighteen hundred and forty-four, for the purpose of forming a constitution for said state, and which were rejected by congress: provided the general assembly shall have the right, in accordance with the provisions of the second section of the tenth article of the constitution of Iowa, to appropriate the five per cent. of the net proceeds of sales of all public lands lying within the state which have been or shall be sold by congress from and after the admission of said state, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, to the support of common schools.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted and ordained, As conditions of the grants specified in the propositions first mentioned in the foregoing section, irrevocable and unalterable without the consent of the United States, that the state of Iowa will never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, nor with any regulations congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to the bona fide purchasers thereof, and that no tax shall be imposed on lands, the property of the United States; and that in no case shall non-resident proprietors be taxed higher than residents; and that the bounty lands granted, or hereafter to be granted, for military services during the late war with Great Britain shall, while they continue to be held by the patentees or their heirs, remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under the authority of the state, whether for state, county, township, or other purposes, for the term of three years from and after the dates of the patents respectively.

SEC. 3. It is hereby made the duty of the secretary of state, after the taking effect of this act, to forward one copy of the same to each of our senators and representatives in congress, who are hereby required to procure the consent of congress to the diversion of the five per cent. fund indicated in the proviso to the first section of this act.

SEC. 4. This act shall take effect from and after its publication in the weekly newspapers printed in Iowa City.

CONSTITUTION OF IOWA.

Preamble. WE, THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF IOWA, grateful to the Supreme Being for the blessings hitherto enjoyed, and feeling our dependence on Him for a continuation of those blessings, do ordain and establish a free and independent government, by the name of the STATE OF IOWA, the boundaries whereof shall be as follows:

Boundaries. Beginning in the middle of the main channel of the Mississippi river, at a point due east of the middle of the mouth of the main channel of the Des Moines river; thence up the middle of the main channel of the said Des Moines river, to a point on said river where the northern boundary line of the State of Missouri—as established by the constitution of that state, adopted June 12th, 1820—crosses the said middle of the main channel of the said Des Moines river; thence westwardly along the said northern boundary line of the state of Missouri, as established at the time aforesaid, until an extension of said line intersects the middle of the main channel of the Missouri river; thence up the middle of the main channel of the said Missouri river to a point opposite the middle of the main channel of the Big Sioux river, according to Nicollett's map; thence up the main channel of the said Big Sioux river, according to the said map, until it is intersected by the parallel of forty-three degrees and thirty minutes north latitude; thence east along said parallel of forty-three degrees and thirty minutes, until said parallel intersects the middle of the main channel of the Mississippi river; thence down the middle of the main channel of the said Mississippi river to the place of beginning.

"The middle of the main channel of the Mississippi river" as here used means the middle of the main bed of the river from shore to shore: Dunleith, etc., Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55–558.

But the supreme court of the United States holds that this language means the thread of the stream, or the "mid-channel," and if there are several channels the middle of the principal one, or rather, the one usually followed in navigation: Iowa v. Illinois, 147 U. S. 1.

A lake connected with the Mississippi river, but separated from it at ordinary stage of water, by dry land, held, to be included within the term "waters of the state" as used in a statute: State v. Haug, 64 N. W., 398.

ARTICLE 1.—BILL OF RIGHTS.

Rights of persons. SECTION 1. All men are, by nature, free and equal, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

Discrimination on account of color: This section forbids discrimination by a common carrier against a passenger on account of color. Therefore, held, that a regulation of a steamboat by which a colored person was denied the privilege of a seat at the table provided for passengers could not be enforced: Coger v. Northwestern U. Packet Co., 37–145.

Also, held, that colored children cannot be excluded from the public schools, nor compelled to attend a separate school: Clark v. Board of Directors, 24–266; Smith v. Directors, 40–518; Dove v. Independent School Dist., 41–689.

Discriminations against corporations: An act providing a special method for the taxation of the property of railway companies, held unconstitutional, because not made applicable to property of the same character owned by private individuals. (See art. 8, § 2): Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633.

But the statute authorizing the recovery of double damages for stock injured by a railway company on its track where it has a right to fence is not unconstitutional as denying to any person the equal protection of the law, such provision being intended merely as a penalty for the purpose of inducing the fencing of railroads: Tredway v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 43–527.

Permits to sell liquors: This section is not violated by a statutory provision that permits to sell intoxicating liquors shall only be granted to persons of good moral character: In re Ruth, 32–250.

Nor by the provisions of the prohibitory liquor law: Santo v. State, 2-165, 216.

As to requirement that laws shall have a uniform operation, etc., see art. 1, § 6, and art. 3, § 30.

As to due process of law, see art. 1, § 9.

Political power. SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right, at all times, to alter or reform the same, whenever the public good may require it.

Political power consists of legislative, executive and judicial authority, and these all inhere in the people in the first instance: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9. And see notes to art. 3, § 1.

See, further, art. 1, § 25.

Religion. SEC. 3. The general assembly shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; nor shall any person be compelled to attend any place of worship, pay tithes, taxes, or other rates, for building or repairing places of worship, or the maintenance of any minister or ministry.

The statute exempting church property from taxation is not in conflict with this section. Trustees of Griswold College v. State, 46-275.

The use of a schoolhouse for the purpose of religious worship, when authorized by a vote of the electors of the district, is not prohibited: Davis v. Boget, 50-11.

The guaranty of religious freedom is not violated by the casual use of a public building as a place for offering prayer and doing other acts of religious worship; and the statute allowing the Bible to be used in public schools, with the provision that no pupil shall be required to read it contrary to the wishes of his parent or guardian, is not unconstitutional: Moore v. Monroe, 64-367.

Religious test. SEC. 4. No religious test shall be required as a qualification for any office of public trust, and no person shall be deprived of any of his rights, privileges, or capacities, or disqualified from the performance of any of his public or private duties, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of his opinions on the subject of religion; and any party to any judicial proceeding shall have the right to use as a witness, or take the testimony of, any other person, not disqualified on account of interest, who may be cognizant of any fact material to the case; and parties to suits may be witnesses, as provided by law.

Competency of witnesses: This section renders competent as a witness for the defendant in a criminal prosecution a person who is jointly indicted with him for the same crime but is put upon a separate trial: State v. Nash, 10-81.

Even where such defendants are put upon trial jointly, either one is entitled to the testimony of his co-defendant: State v. Gigher, 23-318.

The legislature may declare that interest in the event of a suit may or may not disqualify a witness, as shall be deemed best; and the provisions of Rev., § 3983, that husband or wife should not be a witness for or against the other in a civil action to which either of them was a party, held not to be in conflict with this section: Karney v. Paisley, 13-89. But see, also, Blake v. Graves, 18-312.

The provisions of this section as to the competency of witnesses do not give a party the right to the testimony of a child not possessed of sufficient understanding, by reason of tender years, to feel the obligation of an oath: Kilburn v. Mullin, 22-498.

It is not a violation of any constitutional privilege to provide that the credibility of a witness may be affected by the fact as to his sensibility to the obligation of an oath: Searcy v. Miller, 57-613.

Dueling. SEC. 5. Any citizen of this state who may hereafter be engaged, either directly or indirectly, in a duel, either as principal or accessory before the fact, shall forever be disqualified from holding any office under the constitution and laws of this state.

Laws uniform. SEC. 6. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation; the general assembly shall not grant to any citizen or class of citizens, privileges or immunities, which upon the same terms shall not equally belong to all citizens.

Uniformity of operation of general laws: If a law operates upon every person within the relations and circumstances provided for, it is sufficient as to uniformity: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112, 116.

Therefore, held, that a provision as to liability of a railroad company for injuries to employees is not open to the objection that it is not of uniform operation: McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20-338; Deppe v. Chi- cago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36-52; Bucklew v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-603; Central Trust Co. v. Sloan, 65-655.

So held, also, as to a provision making railroad companies liable in certain cases for double damages for stock killed: Jones v. Galena & C. U. R. Co., 16-6; Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53-632.

A curative act is not necessarily unconstitutional as not being of uniform operation: McMillen v. County Judge, 6-391; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Independent Dist. 68 N. W., 881.

So a law legalizing the defective organization of a specified school district was sustained: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26-340.

So a law legalizing taxes levied without authority of law: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112.

Laws are of uniform operation if in their operation they apply to all persons in like situation. Granting to certain medical colleges the privilege of having their diplomas considered sufficient to entitle the holder to a certificate to practice medicine is not, as against colleges not given this privilege, invalid as a granting of a special privilege: Iowa Ec. Med. College v. Schrader, 87-659.

The statute providing that the fact that defendant in an action was in the military service of the United States or the state should be sufficient cause for a continuance so long as such defendant was in such service, held not unconstitutional as not being of uniform operation: McCormick v. Rusch, 15-127.

A statute providing for excluding property from city limits would be unconstitutional if not made applicable to cities already incorporated as well as those to be incorporated: Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11-482.

It is not competent for the legislature to submit the question whether an act shall become a law to a vote of the people. Therefore, held, that § 18 of the prohibitory liquor law of 1855, providing for the submission of the question to vote in each county as to whether such law should be in force therein, was unconstitutional, and that the act was in force throughout the state without such submission: Santo v. State, 2-165; State v. Beneke, 9-203.

And the license act of 1857, containing a provision that the prohibitory liquor law of 1855 should not be repealed in any county except by a vote of the people of that county, was held unconstitutional for the same reason: Geebrick v. State, 5-491; State v. Weir, 33-134.

But § 114 of Code of '51, and the act of 1857 (Rev. § 287 et seq.), allowing the county judge to submit to vote in each county the question whether sheep and swine should be allowed to run at large, were held not unconstitutional on this ground, inasmuch as the law was in force without a vote of the people, and it simply authorized the people of the county to adopt a mere police regulation: Dalby v. Wolf, 14-228.

See, further, art. 3, § 1, and notes.

The statute prohibiting the sale of ale, wine and beer within two miles of the corporate limits of a municipal corporation, held, not objectionable on the ground of want of uniformity in its operation: State v. Shroeder, 51-197.

So, also, the provisions as to granting of permits to sell intoxicating liquors only to persons of good moral character, held not unconstitutional: In re Ruth, 32-250.

A statute dividing railroads into three classes and fixing maximum rates of charge for each class, held not unconstitutional on account of lack of uniformity: Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S., 155.

A statute making special provisions as to the time for bringing actions on insurance policies different from the provisions relating to actions on other contracts is not unconstitutional by reason of not being of uniform operation: Christie v. Life Indemnity, etc., Co., 82-360.

A statute specially applicable to itinerant vendors is not unconstitutional: State v. Gouss, 85-21.

A statute applicable to certain cities only, designated as having a population in excess of a certain number, is not invalid for want of uniformity: Owen v. Sioux City, 91-190.

See, also, notes to art. 3, § 30.

Uniformity in taxation comes within the purview of the provision as to uniform operation of laws: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56.

But it is not necessary to the validity of a tax that it operate upon all persons in the state alike: Primghar State Bank v. Rerick, 64 N. W., 801.

A statute providing a special method for the taxation of express and telegraph companies, held not objectionable under this provision, as the burdens imposed by it fell equally upon all citizens coming within a certain class or condition: United States Ex. Co. v. Ellyson, 28-370.

The fact that a city is authorized to exempt from water-rent property within its limits which has not the benefit of the water supply does not render such a provision unconstitutional: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396.

The provisions for a different method for assessing the property of railroad companies from that provided for the assessment of other property, held not to be unconstitutional as being in conflict with this section: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67-199.

Also, held, that the power given to cities to improve streets and make the cost thereof a lien upon abutting property was not void as authorizing unequal taxation: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

An act exempting lots of ten acres or more in extent from municipal taxation under certain circumstances is not unconstitutional under this section: Leicht v. Burlington, 73-29.

A city ordinance discriminating in favor of resident merchants of such city and against other merchants of the state, by imposing a license tax on the latter, would be unconstitutional as not being of uniform operation: Pacific Junction v. Dyer, 64-38. And see Marshalltown v. Blum, 58-184.

The imposition of a license fee upon transient merchants is not invalid for want of uniformity. Ottumwa v. Zekind, 64 N. W., 646.

Exclusive privileges: The provisions of this section prohibiting the granting of exclusive privileges, etc., does not affect exclusive charters or franchises already granted: Burlington, etc., Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48–133.

See, further, as to uniformity of laws, art. 3, § 30, and notes.

Liberty of speech and the press. SEC. 7. Every person may speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right. No law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech, or of the press. In all prosecutions or indictments for libel, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury, and if it appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous was true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted.

Newspaper publications; contempt: The publication of newspaper comments upon the decision of a court when the case is disposed of and the decision announced are not punishable as contempt of the court: Dunham v. State, 6–245.

Publication of articles in a newspaper reflecting upon the conduct of a judge in relation to a cause disposed of before such publication does not amount to a contempt: State v. Anderson, 40–207.

Privileged communications: Words spoken by one in the performance of public or official duty, upon a just occasion, without malicious motive, are privileged communications, and are not actionable unless express malice is shown: Mayo v. Sample, 18–306.

A communication by a grand jury to the court, not required by law to be made, such as a report charging misconduct on the part of officers, but not returned by way of indictment, is not privileged: Rector v. Smith, 11–302.

Charges made in a judicial proceeding, whether civil or criminal, will not support an action for libel, though the same charges, if made under other circumstances, would constitute libel: Mass v. Meire, 37–97.

If words charged as slanderous were spoken by a witness without malice, believing them to be responsive, he would not be liable. But if what is testified to is not pertinent and material to the matter in controversy, and is spoken for the purpose of defaming plaintiff, such words are not protected: Smith v. Howard, 28–51.

Every one who believes himself to be possessed of knowledge which, if true, does or may affect the rights or interests of another, has the right to communicate in good faith his belief to such person: Mott v. Dawson, 46–533.

Words spoken of a candidate at an election for a public office, to electors whose suffrages are sought, if spoken without malice and in good faith believing them to be true, by one having reasonable cause to so believe, and with the honest purpose of protecting the public from the supposed dishonesty of such candidate, do not render the person speaking them liable in an action for slander: Ibid.

A parent has a right to know the truth of reports charging a minor child with an offense or immoral conduct, and a person having information which is sought by such parent will be completely justified in imparting the same, if acting in good faith: Long v. Peters, 47–239.

The fact that words are privileged is only presumptive evidence of the want of malice, and plaintiff may show by extrinsic evidence that there was malice nevertheless: Mielenz v. Quasdorf, 68–726.

Instructions of court in cases of libel: Although the jury in prosecutions for libel determine both the law and the facts, the court has the right to instruct them in these as well as in other criminal cases; and the conclusive presumption is that they follow the instructions of the court; therefore, an erroneous instruction will be regarded as prejudicial and a ground for reversal as in other cases: State v. Rice, 56–431.

The doctrine that the jurors are judges of the law as well as of the facts, in libel, applies only to criminal prosecutions, and not to civil actions for damages: Forshee v. Abrams, 2–571.

Personal security. SEC. 8. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable seizures and searches, shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue but on probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons and things to be seized.

Searches and seizures: A search-warrant is not unreasonable in the legal sense when it is for a thing obnoxious to the law, and of a person and place particularly described, and is issued on oath of probable cause: Santo v. State, 2–165.

Therefore, held, that the provision for the issuance of a search-warrant for the seizure of intoxicating liquors is not unconstitutional as not requiring sufficient particularity in description, or as authorizing unreasonable search and seizure: Ibid.

Description of the place held sufficient in a particular case: State v. Thompson, 44–399.

An objection to the sufficiency of a warrant under which property has been seized cannot be raised for the first time in the district court on appeal from the justice issuing the warrant: Ibid.

The sheriff is justified in searching the person arrested and taking from him money or property in any way connected with the crime charged, or which may serve in identifying the prisoner, or be used by him in effecting an escape. But property thus taken is not subject to attachment: Commercial Exchange Bank v. McLeod, 65–665.

Police officers upon the arrest of one charged with felony may make search of his person for stolen property, instruments used in the commission of the crime, or any article which may give a clue to its commission or the identification of the criminal: Reifsnyder v. Lee, 44–101.

The fact that an officer makes search for and seizure of intoxicating liquors unlawfully kept for sale without having any warrant for such action will not render the proceedings under the warrant afterwards obtained illegal: State v. Ward, 75–637.

Trial by jury; due process of law. SEC. 9. The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate; but the general assembly may authorize trial by a jury of a less number than twelve men in inferior courts; but no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law.

What constitutes trial by jury: The right of trial by jury implies a trial by jury of twelve men except where the constitution authorizes trial by a less number: Santo v. State, 2–165.

The jury contemplated by this section is the jury recognized by the common law, which is constituted of twelve persons, and the legislature has no authority, in providing for jury trial under the constitution, to provide for a less number than twelve jurors. Therefore, held, that a provision for a verdict by ten or eleven jurors, when the jury has been reduced to that number by sickness, is unconstitutional: Eshelman v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 67–296; Kelsh v. Dyersville, 68–137.

It is immaterial that the party complaining of the illegality of the jury is a municipal corporation. Although it may be that such a corporation has no constitutional right to jury trial, yet the statute does not profess to make any special provisions for such cases: Kelsh v. Dyersville, 68–137.

Less than twelve jurors in inferior courts: As this section provides for a trial by a less number of jurors than twelve in inferior courts, and § 11 of this article gives such inferior courts jurisdiction of offenses of an inferior grade, a trial in such a court of an offense within its jurisdiction by a jury of less than twelve is not a violation of the right of jury trial: Byran v. State, 4–349.

If, in the inferior tribunal, a party has a trial before the constitutional jury provided for such court, though of less than twelve men, he cannot, of right, claim in the face of the statute a second trial on the merits on appeal to the district court: Des Moines v. Layman, 21–153.

A defendant accused of an offense triable under the provisions of the constitution before a justice of the peace by a jury of less than twelve cannot complain of being deprived of the right of jury trial, even though he is not allowed the right of trial by jury on appeal to the district court: Baurose v. State, 1–374.

The right to one jury trial is all that is guaranteed, and that is preserved by allowing an appeal to the district court, where the cause is to be tried anew by a jury: Zelle v. McHenry, 51–572; State v. Beneke, 9–203.

The statute providing for trial by a jury of six in the superior court, unless the additional expense involved in securing a jury of twelve is deposited by the party demanding such jury, is not unconstitutional: Conners v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 74–383.

The right of trial by jury discussed generally: Trimble v. State, 2 G. Gr., 404.

Ordinance of 1787: In so far as the constitution of the state modifies the common-law right of trial by jury, and authorizes trial by a jury of less than twelve in inferior courts, it is an alteration of the provision for jury trial found in the ordinance of 1787. The admission of the state under the constitution adopted by it amounted to an abrogation by mutual consent of the provisions of that ordinance in conflict therewith: Higgins v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 60–50.

Waiver of objection to trial by less than twelve jurors: The verdict in a trial by a jury defective as to the number will be void unless the defect is waived. And where a party has no knowledge of such deficiency, his mere acceptance of the jury will not constitute a waiver of objection to number: Cowles v. Buckman, 6–161.

The fact that the party objecting to the cause being tried by a less number than twelve proceeds with the trial does not constitute a waiver of his objection: Eshelman v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 67–296.

The provisions of the federal constitution with reference to trial by jury have no bearing on the question of the right of trial by jury in the state courts: McLane v. Leicht, 69–401.

In equity cases: The right of trial by jury does not obtain in cases which are of equitable cognizance: State v. Orwig, 25–280.

As cases of mutual account are subjects of equitable jurisdiction, it is not unconstitutional to provide for a compulsory reference in such cases: Burt v. Harrah, 65–643.

The statutory provisions allowing an injunction against persons engaged in the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors are not unconstitutional as depriving defendant of the right of trial by jury. Such cases being of equitable cognizance at the time of the adoption of the constitution, and the court of equity having jurisdiction at that time to abate a nuisance, it is within the power of the legislature to enlarge the jurisdiction of the court of equity in such cases so as to allow that remedy even where property rights are involved: Littleton v. Fritz, 65–488; Martin v. Blattner, 68–286.

So the right of trial by jury is not impaired by the provision that foreclosure of mortgages shall be by equitable proceedings, and that in the same action a recovery may be had on the note secured by mortgage: Clough v. Seay, 49–111.

Under the chancery practice, as it existed at the time the constitution was adopted, a person could be deprived of his liberty or his property, and such deprivation has always been regarded as having been accomplished by due process of law, although no jury trial was allowed: Eikenberry v. Edwards, 67-619.

Trial de novo on appeal: By virtue of the provisions of this section as to jury trial and of art. 5, § 4, as to method of appeal in suits in equity, every party has a right either to a trial by jury or to a trial de novo on appeal: Sherwood v. Sherwood, 44-192.

Jury trial in other cases: Where the only issue made by the pleadings was contained in a written agreement, the proper construction of which was in question, held, that it was not error to refuse defendant a jury trial: Packer v. Packer, 24-20.

It is not prejudicial error to refuse a jury trial where the questions involved are such that nothing arises for the determination of a jury: Bremer County Bank v. Bremer County, 42-394.

The proceeding auxiliary to execution authorized by statute is not in violation of the guaranty of the right to trial by jury: Marriage v. Woodruff, 77-292.

Offense committed in another county: The right to jury trial is not infringed by allowing defendant to be put on trial in one county for an offense committed in another county within five hundred yards of the boundary line between them: State v. Pugsley, 75-742.

References: Any provision authorizing the reference of questions of fact in actions by ordinary proceedings, without the consent of both parties, would be in violation of the right of jury trial: McMartin v. Bingham, 27-234; Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Walker, 50-376.

Appraisement of property taken for public use: The appraisers appointed to assess damages resulting to a land owner from the establishment of a highway are not a jury within the meaning of this section, and, upon appeal properly taken from their decision, such owner is entitled to trial by jury: Sigafoos v. Talbot, 25-214. And see Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153.

Contempt: A statute providing for imprisonment of a debtor for contempt in certain cases, where the object was to enforce the payment of a debt by summary proceedings, held in conflict with the constitutional provisions for jury trial: Ex parte Grace, 12-208.

Judgment on stay bond: The statutory provisions giving to a stay bond the effect of a judgment confessed against the parties thereto is not objectionable as denying them the right of trial, or depriving them of property without due process of law. The bond amounts to a waiver of the privilege which it is competent for them to make: Cavender v. Smith's Heirs, 5-157.

Jury fee: A provision requiring a party to pay a jury fee, or increasing the jury fee, is not in conflict with this section: Adae v. Zangs, 41-536; Steele v. Central R. of Iowa, 43-109; Little v. McGuire, 43-447; State v. Verwayne, 44-621.

Waiver of jury trial in civil cases: The right of jury trial in a civil case is not an attribute inalienable in its nature and character, but rather a privilege, which may be waived or forfeited: Wilkins v. Treynor, 14-391.

Where the parties appear and a trial is had to the court without objection, it will be presumed that jury trial is waived: Saum v. Jones County, 1 G. Gr., 165; McGuire v. Kemp, 3 G. Gr., 219. And see Hawkins v. Rice, 40-435.

By consenting to a reference a party waives his right to a trial by jury, and cannot afterwards, upon a new order directing the referee to proceed, object and claim a jury trial: Hewitt v. Egbert, 34-485.

The right to jury trial is waived by failing to demand it when the cause comes up for trial: Davidson v. Wright, 46-383.

By making default a party waives his right to a jury trial: Clute v. Hazleton, 51-355.

The fact that actions of different kinds are by agreement submitted together does not change the method of trial as to either. Such submission amounts only to waiver of jury trial: Leighton v. Orr, 44-679.

The right to such trial will be waived by failure of the party to take proper steps to secure a transfer of the cause from the equity docket to the law docket, where by reason of the nature of the case it properly belongs: Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 33-422, 490.

Where, on filing an amended petition, a cause was improperly transferred to the equity docket, and no motion to transfer it to the law docket was made before answer, held, that error in the kind of proceedings would be deemed waived, and defendant could not demand a jury trial: Gibbs v. Coonrod, 54-736.

As to jury trial in criminal cases, see § 10 of this article and notes.

Due process of law; what constitutes: Due process of law means in the due course of legal proceedings according to those rules and forms which have been established for the protection of private rights. It was intended thereby to secure the individual from the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government unrestrained by the established principles of private rights and distributive justice: Foule v. Mann, 53-42.

Therefore, held, that a statute limiting the remedy against a sheriff for wrongful levy to a recovery on the indemnity bond given by the plaintiff in execution, was void in so far as it defeated the right of the person whose property was illegally taken to sue for the specific recovery thereof: Ibid.

Due process of law is not confined alone to law and chancery actions. Special proceedings applicable to specified subject-matter conformable to the rules requiring notice and the acquisition of jurisdiction, and which affect all persons alike whose property or rights come within the lawful scope of the proceeding, are prosecuted by due process of law: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82-312.

Therefore, held, that the statute giving railroad commissioners authority to fix joint rates over connecting lines of road, with an opportunity to the roads interested to have a hearing before such commissioners on notice, does not deprive them of their property without due process of law: Ibid.

Even where the right of legislative regulation of rates exists such regulation must be fair, reasonable and not oppressive; otherwise it will be invalid: Des Moines v. Des Moines Water Works Co., 64 N. W., 269.

The rule in respect to due process of law, stated in a general way, is that every one is entitled to the protection of those fundamental principles of truth and justice which lie at the basis of all our civil and political institutions: Trustees of Griswold College v. Davenport, 65-633.

The statutory provision requiring that, before action can be brought against an officer for wrongful levy of a writ of attachment upon property of a person other than the one against whom the writ is directed, notice of the rights of such owner must be given to the officer in writing, is not unconstitutional as depriving the party of his property without due process of law: Cheadle v. Guittar, 68-680.

A person may be deprived of property by his own negligence. Also lapse of time may prevent recovery by reason of the statute of limitations, and existing remedies may be taken away and new ones given, all without infringement of due process of law: Ibid.

The meaning of the phrases "due process of law," "due course of law," and "course of the common law," discussed: Mason v. Messenger, 17-261.

Partition proceedings: Judgment in proceedings for partition of property, brought against a defendant served by publication only, held not void as depriving the defendant of his property without the benefit of judicial proceedings according to the course of the common law: Ibid.

The provisions authorizing a sale of property in a partition suit when division thereof cannot be made are not unconstitutional as depriving the party of his property without due process of law. When parties by contract assume the relation of tenants in common, the law fixes their respective rights, one of which is that the property may be divided, and, if necessary, sold to effect that object: Metcalf v. Hoopingardner, 45-510.

The provisions of certain statutes of the territories of Iowa and Wisconsin providing a method for partition of a tract of land known as the "half-breed tract," held unconstitutional as providing for proceedings to determine private rights in a method not in accordance with due course of law: Reed v. Wright, 2 G. Gr., 15.

Claim for improvements on land: Rev., §§ 2274, 2275, allowing a money judgment for the value of improvements to be rendered against the owner of the land in proceedings under the occupying-claimant law, held unconstitutional under this section: Childs v. Shower, 18-261.

The statute giving to any one who drains mineral land, even though without consent of the owner, one-tenth of the mineral taken therefrom, held not unconstitutional as depriving the owner of his property without due process of law; Ahern v. Dubuque, etc., Mining Co., 48-140.

The short foreclosure of mortgages on real property by notice and sale without action in court, as at one time allowed, held unconstitutional as depriving the owner of his property without due process of law: Thatcher v. Haun, 12-303.

But under the constitution of 1846, which did not contain the clause relating to due process of law, held, that such a proceeding was not unconstitutional: Boyd v. Ellis, 11-97.

A proceeding in equity should be classed as due process of law: McLane v. Leicht, 69-401.

Proceedings in rem against lost goods and property, and against estray animals and against unknown owners of property, have been too long sanctioned to be now called in question as not being due process of law: Kinney v. Roe, 70-509.

License: A permit to sell intoxicating liquors for lawful purposes, granted in pursuance of statutory provisions not requiring the payment of any compensation for such privilege, is not property in such sense that the party having the permit cannot be deprived thereof without due process of law: State v. Schmidtz, 65-556.

Other cases: The provision authorizing double damages in an action against a railway company for stock killed through failure of the company to maintain a fence along its track does not interfere with the constitutional protection to property nor deprive the company of its property without due process of law: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

A statute providing for the forfeiture of property by reason of the use thereof in the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors contrary to law, such forfeiture to take place, however, upon an adjudication of the court and proceedings to abate the premises as a nuisance, is not unconstitutional: Craig v. Werthmueller, 78-598.

Proceedings by fence-viewers being provided for by statute in the exercise of the authority of the legislature to provide special tribunals to determine the rights of the parties under proper rules applicable thereto, such provisions are not unconstitutional although they may operate to deprive the party of his property without the intervention of judicial proceedings or without allowing him a trial in court upon the facts passed upon by such fence-viewers: McKeever v. Jenks, 59-300.

While it is true as a general rule that the title to real property of one who dies intestate vests immediately in his heirs, yet such descent is regulated by statute, and it is competent for the legislative power to impose upon the property inherited such conditions as it shall deem proper to enact: Van Aken v. Clark, 82-256.

The provisions of the amendment to the federal constitution guarantying due process of law, etc., have no application to the state courts except as expressly so provided, but, in the absence of such express provision, are merely restrictions upon the federal government: Boyd v. Ellis, 11-97.

Contempt: A person cannot be imprisoned in pursuance of an order of the court in an investigation authorized by statute, but unusual or unheard of at common law or in the known and regular course of the administration of the law through courts of justice: Ex parte Grace, 12-208.

But the power to punish for contempt without the intervention of a jury is not in violation of due process of law: Ibid.

Statutory provisions not in accord with the common law, but more nearly like the proceeding in chancery, by which a debtor may be subjected to examination as to whether he has property, not exempt from execution, liable to the satisfaction of an execution against him, and may be imprisoned for contempt in not turning over such property to apply on such indebtedness under order of the court, are not in violation of the requirements of this section as to due process of law: Eikenberry v. Edwards, 67-619.

Taxation: The state has the taxing power, and where property is taken in the valid exercise of that power, the owner is not deprived of it without due process of law: Allen v. Armstrong, 16-508.

But there are indispensable prerequisites to the exercise of the power which cannot be omitted without violating the constitutional provision as to due process of law: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that Rev., § 784, making a tax deed conclusive of the regularity of all prior proceedings, was unconstitutional: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356, 390.

Due process of law means ordinary judicial proceedings in court, and has no reference whatever to the taxing power. Where property is taken in the due exercise of that power, it is not taken without due process of law: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

Therefore, held, that the constitutional provision was not violated by a law authorizing local taxes in aid of railways: Ibid. But see Hanson v. Vernon, 27-28, and cases cited.

The exercise of the taxing power in accordance with the law of the state whereby assessments are levied upon property is not the taking of property without due process of law: Yeomans v. Riddle, 84-147.

At no time, nor in any court, nor before any tribunal or officer, has the tax payer the right to have a constitutional jury impaneled for the purpose of determining the rate of the levy of taxes or the assessable value of his property: Davis v. Clinton, 55-549; Dunleith, etc., Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55-558.

Where an exemption from taxation is provided for by the general laws of the state, any subsequent legislature is not thereby deprived of the power to alter the law and remove the exemption: Slimer v. Jacobs, 62-392.

The rule that the owner of property shall not be deprived of it arbitrarily and without due process of law renders it illegal to enforce against such property a tax as to the assessment and levy of which the property owner has had no notice nor opportunity to be heard in pursuance of general statute or special provision: Gatch v. Des Moines, 63-718.

Property cannot be taken for the payment of taxes under a special assessment made without notice to the property owner and opportunity to be heard, at least where the assessment is made under a statute or ordinance providing for assessment according to benefits: Trustees of Griswold College v. Davenport, 65-633.

So held where a city council was charged with the duty of determining whether any part of the costs of constructing a sewer should be paid out of the general revenues of the city, and if so, what part, the balance being payable by special assessment upon abutting property: Ibid.

Courts are not necessary to taxation; and it is generally agreed that property taken for non-payment of taxes is not taken without due process of law, if the tax payer is afforded an opportunity to be heard in relation to the tax, though it be only before the officers clothed with power to assess: Ibid.

If there is any ground upon which a tax can be upheld which has been levied without notice to the tax payer and without an opportunity to be heard, it is incumbent upon the party claiming its validity to show that the notice would have been unavailing: Auer v. Dubuque, 65-650.

Want of notice of assessment and levy are objections which cannot be urged as against an action to recover costs of construction of a sewer under statutory provisions: Dittoe v. Davenport, 74-66.

See, further, as to taxation, notes to art. 1, § 18, and art. 3, § 30.

Eminent domain: A party cannot complain that his property has been taken for public use without due process of law when it has been taken for a highway by proper proceedings, and his claim for damages has been disallowed, and he has not taken the proper steps to have the disallowance corrected on appeal: Tharp v. Witham, 65-566.

Proceedings for the assessment of damages for the construction of underground drains by one land owner through the property of an adjoining land owner, authorized by 20 G. A., ch. 188, held unconstitutional because not providing for an appeal from the action of the township trustees in case no damages are awarded. The non-assessment of damages by such trustees cannot be regarded as due process of law unless there is a right to appeal to a tribunal where such assessment can be made by a constitutional jury: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

As to taking private property for public use, see, further, notes to § 18 of this article.

And in general, as applicable to this section, see notes to §§ 10 and 21 of this article.

Rights of persons accused. SEC. 10. In all criminal prosecutions, and in cases involving the life or liberty of an individual, the accused shall have a right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury; to be informed of the accusation against him; to have a copy of the same when demanded; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for his witnesses; and to have the assistance of counsel.

Criminal prosecution: A proceeding before a magistrate or court in the name of the city, accusing defendant of the violation of a city ordinance, is a criminal prosecution: Davenport v. Bird, 34–524; Jaquith v. Royce, 42–406; State v. Vail, 57–103; Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61–672; Creston v. Nye, 74–369.

An inquest of lunacy is not a criminal proceeding and the party whose sanity is questioned has not the right to a jury trial: In re Bresee, 82–573.

Speedy trial: The requirement of this section as to a speedy trial must be construed in a reasonable manner, and if the defendant demands a jury trial in a superior court after the jurors have been discharged, the case should be continued to the next term: Creston v. Nye, 74–369.

What is a speedy trial must depend upon the circumstances of the case. An adjournment of a criminal case for more than three days will not necessarily be invalid: State v. Valure, 64 N. W., 280.

Trial by jury: A defendant has the right to trial by jury at some stage of the proceedings in a criminal prosecution: Creston v. Nye, 74–369.

The right to trial by jury is not infringed by the provisions of § 11 of this article, that a certain grade of offenses may be tried summarily: See notes to that section.

See, further, as to jury trial, notes to preceding section.

Waiver of trial by jury: As the defendant in a criminal prosecution may waive a statute enacted for his benefit, he may consent that the trial proceed with a jury of less than twelve jurors, and will be bound by the verdict rendered: State v. Kaufman, 51–578; State v. Grossheim, 79–75.

But defendant cannot waive a jury trial and consent to a trial by the court, there being no provision by which the court, without a jury, has jurisdiction to try the issues of fact in a criminal case: State v. Carman, 63–130; State v. Larrigan, 66–426; State v. Douglass, 65 N. W., 151; not even in a prosecution by indictment for a misdemeanor: State v. Tucker, 65 N. W., 152.

Right to be confronted with witnesses: Dying declarations may be received according to the rules of evidence without violating the provision of this section giving the accused the right to be confronted with witnesses against him: State v. Nash, 7–347, 377.

But this right is violated by allowing the introduction of a certificate of a notary public as to the fact that a bill of exchange has been protested, when such fact is material in establishing the guilt of the accused: State v. Reidel, 26–430.

Where a deposition has been taken on behalf of the prisoner and filed in court, it is not error to allow the prosecuting attorney to read the same in evidence, it not appearing that the prisoner sought or desired to withdraw it from the files before the trial of the case: Nash v. State, 2 G. Gr., 286.

Depositions of witnesses, or minutes of evidence on preliminary examinations, are not admissible as against a defendant in a criminal prosecution: State v. Collins, 32–36.

The statutory provisions as to method of determining the question of sanity by commissioners are not in violation of this section: Black Hawk County v. Springer, 58–417.

The admission in evidence upon a criminal trial of testimony of witnesses given in a preliminary examination, which witnesses have since died, is not in violation of the right to be confronted by witnesses under this section: State v. Fitzgerald, 63–268.

As defendant is entitled to be confronted with the witnesses against him, if a witness for the prosecution is subpœnaed from another state and the costs are afterwards taxed to the prosecution, such witness should be paid by the county for the distance traveled outside the state as well as in it: Westfall v. Madison County, 62–427.

The provision about being confronted by witnesses is not applicable to proceedings before a grand jury: State v. Smith, 74–580.

This privilege of defendant has no reference to record evidence, and in a prosecution for bigamy record evidence of the first marriage of the defendant may be introduced: State v. Matlock, 70–229.

And in a prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors the monthly statements of a pharmacist, filed in the county auditor's office as required by law, are admissible in evidence against him: State v. Smith, 74–580.

The provision in the constitution of the United States and in the statutes of the state that defendant shall not be required to be a witness against himself is not violated by introducing in evidence reports made by him as required by law, and properly made matter of record, which tend to show violation of law on his part: Ibid.

Waiver of privilege: The right to be confronted by the witnesses against him is personal with the accused and not jurisdictional, and may be waived; so held in a case where, by consent of the accused, a written transcript of the testimony taken on a former trial was read to the jury in place of recalling the witnesses themselves: State v. Polson, 29–133; State v. Fooks, 65–452.

Compulsory attendance of witness: Defendant does not have the absolute right to have a witness who is in the penitentiary or in jail produced as a witness: State v. Kennedy, 20–372; nor to have a witness present who is beyond reach of compulsory process: State v. Yetzer, 66 N. W., 737.

When indictment necessary. SEC. 11. All offenses less than felony, and in which the punishment does not exceed a fine of one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for thirty days, shall be tried summarily before a justice of the peace, or other officer authorized by law, on information under oath, without indictment, or the intervention of a grand jury, saving to the defendant the right of appeal; and no person shall be held to answer for any higher criminal offense, unless on presentment or indictment by a grand jury, except in cases arising in the army or navy, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war or public danger.

Jurisdiction of justice of peace: Where there is nothing appearing affirmatively on the face of the proceedings before a justice of the peace showing want of jurisdiction, defendant cannot complain that the evidence shows an offense which can only be prosecuted on indictment: State v. Sipult, 17–575.

A justice of the peace has jurisdiction over violations of city ordinances. The jurisdiction of the mayor in such cases is not exclusive: Jaquith v. Royce, 42–406.

When a defendant is tried before a justice for an offense of which the justice has not jurisdiction the district court does not acquire jurisdiction on appeal from the judgment of the justice: State v. Carpenter, 23–506.

The provisions allowing a trial in a summary manner before a justice of the peace or other officer, in cases here specified, is not in violation of the right of trial by jury guarantied in § 9, and in art. 2 of the ordinance of 1787. The right to one jury trial is all that is guarantied, and that is preserved by allowing an appeal to the district court, where the cause is to be tried anew by a jury: Zelle v. McHenry, 51–572; State v. Beneke, 9–203.

The corresponding section of the Const. of 1846, held prospective, and applicable not only to offenses cognizable by justices of the peace at the time of its adoption, but also to those which should thereafter be made so cognizable: Bryan v. State, 4–349.

Extent of punishment in justices' courts: Where an ordinance provided that, in case of non-payment of a fine, defendant should be imprisoned for a period of time longer than that authorized by the constitution for imprisonment on conviction in an inferior court, held, that the ordinance was not void, but that it might be enforced up to the limit of the punishment allowed: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47–597.

The provision of statute authorizing the imposition of a fine of one hundred dollars, and the imprisonment of defendant until the fine and costs are paid, does not make the case one which is beyond the jurisdiction of the justice, although the length of imprisonment for non-payment of fine and costs may extend beyond thirty days. The imprisonment for non-payment of fine and costs is not a punishment for the crime, but a method of enforcing payment: Albertson v. Kriechbaum, 65–11.

The provision that only offenses which are punishable by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not to exceed thirty days, are within the jurisdiction of a justice, is not violated by allowing different offenses of the same kind by the same person to be joined in one information before a justice of the peace, although the aggregate of the fines imposed under such information may exceed one hundred dollars: Jackson v. Boyd, 53–536.

Right of appeal: If defendant gives proper notice of appeal there is nothing which the justice can do which will deprive the party of his right to such appeal, and therefore the justice cannot be liable in damages for refusing an appeal, or committing the party without appeal, whatever may be his motives: Anderson v. Park, 57–69.

There is no provision for a review of errors of law only, in a criminal case tried before a justice of the peace. The provisions as to writs of error in civil cases are not applicable in criminal prosecutions: Part of Lot, etc., v. State, 1–507; State v. Flinn, 51–133.

The provisions of Rev., § 5094 (not now in force), giving the state as well as defendant the right of appeal from the judgment of a justice of the peace in a criminal trial, held not in conflict with the provision saving to defendant the right of trial by jury on appeal from a justice of the peace in a criminal case: State v. Tait, 22–140.

But these provisions were held to be unconstitutional as being in conflict with the following section, providing that "no person shall, after acquittal, be tried for the same offense:" State v. Van Horton, 26–402.

Unauthorized indictment: An indictment for an offense, the punishment for which does not exceed a fine of one hundred dollars or imprisonment for thirty days, is not authorized, and all proceedings thereunder are unauthorized and void. So held in case of an indictment for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors: Walters v. State, 5–507; State v. Kœhler, 6–398; State v. Shawbeck, 7–322.

Conviction of lesser offense: Where defendant is indicted for an indictable offense, but is found guilty of a lower degree thereof, or of an offense necessarily included in the offense for which he is indicted, he may be convicted and punished for such lower offense, although exclusive jurisdiction thereof is given to a justice: State v. Shepard, 10–126; State v. Jarvis, 21–44; Orton v. State, 4 G. Gr., 140.

So, under an indictment for larceny, charging the value of the goods stolen to be more than twenty dollars, the district court has jurisdiction to try defendant and sentence him, if found guilty, although the jury find the value of the goods to be less than that amount: State v. Stingley, 10–488.

And the question whether the offense is triable as a misdemeanor or a felony is to be determined by the value of the property alleged in the indictment or information, and not by the value ascertained by the verdict of the jury: State v. Church, 8–252.

Indictable offenses: The provisions of this section that offenses of a certain grade shall be prosecuted only on indictment by a grand jury does not limit the power of the legislature to prescribe the form and constituent elements of an indictment, and authorize one as good and sufficient which would not be so at common law: State v. Bevans, 37-178.

The number of the grand jury is left to legislative regulation: State v. Ostrander, 18-435.

The provision of the federal constitution, that no person shall be held to answer for an infamous crime except upon indictment, is applicable alone to the exercise of power by the federal government, and is not a restriction upon the legislative authority of the state: State v. Wells, 46-662.

Offense committed before adoption of constitution: The provisions of this section held inapplicable, under art. 12, § 3, to an offense which was committed prior to the adoption of the constitution: State v. Axt, 6-511.

Twice tried; bail. SEC. 12. No person shall, after acquittal, be tried for the same offense. All persons shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses, where the proof is evident, or the presumption great.

What constitutes jeopardy; dismissal of prosecution: A dismissal of the proceedings, either by the court or by the district attorney, after the trial has commenced, unless in the cases authorized by statute, will operate as an acquittal: State v. Callendine, 8-288.

The fact that material witnesses for the prosecution cannot be called because their names are not indorsed on the indictment will not be such a peremptory or controlling cause as to justify the court in dismissing the case: Ibid.

But where, in an indictment for burglary, the defendant is also charged with assault with intent to commit murder, merely for the purpose of bringing the case within the aggravated punishment provided by statute, the charge of such assault may be dismissed after defendant has entered a plea of former acquittal of such assault: State v. Struble, 71-11.

Continuance: Where the names of the witnesses for prosecution have not been indorsed on the indictment defendant may be required to consent to their introduction under statutory provisions, notwithstanding the defect, or consent to a continuance; but he has no right to ask a verdict nor insist on the procedure as a former jeopardy when again put on trial: State v. Parker, 66-586: State v. Falconer, 70-416.

Discharge of jury: The fact that in the exercise of sound discretion the jury is discharged for failure to agree does not entitle defendant to be released as having been once in jeopardy: State v. Vaughan, 29-286.

Where, after all the evidence had been introduced, the judge, on receipt of a telegram announcing the sickness of his wife, adjourned court for a few days to go home; and subsequently, by telegram, adjourned court over the term, held, that there was sufficient cause to warrant the adjournment, and that defendant could not, on a subsequent trial, plead previous jeopardy: State v. Tatman, 59-471.

Defective verdict: Although defendant is put upon trial on a good indictment, yet if the verdict is so defective that no judgment can be rendered upon it, it may be set aside and defendant again put on trial. The defective verdict will not amount to an acquittal: State v. Redman, 17-329; State v. Arthur, 21-322.

Verdict set aside: After conviction which is set aside on motion nominally in arrest of judgment but in fact upon a statutory ground for new trial such as that the verdict is contrary to the evidence, defendant is not entitled to discharge on the ground of having once been put in jeopardy: State v. Bowman, 62 N. W., 759.

Punitive damages, when awarded for a criminal act, do not constitute a punishment in such sense that one who should also be criminally punished for the same act would be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense: Hendrickson v. Kingsbury, 21-379: Hauser v. Griffith, 71 N. W., 223.

New trial on appeal from justice's court: A defendant, acquitted before a justice of the peace in a prosecution for a crime over which the justice has jurisdiction, cannot be again tried upon an appeal to the district court, taken by the state, even though the statute may so authorize. (See Rev., § 5094, since repealed): State v. Van Horton, 26-402.

Offense against state and city: An ordinance of a city punishing an act which is punishable under the laws of the state is not, on that account, void. The act may be punished under both without violating any constitutional principle: Bloomfield v. Trimble, 54-399.

Fraudulent acquittal or conviction: Where the former conviction or acquittal was procured by the defendant by collusion or fraud, it may be treated by the state as a nullity and disregarded, and a new prosecution commenced: State v. Green, 16-239.

In such case the burden of proof is on the state to establish the fraud: State v. Maxwell, 51-314.

Conviction of lower degree: Where a defendant has been convicted of a lower degree of the offense than that for which he was indicted and put upon trial, such conviction operates as an acquittal of the degree for which he was tried, and if he appeal and secure a reversal, he cannot be again tried for any higher offense, or higher degree of the offense, than that of which he was convicted: State v. Tweedy, 11-350; State v. Clemons, 51-274.

Nor will the fact that defendant, being put on trial a second time for the higher degree or higher crime, is again found guilty of only the lower degree or lower crime of which he was previously convicted, render the error in improperly putting him on trial a second time error without prejudice: State v. Tweedy, 11-350.

Second trial for higher crime: A conviction or acquittal of a minor offense will not bar prosecution for a greater one, or for a higher degree of the same offense, except that an acquittal of manslaughter will bar an indictment for murder. Therefore, held, that a conviction for assault and battery would not bar a prosecution for assault with intent to do great bodily injury: State v. Foster, 33-525.

A former conviction or acquittal of the crime of petit larceny will bar a subsequent prosecution for larceny from the person, although the first offense is a misdemeanor triable before a justice of the peace, and the other is a felony: State v. Gleason, 56-203.

Where same act constitutes two crimes: A previous prosecution for an act as constituting one crime will not bar a subsequent prosecution for a greater crime committed in the same act. For instance, a prosecution for assault will not bar a subsequent prosecution for a riot committed in the same transaction: Scott v. United States, Mor., 142.

Proof of the commission of an assault upon one person will not sustain an indictment for assault upon two; therefore, under a subsequent indictment for assault and battery upon one of the persons named, defendant could not show, under a plea of former conviction or acquittal, a judgment under an indictment for assault upon two. But under an indictment for an assault by two, either one may be acquitted either on a joint or on a separate indictment: State v. McClintock, 8-203.

Where the same essential element is included in two or more crimes, as, for instance, larceny in the crimes of larceny from a dwelling-house in the night-time, and robbery, a previous conviction or acquittal for one of such crimes will bar a subsequent prosecution for the other. In the prosecution for the one crime the defendant might be convicted of the included crime: State v. Mikesell, 70-176.

Where defendant was tried and acquitted upon an indictment for uttering and publishing as true a certain false and forged note and chattel mortgage, held, that he could not be subsequently prosecuted upon an indictment for obtaining property under false pretenses in exchange for such note and mortgage, when the transactions relied on in both indictments were the same: State v. Stone, 75-215.

Where a statute as to the punishment of the crime of nuisance in maintaining a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors was amended, and it was provided that the former law should remain in effect as to offenses already committed, held, that the prosecution of the offense under an indictment charging its commission during a time previous to the amendment of the statute was not barred by an acquittal under an indictment charging the commission of the same offense during a time subsequent to the amendment of the statute: State v. Webber, 76-686.

Right to Bail: Where a bail bond recited that defendant was charged with "feloniously killing two persons," held that, as the offense was not necessarily punishable with death, bail might be allowed, and the bond was not void: State v. Klingman, 14-404.

This section applies to §§ 4177, 4178 of Code of '73; and a party charged with murder in the second degree is entitled to bail notwithstanding the language there used: State v. Hufford, 23-579.

Habeas corpus. SEC. 13. The writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended or refused when application is made as required by law, unless, in case of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

Military restraint: A return by respondent that he is a military officer of the United States holding the person restrained for the crime of desertion, awaiting trial by court-martial, is sufficient, and the prisoner will be remanded: Ex parte Anderson, 16-595.

A soldier while on furlough is not within the jurisdiction of the military authorities, and may be arrested by civil authority without conflict: Ex parte McRoberts, 16-600.

Appeal: The right of appeal in such proceedings exists only as provided by law; and held, under Revision, an appeal did not lie from an order by a judge of the supreme court: In re Curley, 34-184. (But this right is now given by the Code.)

Military. SEC. 14. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be kept up by the state in time of peace; and in time of war no appropriation for a standing army shall be for a longer time than two years.

Quartering soldiers. SEC. 15. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war except in the manner prescribed by law.

Treason. SEC. 16. Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open court.

Bail; punishments. SEC. 17. Excessive bail shall not be required; excessive fines shall not be imposed, and cruel and unusual punishment shall not be inflicted.

Rev., § 3276, making officers of municipal corporations personally liable for failure to levy tax to pay off judgments, etc., held not to impose an unusual fine nor an excessive punishment upon such officers: Porter v. Thomson, 22-391.

Penalties provided in particular cases by statute, held, not excessive within the provisions of this section: Martin v. Blattner, 68-286; Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82-312.

A statute fixing a severe penalty for a crime which may be trivial or otherwise according to circumstances, is not unconstitutional: State v. Teeters, 66 N. W., 754.

Bail required in a certain case, held not excessive: State v. Wells, 46-662.

Eminent domain. SEC. 18. Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation first being made, or secured to be made, to the owner thereof, as soon as the damages shall be assessed by a jury, who shall not take into consideration any advantages that may result to said owner on account of the improvement for which it is taken.

Eminent domain: Power to take private property for public use is one of the sovereign powers of the state. It is a necessary attribute of sovereignty in the state, rather than any reserved right in the grant of property to the citizen: Noll v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. R. Co., 32-66.

It is within the power of the general assembly to make the same property subservient to different public uses, or even to take from one public use and devote it to another. Therefore, held, that it was not unconstitutional to provide by statute for the laying out of streets across railroad depot grounds: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Starkweather, 66 N. W., 87.

But this doctrine is subject to the modification that the power to take the property for the second public use when such an appropriation would supersede or defeat the first one must be given expressly or by necessary implication. Ibid.

Statutes delegating the right of eminent domain to corporations are in derogation of common right and are not to be extended by implication but are to be strictly construed. Creston Waterworks Co. v. McGrath, 89-502.

Public use: This section prohibits, by implication, the taking of private property for anything but a public use. The question as to when public exigencies demand the exercise of the power is solely a question for the legislature, upon whose determination the courts cannot sit in judgment; but the question as to what is such a public use as to justify the exercise of the power is for the courts. However, if a public use be declared by the legislature, the courts will hold such use public, unless it manifestly appears from the provisions of the act that it can have no tendency to advance or promote such public use: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

Therefore, held, that 11 G. A., ch. 127, authorizing the taking of private property for the establishment of a private road, was unconstitutional: Ibid.

But a provision for condemnation of right of way for a public highway or railway to mineral land, the right of way thus condemned to be public, is not unconstitutional as taking private property for private use: Phillips v. Watson, 63-28.

Private property cannot be properly taken for a private way. Therefore, held, that where the sole purpose of a road which was attempted to be laid out as a public highway was to give more convenient outlet to the owner of a tract of land, who already had an outlet by public highway, the taking of a right of way over the lands of another for such purpose was unconstitutional: Richards v. Wolf, 82-358.

The act of 20 G. A., ch. 188, authorizing proceedings by which land owners might acquire the right, upon payment of the damages assessed, to lay underground drains through the property of an adjoining land owner in other cases than those where by reason of the wet or swampy condition of the land the public health requires it, held unconstitutional as providing for the taking of private property for other than public use: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

The taking of private property by a railroad company for a right of way is the exercise of a public right, and the duty imposed by the state in such case of providing crossings for the owner whose land is taken is a public duty, with reference to which the board of railroad commissioners has jurisdiction: State v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 85-516.

What constitutes a taking; security: The object of the provision of this section requiring security for compensation is to protect and compensate the owner in case his land is entered upon pending proceedings for an assessment of its value, and if, after final determination thereof and before payment of the damages assessed, the occupancy of the land is abandoned, the owner's title and right of possession can be extinguished only by the payment of the damages assessed. Although entry is permitted at once upon security being given, such right of possession is but temporary and permissive until the compensation finally determined is paid. In case of failure to perform the obligation and pay such compensation, no right is acquired by the giving of security; and if the security given becomes unavailing to the land owner by way of compensation when the damages are finally assessed, possession can be retaken by him unless such compensation is paid: White v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 64-281.

Assessment by jury: An assessment of the damages by a jury of three persons appointed as provided by Rev. § 1065, held an assessment by jury as required by the provisions of this section: Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153. But see, contra, Sigafoos v. Talbot, 25-214.

A party cannot be deprived of his property without provision for a judicial proceeding either originally or by appeal: Ragatz v. Dubuque, 4-343.

Benefits: Under this section benefits to accrue to the property from the proposed improvement are not to be estimated: Deaton v. Polk County, 9–594; Israel v. Jewett, 29–475.

Benefits to result from the construction of the improvement as well as from the use thereof are to be excluded: Frederick v. Shane, 32–254; Bland v. Hixenbaugh, 39–532.

Therefore, in an action for damages for breach of warranty by reason of the existence of a right of way upon land conveyed, the advantages resulting from the construction of a railway upon such right of way cannot be taken into account: Koestenbader v. Peirce, 41–204.

Advantages to the land resulting from its better drainage will not be taken into account in estimating the deterioration in value by reason of the taking of a portion thereof for the right of way of a railroad: Britton v. Des Moines O. & S. R. Co., 59–540.

The statutory provisions allowing damages to one whose property is injured by reason of change of grade in an adjoining street, do not relate to the taking of private property for public use, and the benefits resulting to the property from such change may be taken into account: Stewart v. Council Bluffs, 84–61.

Taxation; not taking private property for public use: Legitimate taxation is not the taking of private property for public use without compensation within the constitutional provision. The protection afforded the citizen by the government is the just compensation required: Morford v. Unger, 8–82.

There are limits beyond which the legislative discretion cannot go in subjecting property to taxation; and while the judiciary will not interpose in every case of injustice or of oppression, yet this power may be so unreasonably and unjustly exercised as to amount to the taking of private property for public use without compensation: Ibid.

Taxation of agricultural lands, etc., for municipal purposes: An unreasonable extension of the limits of an incorporated city, by which land needed only for agricultural purposes is brought within the city limits and subjected to municipal taxation, without deriving any advantage from municipal control, is unconstitutional under this section, even though it is provided that it shall be assessed only at its value for agricultural purposes: Ibid.; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16–271; and see Taylor v. Waverly, 63 N. W., 347.

But where property included within an extension of the city limits was situated within three hundred feet of the old limits, and used for pork house, etc., and the streets of the city were laid out and worked to and beyond the property, and the surrounding property was laid out into lots and blocks, held, that the proceeding by which it was brought within the city limits was not unconstitutional: Butler v. Muscatine, 11–433.

The doctrine of Morford v. Unger, supra, with reference to the extension of city limits, is also applicable to lands used for agricultural purposes within the corporate limits as originally laid out: Buell v. Ball, 20–282; Deeds v. Sanborn, 22–214.

Where a tract of land within the extended limits of the city lay near one of the principal streets, and was so surrounded as to receive current benefits from the expenditures made by the city as well as permanent increase in value, held, that it was liable to municipal taxation: O'Hare v. Dubuque, 22–144; and see Perkins v. Burlington, 77–553.

Lands included within an extension of the city limits, but used exclusively for agricultural purposes, and not affected by the current expenditures of the city, nor being enhanced in value by being within the corporate limits, held not subject to municipal taxation: Deiman v. Fort Madison, 30–542.

But property which is held for the opportunity of bringing it into the market as city lots is not entitled to exemption. So, if land within the city limits is used for the purpose of dwellings or business, it cannot ordinarily be claimed to be exempt from taxation, even though the city fails to open or improve the streets leading thereto: Durant v. Kaufman, 34–194.

Municipal taxes from which farm property within the corporate limits is exempt are those levied exclusively for municipal purposes, such as to support the police, lights, water, sewerage, fire department, local government, etc.; but such property is not exempt from taxes voted by the city in aid of a railway, which might be levied as effectually upon property not included within the city: Sears v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 39–417.

A tract of one hundred acres within city limits, used only for farming purposes and having no houses thereon, but against which streets abut, and adjoining an addition laid out in lots and partially improved, held subject to city taxes: Brooks v. Polk County, 52–460.

The fact that land included within the city limits is used for agricultural purposes will not render the taxation thereof illegal, it not being shown that it is used exclusively for such purposes, nor that it does not derive such benefit from the expenditure of municipal taxes that it is properly subject to such taxation: Tubbesing v. Burlington, 68–691.

The doctrine under which agricultural land included within city limits is exempt from municipal taxation is not applicable to railway property under the statutory provisions for the taxation thereof: Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Hamilton County, 73–313.

For other cases where facts were considered as determining whether the property was properly subject to municipal taxation or not, see Fulton v. Davenport, 17–404; Davis v. Dubuque, 20–458; Hershey v. Muscatine, 22–184; Deeds v. Sanborn, 26–419; Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12–112.

Cities should not be allowed, against the will of property owners, to include within their limits lands which are not needed for city purposes, and are not benefited by being within the corporation, for the purpose of deriving revenues therefrom: Evans v. Council Bluffs, 65–238.

Such land should be allowed to be severed from the city upon proper proceedings being taken, and upon such severance should not be held liable for indebtedness of the city incurred during its attachment to the city: Ibid.

Moneys and credits of non-resident: The statutory provision subjecting to taxation in this state moneys and credits belonging to a non-resident, but under the control and management of an agent in the state, held not in conflict with the provisions of this section, as providing for the taking of private property for public use without compensation: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

Compensation: While the right to take private property for public use is conditioned upon compensation, the taxing power is not thus limited: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

A special participation in the benefits of a particular tax on the part of the tax payer has nothing to do with the right to impose the tax. The identical revenue collected by the special tax may be used for purposes from which the tax payers of whom it was received derive no benefit: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

Not subject to judicial control: The taxing power being one of the sovereign powers vested in the general assembly by the people, and not being limited either expressly or by implication, the judicial power possesses no authority to limit it: Ibid.

Tax in aid of railroad: The imposition of a tax to aid in the construction of a railroad is an exercise of the taxing power for a public purpose though it be for a private profit, and statutory provisions authorizing such taxation held not unconstitutional: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9; McGregor & S. C. R. Co. v. Birdsall, 30-255: Bonnifield v. Bidwell, 32-149; Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 47-511; Snell v. Leonard, 55-553; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67-728.

Under a former statute, with similar provisions, such taxation was held to be illegal: Hanson v. Vernon, 27-28; King v. Wilson, 1 Dillon, 555.

Just compensation: The provision as to "just compensation" means that the person whose property is taken for public use shall have a fair equivalent in money for the injury done him by such taking. This compensation should be precisely commensurate with the injury sustained from the taking of the property: Sater v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 1-386; Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288.

It is only when the damages are properly assessed that they are to be paid or secured. The compensation must be ascertained in the mode prescribed by law: McCrory v. Griswold, 7-248.

A payment of the damages assessed is a condition precedent to the right to enter upon and take the land under the right of way act, and if the property is taken before such compensation is made, the owner may proceed as against a trespasser: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 10-540; Daniels v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 35-129.

The provision allowing the taking of property pending an appeal in the condemnation proceeding is not unconstitutional: Peterson v. Ferreby, 30-327.

If no damages are claimed, or if the appraisers appointed in the manner prescribed by law ascertain that the claimant is entitled to no damages, and no appeal is taken from their decision, the property owner cannot enjoin the condemnation of his property on the ground that compensation has not been made: Connolly v. Griswold, 7-416; Dunlap v. Pulley, 28-469; Abbott v. Board of Supervisors, 36-354; Tharp v. Witham, 65-566.

And if his claim is rejected as not filed in proper time, he cannot resist the opening of the highway on the ground that he has not had just compensation. Dunlap v. Pulley, 28-469; Abbott v. Board of Supervisors, 36-354.

Compensation for property taken for public purposes is guarantied by this section of the constitution only where the usual and ordinary forms and remedies provided by law are adopted by the person desiring to obtain such compensation, and if he fails to avail himself of such remedies he cannot be permitted to complain. So held where a land owner whose property was taken for a public highway, and whose claim for damages was disallowed by the board of supervisors, failed to appeal from such action: Tharp v. Witham, 65-566.

Public highways: There is no doubt of the power of the legislature to provide for the condemnation of right of way for public highways upon notice by publication in newspapers or posted notices. The proceeding is in the nature of a proceeding in rem in which the court acquires jurisdiction of the property which is the subject of the adjudication: Wilson v. Hathaway, 42-173.

When the location of a road over a party's land is changed, he should be allowed compensation for the additional damage caused by the change and no more: Israel v. Jewett, 29-475.

Vacation of highway: Where a person has only the right to the use of a highway which pertains to the general public, he cannot maintain an action for damages by reason of its vacation. Such proceeding is not the taking of private property within the constitutional provision: Ellsworth v. Chickasaw County, 40-571; Brady v. Shinkle, 40-576.

Streets: The use of land for a street is a public purpose for which it may be taken upon rendering compensation, and the court will not review the decision of the city authorities holding that the public interests require a street to be established: Cherokee v. Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot, etc., Co., 52-279.

Use of streets by railway: The legislature may authorize the use of the streets of a city by a railway company for the construction and operation of its road without compensation being made to the city or to adjoining property owners. But the city may have property acquired for other authorized purposes which could not be so taken without compensation being made: Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 24-455.

The statutory provision authorizing a city to grant to railroads right of way through its streets upon condition that compensation for damages be paid to abutting property owners is twofold in its objects: first, to secure to the city control over its streets; and secondly, to secure to property owners compensation for damages. And in a particular case, held, that although the first object could not be accomplished, owing to prior rights having been conferred by another railroad upon the company in question, nevertheless, the second object being a proper one, the statute would be upheld as constitutional: Drady v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 57-393.

Improvement of streets: Levying a tax upon property abutting upon a street to pave such street is not an exercise of the right of eminent domain, but of the power of taxation: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

The compensation provided by statute for damages resulting from changing the grade of a street is not intended as compensation for the taking of private property for public use, and the constitutional provision as to compensation has no application: Meyer v. Burlington, 52-560.

Right of way for railways: When a right of way is, by statute, taken for the use of a railway company, it is in contemplation of law taken by the state for public use and not simply for the private use of the company in whose behalf it is taken, although the compensation be paid by the company. The easement thus acquired is in the nature of a grant from the state to the company for the uses and purposes fixed by law, and when the company fails to carry out the purposes of the grant the state may transfer the easement to another company upon compensation being made to the former company: Noll v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. R. Co., 32-66.

Destruction of buildings to stop fires: An ordinance of a municipal corporation authorizing the destruction of buildings to stop the spread of fire is not an exercise of the power of eminent domain, but a regulation of the right which individuals possess to destroy private property in cases of inevitable necessity: Field v. Des Moines, 39-575.

Mill-dams: The statute allowing the taking of private property for the purpose of erecting mill-dams is constitutional: Burnham v. Thompson, 35-421.

Prohibitory liquor law: The legislature being the supreme judge and guardian of the public health, safety, happiness and morals, may, if the traffic in certain property is deemed detrimental or dangerous to these public interests, prohibit it, and declare that property illicitly held, kept, or used, shall be forfeited and destroyed, and such a provision is not one authorizing the taking of private property for public use: Santo v. State, 2-165, 216.

The provision making the judgment for the wrongful sale of intoxicating liquor a lien upon the property in which the business is carried on is not the taking thereof for public use. Polk County v. Hierb, 37-361.

The present statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors cannot be said to unlawfully deprive the owner of such property of his property without compensation, at least unless it be made to appear that such property was owned by such party prior to the enactment of the prohibitory statute of 1855: McLane v. Leicht, 69-401.

Imprisonment for debt. SEC. 19. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, on mesne or final process, unless in case of fraud; and no person shall be imprisoned for a military fine in time of peace.

The statutory provision for imprisonment of debtor for contempt in refusing to turn over property, etc., is not in conflict with this section: Ex parte Grace, 12-208. (But such provision is in conflict with § 10 of this article. See same case in notes to that section.)

The provision by which one convicted of illegal selling of intoxicating liquors may be imprisoned to enforce payment of a fine imposed and costs of the prosecution is not unconstitutional under this section. The costs in such case are not a debt but a penalty even though they go to the officers of the court and others: Boyer v. Kinnick, 90-74.

Petition. SEC. 20. The people have the right freely to assemble together to counsel for the common good; to make known their opinions to their representatives, and to petition for a redress of grievances.

Attainder; ex post facto law; obligation of contract. SEC. 21. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall ever be passed.

EX POST FACTO LAWS.

Defined: An ex post facto law is one which makes acts innocent when done criminal, or if criminal when done aggravates the crime, increases the punishment or reduces the measure of proof. The term applies only to criminal laws. Retrospective or retroactive laws are not in conflict with the constitution of the United States or this constitution, except when they interfere with vested rights: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26-340.

An ex post facto law is a retroactive criminal law, and a statute which does not make an act already done a crime, although it subjects the person guilty thereof to liability, cannot be ex post facto: Polk County v. Hierb, 37-361.

A change in the law by which petit larceny was made cognizable only before a justice of the peace and not upon indictment, held not to affect the statute as to the punishment of larceny so as to prevent punishment, under the statute, of grand larceny committed prior to the taking effect of the change: State v. Church, 8-252.

Where the elements of the crime are not affected by change in the statute, but only the amount of punishment, it is not necessary that the indictment show whether the crime was committed before or after such change: State v. Reylets, 74–499.

Retroactive laws: A constitutional provision is not to be given a retrospective operation unless the words employed show a clear intention that it shall have that effect: Burlington Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48–133.

Retrospective laws, as distinguished from ex post facto laws, are not necessarily unconstitutional: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39–112, 117.

Legislation operating retrospectively, to render binding and effective contracts before invalid, is not in conflict with the constitution. It does not impair the obligation of contracts, nor, as between the parties thereto, disturb vested rights: Tilton v. Swift, 40–78.

Legalizing acts: In order to a rightful exercise of the legislative power to cure a defective proceeding, the legislature must have possessed the power to authorize the result by a prior legislative enactment; but it is not necessary that it might have accomplished the result in the precise manner adopted to cure the defect; nor is the power of the legislature to cure defective proceedings limited by the fact that but for such curative act the defective proceeding would be wholly invalid or inoperative: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26–340.

The power of the legislature to cure defective or irregular proceedings is not limited by the fact that but for such curative act the proceedings would be wholly inoperative; and held, that where the legislature has the power to authorize by general law the levy and collection of special taxes by municipal corporations without limitation as to rate, the legislature may rightfully legalize levies made in excess of lawful authority: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39–112.

As the legislature might provide by law that a conveyance should impart constructive notice without acknowledgment, so it may by a curative act provide that defective acknowledgments to instruments, which have been duly recorded, shall be legal and valid, notwithstanding such defects; but such curative acts cannot affect rights of third parties which have vested before their passage: Brinton v. Seevers, 12–389; Newman v. Samuels, 17–528; Ferguson v. Williams, 58–717.

But held that such acts legalizing conveyances defectively acknowledged were applicable only to conveyances which, without acknowledgment, would have been valid, but not to instruments (as, for instance, deeds of married women under the law as it then stood) which, unless acknowledged in the manner required, were void: Heaton v. Fryberger, 38–185.

A retrospecive law authorizing an act, or curing defects in a proceeding which the legislature might have previously authorized, is not unconstitutional: McMillen v. County Judge, 6–391: Huff v. Cook, 44–639.

Therefore an act legalizing the establishment of a county road is not unconstitutional: Bennett v. Fisher, 26–497.

A valid curative act cannot be passed where the act to be cured is prohibited by the constitution: Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44–122.

While retrospective legislation may be proper under some circumstances, held, that a retrospective statute validating a deed by the chairman and clerk of the board of supervisors of a county, conveying to a railroad company certain swamp land belonging to the county, together with a cash indemnity to which the county was entitled from the United States, such cash indemnity not being included in the original contract of sale of said swamp land to the railroad company which the electors had approved as required by law, was invalid: Palmer v. Howard County, 45–61.

A law which purports to legalize an act of a municipal corporation which it had no lawful power to do, not in mere matter of form but in substance, is invalid. The legislature cannot legalize the passage of an ordinance which it could not specifically authorize in the first instance: Independent School Dist. v. Burlington, 60–500.

As the legislature cannot amend corporate charters by special laws, it cannot legalize the passage of an ordinance not authorized by such charter: Stange v. Dubuque, 62–303.

But an act legalizing the action of a county superintendent in attaching territory of one district to another, not justified by the circumstances so as to render the original action valid under the statute, may be passed, as no general statute could be made applicable, and therefore the constitutional prohibition against special statutes does not apply: Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 62–616.

Where a note individual in form was in fact given in payment for insurance of school buildings, and was signed by the officers of the school district with their individual names, affixing the words "President," "Secretary" and "Director," held, that the statute legalizing all contracts made by school officers for insurance of school buildings, as well as evidence of indebtedness therefor, and relieving the members from their individual liability, was not applicable: American Ins. Co. v. Stratton, 59–696.

If the legalizing act is invalid it will not affect the former act: Lytle v. May, 49–224.

A legalizing act merely operating to carry out the intent of the parties, which would otherwise be defeated by formal defects, as valid. So held as to a statutory provision legalizing conveyances of real estate by foreign executors: Smith v. Callaghan, 66–552.

Impairing Obligation of Contracts.

Re-enactment of statute: The obligation of contracts is not impaired by the re-enactment of a statute in existence at the time the contract was made: Bridgman v. Wilcut, 4 G. Gr., 563.

Subsequent contracts: A law enacted prior to the formation of a contract cannot be objectionable as impairing the obligation thereof: Davis v. Bronson, 6–410.

Negotiability of bills and notes: A statute attaching the attributes of negotiability to instruments which have not been previously negotiable, and thereby cutting off defenses as against an innocent holder, cannot be made applicable to contracts already in existence: Griffey v. Payne, Mor., 68; Harlan v. Seigler, Mor., 39.

But a provison that, in case of assignment of such an instrument, suit may be brought in the name of the assignee instead of that of the original payee for the assignee's benefit, merely affects the remedy and may be applicable to assignments already made: Harlan v. Seigler, Mor., 39.

Although the legislature is not prohibited from changing the remedy on a contract or the rules of evidence that shall be brought to bear upon it, yet a statute authorizing the defense of fraud to be set up as against a bona fide holder for value of a negotiable instrument acquiring the same before maturity can only apply to contracts made after the taking effect of the statute: Temple v. Hays, Mor., 9.

Divorce: A legislative divorce is not a law impairing the obligation of contracts: Levins v. Sleator, 2 G. Gr., 604.

The decision of a court declaring a contract void is not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts. So held in case of bonds issued by counties in payment for stock in railroad companies, where the bonds were held void: McClure v. Owen, 26–243; Railroad Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall., 511.

Change in judicial decision cannot be allowed to render invalid contracts which, when made, were held to be lawful: Thompson v. Lee County, 3 Wall., 327.

Where a state has passed no law nor put any construction upon any law impairing the obligation of a contract then in existence, but changes its policy or construction of the state constitution in regard to a class of contracts, the validity of any one of that class of contracts will be determined by the law then in force: Railroad Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall., 511.

Effect of sealed instrument: The statute allowing the want of consideration to be pleaded in an action on a sealed instrument does not impair the obligation of the contract when applied to an instrument executed out of the state, where the common-law rule making the seal conclusive as to the consideration is in force: Williams v. Haines, 27-251.

A state bankrupt law does prima facie impair the obligation of contracts, and is unconstitutional and void, except in case the debtor and creditor are domiciled in the state where the discharge is granted and the law was in existence at the time when the contract was made: Collins v. Rodolph, 3 G. Gr., 299.

The appearance of a non-resident creditor for the purpose of opposing the discharge of the insolvent will not constitute a waiver or abandonment of his exemption from the effect of such discharge: Ibid.

A discharge under a state insolvent law does not discharge a debt due to a citizen of another state, no matter where the debt was contracted or made payable, unless the creditor has appeared and submitted to the jurisdiction of the court by becoming a party or claiming a dividend: Hawley v. Hunt, 27–303.

Legal Tender Notes: The act of congress making United States notes a legal tender in payment of debts previously contracted is constitutional: Wilson v. Tribleeock, 23–331; Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 33–422, 503.

Attachment: The actual service of an attachment upon property creates a real lien thereon which nothing subsequent can destroy but the dissolution of the attachment. Therefore, held, that an act exempting property of persons in the military service of the United States from levy or sale was not applicable to property already levied on by attachment: Hannahs v. Felt, 15–141; Ryan v. Wessels, 15–145.

Existing vendor's lien: The right to a vendor's lien, arising by virtue of contract of sale and conveyance without express reservation thereof, at a time when such lien was recognized, held not to be affected by subsequent legislation declaring that such a lien should not be recognized or enforced after conveyance by the vendee, unless reserved by conveyance, mortgage or other instrument duly executed and recorded: Jordan v. Wimer, 45–65.

License: A license to sell intoxicating liquors is not a contract between the state and the person licensed, giving the latter vested rights, but is a mere temporary permit issued in the exercise of the police power, and subject to the direction of government, which may revoke it as it deems fit. Such power of revocation may be exercised by a municipal corporation where the license has been issued by it under authority of law: Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61–672.

Dower: The widow's right to dower becomes vested at the time of the husband's death and cannot be changed by a subsequent statute: Burke v. Barron, 8–132.

A statute increasing the extent of the widow's dower right cannot be made to operate against the purchaser of land conveyed by the husband before the taking effect of the statute: Davis v. O'Ferrall, 4 G. Gr., 168.

Liability of wife's property: A change in the statutory provisions relating to the liability of the wife's property for debts of the husband which diminished such liability held not applicable to a contract entered into before such change took place, although proceedings were not commenced nor the property seized until after the change: Schmidt v. Holtz, 44–446.

Taxation; change in law: A change in the revenue law as to the mode of enforcing a tax does not impair the obligation of contracts: Haskel v. Burlington, 30–232.

A statute as to the method of enforcing the payment of taxes may be made applicable to taxes delinquent at the time of its passage, as well as those to become delinquent in the future: Sully v. Kuehl, 30–275.

Exemption from taxation is not a vested right, and may be taken away at the will of the legislature: Shiner v. Jacobs, 62–392.

Land dedicated to city for public use: Where, by dedication, the title to property is vested in a city for special public purposes, the legislature cannot authorize the city to sell the land in violation of such trust: Warren v. Mayor of Lyons City, 22–351.

Right to taxes not earned: A statute providing that taxes voted in aid of a railway company should not be collected until the company complied with the conditions entitling it to receive such tax from the treasurer, held not to interfere with vested rights: Harwood v. Case, 37–692.

Penalties on railroad taxes: While penalties already accrued upon a tax in aid of a railroad cannot be taken away by the repeal of the statute under which the tax is voted, there is no vested right in the continuance of such penalties: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69–648.

Corporate franchises; police regulation of: While the legislature may not deprive a corporation of rights vested under its charter without infringing an implied contract between the state and the corporation that there shall be no change in the laws existing at the time of incorporation which shall render the use of the franchise more burdensome or less remunerative, yet a corporation cannot complain of the passage of statutes in the nature of police regulations, although they may operate to its disadvantage: Rodemacher v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 41–297.

Therefore, held, that the provision making railway companies absolutely liable for damages caused by fires set out by their engines was not unconstitutional as applied to railways previously chartered: Ibid.

The statute (21 G. A., ch. 76) requiring foreign corporations doing business within the state to file articles of incorporation with the auditor, and receive permits to transact business, and subjecting them to penalties for doing business without such permit, held constitutional: Goodell v. Kriechbaum, 70–362.

By statute the legislature has reserved the right to repeal and amend articles of incorporation of corporations organized after its enactment, and also to impose such conditions upon the enjoyment of the franchise as the general assembly may deem necessary for the public good. Therefore, held, that a street-car company could properly be subjected to further burdens in regard to the paving of its tracks than those imposed by law at the time its franchise was granted: Sioux City Street R. Co. v. Sioux City, 78–367; S. C., 78–742.

The state has not by any legislation delegated to municipal corporations the powers reserved to the legislature by this statutory provision: Ibid.

Railroad corporations are subject to legislative control as to the rates of fare and freight unless protected by their charters: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82–312.

Right of municipal corporation in taxes levied: A municipal corporation acquires a vested right in taxes already levied under existing laws, which cannot be destroyed by a subsequent statute releasing property from the payment of such taxes: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39–56; Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47–196; Burlington v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 41–134; Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 62–616.

Laws affecting the remedy: The legislature has the power to change the remedy and remedial proceedings upon contracts, and as to them the law in force when the remedy is pursued prevails unless there be statutory provisions preserving the old remedy. So held as to the method of sale under a judgment recovered after the change in the law as to appraisement in an action upon a contract made before such change: Babcock v. Gurney, 42–154; Holland v. Dickerson, 41–367.

A citizen has no vested rights in a particular course of practice in the courts nor to a particular remedy. Remedies are within the control of the legislature, subject to the restriction that the obligation of contracts shall not be impaired and all remedy for the enforcement of rights under a contract shall not be taken away. Retrospective laws which affect pending suits and give a new remedy, modify an existing one, or remove the impediment in the way of a legal proceeding, are not unconstitutional: Tilton v. Swift, 40–78.

Statutes may constitutionally be enacted changing the remedy existing when the contract is made, if they preserve existing remedies in substance and with integrity, and do not destroy or embarrass the remedies existing when the contract is made so as substantially to defeat the rights of a creditor. A law merely limiting the amount of the costs recoverable does not so affect the remedy as substantially to defeat the rights of creditors. So held in regard to a statute limiting the amount of attorneys' fees taxable as costs upon foreclosure of school-fund mortgages: Kossuth County v. Wallace, 60–508.

A law which, by construction, gives a new and more efficient remedy upon a contract does not impair its obligation: Van Metre v. Wolf, 27–341.

A change of statutory provisions relating to the production of testimony may be made applicable to suits before commenced: Wormley v. Hamburg, 40–22.

A retrospective statute, regulating the remedy but not affecting subsequent rights, is constitutional: Johnson v. Semple, 31–49.

So held as to a statute rendering a motion for a new trial in an action at law unnecessary in order to bring before the supreme court, on appeal, the question as to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the judgment: Ibid.

Proceedings are to be had in accordance with the statutes in force, even though they may have been passed subsequently to the commencement of the action: Ballard v. Ridgley, Mor., 27; Ingham v. Dooley, Mor., 28.

Rules of practice of a court cannot be regarded as vested rights which may not be modified by a subsequent statute. A party has no vested right as to a particular course of practice: Brotherton v. Brotherton, 41–112.

A change in the statute regulating the place of bringing action to foreclose a mortgage, by which the action is authorized to be brought in the county where suit on the note may be maintained instead of in the county where the property is situated, is not such a change in the remedy as to be unconstitutional as to mortgages previously executed: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Gleason, 56-47.

An amendment to the statute in reference to changes of venue, held not to affect any vested right as applied to actions pending: Eikenberry v. Edwards, 71-82.

The right to a particular mode of procedure is not a vested right which the state cannot change or abolish: Drake v. Jordan, 73-707.

Redemption and appraisement laws: An appraisement law providing that property levied upon under execution can only be sold at a certain proportion of the appraised value is unconstitutional as applied to contracts entered into before its passage. The law in force when the contract is made necessarily forms a part of the contract and fixes the rights and obligations growing out of it, and any substantial change in the law of the remedy which shall lessen its efficiency or burden it with any new conditions and restrictions comes within the constitutional prohibition: Rosier v. Hale, 10-470; Landis v. Abrahams, 11-284.

A law depriving a judgment debtor of the right to have his real property appraised, or sold subject to redemption, is not unconstitutional as impairing vested rights: Holland v. Dickerson, 41-367; Babcock v. Gurney, 42-154.

But a change in the law regulating judicial sales, by which appraisement is allowed in cases where the right before did not exist, is unconstitutional in its application to sales under judgments rendered upon contracts made before the change in the law took effect: Olmstead v. Kellogg, 47-460.

A law giving a right of redemption from sales under foreclosure of mortgage in cases where it did not exist at the time when the mortgage was made impairs the obligation of the contract and is unconstitutional: Malony v. Fortune, 14-417.

Valuation and appraisement laws in general are not applicable to sales under judgments existing prior to their enactments: Burton v. Emerson, 4 G. Gr., 393.

A judgment is not a contract within the provisions of the constitution prohibiting legislation impairing the obligation of contracts, and valuation and appraisement laws may be applicable to a judgment for costs rendered before the enactment of such laws: Sprott v. Reid, 3 G. Gr., 489.

Valuation laws, so far as they do not impair the obligation of the contract, are applicable to executions under a judgment upon a contract entered into before they take effect: Coriell v. Ham, 4 G. Gr., 455.

Exemptions: The act exempting property purchased with pension money from liability for indebtedness arising under contracts previously entered into is unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts: Foster v. Byrne, 76-295.

A statute which undertakes after contracts are entered into to exempt property from seizure for their satisfaction which, but for the exemption created would have been liable to seizure, is unconstitutional: Willard v. Sturm, 65 N. W., 847.

Statutes of limitation relate to the remedy and not to the substance of the contract, and may therefore be made to operate upon prior contracts without impairing their obligations: Maltby v. Cooper, Mor., 59.

If a substantial remedy is left for the enforcement of the contract, the fact that by the statute of limitations a particular action for its enforcement is completely barred will not render such a statute unconstitutional as to existing contracts: Ibid.

The statute of limitations found in Code of '51 and Rev. of '60, held not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts, since the right to sue upon accrued causes of action was not cut off: Campbell v. Long, 20-382.

It is not competent for the legislature by a statute of limitations to take away all remedies existing upon causes of action: Kennedy v. Des Moines, 84-187.

Therefore, held, that a statute requiring claims against cities for personal injuries to be presented within ninety days after the injury would not be considered as applicable to a claim for injuries received more than ninety days before the statute took effect: Ibid.

Extending time for defending: Laws which merely change the remedy are not liable to constitutional objection, although the remedy may be deemed less convenient than the old one, and may in some degree render the recovery of debts more tardy and difficult; but in altering the remedy the obligation of the contract must not be so impaired that the rights of the party in it are in effect destroyed or the remedy rendered hardly worth pursuing by reason of being burdened with new restrictions. Therefore, held, that statutory provisions giving a defendant who should be in the military service of the United States, or of the state, the right to a continuance in actions pending or afterwards to be brought, did not impose on the remedy such new burdens or restrictions as to impair its benefit, and that therefore such restriction was not unconstitutional as to contracts already existing: McCormick v. Rusch, 15-127.

Extending time for bringing suit: A law extending the time within which action may be brought upon a contract is not unconstitutional: Edwards v. McCaddon, 20-520.

Nor is an act extending the time within which a defendant might answer in proceedings to foreclose a mortgage open to such objection: Holloway v. Sherman, 12-282.

Prohibition of action upon judgment: The statutory provision prohibiting an action upon a judgment within fifteen years from its rendition, without leave of the court, held not unconstitutional when applied to judgments rendered before its passage, as impairing their obligation. Although it takes away one remedy, it leaves a complete one: Watts v. Everett, 47-269.

No vested right in pending action: The bringing of a suit vests no right to a particular decision, and the case must be determined on the law as it stands when the judgment is rendered: Huff v. Cook, 44-639.

Right to hold office: Therefore, where a woman elected to the office of county superintendent was held unqualified to fill that office, and subsequently a law was passed providing that no person so elected should be deprived of office by reason of sex, held, that on appeal taken after the passage of the act the statute would be given effect, and the judgment of the court below was reversed: Ibid.

In the absence of any express constitutional provision it is competent for the legislature to abolish an office, increase or decrease the duties devolving upon an incumbent, and add to or take away from his salary. It is also within the legislative power to add to or change the method in which vacancies may occur, and make such changes applicable to existing offices and those holding them: Bryan v. Cattell, 15–538.

Resident aliens. SEC. 22. Foreigners who are, or may hereafter become residents of this state, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and descent of property, as native-born citizens.

This section does not change the common-law rule as to non-resident aliens, and a resident alien, to take advantage of its provisions, must be such at the time of descent cast: Stemple v. Herminghouser, 3 G. Gr., 403. But the section does not restrict the power of the legislature to extend the same privileges to other foreigners than those named (per Cole, J.): Purczell v. Smidt, 21–540; and it confers upon resident aliens the right to transmit as well as to acquire real property by descent (per Dillon, J.): Ibid.

The statute which limits the descent and distribution of real property to non-resident alien widow and heirs is not in conflict with this provision of the constitution, which applies only to foreigners who were at the time of its adoption or who thereafter became residents of this state. Such statute does not affect the title of the resident alien but only the rights of the non-resident widow and heirs: Easton v. Huott, 64 N. W., 408.

Slavery. SEC. 23. There shall be no slavery in this state; nor shall there be involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime.

Imprisonment for contempt for the violation of an injunction, under the prohibitory liquor law, against maintaining a nuisance, is not involuntary servitude, within the prohibition of the constitution: Martin v. Blattner, 68–286.

Reservation of rents. SEC. 24. No lease or grant of agricultural lands, reserving any rent or service of any kind, shall be valid for a longer period than twenty years.

Rights retained. SEC. 25. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others, retained by the people.

The theory of the constitution is that all powers not vested in the general assembly remain in the state: State ex rel. v. Wapello County, 13–388.

"There is, as it were, back of the constitution, an unwritten constitution which guaranties and well protects all the absolute rights of the people" (per Beck, J.): Hanson v. Vernon, 27–28, 73. But see Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30–9, 18, and note to art. 3, § 1.

Intoxicating liquors. SEC. 26. No person shall manufacture for sale, or sell, or keep for sale, as a beverage any intoxicating liquors whatever, including ale, wine and beer. The general assembly shall by law prescribe regulations for the enforcement of the prohibition herein contained, and shall thereby provide suitable penalties for the violation of the provisions hereof.

[By the nineteenth general assembly (Joint Res. No. 8) the foregoing proposed amendment was agreed to, as having already been in due form agreed to by the previous general assembly (18 G. A., Joint Res. No. 8). By 19 G. A., ch. 172, in pursuance of a previous statute authorizing submissions of constitutional amendments at special elections this proposed amendment was submitted to the people at a special election to be held June 27, 1882, and by proclamation of the governor, dated July 29, 1882, it was declared adopted.]

For irregularities in entering this amendment upon the journals of the eighteenth general assembly, and a want of agreement between the amendment as there entered and as subsequently agreed to by the nineteenth general assembly, this amendment, as submitted to and adopted by the people, did not become a part of the constitution: Koehler v. Hill, 60–543; State v. Johnson, 61–504.

ARTICLE 2.—RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

Electors. SECTION 1. Every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of this state six months next preceding the election, and of the county in which he claims his vote, sixty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or hereafter may be authorized by law.

[By proper legislative action a proposed amendment striking the word "white" from the first line of this section, as it originally stood, was submitted to the electors at the general election in 1868 and adopted.]

What elections: The term "elections" as here used, means the choice of persons for public offices made by the people, and does not apply to votes of the electors in district townships in the levy of a school tax at a district meeting: Seaman v. Baughman, 82-216.

The registry laws: This section confers upon persons possessing the qualifications mentioned therein the right to vote, which right cannot be impaired by legislation. But the legislature may regulate the exercise of the right, and provide a method for determining whether persons proposing to vote possess the required qualifications. A registry law is therefore not unconstitutional: Edmonds v. Banbury, 28-267.

Residence: Where a student entered the state university at Iowa City while still a minor, making his father's home in another county his residence during vacations, and receiving support from his father, without having any definite intention of making Iowa City his home after graduation, held, that he was not a resident of the county in which he was attending school, so as to be entitled to vote there on coming of age: Vanderpœl v. O'Hanlon, 53-246.

If a person has actually removed to another place with the intention of remaining there for an indefinite time, and making it a place of fixed residence or present domicile, it is to be regarded as his domicile, notwithstanding he may entertain a floating intention to return at some future time. The place where a married man's family resides is generally to be considered his domicile: State v. Groome, 10-308.

Persons in military service: A statute providing that citizens of the state in the military service should have a right to vote at all elections authorized by law, whether at the time of voting they were within or without the state, and providing for the opening of polls and holding of elections wherever a regiment or battalion of Iowa troops was stationed, held not unconstitutional: Morrison v. Springer, 15-304.

Holding office: Only those who are qualified electors are capable of holding office unless by special provision: State ex rel v. VanBeek, 87-569.

Privileged from arrest. SEC. 2. Electors shall, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the days of election, during their attendance at such elections, going to and returning therefrom.

From military duty. SEC. 3. No elector shall be obliged to perform military duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

Persons in miltary service. SEC. 4. No person in the military, naval, or marine service of the United States shall be considered a resident of this state by being stationed in any garrison, barrack, or military or naval place or station within this state.

Insane. SEC. 5. No idiot or insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to the privilege of an elector.

Ballot. SEC. 6. All elections by the people shall be by ballot.

General election. [SEC. 7.] The general election for state, district, county and township officers shall be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November.

[By proper action of the legislature (19 G. A., Joint Res. No. 12, and 20 G. A., Joint Res. No.13) the foregoing section was submitted to vote of the electors at the general election in 1884, and by them adopted.]

ARTICLE 3.—OF THE DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

Departments of governments. SECTION 1. The powers of the government of Iowa shall be divided into three separate departments: the legislative, the executive and the judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any function appertaining to either of the others, except in cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted.

This section does not prohibit the judicial department from passing upon the legality of the acts of the officers of the several departments; as, for instance, to compel the auditor of state by mandamus to issue a warrant for payment of salary of an officer, where the auditor has refused to act: Bryan v. Cattell, 15–538.

The charter of a city, conferring upon the mayor judicial authority, is not in conflict with this section. The mayor of the city is not a part of the government of the state of Iowa: Santo v. State, 2–165, 220.

Provisions for proceedings in court for the annexation of contiguous territory to a city, held not in conflict with this section: Burlington v. Leebrick, 43–252, 258.

See, further, notes to following sections.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

General assembly. SECTION 1. The legislative authority of this state shall be vested in a general assembly, which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives; and the style of every law shall be—"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa."

General scope of power: In ascertaining the power of the legislature under the constitution, the courts look not at what the instrument authorizes but at what is prohibited: McMillen v. County Judge, 6–391.

The legislature possesses sovereign legislative power over all subjects except such as are prohibited to it in the state constitution: Boyd v. Ellis, 11–97.

The general assembly possesses all legislative authority not delegated to the general government or prohibited by the constitution. The constitution, as applied to the legislative department, is a limitation and not a grant of power: Morrison v. Springer, 15–304. And see State v. Hockett, 70–442.

The rule in construing the state constitution is that the state legislature may exercise all rightful legislative powers which are not expressly prohibited or necessarily included in the prohibited powers: Purczell v. Smidt, 21–540.

All the legislative authority inherent in the people is vested in the general assembly, and the legislative power of the general assembly is therefore supreme, except as it is bounded by the limitations written in the constitution: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30–9, 18.

The power of legislation is vested in general terms in the general assembly, and thereby there is conferred upon that body the authority to legislate upon all rightful subjects, unless prohibited from so doing expressly or by clear implication: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633.

It is an elementary principle that legislative power is primarily plenary, and that state constitutions are not grants of but limitations upon that power, and he who would challenge a legislative enactment must be able to specify a particular provision of the constitution which deprives the legislature of the power to pass the act: State ex rel. v. Forkner, 62 N. W., 772.

It is the duty of the court to reconcile the statutes with the constitution when it can be done without doing violence to the language of either, and in all cases of doubt the doubt must be resolved in favor of the constitutionality of the statute: Ibid.

It is likewise true that the constitution is a shield which the state in its sovereign capacity has provided for the protection of public and private rights; that unrestricted legislation is inimical to both public and private rights; and that it is the duty of the court to see that no legislation is enacted which improperly intrenches upon the constitutional rights of the whole people and of the individual or of his property: Ibid.

And see notes to art. 1, § 25.

While the constitution vests the legislative power in the general assembly and it may legislate on all subjects not prohibited by express words or necessary implication, yet under the constitutional provision placing the educational interests of the state under the management of a board of education authorized to legislate and make all needful rules and regulations in relation to schools, held, that the power to legislate on such subject was thereby denied to the legislature: District T'p v. Dubuque, 7–262.

Legislative divorces: Under the terms of the organic law providing "that the legislative power of the territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation," held, that the territorial legislature was invested with as much power as is usually vested in an unrestrained legislative body, and that such power included the power to grant legislative divorces, even where the grounds for divorce were not such as to entitle the party to relief in the courts: Levins v. Sleator, 2. G. Gr., 604. (But under this constitution art. 3, § 27, legislative divorces cannot now be granted.)

The taxing power being one of the sovereign powers of the state vested in the general assembly, and not being limited by the constitution as to the kinds or classes of property subject to taxation, the general assembly has general legislative authority to subject all kinds and classes of property to taxes for all proper purposes: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633.

It being within the proper scope of legislative authority to pass general laws for the levy and assessment of taxes, the passage of a general law curing and legalizing the levy and collection of taxes irregularly or illegally levied is also an exercise of legislative authority and not an encroachment upon judicial power: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39–112.

Taxation is an attribute of sovereignty. It is one of the powers necessary to the life and existence of the state, and, unless restricted in the fundamental law, the power of the state is full and ample to subject all species of property within its limits to taxes for all lawful purposes: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633.

Property cannot be taxed until authority therefor is conferred by the legislature, and the manner of imposing taxes authorized by law must be followed: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Davenport, 51-451.

No property can be taxed until the law-making power authorizes and requires it to be done, and if it has been authorized only in a particular way, that alone can be pursued. It cannot be done in another: Tallman v. Treasurer of Butler County, 12-531.

Without express legislative enactment or constitutional provision the property of the people cannot be subjected to taxation: Appanoose County v. Vermilion, 70-365.

Judicial revision of legislative action: Where the legislative authority reserves to itself the power to act under certain circumstances, the existence of such circumstances is to be determined by it, and a court cannot call into question the propriety of its action: Miners' Bank v. United States, 1 G. Gr., 553.

The judicial branch of the government has no power to determine whether an act of the legislative branch is wise or unwise, nor has it power to declare an act void except in cases where the statute in question is plainly, palpably, and without doubt, repugnant to some provision of the constitution: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64-275.

And see notes to art. 5, § 1.

Delegation of legislative power: The legislative authority being vested in the general assembly, it is not competent for it to submit the question whether an act shall become a law to the vote of the people. Therefore, held, that a statute providing for a submission to vote, in each county, of the question as to whether a prohibitory liquor law should be in force in that county, was unconstitutional, and that the act itself was in force throughout the state without such submission: Santo v. State, 2-165, 203; State v. Beneke, 9-203.

So the license act of 1857, containing a provision that the prohibitory law of 1855 should not be repealed in any county except by a vote of the people of that county, was held unconstitutional: Geebrick v. State, 5-491.

Held, also, that a statute providing for the submission to vote in each county of the question whether a previous prohibitory liquor law allowing the sale of wine and beer should be repealed within that county, and the sale of wine and beer prohibited, was unconstitutional: State v. Weir, 33-134.

Held, also, that a statute which prohibited stock from running at large, and was a valid enactment in itself, but contained a section providing that the act should not be enforced in any county until adopted by the electors of that county, was in force throughout the state without any such submission to vote, the provision for a submission being unconstitutional: Weir v. Cram, 37-649.

But a statute allowing the county judge to submit to vote in each county the question whether sheep and swine should be allowed to run at large was held not unconstitutional as being a delegation of legislative power, inasmuch as the law itself was in force without such vote, and the people of each county were simply authorized to adopt its provisions as a police regulation: Dalby v. Wolf, 14-228.

The mulct law which provides that on certain conditions as to petition for consent and action of the city council the penalties of the prohibitory law as to selling intoxicating liquors shall be suspended in cities where such consent is given is not unconstitutional as a delegation of legislative authority to the people or particular electors. In so far as such statute affects the general prohibitory law it does so only by implication and such fact is not made to depend upon the vote of the people. It is the statute itself and not the action of the people or the council under such statute which affects the prohibitory law. The objection based on the delegation of legislative authority is met if the act as it comes from the legislature and receives the governor's approval becomes a complete and perfect enactment and the act is not invalid if it depends upon the action of the people simply in order to determine the limits of its operation: State ex rel v. Forkner, 62 N. W., 772.

Although the general assembly cannot delegate to the people the right to make or repeal a law, it has not been held that the state cannot delegate legislative power to municipal corporations within proper bounds. State v. King, 37-462.

It is not unconstitutional to provide, in an act enlarging the boundaries of a city, that it shall only take effect after its acceptance by the city council: Morford v. Unger, 8-82.

A statute empowering cities of a certain grade to establish superior courts by vote is not unconstitutional as providing for an exercise of legislative power by the people. The statute itself is in force without any vote, but simply confers upon cities an option to be exercised by vote to avail themselves of the power conferred: Lytle v. May, 49-224.

The statute conferring upon cities authority to be exercised at their discretion is not void as delegating legislative power. Such statute confers authority which the city may exercise or not, as it chooses: Des Moines v. Hillis, 55-643.

The voting of aid to railways by a county is not in derogation of the legislative power vested in the general assembly: Dubuque County v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 4 G. Gr., 1.

While the legislature cannot delegate legislative power to the courts or to any other authority, yet proceedings for the annexation of territory to a municipal corporation may be authorized before a court: Ford v. North Des Moines, 80-626.

Where by statute the assent of a majority of the voters of a city or a town to the erection of water-works was required, held, that the council might, by ordinance, first determine the conditions involved in the proposition submitted to vote: Taylor v. McFadden, 84-262.

Sessions. SEC. 2. The sessions of the general assembly shall be biennial, and shall commence on the second Monday in January next ensuing the election of its members; unless the governor of the state shall, in the meantime, convene the general assembly by proclamation.

As to the powers of the general assembly at an extra session, see note to art. 4, § 11.

Representatives. SEC. 3. The members of the house of representatives shall be chosen every second year, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the second Tuesday in October, except the years of the presidential election, when the election shall be on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, and their term of office shall commence on the first day of January next after their election, and continue two years, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

Eligibility. SEC. 4. No person shall be member of the house of representatives who shall not have attained the age of twenty-one years; be a male citizen of the United States, and shall have been an inhabitant of this state one year next preceding his election, and at the time of his election shall have had an actual residence of sixty days in the county or district he may have been chosen to represent.

[By an amendment to the constitution properly proposed (17 G. A., Joint Res. No. 5; 18 G. A., Joint Res. No. 6), and adopted by vote of the electors at the general election in 1880, the words "free white" were stricken from the second line of this section.]

Senators. SEC. 5. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and place as representatives; they shall be twenty-five years of age, and possess the qualifications of representatives as to residence and citizenship.

Number and classification. SEC. 6. The number of senators shall not be less than one-third nor more than one-half the representative body; and shall be so classified by lot that one class, being as nearly one-half as possible, shall be elected every two years. When the number of senators is increased, they shall be annexed by lot to one or the other of the two classes, so as to keep them as nearly equal in numbers as practicable.

Elections determined. SEC. 7. Each house shall choose its own officers, and judge of the qualification, election, and return of its own members. A contested election shall be determined in such manner as shall be directed by law.

The senate has power to choose its own clerk and to remove him at pleasure without a notice or a hearing. Cliff v. Parsons, 90–665.

Quorum. SEC. 8. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to transact business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

Authority of the houses. SEC. 9. Each house shall sit upon its own adjournments, keep a journal of its proceedings, and publish the same; determine its rules of proceedings, punish members for disorderly behavior, and with the consent of two-thirds, expel a member, but not a second time for the same offense; and shall have all other powers necessary for a branch of the general assembly of a free and independent state.

Protest. SEC. 10. Every member of the general assembly shall have the liberty to dissent from or protest against any act or resolution which he may think injurious to the public or an individual, and have the reasons for his dissent entered on the journals; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall, at the desire of any two members present, be entered on the journals.

Privilege. SEC. 11. Senators and representatives, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, shall be privileged from arrest during the session of the general assembly, and in going to or returning from the same.

Vacancies. SEC. 12. When vacancies occur in either house, the governor, or the person exercising the functions of governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

Doors open. SEC. 13. The doors of each house shall be open, except on such occasions as, in the opinion of the house, may require secrecy.

Adjournments. SEC. 14. Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting.

Bills. SEC. 15. Bills may originate in either house, and may be amended, altered, or rejected by the other; and every bill having passed both houses, shall be signed by the speaker and president of their respective houses.

Approval. SEC. 16. Every bill which shall have passed the general assembly, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the governor. If he approve, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon their journal, and proceed to reconsider it; if, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses, by yeas and nays, by a majority of two-thirds of the members of each house, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within three days after it shall have been presented to him (Sunday excepted), the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the general assembly, by adjournment, prevent such return. Any bill submitted to the governor for his approval during the last three days of a session of the general assembly, shall be deposited by him in the office of the secretary of state within thirty days after the adjournment, with his approval, if approved by him, and with his objections, if he disapproves thereof.

An act is not passed by the legislature until it is approved by the governor, who, for such purpose, is a part of the legislature: United States v. Fanning, Mor., 348.

The copy or certificate, in the printed acts, of the approval by the governor, is but evidence of the fact, and is not essential in order that the act may take effect. It is the approval of the original bill filed in the office of the secretary of state which is required to give the act validity: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

In case a bill is submitted to the governor for his approval during the last three days of a session of the general assembly, and he neither signs nor returns it with objections before the adjournment, it becomes a law only in case he subsequently approves it; and the filing of the bill within the thirty days mentioned, with the secretary of state, without approval or disapproval, will not give it the effect of a law: Darling v. Boesch, 67-702.

The fact that a law passed thirty-four years previously did not bear the signature of the governor, held not sufficient to render the act void. The presumption would be that the act became a law by failure of the governor to return it within proper time after its presentation to him: Collins v. Laucier, 45-702.

Majority vote. SEC. 17. No bill shall be passed unless by the assent of a majority of all the members elected to each branch of the general assembly, and the question upon the final passage shall be taken immediately upon its last reading, and the yeas and nays entered on the journal.

Receipts and expenditures. SEC. 18. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public money shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the general assembly.

Impeachment. SEC. 19. The house of representatives shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the senate. When sitting for that purpose, the senators shall be upon oath or affirmation; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

Who liable to; judgment. SEC. 20. The governor, judges of the supreme and district courts, and other state officers, shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor or malfeasance in office; but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under this state; but the party convicted or acquitted shall nevertheless be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment according to law. All other civil officers shall be tried for misdemeanors and malfeasance in office, in such manner as the general assembly may provide.

Members not appointed to office. SEC. 21. No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit under this state, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such term, except such offices as may be filled by elections by the people.

Disqualification. SEC. 22. No person holding any lucrative office under the United States, or this state, or any other power, shall be eligible to hold a seat in the general assembly. But offices in the militia, to which there is attached no annual salary, or the office of justice of the peace, or postmaster, whose compensation does not exceed one hundred dollars per annum, or notary public, shall not be deemed lucrative.

Failure to account. SEC. 23. No person who may hereafter be a collector or holder of public moneys, shall have a seat in either house of the general assembly, or be eligible to hold any office of trust or profit in this state, until he shall have accounted for and paid into the treasury all sums for which he may be liable.

Money drawn. SEC. 24. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law.

The executive council under § 120 of Code of '73 had authority to audit and certify to proper expenses not otherwise provided for, such as the compensation for the national guards when called out by the governor to suppress or prevent breaches of the peace, as well as for supplies of state offices, repairs of the state house etc., to be paid out of the state treasury: Prime v. McCarthy, 92-569.

Compensation of members. SEC. 25. Each member of the first general assembly under this constitution shall receive three dollars per diem while in session; and the further sum of three dollars for every twenty miles traveled in going to and returning from the place where such session is held, by the nearest traveled route; after which they shall receive such compensation as shall be fixed by law; but no general assembly shall have the power to increase the compensation of its members. And when convened in extra session they shall receive the same mileage and per diem compensation as fixed by law for the regular session, and none other.

Laws, when to take effect; publication. SEC. 26. No law of the general assembly, passed at a regular session, of a public nature, shall take effect until the fourth day of July next, after the passage thereof. Laws passed at a special session shall take effect ninety days after the adjournment of the general assembly by which they were passed. If the general assembly shall deem any law of immediate importance, they may provide that the same shall take effect by publication in newspapers in the state.

An act not now in force, conferring upon the governor authority to publish acts of a general nature, and providing that they should take effect from such publication, held unconstitutional as delegating to the governor the power given to the legislature to determine what acts should go into effect by publication: Scott v. Clark, 1-70; Pilkey v. Gleason, 1-522.

Under the provision found in a former constitution, that statutes should take effect only when published and circulated by authority, held, that the publication without legislative authority was not sufficient to bring the statute into operation: Calkin v. State ex rel., 1 G. Gr., 68.

Divorce. SEC. 27. No divorce shall be granted by the general assembly.

A divorce granted by the territorial legislature held to be valid, where it did not appear to have been granted for causes over which the district courts had jurisdiction: Levins v. Sleator, 2 G. Gr., 604.

Lotteries. SEC. 28. No lottery shall be authorized by this state; nor shall the sale of lottery tickets be allowed.

A contract in furtherance of a lottery scheme held void: Guenther v. Dewein, 11-133.

Acts; one subject; expressed in title. SEC. 29. Every act shall embrace but one subject, and matters properly connected therewith; which subject shall be expressed in the title. But if any subject shall be embraced in an act which shall not be expressed in the title, such act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title.

Act to embrace but one subject: The intention of the provision of this section prohibiting more than one subject being embraced in the same act was to prevent the union in the same act of incongruous matter and of objects having no connection or relation. But there must be some limit to the division of matter into separate bills and acts. It cannot be held that each step should be embraced in a separate act. The unity of object is to be looked for in the ultimate end designed to be attained, and not in the details looking to that end: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280; Morgan v. Des Moines, 54 Fed., 456.

Therefore, held, that an act containing sixty-six sections, entitled "An act in relation to certain state roads," in which forty-six roads were established, others vacated, and provisions for the relocation of still others were made, was not in conflict with the constitutional provision: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280.

An act entitled "An act for revising and consolidating the laws and incorporating the city of Dubuque and establishing a city court therein," held not objectionable as embracing more than one subject: Davis v. Woolnough, 9-104, 107.

The act of 1855 for the suppression of intemperance, held not to embrace more than one subject, the several provisions therein being but so many steps fairly conducive to the end or object expressed in the title: Santo v. State, 2-165.

The statute prohibiting the sale of malt or vinous liquors within two miles of city limits, and giving cities authority to regulate and license the sales of such liquors within those limits, held not unconstitutional as containing more than one subject: State v. Shroeder, 51-197.

The fact that the title of an act embraces more than one subject will not affect its validity: Ibid.

The act of 20 G. A., ch. 143, amendatory of prior legislation, intended for the suppression of the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and providing for additional penalties and remedies against the violators of the statute, does not embrace more than one subject under the prohibition of this provision: Martin v. Blattner, 68-286.

The statute in relation to school bonds is not unconstitutional as embodying more than one subject: Ackley School Dist. v. Hall, 113 U. S., 135.

An act is to embrace but one subject and matters properly connected therewith; but held, that a provision with reference to the time after which action on an insurance policy might be brought was properly connected with the subject of an act relating to insurance: Christie v. Life Indemnity, etc., Co., 82-360.

An act legalizing proceedings of a board of supervisors for the location and construction of a levee and providing for the assessment of the costs thereof, held not to embrace two subjects: Richman v. Supervisors of Muscatine County, 77-513.

A particular statute held not unconstitutional as embracing more than one subject: State v. Aulman, 76-624.

The subject of a legislative act prohibiting the sale of adulterated lard, unless labeled in a certain manner, showing the ingredients of which it is composed, is sufficiently expressed in the title as "An act to prevent fraud in the sale of lard and to provide punishment for the violation thereof:" State v. Snow, 81-642.

Where a statute was entitled "An act relating to insurance and fire insurance companies," held, that the title sufficiently embraced provisions with reference to the time after which action on a policy could be brought: Christy v. Life Idemnity, etc., Co., 82-360.

Title of act: It is not contemplated that anything more than general terms shall be used in the title to express the object sought to be obtained. The title of the mulct law describing it as an act to tax the traffic in intoxicating liquors and to regulate the control of the same sufficiently covers the purposes of the statute. Even though the act should be considered to be in effect a license law, yet when the title and act are construed together there is no uncertainity as to the purpose: State ex rel. v. Forkner, 62 N. W., 772.

Provisions made in an act entitled "An act to amend an act to incorporate the city of Muscatine," for enlarging the corporate boundaries of said city, held to be sufficiently specified in the title: Morford v. Unger, 8-82.

Provisions for excluding territory from the limits of cities already incorporated are sufficiently covered by the title of an act "for the incorporation of cities:" Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11-482.

Section applied: See Duncombe v. Prindle, 12-1.

Every law prescribing duties must have the sanction of liabilities; therefore, held, that the statutory provision prescribing the liabilities of railroad companies in certain cases, etc., was sufficiently embraced in the title of the bill in which it was originally enacted, which was "An act in relation to the duties of railroad companies:" McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20-338.

Statutory provisions as to the method of enforcing a judgment against a municipal corporation are sufficiently connected with the subject of the chapter on executions, under which they are found in Code of '73, not to be objectionable under this constitutional provision: Porter v. Thompson, 22-391.

Where an act in one section legalized the organization of a school district, and in another legalized the acts of the officers thereof, held, that the second was so connected with the first that it was sufficiently embraced in the title "An act to legalize the organization of the," etc., or at least that the invalidity on this ground would extend only to the second section: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26-340.

In an act to amend the charter of the city of Keokuk was inserted a section purporting to legalize elections previously held to determine whether the city council should subscribe to the stock of a certain railroad; held, that such section was not in any sense an amendment to the charter, and the object was not embraced in the title, nor germane to anything contained therein, and the section was, therefore, void under a statutory provision containing similar provisions in reference to ordinances: Williamson v. Keokuk, 44-88.

A section contained in an act entitled "An act providing the place of bringing suits in certain cases," designating upon whom service might be made in such cases, held germane to the subject expressed in the title: Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Highsmith, 44-330.

The statute reorganizing the judicial districts and providing for the election of additional judges is not in conflict with this section: State v. Emmons, 72-265.

Local or special laws. SEC. 30. The general assembly shall not pass local or special laws in the following cases:

For the assessment and collection of taxes for state, county, or road purposes;

For laying out, opening, and working roads or highways;

For changing the names of persons;

For the incorporation of cities and towns;

For vacating roads, town plats, streets, alleys, or public squares;

For locating or changing county seats.

Laws general and uniform; boundaries of counties. In all the cases above enumerated, and in all other cases where a general law can be made applicable, all laws shall be general, and of uniform operation throughout the state; and no law changing the boundary lines of any county shall have effect until upon being submitted to the people of the counties affected by the change, at a general election, it shall be approved by a majority of the votes in each county, cast for and against it.

General and special laws: A statute which operates upon a particular condition and attaches to it certain consequences, so that whenever that condition exists such consequences follow, is a general and not a special statute: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112.

A law which affects all persons who may be brought within the relations for which it provides is a general and not a special law within the meaning of those provisions of the constitution prohibiting the passing of special laws in cases where general laws may be made applicable. Therefore, held, that the statute regulating the liability of railway companies for injuries to employees is general and not special, within the constitutional prohibition: McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20-338; Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36-52.

Special laws as to taxation: This prohibition of special laws for the assessment and collection of taxes is not infringed by the provision allowing a debtor to deduct the amount of his moneys and credits in listing his property for assessment: Macklot v. Davenport, 17-379.

A law remitting penalties upon taxes not paid within a certain time is not a special law within the meaning of this provision: Beecher v. Board of Supervisors, 50-538.

A curative act legalizing the levy and assessment of taxes made for a year when no law authorizing any levy and assessment was in force, held not in conflict with this section: Boardman v. Beckwith, 18-292.

An act which prescribed a fixed and specific rule for the assessment of property of one class of corporations or persons different from that applicable to other classes is not necessarily a special act within the meaning of the constitution: Primghar State Bank v. Rerick, 64 N. W., 801.

Therefore, held, that a statute as to the assessment of stock in state banks differing from the provisions as to assessment of stock in national banks was not invalid: Ibid.

A curative act, such as an act to legalize a levy of taxes for school purposes made by the directors of a particular district after the expiration of the time fixed by statute is not invalid under the provisions of this section: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Independent Dist., 68 N. W., 881.

A curative act legalizing the proceedings of a board of supervisors by which a levee was constructed and the costs of construction assessed to the adjacent property, held not obnoxious to this section, as the state of facts was such that it would not come within the provisions of a general law: Richman v. Supervisors of Muscatine County, 77-513.

For incorporation of cities and towns: An act applicable to cities of the first class organized subsequently to a certain date is not invalid as being special: Owen v. Sioux City, 91-190.

An act applicable to cities of a specified population is not invalid as special legislation, although the limit of population is such that it is applicable to but one city, if in terms it may be applicable to other cities should they attain the specified population: Tuttle v. Polk, 92–433.

It is not necessary that the law should operate uniformly on all the people of the state, nor when the legislation pertains to cities is it important that it should operate uniformly on all cities throughout the state; but where the language of a statute with reference to extending city limits was such as to necessarily restrict it to one particular city and prevent its being applicable to any other city at any future time, held, that the statute was special and invalid: State v. Des Moines, 65 N. W., 818.

The prohibition as to local and special legislation is absolute as to the enumerated cases and extends to acts amending charters and acts creating such corporations: Ibid.

The legislature cannot pass a special act amending the charter of a municipal corporation. Such act would be in conflict with the clause prohibiting special acts for the incorporation of cities and towns, and would be a law not of general and uniform operation in a case where a general law could be made applicable: Ex parte Pritz, 9-30; Davis v. Woolnough, 9–104; Hetherington v. Bissell, 10–145; Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14–214.

This provision is not violated by a law empowering cities and towns incorporated under a special charter to amend such charter: Von Phul v. Hammer, 29–222.

Applicable to municipal corporations: A law applicable to all cities and towns existing under special charter is not unconstitutional, even though it be considered an amendment of their charters: State v. King, 37–462.

A law establishing a special court in a particular town named, and providing for the jurisdiction, etc., thereof, held unconstitutional, as being in fact an amendment to the city charter, and as being a local and special law in a case where a general law could be made applicable: McGregor v. Baylies, 19–43.

An act which operates upon a particular condition, and attaches to it certain consequences whenever that condition exists, is not in conflict with this provision. So an act applying only to cities under special charters was held not unconstitutional, although it could apply to but few cities: Haskel v. Burlington, 30–232.

An act legalizing ordinances of a city is not invalid under this provision: Windsor v. Des Moines, 70 N. W., 214.

A statute validating the acts of municipal corporations in levying special taxes in excess of the legal limit, to pay judgments, held constitutional: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39–112.

As the legislature cannot amend the charter of a city, it cannot legalize an act of such city not authorized by the charter, as such an act would be equivalent to an amendment: Independent School Dist. v. Burlington, 60–500; Stange v. Dubuque, 62–303.

By the constitutional provision that no corporation shall be created by special laws, it was not intended to repeal city charters already granted: Warren v. Henly, 31–31.

The provision of art. 8, § 12, authorizing the general assembly to amend or repeal all laws for the organization or creation of corporations, or granting of special or exclusive privileges or immunities, by a vote of two-thirds of each branch of the general assembly, has reference exclusively to corporations for pecuniary purposes, and does not authorize the amendment of the charters of municipal corporations by special statute: Ex parte Pritz, 9-30.

The statutory provisions relating to the enforcement of judgments against municipal corporations are not in any proper sense amendments to the charter of a city, and are not obnoxious to this constitutional prohibition: Porter v. Thompson, 22–391.

Although the passage of a local or special law incorporating a certain school district would be in conflict with the constitutional provision above referred to, yet a curative act legalizing a defective organization thereof is not unconstitutional. In such case a general law could not be made applicable: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26–340.

Other cases of special laws: A special act authorizing the building of a particular railroad, held not in violation of the provision of this section, for the reason that the object of the act was to execute certain trusts confided to the state to secure the building of a railroad on a particular route: Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 24–455.

Statutes legalizing official acts done without authority are not invalid on account of being special statutes, for the reason that a general statute could not be made applicable in such cases: Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 62–616.

An appropriation is necessarily made by a special act, and is not invalid because not general and uniform throughout the state: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64–275.

All statutes punishing criminally the violation of law, or providing for the prevention of crimes, are special in their character, and do not come within the restriction that they shall be of uniform operation with respect to different crimes. They may provide remedies and penalties as to nuisances, for instance, committed by the sale of intoxicating liquors, which are not extended to other cases of nuisance: Martin v. Blattner, 68–286.

An act providing for the holding of terms of court in a particular county at a place other than the county seat is not unconstitutional. A general law could not be applicable in such case: Cooper v. Mills County, 69–350.

The statute reorganizing the judicial districts and providing for additional judges relates to subjects of legislation where a general law could not be made applicable: State v. Emmons, 72–265.

Uniformity of taxation: The restriction upon the power of taxation that taxes must be uniform is applicable generally to the principle or plan of taxation, and not to specific or particular taxes. It means that all individuals and all classes shall be uniformly taxed, and that all must contribute uniformly with like individuals and like classes to these burdens. The manner of imposing the burden must of necessity be left to the discretion of the legislative branch of the government: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

An act providing a special method of taxing express companies held not unconstitutional: United States Ex. Co. v. Ellyson, 28-370.

The mere fact that land in question being that of a non-resident was taxed higher than corresponding lands of residents will not be sufficient to show that there has been a discrimination against non-residents and will not render the tax title void: Beeson v. Johns, 124 U. S., 56.

The statutory provision with reference to assessment of railroad bridges across the Mississippi and Missouri rivers is not unconstitutional, being of uniform operation with reference to the class of bridges therein mentioned: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co., v. Harrison County, 74-283.

Uniform operation: As to the requirement that laws shall have a uniform operation, see art. 1, § 6, and notes.

Boundaries of counties: The provision that no law changing the boundary of a county shall have effect until submitted to the people of the counties affected, applied: Duncome v. Prindle, 12-1.

Extra compensation. SEC. 31. No extra compensation shall be made to any officer, public agent, or contractor, after the service shall have been rendered, or the contract entered into; nor shall any money be paid on any claim, the subject-matter of which shall not have been provided for by pre-existing laws, and no public money or property shall be appropriated for local or private purposes, unless such appropriation, compensation, or claim be allowed by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly.

Oath of members. SEC. 32. Members of the general assembly shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be), that I will support the constitution of the United States, and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of senator (or representative, as the case may be), according to the best of my ability." And members of the general assembly are hereby empowered to administer to each other the said oath or affirmation.

Census. SEC. 33. The general assembly shall, in the years one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and every ten years thereafter, cause an enumeration to be made of all the inhabitants of the state.

Apportionment. SEC. 34. The number of senators shall, at the next session following each period of making such enumeration, and the next session following each United States census, be fixed by law, and apportioned among the several counties according to the number of inhabitants in each.

Districts. SEC. 35. The senate shall not consist of more than fifty members, nor the house of representatives of more than one hundred; and they shall be apportioned among the several counties and representative districts of the state according to the number of inhabitants in each, upon ratios to be fixed by law; but no representative district shall contain more than four organized counties, and each district shall be entitled to at least one representative. Every county and district which shall have a number of inhabitants equal to one-half of the ratio fixed by law, shall be entitled to one representative; and any one county containing in addition to the ratio fixed by law one-half of that number, or more, shall be entitled to one additional representative. No floating district shall hereafter be formed.

[By proper legislative action proposed amendments striking the word "white" from each of the last three preceding sections as they originally stood were submitted to the electors at the general election in 1868 and adopted.]

Ratio of representation. SEC. 36. At its first session under this constitution, and at every subsequent regular session, the general assembly shall fix the ratio of representation, and also form into representative districts those counties which will not be entitled singly to a representative.

Districts. SEC. 37. When a congressional, senatorial, or representative district shall be composed of two or more counties, it shall not be entirely separated by any county belonging to another district; and no county shall be divided in forming a congressional, senatorial, or representative district.

Elections by general assembly. SEC. 38. In all elections by the general assembly, the members thereof shall vote viva voce; and the votes shall be entered on the journal.

ARTICLE 4.—EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Governor. SECTION 1. The supreme executive power of this state shall be vested in a chief magistrate, who shall be styled the governor of the state of Iowa.

Election and term. SEC. 2. The governor shall be elected by the qualified electors at the time and place of voting for members of the general assembly, and shall hold his office two years from the time of his installation, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

Lieutenant-governor; returns of elections. SEC. 3. There shall be a lieutenant-governor, who shall hold his office two years, and be elected at the same time as the governor. In voting for governor and lieutenant-governor, the electors shall designate for whom they vote as governor, and for whom as lieutenant-governor. The returns of every election for governor and lieutenant-governor, shall be sealed up and transmitted to the seat of government of the state, directed to the speaker of the house of representatives, who shall open and publish them in the presence of both houses of the general assembly.

Election by general assembly. SEC. 4. The persons respectively having the highest number of votes, for governor and lieutenant-governor, shall be declared duly elected; but in case two or more persons shall have an equal, and the highest number of votes for either office, the general assembly shall, by joint vote, forthwith proceed to elect one of said persons governor, or lieutenant-governor, as the case may be.

Contested elections. SEC. 5. Contested elections for governor, or lieutenant-governor, shall be determined by the general assembly in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

Eligibility. SEC. 6. No person shall be eligible to the office of governor, or lieutenant-governor, who shall not have been a citizen of the United States, and a resident of the state two years next preceding the election, and attained the age of thirty years at the time of said election.

Commander-in-chief. SEC. 7. The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the militia, the army, and navy of this state.

Duties. SEC. 8. He shall transact all executive business with the officers of government, civil and military, and may require information in writing from the officers of the executive department upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

Execution of laws. SEC. 9. He shall take care that the laws are faithfully executed.

Vacancies. SEC. 10. When any office shall, from any cause, become vacant, and no mode is provided by the constitution and laws for filling such vacancy, the governor shall have power to fill such vacancy, by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the general assembly, or at the next election by the people.

Convening assembly. SEC. 11. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the general assembly by proclamation, and shall state to both houses, when assembled, the purpose for which they shall have been convened.

The general assembly, when it is convened in special or extra session, has full legislative authority, unless its business is restricted by some constitutional provision.

Its action is not confined to the special purpose for which it is convened, and it may enact any law at such session that it might at a regular session: Morford v. Unger, 8–82.

Message. SEC. 12. He shall communicate, by message, to the general assembly, at every regular session, the condition of the state, and recommend such matters as he shall deem expedient.

Adjournment. SEC. 13. In case of disagreement between the two houses with respect to the time of adjournment, the governor shall have power to adjourn the general assembly to such time as he may think proper; but no such adjournment shall be beyond the time fixed for the regular meeting of the next general assembly.

Disqualification. SEC. 14. No person shall, while holding any office under the authority of the United States, or this state, execute the office of governor, or lieutenant-governor, except as hereinafter expressly provided.

Term; compensation of lieutenant-governor. SEC. 15. The official term of governor and lieutenant-governor, shall commence on the second Monday of January next after their election, and continue for two years, and until their successors are elected and qualified. The lieutenant-governor, while acting as governor, shall receive the same pay as provided for governor; and while presiding in the senate, shall receive as compensation therefor, the same mileage and double the per diem pay provided for a senator, and none other.

Pardons. SEC. 16. The governor shall have power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons, after conviction, for all offenses except treason and cases of impeachment, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law. Upon conviction for treason, he shall have power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the general assembly at its next meeting, when the general assembly shall either grant a pardon, commute the sentence, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. He shall have power to remit fines and forfeitures, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law; and shall report to the general assembly, at its next meeting, each case of reprieve, commutation, or pardon granted, and the reasons therefor; and also all persons in whose favor remission of fines and forfeitures shall have been made, and the several amounts remitted.

The governor may remit the penalty for forfeiture under a bail bond, even after a judgment on such bond has been rendered: Harbin v. State, 78–263.

Neither the district attorney nor board of supervisors has any authority to remit fines or to compromise judgments therefor, for a less sum than the amount of the fine imposed: McKay v. Woodruff, 77–413.

Therefore, where certain judgments were satisfied of record by the district attorney for a less sum than the fines for which they were rendered, and by authority of the board of supervisors, held, that the satisfactions were absolutely void and no bar to further proceedings to enforce the judgments: Ibid.

And a commutation of the judgments by the governor so far as they were a lien on certain property, but not releasing defendant from personal liability, and upon condition that he pay all costs and forever refrain from engaging in the saloon business in Iowa, held to be no bar to his subsequent arrest and imprisonment, when it did not appear that he had complied with the condition upon which the commutation was granted: Ibid.

The power of the governor to remit fines and forfeitures does not apply to costs taxed in favor of officers and witnesses: State v. Beebee, 87–636.

The provision of the mulct law suspending in localities the penalties of the prohibitory law on certain conditions is not an infringement of the pardoning power of the governor as given by the constitution. The provisions of that act simply constitute a bar under the conditions referred to, to a proceeding under the prohibitory law which might result in a fine or forfeiture if allowed to continue. Thus, it is provided as to the punishment for intoxication that when a person is convicted he may be discharged and his fine remitted upon giving information as to where and through whom he purchased the liquor which produced the intoxication. So it is provided with reference to seduction that if the defendant shall marry the prosecutrix any further proceedings for the offense shall be barred. So it is allowable to compromise certain offenses with leave of court and when so compromised the proceeding is stayed and a bar is created to any prosecution for the same offense. As to none of these cases is it claimed that the pardoning power has been infringed: State ex rel v. Forkner, 62 N. W., 772.

While in the broad meaning of the term

a pardon contemplates a remission of guilt whether before or after conviction, yet our constitution in terms limits the governor's right to pardon to cases where conviction has already been had. Ibid.

The power to pardon is not to be confounded with the power of dispensation or suspension; the former is undoubtedly a prerogative of the executive while the latter must be exercised by the legislative department. The pardoning power does not extend to creating a bar to proceedings under or to suspension of the operation of the laws: Ibid.

Lieutenant-governor to act as governor. SEC. 17. In case of the death, impeachment, resignation, removal from office, or other disability of the governor, the powers and duties of the office for the residue of the term, or until he shall be acquitted, or the disability removed, shall devolve upon the lieutenant-governor.

President of senate. SEC. 18. The lieutenant-governor shall be president of the senate, but shall only vote when the senate is equally divided; and in case of his absence, or impeachment, or when he shall exercise the office of governor, the senate shall choose a president pro tempore.

Vacancies. SEC. 19. If the lieutenant-governor, while acting as governor, shall be impeached, displaced, resign, or die, or otherwise become incapable of performing the duties of the office, the president pro tempore of the senate shall act as governor until the vacancy is filled, or the disability removed; and if the president of the senate, for any of the above causes, shall be rendered incapable of performing the duties pertaining to the office of governor, the same shall devolve upon the speaker of the house of representatives.

The statutory provision for the suspension by the governor of other officers elected by the people as here provided is not unconstitutional: Brown v. Duffus, 66-193.

As to mandamus against executive officer, see notes to art. 3, § 1.

Seal of state. SEC. 20. There shall be a seal of this state, which shall be kept by the governor, and used by him officially, and shall be called the great seal of the state of Iowa.

Grants and commissions. SEC. 21. All grants and commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of the people of the state of Iowa, sealed with the great seal of the state, signed by the governor, and countersigned by the secretary of state.

Secretary, auditor and treasurer. SEC. 22. A secretary of state, auditor of state, and treasurer of state, shall be elected by the qualified electors, who shall continue in office two years, and until their successors are elected and qualified; and perform such duties as may be required by law.

ARTICLE 5.—JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

Courts. SECTION 1. The judicial power shall be vested in a supreme court, district court, and such other courts, inferior to the supreme court, as the general assembly may, from time to time, establish.

Judicial authority: The provisions for proceedings in court for the annexation of contiguous territory to a city are not unconstitutional as conferring upon a court powers not judicial in their nature. The question as to whether the conditions therein mentioned exist, or whether, under the circumstances, justice and equity require the annexation, are of a judicial character, and their determination may properly be vested in the judicial department: Burlington v. Leebrick, 43-252.

The charter of a city, conferring upon the mayor judicial authority, is not in conflict with the constitutional provision that the three departments of government shall be distinct. The mayor of a city is not a part of the government of the state of Iowa: Santo v. State, 2-165, 220.

It is competent for the legislature to determine that terms of court may be held at places other than the county seat for the transaction of certain business and for the trial of particular classes of cases: Wilner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R Co., 77-755.

Therefore, the establishment of a district court at Avoca with power to try cases arising in a certain designated part of Pottawattamie county is not repugnant to this section of the constitution: Ibid.

It is not unconstitutional to vest in the executive council the authority to determine in which one of the penitentiaries of the state a convict shall be confined: O'Brien v. Barr, 83-51.

Although the board of railroad commissioners may not be a court, it may still be given jurisdiction to investigate and determine by prescribed rules and judicial inquiry questions submitted to it under statutory authority: State v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 85-516.

A suit to control the discretion of the executive council in entering into a contract in behalf of the state is in effect a suit against the state and cannot be maintained: Mills Publishing Co. v. Larrabee, 78-97.

Power to declare statute unconstitutional: The constitutional provision that no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of the three departments of government shall exercise any function appertaining to either of the others does not prohibit the judicial department from passing upon the legality of the acts of the officers of the several departments: Bryan v. Cattell, 15-538.

To the judicial department is intrusted the power to decide all questions of constitutional law. It belongs to that department, as a matter of right and duty, to declare every act of the legislature made in violation of the constitution, or any provision of it, null and void; but the violation of the constitution should be clear and apparent before the act should be declared void: Reed v. Wright, 2 G. Gr., 15.

To declare an act unconstitutional and void is the exercise of the highest power of the court and is not to be resorted to unless it becomes necessary. It is the duty of the court to give an act such a construction, if possible, as to avoid the necessity and uphold the act: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280.

The power of the court to hold an act of the legislature unconstitutional and void, while everywhere admitted, is of the most delicate and responsible nature, and should not be resorted to unless the case be clear, decisive and unavoidable: Santo v. State, 2-165, 208; McCormick v. Rusch, 15-127.

The court will not without invitation by argument, upon the expression of mere doubt, enter upon inquiry as to the constitutionality of a statute. Such a duty is the gravest and most delicate which a court can be called upon to discharge. A statute will not be declared void for unconstitutionality unless in a clear case after the fullest opportunity for consideration of the questions involved: Henderson v. Robinson, 76-603.

A court can only adjudge a law invalid or unconstitutional in a case where a party is to be deprived of his rights in consequence of the invalidity of the law: State v. Mosher, 78-321.

The court will uphold a statute as constitutional unless so plainly and palpably in conflict with the constitution as to leave no doubt or hesitation in the judicial mind as to its invalidity: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82-312.

It is the duty of the court to give a statute such construction, if possible, as will maintain it rather than one which will render it unconstitutional: Santo v. State, 2-165, 208; State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280; Duncombe v. Prindle, 12-1; Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21-221.

The supreme court will not consider constitutional questions unless it is necessary for the disposition of the case; Bond v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 67-712.

The court will not decide the constitutionality of a statute unless it be necessarily involved in a case which cannot be disposed of without such decision. If there is any other point upon which the case can be decided, the constitutionality of the statute will not be passed upon. Parties cannot, by waiving other questions, form an agreed case upon which the courts will decide the constitutional question: Dubuque & D. R. Co. v. Diehl, 64-635.

Where a party assails the constitutionality of a statute and goes into the supreme court as appellant, that court will scrutinize the record with considerable strictness to see whether the determination of the constitutional question is necessary to the decision of the case: State ex rel. v. Rosencrans, 65-382.

Appellate courts will not decide questions of constitutional law, unless absolutely necessary, when the bench is not full, or when all the judges cannot assist in the determination: McClure v. Owens, 21-133.

A statute should not be supported unless its constitutionality is so obvious as to admit of no doubt: Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11-482.

A court should declare an act of the legislature void only when it violates the constitution so clearly, palpably and plainly as to leave no doubt or hesitation in their minds: Morrison v. Springer, 15-304.

It is an elementary principle in determining the constitutionality of a statute that any reasonable doubt must be solved in favor of the legislative action, and the act sustained: Gates v. Brooks, 59-510.

The authority and power of the court to annul an act of the legislature in conflict with the fundamental law is universally acknowledged, but this authority should be exercised only when the statute is clearly, palpably, plainly and beyond reasonable doubt in conflict with the constitution: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

It is fundamental that a statute should not be declared unconstitutional unless it is clearly so: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67-199.

The court is not authorized to pass upon the justice or expediency of a statute. Expediency and public policy and state necessity are not within its domain. Therefore the court has no authority to annul an act of the legislature as unconstitutional unless it is found to be in clear, plain and palpable conflict with the constitution. Ibid.

Where the legislature had passed an act appropriating a sum of money to aid a private corporation in testing the validity of the barbed wire patents, held, that the courts had no jurisdiction to inquire into the question whether such an appropriation was wise or not: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64-275.

Under the provision of the constitution that a special statute should not be passed in cases where a general law could be made applicable, held, that the legislature is not the sole judge of whether a general law can be made applicable, but that the special law might be declared unconstitutional for the reason that a general law applicable to the subject might be framed: Ex parte Pritz, 9-30.

Where the statute allows an appeal from the action of the board of supervisors in establishing a road, a court in determining such appeal may pass upon the constitutionality of the act under which the road is laid out: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

Construction of the constitution: To arrive at the meaning of words used in a section of the constitution, sections preceding and following it, having reference to the same subject-matter, must be read and considered, unless the words to be construed have such a clear and express meaning that there can be but one conclusion as to what was meant: Allen v. Clayton, 63-11.

Where, after considering previous and subsequent sections relating to the same matter, there is any doubt as to the meaning of the language used, then the court may consider, first, the evil intended to be remedied; second, the debates on the subject in the convention which framed the constitution; third, the contemporaneous legislative construction of the constitution; and fourth, the practical construction adopted by the people: Ibid.

Effect of unconstitutionality: Where money is paid under mistake of law as to the unconstitutionality of a statute, there being no charge of fraud, duress, deceit or mistake of fact, it cannot be recovered back: Kraft v. Keokuk, 14-86.

So held where a license fee for the permission to sell intoxicating liquors had been paid to a city in pursuance of a provision of a statute which, after the expiration of the time for which the license was granted and the enjoyment of the privilege by the person paying the tax, was declared unconstitutional: Ibid.

Unconstitutionality of part: Statutes which are partly in conflict with the constitution will be held void no further than as to those parts which are unconstitutional. Provisions which are within the legislative authority will be enforced. The same rule applies in case of the ordinance of a city. But if the parts of the statute or ordinance be necessarily connected and dependent, the whole must fail with the void part: Keokuk v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-196; Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S., 80.

An act void in part as unconstitutional is not necessarily void in toto. If sufficient remain to effect its object without the aid of the invalid portion, the latter only shall be rejected and the former shall stand: Santo v. State, 2-165, 205.

Therefore, held, that the prohibitory act of 1855, one section of which provided that it should take effect from a certain date in case it was adopted by a popular vote, became a law although the provision for such submission was unconstitutional: Ibid.

Where an act was in three sections, the subject-matter of the first and third being properly embraced in the title, held, that these portions were constitutional, although the second section referred to a subject-matter not embraced in the title: Henkle v. Keota, 68-334.

When one section of a statute is void and others valid, and it evidently appears that one section is the compensation or inducement for the other, and the connection between them is such as to warrant the belief that the valid part would not have been passed alone, then the whole should be held void. But, in a particular case, held, that one section was not an inducement to, but was entirely distinct and separate from, the other portion of the act, and that the balance of the act was valid although that one section was unconstitutional: Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47-196.

Where a portion of a statute is unconstitutional, and that portion affects the validity of the entire statute, it must all fall: Geebrick v. State, 5-491.

Where a city ordinance provided that an offense should be punished to a greater extent than the city had authority to inflict punishment, held, that a conviction thereunder would authorize the infliction of punishment up to the limit of the authority of the city: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47-597.

Decisions of other courts as authority: In questions arising upon the construction of the laws and constitution of this state, the supreme court of the United States is not the final arbiter, but it is required to look to the courts of this state for the rules of construction of its laws and constitution: McClure v. Owen, 26-243.

The construction given to the constitution of a foreign state by the court of last resort of such state will be regarded as authority by the courts of this state: Brown v. Phillipps, 16-210.

Superior and inferior courts: An inferior court is one from which an appeal lies to a superior court, and over which the latter has a supervisory power and control. Courts may be organized not inferior to the district, provided they be inferior to the supreme court: Hetherington v. Bissell, 10-145.

A statute for the organization of a city court possessing in some respects a co-ordinate jurisdiction with the district court, held not unconstitutional under such provision: Davis v. Woolnough, 9-104.

In general, with reference to this section, see Laird v. Dickerson, 40-665; Iowa Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112, 123.

Supreme court. SEC. 2. The supreme court shall consist of three judges, two of whom shall constitute a quorum to hold court.

As to the number of judges, see statutory provisions.

Judges elected. SEC. 3. The judges of the supreme court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the state, and shall hold their court at such time and place as the general assembly may prescribe. The judges of the supreme court so elected, shall be classified so that one judge shall go out of office every two years; and the judge holding the shortest term of office under such classification, shall be chief justice of the court during his term, and so on in rotation. After the expiration of their terms of office, under such classification, the term of each judge of the supreme court shall be six years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified. The judges of the supreme court shall be ineligible to any other office in the state, during the term for which they shall have been elected.

Jurisdiction. SEC. 4. The supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction only in cases in chancery, and shall constitute a court for the correction of errors at law, under such restrictions as the general assembly may by law prescribe; and shall have power to issue all writs and process necessary to secure justice to parties, and exercise a supervisory control over all inferior judicial tribunals throughout the state.

Law and Equity: A marked distinction is made between law and equity, and the two jurisdictions should be kept distinct and not confounded: Cooper v. Armstrong, 3 G. Gr., 120.

Appeals: The provision of statute prohibiting appeals in cases where the amount in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars, unless the judge shall certify the question on which the decision of the supreme court is desired, is not unconstitutional as taking away the right of appeal and trial de novo in equity cases as provided by this section. Such statutory provision is a mere restriction or regulation upon the right of trial de novo: Andrews v. Burdick, 62–714.

It is only in equity cases wherein issues of fact are joined and evidence taken upon those issues, that the supreme court can try the case anew. In all other cases appeals are allowed for the correction of errors at law only, whether the case be at law or in equity, and in order that errors at law may be considered, exception to the action of the lower court must have been taken and assignment of error thereon must be made. Therefore in an equity case rulings upon demurrer can be reviewed only upon exceptions and assignment of errors. Exchange Bank v. Pottorfe, 65 N. W., 312.

Errors at law: The provision dispensing with the necessity of a motion for new trial to secure review of actions at law is not in conflict with this provision. Previous to that statute the ruling of the lower court on a motion to set aside the verdict as contrary to the evidence was reviewed as a matter of law, and the statute simply acts as a standing motion for new trial: Coffin v. City Council, 26–515.

District court and judge. SEC. 5. The district court shall consist of a single judge, who shall be elected by the qualified electors of the district in which he resides. The judge of the district court shall hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified; and shall be ineligible to any other office, except that of judge of the supreme court, during the term for which he was elected.

This section does not prevent a judge from holding court in another district than his own, by exchange, under statutory provisions: State v. Stingley, 10–488.

Since the amendment of the constitution with reference to the judicial districts (art. 5, § 10), and the statutory provisions increasing the number of judges, more than one judge may properly hold the district court in a county at the same time: State v. Emmons, 72–265.

When a judge is authorized by statute to perform a judicial act in vacation, his act, when done, has the force and effect of an act done by the court: McLane v. Granger, 74–152.

Jurisdiction. SEC. 6. The district court shall be a court of law and equity, which shall be distinct and separate jurisdictions, and have jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters arising in their respective districts, in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

The district court is here invested with all the powers of a court of law, and those of a court of equity, and the distinctions between the two jurisdictions is recognized. This distinction the legislature cannot take away: Claussen v. Lafrenz, 4 G. Gr., 224.

In this state the distinction between law and equity jurisdiction is perpetuated by this constitutional provision and error in the form of action adopted will not cause an abatement of the action but the cause may be transferred to the proper docket: United States Bank v. Lyon County, 48 Fed., 632.

Held, that in a proceeding in equity the court possessed no jurisdiction to render in favor of the party such judgment as he might show himself entitled to at law: Roberts v. Taliaferro, 7–110.

The jurisdiction of the district court is not limited by the provisions giving justices jurisdiction in cases where the amount does not exceed one hundred dollars: Nelson v.

Gray, 2 G. Gr., 397; Hutton v. Drebilbis, 2 G. Gr., 593.

The jurisdiction of the district court, which is a superior court of general original jurisdiction, can only be taken away by express words or irresistible implication. Therefore, held, that Rev., § 2395, which prohibited the bringing of action in that court on claims against an estate for a mere money demand, except with the approbation of the county court, was not intended to take away the jurisdiction of that court, but merely as a restraint on the plaintiff: Sterritt v. Robinson, 17–61; and that the failure on the part of the plaintiff to obtain such leave must be set up as a defense, and could not be made the ground of a collateral attack on the judgment: Cooley v. Smith, 17–90.

Further, as to the jurisdiction of district courts, see Laird v. Dickerson, 40–665, 669.

Conservators of the peace. SEC. 7. The judges of the supreme and district courts shall be conservators of the peace throughout the state.

Style of process. SEC. 8. The style of all process shall be "The State of Iowa," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in the name and by the authority of the same.

An original notice is not "process" within the meaning of this section: Nichols v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 4 G. Gr., 42.

"Process" defined. "Prosecutions," as here used, are such criminal prosecutions as shall be instituted and prosecuted before the tribunals provided for in this article, under the statutes of the state, and do not include prosecutions for violations of city ordinances. The latter may be in the name of the city: Davenport v. Bird, 34–524.

The expressions "State of Iowa" and "The State of Iowa" are essentially the same: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

An indictment in which the presentment is "in behalf of the state of Iowa" is good although the expression "In the name and by the authority of the state of Iowa" is a more appropriate style. It need not be expressed in each proceeding in the conduct of a prosecution that it is made "in the name and by the authority," etc.: Wrocklege v. State, 1–167.

A prosecution to recover a fine should be in the name of the state, and not in the name of the treasurer of the county to which the fine would go when recovered: Rogers v. Alexander, 2 G. Gr., 443.

Salaries. SEC. 9. The salary of each judge of the supreme court shall be two thousand dollars per annum; and that of each district judge one thousand six hundred dollars per annum, until the year eighteen hundred and sixty; after which time they shall severally receive such compensation as the general assembly may, by law, prescribe; which compensation shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected.

Judicial districts. SEC. 10. The state shall be divided into eleven judicial districts; and after the year eighteen hundred and sixty, the general assembly may reorganize the judicial districts, and increase or diminish the number of districts, or the number of judges of the said court, and may increase the number of judges of the supreme court; but such increase or diminution shall not be more than one district, or one judge of either court, at any one session; and no reorganization of the districts, or diminution of the judges, shall have the effect of removing a judge from office. Such reorganization of the districts, or any change in the boundaries thereof, or any increase or diminution of the number of judges, shall take place every four years thereafter, if necessary, and at no other time.

[AMENDMENT.] At any regular session of the general assembly, the state may be divided into the necessary judicial districts for district court purposes, or the said districts may be reorganized and the number of the districts and the judges of said courts increased or diminished; but no reorganization of the districts or diminution of the judges shall have the effect of removing a judge from office.

[By proper legislative action (19 G. A., Joint Res. No. 12, and 20 G. A., Joint Res. No. 13) the foregoing was submitted to the electors at the general election in 1884 as a proposed amendment to the constitution, and was by them adopted.]

Since the adoption of this amendment the legislature has power to provide for the election of more than one judge in a district, and to authorize two or more judges to hold court in the same county at the same time: State v. Emmons, 72–265.

When chosen. SEC. 11. The judges of the supreme and district courts shall be chosen at the general election; and the term of office of each judge shall commence on the first day of January next after his election.

Attorney-general. SEC. 12. The general assembly shall provide, by law, for the election of an attorney-general by the people, whose term of office shall be two years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.

County attorney. SEC. 13. The qualified electors of each county shall, at the general election in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-six, and every two years thereafter elect a county attorney, who shall be a resident of the county for which he is elected, and shall hold his office for two years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.

[By proper legislative action (19 G. A., Joint Res. No. 12, and 20 G. A., Joint Res. No. 13) a proposition to substitute the foregoing for the original section was submitted to the electors at the general election in 1884, and by them adopted. The original section was as follows:

SEC. 13. The qualified electors of each judicial district shall, at the time of the election of district judge, elect a district attorney, who shall be a resident of the district for which he is elected, and who shall hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.]

Carrying into effect. SEC. 14. It shall be the duty of the general assembly to provide for the carrying into effect of this article, and to provide for a general system of practice in all the courts of this state.

The grand jury. [SEC. 15.] The grand jury may consist of any number of members not less than five, nor more than fifteen, as the general assembly may by law provide, or the general assembly may provide for holding persons to answer for any criminal offense without the intervention of the grand jury.

[By proper legislative action (19 G. A., Joint Res. No. 12, and 20 G. A., Joint Res. No. 13) the foregoing was submitted to the electors at the general election in 1884 as a proposed amendment to the constitution, and was by them adopted.]

The provision that when the grand jury consists of five members an indictment may be found upon the concurrence of four jurors is not in conflict with the constitution on the ground that it authorizes an indictment to be found by less than the smallest number of which the grand jury can be composed: State v. Salts, 77–193.

The fact that by mistake as to the population of the county the grand jury consists of five instead of seven grand jurors does not render the indictment void and deprive the court of jurisdiction of the case. No objection being made to the indictment until after judgment upon a plea of guilty, the defendant is not entitled to relief: State v. Belvel, 89–405.

The defect in the grand jury in such case is one which may be waived by the defendant: Ibid.

ARTICLE 6.—MILITIA.

Who constitute. SECTION 1. The militia of this state shall be composed of all able-bodied male citizens, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, except such as are or may hereafter be exempt by the laws of the United States, or of this state; and shall be armed, equipped, and trained, as the general assembly may provide by law.

[By proper legislative action a proposed amendment striking the word "white" from this section, as it originally stood, was submitted to the electors at the general election in 1868 and adopted.]

Exemption. SEC. 2. No person or persons conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms shall be compelled to do military duty in time of peace: provided that such person or persons shall pay an equivalent for such exemption in the same manner as other citizens.

Officers. SEC. 3. All commissioned officers of the militia (staff officers excepted) shall be elected by the persons liable to perform military duty, and shall be commissioned by the governor.

ARTICLE 7.—STATE DEBTS.

Credit not to be loaned. SECTION 1. The credit of the state shall not, in any manner, be given or loaned to, or in aid of, any individual, association, or corporation; and the state shall never assume, or become responsible for the debts or liabilities of any individual, association, or corporation, unless incurred in time of war for the benefit of the state.

Limitation. SEC. 2. The state may contract debts to supply casual deficits or failures in revenues; or to meet expenses not otherwise provided for; but the aggregate amount of such debts, direct and contingent, whether contracted by virtue of one or more acts of the general assembly, or at different periods of time, shall never exceed the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; and the money arising from the creation of such debts shall be applied to the purpose for which it was obtained, or to repay the debts so contracted, and to no other purpose whatever.

In determining the state indebtedness the indebtedness of the counties of the state is not to be considered: Dubuque County v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 4 G. Gr., 1.

Losses to school funds. SEC. 3. All losses to the permanent school, or university fund of this state, which shall have been occasioned by the defalcation, mismanagement, or fraud of the agents or officers controlling and managing the same, shall be audited by the proper authorities of the state. The amount so audited shall be a permanent funded debt against the state, in favor of the respective fund sustaining the loss, upon which not less than six per cent. annual interest shall be paid. The amount of liability so created shall not be counted as a part of the indebtedness authorized by the second section of this article.

The school fund belongs to the state, and it has solemnly pledged itself to maintain the same inviolate: Des Moines County v. Harker, 34–84.

War debts. SEC. 4. In addition to the above limited power to contract debts, the state may contract debts to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, or defend the state in war; but the money arising from the debts so contracted shall be applied to the purpose for which it was raised, or to repay such debts, and to no other purpose whatever.

Question of incurring debt submitted. SEC. 5. Except the debts hereinbefore specified in this article, no debt shall be hereafter contracted by, or on behalf of this state, unless such debt shall be authorized by some law for some single work or object, to be distinctly specified therein; and such law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax, sufficient to pay the interest on such debt, as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt, within twenty years from the time of the contracting thereof; but no such law shall take effect until at a general election it shall have been submitted to the people, and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all money raised by authority of such law, shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt created thereby; and such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each county, if one is published therein, throughout the state, for three months preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people.

Legislature may repeal. SEC. 6. The legislature may, at any time, after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same; and may at any time forbid the contracting of any further debt, or liability, under such law; but the tax imposed by such law, in proportion to the debt or liability which may have been contracted in pursuance thereof, shall remain in force and be irrepealable, and be annually collected, until the principal and interest are fully paid.

Tax imposed distinctly stated. SEC. 7. Every law which imposes, continues, or revives a tax, shall distinctly state the tax, and the object to which it is to be applied; and it shall not be sufficient to refer to any other law to fix such tax or object.

ARTICLE 8.—CORPORATIONS.

How created. SECTION 1. No corporation shall be created by special laws; but the general assembly shall provide by general laws, for the organization of all corporations hereafter to be created, except as hereinafter provided.

It was not intended hereby to repeal city charters already granted: Warren v. Henly, 31–31.

Local or special laws for incorporation of cities and towns prohibited, see art. 3, § 30.

The board of medical examiners is not a corporation within the provisions of this article: Iowa Eclectic Medical College v. Schrader, 87–659.

Property taxable. SEC. 2. The property of all corporations for pecuniary profit shall be subject to taxation the same as that of individuals.

Taxation of corporations: This section requires the legislature to provide for the taxation of such property the same as private property, and an act releasing such property from city taxes is void: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633, 642; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39–56. And see Iowa R. Land Co. v. Woodbury County, 39–172.

A statute relating to the taxation of express and telegraph companies held not in violation of this provision, for the reason that it made such property liable to taxation in the same manner and to the same extent when held by individuals as when held by a body corporate: United States Ex. Co. v. Ellyson, 28–370.

Taxation of shares in an incorporated company, which may have some value in addition to the interest in the capital stock by reason of the good-will, etc., of the business of the corporation, does not result in such inequality of taxation between the shareholders in the corporation and individuals holding property similarly employed as to make such taxation unequal: Davenport Nat. Bank v. Board of Equalization, 64–140.

If the property of a banking corporation is subject to the same rate of taxation as other property it cannot be a ground of complaint that the method of assessment is different, provided it is uniform as to that class of property: Primghar State Bank v. Rerick, 64 N. W., 801.

Railroad property: So held, also, under 14 G. A., ch. 26, regulating the taxation of railroad property: Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47–196.

No constitutional rights are infringed by providing a different method for assessing railroad property than that provided for assessing property of the same nature belonging to other owners: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67–199.

As to taxation of railroad property in general, see Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 16–348; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Dubuque, 17–120.

Taxation of water-works: The fact that a company operating water-works is exempted from taxation in part payment for water furnished the city does not render the provision a violation of the constitutional requirement as to taxation of corporate property: Grant v. Davenport, 36–396.

State not to be a stockholder. SEC. 3. The state shall not become a stockholder in any corporation, nor shall it assume or pay the debt or liability of any corporation, unless incurred in time of war for the benefit of the state.

The provision of this section is not violated by authorizing aid to be voted by counties of the state towards the construction of a railway: Dubuque County v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 4 G. Gr., 1.

An act making an appropriation to a corporation to assist it in testing the validity of the barb wire patents, held not unconstitutional under the same provision: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64–275.

Municipal corporation. SEC. 4. No political or municipal corporation shall become a stockholder in any banking corporation, directly or indirectly.

Act creating banking associations. SEC. 5. No act of the general assembly, authorizing or creating corporations or associations with banking powers, nor amendments thereto, shall take effect, or in any manner be in force, until the same shall have been submitted, separately, to the people, at a general or special election, as provided by law, to be held not less than three months after the passage of the act, and shall have been approved by a majority of all the electors voting for and against it at such election.

This restriction upon legislative authority to pass or amend acts authorizing or creating corporations or associations with banking powers is not intended to forbid the repeal by the legislature of acts organizing banks, it being required, however, by § 12 of this article, that such repeal be by a two-thirds vote: Morseman v. Younkin, 27-350.

This section has reference only to banks of issue: State ex rel v. Union Stock Yards State Bank, 70 N. W., 752.

State bank. SEC. 6. Subject to the provisions of the foregoing section, the general assembly may also provide for the establishment of a state bank with branches.

Special basis. SEC. 7. If a state bank be established, it shall be founded on an actual specie basis, and the branches shall be mutually responsible for each other's liabilities upon all notes, bills and other issues intended for circulation as money.

General banking law. SEC. 8. If a general banking law shall be enacted, it shall provide for the registry and countersigning, by an officer of state, of all bills, or paper credit designed to circulate as money, and require security to the full amount thereof, to be deposited with the state treasurer, in United States stocks, or in interest-paying stocks of states in good credit and standing, to be rated at ten per cent. below their average value in the city of New York, for the thirty days next preceding their deposit; and in case of a depreciation of any portion of such stocks, to the amount of ten per cent. on the dollar, the bank or banks owning said stock shall be required to make up said deficiency by depositing additional stocks; and said law shall also provide for the recording of the names of all stockholders in such corporations, the amount of stock held by each, the time of any transfer, and to whom.

Stockholders responsible. SEC. 9. Every stockholder in a banking corporation or institution shall be individually responsible and liable to its creditors, over and above the amount of stock by him or her held, to an amount equal to his or her respective shares so held, for all its liabilities accruing while he or she remains such stockholder.

The provision of this section rendering stockholders in a banking corporation or institution individually liable to an amount equal to their respective shares, applies only to banks of issue and not to banks merely of discount and deposit: Allen v. Clayton, 63-11.

The liability of the stockholder is not limited to a proportional sum, nor is it affected by any fraud or wrong of the officers of the bank or a receiver, and he cannot delay recovery in order to secure contribution: Stewart v. Lay, 45-604.

Bill-holders preferred. SEC. 10. In case of the insolvency of any banking institution, the bill-holders shall have a preference over its other creditors.

Suspension of specie payments. SEC. 11. The suspension of specie payments by banking institutions shall never be permitted or sanctioned.

Amendment or repeal of charters; exclusive privileges. SEC. 12. Subject to the provisions of this article, the general assembly shall have power to amend or repeal all laws for the organization or creation of corporations, or granting of special or exclusive privileges or immunities, by a vote of two-thirds of each branch of the general assembly; and no exclusive privileges, except as in this article provided, shall ever be granted.

The statutory provisions as to liability of railroads are not unconstitutional as in conflict with this section: Bucklew v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-603; Central Trust Co. v. Sloan, 65-655.

This section has reference exclusively to corporations for pecuniary purposes, and does not authorize the amendment or repeal of laws for the organization or creation of municipal corporations, in violation of art. 3, § 30: Ex parte Pritz, 9-30.

Even though the power to regulate corporate franchises is here reserved to the legislature yet it would seem that such regulations must be reasonable or they will be invalid: Des Moines v. Des Moines Water Works Co., 64 N. W., 269.

ARTICLE 9.—EDUCATION AND SCHOOL LANDS.

1.—Education.

Board of education. SECTION 1. The educational interest of the state, including common schools and other educational institutions, shall be under the management of a board of education, which shall consist of the lieutenant-governor, who shall be the presiding officer of the board, and have the casting vote in case of a tie, and one member to be elected from each judicial district in the state.

Who eligible. SEC. 2. No person shall be eligible as a member of said board who shall not have attained the age of twenty-five years, and shall have been one year a citizen of the state.

How elected. SEC. 3. One member of said board shall be chosen by the qualified electors of each district, and shall hold the office for the term of four years, and until his successor is elected and qualified. After the first election under this constitution, the board shall be divided, as nearly as practicable, into two equal classes, and the seats of the first class shall be vacated after the expiration of two years; and one-half of the board shall be chosen every two years thereafter.

First session. SEC. 4. The first session of the board of education shall be held at the seat of government, on the first Monday of December, after their election; after which the general assembly may fix the time and place of meeting.

Limited. SEC. 5. The session of the board shall be limited to twenty days, and but one session shall be held in any one year, except upon extraordinary occasions, when, upon the recommendation of two-thirds of the board, the governor may order a special session.

Secretary. SEC. 6. The board of education shall appoint a secretary, who shall be the executive officer of the board, and perform such duties as may be imposed upon him by the board, and the laws of the state. They shall keep a journal of their proceedings, which shall be published and distributed in the same manner as the journals of the general assembly.

Rules and regulations. SEC. 7. All rules and regulations made by the board shall be published and distributed to the several counties, townships, and school districts, as may be provided for by the board, and when so made, published, and distributed, they shall have the force and effect of law.

Power to make. SEC. 8. The board of education shall have full power and authority to legislate and make all needful rules and regulations in relation to common schools, and other educational institutions, that are instituted, to receive aid from the school or university fund of this state; but all acts, rules, and regulations of said board may be altered, amended, or repealed by the general assembly; and when so altered, amended, or repealed, they shall not be re-enacted by the board of education.

The legislature has thus full power to make needful regulations, and this power has been given to district boards; and in the absence of abuse of such power being shown, the rules of such boards will not be held unconstitutional (per Cole, J.): Burdick v. Babcock, 31–562, 571.

Under this section, held, that a statute providing a full system of public instruction for the state was unconstitutional, on the ground that the legislature had no authority to pass such an act, the powers in reference to such matters being committed to the board of education: District T'p v. Dubuque, 7–262; High School v. Clayton County, 9–175.

High schools are deemed a part of the common school system of the state, though they are not to derive any support or assistance from the school fund: High School v. Clayton County, 9–175.

Under the provisions of this section, authorizing an amendment by the legislature of regulations of the board of education, held, that an alteration of an act of the board so as to extend and apply its provisions to unincorporated as well as to incorporated cities and towns was an amendment which the legislature might properly make: Fort Dodge City School Dist. v. District T'p, 15–434.

Governor ex officio a member. SEC. 9. The governor of the state shall be, ex officio, a member of said board.

Expenses. SEC. 10. The board shall have no power to levy taxes, or make appropriations of money. Their contingent expenses shall be provided for by the general assembly.

State university. SEC. 11. The state university shall be established at one place without branches at any other place, and the university fund shall be applied to that institution, and no other.

Common schools. SEC. 12. The board of education shall provide for the education of all the youths of the state, through a system of common schools, and such schools shall be organized and kept in each school district at least three months in each year. Any district failing, for two consecutive years, to organize and keep up a school, as aforesaid, may be deprived of their portion of the school fund.

Held, that the expression "all youths" prohibits any distinction being made between white and colored children: Clark v. Board of Directors, etc., 24-266; Smith v. Directors, 40-518; Dove v. Independent School Dist., 41-689.

Compensation. SEC. 13. The members of the board of education shall each receive the same per diem during the term of their session, and mileage going to and returning therefrom, as members of the general assembly.

Quorum; style of acts. SEC. 14. A majority of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; but no rule, regulation, or law, for the government of common schools or other educational institutions shall pass without the concurrence of a majority of all the members of the board, which shall be expressed by the yeas and nays on the final passage. The style of all acts of the board shall be, "Be it enacted by the board of education of the state of Iowa."

Board may be abolished. SEC. 15. At any time after the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, the general assembly shall have power to abolish or reorganize said board of education, and provide for the educational interest of the state in any other manner that to them shall seem best and proper.

The board of education was abolished by 10 G. A., ch. 52, § 1.

2.—School Funds and School Lands.

Under control of general assembly. SECTION 1. The educational and school fund and lands, shall be under the control and management of the general assembly of this state.

Permanent fund. SEC. 2. The university lands, and the proceeds thereof, and all moneys belonging to said fund shall be a permanent fund for the sole use of the state university. The interest arising from the same shall be annually appropriated for the support and benefit of said university.

Lands appropriated. SEC. 3. The general assembly shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of intellectual, scientific, moral, and agricultural improvement. The proceeds of all lands that have been, or hereafter may be, granted by the United States to this state, for the support of schools, which may have been or shall hereafter be sold, or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new states, under an act of congress, distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several states of the Union, approved in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heir, and also such per cent. as has been or may hereafter be granted by congress, on the sale of lands in this state, shall be, and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all rents of the unsold lands, and such other means as the general assembly may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the state.

See notes to § 7, infra.

Fines, etc., how appropriated. SEC. 4. The money which may have been or shall be paid by persons as an equivalent from exemption from military duty, and the clear proceeds of all fines collected in the several counties for any breach of the penal laws, shall be exclusively applied in the several counties in which such money is paid, or fine collected, among the several school districts of said counties, in proportion to the number of youths subject to enumeration in such districts, to the support of common schools, or the establishment of libraries, as the board of education shall from time to time provide.

There are statutory provisions on this subject.

It is not contemplated that the fees of the prosecuting attorney in enforcing the collection of the fines, etc., due to the school fund shall be deducted from the whole amount collected. The term "clear proceeds" evidently refers to a case of forfeiture of property or payment of funds in orders or warrants: Woodward v. Gregg, 3 G. Gr., 287.

The double damages authorized by statute to be recovered against railroad companies is not a fine such as is contemplated in this section, but is simply a measure of damages: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

Proceeds of lands. SEC. 5. The general assembly shall take measures for the protection, improvement, or other disposition of such lands as have been, or may hereafter be reserved, or granted by the United States, or any person or persons to this state, for the use of the university, and the funds accruing from the rents or sale of such lands, or from any other source for the purpose aforesaid, shall be, and remain, a permanent fund, the interest of which shall be applied to the support of said university, for the promotion of literature, the arts and sciences, as may be authorized by the terms of such grant. And it shall be the duty of the general assembly, as soon as may be, to provide effectual means for the improvement and permanent security of the funds of said university.

Agents of school funds. SEC. 6. The financial agents of the school funds shall be the same that, by law, receive and control the state and county revenue, for other civil purposes, under such regulations as may be provided by law.

Distribution. SEC. 7. The money subject to the support and maintenance of common schools shall be distributed to the districts in proportion to the number of youths, between the ages of five and twenty-one years, in such manner as may be provided by the general assembly.

An act as to distribution of the school fund, held unconstitutional as in conflict with this section: District T'p v. County Judge, 13-250.

ARTICLE 10.—AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

How proposed; submission. SECTION 1. Any amendment or amendments to this constitution may be proposed in either house of the general assembly; and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two houses, such proposed amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election, and shall be published, as provided by law, for three months previous to the time of making such choice; and if, in the general assembly so next chosen as aforesaid, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each house, then it shall be the duty of the general assembly to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner, and at such time as the general assembly shall provide; and if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments by a majority of the electors qualified to vote for members of the general assembly, voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of the constitution of this state.

[For amendments, see art. 1, § 26; art. 2, §§ 1 and [7]; art. 3, §§ 4, 33, 34 and 35; art. 5, §§ 10, 13 and [17]; art. 6, § 1.]

It is the design and intention of this provision that the proposed amendment should be so entered upon the journals that it can be known from an examination of such journals what it is that has been agreed to by the houses of the general assembly; and such entry is the highest evidence of what the amendment is which is agreed to by each house. Therefore, where it appeared from the journal of the senate of one general assembly that the proposed amendment, as passed by it, was different from the same amendment as concurred in by the subsequent general assembly, and submitted to and voted upon by the people, held, that it was not legally adopted and did not become a part of the constitution, although the joint resolution of the general assembly first acting upon the amendment, which was signed by the presiding officers of the two houses and by the governor, and preserved in the office of the secretary of state, showed such amendment to be the same as that subsequently concurred in and submitted; also, held, that the recital in the joint resolution of the general assembly which submitted said amendment to vote of the people, that it had been agreed to by the previous general assembly, was not conclusive upon the court: Koehler v. Hill, 60-543.

The provisions as to the amendment of the constitution are not simply directory, and the legislative department is not the sole judge as to whether or not they have been complied with, but the courts have jurisdiction to inquire into the question whether these requirements have been observed, and if not to declare the amendment invalid: Ibid.

More than one. SEC. 2. If two or more amendments shall be submitted at the same time, they shall be submitted in such manner that the electors shall vote for or against each of such amendments separately.

Convention. SEC. 3. At the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and in each tenth year thereafter, and also at such times as the general assembly may, by law, provide, the question, "Shall there be a convention to revise the constitution, and amend the same?" shall be decided by the electors qualified to vote for members of the general assembly; and in case a majority of the electors so qualified, voting at such election for and against such proposition, shall decide in favor of a convention for such purpose, the general assembly, at its next session, shall provide by law for the election of delegates to such convention.

ARTICLE 11.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Jurisdiction of justice of the peace. SECTION 1. The jurisdiction of justices of the peace shall extend to all civil cases (except cases in chancery, and cases where the question of title to real estate may arise), where the amount in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars, and by the consent of parties may be extended to any amount not exceeding three hundred dollars.

The jurisdiction of justices in such cases is not exclusive, but concurrent with courts of record: Nelson v. Gray, 2 G. Gr., 397; Hutton v. Drebilbis, 2 G. Gr., 593.

Counties. SEC. 2. No new county shall be hereafter created containing less than four hundred and thirty-two square miles; nor shall the territory of any organized county be reduced below that area; except the county of Worth, and the counties west of it along the northern boundary of this state, may be organized without additional territory.

An act organizing the county of Crocker held unconstitutional under this section: Garfield v. Brayton, 33-16.

This section held not to prohibit the legislature from establishing a second county seat in a county already organized: Trimble v. State, 2 G. Gr., 404.

Indebtedness of political or municipal corporations. SEC. 3. No county, or other political or municipal corporation shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner, or for any purpose, to an amount in the aggregate, exceeding five per centum on the value of the taxable property within such county or corporation—to be ascertained by the last state and county tax lists, previous to the incurring of such indebtedness.

What indebtedness excessive: Outstanding warrants as well as bonds are to be taken into consideration in estimating the indebtedness. The constitutional inhibition applies to indebtedness incurred in any manner or for any purpose: Council Bluffs v. Stewart, 51-385.

It applies to indebtedness already due as well as that to become due: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396.

If the corporation has money in its treasury to meet its indebtedness, the issue of warrants to any amount, however great, over the constitutional limit, will not be a violation of such provisions: Dively v. Cedar Falls, 27–227.

Where by virtue of a compromise the city recived one sum of money, and issued its certificate for a smaller sum, held, that such warrant would not be deemed void as incurring an indebtedness in excess of the constitutional limitation: Hintrager v. Richter, 85–222.

The indebtedness here contemplated is different from an obligation to pay. A contract under which a certain sum within the constitutional limit was to be paid each year would be valid, although the entire amount of the obligation of the contract was greatly in excess of the constitutional limit: Ibid.

This section applies not only to a present indebtedness, but also to such a one as is payable on a contingency at some future time, or which depends on some contingency before a liability is created; but it must appear that such contingency is sure to take place, irrespective of any action taken or option exercised in the future. Therefore, held, that an ordinance of a city authorizing the erection of water-works by a private company, with the provision that the city might, at its option, purchase them in the future on certain terms, etc., was not the incurring of an indebtedness: Burlington Water Co. v. Woodward, 49–58.

A contract by a city with a water company for a supply of water for fire protection to be furnished from year to year does not create an indebtedness within this constitutional provision: Creston Waterworks Co. v. Creston, 70 N. W., 739.

Bonds issued in payment of valid judgment or bonds, not exceeding the constitutional limit when rendered or issued, will be valid, although at the time they are issued the limit of indebtedness has been reached. The issue of such bonds does not increase the indebtedness: Sioux City v. Weare, 59–95; Heins v. Lincoln, 71 N. W., 189; Thompson v. Independent Dist., 71 N. W. —.

Where a statute provided for a board of park commissioners authorizing them to levy a tax and issue bonds, held, that they had no authority to issue bonds which, in addition to the indebtedness of the city, would cause such indebtedness to exceed the constitutional limit: Orvis v. Board of Park Commissioners, 88–674.

The citizens and the corporation are not one and the same so that the indebtedness imposed upon citizens for such purposes is an indebtedness of the corporation. The property of a citizen may by reason of his being within the limits of several municipal corporations, as for instance, a county and city and school district, be subjected to indebtedness in the aggregate beyond the constitutional limitations: Tuttle v. Polk, 92–433.

A judgment against a municipal corporation is not a creation of indebtedness but only evidence of a pre-existing indebtedness and a corporation should plead the fact that the indebtedness is in excess of the constitutional limit. If this fact is not pleaded and made a ground of defense it cannot be urged as a defense in a mandamus proceeding to compel the levying of a tax to pay the judgment: Edmundson v. Independent School Dist., 67 N. W. 671; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Lyon County, 44 Fed., 329.

The issuance of new bonds, the proceeds of which are to be used in extinguishing existing bonds, is an increase of indebtedness, and if such increase is beyond the constitutional limit the bonds are invalid (reversing 42 Fed., 644): Doon Township v. Cummins, 142 U. S., 366.

The municipal corporation or its officers cannot render such bonds valid by ratification as by making payments of interest thereon: Ibid.

The constitutional limit does not relate to interest and coupons upon bonds legally issued, and although they may swell the total indebtedness to a sum in excess of the constitutional limit they will be valid: Durant v. Iowa County, Woolworth, 69.

Estoppel: Even though refunding bonds are sold for cash the purchaser can not rely upon the action of the officers in applying the money to the indebtedness, but if it has so applied the proceeds the refunding bonds although in excess of the constitutional limit will be valid. The purchaser is bound to take notice of the constitutional provision and also of the amount of the taxable property of the district: Shaw v. Independent School Dist., 62 Fed., 911.

Nor can the person rely upon the recitals in the bonds as an estoppel on the district. If it should appear that the bonds were in fact used to retire or refund a pre-existing enforceable indebtedness they might be valid even though they should exceed the limitation, but not if the indebtedness thus paid off was in itself in excess of the constitutional limit: Ibid.

Representations of a county agent as to the validity of the debt to be refunded will not estop the county: Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Lyon County, 44 Fed., 329.

The fact that the officers of the corporation permit the person holding the illegal indebtedness to obtain judgment therefor does not estop the corporation, and it may set up the defense in a mandamus proceeding wherein it is sought to compel the officers of the corporation to levy a tax for the payment of such judgment: Ibid.

Tax payers of a city do not, by failure to object to the contracting of an indebtedness in excess of the constitutional limit, estop themselves from insisting upon the invalidity of such indebtedness: McPherson v. Foster, 43–48.

Bona fide holder: Bonds issued in excess of the constitutional limit are void without regard to the good faith and want of notice of the holder: McPherson v. Foster, 43–48; Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44–122.

Where bonds were fraudulently issued ostensibly in payment of a judgment which was in fact satisfied and such bonds were in excess of the constitutional limit of indebtedness, held, that they were invalid even in the hands of an innocent purchaser: First Nat. Bk. v. District T'p, 86–330.

An order or warrant issued in excess of the constitutional limitation is void. Such order not being negotiable, a bona fide holder will acquire no rights thereunder: National State Bank v. Independent Dist., 39–490.

A party contracting with a city, whereby indebtness is created, must at his peril take notice of the financial standing and condition of the city, and whether the proposed indebtedness is in excess of the constitutional limit: French v. Burlington, 42–614.

A party who becomes the creditor of a municipal corporation must at his peril take notice of the fact that its indebtedness is in excess of the constitutional limitation: Kane v. Independent School Dist., 82–5.

A purchaser of bonds is chargeable with notice of the assessment of the municipal corporation, and that the amount of bonds issued, as shown by recitals on the bonds, constitutes an indebtedness in excess of the limit (affirming 25 Fed., 635: Nesbit v. Independent Dist., 144 U. S., 610.

Lien: The statute giving to holders of bonds issued in excess of the constitutional limit a lien for material furnished by them upon a building in which it should be used, held unconstitutional, in that it was sought thereby to render the corporation liable for such improvements beyond its constitutional limit of indebtedness: Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44–122.

A guaranty by a municipal corporation which is beyond the constitutional limit is void: Carter v. Dubuque, 35–416.

Portion invalid: If a part of the indebtedness is in excess of the constitutional limit, the portion within the limit will be valid and enforced, while the portion beyond the limit will be held void: McPherson v. Foster, 43–48.

Where, in such a case, bonds were issued bearing the same date and for portions of the same indebtedness, held, that the bonds would be considered valid for the pro rata proportion of the indebtedness not in excess of the constitutional limit: Ibid.

If the refunding bonds are in excess of the valid indebtedness of the county they will not be deemed issued in the order of their number, but the equities of the respective holders may be adjusted in a proper action. The rights of the holders cannot be adjusted in an action at law: Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Lyon County, 44 Fed., 329.

Bonds issued in excess of the constitutional limit are to be deemed void in toto and not merely to the extent by which they exceed the limit of indebtedness: Anderson v. Orient Fire Ins. Co., 88–579.

To defeat recovery on bonds which are issued in excess of the constitutional limit it is not necessary to show that all the bonds in controversy are void. If it is claimed that a part of them are valid, for instance because the proceeds were applied to a legal debt, the burden of showing that fact is upon the holder of the bonds: Holliday v. Hildebrandt, 66 N. W., 89; Independent Dist. v. Society for Savings, 67 N. W., 370.

Purchasers of municipal bonds are bound at their peril to take notice of the constitutional limit upon the power of such corporations to become indebted and of such facts as the authorized official assessments disclose touching the valuation of all taxable property within the limits of the corporation: Holliday v. Hildebrandt, 66 N. W., 89.

Judgment bonds: Bonds issued in payment of a judgment recovered on debts contracted in excess of the constitutional limit are valid in the hands of innocent holders: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45–168; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 52–26.

Restraining tax: It is not ground for restraining the collection of a tax that, when collected, it will be applied to an unconstitutional indebtedness: Strohm v. Iowa City, 47–42.

By contract: In an action against a city for damages by reason of negligence in the care of its streets, it is no defense that the city is already indebted beyond the constitutional limit: Bartle v. Des Moines, 38–414; Rice v. Des Moines, 40–638; Thomas v. Burlington, 69–140.

An indebtedness, strictly speaking, cannot be created except by contract, either express or implied, and the indebtedness prohibited by the constitution is such as is created by the voluntary action of both the debtor and creditor: Thomas v. Burlington, 69–140.

So where the city has unlawfully collected taxes, an action to recover back taxes thus unlawfully collected will not be defeated by reason of the indebtedness of the city beyond the constitutional limit: Ibid.

Current revenues: A city has a right to obtain and apply its current revenues to the payment of its ordinary and current expenses, even as against a judgment creditor; and where the contract made by the municipal corporation pertains to its ordinary expenses and is, together with other like expenses, within the limit of its current revenues, and such special taxes as it may legally and in good faith intend to levy therefor, such contract does not constitute the "incurring of indebtedness" within the meaning of the constitutional provision: Grant v. Davenport, 36–396.

A municipal corporation may assume an obligation to pay money without incurring a debt in a constitutional sense, if payment can be and is to be made from the current revenues of the corporation: Tuttle v. Polk, 92–433.

This constitutional limitation is applicable to the expenses of necessary as well as convenient improvement of the streets. It matters not for what purpose the indebtedness is incurred; it is prohibited for any purpose in excess of the limit, unless it can be reasonably shown that it can be liquidated and paid from the ordinary current revenues of the city: French v. Burlington, 42–614.

In ascertaining whether the contemplated indebtedness is within the current revenue, such revenue as is absolutely certain to be received from the collection of taxes may be anticipated to at least some extent, and an indebtedness accordingly contracted: Ibid.

In ascertaining the whole resources of a city, taxes levied should be regarded as available assets up to the time of the annual tax sale, but after that period the burden is on the city to show that such taxes have any value which can be counted as available for the purpose of meeting a proposed indebtedness: Ibid.

Uncollected taxes: In ascertaining the entire indebtedness with reference to the constitutional limitation, uncollected taxes and the levy for the current year will not be taken into account as reducing such indebtedness (explaining French v. Burlington, 42–614): Council Bluffs v. Stewart, 51–385.

The tax lists are not made until after the equalization in June, and are not completed until after the levy of taxes in September. And where a tax was voted in May, which was in excess of the five per cent. limit as based upon the tax list of the previous year, held, that it was not proper to consider the assessor's lists of the current year as showing that such tax was not in excess of the constitutional limit: Wilkinson v. Van Orman, 70–230.

Where the question was whether, at the time certain orders were given by the secretary of a school district upon the treasury, its indebtedness exceeded its constitutional limit, it appeared that certain lands included in the tax list were not valued therein, and that the taxes thereon were marked paid, held, that evidence as to the value of such lands was admissible, subject to the right of defendant to show the rate per cent. of the taxes and the amount paid, and thus ascertain the assessed value: Wormley v. District T'p, 45–666.

What corporations: This constitutional provision as to the limit of indebtedness is applicable to school districts: Winspear v. District T'p, 37–542; Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44–122.

Also to cities organized under special charter prior to the constitution: Scott v. Davenport, 34–208; Council Bluffs v. Stewart, 51–385.

Previous contracts: The adoption of the constitutional provision as to limit of indebtedness did not impair any contract previously made, although in excess of the limit imposed; but any provisions of a city charter authorizing the contracting of indebtedness in excess of the limit fixed were thereby repealed: Scott v. Davenport, 34–208.

The fact that, as a result of the incurring of the indebtedness, the city is to acquire valuable property productive of revenue, does not take the case out of the constitutional provision: Ibid.

A contract for gas, made before the constitutional limitation was adopted, held binding, although the effect was to impose an indebtedness in excess of the limit: Davenport Gas, etc., Co. v. Davenport, 13–229.

Contracts for improvements: The provisions of a city charter limiting the amount of indebtedness which the city council might contract for borrowed money, held not applicable to indebtedness contracted for making improvements: Rice v. Keokuk, 15–579.

Where a city enters into a contract with a contractor for the building of a sewer with the agreement that the contractor shall accept in full satisfaction for the whole work certificates of assessment made upon the property adjacent to the sewer, such contract does not create a debt against the city within the meaning of this section: Davis v. Des Moines, 71–500; Tuttle v. Polk, 92–433; Clinton v. Walliker, 68 N. W., 431.

Boundaries. SEC. 4. The boundaries of the state may be enlarged, with the consent of congress and the general assembly.

Oath of office. SEC. 5. Every person elected or appointed to any office, shall, before entering upon the duties thereof, take an oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States, and of this state, and also an oath of office.

How vacancies filled. SEC. 6. In all cases of elections to fill vacancies in office occurring before the expiration of a full term, the person so elected shall hold for the residue of the unexpired term; and all persons appointed to fill vacancies in office, shall hold until the next general election, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

Where there was a failure to elect a county officer at a general election at which such office should have been filled, and the incumbent held over, qualifying anew as required by statute, held, that he filled a vacancy only, and his successor should be elected at the next general election: Dyer v. Bagwell, 54–487; Boone County v. Jones, 58–373.

This section explicitly defines and prescribes the term of office of a person who is appointed to fill a vacancy in an office where the statutes authorize the filling of such vacancy by the board of supervisors, and such board cannot afterward, except for the causes recognized by statute, remove the person appointed before the expiration of the term: State v. Chatburn, 63–659.

Land grants located. SEC. 7. The general assembly shall not locate any of the public lands which have been, or may be granted by congress to this state, and the location of which may be given to the general assembly, upon lands actually settled, without the consent of the occupant. The extent of the claim of such occupant so exempted, shall not exceed three hundred and twenty acres.

Seat of government; state university. SEC. 8. The seat of government is hereby permanently established, as now fixed by law, at the city of Des Moines, in the county of Polk; and the state university at Iowa City, in the county of Johnson.

ARTICLE 12.—SCHEDULE.

Supreme law. SECTION 1. This constitution shall be the supreme law of the state, and any law inconsistent therewith, shall be void. The general assembly shall pass all laws necessary to carry this constitution into effect.

Laws in force. SEC. 2. All laws now in force, and not inconsistent with this constitution, shall remain in force until they shall expire or be repealed.

Any provisions in a city charter inconsistent with the constitution (as, for instance, with § 3 of the preceding article) were repealed by the adoption of the constitution: Dively v. Cedar Falls, 27–227; Scott v. Davenport, 34–208.

Proceedings not affected. SEC. 3. All indictments, prosecutions, suits, pleas, plaints, process, and other proceedings pending in any of the courts, shall be prosecuted to final judgment and execution; and all appeals, writs of error, certiorari, and injunctions, shall be carried on in the several courts, in the same manner as now provided by law, and all offenses, misdemeanors, and crimes that may have been committed before the taking effect of this constitution, shall be subject to indictment, trial, and punishment, in the same manner as they would have been had not this constitution been made.

A crime committed prior to the adoption of this constitution, held subject to trial and punishment under the provisions of the prior constitution: State v. Axt, 6–511.

Fines inure to the state. SEC. 4. All fines, penalties, or forfeitures due, or to become due, or accruing to the state, or to any county therein, or to the school fund, shall inure to the state, county, or school fund, in the manner prescribed by law.

Bonds in force. SEC. 5. All bonds executed to the state, or to any officer in his official capacity, shall remain in force and inure to the use of those concerned.

First election for governor and lieutenant-governor. SEC. 6. The first election under this constitution shall be held on the second Tuesday in October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, at which time the electors of the state shall elect the governor and lieutenant-governor. There shall also be elected at such election, the successors of such state senators as were elected at the August election, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four, and members of the house of representatives, who shall be elected in accordance with the act of apportionment, enacted at the session of the general assembly which commenced on the first Monday of December, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six.

For secretary, auditor, etc. SEC. 7. The first election for secretary, auditor, and treasurer of state, attorney-general, district judges, members of the board of education, district attorneys, members of congress, and such state officers as shall be elected at the April election, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven (except the superintendent of public instruction), and such county officers as were elected at the August election, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six, except prosecuting attorneys, shall be held on the second Tuesday of October, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight: provided that the time for which any district judge or other state or county officer elected at the April election in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight shall not extend beyond the time fixed for filling like offices at the October election, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight.

For judges of supreme court. SEC. 8. The first election for judges of the supreme court, and such county officers as shall be elected at the August election, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, shall be held on the second Tuesday of October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine.

First session general assembly. SEC. 9. The first regular session of the general assembly shall be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight, commencing on the second Monday of January of said year.

Senators. SEC. 10. Senators elected at the August election, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six, shall continue in office until the second Tuesday of October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, at which time their successors shall be elected as may be prescribed by law.

Offices not vacated. SEC. 11. Every person elected by popular vote, by a vote of the general assembly, or who may hold office by executive appointment, which office is continued by this constitution, and every person who shall be so elected or appointed to any such office, before the taking effect of this constitution (except as in this constitution otherwise provided), shall continue in office until the term for which such person has been or may be elected or appointed shall expire; but no such person shall continue in office after the taking effect of this constitution, for a longer period than the term of such office, in this constitution prescribed.

Judicial districts. SEC. 12. The general assembly, at the first session under this constitution, shall district the state into eleven judicial districts, for district court purposes; and shall also provide for the apportionment of the members of the general assembly in accordance with the provisions of this constitution.

Submission of constitution. SEC. 13. This constitution shall be submitted to the electors of the state at the August election, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, in the several election districts in this state. The ballots at such election shall be written or printed as follows: those in favor of the constitution, "new constitution—yes." Those against the constitution, "new constitution—no." The elections shall be conducted in the same manner as the general elections of the state, and the poll-books shall be returned and canvassed as provided in the twenty-fifth chapter of the code, and abstracts shall be forwarded to the secretary of state, which abstracts shall be canvassed in the manner provided for the canvass of state officers. And if it shall appear that a majority of all the votes cast at such election for and against this constitution are in favor of the same, the governor shall immediately issue his proclamation stating that fact, and such constitution shall be the constitution of the state of Iowa, and shall take effect from and after the publication of said proclamation.

Proposition to strike out the word "white." SEC. 14. At the same election that this constitution is submitted to the people for its adoption or rejection, a proposition to amend the same by striking out the word "white," from the article on the "right of suffrage," shall be separately submitted to the electors of this state for adoption or rejection, in the manner following, viz.: a separate ballot may be given by every person having a right to vote at said election, to be deposited in a separate box. And those given for the adoption of such proposition shall have the words, "shall the word 'white' be stricken out of the article on the 'right of suffrage?' yes." And those given against the proposition shall have the words, "shall the word 'white' be stricken out of the article on the 'right of suffrage?' no." And if at said election the number of ballots cast in favor of said proposition, shall be equal to a majority of those cast for and against this constitution, then said word "white" shall be stricken from said article and be no part thereof.

Mills county. SEC. 15. Until otherwise directed by law, the county of Mills shall be in and a part of the sixth judicial district of this state.

Done in convention at Iowa City, this fifth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, and of the independence of the United States of America, the eighty-first.

THE CODE OF IOWA

ENACTED BY THE TWENTY-SIXTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY AT ITS EXTRA SESSION, 1897.

PART FIRST.

PUBLIC LAW.

TITLE I.

OF THE SOVEREIGNTY AND JURISDICTION OF THE STATE, AND THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE SOVEREIGNTY AND JURISDICTION OF THE STATE.

SECTION 1. State boundaries. The boundaries of the state are as defined in the preamble of the constitution. [C., '73, § 1; R., § 1; C., '51, § 1.]

The boundary line between this state and Illinois is the middle of the main navigable channel of the Mississippi river or the channel most used, and not the middle of the great bed of the stream as defined by the banks of the river: Chicago & N. W. R. Co., v. Clinton, 88–188.

And see notes to the preamble to the constitution.

SEC. 2. Sovereignty. The state possesses sovereignty co-extensive with the boundaries referred to in the preceding section, subject to such rights as may at any time exist in the United States in relation to public lands, or to any establishment of the national government. [C., '73, § 2; R., § 2; C., '51, § 2.]

SEC. 3. Concurrent jurisdiction. The state has concurrent jurisdiction on the waters of any river or lake which forms a common boundary between this and any other state. [C., '73, § 3; R., § 3; C., '51, § 3.]

This concurrent jurisdiction does not extend to the abatement of a nuisance existing on the Illinois shore, or connected with such shore (Gilbert v. Moline, etc., Co., 19–319); but does extend to the abatement of a nuisance and punishment of a crime committed upon a boat in said river, even though resting upon the shore of an island beyond the middle of the stream: State v. Mullen, 35–199.

The jurisdiction of the courts of the state does not extend to the abatement of a nuisance on an island in the Mississippi river, which is not shown to be within the Iowa boundary as fixed by act of congress: Buck v. Ellenbolt, 84–394.

SEC. 4. Lands of United States—jurisdiction—taxation—process. Exclusive jurisdiction over all lands situate in the state now or hereafter purchased by the United States, on which buildings for public use are or shall be erected, is hereby ceded to the United States, and the same shall be exempt from taxation so long as owned by the United States; subject to the right of service of any judicial process issued from or returnable to any court of this state or judge thereof, and the exercise by such courts of jurisdiction of crimes committed thereon; and further subject to the enforcement of quarantine and health regulations of the state. [C., '73, § 4; R., §§ 2197, 2198.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

SECTION 5. Sessions—where. The sessions of the general assembly shall be held at the seat of government, unless the governor shall convene them at some other place in times of pestilence or public danger. [C., '73, § 5; R., § 3; C., '51, § 4.]

SEC. 6. Temporary organization. At ten o'clock in the forenoon of the day on which the general assembly shall convene, and at the place of convening the houses respectively, the president of the senate, or in his absence some person claiming to be a member, shall call the senate to order. If necessary, a temporary president shall be chosen from their own number by the persons claiming to be elected senators; and some person claiming to be elected a member of the house of representatives shall call the house to order, and the persons present claiming to be elected to the senate shall choose a secretary, and those of the house of representatives, a clerk for the time being. [25 G. A., ch. 109; C., '73, § 6; R., § 14; C., '51, § 5.]

SEC. 7. Certificates of election. Such secretary and clerk shall receive and file the certificates of election presented, each for his own house, and make a list therefrom of the persons who appear to have been elected members of the respective houses. [C., '73, § 7; R.. § 15; C., '51, § 6.]

SEC. 8. Temporary officers—committee on credentials. The persons so appearing to be members shall proceed to elect such other officers for the time being as may be requisite; and when so temporarily organized shall choose a committee of five, who shall examine and report upon the credentials of the persons claiming to be members. [C., '73, § 8; R., § 4; C., '51, § 7.]

SEC. 9. Permanent organization. The members reported by the committee as holding certificates of election from the proper authority shall proceed to the permanent organization of their respective houses by the election of officers. [C., '73, § 9; R., § 5; C., '51, § 8.]

SEC. 10. Oaths—who administer. Any member may administer oaths necessary in the course of business of the house of which he is a member, and, while acting on a committee, in the course of business of such committee. [C., '73, § 10; R., § 7; C., '51, § 10.]

SEC. 11. Freedom of speech. No member shall be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in either house. [C., '73, § 11; R., § 6; C., '51, § 9.]

SEC. 12. Compensation of members. The compensation of the members of the general assembly shall be: To every member, for each regular session, five hundred and fifty dollars, and for each extra session the same compensation per day while in session, to be ascertained by the rate per day of the compensation of the members of the general assembly at the preceding regular session; and in going to and returning from the place where the general assembly is held, five cents per mile, by the nearest traveled route; but in no case shall the compensation for any extra session exceed six dollars per day, exclusive of mileage. [19 G. A., ch. 52, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 38, § 2; C., '73, § 12; R., § 18; C., '51, § 11.]

SEC. 13. Compensation of officers and employes. The compensation of the officers and employes of the general assembly shall be: To the secretary of the senate and chief clerk of the house, six dollars per day, each; to the assistant secretaries of the senate and clerks of the house, journal, enrolling and engrossing clerks, five dollars per day, each; the speaker's clerk, lieutenant-governor's clerk, and sergeant-at-arms, four dollars per day, each; to postmaster and assistant, mail carriers, bill clerks, file clerks, door keepers, janitors and committee clerks three dollars per day, each, and the necessary stationery for each of the clerks, secretaries, and their assistants aforesaid; to the lieutenant-governor's page and speaker's page, two dollars per day, each; to the messengers, one dollar and fifty cents per day, each. And no other or greater compensation shall be allowed such officers or employes, nor shall there be any allowance of or for stationery, except as above provided, postage, newspapers, or other perquisites in any form or manner, or under any name or designation. [25 G. A., ch. 73; 19 G. A., ch. 52, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 38, § 2; C., '73, § 12; R., § 18; C., '51, § 11.]

SEC. 14. Payment of members. Within thirty days after the convening of the general assembly, the presiding officers of the two houses shall jointly certify to the auditor of state the names of the members, officers and employes of their respective houses, and the amount of mileage due each member, respectively, who shall thereupon draw a warrant upon the state treasurer for the amount due each member for mileage, as above certified, and shall also issue to each member of the general assembly, at the end of said thirty days, a warrant for one-half the salary due him for the session, and the remaining one-half at the close of the session. At the close of any extra or adjourned session, the compensation of the members shall be paid upon certificate of the presiding officer of each house, showing the number of days of allowance, and the compensation as provided by law. [15 G. A., ch. 3, § 1.]

SEC. 15. Of officers and employes. The auditor shall also issue to each officer and employe of the general assembly, from time to time, upon certificates signed by the president of the senate and the speaker of the house, warrants for the amount due for services rendered. [15 G. A., ch. 3, §§ 2, 3.]

SEC. 16. Warrants to be paid. Said warrants shall be paid out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. [15 G. A., ch. 3, § 4.]

SEC. 17. Officers—tenure. The speaker of the house of representatives shall hold his office until the first day of the meeting of the regular session next after that at which he was elected. All other officers elected by either house shall hold their offices only during the session at which they were elected, unless sooner removed. [C., '73, § 13; R., § 16.]

This section does not fix the term of office of the secretary of the senate. It prescribes the limit of his term but does not fix his right to the office during such term. After election he may be removed by the senate electing him, before the expiration of such term, without notice or a hearing: Cliff v. Parsons, 90–665.

SEC. 18. Contempt—what is. Each house has authority to punish as for a contempt, by fine or imprisonment or both, any person who commits any of the following offenses against its privileges, dignity or authority:

1. Arresting a member, knowing him to be such, in violation of his privilege, or assaulting, or threatening to assault, or threatening any harm to the person or property of, a member, knowing him to be such, for anything said or done by him in such house as a member thereof;

2. Attempting by menace, or by force, or by any corrupt means, to control or influence a member in giving his vote, or to prevent his giving it;

3. Disorderly or contemptuous conduct tending to disturb its proceedings;

4. Refusal to attend, or to be sworn, or to affirm, or to be examined, as a witness before it, or before a committee thereof, when duly subpœnaed;
5. Assaulting or preventing any person going before it, or before any of its committees, by its order; the offender knowing such fact;
6. Rescuing or attempting to rescue any person arrested by its order; the offender knowing of such arrest;
7. Impeding any officer of such house in the discharge of his duties as such; the offender knowing his official character. [C., '73, § 14; R., § 8; C., '51; § 12.]

SEC. 19. Punishment for—how executed. Fines and imprisonment for contempt shall be only by virtue of an order of the proper house, entered on its journals, stating the grounds thereof. Imprisonment shall be effected by a warrant, under the hand of the presiding officer, for the time being, of the house ordering it, countersigned by the acting secretary or clerk, running in the name of the state, and directed to the sheriff or jailer of the proper county. Under such warrant, the proper officer will be authorized to commit and detain the person. Fines shall be collected by a similar warrant, directed to any proper officer of any county in which the offender has property, and executed in the same manner as executions for fines issued from courts of record, and the proceeds paid into the state treasury. [C., '73, § 15; R., § 10; C., '51, § 14.]

SEC. 20. Same—how limited. Imprisonment for contempt shall not extend beyond the session at which it is ordered, and shall be in the jail of the county in which the general assembly is then sitting; or, if there be no such jail, then in one of the nearest county jails. Punishment for contempt shall not constitute a bar to any other proceeding, civil or criminal, for the same act. [C., '73, § 16; R., §§ 9, 11; C., '51, §§ 13, 15.]

SEC. 21. Witnesses—attendance compulsory. Whenever a committee of either house, or a joint committee of both, is charged with an investigation requiring the personal attendance of witnesses, any person may be compelled to appear before such committee as a witness, by serving an order upon him, which service shall be made in the manner required in case of a subpœna in a civil action in the district court, such order stating the time and place he is required to appear, signed by the presiding officer of the house appointing the committee, and attested by its acting secretary or clerk; or, in case of a joint committee, signed and attested by such officers of either house. [C., '73, § 17.]

SEC. 22. Same—compensation. Witnesses shall be entitled to the same compensation for attendance under the preceding section as before the district court, but shall not have the right to demand payment of their fees in advance. [C., '73, § 18.]

SEC. 23. Joint conventions. Joint conventions of the general assembly shall meet in the hall of the house of representatives for such purposes as are or shall be provided by law. The president of the senate, or, in his absence, the speaker of the house of representatives, shall preside, or, in the absence of both, a temporary president shall be appointed by a joint vote. [C., '73, § 19; R., §§ 674, 675.]

SEC. 24. Tellers. After the time for the meeting of the joint convention has been designated and prior thereto, each house shall appoint one teller, and the two shall act as judges of the election. C., '73, § 20; R., § 676.]

SEC. 25. Secretary—record. The clerk of the house of representatives shall act as secretary of the convention, and he and the secretary of the senate shall keep a fair and correct record of the proceedings of the convention, which shall be entered on the journals of each house. [C., '73, § 21; R., § 677.]

SEC. 26. Election—vote—how taken. When any officer is to be elected by joint convention, the names of the members shall be arranged in alphabetical order by the secretaries, and each member shall vote in the order in which his name stands when thus arranged. The name of the person voted for, and of the members voting, shall be entered in writing by the tellers, who, after the secretary shall have called the names of the members a second time, and the name of the person for whom each member has voted, shall report to the president of the convention the number of votes given for each candidate. [C., '73, § 22; R., §§ 678, 679.]

SEC. 27. Second poll. If no person shall receive the votes of a majority of the members present, a second poll may be taken, and so on from time to time until some person receives such majority. [C., '73, § 23; R., § 680.]

SEC. 28. Adjournment. If the purpose for which the joint convention is assembled is not concluded, the president shall adjourn the same from time to time as the members present may determine. [C., '73, § 24; R., § 681.]

SEC. 29. Certificates of election. When any person shall have received a majority of the votes as aforesaid, the president shall declare him to be elected, and shall, in the presence of the convention, sign two certificates of such election, attested by the tellers, one of which he shall transmit to the governor, and the other shall be preserved among the records of the convention and entered at length on the journal of each house. The governor shall issue a commission to the person so elected. [C., '73, § 25; R., § 682.]

SEC. 30. Election of senators. Joint conventions for the purpose of electing a senator in the congress of the United States, and canvassing the votes for governor and lieutenant-governor, shall be conducted according to the foregoing provisions, so far as applicable. [C., '73, § 26; R., § 685.]

SEC. 31. Parliamentary rules. In the absence of other rules, those of parliamentary practice comprised in Cushing's Manual shall govern. [C., '73, § 27; R., § 686.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE STATUTES.

SECTION 32. Bills—approval—passage over veto—certificate. If the governor approves a bill, he shall sign and date it; if he returns it with his objections and it afterwards passes as provided in the constitution, a certificate, signed by the presiding officer of each house in the following form, shall be indorsed thereon or attached thereto: "This bill, having been returned by the governor, with his objections, to the house in which it originated, and, after reconsideration, having again passed both houses by yeas and nays by a vote of two-thirds of the members of each house, has become a law this.....day of....." [C., '73, §§ 28, 29; R., §§ 19, 20; C., '51, §§ 16, 17.]

As to how the fact of approval may be shown, see note to § 38.

As to approval by governor, see Const., art. 3, § 16.

SEC. 33. Bills retained—certificate. When a bill has passed the general assembly, and is not returned by the governor within three days as provided in the constitution, it shall be authenticated by the secretary of state indorsing thereon: "This bill, having remained with the governor three days (Sunday excepted), the general assembly being in session, has become a law this.....day of.....

See Const., art. 3, § 16.

SEC. 34. Acts—where deposited. The original acts of the general assembly shall be deposited with and kept by the secretary of state. [C., '73, § 31; R., § 22; C., '51, § 19.]

The original act thus deposited with the secretary of state is the ultimate proof of the statute, whatever errors there may be in the printed copies thereof; and the court will inform itself and take cognizance of the true reading as thus shown: Clare v. State, 5–509.

The acts thus deposited are the bills which receive the signatures of the officers, etc., and behind them it is impossible for any court to go for the purpose of ascertaining what the law is: Duncombe v. Prindle, 12–1, 11.

Where the newspaper publication of an act corresponded with the original rolls, held, that the act as thus existing and published would govern as to an offense committed thereunder prior to the formal publication of the statute, although such formal publition differed from the original rolls and the newspaper publication: State v. Donehey, 8–396.

As the constitution requires a proposed amendment to be entered upon the journals of the respective houses of the general assembly when agreed to, such journals are higher evidence of the contents of such amendment as it was agreed to than the enrolled copy of the joint resolution proposing such amendment, signed by the presiding officers of the respective houses and by the governor: Koehler v. Hill, 60–543.

SEC. 35. Private acts—when take effect. Acts of a private nature, which do not prescribe the time when they take effect, shall do so on the thirtieth day next after they have been approved by the governor, or indorsed as provided in this chapter. [C., '73, § 32; R., § 23; C., '51, § 20.]

SEC. 36. Acts taking effect by publication. Acts which are to take effect from and after publication in newspapers shall be published in two or more papers, one at least of them at the seat of government, and, if such papers are not designated in the act, the same may be designated by the secretary of state, and the act published accordingly. All such acts shall take effect from and after the date of the last publication, and the secretary of state shall make and sign on the original roll of each of such acts a certificate, stating in what papers it was published, and the date of the last publication in each of them, which certificate and the printing thereof at the foot of the act shall be presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated. [C., '73, § 33; R., § 24; C., '51, § 21.]

A statute does not become a law so as to affect the rights of property or parties until the time when by publication or otherwise it is to take effect: Charless v. Lamberson, 1–435.

The provision in the former section that "all such acts shall take effect on the twentieth day after the date of the last publication" held to apply only to acts in which the time of taking effect was not specified, and not to render it incompetent for the legislature to specify in the act itself when it should take effect. Where an act provided that it should take effect "from its publication in," etc., held, that it took effect from the date of such publication: Hunt v. Murray, 17–313.

Under a prior provision, however, to the same effect, held, that although the act contained a special section directing that it should take effect from and after its publication, such section should not be considered as repealing the general provision that it should take effect at the expiration of twenty days from the date of publication: Thatcher v. Haun, 12–303.

Certificate of secretary that act was published in one newspaper, held not sufficient: Welch v. Battern, 47–147.

The general assembly may provide that an act shall take effect by publication, and the courts have no power to prevent the injustice which may result therefrom. (Decided under old Const.): Pierson v. Baird, 2 G. Gr., 235.

If a statute is in force, ignorance thereof from any cause on the part of those affected by it is no reason why it should not be enforced against them. They cannot require that it should be published in such manner as that it should be known by them: Barber v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. W. R. Co., 43–223.

Where at the time of the commission of an offense under a statute the only publication that had been made was in a newspaper under authority of law, and the statute as thus published corresponded to the original rolls, held, that the form of the statute as thus appearing would prevail over a subsequent publication, although it was official, varying from the form found in the rolls and as originally published: State v. Donehey, 8–396.

A court will take judicial notice of the fact of publication of a statute, where such publication is necessary in order that the act shall go into effect: Allen v. Dunham, 1 G. Gr., 89.

The courts are bound ex officio to take notice of publication of statutes which take effect by publication: Pierson v. Baird, 2 G. Gr., 235.

While the statement appended to the printed act that it is "approved" is evidence of that fact, it is not essential to the validity of the act, and the approval may be shown from the original in the office of the secretary of state: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212.

SEC. 37. Acts of public nature—when take effect. All acts and resolutions of a public nature passed at regular sessions of the general assembly shall take effect on the fourth day of July following their passage, unless some specified time is provided in the act, or they have sooner taken effect by publication. [C., '73, § 34; R., § 25; C., '51, § 22.]

SEC. 38. Secretary of state to publish laws. Within fifty days after the adjournment of the general assembly, the secretary of state shall prepare a manuscript or printed copy of all the laws, joint resolutions and memorials passed thereat, arranging the same in chapters, with chapter headings and sectional catch-words and an index, to which he shall attach his certificate that the acts, resolutions and memorials therein contained are truly copied from the original rolls, which shall be presumptive evidence of their correctness, and deliver them to the state printer. [16 G. A., ch. 132; C., '73, § 35; R., §§ 62, 63, 144; C., '51, §§ 46, 47.]

While the statement appended to the printed act that it is "approved" is evidence of that fact, it is not essential to the validity of the act, and the approval may be shown from the original in the office of the secretary of state: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212.

SEC. 39. Style of publication. The acts of each general assembly shall be printed in pages of the same size, and, as near as may be, of the same style, type and appearance with the official edition of this code. [16 G. A., ch. 132; C., '73, § 36.]

SEC. 40. Superintendence of publication—copies—time. The secretary of state shall superintend the printing of the laws as above directed. In the absence of any other provision, the number of copies to be printed and bound, and the time within which the same shall be completed, may be fixed by resolution of each general assembly, or, in case no such resolution is passed, shall be determined by the executive council. [16 G. A., ch. 132; C., '73, § 37.]

SEC. 41. Amendments—reference to amended act. Every act passed in amendment of or in addition to any chapter or section of this code, or in amendment of or in addition to any previous act of the same kind, shall contain in the title thereof a reference to the number and name of the chapter so amended or added to, and, if such reference be omitted, the secretary of state shall, in preparing such act for publication, supply the omission. [16 G. A., ch. 132; C., '73, § 38.]

The marginal notes and head-lines inserted by the secretary of state in publishing the statutes are not to be considered in construing them. They are not a part of the law: Cook v. Federal Life Ass'n, 74–746.

An amendatory act from which the number and name of the chapter of the Code, which is amended, is omitted, is not invalid, even though the omission is not supplied by the secretary of state as required by this section: State v. Shreves, 81–615.

The provisions of this section are directory rather than mandatory, and the omission of the reference here required will not invalidate the act even though the secretary of state does not supply the omission: Morgan v. Des Moines, 54 Fed., 456.

SEC. 42. Distribution of laws by secretary of state. The secretary of state shall distribute the laws aforesaid as follows: To the state library for distribution to other states and territories, and for exchange, two hundred copies; two copies to each state institution, to each judge of a court of record, including United States circuit and district judges whose districts lie within this state, and to each state office; one copy to each member of the general assembly; ten copies to the library of the law department of the state university; ten copies to the state historical society; one to each public library within the state,—all of the foregoing to be bound in law sheep; thirteen thousand copies to be bound in boards for distribution to county auditors upon their requisition. [17 G. A., ch. 123, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 132; C., '73, § 39.]

SEC. 43. By county auditors—accounting. Each county officer, justice of the peace, township clerk and mayor of a city or town shall be supplied with a copy of the laws for the use of his office, which shall be delivered to his successor in office. Distribution shall be made upon the requisition of the county auditor upon the secretary of state, which requisition shall state the number of copies required for distribution under the provisions of this section, and also the number of copies requisite for sale in the county, and said requisition shall be made before the first day of March in each year, and thereupon the secretary of state shall forward the number so certified, and file with the auditor of state a certificate thereof, which shall be charged to such county by the auditor of state. The auditor of state shall credit the county with the number of copies distributed under the provisions of this chapter, upon the filing of the proper vouchers by the county auditors, and upon the sale of such laws by the county auditor at the rate of fifty cents per copy. The said county auditor shall pay said amounts to the county treasurer of his county, for the use of the state revenue, and the treasurer shall execute duplicate receipts therefor, one of which shall be filed with the auditor of state. The county auditors shall furnish the laws in their respective counties as hereinbefore provided. [17 G. A., ch. 123, § 2; 16 G. A., ch. 132; C., '73, § 40.]

SEC. 44. Sales—reports—accounting. The secretary of state and county auditors shall sell the copies remaining in their hands at fifty cents a copy. The secretary of state shall report under oath to the auditor of state the number of copies remaining on hand after the distribution aforesaid, and the auditor of state shall charge him therewith, and credit him with the proceeds of all that are sold, upon payment of the same into the state treasury. The county auditor shall pay the proceeds of all copies sold by him to the county treasurer, taking his duplicate receipts therefor, one of which he shall transmit to the auditor of state. [C., '73, § 41.]

SEC. 45. Same. The secretary of state and county auditors shall, on or before the fifteenth day of November in each year, report to the auditor of state the number of copies sold and the number remaining on hand, and the amount paid into the state or county treasury, and the auditor shall charge such state or county treasurer with such amount. [C., '73, § 42.]

SEC. 46. Copies to be delivered to successors. When the secretary of state or county auditor goes out of office having any such copies remaining, he shall deliver them to his successor, taking his duplicate receipts therefor, one of which he shall transmit to the auditor of state, who shall thereupon give such officer the proper credit and charge his successor with the copies received by him. Every officer receiving a copy of such laws shall execute a receipt therefor, and shall deliver such copy to his successor, or to the officer from whom he received it, for the use of such successor, and upon failure to do so shall be liable on his official bond or in his individual capacity. [C., '73, § 43.]

SEC. 47. Cost of publishing. The compensation for the publication of laws which are ordered by the general assembly to take effect by publication, unless otherwise fixed, shall be audited and paid by the state, and shall be one-third the rates of legal advertisements allowed by law. [C., '73, § 44.]

SEC. 48. Construction. In the construction of the statutes, the following rules shall be observed, unless such construction would be inconsistent with the manifest intent of the general assembly, or repugnant to the context of the statute: [C., '73, § 45; R., § 29; C., '51, § 26.]

1. Repeal—effect of. The repeal of a statute does not revive a statute previously repealed, nor affect any right which has accrued, any duty imposed, any penalty incurred, or any proceeding commenced, under or by virtue of the statute repealed.

For similar provision as to the effect of Code upon previous legislation, see § 51 and notes.

The repeal of a statute by an act which substantially retains the provisions of the old statute does not destroy or interrupt the binding force of such statute: Hancock v. District T'p, 78–550.

Previous statute not revived: The repeal of a statute does not revive a statute previously repealed: Burlington v. Kellar, 18–59; Negus v. Negus, 46–487.

As to proceedings commenced: Where a statute is repealed it must be considered as if it never existed except with reference to such parts as are preserved by the repealing statute; and though the suit may have been instituted under the statute while in existence, such repeal takes away the jurisdiction over the case thus pending: Thatcher v. Haun, 12-303.

Where a statute relating to the remedy is changed after the bringing of an action, subsequent proceedings should so far as practicable conform to the new law: Davidson v. Wheeler, Mor., 238.

Where a rule of practice is changed by statute without any saving clause the new law is applicable to all cases then pending: Meigs v. Parke, Mor., 378.

An amendment to the statute as to granting a change of venue, held applicable to actions pending. Such a change does not affect vested rights: Eikenberry v. Edwards, 71-82.

Where the times of holding terms of court were changed by statute, held, that such change did not affect a cause already commenced by service of notice, and that defendant should be held to appear at the "next term," as so changed: Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Dickerson, 28-274.

Where action was commenced by service by publication before the taking effect of the Revision, and the service of notice was not sufficient under the law as it then stood, held, that a judgment rendered upon such service after the taking effect of the Revision was defective, although the service, if made under the provisions of the Revision, would have been sufficient: Bristow v. Guess, 12-404.

Statutory provisions as to the method of trial in equity cases upon appeal, held not applicable to an appeal taken after the act took effect from a judgment rendered before that time: Simondson v. Simondson, 50-110; Trebon v. Zuraff, 50-180.

Nor to an appeal commenced but not brought to judgment before the act took effect: Schmeltz v. Schmeltz, 52-512; Bailey v. Malvin, 53-371.

Effect upon judgments or orders: Proceedings to enforce a judgment should be governed by the law in force when they are commenced, and not by that under which the judgment is rendered: Gray v. Iliff, 30-195.

The law in force at the time of the rendition of a judgment should govern as to a sale made thereunder: Fonda v. Clark, 43-300; Babcock v. Gurney, 42-154.

Also as to the right to appraisement: Holland v. Dickerson, 41-367.

Also as to stay of execution: Du Boise v. Bloom, 38-512.

Also as to right of appeal: Davenport v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 37-624; Ingram v. Chicago, D. & M. R. R. Co., 38-669.

Proceedings commenced are not, under statutory provision above set out, affected by the repeal of the statute under which they are commenced: Inskeep v. Inskeep, 5-204, 221.

Rights accrued: The statute authorizing suit on a promissory note to be brought by an assignee thereof in his own name instead of in the name of the assignor for his benefit, held applicable to notes already executed: Phillips v. Runnells, Mor., 391.

Where an action was brought prior to the adoption of the Code of '51, but judgment therein was not rendered until after that time, held, that defendant's homestead exemption should be governed by the provisions of the law under which action was commenced: Helfenstein v. Care, 3-287.

Where a new revenue law was passed making no express provisions as to the enforcement of the penalties under the previous law, held, that the penalties already accrued could be enforced in accordance with the previous statute: Bartruff v. Remey, 15-257.

The general assembly cannot alter, change or repeal statutes relating to the remedy so as to substantially impair a vested right; therefore, where a mortgage and a mechanic's lien upon the same property attached under the Revision, held, in an action brought under the Code, that the mortgagee had a right to have his lien determined and enforced, as against the holder of the mechanic's lien, in accordance with the provisions of the Revision: Brodt v. Rohkar, 48-36.

Accruing and accrued rights are of the same character. There is no other distinction made by the statute, except that one has accrued and the other is accruing. The statute takes effect upon both, and both are preserved to the party entitled thereto: Woods v. Haviland, 59-476.

The repeal of a statute with reference to widow's dower will not affect a dower interest already vested though not yet assigned: Burke v. Barron, 8-132.

Prior to the death of a testator his devisees have no rights which are protected against subsequent legislation: Lorieux v. Keller, 5-196.

The right contemplated by this provision pertains to any property right, or person, of the citizen. A permit granted under a statute is not such a right that it is not affected by the repeal of the statute: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271.

Crimes previously committed: Where, after an indictment was found, the law prescribing the punishment for the offense therein charged was changed, so that the offense was no longer triable on indictment, but only on information, held, that the prosecution under the indictment was not affected by the change. (Overruling State v. Burdick, 9-402): State v. Shaffer, 21-486.

A new statute which provides a milder punishment repeals so much of the former law as concerns the punishment without any express repeal, and where one statute prescribes different degrees of punishment in different sections for the same offense, only the milder degree can be adopted: State v. Brandt, 41-593.

Where the repealing clause of a penal statute provided that no offense committed and no penalty incurred under the act repealed should be affected by the repeal, held, that a crime committed under a previous act, which was repealed with a similar saving clause to the act thus repealed, was not within the exception and could not be prosecuted: Jones v. State, 1-395.

Where the statute defining a crime is repealed and another provision substituted defining the same crime, but providing a different punishment, an indictment is not subject to demurrer which fails to state whether such crime was committed before or after the change in the statute: State v. Reyelts, 74-499.

The repeal of a penal statute without a special saving clause does not release a party who has already incurred the penalty thereunder from liability: Kemmish v. Ball, 30 Fed., 759.

Illegal act not validated: The abrogation and repeal of the constitutional provision prohibiting the issuance of paper to circulate as money, held not to render valid scrip so issued while the law was in operation: Dively v. Cedar Falls, 21-565.

Taxes accrued: Taxes, and the interest and penalties thereon, are not affected by a repeal of the law under which they have accrued: State ex rel. v. Stewart, 11-251; Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

But the repeal of the statute terminates the right to additional penalties: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69-648.

Where a railway company had expended money in reliance on a tax voted in its aid, held, that a repeal of the statute did not deprive the company of the right to have the tax levied and collected: Burges v. Mabin, 70-633.

The repeal of a statute authorizing special assessments for improvements deprives a city of the power to levy such a tax for improvements not yet contracted for: Wardens, etc., of Christ Church v. Burlington, 39-224.

The repeal of a statute held not to affect the right of redemption from a tax sale existing thereunder prior to the repeal: Adams v. Beale, 19-61; Myers v. Copeland, 20-22.

A general repealing clause should be construed as referring only to laws of a general nature on the same subject. Therefore where, under the charter of an incorporated town, it was authorized to grant licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, held, that a subsequent license law, making different provisions, would not repeal the authority conferred in the charter: State v. Neeper, 3 G. Gr., 337.

Where provisions for the foreclosure of tax titles were made by special statutes applicable to sales for taxes levied by cities, and subsequently other provisions were made in regard to tax sales, held, that the original remained in force as to sale for city taxes: Sweet v. Billings, 14-384.

Express repeal: Where there is a direct conflict between two different statutes, and the latter in express terms repeals all prior acts in conflict with its provisions, the former must be held repealed: Staples v. Plymouth County, 62-364.

The question of the effect of a repealing clause in an unconstitutional statute is one of legislative intention and to be determined from all the circumstances of the particular case. Where the language used was "so much of chapter 80 as comes in conflict with this act is repealed," held, that such previous statute was not thereby repealed: Childs v. Shower, 18-261.

Implied repeal: Where two laws are in conflict and cannot be reconciled the last must prevail, being the last expression of the legislative will: McKinney v. Wood, 35-167.

Where two statutes are in terms repugnant or inconsistent, if the latter is intended to provide the only rule which is to govern the case, it will be considered as repealing the prior statute: State v. Courtney, 73-619.

In a particular case, held, that two sections being manifestly inconsistent, one of them must be regarded as having been repealed by implication: State v. Delong, 12-453.

A general statute making regulations upon a particular subject inconsistent with those in a special act of incorporation of a city repeals the provisions in such special act: State v. Harris, 10-441.

Where a statute to which, by subsequent legislation, an exception is made is repealed, and subsequently re-enacted without providing for the exception, the last statute being inconsistent with the one making the exception will be deemed to repeal it by implication: State v. Bissell, 67-616.

The passage of a statute making women eligible to school offices, held to repeal by implication such portions of the statutes relating to contesting elections as require a contestant to show the qualification of an elector in the county: Brown v. McCollum, 76-479.

While the repeal of a statute by implication is not favored by the courts, yet where a statute is inconsistent in its provisions with one subsequently enacted, and is out of harmony with the spirit of later general legislation on the subject-matter, the courts will sustain the more recent statute: Yant v. Brooks, 19-87.

Where a statute covers an entire subject it thereby repeals prior statutes on the same subject, although they are not expressly repealed: Ellis v. Jackson County, 38-175.

Where one ordinance embraced and revised the whole subject-matter contained in the corresponding portion of a previous ordinance, held, that such previous ordinance was repealed by the subsequent one: Decorah v. Dunstan, 38-96.

Where a subsequent statute is passed containing provisions substantially the same as those of a previous statute, but not containing all the provisions of the previous one, there being no inconsistency between the two, and they being such that both will be enforced, the later statute will not be regarded as repealing even that portion of the previous statute not included in the later one: Phillips v. Council Bluffs, 63-576; Ament v. Humphrey, 3 G. Gr., 255.

The fact that a subsequent statute provides a new remedy for the same wrong will not necessarily show an implied repeal. The new remedy may be merely cumulative: State v. Berry, 12–58.

Where statutes are not in conflict, the latter cannot be held to repeal by implication authority conferred in the former: Burlington v. Putnam Ins. Co., 31–102.

The amendment to § 4413 of Code of '73 by which the number of peremptory challenges of the defendant in criminal cases was reduced from twenty to ten, held not a repeal but applicable to the organization of juries after it took effect, no matter when the proceeding was commenced: State v. Shreves, 81–615.

Change in statute upon which another statute depends will not affect the latter: Garber v. Clayton County, 19–29; Kinsey v. Sherman, 46–463; Weir v. Allen, 47–482.

But where a special charter refers to the general law for subjects of taxation under such charter, it seems that a change in the general law will operate equally on the charter: Tackaberry v. Keokuk, 32–155.

Repeals by implication not favored: The law does not favor repeals by implication, and though two acts are seemingly repugnant, yet they should, if possible, receive such construction that the latter shall not repeal the former: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270; Hummer v. Hummer, 3 G. Gr., 42; Casey v. Harned, 5–1; Cole v. Board of Supervisors, 11–552; Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14–214; Burke v. Jeffries, 20–145; State v. Shaw, 28–67; Dubuque v. Harrison, 34–163.

If by any fair and reasonable construction a prior and later statute can be reconciled, both shall stand. If it can be avoided, no court can conclude that a statute is repealed by implication: Casey v. Harned, 5–1; Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14–214.

In order to work the repeal of an old law by a new one by implication, there must be an absolute repugnance between the two. Effect will be given, if possible, to several statutes in pari materia: State v. Shaw, 28–67.

Any reasonable construction will be adopted to avoid a repeal by implication: State v. Brandt, 41–593.

Repeal by implication is not to be presumed: Risdon v. Shank, 37–82.

Non-user: Mere failure to enforce a statute does not result in its repeal by nonuser: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72–348.

2. Words and phrases. Words and phrases shall be construed according to the context and the approved usage of the language; but technical words and phrases, and such others as may have acquired a peculiar and appropriate meaning in law, shall be construed according to such meaning.

The word "acquire" with reference to real property applies to the acquisition of the same by will as well as by purchase: Bennett v. Hibbert, 88–154.

Under statutes with reference to the acquisition of property by aliens, held that "purchase" includes acquisition by will as well as by purchase for a consideration: Ibid.

3. Number and gender. Words importing the singular number may be extended to several persons or things, and words importing the plural number may be applied to one person or thing, and words importing the masculine gender only may be extended to females.

4. Joint authority. Words giving a joint authority to three or more public officers or other persons shall be construed as giving such authority to a majority of them, unless it be otherwise expressed in the act giving the authority.

5. Highway—road. The words "highway" and "road" include public bridges, and may be held equivalent to the words "county way," "county road," "common road," and "state road."

Public bridges are a part of the highway: Gallaher v. Head, 72–173.

6. Insane. The words "insane person" include idiots, lunatics, distracted persons, and persons of unsound mind.

7. Issue. The word "issue" as applied to descent of estates includes all lawful lineal descendants.

8. Land—real estate. The word "land" and the phrases "real estate" and "real property" include lands, tenements, hereditaments, and all rights thereto and interests therein, equitable as well as legal.

The term real property includes all legal rights in land: Strong v. Garret, 90–100.

Therefore, held that the reversionary interest of an heir to the premises in which the widow had by election a life estate by virtue of the homestead right is such an interest as may be levied upon and sold as real property in the hands of the heir or in the hands of the testator herself who has acquired the interest of such heir by inheritance: Ibid.

The interest which a mortgagee has in the real property mortgaged constitutes "real estate:" Severin v. Cole, 38–463; and also the equitable interest which the heir of such mortgagee has in such property: Burton v. Hintrager, 18–348.

Real estate includes equitable as well as legal interests in real property: Blaine v. Stewart, 2–378.

The making improvements upon land by one in possession under contract of purchase gives him an equitable interest which will pass by a conveyance: White v. Butt, 32–335.

A mere license to make improvements upon and use real property is not real estate. Melhop v. Meinhart, 70–685.

Where water-works were erected upon land occupied under a lease to continue as long as the works should operate, held, that the buildings, machinery, mains, pipes, etc., constituted real property, assessable as an entirety in the township where the main works were located: Oskaloosa Water Co. v. Board of Equalization, 84–407.

9. Personal property. The words "personal property" include money, goods, chattels, evidences of debt, and things in action.

A promissory note is "personal property:" Allison v. King, 21–302; so are municipal bonds: Callanan v. Brown. 31–333; and so is a draft, though it be against the government, and upon which action could not, therefore, be brought, and though it has not been indorsed by the payee; so held in case of embezzlement: State v. Orwig, 24–102.

Applied: Iowa Lumber Co. v. Foster, 49–25.

10. Property. The word "property" includes personal and real property.

Applied: Briggs v. Briggs, 69–617.

The word "property" used in § 2901 with reference to perpetuities applies to personal as well as real property; Meek v. Briggs, 87–610.

A non-negotiable draft of an insurance company in settlement of a claim is property, although acceptance of the company is essential before liability would attach on such draft: State v. Patty, 66 N. W., 727.

11. Month—year—A. D. The word "month" means a calendar month, and the word "year" and the abbreviation "A. D." are equivalent to the expression "year of our Lord."

The designation of the year by numerical figures with A. D. prefixed, held sufficient in an indictment: State v. Seamons, 1 G. Gr., 418.

12. Oath—affirmation. The word "oath" includes affirmation in all cases where an affirmation may be substituted for an oath, and in like cases the word "swear" includes "affirm."

13. Person. The word "person" may be extended to bodies corporate.

So held under the statute as to garnishment: Wales v. Muscatine, 4–302, 307.

The rule that the word persons may be extended to bodies corporate cannot be of universal application, especially in the construction of criminal statutes, for the reason that there are some crimes for which corporations cannot be punished. The true rule is that corporations are to be considered as persons when the circumstances in which they are placed are identical with those of natural persons expressly included in the statute: Stewart v. Waterloo Turn Verein, 71–226.

14. Seal. Where the seal of a court, public office or officer, or public or private corporation, may be required to be affixed to any paper, the word "seal" shall include an impression upon the paper alone, as well as upon wax or a wafer affixed thereto.

15. State. The word "state," when applied to the different parts of the United States, includes the District of Columbia and the territories, and the words "United States" may include the said district and territories.

16. Town. The word "town" means an incorporated town, and may include cities.

"Town" does not include unincorporated village; so held in construing a statute as to extent of the homestead: Truax v. Pool, 46–256.

17. Will. The word "will" includes codicils.

18. Written—in writing. The words "written" and "in writing" may include any mode of representing words and letters in general use, except that signatures, when required by law, must be made by the writing or mark of the person.

19. Sheriff. The term "sheriff" may be extended to any person performing the duties of the sheriff, either generally or in special cases.

This does not authorize a person other than the sheriff to serve notices, levy executions, etc.: Conway v. McGregor & M. R. R. Co., 43–32.

20. Deed—bond—indenture—undertaking. The word "deed" is applied to an instrument conveying lands, but does not imply a sealed instrument; and the words "bond" and "indenture" do not necessarily imply a seal, and the word "undertaking" means a promise or security in any form.

A seal is not therefore essential to the validity of a conveyance: Pierson v. Armstrong, 1-282; though it formerly was so: Switzer v. Knapps, 10-72; Simms v. Hervey, 19-273, 290.

21. Executor—administrator. The term "executor" includes administrator, and the term "administrator" includes executor, where the subject-matter justifies such use.

22. Numerals—figures. The Roman numerals and Arabic figures are to be taken as a part of the English language.

The designation of the year by numeral figures with A. D. prefixed, held sufficient in an indictment: State v. Seamons, 1 G. Gr., 418.

23. Computing time. In computing time, the first day shall be excluded and the last included, unless the last falls on Sunday, in which case the time prescribed shall be extended so as to include the whole of the following Monday. [C., '73, § 45; R., § 4121; C., '51, § 2513.]

Calendar months are to be computed by reckoning from a given day to the day of a corresponding number where there is one: Parkhill v. Brighton, 61-103.

In computing the number of days that a process has been served before return day the day of service should be included and the day of return excluded: Dilts v. Zeigler, 1 G. Gr., 164.

Where sixty days from March 17th were given in which to file bill of exceptions, held, that a bill filed on May 17th could not be considered: McCoid v. Rafferty, 84-532.

In computing time the first day shall be excluded and the last included: Richardson v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 8-260; Teucher v. Hiatt, 23-527; Manning v. Irish, 47-650; Bonney v. Cocke, 61-303.

The words "from and after," used in a contract with reference to an act done, are inclusive, but with reference to a day named are exclusive; therefore where it was agreed in the sale of a stock of goods that plaintiff should have the proceeds of sales from and after a certain date it was held that plaintiff was not entitled to the proceeds of the sales of the day named: Chicago Title and Trust Co. v. Smyth, 62 N. W., 792.

But under a provision that notice shall be served in such time as to leave at least ten days between the day of service and the first day of the next term, both the day of service and the first day of the term should be excluded from the computation: Robinson v. Foster, 12-186.

In such case, where the first day of the term falls on Monday, Sunday is not to be excluded from the computation: Ibid.

The law does not recognize parts of a day. Therefore, held, that notes of evidence filed with the clerk on the same day as the entry of a judgment in a contempt proceeding, but two hours later, would be deemed filed in connection with the entering of the judgment: Small v. Wakefield, 84-533.

Where it was provided that a tenancy should terminate upon ten days' notice, held, that notice being given on the last day of April, an action brought on the 10th day of May was premature, and that the day of service of the notice must be excluded: Aiken v. Appleby, Mor., 8.

The provision that the last day, if it falls on Sunday, shall be excluded in any computation, applies only where it is required that some act shall be done on the last day. Under the statutory provision that a petition shall be filed ten days before the first day of the term, held, that Sunday should be included in the computation, although it was the last day before the first day of the term: Conklin v. Marshalltown, 66-122.

Section applied in determining whether a bill of exceptions was filed within the ninety days allowed therefor: Sheldon Bank v. Royce, 84-288. And see Ritchey v. Fisher, 85-560.

Provisions as to computation of time applied: Holbrook v. Mill Owners Mut. Ins. Co., 86-255.

Where the compensation of an officer is provided for by the day, he is entitled to compensation for each day on which he is required to render services, and is not to be limited to pro rata compensation for the number of hours actually employed in such service: White v. Dallas County, 87-563.

24. Consanguinity and affinity. Degrees of consanguinity and affinity shall be computed according to the civil law. [C., '73, § 45; R., § 4124.]

Applied: Martindale v. Kendrick, 4 G. Gr., 307.

25. Clerk—clerk's office. The word "clerk" means clerk of the court in which the action or proceeding is brought or is pending; and the words "clerk's office" means his office. [C., '73, § 45; R., § 4123.]

Where papers are prepared for the district court and the law requires them to be filed, it is unnecessary for the clerk to give his full official title, as the word "clerk" after his name designates him as the clerk of the court in which the action is brought or pending: Wetmore v. Marsh, 81-677.

26. Population. The word "population," where used in this code or any statute hereafter passed, shall be taken to be that as shown by the last preceding state or national census, unless otherwise specially provided.

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE CODE AND ITS OPERATION.

SECTION 49. Citations—repeal of prior statutes. In citations, this revision of the laws shall be given as the "Code," adding chapter or section, as required. All public and general statutes adopted prior to the present extra session of the general assembly, except acts appropriating money when the same has not been fully paid out, and all public and special acts the subjects whereof are herein revised or which are repugnant hereto, are repealed, subject to the limitations and exceptions hereinafter expressed, but local acts are repealed only by express terms or on account of repugnancy. [C., '73, §§ 46–8; R., §§ 30–2; C., '51, §§ 27–9.]

While each title of the Code of '73 was separately enacted, held, that the whole Code should, for the purpose of construction, be regarded as having been enacted at the same time, and sections in different titles relating to the same matter must be read and construed together and such construction adopted, if consistent with the language used, as would give force and effect to both sections: Hunt v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 67–742.

The provisions of the Revision and session laws prior to the Code in reference to swamp lands being "public and special acts," and not revised in the Code, held not to be repealed thereby: Gray v. Mount, 45–591.

Under this provision, all public and general statutes passed prior to the enactment of the Code and not therein re-enacted are repealed: Staples v. Plymouth County, 62–364.

Under the corresponding provision of the Revision, held, that the prior act relating to the jurisdiction of counties bordering on the Mississippi river was not thereby repealed, although not embraced in the Revision: State v. Mullen, 35–199.

A general statute making regulations upon a particular subject inconsistent with those in special act of incorporation of a city repeals the provisions in such special act: State v. Harris, 10–441.

The Revision of 1860 was not, as a whole, enacted by the general assembly. Those parts not enacted in the code of civil practice and the code of criminal practice, or other acts adopted at the same session, were simply a compilation by the commissioners of the laws then in force, and, in case of an error in such compilation, the original statutes prevailed and were not to be deemed repealed: State v. Lee, 37–402.

The provisions of the Revision relating to boats and rafts were repealed by the enactment of the corresponding section of the Code of '73 on the subject: Seippel v. Blake, 86–51.

The recording of a deed in a county to which another county is attached is an act done which remains valid notwithstanding the repeal of a statute by virtue of which such annexation was made: Meagher v. Drury, 89–366.

SEC. 50. Code—when take effect—publication. The code shall take effect ninety days after the final adjournment of the extra session of the twenty-sixth general assembly, until which time existing statutes continue in force, and nothing contained in this title in relation to the preparation and publication of the statutes shall be construed as including the code. [C., '73, § 49; R., § 49; C., '51, § 30.]

SEC. 51. Existing rights not affected. This repeal of existing statutes shall not affect any act done, any right accruing or which has accrued or been established, nor any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the time when such repeal takes effect; but the proceedings in such cases shall be conformed to the provisions of the code as far as consistent. [C., '73, § 50; R., § 34; C., '51, §§ 31, 2514.]

The general assembly cannot alter, change or repeal statutes relating to the remedy so as to substantially impair a vested right; therefore, where a mortgage and a mechanic's lien upon the same property attached under the Revision, held, in an action brought under the Code of '73, that the mortgagee had a right to have his lien determined and enforced as against the holder of the mechanic's lien, in accordance with the provisions of the Revision: Brodt v. Rohkar, 48–36.

A construction of the statute of limitations which would extend the time on debts existing before the adoption of the Code of '73 and on which the previous statute of limitations had commenced to run, to the full period after the taking effect of that Code, was held not admissible, for the reason that it would affect a right accrued under the debt: McDonald v. Jackson, 55–37.

A change made by the Code of '73 in the law as to the liability of railroad companies for injuries in certain cases, held not to apply in a case where the injury was received before that Code took effect: Payne v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 44–236.

A judgment being rendered before the taking effect of the Code of '73 against the husband, under which certain property of the wife, being in his possession, was liable as the law then stood, held, that such property might still be taken upon execution issued after the taking effect of that Code, although by its provisions the property of the wife would not have been liable under similar circumstances: Schmidt v. Holtz, 44–446.

Where an original notice was served before the taking effect of the Code of '73, but the second day of the next term occurred after that time, held, that the provisions of that Code would govern the time of pleading: Brotherton v. Brotherton, 41–112; Connable v. Colvin, 41–93.

The right of a party to a trial by jury, in an action commenced prior to the taking effect of the Code of '73, held, not to be affected by any change made by that Code: Wormley v. Hamburg, 46–144. So held in an action for divorce in which, under the Revision, the parties were entitled to a jury trial: Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 40–448.

The provisions of the Code of '73 held applicable as to the admissibility of evidence in a particular case commenced before it went into effect: Wood v. Brolliar, 40–591.

An order being made before the Code of '73 took effect for a special term of court to be held after that time, and that fifteen jurors be called (the proper number under Revision), held, that such order was an "act done" so as to be valid, although the proper number under the Code of '73 was twenty-four: Fifield v. Chick, 39–651.

As to the effect of the Code of '73 upon penalties or taxes delinquent before it took effect, see Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41–153, 190.

Under Revision, § 4172, held, that proceedings to enforce a judgment should be governed by the law in force when they were commenced and not by that under which the judgment was rendered; a judgment not being "an action:" Gray v. Iliff, 30–195.

Under a similar provision in the Code of '51, held, that, where an action was brought prior to its adoption, but judgment therein was not rendered until after that time, the defendant's homestead exemption should be governed by the provisions of the law under which the action was commenced: Helfenstein v. Cave, 3–287.

And see § 48, ¶ 1, and notes.

SEC. 52. Same. No offense committed, and no penalty or forfeiture incurred under any statute hereby repealed and before the repeal takes effect, shall be affected by the repeal; except that, when a punishment, penalty or forfeiture is mitigated by the provisions herein contained, such provisions shall be applied to a judgment to be pronounced after the repeal. [C., '73, § 51; R., § 35; C., '51, § 32.]

SEC. 53. Same. No suit or prosecution pending when this repeal takes effect, for an offense committed, or for the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture incurred, shall be affected by the repeal, but the proceedings may be conformed to the provisions of the code as far as consistent. [C., '73, § 52; R., § 36; C., '51, § 33.]

SEC. 54. Heretofore and hereafter. The terms "heretofore" and "hereafter," as used in the code, have relation to the time when the same takes effect. [C., '73, § 53; R., § 38; C., '51, § 35.]

Applied: Bennett v. Bevard, 6–82; Davenport v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 37–624; Rivers v. Cole, 38–677; Thatcher v. Haun, 12–303.

The expression "prior to the passage" of an act means prior to its taking effect: Rogers v. Vass, 6–405; Charless v. Lamberson, 1–435.

It is proper to make a curative act applicable to all acts described therein, intermediate the taking effect of the act and its passage: Shearer v. Mills, 35–499.

CHAPTER 5.

SUBMISSION OF CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

SECTION 55. Publication—record kept. Whenever any proposition to amend the constitution has passed the general assembly and been referred to the next succeeding legislature, the secretary of state shall cause the same to be published in two newspapers of general circulation in each congressional district in the state, for the time required by the constitution; and proof of the publication shall be made by the affidavits of the publishers thereof, and such affidavits, with the certificate of the secretary of state of the selection of such newspapers therefor, shall be filed in his office, recorded in a book kept for that purpose, and preserved, and he shall report to the following legislature his action in the premises. [16 G. A., ch. 144, § 1.]

SEC. 56. Submission to vote—results declared—record. Whenever a proposition to amend the constitution shall have been adopted by two succeeding general assemblies, if no other time is fixed by the last general assembly adopting the same for its submission to the people, it shall be done at the ensuing general election, in the manner required by law, and the board of state canvassers shall declare the result and enter the same of record in the book mentioned in the preceding section, immediately following and in connection with the proofs of publication. [19 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 144, § 2.]

SEC. 57. Proclamation of submission. Whenever a proposition to amend the constitution is submitted to a vote of the electors, the governor shall include such proposed amendment in his election proclamation. [16 G. A., ch. 144, § 3.]

SEC. 58. Submission at special election. The general assembly may provide for the submission of constitutional amendments to the people at a special election for that purpose, at such time as it may prescribe, proclamation for which election shall be made by the governor, and the same shall in all respects be governed and conducted as prescribed by law for the submission of constitutional amendments at a general election. [19 G. A., ch. 7, § 2.]

SEC. 59. Expense. Expenses incurred under the provisions of this chapter shall be audited and allowed by the executive council, and paid out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated. [16 G. A., ch. 144, § 4.]

TITLE II.

OF THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE GOVERNOR.

SECTION 60. Office—secretary. The governor shall keep his office at the seat of government, in which shall be transacted the business of the executive department of the state, and he shall keep a secretary at said office during his absence. [C., '73, § 53.]

SEC. 61. Must keep journal. He shall cause a journal to be kept in the executive office, in which a record shall be made of each official act as done, except if in cases of emergency an act is done away from the office, such entry shall be made as soon thereafter as may be; and he shall cause a like military record to be kept of his acts done as commander-in-chief. [C., '73, §§ 56, 57.]

SEC. 62. May offer rewards for arrests. Whenever the governor is satisfied that a crime has been committed within the state, punishable by death or by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of ten years or more, and that the person charged therewith has not been arrested or has escaped from arrest, he may, in his discretion, offer a reward not exceeding five hundred dollars for the arrest and delivery to the proper authorities of the person so charged, which reward, upon the certificate of the governor that the same has been earned, shall be audited and paid by the state. [C., '73, § 58; R., § 57.]

The board of supervisors has no authority to offer a reward for the arrest of a criminal, but it may for the recovery of funds stolen from the county: Hawk v. Hamilton County, 48–472. Nor has a city any authority to offer such reward: Hanger v. Des Moines, 52–193.

SEC. 63. May employ counsel. Whenever the governor is satisfied that an action or proceeding has been commenced which may affect the rights or interests of the state, he may employ counsel to protect such rights or interests; and when any civil action or proceeding has been or is about to be commenced by the proper officer in behalf of the state, he may employ additional counsel to assist in the cause. [C., '73, § 59; R., § 44; C., '51, § 40.]

SEC. 64. Expenses. The expenses thus incurred, and those caused in executing the laws, may be allowed by him and paid from the contingent fund. [C., '73, § 60; R., § 45; C., '51, § 41.]

SEC. 65. Salaries. The salary of the governor shall be three thousand dollars per annum; and that of his secretary, fifteen hundred dollars per annum. [21 G. A., ch. 118, § 1; C., '73, § 3755; R., § 41; C., '51, § 37.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

SECTION 66. Duties—records to be kept. The secretary of state shall keep his office at the seat of government, and perform all duties required of him by law; he shall have charge of and keep all the acts and resolutions of the territorial legislature and of the general assembly of the state, the enrolled copy of the constitutions of the state, and all bonds, books, records; maps, registers and papers which are now or may hereafter be deposited to be kept in his office, including all books, records, papers and property pertaining to the state land office. [18 G. A., ch. 206, § 2; C., '73, § 61; R., § 59; C., '51, § 42.]

SEC. 67. Records relating to cities and towns. He shall receive and preserve in his office all papers transmitted to him in relation to the incorporation of cities and towns, or the annexation of territory thereto, or the consolidation or abandonment of municipal corporations; and shall keep an alphabetical list of said cities and towns in a book provided for that purpose, in which shall be entered the name of the town or city, the character of the same, whether town or city, the county in which situated, and the date of organization. [C., '73, § 65; R., § 1046.]

SEC. 68. Must countersign and register commissions. All commissions issued by the governor shall be countersigned by the secretary, who shall register each commission in a book to be kept for that purpose, specifying the office, name of officer, date of commission, and tenure of office. [C., '73, § 62; R., § 60; C., '51, § 44.]

SEC. 69. Must report criminal statistics. He shall report to the governor, before each regular session of the general assembly, an abstract for each year of the criminal returns received from the clerks of the several district courts, embracing all the facts contained in such returns. [C., '73, § 63, R., § 64, C., '51, § 48.]

SEC. 70. Must publish and distribute "Iowa Official Register." He is hereby authorized and directed to compile and publish, annually, fifteen thousand copies of the "Iowa Official Register," to contain historical, political and other statistics and facts of general value, but nothing of a partisan character. [24 G. A., ch. 64, § 1.]

SEC. 71. Distribution of register. The distribution shall be as follows: To members of the general assembly last elected, sixty copies each; the balance to be distributed to the newspapers of the state, to county and school officers, school principals, public libraries, colleges, seminaries and state institutions, and other citizens or institutions, either private or public, at the discretion of the secretary of state. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 72. Records of land office—how kept. The books and records of the land office shall be so kept as to show and preserve an accurate chain of title from the general government to the purchaser of each smallest subdivision of land; to preserve a permanent record, in books suitably indexed, of all correspondence with any of the departments of the general government in relation to state lands; to preserve, by proper records, copies of the original lists furnished by the selecting agents of the state, and of all other papers in relation to such lands which are of permanent interest. [C., '73, § 83; R., §§ 92, 95.]

SEC. 73. Separate books for separate grants. Separate tract books shall be kept for the university lands, the saline lands, the half million acre grant, the sixteenth sections, the swamp lands, and such other lands as the state now owns or may hereafter own, so that each description of state lands shall be kept separate from all others, and each set of tract books shall be a complete record of all the lands to which they relate. [C., '73, § 84; R., § 94.]

SEC. 74. Tract books—how ruled. Said tract books shall be ruled in a manner similar to those used in the United States land offices, so as to record each tract by its smallest legal subdivisions, its section, township and range, to whom sold, and when, the price per acre, to whom patented, and when. [C., '73, § 85; R., § 92.]

SEC. 75. Land office—how kept—clerk—duties—copies furnished. The land office shall be kept open during business hours, and shall have the personal supervision of the clerk thereof; the documents and records therein shall be subject to inspection, in his presence, by parties having an interest therein, and certified copies thereof, signed by the secretary with the seal of his office attached, shall be deemed presumptive evidence of the facts to which they relate, and on request they shall be furnished by him for a reasonable compensation. [C., '73, § 86.]

SEC. 76. Patents—how issued—what to contain. Patents for lands shall issue from the land office, shall be signed by the governor and recorded by the secretary; and each patent shall contain therein a marginal certificate of the book and page on which it is recorded, which certificate shall be signed by the secretary, and all patents shall be delivered free of charge. [C., '73, § 87; R., § 97.]

SEC. 77. Patents—on what conditions issued. No patents shall be issued for any lands belonging to the state, except upon the certificate of the person or officer specially charged with the custody of the same, setting forth the appraised value per acre, name of person to whom sold, date of sale, price per acre, amount paid, name of person making final payment, and of person who is entitled to the patent, and, if thus entitled by assignment from the original purchaser, setting forth fully such assignment, which certificate shall be filed and preserved in the land office. [C., '73, § 88; R., §§ 98, 99.]

SEC. 78. Secretary to make corrections—effect of. The secretary is authorized and required to correct all clerical errors of his office in name of grantee and description of tract of land conveyed by the state, found upon the records of such office; he shall attach his official certificate to each conveyance so corrected, giving the reasons therefor; record the same with the record of the original conveyance, and make the necessary corrections in the tract and plat books of his office. Such corrections, when made in accordance with the foregoing provisions, shall have the force and effect of a deed originally correct, subject to prior rights accrued without notice. [C., '73, § 89.]

SEC. 79. Maps, field notes, etc., to be kept. The secretary of state shall receive and safely keep in his office, as public records, any field notes, maps, records or other papers relating to the public survey of this state, whenever turned over to the state in pursuance of law; the United States at all times to have free access thereto for the purpose of taking extracts therefrom or making copies thereof. [C., '73, § 90.]

SEC. 80. Governor to relinquish color of title. Whenever the governor is satisfied by the commissioner of the general land office that the title to any lands which may have been certified to the state under any of the several grants is inferior to the rights of any valid interfering pre-emptor or claimant, he is authorized and required to release by deed of relinquishment such color of title to the United States, to the end that the requirements of the interior department may be complied with, and that such tract or tracts of land may be patented by the general government to the legal claimants. [C., '73, § 91.]

SEC. 81. Governor to correct errors. Whenever the governor is satisfied by proper record evidence that any tract of land which may have been deeded by virtue of any donation or sale to the state is not the land intended to have been described, and that an error has been committed in making out the transfers, in order that such error may be corrected, he is authorized to quitclaim the same to the proper owner thereof, and to receive a deed or deeds for the lands intended to have been deeded to the state originally. [C., '73, § 92.]

SEC. 82. Secretary to make lists of lands—effect of. In cases where lands have been granted to the state of Iowa by act of congress, and certified lists of lands inuring under the grant have been made to the state by the commissioner of the general land office, as required by act of congress, and such lands have been granted, by act of the general assembly, to any person or company, and such person or company shall have complied with and fulfilled the conditions of the grant, the secretary of state is hereby authorized to prepare, on the application of such person or company, or on the application of a party claiming title to any land through such person or company, a list or lists of lands situated in each county inuring to such applicant, from the lists certified by the commissioner of the general land office, as aforesaid, which shall be signed by the governor of the state, and attested by the secretary of state, with the state seal, and then be certified to by the secretary to be true and correct copies of the lists made to this state, and deliver them to such applicant, who is hereby authorized to have them recorded in the proper county, and when so recorded they shall be notice to all persons the same as deeds now are, and shall be evidence of title in such grantee, or his or its assigns, to the lands therein described, under the grant of congress by which the lands were certified to the state, so far as the certified lists made by the commissioner aforesaid conferred title to the state; but where lands embraced in such lists are not of the character embraced by such acts of congress or the acts of the general assembly of the state, and are not intended to be granted thereby, the lists, so far as these lands are concerned, shall be void; but lands in litigation shall not be included in such lists until the actions are determined and such lands adjudged to be the property of the company; nor shall the secretary include, in any of the lists so certified to the state, lands which have been adjudicated by the proper courts to belong to any other grant, or adjudicated to belong to any county or individual under the swamp-land grant, or any homestead or pre-emption settlement; nor shall said certificate so issued confer any right or title as against any person or company having any vested right, either legal or equitable, to any of the lands so certified. [19 G. A., ch. 123; 18 G. A., ch. 167; C., '73, § 93.]

If the certificate provided for in this section is introduced it dispenses with all other proof, and makes at least a prima facie case. In the absence of such certificate the party must prove the selection of the lands, that they are within the grant, and the construction of the road, so as to entitle the grantee to the lands under the act. But whilst the certificate establishes the title of the grantee, it is not essential to such title: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lewis, 53–101.

As to recording railway land grant titles, see §§ 2939, 2940.

SEC. 83. Secretary to issue patents for university lands. The secretary of state is hereby authorized to issue patents for lands, the legal title to which is vested in the state university, in cases wherein it is shown to the satisfaction of the governor and attorney-general that such lands have been in fact sold by the authority of the state and paid for, and that the certificates of purchase have been lost or destroyed. [21 G. A., ch. 178, § 1.]

SEC. 84. Effect of such patents. The patents thus issued shall inure to the benefit of the original purchaser and his grantees only, and a clause to this effect shall be inserted in the patent. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 85. Fees to be collected by secretary. He shall collect the following fees for services: For each commission to commissioners in other states, and to notaries public, five dollars; for certificate, with seal attached, one dollar; for a copy of any law or record, upon the request of any private person or corporation, for every hundred words, ten cents; he shall also collect such other fees as directed by law. [21 G. A., ch. 125; C., '73, § 3756; R., § 4133; C., '51, § 2524.]

SEC. 86. Salary of secretary. The salary of the secretary of state shall be twenty-two hundred dollars per annum. [C., '73, § 3756; R., § 58; C., '51, § 42.]

SEC. 87. Deputy—qualification—bond—duties—salary. He may appoint, in writing, any person, except one holding a state office, as deputy, for whose acts he shall be responsible, and from whom he shall require bonds, which appointment and bond must be approved by the officer having the approval of the principal's bond, and such appointment may be revoked in the same manner,—both the appointment and revocation to be filed with and kept by such officer. The deputy shall qualify by taking the oath of the principal, to be indorsed upon and filed with the certificate of appointment, and when so qualified he shall, in the absence or disability of the secretary, perform all the duties of the secretary pertaining to his office, and shall receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year. [21 G. A., ch. 118, § 2; C., '73, §§ 776–8, 770, 3756; R., §§ 642–4, 647; C., '51, §§ 411, 412, 413, 416.]

SEC. 88. Clerk for land department—salary. He shall be allowed one clerk to perform the work pertaining to the land department and such other duties as he may direct, whose salary shall be twelve hundred dollars per annum. [18 G. A., ch. 206, §§ 3, 4.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE AUDITOR OF STATE.

SECTION 89. Office—duties. The auditor shall keep his office at the seat of government. He is the general accountant of the state, and it is his duty:

1. To keep accounts with others. To keep and state all accounts between the state and the United States, or any other state, or any public officer of the state, or person indebted to the state or intrusted with the collection, disbursement or management of funds belonging to the same, when they are payable to or from the state treasury;

2. To make settlements with officers. To settle the accounts of all county treasurers and receivers of state revenues payable into the state treasury, for each of their official terms, separately;

3. To keep accounts of revenues. To keep fair, clear and separate accounts of all the revenue, funds and incomes of the state payable into the state treasury, and of all disbursements and investments thereof, showing the particulars of the same;

4. To settle with debtors. To settle the accounts of all public debtors for debts due the state treasury, and to require such persons, or their legal representatives, who have not accounted to settle their accounts;

5. To settle with creditors. To settle all claims against the treasury, and, when a claim is recognized by law for which no appropriation has been made, to give the claimant a certificate thereof, and report the same to the general assembly;

6. To superintend and enforce collections. To direct and superintend the payment of all money payable into the state treasury, and cause to be instituted and prosecuted the proper actions for the recovery of debts and other moneys so payable;

7. To superintend fiscal affairs—furnish forms to officers. To superintend the fiscal affairs of the state, and secure their management as required by law; to furnish proper instructions, directions and forms to the county auditors and treasurers, in compliance with which they shall severally keep their accounts relating to the revenue of the state, and perform the duties of their several offices; also forms for the reports required to be made by said officers to such auditor, and of receipts to be given by such treasurers to the taxpayers, and such officers shall conform in all respects to the forms and directions thus prescribed;

8. To draw warrants—form of—report to treasurer. To draw warrants on the treasurer for money directed by law to be paid out of the treasury, as the same may become payable. Each warrant shall bear on the face thereof its proper number, date, amount, name of payee, and a reference to the law under which it is drawn, which particulars shall be entered in a book kept for that purpose, in the order of issuance; and, as soon as practicable after issuing such warrant, he shall certify the above particulars to the treasurer;

The auditor is required to issue warrants without regard to the fact that there may be no money in the treasury to pay them: State v. Sherman, 46–415.

The court cannot, by mandamus, compel the auditor to allow a particular sum on the settlement of a claim, but he can be compelled to issue a warrant for whatever sum he does audit or allow: Bryan v. Cattell, 15–538.

Under provisions of § 120 of Code of '73 (as amended) which are made more specific in the present Code (see § 170), held, that if an expenditure was authorized by law, and necessary, and there was no appropriation therefor, the executive council might give a certificate, upon which it would be the duty of the auditor to issue a warrant: Prime v. McCarthy, 92–569.

9. To have custody of securities. To have the custody of all books, papers, records, documents, vouchers, conveyances, leases, mortgages, bonds and other securities appertaining to the fiscal affairs and property of the state, which are not required to be kept in some other office;

10. To furnish information. To furnish the governor, on his requisition, information in writing upon any subject connected with his office, and to suggest to the general assembly plans for the improvement and management of the public revenue and property;

11. To report fiscal condition of state To report to the governor before each regular session of the general assembly a complete statement of the revenue, funds, income, taxable property and other resources and property of the state, and of the public revenues and expenditures since his last report, with a detailed statement of the expenditures to be defrayed from the treasury for the term following that covered by his report, specifying each object of expenditure, and distinguishing between such as are provided for by appropriations and such as are not, and showing the probable deficiency of any former appropriations;

12. To apportion school fund interest. He shall, on the first Monday of March and September of each year, apportion the interest of the permanent school fund among the several counties in proportion to the number of persons between five and twenty-one years of age in each, as shown by the last report filed with him by the superintendent of public instruction. [22 G. A., ch. 82, § 27; C., '73, § 66; R., §§ 71, 1967; C., '51, § 50.]

SEC. 90. To divide warrants on request. When the amount due from the state to any person exceeds twenty dollars, the auditor shall, if requested, divide the amount into parcels of not less than ten dollars, and issue warrants therefor. [C., '73, § 67; R., § 72; C., '51, § 51.]

SEC. 91. May require statements from others. The auditor may at any time require any person receiving money, securities or property belonging to the state, or having the management, disbursement or other disposition of the same, an account of which is kept in his office, to render statements thereof and information in reference thereto. Any such person refusing or neglecting to render such statement or information shall forfeit twenty-five dollars, to be recovered by civil action in the name of the state. [C., '73, § 68; R., § 73; C., '51, § 52.]

SEC. 92. Presentation of claims — limitation — examination of claimant. Every claim against the state shall be presented to the auditor for settlement within two years after it accrues, and, if thereafter presented, the same shall not be audited. When a claim is presented, the auditor is authorized to examine the claimant and any other persons, under oath, touching such claim, or cause them to verify the same by affidavit or deposition. [C., '73, § 69; R., § 74; C., '51, § 53.]

SEC. 93. Duty as to officers failing to account. If any officer who is accountable to the treasury for any money or property neglects to render an account to the auditor within the time prescribed by law, or, if no time is so prescribed, then, within twenty days after being required so to do by the auditor, the auditor shall state an account against him from the books of the auditor's office, charging ten per cent. damages on the whole sum appearing due, and interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum on the aggregate from the time when the account should have been rendered; all of which may be recovered by an action brought on such account, or on the official bond of such officer. [C., '73, § 70; R., § 75; C., '51, § 54.]

SEC. 94. Duty as to officers failing to pay. If any such officer fails to pay into the treasury the amount received by him within the time prescribed by law, or, having settled with the auditor, fails to pay the amount found due, the auditor shall charge such officer with twenty per cent. damages on the amount due, with interest on the aggregate from the time the same became due at the rate of six per cent. per annum, and the whole may be recovered by an action brought on such account, or on the official bond of such officer, and he shall forfeit his commission. [C., '73, § 71; R., § 76; C., '51, § 55.]

SEC. 95. Such officers may defend—costs. The penal provisions in the two preceding sections are subject to any legal defense which the officer may have against the account as stated by the auditor, but judgment for costs shall be rendered against the officer in the action, whatever be its result, unless he rendered an account within the time named in the two preceding sections. [C., '73, § 72; R., § 77; C., '51, § 56.]

SEC. 96. County treasurers seeking credit—conditions. When a county treasurer or other receiver of public money seeks to obtain credit on the books of the auditor's office for payment made to the treasurer, before giving such credit, the auditor shall require him to take and subscribe an oath that he has not used, loaned or appropriated any of the public money for his private benefit, nor the benefit of any other person. [C., '73, § 73; R., § 78; C., '51, § 57.]

SEC. 97. Requisitions for accounts—civil action. In those cases where the auditor is authorized to call upon persons or officers for information, or statements, or accounts, he may issue his requisition therefor in writing to the person or officer called upon, allowing reasonable time, which, having been served and return made thereon to the auditor as a notice in a civil action, shall be evidence of the making of the requisition therein expressed. [C., '73, § 74; R., § 79; C., '51, § 58.]

SEC. 98. Salary of auditor. The salary of the auditor of state shall be twenty-two hundred dollars per annum. [C., '73, § 3757; R., § 70; C., '51, § 49.]

SEC. 99. Deputy—qualification—bond—duties—salary. The auditor may appoint, in writing, any person, except one holding a state office, as deputy, for whose acts he shall be held responsible, and from whom he shall require bond, which appointment and bond must be approved by the officer having the approval of the principal's bond, and such appointment may be revoked in the same manner,—both the appointment and revocation to be filed and kept in the office of the secretary of state. The deputy shall qualify by taking the oath of the principal, to be indorsed upon and filed with the certificate of appointment, and when so qualified he shall, in the absence or disability of the auditor, perform all the duties of the auditor pertaining to his office, and receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year. [21 G. A., ch. 118, § 3; C., '73, §§ 766–8, 770, 3757; R., §§ 642–4, 647; C., '51, §§ 411, 412, 413, 416.]

SEC. 100. Collect fees from banks, etc. He shall collect such fees as are provided for in the chapters on insurance, banks and building and loan associations. [C., '73, § 3757.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE TREASURER OF STATE.

SECTION 101. Office—accounts. The treasurer shall keep his office at the seat of government, and shall keep an accurate account of the receipts and disbursements at the treasury in books kept for that purpose, in which he shall specify the names of the persons from whom money is received, and on what account, and the time thereof. [C., '73, § 75; R., § 83; C., '51, § 62.]

SEC. 102. Record and payment of warrants. He shall enter in a book the memorandum of warrants issued as certified to him by the auditor, and receive in payment of public dues the warrants so issued in conformity with law, and redeem the same, if there be money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, and on receiving any such warrant shall cause the person presenting it to indorse it, and shall write on the face thereof "redeemed," and enter in the book containing the auditor's memoranda, in appropriate columns, the name of the person to whom paid, date of payment, and amount of interest paid. [C., '73, § 76; R., § 84; C., '51, § 63.]

SEC. 103. To give receipts. When money is paid him, the treasurer shall execute receipts in duplicate therefor, stating the fund to which it belongs, one of which must be delivered to the auditor in order to obtain the proper credit, and the treasurer must be charged therewith. [C., '73, § 77; R., § 85; C., '51, § 64.]

SEC. 104. Payment of warrants—interest on when no funds. He shall pay no money from the treasury but upon the warrants of the auditor, and only in the order of their presentation; or, if there is no money in the treasury from which such warrants can be paid, he shall, upon request of the holder, indorse upon the warrant the date of its presentation and sign it, from which time the warrant shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until the time directed in the next section. [C., '73, § 78; R., § 86; C., '51, § 65.]

SEC. 105. Record of unpaid warrants—notice to stop interest. He shall keep a record of the number and amount of the warrants so presented and indorsed for non-payment, and, when there are funds in the treasury for their payment to an amount sufficient to render it advisable, he shall give notice to what number of warrants the funds will extend, or the number which he will pay, by three insertions in a newspaper printed at the seat of government. At the expiration of thirty days from the day of the last publication, interest on the warrants so named as being payable shall cease. [C., '73, § 79; R., § 87; C., '51, § 66.]

SEC. 106. Must report to and account with auditor. Once in each week he shall certify to the auditor the number, date, amount and payee of each warrant taken up by him, with the date when taken up, and the amount of interest allowed; and on the first Monday of January, April and July, and the first day of October, annually, he is directed to account with the auditor and deposit in his office all such warrants received at the treasury, and take the auditor's receipt therefor. [17 G. A., ch. 116; C., '73, § 80; R., § 88; C., '51, § 67.]

SEC. 107. Must report to governor. As soon as practicable after the first Monday of November preceding the regular session of the general assembly, he shall report to the governor the state of the treasury up to the first day of July preceding, exhibiting the amount received and paid out by the treasurer since his last report, and the balance remaining in the treasury. [22 G. A., ch. 82, § 28; C., '73, § 81; R., § 89; C., '51, § 68.]

SEC. 108. Interest on bonds—how payable. When interest on any bonds of the state becomes due, the treasurer shall provide funds for the payment thereof on the day and at the place where payable; and persons holding such bonds are required to present the same at such place within ten days from such day, at the expiration of which time the funds remaining unexpended and vouchers for interest paid shall be returned to the treasury. [C., '73, § 82.]

SEC. 109. Moneys appropriated—how drawn—limitations. All moneys now or hereafter appropriated by general or special act shall be drawn in accordance with the provisions of such act, and in no case shall such money or any part thereof be drawn until the same is needed for use within thirty days from the date of the requisition, for the purpose for which the appropriation was made. If a larger sum is thus drawn than is needed for use within such thirty days, the amount not needed shall be forthwith returned to the state treasury. [23 G. A., ch. 31, § 1.]

SEC. 110. Duties of officers drawing appropriations. The treasurer, or other officer of any state institution authorized to draw any appropriation made by the general assembly, shall forward with the requisition for the same a certified statement of the amount of funds then in his hands, and the sum or sums required for expenditure as provided by the act making such appropriation, within thirty days from the time of making such requisition, and such treasurer or other officer shall, in the printed report made by the board or other body in charge of such institution to the general assembly, governor or other officer to whom a report is required to be made, make a verified statement, showing the dates and sums drawn by such requisitions, and the total amount of such money actually paid out by him for each month of the biennial period. [Same, §§ 2–4.]

SEC. 111. Banks as depositaries. The treasurer of state, with the advice and approval of the executive council, may designate one or more banks in the city of Des Moines as a depositary for the collection of any drafts, checks and certificates of deposit that may be received by him on account of any claim due the state. [17 G. A., ch. 57, § 1.]

SEC. 112. Security required. The bank or banks designated as such depositary shall be required to give security to the state, to be approved by the executive council, for the prompt collection of all drafts, checks, certificates of deposit or coupons that may be delivered to such depositary by the treasurer of state for collection; and also for the safe keeping and prompt payment, on the treasurer's order, of the proceeds of all such collections; also, for the payment of all drafts that may be issued to said treasurer by such depositary. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 113. Collections through depositaries. The treasurer of state, on the receipt of any draft, check or certificate of deposit on account of state dues, may place the same in such depositary for collection, and it shall be the duty of such depositary to collect the same without delay, and charge no greater per cent. for such collection than the minimum per cent. charged to other parties, and notify the treasurer when collected. On the receipt of such notice, the treasurer shall issue his receipt to the party entitled thereto, as now required by law. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 114. Treasurer not released. The provisions of the three preceding sections in no way release the treasurer of state or his bondsmen, or any county treasurer or his bondsmen, from any liabilities now imposed by law. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 115. Salary of treasurer. The salary of the treasurer of state shall be twenty-two hundred dollars per annum. [C., '73, § 3758; R., § 82; C., '51, § 61.]

SEC. 116. Deputy—qualification—duty—salary. The treasurer of state may appoint in writing any person, except one holding a state office, as deputy, for whose acts he shall be held responsible, and from whom he shall require bond, which appointment and bond must be approved by the officer having the approval of the principal's bond, and such appointment may be revoked in the same manner,—both the appointment and revocation to be filed and kept in the office of the secretary of state. The deputy shall qualify by taking the oath of the principal, to be indorsed upon and filed with the certificate of appointment, and, when so qualified, he shall, in the absence or disability of the treasurer, perform all of the duties of the treasurer pertaining to his office, and receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year. [21 G. A., ch. 118, § 4; C., '73, §§ 766–8, 770, 3758; R., §§ 642–4, 647; C., '51, §§ 411, 412, 413, 416.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF THE PUBLIC PRINTING AND BINDING.

SECTION 117. Printer and binder—election—tenure—duties. The state printer and binder shall each be elected at the regular sessions of the general assembly, and hold their office for two years from the first day of January in each odd-numbered year. They shall keep their respective offices at the seat of government, and sufficiently equipped to enable them promptly to print and bind the laws, journals, reports, and do all other printing and binding required for the state officers, boards or commissioners having their offices at the capitol, or by or for the general assembly; but nothing in this section shall be construed as interfering with the authority of the executive council to apportion so much of the public printing and binding as it may deem advisable to have done at the institution for the deaf and dumb. [22 G. A., ch. 82, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 118. How work to be delivered. The state printer shall promptly deliver to the state binder the printed sheets of laws, journals and other publications as the work progresses, as well as all other work requiring stitching or binding, and the state binder shall, upon completion of the work as required, deliver the same to the secretary of state, taking his receipt therefor; and it is the duty of the secretary of state to see that the proper number of copies is so delivered. All printing which does not require binding shall be promptly delivered by the state printer to the secretary of state, or the officer ordering the work. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 119. Printing—how ordered and delivered. No work shall be ordered of the state printer except upon a regular form of blank furnished by the secretary of state and kept in his office. Whenever printing is ordered by either house of the general assembly, the secretary or clerk thereof shall immediately notify the secretary of state of such order, and, when such printing is done, the same shall be delivered to the secretary of state for distribution, subject to the instructions of the house ordering the printing. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 120. Secretary of state to examine and certify work. The secretary of state, upon the completion of any printing or binding for the state, or the presentation of any bill for such printing or binding, shall make examination of the work done, and ascertain whether it has been done in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. If he finds there has been a compliance herewith, he shall certify the same, stating the amount to which the officer presenting the bill is entitled. In case such work has not been properly done, or any item of said bill has not in his judgment been earned, he shall refuse to certify as to such item, or shall state what reduced amount, if any, the officer is entitled to as compensation for such defective work. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 121. Auditor to draw warrant. The auditor of state, upon presentation to him of the foregoing certificate, shall draw his warrant upon the treasurer of state for the amount therein stated to be due. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 122. Biennial reports of officers—when made. The regular biennial reports of the various officers, inspectors, commissions, boards or other bodies required to be made by law shall be laid before the governor of the state, in the odd-numbered years, at the following times:

1. On or before August fifteenth, those of all boards of trustees of state institutions, except the agricultural college;
2. On or before September fifteenth, those of the fish commissioner, the board of health, the commission of pharmacy, the oil inspector, the mine inspectors, the visiting committee to the hospitals for the insane, the wardens of the penitentiaries, the state veterinary surgeon, and the board of curators of the historical society;

3. On or before October first, those of the state librarian, and the commissioner of labor statistics, and that of the secretary of state pertaining to the land office;

4. On or before November first, those of the auditor of state, the treasurer of state, the superintendent of public instruction, the university and the normal school;

5. On or before November fifteenth, that of the board of dental examiners;

6. On or before December first, that of the board of trustees of the agricultural college, that of the adjutant-general, and that of the secretary of state pertaining to criminal convictions. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 123. Biennial fiscal term—reports to cover. The biennial fiscal term of the state ends on the thirtieth day of June in each odd-numbered year, and the succeeding fiscal term begins on the day following; and the reports required in the preceding section shall cover the period thus indicated, except when otherwise provided by law, and shall show the condition of such offices and institutions, respectively, on that day. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 124. What to be printed—style of work. The governor shall cause the foregoing reports, and all others required by law to be made, to be printed. He shall, however, cause all reports to be carefully examined before being printed, and shall omit from the printed copy all matters he may deem not of sufficient importance to warrant publication thereof at the state's expense. Such parts of the reports as emanate from boards or officers directly required by law to report may be leaded with six-to-pica leads. All extracts copied therein, as well as reports and papers submitted therewith, shall be set in brevier or nonpareil type, with six-to-pica leads. No tables of any character shall be leaded, and all tables, rule and figure work and matter of three or more justifications shall be set in solid brevier or nonpareil type, and in as compact a form as practicable. But when any of the above work is quadded or spaced between the lines, by order of the executive council, all such quadded lines or spaces shall be deducted from the measurement. Itemized accounts of receipts and disbursements, together with inventories, accompanying the reports, shall be omitted from the printed report, unless the governor deem the same of sufficient importance to warrant their publication. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 125. Number of copies to be printed. There shall be printed of the various public documents the number of copies hereinafter designated, to wit: Of the biennial message, three thousand copies; of the inaugural address, twenty-five hundred copies; of the biennial report of the auditor of state, three thousand copies; of the report of the superintendent of public instruction, four thousand five hundred copies; of the report of the agricultural college, and of the report of the state board of health, three thousand copies each; of the report of the bureau of labor statistics, four thousand copies; of the annual report of the auditor upon insurance, six thousand copies; of the report of the commissioner of pharmacy, three thousand copies; of the report of the railroad commissioners, four thousand copies, two thousand of which shall be bound in cloth; of the report of the secretary of state pertaining to lands, fifteen hundred copies; of the report of the state visiting committee to the hospitals for the insane, two thousand copies; of the report of the state inspector of oils, and of the examiners in dentistry, two thousand copies each; of the reports of the joint committees of the general assembly to visit state institutions, fifteen hundred copies; of the proceedings of the pioneer lawmakers' association, twelve hundred copies, five hundred of which shall be delivered to the association; and of all other reports not herein specified, two thousand copies, unless the executive council shall direct a greater number to be printed, not exceeding four thousand. Of said reports, five hundred copies each of the biennial message, inaugural address, auditor's biennial report, the report of the superintendent of public instruction, agricultural college, board of health, commissioner of pharmacy, secretary of state pertaining to lands, secretary of state's report of criminal convictions, the auditor's annual report pertaining to insurance, and the report of the bureau of labor statistics, shall be bound in cloth; all other reports shall be bound in paper covers, and reports of the legislative visiting and special committees shall be printed and stitched without covers. [23 G. A., ch. 52, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 11.]

SEC. 126. Distribution of documents—by and to whom. The secretary of state shall make distribution of the various public documents turned over to him, as follows:

1. The secretary of state shall distribute to each member of the general assembly one copy of the various public documents, and, upon request, such additional number as the secretary of state may provide for, and such remaining number as is not necessary to be retained for future general assemblies shall be distributed upon special calls made therefor.

2. One thousand copies shall be stitched and bound in half-sheep, containing a copy of each report, to be arranged under the direction of the secretary of state. Some distinctive mark shall be put on the even-numbered pages of each document, to indicate its place in the bound document, with the year of the report on each odd-numbered page, and in each volume shall be placed a table of contents of all the volumes.

3. The foregoing one thousand copies shall be distributed as follows: One copy to the lieutenant-governor, to the speaker, to each member of the general assembly, to the secretary of the senate and to the clerk of the house of representatives; one copy each to the governor of the state and his private secretary, the secretary of state, the auditor of state, the treasurer of state, the attorney-general, the superintendent of public instruction, the clerk and reporter of the supreme court and each of their deputies, the commissioner of labor statistics, the adjutant-general, the custodian of the capitol, and the fish commissioner; one copy to each judge of the supreme court; one copy to each railroad commissioner, mine inspector, and commissioner of pharmacy; one copy to the state librarian, and the secretary of the board of health, respectively; one copy to each state institution, to remain therein; one copy to the office of each county auditor, to remain therein; forty copies to the historical society; one copy to each of the other states and each territory reciprocating the same, and to each foreign nation or province desiring to exchange like reports; twenty-five copies to the state library; the remaining copies to be placed under the control of the secretary of state, to be disposed of as he may see fit, the person so receiving them to pay express charges thereon.

4. He shall furnish to the library of congress two copies of all legislative journals and reports of state offices, immediately upon their publication.

5. Six hundred copies of the message, two hundred copies of each of the reports of the joint visiting committees, and five hundred copies of each of the other documents, shall remain with the state for the use of the future general assemblies, and to supply special calls therefor.

6. The copies not above disposed of shall be distributed to the officers, institutions and committees making report. [23 G. A., ch. 52, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 12; C., '73, § 64.]

SEC. 127. Daily legislative proceedings to be printed. The state printer shall be furnished daily, during the sessions of the general assembly, with a copy of the journal of each house thereof, at such hours and by such officers as may be directed by the houses, respectively, who shall thereupon print and number the pages consecutively through each session, and, after the same are properly stitched at the state bindery, deliver for the use of the senate and house, respectively, on the following legislative day, at such hours as may be prescribed by the proper officer, two hundred copies of the proceedings of the senate, and three hundred copies of those of the house of representatives. When a session is held after seven o'clock p. m., the proceedings thereof shall be furnished the printer as soon after the close of such session as practicable. [22 G. A., ch. 82, § 13.]

SEC. 128. Corrections. Upon the return to the printer, by the proper officer of each body, of the daily proceedings, corrected as shall be directed by the house to which they pertain, the printer shall correct the same, the secretary and clerk correcting the written journal, when necessary, to correspond. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 129. Stitching and distribution. He shall forthwith make the corrections indicated, print three hundred copies of the senate proceedings, and five hundred copies of the house proceedings, and deliver them to the state binder sufficiently early to permit the latter to fold, stitch and deliver them to the secretary of the senate and clerk of the house, respectively, not later than noon of the third day following that to which the proceedings pertain. Of the printed proceedings of the senate, one hundred and twenty-five copies shall be delivered to the sergeant-at-arms of the house for distribution therein, and seventy-five copies of the proceedings of the house shall be delivered to the sergeant-at-arms of the senate for distribution therein. The remaining copies shall be under the control of the respective houses for distribution. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 130. Journals to be printed and bound. He shall thereupon proceed to print two thousand copies of each of the journals. Within fifteen days after the adjournment of the general assembly, a complete and thorough index of each journal shall be delivered to the state printer, who shall forthwith print the same, and within fifteen days thereafter deliver the sheets complete to the state binder, who shall, within thirty days thereafter, bind one thousand copies of each journal in half-sheep, and one thousand in paper covers, and deliver the same to the secretary of state. [Same, § 16.]

SEC. 131. Distribution by secretary of state. The secretary of state shall make distribution of the journals of the respective houses as follows:

1. Of the bound journals of the respective houses, two copies of each shall be distributed to each member thereof; one copy each to the secretary of the senate and clerk of the house, respectively;

2. The remaining copies shall be distributed as follows: One copy each to the governor, lieutenant-governor, the state officers and deputies, as provided for the distribution of documents; also one copy of each journal to each newspaper of general circulation in the state;

3. The undistributed number shall be under the control of the secretary of state. [Same, § 17.]

SEC. 132. Original copies to be preserved. The secretary of the senate and the clerk of the house of representatives shall preserve copies of the printed daily journals of their respective bodies, as corrected, certify to their correctness, and file them with the secretary of state at the adjournment of the legislature. The secretary of state shall cause the same to be bound and preserved as the original journals of the senate and the house. [Same, § 19.]

The journals of the respective houses are competent evidence to show the proceedings of either or both of such houses: Koehler v. Hill, 60–543.

SEC. 133. Session laws to be printed. Within fifty days after the secretary of state shall deliver to the state printer a copy of the laws, joint resolutions and memorials passed at any session of the general assembly, he shall print all the copies thereof that may be by law required, and the secretary of state shall, within five days after the same are printed, make out and deliver to such printer an index of the same, who shall, within ten days after receiving such index, print the same, and deliver to the state binder such copies, in sheets, as are required for binding; but this section shall not apply to any revised code adopted by the general assembly. [Same, § 20.]

SEC. 134. Size of type, and how set, for public printing. The laws, journals and all other printing in book form shall be set in long primer, brevier or nonpareil type; the titles to the laws and resolutions, all indexes, all messages, all reports and resolutions copied in the journals, to be in brevier; rule and figure work, in either brevier or nonpareil, as may be directed by the officer ordering the work; all other matter to be in long primer, except when otherwise ordered by the officers under whose direction the work is done. Each printed page shall be paid for at actual measurement. Whenever a subject is begun, whether it be the name of member or otherwise, the subject-matter shall follow in the same line, unless such line is filled by such word. The report of each motion or resolution shall be embraced in one paragraph, and, where the yeas and nays are given, each division list shall be in one paragraph, with the names set in alphabetical order, and the result in the last line. [Same, § 21.]

SEC. 135. Paper-receipt book and samples of work to be kept. The secretary of state shall provide a state paper-receipt book, and, whenever he shall deliver to the state printer paper for any kind of printing, a receipt therefor shall be entered in said book, which receipt shall describe the kind and quality of paper, and the purpose for which it is delivered. Upon return of the work for which any paper has been delivered, he shall enter the date thereof, and the quantity so returned. He shall also preserve for not less than two years a sample of each kind of work done, together with a memorandum of the measurement of composition, the quantity of press work, price paid and date of delivery. [Same, § 22.]

SEC. 136. Report of academy of sciences—distribution. There shall be published and bound in boards, in the same form as the acts of the general assembly are, by the state and under the supervision of the Iowa academy of sciences, one thousand copies of its annual report, to contain not more than two hundred and fifty pages, to be distributed as follows: To the governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, auditor of state, state treasurer, each member of the general assembly, horticultural society, agricultural society, state library, university, agricultural college and the normal school, two copies each; to each public library and each incorporated college of the state, two copies; the remainder to be distributed by the secretary of state, as directed by the secretary of said academy, for exchange and such other purposes as the academy may specify; the exchanges and reports received to be preserved in the capitol for the benefit of the state at large. [25 G. A., ch. 86.]

SEC. 137. Proceedings of state teachers' association—distribution. There shall be published annually by the state, under the supervision of the superintendent of public instruction, fifteen hundred copies of the proceedings of the state teachers' association, to contain not more than two hundred pages, to be distributed as follows: One copy each to the governor, lieutenant-governor, auditor of state, secretary of state, treasurer of state, each member of the general assembly, each enrolled member of the state teachers' association, and each public library of the state; the remainder to be distributed by the superintendent of public instruction. [25 G. A., ch. 87.]

SEC. 138. Prices for state printing. The state printer shall be paid the following prices for all work done for the state in an acceptable manner, as hereinbefore provided, and no more:

1. For hand composition on laws, journals, reports and all other printed matter, except blanks, forty-eight cents per thousand ems, and sixty cents per thousand for figure work when figures are arranged in columns, and three or more justifications are required, and eighty cents per thousand ems for rule and figure work. But plain indexes, such as those of the statutes of this state, shall be reckoned as ordinary composition;

2. For book press work, the compensation shall be two dollars for the first one thousand impressions of sixteen pages, and one dollar and twenty-five cents per thousand for each additional one thousand impressions from the same form. If in finishing a job of press work it shall be necessary to print an eight-page form, the compensation shall be the same as for a sixteen-page form, and, if there shall not be one thousand impressions in any one book form, the compensation shall be the same as for one thousand. No extra charge shall be allowed for dry pressing of sheets, which shall be done in all cases when so directed by the secretary of state;

3. For printing blanks, including composition and press work on one side of a sheet of folio post or larger paper, two dollars and fifty cents for the first one hundred impressions; for the next four hundred impressions, forty cents for each hundred, and fifteen cents for each additional one hundred impressions above five hundred. On paper smaller than folio post, for blanks or circulars, including composition and press work, two dollars for the first one hundred impressions; for the next four hundred impressions, thirty cents for each hundred, and ten cents for each additional one hundred impressions above five hundred. When both sides of a blank can be printed at once, only one impression shall be paid for;

4. For printing one thousand copies or less of the docket for the supreme court, including press work and composition, the docket page to conform in size and form with the dockets of 1896, two dollars for each printed page contained in a single volume thereof. For printing senate or house bills, five hundred or less, including composition and press work, two dollars and twenty-five cents for each printed page contained in a single bill, and for each additional one hundred, twenty-five cents. For briefs to the supreme court, fifty copies or less, of size and form prescribed by the rules of the supreme court, ninety cents per printed page contained in a single volume. For letter heads, envelopes, labels and postal cards, including composition and press work, one dollar and fifty cents for each one thousand impressions or less, and one dollar and twenty-five cents for each additional thousand; and when postal cards are printed upon both sides, two press works shall be paid for. [22 G. A., ch. 82, § 23.]

SEC. 139. Conditions of payment. No charges of any kind shall be allowed the state printer, except as the same are expressly provided by this chapter. He shall be allowed only for press work done and type actually set up and imposed, or for paper actually printed, and he shall file with the secretary of state a copy of each job of work, on which each item of charge is made, at the time of rendering his account. Before the secretary can issue him the receipt contemplated by this chapter, the actual number of ems and number of impressions of press work in each job shall be specified, with a statement that the law has been strictly complied with, and that no unlawful charges are embraced in his account, as rendered, which statement shall be verified by the affidavit of the state printer. Where type set for messages or documents shall be used twice, the state printer shall have pay for the same but once, but he shall be allowed one dollar and fifty cents each sixteen page form where it is to be used a second time. [Same, § 24.]

SEC. 140. Indexes of legislative journals. The secretary of state shall cause indexes of the journals of the senate and house of representatives to be made, the cost thereof not to exceed the sum of fifty dollars. [Same, § 18.]

SEC. 141. Compensation of state binder. The state binder shall be paid the following prices for all work done for the state in an acceptable manner, as in this chapter provided:

1. For folding and trimming all documents not stitched, ten cents per hundred copies;

2. For folding, trimming and stitching documents not covered, fifteen cents per one hundred copies;

3. For folding, stitching, and binding in paper covers all messages, reports, documents, not exceeding one sheet, allowing sixteen pages for a sheet, eighty cents per hundred copies of sixteen pages or less, and for each additional sheet of sixteen pages or less, eighteen cents per one hundred copies, the cover not to be counted;

4. For folding, sewing, and binding in paper covers the journals of the two houses, sixteen cents per copy;

5. For folding, sewing, and binding in muslin or cases, with gilt letters, the lettering and general style of the books to be the same as reports heretofore published, fifteen cents per copy for a volume of one hundred and fifty pages or less; twenty-one cents per copy for a volume containing one hundred and fifty pages, and not more than four hundred pages, and for each additional one hundred pages or fraction thereof, four cents; for folding, sewing and binding agricultural and horticultural society reports in board covers with muslin backs, similar in style with the acts of the general assembly, eighteen cents per copy;

6. For folding, sewing, and binding in half-sheep, with gilt letters for title, the lettering and general style of the books to be the same as documents heretofore published, twenty-six cents per copy for each volume of four hundred pages or less, and four cents for each additional hundred pages or fraction thereof;

7. For folding, stitching and binding the acts and resolutions of each general assembly in boards, with muslin backs and paper sides, same as laws of 1886, ten cents per copy;

8. For folding, sewing, and binding in law sheep, same style as the reports of the supreme court, fifty cents per copy for each volume of five hundred pages or less, and four cents for each additional one hundred pages or fraction thereof;

9. For ruling he shall be allowed the sum of seventy-five cents per hour for time actually employed;

10. For binding the Iowa official register, eight cents per copy for the first ten thousand copies, and six cents per copy thereafter. [24 G. A., ch. 64, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 25.]

SEC. 142. "Sheep" construed. Wherever in this chapter the word sheep is used, it shall be construed to mean law sheep.

SEC. 143. Part payment as work progresses. At any time during the progress of the printing or binding of the laws, or the journals of either house, or any other work amounting to more than one hundred pages, the secretary of state may issue his certificate for one-half the value of the work thus far done, to be ascertained by said secretary, and, upon said certificate being presented to the auditor of state, he shall draw his warrant for the amount therein named. [22 G. A., ch. 82, § 26.]

SEC. 144. This chapter not retroactive. Nothing in this act shall be construed to in any manner affect the compensation of the present state printer and binder during the unexpired term of their offices. [Same, § 42.]

CHAPTER 6.

OF THE CUSTODIAN OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

SECTION 145. Appointment—qualification—duties. The governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint a custodian of public buildings and property, who shall have the care of the capitol, together with all the grounds and premises appurtenant thereto belonging to the state, and such custodian shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, qualify as provided by law, and execute and file with the secretary of state a bond in the penal sum of one thousand dollars, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties, with sureties thereto, to be approved by the governor. [21 G. A., ch. 148, § 1.]

SEC. 146. Term of office—vacancies. His term of office shall be for two years, which shall expire on the thirty-first day of March of each even-numbered year; but he may be removed at any time for cause by the governor. If a vacancy should occur in said office when the general assembly is not in session, it shall be filled by appointment by the governor, but the person so appointed shall hold his office only until the next general assembly shall have been permanently organized, when the vacancy shall be filled by appointment of the governor by and with the advice and consent of the senate, which appointment shall be for the unexpired portion of the term for which the appointment had been made. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 147. Duties specified. It shall be the duty of the custodian to take charge of and protect the capitol building and all furniture and other property connected therewith; to preserve the same from injury; at all proper times to open and ventilate the several apartments, and constantly to keep every part thereof cleansed and in proper order, and at all suitable hours to personally or by proper escort attend visitors who may wish to view the same, or any part thereof entrusted to his care, free of expense; to control and take care of the capitol grounds, walks, fences, trees, shrubbery, statuary and other property of the state on or about the capitol grounds or premises, and to keep the same clean and in good order; to have charge and control of all buildings and grounds belonging to the state at the seat of government, not by law placed in charge of some other person, and to protect and care for the same. [Same, § 4; 16 G. A., ch. 142, § 8; C., '73, § 120.]

SEC. 148. May employ and discharge assistants—actions for injuries. He is hereby authorized and empowered, subject to the limitations contained in this title, to employ such labor as shall be required in carrying out the duties imposed by this chapter; to have, at all times, charge of and supervision over the police and janitors in and about the capitol, not otherwise provided for, and to employ and discharge the same as the public interest may demand, and, with the advice and consent of the attorney-general, to institute in the name of the state civil or criminal proceedings against any person for injury or threatened injury to any public property under his control. [21 G. A., ch. 148, § 5.]

SEC. 149. Number and compensation of employes—report—pay. The persons employed by him, as above authorized, shall at no time exceed the maximum number, and their compensation shall not exceed the maximum amount allowed by law. At the end of each month he shall make out a list of the expenses incurred under this chapter, specifying the names of the persons employed, the time employed, the kind of labor performed, and the amount due to each, which report shall be subscribed and sworn to by him and filed with the executive council, and, when approved by it, the auditor shall issue a warrant to each person for the amount to which he is entitled. [Same, §§ 6, 9.]

SEC. 150. Record to be kept—contents—report. He shall keep in his office a complete record containing an itemized list of all property of the state under his care and control, with accurate plans and surveys of the public grounds at the seat of government, and shall make a quarterly report to the executive council on the last days of March, June, September and December, and a biennial report to the governor on the last day of December preceding each regular session of the general assembly. He shall perform all other duties imposed by law, or order of the executive council. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 151. Contents of report. Such reports shall show in detail all expenditures of every kind made by him fully itemized, the condition of all real and personal property of the state under his care or control, together with any loss or destruction of, or injury to, any such property, with the causes thereof, and measures necessary for the care and preservation of the same, and recommendations as to methods which would tend to render the service more efficient and economical. They shall also embrace any other matter ordered by the executive council. Each biennial report shall contain an inventory of all state property under his control. All reports of the custodian shall be subscribed and sworn to by him. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 152. Officers of senate and house—use and control of apartments in capitol. Either house of the general assembly may employ such officers and janitors as it shall deem necessary for the conduct of its business; and every officer, board, court or commission may control the official apartments assigned to them by the executive council, but shall have no right to employ any janitor, clerk or person, except as authorized by joint resolution as provided in this title. The senate chamber, the hall of the house of representatives and the committee rooms shall be used only for legislative purposes, and official apartments shall be used only for the purpose of conducting the business of the state. [Same, § 8; 20 G. A., ch. 140, § 2.]

SEC. 153. No interest in contracts. It shall be unlawful for the custodian to have any pecuniary interest, directly or indirectly, in any contract for supplies or labor provided for by this chapter, or any business enterprise involving any expenditure by the state; and a violation of the provisions of this section shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, and be removed from office. [21 G. A., ch. 148, § 10.]

SEC. 154. Salary. He shall be paid a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year. [Same, § 3.]

CHAPTER 7.

OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

SECTION 155. How constituted. The governor, secretary, auditor and treasurer of state shall constitute the executive council, and any three of them shall constitute a quorum. No deputy of either of such officers shall act in said council for his principal. [C., '73, § 111; R., § 993.]

SEC. 156. Secretary. The executive council shall choose a secretary, to hold office during its pleasure. The secretary shall keep a journal in which shall be entered all the doings of the council. [C., '73, § 119; R., § 999.]

SEC. 157. Secretary to prepare report—contents. The secretary shall, on or before the fifteenth day of January in each year, prepare a report of the doings of the executive council for the preceding year; which report shall include a statement of the assessment of railroad, sleeping and dining cars, telegraph and telephone companies; the official canvass of the votes cast at the general election; a list of the building and loan associations authorized to do business in the state within the year, and of those refused authority to do business, with a statement of the reasons for such refusal; a statement of the cities and towns the grades whereof may be changed during the year by reason of increase or decrease of population, as shown by the census; a list of the official and other bonds approved by the executive council; a statement of the contracts for prison labor authorized and approved; a classified and detailed statement of the expenditures made by the said council or with its approval; and a full statement of all other acts of the said council. The report so made shall be published in the Iowa official register. C., '73, § 120.]

SEC. 158. Accounts of state institutions controlled. In addition to the duties provided by law, the executive council shall direct the manner in which the accounts of all transactions of the several state institutions shall be kept, and the various items thereof, and such method shall be subject to change by them from time to time, as occasion may require. All officers or persons having charge of or supervision over said institutions shall keep accounts as directed by the executive council, which shall at all times be open for the inspection of the governor or any examiner appointed under the provisions of this code. A failure to so keep such accounts shall be ground for suspension from office.

SEC. 159. Annual examination. At least once each year, and oftener if deemed expedient, the executive council shall cause the books, accounts, vouchers, expenditures and conduct of each of the state institutions to be examined into by a skilled accountant and examiner not otherwise in the employ of the state, who shall make report to the executive council of such matters and in such form as it may prescribe.

SEC. 160. Compensation of examiner. Such examiner shall receive actual necessary expenses, and such compensation as the executive council may allow, not to exceed six dollars per day for each calendar day actually employed. The examiner shall itemize his bills for expenses and services, and they shall be subscribed and sworn to by him.

SEC. 161. Annual settlements. The executive council shall annually, and oftener in its discretion, make a full settlement between the state of Iowa and the officers of the state, officers and superintendents of state institutions, and all persons receiving, handling or expending state funds.

SEC. 162. Itemized statements required. All officers of the state, officers and superintendents of state institutions, and all persons drawing funds from the treasury of the state, shall file with the auditor of state an itemized statement, setting forth the object for which money is sought to be drawn, before a warrant is issued upon the state treasury. When the law permits the drawing of funds in advance of their expenditure, the persons drawing such funds shall file such itemized statement within one hundred days after the issuance of any such warrant. The statements provided for in this section shall be presented to the executive council by the auditor.

SEC. 163. Council to publish itemized statement. The executive council shall publish, annually, as soon after January first as is practicable, an itemized statement of all warrants issued, and of all moneys paid out by the state treasurer. Said report shall be so arranged as to show the itemized cost of each department or office of the state, and of each state institution, and the disposition by items of all state funds and supplies.

SEC. 164. Supervision of capitol—contracts—auditing of bills. The executive council is empowered to assign apartments in the capitol building to the several state officers, commissions and boards; and such assignment shall be subject to change by it, from time to time, when required in the interest of the public service. It shall also make for the state all contracts for lighting and repairing the capitol building and grounds, and for the necessary telephone, telegraph and water service therein; but the cost of such service shall not exceed the minimum amounts paid by private parties for like service. The bills for such service shall be itemized, subscribed and sworn to by the persons entitled thereto, and filed with the council, who shall audit the same and order a warrant drawn upon the treasury therefor, payable out of the amount appropriated by the general assembly for that purpose, and not otherwise.

SEC. 165. Purchase of supplies. The council is also empowered and authorized to purchase the necessary furniture, fuel, stores and supplies for the capitol building and grounds, and for the use of the general assembly, public offices at the seat of government, and the supreme court, and all paper needed for the public printing. All paper purchased for the use of the state shall have a distinguishing mark or water line by which it can be identified, and all furniture, stores or supplies for use in and about the capitol shall, when practicable, be marked with the word "Iowa." [C., '73, § 121; R., §§ 61, 81, 2170; C., '51, §§ 45, 60.]

SEC. 166. Advertise for sealed proposals. The council shall, from time to time, make estimates of the kind, quantity and quality of the articles needed and authorized to be purchased by it, as provided in the preceding section, and shall cause the secretary thereof to advertise for sealed proposals therefor in two newspapers published at the seat of government, and such others as it may deem expedient. Such advertisement shall state the kind, quantity and quality, and time and place of delivery, of the articles to be purchased, and that such proposals shall be filed with the secretary of the council, the time and place where all bids will be opened, and such other matters as the council may direct. Bills for such advertising shall be subscribed and sworn to by the persons entitled thereto, and, when the same are audited by the executive council, the auditor shall draw warrants therefor. [C., '73, § 121; R., § 2169.]

SEC. 167. Award contracts—security—auditing bills. All bids shall be opened by the council at the time and place fixed in the advertisement, and it shall award the contracts to the lowest responsible bidder therefor, who shall give security, to be approved by it, for the performance of such contracts; or it may reject any or all bids and advertise anew. Upon the delivery of the articles contracted for in compliance with the terms of the contract, the person so furnishing the articles shall file with the council an itemized bill therefor, and it shall thereupon audit the same, and order a warrant drawn upon the treasury for the amount due, payable out of the sum appropriated by the general assembly for that purpose, and not otherwise. [C., '73, §§ 120, 121.]

SEC. 168. Supplies and postage—to whom furnished. The executive council shall take charge of all property purchased under the provisions of this chapter, and shall keep a full, accurate, complete and itemized account of all such property, with the cost and disposition thereof. The council shall supply the governor, secretary, auditor, treasurer, judges of the supreme court and clerk thereof, attorney-general, supreme court reporter, superintendent of public instruction, railroad commissioners, adjutant-general, the dairy commissioner, the historical department, the mine inspectors, the labor commissioner, the horticultural department, and other officers entitled thereto by law, the general assembly, its committees, and the clerks, secretaries and special and standing committees of either house thereof, with all such articles required for the public use, and necessary to enable them to perform the duties imposed upon them by law. Postage shall not be furnished to the general assembly, its officers, employes, or to any committee of either branch thereof. It shall also furnish the public printer with all paper required for the various kinds of public printing, in such quantities as may be needed for the prompt discharge of his duties. Supplies, including postage and stationery, shall be furnished to the officers and persons entitled thereto by law, only in the manner provided in this chapter. [20 G. A., ch. 119; C., '73, § 122; R., § 2170.]

SEC. 169. Supplies—how drawn—accounts to be kept. In order to draw supplies, each officer or person entitled thereto, or the chairmen of the respective committees, shall make a written requisition on the secretary of the council, specifying the amount and kind that is necessary; and, upon presentation thereof to said secretary, he shall deliver the articles to the person entitled thereto, taking a receipt therefor, to be filed and preserved with the records of the council. The council shall keep an account so as to show the amount, cost and kind of supplies purchased, the amount and kind on hand, and the disposition of the balance. It shall keep an accurate itemized account with each office, board, commission, or person drawing supplies, charging thereto the several articles furnished at the cost price. The council shall also keep an account with the public printer, charging him with all paper drawn for public use at the cost price. All printed matter shall be returned to the secretary of the council for distribution, and the printer shall be credited with the cost price of the paper so returned, and required to account for the balance. [15 G. A., ch. 1.]

SEC. 170. Warrants on contingent fund—for what purposes. The executive council is authorized to draw warrants upon any contingent fund set apart for its use for the purpose of paying the expenses of suppressing any insurrection or riot actual or threatened, when state aid has been rendered by order of the governor, and for repairing, rebuilding or restoring any state property injured, destroyed or lost by fire, storm, theft or unavoidable cause, and for no other purpose whatever. [16 G. A., ch. 142, § 8; C., '72, § 120.]

Under § 120 of Code of '73 (as amended by 16 G. A., ch. 142, § 8) which was more general in language than this section, it was held expenses of calling out the militia to suppress an insurrection or riot were "necessary and lawful expenses," "not otherwise provided for," within the language of the section and should be paid by warrant on certificate of the council without any special appropriation: Prime v. McCarthy, 92–569.

CHAPTER 8.

OF THE CENSUS.

SECTION 171. Executive council to provide blank forms. The executive council shall cause to be prepared and printed blank forms suitable for the purpose of taking the census, to enable the assessors to make uniform returns upon the following matters: The number of males, the number of females, the number of persons entitled to vote, the number of militia. Such blanks must be furnished to the respective county auditors, and by them to the township assessors, on or before the first Monday in January of the year in which the census is to be taken. [C., '73, §§ 112–115; R., §§ 991–4.]

SEC. 172. Assessors to fill and return blanks. The assessor shall at the time of assessing property in the year nineteen hundred and five, and every ten years thereafter, take such census in his township, municipality, or division thereof, and make entry upon such blanks of all matters therein required to be enumerated or returned, and return the same to the county auditor on or before the first day of June of the census year. [C., '73, § 114; R., § 992.]

SEC. 173. When assessor fails. When any assessor fails to perform the duties required in this chapter, such auditor shall appoint some suitable person to take the census, as provided herein, at as early a day as practicable, at the expense of the county. [C., '73, § 117; R., § 997.]

SEC. 174. Returns to be forwarded—provision for failure. The county auditor shall forward such return to the secretary of state as soon as possible, and not later than the first day of July following. If such returns or any of them are not received by the fifteenth day of July, the executive council may cause such census to be made in said county, or any township, municipality, or division thereof, or the returns brought up, at the expense of the delinquent county. All of such returns shall be filed and preserved by the secretary of state. [C., '73, §§ 114, 116, 118; R., §§ 992, 996, 998.]

SEC. 175. Abstracts to be made. The executive council shall cause abstracts or compilations of said census to be prepared, which shall be recorded by the secretary of state in a book to be kept by him for that purpose. [C., '73, § 116; R., § 996.]

SEC. 176. Population to be published in official register. It shall be the duty of the secretary of state to publish in the Iowa official register the population of counties, cities and towns as shown by the last census, either state or national; and when the printing is completed the secretary of state shall certify that the same includes the census publication required by law, and such certificate, with the date and signature, shall be printed on the page following the title page thereof.

SEC. 177. Such publication to be evidence. Wherever in this code the population of any county, city or town is referred to, it shall be determined by the publication above provided for as of the date of said certificate, and such census publication shall be evidence of all matters therein contained, and of said certificate thereto.

CHAPTER 9.

OF DUTIES ASSIGNED TO TWO OR MORE OFFICERS, AND GENERAL REGULATIONS.

SECTION 178. Contingent funds to be accounted for. Any contingent fund set apart to any office or officer to be expended for the state shall, as used, be entered in a proper book showing when, to whom and for what purpose it was devoted, and receipts shall be taken therefor, preserved and filed with the report hereinafter required. On or before the first day of November preceding each regular session of the general assembly, the officers or person having charge of the fund shall make report to the state auditor in writing, showing, in detail, each item of expenditure made, and he shall not be credited with any sum not paid out in the manner contemplated by the law making the appropriation, nor unless the report shall be accompanied with the proper vouchers and receipts. All funds not thus accounted for may be recovered by the state from the proper officer or person, with fifty per cent. damages thereon, and the state auditor shall, in his report to the governor, make a detailed statement of the condition of each appropriation contemplated by this section. [C., '73, §§ 123, 124; R., §§ 2172–6.]

SEC. 179. Oath to be taken by regents, trustees, etc. Every person appointed or elected a regent, trustee, manager, commissioner or inspector, or a member of any board of regents, trustees, managers, commissioners or inspectors, now or hereafter created or provided by law for the government, control, management or inspection of any public building, improvement or institution whatever, owned, controlled or managed, in whole or in part, by or under the authority or direction of this state, shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties as such regent, trustee, manager, commissioner or inspector, take and subscribe an oath, in substance and form as follows: "I (here insert affiant's name) do solemnly swear that I will support the constitution of the United States, and of the state of Iowa; that I will honestly and faithfully discharge the duties of (here describe the nature of the office, trust or position as regent, trustee, manager, commissioner or inspector (as the case may be) according to the laws that now are or that may hereafter be in force regulating said institutions, and prescribing the duties of regents, trustees, managers, commissioners or inspectors thereof (as the case may be); that I will, in all things, conform to the directions contained in said law or laws, and that I will not, directly or indirectly, as such regent, trustee, manager, commissioner or inspector (as the case may be) make, or enter into, or consent to, any contract or agreement, expressed or implied, whereby any greater sum of money shall be expended or agreed to be expended than is expressly authorized by law at the date of such contract or agreement." [C., '73, § 126; R., § 2180.]

SEC. 180. Oaths to be filed. Oaths required by this chapter shall be filed in the office of the auditor of state, and he shall not draw any warrant on the state treasury for expenditures made or directed by any such officer until such oaths are so filed. [C., '73, § 128; R., § 2183.]

SEC. 181. Committee on retrenchment and reform. The chairmen of the committees on ways and means, judiciary, and appropriations, of the senate and house, respectively, at each regular session, shall constitute a standing committee, to be known as the joint committee on retrenchment and reform.

SEC. 182. Duties. Said committee shall examine into the reports and official acts of the executive council and of each officer, board, commission and department of the state at the seat of government, in respect to the conduct and expenditures thereof, and the receipts and disbursements of public funds thereby. It shall report to the general assembly a joint resolution fixing the number of employes, and the salary of each, for the several offices, boards, commissions and departments for the ensuing biennial period, and recommend such appropriations and legislation as shall promote public interests and an efficient and economical administration of the affairs of the state.

SEC. 183. May take evidence. Said committee shall have the same power to summon and examine witnesses, administer oaths, compel the production of books, papers and evidence, and to punish for contempt, as the district court.

SEC. 184. Books and accounts to be inspected. The books, accounts, vouchers, and funds belonging to, or kept in, any state office or institution, or in the charge or under the control of any state officer or person having charge of any state funds or property, shall, at all times, be open or subject to the inspection of the governor or any committee appointed by him, or by the general assembly or either house thereof; and the governor shall see that such inspection of the office of state treasurer is made at least four times in every twelve months. [C., '73, § 132; R., §§ 80, 90; C., '51, §§ 59, 69.]

SEC. 185. Contracts for unauthorized expenditures. Any officer who shall be empowered to expend any public money, or to direct such expenditures, is hereby prohibited from making any contract for the erection of any building, or for any other purpose which shall contemplate any excess of expenditures beyond the terms of the law under which such expenditures were authorized. [C., '73, § 127; R., § 2181.]

SEC. 186. Contracts in excess of appropriations. It shall be unlawful for any trustee, superintendent, warden or other officer of any of the educational, penal or charitable institutions of this state to contract any indebtedness against said institutions or the state in excess of the appropriation made for said institutions; but nothing herein contained shall prevent the incurring of an indebtedness on account of support funds for state institutions, upon the prior written direction of the executive council, specifying the items and amount of such indebtedness to be increased, and the necessity therefor. [17 G. A., ch. 67, § 1.]

SEC. 187. Appropriations not to be diverted. It shall be unlawful for any superintendent, warden, trustee, or other officer of any of the institutions mentioned in the preceding section, to divert any money that has been or may be appropriated for the use of said institutions to any other purpose than the specific purpose named therefor in the act appropriating the same. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 188. Misdemeanor. Any person violating any of the provisions of the two preceding sections shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 189. Trustees, etc., not to be interested in contracts. It shall be unlawful for any trustee, warden, superintendent, steward, or any other officer of any educational, penal, charitable or reformatory institution, supported in whole or in part by the state, to be interested directly or indirectly in any contract to furnish or in furnishing provisions, material, or supplies of any kind, to or for the institution of which he is an officer; and it shall be unlawful for any such trustee, warden, superintendent, steward or other officer, directly or indirectly, to receive in money or any valuable thing any commission, percentage, discount or rebate on any provision, material or supplies furnished for or to any institution of which he is an officer. And it shall be unlawful for any such trustee, warden, superintendent, steward, or other officer of any state institution, to be directly or indirectly interested in any contract with the state to build, repair or furnish any institution of which he may be an officer. [17 G. A., ch. 144, § 1; C., '73, § 1387.]

SEC. 190. Misdemeanor. Any person violating the provisions of the preceding section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, in the discretion of the court, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. [17 G. A., ch. 144, § 2.]

SEC. 191. Secretary and auditor to account for fees. The secretary of state and the auditor of state shall keep an accurate and particular account of all fees received by them, which shall be verified by affidavit, and rendered monthly to the treasurer of state, and they shall pay the amounts thus received to such treasurer at the end of each month. [C., '73, § 3778.]

TITLE III.

OF THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE ORGANIZATION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

SECTION 192. Terms—business at each term. The supreme court shall be held at the seat of government, and shall convene and hold three terms each year, one of which shall commence on the third Tuesday in January, one on the second Tuesday in May, and one on the first Tuesday in October. Each of said terms of court shall be for the submission and determination of causes and for the transaction of such other business as shall properly come before the court. All causes on the docket shall be heard at each term, unless continued or otherwise disposed of by order of the court. The court shall remain in session, so far as practicable, until it is determined what the opinion of the court shall be in all causes submitted to it, except in causes where reargument is ordered. Judgments of affirmance, rulings and orders in causes submitted, and orders authorized by law, may be made and entered by the court at any time, regardless of the terms of court. [22 G. A., ch. 34; 21 G. A., ch. 59; C. '73, § 133; R., § 2623.]

SEC. 193. Judges—quorum. The supreme court shall consist of six judges, four of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but one alone may adjourn from day to day, or to a particular day, or until the next term. [25 G. A., ch. 69, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; C. '73, § 139; R., § 2627; C. '51, § 1551.]

SEC. 194. Division into sections. The judges shall join in the open sessions of the court and all other court duties, except that, in the preliminary consideration of submitted cases, they may divide into two sections of not less than three judges each, but no decision of the court shall be filed until it shall have been considered by the whole court and concurred in by not less than a majority of the judges. [25 G. A., ch. 69, § 4.]

SEC. 195. Divided court. When the court is equally divided in opinion, the judgment of the court below shall stand affirmed, but the decision is of no further force or authority, but in such cases opinions may be filed. [C. '73, § 140; R., § 2628; C. '51, § 1552.]

The court has, however, the same power in such case as in any other to grant a rehearing: Zeigler v. Vance, 3-528.

If, upon rehearing, the court is equally divided as to whether its first opinion should stand, judgment will be affirmed as if such division had occurred on first hearing: Richards v. Burden, 59-723, 754.

As to effect of opinion in a case where the judges are equally divided, see Bennett v. Hibbert, 88-154.

SEC. 196. Failure of judges to attend. If none of the judges attend on the first day of the term, the clerk must enter the fact on the record, and the court shall stand adjourned until the next day, and so on until the fourth day; then, if none of the judges appear, the court shall stand adjourned until the next term. [C. '73, § 141; R., § 2629; C. '51, § 1553.]

SEC. 197. Business continued. No process or proceeding shall in any manner be affected by an adjournment or failure to hold court, but all shall stand continued to the next term, without any special order to that effect. [C. '73, § 142; R., § 2630; C. '51, § 1554.]

SEC. 198. Opinions to be filed. The decisions of the court on all questions passed upon by it, including motions and points of practice, shall be specifically stated, and shall be accompanied with an opinion upon all such as are deemed of sufficient importance, together with any dissent therefrom, which dissent may be stated with or without an opinion, and all decisions and opinions shall be in writing and filed with the clerk, except that rulings upon motions may be entered upon the announcement book. [C. '73, § 143; R., §§ 2636–7; C. '51, §§ 1560–1.]

As to construction of former provision requiring written opinion to cover each error assigned, see Baker v. Kerr, 13-384.

SEC. 199. Dissenting opinions. The records and reports must in all cases show whether a decision was made by a full bench, and whether either and, if so, which of the judges dissented from the decision. [C. '73, § 144; R., § 2638; C. '51, § 1562.]

SEC. 200. What cases reported. If the decision, in the judgment of the court, is not of sufficient general importance to be published, it shall be so designated, in which case it shall not be included in the reports, and no case shall be reported except by order of the full bench. [C. '73, § 145.]

SEC. 201. Bailiffs. The court may appoint the necessary bailiffs to attend its sessions and perform such other duties and execute such orders as may be directed or ordered by it, who shall receive two dollars and fifty cents per day each, to be paid out of the contingent fund on the order of the chief justice. The court may also at any time require the attendance and services of the sheriff of Polk county. [21 G. A., ch. 59, § 2.]

SEC. 202. Contingent expenses. All bills for contingent expenses shall contain the items thereof, and shall be certified to as correct by the chief justice before being audited. [C. '73, § 138; R., § 2626; C. '51, § 1548.]

SEC. 203. Salaries of judges. The salary of each judge of the supreme court shall be four thousand dollars per annum. [18 G. A., ch. 27; C. '73, § 3769.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT.

SECTION 204. Office—duties. The clerk of the supreme court shall have an office at the seat of government, keep a complete record of the proceedings of the court, and allow no opinion filed therein to be removed except by the reporter, which opinions shall be open to examination and may be copied, and, upon request, shall be certified by him. He shall also, when required, make out and certify a copy thereof. He shall promptly announce by mail to one of the attorneys on each side any ruling made or decision rendered, record every opinion rendered as soon as filed, and perform all other duties pertaining to his office. [C. '73, §§ 146–9; R., §§ 2647–51; C. '51, §§ 1564–5.]

SEC. 205. Salary of clerk and deputy—fees to be collected. The salary of the clerk of the supreme court shall be twenty-two hundred dollars per annum, and the salary of the deputy clerk of the supreme court shall be fifteen hundred dollars per annum. The clerk shall collect the following fees and account for them as provided in section one hundred and ninety-one, of chapter nine, of title two of this code, and shall also keep account of and report in like manner all uncollected fees:

Upon filing each appeal, three dollars;

Upon entering judgment when the cause has been tried on its merits, two dollars;

Upon each continuance, one dollar;

Upon issuing each execution, one dollar and twenty-five cents;

Upon entering satisfaction of each judgment, fifty cents;

Upon each writ, rule or order to be served upon any person not in court, twenty-five cents;

For copying an opinion to be transmitted to an inferior court upon reversal of a judgment or an order, to be paid by the party against whom the costs are adjudged, or for a copy of such opinion or any record made at the request of any person, for each hundred words, ten cents. [21 G. A., ch. 118, § 6; 19 G. A., ch. 117, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 74, § 1; C. '73, § 3771; R., §§ 2949, 4134–5; C. '51, §§ 2525–6.]

SEC. 206. Execution for fees. If any of the foregoing fees of the clerk are not paid in advance, execution may issue therefor, except where the fees are payable by the county or the state.

SEC. 207. Deputy—qualification—duties. The clerk of the supreme court may appoint, in writing, any person, except one holding a state office, as deputy, which appointment must be approved by the officer having the approval of the principal's bond, and such appointment may be revoked in the same manner,—both the appointment and the revocation to be filed and kept in the office of the secretary of state. The deputy shall qualify by taking the oath of the principal, to be indorsed upon and filed with the certificate of appointment, and, when so qualified, he shall, in the absence or disability of the clerk, perform all of the duties of such clerk pertaining to his office, and receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year. [19 G. A., ch. 117; C. '73 § 766; R., § 643.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

SECTION 208. Office—duties. The attorney-general shall keep his office at the seat of government. He shall appear for the state, prosecute or defend all actions and proceedings, civil and criminal, in which the state shall be a party or interested, when requested to do so by the governor, executive council or general assembly; and shall prosecute or defend for the state all causes in the supreme court in which the state is a party or interested. [C. '73, § 150; R., § 124.]

When a criminal case is appealed to the supreme court, the attorney-general obtains control of it, but any agreements made by the attorney for the state while the case is in the lower court are binding as against the attorney-general: State v. Fleming, 13–443.

SEC. 209. Must give opinions. When requested, he shall give his opinion in writing upon all questions of law submitted to him by the general assembly or either house thereof, the governor, lieutenant-governor, auditor, secretary of state, treasurer, superintendent of public instruction, and executive council. He shall, when required, prepare drafts for contracts, forms and other writings which may be required for the use of the state, and shall report to the governor, preceding each general assembly, the condition of his office, opinions rendered and business transacted of public interest. [C. '73, § 151; R., § 125.]

SEC. 210. Account for moneys. All moneys received by him belonging to the people of the state, or received in his official capacity, shall be paid into the state treasury. He shall keep, in proper books, a record of all official opinions, and a register of all actions prosecuted and defended by him, and of all proceedings had in relation thereto, which books shall be delivered to his successor. [C. '73, §§ 152–3; R., §§ 126–7, 130–1.]

SEC. 211. Compensation. He shall be provided with an office in the capitol building. His salary shall be four thousand dollars per annum, as full compensation; and whenever he is required by the duties of his office, or by direction of the governor or general assembly, to attend any of the courts of this state, or any of the federal courts, or transact other business for the state, he shall receive his actual expenses when so engaged elsewhere than at the seat of government. [21 G. A., ch. 172; C. '73, § 3770.]

SEC. 212. Assistant—salary. He shall be supplied with an assistant, whose annual salary shall not exceed twelve hundred dollars.

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE SUPREME COURT REPORTER AND REPORTS.

SECTION 213. Office—may take opinions. The office of the supreme court reporter shall be kept at the seat of government, and, when the opinions filed at any term of the supreme court are recorded by the clerk, he may take and retain the same for a period not exceeding four months, to prepare a report therefrom, but within such time they shall be returned to and remain in the office of such clerk. [C. '73, § 154.]

SEC. 214. New editions of reports. The supreme court may order the publication of a new edition of any volume of its reports of which the copyright is owned by the reporter, when the public interest requires it, and may require compliance therewith within six months by an order entered of record; and if the reporter neglects or refuses to comply with such order, then such copyright shall be forfeited to the state. [C. '73, § 158.]

SEC. 215. Distribution of reports. The copies received by the secretary of state shall be disposed of by him as follows: Two copies of each volume to the library of congress and the library of the supreme court of the United States; one copy to each judge of the supreme, district, and superior courts, including United States district judges whose districts lie within this state, the clerk of the supreme court and attorney-general; one hundred copies to the state library, one copy to each county in the state, two copies to each county where the district court is held in more than one place; one copy to the supreme court reporter; twenty copies to the law department of the state university; twenty copies to the state historical society, for exchange in such manner as the proper officers thereof think advisable. The remaining copies shall be used by the trustees of the state library in exchange for such books on law or equity, or reports of other states, as they may select. All books received by such exchange shall be deposited in and become a part of the state library. [22 G. A., ch. 33; C. '73, § 159.]

SEC. 216. Copy for and duties of publisher—size and quality of volume. After sufficient opinions are announced and recorded to make a volume, he shall forthwith deliver at his office, to the person, persons or corporation having the contract with the state for publishing the same, copies of such opinions, and with each opinion a syllabus, and a brief statement of the facts involved. Within twenty days after the proof-sheets for a volume have been furnished to him by the publishers at his office, he shall furnish to such publishers an index and table of cases to such volume. The publishers shall furnish to the reporter without delay, as soon as they shall be issued, eight copies of the revised proof-sheets of the opinions, head notes, index and table of cases of each volume, for correction and approval by the reporter and judges of the supreme court, and shall cause such corrections to be made therein as shall be indicated by the reporter or said judges. Each of said volumes shall contain not less than seven hundred and fifty nor more than eight hundred pages, exclusive of the table of cases and index, and the workmanship and quality of material shall be approved and accepted by a majority of the judges of the supreme court. [20 G. A., ch. 125; 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 1.]

SEC. 217. Copyrights secured. The copyrights of all the supreme court reports hereafter published shall vest in the secretary of state for the benefit of the people of this state; but this shall not be construed to prevent the contractor by whom any volume is published, his representatives or assigns, from continuing the exclusive publication and sale of such volume so long as he or they shall, in all respects, comply with the requirements of this chapter in respect to the character, sale and price of such volume. [18 G. A., ch. 60, § 2.]

SEC. 218. Published under contract. The supreme court reporter shall have no pecuniary interest in such reports, but the same shall be published under contract, to be entered into by the executive council with the person, persons or corporation who shall agree to publish and sell the same on the terms most advantageous to the people of the state, at a price not to exceed two dollars per volume, of the size and quality as provided for in this chapter. And if any such volume shall in any way or from any cause contain more than eight hundred pages, no increased or additional price shall be charged therefor. [Same, § 3.]

The acceptance of a bid does not constitute the contract required by this section. Until the contract is entered into in accordance with the statutory requirements no contract is made, and the executive council may exercise a discretion: Mills Publishing Co. v. Larrabee, 78–97.

Therefore, held, that an action of mandamus would not lie to compel the executive council to enter into a contract with plaintiff whose bid had been accepted, the council having afterwards reconsidered such action and awarded the contract to another bidder: Ibid.

SEC. 219. Executive council to advertise. The executive council shall, in the first week in April preceding the expiration of the present contract, and every eight years thereafter, advertise weekly, in six different newspapers in different localities in this state, for the term of six weeks, that sealed proposals will be received at the office of the secretary of state for printing, publishing and selling the said reports for the term of eight years next after the first day of June of said year, at a certain rate per volume, to be stated in said proposal, not exceeding the maximum price fixed by this chapter, and in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. [Same § 4.]

SEC. 220. Bidders to make deposit. Each bidder shall deposit with the state treasurer the sum of one thousand dollars before making his proposal, to be forfeited to the state in case he shall not make a contract according to his proposal, if accepted, and according to the requirements of this chapter, and shall take a receipt from said treasurer, and deposit the same with his proposal, and, upon entering into the contract herein provided, or upon the proposal being rejected, the said sum shall be returned. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 221. Terms of contract. The successful bidder shall enter into a contract that he will publish the supreme court reports of the state, of the quality, style and character in all respects as required in this chapter; that he will publish and deliver to the secretary of state, at the capitol, the three hundred and fifty copies first issued, free of cost for publication or delivery, at the earliest practicable time, and within sixty days after the delivery of the manuscript for any one copy of such reports to the publishers; that he will stereotype the same, and at all times keep the same on sale in the state of Iowa to residents of this state for actual use at the contract price, in suitable quantities, in the city of Des Moines; that he will furnish the state any number of additional copies that may be required for its own use at the contract price, and procure new stereotype plates whenever the original plates shall become defaced or destroyed; and the said contract shall fully provide for the carrying into effect of all the provisions of this chapter, and shall be made within thirty days after he is notified of the acceptance of his proposal. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 222. Security required. The successful bidder shall, at the time of making his contract, execute and file with the treasurer of state a bond, in the penal sum of ten thousand dollars, conditioned to fulfill such contract in all particulars, with at least two sufficient sureties, residents of this state, to be approved by the executive council of the state. Such bond shall, by its terms, be the joint and several obligation of the persons executing it. If the successful bidder shall fail to complete his contract, or shall forfeit the same for any cause, the executive council shall relet the contract as soon thereafter as practicable, in the manner provided in this chapter; but such bidder, in lieu of sureties to such bond, may deposit therewith bonds of the United States, payable to the bearer, amounting to not less than ten thousand dollars, in which case the certificate of approval on such bond shall recite such fact. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 223. Covenants of contract. The contract of the successful bidder required under this chapter shall contain, among others, the following covenants on his part:

First. That he will not take out in his own name, nor procure to be taken out in the name of any person other than the secretary of state of this state, a copyright upon any volume of the supreme court reports published under such contract; and that, upon any breach of this covenant, he will pay to the treasurer of this state the sum of two thousand dollars as liquidated damages;

Second. That, in case it shall be determined in any action upon the bond of such contractor that he has failed in any respect to comply with the provisions of this chapter or his contract, the executive council may declare the contract forfeited; and that, upon such forfeiture so declared, such contractor will, upon demand, transfer to the secretary of state of this state, for the use of the state, the stereotyped plates of each volume of such reports published under such contract, or, in default thereof, will pay to the treasurer of this state two thousand dollars for each such volume as liquidated damages for a failure to make such transfer; and such failure shall be deemed a breach of the conditions of such bond, and such liquidated damages may be recovered by action on such bond. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 224. Compensation of reporter. The supreme court reporter shall receive as full compensation for all services rendered the sum of six hundred dollars for each volume of the reports completed by him in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, which sum shall be paid only after the publication of the volume, and upon the certificate of the chief justice that he has properly performed his official duties. Each volume shall conform in manner and style, as near as may be, to volume eighty of the Iowa reports. [Same, § 9.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF THE DISTRICT COURT.

SECTION 225. Jurisdiction—civil, criminal, probate—successor of circuit court. The district court shall have general, original and exclusive jurisdiction of all actions, proceedings and remedies, both civil and criminal, except in cases where exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction is or may hereafter be conferred upon some other court or tribunal by the constitution and laws of the state, and shall have and exercise all the powers usually possessed and exercised by courts of record. It shall also possess and exercise jurisdiction in all appeals and writs of error taken in civil and criminal actions and special proceedings authorized to be taken from all inferior courts, tribunals, boards or officers, under any provisions of the laws of this state, and shall have a general supervision thereof, in all matters, to prevent and correct abuses, where no other remedy is provided.

First. The district court of each county shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction to probate the wills of, and to grant administration upon the estates of, all persons who at the time of their death were residents of the county, and of non-residents of the state who die leaving property within the county subject to administration, or whose property is afterwards brought into the county.

Second. To appoint guardians of the persons and property of all persons resident in the county subject to guardianship.

Third. To appoint guardians of the property of all such persons non-residents of the state who have property within the county subject to guardianship, or whose property is afterwards brought into the county.

Fourth. It shall have jurisdiction in all matters in relation to the appointment of executors and trustees, and the management and disposition of the property of and settlement of such estates: provided that, where jurisdiction has heretofore been acquired, the same shall be retained until such estate is closed.

The district court shall succeed to, and exercise full authority and jurisdiction over, the records of the circuit court, and may enforce all judgments, decrees and orders thereof in the same manner and to the same extent as it may exercise like jurisdiction and authority over its own records, and, for the purpose of the issuance of process, and of any and all other acts necessary to the due and efficient enforcement of the orders, judgments and decrees of the circuit court, the records thereof shall be deemed records of the district court. Transcripts and process from the judgments, decrees and records of the circuit court shall be issued by the clerk of the district court, and under the seal of his office. [21 G. A., ch. 134, § 7; C. '73, §§ 161–2, 2312; R., § 2663; C. '51, § 1576.]

Jurisdiction: The district court is a court of general jurisdiction. It may have jurisdiction over any case brought within its district, except so far as the exercise of its jurisdiction is limited by statute. The general and unlimited scope of its jurisdiction is illustrated by the fact that it is styled the district court for the state, held in and for a particular county, and its judges are judges of the state with authority to grant writs running into every part of the state. The legislature cannot deprive it of its jurisdiction or limit such jurisdiction, but the manner of its exercise may be prescribed by law: Laird v. Dickerson, 40–665.

The jurisdiction of the district court, which is a superior court of general original jurisdiction, can only be taken away by express words or irresistible implication. Therefore, held, that Revision, § 2395, which prohibited the bringing of an action in that court on claims against an estate for a mere money demand, except with the approbation of the county court, was not intended to do away with the jurisdiction of the district court, but merely as a restraint upon the plaintiff: Sterrett v. Robinson, 17–61; and that the failure on the part of the plaintiff to obtain such leave must be set up as a defense in the district court and could not be made a ground of collateral attack on the judgment: Cooley v. Smith, 17–99.

The statutes conferring jurisdiction upon the probate court did not defeat or oust the general jurisdiction of the district court: Harlin v. Stevenson, 30–371.

As the district court is one of general jurisdiction, its powers are such as to give it cognizance of proceedings by creditors to compel an administrator to sell real estate for debts, and of all other proceedings except where jurisdiction is denied or taken away by express language or necessary implication: Waples v. Marsh, 19–381.

The district court has general original jurisdiction, both civil and criminal, when not otherwise provided. But by statute it is provided that mayors of cities of the second class and incorporated towns shall have exclusive jurisdiction of violations of city ordinances, and the district court, therefore, has no jurisdiction of such an action: Lansing v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 85–215.

At law and in equity: The district court is invested with all the powers of a court of law and those of a court of equity, and the distinction between the two jurisdictions is recognized. This distinction the legislature cannot take away: Claussen v. Lafrenz, 4 G. Gr., 224.

Under statutes different from those now in force, held, that in a proceeding in equity the court possessed no jurisdiction to render in favor of the party such judgment as he might show himself entitled to at law: Roberts v. Taliaferro, 7–110. See now § 3427.

Supervisory powers: As to the distinction between the jurisdiction of the district court and that of the circuit court in certiorari under former statutes, see Keniston v. Hewitt, 48–679; Groves v. Richmond, 53–570.

Appeals are not permitted in cases where there is no statute authorizing them; as, for instance, in the case of action of fence viewers: McKeever v. Jenks, 59–350.

Judge; unauthorized person cannot act as: A person not duly authorized and qualified by law cannot, by consent of parties or by direction of the duly qualified judge act as judge in the trial of a cause: Michales v. Hine, 3 G. Gr., 470; Winchester v. Ayres, 4 G. Gr., 104; Petty v. Durall, 4 G. Gr., 120; Smith v. Frisbie, 7-486.

It is not proper for a judge of the court to have an attorney substituted temporarily in his place, even by consent of parties, and himself act as attorney for one of the parties to the case: Wright v. Boon, 2 G. Gr., 458.

The judge may, during the argument of the case to the jury, properly be absent from the court room for the purpose of hearing another case, or otherwise: Hall v. Wolff, 61-559; especially if it does not appear but that such absence was necessary, or that prejudice resulted or might be inferred therefrom: Baxter v. Ray, 62-336.

In a criminal case, held, that the temporary absence of the judge from the court room during the argument to the jury, and alleged misconduct of prosecuting attorney in interrupting defendant's attorney in his argument during such time and causing disorder in the court room, were not such errors as to entitle defendant to new trial: State v. Griffin, 79-568.

Substitute: Where a statute provides that, in case of the absence or disability of the judge, a certain other officer designated shall act in his place, it must appear, in order to support an action of the person thus designated in sitting as judge, that the contingency upon which he was authorized to act had occurred: Burlington University v. Stewart's Ex'rs, 12-442; State v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 50-692.

Powers may be conferred upon the judge which cannot be exercised by the court of which he is judge: Cummings v. Des Moines, W. & S. W. R. Co., 36-173.

Exclusive jurisdiction: Where a circuit court had, under prior provisions, exclusive jurisdiction and a change of place of trial was granted, held the case was to be sent to some other circuit court and not to the district court: Schuchart v. Lammey, 62-197.

Although an appeal to the circuit court from a justice of the peace in a civil case could not be changed to the district court, yet, if such appeal was consolidated by consent of the parties with an original action already pending in the circuit court, the consolidated action might be changed as in any other case: Broune v. Hickie, 68-330.

Probate jurisdiction: Probate courts are courts of general jurisdiction and their proceedings are presumed to be regular until it is shown that they are not. If jurisdiction depends upon facts not disclosed by the record they will be presumed to have existed: Reed v. Lane, 65 N.W., 380.

The probate court has not jurisdiction to appoint an administrator of the personal property of a person who was not a resident of the county at the time of his death, and held no property there, merely on the ground that the property was brought into the county after his death for a special purpose and removed again before the appointment of such administrator: Christy v. Vest, 36-285.

If there is any claim due the estate of decedent on which action might be maintained in the courts of this state by an administrator properly appointed, the courts of this state have jurisdiction to appoint such administrator. So held as to a cause of action accruing in another state under the laws of that state for causing the death of decedent, defendant being suable in Iowa: Morris v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 65-727.

The fact that a court, in granting administration upon the estate of a foreign decedent, appoints an administrator for the sale of real estate in that county, does not limit its jurisdiction as to property in other counties of the state: Lees v. Wetmore, 58-170.

Jurisdiction of the probate court is not exclusive as to land belonging to an intestate, which is not required for the payment of debts, and remains in the possession of the heirs after administration is concluded, and an action against heirs in possession by a person claiming to be heir may be brought in another court: In re Seaton's Estate, 58-523.

Where the relief sought is the enforcement of a lien, the action may properly be brought in equity, there being no method of obtaining relief in probate proceedings: Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654.

In an action to foreclose a mortgage given by decedent, no personal judgment can be rendered against the executor although made a party to the action. Proceedings to enforce a claim against the estate must be prosecuted in the probate court: Orcutt v. Hanson, 71-514.

The adjudication of a claim against the estate is to be deemed a part of the settlement of the estate, and action cannot be brought in the district court against the administrator of the estate on an indebtedness of decedent: Tillman v. Bowman, 68-450.

The court having taken jurisdiction to appoint an administrator, such action cannot be attacked collaterally by showing that there was no property in the county to warrant such appointment: Murphy v. Creighton, 45-179; Lees v. Wetmore, 58-170.

The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction of an action to probate a will, but such probate is not conclusive on adverse parties, and an original action to set the will aside may be instituted in the district court: Leighton v. Orr, 44-679.

The probate court does not have exclusive jurisdiction of the question of the validity of a will: Kohn v. Ryan, 31 Fed., 636.

The court of probate does not have exclusive jurisdiction of a suit on an administrator's bond: Wheelhouse v. Bryant, 13-160; Jenkins v. Shields, 36-526.

An order of a probate court approving the report of an administrator, in which he certifies to a distribution of all the funds to certain heirs, is not an adjudication that there are no other heirs: Crossley v. Calhoon, 45-557.

A probate court may appoint a referee in the matter of the examination of administrator's accounts: In re Heath's Estate, 58-36.

The jurisdiction of a court of probate relates to probate matters exclusively, and no chancery powers are thereby conferred upon it. It may regulate the distribution of property to legatees, but cannot supervise the management of such property by the legatees charged with a trust duty in respect thereto by the will, the execution of trusts being within the jurisdiction of a court of equity: Perry v. Drury, 56–60.

The provisions as to the probate jurisdiction do not defeat or oust the general equity jurisdiction of the district court: Harlin v. Stevenson, 30–371.

Where a probate court directed that notice of an application by the administrator for sale of the real property to pay debts of the estate should be served by publication for two weeks in a newspaper, which order was complied with, held, that the court thereby acquired jurisdiction as against nonresident defendants to act upon such application: Casey v. Stewart, 60–160.

Where a proceeding which should have been in probate is brought in law or equity, the error is merely one as to the form of the action, and cannot be raised on appeal, if not interposed in the lower court: Goodnow v. Wells, 67–654.

Nor can such objection be taken advantage of by demurrer, but it must be raised by motion to transfer the proceeding to the proper docket: Ashlock v. Sherman, 56–311.

Where the parties submitted to the court a controversy involving the allowance of claims against the estate upon an agreed state of facts, held, that the court might determine such question, although it was not one involving the exercise of probate jurisdiction: Baugh v. Barrett, 69–495.

The district court, being a court of general and original jurisdiction, and also of probate jurisdiction, may determine an issue presented on the probate of a will, although the question is not one proper for determination in the probate court: Leacox v. Griffith, 76–89.

The probate jurisdiction is not exclusive of the jurisdiction of the federal courts in cases properly brought before them: Clark v. Bever, 139 U. S., 96.

Guardianship matters: The jurisdiction of the probate court in relation to estates of insane persons does not exclude that of the district court in an action of right between an insane person and others: Flock v. Wyatt, 49–466.

The district court has original and exclusive jurisdiction of the persons and estates of those who require guardianship: Coffin v. Eisminger, 75–30.

The probate court does not have such exclusive jurisdiction of a guardianship that an action on a bond for breach of duty cannot be brought without an adjudication of default in the probate court: Robb v. Perry, 35 Fed., 102.

The court of probate may authorize expenditures of a guardian for the support and education of a ward without notice to the ward. Such a proceeding is not adversary in its nature, and does not partake of the character of an action: Brewer v. Stoddard, 49–279.

An order with reference to the settlement of the account of a guardian appointed in one county entered of record in the court of another county is not valid: Gillespie v. See, 72–345.

Circuit court records: Since the circuit court has been abolished the district court has the same power with reference to its records that the circuit court might have exercised: De Wolfe v. Taylor, 71–648; Risser v. Martin, 86–392.

Rules: Previous provisions as to authority of the court to adopt rules and as to a uniform set of rules to be adopted by a convention of district judges, are omitted from this Code, the rules adopted by the convention of judges being incorporated into this Code as statutory provisions. As to the effect of those provisions on the common law power of a court to make rules for its own guidance see Shane v. McNeill, 76–459. And in general as to the effect of the provisions as to rules, see State v. Ensly, 10–149; Pinders v. Yager, 29–468; McGrew v. Downs, 67–687; David v. Ætna Ins. Co., 9–45; Meffert v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 34 430; Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Marchand, 5–468; Lyon v. Byington, 7–422; Horseman v. Todhunter, 12–230; Baldwin v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co., 75–297; Aken v. Coldren, 80–254.

SEC. 226. City or town to provide court room. Where terms are held in any city or town not the county seat, such city or town shall provide and furnish the necessary rooms and places for such terms, free of charge to the county. [C. '73, § 163; R., § 2653; C. '51, § 1566.]

SEC. 227. Judicial districts. For judicial purposes, the state is hereby divided into twenty judicial districts, as follows:

The first district shall consist of the county of Lee, and have one judge.

The second district shall consist of the counties of Lucas, Monroe, Wapello, Jefferson, Davis, Van Buren and Appanoose, and have four judges.

The third district shall consist of the counties of Wayne, Decatur, Clarke, Union, Ringgold, Taylor and Adams, and have two judges.

The fourth district shall consist of the counties of Cherokee, O'Brien, Osceola, Lyon, Sioux, Plymouth, Woodbury, Harrison and Monona, and have four judges.

The fifth district shall consist of the counties of Dallas, Guthrie, Adair, Madison, Warren and Marion, and have three judges.

The sixth district shall consist of the counties of Jasper, Poweshiek, Mahaska, Keokuk and Washington, and have three judges.

The seventh district shall consist of the counties of Muscatine, Scott Clinton and Jackson, and have four judges.

The eighth district shall consist of the counties of Johnson and Iowa, and have one judge.

The ninth district shall consist of the county of Polk, and have four judges.

The tenth district shall consist of the counties of Delaware, Buchanan, Black Hawk and Grundy, and have two judges.

The eleventh district shall consist of the counties of Story, Boone, Webster, Hamilton, Hardin, Franklin and Wright, and have three judges.

The twelfth district shall consist of the counties of Bremer, Butler, Floyd, Mitchell, Worth, Cerro Gordo, Hancock and Winnebago, and have two judges.

The thirteenth district shall consist of the counties of Clayton, Allamakee, Fayette, Winneshiek, Howard and Chickasaw, and have two judges.

The fourteenth district shall consist of the counties of Buena Vista, Clay, Palo Alto, Kossuth, Emmet, Dickinson, Humboldt and Pocahontas, and have two judges.

The fifteenth district shall consist of the counties of Pottawattamie, Cass, Shelby, Audubon, Montgomery, Mills, Page and Fremont, and have four judges.

The sixteenth district shall consist of the counties of Ida, Sac, Calhoun, Crawford, Carroll and Greene, and have two judges.

The seventeenth district shall consist of the counties of Tama, Benton and Marshall, and have two judges.

The eighteenth district shall consist of the counties of Linn, Jones and Cedar, and have two judges.

The nineteenth district shall consist of the county of Dubuque, and have two judges.

The twentieth district shall consist of the counties of Des Moines, Henry and Louisa, and shall have two judges.

The district judge shall be a resident of the district in which he is elected, and each judge shall hold office until the expiration of the term for which he has been heretofore elected. Each district judge hereafter elected, except to fill a vacancy, shall hold office four years and until his successor is elected and qualified. Each judge elected to fill a vacancy shall hold for the unexpired term and until his successor is elected and qualified. [26 G. A., chs. 121, 122; 25 G. A., chs. 66, 67, 68; 24 G. A., chs. 53, 54, 55; 21 G. A., ch. 134, §§ 3, 4.]

SEC. 228. Terms where two county seats. In any county having two county seats, terms of court shall be held at each, and, in the county of Pottawattamie, court shall be held at Avoca, as well as at the county seat. [22 G. A., ch. 37; 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 5; 20 G. A., ch. 198; C. '73, § 164.]

The legislature may, by special act, authorize the holding of court at a place other than the county seat: Cooper v. Mills County, 69–350; Milner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 77–755.

This provision for the holding of court at Avoca, does not affect the jurisdiction of justices of the peace or mayors of cities within the county: Deere v. Council Bluffs, 86–591; Coffman v. Trimble, 90–737.

SEC. 229. Terms to be held. The district judges shall hold four terms of court at each of the places in the several counties of their districts where court is authorized to be held, and, if business requires, then the judges of such district shall, by joint order made at the time of making the assignment of terms hereinafter required and entered of record, provide for regular additional terms. [22 G. A., ch. 37; 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 5.]

As to place of holding court see notes to § 286.

SEC. 230. Terms not at county seats—effect—duty of clerk. When a court shall be held at a place not the county seat, all of the provisions of the statute in relation to district courts shall be applicable thereto, except as herein modified. All proceedings had in said court shall have, within the territory over which said court shall have jurisdiction, the same force and effect as though ordered in the court at the county seat of said county, but transcripts of judgments and decrees rendered therein, levies of writs of attachment upon real estate, mechanics' liens, lis pendens, sales of real estate, redemption, satisfaction of judgments and mechanics' liens, dismissals or decrees in lis pendens, together with all other matters affecting titles to real estate, shall be forthwith certified by the deputy clerk at such place to the clerk of such court at the county seat, who shall immediately enter the same upon the records in his office. [22 G. A., ch. 37; 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 5.]

The failure of the deputy clerk to certify to the clerk of the district court the levy of a writ of attachment in proceedings at a place where court is held other than the county seat will operate to defeat notice of the attachment which would have been imparted by a record properly made: Benjamin v. Davis, 73–715.

SEC. 231. Division of work by judges. In case the judges of any district are unable to agree as to the manner of holding their courts, or as to the counties in which they are severally to preside, they shall refer the matter to the chief justice of the supreme court, who shall assign said judges to such counties as he may determine; and the chief justice of the supreme court shall also have power to assign any district judge, when not occupied in holding court in his own district, to hold court in any other district in the state where any judge may be incapacitated from holding court, or there may arise a necessity therefor. But this section shall not be held to affect the right of the judges to interchange holding their terms of court, as now provided by law. [22 G. A., ch. 37; 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 5.]

SEC. 232. Judges to prepare schedule—printing—distribution. On or before the first day of October in each odd-numbered year, the judges shall meet in their respective districts and determine the times and places of holding their courts during the two succeeding calendar years. The plan or schedule thus agreed upon, or ordered by the chief justice of the supreme court when they cannot agree, shall be forthwith forwarded by the district judges to the secretary of state and the clerk of the district court in each county in such district, and the clerk shall file the same and enter it of record in the journal of the court, and cause such order to be published for four weeks in some weekly newspaper published in such county, if there be any such published. The secretary of state shall, within ten days after receiving said orders, or before the first Monday in December after said orders are made, prepare a tabular statement of the times of holding the several courts, as fixed by the several orders in his office, and have printed one thousand copies thereof, which shall be distributed as follows: One copy to each state officer, the state library, the library of the law department of the university, each clerk of the district court and sheriff, and the residue to the county auditors, in proportion to the population of each county, for gratuitous distribution among the attorneys of the county. In preparing said plan or schedule, the judges shall so arrange, if practicable, that each judge shall hold at least one term of court during the year in each of the several counties of his district. [21 G. A., ch. 134, § 6; 15 G. A., ch. 12, § 1; C. '73, § 165; R., §§ 2654–5; C. '51, §§ 1567–8.]

SEC. 233. When special terms ordered. A special term may be ordered in any county at any regular term of court in that county, or at any other time, by any judge of the district, for the trial of all causes pending at the last regular term of said court held prior to said special term, in which either party shall have served a trial notice as provided by law. When ordering a special term, the court or judge shall direct whether a grand or trial jury, or both, shall be summoned. [17 G. A., ch. 89; C. '73, § 166; R., §§ 2656–8; C. '51, §§ 1569–71.]

The authority to hold special terms should never be withheld from a court. It may be regarded as a right which a court of general jurisdiction should exercise ex officio: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

Where a special term of court was provided for the trial of criminal cases only, held, that the jurisdiction of the court at such term was that provided for the trial of criminal cases in general, and was not limited merely to the trial of those in which there was consent: State v. Smith, 7–244.

And held, that at such special term an indictment might be found: State v. Nash, 7–347.

The court may call a grand jury together at a special term: State v. Reid, 20–413, 424.

Whether a judge may, for the purpose of concluding a trial begun during a regular term of court, appoint a special term at a day fixed by law for the regular term in another county, quœre: State v. Knight, 19–94.

Under Revision, §§ 2656–8, held, that a special term which was ordered for the same day fixed for the general term of the same court in another county, but was afterwards adjourned to a later date, was not illegal: State v. Clark, 30–168.

It is not improper to adjourn a term of court in one county in order that the judge may hold an adjourned term in another county, and the proceeding in the latter will not be invalid. This is not holding two terms of court at the same time: State v. Van Auken, 68 N. W., 454.

A special term is not a continuance of the regular term after an adjournment, but is a new term: Dryden v. Wyllis, 54–667.

As to adjournments, see § 235 and notes.

SEC. 234. When judge fails to attend. If the judge does not appear on the day appointed for holding the term, the clerk shall make an entry thereof in his record, and adjourn the court until the next day, and so on until the third day, unless he appears, provided three days are allowed for such term, and if he does not appear by five o'clock p. m. of the third day, and before the expiration of the time allotted to the term, it shall stand adjourned until the next regular term. [C. '73, §§ 167–8; R., §§ 2668–9; C. '51, §§ 1581–2.]

SEC. 235. When special adjournment ordered. If the judge is sick, or for any cause is unable to attend court at the regularly appointed time, he may by letter or telegram direct an adjournment to a particular day, and the clerk shall, on the first day thereof, or as soon after as he receives the order, adjourn the court as directed. [C. '73, § 169; R., § 2670; C. '51, § 1583.]

The judge is clothed with full power over the adjournments of his court: State v. Clark, 30–168.

Where the judge, being absent from the state, wrote and telegraphed to the clerk to adjourn the approaching term of court to a further date, and the clerk, in accordance with the telegram, published a notice of the adjournment, and notified parties, jurors and witnesses, but no proclamation of the adjournment was made at the day for opening the term, and the written order was not filed nor entry thereof upon the record made until after the opening of the term at the time to which it was so adjourned, nor until after defendant, who was held for trial at the regular term under a continuance from a previous term, had filed his protest against being tried at such adjourned term, held, that a nunc pro tunc record of the order was sufficient, and the trial of defendant was properly held at the adjourned term, no prejudice being shown: State v. McGuire, 53–165.

Before the enactment of the provision as to telegrams, held, that a telegram from the judge to the clerk, making the proper direction as to adjournment, was a sufficient written order within the requirements of the former section: State v. Holmes, 56–588.

The adjournment of the January term of court in one county to a term subsequent to the holding of the February term of the court in another county of the same district, held valid: In re Hunter's Estate, 84–388. And see notes to §§ 233 and 248.

SEC. 236. Business stands continued. No recognizance or other instrument or proceeding shall be rendered invalid by reason of there being a failure of the term; but all proceedings pending in court shall be continued to the next regular term, unless an adjournment be made as authorized in the last preceding section. [C. '73, § 170; R., § 2671; C. '51, § 1584.]

SEC. 237. Recognizances continued. In cases of such continuances or adjournments, persons recognized or bound to appear at the regular term, which has failed as aforesaid, shall be held bound in like manner to appear at the time so fixed, and their sureties, if any, shall be liable in case of their non-appearance, in the same manner as though the term had been held at the regular time and they had failed to make their appearance thereat. [C. '73, § 171; R., § 2672; C. '51, § 1585.]

SEC. 239. When no court-house. When there is no court-house at the place where the courts are to be held, its sessions shall be at such suitable place as the board of supervisors provide, but if no such place is provided, the court may direct the sheriff to procure one at the expense of the county. [C. '73, §§ 173–4; R., §§ 2660–1; C. '51, §§ 1573–4.]

Where it appears that a court was sitting at some place other than the court house, it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that it was at a place properly provided for the purpose, if any reason appears why the court house might not be a proper place: State v. Shelledy, 8–477, 509.

SEC. 240. Judges may interchange. The district judges may interchange and hold each other's courts. [C. '73, § 175; R., § 2662; C. '51, § 1575.]

This section is not in conflict with Constitution, art. 5, § 5, and a judge holding court out of his district, in exchange with another judge, is not acting without authority: State v. Stingley, 10–488.

An unauthorized person cannot by consent of parties, or by direction of the court, act as judge. See notes to § 225.

SEC. 241. Judges not to sit together. In districts in which the district court is composed of more than one judge, the judges shall not sit together in the trial of causes, nor upon the hearing of motions for new trials, but may together hold the same term, making an apportionment of the business between them; and in districts composed of more than one county they may hold terms in different counties at the same time. [21 G. A., ch. 128, § 1.]

The statutory provisions by which in the same case two or more district judges are authorized to hold court in the same county at the same time are not unconstitutional: State v. Emmons, 72–265.

Where, after the submission of a cause on deposition to the judge of the circuit court, the circuit was so changed that another judge became judge of such court, held, that a decision of the cause by the new judge was proper: Manning v. Mathews, 66–675.

Where at one term of court a judge signs or makes a memorandum of a decree which is not entered at that term on the record, and before the next term the judge goes out of office, his successor should cause the record to be made up from the previous decree or memorandum, and cannot regard the cause as open for trial: Tracy v. Beeson, 47–155.

Where the judgment rendered by one judge, upon the report of a referee, was set aside by his successor as having been improperly entered in vacation, and a new judgment to the same effect was rendered, held, that the unsuccessful party had no right to have his exceptions to the referee's report passed upon anew by the incoming judge: Mellinger v. Von Behren, 53–374.

SEC. 242. Record to be signed—execution not delayed. The clerk shall from time to time make a record of all proceedings of the court, which, when correct, shall be signed by the judge. When it is not practicable to have all the records prepared and signed during the term, they may be prepared in vacation and corrected and signed at the next succeeding term; but such delay shall not prevent an execution from issuing in the meantime, and all other proceedings may be had in the same manner as though the record had been signed. Entries authorized to be made in vacation shall be signed at the next term of the court. [C. '73, §§ 176–7; R, §§ 2664–5; C. '51 § 1578.]

Signing and approval of record: The provisions of this and the following sections as to signing the record are directory only, and a failure to comply therewith does not render a judgment void: Vanfleet v. Phillips, 11–558; O'Hara v. Leonard, 19–515; Childs v. McChesney, 20–431; Hamilton v. Barton, 20–505.

An approval of the entries at any succeeding term relates back to the time of the entry, and is as effectual as if given at that time: Vanfleet v. Phillips, 11–558.

The expiration of the term of a judge before the approval and signing of the record does not make judgments rendered by him void: Tracy v. Beeson, 47–155.

Though the record of the judgment is not read and approved until the term after it is made, nevertheless exceptions thereto must be taken at the term when the judgment is entered: State v. Orwig, 34–112.

A judgment is valid though the record be not signed by the judge; so held as to a decree signed by the judge in vacation, filed with the clerk, and entered by him without the record being signed: Traer v. Whitman, 56–443.

Although the practice of procuring the signature of the judge to a form of decree is to be commended as tending to secure accurate records, such signature is not the signature of the record contemplated by the statute: Bosch v. Kassing, 64–312.

Signature of orignal draft of decree is sufficient: Smith v. Baldwin, 85–570.

Entries in vacation: The reading, approval and signing of a judgment entry made in vacation at the next term of court does not make it valid where there is no authority to enter a judgment in vacation. Approval at the subsequent term is only allowable as to entries authorized to be made in vacation: Townsley v. Morehead, 9–565; McClure v. Owens, 21–133.

Where a judgment is entered in vacation it is under the control of the court and subject to modification or correction until finally approved: Porter v. McBride, 44–479.

The court may, at the next term after the making of an entry in vacation, proceed to correct or expunge it without notice to the party at whose instance it has been made: Carpenter v. Zuver, 56–390.

When a judgment upon a confession is entered in vacation, it should be approved and signed at the next term: Dullard v. Phelan, 83–471.

Failure of the judge to sign the record will not invalidate the judgment: Ibid.

As to a case reserved for decision in vacation a judgment rendered during the succeeding term will not be void. Jurisdiction is not lost by failure in such case to render a decision during vacation, nor is a resubmission necessary: Reed v. Lane, 65 N. W., 380.

Entry by clerk without authority: The clerk has no authority to enter up a decree not warranted by the entry on the judge's calendar: Smith v. Cumins, 52–143.

Notice of its own records: The court is supposed to know the genuineness of its own records and signature of its officers: State v. Postlewait, 14–446.

A court will not in one case take judicial notice of what has transpired in another case between different parties: Baker v. Mygatt, 14–131.

A court cannot take judicial notice in one case of its records in a different case. So held where it appeared that the opinion of the supreme court in a different case was introduced in evidence on the trial in the court below, but was not set out in the abstract on appeal: Enix v. Miller, 54–551.

The court will, in a proceeding for contempt, take judicial notice of its own orders in the matter out of which the alleged contempt grew: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69–177.

The supreme court cannot, on appeal, take notice of the record in another case in the same trial court, not made part of the record in the case appealed: State v. Lee, 64 N. W., 284. And see notes to § 288.

SEC. 243. Court controls record. The record aforesaid is under the control of the court, and may be amended, or any entry therein expunged, at any time during the term at which it is made, or before it is signed by the judge. [C. '73, § 178; R., § 2606; C. '51 § 1579.]

Correction of records: During all the term the record is under the control of the court, and at any time before adjournment an order of nonsuit or a judgment by default may be set aside on proper showing: Taylor v. Lusk, 9–444.

Until the record is signed it is not conclusive upon the court as against a bill of exceptions subsequently signed: Shepherd v. Brenton, 15–84.

The discovery by the court of an error or mistake in its ruling is good cause for amending or expunging the record thereof as herein provided: Bruce v. Grady, 36–352; and this may be done of its own motion: Wolmenstadt v. Jacobs, 61–372; so a default, improperly entered, may thus be set aside without following the provisions as to setting aside defaults: Boals v. Shules, 29–507.

The action of the court in attempting to amend its record at the next term, without notice to the opposite party, will be void, but will not affect the validity of the record itself as made at the previous term: Elsner v. Shrigley, 80–30.

Where, in entering judgment, attorney's fees were erroneously included, held, that the court should have stricken such allowance from the judgment, and approved the record as thus modified: Dullard v. Phelan, 83–471.

The court has the power at any time during the term to have the record corrected so as to conform to its rulings: Robbins v. Neal, 10–560.

The court has discretionary power to modify or reverse any order during the term at which it is made: Chapman v. Allen, Mor., 23.

The pleadings may be referred to for the purpose of explaining a judgment which is ambiguous on its face: Redhead v. Baker, 86–251.

The power of the courts to revise, correct and change their sentences, at the term at which they were pronounced and before anything has been done under them, has long been recognized both in this country and in England, and any doubt as to the existence of the power is removed by this section: State v. Dougherty, 70–439.

The presiding judge may change a ruling previously made by another judge with the same freedom that he might change a ruling made by himself: McClain v. Capper, 67 N. W., 102.

A formal decree which has been signed by the judge, and copied into the records by the clerk, may be amended before the record has been signed: Bosch v. Kassing, 64–312.

The court may, before a decree is read and approved, correct it on motion to make it conform to the pleadings: Beer v. Nelson, 73–186.

The court may, for a good reason shown, set aside at the same term a previous order: Kirby v. Gates, 71–100.

Where the petition has been held insufficient on demurrer and an amended petition is filed to which defendant again demurs, the court is not bound by its ruling on the first demurrer, but may change its theory of the case and rule on the second demurrer in accordance with its judgment: Van Werden v. Equitable L. Assurance Soc., 68 N. W., 892.

The record of the court being under its control, it may, during the term, change the same as it sees fit; therefore in an action for damages tried to the court without a jury, the court may change its findings as to the amount of damages and enter a judgment for a less amount without giving to the successful party the option of a new trial: Flickinger v. Omaha Bridge & Terminal R. Co., 67 N. W., 372.

The court may, for good cause shown, change an order made during the term. If a motion for such change is made, the party adversely interested should have notice; but if counsel appear for him and are heard, and no prejudice results from want of formal notice, failure to give it will not constitute error: Chicago, I. & D. R. Co. v. Estes, 71-603.

As between a ruling upon demurrer and one made upon final hearing, the latter will prevail, even though they are made by different judges: Richman v. Supervisors of Muscatine County, 77-513.

Where final judgment has been entered of record, approved and signed, the court cannot, even during the same term, set it aside in the absence of and without due notice to the party interested, and an order thus made is void and may be corrected by certiorari: Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Duffie, 67-175.

It is doubtful whether a court should correct its record after the term and before it is signed upon affidavits uncorroborated by anything in the record or within the recollection of the judge. And a refusal to make such correction upon parol evidence will not be interfered with on appeal where the evidence is conflicting: State v. Crosby, 67-352.

This section refers to a record made in a cause, and not to a total omission to make a record, which can be supplied at the succeeding term: Tracy v. Beeson, 47-155, 158.

Further as to the record, see notes to § 288.

SEC. 244. Corrections. Entries made and signed at a previous term can be altered only to correct an evident mistake. [C. '73, § 179; R., § 2667; C. '51, § 1580.]

Correction of evident mistake: The power to change entries on account of evident mistake is not necessarily limited to the term next succeeding the one at which they were made. A correction in a particular case held proper under peculiar circumstances: Hurley v. Dubuque Gas etc., Co., 8-274.

Entries made, approved and signed at a previous term can be altered only to correct an evident mistake: Independent School Dist. v. Ross, 63 N. W., 576.

Entries made at a previous term may be altered and corrected for mistake when it is clearly made to appear: State v. McComb, 18-43, 48.

Where a verdict is returned but no judgment rendered thereon at that term, it is not error to render such judgment at the next term: Shephard v. Brenton, 20-41.

This section does not deprive the court of the power to make a nunc pro tunc entry at a subsequent term of a fact such as consent of parties to trial by a certain method, etc.: Buckwalter v. Craig, 24-215; and a nunc pro tunc order showing certain facts in regard to the impaneling of a grand jury at a previous term held allowable: State v. Munzenmaier, 24-87.

By analogy, the provisions of this section will be followed in the supreme court: Roberts v. Corbin, 26-315, 331.

This section provides for the correction of entries made, approved and signed at a (not the) previous term: Goldsmith v. Clausen, 14-278.

The proceeding by motion to correct a judgment entry reciting a judgment against a party, where it appears that no judgment was in fact rendered, is not limited to one year: Shelley v. Smith, 50-553.

A mistake which may be corrected under this section is a mistake of fact, and not a mistake of law: Knox v. Moser, 72-154.

Where a judge at a term of court signs a decree, which is filed with the papers but not recorded at that term, and before the next term of court goes out of office, the court, at the succeeding term, cannot consider the cause as still open, but should enter the decree previously signed: Tracey v. Beeson, 47-155.

Action of the judge in ruling upon a motion for supplying an omission in the records will not be overruled on appeal where it appears that the facts which it is sought to make of record transpired in the trial before him, and that the evidence upon which he acted in correcting the record was conflicting: Stockdale v. Johnson, 14-178.

An amendment of the record upon motion of one of the parties, supported by an affidavit setting forth an agreement as to what should be submitted to the court, cannot be made under the authority to correct an evident mistake: Eno v. Hunt, 8-346.

The statement of a decree as to the time of its rendition cannot be overcome by the certificate of the clerk as to the time when the decree was filed with him: Buck v. Holt, 74-294.

As to manner of correcting mistakes of the clerk or irregularities in obtaining judgment, see § 4093.

A nunc pro tunc record of exceptions to instructions which is not entered until after the term is not valid: State v. Hathaway, 69 N. W., 449.

Where the entry upon a confession of judgment, by the omission of the clerk failed to show judgment against one of the parties, who, by the confession, was shown to be liable, and who joined therein, held, that such omission might be subsequently corrected by a nunc pro tunc entry. In such case it is not necessary to show diligence: Risser v. Martin, 86-392.

Further as to nunc pro tunc entries, see notes to § 288.

Notice of correction: A motion at a subsequent term to modify the decree in a matter affecting another party should not be sustained, no notice of such motion having been given to the party adversely interested: Wetmore v. Harper, 70–346.

The court cannot, after a judgment, execution and sale, so amend its record as to show proper service of notice which did not before appear, without notice of the proceeding for such amendment having been given to the opposite party: McGlaughlin v. O'Rourke, 12–459.

Where judgment by default is rendered against one defendant, and the case continued as to others, a party against whom default is rendered is not bound by subsequent proceedings in the case: Okey v. Sigler, 82–94.

SEC. 245. Shorthand reporter. Each judge of the district court shall appoint a shorthand reporter who shall, upon the request of either party in a civil case or a criminal case, take and report in full the oral evidence and proceedings in the case, and perform all duties required of him on the trial, as provided by law. [18 G. A., ch. 195 § 1; C. '73, § 181.]

As to the duties of the shorthand reporter, and the effect to be given his transcript of the notes, see § 3675.

SEC. 246. Oath—removal. Such reporter shall take an oath faithfully to perform the duties of his office, which shall be filed in the office of the clerk. He shall attend such sessions of the court as the judge who appointed him may direct, and may be removed by the judge making such appointment. [C. '73, § 182.]

SEC. 247. Decisions in vacation. With consent of parties, actions and other matters pending in the courts named in this chapter may be taken under advisement by the judges, decided and entered of record in vacation, or at the next term; if so entered in vacation, they shall have the same force and effect from the time of such entry as if done in term time. [C. '73, § 183.]

A judgment rendered and entered in vacation, without consent of the parties or any order of court made during term therefor is void: Spear v. Fitchpatrick, 37–127; Balm v. Nunn, 63–641.

The court cannot in vacation enter an order making of record exceptions not properly preserved: State v. Hathaway, 69 N. W., 449.

A judge has no authority, without consent of parties, to render a decision in vacation discharging a garnishee: Laughlin v. Peckham, 66–121.

It is only where authority is specially conferred by statute that the judge is authorized to make orders and exercise judicial functions in vacation: Prosser v. Prosser, 64–378.

Where, by agreement of parties, either party was to have a certain time to file a motion for a new trial to be decided in vacation, and thereafter a motion for a new trial was filed and so decided, held, that a motion in arrest of judgment could not be filed and decided in vacation under the same agreement, it not being expressly provided for therein: Scribner v. Rutherford, 65–551.

Although a judgment be entered after the close of the term and without special direction of the court, yet if not contrary to the pleadings and verdict, and its entry was a matter of course, it is not void, but at most irregular, and such irregularity must be taken advantage of on motion: Collins v. Chantland, 48–241.

The entry of a judgment in vacation, except in cases authorized by statute, is irregular, and whether it is void, quære: Carmichael v. Vandebur, 50–651.

Whether a decree entered in vacation is void or merely irregular, the parties seeking to have it set aside in equity must offer to pay the amount appearing to be justly due, or allow judgment to be rendered for that amount: Byers v. Odell, 56–618.

Where upon the appearance of defendant at a subsequent term, the judgment in vacation was set aside and a new judgment entered of that term, held, that the new judgment was not void: First Nat. Bank v. Hostetter, 61–395.

The court may hear a case and render judgment during vacation if the parties consent thereto: O'Hagen v. O'Hagen, 14–264.

Where parties in open court agreed that judgment should be entered upon the disposition of a motion for a new trial, and that such motion might be decided in vacation, held, that a judgment entered in vacation in pursuance of such arrangement was proper: Hattenback v. Hoskins, 12–109.

An agreement for the submission of a cause and for a decision in vacation as of the last day of the term does not have the effect of extending the time for filing the bill of exceptions: Edwards v. Cosgro, 77–428.

An order of the judge may issue in vacation directing the sheriff as to publication of notice of sale under execution: Herriman v. Moore, 49–171.

Under the circumstances of a particular case, held, that consent to judgment in vacation appeared: Guthrie v. Guthvie, 71–744.

The consent of a party to a cause being determined in vacation, implied from the conduct of his attorney in not objecting thereto, held, sufficient to authorize such decision: Myers v. Funk, 51–92; Babcock v. Wolf, 70–676.

An agreement for a decision in vacation implies that the judge will decide the case at his chambers or wherever he may be when he finally considers it: Johnson v. Mantz, 69–710.

Where a decree was signed by the judge before the expiration of his term of office and delivered to the attorney of one of the parties to be filed in the clerk's office, but was not so filed until the day after the expiration of the judge's term of office, held, that the decree was not therefore rendered invalid: Babcock v. Wolf, 70–676; Guthrie v. Guthrie, 71–744.

A decree signed by the judge and entered in vacation is valid, and not void, though it contain provisions not contained in the memorandum made in the judge's calendar at the trial; nor does the fact that it improperly provides for the sale of real property without redemption render a sale thereunder absolutely void: Traer v. Whitman, 56–443.

Entry of judgment in vacation, when it is not practicable to prepare and enter it in term time, is valid: Ibid.

Judgments in particular cases held to be proper in vacation by stipulation: Falcy v. O'Malley, 77–531; Western Land Co. v. English, 75–507.

This section does not prevent the determination of a cause which has been taken under advisement and the entry of judgment at a later term than that next following its submission: Trulock v. Merte, 72–510.

Entry of judgment on confession, as contemplated in § 3816, may be made by the clerk in vacation and approved, under this section, at the next term: Kendig v. Marble, 58–529.

As to what constitutes the record, see notes to § 288.

SEC. 248. Trials commenced to be concluded—motion for new trial. Whenever a trial has been commenced, it may be concluded and all proceedings in the case thereafter conducted in the usual course, whether the time has arrived for commencing a term in another county in the district or not, and without regard to any other court or term thereof. If a verdict shall be returned after the expiration of the term, a motion for a new trial may be filed at any time on or before the first day of the next term of court. [C. '73, §§ 185–6.]

It not being specified to whom the jury are to return their verdict, held, that it would be good if received by the judge in person. It is not contemplated that such verdict must be received by him sitting as a court: Tilton v. Swift, 40–78.

The fact that the trial is had and completed during the time fixed for the court to be held in another county, the term of such other county having, however, been previously adjourned, will not constitute error: State v. Stevens, 67–557; State v. Peterson, 67–564.

Where it appeared that a judgment was rendered in the court of one county three days after the term of the same court should have commenced in another county, held, not sufficient to render such judgment void, even though it did not appear affirmatively of record that the term of court fixed for the other county had been adjourned: Weaver v. Cooledge, 15–244.

Where a trial is commenced in the midst of a term, under the bona fide expectation and belief that it can be concluded before the day shall arrive when the judge is by law directed, but not imperatively required, to hold court in another county, he may remain and conclude that case, receive the verdict and pass judgment, even though this may happen to be done on a day when regularly he would be opening or holding court in another county: State v. Knight, 19–94.

A term of court in one county may legally be extended beyond the time at which the same court, by the terms fixed by statute, should be in session in another county. At least a judge may, if he sees proper, extend the term in one county during the first three days in another county: Cook v. Smith, 54–636.

Before enactment of above section the rule was otherwise: Davis v. Fish, 1 G. Gr., 406; Grable v. State, 2 G. Gr., 559; Sheppard v. Wilson, Mor., 448. And see notes to § 233.

SEC. 249. Change of venue—to where. When a change of venue is granted on the ground of objection made to the judge, he may, in his discretion, if there be a judge or judges of the same district against whom there is no objection, assign the cause to one of such judges for trial. If there be no other judge of his district against whom there is no objection, then he may, in his discretion, send the cause for trial to the nearest and most convenient county of another district, or to a county of another district agreed upon by the parties, for trial before a judge of such district; or he may procure another judge of another district to interchange with him for the trial of such cause. [21 G. A., ch. 134, § 10.]

Further as to change of place of trial, see § 3507.

SEC. 250. Probate powers conferred on clerk. The clerk of the district court shall have and exercise within his county all the powers and jurisdiction of the court and of the judge thereof, in the following matters:

First. The appointment, when not contested, of resident administrators, executors, and guardians of minors, and the approval of any and all bonds given by administrators, executors, trustees and guardians in the discharge of their several trusts;

Second. The examination and approval of all intermediate or interlocutory accounts or reports of administrators, executors and guardians;

Third. The making of all necessary orders in relation to the personal effects of a deceased person, where no objection is filed, and perform all other acts within his jurisdiction, as provided for in this code. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 251. Clerk's actions may be reviewed. Any person aggrieved by any order made or entered by the clerk, under the powers conferred in the last section, may have the same reviewed in court, on motion filed at the next term and not afterwards, unless upon good cause shown within one year, and upon such notice as the court or a judge thereof may prescribe. Upon the filing of such motion, the clerk shall place the cause or proceeding on the docket without additional docket fee, and the matter shall stand for hearing or trial de novo in open court. [Same, § 14.]

The action of the court with reference to the appointment of a guardian of the person and property of a minor by the clerk is reviewable only on errors assigned: Lawrence v. Thomas, 84–362.

SEC. 252. Validity of clerk's orders—not to make reports for parties. The records, orders and judgments made and entered by the clerk as hereinbefore provided, and not reversed, set aside or modified by the court, shall stand, and be of the same force, validity and effect, and shall be entitled to the same faith and credit, as if made by the court or by the judge thereof. No clerk, deputy or employe shall make or assist in making, drafting or filling out any report of any administrator, executor, guardian, assignee, receiver, trustee, or any other report to be filed in his office. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 253. Salary of judges. The salary of each judge of the district court shall be two thousand five hundred dollars per year. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 254. Compensation of shorthand reporters. Shorthand reporters of district courts shall be paid six dollars for each day's attendance upon the court under the direction of the judge, out of the county treasury, upon the certificate of the judge holding the court; also, for transcribing shorthand notes, six cents a hundred words, to be paid for, in civil cases, by the party ordering the same; the charge for reporting in all cases, except where a defendant in a criminal case is acquitted, to be taxed as a part of the costs in the case. If a defendant in a criminal cause has perfected an appeal from a judgment against him, and shall satisfy a judge of the court from which the appeal is taken that he is unable to pay for a transcript of the evidence, such judge may order the same made at the expense of the county. [18 G. A., ch. 195, § 2; C. '73, § 3777.]

The costs of the transcript of the reporter's notes are to be taxed as part of the costs on appeal: Palmer v. Palmer, 66 N. W., 734.

If the court refuses to order a transcript of the evidence in a criminal case to be made at the expense of the county on an appeal by defendant, such exercise of discretion will not be interfered with on appeal: State v. Waddle, 64 N. W., 276.

CHAPTER 6.

OF THE SUPERIOR COURTS.

SECTION 255. Establishment and effect of. Any city in this state containing seven thousand inhabitants, whether organized under a special charter or the general law for the incorporation of cities and towns, may establish a superior court as hereinafter provided, which, when established, shall take the place of the police court of such city. [21 G. A., ch. 2; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 1.]

SEC. 256. Submission to voters—election of judge—result certified. Upon the petition of one hundred citizens of any such city, the mayor, by and with the consent of the council, may, at least ten days before an annual election for city officers, issue a proclamation submitting to the qualified voters of said city the question of establishing said court. At the same election, and every fourth year thereafter (if the said court is established), there shall be elected a judge of the superior court, the votes for whom shall be upon the same ballot with other city officers. Should a majority of all the votes cast at such election be in favor of said court, the same shall thereby be established, and the said judge shall qualify and hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor is elected and qualified. Immediately after each election of said judge, the mayor of said city shall transmit a certificate of the election of said judge to the governor of the state, who shall thereupon issue to him a commission empowering him to act as judge as herein provided. [19 G. A., ch. 24, § 2, 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 2.]

This provision for the submission of the question to popular vote is not unconstitutional: Lytle v. May, 49–224.

SEC. 257. Judge—qualification—bond as clerk. Said judge shall be a qualified elector of the city, and a practicing attorney at law, and shall subscribe in writing the same oath required of judges of the district court, and file the same with the mayor of the city, and when he acts as clerk thereof he shall give bond to the state of Iowa, in the sum of four thousand dollars, for the faithful discharge of his duties as clerk, which must be filed with and approved by the mayor; and the effect of such election and qualification shall be to abolish the office of police judge of such city. [16 G. A., ch. 143, § 3.]

SEC. 258. Vacancy—inability. Should the office of judge become vacant, the mayor, by and with the consent of the council, shall appoint a judge, who shall hold the office until the next annual city election, and until his successor is elected and qualified, who shall be chosen to fill the unexpired term. And in case of inability of any judge to act, through sickness or other cause, a judge shall be so appointed to hold during such inability. [26 G. A., ch. 77; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 4.]

SEC. 259. Terms. There shall be held not less than eight nor more than eleven terms of court in each year, the times being arranged by the judge in such manner as shall least conflict with the terms of the district court of the county where said superior court is held, to be fixed by general order made of record, at least ten days before the first term in each year; but, as a police court, it shall always be open for the dispatch of business. [22 G. A., ch. 40, § 4; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 5.]

SEC. 260. Jurisdiction—attachments of real estate—city prisons used. Said court shall have jurisdiction concurrent with the district court in all civil matters, except in probate matters and actions for divorce, alimony and separate maintenance. It shall have exclusive original jurisdiction to try and determine all actions, civil and criminal, for the violation of city ordinances, and all jurisdiction conferred on police courts as now or as may hereafter be provided by law, and concurrent jurisdiction with justices of the peace. Writs of error and appeals may be taken thereto from justices' courts in the township in which the court is held, and, by consent of parties, from any other township in the county. For the trial of criminal actions on information and complaint, the court shall be open at such times and under such rules as it shall prescribe. In actions by attachment, where real property is levied on by writ of attachment, the officer levying the writ shall make entry thereof in the incumbrance book in the office of the clerk of the district court, in like manner and with like effect as of levies made in the district court. Parties may be committed to the city prison for confinement or punishment, instead of the county jail, at the option of the judge. In the absence of the judge, or in case of his inability to act, then, during such time, proceedings for the violation of city ordinances may be had before a justice of the peace residing in such city. [22 G. A., ch. 40, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 3; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 6.]

The superior court has, as to cases originally brought therein, concurrent jurisdiction throughout the county with courts of general jurisdiction. The limitation of jurisdiction to the township in which the city is located applies only to appeals and writs of error from justices of the peace: Winet v. Berryhill, 55–411.

As to jurisdiction of superior court at a county seat in a case where the district court is also held at another place in the county, which is thus divided for court purposes, see Whitaker v. Daly, 78–31.

The jurisicdtion over appeals in civil cases from justices of the peace is not exclusive of that of the district court: Hickox v. Nutting, 55–403; Hickox v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 55–431. And see § 4546.

The superior court has jurisdiction of a proceeding by certiorari: College of Physicians and Surgeons v. Guilbert, 69 N. W., 453.

In all civil matters, other than as expressly excepted in this section, the superior court has jurisdiction concurrent with the district court to try and determine the issue whether in law or in equity and to render judgment thereon as fully as the district court might do and when an existing lien on real estate is established and foreclosed the court may direct the property to be sold to satisfy the judgment; but in all cases process for the sale of real estate from judgments of the superior court must issue out of the district court upon transcript filed therein: International Trust Co. v. Keokuk St. R. Co., 90 90.

But held, that where by agreement of parties sale of property was made under order of the superior court such sale would be valid: Ibid.

SEC. 261. Changes of venue—no jury in criminal cases. Changes of venue may be taken from said court in all civil actions to the district court of the same or another county, in the same manner, for like causes and with the same effect as the venue is changed from the district court. All criminal actions, including those for the violation of the city ordinances, shall be tried summarily and without a jury, saving to the defendant the right of appeal to the district court, which appeal shall be taken in the same time and manner as appeals are taken from justices' courts in criminal actions. [22 G. A., ch. 40, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 4; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 7.]

A change of venue to the proper county may be granted where the action is brought in the wrong county, as in cases in the district court: Day v. Greenwood, 64 N. W., 789.

Under the provisions of this section before amendment, held, that there was no law in force authorizing an appeal from a superior court except to the supreme court, and therefore the defendant in a prosecution in the superior court had the right of trial by a jury: Creston v. Nye, 74–369.

SEC. 262. Powers of judge. The judge shall have the same power in regard to injunctions, writs, orders and other proceedings, out of court, as are possessed by the judges of the district court. [16 G. A., ch. 143, § 8.]

SEC. 263. Court of record—laws relating to district court to apply. The superior court shall be a court of record. All statutes governing the district court as to venue, commencement of action, jurisdiction, process, pleadings, practice, modes of trial, judgment, execution and costs shall apply to and govern the superior courts, except when the same may be inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 264. Seal. Each such court shall have its own seal, with the words "superior court" and the name of the city and state thereon. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 265. When recorder to act as clerk. As long as the business of the court can be done without a clerk, the judge shall be the clerk of said court. Whenever, from the accumulation of causes and other demands upon the court, a clerk becomes necessary, the city recorder or clerk shall be the clerk thereof. He shall give bonds as required when the judge acts as clerk, and perform the same services as required by law of the clerk of the district court. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 266. Marshal as sheriff. The city marshal shall be the executive officer of said court, and his duties and authority in court and in executing process shall correspond with those of the sheriff of the county in the district court, and with process from that court. But the process of said court may be also served by the sheriff. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 267. Costs—amount of—how paid—to be accounted for—fines. The costs and fees of said courts in civil actions shall be the same as in the district court, except as herein otherwise provided, and the clerk of the superior court shall account for and pay over to the city all fees that may be paid into the said court, and also all fines for the violation of the city ordinances. Of all other fines he shall render the same account as is provided for justices of the peace. In actions for the violation of city ordinances, if unsuccessful, the city shall pay all costs, the same as provided by law for the county in criminal actions prosecuted in the name and on behalf of the state. The fees in criminal actions shall be the same as in justices' courts, and shall be paid and accounted for as hereinbefore stated, and as otherwise provided by law for justices of the peace and their courts. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 268. Right to jury, on demand. When causes are assigned for trial, any party desiring a jury shall then make his demand therefor, or the same shall be deemed to have been waived. Causes in which a jury has been demanded shall be tried first in their order, and when disposition shall have been made of such causes the jury shall be discharged from further attendance at that term. [19 G. A., ch. 24, § 5; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 14.]

SEC. 269. How jurors provided. In order to provide jurors for the superior courts, the county auditor, clerk of the district court and recorder, of the county in which any city having a superior court is located, shall meet at the court-house on the third Monday of February, April, June, August, October and December of each year, and proceed to draw, from the first box provided by chapter eleven of this title, and in the manner provided by this chapter, the names of fifteen persons to act as jurors in said superior court. The persons whose names are drawn at any drawing under the provisions hereof shall be subject to jury duty, and constitute the regular panel of jurors in said superior court, for the two calendar months commencing with the first day of the month next succeeding the drawing. A list of the names of the persons drawn at each drawing provided by this act shall be immediately made out and certified by the clerk of the district court, under his hand and seal, and such certified list transmitted by mail to the recorder or clerk of the city in which said superior court is located, and a precept of said superior court shall issue, five days before the first day of each term of court, for the jurors constituting the panel for such term, under the provisions hereof, which precept shall be issued and served as provided by law in like cases in the district court. [16 G. A., ch. 143, § 15.]

SEC. 270. Jury of six unless twelve demanded. The jury shall consist of six qualified jurors, unless, when a jury is demanded as provided in this chapter, the party at that time shall demand a jury of twelve, and in all civil cases the party requesting a jury of twelve shall at the time of making such demand deposit with the clerk the entire additional expense of the additional jurors, which sum shall be fixed by the court and paid to the clerk at the time of making such demand. Talesmen may be summoned on the order of the court by the marshal from the body of the county. All such deposits of additional expense for jurors shall be paid into the county treasury at the close of each term of such superior court, and the county treasurer shall give duplicate receipts therefor, one to be held by said clerk, and the other to be presented by him to the county auditor, who shall charge the treasurer with the amount thereof in the proper account. [22 G. A., ch. 40, § 3; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 6; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 16.]

As a party may have a trial by a jury of twelve by depositing the amount necessary to cover the additional expense caused thereby, the provisions of this section are not unconstitutional: Conners v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 74–383.

SEC. 271. Challenges. In all civil cases, where the jury shall consist of six jurors, the challenges allowed to either party shall be limited to three each, but where the jury shall consist of twelve jurors, the same number of challenges shall be allowed to either party as is or may be allowed in the district court. [22 G. A., ch. 40, § 5.]

SEC. 272. Appeals to supreme court. All appeals from judgments or orders of said court, or the judge thereof, in civil actions shall be taken to the supreme court in the same manner, under the same restrictions, within the same time and with the same effect as appeals are taken from the district court to the supreme court. [19 G. A., ch. 24, § 7; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 17.]

SEC. 273. Judgments made liens by transcript. Judgments in said court may be made liens upon real estate in the county in which the city is situated, by filing transcripts of the same in the district court, as provided in this code in relation to judgments of justices of the peace, and with equal effect, and from the time of such filing they shall be treated in all respects as to their effect and mode of enforcement as judgments rendered in the district court as of that date, and no execution can thereafter be issued from the said superior court on such judgments, and no real property shall be levied on or sold on process issued out of the superior court. Judgments of said court may be made liens upon real estate in other counties in the same manner as judgments in the district courts. [19 G. A., ch. 24, § 8; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 18.]

Sales under process of the superior court are limited to personal property. Sales of real property can be had after a transcript of the judgment of the superior court is filed in the district court and thereby made a lien: International Trust Co. v. Keokuk St. R. Co., 90–90.

SEC. 274. City attorney to file informations. It shall be the duty of the city attorney or solicitor to file informations in the superior court for violations of the city ordinances and prosecute the same, and for such services he shall receive such compensation as the city council shall allow. [16 G. A., ch. 143, § 19.]

SEC. 275. Shorthand reporters—compensation. The judge of each superior court may appoint a shorthand reporter. All provisions relating to shorthand reporters and their duties in the district court, in so far as applicable in every respect, shall govern, except the compensation shall not exceed five dollars a day for the time actually employed. [21 G. A., ch. 44, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 276. Question of abolishing court to be submitted. Upon the petition of one-third of the qualified electors of any city in which a superior court is now or hereafter established, the mayor, by and with the consent of the council of such city, shall, at least ten days before an election for city officers, issue a proclamation submitting to the qualified voters of said city the proposition to abolish the superior court. The ballots shall be printed, and in the following form: "Shall the proposition to abolish the superior court of ———— be adopted?" and the election shall be conducted in all respects in accordance with the provisions of the election law. [24 G. A., ch. 5, § 1.]

SEC. 277. When abolished—duties of mayor, judge and clerk. If a majority of the votes cast at said election are for abolishing said superior court, the mayor of such city shall immediately transmit a certificate showing such fact to the secretary of state, and said court shall be abolished, to take effect upon the date of the expiration of the term of office of the judge then upon the bench, and the effect of such abolition shall be to revive and re-establish in such city the police court and all the powers incident thereto, in the same manner as the law prescribes for cities where superior courts do not exist. The judge of said superior court shall, before retiring from said position, turn over to the clerk of said city the judgment records of his court in which are entered and recorded all judgments and fines for the violation of ordinances of such city, together with all money collected as fines for the violation of such ordinances, and take the clerk's receipt therefor. All other books, records and papers pertaining to said superior court shall be turned over to the clerk of the district court of the county in which such city is situated, and his duplicate receipt taken therefor, together with all the money in the hands of said judge which has come into his hands as judge of said court, one receipt to be filed with the county auditor, and said judge shall immediately make reports to the board of supervisors and city council as to the disposition made of said books, papers, dockets and moneys, as herein provided. It shall be the duty of the clerk of the district court, upon receipt of such books, dockets and records belonging to said superior court, to transfer all cases pending before the same, as shown by said record, and of which the district court would have jurisdiction, to the proper appearance docket of the district court, and to notify the parties or their attorneys of such transfer, and such causes shall stand for trial as if brought originally in said court. All causes pending in the superior court at the time it is abolished, of which the district court would not have jurisdiction, shall be transferred to the police court. The clerk of the district court shall make transcripts and issue executions from the records of said superior court under the seal of the district court, for which he shall be entitled to charge and receive the same fees as are now allowed for like services in the district court, and all papers so issued shall have the same force and effect as if issued from the superior court during its existence. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 278. Salary of judge. The salary of each superior court judge shall be two thousand dollars per annum, and paid quarterly; the first two quarters from the city treasury, and the last two from the county treasury of the county wherein said court is located. [16 G. A., ch. 143, § 13.]

SEC. 279. Compensation of clerk. When a clerk or recorder of a city in which such court is established is required to perform the duties of clerk thereof, he shall receive such compensation for such services as the city council may allow. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 280. Compensation of marshal. The marshal shall receive the same fees and compensation for serving the process of said court, and for other services required of the sheriff in the district court, as the sheriff receives for like services. [Same, § 12.]

CHAPTER 7.

OF GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SECTION 281. Judges not to practice. No judge of any court of record shall practice as an attorney or counselor at law, or give advice in relation to any action pending or about to be brought in any of the courts of this state. [C. '73, § 187; R., § 2674; C. '51, § 1587.]

SEC. 282. Attestation of process. All process issued by the clerk of the court shall bear date the day it is issued, and be attested in the name of the clerk who issued it, and under the seal of the court. [C. '73, § 188; R., § 2682; C. '51, § 1592.]

SEC. 283. Judicial proceedings public. All judicial proceedings must be public, unless otherwise specially provided by statute or agreed upon by the parties. [C. '73, § 189; R., § 2683; C. '51, § 1953.]

To give existence to a court, its officers and the time and place of holding it must be such as are prescribed by law. The term "open court" as used in the statutes is to be understood as conveying the idea that the court must be in session, organized for the transaction of judicial business. Hence, a trial before a referee cannot be considered a trial in open court: Hobart v. Hobart, 45–501.

While witnesses may be separated and excluded from the place of trial, in the discretion of the court, upon the application of a party, an exception arises in the case of a party to the action, who has the right to be present during the trial: Jemmison v. Gray, 29–537.

That there may be a separate examination of witnesses, see Hubbell v. Ream, 31–289.

SEC. 284. When judge disqualified. A judge or justice is disqualified from acting as such, except by mutual consent of parties, in any case wherein he is a party or interested, or where he is related to either party by consanguinity or affinity within the fourth degree, or where he has been attorney for either party in the action or proceeding. But this section shall not prevent him from disposing of any preliminary matter not affecting the merits of the case. [C. '73, § 190; R., § 2685; C. '51, § 1595.]

A judge who is uncle to one of the parties to an action is within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity and is disqualified from presiding at the trial, except by mutual consent of parties: Chase v. Weston, 75–159.

Where the judge was related within the prescribed degree to plaintiff, but it appeared that defendant, with knowledge of that fact, entered into a stipulation by which plaintiff should not take change of venue, and went to trial without objection to the judge, held, that he thereby waived objection on that ground, and the disability was removed by mutual consent: Stone v. Marion County, 78–14.

A judgment rendered by a judge who has previously been an attorney in the case is not to be deemed absolutely void, where it does not appear that the judgment has ever been questioned or objected to by the party interested: Floyd County v. Cheney, 57–160.

SEC. 285. No business done on Sunday, except. No court can be opened nor any judicial business transacted on Sunday, except:

1. To give instructions to a jury then deliberating on its verdict;
2. To receive a verdict or discharge a jury;
3. To exercise the powers of a single magistrate in a criminal proceeding;
4. And such other acts as are provided by law. [C. '73, § 191; R., § 2686; C. '51, § 1596.]

To avoid a judgment, regular on its face, on the ground that it was rendered on Sunday, the fact that it was so rendered should be clearly established, beyond the reasonable doubt naturally arising from the difficulty of establishing the precise time of a transaction: Bishop v. Carter, 29–165.

Before enactment of this section a verdict received, or a judgment entered, on Sunday was void: Davis v. Fish, 1 G. Gr., 406.

SEC. 286. Courts to be held at places provided, except. Courts must be held at the places provided by law, except for the determination of actions, special proceedings and other matters not requiring a jury, when they may, by consent of the parties therein, be held at some other place. [C. '73, § 192; R., § 2687; C. '51, § 1597.]

Notwithstanding the statutory provision that courts must be held at the places provided by law, probate courts are expressly authorized (see § 3261) to appoint the time and place for the hearing of matters requiring notice: Casey v. Stewart, 60–160.

But the provision authorizing probate courts to appoint time and place for hearing cases was held not to authorize a probate court to sit outside the county, unless, perhaps, by consent of parties, and that any order made by the court outside the county in which the case was pending would be void: Capper v. Sibley, 65–754. (But see later provisions in § 3261.)

A trial at a place not within the county where the suit was pending, had by agreement of parties during vacation, held binding: O'Hagen v. O'Hagen, 14–264.

Where it is agreed that a case shall be heard in vacation at a particular place, and it is heard, but at another place, the record showing that counsel on both sides were present at the argument and made no objection to the place of hearing, it will be presumed that objection to the place was waived: Johnson v. Mantz, 69 710.

A party is bound to take notice of the place of sitting of the court, where, by reasonable effort, he might have ascertained such fact: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69–177.

There is no authority to adjourn a court to a private house or other place not provided by law for the purpose of a trial, and if this is done the court so sitting is without jurisdiction. The proceedings in the place not provided by law are of no effect: Funk v. Carroll County, 64 N. W., 768.

Therefore, held, that where a continuance was asked on account of the inability of a witness to be present by reason of sickness and the court adjourned to the residence of such witness for the purpose of hearing his testimony, such proceeding was erroneous; that the continuance ought to have been granted, and that the evidence of the witness thus taken could not be considered on appeal: Ibid.

Where it appears that a court was sitting at some place, other than the court-house, it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that it was at a place properly provided for the purpose, if any reason appears why the court-house might not be a proper place: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 509.

CHAPTER 8.

OF THE CLERK OF THE DISTRICT COURT.

SECTION 287. Office—duties. The clerk of the district court shall keep his office at the county seat, attend the sessions of the district court himself or by deputy, keep the records, papers and seal, and record the proceedings of the court as hereinafter directed, under the direction of the judge. [C. '73, § 194; R., §§ 343, 2664; C. '51, § 1577.]

As the court knows its own clerk and his deputy, it is not necessary that the signature of either one of them to a jurat should be authenticated by an official seal: Finn v. Rose, 12-565.

SEC. 288. Records—books to be kept. The records of said court shall consist of the original papers filed in all proceedings, and the books to be kept by the clerk thereof as follows:

1. One containing the entries of the proceedings of the court, which may be known as the "record book," and which is to have an index referring to each proceeding in each cause under the names of the parties, both plaintiff and defendant, and under the name of each person named in either party;

2. One containing an abstract of the judgments, having in separate and appropriate columns the names of the parties, the date of the judgment, the damages recovered, costs, the date of the issuance and return of executions, with the entry of satisfaction, and other memoranda, which book may be known as the "judgment docket," and is to have an index like that required for the record book;

3. One in which to enter in detail the costs and fees in each action or proceeding under the title of the same, with an index like that required above, and which may be known as the "fee book";

4. One in which to enter the following matters in relation to any judgment under which real property is sold, entering them after the execution is returned: The title of the action, the date of the judgment, the amount of damages recovered, the total amount of costs, and the officer's return in full; which book may be known as the "sale book," and is to have an index like those required above;

5. One to be called the "incumbrance book," in which the sheriff shall enter a statement of the levy of every attachment on real estate;

6. One to be known as the "appearance docket," which shall contain all matters required by law to be kept therein; but the entries provided for in this subdivision and subdivisions two and three may be combined in one book, indexed as provided in subdivision one hereof, which, when thus kept, shall be known as the "combination docket";

7. One in which an index of all liens in said court shall be kept. [C. '73, §§ 196–7; R., §§ 345–6, 3243.]

What constitutes the record: All the papers of the case constitute the record, and the decree assumes them and their contents: Campbell v. Ayres, 6-339.

What deemed part of: An affidavit for publication, when filed, becomes part of the record: Bradley v. Jamison, 46-68, 73.

It is a common practice to keep records, other than the ordinary journals of the court, in which judgments by confession and by default are entered, and such practice has been sustained: Brown v. Barngrover, 82-204.

Taking notice of: Ordinarily a court will take notice of what has been done by it or in its presence and evidence of the result of one trial is not required in a subsequent one: Cleveland v. Atkinson, 63 N. W., 465.

The supreme court cannot on appeal take notice of the record in another case in the same court which is not made a part of the record in the case appealed: State v. Lee, 64 N. W., 284. And see notes to § 242.

Judge's calendar not part of record: The judge's calendar or docket is not a record of the court: Rogers v. Morton, 51-709; Traer v. Whitman, 56-443; Case v. Plato, 54-64.

Where a decree was entered in vacation containing provisions not found in the memorandum on the judge's docket, held, that such provisions would not therefore be void: Traer v. Whitman, 56-443.

The judge's minutes kept by him in his calendar are not sufficient to make matter of record exceptions taken by a party to the ruling of the court: Lewis v. May, 22-599.

The judge's calendar is not a record provided for by law, and the entries made therein constitute the mere announcement of the judge's mental conclusion, and not the court's action: Miller v. Wolf, 63-233; State v. Manley, 63-344.

A judgment cannot be proven by a memorandum on the judge's calendar: Miller v. Wolf, 63-233.

A judgment evidenced only by a memorandum on the judge's calendar and an entry thereof filed with the clerk but not approved by the court, is of no validity and an execution issued thereon may be enjoined although the judgment is subsequently entered of record: Winter v. Coulthard, 62 N. W., 733.

The judge's minutes upon his calendar do not constitute a judgment. Where it was sought, in an action on an injunction bond, to prove the dismissal of the action for injunction by proof of the entry on the judge's calendar "dismissed as per stipulation," and a stipulation was not shown, the evidence was held not sufficient: Towle v. Leacox, 59-42.

The entry in a judge's calendar is for the guidance of the clerk, and such entry is evidence tending to show a decree was ordered: In re Estate of Edwards, 58-431.

The minutes of the judge are intended as a direction to the clerk and are in the most general form: Burroughs v. Ellis, 76-649.

While the judge's notes will not control or vary the formal judgment entered, yet in the absence of higher proof, they are entitled to their due weight as to what transpired or was done in the case: Keller v. Killion, 9-329.

The dropping of a case from the judge's calendar is not necessarily a dismissal of the case and a question whether it has been dismissed may be determined on the motion to reinstate the case on the calendar: Barber v. Scott, 68 N. W., 919.

The bar docket constitutes no part of the records of the court, and can only become a part of the record in a particular case by being incorporated into or sufficiently identified by a bill of exceptions: Gifford v. Cole, 57-272.

Impeachment of record: The record of the judgment must be taken as absolute verity. On appeal the supreme court will not consider affidavits presented to the court below for the purpose of impeaching it: Mornyer v. Cooper, 35-257.

A writ of execution upon a judgment is as to third persons only secondary evidence of the amount due upon such judgment, the judgment itself being the first and best evidence: Parsons v. Hedges, 15-119.

Where the record is blank as to the name of the party against whom judgment is rendered, such judgment will be reversed on appeal: Riggleswerth v. Reed, Mor., 19.

Correction of Record: Where the judgment, erroneous when entered, is corrected in the proper manner before the rights of third persons have been acquired against it, such correction will be valid as against such subsequent rights: Monroe v. West, 12-119.

As to correction of records in general, see notes to §§ 242-244.

Entry nunc pro tunc: Courts possess the inherent authority to enter judgment nunc pro tunc, and lapse of time will not bar its exercise. Such power is not taken away, nor the time within which it may be exercised affected, by the provisions of the statute with regard to proceedings to correct mistakes in the entries of the clerk. Therefore, held, that where the judgment had in fact been rendered by the court, as shown by the minutes in the judge's calendar, but had not been entered up by the clerk, a motion three years and six months afterwards for the entry of judgment nunc pro tunc was proper: Fuller v. Stebbins, 49-376.

A judgment nunc pro tunc, entered while an appeal from the ruling upon a demurrer was pending in the supreme court, and without the appellee having elected to stand upon his demurrer, and entered without notice to him, held unauthorized and void: Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 30-191.

Where the court has failed to make record entry of an essential act, such omission may be supplied upon motion nunc pro tunc, but such entries are limited to supplying omissions occurring through oversight or negligence, and cannot be made to alter or expunge a record: Goodrich v. Conrad, 28-298.

Held not error, in an action on a bail bond, to admit in evidence the entry of the court ordering the bond filed nunc pro tunc, it appearing that the bond had been in fact deposited in the clerk's office at and ever since the date upon which it was so marked as filed: State v. Guisenhause, 20-227; State v. Patterson, 23-575.

Where a nunc pro tunc judgment in rem was substituted for a personal judgment rendered twelve years before in an attachment proceeding, and the defendant, who had previously conveyed his interest in the land, was served by publication, held, that the nunc pro tunc judgment was not available against the defendant's grantee, because notice upon the defendent by publication was unauthorized, as he had no interest in the land, and as the grantee was not made a party to such proceeding her rights were in no way affected by it: Cassidy v. Woodward, 77-354.

Where an entry was made of the suggestion of the death of plaintiff and the substitution of his administrator, the name of the administrator being left blank, and afterwards by nunc pro tunc order the name of the administrator was inserted, held, that such correction was proper: Maish v. Crangle, 80–650.

In a particular case, held, that an entry in the probate court of the allowance of a claim which was duly filed and proved might be made nunc pro tunc: In re Estate of Seavey, 82–440.

In a particular case, held, that evidence was sufficient to justify the court in correcting and making of record by a nunc pro tunc entry a prior order in a probate case as to the distribution of assets: Jones v. Field, 80–281.

When the record entry is lost or destroyed, the judgment may be shown by secondary evidence; and memoranda of a judge entered in his docket, when duly authenticated, may be considered as evidence of what the judgment was: Ibid.

As to nunc pro tunc entries see also notes to § 244.

Lost records: Courts of record have inherent power, independent of statute, to restore judgments the records of which have been lost or destroyed, as fully as other records; and such power is not taken away by the statute permitting action to be brought on such judgments: Gammon v. Knudson, 46–455.

In a proceeding to restore the record of a judgment which had been destroyed, held, that the prior existence of the record and its destruction were the only matters in issue and its original validity could not be inquired into: Kanke v. Herrum, 48–276.

In a proceeding to supply lost records it is error to make the substitution in such form as to bind a party holding under the original party to the proceeding without proof that the record as it originally existed was such as to be binding upon the new party: McDonald v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 61–192.

Where an indictment is lost the court may, upon motion, substitute a copy, and proceed thereon as upon the original: State v. Rivers, 58–102; State v. Stevisiger, 61–623; State v. Shank, 79–47; State v. Thomas, 66 N. W., 743.

Evidence as to the contents of records of the court destroyed by fire, held sufficient in a particular case to establish a decree of divorce rendered therein: In re Estate of Edwards, 58–431.

Where a pleading supposed to be lost is supplied by a copy, and afterward the original is found, the substitute should be, on motion, stricken from the files: Sweet v. Brown, 61–669.

As to supplying by substitution written testimony which has been lost, see Loomis v. McKenzie, 48–416.

Par. 1. Record book: This section so far as it requires the clerk to keep one book known as the record book is directory merely, and is not violated by keeping a separate book for foreclosure decrees: Carr v. Bosworth, 72–530.

Record necessary: There can be no judgment until it is entered in the proper records of the court. It cannot exist in the memory of the officers of the court or in memoranda entered in books not intended to preserve the records of judgments: Balm v. Nunn, 63–641.

Parol evidence is not admissible to show that judgment was rendered, it not being claimed that any record was ever made thereof: Cadwell v. Dullaghan, 74–239.

Judgment entries, and even entries in the judgment docket, without other parts of the record, may be introduced in evidence, and will be presumed to have been in accordance with the pleadings and the evidence, unless the contrary is made to appear: American Emigrant Co. v. Fuller, 83–599.

Where the entry of the judgment was blank as to the amount of damages and specified only the amount of costs, held, that it was valid only as to the costs, although the judge's calendar contained an entry directing the clerk to assess the damages, and the judgment docket contained an entry of the judgment for the amount of damages thus assessed: Case v. Plato, 54–64.

The entry of a judgment, blank as to the amount, is not effectual: Roane v. Hamilton, 70 N. W., 181.

A judgment is valid as to costs although the amount thereof is not filled into the record: Lind v. Adams, 10–398; Frankel v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70–424.

Construction: It is always proper, and in cases where the entry is obscure or not clear it is necessary, to read the record entry of the judgment in the light of the pleadings and the entire record: Fowler v. Doyle, 16–534; Mayfield v. Bennett, 48–194.

Where the entry recited that "service of notice had been made upon" defendant, and the record showed a service by publication, held, that it would not be presumed that there was personal service: Mayfield v. Bennett, 48–194.

Where the proof of a judgment is involved, the entire pleadings and records of the case are receivable in evidence: Smith v. Smith, 22–516.

The pleadings in the case constitute a part of the record, and the judgment may be established and construed with the aid of the light which they reflect upon it. If from an examination of the whole record such a construction may be fairly placed upon a judgment as to relieve it from error, the court should give it that construction: Tyler v. Langworthy, 37–555.

The memoranda of a judge entered in his docket are not part of the record, but they are admissible in evidence to prove a judgment or order which has been lost or destroyed: Jones v. Field, 80–281. And see Jamison v. Weaver, 84–611, and other cases cited supra under this section.

In a particular case, held, that there was no conflict between such minutes and the decree of the court: Burroughs v. Ellis, 76–649.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that the variance between the names "Van Nortrick " and Van Nortwick " was not sufficient to prevent a former adjudication from being considered a bar to a subsequent action: Mallory v. Riggs, 76–748.

Presumptions: The records of a court, regular upon their face, have a large degree of sanctity attached to them, and are not to be lightly overcome: Wheeler v. Cox, 56–36.

Where the record of the court states an act of the court, it will be presumed to have occured in open court: State v. Hirronemus, 50–545.

Where a decree recited that the cause came on for hearing in the presence of counsel for plaintiff and defendants, held, that it was sufficiently shown that there was an appearance by all of the defendants: Cooper v. Miller, 10–532.

Where it was recited in a decree that it was made upon proof read in evidence to the court, held, that it would be presumed that evidence to support the plea was introduced: Wahl v. Phillips, 15–478.

The presumption is strong in favor of the verity and truth of judicial records, and they can only be impeached by evidence clear and satisfactory. Evidence that the draft of a decree was filed and entered in vacation is not sufficient without a showing that the court never ordered the decree in term time: Parker v. Slaughter, 23–125.

The presumptions of law are all in support of a judgment, and when it is sought to avoid it because rendered on Sunday, the evidence must clearly establish the fact in order to overcome the presumption of regularity: Bishop v. Carter, 29–165.

The cancellation of a portion of the record of a judgment entry being shown, held, that the presumption would be that such cancellation was made at the time of the approval of the judgment, and was authorized, rather than it was subsequently made without authority: Lutz v. Kelly, 47–307.

When an official document is found in the custody of the officer charged with the duty of preserving it, the presumption arises that it remains in the condition in which it was when the officer received it: Barber v. Scott, 92–52.

Further as to record, see notes to §§ 242–244.

Complete record: The former provision for making a complete record has been omitted, the only present provision as to such a record is in probate matters: See § 3411. As to former provisions on the subject see Smith v. Cumins, 52–142.

After the taking of an appeal the lower court may correct its record: Maxon v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 67–226; Mahaffy v. Mahaffy, 63–55.

The power to supply lost records may be exercised whenever the protection of the rights of parties demands it. Therefore, held, that where, after the perfection of an appeal, the evidence in the case was lost, so that the appeal could not be prosecuted, the proper remedy was to apply to the lower court to supply such record by substitution, and that the loss of the record was not a ground for a new trial: Loomis v. McKenzie, 48–416; Steiner v. Steiner, 49–70.

If the record of the lower court does not correctly state the facts a party desiring to appeal should prosecute the correction of the record there; it cannot be changed or corrected on appeal: Duffees v. Sherman, 48–287.

In a certain sense the court below retains jurisdiction so long as anything remains to be done by it. It may order a lost record to be substituted, and do whatever else is proper to be done to enable the supreme court to review the alleged errors: Becker v. Becker, 50–139; State v. Dillard, 53–749.

Par. 2. Judgment docket: Where the judgment docket is introduced in evidence, without objection, to prove a judgment, it should be received without proof of the loss or destruction of the original: Moore v. McKinley, 60–637.

Where it appeared that there was a mistake in the entry in the judgment docket, it not appearing whether or not there was such mistake in the record, held, that it would be presumed, in order to support other proceedings, that the judgment was correctly entered in the record: Preston v. Wright, 60–351.

The judgment docket is intended to show merely an abstract of the judgment, and it is contemplated that it shall be made up from a judgment previously entered in the record book. Therefore, held, that entry of amount of judgment in the judgment docket did not supply an omission in the record: Case v. Plato, 54–64.

Indexing judgment docket: If a party is not charged with constructive notice of a judgment by what appears in the index book, he is not bound to look further, and is therefore not bound by what appears of record; so held where there was a mistake in the first name of the party against whom judgment was rendered: Thomas v. Desney, 57–58.

The entry and indexing of a judgment as A. B. v. C. D. et al. does not operate as notice to strangers of such judgment as against co-defendants of C. D., whose names do not appear: Cummings v. Long, 16–41.

A judgment not indexed is not notice to the purchaser at foreclosure sale of premises upon which such judgment would be a lien, and the holder of such judgment cannot therefore redeem in equity from such sale: Sterling Mfg. Co. v. Early, 69–94.

Even though a judgment is not properly indexed, a sheriff's deed thereunder duly recorded imparts notice of all prior proceedings: Cushing v. Edwards, 68–145.

As to sufficiency of indexing in general to impart notice, see notes to § 2936.

Notice of judgment or order: A party is bound to know and take notice of any judgment or order that is entered in an action to which he is properly made a party, whether the records of the court are read from time to time as required by statute, or not: Finch v. Hollinger, 47–173.

After judgment a party is not bound to take notice of further proceedings: Wright v. Leclaire, 3–221.

Par. 5. Incumbrance book: Where the entry of attachment in the incumbrance book is not made until after the execution of a mortgage upon the property, without actual notice of such attachment, the mortgagee acquires priority over the levy: First Nat. Bank v. Jasper County Bank, 71–486.

An entry by the sheriff in the incumbrance book of a levy of attachment becomes notice, though not indexed: Blodgett v. Huiscamp, 64–548.

Par. 7. Lien Index: If the lien index shows date of satisfaction of judgment, but does not show method of satisfaction, a purchaser is put on inquiry as to whether such satisfaction was by reason of the sale of the premises under execution: Mather v. Jenswold, 72–550.

The purpose of the index of liens is to give notice of the incumbrance; and where a judgment is not indexed, a purchaser without actual notice is not bound thereby: Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Hesser, 77–381.

A purchaser is entitled to rely upon the "index of all liens," and is not required to pursue inquiry through other indexes: Ibid.

Therefore, where the index showed a judgment against J. H. Hesse instead of J. H. Hesser, and it appeared that the clerk changed the name by adding "r" to the former name after a subsequent mortgage was executed, held, that such change was unauthorized and illegal, and as the index failed to show a judgment against J. H. Hesser the mortgage was the superior lien: Ibid.

Further, as to the records see §§ 242–244 and notes.

SEC. 289. How appearance docket to be kept. The clerk shall enter in said appearance docket the titles of all actions or special proceedings that shall be brought in the court, numbering them consecutively in the order in which they shall have been commenced, which numbers shall not be changed during the further progress thereof. In making such entries, the clerk shall set out the full names of all the parties, plaintiffs and defendants, as contained in the petition, or as subsequently made parties by any pleading, proceeding or order. [C. '73, § 198.]

Name of defendant: The omission of the name of a defendant will not affect the jurisdiction of the court over such defendant, if he is in fact made defendant and served with notice: Toliver v. Morgan, 74–619.

Notice of filing of pleadings: After completed service or voluntary appearance a party is deemed in court and must take notice of what is done therein up to the time of final judgment, but after judgment he is not bound to take notice of further proceedings: Wright v. Leclaire, 3–221.

Notice of filing motions: Under § 2834 a party must take notice of motions filed during the term. No other notice is necessary: Wagner v. Tice, 36–599.

Notice of a motion for change of venue, made in vacation, should be given as required by that section: Preston v. Winter, 20–264; Loomis v. McKenzie, 31–425.

A motion to set aside a judgment rendered at a prior term should not be heard without notice to the parties interested: Keeney v. Lyon, 21–277. And see notes to §§ 242–244.

SEC. 290. Entry of return of notice. When the original notice shall be returned to the office of the clerk, he shall enter in said docket so much of the return thereon as to show who of the parties have been served therewith, and the manner and time of service. [C. '73, § 199.]

SEC. 291. Pleadings—when deemed filed—dates to be entered. The clerk shall, immediately upon the filing thereof, make in the appearance docket a memorandum of the date of the filing of all petitions, demurrers, answers, motions, or papers of any other description in the cause; and no pleading of any description shall be considered as filed in the cause, or taken from the clerk's office, until the said memorandum is made. [C. '73, § 200.]

Filing of pleadings: Where a pleading is marked filed by the clerk, but no entry of such filing is made on the appearance docket, it cannot be considered as having been filed: Padden v. Moore, 58–703. And where the petition in an attachment proceeding was marked "filed" by the clerk, but not entered on the appearance docket, held, that the action was properly dismissed upon motion, as the court was bound to consider the petition as not filed: Nickson v. Bair, 59–531.

A paper placed with the files, but not marked filed by the clerk, and not entered on the appearance docket, cannot be made a part of the pleadings in the case by a nunc pro tunc order, after judgment: Winkelman v. Winkelman, 79–319.

Failure to note the filing of the petition in the appearance docket will not make a judgment thereon void. The petition having been made the basis of the court's action, the question whether it authorizes action by the court is for decision, and error in that respect can be corrected only by direct proceedings: Rotch v. Humboldt College, 89–480.

This section does not apply in respect to the filing of depositions: Byington v. Moore, 62–470; nor to the filing of bills of exceptions: Royer v. Foster, 62–321; nor to the filing of a justice's transcript on an appeal from him to the district court. In such cases the return of the justice may be regarded filed if deposited with the clerk, although no entry in the appearance docket is made: Harrison v. Clifton, 4–736.

The filing consists in the delivery of the paper to the clerk and his receiving it to be kept on file in his office. It is not essential that it shall be indorsed as filed, although that would be the better practice. The indorsement is simply evidence of the filing: State v. Briggs, 68–416; and see State v. Patterson, 23–575.

The provision of this section that no pleading is filed until the memorandum thereof is made in the appearance docket is not applicable to other papers, as, for instance, an affidavit for service by publication: Simmons v. Simmons, 91–408.

Where a pleading was given to the clerk and indorsed by him as filed and remained attached to the files in the case in his office, but no memorandum of the filing was entered on the appearance docket, held, that when the pleading was subsequently attacked as not being on file in the case the court properly disregarded the attack and ordered the entry of the pleading on the appearance docket as of the date when it was actually delivered to the clerk and marked filed: Snell v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 88–442.

Where the appearance docket contains a memorandum of the filing of the petition, the fact that the clerk fails to enter the name of one of the parties defendant will not deprive the court of jurisdiction as to such defendant, if he is properly served with notice: Toliver v. Morgan, 74–619.

Where pleadings were properly filed in probate under the circuit court system, and subsequently the issues in the case were transferred to the equity docket, and the case was pending in the district court, the circuit court having been abolished, held, that the pleadings thus filed should be considered without refiling: Winkleman v. Winkleman, 79–319.

A bill of exceptions which has been signed by the judge and handed to the clerk to be filed is filed in contemplation of law, even though the clerk has failed to properly indorse the fact that it has been filed: Foster v. Hinsen, 75–291; Sheldon Bank v. Royce, 84–288.

The minutes of the testimony taken before the grand jury are to be deemed filed when delivered to the court to be kept as part of the records, and indorsement of such filing is not essential, nor that a memorandum of the filing be made in the appearance docket: State v. Craig, 78 637.

Short-hand notes of testimony left upon the clerk's desk held to be filed within the terms of § 4466, with reference to preserving the evidence in a contempt proceeding: Small v. Wakefield, 84–533.

As to provisions with reference to filing copies of pleadings, see § 3558.

Return of papers taken from the files: A court has the power to enter an order for the return of papers withdrawn from the records without previous notice to the party required to return them: Wisconsin I. & N. R. Co. v. Given, 69–581.

While it may be irregular to take a bill of exceptions from the files for the purpose of preparing an abstract, such act will not prevent the filing from being effectual: Sheldon Bank v. Royce, 84–288.

SEC. 292. Minutes of subsequent proceedings, with date and reference. Immediately upon the sustaining or overruling of any demurrer or motion, the striking out or amendment of any pleading, trial of the cause, rendition of the verdict, entry of judgment, issuing of execution, or any other act or thing done in the progress of the cause, the like memorandum thereof shall be made in said docket, giving the date thereof, and the number of the book and page of the record where such entry shall have been made, it being intended that the appearance docket shall be an index from the commencement to the end of a suit. [C. '73, § 201.]

SEC. 293. Clerk to report criminal statistics. The clerk of the district court is required to report to the secretary of state, on or before the first Monday in November of each year, the number of convictions for all crimes and misdemeanors in that court in his county for the year preceding, and such report shall show the character of the offense and the sentence of punishment, the occupation of the convict, whether he can read and write, his general habits, and also the expenses of the county for criminal prosecutions during the year, including, but distinguishing, the compensation of the county attorney, which report shall be for the year ending the thirtieth day of September preceding. [24 G. A., ch. 41; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 40; 18 G. A., ch. 28, § 3; C. '73, § 203; R., § 349; C. '51, § 148.]

SEC. 294. Clerk and deputy not to be justice or attorney. The clerk or deputy clerk of the district court is prohibited from holding the office of justice of the peace, or practicing, directly or indirectly, as an attorney or solicitor in any of the courts of this state. [C. '73, § 204.]

SEC. 295. Change in title to be certified to auditor. Where the title of any real estate is finally established in any person or persons by judgment or decree of said court or of the supreme court, or where title to real estate is changed by judgment, decree, will or order in probate, the clerk of the district court shall certify the same, under the seal of said court, to the county auditor of the county in which said land is located. [25 G. A., ch. 90, § 1.]

SEC. 296. Fees to be collected and paid to county—when payable by county. The clerk of the district court shall be entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

1. For filing any petition, appeal or writ of error and docketing the same, one dollar and fifty cents;
2. For every attachment, fifty cents;
3. For every cause tried by jury, one dollar and fifty cents;
4. For every cause tried by the court, seventy-five cents;
5. For every equity case, one dollar and fifty cents;
6. For each injunction or other extraordinary process or order, one dollar;
7. For all causes continued on application of a party by affidavit, fifty cents;
8. For all other continuances, fifteen cents;
9. For entering any final judgment or decree, seventy-five cents;
10. For taxing costs, fifty cents;
11. For issuing execution or other process after judgment or decree, fifty cents;
12. For filing and properly entering and indorsing each mechanic's lien, one dollar, and in case a suit is brought thereon, the same to be taxed as other costs in the action;
13. For certificate and seal, fifty cents;
14. For filing and docketing transcript of judgment from another county or a justice of the peace, fifty cents;
15. For entering any rule or order, twenty-five cents;
16. For issuing writ or order, not including subpœnas, fifty cents;
17. For issuing commission to take depositions, fifty cents;
18. For entering sheriff's sale of real estate, fifty cents;
19. For entering judgment by confession, one dollar;
20. For entering satisfaction of any judgment, twenty-five cents;
21. For all copies of record, or papers filed in his office, transcripts, and making complete record, ten cents for each hundred words;
22. For taking and approving a bond and sureties thereon, fifty cents;
23. For declaration of intention by an alien to become a citizen, twenty-five cents;
24. For all services on naturalization of aliens, including oaths and certificates, fifty cents;
25. For certificates and seal to applications to procure pensions, bounties or back pay for soldiers or other persons entitled thereto, ten cents;
26. For making out transcripts in criminal cases appealed to the supreme court, when the defendant is unable to pay, for each one hundred words, ten cents, to be paid by the county;
27. In criminal cases, and in all causes in which the state or county is a party plaintiff, the same fees for same services as in suits between private parties. When judgment is rendered against the defendant, the fees shall be collected from such defendant. Where the state fails, the clerk's fees shall be paid by the county.

In addition to the foregoing, he shall charge and collect:

28. For issuing marriage licenses, one dollar each;
29. For all services performed in the settlement of the estate of any decedent, except where actions are brought by the administrator or against him, or as may be otherwise provided herein, where the value of the estate does not exceed three thousand dollars, three dollars; where such value is between three and five thousand dollars, five dollars; where such value is between five and seven thousand dollars, eight dollars; where the value exceeds eight thousand dollars, ten dollars;

30. In addition to the foregoing, for making a complete record in cases where the same is required by law or directed by an order of the court, for every one hundred words, ten cents.

All of which fees shall be paid into the county treasury. [C. '73, §§ 3781–2, 3787; R., §§ 430, 436, 1852, 4136, 4140–1; C. '51, §§ 2531–2.]

SEC. 297. Compensation of clerk. The clerks of the district courts shall receive as full annual compensation for all services the following: In counties having a population of less than ten thousand, the board of supervisors shall fix the salary at an amount not exceeding eleven hundred dollars. In counties having a population of ten thousand and not exceeding fifteen thousand, the salary shall be twelve hundred dollars. In counties having a population of fifteen thousand and not exceeding twenty thousand, the salary shall be thirteen hundred dollars. In counties having a population of twenty thousand and not exceeding twenty-five thousand, the salary shall be fourteen hundred dollars. In counties having a population of twenty-five thousand and not exceeding thirty thousand, the salary shall be fifteen hundred dollars. In counties having a population of thirty thousand and not exceeding thirty-five thousand, the salary shall be sixteen hundred dollars. In counties having a population of thirty-five thousand and not exceeding forty thousand, the salary shall be eighteen hundred dollars. In counties having a population of forty thousand and not exceeding forty-five thousand, the salary shall be two thousand dollars. In counties having a population of forty-five thousand and over, the salary shall be twenty-two hundred dollars. The board of supervisors may, in addition to the salary fixed for clerks, allow them out of the probate fees, as additional compensation, an amount not exceeding three hundred dollars. [25 G. A., ch. 77; 22 G. A., ch. 36, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 16; 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 1; C. '73, § 3784.]

Under 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 16, from which the last provision of this section is taken, it was held, that the clerk was no longer entitled to any special compensation in probate matters, but considering all services rendered and all compensation received it was for the board of supervisors to make such additional allowance as justice required for his services as clerk and unless the board made an allowance the clerk was not entitled to retain any of the fees in probate, the presumption being in the absence of an allowance that full compensation for all services had otherwise been made: Poweshiek County v. Patton, 89–308.

It seems that such provision as to salary covers the fees allowed to the clerk as commissioner of insanity under § 2309: Moore v. Mahaska County, 61–177.

SEC. 298. Deputies—appointment—compensation—qualification. The clerk, with the consent of the board of supervisors, may, when necessary, appoint a deputy, or employ a clerk or clerks, who shall not be a county officer. A certificate of such appointment and of the revocation thereof, when made, shall be filed with the county auditor. In counties of twenty thousand population or less, such deputy or clerk shall receive a salary not to exceed one-half the sum allowed to the principal. In counties having a population above twenty thousand and not exceeding thirty-five thousand, one or more deputies or clerks may be employed, their total compensation not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars, except that, where court is held at two places in a county, it may be any sum not exceeding two thousand dollars. In counties having a population of thirty-five thousand and less than forty thousand, one or more deputies may be employed, their total compensation not to exceed the sum of two thousand dollars. And in counties having a population exceeding forty thousand, one or more deputies or clerks may be employed, whose total compensation shall not exceed three thousand dollars. The compensation of such deputy or clerk shall be fixed by the board of supervisors at the time of the consent to the appointment. The deputy shall take the same oath as his principal, to be indorsed on the certificate of his appointment, and may perform the duties of his principal. Clerks' and deputies' salaries to be paid out of the county treasury in equal monthly installments. [22 G. A., ch. 36, §§ 1, 2; 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 1; C.'73, §§ 766–8, 770, 3784; R., §§ 644–5; C.'51, §§ 411–14, 416.]

Where the duties of a public officer are of a ministerial character they may be discharged by deputy; duties of a judicial character cannot be so discharged. The deputy has the right to subscribe the name of his principal, and the act of the deputy in the name of his principal, within the scope of his authority, is the act of his principal. And held, that a deputy clerk had authority in the name of the principal to certify to the acknowledgment of a deed: Abrams v. Ervine, 9-87; or to a copy of a judgment record: Greasons v. Davis, 9-219.

The deputy clerk has the same power to administer oaths as his principal: Wood v. Bailey, 12-46. And it is not necessary that the absence or inability of the principal should be stated: Finn v. Rose, 12-565.

During the absence or disability of the principal the deputy stands in his place, and any official acts performed by him are regarded as having been performed by the principal. Therefore, held, that service of notice of appeal upon the deputy clerk, evidenced by an acceptance of such notice signed in the name of the clerk by the deputy, was sufficient: Sanxey v. Iowa City Glass Co., 68-542; Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Sterrett, 62 N. W., 675.

The former statutory provision that the deputy should perform the duties of the principal pertaining to his office in the absence or disability of the principal was not designed to withhold from the deputy the power to perform such duties except in the absence or disability of such principal. The deputy may act in the presence of the principal as well: Moore v. McKinley, 60-367.

As to former provisions for compensation of deputies and assistants, see Washington County v. Jones, 45-260; Gamble v. Marion County, 85-675; State v. Van Auken, 68 N. W., 454.

SEC. 299. Clerk to report and pay over fees of office. The clerk of the district court shall report to the board of supervisors of his county, at each regular session, a full and complete statement of the amount of fees received by him, which shall be verified by his affidavit, and pay such fees into the county treasury as hereinbefore provided. [18 G. A., ch. 184, § 5; C.'73, § 3785; R., § 431.]

SEC. 300. Other fees to be reported and paid over. He shall, on the first Monday in January and July of each year, pay into the county treasury, for the use of the county, all other fees not belonging to his office, in his hands at the date of preceding payment and still unclaimed, and, at the time of so doing, he shall take from the treasurer duplicate receipts therefor, giving the title of the cause and style of the court in which the same was pending, with the names of the witnesses, jurors, officers or other persons, and the amount each one is entitled to receive; one of which receipts he shall file with the county auditor, who shall charge the amount thereof to the treasurer as so much county revenue, and shall enter the same upon the proper records as a claim allowed, and, on demand by the persons entitled to said fees, he shall issue county orders for the amount due each person, respectively. [19 G. A., ch. 151, § 1; C.'73, § 3786; R., §§ 353–6.]

CHAPTER 9.

OF COUNTY ATTORNEYS AND THEIR DUTIES.

SECTION 301. Duties. The county attorney shall appear for the state and county in all cases and proceedings in the courts of his county to which the state or county is a party, and in the supreme court in all cases in which the county is a party, and shall collect and pay over to the person or officer entitled thereto all money due the state or county, so far as he is able to collect the same; but in criminal cases less than a felony, pending elsewhere than in the district court, it shall not be his duty to appear if otherwise engaged in the performance of his official duties. He shall promptly notify the attorney-general of every criminal case appealed from his county to the supreme court, and, at least thirty days prior to the term at which the case is to be heard, prepare and deliver to him a properly prepared abstract or amended abstract of the case. [21 G. A., ch. 73, § 2.]

The county attorney is a county officer and proceedings to contest the election of such officer should be in accordance with provisions for contesting the election of county officers: Clark v. Tracy, 64 N. W., 290. And his resignation is to be tendered to the board of supervisors: State v. Kovolosky, 92–498.

District attorney under former statutes: It was the duty of the district attorney to appear for the county, and it was his right to do so: Clark v. Lyon County, 37–469; Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46–138.

The district attorney was required to appear for the state in habeas corpus proceedings, and it was provided that notice of such proceedings shall be served upon him. In such cases the district attorney was the representative of the state, and, as such, might control them within the limits of his authority and duty: Miller v. Buena Vista County, 68–711.

Authority: The prosecuting attorney had authority to follow and prosecute a case commenced in his county in any other county to which the venue might be changed: State v. Carothers, 1 G. Gr., 464.

A case in the district court was under the control of the district attorney, and any agreement he might make with reference to the disposition thereof was binding as against the attorney-general, who controlled the case in the supreme court: State v. Fleming, 13–443.

Additional counsel: The district attorney could not bind the county to pay fees of additional counsel employed by him: Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46–138; Foster v. Clinton County, 51–541.

But the board of supervisors might employ additional counsel to prosecute criminal cases: Hopkins v. Clayton County, 32–15.

The board would be bound by a contract for that purpose, although not entered upon the records. Such contract might be proven by parol evidence: Jordan v. Osceola County, 59–388.

The court might, in the absence of the district attorney, appoint a special prosecutor: White v. Polk County, 17–413.

But the court could not, unless perhaps in the absence of the district attorney and to prevent failure of justice, bind the county for the payment of additional counsel for prosecution. The county is liable to pay for additional counsel only as the board of supervisors may have determined such counsel to be necessary: Seaton v. Polk County, 59–626.

The practice of allowing county attorneys the assistance of private counsel on the trial of criminal cases is of long standing in this state and has been repeatedly sanctioned by the court: State v. Crafton, 89–109.

The right to assistant counsel in criminal cases is left to the discretion of the court: Maloney v. Traverse, 87–306.

In an action to abate a liquor nuisance a citizen bringing the action has the right to employ counsel not only to secure the order of abatement, but also in a proceeding for contempt to punish for disobeying such order: Ibid.

Further as to associate counsel, see notes to § 303.

In criminal appeals: The printing of abstracts on appeal in criminal cases, prepared by the county attorney, should be paid for by the state, and may be allowed and paid by the executive council upon application: State v. Billings, 81–566.

SEC. 302. To give opinions. He shall, without compensation, give opinions and advice to the board of supervisors and other county officers, when requested to do so by such board or officer, upon all matters in which the state or county is interested, or relating to the duty of the board or officer in which the state or county may have an interest, but shall not appear before the board of supervisors in the trial of any cause in which the state or county is not interested, or in applications to establish, vacate or alter highways. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 303. Deputies—assistance—compensation. He may appoint deputies, who shall act without any compensation from the county, to assist him in the discharge of his duties. With the approval of the district court he may procure such assistance in the trial of a person charged with the crime of felony as he shall deem necessary, and such assistant, upon presenting to the board of supervisors a certificate of the district judge before whom said cause was tried, certifying to the service rendered, shall be allowed a reasonable compensation therefor, to be fixed by the board of supervisors. But nothing in this section shall prevent the board of supervisors from employing an attorney to assist the county attorney in any cause or proceeding in which the state or county is interested. [Same, § 4.]

In a proper case, the court may permit an attorney to assist in the prosecution of an indictment, without regard to the fees charged, even though he may not be employed by the supervisors, and is not a deputy of the county attorney: State v. Shinner, 76–147.

This section does not prohibit a prosecuting witness or party complaining from employing counsel, with the approval of the court and county attorney, to assist in the prosecution of a criminal case, and in the absence of such prohibition the rule is the same as that in force before its enactment: State v. Shreves, 81-615.

The right of the board of supervisors to employ counsel on behalf of the county does not depend upon the consent of the county attorney nor upon his willingness or ability to appear for the county: Taylor County v. Standley, 79-666.

The board of supervisors does not have an absolute discretion as to the compensation to be allowed associate counsel, and after the claim has been presented the attorney entitled to compensation is not under obligation to accept the amount allowed, but may resort to the courts for determination of the question as to how much he is entitled to receive: Stone v. Marion County, 78-14.

Where the attorney selected agrees to render specified services for an agreed compensation, and afterwards performs services in excess of what he was required to do by the agreement or of a character not required by it, he will be entitled to recover for such extra services: Ibid.

Further, as to associate counsel, see notes to § 301.

SEC. 304. Substitute in case of disability—compensation. In case of absence, sickness or disability of the county attorney and his deputies, the court before whom it is his duty to appear, and in which there may be business for him to attend to, may appoint an attorney to act as county attorney, by order to be entered upon the minutes of the court, and he shall receive out of the compensation allowed to the county attorney, when such appearance is before a justice of the peace, such sum as the board of supervisors shall determine to be reasonable for the services rendered, and, when it is before a court of record, such sum as the judge shall determine to be a reasonable compensation, and, while acting under said appointment, he shall have all the authority and be subject to all the responsibilities herein conferred upon county attorneys. But in criminal cases less than a felony, a justice of the peace or magistrate cannot appoint an attorney at the expense of the county or county attorney; and no justice of the peace shall appoint an attorney to act as county attorney in any case, unless reasonable notice in writing has been given the county attorney that his services will be required before such justice at a time therein named. Same, § 5.]

SEC. 305. Prohibitions. No county attorney shall accept any fee or reward from or on behalf of any one for services rendered in any prosecution or the conduct of any official business, nor shall he, or any member of a firm with which he may be connected, be directly or indirectly engaged as an attorney or otherwise for any party other than the state or county in any action or proceeding pending or arising in his county, based upon substantially the same facts upon which a prosecution or proceeding has been commenced or prosecuted by him in the name of the county or state; nor shall any attorney be allowed to assist the county attorney in any criminal action, where such attorney is interested in any civil action brought or to be commenced, in which a recovery is or may be asked upon the matters and things involved in such criminal prosecution. [Same, § 6.]

The section as it previously stood was held not to create a limitation upon the compensation to be paid county attorneys, and such attorney was entitled to the attorney's fees taxed in an injunction suit brought by him to abate a nuisance in the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, in addition to his other compensation as county attorney: Furr v. Seaward, 82-221.

SEC. 306. To receipt for money. It shall be the duty of the county attorney, whenever he shall receive any money in his official capacity, to give the person paying the same a receipt, and file a duplicate thereof with the county auditor. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 307. Attend grand jury. The county attorney shall, when required by the grand jury, attend it for the purpose of examining witnesses before it, or of giving it legal advice, or to procure subpœnas or other process for witnesses, or to lay before it bills of indictment; but he must not be present when an indictment is considered or found. [Same, § 8.]

The county attorney may appear by deputy in the discharge of his duties before a grand jury, and therefore a showing that some person other than the county attorney was present with the grand jury during the investigation of the case will not be sufficient ground for setting aside the indictment where it does not appear that such person was not the county attorney's deputy: State v. Fertig, 67 N. W., 87.

SEC. 308. Compensation. County attorneys shall be allowed an annual salary to be fixed by the board of supervisors of their respective counties at any regular or special session of said board, and in case said board has failed or may hereafter fail or neglect to fix said salary, then the compensation as last fixed shall continue until changed by the board at a regular or special session thereof; in counties having a population of five thousand or less, not to exceed five hundred dollars; in counties over five and under ten thousand, not to exceed six hundred dollars; in counties over ten and under fifteen thousand, not to exceed seven hundred and fifty dollars; in counties over fifteen and under twenty thousand, not exceeding nine hundred dollars; in counties over twenty and under thirty thousand, not to exceed one thousand dollars; and in all counties of thirty thousand or more, not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars, except that, where the court is held at two places in a county, it may be any sum not exceeding two thousand dollars; but in no county shall it be less than three hundred dollars. Said salary shall be paid quarterly out of the general fund of the county, and shall be due at the end of each quarter, namely: March thirty-first, June thirtieth, September thirtieth, and December thirty-first. In addition to the salary above provided, he shall receive the fees as now allowed to attorneys for suits upon written instruments where judgment is obtained, for all fines collected and school fund mortgages foreclosed, and his necessary and actual expenses incurred in attending upon his official duties at a place other than his residence and the county seat, which shall be audited and allowed by the board of supervisors of the county. [21 G. A., ch. 73, § 11.]

A county attorney has no right to add to the amount to be recovered against a surety on a bail bond a claim for attorney's fees which he may have for the collection of such bond as against the principal; State v. Beebe, 87-636.

Where the salary of a county attorney was fixed at one-half the amount he should receive under a mistake as to the fees he would receive in criminal cases, and the board of supervisors, at a subsequent meeting, increased the salary, held, that the salary of the county attorney having been fixed according to the provisions of this section, it could not be increased during his term of office: Goetzman v. Whitaker, 81-527.

CHAPTER 10.

OF ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS.

SECTION 309. Power to admit to practice. The power to admit persons to practice as attorneys and counselors in the courts of this state, or any of them, is vested exclusively in the supreme court. [20 G. A., ch. 168, § 1.]

SEC. 310. Qualifications. Every applicant for such admission must be at least twenty-one years of age, of good moral character, and an inhabitant of this state, and must have actually and in good faith pursued a regular course of study of the law for at least two full years, either in the office of a member of the bar in regular practice of this state or other state, or of a judge of a court of record thereof, or in some reputable law school in the United States, or partly in such office and partly in such law school; but, in reckoning such period of study, the school year of any such law school, consisting of not less than thirty-six weeks exclusive of vacations, shall be considered equivalent to a full year. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 311. Examinations. Every such applicant shall also be examined by the court, or by a committee of not less than three members of the bar appointed by the court, as to his learning and skill in the law; and the court must be satisfied, before admitting to practice, that the applicant has actually and in good faith devoted the time hereinbefore required to the study of law, and possesses the requisite learning and skill therein. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 312. Of students in law department of university. Students in the law department of the university, who are recommended by the faculty of said department as candidates for graduation, and as persons of good moral character who have actually and in good faith studied law for the time and in the manner required by statute, at least one year of such study having been as a student in said department, may be examined at the university by a committee composed of not less than three persons, members of the bar or judges of courts of record, appointed by the supreme court for that purpose, and upon the certificate of such committee that such candidates possess the learning and skill requisite for the practice of law, they shall be admitted without further examination. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 313. Practitioners from other states. Any person becoming a resident of this state, after having been admitted to the bar of any other of the United States in which he has previously resided, may, in the discretion of the court, be admitted to practice in this state without examination or proof of period of study as hereinbefore provided, on proof of the other qualifications required by this chapter, and on satisfactory proof that he has practiced law regularly for not less than one year in the state from which he comes, after having been duly admitted to the bar according to the laws of such state. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 314. Oath required. All persons on being admitted to the bar shall take an oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States and of the state of Iowa, and to faithfully discharge the duties of an attorney and counselor of this state according to the best of their ability. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 315. Mode of examination. The supreme court may by general rules prescribe the mode in which examinations under this chapter shall be conducted, and in which the qualifications required as to age, residence, character and term of study shall be proved, and may make any other and further rules, not inconsistent with this chapter, for the purpose of carrying out its object and intent. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 316. Attorneys resident in other states. Any member of the bar of another state, actually engaged in any cause or matter pending in any court of this state, may be permitted by such court to appear in and conduct such cause or matter while retaining his residence in another state, without being subject to the foregoing provisions of this chapter. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 317. Duties of attorneys and counselors. It is the duty of an attorney and counselor:

1. To maintain the respect due to the courts of justice and judicial officers;
2. To counsel or maintain no other actions, proceedings or defenses than those which appear to him legal and just, except the defense of a person charged with a public offense;
3. To employ, for the purpose of maintaining the causes confided to him, such means only as are consistent with truth, and never to seek to mislead the judges by any artifice or false statement of fact or law;
4. To maintain inviolate the confidence, and, at any peril to himself, to preserve the secret of his client;
5. To abstain from all offensive personalities, and to advance no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness, unless required by the justice of the cause with which he is charged;
6. Not to encourage either the commencement or continuance of an action or proceeding from any motive of passion or interest;
7. Never to reject for any consideration personal to himself the cause of the defenseless or oppressed. [C. '73, § 211; R., § 2704; C. '51, § 1614.]

I. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES.

Retainer against opinion: While an attorney ought not to accept a retainer in a case where he feels that the law is against his client, yet the fact that he has, under a prior retainer, advocated views of the law and facts different from those upon which his client rests his cause, or has officially, as a judge or officer of the government, held a different view of the rights of the parties, will not, of itself, disqualify him to accept a retainer; and it will not constitute fraud on his part not to reveal to his client the fact of such prior opinion: Smith v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 60-515.

In a particular case, held, that an attorney assisting the prosecution had not sustained toward the defendant any such confidential relations with reference to the case as to prevent him from acting against the defendant: State v. Lewis, 65 N. W., 295.

Good faith: Improper conduct of attorneys in appearing for a party in the case after having been consulted by other parties in the same case is not a ground for reversing the action of the lower court on appeal: Shoemake v. Smith, 80-655.

The law governing the conduct of attorneys is well defined and requires the utmost good faith: Prouty v. Bullard, 77-42.

The fact that an attorney writes letters to the opposite party encouraging him to maintain his claim against the attorney's client and to think that he will succeed in the litigation may be sufficient to show a rescission of the contract of employment between the attorney and his client or bad faith rendering him liable for damages: Bullis v. Easton, 65 N. W., 395.

Where in a misdemeanor case the court is proceeding to try the defendant without his personal presence on the ground that he is represented by an attorney, it may refuse to allow such attorney to withdraw his appearance and deprive the court of jurisdiction: State v. Young, 86-406.

An attorney who has acted for defendant in a preliminary examination cannot afterwards act for the state in a prosecution against the same defendant for a crime substantially the same though not identical with that for which he was first examined. Attorneys are not bound to serve those who will not compensate them, and may withdraw from the service of such, but they cannot take employment on the other side: State v. Halstead, 73-376.

Purchase of property: An attorney who procures in himself legal title to property of which his client is owner holds the property in trust for his client: Byington v. Moore, 62-470. The same rule applies to property purchased by an attorney in the course of the litigation in which he is employed: Harper v. Perry, 28-57; Reickhoff v. Brecht, 51-633.

Where an attorney, having connection with property as representing the plaintiff in the foreclosure of a mortgage thereon, advised his client as to the amount necessary to pay the taxes for the last year then due thereon, provided they would be paid by a certain time, and subsequently one of them took by assignment a certificate of sale of the land for prior taxes, as to which they had not advised their client, held, that by such assignment the partner became trustee for his client, and could not transfer such tax title fee from the trust: Lynn v. Morse, 76-665.

An attorney cannot purchase as against the interest of his client, a judgment, the enforcement of which he was employed to defeat; but where the clients were husband and wife, and the husband's land was about to be sold to satisfy a judgment against him, and the attorney bought the judgment under an agreement with the husband that he should hold it as security for the repayment of the money, and that it should be the first lien on the premises, and a mechanic's lien suit by the wife against her husband, which was pending should be dismissed, held, that the transaction was valid, and the money not being repaid as agreed, nor the lien dismissed, the attorney was authorized to take execution on the judgment assigned to him, and to purchase the premises, and the title thus obtained should be superior to the title obtained by the wife under a foreclosure of the mechanic's lien: Baker v. First Nat. Bank, 77-615.

Estopped by fraud or negligence: An attorney who obtains a judgment for his client which is void for want of service of notice, due to his own culpable negligence or fraudulent intention, and allows the client, in ignorance of the defect, to purchase property at execution sale under such judgment, is estopped as against the client from asserting title to the same property acquired from the execution defendant, even after the relation of attorney and client has ceased. In such case whatever title is acquired by the attorney inures to the benefit of its former client: Phillips v. Blair, 38-649.

Conveyance to attorney: A conveyance from client to attorney will be set aside whenever advantage has been taken of the client through the influence or knowledge of the attorney possessed by reason of their peculiar relations: Polson v. Young, 37-196.

Tax title on client's property; trustee: An attorney who is acting as agent of the owner with respect to property, and has money in his hands derived from the property, buying in the property at tax sale, will be held to have acquired the same in trust for such owner, and cannot take and hold, as against his principal, a tax deed, although the principal is negligent in reimbursing him for his expenses in acquiring such title, unless he has first made a full and fair statement to his principal of the account between them and of the amount necessary to reimburse him: Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Perry, 65-709.

Bad faith of client: Good faith and fairness is also required of the client in his relations with the attorney, and an attempt of the former to defraud the latter will authorize the latter to sever the relation and act for the protection of his own interests: Eckrote v. Myers, 41-324.

Where the attorney, having procured a decree of foreclosure for his client, and demanded the payment of his fees and advances without avail, bought in at tax sale the property covered by the decree and notified his client of that fact, still urging payment, which was not made, held, that a tax deed, subsequently taken by him in pursuance of the sale, could not be set aside seven years afterward at the suit of the client: Ibid.

The fact that an attorney retains in his possession papers relating to a transaction affecting land under a claim of a lien on such papers for services, does not continue his relation as attorney of the owner in such sense as to defeat a tax title acquired thereon by him after the performance of his duties with reference to the matter is entirely completed: Baker v. Davis, 35–184.

Where the attorney, after in vain requesting payment of his fees by his client, by consent of the client caused property to be sold under his client's judgment, and bought the same at the sale, held, that such purchase was not fraudulent: Page v. Stubbs, 39–537.

Liability for interest and rents; demand: An attorney is not ordinarily liable for interest on money collected by him until demand thereof is made; nor is he liable for rent of property bought in by him in his own name at execution sale under a judgment in behalf of his client, where such purchase is not in fraud of his client's rights: Johnson v. Semple, 31–49.

But the commencement of suit to recover money in the attorney's hands constitutes sufficient demand to authorize the allowance of interest from that time: Hollenbeck v. Stanberry, 38–325.

The attorney is not liable for interest on money if kept on hand for his client or deposited in bank to the client's credit, but if used by the attorney he is liable for interest: Mansfield v. Wilkerson, 26–482.

Improper conduct: A court should never hesitate to stop counsel in attempts to drag improper matters before a jury, and should visit merited punishment when such unprofessional conduct is indulged in. But it does not follow that in such cases a verdict will not stand. To require setting aside of the verdict prejudice must be shown: Hammond v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 49–450.

Where an attorney, in an excited manner, directly contradicted the statements of the court in ruling upon an objection to evidence, alleging that the facts upon which such ruling was based, as stated by the court, were not true, held, that he was guilty of contempt: Russell v. French, 67–102.

Liability in general: A decision under the provisions of § 3830, authorizing a summary determination, on motion, of the liability of an attorney for money collected, constitutes an adjudication, and a discharge of the attorney in such proceeding will bar subsequent action by the client, to collect the money in controversy: Hawk v. Evans, 76–593.

In an action against an attorney on an express promise to pay for the conversion of a note left with him for collection, held, that plaintiff could not recover on an implied promise growing out of defendant's tort: Aultman v. Goldsmith, 84–547.

Where an attorney undertook to prosecute an appeal but failed to take the steps necessary, and the appeal was dismissed by motion in the supreme court and the printing fee taxed to the client, held, that the client might recover damages from the attorney for negligence: Jamison v. Weaver, 81–212.

Also held, that failure of the client to furnish the money necessary to pay the expenses incident to the appeal was not an excuse if it appeared that the client was ready to pay any amount necessary and was not advised by the attorney that any payment was required: Ibid.

The costs taxed in the supreme court under such circumstances must be regarded as the direct result of the negligence of the attorney. While costs of the appeal might have been taxed to the appellant even had the appeal been properly prosecuted, yet such a result would have been a different one from that occasioned by failure to prosecute the appeal: Ibid.

Not liable for exercise of discretion: Where an attorney was employed with the understanding that he was to use his best judgment as to the steps necessary to be taken in the case, held, that he was not liable in an action for damages, in view of the care taken in the particular case: Bennett v. Phillips, 57–174.

Liability for trespass: An attorney cannot be held liable for the wrongful seizure of property in the suit in which he acts, unless his acts or directions are shown to have in some way caused the seizure: Rice v. Melendy, 41–395.

An attorney who simply obeys the instructions of his client in directing the seizure of property under attachment is not liable therefor. It is immaterial that he has neither belief nor suspicion as to the ownership of the property and seeks no information with respect thereto: Dawson v. Buford, 70–127.

Not jointly liable with client: An attorney who has acted as a mere agent for his client should not be made a party to a suit against his client in regard to acts so done, unless he is charged with fraud: Lyon v. Tevis, 8–79.

If the attorney is thus improperly made a party defendant, he is entitled to be dismissed with costs: Paton v. Lancaster, 38–49.

II. Compensation.

Evidence as to value of services: In an action to recover the value of professional services, evidence as to the success attending the rendition of such services is admissible: Berry v. Davis, 34–594; Stevens v. Ellsworth, 33 N. W., 683.

Under the general custom of the profession, the values in controversy control charges for services. Therefore, in an action by an attorney to recover for services rendered, held error to instruct the jury that the magnitude of the controversy and the great value of the property involved should not be considered in determining the amount of recovery: Smith v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 60–515.

Contract for services in another state: Where an attorney is employed in this state to render services in another state, the rate of compensation is to be determined acording to the value of the services at the place where the contract is made: Stanberry v. Dickerson, 35-493.

Contract for excessive fees: Nothing but the best of reasons will justify an attorney in exacting from his client, after the work is partially completed, an agreement to pay more than an ordinary fee under a threat of withdrawing from the case if such agreement is not made: Bolton v. Daily, 48-348.

Additional attorney: Where an attorney contracted to prosecute the case for a given sum, and afterwards turned the case over to another attorney, stating to the client that he had taken the second attorney into the case with him, held, that in the absence of any other knowledge on the part of the client as to the relation of the second attorney to the case, the latter could not recover more than the contract price: Ennis v. Hultz, 46-76.

Where the client employs an attorney and authorizes him to employ such legal assistance as he may require, any attorney employed by him reasonably necessary in the prosecution of the case may recover compensation from the client: Clyde v. Peavy, 74-47.

Implied contract: Where an attorney was employed by one of several defendants, and rendered services in the case for all, with the knowledge and implied consent of the others, held, that a recovery for services rendered might be had by such attorney as against all the defendants, although by contract between them, not known to the attorney, the one employing him was to bear the entire expense of attorney fees: McCrary v. Ruddick, 33-521.

Where an attorney performs legal services for a client with the knowledge and consent of such client, who receives the benefit thereof without objection, the attorney will be entitled to recover the reasonable value of such services without regard to a contract therefor between such client and another by virtue of which such services are to be rendered, unless such agreement was known to the attorney before rendering the services: Hudspeth v. Yetzer, 78-11.

Therefore where defendant had a contract with plaintiff's father by which legal services were to be rendered by plaintiff and his father, and compensation was to be made therefor by indorsement of credits upon notes held by defendant against plaintiff's father, held, that in the absence of proof that plaintiff had knowledge of such contract he could recover from defendant the reasonable price of such services thus rendered by him: Ibid.

Surety not liable to principal's attorney: One who is a party to an action and interested in the result, as a surety in an action to which his principal is party, will not, for that reason alone, be liable for the compensation of an attorney rendering services for the principal, but his liability must be proven by evidence of retainer or recognition as attorney of the party sought to be charged: Turner v. Myers, 23-391.

Liability of husband for fee of wife's attorney in divorce suit; necessaries: The husband is liable for services rendered by attorney for the wife for establishing the innocence of the latter on a charge of adultery made by the husband in an action for divorce. Such services are deemed necessaries: Porter v. Briggs, 38-166. And the allowance of suit money to the wife in the divorce proceeding will not preclude the recovery of additional compensation from the husband: Clyde v. Peavy, 74-47.

A law does not imply liability of the husband to attorney's fees for services rendered to the wife in a divorce proceeding brought by her in which she is unsuccessful and which was not necessary for her protection: Sherwin v. Maben, 78-467.

The husband is not liable for wife's attorney's fees in a suit brought by the wife for divorce where it is not shown that such services come within the scope of necessaries: Johnson v. Williams, 3 G. Gr., 97.

III. Contingent Fee; Champerty.

Good faith: If the attorney visits the client for the purpose of entering into a contract of employment, it is his duty, before making the contract, to distinctly and clearly advise the client as to all the facts and circumstances within his knowledge relating to the case. So held in regard to the contract for a share of the amount to be recovered as a contingent fee: Ryan v. Ashton, 42-365.

Construction: A construction of a contract between attorney and client which would operate to prevent the client from settling his suit will not be favored by the courts: Ellwood v. Wilson, 21-523.

Champerty and maintenance: There being no statute in this state against champerty or maintenance, and there being no necessity for enforcing the English doctrine on the subject, that doctrine is not deemed in force here: Wright v. Meek, 3 G. Gr., 472.

Contingent fee; against public policy: A contract by which the attorney was to receive a per cent. of the amount recovered by the client in the suit or on settlement, the attorney to advance costs and expenses, to be paid out of the recovery, and the client agreeing not to settle without the attorney's consent, held void as against public policy. Preceding case doubted: Boardman v. Thompson, 25-487. See, also, Hyatt v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 68-662.

Contract of attorney to hold client harmless: A contract between attorney and client, that the former will hold the latter harmless from any judgment to be recovered against him provided he will appeal the case, is against public policy and void: Adye v. Hanna, 47-264.

Contracts not champertous: A mere contract for a contingent fee, without stipulation against settlement by client or for advancement of costs by attorney, is valid: McDonald v. Chicago, & N. W. R. Co., 29-170; Winslow v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71-197.

The assignment of a note or open account and action thereon is not champertous, although the assignee gives, as the only consideration therefor, his obligation to pay the net proceeds of the action to the assignor: Knadler v. Sharp, 36-232.

An agreement by a mortgagee, in consideration of his release from a note upon which he was surety and the repayment to him of money paid on the note, that he would foreclose a mortgage held by him as such surety, and procure the execution of the sheriff's deed to the payee of the note, held not champertous: Cooley v. Osborne, 50–526.

Expense; share of recovery: The mere agreement for a contingent fee is not champertous. To constitute champerty the agreement on the part of the champetor must be to carry on the suit at his own expense, as well as for a share of the recovery: Jewel v. Neidy, 61–299.

Neither is it champertous for a person who is a party in interest, and not an officious promoter of another's strife, to agree to bear the expenses of litigation; and an attorney agreeing to carry on the litigation for a proportion of the recovery, knowing that the costs are thus to be paid by a party in interest, is not guilty of champerty: Ibid.

Champerty not a defense: The fact that an action is being prosecuted under a champertous contract cannot be set up as a defense therein: Allison v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 42–274; Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55–582. Nor is evidence that the attorney has contracted for a contingent fee admissible: Swanson v. French, 92–695.

The defense that a contract by which a cause of action is assigned is champertous can be only pleaded in an action between the parties to such contract, and if not pleaded therein the contract can be enforced as valid between them: Vimont v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 69–296.

SEC. 318. Deceit or collusion—punishment. An attorney and counselor who is guilty of deceit or collusion, or consents thereto, with intent to deceive a court or judge or a party to an action or proceeding, is liable to be disbarred, and shall forfeit to the injured party treble damages to be recovered in a civil action. [C. '73, § 212; R., § 2705; C. '51, § 1615.]

The office of an attorney is one of great confidence, and it ought to be one of the strictest integrity. Certain facts held sufficient to justify the suspension of an attorney for fraud and deceit towards his clients: Slemmer v. Wright, 54–164.

SEC. 319. Authority of attorneys and counselors. An attorney and counselor has power:

1. To execute in the name of his client a bond, or other written instrument, necessary and proper for the prosecution of an action or proceeding about to be or already commenced, or for the prosecution or defense of any right growing out of an action, proceeding, or final judgment rendered therein;

2. To bind his client to any agreement, in respect to any proceeding within the scope of his proper duties and powers; but no evidence of any such agreement is receivable, except the statement of the attorney himself, his written agreement signed and filed with the clerk, or an entry thereof upon the records of the court;

3. To receive money claimed by his client in an action or proceeding during the pendency thereof, or afterwards, unless he has been previously discharged by his client, and, upon payment thereof, and not otherwise, to discharge the claim or acknowledge satisfaction of the judgment. [C. '73, § 213; R., § 2706; C. '51, § 1616.]

Authority in general: It is within the scope of the employment of an attorney to receive money from a client with which to procure a surety on an attachment bond in a proper case, and such money received by one member of the firm is so far within the scope of his authority as that the other members of the firm are liable therefor: Fornes v. Wright, 91–392.

Authority to an attorney to take a note and mortgage to secure a debt, will not, without more, authorize him to seize and sell chattel property included in the mortgage: St. Paul & Kansas City Grain Co. v. Rudd, 71 N.W., 417.

Where an attorney of two defendants accepted service of notice addressed to him as attorney of both, signing himself only as attorney for one, held, that the acceptance was binding as to both: Walker v. Abbey, 77–702.

Where the same attorneys represented two parties plaintiff, one of them being the party who originally brought the suit and the other being a defendant who, on motion, had been made co-plaintiff, and a notice of appeal directed to the original plaintiff or his attorneys, naming them, was accepted by such attorneys as attorneys for plaintiff, held, that such action on their part did not constitute acceptance of service of notice by the co-plaintiff: Goodwin v. Hilliard, 76–555.

Authority to sign bond: Where the lower court upheld an attachment bond signed by the attorney for his client, held, that on appeal it would be presumed that it appeared to the lower court that the attorney had such authority, in the absence of any showing to the contrary: Goddard v. Cunningham, 6–400.

Affidavits, verifications of pleadings, etc.: An attorney may make affidavit on an application of his client for a change of venue: State v. Mooney, 10–506; or for continuance: Widner v. Hunt, 4–355.

The attorney may verify a petition where he shows a knowledge of the facts: Chittenden v. Hobbs, 9–417; Bates v. Robinson, 8 318.

But if the knowledge of the attorney is not shown the verification is insufficient: Clute v. Hazleton, 51–355.

Professional statement: Where the professional statement of an attorney is received it is to be regarded as an affidavit: Rice v. Griffith, 9–539.

Witness for client: An attorney is a competent witness for his client: Walsh v. Murphy, 2 G. Gr., 227.

But no attorney having a just conception of his true and proper position will willingly unite the character of counsel and witness in the same case: Alger v. Merritt, 16–121.

As to privileged communications between attorney and client, see § 4608.

Before bringing suit: An attorney may be employed in contemplation of a suit to be brought, and his client will be bound by his stipulations with reference thereto, to the same extent as if such stipulations had been made after the bringing of suit: Hefferman v. Burt, 7–320.

Employment of another attorney: An attorney intrusted with the business of his principal has no authority to employ another attorney to represent his principal, and the latter will not be liable for costs incurred by the attorney thus employed: Antrobus v. Sherman, 65–230.

But where by reason of reliance on an agreement with such second attorney the adverse attorney was not present when the case was called, and a judgment was recovered by default, held, there was sufficient surprise to warrant a new trial: Chicago & N. W. R. Co., v. Gillett, 38–434.

When an attorney for any cause is unable to give attention to the business of his client which has been intrusted to him, he may lawfully place it in the hands of other attorneys, and his client will not be chargeable with negligence in regard to the case if the counsel thus selected acts with ordinary prudence in attempting to appear at the proper time: First National Bank v. Harwick, 74–227.

Contract to turn over business: An attorney to whom notes have been intrusted for collection has no authority to turn them over to another for that purpose, and a contract to do so is illegal, so that damages cannot be recovered for its breach: Smalley v. Greene, 52–241.

Receipt of money: The right of an attorney to receive money for his client is no greater than that of the client to receive it: Logan v. McCahan, 71 N. W., 252.

Fraud of attorney: An attorney, when acting in court procedure for his client, acts in his stead, and a judgment recovered may be set aside for fraudulent representations made by the attorney in procuring it, when such representations would have been a ground for setting it aside if made by the party himself: De Louis v. Meek, 2 G. Gr., 55.

The malfeasance of an attorney in accepting a retainer for one party, after having previously been employed by the other, the fact being known to the first client from the time of the wrongful act, will not constitute fraud, vitiating the judgment recovered for the second client against the first: Humphrey v. Darlington, 15–207.

Negligence of attorney: The law regards the negligence of an attorney as the client's own neglect, and will give no relief from the consequences thereof: Jones v. Leech, 46–186.

Negligence of the clerk of the attorney in filing pleadings, must be imputed to the client himself: Hayward v. Goldsbury, 63–436.

The negligence of the attorney is imputed to the client, when it is sought to set aside default where verdicts or judgments binding upon the parties have been entered, but not where the action has merely been dismissed for want of prosecution: Byington v. Quincy, 61–480.

In an action by an attorney to recover for services evidence that he was negligent in rendering such services is admissible as bearing upon the value of the services rendered, even though there was no counterclaim for damages: Lindsay v. Carpenter, 90–529.

In such an action services in giving advice as to an appeal may be shown, although the attorney was not authorized to take an appeal: Ibid.

A contract to render services in the trial of a case for a specified sum includes services rendered in resisting a counterclaim as well as in prosecuting the claim of plaintiff: Ibid.

Mistake of attorney: While the law exacts of attorneys diligence in their business, and will not relieve against their negligence, yet relief may be granted where mistake has occurred without fault. Attorneys are not required to be diligent and careful beyond the capacities of human nature: Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 49–657.

Collection of claim or judgment: The authority of an attorney with respect to a claim does not terminate with the rendition of judgment, but he may control the judgment until its collection: Death v. Bank of Pittsburg, 1–382; and he has authority to receive payment and enter satisfaction of the judgment: McCarver v. Nealey, 1 G. Gr., 360.

As the attorney has the authority to receive money claimed in the action, he may receive it from any person from whom it may be collected in the action, or who, for the protection of any interest of his own, has the right to pay it. Therefore held, that an attorney prosecuting an action to foreclose a mortgage might accept from a junior mortgagee who was a party to the suit the money necessary to entitle the junior mortgagee to an assignment of the mortgage under § 4292, with the agreement that the action should afterwards be prosecuted for the interest of the junior mortgagee: Harbach v. Colvin, 73–638.

May receive money only in payment: An attorney has no authority to receive anything but money in payment of a claim left with him for collection, unless specially so authorized: Drain v. Doggett, 41–682; McCarver v. Nealey, 1 G. Gr., 360. But if the attorney accepts a check in payment and realizes the money thereon the client is bound: Harbach v. Colvin, 73–638.

He cannot without special power accept as payment a less amount than the whole sum due, and such special authority must be established in the same way that the authority of other agents must be shown, and not by the attorney's declarations: Bigler v. Toy, 68-687.

Action by attorney in his own name: It seems that it is not unusual nor improper for an attorney to whom a claim has been sent for collection to bring action thereon in his own name: Seevers v. Hamilton, 6-199.

Recovery back of money paid over: In such a case, the money collected on the judgment thus recovered having been paid to the client, held, that the attorney could not recover back from the client the amount thus paid over, upon being compelled to refund the sum collected on account of irregularities in the proceeding in which the judgment was recovered, unless he could put the client in statu quo as to the original claim: Ibid.

Ratification: Unauthorized acts of an attorney in the name of his client may be ratified by the client, who cannot retain the benefit of an unauthorized act and repudiate the portions of the transaction which are injurious to him: Brown v. Kiene, 72-342.

Granting extension: Where the attorney was directed to "secure or collect" the claim, held, that he had authority to extend the time of payment on receiving additional security: Crawford v. Nolan, 70-97.

Agreement for judgment and stay: An attorney appearing for a party may make an agreement in writing for judgment and an extension of time of payment: Potter v. Parsons, 14-286.

Compromise: An attorney cannot, without express authority, make a compromise which will operate injuriously upon his client: De Louis v. Meek, 2 G. Gr., 55; Powell v. Spaulding, 3 G. Gr., 443.

An attorney may compromise a pending suit: Martin v. Capital Ins. Co., 85-643.

Where an attorney, retained in an action to recover possession of real property, entered into a contract that his client should pay defendant a specified sum, whereupon defendant should surrender possession, held, that such agreement was not binding upon the client and that one could recover without payment of the sum stipulated: Stuck v. Reese, 15-122.

When an attorney has, in good faith, compromised the suit and consents to judgment against his client, the latter cannot, afterward, in an action in another state on such judgment, defend on the ground of want of authority in the attorney to make the compromise: Crawford v. White, 17-560.

Under a general employment to prosecute a case an attorney has no right to dismiss it. Such power should be specially delegated: Rhutasel v. Rule, 65 N. W., 1013.

Agreement of client not to compromise: A construction of a contract between an attorney and client which would prevent settlement of the suit by the client will not be favored by the courts: Ellwood v. Wilson, 21-523.

Agreement as to judgment: An attorney cannot consent to a judgment against his client or waive any cause of defense in the case; neither can he settle or compromise it without special authority; but he is, by his general employment, authorized to do all acts necessary or incidental to the prosecution or defense which pertain to the remedy pursued. The choice of proceedings, the manner of trial and the like are all in the sphere of his general authority, and as to these matters his client is bound by his action. Therefore, held, that the attorney, representing his client in two suits involving substantially the same questions might bind his client by an agreement, that the judgment resulting in the trial of one of the cases should determine the kind of judgment to be entered in the other: Ohlquest v. Farwell, 71-231.

An attorney without special authority cannot sell and transfer a judgment in favor of his client: Cottrell v. Wheeler, 89-754.

Agreement to convey land: An agreement by attorney for plaintiff in an action of right, for conveyance of a portion of the premises, held not binding on the client: Rayburn v. Kuhl, 10-92.

On appeal: An attorney retained to attend to a suit in a particular court is not thereby authorized without further authority to appeal the case, and cannot recover, under such circumstances, for services rendered in the appellate court: Hopkins v. Mallard, 1 G. Gr., 117.

Held, that an agreement by an attorney waiving the right to appeal was authorized: In re Heath's Will, 83-215.

Agreement of record: A nunc pro tunc record of an agreement by an attorney made a year after the agreement was entered into, and upon affidavits, after a dispute had arisen with reference to the agreement, held not sufficient: Hiller v. Landis, 44-223.

Where a new trial was asked on the ground of an agreement of the opposite attorney that the cause should not be tried that week, held, that as the agreement was denied by the attorney, and did not appear to have been made of record and signed by the attorney, or made in open court and entered of record, the motion could not be granted: Barnes v. Ennenga, 53-479.

Agreement of attorney for the state in a criminal prosecution that judgment be arrested until a future time, held invalid, because not in writing and recorded: State v. Stewart, 74-336.

The facts appearing from an affidavit of the attorney of a party, held sufficient to establish implied consent to the determination of a cause in vacation: Myers v. Funk, 51-92.

While the client might bind himself by a stipulation in the case, his affidavit is not receivable as evidence of an agreement by his attorney binding him: Sapp v. Aiken, 68-699.

An agreement of the attorney that a case should be presented to the supreme court upon an abstract, waiving a transcript of the evidence, cannot be enforced, if denied, unless in writing or of record: Preston v. Hale, 65-409.

Agreements of attorneys not reduced to writing or made of record will not be considered: Taylor v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 80-431.

Affidavits of counsel as to oral agreements and understandings between them must be disregarded so far as they are in conflict; Hardin v. Iowa R. & Const. Co., 78–726.

An oral agreement by counsel, that a case shall be submitted upon appeal on appellant's abstract, and transcript waived, cannot be established by affidavits of appellant's attorneys: Riegelman v. Todd, 77–696.

The supreme court will not act upon a statement of counsel as to the effect of an oral agreement as to introduction of depositions: Borland v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 78–94.

It is not competent to prove a disputed verbal agreement for the continuance of a cause made with an attorney, by the testimony of an adverse party or his attorney, but it may be proven as against a party by the testimony of his attorney who made it: Council Bluffs L. & T. Co. v. Jennings, 81–470.

The only evidence receivable to show a contract by an attorney in regard to the submission of a case binding upon his client is his written agreement or an entry of record: Searles v. Lux, 86–61.

Stipulations made in open court by an attorney of record in the case, and while the case is pending, if free from fraud and mistake and clearly established, will be enforced by the court: Lockwood v. Black Hawk County, 34–235.

It is competent for attorneys to agree for an extension of time for filing a bill of exceptions, and when such agreement is reduced to writing and filed it becomes a part of the record in the case without being embodied in a bill of exceptions: State ex rel. v. Chamberlin, 74–266.

An agreement of an attorney to an abstract on appeal cannot be shown by affidavits, not being evidence in writing: Doerr v. Southwestern Mut. L. Ass., 92–39.

A direction given by an attorney to an officer as to the disposition of property is not an agreement within the provisions of this section: Citizens National Bank v. Loomis, 69 N. W., 443.

An agreement made by attorneys by telephone, the attorneys acting in what is said as the agents of their clients, who are present with their respective attorneys, is not a contract between attorneys and is not within the provisions of this section: Kramer v. Chambers, 92–681.

It is not improper for an attorney to call to the attention of the court an oral agreement made between the attorneys in open court: Leek v. Chesley, 67 N. W., 580.

SEC. 320. Proof of authority may be required. The court may, on motion of either party and on the showing of reasonable grounds therefor, require the attorney for the adverse party, or for any one of the several adverse parties, to produce or prove by his own oath, or otherwise, the authority under which he appears, and, until he does so, may stay all proceedings by him on behalf of the parties for whom he assumes to appear. [C. '73, § 214; R., § 2707; C. '51, § 1617.]

Want of authority; how raised: Absence of authority on the part of plaintiff's attorney to bring a suit may be a ground for dismissing it, or, if the attorney wants time in order to make a showing of authority, for continuance, but it cannot be taken advantage of as a ground to defeat recovery: Savary v. Savary, 3–271.

The showing to require an attorney to prove his authority, held insufficient in a particular case: Savery v. Savery, 8–217.

A judgment by default entered against a defendant upon an appearance for him by attorney, which is made without authority and by mistake, should be set aside: Rice v. Griffith, 9–539.

Where a demurrer is filed without authority and a valid appearance is afterward made, a new demurrer may be filed: Winterstien v. Walker, 10–198.

Authority; evidence of: Authority to appear, held sufficiently established by the attorney's own testimony and a written receipt signed by the party for whom appearance was made, acknowledging receipt of money collected by the litigation, although the party himself testified that no such authority was given: Ellis v. White, 61–644.

Where the statement of the attorney in showing his authority discloses the fact that he is acting on written authority, he may properly be required to produce it: State ex rel. v. Tilghman, 6–496.

An affidavit of an attorney, that he appeared in the lower court for defendant, cannot be received on appeal to show that the lower court had jurisdiction: Stout v. Fortner, 7–183.

Notice to attorney: Knowledge of the attorney is, in general, considered notice to the client: De Louis v. Meek, 2 G. Gr., 55.

Service upon attorney: In ordinary actions service upon an attorney is not sufficient to give a court jurisdiction: Death v. Bank of Pittsbury, 1–382.

Under the English chancery practice, where the judgment plaintiff was a nonresident, service in an action in equity to enjoin the collection of the judgment might be made upon a resident attorney having charge of such collection; but under our procedure such an action might be brought to enjoin the sheriff from levying execution under the judgment: Ibid.

Appearance of authorized attorney cures any defect by reason of want of authority in such attorney to accept service of the notice: Fanning v. Minnesota R. Co., 37–379.

Defense should be shown: A party seeking to have a judgment set aside on the ground that it was rendered on appearance by an attorney without authority should allege and show a defense to the claim: Russell v. Pottawattamie County, 29–256.

Authority not questioned on appeal: Where the record, without setting out the evidence, shows that the lower court was satisfied by affidavit of the authority of the attorney to appear, the ruling will not be disturbed on appeal: Huston v. Stringham, 21-36.

The authority of the attorney cannot be first questioned by his client on appeal, when he has acquiesced in his action in the court below: Hefferman v. Burt, 7-320.

Presumption as to attorney's authority: A regular attorney has authority to bring a suit and continue it to its final determination. He cannot be called upon to prove his authority, but the want of it must be shown by the objecting party: State v. Carothers, 1 G. Gr., 464.

Where the record shows appearance by attorney, a party attacking the judgment, on the ground of want of authority of the attorney to appear, must overcome such presumption: Potter v. Parsons, 14-286; and must do so by clear and satisfactory evidence: Wheeler v. Cox, 56-36: Russell v. Pottawattamie County, 29-256.

Although the attorney cannot, without special authority, admit service of jurisdictional process upon his client, yet it will be presumed in all collateral attacks, and perhaps on appeal or writ of error, that a regular attorney who appeared for a defendant, though not served, had authority to do so: Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20-161.

The appearance of an attorney for a party is prima facie evidence of authority, and, before his act can be avoided, injury resulting from the unauthorized appearance must be shown: Piggott v. Addicks, 3 G. Gr., 427.

Where the record recites an acceptance of service by attorney, it will be presumed, in favor of the judgment, that authority to accept service existed, or that some other form of service was shown: Prince v. Griffin, 16-552.

The fact of appearance by attorney being established, it is for the party insisting that the appearance was unauthorized and the judgment void to show that fact: Bond v. Epley, 48-600.

Absence of authority; foreign judgment: The defendant in an action upon a foreign judgment may deny the authority of the attorney who appeared for him: Baltzell v. Nosler, 1-589; Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20-161.

When want of authority of attorney to enter appearance is made the ground of an equitable defense in an action on a foreign judgment, it should be alleged also that defendant is not indebted to plaintiff on the claim on which the judgment was based: Crawford v. White, 17-560.

In a suit on a foreign judgment the fact that the attorneys who appeared for defendant were not authorized to do so is immaterial, if it appears that defendant was duly served with notice, and would have been concluded without an appearance: Woodward v. Willard, 33-542.

In action on domestic judgments: In case of a domestic judgment rendered upon an unauthorized appearance and without service, the party against whom the judgment is thus improperly rendered is entitled to relief if the judgment is unjust, and relief is sought by bill or motion, without laches; but the party must promptly disavow the action of the attorney upon receiving knowledge thereof: Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20-161.

A judgment rendered without service of notice and upon appearance by attorney without authority is void: Macomber v. Peck, 39-351.

If an attorney is in fact not authorized to appear for a party, the latter may be relieved against the judgment by direct action in equity to set it aside: Bryant v. Williams, 21-329.

A junior lienholder may, for the purpose of establishing his right to redeem from the foreclosure under a senior mortgage, show that an agent or attorney who entered appearance for him, or accepted service, did so without authority, and this may be shown as against third persons purchasing at the sale: Newcomb v. Dewey, 27-381.

Attorney exceeding authority: The right to contest a judgment, on account of want of authority of the attorney appearing for a defendant not served, exists only when the want of authority is total, and not where an attorney, regularly employed, has merely exceeded his authority: Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20-161.

Ratification: A party claiming the benefit of a plea put in by an attorney cannot deny the authority of such attorney to act in the case: Oltrogge v. Schutte, 51-279.

Where an attorney accepted part payment in full satisfaction of a judgment procured for his client, and no further steps were taken for the enforcement of said judgment for eleven years, held, that it would be inferred that the attorney had authority to make such settlement or that the client was informed of his action, if without authority, and had by long silence ratified it: Reed v. Dickinson, 37-56.

The client, having ratified the act of the attorney appearing for him by paying him for his services, is bound by the judgment: Ryan v. Doyle, 31-53.

SEC. 321. Attorney's lien—notice. An attorney has a lien for a general balance of compensation upon:

1. Any papers belonging to his client which have come into his hands in the course of his professional employment;

2. Money in his hands belonging to his client;

3. Money due his client in the hands of the adverse party, or attorney of such party, in an action or proceeding in which the attorney claiming the lien was employed, from the time of giving notice in writing to such adverse party, or attorney of such party, if the money is in the possession or under the control of such attorney, which notice shall state the amount claimed, and, in general terms, for what services;

4. After judgment in any court of record, such notice may be given, and the lien made effective against the judgment debtor, by entering the same in the judgment or combination docket opposite the entry of the judgment. [C. '73, § 215; R., § 2708; C. '51, § 1618.]

Liens in general: Two classes of liens are recognized at common law in favor of attorneys, namely, a retaining lien and a charging lien. A party owing money is not bound by a charging lien unless notified thereof. This section of the statute is a substantial enactment of the common law in this respect, and adds nothing thereto except the provision as to giving notice on the judgment docket. No such notice having been given at the time of the assignment of the judgment, the lien does not attach to the judgment as against the assignee: Jennings v. Bacon, 84–403.

When a statute has barred the right of an attorney to recover fees, his right to enforce a lien for such fees is also barred: Larned v. Dubuque, 86–166.

The statute is not extended by the provisions of the common law but is in lieu thereof and fixes the rights of the parties. The statute provides for the only lien to which an attorney is entitled and to obtain it the requirements of the statute must be observed: Ward v. Sherbondy, 65 N. W., 413.

Securities; assignment of: Where an attorney transfers to another securities on which he claims a lien, his assignee can only hold them for the reasonable value of the services rendered: Collins v. Jennings, 42–447.

Subject to rights under trust deed: Where a suit was commenced to subject the property and income of a corporation to the payment of bonds secured by deed of trust, and a receiver was appointed, held, that the attorney of the corporation had no lien on its funds for services rendered after commencement of suit which would have priority over the claims of the bondholders: Des Moines Gas Co. v. West, 50–16.

Burden of proof: Where money collected by an attorney was retained by him under the claim of a lien, held, that it was for him to aver and prove the services and their value: Stanton v. Clinton, 52–109.

Lien prior to garnishment: The lien of an attorney upon money due his client in the hands of the adverse party, attaches from the time of giving notice to such party, and his lien will not be postponed to a subsequent garnishment: Myers v. McHugh, 16–335.

Notice in writing: The notice of the lien to bind the adverse party must be in writing: Phillips v. Germon, 43–101.

Notice at commencement of suit: A notice of a claim for a lien is sufficient if inserted in the original notice of the action (at least if signed by the attorney in his individual capacity as well as in his capacity as attorney for his client): Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 56–720.

Service of notice upon agent of corporation: While service of notice of attorney's lien, in an action against a corporation, might not be sufficient if made upon one of the class of agents upon whom service of original notice is authorized, yet if such service of notice of lien is upon one of such agents in connection with the service of the original notice, such service of notice of lien is sufficient, the service of the original notice being sufficient to charge such agent with a duty in relation to the matter: Ibid.

In action on tort: An attorney's lien may properly be claimed, not only in all actions on contract, but also in actions for damages arising from tort: Ibid.

For future services: The lien attaches, after proper notice, not only for services then rendered, but for those thereafter rendered: Ibid.

Settlement: The parties may settle without the consent of the attorneys, and without first paying their fees, unless notice of an attorney's lien has been given: Casar v. Sargeant, 7–317.

But if notice is given the lien will not be defeated by the fact that the case is settled without judgment having been rendered: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 56–720.

After the rendition of judgment and pending an appeal to the supreme court, the parties have the right to settle their case and if payment is made after notice of an attorney's lien, the person making payment will be liable for an attorney's fee estimated on the basis of the claim, but not on the basis of the judgment. The lien is not on the judgment but upon the claim, and the amount paid in settlement rather than the amount of the judgment is to be made the basis of estimating the compensation to be paid to the attorney: Parsons v. Hawley, 92–175.

The adverse party is charged with notice by the entry on the judgment docket, and from the time of such entry he cannot prejudice the rights of the attorney claiming a lien by settlement with his client. As the law does not give the lien on the judgment, but on the claim of the adverse party, or the money in the hands of such party, the lien will continue, although the judgment itself may be reversed on appeal. Also, held, that the fact that the entry on the judgment docket claimed the lien on the judgment and not on the money in the hands of the adverse party was immaterial: Winslow v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71–197.

A creditor who makes settlement with his debtor of a claim in litigation does so at the peril of being thereafter compelled to pay to the attorney any sum due to him under his lien in such case: Larned v. Dubuque, 86–166.

Notice; set-off: An attorney's lien does not attach upon money due his client in the hands of the adverse party until notice is given to such party; therefore, held, that the right to set off a judgment existing in favor of the adverse party against the client before notice of the attorney's lien was not subject to such lien. Whether such right of set-off may be taken advantage of as against the attorney's lien, where it does not arise until after notice of such lien, quære: Hurst v. Sheets, 21-501. (This case was under Rev., § 2708, which did not contain a provision similar to ¶ 4 of this section.)

The lien of an attorney is upon the interest of his client in the judgment, and it is subject to an existing right of set-off in the other party: National Bank v. Eyre, 3 McCrary, 175.

Subject to costs: An attorney cannot have a lien upon any greater amount than shall actually be found to be owing by the opposite party to his client. And where an attorney took an assignment of a judgment to secure his fees, held, that he stood in the shoes of his client, and must take the judgment with all the burdens, such as costs taxed in favor of the opposite party, etc., attaching by the course of the litigation: Tiffany v. Stewart, 60-207; Watson v. Smith, 63-228.

The supreme court cannot grant an attorney's lien on a judgment when such lien is not secured in the proceedings in the court below, as such relief would be the exercise of original jurisdiction: Preston v. Daniels, 2 G. Gr., 536.

Satisfaction of judgment; discharge of lien: After the entry of the notice in the judgment docket the attorney acquires an interest in the judgment, and may, by proper proceedings, have the same enforced to the extent of such interest. His interest cannot be divested by a discharge of the judgment by the parties, or by their consenting that it be set aside: Brainard v. Elwood, 53-30.

Although the statute now provides for an attorney's lien not only for money due his client in the hands of the adverse party, but also after judgment upon the judgment itself, yet the right to enforce the lien upon such judgment is barred after the right of action to recover his fees has become barred by the statute of limitations: Larned v. Dubuque, 86-166.

Where the attorney perfected the title of his client in real property attached in the action, and thereby satisfied the judgment as against the adverse party, held, that the entry of his lien in the judgment docket did not preserve it upon such property in the hands of a purchaser from his client: Cowen v. Boone, 48-350.

An attorney's lien does not attach to a judgment in favor of his client so as to give the attorney by virtue of an assignment of the judgment on which his lien has been filed priority over the right of the defendant in the judgment to have the same set off against a prior judgment held by the defendant against the plaintiff: Benson v. Haywood, 86-107.

The notice here provided for is effectual to create an attorney's lien only from the time it is served or given and operates to create a lien on money in the hands of the person who receives it subject to prior rights thereto: Ward v. Sherbondy, 65 N.W., 413.

Where the attorney, by authority of his client, releases of record the lien of the judgment in behalf of the client, the attorney cannot afterwards assert, as against a subsequent purchaser, any lien or interest in himself under such judgment: Wishard v. Biddle, 64-526.

Payment of money to clerk: A party cannot avoid the lien by unconditionally paying the money to the clerk; but he may pay it to the clerk to be held by him subject to such lien: Fisher v. Oskaloosa, 28-381.

SEC. 322. How lien released. Any person interested may release such lien by executing a bond in a sum double the amount claimed, or in such sum as may be fixed by any district judge, payable to the attorney, with security to be approved by the clerk of the supreme or district court, conditioned to pay any amount finally found due the attorney for his services, which amount may be ascertained by suit on the bond. Such lien will be released, unless the attorney, within ten days after demand therefor, files with the clerk a full and complete bill of particulars of the services and amount claimed for each item, or written contract with the party for whom the services were rendered. [C. '73. § 216; R., § 2709; C. '51, § 1619.]

The filing of the bond discharges, not only the lien of the attorney on the judgment, but any lien which he may have under the preceding section. The provisions of § 331 do not apply to a case of this kind, and after the filing of the bond provided in this section and release of the attorney's lien, he cannot retain such lien by filing a bond as there provided: Cross v. Ackley, 40-493.

In an action by the client against the attorney to recover moneys collected by the attorney, the fact that the attorney is entitled to a portion of the money collected in payment for services will not render the proceeding one to discharge an attorney's lien in such sense as to make it necessary to tender a bond in order to obtain a release of the property: Armitage v. Sullivan, 69-426.

SEC. 323. License to practice may be revoked. Any court of record may revoke or suspend the license of an attorney or counselor at law to practice therein, and a revocation or suspension in one county operates to the same extent in the courts of all other counties. [C. '73, § 217; R., § 2710; C. '51, § 1620.]

The court cannot revoke or suspend the license of an attorney except after proceedings are commenced for that purpose as hereinafter provided, and the party has had his day in court. It cannot be done summarily as a punishment for contempt: State v. Start, 7-499.

SEC. 324. Grounds of revocation. The following are sufficient causes for revocation or suspension:

1. When he has been convicted of a felony, or of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude; in either of which cases the record of conviction is conclusive evidence;

2. When he is guilty of a wilful disobedience or violation of the order of the court, requiring him to do or forbear an act connected with or in the course of his profession;

3. A wilful violation of any of the duties of an attorney or counselor as hereinbefore prescribed;

4. Doing any other act to which such a consequence is by law attached. [C. '73, § 218; R., § 2711; C. '51, § 1621.]

An attorney may be punished under ¶ 2 for disobedience to an order of court to pay over money to his client as provided in § 3826: Cross v. Ackley, 40-493, 498.

Charges in a particular case against an attorney for making false representations to clients for the purpose of retaining money collected and defrauding them, also for collecting and refusing to pay over money, to which the attorney pleaded guilty, held sufficient to justify an order suspending the attorney and providing in a certain contingency for his final disbarment: Slemmer v. Wright, 54-164.

SEC. 325. Proceedings—how begun. The proceedings to remove or suspend an attorney may be commenced by the direction of the court, or on motion of any individual. In the former case, the court must direct some attorney to draw up the accusation; in the latter, the accusation must be drawn up and sworn to by the person making it. [C. '73, § 219; R., § 2712; C. '51, § 1622.]

Proceedings to disbar an attorney are special proceedings in which the provisions for change of venue in civil actions are applicable: State v. Clarke, 46-155.

It is probable that the court could, in the exercise of its inherent authority, require a member of the bar to discharge the duty of conducting the prosecution of a proceeding for disbarment. But the exercise of such authority rests in the sound discretion of the judge, and the persons commencing the disbarment proceedings could not object to the action of the court in refusing to make such appointment: Byington v. Moore, 70-206.

In proceeding against an attorney for contempt the accusation should specify the manner in which the contempt was committed: if by words, the words used should be set out; if by acts they should be described: Perry v. State, 3 G. Gr., 550.

SEC. 326. Notice. If the court deem the accusation sufficient to justify further action, it shall cause an order to be entered requiring the accused to appear and answer on a day therein fixed, either at the same or a subsequent term, and shall cause a copy of the accusation and order to be served upon him personally. [C. '73, § 220; R., § 2713; C. '51, § 1623.]

SEC. 327. Pleading—trial—evidence preserved. To the accusation he may plead or demur, and the issues joined thereon shall, in all cases, be tried by the court, all the evidence being reduced to writing, filed and preserved. [C. '73, § 221; R., § 2714; C. '51, § 1624.]

SEC. 328. Plea of guilty or failure to plead—judgment. If the accused plead guilty, or fail to answer, the court shall proceed to render such judgment as the case requires. [C. '73, § 222; R., § 2715; C. '51, § 1625.]

SEC. 329. Appeal. In case of a removal or suspension being ordered, an appeal therefrom lies to the supreme court, and all the original papers, together with a transcript of the record, shall thereupon be transferred to the supreme court, to be there considered and finally acted upon. A judgment of acquittal by a court of record is final. [C. '73, § 223; R., § 2716; C. '51, § 1626.]

SEC. 330. Retention of money—misdemeanor. An attorney who receives the money or property of his client in the course of his professional business, and refuses to pay or deliver it in a reasonable time, after demand, is guilty of a misdemeanor. [C. '73, § 224; R., § 2717; C. '51, § 1627.]

SEC. 331. When not guilty. When the attorney claims to be entitled to a lien upon the money or property, he is not liable to the penalties of the preceding section until the person demanding the money proffers sufficient security for the payment of the amount of the attorney's claim, when it is legally ascertained. Nor is he in any case liable as aforesaid, provided he gives sufficient security that he will pay over the whole or any portion thereof to the claimant when he is found entitled thereto. [C. '73, §§ 225–6; R., §§ 2718–19; C. '51, §§ 1628–9.]

The bond here provided is only to exempt an attorney from proceedings against him under this section, and is not designed to enable him to retain a lien which is discharged by the bond referred to in § 322: Cross v. Ackley, 40–493.

CHAPTER 11.

OF JURORS.

SECTION 332. Competency to act. All qualified electors of the state, of good moral character, sound judgment, and in full possession of the senses of hearing and seeing, and who can speak, write and read the English language, are competent jurors in their respective counties. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 1; 25 G. A., ch. 70, § 1; C. '73, § 227; R., § 2720; C. '51, § 1630.]

Under certain facts, held, that a juror was incompetent as not being a qualified elector; also held, that an objection to the competency of a juror should be interposed when he is sworn, but, if not then known, may be interposed after verdict: State v. Groome, 10–308.

As to who are electors, see Const., art. II, § 1.

A judgment rendered upon a verdict by a jury, some members of which are disqualified, is erroneous, but not void; it might be reversed upon appeal, but it cannot be disregarded as a nullity. Foreman v. Hunter, 59–550.

The former requirement that jurors be chosen from the body of the county was intended to prevent the selection of jurors resident out of the county, and did not require that jurors should be taken from all parts of the county; therefore, held, that a statute authorizing the holding of the district court in two places in a county, and providing that when held at one of these places the jurisdiction should be limited to certain townships, and the jurors should be selected from only these townships, did not interfere with the right of trial by jury: Trimble v. State, 2 G. Gr., 404.

SEC. 333. Who exempt. The following persons are exempt from liability to act as jurors: All persons holding office under the laws of the United States or this state; all practicing attorneys, physicians, registered pharmacists, and clergymen; all acting professors or teachers of any college, school or other institution of learning; and all persons disabled by bodily infirmity, or over sixty-five years of age; active members of any fire company; and any person who is conscientiously opposed to acting as a juror because of his religious faith. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 2; C. '73, § 228; R., § 2721; C. '51, § 1631.]

The exemption is a personal privilege, which may be waived, and is not a ground for challenge: State v. Adams, 20–486; State v. Edgerton, 69 N. W., 280. See § 3692.

SEC. 334. Who may be excused—false statements punished. Any person may also be excused from serving on a jury when his own interests or those of the public will be materially injured by his attendance, or when the state of his own health, or the death or sickness of a member of his family, requires his absence from court. Any person who knowingly makes any false affidavit, statement or claim, for the purpose of relieving himself from serving as a juror, or any person who requests the judges of election to return his name as such juror, shall, upon conviction, be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or the court may punish such person as for contempt. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 3; 25 G. A., ch. 70, § 4; C. '73, § 229; R., § 2722; C. '51, § 1632.]

That jurors have been excused on their own statements, not under oath, is not ground of objection by the defendant in a criminal case, and he cannot have an attachment issued to compel the attendance of those so excused: State v. Ostrander, 18–435, 448.

SEC. 335. Lists to be made annually. There shall annually be made lists from which to select persons to serve as grand and petit jurors and talesmen for the year commencing on the first day of January following, as follows: Seventy-five persons in each county from which to select grand jurors, four hundred persons in each county, having twenty thousand inhabitants or less, and eight hundred persons in counties having more than twenty thousand inhabitants, from which to select petit jurors; one hundred and fifty persons in counties having twenty thousand inhabitants or less, and three hundred persons in counties having more than twenty thousand inhabitants, from which to select talesmen. The talesmen list shall be made from names of persons who reside in the city or town in which the district court is held and the township or townships in which such city or town is located; but, if according to the last state or national census there be less than one thousand inhabitants in the territory from which talesmen are required to be drawn, such lists may include residents of another township next nearest to the court-house. In counties where court is held in more than one place, the persons shall be selected from the qualified electors of the separate divisions of the county, giving to each division of the county the number of grand and petit jurors and talesmen it would be entitled to under this act if it were a separate county. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 4; C. '73, § 234; C. '73, § 244; R., § 2738.]

SEC. 336. Auditor to apportion. On or before the first Monday in September in each year, the county auditor shall apportion the number of grand and petit jurors to be selected among the several election precincts, and the talesmen among the precincts from which the same are to be drawn, in each case as nearly as practicable in proportion to the number of votes polled in such precincts at the last general election. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 5; C. '73, § 236; R., § 2725; C. '51, § 1635.]

A substantial compliance with such provisions held sufficient: State v. Edgerton, 69 N. W., 280; State v. Pierce, 58 N. W., 891.

SEC. 337. Judges of election to return names—if they fail, supervisors supply names. The auditor shall, at the time of furnishing the poll-books to the judges of election, furnish them also a statement of the number of persons apportioned to their respective precincts to be returned for each of the said jury lists, together with the names of all persons who have served as grand or petit jurors since January first preceding, which latter names shall be furnished to him by the clerk of the district court. The judges shall thereupon make the requisite selection, and return lists of names so selected to the auditor with the returns of elections; and in case the judges of election shall fail to make and return said lists as herein required, the board of supervisors shall, at the meeting held to canvass the votes polled in the county, make such lists for the delinquent precincts, and the auditor shall file such lists in his office, and cause a copy thereof to be recorded in the election book. Such lists shall be composed only of persons competent and qualified to serve as jurors; and the judges of election or boards of supervisors shall omit from said lists the name of any person who has served as a grand or petit juror in a court of record since January first preceding. And if the name of any such person is returned, the fact that he has requested to be so returned, or has served as such juror in a court of record during the jury year, as defined in this chapter, shall be a ground for challenge for cause. The members of the election board, or the board of supervisors, when certifying to such lists, shall state that the lists do not contain the name of any person who requested, directly or indirectly, that his name appear thereon. If the boundaries of any voting precinct shall be changed, it shall be the duty of the auditor, in making the apportionment of grand and petit jurors and talesmen, to assign to the new voting precincts the total number of grand and petit jurors and talesmen to which all the former precincts affected by the change were entitled, giving to each new precinct an equal number, as nearly as possible. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 6; C. '73, § 238; R., §§ 2727–8; C. '51, §§ 1637–8.]

A failure to record the names returned on the grand jury list does not invalidate proceedings of the grand jury drawn therefrom: State v. Knight, 19–94; State v. Howard, 10–101.

Where the judges of election and county canvassers each failed to make out and return names of jurors for one election precinct, but two names were supplied by the board of supervisors, which two jurors, however, were not drawn upon the grand jury, held, that the irregularity did not vitiate an indictment: State v. Brandt, 41–593.

No formal certificate of the judges to the lists so returned is necessary, though it would be proper. Where the record in the record book shows due and proper selection, the presumption is that such record was the result of the list duly made. When the law has been substantially complied with, an indictment should not be set aside for slight irregularities in such matters: State v. Ansaleme, 15–44.

It is not required that the records of the board of canvassers shall show that the selection of jurymen was made for precincts from which no returns were sent in: State v. Carney, 20–82.

A substantial compliance with the provisions of the law relating to the selection of jurymen is all that is required: Ibid.

SEC. 338. Auditor and clerk prepare ballots. On or before the first Monday in December in each year, the county auditor and clerk of the district court shall prepare from said lists separate ballots, containing the names and places of residence of all persons so returned by the judges of election or board of supervisors, keeping the names of the several classes of jurors separate, and deposit in separate boxes the ballots of the grand jurors, petit jurors and talesmen, as returned on said lists, which boxes shall be plainly marked, sealed and forthwith deposited with the clerk of the district court. In preparing the lists as herein provided, the county auditor and clerk shall omit therefrom the names of all persons who have served as grand or petit jurors since January first preceding. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 7; 17 G. A., ch. 184; C. '73, § 240; R., § 2730; C. '51, § 1640.]

As to previous provisions as to persons who have served within a year, see State v. Standley, 76–215; Barnes v. Newton, 46–567.

SEC. 339. Grand jurors—panel of twelve for each year. Twelve persons shall be drawn from the grand jury list, and shall constitute the panel from which to select grand jurors for one year; but no more than one person shall be drawn as grand juror from any civil township, except when there are less than twelve civil townships in the county, in which case not more than two persons shall be drawn from any one township. No person shall be summoned or serve as grand juror for two consecutive years. If more persons shall be drawn from any civil township than is hereby authorized, or any person is drawn who has served during the preceding jury year as grand juror, it is the duty of the officer drawing such grand jury to reject all such names so drawn, and to proceed with the drawing until the required number of jurors shall be secured. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 8; 21 G. A., ch. 42, § 2; C. '73, § 241; R., §§ 2731, 2733; C. '51, §§ 1641, 1643.]

Under former provisions, held, that the return of a larger number of names of persons to serve as grand jurors was an irregularity only, the extra names having been struck off before the grand jury was drawn: State v. Knight, 19–94.

The provision that there should not be two grand jurors from the same township, held not directory only but mandatory, and that a failure to comply with such requirement might be taken advantage of by motion to set aside the indictment, where the defendant had not had an opportunity to challenge the grand jury: State v. Russell, 58 N. W., 915.

SEC. 340. Clerk draws seven for each term. The names of twelve persons constituting the panel of the grand jury shall, on the second day of each term of court, unless otherwise ordered by the court or judge, be placed by the clerk in a box, and, after thoroughly mixing the same, he shall draw therefrom seven names; and the persons so drawn shall constitute the grand jury for that term. Should any of the persons so drawn be excused or fail to attend on said second day of the court, the clerk shall draw other names until the seven grand jurors are secured. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 9.]

SEC. 341. Petit jurors—new panel each term. Petit jurors shall be drawn from the petit jury lists for each term, but no person shall be required to attend as a petit juror more than one term in the same year. But this exemption shall not apply to talesmen. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 10; C. '73, § 239; R., § 2729; C. '51, § 1639.]

SEC. 342. When, how, and by whom drawn. At least twenty days prior to the first day of each term at which a grand or petit jury is required to be selected, the county auditor, clerk of the district court and recorder shall meet at the court-house and proceed to draw the grand and petit jurors as provided herein. The ballots, when placed in the respective boxes from which the drawings are to be made, shall be uniform in size and paper, and be so folded as to conceal the names on the ballots, and the boxes shall be arranged with only an aperture to insert the hand, and at the time of the drawing the boxes shall be thoroughly shaken in the presence of the officers attending the drawing, and the seal on the aperture broken in their presence, and one of the said officers shall then, without looking at the ballots, draw one from the appropriate petit jury or grand jury box, as the case may be, and pass it to one of the other officers attending the drawing, who shall open it, and the name thereon shall be read aloud by him and taken down; then another ballot shall be drawn and opened in the same manner until the whole number of jurors required shall be drawn for each class, when the boxes shall again be sealed up and returned to the clerk of the district court, who shall immediately issue his precept to the sheriff of the county, commanding him to summon the persons so drawn to appear at the court-house at the time designated in such precept, or, if the court shall determine that either the grand or petit jurors have been illegally drawn, selected or summoned the court may set aside the precept under which they were summoned, and direct a sufficient number drawn and summoned in the manner above provided. Such drawing may proceed forthwith, and the jurors so drawn be required to appear immediately, or at such time as the court may fix. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 11; 25 G. A., ch. 70, § 6; 21 G. A., ch. 42, § 2; C. '73, § 241; R., §§ 2731, 2733; C. '51, §§ 1641, 1643.]

Under prior provisions, held, that a direction that the drawing be by the sheriff was not complied with by a drawing by his deputy: State v. Brandt, 41–593; Dutell v. State, 4 G. Gr., 125; also that on failure of the panel to appear, the requisite number of grand jurors should be selected from the body of the county: State v. Beste, 91–565.

Grand jury: Provisions as to the drawing of jurors are directory and in a particular case held, that there was sufficient compliance with the law to render the drawing legal: State v. DeBord, 88–103.

While the provisions of the law in regard to the mode of obtaining jurors are directory, yet the drawing should be in substantial conformity thereto: State v. Beckey, 79–368.

SEC. 343. Sheriff to summon. The sheriff shall immediately obey such precepts, and on or before the day for the appearance of said jurors must make return thereof, and, on a failure to do so without sufficient cause, may be punished for contempt. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 12; C. '73, § 242; R., § 2734; C. '51, § 1644.]

Under prior provisions, held, that service of precept might be made by deputy sheriff and special bailiffs: State v. Arthur, 39–631.

SEC. 344. Grand jurors summoned but once. Except when required at a special term, the twelve persons from which the grand jury is to be impaneled need not be summoned after the first term, but must appear at each succeeding term during the year without summons, under the same penalty as though they had been summoned. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 13; C. '73, § 243; R., § 2736; C. '51, § 1646.]

See State v. Braskamp, 87–588, decided under prior provisions.

Where a term of the district court began on December 8, 1884, grand jurors empaneled for 1884 were held competent to return an indictment after January 1, 1885, but during the same term: State v. Winebrenner, 67–230.

SEC. 345. When to appear—excuses—contempt. Unless the court or judge otherwise orders, jurors shall be summoned to appear at each place where court is to be held at ten o'clock a. m. of the second day of the term, at which time they shall be called, and all excuses shall be heard and determined by the court, but the impaneling of the grand or petit juries may be postponed to a subsequent day by order of the court or judge. If any person summoned fail to appear without sending a sufficient excuse, the court may issue an order requiring him to appear and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, and unless he render a sufficient excuse for such failure he may be punished for contempt. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 14; C. '73, § 230; R., § 2735; C. '51, § 1645.]

This provision as to summoning jurors is not applicable to grand jurors at a subsequent term to that at which they are first summoned to appear, and during the same year: State v. Standley, 76–215. And see § 344.

SEC. 346. Number of jurors to be drawn. The grand jury shall be composed of seven members. The petit jurors, in counties containing a population of less than fifteen thousand, shall be fifteen in number, unless the court or judge otherwise orders. In counties having fifteen thousand or over, the number shall be twenty-four, unless the court or judge otherwise orders. When a single county constitutes a district, the court may increase the number, not to exceed seventy-two. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 15; 21 G. A., ch. 128, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 42, § 1; C. '73, § 231; R., § 2732; C. '51, § 1642.]

The statute (21 G. A., ch. 42) passed in pursuance of an amendment to the constitution (see art. V, § 15), reducing the number of grand jurors, was not unconstitutional for lack of uniformity and though by its terms it was not to affect juries empaneled prior to January 1, 1887, yet it applied to juries empaneled after that date although the venires for such juries had been issued and served prior to that date: State v. Standley, 76–215.

The provision that when the grand jury consists of five members an indictment may be found upon the concurrence of four jurors is not in conflict with the constitution, on the ground that it authorizes an indictment to be found by less than the smallest number of which the grand jury can be composed: State v. Salts, 77–193.

The population of a county, for the purpose of ascertaining the number of jurors to be chosen, is to be determined from the last preceding census the results of which can be ascertained and judicial notice is to be taken of what the population is according to such census: State v. Braskamp, 87–588.

The fact that the population of the county at the time the grand jury was empaneled by a census already taken appeared to be slightly in excess of 16,000 so that a grand jury of seven should have been empaneled, whereas the grand jury consisted of only five, held, that such error did not deprive the court of jurisdiction under the indictment and such defect could not be taken advantage of after judgment on a plea of guilty: State v. Belvel, 89–405.

SEC. 347. Others drawn when necessary. Should the number of petit jurors summoned fail to appear, or be excused as provided in this chapter, the requisite number shall be drawn in the same manner as the original panel, and the persons so drawn shall be forthwith summoned to appear and serve as jurors during the term. Persons so drawn shall have the right to present excuses as provided for the original panel. The court or judge thereof, either before or during the term, may order as many additional jurors drawn for the term, or for the trial of any particular case, as may be deemed necessary, which drawing shall be in the same manner as for the original and regular panel, so far as applicable. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 16; C. '73, § 232; R., § 2737; C. '51, § 1647.]

Under a similar section of Code of '73, held, that the provision for a second drawing was directory only and a failure to comply with it was not a ground of challenge to the panel: Buford v. McGetchie, 60-298; nor of reversal: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68–530; State v. Rockwell, 82–429; also that it was not applicable to a criminal case where the panel had been exhausted by challenges: State v. Ryan, 70–154.

As to prior provisions for filling the panel, see State v. Pierce, 8–231; State v. Arthur, 39 –631; Emerick v. Sloan, 18–139; State v. Hart, 67–142.

SEC. 348. Court controls number. If in the judgment of the court the business of the term does not require the attendance of all the petit jurors, such number as the court deems proper may be discharged. Should it afterwards appear that a jury is required, the court may direct them to be resummoned. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 17; C. '73, § 233.]

Where the court discharged all but eighteen of the jury, and afterwards a larger number becoming necessary caused additional jurors to be summoned from the bystanders, held, that the proceeding was not erroneous: State v. McCahill, 72-111.

SEC. 349. Talesmen—when and how drawn—waiver. If, upon the trial of any cause, the court shall determine that it is probable talesmen will be needed to complete the jury, or if the regular panel has been exhausted, the clerk shall, in the presence of the court, draw such number of names as the court may order from the talesmen box to complete the jury. In drawing such names, the clerk, when the court directs, shall reject those known to be unable to serve or absent from the territory from which drawn, and proceed until the required number is secured. The persons whose names are so drawn, or as many thereof as may be found within the territory from which talesmen are selected, shall be immediately summoned by the sheriff to appear forthwith, and the jury shall be completed from the persons so summoned and appearing. The names of jurors so drawn, and who serve, shall be placed in a safe receptacle from time to time, until all the ballots are drawn from the talesmen's box, when such ballots shall be returned to the said box, to be drawn in like manner as before. When the parties to the cause, by agreement entered of record, waive the drawing of talesmen as above provided, the court may direct the sheriff to summon such talesmen from the body of the county. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 18; 25 G. A., ch. 70, § 7.]

SEC. 350. Disposition of ballots drawn. All ballots drawn, when the persons do not appear or do not serve (except when permanent disability is shown), shall be returned to the respective boxes from which drawn, but the ballots of the petit jurors, except talesmen, so drawn, who appear and serve for any term, shall be destroyed. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 19; 25 G. A., ch. 70, § 7.]

SEC. 351. Special venire in lieu of talesmen. When a city or town is a party to a suit, the talesmen shall not be drawn therefrom, but in such cases the court shall order a special venire, or may order the talesmen drawn from the petit jury box. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 20.]

SEC. 352. Failure of officer—misdemeanor. Any officer whose duty it is to perform any of the services in this chapter mentioned, who shall intentionally fail to perform them as required by law, or who shall act corruptly in the discharge of such duties or any of them, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be imprisoned not less than six months, nor more than one year. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 21; 25 G. A., ch. 70, § 9.]

SEC. 353. Compensation of jurors—how secured. At the close of each term of the district court, the clerk shall make out a certificate to each juror of the amount to which he is entitled for his services, and, on the presentation of such certificate, the county auditor shall issue to each juror a warrant for said amount on the county treasury, without the same being audited by the board of supervisors. [26 G. A., ch. 61, § 22; 15 G. A., ch. 16; C. '73, § 245; R., § 2739; C. '51, § 1649.]

SEC. 354. Fees of jurors. Jurors shall receive the following fees:

1. For each day's service or attendance in courts of record, two dollars, and for each mile traveled from his residence to the place of trial, the sum of ten cents;
2. For each day's service before a justice of the peace, one dollar.
3. No mileage shall be allowed talesmen or jurors before justices.

Immediately after the adjournment of each term of a court of record, the clerk thereof shall certify to the county auditor a list of the jurors, with the number of days' attendance to which each one is entitled. [C. '73, § 3811; R., § 4154; C. '51, § 2545.]

Where a case before a justice of the peace is commenced in one week and extends into the next, Sunday should not be computed in the number of days of service: Anson v. Dwight, 18-241.

The clerk is not entitled to any fees for drawing the certificates for jurors' fees: Palo Alto County v. Burlingame, 71-201.

CHAPTER 12.

OF SECURITIES AND INVESTMENTS.

SECTION 355. Security to be by bond. Whenever security is required to be given by law or by order or judgment of a court, and no particular mode is prescribed, it shall be by bond. [C. '73, § 246; R., § 4113; C. '51, § 2505.]

SEC. 356. To whom payable. Such security, when not otherwise directed, may, if for the benefit of individuals, be given to the party intended to be secured thereby; if in relation to the public matters concerning the inhabitants of one county or part of a county, it may be made payable to the county; if concerning the inhabitants of more than one county, it may be made payable to the state, but a mere mistake in these respects will not vitiate the security. [C. '73, § 247; R., § 4114; C. '51, § 2506.]

The giving of a bond to the "people of Woodbury county," instead of to the county, held not such a mistake as to vitiate the security: Charles v. Haskins, 11-329.

The fact that a bond which should be executed to a county is executed to parties who are in fact intended to be secured will not render it void: Carnegie v. Hulbert, 70 Fed., 209.

SEC. 357. Defects rectified. No defective bond or other security or affidavit in any case shall prejudice the party giving or making it, provided it be so rectified, within a reasonable time after the defect is discovered, as not to cause essential injury to the other party. [C. '73, § 248; R., § 4119; C. '51, § 2511.]

So held in case of appeal bond on appeal from the county court: Mitchell v. Goff, 18-424; and held applicable to a bond on appeal from a justice of the peace: Brock v. Manatt, 1-128.

Section applied: Clarke v. Riddle, 70 N. W., 207.

As to amendment in cases of bond or affidavit for attachment, see notes to § 3933.

SEC. 358. Qualifications of sureties. The surety in every bond provided for or authorized by law must be a resident of this state, and worth double the sum to be secured beyond the amount of his debts, and have property liable to execution in this state equal to the sum to be secured, except as otherwise provided by law. Where there are two or more sureties in the same bond, they must in the aggregate have the qualification prescribed in this section. [C. '73, § 249; R., § 4126.]

The corresponding section of the Code of '73 was said to be applicable only to bonds authorized by that Code and not those provided for by subsequent statutes: Carnegie v. Hulbert, 70 Fed., 209.

The surety will not be heard to say that he does not possess the statutory qualifications: Ibid.

That an attorney should not be received as surety, see § 3851.

SEC. 359. Affidavit of sureties—effect of—guarantee companies as sureties. The officer whose duty it is to take a surety in any bond provided for or authorized by law shall require the person offered as surety to make affidavit of his qualification, which affidavit may be made before such officer, or other officer authorized to administer oaths. The taking of such an affidavit shall not exempt the officer from any liability to which he might otherwise be subject for taking insufficient security. Any company engaged in the business of becoming surety upon bonds shall file, with the clerk of any county in which it shall do business, a certificate from the state auditor that it has complied with the law and is authorized to do business in this state; and, should said authority be withdrawn at any time, the state auditor shall at once notify the clerk of each district court to that effect. The clerk shall keep a book, properly indexed, in which shall be recorded all such certificates and revocations. [C. '73, § 250; R., § 4125.]

Negligence in approving bond: The clerk of the courts is liable for injury resulting from his negligence in approving the sureties on a bond required to be approved by him, if the party injured is without fault. But it will be otherwise if there is also negligence on the part of complainant: Parks v. Davis, 16–20.

The clerk may be liable for taking insufficient surety on a stay bond, and taking the affidavit of the surety as to his qualification does not exempt the officer approving the bond from liability in accepting insufficient security: Hubbard v. Switzer, 47 681.

The action of an officer approving and accepting a bond may be either judicial or ministerial, depending upon the particular thing he is required to do; and held, that the action of a clerk in accepting and approving a stay bond after expiration of the time limited by statute was judicial: Maynes v. Brockway, 55–457.

An action for damages for negligence of an officer in approving a stay bond does not accrue until the expiration of the stay: Steel v. Bryant, 49–116; Moore v. McKinley 60–367.

Where a clerk approved a stay bond upon a certificate of the clerk of another county as to the sufficiency of the surety, and indorsed a statement on the back of the bond that the surety thereon was responsible, and it afterwards appeared that the bond had not been, in fact, signed by the surety whose name appeared thereto, held, that the certificate being as to the responsibility of the surety and not as to the genuineness of his signature, the clerk making such certificate was not liable for loss occasioned by reason of the acceptance of the same: Bringolf v. Burt, 44–184.

The fact that the clerk makes inquiry of the surety as to the value of his property, and is informed that it is sufficient, does not relieve him from liability in approving a a bond, nor will he be relieved by the fact that he assured the party complaining that he would disregard the bond and issue execution upon evidence showing its sufficiency, and the further fact that no motion for additional security was made in court by such party, and refused: Haverly v. McClelland, 57–182.

The clerk will be liable for negligence of his deputy in approving a bond with insufficient security, and will have an action over against such deputy on his bond for the damages. The fact that the principal has previously accepted the same surety on other bonds will not relieve the deputy from liability: Moore v. McKinley, 60–367.

The members of the board of supervisors are not liable for damages resulting from the approval of an insufficient bond, when their action results from an honest mistake or error of judgment, whether of law or fact; but they are personally liable for neglect, carelessness and official misconduct in such matters: Wasson v. Mitchell, 18–143.

Under a statute requiring a bond to be approved by certain officers, it was held that in a suit thereon it was unnecessary to aver and prove such approval in the first instance: State v. Fredericks, 8–553.

SEC. 360. When guarantee company may be accepted as surety. Whenever any person who now or hereafter may be required or permitted to give a bond applies for the approval thereof, any officer or body who is now or shall hereafter be required to approve the sufficiency of such bond shall accept and approve the same, whenever its conditions are guaranteed by a company or corporation duly organized or incorporated under the laws of this state, or authorized to do business therein, and to guarantee the fidelity of persons holding positions of public or private trust, or secure any bond above referred to, and which company shall have the certificate of the auditor of state authorizing it to do business therein, as provided in chapter four of title nine of this code. The certificate of the auditor of state, to the effect that such company has complied with the requirements of said chapter and title and is authorized to do business in this state, shall be sufficient evidence to authorize the officer or body having the approval of such bond to accept and approve the same, but no such security shall be accepted on any bond for an amount in excess of ten per cent. of the paid up cash capital of such company or corporation; but nothing herein contained shall apply to bonds in criminal cases. [21 G. A., ch. 157, §§ 1, 5.]

SEC. 361. Release from liability—same as private persons. Such company or corporation may be released from its liability as such surety on any bond on the same terms and conditions, and in the same manner, as is by law prescribed for the release of natural persons as such sureties; it being the intent of this chapter to enable companies created, incorporated or chartered for such purposes to become surety on bonds required by law, subject to all the rights and liabilities of natural persons. [21 G. A., ch. 157, § 2.]

SEC. 362. Suit on bond of guarantee company—notice. Whenever suit is required to be brought on any bond given by such company, service shall be had upon any agent of such company in this state, and if there is no agent in the state, then service may be had by serving the auditor of state fifteen days before the term of court in which the suit is sought to be brought, and it shall be the duty of the auditor of state, upon service being made upon him, to immediately mail a copy of such notice to such company at their principal place of business, and any notice so served shall be deemed to be good and sufficient service on any such company. [21 G. A., ch. 157, § 3.]

SEC. 363. Estoppel—stockholders liable. Any company which shall execute any bond as surety under the provisions of this chapter shall be estopped, in any proceeding to enforce the liability which it shall have assumed to incur, to deny its corporate power to execute such instrument or assume such liability; and the private property of the stockholders shall be liable for the debts of the corporation to the full amount of the capital stock held by such stockholders. [21 G. A., ch. 157, § 4.]

SEC. 364. Investments—in what to be made. Where investments of money are directed to be made, and no mode of investment is pointed out by statute, they must be made in the stocks or bonds of this state, or of those of the United States, or upon bond or mortgage of real property of the clear unencumbered value of at least twice the investment. [C. '73, § 251; R., § 4115; C. '51, § 2507.]

SEC. 365. Security not to be changed without order. When such investment is made by order of any court, the security taken shall in no case be discharged, impaired or transferred without an order of the court to that effect, entered on the minutes thereof. [C. '73, § 252; R., § 4116; C. '51, § 2508.]

SEC. 366. Duty of investor under order. The clerk or other person appointed in such cases to make the investment must receive all moneys as they become due thereon, and apply or reinvest the same under the direction of the court, unless the court appoints some other person to do such acts. [C. '73, § 253; R., § 4117; C. '51, § 2509.]

SEC. 367. Must account annually. Once in each year, and oftener if required by the court, the person so appointed must, on oath, render to the court an account in writing of all moneys so received by him, and of the application thereof. [C. '73 § 254; R., § 4118; C. '51, § 2510.]

SEC. 368. When court may order money or property deposited. When it is admitted by the pleadings, or shown by the examination of a party, that he has in his possession, or under his control, any money or property capable of delivery, which is in any degree the subject of litigation, and which is held by him as trustee for another party, the court, or judge thereof, may order the same to be deposited in the office of the clerk, or delivered to such party, with or without security, subject to the further direction of the court; or may order such money to be deposited in a bank, with the consent of the parties in interest, to the credit of the court in which the action is pending, and the same shall be paid out by such bank only upon the check of the clerk, annexed to a certified copy of the order of the court directing such payment. [C. '73, § 255; R., § 3416.]

Where property is by a court ordered to be sold in the satisfaction of a claim, as against a guardian who is the owner of such property, that it was wrongfully purchased by funds belonging to the ward's estate, it is proper to order that the money realized from such sale be paid to the clerk: Reed v. Lane, 65 N. W., 380.

SEC. 369. When order disobeyed. Whenever a court, or judge in the exercise of its or his authority, has ordered the deposit or delivery of money or other property, and the order is disobeyed, such court or judge, besides punishing the disobedience, may make an order requiring the sheriff to take the money or property, and deposit or deliver it in conformity with the directions of the court or judge, and in such cases he has the same power as when acting under an order for the delivery of personal property. [C. '73, §§ 256–7; R., §§ 3417–18.]

SEC. 370. Administrator, trustee, etc., may deposit with clerk —effect. Whenever any administrator, guardian, trustee or referee shall desire to make his final report, and shall then have in his possession or under his control any funds, moneys or securities due, or to become due, to any heir, legatee, devisee or other person, the payment of which might then be made to such heir, legatee, devisee or other person, if living or present within the county where such appointment as administrator, guardian, trustee or referee was made, such funds, moneys or securities may be deposited with the clerk of the district court of the county wherein such appointment was made, and, if he shall otherwise discharge all the duties imposed upon him by such appointment, he may take the receipt of the clerk of the district court for such funds, moneys or securities so deposited, which receipt shall specifically set forth from whom said funds, moneys or securities were derived, the amount thereof, and the name of the person to whom due or to become due, if known. Thereupon said administrator, guardian, trustee or referee may file such receipt with his final report, and, if it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court that he has in all other respects complied with the law governing his appointment and duties, the court may approve such final report and enter his discharge; but notice of such contemplated deposit, and of final report, shall be given for the same time and in the same manner as is now required in cases of final report by administrators. [22 G. A., ch. 41, § 1.]

SEC. 371. Duty of clerk in such cases. The clerk of the district court with whom any deposit of funds, moneys or securities shall be made, as provided in the preceding section, shall enter in a book, to be provided and kept for that purpose, the amount of such deposit, the character thereof, the date of its deposit, from whom received, from what source derived, to whom due or to become due, if known. He shall be liable upon his bond for all funds, moneys or securities which may be deposited with him under the provisions of this chapter. If the funds, moneys or securities so deposited with the clerk shall not be paid to the person or persons to whom the same is due, or to become due, within one year from the date of its deposit, the clerk shall then deposit such funds, moneys or securities with the county treasurer for the use of the county wherein such appointment was made, taking the treasurer's receipt therefor, countersigned by the county auditor, who shall thereupon charge upon the books of his office and against the treasurer the amount named in such receipts. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 372. Duty of treasurer. Whenever any funds, moneys or securities shall be deposited with the county treasurer, as provided in this chapter, he shall enter in a book, provided and kept for that purpose, the date of such deposit, the amount thereof, from whom received, the source from which derived, and the name of the person to whom the same is due or to become due, if known. Whenever the claimant therefor, upon proper application made to the district court, shall satisfactorily show to such court that he is the rightful owner of said funds, moneys or securities and entitled thereto, the court, by order entered of record, shall direct the county auditor to issue a warrant on the county treasurer for said money, funds or securities, and, upon such order, the said treasurer shall pay to the person named in such order the funds, moneys or securities to which the claimant shall have shown himself entitled. [Same, § 3.]

CHAPTER 13.

OF NOTARIES PUBLIC.

SECTION 373. Appointment—commissions expire—notice. The governor may appoint and commission one or more notaries public in each county, and may at any time revoke such appointment. The commissions of all notaries public heretofore or hereafter issued prior to the fourth day of July, A. D. 1900, shall expire on that day, and commissions subsequently issued shall be for no longer period than three years, and all such commissions shall expire on the fourth day of July in the same year. The secretary of state shall, on or before the first day of June, A. D. 1900, and every three years thereafter, notify each notary when his commission will expire. [C. '73, § 258; R., § 195; C. '51, § 78.]

A notary public is a public officer, and the acts of one who is such de facto, though not de jure, cannot be collaterally assailed; therefore, held, that a deposition taken by a de facto notary could not be suppressed on the ground that such notary had not qualified as required by law: Keeney v. Leas, 14–464.

A court will take judicial notice of the official character of a notary public, and of the county for which he is appointed: Rowland v. Brown, 75–679.

SEC. 374. Conditions. Before any such commission is delivered to the person appointed, he shall:

1. Procure a seal, on which shall be engraved the words, "Notarial Seal" and "Iowa," with his surname at length, and at least the initials of his christian name;
2. Execute a bond to the state of Iowa in the sum of five hundred dollars, conditioned for the true and faithful execution of the duties of his office, which bond shall be approved by the clerk of the district court of the proper county;
3. Write on said bond, or a paper attached thereto, his signature, and place thereon a distinct impression of his official seal;
4. File such bond with attached papers, if any, in the office of the secretary of state;
5. Remit to such secretary the fee required by law.

When the secretary of state is satisfied that the foregoing particulars have been fully complied with, he shall deliver the commission to the person appointed. [C. '73, § 259; R., §§ 197, 200, 207–9; C. '51, §§ 80, 83.]

An official certificate of the notary is not receivable in evidence without his seal attached, but the seal may be attached subsequently to the date of signing the certificate: Rindskoff v. Malone, 9–540.

Although the statute does not in terms prescribe that the acts of the notary shall be authenticated by his seal, there could have been no other purpose in requiring him to procure a seal; and held, that a wafer with the name, etc., of the notary written thereon was not a sufficient authentication; and that the genuineness of his signature could not be shown by the certificate of the clerk of the court. Stephens v. Williams, 46–540; and see notes to § 384.

The acts of the notary should be authenticated both by his seal and his signature: Tunis v. Withrow, 10–305; Chase v. Street, 10–593, Pitts v. Seavey, 88–336.

An affidavit before a notary, not attested by his seal, lacks an essential requisite: Slyfield v. Healy, 32 Fed., 2.

The laws of another state with reference to notary's seal will be presumed to be the same as those of this state until the contrary is shown: Hewitt v. Morgan, 88–468.

An affidavit showing the county by the usual venue, and to which the notary affixed his signature with his official designation, and to which his seal was affixed showing the city of his residence, held to sufficiently show that the person purporting to administer the oath as a notary public was a notary and had authority to act: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54–540.

An affidavit will be presumed to have been sworn to within the jurisdiction of the notary taking it, although the caption is entitled as of another county: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 67-691.

Where an affidavit is headed with the name of the state and county, and the notary's signature is authenticated with a seal, such signature is sufficient if it contains his name with the addition "Notary Public," without stating the state or county for which he is notary: Stone v. Miller, 60–243.

The court will take judicial notice of the seal of a notary public, attached to the jurat of an affidavit, and knowing from the seal used as required by the state statute that he is notary for the state of Iowa, the court will take judicial notice of the county in which he is authorized to act as notary: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

But the signature of a certificate of acknowledgment must show the county for which the notary was appointed, which must be that in which the certificate purports to have been taken, the name of the county being deemed a part of the official signature of the notary. The fact that the name of the county appears on the seal is not sufficient, that not being a matter required to be shown by the seal: Willard v. Cramer, 36-22; Greenwood v. Jenswold, 69-53.

SEC. 375. Certificate filed with clerk. When the secretary of state delivers the commission to the person appointed, he shall make a certificate of such appointment, and forward the same to the clerk of the district court of the proper county, who shall file and preserve the same in his office, and it shall be deemed sufficient evidence to enable such clerk to certify that the person so commissioned is a notary public during the time such commission is in force. [22 G. A., ch. 100; C. '73, § 260.]

SEC. 376. Revocation—notice. Should the commission of any person appointed notary public be revoked by the governor, the secretary of state shall immediately notify such person and the clerk of the district court of the proper county, through the mail. [C. '73, § 261.]

SEC. 377. Powers. Each notary is invested with the powers and shall perform the duties which pertain to that office by the custom and law of merchants. [C. '73, § 262; R., § 196; C. '51, § 79.]

Acts of notary, how authenticated, see notes to § 374.

SEC. 378. Record to be kept. Every notary public is required to keep a true record of all notices given or sent by him, with the time and manner in which the same were given or sent, and the names of all the parties to whom the same were given or sent, with a copy of the instrument in relation to which the notice is served, and of the notice itself. [C. '73, § 263.]

SEC. 379. Record filed with clerk. On the death, resignation or removal from office of any notary, his records, with all his official papers, shall, within three months therefrom, be deposited in the office of the clerk of the district court in the county for which such notary shall have been appointed; and if any notary, on his resignation or removal, neglects for three months so to deposit them, he shall be held guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished accordingly, and be liable in an action to any person injured by such neglect; and if an executor or administrator of a deceased notary wilfully neglects, for three months after his acceptance of that appointment, to deposit the records and papers of a deceased notary which came into his hands in said clerk's office, he shall be held guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished accordingly. [C. '73, § 264.]

SEC. 380. Change of residence. If a notary remove his residence from the county for which he was appointed, such removal shall be taken as a resignation. [C. '73, § 265; R., § 203; C. '51, § 86.]

SEC. 381. Duty of clerk as to records. Each clerk aforesaid shall receive and safely keep all such records and papers of the notary in the cases above named, and shall give attested copies of them, under the seal of his court, for which he may demand such fees as by law may be allowed to the notaries, and such copies shall have the same effect as if certified by the notary. [C. '73, § 266; R., § 294; C. '51, § 87.]

SEC. 382. Notaries fees. Notaries public shall be entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

1. For every protest of a bill or note, seventy-five cents;
2. For registering any protest, fifty cents;
3. For being present at a demand, tender or deposit, and noting the same, fifty cents;
4. For administering an oath, five cents;
5. For certifying to the same under his official seal, twenty-five cents;

6. For certificate under seal, twenty-five cents;
7. For other services, the same fees as are allowed justices of the peace for similar services. [C. '73, § 3801; R., § 4151; C. '51, § 2542.]

CHAPTER 14.

OF COMMISSIONERS IN OTHER STATES.

SECTION 383. Appointment—tenure—powers. The governor may appoint and commission, in each of the United States and territories, one or more commissioners, to continue in office for the term of three years from the date of commission, unless such appointment shall be sooner revoked by the governor. Such commissioners, when qualified as hereinafter provided, shall be empowered to administer oaths, take depositions and affidavits to be used in the courts of this state, and to take acknowledgments or proof of deeds and other instruments to be recorded and used in this state. [C. '73, § 267.]

SEC. 384. Seal. Each commissioner exercising the authority conferred upon him by this chapter shall have an official seal, on which shall be engraved the words, "Commissioner for Iowa" with his surname at length, and at least the initials of his christian name; also the name of the state in which he has been commissioned to act, which seal must be so engraved as to make a clear impression on wax, wafer or paper. [C. '73, § 268.]

The certificate of such commissioner held not to be sufficiently authenticated by his seal, when the word "Iowa" was written in the body of the seal instead of being impressed upon the paper as here contemplated: Gage v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 11–310, and see notes to §374.

SEC. 385. Seal and signature as evidence. A signature and impression of such seal of any commissioner qualified as herein provided, and corresponding with that on file in the office of the secretary of state, shall be entitled to the same credit as evidence in the courts and public offices of this state as the signature and seal of a clerk of the district court or notary public of this state. [C. '73, § 269.]

SEC. 386. Fees. Such commissioner is authorized to demand for his services the same fees as may be allowed for similar services by the laws of the state in which he is to exercise his office. [C. '73, § 270.]

This rule as to fees of commissioners does not apply to other officers taking depositions in other states: McNider v. Sinine, 84–745.

SEC. 387. Oaths, etc., as evidence. Oaths administered by any such commissioner, affidavits and depositions taken by him, and acknowledgments, as aforesaid, certified by him over his official signature and seal, are made as effectual in law, to all intents and purposes, as if done and certified by a clerk of the district court or justice of the peace of this state. [C. '73, § 271.]

As to the requisites of the seal, see § 384, and notes.

SEC. 388. Conditions required. Before such commissioner can perform any of the duties of his office, he is required to take and subscribe an oath that he will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and that he will faithfully perform the duties of such office; which oath shall be taken and subscribed before some judge or clerk of a court of record in the state in which the commissioner is to exercise his appointment, and certified under the hand of the person taking it and the seal of his court, or before a duly authorized commissioner for Iowa, resident in said state; which certificate shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state of this state, and on which shall be the official signature and clear impression of the official seal of such commissioner. [C. '73, § 272.]

SEC. 389. Authority to be certified. The secretary of state, upon the reception of the certificate as provided in the last preceding section, shall examine the same, and, if this chapter has been strictly complied with, it shall be his duty to forward to said commissioner a certificate, properly attested, that he has been duly commissioned as a commissioner for Iowa, and that he is duly qualified as required by the laws of Iowa authorizing the appointment of commissioners in other states; and it shall be the further duty of the secretary of state to forward a duplicate of said certificate to the secretary of the state in which said commissioner may have been appointed. [C. '73, § 273.]

SEC. 390. List to be published. The secretary of state shall cause to be published with the session laws of each general assembly a full and complete list of all commissioners for Iowa who are duly qualified, and whose commissions do not expire on or before the fourth day of July of the year in which such publication is made, which list shall give the post-office address, date of qualification, and date of expiration of the commission, of each commissioner. [C. '73, § 274.]

SEC. 391. Commissioners of other states—authority of. Commissioners of the like nature appointed in this state, under the authority of any other of the United States or territories, are hereby invested with the authority of a justice of the peace to issue subpœnas, requiring the attendance of witnesses before them to give their testimony by deposition or affidavit, in any matter in which such deposition or affidavit may be taken by the law of such other state, and they are also authorized to administer oaths in any matter in relation to which they are required or permitted by such law of the other states; and false swearing in such cases is hereby made subject to the penal laws of this state relating to perjury; but such commissioner shall cause to be filed in the office of the secretary of state a certificate of the secretary of the state or territory for which he claims to act, that he is properly appointed and qualified, as required by the laws of said state, and has in his possession a certificate that this section has been complied with. [C. '73, § 275.]

SEC. 392. Records of appointments. The secretary of state shall keep in his office a complete record of all appointments made by the governor pursuant to the provisions of this chapter. [C. '73, § 276.]

CHAPTER 15.

OF THE ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS.

SECTION 393. Who may administer. Judges of the supreme, district, superior and police courts; clerks of said courts and their deputies; county auditors and their deputies; justices of the peace and notaries public within the county of their residence; sheriffs and their deputies, in cases where they are authorized by law to select commissioners or appraisers, or to impanel jurors for the view or appraisement of property, or are directed as an official duty to have property appraised, or take the answers of garnishees; the governor, secretary of state, auditor and treasurer of state, in any matter pertaining to the business of their respective offices, or that may come before them for consideration and action as members of the executive council; the mayor and clerk of cities and towns; judges and clerks of election; township clerks; the chairman of the board of supervisors; the surveyor or coroner in any county, in relation to any duty imposed upon either of them where the administration of an oath may be required; members of all boards of any state institutions, of all commissions, boards or bodies created by law, and all persons, referees or appraisers appointed by authority of law, who have any duty to perform by virtue of their office or appointment requiring the administration of oaths, are authorized to administer oaths and take affirmations. Notaries public may perform such services in any adjoining county in which they have filed with the clerk of the district court a certified copy of the certificate of their appointment. [25 G. A., ch. 52; 16 G. A., ch. 110; C. '73, §§ 277–8, 396; R., §§ 201, 449, 1843–4, 2684, 3201; C. '51, §§ 226, 979, 980, 1594, 1865.]

The court, that is, the judge while holding court, is authorized to administer an oath: State v. Caywood, 65 N. W., 385.

As to acknowledgments, see § 2942.

TITLE IV.

OF COUNTY AND TOWNSHIP GOVERNMENT.

CHAPTER 1.

OF COUNTIES.

SECTION 394. Body corporate. Each county is a body corporate for civil and political purposes, may sue and be sued, must have a seal, may acquire and hold property, make all contracts necessary for the control, management and improvement or disposition thereof, and do such other acts and exercise such other powers as are authorized by law. [C. '73, § 279; R., § 221; C. '51, § 93.]

A county is strictly a political corporation, a grant of power to a designated portion of the people to aid and arrange the machinery of government for the whole state. It is not designed for pecuniary profit, nor has it any powers but such as pertain to its strict municipal and public character: Jefferson County v. Ford, 4 G. Gr., 367.

Although clothed with corporate powers, counties stand low down in the scale of corporate existence, and are reckoned as quasi-corporations, as distinguished from municipal corporations, and they are held to a much less extended liability than the latter. They are not liable to an action by a private party for negligence of their officers in respect to highways, unless the statute has expressly created such liability: Soper v. Henry County, 26–264.

A county is a political corporation invested with certain limited and specified powers, which are divided among and are to be exercised by a class of agents or county officers appointed for that purpose. Their duties are not only defined, but the mode of performing them is often prescribed by law, and this being done, the power must be exercised precisely as it is given: Hull v. Marshall County, 12–142.

Courts will take judicial notice of the organization of counties: Hillard v. Griffin, 72–331; Pitts v. Lewis, 81–51; Ellsworth v. Nelson, 81–57.

SEC. 395. Concurrent jurisdiction. Counties bounded by a stream or other water have concurrent jurisdiction over the whole of the waters lying between them. [C. '73, § 280; R., § 223; C. '51, § 94.]

Jurisdiction being given to the state over crimes committed upon the Mississippi river between the north and south boundaries of the state, held, that the jurisdiction of the district court of any county extended over acts committed upon the river between the north and south boundaries of such county: State v. Mullen, 35–199.

SEC. 396. Relocation of county seat. Whenever citizens of any county desire a relocation of their county seat, they may petition the board of supervisors respecting the same at the regular June session, but not oftener than once in five years. [25 G. A., ch. 10, § 1; C. '73, §§ 281, 288.]

Proceedings for the relocation of a county seat are special in their character. The board of supervisors is clothed with no other powers with reference thereto than those conferred by statute: Loomis v. Bailey, 45–400.

It is not error for the board to refuse to entertain a petition of this kind, presented at an adjourned session: Ellis v. Board of Supervisors, 40–301.

The legislature cannot, by any act declaring a county seat permanent, deprive the voters of the right to change such county seat as provided by statute. If land has been conveyed to the county for public use under the condition that the location shall be permanent, it should be reconveyed to the grantor in case of a removal: Twiford v. Allamakee County, 4 G. Gr., 60.

The right to a new election at the expiration of the specified period does not deprive parties of the right to call in question by injunction or otherwise the validity of an election to remove: Sweatt v. Faville, 23–321, 327.

SEC. 397. Petition for—contents. Such petition shall designate the place at which the petitioners desire to have the county seat relocated, and shall be signed by none but legal voters of said county. It shall contain, in addition to the names of the petitioners, the section, township and range on which, or town or ward, if in a city, in which the petitioners reside, their ages and time of residence in the county. It shall be accompanied by affidavits of one or more residents of the county, stating that the signers thereof were, at the time of signing, legal voters of said county, and the number of signers to the petition at the time of making the affidavit, and shall be filed with the auditor at least sixty days before the June session of the board. [25 G. A., ch. 10, § 2; C. '73, § 282.]

Where jurats to the affidavits required under this section were imperfect in that they did not show the official title of the officer, or were entirely without signature, held, the board might allow them to be amended: Stone v. Miller, 60–243.

It is a compliance with the statute to show by affidavit that the signers of the petition were legal voters at the time of signing: Ibid.

SEC. 398. Remonstrance. Remonstrances signed by voters with like qualifications and in all respects as required of petitioners, and verified in the same manner, may be filed with the auditor ten days prior to the date fixed by the notice hereinafter provided for. If the same persons petition and remonstrate, they shall be counted only on the remonstrance, and if a greater number of legal voters remonstrate against the relocation than petition for it, no election shall be ordered. [25 G. A., ch. 10, § 3; C. '73, § 283.]

No other papers, except petition and remonstrance, are to be considered. A re-petition is not authorized; and names appearing both on remonstrance and re-petition are to be counted on the remonstrance: Loomis v. Bailey, 45–400.

Those signing petition, remonstrance and re-petition should be counted as remonstrants: Jamison v. Board of Supervisors, 47–388.

While the board in passing upon the sufficiency of the petition and remonstrance acts in a judicial capacity, it is not authorized to consider any evidence not specified, and cannot, therefore, consider counter-affidavits: Herrick v. Carpenter, 54–340.

If the number of signers to the remonstrance exceeds the number of signers to the petition the election should not be ordered, although the number of signers to the petition exceeds the majority of the legal voters of the county as provided in § 400: Loomis v. Bailey, 45–400; Duffees v. Sherman, 48–287.

SEC. 399. Notice of hearing. Upon the filing of such petition, sixty days' notice thereof and of the date of hearing shall be given by the auditor by three insertions in a weekly newspaper, if there be one printed in the county; if not, then by posting the same in every township in the county, and on the door of the court-house therein. [C. '73, § 284.]

The notice is sufficient if the first of the three insertions is sixty days before the presentation of the petition: Bennett v. Hetherington, 41–142.

The giving of notice is not jurisdictional, and a failure therein will not invalidate the election: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212.

SEC. 400. Hearing—notice of election. Upon the hearing of such petition and remonstrance, if no objections are filed to either, the board shall proceed to determine whether the petition has been signed by one-half of all the legal voters in the county as shown by the last census, either state or federal, after deducting therefrom all names appearing on the remonstrance which also appear on the petition, and also to determine whether more legal voters have signed the petition than have signed the remonstrance. If the requisite notice has been given, and the board shall find that one-half of all the legal voters, after making said deduction, have signed said petition, and that said one-half exceeds the number that have signed the remonstrance, the board shall order that, at the next general election, a vote shall be taken between said place and the existing county seat, and shall require a constable of each township in the county to post notices of such order in three public places in such township, at least fifty days before said election, and shall also publish a notice of such election in some newspaper, if there be one published in the county, for four consecutive weeks, the last publication to be at least twenty days before said election; but if objections are made, either as to petition or remonstrance, the board shall inquire into and hear additional evidence with reference to the fact as to whether the names appearing on either petition or remonstrance were the names of legal voters at the time they were placed on the petition or remonstrance, and whether the signatures are genuine. [25 G. A., ch. 10, § 4; C. '73, § 285.]

The election should not be ordered unless the number of signers to the petition not only constitutes a majority of the legal voters of the county, but also exceeds the number of signers to the remonstrance: Loomis v. Bailey, 45-100; Duffees v. Sherman, 48-287.

A former provision as to posting notices held directory, and that a failure to comply therewith would not render an election invalid: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

The decision of the board upon the sufficiency of the petition and notice is judicial, and is conclusive until set aside in some method provided for direct review: Baker v. Board of Supervisors, 40-226; Bennett v. Hetherington, 41-142.

The limitation provided upon the time within which an action by certiorari to correct an error of the board in holding a petition sufficient may be brought commences to run only from the time the board orders an election, and not from the time they decide that the petition is sufficient: Jamison v. Board of Supervisors, 47-388, 391.

The action of the board on a petition presented cannot be prevented by injunction: Luce v. Fensler, 85-596.

SEC. 401. Mode of voting. Such election shall be conducted as elections for county officers. The proposition to be submitted shall be, "Shall the proposition to change the county seat to (naming the town to which the change is proposed) be adopted?" [C. '73, § 286.]

If the ballot expresses the intention of the voter beyond a reasonable doubt it should be counted, without regard to technical inaccuracies, or the form adopted. The language of the ballot is to be construed in the light of all facts connected with the election: Hawes v. Miller, 56-395.

SEC. 402. Removal of records. If a majority of all the votes cast be in favor of the proposition, the board of supervisors shall make a record thereof, and declare the town named therein to be the county seat of said county, and shall remove the records and documents thereto as early as practicable thereafter. [C. '73, § 287.]

The result of the election may be declared and record thereof made at a special meeting: Cole v. Board of Supervisors, 11-552.

The fact that in declaring the result of the vote the board also fixes the time within which the records shall be removed is no ground for restraining the removal in accordance with the vote, even though there be no authority to fix such time: Ibid.

The fact that there is a controversy pending as to which of two places is duly selected as the county seat is a proper ground for enjoining a county official from ordering the erection of a county building at one of such places: Rice v. Smith, 9-570.

Where fraud or illegality in the election is alleged, an injunction may be granted to prevent the removal of the records; and in such proceedings the validity of the election may be tried: Ibid.; Sweatt v. Faville, 23-321.

Action of the board in canvassing the vote is ministerial, but its action in ordering a removal in accordance with the count is judicial, and may be reviewed on certiorari: Herrick v. Carpenter, 54-349.

Where the board has decided the petition for submission to be legal, and such action has been reversed upon certiorari, the board will be guilty of an error which may be corrected if they canvass the votes at an election upon such question and make an order for removal thereon: Ibid.

SEC. 403. County bonds—form of. Whenever the outstanding indebtedness of any county on the first day of April in any year exceeds the sum of five thousand dollars, the board of supervisors, by a two-thirds vote of all its members, may fund or refund the same, and issue the bonds of the county therefor in sums not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars each, payable at a time stated, not more than twenty years from their date. Said bonds shall bear interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable semiannually, and be substantially in the following form, but subject to changes that will conform them to the resolution of the said board, to wit:

No..... ....., Iowa,.....

The county of....., in the state of Iowa, for value received, promises to pay to bearer.....dollars, lawful money of the United States of America, on....., with interest on said sum from the date hereof until paid at the rate of.....per cent. per annum, payable..... annually on the first days of.....and.....in each year, on presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached. Both principal and interest payable at.....

This bond is issued by the board of supervisors of said county pursuant to the provisions of section four hundred and three, chapter one, title four of the code of Iowa, and in conformity to a resolution of said board duly passed.

And it is hereby certified and recited that all acts, conditions and things required by the laws and constitution of the state of Iowa to be done precedent to and in the issue of this bond have been properly done, happened and been performed in regular and due form, as required by law, and that the total indebtedness of said county, including this bond, does not exceed the constitutional or statutory limitations.

In testimony whereof, said county, by its board of supervisors, has caused this bond to be signed by the chairman of the board and attested by the auditor, with the county seal attached, this.....day of.....

The validity of negotiable bonds, issued in satisfaction of a judgment, in the hands of innocent holders for value, cannot be questioned by showing that the judgment was rendered upon a warrant issued in excess of the constitutional limitation: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168; Same v. Same, 52-26.

SEC. 404. Negotiation of—duties of treasurer. Whenever bonds issued under this chapter shall be executed, numbered consecutively, and sealed, they shall be delivered to the county treasurer and his receipt taken therefor, and he shall stand charged on his official bond with all bonds delivered to him and the proceeds thereof, and he shall sell the same, or exchange them, on the best available terms, for any legal indebtedness of the county outstanding on the first day of April next preceding the resolution of the board authorizing their issue, but in neither case for a less sum than the face value of the bonds and all interest accrued on them at the date of such sale or exchange. And if any portion of said bonds are sold for money, the proceeds thereof shall be applied exclusively for the payment of liabilities existing against the county at and before the date above named. When they are exchanged for warrants and other legal evidences of county indebtedness, the treasurer shall at once proceed to cancel such evidences of indebtedness by indorsing on the face thereof the amount for which they were received, the word "canceled" and the date of cancellation. He shall also keep a record of bonds sold or exchanged by him by number, date of sale, amount, date of maturity, and the name and post-office address of purchasers, and, if exchanged, what evidences of indebtedness were received therefor, which record shall be open at all times for inspection by the public. Whenever the holder of any bond shall sell or transfer it, the purchaser shall notify the treasurer of such purchase, giving at the same time the number of the bond transferred and his post-office address, and every such transfer shall be noted on the records. The treasurer shall also report under oath to the board, at each regular session, a statement of all bonds sold or exchanged by him since the preceding report, and the date of such sale or exchange; and, when exchanged, a list or description of the county indebtedness exchanged therefor, and the amount of accrued interest received by him on such sale or exchange, which latter sum shall be charged to him as money received on bond fund, and so entered by him on his books; but such bonds shall not be exchanged for any indebtedness of the county except by the approval of the board of supervisors of said county. [26 G. A., ch. 76; 25 G. A., chs. 54, 55, 56; 22 G. A., ch. 91; 21 G. A., ch. 22; 20 G. A., ch. 80; 19 G. A., ch. 147; 18 G. A., ch. 183; 17 G. A., ch. 154; 17 G. A., ch. 58, § 2; 16 G A., ch. 125, § 1; 15 G. A., ch. 9; C. '73, § 290.]

SEC. 405. Unconstitutional issue forbidden. Any member of a board of supervisors in any county, who shall vote to order an issue of bonds under the provisions of this chapter in excess of the constitutional limit, shall be held personally liable for the excess of such issue. [16 G. A., ch. 125, § 2.]

SEC. 406. Levy to pay interest and principal. The board of supervisors shall cause to be assessed and levied each year upon the taxable property in the county, in addition to the levy authorized for other purposes, a sufficient sum to pay the interest on outstanding bonds issued in conformity with the provisions of this chapter, accruing before the next annual levy, and such proportion of the principal that, at the end of eight years, the sum raised from such levies shall at least equal fifteen per cent. of the amount of bonds issued; at the end of ten years, at least thirty per cent. of the amount; and at or before the date of maturity of the bonds, shall be equal to the whole amount of the principal and interest; the money arising from such levies shall be known as the bond fund, and shall be used for the payment of bonds and interest coupons, and for no other purpose whatever; and the treasurer shall open and keep in his books a separate account thereof, which shall at all times show the exact condition of said bond fund. [17 G. A., ch. 58, § 3; C. '73, § 291.]

This section does not limit the board in its levy to the amount of tax here required, and taxes levied thereunder are exempt from the limitation contained in § 1384: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 52–26.

SEC. 407. Redemption—notice—interest stopped. Whenever the amount in the hands of the treasurer belonging to the bond fund, after setting aside the sum required to pay interest maturing before the next levy, is sufficient to redeem one or more bonds, he shall notify the owner of such bond or bonds, in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, that he is prepared to pay the same, with all the interest accrued thereon. If not presented for payment or redemption within thirty days after the date of such notice, the interest on such bond shall cease, and the amount due thereon shall be set aside for its payment whenever presented. All redemptions shall be made in the order of their numbers. [17 G. A., ch. 58, § 4; C. '73, § 292.]

SEC. 408. Failure to levy tax—remedy. If the board of supervisors of any county which has issued bonds under the provisions of this chapter shall fail to make the levy necessary to pay such bonds or interest coupons at maturity, and the same shall have been presented to the county treasurer and the payment thereof refused, the owner may file the bond, together with all unpaid coupons, with the auditor of state, taking his receipt therefor, and the same shall be registered in the auditor's office, and the executive council shall, at its next session as a board of equalization, and at each annual equalization thereafter, add to the state tax to be levied in said county a sufficient rate to realize the amount of principal or interest past due and to become due prior to the next levy, and the same shall be levied and collected as a part of the state tax, and paid into the state treasury, and passed to the credit of such county as bond tax, and shall be paid by warrant, as the payments mature, to the holder of such registered obligations, as shown by the register in the office of the state auditor, until the same shall be fully satisfied and discharged; any balance then remaining being passed to the general account and credit of said county; but nothing in this chapter shall be construed to limit or postpone the right of any holder of any such bonds to resort to any other remedy which such holder might otherwise have. [17 G. A., ch. 58, § 5; C., '73, § 293.]

See Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Lyon County, 44 Fed., 329.

SEC. 409. Additional tax to pay interest. In all counties wherein county bonds are issued in pursuance of a vote of the people to obtain money for the erection of any public building, and wherein the annual tax named in the proposition so submitted to the people for the purpose of paying the annual interest accruing upon such bonds is insufficient to pay the same as it matures, the boards of supervisors are authorized to levy for said purpose, and no other, a tax, not exceeding one mill on the dollar, until said bonds are paid; but this provision shall not prevent the levy of a greater tax than above mentioned, if any such proposition authorized such higher levy. [22 G. A., ch. 47, § 1.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

SECTION 410. How constituted—number—how determined. The board of supervisors in each county shall consist of three persons, except where the number may heretofore have been or hereafter be increased in the manner provided by this chapter. They shall be qualified electors, and be elected by the qualified voters of their respective counties, and shall hold their office for three years. The board of supervisors of any county may, and, when petitioned to do so by one-fourth of the electors of said county, shall submit to the qualified voters of the county, at any regular election, one of the following propositions, as such board may elect in the absence of a petition, or as may be requested in said petition: "Shall the proposition to increase the number of supervisors to five be adopted?" or, "Shall the proposition to increase the number of supervisors to seven be adopted?" as the board shall elect in submitting the question. If the majority of the votes cast shall be for the proposition so submitted, then, at the next ensuing election for a supervisor, the requisite additional supervisors shall be elected, whose terms of office shall be determined by lot, in such a manner that one-half of the additional members shall hold their office for three years, and one-half for two years. In any county where the number of supervisors has been increased to five or seven, the board of supervisors, on the petition of one-fourth of the legal voters of the county, shall submit to the qualified voters of the county, at any regular election, one of the following propositions, as the same may be requested in such petition: "Shall the proposition to reduce the number of supervisors to five be adopted?" or, "Shall the proposition to reduce the number of supervisors to three be adopted?" If a majority of the votes cast shall be for the decrease, then the board of supervisors shall be reduced to the number indicated by such vote, and thereafter there shall be annually elected the number requisite to keep the board full. [C. '73, §§ 294, 299.]

Where the board of supervisors is thus increased the additional members are not to be designated on the ballots for their election in any different manner from the others: Bradfield v. Wart, 36–291.

SEC. 411. Election—only one from one township. At the general election in each year there shall be at least one supervisor elected in each county, who shall not be a resident of the same township with either of the members holding over, except that, in counties having seven supervisors, and having therein a township embracing an entire city of thirty-five thousand inhabitants or over, he may be a resident of the same township; and in no case shall there be more than two supervisors from such township. Such supervisors shall continue in office three years. [C. '73, § 295.]

SEC. 412. Meetings. The members of the board shall meet at the county seat of their respective counties on the first Mondays in January, April, June, September, and the first Monday after the general election, in each year, and shall hold such special meetings as are provided for by law. [C. '73, § 296.]

Upon the final adjournment of a meeting of the board the members have no power to assemble or to transact any business required to be transacted in session until the next regular meeting, unless they be convened in special session in the meantime in the manner prescribed in § 420: Scott v. Union County, 63–583.

SEC. 413. Quorum. A majority of the board of supervisors shall constitute a quorum to transact business, but should a division take place on any question when only two members of the board are in attendance, the question shall be continued until there is a full board. [C. '73, § 297.]

It is not necessary that everything done by the board of supervisors must be entered of record in order to be binding, but there should at least be an assent to such action given by a majority of the members of the board, while in session, before it will be binding upon the county: Rice v. Plymouth County, 43–136.

SEC. 414. Absence from county—vacancy. The absence of any supervisor from the county for six months in succession shall be treated as a resignation of his office, and the board shall, at its next meeting thereafter, by resolution regularly adopted and spread upon its records, declare his seat vacant. [C. '73, § 298.]

SEC. 415. Organization. The board of supervisors, at its first meeting in each year, shall organize by choosing one of its members as chairman, who shall preside at all of its meetings during the year. [C. '73, § 300; R., § 308.]

SEC. 416. Supervisor districts. The board of supervisors may, at its regular meeting in June in any even-numbered year, divide its county by townships into a number of supervisor districts corresponding to the number of supervisors in such county; or, at such regular meeting, it may abolish such supervisor districts, and provide for electing supervisors for the county at large. [17 G. A., ch. 68; 15 G. A., ch. 39, § 1.]

SEC. 417. How formed. Such districts shall be as nearly equal in population as possible, and shall each embrace townships as nearly contiguous as practicable, each of which said districts shall be entitled to one member of such board, to be elected by the electors of said district. [15 G. A., ch. 39, § 2.]

SEC. 418. One member for each district. In case such division or any subsequent division shall be found to leave any district or districts without a member of such board of supervisors, then, at the next ensuing general election, a supervisor shall be elected by and from such district having no member of such board; and if there be two such districts or more, then the new member or members of said board shall be elected by and from the district or districts having the greater population according to the last state census, and so on, until each of said districts shall have one member of such board. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 419. Redistricting—term of office not affected. Any county may be redistricted, as provided by the three preceding sections, once in every two years, and not oftener, and nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to have the effect of lengthening or diminishing the term of office of any member of such board. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 420. Special meetings—how called—what business done. Special meetings of the board of supervisors shall be held only when requested by a majority of the board, which request shall be in writing, addressed to the county auditor, and shall specify the object for which such meeting is desired, which may include the doing of any act not required by law to be done at a regular meeting. The auditor shall thereupon fix a day for such meeting, not later than ten days from the day of the filing of the petition with him, and shall immediately give notice in writing to each of the supervisors personally, or by leaving a copy thereof at his residence, at least six days before the day set for such meeting. The notice shall state the time and place where the meeting will be held, and the object of it, as stated in the petition; and at such special meeting no business other than that so designated in the petition and notice shall be considered or transacted. The auditor shall also give public notice of the meeting by publication in not exceeding two newspapers published in the county, or, if there be none, by causing notice of the same to be posted on the front door of the court-house of the county, and in two other public places therein, one week before the time set therefor. [C. '73, § 301; R., § 309.]

Any business transacted at a special meeting of the board will be presumed to have been lawful: Allen v. Cerro Gordo County, 34-54.

Upon the final adjournment of a meeting of the board the members have no power to assemble or to transact any business required to be transacted in session until the next regular meeting unless they be convened in special session in the manner prescribed in this section: Scott v. Union County, 63-583.

Six days' notice to each member of the board of supervisors of a special meeting is not required when it is personally served, but only when it is left at his residence; and one week's notice is not necessary when it is given by publication, but only when such notice is posted, in cases where no newspaper is published: Supervisors v. Horton, 75-271.

Where certain members of the board of supervisors were present at a special meeting and protested against the validity of the meeting, but subsequently participated in the meeting, held, that they were estopped from afterwards questioning the sufficiency of the notice: Ibid.

Where notice is by publication, it is not a necessary condition to a legal meeting that each subscriber receive a copy of the paper containing the notice: Ibid.

Where a board of supervisors at a regular meeting ordered the construction of a bridge, and appointed a committee to contract for the same, but at a subsequent special meeting rescinded the order and entire action in regard to the bridge, held, that they had a right to reconsider their action at the special meeting, and the committee appointed to contract for the building of the bridge had acquired no rights which they could urge against such action: Ibid.

Where a board of supervisors took action at a regular meeting in regard to the building of a bridge, held, that it had power to afterwards reconsider the action at a special meeting: Supervisors v. Horton, 75-271.

Business imposed upon the board of supervisors may be transacted as properly at a special as at a regular meeting, excepting in cases where, from the nature of the business, or the provisions of law in regard to it, the purpose or policy of the law, or the rights of others, require that it be done at a regular meeting: Ibid.

SEC. 421. Neglect of duty—penalty. If any supervisor shall neglect or refuse to perform any of the duties which are or shall be required of him by law as a member of the board of supervisors, without just cause therefor, he shall, for each offense, forfeit one hundred dollars. [C. '73, § 302; R., § 311.]

SEC. 422. Powers specified. The board of supervisors at any regular meeting shall have the following powers, to wit:

1. To appoint one of its number chairman in the absence of the regular chairman, and a clerk, in the absence of the auditor or his deputy;
2. To adjourn from time to time, as occasion shall require;
3. To make such orders concerning the corporate property of the county as it may deem expedient;
4. To examine and settle all accounts of the receipts and expenditures of the county, and to examine, settle and allow all claims against the county, unless otherwise provided for by law;
5. To build and keep in repair the necessary buildings for the use of the county and of the courts;
6. To cause the county buildings to be insured in the name of the county, or otherwise, for its benefit, and, in case there are no county buildings, to provide suitable rooms for county purposes;

7. To set off, organize and change the boundaries of townships in the respective counties, designate and give names thereto, and define the place of holding the first election;

8. To grant licenses for keeping ferries in the respective counties, as provided by law;

9. To purchase, for the use of the county, any real estate necessary for the erection of buildings for county purposes; to remove the site of, or designate a new site for, any county buildings required to be at the county seat, when such site shall not be beyond the limits of the town, village or city at which the county seat is located;

10. To require any county officer to make a report, under oath, to it on any subject connected with the duties of his office, and to require any such officer to give such bonds, or additional bonds, as shall be reasonable or necessary for the faithful performance of his duty; any such officer who shall neglect or refuse to make such report or give such bonds within twenty days after being so required, may be removed from office by the board by a vote of a majority of the members elected thereto;

11. To represent the respective counties, and to have the care and management of the property and business thereof, in all cases where no other provision shall be made;

12. To manage and control the school fund of the respective counties as shall be provided by law;

13. To appoint commissioners to act with similar commissioners duly appointed in any other county or counties, and to authorize them to lay out, alter or discontinue any highway extending through their own and one or more other counties, subject to the ratification of the board;

14. To fix the compensation of all services of county and township officers not otherwise provided for by law, and to provide for the payment of the same;

15. To authorize the taking of a vote of the people for the relocation of the county seat, as provided by law;

16. To alter, vacate or discontinue any state or territorial highway within their respective counties;

17. To lay out, establish, alter or discontinue any county highway heretofore laid out, or hereafter to be laid through or within the county, as may be provided by law;

18. To provide for the erection of all bridges which may be necessary, and which the public convenience may require, within their respective counties, and to keep the same in repair, except as is otherwise provided by law;

19. To determine what bounties, in addition to those already provided by law, if any, shall be offered and paid by the county on the scalps of such wild animals taken and killed within the county as it may deem it expedient to exterminate, but no such bounty shall exceed five dollars;

20. To purchase for the use of the county any real estate necessary for the erection of buildings for the support of the poor of the county, and for a farm to be used in connection therewith;

21. To have and exercise all the powers in relation to the poor given by law to the county authorities;

22. To make such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, as it may deem necessary for its own government, the transaction of business, and the preservation of order. [18 G. A., ch. 46; 16 G. A., ch. 80; C. '73, § 303; R., § 312.]

In general: By the enactment of the statutory provisions substituting the board of supervisors for the county judge it was the intention of the legislature to confer upon such board all the powers and duties before that time devolving upon the county judge so far as they related to the management of the affairs of the county and the government thereof: Yant v. Brooks, 19–87.

Par. 3. The control and management of county property is given to the board. See ¶ 11 and notes.

Where a conveyance was made by the county of swamp land to which the county had no title, held, that while the county was not liable for failure of title or for fraudulent representations of its officers as to title, yet, it should have returned the purchase price and was liable for not doing so: Nelson v. Hamilton County, 71 N. W., 206.

Par. 4. Claims: A claim cannot be a "just claim" against the county to be allowed under this provision unless the law somewhere either requires or authorizes its payment: Foster v. Clinton County, 51–541.

The board has a discretion as to the allowance of claims against the county, unless otherwise provided: Bean v. Board of Supervisors, 51–53.

A county is not liable for the cost of printing abstracts for appeal in criminal cases, whether prepared by the county attorney or the attorney-general, and the same should not be allowed by the board of supervisors, but they should be paid by the state upon an allowance by the executive council: State v. Billings, 81–566.

One who has been confined in the county jail cannot recover damages against the county by reason of the fact that the jail was kept in an unhealthy, filthy, unventilated and improper condition: Lindley v. Polk County, 84–308.

The acts of the county judge in allowing certain claims against the county, and issuing warrants thereon, held to be ministerial, and not judicial: Campbell v. Polk County, 3–467.

Where no vote was taken or record made as to the allowance of a claim by the board, but it was seen and inspected at a meeting of the board by all the members, and marked allowed by one of them, with the knowledge and consent of all, this being the rule in the ordinary course of business, held, that it sufficiently appeared that the claim was allowed: Griggs v. Kimball, 42–512.

The allowance of a claim by the board, and the issuance of a warrant therefor, does not constitute an adjudication such as to preclude inquiry as to its correctness, and a warrant thus issued may be impeached for illegality: Hospers v. Wyatt, 63–264.

Where it is provided by statute that the board of supervisors shall make a reasonable allowance for the particular claim of services rendered to the county the act of the board in making an allowance is not conclusive, but a greater amount may be recovered in an action if it can be shown that such greater amount is reasonable: Moser v. Boone County, 91–359; Stone v. Marion County, 78–15.

An appeal may be taken from an order of the board of supervisors denying a claim for salary by a county officer: Garber v. Clayton County, 19–29.

But a creditor is not obliged to appeal from the action of the board disallowing his claim. He may, instead, bring action against the county: Armstrong v. Tama County, 34–309; Curtis v. Cass County, 49–421.

When a claim presented to the board is not allowed the claimant may bring his action, and cannot be defeated therein because of the failure of the board to take action or make a record thereof: White v. Polk County, 17–413.

It being provided by statute that the district court of Lee county might be held in the city of Keokuk, provided the authorities of the city should furnish, free of charge, the necessary rooms for the use of the county in holding court, held, that the county was not liable for the rent of rooms used for that purpose, under an arrangement made by the sheriff: Lee County v. Deming, 3 G. Gr., 101.

The expense of providing a polling place at the general election is not chargeable to the county: Turner v. Woodbury County, 57–440.

The expenses of township elections to vote aid to railroads are not chargeable to the county: McBride v. Hardin County, 58–219.

No action may be brought against the county on an unliquidated claim until the same has been presented to the board and payment demanded: See § 3528 and notes.

Par. 5. Public buildings: The board may order the purchase of real estate, not exceeding $2,000 in value, and the erection thereon of a public building not costing to exceed $5,000, without submitting the question to a vote: Merchant v. Tama County, 32–200.

Under the Code of '51, held, that a county judge (possessing substantially the authority of the present board of supervisors) had power to contract for the erection of a county court-house or other public building for the use of the county, but could not be compelled by mandamus to submit to the voters of the county the question whether such a contract should be entered into: State ex rel. v. Napier, 7–425.

A county is not liable in damages for injuries received by reason of negligence in the construction of a court-house. The principle holding a county liable for the defective construction of a county bridge is not to be extended further or made to apply to public buildings. In such cases there is a difference between the liability of quasi-corporations, such as counties, and that of municipal corporations: Kincaid v. Hardin County, 53–430.

Therefore, held, that a county was not liable for damages caused by the overflow of water from a county ditch, such overflow being due to an accumulation of sediment therein: Green v. Harrison County, 61–311; Nutt v. Mills County, 61–754.

The county cannot be made liable upon implied agreement beyond the limit of the contract entered into by the board for the erection of a public building: Reichard v. Warren County, 31–381.

Par. 11. Power to contract: The power being given to a county, by § 394, to hold property, and by this section to the board of supervisors to control it, held, that the power to make all contracts necessary to the protection and perfection of the title to such property rests in such board: Allen v. Cerro Gordo County, 34–54; Page County v. American Emigrant Co., 41–115.

Therefore, held, that a contract by the county to give to an agent a portion of its interest in the swamp lands in compensation for procuring the allowance of the same by the government was valid: Ibid.

The board cannot make a valid contract with the county treasurer to allow him a per cent. of interest and penalties on delinquent personal property taxes, for their collection. Such a contract is contrary to public policy: Adams County v. Hunter, 78–328.

Knowledge and acquiescence by a majority of the members of the board, in a contract which the board might make, does not give rise to either an express or implied contract. To show a ratification of such a contract by the board, so as to bind the county, knowledge and acquiescence by the board as such must be established: Fouke v. Jackson County, 84–616.

Compromising claims: A county has power to make a valid compromise of a disputed claim: Grimes v. Hamilton County, 37–290; Mills County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 47–66; Collins v. Welch, 58–72.

The board of supervisors have authority to accept from an officer who is in default a promissory note in settlement of the claims of the county against him; and such note will be based upon such consideration that it can be enforced: Sac County v. Hobbs, 72–69.

Under Code of '51, held, that settlement with the county judge in a matter properly going to him for settlement was binding upon the county, whether he had required from the person making settlement the report contemplated by law or not: Poweshiek County v. Stanley, 9–511.

Defending claims: If the board of supervisors neglects or refuses to defend a suit against the county a citizen tax-payer may intervene and do so: Greeley v. Lyon County, 40–72.

Offering reward: The board may offer a reward for the recovery of funds stolen from the county, but not for the arrest of the criminal: Hawk v. Marion County, 48–472.

Where a reward was offered by a county for the recovery of money, held, that a person giving information leading to the recovery of a portion of the money was entitled to a pro rata share of the reward: Ibid.

Where a person in another state acts upon the promise made by a board of supervisors in Iowa to pay a reward for the arrest and conviction of persons who have robbed the county treasury, he is bound to know the fact that the board has no power to offer such reward. In such case the members of the board will not be individually liable: Huthsing v. Bosquet, 3 McCrary, 569.

Peace officers acting under process in arresting a criminal are not entitled to a reward offered for such arrest unless the terms of the reward offered clearly include them: Means v. Hendershott, 24–78.

Employment of agents: The board has authority to employ a special agent or attorney to assist in the collection of taxes not collectible by the county treasurer: Wilhelm v. Cedar County, 50–254.

As incident to the care and management of the county property, the board may, in a proper case, employ an agent to aid them; and therefore, held, an agent employed by the county to find a purchaser for indemnity swamp lands might maintain action for the value of his services: Call v. Hamilton County, 62–448.

Employment of counsel: The board may, whenever they deem it expedient, employ counsel to prosecute or defend actions against the county, or to perform other services, and no form of vote by the board or entry of the fact of such employment of record is necessary to the validity of the contract. It may be proved by parol: Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46–138; Jordan v. Osceola County, 59–388.

The board may employ counsel, in addition to the district attorney, to prosecute criminal cases: Hopkins v. Clayton County, 32–15.

The county judge, when that office existed, had the power, and it was his duty, to secure the services of an attorney whenever he thought such services were needed, and he might pay a reasonable compensation therefor out of the county treasury: Chickasaw County v. Bailey, 13–435.

Attorney assisting in prosecution: The district attorney cannot render the county liable for services of an additional attorney employed by him to aid in criminal prosecutions: Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46–138; Foster v. Clinton County, 51–541.

A county can be made liable to pay for additional counsel only as the board of supervisors has determined such counsel to be necessary. The court cannot, at the request of the district attorney, appoint assistant counsel and thereby bind the county to pay therefor, at least unless on account of the absence of the district attorney, and in order to prevent the failure of justice: Seaton v. Polk County, 59–626.

In the absence of the district attorney the court may appoint a special prosecutor, but as to whether in such case the county is rendered liable for his compensation the court were equally divided: White v. Polk County, 17–413.

Recovery against county for services rendered on appointment of court to assist in the prosecution of a particular case, held proper: Curtis v. Cass County, 49–421.

It may be that in proper cases the court may appoint and require a member of the bar to appear and represent the state in a habeas corpus proceeding, although no compensation therefor is provided: Miller v. Buena Vista County, 68–711.

A justice of the peace has no power to appoint an attorney to prosecute a criminal action in behalf of the state, and no compensation can be recovered by reason of such an appointment: Davis v. Linn County, 24–508.

See, further, notes to § 301.

Liability for contracts made by officers or agents: A member of the board of supervisors has no power to bind the county by acts, contracts or declarations in the absence of authority of the board authorizing him to do so. He stands on the same footing as any other agent: Rice v. Plymouth County, 43–136.

The chairman of the board of supervisors has no more authority to make contracts binding on the county than has any other member; but the chairman or any other member may be empowered by consent, without any formal action, to make contracts for proper purposes as agent for the board: Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46-138.

The board having the power to do an act may properly direct the performance of it by a committee: Hopkins v. Clayton County, 32-15.

Acceptance by the board of supervisors of the report of a committee appointed to settle with an agent will bind the board to the terms of the settlement, in the absence of fraud or mistake: Ringgold County v. Allen, 42-697.

Ratification: While ratification of an unauthorized contract may be inferred from acquiescence therein with knowledge of all the material facts, yet, held, that where such ratification was claimed on account of payments being reported as made thereunder by the treasurer, it must appear not only that he reported the contract in full, but also that the board examined his report in this respect: Wilhelm v. Cedar County, 50-254.

Where the board, when not in session, offered a reward for the recovery of money stolen from the county, held, that a ratification thereof made afterward while in session, even after the acts had been done on which the reward was claimed, would render the county liable: Hawk v. Marion County, 48-472.

Certain action of the board in appointing a committee to examine a bridge built under contract, etc., held not to amount to an acceptance of the work or ratification of the change. A conditional acceptance, even when not authorized, will not necessarily amount to a full acceptance: Mallory v. Montgomery County, 48-681.

Implied contract: The county cannot be made liable upon implied agreement beyond the limit of the contract entered into by the board for the erection of a public building: Reichard v. Warren County, 31-381.

Estoppel: Where the county denies that its right and title to land has passed under a claimed conveyance thereof, it is estopped from collecting taxes on such land for the period during which it claims that it had not parted with the title: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Story County, 36-48.

Where a county accepts payment of taxes from a person claiming to own lands, and with full knowledge of such claim, it is estopped from afterwards asserting title in itself to such lands: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 39-507; Audubon County v. American Emigrant Co., 40-460. (On a subsequent appeal in the leading case the doctrine there stated was doubted by some members of the court: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 55-94.)

The county is estopped from asserting title to lands which it has assessed and sold for taxes as the property of another: Austin v. Bremer County, 44-155.

Where a county has taxed property in the name of a person as owner, it cannot afterwards, when he brings action to restrain the collection of the tax, deny that he is the owner of the land: Brandiff v. Harrison County, 50-164.

A mere unauthorized assessment of lands by the county will not estop it from afterwards asserting title, the adverse claimant not having parted with his money or changed his position in reliance upon such act: Page County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 40-520.

Unauthorized acts of county officers in levying taxes on lands which are at the time claimed by the county will not constitute an estoppel as against the county: Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 46-226.

A county will not be estopped or bound by the acts of its officers which are in violation of law, and void: Howard County v. Bullis, 49-519; Gill v. Appanoose County, 68-20.

Representations of authorized agents of a county, made in connection with a sale of its lands, that there are no taxes assessed against them, will estop the county from collecting taxes for preceding years: Calhoun County v. American Emigrant Co. 93 U. S., 124.

If a conveyance is made of land to which the county has been adjudged not to have title, the purchaser may recover the price paid: Nelson v. Hamilton County, 71 N. W., 206.

An action by a county to set aside a conveyance will not render taxes levied on the property after such conveyance void: American Emigrant Co. v. Iowa R. Land Co., 52-323.

In a particular case, held, that it was not sufficiently shown that taxation of certain lands by a county was made by such inadvertence or mistake that it should not be estopped from asserting title thereto: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 55-94.

The fact that land has been taxed to a purchaser, who has obtained title thereto from the county by fraud, will not estop the county from asserting its title: Bixby v. Adams County, 49-507.

Assignment of notes to: Under some circumstances a county may take an assignment of notes, and in an action by the county against the maker of a note it will be presumed that the circumstances were such as to authorize the assignment to the county until the contrary is shown: Marshall County v. Hanna, 57-372.

Trust property: Where public lands were granted to counties, the proceeds thereof to be used in erecting county buildings, held, that such proceeds were held in trust by the counties, and in an action by the county to recover a portion of such fund a general indebtedness due defendant from the county could not be set off: Davis v. Muscatine County, Mor., 161.

Construction of ditches: Where the board of supervisors, in pursuance of a proper application, have had a ditch constructed, and have paid the contractor the amount of his claim therefor, a person whose land is taxed for its construction cannot restrain the collection of such taxes. His objection ought to be made sooner: Noyes v. Harrison County, 57-312.

While it has been held in this state, against the decided weight of authority in other states, that counties are liable for damages caused by reason of the negligent construction and maintenance of county bridges, the court is not disposed to extend the rule which has been held applicable to bridges so as to make the county liable for damages resulting from the negligent construction of a county ditch, or from negligence in allowing the same to become obstructed: Green v. Harrison County, 61-311; Nutt v. Mills County, 61-754.

Construction of levees: In a proceeding before the board of supervisors to authorize the construction of a levee, and the assessment of taxes therefor upon adjacent lands, it is essential that a petition signed by residents interested in the improvements shall be presented. Unless this requirement is complied with the supervisors can obtain no jurisdiction: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

Construction of roads: The county has authority to aid in the construction of a road, and warrants issued for that purpose are valid: Long v. Boone County, 32-181.

The county collecting and expending a road tax under the provisions of 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 1533 is not liable for damages due to the negligence of its agents in constructing a highway as authorized by such act, resulting in injury to adjacent property: Packard v. Voltz, 62 N. W., 757.

The only exception to the rule that counties are not liable for the negligent or unlawful acts of their agents is in case of defective bridges and such exception rests upon the authority of decisions not in harmony with general principles and not to be extended to other cases: Ibid.

A county being an involuntary corporation forced into existence for the purpose of such governmental duties as are imposed by law, which duties must be discharged through agents or employes, is not liable for the wrongful acts of such agents, nor are such agents liable unless acting maliciously where they are discharging the express authority conferred upon them: Ibid.

Par. 12. School fund: The board of supervisors cannot take advantage of the exemptions from tax sales accorded to school-fund mortgages, and buy in land sold for taxes upon which such a mortgage exists, for the express purpose of defeating a prior mortgage. The purchase of such tax title not being necessary for the protection of the fund, they have no power to make it: Miller v. Gregg, 26-75.

Par. 18. Bridges: The board of supervisors have authority to contract for the erection of bridges within the limits of cities in the county: Oskaloosa Steam-Engine Works v. Pottawattamie County, 72-134.

While municipal corporations have power to erect such bridges as public convenience may require, within their respective counties, they are not authorized to construct bridges over navigable waters without express legislative enactment: Snyder v. Fosier, 77-638.

The board may properly delegate to committees the authority to make application of county funds for small expenditures in the repair of bridges and the like: Denison v. Watts, 66 N. W., 886.

The board may furnish plank for culverts or small bridges in accordance with the public convenience. The authority under this subdivision is not limited to bridges of such extent that the county would be liable for injuries resulting from negligence of the board in maintaining them in good condition: Ibid.

Liability for defects: The county being expressly empowered to make and repair bridges and levy a bridge tax for such purposes (§ 1303), it is its duty, and not that of the road supervisors, to build and keep in repair bridges of such size as to require an extraordinary expenditure of money to construct them, or the repairs upon which involve a considerable expense; and the county is liable for the damages resulting from negligence in building or failing to repair: Wilson v. Jefferson County, 13-181; Brown v. Jefferson County, 16-339; Soper v. Henry County, 26-264; Kendall v. Lucas County, 26-395; Davis v. Allamakee County, 40-217; Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40-394; Chandler v. Fremont County, 42-58; Huston v. Iowa County, 43-456; Krause v. Davis County, 44-141; Cooper v. Mills County, 69-350.

The general language of this paragraph is to be construed in connection with the general provisions of the statute regulating the making and repairing of highways (§ 1528 et seq.): Soper v. Henry County, 26-264.

The county board is not required to assume that a bridge will be used in an unusual and extraordinary manner, either by passing in great speed or by passage of a large weight. Its liability stops with constructing and maintaining its bridges so as to protect them against injury by a reasonable, proper and probable use thereof, in view of the circumstances, such as the extent, kind and nature of the travel and business on the road of which it forms a part: Yordy v. Marshall County, 80-405.

But the court cannot declare as matter of law that the passage of a steam thresher is not to be anticipated, and therefore that it is not negligence not to make provision for such traffic. It is for the jury to determine whether the county is guilty of negligence in not maintaining the bridge in a safe condition for the passage of such machine, and whether plaintiff was guilty of negligence in attempting to move such apparatus across the bridge under the circumstances: Ibid.

What deemed county bridges: The county is not responsible for bridges which it is contemplated shall be built and kept in repair by the road district (§ 1528) and for damages resulting from the unsafe condition for which the road supervisor is made personally liable, after notice in writing (§ 1557): Soper v. Henry County, 26-264; Chandler v. Fremont County, 42-58; Taylor v. Davis County, 40-295.

But even though it may be the obligation of the road supervisors to make small repairs on county bridges for the purpose of keeping them in order, the county is not thereby relieved from its liability as to such bridges: Roby v. Appanoose County, 63-113.

Where a bridge, not originally built by the county, which was twelve feet in span, and could be built for seventy-five dollars, was defective for want of a railing which would have cost five dollars, and the road district had ample means for repairing or rebuilding if necessary, held, that such bridge was not a county bridge, and the county was not liable for injuries received from defects therein: Chandler v. Fremont County, 42-58.

Held, that the county was not liable for damages resulting from the falling of a bridge, where it did not appear that it had ever assumed control thereof, or made appropriation for building it or keeping it in repair, and that the records of the board showing the appropriation for rebuilding after the accident, were not admissible to establish such liability: Titler v. Iowa County, 48-90.

The fact that the county is authorized to change the location of a highway, and that it is required that the new highway shall be put into as good condition as the old one, will not render it liable for defects in a small bridge upon such new highway, although the committee of the board of supervisors authorized to examine such new highway has accepted it: Taylor v. Davis County, 40-295.

Bridges, properly designated county bridges, and for the construction or repair of which the county is liable, are bridges of the larger class requiring an extraordinary expenditure of money: Ibid.

That citizens or another corporation has contributed to the construction of the bridge does not relieve the county from liability for negligence in constructing it or keeping it in repair: Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40-394, and see Albee v. Floyd County, 46-177.

The board has power to construct, and levy taxes for, a free bridge over a stream, although within the limits of an incorporated city, when it will accommodate the county and traveling public at large: Bell v. Foutch, 21-119; Barrett v. Brooks, 21-144.

The board may also aid in the construction of free bridges, erected with the sanction of the proper authorities, for public use upon public lines of travel within as well as without incorporated towns or cities: Ibid.

While the county is liable for injuries resulting, through its fault, from defective bridges erected by it upon a public highway within a town which is not made a separate road district, yet when the town becomes incorporated as a city of the second class, and its organization as such is perfected, the city becomes bound to keep its bridges in repair, and is, in the absence of contract, alone liable for their safe condition: McCullom v. Black Hawk County, 21-409.

The provision found in § 527 of Code of '73 that public bridges exceeding forty feet in length over any stream crossing a state or county highway shall be constructed and kept in repair by the county was held applicable to all bridges and not merely to those within city limits. But this provision did not affect the question whether bridges less than forty feet in length are to be deemed county bridges, and that fact depends upon their necessity to the public, their character and cost, and the financial ability of the road district in which they are located to construct and maintain them: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655. [This portion of § 527 of Code of '73 has been omitted.]

Where, by the provisions of § 426 relating to bridges near a county line, one county constructs a bridge along the line of a county road within the limits of another county, it becomes liable for injury resulting from negligence in constructing and maintaining such bridge: Ibid.

Extent of liability: The county is to be held to the exercise of such care with reference to its bridges as reasonably prudent and careful men would use in the conduct and management of their own affairs of like importance: Cooper v. Mills County, 69-350.

The county is required to use the care which might be expected of a prudent and reasonably diligent person under similar circumstances in the management of his own affairs: Wiers v. Jones County, 80-351.

In an action against a county for damages resulting from the falling of one span of a bridge, held, that the jury should not have been limited to the consideration of evidence relating to the condition of that portion of the bridge alone: Hughes v. Muscatine County, 44-672.

Approaches: The county is liable not only for the defective construction of a bridge, but for negligently and carelessly adopting an insufficient plan therefor: Ferguson v. Davis County, 57-601.

Where it appeared that the plan, in accordance with which a contract for the erection of a bridge was made and carried out, was defective, and that, although prepared by the contractor, it was so prepared at the direction of the county and against his advice as to particular features, held, that such contractor was not liable for defects of the bridge constructed by him due to a defective plan: Holland v. Union County, 68-56.

Where it is claimed that the place where an accident occurs is an approach to a bridge in such sense as to be a part of it, the question as to whether it is or not is for the jury. An approach having the character of a highway rather than a structure to aid approach to the bridge cannot be regarded as a part of the bridge. There is an obvious distinction between an approach having the character of a highway, or of an independent structure, and an embankment, wall, or other structure intended alone for an approach to the bridge: Newcomb v. Montgomery County, 79-487.

The approaches to a county bridge are a part of the bridge and a county is liable in a proper case for negligence in the construction of such approaches: Miller v. Boone County, 63 N. W., 352.

The question as to whether the place where the injury occurred was on the approach to the bridge or on the highway is a question of fact for the jury: Ibid.

A resolution of the board of supervisors is admissible to show that they recognize the approach to a bridge as a portion of the bridge: Jessup v. Osceola County, 92-178.

Evidence that a few days after the accident timbers were found to be decayed is admissible as tending to show the condition of the bridge at the time of the accident: Ibid.

The approaches to a county bridge constitute a part of the bridge, and the county is liable for defects in the construction of such approaches: Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40-394; Albee v. Floyd County, 46-177.

The county may be liable for injuries received by a person who, in the night-time, goes upon a newly-constructed bridge and suffers injury by reason of the embankments not being completed or properly guarded: Van Winter v. Henry County, 61-684.

It is error to instruct the jury that as a matter of law the embankment constituting the approach to the bridge is to be regarded as a part of it. That is a question for the jury: Nims v. Boone County, 66-272; Nims v. Boone County, 68-642.

Where a span of a bridge over a bayou was separated from the main bridge over a stream on the same line of road by some twenty feet of embankment, held, that whether such span was a part of the main bridge was a question for the jury: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

Notice: A county may be liable for injuries received from the falling of a bridge, which, though properly constructed, has become unsafe by decay of the timbers, if it has failed to exercise care and diligence in inspecting and repairing the same, whether the need of such repairs is open and obvious or not: Huff v. Poweshiek County, 60-529.

The county will be liable for negligence in failing to inspect and repair where a bridge, though properly constructed, has been built so long that in the exercise of ordinary care and diligence the board of supervisors ought to have known that it would in such time become dangerous: Ferguson v. Davis County, 57-601.

The county may also become liable for failure of its authorities, upon being notified of the dangerous condition of the bridge, to have it examined and repaired if defective, and its use in the meantime prevented: Ibid.

But where it appeared that an examination had been made by a competent person, who reported that the bridge would run about four years, held, that the fact that it had already stood for a period greater than the average life of the timber of which it was composed would not render the county liable unless some member of the board knew or was informed of its unsafe condition, or, in the exercise of reasonable care, should have known such condition: Ibid.

Where it appeared that the county authorities had placed a written notice of the defective condition of a bridge somewhere thereon, and put a pole across one end of it, but there was nothing to show that such notice or pole was there when plaintiff received his injury, held not error to refuse an instruction assuming that defendant would not be liable if notice was given and the bridge obstructed, and such notice or obstruction were subsequently removed by some unauthorized person: Brown v. Jefferson County, 16-339.

Where the county erects a barricade and notice at a dangerous bridge, and the barricade is moved without the knowledge or consent of the county, it is not liable for damages which result from such removal unless it is notified thereof, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have known of such removal in time to have prevented the accident: Wiers v. Jones County, 80-35.

It is the duty of each member of the board to report knowledge of defects in county bridges that they may be repaired or replaced and proper steps taken to prevent accidents, and notice given to a member long enough before the accident to have enabled him to report the matter to the board, and for repairs to have been made, will charge the county with notice of the defect: Morgan v. Fremont County, 92-644.

As bearing on the question of negligence in failing to use reasonable care in keeping the bridge in repairs evidence of experts is admissible as to the ordinary life of timbers used in the bridge: Ibid.

Where a defect in a bridge has been open and notorious for more than six months, held, that the county was chargeable with notice thereof: Waud v. Polk County, 88-617.

Contributory negligence on the part of the person injured will defeat his recovery but mere knowledge of the defective condition of the bridge will not be, as a matter of law, negligence: Ibid.

The defect in the bridge may be so manifest, open and notorious as that by reason of its continuance the county is chargeable with notice thereof without the plaintiff's being chargeable with contributory negligence in regard to an accident happening to him from such defect: Homan v. Franklin County, 68 N. W., 559.

In an action against a county to recover damages for injuries received by reason of a defective bridge, defendant may show that plaintiff had knowledge of the unsafe condition of the bridge and might have reached his destination by another road equally convenient, over a good bridge: Walker v. Decatur County, 67-307.

It will not, however, as a matter of law, constitute contributory negligence that plaintiff, knowing the bridge in question was unsafe, did not take another road which was safe and convenient, the bridge at which the accident occurred not having been barricaded but left open for public travel: Ibid.

In a particular case, held, that there was such contributory negligence on the part of a person killed by falling from a bridge that no recovery could be had, although it was claimed that the bridge was defective by reason of the absence of any railing between the spans: Dale v. Webster County, 76-370.

If a person about to drive on a bridge knows it to be unsafe and that it is imprudent to drive thereon, and that he might take another way to reach his destination which would be safe and convenient, he will be guilty of negligence in going upon the unsafe bridge: Homan v. Franklin County, 90-185.

Where the board of supervisors have taken the proper steps to place barriers across a defective bridge and post notices warning travelers of its dangerous condition, the county will not be liable to one who drives upon such bridge and is injured, even though, by reason of his being unable to understand the English language, he could not read the notices: Weirs v. Jones County, 86-625.

Par. 19. Bounties for scalps of wild animals: To entitle a party to recover the additional bounty herein contemplated, the animals must be taken and killed within the county: Murray v. Jones County, 72-286.

Par. 22: The rules and regulations here contemplated are for their own government and not for the government of other bodies or boards: Hunter v. Jasper County, 40-568.

SEC. 423. Expenditures for improvements—when vote necessary. The board of supervisors shall not order the erection of a court-house, jail, poor-house or other building, or bridge, when the probable cost will exceed five thousand dollars, nor the purchase of real estate for county purposes exceeding two thousand dollars in value, until a proposition therefor shall have been first submitted to the legal voters of the county, and voted for by a majority of all persons voting for and against such proposition at a general or special election, notice of the same being given for thirty days previously, in a newspaper, if one be published in the county, and, if none be published therein, then by written notice posted in a public place in each township in the county. [18 G. A., ch. 46; 16 G. A., ch. 80; C. '73, § 303; R., § 312.]

The members of the board of supervisors violating these provisions by voting to erect a building or bridge, the probable cost of which exceeds the amount here specified, without having submitted the question to vote, are guilty of a misdemeanor under § 4905: State v. Conlee, 25-237.

Where the erection of a building, the probable cost of which exceeds $5,000, has been formally authorized, the board are limited to the amount authorized by such vote, and an indebtedness contracted beyond that amount is void: Reichard v. Warren County, 31-381.

The county cannot be held on an implied contract for a quantum meruit where an express contract would have been unauthorized. The acceptance and occupation of a building, erected at greater expense than that authorized, will not render the county liable for its cost beyond the amount authorized: Ibid.

Where the people of a county had by vote authorized the erection of a court-house, and an expenditure of $75,000 for that purpose, and plaintiff contracted to build it for that amount, according to certain plans and specifications, but the contract provided for possible changes in the plans and specifications, the cost of which was to be added to or deducted from the amount agreed to be paid for the building, and the changes which were made added materially to the contract price, and no corresponding reductions were made, held, that all agreements whereby the total cost of the work was to exceed the amount authorized to be expended were void, having been made in excess of the authority of the board of supervisors, and that plaintiff was not entitled to recover anything on such contracts; and the fact that the county was compelled to vote an additional $50,000 for the completion of the building could not be construed to be a ratification of the illegal acts of the parties in making the contracts: King v. Mahaska County, 75-329.

And in such case held, that the county might insist that all money paid was paid on the original contract, and not on the illegal modification: Ibid.

The board may order the purchase of real estate, not exceeding $2,000 in value, and the erection thereon of a public building not costing to exceed $5,000, without submitting the question to a vote: Merchant v. Tama County, 32-200.

In the submission of a proposition for the outlay of money, two distinct objects, each calling for a certain specified amount, cannot be included in one proposition: Gray v. Mount, 45-591.

Before the amendment made by 18 G. A., ch. 46, held, that the submission here authorized could only be made at a general election: Ibid; Yant v. Brooks, 19-87.

Where a proposition was made to a county to sell property to it for a court-house, and the proposition was submitted to the voters and acquiesced in by them, held, that such action did not constitute an acceptance, but only authorized an acceptance by the board of supervisors, and in the absence of such action on the part of the board the contract was not binding on the county: Starr v. Board of Supervisors, 22-491.

And held, that such a proposition must be accompanied, when submitted to vote, by a provision to lay a tax for the payment thereof, as provided in § 447: Ibid.

It is not necessary that in connection with a proposition to expend more than $5,000 in the erection of a court-house there be submitted a proposition to levy a tax, where to meet the required expenditure no special tax need be voted. But when, in order to pay for the building, money must be borrowed or a debt be incurred, then the question of borrowing the money must be submitted with the proposition to erect the building: Miller v. Merriam, 62 N. W., 689.

The proceeds of swamp lands may be appropriated to the building of public bridges when duly authorized by the vote of the people: Barrett v. Brooks, 21-144.

The submission of such a question to vote need not include the submission of the contract under which the bridge is to be built: Ibid.

A proposition to sell swamp lands and to devote the proceeds to the erection of a courthouse are not necessarily separate propositions, but may be submitted together: Rock v. Runehart, 88-37.

That proceeds of swamp lands are appropriated by a vote of the electors to the construction of a bridge does not restrict the board from appropriating a further sum from the bridge fund: Bell v. Foutch, 21-119.

Under a statute authorizing the voting of taxes by a township to aid in the construction of county bridges, held, that the electors of the township could only vote such taxes when the cost was at least $10,000, which estimate or cost must be fixed by the board of supervisors: Ritz v. Tannehill, 69-476.

SEC. 424. Appropriations for county bridges—limitations. The board of supervisors of any county having a population of more than ten thousand may appropriate, for the construction of any one bridge which is or may hereafter become a county charge, within the limits of such county, or may appropriate toward the construction of any bridge across any unnavigable river which is the dividing line between any two counties in this state, or between one county in this state and another state, such sum as may be necessary, not exceeding the sum of forty dollars per lineal foot for superstructure, but in no case shall they appropriate for said purpose, including substructure, superstructure and approaches, a sum exceeding fifteen thousand dollars; but, in any county having a population exceeding fifteen thousand, said board may appropriate, as aforesaid, not to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars; but not more than fifteen thousand dollars shall be expended in the construction of such bridge across a stream which is the dividing line between two counties. [16 G. A., ch. 80; C. '73, § 303.]

SEC. 425. Expenditure of insurance money. In any county in this state where any of the public buildings thereof have been or may hereafter be destroyed by fire, wind or lightning, the board of supervisors of such county, for the purpose of reconstructing the same, may appropriate and use, in addition to the amount now authorized by law, the amount received by way of insurance on such building or buildings so destroyed. [19 G. A., ch. 54.]

SEC. 426. Bridges on county-line roads. Whenever a county-line road intersects a stream of sufficient width to require a county bridge, and the point of intersection does not afford a suitable site for the construction thereof, and there is a good site for its erection wholly within one or the other of said counties, at a reasonable distance from the county line, the boards of supervisors of the respective counties to be benefited by said bridge may make the necessary appropriations for the construction and maintenance thereof, as they might do if said bridge was located on the county line. [17 G. A., ch. 40.]

Where, under the provisions of this statute, one county erects a bridge along a county road but within the limits of another county, it may be held liable for injuries resulting from negligence in constructing and repairing such bridge: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

SEC. 427. Highways established to avoid bridging. The board of supervisors of any county shall have the power, on its own motion, to change and establish highways along streams, where it can avoid building a bridge or bridges over such streams, and said highways shall be placed in good traveling condition by such board of supervisors; and all costs accruing in the establishment of said road shall be paid out of the county bridge fund. [21 G. A., ch. 85, § 1.]

SEC. 428. Damages—appeal. Whenever it is found necessary to establish such highway, the board of supervisors, at any regular session, may appoint three disinterested citizens as appraisers to assess the damages occasioned thereby, and may hear evidence, and increase or decrease the damages allowed by the appraisers as to it may seem just. Any party aggrieved by its action may appeal therefrom to the district court in the same time and manner, and with the same effect, as is provided in relation to the establishment of highways. [Same, §§ 2, 3.]

SEC. 429. Expenditure of bridge fund on highways. Whenever any county in the state is free from debt, and has a surplus in its bridge fund, after providing for the necessary repairs of bridges in said county, the board of supervisors may, out of such surplus, make improvements upon the highways, upon the petition of one-third of the resident freeholders of any township in said county; but in no case shall they be authorized to run the county in debt for such improvement of the highways; and whenever they shall make such improvements, they shall let the work by contract to the lowest responsible bidder, after having advertised for proposals, in some newspaper printed in the county, for not less than fourteen days previous to the letting of said contract. [18 G. A., ch. 88, § 1.]

SEC. 430. Dependent soldiers' and sailors' tax. A tax of one-half mill upon the dollar, or such less sum as may be needed, may be levied by the board of supervisors upon all taxable property within the county, to be collected at the same time and in the same manner as other taxes, to create a fund for the relief of and to pay the funeral expenses of honorably discharged, indigent Union soldiers, sailors and marines, and their indigent wives, widows, and minor children not over fourteen years of age, if boys, nor over sixteen years, if girls, having a legal residence in the county. [24 G. A., ch. 69, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 105, § 1.]

SEC. 431. Commission to disburse—duties. Said fund shall be disbursed by the soldiers' relief commission, which shall consist of three persons, two of whom shall be honorably discharged Union soldiers, sailors or marines, to be appointed by said board, subject to removal at any time by said board for neglect of duty or maladministration, at the regular meeting in September, and who shall hold their office for three years, and until their successors shall be appointed and qualified; all vacancies to be filled by appointment by the board, one to be appointed each year. They shall qualify by taking the usual oath of office, and give bond in the sum of five hundred dollars each, conditioned for the faithful discharge of their duties, with sureties to be approved by the county auditor, and, when approved, shall be filed and recorded by him as other official bonds. The commission shall organize by the selection of one of their number as chairman, and one as secretary. [22 G. A., ch. 105, §§ 2, 4.]

SEC. 432. Meetings—report to supervisors—disbursements—how made. The commission shall meet annually at the county auditor's office, on the first Monday in September, and at such other times as may be necessary, at which annual meeting it shall determine who are entitled to relief, and the probable amount required to be expended therefor, which sum it shall certify to said board, together with a list of those found to be entitled to relief, and the sum to be paid in each case, the aggregate not to exceed the amount to be raised by the tax levy authorized; and it, at its regular September meeting, shall levy a sufficient tax to raise this amount. Upon the filing of the list with the board of supervisors, the county auditor shall, within twenty days thereafter, transmit to the township clerks in the county the names of those, if any, to whom relief has been awarded, and the amount. On the first Monday of each month after the fund is ready for distribution, the auditor shall issue his warrant upon the county treasurer to the commission for the sums thus awarded, and it shall proceed to disburse the same to the parties named in the list, taking receipts therefor, or distribution may be made in any other manner the commission may direct. Should it appear to the commission that any person entitled to assistance will not properly expend the same, then the payment may be made to some suitable person, who shall, as directed by it, make the disbursements thereof, for the use and benefit of such person. The amount awarded to any party may be increased, decreased or discontinued by the commission at any regular meeting. New names may be added and certified thereat, and it shall, at the close of the year, make annual detailed reports of its work, which shall be accompanied with the proper vouchers for all moneys received by it. [24 G. A., ch. 69, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 105, § 3.]

SEC. 433. Burial of indigent soldiers and sailors. The board of supervisors shall designate some suitable person in each township to cause to be decently interred the body of any honorably discharged soldier, sailor or marine who served in the army or navy of the United States during the late war, who may hereafter die without leaving sufficient means to defray the expenses of his funeral. Such burial shall not be made in any cemetery or burying-ground or part thereof used exclusively for the burial of the pauper dead. The expenses of such burial shall in no case exceed the sum of thirty-five dollars, and in case surviving relatives of the deceased shall desire to conduct the funeral, and are unable or unwilling to pay the charges therefor, they shall be permitted to do so, and the expenses shall be paid as herein provided. [20 G. A., ch. 178, § 1.]

SEC. 434. Graves to be marked. The grave of any deceased soldier, sailor or marine shall be marked by a headstone, showing his name and the organization to which he belonged or in which he served; and such headstone shall not cost more than the sum of fifteen dollars, and shall be of such design and material as may be approved by the board of supervisors. The expenses of such burial and headstone shall be paid by the county in which such person died. The board of supervisors of such county shall audit the account and pay the same in such manner as other claims are audited and paid. [Same, §§ 2, 3.]

SEC. 435. Soldiers' monuments and memorial halls—tax for—inscriptions. Whenever a petition shall be presented to the board of supervisors of any county, signed by a majority of the members of the grand army posts therein, asking it to submit to the voters of such county, at the next general election thereafter, the question of aiding in the erection of a soldiers' and sailors' monument or memorial hall, the same shall be ordered by such board. The board shall cause the proposition to be printed and placed upon the ballots, and the election shall be conducted in the manner provided in case of similar or like propositions in the chapter on elections. If a majority of the votes polled is in favor of the adoption of the proposition, then such board, at the time of levying the ordinary taxes following the election, shall levy the same, which levy shall be placed upon the tax list and collected as other taxes. The tax thus voted shall not exceed one mill on the dollar upon the assessed valuation of the taxable property within the county. If a monument shall be erected, then there shall be inscribed thereon, or, if a hall be erected, recorded therein, the names of all deceased soldiers and sailors who have died or may hereafter die, and who enlisted or entered the service from the county, and such other names of soldiers and sailors as may be directed by the grand army posts of the county. [21 G. A., ch. 62, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 436. How tax expended. Such taxes, when collected by the county treasurer, shall be drawn and expended for the erection of such soldiers' and sailors' monuments or memorial halls, under the direction of a committee of three, to be selected by a majority of all the members of the grand army posts in the county where such tax is voted, who shall each give bonds in such amount as shall be fixed by the board, and the county auditor shall draw his warrants upon the treasurer for said money, at the times and in such amounts as may be directed by said committee, and shall charge it with the same, and such committee shall settle and account to the board of supervisors for all money so drawn, in the same manner as is now or may hereafter be provided by law for the settlement of the accounts of township clerks; but no such tax shall be voted in any county which has before made an appropriation for said purposes, or either of them, by virtue of any law heretofore in force. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 437. Compromise by county with sureties. Where judgment has been or may hereafter be rendered against any county treasurer or other county officer and the sureties on his official bond, in favor of any county in this state, and remains unsatisfied, and the board of supervisors of such county are satisfied that the full amount thereof cannot be collected, such board of supervisors shall have power to compromise the said judgment, and to enter full satisfaction thereof under the terms of said compromise. [18 G. A., ch. 48, § 1.]

SEC. 438. Conditions of compromise. In all cases referred to in the preceding section, if the principal debtor and each of the sureties on his official bond shall execute a written consent to a compromise with any one or more of said sureties, and to a release of said surety or sureties, and in such writing shall agree that such compromise or release shall not release any of the sureties who shall not compromise and be released from the payment of the unpaid judgment, then in that case, upon the filing of such written consent with the auditor of such county, the board of supervisors of such county shall have full power, and are hereby authorized, to compromise with any one or more of such sureties, and to release such surety or sureties upon the terms which may be agreed upon in such compromise. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 439. Disposition of funds therefrom. In case of any compromise as provided in the two preceding sections being made, the money received by the county thereon shall be paid to the various funds of the county, in proportion to the amount that each fund is in default, as such default existed at the time the judgment was rendered, as nearly as the same can be ascertained, so that each fund shall receive its pro rata share, as the same shall be determined by the board of supervisors. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 440. Acts requiring majority of whole board. No tax shall be levied, no contract for the erection of any public buildings entered into, no settlement with the county officers made, no real estate purchased or sold, no new site designated for any county buildings, no change made in the boundaries of townships, and no money appropriated to aid in the construction of highways and bridges, without a majority of the whole board of supervisors voting therefor and consenting thereto. [C. '73, § 305; R., § 313.]

The authority of a county to aid in the construction of a road is here necessarily implied and warrants issued therefor are valid: Long v. Boone County, 32–181.

While it is not necessary that everything done by the board must be entered of record or be put in writing in order to be binding, yet there should at least be an assent to such action given by a majority of the members of the board, while in session, before it will be binding on the county: Rice v. Plymouth County, 43–136.

SEC. 441. Official newspapers—how selected—what published in—compensation. The board of supervisors of each county shall, at its January session in each year, select two newspapers published within the county, or one, if there be but one published therein, having the largest number of bona fide yearly subscribers within the county, which circulation shall be determined as follows: In case of contest, the applicants shall each deposit with the county auditor, on or before a day named by the board of supervisors, a certified statement, subscribed and sworn to before some competent officer, giving the names of the several post-offices, and the number and the names of the bona fide yearly subscribers receiving their papers through each of said offices living within the county; such statements to be in sealed envelopes, and opened by the county auditor upon direction of the board of supervisors; and the two applicants thus showing the greatest number of bona fide yearly subscribers living within the county shall be the county official papers, in which all the proceedings of the county board of supervisors, the schedule of bills allowed, and the reports of the county treasurer, including a schedule of the receipts and expenditures, shall be published at the expense of the county during the ensuing year, and the costs of such publication shall not exceed thirty-three and one-third cents for each ten lines of brevier type, or its equivalent; but in counties having a population of seventeen thousand or more, three papers, not more than two of which shall be published in the same town, shall be selected, in which such proceedings shall be published, with the same limitation as to compensation; and, in counties having two county seats, each district shall be regarded as a county for the purposes of such publication. The county auditor shall furnish all such papers selected a copy of such proceedings for that purpose. In case a contest is made by a publisher, the board shall receive other evidence of circulation, and he shall have the right of appeal to the district court, to be taken as in ordinary actions. Neither publisher to the contest shall receive pay for publishing such proceedings until the case is finally disposed of. [21 G. A., ch. 86, § 2; 20 G. A., ch. 197, § 2; C. '73, § 307.]

Decisions under the original section: The proprietor or publisher of a newspaper has no such interest in the selection of his paper for the publication of proceedings, etc., that he can maintain an action in his own name to compel the board to comply with the law, and order such publication in his paper: Welsh v. Board of Supervisors, 23–199; Smith v. Yoran, 37–89; Iowa News Co. v. Harris, 62–501.

The schedule of the receipts and expenditures, with the names of all claimants, etc., required to be published under the provisions of § 304 of Code of '73 before its repeal, were not required to be published under this section as a part of the proceedings of the board: McBride v. Hardin County, 58–219. Nor was the treasurer's semi-annual report to be so published: Haislett v. Howard County, 58–377.

Where the board entered into a contract for the publication of matter authorized to be published by them, in four newspapers instead of two as authorized by law, but at such rate that the aggregate amount of compensation was less than that which they were authorized to pay for the proper printing of such matter, held, that their action could not be restrained by injunction at the suit of a tax-payer: Sperry v. Kretchner, 65–525.

Section as amended: The intention of the amended section which is here substantially retained is to give the aggrieved publisher the right to appeal in all cases from the action of the board in determining the newspaper in which publication shall be made, and not merely in cases where fraud is charged: Brown v. Lewis, 76–159.

The right of appeal does not depend upon a charge of fraud and the person who desires to contest the action of the board must file the statement required by the statute and such statements may be filed without the order of the board fixing the time for filing. When more than two statements are filed there is a contest within the meaning of the statute and the board could not ignore or defeat it by neglecting to fix a day for the filing of the statements and for hearing. One who has filed no statement cannot complain on appeal, the printing having been awarded to two papers in behalf of which statements have been filed: Runion v. Haislet, 90–376.

The fact that the board had not previously fixed a day for the filing of statements and hearing of evidence in regard to them, held not to deprive a hearing actually had, in which the applicants protested, of the character of a contest. The provision in regard to naming a day for the filing of statements is designed for the benefit of the applicants, and may be waived by them: Cory v. Hamilton, 84–594.

Objections should be made when the statements are opened, and objection on the ground of fraud in such statements should not be postponed until the selection is made: Ibid.

Where a newspaper was selected to do the county printing, subject to a contest, and at the time fixed for the determination of the contest one of the supervisors was absent and there was a tie vote on the motion to proceed with the contest, and on a subsequent day there was a tie vote on a motion to dismiss the contest, held, that the first action had the effect of postponing the matter, and the second left it still pending, and as there had been no final action upon the contest, no appeal could be taken: Hoxie v. Shaw, 75–427.

Although it is provided that the supervisors shall select the newspapers to do the printing at the January term, final action upon a contest may be taken at a subsequent term, when by reason of the absence of one of the supervisors, causing an equal division of the board, the matter cannot be disposed of until the entire board is present: Ibid.

Such appeals are governed by the provisions of §§ 4548 and 4552 relating to appeals from judgments of justices of the peace, and must therefore be taken within twenty days and by the filing of an appeal bond: Starr v. Ingham, 84–580.

A contest as to whether a paper is under the provisions of this statute entitled to be selected for the publication of the proceedings of the board is triable in the first instance by the board of supervisors, and formal pleadings are not in all cases necessary. On appeal to the district court the case should be tried and decided as it was made before the board of supervisors, and it is not error to fail to require the filing of pleadings: Ashton v. Story, 64 N. W., 804.

To become a subscriber to a newspaper involves some voluntary act on the part of such subscriber or something which is in effect an assent by him to the use of his name as a subscriber. A person to whom a paper is sent without his knowledge or consent, either express or implied, is not a subscriber within the meaning of this statute. Therefore, held, that names of persons to whom the paper was sent in accordance with a contract made by a real estate dealer as an advertisement of his business were not to be counted in determining the actual subscribers: Ibid.

The list of subscribers as presented to the board of supervisors should not be allowed to be amended on the hearing of an appeal in the district court. The case should be tried as it was heard before the board: Ibid.

When two or more statements are filed with applications to have specified newspapers selected by the board of supervisors and made official there is a contest under this section; and the publisher is aggrieved when an adverse application based upon a fraudulent list is filed, and also when another paper is selected if his should have been chosen. But the contest is triable in the first instance by the board of supervisors, and when fraud is relied upon the charge of fraud should be made and brought to the attention of the board before it determines the contest, and it is only in such case that the board is required to seek evidence of circulation other than that presented in the statements of the applicants. If no such question of fraud is raised before the board it should not be considered by the district court on appeal: Ross v. Campbell, 66 N. W., 1064.

On the consideration of the appeal in the district court the evidence must be introduced as in other actions by ordinary proceedings and cannot be introduced by affidavits: Democrat Publishing Co. v. Lewis, 90–304.

SEC. 442. Books to be kept by board. The board is authorized and required to keep the following books:

1. A book to be known as the "minute book," in which shall be recorded all orders and decisions made by it, except those relating to highways. All orders for the allowance of money from the county treasury shall state on what account and to whom the allowance is made, dating the same and numbering them consecutively through each year;

2. A book to be known as the "highway record," in which shall be recorded all proceedings and adjudications relating to the establishment, change or discontinuance of highways;

3. A book to be known as the "bridge book," where a record of bridges shall be kept in a numerical order in each congressional township, commencing in section one, and numbering each bridge; give location in fractional parts of sections; name the kind of material used for substructure and superstructure; give length and cost of bridge, and, when repaired, to keep a record of repairs and charge it to the bridge; and warrants drawn in payment for erection or repairs of bridges shall indicate the number of the bridge for which it is issued in payment;

4. A book to be known as the "warrant book," in which shall be entered, in the order of its issuance, the number, date, amount, name of drawee of each warrant drawn on the treasury, and the number of warrants, as directed in relation to the minute book. [C. '73, § 308; R., § 318.]

It is not necessary that everything done by the board be entered of record in order to be binding, although there must at least be an assent thereto given by a majority of the members while in session: Rice v. Plymouth County, 43–136.

The fact that the members of the board, when not in session, expressed views different from their recorded action will not affect such action as recorded: Palo Alto County v. Burlingame, 71–201.

SEC. 443. Questions to be submitted to voters—tax payable in money only. The board of supervisors may submit to the people of the county at any regular election, or at any special one called for that purpose, the question whether money may be borrowed to aid in the erection of any public buildings, and the question of any other local or police regulation not inconsistent with the laws of the state. And, when the warrants of a county are at a depreciated value, it may, in like manner, submit the question whether a tax of a higher rate than that provided by law shall be levied; and in all cases when an additional tax is levied in pursuance of a vote of the people of any county for the special purpose of repaying borrowed money, or constructing or aiding to construct any highway or bridge, such special tax shall be paid in money. [C. '73, § 309; R., § 250; C. '51, § 114.]

Where the proposition submitted to the voters was to issue bonds for the erection of a court-house and provide a tax for their payment, and the ballots were "for court-house bonds" and "against" the same, a majority of the ballots cast being in the affirmative, held, that such vote authorized the levy of a tax as well as the issuance of the bonds: Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kossuth County, 41–57.

Where a proposition is submitted for ratification at an election it is necessary that the voters shall be advised of the nature or terms of the contract or proposition submitted, and when or where they are called upon to express by vote their assent or dissent: Page County v. American Emigrant Co., 41–115.

The manner and form of notice is not essential if there has been sufficient notice in fact upon which the voters of the county have acted; and in a particular case, held, that a notice of submission of a proposition for the disposition of swamp lands by the county was sufficient, although such notice was not in the form required by statute: Ibid.

Two or more propositions may be submitted to vote at the same time, but they cannot be joined together so as to make the adoption of each depend upon the adoption of all the others: McMillan v. Lee County, 3–311; Gray v. Mount, 45–591.

If the board are authorized to borrow money they may do it by means of negotiable bonds, but if not so authorized they have no authority to issue such bonds, and bonds so issued will be void. [Decided under § 114, Code 1851]: Hull v. Marshall County, 12–142; Casady v. Woodbury County, 13–113.

When authorized by vote of the people the counties of Iowa have the power to issue negotiable bonds for borrowed money or extraordinary expenditures: Carpenter v. Buena Vista County, 5 Dillon, 556.

SEC. 444. Restraining live stock—submission to voters. The board of supervisors may submit to the people of the county at any regular election, or at a special one called for that purpose, and on the petition of one-fourth of the legal voters must submit, one of the following questions of police regulation:

1. Shall stock be restrained from running at large?
2. Shall stock be restrained from running at large between sunset and sunrise?
3. Shall stock be restrained from running at large from the first day of (naming the month) in each year, until the first day of (naming the month) following?
4. Shall stock be restrained from running at large between sunset and sunrise from the first day of (naming the month) in each year, until the first day of (naming the month) following?

The word "stock" as used in this section shall have the same meaning as in the chapter of this code relating to domestic animals. [15 G. A., ch. 70, § 4; C. '73, §§ 309, 1450; R., § 250; C. '51, § 114.]

The provisions of former statutes authorizing a submission of the question whether swine and sheep should be allowed to run at large, to vote in each county, were held to be merely an exercise of the police power, and therefore not unconstitutional as not having a uniform operation, nor as depending for their validity upon a vote of the people. (Const., art. I, § 6, and art. III, § 1): Dalby v. Wolf, 14–228.

A section similar to this, making the question whether that act should be in force in any county dependent upon a vote of the people of the county was held unconstitutional, and the act was held to be in force in all the counties of the state without such adoption: Wier v. Cram, 37–649; Little v. McGuire, 38–560; Hallock v. Hughes, 42–516.

SEC. 445. When vote takes effect—former like vote. If at such election the majority of the electors voting thereon shall vote in favor of either of such regulations, then the same shall take effect and be in force at the end of thirty days after said election, and shall continue in force until the end of ninety days after an election at which, on a resubmission of the same question, a majority of the electors of the county voting thereon shall vote against the same. Where in any county the question for restraining stock from running at large, or for restraining stock from running at large between the hours of sunset and sunrise, has been submitted and adopted, in accordance with any law heretofore in force, such vote shall be construed and held to be an adoption by the county of the police regulation so voted upon, as fully and effectually as if the same had been done under the provisions of this chapter. [15 G. A., ch. 70, § 5; C. '73, § 1451.]

SEC. 446. Manner of submitting questions to vote. The mode of submitting such questions to the people shall be the following: The whole question, including the sum desired to be raised, or the amount of tax desired to be levied, or the rate per annum, and the whole regulation, including the time of its taking effect or having operation, if it be of a nature to be set forth, and the penalty for its violation if there be one, shall be published at least four weeks in some newspaper printed in the county. If there be no such newspaper, the publication shall be by being posted up in at least one of the most public places in each township in the county, and, in addition, in at least five among the most public places in the county, one of them being at the door of the court-house, for at least thirty days prior to the time of taking the vote. All such notices shall name the time when such question will be voted upon, and the form in which the question shall be taken, and a copy of the question submitted shall be posted up at each place of voting during the day of election. [C. '73, § 310; R., § 251; C. '51, § 115.]

Where the question submitted was whether a special tax should be levied to pay depreciated county warrants, held, that the omission to specify for what year the tax should be levied rendered the submission invalid: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39–124, 149.

SEC. 447. When tax must be voted also. When any question submitted involves the borrowing or the expenditure of money, the proposition of the question must be accompanied by a provision to lay a tax for the payment thereof, in addition to the usual taxes, as directed in the following section, and no vote adopting the question proposed will be of effect unless it adopt the tax also. [C. '73, § 311; R., § 252; C. '51, § 116.]

Under the corresponding section of the Code of '73, held, that the provisions of that section referred to questions the submission of which was authorized by the two preceding sections, but had no relation to the expenditure of money already in the county treasury which might be authorized in excess of five thousand dollars for the erection of a court-house by vote under § 303, ¶ 24, of that Code (see § 423; explaining Starr v. Des Moines County, 22–491): Miller v. Merriam, 62 N. W., 689.

It is not necessary that the provision for levying the tax be a distinct proposition to be voted upon separately from the main one; each proposition, however, must be accompanied by such provision: McMillan v. Lee County, 3–311.

SEC. 448. Rate of such tax. The rate of tax shall in no case be more than one per cent. on the county valuation in one year. When the object is to borrow money for the erection of public buildings, as above provided, the rate shall be such as to pay the debt in a period not exceeding ten years; but in counties having a population of forty thousand or over, and where it is proposed to expend one hundred thousand dollars or over, the rate of levy shall be such as to pay the debt in not exceeding twenty-five years. In issuing bonds for such indebtedness, when voted, the board of supervisors may cause portions of said bonds to become due at different definite periods. But none of such bonds so issued shall be due and payable in less than five or more than twenty-five years from date. When the object is to construct, or to aid in constructing, any highway or bridge, the annual rate shall not be less than one mill on the dollar of the assessed valuation; and any of the above taxes becoming delinquent shall draw the same interest as the ordinary taxes. [23 G. A., ch. 32; C. '73, § 312; R., § 253; C. '51, § 117.]

The authority of a county to aid in the construction of a road is here necessarily implied, and warrants issued therefor are valid: Long v. Boone County, 32–181.

SEC. 449. Tax for successive years. When it is supposed that the levy of one year will not pay the entire amount, the proposition and the vote must be to continue the proposed rate from year to year until the amount is paid. [C. '73, § 313; R., § 254; C. '51, § 118.]

SEC. 450. Result of vote to be published. The board of supervisors, on being satisfied that the above requirements have been complied with, and that a majority of the votes were cast in favor of the proposition, shall cause the same and the result of the vote to be entered at large in the minute book, and the proposition shall take effect and be in force thereafter.

Notice of such adoption shall be published for the same time and in the same manner as above provided for publishing the preliminary notice. This section shall not apply to police regulations in so far as is otherwise provided with respect thereto. [C. '73, § 314; R., § 255; C. '51, § 119.]

After the authority to levy the tax has been duly conferred by vote of the people, the board must proceed to make a levy of the tax, as provided by law, in order to make it valid: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Woodbury County, 39-172.

SEC. 451. Rescission by subsequent vote. Propositions thus adopted, and local regulations thus established, may be rescinded in like manner and upon like notice, by a subsequent vote taken thereon, but neither contracts made under them, nor the taxes appointed for carrying them into effect, can be rescinded. [C. '73, § 315; R., § 256; C. '51, § 120.]

SEC. 452. Board must submit questions on petition. The board shall submit the question of the adoption or rescission of such a measure, when petitioned therefor by one-fourth of the voters of the county, unless a different number be prescribed by law in any special case. [C. '73, § 316; R., § 257; C. '51, § 121.]

SEC. 453. Regularity presumed. The record of the adoption or rescission of any such measure shall be presumptive evidence that all the proceedings necessary to give the vote validity have been regularly conducted. [C. '73, § 317; R., § 258; C. '51, § 122.]

SEC. 454. Surplus of tax—disposition of. In case the amount produced by the rate of tax proposed and levied exceeds the amount sought for the specific object, it shall not therefore be held invalid, but the excess shall go into the ordinary county funds. [C. '73, § 318; R., § 259; C. '51, § 123.]

SEC. 455. Money specially appropriated. Money so raised for such purposes is specially appropriated, and constitutes a fund distinct from all others in the hands of the treasurer, until the obligation assumed is discharged. [C. '73, § 319; R., § 260; C. '51, § 124.]

SEC. 456. Unclaimed money placed in county fund. In any county of this state where any special levy has been made to pay any claim, bond or other indebtedness, and the same shall have remained in the treasury of the county, uncalled for, for a period of three years, the board of supervisors of such county may authorize such unclaimed fund to be transferred to the general county fund. [16 G. A., ch. 84.]

SEC. 457. Dogs to be assessed. It shall be the duty of every assessor of this state, at the time of listing the property of his district, to list each dog over three months of age in the name of the owner thereof, without affixing any value thereto. Any person keeping or harboring a dog or dogs shall be deemed the owner thereof within the meaning of this section, and it shall be the duty of each county auditor to provide suitable columns, properly headed, in the assessor's book, in which to make said lists. [22 G. A., ch. 70, §§ 1, 3.]

SEC. 458. Supervisors to tax. The board of supervisors of each county shall, at its September session, each year, when levying other taxes, levy a tax of fifty cents on each male, and two dollars on each female, dog listed by the assessor, which tax shall be paid into the general county fund. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 459. Treasurer to collect. The treasurer of each county, on receiving the tax books for the collection of other taxes, shall collect the tax herein provided for as other taxes are collected. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 460. Changing names of villages. The boards of supervisors may change the names of villages within their respective counties in the manner herein prescribed. [16 G. A., ch. 146, § 1.]

SEC. 461. Petition for. When any number of the inhabitants of any such village shall desire to change the name thereof, there shall be filed in the office of the county auditor of the proper county, at least ten days before the regular meeting of the board of supervisors, a petition for that purpose, which must be signed by at least two-thirds of the qualified electors of said village, setting forth the name by which the same is known, its location as near as practicable, and giving the name by which they desire it shall thereafter be known. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 462. Notice. Notice of the filing of said petition, and the time and place when the same shall be heard, and the objects and purposes thereof, shall be given at least four weeks before the regular meeting of the board of supervisors, in like manner as the publication of original notices in civil actions where the defendant can not be personally served within the state; or by posting up a notice of said petition in three public places in the village the name of which is sought to be changed, at least four weeks before the meeting of said board, and also one copy of said notice for the same length of time on the front door of the court-house of the proper county, wherein the last term of the district court was held. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 463. Hearing. At the first regular meeting of said board after publication of notice is completed, the board of supervisors shall proceed to hear and determine said petition, unless said hearing is for good cause continued until the next meeting; and said board, on the hearing of said petition, shall hear any remonstrances against the proposed change, and in all its proceedings in relation to the hearing of said petition and remonstrances to the same the said board shall be governed by the law regulating the hearing of petitions for the establishment of highways, so far as they are applicable and not inconsistent herewith. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 464. Order of board. If on the hearing it shall appear to the said board that two-thirds of the qualified electors of said village in good faith signed said petition for change of name, and desired the same, then the said board shall order said name to be changed as prayed for. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 465. When order takes effect—publication. Said order of the board shall thereupon be entered of record, giving the name of said village as set forth in said petition, the new name given, the time when the change shall take effect, which shall not be less than thirty days thereafter, and directing that notice of said change shall be published in at least one newspaper published in said county, if any; and if there is no newspaper published therein, then said notice shall be published by posting the same for four weeks on the front door of the court-house where the last term of the district court of said county was held. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 466. Proof preserved. The ordinary proof of such publication shall be filed in the office of the county auditor, shall be by him filed for preservation, and, on the day fixed by the board as aforesaid, the change shall be complete. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 467. Costs. In all cases arising under the provisions of the seven preceding sections, where there is no remonstrance or opposition to said petition, the petitioners shall pay all costs; but in all other cases costs shall abide the result of the proceeding, and be taxed to either party, in the discretion of the board, or divided equitably between the parties. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 468. Supplies for county officers. The board of supervisors shall furnish the clerk of the district court, sheriff, recorder, treasurer, auditor, county attorney and county superintendent with offices at the county seat, together with fuel, lights, blanks, books and stationery necessary and proper to enable them to discharge the duties of their respective offices; but in no case shall any of such officers, except the county attorney, be permitted to occupy an office also occupied by a practicing attorney. Nothing herein shall be construed to include the law books or library of the county attorney. [26 G. A., ch. 83; C. '73, § 3844.]

SEC. 469. Compensation of supervisors. The members of the board of supervisors shall receive four dollars per day each for each day actually in session, and two dollars and fifty cents per day, exclusive of mileage, when not in session, but employed on committee service, and five cents per mile for every mile traveled in going to and from the regular, special and adjourned sessions thereof, and in going to and from the place of performing committee service; but in counties having a population of ten thousand or less, they shall not receive compensation for session service of more than twenty days in a year; in counties having a population of more than ten and less than twenty-three thousand, for not more than thirty-five days of such service in a year; in counties having a population of twenty-three and not over forty thousand, for not more than forty days of such service in a year; and in counties having a population of forty thousand and over, not more than fifty days in a year. [21 G. A., ch. 15; 19 G. A., ch. 159; C. '73, § 3791.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE COUNTY AUDITOR.

SECTION 470. Duties defined. The county auditor shall:

1. Record all the proceedings of the board in proper books provided for that purpose;
2. Make full entries of all its resolutions and decisions on all questions concerning the raising of money, and for the payment of money from the county treasury;
3. Record the vote of each supervisor on any question submitted to the board, if required by any member present;
4. Sign all orders issued by the board for the payment of money, and record, in a book provided for the purpose, the reports of the county treasurer of the receipts and disbursements of the county;
5. Preserve and file all accounts acted upon by the board, with its action thereon, and perform such special duties as are or may be required of him by law;
6. Designate upon every account, on which any sum shall be allowed by the board, the amount so allowed, and the charges for which the same was allowed;
7. Deliver to any person who may demand it a certified copy of any record or account in his office, on payment of his legal fees therefor. [C. '73, § 320; R., §§ 319, 320.]

Mandamus may be brought to compel the proper officer to attach the county seal to a warrant drawn by him or his predecessor on the treasurer, to make it conform to the requirements of § 482. Such action will be barred under § 3447, ¶ 5, in three years from the issuance of the warrant, and not from the time demand was made to have the seal attached: Prescott v. Gonser, 34–175.

The county auditor not being authorized to receive money due on school fund notes, his sureties cannot be held for money paid to him in satisfaction of a judgment for such funds: Mahaska County v. Ruan, 45–328. [But now see § 473. But school fund money is still payable to the treasurer and not to the auditor: See § 2853.]

Sureties of the auditor are liable for overdrafts made by him from the treasury in the payment of his compensation. The auditor being authorized to sign orders, the treasurer is not in fault in paying them: Ibid.

Where a county auditor surrenders securities of the school fund in his hands under improper circumstances he becomes liable on his bond for damages resulting therefrom; and if no actual damages are shown he is at least liable for nominal damages: Madison County v. Tullis, 69–720.

In an action against a board of supervisors, service of notice cannot be made on the county auditor: Polk v. Foster, 71–26.

SEC. 471. Issuing warrants. The auditor shall not sign or issue any county warrant, except upon the recorded vote or resolution of the board of supervisors authorizing the same, except for jury fees, and every such warrant shall be numbered, and the date, amount and number of the same, and the name of the person to whom issued, shall be entered in a book to be kept by him in his office for the purpose. [C. '73, § 321; R., § 321.]

If a vote is legally passed authorizing the issuance of warrants, and the failure to record it is a mere clerical omission, such failure to record will not invalidate a warrant otherwise legally and properly issued: Clark v. Polk County, 19–248; Long v. Boone County, 36–60, 66.

The auditor has no authority to issue a county warrant except upon the recorded vote or resolution of the board, save in case of jury fees. Therefore a warrant issued by the auditor under an order of the district court to reimburse a property owner for erroneous taxes collected is not valid: Polk County v. Sherman, 68 N. W. 562

As no recorded vote is necessary to authorize the issuance of warrants for jury fees, held, that the fact that no vote authorizing certain warrants appeared of record did not necessarily render such warrants invalid: Clark v. Polk County, 19–248.

County warrants are not negotiable instruments: Ibid.

This section is directory and not mandatory, and a warrant issued where there is no recorded vote is not on that account void: Griggs v. Kimball, 42–512.

Where a warrant is issued by the proper officers to a contractor for work done under an unauthorized contract, and the warrant is paid, the county cannot recover back the amount thus paid: Long v. Boone County, 36–60.

SEC. 472. Duty as to school fund. Whenever the auditor of any county shall receive from the state auditor notice of the apportionment of school moneys to be distributed in the county, he shall file the same in his office, and transmit a certified copy thereof to the county treasurer, and he shall also lay a certified copy thereof before the board at its next regular meeting. [C. '73, § 322; R., § 322.]

SEC. 473. Custody of court-house—collection of moneys. The county auditor shall have the general custody and control of the court-house in each county, respectively, subject to the direction of the board of supervisors. The county auditor is hereby authorized to collect and receive all money due their respective counties, except when otherwise provided by law, and shall be responsible for all public funds received or collected by them. [26 G. A., ch. 100; C. '73, § 323.]

SEC. 474. Report list of county officers to secretary of state. The county auditor shall report to the secretary of state the name, office and term of office of every county officer elected or appointed, within ten days after their election and qualification, and the secretary of state shall record the same in a book to be kept for that purpose in his office. [C. '73, § 324; R., § 291.]

SEC. 475. Statistics of crime to clerk of court. The county auditor snall report to the clerk of the district court, before the fifteenth day of October in each year, the expense of the county for criminal prosecutions during the year ending the thirtieth day of September preceding, including, but distinguishing, the compensation of county attorneys. [18 G. A., ch. 22, § 2.]

SEC. 476. Clerk or recorder may be auditor. The clerk of the district court and county recorder shall each be eligible to the office of county auditor, and may discharge the duties of both offices. [C. '73, § 325.]

SEC. 477. Treasurer may not be. The offices of county auditor and county treasurer shall not be united in the same person. [C. '73, § 326.]

SEC. 478. Fees to be collected. The county auditor shall be entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

1. For recording each bond required to be by him recorded, fifty cents;
2. For transfers made in the transfer books, for each deed, or transfer of title certified by clerks of district courts, twenty-five cents;
3. For issuing certificate of redemption of land sold for taxes, twenty-five cents;
4. For each certificate issued by the treasurer for lands sold for non-payment of taxes, fifteen cents. [C. '73, § 3797; R., § 777.]

SEC. 479. Compensation. The total compensation of the auditor in any one year shall not exceed the sum of twelve hundred dollars, inclusive of fees; but, in counties having more than twenty-five thousand population, the board may grant such additional compensation to the auditor, deputy or clerks as it may deem reasonable. [18 G. A., ch. 184, § 3; C. '73, § 3798.]

Under prior provisions, held, that the allowance to a county auditor as here authorized was not the same as that authorized to be made to a deputy (see § 481): State v. Van Auken, 68 N. W., 454.

Where a county auditor during one term received, by reason of the action of the board, a certain amount, with the stipulation that the fees of the office should be applied thereon; and upon re-election applied for increase of salary and was allowed a smaller sum, nothing being said as to fees, held, that under the latter allowance he was entitled to the fees in addition to the salary allowed: Madison County v. Holliday, 43–251.

SEC. 480. Record and report of fees collected. It is hereby made the duty of the county auditor, in each county of the state, to keep a complete and accurate account of all the fees charged and collected by him, as now provided by law; which account shall be made and kept as a permanent record of the office, and he shall make a report of such fees to the board of supervisors of his county at each regular session thereof, verified by his oath or affirmation, a summary of which report shall be spread upon the minutes of said board and made a part of its record. [18 G. A., ch. 184, § 5.]

SEC. 481. Deputy—qualifications—compensation—other assistants. Each county auditor may, in writing, with the consent of the board of supervisors, appoint one or more deputies not holding a county office, for whose acts he shall be responsible, and from whom he shall require bond, which bond shall be approved by the officer who has the approval of the principal's bond, and such appointment may be revoked in writing; which appointment and revocation shall be filed and kept in the auditor's office. The person thus appointed shall qualify by taking the same oath as his principal, indorsed upon the certificate of appointment. The deputy, in the absence or disability of his principal, may perform all the duties of the principal pertaining to his office, and each deputy shall receive a salary not exceeding nine hundred dollars a year, to be fixed by the board of supervisors. In case no deputy shall be appointed, but on account of the pressure of business in his office the auditor is compelled temporarily to employ an assistant, he shall file the bill for such service at their next regular meeting, and the board of supervisors shall make a reasonable allowance therefor. [18 G. A., ch. 184, § 3; 16 G. A., ch. 4; C. '73, §§ 766–8, 770–1, 3798; R., §§ 421, 643–5, 647–8; C. '51, §§ 411, 414, 416, 417.]

Where an officer accepts his position with a knowledge of the work to be done and the remuneration promised, while he may employ assistants, he cannot recover compensation for them: Benton v. Decatur County, 36–504.

The county is under no legal obligation to reimburse the county auditor an amount paid out by him for services of a deputy: Ibid.

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE COUNTY TREASURER.

SECTION 482. Duties in general. The treasurer shall receive all money payable to the county, and disburse the same on warrants drawn and signed by the county auditor and sealed with the county seal, and not otherwise, and shall keep a true account of all receipts and disbursements, and hold the same at all times ready for the inspection of the board of supervisors. [C. '73, § 327; R., § 360; C. '51, § 152.]

Liability: The county treasurer is only held to a reasonable degree of care and diligence, and if, notwithstanding such care, moneys of the county are stolen from him, he is not liable: Ross v. Hatch, 5–149.

Where a county treasurer, without authority, deposited public money in a bank which subsequently failed, held, that this constituted an unlawful disposal of the public funds for which he was liable on his bond: Lowry v. Polk County, 51–50.

Where under the statutory provision authorizing the deposit of public money in a bank to be selected for that purpose, upon the giving of bond by such bank (see § 1457) if the bond is given and allowed to remain outstanding it constitutes security, not merely for the first deposit, but for other deposits which may subsequently be made: Poor v. Merrill, 68–436.

Demand upon the person in charge of the bank where the deposit is made is sufficient to constitute a breach of the bond in case of non-payment of the funds: Ibid.

Where a certificate of deposit is issued for the repayment of the deposit when it is returned, but no objection to the payment of the money is made on the ground of the failure to return such certificate, the fact that it is not returned will not defeat the right to recover, it being afterwards surrendered: Ibid.

One who has wrongfully borrowed county funds of the treasurer and repaid them, cannot be held liable to the county: Marshall County v. Baum, 53–528.

Where a county treasurer had made use of county funds in a partnership business, but it did not appear that such illegal use was known to his partner, or that all the funds so used had not been paid back, held, that the county could not establish a trust in lands held in the name of such partner: Ibid.

Where it was claimed that a treasurer had represented to the board of supervisors that a certain portion of the general school fund had been paid to the district township entitled to it, and by such representation had obtained credit for the amount, which had not in fact, been paid, in an action upon the treasurer's bond to recover the amonnt, held, that if the money were in the treasury, a warrant duly countersigned would be essential to entitle plaintiff to recover it from the treasurer, but it was not essential to a recovery from one who had obtained it by such false representations: District Township v. Espeset, 75–500.

In an action to recover money belonging to the county, which had been fraudulently obtained from the treasurer of the county by defendant and converted to his own use, held, that the remedy upon the treasurer's bond was not exclusive and that suit was properly brought against defendant: Taylor County v. Standley, 79–666.

Under the provisions of previous statutes, held, that as to the state revenue the county treasurer was required to account to the auditor of state, and could not by a settlement with the county authorities defeat an action for deficiency of state funds unaccounted for by him: Ford v. Jefferson County 4 G. Gr., 273; Jefferson County v. Ford, 4 G. Gr., 367.

Where the treasurer failed to cancel warrants redeemed by him as required by law, and they were stolen, without fault on his part, and again put in circulation, and paid, held, that there was such neglect of duty as to render him liable: Johnson County v. Hughes, 12–360.

A county treasurer having paid over to the treasurer of a school district taxes belonging to such district without a warrant signed by the president and countersigned by the secretary as required by law, and the treasurer of the district having failed to account for all the money so paid over, held, that the directors of the district must, under the circumstances, have known that such money came into the hands of their treasurer, and might have protected themselves by requiring from him a sufficient bond; that the irregular payment by the county treasurer was not the proximate cause of the loss, and he was not liable therefor: District T'p v. Bowman, 55–129.

Where the county treasurer collected taxes voted in aid of a railroad and neither paid them to the railroad company nor to his successor in office, and his bond was conditioned that he should "promptly pay over to the person or officer entitled thereto all money that shall come into his hands by virtue of said office," held, that the railroad company was the proper party to bring an action on the bond: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. R. Co. v. Cowan, 77–535.

A railroad company entitled to the proceeds of a tax paid into the treasury may recover the amount thereof on the bond of the treasurer to whom the money is paid. The company cannot maintain mandamus against the successor of such treasurer who has never received the money collected: Ibid.

As to bond of county treasurer and his liability thereon, see § 1183, and notes.

Warrants: A warrant to which the county seal is not affixed is not valid. The county may be liable on the indebtedness for which such warrant was issued, but not on the warrant: Springer v. Clay County, 35–241. As to compelling auditor to affix the seal in a proper case, see note to § 470.

A county treasurer, in taking up and canceling warrants, is a servant of the county; and, although he issues a new warrant for an excess of warrants presented in payment of indebtedness to the county, instead of a certificate of overplus as provided by law, a recovery of such overplus may be had as against the county: Barney v. Buena Vista County, 33–261.

Collection of taxes: A special tax for, and in aid of, a railway company is not payable to the county; and where the tax payer becomes entitled to have it refunded the treasurer may refund it so far as the proceeds of such tax are in his hands, without a warrant from the auditor: Barnes v. Marshall County, 56–20.

Taxes paid without objection by the tax payer, and received by the treasurer under color and by virtue of his official authority, must be accounted for by him. Irregularities or illegalities in the assessment and collection of taxes will not constitute a defense in an action, on his part, for taxes actually received: Mahaska County v. Ingalls, 14–170.

The treasurer, and not the auditor, should receive money belonging to the school fund: Mahaska County v. Searle, 44–492; Mahaska County v. Ruan, 45–328. See § 2853.

The county is not liable for wrongful acts of the treasurer in wilfully, and without authority, collecting taxes in excess of the sum due, where it has not subsequently approved the act or been benefited thereby: Estep v. Keokuk County, 18–199.

SEC. 483. As to warrants presented but not paid. When a warrant drawn by the auditor on the treasurer is presented for payment, and not paid for want of money, the treasurer shall indorse thereon a note of that fact and the date of presentation; and sign it, and thenceforth it shall draw interest at the rate of six per cent. He shall keep a record of the number and amount of the warrants presented and indorsed for non-payment, which shall be paid in the order of such presentation. [21 G. A., ch. 84, § 1; C. '73, § 328; R., § 361; C. '51, § 153.]

Under prior provisions held, that a county could not stop interest on outstanding warrants by notice that it was ready to redeem the same. Nothing short of actual tender was sufficient for that purpose: Roony v. Dubuque County, 44–128. But see now the provision in the next section.

Judgment may be rendered against a county upon a county order or warrant drawn upon the county treasurer: Steel v. Davis County, 2 G. Gr., 469.

Where a warrant is issued, payable out of a special fund, and the county has ample power to provide such fund for the payment of the warrant, a general judgment against the county upon such warrant may be rendered. Demand on the board of supervisors to levy a tax to pay the warrant is not necessary: Mills County Nat. Bank v. Mills County, 67–697.

It seems, however, that in such case the creditor, after obtaining judgment on the warrant, could not, by mandamus compel the treasurer to pay his judgment out of the general fund, a method of raising the amount for the payment of claims against the special fund being provided by statute: Ibid.

A warrant drawn, payable "out of any money in the county treasury not otherwise appropriated," is a general warrant payable unconditionally, and action may be brought thereon without proof that there is any money in the treasury subject to such warrant. (Overruling Brown v. Johnson County, 1 G. Gr., 486): Campbell v. Polk County, 3–467.

SEC. 484. Calls for outstanding warrants—interest stopped. He shall issue calls for outstanding warrants at any time he may have sufficient funds on hand for which such warrants were issued; shall give notice to what number of warrants the funds will extend, or the number which will be paid, by posting a written notice in the treasurer's office, and, at the expiration of thirty days from the date of such posting, interest on the warrants so named shall cease; and, when a warrant which draws interest is taken up, he shall indorse upon it the date and amount of interest allowed, and such warrant shall be canceled and not reissued. [21 G. A., ch. 84, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 103, §§ 1, 2; C. '73, § 328; R., § 361; C. '51, § 153.]

SEC. 485. Warrants partially paid—certificate for balance. When a person wishing to make a payment into the treasury presents a warrant of an amount greater than such payment, or presents for payment a warrant in excess of the funds in the treasury, the treasurer shall cancel the same and give the holder a certificate of the overplus, upon the presentation of which to the county auditor he shall file it, and issue a new warrant of that amount, and charge the treasurer therewith; and such certificate is transferable by delivery, and will entitle the holder to the new warrant, payable to his order, and containing reference to the original warrant. [C. '73, § 329; R., §§ 362, 755; C. '51, §§ 154, 490.]

Where the treasurer failed to cancel warrants as here provided, and they were stolen without fault on his part, and again put in circulation and paid, held, that there was such neglect of duty as to render him liable: Johnson County v. Hughes, 12–360.

Where the treasurer issued what purported to be warrants instead of certificates for such overplus as here provided, such instruments were held invalid: Barney v. Buena Vista County, 33–261.

SEC. 486. Warrant book to be kept. The treasurer shall keep a record of all warrants drawn on him by the auditor and presented, in a book so ruled as to show in separate columns, as to each warrant, the number, date, principal, name of drawee, when paid, to whom paid, and amount of interest paid. [C. '73, § 330; R., § 363; C. '51, § 155.]

SEC. 487. Separate account of each fund. The treasurer shall keep a separate account of the several taxes for state, county, school, highway, and all other funds created by law, opening an account between himself and each of those funds, charging himself with the amount of the tax, and crediting himself with the amounts paid on each, and with the amount of delinquent taxes, when authorized so to do. [C. '73, § 331; R., § 364; C. '51, § 156.]

SEC. 488. Duty upon canceling warrants. The warrants returned by the treasurer shall be compared with the warrant book, and the word "canceled" be written over the minute of the proper numbers in the warrant book, and the original warrant be preserved for at least two years, and he shall make weekly returns to the auditor of the number, date, drawee's name, when paid, to whom paid, original amount, and interest. [C. '73, §§ 332–3; R., §§ 365–6; C. '51, §§ 159, 160.]

SEC. 489. Separate account for each official term. A person re-elected to, or holding over, the office of treasurer shall keep separate accounts for each term of his office. [C. '73, § 334; R., § 367; C. '51, § 161.]

SEC. 490. Compensation. Each county treasurer shall receive for his services the following compensation:

1. Three-fourths of one per cent. of all money collected by him as taxes due any city or town, to be paid out of the same;
2. Three per cent. of all taxes collected by him for all other tax funds, to be paid out of the county treasury;
3. For each certificate of purchase issued for lands sold for non-payment of taxes, twenty cents;
4. For paying money into the state treasury, when required by law or the auditor of state, such compensation as the board of supervisors shall allow, not exceeding one-fourth of one per cent. on the amount so paid, which allowance shall be paid by the county;
5. When the aggregate amount of compensation allowed exceeds fifteen hundred dollars in any year, the excess shall be paid into the county treasury; but in counties where the population does not exceed ten thousand, the salary shall not exceed thirteen hundred dollars, and in such counties there shall not be allowed for deputy or clerk hire more than the amount provided in the next section. [18 G. A., ch. 184, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 122, § 3; C. '73, § 3793; R., § 777.]

Allowance of payment of other or greater compensation to a treasurer than that fixed by law for his services is unauthorized and void: Adams County v. Hunter, 78-328.

An attempt of the board of supervisors to make an allowance to the treasurer greater than authorized by statute cannot be construed into an allowance to the extent to which an allowance is authorized: Griffin v. Clay County, 63-413.

While in making up the amount of the treasurer's compensation the three per cent. of taxes collected is to be computed on all tax funds, including railroad aid taxes, yet this section does not authorize the deduction from such taxes of such per cent. for collection: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74-24.

Where the county treasurer deducted a larger per cent. of the taxes collected for the city than he was entitled to retain, under the existing statute, held, that the city by accepting such erroneous payment was not estopped from recovering the balance even though such balance had by the county been expended in the usual course of affairs: Iowa City v. Johnson County, 61 N. W., 995. (But on rehearing the appeal was dismissed for want of notice: S. C., 68 N. W., 815.)

SEC. 491. Deputies—qualification—compensation—other assistants. Each county treasurer may, in writing, with the consent of the board of supervisors, appoint any one not holding a county office his deputy, for whose acts he shall be responsible, and from whom he shall require bond, which bond shall be approved by the officer who has the approval of the principal's bond, and such appointment may be revoked in writing; which appointment and revocation shall be filed and kept in the auditor's office. The person thus appointed shall qualify by taking the same oath as his principal, indorsed upon the certificate of appointment. The deputy, in the absence or disability of his principal, may perform all the duties of the principal pertaining to his office, and shall receive a salary not exceeding nine hundred dollars a year, to be fixed by the board of supervisors. In case no deputy shall be appointed, but, on account of the pressure of business in his office, the treasurer is compelled temporarily to employ an assistant, he shall file the bill for such service at their next regular meeting, and the board of supervisors shall make a reasonable allowance therefor. In counties where the population does not exceed ten thousand, the board shall not allow to exceed three hundred dollars for deputy or clerk hire, and in counties having a population of more than thirty thousand, it may allow such sum in addition to the salary above fixed, or for clerk hire, as may be proper. [18 G. A., ch. 184, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 122, § 3; 16 G. A., ch. 4; C. '73, §§ 766–8, 770–1, 3793; R., §§ 421, 643–5, 647–8; C. '51, §§ 411, 414, 416, 417.]

The deputy county treasurer has, prima facie, authority to sign the name of his principal to a certificate of redemption from tax sale: Byington v. Allen, 11-3.

Under former provision as to deputy and assistants, held, that the allowance to the deputy might be fixed, at the time he was appointed, in the form of a stipulated salary, and in such case the amount fixed would limit the recovery; but where no allowance was fixed the county must pay a reasonable compensation for the necessary services rendered, and the payment was not left discretionary: Bradley v. Jefferson County, 4 G. Gr., 300; Harvey v. Tama County, 46–522; Washington County v. Jones, 45–260, 265, and see Harris v. Chickasaw County, 77-345. But a deputy employed merely for the personal accommodation of the officer cannot recover compensation from the county: Harvey v. Tama County, 46–522.

The officer himself cannot recover against the county for money paid as compensation for a deputy. The county is liable to the deputy and not to the principal: Mahaska County v. Ingalls, 14–170.

Where a deputy treasurer and bookkeeper was employed by the board of supervisors, held, that for defalcation of such officer, without fault on the part of the treasurer, the latter was not liable: Scott County v. Fluke, 34–317.

SEC. 492. Fees to be reported and paid to county. He shall enter in a book kept for that purpose all moneys received by him for services rendered, designating for what service the same was received, and shall render an account, verified by affidavit, to the board of supervisors at each session thereof, stating fully all money so received and from what source; and any excess to which he would be entitled under the preceding section, over and above the sum therein limited, shall be paid into the county treasury. [C. '73, § 3796.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF THE COUNTY RECORDER.

SECTION 493. Who eligible. In counties with a population of ten thousand or less, the same person may hold the office of county recorder and treasurer, and no person shall be disqualified on account of sex from holding the office of recorder. [18 G. A., ch. 40; C. '73, § 336.]

SEC. 494. Office—duties. The recorder shall keep his office at the county seat, and shall record at length, and as speedily as possible, all instruments in writing which may be delivered to him for record, in the manner directed by law. [C. '73, § 335; R., § 358; C. '51, § 150.]

SEC. 495. Fees to be reported and paid to county—compensation. The recorder shall report quarterly, under oath, to the board of supervisors, on blanks furnished by the auditor, all fees collected by him, and certify under oath that he has collected all fees for recording instruments provided by law; shall make annual settlement with the board of supervisors on the first Monday in January of each year, and pay into the county treasury all fees received by him in excess of twelve hundred dollars per annum in counties having a population of less than twenty-five thousand, and fifteen hundred dollars per annum in counties having a population over twenty-five thousand. [25 G. A., ch. 76, § 1.]

SEC. 496. Deputies—qualification—compensation—other assistants. Each county recorder may, in writing, with the consent of the board of supervisors, appoint any one not holding a county office his deputy, for whose acts he shall be responsible, and from whom he shall require bond, which bond shall be approved by the officer who has the approval of the principal's bond, and such appointment may be revoked in writing; which appointment and revocation shall be filed and kept in the auditor's office. The person thus appointed shall qualify by taking the same oath as his principal, indorsed upon the certificate of appointment. The deputy, in the absence or disability of his principal, may perform all the duties of the principal pertaining to his office, and shall receive a salary not exceeding nine hundred dollars a year, to be fixed by the board of supervisors. In case no deputy shall be appointed, but, on account of the pressure of business in his office, the recorder is compelled temporarily to employ an assistant, he shall file the bill for such service at their next regular meeting, and the board of supervisors shall make a reasonable allowance therefor. But the county shall not pay for such deputy service more than is received from the fees of said office, over and above the amount the recorder is allowed to retain. [Same, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 122, § 3; 16 G. A., ch. 4; C.'73, §§ 766–8, 770–1; R., §§ 421, 463–5, 467–8; C.'51, §§ 411, 414, 416, 417.]

SEC. 497. Vacancy—how filled. In case of vacancy occurring in the office of recorder, by death or otherwise, the auditor shall discharge the duties pertaining to said office until such vacancy is filled by appointment by the board of supervisors. [23 G. A., ch. 49.]

SEC. 498. Fees to be collected. The recorder shall be entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

1. For recording each instrument containing four hundred words or less, fifty cents;

2. For every additional hundred words or fraction thereof, ten cents. [C.'73, § 3792; R., § 4143; C.'51, § 2534.]

CHAPTER 6.

OF THE SHERIFF.

SECTION 499. Duties in general. The sheriff shall, by himself or deputy, execute and return all writs and other legal process issued by lawful authority, to him directed, and perform such other duties as may be required of him by law. [C.'73, § 337; R., § 383; C.'51, § 170.]

Liability of: A sheriff who seizes property beyond the limits of his own county is a wrong-doer, and is liable to the owner and possessor in an action for trespass: Parmlee v. Leonard, 9–131.

A sheriff who commits a trespass by taking goods illegally is liable after going out of office, though his successor sells the same and receives the money: Duke v. Vincent, 29–308.

Failure to make return of execution, etc., as required by § 3964 renders the sheriff liable for damages only when such failure has resulted in injury to the plaintiff: Musser v. Maynard, 55–197.

A sheriff is not liable in damages for failure to levy execution upon property in defendant's hands if he uses ordinary skill and diligence in the discharge of his duties: Crosby v. Hungerford, 59–712.

Deputy sheriff: The sheriff is responsible for the acts of his deputy, and action upon the sheriff's bond, and not upon the bond of the deputy, is the proper remedy in case of neglect or failure of the deputy to pay over to the person entitled thereto money collected by him: Brayton v. Town, 12–346.

In executing process the deputy sheriff acts for the sheriff, and the latter is responsible for whatever is done: Headington v. Langland, 65–276.

Therefore the sheriff is liable under his bond for the wrongful act of the deputy in making a levy: Ibid.

In case of vacancy in the office of sheriff caused by his suspension, the duties of the office do not devolve upon his deputy, but the vacancy is to be filled by the board of supervisors under § 1224: McCue v. Circuit Court, 51–60.

Resisting sheriff: A receiver directed to take possession of property may call upon the sheriff to prevent the commission of the crime of resisting the execution of such order on the part of the person in possession of the property: State v. Rivers, 66–653.

Suspension: When a sheriff is suspended from office by order of court, and the district attorney is directed to file a petition for his removal (§§ 1256, 1257), such suspension will continue after the term although there may not be time to file the petition and serve the notice before the adjournment of the term: McCue v. Circuit Court, 51–60.

SEC. 500. Disobedience punished. His disobedience of the command of any such process is a contempt of the court from which it issued, and may be punished by the same accordingly, and he is further liable to the action of any person injured thereby. [C. '73, § 338; R., § 384; C. '51, § 171.]

SEC. 501. Duty as to jail and prisoners. He has the charge and custody of the jail or other prison of his county, and of the prisoners in the same, and shall receive those lawfully committed, and keep them himself, or by his deputy or jailer, until discharged by law. [C. '73, § 339; R., § 385; C. '51, § 172.]

SEC. 502. Power to summon aid. The sheriff and his deputies are conservators of the peace, and, to keep the same, or to prevent crime, or to arrest any person liable thereto, or to execute process of law, may call any person to their aid, and, when necessary, the sheriff may summon the power of the county. [C. '73, § 340; R., § 386; C. '51, § 173.]

SEC. 503. Bailiffs—appointment—duties. The sheriff shall attend upon the district court of his county, and while it remains in session he shall be allowed the assistance of such number of bailiffs as the judge may direct. They shall be appointed by the sheriff and shall be regarded as deputy sheriffs, for whose acts the sheriff shall be responsible. [C. '73, § 341; R., § 387; C. '51, § 174.]

The bailiffs here provided for are entitled to compensation from the county, which shall be reasonable in amount: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41–554, 561; and such bailiffs may serve a precept for a jury: State v. Arthur, 39–631.

SEC. 504. Execution of process after expiration of term. Sheriffs and their deputies may execute any process which may be in their hands at the expiration of their office, and, in case of a vacancy occurring in the office of sheriff from any cause, his deputies shall be under the same obligation to execute legal process then in his or their hands, and to return the same, as if the sheriff had continued in office, and he and they will remain liable therefor under the provisions of law, as in other cases. [C. '73, § 344; R., § 390; C. '51, § 177.]

SEC. 505. Must deliver to successor. When a sheriff goes out of office, he shall deliver to his successor all books and papers pertaining to the office, and property attached and levied upon, except as provided in the preceding section, and all prisoners in the jail, and take his receipt specifying the same, and such receipt shall be sufficient indemnity to the person taking it. [C. '73, § 345; R., § 391; C. '51, § 178.]

This section is directory only, and if the attached property, etc., be actually delivered to the incoming sheriff he would become responsible therefor, and the outgoing officer would be discharged, although no receipt was given: McKay v. Thorington, 15–25; McKay v. Leonard, 17–569.

An offer on the part of the outgoing sheriff to deliver attached property to the incoming one, and a waiver of delivery by the latter, discharges the former from further responsibility for the safe keeping of the property: Fockler v. Martin, 32–117.

SEC. 506. Successor may complete execution of process. If the sheriff die or go out of office before the return of any process then in his hands, his successor, or other officer authorized to discharge the duties of the office, may proceed to execute and return the same in the same manner as the outgoing sheriff should have done; but nothing in this section shall be construed to exempt the outgoing sheriff and his deputies from the duty imposed on them to execute and return all process in their hands at the time the vacancy in the office of sheriff occurs. [C. '73, § 346; R., § 3264.]

SEC. 507. New process to new sheriff. On the election or appointment of a new sheriff, all new process shall be directed to him. [C. '73, § 347; R., § 392; C. '51, § 179.]

SEC. 508. Fees to be reported and paid to county. Quarterly itemized reports under oath, upon blanks to be furnished by the county auditor, shall be made to the board of supervisors by the sheriff, of all fees and mileage charged or taxed, and all that are collected by him and his deputies, including all sums for which the county is liable, except for dieting prisoners; and at the time of making such quarterly reports he shall make full settlement with said board, filing therewith the receipts of the county treasurer for all moneys paid over to him. [25 G. A., ch. 75, § 1.]

SEC. 509. Compensation. Sheriffs shall receive yearly, in full compensation for all services, except the expenses hereinafter provided for, in counties having a population of more than twenty-eight thousand and less than forty-five thousand, two thousand dollars, and in counties having a population in excess of forty-five thousand, twenty-five hundred dollars; said sums to be paid out of the receipts of the office, and any excess over said sums shall be paid into the county treasury quarterly. If the receipts of the office shall not equal the amounts herein provided, then the sheriff shall receive only such sum as shall be collected for services rendered in that year, and, in either case, all expenses incurred and actually paid while necessarily engaged in the performance of official duties in serving criminal process, shall be allowed by the board of supervisors and paid as other claims against the county; and in all civil matters, he shall be allowed to retain the regular mileage collected by him. In counties having a less population than twenty-eight thousand, the sheriff shall have the fees of his office, out of which he shall pay his deputies, if any; but in no case shall any sheriff, in counties of less population than twenty-eight thousand, receive as fees, after paying his deputies, to exceed the sum of two thousand dollars. All other fees collected by him shall be paid into the county treasury. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 510. Deputies—qualification—compensation. Each sheriff may in writing appoint one or more persons, not holding a county office, his deputy or deputies, for whose acts he shall be responsible, and from whom he shall require bond, which appointment and bond shall be approved by the officer who has the approval of the principal's bond, and such appointment may be revoked in writing; which appointment or revocation shall be filed and kept in the auditor's office. In all counties having over twenty-eight thousand population, the board may fix the number of such deputies, and their salaries at not exceeding one thousand dollars per annum each, but the total compensation of the sheriff and such deputies shall in no case exceed the receipts of the office. [Same, § 3; 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 122, § 3; 16 G. A., ch. 4; C. '73, §§ 766–771; R., §§ 421, 643–8; C. '51, §§ 411–417.]

The official acts of the deputy sheriff are in law the acts of his principal, and the interest which will prevent the principal from acting will disqualify his deputy: Gollobitsch v. Rainbow, 84–567.

The sheriff is not bound by service of notice of ownership of property which is accepted by his deputy, acceptance of service not being an official act: Chapin v. Pinkerton, 58–236.

The sheriff is responsible for acts of his deputy, and when the latter collects money on execution and fails to pay it over to the party entitled thereto, an action should be brought against the sheriff himself. The bond of the deputy is for the protection of his principal: Brayton v. Town, 12–346.

The deputy sheriff has no original power, but acts simply as a representative of the sheriff, who is his principal, and who is responsible for the manner in which he performs the duty assigned to him: Headington v. Langland, 65–276.

The suspension from office of a sheriff, as provided in § 1256, is not such disability on his part as will authorize the deputy to act in his place. In such case his duties are to be performed by the person appointed (see § 1257): McCue v. Circuit Court, etc., 51–60.

Where acts required by law to be performed by certain officers are not performed by them, but by unauthorized persons, it is as if such acts were not done at all. So held in regard to the action of a deputy sheriff in connection with the selection of the grand jury, the statute at that time in force providing for the performance of such acts by the sheriff only: State v. Brant, 41–593.

SEC. 511. Fees to be collected. Each sheriff is entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

1. For attending the supreme court, to be paid out of the amount appropriated for contingent expenses of said court, two dollars per day;
2. For serving a notice and making return thereof, for the first person served, fifty cents, and for each additional person, twenty-five cents;
3. For each warrant served, two dollars, and the repayment of any amount actually paid by him as necessary expenses in executing such warrant, as sworn to by the sheriff; if service of the warrant cannot be made, the repayment of all necessary expenses actually paid by the sheriff, while attempting in good faith to serve such warrant within this state, and such reasonable compensation as the board of supervisors may deem just and equitable;
4. For serving and returning a subpœna, for each person served, twenty cents;
5. For summoning a grand or trial jury, for each person served, sixty cents, to be paid out of the county treasury; and such sum shall be in full compensation for such service;
6. For summoning a jury to assess the damages to the owners of lands taken for public improvements, and attending them, five dollars per day. This paragraph shall not be so construed as to allow a sheriff to make separate charges for different assessments, which can be made by the same jury and completed in one day of ten hours;
7. For serving an execution, attachment, or order for the delivery of personal property, injunction, or any order of court, and making return thereof, two dollars;
8. For collecting and paying over money, on the first five hundred dollars or fraction thereof, two per cent.; on all in excess of five hundred dollars and under five thousand dollars, one per cent.; on all over five thousand dollars, one-half per cent.;
9. For making and executing a certificate or deed for lands sold on execution, or a bill of sale for personal property sold, one dollar;
10. For the time necessarily employed in making an inventory of personal property attached or levied upon, twenty-five cents per hour;
11. For a copy of any paper required by law, made by him, for each one hundred words, ten cents;
12. Mileage in all cases required by law, going and returning, five cents per mile;
13. For taking each bond required by law, twenty-five cents;
14. For each commitment to jail, twenty-five cents; discharge from same, twenty-five cents;
15. For receiving a prisoner on surrender by bail, fifty cents;
16. For boarding a prisoner, a compensation of twelve and one-half cents for each meal, and not to exceed three meals in twenty-four consecutive hours; and twelve and one-half cents for each night's lodging;
17. For waiting on and washing for prisoners, the sheriff shall have such reasonable compensation as shall be allowed by the board of supervisors;
18. For attending before any judge with a prisoner, one dollar per day;
19. For attending sale of property, for each day, one dollar;
20. For conveying one or more convicts to either of the penitentiaries of the state, or any prisoner to any county jail outside of the county in which said sheriff resides, or any insane person or persons to any insane asylum in the state, or person or persons to either of the industrial schools, he shall be allowed, as full compensation therefor, his necessary traveling expenses actually paid by him, including board and railroad fare for himself and such person or persons, or any other necessary expenses, and, in addition thereto, forty cents per hour for the time necessarily employed in going to and from said prisons, asylums, or schools, to be certified by the affidavit of such sheriff, accompanied by the proper vouchers, to the board of supervisors of the county from which the persons were committed.

Should the sheriff need any assistance in taking prisoners to the penitentiary or insane persons to the asylum, the same shall be furnished at the expense of the county, the compensation to be fixed by the board of supervisors;

21. He shall be allowed for serving any warrant for the seizure of intoxicating liquors, one dollar; for the removal and custody of such liquor, actual and reasonable expenses; for the destruction of such liquor under the order of the court, his actual and reasonable expenses, and one dollar; for posting and leaving notices in such cases, one dollar;

22. The jailer may be furnished a dwelling in connection with the jail, or as convenient thereto as practicable, in the discretion of the board of supervisors;

23. The sheriff is also entitled, for attending the district court, and for other service for which no compensation is allowed by law, except in counties having a population of over twenty-eight thousand, an annual salary, which shall be fixed by the board of supervisors, but in no case less than two hundred dollars nor more than four hundred dollars. When sheriffs perform official duties in justices' courts, their fees shall be the same as allowed constables. [25 G. A., ch. 83; 23 G. A., ch. 41; 19 G. A., ch. 94, §§ 2–23; C. '73, § 3807; R., § 1570.]

In general: Where the compensation of the sheriff is fees, he cannot claim a quantum meruit for his services: Wapello County v. Monroe County, 39–349.

These fees, together with the salary provided, are in full of all services, and held that the sheriff could not make extra charge for guarding and waiting on prisoners: Grubb v. Louisa County, 40–314; but under present statute see Hamill v. Carroll county, 69 N.W., 1122.

The provisions as to various items of charge considered: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41–554.

Jury to assess damages: The sheriff is allowed but one fee for summoning a jury to assess the damages to owners of land taken for works of internal improvement. He may not claim a separate fee for each tract when only one jury is summoned: Robb v. Albia, K. & D. M. R. Co., 44-440.

Warrant of arrest: Where two or more defendants are jointly indicted, they may be arrested on a joint warrant or several warrants, and the sheriff's fee will be for serving one warrant or several, as the case may be: State v. Hunter, 33–361.

Serving warrant: Under previous statutes it was held that the provision as to serving warrant for seizure of intoxicating liquor was superseded by a statute providing among other services for the service of a warrant in general: Painter v. Polk County, 70–596.

Attending with prisoner: The sheriff is not entitled to compensation for attending the court with the prisoner, but only for such attendance before the judge not at a regular term of court: Ibid.

But where payments of fees had been made by the county to the sheriff prior to the decision that such charges were not lawful, held, that the payment was voluntary and the county could not recover the money paid: Painter v. Polk County, 81–242.

Notices: Where a person not an officer serves notices, etc., his charges cannot be taxed as costs: Conway v. McGregor & M. R. R. Co., 43–32.

Sheriff's sale: As to sheriff's fee in case of purchase of property by plaintiff in execution, see Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 42–495.

Under other provisions, held, that the sheriff was entitled to a percentage upon the amount of a sheriff's sale of real estate, where the judgment plaintiff was purchaser and the amount of the bid was not paid to the sheriff but credited on the judgment: Litchfield v. Ashford, 70–393.

Keeping jail: The sheriff has charge of the county jail and is required to perform the duties of jailer. He may appoint a deputy to act in such capacity; but such jailer cannot recover compensation from the county: McDonald v. Woodbury County, 48–404.

Waiting on prisoners: The sheriff is entitled to a reasonable compensation, outside of his salary, for washing for and waiting on prisoners: Hamill v. Carroll County, 69 N.W., 1122.

Keeping attached property: The sheriff is individually responsible to a person employed by him to take care of attached property, and any claim for necessary expenses of keeping such property is to be presented by the sheriff and not by the person employed by him for that purpose: Rowley v. Painter, 69–432.

Mileage: A sheriff is entitled to mileage for actual travel and no more. When only one trip is necessary to bring several prisoners from the penitentiary and return them, he should only charge mileage for one prisoner: Barnes v. Marion County, 54-482.

For service of subpœnas on the same witnesses in several state cases, made in one trip, the sheriff is entitled to mileage for but one trip: Redfield v. Shelby County, 64–11.

The route of travel referred to in a previous statute as fixing the amount of mileage to be allowed for conveying prisoners, etc., held to be the route usually traveled by persons pursuing a journey between the given points; and held, that where the usual and speediest route was by rail, the sheriff might convey the prisoner in that way and charge mileage for the distance traveled, although there was a shorter route by highway: Maynard v. Cedar County, 51–430.

A sheriff is not entitled to mileage for conveying a prisoner from the county jail to the court room, where it does not appear but that the two places are in the same building: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41–554.

Where a sheriff was entitled by statute to fees and mileage for attending the prisoner before the court or judge when required, held, that for attendance before the court with five prisoners at the same time and for the same purpose he was entitled to but one fee and mileage for one prisoner: Ibid.

The same fees should be allowed for conveying a prisoner to the reform school as for conveying a convict to the penitentiary: Ibid.

Under § 3788 of Code of '73 as it originally stood, allowing the sheriff, in full compensation for conveying each convict to the penitentiary, sixteen cents for each mile traveled, to be computed from the county seat by the most direct route of travel, held, that the sheriff was entitled to that rate of mileage for each mile traveled on the journey going and returning: Harding v. Montgomery County, 55–41.

But such compensation was in full of all services, and the sheriff could not charge car fare and hotel bills in addition to the mileage thus allowed: Ibid.

The allowance made by that section for conveying an insane person to an asylum was held applicable only where the person conveyed had been adjudged insane under statutory provisions: Ibid.

Copy fees: Under statutes providing for service of subpœnas by delivering a copy, and that the sheriff should have fees for copies of papers required by law when made by him, held, that he was entitled to the copy fee in addition to the fee for service, where the copy was made by him: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41–554.

In computing compensation for copies of subpœnas the sheriff should be allowed ten cents for each one hundred words or any number less than one hundred; twenty cents for any number greater than one hundred and less than two hundred, and so on: Painter v. Polk County, 70–596.

Serving execution, fee for, under previous statute, see Bell v. Weddington, 54–561.

Salary: The board of supervisors may properly fix the amount of the sheriff's annual salary at the beginning of his term, and the rendering of the service on the faith of such action will constitute a contract binding upon the county: Holmes v. Lucas County, 53–211.

Bailiffs: Where a bailiff is appointed and performs services for which fees are allowed by law, such bailiff becomes entitled to the fees, which must be taken into account in fixing the compensation to be allowed him by the board of supervisors: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41–554.

Mistake as to fees: Where a sheriff had presented his claim for certain services which had been allowed by the party and paid, held, that he could not afterward recover additional compensation for the same services, although in his original claim he had not asked all that the law allowed him for such services: Harding v. Montgomery County, 55–41.

Where the board of supervisors had, by reason of erroneous certificates of the clerk, paid fees and costs to the sheriff in some cases twice or thrice over, held, that the county might recover back the money as paid by mistake: Holmes v. Lucas County, 53–211.

Contract as to fees: An agreement by a sheriff to accept a fixed sum in lieu of legal fees for services to be performed will be null and void as against public policy and against the provisions of statute, whether the sum to be paid be greater or less than the legal fees: Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 40–200.

The officer issuing or serving a search warrant for the seizure of intoxicating liquors is entitled to have his fee therefor paid by the county, in case no liquors are found, in the same way as other costs are paid by the county in cases in which for any reason the prosecution fails: Byram v. Polk County, 76–75; Garrett v. Polk County, 78–108.

SEC. 512. Fees in criminal cases—when payable by county. In all criminal cases where the prosecution fails, or where the money cannot be made from the person liable to pay the same, the facts being certified by the clerk or justice as far as their knowledge extends, and verified by the affidavit of the sheriff, the fees allowed by law in such cases shall be audited by the county auditor and paid out of the county treasury. [C. '73, § 3790; R., § 4146; C. '51, § 2537.]

This section applies only to sheriff's fees, and does not render the county liable for costs of printing abstract and argument on appeal by defendant to the supreme court, although on such appeal the judgment against defendant be reversed: Red v. Polk County, 56–98; State v. Rainsbarger, 74–540.

The county is not liable for costs in a bastardy proceeding, such proceeding being civil, and not criminal: McAndrew v. Madison County, 67–54.

Under the provision of Rev. Stats. of '43, held, that counties were liable for costs in a criminal case in which a nolle prosequi was entered, or in which an indictment was quashed, or judgment entered for defendant on demurrer: Bonney v. Van Buren County, 2 G. Gr., 230.

Under this section the costs in liquor cases, including the attorney's fee, provided for under § 2429, are to be paid by the county, where not recoverable from the defendant: Newman v. Des Moines County, 85–89.

CHAPTER 7.

OF THE CORONER.

SECTION 513. When to perform duties of sheriff. The coroner shall perform all the duties of sheriff, when that office is vacant; where it appears from the papers that the sheriff is a party to an action or proceeding in a court of record; where, in any action commenced or about to be commenced, an affidavit is filed with the clerk of the court, showing the absence of the sheriff and his deputy from the county, and that they are not expected to return in time to perform the service needed, or showing partiality, prejudice, consanguinity, or interest upon his part, in which case the clerk shall direct process to the coroner, indorsing thereon the reason therefor, which he shall execute in the same manner as if he were sheriff. [C. '73, §§ 349, 350; R., §§ 393–4; C. '51, §§ 183–4.]

The sureties upon the official bond of the coroner are accountable on such bond for his acts while acting as ex officio sheriff: Tieman v. Haw, 49–312.

To make a service of notice by the coroner, as such, good, it must appear from the record that the sheriff was disqualified to act: Beard v. Smith, 9–50: Chord v. McCoy, Mor., 311.

Where the sheriff is disqualified by interest or other personal reason, the coroner, and not the deputy sheriff, should act: Minott v. Vineyard, 11–90.

This section applies in criminal as well as in civil cases, and upon the filing of the affidavit here contemplated the coroner should be directed to act in place of the sheriff: State v. Hardin, 46–623.

Under this section, a deputy of a sheriff who is a party to the case is disqualified for empaneling the jury. Such officer in calling jurors into the box is enforcing process of the court within the meaning of the statute: Gollobitsch v. Rainbow, 84–567.

In such case, the deputy is also disqualified from serving a notice to take depositions: Ibid.

SEC. 514. When no qualified sheriff or coroner—clerk appoints. When there is no sheriff, deputy sheriff or coroner qualified to serve legal process, the court, or, if not in session, the clerk, may, by writing, under his hand and the seal of the court, certifying the above fact, appoint any suitable person specially in each case to execute such process, who shall be sworn, but need not give bond, and his return shall be entitled to the same credit as the sheriff's, when the appointment is attached thereto. [C. '73, § 351; R., § 395; C. '51, § 185.]

Where the disqualification of the sheriff is made known before the issuance of a writ, and also the disqualification of the coroner, it is not objectionable to direct the writ to the person specially appointed: Minott v. Vineyard, 11–90.

The credit to be given to the return of the person so appointed will depend on the validity of the appointment. In a particular case the appointment held not to show sufficiently that there was "no sheriff, deputy sheriff, or coroner qualified," etc.: Currens v. Ratcliffe, 9–309.

SEC. 515. Inquest—when held—warrant for jurors. The coroner shall hold an inquest upon the dead bodies of such persons only as are supposed to have died by unlawful means, and in such other cases as are required by law. When he has notice of the dead body of a person, supposed to have died by unlawful means found or being in his county, he is required to issue his warrant to a constable of his county, requiring him to summon forthwith three electors of the county to appear before him at the time and place named in the warrant. [C. '73, § 352; R., § 396; C. '51, § 186.]

SEC. 516. Inquest on person killed in mine. When a person shall come to his death by accident or otherwise, in any manner connected with the working of, or in, any mine, or by any explosion therein, an inquest shall be held, and the coroner shall make careful inquiry into the cause thereof, and return a copy of the verdict in said proceeding, with the minutes of all testimony taken thereat, to the state inspector of mines; and no person shall be qualified to serve as a juror at said inquest who has a personal interest in, or is employed in or about, the mine in which or at which the deceased came to his death, or by any of its proprietors. [21 G. A., ch. 140, § 2; 20 G. A., ch. 21, § 2.]

SEC. 517. Form of warrant. The warrant may be, in substance, as follows:

State of Iowa, }
.....County. }

To any peace officer of said county:—In the name of the state of Iowa, you are hereby required to summon forthwith three electors of your county to appear before me at (name the place), at (name the day and hour, or say forthwith), then and there to hold an inquest upon the dead body of....., there lying, and find by what means he died. Witness my hand this.....day of....., A. D.....

A.....B.....,
[C. '73, § 353; R., § 397; C. '51, § 187.] Coroner of.....County.

SEC. 518. Service and return. The officer to whom it is delivered shall execute the warrant, and make return thereof at the time and place named. [C. '73, § 354; R., § 398; C. '51, § 188.]

SEC. 519. Filling vacancies—oath. If any juror fails to appear, the coroner shall cause the proper number to be summoned or returned from the bystanders immediately, and proceed to impanel them, and administer the following oath, in substance: "You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will diligently inquire, and true presentment make, when, how, and by what means the person whose body lies here dead came to his death, according to your knowledge and the evidence given you." [C. '73, § 355, R., § 399; C. '51, § 189.]

SEC. 520. Witnesses. The coroner shall issue subpœnas for such witnesses as have knowledge touching the manner of the death of the person whose inquest is being held, returnable at such time and place as he may direct. They shall be sworn as in other cases, and their evidence reduced to writing under the direction of the coroner, subscribed by them, and returned to the district court, with the verdict and all other papers in the case. The coroner may enforce the attendance of witnesses and jurors, and punish them for contempt in disobeying his process, in like manner as a justice of the peace may do in a criminal proceeding before him. [C. '73, §§ 356–8, 365; R., §§ 400–2, 409; C. '51, §§ 190–2, 199.]

SEC. 521. Finding of jurors—form. The jurors, having inspected the body, heard the testimony and made all needful inquiries, shall return to the coroner their inquisition in writing, under their hands, in substance as follows, stating the matters in the following form suggested, as far as found:

State of Iowa, }
.....County. }

An inquisition holden at....., in.....county, on the..... day of....., A. D....., before..... coroner of the said county, upon the body of..... (or person unknown), there lying dead, by the jurors whose names are hereto subscribed:

The said jurors upon their oaths do say (here state when, how, by what person, means, weapon, or accident he came to his death, and whether feloniously).

In testimony whereof, the said jurors have hereunto set their hands, the day and year aforesaid (which shall be attested by the coroner). [C. '73, § 359; R., § 403; C. '51, § 193.]

SEC. 522. Finding kept secret. If the inquisition find that a crime has been committed on the deceased, and name the person who the jury believe has committed it, the inquest shall not be made public until after the arrest of the person. [C. '73, § 360; R., § 404; C. '51, § 194.]

SEC. 523. Arrest of suspected person. If the person charged be present, the coroner may order his arrest by an officer or any other person present, and shall then make a warrant requiring the officer or other person to take him before a justice of the peace. [C. '73, § 361; R., § 405; C. '51, § 195.]

SEC. 524. Warrant for. If the person charged be not present, and the coroner believes he can be taken, he may issue a warrant to the sheriff and constables of the county, requiring them to arrest the person and take him before a justice of the peace. [C. '73, § 362; R., § 406; C. '51, § 196.]

SEC. 525. Proceedings against. The warrant of the coroner in the above case shall be of equal authority with that of a justice of the peace, and when the person charged is brought before the justice, such justice shall cause an information to be filed against him, and the same proceedings shall be had as in other cases under information, and he shall be dealt with as a person held under an information in the usual form. [C. '73, § 363; R., § 407; C. '51, § 197.]

SEC. 526. Contents and effect of warrant—report of coroner. The warrant of the coroner shall recite substantially the transactions before him, and the verdict of the jury of inquest leading to the arrest, and such warrant shall be a sufficient foundation for the proceeding of the justice instead of an information. The coroner shall report to the clerk of the district court all cases of death which may come under his supervision, with the cause or mode of death, in accordance with forms furnished by the state board of health. [C. '73, § 364; R., § 408; C. '51, § 198.]

SEC. 527. Disposition of body—expenses. The coroner, except as otherwise provided by law, shall cause the body of the deceased person which he is called to view to be delivered to his friends, if any there be, but if not, he shall cause him to be decently buried, and the expense to be paid from any property found with the body, or, if there be none, from the county treasury, by certifying an account of the expenses; which, being presented to the board of supervisors, shall be allowed by them, if deemed reasonable, and paid as other claims on the county. [C. '73, § 366; R., § 410; C. '51, § 200.]

SEC. 528. Justice may act as coroner. When there is no coroner, or in case of his absence or inability to act, any justice of the peace of the same county is authorized to perform the duties of coroner in relation to dead bodies, and in such cases he may cause the person charged to be brought before himself by his warrant, and may proceed with him as a justice of the peace. [C. '73, § 367; R., § 411; C. '51, § 201.]

SEC. 529. Physician employed—fees. In the above inquisition by a coroner or justice of the peace, as the case may be, when he or the jury deem it requisite, he may summon one or more physicians or surgeons to make a scientific examination, who, instead of witness fees, shall receive a reasonable compensation, to be allowed by the board of supervisors. [20 G. A., ch. 64; C. '73, § 368; R., § 412; C. '51, § 202.]

The physician is entitled to a reasonable fee and the action of the board in making an allowance is not conclusive. He may in an action in court recover more than the amount allowed if he shows the allowance is not reasonable: Moser v. Boone County, 91–359.

Under previous provisions the compensation of such witnesses was to be fixed by the coroner, or justice acting in his place, and his jurisdiction in such matter was exclusive. He might be compelled by mandamus to act, but no appeal was provided: Cushman v. Washington County, 45–255; Sanford v. Lee County, 49–148.

SEC. 530. Fees of witnesses and jurors. Witnesses and jurors shall receive the same fees as witnesses and jurors are paid in actions before justices of the peace. [C. '73, § 356; R., § 400; C. '51, § 190.]

SEC. 531. Compensation of coroner. The coroner is entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

1. For a view of each body and taking and returning an inquest on the same, five dollars;

2. For a view of each body and examination without inquest, three dollars;

3. For issuing subpœna, warrant, or order for a jury, twenty-five cents;

4. For each mile traveled to and returning from an examination or inquest, five cents.

5. Which fees shall be paid out of the county treasury when they cannot be obtained from estate of deceased.

6. For all other services, the same fees as are allowed sheriffs in similar cases, to be paid in like manner. [C. '73, § 3799; R., § 4148; C. '51, § 2539.]

SEC. 532. Disposition of property of deceased. Any property or money found with or upon the person of deceased, if there be no person authorized to receive the same, shall forthwith be turned over by the coroner to the clerk of the district court, to be held until disposed of according to law.

SEC. 533. Same. A failure to comply with the preceding section shall be deemed a misdemeanor.

CHAPTER 8.

OF THE COUNTY SURVEYOR.

SECTION 534. Duties—record to be kept. The county surveyor shall make all surveys of land within his county which he may be called upon to make, and the field-notes and plats made by him shall be transcribed into a well-bound book, under his supervision, at the expense of the person requesting the survey, which book shall be kept in the county auditor's office, and his surveys shall be held as presumptively correct. [C. '73, §§ 369, 370; R., §§ 413, 414; C. '51, §§ 203–4.]

SEC. 535. Former field-notes to be used. Previous to making any survey, he shall furnish himself with a copy of the field-notes of the original survey of the same land, if there be any in his office or that of the auditor, and his survey shall be made in accordance therewith. [C. '73, § 371; R., § 415; C. '51, § 205.]

SEC. 536. Corners—how marked. He is required to establish the corners by taking bearing trees, and noting particularly their course and distance, but if there be no trees within reasonable distance, the corners are to be marked by stones or other permanent monuments placed firmly in the earth. [C. '73, § 372; R., § 416; C. '51, § 206.]

SEC. 537. Rules to be followed. In the resurvey and subdivision of land by county surveyors, their deputies or other persons, the rules prescribed by the acts of congress, and the instructions of the secretary of the interior, copies of which shall be furnished him by the county, shall be in all respects followed. [C. '73, § 373.]

The rule now recognized by the construction put upon the act of congress by the interior department is that in finding the center of a section where the center has not been fixed by the government surveyor, the intersecting method and not the bisecting method is to be pursued. According to this method the center will be at the point of crossing of the two lines connecting the quarter section posts on the opposite sides of the section: Gerke v. Lucas, 92–79.

SEC. 538. Record to be furnished—presumptive evidence. The county surveyor shall, when requested, furnish the person for whom the survey is made with a copy of the field-notes and plat of the survey, and such copy, certified by him, and also a copy from the record, certified by the county auditor with the seal, shall be presumptive evidence of the survey, and of the facts herein required to be set forth, and which are stated accordingly, between those persons who join in requesting it and any other person then concerned, who has reasonable notice that such a survey is to be made, and the time thereof. [C. '73, § 374; R., § 417; C. '51, § 207.]

SEC. 539. Supervisors to furnish record book. The board of supervisors is required to furnish a substantial, well-bound book, in which the field-notes and plats made by the county surveyor shall be recorded. [C. '73, § 375; R., § 418; C. '51, § 208.]

SEC. 540. Record to show what. The plat and record shall show distinctly of what piece of land it is a survey, at whose personal request it was made, the names of the chainmen, and that they were approved and sworn by the surveyor, and the date of the survey; and the courses shall be taken according to the true meridian, and the variation of the magnetic from the true meridian stated. And the surveyor shall determine the correct variation by an observation on the pole-star, or some other approved method, at least once each year, and enter the same, with the date, and description of the method used, in his record. [C. '73, § 376; R., § 419; C. '51, § 209.]

SEC. 541. Chainmen—qualifications. The necessary chainmen and other persons must be employed by the person requiring the survey done, unless otherwise agreed; but the chainmen must be disinterested persons, and approved by the surveyor, and sworn by him to measure justly and impartially, to the best of their knowledge and ability. [C. '73, § 377; R., § 420; C. '51, § 210.]

SEC. 542. Witnesses subpœnaed—fees. County surveyors, when engaged in the performance of official duties, may issue subpœnas for witnesses and administer oaths to them, and all fees for services of officers and attendance of witnesses shall be the same as in proceedings before justices of the peace. [C. '73, § 378.]

SEC. 543. Surveyor's fees. The county surveyor is entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

1. For each day's service actually performed in traveling to and from the place where any survey is to be made, and for making the same, and return thereof, four dollars;
2. For making up the record of any survey, and the plat and field-notes thereof, one dollar per page;
3. For certified copy of the plat or field-notes, fifty cents. [16 G. A., ch. 25; C. '73, § 3800; R., § 4155; C. '51, § 2546.]

CHAPTER 9.

OF THE DUTIES OF COUNTY OFFICERS.

SECTION 544. County officers to furnish information. It is the duty of each county officer, whenever called upon by the governor or either house of the general assembly, to communicate to the governor or such house any information that may be in his possession as such officer, and to furnish any statistics at his command, when thus called upon. [18 G. A., ch. 22, § 1.]

SEC. 545. Not to act as agent or attorney. No county officer shall appear as agent, attorney or solicitor for another, in any matter pending before the board of supervisors. [C. '73, § 326.]

This section does not prevent the officers named from making complaint before a magistrate of the violation of a penal law: Santo v. State, 2–165, 221.

SEC. 546. Not to act as counsel. No sheriff, deputy sheriff, coroner or constable shall appear in any court as attorney or counsel for any party, nor make any writing or process to commence any action or proceeding, or to be in any manner used in the same; and such writing or process made by any of them shall be rejected. [C. '73, § 342; R., § 388; C. '51, § 175.]

SEC. 547. Not to purchase property. No sheriff, deputy sheriff, coroner or constable shall become the purchaser, either directly or indirectly, of any property by him exposed to sale under any process of law; and every such purchase shall be void. [C. '73, § 343; R., § 389; C. '51, § 176.]

SEC. 548. Accounts may be examined. If any officer required by law to report the fees collected by him to the board of supervisors shall neglect or refuse to make such report, it shall be the duty of the board to employ an expert accountant to examine the books, papers and accounts of such officer, and to make said report, the expense of which shall be charged to such delinquent officer, and shall be collectible upon his official bond. [18 G. A., ch. 184, § 5.]

SEC. 549. May designate newspapers. The clerk of the district court, sheriff, auditor, treasurer, and recorder shall each designate the newspapers printed in the English language in which the notices pertaining to his office shall be published, and the board of supervisors shall designate the papers in which all other county notices shall be published. [C. '73, § 306.]

This refers only to county notices and not to notices in reference to the commencement of actions or sales upon execution, in which cases plaintiff may designate the papers in which publication shall be made: See § 4024 and note.

SEC. 550. Misdemeanor. Failure on the part of any officer to perform any duty required of him by this chapter shall render him liable to prosecution and punishment for a misdemeanor. [18 G. A., ch. 22, § 4.]

CHAPTER 10.

OF TOWNSHIPS AND TOWNSHIP OFFICERS.

SECTION 551. Supervisors divide county into townships. The board of supervisors of each county shall divide the same into townships, as convenience may require, defining the boundaries thereof, and may from time to time make such alterations in the number and boundaries of the townships as it may deem proper; but if the congressional township lines are not adopted and followed, the board shall not change the lines of any civil township so as to divide any school township or district, unless a majority of the voters of said school township or district shall petition therefor. [C. '73, §§ 379, 1799; R., § 441; C. '51, § 219.]

A township is not a corporation authorized to sue and to be sued. It is no more than a legal subdivision of a county for governmental purposes and has no corporate powers as such: Township of West Bend v. Munch, 52–132; Wells v. Stomback, 59–376.

But if the action is brought in the name of the township the petition may be amended by the substitution of the name of the officer of the township as plaintiff, who is entitled to the custody of the money sued for: Wells v. Stomback, 59–376.

The board has the power, and it is its duty, to divide the county into townships, and it has the power to divide the townships and create new ones when the public convenience requires that that be done: Lones v. Harris, 71–478.

A township clerk may maintain a suit to recover money to which he is entitled by virtue of his office, such as road funds: Long v. Emsley, 57–13.

Township trustees have no authority to maintain an action to recover from the county money paid out by them in the discharge of their duties as a board of health. They are not entitled to such funds and are not the real parties in interest: Sanderson v. Cerro Gordo County, 80–89.

SEC. 552. Boundaries conformed to city boundaries. Where the boundaries of any city have been changed, the board of supervisors of the county in which the same is situated shall have power to change the boundary lines of townships so as to make them conform to the boundaries of the city, and to make such other changes in township lines, and the number of townships, as it may deem necessary; but no action shall be taken affecting the boundaries or existing conditions of school districts. [23 G. A., ch. 25.]

SEC. 553. Boundaries to be recorded. The description of the boundaries of each township, and of all alterations in them, and of all new townships, shall be recorded in full in the records of the board of supervisors, and of the township. [C. '73, § 381; R., § 442; C. '51, § 220.]

SEC. 554. Division where city included—petition—remonstrance. When any township has within its limits a city or town with a population exceeding fifteen hundred inhabitants, the electors of such township residing without the limits of such city or town may, at the January, April, or June session of the board of supervisors of the county, petition to have such township divided into two townships; the one to embrace the territory without, and the other the territory within, such corporate limits; which petition shall be accompanied by the affidavit of three individuals, to the effect that all the signatures to such petition are genuine, and that the signers thereof are all legal voters of said township, residing outside said corporate limits. Remonstrances signed by such legal voters may also be presented at the hearing before the board of supervisors hereinafter provided for, and if the same persons petition and remonstrate, they shall be counted on the remonstrance only. [20 G. A., ch. 106; C. '73, § 382.]

SEC. 555. Notice. Notice of the time when such petition shall be presented shall be given by two publications in a weekly newspaper published in the township, the last of which publications shall be at least ten days prior to the time fixed for the presentation of such petition; or if no paper is printed in such township, or the papers therein printed refuse to make such publication, the notice herein contemplated shall be given by posting in five public places in the township, two of which shall be without, and three within, such corporate limits. [C. '73, § 383.]

SEC. 556. Division—effect. If such petition is signed by a majority of the electors of such township residing without the corporate limits of such city or town, the board of supervisors shall divide such township into two townships, as prayed; but, except for election purposes, including the appointment of all judges and clerks of election rendered necessary by the change, such division shall not take effect until the first Monday of January next ensuing. But when the citizens of any township so set off desire to dissolve their township organization and return again to the township from which they were taken, they may do so by the same proceedings as provided for the division thereof, except that said petition shall be signed by a majority of the electors of both townships. [21 G. A., ch. 48; C. '73, § 384.]

Where the application for division is properly made, the board of supervisors has no discretion and may be compelled by mandamus to make such division: Henry v. Taylor, 57–72.

The new township does not become independent until its complete organization, which is on the 1st of January following, when the officers elected for it enter upon the discharge of their duties: Lamb v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 39–333.

Upon the formation of a new township, no election except one for the election of officers of such township can be held until after the 1st of January following. Special elections contemplated or authorized by law to be held prior to that time must be held in the old or original township: Williams v. Poor, 65–410.

SEC. 557. New township—first election. When a new township is formed, the board of supervisors shall call the first township election, to be held at such place as it may designate, on the day of the next general election. [C. '73 § 385; R., § 453; C. '51, § 231.]

SEC. 558. Auditor to issue warrant for. The auditor shall issue a warrant for such first election, stating the time and place of the same, the officers to be elected, and any other business which is to be attended to; and no other business shall be done than such as is so named. [C. '73, § 386; R., § 454; C. '51, § 232.]

The warrant provided for by this section relates only to the first election in a new township. Failure to issue it will not render subsequent elections invalid: Lones v. Harris, 71–478.

SEC. 559. Service and return. Such warrant may be directed to any constable of the county, or to any citizen of the same township, by name, and shall be served by posting up copies thereof, in three of the most public places in the township, fifteen days before the day of the election; the original warrant shall be returned to the presiding officer of the election, to be returned to the clerk when elected, with a return thereon of the manner of service, verified by oath, if served by any other than an officer. [C. '73, § 387; R., § 455; C. '51, § 233.]

SEC. 560. Township and city coterminous—clerk and trustees abolished. Where a town or a city having a population of less than seven thousand constitutes one civil township, the boundary lines of which coincide throughout with the boundary lines of the town or city, the offices of township clerk and trustee are abolished. [24 G. A., ch. 10, § 1.]

SEC. 561. Clerk and council to act. The duties required by law of the township clerk in such cities shall be performed by the city clerk, and those required of the board of trustees shall be performed by the city council. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 562. Township funds go to city. The moneys and assets belonging to such civil township shall become the moneys and assets of the city or town in which said civil township is situated; and the township clerks shall turn such moneys and assets over to the city or town treasurer, to be disbursed by such city or town in the same manner and for the same purposes as required by law for the disposition of township funds, and such cities or towns shall assume all liabilities of a civil township to which the provisions of this section shall apply. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 563. County treasurers to pay. County treasurers are hereby authorized to pay over to the city or town treasurers which come under the provisions of the three preceding sections all moneys collected for the road fund, or other funds which would otherwise be paid over to the township clerks of such townships. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 564. Trustees may employ counsel. Whenever litigation shall arise, involving the right or duty of township trustees to certify or levy taxes which have been authorized upon expressed conditions, then in such cases, if the trustees are made parties to said litigation, they shall have authority to employ attorneys in behalf of said township, and are further authorized to levy the necessary tax to pay for said legal services, and to defray the unavoidable expenses of said litigation. [20 G. A., ch. 120.]

SEC. 565. Assessor where city included. In each even-numbered year, there shall be elected in each township, a part of which is included within the corporate limits of any city or town, by the voters of such township residing without the corporate limits of such city or town, one assessor, in the same manner as provided by law for the election of township assessor. [19 G. A., ch. 110; 18 G. A., ch. 201, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 6; C. '73, § 390.]

Under the original section, held, that an assessor elected by the city as therein prescribed was not a city but a township officer: Kinnie v. Waverly, 42-486.

This section, both as it originally stood and as re-enacted by the sixteenth general assembly, applied only to townships containing cities incorporated under the general incorporation law and not those existing under special charter: State v. Finger, 46-25.

Where two townships being included within the corporate limits of a city comprise but one assessorial district, the county board of equalization cannot equalize taxation as between such townships, but can only act upon the whole district: Getchell v. Board of Supervisors, 51-107.

As to the election of assessors in other townships, see § 1075, and in cities and towns, see chapter two, of title five.

SEC. 566. Places for holding elections. The trustees shall designate the place where elections will be held, and the board of supervisors shall allow a reasonable compensation for the use thereof. Whenever a change is made from the usual place of holding elections in the township, notice of such change shall be given by posting up notices in three public places in the township, ten days prior to the day on which the election is to be held. [23 G. A., ch. 27; C. '73, § 391; R., § 444; C. '51, § 222.]

Under § 391 of Code of '73, no provision was made for the payment by the county of compensation for the place thus designated, and it was not liable therefor: Turner v. Woodbury County, 57–440; McBride v. Hardin County, 58–219.

SEC. 567. Township hall—submission to vote. The trustees, on a petition of a majority of the resident freeholders of any civil township, shall submit the question of building a public hall to the electors thereof, by posting notices of such election in four conspicuous places in the township, thirty days before election, and the form of the proposition shall be: "Shall the proposition to levy a tax for the erection of a public hall be adopted?" [26 G. A., ch. 26, § 1.]

SEC. 568. Tax to build. If a majority of the votes cast are in favor of the tax, the trustees shall certify such fact to the board of supervisors, and they shall thereupon levy not to exceed three mills on the dollar on the taxable property of the township; and when such tax is collected by the treasurer, it shall be paid to the township clerk; but said clerk shall not receive to exceed one per cent. for handling said money. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 569. Location. Any public hall built under the provisions of this chapter shall be located by the township trustees so as to accommodate the greatest number of the resident taxpayers, and for such purpose the trustees may purchase land not to exceed in value one hundred dollars. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 570. Trustees to build. The township trustees shall have charge of the building of such hall, shall receive bids, and shall let the building of the same to the lowest responsible bidder, and the township clerk shall pay out of the funds collected, only on the order of the trustees of said township. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 571. Clerk to be custodian. The township clerk, under the direction of the trustees, shall be the custodian of the building, and the use thereof may be permitted by the township trustees to all the citizens of the township for all lawful purposes; and, for the purposes of this act, the township clerk is hereby clothed with all the power and duties of a constable of the township, to maintain order within and about the premises, protect the property, and enforce orders of the township trustees with respect thereto. A copy of this section shall be at all times kept posted in a conspicuous place in said hall. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 572. Clerk to give bond. When a tax is voted as provided in this act, the township clerk shall, before drawing any of said tax from the treasury of the county, execute a bond, with penalty double the amount of said tax, which bond shall be approved by the board of supervisors. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 573. Tax for repairs. The trustees of any township where such building has been erected are hereby authorized and empowered to certify to the board of supervisors that a tax of not exceeding one-half mill on the dollar in any one year, of the taxable property of the township, should be levied, to be used in keeping such building in repair, to furnish same with necessary furniture and provide for the taking care thereof. When such certificate is filed in the auditor's office, the board of supervisors shall levy such tax. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 574. Trustees—duties. The township trustees are the overseers of the poor, fence viewers, and the township board of equalization, and board of health, and shall have charge of all cemeteries within the limit of their townships dedicated to public use, when the same are not controlled by other trustees or incorporated bodies. [C. '73, § 393; R., § 446; C. '51, § 224.]

Further as to cemeteries, see §§ 583–589.

The law invests township trustees with a discretion as to what is deleterious to public health and the power to cause its abatement: Bushnell v. Whitlock, 77–285.

Where certain land purchased for cemetery purposes was found to be unsuitable, and the township trustees proposed to sell the same on condition that it should never be used for cemetery purposes, held, that it was within their discretion as a board of health to impose the restriction as to the use of the land: Ibid.

Sections 415–418 of Code of '73, as to power of township trustees as a board of health were in effect repealed by 18 G. A., ch. 151 (see §§ 65–68, et seq.): Tweedy v. Fremont County, 68 N. W., 921.

SEC. 575. Refusing to serve—penalty. Any person elected to a township office, and refusing to qualify and serve, shall forfeit the sum of five dollars, which may be recovered by action in the name of the county for the use of the school fund in the county, but no person shall be compelled to serve as a township officer two terms in succession. [C. '73, § 394; R., § 447; C. '51, § 225.]

SEC. 576. Clerk to keep record. The township clerk shall keep a record of all the proceedings and orders of the trustees, and of all acts done by him, including the filing of certificates of official oaths having been taken before other officers, and perform such other acts as may be required of him by law. [C. '73, §§ 392, 395–6; R., §§ 445, 448–9; C. '51, §§ 223, 226–7.]

Entries made on the record by one township clerk from memoranda of the action of the trustees made by the previous clerk are admissible as a part of the record: Moses v. Penquit, 72–611.

Written orders for the relief of poor persons, given by the township trustees under § 2235, are valid, without being otherwise made of record under this section: Bremer County v. Buchanan County, 61–624.

The complaint to trustees as fence-viewers is not part of their proceedings, and need not be in writing nor of record: Tubbs v. Ogden, 46–134.

Record of a direction or order of the trustees for the election of additional justices under § 592 of Code of '73 (not retained) must be made by the trustees in order to be valid: State v. Gaston, 79–457.

SEC. 577. Notify auditor of elections. The clerk, immediately after the election of officers in his township, shall send a written notice thereof to the county auditor, stating the names of the persons elected, and to what offices, and the time of the election, and shall enter the time of the election of each officer in the township record. [C. '73, § 397; R., § 450; C. '51, § 228.]

SEC. 578. Post notice of receipts and expenditures. Each township clerk, on the morning of the day of the general election and before the hour for opening the polls, shall post up, at the place where such election is to be held in his township, a statement in writing, showing all receipts of money and disbursements in his office for the preceding year, which shall be certified as correct by the trustees of the township. [16 G. A., ch. 50.]

SEC. 579. Constables—duties. Constables are ministerial officers of justices of the peace, and shall serve all warrants, notices or other process directed to them by and from any lawful authority, and perform all other duties now or hereafter required of them by law. [C. '73, §§ 398–9; R., §§ 451–2; C. '51, §§ 229, 230.]

A constable is properly a township officer, although he is considered as a county officer for some purposes: State v. Bevans, 37–178.

A justice of the peace has no authority to appoint a special constable to assist peace officers in seizing liquors. He cannot give to a special constable thus appointed general authority: Foster v. Clinton County, 51–541.

SEC. 580. Changing township name—petition—notice. Any township desirous of changing its name may petition the board of supervisors of the county in which such township is situated, and, if it shall appear to said board that a majority of the actual resident voters of such township are in favor of such change, such board shall cause three notices to be posted up in three of the most public places of such township, for at least thirty days previous to the next session of said board, which notice shall state the fact that a petition has been presented to said board by the citizens of said township, praying for a change of the name of the same, and the name prayed for in said petition, and that, unless those interested in the change of such name shall appear at the next regular session of said board and show cause why said name shall not be changed, there will be an order made granting such change; which notice shall be attested by the auditor. [C. '73 § 412.]

SEC. 581. Hearing—order. If, at the time fixed for the hearing of said petition, the board is satisfied that there is a majority in favor of such change of name, it shall make an order granting the same, which shall be attested by the auditor, and recorded in the office of the recorder of the county where such township is situated. [C. '73, § 413.]

SEC. 582. Same. If it appear to said board that a majority of the citizens of such township are opposed to such change, such petition shall be dismissed, and the cost of the proceeding in all cases shall be taxed against the petitioners. [C. '73, § 414.]

SEC. 583. Cemeteries—plat—record. Where there is located in any township one or more cemeteries, the owner or owners of the same, or any party or parties owning an interest therein, may cause the same to be surveyed, platted, and laid out into subdivisions and lots, numbering the same by progressive numbers, giving the dimensions, length and breadth thereof, with reference to known or permanent monuments to be made; and which plat shall accurately describe all the subdivisions of the tract of land used or designed to be used as a cemetery. Said plat shall be recorded in the office of the county recorder, and filed with and recorded by the township clerk, and preserved by him among the records of his office. [16 G. A., ch. 130, § 1.]

SEC. 584. Conveyance of lots—record of. All conveyances of subdivisions or lots of a cemetery thus platted shall be by deed from the proper owner, which deed shall be recorded with the township clerk in a book kept by him for that purpose, for the recording of which the said clerk shall be entitled to a fee of fifty cents for each instrument recorded, to be paid by the party desiring the record made. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 585. Trustees condemn lands. The township trustees are hereby empowered to condemn, or purchase and pay for out of the general fund, and enter upon and take, any lands within the territorial limits of such township for the use of cemeteries, in the same manner as is now provided for cities and towns. [Same, § 3.]

Where land was purchased for cemetery purposes, but was found to be unsuitable, held, that the township trustees could not be enjoined from selling the land because they proposed to sell only on condition that the premises should never be used for cemetery purposes, and in case of a breach of the condition the purchasers should forfeit the land to the trustees: Bushnell v. Whitlock, 77-285.

It is contemplated that only the question of compensation shall be submitted to the jury and not the question as to necessity, that being a matter for the trustees alone to determine, and the question whether or not they have so determined is a question for the court: Barrett v. Kemp, 91-296.

SEC. 586. Tax to pay for. They shall, at the regular meeting in April, levy a tax sufficient to pay for any such lands so condemned or purchased, or for the necessary improvement and maintenance of cemeteries thus established. They shall have power to control any such cemeteries, or appoint trustees for the same, or sell them to any private corporation for cemetery purposes. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 587. Regulations for cemeteries. The trustees, board of directors, or other officers having the custody and control of any cemetery in this state, shall have power, subject to the by-laws and regulations of said cemetery, to inclose, improve and adorn the grounds of such cemetery; to construct avenues in the same; to erect proper buildings for the use of said cemetery; to prescribe rules for the improving or adorning the lots therein, or for the erection of monuments or other memorials of the dead upon such lots; and to prohibit any use, division, improvement or adornment of a lot which they may deem improper. [17 G. A., ch. 106, § 1.]

A grantor of land conveyed to township trustees for use as a cemetery cannot maintain action by mandamus against them to compel its use for such purpose, before it has been actually appropriated to that purpose, it not appearing that the use to which it was to be put constituted any part of the consideration for the sale: Christy v. Whitmore, 67–60.

SEC. 588. Misdemeanors in—punishment—damages. Any person who shall wilfully and maliciously destroy, mutilate, deface, injure or remove any tomb, vault, monument, gravestone, or other structure placed in any public or private cemetery in this state, or any fences, railing, or other work for the protection or ornamentation of said cemetery, or of any tomb, vault, monument or gravestone, or other structure aforesaid, on any cemetery lot within such cemetery, or shall wilfully and maliciously destroy, cut, break or injure any tree, shrub, plant or lawn within the limits of said cemetery, or shall drive at an unusual and forbidden speed over the avenues or roads in said cemetery, or shall drive outside of said avenues and roads, and over the grass or graves of said cemetery, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, punished accordingly, in the discretion of the court, and such offender shall also be liable, in an action in the name of the person or corporation having the custody and control of said cemetery grounds, to pay all such damages as have been occasioned by his unlawful act or acts; which money, when recovered, shall be applied by said person or corporation to the reparation and restoration of the property so injured or destroyed, if the same can be so repaired or restored. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 589. Watchmen—police powers. It shall be lawful for the trustees, directors or other officers having the custody and control of any cemetery in this state to appoint as many day and night watchmen of their grounds as they may think expedient, and such watchmen, and also all their sextons, superintendents, gardeners and agents, stationed upon or near said grounds, are hereby authorized to take and subscribe, before any mayor of a city or justice of the peace of the township where such cemetery is situated, an oath of office, similar to that required by law of constables, and, upon the taking of such oath, such watchmen, sextons, superintendents, gardeners and agents shall have, exercise and possess all the powers of police officers within and adjacent to the cemetery grounds, and they and each of them shall have power to arrest any and all persons engaged in violating the laws of this state in reference to the protection, care and preservation of cemeteries, and of the trees, shrubbery, plants, structures, grass and adornments therein, and to bring such person so offending before any justice of the peace within such township, to be dealt with according to law. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 590. Compensation of trustees. Township trustees shall receive:

1. For each day's service of eight hours necessarily engaged in official business, to be paid out of the county treasury, two dollars each;

2. For each day engaged in assessing damages done by trespassing animals, one dollar each, to be paid as other costs are in such cases;

3. When acting as fence viewers, or viewing or locating any ditch or drain, or in any other case where provision is made for their payment otherwise, they shall not be paid out of such treasury, but in all such cases their fees shall be paid in the first instance by the party requiring their services, and they shall append to the report of their proceedings a statement thereof, and therein shall direct who shall pay said fees, and in what sums respectively; and the party having so advanced any such fees may have his action therefor against the party so directed to pay the same, unless, within ten days after demand by the party entitled thereto, he shall be reimbursed therefor. [16 G. A., ch. 35; C. '73, § 3808; R., § 4156; C. '51, § 2548.]

SEC. 591. Compensation of clerk. The township clerk shall receive:

1. For each day of eight hours necessarily engaged in official business, where no other compensation or mode of payment is provided, to be paid from the county treasury, two dollars;

2. For all money coming into his hands by virtue of his office, except money received from his predecessor in office, unless otherwise provided by law, five per cent.;

3. For filing each application for a drain or ditch, fifty cents;

4. For making out and certifying the papers in any appeal taken from an assessment by the trustees of damages done by trespassing animals, such additional compensation as the board of supervisors may allow. [16 G. A., ch. 61; C. '73, § 3809; R., §§ 909, 911.]

SEC. 592. Compensation of assessor. Each township assessor shall receive, in full for all services required of him by law, a sum to be paid out of the county treasury, and fixed annually by the board of supervisors of the county at the January session; said compensation shall be for the succeeding year, and shall not exceed the sum of two dollars for each day of eight hours which said board determines may necessarily be required in the discharge of all the official duties of such assessor. [C. '73, § 3810; R., § 730.]

CHAPTER 11.

OF GENERAL REGULATIONS AFFECTING COUNTIES AND TOWNSHIPS.

SECTION 593. No money for sectarian purposes. Public money shall not be appropriated, given or loaned by the corporate authorities of any county or township, to or in favor of any institution, school, association or object which is under ecclesiastical or sectarian management or control. [C. '73, § 552.]

Although municipal corporations have no power to appropriate or otherwise use public money for the benefit of any institution, association or object under ecclesiastical or sectarian management, yet such a corporation may by devise properly become trustee to hold funds to aid religious societies of the city: Phillips v. Harrow, 61 N. W., 434.

SEC. 594. County not to become stockholder. No county shall, in its corporate capacity, or by its supervisors or officers, directly or indirectly, subscribe for stock, or become interested as a partner, shareholder or otherwise, in any banking institution, plank road, turnpike, railway, or work of internal improvement; nor shall it issue any bonds, bills of credit, scrip, or other evidence of indebtedness, for any such purposes; and all such evidence of indebtedness for said purposes are hereby declared void, and no assignment of the same shall give them validity; but this section shall not be so construed as to prevent counties from lawfully erecting their necessary public buildings and bridges, laying off highways, streets, alleys and public grounds, or other local works in which such counties may be interested. [C. '73, §§ 553–4; R., §§ 1345–6.]

SEC. 595. Actions on bonds—county not estopped. In all actions now pending, or hereafter brought, in any court in this state, on any bond or coupon issued, or purporting to be issued, by any county for the purposes prohibited in this chapter, a former recovery against such corporation on any one or more or any part of such bonds or coupons shall not bar or estop such corporation from setting up any defense it has made, or could have made, to such bonds or coupons in the action in which such former recovery was had, but the county may allege and prove any matter of defense in such action to the same extent, and with the same effect, as though no former action had been brought, or former recovery had. [C. '73, § 555.]

SEC. 596. Officers not to purchase warrants. No officer of any county, nor any deputy or employe of such officer, shall, directly or indirectly, be permitted to take, purchase, or receive in payment, exchange, or in any way whatever, any warrant, scrip, or other evidence of its indebtedness or any demand against it, for a less amount than that expressed on the face of the warrant, scrip, or other evidence of indebtedness or demand, with accrued interest thereon. [C. '73, § 556; R., § 2186.]

SEC. 597. Treasurer to indorse warrants. The treasurer of every county, when he shall receive any warrant, scrip, or other evidence of its indebtedness, shall indorse thereon the date of its receipt, from whom received, and what amount he paid thereon. [C. '73, § 557; R., § 2187.]

SEC. 598. Breach of duty—misdemeanor. Any officer of any county, or any deputy or employe of such officer, who violates any of the provisions of this chapter, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, for each offense. [C. '73, § 558; R., § 2188.]

TITLE V.

OF CITY AND TOWN GOVERNMENT.

CHAPTER 1.

OF INCORPORATION.

SECTION 599. How effected. When the inhabitants of part of any county, or of two or more counties lying contiguous to each other, not embraced within the limits of any city or town, desire to become incorporated as a town, they may apply to the district court of the proper county, by a petition in writing signed by not less than twenty-five of the qualified electors of the territory proposed to be embraced in such town, which petition shall describe said territory, and contain or have annexed thereto an accurate plat thereof, and shall state the name proposed for such town. Proof of the residence and qualification of the petitioners as electors shall be made by affidavit or otherwise, as directed by the court. If the territory embraced within the limits of said proposed town lies in more than one county, the district court of either of said counties shall have jurisdiction of such proceedings, but that in which the petition for incorporation is first filed shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereafter. [24 G. A., ch. 6, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 79; C. '73, § 421.]

Prior to the adoption of 24 G. A., ch. 6, the provisions as to annexation contemplated that the added territory should be in the same county as that of the city to which it was added: Tabor & N. R. Co. v. Dyson, 86–310.

SEC. 600. Commissioners—notice. Upon compliance with the provisions of the preceding section, the court shall at once appoint five commissioners, who shall at once give notice of an election for incorporation, for not less than three successive weeks preceding the same, by posting notices in three public places within the limits of the proposed town, and by publication in one or more newspapers published in the county where the court is held; which notice shall state the time and place of holding the election, and a description of the limits of the proposed town, and that a plat and description thereof is on file in the office of the clerk of the district court. The court is vested with power to change or limit the territory proposed to be incorporated, before appointing the commissioners as herein provided. [C. '73, § 422.]

Where notice, instead of being given as required by statute, was published only on the morning of the day of election, held, that although a majority of the votes cast were in favor of organization, the election was void: State ex rel. v. Young, 4–561.

SEC. 601. Election. The commissioners shall act as judges and clerks of the election, and shall qualify as required by law, and the proposition to be submitted thereat shall be: "Shall the proposition for incorporation be adopted?" and the commissioners shall have charge of the printing of the ballots, and shall cause the proposition to be placed upon them, and the elector shall designate his vote in the same manner provided with respect to like or similar propositions in the chapter on elections. The commissioners shall promptly report the result of the election to the court, or judge thereof, which may be confirmed and approved, or set aside, by said court, or judge in vacation. If it is set aside, the court or judge thereof may order a new election with the same or other commissioners. [C. '73, § 422.]

SEC. 602. Notice of election of officers. If a majority of the ballots cast at such election be in favor of the incorporation, and the same has been confirmed and approved as above provided, the court, or a judge thereof in vacation, shall order the election of a council, mayor, clerk and treasurer. The commissioners shall give notice for two consecutive weeks of the time and place of holding the election of councilmen and the aforesaid officers, by publication in a newspaper published in the county where the court is held, and by posting the same in five public places within the limits of such town, at which the qualified electors residing within such limits shall elect such councilmen and officers, who shall hold their offices until the first regular election thereafter. Said commissioners shall act as judges and clerks of the election, and shall have the same power and discharge the same duties as clerks in city or town elections, and such election shall be conducted, as far as practicable, in the manner prescribed by law for the election of town councilmen and officers. [C. '73, §§ 423, 425.]

SEC. 603. Incorporation complete. Said commissioners shall promptly report the result of the election to the court, and it, or a judge thereof in vacation, may confirm and approve such election and report, or set the same aside and order a new election, with the same or other commissioners. Upon the confirmation of such election and report, a judgment shall be entered of record declaring the town duly incorporated, and confirming and approving the first election of officers; who, after having qualified as provided for city officers, shall hold until the next annual election of officers. The court or judge shall declare the office of any person elected, and who fails to qualify as such as aforesaid, vacant, and shall at once proceed to appoint some other person to fill such vacancy. The clerk shall enter all the proceedings in the court in the matter of such incorporation and election of officers in the complete record book and file a certified copy of such entry in the office of the recorder of said county, who shall record the same, and in the office of the secretary of state. The costs of all the aforesaid proceedings shall be paid by the town; but if no judgment is entered establishing the town, they shall be paid by the petitioners, and judgment entered accordingly. [C. '73, § 424.]

A court will take judicial notice in what county a given town is situated: State v. Reader, 60–527.

SEC. 604. Discontinuance—how effected. Upon a petition of voters equaling twenty-five per cent. of the number voting at the last preceding municipal election, petitioning the district court of the county wherein such corporation is situated for the discontinuance of the same, the court shall, thirty days next prior to the next annual corporation election, cause notice to be given that the question of discontinuing such corporation will be submitted to the legal voters of the same at the next annual corporation election, by publication at least once a week in a newspaper, if any, published within the limits of such city or town, and by posting the same in five public places within such limits. The proposition to be submitted shall be: "Shall the proposition to discontinue the incorporation be adopted?" and the clerk of the city or town shall cause the ballots to be printed and the proposition to be placed thereon, and the elector shall designate his vote and the election shall be conducted in the same manner provided with respect to like or similar propositions in the chapter on elections. [C. '73, §§ 447–8.]

SEC. 605. Canvass of vote—indebtedness. The vote shall be taken and canvassed in the same manner as other municipal elections, and returns thereof made to the district court. If it finds that a majority of the legal votes cast were for the discontinuance of the incorporation, then a judgment shall be entered discontinuing the same, and, upon the entry of said judgment, its corporate powers shall cease, and the court shall cause notice to be given, in a manner to be prescribed by it, requiring all claims against the corporation to be filed in said court within a time fixed in the notice, not exceeding six months, and all claims not so filed shall be forever barred. At the expiration of the time so fixed, the court shall adjudicate said claims, which shall be treated as denied. Any citizen of such town or city at the time the vote was taken may appear and defend against any claim so filed, or the court may, in its discretion, appoint some person for this purpose, in which event the proceedings shall conform as near as may be to those prescribed for the prosecution of actions by ordinary proceedings. [C. '73, §§ 449, 450.]

SEC. 606. Payment of debts—surplus. The court shall have full power to wind up the affairs of the corporation, to dispose of its property, and to make provision for the payment of all indebtedness thereof, and for the performance of its contracts and obligations, and shall order such taxes levied from time to time as may be requisite therefor, which the board of supervisors shall levy against the property within the corporation. Said taxes shall be collected by the county treasurer like other taxes, and paid out under the orders of the court, and any surplus shall be paid into the temporary school fund of the district or districts where the same is levied. [C. '73, §§ 449, 453.]

SEC. 607. Records deposited. The books, documents, records, papers and corporate seal of any city or town so discontinued shall be deposited with the county auditor of the county in which the council last held its sessions, for safe keeping and reference in future. All court records of any mayor or other officer shall be deposited with the nearest justice in the township in the county where the office of mayor or other officer is situated, who shall have authority to execute and complete all unfinished business standing on the same. [C. '73, § 451.]

SEC. 608. Publication. When the incorporation of any city or town shall have been discontinued, the clerk of the court shall cause a notice thereof to be published for four consecutive weeks in a newspaper published in the county where the court is held, and shall also certify the fact to the secretary of state and to the recorder of the county. [C. '73, § 452.]

SEC. 609. Expenses. All expenses of the election and of winding up the affairs of the corporation shall be paid by it. [C. '73, § 450.]

SEC. 610. Annexation—submission of question. When any city or town shall desire to annex any unplatted contiguous territory, the council may, by an ordinance describing by metes and bounds the territory proposed to be annexed, passed at least one month before the annual election, submit thereat the question of annexation to the qualified electors of such corporation. The proposition to be submitted shall be: "Shall the proposition to annex the territory described in the ordinance of (giving the date of its passage) be adopted?" The ballots shall be printed and the proposition submitted in the manner provided for in section six hundred and four of this chapter. If a majority of those voting shall favor it, the council shall present to the district court a petition praying for such annexation, which shall describe the territory proposed to be annexed, and have attached thereto a plat thereof; and like proceedings shall be had upon said petition as are provided for the incorporation of towns, so far as may be applicable; and if the result of the election be favorable to annexation, the same record and certified copies thereof shall be made and filed as provided in case of incorporation. Should the annexed territory, or any part thereof, be in a different county from that where the court is held, such certified copy shall be filed and recorded in the office of the recorder of such county. Thereupon the territory proposed to be annexed shall be included in said corporation. [C. '73, § 430.]

This section is not void as conferring legislative power upon the court in violation of the constitution, art. III, § 1: Burlington v. Leebrick, 43-252.

SEC. 611. By proceedings in court. When any city or town shall desire to annex abutting and contiguous territory which has been laid out in lots or parcels, not within the limits of a city or town, the council thereof may present to the district court of the county in which the city or town is situated a petition, describing the territory to be annexed, and stating that the same had been laid out as above mentioned, the facts constituting the desirability of annexation, the name of each owner of any portion thereof, if there is more than one such owner, and the particular portion of such territory owned by each, which petition shall have attached thereto a plat thereof. Notice of the filing of such petition shall be served, by publication in one daily or weekly newspaper published in the city or town for four consecutive weeks, and by posting in five public places in the territory desired to be annexed for the same period; the corporation shall be plaintiff, the owners defendants, and issues joined and the case tried as an ordinary action, as far as applicable, except that no judgment for costs shall be rendered against any defendant who does not make defense. If the court finds the allegations of the petition true, and that justice requires the annexation of said territory or any part thereof, a decree shall be entered accordingly, and from that time the territory therein described shall be included in such corporation. The same record and certified copies shall be made and filed as provided in the preceding section. [C. '73, § 431.]

The provision for the annexation of territory by a proceeding in court is not unconstitutional: Ford v. North Des Moines, 80–626.

When a petition has been presented, signed by the requisite number of electors, the court has no discretion. The court has the authority to appoint the commissioners of election, and nothing more. The question of incorporation or annexation, as the case may be, is determined by the electors: Ibid.

These provisions for annexation are not unconstitutional for want of provision as to notice to property owners of the proceeding before the court: Ibid.

It is not required that the notice of election shall be made of record, and where it appears that notice was actually given and commissioners report that an election was held under due and legal notice, that is sufficient: Ibid.

Under particular facts, held, that annexation of territory to a city was proper, although separated by a river: Ibid.

Where the copies of the proceedings filed in the office of the county recorder and that of the secretary of state were not certified as correct copies, held, that such defect did not affect the validity of the annexation, and a subsequent correction of such defect after the bringing of action to question the validity of proceedings taken in pursuance of such annexation was sufficient: Ibid.

SEC. 612. Corporations unite. When any city or town desires to be annexed to another and contiguous city or town, the council of each shall appoint three commissioners to arrange and report to the respective councils the terms and conditions on which the proposed annexation can be made; and if the council of each approve of the terms and conditions proposed, they shall by proper ordinance so declare. Thereupon the council of each of such cities or towns, by one publication of each of said ordinances in a newspaper, if any, published in each of such cities or towns, and by posting the same in five public places in each of such cities or towns, at least ten days prior to the general annual election, or at a special election therein, may submit the question of annexation, upon the terms and conditions proposed, to the electors of their respective cities or towns. The proposition to be submitted at such election shall be: "Shall the proposition for the annexation of (naming the city or town) to (naming the city or town) be adopted?" The clerk of each city or town shall cause the ballots to be printed and the proposition to be placed on the same, and the elector shall designate his vote and the election shall be conducted in the manner provided in like or similar cases in the chapter on elections. If a majority of the votes cast in each city or town is in favor of annexation, the council of each shall by ordinance so declare; and a certified copy of the whole proceedings for annexation of the city or town to be annexed being filed with the clerk of the city or town to which the annexation is made, the latter shall file with the secretary of state, and in the recorder's office of the county, a certified copy of all proceedings had by both of such cities or towns in relation thereto, and which shall be recorded in the

SEC. 613. Annexation complete. When certified copies of the proceedings are so filed, the annexation shall be complete, and the city or town to which the annexation is made shall have the power, and it shall be its duty, to pass such ordinance as will carry into effect such annexation, and thereafter the city or town annexed shall be a part of the city or town to which the annexation is made. Any citizen of the annexed town or city may maintain legal proceedings to compel the city or town, and the council thereof, to which annexation is made, to execute such terms and conditions, but such annexation shall not affect or impair any rights or liabilities then existing for or against either of such cities or towns, and they may be enforced as hereinafter provided. [17 G. A., ch. 3, § 2; C. '73, § 433.]

SEC. 614. Indebtedness—how paid. All present indebtedness of the city to which annexation is made shall be paid by such city by a tax to be levied exclusively upon the property subject to taxation within the limits of the same as it existed prior to such annexation, and none of the real estate or property embraced within the limits of the annexed city or town shall ever be subjected, in any way, to the payment of any part of said indebtedness. The indebtedness of the city or town annexed shall be paid by such city or town, and the council of the city as it exists after annexation is authorized, and it is made its duty, to provide for the payment of such indebtedness by the levy of taxes upon the property subject to taxation within the limits of such city or town so annexed, and to continue such tax from year to year so long as the same shall be necessary; but if such city or town owns any real estate, the fair market value thereof at the time of its annexation shall be credited upon its said indebtedness, and the amount of such credit shall be assumed and paid by such city as it exists after annexation, and such property shall become the property of such city as enlarged. Suits to enforce claims or demands existing at the time of annexation against the city or town annexed may be prosecuted or brought against the city or town to which annexation is made, and judgments obtained shall be paid as hereinbefore provided for the payment of the indebtedness of such annexed city or town. [17 G. A., ch. 3, § 2; C. '73, § 433.]

SEC. 615. Extension—how effected. Any city or town may have its limits enlarged by resolution of the council, fixing the boundaries of the city or town, to the proposed extent, which shall, as far as practicable, be terminated by straight lines drawn parallel, respectively, to the corresponding lines of the government survey, and the question must then be submitted to the vote of the electors of the city or town as thus proposed to be enlarged, on a day fixed by resolution of the council, and notice thereof given by proclamation of the mayor of the time and place of holding the same, setting forth the exact question to be presented to the electors for determination, which shall be published in some newspaper published in said city or town for four weeks, consecutively. The council shall select three judges and two clerks for said election, whose duties shall be the same as prescribed by law for judges and clerks of election. If at such election a majority of the votes cast are for such extension, the mayor shall issue a proclamation announcing that fact, and from thenceforth the limits of said city or town shall be enlarged as proposed. [17 G. A., ch. 169, §§ 1–3; 16 G. A., ch. 47, §§ 1–3.]

An act for the extension of city limits which by its terms is applicable to only one city in the state and can under no circumstances become applicable to another, is unconstitutional as a special statute. (See constitution, art. III, § 30): State ex rel. v. Des Moines, 65 N. W., 818.

But where no objection to the extension has been made for four years and the city had in the meantime been exercising its functions under the statute extending its limits and its operations would be seriously interfered with by holding the annexation illegal, held, that the complaining party was estopped from urging the invalidity of the annexation: Ibid.

Former statutes as to extension of limits construed: Glass v. Cedar Rapids, 68-207.

SEC. 616. Taxation of lands. No lands included within said extended limits which shall not have been laid off into lots of ten acres or less, or which shall not subsequently be divided into parcels of ten acres or less by the extension of streets and alleys, and which shall also in good faith be occupied and used for agricultural or horticultural purposes, shall be taxable for any city or town purpose, except that they may be subjected to a road tax to the same extent as though they were outside of the city or town limits, which tax shall be paid into the city or town treasury. [20 G. A., ch. 158; 17 G. A., ch. 169, §§ 4, 5; 16 G. A., ch. 47 § 4.]

General effect as to included agricultural lands, without reference to statutory exemption: Extension of limits of an incorporated city or town and bringing additional land or people under municipal authority are acts of like nature with the incorporation of such city or town, and depend for their authority upon the same constitutional provisions: Morford v. Unger, 8-82.

Property which is so far removed from the local government as not to derive benefit therefrom, and which the owner desires to use as farming land and not for laying off into city lots, cannot, by being included in city limits against the will of the owner, be subjected to city taxation, even though it is provided that it shall be assessed only at its value for farming land: Ibid.

Land which has always been occupied and used for agricultural purposes, which does not adjoin the platted portion of the city, but is remote therefrom, with other unplatted farm lands between, which is not held for future speculation as city property, which has no street or alley of the city extending to it except the ordinary public highways of which it would have the advantage if not within the city limits, which does not have the advantage of the city water supply for use or fire protection, is not subject to municipal taxation: Taylor v. Waverly, 63 N. W., 347.

While enlargement of boundaries of a city or town whereby the property of individuals is brought within the corporate limits without the consent of its owners, and subjected to taxation for town purposes, may not be an infringement of the constitutional provision against taking private property for public use without compensation, yet it may become so by an unreasonable extension in taking in lands not at all needed for buildings and population, and taxing the same for the benefit of the portion of the corporate domain which may be peopled or occupied. In such cases the courts will limit the taxing power whenever practicable to the point or line where it ceases to operate beneficially to the proprietor in a municipal point of view: Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16-271; Fulton v. Davenport, 17-404.

Facts in particular cases considered as determining whether the property was properly subject to municipal taxation or not: Morford v. Unger, 8-82; Butler v. Muscatine, 11-433; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16-271; Hershey v. Muscatine, 22-184.

Where the land thus included is laid off into lots and platted as an addition it becomes subject to municipal taxation: Fulton v. Davenport, 17-404.

So where the proprietors of undedicated town property, being locally within the corporate limits, hold such close proximity to the settled and improved parts of the town that the corporate authorities cannot open and improve its streets and alleys, and extend to the inhabitants thereof its usual police regulations and advantages, without incidentally benefiting such proprietors in their personal privileges and accommodations, or in the enhancement of their property, then the power to tax the property arises; but in its exercise great care and circumspection should be observed lest perchance injustice and oppression should ensue: Ibid.

Certain tracts of land in Dubuque held not liable to taxation for municipal objects under the foregoing doctrines: Davis v. Dubuque, 20-458.

Where a tract of land within the extended limits of the city lay near one of the principal streets, and was so surrounded as to receive current benefits from the expenditures made by the city as well as permanent increase in value, held, that it was liable to municipal taxation: O'Hare v. Dubuque, 22-144.

But held, that a lot was not liable to such taxation which was not upon a principal street, nor accessible by any street leading to the business part of the city, and was surrounded exclusively by agricultural and mineral lands, and was not benefited by current expenditures: Ibid.

The doctrine of Morford v. Unger, supra, with reference to the extension of city limits, is also applicable to lands used for agricultural purposes within the corporate limits as originally laid out: Buell v. Ball, 20-288; Deeds v. Sanborn, 22-214.

Tracts of forty and ten acres respectively, all lying together, occupied for agricultural purposes, remote from the city proper, no streets or alleys having been worked near them, held not liable for municipal taxation: Deeds v. Sanborn, 26-419.

Lands included within an extension of the city limits but used exclusively for agricultural purposes, and not affected by the current expenditures of the city, no money being spent for improvements thereon, and no streets or alleys being worked for their benefit, such lands not being used for buildings and not being enhanced in value by being within the corporate limits, held not subject to municipal taxation: Deiman v. Fort Madison, 30–542.

The fact of payment of previous taxes will not estop the property owner from claiming the exemption of his property from municipal taxation: Ibid.

Property included within the corporate limits, deriving no benefit from being thus included, and used alone for agricultural purposes, and not demanded for use as city property, nor possessing a value on account of its adaptation for dwellings or business, is exempt from taxation: but property which is held for the opportunity of bringing it into the market as city lots is not entitled to exemption. So, if land within the city limits is used for the purpose of dwellings or business, it cannot ordinarily be claimed to be exempt from taxation, even though the city fails to open or improve the streets leading thereto: Durant v. Kauffman, 34–194.

Municipal taxes from which farm property within the corporate limits is exempt are those which but for municipal purposes would not have been levied, such as taxes to support the police of the city, its necessary lights, water, sewerage, fire department, local government, etc.: but such property is not exempt from taxes voted by the city in aid of a railway, which might be levied as effectually upon property not included within the city: Sears v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 39–417.

A tract of one hundred acres within city limits, used only for farming purposes and having no houses thereon, but against which streets abut, and adjoining an addition laid out in lots and partially improved, held subject to city taxes: Brooks v. Polk County, 52–460.

The fact that land included within the city limits is used for agricultural purposes will not render the taxation thereof illegal, it not being shown that it is used exclusively for such purposes, nor that it does not derive such benefit from the expenditure of municipal taxes that it is properly subject to such taxation: Tubbesing v. Burlington, 68–691.

The character and use of the land alone are not sufficient to determine the question of exemption. It is important to consider the benefits, if any, derived from the expenditure of municipal taxes. Although land is adjudged not to be liable to municipal taxation for a particular year, such adjudication will not necssarily show that municipal taxes thereon for previous years were illegal: Ibid.

A tract of land used for railway depot purposes, and situated within the boundaries of the city, is to be deemed subject to municipal taxes, although not platted: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12–112.

Under statutory provisions for exemption: This provision, making distinction between lots of ten acres or more and those of less than ten acres is not unconstitutional: Leicht v. Burlington, 73–29.

Under this provision as to exemption of tracts of ten acres, held, that land included within territory annexed to a city under a previous statute by which the lots exempt from taxation because used for agricultural purposes must exceed twenty acres, became exempt under the new statute although not exempt under the previous one, by virtue of which the annexation was made: Winzer v. Burlington, 68–279.

Municipal corporations have no vested right to tax rural or farming property within their limits for city purposes, and if such right is given by statute it is competent for the legislature to take it away: Ibid.

The fact that the owner has a residence upon land not platted, and used for agricultural purposes, does not destroy his right to exemption under this provision: Ibid.

The provisions of this section in regard to exemption from taxes apply to lands added to the city and not to those already within its limits: Perkins v. Burlington, 77–553.

A tract of eighteen acres of land occupied as a homestead and situated within the city limits, which has never been platted, but which is surrounded on all sides by land laid out into lots, streets and alleys, and which is benefited by city improvements, such as lights, water, streets, railroads and fire stations, held subject to city taxation: Ibid.

Under a similar provision in a statute extending city limits (23 G. A., ch. 1) held, that one who acquired title to land within the city limits for purpose of speculation with the intention of laying it out into lots for sale, would not by reason of occupancy or use of the land temporarily for farming purposes be the occupant in good faith for such purposes. The question is one of intent: Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co., 66 N. W., 176.

Such property is liable for special assessments: See notes to § 792; also for road taxes: See § 890, and for sidewalk tax: See § 780.

SEC. 617. Annexation—petition. When the inhabitants of a part of any county adjoining any city or town shall desire to be annexed thereto, they may apply to the district court of the county in which the land lies, by petition in writing, signed by not less than a majority of the electors residing within the territory proposed to be annexed, which shall state at whose instance it is presented, and shall be accompanied by a plat of such territory. [C. '73, § 426; R., § 1038.]

It is not competent in the petition for annexation to provide for the exemption in the annexed territory of certain property from city taxes, and such provision is a nullity: Hayzlett v. Mt. Vernon, 33–229.

SEC. 618. Procedure. The proceedings shall be the same as in the incorporation of towns, as nearly as applicable, and such election shall be held in the territory proposed to be annexed, not less than three weeks' notice of which shall be served on the mayor or other presiding officer of the town or city to which the annexation is proposed. [C. '73, § 427; R., § 1039.]

SEC. 619. Proposition submitted. The council of said city or town may give consent to such annexation, or may, in its discretion, provide by ordinance or resolution for submitting to the electors at the next annual election the question whether such annexation shall be made; and if such consent be given, or if a majority of the electors at such election shall vote in favor thereof, then, on the return of such vote to the proper authority of such city or town, a resolution or ordinance shall be adopted declaring that the territory described in the petition has been annexed, a copy of which consent or resolution or ordinance, duly certified by the clerk of said city or town, and attested by the corporate seal, shall be by him filed in the proceedings in the district court in which the matter of annexation is pending. If the court, or the judge thereof in vacation, approves and confirms said election and consent of such city or town, in case such consent be given, said court or judge shall thereupon enter of record its judgment declaring the territory described in the petition is annexed to such city or town, and upon the entering of such judgment the clerk of said court shall make a complete record of such proceedings, including the consent of such city or town, or the resolution or ordinance declaring the annexation, as the case may be, certified copies of which record shall be filed and recorded as provided in the case of the incorporation of towns; whereupon the territory proposed to be annexed shall be a part of such city or town. [C. '73, § 428; R., § 1041.]

SEC. 620. When complete. When a resolution or ordinance declaring such annexation has been adopted, and the copies recorded, the territory shall be a part of the city or town. [C. '73, § 429; R., § 1042.]

SEC. 621. Extension by application to council. When the owner or owners of lands adjoining any city or town shall desire to have such lands brought within the same, they may apply to the council to have the limits thereof extended so as to include such lands, and attach to the application a plat of such lands, showing their situation with respect to the existing limits of the city or town. If the council assent to the extension of the limits applied for, a minute thereof shall be indorsed by the clerk upon the plat, and the same shall then be acknowledged by the owner, and recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county, and thereafter the limits of the city shall be extended so as to conform to the line proposed and assented to by the council. [18 G. A., ch. 56.]

SEC. 622. Severance—application. When the inhabitants of a part of any town or city, whether the same is or is not laid out in lots and blocks, desire to have the part thereof in which they reside severed therefrom, they may apply by petition in writing, signed by a majority of the resident property holders of that part of the territory of such city or town, to the district court of the county, which petition shall describe the territory proposed to be severed, and have attached thereto a plat thereof, and shall name the person or persons authorized to act in behalf of the petitioners in the prosecution of said petition. [C. '73, § 440; R., § 1048.]

Land not needed for city purposes, and not benefited by being within the corporation, should be severed upon proper proceedings being taken, and the part severed should not be held liable for municipal indebtedness incurred during its attachment, if it was not liable to municipal taxation whilst attached: Evans v. Council Bluffs, 65–238.

The provisions of this section apply to any territory within a city or town, whether such territory is or is not laid out into lots and blocks. If so laid out it seems that the severance would operate as an extinguishment of the rights of the corporation in the streets and alleys of such portion: McKean v. Mt. Vernon, 51–306; Way v. Center Point, 51–708.

Where property was sought to be charged with a tax levied by a municipal corporation, such property being situated in a plat that had been vacated since the levy, held, that, under the statute providing for such vacation it was proper to admit evidence that the city was indebted in a large sum prior to the vacation of the plat, the property being liable for its proportion thereof: Deeds v. Sanborn, 26–419.

Previous statutes as to severance construed: Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11–482.

SEC. 623. Notice. Notice of the filing of the same shall be given by publication in a newspaper published in said city or town, or by posting a notice of the same in five public places therein, four weeks previous to the succeeding term of court, which notice shall contain the substance of said petition, and state the term of court at which the hearing thereof will be had. [C. '73, § 441; R., § 1049.]

SEC. 624. Hearing—affidavits. The hearing of said petition may be had by the court, or either party may demand a jury, and the proper authorities of such city or town, or any person interested in the subject matter of said petition, may appear and contest the granting of the same. Affidavits in support of or against said petition may be submitted and examined by the court or jury, and the court may, in its discretion, permit the agent or agents named in the petition to amend or change the same, except that no amendment shall be permitted whereby the territory embraced in said petition shall be increased or diminished, without continuing the case to the next term, and requiring new notice to be given as above provided. [C. '73, § 442; R., § 1050.]

This peculiar provision for the introduction of affidavits in evidence is not improper. The question to be determined is whether the interests of the territory in question require the severance, and upon appeal from the decision the only question is whether the court and jury abused the discretion reposed in them by the statute: Ashley v. Calliope, 71–466.

SEC. 625. Trial—commissioners appointed. If the court or jury, after hearing the petition and evidence, shall be satisfied that the petition has been signed by a majority of the property holders residing within the limits of the part of the city described in the petition and plat, and that the limits have been accurately described and a correct plat thereof filed, and that the prayer of the petitioners should be granted, the court shall appoint three disinterested persons commissioners to adjust the terms upon which such part shall be so severed, as to any liabilities of such city or town that have accrued during the connection of such part with such corporation. The commissioners shall take and subscribe an oath that they will impartially perform their duties, and the same shall be filed with the proceedings in such case. [C. '73, § 443; R., § 1051.]

A decision granting the severance of certain territory, as prayed in a proceeding, such as is here contemplated, overruled on appeal, for the reason that, under the circumstances, justice and equity did not require it: Mosier v. Des Moines, 31–174.

The wishes of the owners of the land are entitled to some weight but should not be permitted to control. The future growth of the town, its probable improvement for sanitary purposes, the importance of having jurisdiction of the territory for various purposes accomplished by the exercise of the police power of the town should be duly considered. The discretion of the lower court will not be controlled on appeal unless it appears to have been abused: Monk v. George, 86–315.

SEC. 626. Hearing and report. The commissioners shall, at a time by them fixed, hear the agent named in the petition, and also the proper authorities of the city or town, in regard to the subject-matter to them submitted, and report to the next term of said court their findings in the premises; upon the filing of which report the court shall decree in accordance therewith, and with the prayer of the petition, unless for good cause, and upon a proper showing, the court shall reject or set aside said report, and appoint new commissioners, and continue the cause for further action to be had thereon. [C. '73, § 444; R., § 1052.]

SEC. 627. Transcript—costs. The clerk shall forthwith make a complete record of all such proceedings, except the affidavits in support of or against such petition and the cross-examination of the affiants, and file for record a certified transcript thereof in the office of the recorder of the county where the court is held, and of the county where the severed territory or any part thereof lies, if in a different county, and shall also file such transcript in the office of the secretary of state, and, when so filed, the severance shall be complete. The costs, except witness fees, shall be paid by the petitioners, but each party shall pay its own witnesses. [C. '73, §§ 445–6; R., §§ 1053–4.]

SEC. 628. Changing name—question submitted. The corporate name of any city or town may be changed as follows: The council may, by resolution, propose such change of name, setting forth therein the proposed new name, which shall not be the same as that of any city, town or post-office existing in the state at the time of the passage of such resolution. The question shall then be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors at the next annual election, or at a special election, as the council may provide. Notice that a change of name is to be voted on at any election shall be published in a newspaper published in said city or town, or, if there be none, then by posting in five public places, at least ten days before the election. [19 G. A., ch. 16, §§ 1–3.]

SEC. 629. Manner of voting—result. The proposition to be submitted at such election shall be: "Shall the proposition to change the name of (here insert the name of the city or town) to (here insert the proposed name) be adopted?" and the proposition shall be printed and placed upon the ballots, and the election shall be conducted in the same manner, as provided with respect to like or similar propositions in the chapter on elections. If a majority of the votes cast is in favor of the proposed change, the clerk of the city or town shall enter upon the records thereof the result of such election, and set forth in such record the new name adopted, as well as the original name thereof, and shall cause to be filed for record a certified copy of the entry so made in the office of the recorder of the county or counties in which such city or town is situated, and in the office of the secretary of state. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 630. Change complete. When certified copies are made and filed as required by the preceding section, the change of name shall be complete, and the new name adopted shall be judicially recognized in all subsequent proceedings wherein said city or town may be interested. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 631. Abandoning special charter. Any city or town incorporated by special charter may abandon its charter and organize under the provisions of the general law, with the same territorial limits, by pursuing the course hereinafter prescribed. [C. '73, § 434.]

The mere act of a town, existing under special charter, in electing officers provided by the general incorporation act, at the time and in the manner there contemplated, does not amount to a surrender of its charter and an organization under the provisions of the general act; and where the officers, etc., are not the same the officers so elected will not even be officers de facto: Decorah v. Bullis, 25–12.

Mere irregularities in effecting the change cannot be made available in a suit by the city to enforce payment of an assessment not valid under the general law: Des Moines v. Casady, 21–570.

Where, upon an election to reorganize a city under the general incorporation laws and abandon its special charter, a person who had been acting as city marshal under the special charter was re-elected, and was entitled to hold such office until qualification under the new election, held, that the city council could not, between the time of re-election and qualification, reduce his salary: Cox v. Burlington, 43–612.

SEC. 632. Petition—election ordered. Upon a petition of legal voters, equaling ten per cent. of the number voting at the last preceding municipal election in any such city or town, to the council, praying that the question of abandoning its charter be submitted to the legal voters, the council shall immediately direct a special election to be held at which such question shall be decided, specifying at the same time the time and place of holding the same, and appointing the judges and clerks of the election. [C. '73, § 435.]

SEC. 633. Proclamation—notice. The mayor, or, in case there is no mayor, the president of the council, shall at once issue a proclamation giving notice of such election, of the question submitted to the electors, and of the time and place of holding the election, which proclamation shall be published for four consecutive weeks in some newspaper published in such city or town, and, if there is none published therein, then such proclamation shall be published by posting a copy thereof in five public places within the corporate limits of such city or town, one of which shall be on the door of the mayor's office. [C. '73, § 436.]

SEC. 634. Manner of voting—result. At such election the proposition to be submitted shall be: "Shall the proposition to abandon the special charter of (naming the city or town) be adopted?" and the proposition shall be printed and placed upon the ballots, and the election shall be conducted in the same manner, as provided with respect to like or similar propositions in the chapter on elections. The abstract of votes shall be returned to the council or board of trustees, who shall canvass the same and declare the result, which shall be entered on the journal. [C. '73, § 437.]

SEC. 635. Officers elected—ordinances—resubmission. If a majority of the votes cast be in favor of the adoption of the proposition, the charter shall be abandoned as herein provided. At the proper time prior to holding the next succeeding municipal election, as provided in the chapter on elections for cities and towns organized under this title, the mayor shall issue his proclamation, and an election shall be held and officers chosen in such city or town under the provisions of the chapter relating to elections for cities and towns of the class to which such corporation shall belong when the charter shall be abandoned. On and after the election and qualification of such officers, the charter of such city or town shall be deemed abandoned, and such city or town shall be considered organized under this title. All ordinances of such city or town in force at the time of the abandonment of such charter, not inconsistent or in conflict with the laws of the state, shall remain in force until amended or repealed by the council. If a majority of the votes be against the proposition for abandonment of the charter, the question can not be again submitted until after the expiration of one year from the time of such election. [19 G. A., ch. 164; C. '73, § 438.]

SEC. 636. Delinquent taxes. In special charter cities or towns accepting the provisions of the general incorporation laws, all delinquent taxes remaining unpaid upon the tax books thereof, except such as were levied to pay indebtedness created to take stock or aid in the building of railways, shall be certified at the time, collected and paid over as provided in the chapter relating to taxation. [C. '73, § 495.]

SEC. 637. Vested rights. All rights and property of every description which were vested in any such city or town under its former organization shall vest in the same under the organization herein contemplated, and no right or liability, either in favor of or against it, existing at the time, and no suit or prosecution of any kind, shall be affected by such change; but when a different remedy is given by this title, which can be made properly applicable to any right existing at the time such change is made, the same shall be cumulative to the remedies before provided, and may be used accordingly. [C. '73, § 439.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF ORGANIZATION AND OFFICERS.

SECTION 638. Classes of cities—towns. The municipal corporations referred to in this title shall be divided into cities of the first and cities of the second class and towns. Town sites platted and unincorporated shall be known as villages. Every municipal corporation now organized as a city of the first class, or having a population of fifteen thousand or over, shall be a city of the first class; every municipal corporation now organized as a city of the second class, or having a population of two thousand, but not exceeding fifteen thousand, shall be a city of the second class, and every municipal corporation having a population of less than two thousand shall be deemed a town. [18 G. A., ch. 139; C. '73, §§ 507–8; R., §§ 1077–8, 2105.]

SEC. 639. Change of class. Within six months after the publication of any state or federal census, the executive council shall cause a statement and list of each city or town affected thereby, in its class as a municipal corporation, to be published in some newspaper at the seat of government, and in each city or town the class of which is changed by an increase of population. [15 G. A., ch. 52; C. '73, § 509; R., § 1079.]

SEC. 640. Necessary ordinances to be passed. At the next regular annual or biennial period for the election of officers after such statement is published, showing a change of class of a city or town, the council shall make and publish such ordinances, not inconsistent with law, as may be necessary to perfect such organization in respect to the election, duties and compensation of officers. All the assets and property of the corporation shall be held and administered as provided for its new class as a corporation. Upon the change of a town to a city, for the purpose of holding the first election, the council shall divide the same into wards as provided by law. [15 G. A., ch. 52; C. '73, §§ 509–10; R., §§ 1079–80.]

Under former statutes, held, that where a town was changed into a city the officers were to be elected for the full term at the next regular period for city elections, and the term of office of the town officers would terminate: State ex rel. v. Wymen, 66 N. W., 786.

Although by 21 G. A., ch. 141, the election of city officers was made biennially and would occur as to cities then existing to which such statute was applicable, in the same year in all cities, yet it did not follow that in cities becoming such after the enactment of that statute the biennial elections must be held in the same years as in cities already existing: Ibid.

SEC. 641. Wards. Cities may be, by the council thereof, divided into wards, new ones created, or the boundaries changed, but in all cases, whether it be the creation of wards or the changing of the boundaries thereof, the same shall be laid off, as nearly as may be, in a rectangular form, conforming the lines to the center of the streets or alleys, and giving to each ward, as far as practicable, an equal population; but in cities of the second class the number shall not be increased beyond seven nor decreased to less than three. [18 G. A., ch. 26; C. '73, § 520; R., § 1092.]

SEC. 642. Regular elections. The regular municipal elections in cities and towns shall be held annually or biennially, as hereafter provided, on the last Monday in March. The voting places shall be fixed by the council, one polling place for each precinct, and the election shall be conducted in the manner provided by law for general elections. Each qualified elector may vote thereat who is a resident of the city or town, and, at the time, has been ten days a resident of the precinct in which he offers to vote. [23 G. A., ch. 1, § 5; C. '73, § 501.]

SEC. 643. Officers to be residents. Every mayor, councilman-at-large, town councilman and officer elected by the whole electorate of the city or town, or by its council, or appointed by the council, mayor or other officer of any city or town, shall be a resident and qualified elector of the city in which he shall be elected, and shall reside within the limits of said city during his term of office. [21 G. A., ch. 141, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 25; 17 G. A., chs. 9, 14; 16 G. A., ch. 58; C. '73, §§ 511, 518, 521; R., §§ 1091, 1093.]

SEC. 644. Qualifications of officers. Every councilman and other officer elected by any ward or district of any city or town shall be a qualified elector of said city or town, residing within the limits of the ward or district in which he shall be elected, and shall reside within the limits of said ward or district during the term of his office. [19 G. A., ch. 25; 17 G A., ch. 14; C. '73, § 521; R., § 1093.]

SEC. 645. Council—how composed. City and town councils shall be composed as follows: In cities of the first class, a mayor, two councilmen-at-large and one councilman from each ward; in cities of the second class, a mayor, and two councilmen from each ward; in towns, a mayor and six councilmen. [19 G. A., ch. 25; 18 G. A., ch. 120; 17 G. A., chs. 9, 14; C. '73, §§ 511, 521, 531; R., §§ 1081, 1093.]

SEC. 646. Election of councilmen. On the organization of a city or town, or on its reorganization after the change of its class, a council shall be elected at the first ensuing municipal election as follows:

1. By the election in cities of the first class of two councilmen-at-large; but if any city embraces within its limits the whole or parts of two or more townships, two of which contain one thousand or more electors, only one of the councilmen-at-large shall be chosen from any one such township. There shall also be elected at the same time one councilman from each ward, who shall be chosen by the electors residing within the limits thereof. Thereafter the successors of such councilmen-at-large and ward councilmen shall be chosen at the regular biennial elections, and shall hold office for two years. The term of all ward councilmen and councilmen-at-large heretofore elected in the year other than that in which the mayor and other city officers were elected is extended for one year.

2. In cities of the second class, two councilmen shall be elected from each ward by the electors thereof, and, at the first regular meeting of the council after such election, one of such councilmen for each ward shall be selected by lot to hold office for one year, and the other for two years, and thereafter, at each annual election, one councilman shall be elected from each ward to serve for two years.

3. In towns, six councilmen shall be elected by the electors thereof, who shall, at the first regular meeting of the council following their election, be divided by lot into three classes of two each, the members of which classes shall hold office, respectively, for one, two and three years, and, at each annual election thereafter, two councilmen shall be elected to hold office for three years. [19 G. A., ch. 25; 17 G. A., chs. 9, 14; C. '73, §§ 511, 521; R., §§ 1081, 1093.]

SEC. 647. Elective officers in cities of first class. In all cities of the first class there shall be elected, biennially, a mayor, solicitor, treasurer, auditor, city engineer, assessor, and, where there is no superior court, a police judge. [19 G. A., ch. 110; 18 G. A., ch. 201, § 1; 17 G. A. ch. 20; 16 G. A., chs. 6, 33; C. '73, §§ 390, 535; R., § 1106.]

SEC. 648. In cities of second class. In cities of the second class there shall be elected, biennially, a mayor, solicitor, treasurer and assessor. [21 G. A., ch. 141; 19 G. A., ch. 110; 16 G. A., ch. 6; C. '73, §§ 390, 517, 532; R., §§ 1090, 1103.]

SEC. 649. In towns. In towns there shall be elected, biennially, a mayor, clerk, treasurer and an assessor. [19 G. A., ch. 110; 17 G. A., ch. 9; 16 G. A., ch. 6; C. '73, §§ 390, 511, 514; R., §§ 1081, 1084.]

SEC. 650. Terms of office—assessor. Each officer named in this chapter shall hold his office until his successor is elected and qualified; but the term of office of the assessor shall commence on the first day of January, next ensuing his election. [19 G. A., ch. 110; 18 G., A. ch. 201, § 1; 16 G. A., chs. 3, 33; C. '73, § 390.]

SEC. 651. Officers appointed by council. In cities of the first class, the council, at the first meeting after the biennial election, shall appoint a clerk, a physician, a street commissioner, and, when deemed necessary, a wharf-master. If there is a board of public works, such board shall appoint the street commissioner. In cities of the second class, the council shall appoint a clerk and such other officers above named as are necessary. In towns, the council shall appoint a street commissioner and such other officers as are necessary, all to be appointed after the organization of the new council. [25 G. A., ch. 13, §§ 1, 3; 17 G. A., ch. 20, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 33, § 1; C. '73, §§ 515, 522, 532, 534; R., §§ 1086, 1093, 1103, 1105.]

SEC. 652. Officers appointed by mayor. The mayor in each city and town shall appoint a marshal who, in cities of the first class, shall be ex officio chief of police, and in cities of the second class, or towns, he may appoint one or more deputy marshals. In cities and towns he shall appoint as many policemen as the council, by general ordinance, shall direct, and such officers shall hold their positions during the pleasure of the mayor. He may also, in cases of emergency, appoint such number of special policemen as he may think proper, reporting such special appointments to the council at its next regular meeting, all such appointments to continue in force until such meeting, unless sooner terminated by the mayor. [25 G. A., ch. 13; 20 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 1, 2; 16 G. A., ch. 33, § 2; C. '73, §§ 515, 532, 534–5, 537; R., §§ 1086, 1103, 1105–6.]

SEC. 653. Deputy marshal—appointment. The marshal, in cities of the first class, may designate one or more members of the police force to act as deputies. [25 G. A., ch. 13, § 3; same, ch. 14; 20 G. A., ch. 7, § 1.]

SEC. 654. Police matrons—appointment. In cities having a population of twenty-five thousand or more, for each station-house provided therein for the detention or imprisonment of women or children under arrest, the mayor shall appoint two or more women, residents of the city, as police matrons, who shall be over thirty years of age. The appointees shall be, so far as applicable, subject to the same regulations and restrictions as policemen, and hold their positions during good behavior, unless by reason of age or infirmity they become incapacitated to perform the duties of the position. [25 G. A., ch. 15, §§ 2, 3, 5.]

SEC. 655. Other officers. Cities and towns may, by general ordinance, provide for the election at any regular municipal election, or for the appointment, of such additional officers, including superintendent of markets, harbor-masters and port wardens, usual and proper for the regulation and control of navigation, trade or commerce, or needful and proper for the good government of the city or town, or the due exercise of its corporate powers, and fix their term of office, as they may deem necessary. [16 G. A., ch. 33, §§ 1, 2; C. '73, §§ 514, 524, 528; R., §§ 1084, 1095, 1098.]

SEC. 656. Clerk of police court. The council may provide by ordinance for the appointment of a clerk of the police court by the judge thereof, who shall hold his office subject to removal; the appointment or removal, when made, to be entered in the records of the court. [C. '73, § 542; R., § 1116.]

SEC. 657. Removal of appointive officers. All persons appointed to office in any city or town may be removed by the officer or body making the appointment, unless otherwise provided.

SEC. 658. Mayor—powers and duties. In cities and towns, the mayor shall have powers and perform duties as follows:

1. Executive officer—magistrate. He shall be a conservator of the peace, and, within the limits of the same, shall have all the powers conferred upon sheriffs to suppress disorders. He shall be the chief executive officer thereof, and it shall be his duty to enforce all regulations and ordinances; he may, upon view, arrest any one guilty of a violation thereof, or of any crime under the laws of the state, and shall, upon information supported by affidavit, issue process for the arrest of any person charged with violating any ordinance of the city; shall supervise the conduct of all corporate officers, examine into the grounds of complaint made against them, and cause all neglect or violation of duty to be corrected, or report the same to the proper tribunal, that they may be dealt with as provided by law. [C. '73, §§ 506, 519, 537; R., §§ 1085, 1091, 1102, 1105.]

In an appeal from the board of equalization of a city or town notice of the appeal may be served on the mayor: Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Newton, 66 N. W., 784.

2. Office. He shall keep an office at some convenient place in the city or town, to be provided by the council, and keep the corporate seal thereof in his charge. [16 G. A., ch. 58; C. '73, § 518; R., § 1091.]

3. Signature. He shall sign all commissions, licenses and permits granted by the authority of the council, and do such other acts as by law or ordinance may require his signature or certificate. [16 G. A., ch. 58; C. '73, § 518; R., § 1091.]

4. Other duties. He shall also perform such other duties compatible with the nature of his office as the council may from time to time require. [C. '73, § 519; R., § 1091.]

5. Presiding officer—vote. In cities of the first class, he shall be the presiding officer of the council, with the right to vote only in case of a tie; in cities of the second class, he shall be a member and the presiding officer of the council, with the right to vote only in case of a tie; in towns, he shall be a member of the council and presiding officer thereof, with the same right to vote as a councilman. [18 G. A., chs. 120, 146, 17 G. A., ch. 9; 16 G. A., ch. 58; C. '73, §§ 512, 518, 531; R., §§ 1082, 1091.]

Under the Revision it was held that the mayor of cities of the second class was not the presiding officer of the city council, nor a member thereof: Cochran v. McCleary, 22–75.

The right to preside at a meeting of the council is a franchise which may be protected by proceedings in quo warranto: Ibid.

The mayor being the presiding officer of the council, and having at least a casting vote, is equally liable with the councilmen under the statute making officers of the city personally liable for failure under proper circumstances to levy a tax for the payment of a judgment against the city: Porter v. Thomson, 22–391.

The action of the mayor in erroneously announcing that a resolution is not adopted, for the reason that it has not received a three-fourths vote, when a majority vote is all that is necessary, is not judicial in its character in such a sense that it cannot be called into question in a collateral proceeding. The erroneous, arbitrary announcement cannot have the effect to nullify the act of the majority of the city council: Chariton v. Holliday, 60–391.

6. Report. He shall, at the first regular meeting of the newly elected council in April, and at such other times as he may deem expedient, report to it concerning the municipal affairs of the city or town, and recommend such measures as to him may seem advisable. [C. '73, § 534; R., § 1105.]

7. Hold police court. Until a police judge or judge of superior court shall be elected and qualified in cities entitled to elect such officer, he shall have all the powers and jurisdiction and shall hold the police court in such manner as is required of such judge. [C. '73, § 547; R., § 1121.]

8. Station-houses for women. In all cities containing a population of twenty-five thousand or more, he shall designate one or more station-houses within such city for the detention or imprisonment of all women and children under arrest in said city, and see that provisions are made by which the rooms or cells set apart for them shall be separate from and out of sight of the rooms or cells in which male prisoners are imprisoned. [25 G. A., ch. 15, § 1.]

SEC. 659. Clerk—duties. The clerk in all cities and towns shall perform the following duties: He shall attend all meetings of the council, but in no event have the right to vote on any question before it; make an accurate record of all proceedings had, rules and ordinances adopted by the council, and the same shall at all times be open to the public; he shall supply the treasurer with a statement of all warrants issued after each meeting, giving the number and amounts of each, and shall have the custody of all by-laws and ordinances of the city or town, and perform such duties as may be required by ordinance. [17 G. A., ch. 9; C. '73, §§ 512, 522; R., §§ 1082, 1093.]

SEC. 660. Treasurer—duties. The treasurer of cities and towns shall receive all money payable to the city or town, and disburse the same only on warrants drawn and signed by the proper officer, sealed with the city seal, and perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law or ordinance. He shall keep in a book provided by the town a register and description of all warrants reported to him by the clerk. When a warrant drawn on the treasury is presented for payment, and not paid for want of money, he shall indorse the fact thereon, with the date of presentation, and sign it, and thereafter it shall draw interest at six per cent. per annum, unless issued under a resolution or contract providing that it shall not draw interest, or shall draw interest at a lower rate He shall keep a record of all warrants drawn upon the treasury and presented, in a book so ruled as to show in separate columns, as to each warrant, the number, date, principal, name of drawee, when paid, to whom paid, and the amount of interest paid, and all such warrants shall be paid in the order of their presentation. He shall issue calls for outstanding warrants at any time he may have funds on hand for the payment thereof; shall give notice of the number of the warrants which will be paid, by posting a written notice thereof in the mayor's office, and in the treasurer's office when there is one, and, at the expiration of ten days from the date of the posting, interest on the warrants so named shall cease. When a warrant which draws interest is taken up, he shall also indorse upon it the date and amount of interest allowed, and such warrants shall be canceled and not reissued. He shall make returns monthly, or oftener if required by the council, to the officer drawing such warrants, showing the warrants paid and amount of principal and interest paid. He shall make a written report under oath to the council at its first regular meeting in each month, showing the financial condition of the city. [22 G. A., ch. 3, § 2; 16 G. A., ch. 33, § 2; C. '73, §§ 532, 535; R., §§ 1103, 1106.]

Where there was no ordinance of a town providing by whom orders on the treasurer should be signed or on whose order the treasurer should make payment, held, that the recorder (now the clerk, see § 649), being the ministerial officer of the council, in the absence of any provision to the contrary, was the proper officer to sign orders authorized by the council to be drawn on the treasurer, and that the treasurer, as a ministerial officer was chargeable with those duties usually pertaining to his office and might therefore be compelled by mandamus to pay orders thus authorized and drawn: Ireland v. Hunnel, 90-98.

SEC. 661. Assessor—duties—deputies. All assessors elected by cities and towns shall perform the same duties as township assessors. They may appoint such number of deputies as the council shall authorize, such appointments to be confirmed by the council. If any city or town is situated in two or more counties, the assessor shall make returns of the assessment to the proper county. [19 G. A., ch. 110; 18 G. A., ch. 201, §§ 1, 2; 16 G. A., ch. 6; C. '73, § 390.]

SEC. 662. Marshal—duties. The marshal shall have the supervision and general direction of the police force; shall be the ministerial officer of the corporation, attend upon the sittings of the mayor's and police courts, execute within his county and return all writs and other process directed to him from the mayor or police court, suppress all riots, disturbances and breaches of the peace, arrest all disorderly persons in the city or town, and all persons committing any offense against the ordinances thereof, and forthwith bring such persons before the mayor, police court, or other competent authority, for examination or trial; shall diligently enforce all laws, ordinances and regulations for the preservation of the public welfare and good order, and have the same powers and be subject to the same responsibilities as constables in similar cases. He shall pursue and arrest any person fleeing from justice in any part of the state. [20 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; C. '73, §§ 515, 533, 536-7; R., §§ 1086, 1104, 1107.]

The marshal not being charged with any duty in respect to streets and sidewalks, notice to him of defective condition of a sidewalk will not be notice to the city: Cook v. Anamosa, 66-427.

A city marshal who has properly seized stock running at large within the city limits may keep it in such manner as he sees fit, and will not lose jurisdiction thereof by placing it in a pound beyond the city limits: Pierce v. Evans, 36-495.

SEC. 663. Deputy marshals—duties. Deputy marshals may perform the duties of the marshal. [25 G. A., ch. 14; 20 G. A., ch. 7, § 1.]

SEC. 664. Policemen—powers and duties. The officers and members of the police force shall have such powers and perform such duties as may be provided by law or ordinance, and shall have the same powers to make arrests and suppress riots, disturbances and breaches of the peace as marshals. [21 G. A., ch. 92; C. '73, §§ 525, 537; R., § 1695.]

SEC. 665. Police matrons—duties. Police matrons shall have charge of all the women and children under arrest, accompanying such as may require such aid to court. They shall be subject to the authority of the marshal and the rules and regulations prescribed by his authority, and in stations, when on duty, shall be subject to the authority of the officers in command. In cities where workhouses are established for the detention of women, or where there are houses of detention, they shall have at all times the right of entering such establishments, and shall visit them whenever in their judgment such visits may be necessary. A suitable place shall be provided for the police matrons, when not on duty, for rest and refreshment. [25 G. A. ch. 15.]

SEC. 666. Other officers—powers and duties. The solicitor, engineer, auditor, physician, superintendent of markets, street commissioner, wharf-master, harbor-master, port-warden, and such additional officers as may be provided for, shall have such powers and perform such duties as are prescribed by law or ordinance. [17 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 1, 2; 16 G. A., ch. 33, §§ 1, 2; C. '73, §§ 532, 535; R., §§ 1103, 1106.]

Where neither the duties nor the compensation of city solicitor are fixed by the council, he should, unless otherwise instructed, perform such duties within the usual scope of the authority of such officer as the interests of the city may require; and he may recover reasonable compensation therefor: Kinnie v. Waverly, 42–437; Kinnie v. Waverly, 42–486.

A city attorney, being required by ordinance to act for the city in any case brought by or against it, a contract with the city for additional compensation for services rendered in a particular case pending at the time of his election, held invalid under § 677: Ryce v. Osage, 88–558.

SEC. 667. Statement of supplies. In all cities, each officer or board in charge of any department shall furnish and file in the city clerk's office, thirty days before the beginning of each fiscal year, which shall be the first day of April of each year, a sworn detailed statement of the supplies necessary for his or their department during the next fiscal year. [22 G. A., ch. 4, § 2.]

SEC. 668. City and town councils—powers and duties. All legislative and other powers granted to cities and towns shall be exercised by the councils, except those conferred upon some officer by law or ordinance. They shall perform the duties required in this code including the following:

1. Organization. The members of such council shall, on the first Monday after their election, assemble and organize the council. [C. '73, § 522; R., § 1093.]

Under the provision in § 1093 of Revision that the council should be judge of the election returns and qualification of their own members, held, that the council might go behind the returns and decide questions arising in respect thereto. It seems also that it was the judge of the returns for all city officers, including mayor: Ex parte Strahl, 16–369, 376.

2. Quorum. In all cities or towns, a majority of the whole number of members to which such corporation is entitled, including the mayor, shall be necessary to constitute a quorum. [17 G. A., ch. 9; C. '73, §§ 511, 522; R., §§ 1081, 1093.]

3. Meetings. They shall determine the time and place of holding their meetings, which shall at all times be open to the public, and, in the absence of the mayor or clerk, shall appoint a temporary chairman or clerk from their own number, which appointment shall be entered of record. [C. '73, § 524; R., § 1095.]

4. Special meetings. The mayor or any three members of the council shall call special meetings by notice to each of the members, personally served, or left at his usual place of residence, of which service a record shall be made by the clerk. [C. '73 § 524; R., § 1095.]

5. Rules—journal. They shall determine the rules of their own proceedings, and keep a journal thereof, which shall be open to the inspection and examination of any citizen. [C. '73, § 522; R., § 1093.]

6. Attendance of members. They may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as they may prescribe. [C. '73, § 522; R., § 1093.]

7. Seal. Each council shall cause to be provided a seal, in the center of which shall be the name of the city or town, and around the margin the words, "city seal" or "town seal," as the case may be, which shall be affixed to all transcripts, orders or certificates which it may be necessary or proper to authenticate. [C. '73, §§ 454, 523; R., §§ 1047, 1094.]

8. Election of officers. All appointments or elections of officers, except for the purpose of filling vacancies, in offices not filled by election by the council, shall be made viva voce, and the concurrence of a majority of the whole number of members of the council shall be required. On the vote resulting in an election or appointment, the name of each member and for whom he voted shall be recorded. [18 G. A., ch. 146, § 3; C. '73, § 493; R., § 1134.]

9. Filling vacancies. In selecting persons to fill vacancies in offices not filled by election by the council, it shall vote by ballot, and the person receiving a majority of the votes of the whole number of members shall be declared elected to fill such vacancy. [19 G. A., ch. 124, § 2.]

See State v. Dickie, 47–629.

10. Terms of officers. They shall fix by ordinance the terms of service, not exceeding one year, except in cities holding biennial elections, where such term shall not exceed two years, of all officers appointed or elected, whose terms are not prescribed by law. [C. '73, §§ 514, 524, 528; R., §§ 1084, 1095, 1098.]

11. Powers of officers. They shall prescribe by ordinance the powers to be exercised and duties to be performed by the officers appointed or elected, so far as such powers and duties are not defined by law. [C. '73, §§ 514, 524–5, 528; R., §§ 1084, 1095, 1098, 1695.]

12. Police force. They shall have power to establish a police force, and to organize the same under the general supervision of the marshal, and to provide one or more station-houses. [C. '73, §§ 525, 542; R., §§ 1116, 1695.]

13. Control of finances. They shall have the management and control of the finances and all the property, real and personal, belonging to the city or town. [C. '73, § 524; R., § 1095.]

14. Members not interested. No member of any council shall, during the time for which he has been elected, be appointed to any municipal office which shall be created, or the emoluments of which shall be increased, during the term for which he shall have been elected; nor shall he be interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract or job for work, or the profits thereof, or services to be performed for the corporation. [C. '73, § 490; R., § 1122.]

15. Provide for custody of women and children. In cities having a population of twenty-five thousand inhabitants or more, the council shall appropriate annually such sums as may be necessary for the arrangements needed to secure separate care and confinement in the station-houses of all women and children under arrest, and for the appointment, salary and maintenance of police matrons. [25 G. A., ch. 15, § 6.]

16. Appropriations. In cities of the first class, the council shall make the appropriation for all the different expenditures of the city government for each fiscal year at or before the beginning thereof, and it shall be unlawful for it or any officer, agent or employe of the city to issue any warrant, enter into any contract, or appropriate any money, in excess of the amount thus appropriated, for the different expenses of the city, during the year for which said appropriation shall be made. Any such city shall not appropriate, in the aggregate, an amount in excess of its annual legally authorized revenue; but nothing herein shall prevent such cities from anticipating their revenues for the year for which such appropriation is made, or from bonding or refunding their outstanding indebtedness. The council of such cities shall advertise in at least two newspapers published in said cities for three weeks, two insertions for each week, for bids for furnishing all supplies of every kind for the several departments of the city, not required to be advertised for by the board of public works; said advertisements to be published two weeks before the beginning of each fiscal year. [22 G. A., ch. 4.]

SEC. 669. Compensation of councilmen. Councilmen in cities of the first class shall be paid an amount prescribed by ordinance, not in excess of two hundred and fifty dollars per annum, which shall be in full compensation of all services of such councilmen of every character connected with their official duties; and in all other cities and towns they shall receive not to exceed one dollar each for every regular or special meeting, and in the aggregate not exceeding fifty dollars in any one year; but in such cities and towns the members shall be paid, in addition to the foregoing, for services as members of the board of review, an amount not exceeding one dollar for each session of not less than three hours. [22 G. A., ch. 24 § 1; C. '73, § 505; R., § 1095.]

A statute increasing the compensation of councilmen will not (under § 677) be applicable to those subsequently elected: Council Bluffs v. Waterman, 86-688.

Members of the city council are not entitled to additional compensation for their services on the board of equalization under the provisions of § 1370: Ibid.

SEC. 670. Fees of mayor. Mayors of cities and towns, where no salary is provided by ordinance in lieu of fees, shall receive, for holding a mayor's or police court, or discharging the duties of a justice of the peace, the compensation allowed by law for similar services for such officers, to be paid in the same manner. [24 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; C. '73, §§ 519, 547; R., §§ 1091, 1121.]

Under former provisions the mayor was not entitled to compensation from the county in criminal cases when acting as a justice of the peace: Howland v. Wright County, 82-164.

SEC. 671. Fees of police judge. The police judge shall be entitled, in all criminal cases prosecuted before him in behalf of the state, to the same fees, to be collected in the same manner, as a justice of the peace in like cases; in prosecutions before him in behalf of the city, to such fees, not exceeding those for services of like nature in state prosecutions, as the council may by ordinance prescribe. [C. '73, § 544; R., § 1118.]

It seems that it would not be proper for the council to provide that the police judge should only have fees in cases where judgment should be rendered in favor of the city: Crane v. Des Moines, 47-105.

As to allowing salary in lieu of fees see § 675.

SEC. 672. Compensation of police matrons. Police matrons shall receive not less in any case than the minimum salary paid to policemen in the city in which they are appointed. [25 G. A., ch. 15, § 6.]

SEC. 673. Fees of marshal and deputy. The marshal shall receive, in criminal cases arising under ordinances, the same fees as constables receive for similar services, payable from the treasury of the city or town; and in criminal cases arising under the state law, the same fees as constables receive for similar services, payable from the county treasury. In civil proceedings he shall receive the same fees as constables receive for similar services, payable in the same way. The deputy marshal shall receive the same fees for services performed as the marshal. [C. '73, §§ 515, 533, 536; R., §§ 1086, 1104, 1107.]

Under previous provisions the county was not liable to the city marshal for fees for for services in criminal cases, he being a city officer and presumably payable by the city: Christ v. Polk County, 48–302; and see Guanella v. Pottawattamie County, 84–36.

In cases where for the same services the fees allowed to sheriffs are greater than those allowed to constables, the marshal can only recover fees allowed constables: Bryan v. Des Moines, 51–590.

SEC. 674. Compensation of assessors and deputies. City and town assessors and their deputies shall receive the same compensation as township assessors, which shall be determined in the same manner and payable from the county treasury. [C. '73, § 390.]

SEC. 675. Salaries in lieu of fees. It may be provided by ordinance that any city or town officer elected or appointed shall receive a salary in lieu of all other compensation; and in such case such officer shall not receive for his own use any fees or other compensation for his services as such officer, but shall collect the fees authorized by law or ordinance, and pay the same as collected, or as prescribed by ordinance, into the city or county treasury, as the case may be. [17 G. A., ch. 56, §§ 1, 2.]

An ordinance changing the compensation of the officers named from fees to salary, as contemplated by this provision held not to affect such as were in office at the time of the passage of the act, during their term of office: Bryan v. Des Moines, 51–590.

This provision is not unconstitutional as delegating legislative authority to the city council: Des Moines v. Hillis, 55–643.

An officer having received a salary under an ordinance in pursuance of this section is estopped from claiming fees: Bryan v. Des Moines, 51–590.

It is immaterial that he has collected fees and paid them into the city treasury under protest: Christ v. Des Moines, 53–144.

The city may under this provision recover from the police judge fees received by him in criminal cases prosecuted in behalf of the state, whether received from defendants in such case or from the county: Des Moines v. Hillis, 55–643.

But the police judge may sue the county for such fees, it being his duty to collect and pay over fees due him: Labour v. Polk County, 70–568.

SEC. 676. Compensation of other officers. All officers elected or appointed in any city or town, whose compensation is not fixed by law, shall receive such salary, compensation or fees for their services as the council may by ordinance from time to time prescribe. For all attested certificates and transcripts, other than those ordered by the council, the clerk shall be paid the same fees as are allowed to county officers for like services. [16 G. A., ch. 33, § 1; C. '73, §§ 523–4, 528; R., §§ 1094–5, 1098.]

SEC. 677. Compensation not changed. The fees, salary, compensation or emoluments of any officer whose election or appointment is required or authorized by this chapter, shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he shall have been elected or appointed; nor shall any change of compensation affect any officer whose office shall be created under the authority of this chapter during his existing term, unless the office be abolished. No person who shall have resigned or vacated any office shall be eligible to the same during the time for which he was elected or appointed when, during the same time, the emoluments have been increased. [C. '73, §§ 491, 519; R., §§ 1091, 1122.]

A contract between a city and its solicitor for additional compensation for services in a particular case is invalid: Ryce v. Osage, 88–558.

A city officer cannot enter into a contract with the council binding himself to perform certain duties for less compensation than was allowed him by an ordinance of the city when he entered upon his office: Purdy v. Independence, 75–356.

A statute increasing the compensation of a particular class of officers does not, by implication, repeal this provision so as to affect those already in office: Council Bluffs v. Waterman, 86–688.

The term of office, as here contemplated, commences with the election and not with the qualification of the officer: Cox v. Burlington, 43–612.

SEC. 678. Contesting elections. The election of any person to a city or town office may be contested upon the same grounds and in the manner provided for contesting elections to county offices, so far as applicable. The mayor shall be one of the court and the presiding officer thereof, and, if his election is contested, the council shall select one of its members to act in his place.

SEC. 679. Tie vote. In the event of a tie vote for any city or town office, the election shall be determined as provided in the chapter on elections.

CHAPTER 3.

OF ORDINANCES, COURTS AND FINES.

SECTION 680. Power to pass ordinances—penalties. Municipal corporations shall have power to make and publish, from time to time, ordinances, not inconsistent with the laws of the state, for carrying into effect or discharging the powers and duties conferred by this title, and such as shall seem necessary and proper to provide for the safety, preserve the health, promote the prosperity, improve the morals, order, comfort and convenience of such corporations and the inhabitants thereof, and to enforce obedience to such ordinances by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days. [C. '73, § 482; R., §§ 1071–3.]

In general: The provisions of ordinances must be fair and reasonable: Des Moines v. Des Moines Waterworks Co., 64 N. W., 269; State Center v. Barenstein, 66–249; Ottumwa v. Zekind, 64 N. W., 646; Burlington v. Unterkircher, 68 N. W., 795; Meyers v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 57–555; Bury v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 90–106.

Under the authority here given, the city may provide for the punishment of intoxication: Bloomfield v. Trimble, 54–399; Clinton v. Gusendorf, 80–117.

But the city cannot, under this authority, fix fire limits and prevent the erection of wooden buildings therein. Such power can only be exercised as authorized by § 711: Des Moines v. Gilchrist, 67–210.

Fines: The right to enforce a city ordinance is limited to a pecuniary penalty unless there is some express act giving power to inflict other punishment: Burlington v. Kellar, 18–59.

A town cannot pass an ordinance creating a forfeiture unless clear and distinct authority be given therefor: Gosselink v Campbell, 4–296.

A fine cannot be enforced by forfeiture without trial and adjudication: Ibid.

The fact that the present statutes do not authorize forfeitures as a method of enforcing an ordinance does not prevent the city from providing that a license shall be forfeited on certain conditions, and enforcing such forfeiture; Hurber v. Baugh, 43–514.

A city may, for violation of the ordinance under which a license is granted, declare the same forfeited: Ottumwa v. Schaub, 52–515.

A city has no authority to pass an ordinance creating a forfeiture of goods and chattels as a penalty for violation of an ordinance, unless that power is expressly conferred: Henke v. McCord, 55–378.

No authority being expressly conferred by statute to punish, by forfeiture, the keeping of intoxicating liquors for sale, held, that an ordinance to that effect was invalid: Ibid.

An action to recover a fine imposed by ordinance may properly be brought in the name of the town: Centerville v. Miller, 51–712.

Prosecution: Proceedings to punish for violation of an ordinance constitute a criminal prosecution: Jaquith v. Royce, 42–406; State v. Vail, 57–103; Creston v. Nye, 74–369; Davenport v. Bird, 34–524; Columbus City v. Cutcomb, 61–672.

The regularity of the incorporation of a city or town, existing de facto, cannot be inquired into collaterally in an action brought for the violation of an ordinance: Decorah v. Gillis, 10–234.

The provision of the constitution (art. V, § 8) requiring prosecutions to be in the name of the state of Iowa refers to such criminal prosecutions as shall be instituted and prosecuted before a tribunal provided for in the constitution under the statutes of the state, and does not refer to prosecutions for violations of city ordinances: Davenport v. Bird, 34–524.

A proceeding for a violation of a city ordinance may be brought in the name of the city when so provided by law or ordinance; but if such prosecution is brought in the name of the state, without objection thereto until upon appeal, an objection upon that ground will not be sustained: State v. King, 37–462.

Void ordinance: The fact that a provision in an ordinance is void does not necessarily give a tax payer the right to an injunction against the exercise of power thereunder: Dodge v. Council Bluffs, 57–560.

A municipal corporation cannot be enjoined from passing an act because, if passed, it would be unconstitutional, or void: Des Moines Gas Co. v. Des Moines, 44–505.

SEC. 681. Adoption of ordinances. No ordinance shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title; and no ordinance or section thereof shall be revised or amended unless the new ordinance contain the entire ordinance or section revised or amended, and the former ordinance or section shall be repealed. [C. '73, § 489; R., § 1122.]

Containing more than one subject: An ordinance defining and prescribing the punishment for certain offenses, and in which many such offenses are included, does not contain "more than one subject:" State v. Wells, 46-662.

The provision that an ordinance shall contain but one subject is a limitation on the power of the council to enact ordinances. It is mandatory, and an ordinance passed in violation of it is inoperative because of want of power in the council to enact it: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66-687.

But this provision does not forbid the enactment in a single ordinance of all the legislation which may be necessary to the accomplishment of a single object. Therefore, held, that an ordinance providing for the vacation of an alley and granting the ground covered by the vacated alley to a private person, was not void as containing more than one subject: Ibid.

Subject expressed in title: Where the title of an ordinance absolutely prohibiting the sale of vinous and malt liquors was "Regulating the use and sale of intoxicating liquors," held, that the subject of the ordinance was not clearly expressed in the title and that the ordinance was therefore void: Cantril v. Sainer, 59-26.

Amendment: Under the statutory provision requiring that an ordinance or section thereof shall not be revised or amended unless the new ordinance contains the entire ordinance or section revised or amended, held, that where but one section of an ordinance is amended that section alone need be contained entire in the amendment: Decorah v. Dunstan, 38-96.

Where a city, by ordinance, granted to a street railway the right to lay a single or double track over its streets, in pursuance of which a single track was laid, and afterwards the city, before the laying of a double track, amended the ordinance so as to prohibit the laying of such double track, held, that the amendment was a change in the terms of the contract entered into by the original ordinance, and was therefore void: Burlington v. Burlington Street R. Co., 49-144.

Where a new ordinance does not attempt to amend the old by adding to or taking from one of its sections, but contains in full the section as it was designed to be when amended, that is a sufficient compliance with the statute: Larkin v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 85-492.

Repeal: An ordinance making provisions repugnant to a former one will operate to repeal it, though the former one be not contained in the latter: Des Moines v. Hillis, 55-643.

It seems that where it is required that a resolution for a particular purpose must be passed by a vote greater than a majority vote, a repeal thereof is sufficient if concurred in by a majority vote: Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

SEC. 682. Reading. Ordinances of a general or permanent nature, and those for the appropriation of money, shall be fully and distinctly read on three different days, unless three-fourths of the council shall dispense with the rule. [C. '73, § 489; R., § 1122.]

Under the provision requiring an ordinance to be read on three different days before its passage, it is not meant that the ordinance must be read at three general meetings. Where it appeared that an ordinance was read on three different days, held, that this was sufficient, although the last two of the meetings at which it was read were special meetings held by adjournment: Cutcomp v. Utt, 60-156.

It is not necessary that the three readings be before the same body. If one or more of them take place before the change of the council by reason of an election, and another afterward, that is sufficient. The council is deemed a continuing body: McGraw v. Whitson, 69-348.

It is not intended that all unfinished business pending before the council shall be dropped at each change of membership by reason of new members taking their seats: Ibid.

Where by less than the three-fourths vote required by the statutory provision above referred to the requirement of reading on three different days was dispensed with and the ordinance declared passed on the day of the first reading, held, that such ordinance was void: Harner v. Rowley, 51-610.

It is not necessary that the yeas and nays on a vote to suspend the rule requiring reading on three different days be recorded; and where a sufficient number of members to suspend the rule appear to have been present, and such motion is declared adopted, it will be presumed that a sufficient majority voted therefor: State v. Vail, 53-550.

The record reciting the suspension of a rule requiring three readings on separate days cannot be impeached, in a prosecution under an ordinance thus passed, by oral evidence showing that such suspension was not carried by the requisite majority: Eldora v. Burlingame, 62-32.

The provisions requiring three readings apply only to ordinances and not to resolutions: Strohm v. Iowa City, 47-42.

Where it appeared that by three-fourths vote the rules were suspended, so as to authorize the second and third readings on the same day, held, that such showing brought the case within the provisions of this section, "suspend" being equivalent to "dispense:" Bayard v. Baker, 76-220.

SEC. 683. Adoption—majority vote. No resolution or ordinance for any of the purposes hereinafter set forth shall be adopted without the concurrence of a majority of the whole number of members elected to the council, to wit:

1. To pass or adopt any by-law or ordinance;
2. To pass or adopt any resolution or order to enter into a contract;
3. To pass or adopt any ordinance for the appropriation or payment of money; but in towns, by-laws, ordinances, and the resolutions and orders set forth in this section, shall require for their passage or adoption a concurrence of four councilmen, or of three councilmen and the mayor. On the passage or adoption of every by-law, ordinance, and every such resolution or order, the yeas and nays shall be called and recorded. No money shall be appropriated except by ordinance. [18 G. A., ch. 146, §§ 2, 3; C. '73, §§ 489, 493; R., §§ 1122, 1134.]

Adoption: Under the language of § 489 of Code of '73, the words "for the appropriation or payment of money" limit "resolutions" as well as "orders," and other resolutions than those "for the appropriation or payment of money" (for instance, to change the boundaries of a city or town), did not require the concurrence of a majority of all the trustees: Strohm v. Iowa City, 47–42.

Where it appeared from the journal of the proceedings of the council that a certain resolution was adopted, the nature of which was such that under the statute a three-fourths vote was necessary to pass it, held, that it would be presumed that a sufficient number voted for it, as required by law: Brewster v. Davenport, 51–427.

Under the rule of the council of a city, providing that a member directly interested in any question could not vote thereon, held, that in a particular case a certain member was interested otherwise than as the general public in the making of an improvement, and that an ordinance in respect thereto, which only received a sufficient number of votes for its passage by counting the vote of such member, was not valid: Buffington Wheel Co. v. Burnham, 60–493.

Where it appeared that a resolution was offered at a council meeting, and was entered of record by order of the council as adopted by it, held, that its adoption would be inferred although the record failed to show that it was adopted: Taylor v. McFadden, 84–262.

The act of the mayor as presiding officer of the council, in announcing the vote of the council, is ministerial and not judicial. He cannot by an erroneous and arbitrary announcement qualify or render invalid the action of the council: Chariton v. Holliday, 60–391.

So where the mayor erroneously announced that a resolution was not adopted for a reason that it did not receive a three-fourths vote, when a majority vote was all that was necessary to its adoption, held, that the resolution was legally adopted: Ibid.

Under special provisions held the power of changing the grade of a street should be exercised by ordinance and not by resolution: McManus v. Hornaday, 68 N. W., 812.

The corporate authority in towns being vested in the mayor, recorder and six trustees, the record of the passage of an ordinance disclosing that five trustees and the mayor voted in favor of it, held sufficient to show its passage, although it did not appear that the nays were called, the record not disclosing that any other members of the council were present than those voting yea: Bayard v. Baker, 76–220.

Yeas and nays: Under a special charter not containing an express provision for the recording of the yeas and nays on the passing of an ordinance, held, that as the record showed that all of the aldermen voted for the ordinance that was sufficient to prove its adoption, without any record of the yeas and nays; Preston v. Cedar Rapids, 63 N. W., 577.

The requirement that the yeas and nays be called and recorded upon the passage of an ordinance is mandatory, and unless the record affirmatively shows such fact the ordinance will be invalid: Olin v. Meyers, 55–209.

Majority vote: Upon the passage of an ordinance the yeas and nays must be called and entered of record, and a majority of all the members elected to the council must vote in favor of the ordinance before it can be regarded as passed; but a resolution, unless it is proposed thereby to enter into a contract, may be lawfully passed by a majority of the members present: Laughlin v. Washington, 63 625.

Under prior statutes resolutions for the appropriation of money were required to be passed by a majority vote of all the members, but other resolutions only required the concurrence of a majority of those present: Strohm v. Iowa City, 47–42.

Contracts: This section defines how the order to contract shall be made and evidenced when directed by the council, but it is not a limitation on the power of the city to contract otherwise. Municipal corporations may, through their authorized agents, contract in parol the same as individuals: Indianola v. Jones, 29–282; Duncombe v. Fort Dodge, 38–281.

SEC. 684. Two-thirds vote. No resolution or ordinance for any of the purposes hereinafter set forth, except as otherwise provided by law, shall be adopted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the whole number of the members elected to the council, to wit:

1. Directing the opening, straightening or widening of any street, avenue, highway or alley;
2. Directing the making of any improvement which will require proceedings to condemn private property;
3. Directing any improvement or repair of a street, avenue, highway or alley, the cost of which is to be assessed upon the property, or against the owners thereof, unless two-thirds of the owners to be charged therefor shall petition in writing for the same.

On the passage of every such ordinance or resolution, the yeas and nays shall be called and recorded. [C. '73, § 494; R., § 1135.]

Where an ordinance provided the kind, character and width of sidewalks, and the resolution directed the construction of a particular sidewalk in accordance with such ordinance, held, that this was a sufficient designation of the material, etc., of which the sidewalk was to be constructed: Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

Where a committee was appointed by the council to report on the propriety of establishing a certain sidewalk, but only one of the committee reported and the work was ordered, held, that in such matters the councilmen might act upon personal knowledge or otherwise, and the action was not invalid: Brewster v. Davenport, 51-427.

SEC. 685. Signing by mayor—veto—passing over veto. The mayor shall sign every ordinance or resolution passed by the council before the same shall be in force, and, if he refuses to sign any such ordinance or resolution, he shall call a meeting of the council within fourteen days thereafter, and return the same, with his reasons therefor. If he fails to call the meeting within the time fixed above, or fails to return the ordinance or resolution, with his reasons, as herein required, such ordinance or resolution shall become operative without such signature, and the clerk shall record it in the ordinance book, with a minute of the facts making it operative. Upon the return of any such ordinance or resolution by the mayor to the council, it may pass the same over his objections, upon a call of the yeas and nays, by not less than a two-thirds vote of the council, and the clerk shall certify on said ordinance or resolution that the same was passed by a two-thirds vote of the council, and sign it officially as clerk. [20 G. A., ch. 192.]

Held that the provisions of the acts of 20 G. A., ch. 192, and the 22 G. A., ch. 2, requiring the mayor to sign every resolution passed by the city council before such resolution should take effect or be enforced, were mandatory, and bonds issued under such resolutions not so signed were void: Heins v. Lincoln, 71 N. W., 189.

SEC. 686. Recording—publishing. All ordinances shall, as soon as may be after their passage, be recorded in a book kept for that purpose, and be authenticated by the signature of the presiding officer of the council and the clerk; and all ordinances of a general or permanent nature, and those imposing any fine, penalty or forfeiture, shall be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the city or town; and it shall be sufficient defense to any suit or prosecution for such fine, penalty or forfeiture to show that no such publication was made; but if no such newspaper is published within the limits of the corporation, then such ordinances may be published by posting up copies thereof in three public places within the limits thereof, two of which places shall be the post-office and the mayor's office of such city or town. When the ordinance is published in a newspaper, it shall take effect from and after its publication; when published by posting, it shall take effect five days thereafter. Immediately following the record of every ordinance, the clerk shall append a certificate, stating therein the time and manner of publication thereof, which certificate shall be presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated. [26 G. A., ch. 15; C. '73, § 492; R., § 1133.]

Where it was required that a resolution for improvement of a street be published, held, that personal service on a party rendered publication unnecessary so far as he was concerned: Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

Where by ordinance a resolution for the making of improvements and assessing the expense thereof on abutting property is required to be published, a failure to make such publication will render the resolution void: Dubuque v. Wooton, 28-571; Starr v. Burlington, 45-87.

Action to enjoin the enforcement and carrying out of an ordinance cannot be maintained on the ground that it has not been properly published as required by the charter, where such publication might be completed after the time when the action is brought: Dodge v. Council Bluffs, 57-560.

Where it is attempted to disprove the publication of an ordinance by way of a defense in a criminal prosecution thereunder, oral evidence is admissible to establish the fact of publication: Eldora v. Burlingame, 62-32.

The city council has no authority to direct the publication of their proceedings, aside from the ordinances enacted by them, and bind the city therefor: Stidger v. Red Oak, 64-465.

Where the ordinance of a municipal corporation is introduced in evidence, it is to be considered at least prima facie valid and in force without proof of publication. State v. King, 37-462.

Where it appeared that an ordinance of the town of Bayard was published in the "Bayard News," etc., held, that this was sufficient evidence of the publication, although the paper was not shown to be a newspaper of general circulation in the corporation, it being presumed that the town officers performed the duties with which they were charged with reference to such publication: Bayard v. Baker, 76-220.

A certificate of the town recorder to an ordinance introduced in evidence, that it was "a true copy of ordinance . . . as passed by the town council, at the meeting of . . .," held sufficient to raise the presumption that the ordinance was properly recorded, and that the copy to which it was attached was a true copy of the paper duly recorded: Ibid.

Where it was claimed in an action for injuries at a railroad crossing within city limits that the defendant's train was being operated at a rate of speed prohibited by the city ordinance, held, that an objection to the ordinance for want of publication being made it was error to admit it without proof of such publication. But in a prosecution under an ordinance the burden is on defendant to show want of publication: Larkin v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 85-492.

In a particular case, held, that the showing in regard to the inability to introduce in evidence the paper in which publication of the ordinance was made, or any record of such publication was sufficient to authorize the introduction of parol proof to show such publication: Larkin v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 91-654.

It has been said that parol proof of such publication is admissible as primary evidence: Ibid.; Des Moines v. Casady, 21-570.

A paper purporting to be a resolution passed by a city council levying a tax, marked on the back "adopted," such indorsement being in the handwriting of a person who was at the time city recorder, is not competent evidence of the action of the council. It is not such a record as the law requires: Hintrager v. Kiene, 62-605.

It is competent for the city, when not inconsistent with the restrictions of its charter, to prescribe by ordinance the steps to be taken in order to acquire jurisdiction over particular subjects. If these steps are not taken, and the requirements of the ordinance are mandatory, the act of the city in attempting to exercise its authority will be void: Dubuque v. Wooton, 28-571; Starr v. Burlington, 45-87.

Therefore, where an ordinance providing for improvement of streets required that such improvement should be ordered by resolution describing the streets and the improvement, and that notice be given by publication, held, that both these requirements were mandatory, and the record failing to show the passage of the resolution or its publication, the city acquired no jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and the sale of adjoining property for the making such improvements was void: Starr v. Burlington, 45-87.

SEC. 687. Published ordinances. When any city or town shall cause or has heretofore caused its ordinances to be published in book or pamphlet form, such book or pamphlet shall be received as evidence of the passage and legal publication of such ordinances, as of the dates mentioned or provided for therein, in all courts and places, without further proof. When the ordinances are so published, it shall not be necessary to publish them in the manner provided for in the preceding section. [19 G. A., ch. 128, § 1.]

SEC. 688. Police court—jurisdiction. The police court shall be a court of record, and have a seal to be provided by the council, with the name of the state in the center, and style of the court around the margin. It shall be held in suitable rooms to be provided by the council, and shall always be open for the dispatch of business. It shall have, in all criminal cases, the powers and jurisdiction of justices of the peace, and the jurisdiction of a mayor's court in the case of violation of the city ordinances. [C. '73, §§ 542, 543, 545; R., §§ 1116, 1117, 1119.]

The provisions of the Code of '73 relating to police courts, so far as they differed from the corresponding provisions of the Revision, held not applicable to cities under special charter: Weir v. Allen, 47-482.

SEC. 689. Clerk. The clerk of the police court shall not be in any way concerned as counsel or agent in the prosecution or defense of any person before such court. [C. '73, § 542; R., § 1116.]

SEC. 690. Jurors. Provisions shall be made by ordinance for selecting, summoning and impaneling jurors in the police court, who shall have the qualifications of jurors as provided by law, and for all other matters touching said court that may tend to make it efficient. [C. '73, § 542, 545; R., §§ 1116, 1119.]

While exercising the powers and jurisdiction of justices of the peace, juries may be necessary; but in the trial of offenses against an ordinance of the city the defendant has no right to a trial by jury. (See § 692): Zelle v. McHenry, 51–572.

SEC. 691. Jurisdiction of mayor. The mayor shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all actions or prosecutions for violations of the city or town ordinances. He shall also have, in criminal matters, the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, co-extensive with the county, and, in civil cases, the same jurisdiction within the city or town as a justice of the peace has within the township. None of the jurisdiction referred to in this section shall be exercised by the mayors in cities having a superior or police court. If the mayor or judge of the superior or police court is absent or unable to act, the nearest justice of the peace shall have jurisdiction and hold his court in criminal proceedings, and receive the statutory fees, to be paid by the city or county, as the case may be. [24 G. A., ch. 6, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 189, § 1; C. '73, §§ 506, 546; R., §§ 1085, 1102, 1105, 1120.]

As to ordinances: It being plainly provided that a mayor shall have exclusive jurisdiction for violation of a city ordinance, an action in the district court for such violation cannot be maintained: Lansing v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 85–215.

As justice of the peace: The civil jurisdiction of a mayor, like that of a justice of the peace, extends throughout the county: Weber v. Hamilton, 72–577.

The division of a county into two districts for judicial purposes does not operate to limit the jurisdiction of the mayor to a portion of the county: Deere v. Council Bluffs, 86 591.

The jurisdiction of the mayor is not exclusive under § 506 of Code of '73, but concurrent with that of justices of the peace: Jaquith v. Royce, 42–406.

Under prior statutes, although the mayor was clothed with the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, there was no provision for allowing him the same or any other fees in criminal cases when exercising such jurisdiction: Upton v. Clinton County, 52–311. But now see § 670.

The court of a mayor is not a court of record: Santo v. State, 2–165, 220.

SEC. 692. Procedure—appeal—judicial notice of ordinances. The proceedings before a mayor or a police court shall be, as far as applicable, in accordance with the law regulating similar proceedings before a justice of the peace, unless otherwise provided; but there shall be no change of venue in actions or prosecutions under ordinances, and the trial shall be by the court without a jury, except on appeal; appeals and writs of error shall be taken from the mayor or the police court in the same time and manner, and subject to the same restrictions. If a city or town is situated in two or more counties, the appeal or writ of error shall be taken to or in the district court of the county in which the mayor's court or police court is held. On the hearing of such appeal, or writ of error, the court shall take judicial notice of the ordinances of the city or town. [18 G. A., ch. 77, § 1; C. '73, §§ 506, 546, 4707; R., §§ 1085, 1102, 1105, 1120, 5105.]

Procedure: Prior to the adoption of this express provision as to change of venue it was held that there could be no change of venue from the police court in prosecutions for violation of city ordinances: Zelle v. McHenry, 51–572.

Under prior provisions it was held that the rules governing changes of venue before justices were applicable in proceedings before a mayor: Finch v. Marvin, 46–384.

But the filing of a motion for a change of venue did not deprive the mayor of his jurisdiction, and if the motion was overruled the ruling was, at most, simply an error, and a judgment subsequently rendered was not void: Ottumwa v. Schaub, 52–515.

When a change of venue is granted in a criminal trial before a justice of the peace there is no authority to send it to the mayor of a city or town; it should be sent to the next nearest justice: State v. Jamison, 69 N. W., 529.

Rules regulating appeals from justices in criminal cases are applicable to proceedings before the mayor: State v. Hoag, 46–337; or a police court: Burlington v. Unterkircher, 68 N. W., 675.

If appeal is taken to the district court, from a conviction in police or mayor's court for violating a city ordinance, the city may appeal from the district court to the supreme court, just as the state may in prosecutions by the state, (see § 5670): Burlington v. Unterkircher, 68 N. W., 795; Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61–672.

Judicial notice of ordinances: The mayor of a city is required to take judicial notice of city ordinances in a prosecution for their violation, without their being pleaded: Conboy v. Iowa City, 2–90; State v. Leiber, 11–407; Laporte City v. Goodfellow, 47–572.

A district court cannot except under this provision take judicial notice of the ordinances of a city: Garvin v. Wells, 8–286; Goodrich v. Brown, 30–291; Wolf v. Keokuk, 48–129.

Courts will take judicial notice of the charter or laws under which a city is incorporated, and it is not therefore necessary, in an action for negligence in regard to its streets, to allege and prove the power possessed by the city over its streets under the laws of the city: Stier v. Oskaloosa, 41–353.

As the statute requires the court to take judicial notice of the fact of the incorporation of incorporated towns, it will take judicial notice of the acts by which a town becomes incorporated so far as they are made to appear upon public records provided by law for such purpose; and as the petition for the incorporation must describe the territory of the town accompanied by a plat and be presented to the circuit court of the proper county, the court will take judicial notice in what county the incorporated town is situated: State v. Reader, 60–527.

SEC. 693. Fines recovered. Fines and penalties may in all cases, and in addition to any other mode provided, be recovered by action before a justice of the peace or other court of competent jurisdiction, in the name of the proper municipal corporation, for its use. In any such action, where pleading is necessary, it shall be sufficient to declare generally for the amount claimed to be due in respect to the violation of the ordinance, referring to its title and the date of its adoption or passage, and showing, as near as may be, the facts of the alleged violation. [C. '73, § 483; R., § 1074.]

This section has no reference to criminal prosecutions, and applies solely to civil actions for the recovery of a fine or forfeiture: Goodrich v. Brown, 30–291.

As to authority to impose fines and forfeitures, see § 680.

SEC. 694. Commitment. Whenever a fine and costs imposed for the violation of any ordinance are not paid, the person convicted may, by the court having jurisdiction of the case, be committed to jail until the fine and costs are paid, not to exceed thirty days. [C. '73, § 484.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF GENERAL POWERS.

SECTION 695. Bodies corporate—name—authority. Cities and towns are bodies politic and corporate, under such name and style as may be selected at the time of their organization, with the authority vested in the mayor and a common council, together with such officers as are in this title mentioned or may be created under its authority, and shall have the general powers and privileges granted, and such others as are incident to municipal corporations of like character, not inconsistent with the statutes of the state, for the protection of their property and inhabitants, and the preservation of peace and good order therein, and they may sue and be sued, contract and be contracted with, acquire and hold real and personal property, and have a common seal. [C. '73, §§ 454–6, 517, 523–4; R., §§ 1047, 1056–7, 1090, 1094–5; C. '51, § 664.]

Extent of powers: Cities have no inherent jurisdiction to make laws or adopt regulations of government. They are governments of enumerated powers, acting by delegated authority, and are therefore different from state legislatures, which may exercise such powers of government coming within a certain designation of legislative power as the constitution does not expressly or impliedly prohibit; Keokuk v. Scroggs, 39–447.

Cities can exercise such powers as are expressly granted and such implied ones as are necessary to make available the powers expressly conferred and essential to effect the purposes of the corporation, and these powers are strictly construed: Ibid.

Only such powers and rights can be exercised under a grant of power to a municipal corporation as are clearly comprehended in the words of the act or derived therefrom by necessary implication, regard being had to the object of the grant: Clark v. Davenport, 14–494.

A municipal corporation can possess and exercise the following powers and no others: first, those granted in express words; second, those necessarily implied or necessarily incident to the powers expressly granted; third, those absolutely essential to the declared objects and purposes of the corporation: Merriam v. Moody's Ex'rs, 25–163; Hanger v. Des Moines, 52–193; Clark v. Des Moines, 19–199.

Any doubt or ambiguity arising from the terms used by the legislature in a grant of power to a municipal corporation must be resolved against the existence of the power and in favor of the public: Clark v. Davenport, 14–494; Merriam v. Moody's Ex'rs, 25–163; State v. Smith, 31–493; Keokuk v. Scroggs, 39–447; Logan v. Pyne, 43–524.

Power of a municipal corporation to provide for the accomplishment of certain results does not necessarily impose upon it a liability for their imperfect accomplishment: Vanhorn v. Des Moines, 63–447.

Cities and other municipal corporations can exercise only such authority as is expressly granted by their charters, or legislative acts creating them, or necessarily implied in such grant, or incident thereto; and reasonable doubts as to the existence of authority in such corporations are always to be resolved against it: Brockman v. Creston, 79–587.

Cities have power to dispose of their real property for purposes authorized by law, and for no other purpose: Ibid.

Therefore, where a city attempted to transfer to the county, for court-house purposes, property belonging to the city, and used as the city hall, held, that such transfer was without authority, and could be enjoined at the suit of a tax-payer: Ibid.

A nonresident tax-payer may maintain such action, and it is immaterial whether he is a tax-payer to a large amount or not: Ibid.

Municipal corporations have, and can only exercise, such powers as are expressly granted to them by law and such incidental ones as are necessary to make such powers available, and are essential to effectuate the purposes of the corporation, and those powers are strictly construed: Becker v. Keokuk Water-works, 79–419.

Therefore, held, that a city had no authority to insert in a contract with a water-works company a stipulation for indemnity to tax-payers for damages caused by failure of the company to furnish water in accordance with the terms of such contract: Ibid.

Liability for acts of officers: The city is not liable for neglect or non-feasance of its officers or agents in exercising the powers conferred: Ogg v. Lansing, 35–495.

A municipal corporation will not be liable for the acts of its officers which it has no power to authorize: Field v. Des Moines, 39–575.

A city is not liable for the acts of its officers in attempting to enforce police regulations. As it cannot authorize them to do an unlawful act, neither can it become liable for such act by ratification: Calwell v. Boone, 51–687.

The fact that the officers of a town engage in doing an act in violation of its ordinances, without effort being made to prevent their doing such act, will not render the corporation liable for damages: Ball v. Woodbine, 61–83.

The fact that an ordinance requiring a license to be taken out by transient merchants is void, does not render the city or town enacting such ordinance liable for the unlawful act of its officers in attempting to enforce such ordinance: Easterly v. Irvin, 68 N. W., 919; Trescott v. Waterloo, 26 Fed., 592.

As to liability of city for malfeasance or negligence of its officers in regard to street improvements, see notes to § 754.

As to liability for loss from failure of water supply, see notes to § 720.

SEC. 696. Prevention of nuisances—regulation of slaughter houses. They shall have power to prevent injury or annoyance from anything dangerous, offensive or unhealthy, and to cause any nuisance to be abated; to provide for the destruction of weeds and other noxious growths upon any of the lots therein; to provide for the immediate seizure and destruction of tainted or unsound meat or other provisions; to establish all needful regulations as to the management of packing and slaughter houses, renderies, tallow chandleries and soap factories, bone factories, tanneries, and manufactories of fertilizers and chemicals, within the limits of such cities or towns; to regulate and restrain the deposit and removal of all offensive material and substances, and the engendering of offensive odors and sights therefrom, so as to protect the public against the same; to establish and regulate slaughter houses; and, in cities having five thousand or more inhabitants, to build and control the same. [22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 9; C. '73, §§ 456, 526; R., §§ 1057, 1096.]

The power to abate nuisances does not enable the council to determine conclusively that a particular thing constitutes a nuisance; and if it orders the removal of a thing which is in fact not a nuisance, the person causing its removal will be individually liable in damages: Cole v. Kegler, 64–59.

The power given in relation to nuisances is to abate them, and in the exercise of this power a city cannot provide for the punishment by fine of one who maintains a nuisance: Nevada v. Hutchins, 59–506.

Under the authority of this section, a city cannot by ordinance provide for the imposition of fines against persons committing a nuisance. The power of the city is limited to the abatement of such nuisance: Knoxville v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 83–636.

The power to suppress does not imply the power to punish, and must be exercised in such way that suppression shall be the direct, and not merely the incidental, result of the exercise of power: Charlton v. Barber, 54–360.

A municipal corporation is not authorized to bring an action in equity to enjoin and abate a nuisance on the ground that it is injurious to its citizens, and the authority given by this section must be exercised through the medium of an ordinance, and not by equitable proceedings in court: Ottumwa v. Chinn, 75–405.

SEC. 697. Burial of the dead—cemeteries. They shall have power to regulate the burial of the dead; to provide, without the limits of the corporation, places for the interment of the dead; to cause any body interred contrary to such regulations to be taken up and buried in accordance therewith; to exercise over all cemeteries within their limits, and those without their limits established by their authority, the powers conferred upon township trustees with reference to cemeteries; and to authorize the establishment of crematories for the cremation of the dead, within or without the limits of such corporation, and to regulate the same. [C, '73, § 458; R., § 1060.]

As to cemeteries, see also §§ 583–589.

SEC. 698. Filling or draining lots. They shall have power to cause any lot of land within their limits, on which water at any time becomes stagnant, to be filled up or drained in such manner and within such time as may be directed by resolution of the council. Service of a copy of said resolution shall be made upon the owner of such lot, if residing in the county where the same is situated; otherwise publication of such notice shall be made once each week for two consecutive weeks in a daily or weekly newspaper published within such city or town, or, if there be no such newspaper, then by publication of the same in a newspaper published in said county. On the failure of such owner to comply with such directions within the time fixed, it may be done by said city or town, and the costs and expenses thereof assessed against said lot, which shall be a debt due to said corporation from the owner of said lot, and shall, moreover, from the time of the adoption of such resolution, be a lien thereon as provided in case of special assessments. [C. '73, § 480; R., § 1070.]

The city has no authority to order such lots to be filled to grade where it appears that a much less amount of filling would prevent stagnant water standing thereon: Bush v. Dubuque, 69–233.

The word "lot" means any portion, piece or division of land: Buell v. Ball, 20–282.

Service by publication is sufficient under this section. Personal service is not necessary: Independence v. Purdy, 46–202.

SEC. 699. Drainage preserved. They shall have power to require the owner or lessee of any lot or tract of ground within their limits, extending into, across or bordering upon any hollow or ravine which constitutes a drain for surface water, or a watercourse of any kind, who shall, by grading or filling such lot or tract of ground, obstruct the flow of water through such watercourse, to construct through such lot or land a sufficient drain or passageway for water, within such time as the council may designate, notice of which action shall be given as in the preceding section. Upon the failure of such owner or lessee to construct such drain or passageway within the time so fixed, the city or town may construct the same, and assess the costs and expenses thereof on such lot or tract of ground, and the same shall be a lien thereon as provided in case of special assessments. [16 G. A., ch. 116, § 18.]

SEC. 700. Regulations—licenses. They shall have power to regulate, license and tax hotels, restaurants and eating houses; to define by ordinance who shall be considered transient merchants; to regulate, license and tax their sales and those of auctioneers, bankrupt and dollar stores, and the like, but the exercise of such power shall not interfere with sales made by sheriffs, constables, coroners, marshals, executors, guardians, assignees of insolvent debtors or bankrupts, or any other person required by law to sell real or personal property; to regulate, license and tax peddlers, plumbers, bill-posters, itinerant doctors, itinerant physicians and surgeons, junk dealers, scavengers, pawnbrokers, and persons receiving actual possession of personal property as security for loans, with or without a mortgage or bill of sale thereon. [22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 24; C. '73, §§ 462–3; R., § 1063.]

Power to license: Neither the power to tax nor the power to regulate gives the right to license. So held in case of taverns, etc., under former provisions: Burlington v. Bumgardner, 42–673.

But, held, that under the power to prohibit the sale of wine, beer, etc., the city might impose a license: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47–597.

The power to license does not authorize taxation for revenue. Licenses are a part of the police regulations and should be charged for as such; and while a court may interfere if the sum charged as license is unjust or oppressive, or levied for the purpose of raising revenue, yet where it does not appear that the charges fixed by the corporation for the expense and enforcement of the license and the protection of the person licensed, under police regulations connected with or growing out of the license, are not necessary and proper, the court will not interfere: Burlington v. Putnam Ins. Co., 31–102.

The right to fix the charge for the license, which is vested in the city, will also authorize it to vary the amount with different parties as may be deemed prudent and just: Ibid.

Where the city has power to impose a license it may leave the amount thereof within certain limits to the discretion of the mayor: Decorah v. Dunstan, 38–96.

A municipal corporation can exercise no power of taxation unless it be expressly conferred by the legislature or absolutely necessary to carry out some other power expressly conferred, and in case of doubt the power will be denied: State v. Smith, 31–493.

Where a city is authorized to impose licenses on trades and occupations, such regulations are required to be reasonable, fair, and not oppressive: Des Moines v. Des Moines Water Works Co., 64 N. W., 269; Burlington v. Unterkircher, 68 N. W., 795.

When a reasonable discretion in fixing a license has been exercised by the city the result reached is final and conclusive so long as the conditions remain substantially unchanged; but the reasonableness of the ordinance is usually for the court and not for the jury: Burlington v. Unterkircher, 68 N. W., 795.

The presumption in the first instance is that the ordinance is reasonable and valid and the burden is on the defendant prosecuted under such an ordinance to show that it is not: Ibid.

The power delegated to a town to regulate peddlers and transient merchants does not give it the right to impose a tax, but it will be presumed that in enacting an ordinance on the subject the intention was to exercise the power of regulation: Easterly v. Irwin, 68 N. W., 919.

In imposing a license the city is not limited to such fees as will cover the necessary expenses of issuing the license and supervising the business licensed: Burlington v. Unterkircher, 68 N. W., 795.

One who carries on a business for which a license is required without procuring such license acts illegally and cannot recover compensation for services rendered in the pursuance of such business: Richardson v. Brix, 63 N. W., 325.

Transient merchants: The legislature may confer upon a city power to tax transient merchants doing business in the city: Mt. Pleasant v. Clutch, 6–546.

This section gives general power to regulate and license sales by auctioneers, etc.: Decorah v. Dunstan, 38–96.

A resident merchant, engaged in selling goods at retail, who employs an auctioneer to sell part of his goods, is not an auctioneer in such sense that he can be compelled to pay a license under this section: Oskaloosa v. Tulliss, 25–440.

An ordinance discriminating in favor of resident merchants of the city as against other merchants of the state or nonresident merchants, or in favor of those selling goods of domestic manufacture and against those selling goods of foreign make, by imposing a license tax upon the latter which is not required of the former, is unconstitutional: Marshalltown v. Blum, 58–184; Pacific Junction v. Dyer, 64–38; Stuart v. Cunningham, 88–191.

An ordinance requiring a license fee from all transient merchants regardless of their place of residence is not invalid: Ottumwa v. Zekind, 64 N. W., 646.

But under former provisions held, that there was no power to tax transient merchants: Ibid.

Peddlers: One who goes from house to house delivering goods as agent for a person who has already taken orders therefor is not a peddler within the terms of an ordinance prohibiting unlicensed persons from selling or offering for sale or barter or exchange goods or other articles of value: Stuart v. Cunningham, 88–191.

A peddler is a person who travels about the country with merchandise for the purpose of selling it; but a person employed by a resident mercantile establishment, to call on citizens with samples of goods and solicit their orders for the goods, is not a peddler, and is not subject to penalties under a city ordinance declaring such acts to be peddling: Davenport v. Rice, 75-74.

While the power to regulate and license peddlers is given to cities, such power can be exercised only under an ordinance, and if an ordinance is passed for such purpose, and is such that the court must, upon mere examination, declare it unreasonable, it is void: State Center v. Barenstein, 66-249.

A charter authorizing a city to license and tax peddlers, etc., and bankers, dealers in money and notes and other evidence of indebtedness, and warrants of all kinds, held not to authorize the city to impose a license on insurance agents: State v. Smith, 31-493.

Therefore, held, that an ordinance authorizing the mayor, at his discretion, to charge peddlers a license of from one to twenty-five dollars, without stipulating the terms of such license, was unreasonable and void: Ibid.

Taking orders for goods to be manufactured does not constitute the person taking such orders a peddler requiring a license under an ordinance for the licensing of peddlers: Spencer v. Whiting, 68-678.

Also, held, that a particular sale of articles to one person on his request, such articles not being offered in general, nor to other persons, did not constitute the seller a peddler: Ibid.

Regulation of sale of liquors: Previous to the adoption of the present prohibitory statute, held, that a city might prohibit the sale of liquors which were not prohibited by state law under the statute then existing: Burlington v. Kellar, 18-59.

And that the statutory provisions giving the power to regulate the sale of such liquors were neither special nor local laws, nor an improper delegation of leglislative authority: State v. King, 37-462.

Where a general law exists prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, a charter giving to the city an exclusive authority to license the sale of liquors will not confer upon such city an exclusive power to punish the violation of the general statute: State v. Gurlock, 14-444.

A city or town has no authority to provide a penalty for the sale of intoxicating liquors, the sale of which is prohibited by statute: Foster v. Brown, 55-686; New Hampton v. Conroy, 56-498; Cantril v. Sainer, 59-26.

Where an ordinance prohibited the sale of liquors, some of which the municipality had the power to regulate the sale of, while the sale of others was prohibited by general statute, held, the ordinance would be supported and enforced so far as within the lawful authority of the corporation: Eldora v. Burlingame, 62-32.

Licenses for the sale of liquors not prohibited by general statute are not contracts between the city and the person licensed, but are merely temporary permits to do what would otherwise be an offense, issued in the exercise of police power and subject to the direction of government, which may revoke them as it deems fit: Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61-672.

Whether in case of a revocation of the license the person licensed would, in a proper proceeding, be entitled to have refunded to him the pro rata proportion of the license paid, quære: Ibid.

A license tax paid to a city for the privilege of selling intoxicating liquors cannot, after the enjoyment of the license for the period stipulated therein, be recovered back upon the ground that the statute under which it was granted has been declared unconstitutional: Kraft v. Keokuk, 14-86.

While the passage of the prohibitory liquor law took away from the city the authority to regulate places for the sale of intoxicating liquors, yet under § 680 the city has power to enact an ordinance for the regulation of saloons of other kinds: Clinton v. Grusendorf, 80-117.

SEC. 701. Pawnbrokers—second-hand dealers. They shall have power to prohibit pawnbrokers and junk or second-hand dealers purchasing or receiving from minors any property, without the written consent of their parents or guardians, and provide for the examination of the premises of such persons for the purpose of discovering stolen property. [19 G. A., ch. 89, § 1.]

SEC. 702. Billiard saloons—gaming. They shall have power to regulate, license, tax or prohibit billiard saloons, billiard tables, pool tables, and all other tables kept for hire; bowling alleys and shooting galleries or places; to suppress, restrain or prohibit all gambling games or devices; to authorize the destruction of all instruments or devices used for the purpose of gaming or gambling, and to punish gambling. [19 G. A., ch. 136; 16 G. A., ch. 24; C. '73, §§ 456, 463; R., § 1057, 1063.]

The authority to destroy all instruments or devices used for the purposes of gaming does not confer power to punish any one or prescribe penalties for permitting gambling or engaging therein: New Hampton v. Conroy, 56-498.

Authority to suppress gambling does not give authority to punish such act as a misdemeanor: Mt. Pleasant v. Breeze, 11-399.

The power to suppress or restrain billiard tables may be exercised by way of license: Burlington v. Lawrence, 42-681.

SEC. 703. Circuses—theaters—shows. They shall have power to regulate, license or prohibit circuses, menageries, theaters, theatrical exhibitions, shows and exhibitions of all kinds; but lectures on scientific, historical or literary subjects shall not come within the provisions of this section. [16 G. A., ch. 24; C. '73, §§ 460, 463; R., §§ 1062–3.]

SEC. 704. Disorderly houses. They shall have power to suppress, restrain and prohibit disorderly houses, houses of ill fame, opium or hop joints, or places resorted to for the use of opium or hasheesh, and punish the keepers thereof, and persons resorting thereto. [C. '73, § 456; R., § 1057.]

The authority to repress and restrain disorderly houses may be exercised by providing for the punishment of persons entering such houses or being found there: State v. Botkin, 71–87.

An ordinance providing for the punishment of persons found in disorderly houses is not invalid by reason of the fact that defendant might prove he was lawfully there. Such fact may be shown as a defense: Ibid.

Under prior provisions, held, that the power given to suppress and restrain houses of ill-fame, and, under § 680 to make ordinances to improve the morals, etc,, of the inhabitants, did not authorize a city to pass an ordinance to punish the keeping of a house of ill-fame: Chariton v. Barber, 54–360.

SEC. 705. Disturbances—parades. They shall have power to prevent and suppress any riots, noise, disturbance or disorderly assemblies, and to provide that, before any association, company, society, order, exhibition or aggregation of persons shall parade or march upon the streets of any city, they shall first obtain from the mayor of such city a permit, when issued to be without charge, and the same shall state the time, manner and condition of such parade or march, and to punish any person engaged in riotous, noisy or disorderly conduct. [22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; C. '73, § 456; R., § 1057.]

Under the authority here given to prevent riots, disturbances, disorderly assemblages, etc., the city may provide that the keeping of any houses within the city limits where loud or unusual noises are permitted, or where persons are permitted to congregate and engage in the use of profane and vulgar language to the disturbance of others, shall be considered and punished as a common nuisance: Centerville v. Miller, 57–56; Centerville v. Miller, 57–225.

An ordinance prohibiting processions or other displays calculated to cause public annoyance and requiring that in such case the procession or display be desisted from on order of the mayor or marshal, and that any person failing to obey such order shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, is valid: Chariton v. Fitzsimmons, 87–226.

SEC. 706. Animals running at large. They shall have power to restrain and regulate the running at large of cattle, horses, swine, sheep and other animals or fowl, within the limits of the corporation, and to authorize the distraining, impounding and sale of the same for the penalty incurred and the costs of the proceeding. [C. '73, § 459; R., § 1061.]

Animals which are not permitted to run at large within a city, upon coming within its limits from without, may be taken up and dealt with in accordance with the ordinances of the city, although their owner may live outside the city and where such animals are permitted by law to be at large: Gosselink v. Campbell, 4–296.

SEC. 707. Dogs. They shall have power to regulate, restrain, license or prohibit the running at large of dogs within their limits, and to require them to be kept upon the premises of the owners thereof, unless licensed to run at large, and to provide for the destruction thereof when found at large contrary to and in violation of the provisions of any ordinance or by-law passed pursuant to the power herein granted. [17 G. A., ch. 25; C. '73, § 459; R., § 1061.]

As to dog tax, see, also, § 889.

SEC. 708. Auction sales of animals. They shall have power to regulate, license or prohibit the sale of horses or other domestic animals at auction in the streets, avenues, highways, alleys or public places thereof. [16 G. A., ch. 24; C. '73, § 463; R., § 1063.]

SEC. 709. Numbering of buildings. They shall have power to require all buildings to be numbered by the owners or lessees thereof, and, in case of failure to comply with such requirement, to cause the same to be done, and to assess the cost thereof against the property or premises numbered. [19 G. A., ch. 89, § 2; 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 17.]

SEC. 710. Dangerous buildings. They shall have power to provide by ordinance for the repair, removal or destruction of any building which is dangerous, or which may be liable to fall, and to levy and collect a special tax against the property and owner thereof for the expense thereof, as other special taxes are levied and collected. [21 G. A., ch. 93, § 5.]

SEC. 711. Fires—electric apparatus—fire limits. They shall have power to make regulations against danger from accidents by fire or electrical apparatus, to establish fire limits, and to prohibit within such limits the erection of any building or addition thereto, unless the outer walls be made of brick, iron, stone, mortar, or other non-combustible material, with fire-proof roofs, and to provide for the removal of any structure erected contrary to such prohibition. [22 G. A., ch. 1, § 15; 22 G. A., ch. 21, § 1; C. '73, § 457; R., § 1058.]

An ordinance of the city authorizing the destruction of private buildings to prevent the spread of fire does not make the corporation liable for property so destroyed: Field v. Des Moines, 39–575.

An ordinance establishing fire limits, and prohibiting the erection of wooden buildings within such limits, cannot be legally passed except in accordance with the provisions of this section: Des Moines v. Gilchrist, 67–210.

Nor can the council prohibit the keeping or maintaining of lumber yards or wood yards within the fire limits: Ibid. [But now see § 715.]

An ordinance with reference to prevention of fires, held, in a particular case, to be beyond the powers conferred upon a city by special charter, with reference to providing against calamities by fire: Keokuk v. Scroggs, 39-447.

SEC. 712. Chimneys — manufactories — fireworks — fire escapes. They shall have power to regulate and control the building, construction or erection of chimneys, stacks, flues, fireplaces, hearths, stovepipes, ovens, boilers, and all apparatus used for heating purposes, and the use of lights in stables, shops and other places; to regulate manufactories by providing against danger from fire; to regulate or prohibit bonfires, and the use of fireworks, fire-crackers, torpedoes, Roman candles, sky-rockets, and other pyrotechnic displays; to prevent the deposit of ashes and combustible matter in unsafe places; to require the construction of fire-escapes to buildings, and regulate and control the same; to cause all buildings, structures and inclosures that may be in such condition as to cause danger from falling to be fixed, or from fire to be immediately made safe or removed, and to provide for the collection of the costs and expenses incurred in any of the matters provided for in this or the preceding section, in the manner authorized for the collection of special assessments. [19 G. A., ch. 89, §§ 4–6.]

SEC. 713. Inspection of steam boilers and magazines. They shall have power to provide for the inspection of steam boilers, and all places used for the storage of explosives or inflammable substances or materials, and to prescribe the necessary means and regulations to secure the public against accidents and injuries therefrom, and to assess the costs and expenses of such proceedings against the property and owners thereof in the manner provided for special assessments. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 714. Keeping gunpowder—combustibles. They shall have power to regulate the transportation and keeping of gunpowder, inflammable oils or other combustibles, and to provide or license magazines for storing the same, and prohibit their location or maintenance within a given distance of the corporate limits of such cities or towns. [22 G. A., ch 16, § 1; C. '73, § 456; R., § 1057.]

SEC. 715. Wood or lumber yards. They shall have power to prohibit or regulate the piling or depositing of any kind of wood, lumber or timber upon any lot or property within the city limits within a distance of one hundred yards of any dwelling-house. [21 G. A., ch. 93, § 4.]

SEC. 716. Fire department. They shall have power to organize, keep and maintain a fire department and fire companies; to purchase or lease necessary ground and construct or lease buildings therefor; provide engines, apparatus, and such other instruments as may be necessary; pay for services rendered by members of the fire department at any fire; and cities having a population of five thousand or more may maintain a paid fire department. [23 G. A., ch. 8; 21 G. A., ch. 171, § 1; C. '73, § 525; R., § 1695.]

SEC. 717. Markets. They shall have power to establish and regulate markets and scales, to build market houses and establish and regulate the same; to provide for the measuring or weighing of merchandise offered for sale, to prevent forestalling, and regulate or prohibit huckstering in the markets; to prescribe the kind and description of articles which may be sold in the markets, and the stands or places to be occupied by the vendors; to authorize the immediate arrest of any person violating its regulations, and the seizure and removal from the market of any article of produce in his possession. But no charge or assessment of any kind shall be made or levied on any wagon or other vehicle, or the horses attached thereto, or the owner thereof, bringing produce or provisions to any of the markets in the city, or through the streets contiguous thereto, for standing in or occupying a place in any of the market spaces, or in the streets contiguous thereto, on market days and evenings previous thereto. [22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; C. '73, §§ 456, 526; R., §§ 1057, 1096.]

The power to erect markets implies the power to confer on, or delegate to, others authority to erect a public market: Levis v. Newton, 75 Fed., 884.

The power given to a city to establish and regulate markets necessarily carries with it the power to prohibit the sale of meat, etc., at other times and places than those provided for: Davenport v. Kelley, 7–102.

The city may authorize an individual to erect a market building upon private property and lease stalls therein, and treat such building as a public market, prohibiting sales at other places: Le Claire v. Davenport, 13–210.

The city may provide that any person who shall use or keep any stall in the market for the purpose of selling meat or provisions without authority of law shall be subject to a penalty: State v. Leiber, 11–407.

The lease of a stall in a city market may be made by the city without regard to the prohibitions or requirements relating to the sale of real estate by the city: Dubuque v. Miller, 11–583.

The power here given to regulate markets and provide for the measuring and weighing of articles for sale implies that the corporation is empowered to do all things essential and necessary to the proper exercise of the power expressly provided, and the corporation may therefore declare that certain scales shall be deemed city scales, appoint a weigh-master, and make it unlawful to sell certain articles unless weighed upon such scales: Davis v. Anita, 73–325.

The power to establish and regulate markets does not authorize the city to pass an ordinance to prevent the peddling of meats until it has established a meat market, and not then unless it may be as a regulation of the market: Burlington v. Dankwardt, 73–170.

As the statute expressly confers upon the city the authority to establish markets and to provide for the weighing of commodities, and contains no limitations upon the powers granted, the time, manner and expediency of its measures are left to the discretion of the corporation and the judgment of its officers upon such matters cannot be controlled by the courts so long as they act within the scope of their authority: Miller v. Webster City, 62 N. W., 648.

SEC. 718. Wharfs, docks and piers. They shall have power to establish, construct and regulate landing places, wharfs, docks, piers and basins; to use for such purposes any public building or any property belonging to or under the control of the city, and the shore or bank of any lake or river not the property of individuals, to the extent and in any manner that the state can grant such use or control, and fix the rates for landing, wharfage and dockage. [C. '73, § 528; R., § 1098.]

As to wharfage dues, see notes to § 752.

SEC. 719. Ferries. They shall have the exclusive power to establish, regulate and license ferries from any landing place in such city; to impose reasonable terms and restrictions in relation to the keeping thereof, the time, manner and rates of the carriage and transportation of persons and property thereon; to provide for the revocation of any license, and for the punishment by fines and penalties of the violation of any ordinance prohibiting unlicensed ferries, or regulating those established and licensed. [C. '73, § 529; R., § 1099.]

SEC. 720. Water or gas works—electric plants. They shall have power to purchase, establish, erect, maintain and operate, within or without the corporate limits of any city or town, waterworks, gas works or electric light or electric power plants, with all the necessary reservoirs, mains, filters, streams, trenches, pipes, drains, poles, wires, burners, machinery, apparatus and other requisites of said works or plants, and lease or sell the same. They may also grant to individuals or private corporations the authority to erect and maintain such works or plants for a term of not more than twenty-five years, and may renew or extend the term of such grant; but no exclusive franchise shall be thus granted, extended or renewed. No such works or plants shall be authorized, established, erected, purchased, leased or sold, or franchise extended or renewed, unless a majority of the legal electors voting thereon vote in favor of the same at a general or special election. [26 G. A., ch. 13; 22 G. A., ch. 11, §§ 1, 2; 22 G. A., ch. 26; C. '73, §§ 471-3.]

Water supply: A city so indebted that a contract by it for the erection of water-works would be void may still contract to pay out of its ordinary revenues a sum as rent for the supplying of water to the city and its inhabitants as a part of ordinary expenses: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396; Creston Waterworks Co. v. Creston, 70 N. W., 739.

The amount which the city may contract to pay, held not to be limited to the proceeds of the special tax which may be levied (see § 894): Creston Waterworks Co. v. Creston, 70 N. W., 739.

An ordinance granting to a private company the right to build and operate such works, and providing that the city may, upon certain terms, purchase them, is not an incurring of an indebtedness within the meaning of art. XI, § 3 of the constitution: Burlington Water Co. v. Woodward, 49-58.

The power to make a contract with a water company as exercised in the passage of a certain ordinance upheld in a particular case: Ibid.

The fact that a water company, which has agreed to furnish water to the city for the extinguishment of fires, fails to do so, will not render it liable to an action by a property owner for damages for the destruction of his property by reason of such failure, there being no privity of contract between the property owner and the company: Davis v. Clinton Water-works Co., 54-59.

The fact that a city is authorized to provide for a water supply will not render it liable for failure to make adequate provision for the extinguishment of fires, nor would the fact that it had a contract with the waterworks company to protect it against all actions which might be brought against it for malfeasance or neglect on the part of the company render it liable: Vanhorn v. Des Moines, 63-447.

A city has no authority to insert in a contract between it and a water-works company a stipulation that the company shall be liable to property owners for damages due to a failure of the supply of water, causing a loss to property by fire: Becker v. Keokuk, Waterworks, 79-419.

Where a company was authorized to erect water-works and charge certain rates for water furnished, with the privilege to the city of buying the works upon certain terms, held, that such water-works were not public property and were subject to taxation: Appeal of the Des Moines Water Co., 48-324.

The buildings, machinery and mains of such a company are all real estate. The mains are appurtenant to the principal structure, and although they may extend into another township the whole property is taxable in the township where the works are situated: Ibid; Oskaloosa Water Co. v. Board of Equalization, 84-407. [But see now § 1343.]

A water-works company may make a contract with a private party to extend its mains to his premises, and locate hydrants there, for a compensation to be paid by him, in addition to the amount allowed by the city for hydrants: Muscatine Water-works Co. v. Muscatine Lumber Co., 85-112.

Cities may authorize the construction of such works by foreign corporations, and in such case they may confer upon such foreign corporation the power to condemn private property: Dodge v. Council Bluffs, 57-560.

A contract between the water-works company and the city by which the former is required to filter the water supplied to the city may be enforced in an action by the city by proper decree, and if necessary the capital stock not fully paid may be assessed for a sum sufficient to comply with the order: Burlington v. Burlington Water-works, 86-266.

The fact that a company has authority from the city council to erect and operate water-works does not relieve it from liability for nuisance consisting in smoke or soot emitted from its chimneys to the annoyance of neighboring residents. Churchill v. Burlington Water Co., 62 N. W., 646; Foote v. Burlington Water Co., 62 N. W., 648.

Further as to water-works, see next chapter.

Electric lights: The general power given by § 464 of Code of '73 (see § 757) to provide for the lighting of streets, etc., held to include also the power, without regard to this section to contract for the lighting of the streets and to grant the use of the streets for the construction and operation of gas and electric light plants: Levis v. Newton, 75 Fed., 884.

Although an ordinance granting the privilege to an electric light company to use the streets of the city provides that such privilege shall be permanent and perpetual the invalid provision as to the extent of time will not render the other provisions void: Ibid.

The great weight of authority seems to sustain the position that the furnishing of lights to the citizens generally is a sufficient public use to support a grant of the right to use the streets for the operation of the plant furnishing such light: Ibid.

As to electric light plants, see Thompson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Newton, 42 Fed., 723.

SEC. 721. Question submitted. The council may order any of the questions provided for in the preceding section submitted to a vote at a general election, or at one specially called for that purpose; or the mayor shall submit said question to such vote upon the petition of twenty-five property owners of each ward in the city, or of fifty property owners of any incorporated town. Notice of such election shall be given in two newspapers published in said city or town, if there are two, if not, then in one, once each week for at least four consecutive weeks. The party asking for a renewal or extension of such franchise shall pay the cost incurred in holding such election. [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 4.]

It is not necessary that the vote of the electors precede the passage of an ordinance for the establishment of water-works. While it is the approving vote that authorizes their erection, yet the council may provide beforehand as to the conditions on which the vote is asked. Taylor v. McFadden, 84–262.

Under the statutory provisions as to waterworks, the council may submit the proposition for the sinking of an artesian well and for voting a tax for that purpose: Ibid.

By a "majority of the voters of a city or town" is meant the majority of the voters casting their votes at the election: Ibid.

Where a contract for electric lighting was void because the question of establishing the electric light plant had not been submitted to vote, held, that the city could not recover damages of the company for failure to comply with its contract to furnish electric lights: Keokuk v. Ft. Wayne Electric Co., 90–67.

SEC. 722. Condemning land. They shall have power to condemn and appropriate so much private property as shall be necessary for the construction and operation of said works or plants, as provided for the condemnation of land for city purposes; to issue bonds for the payment of the cost of establishing the same, including the cost of land condemned on which to locate them, and to confer by ordinance the power to appropriate and condemn private property for such purpose upon any individual or corporation authorized to construct and operate such works or plants. [23 G. A., ch. 13, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 10. § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 11, §§ 2, 3; C. '73, § 474.]

Under particular facts, held, that a railway track of nearly two miles in length to connect the water-works with the railway in order to facilitate transportation of materials for construction and fuel for operating the works was not a purpose for which land might be condemned under this section: Creston Water-works Co. v. McGrath, 89–502.

SEC. 723. Protection. For the purpose of maintaining and protecting such works or plants from injury, and protecting the water of such water works from pollution, the jurisdiction of such city or town shall extend over the territory occupied by such works, and all reservoirs, mains, filters, streams, trenches, pipes, drains, poles, wires, burners, machinery, apparatus and other requisites of said works or plants used in or necessary for the construction, maintenance and operation of the same, and over the stream or source from which the water is taken for five miles above the point from which it is taken. [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 2; C. '73, § 472.]

SEC. 724. Rates—taxes. They shall have power, when operating such works or plants, to assess from time to time, in such manner as they shall deem equitable, upon each tenement or other place supplied with water, gas, light or power, reasonable rents or rates fixed by ordinance, and to levy a tax, as hereafter provided, to pay or aid in paying the expenses of running, operating and repairing such works or plants owned and operated by such city or town, and the interest on any bonds issued to pay all or any part of the cost of their construction. [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 2; C. '73, § 475.]

SEC. 725. Regulation of rates and service. They shall have power to require every individual or private corporation operating such works or plant, subject to reasonable rules and regulations, to furnish any person applying therefor, along the line of its pipes, mains, wires, or other conduits, with gas, water, light or power, and to supply said city or town with water for fire protection, and with gas, water, light or power for other necessary public purposes, and to regulate and fix the rent or rate for water, gas, light or power; to regulate and fix the rents or rates of water, gas and electric light or power; to regulate and fix the charges for water meters, gas meters, electric light or power meters, or other device or means necessary for determining the consumption of water, gas, electric light or power, and these powers shall not be abridged by ordinance, resolution or contract. [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; C. '73, §§ 473, 475.]

The exclusive right having been granted to a water company to furnish water within the state for forty years with the stipulation that after the expiration of a certain period the rate for supplying private consumers might be adjusted by arbitration, held, that the provision as to adjustment by arbitration was void and that the council might by ordinance fix the rate, which rate however must be reasonable: Des Moines v. Des Moines Water Works Co., 64 N. W., 269.

An ordinance giving a company the exclusive privilege for forty years of furnishing water to a city at a fixed rate without power of adjustment in the interests of the public would probably be invalid as in excess of the powers of the city: Ibid.

An ordinance giving an exclusive privilege to furnish water for a fixed period with conditions as to rates is binding on the company with reference to territory afterward annexed to the city: Ibid.

A contract authorizing a company to collect specified rates or reasonable rates that may be established by the grantee and approved by council, held not to preclude regulation of rates by the council and therefore not invalid: Creston Waterworks Co. v. Creston, 70 N. W., 729.

SEC. 726. Bonds. Bonds issued under the provisions of this chapter shall mature in not more than twenty years, be in sums of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars each, and bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually.

SEC. 727. Public library. Cities and towns shall have power to provide for the formation and maintenance of a free public library, open to the use of all the inhabitants, under proper regulations, and may purchase land and erect buildings, or hire buildings or rooms, suitable for that purpose, and provide for the compensation of the necessary employes; may receive, hold or dispose of any and all gifts, donations, devises and bequests that may be made to them for the purpose of establishing, increasing or improving any such library; and the council may apply the profits, proceeds, interest and rents accruing therefrom in such manner as will best promote the prosperity and utility of such library; but no money can be appropriated for such purpose until the electors of such city or town shall, at a general or special election, have voted for the establishment of such library. [C. '73, § 461.]

SEC. 728. Library trustees. In any city or town in which a free library has been established, there shall be a board of library trustees, consisting of nine members, to be appointed by the mayor, by and with the approval of the council. Of said trustees first appointed, one-third shall hold office for two, one-third for four, and one-third for six, years, from the first day of July following their appointment; and, at their first meeting, shall cast lots for the respective terms, reporting the result of such lot to the council. Biennially thereafter, before the first day of July, the mayor shall appoint, by and with the approval of the council, three trustees to succeed the trustees retiring on the following first day of July, each of whom shall hold office for six years from such first day of July, and until his successor is appointed and qualified. Vacancies occurring in the board shall be filled by appointment by the mayor, such appointees to fill out the unexpired term for which the appointment is made. Bona fide citizens and residents of the city or town, male or female, over the age of twenty-one years, are alone eligible to membership. The removal of any trustee permanently from the city shall render his office as a trustee vacant. Members of said board shall receive no compensation for their services. [25 G. A., ch. 41, § 1.]

SEC. 729. Powers. Said board of library trustees shall have and exercise the following powers: To meet and organize by the election of one of their number as president of the board, and by the election of a secretary and such other officers as the board may deem necessary; to have charge, control and supervision of the public library, its appurtenances and fixtures, and rooms containing the same, directing and controlling all the affairs of such library; to employ a librarian, such assistants and employes as may be necessary for the proper management of said library, and fix their compensation; but, prior to such employment, the compensation of such librarian, assistants and employes shall be fixed for the term of employment by a majority of the members of said board voting in favor thereof; to remove such librarian, assistants or employes by a vote of two-thirds of such board for misdemeanor, incompetency or inattention to the duties of such employment; to select and make purchases of books, pamphlets, magazines, periodicals, papers, maps, journals, furniture, fixtures, stationery and supplies for such library; to make and adopt, amend, modify or repeal by-laws, rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, for the care, use, government and management of such library and the business of said board, fixing and enforcing penalties for the violation thereof; and to have exclusive control of the expenditures of all taxes levied for library purposes as provided by law, and of all other moneys belonging to the library fund. Said board shall keep a record of its proceedings. [26 G. A., ch. 50, § 1; 25 G. A., ch. 41, § 2.]

SEC. 730. Library fund. All moneys received and set apart for the maintenance of such library shall be deposited in the treasury of such city or town to the credit of the library fund, and shall be kept by the treasurer separate and apart from all other moneys, and paid out upon the orders of the board of trustees, signed by its president and secretary. [25 G. A., ch. 41, § 3.]

SEC. 731. Report. Said board of trustees shall each year make to the council a report for the year ending December thirty-first, a statement of the condition of the library, the number of books added thereto, the number circulated, the number not returned or lost, the amount of fines collected, and the amount of money expended in the maintenance thereof during such year, together with such further information as it may deem important. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 732. Library tax. The board of trustees shall, before the first day of August in each year, determine and fix the amount or rate, not exceeding one mill on the dollar in cities of the first class having a population of twenty-five thousand or over, and not exceeding two mills on the dollar in cities of the second class and in towns, of the taxable valuation of such city or town, to be levied, collected and appropriated for the ensuing year for the maintenance of such library; and in cities of the first class, having a population of twenty-five thousand or over, also the amount or rate, not exceeding three mills on the dollar of the taxable valuation of such city, to be levied, collected and appropriated for the purchase of real estate and the erection of a building or buildings thereon for a public library, or for the payment of interest on any indebtedness incurred for that purpose, and for the creation of a sinking fund for the extinguishment of such indebtedness; and shall cause the same to be certified to the city council, which shall levy the tax for each of said purposes so determined and fixed, and certify the per cent. thereof to the county auditor, with the other taxes for said year. [26 G. A., ch. 50, § 2; 25 G. A., ch. 41, § 4.]

SEC. 733. Infirmary—out-door relief. Cities of the first class shall have the power to establish and maintain, either within or without the limits of the city, an infirmary for the accommodation of the poor of the city, and to provide for the distribution of outdoor relief. [C. '73, § 538; R., § 1111.]

SEC. 734. House of refuge—workhouse. Cities shall have power to establish and maintain, either within their limits or within the county in which they are situated, a house of refuge, or a house of correction and a workhouse, or either of them, and place the same under the management and control of such doctors, superintendents and other officers as the council may by ordinance provide. Persons sentenced for violation of any ordinance, if children under sixteen years of age, may be committed to the city house of refuge, if there be one; if over sixteen years of age, to the house of correction and workhouse. [C. '73, § 539; R., § 1112.]

SEC. 735. Jail—station-house. Cities and towns shall have power to erect, establish and maintain a city jail, which shall be in the keeping of the marshal, under such rules and regulations as the council shall provide. Any city or town shall have the right to use the jail of the county for the confinement of such persons as may be liable to imprisonment under the ordinances of such city or town, but it shall be liable to the county for the cost of keeping such prisoners. Cities of the first class shall have power to erect, lease, establish and maintain station-houses for the detention of persons arrested, which shall be under the control of the marshal. [19 G. A., ch. 154, § 1; C. '73, §§ 485, 542; R., § 1116.]

SEC. 736. Contracts for public works — protection of subcontractors. Cities and towns shall have power to provide by ordinance, or by provisions in contracts for any work of public improvement, that the contractor shall, before receiving certificates or payment therefor, furnish the council, or board of public works, as the case may be, vouchers showing that all subcontractors and workmen who have furnished materials for or performed labor upon such improvement have been fully paid for such materials or labor.

SEC. 737. Plumbing—inspector. They shall have power by ordinance to prescribe rules and regulations for all plumbing connecting any building with sewers, and may prescribe the kind and size of materials to be used in such plumbing, and the manner in which the same shall be done; and to appoint an inspector thereof, and define his duties and powers; and to prescribe penalties for the violation of such ordinance. Nothing herein shall be construed as authorizing the annulment of any rules or regulations relating to such plumbing made by the local or state board of health, but such ordinance shall conform to and enforce the same. [26 G. A., ch. 14.]

SEC. 738. Sewers in towns and smaller cities. Cities having less than five thousand population, and incorporated towns, shall have power to construct sewers or tile drains along streets and alleys therein, and to levy special taxes for the same against abutting property and the owners thereof, whenever the resident owners of a majority of the linear front feet of the property subject to such assessment petition therefor. If the assessment is made against property on one side of the street or alley only, the sewer or drain shall be built on that side, and such property shall be entitled to the benefits thereof, but if made against property on both sides of the street or alley the same shall be so built and located as to be of the greatest benefit to all the property assessed therefor. [26 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 739. Regulations as to construction and use. All owners of property assessed for such sewers or drains shall have the free use thereof, under reasonable rules and regulations adopted by the city or town. Such city or town shall have power to regulate by ordinance the size, kind and manner of construction of any such sewer or drain, and to provide the terms and conditions under which the property not taxed therefor may have the benefit of the same. The method of assessment, levy, collection and payment of such special taxes shall be the same as in cities of over five thousand population, except that such tax shall not exceed one dollar per linear foot. The cost of constructing sewers and drains in excess of one dollar per linear foot, and across intersecting streets and alleys, shall be paid from the general fund. [Same, §§ 3–6.]

SEC. 740. Taking property by gift or bequest. Counties, cities, towns and other municipalities are authorized to take and hold property, real and personal, derived by gifts and bequests; and when made for the establishing of institutions of learning or benevolence, and there is no provision made in the gift or bequest for the execution of the trust, the court having charge of the probate proceedings in the county shall appoint three trustees, residents of said county, who shall have charge and control the same, and who shall continue to act until removed by the court. And they shall give bond as required in case of executors, to be approved in the same manner as in case of executors' bonds, and said trustees shall be subject to the orders of said court. [26 G. A., ch. 20.]

A devise to a city may be valid although the purpose is one for which it is not authorized to levy taxes, if it is a purpose within the scope of its authority: Phillips v. Harrow, 61 N. W., 434.

SEC. 741. Use of barbed wire. Cities and towns may, by ordinance, prohibit the use of barbed wire to inclose in whole or in part any lot or lots within the incorporate limits thereof, and to provide for the removal of such wire. [26 G. A., ch. 17.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF THE PURCHASE AND CONSTRUCTION OF WATER WORKS.

SECTION 742. Tax—sinking fund. Cities of the first class shall have power to levy, in addition to the regular water tax authorized by law, a tax of two mills upon the dollar upon all the property within the corporate limits of said cities, excepting lots greater than ten acres in area, used for horticultural or agricultural purposes, for the purpose of creating a sinking fund, to be used as provided in this chapter for the purchase or erection of water works in such cities. The proceeds of such two-mill levy shall be deposited in one or more solvent banks or trust companies of the city making such levy, at a rate of interest not less than four per cent. per annum, compounded semiannually, and payable, principal and interest, on demand, after sixty days' notice in writing. The city treasurer depositing the proceeds of such tax shall exact from the bank or trust company wherein such money is deposited a satisfactory bond, payable to the city, to be approved by the treasurer and mayor of such city, and to be filed in the office of the city treasurer. [26 G. A., ch. 1, § 1.]

SEC. 743. Diversion of fund. Any member of the city council, or any officer of any city levying and collecting taxes under the provisions of this chapter, who shall in any manner participate in or advise the diversion of any part of said tax to any other purpose than that provided for in this chapter, shall be deemed guilty of the crime of embezzlement, and shall be punished accordingly. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 744. Purchase or erection. Cities of the first class are hereby authorized to purchase or erect water works, under the provisions of this chapter, for the purpose of supplying said cities and the inhabitants thereof with water, and are authorized to continue the levy of the two-mill tax herein provided for until the purchase price, principal and interest, or the cost incurred in the erection of said works, is fully paid and discharged. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 745. Contracts—bonds. Cities levying such sinking fund tax are hereby authorized to contract for the purchase or erection of water works, and, upon the approval and adoption of such contract as hereinafter provided, to apply such sinking fund upon the cost thereof, and are authorized to pledge the proceeds of the continuing two-mill levy provided for in this chapter, and the regular water levy, and the net revenues derived from the operation of the water works, and shall have the right to mortgage or bond such works, to secure the payment of the purchase price or the cost of constructing such water works; but no part of the general fund of such city shall be applied upon such contracts, bonds or mortgage. In the payment thereof, the city and holders of said contracts, bonds or mortgages shall be restricted to the proceeds of the said taxes and the net revenues of the said water works, as hereinbefore provided; and such contract or bonds shall not bear a higher rate of interest than five per cent. per annum, payable semiannually. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 746. Question submitted. Said contract shall not be binding upon said city until the same shall have been approved by the city council at a regular meeting, or a special meeting called for such purpose, and shall have been adopted by a majority of the electors of said city voting at a special election, which shall have been duly called after thirty days' notice by said city. The proposition to be submitted at said election, and the form of ballot, shall be: "Shall the contract approved by the city council in relation to the water works be adopted?" The proposition shall be printed and placed on the ballots, and the voter shall designate his choice, and the election shall be conducted, in the manner provided in the chapter on elections. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 747. Trustees. The water works purchased or erected by such city shall be managed and operated by a board of water works trustees, which shall be composed of three electors, appointed for the term of six years by the district court of the county wherein such city is located. Upon the approval of the contract for the purchase or erection of water works by such city, the mayor of the city shall apply, within ten days thereafter, to the said district court for the appointment of such board of water works trustees, the first appointees thereto to hold office for the following terms, namely: One for two years, one for four years and one for six years. All vacancies occurring on such board, occasioned by expiration of term, by death, resignation or removal, shall be filled by appointment of the district court, upon application made by the mayor of such city. The appointment of such board shall be approved by a majority of the judges presiding over such district court. The compensation of the members of such board of trustees shall be fixed, upon the application of such board, by said district court, in such amounts as the court may deem reasonable and proper, and shall not be changed more frequently than once in two years. The district court shall require such trustees to execute to said city good and sufficient bonds, to be approved by said court, and, when executed and approved, to be filed and kept with the city treasurer. All such trustees shall be subject to removal by the district court for malfeasance in office. [Same, §§ 6, 7, 12.]

SEC. 748. Powers. The said board of trustees shall have the power to carry into execution the contract for the purchase or erection of such water works, and to employ a superintendent and such other employes as may be necessary and proper for the operation of such works, for the collection of water rentals, and for the conduct of the business incident to the operation thereof. The said board of trustees shall require of the superintendent, and of the other employes as they may deem proper, good and sufficient bonds, the amount thereof to be fixed and approved by said board, for the faithful performance of their duty, such bonds to run in the name of the city and to be filed with the city treasurer and kept in his office. [Same, §§ 8, 9.]

SEC. 749. Fixing rates. The said board of water works trustees shall from time to time fix the water rentals or rates to be charged for the furnishing of water, and such rates shall be sufficient, together with the proceeds of the five-mill water levy and the sinking fund levy of two mills, for the maintenance and operation of such works, the proper and necessary extension thereof, for all repairs, and for the payment of the purchase money or cost, principal and interest, incurred in the purchase or erection of such works, as the same falls due, according to the tenor of the mortgage and bonds given to secure the payment of such purchase price or cost. The said board of water works trustees shall make out and file in the office of the city clerk quarterly statements, giving full and complete reports of the receipts and disbursements handled and disbursed by them in the administration of their trust; such reports to be filed on the second Monday of January, April, July and October for the quarters preceding the first days of said months. Such reports shall be audited by the board of public works of such city. In the event, however, that said city may not have a board of public works, such reports shall be audited by the city council. [Same, §§ 10, 11.]

SEC. 750. Additional. The powers conferred by this chapter are in addition to the powers elsewhere granted in this code in respect to water works.

CHAPTER 6.

OF STREETS AND PUBLIC GROUNDS.

SECTION 751. Establishment—improvement. Cities and towns shall have power to establish, lay off, open, widen, straighten, narrow, vacate, extend, improve and repair streets, highways, avenues, alleys, public grounds, wharfs, landings and market places within their limits; but no street, avenue, highway, or alley which shall hereafter be dedicated to public use by the proprietor of the ground in any municipal corporation shall be deemed a public street, avenue, highway, or alley, or be under the use or control of such municipality, unless the dedication shall be accepted and confirmed by an ordinance or resolution specially passed for such purpose. The expenses of such repairs and improvements may be paid from the general fund, or from the highway or poll taxes of such cities or towns, or partly from each of such funds. [20 G. A., ch. 20, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 96, § 1; 15 G. A., ch 6; 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 5; C. '73, §§ 464–5, 527; R., §§ 1064, 1095.]

Use of streets and public grounds; Wharfage: The streets of a city are fairly subject to use for many purposes to which a highway in the country would not be, and a street adjoining a navigable river may properly be used for the purpose of a wharf: Haight v. Keokuk, 4–199.

A paved street, terminating at the water's edge, at which boats can moor for loading and unloading, may constitute a wharf: Keokuk v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45–196.

A city may establish wharves and provide that fees be paid for the use thereof, and in the exercise of this police power may designate the place where the boats shall receive and discharge freight and passengers: Ibid.; Muscatine v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45–185.

Such regulations are not in conflict with the provisions of the constiutution of the United States with reference to commerce: Ibid.

An ordinance providing a charge for the landing of boats at places within the city limits where there are no wharves may be sustained in order to prevent boats from discharging and receiving freight where no wharves have been constructed, to the inconvenience of shippers and consignees: Keokuk v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-196.

Such provisions may be made applicable to the landing of boats within the city limits, even upon the the premises of the owner: Dubuque v. Stout, 32-47; Dubuque v. Stout, 32-80.

But the right to collect wharfage must follow and not precede the establishment of wharves: Dubuque v. Stout, 32-47; Muscatine v. Hershey, 18-39.

Where the ordinance fixes the fees to be paid by boats using the city wharves, such fees can be recovered unless it is shown that the charges are beyond the limit of just compensation: Keokuk v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-196.

But the person using the public wharves does not become liable to compensation therefor unless the rates of compensation have been fixed: Muscatine v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-185.

The erection of a wharf must be presumed to have been made for the use and benefit of the public, like the paving of a street or other public improvement, unless the contrary is shown: Ibid.

Where the city has permitted the erection and use for years of a private wharf, it cannot without compensation to the owner appropriate the benefits of such wharf by demanding wharfage from boats landing thereat: Grant v. Davenport, 18-179.

A riparian proprietor outside of the corporation limits may erect a wharf on the shore of a navigable stream, conforming to state regulations, if any, and without obstruction to navigation. But within the corporation limits the city has the paramount right in this respect, and may regulate, but not destroy, a private wharf: Ibid.

Location of streets: The action of a city council, in determining whether the location of a street is demanded by the public interest, cannot be questioned by judicial proceedings: Cherokee v. Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot, etc., Co., 52-279.

Diversion of travel from other streets cannot be taken into consideration in estimating the damage to property from the opening of a street: Ibid.

The fact that a city has power to open and vacate streets will not render it liable for failure to keep a street open and in repair, whereby travel is diverted from a ferry outside of the city limits: Prosser v. Ottumwa, 42-509.

The power of the state to establish highways within the limits of cities or incorporated towns is not vested in the board of supervisors: Gallaher v. Head, 72-173.

After the passage of an ordinance by a town council establishing a street or avenue it will be presumed that it was established for public use as such, but the presumption may be overcome by proofs sufficient to show the facts otherwise; and where the real purpose was to furnish a right of way for a railroad, held, that it would not be considered an appropriation for "public purposes" within the meaning of the law as to the authority of the council in such cases: Strahan v. Malvern, 77-454.

Where a tract of land was laid out into lots with streets and a public square, but never opened to the public, and was subjected to taxation according to government subdivisions without regard to the dedication to public use, held, that the city was estopped from setting up any claim, under such dedication, to the streets and the square after adverse possession thereof for the statutory period: Smith v. Osage, 80-84.

In an action to recover for land sold to defendant town for the location of an avenue, where defendant claimed that the purchase of the land was the result of a fraudulent conspiracy between plaintiff and the council of the defendant town to indirectly secure a right of way for a railroad under a pretense of establishing an avenue, held, that the fact that the railroad company was endeavoring to obtain the right of way at the time was proper for consideration, and the record of condemnation proceedings, although the awards had not been paid, were competent to show that fact: Strahan v. Malvern, 77-454.

The action of the council in condemning property for a street can be tested by certiorari and therefore an injunction will not lie to restrain the opening of the street thus located: Rockwell v. Bowers, 88-88.

It is within the discretion of the city council to determine when or at what places street crossings shall be constructed and that discretion cannot be controlled as to the direction or location of a crossing by a property owner: Brown v. Barstow, 87-344.

It is competent for a city to extend a street through the depot grounds of a railroad company, under proceedings for condemnation: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Starkweather, 66 N. W., 87.

Change: Where the street had been improved and planted with trees in accordance with lines recognized by the city authorities, held, that its officers might be restrained from making a change in the line of such street which would result in the destruction of such trees and other improvements: Delashmutt v. Oskaloosa, 62 N. W., 16.

Vacation: The city council has authority to vacate streets and alleys, and may exercise such power simply by the enactment of an ordinance calculated to effect that object: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66-687.

The city council has the power to divert the ground covered by an alley which is vacated from a public to a private use by granting it to a private individual: Ibid.

Upon the vacation of a street by the city the title does not revert to the grantor: Day v. Schroeder, 46-546; Pettingill v. Devin, 35-344, 355.

The city council may vacate an alley for the purpose of allowing it to be devoted to a private use, if the power is in other respects rightfully exercised, and no private rights are injuriously affected: Marshalltown v. Forney, 61–578.

Where the power to vacate streets is wisely and discreetly used, its exercise will not be restrained at the suit of a private individual claiming to be injured: Gray v. Iowa Land Co., 26–387.

It seems that the general assembly may authorize a city to vacate streets, although under its charter as existing at the time of dedication of the streets no such power existed. It is doubtful, at least, if a property owner can have such vested interest in streets as to prevent such vacation: Stubenrauch v. Neyenesch, 54–567.

Action of the city council in vacating streets cannot be interfered with by proceedings in equity. Certiorari is the proper remedy: Ibid; Rockwell v. Bowers, 88–88.

The burden is upon the plaintiff seeking to enjoin the vacation of a street to prove that he had rights at the time the street was vacated which were abridged by such vacation: Sawyer v. Meyer, 45–152.

A city having authority to vacate streets cannot be made to respond in damages for injuries resulting therefrom to an adjoining property owner: Barr v. Oskaloosa, 45–275.

The vacation of a street is not such taking of private property as to entitle a property owner to compensation for any loss resulting therefrom: Ibid.

The power to vacate streets being vested in the city, it can be exercised only by the council or trustees; parol evidence of abandonment is not competent: Lathrop v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69–105.

The power to narrow or widen or vacate a street is practically unlimited when it is exercised for the public good, but it cannot be arbitrarily exercised and is subject to equitable control. However, an abutting lot owner cannot upon slight grounds prevent the accomplishment of that which is a material benefit to the public, and the decision of the city council will ordinarily be conclusive as to the question whether the vacation of a street is for the public good. In a particular case, held, that the damage to abutting property owners was not such as to justify overruling the action of the city council: Williams v. Carey, 73–194.

The proper steps having been taken for vacation of streets by owners of property in a plat (as contemplated by § 918) such vacation becomes effective as against the city, subject only to the judicial determination as to whether the rights of private persons are affected. The city council cannot by subsequently directing such street to be opened, affect the validity of such vacation: Conner v. Iowa City, 66–419.

The fact that the vacation of a portion of a plat will close streets therein, and thus abridge the number of ways of access to the property of the proprietor of another portion of the plat, will not be ground for objecting to such vacation, if one or more ways are left, reasonably convenient, so that no substantial right is abridged: Lorenzen v. Preston, 53–580.

Diversion: As to diversion of streets or public grounds another use, see notes to § 880.

Abandonment of streets: A city cannot authorize streets dedicated to public use to be closed. This can only be done lawfully after they are vacated in the manner prescribed by law. The fact that, after dedication is made, the public does not use the streets, does not of itself authorize the party making the dedication to resume possession of the land: Prince v. McCoy, 40–533.

If streets are in such condition that they are incapable of use, an injunction cannot be maintained by one who has no other right than as one of the general public to prevent them from being temporarily inclosed for private purposes: Ibid.

Where plaintiff had held possession of property for thirty years under claim of right, and the city had made no attempt or claim to occupy the same as a street, held, that any right of the city to use the property for a street must be regarded as abandoned: Simplot v. Dubuque, 49–630.

The severance of a portion of the territory of a city, it would seem, would operate as an extinguishment of the rights of the corporation in the streets and alleys: McKean v. Mt. Vernon, 51–306.

The city council may authorize the laying of a railway track along an alley in accordance with statutory authority, although the effect thereof may be close the alley for other purposes: Heath v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61–11.

As to title to streets, dedication, abandonment, etc., see notes to § 917; also notes to § 1410.

Improvements: A special assessment for street improvements is not a tax "for any city purpose" although it is levied under the general power to levy taxes: Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co., 66 N. W., 176.

In general as to street improvements, see chapter 7.

SEC. 752. Width of street. They shall have power to provide that the width of all streets, highways, avenues and alleys of all additions to any city or town shall conform to the width of the existing streets, highways, avenues and alleys of such cities and towns. [22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1.]

SEC. 753. Supervision—repair. They shall have the care, supervision and control of all public highways, streets, avenues, alleys, public squares and commons within the city, and shall cause the same to be kept open and in repair and free from nuisances. [C. '73, § 527; R., § 1095.]

Road taxes in city limits: Property within city limits is not subject to taxation by township trustees for highway purposes: Marks v. Woodbury County, 47–452; Hawley v. Hoops, 12–506.

Township trustees cannot include an in corporated town in a road district (see § 753), and a road supervisor has no authority over its streets. For an accident resulting from acts of such supervisor in repairing such streets the town is liable: Clark v. Epworth, 56–462.

As to highway poll tax in cities and towns, see § 891.

Liability for failure to repair: Being clothed with the power to establish and keep in repair its streets, the exercise of such power is not discretionary, and a city is liable to an action for damages resulting from an injury caused by a failure in that respect, as, for instance, by reason of an obstruction from snow and ice: Collins v. Council Bluffs, 32–324; or by reason of an obstruction upon the sidewalk placed there by the adjoining owner: Rowell v. Williams, 29–210.

Further as to sidewalks, see below in this note.

Where the city makes improvements and property owners build, etc., with reference thereto, the city is liable for neglect to keep such improvements in repair, although they would not be liable originally for not making the improvements. So held in case of damages from the obstruction of a sewer: Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50–197.

A city is liable for injuries received by reason of a hole in its street of which the street commissioner has been notified prior to the injury: Case v. Waverly, 36–545.

The fact that the municipal corporation has no funds with which to make repairs, and that it is indebted beyond the constitutional limit, is no defense in an action against such city for damages received from defects in its sidewalks: Rice v. Des Moines, 40–638.

The question being whether the street commissioner had authority to make certain repairs, and use therein material for which the city should become liable, held, that there was an issue as to whether or not the city had authorized the repair in which the material was used, and it was for the jury to say whether the resolutions in regard to repairs related to those in question, or to those previously made: Kemper v. Burlington, 81–354.

In an action by the owner of rock which had rolled and fallen from his quarry upon the streets of a city, and which had been used by the city in making repairs on the streets, for the value of such material, held, that if the material was used upon the streets, not merely by way of abatement of the obstruction, but also for the betterment of the road, the city would be liable for the value of the material, less the cost of removal: Ibid.

In such case, held, that the jury were properly charged that the city had the right to the whole width of its streets, and was chargeable with the duty of keeping the same in good repair and reasonable condition, and had the right to remove any rock or material found upon any part of its streets and put there without its authority: Ibid.

Also held, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover anything for rock or material which could be shown to have been abandoned by him: Ibid.

The city is not liable for accidents not to be anticipated in the ordinary use of a bridge: McClain v. Garden Grove, 83–235.

As to damages from grading, defective drainage, surface water, etc., see notes to § 782.

Failure to make improvements: A city cannot obligate itself by contract to make an improvement which it has a right to make, nor render itself liable in damages for failure to make it, except in so far as it is necessary to make contracts and incur liabilities in the prosecution of the work: Stewart v. Council Bluffs, 50–668; S. C., 58–642.

Negligence in making improvements: Where a municipal corporation has authority to make improvements in streets it is liable for damages occasioned by the improper and negligent manner in which such power is executed; Wallace v. Muscatine, 4 G. Gr., 373.

Where the city in making an improvement in front of the property of an abutting owner, does so in a negligent and unskillful manner, he may recover damages for injury occasioned thereby, but cannot treat the construction as a nuisance and proceed to abate it by his own acts: McGregor v. Boyle, 34–268.

Where a city makes improvements creating a necessity for a culvert, it would be guilty of negligence in failing to provide such culvert, and in doing so it must exercise reasonable care, judgment and skill in its construction: Van Pelt v. Davenport, 42 308.

The fact that the money for the making of an improvement was appropriated by the county will not release the city making the improvement from liability therefor: Ibid.

While the city has power to change the grade of streets, thereby reducing or elevating their natural surface, yet if in making such change it is negligent, so that adjacent lots are injured, the city is liable for damages: Hendershott v. Ottumwa, 46–658.

Therefore, held, that where, in raising the grade of a street by making an embankment, the earth deposited for that purpose rolled upon an adjoining lot, the city was liable: Ibid.

Allowing a water company to lay its mains will not render the city liable for damages to premises from water caused by the filling up of a ditch by such water company, the granting of such privilege not being in itself negligence: Ross v. Clinton, 46–606.

A party cannot recover damages caused to his property by the act of the city in diverting a stream of water against it, if he might, by ordinary diligence and at a moderate expense, have prevented the damage: Hoehl v. Muscatine, 57–444; Fulleam v. Muscatine, 57–457.

The party suffering injury from water by reason of erecting his building where a stream of water has been flowing for ten years cannot recover for injury to his building from such stream, whether he has ever consented to the flow of the stream or not: Hoehl v. Muscatine, 57–444.

Where negligent and reckless driving over a street that is out of repair causes an injury the driving is deemed the proximate cause and the city will not be liable for damages resulting: De Camp v. Sioux City, 74–392.

The township trustees cannot include an incorporated town in a road district, and the road supervisor has no authority over its streets. For an accident resulting from acts of such supervisor in repairing such streets the town is liable: Clark v. Epworth, 56–462.

Acts or negligence of officers: A municipal corporation is liable for the malfeasance or neglect of its agents in the construction of public works on the same principle that a natural person is liable for damages resulting from his carelessness, unskillfulness or wrongdoing: Templin v. Iowa City, 14–59; Cotes v. Davenport, 9–227.

If by mistake or error of judgment on the part of the proper officers who are competent and act in good faith an improvement is made in such manner that injury results therefrom the city will not be held responsible therefor: Van Pelt v. Davenport, 42–308.

Although the city acts through its officers in making improvements, and is bound by their negligence, yet it is not liable for a mere mistake or error of judgment in making an improvement, if reasonable skill, prudence and care be exercised; but it may be liable for negligence in allowing an obstruction to remain after it has been shown to be such: Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50–197.

The instruction that in constructing culverts, sewers, etc., a municipal corporation is only required to use ordinary care, and that if the city had an engineer competent to take charge of the work, and he planned the sewers, etc., and honestly believed them to be of sufficient capacity, the city would not be liable for mistakes therein, held, properly refused where there was no evidence to support it: Parker v. Des Moines, 53–679.

Where a municipal corporation is vested with full power to construct an improvement, and its location or the general plan adopted is within the exclusive control of the municipality, it cannot be held liable for improper exercise of judgment in the execution of the plan: Wicks v. De Witt, 54–130.

Where a municipal corporation in exercising the right to grade, protect and improve its streets and construct necessary bridges, etc., acts in good faith in the adoption of plans of skillful and competent engineers and workmen, it is not liable for an unforeseen and unexpected damage resulting from the diversion of a stream by reason of such improvement, where such damage results notwithstanding the exercise of reasonable caution, prudence and skill: Fulleam v. Muscatine, 57–457.

Proof of a custom in a certain city of barricading excavations in the streets in any particular manner is not receivable for the purpose of showing or rebutting negligence in the particular case. A custom will not render it necessary for the city to do more, nor excuse it for doing less, than is required in the exercise of ordinary care: Koester v. Ottumwa, 34–41.

A municipal corporation is not liable beyond the actual damage caused by its negligence. Exemplary, punitive or speculative damages cannot be given: Collins v. Council Bluffs, 35–432.

Obstructions: Where an obstruction from which an injury results is not the mere result of a defect, but is an object entirely foreign to the street itself, the duty of the city is, if it allows such obstruction to remain at all, to see that it is kept in such a situation as that the safety of travelers on the street is not endangered by it; and the fact that at the time the obstruction is first placed on the street it is sufficiently protected will not relieve the city from liability for an injury resulting from a change in the situation, although such change is not known to the city authorities: Duffy v. Dubuque, 63–171.

It is doubtful whether, under any circumstances, a village street should, in law, be regarded as obstructed by vehicles left by farmers along the sides of the street, where their teams are fed. At any rate, a sleigh standing for fifteen minutes at the side of the street, for the purpose of unloading goods, ought not to be regarded as such obstruction: Sikes v. Manchester, 59–65.

Adjacent property owners cannot maintain an action for injunction to prevent the city from changing the bed of a stream so as to make it run, in a part of its course, along a street, it not appearing that the work permanently obstructs the street: McMahon v. Council Bluffs, 12–268.

In an action for damages sustained by reason of injuries to a horse caused by an obstruction in the street, held, that it was proper to show that the origin and cause of the obstruction was the negligent construction of a culvert, that it might be determined whether defendant was negligent or not: Hazard v. Council Bluffs, 79–106.

Unlawful use of streets: The city is responsible for the use of its streets, and liable in damages for injuries resulting from an unlawful use thereof by it, although the council or officers, in permitting such use, did an unlawful act: Stanley v. Davenport, 54–463.

Obstruction of streets: Under an ordinance giving the cars of a street railway precedence over other vehicles, and providing that any person unnecessarily obstructing the running of such cars should be punished by fine, held, that where there was no impediment to the removal of a vehicle from the track of a street railway, the owner, failing to remove it, and thereby impeding the running of a car, was subject to a fine, although such removal would cause him inconvenience and the obstruction was intended to be but for a few moments: State v. Foley, 31–527.

The city council may require the removal of scales erected in the street for the purpose of carrying on a private business: Emerson v. Babcock, 66–257.

The council of a city or town may, under reasonable restrictions, authorize private parties to erect scales in a street whereby the public convenience will be served: Spencer v. Andrew, 82–14.

Under the jurisdiction which the council has over the streets, they may require the removal of a hedge which is within the limits of the street even though it does not interfere with public travel: Philbrick v. University Place, 88–354.

Shade trees which do not obstruct the street are not to be removed in opposition to the wishes of the adjoining owner: Everett v. Council Bluffs, 46 66. And see § 1556 and notes.

Dangers adjoining streets: It is the duty of a municipal corporation to protect travelers against passing from its streets into dangers and obstructions, and it is a question for the jury to determine whether the defect or obstruction is so near the highway as to be dangerous to persons traveling thereon: Manderschid v. Dubuque, 29–73. And see Blivens v. Sioux City, 85–346.

Where children playing in a sand pit adjacent to the street were injured by the caving in of the bank, held, that the city was not liable unless the situation of the sand pit in such close proximity to the street and the condition of the pit as to its extent and all the surroundings were such as to require the authorities in the exercise of reasonable diligence to anticipate that children might be allured to the pit from the street for the purposes of play, and be thereby injured: Talty v. Atlantic, 92–135; Hawley v. Atlantic, 92–172.

The question whether the pit where the accident occurred was in the street or adjacent to it would not in such case be controlling. There might be liability although the accident happened outside the limits of the street. It would depend upon the situation of the pit with reference to the street, its extent and other circumstances: Ibid.

A city will be liable for injuries to one using the walk by reason of an excavation near a street crossing rendering the crossing unsafe and dangerous: Hall v. Manson, 68 N. W., 922.

Approaches to street: A city is not bound to provide a safe way, or any way, by which streets may be entered from private property; and where plaintiff was injured in passing along a private way on to a street where an excavation had been made, held, that the city was not liable: Goodin v. Des Moines, 55–67.

A person who is on the street in the ordinary course of business, although not passing along at the time, may recover for negligence of the city in allowing an obstruction thereon from which he receives an injury: Duffy v. Dubuque, 63–171.

So held where the person injured had stopped with one foot on the sidewalk and the other upon the ground of an adjoining lot for the purpose of procuring a drink from the hydrant: Ibid.

Defects in portion of the street not traveled: The liability of a city as to the safety of its streets exists not only as to the ordinary traveled part of such street, but also to the gutters and sidewalks; and where a city dug a ditch across a street, and constructed a bridge over the same, held, that it was not only liable for failure to keep the bridge in repair as far as built, but that it must afford a safe and convenient crossing for the ditch of the same width of the street: Rusch v. Davenport, 6–443.

If a street be opened for public travel for but a part of its width, and the other part is not in condition to be used by the public, the city will not be chargeable with negligence for failing to improve the whole of the street, or for accidents occurring to those attempting to use the part not improved; but where the whole street is open to use it is the duty of the city to keep it in a reasonably safe condition for the entire width, that is, from sidewalk to sidewalk: Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 57–748.

Where there is nothing in the character of the improvement upon a street to indicate that it is the intention of the city that travel shall be confined to a particular portion thereof, the city will not be relieved from the duty of keeping such street in repair for its entire width: Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 64–251.

Where a street is open for travel its entire width the city is bound to keep it in safe condition from sidewalk to sidewalk, and cannot by an excavation temporarily withdraw it from public use without using proper precaution to prevent travelers at night from driving thereon; and in an action for injuries resulting from the negligence of the city in leaving an excavation in the streets unprotected, it is not competent to show that there was no travel at the point where the excavation was made: Crystal v. Des Moines, 65-502.

The court is not prepared to say that it is the duty of the city to keep every street safe for travel throughout its entire width, regardless of its location, amount of travel and all other circumstances; and held, that the refusal of an instruction, that the law imposes on a municipal corporation the duty to keep its streets in a reasonably safe condition to the whole width of the street, was not error where the jury were instructed that if the street was not safe for persons passing over the same while using reasonable care, and the city had knowledge of the unsafe condition or should have had such knowledge, it was guilty of negligence: Fulliam v. Muscatine, 70–436.

Defects or obstructions in sidewalks: The city is liable for damages occasioned by injuries received by reason of an obstruction upon the sidewalk placed there by the adjoining property owner: Rowell v. Williams, 29–210.

It is the duty of the city to maintain its sidewalks in a reasonably safe condition, and this duty extends not merely to the street and sidewalk, but to things under its control endangering the safety of those using them: Blivens v. Sioux City, 85–346.

Damage from the falling of a bill-board which had been left in a defective and dangerous condition beside the sidewalk is an injury arising from the defect of the street or sidewalk, within the terms of § 3447 ¶ 1, requiring that action for such claims be brought within six months, unless notice be served upon the corporation within ninety days after the injury occurred: Ibid.

Whether a sudden change of level or steps between two portions of a sidewalk constitute such a defect as will entitle one injured thereby to recover is a question of fact under all the circumstances for the jury: Patterson v. Council Bluffs, 91–732.

The fact that a sidewalk is not constructed in accordance with the requirements of the city ordinance is prima facie evidence of defective construction, while the fact that a sidewalk is constructed in accordance with such ordinance is prima facie evidence of care in its construction: Smith v. Pella, 86-236.

Where an injury results not merely from the dangerous and defective condition of the walk itself, but by reason of a defective scuttle covering constructed for private use of an adjoining property owner, either with or without the authority of the city, the property owner is liable for such injury: Calder v. Smalley, 66-219.

In such case it is immaterial that a tenant in possession of the premises has agreed with the owner thereof to keep the scuttle closed: Ibid.

The construction of ways in a sidewalk to the cellars of adjacent buildings is not necessarily negligence. If such ways are so constructed that when open they are sufficiently conspicuous to be seen by a pedestrian using the sidewalk, in the exercise of proper diligence, or are sufficiently lighted in the nighttime to disclose the danger to such person, it cannot be held that the mere omission to have barriers around them is per se evidence of negligence: Day v. Mt. Pleasant, 70-193.

In an action against a city for damages received from the existence of a cellar-way occupying a part of the sidewalk and left without railing, guard or protection. held, that the question whether the leaving of such cellar-way without other guard or protection than the door thereto was negligence was a question for the jury: Ibid.

Sidewalk constructed by property owner: An allegation in petition for the recovery of damages for injuries resulting from a defective sidewalk in which it is alleged that such sidewalk had been ordered and caused to be constructed by the corporation is sufficiently supported by proof that the work was done by the property owner. It is a fair presumption that it was done at least with the permission of the city: Barnes v. Newton, 46-567.

To hold a city liable for injuries received from a defective sidewalk it is not necessary to show by evidence that the city built the sidewalk or had assumed control over it: Shannon v. Tama City, 74-22.

Where a sidewalk is beside a public street it will be presumed that the city is liable for its condition: Smith v. Des Moines, 84-685.

Although a town may not be liable for failure to construct sidewalks, yet where it appears that a sidewalk has been constructed, the corporation becomes liable for failure to maintain it in repair, no matter by whom constructed: Beazan v. Mason City, 58-233.

Frequency of use: The liability of a municipal corporation for injury from a defective sidewalk should not be made dependent upon the probability or frequency of its use by persons not acquainted with its condition. The corporation is bound to maintain its sidewalks in a reasonably safe condition for the protection of such persons as may possibly use them contrary to such assumed probability: Thomas v. Brooklyn, 58-438.

Stepping off sidewalk: In determining whether the corporation was liable for injuries received from stepping off the sidewalk into a ditch, held, that the question was not whether the sidewalk was not reasonably safe for the traveling public, but whether, all things considered, it was reasonably safe for plaintiff at the time of the accident; and held, that under the circumstances the accident appeared to have been the result of want of ordinary care on the part of the plaintiff: McLaury v. McGregor, 54-717.

Difficulties: A city is charged with the duty of keeping its streets in reasonable repair, and the difficulties which may attend the performance of that duty will not relieve it from such performance: Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 64-251.

The extent of sidewalk in a city is not to be taken into consideration by the jury in deciding whether the city officer used proper diligence in removing the snow and ice: Lindsay v. Des Moines, 68-368.

Snow and ice: The duty to keep streets in repair requires the city to remove obstructions from deposits of snow. To repair means to restore to a good state after partial destruction. And held, that the city was liable for damages from an injury caused by snow and ice remaining upon a sidewalk after knowledge thereof by the proper officers of the city and sufficient opportunity to remove the same: Collins v. Council Bluffs, 32-324; Huston v. Council Bluffs, 69 N. W.. 1130.

The mere fact that a street is in a dangerous condition because of snow and ice rendering the walks and crossings slippery, due to the operation of natural causes, will not render the city liable, even if such snow and ice are not removed within a reasonable time. It is only when they are suffered to remain on the sidewalk in such an uneven and rounded form that a person cannot walk over it, while using due care, without danger of falling down, that such snow and ice constitute a defect for which the city is responsible: Broburg v. Des Moines, 63-523.

As to removal of snow and ice, see now § 781.

Evidence of former negligence: In an action against a city for negligence in permitting an obstruction in a street, held, that evidence that similar obstructions had often existed at the same place was admissible as showing the need of greater diligence on the part of the city: Moore v. Burlington, 49-136.

In such cases evidence may be introduced of such facts as tended to render the obstruction dangerous: Ibid.

It is the condition of the streets at the time of the injury which determines the city's liability; unsafe condition at a prior time cannot be shown to render it liable: Cramer v. Burlington, 42-315.

In an action to recover damages suffered by having stepped into an opening adjoining the sidewalk in the street, evidence that other parties had previously fallen into the same opening and that the adjoining property owner was aware of that fact is, under the previous rulings of this court, inadmissible for the purpose of holding such property owner liable: Mathews v. Cedar Rapids, 80–459.

Evidence as to defective condition of the sidewalk prior to the injury is admissible when coupled with other evidence showing that the condition at the time of the injury was the same as that referred to by the witness: Hunt v. Dubuque, 65 N. W., 319.

Subsequent repairs: In an action for damages sustained from defect in a bridge, where the question is whether the bridge was a city bridge, and under the care and supervision of the city, evidence to show that the city reconstructed and repaired it after the injury occurred is not admissible to show the relation of the city to the bridge at the time of the injury: Holmes v. Hamburg, 47–348.

But a resolution of the council passed soon after the accident requiring repair of the walk in question is admissible as showing notice: Butler v. Malvern, 91–397.

The fact that a walk was repaired several months after the time of the alleged accident should not be admitted for the purpose of showing that it was probably defective at the time of such accident: Parkhill v. Brighton, 61–103.

Subsequent defective condition: Although the condition of a sidewalk soon after the accident, alleged to have been due to its defective condition, might be of such a character as to indicate that such condition had existed substantially at the time of the accident, yet, where the length of time intervening is such that evidence in respect to a subsequent defective condition would more probably lead to a wrong inference than a correct one, it ought not to be admitted: Ibid.

In an action to recover damages for injuries received from a defective sidewalk, it is improper to allow a witness who has no knowledge of the condition of the walk at the time of the accident to testify as to its condition afterwards: Hoyt v. Des Moines, 76–430.

In such case, held, also, that statements made by the sidewalk commissioner after the accident, when not acting officially or in the discharge of official duty, could not be shown for the purpose of proving knowledge on the part of the city of the defective condition: Ibid.

Evidence of a witness that he had fallen upon the same sidewalk from a defect therein, but was unable to state the exact place of the defect, held improperly admitted: Ibid.

Notice of defects: Evidence that a plank in a sidewalk was at various times out of place, held sufficient as showing the existence of a notorious defect so as to charge the city with notice thereof: Hollenbeck v. Marshalltown, 62-21.

If the defect is notorious and has remained so a sufficient length of time to enable the city, by reasonable diligence, to know of its existence and to repair it, the law conclusively presumes either that such diligence has been exercised and that the knowledge which such diligence would procure had been acquired, or that the city has been culpably negligent in not employing such diligence: Rice v. Des Moines, 40–638; Montgomery v. Des Moines, 55–101.

In an action to recover for injuries received by reason of a defective walk it is competent to show that the walk was old and in bad condition as tending to show that the officers of the city charged with the duty of keeping its walks in good condition by the exercise of ordinary diligence would have known of the defect in question: Lorig v. Davenport, 68 N. W., 717.

In an action for injuries caused by a defective sidewalk where the evidence tended to show that all walks constructed at the time the walk in question was built were improperly constructed, held, that defendant was chargeable with notice of the defects in the walk, even though it had no actual notice of its condition and such condition could not have been discovered with ordinary care: Weber v. Creston, 75–16.

And the fact that the sidewalk causing the injury was built in the customary manner adopted by the city for building sidewalks, held to be no defense in an action for negligence causing injury: Ibid.

In an action for personal injuries due to defect in sidewalk, experts may be allowed to testify as to how long the kind of lumber used in the sidewalk will last: McConnell v. Osage, 80–293.

For the purpose of showing that the city should have known of the condition of the walk where the injury occurred, the injured party may be allowed to prove the defective condition continuously along an entire block (following Armstrong v. Ackley, 71–76; distinguishing Ruggles v. Nevada, 63–185): Ibid.

Where the street commissioner had actual knowledge of the defective condition of a sidewalk, having been engaged recently before the accident in repairing it, and the defect consisting in original faulty construction as well as in its being out of repair, held, that the city was chargeable with notice of its condition: Ledgerwood v. Webster City, 61 N. W., 1089.

Evidence that other portions of the walk were in bad condition as well as that which caused the injury is admissible to show notice if relating to the same portion of the walk: Ibid; Aryman v. Marshalltown, 90–350; Munger v. Waterloo, 83–559; Riley v. Iowa Falls, 83–761; Smith v. Des Moines, 84–685.

Where an injury from the improper method of filling a ditch in the street resulted six weeks after the filling of such ditch, held, that the jury might properly find that if there was any defect it could have been discovered by the city in the exercise of reasonable diligence within that time: Rosenberg v. Des Moines, 41–415.

A municipal corporation is liable for injuries received by reason of a sidewalk having become out of repair and in an unsafe and dangerous condition, if it appears that, knowing it to be in that condition, it was allowed to remain for such length of time that it might, in the exercise of ordinary care and reasonable diligence, have been repaired before the injury: Townsend v. Des Moines, 42–657.

Where evidence showed that a barricade around an excavation in a sidewalk was in existence in the evening less than an hour before an accident occurred, and that at the time the accident occurred a portion of the barricade had been removed, held, that it not appearing that such removal was due to any act of the city, notice to the city of the defect in the barricade could not be inferred: Theissen v. Belle Plaine, 81-118.

The city is not chargeable constructively with notice of danger from an excavation which is left uncovered for a few minutes: Jones v. Clinton, 69 N. W., 418.

Where there is no actual notice, the liability of the city for injuries from obstructions in the streets will depend upon notoriety of the defect and the length of time of its continuance with reference to whether, in the exercise of reasonable observation and care, the proper officers of the city ought to have known of and remedied the defect or obstruction: Hazzard v. Council Bluffs, 87-51.

A municipal corporation cannot be held guilty of negligence on account of defects in a sidewalk not arising from its original construction, without express notice of the existence of the defect or obstruction has been brought home to it, or such defect or obstruction has been so notorious as to be observed by all: Doulon v. Clinton, 33-397; Cramer v. Burlington, 39-512.

Evidence is admissible in an action to recover for injuries from a defective sidewalk to show that complaints concerning the condition of the walk were made to the city council before the accident, the object of such evidence being to show that the city had notice of the defect: Trapnell v. Red Oak Junction, 76-744.

Therefore proof of the mere existence of a defect in a sidewalk is not enough to establish negligence on the part of the corporation; and in the absence of other evidence of negligence there can be no recovery for injuries received by reason of such defect: Doulon v. Clinton, 33-397.

It is not sufficient to charge the city with notice that two or more citizens of the city knew of the dangerous condition of the walk: Cramer v. Burlington, 39-512.

To render a municipal corporation liable for an injury arising from an obstruction in its streets it must be shown that through its officers it had notice of the obstruction, or that such obstruction had existed so long as to raise a presumption that knowledge thereof was possessed by such officers: Sikes v. Manchester, 59-65.

A city will be liable for injuries received from defects in a sidewalk which, originally constructed in a proper manner, has afterwards become out of repair, if it had actual knowledge of the defect in such time that with the exercise of reasonable diligence it might have repaired the defect and thereby prevented the injury, or if the defect was of such a nature and had existed for such a period of time that with the exercise of ordinary care and diligence in the discharge of its duty it would have learned of its existence in time to have prevented the injury: Cook v. Anamosa, 66-427

Where a defect is one which is not readily prevented the city will not be charged with notice thereof by reason of existing and apparent defects at a distance from the one which has caused the injury: Ruggles v. Nevada, 63-185; Goodson v. Des Moines, 66-255.

Neither can evidence be introduced against defendant's objection to show that after the accident loose boards were seen upon other parts of the sidewalk: Goodson v. Des Moines, 66-255.

The fact that the defective condition of a plank walk at one point is known to the officers of the city does not affect them with knowledge of its defective condition at a point half a block away, so as to render the city liable for damages resulting from the defective condition at the first point: Conklin v. Marshalltown, 66-122.

A city cannot be held guilty of negligence in not having knowledge that a street is dangerous by reason of accumulations of snow and ice where there is no evidence tending to show that any one observed that the street was in a dangerous condition prior to the time of the accident for which recovery is sought: Broburg v. Des Moines, 63-523.

The city marshal, not being charged by statute or ordinance with any duty with reference to the inspection and repair of streets or sidewalks, notice to him of a defect in a sidewalk is not notice to the city: Cook v. Anamosa, 66-427.

Notice to the mayor or council or the street committee, or the individual members thereof, will effect notice to the city of defects in its streets: Ibid.; Owen v. Fort Dodge, 67 N. W., 281.

In a particular case, held, that the defect was not so apparent that the city was negligent in failing to ascertain its existence before the occurrence of the injury: Cook v. Anamosa, 66-427.

Notice to members of the city council of the obstruction of a sewer, held sufficient to charge the city with notice thereof; and held, that it was not necessary to show that the council while in session expressly authorized the obstruction in order to charge the city with liability therefor: Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50-197.

While a city will be bound by notice of a defect communicated to a member of the city council, such notice must relate to the defect which caused the injury, and a notice to a member of the council of defects which have been repaired before the accident will not charge the city with notice of another defect which does cause the accident, although it occurs at the place where the repairs have been made: Carter v. Monticello, 68-178.

Notice to sidewalk commissioner is sufficient: Smith v. Des Moines, 84-685; Ledgerwood v. Webster City, 61 N. W., 1089.

The testimony of travelers or sojourners, as well as of citizens, is competent to show that defects in the streets were so notorious as to charge the city officers with knowledge thereof: Varnham v. Council Bluffs, 52-698.

An allegation in a petition charging notice of a defect in the sidewalk without stating whether it was actual or constructive, is sustained by proof of circumstances charging notice upon the city, although it does not show actual notice: Hunt v. Dubuque, 65 N. W., 319.

Contributory negligence of party injured: In an action for the recovery of damages for injuries due to a defective street, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove freedom from contributory negligence, and therefore, under an issue raised by general denial in such case, it is proper for defendant to prove the fact of plaintiff's intoxication, as showing contributory negligence: Fernbach v. Waterloo, 76-598.

In such a case, it is competent for the defendant to prove an ordinance prohibiting immoderate driving, and that defendant was violating such ordinance at the time of receiving his injuries; therefore, the introduction of the ordinance in evidence is not erroneous, even though the fact of immoderate driving has not yet been established: Ibid.

All that can be demanded of a party in regard to obstructions in the street is ordinary care to avoid them: Hanlon v. Keokuk, 7-488.

A person injured cannot recover for injuries received from the defect in a sidewalk which could have been discovered by the exercise of ordinary care: Cressy v. Postville, 59-62.

In order to recover for an injury resulting from a defect in a street the plaintiff must show that the street was not safe, and that he was in the exercise of ordinary care. But the action may be supported, although the primary cause is an accident which prevents the exercise of care to avoid the injury, if it occurred without the fault of the person injured: Manderschid v. Dubuque, 25-108.

If the defective walk is one cause of the accident the fact that there is another cause for which neither party is responsible will not relieve the city from liability: Langhammer v. Manchester, 68 N. W., 688.

Where there is a defect such as a declivity in the street which is not guarded by railing, and which is so situated that it would be contributory negligence on the part of any one to drive his team over such declivity, and a horse, properly hitched in the street, breaks loose and is injured by running over such declivity, the city is not liable: Moss v. Burlington, 60-438.

Where a resident of a city, having knowledge of an excavation in an unused street, turned his mare at large and she was injured by falling into such excavation, held, that, as he had equal means of knowledge of the danger with the officers of the city, he was equally guilty of negligence, and could not recover: Gribble v. Sioux City, 38-390.

Sidewalks and cross-walks are constructed for foot travelers, and a person who, without some good and sufficient reason, walks elsewhere and is injured, should not be permitted to complain that he has been injured through the fault and negligence of the city: O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 42-539.

On a subsequent trial of the case, held, that facts were shown sufficient to take the case out of the rule therein laid down: O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 52-746.

Where a person undertakes to drive a horse in one direction, while looking and talking in another direction, and no special exigency is shown, such person must be considered as voluntarily assuming the risk of driving against any obstacle in the way, and he cannot be said to be in the exercise of due care, especially when outside of the usually traveled highway, and in the vicinity of a dwelling-house where more or less obstacles are to be found, and held, that it was error to instruct the jury in such case that they might consider the presence of other persons with whom the injured person was conversing, in determining whether such party was negligent in driving against the obstacle: Tuffree v. State Center, 57-538.

Where an obstruction in the street is in plain view of the driver of a vehicle, and his attention is in no manner diverted so as to excuse him from seeing it, and he drives against it, or into it, he is guilty of contributing proximately to any injuries which may result: Yahn v. Ottumwa, 60-429.

Where it appeared that plaintiff, without any reason for doing so, went out of his way into an alley where there was no sidewalk, it being dark, and fell into an unprotected stairway, held, that he could not recover from the city. Alleys are not generally intended for foot passage, especially at night: Ely v. Des Moines, 86-55.

If the plaintiff knew that it was imprudent to go over a walk, and there was another one by which he could have reached his destination, he is to be considered guilty of contributory negligence in attempting to walk, even cautiously, over it in the dark instead of taking the other way: Parkhill v. Brighton, 61-103.

One who is using a sidewalk is not required to use more than ordinary care and caution to avoid accident. Langhammer v. Manchester, 68 N. W., 688.

A person who is injured by reason of defects in the sidewalk cannot be defeated of recovery therefor by reason of knowledge of the defective condition of the walk, except as he has been guilty of negligence operating to his injury. He is not to be denied relief simply because he goes upon a street which he knows to be dangerous: Rice v. Des Moines, 40-638. And see Walker v. Decatur County, 67-307.

Knowledge by the party injured, previous to the injury, of the defect from which the injury results, will not defeat his claim for damages if he was not guilty of negligence: Ross v. Davenport, 66-548; Kingsley v. Mulhall, 64 N. W., 659; Hall v. Manson, 68 N. W., 922.

It is error, in an action for injuries from a defective walk, to refuse an instruction that if the jury find that plaintiff, at the time of passing over the walk, knew that it was unsafe and that it was imprudent to pass over it at that time, in consequence of darkness or any other cause, and that with this knowledge he still persisted in passing over it, though there was another walk which he might have taken going in the same direction he desired to go, then his own negligence contributed to the accident and he could not recover: McGinty v. Keokuk, 66-725.

It is not negligence to travel the streets of a city on a dark night without a lantern, or to walk rapidly therein: Moore v. Burlington, 49-136.

The same degree of care is required of the persons using the street whether by day or by night but it is not error to tell the jury that greater caution and watchfulness might be required at night than in the day time. What will constitute ordinary care will depend upon circumstances: Hall v. Manson, 90-585.

In determining whether a plaintiff who has been injured by a defect in a sidewalk has contributed to the injury by his own negligence, it is proper for the jury to take into consideration the hour of the night the injury was received, the darkness of the night, whether the plaintiff was under the influence of intoxicating liquors, etc: Cramer v. Burlington, 39-512.

In an action for personal injuries received from defects in a street, the jury may properly be instructed that the law demanded of plaintiff the exercise of ordinary care, and that in determining whether he exercised such care they should consider all the circumstances of the case, the hour of the night, etc., but it is not proper to instruct them that greater caution was demanded of plaintiff in passing upon a street after night than in day time. The degree of care to be used is the same at all times: Stier v. Oskaloosa, 41-353.

In order to constitute contributory negligence it is not necessary that plaintiff must have known of the danger and assumed the risk before it can be said that he was negligent. The true rule is that plaintiff should have used due care and caution to discover the danger; but held erroneous to charge the jury that in order to render plaintiff, suing for damages for injuries received from a defective sidewalk, chargeable with contributory negligence preventing his recovery, it must appear that he went voluntarily into apparent danger: Munger v. Marshalltown, 56-216.

The fact that a party in crossing a street has crossed a place which he knew to be dangerous when he might, without increasing the distance and without inconvenience, have crossed at another place, will not prevent his recovery; but if, knowing that the place was dangerous, he knew or ought to have known that it was not prudent to cross at such place, and there was another way which he might have taken without material inconvenience, he cannot recover: Hartman v. Muscatine, 70-511.

A person cannot be excused if he conciously incurs danger which there is no necessity for incurring: Fulliam v. Muscatine, 70-436.

A person is not as a matter of law guilty of contributory negligence because, knowing a walk to be unsafe, he does not cross the street, as he might do with safety, instead of taking the walk. Such question is for the jury: Kendall v. Albia, 73-241; Owen v. Fort Dodge, 67 N. W., 281.

The mere fact that plaintiff knew the place of the injury was dangerous and that there was another safe and convenient way will not necessarily preclude his recovery for injury received by reason of defects in the walk: Nichols v. Laurens, 65 N. W., 335.

In an action for damages caused by a defective street, where it appeared that plaintiff went upon the street knowing the place to be dangerous, held, that this was not evidence per se that he contributed to the injury, but that the fact of contributory negligence was a question for the jury: Byerly v. Anamosa, 79-204.

In such case knowledge on the part of the injured party of the condition of the sidewalk will not necessarily constitute contributory negligence: Ibid; Traxel v. Vinton, 77-90.

A person walking on a public street must, to avoid accident, act as a reasonably careful and prudent man would act considering all the circumstances surrounding him; but it is error to charge that as matter of law he should avoid all obstacles dangerous in their character which are plainly visible and not obscured: Mathews v. Cedar Rapids, 80-459.

Therefore, held, that where a passer on the sidewalk, attracted by a display in a shop window, stepped toward the window and fell into an area way left unprotected at the edge of the sidewalk, he was not, as matter of law, precluded from recovery by the fact that he might have noticed and avoided the opening if he had looked where he was stepping: Ibid.

The questions whether the town is liable for injury received by stepping into a cellar way which was at the time only partially protected and whether the plaintiff in thus stepping into the cellar way, of the existence of which he was aware, but from which his attention was for the time diverted, was guilty of contributory negligence, are for the jury: Lichtenburger v. Meriden, 91-45.

Where it appeared that plaintiff having knowledge of an opening in the sidewalk inadvertently stepped into it and was injured, held, that the question whether he was guilty of contributory negligence was a question for the jury: Lichtenburger v. Meriden, 69 N. W., 424.

One passing over a sidewalk is not bound at his peril to discover every defect, although it may be open to inspection. He has the right to assume that the corporation has done its duty and maintained its walks in a reasonably safe condition for travel. Nor is he to be held guilty of negligence as a matter of law if he passes over a walk which he knows or ought to have known to be dangerous. An unguarded, unbarricaded walk is an invitation to one to go upon it, and a city cannot be heard to say that one is guilty of negligence as a matter of law who accepts the invitation: Barnes v. Marcus, 65 N. W., 984.

A person using the sidewalk has a right to rely upon its being in a reasonably safe condition unless he knows otherwise. Robinson v. Cedar Rapids, 69 N. W., 1064.

Where a person passing along in the street steps upon ice, which is dangerous and he has knowledge of that fact, when he might have avoided such danger, he cannot recover for the injury: Cosner v. Centerville, 90-33.

In this case it appeared that plaintiff might have avoided the danger by passing along the roadway of the street instead of over the ice and on the sidewalk: Ibid.

The burden of proving freedom from negligence in such case is on the plaintiff: Ibid.

Intoxication: Under evidence showing that plaintiff suing for injuries received from a defective sidewalk was intoxicated at the time of the accident, held, that the verdict of the jury allowing only nominal damages would not be interfered with on appeal: Hubbard v. Mason City, 64-245.

The fact of intoxication of the person injured, at the time of the injury, may be shown as tending to show contributory negligence: Cramer v. Burlington, 39-512.

Imputed negligence: Where it was sought to impute negligence to a party suing for injuries received from obstructions in a street while traveling thereon, held, that the fact that the owner of the team which plaintiff was driving knew that the team was unmanageable could not be imputed to plaintiff as negligence in the absence of such knowledge on his part: Martin v. Algona, 40-390.

One who is injured by reason of a defective sidewalk is not to be defeated in his recovery because the accident was occasioned by the act of a companion in stepping upon a loose plank, the city being liable for allowing the walk to be in a defective condition: Barnes v. Marcus, 65 N. W., 984.

Remedy over against property owner: The fact that the city has a remedy over against a private party who has so used a sidewalk, or left exposed a dangerous place, as to cause injury to a traveler, does not relieve the city of its duty towards such traveler to keep sidewalks in repair, and guard places of danger of which it has notice: Rowell v. Williams, 29-210.

Where a person places an obstruction in a street he cannot demand of the city that it shall remove the obstruction at its expense if it had knowledge of it, and in case of failure to remove it after such knowledge, that it shall be precluded from looking to him for indemnification for damages which it is compelled to pay for the injury caused by the obstruction. Such circumstances would not establish contributory negligence on the part of the city, defeating its right to recovery from the property owner: Sioux City v. Weare, 59-95.

If a person for his private advantage, under permission from the city, makes an excavation in the street, and the city erects a barrier on one side of it, the person making the excavation is not thereby relieved from the duty of erecting a barrier on the other side if the safety of travelers requires it: Ottumwa v. Parks, 43-119.

Where suit was brought against a city for damages sustained by reason of an excavation in the street made by a property owner, and such property owner employed an attorney to defend in such action against the city, held, that in the action by the city against the property owner to recover the amount of damages which it had been compelled to pay on account of such injury, the measure of damages was the amount of the judgment with interest and cost which had been recovered in the action against the city: Ibid.

Where joint judgment for injuries from negligence in the obstruction of a street is recovered against a municipal corporation and the party guilty of causing the obstruction, the corporation cannot require that plaintiff proceed first against the co-defendant, even though he has property subject to execution: Palmer v. Stacy, 44-340.

Even where the city directs sidewalks to be made or repaired, and assesses a special tax upon abutting lots to pay therefor, the lot owner failing to make the improvement, after being notified, does not become liable for injuries by reason of failure to make such improvement, or to make repairs, as the case may be: Keokuk v. Independent Dist., 53-352.

The city cannot escape liability for the defective condition of its streets for the reason that a third person is under obligation to keep such portion in repair. So held with reference to defective crossings on the street put in by a railway company: Fowler v. Strawberry Hill, 74-644.

For provisions as to construction and repair of sidewalks, see §§ 777-779.

SEC. 754. Regulation of conveyances and transportation. They shall have power to regulate, license and tax all carts, wagons, street sprinklers, drays, coaches, hacks, omnibuses, and every description of conveyance kept for hire; fix the rate and prices for the transportation of persons and property from one part of the city to another in the vehicles above named, and to require such persons to keep exposed to view, in or upon such vehicle, a printed table of the rates and prices so fixed; to establish stands for hackney coaches, cabs, omnibuses, drays and express wagons, and to enforce the observance and use thereof; to prescribe the width of the tires of all vehicles habitually used in the transportation of persons or articles from one part of the city to another, and require vehicles and bicycles to carry lamps giving sufficient light. [21 G. A., ch. 92; 16 G. A., ch. 24; C. '73, §§ 463, 537; R., § 1063.]

SEC. 755. Regulation of driving or riding. They shall have power to restrain and regulate the riding and driving of horses, live stock, vehicles and bicycles within the limits of the corporation, and prevent and punish fast or immoderate riding or driving within such limits. [C. '73, § 456; R., § 1057.]

SEC. 756. Lighting. They shall have power to light streets, avenues, alleys, highways, public places, grounds, buildings, landings, market places and wharfs. [C. '73, § 464; R., § 1064.]

The grant of power to a city to light its streets not only authorizes a city thus to furnish the lighting but also empowers it to contract with others to furnish such lighting: Levis v. Newton, 75 Fed., 884.

A city cannot be enjoined at the suit of a tax payer from contracting for electric lighting, although there is an existing contract for lighting by gas: Searl v. Abraham, 73-507.

In general as to gas works and electric light plants, see §§ 720-725. And as to regulation of electric light wires, see §§ 776, 777.

SEC. 757. Care, construction and repair of bridges. Cities shall have the care, supervision and control of all public bridges and culverts within the corporate limits thereof; shall cause the same to be kept open and free from nuisances; and shall construct and keep in repair all public culverts within the limits of said corporations. They may aid in the construction of any county bridges within the limits of said city, or in the construction of any bridge contiguous to said city, on a highway leading to the same, or in the construction of any bridge across any unnavigable river which divides the county in which said city is located from another state, by appropriating a sum not exceeding ten dollars per linear foot therefor. [C. '73, § 527; R., § 1095.]

The county has the right to erect public bridges on public highways inside the limits of a city: Bell v. Foutch, 21-119; Barrett v. Brooks, 21-144.

The provisions of this section do not preclude the county from exercising its authority to build bridges at other places within city limits where the public good requires: Oskaloosa Steam Engine Works v. Pottawattamie County, 72-134.

The provision of § 527 of Code of '73 [not now retained] that bridges forty feet or more in length should be deemed county bridges was held applicable to bridges outside as well as within city limits, but it did not determine whether bridges less than forty feet in length were to be deemed county bridges: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

As to the liability of the county for injuries resulting from defects in bridges which it is under obligation to maintain, see notes to § 422, ¶ 18.

Before the repeal of the statute allowing cities to erect toll bridges, held, that a city might erect free or toll bridges at its option, and convert the one into the other: Scott v. Des Moines, 34-552.

The conveyance to a city for free and public use of a bridge built as a toll bridge by private enterprise and with the aid of individual subscriptions, in return for which the right of free passage was granted to such subscribers, held not to obligate the city to keep such bridge in repair, or prevent its erecting a new toll bridge on the site of the one purchased, and denying free passage thereon to the subscribers to the old bridge: Ibid.

The city is only required to keep bridges within its limits in reasonable and ordinarily good repair: Holmes v Hamburg, 47–348.

A municipal corporation is liable for material furnished by it for repairs upon a bridge for a county road within the corporate limits: Tubbs v. Maquoketa, 32-564.

As to bridge tax, see § 888.

SEC. 758. Bridge fund. Cities of the first class shall have full control of the bridge fund levied and collected as provided by law, and shall have the right to use the same for the construction of bridges, culverts, and approaches thereto, repairing the same, and paying bridge bonds and interest thereon issued by such city, and shall be liable for defective construction thereof, and failure to maintain the same in safe condition as counties now are with reference to county bridges; and no county shall be liable for any such bridge or injuries caused thereby. [25 G. A., ch. 5, § 1; 23 G. A., ch. 2, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 45, § 1.]

SEC. 759. Aiding county bridge. Cities and towns may vote to aid in the construction of any county bridge, when the estimated cost of the same is not less than ten thousand dollars, to the extent of one-half the estimated cost thereof, as fixed by the board of supervisors; and a city having a population of five thousand or more may vote a tax, not to exceed two per centum of the assessed value of the taxable property in such city, to construct, or aid any company which is or may be incorporated under the laws of this state in the construction of, a highway or combination bridge across any navigable boundary river of this state, commencing or terminating in such city, suitable for use as highway, or for both highway and railway and street railway purposes. [25 G. A., ch. 19, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 13, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 98; 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 1.]

A tax in aid of the construction of a combination bridge by a private corporation will be invalid if the corporation is not organized under the laws of Iowa, or even if it is so organized, where it does not itself carry on the work contemplated, but assigns it to a foreign corporation: Smith v. Omaha & C. B. R. & B. Co., 66 N. W., 1041.

SEC. 760. Question submitted. Whenever a petition shall be presented to the council, signed by a majority of the resident freehold taxpayers thereof, asking that the question of constructing or aiding in the construction of a bridge, as provided in the preceding section, be submitted to the qualified electors, it shall be its duty to immediately give notice of a special election, by publication in some newspaper published therein, and also by posting copies of such notice in five public places therein, at least ten days before such election. [25 G. A., ch. 19, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 13, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 2.]

SEC. 761. Notice—conditions. Such notice shall specify the time and place of holding the election, the proposed location of the bridge to be aided, the rate per cent. of tax to be levied, the amount which the board of supervisors is authorized to cause to be collected each year, and all the conditions in the petition. In case of proposed aid to a private corporation, the notice shall also state its name, the amount of work required to be done on such bridge, and any other conditions which are to be performed before said tax or any part thereof shall become due and payable. Such notice may also contain terms and conditions to be performed by said corporation receiving such aid after the completion of such bridge, which terms and conditions shall be obligatory and binding upon it, its successors and assigns. [21 G. A., ch. 13, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 63, §§ 2–4.]

SEC. 762. Certificate. At such election the question of taxation shall be submitted to the electors thereof. If a majority of the votes be for taxation, the clerk of such city or town shall forthwith certify to the county auditor of the proper county the result, the rate per cent. of the tax voted, the year or years during which the same is to be collected, the amount to be collected each year, the terms and conditions upon which the same when collected is to be paid, and, if aid is voted to a private corporation, its name, together with a copy of the notice under which the election was held. The certificate shall be filed with the county auditor, who shall cause the same to be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds. The expenses of the giving of the notice and holding the election shall be audited and paid out of the county treasury as other claims against the county. [21 G. A., ch. 13, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 63, §§ 2–6.]

SEC. 763. Tax levied. After such certificate shall have been filed and recorded, the board of supervisors shall, at the time of levying the ordinary taxes, levy each year, on the taxable property of such city or town, the taxes voted as shown by said certificate. [21 G. A., ch. 13, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 2.]

SEC. 764. Collection—payment. Said taxes shall be collected in the same manner, subject to the same penalties for non-payment after delinquent, and to the same laws after they are collected or collectible, as other taxes, in conformity with the terms and conditions of the notice of election; when collected they shall be paid by the county treasurer, on the order of the board of supervisors, specifying the special bridge fund from which each order is payable; but in no case shall said board make such order until the conditions specified in the petition and notice have been complied with. Such taxes, when payable to the city or town, shall be paid over as other city or town taxes. When payable to a private corporation, they shall be paid over by the county treasurer to such corporation, upon the order of the president or a majority of the directors thereof, after said council shall have certified to the county treasurer that the conditions required, as set forth in the notice for the special election at which the tax was voted, have been complied with, and the council, or a majority of its members, shall make such certificate whenever such conditions shall have been so performed. [25 G. A., ch. 19, § 3; 21 G. A., ch. 13, §§ 2, 3; 19 G. A., ch. 63, §§ 2, 4, 5.]

SEC. 765. Forfeiture. Should any taxes levied under the provisions of the foregoing sections remain in the county treasury more than one year after the same shall have been collected, the right to them shall be forfeited, and they shall be refunded to the taxpayers, and the board of supervisors shall cause any remaining levy to be canceled and stricken from the tax books, which cancellation shall remove all liens created thereby, and it shall make no further levies under said certificate. [21 G. A., ch. 13, § 4.]

SEC. 766. Contract for use of bridge. Cities situated on a river wholly in the state, or one forming its boundary line, and from which to the opposite shore a bridge has been or may be constructed by any railroad company, corporation or person, shall have power to contract with the railroad company, corporation or person owning such bridge for the use of the same as a public highway; which contract may be for the joint use of such bridge, or for the sole use of such portion thereof as may be devoted or adapted to highway travel; and may assume the sole liability, or any portion thereof, for damages to persons or property by reason of their being on any portion of said bridge or approach to either end thereof, caused by the running of cars or locomotives thereon by any corporation, company or person entitled to its use, whether the damage results from the negligence of the person engaged in running said cars or locomotives or otherwise, and to indemnify the owners of said bridge, and all others entitled to use the same, from liability or damage so caused, to the extent or proportion thereof assumed in the said contract; and the city may thereafter, and during the continuance of said contract, manage and control said bridge so far as necessary to regulate the highway travel thereon, and may regulate the same as a free or toll bridge, and prescribe such rates of toll as to it from time to time shall seem proper, and make all necessary police regulations for the government of the highway travel thereon, and levy the necessary tax, not exceeding in any one year ten mills on the dollar, for the purpose of carrying out the terms of such contract. [21 G. A., ch. 173, § 2; 15 G. A., ch. 5, § 1.]

Without regard to the provisions of this section taxpayers may, by action against a corporation to which such taxes have been unlawfully paid, recover the amount of taxes so received by it. Until the corporation becomes entitled to the tax it remains the property of the taxpayer held in trust to await the performance of the condition, and if the conditions are not performed the taxpayer may recover the money thus paid from the corporation wrongfully withholding it: Smith v. Omaha & C. B. R. & B. Co., 66 N. W., 1041.

SEC. 767. Railway tracks—street railways. Cities and towns shall have the power to authorize or forbid the construction of street railways within their limits and may define the motive power by which the cars thereon shall be propelled; and to authorize or forbid the location and laying down of tracks for railways and street railways on all streets, alleys and public places; but no railway track can thus be located and laid down until after the injury to property abutting upon the street, alley or public place upon which such railway track is proposed to be located and laid down has been ascertained and compensated for in the manner provided with reference to taking private property for works of internal improvement. [23 G. A., ch. 11, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 96, § 1; 15 G. A., ch. 6; C. '73, § 464; R., § 1064.]

Right to locate railways upon streets: Since the change made in § 1262 of Code of '73, by 15 G. A., ch. 47 (see § 2017), the power to authorize the laying down of tracks for street and other railways, and the use of steam motors thereon, does not exist except as here given, the earlier case of Milburn v. Cedar Rapids, 12–246, and many cases following it, being no longer applicable: Stanley v. Davenport, 54–463; Stange v. Hill & West Dubuque St. R. Co., 54–669.

The provisions of this section were not originally applicable to cities acting under special charter: Ibid; Simplot v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 5 McCrary, 158.

An ordinance authorizing the construction of railway tracks upon city streets, without making the right to occupy such streets conditional upon payment of damages as required by statute, does not confer any rights upon the railway company: Stange v. Dubuque, 62-303.

Where the fee of the street is in the city for the use and benefit of the public, the general assembly has the control thereof, and may prescribe the terms and conditions under which the public may use such streets: Sears v. Marshalltown St. R. Co., 65-742.

Consent by city council: The statute does not prescribe the manner by which authority may be granted to a railroad company to construct its track upon the streets of the city, and such authority may be given by resolution duly passed, or by vote duly taken, appearing in the proper records of the city: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-105.

The city council may authorize the laying of a railway track over an alley, although the effect may be to prevent the use of the alley for other purposes. Whether the same rule would apply in case of a street, quœre: Heath v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61-11.

But the city council is not authorized to devote an alley to a railway track for the private benefit of some individual; and the fact that leave has been granted to lay the track over an alley for purely private benefit will not prevent a subsequent grant of a right to a railway company to lay a track through such alley for public use: Ibid.

The city having been given by this section the power to grant the right to lay down a railway track over its streets, all else in connection therewith is a matter of detail and within the discretion of the city, subject only to equitable control and proper police regulations: O'Neil v. Lamb, 53-725.

Compensation to property owners: A railway which has been located over the streets of a city, at a time when compensation to adjacent property owners for such use of the street was not required, cannot lay new switches and side tracks in connection with such railway, without making compensation: Drady v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 57-393; Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-105.

The statutory provisions requiring compensation apply to a railroad authorized by ordinance and partly constructed prior to the time that the change in the statute went into effect: Mulholland v. Des Moines, A. & W. R. Co., 60-740; Hanson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 61-588.

Where a railway company had commenced the use of its track constructed under permission granted by the city council before the statutory change requiring compensation, held, that it could not afterward be made liable for damages to abutting lot owners: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-105.

When the road is located upon private property and not upon a street an abutting owner cannot recover damages resulting from the ordinary operation of the road: Rinard v. Burlington & N. R. Co., 66-440. Nor can damages be recovered from the city in such a case for injuries from an embankment: Callahan v. Des Moines, 63-705.

The provisions as to making compensation for injury to property abutting on a street upon which a railway track is proposed to be located are only applicable to property owners whose property abuts upon the portion of the street occupied by the track, and not to owners of property abutting upon a street which is merely crossed by the track: Morgan v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 64-589.

Under the provisions of § 2017 a railway company has the right to cross a street with its track without paying damages to abutting property owners, where it does not occupy the street in front of abutting property. But if it crosses the street at an angle, so that a portion of the track is in front of abutting property, the provisions of this section as to consent of council and as to damages apply: Enos v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 78-28; Gates v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 82-518.

The damages to be allowed to an abutting property owner by reason of the construction of a track over a street are not limited to damages arising from a change of grade, but extend to all legitimate damages which are contemplated in other provisions for condemning the right of way: Drady v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 57-393.

In estimating the damages caused by the operation of a steam railway along a street where damages to the property owner have not been previously assessed and paid, the fact that such operation has diverted travel from the street may be shown in evidence as showing the manner in which the rental value of the property has been diminished, and for the purpose of ascertaining the measure of damage: Stange v. Dubuque, 62-303.

In an action for such damages all the facts attending the use and operation of the railroad may properly be given in evidence as bearing upon the effect of the operation of the road on the rental value of the property: such, for instance, as annoyance to the occupants of the property by noise, escape of fire from engines, etc.: Wilson v. Des Moines, O. & S. R. Co., 67-509.

In a proceeding to assess damages to abutting property by reason of the location and operation of a railroad upon a street, the property owner is entitled to be compensated for injuries which he will sustain on account both of the laying down of the track in the street on which his property abuts, and of the appropriation of his land, if any, which is taken for right of way purposes: McClean v. Chicago, I. & D. R. Co., 67-568.

The provisions of this section as to the manner of assessment of damages resulting from the location of a railway upon the streets of a city refer exclusively to the company and not to the abutting owner; such owner does not have any interest in the fee of the street, and he cannot take steps to have his damages assessed by a sheriff's jury according to the provisions applicable where property is taken for right of way; therefore, he may bring action for damages without such proceeding: Mulholland v. Des Moines, A. & W. R. Co., 60-740.

The provision with reference to assessing damages for laying a railroad track through the streets refers exclusively to the railroad company and not to the abutting owner. The latter cannot have his damages assessed in that manner: Stough v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-641.

As the abutting property owner is not authorized to cause his damages to be assessed, and the corporation alone can institute the proceedings, an action by the property owner may be maintained for damages accruing to him before the assessment is made: Wilson v. Des Moines, O. & S. R. Co., 67-509.

The property owner cannot take advantage of the method of procedure pointed out by this section for the purpose of having his damages from the construction of a railway in the street determined, but can only resort to an action to recover judgment: Harbach v. Des Moines & K. C. R. Co., 80-593.

After such an assessment has been made, if the damage is not paid the company may be enjoined from occupying the street on the ground that it is a trespasser and maintaining a nuisance: Ibid.

The fact that the land-owner has brought an action at law for damages and recovered judgment does not preclude him from having an injunction in a proper proceeding to restrain the use of the street by the company: Ibid.

The fact that the railway company is occupying the streets as the successor of another company under purchase of its franchise at foreclosure sale does not relieve it from being enjoined at the suit of a property owner who recovered judgment against the former company, and the successor cannot plead that the former company occupied by the consent of the land-owner, that defense having been merged in the judgment against such former company: Ibid.

A right of action for injuries to an abutting property owner accrues at once and is entire, and must be brought in five years. Such a right of action does not pass to the grantee under a conveyance made subsequently to the time when the right of action accrues, and, without an assignment of such cause of action to him, grantee can maintain no action for such injuries: Pratt v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 72-249; Jolly v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 72-759.

Where a railway track is under ordinance of the city laid in a street or alley without compensation being made to the abutting owner, his right of action for damages accrues at once, and the railroad cannot be regarded as a continuing nuisance. An action to recover damages for such an injury must be brought within the statutory period from the time the street or alley is occupied: Fowler v. Des Moines & K. C. R. Co., 91-533.

An approach on a street to a railroad crossing is part of the railroad and the property owner in front of whose premises such embankment is constructed is entitled to recover damages, although the track itself does not run in front of his premises: Hitchcock v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 88-242.

In determining whether the street is occupied in front of abutting property, not only the track, strictly speaking, but also any embankment made for the purpose of constructing the track, is to be taken into account, and also any embankment in the street for the purpose of constructing the railroad crossing: Gates v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 82-518.

Embankments forming the road-bed and approaches to highways or street crossings, rendered necessary by the construction of a railroad, are a part of the railway track, within the meaning of this section, and an owner, in front of whose property such an approach is constructed in the street, is entitled to damages: Nicks v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 84-27.

The compensation provided for in this section is not for property taken, but for damages to abutting property: Ibid.

Under this section the owner is entitled to recover for injury to the land as well as to his improvements: Ibid.

The rule of damage is the difference in the value of the property before and after the construction of the track, approaches, etc.: Ibid.

Where abutting lot owners join in an agreement that a railway track may be laid down in the street, and it is laid down and operated in accordance with that agreement, any such lot owner or grantee is estopped from questioning the right of the railroad to maintain such track: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 79-613.

Damages: A railway company which so negligently builds its track over the streets of a city, or so occupies such streets, as to create a nuisance, is liable in damages to any one suffering therefrom special injuries not common to the whole public: Park v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 43-636; Frith v. Dubuque, 45-406.

It is immaterial in such case whether the party injured owns the fee in the street or not: Cadle v. Muscatine Western R. Co., 44-11; Frith v. Dubuque, 45-406; Cain v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 54-255.

One who is not the owner of the fee in the street can recover only on proof of actual damages: Cook v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 83-278.

If a railway, therefore, be constructed in a careless, improper and negligent manner, to the injury of an abutting property owner, he may recover damages, provided his injury be special: Cain v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 54-255.

So the city may, by ordinance, make and enforce reasonable restrictions, and the use of the street in violation of such restrictions will be a nuisance for which a person sustaining special damage may recover: Ibid.

The benefits to the property may be taken into account but will not entirely preclude recovery: Enos v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 78-28.

In an action by a lot-owner for damages caused by a railway company constructing its road so that the rails were above the established grade, being so constructed on the theory that under the ordinances of the city the company was entitled to lay its tracks on the grade, held, that the company could not object that damages were assessed on the theory that such obstruction was permanent: Eslich v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 75–443.

A witness may be asked whether the annual premium for insurance would be higher: Ibid.

The city is not liable for damages resulting from the laying down of tracks, etc., under permission granted by it: Frith v. Dubuque, 45–406.

Although a railway company is liable for negligence in failing to keep its crossings where the track intersects the street in proper condition, such liability does not relieve the city from liability for injuries arising from such defects in its streets: Fowler v. Strawberry Hill, 74–644.

As to the measure of damages in such cases, see Cadle v. Muscatine W. R. Co., 44–11; Frith v. Dubuque, 45–406; O'Connor v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 56–735; Kuchcman v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 46–366.

Equitable control: The doctrine of equitable control over the use of the streets by railway companies, which was recognized when such companies had the right to use the streets of cities for railway purposes without compensation to property owners or consent of the city, has now no application: Heath v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co. 61–11.

Street railways: Aside from any special provision in the city charter, it may be regarded as the doctrine of this state that the city may authorize the construction of a street railway in its streets: Damour v. Lyons, 44–276.

An elevated railway is not to be deemed a street railway within the provisions of this section, even though it receives and discharges passengers at street corners, and therefore damages for the construction of such railway must be paid to abutting property owners: Freiday v. Sioux City Rapid Transit Co., 92–191.

The term street railway as used in the statute must be construed in accordance with the understanding of the use of such terms when the statute was enacted: Ibid.

The provision that a railway track can be located and laid down only upon damages to abutting owners being paid does not apply to street railways, and the city council may authorize the location of such tracks upon the streets without payment of damages caused thereby: Sears v. Marshalltown St. R. Co., 65–742.

In the absence of special authority conferred by the legislature, the city has no power to authorize the use of a steam motor on a street railway, and it will be liable in damages for injuries resulting from the use of such motor on the streets under its permission: Stanley v. Davenport, 54–463.

As to right to permit use of streets by horse railway, see O'Niel v. Lamb, 53–725.

Under this section a city has the right to grant the exclusive privilege for a reasonable length of time to construct and operate a street railway over any and all streets of the city, but it could not make such exclusive grant in perpetuity. Such a grant to a company to operate a street railway by horse power will not, however, preclude the grant to another company of the right to operate a street railway by other power: Des Moines St. R. Co. v. Des Moines Broad-Gauge St. R. Co., 73–513.

The right to grant an exclusive privilege to operate a street railway did not exist prior to the enactment of § 464 of the Code of '73; but held, that an ordinance granting such exclusive privilege prior to that time was ratified by action of the city after this section was enacted: Ibid.

Under the decision as to the right of a street railway company under an exclusive charter to lay its track over the streets of a city, held, that acts of the officers of the city in attempting to prevent the company from doing so were a violation of the injunction in that case: Des Moines St. R. Co. v. Des Moines Broad-Gauge St. R. Co., 74–585.

A grant to a street railway company of the exclusive right to operate a street railway over streets of the city by animal power does not prevent the grant to another company of the right to operate street cars by other power: Teachout v. Des Moines Broad-Gauge St. R. Co., 75–722.

Where a street railway was under its franchise operating in the middle of the street with a single track and the construction of a sewer in the same street was subsequently ordered, held, that a provision of the ordinance that such sewer should be constructed in the middle of the street was unreasonable in view of the fact that it might without serious inconvenience or injury to the abutting property be constructed at the side of the street and thus avoid interference with the plaintiff's track: Des Moines St. R. Co. v. Des Moines, 90–770.

SEC. 768. Street car vestibules. On and after November 1, 1898, every person, partnership, company or corporation owning or operating a street railway in this state shall, from November first of each year to April first following, provide all cars, except trailers, used for the transportation of passengers, with vestibules inclosing the front platform on at least three sides, for the protection of employes operating such cars. Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each day said cars are operated in violation hereof.

SEC. 769. Railway crossings—speed of trains. Cities having a population of five thousand or more shall have power to compel railroad companies to erect, construct, maintain and operate, under such regulations as may from time to time be provided by the council, suitable gates upon public streets at railroad crossings; and cities and towns shall have power to regulate the speed of trains and locomotives on railways running over the streets or through the limits of the city or town. [25 G. A., ch. 5; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; C. '73, § 456; R., § 1057.]

An ordinance regulating the speed of trains must be reasonable in order to be valid, and the question of whether or not it is reasonable as applied to portions of the city where the track does not run through land platted and used for residence or business purposes is for the court: Myers v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 57–555.

And this rule is applicable to an ordinance under the express authority of this section: Bury v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 90–106.

In a particular case, held, that the ordinance limiting the speed of trains within the city limits to ten miles an hour would not be deemed unreasonable with reference to a crossing three-fourths of a mile from the depot, it not appearing but that the crossing was one in general use, and a dangerous one if a higher speed should be permitted: Larkin v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 85–492.

A railway company is liable for injuries to persons at crossings when such injury is due to the train being run at a greater speed than allowed by city ordinance: Ward v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 65 N. W., 999.

In an action to recover damages against a railway company for negligently causing the death of a person on its track, the fact that the engine of defendant was being operated within city limits at a higher rate of speed than allowed by the ordinance may be shown without proof that the accident was directly due to the train being operated at excessive speed: McMarshall v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 80–757.

In an action for injury received at a railway crossing from a train running at an unlawful speed plaintiff may prove that he had knowledge of the ordinance: Moore v. St. Paul & K. C. R. Co., 71 N. W., 569.

SEC. 770. Viaducts—when required. Cities having a population of seven thousand or over shall have power to require any railroad company, owning or operating any railroad tracks upon or across any public streets of such city, to erect, construct, reconstruct, complete, and maintain, to the extent hereinafter provided, any viaduct upon or along such streets, and over or under such tracks, including the approaches thereto, as may be declared by ordinances of such city necessary for the safety and protection of the public. The approaches to any such viaduct shall not exceed a total distance of eight hundred feet, but no such viaduct shall be required on more than every fourth street running in the same direction, and no railroad company shall be required to build or contribute to the building of more than one such viaduct, with its approaches, in any one year; nor shall any viaduct be required until the board of railroad commissioners shall, after examination, determine the same to be necessary for the public safety and convenience, and the plans of said viaduct, prepared as hereinafter provided, shall have been approved by said board. [22 G. A., ch. 32, § 1.]

SEC. 771. Assessment of damages. When a viaduct shall be by ordinance declared necessary for the safety and protection of the public, the council shall provide for appraising, assessing and determining the damages which may be caused to any property by reason of the construction of the same and its approaches. The proceedings for such purpose shall be the same as are provided in case of taking private property for works of internal improvement, and the damages assessed shall be paid by the city out of the general bridge fund. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 772. Specifications. The width, height and strength of any viaduct and the approaches thereto, and the material and manner of construction thereof, shall be such as may be required by the board of public works and approved by the mayor and council, but if there is no board of public works, then such as may be required by the council. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 773. Apportionment of cost—repairs. When two or more railroad companies own or operate separate lines of track to be crossed by a viaduct, the proportion thereof, and the approaches thereto to be constructed by each, or the cost to be borne by each, shall be determined by the council. After the completion thereof, any revenue derived therefrom by the crossing thereon of street railway lines shall constitute a special fund, and shall be applied in making repairs to such viaduct. One-half of all ordinary repairs to such viaduct or its approaches shall be paid out of such fund, or be borne by the city, and the remaining half by the railroad company; and if the track of more than one company is crossed, the costs of such repairs shall be borne by such companies in the same proportion as was the original cost of construction. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 774. Refusal to comply. If any railroad company neglects or refuses, for more than thirty days after such notice as may be prescribed by ordinance, to comply with the requirements of any ordinance passed under the provisions of this chapter, the city may construct or repair the viaduct or approaches, or any portion thereof, which such railroad company was required to construct or maintain, and recover the cost thereof from such company. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 775. Regulations as to electric wires. Cities and towns shall have the power to authorize and regulate telegraph, district telegraph, telephone, street railway and other electric wires, and the poles and other supports thereof, by general and uniform regulation, and to provide the manner in which, and places where, the same shall be placed upon, along or under the streets, roads, avenues, alleys and public places of such city or town, and may divide the city into districts for that purpose. [22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1.]

SEC. 776. Granting franchise—question submitted. No franchise shall be granted, renewed or extended by any city or town for the use of its streets, highways, avenues, alleys or public places, for any of the purposes named in the preceding section, unless a majority of the legal electors voting thereon vote in favor of the same at a general or special election. The council may order the question of granting, renewal or extension of any such franchise submitted to a vote at a general election, or at one specially called for that purpose; or the mayor shall submit said question to such vote upon the petition of twenty-five property owners of each ward in a city, or fifty property owners in any incorporated town. Notice of such election shall be given in two newspapers published in said city or town, if there are two, if not, then in one, once each week for at least four consecutive weeks. The clerk shall prepare the ballots, and the proposition shall be submitted as provided for in the chapter on elections. The party applying for the franchise, or for a renewal or extension thereof, shall pay all expenses incurred in holding the election.

SEC. 777. Temporary sidewalks. They shall have power to provide for the laying, relaying and repairing of temporary plank sidewalks upon any street, avenue, public ground, wharf, landing or market place within the limits of such city or town, at a cost not exceeding forty cents a linear foot, to prescribe a uniform width thereof, and to regulate the grade of the same, and to provide for the assessment of the cost thereof on the property in front of which the same shall be laid; and the city or town clerk shall certify the amount of such assessment to the county auditor, and it shall be collected the same as other taxes. [C. '73, § 468.]

SEC. 778. In front of agricultural property. Cities of the first class shall have power to provide by ordinance for the laying of temporary sidewalks on public streets and highways, in front of property abutting thereon and used for purposes of agriculture or horticulture, and not divided into lots, and to assess a special tax, not to exceed forty cents per linear foot, upon said property to pay for same. Such assessment and improvement shall not be made or ordered to be made until three-fourths of the members of the council shall, by vote assent to the making thereof.

SEC. 779. Permanent sidewalks—special tax. They shall have power to provide for the construction, reconstruction and repair of permanent sidewalks upon any street, highway, avenue, public ground, wharf, landing or market place within the limits of such city or town; but the construction of permanent sidewalks shall not be made until the bed of the same shall have been graded so that, when completed, such sidewalks will be at the established grade; and to assess the cost thereof on the lots or parcels of land in front of which the same shall be constructed. Towns shall have the power to make the street improvements provided for in chapter seven of this title, and pay for the same, or any part thereof, out of the general fund, or to assess, levy and collect special taxes for the cost, or any part thereof, against the abutting property, in the manner provided in the said chapter. But unless the owners of a majority of the linear feet of the property fronting on the improvements referred to in this section petition the council therefor, the same shall not be made unless three-fourths of all the members of the council shall by vote order the making thereof. [20 G. A., ch. 20, § 1; C. '73, § 466.]

The construction of a sidewalk is a public rather than a private improvent, and the property is not subject to a mechanic's lien for the expense thereof: Coenen v. Staub, 74–32.

That the construction a sidewalk is a street improvement, see notes to § 792.

As to liabilility of city for injury from defective walks, see notes to § 754.

SEC. 780. Repair of sidewalks. Cities and towns shall have power to repair sidewalks without notice to the property owner, and assess the expense thereof on the property in front of which such repairs are made, and the same shall be certified and collected as other taxes. [25 G. A., ch. 5; 22 G. A., ch. 15; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; C. '73, § 467.]

SEC. 781. Removal of snow and ice. They shall have power to remove snow, ice or accumulations from abutting property from the sidewalk, without notice to the property owner, if the same has remained upon the walk for the period of ten hours, and assess the expenses thereof on the property from the front of which such snow, ice or accumulations shall be removed; but the expense shall not exceed one and one-half cents per front foot of any lot, and the same shall be certified and collected as other special taxes. [25 G. A., ch. 5, § 1; 23 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1.]

As to liabity of city for injuries resulting from snow or ice in the streets, see notes to § 754.

SEC. 782. Grades and grading. They shall have power to establish grades and provide for the grading of any street, highway, avenue, alley, public ground, wharf, landing or market place, the expense thereof to be paid from the general or grading fund, or from the highway or poll taxes of such city or town, or partly from each such funds. [23 G. A., ch. 9; 22 G. A., ch. 13, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 1; 15 G. A., ch. 51, §§ 1, 5; C. '73, § 465.]

Establishing or changing grade: The grade of a street can only be established or changed by ordinance: Kepple v. Keokuk, 61-653; McManus v. Hornaday, 68 N. W., 812; Blanden v. Fort Dodge, 71 N. W., 411.

A grade cannot be established except by an ordinance, and the act of the city in otherwise adopting or establishing a grade, to the damage of a property owner, will render the city liable: Trustees v. Anamosa, 76–538.

As a rule the base line is to govern as to the grade, but a mistake may be shown in that as well as in other figures: Freeland v. Muscatine, 9–461.

The city is not liable in its corporate capacity for negligence of the engineer in establishing for a private person the grade of a street in accordance with the ordinances of the city: Waller v. Dubuque, 69–541.

A city may be rendered liable by the acts of its officers in making excavations below the established grade: Ibid; Freeland v. Muscatine, 9–461; Blanden v. Fort Dodge, 71 N. W. 411.

The city is not liable for damages resulting from the grading of its streets, if done in a careful and skillful manner: Ellis v. Iowa City, 29–229.

But the city is liable in such cases if the grading is done in an unskillful manner, as where the natural drainage is destroyed and no means is provided for the escape of surface water: Ibid; Cotes v. Davenport, 9–227; Templin v. Iowa City, 14–59; Ross v. Clinton, 46–606.

If the property owner erects buildings or otherwise improves his lots before the grade is established by the city council he cannot recover for any changes in the surface of the street made after such improvement pursuant to grade lines established by the council, provided such change of the surface be not negligently done: Kepple v. Keokuk, 61–653.

Where an ordinance provided that the grade line should be ascertained by or calculated for the middle of the street, held, that it was improper in improving streets to the grade established by the ordinance to take the outer line of the street as the grade line. In determining whether there has been a change of grade the height of the surface of the street must govern, and it is wholly immaterial whether a change by which the surface is made to vary from the grade be by reason of earth or wood or iron. So held with reference to railroad tracks laid upon the street: Given v. Des Moines, 70–637.

Where the natural surface of the street is above or below the established grade line, the abutting property owners cannot require the city to excavate or fill up the street to grade; and therefore held, that where the track of the railroad was on a level with the natural surface of the street the railroad company could not be required to lower such track to the established grade so long as the street itself was not lowered to such grade: Ibid.

As to change of grade and liability for damages caused thereby, see § 785 and notes.

Defective drainage: A city is not liable to a civil action for wholly failing to provide drainage or sewerage, nor for any defect or want of efficiency in the plan of sewerage or drainage adopted: Knostman & Petersen Co. v. Davenport, 68 N. W., 887.

But if by reason of a defective plan or insufficiency of the drain the sewer water is cast upon premises which are up to grade and would not have been injured but for the improvement made by the city, the owner may recover even though the injury is due to defect in the plan adopted with reasonable care: Ibid.

It is the duty of the city, in case of obstructing the natural flow of surface water, to provide waterways sufficient to carry off the water that may reasonably be expected to accumulate, as well as that from floods, freshets, etc.: Damour v. Lyons, 44–276.

An adjoining property owner cannot be held guilty of contributory negligence in building his walls in reference to the grade of the street, nor in storing goods in a cellar which is not subject to being flooded if the city does not allow the street to become obstructed: Ibid.

A municipal corporation in raising the grade of a street is under obligation to provide at least temporary means of escape for surface water to prevent its being backed upon adjoining property: Cotes v. Davenport, 9–227.

How long this escape must be kept open, and whether the closing of the means so provided is an act of negligence, are questions of fact for the jury: Ross v. Clinton, 46–606.

It is the duty of the city to provide waterways sufficient to carry off the water that might reasonably be expected to accumulate, judging by such floods as have previously occurred; and where it appeared that there had been two previous storms of equal severity, held, that the finding that the rainfall was not unusual was not contrary to the evidence: Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50–197.

A city is not ordinarily, if ever, liable for failure to provide culverts or gutters adequate to keep the surface water off from adjoining lots below grade, particularly if the injury would not have occurred had the lots been filled up to a level with the street: Freburg v. Davenport, 63–119.

As between a property owner and the city, the property owner is required, in order to protect himself from accumulation of surface water, to raise his lot to grade, and the same principle must obtain between adjoining owners: Phillips v. Waterhouse, 69–199.

A city is under no obligation to raise the lots to the line of grade of the streets, nor chargeable with the duty of keeping such lots free from overflow of water. The lot owner may escape annoyance or loss by such overflow by filling his lot to grade, or constructing sewers and sluices, but the city is not liable for the failure to drain such lots: Gilfeather v. Council Bluffs, 69–310.

The owner of property cannot recover for injury from overflow of water occasioned by the construction of sewers and drains by the city if the overflow would not have occurred had the premises been brought up to grade: Knostman & Petersen Co. v. Davenport, 68 N. W., 887.

A city is not liable for damages resulting from obstruction of overflow water as it is from the obstruction of water flowing in the natural channel: Morris v. Council Bluffs, 67–343.

The supreme court has never gone further in maintaining the property owner in the right to protection against surface water than to hold that the city must provide temporary means of escape therefor. But it has on the other hand held that an owner of a lot below grade must take notice of any exposure by bringing the street to grade, and must exercise reasonable diligence to protect himself by bringing his own lot to a corresponding grade: Ibid.

A city cannot be enjoined from constructing a tile drain opening into a street the water from which will flow upon the premises of an owner unless by that means a greater amount of water is thrown upon the premises of the party complaining, or it is thrown upon his premises in such way as to be more injurious than if discharged in the natural manner: Collins v. Keokuk, 91–293.

SEC. 783. Uniformity of grade. They shall have power to provide that the grading of all streets, highways, avenues, alleys, public grounds, wharfs, landings or market places of all additions to any city or town, shall be done in the same manner, and conform to existing streets, avenues, highways and alleys thereof. [22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1.]

SEC. 784. Embankments and fills. Cities of the first class shall have power to construct embankments where streets cross ravines, or where it is necessary that fills should be made for the purpose of retaining the street at grade to the full width of the remaining portions thereof. Such cities may purchase or condemn lands suitable for such purposes in the manner provided for condemning land by cities; but when the abutting property shall be brought to grade, such city shall reconvey the land so taken to the owner from whom the same was taken, or his grantees, upon the payment by him or them of the price originally paid by said city at the time said property was purchased or condemned. [25 G. A., ch. 4, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 785. Change of grade—damages. When any city or town shall have established the grade of any street or alley, and any person shall have made improvements on the same, or lots abutting thereon, according to the established grade thereof, and such grade shall thereafter be altered in such a manner as to damage, injure or diminish the value of such property so improved, said city or town shall pay to the owner of such property the amount of such damage or injury. [C. '73, § 469.]

Change of grade: The grade is established within the meaning of this section by the passing of an ordinance for that purpose, and if buildings are erected with reference to the grade thus established a changing of grade will render the city liable although the new grade conforms practically to the natural surface, which has not been made to conform to the grade first established; provided the permanent improvement of the street is made in accordance with the new grade; Ressegieu v. Sioux City, 63 N. W., 184.

If the street is not permanently improved in accordance with the new grade it may perhaps be said that damage to the property owner has not resulted from such subsequent change: Ibid.

It is not the passage of an ordinance changing the grade which gives right of action to a property owner for damages, but the actual making of the physical changes therein contemplated: Hempstead v. Des Moines, 63-36.

There can be no recovery of damages for change of grade where the city has not attempted to change the physical surface of the street, and it will not be liable for such change made without authority by a street railway: Stritesky v. Cedar Rapids, 67 N. W., 271.

Macadamizing the street, thereby raising the surface about one foot, held not to constitute a change in grade, as it would be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the street was left at the proper grade line to receive the material: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

Alteration in the surface of the street due to an improvement, but without any substantial change in the grade of the surface as originally fixed, will not entitle the property owner to damages for change of grade: Coates v. Dubuque, 68-550.

The change of grade of a street necessarily effects a change of grade of cross streets intersecting the same: Conklin v. Keokuk, 73-343.

Liability for damages: A city has authority to change the grade of its streets, and the fact that a property owner has built in accordance with the established grade, and thereafter the grade is changed to his injury, will not entitle him to damages except as the statute gives compensation or his property has been injured by negligence or unskillfulness in making the change: Russell v. Burlington, 30-262.

Aside from statutory provisions the city is not liable for necessary damages done to property in consequence of establishing or changing the grade of streets, etc.: Creal v. Keokuk, 4 G. Gr., 47; and a party claiming the benefit of the remedy provided by statute must pursue the method pointed out: Cole v. Muscatine, 14-296; Cotes v. Davenport, 9-227. Burlington v. Gilbert, 31-356.

The right to compensation only arises when improvements have been made subsequently to the establishment of the grade, but the damages for which compensation is to be made are those accruing to the entire real estate, and not alone those accruing to the improvements: Dalzell v. Davenport, 12-437.

The filling up and grading of residence lots in accordance with the established grade of the street and preparing the same to be built upon constitutes the making of improvements as contemplated by this section: Chase v. Sioux City, 86-603.

The city is made liable in such cases not only for injury to the property, but for damages resulting from the value of the property being diminished. Such diminution is not to be estimated alone on the improvements erected subsequently to the establishment of the grade, but upon the whole property: Hempstead v. Des Moines, 52-303.

The improvements referred to in the statute, the making of which entitles the property owner to damages in case of change of grade, are those made on lots situated on a street the grade of which is changed: Ibid.

Where improvements are made to correspond with the street as constructed under an existing grade, it will be presumed, in assessing damages resulting from a change in such grade, that the street was constructed in accordance with the grade as previously established, and that the change in grade necessitated a corresponding change in the surface of the street: Thompson v. Keokuk, 61-187.

Property is to be deemed improved according to the established grade of the street within the meaning of this section whenever it is so improved that it can be comfortably and conveniently used for the purpose for which it is devoted, while the street upon which it abuts is maintained at that grade. Such question is for the jury to decide, and it is error to instruct them that the question whether the improvements were made according to the grade depends entirely upon whether they were intentionally built above the line: Conklin v. Keokuk, 73–343.

When the council affirms the appraisement it determines that it will make the physical change necessary to conform the street to the grade established, and from that time the right of compensation constitutes a claim in favor of the owner of the property, and in case of his death his executor or administrator and not his heirs are the proper parties to prosecute and appear in the proceedings to collect such damages: Ibid.

Where the grade is changed and the street cut down from curb to curb, the right of action for the change of grade of the sidewalk as well as for the change in grade of the street accrues, and a subsequent and separate action for injuries resulting from the change of the grade of the sidewalk cannot be maintained: Ibid.

In estimating the damages opinions of witnesses may be received as to the value of the property before and after the change in grade: Dalzell v. Davenport, 12–437.

In determining the difference in value of property due to the change of grade the court should take into consideration the uses and purposes for which the building was erected and it is not error to allow the witness to testify as to the fair market value of the property before and after the change of grade for that purpose: Preston v. Cedar Rapids, 63 N. W., 577.

Where the effect of the change in grade is such as upon the whole to increase the value of the property, the owner cannot recover for incidental disadvantage or expense resulting therefrom: Meyer v. Burlington, 52–560.

In an action for damages for changing the grade the question to be determined by the jury is whether the alteration of the grade diminished the value of plaintiff's property. If the property is benefited more than it is injured by the change, there is no right to recover damages: McCash v. Burlington, 72–26.

Where, by filling the lot and raising the house to correspond to the grade as changed, the value of the property was made greater than before the change, held, that the cost of filling the lot and raising the house should be taken into account in determining the damage: Thompson v. Keokuk, 61–187.

In determining the damages by reason of change of grade, the rule is to consider the difference in the value of the property as it was just before the change and as it was just after, so far as such difference is due to the change. In such cases resulting benefits may be taken into account: Stewart v. Council Bluffs, 84–61.

Evidence as to the reasonable cost of putting the property in the same condition that it was before the change is admissible and proper to be considered; but the ultimate fact is the difference in the value caused by the change, and not the expense of putting the property into the same condition: Ibid.

The statute provides the steps to be taken by the city, when it proposes to change the grade, for the purpose of determining the damage to property owners, etc., and the city having failed to take such steps is liable to an action by a property owner for the damages, and he is not limited to injunction or mandamus to compel the city to pursue the statutory course: Noyes v. Mason City, 53–418.

As no appeal is provided for in the proceedings contemplated by statute for the assessment of damages and such assessment may be annulled by the city council, the lot owner is not confined to the remedy there provided, and may maintain an action for damages: Hempstead v. Des Moines, 52–303.

Where the city proceeds to alter the grade of a street without taking the proper steps for ascertaining damages, the property owner has no adequate remedy except to enjoin the city from making the alterations until it has the damages assessed, and pays or tenders the amount so ascertained. He may, however, if he sees fit, allow the city to make the alteration and then bring suit to recover the damages: Phillips v. Council Bluffs, 63–576.

A party who before the making of improvements waives, in writing, his claims for damages, cannot afterwards make a claim for damages when the city has acted in accordance with the plan to which he has thus given his assent: Burlington v. Gilbert, 31–356.

A property owner who petitions for the improvement of a street must be presumed to intend that such improvement shall be made in accordance with the grade as then established and is estopped from afterwards recovering damages against the city on account of the adoption of such grade as different from the grade existing at the time his property was improved: Preston v. Cedar Rapids, 63 N. W., 577.

SEC. 786. Appraisers. The amount of such damage or injury shall be determined and assessed by three disinterested freeholders, one of whom shall be selected by the mayor, one by the owner of the property, and one by the two so appointed; or, in case of their disagreement, by the council. If the owner fails to select an appraiser within ten days from the time of receiving notice to select same, then the council shall select all such appraisers. [C. '73, § 469.]

SEC. 787. Notice. The appraisers shall take an oath to faithfully and impartially discharge their duties. They shall give ten days' notice in writing to the owner of the property affected of the time and place of their meeting to view the premises and make their assessment, if such owner resides in the county; which notice shall be served in the same manner as original notices in the district court. If the owner resides outside of the county, or his residence is unknown, notice shall be given by publication once a week for three weeks in some newspaper published in the city or town where the property is located. [C. '73, § 469.]

SEC. 788. Assessment. The appraisers shall view the premises, and, in their discretion, receive evidence, and may adjourn from day to day. When the appraisement is completed, the appraisers shall sign and return the same to the council, which shall be done within thirty days from the date of their selection. [C. '73, § 469.]

SEC. 789. Confirmation—payment. The council may, in its discretion, confirm or annul the appraisement, and, if annulled, all proceedings shall be void and of no effect; but, if confirmed, an order of confirmation shall be entered by the clerk in the record of the proceedings of the council. No alteration of grade shall be made until the damages assessed shall have been paid or tendered to the owner of the property so injured or damaged. [C. '73, § 469.]

SEC. 790. Appeal—costs. Any person interested may appeal from the order of confirmation to the district court of the county in which such property is located, by giving written notice thereof to the mayor, within twenty days after the order of confirmation is entered. On the trial of the appeal, all questions involved in the proceedings, including the amount of damages, shall be open to investigation, and the burden of proof shall, in all cases, be upon the city or town to show that the proceedings are in accord with the provisions of this chapter. The cost of such proceedings, incurred prior to the order of confirmation or annulment of the appraisement, shall in all cases be paid by the city or town. If the person appealing recovers more damages than were awarded by the appraisers, he shall recover the costs of the appeal; if he recovers the same or less than the award, the costs of the appeal shall be taxed to him. [C. '73, § 469.]

The notice of appeal must be given to the mayor. If sufficient in form and given to the person who holds the office of mayor, it is immaterial whether directed to the mayor in his official capacity, or to the city or to the individual: Conklin v. Keokuk, 73-343.

On the trial of the appeal the city cannot challenge a taxpayer as juror: Ibid.

SEC. 791. Sewers. They may provide for or authorize the construction, reconstruction and repair of sewers, and regulate their use, and pay therefor out of the general or sewer fund. [22 G. A., ch. 9; 21 G. A., ch. 116; C. '73, § 465.]

In general as to sewers, see next chapter.

CHAPTER 7.

OF STREET IMPROVEMENTS, SEWERS AND SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS.

SECTION 792. Assessing cost of improvements. Cities shall have power to improve any street, highway, avenue or alley by grading, parking, curbing, paving, graveling, macadamizing and guttering the same or any part thereof, and to provide for the making and reconstruction of usch street improvements, and to assess the costs on abutting property as provided in this chapter; but the construction of permanent parking, curbing, paving, graveling, macadamizing or guttering shall not be done until after the bed therefor shall have been graded, so that such improvement, when fully completed, will bring the street, highway, avenue or alley up to the established grade: provided that only so much of the cost of the removal of the earth and other material as lies between the sub-grade and the established grade shall be assessed to abutting property. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 20; 23 G. A. ch. 9, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 13, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 1; C. '73, §§ 466, 527; R., § 1095.]

What improvements may be made: "Macadamizing" includes "trimming" and "guttering:" McNamara v. Estes, 22-246.

"To pave" may include all things necessary to make a level and convenient surface for horses, carriages and foot passengers of any convenient or practicable material: Buell v. Ball, 20-282, 290.

The authority to "pave," given in a special charter, held to include the power to macadamize and gutter: Warren v. Henley, 31-31.

A sidewalk is a part of the street and may be paved with brick or stone under the same authority which warrants the improvement of the rest of the street: Ibid.

The laying of a plank sidewalk is within the authority to cause streets to be paved or macadamized: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12-112. As to sidewalks, see § 777-779; also, notes to § 754.

Where an improvement consisted in an entire raising and changing of the surface of the street, held, that it was an improvement for which a special tax might be levied under this section, and not "repairing" as contemplated by the preceding section, to be paid for out of the general funds: Koons v. Lucas, 52-177.

Where the improvement, such as paving or macadamizing becomes worn out, it may be renewed at the expense of the owners of abutting property: Coates v. Dubuque, 68-550.

The question whether an improvement is demanded by the public wants or necessities is to be determined by the city council, and their determination is conclusive except for want of authority or fraud or oppression: Ibid.

The statute confers no authority to assess abutting property for grading or filling a street: Bucroft v. Council Bluffs, 63-646; Scofield v. Council Bluffs, 68-695.

Such grading or filling as may be properly part of the work of paving may be charged upon abutting lots as a portion of the expense of paving, but any considerable filling or substantial change of the grade does not, in a proper sense, constitute a part of the work of paving: Ibid. As to grading, see § 782 and notes.

Where a city constructed a sewer through a street, rendering it necessary to tear up the macadamizing previously done and macadamize again, held, such expense was not one for which abutting property could be specially assessed, but that it was incident to the construction of the sewer, and might, as such, be paid out of the general fund: Burlington v. Palmer, 67-681.

The city may grade and macadamize less than the whole width of the street where it is not shown to be for the injury or oppression of owners of property adjacent thereto: Morrison v. Hershire, 32-271, 276. But the cost of such paving must be divided between the property owners on the opposite sides of the street even though the portion paved is on one side of the center: Muscatine v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 88-291.

Where the city is invested with power to make improvements the necessity for making such improvements is a matter for the exclusive determination of the city and the courts will not interfere with its action, in the absence of fraud or oppression: Dewey v. Des Moines, 70 N. W., 605.

The necessity for such improvements is not to be measured solely by the wants and necessities of the abutting lot owners: Ibid.

The city has no right to tax abutting property for the cost of street improvements which are not to be constructed in accordance with the established grade. Costs of temporary improvements are not to be so taxed: McManus v. Hornaday, 68 N. W., 812.

Taxing power: Making the cost of such improvements a charge upon abutting property is an exercise of the power of taxation and not of the right of eminent domain, and such a provision is not unconstitutional as being unequal, applying to particular individuals or classes, and not uniform: Warren v. Henley, 31-31.

The power to make special assessments is distinct from the power of general taxation; but both may be granted by the legislature: Fairfield v. Ratcliff, 20-396.

All expenses of street improvements may be, in accordance with the law, assessed upon abutting property without regard to the benefits to be conferred upon such property: Gatch v. Des Moines, 63-718.

When it is sought to charge a property owner for the cost of works of public improvement from which he acquires but little benefit except such as is shared by the public generally, the power must be exercised strictly in the manner prescribed by law: Coggeshall v. Des Moines, 78-235.

The powers given a city or town to make special assessments against abutting property for street improvements are usually strictly construed: Bucroft v. Council Bluffs, 63-646.

While such power must be clearly given, it will be enforced when it is within the reasonable construction of the law: McNamara v. Estes, 22-246.

The city council may provide the mode under which the taxes contemplated in this and the following section shall be assessed and authorize the city auditor to make such assessment: Burlington v. Quick, 47-222.

The word "lot," in prior provisions held to mean any portion, piece or division of land: Buell v. Ball, 20-282.

Who responsible for: An owner of a corner lot may be required to pay for the cost of macadamizing one-fourth of the square occupied by the intersection of the streets abutting his property: Wolfe v. Keokuk, 48-129.

Under prior provisions, held, that a special tax for the improvement of a street could not be taxed to a street railway company occupying a portion of such street: Koons v. Lucas, 52–117; nor to a railway company having an easement in the street: Muscatine v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 88–291; but see now § 833.

Special assessments, under this section, held to be covered by the provisions of a lease requiring the tenant to pay all taxes assessed upon the property during such lease: Cassady v. Hammer, 62–359.

The assessment is to be made upon owners of property abutting upon the part of the street which is improved: Kendig v. Knight, 60–29.

The fact that the city issues warrants in payment of expenses of improvements on the street, greater in amount than the actual cost of the improvements, for the purpose of making up a deficiency caused by the warrants being below par, will not be a ground of objection to the assessment on the part of an adjoining property owner whose property is assessed for such improvements: Warren v. Henly, 31–31.

The fact that an improvement, made on two streets in pursuance of two different resolutions, is made the basis of one assessment on both streets does not render the tax illegal: Kendig v. Knight, 60–29.

Assessment of sidewalk taxes should be against lots separately and not en masse. Royce v. Aplington, 90–352.

The fact that in assessing the costs of improvements upon communicating streets the entire frontage of the corner lot upon both streets is made the basis of assessment does not amount to double assessment of such property: Morrison v. Hershire, 32–271.

Where a corner lot faced upon two streets, and the tenant thereof was under obligation to keep up sidewalks in front of the lot, etc, held, that he was liable for taxes assessed for the construction of sidewalks on each of the streets: Des Moines v. Dorr, 31–89.

An owner of a corner lot may be required to pay for the cost of macadamizing one-fourth of the square occupied by the intersection of the streets on which his property abuts: Wolf v. Keokuk, 48–129.

The assessment is to be made upon owners of property abutting upon the part of the street which is improved: Kendig v. Knight, 60–29.

Estoppel: Where the owner of abutting property knows that it is the intention to assess the cost of improvements of the adjoining street upon such property, and makes no objection, he will be estopped from questioning the regularity of the assessment: Robinson v. Burlington, 50–240. And see Patterson v. Baumer, 43–477.

But where a land owner protests against the work being done, and it is done notwithstanding his remonstrance, he is not estopped from contesting the regularity of the assessment, although he has not taken steps to enjoin the prosecution of the work: Tallant v. Burlington, 39–543.

A property owner is not estopped from objecting to the validity of an assessment on the ground that the method of making such assessment has not been complied with, by standing by and allowing the improvement to be made without objection, if he might have supposed that the improvement was to be paid for out of the general fund: Hager v. Burlington, 42–661.

Where proceedings for the levy of a special assessment for the improvement of a street are void for want of jurisdiction from the beginning, a property owner is not estopped to deny the validity of the assessment on the ground that he has made no objection to the proceeding while the improvement was in progress: Starr v. Burlington, 45–87.

Exemption from special assessment: School property is not exempt from liability for taxation by special assessment for improvement of streets, building of sidewalks, etc. Though, perhaps, such tax cannot be enforced by a sale of the property, it may be exacted in some other manner, probably by an action: Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55–150.

But the city has no authority to assess expenses of constructing a sewer upon abutting property belonging to the state. It has such powers only with reference to taxing property for improvements as are conferred upon it by statute, and the power of subjecting the property of the state to the payment of such an assessment is not contemplated by statutory provisions: Polk County Savings Bank v. State, 69–24.

It is apparent from the provisions of this section that a special assessment for street improvements is not a tax for city purposes, and agricultural land within the city limits is liable therefor, although by statute it may be exempted from city taxation: Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co., 66 N. W., 176.

SEC. 793. How ordered. The construction or reconstruction of such improvement shall not be ordered made until three-fourths of all the members of the council shall by vote assent thereto, unless the same be petitioned for by the owners of the majority of the linear front feet of the property abutting thereon; but a majority of the council may provide for repairing said improvements. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 19; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 1; C. '73, §§ 466, 494; R., § 1135.]

Improvements may be ordered either when the proper petition is presented, or by three-fourths vote without such petition: Tallant v. Burlington, 39–543.

In ordering an improvement in the absence of a petition therefor, the council may act upon information furnished by the report of a committee as well as upon their own knowledge in determining the necessity of the improvement: Brewster v. Davenport, 51–427.

Under the provisions of a special charter somewhat similar to this section, held, that a party, who with others signed and presented to the council a petition praying that certain improvements should be made, could not object to the proceedings thereunder on the ground that a sufficient number of property owners had not signed such petition. The proceedings would be binding as to him, although they might not be as to others who had not signed: Burlington v. Gilbert, 31-356.

Under this section improvements may be ordered by the city council either when the petition is presented, signed by the requisite number of property owners, or upon a three-fourths vote of the council without such petition: Tullant v. Burlington, 39-543.

In ordering an improvement in the absence of a petition therefor, the council may act upon information furnished by the report of a committee as well as upon their own knowledge in determining the necessity of the improvement: Brewster v. Davenport, 51-427.

A party who signs and joins in presenting to the council a petition praying for a certain improvement cannot afterwards object to the proceedings upon such petition on the ground that a sufficient number of property owners did not sign it. The proceedings would be binding as to him although they might not be as to others not signing: Burlington v. Gilbert, 31-356.

A property owner who petitions for the improvement of the street must be assumed to intend that the improvement shall be according to the grade as then established, and is estopped from recovering damages to his property by reason of the establishment of such grade although it varies from the grade established at the time his property was improved. Preston v. Cedar Rapids, 63 N. W., 577.

SEC. 794. Sewers. They shall have power to provide for the making, reconstruction and repair of sewers and catch basins in any street, highway, avenue, alley, public ground or market place within the limits of said city, and may by ordinance divide such city into such sewer districts as the council may determine, numbering them consecutively, or the entire city may be included in one district; but such construction or reconstruction shall not be ordered made until three-fourths of all the members of the council shall by vote assent thereto, unless the same shall be petitioned for by the owners of a majority of the linear front feet of the property abutting on such sewer, and a majority of the owners of adjacent property benefited thereby and liable to assessment therefor; but a majority of the council may provide for their repair. Any city in which any state building may be situated shall permit the officers in charge thereof, or of their construction, to construct sewers therefor through or under any of the streets, highways, avenues, alleys or public places of said city, or to connect the same with the city sewer system, under the same regulations that are provided for private property owners. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 19; 24 G. A., ch. 11; 23 G. A., ch. 10; 22 G. A., ch 8, §§ 1, 2; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 34; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 20; 18 G. A., ch. 55, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 54, § 1; C. '73, § 465.]

Under prior provisions, held, that the city might create one sewerage district, comprising all its territory; that an ordinance having been duly passed providing for the construction of sewers, the city might, by resolution, exercise the authority, and apply it to any particular sewer; and that a call of yeas and nays was not essential on passage of such resolution: Grimmell v. Des Moines, 57-144.

Sewerage in a populous city is not merely a private matter for the convenience of a few persons, but is a matter of public concern affecting the health and lives of the inhabitants, and a city or town may, in pursuance of law, assess the expense of the construction of a sewer upon abutting property, without regard to the benefits conferred upon such property: Gatch v. Des Moines, 63-718.

The construction of one sewer leading through two or more connecting streets may be ordered in one proceeding, and the assessment made upon abutting property for the whole work: Grimmell v. Des Moines, 57-144.

Where a city had, prior to the passage of a statute authorizing special assessments on adjacent property, levied a tax for, and commenced the construction of, a sewer, which constituted a main artery in the system of sewerage of the city, held, that it could not change the mode of paying for further improvements, and require the adjacent property to pay the whole expense thereafter to be incurred; and further, held, that the legislature could not, by a legalizing act, render valid such improper action of the city: Independent School Dist. v. Burlington, 60-500.

SEC. 795. Condemning land for. They shall have power, in order to carry off flowing water, or for other reasons, to follow ravines, and lay a main or lateral sewer to pass through private property, and condemn the same for the location thereof, in the manner provided for the condemnation of land for city purposes, the costs of which shall constitute a part of the expenses of the sewer, and be assessed accordingly. ' [24 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 2.]

SEC. 796. Cross sewers. They shall have power to provide, by ordinance or resolution, terms and conditions on which cross sewers may be attached to or connected with main sewers; and, in cases where sewers have been constructed in whole or in part by special assessment, may pay to the parties who have been so assessed the money, or a part thereof, charged and collected for the privilege of attaching such cross sewers. [17 G. A., ch. 162, § 6.]

SEC. 797. Changing water courses. They shall have power to deepen, widen, straighten, wall, fill, cover, alter or change the channel of any water course or part thereof, flowing through the limits of such city; to construct artificial channels, or covered drains, sufficient to carry the water theretofore flowing in such water course, and divert it from the natural channel, and conduct the same through such artificial channel or covered drain, and fill the old channel. [23 G. A., ch. 6, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 3.]

SEC. 798. Plans. When the council determines, by resolution or otherwise, to exercise the powers named in the preceding section, it shall direct the city engineer, if there is one, and if not one employed by it, to make the proper plans and specifications for doing the work, and prepare an estimate of the cost thereof. [23 G. A., ch. 6, § 2.]

SEC. 799. Question submitted. If the council on receiving the plans, specifications, and estimate of the expenses to be incurred, referred to in the last preceding section, shall still be of the opinion that the work should be done as proposed, it shall call a special election to finally determine the same question, and also the question of levying a special tax, in addition to all other taxes now provided for by law, for that purpose. If the council shall determine that the estimated cost is greater than should be levied and collected in a single year, it may fix the yearly proportion, and determine in what years the same shall be levied and collected, and provide by ordinance or resolution the time of submitting the question to a vote. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 800. Plat. If a majority of the votes cast shall be in favor of the proposition, the council shall order the engineer to make a survey and plat of the stream or portion thereof proposed to be widened, deepened, straightened, walled, filled, altered, changed or diverted. The plat shall show its condition, position, location, boundaries and course at the time of the platting of the town site, as nearly as possible; its present condition, location and course; any changes that have occurred in its natural course since the platting of the town site; all the lots or tracts of land, by their description, abutting on said original or present channels, and the names of all the owners thereof; which plat and notes of the survey the engineer shall file in the office of the clerk, retaining a duplicate in his office. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 801. Damages assessed. After the plat and notes of the survey are made and filed, the council shall appoint five commissioners, resident freeholders of the city, not interested in any property abutting on said stream, who shall be sworn faithfully and impartially to perform the duties that may be required of them, either by this chapter or any ordinance passed in pursuance hereof, who shall determine what lot, lots or lands abutting on said stream will be benefited or damaged by doing the work, the amount of benefit or damages which will accrue to or be sustained by each and every lot, lots or lands, and the owners thereof, and make report in writing of their findings. In determining any question as to whether benefits accrue to or damages are sustained by such lot, lots or lands, or the owners thereof, the said commissioners shall consider the amount of land reclaimed or lost, the expense that will be incurred by the owners thereof in doing said work, and the advantages accruing from the removal of the easement of said water course, and any other matter that they may think proper to be considered for such purpose, but no damages shall be awarded for the cost of filling said channel. The commissioners shall give notice of the time and place of their meetings to determine what lot, lots and lands are benefited or damaged, by publication thereof at least five days successively prior thereto, in some newspaper of general circulation in said city; and, for the purpose of enabling them to determine the fact of benefit or damage, may take any competent evidence which the owner of any property affected may see fit to offer. The findings of the commissioners shall be returned to the council, and it may approve, reject or modify the same. Notice of the hearing before the council, upon the report so made, shall be given by publication in a newspaper of general circulation in the city for five successive days, which last publication shall be ten days before such hearing, and if, after this hearing, it shall conclude to reject the report, it shall resubmit the matter to other commissioners, who shall proceed as in the first instance. If the council shall approve or modify this second finding, it shall proceed to assess the amount of benefits so found against said abutting lot, lots or lands, and the channel to be filled or reclaimed. Any person aggrieved by the action of the council in making said assessment may appeal therefrom to the district court of the county in which it is made, within twenty days from the date of the assessment, and also have the right to review the action of the council in said court in the manner now provided by law. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 802. Filling channel—assessment of cost. If it is proposed to divert a stream or part thereof from its course and conduct it through a new channel, or through a covered drain, the council shall have power to order the old channel filled up, and if any part is not so filled by the owner or owners within such time as may be prescribed by ordinance or resolution, the council may contract for filling the same or any part thereof, and shall have power to assess the cost thereof against the property abutting thereon, including that reclaimed therefrom, in proportion to the number of cubic yards of fill required and made upon, against and in front of each of said lots or tracts, and shall provide, by ordinance or resolution, the manner of ascertainment of said cost, and of adopting and making said assessments; notice to be given to said owners of the time and place of making the same; and it may also provide by ordinance or resolution when said special assessments for benefits and for the expense of filling the old channel shall become due and payable, whether in one payment or in installments, the number of installments, the rate of interest, not exceeding six per cent. per annum, the deferred payments shall draw, and the time when said special installments shall mature. Such assessments shall become a lien and be collected as in case of special assessments for sewers. [Same, §§ 6, 7.]

SEC. 803. Continuing streets. Streets and alleys intersecting the stream or old channel shall be projected across it so as to make a continuous street or alley, and if such street or alley is shown upon the recorded plat as terminating on one side of such stream or old channel, the plat shall be corrected so as to show a continuous street or alley, and the expenses of filling all such streets and alleys shall be paid by the city. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 804. Condemning land for. Said cities may also condemn and appropriate so much private property as shall be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this chapter relating to change of water courses, in the manner provided for condemning land for city purposes. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 805. Construction. After the report of the commissioners to the council and final action thereon by it, the council shall have authority to order the work of constructing a new channel or covered way or part thereof, as hereinbefore provided, and may authorize different portions of said work to be done in different years successively. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 806. Special tax. The cost of doing any work authorized, or any part thereof, except so much of the cost of filling an old channel as is to be assessed against abutting property, the compensation for private property condemned and appropriated for such uses, and the damages sustained on account of such change in the channel of a stream, shall be paid by a special tax, by the collection of special assessments for benefits to lots and lands abutting upon the old water course, by other special assessments, if any, which may be made against the property adjacent to the streets and alleys on which the new channel or covered way is located and benefited thereby, and by appropriations from the general funds of the city available for that purpose; which special tax herein authorized the council shall have power to levy, payable yearly and in proportion as the proposed work is done. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 807. Assessment to abutting property. If a covered drain or new channel shall be constructed along any street or alley, and used by the city as a sanitary or storm water way, the council shall have power to assess upon the lots or lands adjacent to the line of such covered drain or new channel, and benefited thereby, a portion of the cost thereof, not exceeding the sum of two dollars per linear foot of such drain or channel; which assessment shall be made and levied in the manner provided by law relating to the cost of sewers. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 808. Bonds. They may issue bonds in anticipation of such special tax, in the manner authorized with reference to sewer and city improvement funds, not in excess, however, of the tax which shall have been levied. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 809. Gas and water connections. They shall have power to require the connections from gas, water and steam heating pipes, sewer and underground electric connections, to the curb line of adjacent property, to be made before the permanent improvement of the street, highway, avenue, alley, public ground or place whereon they are located; and, where such improvements have already been made, to regulate the making of such connections, and fix the charges therefor, and make all needful rules and regulations in relation to such connections and the use thereof. In case the owners of property on such streets shall fail to make such connections in the manner and within the time fixed by the council, it may cause the same to be made, and assess against the property in front of which they are made the cost and expense thereof. [22 G. A., ch. 9; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 116; 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 8; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 3.]

SEC. 810. Street improvements and sewers—preliminary notice. When the council of any such city shall deem it advisable or necessary to make or reconstruct any street improvement or sewer authorized in this chapter, it shall, in a proposed resolution, declare such necessity or advisability, stating the kind of material proposed to be used and method of construction, whether abutting property will be assessed, and, in case of sewers, the kind and size, and what adjacent property is proposed to be assessed therefor, and in both cases designate the location and terminal points thereof, and cause twenty days' notice of the time when said resolution will be considered by it for passage to be given by four publications in some newspaper of general circulation published in the city, the last of which shall be not less than two nor more than four weeks prior to the time fixed for its consideration, at which time the owners of the property subject to assessment for the same may appear and make objection to the contemplated improvement or sewer and the passage of said proposed resolution, at which hearing the same may be amended and passed, or passed as proposed. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 20; 22 G. A., ch. 6, §§ 2, 3; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 21.]

Under prior provisions, held, that there was implied a determination of the council, in advance of the publication of notice, of the kind of material to be used in the proposed work; and that without such determination the requirement with reference to notice could not be complied with. Therefore, held, that where the proposition and notice were for bids for various forms of pavement, the question as to the kind to be adopted to be settled in the acceptance of the bids, the contract was not valid, and the abutting owners could not be required to pay certificates issued against their property: Coggeshall v. Des Moines, 78-235.

The fact that the property owner makes no objection until after a portion of the work has been done and expenses incident thereto incurred does not constitute an estoppel so as to prevent such property owner from contesting the validity of the assessment: Ibid.

SEC. 811. Resolution. Upon compliance with the preceding section, the council may, by ordinance or resolution, order the making or reconstruction of such street improvement or sewer, but the vote shall be by yeas and nays, and entered of record, and the record shall show whether the improvement was petitioned for or made on the motion of the council. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 19.]

Where the resolution of the council ordering a sewer adopts the plat of the engineer by reference thereto, and thus furnishes a means of obtaining precise knowledge of the tax assessed to each tract and individual and the total cost of the sewer, it is sufficiently definite: Duttoe v. Davenport, 74-66.

SEC. 812. Contract. When the making or reconstruction of any such street improvement or sewer is ordered, the council, or board of public works where such board exists, shall contract for furnishing labor and material and for the making or reconstruction, either of the entire work in one contract, or for parts thereof in separate and specified sections; but no work shall be done under any such contract until a certified copy thereof shall have been filed in the office of the clerk. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 2, 20; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 3; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 2; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 2; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 3; 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 2.]

SEC. 813. Bids. All contracts for the making or reconstruction of street improvements and sewers shall be let in the name of the city, to the lowest bidder, by sealed proposals, upon giving notice for at least ten days by two publications in a newspaper published in said city, which notice shall state as nearly as practicable the extent of the work and the kind of materials for which bids will be received, when the work shall be done, the terms of payment fixed, and the time the proposals shall be acted upon; but all bids may be rejected and new bids ordered. All bids must be accompanied, in a separate envelope, with a certified check payable to the order of the treasurer, in a sum to be named in the notice for bids, as security that the bidder will enter into a contract for the doing of the work, and will give the bond required in the following section. All such checks, where the bid has not been accepted, shall be returned to the respective bidders. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 3; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 2; 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 2.]

As to prior provisions with reference to proposals for bids, see Dewey v. Des Moines, 70 N. W., 605.

SEC 814. Contractor's bond to repair. All contracts for the making or reconstruction of street improvements or sewers shall contain a provision obligating the contractor and his bondsmen to keep such improvement or sewer in good repair for not exceeding one year after the acceptance of the same by the city, and the bond shall be so conditioned.

SEC. 815. Bond to perform. Each contractor for street improvements and sewers shall give bonds to the city, with sureties to be approved by the council, or board of public works where such board exists, for the faithful performance of the contract, and suit on such bond may be brought in the county in which the council may hold its sessions. [25 G. A., ch 7, § 4; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 4; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 2; 17 G. A , ch. 162, § 2.]

SEC. 816. Lien of tax. After a contract has been made by any city for the making or reconstruction of any street improvement or sewer, the clerk shall file with the auditor of the county, or each of the counties, in which said city is situated, a written or printed copy of the notice of the resolution provided for, with a true copy of the proof of publication thereof, together with a certificate of the clerk that an ordinance or resolution has been adopted directing the making or reconstruction of said street improvement or sewer. Thereupon all special taxes for the cost thereof, or any part of said cost, which are to be assessed and levied against real property, or any railway or street railway, together with all interest and penalties on all of said assessments, shall become and remain a lien on such property from the date of the filing of said papers with the county auditor until paid, and shall have precedence over all other liens except ordinary taxes, which shall not be divested by any judicial sale; but such lien for street improvements in case of abutting property shall not cover to exceed one hundred and fifty feet in depth from the abutting line. Any such assessment against a railway or street railway shall be a first and paramount lien upon the track thereof within the limits of the city. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 12; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 3; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9; 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 3.]

As to lien of the special tax under prior provisions see Kendig v. Knight, 60-29; Eagle Mfg. Co. v. Davenport, 70 N. W., 707.

SEC. 817. Cost at intersections. The cost of any street improvement or sewer at the intersection of streets, highways, avenues and alleys, or any part of it, and one-half of the cost of the same at spaces opposite streets, highways, avenues and alleys intersecting but not crossing, and at spaces opposite property owned by the city or the United States, or any part thereof, may be paid, in case of sewers, from the city sewer fund or the district sewer fund of such sewer district, or the general revenue of said city, or as provided in the second following section; and, in case of street improvements, from the city improvement fund, except that part to be constructed by, paid for by, or assessed to railways and street railways; but the cost in whole or in part of such street improvement at the places designated in this section, excluding cost of that part embraced within the foregoing exception, may be assessed against the property abutting or fronting upon that portion of the street, highway, avenue or alley so improved in proportion to the linear front feet fronting or abutting upon such improvement. [26 G. A., ch. 9; 25 G. A., ch. 7, § 10; 25 G. A., ch. 8; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 12, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 10; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 3, 5; 19 G. A., ch. 38, § 1.]

SEC. 818. Cost of improvements—how paid. The cost of opening, widening, extending and grading any street, highway, avenue, alley, public ground or market place shall be paid in whole or in part from the grading fund. The cost of making or reconstructing any street improvement authorized in this chapter, except that embraced within the preceding section, and that hereinafter provided to be paid by and assessed to railways or street railways, shall be assessed as a special tax against the property abutting thereon, in proportion to the number of linear front feet of each parcel so abutting. [23 G. A., ch. 5, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 5; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 10; C. '73, § 466.]

SEC. 819. Cost of sewers. The cost, or any part thereof, of making or reconstructing sewers, including that provided for in the second preceding section, may be paid from the district sewer fund of the sewer district in which the same is situated, or from the city sewer fund, or from the general revenue, and the portion thereof not so paid, and not in excess of three dollars per linear foot of sewer, shall be assessed against the property abutting on such sewer in proportion to the number of linear front feet of each parcel thereof, and upon adjacent property in proportion to the benefit thereto; but in estimating the benefits to result therefrom to adjacent property, no account shall be taken of improvements, and each lot or parcel of land shall be considered as wholly unimproved. The city may combine any or all of said methods of assessment. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 21; 22 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 34; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 1.]

SEC. 820. Assessment of cost. When the making or reconstruction of any street improvement or sewer shall have been completed, or such part thereof shall have been completed as, under the contract, is to be paid for when done, the council, or board of public works where such board exists, shall ascertain the cost thereof, including the cost of the estimates, notices, inspection, and preparing the assessment and plat, and shall also ascertain what portion of such cost shall be, by law and the ordinance or resolution of the council under which such street improvement was made or sewer constructed, assessable upon abutting property; and, in case of sewers, also upon adjacent property, and what portion shall be assessed upon such abutting property, and in case of sewers, upon such abutting and adjacent property, for intersections and spaces opposite property owned by the city or the United States; and the council shall then assess such portions upon and against such property as provided by law. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 10, 21; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 4; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 10; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3.]

The statute having fixed the mode of procedure that mode must be followed and an assessment made not in pursuance of the ordinance on the subject but independently of it will be invalid: Zelie v. Webster City, 62 N. W., 796.

The improvement of one street may be under several contracts or of several streets under one contract and it is not necessary that the assessment be at the same rate per linear foot throughout: Gilcrest v. Macartney, 66 N. W., 103.

The fact that an improvement is made on two streets in pursuance of two different resolutions, but that in making the assessment the entire improvement on both streets is taken into consideration, does not render the tax illegal: Kendig v. Knight, 60–29.

SEC. 821. Plat and schedule. In assessing that part of the cost of the making or reconstruction of any street improvement or sewer, or completed part thereof, which is assessable against the lots or parcels of ground abutting thereon, or, in case of sewers, adjacent thereto, the council, or board of public works where such board exists, shall cause to be prepared a plat of the streets, avenues, highways, alleys, or the part thereof on which the same shall have been made or reconstructed, showing the separate lots or parcels of ground, or specified portion thereof, subject to assessment for such improvement, the names of the owners thereof as far as practicable, and the amount to be assessed against each lot or parcel of ground, and against any railway or street railway, and shall file said plat and schedule in the office of the clerk, which shall be subject to public inspection. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 20; 22 G. A., ch. 5, §§ 5, 6; 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 8; 21 G. A., ch. 168, §§ 10, 11; 20 G. A , ch. 20, § 6.]

SEC. 822. Estimates—city engineer. The city engineer, or other person employed by the council to discharge the duties of such office, shall, under its direction, or that of the board of public works where such board exists, make or assist in making all estimates for street improvements and sewers, furnish the necessary grades and lines, see that the work conforms thereto and is in accordance with the ordinance or resolution of the council, and make or assist in making each required assessment, plat and schedule. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 5; 23 G. A., ch. 14, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 5, §§ 3, 5; 22 G. A., ch. 6, §§ 3, 8; 21 G. A., ch. 168, §§ 5, 10.]

SEC. 823. Notice of assessment. After filing the plat and schedule, the council shall give at least ten days' notice by two publications in each of two newspapers published in the city, if there be that number, otherwise in one, and by handbills posted in conspicuous places along the line of such street improvement or sewer, that said plat and schedule are on file in the office of the clerk, and that within twenty days after the first publication all objections thereto, or to the prior proceedings, on account of errors, irregularities or inequalities, must be made in writing and filed with the clerk; and the council, having heard such objections and made the necessary corrections, shall then make the special assessments as shown in said plat and schedule, as corrected and approved. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 11, 18; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 5; 21 G. A., ch. 168, §§ 11, 19.]

Notice by publication is sufficient to warrant personal judgment against the property owner for the expense of filling up a lot according to a proper resolution: Independence v. Purdy, 46-202.

Although the statute does not in terms require notice of an assessment for special improvements to be given to the property owner, yet such notice is an indispensable requisite to the exercise of the taxing power, and an ordinance providing for such assessment without such notice and opportunity to the party assessed to appear and object to the assessment on his property is void: Gatch v. Des Moines, 63-718.

At least this is true where the statute or ordinance provides for an assessment according to the benefits, so that in making the assessment an opinion is to be formed and discretion exercised by the assessors: Trustees of Griswold College v. Davenport, 65-633.

So where an ordinance providing for the filling of lots, to prevent the standing of stagnant water thereon, made no provision for notice to the owner of the property, and no notice of the proceeding was in fact served upon him so as to give him opportunity to show that no such burdensome and extraordinary expenditure as contemplated by the resolution adopted under such ordinance was necessary for the abatement of the nuisance, held, that the proceedings were void: Bush v. Dubuque, 69-233.

It is immaterial, in such a case, that the lot owner has notice and an opportunity to be heard before the tax is assessed upon his lots. He has a right to have the council enjoined from involving the city in an unauthorized and illegal contract to fill his lots to a greater height than necessary, and to expend more money than they have a right to collect from him for such improvement: Ibid.

If the ordinance does not provide for giving to the property owner affected by the improvement notice of the assessment to which his property is subjected the proceeding thereunder will be void: Zelie v. Webster City, 62 N. W., 796.

Where the proportion of taxes to be levied upon abutting property is determined by the frontage of the property upon the street improved, and nothing is necessary to determine the amount of tax to be charged to the property owner except a mathematical computation, no discretion being left to the city council, no notice of the assessment is necessary: Amery v. Keokuk, 72-701.

Under an ordinance providing that a resolution for the improvement of streets and taxation of costs to abutting owners should be published before being acted upon, held, that such requirement was mandatory, and that proceedings under a resolution not thus published were void: Roche v. Dubuque, 42-250. Under prior provisions notice by publication as provided in the ordinance was held sufficient: Lyman v. Plummer, 75-353.

The fact that the statute authorizing incorporated towns to pave does not prescribe notice to property owners does not prevent sufficient notice being provided for by ordinance, by which owners of property have an opportunity to be heard in reference to the amount assessed against their land and lots: Ford v. North Des Moines, 80-626.

Where the amount of the assessment can be ascertained by a mere mathematical calculation, and where no judgment or discretion is required to be exercised, no notice of the assessment is necessary: Ibid.

The fact that the council is induced to order the paving of the streets at the expense of property owners by the proposition of parties interested that the grading shall be done without expense to the city does not render such arrangement for paving invalid: Ibid.

Where taxes for improvements, which might have been avoided on the ground that there was not proper notice of the assessment thereof, have been voluntarily paid, action cannot be maintained for the recovery thereof: Newcomb v. Davenport, 86-291.

SEC. 824. Objections. All objections to errors, irregularities or inequalities in the making of said special assessments, or in any of the prior proceedings or notices, not made before the council at the time and in the manner herein provided for, shall be waived except where fraud is shown.

SEC. 825. Levy of assessment—installments. The special assessments made in said plat and schedule, as corrected and approved, shall be levied at one time, by ordinance or resolution, against the property abutting on such street improvement or sewer, and, in case of sewers, upon adjacent property, and, when levied and certified, shall be payable at the office of the county treasurer. If the owner of any lot or parcel of land or railway or street railway, the assessment against which is embraced in any bond or certificate provided for in chapter eight of this title, shall, within thirty days from the date of such assessment, promise and agree in writing, indorsed on such bond or certificate, or in a separate agreement, that, in consideration of having the right to pay his assessment in installments, he will not make any objection of illegality or irregularity as to the assessment or levy of such tax upon and against his property, and will pay said assessment with interest thereon at such rate, not exceeding six per cent. per annum, as shall by ordinance or resolution of the council be prescribed, such tax so levied against the lot or parcel of land or railway or street railway of such owner shall be payable in seven equal installments, the first of which, with interest on the whole assessment, shall mature and be payable on the date of such assessment, and the others, with interest on the whole amount unpaid, annually thereafter, at the same time and in the same manner as the March semiannual payment of ordinary taxes; but where no such promise and agreement in writing shall be made by the owner of any lot or parcel of land or railway or street railway within said time, then the whole of said special assessment so levied upon and against the property of such owner shall mature at one time, and be due and payable, with interest, on the date of such assessment, and shall be collected at the next succeeding March semiannual payment of ordinary taxes. All such taxes with interest shall become delinquent on the first day of March next after their maturity, and shall bear the same interest, with the same penalties, as ordinary taxes. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 11–20; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 12; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 3, 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 3.]

SEC. 826. Filing certificate of assessment. A certificate of levy of such special assessment, fixing the number of installments and time when payable, certified as correct by the clerk, shall be filed with the auditor of the county, or of each of the counties, in which such city is situated, and thereupon said special assessment as shown therein shall be placed on the tax list of the proper county. [22 G. A., ch. 5, §§ 6, 7; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 4.]

SEC. 827. Interest on installments. Each installment of any special assessment shall bear interest from the date of the assessment, not to exceed six per cent. per annum, which shall become due and payable at the March semiannual payment of ordinary taxes. If certificates or bonds issued to pay for said street improvement or sewer bear a less rate of interest, the clerk shall certify to the auditor of said county or counties such fact, and the installments shall draw such rate of interest only. Upon the payment of any installment, there shall be computed and collected the installment, and interest on the whole assessment remaining unpaid up to the first day of April following. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 12; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 3, 5, 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 3.]

SEC. 828. Payment. The owner of any property against which a street improvement or sewer assessment has been levied shall have the right to pay the same, or the unpaid installments thereof, with all interest, as the case may be, up to the time of said payment, with any penalties and the cost of any proceedings for the sale of the property for such special assessment or installments. No part of the line of any railway or street railway shall be released from the lien for any part of any unpaid assessment which has been made against it for street improvements, until the whole assessment shall have been paid. If any owner of property subject to special assessment shall so divide the same that the feet fronting upon such street improvement or sewer are contained in two or more lots or parcels, he may discharge the lien in like manner upon any one or more of them, by payment of the amount unpaid, calculated by the ratio of square feet in area of such lot or lots or parcel or parcels to the area of the whole lot. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 13; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 14; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 6.]

SEC. 829. Sale for assessment. Property against which a special assessment has been levied for street improvement or sewers may be sold for any sum of principal or interest due and delinquent at any regular or adjourned tax sale, in the same manner, with the same forfeitures, penalties and right of redemption, and certificates and deeds on such sales shall be made in the same manner and with like effect, as in case of sales for the non-payment of ordinary taxes. At any such sale, where bonds have been issued in anticipation of such special taxes and interest, the city may be a purchaser, and be entitled to all the rights of purchasers at tax sales. The purchaser at such sale shall take the property charged with the lien of the remaining unpaid installments and interest. The proceeds subsequently realized from sales of any property so purchased by a city shall be covered into the city improvement fund. [23 G. A., ch. 6, § 7; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 12; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 3, 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 3; 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 3.]

A city which has properly ordered special assessments for improvements, and paid the contractor for the same, may, in an action, recover from property owners the respective amounts with which they are chargeable: Burlington v. Quick, 47–222.

It seems that an action by the city to recover such assessment can only be brought after it has paid the contractor: Ibid, 229.

Proceedings for the collection of special assessments will not be reviewed upon appeal, except in case of manifest abuse resulting in substantial prejudice: Des Moines v. Stephenson, 19–507.

A municipal corporation which has the power to levy and collect a certain tax cannot delegate its powers so as to enable its assignee to collect such tax in his own name, either in an action at law or in equity, but the city may proceed to collect such tax after a void assignment thereof, and enforce its lien: McInerny v. Reed, 23–410.

Where a certificate of sidewalk assessments showed the levy of such tax upon lots en masse and they were so sold, held, that the sale was invalid: Royce v. Aplington, 90–352.

As to liability for penalty and collection fee under prior provisions, see Tuttle v. Polk, 84–12; Muscatine v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 88–291; Ankeny v. Henningsen, 54–29.

Under § 478 of Code of '73 there was express provision for personal liability for special assessments and such liability need not be provided for by ordinance: Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co., 66 N. W., 176; Dewey v, Des Moines, 70 N. W., 605.

And, held, that the fact a statute with regard to special assessments did not declare that the land-owner should be personally liable therefor did not by implication repeal such provision as applicable to such assessment: Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co., 66 N. W., 176.

But such an assessment is not a tax for city purposes and is enforcible against lands which are exempt from city taxes: Ibid.

Under the provisions of a special charter, held, that the city might maintain an action at law to recover a special tax assessed on abutting property for the expenses of paving the streets: Muscatine v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 79–645.

The section of Code of '73, in so far as it authorized the rendering of a personal judgment against the property owner, held not unconstitutional: Burlington v. Quick, 47–222, 226.

Under provisions of a special charter making costs of special improvements a lien upon abutting property, held, that the property owner was not individually liable for the tax for improvements assessed against his lot: Buell v. Ball, 20–282.

As to whether he could be constitutionally made individually liable for such taxes, quœre: Ibid.

In a proceeding to recover the costs of constructing sidewalks, under a city ordinance, held error to render personal judgment against parties not personally notified to make the improvements as required by ordinance, or who did not acquire ownership of the property until after the improvements were made: Des Moines v. Casady, 21–570.

Counter-claim: In an action by a city to recover from a property owner a special tax for improvement in streets, defendant cannot set up a counter-claim against the city for damages to his property by reason of the negligent performance of the work. Such a counter-claim, if established, would be payable out of the general fund of the city, and should not be allowed to be deducted from the special fund raised for the improvement: Burlington v. Palmer, 67–681.

Where a property owner brought action to restrain the sale of his property for the payment of a special tax, held, that the city might, by way of counter-claim, ask judgment for the amount of the tax, and was entitled to such relief: Kendig v. Knight, 60–29.

Recovery of illegal tax: Under an ordinance of a city under special charter, substantially the same in its provisions as the statute, with reference to county taxes illegally paid, held, that an illegal tax paid under protest might be recovered back: Tallant v. Burlington, 39–543.

Under such ordinance, held, that a person who had paid an illegal special assessment might recover the same in an action: Robinson v. Burlington, 50–240.

The discretion to be exercised by the court in regard to severing proceedings, as herein provided, will not be reviewed upon appeal, except in case of manifest abuse resulting in substantial prejudice: Des Mones v. Stephenson, 19–507.

After an entry of the municipal taxes upon the county books, sales are to be made therefor as though they were a part of the county taxes: Morrison v. Hershire, 32–271.

For mere irregularities in the levy and apportionment of taxes, injunction against their collection cannot be maintained against a city: Ibid.

A statute similar to this section, giving to cities organized under special charter power to collect taxes by certifying them to the county treasurer, was held not to take away the right previously existing to provide for the collection of such tax by action in the courts: City of Dubuque v. Harrison, 34–163.

The levy and collection of special taxes upon particular property by a municipal corporrtion must follow the law authorizing them with the same degree of strictness as in other cases of taxation. Where an ordinance requires publication before such tax is due and payable, the tax cannot become due and payable until this requirement is complied with: Dubuque v. Wooton, 28–571.

SEC. 830. Levy for city improvement fund. When the whole or any part of the cost of the making or reconstruction of any street improvement shall be ordered paid from the city improvement fund, to be levied upon all the property within any city, it shall have the power, after the completion of the work, by ordinance or resolution, to levy at one time the whole or any part of the cost of said improvement upon all the taxable property within such city, and determine the whole percentage of tax necessary to pay the same, and the percentage to be paid each year, not exceeding the maximum annual limit of said taxes, and the number of years, not exceeding ten, given for the maturity of each installment thereof; but no part of such cost shall be levied against property owned by the city or the United States. Certificates of such levies shall be filed with the auditor of the county or counties in which said city is located, setting forth the amount or percentage and maturity of said tax, or each installment thereof, upon the assessed valuation of all the property in said city, certified as correct by the clerk, and thereupon said tax shall be placed on the tax list of the proper county or counties. [25 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 12, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 160, § 3; 19 G. A., ch. 38, § 2.]

SEC. 831. Levy for sewer fund. When the whole or any part of the cost of making or reconstructing any sewer shall be ordered paid from the sewer fund of any sewer district or from the city sewer fund, the council may, after the completion of the work, by ordinance or resolution, levy at one time the whole or any part of the cost of such sewer upon all the taxable real property within such sewer district or within the city, as the case may be, and determine the whole percentage of tax necessary to pay the same, and the percentage to be paid each year, not exceeding the maximum annual limit of said taxes, and the number of years, not exceeding ten, given for the maturity of each installment thereof; but no part of such cost shall be levied against property owned by the city or the United States. Certificates of such levies shall be filed with the auditor of the county or counties in which said sewer district or city is located, setting forth the amount or percentage and maturity of said tax, or each installment thereof, with a description of the boundaries of the particular sewer district, or a sufficient description of the real property of the sewer district or city upon which the tax is levied, duly certified as correct by the clerk, and thereupon said tax shall be placed on the tax list of the proper county or counties. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 11; 21 G. A., ch. 34; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 1.]

SEC. 832. Cost of repairs. The cost of the repair of any street improvement or sewer, or any part thereof, in case of sewers, may be paid from the city sewer fund, or the district sewer fund of the sewer district in which said repair is made, or from the general revenue of said city, or part from each of said funds; and in case of street improvements, may be paid from the city improvement fund, or the general revenue of said city.

SEC. 833. Assessments not to be diverted. All special assessments levied against abutting property and railways and street railways, for the payment of the cost of making or reconstruction of street improvements or sewers, shall be used for or appropriated to no other purpose than the payment in whole or in part of the cost of such work, or in payment of bonds or certificates issued to pay such cost, with the interest thereon. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 14; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 15; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9.]

SEC. 834. Assessments on railways and street railways. All railway and street railway companies shall be required to make, reconstruct and repair all paving, graveling or macadamizing between the rails of their tracks, and one foot outside thereof, at their own expense, unless by ordinance of the city, or by virtue of the provisions or conditions of any ordinance of the city under which said railway or street railway may have been constructed or may be maintained, it may be bound to pave, gravel or macadamize other portions of said street, and in that case said railway or street railway shall make, reconstruct and repair the paving, graveling or macadamizing of that part of the street specified by such ordinance; and such improvement, or the reconstruction or repair thereof, shall be of the material and character ordered by said city, and shall be done at the same time that the remainder of said improvement is made, reconstructed or repaired. When the same is made or completed, said companies shall lay, in the best approved manner, such rail as the council may require. They shall keep the paving, graveling or macadamizing between said rails, and one foot outside thereof, or such other part as they are liable to construct or maintain, up to grade and in good repair, using for such purpose the same material as is used for the original paving, graveling or macadamizing, or such other material as the council may order. If the owner of said railway or street railway shall fail or refuse to comply with the order of the council to make, reconstruct or repair such paving, graveling or macadamizing, such work may be done by the city, and the cost and expense thereof shall be assessed upon the real estate and personal property of said railway or street railway company within the corporate limits of said city, and against such railway or street railway company, in the manner hereinbefore provided for the assessment of such cost against abutting property and the owners thereof. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 10; 23 G. A., ch. 9, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 6.]

The provision requiring paving of portions of the street outside of the tracks is not unconstitutional as applied to street railways incorporated when the statute only required pavement within its tracks. Such a change is within the power of the legislature with reference to the regulation of corporate franchises: Sioux City St. R. Co. v. Sioux City, 78–367; affirmed, 138 U. S., 98.

The provisions of this section are not invalid as applicable to a street car company whose franchise was granted before the law took effect: Sioux City St. R. Co. v. Sioux City, 78–742.

Under prior provisions, held, that it was optional with the city to require of a street railway company that it should bear the expense of paving its tracks, and if the city did not make such requirements an abutting property owner could not on that account claim that the assessment for such paving as against his property is void: Lacey v. Marshalltown, 68 N. W., 726.

Also, held, that the city could not charge upon a street railway which had acquired the right to occupy the street the proportionate expense of paving already done: Oskaloosa St. Ry. and Land Co. v. Oskaloosa, 68 N. W., 808. [See now the provisions of the next section.]

SEC. 835. Cost of paving already laid. Before any street railway company shall lay its track upon any street that has been paved, and which at the time is not being repaved, it shall pay into the city treasury the value of all paving between its tracks, and one foot outside thereof, which value shall be determined by the city council, but in no case shall exceed the original cost of the paving, and the money thus paid shall be refunded to the abutting property owners on said street in proportion to the amounts originally assessed against the property abutting thereon.

SEC. 836. Relevy. When by reason of nonconformity to any law or ordinance, or by reason of any omission, informality or irregularity, any special tax or assessment hereafter levied is invalid, or is adjudged illegal, or in case of deficiencies, the council shall have the power to correct the same by resolution or ordinance, and may reassess and relevy the same, as also an amount to make up such deficiencies, with the same force and effect as if done at the proper time, in the proper amount, and in the manner provided by law or by the resolution or ordinance relating thereto. [22 G. A., ch. 6, § 7; 22 G. A., ch. 44, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3.]

Irregularities in the passing of the ordinance and resolution authorizing street improvements and assessing and levying taxes therefor may be cured by a legalizing act and such act may be applicable to a tax the validity of which is already in litigation: Clinton v. Walliker, 68 N. W., 431; Windsor v. Des Moines, 70 N. W., 214.

A special assessment for street improvements is regarded as a tax, and subject to the same rules in many respects, as ordinary taxation for revenue; and where an assessment had been held invalid by reason of non-compliance with the law with reference to the contract, and in pursuance of a subsequent statute legalizing the proceedings, re-assessment was made and notice given to the property owner, held, that the re-assessment was valid: Tuttle v. Polk, 84-12.

But warrants issued before the re-assessment will not draw interest until the second assessment: Ibid.

Where a re-assessment was made under the provisions of this section and certificates issued in accordance therewith, held, that such certificates were valid and became a lien upon the property subject to assessment for the improvements. Tuttle v. Polk, 92-433.

Although no basis of apportionment was adopted prior to the re-assessment, held, that no objection having been made to the assessment on that account, it could not be entertained: Ibid.

Under prior provisions, held, that if an improvement is such as the city was authorized to make, according to the true intent of the law, all errors and irregularities should be discarded and a recovery permitted for the proper proportion of the value of the work from the abutting property owner: Burlington v. Quick, 47-222, 228.

The fact that the cost of the improvement is not assessed on the owner of the property in the manner provided by ordinance is an informality which should be disregarded where it appears that after the improvement was made the cost was ascertained and the property owner notified of the amount due, and an opportunity was given him to pay it. Under such circumstances the formal assessment made against the property owner is not an essential requisite to a recovery: Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

The irregularity or defect which can be disregarded must be a mere error or omission to do something which in no manner affects the jurisdiction of the city. Unless jurisdiction has been acquired, the proceedings of the city will be void: Ibid.

Want of notice of the assessment and levy are formal irregularities which will not defeat recovery for the cost of the sewer. This right of recovery depends upon doing the work in the manner and for the purposes authorized by law and may be adopted at any time: Dittoe v. Davenport, 74-66.

SEC. 837. Correction. When, in making any special assessment, any property is hereafter assessed too little or too much, the same may be corrected, and a reassessment and relevy made in conformity therewith; and any tax collected in excess of the proper amount shall be refunded to the persons paying the same. Such corrected assessment shall be a lien on the lots and parcels of land the same as the original, and shall be certified by the clerk to the county auditor in the same manner, and shall, so far as practicable, be collected in the same installments, draw interest at the same rate, and be enforced in the same manner as the original assessment. [22 G. A., ch. 44, §§ 1, 2; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3.]

SEC. 838. Time waived. Any provision of law, resolution or ordinance specifying a time when, or the order in which, acts shall be done in a proceeding which may result in a special assessment, shall be taken to be subject to the qualifications of the two preceding sections. [22 G. A., ch. 44, § 3.]

SEC. 839. Appeal. Any person affected by the levy of any special assessment provided for in this chapter may appeal therefrom to the district court within ten days from the date of such levy, by serving written notice thereof upon the mayor or clerk, and filing a bond for costs, to be fixed and approved by either of said officers. Upon such appeal, all questions touching the validity of such assessment, or the amount thereof, and not waived under the provisions of this chapter, shall be heard and determined. The appeal shall be tried as an equitable action, and the court may make such assessment as should have been made, or direct the making of such assessment by the council. The costs of the appeal shall be taxed as in other actions.

SEC. 840. Enforcing assessment against railways and street railways. All special assessments made under this chapter against any railway or street railway shall be a debt due personally from such railway. Such special assessments and each installment thereof, and certificates issued therefor when due, may be collected in the district or superior court by action at law, in the name of the city or town against such railway or street railway, or the lien thereof enforced against the property of such railway or street railway, on or against which the same has been levied, by action in equity, at the election of the plaintiff; and in any action at law where pleadings are required, it shall be sufficient to declare generally for work and labor done, or materials furnished, on the particular street, avenue, alley or highway, the levy of the tax and non-payment of the same; and in any action in equity, it shall be sufficient to aver the same matters, together with a particular description of the property, or parts thereof, against which such lien is sought to be enforced. Such action may be maintained in the name of the city or town, for the use of any person entitled thereto or any part thereof, upon filing a bond conditioned to pay all costs adjudged against the plaintiff and protect it from all liability therefrom or damages growing out of the same; the amount of the bond to be fixed by the court, or a judge thereof in vacation, and the sureties thereon to be approved by the clerk of said court. [20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 4; 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 4; C. '73, § 478; R., § 1068.]

CHAPTER 8.

OF STREET IMPROVEMENT AND SEWER BONDS AND CERTIFICATES.

SECTION 841. Certificates issued. The council may provide, by ordinance or resolution, for the issuance of street improvement and sewer certificates, payable to bearer, or to the contractors who have constructed any street improvement or sewer, or completed part thereof, within the meaning of chapter seven of this title, in payment or part payment therefor, each of which certificates shall state the amount of one or more assessments, or a part thereof, made against the property, designating it, including railways and street railways, and the owners thereof liable to assessment for the cost of the same, and may negotiate the same. Such certificate shall transfer to the bearer, contractor or assigns, all the right and interest of the city in every such assessment or part thereof described therein, and shall authorize such bearer, contractor or assigns to collect and receive every assessment embraced in such certificate, by or through any of the methods provided by law for their collection, as the same mature. Said certificates shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semiannually, as fixed by said council, and may be paid by the taxpayer to the county treasurer, who shall receipt for the same and cause the amount paid to be applied to the payment of the certificate issued therefor. No certificate shall be issued or negotiated by the city for less than its par value, with accrued interest up to the date of the delivery or transfer thereof. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 15, 16; 21 G. A., ch. 168, §§ 16, 17.]

The certificates here contemplated do not constitute an indebtedness of the city and therefore are not invalid, although the city indebtedness exceeds the constitutional limit: Tuttle v. Polk, 92–433.

Partial payments as the work progresses are contemplated, and the fact that the contract is not completed will not defeat the enforcement of certificates properly issued for work done: Ibid.

Where, in pursuance of a contract for improving a street, the city issued certificates of assessment against owners of abutting lots, which by the contract were to be taken by the contractor in full payment for the work performed, and by reason of the nature of the improvement it was not chargeable against abutting property, but might be contracted for by the city, and paid out of the general revenue, held, that a recovery against the abutting property owners not being possible, the city became liable: Bucroft v. Council Bluffs, 63–646; Polk County Savings Bank v State, 69–24.

Where the city issues its payment for work certificates of assessment upon abutting property, it thereby impliedly agrees that they are not invalid; and if it is shown that they are invalid the city becomes liable for the contract price of the work. Scofield v. Council Bluffs, 68–695.

The whole contract does not become void by reason of the invalidity of the certificates, but the contract price measures the right of recovery as against the city: Ibid.

SEC. 842. Bonds. For the purpose of providing for the payment of the assessed cost of any street improvement or sewer which is to be or has been assessed upon property abutting thereon, including railways and street railways liable for the payment thereof, and, in case of sewers, also upon adjacent property, the council may, by ordinance or resolution, provide for the execution and delivery of bonds for the amount of so much of the assessed cost or any part thereof, in anticipation of the deferred payment of the assessments levied therefor, such bonds to be called "street improvement bonds" or "sewer bonds," and issued in amounts of one hundred dollars, or multiples thereof not exceeding one thousand dollars, except that one bond may be issued for the amount necessary to make up the exact amount of such cost, which shall not exceed one thousand dollars. Street improvement bonds shall not include any sewer assessments, nor sewer bonds any street improvement assessments. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 6; 25 G. A., ch. 9, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 4; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 10.]

Bonds issued for the making of improvements to be paid by special assessments on abutting property, do not constitute an indebtedness of the city: Clinton v. Walliker, 68 N. W., 431.

SEC. 843. Form. Street improvement and sewer bonds, respectively, issued for any one levy, shall all bear the same date and be divided into as many series as there are installment payments of said special assessments, and each series shall be as nearly equal in amount as practicable. Each series of said bonds shall mature on the first day of April of the years in which the installments of said special taxes come due; shall bear the name of the street, avenue, highway, alley or district in which said street improvement or sewer is located, and shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semiannually, and coupons for said interest shall be attached thereto. Said bonds and coupons shall be signed by the mayor, countersigned by the clerk, and sealed with the corporate seal, and shall be substantially in the following form, but subject to changes that will conform them to the ordinance (or resolution) of the council, to wit:

The city of....., in the state of Iowa, promises to pay as hereinafter stated, to the bearer hereof, on the.....day of....., the sum of .....dollars, with interest thereon at the rate of....per cent. per annum, payable.....annually, on the presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached. Both principal and interest of this bond are payable at the.....bank in the city of....., state of..... This bond is issued by the city of.....under and by virtue of chapter eight of title five, of the Code of Iowa, and the ordinance (or resolution) of said city, duly passed on the....day of....., 1.....

This bond is one of a series of bonds of like tenor, date and amount, numbered from....to....and issued for the purpose of defraying the cost of improving, curbing and paving a portion of.....street (or constructing a sewer on.....street), as described in said ordinance or resolution, in said city, which cost is payable by the abutting property along said improvements, and is made by said law a lien on all said abutting or adjacent property, and payable in seven annual installments, with interest on all deferred payments at the rate of six per cent. per annum, and this bond is payable only out of the.....fund created by the collection of said special tax, and said fund can be used for no other purpose.

And it is hereby certified and recited that all the acts, conditions and things required to be done, precedent to, and in the issuing of this series of bonds, have been done, happened and performed, in regular and due form, as required by said law and ordinance (or resolution); and for the assessment, collection and payment hereon of said special tax, the full faith and diligence of said city of.....are hereby irrevocably pledged.

In testimony whereof, the city of....., by its city council, has caused this bond to be signed by its mayor and countersigned by its city clerk, with the seal of said city affixed, this.....day of....., 1.....

City Clerk. Mayor.

On the....day of....., the city of....., Iowa, promises to pay to bearer, as provided in said bond, the sum of.....dollars, at the..... bank in the city of....., being.....months' interest due that day on its improvement bond No....., dated....., 1.....

.....
Countersigned. Mayor.

.....
City Clerk.

[25 G. A., ch. 7, § 6; 25 G. A., ch. 9, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 4; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 10.]

SEC. 844. How issued. When such bonds have been issued they shall be delivered to the clerk, who shall register them in a book or books to be kept for that purpose, countersign them, and then deliver the same to the city treasurer or some bank selected by the council, which may require of the treasurer or bank such security or such additional security as it may think necessary to secure the payment in full of the proceeds thereof. The city treasurer shall report to the clerk the number of bonds delivered by him, and the amount received therefor, or for which credit has been given by the contractor. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 7, 8; 21 G. A., ch. 168, §§ 7, 8.]

SEC. 845. Sale. The bonds may be sold at public or private sale, but shall not be sold or negotiated for less than their par value with accrued interest from date to the time of delivery thereof. All the proceeds of bonds and of certificates negotiated shall be paid to the city treasurer, and shall be used only to pay for the cost of street improvements or sewers included in the assessment or assessments pledged to the payment thereof. All money received by said treasurer as proceeds of said bonds or certificates shall be kept in the same manner and subject to all the regulations regarding other money of the city, except that he shall keep an account of each levy of such special assessments, and all interest received and paid shall be credited and charged to such fund. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 8, 9; 25 G. A., ch. 9, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 168, §§ 8, 9.]

SEC. 846. Certificate of completion of work. No money received by the city treasurer from the sale of street improvement and sewer bonds or certificates shall be paid out, nor shall any certificate be issued to the contractor or sold, except upon the resolution of the council ordering the same, and no such resolution for the delivery of any bonds or certificates, or the payment of any of the proceeds of said bonds or certificates, shall be made until the certificate of the city engineer or other competent person selected, or board of public works where such board exists, has been filed, stating that the work contracted for or a completed part thereof, as the case may be, has been completed according to the terms and stipulations of the contract. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 9; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 9.]

SEC. 847. Bonds paid. Such street improvement and sewer certificates, bonds and coupons shall be payable out of funds derived from the special taxes and interest thereon pledged to the payment of the same, and such certificates or bonds shall not be delivered in excess of the special taxes levied; but such certificates, bonds and coupons shall not make the city liable in any way, except for the proper application of said special taxes. If any interest shall become due on any of said bonds when there is no fund from which to pay the same, the council may make a temporary loan for the payment thereof, which loan shall be repaid from the special taxes and interest pledged to secure said bonds, but in case of purchase by the city at tax sale of the property on which such tax is levied, it shall then be repaid from the city improvement fund. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 6, 14; 25 G. A., ch. 9, §§ 1, 4; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 15.]

SEC. 848. Refunding bonds. Refunding bonds may be issued to pay off and take up bonds issued in payment for street improvements and sewers made under prior laws, or to refund any part thereof. Bonds thus issued shall substantially conform to the provisions of this chapter, and the face amount thereof shall be limited to the amount of the unpaid special assessments, with the interest thereon, applicable to the payment of the bonds so taken up. Sewer refunding bonds and street improvement refunding bonds thus issued must be kept separate. Said refunding bonds or their proceeds shall be used only to pay street improvement or sewer bonds so taken up. [25 G. A., ch. 9, § 2.]

SEC. 849. How paid. When refunding bonds shall be issued to pay street improvement or sewer bonds issued under prior laws, all special assessments, taxes and sinking funds applicable to the payment of such bonds previously issued shall be applicable in the same manner and to the same extent to the payment of the refunding bonds issued hereunder, and all the powers and duties to levy and collect special assessments and taxes, to create liens upon property, and to establish sinking funds in respect of the bonds previously issued shall continue until all refunding bonds shall be paid. The city shall collect the special assessments out of which the said bonds are payable, and hold the same separate and apart in trust for the payment of said refunding bonds, but it shall be in no way liable except for the proper application of said assessments; but the provisions of this section shall not apply to assessments or bonds adjudicated to be void. [Same, § 3.]

CHAPTER 9.

OF PARK COMMISSIONERS AND BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

SECTION 850. Election of park commissioners in certain cities. There shall be elected at the regular city election in each city of the first class, containing a population of forty thousand or over, three park commissioners, whose terms of office shall be six years, one to be elected each even-numbered year, but at the first election three shall be elected, and hold their offices, respectively, for two, four and six years, who shall by lot determine their respective terms. [24 G. A., ch. 1, § 1; 24 G. A., ch. 2, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 1.]

The statute does not create a corporation distinct from the city, and therefore the commissioners have no right to incur indebtedness, by the issuance of bonds or otherwise, which shall constitute an indebtedness on the part of the city in excess of the constitutional limitation: Orvis v. Board of Park Commissioners, 88-674.

SEC. 851. Qualification—organization—treasurer—compensation. The commissioners shall, within ten days after their election, qualify by taking the oath of office, and organize as a board by the election of one of their number as chairman and one as secretary, but no bond shall be required of them. They shall also elect a treasurer, not one of their number, who shall give bonds in the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, the penalty of which may be increased by the board. The treasurer shall receive and pay out all moneys under the control of said board as ordered by it, but shall receive no compensation for his services. Each of the commissioners shall receive, for services actually performed, compensation at the rate of five dollars per day, not to exceed one hundred days in any year, and be reimbursed for all actual expenses incurred or money paid out by him in connection with the discharge of his official duties. An itemized statement of all expenses and moneys paid out shall be made under oath and filed with the secretary, and allowed only by the affirmative vote of the full board. [25 G. A., ch. 1, § 1; 24 G. A., ch. 1, § 2.]

SEC. 852. Tax certified—purposes. The board shall, on or before the first Monday in September of each year, certify to the county auditor the per cent. of taxes it may fix for park purposes, not exceeding two mills on the dollar on all taxable property of the city, to be known as "park fund" and, when collected, to be paid over to the treasurer of the board, and by him paid out on its orders, which shall state the name of the payee and the amount, and the purposes for which such amount has been expended. No money of this fund shall be appropriated or expended for any purpose except as provided in this chapter. Such fund may be used in purchasing or acquiring real estate for park purposes, including streets or highways to connect one park with another, or to connect a park with streets or highways, or for other purposes necessary and incident to the establishment and maintenance of parks, and for the purpose of improving and maintaining the same and defraying necessary expenses connected therewith, including the compensation of the board, its officers and employes; but when any annual tax or part thereof has been pledged for the payment of any bonds or the interest thereon, such tax or part thereof shall be devoted to no other purpose. [25 G. A., ch. 1, § 2; 25 G. A., ch. 2, § 1; 24 G. A., ch. 1, §§ 3, 4; 20 G. A., ch. 151, §§ 3–5.]

SEC. 853. Acquisition of real estate—powers of board. It may acquire real estate within the city for park purposes, by donation, purchase or condemnation, and take the title to the members thereof as a board and their successors in office in trust for the public, and hold the same exempt from taxation. It may sell or exchange any real estate acquired by it which shall be found unfit or not desirable for such purposes; shall keep a record of all transactions, and have exclusive control of all the parks and pleasure grounds acquired by it, and of any other ground owned by the city and set apart for like purposes; and may make contracts, sue and be sued, but shall incur no indebtedness in excess of the amount of taxes already levied and available for the payment thereof, except bonds hereby authorized. It shall make an annual detailed report of the amounts of money expended and the purposes for which used to the council at the regular November meeting, and annually publish in some newspaper in the city an itemized statement of all moneys paid out or expended by it, and of all sums owing by it. For the purpose of paying for real estate, it may issue bonds in such sums and amounts as found necessary, but the aggregate annual interest on all bonds issued by it and at any time outstanding shall not exceed four-fifths of the amount of the annual tax authorized by this chapter. [25 G. A., ch. 2, § 2; 24 G. A., ch. 1, §§ 4, 7; 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 2.]

In cities or towns having park commissioners, the power to condemn lands for park purposes belongs to them exclusively, but when there are no park commissioners such power may be exercised by the corporation through its council, under the provisions of § 880: In re Cedar Rapids, 85-39.

As the acquiring of property for park purposes as here provided does not necessarily involve an indebtedness, the validity of the proceeding cannot be questioned on the ground that the city is already indebted to its constitutional limit: Ibid.

SEC. 854. Bonds. Bonds issued by the board shall mature in not less than twenty-five nor more than fifty years from date; shall be in sums of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semiannually. Said board, after the issuance of any of such bonds, shall each year, for fifteen years before the maturity thereof, set aside, out of the tax levied by it, a sum equal to one-fifteenth of the principal thereof, which sum shall be applied in payment of the principal whenever the amount on hand shall be sufficient to pay one or more of said bonds. [25 G. A., ch. 1, § 3; 24 G. A., ch. 1, § 5.]

SEC. 855. Lien on property—mortgage. Bonds issued under the provisions of this chapter shall be a lien upon all the real estate acquired by the commissioners therewith, or with the proceeds thereof, and such bonds or proceeds shall be used for the purchase of real estate only. The board shall have power to mortgage such real estate to a trustee for the purpose of securing the payment of said bonds, and after the issuance thereof there shall be pledged for the payment of the interest thereon so much of the annual tax levied by virtue of this chapter as shall be necessary to make such payment, and the residue of said tax may be used by the board in the purchase of real estate or improvement of the parks and pleasure grounds of the city. [25 G. A., ch. 1, § 4; 24 G. A., ch. 1, § 6.]

SEC. 856. Regulations. The board may in writing prescribe rules and regulations for the government of the parks or public grounds under their control and persons resorting thereto, which rules and regulations shall be in force when entered in the record of the proceedings of the board, and a copy thereof signed by the commissioners has been posted at each gate or principal entrance to any such park or public grounds, and a wilful violation thereof shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars. Any one who shall cut, break or deface any tree or shrub growing in any such park or public ground, without authority, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [25 G. A., ch. 1, § 5.]

SEC. 857. Police protection. The mayor on written request of the board shall furnish adequate police protection for such parks, and the city shall furnish such water supply as may be necessary therefor, and properly light the same at its expense. The board shall be entitled to the services of the city engineer, when requested, without expense to it. It shall have the power to regulate or forbid the erection of poles or the stretching of wire for electric light, street railway, or other corporations or persons in such parks or in or along streets, highways or over public places laid out or controlled by it. [Same, §§ 6, 7.]

SEC. 858. Park districts—condemnation of property. Where any such city shall contain more than one organized township, at least one commissioner shall be a resident of each of said townships; and unless all of the commissioners shall agree upon the location of one park for a whole city, each township shall constitute a separate park district, and the proceeds of any bonds shall be apportioned to and expended in each district, in proportion to the tax levied thereon; and all funds received from taxes collected shall be expended in the same manner. If said board and the owners of any property desired by it for park purposes cannot agree as to the price to be paid therefor, it may cause the same to be condemned in the manner provided for taking land for city purposes. [24 G. A., ch 1, §§ 8, 9.]

SEC. 859. Park commissioners in other cities and towns. All cities having a population under forty thousand and towns may provide by ordinance for the election of three park commissioners whose terms of office shall be three, four and five years, respectively, and their successors shall be elected for the full term of five years. Such commissioners shall be residents of the city or town, and each shall, before he enters upon the duties of his office, give a bond, with sureties to be approved by the council, to the use of the city in the penal sum of five thousand dollars conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office.

SEC. 860. Voting tax for park fund. The council of such city or town may, by resolution, submit to the qualified electors of the same, at a regular or special election, the question whether there shall be levied upon the assessed property thereof a tax not exceeding two mills on the dollar for the purpose of purchasing real estate for parks, and the improvement of parks, or for either or both of such purposes. The proposition therefor shall be submitted in the manner provided for similar propositions in the chapter on elections. The council shall, in the resolution ordering such election, specify the rate of taxation proposed and the number of years the same shall be levied. If a majority of the votes cast at such election on the proposition so submitted shall be in favor of the adoption of the proposition for taxation, the council shall levy the tax so authorized, which shall be collected and paid over to the treasurer of such city or town in the same manner as other taxes. Such taxes shall be known as "park fund," and shall be paid out on the order of the commissioners for the purposes contemplated in the next section, and for no other purpose whatever. [26 G. A., ch. 24.]

SEC. 861. Powers and compensation of commissioners. Each of the commissioners shall receive for services performed compensation not exceeding one hundred dollars per annum to be paid out of the "park fund." They shall have exclusive control of the parks of the city or town, and shall manage, improve and supervise the same; they may use the "park fund" for improving the parks, or for purchasing additional grounds or laying out and improving avenues thereto; they may appoint one or more park policemen and pay them out of said fund, and may do all things necessary to preserve such parks. They shall keep, and make annually to the council, a full account of their disbursements, and all orders drawn on such fund shall be signed by at least two of their number.

SEC. 862. Protection of parks. Any person who shall, except by the authority of such commissioners, cut, break or deface any tree or shrub growing in such park or parks, or any avenue thereto, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 863. Board of public works—election. In any city having a population of thirty thousand or more the council may by ordinance establish a board of public works, to consist of two members, residents of the city, to be appointed by the mayor with the approval of the council. Upon the establishment of said board, one member shall be appointed for two years and one for three years, and their successors shall be appointed for three years. The members shall hold office until their successors are appointed and qualified. Vacancies shall be filled by the mayor with the approval of the council. No member of the council or city officer shall be a member of such board. [24 G. A., ch. 3, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 1.]

Under the original statute, held, that the intention of the legislature was to establish definite terms of office for the members of the board of public works, and that a subsequent statute terminating the terms of office of elective officers was not applicable to the members of such board: Sherman v. Des Moines, 69 N. W., 410.

SEC. 864. Salary. Each member of such board shall receive a salary of not less than fifteen hundred nor more than twenty-five hundred dollars, to be fixed by the council, and not to be reduced during his term of office. He shall, also, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, take an oath and give a bond to faithfully perform the duties of his office, which bond shall be in the sum of not less than twenty thousand dollars, with two or more sufficient sureties approved by the council. No such member shall be directly or indirectly interested in any contract entered into by the board on behalf of such city, nor in the purchase or sale of any material from or to the city, in connection with anything over which the board has any supervision or control. [22 G. A., ch. 1, § 2.]

SEC. 865. Consultation with city engineer. The board shall consult the city engineer regarding the plans, specifications and advisability of doing or making contemplated improvements or work, and he shall from time to time furnish it with estimates of the cost of material and plans and specifications for any work to be ordered or advertised to be done, and report to the board when, and whether, such improvements or work is made and completed according to contract. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 866. Contracts. Contracts for all public works and improvements made by the board shall be drawn by the city solicitor, who shall charge not less than three nor more than ten dollars for each contract, including a copy thereof and specifications for the use of the contractor, to be collected by him from the contractor, and paid monthly to the city treasurer. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 867. Bids. It shall advertise for bids and make all contracts on behalf of the city for all work, and for material and work for public improvements in excess of two hundred dollars, whenever the same shall be ordered by the council or voted for at any election. Proposals for bids shall be published once each week for two weeks in two of the daily newspapers therein, which shall be completed at least two weeks before the making of any contract, which proposals shall state the amount and kinds of material to be furnished, the kind of improvement, and the time and conditions upon which bids will be received, all of which may be rejected. All contracts shall be made with the lowest responsible bidder, but it shall not be necessary before proposals are published or bids received to determine specifically the kind of material to be used. All contracts made by said board shall be subject to the approval of the council. [Same, §§ 5, 6.]

Under prior provisions, held, that the contracts of the board of public works were not required to be made subject to the approval of the city council: Dewey v. Des Moines, 70 N. W., 605.

SEC. 868. Disapproval of plans. Whenever it shall disapprove of the plans, specifications or estimates furnished by the city engineer, it shall at once report the same in writing to the council, stating its reasons for such disapproval. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 869. Superintend lighting. It shall advertise for bids and make contracts for the lighting of the streets, alleys, public grounds and buildings and shall have entire control, management and direction of the lamps, lights, lighting material and persons charged with the care thereof. [Same, §§ 7, 9, 10.]

SEC. 870. Public works. It shall superintend and take charge of all public work, the cleaning of streets and public places and the removal of garbage, all street improvements, sewers and other improvements, bridges, viaducts, and public buildings, and the entire erection, making, reconstruction and repair thereof, approve the estimates of the city engineer which may be made from time to time of the cost of such work as the same progresses, accept any building erected, work done or improvement made, when completed according to contract, and perform such other duties as may be required of it by ordinance or resolution. But where a preliminary notice is required, all proceedings prior to and including the passage of the resolution or ordinance shall be taken by the council, and the certificates of the city engineer that work has been done or material furnished shall be made to said board, and orders for the payment therefor shall be drawn and signed by it and approved as provided in the next section. [Same, §§ 6, 9, 10, 22.]

SEC. 871. Expenditures. It shall control and direct all expenditures to be made by its department, and sign and draw orders for the same, and all orders given and bills and accounts created by it shall first be indorsed by each of the members thereof, or their reasons stated in writing for not doing so, and approved by the council, before the same shall be ordered paid. [Same, § 11.]

SEC. 872. Extra work. It shall not order any extra work in excess of that contained in any contract, or pay out any money for extras, without submitting and recommending the same to the council and receiving its authority therefor. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 873. Appointing powers. It shall have power to appoint agents and employes, subject to the approval of the council, necessary for the doing of its work, who shall be actually engaged in the construction or improvement of the public works, and shall not include any assistants, superintendents, bookkeepers or secretaries, the duties of which last named officers shall be performed by said board without extra compensation. [Same, § 13.]

The appointment of a superintendent with power to hire and discharge men and direct the prosecution of work for the board is within the scope of its authority, and a workman employed by such superintendent is in the employ of the city: Hathaway v. Des Moines, 66 N. W., 188.

SEC. 874. Plans for improvements. It shall require plans and specifications for all buildings costing over five thousand dollars to be submitted for its approval, with the advice of the city engineer, and no such building shall be erected until the above requirements have been complied with. It shall require any person, before erecting any building or improvement within the city, to obtain a permit from it, and shall charge not more than one mill on the dollar of the cost of the construction thereof, based on the architect's or builder's estimate, and the money derived therefrom shall be paid monthly to the city treasurer. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 875. Mains—connections—wires. It shall, with the advice of the city engineer, superintend the laying of all water, gas and steam heating mains and all connections therefor, and stretching or laying of telephone, telegraph, district telegraph and electric wires, in the manner provided by the ordinances of such city. [Same, § 16.]

SEC. 876. Fire escapes. It shall regulate the size, number and manner of construction of fire escapes, doors and stairways of theatres, tenement houses, audience rooms, and all public buildings, whether now or hereafter built, used for the gathering of a large number of people, so that there may be convenient, safe and speedy exit in case of fire. [Same, § 17.]

SEC. 877. Semiannual report. It shall on the first days of April and December, and at the expiration of the term of office of any member, submit a full, complete and detailed statement to the council of all work done by it, giving the amount of expenditures, the names of the persons who have received pay, the amount of such pay, for what the same was paid, the number of permits issued and the amounts received therefor. The report shall also state that since the last report no member of said board has been directly or indirectly interested in any contract let by or work ordered or superintended by it, or in the sale or purchase of any material used in the erection, making, reconstruction or repair of said work or improvements, and that neither of them has received or expects to receive any presents or compensation from any contractor or other person interested in said work or improvement, and said report shall be sworn to by each member of said board. [Same, § 18.]

SEC. 878. Records—office. It shall keep copies of all contracts, plans, maps, specifications, plats and records of every kind whatsoever growing out of any work or improvement made or superintended by it, the number of all building permits issued, and the location and cost of such buildings and improvements. All purchases of materials shall be made by written orders, signed by at least one member of the board. The board shall keep an office furnished with fuel, lights, stationery, apparatus, and all other needful utensils for the work, to be provided at the expense of the city. [Same, §§ 19, 21.]

SEC. 879. Removal of members. Any member of such board may at any time be removed from office by a vote of two-thirds of the council for sufficient cause, and the proceedings in that behalf shall be entered in the records of the council, but the council shall previously cause a copy of the charges against such member or members sought to be removed to be served upon him or them, together with a notice of the time and place of hearing the same, at least ten days previous to the time assigned, and give him or them an opportunity to make defense thereto. [Same, § 20.]

CHAPTER 10.

OF CONDEMNATION AND PURCHASE OF LAND.

SECTION 880. For what purposes. Cities and towns shall have power to purchase or provide for the condemnation of, pay for out of the general fund, enter upon and take any lands, within or without the territorial limits of such city or town, for the following purposes:

1. For parks, commons, cemeteries, crematories or hospital grounds;
2. For establishing, laying off, widening, straightening, narrowing, extending and lighting streets, avenues, highways, alleys, wharfs, landing places, public squares, public grounds, public markets and market places, and public slaughter houses;
3. For any other purposes provided in this title, and in all cases where such purchase or condemnation is now or may hereafter be authorized. [15 G. A., ch. 6; C. '73, §§ 464, 470; R., § 1064.]

Eminent domain: The city does not have the power of eminent domain except as expressly granted by statute: Field v. Des Moines, 39–575.

The purposes here enumerated are the only ones for which the city has power to take private property. It does not have the power of eminent domain except as expressly granted: Ibid, 39–575, 585.

Under the provisions of a city charter authorizing the appointment of commissioners to assess damages for taking private property by a city, held, that the city council could not, after having appointed commissioners for that purpose, set aside the report made by them, and appoint new commissioners to assess the same damages: State ex rel. v. Keokuk, 9–438.

A railway company, lessee of another company under a lease which may be perpetual at the election of the lessee, has such an interest in property owned by the lessor that it should be a party to proceedings to condemn such property for city purposes: Storm Lake v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 62–218.

It is competent for a city to extend a street through the depot grounds of a railroad company, under proceedings for condemnation: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Starkweather, 66 N. W., 87.

The question as to the necessity for the taking of land is to be determined by the municipal corporation and whether or not it has so determined is for the courts; the only question for the jury is the amount of compensation to be allowed: Barrett v. Kemp, 91–296.

The right to purchase or condemn lands for use as a park is here conferred without restriction as to the ability of the city or town to pay therefor. The land owner is not concerned in such ability to pay as he is not required to give credit, and as payment in full must be made, either upon purchase or condemnation. It cannot be said that the city by proceeding to acquire land for park purposes incurs an indebtedness. Therefore, proceedings cannot be held invalid, because the city is indebted to the constitutional limit: In re Cedar Rapids, 85–39. Further as to parks, see § 853.

Use for other purposes: A city has no authority to convey lands or other property for uses not contemplated by law; therefore, held, that a city could not transfer to the county its city hall for courthouse purposes: Brockman v. Creston, 79–587.

The act of 1864, (10 G. A., ch. 127) in so far as it was attempted thereby to confer upon cities and towns the power to sell and convey squares and parks therein, laid off and dedicated by individuals, held void as authorizing a perversion of a trust. Whether the corporation might not be given power to part with whatever interest it possessed in the property, quære: Warren v. Mayor, 22–351. And further, see notes to § 917.

A strip of land 200 feet wide along the Mississippi river retained by the government under a city plat for public use as a highway and for other public uses may be diverted to such other public purposes as a railway and a freight house and a way to reach such freight house without ground of complaint on the part of a lot owner fronting thereon, so long as a reasonable use for the purposes of necessary travel is preserved: Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R Co., 91–470.

SEC. 881. Sewer outlets. Cities shall have the power to acquire real estate within and without their territorial limits necessary for sewer outlets, by purchase or condemnation, as in this chapter provided, and the expense of such acquisition of real estate and outlets shall be paid out of the general fund, or out of the sewer fund of the sewer district of which the same is an outlet. [26 G. A., ch. 8.]

SEC. 882. Purchase at execution sale. They shall have power to acquire real estate, or an interest therein, as a purchaser at an execution sale, when judgment is entered in favor of such city or town, or it is otherwise interested in the proceeding. [18 G. A., ch. 89, § 1.]

SEC. 883. Disposal of lands acquired. They shall have power to dispose of and convey lands unsuitable or insufficient for the purpose for which they were originally acquired, but when such lands are so disposed of enough thereof shall be reserved for streets to accommodate adjoining property owners. Conveyances executed in accordance with this section shall extinguish all the rights and claims of the city or town existing prior thereto. They shall have power also to dispose of the title or interest of such corporation in any real estate, or any lien thereon, or sheriff's certificate therefor, owned or held by it, including any street or portion thereof vacated or discontinued, however acquired or held, in such manner and upon such terms as the council shall direct. [18 G. A., ch. 89, § 1; C. '73, § 470.]

SEC. 884. Proceedings for condemnation. Proceedings for condemnation of land as contemplated in this title shall be in accordance with the provisions relating to taking private property for works of internal improvement, except that the jurors shall have the additional qualification of being freeholders of the city or town. [C. '73, §§ 469, 476–7; R., §§ 1065–6.]

See title X, ch. 4.

SEC. 885. Donation of sites for depots. They shall have power to acquire by purchase or condemnation for the purpose of donating and to donate to any railway company owning a line of railroad in operation or in process of construction in such city or town sufficient land for depot grounds, engine houses and machine shops for the construction and repair of engines, cars and other machinery necessary to the convenient use and operation of said railroad. [19 G. A., ch. 133, § 1.]

SEC. 886. Submission of question. Such donation or appropriation of funds to procure lands therefor can only be made upon a petition to the council, signed by a majority of the resident freehold taxpayers of the city or town, asking the same and fixing the sum which shall be thus appropriated. Upon the presentation of the petition, the council shall call a special election, at which the question of the proposed donation shall be submitted to the voters. The clerk shall prepare the ballots and the election shall be held in the manner provided for in the chapter on elections. If there shall be a two-thirds majority in favor of the donation, the council shall determine the lands to be donated by metes and bounds, the amount to be appropriated for procuring the same, not exceeding the sum named in the petition, and in the name of the city or town may acquire the same by purchase, or by the payment of the estimated damages in case the same or any part thereof shall be taken in the name of the railway corporation under condemnation proceedings as authorized by law; and the council may also vacate and convey all streets and alleys within the boundaries of such site, and prescribe the terms and conditions upon which the grant is made, which shall be binding upon the company accepting it; but land set apart as a public park, square or levee shall not be thus donated, nor shall lands occupied with buildings used for business purposes or private residences be appropriated under the provisions of this section, without the consent of the owner or owners first obtained. [Same, § 2.]

CHAPTER 11.

OF TAXATION.

SECTION 887. General fund. The council of each city or town shall levy a tax for the year then ensuing, for the purpose of defraying its general and incidental expenses, which shall not exceed ten mills on the dollar. [C. '73, §§ 495–6; R., §§ 1123–4.]

The tax authorized by § 3973 to pay judgments may be in addition to the amount here authorized: Rice v. Walker, 44–458.

SEC. 888. City bridge fund. Cities of the first class may annually levy a tax not exceeding three mills on the dollar, to be known as a city bridge fund. [25 G. A., ch. 5, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; C. '73, § 796; R., § 710.]

Tax for county bridge fund is not to be levied within the city: See § 1303.

SEC. 889. Taxing dogs and other animals. The council of any city or town shall have power to levy and collect a tax on dogs and other domestic animals not included in the list of taxable property for state and county purposes. [C. '73, § 499; R., § 1128.]

SEC. 890. Road taxes on agricultural land. All property subject to taxation in any city or town which by law is not subject to taxation for general municipal purposes, and all personal property necessary for the use and cultivation of agricultural or horticultural lands, shall nevertheless be liable to taxation for road purposes, as may be provided by the council, not exceeding the rate of five mills upon the dollar of the assessed valuation thereof, but it shall not be liable for any other city tax. [22 G. A., ch. 46, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 158, § 1.]

The provisions of this section do not authorize taxation for road purposes of property subject to general taxation, in excess of the ten-mill limit here fixed: Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Hamilton County, 73–313.

A city has no power to levy a road tax upon property subject to taxation for general purposes, in excess of the limit of ten mills: Ibid.

Further as to road taxes, see § 1508.

SEC. 891. Labor on highways. Any city or town shall have power to provide that all able-bodied male residents of the corporation between the ages of twenty-one and forty-five years, between the first day of January and the first day of November of each year, either by themselves or satisfactory substitute, shall perform two days' labor of eight hours each upon the streets, avenues, alleys, highways or public grounds within such corporation, at such times and places as the proper officer may direct, upon three days' notice in writing given, or pay in lieu thereof in money a sum to be fixed by such council, not exceeding one and a half dollars for each of such day's labor. For each day's failure to attend and perform the labor, or pay said sum of money, as required, at the time and place specified, unless excused by the supervisor of highways or street commissioner, the delinquent shall forfeit and pay the sum of two dollars, not exceeding four dollars in all. Any person excused shall be again notified to perform such labor or pay said sum of money in lieu thereof, at any time prior to September first of said year. All persons claiming to be exempt from labor under this section shall, within three days after receiving notice to perform such labor, furnish the mayor or other proper officer with an affidavit showing the extent and nature of the disabilities entitling him to such exemption. If he fails to do so he shall be liable to perform such labor or pay the penalty provided herein. [19 G. A., ch. 32; C. '73, § 487.]

SEC. 892. Enforcement of road tax. In case of failure to pay said sum of money in lieu of said labor, together with such forfeit, to the supervisor of highways, street commissioner, or other officer of said corporation authorized to receive the same within ten days from the expiration of the time fixed for the performance of such labor, said corporation may recover the same by action brought in the name of such city or town before the mayor of said corporation, or before any justice of the peace in the proper township. No property or wages belonging to said person shall be exempt to the defendant on an execution issued for said judgment and costs. The tax and forfeit money so collected shall be expended upon the streets, avenues, highways, alleys or public grounds of said corporation. All of such tax and forfeit money remaining unpaid on the first day of September in each year may be certified to the county auditor at any time before the following first day of December, and shall be entered by him upon the tax list of said county, and treated and collected as ordinary county taxes, and shall be a lien on all the real property of the delinquent. [19 G. A., ch. 32; C. '73, § 487.]

SEC. 893. Action. But the entry of such tax and penalty upon the tax list shall not prevent an action being brought therefor as hereinbefore authorized. Such action, however, must be commenced within one year from the first day of October following the giving of notice to perform the labor. In event of judgment being rendered therefor and paid in whole or in part after the same has been certified to the county auditor, the court receiving such payment shall execute duplicate receipts, exclusive of costs, if so requested, and upon filing such receipt or duplicate with the county auditor he shall make the proper entries on the tax lists, showing the full payment of such tax and penalty, or part thereof, as the case may be. [19 G. A., ch. 32; C. '73, § 487.]

SEC. 894. Other taxes. Any city shall have power to levy annually the following special taxes:

1. Grading fund. A tax not exceeding, in any one year, three mills on the dollar, for a grading fund, to be used for the purpose of opening, widening, extending and grading any street, highway, avenue, alley, public ground or market place; [23 G. A., ch. 5, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 160, §§ 2, 3; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 5.]

2. Improvement fund. A tax not exceeding, in any one year, five mills on the dollar, for a city improvement fund, to be used for the purpose of paying the cost of the making, reconstruction or repair of any street improvements at the intersections of streets, highways, avenues or alleys, and at spaces opposite streets, highways, avenues and alleys intersecting but not crossing, and at spaces opposite property owned by the city or the United States, and for the purpose of paying the purchase price and subsequent taxes assessed against property purchased by the city at tax sale; [25 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 12, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 160, §§ 2, 3; 19 G. A., ch. 38, §§ 1, 2.]

3. Sewer fund. A tax not exceeding, in any one year, two mills on the dollar on the assessed valuation of all property therein, for a city sewer fund, when the entire city comprises one sewer district, to be used to pay the cost of the making, reconstruction or repair of any sewer at the intersection of streets, highways, avenues, alleys, and at spaces opposite streets, highways, avenues and alleys intersecting but not crossing, and at spaces opposite property owned by the city or the United States, and to pay the whole or any part of the cost of the making, reconstruction or repair of any sewer within the limits of said city; when a city has been divided into sewer districts, a tax not exceeding two mills on the dollar on the assessed valuation of all property in the sewer district, for a district sewer fund, to be used to pay, in whole or in part, the cost of the making, reconstruction or repair of any sewer located and laid in that particular district; [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 34; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 1.]

Under prior provisions, held, that the limitation of two mills on the dollar applied only where the city was divided into sewage districts and the sewage tax was levied on the property within such districts without regard to its location with reference to the sewer: Dittoe v. Davenport, 74–66.

4. Library tax. In cities having a population of twenty-five thousand or over and towns which have, or may hereafter establish, a free public library, when the trustees of such library have made the certificate provided for in chapter four, of this title, a tax in the amount so certified, but not exceeding in any one year one mill on the dollar in such cities of the first class, and not exceeding two mills on the dollar in cities of the second class and towns, to be used for the maintenance of such library; and in such cities of the first class, an additional tax not exceeding in any one year three mills on the dollar, for the purchase of real estate and the erection of a building or buildings thereon for a public library, or for the payment of interest on any indebtedness incurred for that purpose, and for the creation of a sinking fund for the extinguishment of such indebtedness. In all other cities of the first class which have or may hereafter establish a free public library, a tax not exceeding in any one year one mill on the dollar for the maintenance thereof; [26 G. A., ch. 5; 25 G. A., ch. 43, § 1; 25 G. A., ch. 99, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 18, § 1; C. '73, § 461.]

5. Water works tax. A tax not exceeding, in any one year, five mills on the dollar, which, with the water rates or rents authorized, shall be sufficient to pay the expenses of running, operating and repairing water works owned and operated by any city or town, and the interest on any bonds issued to pay all or any part of the cost of the construction of such works; but such tax shall not be levied upon property which lies wholly without the limits of the benefit and protection of such works, which limits shall be fixed by the council each year before making the levy; [C. '73, § 475.]

6. Tax for gas works or electric plant. A tax not exceeding, in any one year, five mills on the dollar, which, with the rates or rentals authorized, shall be sufficient to pay the expenses of running, operating and repairing gas works and electric light or power plants owned by any city or town, and the interest on any bonds issued to pay all or any part of the cost of the construction of such works or plants; but such tax shall not be levied upon property which lies wholly without the limits of the benefit of the same, which limits shall be fixed by the council each year before making the levy; [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 2; C. '73, § 475.]

7. Water tax. A tax not exceeding, in any one year, five mills on the dollar, for the purpose of paying the amount due or to become due to any individual or company operating water works for water supplied under any contract, the levy to be limited to the property as in subdivision five hereof; and if in cities of the first class the maximum tax is insufficient to pay such amount under contracts now in force, the deficiency shall be paid out of the general fund; [C. '73, § 475.]

Under prior provisions the amount which a city might contract to pay for water supply was not limited to the proceeds of the tax here authorized: Creston Waterworks Co. v. Creston, 70 N. W., 739.

An ordinance fixing the limits of taxation for water purposes to property within two thousand feet of any fire hydrant is not improper as it merely fixes a standard by which benefit and protection are to be furnished and the limits fixed and does not fix the limits: Ibid.

The proviso exempting from water-tax the property outside of the benefit of waterworks is not unconstitutional: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396, 405.

8. Tax for gas or electric light or power. A tax not exceeding, in any one year, five mills on the dollar, for the purpose of paying the amount due or to become due to any individual or company operating gas works or electric light or power plants for all gas, electric light or power supplied under any contract, the levy to be limited to the property as in subdivision six hereof; [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 2; C. '73, § 475.]

9. Bond fund tax. A tax for the purpose of creating a bond fund sufficient to pay the interest to accrue before the next annual levy on funding or refunding bonds outstanding, and such proportion of the principal that at the end of five years the sum raised shall equal at least twenty per cent. of the amount of the bonds issued, at the end of ten years at least forty per cent. of said amount, at the end of fifteen years at least sixty-five per cent. of said amount, and at or before the date of the maturity of said bonds a sum equal to the whole amount of the unpaid principal and interest, which tax shall be used to pay such principal and interest, and for no other purpose; [24 G. A., ch. 14, § 5; 23 G. A., ch. 4, §§ 6, 7; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 5; 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 5.]

10. Tax for water or gas works or electric plant bonds. A tax as authorized in the preceding subdivision, to be levied in the proportions therein set forth, and to be used exclusively in payment of the principal of bonds issued for the construction of water and gas works and electric light and power plants, which tax shall not be levied upon property lying wholly without the limits of the benefit of such works or plants, which limits shall be fixed by the council each year before making the levy; [23 G. A., ch. 13, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 10, § 1.]

11. Cemetery tax. A tax, not exceeding one-half of one mill on the dollar of the assessed valuation of the property within the corporate limits, for the care, preservation and adornment of any cemetery owned or controlled by the city.

SEC. 895. Levy by board of supervisors. The board of supervisors shall, at the time of levying county taxes, levy on all property within the city the tax certified to them by the park commissioners for said city. If such commissioners fail to certify a tax or a sufficient tax for the purpose of paying the interest on bonds issued by the commissioners for park purposes that may be due or will mature within the fiscal year next ensuing, the board of supervisors shall levy such tax as shall be necessary to pay such interest; and if such commissioners each year for fifteen years before the maturity of bonds issued by them, as provided in chapter eight of this title, fail to certify a tax equal to one-fifteenth of the principal of such bonds over and above the amount necessary for the interest on the same, the board shall annually levy such tax as may be equal to one-fifteenth of the principal thereof, which tax shall be set aside by the commissioners in the same manner and for the same purpose as directed in said chapter eight. [24 G. A., ch. 1, § 7.]

SEC. 896. Tax voted for bridges. The board of supervisors of the county in which a city or town is situated shall levy a special tax on the assessable property in such city or town to aid in the construction of highway or combination bridges, when such tax shall have been voted by the city or town under the provisions of the chapter on streets and public grounds. [25 G. A., ch. 19, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 13, §§ 1, 2; 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 3.]

SEC. 897. Surplus of judgment or bond tax. When a tax has been levied by any city or town to pay off a judgment against such municipality, or by any city or town or by the executive council, to pay the principal and interest, or either of them, of funding or refunding bonds issued by such municipality, such tax shall not be held invalid, if the rate of tax levied raises a sum in excess of the amount sought for such specific object, but the excess shall go into the general city or town funds. Money so raised is especially appropriated for such purposes, and constitutes a distinct fund in the hands of the treasurer until the obligation assumed is discharged. [25 G. A., ch. 6, § 1; C. '73, §§ 318, 319; R., §§ 259, 260; C. '51, §§ 123, 124.]

SEC 898. Loans in anticipation of revenue. Loans may be negotiated or warrants issued by any municipal corporation in anticipation of its revenues for the fiscal year in which such loans are negotiated or warrants issued, but the aggregate amount of such loans and warrants shall not exceed the estimated revenue of such corporations for the fund or purpose for which the taxes are to be collected for such fiscal year. [21 G. A., ch. 108; 20 G. A., ch. 79; 16 G. A., ch. 95, § 1; C. '73, § 500; R., § 1129.]

Under prior provisions, held, that the city was not limited, in pledging its revenues, to the taxes of a single year: Coggeshall v. Des Moines, 78-235.

The loans here referred to may be by issuance of negotiable bonds, signed by any officer of the city thereunto authorized by it: German Ins. Co. v. Manning, 78 Fed., 900.

But, held, that the power to borrow money does not authorize the issuance of negotiable bonds in the absence of express authority: Heins v. Lincoln, 71 N. W., 189.

SEC. 899. Highways outside corporate limits—question submitted. When a petition shall be presented to the council of any city or town, signed by one-third of the resident taxpayers thereof, asking that the question of aiding in the construction or repair of any highway leading thereto be submitted to the voters thereof, the council shall immediately give notice of a special election by posting a notice in five public places in said city or town at least ten days before said election, which shall give the time and place of holding the election, the particular highway proposed to be aided, and the proportion of the highway tax then levied and not expended, or next thereafter to be levied, to be appropriated. At this election a proposition for an appropriation of a portion of the highway tax to aid in the construction or repair of the particular highway, and the proportion of such tax proposed to be so appropriated, shall be submitted to the voters of such city or town, and the clerk shall cause the proposition to be printed and placed upon the ballots and the election shall be conducted in the same manner as provided with respect to like or similar propositions in the chapter on elections, and if a majority of the votes polled be for adoption of the proposition, then the council may aid in the construction or repair of said highway to the extent of said appropriation, which shall not exceed fifty per cent. of such tax, in the same manner as they otherwise would were said highway within the corporate limits of said city or town. No part of such tax shall be used or expended more than five miles from the limits of such city or town, and not more than twenty-five per cent. thereof more than two miles from such limits. [18 G. A., ch. 52; C. '73, § 488.]

SEC. 900. Warrants—how drawn. The auditor, clerk, or other officer of cities and towns whose duty it is to draw the warrants thereof, shall not draw any such warrant except upon the vote of the council, and he shall draw no single warrant for an amount in excess of five hundred dollars. Warrants issued by any city or town shall not be received by the county treasurer in payment of the city or town taxes. [22 G. A., ch. 3, §§ 1–3.]

SEC. 901. List of warrants. The officer drawing such warrants shall, on the first Monday of each month, furnish the council a sworn and complete list of all warrants, and the amount thereof, drawn by him during the preceding month, which list shall state on whose account and the object and purpose for which each warrant was drawn. [Same, § 1.]

SEC. 902. Assessments and taxes certified—collection. All assessments and taxes of every kind and nature levied by the council, except as otherwise provided by law, shall be certified by the clerk on or before the first Monday in September, to the county auditor, and by him placed upon the tax list for the current year, and the county treasurer shall collect all assessments and taxes so levied in the same manner as other taxes, and when delinquent they shall draw the same interest and penalties. Sales for such assessments and taxes when delinquent shall be made at the same time and in the same manner as such sales are made for other taxes, and should there be other delinquent taxes or assessments due from the same person, and collectible by the county treasurer, the sale shall be for all such delinquent assessments and taxes, and all the provisions of law relating to the sale of property for delinquent taxes shall be applicable as far as may be to such sales. The county treasurer shall pay over to the treasurer of the municipality all moneys collected by him belonging thereto on the first Monday of each month. [25 G. A., ch. 1, § 2; 24 G. A., ch. 1, § 3; 21 G. A., ch. 13, §2; 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 2; C. '73, §§ 495, 498; R., §§ 1123, 1126.]

Certificate: Omission to certify a tax until after the date here fixed will not render the tax invalid, if it is certified in time to be placed upon the tax list: Taylor v. McFadden, 84-262.

This section does not cover assessments for street improvements; therefore the exemption of land within city limits used for agricultural purposes from taxes for city purposes will not constitute an exemption from liability for special assessments: Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co., 66 N. W., 176.

As to certifying special assessments, see §§ 825–828.

Collection by county: Under this section sales can be made by the county treasurer for city taxes as for other taxes: Morrison v. Hershire, 32–271.

Under a previous statute authorizing cities to sell real and personal property for delinquent taxes, and provide needful rules and regulations for the proper enforcement of their powers as to taxation, held, that such city might provide a penalty for non-payment of taxes, and for the sale of property for such taxes and penalties, and provide further that in redeeming from such sale a penalty be paid, in addition to the amount for which the property was sold: Augustine v. Jennings, 42–198.

Where a city for many years failed to bring forward on its tax books or attempt to collect taxes claimed to be delinquent although the same property was regularly assessed for subsequent taxes which were paid, held, that it would thereby be considered as having abandoned all claim to such tax: Bradley v. Hintrager, 61–337.

Recovery of tax by action: The grant of power to a municipal corporation to levy and collect a tax carries with it all the usual, ordinary and necessary means for the exercise of the power, and while the city may not have the right to collect such taxes by a sale of property, yet the lien may be enforced by an action in equity for that purpose: McInerny v. Reed, 23–410.

Action may be maintained to collect city taxes, although another remedy is provided by law: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38–633; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39–56. Burlington v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 41–134.

Where the charter of a city authorizes it to levy and collect taxes, the city council may, by ordinance, provide for the collection of such taxes by judicial proceedings in the courts, and the fact that by statute subsequent to the charter another method of collection is provided will not take away the right of resorting to legal proceedings: Dubuque v. Harrison, 34–163.

The power given to cities to provide by ordinance for the collection of taxes is cumulative merely, and does not, if adopted, deprive the city of other remedies: Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55–150.

An action for the collection of taxes is subject to the same limitation as any action to recover a debt: Burlington v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 41–134.

In an action to recover taxes, penalties provided by law for non-payment thereof may also be recovered: Ibid.

Vested right: The right of a city to taxes already accrued cannot be released by legislation: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39–56.

SEC. 903. General provisions as to indebtedness and warrants. All the provisions of chapter eleven of title four hereof shall be applicable to cities and towns, their officers and employes, subject only to such modification as may be necessary therefor.

SEC. 904. Diversion of funds. Any councilman or officer of a city or town who shall participate in, advise, consent to, permit or allow any tax or assessment levied by such city or town, or by other lawful authority, for city or town purposes, to be diverted to any purpose other than the one for which it was assessed and levied, except as provided in subdivision seven, section eight hundred and ninety-four, of chapter eleven of this title, or shall in any way become a party to such diversion, shall be guilty of embezzlement. [24 G. A., ch. 14, § 8; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 8; 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 8; 21 G. A., ch. 160, § 4.]

CHAPTER 12.

OF BONDS.

SECTION 905. Funding. Cities and towns may settle, adjust, renew or extend the legal indebtedness they may have, or any part thereof, in the sum of one thousand dollars or upwards, whether evidenced by bonds, warrants or judgments, and may fund or refund the same and issue coupon bonds therefor, but no bonds shall be issued under this section for any other purpose than is above authorized. [26 G. A., chs. 3, 4, 16; 25 G. A., ch. 3; 24 G. A., ch. 14, § 1; 24 G. A., ch. 15, § 1; 23 G. A., ch. 4; 23 G. A., ch. 12; 22 G. A., ch. 17, §§ 1, 4; 21 G. A., ch 78, §§ 1, 4; 16 G. A., ch. 51, § 1.]

A municipal corporation may issue bonds to a judgment creditor in payment of a judgment. Possibly such bonds would be invalid if given in excess of the limitation, even if given for the extinguishment of an antecedent and valid indebtedness; but in an action by the city against a third person who is liable to the city for the indebtedness which it thus attempts to pay, such invalidity of the bonds cannot be set up to show that the city has not been compelled to pay such indebtedness: Sioux City v. Weare, 59–95.

In general as to power to issue bonds, see Heins v. Lincoln, 71 N. W., 189.

SEC. 906. Form. Such bond shall be issued in sums of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars each, running not more than twenty years, bearing interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semiannually, and shall be substantially in the following form, but subject to changes that will conform them to the ordinance (or resolution) of the council, to wit:

The city (or town) of.....in the state of Iowa, for value received promises to pay to bearer.....dollars, lawful money of the United States of America, on....., with interest on said sum from the date hereof until paid at the rate of.....per cent. per annum, payable .....annually on the first day of.....and.....in each year, on presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached; both principal and interest payable at.....

This bond is issued by the city (or town) of....., pursuant to the provisions of section....., chapter....., title....., of the Code of Iowa, and in conformity to an ordinance (or resolution) of the council of said city (or town) duly passed. And it is hereby certified and recited that all acts, conditions and things required by the laws and constitution of the state of Iowa to be done precedent to and in the issue of this bond have been properly done, happened and been performed in regular and due form as required by law, and that the total indebtedness of said city, including this bond, does not exceed the constitutional or statutory limitations.

SEC. 907. Numbered and signed. Said bonds shall be numbered consecutively, signed by the mayor, and attested by the auditor or clerk, as the case may be, with the seal of the city affixed. The interest coupons attached thereto shall be executed in the same manner. [24 G. A., ch. 14, § 3; 23 G. A., ch. 4, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 3; 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 3.]

SEC. 908. Issuance. All bonds issued under the provisions of this chapter shall be issued pursuant to, and in conformity with, a resolution adopted by the council of said city or town, which shall specify the amount authorized to be issued, the purpose for which issued, the rate of interest they shall bear, and whether payable annually or semiannually, the place where the principal and interest shall be payable, and when to become due, and such other provisions, not inconsistent with law, in reference thereto, as the council shall think proper, which resolution shall be entered of record upon the minutes of the proceedings of the council, and a true and complete copy thereof printed on the back of each bond, which resolution shall constitute a contract between the city or town and the purchasers or holders of said bonds. [23 G. A., ch. 4, § 3.]

SEC. 909. Registration. When bonds have been executed as aforesaid, they shall be delivered to the treasurer of the city or town, and his receipt taken therefor, who shall register the same in a book provided for that purpose, which shall show the number of each bond, its date, date of sale, amount, date of maturity, and the name and address of the purchaser, and, if exchanged, what evidences of debt were received therefor, which record shall at all times be open to the inspection of the citizens of said city or town. The treasurer shall thereupon certify upon the back of each bond as follows: "This bond duly and properly registered in my office this ..... day of .....

Treasurer of the city (or town) of ....."

and shall stand charged on his official bond with all bonds so delivered to him, and the proceeds thereof. He shall report under oath to the council of said city or town, at each first regular session thereof in each month, a statement of all such bonds sold or exchanged by him since his last report, and the date of such sale or exchange, and, when exchanged, a description of the indebtedness for which exchanged. [24 G. A., ch. 14, § 3; 23 G. A., ch. 4, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 3; 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 3.]

SEC. 910. Sale. He shall, under a resolution and the direction of the council, sell the bonds for cash on the best available terms, or exchange them on like terms for legal indebtedness of the city or town evidenced by bonds, warrants or judgments outstanding at the date of the passage of the resolution authorizing the issue thereof, and the proceeds shall be applied and exclusively used for the purposes for which said bonds are issued. In no case shall they be sold or exchanged for a less sum than their face value and all interest accrued at the date of sale or exchange. After registration, the treasurer shall deliver said bonds to the purchaser thereof, and, when exchanged for indebtedness of said city or town, he shall at once cancel all warrants or bonds, or secure proper credits therefor on judgments. [24 G. A., ch. 14, § 3; 23 G. A., ch. 4, § 4; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 3; 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 3.]

SEC. 911. Taxes to pay. Cities and towns issuing funding or refunding bonds under this chapter shall levy taxes for the payment of the principal and interest thereof, in accordance with the provisions of the chapter relating to taxation. [24 G. A., ch. 14, § 5; 23 G. A., ch. 4, §§ 6, 7; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 5; 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 5.]

SEC. 912. Certificates or bonds in anticipation of special taxes. Any city may anticipate the collection of taxes authorized to be levied for the grading fund, city improvement fund, district sewer fund, and city sewer fund, and for that purpose may issue certificates or bonds with interest coupons, to be respectively denominated city grading certificates or bonds, city improvement certificates or bonds, district sewer certificates or bonds of the particular sewer district, and city sewer certificates or bonds of said city, and all the provisions of this chapter shall apply to such certificates, bonds and coupons, with such changes only as are necessary to adapt them thereto. Said bonds and interest thereon shall be secured by said assessments and levies, and shall be payable only out of the respective funds hereinbefore named pledged to the payment of the same, and no bonds shall be issued in excess of taxes authorized and levied to secure the payment of the same. It shall be the duty of said city to collect said several funds with interest thereon, and to hold the same separate and apart, in trust, for the payment of said bonds and interest, and to apply the proceeds of said funds pledged for that purpose to the payment of said bonds and interest. [22 G. A., ch. 7, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 34; 19 G. A., ch. 38, §§ 3, 4; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1.]

SEC. 913. Limitation of action questioning legality. No action shall be brought questioning the legality of any of the bonds authorized by this chapter, water works bonds, gas works bonds, or electric light or power plant bonds, from and after three months from the time the same are ordered issued by the proper authority.

CHAPTER 13.

OF PLATS.

SECTION 914. For subdivisions or additions. Every original proprietor of any tract or parcel of land, who has subdivided, or shall hereafter subdivide the same into three or more parts, for the purpose of laying out a town or city, or addition thereto, or part thereof, or suburban lots, shall cause a plat of such subdivisions, with references to known or permanent monuments, to be made, giving the bearing and distance from some corner of a lot or block in said town or city to some corner of the congressional division of which said town, city or addition is a part, which shall accurately describe all the subdivisions thereof, numbering the same by progressive numbers, giving their dimensions by length and breadth, and the breadth and courses of all the streets and alleys established therein. Description of lots or parcels of land in such subdivisions according to the number and designation thereof on said plat, in conveyances or for the purposes of taxation, shall be valid. The duty to file for record a plat as provided herein shall attach as a covenant of warranty, in all conveyances of any part or parcel of such subdivisions, by the original proprietors against any and all assessments, costs and damages paid, lost or incurred by any grantee or person claiming under him, in consequence of the omission on the part of said proprietor to file such plat. [18 G. A., ch. 53, § 3; C. '73, § 559.]

The fact that a plat is invalid does not affect a deed conveying lots according to a description in such plat, to which reference is made in the deed: Young v. Cosgrove, 83-682.

Where certain lots, supposed to constitute a block as laid out in a plat, were conveyed by number with reference to such block, and subsequently another plat was filed, by which such block contained another lot, and also a strip of land not designated by number, held, that the conveyance gave no right to any portion of such strip: Ibid.

SEC. 915. Acknowledgment and recording. Every such plat shall be accompanied by a statement to the effect that the subdivision of (here insert a correct description of the land or parcel subdivided), as appears on this plat, is with the free consent and in accordance with the desire of the proprietor, which shall be signed and acknowledged by him before some officer authorized to take the acknowledgment of deeds. Such proprietor shall also procure from the treasurer of the county in which the land lies, and file with the recorder, a certified statement that the land laid out into lots, streets and alleys is free from taxes, and a certified statement from the recorder that the title in fee is in such proprietor, and that it is free from incumbrance; but if the parcel of land so laid out shall be incumbered with a debt certain in amount, and which the creditor will not accept with accrued interest to the day of proffered payment if it draws interest, or with a rebate of interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum if it draws no interest, or if the creditor cannot be found, then such proprietor, and, if a corporation, its proper officer or agent, may file with the recorder of such county an affidavit, stating either that such proprietor has offered to pay such creditor the full amount of his debt, with interest, or with a rebate of interest, as the case may be, and that he would not accept the same, or that he cannot be found, whereupon such proprietor may execute and file with the recorder a bond in double the amount of such incumbrance, with three sureties who shall be freeholders of the county, to be approved by the recorder and clerk of the district court, which bond shall run to the county, and shall be for the benefit of the purchasers of any lots, and shall be conditioned for the payment of such incumbrance and the cancellation thereof of record as soon as practicable after the same becomes due, and for the holding of all purchasers and those claiming under them forever harmless from such incumbrance. When such affidavit and bond shall have been filed with the recorder, together with the certificate of approval of the council of the city or town in which such land is situated or which is proposed to be made an addition thereto and a certificate of the recorder that said land is free from all incumbrance except as secured by said bond, and that the title in fee is in such proprietor, and that of the treasurer that the land is free from taxes, said plat shall be admitted to record, and be as valid as if such proprietor had filed with the recorder the certificate of such officer that said land was free from all incumbrance. [18 G. A., ch. 53, § 1; C. '73, § 560.]

As the survey establishes the lines of a street, etc., while the plat is but a record of such survey, in case of any conflict the actual survey will govern: Bradstreet v. Dunham, 65–248.

Where there is a disagreement between the survey actually made and the plat, the former must control: Root v. Cincinnati, 87–202; Jordan v. Ferree, 70 N. W., 611.

SEC. 916. Approval by council. All plats of additions to any city or town, or subdivisions of any part or parcels of lands lying within or adjacent to any city or town, shall be divided by streets into blocks, with alleys separating abutting lots, and such blocks, streets and alleys shall conform as nearly as practicable to the size of blocks and the width of streets and alleys in such city or town, and such streets and alleys shall be extensions of the existing system of streets and alleys thereof. All plats of such additions or subdivisions, except subdivisions of less than one block, before being recorded, shall be filed with the clerk of such city or town, and when so filed the council, within a reasonable time, shall consider the same, and, if it is found that such plat conforms to the provisions hereof, the council shall direct the mayor and clerk to certify its resolution of approval, which shall be affixed to the said plat before it shall be received for record by the county recorder.

In general as to the acquisition and control by the city of streets and public grounds, see § 752 and notes.

As to acceptance by city of dedication of streets, see notes to following section.

SEC. 917. Dedication to public. When the statement and plat are accompanied with the certificates, affidavit and bond, when so required, and have been entered on the plat books in the auditor's office, they shall be admitted to record, and not otherwise, and shall be of no validity until so filed for record in the office of the recorder, and such acknowledgment and recording shall be equivalent to a deed in fee simple of such portion of the premises platted as is set apart for streets or other public use, or as is dedicated to charitable, religious or educational purposes. [18 G. A., ch. 53, § 2; C. '73, §§ 560, 561; R., § 1021; C. '51, §§ 561, 637.]

Rights acquired by the city: The title to land dedicated for streets, public squares, etc., is in the city, being in trust for the public, and such property cannot be taken on execution against the city, or for any other than trust purposes: Ransom v. Boal, 29–68.

The acknowledging and recording of a plat vests in the public whatever interest the grantor has, so far as the streets are concerned, but it does not establish the title of the public in the absence of a showing of title in the grantor: Edenville v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 77–69.

The purchaser of city or town property acquires no ownership of or interest in the streets adjoining such property other than that which is given to the whole public, the right of way over them; and he cannot object to the construction of a railroad over such streets on the ground that compensation for the right of way is not made to him: Milburn v. Cedar Rapids, 12–246.

In the cities of Keokuk and Dubuque, which were laid out by the United States, the fee in the streets is in the adjacent property owners, subject to the public use: Haight v. Keokuk, 4–199; Dubuque v. Maloney, 9–450.

There is no substantial difference between the streets in which the legal title is in individuals and those in which it is in the public as to the rights of the public therein. The construction of a permanent freight depot so as to obstruct the street is subversive and repugnant to the dedication, but not the occupation of the streets by tracks, pipes, etc., subject to the reasonable control of the state and city: Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S., 24 (affirming S. C., 4 Dillon, 593).

The fee of the streets is in the city for the use of the general public, not the people of the city alone, and the legislature may authorize them to be used by a railroad company for the construction of its road without the consent of the city and without compensation: Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 24–455.

But a city has no authority to control or grant rights and privileges to, or in, its streets, unless it has so been authorized: Stanley v. Davenport, 54–463; and as to the right of railway companies to construct their tracks upon the streets of cities, see notes to § 767.

The city acquires as against adjoining owners and the original proprietor control over the whole street and not simply over the surface; and it may maintain an action for material, as coal, etc., removed therefrom, whther such material be superficial or subterraneous: Des Moines v. Hall, 24–234.

The nature of the property which a city acquires in its streets is different from that which it may have in real estate, such as it is authorized to acquire for other purposes: Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 24–455.

Rights of adjacent property owners: Although under the provisions as to statutory dedication the owners of lots do not own the fee of the adjacent street, yet they have a peculiar interest in the street, which neither the local nor general public can pretend to claim. This interest is an easement appurtenant to their lots and partakes of the nature of property: Cadle v. Muscatine Western R. Co., 44–11.

Therefore, where a railway company having the right to construct its road over the streets of a city does so in a careless and negligent manner, the adjoining property owners may recover special damages resulting therefrom: Ibid.

Purchasers of lots in the portion platted acquire a right of way over the streets and alleys therein: Yost v. Leonard, 34–9.

Where a party filing a plat reserved therein the right to construct a mill-race across one of the streets, held, that he became bound to erect and maintain a bridge across the race at his own expense: Waterloo v. Union Mill Co., 59–437.

Where the fee in the street is in the adjoining property owner, neither the city nor any individual has a right, against the will or consent of the owner of the adjoining lot, to construct a cistern under the street or sidewalk: Dubuque v. Maloney, 9–450.

An adjacent property owner cannot excavate areas under the sidewalk except with the consent of the city authorities: Davis v. Clinton, 50–585.

Platting of streets: Where a plat shows the dedication of two streets at right angles to each other, the square formed by their intersection will be presumed to be included in the dedication: Yost v. Leonard, 34–9.

Where the question was as to whether a street on a plat showing a dedication for depot grounds was continuous through such depot grounds or was interrupted thereby, held, that the fact that the street had the same name on the two sides of the grounds was not conclusive that it was continuous: State v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 88–508.

To make out a dedication of a street appearing on a plat, it is necessary to show, not only that the plat was laid out, but also that the party laying it out had title thereto: Porter v. Stone, 51–373.

Dedication in a town plat held sufficient, in a particular case, to convey the fee in a street indicated thereon: Stange v. Hill & West Dubuque St. R. Co., 54–669.

Evidence in a particular case, held not sufficient to establish a dedication of a street which was shown by the last of three plats filed, but not by the first two, under which the rights of the parties attached: Manchester v. Hoag, 66–649.

When lots are sold on a plat bounded by a street or highway, that fact raises a strong presumption of the intent to pass the soil to the center of the street or highway, and it will so pass unless the highway be expressly excluded: Dubuque v. Maloney, 9–450.

But this rule is not applicable to land reserved for public use on the opposite side of the highway from the lots thus sold, and the lot purchaser acquires no title to the land thus reserved: Cook v. Burlington, 30–94.

Where the owner of land on both sides of a section line platted the portion on one side, locating a street on such line, held, that the dedication covered the entire width of the street: McDunn v. Des Moines, 34–467.

The existence of a plat, even though defective, and the sale of lots, bounded according to its descriptions, by the persons platting the land, establish the animus dedicandi as to the streets laid out on such plat, which, when shown, is sufficient to establish a way or street, even though there be no record of such plat made in the form prescribed by law: Shea v. Ottumwa, 67–39.

Dedication: A proprietor laying off an addition to an incorporated town or city, though he may grant only the use or easement in the streets, or reserve minerals therein (Dubuque v. Benson, 23–248), cannot confer upon some other public corporation rights in and control over the streets and alleys. Therefore, held, that the entry upon a plat that the proprietors "do hereby convey to Polk county for the use of the public the streets and alleys as marked on this plat, and dedicate the same to the public," was inoperative, and the platting, acknowledgment, recording, etc., being sufficient to constitute a statutory dedication, the fee of the streets vested in the city: Des Moines v. Hall, 24–234.

A grantor filing a plat and procuring the proper certificate thereto cannot afterwards object that it was not in accordance with law and that the requirements of the statute have not been complied with: Scott v. Des Moines, 64–438.

And the grantor, or those claiming under him, cannot defeat a dedication made in such plat, on the ground that it was not recorded at once nor until after the grantor's death: Ibid.

Where a strip of land between a street and a river was not included in the plat, held, that it could not be considered as dedicated to the public: Cowles v. Gray, 14–1.

In order to show a dedication apart from the plat there must be an act of dedication within the prescribed limit of time and an acceptance thereof by the public: Ibid.

Where the plat of a town contained a square designated "public square," and lots were sold on the faith of such plat and afterwards another plat was duly made and recorded changing the designation of the square, with the representation to prior lot purchasers that it was for the public use and control, and the city took possession of the square as public property, held, that the corporation had the title to such square for the use of the public and in trust for it: Pella v. Scholte, 21–463.

Marking a square on the plat as "garden square," held not necessarily to express or imply a dedication to the public: Pella v. Scholte, 24–283.

Where a square was marked upon a plat as "market square," and thereafter treated by the city as public, and was for that reason omitted from taxation, which facts were known to the dedicator and those claiming under him, held, that the circumstances showed an intention to dedicate such square to the public: Scott v. Des Moines 64–438.

Also held, in such case, that the designation of the square as "market square" did not show an intention to impose on the dedication a condition that it be used only for market purposes and that a market building be erected thereon: Ibid.

A dedication of a portion of land covered by a city plat for public purposes, as by marking it "public square," which dedication is accepted by the city, imposes upon the city an obligation to hold the property in trust for the uses and purposes expressed, and the city cannot divert it to another and different use, as by selling it to private owners: Warren v. Mayor of Lyons City, 22–351.

Where a plat contained a square marked "church square," held, that such designation did not constitute a dedication to any particular church association, although but one such association existed at the time in the town: Christian Church v. Scholte, 2–27.

Under the evidence in particular cases, held, that subdivisions of plats marked as "square," or "public square," were dedicated to the public: Livermore v. Maquoketa, 35–358; Bayliss v. Supervisors, 5 Dillon, 549.

Where lots are sold with reference to a town plat, upon which certain land is dedicated to public use, the purchasers acquire, as appurtenant to their purchases, a vested right to the use of the land dedicated to public use, of which they cannot be divested by the owner who made the dedication or by the town in its corporate capacity: Leffler v. Burlington, 18–361.

Where lots were sold in accordance with a plat upon which a certain square was marked "public square," and afterwards "garden square," and with the representation that the square was for the public and was to remain forever an open and unoccupied space, and the value of lots sold was increased thereby, held, that a purchaser could enjoin the grantees of such square from platting lots and erecting buildings thereon: Fisher v. Beard, 40–625.

Where the certificate accompanying the plat referred to public grounds, streets and alleys and the plat showed strips of land through the blocks corresponding to alleys without their being named as such, held, that dedication of such strips as alleys was sufficiently shown: Taraldson v. Lime Springs, 92–187.

Where the general government as owner laid off land into lots, streets, squares, etc., for a city and sold lots according to such plan, held, that the sale and conveyance implied a grant or covenant to the purchasers of the lots that the streets and public squares should forever be open to the public, free from all claims of proprietors inconsistent with such use, but that the dedication did not operate as a grant to the city of the fee in the streets, and that such fee-title passed to the adjoining property-owners, subject to the easement of the public, with the power in the city to regulate the public use of such streets and squares, as the representative of the public, for the purpose of vindicating the public right: Dubuque v. Maloney, 9–450.

Where the county commissioners filed a plat of a town site showing a square marked for a public square and asserted no rights with reference to such square for many years having reserved and used other lots for county buildings and the public square having been under the jurisdiction of the city, held, that the title was in the city and that it and not the county was liable for expenses of street improvements. It is immaterial in such case whether technically the legal title has passed to the city or not: Young v. Mahaska County, 88–681.

Where, by act of congress, certain land in front of a street leading to a navigable river was reserved from sale for public use, with the declaration that it should remain forever free for highways and other purposes; held, that such dedication was in the nature of a contract which could not be afterwards abrogated or repealed, and that the municipal corporation, succeeding to the title of the land thus reserved, held it for the same purposes and could not divert it for other purposes: Cook v. Burlington, 30–94.

Where the owner of land laid out an addition to a city and by the plat donated and granted the "streets, alleys and public grounds, etc., for public purposes," and designated a tract of ground next to the river as "Reserved Landing," held, that the city did not by such donation acquire the right to the property so reserved: Grant v. Davenport, 18–179.

Acceptance of dedication: By accepting a charter making a platted addition to the city limits, held, that the city thereby accepted the addition and the dedication of the streets therein laid out: Des Moines v. Hall, 24-234.

Where, in the plat of an addition to the city, a street was laid out ninety feet in width, but was only opened to a width of sixty feet, fences being erected by lot owners upon the line of the street as thus improved and used, and the strip not used being thus inclosed for twenty-five years, held, that the city could not claim the strip thus inclosed, and that it would be presumed that the city had only accepted the dedication to the extent that the street had been opened: Bell v. Burlington, 68-296.

A city may accept a portion of a street as dedicated and not the balance, and therefore where an abutting owner claimed title to a line which was supposed by him to be the street line and made improvements with reference thereto, occupying for the period of prescription, held, that his title became perfect as against the city although the supposed boundary included a portion of the street as actually platted: Johnson v. Burlington, 63 N. W., 694.

There must be an acceptance of a dedication of lands for public purposes and while slight evidence is sufficient to establish it, yet some showing of acceptance is quite as essential as evidence of the dedication itself: Cambridge v. Cook, 66 N. W., 884.

A city or town may be estopped by reason of adverse possession of land dedicated as an alley for the statutory period from claiming the right to have such alley opened: Ibid.

Action of the city council in adopting the report of a committee recommending an acceptance of streets as dedicated on a plat not yet filed, held not to amount to an acceptance of such streets upon the subsequent filing of such plat: Laughlin v. Washington, 63-652.

Where a plat was filed for record, and the streets as designated thereby remained open to the public for two or three weeks, and were to some extent passed over and used by the public, but were afterwards closed, held, such facts did not constitute an acceptance by the city of the proposed dedication. Mere user will not be sufficient to constitute an acceptance; it must be shown to have been open and notorious, and continued for such a length of time that an acceptance can be presumed: Ibid.

Where a street had been used for a number of years as a public thoroughfare, and the city by ordinance had required such street to be improved and the adjacent land owners to build sidewalks, held, that, though there had been no formal dedication of the street and no acceptance of the same by ordinance, the facts were sufficient to charge the city with liability for neglect to keep it in a safe condition: Byerly v. Anamosa, 79-204.

Where the owner of land dedicates a right of way for a street, and it is by the municipal authorities ordered to be paved, such action amounts to an adoption and recognition of it as a street, and it becomes a public highway: Ford v. North Des Moines, 80-626.

Non-user: The right of the public in the streets and alleys accrues upon the acknowledgment and recording of the plat, and continues until it is either divested by some act of the public authorities, or lost by adverse possession, and it is immaterial as to the rights of the public whether such streets and alleys are improved or not. Therefore, a railway company has no right to fence its track where it crosses streets and alleys thus laid out, although they are not improved and used: Lathrop v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-105.

The occupation by a party dedicating, for ten years thereafter, will not bar the rights of the public, unless it appear that he held under claim of right adverse to the public: McDunn v. Des Moines, 34-467; Livermore v. Maquoketa, 35-358.

Diversion of streets or public grounds: The title to streets is vested in the city for the use of the public, and such use is to be controlled by the legislative power of the state. The city cannot grant the use of the streets for any purpose not thus authorized: Stanley v. Davenport, 54-463.

A city taking public lands which have been already dedicated to public use cannot devote the same to private uses, or convey them to others for such private use; and in an action by an adjoining lot owner having an interest in the preservation of the land for the uses for which it was originally dedicated, the city may be enjoined from making a conveyance thereof: Cook v. Burlington, 30-94.

Purchasers of lots abutting upon land dedicated by the original owner to a public use acquire such rights therein as will enable them to enjoin a diversion of it by the corporation to uses and purposes foreign to and inconsistent with the objects of the grant: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that while the grant of the right of way to a railway might not be inconsistent with the public use of lands reserved to the corporation for public purposes, yet a legal conveyance thereof in fee to a railway company was inconsistent with such use: Ibid.

But it does not follow that abutting owners may maintain an action for an obstruction in the street which does not affect them differently from the public generally: Ingram v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 38-669.

The city takes title to such portions of its territory as are dedicated for public purposes, subject to a trust to hold and use it for the purpose expressed, and cannot dispose it for other purposes: Warren v. Mayor of Lyons, 22-351.

A former statute attempting to confer upon cities and towns the power to sell and convey squares and parks therein laid off and dedicated by individuals, held void as authorizing a perversion of a trust. Whether the corporation might not be given power to part with whatever interest it possessed in the property, quære: Ibid.

As to diversion of public ground held by the city, see also notes to § 880.

Public squares dedicated to a city are held in trust for the public, and cannot be sold on execution to satisfy the debts of the city: Ransom v. Boal, 29–68.

Property dedicated as public grounds may be used for purposes varying according to the circumstances, to be judged by the proper legal authorities, but such property cannot be applied to private purposes: Platt v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74–127.

The fact that the use of a street is interrupted by an improper obstruction will not show an abandonment where the use is such as the public wants at the time require, nor will the city be estopped by virtue of such improper use from asserting its rights in the streets: Waterloo v. Union Mill Co., 72–437.

The statute of limitations will not run to defeat the exercise by a city of its municipal powers in establishing and maintaining a street: Ibid.

Grants dedicated to public use can be used for the purposes expressed in the act of dedication only, and the grantor and even the proprietor of lots abutting may, by injunction, restrain a diversion to any other purpose resulting in an injury to him: Pettingill v. Devin, 35–344.

Reversion: It does not follow that the title reverts to the grantor upon a failure to use the land for the purposes indicated. Such a dedication passes the fee from the grantor without the contingent right of reversion, and any person injuriously affected may prevent the diversion from the purposes designated by injunction: Ibid.

Upon the vacation by the city of a street in the city plat the title of the property covered thereby does not revert to the original owner: Day v. Schroeder, 45–546.

SEC. 918. Vacation by proprietor. Any such plat may be vacated by the proprietor thereof, at any time before the sale of any lots, by a written instrument declaring the same to be vacated, executed, acknowledged and recorded in the same office with the plat to be vacated, and the execution and recording of such writing shall operate to annul the plat so vacated, and to divest all public rights in the streets, alleys and public grounds described therein. In cases where any lots have been sold, the plat may be vacated as in this chapter provided by all the owners of lots joining in the execution of the writing aforesaid. [C. '73, § 563.]

The term "proprietors" as used in this and the following sections indicates the owners of the land and not alone the persons who originally plat the land. Owners who have acquired title from such original proprietors may exercise the powers conferred: McGrew v. Lettsville, 71–150.

The vacation of a plat does not obliterate it so far that it may not be resorted to for the purpose of describing land formerly embraced within it: Chicago Lumber Co. v. Des Moines Driving Park, 65 N. W., 1017.

But where such description was by lots and blocks without reference to the land included in the streets and alleys as platted, held, that such description did not cover the land included in the streets and alleys of such vacated plat: Ibid.

SEC. 919. Part of plat vacated. Any part of a plat may be thus vacated, provided it does not abridge or destroy any right or privilege of any proprietor in said plat, but nothing contained in this section shall authorize the closing or obstruction of highways. When any part of a plat is vacated, the proprietors of the lots may inclose the streets, alleys and public ground adjoining them in equal proportion, except as provided in the next section. The recorder in whose office the plats are recorded shall write across that part of the plat so vacated, the word "vacated," and make a reference on the same to the volume and page in which the instrument is recorded. [C. '73, §§ 564–6.]

The fact that the vacation of a portion of a plat will close streets therein, and thus abridge the number of ways of access to the property of the proprietor of another portion of the plat, will not be ground for objecting to such vacation, if one or more ways are left reasonably convenient, so that no substantial right is abridged: Lorenzen v. Preston, 53–580.

The proper steps having been taken for the vacation of a street, such vacation becomes effective as against the city, subject only to the judicial determination as to whether the rights of private persons are affected. The city council cannot, by subsequently directing such street to be opened, affect the validity of the vacation: Conner v. Iowa City, 66–419.

This section contemplates the case of separate proprietors having distinct and separate interests, and they may vacate part of the town plat. The instrument of vacation, in a particular case, held certain as to the part affected. The authority conferred to vacate a part of the plat does not have the effect to limit the boundaries of an incorporated town and to take that part of which the plat is vacated out of the corporation. It therefore, does not affect the authority of the corporation over the lands covered by the part of the plat vacated. As to streets and alleys that were never opened, such vacation does not destroy any of the rights of any owner of land within the town: McGrew v. Lettsville, 71–150.

SEC. 920. Vacation by lot owners. Whenever the owners of any tract of land which has been platted into town lots, and the plat of which has been recorded, shall desire to vacate the plat or a part thereof, a petition, signed by all the owners of it or the part to be vacated, shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county in which the land is situated, returnable at the ensuing term, and notice thereof given at least four weeks, by posting notices in three conspicuous places in the town where the vacation is prayed, and one upon the door of the court-house of the county. At the term of court next following the filing of the petition and notice, the court shall fix a time for hearing the petition, and notice of the day so fixed shall be given by the clerk in some newspaper published in the county at least one week before the day appointed for the hearing. At the hearing of the petition, if it shall appear that all the owners of lots in the plat or part thereof to be vacated desire the vacation, and there is no valid objection thereto, a decree shall be entered vacating such portion of the plat, and the streets, alleys and avenues therein, and for all purposes of assessment such portion of the town shall be as if it had never been platted into lots; but if any street as laid out on the plat shall be needed for public use, it shall be excepted from the order of vacation and shall remain a public highway. Vacations made under this chapter shall not be construed to affect any lands lying within any city or town which have been dedicated or deeded to the public for parks or other public purposes. [15 G. A., ch. 61, § 1.]

SEC. 921. Replatting. The owner of any lots in a plat vacated may cause the same and a proportionate part of the adjacent streets and public grounds to be replatted and numbered by the county surveyor in the same manner as is required for platting in the first instance, and when such plat is acknowledged by such owner, and is recorded in the recorder's office of the county, such lots may be conveyed and assessed by the numbers given them on such plat. [C. '73, § 567.]

Sec. 922. Plat by auditor. Whenever the original proprietor of any subdivision of land has sold or conveyed any part thereof, or invested the public with any rights therein, and has failed and neglected to execute and file for record a plat as provided in this chapter, the county auditor shall by mail or otherwise notify some or all of such owners, and demand its execution. If such owners, whether so notified or not, fail and neglect for thirty days after the issuance of such notice to execute and file said plat for record, the auditor shall cause one to be made, making any survey necessary therefor. Said plat shall be signed and acknowledged by the auditor, who shall certify that he executed it by reason of the failure of the owners named to do so, and file it for record, and when so filed it shall have the same effect as if executed, acknowledged and recorded by the owners. A correct statement of the costs and expenses of such plat, survey and record, verified by oath, shall be by the auditor laid before the first session of the board of supervisors, which shall allow the same and order them paid out of the county treasury, and he shall at the same time assess the amount pro rata upon the several subdivisions of said tract, lot or parcel so subdivided, and it shall be collected in the same manner as general taxes, and shall go to the general county fund; or said board may direct suit to be brought in the name of the county to recover from the original proprietor such cost and expense. [C. '73, § 568.]

SEC. 923. Platting for assessment and taxation. Whenever a congressional subdivision of land of forty acres or less, or any lot or subdivision, is owned by two or more persons in severalty, and the description of one or more of the different parts or parcels thereof cannot, in the judgment of the county auditor, be made sufficiently certain and accurate for the purposes of assessment and taxation without noting the metes and bounds of the same, he shall cause to be made and recorded a plat of such tract or lot with its several subdivisions in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, proceeding as directed in the preceding section, and all of its provisions shall govern. [C. '73, § 569.]

SEC. 924. Insufficiency of description in deed. Every conveyance of land in this state shall be deemed to be a warranty that the description therein contained is sufficiently definite and accurate to enable the auditor to enter the same on the plat book required to be kept; and when there is presented for entry on the transfer book any conveyance in which the description is not sufficiently definite and accurate, the auditor shall note such fact on the deed, with that of the entry for transfer, and shall notify the person presenting it that the land therein is not sufficiently described, and must be platted within thirty days thereafter. Any person aggrieved by the opinion of the auditor may within said thirty days appeal therefrom to the board of supervisors, by giving notice thereof in writing, and thereupon no further proceeding shall be taken by the auditor. At its next session the board of supervisors shall determine said matter and direct whether the plat shall be executed and filed, and within what time. If the grantor in such conveyance shall neglect for thirty days thereafter to file for record a plat thereof, and of the appropriate congressional subdivision in which the same is found, duly executed and acknowledged as required by the auditor, or, in case of appeal, as directed by the board of supervisors, then the auditor shall proceed as is provided in this chapter, and cause such plat to be made and recorded, and thereupon the same result shall follow as provided in the preceding section. Such plat shall describe said tract and any other subdivisions of the smallest congressional subdivision of which the same is part, numbering them by progressive numbers, setting forth the courses and distances, the number of acres, and such other memoranda as is necessary; and descriptions of such lots or subdivisions according to the number and designation thereon said plat shall be deemed sufficient for all purposes. [C. '73, § 570.]

SEC. 925. Resurvey of town plats. In all cases where the original plat of any city, town or village, or any addition thereto, has been or may be lost or destroyed after the sale and conveyance of any subdivision, block or lot thereof by the original proprietor and before the same shall have been recorded, any three persons owning real property within the limits of such plat may have the same resurveyed and replatted, and such plat recorded as hereinafter directed, but in no case shall such replat be made and recorded without the consent in writing, indorsed thereon, of the original proprietor, if he be alive and his place of residence known. [15 G. A., ch. 54, § 1.]

SEC. 926. How made. The county surveyor of any county in which is situated any city, town, village or addition thereto, as contemplated in this chapter, may, and upon payment of his legal fees by any person desiring the same, must, make a resurvey of such city, town, village or addition, or any portion, and plat thereof, which plat shall conform as near as may be with the original lines of the parcel or tract so resurveyed, and be made in all respects in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. In making a resurvey and plat, the surveyor may summon witnesses, administer oaths, and take and hear evidence touching the original plat lines and subdivisions, whether the original proprietor is dead, and any other matter which may assist in arriving at and establishing the true lines and boundaries; but no resurvey shall be made except upon four weeks' notice to be given by the surveyor by a publication of the contemplated resurvey in some newspaper printed in the county. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 927. Plat certified and filed. When the surveyor has completed the plat, he shall attach his certificate thereto, to the effect that it is a just, true and accurate plat of said city, town, village or addition so surveyed by him; which shall be filed for record in the office of the recorder of the proper county, and from the date of such filing it shall be treated in all courts of this state as though the same had been made by the original proprietor thereof. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 928. Contesting. Any person may at any time within six months from the date of its filing for record commence an action in equity against the persons employing the surveyor, setting up his causes of complaint and asking that such record be canceled. If it appear on the trial that the city, town, village or addition was originally laid out and platted; that the original proprietor had sold any or all of the lots thereof, or that he intended to dedicate to the public the streets, alleys or public squares therein; that the plat thereof has never been recorded, but is lost; that the proprietor is dead or his place of residence unknown; and that the resurvey and plat filed for record is a substantially accurate survey and plat of the original plat of such city, town, village or addition, then the action shall be dismissed at the cost of the complainants, otherwise the court shall set aside said plat and cancel the same of record at the cost of defendants. [Same, §§ 3, 4.]

SEC. 929. Plats legalized. None of the provisions of this chapter shall be construed to require replatting in any case where plats have been made and recorded in pursuance of law; and all plats heretofore filed for record and not subsequently vacated are hereby declared valid, notwithstanding irregularities and omissions in the required statement or plat, or in the manner or form of acknowledgment, or certificates thereof. [C. '73, § 571.]

SEC. 930. Penalty for failure to record. Any person who shall dispose of or offer for sale or lease any lots in any town, or addition to any town or city, until the plat thereof has been acknowledged and recorded as provided in this chapter, shall forfeit and pay fifty dollars for each lot and part of lot sold or disposed of, leased or offered for sale. [C. '73, § 572; R., § 1027.]

As this section only imposes a penalty on the person selling and not on one buying lots, the plat of which is not acknowledged and recorded, the vendee may enforce against the vendor a contract for the sale of such lots, and as to such vendee the contract will not be void: Watrous v. Blair, 32–58. The contract of sale is not illegal; the vendor may recover the consideration of the sale and the vendee may enforce specific performance thereof: Pangborn v. Westlake, 6–546.

SEC. 931. Public squares used for school purposes. The people of any town located wholly within an independent school district, wherein is situated a public square or plat of ground deeded or dedicated to the town or public, may transfer or rededicate to said school district such square or plat for the purposes of a public school lot, to be used for the erection thereon of a public school-house, or for play grounds in connection with such school-house. [21 G. A., ch. 75, § 1.]

SEC. 932. Manner of transfer. When a plat or lot of the character described in the preceding section is located in such town, and one-half of the resident voters thereof, according to the last census, shall petition the mayor and council, asking them to submit to the voters of the town, at a general or special election, the question whether or not such public plat or lot shall be transferred to such independent district and dedicated and used for school purposes, they shall submit the question to the voters of the town, in accordance with the prayer of said petition, after giving ten days' notice in writing or printing thereof, in which the proposition submitted shall be clearly set forth and signed by the mayor, three of which notices shall be posted in public and conspicuous places in the town, and one published in the last two issues preceding such election of a weekly newspaper published therein, or, if there be none, then in the weekly newspaper published elsewhere in the county, having the largest circulation in said town. The notice shall also state the manner of voting, which shall be by ballot. The ballot shall contain the words: "Shall the proposition to transfer lot (or block, or square, as the case may be, describing it), for the purposes of a public school-house lot, be adopted?" Such election shall be conducted as ordinary town elections are, under the supervision of the town authorities, who shall canvass the vote as provided in other cases. If it shall appear that two-thirds of the votes cast at such election are in favor thereof, then such transfer shall be complete, and the lot, block or square may be appropriated and used for the purposes indicated by said vote, and shall be no longer held for any other purpose. [Same, § 2.]

CHAPTER 14.

OF CITIES UNDER SPECIAL CHARTERS.

SECTION 933. General provisions not applicable. The provisions of this chapter shall apply only to cities acting under special charter, and no provisions of this code, nor laws hereafter enacted, relating to the powers, duties, liabilities or obligations of cities or towns, shall in any manner affect, or be construed to affect, cities while acting under special charter, unless the same have special reference or are made applicable to such cities. [16 G. A., ch. 116, § 21.]

General statutes are not applicable to cities under special charter: Bartemeyer v. Rohlf, 71–582; Keokuk v. Dressell, 47–597; Burlington v. Leebrick, 43–252; Burke v. Jeffries, 20–145.

Therefore the mulct law was held not applicable to such cities: Clark v. Riddle, 70 N. W., 207.

The fact that general provisions are made applicable to cities under special charter does not effect a repeal of similar provisions peculiar to such cities: Phillips v. Council Bluffs, 63–576; Arnold v. Council Bluffs, 84–441. Additional powers may thus be granted to such cities: Lytle v. May, 49–224.

[Notes applicable to various sections relating to cities under special charter will be found under sections on the same general subject matter in the preceding chapters relating to cities and towns in general.]

SEC. 934. Powers. Any city organized under special charter shall have and exercise, in addition to the provisions of such special charter, the rights, powers and privileges contained in this chapter.

SEC. 935. Extension of boundary—severance of territory. All the provisions of chapter one of this title in relation to the extension of the boundaries of cities or towns, the annexation of territory thereto, the severance of territory therefrom, are made applicable to cities acting under special charter.

SEC. 936. Elections. All elections held in such cities shall be governed by the general election laws.

SEC. 937. Council. In any such city having a population of twenty thousand or more, as shown by the last state or national census, the council shall consist of a mayor, two aldermen-at-large, and one alderman from each ward. At the first annual city election after the taking effect of this code, there shall be elected two aldermen-at-large, and one alderman from each ward. Thereafter the successors of such aldermen shall be elected biennially. The aldermen in office at the time of taking effect of this code shall continue in office only until the election and qualification of the aldermen herein provided for.

SEC. 938. Marshal—policemen. Cities under special charter shall have power to provide by ordinance for the appointment of a marshal by the mayor, or for his election by the electors thereof, or may dispense with such officer, and confer his duties upon any other officer. All policemen shall be appointed and may be removed by the mayor. [22 G. A., ch. 23, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 24, § 1.]

SEC. 939. Assessors. They shall provide by ordinance for the election of one or more assessors, who shall discharge the duties usually performed by township assessors, so far as applicable, and such as may be required by ordinance. [22 G. A., ch. 27; 21 G. A., ch. 93, § 3; 16 G. A., ch. 90, § 1.]

SEC. 940. Other officers elected—terms. They may provide by ordinance for the election, by the electors, of a marshal, recorder or clerk, treasurer, collector, auditor, attorney, and engineer; and all elective officers hereafter elected shall hold office for the term of two years, and until their successors are elected and qualified, and, when appointed, for such time as may be fixed by ordinance, not exceeding two years. [22 G. A., ch. 27; 21 G. A., ch. 93, § 3.]

SEC. 941. Estimates. Each officer, board or committee shall file in the office of the clerk or recorder, thirty days before the beginning of each fiscal year, a detailed statement of the necessary labor, supplies and materials, and the work to be done by or through his or their department during the next fiscal year, and the estimated cost thereof. [22 G. A., ch. 4, § 2.]

SEC. 942. Appropriations. The council shall make the appropriation for all the different expenditures for each fiscal year at or before the beginning thereof; and it shall be unlawful to issue any warrant, or to enter into any contract or appropriate any money, in excess of the amount thus appropriated, for the different expenses of the city during the year for which said appropriations shall be made. It shall not appropriate, in the aggregate, an amount in excess of its annual legally authorized revenue, but nothing herein shall prevent such cities from anticipating their revenue for the year for which such appropriations are made, or from bonding or refunding their outstanding indebtedness. [22 G. A., ch. 4, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 943. Compensation of aldermen—not to be interested. Aldermen shall be paid an amount prescribed by ordinance, not in excess of three hundred dollars per annum, which shall be in full compensation for all services connected with their official duties. No member of the council shall, during the time for which he has been elected, or for one year thereafter, be appointed to any municipal office which shall be created, or the emoluments of which shall be increased, during the term for which he was elected, nor shall he be interested directly or indirectly in any contract for work or service to be performed for the corporation. [C. '73, § 490; R., § 1122.]

SEC. 944. No change of compensation. The emoluments of any officer shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he shall have been elected or appointed, nor shall any change of compensation affect any officer during his existing term, unless the office be abolished; and no person who shall have resigned or vacated any office shall be eligible to the same during the time for which he was elected or appointed, when, during the same time, the emoluments have been increased. [C. '73, § 491; R., § 1122.]

SEC. 945. Compensation of mayor. The mayor shall receive such salary as may be provided by ordinance, not exceeding one thousand five hundred dollars per annum, and in addition he shall receive for holding a mayor's or police court, or discharging the duties of a justice of the peace, the compensation allowed by law for similar services by such officers, to be paid in the same manner; which amount shall be in full compensation of all such services. [24 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 23 G. A., ch. 16, § 1; C. '73, §§ 519, 547; R., §§ 1091, 1121.]

SEC. 946. Compensation of other officers. Police judges, magistrates, marshals and police officers, in criminal cases under the ordinances, shall receive the fees allowed for similar services in criminal cases under the state law, payable out of the city treasury; and for criminal cases under the state law they shall be paid the same fees that justices and constables receive under the state law, and payable from the county treasury. When such officers are paid a salary, the same shall be in lieu of all fees, and such fees, when collected, shall be paid into the city treasury. They shall make, under oath, a monthly report of such fees to the council. [17 G. A., ch. 56, § 1; 13 G. A., ch. 12; C. '73, §§ 515, 533, 536, 544; R., §§ 1086, 1104, 1107, 1118.]

SEC. 947. Ordinances—fines. Such cities shall have power to make and publish, from time to time, ordinances, not inconsistent with the laws of the state, for carrying into effect or discharging the powers and duties conferred by this chapter, and the charters thereof, and such as are necessary and proper to provide for the safety, preserve the health, promote the prosperity, and improve the morals, order, comfort and convenience of such cities and the inhabitants thereof; and to enforce obedience to such ordinances by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days. [C. '73, § 482; R., §§ 1071-3.]

SEC. 948. Prosecutions. In any prosecution or proceeding for the violation of any ordinance, the defendant shall not be entitled to a trial by jury, or to a change of venue, except on appeal, but shall be tried by the court or magistrate before whom the action is commenced.

SEC. 949. Commitment for fines—execution. Whenever a fine and costs imposed for the violation of any ordinance are not paid, the person convicted may be committed at hard labor until the fine and costs are paid, not to exceed thirty days, and, in addition thereto, such fine and costs may be collected by the issuance of an execution on such judgment against any property of the defendant, which execution shall have the same force and effect and be executed in the same manner as provided by law for the collection of judgments in civil suits by execution; and transcripts of such judgments may be filed in the district court of the proper county as in civil cases, and with the same force and effect, and execution may be issued thereon from such court.

SEC. 950. Limitation of prosecutions. All suits for the recovery of fines, and prosecutions for the commission of offenses made punishable as herein provided, shall be barred in one year after the commission of the offense for which the fine is sought to be recovered or the prosecution is commenced. [C. '73, § 486; R., § 1075.]

SEC. 951. Publication of ordinances. The council may authorize the revision and publication, in book or pamphlet form, of all ordinances, and such publication shall be a sufficient publication, and they shall be in force from and after such publication.

SEC. 952. Ordinances signed and published—general powers. Sections six hundred and eighty-five, six hundred and eighty-six, six hundred and eighty-seven and six hundred and ninety-three of chapter three of this title, and sections six hundred and ninety-five to seven hundred and nineteen, seven hundred and twenty-two to seven hundred and thirty, inclusive, and section seven hundred and thirty-two of chapter four of this title, are hereby made applicable to cities acting under special charter.

SEC. 953. Library tax. The board of library trustees, before the first day of August in each year, shall determine and fix the amount or rate, not exceeding one-half mill on the dollar, in any one year, of the taxable valuation of such city, to be levied, collected and appropriated for the ensuing year for the maintenance of such library, and shall cause the same to be certified to the council, which shall levy the tax with the other taxes for such year. [C. '73, § 461.]

SEC. 954. Evidence of ordinances. The printed copies of the ordinances published by authority, and transcripts thereof, or of any official act or proceeding recorded in any book, or entries on any minutes or journal, and certified by the clerk or recorder, shall be received in evidence for any purpose for which the originals would be received, and with the same effect. The clerk or recorder shall furnish such transcript, and be entitled to charge therefor the same fees as the clerk of the district court for like services. [21 G. A., ch. 93, § 1; C. '73, § 3720; R., § 1076.]

SEC. 955. Water and gas works—electric light and power plants—street railway and telephone franchises. Such cities shall have power to establish, erect, purchase, lease, maintain or operate, within or without the corporate limits, water works, gas works, electric light or electric power plants, with all the necessary reservoirs, mains, filters, streams, trenches, pipes, drains, poles, wires, burners, machinery, apparatus, and other requisites of said works or plants; but no such works or plants shall be thus established, erected, purchased or leased unless a majority of the electors voting on such proposition shall vote in favor of the same, at a general or special election. They may also grant individuals or private corporations the authority to erect, maintain or purchase such works or plants, or railways, street railways or telephone systems, for the term of not more than twenty-five years, and may renew or extend the term of such grants for a period not exceeding twenty-five years; but no exclusive franchise shall be thus granted, extended or renewed, and no franchise shall be granted or authorized, until after notice of the application therefor has been published once each week for four consecutive weeks in some newspaper published in such city. [23 G. A., ch. 11, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 11, §§ 1, 2; 22 G. A., ch. 26; 14 G. A., ch. 78, §§ 2–5; C. '73, § 471.]

SEC. 956. Question submitted. The council may order any of the questions, including the granting to individuals or corporations authority to erect, maintain or purchase water or gas works, electric light or power plants, or street railway or telephone systems, provided in the preceding section, submitted to a vote at a general election, or at one specially called for that purpose; or the mayor shall submit said question to such vote upon the petition of twenty-five property owners of each ward in the city. Notice of such election shall be given in two newspapers published in said city, if there are two, if not, then in one, once each week for at least four consecutive weeks. The party asking for a renewal or extension of such franchise shall pay the cost incurred in holding such election. [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 4.]

SEC. 957. Infirmary—outdoor relief—bath-houses. The council shall have power, by two-thirds vote of the whole council, to establish and maintain, either within or without the limits of the city, an infirmary for the accommodation of the poor of the city, and to provide for the distribution of outdoor relief, and a public bath-house or natatorium when declared by the board of health of such city to be essential to the preservation of the public health, and to regulate by ordinance the use of such baths and the conduct and maintenance of the same. The appropriation for the construction and maintenance of such bath-house or natatorium shall be paid from the general current revenues of said city not appropriated to other purposes. [C. '73, § 538; R., § 1111.]

SEC. 958. Other general powers. Sections seven hundred and thirty-four to seven hundred and forty-one, inclusive, of chapter four; chapter five; and sections seven hundred and fifty-one to seven hundred and seventy-four, and seven hundred and seventy-seven to seven hundred and ninety-one, inclusive, chapter six, of this title are made applicable to cities acting under special charter.

SEC. 959. Regulation of electric wires. Such cities shall have power to regulate telegraph, district telegraph, telephone, street car, electric light and power poles, subways and wires, and provide the manner in which and the places where the same shall be placed, including the right to construct subways under and erect poles upon and along the streets, alleys and public places; to compel companies having wires on the same street or alley to use the same poles or subways upon reasonable terms; to regulate the installations and connections of electric light or power wires and apparatus in public or private buildings, and forbid the use of such wires and apparatus for the use or transmissions of electric current until the same have been inspected and such installation approved by a competent electrician appointed by such city; and to fix the compensation or fees for such inspection and approval. [22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1.]

SEC. 960. Changing water courses. They shall have power to deepen, widen, straighten, wall, fill, cover, alter or change the channel of any water course or part thereof flowing through the city; to construct artificial channels or covered drains sufficient to carry the water flowing in such water course, and divert it from the natural channel, and conduct the same through such artificial channels or covered drains, and fill old channels; and in doing such work, or in carrying off flowing water, or building main or lateral sewers through ravines or hollows, they shall have the right to pass through private property and condemn the same for such purposes; and the cost of such work, including the cost of the land condemned, shall be paid for as provided herein for the payment of the cost of constructing sewers. [24 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 23 G. A., ch. 6, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 3; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 2.]

SEC. 961. Condemning property for. They may condemn and appropriate so much private property as shall be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this chapter relating to the change of water courses, the construction of sewers and of artificial channels in the manner provided for condemning land for city purposes. [23 G. A., ch. 6, § 10.]

SEC. 962. Street improvements. Sections seven hundred and ninety-two, seven hundred and ninety-three, seven hundred and ninety-four, seven hundred and ninety-six and eight hundred and nine of chapter seven of this title are made applicable to cities acting under special charter.

SEC. 963. Assessing cost of new channel for water course. If a covered drain or new channel of a water course shall be constructed along any street or alley, and used by the city as a sanitary or storm water way, the council shall have the power to assess upon the lots or land adjacent to the line of such covered drain or new channel the whole or a portion of the cost thereof, not exceeding the sum of two dollars per linear foot, in the manner provided for the assessment of the cost of sewers. [23 G. A., ch. 6, § 13.]

SEC. 964. Railways and street railways to maintain culverts and drains. Such cities shall have power to order any railway or street railway to construct and maintain, under the direction and subject to the approval of the city engineer, culverts and drains across its right of way on any street, alley, highway or other public place as such council may deem necessary, and if any railway or street railway company neglect or refuse, for more than thirty days after such notice as may be prescribed by resolution, to comply with the requirements of any such order, the city may construct such culvert or drain and recover the cost thereof from such company.

SEC. 965. Street improvements and sewers. Before the council orders any street improved or sewer constructed, it shall direct the engineer to prepare a plat, showing the location and general nature of the improvement, the extent thereof, the kind, or, in case of sewers, the size and kind of material to be used, and an estimate of the cost thereof, and the amount assessable upon any railway or street railway and upon each lot or parcel of land adjacent to or abutting on such improvement per front foot or square foot in area, and file such plat and estimate in the office of the clerk or recorder. Notice of its intention to make such improvement shall be published by the city clerk or recorder in three consecutive issues of a newspaper of such city, stating that such plat is on file, and, generally, the nature of the improvement, its location, kind of material to be used, and the estimate of its cost, and fixing the time before which objections thereto can be filed, which time shall be not less than five days after the last publication of such notice. The council, after considering such objections, shall determine what changes, if any, shall be made in the plan shown by such plat, and may, by resolution, order such improvement, prescribing generally the extent of the work, the kind, and, in case of sewers, the size and kind, of the materials to be used, when the work shall be completed, the terms of payment, and provide for the publication of notice asking proposals for doing such work, and the time the same will be acted upon. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 19, 20; 22 G. A., ch. 6, §§ 2, 3; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 21.]

SEC. 966. Other provisions as to street improvements and sewers applicable. Sections eight hundred and twelve, eight hundred and thirteen, eight hundred and fifteen, eight hundred and nineteen, eight hundred and twenty, eight hundred and twenty-one, eight hundred and twenty-two and eight hundred and twenty-four, chapter seven, of this title, are made applicable to cities acting under special charter.

SEC. 967. Cost at street intersections. The cost of any street improvement or sewer at the intersection of streets, and half the cost of the same at spaces opposite streets intersecting but not crossing and at spaces opposite property owned by the city or state or any part thereof, may be paid, in case of sewers, from the city sewer or district sewer fund or general fund, or assessed against the property abutting or adjacent thereto; and, in case of street improvements, from the city improvement or general fund, or assessed against the property abutting or adjacent thereto, except that part to be constructed by, paid for, or assessed to railways and street railways. [26 G. A., ch. 9; 25 G. A., ch. 7, § 10; 25 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 12; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 10; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 3, 5.]

SEC. 968. Abutting and adjacent property defined. The terms "abutting or adjacent property" and "property abutting on," as used in this chapter, shall be held to include the easement and right of way of any railway company located along any street or on lands abutting on or adjacent thereto, in all cases where no property of any person, firm or corporation, except a municipal corporation, intervenes between such easement or right of way and the traveled portion of such street or highway.

SEC. 969. Cost of opening and grading. The cost of opening, widening, extending or grading any street or market place shall be paid from the grading fund. The cost of making or reconstructing any street improvement, not ordered to be paid from the city improvement or grading fund, or by any railway or street railway, shall be assessed as a special tax against the property abutting thereon, in proportion to the linear front feet thereof. The term "street," wherever used in this chapter, shall be held to include avenue, highway, alley and public ground. [15 G. A., ch. 6; 14 G. A., ch. 45, § 1; 13 G. A., ch. 65; C. '73, §§ 464–5.]

SEC. 970. Road districts—cost at intersections. The council shall divide the city into not less than three road districts, or may make each ward a separate road district, for the purpose of cleaning, sprinkling and repairing the streets, or for any of said purposes, and provide for the manner of doing the same, and for the payment of the cost thereof out of the district road fund, and shall determine the amount necessary for such purposes in each district, and make appropriations therefor at the time and in the manner in this chapter provided for making appropriations for other purposes; but the cost of making, reconstructing and repairing streets at the intersection of streets, and one-half of the space opposite streets intersecting and not crossing, and opposite city property in any district, shall be paid from the city improvement fund. [26 G. A., ch. 10.]

SEC. 971. Notice and levy of special assessments. After filing the plat and schedule referred to in section eight hundred and twenty, chapter seven, of this title, the council shall direct the clerk or recorder to give ten days' notice, by publishing same three times in a newspaper published in said city, that such plat and schedule are on file in the office of the clerk, fixing a time within which all objections thereto or to the prior proceedings must be made in writing; and the council, having heard the objections and made necessary corrections, shall levy the special assessment as shown in such plat and schedule. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 11, 18; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 5; 21 G. A., ch. 168, §§ 11, 19.]

SEC. 972. Payment. The special assessments made in said plat and schedule, as corrected and approved, shall be levied at one time, by resolution, against the property abutting upon or adjacent to such street or sewer, and, when levied and certified, shall be payable as ordinary city taxes. If the owner of any lot or parcel of land or railroad or street railway, the assessment against which is embraced in any bond or certificate provided for in chapter eight, of this title, shall, within thirty days from the date of such assessment, promise and agree in writing, indorsed on such bond or certificate, or in a separate agreement, that, in consideration of having the right to pay his assessment in installments, he will not make any objections of illegality or irregularity, or to the assessment or levy of such tax upon and against his property, and will pay said assessment, with interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, as shall by ordinance or resolution of the council be prescribed, then such tax so levied against the lot or parcel of land or railroad or street railway shall be payable in not less than five nor more than ten equal installments, the first of which may become due and payable, with interest on the whole amount, at a time fixed in the year in which the levy is made, or in the following year, and the other installments shall be due and payable, with interest on the whole amount unpaid, at intervals of one or two years, as fixed by the resolution making the levy, and all of such installments, with interest, shall mature in ten years or less from the time fixed for the payment of the first installment; but where no such agreement is made, then the whole of such assessment so levied shall mature at one time, and be due and payable, with interest from the date of such levy, as hereinafter provided. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 11, 20; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 12; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 3, 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 3.]

SEC. 973. Collection. Such assessments shall be duly entered on the tax books of the city, and shall be then due and payable at the office of the collector, or other officer authorized to collect city taxes, and shall be collected, like other special taxes, as provided by ordinance.

SEC. 974. Interest. Such assessment shall bear interest from the date of levy at six per cent. per annum. Interest on the whole assessment unpaid shall become due and payable at the time fixed by resolution or ordinance for the payment of each installment. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 12; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 3, 5, 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 3.]

SEC. 975. When delinquent—lien. Such assessment, and each installment with the interest thereon, shall be paid with accrued costs, at the office of the collector or treasurer, by the owner of the property upon which it is levied, at or before the time said property is sold for taxes or interest or both, and each installment and all interest due and unpaid shall become delinquent at the time fixed by ordinance or resolution, and shall bear such interest from the time of becoming delinquent, as ordinary taxes. All special assessments shall be a lien upon the property against which the same are assessed, from the date of the resolution of the council ordering the construction or reconstruction of the street improvement, or sewer or other improvement, or work for which the assessment and levy are made, and shall be prior and superior to all other liens except ordinary taxes, and shall not be divested by any judicial sale of the property. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 12; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 5, 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 3; 14 G. A., ch. 45, § 6; 13 G. A., ch. 14; 12 G. A., ch. 111; C.'73, §§ 478, 481; R., § 1068.]

SEC. 976. Sale for. Property against which any special assessment has been levied for street improvements or sewers may be sold for any part of the principal or interest, due and delinquent, at any regular, adjourned or special tax sale, in the same manner and under the same forfeiture, penalty and right of redemption; and certificates and deeds of such sale shall be made in the same manner and with like effect as in sales of property for non-payment of ordinary taxes, at which sale the city may be a purchaser, and be entitled to all the rights of purchasers at tax sales, with the right to sell and dispose of the same by the council. The purchaser at any such tax sale shall have the same rights as purchasers at ordinary tax sales, but shall take the property charged with the lien of the remaining unpaid installments and interest. [23 G. A., ch. 6, § 7; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 12; 20 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 3, 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 3; 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 3.]

SEC. 977. Street improvement fund. When the whole or any part of the cost of the making or reconstruction of any street improvement shall be ordered paid from the city improvement or grading fund, it shall have power, after the completion of the work, by resolution, to levy at one time the whole or any part of the cost of said improvement upon all the taxable property within such city, and determine the whole percentage of taxes necessary to pay the same, and the percentage to be paid each year, not exceeding the maximum annual limit of said taxes, and the number of years, not exceeding ten, given for the maturity of each installment thereof; but no part of such cost shall be levied against any property owned by the city, county or state. Certificates of such levies shall be filed with the collector or treasurer, setting forth the amount, percentage and maturity of said taxes and each installment thereof upon the assessed valuation of all the property in the city, certified as correct by the clerk or recorder, and thereupon said taxes shall be placed on the tax books and collected, as provided for the collection of other special taxes. [25 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 12, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 160, § 3; 19 G. A., ch. 38, § 2.]

SEC. 978. Sewer fund. When the whole or any part of the cost of the making or reconstruction of any sewer shall be ordered paid from the district or city sewer fund, the council may, after the completion, by resolution, levy at one time the whole or any part of the cost of such sewer upon all taxable real property within such sewer district or within the city, and determine the whole percentage of taxes necessary to pay the same, and the percentage to be paid each year, not exceeding the maximum annual limit of said taxes, and the number of years, not exceeding ten, given for the maturity of each installment; but no part of such cost shall be levied against the property owned by the city, county or state. Certificates of such levies shall be filed with the collector or treasurer, setting forth the amount or percentage and maturity of said taxes and each installment thereof, with a sufficient description of the boundaries of the particular sewer district, and of the real property of the sewer district or city upon which taxes are levied, duly certified as correct by the clerk or recorder, and thereupon said taxes shall be placed on the tax books of the city and collected, as provided for the collection of other special taxes. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 11; 21 G. A., ch. 34; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 1.]

SEC. 979. Other provisions as to special assessments. Sections eight hundred and twenty-eight, eight hundred and thirty-two, eight hundred and thirty-three, eight hundred and thirty-four and eight hundred and thirty-five, chapter seven, of this title, are made applicable to cities under special charter.

SEC. 980. Relevy. When, by reason of nonconformity to any law or ordinance, or by reason of any omission, informality or irregularity, any special tax or assessment is invalid, or is adjudged irregular, the council shall have power to correct the same by resolution or ordinance, including the reordering of the work, and the preliminary notice, and may reassess and relevy the same with the same effect and force as if done at the proper time, and in the manner provided by law or by resolution or ordinance relating thereto; and when so corrected it shall be a lien upon the property from the same time and in the same manner and to the same extent as if the original assessment and levy had been in all respects legal. [22 G. A., ch. 6, § 7; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3; 20 G. A., ch. 44, § 1.]

SEC. 981. Correction. When, in making any special assessment, any property is assessed too high or too low, the same may be corrected and a reassessment and relevy made, and any taxes collected in excess of the proper amount shall be refunded. The corrected assessment shall be a lien on the lots and parcels of land the same as the original, and shall be certified by the clerk or recorder to the collector or treasurer in the same manner, and, so far as possible, be collected in the same installments, draw interest at the same rates, be enforced in the same manner as the original assessments. Any provisions of law, resolution or ordinance, specifying a time when or order in which acts shall be done in the proceedings which may result in any special assessment, shall be taken to be subject to the qualification of this and the preceding section. [22 G. A., ch. 44, §§ 2, 3; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3; 20 G. A., ch. 44, § 1.]

SEC. 982. Further provisions as to special assessments. All special assessments, where no other provision is made, shall be levied by the council, and a copy filed with the clerk or recorder, and entered upon the tax book of the collector or treasurer, and be a lien upon the property against which the same is assessed from the date of the levy of such assessment, and shall be prior to all other liens except ordinary taxes, and shall not be divested by any judicial or tax sale. The lien of different special assessments shall take priority in the order of their levy. Special assessments shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the date of the levy, unless otherwise provided, and shall become delinquent thirty days after the levy, and be collected in the same manner, and, when delinquent, they shall bear the same interest, with the same penalties, as ordinary taxes. [14 G. A., ch. 45, § 6; 13 G. A., ch. 14; 12 G. A., ch. 111; C. '73, §§ 478, 481; R., § 1068.]

SEC. 983. Sale for. The property upon which any special assessment is a lien, where not otherwise provided, shall be sold for delinquent assessments and interest in the same manner, and with the same force and effect, as property sold for ordinary delinquent city taxes; and tax sale certificates, certificates of redemption from tax sales, and tax deeds, shall be made in the same way and with the same force and effect as in sales for ordinary taxes. [16 G. A., ch. 116, § 3.]

SEC. 984. Personal debt—action to enforce. All special assessments shall be a debt due personally from the owner of the property against which the same are levied. Such assessments, and each installment thereof, and certificates issued therefor, when due, may be collected in the district or superior court by action at law in the name of the city against such owner, or the lien thereof enforced against the real estate against which the same has been levied, by action in equity, at the election of the plaintiff; and in any action at law where pleadings are required, it shall be sufficient to declare generally for work and labor done or materials furnished on the particular street; and in any action in equity it shall be sufficient to aver the same matters, together with a particular description of the property, or parts thereof, against which such lien is sought to be enforced. [14 G. A., ch. 45, § 6; 12 G. A., ch. 111; C. '73, § 478; R., § 1068.]

SEC. 985. Proceedings. Such action may be brought against any or all of the owners of such property or land, but may be severed, in the discretion of the court, for the purpose of trial, review or appeal, and the judgment or decree shall be rendered separately for the amount properly charged against each. Such action may be maintained in the name of the city or town, for the use of any person entitled thereto or any part thereof, upon filing a bond, approved by the clerk of the court, conditioned to pay all costs adjudged against the city, and to protect it from all liability therefrom or damages growing out of the same, in an amount to be fixed by the court or a judge thereof.

SEC. 986. Judgment. The judgment or decree shall be rendered for all work done and material furnished, properly chargeable upon the property, or any part thereof, notwithstanding any informality, irregularity, defect or omission on the part of the city or its officers. [12 G. A., ch. 111; C. '73, § 479; R, § 1069.]

SEC. 987. Street improvement or sewer bonds or certificates. For the purpose of providing for the payment of the assessed cost of any street improvement or sewer which has been, or is to be, assessed upon the property abutting thereon or adjacent thereto, including railways or street railways liable for the payment thereof, the council is authorized from time to time, as the work progresses or is completed, to make requisition on the mayor for the issuance of bonds or certificates, as herein provided, in such denominations as shall be deemed best, in anticipation of the deferred payment of the taxes, levied or to be levied for such improvement. It shall be the duty of the mayor to make and execute bonds or certificates accordingly, to an amount not exceeding the cost and expense of such improvement to be actually assessed on the property liable for the payment of the same. The bonds shall bear the name of the street, place or district improved, or in which any sewer is constructed, which street or place shall be particularly described in the resolution authorizing such issue, and such bonds shall be signed by the mayor, countersigned by the clerk or recorder, and sealed with the corporation seal, and shall bear the same date and be payable at the time fixed in said resolution, and be redeemable at any time at the option of the city, and shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable semiannually. The bonds shall be substantially in the following form:

It shall be the duty of the city, its council and officers, to comply with the requirements of this chapter in the issuance of said bonds or certificates, and to assess and levy upon the property liable therefor the cost and expenses of such improvement or improvements, and to collect the same, and to apply the proceeds to the redemption of such bonds and certificates, and to no other purpose; and they shall be payable only out of the fund derived from such assessment. The city shall not be obliged to appropriate money from any other fund to the payment of such bonds or certificates or any part of the same. [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 6; 25 G. A., ch. 9, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 4; 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 6; 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 10; C. '73, §§ 846, 864.]

SEC. 988. Appropriation of proceeds. No money received from the sale of street improvement or sewer bonds or certificates shall be paid out except upon the resolution of the council ordering the same, and no resolution for the delivery of any bonds or certificates shall be made until the certificate of the engineer, or other person selected therefor, has been filed, showing that work has been done or material furnished to the amount of such order. [25 G. A., ch. 7, §§ 6, 14; 25 G. A., ch. 9, §§ 1, 4; 21 G. A. ch. 168, § 9.]

SEC. 989. Limitation of action questioning. No action shall be brought, questioning the legality of any street improvement or sewer certificates or bonds, from and after three months from the time the issuance of such certificates or bonds is ordered by the proper authority.

SEC. 990. Other provisions as to such bonds and certificates. Sections eight hundred and forty-one, eight hundred and forty-four, eight hundred and forty-five, eight hundred and forty-seven, eight hundred and forty-eight and eight hundred and forty-nine, chapter eight, of this title, are made applicable to cities acting under special charter.

SEC. 991. Park commissioners. Such cities may provide by ordinance for the election of three park commissioners and their compensation, and the terms thereof shall be three, four and five years, respectively, and their successors shall be elected for the full term of five years, and such park commissioners shall reside in the city. The commissioners shall have exclusive control of all city parks, and shall manage, improve and supervise the same. [20 G. A., ch. 151, §§ 1, 2.]

SEC. 992. Park tax. The council may, by resolution, submit to the electors of such city, at a regular or special election, the question whether there shall be levied upon the assessable property thereof a tax, not exceeding two mills on the dollar, for the purpose of purchasing real estate for parks and the improvement of parks, or for either or both. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 993. Parks used for library building. Such cities shall have power to use any public park, square or plat of ground located within their corporate limits for erecting thereon a free public library building or buildings. [26 G. A., ch. 51.]

SEC. 994. Park fund. The council shall, in the resolution ordering such election, specify the rate of taxation proposed, and the number of years the same shall be levied, and, if a majority of the votes cast on such question shall be in favor of such taxation, the council shall levy the tax so authorized, which shall be collected and paid over to the treasurer, and shall be known as the "park fund," and shall be paid out on the order of the commissioners, and expended only for the purposes herein provided. [20 G. A., ch. 151, § 4.]

SEC. 995. Powers and duties of commissioners. The commissioners may use such fund for improving the parks, for purchasing additional grounds, or laying out and improving avenues leading thereto, and do all things necessary to preserve such parks; and they may appoint one or more park policemen and pay such police force out of said fund. They shall keep an account of their disbursements, and orders drawn on said fund shall be signed by at least two of the commissioners. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 996. Bond. They shall each give a bond to the city in the sum of five thousand dollars before they shall be permitted to enter upon their duties, which shall be approved by the council, and be retained in the office of the clerk or recorder. [Same, § 6.]

SEC. 997. Protection of parks. It shall be deemed a misdemeanor for any person to cut, break or deface any tree or shrub growing in any such park, or street leading thereto. [Same, § 7.]

SEC. 998. Board of public works. Such cities shall have power to establish a board of public works, consisting of not more than three members. The members of the board shall consist of one commissioner appointed by the mayor with the approval of the council; when the board consists of two members, the associate member shall be the city engineer; when the board consists of three members, the associate members shall be the city engineer and street commissioner, and shall be appointed for such length of time, possess such qualifications, receive such compensation, be removed for such causes, possess such powers, perform such duties, be governed by such rules and regulations, as may be prescribed by ordinance. [24 G. A., ch. 4.]

SEC. 999. Condemnation of land. They shall have power to purchase and provide for the condemnation of, and pay for out of the general or grading fund, or assess and levy the whole or part of the cost thereof upon the property benefited thereby, and enter upon and take any lands within or without the territorial limits of such city, for the following purposes:

1. For parks, commons, cemeteries, crematories, hospital grounds, natatoriums or public baths;

Provisions found in the charters of cities organized under special charter with reference to condemning lands for parks, held to continue in force, although the provisions of the general law with reference to the same matter were made specially applicable to such cities: Arnold v. Council Bluffs, 84–441.

2. For establishing, laying out, widening, straightening, narrowing, extending and lighting streets, avenues, highways, alleys, landing places, public squares, public grounds, public markets or market places and public slaughter houses;

3. For any other purpose, where such purchase or condemnation is herein, or in the charters of such cities, or may hereafter be, authorized. [15 G. A., ch. 6; 13 G. A., ch. 80; 10 G. A., ch. 127; C. '73, §§ 464, 470; R., § 1064.]

SEC. 1000. Purchase of real estate on execution. They shall have power to acquire real estate, or any interest therein, as a purchaser at an execution sale, when judgment is entered in favor of the city, or when it has a lien thereon, or is otherwise interested therein. [18 G. A., ch. 89, § 1.]

SEC. 1001. Conveyance of land. They shall have power, by a three-fourths vote of all members of the council, to dispose of and convey lands unsuitable, insufficient or unnecessary for the purposes for which they were originally acquired; but when such lands are disposed of, enough shall be reserved for streets to accommodate adjacent property owners; and to dispose of the title or interest of such city in any real estate, or any lien thereon, or share or certificate therefor, owned or held by it, including any street or portion thereof vacated or discontinued, however acquired or held, upon such terms as the council shall direct. Conveyance executed in accordance with this section shall extinguish all the rights and claims of the city existing prior thereto. [13 G. A., ch. 80; 10 G. A., ch. 127; C. '73, § 470.]

SEC. 1002. Proceedings to condemn. Proceedings for condemnation of land as contemplated in this chapter shall be in accordance with the provisions of this code relating to taking private property for works of internal improvement, except that the jurors shall have the additional qualification of being freeholders of the city, or as provided in the charters of said cities. [14 G. A., ch. 40; 13 G. A., ch. 80; C. '73, §§ 469, 476, 477; R., §§ 1065–6.]

SEC. 1003. Taxes—levy of. The council shall levy a tax for the year then ensuing for the purpose of defraying its general or incidental expenses, which shall not exceed eight mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation of all taxable property in the city, but the aggregate of such levy, together with all levies for special purposes as hereinafter authorized, shall not exceed in any city in any one year sixteen mills, and in cities having a population of over twenty thousand as shown by the last state census, not exceeding twelve mills on the dollar, excluding city and district sewer tax, road district tax, and any tax levied to pay the principal or interest on any bonds issued by such city, or tax levied to pay judgments, or taxes authorized by vote of the people for library, park or bridge purposes.

SEC. 1004. Other provisions as to levying taxes. Sections eight hundred and eighty-eight, eight hundred and eighty-nine, eight hundred and ninety, eight hundred and ninety-one, eight hundred and ninety-two and eight hundred and ninety-three, of chapter eleven, of this title are made applicable to cities under special charter, except that the words "city treasurer" or "collector," and "city" shall be substituted for "county auditor" or "county," wherever the same appear in said sections.

SEC. 1005. Special taxes. They shall have power to levy annually the following taxes for special purposes:

1. Grading fund. A tax not exceeding three mills on the dollar for a grading fund, to be used for the purpose of opening, widening, extending or grading any street, public ground or market place; [23 G. A., ch. 5, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 160, §§ 2, 3; 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 5.]

2. Improvement fund. A tax not exceeding three mills on the dollar for the city improvement fund, to be used for the purpose of paying the cost of the making, reconstruction and repair of any street improvement at the intersection of streets, and spaces opposite streets intersecting but not crossing, and the spaces opposite property owned by the city or state; [25 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 12, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 160, §§ 2, 3; 19 G. A., ch. 38, §§ 1, 2.]

3. Sewer fund. A tax not exceeding three mills on the dollar on the assessed valuation of all property therein, for the city sewer fund, to be used to pay the cost of making, reconstructing or repairing any sewer at the intersection of streets, and all spaces opposite streets intersecting but not crossing, and at spaces opposite property owned by the city or state, or to pay the whole or any part of the cost of making, reconstructing or repairing any sewer within the limits of such city. When the city has been divided into sewer districts, a tax not exceeding five mills on the taxable real property in the sewer district, for the district sewer fund, to be used to pay, in whole or in part, the cost of the making, reconstruction or repair of any sewer located or laid in that particular district: provided that, on petition of the owners of two-thirds in value of all the taxable real estate within such sewer district for the construction of a sewer in such district, then the maximum percentage of taxes that can be levied in any one year shall not be limited to five mills, but shall be such percentage of the valuation of such property as will produce at least one-tenth of the whole cost of such sewer assessable upon the real property in such district; [25 G. A., ch. 7, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 7, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 34, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1; 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 1.]

4. Fire fund. A tax not exceeding three mills on the dollar for the purpose of creating a city fire fund, to be used for paying the expenses of organizing, keeping and maintaining a fire department, including the expenses of constructing, purchasing, leasing and maintaining the proper and necessary buildings, grounds and apparatus therefor; [26 G. A., ch. 27; 23 G. A., ch. 8, §§ 1, 2.]

5. Road fund. When any city is divided into road districts, a tax not exceeding two mills on the dollar on all taxable property in such road district, to be known as the district road fund, and to be used only to pay the cost of cleaning, sprinkling and repairing the streets and public places in such district;

6. Library tax. In cities which have established, or may establish, a free public library, a tax not exceeding one mill on the dollar, to be used therefor, and to pay the interest on any indebtedness for the purchase of the real estate, and the erection of a building or buildings thereon, for such free public library purposes; [25 G. A., ch. 43, § 1; 25 G. A., ch. 99, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 18, § 1; 14 G. A., ch. 17; 13 G. A., ch. 45; C. '73, § 461.]

7. Tax for water and gas works and electric plants. A tax not exceeding five mills on the dollar, which, with the rates, rents or revenues derived therefrom, shall be sufficient to pay the expenses of running, operating and repairing, water and gas works, electric light and power plants, owned and operated by such city, and the interest on or principal of any bonds issued to pay the cost of the construction of such works; but such taxes shall not be levied upon the property which lies wholly without the limits of the benefits or protection of such works or plants, which limit shall be fixed by the council each year before making the levy; [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 2; C. '73, § 475.]

8. Tax for water, gas and electric light or power. A tax, not exceeding five mills on the dollar for the purpose of paying the amount due, or to become due, to any individual or company operating water or gas works or electric light power plants, for water, light, gas or power supplied to the city, the levy to be limited to the property benefited thereby; [22 G. A., ch. 11, § 2; C. '73, § 475.]

9. Bond fund. A tax for the purpose of creating a bond fund sufficient to pay the interest, to accrue before the next annual levy, on funding or refunding bonds outstanding, and to pay the principal of such funding or refunding bonds. In case of such bonds, the levy shall be so made that, dividing the principal into as many parts as the bonds have years to run, not less than one such part shall be levied each year, and shall be made so that the fund derived therefrom shall be available and sufficient to pay the bonds at their maturity; [24 G. A., ch. 14, § 5; 23 G. A., ch 4, §§ 6, 7; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 5; 21 G. A., ch. 78.]

10. Water and gas or electric light and power bonds. A tax to be used exclusively in payment of the principal and interest of bonds issued for the construction of water and gas works, electric light and power plants, and which shall be levied in the manner provided in the preceding subdivision; [23 G. A., ch. 13, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 10, § 1.]

11. Park tax. A tax not exceeding two mills on the dollar, as authorized by the vote of the electors, to purchase, improve and maintain public parks in such city; [24 G. A., ch. 1, § 7.]

12. Special bridge tax. A special tax to aid in the construction of bridges, when such tax has been voted by the electors of the city under the provisions of section seven hundred and seventy, of chapter six, of this title. [25 G. A., ch. 19, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 13, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 3.]

SEC. 1006. Excess of judgment or bond tax. When a tax has been levied to pay any judgment against any such city, or the principal and interest of funding or refunding bonds issued by such city, or for any other special purpose, such tax shall not be held invalid if the amount received exceed the amount sought for such specific object, but the excess shall go into the general fund. Money so raised is especially appropriated for such purposes, and shall constitute a distinct fund in the hands of the treasurer until the obligation is discharged. [25 G. A., ch. 6, § 1; C.'73, §§ 318, 319; R., §§ 259, 260; C.'51, §§ 123-4.]

SEC. 1007. Anticipating revenue. Loans may be negotiated or warrants issued by any such city in anticipation of its revenues for the fiscal year in which such loans are negotiated or warrants issued, but the aggregate amount of such loans and warrants shall not exceed one-half the estimated revenue of such corporation for the fund or purpose for which the taxes are to be collected for such fiscal year. [21 G. A., ch. 108; 20 G. A., ch. 79; 16 G. A., ch. 95, § 1; C.'73, § 500; R., § 1129.]

In absence of express provision a city cannot issue bonds in exchange for warrants for current expenses: Heins v. Lincoln, 71 N. W., 189.

SEC. 1008. Other provisions as to taxes. Sections eight hundred and ninety-nine, nine hundred and one and nine hundred and four, of chapter eleven, of this title are made applicable to cities acting under special charter.

SEC. 1009. Warrants. The auditor, clerk, or other officer whose duty it is to draw warrants shall draw no warrant except upon the vote of the council, and no warrant for an amount in excess of five hundred dollars. [22 G. A., ch. 3, §§ 1-3.]

SEC. 1010. Levy and collection of taxes. The council shall have power to levy and collect taxes for all general and special purposes in this chapter authorized, upon all property within the city not exempted from taxation by the general law of the state, and to fix the number of mills to be levied on the value thereof, which shall be ascertained by the assessor of said city, and the council shall provide by ordinance the time and manner of taking such assessment, when the same shall be equalized and returned to the auditor or recorder, and for the assessing and placing upon the tax list all property that may have been omitted, overlooked, brought into the city before the levy of said tax, or otherwise not returned by the assessor, and to fix the time when such officer shall make out and deliver a copy of the assessment and the taxes levied thereon to the collector or treasurer. The council may provide by ordinance for certifying all taxes and assessments to the county auditor, as provided in section nine hundred and two, chapter eleven, of this title, which shall be applicable to the city adopting the provisions thereof, and the taxes so certified shall be collected and paid over in the same way, with the same penalties, rights and liabilities, as in and for other cities to which such section is applicable.

SEC. 1011. Assessment. All the property of individuals, companies, copartnerships and corporations shall be listed and returned by the assessor for city taxation; and the duty of the owner, officer, agent or individual having control of the same to assist the assessor in listing the same, and the penalties for his neglect or refusal so to do, shall be as provided in title seven of this code, so far as the same may be applicable and not in contravention of any of the provisions herein, or of the charters of such cities; but the equalization of all assessments shall be made by the council as provided by ordinance or the charters of said cities.

SEC. 1012. Sale. Such cities shall have power and shall provide by ordinance when general or special taxes and assessments shall become delinquent, and the rate of interest which they shall thereafter bear, not exceeding ten per cent. per annum on the whole amount thereof, including penalty; and for the sale of both real and personal property for the collection of general and special delinquent taxes and assessments, on such terms as the council may determine; and in the sale of real property for taxes and assessments, the notice of the time and place of such sale shall be given by the treasurer or the collector, and shall contain the description of each separate tract to be sold, as taken from the tax list; the amount of taxes for which it is liable, delinquent for each year, and the amount of penalty, interest, and cost thereon; the name of the owner, if known, or the person, if any, to whom it is taxable; by publication in some newspaper in the city once each week for three consecutive weeks, the last of which shall be at least one week before the date of such sale, and by posting a copy thereof at the door of the office of the collector or treasurer one week before the day of such sale. The compensation for such publication shall not exceed twenty cents for each description, and shall be paid by the city. The amount paid therefor shall be collected as a part of the costs of sale and paid into the treasury, and no irregularity or informality in the advertisement shall affect the legality of any sale or the title of any property conveyed, if it shall appear that said property was subject to taxation for the year or years for which the same was sold, and that the tax was due and unpaid at the time of sale; and in all cases such advertisement shall be sufficient notice to the owners and persons having an interest in or claiming title to any lot or parcel of real estate, of the sale of their property for delinquent taxes, and a failure of the collector to make personal demand of taxes shall not affect the validity of any sale or the title of any property acquired under such sale. [16 G. A., ch. 116, § 1.]

SEC. 1013. Adjournment of tax sale—intoxicating liquor law. Section fourteen hundred and twenty-eight of chapter two, title seven, and chapter six, title twelve, of this code, are made applicable to cities acting under special charter.

SEC. 1014. Tax list. All assessments and taxes levied by the council, except as otherwise provided by law, shall be placed by the auditor, clerk or recorder, as provided by ordinance, upon the proper tax book, to be known as the "tax list," properly ruled and headed with distinct columns to correspond with the assessment books, with a column for polls and one for payments, and he shall complete the same by carrying out the consolidated tax and all other taxes levied, and at the end of the list shall make an abstract thereof and apportion the consolidated tax among the respective funds to which it belongs, according to the number of mills levied for each, and certify the same to the collector or treasurer at or before the regular time for the collection and payment of taxes. [25 G. A., ch. 1, § 2; 24 G. A., ch. 1, § 3; 21 G. A., ch. 13, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 138, § 2; 10 G. A., ch. 25, § 3; C. '73, §§ 495, 498, 837, 839; R., §§ 745–6, 1123, 1126; C. '51, §§ 485–6.]

SEC. 1015. Lien of taxes. Taxes upon real estate shall be a lien thereon against all persons except the state. Taxes due from any person upon personal property shall be a lien upon any and all real estate owned by such person or to which he may acquire title. As between vendor and vendee, such lien shall attach to real estate on the thirty-first day of December following the levy, unless otherwise provided in this chapter. Taxes upon stocks of goods and merchandise shall be a lien thereon, and shall continue a lien thereon when sold in bulk, and may be collected from the owner, purchaser or vendee, but the property of the seller thereof shall be first exhausted for the payment; and all of such taxes shall remain a lien on the property aforesaid from and after the date of the levy in each year. The collection of such taxes and the enforcement of such lien may be, in addition to the remedies herein provided, enforced by suit, as is authorized by sections nine hundred and eighty-four, nine hundred and eighty-five and nine hundred and eighty-six of this chapter.

Under previous provisions, held, that in cities acting under special charter in which city taxes were made a perpetual lien upon real estate, and the city collector was authorized to collect the same by sale, a sale for state and county taxes did not divest the property of the lien of city taxes, and the purchaser took subject thereto; nor did the sale for city taxes of one year divest the property of the lien of city taxes for former years: Dennison v. Keokuk, 45–266.

SEC. 1016. Tax receipt. The collector or treasurer shall in all cases make out and deliver to the taxpayer a receipt, which receipt shall contain the description and the assessed value of each lot and parcel of real estate, and the assessed value of personal property, and in case the property has been sold for taxes and not redeemed, the date of such sale and to whom sold, also the amount of taxes, interest and costs paid; and the collector or treasurer shall give separate receipts for each year; whereupon he shall make proper entries of such payments on the books of his office. The council may provide by ordinance that no person shall be permitted to pay taxes of any one year until the taxes for the previous years shall be first paid; and provide that the receipt herein contemplated shall be conclusive evidence that all taxes, and the costs of every kind against the property described in such receipt, are paid to the date of such receipt; and provide that for any failure or neglect on the part of the collector, or on the part of any one acting as collector, he and his bondsmen shall be liable to an action on his official bond for damages sustained by any person or the city for such neglect. [16 G. A., ch. 116, § 4.]

SEC. 1017. Sale. The treasurer or collector of taxes, or person authorized to act as collector, shall make, sign and deliver to the purchaser of any real property sold for the payment of any taxes or special assessments authorized by the provisions of this chapter, or by any law applicable to such cities, a certificate of purchase, which shall have the same force and effect as certificates issued by county treasurers for the sale of property for delinquent county taxes. [Same, § 5.]

Where a city had authority under its charter to sell property for taxes, held, that it might enter into a compromise with the taxpayer for the redemption of his property, and that such compromise would be binding: Hintrager v. Richter, 85–222.

SEC. 1018. Redemption. Real property sold under the provisions of this chapter, or by virtue of any power heretofore given, may be redeemed before the time of redemption expires, as hereinafter provided, by payment to the treasurer, collector or person authorized to receive the same, to be held by him subject to the order of the purchaser on surrender of the certificate, or in case the same is lost and destroyed, on his making affidavit of such fact, and of the further fact that it was not assigned, of the amount for which the same was sold, and ten per cent. of such amount immediately added as a penalty, with eight per cent. per annum of the whole amount thus made from the day of sale, and the amount of all taxes, either general or special, with interest and costs, paid at any time by the purchaser or his assignee subsequent to the sale, and a similar penalty of ten per cent. added as before on the amount of the payment made at any subsequent time, with eight per cent. interest per annum on the whole of such amount or amounts from the day or days of payment: provided that such penalty for the non-payment of the taxes at any subsequent time or times shall not attach, unless such subsequent tax or taxes shall have remained unpaid for thirty days after they became delinquent. The treasurer, collector or person authorized to receive the same, upon application of any party to redeem real property sold as aforesaid, and being satisfied that such person has a right to redeem the same, and on payment of the proper amount, shall issue to such party a certificate of redemption, in substance and form as provided for the redemption of property sold for state and county taxes, and shall make proper entry thereof in the sale book, which redemption shall thereupon be deemed complete without further proceedings. The provisions of sections fourteen hundred and thirty-nine, fourteen hundred and forty and fourteen hundred and forty-one, of chapter two, title seven, of this code, shall, so far as the same shall be applicable, and are not herein changed or modified, apply to sales of real estate for delinquent taxes herein contemplated; but where the words "auditor of the county" or "treasurer" are used in said sections the words "city clerk," "recorder," "auditor," or "person authorized to make out the tax list" and "city collector" or "city treasurer or officer authorized to receive same" shall be substituted. [17 G. A., ch. 174; 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 6.]

SEC. 1019. Deed. Immediately after the expiration of ninety days from the date of service of the notice, as prescribed by sections fourteen hundred and forty-one and fourteen hundred and forty-two of chapter two, title seven, of this code, the treasurer, collector, or person authorized to act as collector of taxes, shall make out a deed for each lot or parcel of land sold and remaining unredeemed, and deliver the same to the purchaser upon the return of the certificate of purchase. Any number of parcels of real estate bought by one person may be included in one deed, if required by the purchaser. Deeds executed by the city treasurer, collector, or person authorized to act as collector, may be in form substantially as provided by section fourteen hundred and forty-three of chapter two, title seven, of this code, and shall be signed and acknowledged by him in his official capacity; and all deeds and conveyances hereafter made and executed on account of any general or special tax sale shall be of the same force and effect as deeds made by the county treasurer as provided in section fourteen hundred and forty-four of chapter two, title seven, of this code, for delinquent county taxes; and the purchaser as well as the owner of any real property sold on account of such general or special delinquent taxes or assessments shall be entitled to all the rights and remedies which are granted and prescribed by sections fourteen hundred and forty-five to fourteen hundred and fifty-one, inclusive, of chapter two, title seven of this code, but that wherever the words "county and county treasurer and auditor" are used, the words "city, city treasurer, city clerk, recorder, auditor, or collector or officer authorized to act as collector," shall be substituted.

The general provisions as to redemption notice are made applicable to tax sales in cities under special charter, and it is only where land was taxed by the county authorities to unknown owners that redemption notice is not required: Crawford v. Liddle, 70 N. W., 97.

SEC. 1020. Questioning deed—refund. Sections fourteen hundred and forty-six, fourteen hundred and forty-seven and fourteen hundred and forty-eight, chapter two, title seven, of this code are hereby made applicable to cities acting under special charters except that, where the word "treasurer" is used, there shall be used the words "city collector or treasurer or deputy treasurer or deputy or officer authorized to collect city taxes."

SEC. 1021. Bonds. That sections nine hundred and five, nine hundred and six, nine hundred and seven, nine hundred and eight, nine hundred and nine, nine hundred and ten, nine hundred and eleven and nine hundred and thirteen, chapter twelve, of this title, are made applicable to cities acting under special charters.

SEC. 1022. Certificates and bonds for special assessments. Any city may anticipate the collection of taxes authorized to be levied for the grading fund, city improvement fund, district sewer fund, and city sewer fund, and for that purpose may issue certificates or bonds with interest coupons, to be respectively denominated city grading certificates or bonds, city improvement certificates or bonds, district sewer certificates or bonds of a particular sewer district, and city sewer certificates or bonds; and all provisions of chapter twelve, of this title, shall apply to such certificates or bonds and coupons, with such changes only as are necessary to adapt them thereto. And said bonds and interest thereon shall be secured by said assessment and levy, and shall be payable out of the respective funds hereinbefore named, pledged to the payment of the same, and no bonds shall be issued in excess of taxes authorized and levied or to be levied to secure the payment of the same. It shall be the duty of the collector or treasurer to collect said several funds, with interest thereon, and to hold the same separate and apart, in trust, for the payment of said bonds and interest, and to apply the proceeds of said funds pledged for that purpose to the payment of said bonds and interest. [22 G. A., ch. 7, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 34; 19 G A.. ch. 38, §§ 3, 4; 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1.]

SEC. 1023. Limitation of action questioning legality of bonds. No action shall be brought questioning the legality of any of the bonds or certificates authorized by the preceding section, or section nine hundred and five of chapter twelve of this title before mentioned, or of any water works bonds, gas works bonds, or electric light or power plant bonds, or any other bonds or certificates authorized by this chapter, from and after three months from the time the same are ordered issued by the proper authority.

SEC. 1024. Plats. Chapter thirteen of this title, so far as applicable, is made applicable to cities acting under special charter, except that in section nine hundred and fifteen thereof the word "treasurer" shall be held to mean "city collector or city treasurer."

SEC. 1025. Board of health. There shall be appointed in every such city a local board of health consisting of five members, a majority of whom, including the mayor, shall be members of the city council. The mayor of the city shall be ex officio one of said members and the chairman thereof. The manner of appointment and duration of office of said board shall be determined by ordinance of said city. [19 G. A., ch. 168, § 1.]

SEC. 1026. Officers appointed—quorum. The board of health shall appoint a physician to the board, who shall hold office during the pleasure of the board. The city clerk or recorder shall be clerk of the board, unless some other clerk may be provided by ordinance. The board of health shall appoint, with the consent of the council, all officers and agents necessary to carry their rules and orders into effect, and shall recommend the compensation or salaries to be paid such officers or agents, which shall be determined by the council. In cases of emergency, the board of health may employ persons to aid in the execution of its orders, and fix the compensation of such employes. The majority of the members of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of all business and the exercise of powers conferred upon the board. [Same, § 2.]

SEC. 1027. Physician and clerk. It shall be the duty of such clerk and physician to report at least once a year to the state board of health the proceedings of such board, and such other facts as may be required on blanks in accordance with instructions received from the state board. They shall also make special reports whenever required so to do by the state board. [Same, § 3.]

SEC. 1028. General powers. The local board of health shall make such rules and regulations and orders respecting the connection of buildings and tenements with sewers, and the approval of plans for plumbing and the inspection thereof; and the inspection of milk, provisions, and of all food products sold within such city, and the condemnation and destruction of the same when impure or diseased; the collection and disposition of garbage; the condemnation of impure wells and cisterns; the prompt report of contagious or infectious diseases; nuisances, sources of filth and cases of sickness within their jurisdiction, and on all boats in its ports and harbors, or railroad cars passing through such city; and for the prevention of nuisances and the preservation of the public health, as said board may judge necessary for the public health and safety; and shall, from time to time, report to the city council ordinances for carrying such rules, regulations and provisions into effect, and for the appointment of the proper inspectors and officers necessary to enforce the same. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1029. Violation of regulations. Such cities shall have power and may provide by ordinance for the punishment by fine and imprisonment of any person who shall knowingly violate or fail to comply with any rule, regulation or order of such local board of health, but the fine shall not exceed one hundred dollars, or the imprisonment thirty days. The prosecution for the violation of any rule, regulation or order of such board of health shall be in the name of the city appointing such board, and shall be conducted in the same manner and before the same tribunals as other prosecutions for the violation of ordinances of such city. [Same, § 5.]

SEC. 1030. Sewer connections. The board of health shall have power to compel all property owners owning property situated on streets along which sewers have been constructed, or within two hundred and fifty feet of any sewer, to make proper connections therewith, and to use the same for proper purposes; and in case such owner shall fail to make such connections within the time fixed by such board, they may cause such connections to be made, and report the cost and expense thereof to the city council, which shall assess the same against the property so connected, and such assessment shall be a lien on said property which the city council can enforce by the sale of same. [22 G. A., ch. 9; 21 G. A., ch. 116.]

SEC. 1031. Plumbing. Such board shall have power to prescribe rules and regulations for all plumbing connections of buildings or tenements with any sewer, and for all plumbing, drainage and ventilation of any building or tenement, and may prescribe the kind and size of materials to be used in any plumbing, drainage and ventilation of buildings, and the manner in which plumbing shall be done, and compel the plans and specifications for the plumbing of any building to be submitted to and approved by said board before the same is installed, and that such work be done by a competent, licensed plumber, and provide for the inspection of the work done under such plans and specifications, and have the power to appoint, with the approval of the city council, an inspector of such plumbing, and define his duties and powers.

SEC. 1032. Nuisances. Such board may order the owner or occupant of any property, place or building at his own expense to remove or abate any nuisance, source of filth or cause of sickness, to dispose of garbage, to destroy diseased or impure milk, provisions or food products, to purify, fill up, or cease from using any impure well or cistern, to report to the proper officer all contagious or infectious diseases found on his property, or property over which he has control, to make sewer connection, and do such acts as may be required. The board may in its discretion specify in its notice the time and manner of compliance with such order, and if such person neglect to comply with such order he may be punished in accordance with the provisions hereof, and the board may do or cause to be done whatever is required by the order. [19 G. A., ch. 168, § 6.]

SEC. 1033. Abatement. Whenever the owner, occupant or person having the control or management of such property shall not be found in the city, or whenever the board may deem immediate action necessary, it may, without notice to such owner or occupant or person having the control or management of the same, immediately proceed to remove said nuisance, source of filth, or other cause of sickness, and the expense thereof shall be reported to the council and levied and assessed against the property, place or building, and collected as a special tax, and shall be a lien upon such property, place and building, or the same may be enforced in any court having jurisdiction, by the proper officer, in the name of the city. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 1034. Enjoining. Whenever any person or persons are engaged in a work, or doing things, or threatening to do things, which, in the opinion of the board, will result in a nuisance or endanger the public health, the board may forbid the doing or continuance thereof, and in case any such person shall fail to comply with any such order, after personal service of a notice thereof, he may be proceeded against and punished under the provisions hereof. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 1035. Health regulations—how adopted. Whenever any such board shall make or adopt any general rules and regulations for the public health, they shall be signed by the mayor or other presiding officer, and attested by the clerk, of such board, and, when so signed and attested, shall be published twice in the official newspaper of such city. When such publication is completed, due proof thereof by affidavit shall be attached to said rules and regulations, and the same shall then be recorded by the clerk of such board in a book kept for such purpose, which record shall be certified to by the mayor or presiding officer and attested by the clerk. And such general rules and regulations shall be in force and effect from and after the completion of such record. [26 G. A., ch. 11; 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 10.]

SEC. 1036. Notices. Any notice from the board may be served by any city officer, or by any other person whom the board of health may appoint or designate. [19 G. A., ch. 168, § 11.]

SEC. 1037. Premises unfit for habitation. The board, when satisfied upon due examination that any cellar, room, tenement or building in said city, occupied as a dwelling-house, has become, by reason of the number of inhabitants or want of cleanliness or other cause, unfit for such habitation, and a cause of nuisance or sickness to the occupants thereof or to the public, may issue a notice to the occupants thereof or any of them, requiring the premises to be put into a proper condition as to cleanliness or health, or may require the occupants to remove from the premises, within such time as the board deems reasonable. If the persons so notified neglect or refuse to comply with the terms of the notice, the board may cause the premises to be properly cleaned at the expense of the owners or property, or the board may remove the occupants forcibly and close up the premises, and the same shall not again be occupied as a dwelling place until put in a sanitary condition to the satisfaction of the board. [Same, § 12.]

SEC. 1038. Contagious diseases. Whenever by reason of the prevalence of smallpox, or other contagious or infectious disease, in any such city or the vicinity thereof, the board may deem it dangerous to permit the congregation together of people, the board may, with the consent of the council, by public proclamation published once in some newspaper of general circulation in the city, prohibit the congregation of people in schools, churches, theaters, and in all other buildings in said city, and it shall thereupon become the duty of the principals, teachers and other persons in charge of such places or building specified in said publication to keep the same closed, and to prevent the congregation of the people therein; and when smallpox is prevalent in said city or its vicinity, the said board of health may, with the consent of the council, by notice served upon the teachers or persons in charge of any of the public or private schools, prohibit the admission therein of any pupil until such pupil shall have proved, to the satisfaction of the board or the persons selected by it for that purpose, that such pupils have been vaccinated within five years prior thereto, or within such time as the board may designate; and said board may in like manner prevent the admission of persons not furnishing satisfactory proof of vaccination into churches, theaters or other buildings, by notifying the persons in charge thereof not to admit such persons. [Same, § 13.]

SEC. 1039. Warrant. Whenever the board of health shall think it necessary for the preservation of the lives or the health of the inhabitants to enter a place, building or vessel within its jurisdiction, for the purpose of examining into and destroying, removing or preventing any nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness, and shall be refused such entry, any member of the board may make complaint, under oath, before any justice of the peace, or other judicial officer having jurisdiction to enforce the ordinance of such city, stating the facts of the case so far as he has knowledge thereof. Such officer shall thereupon issue a warrant, directed to the sheriff or any constable of the county, marshal or public officer, commanding him to take sufficient aid and, being accompanied by two or more members of said board, between the hours of sunrise and sunset, repair to the place where such nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness may be, and destroy, remove or prevent the same under the direction of such members of the board. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 1040. Removal of diseased person. When any person coming from abroad or residing within such city shall be infected, or lately shall have been infected, with smallpox or other sickness dangerous to the public health, the board shall make provisions in the manner by them deemed best for the safety of the inhabitants, by removing such sick or infected person to a separate house, if it can be done without injury to his health, and by providing nurses and other assistance and supplies, which shall be charged to the person himself, his parents, or other person liable for his support, if able, otherwise to the county. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 1041. Care of such person. If any afflicted person cannot be removed without danger to his health, the board shall make provision for him, as directed in the preceding section, in the house in which he may be, and in such case they may cause the persons in the neighborhood to be removed, and take other means, as may be deemed necessary for the safety of the inhabitants. [Same, § 16.]

SEC. 1042. Warrant. Any justice of the peace, or tribunal having jurisdiction to enforce the ordinance of such city, on application under oath, showing cause therefor, by any member of said board, shall issue his warrant, directed to the sheriff or constable of the county or marshal or police officer, commanding him, under the directions of the board, to remove any person infected with contagious disease, or to take possession of condemned houses and lodgings, and to provide nurses and attendants and other necessaries for the care, safety and relief of the sick. [Same, § 17.]

SEC. 1043. Meetings—report. Every such board shall meet for the transaction of business at least once each month, and at such other times as occasion may require, and the clerk of the board shall transmit his annual report to the secretary of the state board within two weeks after the October meeting, and at such other time as may be required by the state board. Such report shall embrace a history of any epidemic disease which may have prevailed within the city. The failure of the clerk to make such report shall be considered a misdemeanor, for which he shall be subject to a fine of not more than twenty-five dollars. [Same, § 18.]

SEC. 1044. Powers of council—assessment of expenses. The foregoing provisions in regard to boards of health shall not in any manner limit the powers of cities acting under special charters in relation to matters affecting the public health, and the city councils of such cities shall provide by ordinance for the manner of the exercise of the powers herein conferred upon such boards, and for the enforcement of the orders, rules and regulations thereof, and punishment for the violation of the same, as prescribed in this chapter, and shall also have power to provide and shall provide for the assessment of all expenses incurred by said board and by said cities, in consequence of the failure or neglect of any owner or occupant of property to comply with any order of such board, upon the real estate upon which such expenditures are made or expenses incurred, and it shall be a lien thereon from the time said work is done, and may be assessed, levied and collected as other special assessments, and may be collected and the lien enforced by civil action in any court of competent jurisdiction. [Same, § 19.]

SEC. 1045. Proceedings reported to council. Boards of health shall report their doings and proceedings to the council from time to time as required by ordinance or resolution, and the council shall have supervision over the orders and proceedings of said board. [Same.]

SEC. 1046. Special provisions not to limit general powers. The provisions of this chapter in regard to the police powers, sanitary regulations, and regulations for the prevention and spread of fires and of contagious diseases, shall not be construed as a limitation of the general powers of such cities. [Same.]

SEC. 1047. Amendment of charter. On the presentation of a petition signed by one-fourth of the electors, as shown by the vote at the next preceding city election, of any city or town acting under a special charter or act of incorporation, to the governing body thereof, asking that the question of the amendment of such special charter or act of incorporation be submitted to the electors of such city, such governing body shall immediately propose sections amendatory of said charter or act of incorporation, and shall submit the same, as requested, at the first ensuing city or town election. At least ten days before such election the mayor of such city or town shall issue his proclamation setting forth the nature and character of such amendment, and shall cause such proclamation to be published in a newspaper published therein, or, if there be none, he shall cause the same to be posted in five public places in such city. On the day specified, the proposition to adopt the amendment shall be submitted to the electors thereof for adoption or rejection, in the manner provided by the general election laws. [C. '73, § 548; R., § 1141.]

This provision allowing cities to amend their charters, held not in conflict with the constitution, art. III, § 30, forbidding local or special laws for the incorporation of cities and towns: Von Phul v. Hammer, 29–222.

SEC. 1048. Proclamation of result. If a majority of the votes cast be in favor of adopting said amendment, the mayor shall issue his proclamation accordingly; and the amendment shall thereafter constitute a part of said charter. [C. '73, § 549; R., § 1142.]

SEC. 1049. Special election. The legislative body of said city may submit any amendment to the vote of the people as aforesaid at any special election, provided one-half of the electors as aforesaid petition for that purpose, and the proceedings shall be the same as at the general election. [C. '73, § 550; R., § 1143.]

SEC. 1050. Notice of unliquidated claim—limitation of action. No suit shall be brought against any such city for any unliquidated claim or demand unless within three months from the time the same became due or cause of action accrued thereon, nor unless a written, verified statement of the general nature, cause and amount of same is filed with the clerk or recorder thirty days before the commencement of such suit.

SEC. 1051. Notice of claim for personal injury—limitation. In all cases of personal injury or damage to property resulting from defective streets or sidewalks, or from any cause originating in the neglect or failure of any municipal corporation or its officers to perform their duties, no suit shall be brought against any such city after three months from the time of the injury or damage, and not then unless a written verified statement of the amount, nature and cause of such injury or damage, and the time when and the place where such injury occurred, and the particular defect or negligence of the city or its officers which it is claimed caused or contributed to the injury or damage, shall be presented to the council or filed with the clerk within thirty days after said alleged injury or damage was sustained. [22 G. A., ch. 25, § 1.]

SEC. 1052. Building permits. Such cities shall require plans and specifications for all buildings costing over two thousand dollars, and all buildings to be erected within the fire limits of such cities, to be submitted for approval, and no such building shall be erected until such plans be approved by the board of public works, chief of fire department or other proper officer of such city. Such city shall require any person, before erecting any building or improvement within the city, to submit plans and specifications for the plumbing, drainage and ventilation and electric wiring of such building, for approval, and provide for the inspection of the construction thereof, and obtaining a permit for such erection or construction, which shall not be issued until such plans and specifications have been approved by the board of health or electrician, and may make reasonable charges for such approval and inspection, as provided by ordinance, and the money derived therefrom shall be paid monthly to the treasurer or collector.

SEC. 1053. Notice to person liable over. In case any action is brought against any such city for damages for injury to person or property claimed to have been caused by or through the negligence of said city, the city may notify in writing any person or corporation, by or in consequence of whose negligence it is claimed by said city the injury occurred or was caused, of the pendency of said suit, the name of the plaintiff and where pending, and the general nature of the claim, and that the city claims that the person or corporation so notified is liable to said city for any judgment obtained against said city, and asking such person or corporation to appear and defend; thereupon any judgment obtained in such suit shall be conclusive in any action by the city against any person or corporation so notified as to the existence of the defect or other cause of the injury or damage, and as to the liability of the city to the plaintiff in the first-named suit in consequence thereof, and as to the amount of the damage or injury occasioned thereby; and every such city is hereby empowered to maintain an action against the person or corporation so notified to recover the amount of any such judgment, together with all the expenses incurred by such city in such suit.

SEC. 1054. Public grounds. Any such cities situated on the Mississippi river, having within their limits public grounds heretofore set apart or dedicated for levee, warehouse or other public purposes, and in which the use of such ground for such purposes has ceased or been abandoned in whole or in part, may use or provide for the use of such grounds otherwise than for levee and warehouse purposes, as said council of such cities may determine are for the public interests, and upon such terms and conditions as may be fixed by said council. [18 G. A., ch. 80, § 1.]

SEC. 1055. Repeal. All general acts and parts of acts passed prior to the taking effect of this code, relating to cities acting under special charter, are hereby repealed, except so far as the same are contained in this chapter or referred to herein; but the charters of such cities, or any of the provisions of the same, are not hereby repealed, but shall continue in force and effect, except as changed or modified by the provisions of this chapter.

SEC. 1056. Saving clause. All officers elected or appointed in such cities prior to the taking effect of this code shall continue in office until after the expiration of their term of office, unless otherwise provided in this chapter, and all ordinances in force in such cities, not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter, shall continue in force until repealed. When the term of office of any elective officer shall expire after the first city election after this code takes effect and before the next biennial city election, the mayor, by and with the consent of the council, shall fill the office by appointment until such election.

TITLE VI.

OF ELECTIONS AND OFFICERS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS AND THEIR TERMS.

SECTION 1057. General election. The general election for state, district, county and township officers shall be held throughout the state on Tuesday, next after the first Monday of November, in each year. [19 G. A., ch. 115; C. '73, § 573; R., § 459; C. '51, § 237.]

See amendment to constitution at end of art. II.

SEC. 1058. Special election. Special elections authorized by any law, or held to supply vacancies in any office to be filled by the vote of the qualified voters of the entire state, or of any district, county or township, may be held at the time designated by such law, or by the officer authorized to order such election. [C. '73, § 574; R., § 460.]

SEC. 1059. When officer to be chosen. At the general election next preceding the expiration of the term of any officer his successor shall be elected. [C. '73, § 575; R., § 461.]

SEC. 1060. Term of office. The term of office of all officers chosen at a general election for a full term shall commence on the first Monday of January next thereafter, except when otherwise provided by the constitution; that of an officer chosen to fill a vacancy shall commence as soon as he has qualified therefor. [16 G. A., ch. 72; C. '73, § 576; R., § 462.]

See Const., art. IV, § 15.

SEC. 1061. Proclamation. At least thirty days before any general election, the governor shall issue his proclamation, designating all the offices to be filled by the vote of all the electors of the state, or by those of any congressional, legislative or judicial district, and, in the years required by article ten, section three, of the constitution, submitting the question: "Shall there be a convention to revise the constitution and amend the same?" and transmit a copy thereof to the sheriff of each county. [C. '73, § 577; R., § 462.]

SEC. 1062. Notice. The sheriff shall give at least ten days' notice thereof, by causing a copy of such proclamation to be published in some newspaper printed in the county; or, if there be no such paper, by posting such a copy in at least five of the most public places in the county. [C. '73, § 578; R., § 463.]

Where the time of the regular election is fixed by law such time is to be taken notice of judicially: Davis v. Best, 2–96.

Failure to give proper notice of an election will not invalidate it. In matters of such public nature the observance of the particular requirement is not a prerequisite to validity, and the statutes as to notice are to be deemed directory. The people are not to be disfranchised or deprived of their voice by the omission of some duty by an officer: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212.

If an election has in fact been held at the proper time, and it is not alleged or shown that any portion of the electors failed in knowledge of the pendency of the question submitted at such election, or to exercise their franchise, it will not be held void on account of want of notice: Ibid.

SEC. 1063. Of special election. A similar proclamation shall be issued before any special election ordered by the governor, designating the time at which such special election shall be held; and the sheriff of each county in which such election is to be held shall give notice thereof, as provided in the last section. [C. '73, § 579; R., § 464.]

SEC. 1064. In odd-numbered years. The governor, lieutenant-governor and superintendent of public instruction shall be chosen at the general election in each odd-numbered year, and shall hold office for two years. [C. '73, § 580; R., § 465.]

See Const., art IV, § 15.

SEC. 1065. In even-numbered years. The secretary of state, auditor of state, treasurer of state and attorney-general shall be chosen at the general election in each even-numbered year, and their terms of office shall be two years. [C. '73, § 581; R., § 466.]

As to secretary, auditor and treasurer, see Const., art. IV, § 22. As to attorney-general, see Const., art. V, § 12.

SEC. 1066. Judges of supreme court. One judge of the supreme court shall be chosen at the general election in each year, whose term of office shall continue for six years, but the term of the judge elected to fill a vacancy expiring on the first day of January, 1898, shall extend until the first day of January, 1899. [26 G. A., ch. 72; 25 G. A., ch. 69, § 2; 16 G. A., ch. 7, § 2; C. '73, § 582.]

See Const., art. V, §§ 3, 11.

SEC. 1067. Clerk and reporter of supreme court. The clerk and reporter of the supreme court shall be chosen at the general election in the year 1898, and each fourth year thereafter, and their terms of office shall be four years. [C. '73, § 583.]

SEC. 1068. Railroad commissioners. One railroad commissioner shall be chosen at the regular election in each year, whose term of office shall continue for three years. [22 G. A., ch. 29, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 2.]

SEC. 1069. Judges of district court. The judges of the district court shall be elected in each judicial district at a general election, and shall hold office for four years, except when elected to fill a vacancy, in which case it shall be only for the unexpired term. [21 G. A., ch. 134, § 4.]

SEC. 1070. Representatives. Members of the house of representatives shall be elected in the respective representative districts in each odd-numbered year, and hold office for two years. [C. '73, § 587; R., § 470.]

See Const., art. III, § 3.

SEC. 1071. Senators. Senators in the general assembly, to succeed those whose terms are about to expire, shall be elected in the respective senatorial districts in each odd-numbered year, for the term of four years. [C. '73, § 588; R., § 471.]

See Const., art. III, § 5.

SEC. 1072. County officers. There shall be elected in each county, at the general election in each even-numbered year, a clerk of the district court, a recorder of deeds, an auditor and a county attorney; and, in each odd-numbered year, a treasurer, a sheriff, a coroner, a county superintendent and a surveyor; and each of said officers shall hold his office for the term of two years. [23 G. A., ch. 37, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 1; C. '73, § 589; R., §§ 224, 472–3; C. '51, § 96.]

[Women are by § 2748 made eligible to school offices, and by § 493 to the office of county recorder.]

SEC. 1073. Justices and constables. Two justices of the peace and two constables shall be elected by the voters of each township at the general election in each even-numbered year, and shall hold office for two years, and be county officers. [25 G. A., ch. 74, § 4; C. '73, §§ 389, 590, 592–3; R., §§ 443, 726, 474, 477–8; C. '51, §§ 221, 243.]

The ballots for justice of the peace should be canvassed by the board of supervisors under the provisons of § 1150: Lynch v. Vermazen, 61–76.

The constable is properly a township officer although he is to be voted for under this section like a justice of the peace as a county officer by the voters of his township: State v. Bevans, 37–178.

SEC. 1074. Township trustees. There shall be elected in each township, annually, one trustee, who shall continue in office for three years. [17 G. A., ch. 12, §§ 1, 2; C. '73, § 591.]

SEC. 1075. Township clerk, assessor, highway supervisor. At the general election in each even-numbered year, there shall be elected in each civil township one township clerk, and, where not otherwise provided, one assessor, and one road supervisor in each road district, to be elected by the voters of such district, who shall hold their offices for the term of two years. [18 G. A., ch. 161, § 1; C. '73, § 591.]

The offices of township trustee and clerk are abolished in some cases where the township constitutes a city or town: See §§ 560–562.

As to method of voting for road supervisor and assessor, see § 1130.

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

SECTION 1076. Board of registers. In cities having a population of thirty-five hundred or more, not including the inmates of any state institution, the council, on or before the sixth Monday preceding each general election, shall appoint one suitable person from each of the two political parties which cast the greatest number of votes at the last general election, from three names presented by each chairman of the city central political committee of such parties, to be registers in each election precinct in the city for the registration of voters therein, who shall be electors of the precinct in which they are to serve, of good clerical ability, speaking the English language understandingly, temperate, of good habits and reputation, who shall qualify by taking an oath or affirmation to the effect that they will well and truly discharge all of the duties required of them by law. They shall hold their office for one year, and receive compensation at the rate of two dollars and fifty cents for each calendar day engaged in the discharge of their duties, to be paid by the county, except in case of city elections, when they shall be paid by the city. If for any cause such registers, or any of them, shall not be appointed at or before the time above mentioned, or, if appointed, shall be unable for any cause to discharge the duties of such office, the mayor of such city shall forthwith, on similar recommendation, make such appointments and fill all vacancies. Should the mayor, upon the request of five freehold electors, fail for a period of three days to perform the duties aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay, at the action of any such elector, the sum of one hundred dollars per day, for the equal benefit of the city and plaintiff. The provisions of this title shall apply to cities acting under special charters, with like effect as though said cities were acting under the general incorporation laws of the state. [26 G. A., ch. 62; 22 G. A., ch. 48, §§ 5, 12; 21 G. A., ch. 167, § 3.]

SEC. 1077. Registration. The registers shall meet on the second Thursday prior to any general election, at the usual voting place in the precinct in which they have been appointed, and shall hold continuous sessions for two consecutive days, from eight o'clock in the forenoon until nine o'clock in the afternoon, and, in presidential years, such sessions shall be held for three days. Any person claiming to be a voter, or that he will be on election day, may appear before them in the election precinct where he claims he is or will be entitled to vote, and make and subscribe, under oath, a statement in a registry book, to be provided by the clerk and furnished the registers, at the equal expense of the city and county, and kept open for public inspection and examination during the time fixed for the registration, which statement shall be in the following form and contain the following matter:

REGISTER OF VOTERS, ...PRECINCT, ...WARD.

Number.	Residence.	Name.	Age.	Nativity.	Color.	TERM OF RESIDENCE.			Naturalized.	Date of papers.	Court.	By act of Congress.	Qualified voter.	Date of application.	Last preceding place of residence.	SIGNATURE.

....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....	....

The signature of the applicant shall be made at the right hand end of the line under the column "Signature," one of the registers having first administered to him this form of oath: "You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will fully and truly answer all such questions as shall be put to you touching your place of residence, name, place of birth, your qualifications as an elector, and your right as such to register and vote under the laws of this state"; after which, the registers, or either of them, shall propound questions to the applicant for registration in relation to his name; his then place of residence, street and number; how long he has resided in the precinct where the vote is claimed; the last place of his residence before coming into that precinct; and also as to his citizenship, whether native or naturalized; if the latter, when, where, and in what court, or before what officer, or whether by act of congress; whether he came into the precinct for the purpose of voting at that election; how long he contemplates residing in the precinct; and such other questions as may tend to test his qualifications as a resident of the precinct, citizenship and right to vote at the poll; then, if the applicant appears to have the right to be registered, the registers shall fill out the above prescribed form of statement, which the applicant shall sign and swear to, as above provided. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 5.]

Former provisions for registry were held not in conflict with constitution, art. II, § 1, prescribing the qualifications of electors: Edmunds v. Banbury, 28-267. And an election without registry, where such was required by law, was held void, the provisions of the law being mandatory and imperative: Nefzger v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 46-642.

SEC. 1078. Statements—registry books—school elections. The statements thus made shall be dated and consecutively numbered, commencing with number one at each registration. At the close of each day's registration, the registry book shall be ruled off so as to prevent further entries, and, when not in use by the registers, shall be kept in the custody of the clerk until disposed of as provided by law. No person shall register at any other place or time than is designated in this chapter, and no registration of voters for school elections shall be required. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 10; 21 G. A., ch. 161, §§ 6, 8.]

SEC. 1079. List of voters. The registers shall, within three days after the registration made in the second week preceding the election, prepare two alphabetical lists, for their respective voting precincts, of the names of all persons registered, their residences, their last preceding places of residence, the dates of removal when removals occur within one year, nativity, color, term of residence in precinct, county and state, whether naturalized, date of papers, the naturalizing court, or place of naturalization if court is not known, whether naturalized by act of congress, date of application for registration; one of which lists they shall forthwith conspicuously post or cause to be posted at the usual place of holding elections in such precinct, for inspection of the public, and retain the other one in their possession. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 12; 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 7.]

SEC. 1080. Correction of registry—lists delivered to judges. On the Saturday before any election at which registration is required, the registers shall meet at the place where registration was last made, and hold a continuous session, from eight o'clock in the forenoon until nine o'clock in the afternoon, at which they shall revise and correct the registry book of voters, adding thereto, consecutively numbering them, the names of all applying for registration who on election day will be entitled to vote in that precinct, and by striking therefrom the name of any one not entitled to vote thereat. The registers shall revise and correct the alphabetical list in their possession to correspond therewith. When thus revised and corrected, it shall be certified and copied by the registers, who shall deliver, or cause to be delivered, such list and copy to the judges of the election of the proper precinct, and which delivery shall be made on election day, and before the opening of the polls. The copy thus delivered shall be preserved by the judges, and returned with the vote from that precinct, and the original to the clerk. At the opening of the polls and before any ballot shall be received, the judges of the election shall appoint one of their number, or one of the clerks, to check the name of each voter whose name is on the alphabetical lists, to whom a ballot is delivered. [22 G. A., ch. 48, §§ 1, 3, 4; 21 G. A., ch, 161, § 8.]

SEC. 1081. Appearance and hearing. All proceedings of registers shall be public, and any person entitled to vote in a precinct shall have the right to be heard before them in reference to corrections of or additions to the lists of such precinct. No person shall be admitted to registry unless he appears in person, except as in this chapter provided, and, if demanded, he shall furnish to the registers such proofs of his right thereto as may by law be required by judges of election of any person offering to vote. If an elector is, by reason of sickness, unable to go to the place of registry on any day the registers may be in session, the registers shall, upon the filing before them, by a registered elector, of an affidavit to that effect, visit such sick elector at his place of residence on any day when not in session, and place his name on the registry book and alphabetical list, if found entitled thereto; at which time and place the registers may administer the oath hereinbefore provided to be taken by applicants for registry. [21 G. A., ch. 161, § 9.]

SEC. 1082. Registration on election day. The registers shall also be in session on the day for the holding of each election, at some place convenient to, but not within one hundred feet of, the voting place, and during all the hours in which by law the polls are required to be kept open, for the purpose only of granting certificates of registration to persons who, being electors, are not registered. Such registration shall be allowed and certificate thereof granted only to a person who was absent from the city during all the days fixed for registration of voters for that election, or to a person who, being a foreigner, has received his final papers since the last preceding day for the registration of voters for that election, or to a person whose name was, on the preceding Saturday, and in the absence of such person, stricken from registration, and who, on said day of election, shall prove to the satisfaction of said registers that he is a lawfully qualified elector of said voting precinct. These certificates of registration shall contain all the data showing the qualification of the voter as shown by the registration, and, in addition, the special matter showing the voter's right to such certificate under this section, and, before delivery to the applicant, shall be indorsed by the registers, to the effect that the person therein named is a qualified voter in that precinct, and that he is entitled to be registered as such. The proper statement shall be signed and sworn to by the voter before one of the registers, supported by the affidavit of a freeholder who is a registered voter in that precinct, who shall make oath to the qualification of the applicant as a voter in that precinct; and if the applicant be one whose name was stricken from registration, such affidavit of said freeholder shall contain the facts showing the right of said applicant to vote in that precinct. Registration in such cases shall be made in the manner required for regular registration. The certificate of registration shall be handed in to the judges of election when a ballot is delivered to him. The data therefrom, showing the voter's name and his qualification as a voter, shall be entered on the alphabetical lists by the judges and clerks of the election, under the appropriate headings, and the original certificate shall be returned to the city clerk, who shall carefully preserve it in the same manner and for the same time as the alphabetical list and poll book. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 7.]

SEC. 1083. Striking off names. The registers, prior to each election except presidential elections, and after completing their registration, shall certify the names of all persons by them registered to the registers of the ward or precinct of the same city, which the registration shows such persons gave as their last place of residence, and the names of such persons so certified shall be stricken from the registry lists of the ward or precinct in which they last resided, if found thereon. [25 G. A., ch. 58, § 1.]

SEC. 1084. New registry—how often. A new registry of voters shall be taken in each year of a presidential election. For all other state or municipal elections, general or special, the registers shall prepare a new registry book in each year, by copying from the poll book of the preceding general election all the names found therein, adding thereto those of all persons registered and voting at any subsequent election, which new registry book shall show all the facts of qualification of each voter as they appear on the last preceding registry book, which, when thus made up, shall be used at each election until a new registry book is prepared as required by law. Every person thus registered shall be considered as entitled to vote at any election at which said registry book may be used, unless his name shall be dropped by the correction of registration, as authorized by law. [25 G. A., ch. 58, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 48, §§ 2, 3.]

SEC. 1085. Notice. The times and places of making registration of voters shall be published by the mayor in the two leading political party papers published in such city, except no publication shall be required for a special election. If there be but one such paper published in the city, publication of notice therein shall be sufficient. The publication shall be made for a period of three days prior to the opening of the registry book, if the paper is a daily paper, and for one week, if a weekly paper, and shall call the attention of the voters to the necessity of complying with the laws with reference to registration, in order to be entitled to vote at the ensuing election. [21 G. A., ch. 161, § 12.]

SEC. 1086. City clerk. The city clerk shall carefully preserve all registry books and alphabetical lists and other papers pertaining to the registration, until destroyed as provided in the chapter on the canvass of votes. He shall, on the application of the registers, deliver to them, prior to their first meeting for each election, the registry book, alphabetical list and poll book, which they require in order to properly prepare the necessary registry book for the next ensuing election; all of which shall be returned to him when they have completed their work for such election. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 6.]

SEC. 1087. Penalty. If any register shall fail to perform any duty required of him in this chapter, he shall forfeit the sum of one hundred dollars, to be recovered by any person in any court having jurisdiction; and if any register or judge of election shall wilfully neglect or disregard any duty imposed, or shall make, or permit to be made, any registration, statement or list, except at the time and place and in the manner herein authorized and prescribed, or shall knowingly make, or permit to be made, any false statement as aforesaid, or if any person shall wilfully make, or authorize to be made, any statement required to be made, false in any particular, or shall violate any of the provisions of this chapter, every such register or judge of election, person or persons, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, fined in a sum not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than twenty days, nor more than six months, or both, at the discretion of the court. [21 G. A., ch. 161, § 10.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF ELECTIONS.

SECTION 1088. All elections except school. The provisions of this chapter shall apply to all elections known to the laws of the state, except school elections. [21 G. A., ch. 141, § 2.]

SEC. 1089. General and special. The term "general election," as used in this chapter, shall apply to any election held for the choice of national, state, judicial, district, county or township officers; that of "city election" shall apply to any municipal election held in a city or town; and that of "special election" shall apply to any other election held for any purpose authorized or required by law. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 2.]

SEC. 1090. Election precincts. Each township, or, in case a township contains a city or a portion thereof, such portion of the township as is outside the limits of the city, and each ward of a city, shall, respectively, constitute an election precinct. But the board of supervisors or the council, as the case may be, shall have power to divide a township or part thereof, or a ward, into two or more precincts, or to change or abolish the same; or the board of supervisors and the council of any city of less than thirty-five hundred inhabitants, not including the inmates of any state institution, may combine any part of the township outside of such city with any or all the wards thereof as one election precinct, or change or abolish such precinct; or the council of such city may combine the several wards into one or more precincts. No precinct shall contain different townships or parts thereof. Each incorporated town shall constitute a precinct for town elections. No person shall vote in any precinct but that of his residence. [25 G. A., ch. 60; 21 G. A., ch. 141, § 2; C. '73, §§ 501, 603, 605; R., § 480; C. '51, § 245.]

Residence: By going into a township and remaining there for the sole purpose of voting, with no intention of remaining longer, one will not acquire sufficient residence to entitle him to vote; but if the removal is in good faith, no length of residence is necessary: State v. Minnick, 15–123.

Where the time, place and manner of holding elections are not prescribed by the constitution, but committed to the legislature, the reception of votes out of the precinct or the county of elector's residence may be constitutionally authorized: Morrison v. Springer, 15–304.

If no requirements as to length of residence were contained in the constitution, the legislature might fix such length of residence as it should see fit: Ibid.

The residence of a voter is the place of his domicile or place of abode, as distinguished from the residence acquired as a sojourner for business, education, or other temporary purpose. Therefore, held, that a student in the university at Iowa City, sent there and supported by his father, and making his father's home his "headquarters" during vacation, was not entitled to vote in Iowa City, though he had been there the requisite length of time and had no present intention of leaving there when he ceased to attend the university: Vanderpoel v. O'Hanlon, 53–246.

If the ballot of a voter is received it is no ground of complaint that an improper oath has been administered to him touching his qualifications: State ex rel. v. O'Day, 69–368.

Persons in military service: A soldier serving in the volunteer forces of the federal government does not thereby lose nor change his place of residence, which remains that of the county of his residence at the time of entering the service; and if he should be in such county on the day of election he would unquestionably have the right to vote, if otherwise qualified: Morrison v. Springer, 15–304.

And held, that the legislature may authorize the casting of ballots by soldiers at points where they are stationed outside the state: Ibid.

Under the statute authorizing persons absent from the state in military service to vote at general elections, held, that the submission of a proposition for the disposition of swamp lands at a special election at which persons in the military service could not vote was not illegal: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Boone County, 34–45.

SEC. 1091. Polling places for country precincts. Polling places for precincts outside the limits of a city, but within the township in which the city is in whole or in part situated, may, for the convenience of the voters, be fixed at some room or rooms in the court-house, or in some other building within the limits of the city, as the board of supervisors may provide. [21 G. A., ch. 161, § 14.]

SEC. 1092. Notice of boundaries of precincts. The board of supervisors or council shall number or name the several precincts established, and cause the boundaries of each to be recorded in the records of said board of supervisors or council, as the case may be, and publish notice thereof in some newspaper of general circulation, published in such county or city, once each week for three consecutive weeks, the last to be made at least thirty days before the next general election. The precincts thus established shall continue until changed. [C. '73, § 604.]

SEC. 1093. Election boards. Election boards shall consist of three judges and two clerks. Not more than two judges and not more than one clerk shall belong to the same political party or organization, if there be one or more electors qualified and willing to act as such judge or clerk, and a member or members of opposite parties. In cities and towns, the councilmen shall be judges of election; but in case more than two councilmen belonging to the same political party or organization are residents of the same election precinct, the county board of supervisors may designate which of them shall serve as judges. In township precincts, the clerk of the township shall be a clerk of election of the precinct in which he resides, and the trustees of the township shall be judges of election, except that, in townships not divided into election precincts, if all the trustees be of the same political party, those two only whose terms expire in one and two years from the following January shall be judges of such precinct. The membership of such election board shall be made up or completed by the board of supervisors from the parties which cast the largest and next largest number of votes in said precinct at the last general election, or that one which is unrepresented; but, in city and town elections, the powers given in this chapter and duties herein made incumbent upon the board of supervisors shall be performed by the council. If, at the opening of the polls in any precinct, there shall be a vacancy in the office of clerk or judge of election, the same shall be filled by the members of the board present, and from the political party which is entitled to such vacant office under the provisions of this chapter. The election board at any special election shall be the same as at the last preceding general election. In case of vacancies happening therein, the county auditor may make the appointments to fill the same when the board of supervisors is not in session. [26 G. A., ch. 68, § 3; C. '73, §§ 606–8; R., §§ 481–3; C. '51, §§ 246–8.]

SEC. 1094. Oath. Before opening the polls, each of the judges and clerks shall take the following oath: "I, A. B., do solemnly swear that I will impartially, and to the best of my knowledge and ability, perform the duties of judge (or clerk) of this election, and will studiously endeavor to prevent fraud, deceit and abuse in conducting the same." [C. '73, § 609; R., § 484; C. '51, § 249.]

These provisions are directory. A failure of the officers mentioned to be sworn will not vitiate the election, and in a case in court involving the validity of an election, the fact that the officers were sworn may be proved aliunde. The return is not conclusive: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212.

SEC. 1095. How administered. Any one of the judges or clerks present may administer the oath to the others, and it shall be entered in the poll books, subscribed by the person taking it, and certified by the officer administering it. [C. '73, § 610; R., § 485; C. '51, § 250.]

SEC. 1096. Polls open—proclamation. At all elections the polls shall be opened at eight o'clock in the forenoon, except in cities where registration is required, when the polls shall be opened at seven o'clock in the forenoon, or in each case as soon thereafter as vacancies in the places of judges or clerks of election have been filled. In all cases the polls shall be closed at six o'clock in the evening. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 32; C. '73, § 611; R., § 486; C. '51, § 251.]

SEC. 1097. Voting by ballot. In all elections regulated by this chapter, the voting shall be by ballots printed and distributed as hereinafter provided, except as may be otherwise specially directed by law. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 1.]

SEC. 1098. Nomination by convention. Any convention of delegates, and any primary, caucus or meeting of qualified electors, representing a political party which, at the general election next preceding, polled at least two per cent. of the entire vote cast in the state, may, for the state, or any division or municipality thereof for which the same is held, make one nomination of a candidate for each office therein to be filled at the election, and any such convention, primary, caucus or meeting, representing a political party which, at the general election next preceding, polled at least two per cent. of the entire vote cast in any division or municipality of the state, may, for such division or municipality, or for any political subdivision thereof for which the same is held, make one such nomination for each office therein to be filled at the election. [Same, § 4.]

SEC. 1099. Certificates. Certificates of nominations, made as provided in the preceding section, shall, besides containing the names of candidates, specify as to each:

1. The office to which he is nominated;
2. The party making such nomination, or political principle which he represents, expressed in not more than five words;
3. His place of residence, with the street and number thereof, if any.

In case of electors for president and vice-president of the United States, the names of the candidates for president and vice-president may be added to the party or political name. Every such certificate of nomination shall be signed by the presiding officer and secretary of the convention, caucus or meeting of qualified electors, or by the board of canvassers to which the returns of such primary election are made, each of whom shall add to his signature his place of residence, and shall be sworn to by each signer thereof to be true to the best of his knowledge and belief, and a certificate of the oath shall be annexed to the certificate of nomination. The presiding officer and secretary of each convention, primary, caucus or meeting shall also certify, to the officer with whom the nomination certificates are filed, the names and addresses of each of the members of the executive or central committee appointed or elected by or representing it, and the provisions, if any, made by it for filling vacancies in nominations; and this may be done in the nomination certificate, or by a separate certificate. [Same, §§ 4, 6.]

SEC. 1100. Nominations by petition. Nominations for candidates for state offices may also be made by nomination paper or papers signed by not less than five hundred qualified voters of the state; for county, district or other division, not less than a county, by such paper or papers signed by not less than twenty-five qualified voters, residents of such county, district or division; and for township, city, town or ward, by such paper or papers signed by not less than ten qualified voters, residents of such township, city, town or ward; but the name of a candidate placed upon the ballot by any other method shall not be added by petition for the same office. Each elector so petitioning shall add to his signature his place of business and post-office address. [Same, § 5.]

Petitioners who have candidates placed on the ballot without a nominating convention are not entitled to have their ticket headed by the name of the party which they may claim to represent, when such party nominates a ticket by convention. The appellation of the ticket is a matter to be determined by the officers making up the ballot: Lowery v. Davis, 70 N. W., 190.

SEC. 1101. Withdrawals. Any candidate named by either of the methods authorized in this chapter may withdraw his nomination by a written request, signed and acknowledged by him before any officer empowered to take the acknowledgment of deeds, and filed in the office of the secretary of state fifteen days, or the proper auditor or clerk eight days, before the day of election, and no name so withdrawn shall be printed upon the ballot. In case of a special election to fill vacancies in office, such withdrawal papers shall be filed with the secretary of state seven days, and with the proper auditor or clerk four days, before the day of such special election. [Same, § 8.]

SEC. 1102. Vacancies filled. If a candidate declines a nomination, or dies before election day, or should any certificate of nomination or nomination paper be held insufficient or inoperative by the officer with whom it may be filed, or in case any objection made to any certificate of nomination, nomination paper, or to the eligibility of any candidate therein named, is sustained by the board appointed to determine such questions as hereinafter provided, the vacancy or vacancies thus occasioned may be filled by the convention, caucus, meeting or primary, or other persons making the original nominations, or in such a manner as such convention, caucus, meeting or primary has previously provided. If the time is insufficient for again holding such convention, caucus, meeting or primary, or in case no such previous provisions being made, such vacancy shall be filled by the regularly elected or appointed executive or central committee of the particular division or district representing the political party or persons holding such convention, primary, meeting or caucus, and certified as hereinbefore provided. The certificates of nominations made to supply such vacancies shall state, in addition to the facts hereinbefore required, the name of the original nominee, the date of his death or declination of nomination, or the fact that the former nomination has been held insufficient or inoperative, and the measures taken in accordance with the above requirements for filling a vacancy, and shall be signed and sworn to by the presiding officer and secretary of the convention, caucus, meeting or primary, or by the chairman and secretary of the committee, as the case may be. [Same, § 9.]

SEC. 1103. Objections. All objections or other questions arising in relation to certificates of nomination or nomination papers shall be filed with the officer with whom the certificate of nomination or nomination papers to which objection is made are filed. Those with the secretary of state shall be filed not less than twenty days, and those with other officers not less than eight days, before the day of election, except that nominations to fill vacancies occurring after said time, or in case of nomination made to be voted on at a special election, objections shall be filed within three days after the filing of the certificate or nomination papers. Objections filed with the secretary of state shall be considered by the secretary and auditor of state and attorney-general, and a majority decision shall be final; but if the objection is to the certificate or nomination papers of one or more of the above named officers, said officer or officers so objected to shall not pass upon the same, but their places shall be filled, respectively, by the treasurer of state, the governor, and the superintendent of public instruction. Objections filed with the county auditor shall be considered by the county auditor, clerk of the district court and county attorney, and a majority decision shall be final; but if the objection is to the certificate or nomination papers of one or more of the above named county officers, said officer or officers so objected to shall not pass upon such objection, but their places shall be filled, respectively, by the county treasurer, the sheriff and county superintendent. Objections filed with the city or town clerk shall be considered by the mayor and clerk and one member of the council chosen by the council by ballot, and a majority decision shall be final; but if the objection is to the certificate or nomination papers of either of said city or town officials, he shall not pass upon said objection, but his place shall be filled by a member of the council against whom no such objection exists, chosen as above provided. When any of the above objections are made, notice shall forthwith be given to the candidate affected thereby, addressed to his place of residence as given in the certificate or nomination papers, stating that objections have been made to his certificate or nomination papers, also stating the time and place such objections will be considered. [Same, § 10.]

SEC. 1104. Filing certificates and petitions. Certificates of nomination and nomination papers of candidates for state, congressional, judicial and legislative offices shall be filed with the secretary of state, not more than sixty nor less than thirty days; those for all other officers, except for cities and towns, with the county auditors of the respective counties, not more than sixty nor less than twenty days; and for the offices in the cities and towns, with the clerks thereof, not more than forty nor less than ten days, before the day fixed by law for the holding of the election. Such certificates and nomination papers thus filed, and being apparently in conformity with law, shall be regarded as valid, unless objection in writing thereto shall be made, and, under proper regulations, shall be open to public inspection, and preserved by the receiving officer for not less than six months after the election is had. Any error found in such papers may be corrected by the substitution of another, executed as is required for an original nomination certificate or paper. In case of special election to fill vacancies in office, certificates of nomination or nomination papers, for nomination of candidates for office to be filled by the electors of a larger district than a county, may be filed with the secretary of state, not later than ten days before the time of election. Certificates of nomination or nomination papers, nominating candidates for office to be filled by the electors of a county, may be filed with the county auditor at any time not less than five days before the election. [26 G. A., ch. 68, §§ 1–2; 24 G. A., ch. 33, §§ 4, 7, 8, 10.]

SEC. 1105. Nominations transmitted to county auditor. Not less than fifteen days before the election, the secretary of state must certify to the auditor of each county in which any of the electors have the right to vote for any candidate or candidates, the name and residence of each person nominated, whether an original nomination or to fill a vacancy, to be voted for at such election, and the order in which the tickets shall appear on the ballot. Should a vacancy in the nominations occur and be filled after this certificate has been forwarded, a like certificate shall at once issue and be sent the proper officer. In case of special election to fill vacancy in office, the certificate by the secretary of state to the county auditor may be made at any time not later than seven days before the election. [26 G. A., ch. 68, §§ 1, 2; 24 G. A., ch. 33, §§ 11–13.]

SEC. 1106. Ballot—form. The names of all candidates to be voted for in each election precinct shall be printed on one ballot, all nominations of any political party or group of petitioners being placed under the party name or title of such party or group, as designated by them in their certificates of nomination or petitions, or, if none be designated, then under some suitable title, and the ballot shall contain no other names, except that, in case of electors for president and vice-president of the United States, the names of the candidates for president and vice-president may be added to the party or political designation. Each list of candidates for the several parties and groups of petitioners shall be placed in a separate column on the ballot, in such order as the authorities charged with the printing of the ballots shall decide, except as otherwise provided, and be called a ticket. But the name of no candidate shall appear upon the ballot in more than one place for the same office, whether nominated by convention, primary, caucus or petition. Where two or more conventions, primaries or caucuses, or any two of them, may nominate the same candidate for any office, the name of such candidate shall be printed under the name of the party first filing nomination papers bearing such name, unless the candidate himself shall, in writing duly verified, request the officer with whom the nomination papers are filed to cause the name to be printed upon some other ticket. Each of the columns containing the list of candidates, including the party name, shall be separated by a distinct line. Said ballot shall be substantially in the following form:

○ REPUBLICAN.	○ DEMOCRATIC.	○ PROHIBITION.	○ UNION LABOR.
For Governor,	For Governor,	For Governor,	For Governor,
☐ A..... B..... of.....County.	☐ G..... H..... of.....County.	☐ M..... N..... of.....County.	☐ S..... T..... of.....County.
For Lieutenant Governor,	For Lieutenant Governor,	For Lieutenant Governor,	For Lieutenant Governor,
☐ C..... D..... of.....County.	☐ I..... J..... of.....County.	☐ O..... P..... of.....County.	☐ U..... V..... of.....County.
For Judge of Supreme Court,	For Judge of Supreme Court,	For Judge of Supreme Court,	For Judge of Supreme Court,
☐ E..... F..... of.....County.	☐ K..... L..... of.....County.	☐ Q..... R..... of.....County.	☐ W..... X..... of.....County.

When a constitutional amendment or other public measure is to be voted upon by the electors, it shall be printed in full upon the ballot, after the list of candidates, preceded by the words, "Shall the following amendment to the constitution (or public measure) be adopted?" and upon the right hand margin, opposite these words, two spaces shall be left, one for votes favoring such amendment or public measure, and the other for votes opposing the same. In one of these spaces the word "yes" or other word required by law shall be printed; in the other, the word "no" or other word required, and to the right of each space a square shall be printed to receive the voting cross, all of which shall be substantially in the following form:

"Shall the following amendment to the constitution (or public measure) be adopted?"

(Here insert in full the proposed constitutional amendment or public measure.)

Yes.
No.

The elector shall designate his vote by a cross mark, thus X, placed in the proper square. [Same, §§ 14, 16.]

SEC. 1107. Printing. For all elections held under this chapter, except those of cities or towns, the county auditor shall have charge of the printing of ballots in his county, and shall cause to be placed thereon the names of all candidates which have been certified to him by the secretary of state, in the order the same appear upon the certificate issued by the secretary of state, together with those of all other candidates to be voted for thereat, whose nominations have been made in conformity with law. If a township election precinct includes a town or any part thereof, the names of nominees for township assessors shall not be placed upon the official ballot for that precinct. In city or town elections, the clerk shall have charge of the printing of the ballots, and shall cause to be placed thereon the names of all candidates to be voted for thereat, whose nominations have been made as provided in this chapter; and in either case such ballots shall be furnished the election judges at the polling place in each precinct not less than twelve hours before the opening of the polls on the morning of the election. [Same, § 15.]

Where the auditor refused to furnish ballots containing the names of persons who it was claimed had been properly put in nomination to be voted for at a town election and the officers of the town thereupon caused to be printed ballots containing such names which ballots were distributed by the officers of election and used by the voters, held, that these ballots were not such as were contemplated by law and that the election was wholly invalid, and that this must be the result whether the law in this respect is to be deemed mandatory or only directory: State ex rel. v. Smith, 63 N. W., 453. [But now see § 1122.]

SEC. 1108. Vacancies filled. The name supplied for a vacancy by the certificate of the secretary of state, or by nomination certificates or papers for a vacancy filed with the county auditor, or city or town clerk, shall, if the ballots are not already printed, be placed on the ballots in place of the name of the original nominee, or, if the ballots have been printed, new ballots, whenever practicable, shall be furnished. Whenever it may not be practicable to have new ballots printed, the election officers having charge of them shall place the name supplied for the vacancy upon each ballot used before delivering it to the judges of election. If said ballots have already been delivered to the judges of election, said auditor or clerk shall immediately furnish the name of such substituted nominee to all judges of election within the territory in which said nominee may be a candidate, and such election officer having charge of the ballots shall place the name supplied for the vacancy upon each ballot issued before delivering it to the voter, by affixing a paster, or by writing or stamping the name thereon. [Same, §§ 11, 12.]

SEC. 1109. Method of printing. The ballot shall be on plain white paper, through which the printing or writing cannot be read. The party name or title shall be printed in capital letters, not less than one-fourth of an inch in height; and a circle one-half inch in diameter shall be printed at the beginning of the line in which such name or title is printed. The names of candidates shall be printed in capital letters not less than one-eighth nor more than one-fourth of an inch in height, and, at the beginning of each line in which the name of a candidate is printed, a square shall be printed, the sides of which shall not be less than one-fourth of an inch in length. On the back or outside of the ballot, so as to appear when folded, shall be printed the words "official ballot," followed by the designation of the polling place for which the ballot is prepared, the date of the election, and a facsimile of the signature of the auditor or other officer who has caused the ballot to be printed. [Same, § 14.]

SEC. 1110. Delivery of official ballots to judges. Ballots shall be printed and in the possession of the officer charged with their distribution at least two days before the election, and subject to the inspection of candidates and their agents. If mistakes are discovered, they shall be corrected without delay, in the manner provided in this chapter. The officers charged with the printing of the ballots shall cause to be delivered to the judges of election seventy-five ballots, of the kind to be voted in such precinct, for every fifty votes or fraction thereof cast therein at the last preceding election of state officers. Such ballots shall be put up in separate sealed packages, with marks on the outside, clearly designating the polling place for which they are intended and the number of ballots inclosed, and receipt therefor shall be given by the judge or judges of election to whom they are delivered, which receipt shall be preserved by the officer charged with the printing of the ballots. Any officer charged with the printing and distribution of ballots shall provide and retain at his office an ample supply of ballots, in addition to those distributed to the several voting precincts, and if at any time the ballots furnished to any precinct shall be lost, destroyed or exhausted before the polls are closed, on written application, signed by a majority of the judges of such precinct, or signed and sworn to by one of such judges, he shall immediately cause to be delivered to such judges, at the polling place, such additional supply of ballots as may be required, and sufficient to comply with the provisions of this chapter. For general elections, the supply of ballots so retained shall only equal the number provided for the precinct casting the largest vote at the preceding general election, and shall include only the portions of the various tickets to be voted for throughout the entire county, with blank spaces in which the names of candidates omitted may be written by the voter, and with blank spaces in the indorsement upon the back of such ballots, in which the name of the precinct shall be written by the judges of election. [Same, § 15.]

SEC. 1111. Card of instructions. The officer whose duty it is to have the ballots printed shall cause to be copied upon cards in large, clear type, under the heading "Card of Instructions," the following matters for the guidance of the voters:

1. The manner of obtaining ballots;
2. The manner of marking ballots;
3. That unmarked or improperly marked ballots will not be counted;
4. The method of gaining assistance in marking ballots;
5. That any erasures or identification marks, or otherwise spoiling or defacing a ballot, will render it invalid;
6. Not to vote a spoiled or defaced ballot;
7. How to obtain a new ballot in place of a spoiled or defaced one;
8. Upon the right of an employe to absent himself for two hours for the purpose of voting, by application for leave so to do made before the day of election, without deduction from his salary or wages;
9. Any other matters thought necessary.

Such instructions shall be prepared by the attorney-general and delivered to the secretary of state, who shall cause copies of the same to be furnished to the county auditor of each county. New or amended instructions may be so prepared from time to time, if thought necessary, and copies thereof furnished to the county auditors, who shall furnish to the judges of election a sufficient number of such cards of instruction as will enable them to comply with the provisions of this chapter. [Same, § 17.]

SEC. 1112. Cards posted—publication of ballot. The judges of election shall cause at least one of each of such cards to be posted in each voting booth or apartment provided for the preparation of ballots, and not less than four, with an equal number of sample ballots, in and about the polling place, upon the day of election before the opening of the polls. The county auditor shall cause to be published, prior to the day of election, in two newspapers, if there be so many published in such county, selecting, if possible, papers representing the political parties which cast at the preceding general election the largest number and the next largest number of votes, a list of all the nominations made, as herein provided, and to be voted for at such election, as near as may be in the form in which they shall appear upon the general ballot, but such publication shall not include portions of the ballot relating to township, city or town officers. [Same, § 18.]

SEC. 1113. Polling places—voting booths. In townships the trustees, and in cities and towns the mayor and clerk, shall provide suitable places in which to hold all elections provided for in this chapter, and see that the same are warmed, lighted, and furnished with proper supplies and conveniences, including a sufficient number or supply of booths, shelves, pens, penholders, ink, blotters and pencils to enable the voter to prepare his ballot for voting, screened from all observation as to the manner in which he does so. A guard rail shall be so constructed and placed that only such persons as are inside such rail can approach within six feet of the ballot box, or of the booths. The voting booths shall be so arranged that they can only be reached by passing within said guard rail, and so that they shall be in plain view of the election officers, and both booths and ballot boxes shall be in plain view of persons outside of the guard rail. Each booth shall be at least three feet square, and have three sides inclosed, the side in front to open and shut by a door swinging outward, or closed with a curtain. Each side of the booth shall be seven feet high, and the door or curtain shall extend to within two feet of the floor, and shall be closed while the voter is preparing his ballot. Each booth shall contain a shelf at least one foot wide, at a convenient height for writing, and shall be well lighted. The booths and compartments shall be so built and arranged, if possible, as to be permanent, so that after the election they may be taken down and deposited with the township, city or town clerk, as the case may be, for safe keeping and for future use. The number of voting booths shall not be less than one to every sixty voters or fraction thereof who voted at the last preceding election in the precinct. In precincts outside of cities and towns the election shall, if practicable, be held in the public school building, for the use of which there shall be no charge, but all damage to the building or furniture shall be paid by the county. [Same, § 20.]

SEC. 1114. Ballot furnished to voter. The judges of election of their respective precints shall have charge of the ballots and furnish them to the voters. Any person desiring to vote shall give his name, and, if required, his residence, to such judges, one of whom shall thereupon announce the same in a loud and distinct tone of voice, clear and audible. In precincts where registration is required, if such name is found on the register of voters by the officer having charge thereof, he shall likewise repeat such name in the same manner; if the name of the person desiring to vote is not found on the register of voters, his ballot shall not be received until he shall have complied with the law prescribing the manner and conditions of voting by unregistered voters. [Same, § 19.]

SEC. 1115. Challenges. Any person offering to vote may be challenged as unqualified by any judge or elector; and it is the duty of each of the judges to challenge any person offering to vote whom he knows or suspects not to be duly qualified; and he shall not receive a ballot from a voter who is challenged, until such voter shall have established his right to vote. When any person is so challenged, the judges shall explain to him the qualifications of an elector, and may examine him under oath touching his qualifications as a voter. In all precincts where registration is not required, and in other precincts where the name of such voter is entered upon the registration lists, if the person challenged insists that he is qualified, and the challenge is not withdrawn, one of the judges shall tender to him the following oath: "You do solemnly swear that you are a citizen of the United States, that you are a resident in good faith of this precinct, that you are twenty-one years of age as you verily believe, that you have been a resident of this county sixty days, and of this state six months next preceding this election, and that you have not voted at this election," and if he takes such oath, his vote shall be received. [Same, § 21; C. '73, §§ 619, 620; R., §§ 493–4; C. '51, §§ 258–9.]

SEC. 1116. Method of voting. Any voter entitled to receive a ballot under the provisions of this chapter shall be allowed to enter the space inclosed by the guard rail. One of the judges shall give him one, and only one, ballot, on the back of which such judge shall indorse his initials, in such manner that they may be seen when the ballot is properly folded, and the voter's name shall immediately be checked on the registry list. The name of each person, when a ballot is delivered to him, shall be entered by each of the clerks of election in the poll-book kept by him, in the place provided therefor. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 21; C. '73, § 621; R., § 495; C. '51, § 260.]

SEC. 1117. Depositing ballot. On receipt of the ballot, the voter shall, without leaving the inclosed space, retire alone to one of the voting booths, and without delay mark his ballot, and, before leaving the voting booth, shall fold the same in such manner as to conceal the marks thereon, and deliver the same to one of the judges of election, but the number of the voter on the poll-books or register lists shall not be indorsed on the back of his ballot. One of the judges of election shall thereupon, in the presence of the voter, deposit such ballot in the ballot box, but no ballot without the official indorsement shall be allowed to be deposited therein. The voter shall quit said inclosed space as soon as he has voted. Any voter who, after receiving an official ballot, decides not to vote, shall, before retiring from within the guard rail, surrender to the election officers the official ballot which has been given him, and such fact shall be noted on each of the poll lists. A refusal to surrender such ballot shall subject the person so offending to immediate arrest and the penalties provided in this chapter. No voter shall vote or offer to vote any ballot except such as he has received from the judges of election in charge of the ballots. No person shall take or remove any ballot from the polling place before the close of the poll. No voter shall be allowed to occupy a voting booth already occupied by another nor remain within said inclosed space more than ten minutes, nor to occupy a voting booth more than five minutes, in case all of said voting booths are in use and other voters waiting to occupy the same, nor to again enter the inclosed space after having voted; nor shall more than two voters in excess of the whole number of voting booths provided be allowed at any one time in such inclosed space, except by the authority of the election officers to keep order and enforce the law. [24 G. A., ch. 33, §§ 20–2, 25; C. '73, § 617; R., § 492; C. '51, § 257.]

SEC. 1118. Assistance to vote. Any voter who may declare upon oath that he cannot read the English language, or that, by reason of any physical disability, he is unable to mark his ballot, shall, upon request, be assisted in marking the same by two of the election officers of different political parties, to be selected from the judges and clerks of the precinct in which they are to act, to be designated by the judges of election of each precinct at the opening of the polls. Such officers shall mark the ballot as directed by the voter, and shall thereafter give no information regarding the same. The clerks of election shall enter upon the poll lists, after the name of any elector who received such assistance in marking his ballot, a memorandum of the fact. Intoxication shall not be regarded as a physical disability, and no intoxicated person shall be entitled to assistance in marking his ballot. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 23.]

SEC. 1119. Marking the ballot. Upon retiring to the voting booth, the voter shall prepare his ballot by placing a cross in the square opposite the name of each candidate for whom he desires to vote, or, if he desires to vote for all the candidates upon any ticket, he may do so by placing a cross in the circle at the head of the ticket. The voter may also insert in writing, in the proper place, the name of any person for whom he desires to vote, making a cross opposite thereto. The unnecessary marking of a cross in a square below a marked circle shall not affect the validity of his vote. [Same, § 22.]

The ballot is not to be counted in favor of one whose name is written thereon unless the written name is preceded by a cross in the circle before it. This was a case where no ticket was designated by a cross in the circle. State v. Hagen, 91–510.

Under prior provisions, held, that where a ticket was selected by a cross in the circle at the head of it the voter was not authorized to designate individual candidates on that ticket by crosses in the squares where two or more candidates were to be elected to the same office and that it was not practicable in such case to vote for one candidate for such office on another ticket, and have the vote counted for another candidate for that office on the ticket marked with a cross in the circle. The difficulty in such case was that it was impossible to determine who were the opposing candidates on the two tickets, and the ballot could be counted only in favor of the candidate on the opposing ticket whose name was indicated by a cross: Ibid; Whittam v. Zahorik, 91–23. [But there is now no provision for voting for a candidate on another ticket when one ticket is marked with a cross in the circle.]

It is only by the form of marking designated by the statute that the intention of the voter can be ascertained and under these statutory provisions the general rule that the ballot will be counted in accordance with the apparent intention of the voter is not applicable: Whittam v. Zahorik, 91–23.

As to the effect to be given to the discoverable intention of the voter under prior statutes, see Wimmer v. Eaton, 72–374; Brown v. McCollum, 76–479.

SEC. 1120. How counted. Ballots marked as first provided in the preceding section shall be counted for the candidates designated by the marks in the squares. When a circle is marked, the ballot shall be counted for all the names upon the ticket beneath said circle. The making of a cross in the square of another ticket than the one marked in the circle shall not affect the validity of the ballot, except as to the office for which the person opposite whose name such cross was made is a candidate, and as to that office the vote shall not be counted. When more than one circle is marked, the ballot shall be rejected. When only one candidate for any office is to be elected, if the voter marks in squares opposite the names of more than one candidate therefor, such vote shall not be counted for such office, whether the circle is marked or not. When two or more officers of the same kind are to be elected, if more squares opposite the names of candidates for such office are marked than there are officers to be elected to such office, the ballot shall not be counted for any such candidates. If for any reason it is impossible to determine the voter's choice for any office to be filled, his ballot shall not be counted for such office. Any ballot marked by the voter in any other manner than as authorized in this chapter, and so that such mark may be used for the purpose of identifying such ballot, shall be rejected. [Same, §§ 22, 27.]

Under provisions not now preserved as to the effect of identification marks, see Whittam v. Zahorik, 91-23; Cook v. Fisher, 69 N. W., 264.

SEC. 1121. Voting mark—spoiled ballots. The voting mark shall be a cross in the circle or square. Any voter who shall spoil his ballot may, on returning the same to the judges, receive another in place thereof, but no voter shall receive more than three ballots, including the one first delivered to him. None but ballots provided in accordance with the provisions of this chapter shall be counted. [Same, §§ 22, 25.]

SEC. 1122. Defects in printed ballot. No ballot properly marked by the voter shall be rejected because of any discrepancy between the printed ballot and the nomination paper or certificate of nomination, and it shall be counted for the candidate or candidates for such offices named in the nomination paper or certificate of nomination. No ballot furnished by the proper officer shall be rejected for any error in stamping or writing the indorsements thereon by the officials charged with such duties, nor because of any error on the part of the officer charged with such duty in delivering the wrong ballots at any precinct or polling place, but any ballot delivered by the proper official to any voter shall, if properly marked by the voter, be counted as cast for all candidates for whom the voter had the right to vote, and for whom he has voted.

The act of the judges in correcting the name of a candidate on the official ballots properly furnished to them, held not to render the ballots void. Cook v. Fisher, 69 N. W., 264.

The ballot law is mandatory in the sense that it requires in the preparation of the official ballot strict compliance with all its provisions, but not in the sense that the voter's right to exercise the elective franchise will be lost because of some technical mistake in printing the names of candidates upon the ballot: Ibid.

While none but official ballots are to be used or counted, there is no affirmative declaration that the correction of official ballots will render them void: Ibid.

SEC. 1123. Employes. Any person entitled to vote at a general election shall, on the day of such election, be entitled to absent himself from any services in which he is then employed for a period of two hours, between the time of opening and closing the polls, which period may be designated by the employer, and such voter shall not be liable to any penalty, nor shall any deduction be made from his usual salary or wages, on account of such absence, but application for such absence shall be made prior to the day of election. Any employer who shall refuse to an employe the privilege, conferred by this section, or shall subject such employe to a penalty or reduction of wages because of the exercise of such privilege, or shall in any manner attempt to influence or control such employe as to how he shall vote, by offering any reward, or threatening discharge from employment, or otherwise intimidating or attempting to intimidate such employe from exercising his right to vote, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 24.]

SEC. 1124. Persons at polling place. No persons shall, during the receiving and counting of the ballots at any polling place, loiter, or congregate, or do any electioneering or soliciting of votes, within one hundred feet of any outside door of any building affording access to any room where the polls are held, or of any outside door of any building affording access to any hallway, corridor, or stairway, or other means of reaching such room, nor shall any person interrupt, hinder or oppose any voter while approaching or leaving the polling place for the purpose of voting; but any person who is by law authorized to perform or is charged with the performance of official duties at the election, and any number of persons, not exceeding three from each political party having candidates to be voted for at such election, to act as challenging committees, who are appointed and accredited by the executive or central committee of such political party or organization, respectively, or of persons not exceeding three from each of such political parties, appointed and accredited in the same manner as above prescribed for challenging committees, to witness the counting of ballots, may be present at the polling place. [Same, § 26; 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 9; 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 13.]

SEC. 1125. Special policemen. The city council shall detail and employ, on the nomination of the principal political committee of each political party recognized as the two leading parties, from citizens, or the police force of the city, from two to four special policemen for each precinct, and fully empower them for the special occasion of each election, who shall be men of good character and reputation, in equal numbers from each of the leading political parties, to prevent the violation of any of the terms, provisions or requirements of this chapter, or of any other command made in pursuance of any provisions hereof, and no other peace officer than those above named shall exercise his authority for preserving order at or within one hundred feet of such voting places, unless called in by an emergency. If no policeman be in attendance, the judges of election may appoint one or more specially, by writing, who shall have all the powers of such special policeman. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 9; 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 13.]

SEC. 1126. Constables. Except in voting precincts within any city, any constable of the township, who may be designated by the judges of election, shall attend at the place of election; if none attend, the judges of the election may, in writing, specially appoint one or more, who shall have all the powers of a regular constable. [C. '73, § 612; R., § 487; C. '51, § 252.]

SEC. 1127. Preserving order. All special policemen and constables are authorized and required to preserve order and peace at all places of election, and such special policemen, constables, and all other persons are authorized and required to obey the lawful orders and commands of said judges of election given to prevent violations of this chapter. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 9; 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 13; C.'73, § 612; R., § 487; C.'51, § 252.]

SEC. 1128. Arrest of disorderly persons. If any person conducts himself in a noisy, riotous, tumultuous or disorderly manner at or about the polls, so as to disturb the election, or insults or abuses the judges or clerks of election, or commits a breach of the peace, or violates any of the provisions of this chapter, the judges or clerks of the election, or any of them, shall order the arrest of any such person, and the constable or any special policeman may forthwith arrest him and bring him before the judges of election, and they, by a warrant under their hands, may commit him to the jail of the county for a term not exceeding twenty-four hours, but they shall permit him to vote. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 9; 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 13; C.'73, § 613; R., § 488; C.'51, § 253.]

SEC. 1129. Expenses. The expense of providing booths, guard rails, and other things required in this chapter shall be paid in the same manner as other election expenses. The printing and distributing of ballots and cards of instruction to the voters, described in this chapter, for any general election, shall be at the expense of the county, and shall be provided for in the same manner as other county election expenses. The printing and distribution of ballots for use in city elections shall be at the expense of the city or town in which the election shall be held. [24 G. A., ch. 33, §§ 2, 20.]

SEC. 1130. Ballot boxes. The board of supervisors shall provide for each precinct in the county, for the purpose of elections, one box, with lock and key. The township trustees of each township shall cause to be prepared, for each election precinct in such township, a separate ballot box to receive the votes for supervisors of roads, with as many different compartments as there are road districts in the township or election precinct, and numbered accordingly. The vote for supervisor of roads shall be on a separate ballot, and the judges of election shall place such ballot in the compartment of such ballot box numbered to correspond with the number of the road district in which such voter resides. When any township precinct includes a town or part thereof, together with territory outside the limits of such town, the township trustees shall prepare a separate ballot box to receive the votes for township assessor, which shall be on separate ballots, and only the ballots of persons living outside of the limits of such town shall be placed in said ballot box. The judges of election shall place each ballot in its proper ballot box. The judges of election shall have the right to administer an oath to any voter, and to examine him under oath as to the road supervisor and assessor for whom such elector is entitled to vote. [17 G. A., ch. 71, §§ 2, 3; C.'73, § 614; R., § 489; C.'51, § 254.]

SEC. 1131. Voting by women. At all elections where women may vote, no registration of women shall be required; separate ballots shall be furnished for the question on which they are entitled to vote; a separate ballot box shall be provided in which all ballots cast by them shall be deposited, and a separate canvass thereof made by the judges of the election, and the returns thereof shall show such vote. The right of any citizen to vote at any city, town or school election, on the question of issuing any bonds for municipal or school purposes, and for the purpose of borrowing money, or on the question of increasing the tax levy, shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex. [25 G. A., ch. 39.]

SEC. 1132. Registry and poll-books. The county auditor shall prepare and furnish to each precinct two poll-books, having each of them a sufficient column for the names of the voters, a column for the number, and sufficient printed blank leaves to contain the entries of the oaths, certificates and returns; and also all books, blanks and materials necessary to carry out the provisions of the chapter on registration of voters. [C.'73, § 615; R., § 490; C.'51, § 255.]

SEC. 1133. Penalty. Any person violating or attempting to violate any provisions or requirements of this chapter, or failing or refusing to comply with any order or command of an election officer, made in pursuance of the provisions of this chapter, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty, nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment of not less than twenty days, nor more than six months, in the county jail. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 9; 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 13.]

SEC. 1134. Interference with voters. No person shall on election day do any electioneering or solicit votes within any polling place, or within one hundred feet therefrom, as defined in this chapter, or interrupt, hinder or oppose any voter while approaching the polling place for the purpose of voting; nor shall any voter, except as provided by law, allow his ballot to be seen by any person, or make a false statement as to his inability to mark his ballot; nor shall any person interfere or attempt to interfere with any voter when inside the inclosed space, or when marking his ballot, or endeavor to induce any voter, before voting, to show how he marks or has marked his ballot; nor shall any person mark, or cause in any manner to be marked, on any ballot any character for the purpose of identifying such ballot. Any violation of the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine of not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not less than ten days nor more than thirty days in the county jail, or by both fine and imprisonment. [24 G. A., ch. 33, §§ 26, 27.]

SEC. 1135. Defacing posted lists or cards. Any person who shall, prior to any election, wilfully destroy or deface any list of candidates posted in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, or who, during an election, shall wilfully deface, tear down, remove or destroy any card of instruction or specimen ballot printed and posted for the instruction of voters, or who shall, during an election, wilfully remove or destroy any of the supplies or conveniences furnished to enable voters to prepare their ballots, or shall wilfully hinder the voting of others, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than thirty days, or by both fine and imprisonment. [Same, § 28.]

SEC. 1136. Forgery of papers or ballots. Any person who shall falsely make, or wilfully destroy, any certificate of nomination or nomination papers, or any part thereof, or any letter of withdrawal, or file any certificate of nomination, or nomination papers, knowing the same or any part thereof to be falsely made, or suppress any certificate of nomination, or nomination papers, or any part thereof, which have been duly filed, or forge or falsely make the official indorsement on any ballot, or substitute therefor any spurious or counterfeit ballot, or make, use, circulate, or cause to be made or circulated as an official ballot, any paper printed in imitation or resemblance thereof, or wilfully destroy or deface any ballot, or wilfully delay the delivery of any ballots, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than five years, or by both fine and imprisonment. [Same, § 29.]

SEC. 1137. Official neglect or misconduct. Any public officer upon whom a duty is imposed by this chapter, who shall wilfully neglect to perform such duty, or who shall wilfully perform it in such a way as to hinder the object thereof, or shall disclose to any one, except as may be ordered by any court of justice, the contents of any ballot, as to the manner in which the same may have been voted, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than five years, or by both fine and imprisonment. [Same, § 30.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE CANVASS OF VOTES.

SECTION 1138. By judges. When the poll is closed, the judges of election shall forthwith, and without adjournment, canvass the vote and ascertain the result of it, comparing the poll lists and correcting errors therein. Each clerk shall keep a tally list of the count. The canvass shall be public, and each candidate shall receive credit for the number of votes counted for him. The candidate receiving the highest number of votes, if for an office in that precinct alone, shall be declared elected, and judges shall issue certificates accordingly. [C.'73, §§ 622–3, 626; R., §§ 496–7, 501; C.'51, §§ 261–2, 266.]

SEC. 1139. Defective ballots. If two or more marked ballots are so folded together as to appear to be cast as one, the judges shall indorse thereon "rejected as double." Such ballots shall not be counted, but shall be folded together and kept as hereinafter directed. Every ballot not counted shall be indorsed "defective" on the back thereof. Every ballot objected to by a judge or challenger, but counted, shall be indorsed on the back thereof "objected to," and there shall also be indorsed thereon, and signed by the judges, a statement as to how it was counted. All ballots indorsed as required by this section shall be inclosed and securely sealed in an envelope, on which the judges shall indorse "disputed ballots," with a statement of the precinct in which, and date of the election at which, they were cast, signed by the judges. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 25; C.'73, § 623; R., § 497; C.'51, § 262.]

SEC. 1140. Excess of ballots. If the ballots for any officer exceed the number of the voters in the poll lists, such fact shall be certified, with the number of the excess, in the return, and if the vote of the precinct where the error occurred would change the result as to a county officer, if the person appearing to be elected were deprived of so many votes, then the election shall be set aside as to him in that precinct, and a new election ordered therein; but no person residing in another precinct at the time of the general election shall be allowed to vote at such special election. If the error occurs in relation to a township officer, the trustees may order a new election or not, in their discretion. If the error be in relation to a district or state officer, it, with the number of the excess, shall be certified to the state canvassers, and if the error would affect the result, a new vote shall be ordered in the precinct where the error happened, and the canvass be suspended until such new vote is taken and returned. When there is a tie vote and such an excess, there shall be a new election. [C.'73, § 627; R., § 498; C.'51, § 263.]

The meaning of the word "error" as here used would be more accurately expressed by the use of the word "excess." The supervisors should not order a new election for a county officer unless it appears that there is an excess of ballots as to that office: Rankin v. Pitkin, 50–313.

Evidence as to a mistake in a count of the ballots as to one candidate is immaterial upon the question as to whether there was a mistake in the count as to another candidate: McIntosh v. Livingston, 41–219.

SEC. 1141. Return of ballots not voted. Ballots not voted, or spoiled by voters while attempting to vote, shall be returned by the judges of election to the officer or authorities charged with their printing and distribution, and a receipt taken therefor, and they shall be preserved for six months. Such officer shall keep a record of the number of ballots delivered from each polling place, the name of the person to whom, and the time when, delivered, and enter upon such record the number and character of the ballots returned, with the time when and the person by whom they are returned. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 25.]

SEC. 1142. Proclamation of result—preservation of ballots. When the canvass is completed, the clerks shall announce to the judges the total number of votes received by each candidate. One or more of their number shall then proclaim in a loud voice the total number of votes received by each of the persons voted for, and the office for which he is designated, as announced by said clerks, and the number of votes for, and the number of votes against, any proposition which shall have been submitted to a vote of the people. Immediately after making such proclamation, and before separating, the judges shall fold in two folds, and string closely upon a single piece of flexible wire, all ballots which have been counted by them, except those indorsed "rejected as double," "defective," or "objected to," unite the ends of such wire in a firm knot, seal the knot in such a manner that it cannot be untied without breaking the seal, inclose the ballots so strung in an envelope, and securely seal such envelope. The judges shall at once return all the ballots to the officer from whom they were received, who shall carefully preserve them for six months. [Same; C.'73, § 630.]

Where the ballots are preserved as here required they are prima facie admissible in evidence in a contest as to the result of the election, but the opposite party may overcome this prima facie showing by proof of the alteration of the ballots after they were counted and it is not necessary that such alteration be pleaded in the proceedings under the contest: Ferguson v. Henry, 64 N. W., 292.

SEC. 1143. Destruction of ballots. The parties to any contested election shall have the right, in open session of the court or tribunal trying the contest, and in the presence of the officer having them in custody, to have the ballots opened, and all errors of the judges in counting or refusing to count ballots corrected by such court or tribunal. If at the expiration of six months no contest is pending, the officer having the ballots in custody, without opening the package in which they have been inclosed, shall, in the presence of two electors to be designated by the chairman of the board of supervisors, one each from the two leading political parties, or, in municipal elections, by the mayor of the city or town in which they are kept, destroy the same by burning. If a contest is pending, the ballots shall be kept until the same is finally determined, and then so destroyed. [24 G. A., ch. 33, § 25.]

SEC. 1144. Return of board. A return shall be made in each poll-book, giving, in words written at length, the whole number of ballots cast for each officer, except those rejected, the name of each person voted for, and the number of votes given to each person for each different office; which return shall be signed by the judges, and be substantially as follows:

At an election at the house of.....in.....township, or in..... precinct of .....township, in.....county, state of Iowa, on the..... day of .....A. D. ....., there were..... ....ballots cast for the office of (governor), of which

A..... B..... had .....votes.
C.....D..... had .....votes.

(and in the same manner for any other officer.)

A true return.

L.....M.....
N.....O..... } Judges of Election.

[19 G. A., ch. 163, § 14; C.'73, §§ 628, 661; R., §§ 502, 537; C.'51, §§ 261, 303.]

It is not fatal to the certificate that it does not contain full particulars of time and place. The caption and the certificate may be taken together: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212.

While the canvassers cannot adjudicate upon the sufficiency of returns, where the case comes into a court of justice the court or jury trying it may go behind the returns and even behind the ballot-box in some cases: Ibid.

SEC. 1145. Poll-books returned and preserved. One of the poll-books containing such return, with the register of election attached thereto, shall be delivered by one of the judges of election, within two days, to the county auditor. In township precincts, the other of said poll-books, with the register of election attached, shall be delivered by one of the judges of election to the township clerk. In city precincts, the other of said poll-books, with register of election attached, shall be delivered by one of the judges of election to the city clerk. In town elections, the other of said poll-books, with register of election attached, shall be delivered by one of the judges of election to the town clerk. In each case, the receiving officer shall file said books, and the registry books and lists and other papers pertaining to registration, in his office, and preserve the same for eighteen months, or until the determination of any contest then pending, after which they shall be destroyed. [22 G. A., ch. 48, § 6; C. '73, §§ 503, 629; R., §§ 333, 503, 1131; C. '51, § 268.]

SEC. 1146. Canvass of returns from precincts. If there are two or more precincts in any township, city or ward, the trustees and clerk, or the mayor and clerk, as the case may be, shall, on the day after the election, meet and canvass the returns from all precincts for votes cast for officers to be elected by such township, city or ward. The returns shall be opened in the presence of all the canvassers, and an abstract of votes made and signed by them, and the result declared, and a certificate of election signed by them given the candidates elected. If the mayor shall have been a candidate at such election, a justice of the peace of the county, selected by the clerk, shall act with him in making the canvass. [C. '73, §§ 502–3, 631; R., § 1131.]

The board of supervisors and not the township trustees have authority to canvass the ballots for justice of the peace (see § 1150): Lynch v. Vermazen, 61–76.

SEC. 1147. Township, city and town officers notified. Notice of the result of the election of the township, city and town officers shall be given by the township, city or town clerk, as the case may be, within five days thereafter, by posting, in three public places in the township, town or city, notices containing the names of persons declared elected, and requiring each of them to appear before the proper officer and qualify according to law. [C. '73, § 633; R., § 548; C. '51, § 317.]

SEC. 1148. Returns from precincts secured. If the returns from all the precincts are not made to the county auditor by the third day after the election, on the fourth he shall send messengers to obtain such of them as are wanting, the expense of which shall be paid by the county. [C. '73, § 634; R., § 505; C. '51, § 270.]

SEC. 1149. Canvass by board of supervisors. At their meeting on the Monday after the general election, at twelve o'clock, noon, the board of supervisors shall open and canvass the returns, and make abstracts, stating, in words written at length, the number of ballots cast in the county for each office, the name of each person voted for, and the number of votes given to each person for each different office. [19 G. A., ch. 163, § 14; C. '73, §§ 632, 662; R., §§ 335, 506, 538–9; C. '51, §§ 271, 304–5.]

Returns: The action of the board in canvassing returns is ministerial rather than judicial. Nor is there any discretion to be exercised. The board has no authority to judge of the validity of returns or of votes. Its duty is to receive the returns and count them, provided they are sufficiently proved to be such, although irregular. (So held in regard to the canvass of votes at special election as to the relocation of a county seat under 5 G. A., ch. 46): State ex rel. v. County Judge, 7–186; State v. Bailey, 7–390.

The canvassers may reject improper returns, such as are not properly signed, or have not been in the proper custody, or have been mutilated or changed; and after they have declared the result they may, by mandamus, be compelled to re-assemble and re-canvass the vote to correct a mistake in improperly rejecting returns: Price v. Harned, 1–473; or in counting improper returns: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 13–139.

Where an officer was authorized to examine the returns of an election for a county seat, and, on being satisfied that either place voted for had a greater number of votes than the other, the record of such result was to be made, held, that he had no authority to inquire into the legality of the votes cast, but was bound by the returns as made to him: United States ex rel. v. Commissioners, Mor., 31.

In a case involving the validity of votes cast at an election the court is not precluded by the return, but may receive evidence as to the compliance with the law on the part of the officers of election, and may therefore receive evidence that the officers were duly sworn, although such fact does not appear on the face of the return: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212.

Where two corresponding returns were made out by the judges of election, one of which was on its face informal and unauthenticated, and the other was formal and on its face duly authenticated, held, that the county board of canvassers could not refuse to receive evidence aliunde to establish the former, and yet receive such evidence to defeat the latter, but must count the votes as returned: State v. Cavers, 22–343.

Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the canvassers to declare elected and certify to the election of the party receiving the highest number of votes: Bradfield v. Wart, 36–291.

A writ of mandamus will not issue to compel a canvassing board to re-assemble and canvass the return of the votes for an office and declare the candidate receiving a majority of the votes cast therefor to be elected, after the expiration of the term for which he was elected: Potts v. Tuttle, 79–253.

Where the canvass of votes at an election was to be made by the county judge calling to his assistance two justices of the peace, and an action by mandamus was instituted to compel a recanvass, held, that such mandamus properly issued to the judge alone and not to the board as originally constituted: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 7–186; Rice v. Smith, 9–570.

Where a writ of mandamus was granted to compel a re-assembling of the canvassing board of the county by the county judge for the purpose of recanvassing the returns, held, that the primary writ should issue to such county judge in his individual name, and that upon failure of the other members of the board summoned by him, in pursuance of law, to constitute such board and canvass such returns to comply with the writ, an alias writ might be directed to such other members and a proper canvass compelled: State ex rel. v. Smith, 9–334.

The duties imposed upon the members of the board of supervisors in relation to canvassing votes cast at elections may be enforced by mandamus, but an action of damages for their non-performance will not lie: Jayne v. Drorbaugh, 63–711.

Injunction: Although mandamus may have issued to compel a board of canvassers to count and record the votes contained in certain returns, yet an injunction restraining any action under the count as thus recorded will not be improper or inconsistent with the mandamus if it appears that the votes which the board is directed to canvass should not be counted owing to matters existing outside of the returns: Dishon v. Smith, 10–212.

Certificate: It is not fatal to the certificate that it does not contain full particulars as to the time and place of the election. The caption and the certificate may be taken together: Ibid.

Where it is required that a certificate of the election, at which a railroad aid tax was voted, should be certified by the clerks of the election, held, that a certificate signed by the judges and attested by the clerks was sufficient: Casady v. Lowry, 49–523.

The twenty days for filing statement of contest as to the election of a county officer commences to run from the date when the board of supervisors determined the result as here provided and not from the date of the counting of the ballots by the judges of election: Clark v. Tracy, 64 N. W., 290; Ferguson v. Henry, 64 N. W., 292.

SEC. 1150. Abstracts. The abstract of the votes for each of the following classes shall be made on a different sheet:

1. Presidential electors;
2. Governor and lieutenant-governor;
3. All state officers not otherwise provided for;
4. Representatives in congress;
5. Senators and representatives in the general assembly for the county alone;
6. Senators and representatives in the general assembly by districts comprising more than one county;
7. Judges of the district court;
8. County officers. [C.'73, §§ 636, 662; R., §§ 507, 538–9; C.'51, §§ 272, 304–5.]

SEC. 1151. For congressmen, electors and state and district officers. Abstracts of all the votes cast for congressmen, presidential electors, state or judicial district officers, shall be made in duplicate, and signed by the board of county canvassers, one of which shall be forwarded to the secretary of state, and the other filed by the county auditor. [C.'73, §§ 637, 662; R., §§ 507, 538–9; C.'51, §§ 272, 304–5.]

SEC. 1152. Declaration of election. Each abstract of the votes for such officers as the county alone elects shall contain a declaration of whom the canvassers determine to be elected, except when two or more persons receive an equal and the greatest number of votes. [C.'73, § 639; R., § 509; C.'51, § 275.]

SEC. 1153. For senator or representative for district. When a senator or representative in the general assembly is elected by a district composed of two or more counties, the several boards of canvassers therein shall, after the canvass of the vote, make and certify as many copies of the abstract of the votes for such office as there are counties in such senatorial or representative district, and one additional, and the auditor in each county shall seal up, direct and transmit one copy to the secretary of state, and one to the auditor of each other county in the district, who shall file the same in their respective offices, and he shall preserve one in his office. [C.'73, § 646.]

SEC. 1154. Returns filed. When the canvass is concluded, the board shall deliver the original returns to the auditor, who shall file the same, and record each of the abstracts above mentioned in the election book. [C.'73, § 640; R., §§ 335, 510; C.'51, § 276.]

SEC. 1155. Certificate of election. When any person is thus declared elected, there shall be delivered him a certificate of election, under the official seal of the county, in substance as follows:

STATE OF IOWA, }
.....County. }

At an election holden in said county on the.....day of....., A. D. ....., A.... B.... was elected to the office of.....of the said county for the term of.....years from the.....day of....., A. D. .....(or if he was elected to fill a vacancy, say for the residue of the term ending on the.....day of....., A. D.....), and until his successor is elected and qualified.

C..... D.....,
President of Board of Canvassers.

Witness, E..... F....., County Auditor (clerk).

which certificate shall be presumptive evidence of his election and qualification. [C.'73, § 641; R., §§ 511, 514; C.'51, § 277.]

SEC. 1156. Of senators and representatives. The certificate of election of senators and representatives shall be in duplicate, and substantially in the form given, with such changes only as are necessary, one of which shall be delivered to the person entitled thereto, and the other forwarded to the secretary of state. [C.'73, § 642; R., § 512; C.'51, § 278.]

SEC. 1157. Abstracts forwarded to secretary of state. Within ten days after the election, one of the abstracts of votes for governor and lieutenant-governor shall be sealed up by the auditor, indorsed "Abstract of votes for governor and lieutenant-governor from.....county (naming the county)," and be by him forwarded to the speaker of the house of representatives; those for presidential electors, representatives in congress, and all other state and district officers, shall be separately sealed up, indorsed in like manner, with necessary changes, and then all placed in one package and forwarded to the secretary of state. Abstracts of votes cast at special elections to fill vacancies in office shall be forwarded as soon as canvassed. [C.'73, §§ 645, 662; R., §§ 517, 518, 538–9; C.'51, §§ 283–4, 304–5.]

SEC. 1158. Returns procured from counties. If the abstracts from any county are not received at the office of the secretary of state within fifteen days after the day of election, he shall send a messenger to the auditor of such county, who shall furnish him with them, or, if they have been sent, with a copy thereof, and he shall return them to the secretary without delay. [C.'73, §§ 649, 662; R., §§ 519, 538–9; C.'51, §§ 285, 304–5.]

SEC. 1159. Abstracts opened. The abstracts received by the secretary of state shall be kept by him until the day fixed for their opening, and shall then be opened only in the presence of the state board of canvassers. [C.'73, § 650; R., § 520; C.'51, § 286.]

SEC. 1160. State board of canvassers. The executive council constitutes a board of canvassers for the state, but no member thereof shall take part in canvassing the votes for any office for which he himself is a candidate. [C. '73, § 651; R., § 521; C. '51, § 287.]

SEC. 1161. Time of state canvass. On the twentieth day after the day of election, the board of state canvassers shall open and examine all of the returns. If they are not received from all the counties, it may adjourn, not exceeding twenty days, for the purpose of obtaining them, and, when received, shall proceed with the canvass. Returns of elections to fill vacancies in office shall be canvassed as soon as received. [C. '73, §§ 652, 663; R., §§ 522, 540; C. '51, §§ 288, 306.]

SEC. 1162. Canvass by state board. The board of state canvassers shall open the abstracts for state senators and representatives transmitted to the secretary of state, and canvass the votes therein returned, at the time and in the manner of canvassing the state vote, or at such other time as they may fix, at least twenty days prior to the time fixed by law for the meeting of the next general assembly, and in case of a special election, within five days after the receipt of such abstracts, and shall immediately make out, certify, and transmit by mail to the county auditor of each county in the district, to be by him filed in his office, a copy of the abstract of such canvass required in the next section, which shall be recorded by him in the election book. [C. '73, § 647.]

SEC. 1163. Abstract of result. It shall make an abstract stating, in words written at length, the number of ballots cast for each office, the names of all the persons voted for, for what office, the number of votes each received, and whom they declare to be elected; which abstract shall be signed by the canvassers in their official capacity and as state canvassers, and have the seal of the state affixed. [19 G. A., ch. 163, § 14; C. '73, §§ 653, 663; R., §§ 523, 540; C. '51, §§ 289, 306.]

SEC. 1164. Record of canvass. The secretary of state shall file the abstracts when received, and record the same in a book to be kept by him for recording the result of state elections, to be known as the state election book. [C. '73, § 654; R., § 524; C. '51, § 290.]

SEC. 1165. Certificate of election. Each person declared elected by the state board of canvassers shall receive a certificate thereof, signed by the governor, or, in his absence, by the secretary of state, with the seal of state affixed, attested by the other canvassers, to be in substance as follows:

STATE OF IOWA:

To A..... B....., Greeting: It is hereby certified that, at an election holden on the.....day of....., you were elected to the office of.....of said state, for the term of.....years, from and after the.....day of..... (or if to fill a vacancy, for the residue of the term, ending on the.....day of.....). Given at the seat of government this.....day of.....

If the governor be absent, the certificate of the election of the secretary of state shall be signed by the auditor. The certificate to members of the legislature shall describe, by the number, the district from which the member is elected. [C. '73, §§ 655, 657; R., §§ 524, 527; C. '51, §§ 290, 293.]

SEC. 1166. Representative in congress. The certificate of the election of a representative in congress shall be signed by the governor, with the seal of the state affixed, and be countersigned by the secretary of state. [C. '73, § 658; R., § 528; C. '51, § 291.]

SEC. 1167. Certificates mailed. The secretary of state shall deliver or mail certificates of election to the persons declared elected. [C. '73, §§ 648, 656, 658; R., §§ 526, 528; C. '51, §§ 291–2.]

SEC. 1168. Certificate to electors. The governor, at the expiration of ten days from the completed canvass, shall issue to each presidential elector declared elected a certificate of his election, under his hand and the seal of state, the same, in substance, as required in other cases, and shall notify him to attend at the seat of government at noon on the second

Monday in January following his election, reporting his attendance to him. If there be a contest of the election, no certificate shall issue until it is determined. [22 G. A., ch. 50; C. '73, § 665; R., § 542; C. '51, § 308.]

SEC. 1169. Tie vote. If more than the requisite number of persons, including presidential electors, are found to have an equal and the highest number of votes, the election of one of them shall be determined by lot. The name of each of such candidates shall be written on separate pieces of paper, as nearly uniform in size and material as possible, and placed in a receptacle so that the names cannot be seen. In the presence of the board of canvassers, one of them shall publicly draw one of such names, and such person shall be declared elected. The result of such drawing shall be entered upon the abstract of votes and duly recorded, and a certificate of election issued to such person, as provided in this chapter. [C. '73, §§ 632, 643–4, 664; R., §§ 515, 516, 541, 547; C. '51, §§ 281–2, 307, 316.]

SEC. 1170. Canvass public—result determined. All canvasses of returns shall be public, and the persons having the greatest number of votes shall be declared elected. [C. '73, §§ 623, 638, 664; R., §§ 497, 508, 541; C. '51, §§ 262, 273, 307.]

SEC. 1171. Special elections—canvass and certificate. In case a special election has been held, the board of county canvassers shall meet at one o'clock in the afternoon of the second day thereafter, and canvass the votes cast thereat. The county auditor, as soon as the canvass is completed, shall transmit to the secretary of state an abstract of the votes so canvassed, and the state board, within five days after receiving such abstracts, shall canvass the returns. A certificate of election shall be issued by the county or state board of canvassers, as in other cases. All the provisions regulating elections, obtaining returns, and canvass of votes at general elections, except as to time, shall apply to special elections. [C. '73, §§ 791–3; R., § 673.]

SEC. 1172. Messengers for election returns. Messengers sent for the returns of elections shall be paid from the state or county treasury, as the case may be, ten cents a mile going and returning. [C. '73, § 3827; R., § 529; C. '51, § 296.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

SECTION 1173. Election of. At the general election in the years of the presidential election, or at such other times as the congress of the United States may direct, there shall be elected one person from each congressional district into which the state is divided, as elector of president and vice-president, and two from the state at large, no one of whom shall be a person holding the office of senator or representative in congress, or any office of trust or profit under the United States. Such election shall be conducted, and the canvass of the votes and the returns thereof made, in the same manner as for state officers and representatives in congress. [16 G. A., ch. 23; C. '73, §§ 659, 660; R., §§ 535–6; C. '51, §§ 301–2.]

See U. S. Const., art. II, § 1.

SEC. 1174. Meeting—certificate. The presidential electors shall meet in the capitol, at the seat of government, at noon of the second Monday in January after their election, or so soon thereafter as practicable. If, at the time of such meeting, any elector for any cause is absent, those present shall at once proceed to elect, from the citizens of the state, a substitute elector or electors, and certify the choice so made to the governor, and he shall immediately cause the person or persons so selected to be notified thereof. [22 G. A., ch. 50; C. '73, §§ 665–7; R., §§ 542–4; C. '51, §§ 308–10.]

SEC. 1175. Certificate of governor. When so met, the said electors shall proceed, in the manner pointed out by law, with the election and the governor shall duly certify the result thereof, under the seal of the state, to the United States secretary of state, and as required by act of congress relating to such elections. [22 G. A., ch. 50; C. '73, § 668; R., § 545; C. '51, § 311.]

SEC. 1176. Compensation. The electors shall each receive a compensation of five dollars for every day's attendance, and the same mileage as members of the general assembly. [C. '73, § 669; R., 546; C. '51, § 312.]

CHAPTER 6.

OF QUALIFICATION FOR OFFICE.

SECTION 1177. Oath and bond. The several officers, before entering upon their duties as such, shall qualify by taking the prescribed oath and by giving, when required, a bond, which qualification shall be perfected, unless otherwise specified, before noon of the first Monday in January following their election, but city and town officers shall so qualify within ten days after their election has been declared by the board of canvassers. When, on account of sickness or the inclement state of the weather or other unavoidable casualty, an officer has been prevented from qualifying within the prescribed time, he may do so within ten days after the time herein fixed, and in case of a contest, within ten days after the decision. [21 G. A., ch. 54, § 1; C. '73, §§ 670, 685–6; R., §§ 549, 564; C. '51, §§ 319, 334.]

Where an officer elected is prevented from qualifying by an injunction and is competent to qualify within the time when he may be reasonably required to do so in view of such injunction, he is entitled to the office although he may have been subject to a disqualification at the time of his election and at the time when but for such injunction, he would have been required to qualify: State ex rel. v. Van Beek, 87–569.

SEC. 1178. Governor and lieutenant-governor. The governor and lieutenant-governor shall each qualify within ten days after the result of the election shall be declared by the general assembly, by taking an oath in its presence, in joint convention assembled, administered by a judge of the supreme court, to the effect that he will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and will faithfully and impartially, and to the best of his knowledge and ability, discharge the duties incumbent upon him as governor, or lieutenant-governor of this state. [C. '73, §§ 671, 685; R., §§ 550, 564; C. '51, §§ 320, 334.]

SEC. 1179. Judges. All judges of courts of record shall qualify by the first day of January following the election, by taking and subscribing an oath to the effect that they will support the constitution of the United States and that of the state of Iowa, and that, without fear, favor, affection, or hope of reward, they will, to the best of their knowledge and ability, administer justice according to the law, equally to the rich and the poor. [C. '73, §§ 673, 685; R., §§ 552, 564; C. '51, §§ 322, 334.]

SEC. 1180. Other officers. All other civil officers, elected by the people or appointed to any civil office, unless otherwise provided, shall take and subscribe an oath substantially as follows:

I,....., do solemnly swear that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and that I will faithfully and impartially, to the best of my ability, discharge all the duties of the office of.....(naming it) in (naming the township, town, city, county, district or state, as the case may be), as now or hereafter required by law. [C. '73, §§ 504, 514, 675–6; R., §§ 561–2, 1084, 1132; C. '51, §§ 331–2.]

SEC. 1181. Oath on bond. Every civil officer who is required to give bond shall take and subscribe the oath provided for in the preceding section, on the back of his bond, or on a paper attached thereto, to be certified by the officer administering it. [C. '73, § 675; R., § 561; C. '51, § 331.]

SEC. 1182. Bond not required. The governor, lieutenant-governor, members of the general assembly, judges of courts, county supervisors, township trustees, aldermen, and councilmen of cities and towns, are not required to give bond. [C. '73, § 674; R., § 550, 4; C. '51, §§ 323–4.]

SEC. 1183. Bond required. All other civil officers, except as especially otherwise provided, shall give bond with the conditions, in substance, as follows:

That as.....(naming the office), in.....(city, town, township, county or state of Iowa), he will render a true account of his office and of his doings therein to the proper authority, when required thereby or by law; that he will promptly pay over to the officer or person entitled thereto all moneys which may come into his hands by virtue of his office; that he will promptly account for all balances of money remaining in his hands at the termination of his office; that he will exercise all reasonable diligence and care in the preservation and lawful disposal of all money, books, papers, securities, or other property appertaining to his said office, and deliver them to his successor, or to any other person authorized to receive the same; and that he will faithfully and impartially, without fear, favor, fraud or oppression, discharge all duties now or hereafter required of his office by law; and the sureties on such bond shall be liable for all money or public property that may come into the hands of such officer at any time during his possession of such office. [17 G. A., ch. 20, § 2; 16 G. A., ch. 33, § 2; C. '73, §§ 504, 514, 674; R., §§ 554, 1084, 1132; C. '51, §§ 323–4.]

Liability on bond: A bond given by an officer when not required by statute, where no benefit or advantage accrues to him by reason of its execution, cannot be enforced: State v. Heisey, 56–404.

The county treasurer is only held to a reasonable degree of care and diligence, and if, notwithstanding such care, moneys of the county are stolen from him, he is not liable: Ross v. Hatch, 5–149.

But where a county treasurer deposited the county funds in a bank, by the failure of which they were lost, held, that he was liable therefor, although no suitable place was in fact provided by the county for keeping the funds: Lowry v. Polk County, 51–50.

Where, subsequently to the giving of a treasurer's bond, he was by law made custodian of the school fund, held, that his sureties were liable for his default in the management of that fund: Mahaska County v. Ingalls, 14–170.

The remedy upon the bond of a defaulting officer is not exclusive, but the county may pursue its property in the hands of one who has it wrongfully, or recover its value from any one who has converted it to his own use: Taylor County v. Standley, 79–666.

As to liability of treasurers of school districts, see notes to § 2760.

Sureties: The sureties of a sheriff are liable for trespass committed by him in attempting to discharge the duties of his office: Charles v. Haskins, 11–329.

The sureties on the official bond of a constable are liable for damages resulting from an unauthorized sale by him of property exempt from execution: Strunk v. Ocheltree, 11–158; also, for unlawful acts in making an arrest in excess of his duty: Clancy v. Kenworthy, 74–740.

Where an officer assumes to act under a warrant or order which is unauthorized, and his acts under which are illegal, his sureties will be liable for damages sustained: Tieman v. Haw, 49–312.

Sureties on the coroner's bond are liable for his acts while serving as ex officio sheriff: Ibid.

A justice of the peace and his sureties are liable on his bond for his failure to deliver to his successor or to the owner notes placed in his hands as justice for collection: Latham v. Brown, 16–118; Bessinger v. Dickerson, 20–260.

Sureties upon a new bond are not liable for moneys coming into the principal's hands before the execution of such bond: Ibid.

As between sureties on different bonds, the liability for money coming into the hands of the officer is not dependent upon the time of making demand upon him therefor by the person entitled thereto, and his refusal to pay; but the proper inquiry is, when was the money received: Thompson v. Dickerson, 22–360.

Sureties are holden only for the term for which their bond was given, even though the bond does not express the limit of such term. The fact that the officer holds over beyond his term on account of failure to fill his office will not extend the liability of the sureties beyond the original term of office: Wapello County v. Bigham, 10–39.

Sureties on a treasurer's bond are not liable for money received prior to its execution, unless the defalcation took place after that time: Warren County v. Ward, 21–84.

The sureties for each term are liable for the deficit of that term, and the officer cannot during one term pay off deficiencies of a preceding term so as to throw the entire deficiency on the sureties on his bond for the second term: Myers v. Farmer, 52–20.

Sureties on an additional bond are not liable for any default occurring before they became sureties, unless the bond is so specially drawn as to cover past as well prospective delinquencies: Bessinger v. Dickerson, 20–260.

The sureties in a new or additional bond of a county treasurer, which is not retrospective in its terms, will be bound for public moneys in the hands of their principal at the time of its execution, although a previous bond then existed with different sureties; but not for past derelictions of duty or misconduct: Mahaska County v. Ingalls, 16–81.

Sureties are not liable for money received by the officer and appropriated to his own use or otherwise disposed of prior to the execution of the bond on which they are sureties, so that at the time such bond is executed the money is not in the hands of the officer: Independent School Dist. v. McDonald, 39–564.

In an action on the official bond of a county treasurer, held, that it sufficiently appeared that the defalcation for which recovery was sought occurred subsequently to the giving of the bond sued on: Carroll County v. Ruggles, 69–269.

Where it appeared that at the semi-annual settlement preceding the giving of the bond there was no deficiency in the treasurer's account, held, that the sureties of the treasurer, insisting that a defalcation existed at the time of the giving of the second bond, had the burden of proving such fact: Ibid.

Where a holding-over officer executed a bond with sureties for the entire term under the mistaken belief that he was entitled to hold for the entire term, but at the next election he was duly elected to fill the vacancy, held, that the sureties on the first bond were not co-sureties with those on the bond given in pursuance of the last election for the period subsequent to such election, and could not be compelled to contribute for a defalcation occurring during that time: Boone County v. Jones, 58–373.

Sureties on the bond of a public officer are not liable for defalcations occurring prior to the execution of the bond upon which they become sureties: Held v. Bagwell, 58–139.

The sureties on an official bond will not be relieved of liability on the ground that blanks, existing in the bond at the time of its signature by them, were subsequently filled, if it appears that such bond was executed by them in the expectation that such blanks would be properly filled, which was afterwards done: Wright v. Harris, 31–272.

Where an official bond to which the names of several sureties are procured is signed by them, while the blank in which the names of the sureties are to be entered remains unfilled, and such blank is afterwards filled with the names of those who actually sign the bond, and it is delivered in this form, the sureties cannot avoid it by proof that they signed it upon condition that before delivery other names were to be procured as sureties which were not in fact procured: Carroll County v. Ruggles, 69–269.

The fact that the name of one of the persons signing as surety is not filled into the blank left for that purpose will not charge the officer accepting the bond with notice of any condition affecting the liability of other sureties: Ibid.

A bond signed by a surety will be binding upon him although his name is not filled into the blank left for that purpose in the body of the bond: Moore v. McKinley, 60–367.

Where persons, intending to become sureties for an officer upon his bond, signed different blank bonds, and afterward upon the amount of the bond which was required of him being determined he filled up one of such blanks with the proper amount, held, that the sureties thereby became bound, they having constituted him their agent and vested him with absolute power to do all that was necessary to make and deliver a binding official bond: Lee County v. Welsing, 70–198.

Where the sureties on the bond leave it with a third person with the direction that it shall be delivered only on certain conditions, such as securing additional sureties, etc., but such third person delivers the bond to the principal without the performance of such condition, and the principal delivers it to the board who approve it without knowledge of the conditions, the sureties are bound: Taylor County v. King, 73–153.

Where an officer being elected and failing to qualify was afterwards appointed to the same position, and filed a bond which had been previously prepared and signed to enable him to qualify under his election, held, that the sureties on such bond were not liable thereunder: Winneshiek County v. Maynard, 44–15.

In an action against the sureties it is not necessary to aver and prove in the first instance that they have been approved as required by law: State v. Fredericks, 8–553.

The fact that judgment is recovered against the officer on his bond will not bar the right to sue the sureties thereon. The action against principal and sureties may be joint, but need not necessarily be so: Charles v. Haskins, 11–329.

Where the estate of the principal obligor is insolvent there is no obligation upon the county for whose benefit the bond is given to file a claim for the amount due on the bond against the estate of the deceased obligor, but action may be brought at once against the sureties: Pottawattamie County v. Taylor, 47–520.

Where an officer is authorized to receive money in his official capacity he will be liable on his bond for failure to pay the same over to the parties entitled thereto: Wright v. Harris, 31–272.

Money received by the clerk of a court upon a judgment rendered thereunder comes into his hands by virtue of his office and his sureties are liable on his bond for failure to pay such money over to the proper parties: Morgan v. Long, 29–434.

The clerk of a court is liable upon his official bonds for money paid into court as a tender and transferred to him by his predecessor, and the question whether the money so paid was legally tendered or not is immaterial: Billings v. Teeling, 40–607.

The sureties of a clerk are liable under his bond for the proceeds of a sale of property in partition proceedings which are by order of court deposited with the clerk to await proof of ownership: Walters-Cates v. Wilkinson, 92–129.

Under a statute directing redemption from execution sale to be made by payment of money to the clerk, held, that the sureties on the bond of the sheriff were not liable for money paid to him for the purpose of effecting redemption: Sample v. Davis, 4 G. Gr., 117.

The county treasurer and his sureties are liable on his bond for money received by him from taxpayers as part payment for taxes: Warren County v. Ward, 21–84.

Where an officer executed a bond for the disposition of certain public money for a specified purpose, held, that the sureties were liable on such bond, although the money had been paid over to him for that purpose in violation of law, that is, contrary to the requirements of law, the purpose for which it was to be used being lawful: Muscatine County v. Carpenter, 33–41.

Judgment and satisfaction thereof for official delinquencies prior to the execution, during the same term of office, of a second bond, will not bar recovery upon such second bond for delinquencies occurring after its execution, and the satisfaction will not bar contribution by sureties on the second bond against sureties on the first: Warren County v. Ward, 21–84.

The sureties on the bond of an officer who is re-elected and serves a second term are liable for balance of funds on hand at the beginning of such second term, but they are not precluded by a settlement as to the amount on hand when such settlement is made without the actual production of the money and where the settlement was made on the basis of a draft representing funds on hand which was false, being simply issued for the occasion and the officer having the authority to make the settlement had reason to suspect that the officer did not have the necessary funds, held, that such settlement would not preclude the sureties on the bond for the second term from showing that the defalcation had occurred during the prior term: District Township v. Morris, 91–198.

As to the effect of a settlement in case of an officer holding over, see notes to § 1193.

SEC. 1184. Penalty of bond. The bond of the secretary of state shall be in the penal sum of not less than ten thousand dollars; the auditor of state in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars; the treasurer of state in the sum of not less than three hundred thousand dollars; the state printer in the sum of not less than five thousand dollars; the state binder in the sum of not less than two thousand dollars; the attorney-general in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars; each railroad commissioner in the sum of not less than five thousand dollars; the reporter of the supreme court in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars; the clerk of the supreme court in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars; and the superintendent of public instruction in the sum of not less than two thousand dollars. [22 G. A., ch. 29, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 2; C. '73, § 678; R., §§ 128, 135, 165, 377, 556, 557; C. '51, §§ 326–7.]

SEC. 1185. County and municipal officers. The bonds of the following county officers, viz., treasurers, clerks of the district courts, county attorneys, recorders, coroners, surveyors, auditors, superintendents of schools, sheriffs, justices of the peace and constables, and city, town and township assessors, shall each be in a penal sum to be fixed by the board of supervisors; but those of treasurers, clerks of the district courts, county auditors, sheriffs and county attorneys shall not be in a less sum than five thousand dollars each, and those of justices and constables, not less than five hundred dollars each. The bonds of all municipal officers who are required to give bonds shall each be in such penal sum as may be provided by law, or as the council shall from time to time prescribe by ordinance. [18 G. A., ch. 201, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 20, § 2; 16 G. A., ch. 33, § 2; C. '73, §§ 390, 504, 514, 678; R., §§ 128, 135, 165, 377, 556–7, 1084, 1132; C. '51, §§ 326–7.]

SEC. 1186. Deputies. Deputies of state, county, city and town officers, who are required to give bond, shall give bond in such amounts as may be fixed by the governor, board of supervisors, or the council, as the case may be, with sureties as required for the bonds of their principals, which shall be approved as the principal s bond, and filed with the same officer. But the giving of such bond shall not relieve the principal from liability for the official acts of the deputy. [22 G. A., ch. 36, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 117; C. 73, § 766; R., §§ 421, 643, 645; C. '51, §§ 411, 414.]

SEC. 1187. Sureties. No bond in this chapter required, except as hereinafter specified, shall be executed with less than two sureties, each of whom shall be a freeholder of the state; and the bond of the state printer with not less than three, and that of the state or county treasurer with not less than four, possessed of like qualifications. Any association or incorporation which does the business of insuring the fidelity of others, and which has authority by law to do business in this state, shall be accepted as surety upon bonds required by law, with the same force and effect as sureties above qualified. [C. '73, § 679; R., §§ 135, 165, 558, 559; C. '51, §§ 328-9.]

As to fidelity company being accepted as surety, see §§ 359, 360. As to liability of sureties, see notes to § 1183.

SEC. 1188. Form—approval. All official bonds shall run to the state, and be for the use and benefit of any corporation, public or private, or person injured or sustaining loss, with a right of action in the name of the state for its or his use. Those given by state and district officers shall be approved by the governor; those of county officers, township clerk and assessor, by the board of supervisors; those of other township officers by the township clerk; and those of city officers by the mayor, or as may be provided by ordinance. All bonds shall be approved or disapproved within five days after their presentation for that purpose, and indorsed, in case of approval, to that effect and filed, and, unless otherwise provided by law, kept in the office of the approving officer. [C. '73, §§ 677, 680; R., §§ 367, 555, 560; C. '51, §§ 325, 330.]

Whether the state can maintain an action on the county treasurer's bond, quœre: State v. Henderson, 40–242.

The members of the board of supervisors are not liable for damages resulting from the approval of insufficient bond, when their action results from an honest mistake or error of judgment, whether of law or fact, but they are personally liable for neglect, carelessness and official misconduct in such matters: Wasson v. Mitchell, 18–153.

The provisions of § 1193 that the bond of an officer who is re-elected shall not be approved until such officer qualifies and has accounted for public funds and property which have been under his control imposes upon the officer authorized to approve the bond a duty to the public only, and neglect thereof will not render him liable to sureties on the new bond: Held v. Bagwell, 58–139; District T'p v. McCord, 54–346.

It is not necessary in an action on the bond to aver and prove in the first instance that the sureties have been approved as required by law: State v. Fredericks, 8–553.

The fact that approval of an official bond by the proper officer does not appear of record, or that it does not appear that the proper certificate was made as required by law that the officer had properly accounted for funds in his hands during a preceding term, cannot be urged as a defense to the bond: Boone County v. Jones, 54–699.

The board of supervisors being vested with the power to require an officer to give a bond or additional bond when deemed requisite, a bond required of an officer holding over, there being a doubt as to whether he was holding over by virtue of his former election and was still liable on his old bond, or was holding by virtue of a new election in pursuance of which the bond was required, held valid, irrespective of whether the new election was valid or not: Ibid.

Want of approval of a bond of a county officer by the board of supervisors does not render the bond invalid: Moore v. McKinley, 60–367.
