The admission that the absent witness would testify as alleged in the affidavit for continuance, does not waive objection to the incompetency of such testimony. State v. Leuhrman, 123-476.

SEC. 3666. Filing motion.

Where the ruling of the court on a motion for continuance is necessarily based on the sufficiency of the showing as to a complicated state of facts relating to the diligence of the party asking for the continuance, the ruling of the trial court will not be interfered with. Percival-Porter Co. v. Oaks, 130-212.

SEC. 3675. Report of trial—certificate.

Where the trial judge attached to the shorthand notes a certificate to the effect that such notes were the official report of the case and that they contained, together with the documentary evidence therein referred to, all of the evidence that was offered or introduced on the trial of said case, and all objections and rulings made and exceptions taken, and made said official report in shorthand a part of the record, held, that proceedings with reference to the separation of the jury which were found in the shorthand notes were thereby made a part of the record and might be considered on appeal. State v. Smith, 102-656.

Prior to the adoption of this section no certificate of the reporter was necessary to enable his notes to be incorporated by reference into a skeleton bill of exceptions. Sigler v. Murphy, 107-128.

Where the reporter's notes are filed with the clerk and referred to in a skeleton bill of exceptions, the evidence is sufficiently made a part of the record by such bill of exceptions although the notes thus filed are not certified nor entered as filed on the clerk's record. In re Guardianship of Holcher, 127-369.

The bill of exceptions need only contain such matter as will enable the court to pass on the errors assigned, and this rule is not changed by the provisions of this section by which the notes of the shorthand reporter became a substitute for the bill of exceptions. The section provides for the preparation of a full and complete bill. A partial bill may be prepared in the same manner, and if errors, assigned are based entirely on rulings on the admissibility of evidence, or its effect, it is sufficient if the evidence offered and received, together with the objections, rulings and exceptions are duly certified and filed, as therein directed. If the proceedings are in fact taken down in shorthand, and duly certified, they become a bill of exceptions, regardless of any preliminary order. State v. Welsh, 109-19.

Where the notes in shorthand were duly certified by the trial judge, but the reporter, after extending them, instead of copying the judge's certificate, detached it from the notes and attached it as a part of his own at the end of the transcript, held that the transcript as so prepared and certified should be treated as the evidence in the case. Steele v. Potthast, 109-413.

The transcript of the shorthand notes should be certified by the person who as reporter takes down the proceedings. It is not necessary that this be the official reporter, and, where the proceedings were reported by an assistant of the official reporter, held that the certificate of the official reporter to the transcript was not sufficient. Spinney v. Halliday, 115-420.

Although the stenographer who reports the case is not the official reporter, and is not sworn, nevertheless, if the judge append the proper certificate to the transcript of the testimony, this is enough to preserve the evidence. Meador v. Allen, 110-588.

Where the shorthand notes have been duly certified by the reporter at the close of the trial and in fact filed with the clerk the evidence is properly preserved whether the notes have been formally marked "filed" or not. In re Estate of Bruning, 122-8.

The certification of the shorthand reporter's transcript of his evidence cannot rightfully be demanded until the reporter has had a reasonable time for transcribing his notes. Smith v. Smith, 132-700.

Where counsel have agreed that the reporter shall certify all shorthand notes taken upon the trial including those taken by his predecessor, counsel cannot afterwards assert that such certification is not proper. Hofacre v. Monticello, 128-239.

All that is necessary in a law action is that the translation of the shorthand notes be filed and in form for use when such translation becomes necessary, and this time does not ordinarily arise until the Supreme Court is compelled to resort to the translation in order to discover what the evidence really was. Ibid.

Where appellant denies that the evidence was properly preserved and made of record by extension of the shorthand notes into longhand, and the filing of the transcript, appellee must furnish a transcript from the clerk establishing the fact; otherwise the court cannot, on appeal, consider any question depending on the evidence. State v. Owens, 109-143.

By Code § 3707 exceptions to instructions may be noted by the shorthand reporter without reason therefor being given. White v. Elgin Creamery Co., 108-522.

The entry by a reporter in his minutes

SEC. 3680. Challenges to panel—when and how made.

Objection to the method of drawing talesmen should be interposed before the of the fact of the return of the verdict does not constitute a record of the receipt of the verdict with the court so as to preclude the court from sending the jury out to correct the verdict which had been offered. State v. Novak, 109-717.

This section of the Code works little change in the law as it formerly stood, beyond enlarging what shall be included in the report and making it mandatory upon the demand of either party. In re Tobey's Estate, 112-581.

The provisions of this section do not modify the requirements of Code § 3652 as to what is required in order to secure a trial de novo in an equity case. Dwyer v. Rock, 115-722; Spinney v. Halliday, 115-420.

The provisions of 27 G. A., chap. 9, relating to the use of the shorthand reporter's transcript of the evidence in another case, see § 245a, has no application in a subsequent case which is not a retrial of the one in which the evidence was given, nor in which the transcript is not offered for the purpose of impeachment. Walker v. Walker, 117-609.

Where there is evident mistake in the shorthand report of the testimony of a witness, it may be corrected by changing the record so that it will show what the witness in fact said. Such corrections should be in the trial court, and may be made on motion, supported by affidavits. Campbell v. Campbell, 118-131.

It is not error for the court to have the stenographer read over the shorthand notes of a portion of the evidence in the presence of the jury for the purpose of enabling the court to determine whether portions thereof should be stricken out. State v. Fielding, 112 N. W. 539.

It is the duty of the reporter to attend the court as directed by the judge and he may recover his compensation for such attendance without regard to the services actually performed. Ferguson v. Pottawattamie County, 126-108.

jury is selected. State v. Minor, 106-642.

SEC. 3684. When made—determination.

A party who accepts the jury and goes to trial without objection cannot afterwards be heard to complain either of the character of the jury or of the time of the trial. Frank v. Davenport, 105-588.

SEC. 3685. Peremptory.

Jurors may be interrogated on voir dire as to matters which may be important to the party in enabling him to intelligently exercise his peremptory challenge. Simons v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 128-139.

It is not improper to allow a party for the purpose of exercising intelligently his peremptory challenges in an action for personal injuries to enquire with respect to the connection of the jurors with employers' casualty insurance companies. Brusseau v. Lower Brick Co., 133-245.

Where the defendant in a criminal case, being entitled to ten peremptory challenges, when called upon to exercise his eighth challenge, stated by counsel that one peremptory challenge was waived, and the prosecution thereupon waived a peremptory challenge, held that the defendant was still entitled to exercise the right of two further peremptory challenges, and that it was error to refuse to allow him to do so. A waiver of one peremptory challenge is not a waiver of all further right of peremptory challenge as to persons already called as jurors. State v. Hunter, 118-686.

SEC. 3688. Challenges for cause.

Error in overruling a challenge for cause will not be deemed prejudicial where it does not appear in the record that the juror could not have been dismissed peremptorily. Haggard v. Andrew, 107-417.

The general statement that the party challenges a juror for cause is too indefinite. Ibid.

Where it does not appear that the party complaining of the overruling of his challenge to a juror exhausted his peremptory challenges, the ruling will be considered to have been without prejudice. Harris v. Moore, 112 N. W. 163.

To take advantage of the disqualification of a juror after verdict, it is incumbent on the party complaining to show affirmatively that neither he nor his counsel had knowledge thereof before the juror was sworn. State v. Bussamus, 108-11; State v. Moats, 108-13.

The fact that a juror is the client of an attorney engaged in the cause which is made the ground of challenge under this section, is not a ground of challenge in a criminal case under Code § 5360. State v. Carter, 121-136.

In an examination of jurors relative to their competency, questions may be asked as to facts the existence of which would not be ground for challenge. Foley v. Cudahy Packing Co., 119-246.

The fact that one called as a juror has formed an opinion in the case by reading in the newspapers, accounts of the facts involved, does not disqualify him if it appears from his answers to the questions that he can render a fair and impartial verdict on the evidence. Croft v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 109 N. W. 723.

The determination of the competency of a juror is largely within the discretion of the trial judge. In re Goldthorp's Estate, 115-430.

Questions as to the competency of jurors are to be determined by the court in the exercise of a sound discretion, and where the court might reasonably find from the answers of the juror touching his qualifications that he had no feeling of any kind that would prevent him from rendering a fair and impartial verdict, held that the challenge was overruled. Dale v. Colfax Consolidated Coal Co., 131-67.

The challenge on the ground that the juror shows such a state of mind as will preclude him from rendering a just verdict involves a conclusion upon a fact question, and the decision of the court, in the exercise of reasonable discretion in the matter, will not be interfered with on appeal. Wilson v. Wapello County, 129-77.

When the action is against the county, the fact that jurors are residents and taxpayers of the county will not disqualify them. The plaintiff in such an action has the right to a change of place of trial. Ibid.

SEC. 3700. Procedure after jury is sworn—order of evidence.

The question as to who has the right to open and close is properly a matter of practice, and will not be reviewed unless it appears that an injustice has been done by the trial court in its ruling on the matter. Oxtoby v. Henley, 112-697.

The defendant introducing an affirmative defense has the burden of establishing it. Ibid.

The order of argument and the conduct thereof, while prescribed by statute in a general way, are nevertheless peculiarly within the sound discretion of the court, and in the absence of a showing of clear abuse of discretion and of ground for believing that prejudice resulted, no reversal should be had on account of failure to follow the statute. Breiner v. Nugent, 111 N. W. 446.

SEC. 3701. Argument—opening and closing.

Under the language of this section, differing from that of the corresponding section of the Code of '73, the right to open and close is to be determined after the introduction of the evidence. Schoonover v. Osborne, 117-427.

The right to open and close depends upon the burden under the issues, as appearing by the evidence, and not necessarily as determined by the pleading. Shaffer v. Des Moines Coal & Hay Co, 122-233.

The defendant cannot by mere ingenuity in pleading, as for instance by putting his answer in the form of an affirmative allegation rather than a specific denial, deprive the plaintiff of the right to open and close, if the substantial effect of the pleading is to controvert the truth of the essential averments of the petition. Farmer v. Norton, 129-88.

But the question as to who has the burden is one of procedure, and the ruling of the court with reference thereto will not be interfered with on appeal unless an abuse of discretion is shown, which has been prejudicial to the appellant. Prejudice is not to be presumed from an error in such a ruling, but must be made to appear. Ibid.

SEC. 3705. Instructions—to be in writing.

In writing: A direction to the jury not to consider certain evidence except for a specific purpose need not be in writing. State v. Hogan, 115-455.

The requirement that instructions must be in writing relates to the statement of the facts and the law governing the case as given to the jury when the case is ready for final submission. It is not necessary to reduce to writing admonitions given to the jury by the court during the course of the trial to the effect that they are to disregard evidence which has been improperly admitted. State v. Smith, 132-645; Krause v. Redman, 112 N. W. 91.

Remarks made by the court in the presence of the jury with reference to the sufficiency of evidence, may constitute error as fully as though embodied in an instruction. Coldren v. Le Gore, 118-212.

What the court says by way of ruling on an objection need not be reduced to writing. Frick v. Kabaker, 116-494.

No distinction between instructions is to be made on the ground that some of them are in typewriting and others are written. Kinyon v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 118-349.

Jurors are apt to attach great importance to statements with reference to the testimony made by the court during the trial of the case, and such statements frequently have the same weight and are as potent in influence as though embodied in a written instruction. In re Will of Knox, 123-24.

Signing: It is not required in a civil case that the judge shall sign the instructions, and even in cases where the statute provides for their being signed, such requirement is directory only. Halley v. Tichenor, 120-164.

Duty to instruct: Without regard to any requests for instructions by either party, the court should give to the jury the law of the case, and a failure to do so will be reversible error. Overhauser v. American Cereal Co., 128-580.

A party is entitled to instructions correctly covering the theory of the case presented by the pleadings and the evidence

The absence of the judge from the court room beyond the hearing of the proceedings, even during the arguments in the case, when not shown affirmatively to have been without prejudice, is in itself error alone sufficient to warrant a reversal of the judgment. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

But objection on this ground may be waived by consent in advance, even in a criminal case. State v. Hammer, 116-284.

See also notes to Code § 3755 in this supplement.

upon which it was tried, and if the court fails to so instruct there is reversible error. Burroughs v. Butler-Ryan Co., 121-215.

It is error to submit the concrete facts tending to support the theory of one of the parties and fail to present in a similar way the concrete facts supporting the theory of the other. Christy v. Des Moines City R. Co., 126-428; McBride v. Des Moines City R. Co., 109 N. W. 618.

It is not to be presumed that the jurors are familiar with the principles of the law and may be left to apply them without instruction by the court. Snyder v. Fidler, 125-378.

Propositions relating simply to matters to be considered in weighing evidence which would occur to every sensible and reasonable man without instruction need not be stated to the jury. Stanley v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co., 119-520.

While words and terms in ordinary use need not be defined in instructions, yet in all cases where words or terms are used in a legal or technical sense differing from that which the common use of the words imports, it is proper and in many cases necessary to give definitive or explanatory instructions. Overhauser v. American Cereal Co., 128-580.

General directions: An instruction directing the jury in their deliberations not to refer to, discuss or consider anything in connection with the case except the evidence received, and to exclude all extraneous matters, statements and suggestions, is proper. State v. Butts, 107-653.

Instructions should be asked: Error in an instruction given may be ground for reversal, even though the appellant has not asked an instruction on the subject in proper form. It is only where the instruction given is complained of as not being sufficiently specific that the party complaining must show that more specific instructions were asked by him. State v. Goering, 106-636.

Where the instruction is correct as given, though not as explicit as might be desired, error cannot be predicated thereon in the absence of a request for more specific instructions. State v. House, 108-68; State v. Atkins, 122-161; Hill v. Glenwood, 124-479.

Where the instructions are good as far as they go, it is not error to fail to instruct on other matters as to which no instructions are asked. Keyes v. Cedar Falls, 107-509.

A party cannot complain of failure of the court to give instructions as to a specific question in the absence of request for an instruction on the subject. Murphy v. Hiltibridle, 132-114.

Where an instruction is right as far as it goes, and the complaining party has not asked additional instructions, he cannot complain of the failure to extend the instruction to cover particular matters involved in the evidence. Williams v. Mineral City Park Association, 128-32.

In the absence of a request, failure to give instructions relating to burden of proof is not erroneous. Harvey v. Clarinda, 111-528.

In the absence of a request for instructions, it is not error for the court to fail to instruct with reference to preponderance of the evidence. Osborne v. Ringland, 122-329.

The jury may be depended upon without instructions to apply the ordinary rules as to the weight and credit to be given to the testimony of witnesses, and in the absence of any request for special instructions on the subject or any state of affairs rendering it peculiarly important that such instructions be given, the judgment will not be reversed on appeal for failure to give such instructions. State v. Duffy, 124-705.

A party does not waive objection to insufficiency of the evidence to sustain an issue by asking an instruction relating to that issue. Boyer v. Commercial Bldg. Inv. Co., 110-491.

Where evidence has been erroneously admitted and is afterwards withdrawn, the complaining party may properly ask an instruction that the jury shall not consider the evidence thus withdrawn, but, failing to do so, it does not necessarily constitute error to fail to give such an instruction. State v. McKnight, 119-79.

Where evidence, in its general nature inadmissible, is admitted and received for a special purpose, the court, on the request of a party, should instruct the jury as to the purpose for which the evidence may be considered, but it is not error to fail to give such an instruction where none is asked. Bennett v. Marion, 119-473; Kircher v. Larchwood, 120-578.

Where evidence is properly admitted only for a specific purpose, and is not to be considered for another purpose, an instruction allowing the jury to consider it for the improper purpose will be prejudicial error, although no instruction as to the purpose for which it may properly be used is asked. Lundvick v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 128-376.

As a rule instructions offered by counsel are not so framed that the court is justified in giving them literally as asked, but if the main thought sought to be expressed contains a pertinent legal principle, which is not already fully covered by other instructions given, the court should embody it in proper words in its own charge. Kinyon v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 118-349.

The court may adopt the language of counsel embodied in requests for instructions, but it is a better practice to embody such requests so far as proper in its own charge. State v. Busse, 127-318, 100 N. W. 536.

Refusal of proper instructions: It is error to refuse a correct instruction as to material matter not covered by the instructions given. Botkin v. Cassady, 106-334.

It is not error to refuse instructions asked where the subject is properly covered by instructions given by the court. Belken v. Iowa Falls, 122-430.

Error of which party cannot complain: A party cannot complain of an instruction given which in substance and effect follows an instruction asked by him, even though erroneous. Bonnot Co. v. Newman, 109-580.

When an issue is clearly recognized by a party as being involved in the trial, and he not only makes no objection thereto, but affirmatively consents or requests that it be passed upon, he cannot be heard afterward to complain of the action of the court in submitting such issue to the jury. Fenner v. Crips, 109-455.

A party cannot complain of an instruction of the court in submitting to the jury an issue on which such party has himself asked instructions. Benton County Sav. Bank v. Boddicker, 117-407.

A party cannot complain of an instruction which in the respect complained of does not go beyond instructions which he himself has asked. Padelford v. Eagle Grove, 117-616.

The appellant cannot complain of language in the instructions taken from those asked by him. Bryce v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 128-483.

A party cannot complain of the submission to the jury of an issue on which the case has been tried and as to which the party has himself asked instructions. Seibert v. Germania Fire Ins. Co., 132-58.

A party cannot on appeal complain that an issue was erroneously submitted to the jury, on the ground that there was no evidence to support it, when he has himself asked instructions with reference to such issue. Spicer v. Webster City, 118-561.

Duty to state the issues: While the issues in the case should be clearly defined by the court, it is not necessary that they be grouped and stated in separate paragraphs of the charge devoted to that purpose alone. It is enough if the instructions as a whole point out the entire issues of the case. Meyer v. Boepple Button Co., 112-51.

In stating the issues the court should confine itself to a concise statement of the material issues; but although the allegations of the pleadings are unnecessarily set out, yet if the court by a subsequent brief statement of the matters which the jury is to consider calls attention to the material issues there is no prejudicial error. Schaefer v. Anchor Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 133-206.

The danger of confusing the jury by a too extended and literal recitation of all the matters with which counsel frequently burden their pleadings is to be discouraged and avoided. Shebek v. National Cracker Co., 120-414.

An instruction which eliminates a defense of the statute of limitations relied upon by the defendant, and permits the jury to find a verdict for plaintiff without reference to that question, is erroneous. Faust v. Hosford, 119-97.

The court should instruct with reference to plaintiff's theory of the case if under that theory he is entitled to recover on proof of the essential facts. Kempe v. Bennett, 111 N. W. 926.

The failure of the court to submit an issue raised by the answer is prejudicial error. Steele v. Crabtree, 130-313.

Where a case has been tried without objection on the theory that an issue has been raised by a pleading not properly filed, the court may properly submit such issue to the jury. Marengo Savings Bank v. Kent, 112 N. W. 767.

It is error in stating the issues to charge the jury that plaintiff is required to establish all the material allegations of his petition. Such an instruction leaves it to the jury to determine for themselves what allegations of the petition are material, and imposes upon the plaintiff the burden of proving allegations which, while they may be material, are not necessarily essential to the plaintiff's right of recovery. Williams v. Iowa Central R. Co., 121-270.

Failure to state one of the issues in the opening statement will not constitute prejudicial error where such issue is subsequently submitted for the determination of the jury. German Savings Bank v. Fritz, 109 N. W. 1008.

Error in stating the issues so as to include an issue not proper for submission to the jury may be cured by subsequent specific instructions to the jury as to the issues to be determined. Bryce v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 128-483; McGovern v. Interurban R. Co., 111 N. W. 412.

Error in stating the claims of the plaintiff may be cured by subsequent instructions expressly stating that damages are not to be allowed on account of one of the claims of the plaintiff included in the general statement of the issues. Hollingsworth v. Fort Dodge, 125-627.

While it may be error in some cases to instruct that the burden is upon the plaintiff to establish all the material allegations of his petition, yet if in other instructions the jury is told what plaintiff is required to show in order to make out a case the error may be cured. German Ins. Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 128-386.

Error relating to an issue which is subsequently withdrawn from the jury will not be ground for reversal. Howard v. Lamont, 124-348.

Reference to pleadings: The court should determine, from an examination of the pleadings, what the issues are, and so state them to the jury as to be readily comprehended. The setting out the pleadings in lieu of such statement will not be tolerated unless manifestly without prejudice. Swanson v. Allen, 108-414.

While it has been held erroneous to refer the jury to the pleadings for the issues, it has never been held that the trial court might not set forth the issues in the manner in which they are stated in the pleadings. Ft. Madison v. Moore, 109-476.

It is erroneous to copy into the instructions at length the pleadings in the case when they present issues which it is not proper to submit to the jury. In such case the court should state in its own language the real issues which are submitted to the jury. West v. Averill Groc. Co., 109-488.

Where the court failed in stating the issues to mention some of the grounds of negligence alleged and relied on by plaintiff, held that there was error which was not cured by reference to the particulars of negligence charged in the petition. Hart v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co., 109-631.

Where the petition was very short and simple, and charged the negligence for which the plaintiff sought to recover in such unambiguous language that the court could not well make the cause of action more intelligible or shorter by an independent statement, held that it was not error to recite the pleading in the instructions. Graybill v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 112-738.

An instruction in a particular case, which, while not a copy of the pleadings substantially followed the pleadings without pointing out definitely the questions to be determined by the jury, held erroneous. Erb v. German-American Ins. Co., 112-357.

The court should state the issues to the jury without copying the pleadings in full, but as a rule the supreme court will not reverse for such improper practice, if in other parts of the charge the real issues are distinctly stated so that no prejudice has resulted. Welch v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co., 117-394.

Even when the parties consent that the court may refer the jury to the pleadings for the statement of the issues in a case, it is of doubtful propriety for the court to compel the jury to search out and determine the issue they are to decide. Trumble v. Happy, 114-624.

It is not proper for the court, in stating the issues, to use copies of the pleadings and read them in haec verba to the jury, but a party who has consented to such a course of proceeding cannot be heard to complain thereof. De Wulf v. Dix, 110-553.

It is not improper for the court to make use of the pleadings in stating the issues where the parties have mutually consented thereto. Oxford Junction Savings Bank v. Cook, 111 N. W. 805.

Where the pleadings are clear and concise and state the exact issues, and counsel agree that the court may make use of them in stating the issues to the jury, there is no error in doing so. Dean v. Carpenter, 111 N. W. 815.

While it is not good practice to copy the pleadings into the instructions in stating the issues, such form of statement will not constitute prejudicial error where there is nothing in the case to cause such form of statement to result in confusion to the jury. German Ins. Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 128-386.

It is not reversible error to substantially copy the pleadings in stating the issues if the court in other portions of the charge clearly states the exact matters in dispute. Livingston v. Stevens, 122-62.

Amount of recovery: In an action on account consisting of several items, it is error to instruct that if plaintiff is entitled to recover he should be allowed a sum not in excess of the aggregate amount claimed, as such instruction permits the jury to disallow some items and award more than is claimed on others. Miller v. Armstrong, 123-86; Baker v. Oughton, 130-35.

While the jury should be limited in an action for personal injuries to a recovery of an amount not exceeding the amount claimed in the petition, it may constitute error to so instruct as to indicate to the jury that a verdict for the entire amount claimed would be improper. McGovern v. Interurban R. Co., 111 N. W. 412.

Issues not presented: It is error to instruct on issues not presented by the pleadings even though evidence has been introduced without objection which presents other issues. Eller v. Loomis, 106-276.

It is erroneous to instruct on an issue not raised by the pleadings, and on which no evidence has been introduced. Duncan v. Gray, 108-599; Blackman v. Kessler, 110-140; Anderson v. Roberts, 112-749.

It is error to instruct on matters not within the issues, and in respect of which there has been no attempt to make proof. Albertson v. Lewis, 132-243.

The instructions must be pertinent, to the issues and the evidence. Armstrong v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 121-362.

It is improper to submit to the jury in an action for personal injuries resulting from negligence, charges of negligence which are not made in the pleadings. Beard v. Guild, 107-476.

It is error to instruct with reference to an issue not raised by the pleadings. Therefore, held that where plaintiff sued a railroad company for injury caused to him as a passenger by defendant's negligence, it was error to submit the question whether he could recover against the railroad company as a trespasser for gross negligence. Fitzgibbon v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 108-614.

An instruction on the theory that an issue is in the case which is not in fact tendered by the pleadings nor otherwise properly presented, is ground for new trial. Hydinger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 126-222.

It is error to submit to the finding of the jury matters which are conceded, or concerning which there is no controversy in the evidence. Williams v. Iowa Central R. Co., 121-270; Garvick v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 124-691.

It is not error to fail to submit to the jury a question as to which the evidence is undisputed. Mitchell v. Union Terminal R. Co., 122-237.

It is not error to fail to submit to the jury an issue which has been withdrawn. German Ins. Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 128-386.

An instruction which is correct as an abstract proposition will be presumed to have been given upon proper occasion. State v. Wilson, 124-264.

Error without prejudice: The submission to the jury of an issue which should have been decided as a matter of law is error without prejudice where the finding of the jury is such as the court should have made. Mace v. Boedker, 127-721.

Error in submitting to the jury the issue as to undue influence in the execution of a will is without prejudice where there is an express finding supported by the evidence that the testator lacked mental capacity to make the will. In re Will of Sellack, 125-678.

Instructions not supported by evidence: It is error to submit to the jury a material issue of fact concerning which there is no evidence. Podhaisky v. Cedar Rapids, 106-

543; State v. Swallum, 111-37; Olmstead v. Foy, 112-349; Erb v. German-American Ins. Co., 112-357; Anderson v. Roberts, 112-749; in re Will of Knox, 123-24; Belcher v. Ballou, 124-507; State v. Smith, 129-709.

It is clearly erroneous and presumptively prejudicial to submit an issue upon which there is no evidence. Fothergill v. Fothergill, 129-93; State v. Fuller, 125-212.

The appropriateness of instructions cannot be determined by the pleadings alone; reference must be had also to the testimony introduced, and to the issues actually contested upon the trial. Struebing v. Stevenson, 129-25.

An issue in respect to which there is no evidence or upon which a recovery could not be had in any event, should not be submitted to the jury. Hanley v. Fort Dodge Light & Power Co., 133-326.

An instruction submitting a question to the jury upon which there is no evidence may be so carefully guarded in language that no prejudice can have resulted from giving it. Camp v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 124-238.

The court is not bound to submit to the jury every issue raised by the pleadings, but should submit only such issues as are for the determination of the jury under the evidence. Lush v. Parkersburg, 127-701.

It is not error to fail to submit to the jury an issue as to which there is no evidence. Frank v. Berry, 128-223; Struebing v. Stevenson, 129-25; Brusseau v. Lower Brick Co., 133-245.

In an action to recover damages for personal injuries, it is error to direct the jury that they may allow damages for nursing where no evidence of the expense of nursing has been introduced. Lamb v. Cedar Rapids, 108-629.

Where under the evidence the plaintiff is entitled to recover on only one of two grounds of action set up in his petition, it is error in stating the issues to a jury to recognize the other ground of recovery. Tuffree v. Steward, 109-600.

It is error to submit to the jury for determination allegations of negligence as to which there is no evidence. Even though the evidence as to one of the grounds of negligence alleged is conclusive it will not be error without prejudice to submit other grounds as to which there is no evidence, for the jury may rest their findings on the ground not supported by the evidence. Stevens v. Citizens' Gas & Elec. Co., 132-597.

It is not error to refuse to caution the jury to ignore a matter not referred to in the pleading nor involved in the proof. An instruction to the jury limiting its consideration to the evidence introduced is generally sufficient in that case. Cronk v. Wabash R. Co., 123-349.

Where by agreement of parties instructions were orally given, held, that it was not error to read the answer in the case, although it was claimed that there was no evidence in support thereof, it appearing that the court later in the charge called attention specially to the issues which had support of the testimony. Frank v. Daventryport, 105-588.

Construction of instruments: It is for the court to give the jury the meaning of a written contract upon the various hypotheses presented by the evidence. Clement v. Drybread, 108-701.

In an action for malicious prosecution it is error to leave it to the jury to determine from the pleadings in the former case what was alleged therein as the complaint against the defendant in that case. Erb v. German-American Ins. Co., 112-357.

Where the terms used in the contract are plain and unambiguous, omission to define such terms, in the absence of proper request, is not error. Ware Cattle Co. v. Anderson, 107-231.

Where the intent and meaning of a written contract is plain and clear from an ordinary interpretation of the language used the contract is to be construed by the court. Schultz v. Ford, 133-402.

The construction and interpretation of contracts is a question for the court and not for the jury. Tubbs v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 131-217.

Where an agreement is fully proved, and is not ambiguous in terms, the court should declare its meaning and define the rights and obligations of the parties created thereby. Johnson v. Carter, 120-355.

As to questions of fact: It is erroneous to single out a portion of the evidence relied upon by plaintiff and say that such evidence will not justify a recovery. Crowell v. McGoon, 106-266.

It is not error to say to the jury that "evidence has been introduced tending to show" certain facts as to which there has in fact been some evidence introduced. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

An instruction which does not assume anything as to the disputed facts, but simply directs the jury as to the effect of certain facts if found, is not objectionable as an instruction upon the facts. Owen v. Christensen, 106-394.

Where the issue in an action for personal injuries received by a servant in his employment was as to whether the injured person had assumed the risk of certain defects in the machinery, held that it was proper to make the defense dependent upon the proof of certain specific facts exactly as the evidence tended to show them, which were relied upon as evidence to show assumption of risk. Shebeck v. National Cracker Co., 120-414.

Instructions must always be based on evidence, and when the jury is told that if they find certain things, then such and such a result must follow, there is no reason for saying that such an instruction is misleading because the words "from the evidence" or "as shown by the evidence" are omitted. Stanley v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co., 119-526.

It is not proper to instruct the jury that certain facts, if found, would conclusively establish contributory negligence; the question of contributory negligence is for the determination of the jury. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

Where certain facts are relied on as tending to prove an ultimate fact which is for the jury, the court may say that such facts are properly to be considered in determining the ultimate fact, but it should not charge as matter of law that any one or more of them, if found, would establish the ultimate fact. Clark v. Shannon & Mott Co., 117-645.

If as to a state of facts reasonable minds might reach different conclusions as to the ultimate fact established, the question as to the ultimate fact is for the jury. Payne v. Fraternal Acc. Assn., 119-342.

Where the facts are undisputed and the inferences which may be drawn therefrom are such as that reasonable minds cannot differ with respect thereto, the trial court is justified in instructing the jury as to the effect of the testimony on a given point. Hughes v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 128-207.

Where there is a conflict in the evidence it is erroneous for the court to instruct the jury as to the facts. Eller v. Loomis, 106-276; Selley v. American Lubricator Co., 119-591; Brayton v. Boomer, 131-28.

It is not prejudicial error for the court to assume a fact about which there is no dispute. State v. Cunningham, 111-233; State v. Evans, 122-174; Miller v. Armstrong, 123-86; State v. Sparegrove, 112 N. W. 83.

It is not error to instruct the jury that by preponderance of evidence is meant that greater and superior testimony which reasonably satisfies the minds of the jurors; but the use of such a form of expression is not to be commended. Ball v. Marquis, 122-665.

Under the practice in this state the court is restricted to a mere statement of the law without suggestion of opinion upon the facts, and the charge of the court should be entirely free from any suggestion as to the weight of the evidence. Reference to any particular fact or kind of evidence as being strong or entitled to great weight is error. State v. Crofford, 121-395.

Therefore, held that it was error to instruct the jury with reference to circumstantial evidence that "men may commit a perjury but a fact cannot" was erroneous. Ibid.

Where the evidence is in conflict the weight to be given to it is for the jury. Hardrick v. Hardrick, 130-230.

It is error for the court to single out a class of witnesses or of testimony and give the jury an opportunity to magnify its or their importance. Simons v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 128-139.

It is not proper to instruct the jury with reference to an admission of the defendant in a criminal case that it is entitled to great weight. State v. Willing, 129-72.

The court alone determines the competency of witnesses, but their credibility and the weight which shall be given to their testimony is the exclusive province of the jury. Madden v. Saylor Coal Co., 133-699.

It is error for the trial judge to neutralize the effect of evidence by statements from the bench bearing on its credibility. Ball v. Skinner, 111 N. W. 1022.

The court may instruct the jury that testimony with regard to verbal statements should be received with great caution. Ellis v. Republic Oil Co., 133-11.

It is error to throw discredit upon the testimony of experts testifying with reference to facts within their knowledge by observation. Madden v. Saylor Coal Co., 133-699.

The court may properly instruct that expert testimony as to handwriting is of slight value as against the positive and unequivocal testimony of credible witnesses speaking of their personal knowledge. Ayrhart v. Wilhelmy, 112 N. W. 782.

While it is not error to instruct the jury that expert evidence as to genuineness of signatures is entitled to less consideration than the positive evidence of credible witnesses speaking from personal knowledge, yet the court should not instruct the jury in general with reference to expert evidence that the jurors are not to substitute for their own conclusions upon the evidence the opinions of expert witnesses. Expert testimony is to be given consideration like all other testimony which the court allows to go to the jury, and accorded such weight as, in view of all the evidence of every kind and nature and its reasonableness and the apparent candor and competency of the witness, fairness demands. Ball v. Skinner, 111 N. W. 1022.

It is improper for the court to emphasize the circumstances from which negligence may be inferred and omit any reference to other circumstances shown by the evidence tending to support the opposite inference. Christy v. Des Moines City R. Co. 126-428, McBride v. Des Moines City R. Co. 109 N. W. 618.

Construed together: Words in instructions are not to be considered with reference to their technical accuracy, but relatively, and that meaning is to be credited to them which such a consideration shows to have been intended. In re Allison's Estate, 104-130.

It is not usually safe in a complicated case to attempt to give all the law on all the branches of the case, and all questions which may be involved, in one statement. The different questions involved may be discussed in separate instructions which will be construed together. Phinney v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 122-488; State v. Sheets, 127-73; Mitchell v. Pinckney, 127-696; State v. Mitchell, 130-697; Bremer v. Nugent, 111 N. W. 446.

No one instruction may contain all the law applicable to the entire case, and for this reason all should be considered together in passing upon the issues, but this does not obviate the rule that one instruction may contain the law as applied to some hypothesis or given state of facts. Swanson v. Allen, 108-419.

Instructions should be taken together in determining whether error has been committed in giving any one of them. Templin v. Boone, 127-91; Jensen v. Damm, 127-555; German Ins. Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 128-386; Huggard v. Glucose Sugar Ref. Co., 132-724.

Instructions should be construed together and if, when so construed, they announce correct principles, a verdict based thereon will not be disturbed, although considered singly they might be held erroneous. Faust v. Hosford, 119-97.

The fact that one instruction standing alone might be misleading will not require reversal if the instruction is sufficient when read with other instructions relating to the same subject. Whittlesey v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 121-597.

Conflicting: Contradictory and conflicting instructions are almost uniformly held to be erroneous, except in cases where the court can say there was no prejudice. Ford v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R., 106-85.

It is error to give instructions which are in conflict. Gibson v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 107-596; Loomis v. Des Moines News Co., 110-515.

The giving of conflicting instructions is error, if they are calculated to confuse the jury, and present matters for determination which should not have been considered. Beaver v. Porter, 129-41.

Where the court in explaining circumstances entitling the plaintiff to recover for negligence omits one of the grounds of negligence presented under the issues as set forth in the instructions stating the issues, there is such prejudicial conflict in the instructions as to require a reversal. Christy v. Des Moines City R. Co., 126-428.

Although the law on a particular question is correctly stated in one instruction, yet, if in another instruction the direction as to whether the jury shall find a verdict is made to depend on facts which do not include nor relate to such question, the instructions are in conflict and erroneous. Quinn v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 107-710.

In such case the latter instruction would tend, by giving undue prominence to one question, to withdraw the attention of the jury from the other question, and to nullify the effect of the former instruction. Ibid.

When conflicting instructions are given, one of which announces a correct, and the other an incorrect rule, the case must be reversed, for there is no means of knowing which one the jury followed. Kerr v. Topping, 109-150.

Where an instruction can properly be so read as to be consistent with the other instructions, it will be assumed on appeal that it was given such construction by the jury. State v. Seery, 129-259.

Prejudicial error in the giving of one instruction is not cured by stating the correct rule in another. Rudd v. Dewey, 121-454; Mayer v. Smoky Hollow Coal Co., 121-121.

Misleading: An instruction in an action to recover for personal injuries on account of negligence which makes the right to recover depend upon a collateral fact, omitting the necessary element of negligence on the part of defendant, and the want of contributory negligence on the part of plaintiff, is erroneous. Meyer v. Boepple Button Co., 112-51.

Where instructions are in conflict or misleading the judgment is based on a clerical error in one of the instructions. Rich v. Moore, 114-80.

In a particular case held that an instruction relating to fraud should not have been confused by introducing into it reference to want of consideration. Frick v. Kabaker, 116-494.

Complicated instructions with reference to technical matters which are not readily brought within the comprehension of the jury should not be given. Williams v. Iowa Central R. Co., 121-270.

Withdrawal: Where after the case was submitted to the jury by the judge who tried it, he ceased to hold the term of court, and turned the business of the court over to another judge of the same district, and at the time of doing so directed the succeeding judge to withdraw from the jury certain instructions which he had concluded were erroneous, and the second judge did so, held that the proceeding did not constitute error requiring a reversal. Renner v. Thornburg, 111-515.

Mere verbal errors: A mere clerical error, or error occurring by inadvertence in the giving of an instruction may constitute prejudicial error, where it appears that it was such as to be likely to mislead the jury. Atkins v. Ellis, 118-76.

Mere clerical omissions or verbal inaccuracies are not sufficient to constitute reversible error where it appears that no prejudice could have resulted to the complaining party. Young v. People's Gas. & Elec. Co., 128-290; Russell v. Ft. Dodge, 126-308; State v. Sheets, 127-73.

The inadvertent use of the word "defendant" where "plaintiff" was intended held not such error as to require reversal where it appears from the language of the instructions that the jury could not have been misled. Reupke v. Stuhr & Son Grain Co., 126-632.

The use of the pronoun "his" instead of "her" in framing an instruction which was evidently a slip of the pen and not calculated to mislead a juror of average mental capacity, was held not to be ground for reversal. State v. Steen, 125-307.

Curing error as to evidence: Error in the admission of evidence may be cured by an instruction explicitly advising the jury not to consider such evidence. Keyes v. Cedar Falls, 107-509; Osborne v. Ringland, 122-329; State v. Scroggs, 123-649; Coinc v. Chicago & N. W. R. C., 123-458.

Error in the admission of evidence may usually be cured by striking such evidence from the record on motion at the close of all the evidence. Gray v. Central Minn. Immigration Co., 127-560.

Error in overruling a motion to strike evidence may be cured by instructing the jury not to consider the evidence which should thus have been stricken out. Winkler v. Hawkes, 126-474.

Where evidence has been admitted on the promise of counsel to make it relevant by

SEC. 3707. Record—exceptions.

An exception taken at the time of the giving of all the instructions given is sufficiently specific. First Nat. Bank v. Robinson, 105-463.

This section expressly provides that exceptions to instructions may be noted by the shorthand reporter without reason for such exception being made. White v. Elgin Creamery Co., 108-522.

SEC. 3708. Numbered—given or refused.

Where the omission to number paragraphs of the instructions does not appear to have worked to the prejudice of the unsuccessful party, it will not be a ground for reversal on appeal. Johnson v. Sioux City, 114-137.

The fact that the court fails to number the paragraphs of instructions is not ground for new trial. In re Evans' Estate, 114-240.

SEC. 3709. Exceptions after verdict.

Exceptions taken to instructions in a motion for a new trial must point out the the subsequent introduction of other evidence, and no such connection is afterwards made, any prejudice from its admission may usually be removed by instructing the jury to disregard it. State v. Newells, 109 N. W. 1016.

Where a transcript of evidence on a former appeal was introduced by one party against the objection of the other, but afterwards the court, at the request of the party furnishing the transcript, directed the jury not to consider it, and the witnesses themselves were produced and examined, held that there was not such error as to require a reversal. Bell v. Clarion, 120-332.

The erroneous admission of evidence may be so fundamentally prejudicial that an instruction not to consider it will not sufficiently counteract the error. Brown Land Co. v. Lehman, 112 N. W. 185; Flinders v. Bailey, 133-616.

As curing misconduct of counsel: Improper argument of counsel may be so far prejudicial that the prejudice therefrom cannot be removed by an instruction directing the jury not to consider the matter referred to. State v. Hogan, 115-455.

A direction to disregard improper statements of counsel in argument will ordinarily be presumed sufficient to negative any presumptions of prejudice arising therefrom. State v. Donovan, 125-239.

Jury must follow instructions: It will be presumed that in the allowance of items of damage in an action for personal injuries, the jury followed the directions of the court. Vedder v. Delaney, 122-583.

tion, "Given, plaintiff excepts," signed by the judge, is sufficient when the exception is taken at the time that the instruction is given. Clement v. Drybread, 108-701.

Where instructions are duly excepted to when given, it is not necessary to again except with reference thereto in the motion for a new trial. Lingle v. Lingle, 121-133.

Section applied. Decatur v. Simpson, 115-348.

The provision for marking instructions as "given" is directory, and a failure to so mark them will not constitute error. Turley v. Griffin, 106-161.

The instructions are sufficiently identified in a skeleton bill of exceptions by referring to them as filed in a case by their numbers and as duly indorsed by the presiding judge. Monatt v. Scott, 106-203.

defects complained of. State v. Williams, 115-97; Tyler v. Bowen, 124-452.

Exception to instructions in a particular case taken in writing, but not at the time the instructions were read, held, not sufficiently specific. Lacy v. Kossuth County, 106-16.

Where by agreement of the parties leave is granted for delay in filing a motion for a new trial, it does not authorize the incorporation in such motion of exceptions to the instructions which were not taken at the proper time. Turley v. Griffin, 106-161.

The fact that exceptions taken to the instructions in a motion for a new trial are not sufficiently specific will not defeat a consideration of exceptions properly taken at the time the charge is given. Ellis v. Leonard, 107-487.

A general assertion in a motion for a new trial that "the court having erred in determining the effect of the written lease should correct the error by setting aside the verdict," held not a sufficient exception to instructions. American Sav. Bank v. Shaver Carriage Co., 111-137.

The exception in a motion for a new trial that the court erred in giving certain instructions, which are specified, but the objection to which is not pointed out, is not sufficient. Rule v. McGregor, 115-323.

SEC. 3710. View of premises by jury.

Premises may be viewed by the jury only for the purpose of better applying the evidence introduced in the course of the trial. Mier v. Phillips Fuel Co., 130-570.

The purpose of viewing the premises is to enable the jury better to understand the testimony of the witnesses respecting the same, and more intelligently apply such testimony to the issues before them, and not to make them silent witnesses in the case. The jury is properly instructed, therefore, if it is directed to determine the facts from the evidence and not to base its verdict in any degree upon an examination of the premises. Guinn v. Iowa St. L. R. Co., 131-680.

SEC. 3717. What jury may take with them.

It is error to allow a map not introduced in evidence to go to the jury at their request to be used by them in construing the evidence. DeWulf v. Dix, 110-553.

It is not error to allow the jury to take the pleadings with them to the jury room, the jury being properly cautioned against making any improper use of the pleadings on the exhibit attached thereto. Mayo v. Halley, 124-675.

The statutory provision that the jury may take with them on retiring books of account and other papers which have been account and other papers which have been received as evidence is not mandatory; but when requested by either party, the papers and books received in evidence should be sent out with the jury, and a refusal to make an order that effect in error. State v. Young, 110 N. W. 292.

SEC. 3719. Further testimony to correct mistake.

Where it does not appear that the omission of evidence occurred from oversight, the action of the court in refusing to allow the introduction of further evidence will not be overruled on appeal. Banning v. Purinton, 105-642.

It is not error after the closing of the case to permit the introduction of evidence which is necessary in order to secure a decision on the merits and deprive the opposite party of a technical advantage acquired by evident oversight of his adversary. Independent School Dist. v. Hewitt, 105-663.

Where the judge indicated his intention to rule against a party on the ground that there was no evidence of a material fact, held error to refuse to receive additional evidence of witnesses then present in court to prove such fact. Cathcart v. Rogers, 115-30.

It is within the discretion of the court to reopen the case for the introduction of additional evidence on the part of the plaintiff even after the defendant has demurred to the evidence or moved to dismiss or moved for the direction of a verdict. Hill v. Glenwood, 124-479.

SEC. 3720. Additional instructions.

Held not error, after the jury had been out deliberating for more than thirty-six hours, to give an instruction to the effect that the case must be determined by some jury, that it must be determined on the same pleadings and evidence, that a disagreement would simply add to the burden of the unsuccessful party, and that it should again retire for deliberation and try to arrive at a verdict. Delmonico Hotel Co. v. Smith, 112-659.

Where the jury asked the court whether they could agree to disagree, and the court answered simply "no," without explaining the effect of failure to agree, held that a new trial was properly granted. Rogers v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 117-511.

SEC. 3722. Verdict—how signed and rendered.

Defective verdict: Informalities, inaccuracies and technical defects in the verdict are to be disregarded and where the unsuccessful party has treated the verdict as being rendered against him, he cannot afterwards on appeal insist that by reason of uncertainty in the form it was in fact in his favor. Gillespie v. Ashford, 125-729.

Correcting verdict: If in an action to recover double damages for the killing of stock it appears on inquiry of the jury that the verdict was rendered for the value of the animals only, the jury may be permitted to correct the verdict by making it for double the amount of the value found. Campbell v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 124-248.

Directing verdict: Where there is a total failure of proof as to a claim made in the petition the court should, on the request of defendant, direct a verdict for him at the close of plaintiff's evidence. Saatoff v. Scott, 103-201.

Where the evidence in favor of the party having the burden of proof on an issue is in no way contradicted or its credibility affected by impeachment, the court may assume the fact relied upon to be proven, and need not submit the question to the jury. Johnson v. Buffalo Center State Bank, 112 N. W. 165.

A verdict should be directed for the defendant where the evidence for the plaintiff is as consistent with the conclusion which does not involve defendant's liability as it is with the conclusion supporting such liability. Neal v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 129-5.

A motion to direct a verdict should be sustained when it clearly appears to the trial judge that it would be his duty to set aside a verdict in favor of the party on whom the burden of proof rests. Cherry v. Des Moines Leader, 114-298.

Where the evidence is such that it would be error to direct a verdict in favor of a party, it will be error for the trial court to set aside a verdict in favor of such party on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence. Hensley v. Davidson Bros. Co., 112 N. W. 227.

It is not proper to direct a verdict for defendant on account of the failure of plaintiff to allege and prove some essential fact of his cause of action as to which no issue has been raised. Knapp v. Brotherhood, 128-566.

Failure to allege a necessary fact in the petition is not sufficient ground for refusing to direct a verdict for the plaintiff, if leave to amend is granted and the proper allegation is made. Jones v. Shelby County, 124-551.

A motion to direct a verdict simply challenges the sufficiency of the record to make out a case as against a defendant who has been compelled to submit to a trial and the overruling of such motion made by one who has been refused a right to be heard on a cross petition does not constitute error which may be reviewed on appeal. Bussell v. Ft. Dodge, 126-308.

Where evidence has actually been received and then erroneously stricken out, the supreme court may on appeal consider such evidence as should have been allowed to go to the jury in passing upon the correctness of the action of the court in directing a verdict. Campbell v. Park, 128-181.

In applying the rule as to taking the case from the jury and directing a verdict, the trial court cannot pass upon the question as to whether or not the preponderating weight of the evidence is in favor of or against a party, nor upon the weight of the evidence or the credibility of the witnesses; all these matters are for the consideration of the jury. McLeod v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 104-139.

The court cannot on a motion to direct a verdict determine as to the weight of the evidence, nor pass upon the credibility of the witnesses. It must take the evidence most favorable to the plaintiff, and if that makes a case for the jury he is entitled to have it passed upon by them. Scott v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co., 112-54.

Where there is a real conflict of evidence the case is for the jury, and the court is not authorized to determine whether the preponderance is in favor of one or the other, nor to pass upon the credibility of the witness. In re Betts' Estate, 113-111.

To sustain a ruling of the trial court in directing a verdict, the facts essential to show a valid cause of action must be so apparent from the evidence that reasonable men could not differ as to the facts which it establishes. Morey v. Laird, 108-670.

On a motion to direct a verdict the party against whom it is asked is entitled to the most favorable construction which the facts will bear. The making of such a motion amounts to an admission of all matters which the testimony tends to prove. Dege-lau v. Wright, 114-52.

On a motion to direct a verdict, the opposite party is entitled to have taken as established every fact which his evidence fairly tended to prove. Hartman v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 132-582.

The fact that the court has at the conclusion of plaintiff's evidence refused to sustain a motion to direct a verdict in defendant's favor is not conclusive as to the right to do so at the conclusion of all the evidence. In re Stufflebeam's Will, 112 N. W. 815.

A party who has asked for a directed verdict and on the overruling of his motion has rested his case cannot complain that the court should have submitted the issues to the jury and not directed a verdict for the opposite party. A request for a directed verdict is an election to treat the case as presenting a question of law only and is a waiver of a verdict on the facts. Gray v. Central Minn. Immigration Co., 127-560.

Where each party moves for a verdict at the conclusion of the evidence and there is not sufficient evidence to justify the court in directing a verdict for the party in whose favor judgment is entered, the case will be reversed on appeal. As to whether the party securing judgment in such case has thereby waived the right of submission of the case to a jury, quaere. First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Pleasant Milling Co., 103-518.

The fact that each party asks the court to direct the verdict in his favor does not constitute a waiver by either of the right to have the case submitted to the jury in

SEC. 3724. Sealed verdict.

Where a sealed verdict is returned, in pursuance of an agreement, it is not error for the court to refuse to poll the jury and allow a juror to dissent from the verdict in which he concurred at the time it was sealed. Dunbauld v. Thompson, 109-199.

After a sealed verdict has been returned,

SEC. 3726. Special defined.

A special verdict must present the ultimate facts as established by the evidence. The fact to be found must be one inhering in and necessary to determine in arriving at the general verdict, and the method or elements considered in reaching the ultimate facts cannot be called for by special interrogatories. Read v. State Ins. Co., 103-307.

SEC. 3727. Findings.

Ultimate facts: Findings in answer to special interrogatories should relate to ultimate facts inhering in the verdict, deciding issues more or less important, necessary to be passed upon in making up the general verdict. Where the fact is absolutely essential to recovery, a finding negating its existence will be conclusive without more, but when the interrogatories do not include all the issues essential to reach a legal conclusion, then it becomes of the utmost importance to know what extrinsic matters, if any, may be resorted to in aid of these findings. Every reasonable presumption is to be indulged in favor of the general verdict. All the essential facts inhere therein, when the contrary is not made to appear from the special findings. Therefore the evidence may not be resorted to in aid of the special findings as against the general verdict. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 114-89.

the event that his motion is not sustained. German Sav. Bank v. Bates Addition Imp. Co., 111-432.

A motion to direct a verdict is not provided for in the Code. It is in effect a demurrer to evidence, and not to be resorted to for the purpose of reaching defects in the pleadings. Howerton v. Augustine, 130-389.

For the purpose of a motion to direct a verdict, the ruling of the court in connection with the introduction of the evidence are the law of the case. Hamilton v. Schlitz Brewing Co., 129-172.

In an action to recover the statutory penalty for selling intoxicating liquor to a minor, the sale being conceded and the undisputed testimony being that the person to whom the sale was made was in fact a minor, held, that a verdict for the plaintiff might be directed by the court. Fielding v. La Grange, 104-530.

the court may recall the jurors to correct a manifest error in form, or supply an omission of some matter necessary to the verdict as found, and thus complete it. Oxford Junction Sav. Bank v. Cook, 111 N. W. 805.

A special verdict covers all the issues in the case, and is a substitute for a general verdict, while answers to interrogatories do not supersede the necessity for a general verdict. Morbey v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 116-84.

While it is the better practice not to submit interrogatories which do not call for ultimate facts, nevertheless submission of interrogatories as to matters which are relevant may be error without prejudice. Nodle v. Hawthorn, 107-280.

Where an issue is submitted a party has the right to have the jury answer interrogatories for the purpose of ascertaining the grounds upon which a verdict is rendered. Trumble v. Happy, 114-624.

Interrogatories not requiring ultimate facts for answers may properly be refused. Ibid.

Special interrogatories calling for ultimate facts material to the issues in the case should be propounded to the jury when properly requested. In re Townsend's Estate, 122-246.

Special interrogatories calling for ultimate facts inhering in and necessarily to be determined in reaching a verdict, should be submitted if requested. Decatur v. Simpson, 115-348.

Findings of fact in answer to interrogatories do not dispense with a general verdict. Morbey v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 116-84.

The question submitted to the jury for answer should be controlling and call for the ultimate facts necessary to be determined in finding a general verdict. In a particular case held that the court properly refused to submit interrogatories which could not be categorically answered. Ibid.

Interrogatories which do not call for ultimate facts determinative of the case may properly be refused. Wilder v. Great Western Cereal Co., 130-263.

It is not error to refuse interrogatories which do not call for ultimate or controlling facts nor for facts of such importance that a finding thereon against the weight of the testimony would necessarily indicate passion or prejudice. Kuehl v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 126-638.

It is not proper to submit special findings as to facts which bear only remotely upon the real question in issue. Goldstein v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 124-143.

It is not error to submit for special finding the question whether at the place of accident to a railroad train the ties were old and rotten, although the question whether there was an accident is in issue. Cronk v. Wabash R. Co., 123-349.

It is not error to submit an interrogatory in an action for personal injuries calling for a finding of the jury as to whether the plaintiff could, in the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, have seen the danger from which the injury resulted. Buchholtz v. Radcliffe, 129-27.

In an action against a railroad company to recover for stock killed by reason of getting upon the right of way through a defective fence, held that the court was not required to submit to the jury a special interrogatory with reference to the manner in which the stock got through the fence. Saar v. Chicago, B. & K. C. R. Co., 119-60.

Special interrogatories not determinative of the case, but relating solely to the extent of the injury complained of may properly be refused. Heinmiller v. Winston, 131-32.

Requests for findings which call for answers upon evidential rather than ultimate facts should not be submitted. Haney-Campbell Co. v. Preston Creamery Co., 119-188.

Special interrogatories should not be submitted which are likely to mislead the jury into the belief that the matter inquired about is controlling. Boddy v. Henry, 126-31.

Where separate and distinct claims are involved in the same action, special interrogatories bearing directly on the determination of any one of the issues should be submitted although answers thereto would not be determinative of the entire case. Brown Land Co. v. Lehman, 112 N. W. 185.

Calling for conclusions: An interrogatory should not be submitted for a finding which is in the nature of a conclusion of law derived from several facts. Boddy v. Henry, 126-31.

It is not reversible error to submit an interrogatory calling for an answer by way of a conclusion, where the general verdict necessarily covers the special finding. There is a manifest distinction between holding that the trial court may refuse to submit such question, and holding that there was prejudicial error in submitting it. Taylor v. Wabash R. Co., 112-157.

Special interrogatories ambiguous in their nature and calling for conclusions of the jury based upon the findings of several facts, need not be submitted. Nor is it necessary to submit questions calling for an answer as to matters practically undisputed or which would not affect the general verdict. Morrow v. National Masonic Acc. Assn., 125-633.

Not as to the ultimate issue: It is not error to refuse to submit a special interrogatory calling for an answer as to the mental capacity of a testator where that is the very question to be determined by the general verdict. Conway v. Murphy, 112 N. W. 764.

Form: A special interrogatory should be couched in simple and direct language calling if possible for a categorical answer. Repetition of the same question in different language necessarily tends to confusion and should be avoided. Hanousek v. Marshalltown, 130-550.

Special interrogatories which are in the nature of a cross-examination of the jury should be refused. Greenlee v. Mosnat, 126-330.

Compound questions should not be submitted for special findings. Jones v. Shelby County, 124-551.

A compound interrogatory, calling for findings on several distinct propositions, should not be submitted. Brier v. Davis, 122-59.

The interrogatory should call for the ultimate facts upon which the right of recovery depends. Ibid.

It is not error for the court to divide a special interrogatory asked. Pratt v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 107-287.

Special interrogatories which call for a finding of the jury as to ultimate and important facts bearing upon the issues may be proper, though calling for answers somewhat in the nature of conclusions. Ibid.

Time: The mere formal opening of the address to the jury by counsel for plaintiff does not preclude the court from suspending the argument and allowing the counsel for defendant to request the submission of special interrogatories to the jury. Wilson v. Wapello County, 129-77.

Error without prejudice: Refusal of interrogatories asked will constitute error without prejudice where it appears from answers to other interrogatories taken in connection with the court's charge that there could have been no finding under the evidence favorable to the party complaining. Livingston v. Stevens, 122-62.

Failure to answer: Where an interrogatory is such that in form it would not have been error to refuse to submit it, the failure of the jury to answer it is not a ground for a new trial. Correll v. Cedar Rapids, 110-333.

Where a special interrogatory remains unanswered it must be presumed in support of the general verdict that the jury found such facts as were necessary to sustain it. Failure to answer does not amount to failure to find the facts inquired about. Huss v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 113-343.

Failure to answer an interrogatory is not a good ground for a motion to render judgment notwithstanding the general verdict. Connell v. Keokuk Elec. R. & P. Co., 131-622.

Failure to answer interrogatories is not a ground of reversal where the counsel for the unsuccessful party has not taken steps at the proper time to require answers to be made. Mayo v. Halley, 124-675.

Where a special interrogatory remains unanswered it must be presumed in favor of the general verdict that the jury found such facts as were necessary to sustain it. Hass v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 113-343.

SEC. 3728. Findings inconsistent with general verdict.

To warrant a judgment upon special findings against the general verdict such findings must be absolutely inconsistent therewith. Crynes v. Independence, 115-448.

On motion for a judgment as against a general verdict based on special findings every issue raised by the pleadings and not eliminated by the instructions will be presumed to have been found for the party in whose favor the general verdict is returned, and it will be presumed that such findings are supported by sufficient evidence; but the special findings cannot be added to or supported by the evidence and must be given effect only so far as they necessarily negative the findings which might otherwise be assumed in support of the general verdict. Therefore, in an action to recover damages for personal injuries, held that as the special findings did not negative all the allegations of negligence in plaintiff's petition, which were by the court submitted to the jury, and on which the jury might have predicated its general verdict in plaintiff's favor, a judgment for defendant based on the special findings was erroneous. Conwell v. Tri-City R. Co., 112 N. W. 546.

Where the special finding is in the nature of a conclusion of law, rather than a conclusion of fact, it may be disregarded by the court. Fishbaugh v. Spunaugle, 118-337.

Although there is apparent inconsistency between special findings and the general verdict, yet if, upon taking them as a whole, such inconsistency is not necessarily to be implied, the general verdict must stand. The question is not to be determined by singling out some one special finding for consideration, but all must be considered together in the light of the pleadings, and the findings will, if possible, be so construed as to support the verdict. Ibid.

The general verdict is controlling as to any issue of fact properly submitted to the jury, not covered by the special findings. Connell v. Keokuk Elec. R. & P. Co., 131-622.

A special finding as to an immaterial matter will not defeat the general verdict. Burk v. Walsh, 118-397.

An answer to a special interrogatory, decisive of an important, though not determinative fact in issue, when without support of the evidence, but in conflict with it, constitutes a showing of passion and prejudice on the part of the jury such as to call for a new trial, but a special finding not supported by the evidence, but not in conflict with it, when not essential to the verdict, will not furnish ground for interference by the court. Spicer v. Webster City, 118-561.

If the findings, though inconsistent with the general verdict, are not sufficient to sustain judgment for the party against whom the general verdict is rendered, then the court cannot render judgment for the unsuccessful party, but may set aside the general verdict because inconsistent with the special findings. Schulte v. Chicago M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

Judgment on special findings, notwithstanding the verdict, must rest on facts found by the jury, rather than those which it is thought might or ought to have been found. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 114-89.

SEC. 3734. Reference—by consent.

It may be mutually agreed by the parties to the reference that each shall become responsible for one half of the fees of the referee and reporter. Cole v. Gates Lumber Co., 131-189.

An order sending a case to a referee cannot be questioned on appeal where no objection to the order was made at the time. West v. Fry, 112 N. W. 184.

Error in ordering a reference is waived if the court offers to set aside the reference and the party afterwards complaining objects to such proposed action. Stroup v. Bridger, 124-401.

If the report of the referee is set aside as a whole, the court has no right to try the issues of fact without setting aside the order of reference. Ibid.

SEC. 3735. Reference—without consent.

The cases involving accounts in which reference may be made without consent of parties are those of mutual accounts, such as were formerly cognizable in equity. Tufts v. Norris, 115-250.

An account consisting substantially of successive entries of amounts of money loaned does not constitute a mutual account justifying a compulsory reference in an action to recover the total amount due. Frick v. Kabaker, 116-494.

There is no right to a compulsory reference where the items of indebtedness sued upon do not constitute portions of a continuous account. Mayo v. Halley, 124-675.

SEC. 3738. Powers of referee.

A referee can not treat as valid and give consideration to pleadings not filed with the clerk and entered on the appearance docket. Johnson v. Berdo, 131-524.

SEC. 3740. Report—judgment.

An order setting aside the referee's report is in effect the granting of a new trial, and in such matters the court has a discretion, and its action will not be reversed on appeal unless it appears that the discretion has been abused. Van Wagenen v. Parsons, 106-263.

While the findings of a referee are not conclusive on the supreme court in an appeal from the decree based on such report, yet they are entitled to consideration. McCormick Har. Mach. Co., v. Powder, 123-17.

The exception to the report of the referee should point out wherein it is claimed that the report is erroneous. Kossuth County State Bank v. Richardson, 132-370.

No exception being taken to the finding of fact made by a referee, it must be assumed that such finding is correct, and it will not be presumed, in order to sustain a judgment of the court inconsistent with the finding of facts made by the referee, that other evidence as to the facts was introduced on the hearing. Weitnauer v. Weitnauer, 117-578.

SEC. 3746. Procedure.

After the time has expired within which reports are to be made, the referee ceases to have authority to act and is without jurisdiction. Manning v. Nelson, 107-34.

SEC. 3749. Exceptions—how taken.

Exceptions necessary: A party should except to special findings with which he is not content even though the court renders judgment in his favor; otherwise on appeal such findings will be held conclusive as to him. Aldrich v. Paine, 106-461.

An exception to the judgment itself is not necessary where exception has been duly taken to the conclusion of law upon which the judgment is found. Clement v. Drybread, 108-701.

In order to secure a review of the action of the trial court it must appear not only that there was a valid exception to the trial court's ruling, but also that the court's attention was called to the matter by a proper objection excepting to the judgment. Gillespie v. Ashford, 125-729.

In the original proceeding by certiorari to test the validity of the action of a court in entering judgment, it is not necessary that the taking of exception to such judgment be shown. Coffey v. Gamble, 117-545.

Time for taking: An exception must be entered at the time the decision is made, unless it be on motion or demurrer, and cannot be preserved by means of a subsequent motion unless there is ground for having a nunc pro tunc entry of the exception made. Young v. Rann, 111-253.

Time for filing: In the absence of express agreement or consent the judge has no power to sign a bill of exceptions after the final adjournment of the term, and if consent is given the bill must be filed within the time agreed upon or it will not be considered. Hershey v. Nyenhuis, 103-195.

Where at the time of overruling a motion for a new trial which was at a term subsequent to that of the trial of the case, time for filing bill of exceptions was fixed and the bill was filed within that time, held that it was sufficient. National Horse Imp. Co. v. Novak, 105-157.

Where it appears that the bill of exceptions was signed and filed after the time fixed by the court therefor had expired, a motion to strike it from the record in the supreme court will be sustained. Hopkins Fine Stock Co. v. Reid, 106-78.

The filing of an amendment to the abstract for the purpose of making the abstract correspond to the record does not stop the appellee from claiming that the bill of exceptions was not filed within the proper time and cannot be considered. Hershey v. Nyenhuis, 103-195.

Shorthand report: This section simply declares that when the shorthand notes are duly certified and filed a formal bill of exceptions shall not be required, but the perfection of the record within the time limit must be made in one way or the other, and either the bill of exceptions or the report must be on file within such time in order to preserve the evidence as a part or the record. In re Tobey's Estate, 112-581.

Evidence taken down in shorthand after being transcribed may when duly certified by the trial judge become a part of the record without the certificate of the official reporter. Philbrick v. University Place, 106-352.

The translation of the stenographer's notes should be certified by the reporter who reports the proceedings, and not necessarily by the official reporter. Spinney v. Halliday, 115-420.

SEC. 3750. Form—grounds.

An exception "to the giving of each and every of said instructions" is sufficient to

Prior to the adoption of Code § 3675 the certificate of the reporter to his notes was not essential in connection with their incorporation by reference into a skeleton bill of exceptions. Sigler v. Murphy, 107-128.

A skeleton bill incorporating the shorthand notes by reference is sufficient. It is not necessary that the clerk be directed to copy into the bill the original notes, but a recital that they were filed and that all the evidence, objections and exceptions having been extended and transcribed in longhand and certified and filed in due time after such trial by such shorthand reporter, are as follows, to-wit, etc., is sufficient. The clerk in extending the skeleton bill is expected to copy the transcript made by the reporter, which will be sufficiently identified if properly entitled and duly certified and filed in the case. Manatt v. Scott, 106-203.

The instructions are sufficiently identified by referring to them as filed in the case by their numbers and as duly endorsed by the presiding judge. Ibid.

The evidence may be preserved by a skeleton bill of exceptions, signed by the judge, and filed in due time, wherein the reporter's shorthand notes, duly certified by the judge and reporter, and filed, are made a part of the bill by unmistakable reference. Shaulis v. Buxton, 109-355.

the reporter and not entered on the clerks record as filed. In re Guardianship of Holcher, 127-369, and see notes to § 3675.

SEC. 3753. Signing.

In criminal cases a bill of exceptions signed by bystanders in a case where such form of bill of exceptions is proper may be filed within the time allowed by the court for filing a bill of exceptions. State v. Taylor, 103-22.

Bystanders cannot certify a bill of exceptions unless the judge has refused to do so, and the bill which they sign must show affirmatively that the judge has refused to indorse the correctness of its statements. Chew v. O'Hara, 110-81.

The embodiment of affidavits in a bill of exceptions does not make them competent evidence of a fact which should appear by the recitals of the bill of exceptions itself, such as the misconduct of an attorney which occurred, if at all, in the presence or within the knowledge of the court. State v. Burton, 103-28.

When a bill of exceptions is signed and filed it becomes a part of the record. It is not competent for the judge to change or modify it by a contradictory written statement or certificate filed with the papers of the case. State v. Smith, 107-480.

The fact that the statutory directions as to the drawing of jurors were not followed must be shown by bill of exceptions, and not by affidavit, it being presumed that the drawing was in the presence of the court, as required by the statute. Moss v. Appanoose County, 109-671.

As to embodying the shorthand report of the evidence in a skeleton bill, see notes to Code § 3749 in this supplement.

SEC. 3754. Must be on material point.

Where the errors are such that in view of the entire record the supreme court can fairly say that no actual prejudice has resulted to appellant, a reversal should not be ordered. In re Bradley, 117-472.

Where material and competent testimony is ruled out, prejudice will be presumed, in the absence of a showing in the record of something which the court can say serves to cure the error. Lundy v. Lundy, 118-445.

Where, after evidence has been admitted over objection, the witness is allowed, without objection, to give substantially the same evidence as that objected to, and the opposite party enters upon the same field of inquiry, the latter cannot be heard to complain. Hamilton v. Mendota Coal Co, 120-147.

Where evidence, though erroneously admitted, is afterwards by the direction of the court withdrawn from the consideration of the jury, and the complaining party makes no request to have the jury specially instructed to disregard such evidence, the error may be deemed cured where the matter referred to in the evidence has no vital relation to the essential elements of the action. State v. McKnight, 119-79.

And see notes to § 3705.

That errors not prejudicial will not be ground for reversal on appeal, see notes to Code § 4139 in this supplement.

SEC. 3755. New trial—grounds for.I. IN GENERAL.

Discretion: The court interferes with reluctance with the trial court when a new trial is granted. Much latitude is allowed for the exercise of discretion, but it is a legal discretion that should control, and where the precise ground on which the court based its action appears, the supreme court has no hesitation in determining whether such discretion has been abused. Turley v. Griffin, 106-161, Snyder v. Thompson, 112 N. W. 239.

The supreme court does not hesitate to review an order granting a new trial where the record discloses the situation as fully in all respects as it was presented to the trial court. Busse v. Schaeffer, 128-319.

The action of a trial court in granting or refusing a new trial is largely one of discretion, and in the absence of an abuse of discretion the supreme court will not interfere. Van Wagenen v. Parsons, 106-263.

Where a motion for a new trial presents several grounds but it does not appear on what one or more of these grounds the granting of a new trial is based, it must appear, in order to warrant interference on appeal that there was an unjust exercise of discretion as to all of the grounds. Ibid.

A large discretion is vested in the trial court in granting a new trial, and the supreme court is slow to reverse where a new trial is granted. Mally v. Mally, 114-309.

A motion for new trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the court, and the sustaining of such motion will not be interfered with on appeal except in case of abuse of discretion. Marr v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 121-117; Hunter v. Porter, 124-351; Chambers v. Hass, 125-484; Armstrong v. Stewart, 130-162.

Trial courts are necessarily vested with a large discretion in the matter of granting new trials, and the supreme court is more reluctant in interfering when a new trial is granted, than when it is denied. Werthman v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 128-135.

The supreme court interferes reluctantly with the action of the lower court in rulings on motions for a new trial, and especially where a new trial has been granted, but the trial judge may not substitute his judgment of the credibility of the witness in place of the judgment which the jury has exercised. Tathwell v. Cedar Rapids, 122-50.

Motion: In order to obtain a new trial the aggrieved party must apply therefor. A new trial will not be granted to him under a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Hooker v. Chittenden, 106-321.

The purpose of a motion for a new trial is to bring before the court errors which without it would not be called to its attention, and the filing of a motion of this kind on certain grounds stated does not waive errors with reference to other matters to which the court's attention has been previously directed and as to which exceptions have been saved. Stewart v. Equitable Mut. L. Assn., 110-528.

Effect: A new trial as authorized by this section involves a re-examination of the issue of fact or some part or portion thereof, and differs from an examination of all the issues involved in the action. Therefore the ruling on such an application does not bar a subsequent application for a new trial within a year after judgment in an action for the recovery of real property as authorized by Code § 4205. Bevering v. Smith, 121-607.

Several grounds: Where a motion for new trial, based on several grounds, is sustained generally, the party complaining on appeal must show that none of the grounds were good in order to justify a reversal. Hydinger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 126-222.

Matters not of record: In determining a motion for new trial the judge is not justified in taking into account matters which have come to his knowledge outside of the record; but it will not be presumed that the court has considered any matters which cannot be properly considered. Miller v. Miller, 123-165.

Change of theory: A party is not entitled to a new trial on another and materially different theory from that on which the case was presented. Thyssen v. Davenport Ice & Cold Storage Co., 112 N. W. 177.

Counter-claim: A new trial of the issues raised in a counter-claim alone may sometimes be granted. Schmidt v. Posner, 130-347.

Waiver: Where motion for judgment on the special findings is sustained, a motion for new trial is thereby waived, but if both the motion for judgment and for motion for new trial are overruled, the unsuccessful party may appeal as to each of such rulings. Schulte v. Chicago M. & St. P. R. Co. 124-191.

In contempt proceedings: The statutory provisions as to new trial in civil cases are sufficiently comprehensive to include new trial in contempt proceedings and are applicable to them. State v. Stevenson, 104-50.

II. GROUNDS.

(a.) Misconduct of court or jury.

Misconduct of judge: A trial court should not as a rule interfere with the examination of witnesses when the examination is being fairly conducted, except to rule upon objections and motions, but it is not required to remain silent when unwilling witnesses persist in such a course as will conceal the truth and make the trial a travesty on justice. State v. Spiers, 103-711.

It is not improper to say to a jury, especially where a case is on trial for the third time after two disagreements, that it is very important that a verdict should be arrived at, and send them out for further consideration, although they have already been out for quite a long time, and to ask them to make an earnest effort to arrive at a verdict. State v. Olds, 106-110.

Remarks made by the court in ruling on objections interposed by a party, held not to be objectionable as prejudicing the case of such party. Crowell v. McGoon, 106-266.

Remarks of the court in the presence and hearing of the jury relating to the sufficiency of the evidence may be ground for a new trial. In re Will of Knox; Paxton v. Knox, 123-24.

Absence from court room: In the absence of affirmative showing of want of prejudice the absence of the judge from the court room beyond the hearing of the proceedings during the arguments of counsel is error sufficient to warrant reversal. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

Absence of the judge from the court room during the arguments to the jury will not be a ground for a new trial where it appears that no prejudice resulted. Allen v. Ames & College R. Co., 106-602.

By consent in advance, objection to absence of the judge during argument may be waived, even in a criminal case. State v. Hammer, 116-284.

In civil cases absence of the judge from the court room during the argument to the jury will be presumed to have been with consent of the parties, and where this is the case, his absence is not alone ground for reversal. Gorham v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., 118-749.

Misconduct of jury does not require the granting of a new trial unless it may be said to have influenced the result. A large discretion in passing upon such question is necessarily lodged in the trial court. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

Quotient verdict: Where the jurors after determining to render a verdict for plaintiff, and while considering the amount of the verdict, set down each the amount he was willing to allow, and these amounts were added up and the aggregate divided by twelve, which the jurors did not then agree to adopt but proceeded further to consider, and then subsequently agreed on as the proper amount, held that this conduct was not such as to vitiate the verdict. Owen v. Christensen, 106-394.

Where the jury returns a verdict, even though at the time the amount of the verdict is arrived at there is no express agreement to be bound by the result reached, if there is a fair inference from all that is said, that there was a tacit understanding among the jurors that they would abide the result, this is sufficient to avoid the verdict. Nor is it necessary that every member of the jury be a party to the agreement. It is enough to vitiate the verdict if the greater number so agree. A verdict reached by adding together the estimates of the various jurors, and a subsequent assent to it is not alone sufficient to purge it of illegality, although such an illegal verdict may be repudiated and a valid one found as the result of due deliberation. Sylvester v. Casey, 110-256.

Where there is a conflict in the statements of the jurors as to whether there was any previous agreement to be bound by the result reached, by adding together the amounts voted for, the supreme court will not interfere with the holding of the trial court as to the legality of the verdict. Hoover v. Mapleton, 110-571.

In the absence of an agreement that the jurors shall be bound to the amount of verdict determined by adding together the estimates of the individual jurors and dividing the total by twelve, such a proceeding does not vitiate the verdict. McElhone v. Wilkinson, 121-429.

Drinking intoxicating liquors: Under some circumstances the taking of intoxicating liquors by jurors from a witness might be such misconduct as to necessitate a new trial, but the mere indulgence in this social custom without anything more will not warrant the inference of wrong doing. State v. Minor, 106-642.

Where, during the progress of a trial, but before final submission of the case, a juror indulges in the use of intoxicating liquors, the verdict should not be disturbed unless prejudice is shown, and the fact alone that liquor was taken is not enough to vitiate the verdict. On the other hand, the rule is established that prejudice will be presumed if the liquor has been drunk after the jury had retired to consider the case. If the liquor is taken after the jury has reached a conclusion, and put the verdict in form the verdict will not thereby be affected. State v. Reilly, 108-735.

The fact that a juror has drunk intoxicating liquor in moderate quantity when not on duty is not a ground for a new trial. State v. Smith, 132-645.

The admission of a juror that while he was serving as a member of the jury he took a dose of quinine and whiskey for a severe cold will not alone justify the setting aside of the verdict. Gorham v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., 118-749.

Improper statements and conversations: Remarks made by a juror derogatory to a witness but sustained by evidence in the case, do not constitute misconduct of a juror. State v. Copeland, 106-102.

Improper statements made by some jurors to others while they are deliberating will not authorize a new trial unless it appears that prejudice resulted from the statements or that they were of a character to cause prejudice and the presumption of prejudice has not been overcome. State v. Olds, 106-110.

The action of a juror during the progress of the trial in indicating his conviction at the time as to what his final conclusion will be, does not necessarily require the setting aside of the verdict. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

Statements by a juror to his fellows while in the jury room as to facts within his personal knowledge relating to the subject-matter of the suit will constitute prejudicial error, requiring a new trial. Wilberding v. Dubuque, 111-484.

A new trial should be granted where it appears that jurors while deliberating upon the case stated their personal knowledge of facts relevant to the issues, and that outsiders discussed the case in the presence of the jurors in such manner as to create prejudice. Hydinger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 126-222.

The mere fact that a juror during a recess of the court was present at a conversation between outsiders relating to the merits of the case will not require the setting aside of the verdict, no prejudice appearing, and no impropriety of conduct on the part of the juror being shown. Montgomery v. Hanson, 122-222.

Affidavits of jurors tending to show that in their deliberations members of the jury stated facts heard outside of court which were discussed while the verdict was being considered, held not sufficient ground for setting aside the verdict, it not appearing that the result was influenced by such discussion. Ibid.

If extrinsic or irrelevant matter is introduced into the deliberations of the jury, in such a manner as to raise any reasonable question whether it did not influence the verdict, the court may properly set it aside; but a casual remark or statement made by a juror to his associates derogatory to one of the contesting parties ought not to be so regarded in the absence of any showing that heed was given to such statement or that the verdict was influenced thereby. Ayrhart v. Wilhelmy, 112 N. W. 782.

While due regard for the propriety of conduct dictates that the jurors and parties should avoid familiar intercourse pending the trial and disposition of the case, yet casual and public intercourse does not necessarily indicate such misconduct as to require the setting aside of the verdict. Ibid.

Disqualification of juror: To take advantage of the disqualification of a juror after verdict, it is incumbent on the party complaining to show affirmatively that neither he nor his counsel had knowledge thereof before the juror was sworn. State v. Bussamus, 108-11; State v. Moats, 108-13.

Taking improper papers: It is error for the jury to have a map brought before them which has not been introduced in evidence and use it in construing the evidence. De Wulf v. Dix, 110-553.

Unauthorized view of premises: The fact that a juror during an intermission of the trial observes the premises with relation to the condition of which there is a controversy, does not necessarily constitute misconduct. Caldwell v. Nashua, 122-179.

The action of members of the jury in going on their own motion to view premises to which the testimony relates will not necessarily constitute such misconduct as to require a new trial. So held where it appeared that no reference to the results of the jurors' observations were made in the jury room, and each testified that what he saw had nothing to do with his verdict. State v. Crouch, 130-478.

How misconduct shown: It is not competent to show by affidavits what transpires by way of misconduct of the jury in the presence of the court or judge unless the judge refuses to certify to the facts as they are claimed to be by the party desiring the certificate. State v. Olds, 106-110.

Affidavits of jurors are admissible to show a statement by one of the jurors to another of a fact not shown in evidence calculated to exercise some influence on the result. Douglass v. Agne, 125-67.

The statute provides that the showing in support of a motion for a new trial based on the misconduct of the jurors shall be by affidavits. Harrison v. Ayrshire 123-528.

(b.) Misconduct of opposite party or attorney.

Misconduct of counsel: Remarks of counsel made as of his own knowledge in connection with the testimony of a witness may constitute misconduct. Goldthorp v. Goldthorp, 106-722.

Counsel are not to be closely limited in their opening statements and misconception on their part as to the competency of evidence should not be ground for a new trial, unless so gross or made under such circumstances as that prejudice may be inferred. State v. Todd, 110-631.

The question of granting a new trial on account of misconduct of counsel is left very largely to the good sense of the trial court, and the supreme court will not interfere on appeal unless it appears likely that a different result would have been reached but for such misconduct. Hannestad v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 132-232.

Misconduct of counsel may be such as to require the granting of a new trial on appeal. See v. Wabash R. Co., 123-443.

The setting aside of a verdict on account of counsel in the trial is left largely to the discretion of the trial court. Wissler v. Atlantic, 123-11.

It is not misconduct on the part of counsel to offer testimony which he believes to be admissible, and to preserve a record of such offer, and the exception thereto. If the offer is made in good faith, it does not constitute misconduct such as to authorize a new trial, although the evidence thus offered is not admissible. Hammer v. Janowitz, 131-20.

It does not constitute misconduct for counsel in opening the case to state an intention to prove matters as to which evidence is subsequently rejected when offered, such statement not being unreasonable in itself, and made in good faith. But counsel should not in the argument to the jury, after the evidence has been introduced, comment upon objections made to the introduction of evidence which have not been sustained by the court, on the theory that such objections amounted to a practical admission that the facts as to which the evidence was excluded were true and would have been proven had the objection not been made. Potter v. Cave, 123-98.

In argument: The supreme court will not interfere with the discretion of the trial court in refusing to grant a new trial on account of alleged misconduct of counsel in argument, unless it is made to affirmatively appear that such discretion has been abused to the prejudice of the appellant. In re Will of Wharton, 132-714.

Error of counsel in stating a proposition of law to the jury to which attention is not called at the time cannot be taken advantage of on a motion for a new trial. Bray v. Bray, 128-234.

When counsel are guilty of misconduct in arguing a case to the jury, whether in the presence of the judge or in his absence, there ought to be at least an attempt made to correct the error at the time, and when this is not done, the supreme court will not, in a civil case, disturb the ruling of the trial court on the motion for new trial based on such misconduct, unless prejudice clearly appears. Gorham v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., 118-749.

An objection on account of misconduct of counsel in addressing the jury is addressed primarily to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and his ruling will not be interfered with on appeal in the absence of a showing of the abuse of such discretion. Brusseau v. Lower Brick Co., 133-245.

It is not to be presumed that the jury has been influenced by statements of the counsel which the court has directed not to be considered, and where the misconduct of counsel is not flagrant, the direction of the court is sufficient to negative the inference of prejudice. State v. Donovan, 125-239.

Persistence on the part of counsel in referring to matters not proper for the consideration of the jury after being warned by the court to desist, is sufficient ground for granting a new trial. Belcher v. Ballou, 124-507.

Where counsel is promptly stopped by the court in pursuing an improper line of argument, and it does not appear that he acted wilfully or in disregard of the admonition of the court in that respect, there is no occasion for granting a new trial on that ground. Bettis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 131-46.

Statements of the county attorney in a criminal prosecution that defendant was not only charged with crime, but was guilty of it and that there were witnesses

(referring to defendant's wife who was incompetent to testify against him) that he was not at home as claimed at the time the crime was committed, held not to be such as to call for a new trial. State v. Millmeier, 102-692.

Statements of counsel made by way of inference from matters appearing of record do not generally constitute misconduct requiring a new trial. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

Objections on account of misconduct of counsel in argument should be made at the time and not withheld until the conclusion of the argument. Ibid.

Affidavits of jurors are admissible to show that statements of counsel relied upon as constituting misconduct had no influence on the action of the jurors. Ibid.

The judge who hears the case is better able to determine whether misconduct of counsel in argument was prejudicial than the supreme court on appeal. Ibid.

Counsel should omit all appeals to the jury calculated to arouse prejudice against a party on account of his character, wealth, etc. Rietveld v. Wabash R. Co., 129-249.

Reference in argument to the fact that the plaintiff suing for injuries received while working in defendant's mine probably had not a bank account held not error as tending to create sympathy with plaintiff as a poor man against the defendant corporation, it appearing that the argument was not made for that purpose, but for the purpose of explaining why plaintiff, after the injury, returned to his work sooner than he should have done, resulting in an aggravation of his injury. Cook v. Smith-Lowe Co., 109 N. W. 798.

The improper conduct of counsel for plaintiff in an action against a corporation in calling attention to the fact that the defendant is a corporation, operating extensive lines of railway, earning large sums of money, and inferentially, at least, able to pay any amount, however large, that the jury may see fit to award as damages, may constitute such misconduct as to require the granting of a new trial. Sullivan v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 119-464.

It does not always follow that the direction by a court to disregard certain improper matters, to which attention has been called by counsel during the trial, has the effect to cure the error involved therein. Ibid.

An argument though outside the record, if made in response to a similar argument by opposing counsel, does not necessarily require reversal. Goldstein v. Morgan, 122-27.

Objection: While misconduct of counsel may be so flagrant that no action of the court can be presumed to have been sufficient to remove the prejudice and therefore no objection would have been sufficient, yet if the misconduct might have been prevented or the resulting prejudice removed by action of the trial court, there should not be a reversal on account of misconduct unless proper objection appears to have been made and proper relief asked. Gregory v. Wabash R. Co., 126-230.

Alleged misconduct of counsel in argument not made to appear by the bill of exceptions cannot be considered. Kinney v. McFaul, 122-452.

Where no exception to argument of counsel is taken at the time affording the trial court opportunity to obviate the effect of misconduct in such argument, a reversal will not be ordered on appeal unless prejudice clearly appears. Streeter v. Marshalltown, 123-449.

The entry of an objection or exception to argument of counsel not calling upon the court for any ruling is not sufficient to preserve a question as to misconduct of counsel in such argument. Renshaw v. Dignan, 128-722.

Remarks of counsel made in running comment during the trial, as well as those made in argument, may be ground for a new trial if improper and prejudicial, and in such case it is not necessary to show objections made to every question asked or statement made. Welch v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co., 117-394.

How shown: Charges of the misconduct of an attorney as a ground for reversal on appeal will not be considered unless shown by the bill of exceptions where it appears that such misconduct, if it occurred at all, was in the presence or within the knowledge of the court. Such fact cannot be shown by affidavits, even though they are embodied in the bill of exceptions, but must appear from the recitals of the bill of exceptions itself. State v. Watson, 102-651; State v. Burton, 103-28; Frank v. Davenport, 105-588; De Wulf v. Dix, 110-553; State v. Keenan, 111-286.

It may be that when the misconduct is in the absence of the trial judge and therefore not within his knowledge, it may be shown by affidavits, but in such a case counter affidavits also are admissible. Faulk v. Iowa County, 103-442.

A mere exception at the end of an argument is not enough to raise the question whether counsel has in the argument complied with the direction of the court as to the course to be pursued in such argument. Klos v. Zahorik, 113-161.

Prejudice must appear: The action of the trial court in overruling a motion for new trial, based on misconduct of counsel, will be interfered with only where its discretion appears to have been abused. State v. Newhouse, 115-173.

Prejudice cured: Where objection was made to a statement of counsel in the opening of the case as to matters which could not properly be shown in evidence and the objection was sustained, and the jury was instructed not to consider anything except the evidence received on the trial, held that no prejudicial error was shown. Taylor v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co., 110-621.

While it is not proper to base an argument on facts not shown to have existed, error in doing so is cured by prompt action of the court in requiring the withdrawal of such remarks. Mackerall v. Omaha & St. L. R. Co., 111-547.

(c.) Accident or surprise.

When a party is taken by surprise by evidence admitted against him he should apply for a continuance, and not having done so, cannot ask for a new trial on that ground. Patton v. Sanborn, 133-650.

The party who is taken by surprise by the introduction of evidence by his adversary should ask for a continuance, and on failing to do so is not entitled to relief by a motion for new trial as against a verdict. DeMers v. Rohan, 126-488.

Excessive verdict: It is the well established rule in this state that the trial court, when of opinion that a verdict for an excessive amount has been returned, may give the successful party the option to accept judgment for the amount which the court believes to be just or to submit to a new trial. Baxter v. Cedar Rapids, 103-599.

But the fact that the court requires the successful party to elect between such remission and a new trial does not show that the court finds the verdict to have been the result of passion or prejudice. Ibid.

It is error to reduce a verdict and render judgment for the reduced amount in favor of the successful party without giving him an option to accept that amount or submit to a new trial. Barber v. Maden, 126-402.

If the trial court finds the verdict to be excessive, it may order a new trial in case the successful party refuses to accept a reduction fixed by the court, but cannot, without giving the option of a new trial, reduce the amount for which judgment shall be rendered. Stanley v. Core, 119-417.

The defendant cannot complain that the court in reducing the amount of the verdict as against him did not give to the plaintiff the option of accepting a new trial instead of submitting to the reduction of the verdict. Shockley v. Tucker, 127-456.

The fact that a verdict is reduced by the trial court does not indicate that it was the result of passion and prejudice. Knowlton v. Des Moines Edison Light Co., 117-451.

The inadequacy of the verdict as to the damages awarded may be such as to justify the granting of a new trial. The court has a large discretion in determining whether a new trial should be granted on this ground. Ward v. Marshalltown L. P. & R. Co., 132-598.

The court may set aside a verdict when manifestly inconsistent with the evidence in that it is for an inadequate amount of damage, as well as where it is excessive. Tathwell v. Cedar Rapids, 122-50.

The statutory provisions relating to new trial do not necessarily cover the whole ground, nor prevent the exercise by the trial court of the powers in this respect which have generally been exercised under the common law system. Ibid.

The provision that a new trial may be granted if a verdict is not sustained by sufficient evidence justifies the setting aside of a verdict on account of inadequacy of the damages allowed. Ibid.

If the verdict for the plaintiff in an action for personal injuries is compensatory and substantial and the trial court has declined to grant a new trial, the supreme court will not interfere on appeal. Palmer v. Cedar Rapids & Marion City R. Co., 124-424.

Passion and prejudice: Where the amount of plaintiff's recovery is not limited by the instructions, it cannot be said from the size of the verdict alone that it is the result of passion or prejudice. Connors v. Chingren, 111-437.

The mere fact that the verdict is for an amount which the court finds to be excessive does not in itself show such passion and prejudice as to require the entire setting aside of the verdict. Doran v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co., 117-442.

In a particular case held that the verdict was not the result of an intelligent and honest exercise of discretion by the jury, and that it was the result of passion or prejudice, and judgment based thereon was reversed. Eastman v. Miller, 113-404.

(e.) Verdict against the evidence or the law.

Verdict against the evidence: Where the evidence is conflicting, it is the province of the jury to pass upon the conflict and the courts will not interfere with the verdict. Inghram v. National Union, 103-395.

In such case the conflict must be resolved in favor of the party against whom the motion for a new trial is made, and if there is not sufficient evidence to sustain a verdict for that party the motion should be sustained, otherwise it should be overruled. Ibid.

The function of the court with reference to the evidence is not fully and completely discharged when it determines the admissibility of the different items of evidence offered. It may still look into the whole case to see whether these items of evidence together constitute any substantial proof of the facts sought to be established.

Brooks v. Brotherhood of American Yeomen, 115-588.

The jury is to determine the facts and if there is any substantial support in the evidence for its finding, a new trial will not be granted. Johnson v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co., 123-224.

The insufficiency of evidence to support the verdict should be raised by motion for a new trial and if not so raised cannot be urged on appeal. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

The court has the inherent right to set aside a verdict and grant a new trial; but when such action is taken without a motion being made the grounds therefor should be made to appear of record. Hensley v. Davidson Bros. Co., 112 N. W. 227.

A verdict should not be set aside and a new trial granted for insufficiency of the evidence after the supreme court has held on appeal that substantially the same evidence submitted on a former trial should have been submitted to the jury for a verdict. Ibid.

The finding of the trial court that a new trial should be granted because the verdict does not correspond to the evidence and conform to the instructions, may be sustained, although the evidence was properly submitted to the jury. Werthman v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 128-135.

Discretion of court: Considerable discretion is vested in the lower court in passing upon an application for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence; and the supreme court will not interfere with the exercise of that discretion unless it appears to have been abused. Trimble v. Tantlinger, 104-665.

While the granting of new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is a matter resting in the discretion of the trial court, yet this is a legal discretion and for an abuse thereof, the action of the court in refusing a new trial may be reversed. State v. Lowell, 123-427.

The granting of a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is largely discretionary with the trial court, and its ruling granting such new trial and holding the showing of diligence to be sufficient, will be upheld on appeal unless an abuse of discretion is shown. Woerdhoff v. Muekel, 131-300.

Where the newly discovered evidence, as shown by the affidavit, might or might not be of controlling weight as affecting the result, the action of the lower court in granting a new trial on that ground will not be interfered with. Bullard v. Bullard, 112-423.

Must be material: Newly discovered evidence which, had it been introduced could not have affected the result, is not ground for a new trial. Buchholtz v. Radcliffe, 129-27.

Where it does not appear that the newly discovered evidence would bear on the issue in the case as tried, it will not be error to refuse to grant a new trial on account of such newly discovered evidence. Carlson v. Hall, 124-121.

Cumulative evidence: A new trial will not be granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence which is merely cumulative. Dunbauld v. Thompson, 109-199; Hemmer v. Burger, 127-614; Renshaw v. Dignan, 128-722; Hanousek v. Marshalltown, 130-550.

Evidence tending merely to strengthen the proof as to any one or more particular facts will be cumulative, but evidence of some other fact, as to which there is no proof, but which would aid to the same general conclusion indicated by evidence which is introduced, will not be deemed cumulative. Bullard v. Bullard, 112-433.

While the trial court may be sustained in granting a new trial upon newly discovered testimony which is cumulative in character, yet it has a large discretion in such cases and ordinarily its action will not be interfered with on appeal. Clark v. Van Vleck, 112 N. W. 648.

Diligence: Lack of diligence to procure the newly discovered evidence for use on the trial will be a proper ground for refusing to entertain a motion for a new trial based on such newly discovered evidence. Baxter v. Cedar Rapids, 103-599; Renshaw v. Dignan, 128-722.

A new trial should not be granted for newly discovered evidence which might have been discovered by inquiry before the close of the trial. Benjamin v. Flitton, 106-417.

Where there is nothing to put the party on inquiry as to the evidence on which he subsequently asks for a new trial, he is not to be deemed negligent in not having discovered such evidence in time to introduce it on the trial. Bullard v. Bullard, 112-423.

Facts which a corporation should have known by reason of information in the possession of its officers cannot be made the ground of an application for new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence. A new trial should not be granted when the party seeking such relief has been negligent in acquiring the information on which the relief is asked. Robins v. Modern Woodmen, 127-444.

Under the circumstances of a particular case held that there was not such want of diligence in discovering the new evidence as to prevent the granting of a new trial on that ground. National Horse Importing Co. v. Novak, 105-157.

Witness in fact used: The case must be a very strong one which will justify a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence where the witness was in fact used upon the trial of the case.

Marengo Savings Bank v. Kent, 112 N. W. 767.

Showing sufficient: In a particular case held that the showing as to newly discovered evidence was sufficient. Mally v. Mally, 114-309.

Newly discovered evidence relied on in a particular case as the ground for a new trial held to be sufficient though to some extent cumulative, being also such as counsel in the exercise of reasonable diligence had not discovered. Schnee v. Dubuque, 122-459.

The showing in a particular case of newly discovered evidence held sufficient to authorize a new trial, although some of the new evidence would have been cumulative in character. Sullivan v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 119-464.

When available: Application for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence may be made at any time either at or after the term at which the verdict sought to be set aside was rendered and until the expiration of one year from the entry of judgment on such verdict. (See Code § 4092.) Hunter v. Porter, 124-351.

The giving of an erroneous instruction not duly excepted to will not, it seems, be proper grounds for granting a new trial. Turley v. Griffin, 106-161.

(g.) Error of law.

Where the court erroneously allowed the transcript of the evidence on a former trial to be introduced in evidence, and subsequently directed the jury not to consider such evidence, and allowed the party to introduce the witnesses, held, in the absence of some special showing of prejudice, the error in the admission of the transcript was cured. When an error occurs, and soon after is corrected by the action of the court, the proper administration of justice does not require, unless it may be in extreme cases, that the court shall grant a new trial because of the error. Bell v. Clarion, 120-332.

SEC. 3756. Application—affidavits.

By motion: A motion for a new trial may be ruled on after the entry of judgment, if the motion is made in time, and the fact of the entry of judgment is no indication that a motion for a new trial has been disposed of. In re Estate of Bishop, 130-250.

An amendment to a motion for a new trial may be presumed to have been considered by the court in ruling on the motion, although not made until after the original motion was submitted. Hawk v. Mulhall, 133-695.

When filed: In computing the three days within which the motion is to be filed, Sunday or Decoration day, or other day on which judicial business is not required to be transacted, is not to be excluded. German Sav. Bank v. Cady, 114-228.

Matters inherent in verdict: Affidavits of jurors cannot be considered as to matters which inhere in the verdict. Noble v. White, 103-352.

The affidavits of jurors showing the arguments or reasons which were urged among themselves tending to increase the amount of the recovery are not admissible; such matters inhere in the verdict. Baxter v. Cedar Rapids, 103-599.

Affidavits of jurors are not admissible to show what their understanding was of the instructions. Christ v. Webster City, 105-119.

The question as to what the jury considered in making an allowance of damages for personal injuries inheres in the verdict itself, and affidavits of jurors are not competent to show that the jury violated the directions of the court and disregarded the evidence by taking into account items that should not have been considered. Clark v. Van Vleck, 112 N. W. 648.

Affidavits of jurors to show that they did not consider and give weight to evidence not properly before them for consideration are admissible. Brown Land Co. v. Lehman, 112 N. W. 185.

Affidavits of jurors in support of the verdict are competent. Davis v. Huber Mfg. Co., 119-56.

Misconduct: Where the court refuses to sign a bill of exceptions reciting the misconduct complained of as a ground for new trial and the alleged facts are set out in a bystanders' bill of exceptions, which is controverted by affidavits, the presumption will be entertained on appeal that the court's finding against granting a new trial is correct. State v. Steen, 125-307.

As to affidavits as showing misconduct of jury or counsel, see notes to preceding section.

SEC. 3757. Judgment notwithstanding verdict.

Under a motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, grounds cannot be considered which should properly be presented in a motion for a new trial, nor can such a motion be treated as a motion for a new trial. Hooker v. Chittenden, 106-321.

Where a petition shows on its face that there is no cause of action, the objection may be taken by the defendant after a verdict against him by motion as here provided. Ary v. Chesmore, 113-63.

Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict does not waive the right to complain of errors on appeal. Cullison v. Lindsay, 108-124.

The sustaining of a motion for judgment

SEC. 3758. Arrest of judgment.

Although a demurrer to a petition to recover damages for personal injuries based on the failure of plaintiff to allege freedom from contributory negligence is overruled, nevertheless the same objection may be made by motion in arrest of judgment. If plaintiff does not cure the defect

SEC. 3759. Filing of motion.

The provision that a filing of either a motion for new trial or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in arrest of judgment shall not be a waiver of the right to file either or both of the others does not apply to a motion for judgment

SEC. 3760. Amendment to cure defect.

After motion in arrest of judgment for defect in the pleading, the opposite party may amend by alleging the omitted fact, and such fact will be deemed to be true unless controverted. So held as to the allegation of freedom from contributory negligence in an action to recover for personal injuries. Beard v. Guild, 107-476; Decatur v. Simpson, 115-348.

The arrest of judgment on motion of the unsuccessful party is a waiver of motion for new trial. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

SEC. 3764. Dismissal of action.

After the announcement of the court's conclusion on a motion to direct a verdict, the plaintiff may dismiss his action. Oppenheimer v. Elmore, 109-196.

After the direction of a verdict it is too late to dismiss the action. Duffie v. Glucose Sugar Refining Co., 141 Fed. 206.

Plaintiff cannot dismiss after the case has been submitted to the court for decision. Carney v. Reed, 117-508.

After submission of the case plaintiff is not entitled to a dismissal on his own motion, and a dismissal thus improperly entered may be subsequently set aside by the court and the case reinstated. Costello v. Costello, 112-578.

Dismissal of an action being shown it will be presumed to have been without prejudice, unless the contrary appears. Citizens' Bank v. Whinery, 110-390.

On failure of plaintiff to appear, the cause should be dismissed without prejudice unless there is a counterclaim on which judgment may be rendered against the plaintiff in favor of the defendant. Stewart v. Gorham, 122-669.

Where the dismissal of an action is by the court, without the consent of the plain-notwithstanding the verdict is a waiver of a motion for new trial. Schulte v. Chicago M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

as provided in Code § 3760 the motion on that ground may be properly sustained. Decatur v. Simpson, 115-348.

A motion in arrest of judgment is allowable when the pleadings of the prevailing party wholly fail to state a cause of action or defense. Lacey v. Davis, 126-675.

on special findings and the party who has relied upon such motion for judgment and succeeds in having the general verdict set aside thereby waives the motion for a new trial. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

Where plaintiff suing a telegraph company for negligence in delivering a message fails to allege the notice required by Code § 2164 and does not offer to supply such allegation by amendment, judgment for the plaintiff should be arrested on motion, although the court has erroneously and against the objection of the defendant received in evidence written notice of such claim. Heald v. Western Union Tel. Co., 129-326.

tiff, it is a determination of the action adversely to the plaintiff, and no subsequent action on the same cause can be maintained. If the dismissal is voluntary, then the plaintiff may maintain another action, but if the statute of limitations has already run against such action, he must not only bring it within six months after the dismissal of the first action, but must allege and prove that such dismissal was not the result of negligence on his part. See Code § 3455. Ceprely v. Paton, 120-559.

Dismissal of an action voluntarily by the plaintiff because of want of means to prosecute it and in the absence of material witnesses will not be ground for refusing plaintiff the right to proceed in a second action until the payment of the costs of the first. Camp v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 124-238.

An intervenor may by dismissing his petition of intervention withdraw from the case so as not to be bound by subsequent proceedings. Guinn v. Iowa & St. L. R. Co., 125-301.

After dismissal as to certain defendants in a proceeding to establish a lost corner, held that the judgment was not effectual as to the parties thus dismissed from the proceeding. Dittmer v. Mierendorf, 129-643.

Where an action is dismissed as to one of the parties a judgment subsequently rendered does not constitute an estoppel as to such party. Atlee v. Bullard, 123-274.

SEC. 3766. Counter-claim tried.

When dismissal of the case is properly announced and brought to the court's knowledge, the case is in fact dismissed, although the court may proceed further before entering the fact of dismissal on the record. Bardes v. Hutchison, 113-610.

When the action is dismissed by plaintiff, defendant is not entitled to have the court proceed further, unless his answer presents a proper counterclaim. Ibid.

The provision as to the trial of a counterclaim notwithstanding the dismissal of the original action has no application to the dismissal by plaintiff of one count of the petition. Houtz v. Sioux City Brass Co., 110 N. W. 166.

To justify a judgment in favor of the defendant against the plaintiff, on failure of the plaintiff to appear, there must be such counterclaim or cross bill by the defendant against the plaintiff as to show in itself the essential elements of a cause of action. If the allegations in behalf of the defendant are defensive in character judgment should be rendered against the plaintiff on the merits. Stewart v. Gorham, 122-669.

On the dismissal of an action to set aside the probate of a will, the court has no jurisdiction to proceed to the hearing of a counterclaim on which it is asked that the will be confirmed. Davis v. Preston, 129-670.

SEC. 3769. Judgment—final adjudication.

Jurisdiction: A defendant served with notice outside the state, and not appearing in the action, is not bound by the adjudication. Smith v. Moore, 112-60.

Confusion or mistake in the name by which the defendant is designated will not necessarily be fatal to the judgment in case of actual service, but such defect will prevent constructive or substituted service being sufficient to confer jurisdiction. Thornily v. Prentice, 121-89.

What constitutes: Technically speaking a judgment is the decision or sentence of the court, pronounced by the court in the action or on the question before it, and may consist of a written announcement of the decision of the court, filed with the clerk, although not yet formally entered on the record. So held in a proceeding to punish for contempt in violating a temporary injunction which had been dissolved by a written decision of the court, filed with the clerk. Coffey v. Gamble, 117-545.

A judgment cannot be deemed as rendered so as to become a lien or support an execution until it is entered of record. The mere signature of a judgment form, and the indorsement and filing thereof by the clerk is not a judgment. Callanan v. Votruba, 104-672.

The oral announcement by the judge of his conclusion does not constitute a judgment. A judgment cannot be said to be entered until it is spread by the clerk upon the record book. A memorandum thereof made by the judge is for the information and guidance of the clerk, but until such entry is made there is nothing from which an appeal will lie. Kennedy v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 119-123.

Final: A judgment determining the amount due may be final, although a subsequent order as to the application of funds in the hands of a receiver may be necessary. Applegate v. Applegate, 107-312.

The fact that in an action for the foreclosure of a lien, the court has rendered an interlocutory decree for the specific enforcement of such lien does not preclude a subsequent final decree for a money judgment. American Trading & Storage Co. v. Gottstein, 123-267.

Presumption: Every presumption must be indulged in favor of the correctness of a judgment. State v. Gifford, 111-648.

As evidence: While the pleadings in a case are part of the record, a duly authenticated copy of the judgment is a specific item of evidence, admissible in itself without regard to the record in the case. Alexander v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 119-519.

The costs are not a part of the judgment and may be retaxed on motion without proceedings to set aside, vacate or modify the judgment. Fisher v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 104-588.

Former adjudication: Where a former adjudication is relied upon, it must appear either by the record or by extrinsic evidence that the particular matter in controversy was necessarily tried and determined in the former action. The burden is with the party relying upon a former adjudication to make it appear that the case was thus determined. Griffith v. Fields, 105-362.

Where in an action on a promissory note brought by a holder thereof, the maker sought to interpose as a defense damages for breach of contract in the transaction in which the note was given, and claimed that the holder was not an innocent purchaser, held, that in a subsequent action by the maker of the note against the original payee for damages for breach of the contract the prior judgment in favor of the holder of the note would not constitute an adjudication unless it was shown by parol evidence that the case was decided on account of the defense to the note and not on account of the holder having been found to be an innocent purchaser. Ibid.

A party cannot relitigate in a second action matters which were incident to or involved in or might have been litigated in a former action. Prouty v. Matheson, 107-259.

Parties cannot engage in relitigation of matters which were, or might have been determined in a former action. Murphy v. Cuddihy, 111-645.

A judgment cannot be deemed an adjudication of the question which the court expressly does not determine, although it might have been determined. Owen v. Higgins, 113-735.

To be available as a former adjudication the judgment in the former suit must be for the same cause of action and between the same parties or their privies, and the former judgment must be on the merits of the case, rendered by a court having jurisdiction. In re Dille, 119-575.

Judgments in personam conclude only the immediate parties and their privies, and to be effective the bar must be mutual. Brown v. Lambe, 119-404.

A judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction is binding between the parties to a particular action litigated regarding the subject thereof, and on their privies, as to questions actually decided. Therefore held that a judgment on an appeal from a board of review that certain land contracts were not assessable for a particular year was res adjudicata as to the right to assess the same contracts for a subsequent year. Defries v. McMeans, 121-540.

A judgment is conclusive between the parties in a subsequent action either as a plea in bar or evidence in estoppel not only as to every question actually in issue and decided, but every question within the issues which might have been presented and decided. And it is likewise binding on privies of such parties. But in general the relation of surety and principal does not create privity in the sense in which the law of estoppel is applied. Beh v. Bay, 127-246.

The judgment against a plaintiff who has stood on his petition and refused to amend after ruling against him on demurrer is a final adjudication. Gregory v. Woodworth, 107-151.

The general rule, subject to some exceptions, is that a judgment is conclusive, not only as to all matters actually in issue, but as to those which might or should have been alleged in the pleadings. Fulliam v. Drake, 105-615.

Any defense which might have been set up in a previous action will be deemed adjudicated by the judgment thereon. Talbot v. First National Bank, 106-361.

One of the recognized tests in determining whether the plea of another action pending is good, lies in ascertaining whether the judgment, when obtained, would necessarily be res adjudicata of the issues of the action wherein the plea is interposed. Valley Bank v. Shenandoah Nat. Bank, 109-43.

Where the very right to recover is based on precisely the same ground in both actions, the judgment in the one will be conclusive in the other. It is not essential that the causes of action be the same, but the right or title on which they rest must be identical. Watson v. Richardson, 110-698.

The provisions of Code § 4128 with reference to supersedeas bond indicate an intention to preserve to the prevailing litigant the fruits of his judgment, even though an appeal has been taken, and a judgment pending on appeal to the supreme court may be relied on as a prior adjudication in another case involving the same right or title. Ibid.

When a person is responsible over to another, either by operation of law or by express contract, and he is duly notified of the pendency of a suit and requested to take upon himself the defense of it, he is no longer regarded as a stranger, because he has the right to appear and defend the action, and has the same means and advantages of controverting the claim as if he was a real and nominal party upon the record. In every such case, if due notice is given to such person, the judgment, if obtained without fraud or collusion, will be conclusive against him whether he has appeared or not as to every fact established by it. But, in general, judgment cannot be entered against a person so notified. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. City Nat. Bank, 111-211.

An adjudication as between a city or town and a property owner as to the existence of a street adjoining the premises of the latter, is not binding upon another property owner not made party to the action. Long v. Wilson, 119-267.

An adjudication in an action to recover against a bank the proceeds of certain notes and securities, does not bar a subsequent action against the bank by the plaintiff who has failed in the other action, for the embezzlement of such notes and securities by the cashier. Lemon v. Sigourney Savings Bank, 131-79.

A determination in a federal court as to the validity of interest coupons on county bonds as against the defense that the bonds were issued in excess of the constitutional limitation of indebtedness is binding in an action on the bonds themselves and their coupons in the state court. Reynolds v. Lyon County, 121-733.

Dismissal: Voluntary dismissal of an action does not constitute an adjudication. Brown v. Holden, 120-191.

Where, after removal of a case from a state to the federal court at the instance of defendant plaintiff dismisses his action without prejudice, he is not thereby barred from again prosecuting an action for the same cause in a state court. Foley v. Cudahy Packing Co., 119-246.

Where a suit in equity is dismissed on its merits, such dismissal constitutes a bar to a subsequent suit presenting the same question. Madison v. Garfield Coal Co., 114-56.

SEC. 3771. In abatement.

Where it does not clearly appear that the judgment was on matter in abatement only, the presumption is that it was on the merits and conclusive on a subsequent suit on the same cause of action. Reeves v. Lamm, 112 N. W. 642.

SEC. 3773. Several judgment.

If plaintiff maintains his action against one of several defendants he may have judgment against that one, and the other defendants may have judgment against plaintiff for costs. This rule is alike applicable to actions ex contractu and ex delictu. Lull v. Anamosa Nat. Bank, 110-537.

SEC. 3775. What relief granted.

Where there is an answer the court may grant plaintiff any relief consistent with the case made by the petition and embraced within the issue. Stubblefield v.

Gadd, 112-681; Hogueland v. Arts, 113-634.

The judgment must follow the prayer for relief and cannot be extended beyond it. Browne v. Kiel, 117-316.

SEC. 3777. Judgment on verdict.

So far as motion for a new trial under Code § 3755 is concerned, it is immaterial whether judgment be entered forthwith upon the return of the verdict or be suspended until the determination of the motion. Bevering v. Smith, 121-607.

SEC. 3778. Where verdict is special.

When a court is called upon to rule on a motion for judgment on special verdict it should consider what the law is, and is not bound by instructions previously given. Connell v. Keokuk Elec. R. & P. Co., 131-622.

SEC. 3781. Judgment by agreement.

To make a judgment by consent or agreement, the fact must appear of record. Cooper v. Disbrow, 106-550.

SEC. 3783. Court acting as jury.

The decision of the court on a question of fact in a law case tried without a jury is entitled to the same presumptions as the verdict of a jury. Brown v. Curtis, 111-542.

Where a law case is tried to the court without a jury its finding has the force and effect of a verdict, and will not be interfered with unless it be the result of passion or prejudice, or so clearly against the evidence as to justify the conclusion that it was not the result of a honest and fair discretion. Roe v. McCaughan, 113-274.

SEC. 3784. Judgments and orders entered.

The record book, and not the judgment docket, is the evidence of the judgment, and it, or a certified copy, is alone admissible to show the judgment where no foundation is laid for introducing secondary evidence. Baxter v. Pritchard, 113-422.

Where an order of court is essential to sustain the action of a guardian, such order must be entered on the record of the court. In re Manning's Estate, 111 N. W. 409.

Ordinarily the record is the best and only proof of a judgment. An order of court, to be of any validity, must be entered of record. Bristol Sav. Bank v. Judd, 116-26. See also notes to Code § 288 in this supplement.

SEC. 3786. Discharge of judgment on motion.

An action to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment on the ground that it has been discharged or satisfied, or that the debtor has been discharged in bankruptcy subsequent to the rendition of the judgment, can, under Code § 4364, be maintained only in the county where the judgment was rendered. Brunk v. Moulton Bank, 121-14.

If by reason of matters transpiring subsequent to the entry of a decree, the party entitled to relief under the decree has been partially or fully satisfied, that fact may be brought to the attention of the court and determined in a proceeding relating to the enforcement of the decree. The power of the court to entertain such a proceeding is not taken away by the fact that the decree has been appealed from, and on appeal affirmed without a new decree in the supreme court or an order for remand. Dunton v. McCook, 120-444.

SEC. 3788. Default—when made and entered.

A judgment by default is conclusive as against collateral attack, even though the petition is vulnerable to demurrer. Miller Brewing Co. v. Capital Ins. Co., 111-590.

A party may be concluded by judgment on default, even though the facts stated in the petition do not constitute a good cause of action at law, or the petition is so defective as to be vulnerable to a demurrer. Nor will the fact that the judgment is excessive in amount be available to a defendant in default. Warthen v. Himstreet, 112-605.

It is not proper to render judgment on sustaining a motion striking an amended petition from the files without giving plaintiff the statutory time for amending. Williams v. Williams, 115-520.

At any time before application for judgment on default for failure to amend or plead over a party in default may amend or plead so as to entitle himself to be heard. Redhead v. Iowa Nat. Bank, 123-336.

SEC. 3790. Setting aside default—terms.

Where no jurisdiction: Where a court has no jurisdiction to enter a default by reason of a misunderstanding as to appearance set aside on motion without pleading forthwith or filing affidavits of merits. Spencer v. Berns, 114-126.

Where the return of substituted service erroneously states the township or town in which the service was made, default entered upon such service should be set aside as rendered without jurisdiction. Bradley Mfg. Co. v. Burrhus, 112 N. W. 765.

An affidavit of merits is required as a condition precedent to the setting aside of a default, only when the defendant was actually in default. Such an affidavit is not necessary where the default was erroneously entered, the court being without jurisdiction. Culbertson v. Salinger, 122-12.

The statutory provisions as to setting aside a default are not applicable where no default whatever should have been granted. First Nat. Bank v. Flynn, 117-493.

Where after default the assignee in bankruptcy of the defendant applied for leave to make defense, held that the default should have been set aside in order to enable him to do so. Ibid.

What grounds: The courts will relieve from accident, mistake and misfortune, not brought about through neglect or inactivity, and if the failure to secure a trial on the merits is not due to such negligence or inactivity, but to a default entered by reason of a misunderstanding as to appearance, such default should be set aside. Barto v. Sioux City Elec. Co., 119-179.

Mutual mistake or misunderstanding is a good ground for setting aside a default. Ibid.

A mere denial of the ownership of a note on which judgment by default has been rendered, such denial being based on want of information, is sufficient to sustain an application for setting aside the default. Tullis v. McClary, 128-493.

While negligence of the defendant or his attorney will not be a ground for setting aside a default rendered, circumstances and conditions may be accepted as sufficient to warrant relief on account of the oversight of the attorney, although he is not wholly blameless with respect thereto; it is for the trial court to judge of the merits of the excuse in such a case and when the action is for a money demand and defend for his client was due to the misplacement of the papers in the case under circumstances to some extent excusing such oversight, held that the action of the trial court in setting aside the default would not be reversed on appeal. Klepfer v. Keokuk, 126-592.

In a proceeding to set aside a default rendered in an action for the recovery of damages for personal injuries against a city, held that an affidavit of the city attorney to the effect that he had made an investigation into the facts and circumstances of the accident complained of and therefrom believed that such accident was not caused by any negligence on the part of the city or its officers, but was due solely to the negligence of the plaintiff, was sufficient statement of a meritorious defense. Klepfer v. Keokuk, 126-592.

Affidavit in a particular case held not sufficient to require the setting aside of a default, as it disclosed merely carelessness and inattention to duty on the part of the party against whom the judgment was rendered. Byrnes v. American Mut. F. Ins. Co., 114-738.

Affidavit of merits in connection with motion to set aside default held sufficient in a particular case. Barto v. Sioux City Elec. Co., 119-179.

The party asking to have default set aside must plead issuably and also present a reasonable excuse for the default. Martin v. Reese, 105-694.

Discretionary: The supreme court on appeal will not interfere with the action of the trial court in refusing to set aside a default except in clear case of abuse of discretion. Martin v. Reese, 105-694; Carver v. SeEVERS, 126-669; Cowell v. City Water Supply Co., 130-671.

A very large discretion is vested in the trial court in the matter of setting aside default, and its action in allowing a trial on the merits will not be interfered with unless in a manifest case of abuse. The trial court may even rest such action upon matters within its own knowledge. Foley v. Leisy Brg. Co., 116-176.

A fair trial on the merits is the object sought in all judicial proceedings, and, in the absence of negligence on the part of him who is in default, is to be encouraged and secured by the court. When the right to such trial is granted an appellate court is loathe to interfere and will do so only in case of abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court. Stitzer v. Fenzloff, 112-491.

To justify interference on appeal with a ruling on motion to set aside default, a much stronger showing of abuse of discretion in the trial court must be made when the default has been set aside, than where it has been denied. Barto v. Sioux City Elec. Co., 119-179.

On condition: One who has complied with the conditions imposed for setting aside a default judgment cannot afterward complain of the conditions thus imposed. Doyle v. Burns, 123-488.

In superior courts: Provisions as to setting aside judgments by default are applicable in superior courts, although a transcript of the default judgment may have been filed in the district court. Klepfer v. Keokuk, 126-592.

SEC. 3791. Clerk to compute amount.

The clerk is only authorized to assess when the action is for a money demand and the amount a mere matter of computation. Stitzer v. Fenzloff, 112-491.

SEC. 3792. Appearance to cross-examine witnesses.

The provision that a party in default may appear and cross-examine witnesses as to assessment of damages does not authorize the party in default to interpose a motion in arrest of judgment. Free v. Western Union Tel. Co., 110 N. W. 143.

SEC. 3794. Setting aside, if on notice by publication.

Where the assignee in insolvency for a foreign corporation appeared in an attachment proceeding against such corporation in this state commenced by publication only, but afterwards failed to make defense, and judgment was rendered against the corporation, held that a receiver of the corporation subsequently appointed could not have default set aside under this section. State Bank v. McElroy, 106-258.

SEC. 3796. New trial after judgment, on publication.

A judgment rendered on service by publication may be set aside and a retrial granted on application of defendant within two years, but such judgment cannot be attacked in an independent action. Co-operative Sav. & L. Assn. v. McIntosh, 105-697.

The judgment on service by publication in a proper case remains valid and binding until set aside in a proper proceeding, and the application to set it aside cannot be removed to the federal courts. Davis v. Harris, 124 Fed. 713.

The final judgment on notice by publication cannot be attacked collaterally on the ground that security for costs was not given as required. English v. Otis, 125-555.

Within the time authorized by this section a defendant served by publication only, may appear and file a motion to set aside the judgment and with it an answer to the petition in the original action. Provident Bank Stock Co. v. Schafer, 110-440.

Under a contract to convey, contemplating the quieting of title in the vendor such as to enable him to make a good abstract of title, it is sufficient that a decree quieting title has been rendered, although the right to a new trial on application of a non-resident served by publication only still exists. Bates v. Williamson, 128-127.

The provisions of this section do not apply where personal service of the notice has been made out of the state on a non-resident defendant. Clark v. Tull, 113-143.

The provision as to new trial on motion of a non-resident defendant served by publication only has no application where the judgment is void for want of jurisdiction. Gaar v. Taylor, 128-636.

Where the defendant in a divorce proceeding served with notice by publication only, appears to ask for a new trial under this provision, he does not thereby confer on the court jurisdiction to enter a valid decree against him unless a new trial is granted. Rea v. Rea, 123-241.

SEC. 3797. Title to property not affected.

Something more is contemplated as within the power of the court on an application for new trial after service by publication than simply an order for the restoration of any money or property remaining in the possession of the adverse party. The court setting aside the prior judgment may also set aside and cancel any title derived under a sheriff's sale in pursuance of such judgment unless it has passed into the hands of a purchaser in good faith. English v. Otis, 125-555.

The mere fact of purchasing the certificate of sale under a judgment rendered on default by publication only does not entitle such purchaser to protection against the setting aside of the judgment in a proceeding for new trial such as is authorized by the statute. Ibid.

SEC. 3800. Personal judgment.

A decree in a divorce proceeding on service by publication will be binding as to the marital status of the parties, but not as to alimony or costs. Rea v. Rea, 123-141.

SEC. 3801. Liens of judgments.

Commencement and continuance: One who seeks to enforce payment of a judgment out of the real estate of one deceased, must do so before the lien of his judgment expires. The filing of a claim against the estate of the deceased will not preserve the right to enforce such judgment against real estate. Hansen's Empire Fur Factory v. Teabout, 104-360.

A judgment is not "rendered" so as to become a lien until it is entered of record. Callanan v. Votruba, 104-672.

Upon what property: Judgments are liens upon equitable titles. Kelliher v. Sutton, 115-632.

A judgment rendered against the holder of an equitable title will not be a lien against the property in such sense as to charge subsequent bona fide purchasers of the legal title without notice. Block & Polak Iron Co. v. Holcomb-Brown Iron Co., 105-624.

While ch. 129 of Acts 17 G. A. (now embodied in this section) requiring the filing of transcripts in the federal courts in counties where the property is situated in order to make such judgments liens on such property was not valid when enacted, nevertheless, when congress in 1888 provided that federal judgments should be liens throughout the state where rendered, in the same manner and to the same extent, and under the same conditions only as if said judgments and decrees had been rendered by a court of general jurisdiction of the state, this statutory provision became effectual. Blair v. Ostrander, 109-204.

A judgment becomes a lien on any present interest of the judgment defendant in real estate owned by him as soon as entered of record. Such lien is not lost by the act of any creditor in taking an assignment of a prior judgment lien, although under such judgment there has been an execution sale, if his act amounts to a redemption from such sale. People's Sav. Bank v. McCarthy, 119-586.

A judgment plaintiff in lawful possession of land on which his judgment is a lien has not the right to apply the rents and profits derived therefrom to the satisfaction of his judgment as against the owner thereof not a judgment defendant. Boggs v. Douglas, 105-344.

A judgment is a lien only on the interest of the judgment defendant. Moore v. Scruggs, 131-692.

A judgment lien holder is not affected by a decree quieting title in a proceeding to which he is not made a party. Jasper County v. Sparham, 125-464.

Where the uncertainty of a contingent remainder involves, solely the question of who shall take the real estate it is not such an interest that a judgment lien attaches thereto or that execution under a judgment can be levied thereon. Taylor v. Taylor, 118-407.

Notice: A judgment rendered against a debtor described therein as "Sheffey" held not to constitute a lien as against the grantee of the same person described in the conveyance as "Cheffey." Boyd v. Boyd, 128-699.

A judgment recorded as against Wm. M. Thornily held not a lien on the property of Willis H. Thornily. Thornily v. Prentice, 121-89.

Failure to docket or index a judgment does not prevent its being a lien as to persons having actual knowledge. State Savings Bank v. Shinn, 130-365.

Redemption: While a judgment ceases to be a lien after the expiration of ten years, nevertheless the judgment creditor may thereafter, within twenty years, cause execution to be levied on the property of the defendant, and thereby acquire a lien thereon which will entitle him to redeem such property from execution sale. Hawk-eye Ins. Co. v. Maxwell, 119-672.

A junior judgment lienholder can recover from execution and sale under a prior judgment only as provided by statute. He has no equitable right to make redemption from such sale. Wood v. Rankin, 119-448.

SEC. 3802. When attach—filing transcript in another county.

To make a judgment from another county a lien, the judgment must be indexed, as here required. State Ins. Co. v. Prestage, 116-466.

Execution on a judgment, a transcript of which has been filed in the office of the clerk of the district court in another county, can only issue from the county where such judgment was originally rendered. Brunk v. Moulton Bank, 121-14.

One who acquires a judgment lien on premises, pending a foreclosure, has only the statutory right of redemption from the foreclosure sale. Cooney v. Coppock, 119-486.

Priority: As between the judgment liens the one which has precedence in order of time should be accorded precedence in right, unless good reason be shown for a different result. Bennett v. First National Bank, 128-1.

Enforcement in equity: The judgment lienholder having an adequate remedy at law by levy and sale on the property under general execution to satisfy his judgment is not entitled to maintain an action in equity to have determined the question whether his judgment is a lien on the property. Kalona Savings Bank v. Eash, 133-190.

Levy and sale under execution from a district court of another county may be made without the filing of a transcript, and will be effective as against those having actual notice, or notice by the recording of the sheriff's deed. Drahos v. Kopesky, 132-497.

CHAPTER 10.

OF JUDGMENT BY CONFESSION.

SECTION 3815. Statement.

Although judgment on confession by a warrant of attorney are not recognized in this state, such a judgment rendered in another state where it is authorized may be enforced in this state. Cuyendall v. Doe, 129-453.

SEC. 3816. Judgment—execution.

When the confession of judgment is filed, the clerk should enter up a judgment thereon, and if he fails to do so the court may subsequently order judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc as of the date of the filing of the confession, thereby supporting an execution which has in the meantime been issued. Doughty v. Meek, 105-16.

A judgment entered on confession is deemed to have been entered by the court, and is entitled to the same faith and credit in another state as any other judgment. Miller Brg. Co. v. Capital Ins. Co., 111-590.

SEC. 3818. After action brought.

Even though the paper is headed "an offer to compromise," if in fact it is an offer to confess judgment it should be so treated. Benson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 113-179.

If on appeal the amount of recovery is reduced to a less amount than that for which a confession of judgment is offered, costs should be taxed against the successful party, although subsequently accruing interest has increased the amount for which recovery is allowed beyond the amount offered to be confessed. Castner v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 112 N. W. 88.

CHAPTER 11.

OF OFFER TO COMPROMISE.

SECTION 3819. Offer of judgment.

One who is authorized to collect a claim has authority to accept a confession of judgment for such claim. Briggs v. Yetzer, 103-342.

The law requires that the confession concisely state the facts so as to direct the attention of third parties to the nature and character of the consideration. Such statement must be brief and need not be specific or particular. Ibid.

If the statement is full enough to enable third parties to investigate and judge of the good faith of the transaction and sufficiently definite for this purpose, then the object of the statute in requiring such statement has been met. Ibid.

The jurat of the notary showing that the statement has been subscribed and sworn to is sufficient to show that it was subscribed and sworn to by the persons signing it, without the names of such persons being stated therein. Ibid.

An offer to confess judgment after an action is brought may be made the presence of the plaintiff or after notice to him, and may be established by parol testimony; but it is a part of the court proceedings and when made before a justice of the peace should be entered on his docket. Sloss v. Bailey, 104-696.

SEC. 3820. Conditional offer.

The offer here contemplated is different from that provided for under Code § 3818 with reference to offer to confess judgment. That section contemplates an acceptance or refusal of the offer when made; but even if the offer is one of compromise instead of confession of judgment, the party to whom it is made may so act during the period allowed for signifying acceptance as to bind himself by an election not to accept. Benson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 113-179.

CHAPTER 12.

OF RECEIVERS.

SECTION 3822. When and how appointed.

Where a corporation, organized to carry on a work of public improvement, had become insolvent and unable to prosecute the work so that a foreclosure of its franchises would follow and the value of its property would largely depreciate and the public interests be jeopardized, held, that the case was a proper one for the appointment of a receiver on the application of creditors. Boston Inv. Co. v. Pacific Short Line Bridge Co., 104-311.

In such a case, held, that it was not error to order the sale of the property immediately upon the appointment and qualification of a receiver. Ibid.

And held, that an officer of the company who did not make his objection until after the appointment of the receiver and the sale of the property had been ordered was too late to be heard. Ibid.

The appointment of a receiver for a corporation limits the power of the corporation only to the extent that it is deprived of its property. Weigen v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 104-410.

An order of court appointing the clerk of the court as receiver, although improper, cannot be questioned in an action by the receiver to recover a debt owing to the insolvent debtor. Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Commercial State Bank, 104-682.

One may be a receiver de facto although he has not given any bond, and the fact that where the clerk is appointed receiver he cannot properly approve a bond given by himself, will not render his acts as receiver invalid on collateral attack. Ibid.

The general rule seems to be that a receiver will be appointed in creditors' suits when the property is in danger of waste, almost as a matter of course. Hirsch v. Israel, 106-498.

A mortgagee may be entitled to the appointment of a receiver in case of levy on the mortgaged property under a claim senior to that of the mortgagee, it appearing that delay in sale of the property in due course of business would result in irreparable injury. Whether a receiver should be appointed is usually a matter within the sound judicial discretion of the court. Valley Nat. Bank v. Claffin Co., 108-504

Where the only assets of a partnership consisted of property which has been used in carrying on the partnership, the purpose of which is ended, a receiver should be appointed to close up its affairs. Taylor v. Wells, 113-326.

A person agreed upon between the parties to a suit for dissolution of a partnership as the substitute for the receiver already appointed is subject to the jurisdiction of the court and may be directed as to the distribution of the proceeds of the partnership property with reference to the payment of claims. Johnson v. Johnson, 132-457.

SEC. 3824. Power of.

When rights attach: The right to dispose of property is not affected by an application for the appointment of a receiver, and such right continues at least until the making of the order of appointment. Smith v. Sioux City Nursery & Seed Co., 109-51.

Powers: The extent of a receiver's authority is always to be measured by the order of appointment, and such subsequent directions as may from time to time be given. The receiver must stand indifferent between the parties, though appointed on the application of one of them, and prudently preserve and protect the property entrusted to him as an officer of the court. State Central Sav. Bank v. Fanning Ball-Bearing Chain Co., 118-698.

The object of the receiver's appointment should be kept in mind in adjusting his accounts, and the court will not approve of the dissipation of the property in useless expenses, not authorized by the order of appointment or subsequent direction. The tests to be applied are (1), was the act under investigation within the authority conferred by the order of court; (2), if so, was it performed with reference to the preservation of the estate as a man of ordinary sagacity and prudence would have performed it under like circumstances; (3), if without authority, was it beneficial to the estate. Ibid.

Subsequent instructions or orders of the court should be in writing and entered of record. Ibid.

A receiver may deposit the funds of the estate coming into his hands as such in a bank of good standing and repute, exercising that degree of prudence and care which is ordinarily exercised by reasonably cautious men in the transaction of their own business of like importance. State v. Corn-ing State Savings Bank, 128-597.

Such a deposit is not unlawful though made in a bank which is a creditor of the insolvent. Ibid.

A receiver has no authority to execute a negotiable instrument for the corporation of which he is receiver. Peoria Steam Marble Works v. Hickey, 110-276.

While the act of the receiver in buying in the property at his own sale is irregular and voidable, such a sale is not void, and cannot be collaterally attacked in the absence of fraud. Groeltz v. Cole, 128-340.

As a receiver is subject to the order of the court, and the property and funds in his hands are in court, it is proper for the court to give direction to the receiver as to priority of claims. Hart v. Nonpareil Printing & Publishing Co., 109-82.

In the proceedings by the state auditor under statutory provisions to wind up a banking corporation, the court may require the payment by stockholders (under their double liability as fixed by statute) of an assessment deemed reasonably sufficient to meet the liabilities of the bank, without waiting for the final distribution of the assets. State v. Union Stock Yards State Bank, 103-549.

If the statute makes stockholders liable to the extent of their respective shares of stock for debts due at the time of the dissolution of the corporation, a receiver appointed in an action brought to wind up the corporation may enforce this liability against the shareholders. Where the law contemplates a fund for distribution, such distribution is to be made by the receiver. Ibid.

Report: The setting aside of the receiver's final report after an order of discharge has been made is within the discretion of the trial court appointing the receiver. Williams v. Des Moines Loan & Trust Co., 126-22.

The report may be set aside on the application of one of the creditors without requiring other creditors or the original parties to the litigation to be brought in. Ibid.

As party in litigation: The receiver of the property of a party to a litigation is not a necessary party to such litigation if no attempt is made thereby to interfere with the right of the receiver to the property intrusted to his care. State Bank v. McElroy, 106-258.

While the right of a receiver to appear in an action brought outside the state in which he was appointed is generally denied, yet he is frequently permitted to do so as a matter of comity. Ibid.

While it is the general rule that before suit is brought against the receiver, leave should be obtained from the court by which he was appointed, yet where the receiver has appeared and defended and invoked the affirmative judgment of the court, he cannot after an adverse decision, question the jurisdiction. Manker v. Phoenix Loan Assn., 124-341.

Foreign receivers: A receiver appointed by a court of foreign jurisdiction cannot maintain suit in this state to enforce recovery of a claim due under the laws of his state against a citizen of this state. Wyman v. Eaton, 107-214.

A foreign receiver appointed as ancillary receiver in a proceeding in the courts of this state, and duly qualifying and giving bond as such, may maintain an action in this state. Seymour v. Aultman, 109-297.

While a foreign receiver will not be allowed as such, to bring action in the courts of this state, yet, if he has a right of action by assignment, and not merely by virtue of his appointment as receiver, he may maintain the action. Hale v. Harris, 112-372.

Costs: Fees and expenses of the receivership should be paid out of the funds in the hands of the receiver. Harrington v. Foley, 108-287.

The costs and expenses of the receivership are to be paid out of the property and such claims take priority over existing liens thereon. Gallagher v. Gingrich, 105-237.

Where the object of receivership is to preserve the property pending a determination of the rights of the parties with reference thereto, the successful party availing himself of the fruits of litigation must take subject to the burden of costs of the receivership regardless of the litigation as between the parties; but one who attempts to establish a claim against the receivership cannot have the cost of the litigation satisfied out of the property itself, and on the other hand the receiver must look for his compensation to the portion of the fund properly brought within his jurisdiction or to the party on whose application the receivership was secured. Frick v. Fritz, 124-529.

An expert accountant employed by a receiver under authority of the court is subject to the direction of the receiver, and is not entitled to compensation for services performed in excess of or in opposition to the instructions of the receiver. Grabbe v. Moffit, 133-54.

SEC. 3825. Priority of liens—taxes. Persons having liens upon the property placed in the hands of a receiver shall, if there is a contest as to their priority, submit them to the court for determination. Provided, that when the assets of any corporation, partnership or person shall be placed in the hands of a receiver, all taxes against said corporation, partnership or person, whether levied under the laws of the state or ordinances of municipal corporations, shall be entitled to priority and be first paid in full by the receiver and claims therefor need not be filed with said receiver. [29 G. A., ch. 140, § 1.]

The receiver takes the debtor's property subject to the payment of all valid prior liens, but preferences already agreed upon at the time of the receiver's appointment, not based on existing liens, will be disregarded. Smith v. Sioux City Nursery & Seed Co., 109-51.

A claim for false representations in the sale of corporate stock or for money paid in the purchase thereof by a minor on a contract which has been disaffirmed, or a claim by an endorsee of such contract who is denied recovery thereon because of such disaffirmance, is not entitled to priority in a receivership proceedings. To sustain such priority there must be some showing that the estate has been augmented by the trust fund, or that it has been so benefited by the misappropriation of the fund that its removal will be without prejudice to creditors. Seeley v. Seeley-Howe-LeVan Co., 128-294.

SEC. 3825-a. Claims entitled to priority. When the property of any person, partnership, company or corporation has been placed in the hands of a receiver for distribution, after the payment of all costs the following claims shall be entitled to priority of payment in the order named:

First. Taxes or other debts entitled to preference under the laws of the United States.

Second. Debts due or taxes assessed and levied for the benefit of the state, county or other municipal corporation in this state.

Third. Debts owing to employes for labor performed as defined by section four thousand and nineteen (4019) of the code. [31 G. A., ch. 156.]

CHAPTER 13.

OF SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS.

SECTION 3826. Judgments on motion.

This section has no application where one attorney seeks to compel another to pay over a share of the fees received by the latter under a contract between them. Downs v. Davis, 113-529.

The remedy under this section against an attorney is not limited to cases of bad faith; nor is the power of the court to act precluded by the fact that there is a controversy as to whether the relation of client and attorney existed when the money was received. Union Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Soderquist, 115-695.

The fact that the client has a legal remedy for the recovery of the money does not affect the right of the court to entertain the proceeding. Ibid.

In this summary proceeding the court has the power to adjust any set-off which the attorney may have on account of fees or other charges due to him in connection with the proceeding in which he received the money in question, or as the result of any other services for which he has a lien on money of his client coming into his hands. Ibid.

The court may, upon proper showing render judgment summarily against the clerk for money received by him, or make such order as would protect the rights of parties to the fund. Hornish v. Ringen Stove Co., 116-1.

SEC. 3830. No written pleadings.

The ground of jurisdiction is the misconduct of the officer. The court is simply called upon to enforce the plain duty of the attorney without the aid of a jury or written pleadings, and the remedy relates exclusively to an accounting between the attorney and the client. Downs v. Davis, 113-529.

CHAPTER 14.

OF MOTIONS AND ORDERS.

SECTION 3834. Notice of motion.

An order in an ex parte proceeding can be made only after notice to the party against whom the order is asked. McConkie v. Landt, 126-317.

SEC. 3842. "Order" defined.

Judges are authorized to make orders in vacation, which are defined to be directions made in writing, and when so made are to be filed with the clerk. In re Guardianship of Kimble, 127-665.

SEC. 3843. May issue in vacation.

This provision authorizes the judge to direct the sheriff with reference to the issuance of a deed in pursuance of execution sale. Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Maxwell, 119-672.

SEC. 3846. Filed and entered.

Orders made upon motion must be entered of record. In re Manning's Estate, 111 N. W. 409.

by a judge in vacation, such record is the best evidence of the order. Bristol Sav. Bank v. Judd, 116-26.

Where there is a record of an order made

CHAPTER 15.

OF SECURITY FOR COSTS.

SECTION 3847. When required. If a defendant, at any time before answering, shall make and file an affidavit stating that he has a good defense in whole or in part, the plaintiff, if he is a non-resident of this state, or a private or foreign corporation, before any other proceedings in the action, must file in the clerk's office a bond, with sureties to be approved by the clerk, in an amount to be fixed by the court, for the payment of all costs which may accrue in the action in the court in which it is brought, or in any other to which it may be carried, either to the defendant or to the officers of the court. The application for such security shall be by motion, filed with the case, and the facts supporting it must be shown by affidavits annexed thereto, which may be responded to by counter affidavits on or before the hearing of the motion, and each party shall file all his affidavits at once, and none thereafter. And a non-resident intervenor shall be required in like manner, to give a bond on motion of any party required to answer his petition of intervention. [C., '73, § 2927; R., §§ 3442, 3448.] [27 G. A., ch. 100, § 1.]

Failure to give security for costs as ordered does not preclude a non-resident defendant served with notice by publication only from applying to have the default set aside within the time allowed by the statute therefor. English v. Otis, 125-555. Until amended by 27 G. A., ch. 100, § 1, the provisions of this section had no reference to a case of intervention by a non-resident. Petty v. Hayden, 115-212.

SEC. 3848. Dismissal for failure to furnish.

The court may extend the time given for filing bond for security for costs, and may treat a bond filed after the expiration of the time fixed as filed in proper time, and may refuse to dismiss for the default. Funk v. Church, 132-1.

SEC. 3849. When plaintiff becomes non-resident. If the plaintiff or any intervenor in an action, after its institution and at any time before its final determination, becomes a non-resident of this state, he may be required to give security for costs in the manner provided in the preceding sections of this chapter. [C., '73, § 2929; R., § 3444.] [27 G. A., ch. 100, § 2.]

By 27 G. A., ch. 100, if the plaintiff after the institution of suit becomes a non-resident, he may be required to give security for costs although the defendant has already filed his answer. Vohs v. Shorthill Co., 124-471.

SEC. 3851. Attorney or other officer not received.

An attorney is not competent as surety on appeal from a justice of the peace. Valley Nat. Bank v. Garretson, 104-655; Hudson v. Smith, 111-411.

The sufficiency of an administrator's bond cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding on the ground that it is signed by an attorney as surety. Beresford v. American Coal Co., 124-34.

SEC. 3852. Judgment on bond rendered on motion.

The court has jurisdiction to render a judgment on a cost bond against the sureties although they are not parties to the action. Therefore, the sureties, though residents of another county, are not entitled on a motion for judgment against them on the bond after judgment is rendered against the principal in the action, to have the proceeding transferred to the other county of which they are residents. Rogers v. Weston Mut. Life Assn., 123-722.

CHAPTER 16.

OF COSTS.

SECTION 3853. Recoverable by successful party. Costs shall be recovered by the successful against the losing party; the losing party, however, shall not be assessed with the cost of mileage of any witness for a distance of more than seventy miles from the place of trial, unless otherwise ordered by the court at the time of entering judgment. But where the party is successful as to a part of his demand, and fails as to part, unless the case is otherwise provided for, the court on rendering judgment may make an equitable apportionment of costs. [C., '73, § 2933; R., § 3449; C., '51, § 1811.] [32 G. A., ch. 166.]

The general rule is that costs shall be recovered by the successful party and the fact that a defense has been made in good faith and upon reasonable grounds does not relieve such defendant if unsuccessful from the payment of costs. In re Proctor's Estate, 103-232.

The judgment may provide for interest on costs and attorneys' fees as well as on the principal sum for which the judgment is rendered. Hoyt v. Beach, 104-257.

Unnecessary expenses of counsel in taking depositions made necessary by the act of the opposite party in giving notice to take depositions at different places, before such depositions were finally secured, cannot be taxed as costs. Grapes v. Grapes, 106-316.

The expense of making an abstract of the evidence for use in the trial court is not so taxable. Ibid.

Without any prayer therefor in the petition costs follow the judgment. Mountain v. Low, 107-403; Reed v. Corrigan, 114-638.

The provision of this section that costs shall be recovered by the successful against the losing party is applicable in a criminal case. Hayes v. Clinton County, 118-569.

Therefore in a criminal case, held that

SEC. 3854. Apportionment.

Where there was recovery by the plaintiff on his cause of action and by the defendant on his counterclaim and it appeared that the time occupied and the number of witnesses was substantially equal as to the two issues, held, that the costs should have been equally apportioned between the two parties. White v. Ledbetter, 104-71.

Where plaintiff brought suit to collect two distinct and separate claims, one upon a contract and the other upon a quantum meruit for extra work, and the sole question of fact actually litigated was the issue upon plaintiff's claim for extra work and the counterclaim of defendant for deduction therefrom of the amount due him for unfinished work, held that the costs should be apportioned. Palmer v. McGinness, 127-118.

While the plaintiff is successful as to several distinct and separate items of his claim and unsuccessful as to others, the case is one for the apportionment of costs. Dorr v. Dudley, 112 N. W. 203.

The fact that, in an action for equitable relief with reference to the conveyance of property, the plaintiff, although denied the state was entitled to enforce as against the defendant, who is convicted, the payment of costs, and that an order made on appeal that the county pay the costs of defendant's printing, while it entitled defendant to recover the amount thus taxed against the county, did not authorize an assignment afterwards made to his attorney of the amount thus taxed, which would take priority over the claim of the state to subject such amount to the payment of the other costs in the case properly taxed to defendant. Ibid.

In an appeal from the action of the board of supervisors upon a petition for the construction of a ditch, costs may be taxed to the unsuccessful party, although by Code § 1941 it is required that the petitioners in such an application shall give bond to cover the costs. In re Bradley, 117-472.

The ordinary provision as to costs is applicable in a proceeding to probate a will where the proponent is claiming as beneficiary under the will and the heirs are contesting on the ground of testamentary incapacity and undue influence. In re Hendershott's Estate, 111 N. W. 969.

other relief, is given a judgment for the amount of money advanced by him under the contract, the repayment of which had been tendered by defendant, and as to which there had been no controversy, held not sufficient to require taxation of any portion of the costs to plaintiff. Saunders v. King, 119-291.

Where an action is properly commenced, the plaintiff is not to be held liable for all the costs although by reason of a change of circumstances pending trial a final judgment is necessarily rendered against him. Mock v. Chalmers, 121-411.

Defendant is not to be charged with all the costs in an action involving recovery on different items of charge when the judgment against him is wrong on one item only, and he is successful as to the others. Krause v. Redman, 112 N. W. 91.

An order as to apportionment of costs will not be interfered with on appeal unless it is clear that the trial court's discretion has been abused. Where there are various items of claim and counterclaim and plaintiff recovers under each count of his petition, it is not necessarily error to refuse to tax a part of the costs against the plaintiff although the defendant has recovered on some items of counterclaim, it not appearing that any costs were incurred in sustaining the items of counterclaim which would not have been involved in the trial of the issues on the claims of the plaintiff. Mayo v. Halley, 124-675.

Where the intervenor was successful as to the principal issue raised by him, held that no portion of the costs should be taxed to him, although on another issue not involving any additional costs he was unsuccessful. Jacobs v. Jacobs, 130-10.

While the provisions of this section are applicable to the trial of appeals in condemnation proceedings, there is no provision for the assessment or apportionment of attorney's fees on such appeal, except as authorized by Code § 2007, which provides for the allowance of attorney's fees to the property owner appealing only when the damages awarded are at least equal to those allowed by the commissioners. Wormely v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 120-684.

In a criminal case, there being but the simple issue of guilt or innocence on the part of the defendant, there is no authority for apportionment of costs between the state and the defendant. Hayes v. Clinton County, 118-569.

SEC. 3855. Collection.

The party against whom judgment is rendered is primarily liable for all costs to the parties entitled thereto, but the successful party has no right to enforce judgment for costs, except so far as such costs have been paid by him. Hidy v. Hanson, 116-8.

To entitle a claimant for costs to recover against the successful party, it is only necessary to show that such costs accrued at the instance of such party, and cannot be collected of the other party. Cole v. Gates Lumber Co., 131-189.

Where the referee and reporter in a case were selected by mutual agreement, held that each party was liable for his proportion of the compensation to such officers, and that neither was liable for the proportion taxed to the other. Ibid.

SEC. 3862. Clerk to tax.

A motion to retax costs may cover taxation of attorney's fees fixed by the court, for the clerk taxes these as well as other costs, although the court determines the amount. Bankers Iowa State Bank v. Jordan, 111-324.

The losing party may be taxed with costs for witnesses who were properly subpoenaed and attended the trial, although not called as witnesses, and it is immaterial that the attorney of the party subpoenaing such witnesses who have in fact been in attendance subject to call has concealed from the other party the fact that such witnesses are in attendance. The concealment of the fact that such witnesses are in attendance is material only on the question whether they were subpoenaed in good faith with the purpose of calling them if necessary. Parsons Band Cutter, etc. Co. v. Sciscoe, 129-631.

The taxation of costs in a criminal case is conclusive as against the county. Climie v. Appanoose County, 125-292.

SEC. 3864. Retaxation.

A motion to retax costs may be considered without any proceedings to set aside, modify, or correct the judgment. The costs are properly no part of the judgment. Fisher v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 104-588.

A motion to retax costs covers error of the court in fixing the amount of attorney's fees to be allowed under Code § 3869 in action on written contract. Bankers Iowa State Bank v. Jordan, 111-324.

Error in allowance of attorney's fee on foreclosure of mortgage cannot be corrected by such motion since the right to the attorney's fee is determined by the judgment. Perry v. Kasper, 113-268.

It is only when a mistake has been made by the clerk in the taxation of costs that a motion to correct is essential before a review may be had on appeal. Where an attorney's fee has been taxed in the judgment, the correctness of the action of the court may be reviewed without raising the question by motion to retax costs. Ainsley v. American Mut. F. Ins. Co., 113-709.

Where costs are occasioned by the improper action of the court in reopening the case and receiving new evidence, the court on motion should retax the costs. Hagerle v. Beebe, 123-620.

Error in entering a judgment against a party for costs may be reviewed on appeal without a motion for retaxation. Such motion relates to the correctness of the taxation and not to the entry of judgment. Guinn v. Iowa & St. L. R. Co., 125-301.

While an appeal is pending, the district court has no jurisdiction in an equity case to pass upon a motion to retax costs; and it cannot in any way control the costs to be taxed in the supreme court which are incident to the appeal. Berkey v. Thompson, 126-394.

No doubt a party is bound to take notice of a motion to retax costs, made after final rendition of judgment, but there must be some limit to the time within which the final determination of the case with reference to the costs may be assailed in this manner, and after the costs have been fully paid and satisfied, there can no longer be any necessity for requiring the parties to be on their guard against motions of this character. After that time the court can have jurisdiction to revise its action as to taxation of costs only upon notice to the party. Iowa Sav. & L. Assn. v. Chase, 118-51.

There is no provision in this section for rendering judgment against the successful party for the payment of costs which have been fully settled and satisfied by the other party. Ibid.

The right to recover costs is determined by the judgment, and not on motion to retax. Fairbairn v. Dana, 68-231.

SEC. 3869. Attorneys' fees—when taxed as costs—amount.

In an action on a written contract the court may fix the attorney's fees without taking evidence, and the clerk may tax up the amount fixed by the court with the other costs. The correctness of the taxation of the fee by the court may be raised in a motion for retaxation of costs. Bankers Iowa State Bank v. Jordan, 111-324.

Where several notes are sued on in the same action which might separately have been the basis of different actions, the attorney fee is to be fixed with reference to the several amounts, and not on the basis of the recovery of one lump sum. Ibid.

Attorney's fees may be allowed on the foreclosure of a note and mortgage, although such fees have also been allowed in an action in rem in another state in which a portion only of the indebtedness was collected. Smith v. Moore, 112-60.

Where the attorney's fee is fixed and allowed by the judgment, it is not necessary to move to retax the costs in order to raise on appeal the correctness of the judgment in that respect. Such a fee is not necessarily a part of the judgment, but, as well as other costs, may be made so. Ainsley v. American Mut. F. Ins. Co., 113-709.

The "return day" is the second day of the term, or default day. Bankers Iowa State Bank v. Jordan, 111-324.

SEC. 3875. Of reporters and clerks for transcript.

The translation of the shorthand reporter's notes, which is necessary only for the presentation of the appeal in the supreme court, is not to be taxed as costs in the district court. Berkey v. Thompson, 126-394.

TITLE XIX.

OF ATTACHMENTS, GARNISHMENT, EXECUTIONS, AND SUPPLEMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF ATTACHMENTS.

SECTION 3878. Grounds—not stated in alternative.

The statute permits amendments of the petition to show that a legal cause of attachment existed at the time the writ was issued. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Converse, 105-669.

An attachment is a summary proceeding, and before a writ is issued on an application therefor; one or more of the statutory grounds must be stated and sworn to. An allegation or statement which does not substantially comply with the statutory requirements is insufficient. Upp v. Neuhring, 127-713.

In determining the right to sue out an attachment, the question as to the amount due on the claim has reference to the claim itself rather than balance of indebtedness as between the parties, and the attachment may be rightfully sued out, although it shall afterwards appear that plaintiff is not entitled to judgment against the defendant. Smeaton v. Cole, 120-368.

Malice and want of probable cause will not necessarily be inferred from a finding, as the result of a counterclaim, that nothing was actually due the plaintiff. In such a case the writ has been wrongfully issued, but this alone does not necessarily entitle the defendant to the recovery of damages on the bond. Ibid.

The mere fact that one who is indebted is about to leave the state is not ground for an attachment. To furnish such ground it must appear that he was about to remove his property from the state without leaving sufficient remaining for the payment of his debts, or that he was about to remove permanently from the state and refused to pay or secure plaintiff's debts. Tylor v. Bowen, 124-452.

An allegation that the defendant is about to remove permanently out of the state is not sufficient to authorize the issuance of an attachment unless it is also made to appear that he has refused to pay or secure the debt due to the plaintiff. Upp v. Neuhring, 127-713.

The statement that the defendant is about to leave the state and defraud his creditors cannot be construed as an allegation that he is about to remove his property out of the state without leaving sufficient remaining for the payment of his debts. Ibid.

It is sufficient to establish fraud as to sales or conveyances of the debtor's property that they were made without intent to hinder, delay or defraud his creditors. Meyer v. Baird, 120-597.

A landlord, claiming that a sale by a tenant of exempt property is fraudulent cannot proceed by landlord's attachment, but only under the general provisions for attachment. Hillman v. Brigham, 110-220.

SEC. 3883. For debts not due—grounds.

The obligation to pay rent is created when a valid lease is entered into between the parties, and ordinarily nothing but time is wanting to fix an absolute indebtedness. Brown v. Cairns, 107-727.

SEC. 3887. Action on bond.

Independently of statute: An action will lie for the wrongful and malicious institution of a civil suit where an attachment has been issued as auxiliary to the main action, and such action need not be by counterclaim on the attachment bond, nor need it be on the bond. Carraker v. Allen, 112-168.

The cause of action for wrongful attachment irrespective of the bond, accrues when the property is taken, or at least when it is sold under the writ. Smyth v. Peters Shoe Co., 111-388.

A counterclaim for wrongfully suing out the attachment but not founded on the attachment bond cannot be interposed in the original case. Tyler v. Bowen, 124-452.

But the abandonment of such a counterclaim will not prevent the interpretation of a proper counterclaim on the bond. Ibid.

In an action for wrongful suing out of an attachment, not brought upon the bond, plaintiff must establish both want of probable cause and malice. Richards v. Jewett, 118-629.

In an action for malicious prosecution in wrongfully suing out an attachment, plaintiff must not only show that the action complained of was wrongfully brought, i. e., without probable cause, but also that it was malicious. The malice required may be inferred by the jury from want of probable cause, but if circumstances are proved showing reasonable ground of belief as to the existence of a cause of action, the question of malice is for the jury. Connelly v. White, 122-391.

Advice of counsel is not sufficient to rebut the presumption of malice from want of probable cause, if the facts are not fully and fairly presented to the counsel whose advice has been taken. Ibid.

Want of ground: It will not render the attachment wrongful that it is not sued out against the principal debtor who is insolvent, although there is a surety who is solvent but who is not made party to the action. Richardson v. Probst, 103-241.

On a question whether an attachment was wrongfully sued out on the ground that the debtor was about to dispose of his property, mortgages by the debtor subsequent to the levy but on the same day, and the fact that another creditor telegraphed to attaching plaintiff that the debtor was sure to fail, etc., were held admissible. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Converse, 105-669.

The question as to reasonable cause of belief relates to the ground upon which the attachment was issued. Ringen Stove Co. v. Bowers, 109-175.

If the ground of the attachment is true in point of fact, or if the attaching plaintiff had reasonable grounds for believing the fact to be true, there can be no recovery of damages on the attachment bond. Lord, Owen & Co. v. Wood, 120-303.

The mere finding that plaintiff is not entitled to judgment for any amount, by reason of the interposition of a counterclaim by the defendant, does not show that the suing out of the attachment was malicious and without probable cause. Smeaton v. Cole, 120-368.

Right to recover: Where two writs of attachment were sued out by different creditors against the same debtor, held that release of liability of one creditor would not discharge the other. Miller v. Beck, 108-575.

Assignment of claim on bond: The statutory provision that a claim for wrongful attachment may be interposed in the attachment proceeding does not authorize the defendant in an action on a judgment, to set up by way of counterclaim a claim which he has acquired by assignment after the bringing of the action, for damages suffered by his assignor by the suing out of an attachment. Morrison Mfg. Co. v. Rimerman, 127-719.

Measure of damages: Where sale of the property at auction was made within a few weeks after the levy of the attachment, held that evidence as to what the property sold for, the number of bidders, and the offers made at the time the goods were exposed for sale was admissible. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Converse, 105-669.

The mere issuance and levy of a writ of attachment upon real estate, without other evidence of actual injury, will not sustain a recovery of substantial damages on the bond. New Sharon Creamery Co. v. Knowlton, 132-672.

An attachment creditor is not liable in damages in case of wrongful suing out of an attachment for the depreciation in value of real estate levied on which occurs while the attachment is in force. The mere issuing and levying of a writ of attachment on real estate cannot ordinarily cause it to depreciate in value. Tisdale v. Major, 106-1.

Mental suffering resulting from the wrongful and malicious suing out and levying of a writ of attachment does not afford ground for recovery of compensatory damages. Ibid.

A second attaching creditor who does not cause the seizure of the property (which remains in the custody of the officer under the prior attachment in pursuance of which it is sold) is not usually liable for more than interest on the surplus of the proceeds over the amount of the first attachment debt. Liability in such case is usually no more than it would have been if the sheriff in possession under the first writ had been garnished for the surplus. Emerson v. Converse, 106-330.

If it appears by the finding of the jury that the attachment was properly issued, error in the charge of the court with reference to the damages to be assessed in the event that attachment was wrongful, will be error without prejudice. Crowell v. McGoan, 106-266.

It is error to instruct the jury with reference to damages by interruption or destruction of trade due to seizure of stock of goods under attachment where it appears that the goods levied on were not of such a nature as that their seizure could materially affect the trade or interrupt the business; and where it appears that by reason of such instruction the jury has made a large allowance of exemplary damages the judgment on the verdict will be reversed. Hooker v. Chittenden, 106-321.

In an action for wrongful attachment not brought on the bond the plaintiff is entitled to recover at least nominal damages if the attachment was sued out maliciously and without probable cause, but he is not entitled to recover for injuries to his credit. Dorr Cattle Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 127-153.

The right to recover damages for injury to credit is to be determined by the law of the state where the action is brought and not by that of the state in which the cause of action arises. Ibid.

In determining the damages to be recovered against an attaching creditor who has wrongfully caused a stock of goods to be levied off, which the owner was engaged in selling in pursuance of his regular business, the owner, in recovering for loss of time due to the wrongful attachment, must be limited to the value of his time in the particular business in which he was engaged. Lord v. Wood, 120-303.

The fact that the attachment defendant objects to the sale of attached property, under the provisions of 27 G. A., chap. 101, relating to the sale of such property when it is in danger of serious and immediate waste and decay, or when the keeping of the same will necessarily be attended with such expense as greatly to depreciate the amount of proceeds to be realized therefrom, such objection being on the ground that the attachment is unlawful, does not estop him from afterwards claiming, by way of damages for unlawful attachment, that the property has been injured by reason of depreciation in its value while held by the sheriff under his levy. Ibid.

The measure of damages is necessarily the same whether the action be upon the bond or on the case independent of the bond. In neither action can the plaintiff recover for injury to credit; and this rule will be applied in the courts of this state regardless of where the cause of action arose. Dorr Cattle Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 127-153.

Time and money expended in securing the release of the property by the execution of a delivery bond are proper elements of damage in an action on the bond. Tullis v. McClary, 128-493.

In determining the damages under a counterclaim on the attachment bond, it appearing that the attachment was sued out for the purpose of harassing and annoying the defendant and that the claim was not made in good faith, the jury has wide discretion. Tyler v. Bowen, 124-452.

Attorney's fees: It is the defendant in the judgment who recovers the attorney's fees provided for in this section, and they are to be taxed in his favor as costs. The attorney cannot recover these fees in an independent suit. The defendant in the attachment has the right to satisfy the judgment for attorney's fees, and if the attorney collects such fees he is responsible to his client. Schnitker v. Schnitker, 109-349.

The only authority given the court to allow attorney's fees in the action on an attachment bond, is to allow a reasonable fee for the prosecution of the action on the bond in the district court. That section does not permit the court to allow an additional amount for prosecuting an appeal in the supreme court. The allowance is to be limited to the fee earned at the time final judgment is rendered. Nor is there any authority for allowance by the supreme court of a fee for the trial of the appeal in that court. Kilmer v. Gallaher, 120-575.

The district court, in fixing the attorney's fee, is not bound to allow such fee as the testimony may show to be reasonable, but may, guided by his own judgment, allow what is a reasonable fee after hearing the case tried. Ibid.

Where the action in which the attachment was procured was to recover an indebtedness which did not in fact exist, and the want of probable cause relied upon consists of that fact, fees of counsel for defending the action and establishing the absence of any cause of action are properly included in the recovery for malicious prosecution. Connelly v. White, 122-391.

Costs: It is not necessary in a counterclaim on a bond to ask recovery of costs. The costs of levying the writ and selling the property, which are unnecessary if the writ of attachment is wrongfully sued out, are to be taxed in such case, like the attorney's fees, by the court. Ringgen Stove Co. v. Bowers, 109-175.

cipal deposited in a bank in the name of the agent, simply as a matter of convenience. Anderson v. Taylor, 131-485.

SEC. 3894. Corporation stock.

Indorsements by the officer on stubs of certificates of stock are ineffectual to constitute a levy. Croft v. Colfax E. L. & P. Co., 113-455.

Promissory notes are property, and are capable of manual delivery, and the proper method for attaching such notes is for the officer to take them into his actual Broeksmit*, 103-271.

A levy on books of account does not create any lien on the indebtedness evidenced by such books. The debts due the owner of the books can be reached only by garnishment. Cedar Rapids Pump Co. v. Miller, 105-674.

The levy of a writ of attachment on the books of account of a debtor does not create an inchoate lien on the debate included therein. Smith v. Sioux City Nursery & Seed Co., 109-51.

There is a distinction between the return of a levy and the notice of a levy. When the property is in custody under a levy, a second attachment may be levied without overt act. The officer can treat the property as seized and make his levy accordingly. German Savings Bank v. Oatmeal Co., 108-380.

By attaching the debtor's property, a creditor abandons any equitable lien he may have thereon. City National Bank v. Crahan, 112 N. W. 793.

The attaching creditor takes no more than the interest of the debtor, and does not acquire priority over the equitable lien of another on the property. Ibid.

These provisions relating to the attachment of equitable interests in real property, were enacted for the purpose of giving constructive notice for the protection of a creditor from subsequent conveyances, and for no other purpose. Therefore the levy of an attachment on an equitable interest, which does not appear of record, does not impart constructive notice to a vendee or mortgagee of the person holding the legal title. Byers v. McEniry, 117-499.

SEC. 3900. Notice—return.

An attachment levied on chattel property covered by mortgage, such levy being made with a view to contest the validity of the mortgage, becomes an apparent lien upon all the property seized and not merely upon sufficient of said property to satisfy the

SEC. 3907. Bond to discharge.

As the release bond is for the protection of the plaintiff the object of the requirement for its approval must be to insure plaintiff security corresponding in value to that which might have been attained by the levy of the attachment. It is a condition to the acceptance of the bond by the officer without which in the absence of a waiver, the attachment is not dissolved; and without approval the bond cannot be deemed statutory, whatever its efficacy as a common law obligation. If formal approval is waived and the bond is accepted as a compliance with the statute, the sureties are bound. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Bowen, 123-356.

The surety on such bond does not become bound to indemnify the surety on a subsequent appeal bond, where the appeal bond is not given in the interest or on the procurement of the sureties on the release bond. Ibid.

The liability of the surety on a bond to discharge an attachment is not affected by failure of the attaching creditor to give notice of his intention to appeal from a judgment discharging the attachment as provided for in Code § 3931, if in fact the officer does not release the discharged property until the appeal has been taken. Sheldon v. Bigelow, 124-566.

SEC. 3909. Delivery bond.

The duty to deliver devolves upon the person giving the bond within twenty days after judgment is rendered against defendant in the original action. Even if there is no order for condemnation of the attached property the action on the bond may be maintained. Valley Bank v. Shenandoah Nat. Bank, 109-43.

SEC. 3912. Sale of perishable property.

After a sale of property levied on as perishable one who intervenes in the attachment proceeding under a claim of right to the property is limited to a recovery of the proceeds of the sale. Paris v. Sheppard, 125-255.

SEC. 3912-a. Repeal—perishable property—when to be sold. That section three thousand nine hundred and twelve (3912) of the code be repealed and the following enacted in lieu thereof:

When the sheriff thinks the property attached in danger of serious and immediate waste and decay, or when the keeping of the same will necessarily be attended with such expense as greatly to depreciate the amount of proceeds to be realized therefrom, or when the plaintiff makes affidavit to that effect, the sheriff may summon three persons having the qualifications of jurors to examine the same. The sheriff shall give the defendant, if within the county, three days' notice of such hearing, and he may appear before such jury and have a personal hearing. If they are of the opinion that the property requires soon to be disposed of, they shall specify in writing a day beyond which they do not deem it prudent that it should be kept in the hands of the sheriff. If such day occurs before the trial day, he shall thereupon give the same notice as for sale of goods on execution, and for the same length of time, unless the condition of the property renders a more immediate sale necessary. The sale shall be made accordingly. If the defendant gives his written consent, such sale may be made without such finding. [27 G. A., ch. 101, § 1.]

SEC. 3924. Judgment—satisfied from proceeds.

Where plaintiff moved for an order for sale of attached property or for the disposition of the proceeds of the same, which motion was denied, held that the ruling operated to discharge the attached property and included the rights of parties thereto under the judgment. Second Nat. Bank v. Haerling, 106-505.

SEC. 3926. Expenses for keeping.

When the sheriff places the property in the hands of another for safe keeping, that other becomes the agent of the sheriff, and has no claim which can be taxed as costs. In such case the plaintiff in attachment is not jointly responsible with the sheriff to the person who keeps the property under the sheriff's direction for the expense incident to its care. There is no privity in such a case between the custodian and the plaintiff in attachment. Hurd v. Ladner, 110-263.

It would be otherwise if the property were taken into possession by the officer under a mortgage clause in a lease, and not in virtue of writ of attachment. Ibid.

SEC. 3928. Intervention.

An intervention under this section is in time, if applied for after the sale of the property and deposit of the proceeds with the clerk under order of the court, to abide further determination of the rights of the parties. Petty v. Hayden, 115-212.

The intervenor who has given a delivery bond may contest recovery on the bond on the ground that the property did not belong to the attachment defendant, and the judgment in the principal action for a sale of the property will not be an adjudication in the intervention proceedings, but the intervention will not suspend the bar of limitations on the right to sue on the bond. Valley Bank v. Shenandoah Nat. Bank, 109-43.

One who intervenes in an attachment proceeding claiming the property, with knowledge that it has been sold as perishable and that the proceeds are in the hands of the sheriff, thereby elects not to recover the value of the property and is entitled only to the proceeds. Paris v. Sheppard, 125-255.

SEC. 3929. Discharge on motion.

The defendant may stand upon his motion to discharge the attachment on account of want of notice, but if he elects to counterclaim for damages on account of wrongful levy he cannot insist on failure to give notice of the levy. Schoonover v. Osborne, 108-453.

This section provides only for discharge of attached property on motion before the trial, and has no application where there has been a final adjudication and a sale under special execution. Clark v. Tull, 113-143.

SEC. 3931. Time for appeal from order of discharge.

The object of announcing intention to appeal from an order discharging the attachment is simply to require the officer to retain possession of the property until such appeal is taken, and if in fact the possession is thus retained, failure to give notice of intention does not render the appeal ineffectual. Sheldon v. Bigelow, 124-566.

SEC. 3933. Liberal construction—amendments.

Although a new ground of attachment may under some circumstances be properly set up in an amendment to the petition, yet, where such amendment was not filed until during the trial, held that the court did not abuse its discretion in striking such amendment from the files on motion. Emerson v. Converse, 106-330.

SEC. 3934. Sheriff—constables.

A writ of attachment, directed to a constable from a district or superior court, is not valid. Freeman v. Lind, 112-39.

SEC. 3934-a. Certificate of release. When real estate or an equitable interest therein is attached, in any county, other than that in which the action is commenced, or is pending, and the action is dismissed, or the attachment is dissolved and discharged, or satisfied the clerk of the court of the county wherein such action is pending must issue a certificate directed to the clerk of the court in which the land is situated giving date of release and setting forth a true copy of the order or release and he shall be allowed as compensation for such service the sum of fifty cents, to be taxed as a part of the costs in the case. [30 G. A., ch. 123, § 1.]

SEC. 3934-b. Filed and recorded. The clerk of the court receiving such certificate shall file and record the same upon the margin of the incumbrance book at place where the original entry of attachment is found. [30 G. A., ch. 123, § 2.]

CHAPTER 2.OF GARNISHMENT.*SECTION 3935. How effected—notice.

Debts due an attachment debtor can be reached only by garnishment, and not by levying the writ of attachment upon the books of account in which such debts are recorded. Cedar Rapids Pump Co. v. Miller, 105-674; Smith v. Sioux City Nursery & Seed Co., 109-51.

An assignment of a debt is good as against a garnishment. Kuhnes v. Cahill, 128-594.

A garnishee having notice of an assignment of a chose in action from the defendant, his creditor, to a third person, should set up that fact in defense, and not doing so he cannot rely upon judgment in the garnishment proceeding as a defense against the assignee of the chose in action. Seymour v. Aultman, 109-297.

Garnishment of an assignee for the benefit of creditors, who has taken possession of notes and book accounts of the debtor before the assignment has become effectual, will take priority over such assignment. Mills v. Miller, 109-688.

The garnishing creditor acquires no higher right to a fund sought to be reached by garnishment than had the garnishee at the time of the garnishment. Thus where a bank was garnished for funds of a depositor, held that as against the garnishing creditor it might be shown that the fund sought to be reached consisted of money belonging to an undisclosed principal, deposited by the debtor as his agent, but in his own name. Packer v. Crary, 121-388.

The execution creditor cannot by garnishment get any higher or better right as against the garnishee than the execution defendant himself at that time possessed. Streeter v. Gleason, 120-703.

The liability of the garnishee cannot be presumed; it must be affirmatively shown. To charge him upon his own answer his liability must clearly appear, and, if there be any reasonable doubt of such liability, he should be discharged. Ibid.

Where a garnishee had, after the filing of one answer admitting his liability, filed a second answer in which such liability was sufficiently denied, held that it was error to render judgment against him. Ibid.

It is the garnishee's duty to hold the property in the condition in which it was at the time of garnishment, and failing to do so, he is guilty of conversion, and judgment may be rendered against him for the amount of the claim. Dunning v. Bailey, 120-729.

Where appearance on the day specified in the notice is waived, judgment should not be rendered against the garnishee without notice to him as to the time, when and place where he may answer. Bower v. Hansen, 129-148.

Default may be entered against the garnishee who fails to personally appear and answer in response to notice, unless his answers have been taken by the sheriff.

SEC. 3936. Of officer, judgment debtor, executor, municipal corporation.

The assignee of a judgment cannot complain as against an officer on account of a levy on and sale of a judgment subject to the assignment on an execution against the assignor. Baker v. Mills, 108-490.

An administrator cannot be garnished for a portion of the property of the estate to which he is entitled personally on a claim due by him. Cassady v. Grimmelman, 108-695.

An administrator who has been garnished on a claim against the estate and defeats such garnishment by securing a settlement and discharge as administrator without payment or disposition of such claim renders himself individually liable. Geiger v. Gage, 111 N. W. 805.

SEC. 3943. Failure to appear or answer—cause shown.

A much slighter showing of diligence or excuse is needed to warrant the setting aside of a default against a garnishee than Lingenfelter v. Iowa Telephone Co., 132-211.

A garnishee is not bound to disclose at his peril what has been done with the property in the purchase of which the indebtedness sought to be reached was created. Bitzer v. Washburn, 121-462.

There is no provision for the garnishment of a guardian, and his immunity continues after the death of his ward until his guardianship has been settled. Pugh v. Jones, 112 N. W. 225.

The municipal corporation alone can plead exemption from garnishment proceedings. Tone v. Shankland, 110-525.

An action under Code § 4087 to subject an equitable interest to execution may have the effect of a garnishment proceeding, but is not controlled by the provisions of this section with reference to the garnishment of a municipal corporation. Ibid.

in ordinary cases of default. Bower v. Hansen, 129-148.

SEC. 3945. Answer controverted.

The trial of the issue of fact raised by the answer of a garnishee which is con-troverted, should be by ordinary proceedings. Neff v. Manuel, 121-706.

SEC. 3946. Judgment.

No judgment can properly be rendered against a garnishee until judgment has been rendered against the defendant. Hawarden State Bank v. Hessler, 131-691.

To charge the garnishee on his answer alone, no issue having been raised with reference thereto and no trial had, there must be in it a clear admission of a debt due to, or the possession of money or attachable property of the defendant. If the answer does not authorize a judgment under such a rule the plaintiff should take issue on the answer, so that a trial may be had and the rights of the parties determined. Kerr v. Edington, 106-68.

Where the answer of the garnishee is not controverted, his liability is to be determined as a matter of law from the statements of the answer alone without regard to the facts which may be brought to the attention of the court in another proceeding to which the garnishee is not a party. Bolton v. Bailey, 122-729.

Where a fund is deposited for the purpose of paying a judgment, the one receiving it for that purpose may be held liable for its payment in a garnishee proceeding brought under the judgment. Lingenfelter v. Iowa Telephone Co., 132-211.

Garnishment does not create a lien on the property in the hands of the garnishee, but gives the plaintiff a specific right over and above that of a mere general creditor, to the indebtedness of property, for the payment of his claim. Bowen v. Port Huron E. & T. Co., 109-255.

From the time of the service of notice, the garnishee is liable to plaintiff for the value of defendant's property in his hands subject to execution, and to the amount of all debts owing by him to the defendant and a judgment against the garnishee is prima facie a satisfaction pro tanto of plaintiff's claim against the defendant, and precludes subsequent proceedings by plaintiff against the defendant to that extent without a showing that plaintiff has obtained no valuable right by virtue of the garnishment, or has released the garnishee with the defendant's consent. Ibid.

On dismissal of garnishment proceedings, the garnishee is relieved of any liability sought to be enforced under such proceeding. O'Melia v. Hoffmeyer, 119-444.

That the garnishee has never been served with notice, or that the situs of the debt is in another state, may be urged as grounds for discharge of the garnishee. The right to ask for a discharge under this section cannot be tested by earlier decisions of the court under a statute not containing the provision as to discharge "for any other reason" than exemption from execution. Greaves v. Posner, 111-651.

SEC. 3947. Notice to defendant. Judgment against the garnishee shall not be entered until the principal defendant shall have had ten days' notice of the garnishment proceedings, to be served in the same manner as original notices. [18 G. A., ch. 58; C., '73, § 2975; R., § 3195; C., '51, § 1861.] [27 G. A., ch. 102, § 1.]

SEC. 3948. Pleading by defendant—discharge of garnishee. The defendant in the main action may, by a suitable pleading filed in the garnishment proceedings, set up facts showing that the debt or the property with which it is sought to charge the garnishee is exempt from execution, or for any other reason is not liable for plaintiff's claim, and if issue thereon be joined by the plaintiff, it shall be tried with the issues as to the garnishee's liability. If such debt or property, or any part thereof, is found to be thus exempt or not liable, the garnishee shall be discharged as to that part which is exempt or not liable. [27 G. A., ch. 103, § 1.]

SEC. 3950. Negotiable paper.

It is a general rule that the indorsee for value before maturity of a negotiable promissory note takes it free from any previous garnishment of which he did not have notice, but the attachment may be effected by levy upon the note directly. Nordyke v. Charlton, 108-414.

SEC. 3953. Appeal.

Proceedings by garnishment are discharged by reversal on appeal of the judgment under which the garnishment was issued, and are not restored by the recovery of another judgment on a new trial. Decatur v. Simpson, 119-488.

CHAPTER 3.

OF EXECUTIONS.

SECTION 3954. Of judgments or orders—attachments for contempt.

Where a judgment has been rendered by the court, or a confession of judgment has been filed on which the clerk should have entered judgment, the failure of the clerk may be cured by an order of the court for the entry of judgment nunc pro tunc, so as to support an execution which is issued in the meantime. Doughty v. Meek, 105-16.

Obedience to a self-executing judgment may be coerced by attachment as for contempt. State v. Cahill, 131-286.

SEC. 3955. Within what time—to other counties—but one. Executions may issue at any time before the judgment is barred by the statute of limitations; and upon those in the district and supreme courts, into any county which the party ordering may direct, but only one shall be in existence at the same time. When the plaintiff in judgment shall file in any court in which a judgment has been entered an affidavit made by himself, his agent or attorney, or by the officer to whom the execution was issued, that an outstanding execution has been lost or destroyed, the clerk of such court may issue a duplicate execution as of the date of the lost execution, which shall have the same force and effect as the original execution, and any levy made under the execution so lost shall have the same force and effect under the duplicate execution as under the original. When the lost execution shall have expired by limitation and such affidavit is filed, an execution may issue as it might if such lost execution had been duly returned. [C., '73, §§ 3025, 3027; R., §§ 3246, 3248; C., '51, § 1888.] [32 G. A., ch. 167.]

The filing of a transcript of a judgment in another county than that in which it was rendered does not make the judgment a judgment in the county where such transcript is filed, and execution can only issue from the county where the judgment was rendered. Brunk v. Moulton Bank, 121-14.

This section relates only to general executions, and does not render it improper for a court decreeing foreclosure of a chattel mortgage to direct a special execution into another county for the sale of a portion of the mortgaged property there situated. King v. Nelson, 120-606.

SEC. 3958. Entries in another county—duplicate returns. In case execution is issued to a county other than that in which judgment is rendered, and is levied upon real estate in such county, an entry thereof shall be made upon the incumbrance book of that county by the officer making it, showing the same particulars as are required in case of the attachment of real estate, which shall be bound from the time of such entry. And if real estate is sold under said execution said officer shall make return thereof in duplicate, one of which shall be appended to the execution and returned to the court from which it is issued, the other with a copy of the execution to the district court of the county in which said real estate is situated, which shall be filed by the clerk who shall make entries thereof in the sale book in the same manner as if such judgment had been rendered and execution issued from said court. [C., '73, § 3031; R., § 3249.] [28 G. A., ch. 122, § 1.]

Transcripts of judgments in a superior court cannot be first filed in the district court of another county than that in which the superior court is held, but can only be transferred to another county after having been filed in the district court of that county. Drahos v. Kopesky, 132-497.

SEC. 3964. Officer to receipt for—return.

The return of the execution does not affect the validity of garnishment proceedings already commenced thereunder. Dunham v. Bentley, 103-136.

SEC. 3965. Indorsement by officer.

Parol evidence is admissible to show facts not appearing by the officer's return. Weaver v. Stacy, 105-657.

SEC. 3968. Levy—how made and indorsed.

A creditor who has secured a levy on personal property cannot subsequently release such levy and rely on other property to the prejudice of other creditors. Valley Nat. Bank v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 116-541.

SEC. 3970. What property—no lien on personalty.

Where a remainder is contingent as to who shall take the property thereunder, it is not, before becoming vested, the subject of levy and sale under execution. Taylor v. Taylor, 118-407.

A contingent interest in land is not subject to levy and sale under execution. McDonald v. Bayard Sav. Bank, 123-413.

It constitutes fraud for the judgment creditor to insist on the sale of an entire tract of land which is reasonably capable of subdivision, for a trifling sum. An enormous disproportion between the value of the property sold and the sum to be raised is in itself ground from which the inference of fraud may be drawn. Fortin v. Sedgwick, 133-233.

Where a contract to convey has not become binding upon the vendee, and it is still optional with him whether or not he will accept conveyance thereunder, the vendor remains the owner of the land, and it is subject to execution for his debts. Sheehy v. Scott, 128-551.

The interest of a purchaser in land under a contract to convey may be levied on under execution. Thomassen v. De Goey, 133-278.

SEC. 3972. Persons indebted may pay.

The attorney for the judgment defendant being entrusted by his client with funds with which to satisfy the judgment cannot pay over the money to the sheriff as a debtor of the judgment defendant and keep alive the right of appealing from the judgment. Plover Mercantile Co. v. Peterson, 111 N. W. 944.

SEC. 3978. Lien—equitable proceedings—receiver.

The only method provided by statute for reaching the individual interest of a partner in satisfaction of a debt due by him is that pointed out in this section and section 3904, authorizing the levy of an attachment or execution by equitable proceedings to ascertain the nature and extent of the partner's interest. Hoaglin v. Henderson, 119-720.

SEC. 3979. Levies upon mortgaged personal property—payment or deposit.

An attachment levied on chattel property covered by mortgage, such levy being made with a view of contesting the validity of the mortgage, becomes an apparent lien upon all the property seized and not merely upon sufficient of said property to satisfy the mortgage; and if the mortgage is found to be invalid the attachment is effectual. In such case a junior mortgagee has no preference as to any part of the property necessary to pay the attachment claim. Geiershofer v. Nupuf, 106-374.

The procedure here provided for by tendering the amount of the chattel mortgage is not exclusive. When it is claimed that chattel mortgages on property which is being levied on under execution are fraudulent, a judgment creditor may proceed by garnishment, when the property is in the hands of a third person, or by creditor's bill or other equitable proceedings, when the property is in the possession of the judgment defendant; and when he does proceed by creditor's bill or other action in equity, he acquires such a right to or apparent lien upon the property as will support an application for the appointment of a receiver. Hirsch v. Israel, 106-498.

The statute provides for paying, or tendering payment, not for an assignment or purchase of the mortgage, but the attaching or execution creditor may purchase a prior mortgage, and then pay off the mortgage debt, and hold subject to his attachment or execution any surplus there may be. Webster City Grocery Co. v. Losey, 108-687.

The statutory provisions permitting levy on property covered by chattel mortgage under execution against the mortgagor do not require the mortgagee to take any steps for the purpose solely of shielding the mortgagor's property. It is only the mortgagee who can complain that the statutory provisions are not complied with. Collins v. Gregg, 109-506.

The provisions of these sections, relating to levies upon mortgaged chattels, are for the benefit of the mortgagee alone, and the mortgagor cannot take advantage of the failure of the execution creditor to comply with such provisions. Tollerton & Stetson Co. v. Skelton, 118-543.

In a receivership proceedings as to property which is subject to a chattel mortgage, in the absence of redemption from the mortgagee, the cost of receivership should not be taxed against the property so as to be taken out of the interest of the mortgagee who does not derive any advantage from the receivership proceeding. Frick v. Fritz, 124-529.

SEC. 3987. Statement of indebtedness.

No stated limit is fixed to the time within which the mortgagee is to furnish the written statement of his claim after demand is made therefor, and if the statement is furnished within a reasonable time after demand and before any sale under the levy has been made, it is sufficient. Becken v. Keystone Mfg. Jewelry Co., 130-208.

If the creditor within the ten days begins the necessary steps to secure the statement and make the proper payment or deposit, his right to proceed will not be lost if by no fault of his the matter is not consummated until after the expiration of that period. Ibid.

The omission from a statement of the amount of interest which is a matter of mere arithmetical computation, is immaterial. Ibid.

SEC. 3988. Contest as to validity or amount. If the right of the mortgagee to receive such or any sum is for any reason questioned by the levying creditor, he may, within ten days after levy, or after demand is made for a statement of the amount due as above provided, commence an action in equity or contest such right upon filing a bond in a penalty double the amount of such mortgage, or double the value of the property levied upon, conditioned either for the payment of any sum found due on said mortgage to the person entitled thereto, or for the value of the property levied upon; as the party ordering the levy may elect, with sureties to be approved by the clerk, and if such mortgagee is a non-resident or his residence is unknown, service may be made by publication as in other actions, but if such residence becomes known before final submission, the court may order personal service to be made. If commenced at law, the court may transfer the same to the equity side as in other cases. The court may appoint a receiver, and shall determine the amount due on the mortgage, the value of the property levied upon, and all other questions properly presented, and may continue and preserve or dismiss the lien of the levy, the costs to be taxed to the losing party as in other cases. If there are two or more mortgages, the creditor may admit the validity of one or more, and make the required deposit as to such, and contest the other, and where there are two or more such mortgages, each of which is questioned, a failure to establish the invalidity of all shall not defeat the rights of the levying creditor, but in such case the decree shall determine the priority of liens, and direct the order of payment out of the proceeds of the property which shall be sold under special execution to be awarded in said cause; but nothing in this chapter contained shall be construed to forbid or in any way affect the right of a creditor to contest in any other way the validity of any mortgage. [21 G. A., ch. 117, § 4.] [27 G. A., ch. 104, § 1.]

SEC. 3991. Indemnifying bond—notice of claim to property.

The officer is bound to levy execution on any personal property in the possession of defendant, unless he has received notice in writing, under oath, from some other person, his agent or attorney, that such property belongs to him, stating the nature of his interest therein, etc., and if the notice is insufficient, the claimant has no remedy as against the officer for the sale of the property. Donnelly v. Mitchell, 119-432.

A notice not signed or sworn to by the person claiming the property, or by any one authorized to act as his agent or attorney, and wholly misdescribing the interest of the claimant, held insufficient. Ibid.

Notice, however, is waived by the execution of an indemnifying bond, and insufficiency of notice is no defense to an action on the bond. Ibid.

The officer is protected from liability unless he has received notice in writing under oath from some other person that the property belongs to him, stating the nature of his interest, etc. The manner of receiving this notice is immaterial. It is enough if the officer making the levy actually receives it, but it is not sufficient to merely read the notice to the officer. It should be delivered to and receipted for by him. Frazier v. Hill, 123-116.

Such defect in service of the notice is not waived in an action of replevin to recover possession of the property by a third person claiming the right thereto if it is not made part of the petition. Ibid.

The provision that the claimant of the property levied on must give written notice of his claim thereto, has no application to a case where the defendant claims the property levied on as exempt. Whitney v. Gammon, 103-363.

Notice of ownership is wholly immaterial if the owner of the goods, seeking to replevy them from the possession of the officer, has no right to the goods on the ground that they are exempt from execution. Young v. Evans, 118-144.

Notice of ownership on the part of the execution defendant is not necessary in order to enable him to maintain an action of replevin against the officer for the recovery of property unlawfully seized. Upp v. Neuhring, 127-713.

The sworn notice of ownership must state the consideration for the chattel mortgage under which the plaintiff seeks to take the property from the sheriff in replevin. McIver v. Davenport, 110-740.

While the giving of an indemnifying bond may be a waiver of notice, a party who alleges the giving of notice cannot prove the fact by proving the execution of the bond. Waivers must be pleaded. Murray v. Thiessen, 114-657.

Notice in a particular case held sufficient as to description of the property and of the party from whom plaintiff acquired it, and the consideration paid therefor. Ibid.

Where the sheriff acknowledges service on the back of the original, and received a copy, held that the service of the notice was sufficient. Ibid.

A person other than the execution defendant, suing to recover possession of the property levied on from the officer, must plead the giving of the notice, requiring an indemnity bond. Shaw v. Tyrell, 129-556.

Notice of ownership by the attachment defendant is not necessary to enable him to maintain an action against the officer for the unlawful seizure of property in attachment. Upp v. Neuhring, 127-713.

SEC. 4008. Exemptions.

One who claims the property as exempt from execution has the burden of showing the facts constituting such exemption. Hays v. Berry, 104-455.

The owner of three teams of horses, any one of which might be claimed as exempt, has the privilege of determining which one he shall claim as exempt, and by executing a chattel mortgage on one of them he elects not to claim that one as exempt property. Therefore such mortgage is not required, under Code § 2906, to be joined in by the wife. Grover v. Younie, 110-446.

A bicycle habitually used by the debtor in earning his living is exempt. Roberts v. Parker, 117-389.

SEC. 4009. Pension money.

Pension money paid to the guardian of an insane pensioner remains under the jurisdiction and control of the United States and is therefore exempt from taxation and from execution, under the provisions of § 4747 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Manning v. Spry, 121-191.

The statute, as it now stands, operates to exempt property for which that acquired by pension money has been exchanged, but it does not exempt the increase or produce derived from the property which is exempt as procured with pension money. But where property acquired by pension money subject to an incumbrance is freed from incumbrance by

SEC. 4010. Homestead bought with pension money.

Property purchased with pension money of the husband, but at his direction conveyed to the wife and subsequently occupied by them as a homestead, is not exempt from debts of the wife contracted prior to its acquisition. Whinery v. McLeod, 127-11.

The notice is not for the benefit of the execution plaintiff. The purpose of such notice is to enable the sheriff to secure a proper indemnifying bond. When that purpose has been accomplished defects in the form or substance of the notice are waived. Mitchell v. McLeod, 127-733.

An indemnifying bond given the sheriff in an attachment suit covers the attorney's fees which the sheriff is compelled to pay in defending a suit for the conversion of the property levied upon. Cousins v. Paxton & Gallagher Co., 122-465.

The execution defendant may institute proceedings to recover from the officer property unlawfully levied upon under the writ, and is not required to bring his action on the indemnifying bond. Mitchell v. McLeod, 127-733.

One whose business is to travel from stand to stand with a stallion, which he uses for breeding purposes at the different places to which he is taken, and who takes care of such stallion, is a laborer, and the harness and cart used by him as a means of conveyance during such trips are exempt to him as the means with which he habitually earns his living. Krebs v. Nicholson, 118-134.

A cream separator is a tool or instrument of a farmer within the statutory provisions as to exemption of property from levy under execution. In re Hemstreet, 139 Fed. 958.

the application of the proceeds of a portion of the property itself, the remainder thus freed from incumbrance continues exempt. Smyth v. Hall, 126-627.

A party cannot be heard to say that the avails of a homestead are exempt because of his purpose to pay the purchase price with pension money, it not appearing that any part of the pension money was invested in the homestead. Lee v. Teeter, 106-37.

Matured crops which have been raised on the homestead procured with pension money are not exempt from execution. (Affirming S. C., 142 Fed. 620.) In re Sullivan, 148 Fed. 814.

The exemption of property acquired with pension money does not inure to the benefit of the heirs of the pensioner to whom such property descends. Beatty v. Wardell, 130-651.

SEC. 4011. Personal earnings.

There is no indication in this section of any intention to exclude from the time during which earnings shall be exempt the period of time during which litigation to recover such earnings may be pending. Chadwick v. Stout, 112-167.

By inducing his creditor to bring action as assignee against one who owes a claim to the debtor, the latter waives the right to set up an exemption on the ground that the claim is for earnings. Dowling v. Wood, 125-244.

SEC. 4017. Failure to claim exemption.

While the owner of property cannot waive the exemption thereof by surrendering the same to the sheriff, or failing to object to its levy, the owner is not precluded from making a selection before the levy of execution, or even before the rendition of judgment, and held that where the owner of three teams, any one of which might be claimed as exempt, gave a chattel mortgage on one of them, he thereby elected not to claim that team as exempt, and therefore the mortgage was valid, although the wife did not join therein. Grover v. Younie, 110-446.

Failure to insist upon the exemption at the time of levy does not defeat the right to such exemption. In re Hemstreet, 139 Fed. 958.

The widow becomes entitled on the death of the husband to property held by him exempt as head of the family, and does not waive her right by failing to object to the appraisal of such property as a part of the estate of her deceased husband. In re Estate of Ring, 132-216.

Notice by the debtor to the officer that the property was exempt from execution was not required by the provisions of Code of '73 to be under oath, nor signed by the debtor. Glover v. Narey, 92-286. But now see Code § 3991.

SEC. 4019. Debts owing for labor preferred.

The claims of laborers under this section have preference over mortgage liens. In re Byrne, 97 Fed. 762.

The provisions of Code §§ 4019, 4020 have no application to the proceeds of a sale of mortgaged personal property on foreclosure of the mortgage by advertisement and sale. Wells v. Kelley, 121-577.

The statute does not limit the rights of a laborer to those arising from labor performed in the betterment of property. Goodenow v. Foster, 108-508.

As to whether a creditor having a contract lien upon property acquired prior to the time labor is performed in or upon it has the right to insist that the labor claims be paid out of other property, which is subject to such lien, and not covered by the contract lien, quaere. Hart v. Nonpareil Printing & Pub. Co., 109-82.

The statute does not provide that laborers shall be creditors of a common debtor before being entitled to the preference here provided for. As between a mechanic's lien and the laborer's lien the laborer's is preferred, and it is immaterial that the mechanic's lien antedates the laborer's claims. Haw v. Burch, 110-234.

Where in an attachment proceeding a portion of the property of the debtor has been seized and laborers' claims have been filed which are liens upon such property under the statute, an intervening mortgagee of the property is not in a situation to claim on a subsequent intervention that other property of the debtor, not covered by the mortgage, has been released, and put beyond reach as to such laborers' claims, there being no allegations of collusion as between the attaching creditor and the holders of such liens. Anundsen v. Standard Printing Co., 129-200.

SEC. 4020. Statement of claim—allowance.

Where labor claimants procure execution to be levied on the property of a bankrupt on judgment recovered on their claims, which executions were dissolved by the bankruptcy adjudication, and the claimants failed to present any statement of their claims as required by the Iowa statute, held that they were not entitled to payment from the bankrupt's estate as against unsecured creditors. In re Burton Bros. Mfg. Co., 134 Fed. 157.

SEC. 4022. Priority.

In attachment proceedings by a landlord against his tenant a lien of the tenant's employe on the crops for wages is superior to that of the landlord. Stuart v. Twining, 112-154.

SEC. 4024. By posting or publication—compensation. Notice shall be given by posting up in at least three public places of the county, one of which shall be at the place where the last district court was held. In addition to which, in case of the sale of real estate, or where personal property to the amount of two hundred dollars or upwards is to be sold, there shall be two weekly publications of such notice in some newspaper printed in the county, to be selected by the party causing the notice to be given, and the compensation for such publication shall be the same as is provided by law for legal notices. [C., '73, §§ 3080, 3872; R., § 3311; C., '51, § 1906.] [31 G. A., ch. 9, § 11.]

SEC. 4025. Notice to defendant—sale set aside. If the debtor is in actual occupation and possession of any part of the land levied on, the officer having the execution shall, at least twenty days previous to such sale, serve him with written notice, stating that the execution is levied on said land, and mentioning the time and place of sale, which notice shall be served in the manner provided by section three thousand five hundred eighteen (3518) of the code; and sales made without the notice required in this section may be set aside on motion made at the same or the next term thereafter. [C., '73, § 3087; R., § 3318.] [31 G. A., ch. 157.]

SEC. 4027. Penalty for selling without notice. An officer selling without the notice prescribed in sections four thousand and twenty-three (4023), four thousand and twenty-four (4024), and four thousand and twenty-six (4026) of the code, shall forfeit one hundred dollars to the defendant in execution, in addition to the actual damages sustained by either party; but the validity of the sale is not thereby affected. [C., '73, § 3081; R., § 3312; C., '51, § 1907.] [28 G. A., ch. 123, § 1.]

SEC. 4028. Time and manner of sale.

In general: A judgment creditor may cause an execution to be issued and the interest of the judgment debtor to be sold before that interest has been judicially ascertained. Sheppard v. Messenger, 107-717.

One who is in possession of land claiming a title thereto may maintain an injunction to prevent the sale of such land under an execution against one having no interest therein. The plaintiff in such case is not required to make out a perfect title in himself. Moore v. Kleppish, 104-319.

Laches on the part of creditors in bringing action to set aside an execution sale as fraudulent or irregular will bar their rights. Hansen's Empire Fur Factory v. Teabout, 104-360.

Evidence held insufficient to show that the purchaser at a sheriff's sale was a purchaser in trust for the debtor. Severson v. Gremm, 124-729.

Irregularities in the method of conducting the sale do not render the sale void and cannot be taken advantage of in a proceeding by injunction to restrain the issuance of a deed. Thomassen v. DeGoey, 133-278.

Caveat emptor: One who bids in the property at execution sale under full knowledge of all the material facts cannot afterwards have the sale set aside. The rule of caveat emptor applies to such sales, and they will not be disturbed if there be nothing more than a mistake of law or forgetfulness on the part of the bidder. Crawford v. Foreman, 127-661.

A purchaser under judicial sale, even though he has received a deed, is subject as to the validity of his title to an attack on the validity of the judgment in pursuance of which the deed is executed. English v. Otis, 125-555.

The maxim of caveat emptor applies to a sale under execution and the purchaser ordinarily acquires no better title than the debtor could have conveyed at the time the lien of the judgment attached. On the other hand the purchaser is ordinarily to be protected against outstanding equities of which he had no notice, actual or constructive, before the sale. Rippe v. Badger, 125-725.

Thus the purchaser of the interest of one tenant in common takes such interest free from the obligation to contribute to expenses previously incurred by the cotenant of which the purchaser had no knowledge. But if he has knowledge of such previous expenditures the duty to contribute attaches to his purchaser. Ibid.

Sale en masse: A sale of a tract of 100 acres of land without being subdivided and offered in separate tracts is subject to be set aside on proper application. State Bank v. Brown, 128-665.

In general, inadequacy of the consideration alone is not sufficient evidence of fraud to justify the setting aside of an execution sale on that ground. Jonas v. Weires, 111 N. W. 453.

It is not a ground for setting aside the sale that the interest of the execution debtor in the real property levied upon greatly exceeds in value the amount of the judgment, and that the property is not offered in sub-divisions. The purchaser is not required to bid upon the undivided interest of the execution debtor in a portion of the property in which he has such undivided interest. Ibid.

SEC. 4029. Officer may postpone.

Where property which is indivisible is bid for by a judgment creditor in the amount of his judgment, which is much less than the value of the property, the sheriff may adjourn the sale for want of

Where the property is indivisible the fact that the bid is for a small amount as compared with its value does not render the sale invalid, nor require that it be set aside on motion; a judgment creditor having a lien on property much greater in value than the amount of his judgment is not bound to bid more than his judgment in order to render the sale valid. State Savings Bank v. Shinn, 130-365.

bidders, but he is not bound to do so where all the proceedings are in strict conformity to the law. State Savings Bank v. Shinn, 130-365.

SEC. 4033. When purchaser fails to pay.

No one but the judgment holder or his attorney may proceed against a bidder at an execution sale who fails to pay the amount of his bid when demanded. If neither of these persons do so, then it is the duty of the sheriff to resell the property. At any rate, the sheriff has some discretion in the matter, and unless the judgment creditor objects may refuse a bid, or having accepted it, may, before the transaction is closed, repudiate the same, or authorize its withdrawal, or a re-sale of the property. State Bank v. Brown, 128-665.

One who has purchased property from the mortgagor and assumed to pay the mortgage indebtedness is not entitled to question the right of the sheriff to refuse to enforce a bid made by the mortgagee at the foreclosure sale. Ibid.

There may be cases where the costs should be required to be paid as a condition to the annulment of a bid, but where no additional costs are involved in a re-sale the payment of costs should not be imposed as a condition for setting aside the bid. Ibid.

SEC. 4034. Sales vacated.

To authorize the setting aside of a sale of real estate on which the judgment was not a lien at the time of levy it is sufficient that the fact was unknown to the purchaser. Actual knowledge is contemplated. Rosenberger v. Hawker, 127-521.

The existence of a homestead interest which renders property exempt from sale will be sufficient ground for setting aside the sale if the purchaser has no knowledge of the material facts on which the homestead exemption is claimed. Ibid.

SEC. 4036. Subjecting real estate of deceased judgment debtor.

An execution issued after the death of the judgment plaintiff is void unless there is an indorsement of the death of the plaintiff as required by statute. The failure of the defendant to complain for want of such indorsement will not be a waiver of the objection. Dunham v. Bentley, 103-136.

Creditors who have filed their claims against the estate cannot bring action to set aside a conveyance by the deceased as fraudulent; such action must be brought by the administrator. Ibid.

On the death of the judgment debtor the execution creditor is required to have his right to an execution renewed, which can only be done in the court where the judg-

A judgment creditor does not lose his lien by not filing his judgment as a claim for payment by the administrator. Boyd v. Collins, 70-296.

SEC. 4040. Mutual judgments—set off.

Mutual judgments, executions from which are in the hands of the same officer, may be set off, the one against the other, except as to costs. Schnitker v. Schnitker, 109-349.

SEC. 4045. Redemption—by debtor—appeal or stay.

Where an execution for a partnership debt is levied on the real property of one partner, an agreement by another partner that the purchaser at execution sale shall immediately take possession of the premises and hold them during the period for redemption, is not binding on the partner whose property is sold, in the absence of express or implied authority to make such contract. Heins v. Tamblyn, 110-478.

The right of redemption and the right of possession in the judgment defendant are separate or independent rights, the one not being necessarily involved in the other, and the sale of the right of redemption made under an execution in another case does not entitle the purchaser at such sale of the right of redemption to the right of possession, which remains in the execution defendant, and may be transferred by him as an independent right. Hartman Mfg. Co. v. Luse, 121-492.

Where the very object of the appeal is to secure a right of redemption, the taking of the appeal does not waive the right. Kilmer v. Gallaher, 116-666.

An equitable right of redemption in the mortgagor continues until cut off by the expiration of the statutory period of redemption under a foreclosure sale, and during the period for redemption the mortgagor may maintain an action in equity to require the mortgagee to account for profits which should be applied to the satisfaction of the mortgage debt. If the mortgagee buying in the property at the sale has taken possession without the assent of the redemptioner and received rents and profits, or has converted the property to his own use, he may be compelled to account in an equitable action for redemption. Dolan v. Midland Blast Furnace Co., 126-254.

The debtor may transfer his right to redeem so as to authorize his grantee to make the same redemption which the debtor himself might have made, and such right to redeem passes by a sale under execution as effectually as by a voluntary conveyance. Kendig v. McCall, 133-180; Gustafson v. Durst, 124-203.

The debtor may, pending the period of redemption, assign his right to redeem and the assignee making redemption acquires title free from the claims of general lien holders who have been made parties to the proceeding and have failed to redeem within the time prescribed therein. This rule is applicable to a grantee taking title from a mortgagor after foreclosure and before sale. Cooper v. Maurer, 122-321.

A creditor to whom the real estate has been conveyed by an absolute deed for the purpose of securing a debt, is not a vendee in such sense as to be allowed to make redemption during the last three months of the year succeeding the sale. Robertson v. Moline-Milburn-Stoddard Co., 106-414.

SEC. 4046. By creditors.

The provision for redeeming by one creditor from another has no application to a case where there is but one creditor. A person though holding different claims against the debtor cannot redeem from himself. Stephens v. Mitchell, 103-65.

Where a creditor procures an assignment of a certificate of sale and obtains a sheriff's deed thereon, he no doubt holds the property absolutely, but if he simply takes an assignment of the certificate at a time when he has no right to make redemption therefrom, and thereby extinguishes in his own interest the lien of the judgment under which the sale is made, the property remains subject to other judgment liens. People's Sav. Bank v. McCarthy, 119-586.

The judgment creditor, in order to acquire the right of the certificate holder by taking an assignment of the certificate, must do so within nine months from the sale, and on failure to do so his lien may be divested by a sheriff's deed. If, after the time allowed to him for making redemption, he discharges the sale by taking an assignment of the certificate, he does not thereby acquire title to the property free from other judgment liens. Ibid.

A judgment creditor having no lien is not entitled to make redemption, and a junior judgment creditor failing to redeem from a sale by a senior creditor loses his right to redeem from a subsequent foreclosure sale under a mortgage which is prior to the liens of both judgments. Francestown Sav. Bank v. Silver, 122-685.

A lien holder whose right to redeem from execution sale has expired cannot by taking an assignment of the certificate of sale, acquire any other right as against another lien holder entitled to redeem than that which the holder of the certificate had to receive the redemption money. Gustafson v. Durst, 124-203.

A junior judgment creditor has no right to redeem after the expiration of the lien of his judgment. Hansen's Empire Fur Factory v. Teabout, 104-360.

One who has caused an execution to be levied on real property under a judgment which has ceased to be a lien thereon, is by virtue of such levy entitled to make statutory redemption of the property from a prior foreclosure sale. Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Maxwell, 119-672.

A junior judgment lien holder has no redress as against a sale of the property under a senior judgment, save by statutory redemption. He cannot allow the sale to proceed to a deed without making such redemption and afterwards exercise any right of redemption. Wood v. Rankin, 119-448.

Those who are made parties in an action of foreclosure are required to protect their claims either by bidding up the property to a fair value at the sale or by redemption from such sale within the prescribed period, and a lien holder who neglects to avail himself of such opportunity to enforce his lien thereby abandons any further claim to the property, and the mortgagor may convey his equity or right of redemption unburdened by the claims of any party to the suit save only the right and claim of the holder of the certificate of sale. Witham v. Blood, 124-695.

SEC. 4048. Senior creditor.

One holding a valid certificate of tax sale superior to the claims of the execution creditor may be made a party defendant in the proceeding to foreclose. Browne v. Kiel, 117-316.

SEC. 4050. Terms.

Where the purchaser at execution sale, pending the time for redemption, takes the fee simple title by warranty deed from the debtor, he merges in such title his right as holder of the certificate of purchase and also any right which he might have on account of an unsatisfied portion of his judgment. German Bank v. Iowa Iron Works, 123-516.

SEC. 4051. Redemptions by holder of title—where made. The terms of redemption, when made by the title holder, shall be the payment into the clerk's office of the amount of the certificate, and all sums paid by the holder thereof in effecting redemptions, added to the amount of his own lien, or the amount he has credited thereon, if less than the whole, with interest at contract rate on the certificate of sale from its date, and upon sums so paid by way of redemption from date of payment, and upon the amount credited on his own judgment from the time of said credit, in each case including costs. All redemptions made under the provisions of this chapter shall be made in the county where the sale is had. [26 G. A., ch. 65; C., '73, § 3106; R., § 3336; C., '51, § 1930.] [28 G. A., ch. 124, § 1.]

A creditor can only redeem by payment to the clerk, as provided in Code § 4056, and the acquisition of certificates of sales or other liens does not amount to redemption. Jack v. Cold, 114-349.

SEC. 4056. Credit on judgment.

In case of redemption by a creditor within nine months from the date of the sale no affidavit stating the amount still unpaid and due on the redemptioner's claim, under the provisions of § 3118 of the Code of '73 was required. That section had relation to redemptions made after the expiration of nine months. Fry v. Warfield-Howell-Watt Co., 105-559.

Under the provisions of the Code of '51, held that there was no requirement as to any other notice of the amount for which the creditor was willing to hold the land than the entry in the sale book, and therefore no warrant for the substitution of any other notice, though it might seem better than that fixed. Meredith v. Peterson, 108-551.

Under this section as it now stands redemption can only be made by payment to the clerk, and a lien holder purchasing certificates of sale or acquiring other liens does not thereby make redemption except by such payment as is here contemplated. Jack v. Cold, 114-349.

Under the statutes as they existed before the adoption of the present Code, a creditor who had by acquiring liens become a redemptioner at the expiration of the six months during which the debtor had the exclusive right to redeem, thereby effected redemption, and held that the effect of this redemption was not destroyed by the subsequent adoption of the Code. Ibid.

SEC. 4057. Contest determined.

This provision is not exclusive of the remedy by tendering the necessary amount and then asserting the right resulting from such redemption in a court by proper proceedings. The purpose of the statute is to enable the person desiring to redeem to test his right in a summary way. Kendig v. McCall, 133-180.

SEC. 4061. Transfer of debtor's rights.

This provision is applicable to a conveyance of the mortgaged premises by the mortgagor after foreclosure decreed and before sale. Cooper v. Maurer, 122-321. And see notes to § 4045.

SEC. 4062. Deed.

Where the purchaser understands that an entire tract of land is being sold and takes possession thereof under his deed his occupancy is adverse as to the entire tract, although it appears that under the description by metes and bounds contained in the return of the writ reciting the levy a small portion of the tract is not included. Severson v. Gremm, 124-729.

The holder of a sheriff's deed does not acquire an independent title, but a derivative one, immediately from the sheriff, but mediately from the debtor, and generally speaking he gets no other or greater title than the judgment debtor had. An agreement entered into between the creditor and the debtor whose right of redemption has not yet expired, that the creditor shall take title as security for the judgment debt, although made in parol, may be enforced, as it gives rise to an implied or resulting trust. McElroy v. Allfree, 131-112.

The description by which property is sold under execution need not be as accurate as that required where lands are sold for taxes. Every reasonable intentment is made in favor of judicial sales in order to secure the objects which they are intended to accomplish. McCormick v. McCormick Harv. Mach. Co., 120-593.

Under Code § 3842, relating to the power of a judge to direct an officer of the court in relation to the discharge of his duties, a judge may, in vacation, make an order with reference to the execution of a deed in pursuance of a sale. Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Maxwell, 119-672.

SEC. 4063. Recording of deed.

Although the deed is not placed on record until more than sixty days after the expiration of the full time for redemption, one who is not a subsequent purchaser in good faith for value cannot complain. Hannan v. Seidentopf, 113-658.

SEC. 4071-a. Exemption from garnishment. Wages earned outside of this state by a non-resident of this state, and payable outside of this state, shall in all cases where the garnishing creditor is a non-resident of this state, be exempt from attachment or garnishment where the cause of action arises outside of this state; and it shall be the duty of the garnishee in such cases to plead such exemption, unless the defendant shall be personally served with original notice in this state. [30 G. A., ch. 124.]

CHAPTER 4.
OF PROCEEDINGS AUXILIARY TO EXECUTION.SECTION 4084. Compensation of officers and witnesses.

The compensation of a receiver should be based upon the value of his services in connection with the property subject to the receivership, and not on their value generally. Stearns Paint Mfg. Co. v. Comstock, 121-430.

SEC. 4087. Equitable proceedings.

These sections of the Code with reference to an equitable levy are applicable to a case where the defendant has possession of the property, as well as to a case where it is in possession of a third person, and a receiver may be appointed in such case. Even if the sections are not applicable in such a case a creditor has a right to bring a suit in equity, independent of statute, for the purpose of subjecting property to the payment of his judgment, and such a suit would be a sufficient basis for the appointment of a receiver. Hirsch v. Israel, 106-498.

The provisions of this and following sections as to subjecting equitable interests in real estate are declaratory of the common law and should be construed with reference to the established rules thereof. Therefore, held that a creditor seeking relief must first have recovered judgment which would be a lien on real estate. Peterson v. Gittings, 107-306.

An equitable proceeding auxiliary to execution cannot be maintained to enforce a liability which has not become perfect in favor of the debtor as against the one sought to be charged in the proceeding. Cushman v. Carbondale Fuel Co., 122-656.

A creditors' bill is not maintainable unless legal remedies have proven ineffectual, or there is an affirmative showing of insolvency. Kalona Savings Bank v. Eash, 133-190.

As garnishment cannot be maintained against an administrator to subject property of deceased in his hands, in which he is entitled to share personally, to the payment of a personal judgment against him, equitable proceedings to subject the property to the payment of such judgment may be maintained. Cassady v. Grimmelman, 108-695.

A municipal corporation may be made defendant in such proceedings. Tone v. Shankland, 110-525.

SEC. 4089. Lien created.

Under this section it is not necessary to serve notice of such proceedings against the judgment debtor, where the creditor had actual notice of the filing of the petition. Shumaker v. Davidson, 116-569.

The finding of a proceeding auxiliary to execution is not binding on one who has no notice thereof. Green v. Forney, 111 N. W. 976.

The rule announced in the last annotation to this section in the Code, citing Ware v. Purdy, 60 N. W. 526, was changed on rehearing of said case. See S. C. 95-667.

TITLE XX.

OF PROCEDURE TO REVERSE, VACATE OR MODIFY JUDGMENTS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF PROCEEDINGS TO REVERSE, VACATE OR MODIFY JUDGMENTS IN THE TRIAL COURTS.

SECTION 4091. Judgment vacated or modified—grounds.

In general: Under these sections a proceeding to vacate a judgment because of irregularity in obtaining it must be by motion made before the second day of the next succeeding term. (See Code § 4093.) Priestman v. Priestman, 103-320.

In a proceeding to annul a judgment the parties to the judgment should be made parties to the proceeding. Day v. Goodwin, 104-374; Fulliam v. Drake, 105-615.

The relief herein provided for can be secured only in accordance with the statutory method, and so long as such relief is obtainable at law equity will not interfere. Johnson v. Nash-Wright Co., 121-173.

The proceeding provided for is a proceeding in the original action, and not by a new action. Ibid.

A modification of a judgment, secured as the result of proceedings under this section, will not defeat an appeal already taken from the judgment as first rendered. Culbertson v. Salinger, 111-447.

An appeal from an order for a new trial made under the provisions of this and the following sections is not triable de novo, but on assignments of error, and if there be any conflict in the evidence, or in the inferences fairly deducible therefrom, the supreme court will assume such a state of facts, reasonably consistent with the evidence, as will support the conclusion reached. Sitzer v. Fenzloff, 112-491.

The provisions of this and the following sections are not recognized in the federal courts. Manning v. German Ins. Co., 107 Fed. 52.

The causes for a new trial recognized in this section are in general of the nature of those errors which could have been corrected by the use of a writ of error coram vobis. Ibid.

Must be after term: A motion to correct a decree already entered and made at the same term does not come within the provisions of this and the following sections. McConnell v. Avey, 117-282.

The provisions of this section with reference to relief against a judgment after the close of the term at which it was rendered, have no reference to a case where application to set aside a judgment or order is made during the term at which the judgment is entered. Streeter v. Gleason, 120-703.

And further see notes to Code § 244 in this supplement.

Discretionary: The granting of a new trial on petition is peculiarly a matter of discretion with the trial court, and in the absence of a showing of abuse the ruling will not be disturbed. Tschohl v. Machinery Mut. Ins. Assn., 126-211.

The matter of granting a new trial under this section is left largely to the sound discretion of the trial court, and unless an abuse of such discretion is shown its finding will not be disturbed on appeal. Bank of Stratton v. Dixon, 112-621.

In criminal case: The provision with reference to petition for a new trial after judgment has no application in criminal cases. State v. Hayden, 131-1.

Grounds, fraud: A motion to vacate a judgment without charging fraud or illegality in obtaining it cannot be made under this section. Manning v. Nelson, 107-34.

Fraud in procuring a judgment by default without having obtained jurisdiction may be taken advantage of otherwise than by application for a new trial within one year. Culbertson v. Salinger, 122-12.

Under the evidence in a particular case held that the facts did not show fraud in procurement of the original judgment such as to require the granting of a new trial. McCormick v. McCormick, 109-700.

Where judgment is entered on default against a party who has been induced to refrain from making defense on the assurance that judgment was sought only as against his co-defendants, he may have relief in equity, even after the expiration of the year. Beck v. Juckett, 111-339.

The fraud which will justify the setting aside of a judgment in a collateral proceeding must be something extrinsic and collateral to the question examined and determined in the action. Perjury or false swearing committed in procuring the judgment will not be sufficient. Mahoney v. State Ins. Co., 133-570; Dooley v. Gladiator Consol. Gold Mines & M. Co., 109 N. W. 864.

False swearing or perjury in behalf of the successful party is not alone a sufficient ground for setting aside or vacating a judgment; but if accompanied by any fraud extrinsic or collateral to the matter involved in the original case sufficient to justify a conclusion that but for such fraud the result would have been different, a new trial may be granted. Graves v. Graves, 132-199.

Fraud in pleading a statement of facts on which relief is asked may be so flagrant as to require the setting aside of a judgment by default, but a mere misstatement of facts alone will not warrant the setting aside of a judgment for fraud. Ruppin v. McLachlan, 122-243.

Where fraud relied upon as a ground for a new trial is not discovered within a year after the rendition of judgment, courts of equity have jurisdiction to grant a new trial or modification of the decree; but the grounds for such an application must be such as would have warranted the new trial had application been made within a year. Graves v. Graves, 132-199.

Proceedings against infant or insane person: A judgment against an infant without defense by a guardian is clearly erroneous, and that fact may be made the ground for granting a new trial under this section. Wise v. Schloesser, 111-16.

If the fact of insanity is brought to the court's attention, the mental condition of the party as well as the error in failing to require appearance by guardian, appears in the record, and the correction must be by appeal. But if the fact of insanity exists without being brought to the attention of the court, a judgment by default involves error within the meaning of the statute, which will be a ground for setting aside the judgment. Hawley v. Griffin, 121-667.

A person is of unsound mind, within the provisions of this subdivision, when so weak and infirm mentally as not to be capable of exercising the judgment necessarily required in the management of his ordinary affairs. Garretson v. Hubbard, 110-7.

The right of an insane person to have a judgment against him set aside on petition within a year after regaining mental capacity is an absolute right which no one can waive for him, nor can such right be affected or abridged by decree or judicial proceedings. Pollock v. Milburn, 112-528.

A second application for new trial will not be granted when the condition of the party is practically the same as when the first application was denied. McBride v. McClintock, 108-326.

If the guardian ad litem colludes with the adverse party to suppress the facts, or is grossly negligent in interposing a defense for the infant, judgment may be set aside. But in the absence of fraud, actual or constructive, the discovery that the guardian did not introduce evidence of facts which were ascertainable on the trial is not a ground for setting aside the judgment. Harris v. Bigley, 111 N. W. 432.

Casualty and misfortune: A new trial will not be granted on the ground of casualty and misfortune in a case where judgment was rendered by default against a corporation, where it appears that the secretary of the corporation, upon whom service was made, was not charged with the management of its affairs, and did not take steps to have a defense made to the action. Sioux City Vin. Mfg. Co. v. Boddy, 108-538.

A client is only chargeable with the negligence of his attorney when that negligence may be imputed to him, that is, when by the exercise of care on his part he could have avoided the consequences of such negligence. The client has a right to rely on the attorney to inform him as to the time of the trial and as to anything required for the purpose of making a defense, and if, by reason of the negligence of the attorney in failing to give such information, and without fault on his part, he is prevented from making defense, there is such unavoidable casualty or misfortune as to entitle him to a new trial. Peterson v. Koch, 110-19.

An allegation of sickness of counsel at the time of a trial will not be sufficient ground for setting aside the judgment of a petition for a new trial, where it does not appear that a continuance might have not been had if the facts had been presented in proper time and found sufficient.

Tschohl v. Machinery Mut. Ins. Assn., 126-211; 101 N. W. 740.

The mere fact that a party is beyond the reach of his attorneys so that he does not receive notice of the time when the case is set for hearing, and a judgment is entered against him by default, the court having afforded counsel reasonable opportunity to secure the attendance of their client, held not to entitle such party to a new trial after judgment by default, where he had, with knowledge that the case was likely to be called for trial, omitted to advise his counsel of his whereabouts so that they could notify him as to the time when the case would be heard. Iowa Savings & Loan Assn. v. Kent, 109 N. W. 773.

The matter of granting a new trial under such circumstances rests peculiarly within the sound discretion of the trial court, and its action will not be interfered with on appeal save where a manifest abuse of discretion is made to appear. Ibid.

It is doubtful whether the misfortune incident to the reporter's failure to furnish a transcript of the evidence in an equity case in time to enable the appellant to make his appeal is such unavoidable casualty as to require the granting of a new trial in order that the evidence may be taken and preserved. At any rate negligence of appellant in attempting to procure such transcript will be a ground for denying relief. McKinley v. McKinley, 123-574.

Where judgment was rendered against a married woman on substituted service made by leaving a copy with her husband at his place of residence during a time when she was not actually residing with him, although her abandonment was temporary only, and it appeared that on her return he failed to notify her of the fact of such service, held that there was such casualty and misfortune as to warrant the granting of a new trial. Galvin v. Dailey, 109-332.

The fact that defendant's wife, with whom a copy of the original notice was left, was unable to understand the English language, will not constitute such casualty as to entitle the defendant to a new trial. Hass v. Leverton, 128-79.

A judgment entered on written stipulation of the parties cannot be set aside under this section on account of unavoidable casualty and misfortune. Mains v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 113-395.

Newly discovered evidence: Regardless of whether application for new trial

SEC. 4092. New trial after term.

A petition in the nature of a bill of review asking a modification of an injunction previously granted does not stand denied by operation of law, as would a petition to reverse, vacate or modify the

on the ground of newly discovered evidence made after the term should be by petition or by motion, held that a petition containing all the essential allegations of a motion was sufficient. Hunter v. Porter, 124-351.

The granting of a new trial on petition on the ground of newly discovered evidence is peculiarly within the discretion of the trial court and will not be interfered with on appeal where an abuse of discretion does not appear. Chambliss v. Hass, 125-484.

A new trial on account of newly discovered evidence should not be denied on the ground that such evidence is cumulative if it tends to show a new and important fact in the case. State v. Lowell, 123-427.

In the absence of any showing of accident, fraud, mistake or casualty in the presentation of the evidence on the trial, there cannot be a new trial on account of newly discovered evidence. Kringle v. Kringle, 123-365.

Reasonable diligence must be alleged and proved in order to obtain a new trial on petition, and if the ground is newly discovered evidence the allegations of the petition should show the facts constituting reasonable diligence, but a general allegation of diligence will be sufficient as against a demurrer. If the defendant desires more specific statement of the diligence used he should move therefor. Scott v. Hawk, 105-467.

Application for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence may be made at any time either at or after the term at which the verdict sought to be set aside was rendered and until the expiration of one year from the entry of judgment on such a verdict. Hunter v. Porter, 124-351.

No other grounds: The specification herein of the grounds for setting aside a judgment and granting a new trial covers the whole ground of vacating or modifying judgments after the term at which they are rendered, and is applicable to the granting of such relief in courts of equity as well as in courts of law. Ruppitt v. McLachlan, 122-343.

It is questionable whether equity will grant relief from a judgment on any grounds excepting those enumerated in this section, although it might, upon a proper showing, entertain an application after the expiration of the year within which, by the terms of Code § 4094, proceedings at law must be commenced. Mains v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 113-395.

judgment. Denby v. Fie, 106-299.

As to sufficiency of showing of diligence where the ground relied upon is newly discovered evidence, see notes to preceding section.

SEC. 4093. Motion to correct mistake or irregularity.

Under this section the remedy is by motion filed within a year; otherwise relief is to be sought by petition in equity. Manning v. Nelson, 107-34.

Motion to retax attorney's fee allowed in a judgment on foreclosure of a mortgage does not come within the provisions of this section. Perry v. Kaspar, 113-268.

SEC. 4094. Petition.

Where the application for a new trial is made after the time allowed for granting new trials on motion it should be by petition, but if no objection on that ground is made the form of application will be immaterial. State v. Stevenson, 104-50.

Proceedings for correction of a judgment on grounds enumerated under this section, are to be by petition, and the proceedings are to be commenced as those in any other original action. Perry v. Kaspar, 113-268.

After the expiration of the statutory period within which the party may have relief by asking a new trial, a court of equity may give such relief as the party may show himself entitled to. Johnson v. Nash-Wright Co., 121-173.

The provisions of this section relating to the setting aside of judgments and granting new trials, for grounds not available or discovered during the term, has no relation to an action in equity to set aside a void judgment constituting an apparent lien on plaintiff's real property. Iowa Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Chase, 118-51.

While in an ordinary action it is held that a motion for new trial after the term cannot be based on grounds that have been raised by an appeal in which the appellant has been unsuccessful on account of defect in his method of procedure, this rule has no application to new trial applied for within one year after the judgment in an action for the recovery of real property as authorized by Code § 4205. Bevering v. Smith, 121-607.

The pendency of an appeal from a judgment will not deprive the trial court of the right to entertain a petition for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, nor will an affirmance of appeal prevent the granting of such new trial. If the ruling on appeal is not determinative of the rights of the parties as disclosed in the proceedings for a new trial, failure to procure a continuance or stay of the appellate proceedings will not affect the right to a new trial. Chambliss v. Hass, 125-484.

A new trial cannot be granted on petition after the term, where the grounds relied on were known to the petitioner before the trial of the original action. Connell v. Connell, 119-602.

The action must be commenced within the year by service of the notice on the defendant, as provided in Code § 3514, relating to the commencement of actions, and not merely by placing the notice in the hands of the sheriff, with intent that it be immediately served, as provided by Code § 3450 with reference to the commencement of an action under the provisions of the general statute of limitations. Hawley v. Griffin, 121-667.

SEC. 4095. Proceedings.

The trial of a petition for new trial is to be as an ordinary action, whether the original case is at law or in equity, unless the parties in some way assent to a trial in equity. Markley v. Owen, 102-492; Scott v. Hawk, 105-467.

SEC. 4096. Valid defense.

The proper inquiry on an application to set aside a judgment is not whether defendant had a technical defense to plaintiff's action in that form, but rather whether he could show facts reasonably indicating that he was not indebted to the plaintiff. The purpose of the statute is to avoid opening up a judgment unless it appears to be in the interests of justice to do so. Bank of Stratton v. Dixon, 105-148.

Before setting aside the judgment under the statutory provision for vacating a judgment and granting a new trial after the term and within one year, the party seeking relief from the judgment must make a prima facie showing of facts stating a defense to the cause of action on which judgment was rendered. Johnson v. Nash-Wright Co., 121-173.

The party seeking to set aside the judgment must make it appear that he was not defeated in the original action by reason of any negligence on his part or on the part of his attorney. Ibid.

As alleging matters constituting a defense to the action, a mere general denial of liability is not sufficient. Ibid.

The statute does not contemplate the introduction of a new cause of action by the plaintiff nor of a counter claim by the defendant. If a new trial is granted the defendant has the right to interpose any defense he may have had to plaintiff's cause of action, but not to interpose a counterclaim or cross demand not set up in the original action. Hawley v. Griffin, 121-667.

To secure the setting aside of a judgment by default on application made after the term and within one year, the applicant must show that he has a defense to the cause of action. Culbertson v. Salinger, 122-12.

The showing of defense must be such a state of facts as will likely defeat the claim upon which the judgment was based. Ibid.

It is a sufficient reason for upholding the order refusing a new trial after term, if the applicant makes no showing of a good defense to the cause of action. Tschohl v. Machinery Mut. Ins. Assn., 126-211.

Minority of the defendant in an action for damages is no ground for defense, and although no defense was interposed in the original action by a guardian for such minor, the judgment will not be set aside at the suit of the minor without a showing of defense. Reints v. Engle, 130-726.

A defense to the action which would not have been available to the defendant at the time judgment was rendered cannot be interposed as a sufficient showing of defense when a new trial is asked. Dooley v. Gladiator Consol. Gold Mines & M. Co., 109 N. W. 864.

CHAPTER 2.

OF PROCEDURE IN THE SUPREME COURT.

SECTION 4100. Appellate jurisdiction over judgments.

Jurisdiction: Generally speaking, appellate tribunals derive their jurisdiction over any case from the law, and the parties cannot by consent confer jurisdiction. Moreover, when the legislature prescribes the method for the exercise of the right of appeal or supervision, such method is exclusive, and the appellate court cannot modify the action of the trial court except as thus authorized. Home Sav. & T. Co. v. District Court, 121-1.

Where there is no other remedy for reviewing the action of the trial court, appellate tribunals may investigate the validity of the action of the lower court in a certiorari proceeding. Ibid.

From what judgments: Statutes giving the right to appeal are uniformly held to apply to such judgments only as are rendered subsequent to their enactment. Richardson v. Fitzgerald, 132-253.

Abstract questions: The supreme court will not entertain an appeal for the purpose of deciding merely abstract questions. Berry v. Des Moines, 115-44.

Right no longer existing: An injunction denied in the lower court will not be granted on appeal where the right to be protected no longer exists, although it may have existed and the injunction may have been a proper remedy at the time of the trial. Davis v. Boyer, 122-132.

The supreme court will refuse to entertain an appeal from a judgment which has ceased to affect the interest of the party complaining; it will refuse to consider mere abstract or moot questions. Doubet v. Riggs, 112 N. W. 242.

Findings of fact: The supreme court has no jurisdiction to correct the findings of fact made by the jury, and it cannot consider the sufficiency of evidence to support the verdict unless that question has been raised in the lower court. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

Final judgment: Where expressly or by implication the relief asked by plaintiff is denied in the judgment such judgment is against the plaintiff so that he has a right to appeal. Floete v. Brown, 104-154.

Where a judgment provided that it should not go into effect until five days after its date, and notice of appeal was served before the expiration of this period, held that the appeal was properly taken, as the stay, if it had any effect, only served to suspend enforcement, and did not suspend the judgment itself. Meredith v. Peterson, 108-551.

The action of the court in improperly overruling a motion to dismiss an appeal from a justice of the peace on the ground that there is no competent surety to the appeal bond is a final judgment with reference to the jurisdiction of the court to entertain such appeal, and therefore the order overruling the motion is appealable. Hudson v. Smith, 111-411.

A modification of a final judgment, secured by appellee after the appeal is taken, does not operate to merge the judgment from which the appeal is taken so as to defeat such appeal. Culbertson v. Salinger, 111-447.

Entry of judgment: A memorandum of a judgment, made by the judge, is for the information and guidance of the clerk in making the proper entry; until such entry is made there is nothing from which an appeal will lie. Kennedy v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 119-123.

While for some purposes a judgment or decree is held to have been made when the decision is announced by the judge or other presiding officer, or when reduced to writing and signed by the judge, yet for the purpose of appeal a judgment or decree is not rendered until entered of record as provided by statute. The abstract must show affirmatively the entry of an appealable judgment. Martin v. Martin, 125-73.

The transcribing of the judge's minutes of his decision into the court record by the clerk constitutes the entry of judgment. Kuhlman v. Weiben, 129-188.

An appeal will not lie from the judgment until that judgment has been entered of record. The memorandum of the judge on his calendar, and the abstract of the judgment entered on the judgment docket do not constitute an appealable judgment. Hoffman-Brumer Granite Co. v. Stark, 132-100.

In the entry of a judgment the clerk should follow the memorandum made by the judge on his calendar not only with reference to the substance thereof, but also to the date; but for the purposes of appeal, the judgment has no validity until actually entered of record, and the record should show the date of entry. If the date of entry is not thus shown, the lower court on motion, even after an attempted appeal, should correct it so as to show the actual date. Ibid.

And see notes to §§ 288 and 4110.

Objection to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that there was no appealable judgment or decree, may be first suggested on rehearing, and the appellant will not be allowed to amend the record so as to show jurisdiction. Martin v. Martin, 125-73.

Second appeal: After the dismissal of appeal by appellant, he may within the statutory period take a second appeal. Stutsman v. Sharpless, 125-335.

Who may appeal: After an adjudication of bankruptcy the bankrupt may in his own name by the consent of the trustee prosecute an appeal from a judgment rendered against him in an action in which he had sought to recover damages for personal injuries. Christy v. Des Moines City R. Co., 126-428.

An intervenor has the right to appeal from a judgment entry prejudicial to his interest although the judgment does not specifically refer to the intervenor. In re Estate of Anderson, 125-670.

An appeal will not lie from a finding of fact or law where the judgment is in favor of the party appealing. In re Assignment of Jenks, 129-139.

One who is not a party to a proceeding cannot appeal from an unauthorized judgment taxing him with the costs of such proceeding. Yockey v. Woodbury County, 130-412.

Party not appealing: The court has no jurisdiction to consider the correctness of the action of the lower court as affecting the rights of persons who have not appealed. Moore v. Price, 125-353.

The rights of parties who have not appealed or been made parties to an appeal cannot be affected by the decision of the appeal. King v. Raab, 123-632.

Waiver: Performance of a party of a judgment which would not be affected by the appeal will not constitute waiver of the appeal. Mountain v. Low, 107-403.

The action of the executor in settling the claims of attorneys for the guardian ad litem of the proponents of the will is not a waiver of the right to an appeal from the order admitting the will to probate. Stutsman v. Sharpless, 125-335.

Motion for judgment non obstante verdicto does not waive the right to complain of errors on appeal. Cullison v. Lindsay, 108-124.

Voluntary payment of a judgment waives the right of appeal, and payment in redemption will be voluntary if the party by asking a restraining order might have saved his rights, pending the appeal, without making redemption. Manning v. Poling, 114-20.

The payment of a judgment on execution is not a waiver of the right to have restitution if the judgment is reversed on appeal. Chambliss v. Hass, 125-484.

Where plaintiff, after rendition of judgment in his favor, accepts the amount of the judgment, a portion of which is in dispute, such plaintiff thereby waives the right to appeal from the judgment. Balinger v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 118-23.

The facts in a particular case held not sufficient to show waiver of the appeal by performance of the judgment. Schoonover v. Osborne, 108-453.

The fact that the jurisdiction of the court to enter an order has been questioned by certiorari does not operate as a waiver of the right to appeal from such order. Porter v. Butterfield, 116-725.

SEC. 4101.

In general: It is not the policy of the law to permit either party to a controversy to prolong litigation and embarrass the course of justice by prosecuting an appeal from every interlocutory ruling of the trial court. State v. Des Moines City R. Co., 109 N. W. 867.

As a general rule an appeal does not lie directly from a ruling denying a motion for verdict or from the verdict itself, or from a ruling denying a motion in arrest. The appeal should be from the judgment. Bussell v. Ft. Dodge, 126-308.

Where, after the making of an order the situation of the parties is materially changed by the presentation of new issues, the fact that the parties proceed to trial on the merits will not preclude an appeal from the order thus made. Stewart v. Pierce, 116-733.

The right to have an intermediate ruling reviewed on appeal from final judgment is not waived by failure to appeal from such ruling although an appeal therefrom is allowable. Des Moines Sav. Bank v. Morgan Jewelry Co., 123-434.

Where an order is entered nunc pro tunc, the period within which an appeal may be taken from such order does not commence to run until the date of the nunc pro tunc entry. In re Estate of Bishop, 130-250.

An appeal from an intermediate order, although accompanied by the filing of a supersedeas bond, does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to proceed with the trial of the case. First National Bank v. Dutcher, 128-403.

An order made in probate proceedings that the executor file inventories of the real property, on application of the state treasurer, insisting that such property passing by devise was subject to collateral inheritance tax, held to be such intermediate order affecting a substantial right and involving the final decision as that an appeal therefrom might be taken by the executor. In re Estate of Stone, 132-136.

Appeals may be taken from final orders in special actions affecting substantial rights therein. Porter v. Butterfield, 116-725.

The trial of an issue raised on an application for a permit to sell intoxicating liquors is a special proceeding and the granting or refusal to grant a permit is a final order from which an appeal may be taken. In re Application of Smith, 126-128.

No appeal lies from an order sustaining an application for the inspection of books and papers and directing the production of such documents. Devier v. Economic L. Assn., 106-682.

No appeal can be taken from an entry of judgment against a garnishee which is not effectual for the reason that no judgment has yet been rendered against the principal defendant. Hawarden State Bank v. Hessler, 131-691.

Ruling on motion: An appeal may be taken from a ruling on a motion for new trial notwithstanding judgment has theretofore been entered. In re Estate of Bishop, 130-250.

A party is not obliged to appeal directly from a ruling on a motion, but may proceed to judgment, and present his exceptions to intermediate orders on an appeal from the final result. Parker v. Des Moines L. Assn., 108-117.

Where application for leave to amend after reversal and remand for a new trial is sustained, there is no right to appeal from the order as affecting a substantial right, but such a ruling is appealable as an intermediate order involving the merits or materially affecting the final decision, if the amendment offered introduces a new and distinct cause of action. Allen v. Dav-enport, 115-20.

Action of the trial court in sustaining a motion to direct a verdict is an order from which an appeal may be taken. Clark v. Van Loon, 108-250.

An appeal lies from a ruling refusing to set aside an assignment of a cause for trial by jury, and setting it down for trial to the court. In re Bradley, 108-476.

Where the court sustained a motion striking out an answer as immaterial or redundant, matter which constituted a defense, held that such ruling materially affected the final decision of the case, and that an appeal therefrom was properly taken. Mast v. Wells, 110-128.

The sustaining of a motion to set aside default is not such an intermediate order as that an appeal may be prosecuted therefrom. Odell v. Coquolette, 103-435.

An order for a continuance is not appealable. Suddeth v. Boone, 121-258.

Ruling on demurrer: The action of the court in ruling on a demurrer is not a final judgment, and although the defeated party may appeal from such ruling as an intermediate order, he is not bound to do so, and may wait until final judgment is rendered, and even though the ruling has been waived by pleading over, the trial court may allow the party to withdraw such pleading and elect to submit to final judgment on the ruling as to the demurrer. Farmers & Merchants State Bank v. School Township, 118-540.

A ruling sustaining a demurrer cannot be reviewed on an appeal expressly taken from such ruling, unless an exception has been preserved. Hews v. Stonebreaker, 132-608.

Temporary injunction: An appeal will lie from a refusal to grant a temporary injunction. State v. Roney, 133-416.

Appeal will lie from the action of the court in refusing a preliminary writ of injunction. Donnelly v. Smith, 128-257.

An order granting a temporary injunction is appealable. Young v. Preston, 131-292.

In criminal cases: Under this section the action of the trial judge, under the provisions of Code § 254 as to ordering a transcript of the shorthand notes in a criminal case at the expense of the county, is subject to review. State v. Wright, 111-621.

An appeal will lie from an order in a criminal case denying the defendant a transcript at the expense of the county. State v. Steidley, 133-31.

No appeal lies in a criminal case from the granting or refusal of an intermediate order, or from a ruling which does not in itself state a final judgment. Under Code § 5448, no appeal is authorized in a criminal case save from the final judgment. State v. Sloan, 131-676.

SEC. 4105. Motion to correct error.

In law actions the trial court must have had an opportunity to pass upon the matter as to which complaint is made, and the ruling when made must be excepted to and properly assigned as error. Goldstein v. Morgan, 122-27.

The insufficiency of evidence to support the verdict must be raised in the lower court and cannot for the first time be presented on appeal. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

SEC. 4106. Motion for new trial.

The fact that an exception to an instruction in a motion for a new trial is too general will not avail to defeat an exception properly taken at the time the instructions were given. Ellis v. Leonard, 107-487.

A motion for a new trial is not necessary to secure a review in the supreme court of exceptions that have otherwise been properly preserved. Clement v. Drybread, 108-701.

Errors in rulings on the admission of evidence are not waived by a failure to urge the motion for a new trial on other grounds. Stewart v. Equitable Mut. L. Assn., 110-528.

The refusal of instruction asked, which refusal is relied upon as error, may be considered on appeal although not urged before the trial court on a motion for new trial. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

While the motion for new trial is not necessary to enable one unsuccessful party to secure a review of any order or judgment of the trial court, it is necessary in order to enable the trial court to review the question of sufficiency of evidence to support the verdict. Such a question must be presented to the lower court and a ruling thereon secured in order to justify a review on appeal. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

SEC. 4108. Title of cause.

Where no prejudice appears from error in entitling the case as docketed, an error in docketing will be immaterial. In re Application of Dugan, 129-241.

SEC. 4109. Process.

The supreme court has authority to enter orders to preserve the status with respect to property litigation until the determination of the appeal. Manning v. Poling, 114-20.

And further as to restraining orders, see notes in this supplement to Code § 4128.

SEC. 4110. Time for appealing—amount in controversy—certificate.

Time for taking: In a law action, in which nothing but a claim for money is involved, there is no final disposition of the case until the amount is ascertained and fixed. Baird v. Omaha & C. B. R. & B. Co., 111-627.

The time for taking an appeal runs from the entry of the judgment of record regardless of when the judgment is orally announced or indicated by a signed decree. For some purposes the judgment may relate back, but not in respect to procedure essential to procuring a review. Stutsman v. Sharpless, 125-335.

There is no appealable judgment until an entry thereof is made of record, and the time for taking the appeal commences to run from the date of the entry of the judgment as recited in the record. Graetz v. Price, 112 N. W. 827.

The time for appeal dates from the time of the entry of the judgment as shown by the record entry thereof. Groendyke v. Musgrave, 123-535.

And see notes to §§ 288 and 4100.

Where the clerk enters judgment on the verdict of the jury without express direction, the time for taking appeal runs from the date of such entry, although the attorneys subsequently ask the court to approve a different form of judgment entry. Burlington v. Fear, 116-299.

The fact that a party has attempted to perfect an appeal within the proper time, and by reason of the failure to take proper steps has subsequently dismissed such appeal, does not preclude the perfecting of a subsequent appeal within the time allowed. Groendyke v. Musgrave, 123-535.

Failure of the official reporter to furnish the appellant the transcript of the evidence in an equity action in time to file the same within six months of the entry of the decree is not a ground for new trial where it appears that the appellant was not diligent in procuring such transcript. McKinley v. McKinley, 123-574.

Amount in controversy: To defeat the jurisdiction it must appear from the pleadings that the case is one in which the amount in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars. Where no amount is shown the appellant jurisdiction exists. First Nat. Bank v. Bourdelais, 109-497.

The amount in controversy is determined by the pleadings, and not by the judgment appealed from. Hancock v. Hancock, 109 N. W. 1009.

If the amount claimed is more than one hundred dollars there is a right of appeal though the judgment is for only one hundred dollars. The amount of judgment rendered does not determine the jurisdiction on appeal. Wald v. Wald, 124-183.

Where actions brought by different plaintiffs against the same defendant are by consent of parties or order of court consolidated and tried together, the amount in controversy is the aggregate of the claims made in the separate actions. Comstock v. Eagle Grove, 133-589.

Where instead of bringing separate actions all the parties having a like interest join in the bringing of one action, the amount in controversy is the aggregate of the amounts of the claim of the parties so joining. Ibid.

SEC. 4111. Appeal by co-parties.

Service of notice of appeal on a co-party is not required to give the supreme court jurisdiction, where the interests of such co-party are wholly separate from those of appellant, and would not be affected by the decision of the appeal. Mason v. Des Moines, 108-658; Ward v. Walker, 111-611.

A failure to serve notice of appeal upon co-parties is not jurisdictional, but the court cannot in such case consider any question the determination of which would work prejudice to the parties upon whom

Where the amount claimed by the plaintiff exceeds one hundred dollars the defendant who has resisted plaintiff's claim, and interposed a counterclaim, may appeal from a judgment in plaintiff's favor although the amount of his counterclaim does not exceed one hundred dollars. Schultz v. Ford, 133-402.

A remittitur filed after judgment has been entered is too late to affect the amount in controversy, so far as the right of appeal is concerned. Kennedy v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 128-561.

The provisions of this section, preventing a party by remittitur from reducing the amount in controversy for the purpose of appeal to the supreme court, have no application to appeals from justices of the peace, under Code § 4547. Rust v. Olson, 113-571.

Where the appeal involved only the validity of certain acts of township trustees as fence viewers, determining an indefinite liability as to the maintenance of a partition fence, held that it did not appear that the amount in controversy was less than one hundred dollars, and that the appeal would lie. Miles v. Tomlinson, 110-322.

Certificate: Under the Code of '72 it was held that the certificate must set out the very point to be determined, without requiring the examination of the record and the proceedings. Sloss v. Bailey, 104-696.

While this section dispenses with many things previously required in the certificate of appeal where the amount in controversy is less than one hundred dollars, it does not dispense with the assignment of errors and other matters essential to a proper presentation of the appeal to the supreme court. Kistner v. Conery, 109-439.

Although the certificate attempts to recite the question to be decided, nevertheless if it in effect allows an appeal it is sufficient. Percival v. Strathman, 112-747.

The certificate is required to be made during the trial term. Pollock v. Milburn, 112-528.

notice is not served. Clayton v. Severson, 115-687; Bowman v. Besley, 122-42; Ewart v. Ewart, 126-219; Oliver v. Perry, 131-654.

Failure to serve notice of appeal upon co-parties does not deprive the court of jurisdiction, although it may constitute a reason why the appeal should not be considered. Reed v. Cunningham, 121-555.

Failure to serve notice of appeal on a party whose rights would be affected by a reversal of the judgment below will deprive the appellate court of jurisdiction. Dillavou v. Dillavou, 130-405.

In partition suits, where there are several parties plaintiff and defendant, and one of these appeals, notice of appeal must be served on the co-parties. But failure to give such notice is not jurisdictional and the supreme court can consider such questions in the case as do not affect the rights or interests of the other parties. Lippold v. Lippold, 112-134.

Where but one ruling has been made

SEC. 4113. Part of judgment or order.

An appeal from a portion of a decree in no way affects the portion not appealed on demurrers of different defendants to plaintiff's petition, and a joint judgment has been rendered against the parties thus demurring, they may join in one notice of appeal from such judgment. Thornburg v. Cardell, 123-313.

Notwithstanding this provision one notice of appeal may be served in behalf of two or more parties against whom a judgment has been rendered, although they do not have a common interest. Thornburg v. Cardell, 123-313.

from. State v. Fidelity L. & T. Co., 113-439.

SEC. 4114. Notice. An appeal is taken and perfected by the service of a notice in writing on the adverse party, his agent, or any attorney who appeared for him in the case in the court below, and also upon the clerk of the court wherein the proceedings were had, stating the appeal from the same, or from specific part thereof, defining such part. When such service cannot be made the trial court or judge on application shall direct what notice shall be sufficient. [C., '73, § 3178; R., § 3509; C., '51, § 1974.] [31 G. A., ch. 158.]

Sufficiency: A notice of appeal, advising the opposite party that appellant appeals from the "rulings and judgments" of the district court, rendered on certain specified dates, is sufficient to admit a review of the final judgment, although the date given is erroneous by reason of mistake. Parker v. Des Moines L. Assn., 108-117.

The court is limited on appeal to the consideration of the judgment or order specified in the notice of appeal. Yockey v. Woodbury County, 130-412.

A notice of appeal "in the above cause" held to be sufficient to enable the supreme court to determine the correctness of the final judgment rendered in such case. Augustine v. McDowell, 120-401; Merrill v. Timbrell, 123-375.

A notice of appeal will be liberally construed, and if it is sufficiently definite for a reasonably certain identification of the judgment, order or decision appealed from, it is good. In re Application of Dugan, 129-241.

A clerical error in reciting the name of the party taking the appeal will not render the notice fatally defective where the identity of the party is made clear by the language of the notice taken as a whole. Heinz v. Roberts, 110 N. W. 1034.

The notice of appeal must be addressed to the person upon whom it is served in order to make the service on him effectual. In re Estate of Anderson, 125-670.

No particular form of notice is required, and the fact that it is headed "In the supreme court of Iowa" will not render it insufficient although as it is to be filed with the clerk of the district court it should properly be entitled as in the district court. Douglas v. Agne, 125-67.

Where in an action against two defendants there has been an amendment to the petition so that the claim is against one defendant alone, a notice of appeal by such defendant against whom an individual judgment has been rendered will be sufficient. Padden v. Clark, 124-94.

Parties against whom a single judgment is rendered may appeal by serving one notice in behalf of each of them, although they have not a common interest. Thornburg v. Cardell, 123-313.

Where the abstract of the appellant states the fact of appeal in general terms but does not set out the notice, and the appellee does not make the terms of the notice appear in an amended abstract, the appellee cannot object that it does not appear that the notice was in writing nor that the appeal was from any particular order or judgment nor that the notice was served as required by law. Dolan v. Midland Blast Furnace Co., 126-254.

Signature: A notice of appeal not signed by the appellant or attorneys for him is without validity and confers no jurisdiction, even though service of such notice is accepted by attorneys for appellee. State Sav. Bank v. Ratcliffe, 111-662.

Where the appellee in an action against a railroad company gave the title of the case, including the full name of the railroad company, held that the fact that the attorneys for the railroad company signing the notice of appeal used the initials only of the railroad company in connection with their signature would not defeat the appeal. Rickel v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 112-148.

An attorney may act for his client in giving notice of appeal, and a notice signed by appellant's attorney for and on behalf of his client is sufficient. Hogueland v. Arts, 113-634.

Service on attorney: Where a notice of appeal is in fact served upon an attorney who has appeared in the case below and whom the record shows to be still an attorney in the case, it is sufficient to give the supreme court jurisdiction of the appeal. American Emigrant Co. v. Long, 105-194.

Service on clerk: Service on the deputy clerk is sufficient. Cullison v. Lindsay, 108-124.

Party not served: Where a party to the record is not served with notice of appeal, the appeal cannot be prosecuted as to him, and no relief based on the reversal of the judgment against him can be granted in the appellate court. Baxter v. Rollins, 110-310.

Attorneys who have become interested in the judgment by agreeing to present the case upon appeal for a contingent fee are not parties in such sense as to be entitled to notice of appeal. Harrison v. Palo Alto County, 104-383.

In an appeal by a minor represented by

SEC. 4116. Term of submission.

The first term to which the appeal can be taken in the absence of an agreement must necessarily begin thirty days or more

SEC. 4118. Abstracts.

Form: Where the abstract was not accompanied by an index and there was no reference in plaintiff's argument showing where in the abstract the testimony or ruling referred to might be found, held, that the submission should be set aside and the cause continued for the perfection of the abstract. State v. Abegglan, 103-50.

Under rule 30 of the supreme court, the decree may be affirmed where the appellant does not present a proper abstract. It is improper to embody in the abstract the entire evidence, or a greater portion of it by questions and answers copied from the transcript of the evidence, setting out want matter. Phillips v. Crips, 108-605.

Where appellant's abstract is a complete transcript of the evidence, setting out every question and answer, the court will affirm the judgment below on that ground alone. Hurley v. Hurley, 117-621.

A disregard of the rule as to printing a next friend it is not necessary that notice of appeal be served on the next friend. Douglas v. Agne, 125-67.

Persons interested but who are not parties to the record need not be served with notice of appeal. In re Estate of Sawyer, 124-485.

Securing clerk's fees: Under § 3179 of the Code of '73, held that the provision relating to security for clerk's fees was for the benefit of that officer and might be waived by him. Varnum v. Winslow, 106-187.

A second notice of appeal served while the case is pending in the supreme court under a previous notice is of no effect. Newbury v. Getchell & Martin Lumber, etc., Co., 106-140.

Effect as to jurisdiction of lower court: After appeal from a final judgment the district court has no further right to proceed in the case. Stillman v. Rosenberg, 111-369.

The trial court has jurisdiction to correct the record, even after an appeal has been taken to the supreme court. Porter v. Butterfield, 117-725.

After an appeal the district court has no right to entertain a motion to correct an error in the proceedings. Guinn v. Iowa & St. L. R. Co., 131-680.

Failure to file the case for the term specified in the notice is not ground for dismissal of the appeal. Hoff v. Shockley, 122-720.

after the notice of appeal has been served. Hanson v. Hammell, 107-171.

abstracts, consisting in the presentation of the evidence by question and answer, as contained in the transcript of the reporter's notes, is a ground for affirmance. Cressey v. Lochner, 109-454.

Under rule 53, the testimony of each witness should be presented in narrative form so far as practicable, and there is no occasion in the argument to repeat by condensed statement the testimony of each witness separately. In re Wiltsey's Will, 109 N. W. 776.

Brevity in an abstract is not only a commendable quality, so long as all material matters are presented, but it is expressly enjoined by rules 30 and 31 of the supreme court. Howard v. Pratt, 110-533.

An abstract is an abbreviated or condensed statement in narrative form where possible of the material parts of the record, and it is not necessary that it disclose the cross-examination of the witnesses. Therefore, the fact that an abstract does not specifically show such cross-examination is not enough to indicate that the entire record is not before the court. Wolf v. Des Moines Elevator Co., 126-659; 98 N. W. 301.

It is not necessary that the names of appellant's counsel be affixed at the end of the abstract where it appears to have been made in the usual way and the names of counsel in the case appear on the first page. Alston v. Alston, 114-29.

Should contain what: Jurisdictional facts, such as service of notice of appeal, must appear in the abstract. Clayton v. Sievertsen, 115-687.

It is unnecessary to set out the notice of appeal in full in the abstract, and an allegation of due service of notice of appeal if undenied is sufficient. Stearns Paint Mfg. Co. v. Comstock, 121-430.

The statement in the abstract that appellant "served due, legal and timely notice of appeal" is sufficient, without setting out the formal notice. Oxford State Bank v. Holscher, 115-196.

An amended abstract showing that some of the parties have not been served with notice of appeal does not raise a jurisdictional question. Reed v. Cunningham, 121-555.

Where the abstract contains a statement that judgment was duly entered, which statement is undenied, appellee cannot complain that the record entry is not set out in full. Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Huston, 115-621.

When the abstract recites the rendition of a judgment or decree it will be presumed in the absence of a showing to the contrary that it is such a one as is appealable, but where the abstract recites just what was done and affirmatively shows no appealable judgment or decree no presumption of jurisdiction to entertain the appeal can be introduced in. Martin v. Martin, 125-73.

If the abstract shows that there was no appealable judgment the objection to the jurisdiction of the court may be suggested for the first time in a petition for rehearing, and the appellant will not be entitled then to present an additional abstract showing an appealable judgment, as the rehearing must be determined on the record presented on the first submission. Ibid.

Where it appears that the material evidence of a witness has not in any manner been preserved, the abstract presenting such evidence should be stricken from the files. Monroe County v. Abeggler, 129-53.

Additional abstract—when proper: Additions which the appellee thinks necessary may be made to appellant's abstract by way of amendment; but unless they are so numerous or so fundamental as to justify a new abstract of the entire evidence, the appellee's additional abstract should only contain such additional matter as necessary to supply the omissions in the appellant's abstract. Dale v. Colfax Consolidated Coal Co., 131-67.

Under particular circumstances, held that an amendment to the abstract by the appellee filed after appellee's argument would not be stricken from the files. Hickey v. Davidson, 129-384.

It is proper to set out in an amended abstract the report of a referee on which the decree appealed from is based. McCormick Har. Mach. Co. v. Pouder, 123-17.

An amendment which supplies a part of the record proper for consideration by the supreme court will not be stricken from the files on motion. Loesche v. Goerdts, 123-55.

While ordinarily the abstract should be complete before the adverse party is required to argue, yet it often happens that an amendment is made necessary by the presentation in argument of a question not raised in the lower court, and in such case it is the rule to permit an amendment which will show the true record on the point thus made. Biglow v. Ritter, 131-213.

Costs: Where the appellee without any occasion for doing so made an abstract of the evidence in the case, the abstract presented by the appellant being proper and sufficient for all purposes, held, that on motion in the supreme court the costs of the additional abstract should be taxed to appellee. McWhirter v. Crawford, 104-550.

An amended abstract which is proper to supply omissions in the original abstract will not be taxed to the appellee if he is the successful party. Wilkie v. Sassen, 123-421.

An amended abstract containing needless repetition of matter sufficiently set forth in appellant's abstract may be stricken from the files on motion, and the costs thereof taxed to the appellee. Wissler v. Atlantic, 123-11.

The costs of an abstract presenting matters which cannot be considered will be taxed to the party filing such abstract. Farmers' Savings Bank v. Independent School district, 122-99.

An abstract or amendment which unnecessarily sets out questions and answers may be properly taxed in part to the party filing it. Deering v. Beaty, 107-701; Plagge v. Mensing, 126-737; Ostenson v. Severson, 126-197.

Where appellee in an amended abstract set out with unnecessary particularity, and by way of question and answer, large portions of the evidence, which had been sufficiently stated in appellant's abstract, held that a portion of the costs of appellee's amendment should be taxed to him. In re Bradley, 117-472; Kirsher v. Kirsher, 120-337.

An additional abstract presenting only an acknowledgment of a mortgage about which there was no question and which was therefor wholly unnecessary, held taxable to appellee. Fox v. Gray, 105-433.

Time for filing: An additional abstract will not be stricken from the files because not filed within the time fixed by rule 22 of the supreme court, if it does not appear that the submission of the case was delayed by the filing of such additional abstract, nor that prejudice has resulted from it. Clark v. Ellsworth, 104-422; Frank v. Levi, 110-267; Sanders v. O'Callaghan, 111-574; Tucker v. Carlson, 113-449; Foley v. Cudahy Packing Co., 119-246.

An abstract or amendment thereto filed after the submission of the cause and without express permission of court will not be considered and will be stricken from the files on motion. Watson v. Burroughs, 104-745.

An abstract may be amended even after the time for filing by the addition of assignments of error, and if the appellee has had reasonable opportunity to argue such assignments he cannot have the amendment stricken out on motion because not filed in time. Salvador v. Feeley, 105-478.

Where an amendment to an abstract is filed within a reasonable time after the defect therein is called to the attention of the appellant, an amendment to cure the defect will not be stricken from the files. Steckel v. Standley, 107-694.

Under rule 31, the amended abstract should be filed ten days after the filing of appellant's abstract, but the court will not in all cases strictly enforce such rule, as it is often impracticable for the appellee to determine whether an amendment is necessary until he has received appellant's argument, and has ascertained on what portion of the record appellant relies. Baker v. Oughton, 130-35.

All the evidence: To enable the appellate court to review the trial court's ruling directing a verdict, the abstract must contain all the material evidence. Kitzman v. Kitman, 115-227.

Under rule 31 a judgment will be affirmed where appellee denies that the abstract contains all the material evidence and the transcript shows that it does not contain all the testimony, so that the court cannot determine whether or not the abstract does contain the evidence material for consideration in the determination of the appeal. Ibid.

Where the appellee has set out in an additional abstract portions of the evidence which he avers to be a part of the record, he cannot raise the question whether the evidence was properly preserved in an equity case. Sarvis v. Caster, 116-707.

A certificate of the reporter to the effect that the abstract is a true rendering into long hand of his shorthand notes and contains all the testimony offered or introduced will not entitle the appellant to a trial de novo. The reporter has nothing to do with the preparation of the abstract and his certificate thereto is of no effect. Gibbs v. Oskaloosa, 103-734.

Where the record on appeal does not contain all the material evidence, it will be presumed that instructions and rulings upon the evidence were correct. State v. Thompson, 125-499.

The office of certification of the record or of a transcript is solely to settle disputes developed in printing the record. All the evidence to be considered on the appeal must be included in the abstracts. Palmer v. Clark, 114-558.

Presumed to contain record: Under this section the abstract is presumed to contain all the evidence, in the absence of any denial, correction or statement therein to the contrary, with sufficient completeness to enable the court to pass on every question raised. It is not necessary in an equity case in order to secure trial de novo that the abstract contain the statement that it is a full and correct abstract of the record or that it contains all the evidence introduced or offered. McGillivray v. Case, 107-17.

Under this section, embodied in rule 31, the presumption is that the steps necessary to make the evidence of record have been properly taken. Kirchman v. Standard Coal Co., 112-668.

A general allegation in appellee's abstract that appellant's abstract, together with matter presented by the appellee, does not show the entire evidence, no longer makes it necessary for the court to go to the transcript. Ibid.

It is no longer necessary in order to secure a trial de novo that appellant formally allege in his abstract that it is an abstract of all the evidence, and that the evidence was preserved in the proper manner. Alston v. Alston, 114-29.

Under rule 31 a general denial will not raise an issue or present a dispute with reference to the correctness of appellant's abstract. Palmer v. Clark, 114-558.

All the evidence to be considered on the appeal must be included in the abstracts. The office of certification of the record or of a transcript is solely to settle disputes developed in printing the record, save when an original paper or document is to be inspected. Ibid.

The abstract of appellant, with the additional abstract of appellee, are presumed to contain all the record necessary for the determination of the questions presented on appeal. Woerdehoff v. Muekel, 131-300.

The record is conclusively presumed to contain everything essential to the determination of all points raised in argument on the appeal. Hensley v. Davidson Bros. Co., 112 N. W. 227.

The printed abstract will be presumed to contain the record, unless denied or corrected by a subsequent abstract. Van Rens v. Witzenburg, 112-30.

It is not necessary to include in the abstract evidence relating to an issue not involved in the appeal. Ibid.

Corrections made by the appellee in his additional abstract will be taken as true where appellant's denial thereof is not confessed nor sustained by certification of the record. Mosgrove v. Zimbleman Coal Co., 110-169.

Where the correctness of appellant's abstract was not denied, and it appeared from the record as presented that the amount of damages allowed to the appellant as plaintiff was too small, held, that although the instructions did not appear in the abstract, it would still be presumed that the court had before it all of the record necessary to enable it to pass on the question of the inadequacy of the damages allowed. King v. Hart, 110-618.

Where it does not appear that appellant's abstract contains all the evidence and appellee files an additional abstract setting out other evidence which it is claimed was omitted by appellant, and does not deny that the abstracts together contain all the evidence it will be presumed that all the evidence is before the court. First Nat. Bank v. Robinson, 105-463.

Denial: Under rule 31 a general denial that appellant's abstract contains all the evidence is of no effect. Bradley v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 111-562; Raher v. Raher, 130-743.

The appellee's denial of the appellant's abstract must be specific in order to require certification of the record. Dolan v. Midland Blast Furnace Co., 126-254.

The appellee cannot by a bare denial put in issue correctness of instruments set out in the abstract. Schneider v. Schneider, 125-1.

The mere general denial of the correctness of appellant's abstract will not justify the filing of an amended abstract by appellee, setting out in different form the same matter which the appellant's abstract was forced to retain. To justify the examination of an amended abstract the denial of the correctness of the matters set out in the appellant's abstract should be specific. See v. Wabash R. Co., 13-443.

To entitle the appellee to have the court examine the transcript as to the correctness of appellant's abstract, the denial must specify the pages of the transcript to which reference is made, or otherwise identify the portions relied upon. Lundvick v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 128-347.

Under rule 31 the denial of the correctness of the abstract should point out as specifically as the case will permit the defects alleged to exist. In the absence of such a denial, the abstract with amendments and additions is presumed to contain the record with sufficient completeness to enable the court to pass upon every question raised. Kossuth County State Bank v. Richardson, 132-370.

Failure to specifically deny the appellant's abstract is not an admission that all the evidence was in fact made of record by being duly certified and filed within the statutory limit of time. Oskaloosa Nat. B. L. & I Ass'n v. Bailey, 129-287.

If any questions are to be presented as to the sufficiency of the steps by which the record has been preserved, the issue must be raised by specific denial, otherwise the objection is waived. Shebeck v. National Cracker Co., 120-414.

Where appellant has not had the record certified, appellee's denial as to the correctness of any specific matters set up in the abstract will be deemed true. Rule v. McGregor, 115-323.

Under rule 31, of the supreme court, a denial of appellant's abstract by the appellee is to be taken as true unless appellant sustains his abstract by a certification of the record. And a denial by appellant of an amended abstract filed by appellee, unless confessed, must be disregarded, when not sustained by a certification of the record. Foley v. Cudahy Packing Co., 119-246.

It is not necessary for appellant to set out in his abstract the certificate to the evidence in order to secure a trial de novo in an equity case, but unless the sufficiency of the certificate is raised by specific denial, it will be presumed that the proper steps to preserve the evidence were taken. Burget v. Greenfield, 120-432.

If the appellee is not satisfied with the appellant's abstract because all his material evidence is not contained therein, he should make timely objection so that the submission of the cause will not be delayed, and, if he fails to do so, his failure will be treated as a waiver and an acceptance of the abstract which has been made and filed. Watson v. Dilts, 124-344.

Where it does not appear that the short-hand notes have been extended into long-hand, and such transcript filed in the district court, and the attorney for the appellee denies that the evidence has been properly preserved and made of record, the appellant is required to furnish a transcript from the clerk establishing the fact. Without that the court cannot consider any question depending upon the evidence adduced. State v. Owens, 109-143.

Opinion of lower court: It is not im-

SEC. 4120. Dismissal or affirmance.

While the court may extend the time for filing the abstract upon application, such application must be made before the time given by statute for filing abstracts has expired. In other words, neither the supreme court nor a judge thereof can grant to the appellant the right which has once been lost to file an abstract; but while that right exists the time may be extended by the court or by one of its judges. Where there is no waiver or estoppel the appellee has the right to insist upon a dismissal or affirmance when he brings himself within the terms of the statute, even though the abstract be already filed when the motion is made. In this respect the statute is mandatory. Section 37 of the rules of the supreme court does not give to the appellant the right to delay filing of abstract until thirty days before the second term after the appeal is taken, but merely provides that if not filed thirty days before such term and further time is not given, the appellee may have the appeal dismissed or the judgment or order from which it was taken, affirmed by pursuing the method pointed out. The requirement as to time of filing abstract being statutory cannot be modified by the rules of the court. Newbury v. Getchell & Martin Lumber, etc., Co., 106-140.

Notice of the application to extend the time for filing an abstract should be served on the adverse party or his attorney. Ibid.

Failure of appellant to file his abstract within the time required, without an extension having been secured before the expiration of the statutory period, cannot be remedied by the entry of an order nunc pro tunc granting an extension of time. Ibid.

The time for filing an abstract cannot be extended by serving a second notice of appeal. Ibid.

The requirement that the abstract shall be filed by the time here specified is man-proper to include in the abstract, or an additional abstract, the written opinion of the lower court in the case. Richardson v. Carlton, 109-515.

On second appeal: Where a case is reversed, and a second trial had on the same evidence as that which was introduced on the first trial, the appellant is not entitled to have the abstract of the evidence presented on the first trial considered as an abstract on the second appeal. State v. Wolf, 118-564.

datory. Application for extension of time must be made before the period allowed has expired and upon notice to adverse party. Hanson v. Hammil, 107-171.

The first term contemplated is that to which the appeal might have been taken by serving the proper notice thirty days before its first day and the second term is that immediately following. Ibid.

The time within which appellant's abstract is required to be filed under rule 37 of the supreme court cannot be extended by an amendment attempting to bring before the court on appeal rulings and orders made subsequent to the decree appealed from. Ruby v. Downs, 113-574.

Under the facts of a particular case held that there was no sufficient excuse shown for failing to file an abstract within the time required by the rules, and that there had been no act of appellant, in reliance on the failure of appellee to object, which would prevent the court from affirming on a motion of appellee for failure of appellant to file his abstract within the time required. Brown v. Farmers L. & T. Co., 109-440.

Where appellee has made no objection on account of delay of appellant in filing his abstract until appellant has prepared and filed his argument, the appeal will not be dismissed on appellee's motion on account of the delay in the filing of the abstract. McDermott v. Hacker, 109-239.

In some cases there may be a material difference between the effect of dismissing the appeal and affirming the order or judgment from which the appeal is taken, but the appellee does not have an absolute right to elect which remedy he will have. It is proper for him to ask in the alternative for one relief or the other, and when that is done the court grants that form of relief which seems to be best calculated to do justice. Newbury v. Getchell & Martin Lumber, etc., Co., 106-140.

SEC. 4122. Transcript—when required.

Where the clerk certifies the transcript of the record, the fact that his fees therefor have not been paid or secured will be deemed to have been waived and it cannot be objected on that ground that the appeal has not been perfected. Harrison v. Palo Alto County, 104-383.

The provisions of this section, authorizing the translation of the original notes of the shorthand reporter when certified to by him to be sent up in lieu of a transcript was intended simply to avoid the expense of transcribing the translation of the notes of evidence, and does not by implication or otherwise repeal the requirement of Code § 3652, that all the evidence taken in equitable cases shall be certified by the judge within the time allowed for appeal. Sloan v. Davis, 105-97.

The trial court may, after the taking of an appeal and filing of notice of appeal, correct the record so as to show that at the time service of notice of appeal was accepted by appellee it was not signed by appellant's attorneys. State Sav. Bank v. Ratcliffe, 111-662.

A lost record may be substituted by proceedings in the lower court and the mere fact of the loss of the record making it impracticable to prosecute an appeal will

SEC. 4128. Stay of proceedings—supersedeas bond.

In general: Where the party has secured possession by service of the right of possession before the giving of an appeal bond he is not affected by the subsequent filing of the bond. Hyatt v. Clever, 104-338.

An appeal from a judgment against a county or other municipal corporation does not operate as a stay of proceedings thereon without the filing of a supersedeas bond. Such municipal corporations are not contemplated by the statutory provision that no security shall be required in actions maintained by the state. Harrison v. Stebbins, 104-462.

A supersedeas bond on an appeal from a decree granting an injunction will not cover damages resulting from a violation of the injunction. Such violation is to be reached by proceedings for contempt. Cole v. Edwards, 104-373.

The judgment appealed from remains in full force for all purposes, subject only to determination on appeal. Therefore a judgment from which an appeal has been taken may be relied on as a prior adjudication in another action involving the reme court for waiving or modifying such rules so far as they relate to the abstract, preparation and argument of causes, has no application to a case where the record is not authenticated as required by statute. Ibid.

Appeal—transcript: No time is specified within which the translation of the shorthand reporter's notes shall be filed in law actions. The appellee's denial of the appellant's abstract should point out specifically the objections to the abstract in order that the appellant may have time to support it by filing a transcript. Watson v. Dilts, 124-344.

same right or title. Watson v. Richardson, 110-698.

A defendant who has appealed from a judgment in plaintiff's favor without giving a supersedeas bond is not entitled, on petition alleging his inability to file such bond, to have plaintiff give bond to refund in case of reversal, the judgment otherwise to be stayed. Watson v. Niles, 112-655.

A supersedeas bond on an appeal from an order of the district court directing the secretary of the school district to certify a tax will be effectual to stay enforcement of the judgment. Loesche v. Goerdts, 123-55.

On an appeal from an order appointing a receiver, the supersedeas bond should be for an amount sufficient to cover the value of the property. Home Sav. & T. Co. v. District Court, 121-1.

In such a case the bond should contain the conditions required by Code § 4134, that the appellee should be saved harmless from the consequence of taking the appeal. Ibid.

Under the provisions of Code § 4133 with reference to requiring additional security on a supersedeas bond, application may be made either to the supreme court or to the court rendering the judgment from which the appeal is taken, and if on application the judge of the lower court makes an order as to additional security, such order cannot be reviewed on motion in the supreme court, nor by appeal (no appeal in such case being provided for), but the action may be reviewed by certiorari. Ibid.

Liability of sureties: Sureties on a supersedeas bond cannot avail themselves of a defense which their principal might have interposed to the affirmance of the judgment. Jewett v. Shoemaker, 124-561.

The surety on a supersedeas bond does not become subrogated to the claims of judgment plaintiff against prior sureties on a bond given to release an attachment, such prior sureties not having procured or requested the giving of the supersedeas bond. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Bowen, 123-356.

SEC. 4134. Penalty of bond. If the judgment or order is for the payment of money, the penalty shall be in at least twice the amount of the judgment and costs. If not for the payment of money, the penalty shall be sufficient to save the appellee harmless from the consequences of taking the appeal, but in no case shall the penalty be less than one hundred dollars. [C., '73, § 3190; R., § 3531; C., '51, § 1984.] [30 G. A., ch. 125.]

SEC. 4136. Repeal—assignment of errors not required. That sections four thousand one hundred and thirty-six (4136) and four thousand one hundred and thirty-seven (4137) of the code be and they are hereby repealed, and in lieu thereof is enacted the following:

Since the repeal of the statutory provisions as to the assignment of errors by 30 G. A., chap. 126, there is no occasion to apply the somewhat technical rules formerly followed by the court in determining whether errors are sufficiently assigned. Under § 54 of the rules it is not necessary that the appellant shall do more than point out the errors relied upon for a reversal, with such definiteness that the appellee and the court may ascertain without searching through the entire abstract or argument the precise errors relied upon. Dale v. Colfax Consolidated Coal Co., 131-67.

erty, is not liable for waste, loss of rents or depreciation in value. Nourse v. Weitz, 120-708.

A court of equity has power to reform a supersedeas or other bond given in a judicial proceeding for mistake. Ibid.

Restraining order: An order of a judge of the supreme court restraining the enforcement of an execution pending appeal is a valid exercise of authority, although not expressly provided for by statute. Norris v. Tripp, 111-115.

A supersedeas bond will not continue in force a temporary writ of injunction. The continuance of the injunction pending the determination of the appeal can only be secured by a restraining order in the supreme court. Manning v. Poling, 114-20.

The giving of a supersedeas bond does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to proceed in the trial of the case where the appeal is from an interlocutory order. The court doubtless has in such cases inherent power to order a stay of proceedings pending a disposition of the appeal. First National Bank v. Dutcher, 128-403.

reaches the sheriff, and a sale by the sheriff before the receipt of the countermand is valid. Edwards v. Olin, 121-143.

(The following decisions were made under the statutory provisions as to assignment of errors now repealed.)

When necessary: An assignment of errors is essential on the presentation of an appeal upon certificate of the judge in a case where the amount in controversy is less than one hundred dollars. Kistner v. Conery, 109-439.

An equity case cannot be tried on assignment of errors, except that such assignments are necessary to enable the court to consider rulings on motions or demurrers in such cases. Smith v. Well-slager, 105-140.

No assignment of errors is required where the case is tried below as in equity. Clearfield Bank v. Olin, 112-476.

In an equity case appellant cannot make assignments of error in rulings on the admission or rejection of evidence, and have them considered as in an action at law. Foy v. Armstrong, 113-629; Spinney v. Halliday, 115-420.

On trial de novo the supreme court may consider questions raised by motion, demurrer or objections to evidence which affect the merits of the case, but without an assignment of errors it cannot review rulings which prevent a determination of the case on its merits. Lessemich v. Sellers, 119-314.

Rulings upon questions of pleading cannot be reviewed even in an equity case unless specially assigned as error. Scribner v. Taggart, 123-321.

What sufficient: An assignment is sufficient which mentions the particular ruling objected to in the introduction of evidence, as well as the name of the witness and the page of the abstract where the ruling is found. Manatt v. Scott, 106-203.

An assignment of error in the sustaining of a general demurrer to an equitable petition is sufficiently specific. Williams v. Williams, 115-520.

Assignment of error in sustaining or overruling a demurrer or a motion based on several grounds is not sufficient. Sisson v. Kaper, 105-599; Phelps D. & P. Co. v. Samson, 113-145; Jamison v. Jamison, 113-720; Brewster v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 114-144; Shoemaker v. Turner, 117-340.

Where several grounds are stated in a motion for a new trial errors should be separately assigned as to the ruling with reference to each particular ground, so far as it is desired to have such rulings reviewed on appeal. Huss v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 113-343.

An assignment that "the court erred in its rulings upon the evidence, to which plaintiff excepted, as shown in this abstract, is not sufficient. Nor is an assignment sufficient that the court erred in sustaining a motion based on several distinct grounds. Nor is it sufficient to assign error in "submitting the case to the jury." Dairy v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 113-716.

Assignments that the court erred "in rendering judgment for plaintiffs and against defendants upon the evidence adduced" and "in rendering judgment for the defendants" held not sufficient. Creager v. Johnson, 114-249.

An assignment of error covering instructions given and refused must point out specifically the error relied upon in the court's ruling. Fitch v. Mason City & C. L. T. Co., 116-716.

An assignment that the court erred in giving of its own motion certain instructions described by numbers, "to the giving of each and every one of which instructions the defendants then and there duly excepted," is not sufficient. Faivre v. Manderscheid, 117-724.

Assignments of error in a particular case, set out at length, held not sufficient. The assignment must clearly and specifically point out the very error complained of, and among several points made by objections to instructions, the one or those relied upon must be separately stated. Copeland v. Ferris, 118-554.

An assignment of errors in ruling on objections to evidence, which does not point out what the objection was, and which collects in one assignment several different objections, is not sufficient. Grapes v. Sheldon, 119-112.

If the appellant desires to insist that the court erred as to each ground of a motion for a new trial he must properly assign the error as to each ground in a separate assignment. Reeves v. Lamm, 120-283.

A general statement that the court erred in refusing to give and in giving instructions asked and refused, is not sufficient. Borden v. Isherwood, 120-677.

An omnibus assignment of errors is not sufficient. Suddeth v. Boone, 121-258; Mallory Com. Co. v. Elwood, 120-632.

An assignment which does not point out the exact error complained of is not sufficient. McMillan v. American Express Co., 123-236.

Assignments in particular cases held not sufficient. Geiser Mfg. Co. v. Krogman, 111-503; Field v. Eastern B. & L. Assn., 117-185; Goldstein v. Morgan, 122-27.

Although two parties not having a common interest may unite in assignment of error, such assignments are to be treated as joint and several and errors thus assigned may be taken advantage of by one although not available to the other. Thornburg v. Cardell, 123-313.

Amendment: The assignment of errors may be cured by amendment. Roberts v. Parker, 117-389.

An amended assignment of errors which does not delay the submission of the cause will not be stricken from the files because not made within the time allowed for filing the assignment of errors. Salvador v. Freeley, 105-478.

In argument: An assignment made in connection with appellant's argument may be sufficient to bring up the ruling for review. Hogueland v. Arts, 113-634.

SEC. 4139. Arguments—submission—decision.

I. ARGUMENTS.

Failure to argue: Errors not argued will not be considered. Thompson v. Brown, 106-367.

Questions raised by an assignment of error, but which are not argued, will not be considered, nor will the mere statement of a point entitle it to consideration. Ottumwa v. Hodge, 112-430.

A case will not be reversed for failure to present a defense to the jury when the appellant does not consider it substantial enough to discuss it on appeal. Bradley v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 111-562.

Assignments of error argued for the first time in a reply will be disregarded. Fink v. Des Moines, 115-641; Schoonover v. Osborne, 117-427.

While elaborate argument is not essential, every person invoking the jurisdiction of the supreme court must state the grounds of his objection to the judgment or order appealed from. McCormick Harv. Mch. Co. v. McCormick, 128-155.

When the reasons for appellant's contention appear in the points or propositions contained in his brief, subsequent elaboration by way of argument is optional; but if the contentions of appellant are not submitted either by brief or argument, the judgment should be affirmed. Ibid.

Time for filing argument: Under rule 44, if appellant's argument is not filed by the time required, and no sufficient excuse is shown for the delay, the appellee may have the case submitted as of the day of default, and as thus submitted without argument for appellant, the supreme court will affirm the case. Harrington v. Humber, 112-90.

A slight delay in the filing of appellant's argument which could not have been materially prejudicial to appellee, will not support a motion to submit the case as of date when appellant's argument ought to have been filed, and to affirm for want of the argument. Buehner v. Creamery Pkg. Mfg. Co., 124-445.

Additional abstracts and arguments will not be stricken from the files because not filed in time when the submission of the cause has not been thereby delayed. Ft. Madison v. Moore, 109-476.

Under rule 55 it is within the discretion of the court to consider the appellee's argument, although filed at a later time than is required by the rule. Baker v. Oughton, 130-35.

Where in an equity case the appellee has the opening and closing, but does not serve notice on the appellant waiving his right to open, the appellant may treat the appellee's failure to file argument within thirty days before the hearing of a waiver of the right to open, and file his own argument ten days before the hearing, and if he does so, appellee may respond by serving a reply three days before the hearing and have the cause submitted. Busch v. Hall, 119-279.

Should contain what: It is unnecessary to reprint in the argument the testimony of the witnesses as shown by the abstract. Steele v. Crabtree, 130-313.

Under rule 54 the appellant should not set out in his argument an abstract of the testimony of each witness, but if the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict or finding is relied upon he should give the substance of the evidence in narrative form. In re Wiltsey's Will, 109 N. W. 776.

The arguments should not contain a statement at length of the testimony of each witness. No such statement is authorized under rule 54, which relates to the statement of facts which is to be embodied in the argument. Vial v. Larson, 132-208.

The court will not usually strike appellant's argument from the files on the motion of appellee on the ground that it does not strictly comply with the rules of court. Schultz v. Ford, 133-402.

Scandalous argument: While the supreme court has power to strike out a scandalous argument, it will exercise discretion in doing so, and, save in an extreme case, will not feel inclined to use its power in such a way as to defeat ultimate justice. Knight v. Hawkeye L. & B. Co., 121-74.

Answer to reply—argument: After the filing of the reply argument for the appellant, the appellee may be allowed to make an additional argument for the purpose of pointing out in the record the testimony upon which the statements in the reply argument are based. State v. Smith, 124-334.

An argument filed by the appellee in reply to appellant's reply will be taxed to the appellee if it does not appear that it is in response to anything found in the appellant's reply not properly relied upon in the appellant's opening argument. Schoonover v. Petcina, 126-261.

There is no authority for filing in behalf of appellee an answer to appellant's reply, and such argument may be stricken upon motion, and the costs thereof taxed to the appellee. Anundsen v. Standard Printing Co., 129-200.

II. WHAT QUESTION WILL BE CONSIDERED ON APPEAL.

(a.) Question not raised in court below.

New objections not considered: An objection urged for the first time in the supreme court will not be considered on appeal. Paine v. Lettsville, 103-481; State v. Olds, 106-110; Talbot v. First Nat Bank, 106-361; Hough v. Gearen, 110-240; Easton v. Somerville, 111-164; Reeves v. Howard, 118-121; Mitchell v. Pinckney, 127-696; Mahaska County v. Whitsel, 133-335; State v. Brown, 109 N. W. 1011; First Nat. Bank v. City Council, 112 N. W. 829.

A question not raised and presented to the lower court in a timely and proper manner cannot be presented to the supreme court on appeal. Smith v. McQuiston, 108-363; Mallory Commission Co. v. Elwood, 120-632.

The district court must be given an opportunity to pass upon all questions before they can be considered in the supreme court on appeal. In re Moore's Estate, 103-474.

A party will not be heard in an appellate court until his grievance has been presented to and acted upon by the trial court. Cloud v. Malvin, 108-52.

The appellate court will on its own motion, where justice to the trial court demands it, refuse to review a question raised for the first time on appeal. Houts v. Sioux City Brass Co., 110 N. W. 166.

The very objection which is urged in the supreme court should have been called to the attention of the trial court to enable the appellant to take advantage of it on appeal. Sisson v. Kaper, 105-599.

The constitutionality of a statute cannot be for the first time raised in the supreme court. Hass v. Leverton, 128-79.

When parol evidence of a contract within the statute of frauds is introduced upon the trial without objection it cannot afterwards be objected to upon appeal. Marr v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 121-117.

Errors relating to the introduction of evidence not based on any ruling will not be considered. Philbrick v. University Place, 106-352.

A party cannot complain for the first time on appeal that after his pleading was held defective the court proceeded without allowing him until noon of the next day in which to amend or plead over. Chase v. Wright, 116-555.

Defect of parties not objected to on the trial cannot be first raised on appeal. West Side Lumber Co. v. Hathaway, 115-654.

The supreme court will not on a trial de novo determine a question not raised by the pleadings in the trial court. Zion Church v. Parker, 114-1.

A question which might have been raised in the lower court by demurrer or answer, but which has not been so raised, will not be considered on appeal, even in a case triable de novo. Schoening v. Schwenk, 112-733.

The objection that the action is prematurely brought cannot be made for the first time on appeal. Petty v. Mutual F. Ins. Co., 111-358.

A party must except to special findings with which he is not content even though judgment is rendered in his favor; otherwise on appeal such special findings will be conclusive. Aldrich v. Paine, 106-461.

The objection that in an action against a city for injuries due to defects in a street, not brought within six months from the happening of the injury, written notice of the claim is not alleged or shown, is one which must be made in the lower court and cannot be considered for the first time on appeal. Reed v. Muscatine, 104-183.

Objections to pleadings: The insufficiency of a petition to entitle plaintiff to the relief granted cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Preston v. Peterson, 107-244.

The objection that the petition does not state a cause of action cannot be made for the first time in the supreme court. Iowa Stone Co. v. Crissman, 112-122.

Where the petition states a cause of action and is not assailed in the trial court no question as to the sufficiency of its allegations can be raised on appeal. Newburn v. Lucas, 126-85.

The provisions of 25 G. A., chap. 96, to the effect that a pleading shall not be held sufficient on account of the failure to demur thereto (see Code § 3564) has no application to proceedings on appeal and an objection which might have been raised by demurrer in the trial court cannot for the first time be urged in the supreme court. Reed v. Muscatine, 104-183; Boyd v. Watson, 101-214; Wood v. Dunham, 105-701; Lacy v. Kossuth County, 106-16.

It is not proper to amend a pleading on appeal in the supreme court. Ottumwa Brick & Cons. Co. v. Ainley, 109-386.

No change of base: A party cannot on appeal take a different position than that which was taken by him on the trial of the case. Himmelman v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 132-668.

The appellant cannot on appeal change the position taken by him in the trial court and insist even as matter of law on a different conclusion than that conceded by him to be correct on the trial of the case. Board of Park Commissioners v. Taylor, 133-453.

The appellant cannot rely on a different right in the supreme court from that on which he relied in the lower court. Willis v. Weeks, 129-525.

The appellant will not be permitted to shift his ground on appeal and raise a point not presented in the trial court. Long v. Garey Inv. Co., 112 N. W. 550.

A party cannot on appeal seek relief on a theory of the case not presented to the court below. Battles v. Roberts, 120-747.

New issues: The court may properly submit to the jury the precise issue that was presented by the pleadings, and on which the case was tried, and it cannot be contended on appeal that the case should have been submitted on a different theory than that on which it was in fact submitted, without objection, in the lower court. Steele v. Crabtree, 128-65.

Where the case has been tried by consent of both parties on one theory the appellant cannot complain that another theory was not considered by the trial court. Stelpflug v. Wolfe, 127-192.

Where error is committed in the trial in the submission of the case to the jury on the theory on which it is tried, it is not open to appellee to insist that the question as to which error was thus committed is not in fact involved in the case. Overhouser v. American Cereal Co., 128-580.

An equity case will be tried on appeal on the same issues on which it was tried in the lower court. A new question cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court. Ormsby v. Graham, 123-202.

New reason: If the objection relied on in the appellate court has actually been made in the trial court, appellant is not precluded from giving a reason in support thereof which was not assigned on the trial. Cooper v. Cedar Rapids, 112-367.

Motion for new trial: Where the trial is to the court and the controlling question is as to the sufficiency of the evidence the supreme court may consider that question on appeal although it has not been directly asked to give a new trial on account of the insufficiency of the evidence. Alpha-Check-Rower Co. v. Bradley, 105-537.

A motion for a new trial filed too late or a motion for a judgment notwithstanding verdict, will not be deemed a waiver of errors which might have been presented without such motion. Hooker v. Chittenden, 106-321.

A motion for new trial is not necessary. See notes to § 4106.

A motion to retax costs is not necessary in order to secure a review of the judgment of the lower court as to taxation of attorney's fees made in the judgment itself. Ainley v. American Mut. F. Ins. Co., 113-709.

In criminal cases: The rule that the supreme court will not on appeal consider an objection not raised in the lower court is not applicable in criminal cases. State v. Nine, 105-131.

(b.) What the record must show in order that a question may be reviewed.

Where the evidence is not all before the supreme court it cannot determine whether the trial court did or did not err in sustaining a motion for a verdict. Dungan v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 96-161.

But in such case it is only necessary that the record show all the evidence received. It is not necessary that all the evidence offered be shown. Goring v. Fitzgerald, 105-507.

The error complained of must be made to appear by the record. Carlson v. Hall, 124-121.

The supreme court cannot take notice of any matter of record appearing in the court below not presented in the record on appeal. McCullough v. Connelly, 106 N. W. 756.

The supreme court cannot on appeal review the rulings of the trial court based on evidence not appearing in the record. In re Estate of Smith, 133-142.

Where a question related to a certain exhibit and was objected to as incompetent and immaterial, held, that a ruling sustaining the objection could not be reviewed in the absence from the record of the exhibit referred to. Leifheit v. Schlitz Brewing Co., 106-451.

Where a complaint is made of the rejection of testimony, it must appear, to warrant reversal, that the rejected testimony would have been relevant and competent. Gibson v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 107-596.

Where the appellant's abstract states that upon the issue raised by the pleadings the evidence was conflicting, and this statement is not denied, the court may consider errors assigned in giving instructions with reference to such evidence. Jerolman v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 108-177.

In an action at law, where the appellate court is not asked to determine the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain a verdict or judgment, it is proper to state in the abstract what the evidence submitted tended to prove. Shumway v. Burlington, 108-424.

If the errors assigned are based entirely on rulings on the admissibility of evidence or its effect it is sufficient if the evidence offered and received, together with the objections, rulings and exceptions, is duly certified and filed. State v. Welsh, 109-19.

To pass upon the validity of a directed verdict the record need only show the evidence on the part of the person against whom the verdict is directed. Scott v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co., 112-54.

That the abstract is presumed to show all the evidence, see rule 31 and notes to § 4118.

When the want of indispensable parties is apparent on the record the appellate court may on its own motion raise the question. Tod v. Crisman, 123-693.

III. WHAT WILL WARRANT REVERSAL.

(a.) Presumption of regularity.

Presumption in favor of trial court:

Where a motion for a new trial is sustained generally, the action of the court will not be reversed on appeal if any one of the grounds stated in support of the motion is sufficient to warrant the ruling. Moore v. Horton, 105-376.

Where a motion for a new trial is sustained on one ground thereof, but is not expressly overruled as to the other grounds, the action of the trial court will not be reversed unless it appears that the motion should not have been sustained on any of the grounds stated therein. Holmon v. Omaha & C. B. R. Co., 110-485.

Where a motion for new trial is sustained on some of the grounds set up and expressly overruled upon all others, the appellee not having appealed, the court cannot consider whether the motion might not properly have been sustained on other grounds than those specified by the trial court. A different question would be presented if the court, instead of overruling the motion on all other grounds but those sustained, had made no ruling as to such grounds. Loqm̄is v. Des Moines News Co., 110-515.

Every presumption is to be indulged in favor of the correctness of the rulings of the lower court which are complained of. Carlson v. Hall, 124-121.

In the absence of a showing to the contrary, it will always be presumed that the court has acted properly. Cox v. Burnham, 120-43.

Where the court overrules a motion it will be presumed that the ruling was on a ground which is tenable, although another ground which is not tenable is also urged. German Sav. Bank v. Cady, 114-228.

Where it does not affirmatively appear that the court overruled some of the grounds of a motion for new trial there should not be a reversal because other grounds alleged are not in themselves sufficient to sustain the action of the court in granting a new trial. To establish error in such a case it must affirmatively appear that a new trial should not have been granted on any of the grounds stated. Boyd v. Western Union Tel. Co., 117-338.

New reasons: If there is any ground appearing in the record on which the trial court's ruling can be sustained it will be affirmed, though such a ruling may have in fact been based on some other ground. Cotton v. Southwestern Mut. L. Assn., 115-729.

Where a demurrer is sustained to a petition in an action for mandamus, the judgment will be affirmed if on the whole the petition fails to state a cause of action, even though the reasons indicated for the ruling by the trial court are not sufficient. Vincent v. Ellis, 116-609.

Error without prejudice: One party is not prejudiced by a ruling that the other must prove more than the law requires to be proved under the issues. Reed v. State Ins. Co., 103-307.

The sustaining of a motion to make a petition more specific will be error without prejudice where the petition, having been amended by the addition of new matter in response to such motion, is held insufficient on demurrer on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to show cause of action. Sigmond v. Bebbler, 104-431.

Where under the evidence and instructions there could be no dispute as to the amount of recovery, held that error in refusing to strike out items of plaintiff's claim, as to which final recovery was not allowed, was error without prejudice. Gwinn v. King, 107-207.

Error in overruling a challenge for cause will not be deemed prejudicial where it does not appear in the record that the juror could not have been dismissed peremptorily. Haggard v. Andrew, 107-417.

Where the verdict is in accordance with the interpretation which the court should have given to a written instrument, the action of the court in leaving the interpretation to the jury will be error without prejudice. Hasbrouck v. Western U. Tel. Co., 107-160.

Error in submitting to the jury an issue on which the court should have found as a matter of law in favor of the successful party, is error without prejudice. Mace v. Boedker, 127-721.

The erroneous admission of evidence to establish a fact which is conceded by the complaining party is without prejudice and will not justify a reversal. State v. Wagner, 123-271.

The withholding of rulings on objections to evidence is error without prejudice where the court subsequently sustains a motion to direct a verdict. American

Soda Fountain Co. v. Dean Drug Co., 111 N. W. 534.

Cumulative evidence: Error in exclusion of cumulative evidence which could add nothing to the weight of the evidence already given will be deemed to be without prejudice. Owen v. Christensen, 106-394.

The wrongful exclusion of cumulative evidence is not error without prejudice where there is a sharp conflict in the evidence, and the number and the character of the witnesses is important. Crago v. Cedar Rapids, 123-48.

An erroneous reason for a correct ruling does not furnish a ground for reversal. State v. Crofford, 133-478.

Prejudice must appear: A ruling as to the right to open and close, that matter being left to the discretion of the court, cannot be questioned on appeal, no affirmative prejudice appearing. Shaffer v. Des Moines Coal & Hay Co., 122-233.

Prejudice is not to be presumed from an error in a ruling on a matter of procedure as to which the trial court has a discretion, and unless prejudice is shown to have resulted to the complaining party, such error will not be ground for reversal. Farmer v. Norton, 129-88.

Prejudice presumed: When error appears prejudice will be presumed until the contrary affirmatively appears. Ford v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 106-85.

Contradictory and conflicting instructions are almost uniformly held to be erroneous except in cases where the court can say there was no prejudice. Ibid.

Where an instruction given is erroneous it will be presumed to be prejudicial and to have been the ground of the verdict unless it affirmatively appears that the verdict was based on some other ground. Strever v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 106-137.

From error in the giving of an instruction prejudice is presumed, which must be overcome by the record in order to show that the error was without prejudice. Loughran v. Des Moines St. R. Co., 107-639.

Without an appeal or an assignment of error appellee may protect a judgment in his favor, if entitled thereto on the face of the record, by showing from the record that the errors of which appellant complains were without prejudice. Voorhees v. Arnold, 108-77.

Absence of judge from the court room and beyond hearing of the proceedings when not shown affirmatively to have been without prejudice is in itself error alone sufficient to warrant reversal of judgment. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

But by affirmative consent to such absence error therein will be waived, even in a criminal case, unless prejudice appears. State v. Hammer, 116-284.

Where the character of the answers expected in response to questions asked is evident, the appellant, complaining of a ruling sustaining objections to such questions, is entitled to the presumption that the evidence, if received, would have been favorable to him. Swanson v. Allen, 108-419.

Where the object for which the question is asked is not apparent, but it is sought thereby to establish collateral facts, the materiality of which is to be afterwards shown, counsel asking the question must state what he expects to prove and in what way the facts sought to be elicited will become material, otherwise the sustaining of an objection to his question will be error without prejudice. But where the question calls for evidence, the materiality and competency of which is plainly apparent, an error in sustaining an objection to the question will be presumed to be prejudicial. Quinlan v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 113-89.

Slight error: Where plaintiff was erroneously allowed to introduce evidence of an element of damage for which recovery should not have been permitted, but the damage thus proven was of an inconsiderable amount, and no request to have that amount remitted from the verdict was made in the lower court, held that the judgment would not be interfered with on appeal. Frohs v. Dubuque, 109-219.

Error of a few cents, in computing the amount of recovery, will not be ground for reversal. Perin v. Cathcart, 115-553.

No other result: Where no other conclusion than that embodied in the judgment appealed from could reasonably be anticipated on another trial the error complained of may be disregarded. Schaefer v. Anchor Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 133-206.

The supreme court will not reverse for failure to submit a question to the jury, where no other result could have been properly reached had the question been submitted. Haggard v. Independent Sch. Dist., 113-486.

Error in refusing to transfer an action from the equity to the law docket will be error without prejudice where the issues would in any event be liable without a jury. McCormick Har. Mach. Co. v. Markert, 107-340.

Error in transferring an action to the equity docket will be without prejudice if the same judgment must necessarily have been rendered under the evidence had no transfer been made. Rattray v. Talcott, 124-398.

A case will not be reversed because of the improper admission of evidence, where the result could not have been different had such evidence been excluded. Such error is without prejudice. In re Wiltsey's Will, 109 N. W. 776.

Errors in the admission of evidence are without prejudice if the court subsequently reaches the conclusion that there is not sufficient evidence to sustain a finding of the fact which such evidence was introduced to establish. Arment v. Arment, 111 N. W. 812.

Where the vendee has sued to recover back the purchase price paid for property, held that his failure to plead and prove an offer to return would not necessitate the reversal of a judgment in his favor where it appeared that such tender, if made, would not have been accepted. Olson v. Brison, 129-604.

Nominal damages: A judgment will not be reversed for failure to award nominal damages when it does not appear that appellant was entitled to more. Lippert v. Lippert, 110-550; Milligan v. Owen, 123-285; Castor v. Dufur, 133-535.

In the absence of evidence as to the extent of substantial damages failure to assess nominal damages is not a ground of reversal. Ryce v. Whitley, 115-748.

Failure to award nominal damages may be a ground of complaint on appeal where the recovery of such damages would determine and adjudicate a valuable right as to real property. Harvey v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 129-465.

Exemplary damages: Error in rulings on evidence with reference to exemplary damages will be error without prejudice if actual damages are not allowed. McNally v. Arnold, 127-437.

Error cured: Error in overruling a motion to exclude evidence will be error without prejudice where at the end of the examination all evidence of that character is excluded and the jury cautioned to disregard it. State v. Baker, 106-99.

While it is not proper to base an argument on facts not shown to have existed, error in doing so is cured by prompt action of the court in requiring the withdrawal of such remarks. Mackerall v. Omaha & St. L. R. Co., 111-547.

Error in submitting a ground of recovery of which there is no evidence may be cured by filing an offer to remit that for which verdict should not have been rendered. Bowsher v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 113-16.

Error in rejecting testimony will be without prejudice where the fact sought to be established is fully shown by the testimony of other witnesses. State v. McPherson, 114-492.

The admission of incompetent evidence properly objected to cannot be deemed without prejudice because other evidence of the same character was admitted without objection. Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Commercial State Bank, 104-682.

Prejudice in the erroneous admission of evidence is not removed by the fact that another witness afterwards gives competent testimony as to the same fact. Bryce v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 129-342.

In general, error in the admission of evidence is cured by subsequently striking it out. Croft v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 109 N. W. 723.

Where the witness has in fact testified as to a matter with reference to which an objection to his testimony is sustained, the error will be without prejudice. Hofacre v. Monticello, 128-239.

The overruling of a motion to strike allegations of damage from the petition will not be a ground of reversal on appeal, though erroneous, if the claim embodied in such allegations is subsequently abandoned, and instructions given exclude such claim from the consideration of the jury. Urdangen v. Doner, 122-533.

In general, error in receiving improper evidence may be cured by directing the jury not to consider it. State v. Moran, 131-645.

And see notes to § 3705.

Error cured by verdict: Where there is an express finding supported by the evidence that a will is invalid by reason of want of mental capacity of testator, a submission to the jury of the question of undue influence though erroneous will be without prejudice. In re Will of Sellack, 125-678.

Where by general verdict the plaintiff's cause of action is negated, error in the exclusion of evidence relating to the measure of damages is without prejudice. German Savings Bank v. Fritz, 109 N. W. 1008.

Where the jury finds plaintiff not to be entitled to recover anything for the injury for which suit is brought, notwithstanding proof of damage resulting therefrom, the exclusion of evidence relating to the measure of recovery, if error, is without prejudice. Lush v. Parkersburg, 127-701.

Error in instructions as to the measure of damages for wrongful suing out of an attachment will be without prejudice if the jury finds that the attachment was rightfully sued out. Crowell v. McGoon, 106-266.

Error in rejecting evidence relating to damages is without prejudice where the jury finds no cause of action. Rosenberger v. Marsh, 108-47.

Error in rulings on evidence bearing upon a different issue than that on which the verdict of the jury is based will not warrant a reversal. Hunter v. Davis, 128-216.

(c.) Review of ruling granting or refusing new trial.

New trial for insufficient evidence: The verdict of a jury will not be disturbed by the appellate court on the ground that it is not sustained by the testimony unless it is so manifestly against the weight of evidence as to show it to have been the result of passion or prejudice. Ingraham v. National Union, 103-395.

A motion for new trial for want of evidence is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and its action thereon will not be interfered with unless it is manifest that such discretion has been improperly exercised, and this rule is especially applicable where the motion is sustained. Holman v. Omaha & C. B. R. Co., 110-485.

The supreme court is reluctant to interfere with an order granting a new trial. A large discretion in such matters is lodged in the trial court, and its exercise of discretion will be interfered with only in a clear case of abuse. Loomis v. Des Moines News Co., 110-515.

It requires a clear case to justify setting aside the ruling of a trial court granting a new trial. Mackintosh v. Locke, 112-252.

The supreme court will not interfere with a ruling upon a motion for new trial unless an abuse of discretion is shown, and where a new trial is ordered the abuse must be made to clearly appear. Rodgers v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 117-511.

While the matter of sustaining a motion for new trial rests largely in the discretion of the trial court, yet this discretion is a legal one, and where improperly exercised will be reviewed and the ruling reversed. However, where justice has been done and the case properly decided on its merits, a new trial cannot be granted. Stover v. Flower, 120-514.

Where a discretion is confided to an inferior tribunal, the exercise thereof is not subject to review, save for an alleged abuse, resulting in substantial injustice. Cox v. Burnham, 120-43.

Where the successful party appeals from an order granting a new trial he cannot complain of errors in the instructions with reference to the measure of damages. Thrush v. Graybill, 128-406.

Further as to review of rulings on motions for new trial, see notes to § 3755.

(d.) Review of findings of fact.

Of jury: A judgment will not be reversed for want of evidence to support it unless there is such a complete lack of support in the evidence as appears by the record as to indicate that the verdict of the jury was the result of passion or prejudice. Lutz v. Anchor Fire Ins. Co., 120-136.

Under an assignment of error that the verdict is the result of passion and prejudice and not supported by the testimony, the supreme court is bound to accept as established all that the evidence properly tends to prove in appellee's favor. Pneumatic Weigher Co. v. Burnquist, 128-709.

The supreme court has no jurisdiction to correct the findings of fact made by the jury and it cannot consider the sufficiency of evidence to support the verdict unless that question has been raised in the lower court. Schulte v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 124-191.

In a law case the court on appeal does not determine for itself the preponderance of evidence, but the verdict will be sustained if there is any substantial evidence in its support. Johnson v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co., 123-224.

Of trial court: In a law action the finding of the trial court on a question of fact is to be given the same effect as that of the verdict of a jury. Thistle Coal Co. v. Rex Coal & Mining Co., 132-592.

The finding of the court in a law case has on appeal the force of a verdict. In re Estate of Smith, 133-142.

The findings and judgment of the trial court upon the facts in a law action tried without a jury are to be treated on appeal as having the force and effect of a verdict of a jury, and are not to be overruled if there is any evidence on which they might reasonably or fairly be based. Blackledge v. Davis, 129-591.

Of referee: On an appeal from a decree based on the report of a referee the appellate court is entitled to consider the findings of such referee, although they are not conclusive. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Pouder, 123-17.

IV. HEARING AND DETERMINATION OF APPEAL.

Jurisdiction: The supreme court may adjudicate the question of its jurisdiction as a matter of fact on a motion to dismiss. Yockey v. Woodbury County, 130-412.

Affirmance on motion: The affirmance of the judgment in an action for the recovery of real property entered in the supreme court on motion by reason of the failure of the appellant to properly prosecute his appeal is not a bar to the granting of a new trial in such an action under the provisions of Code § 4205. Such an affirmance adds nothing to the judgment from which the appeal has been taken. Bevering v. Smith, 121-607.

Where the appellant presents neither points, propositions nor argument in support of his appeal, the judgment will be affirmed on appellee's motion. McCormick Harv. Mach. Co. v. McCormick, 128-155.

Affirmance by operation of law: In case of equal division of the judges the decision of the lower court is affirmed by operation of law. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Davenport, 127-677; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 127-678.

Examination of record: On appeal from the action of the court in directing a verdict the correctness of such action must be determined by an examination of the entire evidence material to the issue involved. Watson v. Dilts, 124-344.

Remittitur: The supreme court may affirm on condition that the successful party remit a portion of the judgment, giving to the appellant the option of accepting such remittitur or having a new trial. Hunter v. Davis, 128-216.

Where it appears that a judgment erroneously included a specific sum, the court may affirm the judgment on condition that the appellee remit the amount erroneously included. Govern v. Russ, 125-188.

Where the verdict is excessive the court may order an affirmance upon condition that the appellant file a remittitur of the portion of the judgment over and above the amount which the court finds to be supported by the evidence. Struble v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 128-158.

It is not error to refuse a new trial on one count, the plaintiff pending the motion for new trial having remitted the amount of recovery on such count. McElhone v. Wilkinson, 121-429.

Remand: Where a decree is affirmed and no order is made for remanding the case to the lower court, the affirmance is simply a ratification of what has been done in the lower court and leaves the parties in precisely the same situation in the lower court as though no appeal had been taken, and subsequent proceedings with reference to the enforcement of the decree may be had in the lower court without regard to the fact of such appeal. Dunton v. McCook, 120-444.

Decision binding on second appeal: The rule of law announced by the supreme court on one appeal is to be followed by the lower court on the second trial of the case and will be recognized as the law of the case on a second appeal. McFall v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 104-47.

It would be manifestly unjust to reverse the lower court for following the express direction of the supreme court given on the former appeal in the same case. The holding of the court on one appeal is the law of the case for a subsequent trial of the same case in the lower court. Hendershott v. Western Union Tel. Co., 114-415.

Where the court on appeal has determined that the evidence in an action for negligence should have been submitted to the jury, it is error in the trial court on a second trial to set aside the verdict on the ground that such evidence is not sufficient to support the verdict. Hensley v. Davidson Bros. Co., 112 N. W. 227.

The decision on appeal becomes the law of the case and should be followed on a retrial and on a subsequent appeal, unless the facts on the subsequent trial are materially different. Russ v. American Cereal Co., 121-639.

On an appeal from the second trial of a case in which the first trial has been reviewed by the supreme court, the decision on the former appeal must be taken as the law of the case upon the propositions considered on such appeal. Vogt v. Grinnell, 133-363.

Effect of reversal: The reversal of a judgment annuls garnishment proceedings instituted under such judgment, and the recovery of another judgment on a new trial will not restore the effect of such garnishment. Decatur v. Simpson, 119-488.

Final judgment: Where the facts are found by the trial court and the conclusion reached is the result of an erroneous application of the rules of law to such facts, the supreme court may properly direct the lower court to enter judgment on the facts found without a retrial of the case. Rew v. Independent School District, 125-28.

Opinion: The language in an opinion must be limited by the subject to which it is applied. Giershofer v. Nupuf, 106-374.

What triable de novo: Where the action was properly one at law, but has been treated in the lower court as if in equity, it will be so treated on appeal. Harrison v. Palo Alto County, 104-383.

An action commenced in equity and tried in the lower court without objection as an equitable action is triable de novo on appeal. Des Moines Sav. Bank v. Morgan Jewelry Co., 123-434.

A proceeding for admeasurement of dower is triable ordinarily upon assignment of error and not de novo. In re Estate of Lund, 107-264.

Exceptions to rulings on the admission and exclusion of evidence, even though assigned as error, will not be considered on a trial of an equity case de novo. Varnum v. Winslow, 106-287.

Finding of lower court: Even in an equity case triable de novo it is not improper to give some weight to the fact that the trial court had before it the witnesses, and that it is in a better position than the appellate court to determine the credibility and effect of their testimony. Berry v. Berry, 115-543; Mosher v. Goodale, 129-719; Smartwood v. Chance, 131-714; Baily v. Sioux City, 133-276; Sargeant v. Owen, 111 N. W. 980; Hubbard v. West, 112 N. W. 180.

Even in a case triable de novo the findings of the trial judge on the testimony of the witnesses before him will be disturbed with reluctance. Johnson v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 126-565.

Where a case is tried on oral evidence the trial court stands in a better position than the supreme court to arrive at the truth of the disputed facts and its findings will be disturbed with reluctance, although the case is triable de novo. Wilkie v. Sassen, 123-421.

In view of the fact that the trial court has heard the evidence as given, and has had opportunities to observe the effect of the evidence, it should exercise greater freedom in granting new trials for insufficiency of the evidence than will be exercised by the supreme court on appeal, and the supreme court will not interfere with the discretion of the lower court in such cases unless it appears that there has been a clear case of abuse of legal discretion. Brooks v. Brotherhood of American Yeomen, 115-588.

What abstract must show in trials de novo. Where the abstract of the appellant does not show that the record is such that the case can be tried de novo and the case is submitted in that form and appellee insists that the appeal should be dismissed, the appellant cannot subsequently cure the defects in his abstract and secure a trial de novo by an amendment. Watson v. Burroughs, 104-745.

The fact that the abstract does not appear to contain all the evidence may justify an affirmance of the judgment of the lower court, but not a dismissal of the appeal. First Nat. Bank v. Robinson, 105-463.

Failure of an abstract to show that it contains evidence offered, but not received, as well as that offered and introduced, may be cured by amendment when the defect is pointed out. Steckel v. Standely, 107-694.

After the evidence has on appeal been stricken from the record because not properly preserved and the case has been submitted on the part of appellee, appellant is not entitled to have the evidence reinstated and the case considered as though such evidence was in the record. Citizens' Bank v. Johnson, 107-365.

The submission of the case on an agreed statement of facts does not render unnecessary the preservation and certification of the evidence in an equity case, it appearing that evidence in addition to the statement of facts was introduced, and the agreed statement of facts itself being a matter of evidence must be thus preserved and certified. Co-Operative Bank v. Meldrum 128-694.

Remanding case: Even in an equity case triable de novo the supreme court may remand the case to the lower court for further proceedings to ascertain the amount for which decree shall be rendered. Haggerty v. Brower, 105-395.

Where in an equity case evidence offered by one party is excluded on the objection of the other, and on appeal the exclusion of such evidence is held to have been erroneous, the case may be remanded in order to enable the party who was successful below to introduce evidence to meet that offered by his opponent, which he would have had an opportunity to offer had his objection been overruled. Shetler v. Stewart, 133-320.

Even in an equity case the appellee after a reversal may be entitled to a remand of the case to the lower court to enable him to introduce evidence which under the erroneous theory on which the case was tried was not admissible. But a remand of the case for new trial will be granted only in furtherance of justice, and the showing therefor must be such as ordinarily would entitle a party to a new trial. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hemingway, 111 N. W. 987.

Where a decree enjoining the maintenance of a business as constituting a nuisance is reversed because the business is not under the evidence per se a nuisance, the case should be remanded for further testimony in order that proper conditions may be prescribed as to the conduct of the business. Hughes v. Scheurman Bros., 112 N. W. 198.

Although the trial court loses jurisdiction on an appeal in an equity case which it does not again acquire unless the case is remanded by the supreme court, it still has the chancery power inherent in a court of equity to change or modify its orders relating solely to enforcement of such decree. Swan v. Harvey, 123-192.

SEC. 4140. Judgment against sureties on stay bond.

On affirmance, judgment may be entered in the supreme court against the sureties on the supersedeas bond without notice to them of the motion for such judgment. Jewett v. Shoemaker, 124-561.

The sureties may, however, appear and interpose any defense they might have to the rendition of judgment. Ibid.

The entry of such judgment to which appearances and objection has been made by the sureties is conclusive in a subsequent action by them to restrain the enforcement of the bond. Ibid.

SEC. 4142. Costs taxed. The supreme court must provide by rule for taxing as costs all printing authorized upon the trial of appeals. The court shall also tax the costs of any translation of the shorthand notes filed as provided in this chapter, and also any translation of the shorthand notes which has been made of record in the court below, upon the certificate of the clerk of such court as to the amount of such costs. [26 G. A., ch. 64.] [27 G. A., ch. 105, § 1.]

The trial court has no jurisdiction to make any rule as to the taxation of costs of printing or fees of the clerk or other costs incident to a proceeding in the supreme court. Berkey v. Thompson, 126-394; 102 N. W. 134.

The translation of the shorthand reporter's notes which is required for no other purpose than the presentation of the appeal should not be taxed in the district court. It is subject to taxation only in the supreme court. Ibid.

The costs in a certiorari proceeding are to be taxed in analogy to those on appeal as provided in rule 97. Coffey v. Gamble, 94 N. W. 936.

As to costs of abstracts see notes to § 4118.

SEC. 4145. Restitution of property.

The voluntary payment of money to redeem property, sold under a decree which is afterwards reversed, will not entitle the successful party to recover the money thus paid. Weaver v. Stacy, 105-657.

The amount paid in satisfaction of execution under a judgment may be recovered on a reversal of the judgment. Manning v. Poling, 114-20.

The restoration required by this section is not limited to property sold, but if money of the judgment defendant is obtained by reason of such judgment, as through a redemption of the property sold, he is entitled to its return upon reversal. Schoonover v. Osborne, 117-427.

An execution issued upon a judgment from which an appeal is taken, and all proceedings had thereunder, are dependent for their validity upon the judgment being sustained. If property has been taken under such execution, and the judgment is thereafter reversed, restitution must be made. Decatur v. Simpson, 119-488.

The reversal of a judgment releases a garnishment thereunder, and subsequent recovery of judgment on a new trial will not support or restore the garnishment proceeding. Ibid.

One who enforces a judgment which is afterwards reversed on appeal, may be required to make restitution to the injured party, and the fact that the judgment has been involuntarily paid on execution is not a waiver of such right to have restitution made. Chambliss v. Hass, 125-484.

SEC. 4146. Title not affected.

This section has no application where the judgment does not affect the present condition, possession or title of real property acquired by the party under the proceeding appealed from. Central Trust Co. v. Hubinger, 87 Fed. 3; Hubinger v. Central Trust Co., 94 Fed. 788.

SEC. 4148. Petition for rehearing.

An opinion which has been suspended or withdrawn by the granting of a rehearing, cannot properly be quoted as an official pronouncement of the court. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. O'Brien County, 118-582.

The case is to be disposed of on rehearing on the record as it was on the first submission. Coe College v. Cedar Rapids, 120-541.

The rehearing must be determined on the record as presented on the original submission, and if an objection to the jurisdiction of the court is first suggested on the rehearing the original record cannot be amended for the purpose of showing jurisdiction. Martin v. Martin, 125-73.

A new case cannot be made on a petition for rehearing, nor can matters then be insisted upon which were not presented in the original case. Long v. Garey Inv. Co., 112 N. W. 550.

Parties will not be permitted upon an application for a rehearing to shift their grounds of action or defense. Cook v. Marshall County, 93-372.

While in civil cases the supreme court will not grant a rehearing on account of matters not urged in the original presentation of the case, this rule does not apply in criminal cases, and a reversal may be ordered on grounds presented for the first time on rehearing. State v. Phillips, 119-652.

A notice of the petition for rehearing has no effect to suspend the decision, and the filing of the petition itself has no such effect, unless so ordered by the court or one of the judges upon its presentation. State v. Cahill, 131-286.

Pending a petition for rehearing a procedendo to the district court will not, as a rule, be issued. Berkey v. Thompson, 126-394.

SEC. 4150. Death of party—continuance.

While the substitution of proper parties may be made when asked, the death of a party does not prevent the determination of the appeal, and it is not necessary that there be a substitution where death occurs between the submission and the decision of the appeal. Williams v. Williams, 115-520.

SEC. 4151. Dismissal of appeal.

Where the controversy involved the right to the possession of a farm, which right if it ever existed had terminated, held that the appeal should be dismissed. Moller v. Gottsch, 107-238.

CHAPTER 3.

OF CERTIORARI.

SECTION 4154. When writ may issue.

When will lie: The action of certiorari has several offices, among which is that of supplying defects of justice in cases obviously entitled to redress and yet unprovided for by the ordinary forms of proceedings. It is especially applicable in cases where inferior boards, officers or tribunals, exceed their authority and no method of appeal has been provided by statute. Bremer County v. Walstead, 130-164.

The writ of certiorari is never used to correct mere error, but only to test the jurisdiction of an inferior tribunal. Butterfield v. Treichler, 113-328.

The writ of certiorari cannot be properly granted when the error complained of can be fully and speedily corrected by appeal. Oyster v. Bank, 107-39.

Certiorari will lie where the lower court has exceeded its jurisdiction, and in such a case equity has no jurisdiction to interfere by injunction. Vete v. Bington, 132-487.

A writ of certiorari will not be granted for the annulling of the action of an inferior tribunal, unless it be shown that such action was prejudicial to the plaintiff. Blodgett v. McVey, 131-552.

If the trial court has no jurisdiction or has acted illegally, its rulings may be corrected upon certiorari, although the question of jurisdiction might be raised by appeal. Berkey v. Thompson, 126-394.

A complaining party may not select one merely erroneous ruling out of many and have it reviewed in the supreme court by certiorari, but where the action of the lower court embraces several distinct questions upon some of which it has no jurisdiction to act and upon which it acts illegally, such rulings may be reviewed by certiorari. Berkey v. Thompson, 126-394.

The writ of certiorari is not available to correct mere irregularities or errors in the proceedings of the lower court, but where the action complained of is in excess of the jurisdiction of the court, an appeal is not an adequate, plain and speedy remedy, and certiorari will lie. United States Standard Voting Mach. Co. v. Hobson, 132-38.

Therefore, held that the action of the court in restraining the use of a voting machine at a public election, being in excess of the equitable powers of the court, should be annulled in certiorari. Ibid.

A writ of certiorari should not be granted when the error complained of in the action of the inferior tribunal can be fully and speedily corrected by appeal. Eels v. Bailie, 118-519.

Where a party who had procured judgment in a justice's court, from which an appeal by the opposite party had been taken to the district court, notwithstanding a remittitur which reduced the amount of the judgment to less than $25, appeared in the district court and moved to dismiss for want of jurisdiction of the appeal, and his motion was overruled, held that he could not by certiorari question the correctness of such ruling. Ibid.

When a new jurisdiction is created by statute, and the court or officer exercising it proceeds in a summary mode, or in a course different from the common law, and a remedy for the revision of its exercise is not given by the statute creating it, certiorari from a court having the general superintendence and control over inferior jurisdictions will lie for its revision. Home Sav. & T. Co. v. District Court, 121-1.

Certiorari is the proper remedy where a council or the officers of a municipal corporation acting judicially are without authority, or are otherwise acting illegally. Moore v. City Council, 119-423.

The board of review for equalization of taxes, having acquired jurisdiction to proceed in a particular case as to the correctness of the assessment, its action cannot be declared invalid in certiorari proceedings on the ground that there was not evidence before it justifying an increased assessment. Ferguson v. Board of Review, 119-338.

Where the court acts without jurisdiction in entering a judgment or order, the aggrieved party is not limited to his remedy by appeal, but may have the judgment or order annulled in a proceeding by certiorari. But if the court has jurisdiction an appeal is a plain, speedy and adequate remedy. Young v. Preston, 131-292.

When a want of power is urged in a municipal corporation to vacate a street, a court of equity may pass upon the question, but when the power is conceded and the manner of its exercise is sought to be controlled, the remedy is at law through proceedings by certiorari. McLachlan v. Gray, 105-259.

Where the board of supervisors has jurisdiction to establish a public highway, its action cannot be reviewed in a cer- tiorari proceeding. Brockway v. Board of Supervisors, 133-293.

Certiorari is the proper remedy by which to test the legality of the proceedings of a board of supervisors in changing the location of a courthouse. Way v. Fox, 109-340.

The action of certiorari will not lie to correct a mere irregularity in the procedure of boards of directors with reference to consolidation of school districts. Molyneaux v. Molyneaux, 130-100.

If the court improperly proceeds after a dismissal, there being no counterclaim properly pleaded, the error of the court may be corrected by certiorari. Bardes v. Hutchinson, 113-610.

Contempt: A proceeding by certiorari is available, and is the only remedy in behalf of one found guilty of a contempt. Wells v. District Court, 126-340.

Not waiver of appeal: Certiorari and appeal are not necessarily inconsistent remedies, and the fact that the party brings certiorari to test the jurisdiction of the court to enter an order does not constitute a waiver of the right to appeal from such order. Porter v. Butterfield, 116-725.

Who may bring action: A citizen and taxpayer as such is not entitled to maintain certiorari to test the validity of a city ordinance, where it does not appear that he has any right affected by the ordinance not common to all residents, citizens and taxpayers. Collins v. Keokuk, 108-28.

A tax payer cannot maintain an action in his own name to determine the validity of the action of the lower court, when his only interest is in the expense to the taxpayers involved in such action. Polk County v. District Court, 133-710.

One who has no individual interest in a proceeding in a court cannot prosecute an action by certiorari to review such proceeding. Wilson v. Remley, 106-583.

The right to an office cannot be determined in a proceeding by certiorari on the part of one not in possession to annul the action of an appointing board in selecting another person to such office. Daniels v. Newbold, 125-193.

Return: The return is conclusive as to all matters relating to the procedure which is questioned in the petition and writ. Carpenter v. Clements, Judge, 122-294.

Waiver: The right to question the validity of a judgment on the ground that the court is without jurisdiction of the subject-matter is not waived by taking exceptions to the judgments. Davis v. Preston, 129-670.

SEC. 4158. Service and return.

It is not provided that notice be given to the party in whose favor the judgment was entered which is questioned on certiorari for want of jurisdiction. Such party has an opportunity to appear and be heard by counsel if he sees fit. Davis v. Preston, 129-670.

Persons interested in upholding the proceedings assailed are entitled to be heard. Tod v. Crisman, 123-693.

SEC. 4160. Trial—judgment.

Costs: It is discretionary with the court to tax the costs in certiorari to the person instituting the proceeding, which is held to have been instituted without jurisdiction. Coffey v. Gamble, 94 N. W. 936.

A board or officer not interested in the controversy, but merely acting in a judicial capacity, will not be mulcted in costs in a certiorari proceeding, unless affirmatively shown to have acted in bad faith. Ibid.

SEC. 4162. Limitation.

Where the motion to set aside an order and judgment of the district court is still pending in that court undisposed of, the supreme court will not entertain a proceeding by certiorari to review its action. Lloyd v. Spurrier, 103-744.

An action of certiorari to determine the validity of a special assessment may be brought within one year after the levy of the assessment, although the resolution ordering the improvement for which the assessment is made was passed more than a year before the bringing of the action. Polk v. McCarthy, 104-567.

In a proceeding to determine the liability of a land owner to construct a partition fence, held that any claim on his part that the land was a public common was one which should have been interposed by proceedings under certiorari within one year. Miles v. Tomlinson, 110-322.

TITLE XXI.

OF PROCEDURE IN PARTICULAR CASES.

CHAPTER 1.

OF ACTIONS OF REPLEVIN.

SECTION 4163. Where brought—petition.

Petition: It is not required under the present Code, as it was under the Code of '51, that the petition shall allege that the defendant wrongfully detains the property in controversy. Kennedy v. Roberts, 105-521.

The requirements of the statute as to what the petition shall contain are not jurisdictional. Ibid.

The allegation in an action for replevin of a note that it was "of no value except as a matter of evidence to the plaintiff and for that purpose and that only is of the value of five hundred dollars," held to be sufficient allegation of the actual or apparent value as required by statute. Ibid.

Even though plaintiff was not entitled to the possession of the property when the action was commenced, he may have the right to have his interest in the property determined. Harward v. Davenport, 105-592.

Under allegation of absolute and unqualified ownership, plaintiff may prove ownership subject to chattel mortgages. Ibid.

What must be shown: Plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title, and any evidence which tends to show that he did not obtain title to the property or to some part thereof, is admissible. Gevers v. Farmer, 109-468.

Where plaintiff alleges that he is the absolute and unqualified owner of the property he must prove such allegation as made, and proof of his right to hold it in trust or under a mortgage will not support his action. Ibid.

Plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title, and if he seeks to recover possession of property levied on under writ of execution, on the ground that it is exempt from execution, he must establish that fact. Hillman v. Brigham, 110-220.

An action of replevin is to determine the present possession of the property. Hillman v. Brigham, 117-70.

A landlord who has a lien upon a tenant's personal property, but whose right to possession thereof has not accrued, cannot recover possession by replevin. Ibid.

A mortgagee of personal property seeking to recover possession under his mortgage must show that the mortgage covers the property which he seeks to recover. Martin v. Lesan, 129-573.

Where plaintiff in an action of replevin claims solely as absolute owner, he cannot support his right to possession on evidence that he is entitled to such possession under a chattel mortgage. Powers v. Benson, 120-428.

Property seized as an attachment proceeding in which sufficient grounds for attachment are not alleged may be recovered by the owner from the officer as unlawfully detained. Upp v. Neuhring, 127-713.

As between the owner and the officer, notice of ownership, under Code § 3906, is immaterial.

Possession of defendant: Possession in the defendant at the time suit is brought is essential to the maintenance of the action. Woodling v. Mitchell, 127-262.

Where it appears from the allegations of the plaintiff's petition that the property, recovery of which is sought, has passed from the control and possession of the defendant, the petition does not show good cause of action. Woodling v. Mitchell, 127-262.

Notice of ownership: Under Code § 3991 an officer is authorized to levy on property under an execution, unless notice of ownership by a third person has been served upon him by delivery of the original, and if such service is defective, such defect may be taken advantage of to defeat an action by the third person to recover the property from the sheriff in replevin. Frazier v. Hill, 125-116.

In an action of replevin brought by an execution defendant to recover property wrongfully levied on under the writ, the notice of ownership provided for in Code § 3991 is immaterial. Mitchell v. McLeod, 127-733.

A person other than the execution defendant suing to recover possession of property from an officer on the ground that the levy was unlawful, must show the notice of ownership provided for by Code § 3991, with reference to the giving of an indemnity bond. Shaw v. Tyrell, 129-556.

The owner of goods cannot replevy them from an officer holding them under execution against such owner, without setting up and establishing some facts showing the goods to be exempt from such levy, and where such ground of exemption is not shown, the fact that the owner claiming the goods has not given notice to the officer of a claim to the goods, under the provisions of Code § 3991, providing for indemnifying bond in case such notice is given, is wholly immaterial. Young v. Evans, 118-144.

Transfer to equity: If, after plaintiff has brought an action in replevin, it develops that he can only obtain the relief to which he is entitled in chancery and that the issues are properly triable there, he may amend his petition and have the action transferred to the equity calendar. Cox Shoe Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 105-402.

Instructions: In an action to recover possession of certain described machines, of which plaintiff claimed to be the owner, and the defendant an agent for their sale on commission, while the defendant claimed to be the owner by purchase, the contention being as to the nature of the contract, held that an instruction correct as to the issues with reference to some of the machines, was not prejudicially erroneous, though as to others there could be no recovery because of their sale to an innocent purchaser. DeLaval Separator Co. v. Sharpless, 129-114.

SEC. 4164. Ordinary proceedings—no joinder or counter-claim.

In an action of replevin to get possession of property under a chattel mortgage, defendant may by way of cross action ask an injunction restraining the proceeding under the mortgage as to any property not subject thereto. Brody v. Chittenden, 106-340.

A counterclaim cannot be interposed in a replevin suit. Sylvester v. Ammons, 126-140.

Although in replevin no set-off or counterclaim can be interposed, yet one who has been held liable on a replevin bond having at the same time a claim against the person who has been held to be the owner of the property, who is insolvent, may maintain an equitable action to enjoin the enforcement of the judgment on the bond so far as it is off-set by the existing indebtedness. And this right of equitable set-off is available also as against the assignee of the judgment. DeLaval Separator Co. v. Sharpless, 111 N. W. 438.

Defendant is not allowed in an action of replevin to introduce by way of counterclaim any general demand he may have for damages for trespass committed by animals, possession of which plaintiff seeks to recover in the action. Holaman v. Marsh, 116-483.

The issue in replevin is always which of the parties is entitled to possession at the commencement of the action, and in an action of replevin by the mortgagee to recover possession of the mortgaged property, the mortgagor may set up want of consideration for the mortgage to defeat the action. *Slyvester v. sue in damages on the replevin bond for injury to the property. Newton v. Round, 109-286.

In an action on a replevin bond the sureties are liable under a judgment rendered for the money value of the property, should the plaintiff elect to take such judgment. Gerlaugh v. Ryan, 127-226.

SEC. 4172. Delivery bond.

The sureties on the delivery bond are released from liability if the plaintiff elects to take a judgment for the money value of the property. Such election waives the delivery of the goods. Gerlaugh v. Ryan, 127-226.

The sureties on the delivery bond are not liable if the defendant appears and defends the action and judgment is rendered in his favor for the possession of the property, although an incidental judgment for costs in regard to an application for continuance is entered against him. American Soda Fountain Co. v. Dean Drug Co., 111 N. W. 534.

SEC. 4175. Assessment of value and damages — right of possession.

An election to take a money judgment for the value of the property at the time of taking precludes the recovery of damages for the subsequent use of the property. Colean Imp. Co. v. Strong, 126-598.

SEC. 4176. Judgment.

Where an intervenor, asserting right to the property, takes judgment for its return to him, he cannot afterwards recover on the bond for damages to the property. Newton v. Round, 109-286.

Where the plaintiff elects to take judgment for the money value of the property, he cannot recover damages for expenses in preparing to defend the case. He is entitled only to the value of the property and legal interest. Becker v. Staab, 114-319.

The fact that the judgment is for the return of the property or its value, without statement of the value of defendant's right therein, will not render the judgment void. Frazier v. Hill, 123-116.

In an action on a replevin bond the sureties are liable under a judgment rendered for the money value of the property, should the plaintiff elect to take such judgment. Gerlaugh v. Ryan, 127-226.

SEC. 4178. Plaintiff's option.

Where a party claiming possession of the property by intervention elects to take judgment for its return, he cannot afterwards recover on the bond for damages to the property. Newton v. Round, 109-286.

Where the plaintiff in a replevin suit elects to take a money judgment, treating the wrongful taking of his property by the defendant as a conversion, he cannot have in addition special damages for its detention. Powers v. Benson, 120-428.

The plaintiff electing to take a money judgment for the value of property which has been detained by the defendant does not thereby abandon his right to recover damages for the detention. (Distinguishing Powers v. Benson, 120-428.) Newberry v. Gibson, 125-575.

The party found entitled to property not in his possession is given the option to have execution for delivery of the specific property, or for its value, as determined by the jury, as of the time when judgment was rendered. Such provision does not relate to the time when the action was commenced. It is, therefore, erroneous to allow recovery of interest on the value of the property prior to the time of rendering judgment. Bonnot v. Newman, 109-580.

Where the plaintiff elects to take a money judgment for the value of the property in a justice's court, he may, by remitting the amount of his claim in excess of twenty-five dollars, prevent an appeal by the opposite party, under the provisions of Code § 4547. Rust v. Olson, 113-571.

SEC. 4179. Judgment on bond.

Two conditions precedent are essential to the entry of judgment for the value of property; failure to deliver the property, and an election to take judgment for its value. If the plaintiff elects to take a money judgment for the value of the property, the sureties on defendant's delivery bond are released from their obligation. Gerlaugh v. Ryan, 127-226.

CHAPTER 2.OF ACTIONS FOR THE RECOVERY OF REAL PROPERTY.*SECTION 4182. By ordinary proceedings.

Adverse possession and acquiescence are defenses which may be set up in a proceeding to recover possession of real property. Ratray v. Talcott, 124-398.

SEC. 4183. Parties.

An action to recover possession of real property will lie only on behalf of one holding legal title, with the right to immediate possession. Marks v. McGookin, 127-716.

But such showing cannot be defeated simply by the showing of a contract of purchase on the part of defendant, which is executory in character, and under which defendant's right of possession has not yet accrued. Ibid.

A mere privilege or license is only an incorporeal hereditament and will not support an action of ejectment. So held as to the ownership of a lot in a cemetery. Equity only can give a full and complete remedy as to infringement of the rights of the owner of such lot. Anderson v. Acheson, 132-744.

SEC. 4184. Title.

Where both parties claim under a common grantor it is only necessary to prove a title from such grantor. Brown v. Tabor, 103-1.

The statutory provision that in an action to recover real property plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title, does not apply to a case where a plaintiff in possession of land under a claim of title is seeking to enjoin the sale thereof under execution against one who has no interest therein. Moore v. Kleppish, 104-319.

In an action to recover possession of land under an unacknowledged, unrecorded and lost deed, as against a title based on recorded instruments, proof of the deed must be clear and satisfactory. Thorn v. Lister, 129-223.

This provision is not applicable in actions to quiet title. English v. Otis, 125-555.

SEC. 4205. New trial.

A motion for new trial made during the term is not a bar to the application for a new trial within one year under this section; and the fact that the unsuccessful party has appealed from the ruling denying him a new trial on application made during the term and that the judgment has been affirmed under the rules of the supreme court for failure to present the appeal in the proper manner will not constitute such adjudication as to prevent the presentation of the same question under this section. Bevering v. Smith, 121-607.

The period of one year allowed for application for such new trial commences to run from the final entry of judgment. Ibid.

The procedure in actions of right is prescribed by statute including the right to a second trial of the issues; in such an action the propriety of a second trial is left to the discretion of the court and greater latitude is allowed to such judicial discretion than in ordinary actions. New trials may be ordered for reasons which would be insufficient under an ordinary application for a new trial. Ibid.

CHAPTER 3.OF ACTION FOR FORCIBLE ENTRY OR DETENTION OF REAL PROPERTY.*SECTION 4208. Grounds.

While originally this proceeding was criminal, it is under the statutes of this state a special action. Herkimer v. Keller, 109-680.

In this action title is not involved, except incidentally for the purpose of showing extent of possession where there is no apparent actual possession as to the entire premises, nor is the right of possession involved, since the remedy is limited to the actual peaceable possession of the plaintiff and the forcible entry and unlawful detention of the defendant. Delmonico Hotel Co. v. Smith, 112-659.

The right of possession cannot be determined in an action of forcible entry and detainer. The question involved is the fact of possession, not the right. Cagwin v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 114-129.

In an action of forcible entry and detainer, nothing more is presented than the question as to the right of possession. Chambers v. Irish, 132-319.

In such action the tenant cannot be heard to deny his landlord's title, nor can he defeat the action by pleading a pending action instituted by him to settle contract rights. Ibid.

The action of forcible entry and detainer is purely possessory, and may be maintained by one tenant in common against a lessee. Willis v. Weeks, 120-525.

SEC. 4211. Jurisdiction—transfer—appeal.

A justice of the peace may properly be given jurisdiction of an action of forcible entry and detainer. Such action does not necessarily involve the right of possession, as distinct from the fact of possession. Kerkimer v. Keller, 109-680.

Before resorting to a summary remedy for the ejection of a tenant on account of non-payment of rent, in accordance with the terms of a lease, the landlord should demand the rent and afford some reasonable opportunity to the tenant to make payment. Cole v. Johnson, 120-667.

SEC. 4212. Petition—venue.

The provision that this action may be maintained before a justice of the peace in an adjoining township where there is none qualified to act in the township where the land is situated is applicable where in the latter township a justice of the peace has been elected, but has not qualified, nor undertaken to act as an officer. Herkimer v. Keller, 109-680.

Failure to verify the petition in an action for forcible entry and detainer must be taken advantage of in the trial court, otherwise the defect is waived. Ibid.

SEC. 4216. Title not investigated—transfer.

This proceeding cannot be submitted for an action of right. Herkimer v. Keller, 109-680.

The right of one in possession after a sale on foreclosure under an alleged agreement to extend the period of redemption may be determined in an action against him for forcible entry and detainer. Potter v. Ft. Madison Loan & Trust Bldg. Assn., 133-367.

SEC. 4217. Possession—bar.

Where a tenant holds over after the termination of a written lease, without the assent of the landlord, the thirty days' notice in writing required by Code § 2991 to terminate a tenancy at will is not necessary, and if such occupancy continues for more than thirty days, with the knowledge of the landlord, the remedy by action of forcible entry and detainer is barred. McClelland v. Wiggins, 109-673.

CHAPTER 4.

OF ACTION TO QUIET TITLE.

SECTION 4223. Who may bring action.

What interest will support action: One who has an equitable title only may maintain an action to quiet it. O'Neil v. Wilcox, 115-15.

Without the statutory provision for quieting title, a reversioner out of possession, and with no right to possession, could not maintain an action against one in possession, as a life tenant, to determine his rights in the property; but by this section such action is authorized, and it seems that the intention of the statute is that such questions must be settled within the statutory period of limitation. There can at least be no hardship in holding such to be the rule in cases where there is no disability, and where the facts upon which apprehended litigation will rest are fully known. Murray v. Quigley, 119-6.

A remainderman, although not yet entitled to possession, has such interest as may be made the subject of an action to quiet title. Hubbird v. Goin, 137 Fed. 822.

The owner may maintain the action here contemplated for the purpose of removing a cloud upon his title, created by an apparent lien. The action is not limited to the determination of the rights of one who claims title. Blair v. Hemphill, 111-226.

One who trespasses upon real property in the possession of another cannot have relief in equity to enjoin the person rightfully in possession from protecting his possession as against such trespasser. Currier v. Jones, 121-160.

In an action to quiet title against one holding a tax certificate, a tender made to the defendant as soon as his right to a certificate is asserted, is sufficient. Carter v. Cemansky, 126-506.

Adverse possession: In an action to quiet title based on a claim of adverse possession, under a deed purporting to convey absolute title, made in good faith and for an adequate consideration, the claim of plaintiff should not be disregarded on the ground that at the time of receiving the conveyance plaintiff knew of the possibility that some adverse claim might be made in the future. Wenger v. Thompson, 128-750.

Claim of title in good faith accompanied by actual and adverse possession for the period of limitation will support an action to quiet title. Severson v. Gremm, 124-729.

Adverse possession may furnish the title necessary to support an action to quiet title. Lougee v. Shuhart, 127-173.

Title in plaintiff: Where one asks to have title quieted in him as the owner in fee of the land in controversy, he must prove title, and, failing to do so, is not entitled to relief. Koch v. West, 118-468.

In a particular case held that plaintiff did not make out such title in himself as to justify the granting of a decree quieting title in him. Smith v. Thomas, 120-12.

Where the description of land is sufficient, without the designation of the state in which it is located, an erroneous designation in that respect will not be material. Ibid.

The statutory provision with reference to actions for the recovery of real property that plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title (Code § 4184) is not applicable in actions to quiet title. But plaintiff can have no relief unless he shows such interest in the property that as against the defendant, he is entitled to have the title quieted in him. If both plaintiff and defendant claim under the same chain of title, it is unnecessary for plaintiff to do more than establish his own title as derived from the common source. English v. Otis, 125-555.

SEC. 4226. Demand for quitclaim—attorneys' fees.

The statutory provision imposing attorneys' fees in actions to quiet title is penal in its nature, and should be strictly construed. The request for a deed should be made of the party who is to execute the instrument. If it is in any case sufficient to make demand on an agent, it can only be when the agent is vested with power to make the deed. Lawless v. Stamp, 108-601.

Where the state intervenes in an action to quiet title, and asks relief against both plaintiff and defendant, claiming title, the state must recover on the strength of its own title, and not on the weakness of that of the other claimants who are in possession. Rood v. Wallace, 109-5.

Interest of defendant: An action to quiet title presupposes complete title in the plaintiff as against the defendant, and the action will fail if it shall be made to appear that in fact the defendant has some real interest in the property as distinguished from a mere apparent or asserted right. In such a case the court will not stop to measure the extent of the interest of defendant. Cody v. Wiltse, 130-139.

Therefore the vendor of land under a contract containing no provision for forfeiture on the default of the vendee in making payment cannot maintain an action to quiet his title as against the vendee on account of default in payment. Ibid.

One who has made a conveyance of all his alleged interest in land is not a necessary party to an action to quiet title. Cunningham v. Cunningham, 125-681.

In an action to quiet title, based upon a tax deed, one who does not appear to be the owner of the land and entitled to question the validity of the deed cannot set up its invalidity as a defense. McCash v. Penrod, 131-631.

Laches as defense: Laches may be a sufficient ground for refusing to grant relief in an action to quiet title. Woodward v. Barr, 128-727.

Parties—notice: A decree quieting title as against one served by publication is final unless set aside on proper showing made by defendant within the period allowed for new trial in such cases. The court is not bound to require proof of non-residence before it can proceed to a hearing. If in point of fact the defendants named are non-residents, the decree is binding upon them, although the fact of non-residence is not specifically found. Bales v. Williamson, 128-127.

One who is not a party to an action to quiet title is in no way affected by the decree. Dows Real Estate & Trust Co. v. Emerson, 125-86.

The object in exacting the payment of a fee for execution of a quitclaim deed is to cover expenses incident to delivery as well as execution of the deed, and such expenses cover the postage necessary for mailing the deed to the person demanding the same. The person of whom the deed is demanded must in order to avoid liability for costs and attorney's fees deliver the deed to the grantee in some manner on the tender of fees provided by statute. Shay v. Callanan, 124-370.

Judgment for costs cannot be rendered against defendants in an action to quiet title who are not served with notice as provided by this section. Mock v. Chalstrom, 121-411.

SEC. 4227. Equitable proceedings.

In an action to quiet title under a tax deed held that the evidence was sufficient to show claim of right and color of title in defendant, coupled with possession so as to justify an attack upon the tax deed and support a right to redeem. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Pond, 128-600.

A proceeding to vacate a decree quieting title in one claiming under a tax deed against an insane owner who makes no appearance, and for whom no guardian is appointed, instituted by his heirs under Code § 3154, differs from a proceeding in equity in the nature of a bill of review in that the former is governed by the limitations contained in the statutory provision while the latter is controlled by the ordinary rules of procedure. Hawley v. Griffin, 121-667.

Where an action to determine a disputed boundary line has been brought and plaintiff amends the petition so as to change it into an action to quiet title, the court may properly grant a motion to transfer the case to the equity docket for trial. Boltz v. Colsch, 109 N. W. 1106.

CHAPTER 5.

OF ACTIONS TO ESTABLISH DISPUTED CORNERS AND BOUNDARIES.

SECTION 4228. When allowed.

An adjudication in a proceeding to fix a common corner of four adjacent sections, and the boundary lines of such sections as affected by the location of such common corner, is not binding as to the interior dividing lines of such sections. Muecke v. Barrett, 104-413.

A county cannot maintain proceedings to settle boundaries of a county road crossing defendant's land. It is only the owner of the land who may maintain such proceeding. Dickinson County v. Fouse, 112-21.

Where the only dispute is as to the boundary line between two tracts, the court is not authorized, on the report of a commissioner, to establish a corner affecting the boundaries of other property owners not parties to the suit. Newton v. Templeman, 115-643.

Proceedings of this character are not triable de novo, and the finding of the commissioner and of the court has the force and effect of the verdict of a jury. Ibid.

SEC. 4236. Corners and boundaries established.

A judgment in such a proceeding to which the owner of one tract of land involved is not a party, is not binding in a subsequent proceeding by him to establish the same corner. Dittmer v. Mierendorf, 129-643.

SEC. 4237. Appeal.

An appeal will not lie from an order appointing a commissioner to locate a corner at a certain point and taxing the costs up to that time. Oster v. Devereaux, 115-724.

CHAPTER 6.

OF PARTITION.

SECTION 4240. By equitable proceedings—no joinder or counterclaim.

In general: One of the joint owners of a water power making improvements on the common property may, on partition, have the improvements thus made by him set apart as his share. They do not necessarily become a portion of the common property in such sense that the common owners are entitled thereto. Forrest Milling Co. v. Cedar Falls Millings Co., 103-619.

There may be a parol voluntary partition of lands owned in comomn. Hayes v. Marsh, 123-81.

The rights of the widow may be shown to have been abandoned in consequence of an agreement or settlement so as to defeat her right to have such interest set off to her in a partition proceeding. Wright v. Breckenridge, 125-197.

In an equitable action in the nature of a suit for partition, there may be an assignment of the widow's dower. Beeman v. Kitzman, 124-86.

Judgments against one to whom a share of the property is set aside as the holder of a fee simple or equitable interest therein, attach to the share thus set aside. Atlee v. Bullard, 123-274.

A right to inherit as an illegitimate child, recognized under the provisions of Code § 3385, may be interposed as a claim in a partition proceeding to which the legitimate heirs of deceased are parties. Alston v. Alston, 114-29.

Parties: Judgment lienholders are necessary parties to a valid adjudication as to the partition of the premises, and such lienholder not being made party to such proceeding is not bound thereby. Smith v. Piper, 118-363.

Where by the provisions of a will a trust is created for the benefit of minors and the legal title vests in the trustee, he is a necessary party in an action for partition, and it is not sufficient that the minors who are beneficiaries under the trust are made parties. Parkhill v. Doggett, 112 N. W. 189.

Right of vendee under contract: The right of a defendant claiming an interest in the property sought to be partitioned, which is founded on a contract to convey, may be defeated by proof of circumstances which would justify the refusal of a specific performance of such contract. Schneider v. Schneider, 125-1.

Where one seeks to have secured to him a right in the property under contract, his action is for specific performance rather than partition. Noecker v. Wallingford, 133-605.

Settlement of estates: Where, in a proceeding to partition the real property of a decedent among his heirs, it was urged that it could not be determined whether the personalty would be sufficient to pay debts of the estate, but it did not appear that the facts from which that question was to be determined could not be ascertained without a continuance, held, that a motion to continue on that ground was properly overruled. Cheney v. McCulloch, 104-249.

The fact that the estate of a deceased owner has not been fully settled is no defense to an action for partition of his real property among those entitled to share therein. Smith v. Smith, 132-700.

The partition among the heirs of a deceased person of the homestead need not be delayed until the debts of the estate are paid and the estate settled. Hild v. Hild, 129-649.

In an action for partition among heirs, if brought before the estate has been settled, the court may postpone final decree until the estate is settled and need not dismiss the action as prematurely brought. Shupe v. Bartlett, 106-654.

Joinder of other causes: Where no objection has been made in the trial court to misjoinder or improper interposition of a new cause of action by counterclaim or cross-petition, such objection cannot be raised on appeal. Kringle v. Rhomberg, 120-472.

Where the statutory provision prohibiting joinder of any other cause of action with an action for partition is ignored and no objection to an equitable counterclaim is interposed, the court may grant such relief as equity requires. Noecker v. Wallingford, 133-605.

Section applied as to joinder of other causes of action. Watson v. Richardson, 110-698.

SEC. 4252. Confirmation.

In the final decree an additional accounting may be had as to matters affecting the proper share of the parties subsequent to the preliminary decree. Moy v. Moy, 111-161.

Where improvements were made in good faith, the allowance therefor is not to be limited to such as were needed to preserve the property. Ibid.

SEC. 4253. Partition—referees appointed.

The fact that property is not partible is not in itself a ground for denying to joint owners relief in a suit for partition. Truth Lodge, etc., v. Barton, 119-230.

After the referee has reported a proposed partition, the court may modify the report and enter a decree such as is equitable without referring the case back to another referee. Shaerer v. Shaerer, 125-394.

The shares should be so set off as to be as nearly as possible of equal value under ordinary conditions as between persons having equal interests. Shearer v. Shearer, 125-394.

SEC. 4256. Special allotments.

Under the facts in a particular case held that the party claiming to have made improvements, and to be entitled to an allowance therefor in case of the sale of the property, had so far enjoyed the rents and profits on an inadequate consideration as to be precluded from having such relief. Bergman v. Kammlade, 109-305.

SEC. 4259. Judgment—decrees of partition to be recorded. Upon the report of the referees being approved, a decree shall be rendered confirming the partition and apportioning the costs as herein provided, entering judgment therefor. Upon the rendition of such decree the clerk shall file with the county recorder of the county a duly certified transcript of such part of the entire decree, in the case in which partition has been ordered, as may be necessary to show the volume and page where such decree is recorded, and the confirmation of the shares and interests of the parties in the property of which partition is made, and the names of the parties who are found entitled to such shares, and an accurate description of each of the shares allotted to the several owners; and such transcript shall be presented to the county auditor for transfer and recorded in the deed records of the county where the action was brought and also in the other counties in the state, if any, where any of the property so partitioned is situated; and in such case the clerk shall transmit to the county recorder of each of such other counties a duplicate of such transcript, and the same shall be there so recorded and transfer so made. Such transcript shall be indexed in the recorder's office the same as conveyances of real estate with the names of the parties so entitled to such shares as grantors, and the name of the party to whom each share is allotted as grantee. The costs of making and recording such transcript shall be taxed as part of the costs in the case. [C., '73, § 3296; R., § 3642; C., '51, § 2064.] [27 G. A., ch. 106, § 1.]

An admission of the facts alleged by the plaintiff seeking partition without other pleading will entitle plaintiff to judgment on the pleadings. Caldwell v. Drummond, 127-134.

The effect of a decree in partition is simply to segregate and locate the share of each of the common owners as a separate parcel of land allotted to him, and to extinguish his interest in portions thereof allotted to others. The title by which such person holds his allotted share is the same as that by which his individual interest in the estate in common was held. The deed in partition destroys the unity of possession, and thereafter each holds his share in severalty, but the deed confers no new title or additional estate. Foster v. Hobson, 131-58.

SEC. 4260. Costs.

The discretion exercised by the court in the apportionment of costs in such cases will not be interfered with in the absence of a satisfactory showing of abuse. McGuire v. Luckey, 129-559.

SEC. 4261. Attorneys' fees.

There is no authority for apportioning the attorney's fee here provided for. Plant v. Fate, 114-283.

Where there is a dispute as to the ownership of the property and both parties are represented by counsel, attorney's fees will not be taxed as provided by statute; but taxation of attorney's fees is proper where there is no controversy as to ownership or proportionate shares, and the contest raised in the proceeding is not as to the title but as to a collateral matter. Smith v. Smith, 132-700.

Where the object in an action in the nature of a suit for partition brought by the widow of a deceased grantor against his grantee is to secure assignment of dower, attorney's fees will not be allowed as in an action for partition. Beeman v. Kitzman, 124-86.

CHAPTER 7.

OF THE FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

SECTION 4273. Of personal property—by notice and sale.

Where a chattel mortgage is executed to secure a debt past due the mortgagee has the right to foreclose it upon delivery. Johnston v. Roebuck, 104-523.

Where by the terms of the mortgage the mortgagee is authorized to sell at private sale he may sell the articles separately, in lots, or together, as may best suit the convenience of buyers and insure the largest returns. In such case the mortgagee is the trustee for the mortgagor and is required to act in entire good faith and conduct the sale fairly. Ibid.

The act of the mortgagee in taking possession of the mortgaged property before the happening of contingencies which are specified by the mortgage as conditions on which the mortgagee is to take possession will constitute a conversion and render the mortgagee liable for the value of the property. Ibid.

Where a chattel mortgage gave to the mortgagee the right of possession and use during the continuance of the mortgage, held, that it superseded a previous contract by which the mortgagee was holding the property as bailee for hire. Barnhart v. Hanford, 105-116.

A foreclosure by notice and sale in accordance with the stipulations of the mortgage will be valid notwithstanding an agreement between the parties postponing the day of sale, unless the purchaser had actual notice of the agreement to postpone. Gibson v. McIntire, 110-417.

The parties may stipulate for a foreclosure without giving the statutory notice, and may waive damages resulting from the sale being conducted without such notice. Geiser Mfg. Co. v. Krogman, 111-503.

Where a sheriff acts in making a sale under authority given in the instrument itself, and not under statutory authority, his fees are not controlled by the provisions of Code § 4277. In such a case a reasonable compensation may be allowed. Dowie v. Christen, 115-364.

A landlord's lien may be satisfied out of the proceeds of the sale. Ibid.

The decree of foreclosure of a chattel mortgage is binding, at least as against collateral attack, even though that method of foreclosure is not authorized by the terms of the contract. King v. Nelson, 120-606.

The foreclosure of a chattel mortgage without judicial proceedings, but in accordance with statutory provisions does not constitute a seizure by process of court, and therefore the provisions of Code §§ 4019, 4020 do not entitle laborers to a lien on the proceeds of such foreclosure. Wills v. Kelley, 121-577.

SEC. 4277. Notice of sale.

The provisions of this section do not control the fees to be allowed to the sheriff for selling mortgaged chattels, in pursuance of power given in the instrument itself. Dowie v. Christen, 115-364.

SEC. 4283. How contested.

If the mortgagor has an adequate remedy at law he cannot remove the foreclosure proceeding to the district court by injunction. McCormick Har. Mach. Co. v. De La Mater, 114-382.

SEC. 4285. Sale under pledge.

Foreclosure in court is one method of enforcing a pledge lien. The lien in such case merges in the judgment and there subsists to be made effective by special execution. Croft v. Colfax E. L. & P. Co., 113-455.

SEC. 4288. Separate suits on note and mortgage.

A suit may be maintained on a note in one county and, in a proper case, an action for the foreclosure of the mortgage in another. McDonald v. Second Nat. Bank, 106-517.

It seems that a foreclosure suit may proceed independently of the action on the note secured by the mortgage. Smith v. Moore, 112-60.

SEC. 4289. Judgment—sale and redemption.

The possession of a mere mortgagee is not entitled to protection as against the owner of the fee obtained under a sale made in pursuance of the foreclosure of a prior mortgage. McDonald v. Second Nat. Bank, 106-517.

A sale of all of the mortgaged premises, under a decree of foreclosure, for a part of the mortgage debt which is due, discharges the premises from the lien of the mortgage for the part of the debt not due, and for which the decree does not provide. But in actions for the foreclosure of mortgages for installments due, jurisdiction may be retained to provide for the collection of the installments not due. It is not proper, however, to provide that the sale for the installments due shall be subject to a lien for the installments not due. Kilmer v. Gallagher, 107-676.

Unless a court retains jurisdiction of a case to provide for future installments, a sale of the mortgaged premises under foreclosure passes to the purchaser all the title and interest of the mortgagor and mortgagee in and to the premises, and the purchaser takes free from the lien of unpaid installments, and it is immaterial that the unpaid installments are evidenced by separate notes and mortgages. Wells v. Ordway, 108-86.

Where the holder of two mortgages brings action for the foreclosure of the senior of them, without reference to the junior, and bids in the premises at a sale under such foreclosure, and the mortgagor subsequently quitclaims to a third person who redeems from the foreclosure, the lien of the junior mortgage is thereby extinguished. Henry v. Maack, 110 N. W. 469.

The mortgagor's grantee by quitclaim may rely upon the deed to protect himself against the lien of the junior mortgage. Ibid.

The holder of the junior mortgage not thus foreclosed cannot rely as against the mortgagor's grantee on a personal covenant between the mortgagor and his grantee by which the latter has undertaken to pay off such junior mortgage. Ibid.

There is a marked difference between redemption by judgment debtor and redemption by his grantee. It is the policy of the law to secure to the debtor, as nearly as practicable, the full value of his property sold on execution. When the grantee of the mortgagor acquires the right to redeem, and a junior lienholder fails to exercise his privilege, and is barred by lapse of time, the grantee may redeem without removing such bar, and thus perfect the title in himself. Co-operative Sav. & L. Assn. v. Kent, 108-146.

After foreclosure and prior to the sale, the right of the mortgagor is an equity of redemption, which may be conveyed, and the grantee will on redeeming from the sale take the title free from liens of junior creditors who are made parties to the foreclosure proceeding and have failed to exercise the right of redemption. Cooper v. Maurer, 122-321.

A junior judgment creditor failing to redeem from a sale under a senior judgment loses the right to subsequently make redemption from a foreclosure sale under a mortgage which has priority to both judgments. Francestown Sav. Bank v. Silver, 122-685.

After a decree, sale and expiration of the period of redemption in a foreclosure proceeding to which a junior mortgagee is made a party, the latter has no lien which may be enforced in a subsequent foreclosure proceeding against a purchaser of the mortgagor's right of redemption. Witham v. Blood, 124-695.

A lien-holder made party to the foreclosure proceeding must satisfy his lien by bidding in the property or redeeming under statutory provisions and cannot enforce his lien in the absence of such purchase on execution or redemption as against one who buys the property from the mortgagor during the redemption period. Witham v. Blood, 124-695.

The grantor in a conveyance which is found to be a mortgage is entitled to possession until decree of foreclosure and expiration of the statutory period of redemption. Harrington v. Foley, 108-287.

Where in foreclosure of a mortgage a receiver has been appointed he is entitled to his compensation out of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property. Ibid.

The statutory right to redeem cannot be cut off by agreement of the parties, nor by the mortgagee's possession, and exists until barred by statute. When the right is sought to be exercised the mortgagee or grantee in possession will be required to account for the land and profits, and for all the proceeds of the land and other securities. Adams v. Holden, 111-54.

A mortgage in this state does not create an estate, but simply a lien or a charge upon the land to secure the debt, and a suit for foreclosure is barred in ten years, and as the rights of mortgagor and mortgagee are reciprocal, redemption under a mortgage will be cut off in the same time. Ibid.

The equitable right of redemption which exists independently of the statute may be enforced until taken away in accordance with express statutory enactment. And an equitable action may be maintained to enforce the right of redemption after execution sale and before the expiration of the statutory period for redemption. If it can be shown in such action that the mortgagee is under obligation to account to the mortgagor for receipts from the property sufficient to extinguish the indebtedness, the mortgagor is entitled to have

SEC. 4293. Other liens.

These provisions as to applications of payments apply to the disposition of the surplus in the hands of the mortgagee

SEC. 4295. Satisfaction acknowledged.

The penalty provided in this section cannot be enforced where the satisfaction relied on is a decree rendered against an insane mortgagee, the year allowed for applying for new trial after the incapacity is removed not having expired. Pollock v. Milburn, 112-528.

SEC. 4297. Foreclosure of title bond.

It may be provided in a contract to convey that on failure to pay as agreed the rights of the vendee shall be forfeited. Bigler v. Jack, 114-667.

Where time is not made of the essence of the contract, and there are no provisions for forfeiture, a mere failure to pay will not in itself work a forfeiture. On breach by the vendee of the stipulations as to payment, the vendor may sue on the contract as at common law to cover the purchase price, or he may proceed under the statute to foreclose; but he cannot by notice effect a forfeiture. The statute relating to forfeitures has application only to those cases where the contract makes a provision for forfeiture. Cody v. Wiltse, 130-139.

SEC. 4299. Forfeiture—notice.

The provision that a land contract shall not be forfeited or canceled unless written notice of such forfeiture be given, relates to a forfeiture of the contract and contemplates its cancellation or termination, while an action to foreclosure is based upon the recognition and continuing validity of the agreement between the parties. Therefore, notice to the vendee other than that necessary in instituting the suit, is not necessary where the proceeding is for the foreclosure of the bond for a deed. Clifton Land Co. v. Davenport, 130-94.

The vendor cannot effect the forfeiture of the contract on failure of the vendee to make payment of an installment of the purchase price by giving the statutory notice required in case of forfeitures, unless a forfeiture is provided for in the contract. Cody v. Wiltse, 130-139.

A provision as to forfeiture cannot be relied on as defeating an execution sale of the sale set aside and the mortgage declared satisfied. Dolan v. Midland Blast Furnace Co., 126-254.

The redemption from a mortgage provided for by law is redemption from foreclosure sale. First National Bank v. Campbell, 123-37.

after his debt is satisfied. Citizens' Bank v. Whitney, 110-390.

A court of equity has no power to enjoin a proceeding by a justice of the peace to enjoin the penalty provided for in this section on the ground that the mortgage is not in law and fact satisfied. Home Sav. & T. Co. v. Hicks, 116-114.

No notice to the vendee such as that contemplated in Code § 4299 relating to forfeiture is necessary before instituting an action to foreclose. Clifton Land Co. v. Davenport, 130-94.

The statutory provisions as to foreclosure of title bonds have no reference to contracts for options. An option is not a sale, nor even an agreement for a sale. It is at best but a right of election in the party receiving the same to exercise a privilege, and only when that privilege has been exercised by acceptance does it become a contract to sell. Hopwood v. McCausland, 120-218.

the vendee's interest, where no steps to enforce such forfeiture have been taken. Thomassen v. De Goey, 133-278.

One who has taken no steps to declare a forfeiture of a contract to convey cannot insist on such right of forfeiture as a defense in an action of specific performance. Rea v. Ferguson, 126-704.

While the acceptance of payment after a declaration of a forfeiture may constitute a waiver of such forfeiture, yet it must satisfactorily appear by the evidence that the payment was accepted under the contract, and not in satisfaction of some other obligation or indebtedness. Sutphin v. Holbrook, 122-272.

Before the enactment of the statutory provision requiring thirty days' written notice forfeiture, held that a forfeiture declared without notice in accordance with the terms of the contract was effectual. Harris v. Graf, 111 N. W. 434.

CHAPTER 8.

OF ACTION FOR NUISANCE, WASTE AND TRESPASS.

SECTION 4302. Nuisance—what constitutes—action to abate.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held, that the use which defendant was making of the river adjoining his premises was a proper one, in view of the business carried on and the conditions existing in the locality, and that defendant was not creating a nuisance. Bennett v. National Starch Mfg. Co., 103-207.

In the supplemental petition the plaintiff may in the same action set up a continuance of the nuisance for the purpose of reconveying additional damages. Footte v. Burlington Gas Light Co., 103-576.

Where a contract gave one party the right to construct a drain over the land of another, held that it did not confer the right to maintain a nuisance, and that, even if the plaintiff knew of the existence of such nuisance when he bought the premises, he would not be estopped thereby from action to recover damages therefor and abate the same. Van Fossen v. Clark, 113-86.

A nuisance may exist so as to cause special damage to a private person where such damage is not susceptible of direct and positive proof, and in such case it is the rule that where the nuisance is shown to exist the law presumes damage for the injury to the right, and the jury is given large discretion in fixing the amount thereof. Ibid.

The unauthorized obstruction of a street by a railroad company allowing its trains to stand thereon, is a continuing nuisance. Gilcrest Co. v. Des Moines, 128-49.

CHAPTER 9.

OF ACTIONS TO TEST OFFICIAL AND CORPORATE RIGHTS.

SECTION 4313. For what causes.

A proceeding by quo warranto cannot be maintained for the purpose of determining the rightfulness of the exercise of power by a corporation with reference to a private trust. State v. Higby Co., 130-69.

Rights granted to a corporation with reference to the use of the streets of a city for the operation of street cars are in the nature of a franchise, the validity of which may be inquired into by quo warranto. State v. Des Moines City R. Co., 109 N. W. 867.

An action of quo warranto is a proper action in which to determine the legality of the incorporation of an independent school district. The remedy by appeal to the county superintendent is not exclusive. State v. Alexander, 129-538.

Courts of equity have no jurisdiction to determine the respective rights of claimants to a public office. An injunction will not lie to restrain a person acting as a public officer from exercising the functions pertaining to the office on the ground that he is not entitled to it. State v. Alexander, 107-177.

An action to test the right of defendant to hold and perform the duties of a public office may be brought. A proceeding to contest the officer's election is not exclusive. Ibid.

The proper remedy to determine the right of an office is by quo warranto. The record of election to such office is not conclusive when attacked in such proceeding. Daniels v. Newbold, 125-193.

A petition for quo warranto to test the right of an incumbent of a county office to hold the same may be entertained, notwithstanding the provision of Code § 1198 for election contests. Haverstock v. Aylesworth, 113-378.

While the right of school officers to act in their assumed official capacity may be tested on behalf of the state by an action of quo warranto, the school township within which is located the district for which the officers assume to act, may, in an action in equity for an injunction, have the right to act determined. School Township v. Wiggins, 122-602.

The validity of a patent for land may be inquired into by action of quo warranto. Murray v. Quigley, 119-6.

The laches of the complaining party may be such as to defeat his action. But where relator shows the illegality of the proceedings complained of he is entitled to the relief asked unless the delay in instituting the proceeding is such that the other party will be prejudiced by the granting of the relief. State v. Alexander, 129-538.

SEC. 4315. By county attorney.

Although the proceedings were instituted by private parties, nevertheless the county attorney representing the public may appear therein, and it is immaterial with reference to his action in prosecuting the proceedings that it has been thus commenced by private citizens. State v. Des Moines City R. Co., 109 N. W. 867.

SEC. 4316. By private person.

A resident and taxpayer of a city may maintain an action by quo warranto to test the legality of the appointment of water-works trustees under the provisions of Code § 747. State v. Barker, 116-96.

After a proceeding in the nature of quo warranto has been instituted by private citizens as relators, it may be continued in that form, although the county attorney appears and is allowed to act as the representative of the public, and it is not proper in such cases to dismiss the relators from the action. State v. Des Moines City R. Co., 109 N. W. 867.

A slight interest only is necessary to sustain the proceeding as brought by private citizens representing the public. Ibid.

Leave to private citizens to sue in the interest of the public may be granted without notice to the defendant. Ibid.

The leave granted to the applicant for the right to bring the action is not subject to attack in a collateral proceeding. State v. Alexander, 129-538.

SEC. 4318. Costs.

In a quo warranto proceeding to test the validity of an election to office, if the contestant fail to establish his rights the costs should be taxed as in a criminal proceeding wherein the prosecution fails. Hull v. Eby, 123-257.

SEC. 4335. Penalty for refusing to obey order.

One who refuses to comply with an order of the court in a proceeding by quo warranto may be punished for contempt. State v. Cahill, 131-286.

CHAPTER 11.

OF ACTIONS OF MANDAMUS.

SECTION 4341. Definition. The action of mandamus is one brought to obtain an order commanding an inferior tribunal, board, corporation or person to do or not to do an act, the performance or omission of which the law enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust or station. Where discretion is left to the inferior tribunal or person, the mandamus can only compel it to act, but cannot control such discretion. All such actions shall be tried as equitable actions. [C., '73, § 3373; R., §§ 3761, 3763; C., '51, § 2180.] [32 G. A., ch. 168.]

Where a discretion with reference to the desired action is vested in the inferior tribunal or person, mandamus may be awarded to compel action, but not to control the discretion. Perry v. Board of Supervisors, 133-281.

Where the duty imposed upon a board or tribunal involves an exercise of discretion based on facts to be found by it, mandamus will not lie however erroneous the conclusion reached. Preston v. Board of Education, 124-355.

An action of mandamus will not lie with reference to proceedings of a board of directors of a school district in a matter which is within the discretion of such board. Kinzer v. Independent School District, 129-441.

A writ of mandamus will not ordinarily issue to compel state officers or agents to do an act involving discretion or judicial determination. Therefore held that mandamus would not lie to compel state officers to satisfy a disputed claim against the state. Wilson v. Louisiana Purchase Exposition Com., 133-586.

Mandamus will lie to compel the appointment to office of one who is entitled to such appointment under the soldiers' preference law, if the facts entitling him to such appointment are conceded. Shaw v. Marshalltown, 131-128.

But, the appointing officer or tribunal is charged with the determination of the question whether the qualifications of the applicant under the law are equal to those of the other applicants, and mandamus will not lie to review the finding as to such fact. McBride v. City Council, 110 N. W. 157.

Mandamus will lie to compel railroad companies to construct suitable crossings for one owning lands on both sides of the railroad track without the prior submission of the matter to a board of railroad commissioners. Swinney v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 123-219.

A school corporation for whose benefit a contract to supply water is made between the city and a water company may maintain an action of mandamus to compel specific performance thereof. Independent School Dist. v. LeMars City Water & Light Co., 131-14.

This action may be maintained to compel the officers of a private corporation to issue certificates of stock or transfer them on the books of the company. Hair v. Burnell, 106 Fed. 280.

Mandamus is the proper action for compelling the board of supervisors to canvass corrected election returns. Rummel v. Dealy, 112-503.

One who claims to be the lowest bidder for work to be done for a public corporation, under a statute providing for an award of such contract to the lowest bidder, has not such interest as to authorize him to maintain an action of mandamus to compel the awarding to him of the contract, nor is the awarding of such contract so far a ministerial act that the action of the public authorities can be controlled by such action. Vincent v. Ellis, 116-609.

The granting of a writ of mandamus is not a matter of right, and rests very largely within the discretion of the court. Ibid.

A demurrer to the petition for mandamus does not constitute an admission that the facts alleged give the court jurisdiction to review the proceeding on account of which mandamus is asked. Preston v. Board of Education, 124-355.

Although the statute authorizes the recovery of damages in an action of mandamus, the nature of the action is not thereby changed, and such action is not removable to the federal courts. Mystic Milling Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 132 Fed. 289.

SEC. 4343. Extent of remedy.

Mandamus will not be granted in anticipation of a supposed omission of duty. Plaintiff must show that defendant is actually in default in the performance of a legal duty then due, and no threats not to perform can take the place of such default. Mystic Milling Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 131-10.

Where the right involved is a private one, there must a demand and refusal before the writ will issue. Ibid.

SEC. 4344. Other remedy.

An application for a writ of mandamus will not lie if the applicant has any other remedy in the ordinary course of law which is plain, speedy and adequate. Kinzer v. Independent School District, 129-441.

The right to appeal to the county superintendent from the action of the board of supervisors of a school district does not preclude an application for mandamus with reference to such action to determine whether the board in the matter complained of acted within the scope of its powers as defined by statute. Ibid.

The validity of the action of the board of supervisors in vacating a highway may be tested by certiorari and an action by mandamus will not lie for that purpose. Sullivan v. Robbins, 109-235.

An action of mandamus may be maintained by voters to compel the board of supervisors to canvass returns of election not properly certified, when the certificate is corrected by the officers making the return. Rummel v. Dealy, 112-503.

SEC. 4345. Who may bring action.

One of the signers of a petition to the board of supervisors, asking submission of a question to the vote of the people, may maintain mandamus to compel the board to perform its duty in the submission of such question. Windsor v. Polk County, 115-738.

SEC. 4346. Petition.

A mandatory order by way of auxiliary relief may be made in the final decree although asked in an amendment and without showing of a previous demand. Davenport Gas & Elec. Co. v. Davenport, 124-22.

CHAPTER 12.

OF INJUNCTIONS.

SECTION 4354. When allowed.

In actions at law: The provision for injunction in actions brought by ordinary proceedings does not apply where the claimant to an office is seeking to get possession thereof. State v. Alexander, 107-177.

Adequate remedy at law: A court of equity will not interfere by injunction where the party asking relief has a plain, speedy and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law, nor will an injunction lie to test the validity of a criminal statute. Ewing v. Webster City, 103-226.

But a court of equity may enjoin an act, even though it be punishable as a crime, if it is one which would cause irreparable injury. Ibid.

Therefore, held, that the enforcement of an ordinance providing a penalty for buying or selling within the city limits without the commodity being weighed at the public scales, might be enjoined if it should be found to be void and would cause irreparable injury to the party complaining, without plain, speedy and adequate remedy at law. But, held, that the ordinance in question was valid and its enforcement would not be enjoined. Ibid.

Where a plaintiff has a plain, speedy and adequate remedy at law, he cannot have relief by injunction. Forbes v. Carl, 125-317.

Therefore, held, that a tenant could not, before the commencement of his term, have an injunction to restrain the landlord's threatened interference with the rights of the tenant under his lease. Ibid.

Use of counterfeit label: Under the provisions of Code § 5050, that every person, association or union adopting a label, trade-mark or other form of advertisement may proceed by action to enjoin the manufacture, use, display, or sale of any counterfeits or imitations thereof, held that a wholesale dealer in cigars could be enjoined from selling boxes of cigars bearing a counterfeit union label, and that good faith in making the sale, as for instance, where it was made by a clerk in violation of instructions, would constitute no defense. But held that no damages could be recovered in such action by the labor union whose label was counterfeited, unless actual damage was shown, and further, that damages by way of penalty could not be allowed, in the absence of any evidence as to the amount of such damage. Beebe v. Tolerton & Stetson Co., 117-593.

To restrain trespass: A threatened trespass of a continuing character may be restrained by injunction. Halpin v. McCune, 107-494.

An injunction will lie to prevent repeated trespasses on plaintiff's property by the domestic fowls of defendant, without proof of defendant's insolvency. Keil v. Wright, 112 N. W. 633.

To restrain wrongful acts as to real property: An injunction will lie to prevent the act of the tenant in violation of the covenants of his lease, whether constituting waste or not. Kraft v. Welch, 112-695.

The removal of a building which is an interference with real estate such as to absolutely deprive the plaintiff of the beneficial enjoyment of its present use may be restrained if such threatened removal is without lawful authority. Lemmon v. Guthrie Center, 113-36.

Injunction is a proper remedy to restrain injury to real property by the removal therefrom of fixtures which are a part of the realty. State Security Bank v. Hoskins, 130-339.

The bringing of a sidewalk to grade and the destruction of trees in a street which would be caused thereby may be enjoined, where proper action to establish the grade has not been taken by the council. The property owner is not limited to testing the validity of a tax imposed on his premises by reason of such unlawful action. Burget v. Greenfield, 120-432.

Possessory title will support: Where the threatened wrong is to a possessory title, it is sufficient as against a wrongdoer to allege and prove possession. Blennerhasset v. Forest City, 117-680.

To abate nuisance: The owner of land who is specially damaged by the establishment and maintenance of a cemetery constituting a nuisance may maintain an injunction for the abatement thereof. Payne v. Wayland, 131-659.

The owner of an unenclosed lot should not be enjoined from permitting the use of his lot for the playing of ball, although such use causes annoyance and damage to adjoining property owners, where it does not appear that he has encouraged nor affirmatively permitted such use of his premises to be made. Spiker v. Eikenberry, 110 N. W. 457.

An injunction to abate a nuisance may properly be denied where it appears that the nuisance complained of has been permanently abated. Perry v. Howe Co-operative Creamery Co., 125-415.

The jurisdiction of a court of equity by injunction to restrain the obstruction of a public highway as a nuisance is not defeated by the fact that such obstruction constitutes a crime. The ground of equitable jurisdiction is the ability of a court of equity to give more complete and adequate relief than is obtained at law, and to prevent irreparable mischief and vexatious litigation. Gilcrest Co. v. Des Moines, 128-49.

Fraudulent condemnation of land: Injunction will lie to prevent a fraudulent resort to proceedings for the condemnation of lands for public purposes; but in general, objections which can be interposed in the proceeding itself cannot be made the ground of application for equitable relief against such proceedings. LaPlant v. Marshalltown, 111 N. W. 816.

To restrain illegal tax: A taxpayer may maintain an action to enjoin the carrying out of a resolution increasing the number of wards in a city, there being no authority to change the wards by resolution. Cascaden v. Waterloo, 106-673.

Equity will interfere by way of injunction to prevent the enforced collection of taxes illegally assessed, but a threatened assessment alone cannot be enjoined. Security Savings Bank v. Carroll, 128-230.

Where a tax is void, equity will grant relief against its enforcement. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Phillips, 111-377.

A court of equity will not enjoin the collection of a tax on account of excessive assessments fraudulently made. The remedy afforded to the taxpayer by application for relief to the board of review, under Code § 1373, is exclusive. Crawford v. Polk County, 112-118.

If a tax is illegal and void, its collection may be enjoined in equity, even if there be a tribunal provided for reviewing the same. It is only where the tax is irregular or erroneous that the remedy by appeal is exclusive. Security Savings Bank v. Carroll, 131-605.

Where a city council has no authority whatever to assess property for street improvements, the owner of property illegally assessed may enjoin the enforcement of the assessment without resorting to an appeal. Ft. Dodge Elec. L. & P. Co. v. Ft. Dodge, 115-568.

To restrain official action: An injunction will lie to restrain the removal of the county records from the place where the court house is legally established to a place unlawfully selected by the board of supervisors as a county seat. Way v. Fox, 109-340.

A court of equity will not by injunction restrain the proceeding of a justice of the peace on the ground that he is without jurisdiction, as that objection may be interposed in the proceeding itself. Home Sav. & T. Co. v. Hicks, 116-114.

Right to public office: An injunction will not lie to restrain a person acting as a public officer from exercising the functions of the office on the grounds that he is not entitled to the office; but it seems that an injunction will lie in favor of the incumbent of an office to protect him in the discharge of the duties of the office against an adverse claimant until the latter shall have established his right to the office by an action at law. State v. Alexander, 107-177.

An injunction will not lie to restrain a person acting as a public officer from exercising the functions pertaining to the office on the ground that he is not entitled to such office. In such case the legal remedy is adequate. District Tp. v. Myles, 109-541.

Equity will not interfere by injunction to determine the title to an office. Vette v. Byington, 132-487.

The right to vote at an election is a political right which equity will not interfere to protect. Shoemaker v. Des Moines, 129-244.

Nor can a taxpayer resort to injunction to restrain the county officers from carrying out a contract for the purchase of voting machines which have been approved by the commission as provided for that purpose. Ibid.

The right to vote is a political and not a civil right, and a court of equity will not exercise its extraordinary power of injunction to protect such right. United States Standard Voting Mch. Co. v. Hobson, 132-38.

Sale of a business: A valid contract for the sale of a business with an agreement not to re-engage therein at a particular place for a specified period is enforceable by injunction against a vendor who is insolvent, even though the contract also contains a provision for stipulated damages. Heinz v. Roberts, 110 N. W. 1034.

Personal services: Equity will not undertake to decree specific performance of contracts for personal services nor in the absence of an express negative covenant will it aid the enforcement of such contract by injunction; and even where there is an express negative covenant injunction will not be granted save in those exceptional cases where by reason of the peculiar or extraordinary character of the promised services in violation of the agreement will cause injury to the other party, for which an action at law will afford no adequate remedy. Gossard Co. v. Crosby, 132-155.

To restrain mortgagee: It is proper in an action of replevin based on rights claimed under a chattel mortgage for defendant to ask an injunction restraining plaintiff from enforcing any claim under such mortgage with reference to property not subject thereto. Brody v. Chittenden, 106-340.

Enjoining void judgment: Where a judgment is rendered without jurisdiction its enforcement may be enjoined. The injured party is not bound to prosecute his remedy by appeal. McConkie v. Landt, 126-317.

The words "operation of a railway" mean the operation of a constructed railway, and not the construction of a railway. Johnston v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-537.

A temporary injunction to stop a railroad company from proceeding with its work of building its road, or the operation of a part already constructed, should not be issued without notice. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 116-681.

SEC. 4363. Bond.

A right of action does not accrue upon a bond given for the issuance of a temporary injunction until the main action has been tried and determined. Lacey v. Davis, 126-675.

To sustain an action for damages on the bond it must be made to appear that the injunction was wrongful in its inception, or at least was continued owing to some wrong on the part of plaintiff. If rightfully awarded but afterwards properly dissolved because of matters done or arising subsequent to its issuance, there can be no recovery of damages. Scott v. Frank, 121-218.

The final decree dissolving the injunction is res adjudicata as to the issues decided, but the entire record, including the pleadings, may be examined to determine precisely what was decided by a decree. Ibid.

A preliminary injunction should not be dissolved because of the inadequacy of the bond, except on failure to comply with an order for additional security. Wingert v. Snouffer, 108 N. W. 1035; 111 N. W. 432.

been an answer filed denying the allegations of the petition rests largely within the discretion of the trial court. LaPlant v. Marshalltown, 111 N. W. 816.

The judge may issue a temporary writ in vacation. Young v. Preston, 131-292.

A preliminary injunction restraining the city from levying an improvement assessment and issuing certificates based thereon does not stop the ordinary business of the municipality within the provision that no injunction of that character shall be granted except on reasonable notice. Wingert v. Snouffer, 108 N. W. 1035; 111 N. W. 432.

The dissolution of an injunction against the exercise of a technical right which defendant had no desire or intention to exercise gives rise to no cause of action upon the bond. But if it involves a substantial right and is the sole relief sought, there may be recovery on the bond, although the damages are nominal. Weierhauser v. Cole, 132-14.

Where in a suit for an injunction defendant admits the allegations of the petition and pleads a counterclaim, and upon trial judgment is entered for plaintiff which is stayed by defendant, whereupon the injunction is dissolved, the order dissolving the injunction is not an adjudication that it was wrongfully issued. Gray v. Bremer, 122-110.

The dissolution of the temporary writ on motion of the defendant without contest and the voluntary dismissal of the main suit make out a prima facie case of wrongful issue of the injunction. Williams v. Ballinger, 125-410.

Where an injunction is the only remedy sought and the temporary injunction is dissolved, the necessary costs and expenses of procuring the dissolution are recoverable in an action on the bond. Ibid.

Where an injunction is the sole relief sought, the dissolution of the temporary injunction either by interlocutory order or upon the final hearing entitles the party enjoined to recover his attorney's fees in resisting the writ. But where the injunction sought is merely collateral or auxiliary to the principal controversy and its maintenance is not decisive of the very question at issue, attorney's fees are not recoverable. Weierhauser v. Cole, 132-14.

SEC. 4364. When to restrain proceedings or judgment.

Remedy by injunction to stay execution in a case pending in the supreme court should be sought in that court. Hyatt v. Clever, 104-338.

The district court of another county than that in which judgment is rendered cannot entertain an action to have such judgment set aside and declared void, even though the contention is that it is absolutely without validity for want of jurisdiction to render it. Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Huston, 115-621.

An action to restrain the enforcement of the judgment of a justice of the peace, a transcript of which has been filed in the office of the clerk of the district court, should be brought in the county in which such transcript is filed. Brunk v. Moulton Bank, 121-14.

The provision that when it is sought to enjoin proceedings on a judgment, the suit must be in the same county and court in which such judgment was rendered, applies to a proceeding in which it is sought to enjoin the enforcement of the judgment because it has been paid or otherwise satisfied, or the debtor has been discharged in bankruptcy. Ibid.

The provisions of this section are not applicable to a judgment of a justice of the peace, no transcript of such judgment having been filed in the district court. Gregory v. Howell, 118-26.

In an action to restrain the enforcement of a judgment, the presumption is in favor of the validity of the judgment, and the jurisdiction of the court rendering it, and the plaintiff must affirmatively show its invalidity. Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Huston, 121-393.

SEC. 4369. Notice of application to dissolve—showing.

While the dissolution of a temporary injunction may sometimes be ordered upon the filing of an answer denying all the equities asserted in the petition, the statute provides that the motion may be made either before or after the answer, and that it may be supported by affidavits, and therefore the filing of an answer denying the equities of the bill does not necessarily result in such dissolution. And on the other hand, there may be a dissolution without the filing of such answer. Gossard Co. v. Crosby, 123-155.

The dissolution as well as the granting of a temporary writ is so much a matter of discretion in the trial court that a very clear case of prejudicial error must be made out in order to require a reversal on appeal. Ibid.

Where a motion to dissolve presents the questions involved on a trial on the merits, it is not error to refuse the motion for dissolution. Wingert v. Snouffer, 108 N. W. 1035; 111 N. W. 432.

SEC. 4372. Proceedings for violation.

A party who has knowledge that an order for an injunction has been granted, restraining him from the performance of some act, is bound from the time he receives such knowledge, although the formal entry of the order may not at that time have been made, nor any writ issued or served. On the other hand, one who with knowledge of the decision of the court filed with the clerk, dissolving a temporary injunction, acts in reliance on such order of dissolution, is not subject to punishment therefor. Coffey v. Gamble, 117-545.

An application for an order to punish for contempt in violating an injunction is properly made in the injunction case and should not be the subject of an independent action commenced in the name of the state. In such auxiliary proceeding the court may take notice of the records of prior proceedings in the case. Ferguson v. Wheeler, 126-111.

The remedy for violation of an injunction is a proceeding to punish for contempt, and where the party against whom an injunction was granted gave a superse-deas bond on appeal from the decree, held, that in a suit on the superse-deas bond the opposite party could not recover damages for violation of the injunction. Cole v. Edwards, 104-373.

As to a party, the decree is as effectual, so far as it is self-enforcing as though a formal writ had been issued and served.

This is not true in regard to a writ not self-enforcing, as one providing for the abatement of a nuisance, and process is required to authorize an officer to do acts required to accomplish the abatement. Bartel v. Hobson, 107-644.

In a proceeding for contempt in violating a preliminary injunction, the supreme court will assume, on certiorari, that the order granting the temporary injunction was rightfully made, and it may find a violation of the order, although the district judge may have found that no contempt had been committed. Lake v. Wolfe, 108-184; see, also, Hawks v. Fellows, 108-133.

It is no excuse for the violation of an order of injunction that at the time the violation was committed the defendant had on file a motion to modify the terms of the injunction order. Such fact might be considered in mitigation as showing good faith but not in bar. Young v. Rothrock, 121-588.

Proceedings for the violation of an injunction to abate a liquor nuisance are governed by the provisions of Code § 2407. Brennan v. Roberts, 125-615; McGlasson v. Scott, 112-289.

In a contempt proceeding for violating a liquor injunction it is not open to the defendant to show that the injunction was erroneously granted unless it is absolutely void. Ohlrogg v. District Court, 126-247.

CHAPTER 14.

OF ARBITRATION.

SECTION 4386. Written agreement.

A general agent without express authority may not submit a claim of his principal to arbitration, nor does a special administrator, in the administration of the estate, have such power. Sullivan v. Nicoulin, 113-76.

Either party has the right to demand that the arbitrators chosen shall have the competency of jurors, and a litigant cannot be expected to consent that his case shall be tried to his antagonist, in person or by agent. Therefore it is a good ground of objection that the arbitrator selected by one party is the agent of that party. Goodwin v. Merchants' & Bankers' Mut. Ins. Co., 118-601.

SEC. 4388. Action pending.

An agreement to arbitrate the subject-matter of litigation is equivalent to an agreement to dismiss a pending suit for a good consideration, and itself operates as a dismissal. Goodwin v. Merchants' & Bankers' Mut. Ins. Co., 118-601.

SEC. 4389. Procedure.

Where the agreement for arbitration provides for two arbitrators, who may select an umpire in case of disagreement, notice to the umpire of the hearing is not essential. Vincent v. German Ins. Co., 120-272.

Failure to give notice to a party of the hearing may be waived by him. Ibid.

Mistake of judgment on the part of the arbitrators is not ground for setting aside the award, unless such mistake be so great as to indicate partisan bias. Ibid.

In order to justify a court in setting aside an award, the misconduct or other ground for impeachment must be made out by clear and satisfactory evidence. Ibid.

Arbitrations are favored in law, and an award, when made, will be upheld, unless the evidence clearly shows such misconduct or mistake on the part of the arbitrators as will justify the court in setting it aside. Ibid.

To appraise is to estimate value, and where arbitrators are selected to make an appraisal they are not required to hear evidence, although they may do so. Ibid.

SEC. 4390. Revocation.

An agreement to arbitrate, included in a policy of fire insurance, is revocable by either party, notwithstanding the provisions of this section, and the bringing of suit constitutes such revocation. Harrison v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 112-77.

CHAPTER 15.

OF ACTIONS AGAINST BOATS OR RAFTS.

SECTION 4402. Seizure.

A lien given by a state statute for labor done in the original construction of a vessel even after she is launched is not enforceable in the federal admiralty courts as the contract is not of a maritime nature, the vessel having not yet become engaged in commerce. The William Windom, 73 Fed. 496.

CHAPTER 16.

OF HABEAS CORPUS.

SECTION 4417. Petition—grounds.

Although the defendant in a criminal case may be entitled to discharge on habeas corpus because he has not been given a speedy trial as required by the constitution, such objection cannot be made a ground for dismissal in the supreme court on appeal from a judgment of conviction. State v. Sloan, 131-676.

SEC. 4450. Demurrer or reply—trial.

Finding of lower court: On appeal in a habeas corpus proceeding, the supreme court does not try the cause anew, but will affirm the finding of the lower court if there is any evidence in its support. Dunkin v. Seifert, 123-64.

The finding of the trial judge as to the facts is entitled to the same presumption in its favor as the finding of facts by a jury. Myers v. Clearman, 125-461.

In a habeas corpus proceeding involving the right of custody of a child, the findings of the court have the effect of the verdict of a jury; but a finding which is clearly contrary to the evidence and without support will be disregarded. Smiley v. McIntosh, 129-337.

SEC. 4451. Action of grand jury—result of trial.

It is not competent in a habeas corpus proceeding to question the validity of a conviction on the ground that the grand jury returning the indictment on which the conviction was based was not properly selected, the defendant having had opportunity at the proper time to raise the question as to the sufficiency of the indictment. Busse v. Barr, 132-463.

SEC. 4453. Plaintiff held.

In a proceeding to secure release from a commitment of an indictable offense, the judge seems not to have authority to hold the accused to bail for trial before a justice of the peace for an offense not indictable. Myers v. Clearman, 125-461.

SEC. 4459. Costs.

In the proceeding by habeas corpus to secure a discharge from a hospital for the insane, the superintendent of the hospital, who is made defendant, should not be taxed with the costs, but they should be taxed to the county where the commitment is had. Hughes v. Applegate, 123-230.

CHAPTER 17.

OF CONTEMPTS.

SECTION 4460. What punishable as.

A proceeding to punish a contempt of court may be in its nature criminal, but the statutory provision with regard to new trial in criminal cases is not applicable in such a proceeding. State v. Stevenson, 104-50.

The power to punish for contempt is recognized as inherent in our courts and essential to the preservation of order in judicial proceedings and to the due administration of justice. Field v. Thornell, 106-7.

A witness cannot be punished for contempt for not responding to a subpoena issued from a court in which no proceeding is pending. Chambers v. Oehler, 107-155.

SEC. 4461. In courts of record.

Provisions regulating the procedure for the punishment of constructive contempts are not unconstitutional as depriving courts of their inherent power. Drady v. District Court, 126-345.

Contempt proceedings are in their nature criminal, and before a conviction is had the proof of guilt should be clear and satisfactory. So held where the charge was of attempting to influence a juror. Wells v. District Court, 126-340.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to show the person accused to have been guilty of contempt in attempting to influence the jury as to the verdict. Drady v. District Court, 126-345.

SEC. 4465. Notice to show cause.

Where the party in contempt advised the court that he was ready for punishment, and challenged the court to inflict such punishment, held that it was not error to proceed without giving opportunity for written explanation. Hardin v. Silvari, 114-157.

The person proceeded against for contempt is entitled to have the opportunity to file his explanation before the assessment of punishment and a reasonable time

The statutory definition of contempt excludes contempt at common law not included within the statute. Drady v. District Court, 126-345.

A contempt proceeding may be tried by any judge of the court in which the offense was committed. Drady v. District Court, 126-345.

The provision for the punishment of an attempt to influence a juror as contempt is applicable to such an attempt with reference to a juror of the general panel before he is drawn and sworn as one of the trial jurors in the case. Marvin v. District Court, 126-355.

In a proceeding to punish for contempt in attempting to influence a juror, it is erroneous to receive in evidence a transcript of the testimony before a committee of the bar association investigating the charge, the defendant being entitled to a trial under the statute on evidence introduced as in other cases. Hunter v. District Court, 126-357.

should be allowed for that purpose. State v. District Court, 124-187.

A denial by the accused of the contempt charged does not operate as a common law to purge the offense, but the court is to determine by a trial the facts put in issue by the answer. This is the express rule as to contempt in violating an injunction against the sale of intoxicating liquors. See Code § 2407. Drady v. District Court, 126-345.

SEC. 4466. Testimony reduced to writing.

The provision that the evidence must be taken in writing and preserved indicates that a trial is contemplated upon a denial of guilt by the defendant. Drady v. District Court, 126-345.

The defendant put on trial for contempt, on his denial of the charge, has a right to have the testimony taken under the issue made by his answer, as in other cases. Evidence taken against him in an investigation before a bar association is not admissible. Hunter v. District Court, 126-357.

Where the contemptuous conduct complained of is committed in the presence of the court, or judge, and the order punishing for contempt is based upon personal knowledge, the statement of the facts upon which the order is founded must be entered on the record or filed or preserved. It is not sufficient that such statement is embodied in the shorthand notes of the reporter which have not been transcribed and filed. State v. District Court, 133-450.

Where the facts are not within the knowledge of the court or judge, an order of commitment for contempt made before the evidence is reduced to writing and filed is void. Walker v. Kennedy, 133-284.

Where the court proceeds upon its own knowledge a failure to preserve a record of the facts on which the court acts is sufficient ground for setting aside the conviction on certiorari. State v. District Court, 124-187.

SEC. 4468. Review by certiorari.

The revision by certiorari in a proceeding in which a punishment is inflicted for contempt involves a review of the evidence so far at least as to determine whether the act shown to be committed was sufficient at law to constitute contempt. Wells v. District Court, 126-340.

The costs in a certiorari proceeding to review an order punishing for contempt should be taxed in analogy to the taxation of costs on appeal. They may be taxed to the person instituting the proceeding if the order is annulled. Coffey v. Gamble, 94 N. W. 936.

OF CHANGING NAMES.

SECTION 4471-a. Repeal. Chapter eighteen (18) title twenty-one (XXI), of the code is hereby repealed and the following enacted in lieu thereof: [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 1.]

SEC. 4471-b. Who authorized. Any person, under no civil disabilities, who has attained his or her majority and is unmarried, if a female, desiring to change his or her name, may do so as provided in this chapter. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 2.]

SEC. 4471-c. Statement—what to contain. Such person shall make and subscribe to a statement under oath showing that he or she is a resident of the county where such application is made and of the state of Iowa for a period of not less than one year; his or her place of residence, giving lot and block if in a city, town or village and street number and business address if any, and the section, township, range and name of civil township if not in a city or town; the different places of residence and times of such residence for the past five years; place and date of birth, and, if of foreign birth, the date of immigration to the United States; legal name and name or names by which such person is usually known and new name as changed or adopted; name of parents of such person, his or her height and color of hair and eyes; the reason or cause for change of name briefly and concisely stated, and there shall be incorporated in such statement or attached thereto a concise description of all real estate within this state the title to which is in the person making such statement. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 3.]

SEC. 4471-d. Affidavit of freeholder. An affidavit of the [a] freeholder of the county shall be attached to such statement to the effect that affiant has personally investigated the facts set out in same and that the same are true; that the person filing such statement is an actual resident of the county and the identical person he or she is represented to be. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 4.]

SEC. 4471-e. Statement filed and recorded. Such statement shall be presented to the clerk of the district court who shall file same if it is found to be in substantial compliance with all of the provisions of this chapter and not otherwise, and enter same of record in a book kept for that purpose and index same both under the former name and new name, and shall enter upon the back the date of filing, the book and page where recorded and serial number thereof and file same in his office. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 5.]

SEC. 4471-f. Re-indexing real estate. When such statement shall have been filed and recorded as herein provided, the clerk shall, if the description of any real estate of that county be contained therein, deliver it to the county recorder who shall index the same, both under the former name and under the new name as changed or adopted, in the manner of indexing transfers of real estate, and enter opposite thereto, the description of real estate as found in such statement; such indexing shall be in the index of transfers of land or town property according to the description of said real estate, or both as the case may be. The index shall also show the serial number of such statement and book and page where same is recorded in the office of the clerk of the district court, and the words, "change of name" shall be written on said index in red ink, at or opposite to the name. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 6.]

SEC. 4471-g. Fees. The clerk shall receive a fee of one dollar ($1.00) for his services, and shall also collect ten cents (10c.) for each separate description of real estate in the statement, which sum shall be paid to the recorder for indexing same. The clerk shall, upon demand of any party and the payment of the fee of one dollar ($1.00), furnish a certified copy of such statement showing the serial number thereof, date of filing and the book and page of record of same; and, upon the payment of twenty-five cents (25c.) shall compare and certify to any correct copy of such statement furnished him for that purpose. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 7.]

SEC. 4471-h. New name—when effective. Upon the expiration of thirty (30) days from the time of filing the statement herein provided for, the new name as changed or adopted therein shall become the legal name of the party filing such statement, and the surname of such new name shall become the legal surname of the wife and minor children of such person. No person shall change his or her name more than once under the provisions of this act. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 8.]

SEC. 4471-i. Certified copy—indexing real estate in other counties. Within one year after the filing of such statement, the party changing his or her name, shall cause a certified copy thereof to be presented to the recorder of each county in Iowa where there is real estate the legal title to which is in such party, and pay such recorder ten cents (10c.) for each separate description in such county, and such recorder shall index same in the manner prescribed in this chapter and return same. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 9.]

SEC. 4471-j. Misdemeanor. Any person failing or neglecting to comply with the provisions of the preceding section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished accordingly. [30 G. A., ch. 127, § 10.]

SEC. 4474. Publication. Previous to the time thus described for the taking effect of such change, the applicant shall cause notice thereof to be published, once each week, for four successive weeks in the newspaper directed by the court. [C., '73, § 3505; R., § 3847; C., '51, § 2259.] [30 G. A., ch. 2, § 12.]

[Sec. 4474 was repealed by chapter 127, 30 G. A., approved April 6, 1904, and the above amendment approved April 12, 1904.]

TITLE XXII.

OF JUSTICES OF THE PEACE AND THEIR COURTS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF JUSTICES OF THE PEACE AND THEIR COURTS.

SECTION 4476. Jurisdiction.

A judgment against one who is an actual resident of another county, unless founded on a contract payable in the county, is void although defendant appeared without objection. Heath v. Halfhill, 106-131; Thompson v. Thompson, 117-65; Porter v. Welsh, 117-144.

The residence of the parties, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, is presumed to have been such as to confer jurisdiction on the justice. Little v. Devendorf, 109-47.

A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction to entertain an action for an accounting or settlement of partnership affairs. Erret v. Pritchard, 121-496.

SEC. 4477. Amount in controversy.

No objection having been made before the justice of the peace to his jurisdiction, the court on an appeal from his judgment in an action involving more than one hundred dollars and less than three hundred dollars, is authorized to presume that the parties gave their consent to a trial before the justice. Hopkins Fine Stock Co. v. Reid, 106-78.

No action of the parties can authorize a justice of the peace to assume jurisdiction for a greater amount than three hundred dollars. Want of jurisdiction on this account cannot be waived by the parties, but the defect may be urged at any stage of the proceeding. Wedgewood v. Parr, 112-514.

In an action on two promissory notes in the aggregate exceeding the amount of $100.00, consent in each note that the justice may have jurisdiction of an action thereon for an amount not exceeding $100.00, does not authorize the justice to entertain jurisdiction. Hannasch v. Hoyt, 127-232.

The consent embodied in a promissory note that a justice of the peace shall have jurisdiction in an action thereon does not give a justice jurisdiction of an action for breach of the contract in connection with which such note is executed. Leathers v. Geitz, 112 N. W. 191.

The amount claimed, not that alleged to be due or for which judgment is entered, is the criterion to determine whether the justice has jurisdiction. If the pleadings are oral, the original notice is decisive as to the amount claimed. Evans v. Murphy, 133-550.

Although the justice erroneously enters an order transferring the case to the district court because of interposition of a counterclaim involving more than $100.00, such disposition of the case terminates his jurisdiction and he cannot without a new notice proceed against the party who does not appear. Mere information to the attorney of the party that the justice intends to take some further proceeding in the case will not be sufficient to give him further jurisdiction. Schiele v. Thede, 126-398.

SEC. 4480. In Replevin or Attachment Against Non-residents.

Where the defendant is a non-resident of the state, the plaintiff may bring the action before a justice of the peace of the township in which he resides, if he secures service on the defendant within the county. Jonas v. Weires, 111 N. W. 453.

SEC. 4481. Contracts in writing. On written contracts stipulating for payment at a particular place, action may be brought in the township where the payment was agreed to be made. Provided, that should action be brought under the provisions of this section in any county other than that of the residence of the defendant and the plaintiff shall fail to appear at the time fixed for the trial in the original notice, the justice of the peace before whom said action is brought, shall, upon presentation of the copy of the original notice served upon the defendant, docket said cause and enter judgment therein against the plaintiff in favor of the defendant for all costs in the action, which costs shall include all reasonable expenses of the defendant in attending the place of trial and an attorney's fee not to exceed fifteen dollars for defendant's attorney; and should any action brought under the provisions of this section for any cause, except upon trial upon the merits, be dismissed the defendant shall recover like costs and expenses and attorney fees. [C., '73 § 3513; R., § 3855; C., '51, § 2267.] [30 G. A., ch. 128.]

Where the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace depends upon the fact that a contract is made payable at a particular place it is competent to show in a collateral attack on such judgment that the contract did not so provide. Cooley v. Barker, 122-440.

This provision does not authorize the suing of the defendant in a county where by implication merely he is to make payment under a contract. Baily v. Birkhofer, 123-59.

SEC. 4482. In adjoining township.

Where there is no justice in the proper township qualified or able to act, the suit may be commenced in any adjoining township in the same county, without making a record of the reason for not instituting the suit in the proper township. Jonas v. Weires, 111 N. W. 453.

Another township having a common corner with the township in which the suit should have been instituted is an adjoining township within the language of the statute. Ibid.

In support of the jurisdiction it will be presumed where suit was brought in a township adjoining that in which it should have been commenced that there was the statutory reason for not bringing it in the proper township. Ibid.

SEC. 4484. Entries on docket.

It is not necessary that the justice enter of record a finding as to the residence of the parties. Little v. Devendorf, 109-47.

A recital in the record of a judgment

SEC. 4485. Parties—proceedings.

Trials in justices' courts are less formal and more speedy, as a rule, than are trials by a justice of the peace that due and legal notice of the time of the trial was given is sufficient. Tomlin v. Woods, 125-367.

in courts of record. Gates v. Knosby, 107-239.

SEC. 4486. How commenced.

A justice of the peace acquires jurisdiction in an action of forcible entry and detainer, although no petition is filed until the return day. Herkimer v. Keeler, 109-680.

SEC. 4488. Form of notice.

The fact that the notice is signed with the name of the justice affixed by a stencil or stamp and that it is filled out by the one to whom it is given for service, does not render the judgment rendered in pursuance of such notice subject to collateral attack. Loughren v. Bonniwell, 125-518.

SEC. 4489. What to state.

If the pleadings are oral, the original notice is decisive as to the amount of plaintiff's claim in determining whether it is in excess of the jurisdiction of the justice. Evans v. Murphy, 133-550.

SEC. 4491. Service and return.

Determination of the sufficiency of service is within the jurisdiction of the justice, and his judgment with reference thereto, though erroneous, will not be void. Little v. Devendorf, 109-47.

SEC. 4496. Adjournment.

A justice of the peace will not lose jurisdiction of the case by granting a continuance for an indefinite time, by consent of parties to subsequently try the case upon new notice. Cedar Rapids v. Rall, 115-335.

An adjournment for more than three days without the consent of the party deprives the justice of jurisdiction. Schiele v. Thede, 126-398.

SEC. 4502. Change of place of trial.

The ruling on a motion to strike portions of the answer and to require it to be made more specific constitutes commencement of the trial, which terminates the right to apply for change of venue.

Columbus Junction Tel. Co. v. Overholt, 126-579.

By proceeding with the trial error in refusing change of venue is not waived. Ibid.

SEC. 4513. Judgment set aside.

A justice of the peace may set aside a default judgment notwithstanding a filing of the transcript of such judgment in the district court. Klepfer v. Keokuk, 126-592.

SEC. 4519. Discharge of jury.

The statute does not provide for notice to a party of the issuing of a precept for a new jury where one jury has been discharged for failure to agree; but where such precept was not issued for two days, held that the justice was without jurisdiction to try the case without further notice. Gates v. Knosby, 107-239.

SEC. 4522. Judgment entered.

It is not essential to the validity of the judgment that it be signed by the justice. Parks v. Norton, 114-732.

SEC. 4537. Transcript filed in clerk's office.

The provision for filing a transcript of the judgment in the district court relates only to the enforcement of the judgment and does not prevent further proceedings in the court in which the judgment was rendered in respect to other matters. Klepfer v. Keokuk, 126-592.

The act of the justice in certifying a judgment is purely ministerial, and the fact that he was a party to the proceeding in which such judgment was rendered by his predecessor in office does not disqualify him from giving such certificate. Hass v. Leverton, 128-79.

SEC. 4538. Effect of transcript. The clerk shall file the transcript as soon as received, and enter a memorandum thereof and the time of filing in the judgment docket and lien index, and from such entry it shall be treated in all respects and in its enforcement as a judgment obtained in the district court. No execution shall issue from the justice's court after the filing of such transcript. [C., '73, § 3568; R., § 3910; C., '51, § 2321.] [27 G. A., ch. 107, § 1.]

With the filing of the transcript in the district court the justice loses control of his judgment and it is treated thereafter as are those of the district court; but there is nothing warranting the conclusion that the judgment of the justice is thereby canceled, or a new one rendered. Little v. Devendorf, 109-47.

The mere filing of a transcript from a justice of the peace does not make it a judgment of the district court. A memorandum thereof, with the date of filing, must be entered on the judgment docket and lien index. State Ins. Co. v. Prestage, 116-466.

A judgment of a justice of the peace, a transcript of which has been filed in the office of the clerk of the district court, becomes a judgment of the district court in such sense that under Code § 4364 an action to enjoin the proceedings on the judgment must be in the same county and court in which such judgment was obtained. Brunk v. Moulton Bank, 121-14.

The time within which action may be brought on a judgment of a justice of the peace transcribed to the district court is determined by the statutory provisions with reference to judgments of the district court. Haugen v. Oldford, 129-156.

SEC. 4544. Garnishment. Garnishment proceedings under execution shall be the same as in the district court, except, upon return of the garnishment being made to the justice who issued the execution, he shall docket a cause, fix a time, and cite the garnishee then to appear and answer. Judgment against the garnishee shall not be entered until the principal defendant shall have had five days' notice of the garnishment proceedings to be served in the same manner as original notices. [29 G. A., ch. 141, § 1.]

SEC. 4546. Appeal.

If the subject-matter of the action brought before the justice of the peace is such that he has no jurisdiction thereof, the district court acquires no jurisdiction of the case by appeal, and the appeal should be dismissed on motion. Erret v. Pritchard, 121-496.

Parties to an action pending in justice's court cannot confer jurisdiction on the district court by consent to the transfer of the case to such court. But if in pursuance of such agreement the parties appear in the district court and submit the controversy to determination, the court acquires jurisdiction. Farmers' Mut. Telephone Co. v. Howell, 132-22.

SEC. 4547. Amount in controversy.

Where before judgment but after the hearing of the evidence the plaintiff remits a portion of his claims so as to reduce the amount thereof to less than twenty-five dollars, there is no right of appeal, although the justice of the peace erroneously enters judgment for the amount of the original claim which is in excess of twenty-five dollars. Young v. Stuart, 104-597.

A fictitious counterclaim, interposed solely for the purpose of giving the district court jurisdiction on appeal, may be disregarded by the latter court and the appeal may be dismissed on motion. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Weaver, 112-101.

Where plaintiff in an action of replevin elects to take judgment for the value of the property, he may, by remitting his claim in excess of twenty-five dollars, prevent an appeal by the opposite party. Rust v. Olson, 113-571.

Ordinarily the amount in controversy is determined by the pleadings or by the respective oral claims of the parties and their remittitur made before entry of judgment of all claims in excess of twenty-five dollars precludes an appeal even though the justice in fact enters judgment for more than that amount. Henry v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 127-577.

Such remittitur may be shown in the district court by way of supplying the omission of the justice to enter it of record. Ibid.

SEC. 4552. Form of bond.

The bond on appeal from the judgment of the justice of the peace is jurisdictional. The statute so provides. Beresford v. American Coal Co., 124-34.

An appeal bond signed by the attorney of the appellant is not sufficient (see Code § 3851), and in the district court the case should be dismissed on motion of the appellee. Such bond should not be accepted. Valley Nat. Bank v. Garretson, 104-655.

An attorney is not competent as a surety on an appeal bond (Code § 3851), nor is a party against whom the judgment is entered competent to become such surety, the signature of the party not changing his liability as a defendant under the judgment. Hudson v. Smith, 111-411.

An appeal bond signed only by the appellant is of no validity and the district court acquires no jurisdiction on such appeal. The defect cannot be cured by amendment in the district court. Minton v. Ozias, 115-148.

It is not required that sureties upon the appeal bond make affidavit to their financial responsibility. The provision of Code § 359 for affidavits of qualification by sureties on bonds is intended for the protection of the officer, and if the bond is accepted without such affidavit the appeal is perfected, and the district court acquires jurisdiction. Porter v. Western Union Tel. Co., 135-747.

A bond which names as obligee a party different than the party to the action against whom the appeal is prosecuted, does not confer jurisdiction on the district court as to such appeal and the court has no authority to permit the filing of a new bond after the expiration of the statutory period allowed for perfecting the appeal. Sutton v. Bowe, 124-58.

SEC. 4557. Mistakes corrected.

Evidence in a particular case held not sufficient to show that there was an omission or mistake necessitating the correction of the justice's docket. First Nat. Bank v. Bourdelais, 109-497.

Although the justice of the peace has entered judgment for more than twenty-five dollars and omitted to enter of record a remittitur by the successful party of all in excess of that amount his omission to enter of record the remittitur may be supplied by oral evidence, and if thus supplied the appeal should be dismissed. Henry v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 127-577.

SEC. 4558. Return—when made.

The appeal is perfected by the giving of bond and certifying the papers and record to the district court. The provision for notice seems to be for the purpose of advising appellee when the case will be brought on for trial, and failure to give such notice does not deprive the court of jurisdiction. Durand v. Northwestern L. & Sav. Co., 112-296.

SEC. 4559. Affirmance—trial.

If the appellant in an appeal from a justice's court fails to cause the same to be docketed by noon of the second day of the term to which the same is returnable, appellee may procure the case to be docketed and will thereupon be entitled to have the judgment below affirmed; and the appellant in such case will not be entitled to have the default set aside without a showing of excuse. Hodowal v. Yearous, 103-32.

For similar provisions see Code § 3660.

Where an appeal has been taken from the judgment of a justice of the peace, the appellee may have the judgment affirmed on appellant's failure to pay the docket fee and have the case docketed; unless appellant is in default in both particulars there is no right to an affirmance. Vasey v. Parker, 118-615.

The clerk is not required to docket any appeal without being paid the fee which the law exacts for such services, but if he concludes to waive the fee, and places the case upon the docket for trial, the mere failure to pay the fee will not be a ground for affirmance. Ibid.

SEC. 4562. Trial of appeal.

If the justice of the peace has no jurisdiction of the case, the appellate court acquires none by the appeal. Erret v. Pritchard, 121-496.

Where a justice does not acquire jurisdiction, the district court cannot on appeal proceed to a determination of the case. Baily v. Birkhofer, 123-59.

By appearing before the justice of the peace the defendant does not estop himself from urging on appeal that the justice was without jurisdiction of defendant resident in another county. Ibid.

In an appeal to the district court from a justice of the peace an amendment may be introduced which does not set up any new demand or counterclaim. Boos v. Dulin, 103-331.

Where an action brought by a minor in his own name in justice court was appealed to the district court, held that the district court might properly allow the substitution of a next friend and proceed with the case. Parkins v. Alexander, 105-74.

The law favors trial on the merits, and all errors, irregularities and illegalities in

In the district court the pleading may be amended, but no new cause of action or counterclaim can be introduced. Boos v. Dulin, 103-331.

Where the justice of the peace had by delay lost jurisdiction to issue a precept for a new jury, held that the district court reversing on writ of error the judgment thus rendered without jurisdiction, might direct further proceedings upon proper notice. Gates v. Knosby, 107-239.

On writ of error the court is not authorized to sit in direct review of the proceedings before the justice. Simmons v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 128-306.

Errors committed in the entry of judgment after the trial upon the merits is to be cured by appeal. Ibid.

SEC. 4600. Repeal. That section forty-six hundred (4600) of the code, relative to the accounting for fees and compensation of justices of the peace and constables be and the same is hereby repealed and the following enacted in lieu thereof. [32 G. A., ch. 169, § 1.]

SEC. 4600-a. Accounting for fees—compensation. Justices of the peace and constables in townships having a population of twenty-eight thousand, shall pay into the county treasury all criminal fees collected in each year. Justices of the peace and constables in townships having a population of under twenty-eight thousand, shall pay into the county treasury all fees collected each year in excess of the following sums: In townships having a population of ten thousand and under twenty-eight thousand, justices, one thousand dollars; constables, eight hundred dollars; those having a population of four thousand and under ten; justices, eight hundred dollars; constables, six hundred dollars; in all townships having a population of under four thousand, justices six hundred dollars; constables, five hundred dollars. In townships having a population of twenty-eight thousand or more, justices of the peace and constables shall receive in full compensation for their services performed in criminal cases during the year, the following sums which shall be paid quarterly out of the county treasury. In townships having a population of thirty-five thousand or more, justices, fifteen hundred dollars; constables, twelve hundred dollars; in townships having a population of twenty-eight thousand and under thirty-five, justices, twelve hundred dollars; constables, one thousand dollars. Justices and constables in all townships having a population of twenty-eight thousand (28,000) and over shall retain such civil fees as may be allowed by the board of supervisors, not to exceed five hundred ($500) dollars per annum, for expenses of their offices actually incurred, and shall pay into the county treasurer all the balance of the civil fees collected by them. [32 G. A., ch. 169, § 2.]

The auditing of claims of justices and constables for fees implies a hearing of examination of the account or claim with the power to adjust, allow or reject, according to the nature of the claim. McGuire v. Iowa County, 133-636.

Evidence as to the good faith of the constable in filing information and serving warrants is admissible. Ibid.

SEC. 4600-b. Annual report to board of supervisors. All justices of the peace and constables shall under oath make an annual report to the board of supervisors, upon blanks furnished by the county auditor, of all criminal fees taxed and collected during the year, which report shall also show that all criminal fees and fines collectible by law have been received, such annual report to be made on the first Monday in January, and before the annual settlement shall be made, and accompanied with the receipts of the treasurer for all money paid in to him. [32 G. A., ch. 169, § 3.]

SEC. 4600-c. Quarterly report to county auditor. Justices of the peace shall make, under oath, quarterly reports, upon blanks furnished by the county auditor, and shall file the same with the county auditor, which reports shall contain a true and correct transcript of all criminal proceedings which have been instituted or adjudicated in their courts, with the names of all attending witnesses and jurors and fees taxed in their favor. [32 G. A., ch. 169, § 4.]

TITLE XXIII.

OF EVIDENCE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF EVIDENCE.

SECTION 4601. Witnesses—who competent.

In a criminal case a new trial should be granted where one of the witnesses for prosecution, giving material evidence, was not sworn and the omission was not discovered until after the verdict. State v. Lugar, 115-268.

A child of sufficient maturity and intelligence to receive correct impressions from its surroundings and to remember and correctly narrate transactions is a competent witness, if he also comprehends the meaning and obligation of an oath. Clark v. Finnegan, 127-644.

And held that a child seven years of age shown by his examination to be of more than average intelligence and to understand the difference between truth and falsehood, was a competent witness. Ibid.

SEC. 4602. Credibility.

Conviction in a federal court of an offense not infamous cannot be shown in a state court as affecting the credibility of a witness. Palmer v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. Co., 113, 442.

The intention of this section is to allow proofs of facts as affecting credibility which at common law would have rendered the witness incompetent, and at common law a conviction did not render the witness incompetent unless it was for an infamous offense. Ibid.

SEC. 4604. Transaction with person since deceased.

Objection goes to competency of the witness: The statutory provision does not exclude evidence of such communications or transactions between a party to a claim against the estate of a deceased person and the deceased in his lifetime, but merely declares certain witnesses incompetent to make the proof. Campbell v. Collins, 133-152.

Evidence which of itself is not obnoxious to the statute is not rendered so by the fact that an inference as to what was done between the witness and deceased may be drawn therefrom. Ibid.

To what action applicable: This section has no application in an action not against either of the classes of persons contemplated. McClintic v. McClintic, 111-615.

This section does not apply to proceedings in the federal court inasmuch as there are provisions of the federal statute on the subject. Travis v. Nederland L. Ins. Co., 104 Fed. 486.

Witness in behalf of administrator not incompetent: A witness in an action against an administrator called on behalf of the administrator may testify to transactions with the deceased. Dean v. Carpenter, 111 N. W. 815.

Who excluded as parties: A surviving partner is within both the letter and the spirit of the statute. As he cannot have the benefit of the testimony of his deceased partner as to what the conversation really was, he is not liable on the testimony of his adversary respecting such conversation. The fact that the representative of the deceased partner is not a party to the action is immaterial. Salyers v. Monroe, 104-74.

The fact that a witness was the secretary of plaintiff corporation, it not appearing that he had any interest in the suit, held not to disqualify him as witness to testify to personal transactions with decedent against whose estate the claim is made. University of Chicago v. Emmert, 108-500.

A party defendant in an action by an heir to quiet title to inherited land, where the defense is made that the land was inherited by an illegitimate child, is not competent to testify to transactions, conversations and illicit relations with the deceased. McCorkendale v. McCorkendale, 111-314.

It is only a person who is connected with the proceedings by service of notice, or by consent through voluntary appearance, who can be deemed a party to the proceeding under the provisions of this section. Hicks v. Williams, 112-691.

While a party to the suit is precluded from testifying regardless of interest in the result, held that in a proceeding by intervention in which no relief was asked against the defendant in the original suit it was so far a distinct proceeding that the defendant, having no interest in the intervention proceeding, might testify. Hogan v. Sullivan, 114-456.

In an action to reform and cancel a mortgage given by a son to his father, brought after the death of the father, held that the son was an incompetent witness to an agreement with the father that he should only be required to pay interest during the father's life, and that upon his death the mortgage should be canceled. Sauer v. Nehls, 121-184.

In a partition suit, to which the widow is a party, relating to the property of a deceased person, the widow is incompetent to testify as to transactions or communications between herself and the deceased. Ellis v. Newell, 120-71.

A party is disqualified under this section, although he is merely a nominal party, or has no substantial interest in the action, but he must be in fact a party at the time of giving testimony. Clinton Sav. Bank v. Underhill, 115-292.

One through whom plaintiff derives an interest is disqualified. Ibid.

The statute excludes all parties whether interested or not, from testifying as to transactions or communications with the party deceased. Culbertson v. Salinger, 131-307.

The fact that the administrator of a person deceased is a party is immaterial if he is in fact an indifferent party in the suit, and the statutory provision has no application in such a case. City National Bank v. Crahan, 112 N. W. 793.

The statute is not limited in its exclusion of testimony to those persons whose rights may be affected by the transaction or communication referred to. Stolenburg v. Diercks, 117-25.

What interests disqualify: The interest which will prevent a person from testifying is such an interest in the event as would at common law disqualify the witness, and if such interest is collateral merely the competency of the witness may be restored by a release or transfer of it at any time before testifying. Dubuque Lum. Co. v. Kimball, 111-48.

The interest must be such as would have disqualified the witness at common law. Hicks v. Williams, 112-691.

One who is adversely interested in the action cannot testify as to transactions or conversations with one who is deceased. Grimes v. Ellyson, 130-286.

The disqualifying interest must be in the event of the case itself, and not in the question to be decided. German American Sav. Bank v. Hanna, 124-374.

The witness to be disqualified under this section on account of interest must have a legal, certain and immediate interest in the suit, and one who is interested only as prospective heir is not disqualified on that account. Bird v. Jacobus, 113-194.

The interest of the witness, to disqualify him, must be present, certain and vested. It is not sufficient that he at a former time had an interest. Clinton Sav. Bank v. Underhill, 115-292.

In a proceeding to establish the claim of a bank against the estate of a deceased officer of the bank for misappropriation of funds, one who was jointly liable with the deceased to the bank for such misappropriation is an interested party whose testimony as to conversations and transactions with the deceased is not admissible as against the bank. McElroy v. Allfree, 131-518.

Assignee: Three elements must exist in order to exclude testimony as to a personal transaction with deceased: (1) the matter must be in the nature of a personal transaction or communication; (2) the witness must be a party to the suit or interested in the event thereof; (3) the action must be against the executor, administrator, assignee, etc. And held that the appointee of a decedent as beneficiary of an insurance policy was not an assignee within the provisions of the statute. Shumark v. Supreme Lodge K. of H., 110-480.

A donee is an assignee within the statutory provision prohibiting the testimony of one who claims by assignment with reference to a transaction with the deceased. McAleer v. McNamara, 112 N. W. 85.

Where a right asserted by a claimant against an estate depends for its existence and validity upon a transaction between the deceased and a third person, the evidence of such third person is not competent to prove such transaction. McClanahan v. McClanahan, 129-411.

What deemed personal transaction: Where a certificate of deposit taken in the name of deceased was indorsed by the administrator of deceased in his individual capacity and the money drawn thereon from the bank, held, that such fund prima facie belonged to the estate and that the administrator was not competent to testify in a proceeding in which it was sought to subject real property to the payment of the debts of the estate, that by a personal transaction with deceased he had become the owner of the certificate of deposit, so that the proceeds thereof were not subject to the payment of the debts of deceased. Duffield v. Walden, 102-676.

An indorsee cannot testify in a suit against his immediate indorser who is deceased with reference to the condition of the paper when transferred, as that would be a personal transaction. Benton County Sav. Bank v. Strand, 106-606.

While one who has become a holder of a note may not, in the case governed by this section, testify to the personal transaction of the transfer of the instrument to the deceased, he may testify that he never transferred it to anyone else. Walkley v. Clarke, 107-451.

Competent testimony as to a conversation with a third person involving a statement of what has taken place between the witness and the deceased person is not prohibited by this section. Ibid.

Those interested in the litigation are not under this section prohibited from testifying to facts from which inferences may be drawn. Furenes v. Eide, 109-511.

The testimony of the payee of a note that he saw the payor, who is deceased, sign the note, is testimony as to a personal transaction. Watters v. McGreavy, 111-538.

A witness cannot by testimony as to a transaction of a third person with the deceased, in which the witness himself takes part, evade the rule as to testimony of personal transactions. He cannot by indirection do that which the law says may not be done. Ibid.

In a controversy as to whether a son was entitled to recover damages against the estate of his deceased father for failure of the father to comply with a contract to convey, held that evidence of the son with reference to the taking possession of the farm and making improvements thereon was not incompetent as relating to a personal transaction with the deceased. Hutton v. Doxsee, 116-13.

Testimony as to information or knowledge or the want of it is not testimony as to a personal transaction or communication. In re Townsend's Estate, 122-246.

It is only as to personal transactions and communications between persons who are interested and the deceased that the testimony of such interested persons is rendered incompetent. Jacobs v. Jacobs, 130-10.

The rule of the statutory provision does not operate to close the mouth of a witness as to any matter of fact coming to his knowledge in any other way than through personal dealings with the deceased or communications made by the deceased to the witness in person. Shetler v. Stewart, 133-320.

Transactions in a particular case held not to constitute personal transactions within the provisions of Code § 4604. Curd v. Wisser, 120-743.

Conversations or transactions in presence of witness: A witness may testify to a conversation heard by him between deceased and another in which he took no part; such testimony does not relate to a personal transaction. Allbright v. Hannah, 103-98; Mallow v. Walker, 115-238; Wright v. Reed, 118-333; Foreman v. Archer, 130-49; Powers v. Crandall, 111 N. W. 1010.

Husband or wife of disqualified person: The wife of a person prohibited by this section from testifying may herself testify as to what took place in her presence. Dettmer v. Behrens, 106-585.

The husband or wife of a party to the action may testify to a conversation between such party and one who is then deceased, in which the witness did not participate. Allison v. Parkinson, 108-154; Lucas v. McDonald, 126-678; McElroy v. Allfree, 131-112.

Letters: Testimony by a witness as to the receipt of a letter from the deceased is as to a personal transaction or communication, within the terms of this section. McCorkendale v. McCorkendale, 111-314.

Letters by a witness to a deceased, if material and admissible as declarations of the witness, are not excluded by the terms of this section. Howe v. Richards, 112-220.

Where letters were relied on as a recognition of an illegitimate child, held that the testimony of the child to whom the letters were written with reference to the receipt of such letters and the signature of the writer was not excluded by the provisions of this section, inasmuch as the genuineness of the letters and not the communication involved therein was the material matter of inquiry. Britt v. Hall, 116-564.

Removal of prohibition: Where plaintiff sought to recover against an estate for work and labor performed for deceased under an implied contract, and the administrator testified as to the physical needs and condition of deceased at the time when such services were rendered, held, that the claimant might, under the exception of the statute, testify as to the same facts. Ridler v. Ridler, 103-470.

The fact that the executor testifies in his own behalf does not in itself remove the prohibition as to testimony of the opposite party. It is only removed as to communications or transactions with the deceased as to which the executor has testified. Boardman v. Brown, 114-678.

If when the testimony is given the witness is incompetent, and that objection is properly insisted upon, the objecting party does not waive the error by subsequently testifying concerning the same transaction. Brandes v. Brandes, 129-351.

The fact that the party suing on a note given to one who is deceased testifies as to how he acquired his right to the notes does not make competent the evidence of the maker of the notes as to conversations with the deceased with reference thereto. Chapman v. Chapman, 132-5.

The admission of a receipt, or deed, or contract, or other writing of a deceased person is not sufficient to admit the testimony of a living witness otherwise incompetent under the statute, and this rule applies to the books of account of deceased. Whisler v. Whisler, 117-712.

Where in an action by the administrator no evidence of a transaction with the deceased is offered, the defendant cannot by his own act in putting in evidence a letter written by him to the deceased thereby render himself competent to testify to the transactions referred to in such letter. Ross v. Kirkwold, 123-668.

Where a witness who is not competent to testify in direct examination as to conversations and transactions with a deceased person, is asked with reference thereto on cross-examination, he may be questioned on redirect examination with reference to the same subject-matter. In re Will of Wharton, 132-714.

A witness not competent to testify as to conversation with a person deceased cannot be inquired of with reference to such conversations on cross examination, not having been asked to testify with reference thereto in the examination in chief. Stutsman v. Sharpless, 125-335.

The fact that by a stipulation filed after the testimony of a party is given, but before the case is determined, judgment is entered as to him, does not render his testimony already given competent. The interest to disqualify such witness must be legal, certain and immediate, such as at common law would have disqualified him. Culbertson v. Salinger, 131-307.

How objection raised: Under this section the witness is made incompetent to testify as to such transactions or communications, and an objection to a question, calling for testimony as to such transactions or communications, that the evidence is incompetent, does not raise the question as to the competency of the witness. Burdick v. Raymond, 107-228.

The objection of incompetency, without more, goes to the evidence and not to the witness, and does not raise the question whether the witness is competent to testify under this section. McDonald v. Young, 109-704.

The objection that the witness cannot testify as to personal transactions is not to be made when he is first sworn, but when he is asked to testify as to such transactions, and if objection is not then made it must be deemed as waived. Chew v. Holt, 111-362.

Objection to the competency of the witness to testify as to a conversation with a person deceased should be made when such testimony is first called for. Davis v. Hall, 128-647.

The objection to the witness should be made when his testimony is offered, and if the evidence is received without objection, it should not afterwards be stricken out. Slattery v. Slattery, 120-717.

A general objection to the competency of a witness, made at the close of his evidence, comes too late. Ibid.

It is not proper to receive evidence which is objected to on the ground that it relates to a personal transaction or communication and at the end of the introduction of the evidence to instruct the jury that they shall not consider so much thereof as relates to such communications and transactions. In re Hull's Will, 117-738.

An objection to a witness on the ground that he is incompetent without stating the specific ground is sufficient where the facts showing his incompetency to testify as to a transaction with the person deceased have been made to appear. McAleer v. McNamara, 112 N. W. 85.

Testimony on previous trial: The evidence of one party to a suit with reference to personal transactions with the other which is taken down in shorthand on the trial, and which would otherwise be competent on a second trial under the provisions of Code § 245-a, cannot be used on such second trial if in the meantime the opposite party has died. Greenlee v. Mosnat, 111 N. W. 996.

In particular cases: Section applied. Nordman v. Meyer, 118-508; Huit v. Huit, 122-338; In re Will of Wiltsey, 122-423; Beechley v. Beechley, 108 N. W. 762.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held that proof of insanity of the person with whom the conversation was held to which the witness was asked to testify was not such as to justify the exclusion of such testimony. Percival-Porter Co. v. Oaks, 130-212.

SEC. 4605. Depositions taken conditionally.

The provision that a person may have his own deposition taken with reference to a personal transaction with another and read in evidence where his testimony becomes incompetent by reason of the death of the other party to the transaction does not authorize the introduction in evidence on the second trial of a case of the testimony of a party given on the first trial with reference to a personal transaction with the opposite party if in the meantime such opposite party has died. The provision of Code Supplement § 245-a for use on a second trial of testimony taken in shorthand on the first trial does not make such report of the evidence equivalent to a deposition taken on notice before the trial of the case. Greenlee v. Mosnat, 111 N. W. 996.

SEC. 4606. Husband or wife as witness. Neither the husband nor wife shall in any case be a witness against the other, except in a criminal prosecution for a crime committed one against the other, or in a civil action or proceeding one against the other, or in a civil action by one against a third party for alienating the affections of the other; or in any civil action brought by a judgment creditor against either the husband or the wife, to set aside a conveyance of property from one to the other on the ground of want of consideration or fraud, and to subject the same to the payment of his judgment; but in all civil and criminal cases they may be witnesses for each other. [15 G. A., ch. 33; C., '73, § 3641; R., § 3983; C., '51, § 2391.] [27 G. A., ch. 108, § 1.]

Scope of provision: The statutory provision forbidding husband or wife to be a witness against the other has no application to the question as to the admissibility of privileged communications between them. Sexton v. Sexton, 129-487.

Proof of marriage: Where the evidence is sufficient to make out a prima facie case of former marriage not dissolved by death or divorce, the question of the competency of one of the parties to the alleged marriage to testify against the other is a question for the jury. It is not essential in order to establish such disqualification that the fact of the marriage shall be proven by record evidence. State v. Rocker, 130-239.

Testimony as to crime prior to marriage: In a prosecution for rape committed upon a female child to whom the defendant has been united in marriage after the commission of the crime and before the trial, the female cannot testify as a witness against her husband. State v. McKay, 122-658.

The provisions of this section do not make the wife a competent witness in prosecution for rape committed upon her by the husband prior to the marriage. The crime is, in such case, not by the husband against the wife as such and is condoned by the subsequent marriage. Ibid.

A marriage though not regularly solemnized is valid under the provisions of Code § 3147, which renders the wife incompetent as a witness against her husband. Ibid.

After marriage has been dissolved: This section does not apply if the marriage relation has been severed when the witness is offered. Hitt v. Sterling-Goold Mfg. Co., 111-458.

The objection to the testimony of the wife against the husband as to a crime committed by him is removed if between the commission of the crime and the trial the wife has been divorced from her husband. State v. Mathews, 133-398.

Declarations: In an action against both husband and wife a declaration of either against interest is admissible, although it would be incompetent as against the other. Chaslavka v. Mechalek, 124-69.

Before grand jury: The fact that the wife is examined as a witness before the grand jury on the finding of an indictment against her husband is not a ground for setting aside the indictment. State v. De Groate, 122-661; State v. Brown, 128-24.

Fraudulent conveyance: The provisions added to this section by § 1, chap. 108, Acts 27 G. A., with reference to actions to set aside fraudulent conveyances, are not unconstitutional as being class legislation. The act applies to every person coming within the relation and circumstances provided for. Burk v. Putnam, 133-232.

Nor is the statute unconstitutional as requiring answers to incriminating questions. In view of the statutory provision on that subject (Code § 4612) it must be assumed that the witness is not required to answer questions which would tend to incriminate him. Ibid.

The statute is not retroactive. Cedar Rapids Nat. Bank v. Lavery, 110-575.

Declarations of the wife as to her title to real property previously conveyed by her to her husband are not admissible for the purpose of impeaching the title of the husband. Ibid.

SEC. 4607 Communications between husband and wife.

Where it was claimed that a conveyance was joined in by the wife in pursuance of threats made to the husband, and by him communicated to the wife, held that the fact of such communication might be proved by the testimony of the husband. Giddings v. Iowa Sav. Bank, 104-676.

The provisions of this section absolutely press terms to cases where the marriage relation has ceased to exist. Shuman v. Supreme Lodge K. of H., 110-480.

The provisions of this section absolutely close the mouth of husband or wife as to any communication made by one to the other during marriage. Such a communication is not merely privileged, but evidence of the parties with reference thereto is against public policy. Hertrich v. Hert-rich, 114-643.

SEC 4608. Communications in professional confidence. No practicing attorney, counselor, physician, surgeon, or the stenographer or confidential clerk of any such person, who obtains such information by reason of his employment, minister of the gospel or priest of any denomination shall be allowed, in giving testimony, to disclose any confidential communication properly intrusted to him in his professional capacity, and necessary and proper to enable him to discharge the functions of his office according to the usual course of practice or discipline. Such prohibition shall not apply to cases where the party in whose favor the same is made waives the rights conferred. [C., '73, § 3643; R., §§ 3985-6; C. '51, §§ 2393-4.] [28 G. A., ch. 125, § 1.]

Privileged communications to attorney: An attorney acting as a mere scrivener in the preparations of instruments under directions given to him is not within the scope of the statutory provisions excluding the testimony of an attorney as to privileged communications. Mueller v. Batcheler, 131-650.

To constitute a privileged communication to an attorney there must be some element of confidence imposed or presumed to be imposed in the attorney himself. The privilege does not apply to a case where two or more persons consult an attorney for their mutual benefit. Ibid.

An attorney is not disqualified from testifying to statements by his client made in his presence to the court. Foreman v. Archer, 130-49.

An attorney should not be allowed in a criminal case to testify that the defendant consulted him with reference to a subject-matter having relation to the commission of the crime charged. State v. Blydenburg, 112 N. W. 634.

The statutory provision excluding evidence of an attorney as to communications made to him in the course of his employment is broad enough to exclude statements made to a county attorney with a view to a criminal prosecution. Gabriel v. McMullin, 127-426.

To physicians: Where the question is an action on a policy of life insurance is whether the insured consulted a physician, otherwise than as disclosed in his answers in the application, a physician may without violating the provisions of this section testify to attending insured as a physician, and prescribing for him. Such evidence has no reference to communications between the physician and patient. Nelson v. Nederland L. Ins. Co., 110-600.

But the physician cannot testify as to the advice given to his patient, because this must have been based upon information derived from the patient. The statute does not permit a disclosure of information so derived, though indirectly made. Ibid.

This section does not prescribe any rule of professional conduct, nor prohibit a physician from disclosing otherwise the secrets of his patient. It relates only to the giving of testimony in a judicial proceeding, either by evidence directly given, or by affidavits, or otherwise. Ibid.

Facts learned by a physician while in the discharge of his duties as such cannot be testified to by him in view of the provisions of this section. Finegan v. Sioux City, 112-232.

Whenever an injured party consults a physician as physician and discloses to him his physical condition, and thus enables him to obtain information, which as an ordinary person he would not have obtained, such physician is prohibited from testifying with reference to the knowledge thus obtained, except with the consent of the injured party. So held where a physician was called by the opposite party to whom the injured person had disclosed his physical condition for the purpose of having such physician act as a witness in his behalf. Doran v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co., 117-442.

Statements made by an injured railroad employe to a surgeon in the employ of the company, who visits him for the purpose of treating him for his injuries are privileged. Keist v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., 110-32.

The confidential communications protected under the statute are not restricted to mere verbal statements by the patient to the physician, but include all knowledge or information acquired by the physician through his own observation or examination. Battis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 124-623.

While the railroad company may send its own physician to examine an employe injured in the course of his employment for the purpose of determining the extent of the injury, yet if the physician thus furnished assumes to advise or administer treatment to the patient with his acquiescence he becomes the physician of the patient and communications made to him and knowledge acquired by him in that relation are privileged. Ibid.

Physicians who examine a person without his request, and without any understanding on the part of the person examined that they are making such examination as his physician, are not incompetent. State v. Height, 117-650.

Examinations and communications made in the presence of a physician, but not to him as physician, are not excluded as confidential communications. Sutcliffe v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Assn., 119-220.

The expert testimony of a physician, based on hypothetical questions as to the cause of an injury to his patient, is not incompetent. Crago v. Cedar Rapids, 123-48.

Section applied as to communications between patient and physician. Herries v. Waterloo, 114-374.

Communications to a veterinary surgeon are not privileged. Hendershot v. Western Union Tel. Co., 106-529.

This section extends the privilege which at common law was recognized in regard to communications between client and attorney so as to cover communications between patient and physician, and extends to the latter communications the same complete protection, not only as to the physician, but also as to the patient, which at common law was recognized in regard to communications between attorney and client. Therefore the patient is privileged from disclosing communications made to his physician. Burgess v. Sims Drug Co., 114-275.

Waiver: While the privilege may be waived, the voluntary disclosure of such communication by the patient in cross-examination will not constitute a waiver such as to authorize the introduction in evidence of the testimony of the physician with reference to such communication. Ibid.

Any waiver resulting from voluntary testimony of the patient with reference to the communication must be limited to the action in which such voluntary testimony is given, and will not operate on another trial of the same case. Ibid.

Communications from a patient to his physician are not privileged at common law. Although there is no statutory authority for waiving the prohibition, it is settled that it may be waived by the client, and after the death of the client, by his administrator. In a criminal case, involving death of a woman by abortion, committed by the defendant, testimony of a physician who attended the woman before her death is admissible. State v. Grimmel, 116-596.

A patient may waive the privilege in case of a communication to his physician and in cases of contests of wills where the parties are claiming rights of the estate through devise, inheritance, or in a representative capacity, those representing the estate may also waive the privilege, but in an action on a mutual benefit certificate of life insurance, communications by the deceased to his physician are not competent. Shuman v. Supreme Lodge K. of H., 110-480.

Where several different physicians had treated a person for an injury received from a defective sidewalk, held, that the fact that plaintiff called one of such physicians as a witness did not waive the privilege of objecting to evidence of the other physicians as to communications relating to such injury. Baxter v. Cedar Rapids, 103-599.

The fact that a physician is asked to testify as to the condition in which he found an injured party when called to attend him is not a waiver of privilege as to subsequent communication made to and observations made by such physician. Nugent v. Cudahy Packing Co., 126-517.

The mere offer of testimony which is competent and material in itself, but is excluded only because of the incompetency of the witness, does not ordinarily afford any ground for an assignment of error. State v. Booth, 121-710.

SEC. 4612. Criminating questions.

The objection on the part of the witness to criminating questions is not one which can be urged on behalf of the defendant himself, and an error in ruling on such objection is not one of which the defendant can complain. State v. Cogley, 128-114.

SEC. 4613. Previous conviction.

The record of a conviction for a felony is admissible although an appeal for such conviction is pending. Hackett v. Freeman, 103-296.

Whatever may have been the rule at common law as to proof of previous conviction as affecting the credibility and not the competency of the witness, this section limits such evidence to conviction of a felony. Palmer v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. Co., 113-442.

It is not proper to ask a witness on cross-examination, for the purpose of affecting his credibility, whether he has not been accused of a crime. Germinder v. Machinery Mut. Ins. Assn., 120-614.

Although previous conviction may be shown for the purposes of impeachment only by the record, yet where the question was as to whether the defendant had been absent from the state so as to obviate the bar of the statute of limitations, held that the warden of the penitentiary of another state might testify as to the defendant being in that state, although it incidentally appeared from his testimony that he was confined in the penitentiary. State v. Moran, 131-645.

It is not improper in questioning the witness as to previous conviction of a felony to direct his attention to the specific felony of which it is claimed he was convicted. State v. Carter, 121-135.

In proving the former conviction of a witness for the purpose of impeaching his credibility, it is immaterial that the record of conviction shows a middle initial which is not a part of the real name of the witness. State v. Loser, 132-419.

SEC. 4614. Moral character.

Inquiry as to the general reputation of the witness for truth and veracity should be restricted to the neighborhood of the present residence of the witness sought to be impeached, and to proof of reputation at a time near that of the trial. When residence has been so recently acquired that the neighbors of the witness are not likely to have ascertained his true character, and who in all probability has not worn off that established in the neighborhood of his former abode, evidence of his reputation at the latter place may be received, as it may also, when he has subsequently remained in no place long enough to become well known to his neighbors. Schoep v. Banker's Alliance Ins. Co., 104-354; McGuire v. Kenefick, 111-147.

It is competent to ask a witness what is his occupation and where he resides, although the answers to such questions may have a tendency to disgrace the witness, affect his credibility, or weaken his evidence. State v. Chingren, 105-169.

Before a witness can speak as to the character or reputation of another, his knowledge must appear. The mere individual opinion of the witness is not admissible. No one will be permitted to speak affirmatively to the character or competency of another, as distinguished from general reputation, solely from rumors or reports. Lacy v. Kossuth County, 106-16.

The general moral character of a witness, or his general reputation as to morals may be shown, not his character or life as known to the impeaching witness. State v. Seevers, 108-738.

Where the prosecutrix in a prosecution for seduction is a witness, her moral character or reputation may be shown for purposes of impeachment, but in such case the proof should be confined to her general reputation and should not be extended to cover a specific vice. Such testimony should ordinarily be confined to the time of trial. State v. Haupt, 126-152.

Where a witness testifying to the bad character of another witness for purposes of impeachment is cross-examined as to the names of the persons whom he has heard speak ill of such witness and names such persons, the persons named cannot be called to contradict the statements attributed to them by the impeaching witness. To allow such testimony would be to introduce a collateral issue. Hofacre v. Monticello, 128-239.

SEC. 4615. Whole of a writing or conversation.

The evident design of this provision is that the whole of a conversation on the same subject shall be received in order to determine the consideration and weight to be attached to that portion offered. Walkley v. Clarke, 107-451.

Where a part of a conversation has been introduced in evidence it is competent to prove the other portion as explaining the part introduced. Hutton v. Dorsee, 116-13.

An objection to an entire writing relied on as constituting an admission in a criminal case should not be sustained, although the writing contains some expressions of opinions which would not in themselves be admissible, there being no objection to the specific portion of the writing which is deemed objectionable. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

A rule that if one party has proven part of a conversation the other is entitled to give the rest of it in evidence, does not warrant the admission of everything which may have been said, but only so much as was said concerning the subject-matter of the statements testified to. State v. Louhremen, 123-476.

Where a portion of a conversation or correspondence has been given in evidence by one party, the whole relating to the same subject may be inquired into by the other party. Robertson v. Vasey, 125-526.

Section applied. State v. Hudson, 110-663.

SEC. 4616. Writing and printing.

In case of inconsistency between the printed and the written portions of a contract, the written portion will prevail. Sylvester v. Ammons, 126-140.

SEC. 4617. Understanding of parties to agreement.

The provision is only applicable to a case where the writing involved is fairly susceptible of different meanings. Rouss v. Creglow, 103-60.

The statutory provision that when the terms of an agreement have been intended in a different sense by the parties thereto, that sense is to prevail against either in which he had reason to suppose the other understood it, has no application where as a matter of law the language of the contract is plain and unambiguous. Inman Mfg. Co. v. American Cereal Co., 133-71.

It is error to submit to the jury the question whether a written contract was understood by one of the parties in a different sense than that indicated by its plain and unequivocal language. Capital City Carriage Co. v. Moody, 110 N. W. 903.

Where parties do not understand the agreement alike, it is, as against one of them, to be construed in that sense in which the other had reason to believe it was understood. Ubbinga v. Farmers' Sav. Bank, 108-221.

This section applies to verbal contracts as well as those in writing, and it is applicable also to cases of express contract, as well as those implied. Lull v. Anamosa Nat. Bank, 110-537.

Where a contract issued by a building and loan association was ambiguous in its terms, held that it would be construed in the sense in which it was evidently intended to be taken by the person to whom it was issued. Field v. Eastern B. & L. Assn., 117-185.

Section applied. Wood v. Allen, 111-97; Brown v. Curtis, 111-542.

SEC. 4618. Historical and scientific works.

While the truths of the exact sciences, the established facts of history, and computations from fixed data may be proven by the works of reputable authorities, yet medicine belongs to the class known as inductive sciences, the data of which are constantly shifting with new discoveries, and as to matters of skill and knowledge in that science, the safer practice is to rely upon the testimony of living witness of the medical profession who may bring the learning and research of the books within the comprehension of the jurors. Bixby v. Omaha & C. B. R. & B. Co., 105-293.

Extracts from medical works, defining and giving the probable cause, progress and symptoms of a disease are not admissible in evidence. Stewart v. Equitable Mut. L. Assn., 110-528.

Medical books are not admissible in evidence. State v. Peterson, 110-647.

The maps or plats of the government survey in the custody of the proper officer may be certified by him, and as thus certified are admissible in evidence. Austin v. Witcher, 110 N. W. 910.

SEC. 4620. Handwriting.

While the standard itself cannot be established by the testimony of persons who have seen the party write, yet the party whose signature the standard is claimed to be may establish it by his own oath. Renner v. Thornburg, 111-515.

Where the question was whether a certain signature, purporting to be that of the wife, was genuine or was in fact the signature of the husband afterwards altered to that of the wife, held that comparison with handwriting of the husband was proper. Coppock v. Lampkin, 114-664.

One who has seen the person write is competent to express an opinion as to whether the writing in question is his handwriting. Frank v. Berry, 128-223.

A signature to a pleading purporting to be that of the party in whose behalf it is filed may be introduced in evidence as the writing of such person in the absence of any showing that the signature was not his. Ibid.

Held not error to instruct that expert evidence as to handwriting is of the lowest order of evidence, or evidence of the most unsatisfactory character. Patton v. Lund, 114-201.

SEC. 4623. Books of account—when admissible.

Where books are not shown, by the oath of the party who kept them, to be books of original entry they are properly excluded. Frick v. Kabaker, 116-494.

Books of account not shown to have been made in the ordinary course of business are not admissible in establishing the items of charge. Kossuth County State Bank v. Richardson, 132-370.

Even where the showing necessary to entitle a party to introduce books of account in evidence has not been made, they may be admissible as showing entries in the partnership account, charging a partner with knowledge of the understanding with which funds were received. McDer- mott v. Hacker, 109-239.

Books of account are admissible for the purpose of showing entries against the interest of the person in whose interest such books are kept. Citizens' National Bank v. Wilson, 121-156.

Such evidence may be considered, although it is contradictory to the evidence of the persons authorized to make such entries. Ibid.

Books of account held admissible to establish the manner in which the business was carried on as bearing on the question whether a partnership existed. In re Myers' Estate, 111-584.

SEC. 4625. Statute of frauds—contract in writing.

Effect of statute: The statute of frauds does not prohibit an oral contract, nor make such agreement illegal because certain formalities are not complied with. It relates only to the method by which the proof thereof may be made. Merchant v. O'Rourke, 111-351.

The contract is not invalidated by reason of noncompliance with the statute. The provisions of the statute relates only to the proof. Nebraska Bridge Supply & Lumber Co. v. Conway, 127-237.

Where a contract is one which can be evidenced only in writing, the court cannot look beyond the writing to ascertain the terms, conditions or provisions of the contract. Allan v. Bemis, 120-172.

The statute of frauds does not undertake to regulate the manner of executing contracts when made, nor does it have any concern with them after being executed. Dorr Cattle Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 127-153.

Remedy in equity: Notwithstanding the requirement that contracts within the provisions of the statute of frauds can only be proven by written evidence, a court of equity may on parol evidence reform a contract by adding thereto provisions which have been omitted by mutual mistake and then specifically enforce the contract as thus reformed. Butler v. Threlkeld, 117-116.

Notwithstanding the provisions of the statute of frauds, equity may on parol evidence set aside a conveyance for the purpose of preventing the obtaining of an estate by fraud. Willis v. Robertson, 121-380.

A parol contract between the owner of land and another by which the latter agrees to support the former for the balance of his life in consideration that the property shall belong to the latter after the former's death is binding in equity. Powers v. Crandall, 111 N. W. 1010.

Lost instrument: Parol evidence is admissible to show the terms of an instrument which the law requires to be in writing, for instance, a lost antenuptial contract. In re Devoe's Estate, 113-4.

What sufficient memorandum: The memorandum is sufficient if signed by the agent, duly authorized, in his own name. Nebraska Bridge Supply & Lumber Co. v. Conway, 127-237.

A duplicate memorandum of an order by the agent to his principal to ship goods to a buyer, one copy of which is given to the buyer, is sufficient memorandum of the contract to hold the principal. Ibid.

How objection raised: The objection that the contract is not in writing as required by the statute of frauds must be raised by demurrer or by objection to the introduction of evidence. It is not sufficient, to justify a reversal on appeal, that the objection is raised by answer alone. Marr v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 121-117.

Par. 1. Sale of personality: Under a general denial in an action for breach of contract of sale, plaintiff must prove his contract by written evidence, or, in lieu thereof, must prove payment or delivery, so as to bring the case within the exceptions of the next section. Thompson v. Frakes, 112-585.

The defense available under the statute of frauds as against the enforcement of a parol contract for the sale of personal property, held not to be defeated by evidence with regard to part performance or statements recognizing the validity of the contract. Johnson v. Holland, 124-157.

Par. 2. In consideration of marriage: An oral contract made in consideration of marriage cannot be proven by a written contract entered into between the parties after marriage which does not show that it was executed to give effect to and make of writing the previous parol antenuptial agreement. Frazer v. Andrews, 112 N. W. 92.

Par. 3. Answering for debt of another: An oral promise to pay for the care of a person who is non-compos mentis is not a contract within the statute of frauds, even though the person making the promise is not legally liable for the support. Harlan v. Harlan, 102-701.

Where a lessor without waiving his lien permitted the lessee to remove property which was subject to the lien on the oral promise of a third person that the rent should be paid, held, that the promise of the third person was within the statute of frauds, and that the lessor had not lost his lien. Griffin v. Hoag, 105-499.

A verbal acceptance of an order drawn on a fund is not good unless it be shown that the drawer was the owner of the fund in the hands of the drawee or acceptor at the time the order is accepted, for unless the drawee have such fund his verbal promise to pay the debt of another is within the statute of frauds. Winburn v. Fidelity L. & B. Assn., 110-374.

The agreement to save a stakeholder harmless from the demands of one of the parties to a wager, if he will pay the amount of the wager to the promisor, is an original promise, and not within the statute of frauds. Himmelman v. Pecaut, 133-503.

Where a railroad company contracted with a boarding house keeper to pay for boarding its non-union employes, held that such contract was not to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another, and need not be in writing. Marr v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 121-117.

A promise to answer for the debt of another to be within the statute of frauds must be made to the person entitled to enforce the liability assumed by the promisor. A promise to the debtor to pay his debt and thereby relieve him from the payment of it himself is not within the statute. Merchants v. O'Rourke, 111-351.

When the promise, although in form to pay the debt of another, is founded on a new consideration which passes between the parties, and gives to the promisor a benefit which he did not enjoy before, and would not have possessed but for the promise, it will be regarded as an original undertaking to which the statute of frauds has no application. Carraher v. Allen, 112-168.

A direct promise to pay the debt of another, made to subserve some purpose of the promisor is not within the statute of frauds. Williams Shoe Co. v. Gotzian, 130-710.

Where the promise to answer for the debt of another is made to subserve promisor's own objects and purposes, and for a consideration to him, it is not within the statute of frauds. Blake v. Robinson, 129-196.

Whenever the main purpose of the person promising it not to answer for the debt of another, but to subserve some object of his own, the promise is not within the statute of frauds, although in form it may have the effect of extinguishing the liability of another. Pratt v. Fishwild, 121-642.

Par. 4. Creating interest in land: A parol sale of growing trees is an executory contract, passing no title to the purchaser. A sale of growing trees, treated as a sale of an interest in realty, would be within the provision of the statute of frauds relating to the sale of an interest in realty. Garner v. Mahoney, 115-356.

An agreement with reference to the interest of joint owners in a mining venture is not within the statute of frauds as to real property. Doyle v. Burns, 123-488.

An agreement to take the assignment of an option and assume the further obligations of the vendee to the vendor is within the statute of frauds. Esslinger v. Pascoe, 129-86.

The right of the owner of a dominant estate to cast surface water upon the servient estate otherwise than in the course of nature, constitutes an easement which cannot be proved by parol. Jones v. Stover, 131-119.

An oral contract creating a trust in land is not void. If the trustee refuses to perform, and the beneficiary is unable to prove the trust by written evidence, he must suffer, but if the contract is fully carried out it does not lie in the mouth of a third person to say that it is void, and therefore confers no rights. McCormick Har. Mach. Co. v. Griffin, 116-397.

An oral agreement that one in possession of property shall surrender it on an adjudication against his claim in another case is within the statute of frauds. East Omaha Land Co. v. Hansen, 117-96.

In such case continuance in possession by the claimant will not take the case out of the statute under the next section. Ibid.

Evidence in a particular case held not

SEC. 4626. Exceptions.

Labor or money to be expended: A contract for the sale of corn to be shelled, that unfit for shelling to be thrown out, is not within the exception of the statute of frauds as to cases where labor, skill or money is necessary to be expended in producing or procuring the property. In such case the work to be done is not of a kind to change either the form or character of the thing sold. Lewis v. Evans, 108-296.

Merely preparing a crop for the market is not labor and expenses in producing or procuring it such as to take an oral contract for the sale thereof out of the statute of fraud. Migbell v. Dougherty, 86-480; Dierson v. Petersmeyer, 109-233.

Taking possession: In order that the act of the vendee in taking possession of the property shall be such as to bring the case within the exception of the statute of frauds it must appear that the possession was taken in pursuance of the contract. Benedict v. Bird, 103-612.

The exception of the statute relating to the payment of the purchase price applies only to cases where "the purchase money or any portion thereof has been received by the vendor." Ibid.

To constitute such delivery of personal property as to take an oral contract for the sale thereof out of the statute of frauds it is necessary not only that the vendor act with purpose of vesting the right of possession in the vendee, but that the vendee accept with the intention of taking possession as owner. Dierson v. Petersmeyer, 109-233.

Possession taken under a contract for the transfer of an interest in real property takes such contract out of the statute of frauds. Kitchen v. Chantland, 130-618.

sufficient to show a contract in writing which could be the subject of an action for specific performance. Mathes v. Bell, 121-722.

The validity of transfers of real estate is to be determined by the law of the state where the property is situated. This rule is applicable not only to the form and manner of the conveyance or contract, but also to rights of the parties thereto and their capacity to contract. Meylink v. Rhea, 123-310.

Section applied as to a contract creating an interest in real property. Gregory v. Bowsby, 115-327.

Par. 5. Contract not to be performed within a year: Where the contract is to be performed on one side within a year and is so performed, the other party is not excused from performance, although a longer time is contemplated. Fernald v. Gilman, 123 Fed. 797.

If one is already in possession of land under a contract of lease, his continuance in that possession will not be sufficient to support a claim of part performance under a subsequent contract of purchase. The possession, to take the contract out of the statute of frauds, must be exclusively referable to the contract. Hutton v. Doxsee, 116-13.

Taking of possession, to render valid an oral contract to convey, must be with actual or implied consent of the grantor, and by virtue of the contract. Lowery v. Lowery 117-704.

If plaintiff relies on the testimony of defendant to establish the taking possession of real property under a contract not in writing, the burden is on him to prove that possession was taken under such contract. Marks v. McGookin, 127-716.

One who has been in possession as tenant cannot claim to have taken possession under a contract of purchase, unless he can show that, with the making of the alleged contract, his possession as tenant ceased and that possession thereafter was held as a purchaser under and by virtue of the contract. Nor will it be material as showing possession under the contract of purchase that the tenant made improvements. Allan v. Bemis, 120-172.

Under the evidence in a particular case held that there was not such payment nor taking of possession as to take a parol contract for the sale of land out of the statute of frauds. Heddleston v. Stoner, 128-525.

Part performance: An oral agreement to transfer real property to another in consideration that the latter will furnish support for a dependent person, is taken out of the statute of frauds by the furnishing support as agreed and can be specifically enforced. Harlan v. Harlan, 102-701.

Part payment, or taking possession under an oral contract, will render the contract binding. Walkley v. Clarke, 107-451.

An oral agreement between husband and wife by which the husband abandons the advantage of the antenuptial contract with reference to the wife's interest in the husband's real property, in consideration of the discontinuance of a meritorious suit for divorce and the resumption of the marriage relations is valid, notwithstanding the statute of frauds. Fisher v. Koontz, 110-498.

A promise or agreement to make a will for the transfer of an interest in land in another's favor may be taken out of the statute of frauds by the payment of a consideration. Bird v. Jacobus, 113-194.

An oral contract for a gift of land in consideration of the support of the owner during his natural life, followed by possession and performance on the part of the donee, is not within the statute of frauds. Soper v. Galloway, 129-145.

The fact that performance is in part by the party to the contract, and in part by his heir, who after his death claims to inherit, will not defeat the contract, where such substituted performance has been accepted by the other party. Ibid.

Although performance is commenced under an oral contract to convey if it is subsequently abandoned before completion, the contract cannot be enforced. Eastwood v. Crane, 125-707.

The surrender of possession by a tenant and abandonment of his lease constitutes a sufficient part performance to take an oral contract to convey the premises out of the statute of frauds. Yule v. Fell, 123-662.

A tender of performance will not bring an oral contract for the conveyance of land within the exception to the statute of frauds. Ormsby v. Graham, 123-202.

Contracts within the statute of frauds

SEC. 4628. Party made witness.

Inasmuch as an oral contract, although within the statute of frauds, may be established by the testimony of the party, a recognition by him of the contract is sufficient to make a release from its obligation operative as a consideration for a new agreement. Merchant v. O'Rourke, 111-351.

SEC. 4630. Record or certified copy of instrument.

The loss of the original need not be shown in order to justify the reception of certified copies of the record. Proof by the party on oath, or otherwise, that the original is not within his control, is sufficient. Hall v. Cardell, 111-206.

are not void, and if performed, or partly performed, they are to the extent of such performance taken out of the statute. Murphy v. DeHaan, 116-61.

Where the contract, although within the statute of frauds, is for labor to be performed, and plaintiff has partly or wholly executed the same on his part, the terms of the contract govern as to the rate of compensation. Ibid.

At common law payment of the consideration for a conveyance of land was not regarded as part performance of the contract such as to take an oral agreement for the conveyance of land out of the statute of frauds. But under our statute part payment of the purchase money means the receipt of the consideration on which the contract is made, or a part thereof, in whatever form such consideration may exist. Daily v. Minnick, 117-563.

When part payment of the consideration is relied upon alone as taking the case out of the statute of frauds, the identification of the land may also rest in parol, and it is no objection to the enforcement of the contract that there is nothing in the act performed which serves to identify the land. Ibid.

Therefore held that parol evidence was admissible to show an agreement with the parents of a child, that in consideration of the child being named after the other party to the agreement, the latter would give the child forty acres of land, and that subsequently a particular tract of land was agreed upon as that to which the previous contract should relate. Ibid.

Pleading: Where the defendant by pleading raises the objection of the statute of frauds and the plaintiff alleges facts bringing the case within an exception in the statute, the defendant does not waive his defense by failing to object to the evidence of the contract offered, before it appears whether plaintiff can establish the fact of the exception. Benedict v. Bird, 103-612.

To entitle the plaintiff to recover in an action on a contract which is within the statute of frauds, relying upon the testimony of defendant to establish the contract, such testimony must be sufficient in itself to sustain the right of action. Marks v. McGookin, 127-716.

SEC. 4633. Repeal—recording of United States and state patents. That section forty-six hundred and thirty-three (4633) of the code be repealed and the following enacted in lieu thereof:

“United States and state patents for land in the state, and duly certified copies thereof from the general land office of the United States, or the state land office, that have been or may be recorded in the recorder’s office of the county in which the land is situated shall be matters of record, and such record, and copies thereof, certified to by the recorder, may be received and read in evidence in all courts, with like effect as the record of other instruments, and other certified copies of original papers recorded in his office; and such patents and certified copies may be recorded without an acknowledgment.” [31 G. A., ch. 159.]

SEC. 4635. Copies of records and entries in public offices.

Certified copies of records in a public office are entitled to the same weight as the originals. Traer v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 106-559.

The statutory rule that duly certified copies of records belonging to any public office are admissible in evidence in all cases as of equal credibility with the original record, is a common law rule generally recognized. Austin v. Whitcher, 110 N. W. 910.

In a particular case, held, that it was sufficiently shown that deeds and plat, the records of which were introduced in evidence did not belong to the party introducing such records and were not within his control. Independent School Dist. v. Hewit, 105-663.

SEC. 4638. Officer to give copies of records.

No duty is imposed upon the officer having charge of the records to make a search thereof and give a certificate of the absence of any record of a particular fact or proceeding. In re Estate of Colton, 129-542; State v. Kendig, 133-164.

SEC. 4644. Judicial record—of state or federal court.

A judgment may be proved by the record book, or a certified transcript thereof. Baxter v. Pritchard, 113-422.

The absence of any record of a divorce proceeding is not to be established by a certificate of the clerk of the court, but by testimony of the officer or other competent person, that on examination of the records no such proceeding is shown. In re Estate of Colton, 129-542; and see State v. Kendig, 133-164.

SEC. 4645. Of another state.

The method provided by the federal statute for proving judgments or records of foreign states is not exclusive and proof complying with the provisions of the state statute on the subject is sufficient. Tomlin v. Woods, 125-367.

The rules of evidence prescribed by the statutes of this state as to proof of a foreign judgment will govern as to the sufficiency of the certification of such judgment. Morrison Mfg. Co. v. Rimerman, 127-719.

The certification by the clerk on a separate sheet of paper attached to the copy of the judgment is sufficient. Woodworth v. McKee, 126-714.

SEC. 4648. Presumption of regularity.

A situation will not be presumed, in the absence of proof, to defeat the acts of an officer apparently clothed with authority in discharging duties imposed upon him by statute. Miller Brewing Co. v. Capital Ins. Co., 111-590.

When an inferior tribunal is authorized to determine a question of act, its finding is an adjudication which cannot be impeached collaterally. Oliver v. Monona County, 117-43.

A finding necessarily involved in the adjudication of an inferior tribunal will be presumed to exist, although not appearing of record, if there is no requirement that a record thereof be made. Ibid.

A presumption of truth attaches to the record of an officer showing the filing of a paper authorized to be filed in his office. McConkie v. District Court, 117-334.

To support a judgment of a justice of the peace rendered in a township adjoining that in which the suit should properly have been commenced, it will be presumed that there was no justice of the peace competent to act in the township in which the suit should have been instituted. (See Code § 4482.) Jonas v. Weires, 111 N. W. 453.

Section applied. Thompson v. Thompson, 117-65.

SEC. 4649. Executive acts.

A proclamation by the governor may be provided by the record thereof in the office of the secretary of state. McPeck v. Western U. Tel. Co., 107-356.

SEC. 4650. Proceedings of legislature.

There may be cases in which statutes of another state when relied upon must be pleaded, but where they are relied upon merely as evidence of ultimate facts it is not necessary that they be pleaded directly, the pleading of the fact being sufficient. Green v. Equitable Mut. L. & End. Assn., 105-628.

SEC. 4651. Printed copies of the statutes.

A book entitled "The Laws" of a state and bearing a certificate of the secretary of state that the volume was printed under his direction and that the certificate was made in conformity with the laws of the state, is competent evidence of such laws, though having the imprint of a private publisher, as it purports to have been published by state authority. Summitt v. United States Life Ins. Co., 123-681; 99 N. W. 563.

SEC. 4652. Written law—unwritten law.

The statute authorizes proof of the unwritten law of foreign countries by parol, but in the absence of such proof it will be presumed to be the same as the law of this state; and held, that proof showing the civil law to be in force in Mexico was not sufficient to establish the meaning of the term adult in Mexico as different from the meaning under the common law, there being no proof as to the statutory law of Mexico on the subject. Banco De Sonora v. Bankers' Mut. Gas Co., 124-576.

SEC. 4658. Subpoenas for witnesses.

Pendency of some proceeding in a court is necessary to warrant the issue of process for witnesses. Chambers v. Oehler, 107-155.

SEC. 4661. Witness fees.

When a witness is called and sworn and has thus placed himself under and subject to the order and direction of the court, he is entitled to fees for his attendance, but where a witness is present without being subpoenaed, solely at the risk of a party, and is not sworn, the party who calls him is alone responsible for his fees. Generally speaking, a witness is one who gives evidence in a court. Fisher v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 104-588.

Witnesses who are not subpoenaed are not entitled to mileage. Ibid.

Costs may be taxed, on proper showing, for witnesses who attend without being subpoenaed or used on the trial, but, in the absence of proof as to the distance traveled by them in attending the trial, no mileage can be taxed. Duree v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 118-640.

Where the personal presence of a witness is necessary in a criminal case, the county is liable for his mileage from a point without the state. Climie v. Appanoose County, 125-292.

A witness may have mileage from a point without the state within the discretion of the trial court. Perry v. Howe Co-operative Creamery Co., 125-415.

The mileage of witnesses whose personal presence at the trial is necessary may be taxed although they have come from other states. Casley v. Mitchell, 121-96.

It is not necessary where prosecutions are dismissed that formal judgments for costs against the county be entered. Such a judgment if entered could not be enforced save by presenting claims for the fees taxed to the board of supervisors of the county for allowance and if allowance should be refused, by suing the county therefor. McGuire v. Iowa County, 133-636.

The taxation of witness fees in the district court in criminal cases where there is no conviction is conclusive as to the liability of the county for such fees. But the same rule does not obtain in the justice's court, with reference to fees of justices and constables which are to be audited and paid out of the county treasury. Ibid.

Where the prosecution is dismissed

SEC. 4662. Fees in advance.

A witness for defendant in a criminal prosecution is not bound to attend without prepayment of fees, unless the subpoena owing to the failure of the justice to acquire jurisdiction over the accused, a constable is not entitled to his fees for service of process, nor the justice to his fee for entering judgment. Ibid.

is issued under the order of the judge as provided in Code § 1298. State v. Keenan, 111-286.

SEC. 4668. Failure to obey subpoena—pleading taken as true.

In the absence of a showing of want of personal knowledge, a request for judgment on account of failure of the opposite party to produce books and papers as required by statute, by order of the court, should not be granted. Devier v. Economic L. Assn., 106-682.

SEC. 4673. Affidavits—before whom made.

A mere jurat annexed to an official certificate is not an affidavit. McGuire v. Iowa County, 133-636.

The signature of the affidavit is necessary to the validity of the affidavit. Magney v. Roberts, 129-218.

In a proceeding before the board of medical examiners for revocation of a license, affidavits may be received as evidence.

Traer v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 106-559.

Where the affidavit of a juror in support of a motion for new trial is desired, application to an officer competent to take deposition may be made. It is not proper to call the juror as a witness on the motion for a new trial instead of procuring his affidavit. Harrison v. Ayrshire, 123-528.

SEC. 4675. How compelled.

A justice of the peace cannot issue a subpoena for the purpose of requiring the making of an affidavit where no proceeding is pending before him. Chambers v. Oehler, 107-155.

SEC. 4680. Publications—how proved.

Section applied. McConaughy v. Wilsey, 115-589.

SEC. 4684. Depositions—when taken and by whom.

Where depositions are taken upon notice, such notice must contain the name of the witness. Harlan v. Richmond, 108-161.

SEC. 4688. Not on election day or holiday, etc.

Legal holidays in Code § 3541 relate to appearance in an action and those in Code § 3053 relate to presentation and protest of negotiable paper. Brennan v. Roberts, 125-615; 101 N. W. 460.

The fact that depositions cannot be taken during the term of the court without express order of court is a sufficient ground for asking a continuance. Reupke v. Stuhr, & Son Grain Co., 126-632.

Where the court fixes a date for the taking of depositions of witnesses whose attendance has been anticipated but who are prevented from being present, no further notice of taking the deposition is required. State v. Mosher, 128-82.

SEC. 4689. On commission—notice—interrogatories.

In a proceeding for the probate of a will, the notice by the proponent as to the taking of depositions may be given to one who has filed objections, and who is the chief legatee or devisee under the will. In re Estate of Jones, 130-177.

SEC. 4700. Certificate.

A party to an action may have the right to demand the production of an original instrument which his adversary seeks to prove, notwithstanding the fact that a copy of it is attached to a deposition introduced in evidence. Ruthven v. Clarke, 109-25.

SEC. 4702. Taking in shorthand.

When depositions are taken in shorthand under statutory provisions, the notes may be signed by the witness, after being read over to him, and it is not necessary that the witness sign or swear to the translation of the notes. Slocum v. Brown, 105-209.

SEC. 4705. Transmission.

Failure to file the deposition with the clerk within the time prescribed is not sufficient ground for rejecting it if when offered in evidence it appears that the objecting party has had sufficient notice of the filing so that no prejudice has arisen by the failure to file in time. Ferguson v. Lederer, 128-286.

SEC. 4707. Opened—custody.

Depositions although not used by the party taking them are a part of the record, and if removed by him without leave may be required to be returned. Howe v. Mutual Reserve Fund L. Assn., 115-338.

SEC. 4708. Unimportant deviations.

A failure to file the deposition within the time prescribed by statute is not a reason for rejecting it when offered, if the objecting party has had sufficient notice of its filing to obviate any possible prejudice. Ferguson v. Lederer, 128-286.

SEC. 4712. Exceptions.

A party cannot be permitted to pick from a deposition taken at his instance those portions favorable to himself and omit the balance. He should either read all of that which is pertinent to the issues, or none. When the deposition is offered by the opposite party, such parts may be received as relate to any distinct transaction, but must include all said on the particular subject. It follows that after the deposition has been introduced by the party taking it he will not be permitted to withdraw a part, such as the cross-examination, without withdrawing the entire deposition, nor will he be allowed to withdraw the whole for the purpose of re-reading a part only. Walkley v. Clarke, 107-451.

Where a party offered to read parts of certain depositions, and an objection thereon on the ground that the whole deposition must be introduced was overruled, held that the error, if any, was not ground of reversal, as it appeared that the other portions of the depositions were wholly immaterial and inadmissible, and the objecting party had the opportunity of introducing the other portions of the depositions, had he desired to do so. Alexander v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 119-519.

Under this section secondary evidence is not to be deemed objectionable as incompetent. Matthews v. Luers Drug Co., 110-231.

The objection that interrogatories are not proper cross-examination and are incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and that the witness had not qualified himself to express the opinions asked for in all the interrogatories, should be overruled when not made before the case is reached for trial. Cathcart v. Rogers, 115-30.

The general objection that no foundation has been laid for the introduction of the deposition does not make it necessary to introduce in evidence the certificate under which it was taken. Krause v. Redman, 112 N. W. 91.

If depositions are filed in the case during term time, a motion to suppress them is too late if not filed within three days as required by the statute. Casley v. Mitchell, 121-96.

Unless exceptions are taken as required by statute the objection to a deposition that the notice was insufficient cannot be considered. Ostenson v. Severson, 126-197.

PART FOURTH.

CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

TITLE XXIV.

OF CRIMES AND PUNISHMENTS.

CHAPTER 2.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST THE LIVES AND PERSONS OF INDIVIDUALS.

SECTION 4727. Murder.

Indictment: Under an indictment charging murder by drugs or poison in different counts, held that it was not error to receive evidence as to the administration of a particular poison not specifically described in either of the counts without requiring an election at the time as to which count should be relied upon. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

An indictment for killing a person named is not insufficient because it appears on the introduction of the evidence that the person named was in fact an unnamed bastard, the name given it by the grand jury being a combination of the names of the parents. State v. Cunningham, 111-233.

Intent to kill: The unlawful administering of poison with bad motive or intent constitutes murder if death ensues, but it is immaterial whether or not there is a specific intent to kill, and an indictment charging death caused in such manner is not defective for failure to allege such specific intent to kill. State v. Van Tassel, 103-6.

The allegation of a specific intent to kill is unnecessary where the crime is charged to have been committed by the administration of poison. State v. Robinson, 126-69; State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

An indictment for murder, charging a wilful, deliberate and premeditated assault with a loaded revolver, but leaving it to inference whether or not the assault was made with specific intent to kill, or the revolver was loaded and charged with specific intent to kill, is not sufficient. State v. Linhoff, 121-632.

Intent to kill another than the victim: Where a shot is fired at one person with such intent and deliberation and premeditation that death of the assailed caused thereby would be murder in the first degree, the unintended killing of another by such shot is murder in the same degree. State v. Mathews, 133-398.

In a prosecution for murder in the first degree the criminality of defendant's act in shooting another person than the one intended to be injured may be determined with reference to his conduct toward the person whom he intended to injure. State v. Williams, 122-115.

If the purpose of plaintiff is to injure or kill some one, it is immaterial that a mistake was made in the identity of the person actually assaulted. State v. Dennis, 119-688.

Intoxication: Evidence as to the intoxication of defendant should be considered as bearing upon the question as to the degree of the offense. State v. Williams, 122-115.

Evidence of intoxication is admissible as bearing on the question of whether defendant was capable of forming an intent to assist another in an assault resulting in homicide. State v. Dorland, 103-168.

Intoxication may be shown to negative felonious intent, or for the purpose of reducing the degree of homicide, but it is not generally an excuse for an overt act. State v. Roan, 122-136.

Malice inferred: From the mere fact of killing, the inference of malice arises, the burden being on the prosecution to raise it to murder in the first degree, and on the defense to reduce it to manslaughter, by evidence tending to show legal excuse, justification or extenuation. State v. Hayden, 131-1.

Cause of death: If the injuries inflicted by the defendant contributed to produce a diseased condition, from which death resulted, the defendant is criminally responsible for the resulting death, if the acts were criminal. State v. Wood, 112-411.

It is not competent in a prosecution for murder to go into the question whether some particular form of surgical operation might have saved the life of deceased for whose death, caused by a wound, defendant is on trial, in the absence of evidence tending to indicate any other cause of death than that of the wound inflicted by the defendant. State v. Seery, 129-259.

One who by his criminal conduct aggravates the diseased condition of his victim and causes death sooner than it would otherwise have occurred is responsible for the death thus resulting. State v. Baldes, 133-158.

Deadly weapon: The question whether the weapon used in inflicting an injury resulting in death is a deadly weapon depends on the testimony, and is a question for the jury. State v. Seery, 129-259.

In the application of the rule as to the presumption arising from the use of a deadly weapon in a deadly manner, an ordinary penknife may be a deadly weapon. State v. Roan, 122-136.

Aiding and abetting: One may be convicted of the crime of murder in aiding and abetting the person who makes a felonious assault on another, causing death. State v. Cobby, 128-114.

Justification: To constitute justification for the use of force by an officer in affecting an arrest, it is not necessary to show absolute necessity. The law requires no more than that the officer, in what he does, employs no more force in affecting the arrest than to him, acting as an ordinarily prudent person, seems reasonable and apparently necessary. State v. Phillips, 119-652.

If the officer, using no more force than appears to him to be reasonably necessary, causes the death of the person arrested, and if the arrest is for a misdemeanor, does not employ a deadly weapon in a deadly manner, but death results without the use of means intended or reasonably calculated to cause death, the death resulting may be excusable as accidental. Ibid.

An officer is not justified in killing one who is guilty of a misdemeanor only in order to effectuate his arrest or to prevent his escape after arrest. To this rule there are some exceptions as in case of riot, mob violence, etc. State v. Smith, 127-534.

In arresting or resisting the escape of one who has committed a felony the officer may oppose force to force and if there be no other reasonably apparent method for effecting the arrest or preventing the escape of the felon, the officer may, if he has performed his duties in other respects, take the life of the offender or one who is seeking to rescue him. Ibid.

Self-defense: Where one unlawfully attacks another, the person attacked has the right to protect himself against such attack, and to save himself from all harm, and is not bound to draw nice calculations from appearances. He may pursue his adversary until he finds himself out of danger. State v. Linhoff, 121-632.

An instruction that if the person attacked continued to shoot under the influence of heat of blood and passion caused by the assault he would only be guilty of manslaughter, held erroneous where it did not appear whether the shot which inflicted the fatal wound was fired before the assailant retreated. Ibid.

One person may ask another for assistance in ejecting from his house one who is wrongfully there, and the person thus threatened with ejection has not the right to resist proper force applied for that purpose. State v. Roan, 122-136.

While a person assaulted may not, under the plea of self-defense, justify the taking of human life, if it reasonably appears that he could have avoided such necessity by retreat, this principle has no application to a case where one is wrongfully assaulted and repels force by the use of like force. The extent to which he may go is to be measured by the character of the assault. State v. Evenson, 122-88.

There is no duty to retreat where one is assaulted with a deadly weapon on his own premises; but he may repel the attack as appears to him reasonably necessary under the circumstances. State v. Bennett, 128-713.

Where parties engage in mutual combat and one of them, without withdrawing, makes use of a deadly weapon in killing the other, the claim that he acted in self-defense in so doing is not available to him. State v. Whitnah, 129-211.

Threats by a third person in the absence of proof of conspiracy between such person and the deceased are not admissible as tending to support the claim of self-defense. State v. Mitchell, 130-697.

Evidence tending to show reasonable apprehension of danger on the part of defendant relying upon self-defense, should be received. State v. Evans, 122-174.

In determining the reasonableness of the act of defendant in killing another in assumed self-defense, the fact that he is naturally a nervous and timid man cannot be taken into consideration. State v. Usher, 111 N. W. 811.

Intoxication cannot be taken into account in determining whether a person in that condition is likely to believe himself to be in danger, for reasons that might not be considered sufficient to create a reasonable apprehension of danger in the mind of a sober man. State v. Roan, 122-136.

Where there is evidence such as to raise a question of self-defense, the defendant is entitled to show the character of the deceased as to quarrelsomeness or violence under exceptional circumstances, similar to those existing at the time of the encounter. State v. Hunter, 118-680.

Where in a prosecution for murder there is evidence raising the question whether defendant acted in self-defense, and it is therefore important to determine which party made the first assault upon the other, the defendant may show not only the reputation for quarrelsomeness of the deceased, although not known to him at the time, but also specific acts of deceased showing his violent, reckless or quarrelsome disposition, immediately preceding the encounter, although such acts were not known to defendant at the time of the encounter. State v. Beird, 118-474.

Although in a prosecution for murder committed during an encounter, in which the defendant claims that he was acting in self-defense, the general reputation of deceased for quarrelsomeness may be shown, it is not competent to show particular conduct of deceased with reference to transactions at a remote time and at a different place. State v. Sale, 119-1.

Where the killing is admitted, but self-defense is relied on in justification, the previous relations of the parties may be enquired into as bearing upon the question as to who was the aggressor in the affray, and the mental attitude of the defendant when he committed the act. But this rule does not permit an inquiry into the specific details of a previous affray. State v. Blee, 133-725.

Where it is not claimed that the defendant was acting in defense of his possession it is immaterial whether the person killed was a trespasser. Ibid.

It is not error to fail to instruct with regard to self-defense, where there is no evidence on which the jury can find that the defendant acted in self-defense. State v. Seery, 129-259.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that defendant had not been so pressed by his assailant as to be justified in using a pocket-knife in such a way as to be likely to cause death. State v. Copeland, 106-102.

Burden of proving: Self-defense is not an affirmative matter to be established by defendant, but if there is any evidence tending to show the defendant to have acted in self-defense such evidence relates to the question of whether there was any crime committed, and the burden of proof is therefore upon the prosecution to make out the commission of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt, the evidence tending to show self-defense being taken into consideration. State v. Sharp, 127-526.

An instruction asked on behalf of the defendant to the effect that the burden is on the state to show that the defendant was not acting in self-defense should be given if not covered by the instructions given by the court, provided there is any evidence tending to show self-defense. State v. Usher, 126-287.

The burden is upon the state to show beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was not acting in self-defense where evidence tending to show self-defense has been introduced. State v. Williams, 122-115.

Evidence: Where it appeared that the homicide had been committed by means of a blow with a singletree taken from a wagon, held that it was not improper to show the ownership of the wagon from which the singletree had been taken. State v. Walker, 133-489.

Where the question was as to whether the bullet causing death was fired by defendant or by the deceased with suicidal intent, held that evidence of experiments with regard to powder marks left by the firing of similar weapons at close range was admissible. State v. Nowells, 109 N. W. 1016.

In a prosecution for murder by poison, held that evidence of the purchase of "Rough on Rats" by defendant was not admissible, in the absence of a showing by analysis or other satisfactory proof that it was a poison. State v. Blydenburg, 112 N. W. 634.

In a prosecution of a husband for the murder of his wife, evidence of belief on his part that policies of insurance on the life of his wife in his favor were in force was held to be competent as tending to show a motive. State v. Woodard, 132-675.

Testimony as to prior difficulties between the accused and the deceased is admissible to show their relations. State v. Fielding, 112 N. W. 539.

Evidence and instructions in a particular case considered. State v. Wright, 112-436. Corpus delicti: Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to establish corpus delicti in a prosecution for murder. State v. Novak, 109-717.

As to whether in a particular case the court instructed the jury as to the effect of the exculpatory matter included in a confession of the defendant and tending to show that the offense was manslaughter rather than murder, the judges were divided. State v. Busse, 127-318.

SEC. 4728. First degree.

Indictment: Where the killing is charged to have been wilful, deliberate and premeditated, it is not essential that the indictment charge the assault to have been wilful. State v. Dunn, 116-219; State v. Gray, 116-231.

There is but one crime designated by the statute as murder. The so-called degrees do not constitute distinct crimes, but gradations of the same crime. When therefore the indictment formally charges the defendant with the crime of murder generally, the requirements of the statute in this respect are met, and the court will look to the facts set forth in the body of the indictment to ascertain the degree of the crime for which the accused may be placed on trial. State v. Phillips, 118-660.

An indictment which charges the inflicting of wounds by defendant upon deceased, with the specific intent to kill, and also death resulting from such wounds, and further charges that the wounds were inflicted deliberately, premeditatedly, with such intent and with malice, sufficiently charges the first degree of the offense. Ibid.

It is not improper to charge the assault as having been made with a deadly weapon, the particular description of which is to the grand jury unknown, although the weapon with which it is claimed the crime was committed was before the grand jury and also introduced in evidence on the trial. State v. Sigler, 114-408.

Where defendant is convicted of murder in the second degree, error in the instructions as to the first degree of the crime with which he was charged are immaterial. State v. Rogers, 129-229.

Indictment for murder in the first degree held sufficient. State v. Wood, 112-411.

An indictment charging that defendant committed an assault with a deadly weapon upon the deceased, and with specific intent to kill and murder the deceased, wilfully, feloniously, deliberately, premeditatedly and with malice aforethought did shoot off and discharge, etc., thereby wilfully, etc., inflicting upon the body of the deceased a mortal wound, etc., is sufficient. State v. McPherson, 114-492.

Premeditation: No particular length of time of premeditation or deliberation is required, and an instruction that if "either at some time before or in the moment or instant of time immediately before" the fatal shot was fired the defendant had formed in his mind a wilful, deliberate and premeditated design or purpose of his malice aforethought to take the life of the deceased, held not to be erroneous. Ibid.

Premeditation and deliberation need not exist for any particular length of time before the killing. It is sufficient if there is such deliberation and premeditation immediately before the fatal injury is inflicted, though it may have existed but for an instant of time. State v. Fuller, 125-212.

Death resulting from an assault made with a premeditated purpose and with deadly weapons, may constitute murder in the first degree. State v. Dennis, 119-688.

Murder may be of the first degree, although the homicide is committed in a sudden encounter, if it appears that the defendant wilfully, deliberately and premeditatedly took advantage of the quarrel for the purpose of killing or inflicting great bodily injury on the deceased, not in self-defense or heat of blood, but with malice aforethought. State v. Sale, 119-1.

Proof of intentional homicide, without circumstances of mitigation or excuse, affords a presumption of malice, and therefore of murder, but such presumption is of murder in the second degree, and to sustain a conviction in the first degree there should be evidence of wilfulness, deliberation and premeditation, or some other fact such as to constitute murder in the first degree. State v. Phillips, 118-660.

Poison: A homicide committed by the administration of poison cannot be murder in the second degree or manslaughter, and therefore specific intent to kill is not an essential allegation in the indictment. State v. Robinson, 126-69.

An indictment for murder by means of felonious administration of poison need not specifically allege malice aforethought or intent to kill. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

All murder perpetrated by means of poison is in the first degree without regard to any specific intent to kill. Therefore, in such a case there is no necessity of an instruction with reference to manslaughter as an included crime. State v. Burns, 124-207.

There can be no state of evidence that will warrant conviction for murder in the second degree where the defendant has committed the crime by means of poison. State v. Bertoch, 112-195.

Evidence in particular case, held sufficient to support a conviction for murder in the first degree by the administration of poison. State v. Robinson, 126-69.

Lying in wait: Lying in wait means hiding in ambush or concealment. State v. Tyler, 122-125.

It is not error in a prosecution for murder committed by lying in wait or other wilful, deliberate, or premeditated killing, to charge as to included crimes although the evidence shows that the defendant if guilty of any crime is guilty of the crime charged. State v. Shepherd, 129-705.

On plea of guilty: A large discretion is vested in the trial court in fixing the punishment on a plea of guilty of murder in the first degree and the sentence imposed under such circumstances will not be interfered with in the absence of a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Smith, 127-528.

While it is not provided how the determination by the court as to the punishment for murder in the first degree under a plea of guilty is to be made, it is proper in such cases for the court to take the evidence of witnesses who have knowledge of the occurrence, and until judgment is pronounced the plea of guilty may be withdrawn and a plea of not guilty interposed. State v. Hartman, 122-104.

Question for jury: Every one is presumed to have intended the natural consequences flowing from his own acts, and the guilt of defendant of any particular degree of murder or of manslaughter is to be determined by the jury, and not by the court, unless some of the essential elements of the act constituting the crime of a particular degree are not proven. State v. Wood, 112-411.

Evidence: The charge of murder in the first degree involves the condition of the defendant's mind at the time of killing, and evidence of intoxication should be considered in determining such condition, but the mere fact that the offender drank liquor shortly before committing the crime will not constitute such evidence of intoxication as to require the question of its effect upon the mental condition to be submitted to the jury. State v. Busse, 127-318.

Evidence that defendant went into an affray by previous agreement with another for the purpose of rendering assistance and stood by while the fatal blow was inflicted, held, to tend to show deliberation, premeditation and malice. State v. Jackson, 103-702.

The evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a verdict of murder in the first degree. State v. Lucas, 122-141.

SEC. 4729. Second degree.

To constitute murder in the second degree, no premeditation or deliberation is essential, and if, as the result of hatred and ill will, engendered by language of the deceased and his manifestation of hostility, and not as the result of heat of blood, the defendant formed even for a moment before the striking of the fatal blow an intention to kill or inflict great bodily injury, then the offense may constitute that degree of the crime. State v. Sale, 119-1.

One who is charged with a crime is nevertheless entitled to the protection of the law, and if, as a reasonable man, in view of the display of force against him, which he has reason to believe is made use of with the intention of inflicting personal violence rather than making an arrest, he resists such force and causes death he is not guilty of murder in the first degree. The crime will be murder in the second degree or manslaughter, according as malice may or may not be found to characterize this act. Even a legal arrest, attempted in such a violent and menacing whether with or without warrant, may be manner that, if death result to the officer in the heat of the struggle thus incited, the killing will not be murder in the first degree. State v. Phillips, 118-660.

Intent to kill is not essential to constitute murder in the second degree. State v. Seery, 129-259.

Specific intent to kill is not essential at common law to constitute murder, nor is it essential under the statute to constitute murder in the second degree. An unlawful killing, with malice, express or implied, is murder in the second degree, even though unaccompanied by a specific intent to kill. State v. Baldes, 133-158.

An indictment for murder, in which it is alleged that defendant with a deadly weapon wilfully, deliberately and feloniously and of his malice aforethought, inflicted upon the deceased a mortal wound of which he then and there died, states all the elements necessary to constitute murder in the second degree. State v. Whitnah, 129-211.

Where, in a prosecution for murder, it clearly appears that death was due to an attempt to procure an abortion, evidence of an unsuccessful attempt on the part of the female to get drugs for the same purpose, is not admissible. State v. Gunn, 106-120.

SEC. 4746. Proceedings on affirmance.

When a sentence of death imposed in the trial court in a criminal case is affirmed by the supreme court, by an announcement in proper form of an equal division under Code § 195, the governor is authorized to issue a warrant of execution if the time fixed by the trial court has expired. Busse v. Barr, 132-463.

SEC. 4750-a. Advise, counsel, encourage, advocate or incite murder—penalty. Whoever shall within this state advise, counsel, encourage, advocate or incite the unlawful killing within or without the state of any human being where no such killing takes place shall be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary for not more than twenty years. [29 G. A., ch. 143, § 1.]

SEC. 4750-b. Kidnapping for ransom—penalty. That whoever kidnaps, takes or carries away any person, or decoys or entices such person away from any place in this state for the purpose of or with the intention of receiving or securing from any one any money, property or thing of value as a ransom, reward or price for the return of the person so kidnapped, taken, carried, decoyed or enticed away, as aforesaid, or whoever shall imprison, detain or hold any person at any place in this state for the purpose or with the intent of receiving or securing from any one money, property or thing of value as a ransom, reward or price for the return, liberation or surrender of the person so imprisoned, detained or held, shall be deemed to be guilty of the crime of kidnapping for the purpose of ransom, and upon conviction thereof shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary during life, or for any fixed term of years not less than ten years. [29 G. A., ch. 142, § 1.]

One who detains another in order to extort money from him or from another person as the price of liberation, is guilty of the offense of kidnapping, and the subsequent release without the payment of money is immaterial. State v. Leuth, 128-189.

SEC. 4750-c. Other statutes not affected. This act shall not be held or deemed to repeal or affect in any manner sections four thousand seven hundred and sixty (4760), four thousand seven hundred and sixty-one (4761) and four thousand seven hundred and sixty-five (4765) of the code. [29 G. A., ch. 142, § 2.]

SEC. 4751. Manslaughter.

Manslaughter is the killing of another without malice either express or implied, either unlawfully upon a sudden quarrel or unintentionally while the slayer is in the unlawful commission of some act not amounting to a felony. State v. Walker, 133-489.

Neither motive or intent is necessarily an element of the crime of manslaughter, and where it appeared that defendant had gone into an affray for the purpose of assisting another, held, sufficient to show defendant's guilt. State v. Jackson, 103-702.

Homicide includes manslaughter: It means a killing of one man by another, whether lawful or unlawful. Tomlinson v. Monroe County, 112 N. W. 100.

The mere presence of passion or heat of blood will not in itself reduce a homicide to manslaughter, unless such passion or heat of blood is upon reasonable provocation. State v. Hunter, 118-686.

There may be a conviction for manslaughter in causing the death of another through gross negligence and recklessness under an indictment for murder which does not contain any specific allegations with reference to negligence or recklessness. State v. Moore, 129-514.

Express intent is not a necessary element in the crime of manslaughter. Negligence and reckless indifference to the lives and safety of others will supply the intent. Every sane person is presumed to intend the natural and necessary consequences of his voluntary act. Ibid.

Under evidence in a prosecution for murder, tending to show that defendant negligently and recklessly rode down the deceased in the street, an ordinance of the city limiting the speed at which persons might ride or drive upon the streets of the city was held properly admissible in

SEC. 4753. Robbery.

Robbery is larceny committed by violence from the person of one put in fear and the ownership of the property taken must be alleged and proven as in larceny. State v. Wasson, 126-320.

To warrant a conviction for robbery it should appear that an assault was committed, and that such assault was made with the intent to violently and feloniously and by putting in fear steal from the person of the prosecuting witness. It is not necessary to specifically define what is intended by the word assault. State v. Atkins, 122-161.

SEC. 4754. With aggravation.

The circumstances of aggravation which by statute warrant the imposition of more

SEC. 4756. Rape.

What constitutes: Under a charge of rape in the usual form, evidence is admissible to show that the prosecutrix was feeble-minded. Such evidence bears upon the question of consent and it is not necessary that the indictment be framed under the special provisions of Code § 4758 with reference to the crime as committed against a person of feeble mind. State v. McDonough, 104-6.

If there is no evidence of penetration the issue as to whether defendant is guilty of rape ought not to be submitted to the jury, but evidence that in case of a girl of tender years the defendant did his utmost to accomplish his purpose, together with evidence concerning injury to the victim, may be sufficient to warrant a submission of the issue to the jury. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

The statute has eliminated the necessity of proving emission in prosecutions for rape, and it is accordingly held that proof of emission is not essential in a prosecution for sodomy or for incest. State v. Judd, 132-296.

The crime of forcible defilement differs from the crime of rape in that in the evidence as a fact or circumstances to be considered in determining whether the defendant acted negligently. Ibid.

The fact that the defendant was a nervous, timid man, does not tend to show that he was not guilty of manslaughter in taking the life of the person killed without reason to believe that there was a necessity for self-defense. State v. Usher, 111 N. W. 811.

One may be guilty as accessory before the fact of the crime of manslaughter. State v. Gray, 116-231.

An instruction defining this offense as "larceny of property from the person of the owner, accompanied by violence or putting in fear," is not erroneous. State v. Osborne, 116-479.

Where there is evidence tending to show an assault with intent to rob, the jury should be instructed in relation to such included crime. State v. Duffy, 124-705.

A sentence of seventeen years in the penitentiary held not excessive in view of proof of the crime under aggravating circumstances. State v. Brafford, 121-115.

severe punishment need not be stated in the indictment. State v. Poe, 123-118.

former any defilement of the person is sufficient. State v. Hromadko, 123-665.

Age of consent: Proof of consent is immaterial where the unlawful connection is had with a female under the age of consent. State v. Buller, 104-1.

Inasmuch as connection with a female child under the age of consent is here made to constitute the crime of rape, regardless of any consent on the part of the child, the attempt to have such connection will constitute an assault with intent to commit rape, even though there was no resistance whatever and the defendant expected to accomplish his purpose without opposition. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

A female under the age of consent as fixed by statute cannot consent to sexual intercourse nor can she assent to an assault for that purpose. State v. Sherman, 106-684.

Carnal knowledge of a female child under the age of fifteen years constitutes rape. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

The indictment may charge in one count carnal knowledge of a female child under the age of consent, and in another count carnal knowledge of the same female as an idiot or imbecile within the provision of Code § 4758, without being open to the objection of duplicity, and as the two counts relate to the same transaction the state cannot be required at the beginning of the trial to elect upon which count it will proceed. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

In a prosecution for rape committed by having intercourse with a female under the age of consent, it is not necessary to instruct the jury that defendant cannot be convicted unless the jury is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that he intended to have intercourse with the prosecutrix notwithstanding any and all the resistance she might make. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

In a prosecution for rape, committed by having connection with a female under the age of consent, there being no evidence that the act was without the consent of the female, it is not necessary to instruct as to another included crime than that of assault with intent to commit rape. State v. King, 117-484.

In such a prosecution, evidence as to the condition of the hymen of the female six weeks after the alleged offense is not inadmissible, remoteness of time being for the consideration of the jury in determining the value of the testimony. Ibid.

In such a prosecution proof of other similar acts committed between the parties is admissible. But the prosecution should be required to elect for which act conviction is sought. Ibid.

Under an indictment charging rape on a female under the age of consent "by force and against her will" there can not be a conviction for assault and battery. State v. Sheets, 127-73.

Nor under such an indictment could there be a conviction for an assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury where there is no evidence of any intent to commit other injury than that involved in rape. Ibid.

If the absence of evidence of force in the perpetration of the crime of rape on a female under the age of consent, save as incident to the act charged, it is not error to fail to state as to assault and battery. State v. Stevens, 133-684.

In an indictment for rape committed by having carnal knowledge of a female under the age of consent allegations of force are mere matters of aggravation and are to be treated as surplusage. State v. Scroggs, 123-649.

Although the indictment charges the act to have been committed with force and arms the defendant may be convicted of the crime of having connection with a female under the age of consent without resistance. State v. Anderson, 125-501.

Under an indictment charging assault "by force and against her will" on a female child under the age of consent there may be conviction without proof that the act was against the consent of the prosecutrix. State v. Sheets, 127-73.

Where the charge of carnally knowing a female under the age of consent, evidence tending to show want of resistance or previous intercourse with others is wholly immaterial. State v. Bricker, 112 N. W. 645.

In a prosecution for rape in having carnal connection with a female under age of consent, the prosecutrix is a competent witness as to her own age. State v. Scrogg, 123-649.

Election: Where the relations of the parties are so intimate and continuous that the crime cannot be fixed upon as happening at any one time, rather than at another, during such relationship, the state cannot be required to elect further than is necessary to identify the transaction as distinct from others. But where there are separate and distinct periods during any one of which the crime might have been committed, an election should be required. Each act of connection constitutes an independent and distinct offense. State v. Norris, 122-154.

Included crime: One who is guilty of the crime of rape may be convicted under an indictment for incest if the relationship of the parties brings the case within the statutory provision as to the latter crime. State v. Rennick, 127-294.

Where there is evidence tending to show want of consent on the part of the female, the court should instruct with reference to assault with intent to commit rape, assault and battery and simple assault, these offenses being necessarily included within the charge of rape. State v. Trusty, 118-498.

Under an indictment charging an assault with force and violence upon a female with intent to ravish and carnally know her by force and against her will, it is not proper to instruct with reference to assault and battery as an included crime. State v. Miller, 124-429.

But where the defendant is convicted of assault with intent to commit rape an erroneous instruction as to assault and battery as an included crime will not be considered prejudicial. Ibid.

Where the indictment charges the act to have been committed with force and violence such as to constitute a battery, the jury should be instructed as to assault and battery as an included crime. State v. Egbert, 125-443.

In a prosecution for rape under an indictment charging acts which would constitute an assault and battery, it is error to fail to charge with reference to such an included offense, although the jury has been instructed with reference to an assault. State v. Barkley, 129-484.

It is not error to fail to instruct as to assault and battery as an included crime in that of rape, where the indictment does not allege more than a mere assault with intent, and the completion of the criminal act. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

Previous jeopardy: An acquittal under an indictment charging rape is a bar to a subsequent proceeding under an indictment charging incest with the same female in a transaction which might have been proven under the prosecution for rape although the state seeks to prove in the second prosecution a different transaction from that on which it relied in the first prosecution. State v. Price, 127-301.

Condonation: The crime of rape committed on a female child is condoned by a subsequent marriage between the parties, and after such marriage the wife is incompetent under the provisions of Code § 4606 to testify with reference thereto in the criminal prosecution of her husband. State v. McKay, 122-658.

Continuance: Pregnancy of the prosecuting witness is no ground for a continuance. State v. Carpenter, 124-5; 98 N. W. 775.

Instructions: It is not necessarily reversible error to refuse an instruction embodying the general statement that an accusation of the crime is easily made, hard to prove, and harder to be defended against by the party accused though ever so innocent. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

Evidence: Proof of guilt in a prosecution for rape necessarily includes guilt of the offense of assault with intent to commit rape, and a conviction for the latter will not be reversed on the ground that the evidence showed that if defendant was guilty of any offense he was guilty of the offense charged. Where the conviction depends principally upon the testimony of prosecutrix, the jury may be warranted in discrediting so much thereof as showed the complete commission of the offense, and yet in believing such portion as tended to show the commission of an assault. State v. Barkley, 129-484.

Where it appears by competent evidence that defendant, at the time of the alleged commission of the offense, was afflicted with a venereal disease, and that the prosecutrix was soon after afflicted with the same disease, it is proper to show, in behalf of defendant, that the prosecutrix had, before the time of the commission of the alleged crime, had sexual intercourse with others than the defendant, by whom the disease with which she was found to be afflicted might have been communicated to her. State v. Height, 117-650.

While a charge of rape is easily made by a designing person, and difficult to refute, and such a charge should be scanned with great care where the direct evidence of the alleged assault comes from the lips of the prosecutrix alone, yet, on the other hand, where the evidence corroborating that of the prosecutrix, the verdict of the jury will be sustained. State v. Snider, 119-15.

When the issue is as to criminal intimacy between persons of opposite sex, evidence of prior acts of indecent familiarity is competent as showing an antecedent probability. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

Admission of evidence of the relations existing between defendant and prosecutrix extending over several years is not error. State v. Norris, 127-683.

The prosecuting witness may testify as to other and prior assaults upon her by the defendant. State v. Carpenter, 124-5.

Previous conduct of defendant tending to show a lascivious disposition on his part toward the prosecutrix is admissible. State v. Crouch, 130-478.

Proof of other similar acts of defendant with reference to the complainant as tending to show the disposition and intent of the accused in the particular act with which he is charged, is admissible. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

The pregnancy of the prosecutrix being apparent at the time of the trial, defendant should be allowed to show that this condition was the result of intercourse with other men than the defendant, for the purpose of counteracting any sympathy with the prosecutrix which might otherwise be aroused for reason of her condition. State v. Bebb, 125-494.

Evidence in a particular case in a prosecution for rape held sufficient to show penetration. State v. Andrews, 130-609.

The evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction. State v. Carpenter, 124-5.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction of rape in having connection with a child eight years of age. State v. Steffens, 116-227.

Testimony for the defendant that by reason of a physical injury he was unable to have sexual intercourse, held not conclusive as to the commission of the offense charged. Carvik v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 131-415.

The probability of conception following the ravishment is a question for the jury and cannot be conclusively determined by the testimony of experts. State v. Carpenter, 124-5.

The rejection of expert evidence as to the possibility of having carnal connection under certain circumstances, held, to be error without prejudice where the conviction was only for assault with intent to commit rape. State v. Taylor, 103-22.

It is not competent for medical experts to testify that the crime of rape cannot be committed upon an ordinary mature female. Such evidence is in usurpation of the functions of the jury, and the matter inquired about is not the subject of expert evidence. State v. Peterson, 110-647.

It is for the jury to determine whether in view of the age and mental condition of the prosecutrix she offered that resistance to the assault which precluded the idea of consent. Ibid.

Where the prosecuting witness is reluctant to give testimony questions leading in character may properly be admitted. State v. Waters, 132-481.

Complaint: Complaints made at the time by the prosecutrix relating to her condition and not to the details of the assault may be shown. State v. Baker, 106-99.

The complaint of the injured female is not admissible solely because a part of the res gestae as a fact tending to corroborate the evidence of the witness. Lapse of time is not, therefore, the sole test in determining the admissibility of proof of such complaint, but the inference arising against the truth of the charge from silence is a matter for the consideration of the jury in determining the weight to be attached to it. State v. Peterson, 110-647.

It is permissible for the state to give in evidence complaints made by the prosecutrix to the effect that defendant assaulted or ravished her, and such testimony is not objectionable as constituting a narrative of facts. The exact particulars stated by her cannot be narrated, but the fact regarding which complaint is made may be stated. Ibid.

The education and mental ability of the prosecutrix, whose complaints are proven, may be shown, and she may be allowed to testify as to exhibiting the clothing she had on at the time of the ravishment, such clothing being produced at the trial and introduced in evidence. Ibid.

The jurors' attention may be directed to the fact that a failure of prosecutrix to make complaint is a circumstance tending to discredit her story. State v. Wolf, 112-458.

Complaint by the prosecutrix may be so long delayed as to rob it of credibility to such an extent that the court will be warranted in disregarding it, but as a rule the inference arising against the truth of a charge of this character from mere silence on the part of the female is not presumption of law, but a matter of fact for the consideration of the jury. State v. Snider, 119-15.

Failure to make complaint does not render the testimony of prosecutrix inadmissible, but is a circumstance for the jury to consider as affecting the credit to be given to it. State v. Wolf, 118-564.

If the injured female does not testify, by reason of death, imbecility, or some other cause, the fact of complaint or want of complaint cannot be shown. Such fact does not constitute a defense to the prosecution, nor tend to rebut the hypothesis of guilt. Ibid.

While fear of threatened violence, and want of suitable opportunity, may be shown as excuses to the prosecutrix for failing to make complaint as to the outrage, and should go to the jury as affecting the credibility of the testimony of prosecutrix, yet the courts have uniformly recognized delay without a reasonable excuse as a circumstance to which the jury should give great weight and serious consideration. Ibid.

Absence of complaint on the part of the female is not conclusive as against her evidence of the commission of the injury. But the jury may consider that fact with the other facts and circumstances surrounding and connected with the transaction, including the age and general experience of the female complainant. Garvik v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 131-415.

Failure of the prosecutrix to make complaint affects only the credibility of her testimony and circumstances of excuse may be shown to the jury as negating any inference to be drawn from want of complaint. State v. Icenbice, 126-16.

While a detailing of the occurrence by the prosecutrix is not admissible, her statement as to the fact of intercourse may be shown. State v. Barkley, 129-484.

The fact of complaint may be shown and the prosecutrix may testify as to recognition of the defendant as the person committing the crime, but the unsworn statement of the prosecutrix is not competent evidence. State v. Hoover, 111 N. W. 323.

It is not proper to show all the details of the complaint of prosecutrix unless constituting a part of the res gestae; but it is proper to show that she named the party and enough of her complaint may be detailed to show of what act she complained. Where the prosecutrix is a very young child, the rule excluding details of the evidence is not applied with the same strictness as where she is an adult, or has reached such an age as to have an understanding of the nature of the act. State v. Andrews, 130-609.

The rule admitting complaints of prosecutrix in a prosecution for rape has no application in a bastardy proceeding. State v. Lowell, 123-427.

The declaration of the prosecutrix not made as a part of the res gestae with reference to the identity of the defendant when brought before her for identification and not in his presence cannot be shown. The complaints of the prosecutrix may constitute a corroboration of her testimony that the crime has been committed but do not constitute the corroborating evidence required by statute. State v. Egbert, 125-443.

Character of prosecutrix: In prosecutions for rape the character of the prosecutrix must be proved by evidence of general reputation; particular acts or specific facts are not admissible. State v. McDonough, 104-6.

Limitation of action: It is necessary that the state show affirmatively that the alleged offense was committed within eighteen months, which is the statutory period for commencing prosecution for this offense. State v. Kunhi, 119-461.

And held that evidence showing that at a certain time the defendant and the complaining witness were both suffering from a venereal disease, there being no evidence as to how long such condition may have existed, were not sufficient to show that the crime was committed within the statutory period prior to the finding of the indictment. Ibid.

Punishment: In a particular case held

SEC. 4757. Compelling to marry or be defiled.

In forcible defilement there must be the same kind of taking as in abduction and the actual defilement is substituted for the intent to do wrong required in abduction. State v. Hromadko, 123-665.

that a sentence of twenty-five years' imprisonment was excessive, and the sentence was reduced to eight years. State v. Peterson, 110-647.

The crime of having criminal connection with a girl under the age of consent committed by a man of mature years is one of peculiar depravity, and a severe sentence will not be interfered with on appeal. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

In a prosecution for rape, committed on a female under the age of consent, held that in view of the evidence tending to show the actual consent of the prosecutrix, who was of about the same age as the defendant, the sentence to fifteen years imprisonment in the penitentiary was excessive. State v. Spears, 130-294.

The indictment must allege the taking of the person of the female to have been unlawful and against her will. Ibid.

As to corroboration, see Code § 5488 and notes.

SEC. 4758. Carnal knowledge of imbecile or insensible female.

It is not necessary, where carnal connection with an imbecile or idiot is charged, to allege force and violence, and such an allegation may be treated as surplusage. State v. Austin, 109-118.

An allegation in the indictment that the female was of such imbecility of mind as to prevent actual resistance renders the charge of rape one within the provisions of the section relating to carnal knowledge of a female of imbecile mind, and does not constitute a charge of the crime of having carnal knowledge of a female under the age of consent. State v. Crouch, 130-478.

It is proper in such an indictment to allege an assault, and the implied allegation of force will be treated as surplusage. Ibid.

Although imbecility of the prosecutrix is thus alleged, she is not thereby disqualified as a witness; but her qualification is to be tested by the court in the usual manner, and the discretion of the court in receiving her testimony is subject to review only in case of gross abuse. Ibid.

Having carnal connection with a female who is an idiot or imbecile constitutes rape, although no resistance is shown. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

SEC. 4759. Attempt to produce miscarriage.

In a prosecution for murder in causing the death of a female in an attempt to procure an abortion, evidence that the female herself unsuccessfully attempted to procure a drug for that purpose, is not admissible. State v. Gunn, 106-120.

It is not necessary in an indictment for administering a drug to a pregnant woman with intent to produce miscarriage to set out the manner of administering the drug, nor the form in which the drug is administered. State v. Moothart, 109-130.

One may be guilty of administering a drug where he causes or procures the pregnant woman herself to take the drug with a wrongful intent. Ibid.

Letters of the accused to the woman may be competent as tending to show the relation of the parties as bearing upon the intent with which the defendant acted, and for that purpose letters written after the attempt may be admissible. Ibid.

The production of a miscarriage is not essential to the crime, and there may be a conviction on evidence of the administering of the drug with a wrongful intent, although the quantity administered was not such as would produce the intended effect. Ibid.

The indictment should negative the statutory exception of cases where a miscarriage is necessary to save the life of the woman. State v. Aiken, 109-643.

Accordingly, the burden of proving that the case is not within the exception is upon the state, and there should not be a conviction unless the jury are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the miscarriage produced by defendant was not necessary to save the woman's life. Ibid.

The woman upon whom the act of abortion is perpetrated is not guilty of the crime, although it is perpetrated by her consent or procurement. But the victim may be a party to the conspiracy with intent to perpetrate the offense, and as a conspirator her declarations may be admissible in evidence against one charged with the crime. State v. Crofford, 133-478.

Evidence held sufficient to support a conviction under this section. State v. Lee, 113-348.

SEC. 4762. Seduction.

What constitutes: Where by reason of former friendship and caresses, flattery and false assurances, the defendant induced the prosecutrix, a girl of seventeen years of age, to submit, held, that there were sufficient seductive arts to sustain a conviction. State v. Hayes, 105-82.

To induce intercourse by a promise to marry the prosecutrix if anything goes wrong may constitute seduction. Whether a woman of chaste character would yield her person under such circumstances and whether the act in question was voluntary and to gratify desire rather than because of such conditional promise, may be considered in connection with all the facts and circumstances shown upon the trial, but it cannot be considered as a matter of law that an unsophisticated country girl of seventeen years, when addressed by a young man five or six years her senior, would necessarily be of previous unchastity in yielding on the strength of such a promise or that she submitted as the result of passion rather than the false promise of the accused. State v. Hughes, 106-125.

Deception is an essential element of the crime. It consists in inducing, by any kind of deception, an unmarried woman of chaste character to part with her virtue and yield to the embraces of the deceiver. If she submits without being in some way deceived into doing so there is no seduction. Proofs of promise and inducement are competent for the purpose of determining whether there was deception, but if they were not false they could not deceive, and could not constitute seduction. It is therefore error to instruct the jury that if complainant yielded her person by reason of some promise or inducement, held out to her by the defendant, or an account of defendant's visits and attentions, the defendant may be convicted. State v. Hamann, 109-646.

In a particular case held that an instruction was erroneous in directing the jurors that the kind and character of the arts, promises and deception were of secondary importance, and that the manner in which the ruin of the prosecutrix was accomplished was of no importance. In such case the vital question of defendant's guilt depends upon the circumstances under which the prosecutrix yielded her person to him, and it is of equal importance that the promises relied upon be shown to have been false and therefore deceptive. State v. Coffman, 112-8.

A false promise of marriage constitutes a seductive artifice. State v. Stolley, 121-111.

Promise of marriage constitutes sufficient fraud and artifice to support a conviction for the offense where it appears that the prosecuting witness yielded in reliance thereon. State v. Mulholland, 115-170.

The seductive arts may consist of the exercise of hypnotic influence of flattery. State v. Donovan, 128-44.

The mere fact that the seducer was known to the prosecutrix at the time of the seduction to be a married man will not necessarily negative the crime. Ibid.

Indictment for seducing "one Mary Roll, an unmarried person," etc., held sufficiently charged the seduction of an unmarried woman. State v. Olson, 108-667.

In an indictment defining seduction held that the inadvertent use of "artificial" for "artifice" was not such a mistake as to constitute prejudicial error. State v. Hamann, 113-367.

Prosecution: It is immaterial whether the prosecution for seduction is instituted by the female or by her father, although she may be past majority; and though the prosecution is by the father, it is not prejudicial error to refer in the instructions to the female herself as the prosecuting witness. State v. Stolley, 121-111.

Evidence: It appearing that about the time of the alleged seduction prosecutrix was receiving attention from another man, held, that the court properly limited the evidence of the relations of prosecutrix to such other person to the time preceding and contemporaneous with the alleged seduction and excluded evidence of subsequent relations. State v. Abeggan, 103-50.

It is error to permit a witness to state over defendant's objection that the neighbors and others said that they had heard that the prosecutrix was engaged to marry the defendant. State v. Reilly, 104-13.

Prosecutrix may properly testify as to giving birth to a child as the result of the intercourse with the defendant. State v. Nugent, 111 N. W. 927.

Evidence is admissible of subsequent intercourse between the parties as corroborative of the testimony of the prosecutrix as to the first act. Ibid.

As involved in a continuous relationship, there can be but one seduction, no matter how frequently intercourse takes place after the commission of the first act. Therefore, where there is evidence of different acts constituting a continuous relationship, it is not necessary that the state be required to elect on which act it will rely. Ibid.

It is not improper to allow the prosecuting witness to testify that at the time of the alleged seduction she entertained an affection for the accused, and was willing to become his wife. State v. Burns, 119-663.

Evidence of statements made by the prosecuting witness inconsistent with her testimony as a witness are admissible not merely for impeaching purposes, but as affirmative evidence for the defendant. State v. Dolan, 132-196.

Evidence tending to show that defendant led the prosecutrix to believe that he desired and intended to marry her, and by such methods induced her to yield to his desire, is sufficient to show the seductive arts required. State v. Drake, 128-539.

Evidence in a particular case, held, not sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty of the crime of seduction. State v. Thomas, 103-748.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction for seduction. State v. Olson, 108-667.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to show that intercourse was secured by a promise of marriage. State v. Wycoff, 113-670.

Character of prosecutrix: If the prosecutrix testifies as a witness, her general moral character at the time of the trial may be shown for the purpose of impeachment, but the proof should not extend to a specific vice. State v. Haupt, 126-152.

Previous chastity: Proof of grossly indecent remarks made in the presence of prosecutrix by other men than defendant held competent, coupled with evidence as to whether such remarks caused indignation on her part, or otherwise, as bearing on the question of her previously chaste character. State v. Bige, 112-433.

Evidence is admissible tending to prove that the prosecutrix had before her alleged seduction uniformly associated with men of bad character. Ibid.

A statement by a witness not an expert, and made by way of conclusions from facts stated by her is not admissible to show that the prosecutrix was already with child at the time of the alleged seduction. State v. Reinheimer, 109-624.

Evidence of the general reputation of the prosecutrix as to chastity is not admissible in behalf of the defendant. Ibid.

But after defendant has introduced evidence tending to show the unchastity of prosecutrix, the state may sustain her character by proof of her general reputation in the community in which she lived. Ibid.

Intimacy of the prosecuting witness with other men than the defendant prior to and at about the time she claims to have been seduced by the defendant is to be considered not only with reference to the paternity of the child which is claimed to have been the result of the connection with defendant, but also as bearing upon the previous chastity of the prosecutrix. State v. Dolan, 132-196.

Unchaste conduct after the time of the alleged seduction cannot be considered. State v. Wycoff, 113-670.

The fact that the woman under promise of marriage has submitted to improper liberties on the part of defendant before the accomplishment of her seduction does not show unchastity such as to defeat the prosecution. State v. Stolley, 121-111.

A question of chastity is one of fact. The fact that prosecuting witness consented to sexual intercourse with the defendant upon his request does not necessarily show want of chastity if there had previously been between them a prospective arrangement for marriage. State v. Smith, 124-334.

The general good reputation of the prosecutrix as being a moral person cannot be shown in rebuttal of evidence tending to show specific acts of unchastity. The reputation for morality which may thus be shown is a reputation for morality in the sexual relations. State v. Hummer, 128-505.

It is error to instruct that no particular amount or degree of lascivious and indecent conduct or conversation can be considered as conclusively showing unchastity. Lascivious conduct is not, like indecency of behavior, a matter of education and refinement. Unchaste character may exist without actual unchastity. It consists of impurity of mind with reference to the sexual relations. Ibid.

It is for the jury to pass upon the credibility of witnesses who testify that they had connection with the defendant before the alleged seduction, where they are contradicted by the prosecutrix. State v. Drake, 128-539.

It is within the discretion of the court to determine how far the prosecution may go in asking leading questions of the prosecuting witness. State v. Drake, 128-539.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to support a conviction for seduction, such evidence relating to the previous chastity of the prosecutrix. State v. Maxwell, 117-482.

SEC. 4764. Desertion after seduction and marriage.

This section is not unconstitutional because of want of uniformity in its application. Morris v. Stout, 110-659.

In a prosecution of a husband for deserting his wife to whom he has been married for the purpose of escaping a prosecution for seduction, held that evidence relied upon to show adultery of the wife was not sufficient to require the reversal of a conviction for such desertion. State v. Wagner, 123-271.

SEC. 4766. Exposing child.

One to whom the custody of a child is entrusted by the parent for the purpose of having it abandoned, is guilty of the crime of abandonment, although the act was under the direction and with the cooperation of the parent. State v. Sparegrove, 112 N. W. 83.

SEC. 4767. Malicious threats to extort.

This section is not limited to a case where the person accused is innocent of the crime with which he is threatened to be accused. It is the malicious threat to accuse with intent to extort money, etc., which is made criminal and the guilt or innocence of the crime specified in the threat is wholly immaterial. State v. Debolt, 104-105.

Proof of a specific intent in such case is necessary and such intent cannot be presumed from maliciously and feloniously threatening to accuse without just cause or excuse. Ibid.

An indictment for malicious threats with intent to extort by charging another with the commission of a crime is sufficient without alleging that the person so threatened was not guilty of the crime threatened to be charged. Kennedy v. Roberts, 105-521.

It is not necessary that the act which defendant sought to compel the prosecuting witness to commit by means of threats be an act which, if consummated, would be a crime. State v. Todd, 110-631.

This section has no application to a United States pension examiner charged with the duty of investigating fraudulent pension claims. In re Waite, 81 Fed., 359.

It is not a crime to threaten to accuse one with being a disorderly person for such a threat is not with reference to an accusation of a crime. State v. Dailey, 127-652.

SEC. 4768. Assault with intent to murder. If any person assault another with intent to commit murder, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding thirty years. [C., '73, § 3872; R., § 4214; C., '51, § 2591.] [30 G. A., ch. 129.]

To establish an assault with intent to murder, a specific intent to kill with malice aforethought must be shown. But it is enough to warrant a conviction that the evidence sustains a finding that the act done by the defendant was in contemplation of a result which might reasonably be expected to follow from the act done, involving the probable death of the person whom defendant intended to kill; and held that the sending of an infernal machine, addressed to himself at his wife's place of residence, with other circumstances indicating the expectation of defendant that his wife would open the box, with intent that she should thereby be killed, was sufficient, although, as an abstract proposition, the express company transporting the box would have no right to deliver it to the wife, and the wife would have no right to open it. State v. Hoot, 120-238.

The crime of assault with intent to commit murder may be charged in general terms. Malice aforethought need not be averred. Nor is it necessary to state the instrument or means used to effectuate the purpose. And, held, that an indictment charging the assault as made with a revolver by discharging it was sufficient without alleging that the revolver was loaded. State v. Shunka, 116-206.

Previous threat of violence may be shown as bearing on the intent of the defendant in making use of a weapon, but it is not competent to show that the others had advised the prosecutor not to allow the defendant to come to his house for fear of violence. State v. Thompson, 127-440.

A specific intent may be proved by circumstantial as well as by direct and positive evidence, and where it is shown that the defendant committed the assault charged which would be unlawful unless justified, a specific intent may be inferred or presumed from the unlawful act. State v. Bennett, 128-713.

But it is always competent to prove facts that tend to show lack of such intent, and intoxication may be shown for that purpose. Ibid.

A witness may testify as to how far the accused was affected by intoxication as bearing upon the question of his intent. State v. Cather, 121-106.

The effect of drunkenness as tending to negative criminal intent should be explained to the jury not only with reference to the intent to murder charged in the indictment, but also as to included offenses involving a specific intent. Ibid.

SEC. 4769. With intent to commit rape.

In determining whether an assault was made with intent to commit rape, the controlling question is whether the assailant intended to accomplish carnal intercourse by force notwithstanding any and all resistance the assaulted female might make. State v. Miller, 124-429.

Under a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape it is not error to fail to instruct as to assault and battery as an included crime, where the evidence would not justify a finding that an assault or battery was intended or committed. State v. Snider, 119-15.

To make out the offense of assault with intent to commit rape it must appear that defendant intended to use whatever amount of force was necessary to overcome resistance and accomplish the purpose. But the offense may be complete, even though the resistance is not overcome or the purpose accomplished. Ibid.

An assault with intent to have connection with a female child under the age of consent will constitute an assault with intent to commit rape, although no resistance whatever was made and defendant expected to accomplish his purpose without opposition. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

A female under the age of consent cannot consent to sexual intercourse; and as actual sexual intercourse with such female child constitutes rape, so the attempt to have such intercourse constitutes assault with intent to commit rape, regardless of the consent of the female. State v. Sherman, 106-684.

SEC. 4770. With intent to maim, rob, steal, etc.

In a prosecution for robbery the jury should be instructed as to the included crime of assault with intent to rob if there intoxication which has not progressed so far as to rob the assailant of his mental faculties and render him incapable of forming an intent is not a defense in a prosecution for assault with intent to kill. State v. Yates, 132-475.

The defendant pleading intoxication as a defense in such case has the burden of proof as to the issue. Ibid.

Where there is no evidence that the assault was not committed in self-defense, the court is not required to instruct on the subject. Ibid.

Where defendant was on trial for an assault with intent to commit rape by having connection with a girl under the age of consent, held that evidence of his conduct in the same transaction towards other girls was admissible against him. State v. Desmond, 109-72.

Unless the indictment charges that the assault was accompanied with force, it is not proper to instruct the jury with reference to assault and battery, as an offense included in that of assault with intent to commit rape. Ibid.

A written communication by the defendant before the commission of the assault with which he is charged, indicating his intent to have carnal connection with the prosecutrix is admissible as against him as bearing on his intent. State v. Sheets, 127-73.

Proof of impotency does not constitute a defense to a charge of assault with intent to commit rape. State v. Bartlett, 127-689.

Where the conviction is of assault as an included crime under a charge of assault with intent to commit rape, errors as to the admission of evidence and instructions with regard to the necessary corroboration will be immaterial as no corroboration in regard to the crime of assault is essential. State v. Hoover, 111 N. W. 323.

It is sufficient to charge that the defendant made an assault with intent, etc., without specifying the manner of such assault. State v. Johnson, 114-430.

is evidence tending to show an assault. State v. Duffy, 124-705.

SEC. 4771. With intent to inflict great bodily injury.

It is erroneous to charge that whoever assaults another with intent to inflict upon such person some injury of a more grave and serious character than an ordinary battery is guilty of an assault with intent to inflict a great bodily injury, for such charge overlooks a material ingredient of the offense, to-wit: the unlawfulness of the assault. State v. Shea, 104-724.

A threat accompanied by words declaring an intent to do bodily injury which is not carried out although there is no obstale to the execution of the threat is not conclusive as to the intent, although sufficient to support the finding of such intent. Thus a threat to kill by means of a revolver held in the hand constitutes an assertion that the revolver is loaded sufficient to justify finding to that effect. Myers v. Clearman, 125-461.

Under an indictment charging assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury, a verdict finding the defendant guilty of assault with intent to do great bodily injury or with intent to commit great bodily injury is sufficient. State v. Leuhrman, 123-476.

An indictment alleging that defendant "did unlawfully, wilfully, maliciously and with specific intent, then and there to inflict great bodily injury, make an assault upon one L. C., and did then and there, with specific intent to inflict a great bodily injury, strike, beat, bruise, and otherwise maltreat the said L. C." is sufficient. State v. Cummings, 128-522.

Under an indictment charging rape on a female under the age of consent, committed by force and against her will in the absence of evidence any intent to do violence other than to accomplish the rape, the court should not instruct as to assault with intent to do great bodily harm as an included crime. State v. Sheets, 127-73.

Evidence in a particular case considered with reference to the charge of this offense. State v. Bysong, 112-419.

SEC. 4772. With intent to commit any felony.

The indictment must specify the felony with intent to commit which the assault is made, and the court in its instructions to the jury should require the verdict to specify the specific offense of which the defendant is charged. State v. Austin, 109-118.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction of assault with intent to commit manslaughter. State v. Schwab, 112-666.

SEC. 4774. Assault and battery.

A mere threat does not constitute an assault, although it is coupled with the means, ability and intent to immediately inflict the threatened violence. State v. Cummings, 128-522.

To constitute a criminal assault there must be some evidence of an attempt or endeavor to do violence to the person. Haupt v. Swenson, 125-694.

Verbal abuse and insult constitute no defense to a charge of assault, but may properly be shown to the court for its consideration in mitigation of punishment. State v. Leuhrman, 123-476.

To render an assault followed by a blow more than assault and battery, the intent to inflict great bodily injury must be shown. Myers v. Clearman, 125-461.

One who is assaulted is not necessarily bound to retreat even though there be time and opportunity to do so. He may in self protection repel force with force. The extent to which he may go is to be measured by the character of the assault. State v. Evenson, 122-88.

It is not prejudicial error to submit to the jury assault and battery as an included crime even though there could be no conviction under the indictment for such included crime if the defendant is in fact convicted of the crime charged. State v. Sheets, 127-73.

SEC. 4775. Carrying concealed weapons.

A confession before a justice of the peace in a prosecution for carrying concealed weapons that defendant had such weapon, accompanied with matter of explanation which would negative the crime, does not constitute a judicial confession on which the defendant may be convicted on appeal without corroborating evidence. State v. Abrams, 131-479.

SEC. 4775-a. Desertion defined—penalty. Every person who shall, without good cause, wilfully neglect or refuse to maintain or provide for his wife, she being in a destitute condition, or who shall, without good cause, abandon his or her legitimate or legally adopted child or children under the age of sixteen years, leaving such child or children in a destitute condition, or shall, without good cause, wilfully neglect or refuse to provide for such child or children they being in a destitute condition, shall be deemed guilty of desertion and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for not more than one year, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than six months. [32 G. A., ch. 170, § 1.]

SEC. 4775-b. Husband or wife may be witness. In all prosecutions under this act, the husband or wife shall be a competent witness for the state and may testify to any relevant acts or communications between them, anything in previous statutes to the contrary notwithstanding, provided however that no husband or wife shall be called or compelled to testify against the other under this act except upon consent of such witness. [32 G. A., ch. 170, § 2.]

SEC. 4775-c. Bond given conditioned on support. If after arrest and before trial, or after conviction and before sentence, the party so arrested or convicted shall appear before the court in which the case is pending or the conviction had, and enter into a bond to the state of Iowa in a sum to be fixed by the court, which in no event shall exceed the sum of one thousand dollars, with or without sureties as may be determined by the court, conditioned that such husband will furnish said wife with a necessary and proper home, food, care and clothing, or that such parent will furnish his or her child or children with a necessary and proper home, food, care and clothing, then said court may release the defendant. Said bond shall remain in force so long as the court deems the same necessary; and whenever it shall appear to said court by affidavit or otherwise that such husband or parent is in good faith furnishing his wife, child or children with the necessary and proper home, food, care and clothing, the court may annul the said bond. [32 G. A., ch. 170, § 3.]

SEC. 4775-d. Failure of undertaking — trial — commitment — release. Upon failure of said husband or parent to comply with his undertaking he or she may be arrested by the sheriff or other officer upon a warrant issued from the court in which the case is pending or the conviction was had and the court may thereupon order a forfeiture of the undertaking and that the defendant to be tried or committed in execution of the sentence, or for good cause shown may release the defendant upon a new undertaking. [32 G. A., ch. 170, § 4.]

SEC 4775-e. Prima facie evidence of wilful desertion or neglect. Proof of the desertion of wife, child or children in destitute or necessitous circumstances or of neglect to furnish such wife, child or children necessary and proper food, clothing or shelter, shall be prima facie evidence that such desertion or neglect was wilful. [32 G. A., ch. 170, § 5.]

SEC. 4775-f. Repeal—acts in conflict. All acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed or amended, as the case may be, so as to make this act effective. [32 G. A., ch. 170, § 6.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST PROPERTY.

SECTION 4776. Burning inhabited dwelling in nighttime.

Where the burning of a building was established by direct evidence, held, that circumstantial evidence was sufficient to prove the corpus delicti, that is, that the building was feloniously set on fire. State v. Millmeier, 102-692.

If there is an actual ignition, and the fiber of the wood, or other destructible material of the house is charred and thus destroyed even in a small part, the crime is complete. State v. Spiegel, 111-701.

Malice is an essential element of the crime of arson. State v. Harvey, 130-394.

In a prosecution for arson in the burning of a building belonging to the defendant for the purpose of securing insurance thereon, the value of the building as compared with the amount of the insurance may be shown for the purpose of establishing the motive. Ibid.

In general a malicious act involves all that is usually understood by the term willful, and is further marked by either hatred or ill will toward the party injured, or by such other recklessness or disregard of the rights of others as indicates a corrupt or malevolent disposition. State v. Wilking, 129-72.

It is error to omit to charge that the act must have been committed with malice in order to warrant a conviction. Ibid.

SEC. 4780. Burning mills, locks, dams, depots, etc.

Indictment in a particular case, held, to show a crime under this section and not under the section following. State v. Spiegel, 111-701.

SEC. 4787. Burglary.

What constitutes: The opening of a closed door and entrance therein for the purpose of larceny is burglary. State v. Brower, 127-687.

Under an indictment charging the defendant with breaking and entering a building, proof of breaking and entering the cellar of a building is competent. State v. Brower, 127-687.

It is error, in defining the crime of breaking and entering in an instruction, to omit reference to the intent to commit a public offense as an essential element of the crime. State v. Williams, 120-36.

The statute makes one guilty of breaking and entering as a crime only where the act is done with intent to commit a public offense. Ibid.

The crime of larceny is not included in that of burglary, and an instruction submitting to the jury the question whether defendant charged with burglary was guilty of larceny may properly be refused. State v. Leonard, 112 N. W. 784.

Presumption: The presumption may be indulged that one who enters a building unbidden during the nighttime does so with the object of stealing, although he escapes without taking anything, and in a particular case held that such presumption was not conclusively rebutted by evidence that while in the building he attempted to take personal liberties with a female sleeping therein. State v. Worthen, 111-267.

Indictment: It is sufficient in an indictment for burglary to allege the breaking and entering "with the intent then and there to commit a public offense, to-wit: robbery." It is not necessary to set out in detail the elements of the crime charged to have been intended. State v. Watson, 102-651.

Ownership of property: Proof of occupancy is sufficient to establish an allegation of ownership in a prosecution for burglary. State v. Watson, 102-651.

It is not essential in an indictment for the offense of breaking and entering that the name of the real owner of the building be stated. It is sufficient to state the name of the person who is in possession. State v. Williams, 120-36.

Consent: One who knows that the crime of burglary is contemplated against him may remain silent and permit matters to go on for the purpose of apprehending the criminal without being held to have assented to the act. The fact that the agent of the owner has permitted a detective to take a cast of the key to the premises, from which the criminal has been able to manufacture key with which he enters will not constitute consent on the part of the owner such as to prevent a conviction of the wrongdoer. State v. Abley, 109-61.

Evidence: Under a charge of breaking and entering buildings with intent to commit larceny, evidence tending to show a conspiracy by the defendant and others to break and enter other buildings for that purpose is admissible. State v. Donovan, 125-239.

The evidence in a particular case held sufficient to show that persons who were arrested together within half an hour after the commission of the crime, having in their possession the tools with which the crime appeared to have been committed, were properly found to be joint conspirators so that the evidence of guilt on the part of one was competent as against another who was on trial. State v. Leonard, 112 N. W. 784.

Evidence to connect the defendant with a burglary as accomplice to the one who in fact was guilty of the breaking and entering, held sufficient in a particular case. State v. Arthur, 109 N. W. 1083.

Evidence in particular cases held sufficient to sustain conviction. State v. Ryan, 113-536; State v. Raphael, 123-452; State v. McPherson, 126-77.

Recent possession: Proof of recent possession of goods stolen from a building is not of itself prima facie evidence of guilt of breaking and entering the building to commit larceny. Such possession is competent evidence from which, in view of all the circumstances, the jury may find or infer guilt, but it does not in itself make a prima facie case for the state. State v. Brundige, 118-92.

Where there is evidence tending to show possession by defendant, soon after the commission of burglary, in which goods are stolen from the building, of the goods thus stolen, it is proper to instruct the jury that the fact of such possession, if unexplained, is sufficient to warrant the conclusion that the person having such possession is the person who broke and entered the building, unless the evidence showing such possession leaves a reasonable doubt whether the defendant may not have come into possession of the goods otherwise than by breaking and entering. State v. Swift, 120-8.

Nor is it necessarily erroneous to charge in that connection that such evidence is sufficient to warrant the conclusion that the person having such possession was the person who broke and entered the building, "unless the evidence showing such possession leaves a reasonable doubt whether such person may not have come honestly into such possession." although it would be better not to use the word "honestly" in such connection, as it might in some cases warrant the jury in disregarding the explanation of the recent possession, if it showed that the goods were dishonestly obtained, although otherwise than in connection with the breaking and entering. Ibid.

It is only when the breaking and entering, and the larceny alleged to have been committed in connection therewith, are committed at the same time and by the same person, that is, where the goods were stolen by means of the breaking and entering, that any effect is to be given to the recent possession of goods stolen from a building. State v. Williams, 120-36.

At most, proof of recent possession of goods stolen in connection with breaking and entering gives rise to a mere presumption of guilt, which, in the absence of explanation, will justify the jury in thinking that the one in possession of the property recently stolen by means of breaking and entering broke and entered the building. It is error to instruct in such way as to make the guilt of the defendant in such case depend on his explanation of such possession, and throw upon him the burden of establishing his innocence. Ibid.

Where it is shown that the burglary and the stealing of goods soon after found in the possession of defendant were a part of the same transaction, the finding of the goods in defendant's possession constitutes presumptive evidence of guilt of the burglary as well as of the larceny. State v. Brady, 121-561.

But it is error to charge that such circumstance gives rise to a presumption of guilt which must be overcome by the defendant to entitle him to an acquittal. Ibid.

It is error to instruct with reference to such presumptive evidence that defendant must show he obtained the goods "honestly and fairly" before he can be relieved from the inference of guilt attaching to such possession. Ibid.

Recent possession of stolen goods shown to have been taken in connection with the commission of burglary will support a conviction of the latter crime. The burden of explaining such possession is upon the defendant who was found in possession of the goods. State v. Raphael, 123-452.

Where it appears beyond reasonable doubt that the building in question was broken and entered by some one and that the theft of goods was accomplished at the time by means of breaking and entering, proof of recent possession unexplained is sufficient to warrant a conviction of the defendant of the crime of burglary. State v. Donovan, 125-239.

The recent possession of property procured by larceny from a building is competent evidence of guilt of the burglary. State v. Brower, 127-687.

The finding of property stolen in the commission of a burglary in a room at a hotel which was at the time exclusively in the possession of defendant constitutes presumptive evidence of the commission of the burglary by such defendant. State v. Hanley, 133-474.

SEC. 4790. Possession of burglar's tools. If any person be found having in his possession at any time any burglar's tools or implements, with intent to commit the crime of burglary, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than five years, or be fined not exceeding $500.00 and imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year. The court before whom such conviction is had shall order the retention by the sheriff of such tools or implements, to be used in evidence in any court in which such person is tried for the offense herein defined, or that of burglary, and the possession of such tools or implements shall be presumptive evidence of his intent to commit burglary. [15 G. A., ch. 13.] [29 G. A., ch. 144, § 1.]

The indictment must specifically describe the tools which the defendant is charged with being in possession of with intent to commit burglary. State v. Erdlen, 127-620.

SEC. 4791. Other breakings and enterings.

Where an indictment charging the breaking and entering a building in the nighttime, alleges the ownership of the building and the larceny of goods found therein, it is sufficient, without a more particular allegation that the building was one in which goods, merchandise or other valuable things were kept for use, sale or deposit, as specified by statute. State v. Burns, 109-436.

In such case evidence of actual possession, by the owner of the building, of the property stolen is sufficient proof of ownership. Ibid.

It is the building itself, and not any particular room thereof set apart to a special purpose the breaking and entering of which constitutes the crime. Ibid.

An indictment charging the breaking and entry of "the certain planing mill of" a person named, situated, etc., is sufficient to charge the breaking and entry of a building. The term "planing mill," without modification or qualification, would properly be understood to include a building and machinery therein used in doing the work of planing mills. The fact that the indictment charges that goods, wares and valuable things were kept in such planing mill, and that defendant did break and enter the mill, would tend to support this meaning of the term. State v. Haney, 110-26.

SEC. 4799-a. Burglary with explosives—penalty. If any person shall break and enter any building and commit any public offense therein by the use, or with the aid, of nitroglycerin, dynamite, giant powder, gunpowder, or any other explosive material, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than 15 years. [32 G. A., ch. 171.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF MALICIOUS MISCHIEF AND TRESPASS.

SECTION 4807. Repeal—to highways, bridges, railways, telegraph lines, etc. That section four thousand eight hundred and seven (4807) of the code, as the same appears in the code and the supplement to the code, be, and the same is, hereby repealed and re-enacted; and when re-enacted, the same shall read as follows:

"If any person maliciously injure, remove or destroy any electric railway or apparatus thereto belonging, or any bridge, rail or plank road; or place, or cause to be placed, any obstruction on any electric railway, or on any such bridge, rail or plank road; or wilfully obstruct or injure any public road or highway; or maliciously cut, burn, or in any way break down, injure or destroy any post or pole used in connection with any system of electric lighting, electric railway or telephone or telegraph system; or break down and destroy or injure and deface any electric light, telegraph or telephone instrument; or in any way cut, break or injure the wires of any apparatus thereto belonging; or shall wilfully tap, cut, injure, break, disconnect, connect, make any connection with or destroy any of the wires, mains, pipes, conduits, meters or other apparatus belonging to, or attached to, the power plant or distributing system of any electric light plant, electric motor, gas plant or water plant; or shall aid or abet any other person in so doing, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than five years, or be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court." [30 G. A., ch. 130.]

One who has made an excavation in the highway is liable for damage resulting from negligently allowing it to remain so that the highway is in an unsafe condition. Elzig v. Bales, 112 N. W. 540.

SEC. 4808. Obstructing or defacing roads. If any person, without authority or permission from the board of trustees, shall in any manner obstruct, deface or injure any public road by breaking up, plowing or digging within the boundary lines thereof, he shall be fined not less than five nor more than twenty-five dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not more than thirty days, at the discretion of the court. [15 G. A., ch. 17.] [29 G. A., ch. 53, § 16.]

SEC. 4810-a. Train robbery—penalty. That if any person shall stop, or attempt to stop any railway passenger train, with intent to rob any person thereon, or to rob any coach attached thereto, or to rob any mail-pouch, express safe, or box on such train; or shall wreck or attempt to wreck, derail, or attempt to derail, any such train, by any means whatever, with intent to commit such robbery; or shall obstruct or detain such train, or any locomotive, tender, coach, or car attached thereto, with such intent, or shall place upon any railway track, or under any engine, tender, coach, or car any explosive substance, with intent to obstruct, stop, detain, derail, or wreck such train, for the purpose of committing such robbery, or remove any spike, fish-plate, frog, rail, switch, tie, stringer, or appliance used on such railway with intent to obstruct, stop, detain, derail, or wreck such train for the purpose of committing such robbery; or shall enter any locomotive, tender, coach, or car attached to such train, and take or attempt to take possession thereof, for the purpose of committing such robbery; or shall rifle any coach, car, safe, box, or mail-pouch on such train; or shall with force and arms take and carry away any valuable thing whatever from such train, or from any person thereon; or shall intimidate, injure, wound, or maim any person thereon, with intent to commit such robbery, he shall, upon conviction thereof, be imprisoned in the penitentiary at hard labor, for life, or for any term not less than ten years. [28 G. A., ch. 127, § 1.]

SEC. 4811. Jumping off cars in motion.

One who is over fourteen years of age is presumed to be capable of caring for his own safety, and to be negligent in jumping off a train while in motion. Doggett v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 112 N. W. 171.

SEC. 4818. Injuries to beasts.

Under this section the act of exposing a poisonous substance with intent that the same be taken by a domestic animal must be charged to have been maliciously done. State v. Lightfoot, 107-344.

SEC. 4821. Hunting upon cultivated or inclosed land. Any person who shall hunt with dog or gun upon the cultivated or inclosed lands of another without first obtaining permission from the owner or occupant thereof, or his agent, shall for each offense be fined not more than ten dollars and costs of prosecution, and shall stand committed until such fine and costs are paid; but no prosecution shall be commenced under this section except upon the information of the owner or occupant of such cultivated or inclosed lands, or his agent. All islands in navigable streams bordering on the state shall be deemed enclosed lands without fences where the owners or lessees thereof post in plain view notices warning others not to trespass thereon. [25 G. A., ch. 64.] [31 G. A., ch. 160.]

SEC. 4822. Malicious injury to buildings and fixtures. If any person maliciously injure, deface or destroy any building or fixture attached thereto, or wilfully and maliciously destroy, injure or secrete any goods, chattels or valuable papers of another, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than five (5) years, or shall be imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year, or be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, and be liable to the party injured in a sum equal to three times the value of the property so destroyed or injured. [C., '73 § 3985; R., § 4326; C., '51, § 2686.] [31 G. A., ch. 161.]

The act must be shown to be wilful and malicious and the complaining party must appear to have suffered substantial damage. Freeman v. Strobehn, 122-157.

SEC. 4826. To fruit or ornamental trees.

In a prosecution for malicious mischief in which it was charged that defendant had taken up and carried away fruit trees from the premises of the prosecutor, it was held that the finding of trees planted on defendant's premises by him which had been thus taken from the premises of prosecutor was evidence of the commission of the crime charged, unless the explanation offered on behalf of the defendant created in the minds of the jury a reasonable doubt as to whether such trees had been wrongfully taken from prosecutor's premises; but held that the evidence as to the identity of the trees was not sufficient to sustain a conviction. State v. Roscum, 128-509.

While there must be proof that the act was maliciously done, it is not necessary to prove that defendant was actuated by specific ill will toward the owner. It is sufficient to prove that defendant intentionally injured or destroyed the property of such owner, without just cause or excuse. Ibid.

SEC. 4830-a. Injury to property—penalty. Any person who shall wilfully, maliciously or wantonly tear, deface, mutilate, injure or destroy in whole or in part, any newspaper, periodical, book, map, pamphlet, chart, picture or other property belonging to any public library or reading room, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not more than thirty days. [30 G. A., ch. 131.]

SEC. 4830-b. Injury or destruction of sidewalks—penalty. Any person guilty of wilfully and unlawfully injuring or destroying any sidewalk made of wood, brick, stone, cement, or any other material, shall be fined not more than one hundred (100) dollars or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [31 G. A., ch. 162.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF LARCENY AND RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS.

SECTION 4831. Larceny defined.

What constitutes: Larceny as defined by statute is like that of the common law, save in the increased number of articles made the subject of larceny. There is such difference between the crimes of larceny and embezzlement as that they cannot properly be charged in different counts of the same indictment. State v. Finnigan, 127-287.

Felonious taking: It is not error necessitating a reversal that the court does not in the instructions defining the offense make use of the word "felonious" as qualifying the intent with which the act is done. All the instructions are to be taken together and if the intent is elsewhere sufficiently described, the defendant cannot complain. State v. Minor, 106-642.

Ownership: An indictment which alleges ownership of the property in a corporation without alleging the fact of its incorporation will not be fatally defective. State v. Fogerty, 105-32.

The taking at one time of property belonging to different persons severally and not jointly constitutes but one offense of larceny. The fact that the indictment lays the ownership of the property in the owners jointly, instead of severally, will not be fatal. State v. Congrove, 109-66.

An indictment charging the larceny of goods as belonging to a store of a specified name may be supported by proof of ownership in the partnership conducting such store. State v. Bartlett, 128-518.

What property: One who as a trespasser goes upon the land of another and transfers bees from a tree growing thereon to a gum belonging to a third person acquires by his wrongful act no title in the bees, and a person who takes them from the premises on which they have been left by the trespasser is not guilty of larceny of the property of the trespasser. State v. Repp, 104-305.

The term "chattels," as here used to describe the property which is subject of larceny, includes a dog. Hamby v. Samson, 105-112.

Fence wire, attached to posts and forming a fence, is a part of the realty, and the unlawful taking thereof is not larceny. Murphy v. Olberding, 107-547.

Where one of two adjoining land owners took fence wire from posts with which it constituted a division fence, and attached it to other posts, where it served the same purpose, held that there was an absence of evidence of intent to convert such as is necessary to constitute larceny. Ibid.

Indictment: In an indictment for larceny of money, held sufficient to describe the property as "twenty-two dollars and fifty cents in lawful money of the United States of the value of twenty-two dollars and fifty cents." State v. Fisher, 106-658.

It is not necessary to allege the value of certain number of dollars of money which the defendant is charged with embezzling. State v. Alverson, 105-153.

It is proper in an indictment for embezzlement to describe the property converted as "certain money, the same being the lawful money of the United States, in amount and of the value of" the sum specified, and under such an indictment evidence of embezzlement of bank notes is admissible. State v. Finnegean, 127-287.

Value: In embezzlement the value of the property must be found by the jury for the purpose of determining the punishment, the same as in larceny. State v. Carmean, 126-291.

An instruction as to reasonable doubt with reference to whether the value of the property exceeds twenty dollars is not necessary where the evidence shows without conflict, and it is practically conceded, that the value of the goods exceeds twenty dollars. State v. Burton, 103-28.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction for larceny. State v. Newhouse, 115-173; State v. Carter, 121-135.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction of larceny by taking the animals of the prosecutor from his pasture and shipping them to market with other cattle of the defendant. State v. Greenland, 125-141.

Recent possession: The claim of a purchase from strangers is one very commonly made by those found in possession of stolen property and though the evidence is undisputed yet the extreme improbability of such a transaction may be considered by the jury in passing upon the truth of the evidence. State v. Marshall, 105-38.

If the explanation of possession is suffi-

SEC. 4834. Larceny of logs or lumber.

The ownership of stolen logs must be alleged and proven as alleged. State v.

SEC. 4836. Possession as evidence.

The provision that in a prosecution for the larceny of logs, the finding of the logs cient to raise a reasonable doubt as to whether the property was honestly obtained, the fact of such possession should not weigh against the defendant. It is error to instruct the jury that defendant's possession will be presumptive evidence of his guilt, unless he explained to the satisfaction of the jury his possession of the property, and that he came by it honestly. State v. Miner, 107-656.

One in possession of recently stolen property is not required to make a satisfactory explanation of his possession or to show that he came by the property honestly; but if his excuse or explanation is sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt of his guilt he is entitled to an acquittal. State v. Bartlett, 128-518.

Evidence of recent possession should not be admitted unless it appears that the defendant, and not someone else, was in possession of the goods stolen. State v. Wackernagel, 118-12.

It is error to charge the jury that possession of the stolen goods is prima facie evidence of the defendant's guilt of the stealing of such goods, and that, if such possession is established they can, upon that fact alone, return a verdict of guilty, unless some satisfactory explanation is made. The accused should not be required to satisfactorily explain his possession; the most that can be required of him in such case is that the circumstance be such as to raise a reasonable doubt whether the possession has been acquired otherwise than by the crime charged. If such reasonable doubt has been raised, he will be entitled to an acquittal, even though the explanation of the recent possession is not entirely satisfactory. State v. Brundige, 118-92.

It is error to instruct with reference to recent possession, where the evidence does not show such possession on the part of defendant. State v. Williams, 120-36.

The truthfulness of defendant's explanation of his recent possession of the stolen property is for the jury. State v. King, 122-1.

When the charge is of larceny from a building and it appears that the property found in defendant's possession must have been taken from the building if stolen at all, the same inference arises with reference to larceny from the building as to larceny in general. Ibid.

As to recent possession of stolen goods as evidence of guilt of burglary committed in connection with the stealing of such goods see notes to § 4787.

Loomis, 129-141.

in the possession of the defendant shall be presumptive evidence of guilt, does not authorize the presumption that logs found in the possession of one who has stolen them are the property of the person whose mark they bear. The fact of actual ownership must be alleged and proven as in other cases of larceny. State v. Loomis, 129-141.

SEC. 4837. From building on fire or from the person.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction of larceny from the person. State v. Williams, 118-494; State v. Connor, 118-490.

An indictment for such offense, describing the property as "a certain dark-colored pocketbook and its contents, consisting of one hundred and ten dollars in current money of the United States, and of the value of one hundred and ten dollars, a more particular description of which is to this grand jury unknown," held sufficient as to the description of the money. Ibid.

SEC. 4840. Embezzlement by public officers.

While the punishment for embezzlement is the same as that of larceny, the two crimes are distinct and cannot be charged in separate counts of the same indictment. State v. Finnegean, 127-287.

An officer not provided for by law is not such "public officer" as may be punished under this section for embezzlement. State v. Spaulding, 102-639.

One who is not a public officer may be guilty as accessory of the crime of embezzlement committed by a public officer. State v. Rowe, 104-323; In re Rowe, 77 Fed. 161.

The last sentence of this section, which was added by chap. 67, acts 26 G. A., contemplates the crime as committed by a public officer without any of the specific acts formerly specified as essential to constitute embezzlement, and in a prosecution under such charge it is necessary to allege demand and failure to account. Such demand must be by the person who is entitled to receive the funds demanded. State v. McKinney, 130-370.

Under an indictment charging embezzlement by a public officer, of money or property coming into his hands by virtue of his office, it is not necessary to allege that he has failed to account therefor upon demand. State v. Hoffman, 112 N. W. 103.

Under such an indictment proof of conversion is sufficient without establishing a specific demand. The particular evidence by which the conversion is made out need not be set out in the indictment. Ibid.

The deposit by a municipal officer of public funds in a bank is not an embezzlement thereof. Hunt v. Hopley, 120-695.

SEC. 4841. Embezzlement by bailee.

Something more than an ordinary conversion is necessary to be shown in order to establish an embezzlement. Farmer v. Norton, 129-88.

SEC. 4842. Other embezzlement.

The voluntary doing of an act, the unexpected consequence of which even though inevitable, is to deprive another of his property, there being no intention that the act shall have such result, cannot constitute the crime of embezzlement. State v. Carmean, 126-291.

Mere failure of a guardian to account for funds belonging to his ward does not in itself establish the crime of embezzlement. State v. Disbrow, 130-19.

Not every wrongful conversion even by a bailee or trustee without legal authority to sell is an embezzlement. The conversion must be actuated by the fraudulent purpose to deprive the owner of his property in order to constitute the crime. And where a guardian without order or direction of court sold a note belonging to his ward's estate, held that he might be prosecuted for embezzlement of the funds received. Ibid.

Whether a guardian wrongfully converting to his own use the proceeds of the sale of property of his ward is guilty of embezzlement, quaere. Ibid.

By Code § 5302 it is sufficient to allege the embezzlement or fraudulent conversion to have been of money generally without designing its particular species, and it is not necessary to specify it as being gold, silver or paper. State v. Alverson, 105-152.

It is sufficient to charge the embezzling of a certain number of dollars named of moneys received by defendant, etc., without other allegation of the value of such money. Ibid.

A prosecution for embezzlement by an agent in failing to account for money received under his agency may properly be had in the city where, under his contract, it was his duty to account. His failure or negligence or refusal to account elsewhere would not amount to conversion if, under his contract, he owed no such duty to his employer. State v. Hengen, 106-711.

The jurisdiction of the offense is in the county where the employe is under obligation to account to his employer. State v. Maxwell, 113-369.

Where a purchase of the property of the principal by the agent is ratified by the principal, with knowledge of the facts, the agent is not guilty of embezzlement in subsequently conveying the property as his own and appropriating the proceeds. State v. Engle, 111-246.

With reference to the crime of embezzlement by an officer or agent of a corporation the plain purpose of the statutory provision is that such officer or agent shall be criminally liable for the fraudulent conversion of the money or property of a corporation just as agents, clerks or servants of a private person are liable for a like fraudulent conversion of the money or property of their employers. And under an indictment charging defendant as an individual with the embezzlement of money of another individual it is not sufficient to prove that defendant was the officer of a corporation and without fraudulent intent as to the owner of the money caused him to be deprived thereof by the general course of business of the corporation transacted through an agent of such corporation who alone is guilty of any wrong in misappropriating money. State v. Carmean, 126-291; 102 N. W. 97.

An officer of a building and loan association may be convicted of the crime of embezzlement, although he is also guilty of a crime under the provisions of Code § 1918, relating to misconduct of officers of such an association. State v. Ames, 119-680.

Fraudulent intent is an essential element of the crime of embezzlement. Ibid.

In embezzlement the value of the property embezzled must be determined by the jury, as in larceny, for the purpose of determining the punishment for the offense. State v. Carmean, 126-291.

On a prosecution of an agent for the embezzlement of his principal's funds, held that the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction. State v. Pingel, 128-515.

One whose money has been embezzled by his agent may take security for the amount due to him without ratifying the embezzlement. Ibid.

SEC. 4845. Receiving stolen goods.

In a prosecution for receiving or buying stolen property, it is always essential to prove defendant's guilty knowledge of the manner in which the property was obtained, and evidence of other similar transactions is admissible. State v. Levich, 128-372.

SEC. 4846. Common thief.

There is no express requirement that the previous convictions referred to in this section shall antedate the commission of the offense charged. The punishment provided is for the fourth conviction without reference to the order of time of the commission of the acts, except that the previous convictions must precede the finding of the indictment. State v. Dale, 110-215.

The defendant cannot be convicted under this statute on account of a petit larceny committed prior to the time that the statute went into effect, for the statute, which increases the punishment of the crimes described therein, would be ex post facto as to the offenses already committed. Ibid.

SEC. 4850. Taking goods from officer. If any person, knowingly and without authority of law, take, carry away, secrete or destroy any goods or chattels while the same are lawfully in the custody of any sheriff, coroner, marshal, constable, or other officer, and held by such officer by virtue of execution, writ of attachment or other legal process, he shall be guilty of larceny, and, when the value of the property so taken, carried away, secreted or destroyed exceeds the sum of twenty dollars, be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than one year; and when it does not exceed twenty dollars, be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not more than thirty days. [C., '73, § 3915; R., § 4251.] [27 G. A., ch. 110, § 1.]

SEC. 4852. Selling or concealing mortgaged property.

Notwithstanding the embodiment in this section of the word "written," in accordance with the provisions of 25 G. A., chap. 50, so as to make it criminal for the mortgagor to wilfully sell or dispose of any portion of the property without the written consent of the holder of the mortgage, it is competent, in a prosecution under the statute, to show that the mortgagor, by the oral direction of the mortgagee, made a sale of the mortgaged property with the good faith, purpose and understanding that the proceeds should be paid over to the mortgagee and credited on the indebtedness. Kletzing v. Armstrong 119-505.

SEC. 4852-a. Larceny—Sale of crops with landlord's lien upon. If any tenant of farm lands shall, with intent to defraud, sell, conceal, or in any manner dispose of any of the grain, or other annual products thereof upon which there is a landlord's lien for unpaid rent, without the written consent of the landlord, he shall be guilty of larceny and punished accordingly. [29 G. A., ch. 146, § 1.]

An indictment charging a tenant of farm lands with having disposed of grain which is subject to the landlord's lien does not charge a continuing offense, and if repeated acts are alleged the indictment is bad for duplicity. State v. Ashpole, 127-680.

Under such statute, the indictment must specifically allege that the tenancy by defendant was of farm lands. Ibid.

SEC. 4852-b. Payment of rent. The payment of the rent for the lands upon which such grain or other annual products were raised at or before the time the same falls due, shall be a bar to any prosecution under section one (1) hereof, and no prosecution shall be commenced until such rent be wholly due. [29 G. A., ch. 146, § 2.]

SEC. 4852-c. Larceny of steam or steam heat. If any person wilfully and with intent to defraud, in any manner take from the wires, pipes, meters or any other apparatus of any electric motor, electric light, water, steam heating or gas plant or works, any electric current, water, steam, steam heat or gas, he shall be guilty of larceny and shall be punished accordingly. [30 G. A., ch. 132.] [32 G. A., ch. 172.]

SEC. 4852-d. Larceny of poultry in night-time—penalty. Any person guilty of larceny of domestic fowl or poultry in the night-time from any building, shed, coop or enclosed premises shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding two years, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment in the county jail, as above provided, at the discretion of the court. [30 G. A., ch. 133.]

SEC. 4852-e. Larceny by executor, administrator or guardian. If any executor, administrator or guardian, embezzles or fraudulently converts to his own use any money or property collected or received by him or coming into his possession or under his control by virtue of his said office he is guilty of larceny and the statute of limitations shall not begin to run as to such offense until the settlement of the estate or the attainment of majority by the ward, as the case may be. [31 G. A., ch. 163.]

CHAPTER 6.

OF FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING.

SECTION 4853. Forgery defined.

The forged instrument may be written in one county and the forgery actually committed in another county where the instrument is completed. State v. Spayde, 110-726.

An alteration of a public record with a fraudulent purpose may constitute the offense of forgery. Without such fraudulent purpose, it may constitute the crime defined by Code § 4910, of making false entries. State v. Hanlin, 110 N. W. 162.

It is forgery to falsely make or alter an instrument with intent to defraud, or to utter it as true, intending it to be forged, although it is not stamped, as required by federal statutes, and therefore the provision of the federal statutes that an unstamped instrument is not admissible in evidence has no application to a prosecution for forgery. State v. Shields, 112-27.

It is unnecessary in charging forgery, unless predicated upon the endorsements, that endorsements on the forged instrument be alleged or proven. But to charge the uttering of a forged instrument, the indictment should allege the endorsements so far as they affect the person to whom the instrument purports to be payable, and the proof in this respect must correspond with the allegations. State v. Waterbury, 133-135.

If the instrument is not on the face of it such an instrument as is the subject of forgery, that fact must be shown by extrinsic allegations and evidence, and it is sufficient to set out the purport of the instrument so as to indicate that it is an instrument in writing purporting to be the act of another by which a pecuniary demand or obligation is, or purports to be, created, etc. State v. Burling, 102-681.

In a prosecution for forgery, other similar forgeries may be shown to prove the intent, but other instruments claimed to have been forged cannot be introduced in evidence for this purpose, unless the fact that they are forgeries is established. State v. Prins, 113-72.

In a prosecution for forgery in altering a check, held that the admission of the defendant that he had added something to the check might be proven as against him. State v. Spiker, 131-194.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction for forgery where the defense was that the defendant had authority to sign his principal's name as agent. State v. Rivers, 124-17.

SEC. 4854. Uttering forged instrument.

The words "knowingly" or "well-knowing" in the indictment are uniformly held to supply the place of a positive averment that the defendant knew the facts subsequently stated. An intent to defraud may be inferred from knowingly passing an instrument as true which is known to be false. State v. Waterbury, 133-135.

CHAPTER 6-A.

OF PUNISHMENT ON CONVICTION THREE OR MORE TIMES OF CERTAIN OFFENSES, AND MAKING CERTAIN EVIDENCE COMPETENT PROOF OF FORMER CONVICTIONS.

SECTION 4871-a. Penalty for third conviction of felony. Whenever any person has been twice convicted of either of the crimes of burglary, robbery, forgery, counterfeiting, larceny where the value of the property stolen exceeded twenty dollars, or of breaking and entering with intent to commit a public offense any dwelling house, office, shop, store, warehouse, railroad car, boat, vessel, or building, in which goods, merchandise, or valuable things, were kept for use, sale or deposit, or has been convicted of two or more of said crimes, and shall thereafter be convicted of any one of such crimes, committed after such conviction, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary for any term not less than fifteen years, provided such former judgments shall be referred to in the indictment, stating the court, date and place of rendition. [27 G. A., ch. 109, § 1.]

Under this statute, held that the records of former judgments of conviction of a person of the same name were not sufficient without other evidence tending to identify the defendant on trial as the person against whom such judgments were entered. State v. Smith, 129-709.

The fact of the prior convictions is to be taken as a part of the offense charged, at least to the extent of aggravating it and authorizing an increased punishment. Ibid.

The statutory provision (27 G. A., chap. 109) imposing a more severe penalty for larceny where the defendant has been twice previously convicted of the same crime is not unconstitutional although the increased punishment may be imposed on account of convictions prior to the taking effect of the act. State v. Jones, 128 Fed. 626.

Also held that it was immaterial that the evidence showed three prior convictions instead of two. Ibid.

SEC. 4871-b. Penalty for fourth conviction of petty larceny. Any person over the age of eighteen years who has been three times convicted of larceny where the value of the property stolen did not exceed twenty dollars, upon being convicted the fourth time of said offense shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding three years, provided such former judgments shall be referred to in the indictment, stating the court, date and place of rendition. [27 G. A., ch. 109, § 2.]

SEC. 4871-c. Evidence admitted. On the trial of any of said offenses named in this act a duly authenticated copy of the record of the former judgment in any court wherein said conviction was had, for either of said crimes against the party indicted, shall be prima facie evidence of such former conviction and may be used in evidence against said party. [27 G. A., ch. 109, § 3.]

SEC. 4871-d. Duties of jury and judge. Upon any trial when the indictment refers to former convictions of the defendant, the jury, if it finds the defendant guilty, and the court, if the defendant is convicted on a plea of guilty, must also find and determine specially whether the defendant had previously been convicted of either of the crimes referred to in the indictment and the number of times so convicted. [27 G. A., ch. 109, § 4.]

CHAPTER 7.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE.

SECTION 4872. Perjury.

The time of the commission of the offense of perjury need not be specifically stated in the indictment, nor proven as alleged, where the charge is not based on the record or other writing under oath, and the statement asserted to have been false might have been made on either the date alleged or that proven, and would have constituted perjury if made at either time. State v. Perry, 117-463.

In an indictment for perjury it is sufficient to set forth the substance of the controversy or matter in respect to which the offense was committed. (Code § 5296.) Ibid.

False swearing in a proceeding on information before a justice of the peace may be punishable as perjury, although the information on which the proceeding is based is not sufficiently specific in charging the crime. Such a proceeding, though voidable, will not be entirely void. Ibid.

The corroboration of the evidence of one witness required to establish the falsity of the testimony given may be furnished by facts and circumstances as well as by direct and positive testimony. State v. Clough, 111-714.

The fact that the action in which the false testimony is given might be abated on account of the pendency of a former action in another jurisdiction will not defeat the prosecution for perjury. Ibid.

A false affidavit for a cost bond may be material so as to constitute perjury. Ibid.

The certificate of the clerk to such affidavit, on proof of the handwriting of the signature thereto, is competent and sufficient prima facie evidence of the jurat and that he performed the duties of clerk. Ibid.

The indictment must negative that which is false in the alleged testimony of the defendant, contradicting the matter alleged to have been falsely sworn to in express and specific terms. State v. Gallaughter, 123-378.

The indictment need not charge the precise date on which the crime was committed. It is sufficient if the time alleged is prior to the finding of the indictment. State v. John, 124-230.

If the court had jurisdiction of the general subject and of the person, and the accused proceeds to a hearing on the information without objection, he is in no position to say that perjury cannot be assigned on false testimony given by him on the hearing, because the allegations of the information were insufficient to constitute a crime. If the defect relates to the allegations in the particular case, the court having jurisdiction of the general class of cases to which the particular one belongs, the defect may be waived, and the proceedings are merely voidable, and not void. This is particularly true in those jurisdictions where, as here, an information is amendable. State v. Brown, 128-24.

If the matter sworn to is in any way conducive to the point in issue, or a guide to the court or jury, though it be circumstantial, it is nevertheless perjury. If it be circumstantially material, it is the subject of perjury. Ibid.

SEC. 4873. Subornation.

It is not necessary in an indictment for procuring another to commit perjury to set out the method or means employed. State v. Porter, 105-677.

Under an indictment for perjury, the

The materiality of the testimony is a question of law, for the court. Ibid.

Instructions as to the sufficiency of corroborating testimony in support of the charge of perjury held not prejudicially erroneous. State v. Booth, 121-710.

As to sufficiency of indictment (following State v. Schill, 27 Iowa 263) see State v. Booth, 121-710.

accused cannot be convicted of subornation of perjury, and proof of subornation of perjury will not constitute a justification for a publication charging perjury. State v. Lomack, 130-79.

SEC. 4882. Attempt to corrupt jurors, etc.

While in an indictment to bribe a juror it must appear that the person charged had knowledge that the person whom he attempted to influence was a juror, yet it is not essential that this fact appear by direct averment. State v. Dankwardt, 107-704.

Where a person uses to a juror such language as "See that the right is done, it will not be to your loss," with intent to improperly influence the juror, such act may be criminal if the words are spoken with the intent to improperly influence the juror. Ibid.

SEC. 4889. Compounding felonies.

If the inseparable part of the consideration for a contract is the compounding of a felony, the whole contract is void. Shaulis v. Buxton, 109-355.

An agreement or understanding not to prosecute need not be the sole consideration for a contract in composition of a felony in order to render it void. It is sufficient if the contract is made upon an agreement, express or implied, to compound or conceal the offense, or not to prosecute the same. Although the contract may have been based in part upon other valuable considerations, still, if there was such an agreement or understanding as the law forbids, combined and co-operating with that consideration, and operating as a part of the inducement for the making of the contract, then it is void and cannot be enforced. Rosenbaum v. Levitt, 109-292.

SEC. 4896. Assisting prisoner to escape from officer.

The crime of rescuing a prisoner is made a felony, and the officer has the right to use a deadly weapon in preventing such rescue if that is the only reasonably apparent method of accomplishing the result. State v. Smith, 127-534.

SEC. 4897. Prison breach—escape.

To constitute a breaking of prison under this section it is necessary that there be some force used, and where it appeared that the prisoner had, while being employed with other prisoners outside of the prison walls, escaped by concealing himself from the guards, held that the crime was not committed. State v. King, 114-413.

SEC. 4897-a. Repeal—Prison breach—penalty. That section forty-eight hundred and ninety-seven (4897) of the code be, and the same is hereby repealed, and the following enacted in lieu thereof:

If any person confined in a penitentiary for any less period than for life, breaks such prison and escapes therefrom; or while employed on work for the state in places and buildings owned or leased by it outside of the penitentiary enclosures, or while on public roads or other ways going to or returning from such places of employment, escapes from custody, he shall be imprisoned in such penitentiary for a term not to exceed five years, to commence from and after the expiration of the original term of his imprisonment. [29 G. A., ch. 147, § 1.]

SEC. 4897-b. To be paid from general fund. That all costs and fees hereafter incurred in prosecutions for violations of section four thousand eight hundred ninety-seven (4897) of the code, being for breaking and escaping from the penitentiary, shall be paid out of the state treasury from the general fund, in any case where the prosecution fails, or where such fees and costs cannot be made from the person liable to pay the same, the facts being certified by the clerk of the district court and verified by the county attorney of the county. [28 G. A., ch. 128, § 1.]

SEC. 4897-c. Amount certified to auditor of state. The clerk of the district court, in which the case is prosecuted or tried, shall, under his seal of office, certify to the state auditor a statement of the amount of fees or costs incurred in each case, and such statement shall be approved by the presiding judge in writing appended thereto or endorsed thereon. Should the cause be appealed to the supreme court, the costs there incurred shall be certified to the state auditor by the clerk of that court, but no fees, in such case, for the clerk of either the district or supreme courts shall be included or paid from the state treasury. [28 G. A., ch. 128, § 2.]

SEC. 4897-d. Auditor to issue warrant. On such certificate being filed in the office of the state auditor the auditor shall issue his warrant on the state treasurer for the amount thereof, payable to the clerk of the district or supreme court, as the case may be, and the clerk shall pay the same to the persons entitled thereto. [28 G. A., ch. 128, § 3.]

SEC. 4899. Resisting execution of process.

The indictment for resisting an officer in serving process must allege that the defendant "knowingly" did the act complained of. It is not sufficient that the act be charged as unlawfully or wilfully done. State v. Perry, 109-353.

It is sufficient in the indictment to identify the process, the service of which is alleged to have been resisted and where the process thus described is a search warrant, the affidavit and warrant corresponding with such description are admissible in evidence. State v. Moore, 125-749.

SEC. 4905. Misdemeanors in general.

Where by the charter of a city acting under special charter it was provided that no member of the city council should vote upon any question in which he was directly or indirectly interested, held that the action of members of the council in voting to increase their own salary was a misdemeanor under this section. State v. Shea, 106-735.

Where a statute prohibits the doing of an act but provides no special penalty, the doing of such act constitutes in itself a misdemeanor. State v. York, 131-635.

Where a statute designates conduct as constituting a misdemeanor, such conduct is negligence per se. Woolf v. Nauman Co., 128-261.

SEC. 4906. Punishment.

The violation of the rules adopted by the state board of health being made a misdemeanor by Code § 2573, is punishable under the provisions of this section. Pierce v. Doolittle, 130-333.

SEC. 4910. Making false entries in regard to fees.

The offense of making false entries by an officer in relation to his office does not necessarily involve a fraudulent purpose. State v. Hanlin, 110 N. W. 162.

It is immaterial that the books in which the alterations are made are not books specifically prescribed by the state to be kept by the officer, if they have in fact been kept by him for the purpose of making settlement with reference to his office. Ibid.

Such statutory provision is applicable not only to the clerk of a district court, but to his deputy. Ibid.

SEC. 4913-a. Penalty. That any person, not authorized by law, who shall bring or pass or cause to be brought into any penitentiary, reformatory or industrial school of the state, or the grounds thereof, or into any enclosure, building, quarry, farm, garden, or other place used in connection with any such institution in which prisoners or other inmates are required or permitted to be, any opium, morphine, cocaine or other narcotic or any intoxicating liquor, or any firearm, weapon or explosive of any kind, or any rope, ladder or other instrument or device for use in making or attempting an escape, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding five years. The bringing or passing of any rope, ladder or other instrument or device adapted for use in making an escape, into any of the places designated in this act shall be presumptive evidence that they were so brought or passed for such use. An attempt to do any of the acts prohibited shall be subject to the same punishment as to the completed act. [30 G. A., ch. 134.]

CHAPTER 8.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST THE RIGHTS OF SUFFRAGE.

SECTION 4919-a. Illegal voting—penalty. Whenever any political party shall hold a primary election for the purpose of nominating a candidate for any public office or for the purpose of selecting delegates to any convention of such party, it shall be unlawful for any person not a qualified elector, or any qualified elector not at the time a member in good faith of such political party, to vote at such primary election. Any person violating the provisions of this section, and any person knowingly procuring, aiding or abetting such violation, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not to exceed one hundred dollars or be imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed thirty days. [27 G. A., ch. 111, § 1.]

SEC. 4919-b. Prima facie evidence. It shall be prima facie evidence of the violation of the preceding section for any person who has participated in any primary election of one political party, to vote at a primary election held by another political party, to select candidates to be voted for at the same election; or to select delegates to any convention of the party holding such primary election. [27 G. A., ch. 111, § 2.]

SEC. 4919-c. Authority to administer oaths. Any judge of such primary election shall have power to administer oaths to, and to examine under oath, any person offering to vote at such election, touching his qualifications to participate in such primary election, and it shall be the duty of such judge of election to so examine or cause to be examined any person challenged as to his right to vote. Any person testifying falsely as to any material matter, touching his qualifications to participate in such primary election, shall be deemed guilty of perjury and punished accordingly. [27 G. A., ch. 111, § 3.]

SEC. 4919-d. What excepted. Nothing in this act shall be construed to apply to conventions held under the caucus system. [27 G. A., ch. 111, § 4.]

SEC. 4921. Residence in state.

To constitute wilfulness in voting where not qualified, there must be something more than the intentional act of voting without legal qualification; and advice of counsel or persons qualified to give advice in such matters may be shown as negativ-ing the wilful intention to illegally vote. But proof of casting a ballot where the elector is as a matter of law not entitled to vote is prima facie evidence of guilt. State v. Savre, 129-122.

SEC. 4928. Illegally receiving or rejecting votes.

An election officer will not be criminally liable for refusing to receive the ballot of an elector unless the elector, being qualified by compliance with the law to vote, tenders his ballot within the time within which it is the duty of the election officer to receive ballots. State v. Clark, 102-685.

The refusing of a ballot by the election officer may be wilful if it is purposely and deliberately done, without regard to whether the officer had just grounds for believing the ballot to be lawful. Ibid.

CHAPTER 9.OF OFFENSES AGAINST CHASTITY, MORALITY AND DECENCY.*SECTION 4932. Adultery.

What constitutes—who may prosecute: Under the statutory definition adultery consists in the sexual connection between a man and a woman of whom one is lawfully married to a third person. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

The crime of adultery is an offense against the innocent spouse of the person guilty of it and against the state, for which a divorce and subsequent marriage of the guilty parties do not atone, nor constitute a bar to prosecution. The statute does not necessarily limit the prosecution to cases in which complaint is made by the person who is the husband or wife of the guilty spouse at the time the complaint is made, but the phrase "husband or wife" refers to the relation existing at the time the offense is committed. State v. Smith, 108-440.

The state is not required to confine its evidence to the commission of the crime charged on the dates specified in the indictment, but may show that it was committed at any time within eighteen months preceding the finding of the indictment. If defendant is entitled to have the state elect as to which one of several alleged acts is relied on, he must ask that the state be required to make such election before the case is submitted to the jury. Ibid.

Adultery is an offense against the state as well as against the innocent spouse and there may be, therefore, a criminal conspiracy to commit adultery where the combination is not confined to the immediate parties to the intended crime. State v. Clemenson, 123-524.

The requirement that the prosecution must be commenced on the complaint of the husband or wife pertains to the procedure only. Such complaint is not an element of the offense. Ibid.

Consent of the female is not essential to constitute the crime of adultery. Ibid.

The wife's agency in the prosecution of her husband for adultery need not be shown beyond reasonable doubt. It constitutes no part or element of the offense. State v. Athey, 133-382.

After the prosecution has been properly commenced on the complaint of the wife, she has no power to recall or dismiss the charge so as to defeat the prosecution. Ibid.

The fact of prosecution by the wronged spouse need not be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Harmann, 112 N. W. 632.

The court is to determine whether such prosecution was instituted by the spouse as required by statute. Ibid.

The fact of the prosecution being commenced by the injured spouse need not be alleged in the indictment. Ibid.

Where it appeared that the husband appeared before the grand jury and testified with reference to the charge against defendant of adultery with the wife of the informer, such appearance, being in response to a subpoena, does not furnish proof that the prosecution was commenced by the husband. State v. Loftus, 128-529.

A husband who has after the commission of the alleged crime secured a divorce from his wife with whom the adultery is charged to have been committed cannot be the prosecutor. Ibid.

A married man can be prosecuted for adultery only at the instance of his wife and not at the instance of the husband of the woman with whom the adultery was committed. Sloan v. Davis, 105-97.

Evidence: The crime of adultery is not to be inferred from the mutual disposition of the parties to have sexual intercourse when coupled with no other proof save that of the opportunity to indulge therein. While the offense may be established by circumstantial evidence, and the disposition of the parties toward each other and opportunity are important circumstances, yet the circumstances must be such as will lead the guarded discretion of a reasonable man to the conclusion that the offense has been in fact committed. State v. Thompson, 133-741.

While no amount of abuse or misconduct on the part of the wife could serve as a defense or excuse for the crime of adultery on the part of the husband, the fact that the husband has been driven from his home by the violence of his wife's conduct or temper may furnish an explanation of his living apart from her, and therefore may be shown in evidence for that purpose. State v. Koller, 129-111.

Where the wife is an active agent of the prosecution and gives testimony against her husband, proof of an attempt upon her part to deprive him of the attendance of witnesses would have a legitimate bearing upon the weight to be given to her evidence. Ibid.

While direct proof of the act of intercourse is not required in a prosecution for adultery, it is necessary that the circumstances shown be inconsistent with innocent conduct. State v. Chaney, 110-199.

For the purpose of showing adulterous disposition subsequent acts of sexual intercourse between parties may be shown. State v. More, 115-178.

The birth of a child, by the woman with whom the adultery is charged to have been committed by defendant and the admission of paternity of such child by him are admissible where they indicate conception as having taken place about the time of the alleged criminal relation. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

Evidence in a particular case including testimony tending to show that the defendant procured a monument to be erected on the grave of the woman with whom he was charged to have committed adultery, designating her as his wife, held sufficient to warrant the conviction. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

SEC. 4933. Bigamy.

It is not necessary to allege in the indictment the cohabitation as continuing. And where the marriage has been contracted in another state, it is not the continuation of the cohabitation within this state which is important, but the fact that

It is error to receive in evidence notes addressed to the wife with whom the adultery is alleged to have been committed without anything to connect defendant with the sending of such notes. State v. Loftus, 128-529.

Evidence in a particular case held to sufficiently show the identity of the woman referred to in the evidence and the woman named in the indictment. State v. Higgins, 121-19.

Correspondence between the parties, showing their disposition toward each other, is admissible in a prosecution for adultery. State v. Butts, 107-653.

In a particular case held that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain a conviction for the offense. State v. Wiltsey, 103-54.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction. State v. Schaedler, 116-488.

Election: Where there has been a continuous adulterous relationship, the state should not be required to elect the particular occasion on which the adultery relied on was committed, and confine its evidence to that occasion. State v. Higgins, 121-19.

Adultery is not a continuing offense, and the state should be required to elect on which of two or more transactions relied upon it will ask a conviction. State v. Loftus, 128-529.

Where the particular criminal act for which a conviction alone may be had is sufficiently identified by the evidence, and evidence of other criminal relations between the same parties has been received only for the purpose of corroboration, it is not error to refuse to require the state to make an election. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

in this state cohabitation continues which was commenced in another state under the bigamous marriage. The length of time is immaterial. State v. Steupper, 117-591.

SEC. 4934. Exceptions.

A subsequent marriage by the faithful spouse after desertion by the other for the statutory period will be presumed to be valid. State v. Rocker, 130-239.

SEC. 4936. Incest. If any man marry his father's sister, mother's sister, father's widow, wife's mother, daughter, wife's daughter, son's widow, sister, son's daughter, daughter's daughter, son's son's widow, daughter's sons' widow, brother's daughter or sister's daughter; or if any woman marry her father's brother, mother's brother, mother's husband, husband's father, son, husband's son, daughter's husband, brother, son's son, daughter's son, son's daughter's husband, daughter's daughter's husband, brother's son or sister's son; or if any person, being within the de-degrees of consanguinity or affinity in which marriages are prohibited by this section, carnally know each other, they shall be guilty of incest, and imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding twenty-five years nor less than one year. [C., '73, § 4030; R., §§ 4337-9.] [31 G. A., ch. 164.]

A conviction may be had of the crime of incest although the facts show that the act would not constitute rape. State v. Kouhns, 103-720.

The provision (Code § 5488) requiring corroboration of the evidence of prosecutrix in a prosecution for rape or seduction does not in terms refer to incest and is not applicable thereto. Ibid.

The female is not an accomplice in such sense as that corroboration of her testimony is necessary under Code § 5489. Ibid.

If the same transaction may constitute either incest or rape provided the essential features of those crimes are established, an acquittal under an indictment charging rape is a bar to a prosecution for incest committed in a transaction which might have been proven under the indictment for rape although the state seeks in the second prosecution to show a different transaction from that relied upon in the first prosecution. State v. Price, 127-301.

An indictment for incest which charges carnal knowledge on the part of the accused only, is sufficient without also charging such carnal knowledge on the part of the other party to the connection. State v. Kimble, 104-19.

It is sufficient in the indictment to use

SEC. 4937-a. Sodomy. Whoever shall have carnal copulation in any opening of the body except sexual parts, with another human being, or shall have carnal copulation with a beast, shall be deemed guilty of sodomy. [29 G. A., ch. 148, § 1.]

The statutory definition of sodomy is broader than that of the common law. State v. McGruder, 125-741.

It is sufficient in the indictment to allege the offense in the language of the statute. Carnal copulation may be sufficiently shown without proof of the emission of the semen. Ibid.

the language of the statute and it is unnecessary to allege knowledge of the relationship. State v. Rennick, 127-294.

It is not competent to receive evidence tending to show a conspiracy between the prosecutrix and a third person to bring about the criminal relation with which the defendant is charged. Ibid.

Though the criminal act is accomplished by force so as to constitute rape, the wrongdoer may nevertheless be convicted of incest if the relationship is shown. Ibid.

Knowledge of the relationship is not included in the definition of the crime of incest, and need not be alleged in the indictment nor affirmatively proven. State v. Judd, 132-296.

The charge in the indictment that the act was felonious does not render such proof necessary. Ibid.

The relationship between the parties may be established by proof of general repute or admissions. Ibid.

Proof of penetration is sufficient to constitute carnal knowledge without proof of emission. The fact of penetration may be inferred from circumstances. Ibid.

Evidence of undue intimacy or of intercourse prior to the transaction charged as the basis of the prosecution is admissible. Ibid.

SEC. 4938. Lewdness—indecent exposure.

It is not necessary that the indictment should name the person to whom the defendant exposed his person. A defendant might properly be convicted of this offense although no person witnessed the indecent act, as for instance where a case might be made out on a confession corroborated by circumstances. State v. Bauguess, 106-107.

The phrase "an indecent exposure of the person," has a well settled and commonly accepted signification, and means the exposure of such parts of the person as modesty or a sense of self-respect requires to be kept usually covered, and it is not necessary in an indictment for the offense to more particularly describe the part of the body exposed. The language of the Code not only names but describes the offense and it is sufficient to charge it in the language of the statute. Ibid.

It is not necessary to allege in the indictment that the exposure was made in the actual sight of any person. An indictment following the language of the statute is sufficient. State v. Martin, 125-715.

The exposure becomes indecent only when indulged in at a time and place where as a reasonable person one knows or ought to know that his act is open to the observation of others. Ibid.

Where the indictment alleges the exposure to have been in the presence of a female, it is not necessary to allege that it was without the consent of such female. Ibid.

Where, in a prosecution for lewdness the issue presented by the evidence is only as to the commission of the acts charged, and the question of intent is not involved, it is error to allow evidence of other lewd acts to be introduced. State v. Vance, 119-685.

SEC. 4938-a. Lewd, immoral and lascivious acts with children—penalty. Any person over eighteen years of age who shall wilfully commit any lewd, immoral or lascivious act upon or with the body or any part or member thereof, of a child of the age of thirteen years, or under, with the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying the lust or passions or sexual desires of such person, or of such child, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than three (3) years, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00). [32 G. A., ch. 173.]

SEC. 4939. Keeping house of ill fame.

A covered wagon used for purposes of prostitution which is moved about from place to place is a house of ill fame, within the meaning of this section. (Following State v. Mullin, 35-207, holding that a boat on the Mississippi river was a house of ill fame.) State v. Chauvet, 111-687.

Proof of a single act of prostitution in a house is not sufficient to support a conviction for keeping a house of ill fame, but the crime may be established by proof of facts and circumstances from which the inference of guilt is so strong as to exclude reasonable doubt. State v. Steen, 125-307; 101 N. W. 96.

Proof of the general reputation for prostitution of women who are kept and harbored in the house is to be considered as tending to show that the keeper of the house had notice of their real character and of the nature of business they were engaged in. Ibid.

To authorize a conviction for keeping a house of ill fame it is not necessary to show that the defendant kept such house for the purpose of gain. State v. Porter, 130-690.

SEC. 4942. Enticing to house of ill fame.

An indictment for abduction under this section is not rendered defective by describing the female abducted as "a virtuous female" instead of as "a female before reputed virtuous" in the language of the statute. If the female is not in fact virtuous her reputation is immaterial. State v. Dickerhoff, 127-404.

SEC. 4943. Prostitution.

The provisions of this section with reference to resorting to or occupying a house of ill fame for the purpose of prostitution or lewdness, was not intended to reach and punish a single act of lewdness committed by a person in his own house. (Explaining State v. Russell, 95-406.) State v. Irwin, 117-469.

One may be convicted of being found in a house of ill fame leading a life of prostitution and lewdness without proof of actual sexual intercourse. State v. Shaw, 125-422.

SEC. 4944. Evidence.

This provision is not unconstitutional. State v. Wilson, 124-264.

It is erroneous to instruct that a "house resorted to for the purpose of prostitution and lewdness" is a house visited by persons of both sexes for the purpose of having sexual intercourse or some other lewd purpose and that lewdness is unlawful indulgence of the animal desire. Ibid.

Evidence as to reputation for want of chastity of the keeper of a house of ill fame prior to the findings of the indictment is admissible. State v. Beebe, 115-128.

SEC. 4946-a. Repeal. That section forty-nine hundred and forty-six (4946) of the code be and the same is hereby repealed, and the following enacted as a substitute therefor. [28 G. A., ch. 129, § 1.]

SEC. 4946-b. Bodies for medical purposes—how distributed. Every coroner, undertaker, superintendent or managing officer of any public asylum, hospital, poorhouse, or penitentiary in this state, shall deliver the bodies of uninterred deceased persons in his charge suitable for scientific purposes with the consent of the friends or relatives, if known, and without such consent if not known, to medical colleges or schools within the state, for the purpose of scientific medical study, unless the deceased person expressed a desire during his last illness that his body should be buried or cremated; such bodies shall be equitably distributed among the medical colleges and schools in the state under such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the state board of health, and the number so distributed shall be in proportion to the number of students matriculated at each medical college or school. The expense of such distribution shall be paid by the medical college or school receiving the bodies. If there shall be more bodies than are required by the medical colleges or schools of the state, the same may be delivered to physicians in the state, under such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the state board of health. [28 G. A., ch. 129, § 2.]

SEC. 4946-c. Duties of various officers. It shall be the duty of every such coroner, undertaker, superintendent or managing officer of a public asylum, hospital, poorhouse or penitentiary, as soon as any such body shall come into his custody, or as soon as any person shall die, whose body, under the provisions hereof, should be delivered to a medical college or school, to at once notify the secretary of the state board of health by telegram of the fact, and to hold such body unburied for forty-eight hours thereafter, and to deliver the body to such medical college or school as the secretary of the state board of health may direct. If, however, such body is subsequently claimed by any relative or friend, it shall be at once, by the person or persons having the same in charge, or by the medical college or school to which it has been delivered, surrendered to such relative or friend for burial. [28 G. A., ch. 129, § 3.]

SEC. 4946-d. Body held subject to claim. Every medical college or school, or person receiving the body of any deceased person under the provisions hereof, shall hold the same for the period of sixty days, subject to the claim of relatives or friends. [28 G. A., ch. 129, § 4.]

SEC. 4946-e. Penalties. Any coroner, undertaker, superintendent or managing officer of any public asylum, hospital, poorhouse or penitentiary within this state into whose hands the body of a deceased person shall come, which should be delivered to a medical college or school under the provisions hereof, who shall wilfully neglect or refuse to notify the secretary of the state board of health of the existence of such body, or refuse to deliver the same to a medical college or school upon the direction of the secretary of the state board of health, as herein provided, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof be fined any sum not exceeding fifty dollars; and any person who shall receive or deliver any body or remains knowing that any of the provisions of this act have been violated, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than two years, or fined not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars, or both. [28 G. A., ch. 129, § 5.]

SEC. 4962. Keeping gambling houses.

To a conviction of keeping a gambling house proof of participation in the play is not essential. State v. White, 123-425.

SEC. 4964. Gaming and betting.

The offense of gambling may be punished under city ordinance not inconsistent with the statutory provisions on the subject. Blodgett v. McVey, 131-552.

To support a conviction for gambling defendant must be shown to have joined in the game or to have participated in the betting or wagering of money or other property of value. State v. White, 123-425.

SEC. 4965. Gaming contracts void.

Where the question was whether, in purchases of grain made on the board of trade by plaintiff as the agent of defendant, it was intended that no delivery of the grain should be made, held, that evidence of the defendant's intention was admissible although such intention would not be controlling. Counselman v. Reichart, 103-430.

In such case, held, that in view of the generally known fact that business on the board of trade is conducted on a plan of non-delivery of produce but as a speculation in margins or differences, the intention of the parties might be determined by evidence outside of the correspondence by telegraph under which the purchases were made. Ibid.

A note given in settlement of a balance growing out of dealings in options is void. People's Sav. Bank v. Gifford, 108-277.

The stake holder is not in pari delicto with the parties to the unlawful wager. Himmelman v. Pecaut, 133-503.

SEC. 4967. Dealing in options—bucket shops.

Aside from statutory provisions, an executory contract for the sale of property is void where delivery of the property is neither made nor contemplated, and where settlement is to be made by payment of the difference between the contract price and the market price of the property at the time fixed for settlement. People's Sav. Bank v. Gifford, 108-277.

SEC. 4969. Cruelty to animals. That section forty-nine hundred and sixty-nine (4969) of the code, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"If any person torture, torment, deprive of necessary sustenance, mutilate, overdrive, overload, drive when overloaded, cruelly beat or cruelly kill any animal, or unnecessarily fail to provide the same with proper food, drink, shelter or protection from the weather, or drive or work the same when unfit for labor, or cruelly abandon the same, or carry the same or cause the same to be cruelly carried on any vehicle or otherwise or shall commit any other act or omission by which unjustifiable pain, distress, suffering or death is caused or permitted to any animal or animals whether the acts or omissions herein contemplated be committed either maliciously, wilfully or negligently and if any person shall knowingly permit such act or omission or shall cause or procure the same to be done he shall be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty (30) days, or be fined not exceeding one hundred (100) dollars." [32 G. A., ch. 174.]

One who does an act in violation of this section is guilty of a wrong and is liable for injuries resulting to any one therefrom, so far as such injuries are the natural and proximate consequence of such act, and even though the precise result which followed may not have been anticipated. Osborne v. Van Dyke, 113-557.

SEC. 4975-a. Docking—unlawful. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to dock the tail of any colt or horse of any age within the state of Iowa, or to procure the same to be done therein. [30 G. A., ch. 135, § 1.]

SEC. 4975-b. Penalty. Any person or persons violating any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed thirty days. [30 G. A., ch. 135, § 2.]

SEC. 4975-c. Soliciting for the purpose of prostitution—penalty. That any person who shall ask, request, or solicit another to have carnal knowledge with any female for a consideration or otherwise, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both such fine and jail imprisonment. [31 G. A., ch. 165.]

SEC. 4975-d. Bucket shop and bucket shopping defined. That a bucket shop, within the meaning of this act, is defined to be an office, store or other place wherein the proprietor or keeper thereof, or other person or agent, either in his or its own behalf, or as the agent or correspondent of any other person, corporation, association or co-partnership within or without the state, conducts the business of making, or offering to make, contracts, agreements, trades or transactions respecting the purchase or sale, or purchase and sale, of any stocks, grain, provisions, or other commodity, or personal property, wherein both parties thereto, or said proprietor or keeper, contemplate or intend that such contracts, agreements, trades or transactions shall be, or may be closed, adjusted or settled according to, or upon the basis of, the public market quotations of prices made on any board of trade or exchange, upon which the commodities or securities referred to in such contracts, agreements, trades or transactions are dealt in, and without a bona fide transaction on such board of trade or exchange; or wherein both parties, or such keeper or proprietor shall contemplate or intend that such contracts, agreements, trades or transactions shall be, or may be, deemed closed or terminated when the public market quotations of prices made on such board of trade, or exchange, for the articles or securities named in such contracts, agreements, trades or transactions, shall reach a certain figure; and also any office, store or other place where the keeper, person or agent, or proprietor thereof, either in his or its own behalf, or as an agent, as aforesaid, therein makes or offers to make, with others, contracts, trades or transactions for the purchase or sale of any such commodity, wherein the parties thereto do not contemplate the actual or bona fide receipt or delivery of such property, but do contemplate a settlement thereof based upon differences in the price at which said property is, or is claimed to be, bought and sold. The said crime shall be complete against any proprietor, person, agent, or keeper thus offering to make any such contracts, trades or transactions, whether such offer is accepted or not. It is the intention of this act to prevent, punish and prohibit, within this state, the business now engaged in and conducted in places commonly known and designated as "bucket shops," and also to include the practice now commonly known as bucket shopping by any person or persons, agent, corporations, associations or co-partnerships, who or which ostensibly carry on the business or occupation of commission merchants or brokers in grain, provisions, cotton, coffee, petroleum, stocks, bonds or other commodities whatsoever. [32 G. A., ch. 175, § 1.]

SEC. 4975-e. Unlawful to keep or maintain bucket shop—penalty. It shall be unlawful, and the same is hereby made a felony, for any corporation, association, co-partnership, person, or persons, or agent to keep or cause to be kept, within this state, any such bucket shop; and any corporation, person or persons, or agents whether acting individually or as a member, or as an officer, agent or employe of any corporation, association or co-partnership, who shall keep, maintain, or assist in the keeping and maintaining of any such bucket shop within this state, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in a sum not to exceed one thousand dollars or be imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding two years; and any person or persons who shall be guilty of a second offense under this statute, in addition to the penalty above prescribed, may, upon conviction, be both fined and imprisoned in the discretion of the court, and if a corporation, it shall be liable to forfeiture of all its rights and privileges as such; and the continuance of such establishment after the first conviction shall be deemed a second offense. [32 G. A., ch. 175, § 2.]

SEC. 4975-f. Accessory defined—penalty. Any corporation, association, co-partnership, person or persons or agents who shall communicate, receive, exhibit, or display in any manner any statements of quotations of the prices of any property mentioned in section one (1) hereof, with a view to any transactions in this act prohibited, shall be deemed an accessory, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined and punished the same as the principal, and as provided in section two (2) of this act. [32 G. A., ch. 175, § 3.]

SEC. 4975-g. Statement of purchases or sales furnished on demand. It shall be the duty of every commission merchant, co-partnership, association, corporation, person or persons, or agent or broker in this state engaged in the business of buying or selling or of buying and selling stocks, grain, provisions or other commodities or personal property for any person, principal, customer or purchaser to furnish upon demand to any customer or principal for whom such commission merchant, broker, co-partnership, corporation, association, person, or persons, or agent has executed any order for the actual purchase or sale of the commodities hereinbefore mentioned, either for immediate or future delivery, a written statement containing the names of the parties from whom such property was bought, or to whom it shall have been sold, as the case may be, the time, when, the place where, and the price at which, the same was either bought or sold; and in case such commission merchant, broker, person or persons, or agent, co-partnership, corporation or association shall refuse promptly to furnish such statement upon reasonable demand, the fact of such refusal shall be prima facie evidence that such property was not sold or bought in a legitimate manner, but was bought in violation hereof. [32 G. A., ch. 175, § 4.]

SEC. 4975-h. Existing statutes not affected. Nothing herein shall be so construed as to change, modify or repeal present and existing laws relating to the subject-matter hereof. [32 G. A., ch. 175, § 5.]

CHAPTER 10.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST PUBLIC HEALTH.

SECTION 4976. Sale of poison without label.

Violation of the statutory provision as to labeling poisons sold constitutes negligence rendering the vendor liable for damages proximately resulting from such violation. Burk v Creamery Pkg. Mfg.Co., 126-730.

SEC. 4989. Sale of impure or skimmed milk — skimmed-milk cheese—labeling. If any person shall sell, exchange, or expose for sale or exchange, or deliver or bring to another, for domestic or potable use, or to be converted into any product of human food, any unclean, impure, unhealthy, adulterated, unwholesome or skimmed milk, or milk from which has been held back what is commonly known as strippings, or milk taken from an animal having disease, sickness, ulcers, abscess or running sore, or which has been taken from an animal within fifteen days before or five days after parturition, or if any person shall purchase, to be converted into any product of human food, any unclean, impure, unhealthful, adulterated or unwholesome milk or cream, or shall manufacture any such milk or cream into any product of human food; or if any person, having cows for the purpose of producing milk or cream for sale, shall stable them in an unhealthy place or crowded manner, or shall knowingly feed them food which produces impure, unwholesome milk, or shall feed them distilled glucose or brewery waste in any state of fermentation, or upon any substance in a state of putrefaction or rotteness or of an unhealthy nature, or shall sell or offer for sale cream which has been taken from milk the sale of which has been prohibited, or who shall sell or offer for sale, as cream, an article which shall contain less than the amount of butter fat as prescribed in this chapter; or if any person shall sell or offer for sale any cheese manufactured from skimmed milk, or from milk that is partly skimmed, without the same being plainly branded, stamped or marked on the side or top of both cheese and package, in a durable manner, in the English language, the words "skimmed-milk cheese," the letters of the words to be not less than one inch in height and one-half inch in width, he shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars, and be liable for double damages to the person or persons upon whom such fraud shall be committed; but the provisions of this section shall not apply to skimmed milk when sold as such and in the manner and subject to the regulations prescribed in this chapter. [24 G. A., ch. 50, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 170, § 4; C., '73, § 4042.] [31 G. A., ch. 167, § 1.]

It is an offense under this section to add water and boracic acid to milk, although without intent to defraud. State v. Schlenker, 112-642.

SEC. 4989-a. Skimmed milk to be pasteurized. That every owner, manager or operator of a creamery shall before delivering to any person any skimmed milk cause the same to be pasteurized at a temperature of at least one hundred and eighty-five (185) degrees Fahrenheit. [31 G. A., ch. 168, § 1.]

SEC. 4989-b. Penalty. Whoever violates the provisions of this act shall, upon conviction, be liable to a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [31 G. A., ch. 168, § 2.]

SEC. 4990. What deemed adulterated or impure milk. For the purposes of this chapter, the addition of water or any other substance or thing to cream or whole milk or skimmed milk or partially skimmed milk is hereby declared an adulteration, and milk which is obtained from animals fed upon waste as defined in this chapter, or upon any substance of an unhealthy nature, is hereby declared to be impure and unwholesome, and milk which is proved by any reliable method of test or analysis to contain less than twelve and one-half per cent. of milk solids to the hundred pounds of milk, or than three pounds of butter fat to one hundred pounds of milk, shall be regarded as skimmed or partially skimmed milk, and every article not containing fifteen per cent. or more of butter fat shall not be regarded as cream. [24 G. A., ch. 50, § 2.] [31 G. A., ch. 167, § 2.]

This section is not unconstitutional as applied to the sale of milk adulterated by the addition of water and boracic acid, even though such adulteration is known to the purchaser. State v. Schlenker, 112-642.

SEC. 4999-a1. Water closets or privies. Every manufacturing establishment, work shop or hotel in which five or more persons are employed, shall be provided with a sufficient number of water closets, earth closets or privies for the reasonable use of the persons employed therein, which shall be properly screened and ventilated and kept at all times in a clean condition; and if women or girls are employed in such establishment, the water closets, earth closets or privies used by them shall have separate approaches and be separate and apart from those used by the men. [29 G. A., ch. 149, § 1.]

SEC. 4999-a2. Duties of parties in charge. It shall be the duty of the owner, agent, superintendent or other person having charge of any manufacturing or other establishment where machinery is used, to furnish and supply or cause to be furnished and supplied therein, belt shifters or other safe mechanical contrivances for the purpose of throwing belts on and off pulleys, and, wherever possible, machinery therein shall be provided with loose pulleys; all saws, planers, cogs, gearing, belting, shafting, set-screws and machinery of every description therein shall be properly guarded. No person under sixteen years of age, and no female under eighteen years of age shall be permitted or directed to clean machinery while in motion. Children under sixteen years of age shall not be permitted to operate or assist in operating dangerous machinery of any kind. [29 G. A., ch. 149, § 2.]

The obligation of the employer to properly guard dangerous machinery is not dependent upon notice by the commissioners of the bureau of labor, and failure to observe the statutory requirements is negligence per se. Wolf v. Nauman Co., 128-261.

The doctrine of assumption of risk is not to be invoked to defeat recovery by employes of immature years for whose protection the statute is specially designed. Ibid.

An employer who fails to guard dangerous machinery is liable to an employe for negligence in not providing him a safe place to work. Calloway v. Agar Packing Co., 129-1.

The statutory provision that the owner or person in charge of a manufacturing or other establishment where machinery is used shall not allow persons under a specified age to assist in cleaning machinery while in motion renders a violation of such provisions negligence per se. And a person under the prescribed age is not presumed to have assumed the risk of the incident danger, or to have been guilty of contributory negligence in attempting to perform the duty. Bromberg v. Evans Laundry Co., 111 N. W. 417.

Negligence of an employer in failing to comply with the requirements of this act does not preclude him from showing assumption of risk or contributory negligence on the part of the employe such as to defeat his recovery. Sutton v. Des Moines Bakery Co., 112 N. W. 836.

SEC. 4999-a3. Written notice of defect. In all cases where the property, works, machinery or appliances of an employer are defective or out of repair and the employe has knowledge thereof, and has given written notice to the employer, or to any person authorized to receive and accept such notice, or to any person in the service of the employer and entrusted by him with the duty of seeing that the property, works, machinery or appliances are in proper condition, of the particular defect or want of repair or when the employer or such other person has been notified in writing of such defect or want of repair by any person whose duty it is under the rules of the employer or the laws of the state to inspect such works, machinery or appliances, or any person who is subject to the risk incident to such defect or want of repair; no employe after such notice, shall by reason of remaining in the employment with such knowledge, be deemed to have assumed the risk incident to the danger arising from such defect or want of repair. [32 G. A., ch. 181.]

SEC. 4999-a4. Blowers and pipes. All persons, companies or corporations operating any factory or work shop where emery wheels or emery belts of any description, or tumbling barrels used for rumbling or polishing castings, are used, shall provide the same with blowers and pipes of sufficient capacity, placed in such a manner as to protect the person or persons using same from the particles of dust produced or caused thereby, and to carry away said particles of dust arising from or thrown off such wheels, belts or tumbling barrels while in operation, directly to the outside of the building, or to some receptacle place[d] so as to receive or confine such particles or dust; provided, however, that grinding machines upon which water is used at the point of grinding contact, and small emery wheels which are used temporarily for tool grinding, are not included within the provisions of this section, and the shops employing not more than one man at such work may, in the discretion of the commissioner of the bureau of labor of the state, be exempt from the provisions hereof. [29 G. A., ch. 149, § 3.]

SEC. 4999-a5. Enforcement—penalty. It shall be the duty of the commissioner of the bureau of labor of the state, and the mayor, and chief of police of every city or town, to enforce the provisions of the foregoing sections. Each six thousand (6,000) superficial area or fractional part thereof covered by buildings specified in classification seventh [sixth] of this act, shall be provided with one steel or wrought iron ladder fire escape with platform constructed, located and attached to such building in the manner herein provided. [30 G. A., ch. 136, § 3.]

SEC. 4999-a9. Signs. In buildings under all above classification [s] signs indicating location of fire escapes shall be posted at all entrances to elevators, stairway landings and in all rooms. [30 G. A., ch. 136, § 4.]

SEC. 4999-a10. Enforcement—penalty. It is hereby made the duty of commissioner of the bureau of labor statistics, the chief of fire department, or the mayor of each city or town where no such chief of fire department exists, or the chairman of the board of supervisors, in case such building is not within the corporate limits of any city or town, to adopt uniform specifications for fire escapes hereinbefore provided, and keep such specifications on file in their respective offices, and to serve or cause to be served a written notice in behalf of the state of Iowa upon the owner or owners, or their agents or lessees, of buildings within this state not provided with fire escapes in accordance with the provisions of this act, commanding such owner, owners, or agents or either of them, to place or cause to be placed upon said buildings, such fire escape or fire escapes as are provided in this act within sixty days after service of such notice, pursuant to the specifications established. Any such owner, owners' agents, trustees and lessees or either or any of them so served with notice as aforesaid, who shall not within sixty days after the service of said notice upon him or them, place or cause to be placed such fire escape or fire escapes upon such buildings as required by this act and the terms of said notice, shall be subject to a fine not less than fifty ($50) dollars, and not more than one hundred ($100) dollars, and shall be subject to a further fine of twenty-five ($25) dollars for each additional week of neglect to comply with such notice. [30 G. A., ch. 136, § 5.]

SEC. 4999-a11. Inspection. All fire escapes erected under the provisions of this act shall be subject to inspection and approval or rejection in writing, by the person named in section 4 of this act who has caused such written notice to be served [30 G. A., ch. 136, § 6.]

SEC. 4999-a12. Repeal—saving clause. Nothing in this act shall in any manner affect pending litigation. That sections four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine-e (4999-e), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine-f (4999-f), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine-g (4999-g), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine-h (4999-h), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine-i (4999-i), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine-j (4999-j) of the supplement of the code are hereby repealed. [30 G. A., ch. 136, § 7.]

SEC. 4999-a13. Use of dangerous fluids forbidden. That it shall be unlawful for any person to establish or operate any dye works, pantorium, or cleaning works, in which gasoline, benzine, naphtha, or other explosive or dangerous fluids are used for the purpose of cleaning or renovating wearing apparel or other fabrics, in any building any part of which is used as a residence or lodging-house. [28 G. A., ch. 130, § 1.]

SEC. 4999-a14. Penalty. Any person convicted of violating the provisions of the foregoing section shall be fined in a sum not exceeding fifty (50) nor less than ten (10) dollars. [28 G. A., ch. 130, § 2.]

CHAPTER 10-A.

OF PURE FOODS.

SECTION 4999-a15. State food and dairy commissioner. The state dairy commissioner shall, by this act, become the state food and dairy commissioner, and shall, on and after taking effect of this act, have all the powers, compensations and allowances, and shall be charged with all the duties now imposed by law upon the state dairy commissioner. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 1.]

SEC. 4999-a16. Duties—seal—assistants—compensation and expenses. In addition to his powers and duties as provided in section 1 hereof, the commissioner shall be charged with the duty of carrying into effect the provisions of this act and shall have an official seal. He may, with the approval of the executive council, appoint such assistants as he may deem necessary, who may exercise the powers now provided by law in the case of milk inspectors, together with those conferred by this act. They shall be paid not to exceed five dollars a day when on duty, besides their actual and necessary traveling expenses when traveling under orders. Their accounts shall be itemized and sworn to, and, when approved by the commissioner and the executive council, shall be paid by warrant of the auditor upon the treasurer out of the sum hereinafter appropriated for carrying out the provisions of this act. The commissioner shall receive five hundred dollars annually in addition to the salary now received by the state dairy commissioner. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 2.]

SEC. 4999-a17. Chemist. The commissioner shall, with the approval of the executive council, appoint a chemist, who shall be the official chemist under this act, who shall devote his whole time to the duties of such office. He shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars per year, to be paid in the same manner as the salaries of other state officers. He shall make all the examinations necessary in enforcing the provisions of this act, and shall be furnished necessary laboratory, apparatus, supplies and chemicals, to be paid for in the same manner as the accounts of assistants. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 3.]

SEC. 4999-a18. Rules and regulations. The commissioner shall, with the approval of the executive council, make all necessary rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions of this act, under which the commissioner shall procure from time to time or whenever he has occasion to believe any of its provisions are being violated, or cause to be procured, for examination chemically, microscopically or otherwise, samples of food shipped into this state or offered for sale in this state. The chemist making the examination shall certify the results of his work to the commissioner. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 4.]

SEC. 4999-a19. County attorney—duties. If it shall appear from any such examination that any of the provisions of this act have been violated, the commissioner shall at once certify the facts to the proper county attorney, with a copy of the results of the analysis, duly authenticated by the analyst under oath. It shall be the duty of every county attorney to whom the commissioner or his assistants shall report any violation of this act, to cause proceedings to be commenced and prosecuted without delay for the fines and penalties in such case provided. An attorney may be appointed by the governor when he deems advisable to prosecute such cases, but in no case except where the county attorney has first refused to act. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 5.]

SEC. 4999-a20. Manufacture and sale of adulterated foods prohibited. No person, firm or corporation, by himself, officer, servant or agent, or as the officer, servant, or agent of any other person, firm or corporation, shall manufacture or introduce into the state, or solicit or take orders for delivery, or sell, exchange, deliver or have in his possession with the intent to sell, exchange or expose or offer for sale or exchange, any article of food which is adulterated or misbranded, within the meaning of this act. Provided, that none of the penalties set forth in this act shall be imposed upon any common carrier for introducing into the state, or having in its possession, any adulterated or misbranded articles of food, where the same were received by said carrier for transportation in the ordinary course of its business and without actual knowledge of the adulteration or misbranding thereof. Provided, that any manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber may keep goods specifically set apart in his stock for sale in other states, which might otherwise be in violation of the provisions of this act. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 6.]

SEC. 4999-a21. Terms defined. The word "commissioner," whenever used in this act, shall be taken to mean the state food and dairy commissioner herein provided for. The word "food," as herein used, shall include all articles used for food, drink, confectionery or condiment, by man or domestic animals, whether simple, mixed or compound. The term "Misbranded" as used herein shall apply to all articles of food, or articles which enter into the composition of food, the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design, or device regarding such article, or the ingredients or substances contained therein which shall be false or misleading in any particular, and to any food product which is falsely branded as to the state, territory, or country in which it is manufactured or produced, or which bears any statement of the weight or measure unless the same be a correct statement of the net weight or measure of the contents. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 7.] [32 G. A., ch. 177, § 1.]

SEC. 4999-a22. Adulteration defined. For the purpose of this act an article of food shall be deemed to be adulterated:

First. If any substance or substances has or have been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality, strength or purity.

Second. If any substance or substances has or have been substituted wholly or in part for the article.

Third. If any valuable constituent of the article has been wholly or in part abstracted.

Fourth. If it be an imitation of, or offered for sale, under the specific name of another article, or if it does not conform to the standards established by law.

Fifth. If it be mixed, colored, powdered or stained, in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed.

Sixth. If it contains any added poisonous ingredient, or any ingredient which may render such article injurious to health, or if it contains saccharine or formaldehyde.

Seventh. If it be labeled or branded so as to deceive, or mislead the purchaser, or purport to be a foreign product when not so.

Eighth. If it consist of the whole or any part of a diseased, filthy, decomposed or putrid animal or vegetable substance, or any portion of an animal unfit for food, whether manufactured or not, or if it is the product of a diseased animal, or one that has died otherwise than by slaughter; provided, that an article of food which does not contain any added poisonous or deleterious ingredient shall not be deemed to be adulterated in the following cases:

1. In the case of mixtures or compounds which may be now or from time to time hereafter known as articles of food under their own distinctive names and not included in definition fourth of this section; provided, that candies and chocolates shall be deemed to be adulterated if they contain terra alba, barytes, talc, chrome yellow, or other mineral substances, or poisonous colors or flavors, or other ingredients deleterious or detrimental to health; provided, that vinegar shall be deemed to be adulterated if it contains any added coloring matter; provided, that in case of baking powders, each can or package shall be plainly labeled so as to show the name of each and every ingredient contained therein.

2. In the case of articles labeled, branded, or tagged, so as to plainly indicate that they are mixtures, compounds, combinations, imitations, or blends, provided that the same shall be labeled, branded or tagged, so as to show the exact character and the name and quantity or proportion of each constituent thereof; and provided further, that nothing in this act shall be construed as requiring or compelling proprietors or manufacturers of proprietary foods which contain no unwholesome ingredient to disclose their trade formulas, except in so far as the provisions of this act may require to secure freedom from adulteration or imitation. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 8.] [32 G. A., ch. 177, § 2.] [32 G. A., ch. 178, § 2.]

SEC. 4999-a23. Repeal—labels. Chapter one hundred and sixty-six (166), laws of the thirty-first general assembly, is hereby amended by striking out all of section nine (9) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

matter, the true and correct names of all the constituents of such mixture, compound, combination, imitation or blend, and if artificially colored or preserved, the name of each and every such added substance shall be plainly stated on the label. Such label shall be placed upon the outside of the package and shall contain the name and address of the manufacturer, packer or dealer. There shall be such a contrast between the color of the label and the color of ink used in printing the label as heretofore provided, that the label shall be easily and plainly legible." [32 G. A., ch. 178, § 1.]

SEC. 4999-a24. Samples. Any person who manufactures or exposes for sale, or delivers to a purchaser any article of food, shall furnish, within business hours, and upon payment or tender of the selling price, a sample of such food to any person duly authorized by the commissioner to receive the same, and who shall apply to such vendor, or person delivering to a purchaser, such article of food for such sample for such use in sufficient quantity for the analysis of any such article or articles in his possession. In the presence of such person and an agent of the commissioner, if so desired by either party, said sample shall be divided into three parts, and each part shall be sealed with the seal of the commissioner. One part shall be left with the dealer, one delivered to the commissioner, and one deposited with the county attorney for the county in which the sample is taken. The having in possession by any person who manufactures or exposes for sale, any adulterated or misbranded food, within the meaning of this act, shall be prima facie evidence of having in possession with intent to sell in violation of its provisions. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 10.]

SEC. 4999-a25. Penalty. Any person, firm or corporation, or agent thereof, who refuses to comply, on demand, with any of the requirements of this act, or who shall violate any of its provisions, or who shall obstruct or hinder the commissioner, or any of his assistants, in the discharge of any duty imposed by this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [31 G. A., ch. 166 §11.]

SEC. 4999-a26. Bulletins. The commissioner shall, from time to time, with the approval of the executive council, issue a printed bulletin, showing the results of inspections, analyses, and prosecutions undertaken under this act, together with such general information as may be deemed suitable. Such bulletins shall be printed in such numbers as may be directed by the executive council, and shall be issued to the newspapers of the state and to all interested persons. [31 G. A., ch. 166 §12.]

SEC. 4999-a27. Appropriation. For the purpose of enabling the commissioner to enforce the provisions of this act, for the compensation and expenses of assistants and experts, for necessary traveling and miscellaneous expenses, and for all other expenses herein provided, the sum of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) annually, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated from the treasury not otherwise appropriated. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 13.] [32 G. A., ch. 179.]

SEC. 4999-a28. What exempt. All goods purchased or received by either wholesale or retail dealers of this state prior to July first, nineteen hundred and six (1906), shall be exempt from the provisions of this act to July first, nineteen hundred and seven (1907); except that canned corn so purchased or received shall be exempt from the provisions of this act to January first, nineteen hundred and eight (1908). [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 14.] [32 G. A., ch. 180.]

SEC. 4999-a29. Notice—how served on defendant corporation. Upon the prosecution of a corporation for violations of the provisions of this act, or of section four thousand nine hundred and eighty-nine (4989) of the code, and information filed before a justice of the peace having jurisdiction, the said justice of the peace shall forthwith issue notice to the corporation which shall substantially notify the defendant of the charges contained in the information and that it must forthwith appear and answer the same, which notice may be served by any peace officer in any county of the state on any officer or agent of the defendant corporation by reading the same to him and leaving with him a copy thereof; said notice shall be returned to the justice of the peace without delay with proper return of its service, and from and after two days from the time of making such service the defendant corporation shall be considered to be in court, and all further proceedings shall be the same as against an individual defendant. [31 G. A., ch. 166, § 15.]

SEC. 4999-a30. Repeal. Sections four thousand nine hundred and eighty-two (4982), four thousand nine hundred and eighty-four (4984), four thousand nine hundred and eighty-seven (4987), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-three (4993), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-four (4994), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-five (4995), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-six (4996), four thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven (4997) and four thousand nine hundred and ninety-eight (4998) of the code, and sections four thousand nine hundred and eighty-four "a" (4984-a), and four thousand nine hundred and eighty-four "b" (4984-b), as they appear in the supplement to the code, are hereby repealed. [31 G. A., ch. 166 § 17.]

CHAPTER 10-B.

OF PURE DRUGS.

SECTION 4999-a32. Manufacture or sale of adulterated drugs prohibited. No person, firm or corporation, by himself, officer, servant or agent, or as the officer, servant or agent of any other person, firm or corporation, shall manufacture or introduce into the state or solicit orders.

for delivery, or sell, exchange, deliver, or have in his possession with the intent to sell, exchange or expose, or offer for sale or exchange, any drug which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act. Provided, that none of the penalties set forth in this act shall be imposed upon any common carrier for introducing into the state, or having in its possession, any adulterated or misbranded drugs, where the same were received by said carrier for transportation in the ordinary course of its business and without actual knowledge of the adulteration or misbranding thereof. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 1.]

SEC. 4999-a33. Drug defined. The term "drug", as used in this act, shall include all medicines and preparations recognized in the United States Pharmacopœia or National Formulary for internal or external use, and any substance or mixture of substances intended to be used for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease of either man or other animals, or for the destruction of parasites. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 2.]

SEC. 4999-a34. Adulteration defined. For the purposes of this act, a drug shall be deemed to be adulterated:

First. If, when a drug is sold under or by a name recognized in the United States Pharmacopœia or National Formulary, it differs from the standard of strength, quality or purity as determined by the test laid down in the United States Pharmacopœia or National Formulary official at the time of investigation: Provided, that no drug defined in the United States Pharmacopœia or National Formulary shall be deemed to be adulterated under this provision if the standard of strength, quality or purity be plainly stated upon the bottle, box or other container thereof although the standard may differ from that determined by the test laid down in the United States Pharmacopœia or National Formulary.

Second. If its strength or purity fall below the professed standard or quality under which it is sold. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 3.]

SEC. 4999-a35. Misbranded defined. The term "misbranded", as herein used, shall apply to all drugs the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design or device regarding such article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, which shall be false or misleading in any particular and to any drug which is falsely branded as to state, country or territory in which it is manufactured or produced. For the purposes of this act, a drug shall also be deemed to be misbranded:

First. If it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the name of another article.

Second. If the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed in whole or in part and other contents shall have been placed in such package, or if the package shall fail to bear a statement on the label showing the name and the exact quantity or proportion of any alcohol, morphine, opium, heroin, chloroform, cannabic indica, chloral hydrate, acetanilide, or any derivative or preparation of any such substances contained therein. The statement herein required shall be plainly printed upon the outside wrapper and also upon a label affixed to the package in type "eight point caps"; provided, that in case the size of the package will not permit the use of eight point caps, the size of the type may be reduced proportionately. There shall be such a contrast between the color of the label and the color of the ink used in printing the label heretofore required, that the printing thereon shall be easily and plainly legible. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 4.]

SEC. 4999-a36. Drugs or preparations containing wood or denatured alcohol—sale prohibited. No person, firm or corporation shall sell, offer, or expose for sale, or have in his possession, any preparation or product intended for use of man or domestic animals, either for internal or external use, or for cosmetic purposes, or for inhalation, or for perfumes, which contains methyl (wood) alcohol, crude or refined, or denatured alcohol. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 5.]

SEC. 4999-a37. Bulletins. The pharmacy commissioners shall, from time to time, with the approval of the executive council, issue a printed bulletin, showing the results of inspections, analyses and prosecutions undertaken under this act, together with such general information as may be deemed suitable. Such bulletins shall be printed in such numbers as may be directed by the executive council, and shall be issued to the newspapers of this state and to all interested persons. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 6.]

SEC. 4999-a38. Enforcement. It is hereby made the duty of the pharmacy commissioners to enforce the provisions of this act. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 7.]

SEC. 4999-a39. Penalty. Any person, firm or corporation, or agent thereof, who refuses to comply, on demand, with any of the requirements of this act, or who shall violate any of its provisions, or who shall obstruct or hinder the said pharmacy commissioners, in the discharge of any duty imposed by this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 8.]

SEC. 4999-a40. What exempt—prima facie evidence. All goods purchased or received by either wholesale or retail dealers of this state prior to July first, nineteen hundred and seven (1907) shall be exempt from the provisions of this act to April first, nineteen hundred and nine (1909). The having in possession by any person who manufactures or exposes for sale, any adulterated or misbranded drug, within the meaning of this act, shall be prima facie evidence of having in possession with intent to sell in violation of its provisions: Provided, that any manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber may keep goods specifically set apart in his stock for sale in other states, which might otherwise be in violation of the provisions of this act. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 9.]

SEC. 4999-a41. Repeal. Sections four thousand nine hundred and eighty-three (4983), four thousand nine hundred and eighty-five (4985), four thousand nine hundred and eighty-six (4986) and four thousand nine hundred and eighty-eight (4988) of the code are hereby repealed. [32 G. A., ch. 176, § 10.]

SEC. 4999-a42. Depositing samples on porches, lawns, etc., prohibited. That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, company or corporation, either in person or by agent, to deposit any sample of any drugs or medicine upon any porch, lawn, in any vehicle or any other place where such drugs or medicine might be picked up by children or other persons. [32 G. A., ch. 182, § 1.]

SEC. 4999-a43. Misdemeanor. Any person, firm, company, corporation, or agent thereof violating the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [32 G. A., ch. 182, § 2.]

CHAPTER 11.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY.

SECTION 5000. Lotteries and lottery tickets.

A contract in furtherance of a lottery scheme is invalid. Chancy Park Land Co. v. Hart, 104-592.

But where the purchasers of lots, buying under a contract by which the lots purchased were to be distributed among them as they might agree, entered into an arrangement by which such lots were distributed by chance, held, that the transaction was not a lottery and that the sale was valid. Ibid.

SEC. 5002. Allowing minors in billiard rooms, saloons, etc.

It is immaterial whether the minor indulges in any game whatever if he is permitted to enter and remain in the billiard hall. The term "billiard hall" includes a hall in which pool is played. State v. Johnson, 108-245.

SEC. 5006. Sale of cigarettes.

The statute prohibiting the manufacture or sale of cigarettes within the state is void in so far as it applies to the sale of cigarettes imported into the state and sold in the original packages. McGregor v. Cone, 104-465.

The original package is the bundle put up for transportation or commercial handling, and where such a package was broken open and its contents, consisting of small packages containing ten each, were exposed and sold, held, that the seller was punishable. Ibid.

The mulct tax on the business of selling cigarettes is levied to meet the burdens imposed upon the general public by what is thought to be the result upon the human race and particularly upon children of the use of cigarettes. Hodge v. Muscatine County, 121-482.

SEC. 5007. Tax on sale.

By reference in the section providing for a mulct tax on the business of selling cigarettes, to the statutory provisions as to a mulct tax on the sale of liquors, provisions of the latter are incorporated into the former section. Hodge v. Muscatine County, 121-482.

This statutory provision is not unconstitutional by reason of the fact that no notice of the assessment and levy of the tax is required to be given to the person engaged in the business or the owner of the property wherein the same is conducted. Ibid.

As the property owner may apply to the board of supervisors for remission of the tax if erroneous under the provisions of Code § 2441 relating to the mulct tax on the sale of intoxicating liquors which is applicable under the section relating to the sale of cigarettes, notice to the property owner of the imposition of the tax which becomes a lien on his property is not essential to its validity. Hodge v. Muscatine County, 196 U. S. 276.

This section has no application to sale in original packages of interstate commerce; but small packages, containing ten cigarettes each, transported in bulk to a consignee, though not inclosed in any larger package, do not constitute original packages within the proper meaning of that term. Cook v. Marshall County, 119-384.

This section is not unconstitutional, on the ground that, although it relates to some extent to the imposition of a mulct tax, it is included in the criminal code, nor on the ground that it is a statute not of uniform operation. Ibid.

This section is not unconstitutional on the ground that it is not germane to and included within the title of that portion of the Code relating to the punishment of crime. Ibid.

The statutory provision imposing a tax on cigarette dealer is not unconstitutional as denying equal protection of the laws to retail dealers because it does not apply to jobbers and wholesalers doing an interstate business. Cook v. Marshall County, 196 U. S. 261; Hodge v. Muscatine County, 196 U. S. 276.

The transportation of packages of cigarettes of ten each in bulk does not come within the protection of the rule as to shipment of original packages under interstate commerce. Ibid.

SEC. 5008. Infringement of civil rights.

The evil sought to be remedied by the provisions prohibiting the denial of civil rights is unjust or groundless discrimination between individuals where the public generally is invited to be served or entertained. Humburd v. Crawford, 128-743.

Whether a boarding house keeper holds himself out to serve meals to the public generally is not to be determined from advertisements or signs alone, but also from the manner of conducting the business.

Ibid.

If such person serves meals only in pursuance of previous arrangements, and therefore to particular individuals rather than to any one who may apply, the civil rights provisions are not applicable to him. Ibid.

SEC. 5016-a. Repeal—not to be dealt in. That section five thousand and sixteen (5016) of the code is hereby repealed and the followign enacted as a substitute therefor:

No person shall buy, sell, deal in or give away, or offer to buy, sell or deal in any swine that have died of any disease, or that have been killed on account of any disease. [27 G. A., ch. 113, § 1.]

SEC. 5028-a. Misdemeanor. If any person shall publicly mutilate, insult, trample upon, or defile, by act, any flag, standard, color, or ensign of the United States, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [28 G. A., ch. 131, § 1.]

SEC. 5028-b. Unfair discrimination—what constitutes. Any person, firm, company, association or corporation, foreign or domestic, doing business in the state of Iowa, and engaged in the production, manufacture or distribution of petroleum or any of its products, that shall intentionally for the purpose of destroying the business of a competitor in any locality, and creating a monopoly discriminate between different sections, communities or cities of this state, by selling such commodity at a lower rate in one section, community or city than is charged for such commodity by said party in another section, community or city, after making due allowance, for the difference if any, in the grade or quality and in the actual cost of transportation from the point of production, if a raw product, or from the point of manufacture, if a manufactured product, shall be deemed guilty of unfair discrimination, which is hereby prohibited and declared to be unlawful. [31 G. A., ch. 169, § 1.]

SEC. 5028-c. Penalty. Any person, firm, company, association or corporation violating any of the provisions of the preceding section, and any officer, agent or receiver of any firm, company, association or corporation, or any member of the same, or any individual, found guilty of a violation thereof, shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars ($500) nor more than five thousand dollars ($5,000), or be imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed one year, or suffer both penalties. [31 G. A., ch. 169, § 2.]

SEC. 5028-d. Contracts or agreements. All contracts or agreements made in violation of any of the provisions of the two preceding sections shall be void. [31 G. A., ch. 169, § 3.]

SEC. 5028-e. Enforcement. It shall be the duty of the county attorneys, in their counties, and the attorney-general, to enforce the provisions of the preceding sections of this act by appropriate actions in courts of competent jurisdiction. [31 G. A., ch. 169, § 4.]

SEC. 5028-f. Complaint—to whom made. If complaint shall be made to the secretary of state that any corporation authorized to do business in this state is guilty of unfair discrimination, within the terms of this act, it shall be the duty of the secretary of state to refer the matter to the attorney-general who may, if the facts justify it in his judgment, institute proceedings in the courts against such corporation. [31 G. A., ch. 169, § 5.]

SEC. 5028-g. Revocation of permit. If any corporation, foreign or domestic, authorized to do business in this state, is found guilty of unfair discrimination, within the terms of this act, it shall be the duty of the secretary of state to immediately revoke the permit of such corporation to do business in this state. [31 G. A., ch. 169, § 6.]

SEC. 5028-b. Corporation to be enjoined—when. If after revocation of its permit such corporation, or any other corporation not having a permit and found guilty of having violated any of the provisions of this act, shall continue or attempt to do business in this state, it shall be the duty of the attorney-general, by a proper suit in the name of the state of Iowa, to enjoin such corporation from transacting all business of every kind and character in said state of Iowa. [31 G. A., ch. 169, § 7.]

SEC. 5028-i. Cumulative remedies. Nothing in this act shall be construed as repealing any other act, or part of act, but the remedies herein provided shall be cumulative to all other remedies provided by law. [31 G. A., ch. 169, § 8.]

SEC. 5028-j. Certificate of inspection. That the importation of registered cattle or cattle eligible to registry for breeding and dairy purposes into this state is hereby prohibited, except when such cattle are accompanied with a certificate from an inspector whose competency and reliability are certified to by the authority charged with the control of domestic animals in the state from whence the cattle came, certifying that said cattle have been examined and subjected to the tuberculine test within sixty days next preceding the date of such importation, and are free from disease. [31 G. A., ch. 170, § 1.]

SEC. 5028-k. Detention and inspection—quarantine. In lieu of an inspection certificate as required in the preceding section, cattle may be detained at suitable stock yards or other inclosure within this state nearest to the state line, on the railroad or highway over which they were shipped, driven or hauled, and there examined at the expense of the owner, or may be shipped or driven to their destination under quarantine, there to remain in quarantine until properly examined at the expense of the owner, and released by the state veterinary surgeon. Such expense shall be a lien upon the cattle. [31 G. A., ch. 170, § 2.]

SEC. 5028-l. Penalty. Any person, firm, company, corporation or agent thereof, violating any of the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined for each offense not more than one hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not more than thirty days, or both fine[d] and imprisoned, at the discretion of the court. Such person, firm, company, corporation or agent shall be liable for the full amount of damages that may result from the violation of this act. Action may be brought in any county in which said cattle are sold, offered for sale or delivered to a purchaser, or in which they may be detained in transit. [31 G. A., ch. 170, § 3.]

SEC. 5028-m. Enforcement. It shall be the duty of the state veterinary surgeon to enforce the provisions of this act. [31 G. A., ch. 170, § 4.]

SEC. 5028-n. Accepting or giving tips or gratuities. It shall be unlawful for any agent, representative or employe, officer or any agent of a private corporation, or a public officer, acting in behalf of a principal in any business transaction, to receive, for his own use, directly or indirectly, any gift, commission, discount, bonus or gratuity connected with, relating to or growing out of such business transaction; and it shall be likewise unlawful for any person, whether acting in his own behalf or in behalf of any co-partnership, association or corporation, to offer, promise or give directly or indirectly any such gift, commission, discount, bonus or gratuity. Any person violating the provisions of this act or any of them shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars ($25), nor more than five hundred dollars ($500), or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [32 G. A., ch. 183, § 1.]

SEC. 5028-o. Testimony—immunity from prosecution. No person shall be excused from attending, testifying or producing books, papers, contracts, agreements and documents before any court in obedience to the subpoena of any court having jurisdiction of the misdemeanor on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary, or otherwise, required of him, may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture. But no person shall be liable to any criminal prosecution, for or on account of any transaction, matter or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before said court or in obedience to its subpoena or in any such case or proceeding, provided, that no person so testifying or producing any such books, papers, contracts, agreements or documents shall be exempted from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying. Provided, this act shall not apply to those cases in which the principals, being the contracting parties, have knowledge of and consent to the payment of a commission to an agent or representative. [32 G. A., ch. 183, § 2.] [32 G. A., ch. 184.]

SEC. 5028-p. What prohibited. No person shall use, sell, offer for sale or keep for sale within this state any toy pistols, toy revolvers, caps containing dynamite, blank cartridges for toy revolvers or toy pistols, or firecrackers more than five inches in length and more than three-fourths of an inch in diameter; provided caps containing dynamite may be used, kept for sale or sold when needed for mining purposes, or for danger signals, or for other necessary uses. [32 G. A., ch. 185.]

SEC. 5028-q. Penalty. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be fined not exceeding one hundred ($100.00) dollars. or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty (30) days. [32 G. A., ch. 185, § 2.]

SEC. 5028-r. When effective. This act shall be in full force and effect from and after January 1, 1908. [32 G. A., ch. 185, § 3.]

SEC. 5028-s. What prohibited. That no bills, posters, or other matter used to advertise the sales of intoxicating liquors or tobacco shall be distributed posted painted or maintained within four hundred feet of premises occupied by a public school or used for school purposes, provided however that nothing in this act contained shall apply to advertisements in newspapers of regular publication, distributed to subscribers or purchasers thereof. [30 G. A., ch. 137, § 1.]

SEC. 5028-t. Penalty. Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [30 G. A., ch. 137, § 2.]

CHAPTER 12.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST THE PUBLIC PEACE.

SECTION 5033. Exciting disturbance.

The disturbance of the peace contemplated by the statutory provision as to exciting disturbance in public places, relates to a disturbance of the tranquility enjoyed by citizens of a municipality or community where good order reigns among its members. The enjoyment of such tranquility is a natural right among all persons in a political society, and any intentional violation of that right is a breach of the peace. Neola v. Reichart, 131-492.

The fact that such breach of the peace is punishable by statute does not prevent its being punished under a city ordinance not inconsistent with the statutory provisions. Ibid.

SEC. 5034. Using blasphemous or obscene language. If any person publicly use blasphemous or obscene language, to the disturbance of the public peace and quiet, he shall be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty days, or be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars. [28 G. A., ch. 132, § 1.]

SEC. 5038-a. Boxing contest—sparring exhibition—penalty. Whoever engages in any boxing contest or sparring exhibition with or without gloves for a prize, reward, or anything of value, at which an admission fee is charged or received, either directly or indirectly, and whoever knowingly aids, abets, or assists in any such boxing contest or sparring exhibition, and any owner or lessee of any ground, lot, building, hall, or structure of any kind knowingly permitting the same to be used for such boxing contest or sparring exhibition, shall be fined not exceeding three hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding ninety days. [28 G. A., ch. 133, § 1.]

SEC. 5040. Breach of Sabbath.

A subscription for payment of an indebtedness of a church is a matter of charity, and the fact that it is made on Sunday will not constitute a defense. First M. E. Church v. Donnell, 110-5.

The fact that an accident causing injury to a miner occurs in connection with work on Sunday is immaterial as to the right of the miner to recover for negligence of the mine owner. Taylor v. Star Coal Co., 110-40.

The doing of an act which is a violation of the Sunday law will not constitute a violation of law under the terms of an accident insurance policy, where the risk is the same on Sunday as it would have been on a secular day. Matthes v. Imperial Acc. Assn., 110-222.

A ministerial act done on Sunday, such as giving notice, will not be invalid, unless specially prohibited. State v. Ryan, 113-536.

SEC. 5040-a. Ball games and other sports prohibited until 3 p. m. That it shall be unlawful to engage in ball games, horse racing, or sports or entertainments that will interfere with the proper observance of the day which is set apart as Memorial Day, prior to the hour of three o'clock p. m. of said day. Any violation of this act shall be punishable by a fine of not less than five ($5.00) dollars or more than one hundred ($100) dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed 30 days in the discretion of the court. [32 G. A., ch. 186.]

CHAPTER 13.

OF CHEATING BY FALSE PRETENSES, GROSS FRAUDS AND CONSPIRACY.

SECTION 5041. False pretenses.

There is a distinction between larceny and obtaining property by false pretenses; if the false pretenses induce the owner to part with his property, intending to transfer both title and possession, the crime is cheating by false pretenses; but if by fraud, trick, or false pretense, an owner is induced to part simply with the possession of his property, without intention to pass title, and the party receiving it takes with intent to fraudulently convert to his own use, the crime is larceny. State v. Loser, 132-419.

A pretense such as will furnish a ground for conviction of the crime of cheating by false pretenses must be a representation as to an existing fact or past event, and not a mere promise to do something in the future or representation as to something to take place in the future. But a promise to do something in the future may be so connected with a statement as to an existing fact as that the statement of fact becomes the effective cause of the promise, and in such cases the two may be considered together in determining the character of the pretense. State v. Hollingsworth, 132-471.

The state need not prove all the representations and statements alleged in the indictment, and the fact that some of them are inconsistent with others is no reason for sustaining a demurrer to the indictment. Ibid.

If a soliciting agent for insurance, by intentional false representations as to an application for insurance claimed to have been secured by him, obtains from the company a portion of the commission to which he would be entitled on procuring such insurance, he may be convicted of obtaining money under false pretenses. State v. Seligman, 127-415.

In a prosecution for such act other similar transactions on the part of the defendant may be shown as bearing upon the question of fraudulent intent. Ibid.

The crime of cheating does not apply to real property. State v. Eno, 131-619.

To secure by false pretenses the signature to a deed in which the name of the grantee is left blank may constitute a crime under this section. State v. Tripp, 113-698.

Allegations of an indictment in a particular case, held to sufficiently negative the truth of the pretenses alleged and to sufficiently charge that defendant made the representations, knowing them to be false. Ibid.

In charging the offense of obtaining a signature to a promissory note by means of false and fraudulent representations, it is not necessary to charge that the representations were made with the specific intent to defraud the person from whom the note was obtained. It is sufficient that the form of the indictment in that respect follows the statute. State v. Hazen, 104-16.

The indictment may allege several false pretenses and proof of one of them is sufficient to warrant conviction. State v. Chingren, 105-169.

An indictment charging that defendant obtained the signature of a person named to a written instrument commonly called a bank check, the false making of which would be punished as forgery, "for the sum of thirty-five dollars," and that the person named did then and there draw and sign said bank check and deliver the same, etc., is sufficient. State v. Carter, 112-15.

The indictment sufficiently charges that the person defrauded relied on the false representations in alleging that he would not have signed the check nor delivered it to the defendant had it not been for the representations so falsely and fraudulently made. Ibid.

It is immaterial that some of the statements and representations alleged are in the alternative. Ibid.

Evidence of similar pretenses made about the same time and in about the same neighborhood to other persons may be shown, but unless there is evidence that such other pretenses were false the evidence with reference thereto should be stricken out on motion. Ibid.

To make out the offense it must be shown that the pretense was of a past event or existing fact, that it was false, calculated to deceive, and was believed and relied on by the party defrauded. But it is not necessary that the false pretenses be the sole inducement to the act procured to be done. Ibid.

Obtaining money as a charitable gift by false pretenses is an offense under this section. Ibid.

It does not render the indictment insufficient that different and even inconsistent means of perpetrating the fraud are alleged to have been used. A false promise in addition to the false representation may be stated. State v. Tripp, 113-698.

It is not essential that all the false pretenses charged in the indictment be proved in order to warrant a conviction. State v. Dexter, 115-678.

The indictment must allege the ownership of the property obtained by the false pretenses charged. State v. Jackson, 128-543.

The jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant obtained complete control and absolute possession of the property charged to have been obtained by false pretenses within the county in which he is indicted. Ibid.

If the prosecutor knew of the falsity of the alleged statements before parting with the possession of his property, no crime is committed. Ibid.

It is error to charge that if the false pretenses relied upon are frivolous and not calculated to deceive an ordinarily prudent man under like circumstances, then no crime is committed. Ibid.

The amount of money received not being material, a variance between the charge and the proof as to the amount received is not material. State v. Gibson, 132-53.

While in a prosecution for obtaining the signature of a person to a written instrument, the false making of which would be punished as forgery, it is necessary to prove the delivery of the instrument, such proof is not essential in a prosecution for conspiracy in fraudulently combining to obtain such signature. State v. Soper, 118-1.

The venue of the offense of cheating by false pretenses is where the false pretenses are made and acted upon by the person to whom they are made. The fact of mailing a communication containing such false pretenses in another county does not fix the venue of the offense in the county where such communication is mailed. State v. Gibson, 132-53.

Under a charge of receiving money procured by false pretenses, it is sufficient to prove that the defendant received from the person defrauded a check on which he procured money. Ibid.

Proof of other false pretenses made about the same time by the defendant to the prosecutor is admissible as bearing upon defendant's evil motive and intent. Ibid.

SEC. 5044. False weights and measures.

The offense described in this section is not a continuing one. Each act of false weighing is a distinct offense, unless it is but one of a series of acts forming a part of a single transaction. The defendant therefore in a prosecution under this section has the right to require an election on the part of the state, where the evidence tends to show different transactions. State v. Jamison, 110-337.

An indictment under this section is not sufficient which charges defendant with unlawfully and fraudulently keeping false weights, and with knowingly buying cattle weighed therewith. The indictment must charge that the defendant used the weights. Ibid.

In a prosecution for using false weights, evidence that the defendant's scales were inaccurate at other times than on the occasion referred to in the indictment is admissible as tending somewhat to show guilty knowledge. Ibid.

SEC. 5050. Labor union labels—injunction.

Under the provisions of this section held that a wholesale dealer in cigars could be enjoined from selling boxes of cigars bearing a counterfeit union label, and that good faith in making the sale, as, for instance, where it was made by a clerk in violation of instructions, would constitute no defense. But held that no damages could be recovered in such action by the labor union whose label was counterfeited, unless actual damage was shown, and further, that damages by way of penalty could not be allowed, in the absence of any evidence as to the amount of such damage. Beebe v. Tolerton & Stetson Co., 117-593.

SEC. 5052. Unlawful use or sale of bottles, boxes, etc., of another. Persons engaged in the manufacture, bottling or selling of soda water, mineral or aerated waters, cider, milk, cream or other lawful beverages in bottles, boxes, casks, kegs or barrels, with their names or other marks of ownership stamped or marked thereon, may file in the office of the recorder of the county in which such articles are manufactured, bottled or sold a description of the name or marks so used by them, and cause notice thereof to be given by three consecutive publications in a weekly newspaper printed in the English language in said county. It shall thereupon be unlawful for any person, without the written consent of the owner, to fill such bottles, boxes, casks, kegs or barrels so marked or stamped, for the purpose of sale, or to sell, dispose of, buy or traffic in or wantonly destroy the same, whether filled or not, and any violation of this section shall be a misdemeanor, and any person convicted thereof shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. The using by any other person than the rightful owner, without written permission, of any such cask, barrel, keg, bottle or box, as prohibited in this section, or the possession thereof by any junk dealer, or dealer in such casks, barrels, kegs, bottles or boxes, the same being marked or stamped and registered as herein required, shall be prima facie evidence that such use, and the sale or possession, is unlawful, and search warrants may be procured for the discovery and seizure of such bottles, boxes, casks, kegs or barrels, as in other criminal cases. [25 G. A., ch. 79.] [29 G. A., ch. 151, § 1.]

SEC. 5058. Conspiracy to prosecute.

In a prosecution for conspiracy, held that evidence of acts of co-conspirators in the county where the prosecution was had, and also in other countries where it appeared that the same fraudulent scheme was attempted, was admissible. State v. McIntosh, 109-209.

Also, held, that evidence of declarations

SEC. 5059. Conspiracy in general.

Conspiracy is a combination of two or more persons by concerted action to accomplish a criminal or unlawful purpose, or some purpose not in itself criminal, by criminal or unlawful means. The mere knowledge, acquiescence or approval of an act without co-operation or agreement to co-operate is not enough to constitute the crime of conspiracy to do such act. The combination must contemplate the accomplishment of the purpose by the united energy of the persons accused of such conspiracy, or active participation must be shown. State v. King, 104-727.

There may be a conspiracy to commit adultery where the combination is not confined to the parties to the intended crime. State v. Clemenson, 125-524.

Where the act charged as the basis of the conspiracy is not criminal, such as the obtaining of real property by false pretences, which under statutory provisions relating to such crime does not constitute a criminal offense, there can be no conviction for conspiracy. State v. Eno, 131-619.

While the woman upon whom an abortion is performed is not guilty of the crime, yet if she conspires with others to perform the act, she is a co-conspirator, and her declarations in promotion of the common enterprise are admissible in evidence against another conspirator on trial for the commission of the substantive crime. State v. Crofford, 133-478.

While the acquittal of one of two or more persons charged with the joint commission of a crime of conspiracy may bar the prosecution of others charged with the same conspiracy, it does not follow that an acquittal of one of the persons charged with a substantive crime committed by means of a conspiracy will bar a prosecution of those charged with the same substantive offense. The conspiracy to commit a crime, and the crime itself, are distinct offenses, and the acquittal of one is not a bar to the prosecution of the other. The acts and declarations of one shown to have been engaged in a conspiracy to commit a substantive crime are admissible in evidence on the trial of the other defendant, notwithstanding the person whose declarations are sought to be proven has been previously acquitted. Ibid.

The gist of the offense of conspiracy is the wicked and unlawful agreement, and where the agreement is to perpetrate a crime known to the common law or defined by one conspirator, in the presence of the others, though made after the alleged conspiracy was ended, was competent. Ibid.

by statute in unmistakable terms all that is necessary is to designate the offense without describing the overt act accomplished in pursuance of the conspiracy. State v. Clemenson, 123-524.

Therefore held, that in an indictment for conspiracy to commit adultery it was not necessary to allege that the woman with whom carnal connection was to be had by one of the parties to the conspiracy was known to be a married woman. If knowledge of such fact was essential to the criminality of the act it would be implied as necessarily included in the allegation that the combination was to perpetrate that particular crime. But without proof of such knowledge there should not be a conviction. Ibid.

In a prosecution for conspiring to commit a felony, the felony being the act of designedly and by false pretenses, and by privy or false tokens, and with intent to defraud, obtaining the signature of any person to a written instrument, the false making of which would be punishable as forgery, (Code § 5041,) it is not necessary to allege that the instrument was actually delivered. It is not necessary in an indictment for conspiracy to commit a crime to describe the crime intended to be committed with the accuracy or detail essential in charging the commission of the crime itself. State v. Soper, 118-1.

Where the conspiracy is charged to have consisted in an agreement to do an act not in itself criminal by illegal means, then the illegal means must be described, but where the offense consists in a conspiracy to commit a crime, the means by which such crime is to be committed need not be alleged. Ibid.

The purpose for which evidence is allowed to be introduced of acts by defendant in pursuance of the conspiracy, is to show the existence of the conspiracy itself. Therefore where the conspiracy charged involves false representations, it is competent to prove such representations made to persons not named in the indictment, as tending to show that the representations relied on were intentionally and wilfully made in carrying out the general plan involved in the conspiracy charged. Ibid.

For the purpose of thus showing the intent of the conspirators' acts done or representations made outside of the limits of the county in which the crime is charged to have been committed may be shown. Ibid.

So long as defendants were acting in pursuance of the unlawful combination, though subsequently to the making of it, and therefore after the completion of the crime of conspiracy, the acts and representations of each may be shown as against the others. Ibid.

An indictment for conspiracy is not bad for duplicity in charging that defendants conspired to injure the property of another and also obtain the property by false pretenses. State v. Loser, 132-419.

Where the gist of the crime charged is a conspiracy to commit unlawful acts, the indictment need not allege the overt acts. A conspiracy to injure the property rights of another is punishable in the state where the conspiracy is entered into, although the overt acts in carrying out the conspiracy are committed in another state, where such acts were not in themselves criminal. Ibid.

Under an indictment charging a conspiracy to cheat by false pretenses, it is erroneous to instruct that the procuring possession of property by such false pretenses constitutes the crime charged, irrespective of the intent of the owner of the property to pass title thereto. Ibid.

Under a charge of conspiracy to cheat by false pretenses, there cannot be a conviction on proof of conspiracy to commit larceny; but the fact that the overt act proven is larceny will not require an acquittal, since the overt act is not the gist of the crime, but is provable only as showing the intent. Ibid.

SEC. 5060. Pools and trusts.

These provisions may render a contract entered into for the purpose of preventing competition or to fix prices, contrary to

All or any two or more of the acts described by statute as constituting conspiracy may be charged conjunctively in one indictment, and there is no objection to charging one or more of the intents referred to by the statute in one count and others in another, if the same act of conspiracy is referred to in each. Therefore, even though the intent stated in the second count of an indictment is different from that stated in the first, it does not follow that the indictment is bad for duplicity. By particular words, the offense charged in the second count may be so alleged as to constitute a different form only of the same charge of conspiracy contained in the first count. State v. Caine, 111 N. W. 443.

An indictment for conspiracy is not bad for duplicity in charging that defendants conspired to injure the property of another and also obtain the property by false pretenses. State v. Loser, 132-419.

An actual agreement to enter into a conspiracy need not be proven by direct evidence in order to warrant a conviction. A prima facie case is made out by proof of the acts and declarations of the defendant himself, and when such prima facie case is made, evidence of acts and declarations of co-conspirators, though not in the presence of each other, if in the carrying out of the common purpose may be shown. State v. Caine, 111 N. W. 443.

SEC. 5062. Penalty. Any corporation, company, firm or association violating any of the provisions of the two preceding sections shall be fined not less than five hundred nor more than five thousand dollars, and any president, manager, director, officer, agent or receiver of any corporation, company, firm or association, or any member of any corporation, company, firm or association, or any individual, found guilty of a violation thereof, shall be fined not less than five hundred nor more than five thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed one year, or both. [32 G. A., ch. 187.]

SEC. 5077-a1. Misreading or manipulation of milk or cream tests. It shall be unlawful for the owner, manager, agent or employe of a cheese factory, creamery, or condensed milk factory to falsely manipulate or under-read or over-read the Babcock test or any other contrivance used for determining the quality of milk or cream, or to make any false determination of the said Babcock test or otherwise. [31 G. A., ch. 171, § 1.]

SEC. 5077-a2. Penalty. Whosoever shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [31 G. A., ch. 171, § 2.]

SEC. 5077-a3. Grain combinations prohibited. That it shall be unlawful for any person, company, partnership, association, or corporation owning or operating any grain elevator or engaged in the business of buying, selling, handling, consigning, or transporting grain, to enter into any agreement, contract, or combination with any other grain dealer, or grain dealers, partnership, company, corporation, or association of grain dealers, whether within or without the state, engaged in like business, for the fixing of prices to be paid for grain by different dealers or buyers; or to divide between said dealers the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings of such dealers and buyers, or any portion thereof; or to form, enter into, maintain, or contribute money or anything of value to any trust, pool, combination, or association of persons of whatsoever character or name, which has for any of its objects the prevention of full and free competition among buyers, sellers, or dealers in grain; or to do or permit to be done by his or their authority any act or thing whereby the free action of competition in the buying or selling of grain is restrained or prevented. [32 G. A., ch. 188, § 1.]

SEC. 5077-a4. Liability for damages. That in case any person, company, partnership, corporation or association, trust, pool or combination of whatsoever name shall do, cause to be done, or permit to be done, any act, matter or thing in this act prohibited or declared to be unlawful, such person, partnership, company, association, corporation, trust, pool or combination shall be liable to the person, partnership, company, association or corporation injured thereby for the full amount of damages sustained in consequence of any such violation of the provisions of this act, together with a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court in every case of recovery and to be taxed as part of the costs in the case, and the property of any person who may be a member of any such trust, pool, combination, corporation or association, violating the provisions of this act, shall be liable for the full amount of such judgment. [32 G. A., ch. 188, § 2.]

SEC. 5077-a5. Penalty—duty of grand jury. That any person, partnership, company, association or corporation subject to the provisions of this act, or any person, trust, combination, pool or association, or any director, officer, lessee, receiver, trustee, employe, clerk, agent or any person acting for or employed by them or either of them, who shall violate any of the provisions of section 1 of this act, or who shall aid and abet in such violation, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction thereof be fined any sum not less than five hundred dollars, ($500) and not exceeding two thousand dollars ($2000) or imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding six months, or both, at the discretion of the court. It shall be the duty of the grand jury to inquire into and ascertain if there exists any pool, trust, combination or violation of any provision in this act, in their respective counties. [32 G. A., ch. 188, § 3.]

SEC. 5077-a6. Statements required. Every lot in bulk, barrel, bag, pail, parcel or package of concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs as defined in section three (3) of this act; and every parcel, package or lot of agricultural seeds as defined in section nine (9) of this act, and containing one pound or more, offered or exposed for sale in the state of Iowa for use within this state, shall have affixed thereto, in a conspicuous place on the outside thereof, distinctly printed in the English language in legible type not smaller than eight point heavy gothic caps, or plainly written a statement certifying:

1. In case of concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs:

First. The number of net pounds of feeding-stuffs in the package.

2. In the case of agricultural seeds:

Second. The name, brand or trade-mark under which the article is sold.

Third. The name and address of the manufacturer, importer, dealer or agent.

Fourth. The place of manufacture.

Fifth. Except in the case of condimental stock food; patented, proprietary or trade-marked stock and poultry foods, claimed to possess medicinal or nutritive properties, or both, the chemical analysis of the feeding-stuffs, stating the percentages of crude protein, crude fat, and crude fiber, allowing one per cent. of nitrogen to equal six and twenty-five one hundredths per cent. of protein, all three constituents to be determined by the latest methods adopted by the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists of the United States.

2. In the case of agricultural seeds:

First. Name of the seed.

Second. Full name and address of the seedsman, importer, dealer or agent.

Third. A statement of the purity of the seed contained, specifying the kind and percentage of the impurities as defined in sections eleven (11) and twelve (12) hereof, provided that said seeds are below the standards fixed in this act.

Fourth. Locality where said seed was grown, when known. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 1.]

SEC. 5077-a7. Additional statement or label. Every barrel, bag, pail, parcel or package of concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs as defined in section three (3) of this act, and every feed intended for domestic animals that is compounded from two or more substances, in addition to the requirements of section one (1), shall have affixed thereto, in a conspicuous place on the outside thereof, a statement in the manner and form prescribed in section one (1), giving the true and correct names of all the ingredients of which it is composed. Except condimental stock food; patented, proprietary or [or] trade-marked stock or poultry foods, claimed to possess medicinal or nutritive properties, or both; and these shall be labeled or branded so as not to deceive or mislead the purchaser in any way, and the contents of any such package shall not be substituted in whole or in part for any other contents. Any statement, design or device upon the label or package regarding the substances contained therein, shall be true and correct, and any claim made for the feeding, condimental, tonic or medicinal value, shall not be false or misleading in any particular. The name and percentage of any deleterious or poisonous ingredient or ingredients, shall be plainly stated upon the outside of the package or container. The name and percentage of the diluent or dilutents, or bases, shall be plainly stated on the outside of the package or container. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 2.]

SEC. 5077-a8. Concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs defined. The term concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs, as used in this act, shall include alfalfa meals and feeds; dried beet refuse; ground beef or fish scraps; bean meals; dried blood; brewers' grains, both wet and dry; cerealine feeds; cocoanut meals; corn feeds; corn and oat feeds; corn, oat and barley feeds; compounds under the name of corn and cob meals; corn bran; clover meal; cottonseed meal and feeds; germ feeds; distillers' grains; gluten meals; gluten feeds; hominy feeds; linseed meals; malt refuse; malt sprouts; meat meals; meat and bone meals; mixed feeds of all kinds; oil meals of all kinds; oat feeds; oat bran; oat flour; oat middlings; oat shorts; pea meals; poultry foods; rice bran; rice meal; rice polish; rye bran; rye middlings; rye shorts; starch feeds and starch factory by-products; tankage and packing house by-products; wheat bran; wheat middlings; wheat shorts; and low grade wheat flour; and all materials of similar nature used for domestic animals; also condimental stock foods; patented proprietary or trade-marked stock or poultry feeds claimed to possess medicinal or nutritive properties or both; and all other materials intended for feeding to domestic animals. But it shall not include: hay; straw; whole seeds; un-mixed meals made from the entire grains of wheat, rye, barley, oats, Indian corn, buckwheat, and broom corn; nor wheat flours nor other flours fit for human consumption. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 3.]

SEC. 5077-a9. Certified copy of statement and samples furnished food and dairy commissioner. Before any concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs, as defined in section three (3) of this act, is offered or exposed for sale, the importer, manufacturer, person or party who causes it to be sold or offered for sale within the state of Iowa for use within this state, for each and every feeding-stuff bearing a distinguishing name or trade-mark, shall file with the state food and dairy commissioner a certified copy of the statement named in section one (1) of this act, and shall also deposit with the said state food and dairy commissioner a sealed glass jar or bottle containing not less than one pound of the feeding-stuff to be sold or offered for sale, accompanied by an affidavit that it is a fair average sample thereof and corresponds within reasonable limits to the feeding-stuff which it represents. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 4.]

SEC. 5077-a10. Inspection fee—license fee—tax tags. Before any manufacturer, importer, dealer or agent shall offer or expose for sale in this state any of the concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs defined in section three (3) of this act, he shall pay to the state food and dairy commissioner an inspection fee of ten cents per ton for each ton of such concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs sold or offered for sale in the state of Iowa for use within this state; except that every manufacturer, importer, dealer or agent for any condimental, patented, proprietary or trade-marked stock or poultry foods, or both, shall pay to the state food and dairy commissioner, on or before the fifteenth day of July of each year, a license fee of one hundred ($100.00) dollars, in lieu of such inspection fee. Whenever the manufacturer or importer of such foods shall have paid the fee herein required, no other person or agent of such manufacturer or importer shall be required to pay such license fee; and shall affix to each lot shipped in bulk, and to each bag, barrel or package of such concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs, a tag, to be furnished by the said state food and dairy commissioner, stating that all charges specified in this section have been paid; provided, that the inspection fee herein required shall not apply to un-adulterated wheat, rye and buckwheat bran, nor wheat, rye and buckwheat middlings, nor to wheat, rye and buckwheat shorts manufactured in this state. The said state food and dairy commissioner is hereby empowered to prescribe the form of such tag and adopt such regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this act. Tags for use upon concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs shall be issued in denominations suitable for use with twenty-five, fifty and one hundred pounds net, except as herein-after provided; provided, that any dealer who sells at one time to any other person one ton or more of concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs, shall be held to have complied with the provisions of this section if he delivers to the purchaser the tax tags herein required, even though they may not be attached to the various packages. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 5.]

SEC. 5077-a11. Samples—analysis. The state food and dairy commissioner shall cause to be made analyses of all concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs and agricultural seeds sold or offered for sale in this state. Said state food and dairy commissioner is hereby authorized, in person or by deputy, to take for analysis a sample from any lot or package of concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs in this state, not exceeding two pounds in weight; and in case of agricultural seeds, a sample not exceeding four ounces in weight; but said sample shall be drawn or taken in the presence of the party or parties in interest, or their representative, and shall be taken from a parcel, lot or number of parcels which shall not be less than five per cent of the whole lot inspected, and shall be thoroughly mixed and divided into two samples and placed in glass or metal vessels carefully sealed and a label placed on each, stating the name or brand of the feeding-stuff, agricultural seeds or material sampled, the name of the party from whose stock the sample is drawn, and the date and place of taking such sample, and said label shall be signed by the said state food and dairy commissioner, or his authorized agent; or said sample may be taken in the presence of two disinterested witnesses. One of said duplicate samples shall be left on the premises of the party whose stock was sampled and the other retained by the state food and dairy commissioner for analysis and comparison with the certified statements required by sections one (1) and four (4) of this act. The result of the analysis of the sample, together with additional information, shall be published from time to time in bulletins issued by the state food and dairy commissioner upon approval of the executive council. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 6.]

SEC. 5077-a12. Analysis made on request of purchaser—fee. Any person purchasing any concentrated commercial feeding-stuffs or agricultural seeds in this state for his own use may submit fair samples of said feeding-stuffs or seeds to the state food and dairy commissioner, who, upon receipt of an analysis fee of fifty cents for each sample of agricultural seeds and one dollar for each sample of concentrated commercial feeding-stuff, shall cause an analysis of the same to be made. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 7.]

SEC. 5077-a13. Wheat or rye screenings. No person shall sell in ground form wheat or rye screenings containing cockle or other poisonous or deleterious substances. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 8.]

SEC. 5077-a14. Agricultural seeds defined. The term agricultural seeds, as used in this act, shall include the seeds of the red clover, white clover, alsike clover, alfalfa, Kentucky blue grass, timothy, brome grass, orchard grass, red top, meadow fescue, oat grass, rye grass and other grasses and forage plants, flax, rape and cereals. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 9.]

SEC. 5077-a15. Agricultural seeds to be free from impure seeds. No person shall sell, offer or expose for sale or distribution in this state for the purpose of seeding, any of the agricultural seeds as defined in section nine (9) of this act, unless the said seeds are free from the seeds of the following weeds: wild mustard or charlock (Brassica sinapistrum), quack grass (Agropyron repens), Canada thistle (Cnicus arvensis), wild oats (Avent fatua), clover and alfalfa dodder (Cuscuta epithimum), field dodder (Cuscuta arvensis), and corn cockle (Lychnis githago). [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 10.]

SEC. 5077-a16. Impurities in agricultural seeds. The seeds of the following weeds shall be considered as impurities in the agricultural seeds, as defined in section nine (9) of this act, sold, offered or exposed for sale within the state for the purpose of seeding: white cockle (Lychnis vespertina), nightflowering catchfly (Silene noctiflora), curled dock (Rumex crispus), smooth dock (Rumex altissimus), sheep sorrel (Rumex acetosella), yellow trefoil (Medicago lupulina), burr clover (Medicago denticulata), sweet clover (Melilotus alba and officinalis), black mustard (Brassica nigra), plantain, buckhorn (Plantago lanceolata), bracted plantain (Plantago aristata), bindweed (Convolvulus sepium), smooth crab grass (Panicum glabrum), common chickweed (Stellaria media). When such impurities or any of them are present in quantity exceeding a total of two per cent. of the weight of said agricultural seeds, the approximate percentage of each shall be plainly indicated in statement specified in section one (1) of this act. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 11.]

SEC. 5077-a17. Other impurities. Sand, dirt, chaff and foreign substances and seeds other than those specified in sections thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) or broken seed and seed not capable of germinating, shall be considered impurities when present in agricultural seeds sold, offered or exposed for sale in this state for the purpose of seeding, and when such impurities, or any of them, are present in quantity exceeding the standards of purity and viability authorized in section sixteen (16) of this act, the name and approximate percentage of each shall be plainly indicated in the statement specified in section one (1) of this act. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 12.]

SEC. 5077-a18. Mixed or adulterated seeds. For the purposes of this act seeds shall be deemed to be mixed or adulterated:

First. When orchard grass (Dactylis glomerata) seed contains ten per cent. or more by weight of meadow fescue (Festuca elatior pratensis) seed, or Italian rye grass (Lolium italicum) seed, or English rye grass (Lolium perenne) seed.

Second. When blue grass or Kentucky blue grass (Poa pratensis) seed contains five per cent. or more by weight of Canadian blue grass (Poa compressa) seed, red top chaff, red top (Agrostis alba) seed, or any other seed or foreign substance.

Third. When red clover (Trifolium pratense), mammoth red clover (Trifolium pratense var), or alfalfa (Medicago sativa), contains five per cent. or more by weight of yellow trefoil (Medicago lupulina), or sweet clover (Melilotus alba and M. officinalis) seed or burr clover (Medicago denticulata) seed.

Fourth. When rape (Brassica rapa) contains five per cent. or more of common mustard (Brassica Sinapistrum) or black mustard (B. nigra). [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 13.]

SEC. 5077-a19. Misbranded seed. For the purpose of this act, seed shall be deemed to be misbranded:

First. When meadow fescue (Festuca elatior pratensis), English rye grass (Lolium perenne) or Italian rye grass (Lolium italicum) is labeled or sold under the name of orchard grass (Dactylis glomerata) seed.

Second. When Canadian blue grass (Poa compressa) seed, red top (Agrostis alba) seed, or any other seed not blue grass seed, is sold under the name of Kentucky blue grass or blue grass (Poa pratensis) seed.

Third. When yellow trefoil (Medicago lupulina), burr clover (Medicago denticulata), or sweet clover (Melilotus alba) is sold under the name of clover, June clover, red clover (Trifolium pratense), medium red clover, small red clover, mammoth red clover, sapping clover, peavine clover (T. pratense var) or alfalfa (Medicago sativa) seed.

Fourth. When the seeds are not true to the name under which they are sold. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 14.]

SEC. 5077-a20. Exemptions. The provisions concerning agricultural seeds contained in this act shall not apply to:

First. Any person or persons growing or selling seeds for food purposes only, or having such seeds in possession for sale for such purposes.

Second. Any person selling seeds direct to merchants, to be cleaned or graded before being offered for sale for the purpose of seeding. This shall not, however, exempt the seller from the restrictions of section ten (10) of this act.

Third. Seed that is held in storage for the purpose of being recleaned, and which has not been offered, exposed or held in possession of or for sale for the purpose of seeding.

Fourth. Seed marked "not absolutely clean," and held or sold for export outside the state only.

Fifth. The sale of seed that is grown, sold and delivered by any farmer on his own premises for seeding by the purchaser himself, unless the purchaser of said seeds obtains from the seller at the time of the sale thereof a certificate that the said seed is supplied to the purchaser subject to the provisions of this act.

Sixth. Mixtures of seeds for lawn or pasture purposes. This shall not, however, exempt the seller of such mixtures of seeds from the restrictions of sections ten (10) and eleven (11) of this act. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 15.]

SEC. 5077-a21. Standards of purity. The following standards of purity (meaning freedom from weed seeds or other seeds) and viability are hereby fixed:

STANDARD OF PURITY AND VIABILITY OF AGRICULTURAL SEEDS.

Name of seed.	Per cent. of purity.	Per cent. of germinable seeds.
Alfalfa (medicago sativa)	96	80
Barley	98	90
Blue grass, Canadian (poa compressa)	90	45
Blue grass, Kentucky (poa pratensis)	80	45

[32 G. A., ch. 189, § 16.]

SEC. 5077-a22. Enforcement. It is hereby made the duty of the state food and dairy commissioner to enforce the provisions of this act. The inspectors, assistants and chemists appointed by the state food and dairy commissioner shall perform the same duties and have the same authority under this act as are prescribed by chapter one hundred and sixty-six (166), laws of the thirty-first general assembly, and the state food and dairy commissioner may appoint, with the approval of the executive council, such analysts and chemists as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 17.]

SEC. 5077-a23. Penalty. Whoever sells, offers or exposes for sale any of the seeds specified in sections thirteen (13) and fourteen (14) of this act which are mixed, adulterated or misbranded, or any agricultural seeds which do not comply with sections ten (10), eleven (11) and twelve (12) of this act, or who shall counterfeit or use a counterfeit of any of the tags prescribed by this act; or who shall prevent or attempt to prevent any inspector in the discharge of his duty from collecting samples; or who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars and costs of prosecution. Provided, that no one shall be convicted for violation of the provisions of section ten (10) of this act if he is able to show that the weed seeds named in section ten (10), are present in quantities not more than one in ten thousand, and that due diligence has been used to find and remove said seeds. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 18.]

SEC. 5077-a24. Appropriation—fees paid into state treasury. There is hereby appropriated, for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this act, a sum not exceeding three thousand ($3000) dollars annually. Such expense shall be paid by warrant of the state auditor upon bills filed by the state food and dairy commissioner with the executive council and approved by them. All fees collected under the provisions of this act shall be paid into the state treasury. [32 G. A., ch. 189, § 19.]

SEC. 5077-a25. Label required. No binder twine shall be sold, exposed or offered for sale within this state, except the same bears upon each ball a stamp or label truly stating the name of the manufacturer or importer and the number of feet to the pound in such ball: Provided that a deficiency not exceeding five per cent. in length stated on the stamp or label shall not be a violation hereof. [32 G. A., ch. 190, § 1.]

SEC. 5077-a26. Penalty. Any person, firm or corporation who violates the provisions of section one hereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100). [32 G. A., ch. 190, § 2.]

SEC. 5077-a27. What exempt—burden of proof. All binder twine purchased or received by wholesale or retail dealers of this state prior to September first, nineteen hundred and seven (1907), shall be exempt from the provisions of this act until November first nineteen hundred and eight; but the burden of proof that such twine was so purchased or received shall rest on said dealers. [32 G. A., ch. 190, § 3.]

CHAPTER 14.

OF NUISANCES AND ABATEMENT THEREOF.

SECTION 5078. What deemed nuisances.

Slaughtering animals and rendering tallow in a meat market located in the heart of a city from which offensive odors are emitted constitutes a nuisance which may be enjoined in equity. Rhoades v. Cook, 122-336.

Discharging refuse from glucose works into a running stream, so as to pollute and corrupt the water at a point lower down the stream and in another county from that where the glucose works are situated, will constitute a nuisance at the place where the water is thus polluted and corrupted. State v. Glucose Sugar Refin. Co., 117-524.

The fouling of the waters of a stream constitutes a public offense, and a city thus fouling a running stream with its sewage may be liable for nuisance to an abutting owner injured thereby. Vogt v. Grinnell, 133-363.

SEC. 5081. Penalty—abatement.

Where a justice of the peace had authority by statute to impose a penalty for maintaining a dam without a fishway, and in a proceeding to impose such penalty it was decided that there was no obligation to maintain a fishway, and this decision was not appealed from, held that it constituted an adjudication which would bar a subsequent proceeding against the owner to compel the construction of such fishway. State v. Meek, 112-338.

The obstruction of a private railway crossing constitutes a nuisance, and a tenant in possession may recover damages for such obstruction. Morrison v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 117-587.

In a civil action held error to tell the jury that any of the matters enumerated in this section, specifying them, would constitute a nuisance, there being no evidence as to the existence of some of the matters so specified. Hollenbeck v. Marion, 116-69.

CHAPTER 15.

OF LIBEL.

SECTION 5086. Definition.

The statutory definition of criminal libel is applicable in determining what language is libelous per se in a civil action. Morse v. Times-Republican Printing Co., 124-707.

The publication of any printed false statement with reference to another which has a tendency to degrade or injure him, to render him odious or bring him into public hatred or contempt or ridicule or to injure him in his business or trade or lead to his exclusion from social privileges, is libelous per se. Ibid.

The statutory definition of criminal libel is applicable in civil actions to recover damages for such libel. Sheibley v. Ashton, 130-195.

A publication of libelous matter by communicating it to the person defamed is sufficient to support a criminal prosecution for libel, but not a civil action for damages. Yousling v. Dare, 122-539.

It is not necessary that the publication charge the commission of a crime. Charges that defendant, who was a county superintendent, violated the rules of common decency in connection with the duties of his office, was irreligious, dishonest and contributed disgraceful matter for publication, held to be libelous. State v. Keenan, 111-286.

Libelous matter published in regard to a candidate for a public office is not privileged unless the publication is for the sole purpose of advising the electors of his character with reference to his qualifications for such office. Ibid.

The questions of justification and privilege are for the jury. Ibid.

Where the libelous matter charges dishonesty in regard to payment of debts, the prosecuting witness may testify as to his family, means and occupation as bearing on his ability to pay his debts, and tending to rebut the claim of dishonesty in not doing so. Ibid.

Where the libelous matter charges lewdness, held that the prosecuting witness might introduce testimony to show that there was no general talk in the community as to his being a person of lewd character. Ibid.

Subsequent publications of a libel are admissible for the purpose of showing motive for the first publication. State v. Heacock, 106-191.

Evidence is not admissible in behalf of defendant in a prosecution for libel to show the reputation of the defendant for truth and veracity. Ibid.

This statutory provision as to publication of a libel concerning a deceased person does not make the publisher of a libel concerning an adult deceased civilly liable to the mother of the deceased for shame, humiliation and mental anguish suffered by her on account thereof. Bradt v. New Nonpareil Co., 108-449.

In a civil action it is not proper to state to the jury all these different forms under which a libel may be committed, without regard to evidence supporting each of them. Wallace v. Homestead Co., 117-348.

It is essential that the author or publisher of the libelous article be distinctly designated, and also the party of whom it was written; but it is immaterial whether the expression "of and concerning" be employed if other words of like import are used. State v. Lomack, 130-79.

It is not essential that the falsity of the libelous matter be alleged, and if alleged such allegation will be treated as surplusage. Ibid.

Proof of the falsity of the publication is not essential to show malice. This may be inferred from the character of the accusation and the absence of a public or reasonable ground for making it. Ibid.

Publication of a libelous article by the pastor of a church is not privileged because authorized by its official board. Ibid.

Unwarranted statements made with reference to the defendant by the person as to whom the libelous publication was made will constitute no justification. Ibid.

SEC. 5088. Truth given in evidence.

Evidence of good faith is admissible, not as a defense in itself, but only as an element going to make up the defense of qualified privilege, and where a newspaper publisher made libelous statements with reference to a candidate for the office of district judge, and through his newspaper published such statements outside of the judicial district within which the person referred to was a candidate, held, that he had exceeded his privilege, and that it constituted no defense. State v. Haskins, 109-656.

Where publication of libelous matter is shielded by no privilege, the defendant cannot exonerate himself by showing a belief on his part in the truth of the charge. Ibid.

SEC. 5091. Jury determine law and fact.

The "direction of the court" referred to in this section is the instruction or charge of the court to the jury. The jury is not required to determine all legal questions which may arise on the trial as to the sufficiency of the evidence, etc., but only such matters as it may consider in deliberating upon a verdict. The jury has not merely the power but also the right to determine the law which should govern the verdict, even though a decision in conflict with the charge of the court may be reached. The opinion of the court must be regarded as advisory and not conclusive as to the duty of the jury. State v. Heacock, 161-191.

It is not error to instruct that if the jury can say on their oaths that they know the law better than the court does they have the right to determine the law as contrary to the instructions of the court. Ibid.

Although the jurors are judges of the law in a prosecution for libel, there may be a reversal for errors of law on the part of the court in giving instructions. State v. Lomack, 130-79.

CHAPTER 15-A.

OF HABITUAL CRIMINALS.

SECTION 5091-a. Habitual criminal—punishment. Whoever has been twice convicted of crime, sentenced and committed to prison, in this or any other state, or by the United States, or once in this state and once at least in any other state, or by the United States, for terms of not less than three years each shall, upon conviction of a felony committed in this state after the taking effect of this act, be deemed to be an habitual criminal, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of not less than twenty-five years, provided that no greater punishment is otherwise provided by statute, in which case the law creating the greater punishment shall govern, and further provided, that if the person so convicted shall show, to the satisfaction of the court before whom such conviction was had, that he was released from imprisonment, upon either of said sentences, upon a pardon granted for the reason that he was innocent, such conviction and sentence shall not be considered as such under this act. [29 G. A., ch. 152, § 1.]

SEC. 5091-b. Competent and prima facie evidence. On the trial of any cause, under the provisions of this act, a duly authenticated copy of the former judgment and commitment, from any court in which such judgment and commitment was had, for either of the said crimes formerly committed by the party indicted under this act, shall be competent and prima facie evidence of such former judgment and commitment, and may be used in evidence upon the trial of said cause. [29 G. A., ch. 152, § 2.]

TITLE XXV.

OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF PUBLIC OFFENSES.

SECTION 5092. Divisions of.

To constitute an offense under the statute it is necessary that the act be one which falls within the definition of either a felony or misdemeanor. State v. Dailey, 127-652.

SEC. 5096. All offenses bailable except. All defendants are bailable both before and after conviction, by sufficient surety, except for offenses punishable with death under the laws of the state when the proof is evident or the presumption great. No defendant convicted of murder in the first degree, or of the crime of treason shall be admitted to bail. [17 G. A., ch. 103, § 1; C., '73, §§ 3845, 4107; R., 4188; C., '51, § 2565.] [29 G. A., ch. 153, § 1.]

[The paragraphs in second column of notes to this section in the code under the heading, "Knowledge of falsity," belong under code § 5296. The last sentence of the code section is in conflict with § 5442.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF MAGISTRATES AND PEACE OFFICERS AND THEIR POWERS.

SECTION 5099. Peace officers.

A deputy city marshal is not a peace officer. Twinam v. Lucas County, 104-231.

CHAPTER 5.

OF VAGRANTS.

SECTION 5119. Who deemed.

While disorderly persons are declared to be vagrants, vagrancy is not made punishable as a crime. And to charge one with being a disorderly person does not charge him with a crime. State v. Dailey, 127-652.

SEC. 5134. Who deemed tramp.

All vagrants are not tramps, within the definition of Code § 5137 with reference to limitation of fees of officers in tramp cases. Des Moines v. Polk County, 107-525.

CHAPTER 7.

OF LOCAL JURISDICTION OF PUBLIC OFFENSES.

SECTION 5154. District court.

In every criminal case jurisdiction must be shown, and where there is a dispute in the evidence as to the venue the jury must determine that dispute, the same as it does any other issue of fact. State v. Spayde, 110-726.

Where there is no direct instruction as to venue in connection with the commission of the principal crime charged, but full instruction with reference thereto in connection with the charge as to included crimes, held that there was sufficient instruction as to venue in the absence of any request for instructions on the subject. State v. Icenbice, 126-16.

SEC. 5157. Offense partly in county.

In prosecutions for embezzlement, the venue can always be laid in the county where the conversion actually took place. If the charge is against an agent who has failed to account, the prosecution may be in the county where it was his duty to account under his contract. State v. Hengen, 106-711.

In a prosecution for embezzlement the venue is in the county where the employe was under obligation to account to his employer. State v. Maxwell, 113-369.

When a public offense is committed partly in one county and partly in another, the court first taking jurisdiction holds it to the end, and it is erroneous for the first court to dismiss the prosecution and hold the prisoner to await a warrant from the other county. State v. Spayde, 110-726.

This provision is applicable to the crime of cheating by false pretenses committed by mailing a communication in one county to a person who is in another county, and who there receives and acts upon it. State v. Gibson, 132-53.

Where glucose works are maintained in one county, discharging refuse matter into the water of a river so as to render it corrupt and polluted, not only at the place of such discharge, but at a point lower down the river in another county, held that the court of either county had jurisdiction in a prosecution for nuisance. State v. Glucose Sugar Refin. Co., 117-524.

SEC. 5158. Near boundary of two counties.

As to a crime committed in one county but within five hundred yards of the boundary line of an adjoining county, the court which first obtains jurisdiction of the person accused should retain it to the exclusion of the court of the other county. Therefore where a party was arrested upon a warrant issued by a justice of the peace of Iowa county upon the charge of having committed a public offense in Keokuk county but within five hundred yards of the line between such counties, and he was bound over to await the action of the grand jury of Iowa county, held, that he could not subsequently be indicted by the grand jury of Keokuk county, for the same offense and might by habeas corpus be released from imprisonment under such indictment. Carter v. Barlow, 105-78.

Under an indictment charging an offense to have been committed in the county, evidence is admissible of its commission within five hundred yards of the boundary line in an adjoining county, but an indictment averring the commission of the offense in Iowa county or in Keokuk county, within five hundred yards of the south line of Iowa county, "as nearly as the grand jury know and can state," is fatally defective. State v. Daily, 113-362.

CHAPTER 8.

OF THE TIME OF COMMENCING CRIMINAL ACTIONS.

SECTION 5164. What within eighteen months.

In a prosecution for adultery the state may prove the offense if committed at any time within eighteen months before the finding of the indictment, and is not limited to the time specified in the indictment. State v. Smith, 108-440.

The court should instruct specifically as to the necessity of showing the commission of the offense within the statutory period of limitation prior to the finding of the indictment. State v. Kunhi, 119-461.

The statute of limitations in criminal

SEC. 5165. Three years.

The defendant cannot complain of the action of the court in limiting the evidence to criminal acts within two years of the cases refers to the finding of the indictment and not to the beginning of the prosecution. State v. Disbrow, 130-19.

finding of the indictment where the statute fixes the period of limitation at three years. State v. Wilson, 124-264.

SEC. 5167. Defendant out of state.

To bring a case within the provisions of this section it is sufficient to allege in an indictment that during the necessary portion of the time which has expired after the commission of the offense as charged, defendant was a non-resident of the state and living beyond its limits. During such time defendant could not be publicly resident within the state. State v. Soper, 118-1.

CHAPTER 9.

OF FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE.

SECTION 5172. Requisition from another state.

One who is charged by preliminary information with a crime which is extraditable under a treaty with a foreign country may properly be brought back for trial under such charge and tried under an indictment which, though in different terms, charges the same offense as that charged in the information. State v. Rowe, 104-323.

CHAPTER 11.

OF ARREST.

SECTION 5194. What constitutes.

As to liability of an officer for causing death in making an arrest, the law exacts no more than that, in what he does, he employs no more force than to him, acting as an ordinarily prudent person, would seem reasonable and apparently necessary under the circumstances for the purpose of effecting the arrest, and if death results, even in making an arrest for a misdemeanor, if he has not employed a deadly weapon in a deadly manner, the result may be excusable as accidental. State v. Phillips, 119-652.

SEC. 5196. Peace officer—with and without warrant.

To justify an arrest without warrant for an offense not committed in the presence of the officer, it must appear that such offense has in fact been committed, and that the officer has reasonable ground to believe that the persons arrested have committed it. If no public offense has in fact been committed, the action of the officer in making the arrest is without authority, and he is liable for false imprisonment. Snyder v. Thompson, 112 N. W. 239.

SEC. 5198. Oral order of magistrate.

An oral direction to make an arrest for an offense not committed in the presence of the magistrate making such order will not protect the officer for an arrest made without warrant, where no crime has in fact been committed. Snyder v. Thompson, 112 N. W. 239.

SEC. 5199. Manner.

A failure of the officer making the arrest to inform the person to be arrested of the intention to arrest him, of the cause of arrest, and of his authority to make it, will render the officer liable for damages suffered by reason of such arrest. Stewart v. Feeley, 118-524.

An officer who makes an arrest without warrant, and does not take the person arrested before a magistrate and make complaint before him, becomes liable for the wrongful arrest. Ibid.

No particular form of words is prescribed by the statute for conveying to the person being arrested information as to the intention to arrest him and the offense with which he is charged. But if private persons, acting without a warrant, even though in good faith, and with no intention of violating the law, so act as to impress the persons whom they are assaulting with the idea that unlawful violence instead of a lawful arrest is intended, the persons to be arrested will not be presumed to have understood that an arrest was intended. State v. Phillips, 118-660.

If an officer makes an arrest upon insufficient information, he acts at his peril and assumes the risk of being held in damages to an innocent person thus injured. But if a felony has in fact been committed, and the officer arrests without a warrant the party actually guilty thereof, without using undue violence, he commits no wrong. Ibid.

SEC. 5200. When resisted.

When a prisoner is under arrest the officer may use reasonable force for the purpose of preventing boisterous and disorderly conduct by him and the disturbance of persons in the vicinity by violent and abusive language. McNally v. Arnold, 127-437.

And see note to § 5194.

CHAPTER 12.OF PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS.*SECTION 5227. Minutes of examination.

The minutes of the evidence of a witness on preliminary examination are not admissible on the trial of the case, either as original evidence or for the purpose of impeaching the testimony of the same witness given on the trial. State v. Reinheimer, 109-624.

As the statute does not require the reading to or signing by the witness of the minutes of his testimony on the preliminary examination, the minutes of such testimony cannot be used on the trial for purposes of impeachment. State v. Hoffman, 112 N. W. 103.

The testimony of a witness before the magistrate may be shown for the purpose of impeachment, but it is not necessarily substantive proof of the commission of the crime. State v. Carpenter, 124-5.

The examination may be taken and certified by one who is not an official reporter. State v. Turner, 114-426.

SEC. 5228. Certificate.

Although the minutes of the preliminary examination are not certified as provided in this section, if the grand jury acts thereon and returns proper memorandum thereof with the indictment, defendant cannot object to the examination of the witnesses whose testimony is thus returned and whose names are endorsed on the indictment. State v. Turner, 114-426.

SEC. 5230. Commitment.

The grand jury may return a verdict upon the minutes of the evidence taken before the magistrate, without calling or examining the witnesses, and the mere informality of the return of the minutes of the evidence taken by the magistrate will not affect the validity of the indictment nor prevent the calling of the witnesses for the state who are examined before such magistrate. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

SEC. 5237. In case not triable on indictment.

The provision that on preliminary examination the defendant may be committed for trial before a justice of the peace for an offense not indictable is not applicable to a hearing on habeas corpus in which the person in custody asks to be discharged for an indictable offense. Myers v. Clearman, 125-461.

CHAPTER 13.OF IMPANELING THE GRAND JURY.

SECTION 5240. Drawing. At the term of court at which grand jurors are required to appear, the names of the twelve persons constituting the panel of the grand jury shall, on the second day of each term of court, unless otherwise ordered by the court or judge, be placed by the clerk in a box, and after thoroughly mixing the same, he shall draw therefrom seven names, and the persons so drawn shall constitute the grand jury for that term. Should any of the persons so drawn be excused or fail to attend on said second day of the court, the clerk shall draw other names until the seven grand jurors are secured. If, for any reason, the number of grand jurors required is not secured from the twelve persons so constituting such panel, the clerk shall draw from the grand jury list, provided for by section three hundred and thirty-eight of the code such number of names as the court may direct, and from the persons whose names are so drawn the panel of the grand jury for the term shall be filled, and the court shall issue a venire to secure their attendance. [21 G. A., ch. 42, § 3; C., '73, §§ 4255-6; R., §§ 4608-9; C., '51, § 2881.] [27 G. A., ch. 114, § 1.]

Failure to fill the panel on an objection to an individual grand juror being sustained, cannot be interposed as a ground for setting aside the indictment. State v. Wheeler, 129-100.

The impaneling of a grand jury is not rendered unlawful by the fact that it takes place in a room in the courthouse other than that usually occupied by the court and to which, for lack of sufficient accommodations, some persons are not able to gain access. State v. Richards, 126-497.

When one grand jury has been regularly and properly discharged and an emergency arises later in the term requiring the services of a grand jury, the court may, instead of re-calling the discharged grand jury, call in the entire panel and select a new grand jury. State v. Disbrow, 130-19.

It is no objection to the grand jury as finally organized that the court excused two of the persons examined from duty before seven names had been drawn of persons who should serve as the grand jury. State v. Johnson, 111 N. W. 827.

SEC. 5241. Challenge to panel—motion.

The objection that two members of the grand jury were residents of the same township will be waived if not urged before pleading to the indictment unless it appears that defendant did not know of the irregularity before pleading. State v. Kouhns, 103-720.

The objection of defendant that his case was re-submitted to a grand jury without giving him an opportunity to challenge the grand jurors is one which cannot be raised by motion in arrest of judgment. It should be taken by plea in abatement, or motion to set aside or quash the indictment. State v. Brown, 128-24.

An objection to the panel which might have been raised by the defendant, bound over to appear, cannot be taken advantage of on motion in arrest of judgment. State v. McPherson, 126-77.

SEC. 5243. Grounds for challenge.

The fact that a grand juror has formed or expressed an unqualified opinion is not recognized as a sufficient ground for setting aside the indictment. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

Where the indictment is set aside and the charge is presented to a second grand jury, the defendant may properly challenge for cause any member of the second grand jury who was a member of and participated in the finding of the indictment by the first grand jury. State v. Bullard, 127-168.

An opinion as to guilt which will disqualify a trial juror will also disqualify a grand juror. Ibid.

Discrepancy between the real name of a juror called and his name as appearing on the jury list, if constituting a ground of challenge, should be ascertained on the preliminary examination, and cannot be afterwards made the subject of complaint. State v. Matheson, 130-440.

SEC. 5246. To individual juror. If a challenge to an individual grand juror be allowed, he shall not be present at or take any part in the consideration of the charge against the defendant. If a challenge to the panel is allowed, or if by reason of challenges to individual grand jurors being allowed, or if for any cause at any time, the grand jury is reduced to a less number than seven, a new grand jury shall be impaneled to inquire into the charge against the defendant in whose behalf the challenge to the panel has been allowed, or the panel of the jury so reduced below the number required by law shall be filled as the case may be. If a challenge is allowed to the panel the names of jurors required to impanel a new jury shall be drawn from the grand jury list. If such grand jury has been reduced to a less number than seven by reason of challenges to individual jurors being allowed, or from any other cause, the additional jurors required to fill the panel shall be summoned, first, from such of the twelve jurors originally summoned which were not drawn on the grand jury as first impaneled, or excused, and if they are exhausted, the additional number required shall be drawn from the grand jury list and the court shall, when necessary, issue a venire to secure the attendance of such additional jurors. The persons so summoned shall serve only in the case, or cases, in which, by reason of challenges, or other causes, the regular panel is set aside or is insufficient in number to find an indictment. [C., '73 § 4264; R., § 4617; C., '51, § 2888.] [27 G. A., ch. 114, § 2.]

Where a grand juror has been directed on account of challenge for cause not to take part in considering the case, it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that he obeyed the direction, although as foreman he has signed the endorsement on the back of the indictment. State v. Lightfoot, 107-344.

Where a challenge to an individual grand juror has been allowed and he does not take part in the finding of the indictment, which is concurred in by a sufficient number of grand jurors, the objection that the place of the juror challenged has not been filled will not be a ground for setting aside the indictment. State v. Wheeler, 129-100.

Error in failing to fill the place of one of the grand jurors excused on challenge of the defendant is waived by going to trial on the indictment, and cannot afterwards be raised by habeas corpus proceedings for release from the sentence imposed as the result of a trial on such indictment. Busse v. Barr, 132-463.

SEC. 5252. Discharge.

It is not error to re-convene the grand jury after dismissing it for the term on the completion of the business pending. State v. Phillips, 119-652.

CHAPTER 14.

OF THE DUTIES OF THE GRAND JURY.

SECTION 5254. Evidence.

Failure of the grand jury to swear a witness who testifies will not authorize the setting aside of the indictment on motion, under Code § 5319. State v. Easton, 113-516.

The receiving of incompetent evidence is not a ground for setting aside the indictment when found. State v. DeGroat, 122-661.

The fact that a witness testifies before the grand jury does not preclude the state from impeaching the testimony of such witness given on the trial in behalf of the defendant. State v. Brown, 128-24.

SEC. 5256. Clerk. The court may appoint as clerk of the grand jury a competent person who is not a member thereof. The following oath must be administered to him: "You solemnly swear that you will faithfully and impartially perform the duties of clerk of the grand jury, that you will not reveal to any one its proceedings or the testimony given before it, and will abstain from expressing any opinion upon any question before it, to or in the presence or hearing of the grand jury or any member thereof." Such clerk shall strictly abstain from expressing an opinion upon any question before the body, either to or in the presence or hearing of it or any member thereof, and shall not be present when any vote is being taken upon the finding of an indictment, and shall receive compensation at the rate of two dollars per day for time actually and necessarily employed in the performance of the duties prescribed in this chapter. Provided, however, that in all counties having a population of fifty thousand (50,000) or more inhabitants the court may, if it deems it necessary, appoint as clerk of the grand jury a competent shorthand reporter, and such clerk shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by the court at the time of the appointment, but said compensation shall not exceed four dollars ($4.00) per day, for each day actually and necessarily employed in the performance of the duties herein defined. [25 G. A., ch. 71; 22 G. A., ch. 38; C., '73, § 4275; R., § 4629.] [30 G. A., ch. 138.]

The clerk may be called as a witness to state what was testified to by a witness before the grand jury with a view of im-peaching the evidence of such witness given on the trial. State v. McPherson, 114-492.

SEC. 5258. Minutes to be kept. The clerk of the grand jury shall take and preserve minutes of the proceedings and of the evidence given before it, except the votes of its individual members on finding an indictment. When the evidence is taken, it shall be read over to and signed by the witness. When an indictment is found, all minutes and exhibits relating thereto shall be returned therewith and filed by the clerk of the court. [25 G. A., ch. 71; 22 G. A., ch. 38; C., '73, § 4275; R., § 4629.] [28 G. A., ch. 134, § 1.]

Minutes of the evidence of a witness, signed by him, may be introduced in a civil suit by the opposite party as declarations against interest. Steele Smith Groc. Co. v. Pottthast, 109-413.

Where the minutes are attached to the indictment and filed with it, that is sufficient, but they are no part of the indictment, and if not filed with the indictment should be separately filed. Failure, however, to mark the minutes which were duly taken and returned, as filed will not warrant the exclusion of the testimony of the witnesses whose testimony is so returned. State v. Doss, 110-713.

The requirement that exhibits be returned with the indictment and filed with the clerk was evidently intended to cure a defect in the statute theretofore existing. Failure to thus return exhibits is not made a ground for setting aside the indictment. This statutory provision is directory only. State v. O'Malley, 132-696.

The requirement that the minutes be signed by the witnesses respectively is also merely directory. Ibid.

The minutes of the testimony of a witness before the grand jury read over to and signed by him may be used on the trial of the case for the purpose of impeaching his testimony. State v. Hoffman, 112 N. W. 103.

It is not improper for the prosecuting attorney to make use of the minutes of the evidence taken before the grand jury for the purpose of framing questions as a basis for impeachment of a witness. State v. Woodard, 132-675.

SEC. 5260. Member as witness.

The provisions that a grand juror may be a witness under this section precludes the notion of an absolutely impartial trial before the grand jury. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

SEC. 5268. Secrecy of proceedings—exception.

Possibly the cases in which the grand jury may be required to disclose testimony given before the grand jury, as authorized by the common law, are limited to the two specified in this section. But as there is no statutory provision with reference to testimony by the clerk appointed under Code § 5256, such clerk may testify as to proceedings before the grand jury whenever necessary in the administration of justice, as was the rule at common law. Therefore, held, that the clerk might be required to disclose the evidence of a witness before the grand jury for the purpose of impeaching the testimony of such witness on the trial. State v. McPherson, 114-492.

SEC. 5272. Minutes of preliminary examination—resubmission.

The statute does not require that the substance of the evidence of the witness be preserved, but only that a brief minute thereof be made. State v. Wrand, 108-73.

Defendant cannot object that the transcript of the evidence taken in the preliminary examination, instead of minutes thereof, is returned with the indictment, nor that the minutes of the preliminary examination, acted on by the grand jury, were not certified as required by Code § 5228. State v. Turner, 114-426.

Where the grand jury finds an indictment on the evidence taken before the committing magistrate, the informality of the return of such evidence by the magistrate will not vitiate the indictment, nor prevent the examination of the witnesses for the state who were examined before such magistrate. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

Where a case is resubmitted to the grand jury there is no final judgment from which the state may appeal. State v. Evans, 111-80.

CHAPTER 15.OF THE FINDING AND PRESENTATION OF INDICTMENT.*SECTION 5274. How found—indorsement.

The endorsement "a true bill" must be made by the foreman, although he may not have approved the indictment or be qualified to act as grand juror in the case. And it will not be presumed from his endorsement that he disregarded an injunction of the court not to take part in considering the case. State v. Lightfoot, 107-344.

Where five grand jurors have concurred in the finding of the indictment, the fact that a challenge has been sustained as to one member of the panel who has not taken part in the finding of the indictment, but whose place has not been filled, is not ground for setting aside. State v. Wheeler, 129-100.

Although one grand jury fails to act upon a charge submitted to it, the same charge may be taken up by a subsequent grand jury and an indictment found, although no order re-submitting the case to the second grand jury is made. State v. Brown, 128-24.

Whether the copy of the indictment delivered to the defendant is a correct copy is a matter to be determined by the trial court when any question is raised with reference thereto. State v. Hatlestad, 132-188.

Further as to furnishing defendant with a copy of the indictment, see Constitution, Art. I, § 10, and notes.

SEC. 5274-a. Repeal—how found—indorsement. That section five thousand two hundred and seventy-four (5274) of the code be, and the same is hereby repealed and the following enacted in lieu thereof:

An indictment cannot be found without the concurrence of five grand jurors. Every indictment must be indorsed "A true bill" and the indorsement signed by the foreman of the grand jury. [27 G. A., ch. 115, § 1.]

SEC. 5275. Private prosecutor.

Where an indictment is not endorsed as found at the instance of a private prosecutor, costs cannot be taxed to the person at whose instance the indictment was found. State v. McAllister, 107-641.

The basis of the court's right to tax the costs of a criminal prosecution to an individual as prosecuting witness is the action of the grand jury in returning the fact that an indictment is found at the instance of such person. When the grand jury fails to make a finding and endorsement of that fact, as provided for by statute, the court lacks jurisdiction to tax the costs to a person as prosecutor. McAllister v. Johnson, 108-42.

SEC. 5276. Names of witnesses indorsed.

The evidence of a witness before the grand jury may be proven by persons who heard such evidence, the minutes of the grand jury not being competent evidence as to the fact. State v. Porter, 105-677.

The minutes of the evidence need not be attached to the indictment, but if so attached and filed, that is sufficient. State v. Doss, 110-713.

Where the minutes of the evidence before the committing magistrate are presented to the grand jury and acted upon by them the names of the witnesses examined before the magistrate and on whose testimony the indictment is found should be endorsed on the back thereof. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

It is not necessary to return with the indictment documentary evidence which was before the grand jury nor is it required that such evidence be noted on the indictment. State v. Boomer, 103-106.

Documents which are admissible in evidence as against the defendant may be so admitted although not referred to in the minutes of the evidence or returned with the indictment. State v. Mulhern, 130-46.

A document may be introduced in evidence without notice although it has never been before the grand jury. State v. Harris, 122-78.

Where defendant has been furnished with a copy of the indictment and of the minutes of the evidence, the fact that the prosecuting attorney has been allowed to take the indictment from the files and to keep it in his possession for a time will not constitute reversible error. State v. McClain, 130-73.

SEC. 5277. Minutes of evidence.

This section does not preclude the use of the minutes of the evidence before the grand jury for the purpose of establishing the declarations of a witness against his interest. Steele Smith Groc. Co. v. Pott-hast, 109-413.

Where a copy of the indictment is delivered to an attorney for the defendant, there is sufficient compliance with the constitutional requirement that defendant be furnished with a copy of the indictment against him. State v. McClain, 130-73.

CHAPTER 16.OF THE INDICTMENT.*SECTION 5279. Defined.

The minutes of evidence are not a part of the indictment, but are to be separately filed. If, however, it appears that such minutes were in fact returned with the indictment and attached to it when filed by the clerk that is sufficient. State v. Doss 110-713.

SEC. 5280. What must contain.

The words employed by charging the crime are not material if the charge is in ordinary and concise language and sufficiently specific. State v. Lomack, 130-79.

Accusations of crime must be so plain, clear and unambiguous that the accused may not be misled to his prejudice concerning the material facts relied upon as constituting such alleged offense. State v. McKinney, 130-370.

The purpose of these statutory provisions as to the sufficiency of indictments is to dispense with those technical rules of the common law which sometimes prevented the disposition of cases upon their merits, wherever the same can be done without prejudice to the rights of the parties. State v. Fisher, 106-658.

Therefore, held, that in an indictment for larceny of money, it was sufficient to describe the property as "twenty-two dollars and fifty cents in lawful money of the United States of the value of twenty-two dollars and fifty cents. Ibid.

Bank notes are commonly regarded as lawful money. Under an indictment charging embezzlement of certain money, proof of the embezzlement of bank notes of a corresponding amount is admissible. State v. Finnegean, 127-287.

An indictment under the statute defining the offense of procuring an abortion should negative the exception found in the statute of cases where miscarriage is necessary to save the woman's life. State v. Aiken, 109-643.

SEC. 5281. Form.

The statute does not require the signature of the county attorney to an indictment, and the fact that it is signed by an

SEC. 5282. Direct and certain.

The offense must be charged with such certainty and in such manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended. If the indictment is so broad and general in its terms that the accused may be put upon trial for any one of two or more distinct and independent criminal acts, it is not in compliance with the statute. State v. McKinney, 130-370.

Where the statute makes an act criminal when done maliciously, it is not sufficient to charge that it was done unlawfully and wilfully. State v. Lightfoot, 107-344.

Where the offense involves the element of knowledge, it is not sufficient that the act is charged to have been unlawfully

SEC. 5284. Must charge but one offense.

Duplicity: It is an error to allege more than one transaction in an indictment charging an offense which is not a continuing offense. State v. Ashpole, 127-680.

Where several acts are enumerated by the statute disjunctively as constituting an offense, they may be conjunctively alleged without duplicity. State v. Wick, 130-31.

Where in the second count of an indictment for conspiracy it was recited

If the facts stated do not constitute a crime, the indictment cannot be aided by intendment, or its omissions, supplied by construction. State v. Jamison, 110-337.

An indictment is sufficient if drawn in such manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is meant. State v. Pickney, 111-34.

In charging assault with intent to commit rape it is not necessary to specify the method or means of the assault. State v. Turner, 114-426.

Much of what was required in an indictment at common law is dispensed with under our statute. It is now only necessary to set out the offense in ordinary and concise language, and in such manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is meant, and, held, that in an indictment for assault with intent to commit murder it is not necessary to state the instrument or means used to effectuate the purpose. State v. Shunka, 116-206.

assistant to the county attorney does not render it invalid. State v. Mathews, 133-398.

or wilfully done. State v. Perry, 109-353.

Where in two counts the offense of keeping a liquor nuisance was so charged as that there might be a conviction under one count which could not be sustained under the other, held that the indictment was not sufficiently direct and certain. State v. Schuler, 109-111.

In an indictment for having possession of burglar's tools the defendant should be advised by the averments as to what particular tools he is charged with having in possession. State v. Erdlen, 127-620.

The facts constituting the crime of embezzlement must be so stated as to distinguish it from the crime of larceny. State v. Finnegean, 127-287.

that "the grand jury . . . with no intent or purpose of charging any offense or crime other than the offense and crime charged in count one above, but solely in order to meet the testimony, further alleges," etc., held that this recital sufficiently showed that the second count was simply a different form of charging the same conspiracy charged in the first count. State v. Caine, 111 N. W. 443.

The offense may be charged in different counts, differing from each other for the purpose of meeting the evidence in the case. Thus it is not improper to charge in one count rape committed upon a child under the age of consent, and in the second count rape upon the same person, alleged to be naturally imbecile. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

An indictment for rape which also charges an assault as a part of that crime is not objectionable for duplicity. State v. Peterson, 110-647.

It does not constitute duplicity in an indictment to charge the defendant with committing a criminal act, and also with conniving at and encouraging such act. State v. Easton, 113-516.

In an indictment for obtaining a signature by false pretenses, different and even inconsistent means of accomplishing the object may be charged in the indictment without rendering it objectionable on the ground of duplicity. State v. Tripp, 113-698.

Where an indictment for using false weights under Code § 5044, which does not describe a continuing offense, alleged the use of such false weights in weighing divers cattle and hogs with intent to defraud divers citizens, held, that the in-

SEC. 5285. Time.

The fact that the evidence points to the commission of the crime at a particular date does not render an instruction erroneous, which tells the jury that the crime need not be proven to have been committed on the day alleged and that it is sufficient if it is proven to have been committed within the statutory period of limitations. State v. Hayes, 105-82.

If time is necessary to be considered in determining the jurisdiction of the court, it is a material ingredient of the offense, and where the jurisdiction of the court to punish the offense charged is acquired by

SEC. 5286. Name of person injured.

An erroneous allegation as to the name of the person injured will not vitiate the indictment. So, held, where the indictment charged larceny of property from a corporation but did not allege the fact of its incorporation. State v. Fogerty, 105-32.

Erroneously naming the person injured will not be a ground for striking out evidence which relates to the real person intended where the defendant is in no way prejudiced by the variance. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

If the indictment charges an offense, and, from the facts and evidence, the court is satisfied that defendant was not misled, the giving of an unauthorized name to the person against whom the crime was committed is immaterial, and facts outside the indictment may be considered in dictment was bad for duplicity. State v. Jameson, 117-312.

Election: Where one offense is charged, and the evidence tends to show more than one to have been committed within the statutory period of limitation, the accused has the right to know upon which the prosecution will rely for conviction. State v. King, 117-484.

In a prosecution for adultery, where the evidence tends to show continuous adulterous relation, the state should not be required to select one particular occasion and confine the evidence to that occasion. State v. Higgins, 121-19.

The crimes of embezzlement and larceny are essentially different in character, and cannot be charged in separate counts of an indictment. If so charged the state should be required upon motion to elect upon which count it will proceed. State v. Finnegean, 127-287.

Where the offense is not a continuing one, and the evidence introduced tends to show distinct transactions, the defendant has the right to require an election on the part of the state as to which transaction is relied upon. State v. Jamison, 110-337.

a statute, the time of the criminal act charged in the indictment must be so alleged as to show that it was committed after the statute took effect. State v. Dale, 110-215.

In a prosecution for adultery the state may prove the act charged as committed at any time within the statutory period of limitation. State v. Smith, 108-440.

In a prosecution for perjury it is not necessary to prove the specific time alleged in the indictment. State v. John, 124-230.

determining whether the defendant understood the specific charge intended to be made. So, held, where in an indictment for murder of an unnamed bastard the grand jury without any authority designated the bastard by a name compounded of the names of its parents. State v. Cunningham, 111-233.

The erroneous statement of the name of the owner of the premises where burglary is committed will not be fatal. State v. Wrand, 108-73.

The fact that an indictment for larceny lays the ownership of the property stolen jointly in the owners thereof, whereas it is owned by them in severalty, will not be a fatal defect. State v. Congrove, 109-66.

And see notes to § 5289.

SEC. 5288. Words of statute.

It is sufficient to follow the language of the statute where the statute so far individuates the offense that the offender has proper notice from the statutory terms of the particular crime charged. State v. Porter, 105-677; State v. Turner, 113-426; State v. Kendig, 133-164; State v. Cummings, 128-522.

An indictment which charges an offense in the language of the statute is sufficient in all cases where the statutory definition states the material facts constituting the unlawful act. Sate v. Martin, 125-715.

An indictment is sufficient if it charges the offense in the language of the statute when that shows the material facts which constitute the offense. So, held, in regard to an indictment charging indecent exposure of the person. State v. Banguess, 106-107.

An indictment following the statutory language in describing the offense is sufficient where the language used concretely points out with particularity the offense intended to be charged, and no further description is needed to advise the accused of the precise nature and character of the crime for the commission of which he is called to answer. But, held, that in an indictment for having in possession burglar's tools a particular description of the tools was essential. State v. Erdlen, 127-620.

If an act of a particular description is made criminal nothing further need be alleged in the indictment than the doing of the specific act. Under such circumstances, it is sufficient to follow the language of the statutes in describing the act charged. State v. Hoffman, 112 N. W. 103.

While an indictment following the language of the statute may not be sufficient, in some cases, for the reason that the statute does not set forth all the elements necessary to constitute the offense, yet, where the acts constituting the offense are stated, and every element of the crime appears, the indictment will be sufficient. State v. Dankwardt, 107-704.

In an indictment for incest it is sufficient to use the language of the statute and it is not necessary to allege knowledge of the relationship. State v. Rennick, 127-294.

While it is generally sufficient to charge an offense in the language of the statute this is not the rule when the language does not necessarily charge the offense named. State v. Wasson, 126-320.

The general rule as to exceptions and provisos is that where the exception or proviso forms a portion of the description of the offense so that the ingredients thereof cannot be accurately and definitely stated, if the exception or proviso is omitted, then it is necessary that such exception or proviso be negated. But where the exception is separable from the description and is not an ingredient thereof it need not be noticed in the accusation, but is a matter of defense. State v. Kendig, 133-164.

SEC. 5289. What indictment must show.

In general: The general tendency is to disregard objections which go to matters of mere form and not a substantial right. State v. Martin, 125-715.

An indictment is properly to be construed in the sense in which the party framing it must be understood to have used it, if he intended his accusation to be consistent. State v. Caine, 111 N. W. 443.

It is unnecessary to charge an act as "felonious" if it is made a felony by statute; but the unnecessary use of such word does not affect the sufficiency of the indictment. It is not to be regarded as descriptive of the act in such sense that it must be proved as alleged. State v. Judd, 132-296.

An indictment cannot be aided by indictment. The essential facts must be set out and averred. State v. Ashpole, 127-680.

An indictment under a statute may be sufficient although it does not follow the exact language of the statute in describing the offense, if the words used are equivalent to those employed in the statute. State v. Dickerhoff, 127-404.

Section applied. State v. Wood, 112-411; State v. Ryan, 113-536.

As to following the language of the statute in charging an offense, see notes to Code § 5288 in this Supplement.

Particularity: It is not improper to charge as assault as having been made with a deadly weapon, the particular description of which is to the grand jury unknown, although the weapon with which it is claimed the crime was committed was before the grand jury and also introduced in evidence on the trial. State v. Sigler, 114-408.

A description of money stolen as "one hundred and ten dollars in current money of the United States, and of the value of one hundred and ten dollars, a more particular description of which is to this grand jury unknown," held sufficient. State v. Williams, 118-494; State v. Connor, 118-490.

In charging sodomy it is not necessary to set out the indecent details. State v. McGruder, 125-741.

The use of Roman numerals and Arabic figures and the character "&" for "and" do not affect the validity of the indictment. State v. McPherson, 114-492.

The use in an indictment of the term "planing mill," in charging the offense of breaking and entering a building sufficiently implies that a building was broken and entered. State v. Haney, 110-26.

Where the charge is seduction, the allegation that the person seduced was "an unmarried person" sufficiently charges the seduction of an unmarried woman. State v. Olson, 108-667.

In a particular case held that the allegation of attempt to improperly influence a juror was sufficiently charged without pleading the evidence showing that there was such improper attempt, where the means used was stated. State v. Dankwardt, 107-704.

Venue: Although it is sufficient in an indictment for keeping a liquor nuisance to charge the keeping of such nuisance in the county of the prosecution, yet, if the place is more particularly charged, it must be proven as charged. State v. Schuler, 109-111.

Where the state relies on evidence that the offense was committed within five hundred yards of the boundary line of the county, it may be averred generally that it was committed within the county, but an indictment containing the allegation that the crime was committed in "Iowa county or in Keokuk county, within five hundred yards of the south line of Iowa county, as nearly as the grand jury know and can state," is defective. State v. Daily, 113-362.

SEC. 5290. Immaterial matters.

In general: The indictment should not be held insufficient for any defective or imperfect allegation which does not deprive the defendant of a substantial right. State v. Martin, 125-715.

The indictment may contain allegations of different acts as together constituting one offense, without being open to the charge of duplicity. State v. Wilhite, 132-226.

An indictment is not sufficient in which an essential fact is alleged by mere inference or intendment. State v. Gallagher, 123-378.

Time: While it is not essential that the precise date of the offense be indicated in the indictment, it is essential that the evidence show affirmatively that the crime was committed within the statutory period for commencing prosecutions for the offense. State v. Kunhi, 119-461.

In a prosecution for perjury, where the charge is not based on the record or other

Time: The allegation as to time need be no more specific than the proof. An allegation that the act was committed on or about a named date is sufficient. State v. John, 124-230.

Degree of Crime: It is not necessary in an indictment for murder to specify the degree. The court will look to the facts charged to determine whether the offense, if committed as charged, was murder in the first or murder in the second degree. State v. Phillips, 118-660.

Name of person injured: Where the charge in an indictment involves injury to the person, an erroneous allegation as to the name of the person is immaterial. Therefore held that in a prosecution for seduction, the naming of the woman seduced as "Nellie _____," whereas the evidence showed her name to be "Mary Ellen _____," was immaterial. State v. Burns, 119-663.

In a prosecution for robbery the ownership of the property taken must be alleged and proven as in cases of larceny. State v. Wasson, 126-320.

In a prosecution for obtaining property by false pretenses the name of the owner should be alleged. State v. Jackson, 128-543; 105 N. W. 51.

Where a business is conducted by a partnership under the name not purporting to be that of the partnership, such as "The Golden Eagle Clothing Store," an indictment for the larceny of goods described as belonging to the store may be supported by proof of ownership in the partnership conducting such store. State v. Bartlett, 128-518.

And see notes to § 5286.

writing under oath, and the statements asserted to be false might have been made on either the date alleged or that proven, and would constitute perjury if made at either time, variance as to the date between the allegations of the indictment and the evidence is immaterial. State v. Perry, 117-463.

Place: An indictment for maintaining a liquor nuisance "at said building or place in said county" held sufficiently definite. State v. Dixon, 104-741.

An indictment is not bad for uncertainty which, in charging the maintenance of a nuisance, alleges that defendant unlawfully established, kept, etc., and continued "a certain building or place," etc., for the purpose, etc. Allegation of place is not essential in such an indictment. State v. Dixon, 104-741.

The words "then and there" in an indictment held to refer back to the place where the act was done as charged in the venue, and not to the place named in connection with the description of the property. State v. Tripp, 113-698.

Ownership: An erroneous allegation with reference to ownership is not fatal under statutory provisions if the crime is described in other respects with sufficient certainty. State v. Watson, 102-651.

Variance as to name of the owner of property in a prosecution for burglary will not be fatal. State v. Wrاند, 108-73.

Description: Under an indictment for fraudulent banking charging the defendant with knowingly and unlawfully receiving on deposit the sum of two hundred dollars in lawful money of the United States a particular description of which was to the grand jurors unknown, held, that it was unnecessary to prove that the money received was any particular kind of money and that the words "of the United States" might be rejected as surplusage. It might be that if some particular kind of money were specifically described such as gold coin or treasury notes of a particular denomination it would be necessary to prove the description as alleged. State v. Boomer, 103-106.

A departure from the language of the statute in describing the offense is immaterial if it does not tend to prejudice the substantial rights of the defendant upon the merits. State v. Dickerhoff, 127-404.

Surplusage: An indictment charging the publication of an alleged libel for the purpose of defaming, etc., a person named "and others", and that such publication tended to provoke the said person named "and others" to wrath, etc., is not objectionable, the words "and others" being surplusage. State v. Heacock, 106-191.

The word "Jr." added to the name of a person as given in the indictment adds nothing thereto, and should be regarded as surplusage. State v. Dankwardt, 107-704.

Words which are not descriptive of the identity of what is legally essential to the charge in the indictment may be rejected as surplusage. State v. Judd, 132-296.

SEC. 5296. Indictment for perjury.

The statutory provision as to what shall be sufficient indictment for perjury is to be given effect as a remedial statute, relieving the prosecution from undue technical requirements which may have been recognized in the English courts as to the allegations in such prosecutions, and it is unnecessary to specifically set out the authority of the court or persons who administered the oath. The allegation that defendant appeared as a witness on the trial at a criminal prosecution in the district court of Henry county "and was then and there duly sworn before the duly authorized clerk of said court" held sufficient. State v. Harter, 131-199.

The court is presumed to have authority to administer oaths to witnesses, and the act of the clerk in administering such an oath is presumed to have been taken under the authority of the court. Ibid.

It is unnecessary to allege the name of the particular person who was the clerk of the court at the time the oath was administered. Ibid.

The indictment must negative that which is false in the alleged testimony of the defendant contradicting the matter alleged to have been falsely sworn to in express and specific terms. State v. Gallagher, 123-378.

The truth of the matter alleged to have been sworn to is sufficiently negated by the allegation, "Whereas in truth and in fact as defendant well knew, he did not, etc." State v. Brown, 128-24.

[The notes in the Code to § 5096 under the heading "Knowledge of falsity" belong under this section.]

SEC. 5299. Principal and accessory.

One may be guilty as accessory before the fact of a crime which he is not capable of committing. By aiding and abetting in the commission of a crime he renders himself principal therein under the statutory provisions. So held as to a defendant who, though not a public officer, was guilty of aiding and abetting the crime of embezzlement committed by a public officer. State v. Rowe, 104-323.

All persons concerned in the commission of the offense, including so-called conspirators or confederates, are guilty as principals and may be charged and held as such. A prosecution in which persons aiding and abetting are sought to be held as co-conspirators is not a prosecution for conspiracy but for the crime committed. State v. Smith, 106-701.

The words "aid and abet in its commission" as used in this section manifestly have reference to some work or act of encouragement or assistance in the commission of the offense, and not to something done after the crime is committed. An accessory after the fact is not an aider and abettor. State v. Jones, 115-113.

One may be guilty as accessory before the fact to the crime of manslaughter. State v. Gray, 116-231.

The fact of defendant's presence may alone, under some circumstances, show his guilt as aiding and abetting. State v. Dunn, 116-219.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held that defendant was properly convicted of manslaughter, committed by aiding and abetting one who made the deadly assault. State v. Cobby, 128-114.

One who is present assisting or aiding and abetting may be convicted as principal. State v. Mahoney, 122-168.

Under an indictment charging defendant with having committed the overt criminal act, he may be convicted upon proof that his only connection therewith was that of an aider or abettor. State v. Berger, 121-581.

One who is present aiding and abetting is more than an accessory before the fact. He is a principal. Ibid.

It is not sufficient in charging the commission of a crime by aiding and abetting to allege that the defendant had knowledge of the fact that the crime was in contemplation by the party or parties who actually committed it. Something more than knowledge that the crime is contemplated or mere personal presence at the time and place where the crime is committed must be shown in order to charge one with complicity in the offense. State v. Bartlett, 128-518.

Where one is charged with an offense which is accessorial in its nature it is not necessary to state the method of aiding and abetting, but it is sufficient to charge him as principal by procuring the act to be done. State v. Porter, 105-677.

One who has aided and abetted in the commission of a crime may be charged as principal without specifically referring to the method of his connection with the crime. State v. Denhardt, 129-135.

SEC. 5300. Accessory after the fact.

An accessory after the fact to the commission of a crime, for instance one who has received stolen property from the thief with knowledge of the theft, is not

The guilt of one who aids or abets the commission of a crime must be determined upon the facts which show the part he took in committing it, and does not depend on the guilt of others with whom he co-operated, unless the crime is the result of a conspiracy. State v. Phillips, 118-660.

But where the crime is the result of conspiracy, all who participate in the conspiracy are liable for the act, although not participating in the act itself. State v. Pasnau, 118-501.

Unless a crime is committed in pursuance of a previous conspiracy, the actual participation of the defendant in the wrongful act is the measure of his criminal liability, and evidence of intoxication of the defendant at the time the conspiracy is claimed to have been entered into may be shown as tending to exonerate the defendant from liability for a wrongful act in which he did not actually participate. Ibid.

In a prosecution for a crime in which it is sought to show that the defendant was guilty as an aider or abettor, or as an accessory before the fact, proof of the actual commission of the crime by another and of his acts and declarations tending to show his guilt is admissible. State v. Brown, 130-57.

It is immaterial whether the defendant in such case is shown to have had actual knowledge of the commission of the crime by such third person, where it appears that the defendant instigated the crime or aided, abetted or assisted in the purpose to commit it, having a knowledge at the time of such purpose. Ibid.

The connection of the defendant with the commission of the crime in such a case may be established by circumstantial evidence. Ibid.

an accomplice, under Code § 5480, requiring corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice to sustain a conviction. State v. Jones, 115-113.

SEC. 5302. Indictment for embezzlement.

Under a charge in an indictment for embezzlement that defendant did receive different amounts of money, said sums amounting to a total of a certain number of dollars named, the particular description of said money being to the grand jury unknown, held, that the description as to the money was sufficient without other allegation of its value. State v. Alverson, 105-152.

CHAPTER 17.

OF PROCESS UPON AN INDICTMENT.

SECTION 5309. Process against corporation.

Where defendant was charged as a corporation with the crime of maintaining a nuisance, and appeared and pleaded as a corporation, held that the prosecution did not have the burden of proving the fact of legal incorporation of the defendant. State v. Glucose Sugar Refin. Co., 117-524.

CHAPTER 18.

OF ARRAIGNMENT OF THE DEFENDANT.

SECTION 5313. Right to counsel.

The right of defendant to the assistance of counsel is subject to statutory regulation. The power of the court to appoint may be exercised not only when the defendant is arraigned, but at a subsequent stage of the trial. And where only one attorney has been assigned or employed, it may be found essential subsequently to designate another to assist the accused. Korf v. Jasper County, 132-682.

SEC. 5314. Fee for attorney defending.

The statute does not authorize the payment by the county of compensation to defendant's attorney for services rendered on appeal. State v. Young, 104-730.

Where one attorney is appointed to defend two persons, jointly indicted, he is entitled to the statutory fee for the defense of each. Clark v. Osceola County, 107-502.

An attorney selected in the lower court may follow the case to the supreme court, and is entitled to compensation if he has not received, and is not to receive it directly or indirectly from another source. But the claim for services rendered in the supreme court should be presented to the board of supervisors for allowance as other claims against the county. State v. Behrens, 109-58.

The statute fixes the compensation for counsel appointed to represent a defendant, and where the defendant is put on trial for manslaughter, the fee is that provided in case of homicide although the punishment which may be imposed cannot extend to life imprisonment. Tomlinson v. Monroe County, 112 N. W. 100.

There is no power in the district court to appoint an attorney to prosecute an appeal, but the attorney appointed in the lower court may prosecute an appeal and be allowed compensation therefor. State v. Cater, 109-69.

With reference to compensation to be paid to an attorney appointed to defend a criminal, it is not necessary that the county shall have been a party to the proceeding in which the appointment is made; and no appeal on the part of the county from the action of the court in making such appointment is provided for. Korf v. Jasper County, 132-682.

Where the counsel appointed for the defendant follow the case to the supreme court and secure a reversal of the conviction of their client, they may continue to represent him on a second trial without a new appointment, and may recover compensation from the county for such services. Tomlinson v. Monroe County, 112 N. W. 100.

CHAPTER 19.

OF SETTING ASIDE THE INDICTMENT.

SECTION 5319. Grounds.

The grounds specified on which a motion may be based to set aside an indictment are exclusive of others not named, and therefore the fact that a member of the grand jury finding the indictment had previously formed and expressed an unqualified opinion of defendant's guilt will not require the setting aside of the indictment. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

On a motion to set aside an indictment, the court will not inquire into the sufficiency of the evidence before the grand jury, nor will the indictment be set aside because it may be made to appear that an incompetent witness was called and gave testimony during the course of the investigation. Therefore held that the fact that defendant was called as a witness by the grand jury in the investigation of the charge against him was not a ground for setting aside the indictment. State v. Shepherd, 129-705.

The introduction of incompetent evidence before the grand jury is not a ground for setting aside the indictment. The grounds specified by the statute are exclusive of all others. The court cannot inquire into the sufficiency of the proof before the grand jury or the mode of examining the witnesses to invalidate the indictment. State v. De Groate, 122-661.

While the law requires grand jurors to be electors of the county, it does not require that a person must have voted or that his name be found upon the poll books, to make him eligible. Therefore a showing that the sheriff was unable to find a person of the name in the ward or city from which he was drawn, or that the county auditor could find no such name on the poll books does not show that the juror was not properly selected. State v. Harris, 122-78.

The indictment should be set aside on motion unless the names of the witnesses examined before the committing magistrate the minutes of whose testimony have been presented to and acted upon by the grand jury are endorsed on the indictment. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

But failure to endorse names of witnesses will not be a ground for setting aside, unless it appears that the evidence of the witnesses whose names are not endorsed was material and this fact must be made to affirmatively appear. Ibid.

Failure to return exhibits introduced in evidence before the grand jury with the minutes of the evidence as required by Code § 5258 is not made a ground of setting aside the indictment. Such provision as well as that requiring the minutes of the evidence of the witnesses to be signed by them is directory only. State v. O'Malley, 132-696.

An indictment will not be set aside on motion on the ground that a witness testifying before the grand jury was not sworn. State v. Easton, 113-516.

The fact that the wife testifies before the grand jury with reference to a charge against her husband is not ground for setting aside the indictment. State v. Brown, 128-24.

It is not a statutory ground for setting aside an indictment that the defendant was not given an opportunity to challenge jurors. State v. Phillips, 119-652.

Where father and daughter were both witnesses before a grand jury on the investigation of a public charge, and the father remained with the daughter in the grand jury room, while she was being sworn, on account of her nervousness, held that there was not such improper conduct as to require the setting aside of the indictment. State v. Wood, 112-484.

It is not sufficient ground for setting aside an indictment that an assistant to the county attorney appointed by the court has been present with the grand jury during their investigation of the charge. State v. Tyler, 122-125.

If the county attorney is disqualified from acting in the prosecution, he should not appear before the grand jury. And the fact that he does so is a ground for setting aside the indictment. State v. Rocker, 130-239.

A motion to set aside the indictment cannot be entertained after the evidence for the prosecution has been introduced. State v. Tyler, 122-125.

SEC. 5321. Objections to selection of grand jury.

The provision denying to one who has been held to answer before the grand jury the right to have the indictment set aside on the ground that the grand jury was not properly selected is not unconstitutional. Failure to object at the proper time constitutes a waiver of any objection which might have been made. Busse v Barr, 132-463.

It is intended that as against a defendant held to answer before the finding of the indictment, all matters having relation to the organization of the grand jury should be foreclosed, and the failure of the court to fill the place of an individual juror as to whom a challenge has been sustained, and who does not take part in the proceedings, cannot thus be raised. State v. Wheeler, 129-100.

A defendant who has had opportunity of challenging the panel of the grand jury cannot take advantage of any irregularity which might have been raised by subsequently moving in arrest of judgment. State v. McPherson, 126-77.

The inability of a grand juror to read and write the English language may be urged by motion to set aside the indictment on behalf of a defendant not held to answer at the time the indictment was found. State v. Greenland, 125-141.

Such objection may be urged in a motion for new trial where the fact does not come to the knowledge of defendant or his counsel prior to the rendition of the verdict. Ibid.

The court may in its discretion after the conclusion of the term at which the indictment was found, refuse to continue the case for the purpose of having the grand juror brought in for examination to determine his ability to read and write. Ibid.

SEC. 5324. If granted.

Where a case is resubmitted to the grand jury there is no final judgment from which the state may appeal. State v. Evans, 111-80.

It is competent for the trial court to order the resubmission of a criminal charge to the grand jury where the indictment is clearly defective. State v. Hanlin, 110 N. W. 162.

SEC. 5325. If resubmitted.

When an indictment is set aside and the case resubmitted to another grand jury whether by the direction of the court or otherwise, any member of the grand jury,

The objection that a defendant, whose case was resubmitted to another grand jury than the one to which it was at first submitted, did not have opportunity to challenge the grand jurors who returned the indictment on which he was tried, must be raised by a motion to set aside the indictment, or by plea in abatement, and is not available on motion in arrest of judgment. State v. Brown, 128-24.

Objections to an individual grand juror that he had formed or expressed an unqualified opinion is not available by way of motion to set aside the indictment. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

If the accused resists a motion by the prosecuting attorney to set aside the indictment because of its indefiniteness, and to resubmit the case to the grand jury for further action, and is sustained by the court in such resistance, he cannot rely on the insufficiency of the indictment raised by such motion as a ground for reversal on appeal. Ibid.

SEC. 5326. Order to set aside, no bar.

This section relates to the setting aside of indictments on motion and not to indict-who was also a member of the first and participated in the finding of the indictment, is subject to challenge for cause. State v. Bullard, 127-168.

ments held to be insufficient on demurrer. State v. Fields, 106-406.

CHAPTER 20.

OF PLEADING BY THE DEFENDANT.

SECTION 5328. Grounds of demurrer.

The objection that the indictment does not charge a crime should be raised by demurrer and not by motion to set aside the indictment. State v. Kimble, 104-19.

The court may on its own motion without a request from either party discharge the jury if it appears that the indictment is so defective that a conviction thereunder could not be sustained and the defendant should thereupon be discharged from custody unless the court believes that a new indictment could be framed on which the defendant could be convicted. Ibid.

An objection to an indictment for duplicity cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. State v. Brown, 109 N. W. 1011.

SEC. 5331. When heard.

When a demurrer to an indictment is sustained on the ground that the indictment contains matter which is a legal defense or a bar to the indictment, the judgment is final; and, held, that although the order made on the ruling was not in the form of a judgment but in terms discharged the defendant and released his bond, it was in legal effect a final judgment. State v. Fields, 106-406.

SEC. 5334. Entry of plea—form—guilty.

Where the indictment contains two counts of such character that they cover two distinct offenses, and defendant pleads

Where a demurrer is sustained and the case is resubmitted there is no final judgment from which the state can appeal. State v. Evans, 111-80.

"guilty of the offense charged," a judgment on such plea is erroneous. State v. Schuler, 109-111.

SEC. 5337. Withdrawal of plea of guilty.

The plea of guilty may be withdrawn and a plea of not guilty substituted after the court has proceeded under the plea of guilty to make an inquiry into the facts for the purpose of fixing the punishment and has announced its conclusion but has postponed the pronouncing of judgment to a later day. State v. Hortman, 122-104.

Whether the provision for withdrawing a plea of guilty in a criminal prosecution is applicable in a proceeding to punish for contempt in violating a liquor nuisance quaere; but in any event such plea cannot be withdrawn after the pronouncement of the judgment by the court although such judgment has not been entered. Beatty v. Roberts, 125-619.

SEC. 5338. Issues—trial—presence of defendant.

The court has no jurisdiction to try an issue of fact in a criminal case without a jury, and no authority is given to the defendant to consent to such a trial. State v. Rea, 126-65; -101 N. W. 507.

SEC. 5339. Conviction or acquittal, when a bar.

Where the defendant pleads previous conviction, the state may show that the conviction relied on was void for want of jurisdiction in the court in which the conviction was had. State v. Jamison, 104-343.

No replication to the affirmative plea of previous conviction or acquittal is necessary. Ibid.

When the plea of previous conviction is not sustained by the evidence or is not sufficient in law the court may so charge the jury. Ibid.

Where, after the defendant was put on trial under an indictment in one county, and evidence was introduced, some of it tending to show that a crime had been committed in that county, the court dismissed the prosecution and ordered the defendant to be held for a warrant from another county for the same offense, held, that as the question of venue should have gone to the jury in the first county, the defendant could in the second county plead the proceedings in the first county as a former adjudication. State v. Spayde, 110-726.

While in general an acquittal in a criminal case is not a bar to a subsequent civil action founded on the same facts, yet, where the civil action is to secure a forfeiture which would have been a part of the penalty to be imposed in the criminal proceeding, and is between the same parties, the previous acquittal is a bar. State v. Meek, 112-328.

As the evidence necessary to convict of the separately described crimes of gambling and keeping a gambling house is not the same, a conviction or acquittal of the one offense does not necessarily bar a prosecution for the other. State v. White, 123-425.

The fact that evidence of one offense may be introduced in establishing the guilt of the other does not fix the identity of the two under the plea of former conviction or acquittal. Ibid.

The test determining whether the accused has been in jeopardy is whether or not, if what is set out in the second indictment had been proved under the first, there could have been a conviction; and it is immaterial that in the second prosecution the state attempts to establish a different transaction than that was sought to be proven in the first. State v. Price, 127-301.

The acts and declarations of one charged to have committed a substantive offense by conspiracy with others are admissible as against a co-conspirator charged with the same substantive offense, although the one whose acts and declarations are thus relied on has been acquitted of a conspiracy to commit the offense. State v. Crofford, 133-478.

SEC. 5341. Judgment, when a bar.

The district court may order a resubmission of the case to the grand jury when the demurrer to the indictment has been sustained on the ground that the offense charged was within the exclusive jurisdiction of another county, or on the ground that the indictment contains matter which is a legal defense or bar to the indictment. State v. Fields, 106-406.

CHAPTER 21.

OF CHANGE OF PLACE OF TRIAL IN CRIMINAL CASES.

SECTION 5343. Application—what stated.

An application for transfer of a criminal case to another judge of the same district for trial on the ground that the judge to whom the application is addressed is prejudiced against defendant to such an extent that he cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial before him, is to be granted or refused in the exercise of sound discretion. State v. Heacock, 106-191.

Affidavits in a particular case, held not to show prejudice or excitement in the county against defendant such as to require a change of venue. State v. McDonough, 104-6.

SEC. 5346. Additional testimony.

Affidavits in resistance to the application for change of venue need not show that affiants are not related to the prosecutor. State v. Icenbice, 126-16.

SEC. 5348. Court's discretion.

The supreme court will not on appeal interfere with the discretion vested in the trial court in passing upon an application for a change of venue, unless such discretion appears to have been abused. State v. Miner, 107-656.

A certain discretion is reposed in the trial court passing upon applications of this kind, and the supreme court does not interfere unless such discretion appears to have been abused. In a particular case, held, that the showing was not such as to require reversal of the action of the trial court refusing a change of venue on account of prejudice of the inhabitants of the county. State v. Williams, 115-97.

The supreme court will not interfere with the conclusion of the trial court in ruling on an application for change of venue except where there is a clear abuse of judicial discretion, and if there is a substantial conflict for determination by the trial court on the showing made, its action will be sustained. State v. Icenbice, 126-16.

Where there is a conflict between the showing made for the defendant and that for the state on an application for change of venue on the ground of hostility and prejudice throughout the county resulting from the widespread circulation of newspaper accounts of the crime, charging the defendant with its commission, the supreme court will not interfere on appeal with the exercise of discretion on the part of the trial court in determining the question. State v. Brown, 130-57.

The granting of a change of venue on the application of the defendant is largely within the discretion of the trial court, and this is peculiarly so where the persons making the affidavits relied upon are personally examined and cross-examined before the court. State v. Crouch, 130-478.

SEC. 5354. Cost of change.

As the cost of employing an additional attorney to assist in trying a case brought to a county on change of venue falls upon the county from which the change is taken, the board of supervisors of the latter county has authority to employ an additional attorney and may contract with the attorney of that county to render the services. Bevington v. Woodbury County, 107-424.

It is the court of the county in which the case is tried which must allow the costs necessary and consequent upon the trial, and the county to which the change is taken is primarily liable to pay the expense of providing an attorney for defendant, and of furnishing defendant a transcript for the purpose of appeal, when ordered by the trial judge. State v. Carter, 109-69.

CHAPTER 23.

OF CHALLENGING THE JURY.

SECTION 5360. For cause.

Objection stated: A challenge to a juror should distinctly specify the facts constituting the causes thereof. State v. Young, 104-730.

In a particular case, held, that the fact that the juror had read newspaper accounts of the crime for which defendant was on trial did not disqualify him. Ibid.

Where the challenge of the state is sustained, there being evidently but one ground of objection to the juror, and this being sufficient, the case will not be reversed on the ground that the objection is not sufficiently specific. State v. Prins, 113-72.

A challenge for cause which states no grounds therefor, is insufficient and may be disregarded. State v. Wilson, 124-264.

When made—examination: If at any time during the trial a ground of objection to a juror comes to the notice or attention of the counsel for the defendant, the objection should be made and opportunity to investigate afforded, and such objection cannot afterwards be urged as a ground for new trial. State v. Pray, 126-249.

Inability of a juror to read or write cannot be urged as a ground for new trial where it does not appear that the juror was interrogated as to his qualifications in this respect, although knowledge of his inability was not acquired by the defendant or his counsel prior to the conclusion of the trial. State v. Greenland, 125-141.

Failure to challenge a juror for cause as to his competency and to examine him or other witnesses in support of the challenges is a waiver of the right of challenge although the fact of incompetency is not known to the party until after the trial. State v. Carpenter, 124-5.

Discretion of court: The discretion of the trial court in rulings upon challenges for cause will not be interfered with unless a clear case of abuse of discretion is shown. The court may properly take into account the juror's conduct, demeanor, and bearing in determining whether in view of his statements in answer to questions propounded to him he is qualified to serve. State v. Brown, 130-57.

Error without prejudice: Prejudice is not to be presumed to the defendant from a ruling of the court excusing a juror on challenge for cause by the state nor is such prejudice to be presumed where a juror unsuccessfully challenged for cause by the defendant has subsequently been excluded on peremptory challenge. State v. Pray, 126-249.

The defendant is not prejudiced in having one excluded from the jury who is of even doubtful qualifications. State v. Crouch, 130-478.

Any possible error in excusing a juror at his own request over defendant's objection is removed if the defendant is given the opportunity to exercise an additional peremptory challenge, especially where it does not appear that he exhausted his peremptory challenges. State v. Fielding, 112 N. W. 539.

Where after the overruling of a challenge to one of the trial jurors the defendant waives a peremptory challenge, he cannot afterwards complain of the overruling of his challenge for cause. State v. Mathews, 133-398.

It is not error of which defendant can complain that the court excuses a juror at his own request. State v. Fielding, 112 N. W. 539.

As to new trial on account of disqualification of juror, see notes to Code § 5424, in this Supplement.

Having formed an expressed opinion. Every one who says he has formed an opinion from what he has heard and read is not necessarily disqualified. The appearance and intelligence, or want of intelligence, of the juror as he appears before the court may be taken into account. It is the duty of the court, not of the juror, to determine whether his opinion disqualifies him. State v. Hudson, 110-663.

The fact that a juror has heard statements to the crime, without expressing any opinion, does not necessarily render him incompetent. State v. Geier, 111-706.

Although the juror admits having formed an opinion, yet, if upon the whole examination it appears that such opinion is qualified, and the juror expresses himself as able to render a just and fair verdict on the evidence, guided by the instructions of the court he is qualified. State v. Williams, 115-97.

As the juror's conduct, demeanor and bearing in court may properly be accorded material weight in considering the facts as to his competency disclosed by his answers, the supreme court will be reluctant to interfere with the exercise of discretion in this respect on the part of the lower court. But where the juror discloses that he has become convinced of the truth of evidence tending to show defendant's guilt, a challenge should be sustained although he shows by his answers an honest and sincere intention to determine defendant's guilt only on the evidence introduced. State v. Crofford, 121-395.

The mere admission of a juror on being interrogated by the court that he can decide the case fairly, should not be allowed to overcome his repeated statements that he entertains a fixed opinion as to a fact essential in determining the guilt of the defendant. State v. John, 124-230.

The discretion of the trial court must govern very largely in the matter of selection of a jury. The supreme court will not interfere on an appeal unless there is made to appear the positive violation of law or a clear abuse of discretion. It is for the court to determine whether the examination of a proposed juror discloses his fitness and it may reject a juror if in its judgment unfitness is thus disclosed, although he in terms declares that he is free from prejudice or fixed opinion. State v. Smith, 124-334.

Where the juror on examination by the court unqualifiedly affirms his ability to discard any belief with reference to defendant's guilt, based on conversations with others, the action of the court in

SEC. 5361. Juror examined.

The fact that a juror is not sworn on his voir dire will not deprive the defendant of the right to have a new trial on showing that the juror was prejudiced overruling the challenge will not be interfered with on appeal. State v. Fielding, 112 N. W. 539.

Having heard evidence on former trial: The fact that a juror heard part of the evidence in the case on a former trial will not necessarily disqualify him from serving. State v. Prins, 117-505.

Relation to counsel: The relation of a juror to counsel for the prosecution of client and attorney is not made a ground for challenge. State v. Carter, 121-135.

SEC. 5364. Peremptory challenges.

If the defendant makes no objection to the swearing of the jury after waiver of peremptory challenges on behalf of the defendant and the state, he cannot afterwards complain that all of his peremptory challenges had not been exhausted. State v. Icenbice, 126-16.

Where the defendant in a criminal case, being entitled to ten peremptory challenges, when called upon to exercise his eighth challenge, stated by counsel that one peremptory challenge was waived, and the prosecution thereupon waived a peremptory challenge, held that the defendant was still entitled to exercise the right of two further peremptory challenges, and that it was error to refuse to allow him to do so. A waiver of one peremptory challenge is not a waiver of all further right of peremptory challenge as to persons already called as jurors. State v. Hunter, 118-686.

The statute gives the right of peremptory challenge absolutely, and if the right is denied, prejudice therefrom is conclusively presumed. The right to interpose peremptory challenges is not lost until the jury is sworn. Ibid.

SEC. 5365. Number of challenges.

Where two or more defendants are tried jointly, the number of peremptory challenges is limited to the number which a single defendant might exercise. State v. Wolf, 112-458.

The right of peremptory challenge is not a constitutional right; it exists only by virtue of statute. And where a deendant indicted for murder in the first degree is convicted only of manslaughter, and on the reversal of such conviction is again put on trial for the offense of manslaughter, he is entitled only to the number of peremptory challenges allowed in the case of an original prosecution for such offense. State v. Smith, 132-645.

CHAPTER 24.

OF THE TRIAL TO A JURY.

SECTION 5370. Continuances.

The provision that a continuance on the ground of the absence of a witness shall not be granted if the opposite party will admit that the witness if present would testify as stated in the affidavit for continuance, is not unconstitutional as applied to a continuance asked by the defendant, even though by the admission of the state, defendant is thereby deprived of the presence of the witness whose expected testimony is set out in the affidavit. State v. Wiltsey, 103-54.

The admission that the absent witness would testify as alleged in the affidavit for continuance does not waive objection to the incompetency of such testimony. State v. Leuhrman, 123-476.

It is not error to refuse a continuance asked for the purpose of procuring evidence which would be available only by way of impeachment of anticipated evidence for the other party. State v. Athey, 133-382.

The fact that the evidence of witnesses because of whose absence continuance is asked would be merely cumulative is not necessarily a ground for refusing a continuance. It may happen that the interests of justice will be promoted by a postponement in order to enable the defendant to secure all the witnesses who can testify in his favor as to a given fact. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

SEC. 5371. Provisions as to trial in civil cases.

The provisions of Code § 3709 as to taking exceptions to instructions are appli-

But in general a continuance need not be granted for the purpose of enabling the defendant to secure witnesses whose testimony will be valuable to him only by way of impeachment. Such testimony does not bear upon an issue in the case. The ruling on an application for continuance to enable a party to procure impeaching evidence is generally regarded as purely discretionary and will not be interfered with on appeal. Ibid.

cable to criminal cases. State v. Williams, 115-97.

SEC. 5372. Order of trial.

Where defendant, having been put on trial under an indictment charging murder, is convicted and such conviction is subsequently reversed and he is again put on trial for manslaughter, it is not error to read to the jury the original indictment in which the crime of murder is charged. State v. Walker, 133-489.

Some latitude is to be given counsel in the opening statement, and so long as they act in good faith, believing that the facts which are proposed to be proved are admissible in evidence, the supreme court will not interfere on appeal. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

In the opening statement the county attorney should not anticipate possible attempts of the defense to avoid liability. The statements should be confined to the evidence which the prosecution expects to introduce to sustain the indictment. State v. Ryan, 113-536.

Although defendant relies on insanity as a defense, the state still has the burden of proof as to the commission of the crime, and the defendant does not have the right to open and close. State v. Robbins, 109-650.

The provision that when the evidence is concluded the county attorney must commence and conclude the argument does not exclude the making of the opening and the concluding arguments by an attorney employed by private parties to assist the county attorney. State v. Novak, 109-717.

The judge should not during the argument of the case be beyond the hearing of the proceedings. There can be no court without a judge and his presence as the presiding genius of the trial is as essential at one time as another. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

Further, as to absence of judge from court room during argument as ground for new trial, see notes to Code § 5424, in this Supplement.

SEC. 5373. Evidence for state—notice. The county attorney, in offering the evidence in support of the indictment in the order prescribed in the last section, shall not be permitted to introduce any witness who was not examined before a committing magistrate or the grand jury, and the minutes of whose testimony were not presented with the indictment to the court, unless he shall have given to the defendant or his attorney of record if the defendant be not found within the county a notice in writing, stating the name, place of residence and occupation of such witness, and the substance of what he expects to prove by him on the trial, at least four days before the commencement of such trial. Whenever the county attorney desires to introduce evidence to support the indictment, of which he shall not have given said four days' notice because of insufficient time therefor since he learned said evidence could be obtained, he may move the court for leave to introduce such evidence, giving the same particulars as in the former case, and showing diligence such as is required in a motion for a continuance, supported by affidavit, whereupon, if the court sustains said motion, the defendant shall elect whether said cause shall be continued on his motion, or the witness shall then testify; and if said defendant shall not elect to have said cause continued, the county attorney may examine said witness in the same manner and with the same effect as though four days' notice had been given defendant or his attorney as hereinbefore provided, except the county attorney, in the examination of witnesses, shall be strictly confined to the matters set out in his motion. [17 G. A., ch. 168, § 3; C., '73, § 4421; R., § 4786.] [28 G. A., ch. 135, §§ 1, 2.]

Duty to call witnesses: The state is not bound to call as witnesses all the persons examined before the grand jury, even though it appears that they were witnesses to the criminal act. State v. Hudson, 110-663.

Documentary or real evidence: It is not necessary to give notice of what is expected to be proved by documentary evidence, such evidence is not required to be indorsed on the indictment or returned as part of the minutes. State v. Boomer, 103-106.

Witnesses not examined: The statutory provision as to returning minutes of evidence with the indictment does not preclude the use of evidence other than the minutes in order to determine whether the witness was in fact examined before the grand jury or committing magistrate. State v. Marshall, 105-38.

Where the names of witnesses are indorsed on the indictment and minutes of their evidence returned therewith it is presumed their evidence was properly before the grand jury and to overcome such presumption it must be made to affirmatively appear not only that they did not testify before the grand jury, but also that they either did not give evidence before the committing magistrate or else that the minutes thereof made by him were not used by the grand jury. Ibid.

A witness may be examined as to any and all matters within his knowledge material to the case, although some particular fact as to which he testifies is not referred to in the minutes of his testimony. State v. Seery, 129-259.

Minutes of evidence: While the minutes of the evidence are not a part of the indictment, and should be separately filed, yet, if attached to the indictment and filed with it, this is sufficient. State v. Doss, 110-713.

Indorsement of names: Witnesses whose names are not endorsed on the indictment may be called to give evidence in rebuttal. State v. Whitnah, 129-211.

The county attorney cannot call as witnesses those who gave testimony before the committing magistrate, minutes of which were presented to the grand jury and acted upon by them, unless the names of such witnesses are endorsed on the indictment. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

A variance between the name of the witness as indorsed on the indictment and his true name is not a valid objection to an examination of the witness, unless defendant has been misled or prejudiced by the variation. State v. Dale, 109-97.

Notice: The fact that a witness states his occupation to be different from that named in the notice is not conclusive that the notice is not sufficient. Ibid.

Whether the state is entitled to examine the witness under the notice is a question for the court. Ibid.

A notice is sufficient which advises the defendant with reasonable certainty as to the person who is to be called as a witness against him. State v. Mathews, 133-398.

The notice in a particular case held not defective in failing to accurately describe the occupation of the witness named. State v. McPherson, 114-492.

Where the notice gave the name of the witness as "Lee Wood," and his occupation as that of a laborer, held, that it was sufficient where it appeared that he commonly went by that name, although his real name was Ernest Lee Wood, and he was at the time confined in the county jail. State v. Dunn, 116-219.

Mistake in the notice as to the name or residence of the witness will not justify a reversal unless defendant has been prejudiced thereby. State v. Harmann, 112 N. W. 632.

Where it affirmatively appears that the defendant has not been misled to his prejudice by any inaccuracy in the notice with reference to the name, place of residence or occupation of the witness, he is not entitled to a reversal because of defect in the notice. State v. Anderson, 125-501.

The fact that the matters of which the defendant was given notice appear to have occurred at another time and place from that stated in the notice is not a valid objection to the evidence. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

The court may allow witnesses to testify when notice that they will be introduced has been given a sufficient length of time before the commencement of the trial, even though in the meantime the prosecution may have moved for leave to introduce the evidence without such notice, and the defendant may have requested a continuance on that ground, which has been refused. State v. Snider, 119-15.

The violation by the county attorney of an agreement not to use any testimony save that of which defendant was given notice may constitute a ground for continuing or postponing the case, if other evidence is offered which may be properly received under statutory provisions. But on failure to ask such continuance, or postponement, the defendant cannot on appeal complain. State v. McClain, 130-73.

If on the case being called for trial the county attorney applies for postponement in order that he may give the necessary notice of the calling of witnesses whose names are not endorsed on the indictment, and the defendant then consents to the use of the witnesses without the giving of such notice, he cannot afterwards complain that the names of the witnesses were not en-

SEC. 5375. Separate trials.

Where the offense charged in an indictment is a misdemeanor, the matter of granting separate trials is within the discretion of the court. State v. Jamison, 110-337.

Where a felony is charged, each one of joint defendants is entitled to a separate trial as an absolute right, and by exercis-

SEC. 5376. Reasonable doubt.

Definition: Absolute certainty is not required and is rarely if ever possible in any case and to justify a conviction the evidence, when taken as a whole and fairly considered, must so satisfy the judgments and consciences of the jurors as to exclude every other reasonable conclusion. Certainty is seldom possible and never required, but the conclusion must be so certain as to exclude any other reasonable hypothesis. State v. Marshall, 105-38.

Not all the facts involved in the case, but only those essential to conviction must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, and be incompatible with any reasonable hypothesis of innocence. State v. House, 108-68.

It is not necessary that each essential fact in the chain of circumstances solely relied on to connect the accused with the commission of the offense, when separately considered, be found beyond reasonable doubt. Such a fact, though having little to sustain it when standing alone, may derive such support from others immediately connected therewith as to exclude all doubt of its existence. Nevertheless, if conviction depends entirely on different circumstances, arranged linkwise, connecting the defendant with the crime charged, then each and every one of these must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, for no chain can be stronger than its weakest link. State v. Cohen, 108-208.

dorsed. State v. Arthur, 109 N. W. 1083.

The notice here contemplated may be given on Sunday. State v. Ryan, 113-536.

The examination need not be limited to the matters stated in the notice. It is sufficient if it directs the defendant's attention to such matters and enables him to produce such other witnesses as he may desire with reference to the same subject. State v. Boomer, 103-106.

To authorize service on the attorney of notice of the intention to call witnesses whose names are not endorsed on the indictment, it is not essential that the accused should have gone beyond the boundaries of the county. It is sufficient that the officer, after diligent search, has failed to find him. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

ing this right he can avail himself of the full number of peremptory challenges provided by law, but if a separate trial is not asked, the number of peremptory challenges is limited to the number allowed where only one defendant is on trial. State v. Wolf, 112-458.

It is not necessary that each of the essential facts in the case, standing isolated and alone, be proven beyond a reasonable doubt, nor that it be established by independent evidence. The material circumstances, when given their respective places in the sequence of events, may strengthen and support each other to such an extent that on a consideration of the whole case the jury may be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt. State v. Hossack, 116-194.

The definition of reasonable doubt given in State v. Ostrander, 18 Iowa 435, has been too often followed to be now disregarded. State v. Willing, 129-72.

Presumptions: The presumption of innocence is not to be treated as affirmative evidence in behalf of the defendant. State v. Linhoff, 121-632.

Questions of fact only: The statutory provisions relating to reasonable doubt are applicable only to the jury trying questions of fact. They have no relation to the decision of questions of law by the court. Busse v. Barr, 132-463.

Not applicable on appeal: The rule as to reasonable doubt is not applicable upon review by the supreme court of the sufficiency of the evidence to support a verdict. State v. Pray, 126-249.

Instructions: The charge is to be taken as an entirety and it is not always necessary to explain the bearing of the doctrine of reasonable doubt in connection with each instruction. State v. Heacock, 106-191.

It is error to instruct the jury that a reasonable doubt is such a doubt as the jury are able to give a reason for. Such an instruction casts the burden of furnishing reasons for not finding guilt established upon the defendant, whereas it is upon the state to make out a case excluding all reasonable doubt. Besides, jurors are not bound to give reasons to others for the conclusion reached. State v. Cohen, 108-208.

It is not proper to instruct the jury that "a doubt," to justify an acquittal, must be reasonable," etc., as such an instruction is open to the interpretation that the jury starts out with the primary obligation to convict the accused, unless some reasonable doubt arises to justify a verdict of not guilty. State v. Phillips, 118-660.

It is error to instruct that "a reasonable doubt does not mean a doubt from mere caprice or groundless conjecture, but it means a reasonable doubt such as the jury are able to give a reason for." State v. Lee, 113-348.

It is not error in an instruction with reference to reasonable doubt to use such expressions as "it must be shown beyond a reasonable doubt," or "it must appear beyond reasonable doubt," as the substitute for "it must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt." State v. Crawford, 133-478.

An instruction that "if after a careful comparison of the evidence and a full consideration of the whole case your minds are brought to an abiding conviction beyond a reasonable doubt," etc., is sufficient, without making use of the words "to a moral certainty." State v. Van Tasel, 103-6.

It is not necessary to instruct the jury to the effect that so long as any one juror has a reasonable doubt of guilt there can be no conviction. State v. Penny, 113-691.

It is unnecessary to give an elaborate explanation of the meaning of the term reasonable doubt. State v. Mahoney, 122-168.

An instruction in which preponderance of evidence was referred to, held not prejudicially erroneous in view of specific instruction as to the necessity of finding the evidence sufficient beyond reasonable doubt. State v. Rivers, 124-17.

Where the jury is instructed as to quantum of evidence necessary to a conviction it is not essential that the words "beyond a reasonable doubt" be used in every instruction given with reference to a sufficiency of the evidence to sustain a conviction. State v. Carpenter, 124-5.

The court is not required to say in each instruction given as to the particular elements of the crime or facts tending to establish it, that they should be established beyond a reasonable doubt. The usual general instruction upon that subject is sufficient. State v. Grouch, 130-478.

Instructions in a particular case as to reasonable doubt, held, not erroneous. State v. Novak, 109-717; State v. Ryan, 113-536.

Burden of proof: As a general rule, when an offense is grounded on a negative, or when that negative is an essential element of the crime, the burden is on the state to prove it. Therefore, held, that in a prosecution for the statutory offense of procuring an abortion the state should satisfy the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the miscarriage was not necessary to save the life of the woman, the statutory description of the crime containing that exception. State v. Aiken, 109-643.

Where there is evidence tending to show that the injury inflicted, charged as constituting a crime, was accidental, the jury should be instructed to take such evidence into account in determining whether a crime is established beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of proving the accidental nature of the injury is not upon the defendant. State v. Matheson, 130-440.

Burden of proof as to insanity: The fact that defendant relies on insanity as a defense does not relieve the state of the burden of proving the commission of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Robbins, 109-650.

As to alibi: While, as a distinct issue, an alibi must be established by a preponderance of the evidence, or it may be disregarded, yet if the evidence offered to show it falls short of this in weight, nevertheless such evidence is for the consideration of the jury, and if upon the whole case, including that part pertaining to the alibi, the jurors have a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt, he should be acquitted. State v. McGarry, 111-709.

Even though the evidence as to alibi is not sufficient to establish that defense by a preponderance of the evidence, nevertheless the jury should be instructed to take such evidence into account in determining whether the guilt of the defendant is established beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Hogan, 115-455.

A specific instruction as to reasonable doubt which may be raised by testimony tending to show an alibi does not constitute error as tending to mislead the jury into a belief that only the reasonable doubt thus raised can be considered in determining whether defendant should be acquitted, there being proper instructions as to reasonable doubt in general. State v. Pray, 126-249.

The court may advise the jury to scan with care and attention the evidence tending to establish an alibi. State v. Worthen, 124-408.

It is proper to instruct the jury to acquit if the evidence as to alibi raises a reasonable doubt of defendant's presence at the time and place of the commission of the crime charged. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

As to self-defense: The burden is on the state to show that defendant was not acting in self-defense, and this it must do by evidence sufficiently strong to remove reasonable doubt. State v. Shea, 104-724.

Self-defense is not an affirmative matter to be established by the defendant by a preponderance of the evidence, but it goes to the question of guilt and the evidence tending to show self-defense should be taken into consideration in determining whether there is reasonable doubt of the guilt of the defendant. State v. Sharp, 127-526; 103 N. W. 770.

In the instructions in a case where there is evidence tending to show self-defense, the court should not limit the jury to the consideration of such evidence as establishing the specific defense relied upon, but they should be so instructed as that they may take into account the evidence tending to show self-defense with all the other evidence in the case in determining whether there is reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt. State v. Morris, 128-717.

Defendant's good character: It is always permissible for the defendant in a criminal action to show his general good character or reputation as to the trait involved in the charge against him. State v. Heacock, 106-191.

Proof of good character is admissible, not as showing a defense, but on the ground that one of such character and repute would not be likely to commit the offense charged. State v. House, 108-68.

The weight to be attached to proof of good character is for the jury. Ibid.

Evidence of good character should be

SEC. 5377. Reasonable doubt as to degree.

It is better in ordinary cases for the court to instruct the jury in the simple language of the statute that, where there is reasonable doubt of the degree of the offense the defendant should be convicted only of the lower degree; but it is not

SEC. 5382. Separation of jury—before final submission.

It is error to allow the jury to separate during the trial where defendant asks in accordance with statutory provisions that the jury shall be kept together. State v. Smith, 102-656.

considered together with the other evidence in the case, and it is error to limit the jury with respect to such evidence to determining whether or not the defendant was of good moral character and to direct that a finding of good character may be considered with reference to whether the witnesses who testified to facts tending to criminate defendant were mistaken or testified falsely. State v. Wolf, 112-458.

One accused of a criminal offense is permitted to prove his character and general reputation in the community of his residence with respect to the trait involved, but this rule does not permit him to go into details. State v. Dexter, 115-678.

An instruction as to the effect of impeaching evidence and limiting the effect of proof of general moral character to the credibility of the witness, is not erroneous in failing to fully explain the effect of proof of good moral character with reference to defendant who is also a witness. State v. Olds, 106-110.

The state is not permitted to assail the general character of the defendant until it has been placed in issue and even then not by proof of particular instances of misconduct but only by evidence of the general reputation or actual character with respect to the trait involved. State v. Thompson, 127-440.

Where the defendant's character and reputation are put in issue, a witness who testifies that he knew what people said of defendant's general reputation for truth, honesty and morality in the neighborhood in which he lived, prior to the commission of the crime, is admissible. State v. Prins, 117-505.

Proof of occasional visits to saloons or occasional drinking is not necessarily an impeachment of good moral character. State v. Richards, 126-497.

The real character of the defendant when his character has been put in issue may be shown as distinct from his reputation. Ibid.

Instruction as to evidence of good character in a particular case, held, correct. State v. Cunningham, 111-233.

necessarily erroneous to instruct that the jury must consider first the principal charge and if a verdict of guilty thereon be not found must proceed to the minor included offenses in the order of their gradation. State v. Leuhrman, 123-476.

The authority to permit the jury to separate is granted to the court and not to the judge. State v. Smith, 107-480.

SEC. 5383. Admonition.

Although the jury is to be directed not to form or express an opinion until the case is finally submitted, nevertheless an inadvertent act of a juror, pending the trial, in telling a person not interested in the case what his conclusion is or will be, does not necessarily require a setting aside of the verdict. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

The reading by jurors during the progress of the trial of newspapers containing reports of the trial and comments on the evidence, is improper, even though the newspaper accounts are not in themselves unfair. State v. Caine, 111 N. W. 443.

SEC. 5385. Law and fact.

The court has no power to instruct that an essential fact has been established, although all the evidence tends to prove such fact. State v. Lightfoot, 107-344. See also notes to next section.

SEC. 5386. Instructions.

Duty to instruct in general: It is error to present to the jury the facts as claimed by the state and also those testified to by the defendant, with the direction that the jury is to carefully consider these different claims, and acquit if on the whole case they entertain a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt. The objection is that the jury might be led to think that the primary issue is as to the matter of defense presented by the defendant. State v. Vance, 119-685.

It is error to call the attention of the jury to the fact that if the defendant is acquitted, the crime charged as against him, if committed, will go unpunished for the reason that the defendant cannot twice be put in jeopardy, under the law. State v. Hunter, 118-686; State v. Crofford, 121-395.

It is not error to call the attention of the jury to its duty to the state and to the defendant. State v. Wilson, 124-264.

It is not error to advise the jurors that the gravity or magnitude of the punishment prescribed by law for the offense charged should not be allowed to affect their judgment or determine their verdict. State v. Baldes, 133-158.

It is not necessarily error warranting a reversal in a prosecution for rape to fail to charge on request that the accusation is easily made, hard to prove, and harder to be defended against by the party accused though ever so innocent. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

It is not necessary in the instructions to define words in common use, such as the word "felonious." State v. Penney, 113-691.

Instructions not asked: An instruction need not be given on each specific phase of the case, except as requested. State v. House, 108-68.

It is not error to fail to call attention to a question arising on the evidence, where no such instruction is asked. State v. Seevers, 108-738.

It is the right of a defendant charged with the commission of a crime to have the jury properly instructed, and that every essential part of the case should be covered by the instructions given. But if the instructions as given are correct, the defendant cannot complain if the jury are not specifically instructed as to a question arising under the evidence, where no instruction is asked. State v. Hoot, 120-238.

On issue not presented: The jury should not be permitted to convict on an issue of fact not involved in the indictment and an instruction warranting such conviction is erroneous. State v. Nine, 105-131.

Not based on evidence: Where the evidence for the defendant in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder does not suggest that the assault was committed in self-defense, it is not necessary for the court to instruct the jury with reference to that subject. State v. Yates, 132-475.

Limitation of action: It is error for the court to omit to instruct as to the necessity of showing the commission of the crime within the statutory period of limitation. State v. Kunhi, 119-461.

As to alibi: Evidence tending to show an alibi supports the plea of not guilty, and no specific instruction on the subject is necessary where none is asked. State v. Judd, 132-296.

It is not error to fail to instruct as to alibi where no such instruction is not asked. State v. Lightfoot, 107-344.

Instructions as to facts: It is error for the court to say that the evidence shows without contradiction that the crime charged has been committed, confining the jury to the determination of the question whether the crime charged was committed by defendant. Ibid.

The fact that witnesses testified to material matters, and that there is no direct denial of such facts by other witnesses does not justify the court in instructing that such matters are not in dispute. State v. Austin, 109-118.

It is error for the court to instruct that a certain fact which the evidence tends to show, if true, would be a strong circumstance indicating the guilt of the defendant. State v. Kehr, 133-35.

It is error to instruct the jury that from any particular state of facts a presumption of guilt arises. The question of guilt is to be determined by the jury on all facts. State v. Poe, 123-118.

It is not proper to charge that circumstances tending to show the guilt of defendant gave rise to a presumption of guilt which must be overcome by the defendant in order to entitle him to an acquittal. State v. Brady, 121-561.

It is error to tell the jury with reference to a material fact that the proof shows the fact beyond all controversy. The question as to whether a material fact is established by the evidence must be left to the jury, even though there is no conflict in the evidence as to such fact. State v. Carter, 112-15.

It is error to instruct the jury that as to essential elements of the crime there is no conflict in the evidence, and leave the jury to find the defendant guilty without passing on such elements. State v. Bige, 112-433.

A court may in an instruction assume as true a particular evidential fact which is expressly admitted or is assumed, or is treated as true, by both parties, although such fact weighs against the defendant. State v. McKnight, 119-79.

It is not error to assume in the instructions the existence of a fact testified to by the defendant himself. State v. Mitchell, 130-697.

Where the question was whether defendant was intoxicated at the time of committing the act charged, held, that an instruction to the jury that "there is some evidence tending to show that the defendant" was to some extent under the influence of intoxicating liquor was erroneous in that it tended to indicate to the jury the court's view as to the weight of such evidence. State v. Dorland, 103-168.

Motive of prosecution: It is error to instruct as to defendant's guilt with reference to the motives of the prosecution. State v. Jackson, 128-543.

Circumstantial evidence: In submitting a case depending entirely upon circumstantial evidence, the jury should have careful direction as to the quantum of proof necessary to justify a conviction. State v. Brady, 121-561.

Where the prosecution does not depend on proof of a chain of circumstances to establish defendant's guilt, it is not error to fail to charge that the jury should be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of each link in the chain of circumstances relied upon to establish defendant's guilt. State v. Lucas, 122-141.

Confession: The court in instructing the jury with reference to a confession should explain the effect of the portion of the confession tending to exculpate the defendant as well as of that portion tending to incriminate him. State v. Busse, 127-318.

Presumption in favor of instructions: It is presumed in favor of the instructions that there was some occasion for giving them unless the contrary appears from the record. State v. Leuhrman, 123-476.

In general as to instructions, see notes to Code § 3705, in this Supplement.

As to additional instructions after the jury has retired for deliberation, see notes to Code § 5398, in this Supplement.

As to instructions with reference to a lower degree or included offenses, see notes to Code § 5406, in this Supplement.

SEC. 5389. Want of jurisdiction—no offense charged.

If evidence is introduced in behalf of the state, and is in dispute, and there is some evidence tending to show venue in the county in which the indictment was found, it is not proper to discharge the jury and order the prisoner committed to await a warrant from another county, and if defendant is thereafter put on trial in such other county he may plead the dismissal of the prosecution in the first county as a former adjudication. State v. Spayde, 110-726.

CHAPTER 25.

OF THE JURY AFTER SUBMISSION.

SECTION 5398. Additional instructions.

After the jury has been deliberating for some time without arriving at a verdict the court may properly call them in and instruct with reference to the desirability of a verdict and the necessity of aljuring pride of opinion, and of the proper manner of procédure in arriving at a verdict when a difference of opinion exists as to the facts. State v. Tripp, 113-698.

It is proper to allow the testimony of a witness to be read to the jury in open court at the request of the jurors. State v. Hunt, 112-509.

An additional instruction given to the jury pursuant to its request after retiring for deliberation, held proper. Ibid.

CHAPTER 26. OF THE VERDICT.

SECTION 5404. Verdict rendered.

A verdict for assault with intent to do great bodily injury is sufficient under an indictment charging assault with intent to commit great bodily injury. State v. Leuhrman, 123-476.

SEC. 5405. General and special.

A verdict of guilty as charged is sufficient to sustain a sentence for the offense charged in the indictment, although it is of such character the defendant might have been convicted of a lower degree or of an included crime as to which the jury has been fully instructed. State v. Yates, 132-475.

A verdict of acquittal imports an acquittal on every material allegation in the indictment and is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for any act which might have been proved under the indictment on which the acquittal was secured. State v. Price, 127-301.

SEC. 5406. Finding an offense of different degree.

Instructions as to lower degrees and included offenses: It is not error to instruct the jury as to the crime charged of which under the evidence the defendant might be convicted, although in fact he is convicted of a lower degree of the crime. State v. Jackson, 103-702.

It is proper for the court to instruct the jury that in a case of reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt of the offense charged, he may be convicted of a lower degree of the offense or of any included crime. State v. Leuhrman, 123-476.

Where under the evidence defendant is clearly guilty of the offense charged, or not guilty of any offense, it is not error to fail to give instructions with reference to included offenses. State v. Murphy, 109-116; State v. Stanley, 109-142; State v. Hoot, 120-238; State v. Atkins, 122-161.

The provision requiring the jury to find as to the degree does not require that in a prosecution for murder in the first degree an instruction be given as to the second degree where the facts show that defendant is either guilty of the crime charged or is innocent of any offense. So held, where the charge was of murder committed by poison. State v. Smith, 102-656; State v. Burtoch, 112-195.

To require an instruction as to an included offense there must be some evidence which would support a conviction for such offense. State v. Penney, 113-691; State v. Bone, 114-537.

Where one offense is necessarily included in that with which the defendant is charged, a conviction for the included offense will not be set aside on the ground that under the evidence the defendant must have been guilty of the offense charged if guilty in any degree. State v. Barkley, 129-484.

Error in an instruction as to an included crime will not necessitate reversal if the defendant is convicted of the higher crime, as to which there is no error. State v. Morris, 128-717.

It is not necessary to instruct as to an included crime for which there could not have been a conviction under the evidence. State v. Beabout, 100-155; State v. Van Tassel, 103-6.

It is not prejudicial error to submit to the jury an included offense of which the defendant could not be convicted under the indictment where the defendant is in fact convicted of the offense charged. State v. Sheets, 127-73.

Where the jury is instructed as to included offenses such offenses should be described in the instructions. State v. Thompson, 127-440.

In a prosecution for murder, where it is a matter of inference only whether the homicide was premeditated and deliberate, or done in a moment of desperation and passion, it is proper to instruct as to murder in the second degree. State v. Cunningham, 111-233.

It is not error in a prosecution for homicide to omit instructions as to assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury and assault and battery, where the record clearly shows that if defendant was guilty of any crime he was guilty at least of the crime of manslaughter. State v. Walker, 133-489.

It is not error in a prosecution for murder committed by lying in wait or other wilful, deliberate or premeditated killing, to charge as to included crimes although the evidence shows that the defendant if guilty of any crime is guilty of the crime charged. State v. Shepherd, 129-705.

While it is true that a defendant who has been tried on an indictment charging murder in the first degree and convicted of manslaughter only cannot be again tried for the offense of murder, it is not error when the defendant is put on trial a second time for manslaughter to read to the jury the original indictment charging murder. State v. Walker, 133-489.

There may be a conviction of manslaughter on evidence of gross negligence and recklessness of the defendant causing the death of the deceased, under an indictment charging him with murder in which there is no specific allegation as to negligence or recklessness. State v. Moore, 129-514.

Where defendant was charged with rape in having intercourse with a female under the age of consent, held, that it was not necessary to instruct with reference to a simple assault in view of the fact that if there was any assault it was at least an assault with intent to commit rape. State v. Sherman, 106-684.

The crime of assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury is not necessarily included in that of rape. State v. McDonough, 104-6.

While an assault is necessarily included in rape, yet if it appears from the evidence without question that if there was an assault there was also an assault and battery it will not be error to fail to instruct with reference to assault when a proper instruction as to assault and battery is given. Ibid.

There may be assault with intent to commit rape without an assault and battery. If the indictment does not charge the assault as accompanied with force it is error to instruct with reference to assault and battery as an included offense. State v. Desmond, 109-72.

Where an indictment for rape charges that defendant wilfully and feloniously assaulted the prosecutrix, and did wilfully and feloniously ravish and carnally know her, it is error to fail to charge the jury with reference to assault and battery, and simple battery. State v. Wolf, 112-458.

In a prosecution for rape where there is evidence tending to show want of consent, the court should instruct as to assault with intent to commit rape, assault and battery, and simple assault. State v. Trusty, 118-498.

Under a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape it is not error to fail to instruct as to assault and battery as an included crime, where the evidence would not justify a finding that an assault or battery was intended or committed. State v. Snider, 119-15.

In the prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape in which no battery is charged, an erroneous instruction as to assault and battery as an included crime will be error without prejudice if the defendant is convicted of the crime charged. State v. Miller, 124-429.

In a prosecution for rape alleged to have been committed with force and violence, if the evidence tends to show violence, the jury should be instructed with reference to assault and battery as an included crime. State v. Egbert, 125-443.

In a prosecution for rape under an indictment charging acts which would constitute an assault and battery, it is error to fail to charge with reference to such an included offense, although the jury has been instructed with reference to an assault. State v. Barkley, 129-484.

In a prosecution for rape, it is not necessary to instruct with reference to assault and battery as an included crime, where the allegations of the indictment charge nothing more than assault with intent and the commission of the offense. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

In a prosecution for rape, committed by having connection with a female under the age of consent, the court may properly omit any reference to any other included crime than that of assault with intent to commit rape, there being no evidence that the connection was without the consent of the female. State v. King, 117-484.

In a prosecution for rape in having connection with a female under the age of consent, the evidence showing no other force than that involved in the perpetration of the act, held that it was not error to fail to instruct as to assault or assault and battery. State v. Stevens, 133-684.

In a prosecution for robbery the court should instruct as to assault with intent to rob if there is any evidence of an assault. State v. Duffy, 124-705.

SEC. 5407. Included offenses.

Where the included offenses are not degrees of the crime charged, but are distinct, failure to give instructions as to included crimes is not necessarily prejudicial error, in the absence of a request for such instructions from defendant. State v. Murphy, 109-116.

On reversal of a conviction for manslaughter under an indictment charging murder in the first degree, the defendant can only again be put on trial for the offense of which he was convicted, and he is only entitled to the number of peremptory challenges allowed in case of a prosecution for such offense. State v. Smith, 132-645.

Under charge of the commission of a crime, there may be a conviction of an attempt. State v. Mahoney, 122-168.

As to instructions with reference to included offenses, see notes to preceding section.

CHAPTER 27.OF EXCEPTIONS.*SECTION 5415. As to what.

An exception is authorized in a criminal case as to any action or decision of the court which affects a material or substantial right of the party, whether such action or decision was made before or after the trial. Therefore, held, that a statement of the court in its decision overruling a motion for a new trial was properly embodied in the bill of exceptions. State v. Taylor, 103-22.

Error in an instruction which has been called to the court's attention by motion for a new trial may be reviewed on appeal, although the instruction was not excepted to. State v. Hamann, 109-646.

SEC. 5418. Taking exceptions.

There is no provision for a judge changing a bill of exceptions as offered for his signature to conform to his view of the facts; nor can he, by addenda to the bill of exceptions, incorporate other matter into the record. State v. Smith, 107-480.

A bill of exceptions signed by bystanders may be filed within the time allowed by statute or by order of court for filing bill of exceptions. State v. Taylor, 103-22.

It is not competent to contradict by a bill of exceptions signed by bystanders the recitals of the bill of exceptions as to the same matter signed by the judge. State v. Tripp, 113-698.

Misconduct of attorney as a ground for reversal on appeal can not be shown by affidavits, even though they are embodied in the bill of exceptions, but must be made to appear by recitals of the bill of exceptions itself. Although such affidavits may be made part of the record, they do not become competent evidence to prove the fact. State v. Burton, 103-28.

CHAPTER 28.OF NEW TRIAL.*SECTION 5424. Causes for.

As in civil cases: The rules recognized as to new trials in civil cases are applicable in criminal cases, although on some grounds the courts will set aside verdicts more readily in criminal than in civil cases. State v. Olds, 106-110.

No such procedure as an application for a new trial after judgment by petition is recognized in criminal cases. State v. Hayden, 131-1.

Misconduct of judge: Under the facts of a particular case, held that it was not such misconduct as to require a new trial that the judge, addressing the prosecuting witness, spoke to her as "my girl;" such form of address not necessarily indicating any sympathy with or immaturity on the part of the prosecuting witness. State v. Burns, 119-663.

It is error such as to necessitate a new trial, for the court to refer to the effect of an acquittal as preventing another trial and allowing the defendant, if guilty, to escape punishment. State v. Hunter, 118-686.

Absence of the judge from the court room, held, not to be ground of new trial where it appeared that the absence was during the argument of counsel and that the judge was not out of hearing of counsel at the time, and heard all that was said. State v. Porter, 105-677.

The fact that the judge is during the argument out of hearing and is not presiding over the proceedings will be a ground for reversal. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

While the absence of the judge from the court room during the trial may be ground of reversal, yet, where the defendant has consented thereto, he cannot afterwards complain if he might have secured the presence of the judge at any time, and shows no prejudice resulting to him from his absence. State v. Hammer, 116-284.

It is not sufficient as a ground for new trial that the judge was in an adjoining room, dictating instructions during the argument to the jury, if he was in such position as to hear the argument and see what took place in the court room. State v. Burns, 119-663.

Misconduct of jurors: Where the juror makes false answers as to having previously formed or expressed an opinion, and is shown to have been prejudiced against the defendant, a new trial may properly be granted. State v. Wright, 112-436.

The action of the members of the jury during the progress of the trial in reading newspaper accounts of the evidence, with comments thereon, is sufficient to authorize the granting of a new trial although the newspaper accounts are not unfair to the defendant. State v. Caine, 111 N. W. 443.

The consideration by the jury during their deliberations of the fact that defendant, if convicted, might have an appeal, while no appeal could be entertained for the correction of any error involved in an acquittal, does not constitute such misconduct as to require a reversal. State v. Lucas, 122-141.

Misconduct of the jury cannot be established by affidavits of attorneys based entirely upon alleged statements of jurors. State v. Tyler, 122-125.

Disqualification of juror: The objection that one of the jurors could not read or write the English language and that such fact was not known to the party complaining until after the trial will not be a ground for new trial where it appears that the complaining party, having been given the right to challenge, failed to claim such right as to such juror and made no examination of the juror as to his competency. In such case the objection will be deemed to have been waived. Overruling State v. Groome, 10-308; State v. Pickett, 103-714.

Where no examination of a juror is made before he is accepted, and it does not appear that his disqualification was not known to the defendant at that time, the right to object to the juror as disqualified is waived. State v. Burke, 107-659.

Where the juror gives false answers as to his having formed or expressed an opinion and is shown to have been prejudiced, the defendant is entitled to a new trial. State v. Wright, 112-436.

A showing that one of the jurors who has testified that he had not heard of the case nor formed or expressed an opinion with reference thereto, had in fact been present when the statements were made as to the commission of the crime, held, not sufficient to entitle the defendant to a new trial. State v. Geier, 111-706.

Misconduct of counsel: Where defendant make no complaint at the time as to improper remarks of counsel, and asks no direction to the jury for the purpose of removing prejudice arising therefrom, he cannot afterward complain. State v. Hogan, 115-455.

It is error in closing the case for the prosecution to state facts derogatory to the defendant which do not appear in evidence. State v. Williams, 122-115.

The mere statement of deductions from the evidence and conclusions as to what the conduct of a party might properly be in the future do not constitute such misconduct as to require a new trial. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

It does not constitute misconduct on the part of the prosecuting attorney in opening the case to the jury, where the defendant whose conviction for murder has been reversed on appeal is put on trial for manslaughter, to state to the jury that in his opinion the evidence would sustain a conviction of the higher offense. State v. Walker, 133-489.

The assertions of counsel as to a fact will not constitute misconduct if counsel does not purport to speak from other knowledge than that afforded by the evidence. State v. Bricker, 112 N. W. 645.

While the prosecuting attorney has no right to misrepresent or misstate the facts, he is not required to forego all the embellishments of oratory or leave uncultivated the fertile field of fancy. State v. Burns, 119-663.

It is not every indulgence in lurid argument on the part of counsel which will afford ground for granting a new trial. Beyond insisting that counsel must keep fairly within the record and abstain from inflammatory appeals to passion and prejudice, the court will not attempt to control the manner and method of argument to the jury. State v. Drake, 128-539.

Misconduct of the county attorney in argument to a jury alleged as consisting of the exhibition before the jury of a revolver by way of illustration, held not sufficient to require a new trial, although the revolver was not introduced in evidence as the one found in possession of defendant when arrested. State v. Brafford, 121-115.

It is improper for counsel for the prosecution to give countenance to violence or to inflame the passions of the jury. State v. Harmann, 112 N. W. 632.

It is improper for the prosecuting attorney to suggest to the jury the possibility of a lynching in case they should acquit. State v. Busse, 127-318.

Severe criticism by the prosecuting attorney of witnesses for the defense will not be a ground for new trial where it appears that as a whole the trial has been fair and impartial. State v. Nowells, 109 N. W. 1016.

Repeated attempts to get before the minds of the jury a fact which cannot properly be introduced in evidence, the purpose being to prejudice the minds of the jury against the defendant, may be sufficient misconduct on the part of the prosecuting attorney to require the granting of a new trial in case of conviction. State v. Roscum, 119-330.

It may constitute misconduct to ask improper questions on examination of a witness, although objections to the questions are sustained; but whether such misconduct works prejudice to the defendant is a matter peculiarly within the knowledge of the trial court, and its refusal to grant a new trial on that ground will not generally be interfered with. State v. Waterbury, 133-135.

Where the identity of the defendant as the person charged with the crime is in controversy, it is not improper for the prosecuting attorney to refer to the characteristics of the defendant's countenance. Ibid.

It is such misconduct as may require a new trial that the prosecution after adverse rulings of the court on the question insists on asking a witness as to a fact which is wholly inadmissible with the evident purpose of bringing that fact to the attention of the jury. State v. Blydenburg, 112 N. W. 634.

Publications in newspapers during the course of the trial, of documents secured from the prosecuting attorney, held not to necessitate a new trial, there being no indication of bad faith on the part of the prosecuting attorney, and no showing that the publication was in any way brought to the attention of the jury. State v. Walker, 133-489.

Where an improper statement of counsel is at once withdrawn and the jury directed to give it no consideration, the action of a trial court in overruling a motion for a new trial on account of such improper statement will not in general be reversed on appeal. State v. Mathews, 133-398.

Improper argument made use of by the prosecuting attorney cannot first be made the ground of objection on motion for new trial, but should be called to the attention of the court at the time, when the court might have restrained the continuance of the improper argument and prevented the prejudice which is claimed to have resulted therefrom. State v. Sale, 119-1.

In the absence of bad faith or a showing of prejudice the action of the trial court in overruling a motion for new trial on account of misconduct of the prosecuting attorney in asking improper questions, will not be reversed on appeal where it appears that the trial judge ruled promptly and correctly when objections were made and at the request of the defendant instructed the prosecuting attorney to abandon objectionable lines of examination, which instructions of the court were obeyed by the attorney. State v. Greenland, 125-141.

Error in admission of evidence: In general, error in the admission of improper evidence may be cured by its withdrawal from the jury, and by proper instructions in relation thereto. State v. Booth, 121-710.

Where incompetent evidence has been received, its subsequent withdrawal or exclusion by the court will ordinarily cure the error. But held that error in admitting evidence tending to show defendant guilty of other criminal acts, having no connection with the crime charged, was such error as could not be cured by withdrawing it from the consideration of the jury. State v. Brundige, 118-92.

Verdict against evidence: The rule with reference to granting new trials for want of evidence in criminal cases is different from that applied in civil. The supreme court, though proceeding carefully and cautiously, will not support a verdict if it be against the clear weight of the evidence. State v. Reinheimer, 109-624.

Witness not sworn: Where one of the material witnesses for the prosecution was not sworn, and the fact was not discovered until after the verdict, held that the defendant was entitled to a new trial. State v. Lugar, 115-268.

Fair trial: Where on an application for a new trial there was a showing of excitement and manifestation of prejudice on the part of those present in the court room, but it did not appear that there was any failure of the trial judge to discharge his full duty under the circumstances, held that it was not error to refuse to grant a new trial on that ground. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

The fact that a third person asks a juror pending the trial whether he knows that he is related to the defendant, and then advises him of such relationship, does not constitute a ground for a new trial. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

Newly discovered evidence is not a statutory ground for a new trial in a criminal case. State v. Watson, 102-651.

Newly discovered evidence is not in itself sufficient to warrant a new trial. State v. Reinheimer, 109-624.

Affidavits of newly discovered evidence do not necessarily entitle the defendant to a new trial. State v. Baughman, 111-71.

In a particular case, held, that the court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to grant a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence. State v. Seevers, 108-738.

Newly discovered evidence impeaching in character and on a collateral matter will not be ground for granting a new trial, especially where it is not such as to indicate that a different result might be anticipated on another trial. State v. Leuth, 128-189.

CHAPTER 29.

OF ARREST OF JUDGMENT.

SECTION 5426. Grounds for.

The objection that a defendant, whose case was re-submitted to another grand jury than the one to which it was first submitted, did not have opportunity to challenge the grand jurors who returned the indictment on which he was tried, must be raised by a motion to set aside the indictment, or by plea in abatement, and is not available on motion in arrest of judgment. State v. Brown, 128-24.

CHAPTER 30.

OF JUDGMENT.

SECTION 5431. Of conviction—time for.

As applied to a criminal case a judgment is the formal and final pronouncement of the court by which the prosecution is brought to an end, leaving nothing to be done except to carry such judgment into execution in case there has been a conviction. State v. Hortman, 122-104.

Where it does not appear that the court continued in session for three days after the return of the verdict, there cannot be a reversal of a sentence because three days were not allowed to elapse. State v. Roan, 122-136.

The fact that sentence is imposed without previously fixing a time therefor does not constitute error such as to require a reversal where it appears that the defendant has taken every step which would have been open to him had the time been fixed. State v. Usher, 111 N. W. 811.

The sentence of the court is evidenced only by the record, and after the sentence as imposed has been fully satisfied, it cannot be corrected by nunc pro tunc order so as to show the imposition of a fine in addition to the imprisonment to which the defendant was sentenced. Smith v. District Court, 132-603.

After the pronouncement of judgment by the court it is too late to withdraw a plea of guilty under the provision of Code § 5337 although the judgment has not yet been entered of record. Beatty v. Roberts, 125-619.

CHAPTER 31.

OF EXECUTION.

SECTION 5443. Copy of judgment.

The court has no power to suspend sentence after it is announced. Miller v. Evans, 115-101.

Therefore, a defendant who after sentence of imprisonment has been allowed by the officer to remain at large until the expiration of the term of imprisonment fixed by the sentence can still be committed to serve out the term. The term at which the sentence is to be carried out is ordinarily directory only, and forms no part of the judgment of the court. Ibid.

CHAPTER 32.

OF APPEALS.

SECTION 5448. When allowed.

From final judgment: Where the record showed that the court sustained a motion in arrest of judgment and ordered defendant to appear before the next grand jury, held, that such ruling was a final judgment from which an appeal might be taken by the prosecution. State v. Alverson, 105-152.

There cannot be an appeal in a criminal case from an order overruling a demurrer. State v. Doty, 109-453.

This section provides only for appeals in criminal cases from the final judgment, and not from an intermediate order. State v. Wright, 111-621.

No appeal in a criminal case from an intermediate order or ruling is authorized even though such order or ruling would have finally disposed of the case. State v. Sloan, 131-676.

The action of the trial court in sustaining a demurrer to the indictment and re-submitting the case to the grand jury does not constitute a final judgment from which the state may appeal. State v. Evans, 111-80.

Effect of appeal: Until the judgment of the lower court is modified or reversed it continues in force notwithstanding an appeal, although the right to execute it may be suspended; therefore the record of conviction for a felony may be introduced to impeach the credibility of a witness although an appeal from the judgment in such case is pending. Hackett v. Freeman, 103-296.

Appeal by state: It is not contemplated that on an appeal by the state the supreme court shall deal with imaginary questions. State v. Gunn, 106-120.

The fact that on an appeal by the state the court finds the ruling of the district court on a demurrer and its judgment thereon to be erroneous will not affect the right of defendant to insist that as to him the judgment was final. State v. Fields, 106-406.

On affirmance of a conviction in the supreme court on appeal, even though by an equally divided court as provided in Code § 195, the judgment of the trial court is to be carried into execution. No other judgment than the announcement by written opinion filed, of the affirmance by operation of law, is required. Busse v. Barr, 132-463.

SEC. 5450. Transcript—duty of clerk.

While a judge may have some discretion under Code § 254 as to ordering a transcript at the expense of the county when defendant is unable to pay for it, yet, if he finds that fact he should not refuse to order the transcript merely because in his judgment the defendant has had a fair trial. State v. Robbins, 106-688.

Under the provisions of Code § 254, that a transcript of the evidence may be ordered at the expense of the county where it is shown by the defendant that he is unable to pay for such transcript, for the purpose of appeal, the application for such transcript should be made to the trial judge. State v. Carter, 109-69.

The ruling of the judge as to granting a transcript at the expense of the county is subject to review. State v. Wright, 111-621.

SEC. 5462. Decision—costs on reversal.

Arguments: Although no arguments are filed on either side, the supreme court will not dismiss the appeal but will inspect the record and ascertain whether it shows any manifest error in the proceedings. State v. Rea, 126-65.

Reversal—on what grounds: The erroneous admission of material evidence which must in the nature of the case have been prejudicial, will be ground for reversal. State v. Walker, 124-414.

The full duty of the supreme court on appeal in a criminal case is discharged when the judgment of conviction is affirmed after a finding that the defendant has had a fair trial to an impartial jury, and that the verdict is supported by the evidence, and that no prejudicial error of law has been committed. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

Fair trial: A criminal case may be reversed on the ground that the defendant has not had a fair trial, although no specific rulings have been properly objected to. State v. Barr, 123-139.

Speedy trial: On an appeal in a criminal case it is not competent for the court to determine that the prosecution should have been dismissed because the defendant had not been given a speedy trial. State v. Sloan, 131-676.

Objections not made below: The rule which obtains in civil cases that an objection not made in the court below cannot be considered in the supreme court on appeal does not apply in criminal cases where the statute requires that the supreme court shall examine the record and without regard to technical errors or defects which do not affect the substantial rights of the parties render such judgment on the record as the law demands. State v. Nine, 105-131.

Objections waived: The defendant may waive objections to incompetent testimony and when he does so by silence or otherwise his conviction will not be reversed on account of the introduction of such evidence. State v. Conroy, 126-472.

Verdict against evidence: The supreme court, though proceeding carefully and cautiously, will interfere in criminal cases more readily than in civil on the ground that a verdict is without support in the evidence. State v. Burtoch, 112-195.

In a particular case, held that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction for murder by the administration of poison. Ibid.

Misconduct of counsel: The supreme court on appeal may grant a new trial where it appears that defendant has been prejudiced by the act of the prosecuting attorney in making repeated offers to prove facts which should not be considered by the jury as bearing upon defendant's guilt. State v. Roscum, 119-330.

Error cured: Error in admitting evidence of a confession may usually be obviated by directing the jury not to consider it, after it has become apparent that the admission was improper. State v. Moran, 131-645.

Error without prejudice: Action of the court which is absolutely harmless and without prejudice will not be a ground of reversal, whether erroneous or not. State v. Novak, 109-717.

In criminal cases only technical errors which do not affect the substantial rights of the defendant are to be disregarded as without prejudice. If the error involves a material point in the case, prejudice must be presumed unless on survey of the whole record the contrary affirmatively appears. State v. Nugent, 111 N. W. 927.

In appeals in criminal cases the supreme court considers the case without regard to technical errors or defects which do not affect substantial rights of parties. State v. Robbins, 106-688.

A conviction will not be reversed for a refusal to allow a witness to answer a question asked where it appears that the response to the question desired would have been favorable to the party objecting. State v. Kuhn, 117-216.

If from the entire record it clearly appears that an error, committed by the trial court, was harmless, it will not necessitate a reversal. State v. Miller, 124-429; 100 N. W. 334.

Error in an instruction as to an included crime will not necessitate reversal if the defendant is convicted of the higher crime, as to which there is no error. State v. Morris, 128-717.

Exceptions necessary: Defendant in a criminal case may waive error on appeal, and he does so by not taking exception in the lower court to the ruling of which he subsequently complains. And if the defendant files an argument on appeal the court will consider only the errors urged in such argument. State v. Schwab, 112-666.

Where proper exceptions are not taken, rulings on questions of law raised during the trial will not be considered on appeal. State v. Williams, 115-97.

Waiver of right to appeal: An appeal in a criminal case is to be heard and decided upon its merits. There is no provision for dismissing such appeal on the ground that defendant has by statement in the lower court with a view of securing a mitigated sentence waived such right. But the right to have any particular questions reviewed may be waived by the withdrawal in the lower court of objections to rulings afterwards complained of. State v. Conroy, 133-195.

Costs: The provision that in case of reversal or modification in defendant's favor of a judgment on appeal he shall be entitled to recover the costs of printing abstracts and briefs, to be paid by the county from which the appeal is taken, applies to suits pending at its passage. State v. Dorland, 106-40.

The recovery against the county in such case is to be by way of taxation of costs. If the costs thus taxed are not paid by the county they may undoubtedly be recovered by suit against it. Ibid.

Rehearing: While in civil cases the supreme court will not grant a rehearing on account of matters not urged in the original presentation of the case, this rule does not apply in criminal cases, and a reversal may be ordered on grounds presented for the first time on rehearing. State v. Phillips, 119-652.

SEC. 5468. Time of imprisonment deducted.

The deduction of the time of imprisonment which defendant has served under a sentence which has subsequently been reversed is to be fixed by the court, and the period of imprisonment specified in the second judgment is to be what remains after deduction is made from that which the court finds to be the proper term of imprisonment on the second conviction. It will be presumed, therefore, that the term fixed by the court on the second conviction has been determined in view of the amount of deduction to which the prisoner is entitled. Travis v. Hunter, 109-602.

In giving credit for a term of imprisonment already served, under sentence which has been set aside on appeal, the good time which the defendant has earned in serving such former sentence is to be taken into account. State v. Barr, 133-132.

If in imposing the second sentence in such a case the court exceeds the limitation thus fixed, the excess of the second sentence is void, and the prisoner is entitled to discharge after serving so much of the term of imprisonment fixed in the second sentence as might properly have been imposed. Ibid.

CHAPTER 34.

OF EVIDENCE AND WITNESSES.

SECTION 5483. As in civil cases.

Declarations or admissions of defendant: Acts, conduct, threats, declarations and statements of a person accused of crime occurring before it was committed are admissible to show a motive or intent and may be established not only by direct but also by circumstantial evidence. State v. Smith, 102-656.

Threats made by the accused against the person or property of the injured party may be shown to prove the existence of malice to connect the accused with the commission of the crime. State v. Millmeir, 102-692.

Statements by defendant made after the crime in question was committed, held, not to be shown to have relation to the crime and therefore to have been erroneously admitted. Ibid.

As a general rule, verbal admissions of a party should be received with great caution as that kind of evidence is subject to imperfections and mistake, but held that it was not necessary to instruct the jury to this effect where the admission relied on appeared to have been made deliberately and understandingly in a conversation in which his purpose was to state the particular facts of his connection with the crime. State v. Jackson, 103-702.

As to confessions, see notes to Code § 5491 in this Supplement.

Involuntary confessions: Inculpatory facts, discovered by means of involuntary confessions, are not excluded. State v. Height, 117-650.

Acts and declarations of co-conspirators:

Where the acts of co-conspirators may be shown as against defendant their declarations in explanation of their conduct are also admissible. State v. Healy, 105-162.

To justify the admission of acts and declarations of a co-conspirator as against the defendant, the alleged conspiracy must be shown by testimony outside of such acts and declarations. The rule allowing the statements of one co-conspirator to be given in evidence against another is a marked exception to the general rule excluding hearsay testimony and applies only when those statements are made pending the conspiracy and in furtherance of its unlawful purposes. State v. Crofford, 121-395.

Statements by a co-conspirator made before the formation of the conspiracy or after its accomplishment are not admissible except as against the person making them. Ibid.

The prima facie showing of the fact of conspiracy is first addressed to the court alone simply as governing its action in the admission of evidence. But when a prima facie case is thus made, the final determination whether such conspiracy did or did not exist should be left to the jury, and the finding by the jury of the fact of conspiracy is the necessary preliminary to the consideration by them of acts and declarations of the co-conspirator. An instruction to this effect should be given. Ibid.

While it is within the discretion of the trial court to admit proof of acts and declarations of joint conspirators even before a prima facie case of conspiracy has been made, yet if subsequently the evidence does not tend to show that the person making the declarations was a co-conspirator with the defendant in the commission of the crime charged and made the declarations in carrying out the conspiracy, the declarations should be withdrawn from the jury. State v. Walker, 124-414.

Circumstantial evidence may be sufficient to show that the person making the declarations and the defendant were co-conspirators for the commission of the crime, but it is not enough to justify the consideration of the declarations against the defendant that the evidence introduced tends to raise a suspicion of a conspiracy. Ibid.

The sufficiency of the proof of the conspiracy to justify introduction of declarations of one conspirator against another in the first instance, should be determined by the trial judge and only when a prima facie case is made out should the question of conspiracy be left to the jury. Ibid.

The declarations of a co-conspirator, to be admissible, should be shown to have been made pending the conspiracy and in furtherance of its unlawful purpose. Ibid.

Acts and declarations of co-conspirators in carrying out the common enterprise may be shown as against one of them although not done or made in the presence of the defendant. State v. Dickerhoff, 127-404.

Acts and declarations of a woman upon whom the crime of abortion is alleged to have been committed are admissible as against one charged with the commission of the offense upon proof that the crime was committed in pursuance of a previous conspiracy to which the woman was a party. State v. Crofford, 133-478.

Those who join in a conspiracy to commit a crime subsequent to its inception adopt the prior acts of their associates, in such sense that the prior acts and declarations of such associates are admissible as against them. Ibid.

Evidence of acts done in furtherance of a common unlawful purpose is relevant as against one engaged in carrying out such purpose. State v. Donovan, 125-239.

Against one of joint defendants: Where two or more defendants are joined together, evidence admissible against one of them may be introduced although it is inadmissible against the others, the jury being directed to consider such evidence only as against the defendant as to whom it is admissible. State v. Wolf, 112-458.

Testimony of one jointly accused: One of two persons separately charged with the commission of a crime identical as to each, may be called as a witness upon the trial of the other. State v. Cobley, 128-114.

Statements in hearing of defendant: Declarations of one who has been recently poisoned made in extremis in the presence of one whom he charges with the administration of the poison, held, to be admissible as against the person so charged. State v. Kuhn, 117-216.

It is competent to prove declarations made against the defendant in his presence. State v. Worthen, 124-408.

Statements made by a third person in the presence of the defendant with reference to the facts and circumstances of the crime may be proven as tending to implicate him. State v. Burns, 124-207.

Declarations of third persons: Declarations of third persons with reference to defendant's guilt are not admissible as independent evidence unless as a part of the res gestae, or unless by independent evidence they are shown to have been made by a co-conspirator. State v. Walker, 124-414.

In a criminal prosecution, books of account, not kept by the defendant, and the entries in which are not made by his direction, are not admissible against him. State v. Ames, 119-680.

Dying declarations: Declarations made under a solemn sense of approaching death are only competent as to facts which the witness might testify to if living. Therefore, expressions of opinion on the part of deceased are not admissible as dying declarations. State v. Wright, 112-436.

Dying declarations must be shown to have been made under a sense of impending death, but this apprehension of certain dissolution may be inferred from the conduct, condition or statements of the declarant. The question as to whether such statements are admissible as dying declarations is for the court. State v. Kuhn, 117-216.

The statement in such a declaration with reference to the defendant that "she poisoned me" is not inadmissible on the ground that it states a conclusion. Ibid.

Statements by way of dying declarations are admissible which contain no more than assertions of fact as to who fired the fatal shot, and as to the manner and attending circumstances of the shot, that it was intentional and not accidental. State v. Fielding, 112 N. W. 539.

While dying declarations of deceased are admissible for as well as against a defendant charged with criminal homicide, yet they are not admissible in either case if they state merely a conclusion or opinion. Nor are statements in a dying declaration which are in the nature of conclusions admissible in favor of the defendant as admissions against interest, the legal controversy being not between the deceased and defendant, but between the state and the defendant. State v. Sale, 119-1.

To be admissible as a dying declaration, the declaration of deceased must appear to have been made at a time when he was in fact in extremis and under the belief of impending dissolution. State v. Dennis, 119-688.

The question of the admissibility of the statement as a dying declaration is for the court, and should be determined from all the facts and circumstances appearing in the case. The court is not limited in its inquiry to what was said by the declarant upon the subject, but the fact may be proved like any other fact in the case. Ibid.

To render dying declarations admissible it must appear that the person making them was actually dying, or was suffering from mortal injury and that he was fully conscious of such fact, and that the words were spoken under solemn conviction of impending dissolution. State v. Phillips, 118-600.

Where the wife of deceased testified with reference to dying declarations, that the deceased declared, "I cannot stand it if this pain does not leave me soon," held that her evidence did not sufficiently show that the declarations were made under a sense of impending death. Such declarations should be admitted only where the preliminary showing that deceased was in fact in extremis, and had himself given up all hope of recovery, is clear and unequivocal. The fact that the declarant realized that he was in danger of death, and believed that he must die if relief be not soon administered, is not enough. Ibid.

While it is for the court to pass upon the admissibility of the declarations in evidence, the jury should be required to take into consideration all the testimony bearing upon the character of the alleged dying declaration and the circumstances under which it was made, for the purpose of determining whether it was made under such circumstances as to entitle it to be considered, and the jury should be explicitly instructed as to such matter. Ibid.

Statements of the deceased in a particular case held sufficient to show consciousness of impending dissolution, such as to make his declarations admissible as dying declarations. State v. McKnight, 119-79.

Dying declarations are to be strictly limited to the facts and circumstances attending the immediate injury from which the declarant is about to die, and statements as to prior occurrences are inadmissible. Ibid.

Where dying declarations are reduced to writing and signed by the deceased parol testimony as to the declarations should be excluded as the best evidence. State v. Busse, 127-318.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held that knowledge of impending death was sufficiently shown to justify the admission in evidence of dying declarations. State v. Nowells, 109 N. W. 1016.

Attempt to escape: Evidence of attempted escape is admissible as tending to show guilt. In response the defendant may show, if he can, that the attempt to escape was because of fear of mob violence. State v. Desmond, 109-72.

Flight: The fact of flight is a circumstance prima facie indicative of guilt. State v. Matheson, 130-440.

Evidence of other crimes and similar acts: In a prosecution for maliciously exposing a poisonous substance with intent that it be taken by a domestic animal, evidence of such acts with reference to other animals is admissible to show intent. State v. Lightfoot, 107-344.

The state cannot prove against a defendant any crime not alleged in the indictment, either as a foundation for separate punishment, or as aiding the proofs that he is guilty of the crime charged. The exceptions to the rule may be classified as follows: Evidence as to other offenses is incompetent to establish (1) motive, (2) intent, (3) absence of mistake or accident, (4) a common scheme embracing the commission of two or more crimes so related to each other that proof of one tends to prove the others, and (5) the identity of the person charged with the commission of the crime under investigation. State v. Vance, 119-685.

An allegation of crime cannot be established by proof of independent criminal acts or of defendant's general disreputable character. State v. Berger, 121-581.

An accused person is not to be proved guilty of one crime by proving that he has committed another. In a few exceptional cases the commission of other criminal acts may be shown for the purpose of establishing the intent, but generally speaking this exception applies only to cases in which the criminal character of the act depends upon the specific intent with which it is committed. State v. Roscum, 119-330.

Subject to certain well defined exceptions, evidence of a crime committed by the defendant other than that with which he is charged should be excluded. State v. Crofford, 121-395.

Evidence of particular crimes, committed at the same time and place, by the same person, is sometimes admissible, but where offered to show defendant's connection with the main offense, it should sufficiently appear that the defendant was connected with the crime with which he is charged. State v. Wackernagel, 118-12.

Evidence of the commission by the defendant of other criminal acts, which have no connection with the crime charged, may constitute such error as cannot be cured by subsequently directing the jury not to give consideration to such evidence. State v. Brundige, 118-92.

Evidence of a distinct crime from that of which the defendant is charged cannot be shown unless it tends to establish a criminal intent with reference to the act with which the defendant is charged. State v. Carmean, 126-291.

If evidence is material and relevant to the issue, the mere fact that it tends to establish guilt of a crime other than the one alleged furnishes no ground for its rejection. State v. Wrand, 108-73.

Any evidence directly tending to prove the crime charged is admissible although it may also tend to prove the commission by defendant of some other crime. State v. Donovan, 125-239.

Evidence which tends to show guilty knowledge, intent, purpose or design, is competent though it may also tend to prove that the defendant has committed some other crime. State v. Levich, 128-372.

In a prosecution for adultery, distinct adulterous acts, committed between the same parties, may be proven in explanation of or as characterizing the acts and conduct of the parties complained of as constituting the particular act of the offense charged. State v. Higgins, 121-19.

When the issue is as to criminal intimacy between persons of opposite sex, evidence of prior acts of indecent familiarity is competent as showing an antecedent probability. State v. Trusty, 122-82.

Ordinarily evidence of another offense other than that alleged may not be received, but to this rule there are well established exceptions, one of these being in case of rape committed by having carnal connection with a female under the age of consent. In a prosecution for such crime, evidence of other acts of the same character between the parties may be proven. State v. King, 117-484.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape by having connection with a girl under the age of consent, held, that improper conduct of defendant with other girls in the same transaction might be proved. State v. Desmond, 109-72.

In a prosecution for rape, evidence of other similar acts of the defendant with reference to the complainant as tending to show the disposition and intent of the accused in the particular act with which he is charged is admissible. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

In a prosecution for rape the prosecuting witness may testify as to other and prior assaults made upon her by the defendant. State v. Carpenter, 124-5.

In a prosecution for cheating by false pretenses, proof of other false pretenses of like kind made by the defendant to the prosecutor at about the time the offense charged was committed, is admissible as bearing upon defendant's evil motive and intent. State v. Gibson, 132-53.

In a prosecution for obtaining money by false pretenses, other similar fraudulent transactions by the defendant may be shown as bearing upon the question of intent. State v. Seligman, 127-415.

In a prosecution for obtaining property by false pretenses, evidence of similar pretenses made about the same time and in the same neighborhood to other persons may be shown, if accompanied with evidence that such pretenses were false. State v. Carter, 112-15.

In a prosecution for forgery, evidence of other similar forgeries may be introduced to show the intent. State v. Prins, 113-72.

Alibi: While the defense of alibi must be made out by a preponderance of the evidence relating thereto, nevertheless the defendant is entitled to acquittal if all the evidence, including that relating to alibi, leaves in the minds of the jury a reasonable doubt as to defendant's guilt of the crime charged. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

Circumstantial evidence: Where the conviction of a crime is sought on circumstantial evidence, each circumstance necessary to reach a conclusion of guilt must be fully and fairly proven, and if in considering any such necessary circumstance the jury have a reasonable doubt as to the sufficiency of the evidence, such doubt should be resolved in favor of the defendant; and the jury should be so instructed. State v. Harmann, 112 N. W. 632.

Where it is sought to establish a crime by circumstantial evidence, the jury should be distinctly informed as to the established and approved rules governing the proof of crime by that form of evidence. State v. Blydenburg, 112 N. W. 634.

It is not error to instruct the jury that a criminal charge may be established by circumstantial evidence as well as by direct and positive proof. State v. Walker, 133-489.

Self-crimination: Although there is no statutory or constitutional provision against requiring defendant in a criminal case to give self-criminating evidence, held that the general guaranty of due process of law was sufficient to render incompetent as against the defendant evidence of the result of a compulsory examination of his person. State v. Height, 117-650.

SEC. 5484. Who competent—defendant as witness.

Defendant as witness before indictment: It will not be ground for setting aside the indictment that the person against whom a charge is being investigated on which the indictment is subsequently found is called and examined as a witness. State v. Shepherd, 129-705.

Co-defendants: Where one of two defendants is separately tried the provisions of this section are not applicable as to failure to testify on the part of defendant not on trial. State v. Hogan, 115-455.

Criminating evidence: The statutory provision that defendant cannot be called as a witness by the state in a criminal prosecution is not in its terms broad enough to cover the constitutional guaranty found in some states against criminating evidence. But the common law rule against requiring a witness to give self-criminating evidence in any judicial proceeding is covered by the general constitutional provision as to due process of law, and evidence of facts discovered by the compulsory examination of the person of the accused is not admissible. State v. Height, 117-650.

Impeachment: Defendant testifying as a witness cannot complain of impeachment by proof of bad reputation at the time of the commission of the crime, any effect on his reputation of reports with reference to such crime being thus excluded. State v. Hayden, 131-1.

Where the defendant is a witness in his own behalf he may be asked on cross-examination as to his residence and occupation, although answers to such questions may tend to disgrace and discredit him. State v. Wasson, 126-320.

Instructions: It is error to instruct the jury with reference to the testimony of defendant in such way as to authorize them to treat the defendant as a witness already impeached, and lead them to think that he should be corroborated in order to be believed. State v. Hunter, 118-686.

It is not error to tell the jury that in considering defendant's testimony they should take into consideration the circumstances under which it was given, his interest in the event of the suit, and all

The rule against self-criminating evidence does not make it unlawful to require the defendant in a criminal case to uncover his face or hands, or otherwise exhibit those portions of his person which are usually subject to personal inspection for the purpose of identification. But he cannot be compelled to exhibit those portions of his body which are usually covered. Ibid.

other circumstances, and that they are not required to receive blindly the testimony of the accused person as true, but may consider whether it is true as made in good faith or only for the purpose of avoiding conviction. State v. Walker, 133-489.

Where defendant testified as a witness in his own behalf and was the only witness interested in the result of the case who did testify, held, that it was not error to call the attention of the jury to the fact that the defendant was so interested and that such interest might be taken into account in weighing his testimony. State v. Young, 104-730.

It is not error for the court to direct the attention of the jury to the fact that the defendant, who has testified, is an interested party as bearing on the weight to be given to his testimony. State v. Ryan, 113-536.

The fact that defendant was the wife of deceased does not change the rule that the credibility of her testimony is for the jury, and it is proper to instruct the jury that they may consider her interest, even though the existence of the marital relation might be regarded as strengthening the presumption of innocence. State v. Hossack, 116-194.

The court should on the request of defendant give an instruction in accordance with the provisions of this section, even though no reference has been made to the failure of defendant to be a witness. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

Comment by prosecuting attorney: The provision of this section that when defendant does not become a witness, his failure to do so shall not be referred to, does not render it improper for the prosecuting attorney to refer to the fact that in certain respects the evidence of one who testifies is not contradicted, even though it appears that as to the matter thus testified to the defendant was the only person who could have taken the stand and testified in denial. State v. Snider, 119-15.

It does not constitute an improper reference to the failure of defendant to testify as a witness that the attorney for the state calls attention to the evidence of a witness as being uncontradicted, although the only witness who could have controverted the truth of such testimony is the defendant himself. State v. Hasty, 121-507.

Remarks of counsel in a particular case held not objectionable as referring to failure of defendant to testify. State v. Davis, 110-746.

The reference to the failure of the defendant to testify which is prohibited, is any reference which may come to the notice of the jury. The prohibition does not extend to a reference to that matter in argument to the court not in the presence of the jury. State v. Seery, 129-259.

If notwithstanding an improper reference by the prosecuting attorney to the fact that defendant had been convicted on a former trial the counsel for defendant expressly waive the error and elect to proceed with the trial of the case, such improper statement cannot afterwards be made the ground for a new trial. State v. Smith, 132-645.

Comment by jurors: Reference by jurors in their consultation to the fact that defendant was not a witness is not made by statute a ground for a new trial, and does not make a new trial necessary where it appears that the fact was not taken into account by the jurors in reaching their verdict. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

SEC. 5485. Cross-examination of defendant.

The defendant who has testified as a witness may be cross-examined with reference to his various places of residence, his going under assumed names, and his whereabouts at particular times. State v. Watson, 102-651.

Where defendant in a criminal case is a witness he may be cross-examined as to his different occupations and places of residence. State v. Chingren, 105-169.

A defendant who becomes a witness may be cross-examined with reference to his memory, history, motives or matters affecting his credibility. State v. Kuhn, 117-216.

SEC. 5488. Corroboration in rape, seduction, etc.

Question is for jury: Whether there is any corroborating evidence is a question for the court; but its weight and sufficiency is solely for the jury. State v. Bricker, 112 N. W. 645.

The requirement of corroboration is met if there is some independent evidence tending to corroborate the prosecutrix in connecting the defendant with the commission of the crime, and the sufficiency of such evidence is for the jury. State v. Norris, 127-683.

The quantum of corroborative proof is not fixed by the law. If there is some proof by way of corroboration it is sufficient to sustain a verdict. State v. Norris, 122-154.

The statute does not fix the amount or kind of evidence required in corroboration, nor is its sufficiency to be determined by excluding the evidence of the injured party. If considered in connection therewith the other evidence tends to identify and single out the accused as the perpetrator of the crime. It is of that character contemplated by the statute and its sufficiency is to be passed upon by the jury. State v. Baker, 106-99.

Where there was evidence of circumstances tending to identify and point out the defendant as the perpetrator of the crime, held, that it constituted sufficient corroboration to go to the jury. Ibid.

Evidence in a prosecution for rape that the prosecuting witness, in making complaint soon after the offense, named the defendant as the guilty party does not constitute such corroboration of her own testimony charging him with the crime as is required under this section. Evidence of complaint made by the prosecuting witness soon after the commission of the offense is corroborative only of her evidence that the crime was committed. State v. Wheeler, 116-212.

The confession of the defendant may supply the necessary corroboration of the testimony of the prosecutrix necessary to connect him with the commission of the crime. State v. Icenbire, 126-16.

The facts and circumstances surrounding the case, as established by the evidence, at the time of the commission of the offense, and all the circumstances as shown by the evidence, are to be considered by the jury in order to determine whether or not there is other evidence than the testimony of the prosecutrix tending to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense. State v. Carpenter, 124-5.

The fact that the parties kept company and acted as lovers usually do, and other like circumstances, are sufficient to constitute the corroborating evidence necessary to connect the defendant with the offense. State v. Reinheimer, 109-624.

Proof that defendant visited prosecutrix as a suitor is not sufficient, as a matter of law, to constitute the required corroboration. State v. Bess, 109-657.

Evidence of conduct of defendant towards prosecutrix as a lover prior to and about the time of the alleged seduction, held sufficient corroborative evidence. State v. Mulholland, 115-170.

While acquaintance and opportunity will not suffice of themselves to constitute corroborative evidence, yet if it appears that in addition thereto visits were made, company was kept and acts and conduct were indulged in such as usually characterize lovers, the jury in considering such evidence in connection with all the other evidence in the case may be warranted in finding therefrom sufficient corroboration. State v. Smith, 124-334.

Mere proof of acquaintance and opportunity does not constitute the corroboration required in cases of seduction. State v. Kissock, 111-690.

In prosecutions for seduction proof of acquaintance and of opportunity is not alone sufficient corroboration of the prosecuting witness, but the fact that accused was waiting on prosecutrix as a suitor, shown by his being with her attending church or entertainments, taking long drives, etc., may be sufficient. Proof of admissions on the part of accused that he was waiting on prosecutrix only ostensibly as a suitor, may furnish the necessary corroboration. State v. Hughes, 106-125.

Proof of a statement by defendant made within a week after the alleged seduction that he was going to the house of prosecutrix for sexual intercourse, held, properly admissible as tending to show that such relation had existed between them. Ibid.

While mere opportunity does not of itself amount to corroboration, yet if this opportunity is shown to have been of the defendant's creation, and made with apparent deliberation, it may with other evidence be sufficient to constitute the corroboration required. State v. Crouch, 130-478.

The testimony of the prosecutrix alone is not sufficient to connect the defendant with the crime. Opportunity alone is not of itself under some circumstances such corroborating evidence tending to connect defendant with the crime of assault to commit rape as is required by the statute. State v. Egbert, 125-443.

In the absence of any corroborating evidence such as is required by the statute, the court should on defendant's motion direct a verdict in his favor. Ibid.

Corroboration may be found, not alone in any one particular fact, but in the relation of the parties and the attending circumstances. State v. Hayes, 105-82.

The crime being established, evidence of intimacy and actual cohabitation is sufficient as connecting defendant with the crime. State v. Wycoff, 113-670.

Proof of other similar acts of the defendant with reference to the prosecuting witness tending to show the disposition and intent of the accused in the particular act with which he is charged may furnish the necessary corroboration. State v. Johnson, 133-38.

Any evidence tending to identify and single out the defendant as the perpetrator of the crime which is proven by the testimony of the prosecuting witness is sufficient to afford the corroboration required by the statute. State v. Waters, 132-481.

Where the evidence tends to exclude the possibility of anyone other than the defendant having committed the offense and confirms the testimony of the prosecutrix that it was committed by the defendant, it furnishes sufficient corroboration. State v. Stevens, 133-684.

A writing by defendant tending to connect him with sexual intercourse had with the prosecuting witness on one date, held, not to be a corroboration of the evidence of prosecutrix with reference to a connection had at previous date. State v. Burns, 110-745.

The corroboration must be by evidence other than that of the prosecutrix, and must tend to connect the defendant with the crime. Proof that prosecutrix gave birth to an illegitimate child is, therefore, not a corroborative circumstance. State v. McGinn, 109-641; State v. Coffman, 112-8; State v. Kissock, 111-690.

The fact of the birth of a child is not to be taken into consideration as furnishing the necessary corroborative evidence. State v. Dolan, 132-196.

Corroboration of the testimony of prosecutrix held sufficient in particular cases. State v. Burns, 119-663; State v. Bartlett, 127-689.

Incest: Corroboration is not required in a prosecution for incest. State v. Kouhns, 103-720.

Instructions: Corroboration is one of the essentials of conviction without which the accused is entitled to an acquittal and it is the duty of the court to so instruct the jury although no such instruction is asked. State v. Carnagy, 106-483.

An instruction that there must be evidence corroborating the testimony of the prosecuting witness without specifically stating that the corroboration must tend to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense, is erroneous. State v. Fountain, 110-15.

Error cured: Errors in admission of evidence and instructions as to corroboration on a charge of assault with intent to commit rape become immaterial if the conviction is for simple assault. State v. Hoover, 111 N. W. 323.

SEC. 5489. Corroboration of accomplice.

The woman with whom the unlawful act in seduction or incest is committed is not an accomplice in such sense as to require corroboration. State v. Kouhns, 103-720.

To make corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice necessary as provided by statute it is only required that it appear that the witness was an accomplice by a preponderance of the evidence. State v. Smith, 102-656.

The corroboration is not sufficient in such a case if it merely shows the commission of the offense or the circumstances thereof. Ibid.

Instructions in a particular case as to corroboration required to support the testimony of an accomplice, held correct. State v. Smith, 106-701.

Where defendant introduces a witness who testifies to being an accomplice with another in the commission of the crime charged, defendant cannot complain that instructions were not given as to the necessity of corroboration. Ibid.

Section applied, in a prosecution for keeping a house of ill fame with reference to the evidence of an inmate. Whether in such cases such a witness is to be deemed an accomplice within the meaning of the statute, quaere. State v. Chauvet, 111-687.

An accessory after the fact, as, for instance, a receiver of stolen goods, is not an accomplice under the provisions of this section. State v. Jones, 115-113.

SEC. 5491. Confession of defendant.

Judicial confessions are those made in conformity to law before a committing magistrate, or in court in the course of legal proceedings. Extra-judicial confessions are those which are made by a party elsewhere than before a magistrate, or in court. The latter must be corroborated by proof of the corpus delicti. State v. Abrams, 131-479.

To constitute a confession, the admission or declaration must amount to an acknowledgment of guilt of the offense charged, or participation therein, and an admission of the act charged as constituting a crime but accompanied with an explanation which negatives the criminality is not a judicial confession. Ibid.

A plea of guilty which is subsequently withdrawn is not a judicial confession. Ibid.

A conviction cannot be had upon an extra-judicial confession unless it be accompanied with other evidence that a crime has in fact been committed by some one. State v. Westcott, 130-1.

This corroborating testimony need not of itself and independent of the confession be such as to prove the commission of a crime beyond a reasonable doubt. It is sufficient if when considered with the confession it establishes beyond all reasonable doubt that a crime was in fact committed. Ibid.

A statement of fact which in itself negatives a criminal intent does not constitute a confession with reference to which an instruction as to the necessity of corroboration need be given. State v. Thomas, 109 N. W. 900.

Corroboration of a confession is not necessary where there is other evidence of the commission of the crime and the only purpose of the confession is to connect the defendant with it. State v. Icenbice, 126-16.

A mere admission or declaration of a defendant against his interest is not necessarily a confession, even though the admission is criminating. To make an admission or declaration a confession it must in some way be an acknowledgment of guilt, and be so intended. State v. Novak, 109-717.

The violation by a detective to whom admissions are made of an agreement not to reveal such admissions will not render the admissions incompetent if they were voluntary when made. Ibid.

Evidence in a particular case held not to show any such promises, threats or duress such as to render admissions incompetent. Ibid.

The prosecution, in putting in evidence statements of the defendant as constituting admissions, does not bind itself to accept as true all that may be contained in the statements shown. Ibid.

Where the person having custody of the defendant assures him that it will go easier with him if he tells the facts tending to show him guilty of the offense, a statement of the defendant made in response to such suggestion is not voluntary, and should not be received. State v. Jay, 116-264.

The fact that after defendant was placed under arrest the officer in charge questioned him, and that in response to such questions he made a confession, is not sufficient to render it invalid. State v. Penney, 113-691.

The fact that defendant at the time of making the confession was in the custody of one of the parties does not in itself show the statements to have been involuntary. State v. Peterson, 110-647.

Where a confession is proven by the evidence of a detective it is proper to show to the jury what arts were used by the detective to secure such confession and all the circumstances under which the confession was made. State v. Van Tassel, 103-6.

Where the confession appears on its face to be free and voluntary, the burden is on defendant to rebut that presumption. State v. Storms, 113-385.

It is for the court to determine whether the confession was voluntary. But if there is a conflict of the evidence on that question, and the court is in doubt, the question should be left to the jury. Ibid.

Evidence in a particular case held not sufficient to show that the confession was not voluntary. Ibid.

SEC. 5492. Witnesses for defendant.

Where the court allows the subpoena of a witness for the defendant who is in another state, the county is liable for his mileage outside of as well as within the state. Climie v. Appanoose County, 125-292.

The board of supervisors has no discretion as to the allowance of witness fees which have been taxed against the county by the court in a criminal prosecution. Ibid.

SEC. 5499-a. Photograph — measurements. It shall be lawful for the sheriff of any county or the chief of police in any city in this state, to take or procure the taking of the photograph of any person held to answer on a charge of any felony, such person being in the custody of such officer, or to make and record any measurements of such prisoner, by the Bertillion or other system, and to exchange such photographs, or measurements, or copies of the same, with other sheriffs and police officers, or to distribute the same by mail for the purpose of securing evidence for the identification of such person held to answer, if the identity and past record of the said person are unknown to him, and the cost of such photographs, and measurements, and of distributing the same, may be allowed by the court as a part of the costs in the case. [29 G. A., ch. 154, § 1.]

CHAPTER 35.

OF BAIL.

SECTION 5505. Form of Bond.

The surety does not become bound to pay the fine imposed upon the principal. He is simply a jailor for the principal, charged with the duty of producing him when his personal presence is required, or to surrender him in execution of judgment. When once that duty is performed the liability of surety is extinguished, and whenever the court orders the defendant out on bail into the custody of the sheriff, in execution of the judgment pronounced against him, and the sheriff in pursuance of that order takes possession of the prisoner, the liability of the surety ceases. State v. Zimmerman, 112-5.

CHAPTER 39.

OF DEPOSIT OF MONEY INSTEAD OF BAIL.

SECTION 5524. With whom and effect.

There is no provision for the deposit of money by any person other than the defendant himself, and when a deposit of money is made there is no right to have it returned except to the defendant. One who furnishes money to secure the release of a defendant on bail must be presumed to have loaned it to the defendant, and he is not entitled to have it returned to him individually. Such money may, therefore, be applied to the payment of the fine imposed on the defendant. State v. Owens, 112-403.

After deposit of money in lieu of bail, the clerk should accept a bail bond, if offered, and release the money deposit, notwithstanding the provision of Code § 5527 that money deposited as bail shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment. State v. Anderson, 119-711.

The execution of a bail bond on appeal has the effect of releasing the money deposited as bail, and the court cannot require as a condition that a portion of the money as deposited be applied to the payment of the judgment or costs. Ibid.

The undertaking of a surety upon an appeal does not include payment of the costs of prosecution of the case in either court. Ibid.

This provision as to deposit of money in lieu of bail does not contemplate the deposit of money by third persons. Ibid.

CHAPTER 40.

OF SURRENDER OF THE DEFENDANT.

SECTION 5528. Method.

Where a defendant who was on bail placed himself under the control of the sheriff after conviction, and was subsequently allowed, by an order of the court, to depart for temporary purposes, held, that his surety was thereby released. State v. Zimmerman, 112-5.

SEC. 5530. Return of money deposited.

As a third person is not authorized to deposit money to secure the release of defendant on bail, one who has thus furnished money to secure defendant's release is not entitled to have it returned to him on surrender of defendant. State v. Owens, 112-403.

CHAPTER 43.

OF THE DISMISSAL OF CRIMINAL ACTIONS.

SECTION 5536. If not tried a second term.

This section relating to the dismissal of a prosecution where defendant is not brought to trial at the fixed regular term of the court in which the indictment is triable was evidently designed to enforce the constitutional provision giving the defendant in a criminal prosecution the right of a speedy trial. If postponement of the trial is due to any request or conduct on the part of the defendant or his counsel, or if the case is continued without objection on defendant's part without demand for a trial, he is not entitled to a dismissal because the case was not brought to trial at the second term. State v. Smith, 106-701.

On an appeal in a criminal case, the court has no jurisdiction to determine whether the prosecution should have been dismissed because the defendant had not been given a speedy trial. State v. Sloan, 131-676.

Where good cause for continuance is shown, the defendant is not entitled to dismissal on the ground that he has not had the speedy trial provided for by statute. State v. Johnson, 111 N. W. 827.

Where the delay in the trial is due to the rulings and motions for continuance, the defendant is not entitled to dismissal on the ground that the case is not tried within the time specified by statute. State v. Nugent, 111 N. W. 927.

CHAPTER 44.

OF THE INSANITY OF A DEFENDANT.

SECTION 5540. Proceedings suspended.

After a defendant has been arrested on a warrant issued on an indictment the district court has exclusive jurisdiction to determine the question of his sanity and his custody in case of insanity, and the commissioners of insanity cannot be given authority to investigate such question. The provisions of Code § 2279, so far as they purport to give such authority to the commissioners, are invalid. The court should proceed in such case under this section. Stone v. Conrad, 105-21.

The finding in a collateral investigation as to the defendant's sanity during the trial is admissible on the issue as to insanity at the time of the commission of the crime, but not conclusive as it relates to a subsequent date. State v. Grendahl, 131-602.

Such a finding under which the defendant is sent to an insane hospital, does not preclude testimony of the physician of such hospital after the defendant was received and treated there, as to his mental condition. Ibid.

CHAPTER 45.

OF SEARCH WARRANTS AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

SECTION 5545. Definition.

Ordinarily a finding in a search warrant proceeding is not conclusive as to the ownership of the property; but where rival claimants appear, employ counsel, and submit the issue of ownership upon testimony adduced, the finding is conclusive although strictly speaking they are not parties to the action. Montgomery v. Alden, 133-675.

SEC. 5550. Warrant.

A description which points out or identifies the place to be searched with such reasonable identity as will obviate any mistake in locating it is all that is required. State v. Moore, 125-749.

SEC. 5563. Return to owner.

While adverse claimants of the property are not strictly parties to a search warrant proceeding, yet if they raise the issue as to ownership the finding on such issue is conclusive. Montgomery v. Alden, 133-675.

CHAPTER 47.

OF PROCEEDINGS AND TRIALS BEFORE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

SECTION 5576. Information—what to contain.

An information sworn to and left with the magistrate which is acted upon by him, is presumed to have been filed and to have been sworn to before him acting within his jurisdiction. Lovilia v. Cobb, 126-557.

SEC. 5577. Must contain.

Proceedings under an information which charges an offense, but is not specific enough in stating the details thereof, will not be void, but only voidable, and therefore false testimony given in such proceeding may constitute perjury. State v. Perry, 117-463.

An information may be amended after appeal to the district court. Lovilia v. Cobb, 126-557.

An amendment to an information in a prosecution before a justice of the peace may be made in the district court on appeal. State v. Reilly, 108-735.

Where there is no doubt as to the nature of the offense charged in the information, it may be so amended as to charge its commission anywhere within the jurisdiction of the court, instead of in a particular subdivision of the territory over which the court has jurisdiction. Such an amendment may require a postponement of the trial, and for this reason is largely discretionary. State v. Abrams, 131-479.

SEC. 5617. Trial on appeal.

On an appeal from a conviction before a justice of the peace or mayor of a city the information may be amended. Lovilia v. Cobb, 126-557.

On such appeal jury trial may be waived. Ibid.

On an appeal from a conviction before a justice of the peace, the accused may withdraw his plea of guilty on which the conviction was entered, and is then entitled to a trial. State v. Abrams, 131-479.

CHAPTER 49.OF PARDONS AND THE REMISSION OF FINES AND FORFEITURES.

SECTION 5626. By governor. The governor shall have power to remit fines and forfeitures upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper. After conviction of murder in the first degree, no pardon shall be granted by the governor until he shall have presented the matter to and obtained the advice of the general assembly thereon, but he may commute a death sentence to imprisonment in the penitentiary for life. Before presenting the matter to the general assembly for its action, he shall cause a notice containing the reasons assigned for granting the pardon to be published in two newspapers of general circulation, one of which shall be published at the capital and the other in the county where the conviction was had, once each week, for four successive weeks, the last publication to be at least twenty days prior to the commencement of the session of the general assembly to which the matter shall be presented. [C., '73, § 4712; R., §5116; C., '51, § 3278.] [31 G. A., ch. 9, § 27.]

The governor has the power to remit a fine imposed in a criminal prosecution for maintaining a liquor nuisance but cannot remit the costs nor prevent their being a lien upon the property against which they are adjudged. State v. Mateer, 105-66.

The governor may grant a conditional suspension of judgment in a criminal case. Ibid.

CHAPTER 50.OF ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN.*SECTION 5629. Complaint.

Evidence of improper relations between the prosecutrix and a man not the defendant is immaterial, unless it be shown that such relations might have existed at the time the child in dispute was conceived. State v. Seevers, 108-738.

If the defendant is the father of the child, he is liable in this proceeding, even though the mother was the lawful wife of another at the time the child was conceived, and he knew the fact. Ibid.

It is not proper to permit prosecutrix to testify that she is without money or other property with which to support the child. Ibid.

In a bastardy proceeding it is error to allow an infant nine months of age, claimed to be the result of intercourse between defendant and the complaining witness, to be introduced in evidence to the jury. State v. Harvey, 112-416.

Under complaint filed before the child is born proof of the subsequent birth of the child is competent evidence. It is not required in such case that after the birth of the child the complaint be amended by alleging that fact. State v. Harris, 112-589.

The procedure under a complaint of bastardy is that which obtains in ordinary civil actions, and the rules of evidence are the same. Therefore, declarations of the prosecutrix as to the act of sexual intercourse or her failure to make complaint cannot be shown. State v. Lowell, 123-427.

TITLE XXVI.

OF THE DISCIPLINE AND GOVERNMENT OF JAILS AND PENITENTIARIES.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE JAILS.

SECTION 5652. Hard labor may be required.

The length of time that prisoners shall be required to labor depends upon the character of the work, the season of the year, their strength and condition of health, whether accustomed to labor, and must necessarily be left largely to the discretion of the officer in charge of the prisoners. State v. Welsh, 109-19.

CHAPTER 2.

OF PENITENTIARIES.

SECTION 5662. Bond—oath. Each shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duty, execute a bond payable to the state in the penal sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, with not less than five freehold sureties, to be approved by the governor, conditioned that he will faithfully discharge all his duties as general superintendent and financial agent of the state for said institution; that he will faithfully apply any and all moneys that may come into his hands by virtue of his office to the purposes for which they are appropriated, and none other; that he will cause to be kept a full and intelligible record of all the transactions of a monetary character connected with the institution; that he will impartially, and to the best of his ability, administer the disciplinary regulations of the institution so as to contribute to the health, safe keeping and profitable employment of the convicts; that he will appoint no one to the office of clerk, deputy warden or guard through favoritism or other personal consideration, and no one without due and proper regard to his qualifications for said stations; that he will render a faithful account of all the transactions of the institution to the governor, or his lawfully authorized agent, every thirty days, and oftener as he may be required; that he will not become directly or indirectly interested in any contract for supplying materials, labor, provisions, clothing or any other thing for the use of said penitentiary, and that, at the expiration of his official term, he will surrender all books, papers, records, moneys or other property or securities belonging to said institution to his successor in office. Each shall also take and subscribe an oath or affirmation, which shall be endorsed on the back of said bond, that he will support the constitution of the United States and that of the state of Iowa, and that he will scrupulously observe all the stipulations and conditions of said bond, and faithfully discharge all his duties agreeably to law according to the best of his ability, which bond shall be filed with the secretary of state. [C., '73, § 4747; R., § 5175.] [28 G. A., ch. 136, § 1.]

SEC. 5663. Restrictions — clerk — guards — assignment of duties. The warden must not carry on nor be concerned in the business of trade or commerce during his continuance in office; he must reside constantly within the precincts of the prison, and shall take charge of the penitentiary and of all the interests of the state connected therewith, and shall appoint some suitable person as clerk, who shall also act as commissary under the direction of the warden, one deputy, one assistant deputy, and as many guards as may be necessary to the safe keeping and government of the convicts, not exceeding one for every ten convicts under his charge at Fort Madison, and one for every eight at Anamosa, and the warden under the direction of the board of control shall assign said guards to any duty that may be necessary to properly conduct the business of said penitentiaries. At no time shall there be less than forty-five guards at Fort Madison and forty-two guards at Anamosa. [17 G. A., ch. 149; C., '73, § 4748; R., § 5142; C., '51, § 3128.] [27 G. A., ch. 117, § 1.] [30 G. A., ch. 139, § 1.] [32 G. A., ch. 191.]

[The amendment by the 30 G. A., chap. 139, section one, ignored the code supplement where the section appears. The change has been made to the section as it appeared in the code supplement.]

SEC. 5667. Clerk — bond — oath. Each clerk of the penitentiary shall receive his appointment from and hold his office during the pleasure of the warden, and be in all things responsible to him. Before entering upon the discharge of his duties, he shall give bond to the state in the penal sum of twenty thousand dollars, with two or more freehold sureties, to be approved by the governor, conditioned that he will keep a fair, honest, impartial and faithful record of the affairs of the penitentiary, written in a legible hand, with proper indices, upon a system of bookkeeping which shall enable him at all times to present in a plain and intelligible manner the financial condition of the institution; that he will discharge all his duties as clerk and commissary faithfully; and that he will not become interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract for furnishing supplies for the use of said institution; and that he will yield strict and implicit obedience to the laws, rules and regulations of the institution, and to all the legal orders of the warden. He shall also take and subscribe an oath, which shall be endorsed on the bond, that he will support the constitution of the United States and that of this state, and that he will scrupulously observe all the conditions, stipulations and requirements thereof, and will faithfully discharge his duty as clerk and commissary during his continuance in office, according to the best of his judgment and ability; which bond shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, and action thereon may be brought for the violation of any of its conditions, in the name of the state, for the use of the warden or any other person injured by such violation. [26 G. A., ch. 79, § 1; C., '73, § 4752; R., § 5180.] [28 G. A., ch. 136, § 2.]

SEC. 5669. Deputy warden. Each deputy warden and assistant deputy shall receive his appointment from the warden, and shall hold his office during his pleasure; he shall give bond with sureties and in the same manner, take a like oath, and be in all respects subject to like responsibilities, as the clerk, so far as the same are applicable; but the amount of the bond shall be five thousand dollars. The deputy warden shall keep a regular time-table of the convict labor, and record the same in a book to be kept for that purpose, and shall keep a record of all the business under his control, and return an account thereof, together with an account of the convict labor, to the clerk at the close of each day. The assistant deputy warden shall perform the duties of deputy warden in his absence or inability to act, and such other duties as shall be prescribed by the warden with the approval of the board of control of state institutions. [18 G. A., ch. 154, § 3; C., '73, § 4754; R., §§ 5169, 5182.] [30 G. A., ch. 139, § 2.]

SEC. 5669-a. Residence for deputy—house rent. From and after the completion of the warden's house at the penitentiary at Anamosa, the deputy warden shall be entitled to occupy the building now used as the warden's residence, which shall be furnished with heat and lights. Until the new residence for the warden is completed the deputy warden is hereby allowed the sum of ten dollars, ($10.00) per month as house rent. [27 G. A., ch. 116, § 1.]

SEC. 5683. Property of convict.

Under authority to receive and care for any property the convict may have on his person on entering, the warden may take possession of a certificate of deposit, but has no right to receive payment of the amount called for, and if he does so the convict may afterwards recover against the bank the amount of the certificate. Thompson v. Niles, 115-67.

SEC. 5685-a. Repeal—visitors. The law as it appears in section five thousand six hundred eighty-five (5685) and section five thousand six hundred eighty-five a (5685-a) of the supplement to the code is hereby repealed and the following is enacted in lieu thereof:

"The warden of each penitentiary shall demand and receive of each person, except those exempt by law and relatives of a convict confined therein, who visits the prison for the purpose of viewing the interior or precincts, the sum of twenty-five cents, of which the warden shall render an account, which shall be applied, in the discretion of the board of control of state institutions, in the purchase of books and periodicals for the use of the prisons and for the use of all other institutions under their control, provided however, that they may if they deem it best use not exceeding ten per cent. of such receipts for lectures, concerts or entertainments for the prisoners. This act shall apply also to the disposition of all such funds now on hand." [30 G. A., ch. 140.]

SEC. 5702-a. Manufacture prohibited. It shall not be lawful except to complete existing contracts made by board of control to manufacture for sale any pearl buttons or butter tubs in the penitentiaries of the state, and it shall be the duty of the board of control and wardens of said penitentiaries to enforce the provisions of this act, and to prohibit the manufacture of pearl buttons or butter tubs, in whole or in part, by the inmates confined in said penitentiaries. [28 G. A., ch. 138, § 1.]

SEC. 5702-b. Existing contracts. This act shall not alter or impair the conditions of any contract actually made and entered into by and between any contractor and the board of control, which shall have been made prior to the passage of this act. [28 G. A., ch. 138, § 2.]

SEC. 5703. Good conduct—diminution of sentence.

The diminution of time from a sentence which is granted by the statute on account of good conduct should be credited to the prisoner on a second sentence imposed on a new trial, after the first sentence has been set aside. State v. Barr, 133-132.

SEC. 5704. Forfeiture.

Although the right to diminution of sentence for good conduct is not a vested right, yet a prisoner is not bound by the acceptance of a conditional pardon providing for a forfeiture of the credit already accrued to a forfeiture of such credit for breach of the conditions. After the condition is broken he can only be re-manded, for the balance of the term, to the remainder of the imprisonment which he would have been required to serve had he not accepted the conditional pardon. State v. Hunter, 124-569.

SEC. 5707. Work in stone quarries. Able-bodied male persons sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary may be taken to that at Anamosa, or to that at Ft. Madison, there confined and worked in places and buildings owned or leased by the state outside of the penitentiary enclosures; but the labor of such convicts shall not be leased, and the warden shall keep a regular time-table of the convict labor and record thereof in a book provided for that purpose, and shall also keep a record of all the business under his control, returning to the clerk at the close of each day an account thereof, together with that of convict labor. He shall also have all stone which is not used for building purposes by the state, together with all refuse stone at the quarries, broken with hammers into pieces of not more than two and one-half inches in diameter, to be used for the improvement and macadamizing of streets and highways, this work to be done by convict labor when not otherwise employed, but the warden may in his discretion make such disposition of any surplus refuse stone at the quarries as may be for the best interest of the state. [25 G. A., ch. 20, & 1; 18 G. A., ch. 154, § 3; 17 G. A., ch. 187; 16 G. A., ch. 40, §§ 7, 8; 14 G. A., ch. 43, § 14.] [29 G. A., ch. 155, § 1.]

SEC. 5711. Repeal. Section fifty-seven hundred eleven (5711) of the code is hereby repealed. [30 G. A., ch. 139, § 4.]

SEC. 5716. Compensation of officers and employes. The officers and employes of each penitentiary shall be paid for their services the following sums, monthly: The warden, one hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-seven cents; the deputy warden, one hundred dollars; the clerk, one hundred dollars; the chaplain, one hundred dollars; the turnkeys and guards of the penitentiaries shall be classified according to qualification, length of service, character of duties performed and general efficiency, the members of the first class shall receive not more than sixty-five ($65.00) dollars monthly, the members of the second class shall receive not more than fifty-five ($55.00) dollars monthly and the members of the third class shall receive not more than fifty ($50.00) dollars monthly; the physician at Fort Madison seventy-five dollars; the physician at Anamosa, for his entire services in the penitentiary and the department for the criminal insane, one hundred dollars; the assistant deputy warden in each penitentiary, eighty-three dollars and thirty-four cents; the matron at Anamosa, seventy-five dollars; which amounts shall be paid by the state treasurer upon the requisition of the warden, accompanied with a detailed itemized statement duly verified, showing the number and kind of guards employed, the separate, several payments of the money drawn the previous month, and such other matters, if any, as the state auditor may require. [26 G. A., ch. 79, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 69, §§ 7, 10; 20 G. A., ch. 187, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 200; 17 G. A., ch. 167; 16 G. A., ch. 156; C., '73, §§ 4783-4; R., § 5192.] [29 G. A., ch. 156, § 1.] [30 G. A., ch. 139, § 3.] [30 G. A., ch. 141, § 1.] [31 G. A., ch. 172.]

[All the amendments made by the 30 G. A. and 31 G. A. refer to the code, ignoring code supplement where the above section appeared. The changes have been made to the code supplement.]

SEC. 5718-a1. Inmates of institutions to have free exercise of religious worship. That it shall be the duty of [the] board of control, superintendents, warden, and other officers having the management of any penal, correctional, charitable or educational institution, or other place of confinement now existing or hereafter established and supported by public funds, to permit all persons committed to, confined or detained in, or otherwise held in such institutions, or other place of confinement, spiritual advice, instruction, and ministration from any recognized, clergyman of the church or denomination which such person so committed, confined, detained or received may profess to adhere to or prefer; which said profession or choice shall be by such person communicated to the warden, superintendent or other officer in charge of such institution. It shall be the duty of the warden, superintendent or other officer receiving such person so committed, to inquire of such committed person as to his religious preference and enter the same in the book kept for the purpose, and cause the person making such choice or preference to sign the same. And during the time of detention such person so committed, confined or detained shall be allowed at suitable and reasonable times to receive the visits of clergymen belonging to the denomination or church so preferred at the time of commitment, or chosen at any later period. [31 G. A., ch. 35, § 1.]

SEC. 5718-a2. What permitted. It shall be the duty of the superintendent, warden or other officer having the control and management of such institution to allow the person so committed or detained the privilege of communicating with any clergyman of good standing of the church or denomination so preferred for at least an hour on the first day of the week in each week; and all facilities consistent with discipline and the proper care of such person so detained or confined shall be allowed to the clergyman so ministering or teaching; and all opportunity for engaging in religious services according to the rites of such church and denomination shall be freely allowed in so far as the same are consistent with discipline and good order. In case of severe sickness of any one so committed, confined or detained, opportunity shall be given him for spiritual ministration according to laws, ritual, rites, and customs of such denomination, so far as the same may be done without interference with the efficient management and control of such institution. That minister or ministers attending persons as provided by this act shall be entitled to no compensation for so doing. [31 G. A., ch. 35, § 2.]

SEC. 5718-a3. Minors—rules and regulations. In case any person so committed, detained or restrained is a minor and has formed no choice, his preference may, at any time, be expressed by himself with the approval of parents or guardian, if he has any such. It shall be the duty of the officers or governing authorities of any such institution to provide such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act. [31 G. A., ch. 35, § 3.]

SEC. 5718-a4. "The reformatory." Hereafter the penitentiary at Anamosa shall be officially known and designated as "The Reformatory," and shall be the reformatory department of the state penitentiary of Iowa. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 1.]

SEC. 5718-a5. Commitments. Any male person who shall be committed to the penitentiary after the 4th day of July, 1907, (except those convicted of murder, treason, sodomy or incest), and who at the time of commitment is between the ages of sixteen and thirty years, and who has never before been convicted of a felony, shall be confined in the reformatory; provided, however, that persons between the ages of sixteen and thirty years convicted of rape, robbery, or of breaking and entering a dwelling house in the night time with intent to commit a public offense therein, may, as the particular circumstances may warrant, in the discretion of the court, be committed to either the reformatory at Anamosa, or the penitentiary at Fort Madison. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 2.]

SEC. 5718-a6. Insane department. The criminal insane shall continue to be confined in the insane department at Anamosa, as provided in section fifty-seven hundred and nine of the code. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 3.]

SEC. 5718-a7. Transfer of prisoners for violation of rules, insubordination, etc. Any male prisoner confined in the reformatory may be transferred to the penitentiary at Fort Madison, upon order of the board of control, for violation of the rules of the reformatory or for insubordination and a like transfer may be ordered by said board whenever it shall be of the opinion that a prisoner is not a hopeful subject for reformatory treatment. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 4.]

SEC. 5718-a8. Transfer of prisoners over age limit—former convictions. If it shall appear at any time after conviction and incarceration in the reformatory that a prisoner was over thirty years of age at the time of commitment, he shall be at once transferred to the prison at Fort Madison, and he shall likewise be transferred if it shall appear that he had, prior to the last conviction, been convicted of a felony in Iowa or elsewhere. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 4½.]

SEC. 5718-a9. What prisoners retained in reformatory—transfer of life prisoners. The board of control may retain in the reformatory such persons as have been or are committed to the penitentiary at Anamosa for crimes committed on or prior to July 4, 1907, except that all persons convicted of murder in the first degree and all persons sentenced to life imprisonment shall be kept and confined in the prison at Fort Madison and a transfer shall be made as soon as reasonably convenient after July 4, 1907, from the reformatory to the prison at Fort Madison of the persons named in this exception, provided that prisoners committed for life who are now beyond fifty-five years of age shall not be removed. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 5.]

SEC. 5718-a10. Transfer when Fort Madison penitentiary is overcrowded. Whenever there is unoccupied room in the reformatory and the prison at Fort Madison is overcrowded, the board of control may, in its discretion, transfer from the prison at Fort Madison well-behaved and most promising convicts, who are confined for their first offense. The prison at Fort Madison shall be deemed to be overcrowded when the number of inmates exceeds the number of cells. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 6.]

SEC. 5718-a11. Employment of inmates. The inmates of the reformatory shall be employed only on state account, which employment shall be conducive to the teaching of useful trades and callings so far as practicable, and the intellectual and moral development of the inmates, provided, however, that the inmates of the reformatory may be employed to complete any contracts for prison labor to be performed in the penitentiary at Anamosa. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 7.]

SEC. 5718-a12. Registers and records. The board of control shall cause to be kept at the reformatory and penitentiary such registers and records of prisoners for the use of the board of parole as may be approved by the executive council. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 8.]

SEC. 5718-a13. Indeterminate sentences. After July 4, 1907, whenever any person over sixteen years of age is convicted of a felony, committed subsequent to July 4, 1907, except treason or murder, the court imposing a sentence of confinement in the penitentiary shall not fix the limit or duration of the same, but the term of such imprisonment shall not exceed the maximum term provided by law for the crime of which the prisoner was convicted; provided that if a person be sentenced for two or more separate offenses and the second or further term is ordered to begin at the expiration of the first and such succeeding term of sentence is specified in the order of commitment, the several terms shall for the purpose of this act be construed as one continuous term of imprisonment; and provided, that where one is convicted of a felony that is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, or by fine, or by imprisonment in the county jail, or both, the court may impose the lighter sentence if it shall so elect. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 9.]

SEC. 5718-a14. Board of parole—terms—office—supplies—compensation—secretary—salary—duties—employes. Prior to the adjournment of the thirty-second general assembly, the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint three electors of the state, not more than two of whom shall belong to the same political party, and one member of whom shall be a duly licensed attorney at law, as members of a board to be known as a board of parole. Said members shall hold office, as designated by the governor, for two, four and six years, respectively; subsequent appointments shall be made as provided above, and shall be for a term of six years, except appointments to fill vacancies, which shall be for the unexpired term. The terms of the members first appointed shall commence July 1, 1907, and the chairman of the board shall be the member whose term first expires. Appointments made when the general assembly is not in session shall be subject to the approval of the senate when next in session. A suitable office at the capitol shall be provided for the use of the board, with such furniture and office supplies as shall be reasonably necessary for the use of the same, and such board shall hold at least four sessions each calendar year. They shall receive as compensation ten dollars ($10) per day for the time actually spent in discharge of the duties of this office, not to exceed one thousand dollars ($1000) each per annum, and all necessary expenses while on official business. The board of parole shall employ a competent secretary who shall receive a salary not to exceed two thousand dollars ($2000) per year and necessary traveling expenses when on official business required and designated by the board. He shall keep records and perform such duties as state agent or otherwise, as shall be prescribed by the board. They may employ such other employes as the executive council may authorize by written resolution. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 10.]

SEC. 5718-a15. Appropriation. There is hereby appropriated from any funds in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated sufficient thereof to pay the salaries and expenditures herein authorized. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 11.]

SEC. 5718-a16. Traveling expenses—emergency trips. The secretary and other employes shall be entitled to their necessary traveling expenses by the nearest traveled and practicable routes incurred in going from Des Moines to the penitentiaries or other places in the state when on official business. No expenditure for traveling expenses to other states shall be made by the board or any officer or agent thereof unless the authority to make such trip is granted at a meeting of the board upon a written resolution adopted by the board, which shall state the purpose of such trip and the reason the same is deemed necessary. Emergency trips may be made upon written order of the chairman, which shall be reported to the board at its next meeting. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 12.]

SEC. 5718-a17. Itemized statement of expenditures—how approved and paid. Before any expenses or per diem of the members of the board or any officer or agent thereof, or any expense incurred by others under the direction of the board, shall be paid, a minutely itemized statement of such expenditures shall be presented to the proper authorities, duly verified, which certification shall aver that the expense bill is just, accurate and true, and is claimed for cash expenditures or cash disbursements truly and actually paid and made to the parties named as shown by said statement herein. Unless the said statement is so verified and duly audited, payment thereof shall not be made. The expense bills of the members of the board, the secretary and its other employes, when so verified, shall be presented to the executive council for their written audit before payment is made. The salaries and actual expenses of the board, the secretary and other employes shall be paid monthly by the treasurer of the state upon the warrant of the auditor of state. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 13.]

SEC. 5718-a18. Rules and regulations governing paroles. The board of parole shall have power to establish rules and regulations under which it may allow prisoners within the penitentiaries other than prisoners serving life terms to go upon parole outside of the penitentiary buildings, enclosures and appurtenances, but to remain while on parole in the legal custody of the wardens of the penitentiaries and under the control of the said board of parole and subject, at any time, to be taken back and confined within the penitentiary; and the board shall have full power to enforce such rules and regulations and to retake and reimprison any such paroled convict. The order of said board certified by its secretary shall be a sufficient warrant for any peace officer to arrest and take into actual custody or to return to the penitentiary specified in the order any prisoner conditionally released or paroled by said board; and it is hereby made the duty of all peace officers to execute such order the same as any other criminal process and they shall receive the same fees as sheriffs for like services, the same to be paid out of the appropriation made herein, but no person shall be released on parole before the expiration of the maximum term provided by law for the punishment of the crime of which he was convicted until the board of parole shall have satisfactory evidence that arrangements have been made for his employment or maintenance for at least six months. The time when a prisoner is upon parole or absent from the penitentiary shall not be held to apply upon his sentence if he shall violate the terms of his parole. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 14.]

SEC. 5718-a19. Inquiry relative to pardon or parole. The board of parole may institute any inquiry it may deem expedient in regard to any prisoner or application for pardon, final discharge or parole; but said board shall not receive, unsolicited by them, any petition or communication or argument in regard to said application, unless provided for in their adopted rules. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 14½.]

SEC. 5718-a20. Board of parole to recommend pardon. It shall be the duty of the board of parole to keep in communication, so far as possible, with all persons who are on parole and when, in their opinion, any prisoner who has served not less than twelve months of his parole acceptably, has given such evidence as is deemed reliable and trustworthy that he is and will continue to be a law-abiding citizen and that his final release is not incompatible with the welfare of society; and when the said board of parole shall have procured, as far as possible, all facts relating to the history of such paroled prisoner, both before and after his confinement and parole, and his record while detained, the board of parole shall recommend to the governor the discharge of such prisoner from further liability under his sentence. Said recommendation shall be entered on a proper record, kept by said board for that purpose, and a certified copy of the order of discharge, when made, by the governor, shall be filed with the clerk of the court in which said prisoner was sentenced to the penitentiary. All papers and documents relating to the pardon of any person shall, upon the granting of such pardon, become a part of the files of the governor's office. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 15.]

SEC. 5718-a21. Power of governor to grant reprieves, pardons or commutations not impaired. Nothing in this act contained shall be construed as impairing the power of the governor under the constitution, to grant a reprieve, pardons or commutations of sentence in any case. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 16.]

SEC. 5718-a22. Clothing, money and transportation furnished paroled prisoners. Upon the release of any prisoner upon parole, he shall be furnished with clothing and money as provided in section fifty-six hundred eighty-four (5684) of the code, and transportation to his place of employment, provided that no further allowance shall be made if final discharge is granted while on parole. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 17.]

SEC. 5718-a23. Investigation of applications for pardon. It shall be the duty of the board of parole, under the direction of the governor, to take charge of all correspondence in reference to the pardon of persons convicted of crimes and to carefully investigate each application, and to file its recommendation with the governor with its reasons for the same. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 18.]

SEC. 5718-a24. Repeal. All acts and parts of acts which are in conflict with this act are hereby repealed in so far as they shall apply to persons convicted of crime committed after the fourth day of July, 1907. This act shall not operate, however, to repeal any of the laws now in force, in so far as they may relate to persons that have heretofore been convicted of a crime under the laws of the state of Iowa, or to any persons that shall hereafter be convicted of a crime committed on or before the 4th day of July, 1907, and the rights under the law of all prisoners that are now or hereafter may be committed to the penitentiary for crimes committed on or prior to the 4th day of July, 1907, are expressly preserved to them. This act shall not operate in any way to repeal any laws that refer to the sentence of persons hereafter convicted of murder in the first or second degree, or treason. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 19.]

SEC. 5718-a25. Duty of clerk of district court and county attorney. It shall be the duty of the clerk of any court in which a prisoner shall be sentenced to the penitentiary, to furnish the board of parole a record containing a copy of the indictment with the minutes of testimony attached thereto; and the name and residence of the judge presiding at the trial and of the county attorney who prosecuted the prisoner; also the jurors and the witnesses sworn at the trial. The county attorney who prosecuted said prisoner and the presiding judge, shall, when requested by the board of parole, furnish to it a full statement of all the facts and circumstances connected with the commission of the crime of which the prisoner is convicted, so far as known or believed by them. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 20.]

SEC. 5718-a26. Employment for paroled prisoners—duty of public officers. The board of parole may render such assistance as may be deemed necessary to the success of parole system, in the procuring of employment with trustworthy employers for prisoners about to be paroled; and necessary expenses incident thereto, not already provided for, shall be paid as other expenses of the board. It is hereby made the duty of every public officer to whom inquiry may be addressed by the board of parole concerning any prisoner to give said board all information possessed or accessible to him which may throw light upon the question of the fitness of said prisoner to receive the benefits of parole. [32 G. A., ch. 192, § 21.]

SEC. 5718-a27. Female convicts to be confined in reformatory. Any female heretofore or hereafter convicted of a felony and sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary shall be kept in the reformatory at Anamosa. [32 G. A., ch. 193.]

SEC. 5718-a28. Convict labor—how employed. Convict labor may be used in caring for the houses and premises, occupied by the wardens of the penitentiaries, and for such domestic purposes as may be deemed necessary; provided, however, that nothing be done inconsistent with prison discipline and that not more than two convicts shall be thus used at any one time. [32 G. A., ch. 194, § 1.]

SEC. 5718-a29. Wardens authorized to grant vacations with pay. It shall be the duty of the wardens of the penitentiaries at Anamosa and Fort Madison to grant a fifteen days' vacation with pay, each year, to all officers and guards working under said wardens; provided that said officer or guard shall have been continuously employed at said penitentiary for a period of one year before he shall be entitled to the provisions of this act. [32 G. A., ch. 195, § 1.]

SEC. 5718-a30. Vacations granted upon application — when. The warden of each penitentiary shall grant the vacation contemplated herein to those officers and guards employed at the institution of which he is in charge, upon said officers and guards making application therefor, and at such times and under such circumstances as will not interfere with the discipline, conduct and management of the penitentiary. [32 G. A., ch. 195, § 2.]

STATUTES AND RULES

REGULATING PRACTICE IN THE

SUPREME COURT OF IOWA

REVISED AND ADOPTED AT THE OCTOBER TERM, 1903,
TAKING EFFECT JANUARY 1, 1904,

TOGETHER WITH SUBSEQUENT CHANGES MADE BY SAID COURT UP TO AND INCLUDING THE SEPTEMBER TERM, 1907.

[Notes of cases applying these rules can be found among the notes to sections of the code and code supplement relating to the same subject matter, including sections 4100 to 4153, inclusive.]

I. ORGANIZATION.

SECTION 1. The supreme court shall consist of six judges, four of whom constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but one alone may adjourn from day to day, or to a particular day, or until the next term. [Code, § 193.]

SEC. 2. The judge whose term first expires shall be the chief justice, and so on in rotation. [Const., Art. V, § 3.]

II. JURISDICTION.

SEC. 3. The supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction only in cases of chancery and shall constitute a court for the correction of errors at law. [Const., Art. V, § 4.]

SEC. 4. It has appellate jurisdiction over all judgments and decisions of all courts of record, except as otherwise provided by law. [Code, § 4100.]

SEC. 5. An appeal may also be taken to the supreme court from:

1. An order made affecting a substantial right in an action, when such order, in effect, determines the action and prevents a judgment from which an appeal might be taken;

2. A final order made in special actions affecting a substantial right therein, or made on a summary application in an action after judgment;

3. An order which grants or refuses, continues or modifies a provisional remedy; grants or refuses, dissolves or refuses to dissolve an injunction or attachment; or grants or refuses a new trial; or sustains or overrules a demurrer;

4. An intermediate order involving the merits or materially affecting the final decision;

5. An order or judgment on habeas corpus. [Code, § 4101.]

SEC. 6. If any of the above orders or judgments are made or rendered by a judge, the same are reviewable, the same as if made by a court. [Code, § 4102.]

SEC. 7. The supreme court has power to issue all writs and processes necessary to secure justice to parties, and to enforce its appellate jurisdiction; and it may exercise supervisory control over all inferior judicial tribunals. [Const., Art. V, § 4; Code, § 4109.]

SEC. 8. It may enforce its mandates upon inferior courts and officers by fine and imprisonment, which imprisonment may continue until its mandates are obeyed. [Code, § 4147.]

III. TERMS.

SEC. 9. There shall be three regular terms in each year, to be held as follows, to-wit: The first term beginning with the second Tuesday in January and ending with the first Monday of May; the second beginning with the first Tuesday after the first Monday of May and ending with the third Monday of September; and the third, beginning with the first Tuesday after the third Monday of September and ending with the third Saturday of December. [29 G. A., chap. 12, § 1.]

SEC. 10. The time allotted to each term shall be divided as nearly as practicable into periods of four weeks each, the first part of each period to be devoted to the argument and submission of cases, and the second to consultation and the preparation of opinions. Cases assigned for each period shall be called in their order as shown on the term docket, but no more submissions shall be taken for any one period than in the judgment of the court can properly be considered and determined before the next succeeding session. All causes on the docket shall be heard at each term unless continued or otherwise disposed of by order of court. [29 G. A., chap. 12, §§ 2, 3 and 4, and Code, § 192.]

SEC. 11. The regular public sessions of the court will be held in the supreme court room at the Capitol, commencing at 9 o'clock, A. M., standard time. On Tuesday and Friday of the first week of each four weeks' period submission of motions will be taken before calling the calendar. Motions noticed for a day when the court is not sitting will be taken on the next motion day on which the court sits. [New. 29 G. A., chap. 12, §§ 2, 3, 4 and 5.]

SEC. 12. Judgments of affirmance, rulings and orders, in causes submitted and orders authorized by law, may be made and entered by the court at any time regardless of the terms of court. [Code, § 192.]

IV. APPEALS.

SEC. 13. Appeals from the superior and district courts may be taken to the supreme court at any time within six months from the rendition of the judgment or order appealed from, and not afterwards. No appeal shall be taken in any cause in which the amount in controversy between the parties, as shown by the pleadings, does not exceed one hundred dollars, unless the trial judge shall, during the term in which judgment is entered certify that the cause is one in which the appeal should be allowed, and upon such certificate being filed the same shall be appealable regardless of the amount in controversy, but this limitation shall not affect the right of appeal in any action in which an interest in real estate is involved, nor shall the right of appeal be affected by the remission of any part of the verdict or judgment returned or rendered. [Code, § 4110.]

SEC. 14. A part of several co-parties may appeal; but in such case they must serve notice of the appeal upon those not joining therein and file proof thereof with the clerk of the supreme court. [Code, § 4111.]

SEC. 15. Co-parties refusing to join in an appeal cannot afterwards appeal or derive any benefit therefrom, unless from the necessity of the case, but they shall be held to have joined, and be liable for their proportion of the costs unless they appear and object thereto. [Code, § 4112.]

SEC. 16. The death of one or all of the parties shall not cause the proceedings to abate, but the names of the proper persons shall be substituted, as is provided in such cases in the district court, and the case may proceed. The court may also, in such case, grant a continuance when such a course will be calculated to promote the ends of justice. [Code, § 4150.]

SEC. 17. An appeal is taken and perfected by the service of a notice in writing on the adverse party, his agent, or any attorney who appeared for him in the case in the court below, and also upon the clerk of the court wherein the proceedings were had, stating the appeal from the same, or from some specific part thereof, defining such part. [Code, § 4114.]

SEC. 18. A notice of appeal shall be served and return made thereon in the same manner as an original notice in a civil action and filed in the office of the clerk in which the judgment or order appealed from was rendered or made. All other notices connected with or growing out of the appeal shall be served and the return made in like manner and filed in the office of the clerk of the supreme court and all notices provided for in this section become a part of the record in the case on being filed. [Code, § 4115.]

SEC. 19. The attorneys and guardians ad litem of the respective parties in the court below, shall be deemed the attorneys and guardians of the same parties respectively in this court, until others are retained or appointed, and notice thereof served on the adverse party. [New.]

V. SUPERSEDEAS BOND.

SEC. 20. No proceedings under a judgment or order nor any part thereof shall be stayed by an appeal unless the appellant execute a bond with one or more sureties to be filed with and approved by the clerk of the court in which the judgment or order was rendered or made, to the effect that he will pay to the appellee all costs and damages that shall be adjudged against him on the appeal, and will satisfy and perform the judgment or order appealed from, in case it shall be affirmed, and any judgment or order which the supreme court may render or order to be rendered by the inferior court, not exceeding in amount or value the original judgment or order, and all rents of or damages to property during the pendency of the appeal out of the possession of which the appellee is kept by reason of the appeal. If the bond is intended to stay proceedings on only a part of the judgment or order, it shall be varied so as to secure the part stayed alone. When thus filed and approved, the clerk shall issue a written order requiring the appellee and all others to stay all proceedings under such judgment or order, or so much thereof as is superseded thereby, but no appeal or stay shall vacate or affect such judgment or order. [Code, § 4128.]

SEC. 21. If a party has perfected his appeal and the clerk of the lower court refuses for any reason to approve the bond or requires an excessive penalty or unjust or improper conditions, he may apply to the district court or judge thereof, who shall fix the amount and conditions of the bond and approve the same. Pending the application, the judge may, by a written order, recall and stay all proceedings under the order or judgment appealed from, until the decision of the application. The bond thus approved shall be filed with the clerk who shall issue a written order to stay proceedings. [Code, § 4132.]

SEC. 22. The appellee may move the court rendering the judgment or making the order appealed from, or the supreme court, or a judge of either court, if in vacation, upon ten days' notice in writing to the appellant, to discharge the bond on account of defect in substance or insufficiency in security, which motion, if well taken, shall be sustained, unless appellant shall, within a day to be fixed by the order made and filed therein, give a new and sufficient bond as required by said order. If the new bond is not given, proceedings shall be had in the lower court as though no bond had been given, but a new and sufficient bond may be given at any time with like effect and results as though given in the first instance. [Code, § 4133.]

SEC. 23. If the judgment or order is for the payment of money, the penalty shall be in at least twice the amount of the judgment and costs. If not for the payment of money, the penalty shall be sufficient to save the appellee harmless from the consequences of taking the appeal, but in no case shall the penalty be less than one hundred dollars. [Code, § 4134. As amended by 30 G. A., ch. 125.]

VI. DOCKETING OF CAUSES.

SEC. 24. A notice of appeal must be served thirty, and the cause filed and docketed fifteen days before the first day of the next term of the supreme court, or the same shall not be submitted at that term, unless the parties consent thereto. If the appeal is taken less than thirty days before the term, it must be so filed and docketed for the next succeeding term. [Code, § 4116.]

SEC. 25. The cause on appeal shall be docketed as it was in the court below, and the party taking the appeal shall be called the appellant, and the other party the appellee. No case shall be docketed until the fees provided by law therefor have been paid. [Code, §§ 4108, 4121.]

SEC. 26. The clerk shall docket the causes as they are filed in his office, and shall arrange and set a proper number for trial for each period of the term, placing together those from the same judicial district. No cause shall be docketed unless the abstract is filed fifteen days before the first day of the term at which the cause is set down for trial unless otherwise ordered by the court. If the abstract is not so filed the case shall be docketed for the next succeeding term. [Code, §§ 4117, 4119; Old Rules, § 17.]

SEC. 27. Immediately after the time expires during which causes may be docketed for trial at a term of court, the clerk shall make and cause to be printed, without delay, the docket for the term, which shall give all causes, whether continuances or appearances, for trial at such term, which shall designate the number, the party appealing, the court and county from which the appeal is brought, the counsel of the parties, the period for which each cause is assigned for trial, whether noticed for trial, and such other matter for the information of the court and attorneys as may be conveniently given. He shall forward to each judge of the court, to each attorney having causes at the term, and to the clerk of the district and superior courts of each county, a copy of said docket. [Old Rules, § 18.]

VII. ADVANCING CAUSES.

SEC. 28. If a cause involves the decision of a question of public importance, or rights which are likely to be lost or greatly impaired by delay, the court will, in its discretion, upon motion supported by affidavit, order the submission of the cause at a term in advance of that at which it would otherwise be submitted. All motions to advance must be submitted on the first motion day of the term. [Old Rules, § 19.]

VIII. ABSTRACTS, TRANSCRIPTS AND RECORDS.

SEC. 29. At least thirty days before the day assigned for the hearing of a cause, the appellant shall serve upon each appellee, or his attorney, a printed abstract of so much of the record as may be necessary to a full understanding of the questions presented for decision, which abstract shall be prepared as required by §§ 51, 52 and 53 of these rules. The appellant shall also, fifteen days before the first day of the term for which the cause is to be docketed for trial, file with the clerk twelve copies of said abstract.

No cause shall be heard until thirty days after such service and fifteen days after such filing with the clerk, unless advanced by order of the court. In case of cross-appeals the party first giving notice of appeal shall, under this rule, be considered the appellant. [Old Rules, § 20.]

SEC. 30. If it appear from an inspection of the abstract that the appellant has negligently or intentionally failed to comply with the rule requiring only so much of the record as may be necessary to a full understanding of the question presented for decision to be included therein, the court may, in its discretion, order a new abstract prepared in conformity with such rule or affirm the judgment of the lower court without considering the appeal. [Old Rules, § 21.]

SEC. 31. The abstract so filed will be presumed to contain the record unless denied or corrected by a subsequent abstract. Every denial shall point out as specifically as the case will permit the defects alleged to exist in the abstract. A denial by the appellee shall be taken as true unless the appellant sustains his abstract by a certification of the record. Should the appellee deem the appellant's abstract incorrect or unfair he may prepare such additional abstract as he shall deem necessary to a full understanding of the questions presented to the court for decision. A denial by the appellant of such additional abstract, if not confessed, will be disregarded unless sustained by a certification of the record. The appellee shall serve one printed copy of his additional abstract or denial on each appellant or his attorney, and deliver twelve printed copies thereof to the clerk within ten days after receiving the appellant's abstract, and a denial by the appellant shall be served on the appellee and twelve printed copies thereof delivered to the clerk within five days after service of the additional abstract. [Code, §§ 4118, 4120; Old Rules, § 22.]

SEC. 32. No certification of the record shall be required unless ordered by the supreme court, or a judge thereof, which order must be made upon an application in writing or by motion, designating the matters and things of record desired to be included therein, and showing the necessity therefor. The order, if granted, shall contain similar designations and show the parts to be given by an abstract of the original record and the portions to be by transcript, and may require any or all the matters to be presented by an amended abstract. The application and the order made shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the supreme court, who shall transmit the order to the clerk of the lower court, and send a notice or copy thereof to the appellant or his attorney. The order shall be attached to and returned with the record certified, and be submitted with the papers in the case. The appellant, upon notice or copy of the order being received by him or his attorney, shall, within five days unless otherwise ordered, pay or secure to the satisfaction of the clerk of the lower court his fees and expenses for preparing and forwarding the record ordered. [Code, § 4122; Old Rules, § 23.]

SEC. 33. When certification of the record is required the designated papers, notices, depositions, exhibits identified as evidence, notice of appeal with return or acceptance of service thereon, and any other papers filed in the case, or any part thereof, may be transmitted to the supreme court in the original form or by a transcript of the same, excepting that the shorthand reporter's translation of his report shall be transmitted in its original form, but all entries of record must be certified by transcript. The clerk of the trial court shall verify his return, whether it be of the record or transcription thereof, by his certificate, under seal, distinguishing between originals and transcripts, and such certification so made shall constitute a part of the record in the supreme court. [Code, § 4123; Old Rules, § 24.]

SEC. 34. Where a view of an original paper or exhibit in the action may be important to a correct decision of the appeal, the court may order the clerk of the court below to transmit the same, which he shall do in the manner provided for the transmission of certifications of the record. [Code, § 4124; Old Rules, § 25.]

SEC. 35. A transcript may be denied; and when such denial is made it shall be as specific as the case will permit. The trial court, the supreme court, or judge of either court, may make any orders necessary to secure a perfect record or transcript thereof, upon a showing by affidavit or otherwise, and upon such notice as the court or judge may prescribe. [Code, § 4120; Old Rules, § 26.]

SEC. 36. The transcript of any paper or exhibit required for use in the supreme court may be transmitted thereto by the clerk of the trial court, by express or other safe and speedy method, but not by a party or any attorney of a party. [Code, § 2125; Old Rules, § 27.]

SEC. 37. If an abstract of the record is not filed by appellant thirty days before the second term after the appeal was taken, unless further time is given by the court, or a judge thereof, for cause shown, the appellee may file an abstract of such matters of record as are necessary, or may file a copy of the final judgment or order appealed from, notice of appeal and return of service thereof certified by the clerk of the trial court, and cause the case to be docketed, and the appeal upon motion shall be dismissed, or the judgment or order affirmed. [Code, § 4120; Old Rules, § 28.]

SEC. 38. If the appellant fails to promptly pay or secure to the satisfaction of the clerk of the trial court, his fees and expenses for preparing and forwarding to the clerk of the supreme court any record ordered to be certified by the supreme court, or a judge thereof, upon receiving notice thereof, a copy of the order therefor, the appeal upon motion supported by proofs of the facts, may be dismissed or the judgment affirmed as the appellee may elect. [Code, § 4122; Old Rules, § 29.]

SEC. 39. Where appellant has no right, or no further right to prosecute the appeal, the appellee may move to dismiss it, and if the grounds of the motion do not appear in the record, or by a writing purporting to have been signed by the appellant and filed, they must be verified by affidavit. [Code, § 4151; Old Rules, § 30.]

SEC. 40. The appellee may, by answer or abstract filed and verified by himself, agent or attorney, plead any facts which render the taking of the appeal improper, or destroy the appellant's right of further prosecuting the same, to which the appellant may file a reply or abstract likewise verified by himself, his agent or attorney, and the question of law or fact therein shall be determined by the court, upon evidence in the form of affidavits unless otherwise ordered. [Code, § 4152; Old Rules, § 31.]

IX. TRIAL, DECISION AND EXECUTION.

(a) Assignment of Error.

SEC. 41. Repealed. [30 G. A., chap. 126.]

SEC. 42. Repealed. [30 G. A., chap. 126.]

[Sections 41 and 42 are no longer in force, as they are simply an incorporation into the rules, of code sections 4136 and 4137, which were repealed by 30 G. A., chap. 126.]

(b) Motions.

SEC. 43. (1.) All motions must be in writing, filed with the clerk and entered upon the motion book. No motion shall be submitted without being publicly called by the court, unless the parties otherwise agree.

(2.) All motions must be served by copy of the same and of all affidavits or documents upon which they are based, upon the opposite party or attorney, ten days before the morning on which the causes for the district are set for hearing. Such opposite party shall then have five days to file papers in resistance to the same, copies of which must be served upon the other party or attorney, and no papers will be regarded which do not appear to have been so served. This rule shall not apply to motions the causes whereof arise after the filing of the abstract, but in such cases timely notice of such motions shall be given to the opposite attorneys. Nor shall this rule apply, as to time of service, to motions for continuance.

(3.) Motions made in a cause after judgment rendered by the supreme court, or after the time assigned for the hearing of causes from the district from which it was appealed, will be heard only upon proof of service of reasonable notice of such motion upon the adverse party or attorney.

(4.) Arguments in support of motions, if any, must be in writing or print, and shall be filed before the morning of the day set for the hearing of the cause, and served by copy upon the opposite party or attorney when the motion is served; and arguments in resistance, if any, must be in writing or print and filed before the morning of the day set for the hearing of the cause, and served by copy on the opposite party or attorney when the papers in resistance are served. [Code, § 4138; Old Rules, § 38.]

X. BRIEFS AND ARGUMENTS.

SEC. 44. When the appeal presents to the court only questions of law upon rulings of the court below, the appellant shall open and close the argument, and must, at least thirty days before the day assigned for the hearing of the case, serve upon an attorney for each appellee copies of his brief of points and authorities or argument. If appellee desires to be heard, he shall, at least ten days prior to the hearing, serve upon an attorney for each appellant copies of his brief or argument; and the printed reply shall be served at least three days before the case is to be finally submitted. If the trial in the supreme court is de novo, and the appellant has the burden he shall observe the foregoing rules. But if appellee has the burden, he may waive his right to open the argument by serving notice in writing of his intention to do so upon appellant or his attorney at least thirty days before the day assigned for the hearing of the cause. Appellant will then or after the expiration of the thirty days without notice, be entitled to open the argument, and must serve copies of his argument upon an attorney for each appellee ten days before the hearing. Appellee may then, and at least three days before the submission, serve upon an attorney for each appellant copies of his argument, which must be strictly confined to matters in reply to appellant's argument. A failure to comply with the above requirements will entitle the party not in default, unless the court shall, for sufficient cause, otherwise order, to a continuance or to have the case submitted at his option upon the briefs and arguments on file when the default occurred. [Code, § 4139; Old Rules, § 39.]

SEC. 45. All printed briefs and arguments shall be prepared as required by sections 54, 55 and 56 hereof, and each party shall file with the clerk twelve printed copies of each brief or argument, together with proper evidence of service of the same upon the opposing attorneys. The clerk shall note upon his docket the date of service and filing of all abstracts and arguments, and no brief or argument not served or filed within the time prescribed by these rules will be transmitted to the judges or considered by them in disposing of the case. No cause will be entered as submitted until the arguments are finally and actually concluded. [Old Rules, § 40.]

SEC. 46. Notice in writing or in print of intention to argue a case orally, shall be served upon an attorney for the adverse party and filed with the clerk twenty days before the first day of the term, and the party who fails to serve and file such notice shall not be entitled to argue orally, except in reply to an oral argument for the adverse party. [Old Rules, § 41.]

SEC. 47. If appellant has given the notice, he is entitled to open and close the argument, unless the cause is triable de novo and the appellee has the burden. If the notice was given by the appellee only, he is entitled to the opening, and the appellant must confine his remarks to a reply, unless the cause is triable de novo. If the cause is triable de novo and appellee has the burden, he may, if he has given the requisite notice, open and close the argument. [Old Rules, § 42.]

SEC. 48. On original submission not more than two attorneys will be heard on each side and but one in opening the argument, or in event no oral argument is to be made by opposing counsel. The opening argument shall not exceed an hour in length. The other side, when represented by one attorney only, will be limited to the same time, but if by two attorneys, they will be entitled to one and one-half hours, to be divided between them as they may elect. The reply in all cases shall be limited to one-half hour. On petition for rehearing only one attorney on a side shall be heard, the petitioner having not to exceed thirty minutes for oral argument and the reply being limited to fifteen minutes. No extension of time will be allowed unless applied for before argument begins. [Old Rules, § 43.]

SEC. 49. Oral argument shall be confined to the discussion of the propositions and authorities contained in the briefs. The failure to discuss in oral argument points properly made in the briefs shall not be deemed a waiver of such points, but they will be fully considered in determining the cause. [New.]

SEC. 50. At the commencement of each assignment for the several periods all causes included in that assignment will be called, but the submission of a cause shall not be taken on the preliminary call if any party thereto object. The court will hear all causes included in the assignment and take the submission thereof in the order in which they are assigned, excepting those which have been continued or otherwise disposed of by direction of court. [Code, § 4139; Old Rules, § 44.]

XI. PREPARING AND PRINTING ABSTRACTS, TRANSCRIPTS, BRIEFS, ARGUMENTS, AND PETITIONS FOR REHEARING.

SEC. 51. All abstracts, denials of abstracts, briefs, arguments and petitions for rehearing shall be printed upon unruled writing paper, with type commonly known as small pica, leaded lines, the printed page to be four inches wide by seven inches long, with a margin of two inches; but the type in which extracts are printed may be small pica solid or brevier with leaded lines. The first page of the abstract, denial, brief or argument, shall show the title of the cause, designating the appellant and the appellee, the term of the supreme court to which the appeal is brought, the court from which the appeal is taken, the name of the judge who presided at the trial, and the names of the attorneys for both the appellant and appellee; also the name of the paper filed and the party by whom filed and one copy shall show the time and manner of service. [Old Rules, § 66.]

SEC. 52. The abstract must be accompanied by a complete index of its contents. [Old Rules, § 67.]

SEC. 53. Abstracts of record shall be made substantially in the following form:

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF IOWA.

JANUARY TERM, 19....

JOHN DOE, Appellant, }
vs. } "In Equity" or "At Law."
 RICHARD ROE, Appellee. }

Appeal from Van Buren District Court.

JOHN SMITH, Judge.

J. C. K., for the Appellant.
 H. H. S., for the Appellee.

APPELLANT'S ABSTRACT OF RECORD.

Due, timely and legal service of the within.....is hereby acknowledged this.....day of.....190...

.....
Attorneys for

On the.....day of.....190..., the plaintiff filed in the Van Buren District Court a stating his cause of action as follows:

[Set out all of the petition necessary to an understanding of the questions to be presented to this court, and no more. In setting out exhibits, omit all merely formal irrelevant parts, as for example, if the exhibit be a deed or mortgage and no question is raised as to the acknowledgement, omit the acknowledgement. When the defendant has appeared it is useless to encumber the record with the original notice, or the return of the officer.]

On the.....day of.....A. D. 19..., the defendant filed a to said petition setting up the following grounds:

[State only the grounds of demurrer omitting the formal parts. If the pleading was a motion, and the ruling thereon is one of the questions to be considered, set it out in the same way, and continue.]

And on the.....day of.....19..., the same was submitted to the court, and the court made the following ruling thereon:

[Here set out the ruling. In every instance let the abstract be made in the chronological order of the events in the case; let each ruling appear in the proper connection. If the defendant pleaded over, and thereby waived his right to appeal from these rulings, no mention of them should be made in the abstract but it should continue.]

And on the.....day of.....19..., the defendant filed his

to the petition, setting up the following defenses:

[Here set out the defenses, omitting all formal parts. If motions or demurrers were interposed to this pleading, proceed as directed with reference to the petition. Frame the record so that it will properly present all questions to be reviewed and raised before issue is joined. When the abstract shows issue joined, proceed.]

BILL OF EXCEPTIONS.

On the.....day of.....19..., said cause was tried to a jury (or the court, as the case may be) and on the trial the following proceedings were had:

[Here set out so much of the evidence and proceedings as is necessary to show the rulings of the court to which exceptions were taken during the progress of the trial.]

INSTRUCTIONS.

After the evidence and the arguments of counsel were concluded the plaintiff (or defendant as the case may be) asked the court to give each of the following instructions to the jury:

[Set out instructions referred to and continue.]

Which the court refused as to each instruction, to which several rulings the plaintiff (or defendant) excepted at the time, and thereupon the court gave the following instructions to the jury:

[Set out the instructions.]

To the giving of those numbered (give the number) and to giving of each thereof the plaintiff (or defendant) at the time excepted.

VERDICT.

On the.....day of.....19..., the jury returned into court with the following verdict:

[Set out the verdict.]

MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

On the.....day of.....19..., the plaintiff (or defendant) filed a motion praying the court to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial upon the following grounds:

[Set out the grounds aforesaid for the new trial.]

On the.....day of.....19..., the court made the following ruling upon said motion:

[Set out the record of the ruling.]

To which plaintiff (or defendant) at the time, excepted.

JUDGMENT.

On the.....day of.....19..., the following judgment was entered:

[Set out the judgment entry appealed from.]

On the.....day of.....19..., the plaintiff perfected an appeal to the supreme court of the state of Iowa, by serving upon the defendant and the clerk of the district court of Van Buren county a notice of appeal.

[If supersedeas bond was filed, state the fact.]

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS.

And the appellant herein says there is manifest error on the face of the record in this:

[Set out the errors assigned.]

INDEX.

This outline is presented for the purpose of indicating the character of the abstract contemplated by the rule, which like all the rules, is to be substantially complied with. Of course, no formula can be laid down applicable to all cases. The rule to be observed in abstracting a case is: Preserve everything material to the questions to be decided and omit everything else. [Code, §§ 3675, 3749; Old Rules, § 68.]

SEC. 54. The brief of appellant shall contain a short and clear statement, disclosing:

First. The nature of the action.

Second. What the issues were.

Third. How the issues were decided, and what the judgment or decree was.

Fourth. The errors relied upon for a reversal.

Fifth. A brief and concise statement of so much of the facts as fully presents the errors and exceptions relied upon referring to the pages and lines of the abstract. If the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict or finding, in fact or law, is assigned, the statement shall contain a condensed recital of the evidence in narrative form so as to present the substance clearly and concisely.

Following this statement, the brief shall contain, under a separate heading of each error relied on, separately numbered propositions or points, stated concisely, and without argument or elaboration, together with the authorities relied on in support of them; and in citing cases, the names of parties must be given, with the book and page where reported. When text books are cited the number or date of the edition must be stated with the number of the volume and page, or section. No alleged error or point, not contained in this statement of points, shall be raised afterwards, either by reply brief, or in oral or printed argument, or on petition for rehearing. [New.]

SEC. 55. The brief of appellee on the assignment of errors shall point out any omissions or inaccuracies in appellant's statement of the record, and shall contain a short and clear statement of the propositions by which counsel seek to meet the alleged errors and sustain the judgment or decree, or by which such errors are obviated. Following this statement, the brief shall contain the points and authorities relied on in like manner as required in the appellant's brief. The brief of appellee on cross-errors shall be prepared in the manner required in the case of appellant's brief. The brief of appellant, in answer to the cross-assignment of errors, shall be prepared in the manner required of appellee's answer to the assignment of errors. Reply briefs shall be prepared in manner like to answer briefs. [New.]

SEC. 56. The briefs of any party may be followed by an argument in support of such briefs, which shall be distinct therefrom, but shall be bound with the same. The argument shall be confined to discussion and elaboration of the points contained in the briefs in the order stated. The names of counsel shall be affixed to all briefs filed by them. [New.]

SEC. 57. Transcripts of the record, when required by the supreme court or a judge thereof, may be made substantially in the manner following, viz.:

STATE OF IOWA, }
County of..... }

In the district (or superior) court of Iowa, at a term begun and holden in the county of....., on the.....day of.....A. D. 19...., before J. H. G., judge of the.....judicial district (or judge of the.....superior court) of the State of Iowa.

N. P. }
v. }
C. D. }

Be it remembered that heretofore, to-wit, on the.....day of.....A. D. 19...., a petition was filed in the office of the clerk of the district (or superior) court, in and for the county (or city) of.....in words and figures following, to-wit:
[Here insert the petition in full.]

[Proceed in the same manner in relation to whatever paper is filed; such as the original notice, or a petition for attachment, etc. If the cause has come from another county by a change of venue, begin as above, "Be it remembered," and state in like manner all that was done in the county from which the venue was changed.]

And afterward there was filed in the office of the said clerk a notice, in the words and figures following, to-wit:
[Here insert the notice in full.]

[Copy all indorsements on the face of the transcripts, or copy of record, and not upon the back of the leaf.]

Upon which (or attached to which) was a return as follows:

[Copy the officer's return, with all indorsements in full; if the suit be by attachment, copy the petition or affidavit, writ or attachment, bond, notice, return, etc.]

And afterwards, to-wit: on the.....day of.....A. D. 19...., there was filed in the office of said clerk, an answer in words and figures following, to-wit:

[Here insert answer in full.]

[Should the clerk doubt what the paper is, let him call it a "paper in the words and figures following," etc. Where a paper is filed in term time, add the day of the term to the day of the month, as in the next form.]

A. B. }
v. }
C. D. }

And afterward, to-wit: on the.....day of.....A. D. 19...., it being the.....day of the.....term of said court, the said A. B. (or plaintiff) filed the following demurrer to the answer of the said C. D. (or the said defendant) to-wit:

[Here insert demurrer in full.]

[If a party files more than one pleading at the same time, they should be numbered in their regular order, as for instance a demurrer and answer, and the transcript may say, (stating the date) the said C. D. (or defendant) filed his demurrer and answer, which are filed subject to the rule.]

A. B. }
v. }
C. D. }

And now, on this.....day of.....A. D. 19..., it being the..... day of the said term thereof, the cause coming on for hearing on the plaintiff's demurrer to the defendant's answer [copy the entry of the proceedings of the court, sustaining or overruling the demurrer.]

And afterward, on the.....day of the said....., it being the..... day of the said term, the said plaintiff filed his reply in the words and figures following, to-wit:

[Here set out reply in full.]

And afterward on the.....day of.....A. D. 19..., the said defendant filed motion and affidavit for a continuance, as follows, to-wit:

[Here set out copy of motion and affidavit.]

And the same being now heard and considered by the court, the said motion is sustained, and it is ordered that this cause be continued until the next term of the court (at the cost of the defendant).

In the district (or superior) court.....county (or.....city).

A. B. }
v. }
C. D. }

.....term, A. D. 19...

And now on this.....day of....., it being the.....day of said term, this cause coming on for trial, came to a jury, to-wit:.....

.....twelve good and lawful men, who were sworn well and truly to try the issues between the said parties, and a true verdict render, according to the law and evidence given them in court. The jury retired to consider on their verdict, and afterward, on the same day, the jury returned into court and rendered its verdict as follows:

[Here insert in full the verdict as rendered.]

[Or if the jury does not return until the next day.]

A. B. }
v. }
C. D. }

And afterward, on the.....day of.....A. D. 19..., the jury in the foregoing cause returned into court and rendered its verdict, as follows:

[Here insert in full verdict as rendered.]

A. B. }
v. }
C. D. }

And afterward, on the.....day of.....A. D. 19..., being the..... day of said term, the shorthand reporter filed his report in writing or in shorthand (as the case may be) certified as required by law, the translation of which, duly certified, was filed on the.....day of.....A. D. 19..., and is as follows: [Here attach the original translation unless otherwise directed by order of the supreme court, or a judge thereof.]

A. B. }
v. }
C. D. }

Now, on this.....day of.....A. D. 19..., the plaintiff filed his motion for a new trial, to-wit:

[Here insert in full the motion for a new trial.]

A. B. }
v. }
C. D. }

And now, on this.....day of.....A. D. 19..., this cause coming up for a hearing on the motion of the plaintiff for a new trial, it is considered by the court, that the same be overruled (or, as the case may be).

[Then add the final entries of record, comprising final judgment, etc., and certificate of clerk.]

The foregoing form is only an example, and is to be varied according to the circumstances. The actual facts of the case will dictate what is to be done, but in all cases it is to be done substantially in like manner with the above, giving the proper order and date of the filing of papers and incorporating them at the proper date into the proceedings of the court. When the order made by this court or a judge thereof, pursuant to rules 31, 32 and 33, requires but a part of the record be transcribed, the foregoing form should be so modified as that it will include only those matters directed to be certified. All other, except the mere formal parts, must be omitted. [Code, §§ 3675, 3749, 4122, 4123; Old Rules, § 70.]

XII. DECISIONS AND OPINIONS.

SEC. 58. The court may reverse, modify or affirm the judgment, decree or order appealed from, or render such as the inferior court should have done. [Code, § 4139; Old Rules, § 45.]

SEC. 59. No cause will be considered as decided until a written decision is filed with the clerk. The decisions of the court on all questions passed upon by it, including motions and practice, shall be specifically stated, and shall be accompanied by an opinion upon all such matters as are deemed of sufficient importance, together with any dissent therefrom, which dissent may be stated with or without an opinion; and all decisions and opinions, including dissents, shall be in writing and be filed with the clerk except rulings on motions which may be entered upon the announcement book. If the decision is not accompanied with an opinion, it shall briefly state the title of the case, the county from which the case was appealed, the name of the presiding judge, the nature of the action, the names of counsel appearing on either side, and the conclusions reached. [Code, §§ 198, 4139; Old Rules, § 46.]

SEC. 60. When the court is equally divided in opinion the judgment of the court below shall stand affirmed, but the decision is of no further force or authority. In case of such division, opinions may be filed at the option of the court. If no opinion is filed a written announcement shall be made of the division of the court upon the questions presented, and that the judgment is affirmed by operation of law. [Code, §§ 195, 198; Old Rules, § 47.]

XIII. JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

SEC. 61. The supreme court, if it affirms the judgment, shall also, if the appellee asks or moves therefor, render judgment against the appellant and his sureties on the appeal bond for the amount of the judgment, damages and costs referred to therein, in case such damages can be accurately known to the court without an issue and trial. [Code, § 4140; Old Rules, § 50.]

SEC. 62. Upon the affirmance of any judgment or order for the payment of money, the collection of which in whole or in part has been stayed by an appeal bond, the court may award to the appellee damages upon the amount so stayed; and, if satisfied by the record that the appeal was taken for delay only, may award as damages a sum not exceeding fifteen per cent. thereof. [Code, § 4141; Old Rules, § 51.]

SEC. 63. Decrees to be entered in this court shall be prepared by the attorney of the parties in whose favor they are rendered. Copies shall be served on the opposite attorney and filed in the court within twenty days after the attorney preparing them shall have received notice of the decision in the cause in which they are to be entered. [Old Rules, § 52.]

SEC. 64. When, by the decision, a decree is to be entered in this court at the option of either party, such opinion shall be declared and a decree furnished under the above rule within twenty days from the date at which the attorney required to prepare the decree received notice of the decision. [Old Rules, § 53.]

SEC. 65. No procedendo, except in criminal cases and in cases where petitions for rehearing have been overruled, shall issue in any case until the expiration of thirty days from the filing of the opinion in the case, except upon an order of one of the judges of the court, upon cause shown. [Old Rules, § 54.]

XIV. REHEARINGS.

SEC. 66. No petition for rehearing shall be filed after sixty days from the filing of the opinion or decision of the supreme court. [Code, § 4149; Old Rules, § 60.]

SEC. 67. Written notice of intention to petition for a rehearing shall be served on the opposite party or his attorney, and the clerk of this court, and filed with the clerk, within thirty days after filing of the opinion or decision, and if no such notice is served, the petition for rehearing shall not be filed after the expiration of such thirty days. [Code, § 4149; Old Rules, § 61.]

SEC. 68. The petition or rehearing shall be printed, and, with proof of service thereof on the opposite party or his attorney, shall be filed with the clerk of the court within sixty days after the opinion is filed, and may be made the argument or brief of authorities relied upon for a rehearing. It shall include a copy of the opinion or decision of the court to which objection is made, or a reference to the volume and page of the Northwestern Reporter in which it has been printed. The adverse party may file an argument in response. [Code, § 4149; Old Rules, § 62.]

SEC. 69. A copy of the petition shall be served upon the attorney of the adverse party, and if there be more than one, upon the attorney of each of them, within sixty days after the opinion or decision is filed; and twelve copies shall be delivered to the clerk of the court. If there be a printed argument in resistance of the petition, a copy thereof shall be served upon the attorney for the petitioner ten days before the day fixed for the hearing of the cause, and twelve copies shall be delivered to the clerk of the court. [Code, § 4149; Old Rules, § 63.]

SEC. 70. The cause shall be placed on the docket for hearing on the first day of the next period commencing not less than twenty days after the filing of the petition and service thereof. If the party applying for a rehearing shall give notice of oral argument in his petition, both parties shall be entitled to be heard orally unless the petitioner waive oral argument. [Code § 4149; Old Rules, § 64. Amended November 1st, 1907.]

[The above is a substitute for the original section. By specific provision it "applies to petitions for rehearing in cases in which opinions are filed after November 1, 1907."]

SEC. 71. If a petition for rehearing is filed, it shall suspend the decision, if the court or one of the judges upon its presentation so order, until after the final decision on the rehearing. [Code, § 4148; Old Rules, § 65.]

XV. RECORDS AND REPORTS.

SEC. 72. The records and reports must in all cases show whether a decision was made by a full bench, and whether either, and if so, which of the judges dissented from the decision. [Code, § 199; Old Rules, § 48.]

SEC. 73. All decisions and opinions of the court shall be published in the official reports, except such as the court may think unimportant. Decisions and opinions which are not to be included will be marked, "Not to be officially reported," and when so marked they will not be included in the reports. [Code, § 200; Old Rules, § 49.]

XVI. EXECUTIONS.

SEC. 74. If the supreme court affirms the judgment or order it may send the cause to the court below to have the same carried into effect, or may issue the necessary process for this purpose, directed to the sheriff of the proper county, as the party may require. [Code, § 4143; Old Rules, § 65.]

SEC. 75. If remanded to the inferior court to be carried into effect, such decision and the order of the court thereon, being certified thereto and entered on the records thereof, shall have the same force and effect as if made and entered during the session of that court. [Code, § 4144; Old Rules, § 56.]

SEC. 76. If by the decision of the supreme court, the appellant becomes entitled to a restoration of any part of the money or property that was taken from him by means of such judgment or order, either the supreme court or the court below may direct execution or writ of restitution to issue for the purpose of restoring to him such property or its value. [Code, § 4145; Old Rules, § 57.]

SEC. 77. Executions issued from the supreme court shall be like those from the district court, attended with the same consequences, and returnable in the same time. [Code, § 4153; Old Rules, § 58.]

SEC. 78. In cases in which the judgment below is affirmed in this court, the parties in whose favor the judgment is affirmed may have execution either from this court or the court below. In case of an execution from this court, if a process of garnishment is served upon the execution defendant, either principal or surety, the sheriff, in addition to his return, shall return a copy of the execution and his returns to the district or superior court from which the cause was appealed, and all issues of fact which may arise in said garnishment process shall be tried by that court. [Old Rules, § 59.]

XVII. APPEALS IN CRIMINAL ACTIONS.

SEC. 79. The mode of reviewing in the supreme court any judgment, action, or decision of the district court in a criminal case, is by appeal. An appeal can only be taken from the final judgment and within one year thereafter. Either the defendant or state may appeal. [Code, § 5448.]

SEC. 80. An appeal is taken and perfected by the party or his attorney serving on the adverse party or his attorney of record in the district court at the time of the rendition of the judgment, and on the clerk of such court, a notice in writing of the taking of the appeal, and filing the same with such clerk, with evidence of service thereof indorsed thereon or annexed thereto. [Code, § 5449.]

SEC. 81. When several defendants are indicted and tried jointly, any one or more of them may join in taking the appeal, but those of their co-defendants who do not join shall take no benefit therefrom, yet they may appeal afterwards. [Code, § 5451.]

SEC. 82. When an appeal is taken, it is the duty of the clerk of the court in which the judgment was rendered to forthwith prepare and transmit to the attorney-general a certified copy of the notice of appeal in the case, with the date of service thereof, and, without unnecessary delay, to make out a full and perfect transcript of all papers in the case on file in his office, except the papers returned by the examining magistrate on the preliminary examination, where there has been one, and of all entries made in the record book, certify the same under the seal of the court, and transmit the same to the clerk of the supreme court. [Code, § 5450.]

SEC. 83. An appeal taken by the state in no case stays the operation of a judgment in favor of the defendant. [Code, § 5452.]

SEC. 84. An appeal taken by the defendant does not stay the execution of the judgment, unless bail is put in; but where the judgment is imprisonment in the penitentiary, and an appeal is taken within ninety days after judgment is rendered, and the defendant is unable to give bail, and that fact is satisfactorily shown to the court, or judge thereof, it may, in its discretion, order the sheriff or officer having the defendant in custody to detain him in custody, without taking him to the penitentiary, to abide the judgment on the appeal, if the defendant desires it. [Code, § 5453.]

SEC. 85. When an appeal is taken by the defendant, and bail is given the clerk must give to the defendant, or his attorney, a certificate under the seal of the court that an appeal has been taken and bail given, and the sheriff or other officer having the defendant in custody must, upon receiving it, discharge the defendant from custody and cease all further proceedings in execution thereof, and forthwith return to the clerk of the court who issued it the execution under which he acted, with his return thereon, and if it has not been issued, it shall not be until after final judgment on the appeal. [Code, § 5454.]

SEC. 86. The party appealing is the appellant, the adverse party is the appellee, but the title of the action shall not be changed on the appeal, and the cause shall be so docketed at the commencement of the period assigned for trying causes from the judicial district from which the appeal comes which causes shall take precedence of all other business, be tried at the term at which the transcript is filed, unless continued for cause or by consent of the parties, and be decided, if practicable, at the same term. [Code, § 5455.]

SEC. 87. The personal appearance of the defendant in the supreme court on the trial of an appeal is in no case necessary. [Code, § 5456.]

SEC. 88. An appeal shall not be dismissed for any informality or defect in taking it, if corrected in a reasonable time, and the supreme court must direct how it shall be corrected. [Code, § 5457.]

SEC. 89. No assignment of error is necessary. [Code, § 5458.]

SEC. 90. Criminal actions shall be presented in the supreme court, by printed abstracts, denials, arguments and petitions for rehearing, as required by the rules applicable to civil actions, provided that the defendant shall be entitled to close the argument. The provisions of the code and rules of this court, in civil procedure relating to the printing, serving and filing of abstracts, denials, arguments, petitions for rehearing, notice thereof and of oral arguments, motions and resistances thereto, the certification of the record and the filing of decisions and opinions, shall apply in criminal cases. [Code, §§ 5459, 5461.]

SEC. 91. If the appeal is taken by the defendant the supreme court must examine the record, without regard to technical errors or defects which do not affect the substantial rights of the parties, and render such judgment on the record as the law demands. It may affirm, reverse, or modify the judgment, or render such judgment as the district court should have done, or order a new trial, or reduce the punishment, but cannot increase it. And in case the judgment of the trial court is reversed or modified in favor of the defendant on the appeal of the defendant, he shall be entitled to recover the cost of printing abstract and briefs not exceeding one dollar for each page thereof, to be paid by the county from which the appeal was taken. [Code, § 5462.]

SEC. 92. If the state appeals the supreme court cannot reverse or modify the judgment so as to increase the punishment, but may affirm it, and shall point out any error in the proceedings, or in the measure of punishment, and its decision shall be obligatory as law. [Code, § 5463.]

SEC. 93. If a judgment against the defendant is reversed without ordering a new trial, the supreme court must direct that the defendant be discharged and his bail exonerated, or if money be deposited instead, that it be refunded to him. [Code, § 5464.]

SEC. 94. On a judgment of affirmance against the defendant, the original judgment shall be carried into execution as the supreme court shall direct, except as otherwise provided. [Code § 5465.]

SEC. 95. The decision of the supreme court, with any opinion filed, or judgment rendered, must be recorded by its clerk and after the expiration of the period allowed for a rehearing or as ordered by the court, or provided by its rules, a certified copy of the decision and opinion shall be transmitted to the clerk of the trial court, filed and entered of record by him, and thereafter the jurisdiction of the supreme court shall cease and all proceedings necessary for executing the judgment shall be had in the trial court, or by its clerk. [Code, § 5466.]

SEC. 96. Unless some proceeding in the district court is directed, a copy of the judgment of the trial court and decision on appeal, or of the judgment and decision on appeal, certified by the clerk of the trial court, shall be delivered to the sheriff, or other proper officer, as an execution, and shall authorize him to execute the judgment of the court, or take any steps required to bring the action to a conclusion. [Code, § 5467.]

SEC. 97. If a defendant, imprisoned during the pendency of an appeal, upon a new trial ordered by the supreme court, is again convicted, the period of his former imprisonment shall be deducted from the period of imprisonment to be fixed on the last verdict of conviction. [Code, § 5468.]

XVIII. CONSTRUCTION AND MODIFICATION OF RULES.

SEC. 98. When, by reason of peculiar circumstances, the foregoing rules relating to the abstract, preparation and argument of causes, ought to be waived or modified in any case, the party desiring such waiver or modification may, upon reasonable notice to the adverse party, apply to any judge of this court in vacation, or to the court in term time, for an order directing the waiver or modification desired. The application shall be in writing, shall set out the peculiar facts relied upon by the applicant, and shall be verified by the party, or a person having knowledge of the facts, and certified by counsel as being true and made in good faith. The order upon such application shall be in writing, and shall be filed with the clerk of this court. In no case will these rules be waived or modified upon agreement of counsel alone. [Old Rules, § 90.]

XIX. DISTRIBUTING OF PRINTED MATTER.

SEC. 99. The clerk shall make the following distribution of all printed abstracts, denials of abstracts, briefs and arguments received under the foregoing rules: One copy to each judge of the court, one copy to the state library, two copies to the law department of the state university, and the remainder shall be placed in his office, one copy of which shall remain permanently among the files. [Old Rules, § 91.]

XX. RETURN OF PAPERS AND EXHIBITS.

SEC. 100. In all cases save where a decree is to be rendered in this court the clerk as soon as the cause is at an end here shall transmit to the clerk of the court below all original papers, exhibits and transcripts certified up from said court. If decree is entered in this court either party desiring to withdraw any of the said files may, by motion, showing proper grounds therefor, and upon five days' notice to the other party or his attorney, secure an order from the court or a judge thereof, allowing him to do so, upon filing a receipt for the same with the clerk of this court. [Code, § 4126; Old Rules, § 92.]

XXI. COSTS.

SEC. 101. The appellant may be required to give security for costs, under the same circumstances and upon the same showing as plaintiffs in civil actions in the inferior courts may be. [Code, § 4135.]

SEC. 102. When the parties or their attorneys shall furnish printed abstracts, denials of abstracts, amendments, briefs, arguments, or petitions for rehearing in conformity to section 51 of these rules, the clerk will tax the actual cost of printing the same which shall not exceed one dollar for each page embraced in a single copy thereof, and when not so prepared and printed shall not exceed the sum of one dollar for every three hundred and seventy-five words, which in no event shall exceed one dollar per page against the unsuccessful party not furnishing the document to be collected and paid to the successful party as other costs. It is made the duty of every party who files any printed matter for which cost of printing is claimed, to state at the end of the document in writing or in print and have certified by his attorney as being correct, the true and actual cost of the printing of the same and no costs will be taxed for such printing unless this statement and certificate be made. [Code, § 4142; Old Rules, § 94, as amended February 14, 1907.]

SEC. 103. If any denial of the abstracts, transcripts or records is made, or if an additional abstract is filed, without good or sufficient cause, the costs of the same, or any unnecessary part thereof, and of any transcript thereby made necessary, shall be taxed to the party causing the same; and when any unnecessary casts have been made by either party the court will, upon application, tax the same to the party making them without reference to the disposition of the case. [Code, §§ 4118, 4120; Old Rules, § 95.]

SEC. 104. Whenever the translation of the shorthand notes is required to be filed in this court, the clerk shall tax as part of the costs in the case, the expense of procuring the same, which shall not exceed the rate of five cents per hundred words. If the amount paid or agreed to be paid is not stated in the translation so filed, the clerk shall tax at the statutory rate. [Code, § 4142.]

SEC. 105. All other taxable fees and costs shall abide the result of the appeal and be taxed to the unsuccessful party, unless otherwise ordered. [Code, §§ 3853, 4142.]

XXII. ADMISSION OF ATTORNEYS.

SEC. 106. The board of law examiners shall consist of five members, in addition to the attorney-general; and no examination for admission shall be conducted by less than three members of the board.

SEC. 107. Examinations shall be held at the Capitol at Des Moines, commencing on the first Tuesday in October and the Tuesday before the first Thursday in June, and at the university at Iowa City commencing on the first Thursday preceding the annual commencement of the State University, and each examination shall continue not less than three days. Such examinations shall be both written and oral. At least fifty written questions to be prepared by such board on subjects of the law shall be propounded to each candidate, to be answered in writing, and the members of the board shall conduct such oral examinations as they deem necessary and proper. The board shall estimate each candidate's examination in percentage on the basis of one hundred per cent. for the entire examination, and no one shall be recommended by the board for admission who does not, on this basis, receive a marking of at least seventy-five per cent.

SEC. 108. The board shall determine the general educational qualifications of the applicants for examination before allowing them to enter upon the examination as to their legal attainments, and for that purpose may require such of them as do not otherwise show their qualifications, as provided by this rule, to submit to written tests as to their knowledge of the subjects of Orthography, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Geography, English Grammar, United States and English History, Elementary Algebra, Elementary Physics, Elementary Economics and Civil Government, and such other subjects as the board may deem necessary. But in lieu of such written tests the board shall accept as sufficient evidence of the educational qualifications required by statute proof of graduation from the regular collegiate or liberal arts' course in any university or college of good standing in the United States, or from any high school of this state having a course of study which prepares for admission to the State University, or from any normal school or academy prescribing a course of study at least equivalent to such high school course. The board shall also accept as sufficient proof of educational qualifications the certificate of the president or principal of any such university, college, high school, normal school or academy in this state that the applicant has regularly and in good faith pursued and successfully completed three years of the regular course of such school as above described; also certificates or diplomas of the State Board of Educational Examiners; also the certificate of the president of the State University or any college in this state having an equivalent collegiate or liberal arts' course of study, that the applicant has been found by examination or on proper certification to be entitled to admission without conditions as a student in such course or in any other course of study in such institution for which the same qualifications for admission are required, or for which it is required that the applicant shall have actually and in good faith acquired a general education substantially equivalent to that involved in the completion of a high school course of study of at least three years in extent. The board may adopt such reasonable regulations as shall be deemed wise with regard to acceptance of other proofs of educational qualifications as a substitute for written tests by the board. The board may, before recommending the admission of an applicant, subject him to a special examination as to general educational qualifications if his written or oral examination on legal subjects renders it doubtful whether his educational qualifications are such as required by statute.

SEC. 109. No candidate who has failed to pass any examination given by the board shall be received as an applicant for examination within three months after such failure.

SEC. 110. The Board of Law Examiners shall prepare such forms as may be necessary for application, for examination, and make such rules, not inconsistent with the rules of this court, with reference to the method of conducting the examinations herein provided for, as they may deem expedient.

SEC 111. The members of the Board of Law Examiners shall be paid $15 each for each day spent in conducting examinations as authorized by these rules, upon the certificate of the attorney-general as to the time thus occupied; such compensation to be paid by the clerk of this court out of funds in his hands derived from fees of candidates for examination.

RULES ADOPTED BY THE BOARD OF LAW EXAMINERS OF IOWA FOR THE EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR ADMISSION TO THE BAR.

At a meeting of the Board of Law Examiners, held at the Capitol on the 28th day of August, 1901, the following rules for the examination of applicants for admission to practice as attorneys and counselors in the courts of this state, under chapter ten of Title III of the Code, as amended by chapter eleven of the acts of the Twenty-eighth General Assembly, were duly adopted, and shall be in force and effect from and after this date.

RULE 1. Every applicant for admission to the bar shall make application, under oath, and upon the form prescribed by the Board of Law Examiners, which will be furnished by the clerk of the supreme court, upon request, and shall file his application with the clerk of the supreme court at least ten days before the first day of the term at which he asks to be examined.

RULE 2. Each applicant shall attach to his application, as proof of his good moral character, a certificate of a judge of the district court of the district, or a clerk of the district court of the county in which the applicant resides, to the effect that he has knowledge of the moral character of the applicant, and that the same is good.

RULE 3. Every applicant who is a graduate of a collegiate, classical, philosophical, scientific or engineering course in any university or college of good standing in the United States, or a graduate of a three years' course in any high school which prepares for admission to the State University, or of a course of study in any normal school or academy equivalent to such high school course, or holds a certificate or diploma from the State Board of Educational Examiners, shall attach to his application the diploma or certificate issued to him by such high school, college, normal school, academy or State Board of Educational Examiners, and the same shall be accepted as proof of the general educational qualification of the applicant. Every applicant not holding such diploma or certificate, before being permitted to take the law examination, must pass a satisfactory written examination before the Board of Law Examiners in Orthography, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Geography, English Grammar, United States and English History, Elementary Algebra, Elementary Physics, Elementary Economics, Civil Government, and the Elementary Principles of the Government Land Surveys.

RULE 4. No applicant whose preliminary examination shall not average at least 75 per cent. on a basis of 100 per cent. will be permitted by the board to take the law examination.

RULE 5. Proof of qualification as to age, place of residence, time and place of study, shall be by affidavit made before some officer authorized to administer oaths and having a seal. Proof of residence and age shall be by affidavits of at least two witnesses, and the applicant shall also make affidavit as to his age and place of residence. Proof of his term of study shall be by affidavit of the member of the bar or judge with whom he pursued his studies; and when he has studied at a law school, such fact, and his term of study, shall be shown by the affidavit of one or more of the professors or instructors of such school; such affidavits must show that the applicant has actually, and in good faith, pursued the study of law in the manner, and for the time prescribed by statute; and must also show that the affiant is a practicing lawyer or judge of a court of record, or professor or instructor at a law school at which the applicant studied.

RULE 6. In estimating the time of study, a school year of thirty-six weeks spent at a reputable law school in the United States shall be equivalent to a full year spent in an office, and a fraction of a school year spent in such law school shall be considered the equivalent of the same fraction of a year spent in the office of an attorney or judge.

RULE 7. The examination shall be upon printed and oral questions submitted to each applicant, and during such examination he shall not have access to books or papers, nor shall he communicate with anyone upon the subject thereof.

INDEX

This index covers the Constitution of Iowa, the Code, the 1907 Supplement to the Code, and the Rules of the Supreme Court. The Rules of the Supreme Court are also indexed separately herein, said index commencing on page 1195. The other articles in the "Prefix" are referred to only in a general way.

The references are to both sections and pages—the page number following the section number, after a colon.

The black letter "S" indicates that the section and page numbers following it will be found in the 1907 Supplement to the Code, while those not preceded by the said letter will be found in the Code.

The letter "R" before a section number indicates that the section is found in the Rules of the Supreme Court.

The term "et seq.," following a section number, means "and sections following."

All sections of the Code that have been amended, and are still in force, will be found complete in this Supplement, as amended, having the same section number; while repealing sections and new matter will be found in the Supplement, under sub-section numbers, as Section 4-a, etc.

A table of all legalizing acts relating to conveyances of real property has been placed in front part of this Supplement.
