Labor Services Division — Iowa Workforce Development

Purpose and History

The Labor Services Division of Iowa Workforce Development (IWD) is responsible for enforcing safety in the workplace; providing consultation to employers on occupational safety health compliance; conducting certain equipment inspections; maintaining statistical information on illness and injuries in the workplace; and enforcing wage, labor, and child labor laws. The Division is headed by the Labor Commissioner. The Division was transferred from IWD to the Department of Inspections, Appeals, and Licensing in 2023 Iowa Acts, Senate File 514 (State Government Alignment Act).

Funding

The Labor Services Division receives a State General Fund appropriation. State funds represent approximately 50.0% of the total resources available to the Division. The Labor Services Division also uses a portion of State funds to match and obtain federal funds from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.
