PREFACE.

The aim of this work is to present the general statutory law of Iowa, consisting of the Code of 1873, as amended, and all subsequent acts of a general, public and permanent nature, so as to show the whole body of the general statutory law of Iowa as it now exists, together with a digest under each section of the decisions of the courts construing or applying it. The work as now published is substantially a new edition of "McClain's Annotated Statutes" of 1880, the change in title being made to plainly indicate the fact that the Code now in force is the basis of the compilation, the various statutes being incorporated with it in a uniform and methodical arrangement. The form and appearance of the page have been changed by transferring the marginal notes, as they are found in the Code and in the first edition of this work, to the beginning of the sections, and abbreviating them when necessary, so that they appear as catch-words, being printed in bold-faced type. This change, together with the use of larger type for the text of the statutory matter, renders the page plainer and more pleasant to the eye.

The large addition of new matter in some parts from the insertion of statutes passed since the enactment of the Code has rendered references by the original Code sections quite inadequate. Therefore, all the sections in this work, both of the Code and of the statutes, are numbered consecutively from first to last in bold-faced figures preceding the catch-words. All cross-references in the small type notes are to these sections, and when in the text a reference is made to a section of the Code or of a statute, it is followed, in brackets, with the number of the section in this compilation.

At the beginning of the section proper, after the catch-word, is given in ordinary figures the number of the section if it is a part of the Code, or a reference to the General Assembly, chapter and section, if it is a part of a subsequent statute. Where the section has been changed by subsequent enactments, the statutes by which such changes are made are referred to in their order, and the section is printed as thus changed.

In order, however, to make it easy to find sections of the Code from reference to their original numbers, such numbers are given at the top of each page, showing the sections of the Code on that page, and as these sections are retained in their order, it is easy to find any section referred to by its Code number.

The marginal references in the former edition to corresponding sections of the Revision and the Code of 1851 and the statutes prior to the present Code are in this edition printed at the end of the section in brackets. These references are of no importance in determining what the law now is, but are of value as showing what previous legislation there has been of the same character and when similar provisions were first enacted.

When the first edition of this work was published in 1880, a careful comparison was made between the Code as printed by the authority of the state and the original rolls thereof, duly authenticated and preserved in the office of the secretary of state. As a result of this examination a considerable number of discrepancies were found. Where these are material, and not merely such verbal changes as the editor under whose direction the Code was published was authorized to make, the text of the Code has been changed in this work to correspond with the rolls in the secretary's office; but no changes of this kind have been made without attention being called thereto by a note in brackets immediately following the section changed.

All amendments of sections of the Code or statutes are incorporated into the text, and the Code and statutes as thus given in this work represent the body of the statutory law as it stood July 4, 1888, when the acts of the last General Assembly which had not previously gone into effect by reason of special publication clauses came in force, and as it will remain until changed by subsequent legislation.

The statute abolishing the circuit court and conferring all the jurisdiction and powers of that court and of the judges thereof upon the district court and judges, in addition to the jurisdiction and powers already possessed by the latter, rendered necessary quite extensive changes in the phraseology of existing statutes; but as such changes were not provided for by direct amendment it has not been deemed wise to make them arbitrarily. Such changes have been indicated by inserting in brackets the words which should be substituted or omitted in order to make the statute conform to the present system of courts. In the same way the general and uniform change from district to county attorney is indicated by inserting in brackets the word which should be substituted to carry out the change intended.

In the insertion of statutes the merely formal parts, such as the title and the enacting clause, are omitted. Publication clauses are also omitted; but a table is given at the end of the work, preceding the index, showing where each act of a public nature passed since the enactment of the Code is inserted in this work, and in this table the title of each act and the date of its taking effect, whether by publication or otherwise, is given, so that these matters are made readily accessible in such few cases as they may be of importance, without cumbering the body of the book with them.

The notes of decisions are much more extensive than in the former edition. This is mainly due to the great number of cases decided in the eight years since the first edition which relate to statutes. But the increase is partially due also to the fact that the notes are given a somewhat wider scope so as to include all cases upon questions which are regulated by statute. The recent preparation, by the author, of a complete Iowa digest has enabled him to bring together all the cases on such questions more completely than was practicable from an examination of the opinions of the court for the sole purpose of these annotations.

All decisions of the supreme court of Iowa prior to July, 1888, and all decisions of the federal courts in Iowa, or appealed from Iowa, have been examined in compiling these annotations. The plan has been, first, to collect under each section all the cases pertinent thereto, and, secondly, to state clearly the very point, or points, decided in each case. The notes are, as far as possible, so arranged as to form a connected, consistent and distinct enunciation of the principles embodied in the decisions, and when the cases are numerous and relate to different subjects they are arranged under appropriate headings.

It is desirable that the purpose of these notes of decision shall not be misunderstood. They are intended as a guide to the cases, not a substitute for them. They are made full in their statements so that they shall show what cases of many which may be cited under any particular section relate to the point under investigation, but when a case is found in point the opinion itself should be read to understand its full meaning. The aim has been to make the notes accurate and reliable, but it is not possible in any brief note to state fully the opinion of the court in a case with all its limitations and bearings.

Among other preliminary matter at the beginning of the work are given tables of corresponding sections, showing where each section of the Code of 1851, the Revision, and the session laws subsequent to the Revision and prior to the Code of 1873, if still retained, or if not, then where the corresponding provision, if any, is to be found in the Code of 1873. This table, making it possible to trace any prior statutory provision to its present form, and the corresponding references at the end of each section of the Code to the previous statutes, will be found to greatly facilitate the investigation of the history of the legislation on any particular question.

At the end of the work will be found a comprehensive index to the text, including Code, subsequent acts, and State Constitution, in which are also given full references to points stated in the notes, so far as they are not covered by the references to the sections under which they are placed. This index has been prepared with great care, in view of the well known importance of such a feature in a work of this kind, and upon a different plan from that adopted in the state edition; and it is hoped that by greatly increasing the number of cross-references, and by combining in one index the references to statutes and notes, all parts of the work have been rendered readily accessible.

In the preparation of this edition and revision, involving the incorporation of a far larger body of new matter than was necessary in preparing the first edition from the Code, the author has labored earnestly and carefully to make the work accurate and complete. If it meets with as cordial recognition as has been accorded to the first edition, and proves in some respects an improvement over that, he will feel that he is amply rewarded.

STATUTES AND RULES

REGULATING THE

PRACTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT

OF THE

STATE OF IOWA.

REVISED AND ADOPTED AT THE JUNE TERM, 1886, WITH AN ADDITIONAL RULE ADOPTED DECEMBER 16, 1886; BEING THE RULES IN FORCE AT THE OCTOBER TERM, 1888.

I.—OF THE ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT.

Section 1. Judges of supreme court. The supreme court consists of five judges elected in the manner prescribed by law, the senior judge being chief justice.

Sec. 2. Quorum. The presence of three judges is necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but one alone may adjourn from day to day, or to any particular day, or until the next term. [Code, § 139.]

Sec. 3. Officers of court. The officers of the court are the attorney-general,¹ the clerk² and the reporter,³ who are elected in the manner prescribed by law; the bailiffs⁴ appointed by the court, and the attorneys and counselors-at-law admitted to practice therein.⁵

II.—OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Sec. 4. Jurisdiction. The supreme court has an appellate jurisdiction over all judgments and decisions of the superior, the circuit and district courts from which appeals are allowed by law, as well in cases of civil actions, properly so called, as in proceedings of a special or independent character and in criminal cases. [Code, §§ 3163, 4520; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 17; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 7.]

⁵ Sections 103-112 hereof.

Sec. 5. What orders reviewable. The supreme court may also review the following orders made by the circuit or district court, or the superior court of a city:

1. An order made affecting a substantial right in an action, when such order, in effect, determines the action and prevents a judgment from which an appeal might be taken.

2. A final order made in special proceedings affecting a substantial right therein, or made on a summary application in an action after judgment.

3. When an order grants or refuses, continues or modifies a provisional remedy, or grants, refuses, dissolves, or refuses to dissolve an injunction or attachment, when it grants or refuses a new trial, or when it sustains or overrules a demurrer.

4. An intermediate order involving the merits and materially affecting the final decision.

5. An order or judgment on habeas corpus.

If any of the above orders are made by a judge of the district, circuit or superior court, they are in that case reviewable in the same way as if made by the court. [Code, § 3165; 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 117.]

Sec. 6. Appeals from other orders. The supreme court may also, in its discretion, prescribe rules for allowing appeals on such other intermediate orders or decisions as they may think expedient, and for permitting the same to be taken and tried during the progress of the trial in the court below; but such intermediate appeals must not retard proceedings in the trial in chief in the court below. [Code, § 3166.]

Sec. 7. Supervisory powers. The supreme court has a general supervision over the district, superior and circuit courts, and all other inferior judicial tribunals, to prevent and correct abuses, where no other remedy is provided by law. [Constitution, art. 5, § 4.]

Sec. 8. Mandates. The supreme court shall have power to enforce its mandates upon inferior courts and officers by fine and imprisonment, which imprisonment may be continued until the mandates are obeyed. [Code, § 3200.]

Sec. 9. Writs. The supreme court may issue all writs and processes necessary for the exercise and enforcement of its appellate jurisdiction. [Code, § 3172.]

III.—OF THE TERMS OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Sec. 10. When and where held. The supreme court shall be held at the seat of government, and shall convene and hold three terms each year, one of which shall commence on the third Tuesday in January, one on the second Tuesday in May, and one on the first Tuesday in October. Each of said terms of court shall be for the submission and determination of causes, and for the transaction of such other business as shall properly come before the court. All causes on the docket shall be heard at each term unless continued or otherwise disposed of by order of the court. The court shall remain in session, so far as practicable, until it is determined what the opinion of the court shall be in all causes submitted to it, except in causes where a re-argument is ordered. Judgments of affirmance, rulings and orders in causes submitted, and orders authorized by law may be made and entered by the court at any time regardless of the terms of court. [21 G. A., ch. 59, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 34.]

[The foregoing rule is changed in accordance with 23 G. A., ch. 34, passed since these rules were adopted. See § 173, page 37.]

IV.—OF APPEALS TO THE SUPREME COURT.

1. In Civil Cases.

Sec. 11. Time for appeal. No appeal to the supreme court shall be taken except within six months from the rendition of the judgment or order appealed from. Unless the case involves an interest in real estate, no appeal, where the amount in controversy, as shown by the pleadings, does not exceed one hundred dollars, will be considered, except to dismiss the same, unless the trial judge certifies the question of law upon which the decision of this court is desired. And no other question, except the one so certified, shall be considered. [Code, § 3173.]

Sec. 12. Appeals; when perfected. An appeal shall not be perfected until the notice thereof has been served upon both the party and the clerk, and the clerk paid or secured his fees for a transcript; whereupon the clerk, at the written request of either party, shall prepare a transcript of the record in the case, or as much thereof as the appellant in writing has directed, to which shall be appended copies of the notices of appeal and of the supersedeas bond, if any, and shall before the day the cause is set for hearing, transmit the same by mail or express to the clerk of the supreme court. But causes shall be submitted upon the abstracts of the parties, except where a controversy arises as to the record. In such case the controversy shall be determined by reference to the transcript; but the appellant shall have a reasonable time after the necessity for a transcript appears to file a transcript, where one has not already been filed.

Sec. 13. How taken; notice. An appeal is taken by the service of a notice in writing on the adverse party, his agent, or any attorney who appeared for him in the case in the court below, and also upon the clerk of the court wherein the proceedings were had, stating the appeal from the same, or from the specific part thereof, defining such part. [Code, § 3178.]

Sec. 14. From part of an order. An appeal from part of an order, or from one of the judgments of a final adjudication, or from part of a judgment, shall not disturb or delay the rights of any party to any judgment or part of a judgment, or order, not appealed from, but the same shall proceed as if no such appeal had been taken. [Code, § 3177.]

Sec. 15. Time of service. The notices of appeal must be served thirty days, and the cause filed and docketed at least fifteen days, before the first day of the next term of the supreme court, or the same shall not then be tried, unless by consent of parties. If the appeal is taken less than thirty days before the term, it must be so filed and docketed before the next succeeding term. [Code, § 3180.]

Sec. 16. Party in default; non-resident. In cases in which there was a default in the court below, and no personal service on defendant, and no appearance by him, the plaintiff may appeal, and make service of the notice of appeal in the same manner that service of original notice is made on non-resident defendants. If the appellee is a non-resident, but has an agent residing in the state, the notice may be served upon such agent, and such service shall take the place of publication in a newspaper. The proof of such service shall be made in the manner prescribed for proof of service of original notice on non-resident defendants. [McClellan v. McClellan, 2 Iowa, 312.]

Sec. 17. Docket. The cause shall be docketed as it was in the court below, and the party taking the appeal shall be called appellant, and the other party the appellee. [Code, § 3171.]

Sec. 18. Abstract; service and filing of. At least thirty days before the day assigned for the hearing of a cause, the appellant shall serve upon the attorney for each appellee a printed copy of so much of the abstract of record as may be necessary to a full understanding of the questions presented for decision (said abstract to be prepared as required by sections 97, 98 and 99). He shall also, fifteen days before the first day of the term for which the cause is to be docketed for trial, file with the clerk ten copies of said abstract, and no cause will be heard until thirty days after such service and fifteen days after such filing with the clerk, nor shall it be docketed unless this and other rules shall be complied with. In case of cross-appeals the party first giving notice of appeal shall, under this rule, be considered the appellant.

Sec. 19. Appellee's abstract. If the appellee's counsel shall deem the appellant's abstract imperfect or unfair, he may, within ten days after receiving the same, deliver to the appellant's counsel one printed copy, and to the clerk of the court ten printed copies, of such further or additional abstract as he shall deem necessary to a full understanding of the questions presented to this court for decision.

Sec. 20. Records certified. In an action by ordinary proceedings, and in an action by equitable proceedings tried upon oral evidence, all proper entries made by the clerk, and all papers pertaining to the cause and filed therein (except subpoenas, depositions and other papers which are used as mere evidence) are to be deemed part of the record. But in an action by equitable proceedings tried upon written evidence, the depositions, and all papers which were used as evidence, are to be certified up to the supreme court, and shall be so certified, not by transcript, but in their original form. But a transcript of a motion, affidavit, or other paper, when it relates to a collateral matter, shall not be certified, unless by direction of the appellant. If so certified, when not material to the determination of the appeal, the court may direct the person blamable therefor to pay the costs thereof. [Code, § 3184.]

Sec. 21. Failure to file transcript and abstract. If the transcript has not been sent up, or the appellant does not file the same, or does not file an abstract when the same should be filed as herein provided, the appellee may file the transcript, and may on motion have the appeal dismissed or the judgment affirmed, as the court from the circumstances of the case shall determine; but no appeal shall be dismissed or judgment of the court below affirmed because the cause was not docketed, or transcript or abstract filed, if it be made to appear that the appeal was taken in good faith and not for delay, or if, from the conduct of the appellee or his counsel, appellant was induced to believe that no motion to dismiss or affirm would be made. [Code, §§ 3181, 3182; 15 G. A., ch. 56.]

Sec. 22. Co-parties. A part of several co-parties may appeal, but in such case they must serve notice of the appeal upon all the other co-parties, and file the proof thereof with the clerk of the supreme court. [Code, § 3174.]

Sec. 23. Refusal to join. If the other co-parties refuse to join, they cannot, nor can any of them, take an appeal afterward; nor shall they derive any benefit from the appeal, unless from the necessity of the case. [Code, § 3175.]

Sec. 24. Presumed to have joined. Unless they appear and decline to join, they shall be deemed to have joined, and shall be liable for their due proportion of costs. [Code, § 3176.]

Sec. 25. Death of parties. The death of one or all of the parties shall not cause the proceedings to abate, but the names of the proper persons shall be substituted, as is provided in such cases in the district court, and the cause may proceed. The court may also, in such case, grant a continuance, when such a course will be calculated to promote the ends of justice. [Code, § 3211.]

Sec. 26. Dismissal. Where appellant has no right, or no further right to prosecute the appeal, the appellee may move to dismiss the appeal, and if the grounds of the motion do not appear in the record, or by a writing purporting to have been signed by the appellant, and filed, they must be verified by affidavit. [Code, § 3212.]

Sec. 27. Appeal improperly taken. The appellee may, by answer filed and verified by himself, agent or attorney, plead any facts which render the taking of the appeal improper, or destroy the appellant's right of further prosecuting the same, to which answer the appellant may file a reply, likewise verified by himself, his agent or attorney, and the question of law or fact therein shall be determined by the court. [Code, § 3213.]

Sec. 28. Service of notice. The service of all notices of appeal, or in any way growing out of such right, or connected therewith, and all notices in the supreme court, shall be served in the way provided for the service of like notices in the district court, and they may be served by the same person and returned in the same manner, and the original notice of appeal must be returned, immediately after service, to the office of the clerk of the court where the suit is pending. [Code, § 3214.]

Sec. 29. Perfect transcript. It shall be the duty of the appellant to file a perfect transcript, and to that end the clerk of the court below must at any time, on his suggestion of the diminution of the record and on payment of fees, certify up any omitted part of the record, according to the truth, as the same appears in his office of record; and such applicant shall not be entitled to any continuance, in order to correct the record, unless it shall clearly appear to the court that he is not in fault, subject to which requirement either party may, on motion before trial day, obtain an order on the clerk of the court below, commanding him to transmit at once to the supreme court a true copy of such imperfect or omitted part of the records as shall be in general terms described in the affidavit or order. Such motion must be supported by affidavit, unless the diminution be apparent, or admitted by the adverse party, and must not be granted unless the court be satisfied that it is not made for delay. [Code, § 3185.]

Sec. 30. Original document. Where a view of an original paper in the action may be important to a correct decision of the appeal, the court may order the clerk of the court below to transmit the same, which he shall do in some safe mode, to the clerk of the supreme court, who shall hold the same subject to the control of the court. [Code, § 3209.]

Sec. 31. Supersedeas. An appeal shall not stay proceedings on the judgment or order, or any part thereof, unless a supersedeas is issued, and no appeal or supersedeas shall vacate or affect the lien of the judgment appealed from. [Code, § 3186.]

Sec. 32. Supersedeas bond. A supersedeas shall not be issued until the appellant shall cause to be executed before the clerk of the court which rendered the judgment or order, by one or more sufficient sureties, to be approved by such clerk, a bond to the effect that the appellant shall pay to the appellee all costs and damages that shall be adjudged against the appellant on the appeal; also, that he will satisfy and perform the judgment or order appealed from, in case it shall be affirmed, and any judgment or order which the supreme court may render, or order to be rendered by the inferior court, not exceeding in amount or value the original judgment or order, and all rents, or hire, or damages to property during the pendency of the appeal, out of the possession of which the appellee is kept by reason of the appeal. If the bond is intended to stay proceedings on only a part of the judgment or order, it shall be varied so as to secure the part superseded alone. When such bond has been approved by the clerk and filed, he shall issue a written order commanding the appellee and all others to stay proceedings in such judgment or order, or on such part as is superseded, as the case may be. [Code, § 3186.]

Sec. 33. Discharge of supersedeas. If the appellee believe the supersedeas bond defective, or the sureties insufficient, he may move the supreme court, if in session, or in its vacation, on ten days' written notice to the appellant, may move any judge of said court, or the judge of the court where the appeal was taken, to discharge the supersedeas; and if the court, or such judge, shall consider the sureties insufficient, or the bond substantially defective in securing the rights of the appellee, the court or such judge shall issue an order discharging the supersedeas, unless a good bond with sufficient sureties be executed by a day by him fixed. The order, if made by a judge, shall be in writing, and be signed by him, and upon its filing, or the filing of a certified copy of the order when made in court, in the office of the clerk of the court from which the appeal was taken, execution and other proceedings for enforcing the judgment or order may be taken, if a new and good bond is not filed and approved by the day fixed as aforesaid. [Code, § 3188.]

Sec. 34. New supersedeas. But another supersedeas may be issued by the clerk upon the execution before him of a new and lawful bond, with sufficient sureties, as hereinbefore provided. [Code, § 3189.]

Sec. 35. Amount of penalty. If the judgment or order is for the payment of money, the penalty shall be in at least twice the amount of the judgment and costs; if not for the payment of money, the penalty shall be sufficient to save the appellee harmless from the consequences of taking the appeal. But it shall in no case be less than one hundred dollars. [Code, § 3190.]

Sec. 36. Extent of supersedeas. The taking of the appeal from a part of a judgment or order, and the filing of a bond as above directed, does not cause a stay of execution as to any part of the judgment or order not appealed from. [Code, § 3191.]

Sec. 37. Countermanding execution. If execution has issued prior to the giving of the bond above contemplated, the clerk shall countermand the same. [Code, § 3192.]

Sec. 38. Property delivered. Property levied upon and not sold at the time such countermand is received by the sheriff shall forthwith be delivered up to the judgment debtor. [Code, § 3193.]

2. In Criminal Actions.

Sec. 39. What may be appealed. The mode of reviewing in the supreme court any judgment, action or decision of the district court in a criminal cause is by appeal. [Code, § 4520.]

Sec. 40. Who may appeal. Either the defendant or the state may take an appeal. [Code, § 4521.]

Sec. 41. When appeal may be taken. No appeal can be taken until after judgment, and then only within one year thereafter. [Code, § 4522.]

Sec. 42. How taken; notice. An appeal is taken, by the party taking it, or the attorney of such party, serving on the adverse party, or on the attorney of the adverse party who acted as attorney of record in the district court at the time of the rendition of the judgment, and also on the clerk of the district court by which the judgment was rendered, a notice in writing of the taking of the appeal from the judgment. [Code, § 4523.]

Sec. 43. When perfected. The appeal is deemed to be taken when the notices thereof, required by the last section, are filed in the office of the clerk of the court in which the judgment was rendered, with evidence of the service thereof indorsed thereon, or annexed thereto. [Code, § 4524.]

Sec. 44. Transcript. When an appeal is taken, it is the duty of the clerk of the court in which the judgment was rendered, without unnecessary delay, to make out a full and perfect transcript of all papers in the case on file in his office (except the papers returned by the examining magistrate on the preliminary examination, where there has been one, and the minutes of the evidence of the witnesses examined before the grand jury), and of all records made in the record book, and certify the same under his hand and the seal of the court, and transmit the same to the clerk of the supreme court. [Code, § 4525.]

Sec. 45. Appeal by state not superseded. An appeal taken by the state in no case stays the operation of the judgment in favor of the defendant. [Code, § 4527.]

Sec. 46. Supersedeas in bailable cases. An appeal taken by the defendant does not stay the execution of the judgment unless bail be put in, except as provided in the next section. [Code, § 4528.]

Sec. 47. Imprisonment in penitentiary. Where the judgment is imprisonment in the penitentiary and an appeal is taken during the term at which the judgment is rendered, and the defendant is unable to give bail, and the fact is satisfactorily shown to the court, it may, in its discretion, order the sheriff or officer having the defendant in custody to detain him in custody, without taking him to the penitentiary, to abide the judgment on the appeal, if the defendant desire it. [Code, § 4529.]

Sec. 48. Discharge on bail. When an appeal is taken by the defendant, in a bailable case, and bail is put in, it is the duty of the clerk to give forthwith to the defendant, his agent or attorney, a certificate under his hand and the seal of the court, stating that an appeal had been taken and bail put in, and the sheriff or other officer having the defendant in custody must, upon the delivery of such certificate to him, discharge the defendant from custody, where imprisonment forms any part of the judgment, and cease all further proceedings in execution of the judgment, and return forthwith to the clerk of the court, who issued it, the execution or certified copy of the entry of judgment, under which he acted, with his return thereto, if such execution or certified copy has been issued, and if such execution or certified copy has not been issued, it shall not be issued, but shall abide the judgment on the appeal. [Code, § 4530.]

Sec. 49. Joint defendants; appeal. When several defendants are indicted and tried jointly, any one or more of them may join in taking the appeal, but those of their co-defendants who do not join shall take no benefit therefrom, yet they may appeal afterward. [Code, § 4526.]

Sec. 50. Title of action. The party taking the appeal is known as the appellant, the adverse party as the appellee, but the title of the action is not changed in consequence of the appeal; it shall be docketed in the supreme court as it was in the district court. [Code, § 4531.]

V.—OF THE TRIAL, DECISION AND EXECUTION.

I. In Civil Cases.

Sec. 51. Assignment of errors. In cases where an assignment of errors is necessary, the same should be served upon the opposite party or counsel at the time the abstract is served, and should be filed with the clerk of the court at the time the abstract is filed. If served or filed later than herein provided, the assignment may, on motion, be stricken from the files, but the court in its discretion may waive the failure, but not without the imposition of terms if it appears that the appellee has been subjected to any inconvenience by the failure. An assignment of error need follow no stated form, but must, in a way as specific as the case will allow, point out the very error objected to. Among several points in a demurrer or in a motion or instruction or rulings in an exception, it must designate which is relied upon as error; and each must be designated in a distinct assignment; and the court will only regard errors which are assigned with the required exactness; but the court must decide on each error assigned.

Sec. 52. Motion; notice; argument. (1) Motions made in a cause after judgment, or after the time assigned for the hearing of causes from the district from which it was appealed, will be heard only upon proof of service of reasonable notice of such motion upon the adverse party.

(2) All motions must be filed with the clerk and served, by copy of the same and of all affidavits or documents upon which they are based, upon the opposite party or counsel, ten days before the morning on which the causes for the district are set for hearing. Such opposite party shall then have five days to file papers in resistance to the same, copies of which must be served upon the other party or counsel, and no papers will be regarded which do not appear to have been so served. This rule shall not apply to motions the causes whereof arise after the filing of the abstract. But in such cases timely notice of such motions shall be given to the opposite attorneys.

(3) Arguments in support of motions, if any, must be filed in writing before the morning of the day set for hearing of the cause, and served by copy upon the opposite party or counsel when the motion is served, and arguments in resistance, if any, must be filed in writing before the morning of the day set for hearing of the cause, and served by copy on the opposite party or counsel when the papers in resistance are served. The above rule shall not apply to motions for continuance, as to time of service.

Sec. 53. Submission upon brief. To entitle an appellant to submit his case either orally or in print, he must serve copies of his brief of points and authorities or arguments on counsel for each of the appellees at least thirty days before the day assigned for the hearing of the case. The appellee shall serve copies of his brief or argument upon counsel for each appellant at least ten days before the hearing; and the reply, if in print, shall be served at least three days before the case is to be finally submitted. Each party shall file with the clerk ten copies of each brief or argument before the case is so submitted. A failure to comply with the above requirements will entitle the party not in default, unless the court shall, for sufficient cause, otherwise order, to a continuance, or to have the case submitted at his option upon the brief and argument on file when the default occurred. All briefs and arguments shall be prepared and printed as required by section 96 hereof.

Sec. 54. Service of briefs. All arguments in addition to oral ones shall be in print; proper evidence of the service upon opposing counsel of printed matter in a cause shall be filed therewith; and the clerk shall note upon the docket the date of each service. All manuscripts and printed arguments shall be filed with the clerk, and he shall not transmit to the judges any papers not served and filed in time under the rules, nor shall any argument or brief be considered which does not go through the hands of the clerk. No cause shall be entered as submitted until the arguments are finally and actually concluded.

Sec. 55. Oral argument; notice for. Written notice of intention to argue a case orally shall be served upon the counsel of the opposite party ten days before the first day of the term, and failure to serve such notice shall deprive the party of the right to argue orally.

Sec. 56. Limitation; number of counsel. Only two counsel will be heard on either side, and no oral argument shall exceed one hour in length, unless an extension of time be granted before the argument is commenced.

Sec. 57. Opening and closing. When the appeal presents to the court only questions of law upon rulings of the court below, the appellant shall open and close the argument, but when the trial in the supreme court is de novo of questions of fact, the party having the burden of proof shall open and close, and, as to printed briefs and arguments, shall observe the rules requiring the filing of such briefs and arguments by appellants.

Sec. 58. Calling causes. At the commencement of each term the causes will be called in their order, but no cause will be tried on the first calling.

Sec. 59. Opinions of the court. The opinions of the court on all questions reviewed on appeal, as well as such motions, collateral questions and points of practice as they may think of sufficient importance, shall be reduced to writing and filed with the clerk of the court.

All dissenting opinions must be written and filed in the same manner.

The records and reports must in all cases show whether a decision was made by a full bench, and whether either, and if so, which, of the judges dissented from the decision. [Code, §§ 143, 144.]

Sec. 60. Opinion when reported. If the decision, in the judgment of the court, is not of sufficient general importance to be published, it shall be so designated, in which case it shall not be reported in the reports, and no case shall be reported except by order of the full bench. [Code, § 145.]

Sec. 61. Judgment. The supreme court may reverse or affirm the judgment or order below, or the part of either appealed from, or may render such judgment or order as the court below or judge should have done, according as it may think proper. [Code, § 3194.]

Sec. 62. Judgment against sureties. The supreme court, where it affirms the judgment, shall, also, if the appellee moves therefor, render judgment against the appellant and his sureties on the bond above mentioned, for the amount of the judgment, damages and costs referred to therein, in case such damages can be accurately known to the court without an issue and trial. [Code, § 3195.]

Sec. 63. Damages on appeal. Upon the affirmance of any judgment, or order for the payment of money, the collection of which, in whole or in part, has been superseded by bond, as above contemplated, the court shall award to the appellee damages upon the amount superseded, and, if satisfied by the record that the appeal was taken for delay only, must award such sum as damages, not exceeding fifteen per cent thereon, as shall effectually tend to prevent the taking of appeals for delay only. [Code, § 3196.]

Sec. 64. To remand cause or issue process. If the supreme court affirm the judgment or order, it may send the cause to the district court to have the same carried into effect, or it may itself issue the necessary process for this purpose, and direct such process to the sheriff of the proper county, according as the party thereto may require. [Code, § 3197.]

Sec. 65. Restoration of money or property. If, by the decision of the supreme court, the appellant becomes entitled to a restoration of any part of the money or property that was taken from him by means of such judgment or order, either the supreme court or court below may direct execution or writ of restitution to issue for the purpose of restoring to such appellant his property, or the value thereof. [Code, § 3198.]

Sec. 66. Execution. Executions issued from the supreme court shall be the same as those from the district court, attended with the same consequences, and shall be returnable in the same time. [Code, § 3215.]

Sec. 67. When may issue; garnishment. In cases in which the judgment below is affirmed in this court, the parties in whose favor the judgment is affirmed may have execution either from this court or the court below. In case of an execution from this court, if the process of garnishment is served upon the execution defendant, either principal or surety, the sheriff, in addition to his return, shall return a copy of the execution and his returns to the district court or circuit court from which the cause was appealed, and all issues of fact which may arise in said garnishment process shall be tried by that court.

Sec. 68. When and how causes heard. The court shall hear all the cases docketed, when not continued by consent, or for cause shown by the party, and the party may be heard orally or otherwise, in his discretion. [Code, § 3204.]

Sec. 69. Opinion. No cause is decided until the opinion in writing is filed with the clerk. [Code, § 3205.]

Sec. 70. Procedendo. No procedendo, except in criminal cases, and in cases where petitions for rehearing have been overruled, shall issue in any case until the expiration of thirty days from the filing of the opinion in the case, except upon an order of one of the justices of the court, upon cause shown.

Sec. 71. Decree. Decrees to be entered in this court shall be prepared by the counsel of the parties in whose favor they are rendered. Copies shall be served on the opposite counsel and filed in the court within twenty days after counsel preparing them shall have received notice of the decision in the cause in which they are entered.

Sec. 72. Optional decree. When, by the decision of this court, a decree is to be entered in this court at the option of either party, such option shall be declared and a decree furnished under the above rule, within twenty days from the date at which counsel required to prepare the decree received notice of the decision.

Sec. 73. Cause remanded. If a cause be remanded to the inferior court to be carried into effect, such decision and the order of court thereon, being certified thereto and entered on the records of the court, shall have the same force and effect as if made and entered during the session of the court in that district. [Code, § 3206.]

2. In Criminal Actions.

Sec. 74. Docketing; precedence. Appeals in criminal cases shall be docketed in the supreme court for trial at the commencement of that portion of the term which has been assigned for trying causes from the judicial district from which the appeal comes, which is twenty days after the date of the certificate of the transcript from the clerk of the district court, and if the appellant does not file his transcript by that time with the clerk of the supreme court, the appellee may file his and have the case docketed. They shall take precedence of all other business, and shall be tried at the term at which the transcript is filed, unless continued for cause, or by consent of the parties, and shall be decided, if practicable, at the same term. [Code, § 4532.]

Sec. 75. Appearance. The personal appearance of the defendant in the supreme court on the trial of an appeal is in no case necessary. [Code, § 4533.]

Sec. 76. Informality. An appeal shall not be dismissed for any informality or defect in taking the appeal, if the same be corrected within a reasonable time, and the supreme court must direct how it shall be corrected. [Code, § 4534.]

Sec. 77. Assignment of errors. No assignment of error, or joinder in error, shall be necessary. [Code, § 4535.]

Sec. 78. Close of argument. The defendant shall be entitled to close the argument. [Code, § 4536.]

Sec. 79. Opinion. The opinion of the supreme court must be in writing, filed with its clerk and recorded. [Code, § 4537.]

Sec. 80. Court must examine record. If the appeal was taken by the defendant from a judgment against him, the supreme court must examine the record and, without regard to technical errors or defects which do not affect the substantial rights of parties, render such judgment on the records as the law demands. It may affirm, reverse, or modify the judgment, and render such judgment as the district court should have rendered, and may, if necessary or proper, order a new trial. It may reduce the punishment, but cannot increase it. [Code, § 4538.]

Sec. 81. Appeals by state. If the appeal was taken by the state, the supreme court cannot reverse the judgment or modify it so as to increase the punishment, but may affirm it, and shall point out any error in the proceedings, or in the measure of punishment, and its decision shall be obligatory on the court below, as the correct exposition of the law. [Code, § 4539.]

Sec. 82. Reversal. If a judgment against the defendant be reversed without ordering a new trial, the supreme court must direct, if the defendant be in custody, that he be discharged, or, if he be admitted to bail, that his bail be exonerated, or, if any money be deposited instead of bail, that it be refunded to him. [Code, § 4540.]

Sec. 83. Affirmance. On a judgment of affirmance against the defendant, the original judgment shall be carried into execution, as the supreme court shall direct, except as hereinafter provided. [Code, § 4541.]

Sec. 84. Judgment and procedendo. When a judgment of the supreme court is rendered it must be recorded, and a certified copy of the judgment must be forthwith remitted to the clerk of the court below in which the judgment appealed from was rendered, with proper instructions, and a copy of the opinion, in such time, and in such manner, as the supreme court may, by rule, prescribe. [Code, § 4542.]

Sec. 85. When jurisdiction ceases. After the certified copy of the entry of the judgment of the supreme court and its instructions have been remitted, as provided in the preceding section, the supreme court has no further jurisdiction of the proceedings therein, and all proceedings which may be necessary to carry the judgment of the supreme court into effect must be had in the court to which it is remitted, or by the clerk thereof, except as provided in the next two sections. [Code, § 4543.]

Sec. 86. Certified judgments. Unless where some proceedings in the court below are directed by the supreme court, a copy of the certified copy of the judgment of the supreme court, with its directions, certified by the clerk of the court below, to whom the same has been transmitted, delivered to the sheriff or other proper officer, shall authorize him to execute the judgment of the supreme court, or take any steps to bring the proceedings to a conclusion, except as provided in the next section. [Code, § 4544.]

Sec. 87. Deduction of imprisonment. If a defendant, who has been imprisoned during the pendency of an appeal, upon a new trial ordered by the supreme court, shall be again convicted, the period of his former imprisonment shall be deducted by the court below from the period of imprisonment to be fixed on the last verdict of conviction. [Code, § 4545.]

VI.—REHEARING.

Sec. 88. Petition. No petition for rehearing shall be filed after sixty days from the filing of the opinion of this court.

Sec. 89. Notice. Written notice of intention to petition for rehearing shall be served on the opposite party and clerk of the supreme court within thirty days after the filing of the opinion, and if no such notice is served, the petition for rehearing shall not be filed after expiration of such thirty days.

Sec. 90. Argument. The petition for rehearing, if there be no oral argument, shall be the argument of the applicant therefor, and if the court think that such argument requires a reply, it shall so indicate to the other party, and he may make reply within such time as said court shall allow. If the petitioner desire to make an oral argument in support of his petition, he shall indorse in writing or print a notice upon his argument or brief, stating that he will ask to be heard orally, which shall be served on the opposite party and deposited with the clerk. The cause shall then be placed upon the docket for the next term, being not less than twenty days after the filing of the petition, and the petitioner shall have the right to be heard orally at the next term, or at any term to which the case may be continued. [19 G. A., ch. 144, amending Code, § 3202.]

Sec. 91. Shall be printed. All petitions for rehearing shall be printed as required by section 96 hereof, and a copy shall be delivered to the attorney of the adverse party, and, if there be more than one, to the attorney of each, and nine copies to the clerk of this court.

Sec. 92. Printing opinion. The opinions announcing the decisions of this court in cases wherein petitions for rehearing are filed, shall be printed by the petitioners, and copies thereof shall accompany the printed copies of the petitions for rehearing filed with the clerk, or served on the opposite party. [Oct. 2, 1879, Ordered, that rule 92 be suspended in its operation in all cases wherein the opinions of the court are published in the Northwestern Reporter, before the petitions for rehearing are filed. Counsel in such cases being required to refer to the number and page of the Reporter, in which the opinions are printed.]

Sec. 93. Suspends decision or procedendo. If a petition for rehearing be filed, the same shall suspend the decision or procedendo, if the court, on its presentation, or one of the judges, if in vacation, shall so order, in either of which cases such decision and procedendo shall be suspended until after final arguments. [19 G. A., ch. 144, amending Code, § 3201.]

VII.—OF COSTS.

Sec. 94. Security for costs. The appellant may be required to give security for costs, under the same circumstances as those in which plaintiffs in civil actions in the court below may be so required. [Code, § 3210.]

Sec. 95. Costs; taxation of. When the parties or their attorneys shall furnish printed abstracts, briefs, arguments and petitions for rehearing, in conformity to the rules of this court, it shall be the duty of the clerk to tax a printer's fee at the rate of one dollar for every five hundred words embraced in a single copy of the same, against the unsuccessful party not furnishing the same, to be collected and paid to the successful party as other costs. When unnecessary costs have been made by either party, the court will, upon application, tax the same to the party making them, without reference to the disposition of the case.

VIII.—OF PREPARING TRANSCRIPTS AND ABSTRACTS, AND PRINTING ABSTRACTS, BRIEFS, ARGUMENTS AND PETITIONS FOR REHEARING.

Sec. 96. Abstracts. All abstracts, briefs, arguments and petitions for rehearing shall be printed upon unruled writing paper, with type commonly known as small pica, leaded lines, the printed page to be four inches wide by seven inches long, with a margin of two inches, but the type in which abstracts are printed may be small pica solid, or brevier with leaded lines.

The first page of the abstract, brief or argument, shall show the title of the cause, designating the appellant and the appellee, the term of the supreme court to which the appeal is brought, the court from which the appeal is taken, and the names of the counsel for both the appellant and appellee.

Sec. 97. Index. The abstract must be accompanied by a complete index of its contents, and must show where the papers and entries therein mentioned may be found in the transcript as well as in the abstract.

Sec. 98. Form. Abstracts of records shall be made substantially in the following form:

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF IOWA.

DECEMBER TERM, 18—.

JOHN DOE, Appellant ,	}	Appellant's Abstract of Record.
vs.
RICHARD ROE, Appellee .	}	("In Equity" or "At Law.")

Appeal from the Judgment of the Van Buren District Court.

J. C. K., for the Appellant.

H. H. S., for the Appellee.

On the — day of —, 18—, the plaintiff filed in the Van Buren district court a stating his cause of action as follows:

[Set out all of petition necessary to an understanding of the questions to be presented to this court, and no more. In setting out exhibits, omit all merely formal irrelevant parts, as, for example, if the exhibit be a deed or mortgage, and no question is raised as to the acknowledgment, omit the acknowledgment.]

When the defendant has appeared it is useless to incumber the record with the original notice, or the return of the officer. Append to the abstract of each paper a reference to the page of the transcript on which it will be found.]

On the — day of —, A. D. 18—, the defendant filed a to said petition, setting up the following grounds:

[State only the grounds of demurrer, omitting the formal parts. If the pleading was a motion, and the ruling thereon is one of the questions to be considered, set it out in the same way, and continue:]

And on the — day of —, 18—, the same was submitted to the court, and the court made the following rulings thereon:

[Here set out the ruling. In every instance let the abstract be made in the chronological order of the events in the case — let each ruling appear in the proper connection. If the defendant pleaded over, and thereby waived his right to appeal from these rulings, no mention of them should be made in the abstract, but it should continue:]

And on the — day of —, 18—, the defendant filed his

to the petition, setting up the following defenses:

[Here set out the defenses, omitting all formal parts. If motions or demurrers were interposed to this pleading, proceed as directed with reference to the petition.]

Frame the record so that it will properly present all questions to be reviewed and raised before issue is joined. When the abstract shows issue joined, proceed.]

On the — day of —, 18—, said cause was tried by a jury [or the court, as the case may be], and on trial the following proceedings were had:

[Set out so much of the bill of exceptions as is necessary to show the ruling of the court to which exceptions were taken during the progress of the trial.]

INSTRUCTIONS.

After the evidence and the arguments of counsel were concluded, the plaintiff [or defendant, as the case may be] asked the court to give each of the following instructions to the jury:

[Set out the instructions referred to, and continue:]

which the court refused as to each instruction; to which said several rulings the plaintiff [or defendant] excepted at the time, and thereupon the court gave the following instructions to the jury:

[Set out the instructions.]

To the giving of those numbered [give the number] and to the giving of each thereof the plaintiff [or defendant] at the time excepted.

VERDICT.

On the — day of —, 18—, the jury returned into court with the following verdict:

[Set out the verdict.]

MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

On the — day of —, 18—, the plaintiff [or defendant] filed a motion praying the court to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial, upon the following grounds:

[Set out the grounds aforesaid for the new trial.]
 On the — day of —, 18—, the court made the following ruling upon said motion:
 [Set out the record of the ruling] to which the plaintiff [or defendant] at the time excepted.

JUDGMENT.

On the — day of —, 18—, the following judgment was entered:
 [Set out the judgment entry appealed from.]

On the — day of —, 18—, the plaintiff perfected an appeal to the supreme court of the state of Iowa, by serving upon the defendant and the clerk of the district court of Van Buren county a notice of appeal.
 [If supersedeas bond was filed, state the fact.]

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS.

And the appellant herein says there is manifest error on the face of the record in this:
 [Set out the errors assigned.]

[To the abstract of each paper and entry append a reference to the page of the transcript on which it will be found. This will not be necessary when the case is submitted on the printed abstract without the transcript.

This outline is presented for the purpose of indicating the character of the abstract contemplated by the rule, which, like all the rules, is to be substantially complied with. Of course no formula could be laid down applicable to all cases. The rule to be observed in abstracting a case is: Preserve everything material to the questions to be decided, and omit everything else.]

Sec. 99. Brief and argument. The printed brief and argument shall state in divisions thereof, properly numbered, the several propositions of law claimed by the party making such brief or argument to be involved in the case before the supreme court, and the authorities relied upon in the support of the same. When an authority cited is an adjudicated case, the brief or argument must show the names of the parties, the volume in which it is reported, and the page or pages containing the matter to which counsel desire to call the attention of the court. When the reference is a text-book, the number or date of the edition must be stated with the number of the volume and page.

Sec. 100. Transcripts. Transcripts of record prepared for the supreme court shall be made substantially in the manner following, viz.:

STATE OF IOWA, }
 County of —, }

Pleas before the district [or circuit] court of Iowa, at a term begun and holden in the county of —, on the — day of —, A. D. 18—, before the Hon. J. H. G., judge of the — judicial district [or judge of the — circuit, in the — judicial district] of the state of Iowa.

N. P. } vs. }
 C. D. }

Be it remembered that heretofore, to wit, on the — day of —, A. D. 18—, a petition was filed in the office of the clerk of the district [or circuit] court, in and for the county of —, in the words and figures following, to wit:

[Proceed in the same manner in relation to whatever paper is filed, such as the original notice, or a petition for attachment, etc.

If the cause has come from another county by a change of venue begin as above, "Be it remembered," and state in like manner all that was done in the county from which the venue was changed.]

And afterwards there was filed in the office of the said clerk a notice in the words and figures following, to wit:

[Here insert the notice in full.]

[Copy all indorsements on the face of the transcript, or copy of record, and not upon the back of the leaf.]

Upon which [or attached to which] was a return as follows:

[Copy the officer's return, with all indorsements in full; if the suit be by attachment, copy the petition or affidavit, writ or attachment, bond, notice, return, etc.

And afterward, to wit, on the — day of —, A. D. 18—, there was filed in the office of the said clerk an answer in words and figures following, to wit:

[Should the clerk doubt what the paper is, let him call it a "paper in the words and figures following," etc.

Where a paper is filed in term time add the day of the term to the day of the month, as in the next form.

Sec. 101. Waiver or modifications of rules. When, by reason of peculiar circumstances, the foregoing rules relating to the abstract, preparation and argument of causes, ought to be waived or modified in any case, the party desiring such waiver or modification may, upon reasonable notice to the adverse party, apply to any judge of this court in vacation, or to the court in term time, for an order directing the waiver or modification desired. The application shall be in writing, shall set out the peculiar facts relied upon by the applicant, and shall be verified by the party, or a person having knowledge of the facts, and certified by counsel as being true and made in good faith. The order upon such application shall be in writing, and shall be filed with the clerk of this court. In no case will these rules be waived or modified upon agreement of counsel alone.

Sec. 102. Distribution of abstracts, briefs and arguments. The clerk shall make the following distribution of all printed abstracts, briefs and arguments received under the foregoing rules: One copy to each judge of the court, one copy to the state library, two copies to the law department of the state university, and one shall be filed in his office.

IX.—OF THE ADMISSION OF ATTORNEYS.

Sec. 103. Examination. Examinations of applicants for admission to the bar shall be had at each term of the court.

Sec. 104. Application. Each applicant for admission shall, before the first day of the term of court at which he asks to be examined, file with the clerk of this court a written request for examination in his own handwriting and signed by himself, together with the proofs of his qualifications as to age, residence, character and time and place of study, required by section 2 of chapter 168 of the Acts of the Twentieth General Assembly, all prepared and presented in the form prescribed by these rules.

Sec. 105. Committee. The court will appoint, on the morning of the day of the examination, a committee of not less than three members of the bar, who shall assist in the examination of applicants for admission.

Sec. 106. Questions. The justices of this court will prepare not less than thirty questions to be submitted to each applicant in writing or print, which he shall answer in writing. A proper and convenient room shall be provided for the use of the applicants, wherein they may prepare their answers without interruption. While so engaged they shall have access to no books and have no communication with any one. The written or printed questions shall be varied at each term.

Sec. 107. Admission. Upon consideration of the oral and written examinations and the proofs of qualifications, the court will admit or reject the applicant.

Sec. 108. Proof of qualifications and study. The proofs of the qualifications of the applicant as to age, character, place of residence and time and place of study, shall be by affidavit made before some officer authorized to administer oaths. When made before an officer not having a seal, other than a judge of the supreme court, district or circuit courts of this state, his official character and signature shall be authenticated by a proper certificate, attested by the seal of the clerk of a court of record.

The proof of the applicant's good moral character, residence in the state and age, shall be by affidavits of at least two witnesses, and the applicant shall also make affidavit of his age and place of residence.

The proof of his term of study shall be by the affidavit of the member of the bar with whom he pursued his studies, and when he has studied at a law school, such fact and his term of study there shall be shown by the affidavit of one or more of the professors or instructors of such school. Such affidavit shall show that the applicant has actually, and in good faith, pursued the study of the law for the time prescribed by the statute, and the fact that the affiant is a practicing lawyer, or is a professor or instructor in the law school at which the applicant studied.

Sec. 109. Admission in another state. An attorney admitted to practice in another state, before admission here, shall furnish proofs of good moral character, that he is twenty-one years of age, is a resident of this state, and has practiced law regularly for not less than one year in the state wherein he was admitted, by like affidavits provided for in the preceding rule.

When such affidavits are made before an officer not having a seal, the official character of the officer and his authority to administer oaths, as well as the genuineness of his signature, shall be shown by the certificate of the clerk of a court of record under the seal thereof.

Such attorney admitted in another state shall also file with the other proof required a copy of the record of the court showing his admission to the bar, which shall be duly proved as required by law for the authentication of the records of the courts of sister states when offered in evidence in the courts of this state.

Sec. 110. Graduates of law department. The graduates of the law department of the state university may be orally examined at Iowa City by a committee of not less than three members of the bar, appointed by the court. They shall also answer written or printed questions prepared by the justices of this court as prescribed by rule number 106, under the same restrictions and conditions as to being kept from communication with others and consultation of books. Upon the report of the committee as prescribed by the statute, and upon a certificate signed by the members thereof to the effect that the examination was fairly conducted, and the answers to the written or printed questions were prepared by the applicant without opportunity for consultation with persons or books, and upon presentation of the diploma of the applicant, together with his answers to the written or printed questions, this court shall determine upon the question of his admission to the bar, and if admitted the court may direct that the oath prescribed by the statute may be administered at Iowa City, and when done the fact shall be reported by the person administering the oath to the clerk of this court, who shall make proper record thereof.

Sec. 111. Proofs by students of law department. The proofs of qualifications as to age, good moral character, residence in the state and time and place of study, being required by the statute in cases of students of the law department of the university, must, in all instances, be presented by them upon application for admission.

Sec. 112. School year. In estimating the time of study, a school year of thirty-six weeks spent in a reputable law school in the United States shall be equivalent to a full year spent in an office, and a fraction of a school year spent in a reputable law school in this state, shall be considered equivalent to the same fraction of full year spent in an office.

X.—OF MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

Sec. 113. Withdrawing papers. When the original papers in a cause in which final judgment is not rendered in this court are brought into this court upon an appeal or writ of error, either party desiring to withdraw the same can have leave to do so on filing a receipt for them with the clerk, and causing a copy to be made of those papers which constitute the record under section 20 hereof, and paying the clerk's fees therefor, which costs shall be taxed to the party failing in this court, and such copy shall be filed by the clerk and kept as a record in the cause. In cases where the costs of such withdrawal have not been charged in the first bill of costs, the clerk is authorized to charge them as costs of increase, and to issue execution therefor.

Sec. 114. Docket. The clerk shall docket the causes as the same are filed in his office, and shall arrange and set a proper number for trial for each day of the term, placing together those from the same judicial district, and shall cause notice of the manner he has set such causes to be published and distributed in such manner as the court may direct. No cause shall be docketed unless the abstract required by the rules of the court is filed fifteen days before the first day of the term at which the cause is set down for trial.

Sec. 115. Printing docket. The clerk, immediately after the time expires during which causes may be docketed for trial at a term of court, shall make and cause to be printed, without delay, the docket for the term, which shall give all causes, whether continuances or appearances, for trial at such term, which shall designate the number, the party appealing, the court and county from which the appeal is brought, the counsel of the parties, the day each cause is assigned for trial, and such other matter for information of the court and attorneys as may be conveniently given. He shall forward to each justice of the court, to each attorney having causes at the term, and to the clerk of the district and circuit courts of each county, a copy of said docket.

Sec. 116. Distribution of abstracts and arguments. The clerk shall, with as little delay as possible, send to each justice of the court a copy of the abstracts, briefs and arguments, and other printed matter filed in each case docketed or set down for trial upon the docket of the term.

Sec. 117. Abstract to show name of judge. In all appeals taken in causes tried after the first day of January, 1887, the abstract therein shall be so prepared as to show the name of the judge who presided at the trial.

RULES OF PRACTICE

ADOPTED BY THE

CONVENTION OF THE DISTRICT JUDGES

OF THE

STATE OF IOWA.

BE IT REMEMBERED, that pursuant to chapter 134, Laws of the Twenty-first General Assembly of the state of Iowa, the district judges in and for the state of Iowa, in convention assembled in supreme court room in Des Moines, Iowa, on Wednesday, January 5, A. D. 1887, by a majority vote of all the district judges of the state, the following rules of practice, and the time when they should go into effect, were agreed to and adopted:

RULES OF PRACTICE.

Rule 1. Copies. Every party at the time of filing any petition, answer, reply, demurrer or motion, except a motion for continuance or change of venue, shall file with the same one plain copy thereof for the use of the adverse party, and on failure to do so the cause may be continued at the option of the adverse party, or the paper so filed stricken from the files. A fee of ten cents per hundred words shall be allowed for all copies and taxed with the costs. The original files shall be taken from the clerk's office only on order of the judge by leaving with the clerk a receipt for the same.

Rule 2. Trial notice. In any case once continued, where an answer is on file, either party desiring to bring such cause on for trial at any term shall, at least ten days before such term, file with the clerk a notice of trial, and no such cause shall stand for trial unless a trial notice be so filed, except by consent of parties: Provided, that after the commencement of the term, the court may, in its discretion, by order entered of record, permit notices of trial to be entered in the same manner, ten days prior to such date as the court may name in such order. Such order may be general, and not entered of record in each particular case. And the clerk in preparing the court calendars shall note thereon, opposite the title of each cause noticed for trial, the words "For trial," which words shall also appear on the printed calendar. This rule shall not apply to appearance or criminal cases, nor to proceedings in probate.

Rule 3. Assignments. On the first day of the term, or as soon thereafter as practicable, the court may make an assignment of the trial causes, which assignment shall fix the day of the term on which each cause will be tried, and parties will be required to conform to this order of trial. Further assignments may be made by the court as often as the progress of the business of the term shall render the same necessary. The court may also designate particular times for the hearing of motions and demurrers.

Rule 4. Appeals. In appeals from justices' courts or other inferior tribunals in civil causes, the appellant shall cause the case to be docketed by noon of the second day of the term to which the same is returnable, and in case of his failure so to do the appellee may procure the case to be docketed, and will thereupon be entitled to have the judgment below affirmed, or to have the case set down for trial on its merits, as he may elect. But the judgment, if affirmed, may be opened at any time prior to noon of the following day of the term, by appellant's making a satisfactory showing of merits, and excuse for his default, and paying to the clerk the amount of the filing fee. If the judgment shall be opened the appellee may have the cause continued at the cost of the appellant.

Rule 5. Abstracts in equity causes. In equitable causes where the evidence is taken in the form of depositions there shall be submitted with the arguments an abstract of the pleadings and evidence substantially as required by the rules of the supreme court for abstracts in appeals in equitable causes, except that the same need not be printed.

RULES IN PROBATE.

I. Calendar. The clerk shall enter upon the court calendar and bar docket only such cases in probate as require the action of the court.

II. Reports due and not filed. On the first day of each term, the clerk shall report to the presiding judge all estates wherein an inventory or report is due under the statute or order of court, and which has not been filed.

III. Reports. Each report of an administrator, executor, guardian or trustee shall be self-explanatory, so that the clerk or court, from a perusal thereof, will fully understand the matter in hand, without verbal or other explanations, or without being compelled to examine or refer to other papers in the case. All accountings must state the debit and credit, and show the balances. Guardians' and trustees' accounts must show the amount of interest earned since appointment or last report, and how and upon what security the trust fund is invested. All reports and accounts must be verified.

IV. Reports of sale of real estate. Reports of the sale of real estate must be sworn to, and must state the term at which the order for the sale was obtained, whether the property was appraised, and if so, state the appraised value, whether sold at public or private sale, and the terms of sale, whether the additional bond required has been given and approved, and the party or parties making said report shall state their opinion as to whether the sale is an advantageous one and should be approved, or otherwise.

V. Application in writing. All applications for orders in probate must be made in writing, verified, and self-explanatory, so that the clerk or court from a perusal thereof will fully understand the relief sought without verbal or other explanations.

VI. Allowance to widows. Applications for an allowance for the widow under section 2375 of the code shall state under oath the number of children under fifteen years of age, the amount of property already set apart to the widow, the value of her deceased husband's estate, the amount of the estate's indebtedness, the value of all property owned by the widow, and what allowance, if any, has heretofore been made to the widow.

VII. Notice of final report. Unless notice be waived in writing, no administrator, executor, guardian or trustee will be discharged from further duty or responsibility, nor upon final settlement until notice of the application shall have been given to all persons interested, as required in case of an original notice for the commencement of a civil action, unless a different notice be prescribed by the court.

Time rules go into effect. The foregoing rules adopted by this convention shall take effect July 4, 1887.

BLANK LETTERS.

The following resolution was also adopted:

Resolved, That this convention recommend that the clerks of the several courts of this state procure blank letters of administration, and in guardianship, with the rules in probate printed on the back thereof, for the information of administrators, executors and guardians.

Certified as correct and signed as required by law, this January 8, A. D. 1887.

GEO. W. RUDDICK,

President of the Convention of District Judges of Iowa.

Countersigned by

J. H. HENDERSON,

Secretary of the Convention of District Judges of Iowa.

PART FIRST.

PUBLIC LAW.

TITLE I.

OF THE SOVEREIGNTY AND JURISDICTION OF THE STATE; THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, AND THE STATUTES.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE SOVEREIGNTY AND JURISDICTION OF THE STATE.

1. Boundaries. 1. The boundaries of the state of Iowa are defined in the preamble of the constitution. [R., § 1; C., '51, § 1.]

2. Sovereignty. 2. The state possesses sovereignty co-extensive with the boundaries referred to in the preceding section, subject to such rights as may at any time exist in the United States in relation to the public lands, or to any military or naval establishment. [R., § 2; C., '51, § 2.]

3. Concurrent jurisdiction. 3. The state has concurrent jurisdiction on the waters of any river or lake which forms a common boundary between this and any other state. [R., § 3; C., '51, § 3.]

This concurrent jurisdiction does not extend to the abatement of a nuisance existing in the Mississippi river on the Illinois side of the channel (Gilbert v. Moline, etc., Co., 19-319); but the courts of this state have jurisdiction to abate a nuisance and punish a crime committed upon a boat in said river, even though resting upon the shore of an island beyond the middle of the stream: State v. Mullen, 35-199.

4. Lands of United States — Taxation — Process. 4. Exclusive jurisdiction over all lands situate in the state now or hereafter purchased by the United States on which buildings for public uses are, or shall be erected, is hereby ceded to the United States, and the same shall be exempt from taxation so long as the same are owned by the United States. Nothing in this section shall be so construed as to prevent on such lands the service of any judicial process issued from or returnable to any court of this state or judge thereof, or to prevent such courts from exercising jurisdiction of crimes committed thereon. [R., §§ 2197, 2198.]

OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

[See Const., art. 3.]

5. Sessions. 5. The sessions of the general assembly shall be held at the seat of government, unless the governor shall convene them at some other place in times of pestilence or public danger. [R., § 13; C., '51, § 4.]

6. Temporary organization. 6. At two o'clock in the afternoon of the day on which the general assembly shall convene, and at the time of convening of the houses respectively, the president of the senate, or in his absence, some person claiming to be a member, shall call the senate to order, and, if necessary, a temporary president shall be chosen from their own number by the persons claiming to be elected senators. And some person claiming to be elected a member of the house of representatives shall call the house to order, and the persons present claiming to be elected to the senate shall choose a secretary, and those of the house of representatives a clerk for the time being. [R., § 14; C., '51, § 5.]

7. Certificates of election. 7. Such secretary and clerk shall receive and file the certificates of election presented, each for his own house, and make a list therefrom of the persons who appear to have been elected members of the respective houses. [R., § 15; C., '51, § 6.]

8. Temporary officers. 8. The persons so appearing to be members shall proceed to elect such other officers for the time being as may be requisite; and when so temporarily organized, shall choose a committee of five, who shall examine and report upon the credentials of the persons claiming to be members. [R., § 4; C., '51, § 7.]

9. Permanent organization. 9. The members reported by the committee as holding certificates of election from the proper authority, shall proceed to the permanent organization of their respective houses by the election of officers. [R., § 5; C., '51, § 8.]

10. Oath. 10. Any member may administer oaths necessary in the course of business of the house of which he is a member, and while acting on a committee upon the business of such committee. [R., § 7; C., '51, § 10.]

11. Freedom of speech. 11. No member shall be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in either house. [R., § 6; C., '51, § 9.]

12. Compensation. 12; 18 G. A., ch. 38, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 52, § 2. The compensation of the members, officers, and employees of the general assembly shall be: To every member for each regular session, five hundred and fifty dollars, and for each extra session the same compensation per day while in session, to be ascertained by the rate per day of the compensation of the members of the general assembly at the preceding regular session; and for every mile by the nearest traveled route in going to and returning from the place where the general assembly is held, five cents per mile; but in no case shall the compensation for any extra session exceed six dollars per day, exclusive of mileage. To the secretary of the senate and chief clerk of the house, seven dollars per day each; to the assistant secretaries of the senate and clerks of the house, six dollars per day each; to the enrolling and engrossing clerks, five dollars per day each; to the sergeant-at-arms, door-keepers, janitors and postmasters, four dollars per day each, and mail-carrier five dollars per diem; to clerks of committees, three dollars per day each, and the necessary stationery for each of the clerks, secretaries, and their assistants aforesaid; to the paper-folders, two dollars and fifty cents per day each; to the messengers two dollars per day each. And no other or greater compensation shall be allowed such officers and employees, nor shall there be any allowance of or for stationery except as above provided, postage, newspapers or other perquisites in any form or manner or under any name or designation. And this act shall apply to the officers and employees so named of the nineteenth general assembly for their full term of office. [R., § 18; C., '51, § 11; 12 G. A., ch. 155; 14 G. A., ch. 118.]

13. Payment. 15 G. A., ch. 3, § 1. Within thirty days after the convening of the general assembly, the presiding officers of the two houses shall jointly certify to the auditor of state, the names of the members, officers, and employees of their respective houses, and the amount of mileage due each member respectively, who shall thereupon draw a warrant upon the state treasurer for the amount due each member for mileage as above certified. He shall also issue to each member of the general assembly, at the end of the said thirty days, a warrant for one-half the salary due each member for the session, and the remaining one-half at the close of the session, and at the close of any extra or adjourned session the compensation of the members shall be paid upon certificate of the presiding officers of each house, showing the number of days of allowance and the compensation as provided by law.

14. Warrants. 15 G. A., ch. 3, § 2. He shall also issue to each officer and employee of the general assembly, upon the certificate of the presiding officer of the house to which such officer or employee belongs, a warrant, from time to time, for the amount due said officer or employee for services rendered.

15. Same. 15 G. A., ch. 3, § 3. He shall also issue warrants from time to time, to the postmaster, assistant postmaster, and mail-carrier, upon certificates signed by the president of the senate and the speaker of the house, for the amount due said officers for services rendered.

16. Payment. 15 G. A., ch. 3, § 4. Said warrants shall be paid out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

17. Term of office. 13. The speaker of the house of representatives shall hold his office until the first day of the meeting of a regular session next after that at which he was elected. All other officers elected by either house shall hold their offices only during the session at which they were elected. [R., § 16.]

18. Contempt. 14. Each house has authority to punish as a contempt, by fine and imprisonment, or either of them, the offense of knowingly arresting a member in violation of his privilege, of assaulting or threatening to assault a member, or threatening to do any harm to the person or property of a member for anything by him said or done in either house as a member thereof; of attempting by menace or other corrupt means to control or influence a member in giving his vote, or to prevent his giving it; of disorderly or contemptuous conduct tending to disturb its proceedings; of refusal to attend, or be sworn, or be examined as a witness before either house, or a committee when duly summoned; of assaulting or preventing any person going to either house, or its committee by order thereof, knowing the same; of rescuing or attempting to rescue any person arrested by order of either house, knowing of such arrest; or knowingly impeding any officer of either house in the discharge of his duties as such. [R., § 8; C., '51, § 12.]

19. Fines and imprisonment. 15. Fines and imprisonment for contempt shall be only by virtue of an order of the proper house entered on its journals, stating the grounds thereof. Imprisonment shall be effected by a warrant under the hand of the presiding officer for the time being of the house ordering it, countersigned by the acting secretary or clerk, running in the name of the state and directed to the sheriff or jailer of the proper county. Under such warrant, the proper officer will be authorized to commit and detain the person. Fines shall be collected by a similar warrant directed to any proper officer of any county in which the offender has property, and executed in the same manner as executions for fines issued from courts of record, and the proceeds paid into the state treasury. [R., § 10; C., '51, § 14.]

20. Extent. 16. Imprisonment for contempt shall not extend beyond the session at which it is ordered, and shall be in the jail of the county in which the general assembly is then sitting; or if there be no such jail, then in one of the nearest county jails. Punishment for contempt shall not constitute a bar to any other proceeding, civil or criminal for the same act. [R., §§ 9, 11; C., '51, §§ 13, 15.]

21. Attendance of witnesses. 17. Whenever a committee of either house, or a joint committee of both, is charged with an investigation requiring the personal attendance of witnesses, any person may be compelled to appear before such committee as a witness by serving upon him, in the same manner a subpoena is required to be served in a civil action in the district court, an order, naming the time and place he is required to appear, signed by the presiding officer of the house appointing the committee, and attested by its acting secretary or clerk; or, in case of a joint committee, signed and attested by such officers of either house. [11 G. A., ch. 3, § 1.]

22. Compensation of witnesses. 18. Witnesses shall be entitled to the same compensation for attendance under the preceding section as before the district court, but shall not have the right to demand payment of their fees in advance. [11 G. A., ch. 3, § 2.]

23. Joint conventions. 19. Joint conventions of the general assembly shall meet in the hall of the house of representatives for such purposes as are or shall be provided by law. The president of the senate, or, in his absence, the speaker of the house of representatives shall preside, or, in the absence of both, a temporary president shall be appointed by a joint vote. [R., §§ 674, 675.]

24. Tellers. 20. After the time for the meeting of the joint convention has been designated and prior thereto, each house shall appoint one teller, and the two shall act as judges of the election. [R., § 676.]

25. Record. 21. The clerk of the house of representatives shall act as secretary of the convention, and he and the secretary of the senate shall keep a fair and correct record of the proceedings of the convention, which shall be entered on the journals of each house. [R., § 677.]

26. Vote, how taken. 22. When any officer is to be elected by joint convention, the names of the members shall be arranged in alphabetical order by the secretaries, and each member shall vote in the order in which his name stands when thus arranged. The name of the person voted for, and of the members voting, shall be entered in writing by the tellers, who, after the secretary shall have called the names of the members a second time, and the name of the person for whom each member has voted, shall report to the president of the convention the number of votes given for each candidate. [R., §§ 678, 679.]

27. Second poll. 23. If no person shall receive the votes of a majority of the members present, a second poll may be taken, and so on from time to time until some person receives such majority. [R., § 680.]

28. Adjournment. 24. If the purpose for which the joint convention assembled is not concluded, the president shall adjourn the same from time to time as the members present may determine. [R., § 681.]

29. Certificates of election. 25. When any person shall have received a majority of the votes as aforesaid, the president shall declare him to be elected, and shall, in the presence of the convention, sign two certificates of such election, attested by the tellers, one of which he shall transmit to the governor, and the other shall be preserved among the records of the convention and entered at length on the journals of each house. The governor shall issue a commission to the person so elected. [R., § 682.]

30. Election of senators and canvass of votes. 26. Joint conventions for the purpose of electing a senator in the congress of the United States, and canvassing the votes for governor and lieutenant-governor, shall be conducted according to the foregoing provisions so far as applicable. [R., § 685.]

31. Rules. 27. In the absence of other rules, those of parliamentary practice comprised in Cushing's Manual shall govern. [R., § 686.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE STATUTES.

32. Approval of bills. 28. When the governor approves a bill, he shall set his name thereto with the date of his approval. [R., § 19; C., '51, § 16.]

As to how the fact of approval may be shown, see note to § 39. As to approval by governor, see Const., art. 3, § 16.

33. Bill returned by governor. 29. When a bill, having passed the general assembly, is returned by the governor with his objections, and is afterward passed as provided in the constitution, a certificate signed by the presiding officer of each house in the following form shall be indorsed thereon or attached thereto: "This bill having been returned by the governor with his objections to the house in which it originated, and after reconsideration having again passed both houses by yeas and nays by a majority of two-thirds of the members of each house, has become a law this — day of —." [R., § 20; C., '51, § 17.]

See Const., art. 3, § 16.

34. Bill retained by governor. 30. When a bill has passed the general assembly, and is not returned by the governor within three days as provided in the constitution, it shall be authenticated by the secretary of state indorsing thereon: "This bill having remained with the governor three days (Sunday excepted), the general assembly being in session, has become a law this — day of —. Secretary of State." [R., § 21; C., '51, § 18.]

See Const., art. 3, § 16.

35. Original acts deposited. 31. The original acts of the general assembly shall be deposited with and kept by the secretary of state. [R., § 22; C., '51, § 19.]

The original act thus deposited with the secretary of state is the ultimate proof of the statute, whatever errors there may be in the printed copies thereof; and the court will inform itself and take cognizance of the true reading as thus shown: Clare v. State, 5-509.

The acts thus deposited are the bills which receive the signatures of the officers, etc., and behind them it is impossible for any court to go for the purpose of ascertaining what the law is: Duncombe v. Prindle, 12-1, 11.

Where the newspaper publication of an act corresponded with the original rolls, held, that the act as thus existing and published would govern as to an offense committed thereunder prior to the formal publication of the statute, although such formal publication differed from the original rolls and the newspaper publication: State v. Donhey, 8-396.

As the constitution requires a proposed amendment to be entered upon the journals of the respective houses of the general assembly when agreed to, such journals are higher evidence of the contents of such amendment as it was agreed to than the enrolled copy of the joint resolution proposing such amendment, signed by the presiding officers of the respective houses and by the governor: Kochler v. Hill, 60-543.

36. Of private nature. 32. Acts of a private nature which do not prescribe the time when they take effect, shall do so on the thirtieth day next after they have been approved by the governor, or indorsed as provided in this chapter. [R., § 23; C., '51, § 20.]

37. Of public nature; publication. 33. Acts which are to take effect by publication in newspapers, shall be published in at least two papers, one at least of them at the seat of government, and if such papers are not designated in the act, the same may be designated by the secretary of state, and the act published accordingly. All such acts shall take effect on the twentieth day after the date of the last publication, and the secretary of state shall make and sign on the original roll of each of such acts a certificate, stating in what papers it was published, and the date of the last publication in each of them, which certificate and the printing thereof at the foot of the act shall be presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated. [R., § 24; C., '51, § 21.]

A statute does not become a law so as to affect the rights of property or parties until the time when by publication or otherwise it is to take effect: Charless v. Lamberson, 1-435.

The provision that "all such acts shall take effect on the twentieth day after the date of the last publication" applies only to acts in which the time of taking effect is not specified. It does not render it incompetent for the legislature to specify in the act itself when it shall take effect. Where an act provided that it should take effect "from its publication in," etc., held, that it took effect from the date of such publication: Hunt v. Murray, 17-313.

Under a prior provision, however, to the same effect, held, that although the act contained a special section directing that it should take effect from and after its publication, such section should not be considered as repealing the general provision that it should take effect at the expiration of twenty days from the date of publication: Thatcher v. Hawn, 12-303.

Certificate of secretary that act was published in one newspaper, held not sufficient: Welch v. Batterm, 47-147.

The general assembly may provide that an act shall take effect by publication, and the courts have no power to prevent the injustice which may result therefrom. (Decided under old const.): Pierson v. Baird, 2 G. Gr., 235.

If a statute is in force, ignorance thereof from any cause on the part of those affected by it is no reason why it should not be enforced against them. They cannot require that it should be published in such manner as that it should be known to them: Barber v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. W. R. Co., 43-223.

Where at the time of the commission of an offense under a statute the only publication that had been made was in a newspaper under authority of law, and the statute as thus published corresponded to the original rolls, held, that the form of the statute as thus appearing would prevail over a subsequent publication, although it was official, varying from the form found in the rolls and as originally published: State v. Donehey, 8-396.

A court will take judicial notice of the fact of publication of a statute, where such publication is necessary in order that the act shall go into effect: Allen v. Dunham, 1 G. Gr., 89.

The courts are bound ex officio to take notice of publication of statutes which take effect by publication: Pierson v. Baird, 2 G. Gr., 235.

While the statement appended to the printed act that it is "approved" is evidence of that fact, it is not essential to the validity of the act, and the approval may be shown from the original in the office of the secretary of state: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

38. Public nature; when in force. 34. All other acts and resolutions of a public nature passed at regular sessions of the general assembly, shall take effect on the fourth day of July following their passage. [R., § 25; C., '51, § 22.]

39. Publication of laws. 35; 16 G. A., ch. 132. Within twenty days after the adjournment of the general assembly, the secretary of state shall prepare a manuscript or printed copy of all the laws, joint resolutions, and memorials passed thereat, arranging the same in chapters, with marginal notes and index, to which he shall attach his certificate that the acts, resolutions, and memorials therein contained are truly copied from the original rolls, which shall be presumptive evidence of their correctness, and deliver them to the state printer. [R., §§ 62, 63, 144; C., '51, §§ 46, 47.]

While the statement appended to the printed act, and the approval may be shown from the original in the office of the secretary of state: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

40. How published. 36; 16 G. A., ch. 132. The acts of each general assembly shall be printed in pages of the same size, and as near as may be, of the same style, type and appearance with the edition of this code.

41. Superintending publication. 37; 16 G. A., ch. 132. The secretary of state shall superintend the printing of the laws as above directed. In the absence of any other provision the number of copies to be printed and bound, and the time within which the same shall be completed, may be fixed by resolution of each general assembly, or, in case no such resolution is passed, shall be determined by the executive council.

42. References to code. 38; 16 G. A., ch. 132. Every act passed in amendment of or in addition to any chapter or section of this code, or in amendment of or in addition to any previous act of the same kind, shall contain in the title thereof a reference to the number and name of the chapter so amended or added to, and if such reference be omitted, the secretary of state shall, in preparing such act for publication, supply the omission.

The marginal notes and head-lines inserted by the secretary of state in publishing the statutes are not to be considered in construing them. They are not a part of the law: Cook v. Federal Life Ass'n, 35 N. W. Rep., 500.

43. Distribution. 39; 16 G. A., ch. 132; 17 G. A., ch. 123, § 1. The secretary of state shall distribute the laws aforesaid as follows: To the state library for distribution to other states and territories, and for exchange, two hundred copies; two copies to each state institution, to each judge of a court of record, and to each state officer; one copy to each member of the general assembly; ten copies to the library of the law department of the state university; one copy to the state historical society; all of the foregoing to be in law sheep; thirteen thousand copies of the laws bound in boards for distribution to county auditors upon their requisition. [Private Laws, 14 G. A., ch. 100, § 4.]

44. Officers supplied. 40; 16 G. A., ch. 132; 17 G. A., ch. 123, § 2. Each county officer, justice of the peace, township clerk and mayor of a city or incorporated town shall be supplied with a copy of the laws for the use of his office, which shall be delivered to his successor in office. Distribution shall be made upon the requisition of the county auditor upon the secretary of state, which requisition shall state the number of copies required for distribution under the provisions of this section, and also the number of copies requisite for sale in the county, and said requisition shall be made before the first day of March in each year, and thereupon the secretary of state shall forward the number so certified and file with the auditor of state a certificate thereof, which shall be charged to such county by the auditor of state. The auditor of state shall credit the county with the number of copies distributed under the provisions of the act upon the filing of the proper vouchers by the county auditors, and upon sale of such laws by the county auditor at the rate of fifty cents per copy. The said county auditor shall pay said amounts to the county treasurer of his county, for the use of the state revenue, and the treasurer shall execute duplicate receipts therefor, one of which shall be filed with the auditor of state. The county auditor shall furnish the laws in their respective counties as hereinbefore provided. [Same, § 5.]

45. Sales. 41. The secretary of state and county auditor shall sell the copies remaining in their hands at fifty cents a copy. The secretary of state shall report under oath to the auditor of state the number of copies remaining on hand after the distribution aforesaid, and the auditor of state shall charge him therewith and credit him with the proceeds of all that are sold, upon payment of the same into the state treasury. The county auditor shall pay the proceeds of all copies sold by him to the county treasurer, taking his duplicate receipts therefor, one of which he shall transmit to the auditor of state. [Same, § 6.]

46. Report. 42. The secretary of state and county auditors shall, on or before the fifteenth day of November in each year, report to the auditor of state the number of copies sold and the number remaining on hand, and the amount paid into the state or county treasury, and the auditor shall charge such state or county treasurer with such amount.

47. Copies delivered to successor. 43. When the secretary of state or county auditor goes out of office having any such copies remaining, he shall deliver them to his successor, taking his duplicate receipts therefor, one of which he shall transmit to the auditor of state, who shall thereupon give such officer the proper credit and charge his successor with the copies received by him. Every officer receiving a copy of such laws shall execute a receipt therefor, and shall deliver such copy to his successor, or to the officer from whom he received it, for the use of such successor, and upon failure to do so, shall be liable on his official bond or in his individual capacity.

48. Compensation for the publication. 44. The compensation for the publication of laws which are ordered by the general assembly to take effect by publication, unless otherwise fixed, shall be audited and paid by the state. Such compensation shall be one-third the rates of legal advertisements allowed by law. [11 G. A., ch. 188, § 4.]

49. Construction. 45. In the construction of the statutes, the following rules shall be observed, unless such construction would be inconsistent with the manifest intent of the general assembly or repugnant to the context of the statute: [R., § 29; C., '51, § 26.]

Repeal of. 1. The repeal of a statute does not revive a statute previously repealed, nor affect any right which has accrued, any duty imposed, any penalty incurred, or any proceeding commenced, under or by virtue of the statute repealed;

For similar provision as to the effect of Code upon previous legislation, see § 54 and notes.

Previous statute not revived: The repeal of a statute does not revive a statute previously repealed: Burlington v. Kellar, 18-59; Negus v. Negus, 46-487.

As to proceedings commenced: Where a statute is repealed it must be considered as if it never existed except with reference to such parts as are preserved by the repealing statute; and though the suit may have been instituted under the statute while in existence, such repeal takes away the jurisdiction over the case thus pending: Thatcher v. Haun, 12-303.

Where a statute relating to the remedy is changed after the bringing of an action, subsequent proceedings should so far as practicable conform to the new law: Davidson v. Wheeler, Mor., 238.

Where a rule of practice is changed by statute without any saving clause the new law is applicable to all cases then pending: Meigs v. Parke, Mor., 378.

An amendment to the statute as to granting a change of venue, held applicable to actions pending. Such a change does not affect vested rights: Erkenberry v. Edwards, 71-82.

Where the times of holding terms of court were changed by statute, held, that such change did not affect a cause already commenced by service of notice, and that defendant should be held to appear at the "next term," as so changed: Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Dickerson, 28-274.

Where action was commenced by service by publication before the taking effect of the Revision, and the service of notice was not sufficient under the law as it then stood, held, that a judgment rendered upon such service after the taking effect of the Revision was defective, although the service, if made under the provisions of the Revision, would have been sufficient: Bristow v. Guess, 12-404.

Statutory provisions as to the method of trial in equity cases upon appeal, held not applicable to an appeal taken after the act took effect from a judgment rendered before that time: Simondson v. Simondson, 50-110; Trebon v. Zuff, 50-180.

Nor to an appeal commenced but not brought to judgment before the act took effect: Schmeltz v. Schmeltz, 52-512; Bailey v. Malvin, 53-371.

Effect upon judgments or orders: Proceedings to enforce a judgment should be governed by the law in force when they are commenced, and not by that under which the judgment is rendered: Gray v. Huff, 30-195.

The law in force at the time of the rendition of a judgment should govern as to a sale made thereunder: Fonda v. Clark, 43-300; Babcock v. Gurney, 42-154.

Also as to the right to appraisement: Holland v. Dickerson, 41-367.

Also as to stay of execution: Du Boise v. Bloom, 38-512.

Also as to right of appeal: Davenport v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 37-624; Ingram v. Chicago, D. & M. R. R. Co., 38-669.

Proceedings commenced are not, under statutory provision above set out, affected by the repeal of the statute under which they are commenced: Inskeep v. Inskeep, 5-204, 221.

Rights accrued: The statute authorizing suit on a promissory note to be brought by an assignee thereof in his own name instead of in the name of the assignor for his benefit, held applicable to notes already executed: Phillips v. Runnels, Mor., 391.

Where an action was brought prior to the adoption of the Code of '51, but judgment therein was not rendered until after that time, held, that defendant's homestead exemption should be governed by the provisions of the law under which action was commenced: Helpenstein v. Cave, 3-287.

Where a new revenue law was passed making no express provisions as to the enforcement of the penalties under the previous law, held, that the penalties already accrued could be enforced in accordance with the previous statute: Bartruff v. Remy, 15-257.

The general assembly cannot alter, change or repeal statutes relating to the remedy so as to substantially impair a vested right; therefore, where a mortgage and a mechanic's lien upon the same property attached under the Revision, held, in an action brought under the code, that the mortgagee had a right to have his lien determined and enforced, as against the holder of the mechanic's lien, in accordance with the provisions of the Revision: Brodv. Rohkar, 48-36.

Accruing and accrued rights are of the same character. There is no other distinction made by the statute, except that one has accrued and the other is accruing. The statute takes effect upon both, and both are preserved to the party entitled thereto: Woods v. Haviland, 59-476.

The repeal of a statute with reference to widow's dower will not affect a dower interest already vested though not yet assigned: Burke v. Barron, 8-132.

Prior to the death of a testator his devisees have no rights which are protected against subsequent legislation: Lorieux v. Keller, 5-196.

The right contemplated by this provision pertains to any property right, or person, of the citizen. A permit granted under a statute is not such a right that it is not affected by the repeal of the statute: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-721.

Crimes previously committed: Where, after an indictment was found, the law prescribing the punishment for the offense therein charged was changed, so that the offense was no longer triable on indictment, but only on information, held, that the prosecution under the indictment was not affected by the change. (Overruling State v. Burdick, 9-402): State v. Zaffer, 21-486.

A new statute which provides a milder punishment repeals so much of the former law as concerns the punishment without any express repeal, and where one statute prescribes different degrees of punishment in different sections for the same offense, only the milder degree can be adopted: State v. Brandt, 41-593.

Where the repealing clause of a penal statute provided that no offense committed and no penalty incurred under the act repealed should be affected by the repeal, held, that a crime committed under a previous act, which was repealed with a similar saving clause to the act thus repealed, was not within the exception and could not be prosecuted: Jones v. State, 1-395.

Where the statute defining a crime is repealed and another provision substituted defining the same crime, but providing a different punishment, an indictment is not subject to demurrer which fails to state whether such crime was committed before or after the change in the statute: State v. Reyelts, 74-499.

The repeal of a penal statute without a special saving clause does not release a party who has already incurred the penalty thereunder from liability: Kemish v. Ball, 30 Fed. Rep., 759.

Illegal act not validated: The abrogation and repeal of the constitutional provision prohibiting the issuance of paper to circulate as money, held not to render valid scrip so issued while the law was in operation: Dively v. Cedar Falls, 21-565.

Taxes accrued: Taxes, and the interest and penalties thereon, are not affected by a repeal of the law under which they have accrued: State ex rel. v. Stewart, 11-251; Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

But the repeal of the statute terminates the right to additional penalties: Tobin v. Hartsborn, 69-648.

Where a railway company had expended money in reliance on a tax voted in its aid, held, that a repeal of the statute did not deprive the company of the right to have the tax levied and collected: Burges v. Mabin, 70-633.

The repeal of a statute authorizing special assessments for improvements deprives a city of the power to levy such a tax for improvements not yet contracted for: Wardens, etc., of Christ Church v. Burlington, 39-224.

The repeal of a statute held not to affect the right of redemption from a tax sale existing thereunder prior to the repeal: Adams v. Beale, 19-61; Myers v. Copeland, 20-22.

A general repealing clause should be construed as referring only to laws of a general nature on the same subject. Therefore where, under the charter of an incorporated town, it was authorized to grant licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, held, that a subsequent license law, making different provisions, would not repeal the authority conferred in the charter: State v. Neepcr, 3 G. Gr., 337.

Where provisions for the foreclosure of tax titles were made by special statutes applicable to sales for taxes levied by cities, and subsequently other provisions were made in regard to tax sales, held, that the original remained in force as to sale for city taxes: Sweet v. Billings, 14-334.

Where there is a direct conflict between two different statutes, and the latter in express terms repeals all prior acts in conflict with its provisions, the former must be held repealed: Staples v. Plymouth County, 62-364.

The question of the effect of a repealing clause in an unconstitutional statute is one of legislative intention and to be determined from all the circumstances of the particular case. Where the language used was, "so much of chapter 80 as comes in conflict with this act is repealed," held, that such previous statute was not thereby repealed: Childs v. Shower, 18-261.

Implied repeal: Where two laws are in conflict and cannot be reconciled the last must prevail, being the last expression of the legislative will: McKinney v. Wood, 35-167.

Where two statutes are in terms repugnant or inconsistent, if the latter is intended to provide the only rule which is to govern the case, it will be considered as repealing the prior statute: State v. Courtney, 73-619.

In a particular case, held, that two sections being manifestly inconsistent, one of them must be regarded as having been repealed by implication: State v. Delong, 12-453.

A general statute making regulations upon a particular subject inconsistent with those in a special act of incorporation of a city repeals the provisions in such special act: State v. Harris, 10-441.

Where a statute to which, by subsequent legislation, an exception is made is repealed, and subsequently re-enacted without providing for the exception, the last statute being inconsistent with the one making the exception will be deemed to repeal it by implication: State v. Bissell, 67-616.

While the repeal of a statute by implication is not favored by the courts, yet where a statute is inconsistent in its provisions with one subsequently enacted, and is out of harmony with the spirit of later general legislation on the subject-matter, the courts will sustain the more recent statute: Yant v. Brooks, 19-87.

Where a statute covers an entire subject it thereby repeals prior statutes on the same subject, although they are not expressly repealed: Ellis v. Jackson County, 38-175.

Where one ordinance embraced and revised the whole subject-matter contained in the corresponding portion of a previous ordinance, held, that such previous ordinance was repealed by the subsequent one: Decorah v. Dunstan, 38-96.

Where a subsequent statute is passed containing provisions substantially the same as those of a previous statute, but not containing all the provisions of the previous one, there being no inconsistency between the two, and they being such that both will be enforced, the later statute will not be regarded as repealing even that portion of the previous statute not included in the later one: Phillips v. Council Bluffs, 63-576; Ament v. Humphrey, 3 G. Gr., 255.

The fact that a subsequent statute provides

Words and phrases. 2. Words and phrases shall be construed according to the context and the approved usage of the language; but technical words and phrases, and such others as may have acquired a peculiar and appropriate meaning in law, shall be construed according to such meaning;

Number, gender. 3. Words importing the singular number may be extended to several persons or things, and words importing the plural number may be applied to one person or thing, and words importing the masculine gender only may be extended to females;

Joint authority. 4. Words giving a joint authority to three or more public officers or other persons, shall be construed as giving such authority to a majority of them, unless it be otherwise expressed in the act giving the authority;

Highway, road. 5. The words "highway" and "road" include public bridges and may be held equivalent to the words "county way," "county road," "common road," and "state road;"

Public bridges are a part of the highway: Gallaher v. Head, 72-173.

Insane. 6. The words "insane person" include idiots, lunatics, distracted persons and persons of unsound mind; a new remedy for the same wrong will not necessarily show an implied repeal. The new remedy may be merely cumulative: State v. Berry, 12-58.

Where statutes are not in conflict, the latter cannot be held to repeal by implication authority conferred in the former: Burlington v. Putnam Ins. Co., 31-102.

Change in statute upon which another statute depends will not affect the latter: Garber v. Clayton County, 19-29; Kinsey v. Sherman, 46-463; Weir v. Allen, 47-482.

But where a special charter refers to the general law for subjects of taxation under such charter, it seems that a change in the general law will operate equally on the charter: Tackaberry v. Keokuk, 32-155.

Repeals by implication not favored: The law does not favor repeals by implication, and though two acts are seemingly repugnant, yet they should, if possible, receive such construction that the latter shall not repeal the former: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270; Hummer v. Hummer, 3 G. Gr., 42; Casey v. Harned, 5-1; Cole v. Board of Supervisors, 11-552; Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14-214; Burke v. Jeffries, 20-145; State v. Shaw, 28-67; Dubuque v. Harrison, 34-163.

If by any fair and reasonable construction a prior and later statute can be reconciled, both shall stand. If it can be avoided, no court can conclude that a statute is repealed by implication: Casey v. Harned, 5-1; Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14-214.

In order to work the repeal of an old law by a new one by implication, there must be an absolute repugnance between the two. Effect will be given, if possible, to several statutes in pari materia: State v. Shaw, 28-67.

Any reasonable construction will be adopted to avoid a repeal by implication: State v. Brandt, 41-593.

Repeal by implication is not to be presumed: Rison v. Shank, 37-82.

Non-user: Mere failure to enforce a statute does not result in its repeal by non-user: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72-348.

Issue. 7. The word "issue," as applied to descent of estates, includes all lawful lineal descendants;

Real property. 8. The word "land," and the phrases "real estate" and "real property," include lands, tenements, hereditaments, and all rights thereto and interests therein, equitable as well as legal;

The interest which a mortgagee has in the real property mortgaged constitutes "real estate:" Severin v. Cole, 38-463; and also the equitable interest which the heir of such mortgagee has in such property: Burton v. Hintzger, 18-348.

Real estate includes equitable as well as legal interests in real property: Blain v. Stewart, 2-378.

The making improvements upon land by one in possession under contract of purchase gives him an equitable interest which will pass by a conveyance: White v. Butt, 32-335.

A mere license to make improvements upon and use real property is not real estate: Melhop v. Meinhart, 70-685.

Personal property. 9. The words "personal property" include money, goods, chattels, evidences of debt, and things in action;

A promissory note is "personal property:" Allison v. King, 21-302; so are municipal bonds: Callanan v. Brown, 31-333; and so is a draft, though it be against the government, and upon which action could not, therefore, be brought, and though it has not been indorsed by the payee; so held in case of embezzlement: State v. Orwig, 24-102.

Applied: Iowa Lumber Co. v. Foster, 49-25.

Property. 10. The word "property" includes personal and real property;

Applied: Briggs v. Briggs, 69-617.

Month, year, A. D. 11. The word "month" means a calendar month, and the word "year," and the abbreviation "A. D.," are equivalent to the expression "year of our Lord;"

The designation of the year by numerical figures with A. D. prefixed, held sufficient in an indictment: State v. Seamons, 1 G. Gr., 418.

Oath, affirmation. 12. The word "oath" includes affirmation in all cases where an affirmation may be substituted for an oath, and in like cases the word "swear," includes "affirm;"

Person, corporation. 13. The word "person" may be extended to bodies corporate;

So held under the statute as to garnishment: Wales v. Muscatine, 4-302, 307.

The rule that the word persons may be extended to bodies corporate cannot be of universal application, especially in the construction of criminal statutes, for the reason that there are some crimes for which corporations cannot be punished. The true rule is that corporations are to be considered as persons when the circumstances in which they are placed are identical with those of natural persons expressly included in the statute: Stewart v. Waterloo Turn Verein, 71-226.

Seal. 14. Where the seal of a court or public office or officer may be required to be affixed to any paper, the word "seal" shall include an impression upon the paper alone as well as upon wax or a wafer affixed thereto;

State, territory. 15. The word "state," when applied to the different parts of the United States, includes the District of Columbia and the territories, and the words "United States" may include the said district and territories;

Town, cities, villages. 16. The word "town" may include cities as well as incorporated villages;

"Town" does not include unincorporated village; so held in constructing statute as to extent of homestead: Truax v. Pool, 46-256.

Will. 17. The word "will" includes codicils;

In writing. 18. The words "written" and "in writing," may include printing, engraving, lithography, or any other mode of representing words and letters, excepting those cases where the written signature or mark of any person is required;

Sheriff. 19. The term "sheriff" may be extended to any person performing the duties of the sheriff either generally or in special cases;

This does not authorize a person other than etc.: Conway v. McGregor & M. R. R. Co., the sheriff to serve notices, levy executions, 43-32.

Deed, bond, indenture, undertaking. 20. The word "deed" is applied to an instrument conveying lands, but does not imply a sealed instrument; and the words "bond" and "indenture" do not necessarily imply a seal, and the word "undertaking" means a promise or security in any form;

A seal is not therefore essential to the validity of a conveyance: Pierson v. Armstrong, 1-232; though it formerly was so: Switzer v. Knapps, 10-72; Simms v. Hervey, 19-273, 290.

Executor. 21. The term "executor" includes administrator, where the subject-matter applies to an administrator;

Numerals and figures. 22. The Roman numerals and Arabic figures are to be taken as a part of the English language;

The designation of the year by numeral an indictment: State v. Seamons, 1 G. Gr., figures with A. D. prefixed, held sufficient in 418.

Computing time. 23. In computing time, the first day shall be excluded and the last included, unless the last falls on Sunday, in which case the time prescribed shall be extended so as to include the whole of the following Monday; [R., § 4121; C., '51, § 2513.]

Calendar months are to be computed by reckoning from a given day to the day of a corresponding number where there is one: Parkhill v. Brighton, 61-103.

In computing the number of days that a process has been served before return day the day of service should be included and the day of return excluded: Dilts v. Zeitler, 1 G. Gr., 164.

In computing time the first day shall be excluded and the last included: Richardson v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 8-260; Teucher v. Hiatt, 23-527; Manning v. Irish, 47-650; Bonney v. Cocke, 61-303.

But where, under the provision of § 3807, that notice shall be served in such time as to leave at least ten days between the day of service and the first day of the next term, both the day of service and the first day of the term should be excluded from the computation: Robinson v. Foster, 12-186.

Degrees of consanguinity. 24. Degrees of consanguinity and affinity shall be computed according to the civil law; [R., § 4124.]

Applied: Martindale v. Kendrick, 4 G. Gr., 307.

Clerk. 25. The word "clerk" means clerk of the court in which the action or proceeding is brought or is pending; and the words "clerk's office" mean his office. [R., § 4123.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE CODE AND ITS OPERATION.

50. This code. 46. In the citation of the statutes this shall not be reckoned as one of the statutes of the present political year, but it may be designated as the "Code," adding as may be necessary the title, chapter, or section. [R., § 30; C., '51, § 27.]

While each title of the Code was separately enacted, still the whole Code should, for the purpose of construction, be regarded as having been enacted at the same time, and sections in different titles relating to the same matter

In such case, where the first day of the term falls on Monday, Sunday is not to be excluded from the computation: Ibid.

Where it was provided that a tenancy should terminate upon ten days' notice, held, that notice being given on the last day of April, an action brought on the 10th day of May was premature, and that the day of service of the notice must be excluded: Aiken v. Appleby, Mor., 8.

The provision that the last day, if it falls on Sunday, shall be excluded in any computation, applies only where it is required that some act shall be done on the last day. Under the statutory provision that a petition shall be filed ten days before the first day of the term (§ 3805) held, that Sunday should be included in the computation, although it was the last day before the first day of the term: Conklyn v. Marshalltown, 66-122.

must be read and construed together and such construction adopted, if consistent with the language used, as will give force and effect to both sections: Hunt v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 67-742.

51. Repeal of prior statutes. 47. All public and general statutes passed prior to the present session of the general assembly, and all public and special acts the subjects whereof are revised in this code or which are repugnant to the provisions thereof, are hereby repealed, subject to the limitations and with the exceptions herein expressed. [R., § 31; C., '51, § 28.]

The provisions of the Revision and session laws prior to the Code in reference to swamp lands being "public and special acts," and not revised in the Code, held not to be repealed thereby: Gray v. Mount, 45-591.

Under this provision, all public and general statutes passed prior to the enactment of the Code and not therein re-enacted are repealed: Staples v. Plymouth County, 62-364.

Under the corresponding provision of the Revision, held, that the prior act relating to the jurisdiction of counties bordering on the Mississippi river was not thereby repealed, although not embraced in the Revision: State v. Mullen, 35-199.

52. Local statutes. 48. Local acts are not repealed unless it be herein so expressed, or unless the provisions of this code are repugnant thereto. [R., § 32; C., '51, § 29.]

53. When code takes effect. 49. This code shall take effect on the first day of September, A. D. 1873. until which time existing statutes continue in force, and nothing contained in this title in relation to the preparation and publication of the statutes shall be construed as including this code. [R., § 49; C., '51, § 30.]

54. Existing rights not affected. 50. This repeal of existing statutes shall not affect any act done, any right accruing or which has accrued or been established, nor any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the time when such repeal takes effect; but the proceedings in such cases shall be conformed to the provisions of this code as far as consistent. [R., § 34; C., '51, §§ 31, 2514.]

The general assembly cannot alter, change or repeal statutes relating to the remedy so as to substantially impair a vested right; therefore, where a mortgage and a mechanic's lien upon the same property attached under the Revision, held, in an action brought under the Code, that the mortgagee had a right to have his lien determined and enforced, as against the holder of the mechanic's lien, in accordance with the provisions of the Revision: Brodt v. Rohkar, 48-36.

A construction of the statute of limitations which would extend the time on debts existing before the adoption of the Code, and on which the previous statute of limitations had commenced to run, to the full period after the taking effect of the Code, was held not admissible, for the reason that it would affect a right accrued under the debt: McDonald v. Jackson, 55-37.

A change made by the Code in the law as to the liability of railroad companies for injuries in certain cases, held not to apply in a case where the jury was received before the Code took effect: Payne v. Chicago, E. I. & P. R. Co., 44-236.

A judgment being rendered before the taking effect of the Code against the husband, under which certain property of the wife, being in his possession, was liable as the law then stood, held, that such property might

A general statute making regulations upon a particular subject inconsistent with those in special act of incorporation of a city repeals the provisions in such special act: State v. Harris, 10-441.

The Revision of 1860 was not, as a whole, enacted by the general assembly. Those parts not enacted in the code of civil practice and the code of criminal practice, or other acts adopted at the same session, were simply a compilation by the commissioners of the laws then in force, and, in case of an error in such compilation, the original statutes prevailed and were not to be deemed repealed: State v. Lee, 37-402.

still be taken upon execution issued after the taking effect of the Code, although by its provisions the property of the wife would not have been liable under similar circumstances: Schmidt v. Holtz, 44-446.

Where an original notice was served before the taking effect of the Code, but the second day of the next term occurred after that time, held, that the provisions of the Code would govern the time of pleading: Brotherton v. Brotherton, 41-112; Connable v. Colvin, 41-93.

The right of a party to a trial by jury, in an action commenced prior to the taking effect of the Code, held not to be affected by any change made by the Code: Wormley v. Hamburg, 46-144. So held in an action for divorce in which, under the Revision, the parties were entitled to a jury trial: Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 40-448.

The provisions of the Code held applicable as to the admissibility of evidence in a particular case commenced before it went into effect: Wood v. Broliar, 40-591.

An order being made before the Code took effect for a special term of court to be held after that time, and that fifteen jurors be called (the proper number under Revision), held, that such order was an "act done" so as to be valid, although the proper number under the Code was twenty-four: Fifield v. Chick, 39-651.

As to the effect of the Code upon penalties or taxes delinquent before it took effect. see Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153, 190.

Under Revision, § 4173, held, that proceedings to enforce a judgment should be governed by the law in force when they were commenced and not by that under which the judgment was rendered; a judgment not being "an action:" Gray v. Iliff, 30-195.

Under a similar provision in the Code of '51, held, that, where an action was brought prior to its adoption, but judgment therein was not rendered until after that time, the defendant's homestead exemption should be governed by the provisions of the law under which the action was commenced: Helpenstein v. Cave, 3-287.

And see § 49, ¶ 1, and notes.

55. Same. 51. No offense committed, and no penalty or forfeiture incurred under any statute hereby repealed and before the repeal takes effect, shall be affected by the repeal, except that when a punishment, penalty, or forfeiture is mitigated by the provisions herein contained, such provisions shall be applied to a judgment to be pronounced after the repeal. [R., § 35; C., '51, § 32.]

See notes to § 49, ¶ 1.

56. Suits or prosecutions pending. 52. No suit or prosecution pending when this repeal takes effect, for an offense committed, or for the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture incurred, shall be affected by the repeal, but the proceedings may be conformed to the provisions of this code as far as consistent. [R., § 36; C., '51, § 33.]

See notes to § 49, ¶ 1.

57. Heretofore and hereafter. 53. The terms "heretofore" and "hereafter," as used in this code, have relation to the time when this statute takes effect. [R., § 38; C., '51, § 35.]

Applied: Bennett v. Bevard, 6-82; Davenport v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 37-624; Rivers v. Cole, 38-677; Thatcher v. Haun, 12-303.

The expression "prior to the passage" of an act means prior to its taking effect: Rogers v. Vass, 6-405; Chartess v. Laumberson, 1-435.

It is proper to make a curative act applicable to all acts described therein, intermediate the taking effect of the act and its passage: Shearer v. Mills, 35-499.

58. Acts in conflict with code. 54. Whenever an act of a general nature passed at the present session of the general assembly, separate from this code, conflicts with or contravenes any of the provisions thereof, the provisions of the code shall prevail. [R., § 39; C., '51, § 36.]

CHAPTER 5.

SUBMISSION OF CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

59. Publication. 16 G. A., ch. 114, § 1. Whenever any proposition to amend the constitution has passed the general assembly and [been] referred to the next succeeding legislature as provided in section one, article ten, of the constitution, the secretary of state shall cause the same to be published in two newspapers of general circulation in each congressional district in the state for the time provided in section one, article ten of the constitution; and the fact of such publication having been made shall be verified by the affidavits of the publishers of such newspapers, and such affidavits, together with the certificate of the secretary of state that he had designated the newspapers in which the publication was made, shall be filed, preserved and recorded in a book kept for that purpose in the office of the secretary of state; and the secretary of state shall report his action in the premises to the next succeeding general assembly.

60. Submission; ballots; returns. 16 G. A., ch. 114, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 7, § 1. Whenever a proposition to amend the constitution shall have passed the general assembly and been agreed to by the next succeeding general assembly as provided in section one, article ten, of the constitution, when no other time is fixed by such general assembly for its submission to the people, the same shall be submitted to the qualified electors at the next ensuing general election; and the ballots relating to such amendment or amendments shall be separate from the ballots for officers cast at such election, and shall be deposited in boxes to be provided by the judges of election, separate from said ballots so cast for officers; and there shall be written or printed on such ballots the entire proposed amendment or amendments with the word "for" or "against"—as the elector may desire—preceding each amendment voted upon; and the election shall be conducted in the same manner as the election for state officers, except as herein otherwise provided; and the canvass shall be in the same manner, and by the same officers and like returns made thereof as of the ballots cast for the secretary of state; and the board of state canvassers shall declare the result and enter the same of record in the book mentioned in section one of this act, immediately following and in connection with the proofs of publication.

61. Proclamation. 16 G. A., ch. 114, § 3. Whenever a proposition to amend the constitution is submitted to a vote of the electors, the governor shall include such proposed amendment in his proclamation provided for in section five hundred and seventy-seven of the code [§ 1024].

62. Expenses. 16 G. A., ch. 114, § 4. Expenses incurred under the provisions of this act, shall be audited and allowed by the executive council and paid out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated.

63. Submission at special election. 19 G. A., ch. 7, § 2. The general assembly to which a proposition to amend the constitution has been referred by the last preceding general assembly, and which has agreed to such proposed amendment, may provide for its submission to the people at a special election for that purpose, at such time as the general assembly may prescribe, proclamation for which election shall be made by the governor, and the same shall in all respects be governed and conducted as prescribed in this act for submission of a constitutional amendment at a general election so far as applicable.

TITLE II.

OF THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE GOVERNOR.

64. Office of; secretary. 55. The governor shall keep his office at the seat of government, in which shall be transacted the business of the executive department of the state, and he shall keep a secretary at said office during his absence. [10 G. A., ch. 85, § 1.]

65. Journal to be kept. 56. He shall cause a journal to be kept in the executive office, in which shall be made an entry of every official act done by him at the time when done. If, in cases of emergency, acts are done elsewhere than in such office, an entry thereof shall be made in the journal as soon thereafter as possible. [10 G. A., ch. 85, § 2.]

66. Military record. 57. He shall cause a military record to be kept, in which shall be made an entry of every act done by him as commander-in-chief. [10 G. A., ch. 85, § 3.]

67. Reward for criminals. 58. Whenever the governor is satisfied that the crime of murder or arson has been committed within the state, and that the person charged therewith has not been arrested or has escaped therefrom, he may, in his discretion, offer a reward not exceeding five hundred dollars for the arrest and delivery to the proper authorities of the person so charged, which reward shall be audited upon the certificate of the governor that the same has been earned, and paid by the state. [R., § 57.]

The board of supervisors has no authority to offer a reward for the arrest of a criminal, but they may for the recovery of funds stolen from the county: Hawk v. Hamilton County, 48-472. Nor has a city any authority to offer such reward: Hanger v. Des Moines, 52-193.

68. May employ counsel. 59. Whenever the governor is satisfied that an action or proceeding has been commenced which may affect the rights or interests of the state, he may employ counsel to protect such rights or interests; and when any civil action or proceeding has been or is about to be commenced by the proper officer in behalf of the state, he may employ additional counsel to assist in the cause. [R., § 44; C., '51, § 40.]

69. How paid. 60. Expenses incurred under the preceding section and in causing the laws to be executed, may be allowed by the governor and paid from the contingent fund. [R., § 45; C., '51, § 41.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

70. Office; duties. 61. The secretary of state shall keep his office at the seat of government and perform all duties which may be required of him by law; he shall have charge of and keep all the acts and resolutions of the territorial legislature, and the general assembly of the state, the enrolled copy of the constitutions of the state, and all bonds, books, records, maps, registers, and papers which now are or may hereafter be deposited to be kept in his office. [R., § 59; C., '51, § 43.]

71. Commissions countersigned. 62. All commissions issued by the governor shall be countersigned by the secretary, who shall register each commission in a book to be kept for that purpose, specifying the office, name of officer, date of commission, and tenure of office. [R., § 60; C., '51, § 44.]

72. Report to general assembly. 63. He shall report to the governor, before each regular session of the general assembly, an abstract for each year of the criminal returns received from the clerks of the several district courts, embracing all the facts contained in such returns. [R., § 64; C., '51, § 48.]

73. Library of congress. 64. He shall furnish the library of congress two copies of all legislative journals and reports of state officers immediately upon the publication thereof. [11 G. A., ch. 81.]

74. Record of cities and towns to be kept. 65. The secretary of state shall receive and preserve in his office all papers transmitted to him in relation to the incorporation of cities or towns, or the annexation of territory to the same, or the consolidation or the abandonment of municipal corporations, and shall keep an alphabetical list of said cities and towns in a book provided for that purpose, in which shall be entered the name of the town or city, the character of the same, whether town or city, and if a city, whether of first or second class, the county in which situated, and the date of organization. [R., § 1046.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE AUDITOR OF STATE.

75. Powers; duties. 66; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 27. The auditor shall keep his office at the seat of government. He is the general accountant of the state, and it is his duty: [R., § 71; C., '51, § 50.]

Keep accounts. 1. To keep and state all accounts between the state and the United States or any other state, or any public officer of the state, or person indebted to the state or intrusted with the collection, disbursement, or management of funds belonging to the same, when they are payable to or from the state treasury;

Make settlements. 2. To settle the accounts of all county treasurers and receivers of state revenues payable into the state treasury, for each of their official terms separately;

Revenues, accounts of. 3. To keep fair, clear, and separate accounts of all the revenues, funds, and incomes of the state payable into the state treasury, and of all disbursements and investments thereof, showing the particulars of the same;

Settle with public debtors. 4. To settle the accounts of all public debtors for debts due the state treasury, and to require such persons or their legal representatives who have not accounted, to settle their accounts;

Claims against the state. 5. To settle all claims against the treasury, and when a claim is recognized by law for which no appropriation has been made, to give the claimant a certificate thereof and report the same to the general assembly;

Superintend payments of money. 6. To direct and superintend the payment of all money payable into the state treasury, and cause to be instituted and prosecuted the proper actions for the recovery of debts and other moneys so payable;

Superintend fiscal affairs. 7. To superintend the fiscal affairs of the state, and secure their management as required by law; to furnish proper instructions, directions, and forms to the county auditors and treasurers, in compliance with which they shall severally keep their accounts relating to the revenue of the state, and perform the duties of their several offices; also forms for the reports required to be made by said officers to such auditor, and of receipts to be given by such treasurers to the tax payers, and such officers shall conform in all respects to the form and directions thus prescribed; [9 G. A., ch. 173, § 8.]

Draw warrants. 8. To draw warrants on the treasurer for money directed by law to be paid out of the treasury as the same may become payable. Each warrant shall bear on the face thereof its proper number, date, amount, name of payee, and a reference to the law under which it is drawn, which particulars shall be entered in a book kept for that purpose in the order of issuance; and, as soon as practicable after issuing such warrant, he shall certify the above particulars to the treasurer;

The auditor is required to issue warrants without regard to the fact that there may be no money in the treasury to pay them: State v. Sherman, 46-45.

The court cannot, by mandamus, compel the auditor to allow a particular sum on the settlement of a claim, but he can be compelled to issue a warrant for whatever sum he does audit or allow: Bryan v. Cattell, 15-538.

Custody of books, papers, etc. 9. To have the custody of all books, papers, records, documents, vouchers, conveyances, leases, mortgages, bonds and other securities appertaining to the fiscal affairs and property of the state, which are not required to be kept in some other office;

Furnish governor information. 10. To furnish the governor on his requisition, information in writing upon any subject connected with his office, and to suggest to the general assembly, plans for the improvement and management of the public revenue and property;

Report to governor. 11. To report to the governor before each regular session of the general assembly, a complete statement of the revenue, funds, income, taxable property, and other resources and property of the state, and of the public revenues and expenditures since his last report, with a detailed statement of the expenditures to be defrayed from the treasury for the term following that covered by his report, specifying each object of expenditure, and distinguishing between such as are provided for by appropriations and such as are not, and showing the probable deficiency of any former appropriations;

Apportion school money. 12. He shall, on the first Monday of March and September of each year, apportion the interest of the permanent school fund among the several counties in proportion to the number of persons between five and twenty-one years of age in each, as shown by the last report filed with him by the superintendent of public instruction. [R., § 1967; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 93.]

76. Divide warrants. 67. When the amount due from the state to any person exceeds twenty dollars, the auditor shall, if requested, divide the amount into parcels of not less than ten dollars and issue warrants therefor. [R., § 72; C., § 51, § 51.]

77. Information as to state property. 68. The auditor may at any time require any person receiving money, securities, or property belonging to the state, or having the management, disbursement, or other disposition of the same, an account of which is kept in his office, to render statements thereof, and information in reference thereto. Any such person refusing or neglecting to render such statement or information, shall forfeit twenty-five dollars, to be recovered by civil action in the name of the state. [R., § 73; C., '51, § 52.]

78. Claims against the state; claimant examined. 69. Every claim against the state shall be presented to the auditor for settlement within two years after it accrues, and if thereafter presented, the same shall not be audited. When a claim is presented, the auditor is authorized to examine the claimant and any other persons, under oath, touching such claim, or cause them to verify the same by affidavit or deposition. [R., § 74; C., '51, § 53.]

79. Neglect to account. 70. If any officer who is accountable to the treasury for any money or property, neglects to render an account to the auditor within the time prescribed by law, or if no time is so prescribed, then, within twenty days after being required so to do by the auditor, the auditor shall state an account against him from the books of the auditor's office, charging ten per cent damages on the whole sum appearing due, and interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum on the aggregate from the time when the account should have been rendered; all of which may be recovered by an action brought on such account, or on the official bond of such officer. [R., § 75; C., '51, § 54.]

80. Failure to pay. 71. If any such officer fails to pay into the treasury the amount received by him within the time prescribed by law, or, having settled with the auditor, fails to pay the amount found due, the auditor shall charge such officer with twenty per cent. damages on the amount due with interest on the aggregate from the time the same became due at the rate of six per cent. per annum, and the whole may be recovered by an action brought on such account, or on the official bond of such officer, and he shall forfeit his commission. [R., § 76; C., '51, § 55.]

81. Defense of officer. 72. The penal provisions in the two preceding sections are subject to any legal defense which the officer may have against the account as stated by the auditor, but judgment for costs shall be rendered against the officer in the action, whatever be its result, unless he rendered an account within the time named in the two preceding sections. [R., § 77; C., '51, § 56.]

82. Oath of receiver of public money. 73. When a county treasurer or other receiver of public money, seeks to obtain credit on the books of the auditor's office for payment made to the treasurer, before giving such credit the auditor shall require him to take and subscribe an oath that he has not used, loaned or appropriated any of the public money for his private benefit, nor for the benefit of any other person. [R., § 79; C., '51, § 57.]

83. Requisition to officer. 74. In those cases where the auditor is authorized to call upon persons or officers for information, or statements, or accounts, he may issue his requisition therefor in writing to the person or officer called upon, allowing reasonable time, which having been served as a notice in a civil action by the sheriff of the county in which the person or officer called upon resides, and returned to the auditor with the service indorsed thereon, shall be evidence of the making of the requisition therein expressed. [R., § 79; C., '51, § 58.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE TREASURER OF STATE.

84. Office; duties. 75. The treasurer shall keep his office at the seat of government, and shall keep an accurate account of the receipts and disbursements at the treasury, in books kept for that purpose, in which he shall specify the names of the persons from whom money is received, and on what account, and the time thereof. [R., § 83; C., '51, § 62.]

85. Memorandum of warrants. 76. He shall enter in a book the memorandum of warrants issued as certified to him by the auditor, and receive in payment of public dues the warrants so issued in conformity with law, and redeem the same if there be money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated; and on receiving any such warrant, shall cause the person presenting it to indorse it, and shall write on the face thereof "redeemed," and enter in the book containing the auditor's memoranda in appropriate columns, the name of the person to whom paid, date of payment and amount of interest paid. [R., § 84; C., '51, § 63.]

86. Receipts. 77. When money is paid him the treasurer shall execute receipts in duplicate therefor, stating the fund to which it belongs, one of which must be delivered to the auditor in order to obtain the proper credit, and the treasurer must be charged therewith. [R., § 85; C., '51, § 64.]

87. Payments of warrants. 78. He shall pay no money from the treasury but upon the warrants of the auditor, and only in the order of their issuance; or if there is no money in the treasury from which such warrant can be paid, he shall, upon request of the holder, indorse upon the warrant the date of its presentation, and sign it, from which time the warrant shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, until the time directed in the next section. [R., § 86; C., '51, § 65; 10 G. A., ch. 9.]

88. Record of warrants; publication of. 79. He shall keep a record of the number and amount of the warrants so presented and indorsed for non-payment, and when there are funds in the treasury for their payment to an amount sufficient to render it advisable, he shall give notice to what number of warrants the funds will extend, or the number which he will pay, by three insertions in a newspaper printed at the seat of government; at the expiration of thirty days from the day of the last publication, interest on the warrants so named as being payable, shall cease. [R., § 87; C., '51, § 66.]

89. Certifying and accounting to auditor. 80; 17 G. A., ch. 116. Once in each week he shall certify to the auditor the number, date, amount, and payee of each warrant taken up by him, with the date when taken up, and the amount of interest allowed; and on the first Monday of January, April and July, and on the first day of October, annually, he is directed to account with the auditor and deposit in his office all such warrants received at the treasury, and take the auditor's receipt therefor. [R., § 88; C., '51, § 67.]

90. Report to governor. 81; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 28. As soon as practicable after the first Monday of November preceding the regular session of the general assembly, he shall report to the governor the state of the treasury up to the first day of July preceding, exhibiting the amount received and paid out by the treasurer since his last report, and the balance remaining in the treasury. [R., § 89; C., '51, § 68.]

91. Provide funds to pay interest. 82. When interest on any bonds of the state becomes due, the treasurer shall provide funds for the payment thereof on the day and at the place where payable; and persons holding such bonds are required to present the same at such place within ten days from such day. At the expiration of which time, the funds remaining unexpended and vouchers for interest paid shall be returned to the treasury. [10 G. A., ch. 66.]

RELATING TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A STATE DEPOSITORY.

92. How designated. 17 G. A., ch. 57, § 1. The treasurer of state, with the advice and approval of the executive council, may designate one or more banks in the city of Des Moines as a depository for the collection of any drafts, checks, and certificates of deposit that may be received by him on account of any claims due the state.

93. Security. 17 G. A., ch. 57, § 2. The bank or banks designated as such depository shall be required to give security to the state, to be approved by the executive council, for the prompt collection of all drafts, checks, certificates of deposit, or coupons, that may be delivered to such depository by the treasurer of state for collection; and also for the safe keeping and prompt payment, on the treasurer's order, of the proceeds of all such collections; also, for the payment of all drafts that may be issued to said treasurer by such depository.

94. Collection of drafts. 17 G. A., ch. 57, § 3. The treasurer of state, on the receipt of any draft, check or certificate of deposit, on account of state dues, may place the same in such depository for collection, and it shall be the duty of such depository to collect the same without delay and shall charge no greater per cent. for such collection than the minimum per cent. charged to other parties and notify the treasurer when collected. On the receipt of such notice, the treasurer shall issue his receipt to the party entitled thereto, as now required by law.

95. Liability of officers not affected. 17 G. A., ch. 57, § 4. The provisions of this act shall in no way release the treasurer of state or his bondsmen, or any county treasurer or his bondsmen, from any liabilities now imposed by law.

96. 17 G. A., ch. 57, § 5. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

CHAPTER 5.

OF THE STATE LAND OFFICE AND REGISTER THEREOF.

97. Office; duties. 83. The register of the state land office shall keep his office at the seat of government. The books and records of such office shall be so kept as to show and preserve an accurate chain of title from the general government to the purchaser of each smallest subdivision of land; to preserve a permanent record in books suitably indexed of all correspondence with any of the departments of the general government in relation to state lands; to preserve by proper records copies of the original lists furnished by the selecting agents of the state, and of all other papers in relation to such lands which are of permanent interest. [R., §§ 92, 95.]

98. Tract books. 84. Separate tract books shall be kept for the university lands, the saline lands, the half-million acre grant, the sixteenth sections, the swamp lands, and such other lands as the state now owns or may hereafter own, so that each description of state lands shall be kept separate from all others, and each set of tract books shall be a complete record of all the lands to which they relate. [R., § 94.]

99. Show what. 85. Said tract books shall be ruled in a manner similar to those used in the United States land offices, so as to record each tract by its smallest legal subdivisions, its section, township, and range, to whom sold, and when, the price per acre, to whom patented, and when. [R., § 92.]

100. Records; copies. 86. The state land office shall be kept open during business hours, and shall have the personal supervision of the register; the documents and records therein shall be subject to inspection, in the presence of the register, by parties having an interest therein, and certified copies thereof, signed by said register with the seal of said office attached, shall be deemed presumptive evidence of the fact to which they relate, and on request they shall be furnished by the register for a reasonable compensation. [10 G. A., ch. 103, § 1.]

101. Patents. 87. Patents for lands shall issue from the state land office, shall be signed by the governor and recorded by the register; and each patent shall contain therein a marginal certificate of the book and page on which it is recorded, which certificate shall be signed by the register, and all patents shall be delivered free of charge. [R., § 97.]

102. Certificate. 88. No patent shall be issued for any lands belonging to the state, except upon the certificate of the person or officer specially charged with the custody of the same, setting forth the appraised value per acre, name of the person to whom sold, date of sale, price per acre, amount paid, name of person making final payment, and of person who is entitled to the patent, and if thus entitled by assignment from the original purchaser, setting forth fully such assignment, which certificate shall be filed and preserved in the land office. [R., §§ 98, 99.]

103. Errors corrected. 89. The register is authorized and required to correct all clerical errors of his office, in name of grantee, and description of tract of land conveyed by the state found upon the records of such office; he shall attach his official certificate to each conveyance so corrected, and the reasons therefor; record the same with the record of the original conveyance, and make the necessary correction in the tract and plat books of his office. Such corrections, when made in accordance with the foregoing provisions, shall have the force and effect of a deed originally correct, subject to prior rights accrued without notice. [9 G. A., ch. 56; 11 G. A., ch. 30.]

104. Records, and maps of public surveys. 90. The register shall receive any field-notes, maps, records, or other papers relating to the public survey of this state, whenever the same shall be turned over to the state in pursuance of an act of congress, entitled "An act for the discontinuance of the office of surveyor-general in the several districts as soon as the surveys therein can be completed for abolishing land offices under certain circumstances, and for other purposes," approved June 12, 1840, and any act amendatory thereof, and shall provide for their safe keeping and proper arrangement as public records; and free access to the same by the lawful authority of the United States, for the purpose of taking extracts therefrom, or making copies thereof, shall always be granted. [12 G. A., ch. 3.]

105. Relinquishing claims. 91. Whenever the governor is satisfied by the commissioner of the general land office that the title to any lands which may have been certified to the state under any of the several grants, is inferior to the rights of any valid interfering pre-emptor or claimant, he is authorized and required to release by deed of relinquishment such color of title to the United States, to the end that the requirements of the interior department may be complied with, and that such tract or tracts of land may be patented by the general government to the legal claimants. [12 G. A., ch. 10, § 1.]

106. Quitclaim to correct mistake. 92. Whenever the governor is satisfied by proper record evidence that any tract of land which may have been deeded by virtue of any donation or sale to the state, is not the land intended to have been described, and that an error has been committed in making out the transfers, in order that such error may be corrected, he is authorized to quitclaim the same to the proper owner thereof, and to receive a deed or deeds for the lands intended to have been deeded to the state originally. [12 G. A., ch. 10, § 2.]

107. Lists of lands inuring to grantee. 93; 18 G. A., ch. 167; 19 G. A., ch. 123. In cases where lands have been granted to the state of Iowa by act of congress and certified lists of lands inuring under the grant have been made to the state by the commissioner of the general land office as required by act of congress, and such lands have been granted by act of the general assembly to any person or company, and such person or company shall have complied with and fulfilled the conditions of the grant, the register of the state land office is hereby authorized to prepare, on the application of such person or company, or on the application of a party claiming title to any land through such person or company, a list or lists of lands situated in each county inuring to such applicant, from the lists certified by the commissioner of the general land office, as aforesaid, which shall be signed by the governor of the state and attested by the secretary of state with the state seal, and then be certified to by the register to be true and correct copies of the lists made to this state, and deliver them to such applicant, who is hereby authorized to have them recorded in the proper county, and when so recorded they shall be notice to all persons the same as deeds now are, and shall be evidence of title in such grantee or his or its assigns to the lands therein described under the grant of congress by which the lands were certified to the state, so far as the certified lists made by the commissioner aforesaid conferred title to the state; but where lands embraced in such lists are not of the character embraced by such acts of congress or the acts of the general assembly of the state, and are not intended to be granted thereby, the lists, so far as these lands are concerned, shall be perfectly null and void, and of no force or effect whatever; provided that no lands now in suit shall be included in such lists until said suits are determined and such lands adjudged to be the property of the company; provided, further, that the register shall not include in any of the lists so certified to the state, which have been adjudicated by the proper courts to belong to any other grant, or adjudicated to belong to any county or individual under the swamp land grant, or any homestead or pre-emption settlement. Nor shall said certificate so issued confer any right or title as against any person or company having any vested right, either legal or equitable, to any of the lands so certified. [14 G. A., ch. 83.]

If the certificate provided for in this section is introduced it dispenses with all other proof, and makes at least a prima facie case. In the absence of such certificate the party must prove the selection of the lands, that they are within the grant, and the construction of the road, so as to entitle the grantee to the lands under the act. But whilst the certificate establishes the title of the grantee, it is not essential to such title: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lewis, 53-101.

As to recording railway land grant titles, see §§ 3119, 3120.

108. Patents to university lands. 21 G. A., ch. 178, § 1. The secretary of state is hereby authorized to issue patents for lands, the legal title to which is vested in the state university of Iowa, in cases wherein it is shown to the satisfaction of the governor, and attorney-general that such lands have been in fact sold by the authority of the state and paid for and that the certificates of purchase have been lost or destroyed.

109. Inures to whom. 21 G. A., ch. 178, § 2. The patents thus issued shall inure to the benefit of the original purchaser and his granters [grantees] only and a clause to this effect shall be inserted in the patent.

TRANSFER OF STATE LAND OFFICE TO OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE.

110. Office transferred. 18 G. A., ch. 206, § 1. On and after the first Monday in January in the year 1883, the office of register of the state land office shall be transferred to the custody of the secretary of state and the present incumbent of the office of register of the state land office shall then turn over and deliver to the secretary all books, papers, maps, furniture and property of every description held by him as belonging to his office.

111. Duties of secretary. 18 G. A., ch. 206, § 2. From and after the first Monday of January in the year 1883, all business pertaining to the office of register of the state land office as provided by law, and all duties now required to be performed by the said register, shall thereafter be performed by the secretary of state, and he shall have and hold possession and control of all the property turned over to him, as specified in section one [§ 105] of this act.

112. Clerk. 18 G. A., ch. 206, § 3. In addition to the clerical force now allowed by law to the secretary of state for the performance of the duties of his office, he shall be allowed one additional clerk, whose duty it shall be to perform the clerical work pertaining to the land department, as directed by the secretary, and he shall also perform such other duties as the secretary may direct.

113. Compensation. 18 G. A., ch. 206, § 4. The salary of the clerk provided for in this act shall be twelve hundred dollars per annum, to be paid at the end of each month, and the auditor of state shall draw a warrant on the state treasury in favor of said clerk on the certificate of the secretary of state, stating the amount that may be due.

114. Register abolished. 18 G. A., ch. 206, § 5. The office of register of the state land office is hereby abolished from and after the first Monday in January in the year 1883.

CHAPTERS 6 AND 7.

PUBLIC PRINTING AND BINDING.

[Chapters 6 and 7 of the Code, being §§ 94 to 110, inclusive, are repealed by 22 G. A., ch. 82, and the following sections substituted.]

115. Election of printer and binder; term. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 1. The state printer and the state binder shall be elected at each regular session of the general assembly, and shall hold their offices for two years from the time they enter upon the duties of such offices, which time shall be on the first day of May in the year following that in which they are elected; but from and after the year 1893 the term of each of the officers named shall begin on the first day of January in the odd-numbered year.

116. Offices. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 2. They shall keep their respective offices at the seat of government sufficiently equipped to enable them promptly to print and bind the laws, journals, reports, and to do all other printing and binding required for the state officers, or by or for the general assembly, or either branch thereof; provided, that nothing in this section shall be construed as including letter-heads, envelopes, or postal-cards, nor as interfering with the authority of the executive council to apportion so much of the public printing and binding as it may deem advisable to have done at the institution for the deaf and dumb.

117. Method of doing work. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 3. All such work shall be done in a neat, substantial, and workmanlike manner and promptly delivered to the proper officer, so that the public business shall not be delayed or suffer from any failure to have the work done in a reasonable and proper time.

118. Duties of officers. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 4. The state printer shall promptly deliver to the state binder the printed sheets of laws, journals, and other publications as the work progresses, as well as all other work requiring stitching or binding and the state binder shall, upon completion of the work as required, deliver the same to the secretary of state, taking his receipt therefor; and it is the duty of the secretary of state to see that the proper number of copies is so delivered. All printing which does not require binding shall be promptly delivered by the state printer to the secretary of state, or the officer ordering the work.

119. Order. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 5. No work shall be ordered of the state printer except upon a regular form of blank furnished by the secretary of state, and kept in his office. Whenever printing is ordered by either house of the general assembly the secretary or clerk thereof shall immediately notify the secretary of state of such order, and when such printing is done the same shall be delivered to the secretary of state for distribution subject to the instructions of the house ordering the printing.

120. Certificate. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 6. The secretary of state, upon the completion of any printing or binding for the state, or the presentation of any bill for such printing or binding, shall make examination of the work done and ascertain whether it has been done in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. If he find there has been a compliance herewith, he shall certify the same, stating the amount to which the officer presenting the bill, is entitled. In case such work has not been properly done, or any item in said bill has not in his judgment been earned, he shall refuse to certify as to such item, or shall state what reduced amount, if any, the officer is entitled to, as compensation for such defective work.

121. Warrant for work done. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 7. The auditor of state, upon presentation to him of the foregoing certificate, shall draw his warrant upon the treasurer of state, for the amount therein stated to be due.

122. Biennial reports. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 8. The regular biennial reports of the various officers, institutions, commissions, etc., required to be made by law, shall be laid before the governor of the state, in the odd-numbered years, at the times following:

(a) On or before August 15. Those of all boards of trustees of state institutions except the agricultural college.

(b) On or before September 15. Those of the fish commissioner, the board of health, the commission of pharmacy, the oil inspector, the mine inspectors, the visiting committee to the hospitals for the insane, the wardens of the penitentiaries, and the board of curators of the state historical society.

(c) On or before October 1. Those of the state librarian, and the commissioner of labor statistics, and that of the secretary of state pertaining to the state land office.

(d) On or before November 1. Those of the auditor of state, the treasurer of state, the superintendent of public instruction, the state university and the state normal school.

(e) On or before December 1. That of the board of trustees of the agricultural college, that of the adjutant-general and that of the secretary of state pertaining to criminal convictions.

123. Fiscal term. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 9. The biennial fiscal term of the state ends on the thirtieth day of June in each odd-numbered year, and the succeeding fiscal term begins on the day following; and the reports of officers and institutions shall cover the period thus indicated, and shall show the condition of their offices and institutions respectively on that day: Provided, however, that the period to be covered by the report of the superintendent of public instruction and the adjutant-general shall extend to the thirtieth day of September inclusive; and provided, further, that this section shall not apply to the agricultural college.

124. Printing reports. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 10. The governor shall cause the foregoing reports, and all others required by law to be made, to be printed. He shall however cause to be omitted from the printed copy all matters he may deem not of sufficient importance to warrant publication thereof at the state's expense. Such parts of the reports as emanate from boards or officers directly required by law to report, may be leaded with six to pica leads. All extracts copied therein as well as reports and papers submitted therewith shall be set solid. No tables of any character shall be leaded and all tables shall be set is (in) as compact a form as practicable. Itemized accounts of receipts and disbursements together with inventories, accompanying the reports, shall be omitted from the printed report, unless the governor deem the same of sufficient importance to warrant their publication. Provided, that this section shall apply to the reports of the state agricultural and state horticultural societies, and the stock breeders' association, and all officers and bodies required by law to make annual reports. Provided, further, that no banquet speeches or advertising shall be included in the printed proceedings of any report.

125. Number of reports. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 11. There shall be printed of the various public documents the number of copies hereinafter designated, to wit: Of the biennial message, twelve thousand copies; of the inaugural address, six thousand copies; of the biennial report of the auditor of state, six thousand copies; of the annual report of the auditor upon insurance, four thousand copies; of the report of the superintendent of public instruction, six thousand copies; of the report of the agricultural college, six thousand copies; of the report of the state board of health, five thousand five hundred copies; of the report of the commissioners of pharmacy, five thousand copies; and that of the secretary of state pertaining to lands, three thousand copies; of the reports of the state visiting committee to the hospitals for the insane, the state inspector of oils, and the examiners in dentistry, three thousand copies each; of the reports of joint committees of the general assembly to visit state institutions, three thousand copies; and of all other reports, three thousand copies. Provided that of the reports which may be required by virtue of statutes hereafter enacted, the number of copies to be printed thereof shall, where not provided for by law, be fixed by the executive council at any number not exceeding five thousand. Of said reports, five hundred copies each shall be bound in cloth and the remainder in double thick paper covers. Reports of legislative visiting and special committees shall be printed and stitched without covers.

126. Distribution — Binding. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 12. The secretary of state shall make distribution of the various public documents turned over to him, as follows:

(a) To the members of the general assembly six thousand copies of the message, fifteen hundred copies of the report of the auditor of state, superintendent of public instruction and agricultural college respectively, two thousand copies of the report of the commissioners of pharmacy, and of the secretary of state pertaining to lands; seven hundred copies of the reports of the joint visiting committee of the general assembly to the several state institutions; five hundred copies of the reports respectively of the state visiting committee to the hospitals for the insane, the state inspector of oils, and the examiners in dentistry; of the report of the state board of health, two thousand copies; of all other reports, fifteen hundred copies.

(b) Six hundred copies of the message; two hundred copies of each of the reports of the joint visiting committees, and five hundred copies of each of the other documents to remain with the state for the use of future general assemblies and special calls therefor.

(c) Fifteen hundred copies of each report shall be stitched and bound in half sheep containing a copy of each report, to be arranged as follows: The message, the maugural address, the reports of the auditor, the treasurer, the secretary pertaining to lands and other reports of officers and commissions not herein otherwise provided for, in the first volume; in the second volume, the report of the superintendent of public instruction to be followed by those of the university, the normal school, the agricultural college, the soldiers' orphans' home, the soldiers' home, the institution for the deaf and dumb, the college for the blind, the institution for the feeble-minded, the hospitals for the insane, the state visiting committee to the hospitals and the state historical society; in the third volume the message of the governor concerning pardons, the secretary's reports of convictions, and the reports of the industrial schools and the penitentiaries; in the fourth volume the reports of the commissioner of labor statistics and the mine inspectors; in the fifth volume the reports of the board of health, the veterinary surgeon, the commissioners of pharmacy, the oil inspector, the dental examiners and the weather service; in the sixth volume the reports of the railway commissioners and those of the executive council concerning the valuation of railroads. Other reports shall be placed with those of a kindred character, and all reports of joint legislative visiting committees to public institutions, etc., must follow those of such institutions respectively. Provided that any two volumes may be bound together at the discretion of the secretary of state. Some distinctive mark shall be put on the even-numbered pages of each document to indicate its place in the bound document, with the year of the report on each odd-numbered page after the manner of the Iowa documents of 1882, and in each volume shall be placed a table of contents of all the volumes. These fifteen hundred copies shall be distributed as follows: One copy to the lieutenant-governor, to the speaker, to each member of the general assembly, to the secretary of the senate, and the clerk of the house of representatives; one copy each to the governor of the state and his private secretary, the secretary of state, the auditor of state, the treasurer of state, the attorney-general, the superintendent of public instruction and the clerk and reporter of the supreme court and each of their deputies, the commissioner of labor statistics, the adjutant-general, the custodian of the capitol, the fish commissioner and the director of the weather service, and one copy to each of their several offices to remain therein; one copy to each judge of the supreme and district and superior courts; one copy to the offices of the board of health, the mine inspectors, the commission of pharmacy and the railroad commissioners to remain therein; one copy to each railroad commissioner, mine inspector and commissioner of pharmacy; one copy to the state librarian and the secretary of the state board of health respectively; one copy to each officer not hereinbefore enumerated required by law to make annual or biennial reports; one copy to each member of the boards required to make annual or biennial reports; one copy to each state institution to remain therein; one copy to the office of each county auditor to remain therein; eighty copies to the state historical society; one copy to each college and incorporated institution; one copy to each public library and literary institution having a number of books for circulation not less than five hundred; one copy to each ex-governor of the state; one copy to each senator and representative in congress from this state during his term of office; one copy to each of the other states and each territory reciprocating the same, and to each foreign nation or province desiring to exchange like reports; twenty-five copies to the state library. The remaining copies to be placed under the control of the executive council, to be disposed of as that body may see fit, the persons so receiving them to pay express charges thereon.

(d) The remaining copies to be distributed to the officers, institutions and committees making report.

127. Journals. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 13. The state printer shall be furnished daily, during the sessions of the general assembly, with a copy of the journal of each house thereof, at such hours and by such officers as may be directed by the houses respectively. The state printer shall thereupon print and after the same are properly stitched at the state bindery deliver for the use of the senate and house respectively on the following legislative day, at such hours as may be prescribed by the proper officer, two hundred copies of the proceedings of the senate and three hundred copies of those of the house of representatives. Provided that when session is held after seven o'clock p. m. the proceedings thereof shall be furnished the printer as soon after the close of such session as practicable.

128. Correction. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 14. Upon the return to the printer by the proper officer of each body of the daily proceedings corrected as shall be directed by the house to which they pertain, the printer shall correct the same, the secretary and clerk correcting the written journal when necessary to correspond.

129. Printing. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 15. The state printer shall forthwith make the corrections indicated, print three hundred copies of the senate proceedings and five hundred copies of the house proceedings, and deliver them to the state binder sufficiently early to permit the latter to fold, stitch and deliver them to the secretary of the senate and clerk of the house, respectively, not later than noon of the third day following that to which the proceedings pertain. Of the printed proceedings of the senate, one hundred and twenty-five copies shall be delivered to the sergeant-at-arms of the house for distribution therein, and seventy-five copies of the proceedings of the house shall be delivered to the sergeant-at-arms of the senate for distribution therein. The remaining copies shall be under the control of the respective houses for distribution.

130. For future use. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 16. The state printer shall thereupon proceed to print twenty-five hundred copies each of the journals for distribution as hereinafter provided. Within fifteen days after the adjournment of the general assembly, a complete and thorough index of each journal shall be delivered to the state printer, who shall forthwith print the same, and within fifteen days thereafter deliver the sheets complete to the state binder, who shall within thirty days thereafter bind one thousand copies of each journal in half sheep and fifteen hundred in paper covers, and deliver the same to the secretary of state.

131. How distributed. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 17. The secretary of state shall make distribution of the journals of the respective houses as follows:

(a) Of the bound journals of the respective houses five copies of each shall be distributed to each member thereof, five copies each to the secretary of the senate and clerk of the house respectively; and one copy to each officer, employee and reporter of the respective houses.

(b) The remaining copies shall be distributed as follows; one copy each to the governor, lieutenant-governor, the state officers and deputies as provided in section twelve, [§ 121] for the distribution of the documents. Also one copy of each journal to each newspaper of general circulation in the state.

(c) The undistributed number shall be under the control of the executive council.

132. Index to journals. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 18. The officers making the index shall receive therefor such pay as may be allowed by the general assembly; but in the absence of such provision each shall receive such compensation as may be allowed by the executive council, the auditor drawing his warrant therefor upon certificate of the secretary of state that the work is done.

133. Original journals. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 19. The original journals of the senate and house shall be filed with the secretary of state by the secretary and clerk respectively.

The journals of the respective houses are of either or both of such houses: Kochler v. Hill, 60-543.

134. Printing session laws. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 20. Within fifty days after the secretary of state shall deliver to the state printer a copy of the laws, joint resolutions and memorials, passed at any session of the general assembly he shall print all the copies thereof that may be by law required and the secretary of state shall within five days after the same are printed make out and deliver to such printer an index of the same who shall within ten days after receiving such index, print the same, and deliver to the state binder such copies in sheets as are required for binding; but this section shall not apply to any revised code adopted by the general assembly.

135. Specifications for laws and journals. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 21. The laws, journals, and all other printing in book form shall be set in long primer, brevier, or nonpareil type: The titles to the laws and resolutions, all indexes, and all messages, reports, and resolutions copied in the journals, to be in brevier; rule and figure work in either brevier or nonpareil as may be directed by the officer ordering the work; all other matter to be in long primer. The pages shall measure not less than seventeen hundred and fifty ems. Whenever a subject is begun, whether it be the name of member or otherwise, the subject-matter shall follow in the same line, unless such line is filled by such word. The report of each motion or resolution shall be embraced in one paragraph and where the yeas and nays are given each division list shall be in one paragraph, with the names set in alphabetical order and the result in the last line.

136. Paper receipt book. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 22. The secretary of state shall provide a "state" paper receipt book, and whenever he shall deliver to the state printer paper for any kind of printing, a receipt therefor shall be entered in said book, which receipt shall describe the kind and quality of paper so delivered.

136a. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 41. The following named statutes and parts of statutes are hereby repealed: Chapters six and seven, title two of the code; also sections three thousand seven hundred and sixty-four, three thousand seven hundred and sixty-five, three thousand seven hundred and sixty-six, three thousand seven hundred and sixty-seven, and three thousand seven hundred and sixty-eight of the code; chapter one hundred and fifty-nine of the acts of the sixteenth general assembly; chapter twenty-seven and chapter one hundred and seventy-five of the acts of the nineteenth general assembly.

[The provisions of this act as to compensation of printer and binder are to be found with other provisions as to compensation of state officers in chapter one, title twenty-three.]

CHAPTER 7a.

CUSTODIAN OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

137. Governor shall appoint; qualification; bond. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 1. The governor with the advice of and consent of the senate shall appoint a custodian of public buildings and property, who shall have the care of the capitol, together with all the grounds and premises appurtenant thereto belonging to the state, and such custodian shall before entering upon the discharge of his duties, qualify as provided by law, and execute and file with the secretary of state a bond in the penal sum of one thousand dollars, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties, with sureties thereto, to be approved by the governor.

138. Term of office. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 2. His term of office shall be for two years, which shall expire on the thirty-first day of March in each even-numbered year: Provided, that he may be removed at any time for cause by the governor; and provided further, that if a vacancy should occur in said office when the general assembly is not in session it shall be filled by appointment by the governor, but the person so appointed shall hold his office only until the next general assembly shall have been permanently organized, when the vacancy shall be filled by appointment of the governor by and with the advice and consent of the senate, which appointment shall be for the unexpired portion of the term for which the appointment had been made.

139. Salary. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 3. He shall be paid a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year, which shall be paid on proper vouchers as the salaries of other state officers are paid.

140. Duties. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 4. It shall be the duty of the custodian to take charge of and protect the capitol building and all furniture and other property connected therewith; to preserve the same from injury; at all proper times to open and ventilate the several apartments and constantly to keep every part thereof cleansed and in proper order, and at all suitable hours, to personally or by proper escort, attend visitors who may wish to view the same, or any part thereof intrusted to his care free of expense; to control and take care of the capitol grounds, walks, fences, trees, shrubbery, statuary, and other property of the state on or about the capitol grounds, or premises, and to keep the same clean and in good order; to have charge of, control and care for all public buildings and grounds, belonging to the state, at the seat of government, not by law placed in charge of some other person, and to protect and care for the same.

141. Purchases. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 5. The custodian is hereby empowered and it shall be his duty to purchase from time to time under the orders of the executive council such furniture and stores as may be required for his use in carrying out the provision of this act in the capitol or other buildings belonging to the state, at the seat of government, and under like orders to superintend and cause such repairs to be made to the capitol or other property in his care, as shall be deemed necessary to its protection.

142. Contract, control and protection of building. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 6. He is hereby authorized and empowered to contract for and have supplied all fuel, lights, water, ice, telegraph and telephone service required in the convenient and efficient discharge of the duties of the legislative, executive and judicial and other officers of the state at the capitol, or of the state boards or other official boards or representatives of the state at the seat of government, but all contracts and expenditures made by him for any of the purposes enumerated, or for any other purpose must be approved by the executive council. And to employ such labor as shall be required in carrying out the duties imposed by this act, to have charge of the janitor and police force in and about the capitol at all times and employ and discharge the same or any part thereof as the public interest may demand, but nothing in this act shall deprive either house of the general assembly from employing and controlling such officers and janitors as it shall deem necessary for the personal convenience and comfort of its members; also to assign with the advice and consent of the executive council, official apartments in the capitol and state buildings at the seat of government to such state officials, boards, or bodies, as shall be entitled thereto and have not already had apartments assigned to them; and to institute the proper civil or criminal proceedings in the name of the state, with the advice and consent of the attorney-general, against any person for any injury which may be committed on or to the public property in his care or which shall be necessary to protect the same from any injury or threatened injury.

143. Records; report. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 7. He shall keep in his office a complete record and lists of all lands and other property of the state in his care at the seat of government, together with accurate plans and surveys of the public grounds thereat; and make a report to the governor on the last days of March, June and September, and an annual report on the last day of December, and the report for the two years preceding the meeting of the general assembly shall be consolidated for the use of the general assembly, and shall show in detail the manner in which all appropriations were applied and expenditures made upon the public grounds and buildings in his charge, the condition of the public buildings, grounds and property in his charge, and the measures necessary to be taken for the care and preservation of such public property, and likewise to report any casualties happening to or upon the property under his care, and the causes of the same, and render an itemized account of the expenditures made by him during such period, with recommendations as to the manner in which the service under his management could be made more efficient or economical to the state; and he shall perform such other duties as may be imposed upon him by law or by order of the executive council.

144. Control of offices. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 8. Nothing in this act shall deprive any officer, board, court or commission to whom official apartments are or may be assigned in the capitol from controlling the same.

145. Monthly pay-roll. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 9. At the end of each month he shall under oath make out a list of the expenses incurred under this act itemizing the same with the names of the persons entitled to payment thereunder and the amounts thereof, on which, when approved by the governor, the auditor shall issue warrants in the amounts and to the persons entitled thereto.

146. No interest in contracts. 21 G. A., ch. 148, § 10. It shall be unlawful for the custodian to have any pecuniary interest, directly or indirectly, in any contract for supplies or labor provided for by this act or any business enterprise involving any expenditure by the state, and a violation of the provisions of this section shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars and be removed from office.

[The provisions of prior acts with reference to the custody of the capitol building by the board of capitol commissioners during its erection are evidently superseded by the foregoing, unless perhaps it be that the provision of the following section as to use of the legislative chambers is still in force.]

146a. Use of senate and house chambers. 20 G. A., ch. 140, § 2. The said board of commissioners shall make all suitable provisions for the heating, lighting, ventilating, cleaning and care of said building; shall cause the rooms that are furnished to be kept cleaned and in proper order for use at all times and see that all parts of the building are kept in good repair; shall make all necessary provisions for the admittance of visitors to all furnished parts of the building during business hours by furnishing the proper escort therefor. Provided the senate chamber and the hall of the house of representatives shall not be used for any purposes whatever except for legislature purposes.

CHAPTER 8.

OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL AND THE CENSUS.

147. Who compose council. 111. The governor, auditor, secretary, and treasurer of state, or any three of them, shall constitute the executive council. [R., § 993.]

148. Duties in relation to census. 112. The executive council must prepare and cause to be printed suitable blank forms for the purpose of taking the census, which, together with such printed directions as will be calculated to secure uniformity in the returns, must be furnished to the respective county auditors, and by them to the township assessors, on or before the first Monday in January of the year in which the census is to be taken. [R., § 995.]

149. Census, how taken. 113. The township assessor of each township shall, at the time of assessing property in the year 1875, and every ten years thereafter, take an enumeration of the inhabitants in his township. [R., § 991.]

150. Duty of assessor. 114. Said assessor shall make a return on or before the first day of June of such enumeration to the auditor of the county, who shall make and forward to the secretary of state on or before the first day of September in the current year, an abstract of said census return showing:

The total number of males;

The total number of females;

The number of persons entitled to vote;

The number of militia;

The number of foreigners not naturalized;

The total number of children between five and twenty-one years of age;

The number of families and the number of dwelling-houses;

The number of acres of improved and unimproved lands;

An enumeration of agriculture, mining and manufacturing statistics, including the value of the products of the farm, herd, orchard, and dairy, each, and the value of manufactured articles, and of minerals sold, the year preceding the census;

The number of miles of railway finished and unfinished;

The number of colleges and universities, with the number of pupils therein.

[R., § 992.]

151. Other matters. 115. The executive council may require such other matters to be ascertained and returned as they deem expedient. [R., § 994.]

152. Record and publication of. 116. The secretary of state shall file and preserve in his office the abstracts received from the county auditors, and cause an abstract thereof to be recorded in a book to be by him prepared for that purpose, and published in such manner as the executive council may direct. [R., § 996.]

153. Failure of assessor. 117. When any township assessor fails to make an accurate return of the census as herein provided, the county auditor may appoint some suitable person to take the census according to the provisions of this chapter, at as early a day as practicable; which shall be done at the expense of the county in which the service is performed. [R., § 997.]

154. Returns. 118. The executive council may require any auditor failing to make returns as herein provided, to send up the returns as soon as practicable at the expense of the delinquent county. [R., § 998.]

155. Journal of council. 119. The secretary of state shall keep a journal in which shall be entered all acts of the executive council. [R., § 999.]

156. Custody of state property. 120; 16 G. A., ch. 142 § 8; 20 G. A., ch. 119. The executive council shall have the charge, care, and custody of the property of the state, when no other provision is made, and shall procure for the several offices of the governor, secretary of state, auditor and treasurer of state, register of state land office, superintendent of public instruction, attorney-general and state librarian, and clerk and reporter of the supreme court, fuel, lights, blank books, postage, furniture, and any other thing necessary to enable such officers to promptly and efficiently perform the duties of their several offices; the accounts for any expenditures under this section, including repairs of the state house and such other necessary and lawful expenses as are not otherwise provided for shall be audited upon the certificate of such council and the warrants drawn therefor paid by the treasurer of state. The executive council shall report to each regular session of the general assembly the amounts expended, and in general terms what for and how much for each office.

CHAPTER 9.

OF DUTIES ASSIGNED TO TWO OR MORE OFFICERS JOINTLY; AND GENERAL REGULATIONS.

157. Supplies of paper and stationery. 121. The executive council shall make estimates of all the paper needed for the public printing, and of all the stationery necessary for the general assembly, the public offices, and the supreme court; and the auditor shall advertise for sealed proposals of the quantity, quality, and kinds thereof which may be needed, in two newspapers at the seat of government, and in such other newspapers as they may deem expedient, requiring a delivery of the articles at least ninety days before the same will be wanted, and bids for the same shall be opened by said executive council, at such time as may be fixed by said advertisement; and they shall award the contracts for furnishing such stationery, paper, etc., to the lowest responsible bidders therefor, who shall give security, to be approved by them, for the performance of their contracts; and upon the delivery of the articles contracted for at the office of the secretary of state, in compliance with the terms of said contracts, and presenting receipts therefor, signed by the secretary to the auditor of state, he shall issue to the contractors his warrants on the treasurer for the amount due, which shall be paid out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. [R., §§ 61, 81, 2169; C., '51, §§ 45, 60.]

158. Custody of. 122. The secretary of state shall take charge of said articles, and furnish the public printer all the paper required for the various kinds of public printing in such quantities as may be needed for the prompt discharge of his duties; and he shall supply the governor, secretary of state, auditor, treasurer, judges of the supreme court and clerk thereof, attorney-general, supreme court reporter, superintendent of public instruction, register of the state land office, general assembly and clerks or secretaries thereof, such quantities as may be required for the public use and necessary to enable them to perform their several duties as required by law, taking receipts of the proper officers therefor. [R., § 2170; 10 G. A., ch. 22, § 12.]

159. Stationery for committees. 15 G. A., ch. 1, § 1. It is hereby made the duty of the secretary of state to furnish to and supply the standing committees of the senate and house of representatives, and any select or special committees that are or may be raised or appointed by the general assembly, or either branch thereof, with all the stationery necessary for the use of such committees.

160. Mode of drawing. 15 G. A., ch. 1, § 2. In order to draw such stationery, the chairman of each of said committees shall from time to time, as he may deem necessary, make out his requisition on the secretary of state for the amount and kind that is deemed necessary, and upon presentation thereof, to said secretary, he shall deliver the same to said chairman and take a receipt therefor, which requisition and receipt shall be filed in the office of said secretary, and shall be a sufficient voucher to him for such stationery.

161. Contingent fund. 123. Where an appropriation shall be made as a contingent fund for any office or officer, or for any other purpose to be expended for the state, the officer or person having charge of such fund shall keep an account therewith, showing when, to whom, and for what, any portion of said fund has been expended, and to take and preserve receipts for all amounts expended. [R., §§ 2172, 2173.]

162. Report of contingent fund. 124. Such officer or person shall, on or before the first day of November preceding each regular session of the general assembly, report to the auditor of state, stating in detail in what manner such funds have been expended, and shall not be credited with any expenditure unless the same has been done in the manner contemplated by the law making the appropriation, nor unless he has preserved and filed with such auditor proper receipts and vouchers for each sum expended. All funds not properly accounted for may be recovered by the state from the person or officer charged therewith, with fifty per cent. damages on the same. The auditor shall, in his report to the governor, state the condition in detail of each of the appropriations referred to in this and the preceding section. [R., §§ 2174, 2175, 2176.]

163. Oath of regents, trustees, etc. 126. Every person appointed or elected a regent, trustee, manager, commissioner, or inspector, or a member of any board of regents, trustees, managers, commissioners, or inspectors, now or hereafter created or provided by law for the government, control, management, or inspection of any public building, improvement, or institution whatever, owned, controlled, or managed, in whole or in part, by or under the authority or direction of this state, shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties as such regent, trustee, manager, commissioner, or inspector, take and subscribe an oath, in substance and form as follows: "I (here insert affiant's name) do solemnly swear that I will support the constitution of the United States, and of the state of Iowa; that I will honestly and faithfully discharge the duties of (here describe the nature of the office, trust, or position as regent, trustee, manager, commissioner, or inspector, as the case may be), according to the laws that now are, or that may hereafter be in force regulating said institution, and prescribing the duties of regents, trustees, managers, commissioners or inspectors thereof (as the case may be); that I will, in all things, conform to the directions contained in said law or laws, and that I will not, directly or indirectly, as such regent, trustee, manager, commissioner, or inspector (as the case may be), make, or enter into, or consent to any contract or agreement, expressed or implied, whereby any greater sum of money shall be expended or agreed to be expended than is expressly authorized by law at the date of such contract or agreement. [R., § 2180.]

164. Not to contract beyond appropriation. 127. Any officer who shall be empowered to expend any public moneys, or to direct such expenditures, is hereby prohibited from making any contract for the erection of any building, or any other purpose, which shall contemplate any excess of expenditures, beyond the terms of the law under which said officer was appointed. [R., § 2181.]

165. Oaths filed. 128. Oaths required by this chapter shall be filed in the office of the auditor of state, and he shall not draw any warrant on the state treasury for the purposes for which said officers are appointed, until such oaths are so filed. [R., § 2183.]

166. Distribution of documents. 131. Whenever any public documents are in the hands of the secretary of state, the distribution of which is not otherwise provided for, he shall transmit one copy of each to every public library in the state which shall be regularly incorporated, and which shall also have filed with the secretary of state an affidavit of its president and secretary, stating that it is in actual operation as a public library within this state, and contains more than two hundred volumes. [10 G. A., ch. 30, §§ 1, 3.]

167. Books and accounts subject to inspection. 132. The books, accounts, vouchers, and funds belonging to, or kept in any state office or institution, or in the charge or under the control of any state officer or person having charge of any state funds or property, shall, at all times, be open or subject to the inspection of the governor or any committee appointed by him, or by the general assembly or either house thereof, and the governor shall see that such inspection of the office of state treasurer is made at least four times in every twelve months. [R., §§ 80, 90; C., '51, §§ 59, 69.]

OFFICERS OF STATE INSTITUTIONS.

168. Contracting debts. 17 G. A., ch. 67, § 1. It shall be unlawful for any trustee, superintendent, warden, or other officer, of any of the educational, penal, or charitable institutions of this state to contract any indebtedness against said institutions, or the state, in excess of the appropriation made for said institution; provided, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the incurring of an indebtedness on account of support funds for state institutions upon the prior written direction of the executive council specifying the items and amount of such indebtedness to be increased and the necessity therefor.

169. Diversion of funds. 17 G. A., ch. 67, § 2. It shall be unlawful for any superintendent, warden, trustee, or other officer of any of the institutions mentioned in section one of this act [§ 168] to divert any money that has been or may be appropriated for the use of said institutions to any other purpose than the specific purpose named therefor in the act appropriating the same.

170. Penalty. 17 G. A., ch. 67, § 3. Any person violating any of the provisions of sections one and two of this act [§§ 168, 169] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment.

171. Officer not to be interested. 17 G. A., ch. 144, § 1. It shall be unlawful for any trustee, warden, superintendent, steward, or any other officer of any educational, penal, charitable, or reformatory institution, supported in whole or in part by the state, to be interested directly or indirectly in any contract to furnish or in furnishing provisions, material, or supplies of any kind, to or for the institution of which he is an officer; and it shall be unlawful for any such trustee, warden, superintendent, steward, or other officer, directly or indirectly, to receive in money or other valuable thing any commission, percentage, discount, or rebate on any provision, material, or supplies furnished for or to any institution of which he is an officer. And it shall be unlawful for any such trustee, warden, superintendent, steward, or other officer of any state institution to be directly or indirectly interested in any contract with the state to build, repair, or furnish any institution of which he may be an officer.

172. Penalty. 17 G. A., ch. 144, § 2. Any person violating the provisions of section one of this act [§ 171] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, in the discretion of the court, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year, or both, such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

TITLE III.

OF THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE ORGANIZATION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

[See Const., art. 5.]

173. Terms. 21 G. A., ch. 59, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 34. The supreme court shall be held at the seat of government, and shall convene and hold three terms each year, one of which shall commence on the third Tuesday in January, one on the second Tuesday in May, and one on the first Tuesday in October. Each of said terms of court shall be for the submission and determination of causes and for the transaction of such other business as shall properly come before the court. All causes on the docket shall be heard at each term unless continued or otherwise disposed of by order of the court. The court shall remain in session so far as practicable until it is determined what the opinion of the court shall be in all causes submitted to it except in causes where a re-argument is ordered. Judgments of affirmance, rulings and orders in causes submitted, and orders authorized by law may be made and entered by the court at any time regardless of the terms of court.

174. Bailiff. 21 G. A., ch. 59, § 2. The court is hereby authorized to appoint the necessary bailiffs to attend the court and to perform such other duties and execute such orders as may be directed or ordered by the court. Each bailiff shall receive two dollars and fifty cents for a day's service to be paid out of the contingent fund on the order of the chief justice. The court may also at any time require the attendance and services of the sheriff of Polk county.

175. 21 G. A., ch. 59, § 4. Sections numbered 133, 134, 135, 136, and 137 of the code, and all acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

176. Expenses. 138. All bills for contingent expenses shall contain the items thereof, and shall be certified to as correct by the chief justice before being audited. [C., '51, § 1548; 13 G. A., ch. 122, § 9.]

177. Number of judges. 16 G. A., ch. 7, § 1. The supreme court shall consist of five judges, three of whom shall constitute a quorum to hold court.

178. Quorum. 139. The presence of three judges is necessary for the transaction of business, but one alone may adjourn from day to day, or to a particular day, or until the next term. [C., '51, § 1551; 10 G. A., ch. 23, § 4.]

179. Divided court. 140. When the court is equally divided in opinion, the judgment of the court below shall stand affirmed, but the decision is of no further force or authority. [R., § 2628; C., '51, § 1552; 10 G. A., ch. 23, § 5.]

The court has, however, the same power in such case as in any other to grant a rehearing: Zeigler v. Vance, 3-528.

If, upon rehearing, the court is equally divided as to whether its first opinion should stand judgment will be affirmed as if such division had occurred on first hearing: Richards v. Burden, 59-723, 754.

180. Failure to attend. 141. If all the judges fail to attend on the first day of the term, the clerk must enter the fact on record, and the court shall stand adjourned until the next day, and so on until the fourth day; then, if none of the judges appear, the court shall stand adjourned until the next term. [R., § 2629; C., '51, § 1553.]

181. Stand continued. 142. No process or proceeding shall in any manner be affected by an adjournment or failure to hold court, but all shall stand continued to the next term, without any special order to that effect. [R., § 2630; C., '51, § 1554.]

182. Opinions filed. 143. The opinions of the court, and those of any judge dissenting therefrom, on all questions reviewed on appeal, as well as such motions, collateral questions, and points of practice as such court may think of sufficient importance, shall be reduced to writing and filed with the clerk. [R., §§ 2636, 2737; C., '51, §§ 1560-1.]

Construed: Baker v. Kerr, 13-384.

183. Dissents. 144. The records and reports must in all cases show whether a decision was made by a full bench, and whether either, and if so, which of the judges dissented from the decision. [R., § 2638; C., '51, § 1562.]

184. What cases reported. 145. If the decision, in the judgment of the court, is not of sufficient general importance to be published, it shall be so designated, in which case it shall not be included in the reports, and no case shall be reported except by order of the full bench.

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT.

185. Office; duty. 146. The office of the clerk of the supreme court shall be kept at the seat of government, and he shall keep a complete record of all proceedings of the court. [R., §§ 2647, 2648; C., '51, § 1564.]

186. Custody of opinions. 147. He must not allow any written opinion of the court to be removed from his office except by the reporter, but shall permit any one to examine or copy the same, and shall, when required, make a copy and certify to the same. [R., § 2649; C., '51, § 1565.]

187. Announce decision. 148. He shall promptly announce by letter any decision rendered to one of the attorneys of each side, when such attorneys are not in attendance at the place of court. [R., § 2650; C., '51, § 1565.]

188. Make record. 149. He shall record every opinion rendered by the court as soon as filed, and shall perform all the duties pertaining to his office. [R., § 2651; C., '51, § 1565.]

OF THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

189. Appear for the state. 150. The attorney-general shall attend in person at the seat of government during the session of the general assembly and supreme court, and appear for the state, prosecute and defend all actions and proceedings, civil and criminal, in which the state shall be a party or interested, when requested to do so by the governor, executive council, or general assembly, and shall prosecute and defend for the state all causes in the supreme court in which the state is a party or interested. [R., § 124.]

When a criminal case is appealed to the supreme court, the attorney-general obtains control of it, but any agreements made by the district attorney while the case is in the lower court are binding as against the attorney-general: State v. Fleming, 13-443.

190. Written opinions. 151. When requested, he shall give his opinion in writing upon all questions of law submitted to him by the general assembly or either house thereof, governor, lieutenant-governor, auditor, secretary of state, treasurer, superintendent of public instruction, register of the state land office, executive council, and district [county] attorneys. He shall, when required, prepare drafts for contracts, forms, and other writings, which may be required for the use of the state, and shall report to the general assembly, when requested, upon any business pertaining to his office. [R., § 125.]

191. Pay over money. 152. All moneys received by him belonging to the people of the state, or received in his official capacity, shall be paid into the state treasury. [R., § 126.]

192. Office; keep record. 153. The executive council shall furnish him a suitable office at the seat of government. He shall keep in proper books, a record of all official opinions, and a register of all actions prosecuted and defended by him, and of all proceedings had in relation thereto, which books shall be delivered to his successor. [R., §§ 127, 130, 131.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE SUPREME COURT REPORTER.

193. May take opinion. 154. When the opinions filed at any term of the supreme court are recorded by the clerk, the reporter may take and retain the same for a period not exceeding four months to prepare a report therefrom, but within such time they shall be returned to and remain in the office of such clerk. [10 G. A., ch. 22, § 3.]

[Sees. 155, 156 and 157 repealed by § 205.]

194. Copyright of reports. 158. The copyright of all reports prepared or published after the first day of January, A. D. 1875, shall be the property of the state. But the reporter shall own the copyright of all reports published before that time, and the supreme court may order the publication of a new edition of any volume of which the copyright is owned by the reporter when the public interest requires it, and may require compliance therewith within six months by an order entered of record; and if the reporter neglects or refuses to comply with such order, then such copyright shall be forfeited to the state. [Same, § 9.]

195. Disposition of reports. 159; 22 G. A., ch. 33. The copies received by the secretary of state shall be disposed of by him as follows: Two copies of each volume to the library of congress and the library of the supreme court of the United States; one copy to the library of each state and territory in the United States, to each judge of the supreme, district, and superior courts, to the clerk of the supreme court and attorney-general; fifty copies to the state library, to be and remain therein as a part thereof, and one copy to each county in the state, and two copies to each county where the district court is held in more than one place, one copy to be given to each place where court is held, and one copy to the supreme court reporter, and twenty copies to the law department of the state university, and twenty copies to the state historical society for exchange in such manner as the proper officers thereof think advisable, and the remaining copies, together with all reports now in the office of governor, secretary, auditor, treasurer of state, and register of the land office, and superintendent of public instruction, shall be used by the trustees of the state library in exchange for such books on law or equity, or reports of other states as they may select. All books received by such exchange shall be deposited in and become a part of the state library. [Same, § 10; 14 G. A., ch. 109, § 8.]

PUBLICATION OF SUPREME COURT REPORTS.

196. Preparing; publishing. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 125. As soon as practicable after sufficient opinions are announced to make a volume, as herein provided, the supreme court reporter shall furnish and deliver at his office at Des Moines, Iowa, to the person, persons or corporation having the contract with the state for publishing the same, copies of such opinions, and with each opinion a syllabus, a brief statement of the facts involved, and, in all cases where he may deem it of sufficient importance, the legal propositions made by counsel in the argument, with the authorities cited, when the same have been prepared and furnished by counsel in a brief form and in a manner suitable for publication, but the argument shall not be reported at length; and within twenty days after the proof sheets for a volume have been furnished to him by the publishers at his office in Des Moines, Iowa, he shall furnish to such publishers an index and table of cases to such volume. The publishers shall furnish to the reporter without delay, as soon as they shall be issued, two copies of the revised proof sheets of the opinions, headnotes, index and table of cases of each volume, for correction and approval by the reporter and judges of the supreme court, and shall cause such corrections to be made therein as shall be indicated by the reporter or said judges. Each of said volumes shall contain not less than seven hundred and fifty, nor more than eight hundred pages, exclusive of the table of cases and index, and the workmanship and quality of material shall in every particular be equal to the first issue of volume forty of the Iowa supreme court reports, and shall be approved and accepted by a majority of the judges of the supreme court.

197. Copyright. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 2. The copyrights of all the supreme court reports hereafter published shall vest in the secretary of state for the benefit of the people of this state, but this shall not be construed to prevent the contractor, by whom any volume is published, his representatives or assigns, from continuing the exclusive publication and sale of such volume so long as he or they shall, in all respects, comply with the requirements of this act in respect to the character, sale and price of such volume.

198. Contract for publication; price per volume. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 3. The supreme court reporter shall have no pecuniary interest in such reports, but the same shall be published under the contract, to be entered into by the executive council with the person, persons or corporation, who shall agree to publish and sell the same on the terms most advantageous to the people of this state, at a price not to exceed two dollars per volume, of the size and quality as provided for in this act. And if any such volume shall, in any way, or from any cause, contain more than eight hundred pages, no increased or additional price shall be charged therefor.

199. Proposal. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 4. The executive council shall, commencing in the first week in April, A. D. 1880, and every eight years thereafter, advertise weekly in six different newspapers in different localities in this state, for the term of six weeks, that sealed proposals will be received at the office of the secretary of state for printing, publishing and selling the said reports for the term of eight years next after the first day of June of said year, at a certain rate per volume, to be stated in said proposal, not exceeding the maximum price fixed by this act, and in accordance with the provisions of this act.

200. Deposit. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 5. Each bidder shall deposit with the state treasurer the sum of one thousand dollars before making his proposal, to be forfeited to the state in case he shall not make a contract according to his proposal if accepted, and according to the requirements of this act, and shall take a receipt from said treasurer and deposit the same with his proposal, and upon entering into the contract herein provided, or upon the proposal being rejected, the said sum shall be returned.

201. Terms of contract with publisher. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 6. The successful bidder shall enter into a contract that he will publish the supreme court reports of the state, of the quality, style and character, in all respects, as set out in section one [§ 196] of this act; that he will publish and deliver to the secretary of state, at the capitol in Des Moines, two hundred and fifty copies, free of cost for publication or delivery, at the earliest practicable time and within sixty days after the delivery of the manuscripts for any one copy of such reports to the publishers; that he will stereotype the same, and at all times keep the same on sale in the state of Iowa, to residents of this state, for actual use, at the contract price, in suitable quantities, in the city of Des Moines; that he will furnish the state any number of additional copies that may be required for its own use at the contract price, and procure new stereotype plates whenever the original plates shall become defaced or destroyed; and the said contract shall fully provide for the carrying into effect of all the provisions of this act, and shall be made within thirty days after he is notified of the acceptance of his proposal.

202. Bond. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 7. The successful bidder shall, at the time of making his contract, execute and file with the treasurer of state a bond, in the penal sum of ten thousand dollars, conditioned to fulfill such contract in all particulars, with at least two sufficient sureties, residents of this state, to be approved by the executive council of the state. Such bond shall, by its terms, be the joint and several obligations of the persons executing it. If the successful bidder shall fail to complete his contract, or shall forfeit the same for any cause, the executive council shall relet the contract as soon thereafter as practicable, in the manner provided in this act; provided, however, that such bidder, in lieu of sureties to such bond, may deposit therewith bonds of the United States, payable to the bearer, amounting to not less than ten thousand dollars.

203. Contract. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 8. The contract of the successful bidder required by this act shall contain, among others, the following covenants on his part:

FIRST.—That he will not take out in his own name, nor procure to be taken out in the name of any person other than the secretary of state of this state, a copyright upon any volume of the supreme court reports published under such contract; and that upon any breach of this covenant he will pay to the treasurer of this state the sum of two thousand dollars as liquidated damages.

SECOND.—That in case it shall be determined in any action upon the bond of such contractor that he has failed in any respect to comply with the provisions of this act or his contract, the executive council may declare the contract forfeited; and that, upon such forfeiture so declared, such contractor will, upon demand, transfer to the secretary of state of this state, for the use of the state, the stereotyped plates of each volume of such reports published under such contract, or in default thereof will pay to the treasurer of this state two thousand dollars for each such volume as liquidated damages for a failure to make such transfer, and such failure shall be deemed a breach of the conditions of such bond, and such liquidated damages may be recovered by action on such bond.

204. Compensation of reporter. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 9. The supreme court reporter shall receive as his compensation for all services up to the first day of July, 1880, such sums as shall be paid to him by the state under existing laws for the publication of the supreme court reports, up to and including volume fifty-one. After the first day of July, 1880, the supreme court reporter shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars, payable quarterly upon the certificate of the judges of said court that he has properly performed the duties of reporter as required by this act.

205. 18 G. A., ch. 60, § 10. Sections 155, 156, 157 and 160, of chapter 4, title III, of the code, and all acts and parts of acts conflicting with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed; provided, that the passage of this act shall not be construed to affect the publication of the supreme court reports up to and including volume fifty-one; but in all other respects the provisions of this act shall be in force from the time it takes effect as hereinafter provided.

OF THE DISTRICT COURT AND JUDGES THEREOF.

206. Jurisdiction. 161. The district court shall have and exercise general original jurisdiction, both civil and criminal, where not otherwise provided, and appellate jurisdiction in all criminal matters. Such court shall have a general supervision over all inferior courts and officers in all criminal matters, to prevent and correct abuses where no other remedy is provided. [R., § 2663; C., '51, § 1576; 13 G. A., ch. 153, § 2.]

[Further as to the jurisdiction of the district court, see §§ 239, 240.

Jurisdiction: The district court is a court of general jurisdiction. It may have jurisdiction over any case brought within its district, except so far as the exercise of its jurisdiction is prescribed by statute. The general and unlimited scope of its jurisdiction is illustrated by the fact that it is styled the district court for the state, held in and for a particular county, and its judges are judges of the state with authority to grant writs running into every part of the state. The legislature cannot deprive it of its jurisdiction or limit such jurisdiction, but the manner of its exercise may be prescribed by law: Laird v. Dickerson, 40-665.

The jurisdiction of the district court, which is a superior court of general original jurisdiction, can only be taken away by express words or irresistible implication. Therefore, held, that Revision, § 2395, which prohibited the bringing of an action in that court on claims against an estate for a mere money demand, except with the approbation of the county court, was not intended to do away with the jurisdiction of the district court, but merely as a restraint upon the plaintiff: Sterrett v. Robinson, 17-61; and that the failure on the part of the plaintiff to obtain such leave must be set up as a defense in the district court, and could not be made a ground of collateral attack on the judgment: Cooley v. Smith, 17-99.

The statutes conferring jurisdiction upon the probate court did not defeat or oust the general jurisdiction of the district court: Hartin v. Stevenson, 30-371.

As the district court is one of general jurisdiction, its powers are such as to give it cognizance of proceedings by creditors to compel an administrator to sell real estate for debts, and of all other proceedings except where jurisdiction is denied or taken away by express language or necessary implication: Waples v. Marsh, 19-381.

At law and in equity: The district court is invested with all the powers of a court of law and those of a court of equity, and the distinction between the two jurisdictions is recognized. This distinction the legislature cannot take away: Claussen v. Lufrenz, 4 G. Gr., 224.

Under statutes different from those now in force, held, that in a proceeding in equity the court possessed no jurisdiction to render in favor of the party such judgment as he might show himself entitled to at law: Roberts v. Taliaferro, 7-110.

Supervisory powers: As to the distinction between the jurisdiction of the district court and that of the circuit court in certiorari under former statutes, see Keniston v. Hewitt, 48-679; Groves v. Richmond, 53-570.

Judge; unauthorized person cannot act as: A person not duly authorized and qualified by law cannot, by consent of parties or by direction of the duly qualified judge, act as judge in the trial of a cause: Michales v. Hine, 3 G. Gr., 470; Winchester v. Ayres, 4

G. Gr., 104; Petty v. Durall, 4 G. Gr., 120; Smith v. Frisbie, 7-486.

It is not proper for a judge of the court to have an attorney substituted temporarily in his place, even by consent of parties, and himself act as attorney for one of the parties to the case: Wright v. Boon, 2 G. Gr., 458.

The judge may, during the argument of the case to the jury, properly be absent from the court room for the purpose of hearing another case, or otherwise: Hall v. Wolff, 61-559; especially if it does not appear but that such absence was necessary, or that prejudice resulted or might be inferred therefrom: Baxter v. Ray, 62-336.

Substitute: Where a statute provides that, in case of the absence or disability of the judge, a certain other officer designated shall act in his place, it must appear, in order to support an action of the person thus designated in sitting as judge, that the contingency upon which he was authorized to act had occurred: Burlington University v. Stewart's Ex'rs, 12-442; State v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 50-692.

Change of judge: Where, after the submission of a cause on deposition to the judge of the circuit court, the circuit was so changed that another judge became judge of such court, held, that a decision of the cause by the new judge was proper: Manning v. Matheus, 66-675.

Where at one term of court a judge signs or makes a memorandum of a decree which is not entered at that term on the record, and before the next term the judge goes out of office, his successor should cause the record to be made up from the previous decree or memorandum, and cannot regard the cause as open for trial: Tracy v. Beeson, 47-155.

Where the judgment rendered by one judge, upon the report of a referee, was set aside by his successor as having been improperly entered in vacation, and a new judgment to the same effect was rendered, held, that the unsuccessful party had no right to have his exceptions to the referee's report passed upon anew by the incoming judge: Mellinger v. Von Behren, 53-374.

Powers may be conferred upon the judge which cannot be exercised by the court of which he is judge: Cummings v. Des Moines, W. & S. W. R. Co., 33-173.

207. Same; circuit court. 162. The circuit court shall have and exercise general original jurisdiction concurrent with the district court in all civil actions and special proceedings, and exclusive jurisdiction in all appeals and writs of error from inferior courts, tribunals or officers, and a general supervision thereof in all civil matters, to prevent and correct abuses where no other remedy is provided. [12 G. A., ch. 86, §§ 4, 5; 14 G. A., ch. 22, § 3.]

[By sections 233 and 240 the circuit court is abolished and its jurisdiction conferred upon the district court.]

The general supervision of the circuit court over inferior courts, etc., in civil matters was exclusive, and so was that of the district court under the preceding section in criminal matters. By Code, § 3217, it was not intended to give jurisdiction in proceedings by certiorari indiscriminately to both courts, but to give each court jurisdiction in such proceedings in that class of cases under its supervision as here contemplated: Kenston v. Hewitt, 48-679.

The circuit court had exclusive jurisdiction over appeals from the judgment of a court for the trial of contested county elections, under § 1182: McKinney v. Wood, 35-167.

This section did not permit appeals in cases where there was no statute authorizing them; as, for instance, in the case of action of fence viewers: McKeever v. Jenks, 59-350.

Where a circuit court had, under this section, exclusive jurisdiction and a change of place of trial was granted, the case was to be sent to some other circuit court and not to the district court: Schuchart v. Lamme, 62-197.

Although an appeal to the circuit court from a justice of the peace in a civil case could not be changed to the district court, yet, if such appeal was consolidated by consent of the parties with an original action already pending in the circuit court, the consolidated action might be changed as in any other case: Broune v. Hickie, 68-330.

Since the circuit court has been abolished the district court has the same power with reference to its records that the circuit court might have exercised: De Wolfe v. Taylor, 71-648.

208. Terms. 163. The judicial districts and circuits, and the terms and places of holding the district and circuit courts therein, shall remain as at present fixed until changed in accordance with law. Where such terms are held in any city or incorporated town not the county seat of a county, such city or town shall provide and furnish the necessary rooms and places for such terms free of charge to the county. [R., § 2653; C., '51, § 1566; 12 G. A., ch. 123; 14 G. A., ch. 22, § 6.]

Notwithstanding the statutory provision that courts must be held at the places provided by law, probate courts are expressly authorized (§ 8510) to appoint the time and place for the hearing of matters requiring notice: Casey v. Stewart, 60-160.

But such provision as to probate courts does not authorize a probate court to sit outside the county, unless, perhaps, by consent of parties, and any order made by the court outside the county in which the case is pending is void: Capper v. Sibley, 63-754.

A trial at a place not within the county where the suit was pending, had by agreement of parties during vacation, held binding: O'Hagen v. O'Hagen, 14-264.

Where it is agreed that a case shall be heard in vacation at a particular place, and it is heard, but at another place, the record showing that counsel on both sides were present at the argument and made no objection to the place of hearing, it will be presumed that objection to the place was waived: Johnson v. Mantz, 69-710.

A party is bound to take notice of the place of sitting of the court, where, by reasonable effort, he might have ascertained such fact: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

Where it appears that a court was sitting at some place other than the court-house, it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that it was at a place properly provided for the purpose, if any reason appears why the court-house might not be a proper place: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 509.

The legislature may, by special act, authorize the holding of court at a place other than the county seat: Cooper v. Mills County, 69-350.

209. Probate terms. 164. The circuit [district] judge having jurisdiction in counties having two county seats, shall hold terms for probate business at each of said county seats. [12 G. A., ch. 123.]

210. Judges fix terms. 165; 15 G. A., ch. 12, § 1. At least two terms of each court shall be held in every organized county in each year, and the district [and circuit] judges of each judicial district shall, on or before the first Monday in December, A. D. 1873, and in each alternate year thereafter, designate and fix by an order under their hands, the times of holding the terms of such courts in each county in their districts for the two years next ensuing the first day of January thereafter, which order shall be forthwith forwarded by the district judge to the secretary of state and the clerk of the district court in each county in such district, and the clerk shall file the same and enter it of record in the journal of each court, and cause such order to be published for four weeks in some weekly newspaper published in such county, if there be any such published. The secretary of state shall, within ten days after receiving said orders, or before the first Monday in January after said orders are made, prepare a tabular statement of the times of holding the several courts as fixed by the several orders in his office, and have printed one thousand copies thereof, which shall be distributed as follows: One copy to each state officer, state library, library of the law department of the state university, each clerk of the district court, and sheriff, and the residue to the county auditors in proportion to the population of each county, for gratuitous distribution among the attorneys of the county. [R., §§ 2654-5; C., '51, §§ 1567-8; 12 G. A., ch. 86, § 24; 13 G. A., ch. 41, § 3; 14 G. A., ch. 22, § 4; ch. 113.]

[Further, as to terms of court, see §§ 237, 238.]

211. Special term. 166; 17 G. A., ch. 89. A special term may be ordered in any county at any regular term of court in that county, or at any other time, by the judge, for the trial of all causes pending at the last regular term of said court held prior to said special term, in which either party shall have served upon the opposite party or his attorney in the manner provided for service of original notice, at least twenty days prior to said special term, a notice in writing that such cause will be brought on for trial. When ordering a special term, the court or judge shall direct whether a grand or trial jury or both shall be summoned. [R., §§ 2656-8; C., '51, §§ 1569-71.]

The authority to hold special terms should never be withheld from a court. It may be regarded as a right which a court of general jurisdiction should exercise ex officio: Harri-man v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

Where a special term of court was provided for the trial of criminal cases only, held, that the jurisdiction of the court at such term was that provided for the trial of criminal cases in general, and was not limited merely to the trial of those in which there was consent: State v. Smith, 7-244.

And held, that at such special term an indictment might be found: State v. Nash, 7-347.

The court may call a grand jury together at a special term: State v. Reid, 20-413, 424.

Whether a judge may, for the purpose of concluding a trial begun during a regular term of court, appoint a special term at a day fixed by law for the regular term in another county, quære: State v. Knight, 19-94.

Under Revision, §§ 2656-8, held, that a special term which was ordered for the same day fixed for the general term of the same court in another county, but was afterwards adjourned to a later date, was not illegal: State v. Clark, 30-168.

A special term is not a continuance of the regular term after an adjournment, but is a new term: Dryden v. Wyllis, 54-667.

212. Failure of judge. 167. If the judge does not appear on the day appointed for holding the court, the clerk shall make an entry thereof in his record, and adjourn the court till the next day, and so on until the third day, unless the judge appears, provided three days are allowed for such term. [R., § 2668; C., '51, § 1581.]

213. Stand adjourned. 168. If the judge does not appear by five o'clock of the third day, and before the expiration of the time allotted to the term of the court, it shall stand adjourned till the next regular term. [R., § 2669; C. '51, § 1582.]

214. Judge may order adjournment. 169. If the judge is sick, or for any other sufficient cause is unable to attend court at the regularly appointed time, he may, by a written order, direct an adjournment to a particular day therein specified, and the clerk shall, on the first day of the term, or as soon thereafter as he receives the order, adjourn the court as therein directed. [R., § 2670; C., '51, § 1583.]

The judge is clothed with full power over the adjournments of his court: State v. Clark, 30-168.

Where the judge, being absent from the state, wrote and telegraphed to the clerk to adjourn the approaching term of court to a further date, and the clerk, in accordance with the telegram, published a notice of the adjournment, and notified parties, jurors and witnesses, but no proclamation of the adjournment was made at the day for opening the term, and the written order was not filed nor entry thereof upon the record made until after the opening of the term at the time to which it was so adjourned, nor until after defendant, who was held for trial at the regular term under a continuance from a previous term, had filed his protest against being tried at such adjourned term, held, that a nunc pro tunc record of the order was sufficient, and the trial of defendant was properly held at the adjourned term, no prejudice being shown: State v. McGuire, 53-165.

A telegram from the judge to the clerk, making the proper direction as to adjournment, is a sufficient written order within the requirements of this section: State v. Holmes, 56-588.

215. No proceeding invalid. 170. No recognizance, or other instrument or proceeding shall be rendered invalid by reason of there being a failure of the term; but all proceedings pending in court shall be continued to the next regular term, unless an adjournment be made as authorized in the last preceding section. [R., § 2671; C., '51, § 1584.]

216. Parties; when to appear. 171. In cases of such continuances or adjournments, persons recognized or bound to appear at the regular term which has failed as aforesaid, shall be held bound in like manner to appear at the time so fixed, and their sureties, if any, shall be liable in case of their non-appearance, in the same manner as though the term had been held at the regular time and they had failed to make their appearance thereat. [R., § 2672; C., '51, § 1585.]

217. Continued. 172. Upon any final adjournment of the court, all business not otherwise disposed of, will stand continued generally. [R., § 2673; C., '51, § 1586.]

218. When no court-house. 173. When a county is not provided with a regular court-house at the place where the courts are to be held, they shall be held at such place as the board of supervisors provide. [R., § 2660; C., '51, § 1573.]

219. Same. 174. If no suitable place be thus provided, the court may direct the sheriff to procure one. [R., § 2661; C., '51, § 1574.]

220. Judges interchanged. 175. The district judges may interchange and hold each other's courts [and so may the circuit judges]. [R., § 2662; C., '51, § 1575; 12 G. A., ch. 86, § 25.]

This section is not in conflict with Constitution, art. 5, § 5, and a judge holding court out of his district, in exchange with another judge, is not acting without authority: State v. Stingley, 10-488.

An unauthorized person cannot by consent of parties, or by direction of the court, act as judge. See notes to § 206.

221. Apportionment of business. 21 G. A., ch. 128, § 1. In districts in which the district court is composed of more than one judge, the judges shall not sit together in the trial of causes nor upon the hearing of motions for new trial; but may together hold the same term making an apportionment of the business between them; and in districts composed of more than one county they may hold terms in different counties at the same time.

The statutory provisions by which in the same case two or more district judges are authorized to hold court in the same county at the same time are not unconstitutional. This statute is not unconstitutional on the ground that it covers more than one subject-matter, or that it embraces any subject not expressed in the title, or that it is not of uniform operation throughout the state: State v. Emmons, '72-265.

222. Records read. 176. The clerk shall, from time to time, read over all the entries made of record in open court; which, when correct, shall be signed by the judge. [R., § 2664.]

Signing and approval of record: The provisions of this and the following sections as to signing the record are directory only, and a failure to comply therewith does not render a judgment void: Vanfleet v. Phillips, 11-558; O'Hara v. Leonard, 19-515; Childs v. McChesney, 20-431; Hamilton v. Barton, 20-505.

An approval of the entries at any succeeding term relates back to the time of the entry, and is as effectual as if given at that time: Vanfleet v. Phillips, 11-558.

The expiration of the term of a judge before the approval and signing of the record does not make judgments rendered by him void: Traey v. Beeson, 47-155.

A judgment is valid though the record be not signed by the judge; so held as to a decree signed by the judge in vacation, filed with the clerk, and entered by him without the record being signed: Traer v. Whitman, 56-443.

Although the practice of procuring the signature of the judge to a form of decree is to be commended as tending to secure accurate records, such signature is not the signature of the record contemplated by the statute: Bosch v. Kassing, 64-312.

Entry by clerk without authority: The clerk has no authority to enter up a decree not warranted by the entry on the judge's calendar: Smith v. Cummins, 52-143.

Notice of its own records: The court is supposed to know the genuineness of its own records and signature of its officers: State v. Postlewait, 14-446.

A court will not in one case take judicial notice of what has transpired in another case between different parties: Baker v. Mygatt, 14-131.

A court cannot take judicial notice in one case of its records in a different case. So held where it appeared that the opinion of the supreme court in a different case was introduced in evidence on the trial in the court below, but was not set out in the abstract on appeal: Enix v. Miller, 54-551.

The court will, in a proceeding for contempt, take judicial notice of its own orders in the matter out of which the alleged contempt grew: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

223. At succeeding term. 177. When it is not practicable to have all the records prepared and thus approved during the term, they may be read, corrected and approved at the next succeeding term; but such delay shall not prevent an execution from issuing in the meantime; and all other proceedings may take place in the same manner as though the record had been approved and signed. Entries authorized to be made in vacation shall be read, approved, and signed at the next term of the court. [R., § 2665; C., '51, § 1578.]

Approval at subsequent term: This section is directory, and the failure to have such entries read and approved at the next term will not render void a judgment so entered. An approval of the entries at any succeeding term relates back to the time of the entry, and is as effectual as if given at that time: Vanfleet v. Phillips, 11-558.

Though the record of the judgment is not read and approved until the term after it is made, nevertheless exceptions thereto must be taken, under § 4038, at the term when the judgment is entered: State v. Orwig, 34-112.

The expiration of the term of a judge, before the approval and signing of the record, does not make judgments rendered by him void: Tracy v. Beeson, 47-155.

Since the abolition of the circuit court, the district court has the same power and jurisdiction over the circuit court records as the circuit court had, and an application for correction of the record of the circuit court should be made to the district court: De Wolfe v. Taylor, 71-648.

Entries in vacation: The reading, approval and signing of a judgment entry made in vacation at the next term of court does not make it valid where there is no authority to enter a judgment in vacation. Approval at the subsequent term is only allowable as to entries authorized to be made in vacation:

224. Amendment of record. 178. The record aforesaid is under the control of the court, and may be amended, or any entry therein expunged, at any time during the term at which it is made, or before it is signed by the judge. [R., § 2606; C., '51, § 1579.]

Correction of records: During all the term the record is under the control of the court, and at any time before adjournment an order of nonsuit or a judgment by default may be set aside on proper showing: Taylor v. Lusk, 9-444.

Until the record is signed it is not conclusive upon the court as against a bill of exceptions subsequently signed: Shepherd v. Brenton, 15-84.

The discovery by the court of an error or mistake in its ruling is good cause for amending or expunging the record thereof as herein provided: Bruce v. Grady, 36-352; and this may be done of its own motion: Wolmenstadt v. Jacobs, 61-372; so a default, improperly entered, may thus be set aside without following the provisions of § 4078 as to setting aside defaults: Bouls v. Shules, 29-507.

The court has the power at any time during the term to have the record corrected so as to conform to its rulings: Robbins v. Neal, 10-560.

The court has discretionary power to modify or reverse any order during the term at which it is made: Chapman v. Allen, Mor., 23.

The power of the courts to revise, correct and change their sentences, at the term at which they were pronounced and before anything has been done under them, has long been recognized both in this country and in England, and any doubt as to the existence of the power is removed by this section: State v. Dougherty, 70-439.

A formal decree which has been signed by the judge, and copied into the records by the clerk, may be amended before the record has

225. Evident mistake. 179. Entries made, approved, and signed at a previous term, can be altered only to correct an evident mistake. [R., § 2667; C., '51, § 1580.]

Correction of evident mistake: The power to change entries on account of evident mistake is not necessarily limited to the term next succeeding the one at which they were made. A correction in a particular case held proper under peculiar circumstances: Hurley v. Dubuque Gas, etc., Co., 8-274.

Entries made at a previous term may be altered and corrected for mistake when it is Townsey v. Morchhead, 9-565; McClure v. Owens, 21-133.

Where a judgment is entered in vacation it is under the control of the court and subject to modification or correction until finally approved: Porter v. McBride, 44-479.

The court may, at the next term after the making of an entry in vacation, proceed to correct or expunge it without notice to the party at whose instance it has been made: Carpenter v. Zuver, 56-390.

Further as to entry of judgment in vacation, see § 229 and notes.

As to what constitutes the record, see notes to § 258.

been signed. Such signature is not that contemplated by § 222: Bosch v. Kassing, 64-312.

The court may, before a decree is read and approved, correct it on motion to make it conform to the pleadings: Deer v. Nelson, 73-186.

The court may, for a good reason shown, set aside at the same term a previous order: Kirby v. Gates, 71-100.

The court may, for good cause shown, change an order made during the term. If the motion for such change is made, the party adversely interested should have notice; but if counsel appear for him and are heard, and no prejudice results from want of formal notice, failure to give it will not constitute error: Chicago, I. & D. R. v. Estes, 71-603.

Where final judgment has been entered of record, approved and signed, the court cannot, even during the same term, set it aside in the absence of and without due notice to the party interested, and an order thus made is void and may be corrected by certiorari: Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Duffie, 67-175.

It is doubtful whether a court should correct its record after the term and before it is signed upon affidavits uncorroborated by anything in the record or within the recollection of the judge. And a refusal to make such correction upon parol evidence will not be interfered with on appeal where the evidence is conflicting. State v. Crosby, 67-352.

This section refers to a record made in a cause, and not to a total omission to make a record, which can be supplied at the succeeding term: Tracy v. Beeson, 47-155, 158.

Further as to the record, see notes to § 258.

clearly made to appear: State v. McComb, 18-43, 48.

Where a verdict is returned but no judgment rendered thereon at that term, it is not error to render such judgment at the next term: Shepherd v. Brenton, 20-41.

This section does not deprive the court of the power to make a nunc pro tunc entry at a subsequent term of a fact such as consent of parties to trial by a certain method, etc.: Buckwalter v. Craig, 24-215; and a nunc pro tunc order showing certain facts in regard to the impaneling of a grand jury at a previous term held allowable: State v. Munzenmaier, 24-87.

By analogy, the provisions of this section will be followed in the supreme court: Roberts v. Corbin, 26-315, 331.

This section provides for the correction of entries made, approved and signed at a (not the) previous term: Goldsmith v. Clausen, 14-278.

The proceeding by motion to correct a judgment entry reciting a judgment against a party, where it appears that no judgment was in fact rendered, is not limited to one year: Shelley v. Smith, 50-353.

A mistake which may be corrected under this section is a mistake of fact, and not a mistake of law: Knox v. Moser, 72-154.

Where a judge at a term of court signs a decree, which is filed with the papers but not recorded at that term, and before the next term of court goes out of office, the court, at the succeeding term, cannot consider the cause as still open, but should enter the decree previously signed: Tracy v. Beeson, 47-155.

Action of the judge in ruling upon a motion for supplying an omission in the records will not be overruled on appeal where it appears that the facts which it is sought to make of record transpired in the trial before him, and that the evidence upon which he acted in correcting the record was conflicting: Stockdale v. Johnson, 14-178.

An amendment of the record upon motion of one of the parties, supported by an affidavit setting forth an agreement as to what should be submitted to the court, cannot be made under the authority to correct an evident mistake: Eno v. Hunt, 8-346.

The statement of a decree as to the time of its rendition cannot be overcome by the certificate of the clerk as to the time when the decree was filed with him: Buck v. Holt, 74-294.

As to manner of correcting mistakes of the clerk or irregularities in obtaining judgment, see § 4385.

Notice of correction: A motion at a subsequent term to modify the decree in a matter affecting another party should not be sustained, no notice of such motion having been given to the party adversely interested: Wetmore v. Harper, 70-346.

The court cannot, after a judgment, execution and sale, so amend its record as to show proper service of notice which did not before appear, without notice of the proceeding for such amendment having been given to the opposite party: McLaughlin v. O'Rourke, 12-459.

226. Judges make rules. 180. The judges of the district [and circuit] court in any district, may provide by general rule:

1. That the time of filing pleadings or motions shall be other than provided in this code;

2. That issues in all, or a part of the counties in such district, shall be made up in vacation;

3. Prescribing penalties that shall follow the overruling or sustaining a motion or demurrer;

4. Adopting such other rules as they may deem expedient, not inconsistent with this code. Such rules shall be signed by said judges, and such number published as they deem expedient, and shall be distributed by the district judge as follows: To the secretary of state, to each of the judges of the supreme court, attorney-general, clerk of the supreme court, state library, and law department of the state university, one copy each, to be filed and preserved in the said several offices or departments; and the residue to the clerks of the district court in each county composing such district, in such proportion as such judge deems proper. The expense of publishing and distributing such rules shall be paid by the counties composing the district, as the judges may direct. Such rules may be revised and changed as often as the judges deem proper, and shall be published and distributed in the same manner, but shall not take effect until ninety days after their entry of record. [R., §§ 2679-81; C., '51, §§ 1589-91.]

[Further provisions as to rules are found in § 243.]

As to power to make rules, method of adoption, publication, etc., see State v. Ensley, 10-149.

A rule of the circuit court in regard to filing transcripts on appeals from justices upheld: Pinders v. Yager, 29-468.

It may be provided by rules of the court that defendant shall be required to appear and answer by noon of the first day instead of the second day of the term: McGrew v. Downs, 67-687.

Rules of court properly adopted, until repealed or changed, have the force and effect of law as applied to the rights of parties, and in their construction the same rules should be applied: David v. Aetna Ins. Co., 9-45.

A rule of court providing that witnesses subpoenaed in different cases between different parties should draw but one per diem upheld: Meffert v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 34-430.

A rule of court must be abrogated in the same manner and under the same authority by which it is made. It cannot be abolished by an order of the judge resting only in parol: Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Marchand, 5-468.

Under § 3915, all courts must take judicial notice of rules of other courts. Formerly it was held that rules of lower court would not be noticed on appeal unless embodied in the record: Lyon v. Byington, 7-422; Horseman v. Todhunter, 12-230.

227. Short-hand reporter. 181; 18 G. A., ch. 195, § 1. The judge of the district [or circuit] court may appoint, whenever in the judgment of either of them it will expedite the public business, a short-hand reporter, who shall be well skilled in the art and competent to discharge the duties required, for the purpose of recording the oral testimony of witnesses in civil cases upon the request of either party thereto, and in all criminal cases which are tried upon indictment, and in other criminal cases and such other matters as the judge may direct; but the judge shall not so direct in any criminal case unless it shall satisfactorily appear to him that the interests of the state or defendant require the separating [reporting] of the testimony in said case; provided, the defendant in any criminal case may have the testimony therein reported without an order of the judge by first paying or securing to said reporter his fees for reporting therein. [14 G. A., chs. 99, 100.]

228. Oath; removal; same. 182. Such reporter shall take an oath faithfully to perform the duties of his office, which shall be filed in the office of the clerk. He shall attend such sessions of the court as the judge may direct, and may be removed by the judge making the appointment for misconduct, incapacity, or inattention to duty. [14 G. A., ch. 100, §§ 2, 4.]

229. Judgment in vacation. 183. With consent of parties, actions, special proceedings, and other matters pending in the courts named in this chapter, may be taken under advisement by the judges, decided and entered of record in vacation, or at the next term; if so entered in vacation, they shall have the same force and effect from the time of such entry as if done in term time.

A judgment rendered and entered in vacation, without consent of the parties or any order of court made during term therefor, is void: Spear v. Fitzpatrick, 37-127; Balm v. Nunn, 63-641.

A judge has no authority, without consent of parties, to render a decision in vacation discharging a garnishee: Laughlin v. Peckham, 66-121.

It is only where authority is specially conferred by statute that the judge is authorized to make orders and exercise judicial functions in vacation: Prosser v. Prosser, 64-378.

Where, by agreement of parties, either party was to have a certain time to file a motion for a new trial to be decided in vacation, and thereafter a motion for a new trial was filed and so decided, held, that a motion in arrest of judgment could not be filed and decided in vacation under the same agreement, it not being expressly provided for therein: Scribner v. Rutherford, 65-551.

Although a judgment be entered after the close of the term and without special direction of the court, yet if not contrary to the pleadings and verdict, and its entry was a matter of course, it is not void, but at most irregular, and such irregularity must be taken advantage of on motion: Collins v. Chantland, 48-241.

The entry of a judgment in vacation, except in cases authorized by statute, is irregular, and whether it is void, quere: Carmichael v. Vandebur, 50-651.

Whether a decree entered in vacation is void or merely irregular, the parties seeking to have it set aside in equity must offer to pay the amount appearing to be justly due, or allow judgment to be rendered for that amount: Byers v. Odell, 56-618.

Where, upon the appearance of defendant at a subsequent term, the judgment in vacation was set aside and a new judgment entered of that term, held, that the new judgment was not void: First Nat. Bank v. Hostetter, 61-395.

The court may hear a case and render judgment during vacation if the parties consent thereto: O'Hagen v. O'Hagen, 14-264.

Where parties in open court agreed that judgment should be entered upon the disposition of a motion for a new trial, and that such motion might be decided in vacation, held, that a judgment entered in vacation in pursuance of such arrangement was proper: Hattenback v. Hoskins, 12-109.

An order of the judge may issue in vacation directing the sheriff as to publication of notice of sale under execution: Herriman v. Moore, 49-171.

Under the circumstances of a particular case, held, that consent to judgment in vacation appeared: Guthrie v. Guthrie, 71-744.

The consent of a party to a cause being determined in vacation, implied from the conduct of his attorney in not objecting thereto, held sufficient to authorize such decision: Myers v. Funk, 51-92; Babcock v. Wolf, 70-676.

An agreement for a decision in vacation implies that the judge will decide the case at his chambers or wherever he may be when he finally considers it: Johnson v. Mantz, 69-710.

Where a decree was signed by the judge before the expiration of his term of office, and delivered to the attorney of one of the parties to be filed in the clerk's office, but was not so filed until the day after the expiration of the judge's term of office, held, that the decree was not therefore rendered invalid: Babcock v. Wolf, 70-676; Guthrie v. Guthrie, 71-744.

A decree signed by the judge and entered in vacation is valid, and not void, though it contain provisions not contained in the memorandum made in the judge's calendar at the trial; nor does the fact that it improperly provides for a sale of real property without redemption render a sale thereunder absolutely void: Traer v. Whitman, 56-443.

Entry of judgment in vacation, when it is not practicable to prepare and enter it in term time, is valid: Ibid.

This section does not prevent the determination of a cause which has been taken under advisement and the entry of judgment at a later term than that next following its submission: Trulock v. Merte, 72-510.

Entry of judgment on confession, as contemplated in § 4107, may be made by the clerk in vacation and approved, under this section, at the next term: Kendig v. Marble, 58-529.

As to what constitutes the record, see notes to § 258.

230. Circuit court a court of record. 184. The circuit court shall be held by the circuit judge, and be a court of record; shall have and use its own seal, having on the face thereof the words "circuit court" and the name of the county and state. [12 G. A., ch. 86, §§ 9, 11.]

[The circuit court is now abolished. See § 233.]

231. Verdict after opening of court in another county. 185. In all judicial proceedings in any of the courts of this state where a jury trial has been commenced in any case during any term of court, and where such jury may agree upon a verdict, but not until after the time for holding court in some other county in the same district, and where the jury has agreed upon a verdict and reported the same after the opening of court in another county and judgment has been rendered thereon, then and in that case such judgment shall not be deemed invalid by reason of the time of receiving such verdict and the rendition of such judgment. [Ad. Sess., 14 G. A., ch. 12, § 1.]

It not being specified to whom the jury are to return their verdict, held, that it would be good if received by the judge in person. It is not contemplated that such verdict must be received by him sitting as a court: Tilton v. Swift, 40-78.

The fact that the trial is had and completed during the time fixed for the court to be held in another county, the term of such other county having, however, been previously adjourned, will not constitute error: State v. Stevens, 67-557; State v. Peterson, 67-564.

Where it appeared that a judgment was rendered in the court of one county three days after the term of the same court should have commenced in another county, held, not sufficient to render such judgment void, even though it did not appear affirmatively of record that the term of court fixed for the other county had been adjourned: Weaver v. Coolidge, 15-244.

Where a trial is commenced in the midst of a term, under the bona fide expectation and belief that it can be concluded before the day shall arrive when the judge is by law directed, but not imperatively required, to hold court in another county, he may remain and conclude that case, receive the verdict and pass judgment, even though this may happen to be done on a day when regularly he would be opening or holding court in another county: State v. Knight, 19-94.

A term of court in one county may legally be extended beyond the time at which the same court, by the terms fixed by statute, should be in session in another county. At least a judge may, if he sees proper, extend the term in one county during the first three days in another county: Cook v. Smith, 54-636.

Before enactment of above section the rule was aliter: Davis v. Fish, 1 G. Gr., 406; Grable v. State, 2 G. Gr., 559; Sheppard v. Wilson, Mor., 448.

232. In such cases judgment may be rendered at next term. 186. In cases provided for in the preceding section, where the verdict has been so received and judgment has not been rendered thereon, as provided for in said section, then the time of the coming in of such verdict shall be no legal objection to the rendition of judgment thereon at the next term of the court in the county where such trial was had, but judgment shall then be rendered thereon; provided, there be no other good and sufficient reason why such judgment shall not then be rendered; then the time of the report of the verdict and the provisions of this section shall in all respects have a retrospective effect and operation. [Same, § 2.]

The provision that the section is to be retrospective is constitutional: Tilton v. Swift, 40-78.

ABOLITION OF CIRCUIT COURT AND RE-ORGANIZATION OF JUDICIAL DISTRICTS.

233. Circuit court abolished. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 1. On and after the first day of January, A. D. 1887, the circuit court of the state of Iowa shall be abolished.

The office of circuit judge was abolished by the abolition of the circuit court: Crozier v. Lyons, 72-401.

234. District court re-organized. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 2. On and after said first day of January, A. D. 1887, the district court shall be constituted and organized as hereinafter set forth.

235. Judicial districts; number of judges. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 3. For judicial purposes the state is hereby divided into eighteen judicial districts, as follows:

First. The first district shall consist of the counties of Lee and Des Moines, and shall have two judges.

Second. The second district shall consist of the counties of Lucas, Monroe, Wapello, Jefferson, Henry, Davis, Van Buren and Appanoose, and shall have three judges.

Third. The third district shall consist of the counties of Wayne, Decatur, Clarke, Union, Ringgold, Taylor and Adams, and shall have two judges.

Fourth. The fourth district shall consist of the counties of Cherokee, O'Brien, Osceola, Lyon, Sioux, Plymouth, Woodbury, Harrison and Monona, and shall have three judges.

Fifth. The fifth district shall consist of the counties of Dallas, Guthrie, Adair, Madison, Warren and Marion, and shall have three judges.

Sixth. The sixth district shall consist of the counties of Jasper, Poweshiek, Mahaska, Keokuk, Washington and Louisa, and shall have three judges.

Seventh. The seventh district shall consist of the counties of Muscatine, Scott, Clinton and Jackson, and shall have three judges.

Eighth. The eighth district shall consist of the counties of Johnson and Iowa, and shall have one judge.

Ninth. The county of Polk shall constitute the ninth district and shall have three judges.

Tenth. The tenth district shall consist of the counties of Dubuque, Delaware, Buchanan, Black Hawk and Grundy, and shall have three judges.

Eleventh. The eleventh district shall consist of the counties of Marshall, Story, Boone, Webster, Hamilton, Hardin, Franklin and Wright, and shall have three judges.

Twelfth. The twelfth district shall consist of the counties of Bremer, Butler, Floyd, Mitchell, Worth, Cerro Gordo, Hancock and Winnebago, and shall have two judges.

Thirteenth. The thirteenth district shall consist of the counties of Clayton, Allamakee, Fayette, Winneshiek, Howard and Chickasaw, and shall have two judges.

Fourteenth. The fourteenth district shall consist of the counties of Buena Vista, Clay, Palo Alto, Kossuth, Emmet, Dickinson, Humboldt and Pocahontas, and shall have two judges.

Fifteenth. The fifteenth district shall consist of the counties of Pottawattamie, Cass, Shelby, Audubon, Montgomery, Mills, Page and Fremont, and shall have four judges.

Sixteenth. The sixteenth district shall consist of the counties of Ida, Sac, Calhoun, Crawford, Carroll and Green, and shall have two judges.

Seventeenth. The seventeenth district shall consist of the counties of Tama and Benton, and shall have one judge.

Eighteenth. The eighteenth district shall consist of the counties of Linn, Jones and Cedar, and shall have two judges.

Excepting for the purpose of electing judges the provisions of this section shall not take effect until the first day of January, A. D. 1887.

236. Election and term. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 4. The district judge shall be a resident of the district in which he is elected, and shall hold his office for a term of four years. The first election under the provisions of this act shall be at the general election in the year 1886: Provided however, that the present acting judges of the district courts whose terms of office shall not have expired on or before said first day of January, 1887, shall be by virtue of their said office judges of the district court in and for the districts created by this act in which they may severally reside; and until the terms for which said judges were elected shall expire, only so many additional judges shall be chosen under the provisions of this act, as shall be required (if any) to make the number of judges to which such district is entitled, under the provisions of this act.

237. Terms of court. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 37. The judges shall hold the district courts in the several counties of their districts at all the places where district courts or circuit courts are held at the time this act takes effect; and grand jurors and petit jurors shall be drawn and summoned for the terms at all such places, according to law from the territory from which petit jurors have heretofore been chosen; and the district court shall hold not less than two terms at other places than county seats where the circuit court is authorized to be held, at the time this act takes effect; and the district court shall hear and determine all causes, including civil, probate and criminal within the territory over which the circuit court has heretofore had jurisdiction; and grand and petit jurors shall be drawn thereat, as heretofore provided therefor, and provided further, that transcripts of all judgments, decrees, and the levy of writs of attachment on real estate, mechanics' liens, lis pendens, sales of real estate, redemptions, satisfaction of judgments, mechanics' liens, dismissal or decrees in lis pendens, together with all other matters affecting titles to real estate, shall be certified by the deputy clerk at such places other than county seats, forthwith, to the clerk of the district court at the county seats, who shall enter the same upon the records in his office in all respects as if originating and originally filed, begun or entered at the county seat of such counties, and provided further, that the provisions of section one hundred and sixty-three of the code, [§ 208] shall be and remain in full force and effect under the provisions of this act. They shall hold their courts at such times, and in such order as shall best dispose of the business thereof, and as they may arrange among themselves; provided, however, there shall be held not less than four terms a year in each county. In case the judges of any district are unable to agree, as to the manner of holding their courts, or as to the counties in which they are severally to preside, they shall refer the matter to the chief justice of the supreme court, who shall assign said judges to such counties as he may determine; and the chief justice of the supreme court shall also have power to assign any district judge when not occupied in holding court in his own district, to hold court in any other district, in the state, where any judge may be incapacitated from holding court, or there may arise a necessity therefor. But this section shall not be held to affect the right of the judges to interchange holding their terms of court, as now provided by law.

The failure of the deputy clerk to certify to the clerk of the district court the levy of a writ of attachment in proceedings at a place where court is held other than the county seat will operate to defeat notice of the attachment which would have been imparted by a record properly made: Benjamin v. Davis, 73-715.

238. Order as to times and places. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 6. On or before the first day of October in each odd-numbered year, the judges shall meet in their respective districts, and determine the times and places of holding their courts during the two succeeding calendar years. The plan or schedule thus agreed upon, or ordered by the chief justice of the supreme court, when they cannot agree, shall before going into effect be published as now required by law for similar orders of the judges of the district and circuit courts. In preparing said plan or schedule they shall so arrange if practicable that each judge shall hold at least one term of court during the year in each of the several counties of his district. The terms of the circuit court which have been set down or assigned for the year 1887 in the several counties of the state shall be held as terms of the district court, and the judges may determine anew the times and places for holding their courts during the year 1887.

239. Jurisdiction. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 7. The district court when organized and constituted as contemplated in this chapter shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction of all actions, proceedings and remedies both civil and criminal, except in cases where exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction is or may hereafter be conferred upon some other court or tribunal by the constitution and laws of the state, and shall have and exercise all the powers usually possessed and exercised by courts of record.

240. Powers of circuit court transferred to district court. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 8. All the rights, duties, powers and jurisdiction now by law belonging to or vested in, or exercised by the circuit court shall upon and after the first day of January, 1887, be transferred to, conferred upon and exercised by the district court; and all causes, proceedings, and remedies of every kind pending or undetermined in the circuit court at said date shall stand for trial or other disposition in the district court as if originally brought therein.

241. Records of circuit court. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 9. Upon the abolition of the circuit court, as in this act provided, the district court shall succeed to, and exercise full authority and jurisdiction over the records of the circuit court, and may enforce all judgments, decrees and orders thereof in the same manner and to the same extent as it may exercise like jurisdiction and authority over its own records, and for the purpose of the issuance of process, and of any and all other acts necessary to the due and efficient enforcement of the orders, judgments and decrees of the circuit court, the records thereof shall be deemed records of the district court. Transcripts and process from the judgments, decrees and records of the circuit court, shall be issued by the clerk of the district court, and under the seal of his office.

242. Change of venue. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 10. When a change of venue is granted on the ground of objection made to the judge, such judge may in his discretion, if there be a judge or judges of the same district, against whom there is no objection, assign the cause to such judge. Or if more than one, to one of them for trial. And if there be no other judge of his district against whom there is no objection, then he may in his discretion, send the cause for trial to the nearest and most convenient county of another district for trial before a judge of such other district; or he may procure another judge of another district to interchange with him for the trial of such cause.

243. Rules of practice. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 11. The judges of the district court shall have power to prescribe uniform rules of practice for the government of the district courts of the state, and to prescribe rules for making up issues in vacation, and entering in vacation, judgment in default of appearance or pleading. For that purpose, said judges shall meet in convention in the supreme court room in the capitol at the state capital, on the first Wednesday in January, A. D. 1887, and at such time thereafter as may be designated by the chief justice on the request of a majority of the district judges of the state, and shall organize by selecting a president, vice-president and secretary from their number, and the secretary of state shall upon requisition of the presiding officer supply the convention with such stationery as shall be deemed necessary for the dispatch of the business of the convention. When a majority of the convention shall have agreed upon such rules, and the time when they shall go into effect, the same shall be signed by the president and countersigned by the secretary of the convention, and filed with the secretary of state, and the secretary of state shall cause such rules to be printed, and when so printed he shall forward a certified copy thereof to the clerk of the district court in each county of the state. And the clerk shall immediately upon the receipt of such copy of the rules so adopted, spread the same upon the records of said court, and such rules shall continue in force until altered or amended in convention as provided in this act.

244. Salary of judges. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 12. The salary of district judges elected or holding office under the provisions of the constitution of the state and this act, shall be two thousand five hundred dollars per year, to be paid from the state treasury in manner now provided by law for the payment of judges of the district and circuit court.

245. Powers of clerks. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 13. On and after the first day of January, 1887, the clerk of the district court shall have and exercise within his county all the powers and jurisdiction of the court and of the judge thereof in the following matters:

First. The appointment when not contested of resident administrators, executors and guardians of minors and the approval of any and all bonds given by administrators, executors, trustees, and guardians in the discharge of their several trusts.

Second. The examination and approval of all intermediate or interlocutory accounts or reports of administrators, executors and guardians, but such approval may be disaffirmed or set aside by the court within the time and manner as now provided by law.

Third. The making of all necessary orders in relation to the personal effects of a deceased person as contemplated in section two thousand three hundred and eighty-six [§ 3590] of the code, where no objection is filed and to do and perform all other acts and duties which are now required by law of clerks of the circuit court and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

246. Review by court. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 14. Any person deeming himself aggrieved by any order made or entered by the clerk under the powers herein conferred in the last preceding section may have the same reviewed in court at the next term thereafter upon motion, and upon such notice as the court may prescribe. Upon the filing of such motion the clerk shall place the cause or proceeding on the docket without additional docket fee and the matter shall stand for hearing on trial de novo in open court.

247. Orders by clerk. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 15. The records, orders and judgments made and entered by the clerk as hereinbefore provided, and not reversed, set aside or modified by the court, shall stand and be of the same force, validity and effect, and shall be entitled to the same faith and credit as if made by the court, or by the judge thereof.

248. Compensation of clerk. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 16. From and after the first day of January, 1887, the clerk of the district court in each county, in addition to the compensation now provided by law shall be allowed to retain from fees collected by him in matters of probate and guardianship, such sum as may be fixed by the board of supervisors, not exceeding the sum of three hundred dollars per year; but such additional compensation shall in no case be allowed to be paid out of the county treasury.

249. 21 G. A., ch. 134, § 17. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

CHAPTER 6.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

250. Judges cannot practice. 187. No judge of any court of record shall practice as an attorney or counselor at law, or give advice in relation to any action pending, or about to be brought in any of the courts of this state. [R., 2674; C., '51, § 1587; 12 G. A., ch. 86, § 14.]

251. Process. 188. All process issued by the clerk of the court shall bear date the day it is issued, to be attested in the name of the clerk who issued the same, and be under the seal of the court. [R., § 2682; C., '51, § 1592.]

252. Proceedings public. 189. All judicial proceedings must be public, unless otherwise specially provided by statute, or agreed upon by the parties. [R., § 2683; C., '51, § 1953.]

To give existence to a court, its officers and the time and place of holding it must be such as are prescribed by law. The term "open court" as used in the statutes is to be understood as conveying the idea that the court must be in session, organized for the transaction of judicial business. Hence, a trial before a referee cannot be considered a trial in open court: Hobart v. Hobart, 45-501.

While witnesses may be separated and excluded from the place of trial, in the discretion of the court, upon the application of a party, an exception arises in the case of a party to the action, who has the right to be present during the trial: Jemmison v. Gray, 29-537.

That there may be a separate examination of witnesses, see Hubbell v. Ream, 31-289.

253. Disqualification. 190. A judge or justice is disqualified from acting as such, except by mutual consent of parties, in any case wherein he is a party or interested, or where he is related to either party by consanguinity or affinity within the fourth degree, or where he has been attorney for either party in the action or proceeding. But this section does not prevent them from disposing of any preliminary matter not affecting the merits of the case. [R., § 2685; C., '51, § 1595.]

A judgment rendered by a judge who has previously been an attorney in the case is not to be deemed absolutely void, where it does not appear that the judgment has ever been questioned or objected to by the party interested: Floyd County v. Cheney, 57-160.

254. Sunday. 191. No court can be opened, nor any judicial business transacted on Sunday, except:

1. To give instructions to a jury then deliberating on their verdict;
2. To receive a verdict, or discharge a jury;
3. To exercise the powers of a single magistrate in a criminal proceeding;
4. And such other acts as are provided by law. [R., § 2686; C., '51, § 1596.]

To avoid a judgment, regular on its face, on the ground that it was rendered on Sunday, the fact that it was so rendered should be clearly established, beyond the reasonable doubt naturally arising from the difficulty of establishing the precise time of a transaction: Bishop v. Carter, 29-165.

Before enactment of this section a verdict received, or a judgment entered, on Sunday was void: Davis v. Fish, 1 G. Gr., 406.

255. Where held. 192. Courts must be held at the places provided by law, except for the determination of actions, special proceedings, and other matters not requiring a jury, when they may, by consent of the parties therein, be held at some other place. [R., § 2687; C., '51, § 1597.]

A trial at a place not within the county where the suit was pending, had by agreement of parties during vacation, held binding: O'Hagan v. O'Hagan, 14-264.

Where it appears that a court was sitting at some place, other than the court-house, it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that it was at a place properly provided for the purpose, if any reason appears why the court-house might not be a proper place: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 509.

This section must be construed as applying to courts other than those of probate, which are expressly authorized by § 3510 to appoint the time and place for the hearing of matters requiring notice: Casey v. Stewart, 60-160.

But such provision as to probate courts does not authorize such a court to sit outside of the county, unless perhaps by consent of parties, and any order made by the court outside the county in which the case is pending is void: Capper v. Sibley, 65-754.

CHAPTER 7.

OF THE CLERK OF THE DISTRICT COURT.

[Sec. 193 is in effect repealed by § 233.]

256. Official duty. 194. He shall keep his office at the county seat; shall attend the sessions of the district [and circuit] courts himself, or by deputy; keep the records, papers, and seals of both courts, and record their proceedings as hereinafter directed under the direction of the judges of each court respectively. [R., §§ 343, 2664; C., '51, § 1577.]

As the court knows its own clerk and his deputy, it is not necessary that the signature of either one of them to a jurat should be authenticated by an official seal: Finn v. Rose, 12-565.

[Sec. 195 is in effect repealed by § 233.]

257. Records consist of. 196. The records of each court consist of the original papers constituting the causes adjudicated or pending in that court, and the books prescribed in the next section. [R., § 345.]

What constitutes the record: All the papers of the case constitute the record, and the decree assumes them and their contents: Campbell v. Ayres, 6-339.

What deemed part of: An affidavit for publication, when filed, becomes part of the record: Bradley v. Jamison, 46-68, 73.

As to supplying lost records, as, for instance, written testimony, by substitution, see Loomis v. McKenzie, 48-416.

Where an indictment is lost the court may, upon motion, substitute a copy, and proceed thereon as upon the original: State v. Rivers, 58-102; State v. Stevisiger, 61-623.

Construction: It is always proper, and in cases where the entry is obscure or not clear it is necessary, to read the record entry of the judgment in the light of the pleadings and the entire record: Fowler v. Doyle, 16-534; Mayfield v. Bennett, 48-194.

Where the entry recited that "service of notice had been made upon" defendant, and the record showed a service by publication, held, that it would not be presumed that there was personal service: Mayfield v. Bennett, 48-194.

Where the proof of a judgment is involved, the entire pleadings and records of the case are receivable in evidence: Smith v. Smith, 22-516.

The pleadings in the case constitute a part of the record, and the judgment may be established and construed with the aid of the light which they reflect upon it. If from an examination of the whole record such a construction may be fairly placed upon a judgment as to relieve it from error, the court should give it that construction: Tyler v. Langworthy, 37-555.

Judge's calendar not part of record: The judge's calendar or docket is not a record of the court: Rogers v. Morton, 51-709; Traer v. Whitman, 56-443; Case v. Plato, 54-64.

Where a decree was entered in vacation containing provisions not found in the memorandum on the judge's docket, held, that such provisions would not therefore be void: Traer v. Whitman, 56-443.

The judge's minutes kept by him in his calendar are not sufficient to make matter of record exceptions taken by a party to the ruling of the court: Lewis v. May, 22-599.

The judge's calendar is not a record provided for by law, and the entries made therein constitute the mere announcement of the judge's mental conclusion, and not the court's action: Miller v. Wolf, 63-233; State v. Manley, 63-344.

The judge's minutes upon his calendar do not constitute a judgment. Where it was sought, in an action on an injunction bond, to prove the dismissal of the action for injunction by proof of the entry on the judge's calendar "dismissed as per stipulation," and a stipulation was not shown, the evidence was held not sufficient: Towle v. Leacox, 59-42.

The entry in a judge's calendar is for the guidance of the clerk, and such entry is evidence tending to show a decree was ordered: In re Estate of Edwards, 58-431.

The minutes of the judge are intended as a direction to the clerk and are in the most general form: Burroughs v. Ellis, 76-649.

258. Books kept. 197. The clerk is required to keep the following books for the business of the district [and circuit] courts severally:

1. A book containing the entries of the proceedings of the court, which may be known as the "record book," and which is to have an index referring to each proceeding in each cause under the name of the parties, both plaintiff and defendant, and under the name of each person named in either party;

2. A book containing an abstract of the judgments, having in separate and appropriate columns the names of the parties, the date of the judgment, the damages recovered, costs, the date of the issuance and return of executions, with the entry of satisfaction and other memoranda; which book may be known as the "judgment docket," and is to have an index like that required for the record book;

3. A book in which to enter in detail the costs and fees in each action or proceeding under the title of the same, with an index like that required above, and which may be known as the "fee book;"

4. A book in which to enter the following matters in relation to any judgment under which real property is sold, entering them after the execution is returned—the title of the action, the date of the judgment, the amount of damages recovered, the total amount of costs, and the officer's return in full—which book may be known as the "sale book," and is to have an index like those required above;

5. A book in which to make a complete record when required by law;

6. A book to be called the "incumbrance book," in which the sheriff shall enter a statement of the levy of every attachment on real estate, as required by Part III of this code;

7. A book to be known as the "appearance docket," with an index to the same, in which all actions entered in said docket shall be indexed directly in the name of each plaintiff; and reversely in the name of each defendant therein;

8. A book in which an index of all liens in district [or circuit] courts shall be kept. [R., §§ 346, 3243; 9 G. A., ch. 26, §§ 1, 6.]

Par. 1. Record book: This section so far as it requires the clerk to keep one book known as the record book is directory merely, and is not violated by keeping separate book for foreclosure decrees. Carr v. Bosworth, 72-530.

Record necessary: There can be no judgment until it is entered in the proper records of the court. It cannot exist in the memory of the officers of the court or in memoranda entered in books not intended to preserve the records of judgments: Balm v. Nunn, 63-641.

Parol evidence is not admissible to show that judgment was rendered, it not being claimed that any record was ever made thereof: Cadwell v. Dullaghan, 74-239.

A judgment cannot be proven by a memorandum on the judge's calendar: Miller v. Wolf, 63-233.

While the judge's notes will not control or vary the formal judgment entered, yet, in the absence of higher proof, they are entitled to their due weight as to what transpired or was done in the case: Keller v. Killion, 9-329.

The bar docket constitutes no part of the records of the court, and can only become a part of the record in a particular case by being incorporated into or sufficiently identified by a bill of exceptions: Gifford v. Cole, 57-272.

So where the entry of the judgment was blank as to the amount of damages and specified only the amount of costs, held, that it was valid only as to the costs, although the judge's calendar contained an entry directing the clerk to assess the damages, and the judgment docket contained an entry of the judgment for the amount of damages thus assessed: Case v. Plato, 54-64.

A judgment is valid as to costs although the amount thereof is not filled into the record: Lind v. Adams, 10-398; Frankel v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70-424.

Presumptions: The records of a court, regular upon their face, have a large degree of sanctity attached to them, and are not to be lightly overcome: Wheeler v. Cox, 56-36.

Where the record of the court states an act of the court, it will be presumed to have occurred in open court: State v. Hirronemus, 50-515.

Where a decree recited that the cause came on for hearing in the presence of counsel for plaintiff and defendants, held, that it was sufficiently shown that there was an appearance by all of the defendants: Cooper v. Miller, 10-532.

Where it was recited in a decree that it was made upon proof read in evidence to the court, held, that it would be presumed that evidence to support the plea was introduced: Wahl v. Phillips, 15-478.

The presumption is strong in favor of the verity and truth of judicial records, and they can only be impeached by evidence clear and satisfactory. Evidence that the draft of a decree was filed and entered in vacation is not sufficient without a showing that the court never ordered the decree in term time: Parker v. Slaughter, 23-125.

The presumptions of law are all in support of a judgment, and when it is sought to avoid it because rendered on Sunday, the evidence must clearly establish the fact in order to overcome the presumption of regularity: Bishop v. Carter, 29-165.

The cancellation of a portion of the record of a judgment entry being shown, held, that the presumption would be that such cancellation was made at the time of the approval of the judgment, and was authorized, rather than that it was subsequently made without authority: Lutz v. Kelly, 47-307.

Further as to the record, see notes to § 224.

Impeachment of record: The record of the judgment must be taken as absolute verity. On appeal the supreme court will not consider affidavits presented to the court below for the purpose of impeaching it: Moronyer v. Cooper, 35-257.

A writ of execution upon a judgment is as to third persons only secondary evidence of the amount due upon such judgment, the judgment itself being the first and best evidence: Parsons v. Hedges, 15-119.

Where the record is blank as to the name of the party against whom judgment is rendered, such judgment will be reversed on appeal: Rigglesworth v. Reed, Mor., 19.

Correction of record: Where the judgment, erroneous when entered, is corrected in the proper manner before the rights of third persons have been acquired against it, such correction will be valid as against such subsequent rights: Monroe v. West, 12-119.

As to correction of records in general, see notes to §§ 222-225.

Entry nunc pro tunc: Courts possess the inherent authority to enter judgment nunc pro tunc, and lapse of time will not bar its exercise. Such power is not taken away, nor the time within which it may be exercised affected, by the provisions of the statute with regard to proceedings to correct mistakes in the entries of the clerk. Therefore, held, that where the judgment had in fact been rendered by the court, as shown by the minutes in the judge's calendar, but had not been entered up by the clerk, a motion three years and six months afterwards for the entry of judgment nunc pro tunc was proper: Fuller v. Stebbins, 49-376.

A judgment nunc pro tunc, entered while an appeal from the ruling upon a demurrer was pending in the supreme court, and without the appellee having elected to stand upon his demurrer, and entered without notice to him, held unauthorized and void: Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 30-191.

Where the court has failed to make record entry of an essential act, such omission may be supplied upon motion nunc pro tunc, but such entries are limited to supplying omissions occurring through oversight or negligence, and cannot be made to alter or expunge a record: Goodrich v. Conrad, 28-298.

Held not error, in an action on a bail bond, to admit in evidence the entry of the court ordering the bond filed nunc pro tunc, it appearing that the bond had been in fact deposited in the clerk's office at and ever since the date upon which it was so marked as filed: State v. Guisenhouse, 20-227; State v. Patterson, 23-575.

Lost records: Courts of record have inherent power, independent of statute, to restore judgments the records of which have been lost or destroyed, as fully as other records; and such power is not taken away by the statute permitting action to be brought on such judgments: Gammon v. Knudson, 46-455.

In a proceeding to restore the record of a judgment which had been destroyed, held, that the prior existence of the record and its destruction were the only matters in issue and its original validity could not be inquired into: Kanke v. Herrum, 43-276.

In a proceeding to supply lost records it is error to make the substitution in such form as to bind a party holding under the original party to the proceeding without proof that the record as it originally existed was such as to be binding upon the new party: McDonald v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 61-192.

Where an indictment is lost the court may, upon motion, substitute a copy, and proceed thereon as upon the original: State v. Rivers, 53-103; State v. Stevisiger, 61-623.

Evidence as to the contents of records of the court destroyed by fire held sufficient in a particular case to establish a decree of divorce rendered therein: In re Estate of Edwards, 53-431.

Where a pleading supposed to be lost is supplied by a copy, and afterward the original is found, the substitute should be, on motion, stricken from the files: Sweet v. Brown, 61-669.

After the taking of an appeal the lower court may correct its record: Maxon v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 67-226; Mahaffy v. Mahaffy, 63-55.

The power to supply lost records may be exercised whenever the protection of the rights of parties demands it. Therefore, held, that where, after the perfection of an appeal, the evidence in the case was lost, so that the appeal could not be prosecuted, the proper remedy was to apply to the lower court to supply such record by substitution, and that the loss of the record was not a ground for a new trial: Loomis v. McKenzie, 43-416; Steiner v. Steiner, 49-70.

If the record of the lower court does not correctly state the facts a party desiring to appeal should prosecute the correction of the record there; it cannot be changed or corrected on appeal: Duffees v. Sherman, 48-287.

In a certain sense the court below retains jurisdiction so long as anything remains to be done by it. It may order a lost record to be substituted, and do whatever else is proper to be done to enable the supreme court to review the alleged errors: Becker v. Becker, 50-139; State v. Dillard, 53-749.

Par. 2. Judgment docket: Where the judgment docket is introduced in evidence, without objection, to prove a judgment, it should be received without proof of the loss or destruction of the original: Moore v. McKinley, 60-637.

Where it appeared that there was a mistake in the entry in the judgment docket, it not appearing whether or not there was such mistake in the record, held, that it would be presumed, in order to support other proceedings, that the judgment was correctly entered in the record: Preston v. Wright, 60-351.

The judgment docket is intended to show merely an abstract of the judgment, and it is contemplated that it shall be made up from a judgment previously entered in the record book. Therefore, held, that entry of amount of judgment in the judgment docket did not supply an omission in the record: Case v. Plato, 54-64.

Indexing judgment docket: If a party is not charged with constructive notice of a judgment by what appears in the index book, he is not bound to look further, and is therefore not bound by what appears of record; so held where there was a mistake in the first name of the party against whom judgment was rendered: Thomas v. Desney, 57-58.

The entry and indexing of a judgment as A. B. v. C. D. et al. does not operate as notice to strangers of such judgment as against co-defendants of C. D., whose names do not appear: Cummings v. Long, 16-41.

A judgment not indexed is not notice to the purchaser at foreclosure sale of premises upon which such judgment would be a lien, and the holder of such judgment cannot therefore redeem in equity from such sale: Sterling Mfg. Co. v. Early, 69-94.

Even though a judgment is not properly indexed, a sheriff's deed thereunder duly recorded imparts notice of all prior proceedings: Cushing v. Edwards, 68-145.

As to sufficiency of indexing in general to impart notice, see notes to § 3115.

Notice of judgment or order: A party is bound to know and take notice of any judgment or order that is entered in an action to which he is properly made a party, whether the records of the court are read from time to time as required by statute, or not: Finch v. Hollinger, 47-173.

After judgment a party is not bound to take notice of further proceedings: Wright v. Leclaire, 3-221.

Par. 5. Complete record: The provision of the statute as to making a complete record in cases where title to land is involved applies only to cases where plaintiff on one side claims title, legal or equitable, and the defendant disputes the plaintiff's title, claiming title in himself or another: Smith v. Cumins, 52-143.

In a proper case for making a complete record all that should be recorded is the original notice and return, the pleadings and the judgment or decree. Depositions and matters of evidence should not be recorded: Ibid.

Par. 6. Incumbrance book: Where the entry of attachment in the incumbrance book is not made until after the execution of a mortgage upon the property, without actual notice of such attachment, the mortgagee acquires priority over the levy: First Nat. Bank v. Jasper County Bank, 71-486.

An entry by the sheriff in the incumbrance book of a levy of attachment becomes notice, though not indexed: Blodgett v. Huiscamp, 64-548.

If the lien index shows date of satisfaction of judgment, but does not show method of satisfaction, a purchaser is put on inquiry as to whether such satisfaction was by reason of the sale of the premises under execution: Mather v. Jenswold, 72-550.

259. Appearance docket. 198. The clerk shall enter in said appearance docket, each suit that shall be brought in the court, numbering them consecutively in the order in which they shall have been commenced, which number shall not be changed during the further progress of the suit. In entering the suits, the clerk shall set out the full name of all the parties, plaintiffs and defendants, as contained in the petition, or as subsequently made parties by any pleading, proceeding, or order, and shall give the date of the filing of the petition. [9 G. A., ch. 26, § 2.]

Name of defendant: The omission of the name of a defendant will not affect the jurisdiction of the court over such defendant, if he is in fact made defendant and served with notice: Toliver v. Morgan, 74-619.

Notice of filing of pleadings: After completed service or voluntary appearance a party is deemed in court and must take notice of what is done therein up to the time of final judgment, but after judgment he is not bound to take notice of further proceedings: Wright v. Leclaire, 3-221.

260. Return of service. 199. When the original notice shall be returned to the office of the clerk, he shall enter in said docket so much of the return

Notice of filing of motions: Under § 4124 a party must take notice of motions filed during the term. No other notice is necessary: Wagner v. Tice, 36-599.

Notice of a motion for change of venue, made in vacation, should be given as required by that section: Preston v. Winter, 20-264; Loomis v. McKenzie, 31-425.

A motion to set aside a judgment rendered at a prior term should not be heard without notice to the parties interested: Keeney v. Lyon, 21-277.

thereon as to show who of the parties have been served therewith, and the manner and time of service. [9 G. A., ch. 26, § 3.]

261. Memorandum of filing. 200. The clerk shall, immediately upon the filing thereof, make in the appearance docket a memorandum of the date of the filing of all petitions, demurrers, answers, motions, or paper of any other description in the cause; and no pleading of any description shall be considered as filed in the cause, or be taken from the clerk's office until the said memorandum is made. [9 G. A., ch. 26, § 4.]

Filing of pleadings: Where a pleading is marked filed by the clerk, but no entry of such filing is made on the appearance docket, it cannot be considered as having been filed: Padden v. Moore, 58-703. And where the petition in an attachment proceeding was marked "filed" by the clerk, but not entered on the appearance docket, held, that the action was properly dismissed upon motion, as the court was bound to consider the petition as not filed: Nickson v. Bair, 59-531.

This section does not apply in respect to the filing of depositions: Byington v. Moore, 62-470. Nor to the filing of bills of exceptions: Royer v. Foster, 62-321. Nor to the filing of a justice's transcript on an appeal from him to the district court. In such cases the return of the justice may be regarded filed, if deposited with the clerk, although no entry in the appearance docket is made: Harrison v. Clifton, 74-736

The filing consists in the delivery of the paper to the clerk and his receiving it to be kept on file in his office. It is not essential that it shall be indorsed as filed, although that would be the better practice. The indorsement is simply evidence of the filing: State v. Briggs, 68-416; and see State v. Patterson, 23-575.

Where the appearance docket contains a memorandum of the filing of the petition, the fact that the clerk fails to enter the name of one of the parties defendant will not deprive the court of jurisdiction as to such defendant, if he is properly served with notice: Toliver v. Morgan, 74-619

Return of papers taken from the files: A court has the power to enter an order for the return of papers withdrawn from the records without previous notice to the party required to return them: Wisconsin I. & N. R. Co. v. Given, 69-581.

262. Memorandum of rulings. 201. Immediately upon the sustaining or overruling of any demurrer or motion; the striking out or amendment of any pleading; trial of the cause; rendition of the verdict; entry of judgment; issuing of execution, or any other act or thing done in the progress of the cause, the like memorandum thereof shall be made in said docket, giving the date thereof, and the number of the book and page of the record where the entry thereof shall have been made, it being intended that the appearance docket shall be an index from the commencement to the end of a suit. [9 G. A., ch. 26, § 5.]

263. Records of both courts. 202. The district [and circuit] judges of any county, may, by a joint order under their hands, direct that the records and minutes of both courts be kept in one set of books. But all matters touching decedents' estates, wills, administrations, guardians and heirs, and all business relating thereto transacted in the circuit [district] court, and also the record of marriage licenses, shall be kept separate, in proper books prepared for that purpose, as heretofore. [12 G. A., ch. 86, § 10.]

264. Report of criminal returns. 203; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 40. The clerk of the district court is required to report to the secretary of state, on or before the first Monday in August of each year, the number of convictions for all crimes and misdemeanors in that court in his county for the year preceding; and such report shall show the character of the offense and the sentence of punishment; the occupation of the convict, whether he can read and write, his general habits, and also the expenses of the county for criminal prosecutions during the year, including, but distinguishing, the compensation of the district [county] attorney. [R., § 349; C., § 51, § 148.]

265. Report of the clerk of the district court. 18 G. A., ch. 22, § 3. It is hereby made the duty of the clerk of the district court, in preparing the report required by section two hundred and three of the code, [§ 264] to make such report for the year ending the thirtieth day of September preceding.

[The penalty for violating this section is provided by § 515, which is a part of the same act as the foregoing. For further provisions as to the report here required, see § 455.]

266. Not act as attorney. 204. The clerk, or deputy clerk of the district court is prohibited from holding the office of justice of the peace; or practicing, directly or indirectly, as an attorney or solicitor in the district [or circuit] court. [14 G. A., ch. 29.]

[As to additional powers of clerk, see § 245.]

CHAPTER 8.

OF THE COUNTY ATTORNEY.

[Sections 205, 206 and 207 of the Code are repealed by § 279.]

267. Election, term, bond. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 1. At the general election in 1886, and every two years thereafter, a county attorney shall be elected in each county, who shall hold his office for the term of two years from the first Monday in January next following his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified, who shall before he enters upon the duties of his office execute a bond to the state of Iowa, with two or more sureties, in a sum of not less than five thousand dollars, to be approved by the board of supervisors, which bond shall be conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of the office and the payment to the county treasurer of all moneys which shall come to the hands of such officer by virtue of his office. The bond shall be filed in the office of the county auditor and be recorded as other official bonds.

268. Duties. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 2. The county attorney shall appear for the state and county in all cases and proceedings in the courts of his county to which the state or county is a party, and in the supreme court in all cases in which the county is a party, and shall collect and pay over to the person or officer entitled thereto, all money due the state or county, so far as he is able to collect the same; provided, that in criminal cases less than a felony elsewhere than in the district court it shall be his duty to appear unless otherwise engaged in the performance of his official duties. In every criminal case appealed from his county to the supreme court he shall, at least thirty days prior to the term at which the case is to be heard, prepare and deliver to the attorney-general, a properly prepared abstract of the case.

County prosecutor: The duties of the office of county prosecutor, as existing prior to the new constitution, devolved, subsequently to its adoption, upon the district attorney therein provided for, and the office of county prosecutor was thereby abolished. State v. Moran, 8-399.

District attorney under former statutes: It was the duty of the district attorney to appear for the county, and it was his right to do so: Clark v. Lyon County, 37-469; Tatlock v. Lousa County, 46-138.

The district attorney was required to appear for the state in habeas corpus proceedings, and it was provided that notice of such proceedings shall be served upon him. In such cases the district attorney was the representative of the state, and, as such, might control them within the limits of his authority and duty: Miller v. Buena Vista County, 68-711.

Authority: The prosecuting attorney had authority to follow and prosecute a case commenced in his county in any other county to which the venue might be changed: Stone v. Crookers, 1 G. Gr., 461.

A case in the district court was under the control of the district attorney, and any agreement he might make with reference to the disposition thereof was binding as against the attorney-general, who controlled the case in the supreme court: State v. Fleming, 13-443.

Additional counsel: The district attorney could not bind the county to pay fees of additional counsel employed by him: Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46-138; Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

But the board of supervisors might employ additional counsel to prosecute criminal cases: Hopkins v. Clayton County, 32-15.

The board would be bound by a contract for that purpose, although not entered upon the records. Such contract might be proven by parol evidence: Jordan v. Osceola County, 59-388.

The court might, in the absence of the district attorney, appoint a special prosecutor: White v. Polk County, 17-413.

But the court could not, unless perhaps in the absence of the district attorney and to prevent failure of justice, bind the county for the payment of additional counsel for prosecution. The county is liable to pay for additional counsel only as the board of supervisors may have determined such counsel to be necessary: the volunteer military forces of the United States, held not to create a vacancy in the former office. (But see now, § 1353, ¶ 9):

Vacancy: The acceptance, by one holding the office of district attorney, of an office in Bryan v. Cattell, 15-538.

269. Opinions. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 3. The county attorney shall, without compensation, give opinions and advice to the board of supervisors, and other civil officers of their respective counties, when requested so to do by such board or officers, upon all matters in which the state or county is interested or relating to the duty of the board or officers, in which the state or county may have an interest, but shall not appear before the board of supervisors in the trial of any cause in which the state or county is not interested, or in applications to establish, vacate or alter highways.

270. Deputies. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 4. The county attorney may appoint deputies, who shall act without any compensation from the county, to assist him in the discharge of his duties. With the approval of the district court he may procure such assistance in the trial of a person charged with the crime of felony as he shall deem necessary, and such assistant, upon presenting to the board of supervisors a certificate of the district judge before whom said cause was tried, certifying to the service rendered, shall be allowed a reasonable compensation therefor, to be fixed by the board of supervisors. But nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the board of supervisors from employing an attorney to assist the county attorney in any cause or proceeding in which the state or county is interested.

271. Substitute. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 5. In the absence, sickness, or disability of the county attorney and his deputies, the court before whom it is his duty to appear and in which there may be business for him to attend, may appoint an attorney to act as county attorney by order to be entered upon the minutes of the court, and he shall receive out of the compensation allowed to the county attorney when such appearance is before a justice of the peace, such sum as the board of supervisors shall determine to be reasonable for the services rendered, and when it is before a court of record such sum as the judge shall determine to be a reasonable compensation, and while acting under said appointment he shall have all the authority and be subject to all the responsibilities herein conferred on county attorneys. But in criminal cases less than a felony, a justice of the peace or magistrate cannot appoint an attorney at the expense of the county or county attorney; provided, that a justice of the peace shall not appoint an attorney to act as county attorney in any case unless reasonable notice in writing has been given the county attorney that his services will be required before such justice at a time therein named.

272. No other compensation. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 6. No county attorney shall receive any fee or reward from or on behalf of any prosecutor or other individual, for services in any prosecution or business to which it shall be his official duty to attend, nor be concerned as an attorney or council [sel] for a party other than for the state or county, in any civil or criminal action pending or arising in his county upon the same facts upon which any criminal action or civil action wherein the state or county was a party, has been by such attorney commenced or prosecuted.

273. Receipts for moneys received. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 7. It shall be the duty of the county attorney whenever he shall receive any money in his official capacity, to give the person paying the same a receipt and file a duplicate with the county auditor.

274. Shall attend the grand jury. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 8. Whenever required by the grand jury the county attorney shall attend them for the purpose of examining witnesses in their presence, or of giving them advice in any legal matter, and to cause subpoenas or other writs of process to issue to bring witnesses and draw up bills of indictment, but he shall not be present with the grand jury when an indictment is considered and found.

275. Vacancy. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 9. In case of vacancy in the office of county attorney by death, resignation or otherwise, the board of supervisors shall appoint a county attorney, who shall give bond and take the same oath, and perform the same duties as the regular county attorney and shall hold said office until his successor is elected and qualified.

276. District attorney. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 10. Wherever the term district attorney appears in the laws of Iowa, it shall hereafter mean county attorney, and all laws now in force regulating the duties of district attorneys in criminal matters and proceedings, shall apply to county attorneys within their respective counties.

277. Compensation. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 11. The county attorneys of the several counties in this state shall be allowed an annual salary to be fixed by the board of supervisors of their respective counties at their June meeting of each even-numbered year as follows: In counties of not more than five thousand inhabitants not to exceed five hundred dollars. In counties of over five thousand and under ten thousand, not exceeding six hundred dollars. In counties of over ten thousand and under fifteen thousand not exceeding seven hundred and fifty dollars. In counties of over fifteen thousand and under twenty thousand, not exceeding nine hundred dollars. In counties of over twenty thousand and under thirty thousand, not exceeding one thousand dollars. In all counties of over thirty thousand not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars; said salary to be paid quarterly at the first meeting of the board of supervisors after it shall become due and in addition thereto for all fines collected (and school fund mortgages foreclosed) the same fees as are now allowed to attorneys for suits on written instruments where judgment is obtained and shall be entitled to his necessary and actual expenses incurred attending the discharge of his duty at a place other than his place of residence and the county seat which shall be audited and allowed by the board of supervisors of the county. Population shall be determined by the last preceding national or state census. Providing that in no county shall the salary be less than three hundred [dollars] and fees as herein specified.

278. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 12. The term of office of all district attorneys in the state shall end on the first day of January, A. D. 1887.

279. 21 G. A., ch. 73, § 13. Chapter 8 of title 3 and section 3775 of the code of 1873 together with all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

CHAPTER 9.

OF ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS.

280. Admission. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 1. The power to admit persons to practice as attorneys and counselors in the courts of this state, or any of them, is hereby vested exclusively in the supreme court.

281. Qualification. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 2. Every applicant for such admission must be at least twenty-one years of age, of good moral character, and an inhabitant of this state, and must have actually and in good faith pursued a regular course of study of the law for at least two full years, either in the office of a member of the bar of this state, residing therein, and in regular practice, or in some reputable law school in the United States, or partly in such office and partly in such law school: provided that in reckoning such period of study, the school year of any such law school consisting of not less than thirty-six weeks, exclusive of vacations, shall be considered equivalent to a full year.

282. Examination. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 3. Every such applicant shall also be examined by the court, or by a committee of not less than three members of the bar, appointed by the court, as to his learning and skill in the law; and the court must be satisfied, before admitting to practice, that the applicant has actually and in good faith devoted the time hereinbefore required to the study of law, and possesses the requisite learning and skill therein.

283. Graduates of state university. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 4. Such examination shall be held in open court: provided, that the graduates of the law department of the state university may be examined at the university, in Iowa City, by a committee of not less than three members of the bar, appointed by the supreme court for that purpose; and on production of his diploma from said law department, and a certificate by such committee that they have examined such applicant, and are of opinion that he possesses the learning and skill requisite for practice of the law, any such graduate may be exempted by the court from any further examination.

284. Attorneys from other states. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 5. Any person becoming a resident of this state, after having been admitted to the bar of any other of the United States, in which he has previously resided, may, in the discretion of the court, be admitted to practice in this state without examination or proof of period of study as hereinbefore provided, on proof of the other qualifications by this act required, and on satisfactory proof that he has practiced law regularly for not less than one year, in the state from which he comes, after having been duly admitted to the bar according to the laws of such state.

285. Oath. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 6. All persons on being admitted to the bar, shall take an oath, or affirmation, to support the constitution of the United States and of the state of Iowa, and to faithfully discharge the duties of an attorney and counselor of this state, according to the best of their ability.

286. Rules. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 7. The supreme court may, by general rules, prescribe the mode in which examinations under this act shall be conducted, and in which the qualifications required as to age, residence, character, and term of study shall be proved, and may make any further rules, not inconsistent with this act, for the purpose of carrying out its object and intent.

287. Appearance by attorneys from other states. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 8. Any member of the bar of another state, actually engaged in any cause or matter pending in any court of this state, may be permitted by such court to appear in and conduct such cause or matter while retaining his residence in another state, without being subject to the foregoing provisions of this act.

288. Repealing clause. 20 G. A., ch. 168, § 9. Sections 208, 209, and 210, of the code, are hereby repealed, but nothing herein contained shall affect or impair the right of any person heretofore admitted to practice in any of the courts of this state to continue so to practice.

289. Duties. 211. It is the duty of an attorney and counselor:

1. To maintain the respect due to the courts of justice and judicial officers;
2. To counsel or maintain no other actions, proceedings, or defenses than those which appear to him legal and just, except the defense of a person charged with a public offense;
3. To employ, for the purpose of maintaining the causes confided to him, such means only as are consistent with truth, and never to seek to mislead the judges by any artifice or false statement of fact or law;

4. To maintain inviolate the confidence, and, at any peril to himself, to preserve the secret of his client;

5. To abstain from all offensive personalities, and to advance no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness, unless required by the justice of the cause with which he is charged;

6. Not to encourage either the commencement or continuance of an action or proceeding from any motive of passion or interest;

7. Never to reject, for any consideration personal to himself, the cause of the defenseless or the oppressed. [R., § 2704; C., '51, § 1614.]

I. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES.

Retainer against opinion: While an attorney ought not to accept a retainer in a case where he feels that the law is against his client, yet the fact that he has, under a prior retainer, advocated views of the law and facts different from those upon which his client rests his cause, or has officially, as a judge or officer of the government, held a different view of the rights of the parties, will not, of itself, disqualify him to accept a retainer; and it will not constitute fraud on his part not to reveal to his client the fact of such prior opinion: Smith v. Chicago & N.W. R. Co., 60-515.

Purchase of property: An attorney who procures in himself legal title to property of which his client is owner holds the property in trust for his client: Byington v. Moore, 62-470. The same rule applies to property purchased by an attorney in the course of the litigation in which he is employed: Harper v. Perry, 28-57; Reickhoff v. Brecht, 51-633.

Estopped by fraud or negligence: An attorney who obtains a judgment for his client which is void for want of service of notice, due to his own culpable negligence or fraudulent intention, and allows the client, in ignorance of the defect, to purchase property at execution sale under such judgment, is estopped as against the client from asserting title to the same property acquired from the execution defendant, even after the relation of attorney and client has ceased. In such case whatever title is acquired by the attorney inures to the benefit of his former client: Phillips v. Blair, 38-649.

Conveyance to attorney: A conveyance from client to attorney will be set aside whenever advantage has been taken of the client through the influence or knowledge of the attorney possessed by reason of their peculiar relations: Polson v. Young, 37-196.

Tax title on client's property; trustee: An attorney who is acting as agent of the owner with respect to property, and has money in his hands derived from the property, buying in the property at tax sale, will be held to have acquired the same in trust for such owner, and cannot take and hold, as against his principal, a tax deed, although the principal is negligent in reimbursing him for his expenses in acquiring such title, unless he has first made a full and fair statement to his principal of the account between them, and of the amount necessary to reimburse him: Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Perry, 65-709.

Attorney not held as trustee; bad faith of client: Good faith and fairness is also required of the client in his relations with the attorney, and an attempt of the former to defraud the latter will authorize the latter to sever the relation and act for the protection of his own interests: Eckrote v. Myers, 41-324.

Where the attorney, having procured a decree of foreclosure for his client, and demanded the payment of his fees and advances without avail, bought in at tax sale the property covered by the decree and notified his client of that fact, still urging payment, which was not made, held, that a tax deed, subsequently taken by him in pursuance of the sale, could not be set aside seven years afterward at the suit of the client: Ibid.

The fact that an attorney retains in his possession papers relating to a transaction affecting land, under a claim of a lien on such papers for services, does not continue his relation as attorney of the owner in such sense as to defeat a tax title acquired thereon by him after the performance of his duties with reference to the matter is entirely completed: Baker v. Davis, 35-184.

Where the attorney, after in vain requesting payment of his fees by his client, by consent of the client caused property to be sold under his client's judgment, and bought the same at the sale, held, that such purchase was not fraudulent: Page v. Stubbs, 39-537.

Liability for interest and rents; demand: An attorney is not ordinarily liable for interest on money collected by him until demand therefor is made; nor is he liable for rent of property bought in by him in his own name at execution sale under a judgment in behalf of his client, where such purchase is not in fraud of his client's rights: Johnson v. Semple, 31-49.

But the commencement of suit to recover money in the attorney's hands constitutes sufficient demand to authorize the allowance of interest from that time: Hollenbeck v. Stanberry, 38-325.

The attorney is not liable for interest on money if kept on hand for his client or deposited in bank to the client's credit, but if used by the attorney he is liable for interest: Mansfield v. Wilkerson, 26-482.

Improper conduct: A court should never hesitate to stop counsel in attempts to drag improper matters before a jury, and should visit merited punishment when such unprofessional conduct is indulged in. But it does not follow that in such cases a verdict will not stand. To require setting aside of the verdict prejudice must be shown: Hammond v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 49-450.

Where an attorney, in an excited manner, directly contradicted the statements of the court in ruling upon an objection to evidence, alleging that the facts upon which such ruling was based, as stated by the court, were not true, held, that he was guilty of contempt: Russell v. French, 67-102.

An attorney who has acted for defendant in a preliminary examination cannot afterwards act for the state in a prosecution against the same defendant for a crime substantially the same though not identical with that for which he was first examined. Attorneys are not bound to serve those who will not compensate them, and may withdraw from the service of such, but they cannot take employment on the other side: State v. Halstead, 73-376.

Not liable for exercise of discretion: Where an attorney was employed with the understanding that he was to use his best judgment as to the steps necessary to be taken in the case, held, that he was not liable in an action for damages, in view of the care taken in the particular case: Bennett v. Phillips, 57-174.

Liability for trespass: An attorney cannot be held liable for the wrongful seizure of property in the suit in which he acts, unless his acts or directions are shown to have in some way caused the seizure: Rice v. Melendy, 41-393.

An attorney who simply obeys the instructions of his client in directing the seizure of property under attachment is not liable therefor. It is immaterial that he has neither belief nor suspicion as to the ownership of the property and seeks no information with respect thereto: Dawson v. Buford, 70-127.

Not jointly liable with client: An attorney who has acted as a mere agent for his client should not be made a party to a suit against his client in regard to acts so done, unless he is charged with fraud: Lyon v. Tevis, 8-79.

If the attorney is thus improperly made a party defendant, he is entitled to be dismissed with costs: Paton v. Lancaster, 38-494.

II. COMPENSATION.

Evidence as to value of services: In an action to recover the value of professional services, evidence as to the success attending the rendition of such services is admissible: Berry v. Davis, 34-594.

Under the general custom of the profession, the values in controversy control charges for services. Therefore, in an action by an attorney to recover for services rendered, held error to instruct the jury that the magnitude of the controversy and the great value of the property involved should not be considered in determining the amount of recovery: Smith v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 60-515.

Contract for services in another state: Where an attorney is employed in this state to render services in another state, the rate of compensation is to be determined according to the value of the services at the place where the contract is made: Stanberry v. Dickerson, 35-493.

Contract for excessive fees: Nothing but the best of reasons will justify an attorney in exacting from his client, after the work is partially completed, an agreement to pay more than an ordinary fee under a threat of withdrawing from the case if such agreement is not made: Bolton v. Daily, 48-348.

Additional attorney: Where an attorney contracted to prosecute the case for a given sum, and afterwards turned the case over to another attorney, stating to the client that he had taken the second attorney into the case with him, held, that in the absence of any other knowledge on the part of the client as to the relation of the second attorney to the case, the latter could not recover more than the contract price: Ennis v. Hultz, 46-76.

Where the client employs an attorney and authorizes him to employ such legal assistance as he may require, any attorney employed by him reasonably necessary in the prosecution of the case may recover compensation from the client: Clyde v. Peavy, 74-47.

Implied contract: Where an attorney was employed by one of several defendants, and rendered services in the case for all, with the knowledge and implied consent of the others, held, that a recovery for services rendered might be had by such attorney as against all the defendants, although by contract between them, not known to the attorney, the one employing him was to bear the entire expense of attorney fees: McCrary v. Ruddick, 33-521.

Surety not liable to principal's attorney: One who is a party to an action and interested in the result, as a surety in an action to which his principal is party, will not, for that reason alone, be liable for the compensation of an attorney rendering services for the principal, but his liability must be proven by evidence of retainer or recognition as attorney of the party sought to be charged: Turner v. Myers, 23-391.

Liability of husband for fee of wife's attorney in divorce suit; necessities: The husband is liable for services rendered by attorney for the wife for establishing the innocence of the latter on a charge of adultery made by the husband in an action for divorce. Such services are deemed necessities: Porter v. Briggs, 38-166. And the allowance of suit money to the wife in the divorce proceeding will not preclude the recovery of additional compensation from the husband: Clyde v. Peavy, 74-47.

But the husband is not liable for wife's attorneys' fees in a suit brought by the wife for divorce where it is not shown that such services come within the scope of necessities: Johnson v. Williams, 3 G. Gr., 97.

III. CONTINGENT FEE; CHAMPERTY.

Good faith: If the attorney visits the client for the purpose of entering into a contract of employment, it is his duty, before making the contract, to distinctly and clearly advise the client as to all the facts and circumstances within his knowledge relating to the case. So held in regard to the contract for a share of the amount to be recovered as a contingent fee: Ryan v. Ashton, 42-365.

Construction: A construction of a contract between attorney and client which would operate to prevent the client from settling his suit will not be favored by the courts: Ellwood v. Wilson, 21-523.

Champerty and maintenance: There being no statute in this state against champerty or maintenance, and there being no necessity for enforcing the English doctrine on the subject, that doctrine is not deemed in force here: Wright v. Meek, 3 G. Gr., 472.

Contingent fee; against public policy: A contract by which the attorney was to receive a per cent. of the amount recovered by the client in the suit or on settlement, the attorney to advance costs and expenses, to be paid out of the recovery, and the client agreeing not to settle without the attorney's consent, held void as against public policy. Preceding case doubted: Boardman v. Thompson, 25-487. See, also, Hyatt v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 68-662.

Contract of attorney to hold client harmless: A contract between attorney and client, that the former will hold the latter harmless from any judgment to be recovered against him provided he will appeal the case, is against public policy and void: Adye v. Hanna, 47-264.

Contracts not champertous: A mere contract for a contingent fee, without stipulation against settlement by client or for advancement of costs by attorney, is valid: McDonald v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 29-170; Winslow v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71-197.

The assignment of a note or open account and action thereon is not champertous, although the assignee gives, as the only consideration therefor, his obligation to pay the net proceeds of the action to the assignor: Knadler v. Sharp, 36-232.

An agreement by a mortgagee, in consideration of his release from a note upon which he was surety and the repayment to him of money paid on the note, that he would foreclose a mortgage held by him as such surety, and procure the execution of the sheriff's deed to the payee of the note, held not champertous: Cooley v. Osborne, 50-536.

Expense; share of recovery: The mere agreement for a contingent fee is not champertous. To constitute champerty the agreement on the part of the champertor must be to carry on the suit at his own expense, as well as for a share of the recovery: Jewel v. Neidy, 61-299.

Neither is it champertous for a person who is a party in interest, and not an officious promoter of another's strife, to agree to bear the expenses of litigation; and an attorney agreeing to carry on the litigation for a proportion of the recovery, knowing that the costs are thus to be paid by a party in interest, is not guilty of champerty: Ibid.

Champerty not a defense: The fact that an action is being prosecuted under a champertous contract cannot be set up as a defense therein: Allison v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 42-274; Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55-582.

The defense that a contract by which a cause of action is assigned is champertous can be only pleaded in an action between the parties to such contract, and if not pleaded therein the contract can be enforced as valid between them: Vimont v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 69-296.

290. Disbarment. 212. An attorney and counselor who is guilty of deceit or collusion, or consents thereto, with intent to deceive a court, or judge, or a party to an action or proceeding, is liable to be disbarred, and shall forfeit to the injured party treble damages, to be recovered in a civil action. [R., § 2705; C., '51, § 1615.]

The office of an attorney is one of great confidence, and it ought to be one of the strictest integrity. Certain facts held sufficient to justify the suspension of an attorney for fraud and deceit towards his clients: Stemmer v. Wright, 54-164.

See §§ 295, 296, and notes.

291. Power; authority. 213. An attorney and counselor has power:

1. To execute in the name of his client a bond, or other written instrument, necessary and proper for the prosecution of an action or proceeding about to be or already commenced; or for the prosecution or defense of any right growing out of an action, proceeding, or final judgment rendered therein;

2. To bind his client to any agreement, in respect to any proceeding within the scope of his proper duties and powers; but no evidence of any such agreement is receivable except the statement of the attorney himself, his written agreement signed and filed with the clerk, or an entry thereof upon the records of the court;

3. To receive money claimed by his client in an action or proceeding during the pendency thereof, or afterwards, unless he has been previously discharged by his client, and upon payment thereof, and not otherwise, to discharge the claim or acknowledge satisfaction of the judgment. [R., § 2706; C., '51, § 1616.]

Authority to sign bond: Where the lower court upheld an attachment bond signed by the attorney for his client, held, that on appeal it would be presumed that it appeared to the lower court that the attorney had such authority, in the absence of any showing to the contrary: Goddard v. Cunningham, 6-100.

Affidavits, verifications of pleadings, etc.: An attorney may make affidavit on an application of his client for a change of venue: State v. Mooney, 10-506; or for continuance: Widner v. Hunt, 4-355.

The attorney may verify a petition where he shows a knowledge of the facts: Chittenden v. Hobbs, 9-417; Bates v. Robinson, 8-518.

But if the knowledge of the attorney is not shown the verification is insufficient: Clute v. Hazleton, 51-355.

Professional statement: Where the professional statement of an attorney is received it is to be regarded as an affidavit: Rice v. Griffith, 9-539.

Witness for his client: An attorney is a competent witness for his client: Walsh v. Murphy, 2 G. Gr., 227.

But no attorney having a just conception of his true and proper position will willingly unite the character of counsel and witness in the same case: Alger v. Merritt, 16-121.

As to privileged communications between attorney and client, see § 4893.

Before bringing suit: An attorney may be employed in contemplation of a suit to be brought, and his client will be bound by his stipulations with reference thereto, to the same extent as if such stipulations had been made after the bringing of suit: Hefferman v. Burt, 7-320.

Employment of another attorney: An attorney intrusted with the business of his principal has no authority to employ another attorney to represent his principal, and the latter will not be liable for costs incurred by the attorney thus employed: Antrobus v. Sherman, 65-230.

But where by reason of reliance on an agreement with such second attorney the adverse attorney was not present when the case was called, and a judgment was recovered by default, held, there was sufficient surprise to warrant a new trial: Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Gillett, 38-434.

When an attorney for any cause is unable to give attention to the business of his client which has been entrusted to him, he may lawfully place it in the hands of other attorneys, and his client will not be chargeable with negligence in regard to the case if the counsel thus selected acts with ordinary prudence in attempting to appear at the proper time: First National Bank v. Harwick, 74-227.

Contract to turn over business: An attorney to whom notes have been intrusted for collection has no authority to turn them over to another for that purpose, and a contract to do so is illegal, so that damages cannot be recovered for its breach: Smalley v. Greene, 52-241.

Stipulations of attorney: Stipulations made in open court by an attorney of record in the case, and while the case is pending, if free from fraud and mistake and clearly established, will be enforced by the court: Lockwood v. Black Hawk County, 34-235.

It is competent for attorneys to agree for an extension of time for filing a bill of exceptions, and when such agreement is reduced to writing and filed it becomes a part of the record in the case without being embodied in a bill of exceptions: State ex rel. v. Chamberlin, 74-266.

Granting extension: Where the attorney was directed to "secure or collect" the claim, held, that he had authority to extend the time of payment on receiving additional security: Crawford v. Nolan, 70-97.

Agreement for judgment and stay: An attorney appearing for a party may make an agreement in writing for judgment and an extension of time of payment: Potter v. Parsons, 14-286.

Compromise: An attorney cannot, without express authority, make a compromise which will operate injuriously upon his client: De Louis v. Meek, 2 G. Gr., 55; Powell v. Spaulding, 3 G. Gr., 443.

Where an attorney, retained in an action to recover possession of real property, entered into a contract that his client should pay defendant a specified sum, whereupon defendant should surrender possession, held, that such agreement was not binding upon the client and that he could recover without payment of the sum stipulated: Stuck v. Reese, 15-122.

When an attorney has, in good faith, compromised the suit and consents to judgment against his client, the latter cannot, afterward, in an action in another state on such judgment, defend on the ground of want of authority in the attorney to make the compromise: Crawford v. White, 17-560.

Agreement of client not to compromise: A construction of a contract between an attorney and client which would prevent settlement of the suit by the client will not be favored by the courts: Ellwood v. Wilson, 21-523.

Agreement as to judgment: An attorney cannot consent to a judgment against his client or waive any cause of defense in the case; neither can he settle or compromise it without special authority; but he is, by his general employment, authorized to do all acts necessary or incidental to the prosecution or defense which pertain to the remedy pursued. The choice of proceedings, the manner of trial and the like are all in the sphere of his general authority, and as to these matters his client is bound by his action. Therefore, held, that the attorney, representing his client in two suits involving substantially the same questions might bind his client by an agreement that the judgment resulting in the trial of one of the cases should determine the kind of judgment to be entered in the other: Ohlquest v. Farwell, 71-231.

Agreement to convey land: An agreement by attorney for plaintiff in an action of right, for conveyance of a portion of the premises, held not binding on the client: Rayburn v. Kuhl, 10-92.

On appeal: An attorney retained to attend to a suit in a particular court is not thereby authorized without further authority to appeal the case, and cannot recover, under such circumstances, for services rendered in the appellate court: Hopkins v. Mallard, 1 G. Gr., 117.

Agreement of record: A nunc pro tunc record of an agreement by an attorney made a year after the agreement was entered into, and upon affidavits, after a dispute had arisen with reference to the agreement, held not sufficient: Hiller v. Landis, 44-223.

Where a new trial was asked on the ground of an agreement of the opposite attorney that the cause should not be tried that week, held, that as the agreement was denied by the attorney and did not appear to have been made of record and signed by the attorney, or made in open court and entered of record, the motion could not be granted: Barnes v. Enneaga, 53-497.

Agreement of attorney for the state in a criminal prosecution that judgment be arrested until a future time, held invalid, because not in writing and recorded: State v. Stewart, 74-336.

The facts appearing from an affidavit of the attorney of a party, held sufficient to establish implied consent to the determination of a cause in vacation under § 229: Myers v. Funk, 51-92.

While the client might bind himself by a stipulation in the case, his affidavit is not receivable as evidence of an agreement by his attorney binding him: Sapp v. Aiken, 68-699.

An agreement of the attorney that a case should be presented to the supreme court upon an abstract, waiving a transcript of the evidence, cannot be enforced, if denied, unless in writing or of record: Preston v. Hale, 65-409.

Fraud of attorney: An attorney, when acting in court procedure for his client, acts in his stead, and a judgment recovered may be set aside for fraudulent representations made by the attorney in procuring it, when such representations would have been a ground for setting it aside if made by the party himself: De Louis v. Meek, 2 G. Gr., 55.

The malfeasance of an attorney in accepting a retainer for one party, after having previously been employed by the other, the fact being known to the first client from the time of the wrongful act, will not constitute fraud, vitiating the judgment recovered for the second client against the first: Humphrey v. Darlington, 15-207.

Negligence of attorney: The law regards the negligence of an attorney as the client's own neglect, and will give no relief from the consequences thereof: Jones v. Leech, 46-186.

Negligence of the clerk of the attorney, in filing pleadings, must be imputed to the client himself: Hayward v. Gohisbury, 63-436.

The negligence of the attorney is imputed to the client, when it is sought to set aside default where verdicts or judgments binding upon the parties have been entered, but not where the action has merely been dismissed for want of prosecution: Byington v. Quincy, 61-480.

Mistake of attorney: While the law exacts of attorneys diligence in their business, and will not relieve against their negligence, yet relief may be granted where mistake has occurred without fault. Attorneys are not required to be diligent and careful beyond the capacities of human nature: Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 49-657.

Collection of claim or judgment: The authority of an attorney with respect to a claim does not terminate with the rendition of judgment, but he may control the judgment until its collection: Death v. Bank of Pittsburg, 1-332; and he has authority to receive payment and enter satisfaction of the judgment: McCarver v. Nealey, 1 G. Gr., 360.

As the attorney has the authority to receive money claimed in the action, he may receive it from any person from whom it may be collected in the action, or who, for the protection of any interest of his own, has the right to pay it. Therefore held, that an attorney prosecuting an action to foreclose a mortgage might accept from a junior mortgagee who was a party to the suit the money necessary to entitle the junior mortgagee to an assignment of the mortgage under § 4559, with the agreement that the action should afterwards be prosecuted for the interest of the junior mortgagee: Harbach v. Colvin, 73-638.

May receive money only in payment: An attorney has no authority to receive anything but money in payment of a claim left with him for collection, unless specially so authorized: Drain v. Doggett, 41-682; McCarver v. Nealey, 1 G. Gr., 360. But if the attorney accepts a check in payment and realizes the money thereon the client is bound: Harbach v. Colvin, 73-638.

He cannot without special power accept as payment a less amount than the whole sum due, and such special authority must be established in the same way that the authority of other agents must be shown, and not by the attorney's declarations: Bigler v. Toy, 38-637.

Action by attorney in his own name: It seems that it is not unusual nor improper for an attorney to whom a claim has been sent for collection to bring action thereon in his own name: SeEVERS v. Hamilton, 6-199.

Recovery back of money paid over: In such a case, the money collected on the judgment thus recovered having been paid to the client, held, that the attorney could not recover back from the client the amount thus paid over, upon being compelled to refund the sum collected on account of irregularities in the proceeding in which the judgment was recovered, unless he could put the client in statu quo as to the original claim: Ibid.

Ratification: Unauthorized acts of an attorney in the name of his client may be ratified by the client, who cannot retain the benefits of an unauthorized act and repudiate the portions of the transaction which are injurious to him: Brown v. Kiene, 72-342.

As to unauthorized appearance, see notes to next section.

292. Proof of authority. 214. The court may, on motion, for either party and on the showing of reasonable grounds therefor, require the attorney for the adverse party, or for any one of the several adverse parties, to produce, or prove by his own oath or otherwise, the authority under which he appears, and, until he does so, may stay all proceedings by him on behalf of the parties for whom he assumes to appear. [R., § 2707; C., '51, § 1617.]

Want of authority; how raised: Absence of authority on the part of plaintiff's attorney to bring a suit may be a ground for dismissing it, or, if the attorney wants time in order to make a showing of authority, for continuance, but it cannot be taken advantage of as a ground to defeat recovery: Savery v. Savary, 3-271.

The showing to require an attorney to prove his authority, held insufficient in a particular case: Savery v. Savary, 8-217.

A judgment by default entered against a defendant upon an appearance for him by attorney, which is made without authority and by mistake, should be set aside: Rice v. Griffith, 9-539.

Where a demurrer is filed without authority and a valid appearance is afterward made, a new demurrer may be filed: Winterstien v. Walker, 10-198.

Authority; evidence of: Authority to appear, held sufficiently established by the attorney's own testimony and a written receipt signed by the party for whom appearance was made, acknowledging receipt of money collected by the litigation, although the party himself testified that no such authority was given: Ellis v. White, 61-644.

Where the statement of the attorney in showing his authority discloses the fact that he is acting on written authority, he may properly be required to produce it: State ex rel. v. Tugman, 6-496.

An affidavit of an attorney, that he appeared in the lower court for defendant, cannot be received on appeal to show that the lower court had jurisdiction: Stout v. Fortner, 7-183.

Notice to attorney: Knowledge of the attorney is, in general, considered notice to the client: De Louis v. Meek, 2 G. Gr., 55.

Service upon attorney: In ordinary actions service upon an attorney is not sufficient to give a court jurisdiction: Death v. Bank of Pittsburg, 1-382.

Under the English chancery practice, where the judgment plaintiff was a non-resident, service in an action in equity to enjoin the collection of the judgment might be made upon a resident attorney having charge of such collection; but under our procedure such an action might be brought to enjoin the sheriff from levying execution under the judgment: Ibid.

Appearance of authorized attorney cures any defect by reason of want of authority in such attorney to accept service of the notice: Fanning v. Minnesota R. Co., 37-379.

Defense should be shown: A party seeking to have a judgment set aside on the ground that it was rendered on appearance by an attorney without authority should allege and show a defense to the claim: Russell v. Pottawattamie County, 23-256.

Authority not questioned on appeal: Where the record, without setting out the evidence, shows that the lower court was satisfied by affidavit of the authority of the attorney to appear, the ruling will not be disturbed on appeal: Huston v. Stringham, 21-36.

The authority of the attorney cannot be first questioned by his client on appeal, when he has acquiesced in his action in the court below: Hefferman v. Burt, 7-320.

Presumption as to attorney's authority: A regular attorney has authority to bring a suit and continue it to its final determination. He cannot be called upon to prove his authority, but the want of it must be shown by the objecting party: State v. Carothers, 1 G. Gr., 464.

Where the record shows appearance by attorney, a party attacking the judgment, on the ground of want of authority of the attorney to appear, must overcome such presumption: Potter v. Parsons, 14-286; and must do so by clear and satisfactory evidence: Wheeler v. Cox, 56-36; Russell v. Pottawattamie County, 29-256.

Although the attorney cannot, without special authority, admit service of jurisdictional process upon his client, yet it will be presumed in all collateral attacks, and perhaps on appeal or writ of error, that a regular attorney who appeared for a defendant, though not served, had authority to do so: Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20-161.

The appearance of an attorney for a party is prima facie evidence of authority, and, before his act can be avoided, injury resulting from the unauthorized appearance must be shown: Piggott v. Adicks, 3 G. Gr., 427.

Where the record recites an acceptance of service by attorney, it will be presumed, in favor of the judgment, that authority to accept service existed, or that some other form of service was shown: Prince v. Griffin, 10-552.

The fact of appearance by attorney being established, it is for the party insisting that the appearance was unauthorized and the judgment void to show that fact: Bond v. Epley, 48-600.

Absence of authority; foreign judgment: The defendant in an action upon a foreign judgment may deny the authority of the attorney who appeared for him: Baltzell v. Nosler, 1-589; Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20-161.

When want of authority of attorney to enter appearance is made the ground of an equitable defense in an action on a foreign judgment, it should be alleged also that defendant is not indebted to plaintiff on the claim on which the judgment was based: Crawford v. White, 17-566.

In a suit on a foreign judgment the fact that the attorneys who appeared for defendant were not authorized to do so is immaterial, if it appears that defendant was duly served with notice, and would have been concluded without an appearance: Woodward v. Willard, 33-542.

In action on domestic judgments: In case of a domestic judgment rendered upon an unauthorized appearance and without service, the party against whom the judgment is thus improperly rendered is entitled to relief if the judgment is unjust, and relief is sought by bill or motion, without laches; but the party must promptly disavow the action of the attorney upon receiving knowledge thereof: Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20-161.

A judgment rendered without service of notice and upon appearance by attorney without authority is void: Macomber v. Peck, 39-351.

If an attorney is in fact not authorized to appear for a party, the latter may be relieved against the judgment by direct action in equity to set it aside: Bryant v. Williams, 21-329.

A junior lienholder may, for the purpose of establishing his right to redeem from the foreclosure under a senior mortgage, show that an agent or attorney who entered appearance for him, or accepted service, did so without authority, and this may be shown as against third persons purchasing at the sale: Newcomb v. Dewey, 27-381.

Attorney exceeding authority: The right to contest a judgment, on account of want of authority of the attorney appearing for a defendant not served, exists only when the want of authority is total, and not where an attorney, regularly employed, has merely exceeded his authority: Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20-161.

Ratification: A party claiming the benefit of a plea put in by an attorney cannot deny the authority of such attorney to act in the case: Oltrogge v. Schutte, 51-279.

Where an attorney accepted part payment in full satisfaction of a judgment procured for his client, and no further steps were taken for the enforcement of said judgment for eleven years, held, that it would be inferred that the attorney had authority to make such settlement or that the client was informed of his action, if without authority, and had by long silence ratified it: Ried v. Dickinson, 37-56.

The client, having ratified the act of the attorney appearing for him by paying him for his services, is bound by the judgment: Ryan v. Doyle, 31-53.

293. Lien. 215. An attorney has a lien for a general balance of compensation upon:

1. Any papers belonging to his client, which have come into his hands in the course of his professional employment;

2. Money in his hands belonging to his client;

3. Money due his client in the hands of the adverse party, or attorney of such party, in an action or proceeding in which the attorney claiming the lien was employed, from the time of giving notice in writing to such adverse party, or attorney of such party, if the money is in the possession or under the control of such attorney, which notice shall state the amount claimed, and, in general terms, for what services.

4. After judgment in any court of record, such notice may be given and the lien made effective against the judgment debtor, by entering the same in the judgment docket opposite the entry of the judgment. [R., § 2708; C., '51, § 1618; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 2.]

Securities; assignment of: Where an attorney transfers to another securities on which he claims a lien, his assignee can only hold them for the reasonable value of the services rendered: Collins v. Jennings, 42-447.

Subject to rights under trust deed: Where a suit was commenced to subject the property and income of a corporation to the payment of bonds secured by deed of trust, and a receiver was appointed, held, that the attorney of the corporation had no lien on its funds for services rendered after commencement of suit which would have priority over the claims of the bondholders: Des Moines Gas Co. v. West, 50-16.

Burden of proof: Where money collected by an attorney was retained by him under the claim of a lien, held, that it was for him to aver and prove the services and their value: Stanton v. Clinton, 52-109.

Lien prior to garnishment: The lien of an attorney upon money due his client, in the hands of the adverse party, attaches from the time of giving notice to such party, and his lien will not be postponed to a subsequent garnishment: Myers v. McHugh, 16-335.

Notice in writing: The notice of the lien to bind the adverse party must be in writing: Phillips v. Germon, 43-101.

Notice at commencement of suit: A notice of a claim for a lien is sufficient if inserted in the original notice of the action (at least if signed by the attorney in his individual capacity as well as in his capacity as attorney for his client): Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 56-720.

Service of notice upon agent of corporation: While service of notice of attorney's lien, in an action against a corporation, might not be sufficient if made upon one of the class of agents upon whom service of original notice is authorized, yet if such service of notice of lien is upon one of such agents in connection with the service of the original notice, such service of notice of lien is sufficient, the service of the original notice being sufficient to charge such agent with a duty in relation to the matter: Ibid.

In action on tort: An attorney's lien may properly be claimed, not only in all actions on contract, but also in actions for damages arising from tort: Ibid.

For future services: The lien attaches, after proper notice, not only for services then rendered, but for those thereafter rendered: Ibid.

Settlement: The parties may settle without the consent of the attorneys, and without first paying their fees, unless notice of an attorney's lien has been given: Casar v. Sargeant, 7-317.

But if notice is given the lien will not be defeated by the fact that the case is settled without judgment having been rendered: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 56-720.

Notice; set-off: An attorney's lien does not attach upon money due his client in the hands of the adverse party until notice is given to such party; therefore, held, that the right to set off a judgment existing in favor of the adverse party against the client before notice of the attorney's lien was not subject to such lien. Whether such right of set-off may be taken advantage of as against the attorney's lien, where it does not arise until after notice of such lien, quære: Hurst v. Sheets, 21-501. (This case was under Rev., § 2708, which did not contain a provision similar to ¶ 4 of this section.)

The lien of an attorney is upon the interest of his client in the judgment, and it is subject to an existing right of set-off in the other party: National Bank v. Eyre, 3 McCrary, 175.

Subject to costs: An attorney cannot have a lien upon any greater amount than shall actually be found to be owing by the opposite party to his client. And where an attorney took an assignment of a judgment to secure his fees, held, that he stood in the shoes of his client, and must take the judgment with all the burdens, such as costs taxed in favor of the opposite party, etc., attaching by the course of the litigation: Tiffany v. Stewart, 60-207; Watson v. Smith, 63-228.

The supreme court cannot grant an attorney's lien on a judgment when such lien is not secured in the proceedings in the court below, as such relief would be the exercise of original jurisdiction: Preston v. Daniels, 2 G. Gr., 536.

Settlement; notice of lien: The adverse party is charged with notice by the entry on the judgment docket, and from the time of such entry he cannot prejudice the rights of the attorney claiming a lien by settlement with his client. As the law does not give the lien on the judgment, but on the claim of the adverse party, or the money in the hands of such party, the lien will continue, although the judgment itself may be reversed on appeal. Also, held, that the fact that the entry on the judgment docket claimed the lien on the judgment and not on the money in the hands of the adverse party was immaterial: Winslow v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71-197.

Satisfaction of judgment; discharge of lien: After the entry of the notice in the judgment docket the attorney acquires an interest in the judgment, and may, by proper proceedings, have the same enforced to the extent of such interest. His interest cannot be divested by a discharge of the judgment by the parties, or by their consenting that it be set aside: Brainard v. Elwood, 53-30.

Where the attorney perfected the title of his client in real property attached in the action, and thereby satisfied the judgment as against the adverse party, held, that the entry of his lien in the judgment docket did not preserve it upon such property in the hands of a purchaser from his client: Couen v. Boone, 48-350.

Where the attorney, by authority of his client, releases of record the lien of the judgment in behalf of the client, the attorney cannot afterwards assert, as against a subsequent purchaser, any lien or interest in himself under such judgment: Wishard v. Bidelle, 64-526.

Payment of money to clerk: A party cannot avoid the lien by unconditionally paying the money to the clerk; but he may pay it to the clerk to be held by him subject to such lien: Fisher v. Oskaloosa, 28-381.

294. How released. 216. Any person interested may release such lien, by executing a bond in a sum double the amount claimed, or in such sum as may be fixed by a judge, payable to the attorney, with security to be approved by the clerk of the supreme or district court, conditioned to pay any amount finally found due the attorney for his services, which amount may be ascertained by suit on the bond. Such lien will be released, unless the attorney, within ten days after demand therefor, files with the clerk a full and complete bill of particulars of the services and amount claimed for each item, or written contract with the party for whom the services were rendered. [R., § 2709; C., '51, § 1619.]

[The words "files with the clerk" in the seventh line are omitted in the printed Code, and the words "furnishes any party interested" are in their place. But the original rolls in the secretary of state's office give the section as here printed.]

The filing of the bond discharges, not only the lien of the attorney on the judgment, but any lien which he may have under the preceding section. The provisions of § 304 do not apply to a case of this kind, and after the filing of the bond provided in this section and release of the attorney's lien, he cannot retain such lien by filing a bond as there provided: Cross v. Ackley, 40-493.

In an action by the client against the attorney to recover moneys collected by the attorney, the fact that the attorney is entitled to a portion of the money collected in payment for services will not render the proceeding one to discharge an attorney's lien in such sense as to make it necessary to tender a bond in order to obtain a release of the property: Armitage v. Sullivan, 69-426.

295. License revoked. 217. Any court of record may revoke or suspend the license of an attorney or counselor at law to practice therein, and a revocation or suspension in one county operates to the same extent in the courts of all other counties. [R., § 2710; C., '51, § 1620.]

The court cannot revoke or suspend the license of an attorney except after proceedings are commenced for that purpose as herein-after provided, and the party has had his day in court. It cannot be done summarily as a punishment for contempt: State v. Start, 7-499.

296. Causes for revocation or suspension. 218. The following are sufficient causes for revocation or suspension:

1. When he has been convicted of a felony, or of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, in either of which cases the record of conviction is conclusive evidence;

2. When he is guilty of a wilful disobedience or violation of the order of the court, requiring him to do or forbear an act connected with, or in the course of his profession;

3. For a wilful violation of any of the duties of an attorney or counselor as hereinbefore prescribed;

4. For doing any other act to which such a consequence is, by law, attached. [R., § 2711; C., '51, § 1621.]

An attorney may be punished under ¶ 2 for disobedience to an order of court to pay over money to his client as provided in § 4116: Cross v. Ackley, 40-493, 498.

Charges in a particular case against an attorney for making false representations to clients for the purpose of retaining money collected and defrauding them; also for collecting and refusing to pay over money, to which the attorney pleaded guilty, held sufficient to justify an order suspending the attorney and providing in a certain contingency for his final disbarment: Stemmer v. Wright, 54-164.

297. Proceedings. 219. The proceedings to remove or suspend an attorney may be commenced by the direction of the court, or on motion of any individual. In the former case, the court must direct some attorney to draw up the accusation; in the latter, the accusation must be drawn up and sworn to by the person making it. [R., § 2712; C., '51, § 1622.]

Proceedings to disbar an attorney are special proceedings in which the provisions for change of venue in civil actions are applicable: State v. Clarke, 46-155.

It is probable that the court could, in the exercise of its inherent authority, require a member of the bar to discharge the duty of conducting the prosecution of a proceeding for disbarment. But the exercise of such authority rests in the sound discretion of the judge, and the persons commencing the disbarment proceeding could not object to the action of the court in refusing to make such appointment: Byington v. Moore, 70-206.

In proceeding against an attorney for contempt the accusation should specify the manner in which the contempt was committed; if by words, the words used should be set out; if by acts, they should be described: Perry v. State, 3 G. Gr., 550.

298. Order; notice. 220. If the court deem the accusation sufficient to justify farther action, it shall cause an order to be entered requiring the accused to appear and answer on a day therein fixed, either at the same or a subsequent term, and shall cause a copy of the accusation and order to be served upon him personally. [R., § 2713; C., '51, § 1623.]

299. Trial. 221. To the accusation he may plead or demur, and the issues joined thereon shall, in all cases, be tried by the court, all the evidence being reduced to writing, filed and preserved. [R., § 2714; C., '51, § 1624.]

300. Judgment. 222. If the accused plead guilty, or fail to answer, the court shall proceed to render such judgment as the case requires. [R., § 2715; C., '51, § 1625.]

301. Appeal. 223. In case of a removal or suspension being ordered by a district [or circuit] court, an appeal therefrom lies to the supreme court, and all the original papers, together with a transcript of the record, shall thereupon be transferred to the supreme court, to be there considered and finally acted upon. A judgment of acquittal by the district [or circuit] court is final. [R., § 2716; C., '51, § 1626.]

302. Failure to account. 224. An attorney who receives the money or property of his client in the course of his professional business, and refuses to pay or deliver it in a reasonable time after demand, is guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 2717; C., '51, § 1627.]

303. Exception. 225. When the attorney claims to be entitled to a lien upon the money or property, he is not liable to the penalties of the preceding section, until the person demanding the money proffers sufficient security for the payment of the amount of the attorney's claim when it is legally ascertained. [R., § 2718; C., '51, § 1628.]

304. Security. 226. Nor is he in any case liable as aforesaid, provided he gives sufficient security that he will pay over the whole, or any portion thereof, to the claimant when he is found entitled thereto. [R., § 2719; C., '51, § 1629.]

The bond here provided is only to exempt an attorney from proceedings against him under § 302, and is not designed to enable him to retain a lien which is discharged by the bond referred to in § 294: Cross v. Ackley, 40-493.

CHAPTER 10.

OF JURORS.

305. Who competent. 227. All qualified electors of the state of good moral character, sound judgment, and in full possession of the senses of hearing and seeing, are competent jurors in their respective counties. [R., § 2720; C., '51, § 1630.]

Under certain facts, held, that a juror was incompetent as not being a qualified elector; also held that an objection to the competency of a juror should be interposed when he is sworn, but, if not then known, may be interposed after verdict: The State v. Groome, 10-308.

As to who are electors, see Const., art. II, § 1.

A judgment rendered upon a verdict by a jury, some members of which are disqualified, is erroneous, but not void; it might be reversed upon appeal, but it cannot be disregarded as a nullity: Foreman v. Hunter, 69-550.

The requirement that jurors shall be chosen from the body of the county is intended to prevent the selection of jurors resident out of the county, and does not require that jurors shall be taken from all parts of the county; therefore, held, that a statute authorizing the holding of the district court in two places in a county, and providing that when held at one of these places the jurisdiction should be limited to certain townships, and the jurors should be selected from only these townships, did not interfere with the right of trial by jury: Trimble v. State, 2 G. Gr., 404.

306. Who exempt. 228. The following persons are exempt from liability to act as jurors: All persons holding office under the laws of the United States or of this state; all practicing attorneys, physicians, and clergymen; all acting professors or teachers of any college, school, or other institution of learning; and all persons disabled by bodily infirmity, or over sixty-five years of age. [R., § 2721; C., '51, § 1631.]

The exemption is a personal privilege, which may be waived, and is not a ground for challenge: State v. Adams, 20-486. See § 3984.

307. When excused. 229. Any person may also be excused from serving on a jury when his own interests or those of the public will be materially injured by his attendance, or when the state of his own health, or the death, or the sickness of a member of his family, requires his absence. [R., § 2722; C., '51, § 1632.]

That jurors have been excused on their own statements, not under oath, is not ground of objection by the defendant, in a criminal case, and he cannot have an attachment issued to compel the attendance of those so excused: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 448.

308. When to attend; penalty. 230. Unless the judge otherwise orders, jurors shall be summoned to appear at ten o'clock A. M. of the second day of the term, at which time they shall be called and all excuses heard and determined by the court. If any person summoned fail to appear without sending a sufficient excuse, the court shall issue a rule returnable at that or the succeeding term, requiring him to appear, and show cause why he should not be fined for contempt, and unless he renders a sufficient excuse for such failure, the court may fine him in any amount not exceeding ten dollars, and shall require him to pay the costs, and stand committed until the fine and costs are paid. [R., § 2735; C., '51, § 1645.]

309. Number. 231; 21 G. A., ch. 42, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 128, § 2. From and after the first day of January, A. D. 1887, the grand jury shall be composed as follows: In counties having a population of sixteen thousand inhabitants or less, the grand jury shall be composed of five members; and in counties having a population of more than sixteen thousand inhabitants the grand jury shall be composed of seven members. The trial jurors in the counties containing less than fifteen thousand inhabitants shall consist of fifteen, unless the judge otherwise orders, but in counties containing fifteen thousand inhabitants or over, the number of trial jurors shall be twenty four. Such population shall in each case be determined by the last preceding national or state census: Provided, that where a single county constitutes a district the court may increase the number of such trial jurors not to exceed seventy-two. [R., § 2732; C., '51, § 1642; 13 G. A., ch., 167, § 7.]

310. Failure of trial jurors to attend. 232. Should there not be the number of trial jurors in attendance, as provided in the preceding section, by reason of a failure of the persons summoned to attend, or because excused as provided in section two hundred and thirty of this chapter [§ 308], the requisite number of persons to supply the deficiency shall be drawn in the same manner as provided in sections two hundred and forty and two hundred and forty-one of this chapter [§§ 318, 319]. The persons so drawn shall be forthwith summoned to appear, and serve as trial jurors during the term. [R., § 2737; C., '51, § 1647.]

The fact that vacancies in the jury panel are filled by talesmen instead of by the additional drawing herein provided for is not a ground of challenge to the panel under § 2971, and can be raised, if at all, only by challenge to such talesmen when drawn: Buford v. McGetchie, 60-298.

No penalty is attached for a failure to comply with the provisions of this section. It must be regarded as directory; and a simple disregard of its provisions, where error does not affirmatively appear, is not sufficient to authorize reversal of the judgment: State v. Harris, 64-287; Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-530.

The provisions of this and the following sections relate to obtaining jurors for the term, and for the trial of all cases where the panels are not full, and have no reference to the manner of obtaining a jury for the trial of a criminal action when the panel is exhausted: State v. Ryan, 70-154.

311. Discharge of. 233. If, in the judgment of the court, the business of the term does not require the attendance of all, or a portion of the trial jurors, they, or such portion as the court deems proper, may be discharged. Should it afterward appear that a jury is required, the court may direct them to be resummoned, or impanel a jury from the by-standers.

Where the court discharged all but eighteen of the jury, and afterwards a larger number becoming necessary caused additional jurors to be summoned from the by-standers, held, that the proceeding was not erroneous: State v. McCahill, 72-111.

312. Lists. 234. Two jury lists, one consisting of seventy-five persons to serve as grand jurors, and one consisting of one hundred and fifty persons or, in counties containing more than twenty thousand inhabitants, of two hundred and fifty persons, to serve as trial jurors, and composed of persons competent and liable to serve as jurors, shall annually be made in each county from which to select jurors for the year commencing on the first day of January. [R., § 2723; C., '51, § 1633.]

But one jury list of petit jurors is contemplated, from which the juries for both the district and circuit courts are to be drawn: State v. Lawrence, 38-51.

That eighty-five instead of seventy-five names were returned from which to select the grand jury, and the extra names were stricken off before the grand jury was drawn, held not an irregularity: State v. Knight, 19-94.

313. Same. 235. Should there be less than the required number of such persons in any county, the list shall comprise all those who answer the above description in the same proportion. [R., § 2724; C., '51, § 1634; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 3.]

314. How selected. 236. On or before the first Monday in September in each year, the county auditor shall apportion the number to be selected from each election precinct, as nearly as practicable in proportion to the number of votes polled therein at the last general election, and shall deliver a statement thereof to the sheriff. [R., § 2725; C., '51, § 1635.]

315. Sheriff to serve notice. 237. The sheriff shall cause a written notice to be delivered to one of the judges of election in each precinct of the county, on or before the day of the general election in each year, informing them of the number of jurors apportioned for the ensuing year to their respective precincts. [R., § 2726; C., '51, § 1636.]

316. Duty of judge of election. 238. The judges shall thereupon make the requisite selection, and return lists of names as selected to the auditor with the returns of the election, and in case the judges of election shall fail to make a d return said lists as herein required, the county canvassers shall, at the meeting to canvass the votes polled in the county, make such lists for the delinquent precincts, and the auditor shall file said lists in his office and cause a copy thereof to be recorded in the election book. [R., §§ 2727-8; C., '51, §§ 1637-8; 13 G. A., ch. 3; ch. 167, § 4.]

A failure to record the names returned on the grand jury list does not invalidate proceedings of the grand jury drawn therefrom: State v. Knight, 19-94; State v. Howard, 19-101.

Where the judges of election and county canvassers each failed to make out and return names of jurors for one election precinct, but two names were supplied by the board of supervisors, which two jurors, however, were not drawn upon the grand jury, held, that the irregularity did not vitiate an indictment: State v. Brandt, 41-593.

No formal certificate of the judges to the lists so returned is necessary, though it would be proper. Where the record in the record book shows due and proper selection, the presumption is that such record was the result of the list duly made. When the law has been substantially complied with, an indictment should not be set aside for slight irregularities in such matters. State v. Ansateme, 15-44.

It is not required that the records of the board of canvassers shall show that the selection of jurymen was made for precincts from which no returns were sent in: State v. Carney, 20-82.

A substantial compliance with the provisions of the law relating to the selection of jurymen is all that is required: Ibid.

317. Term of service. 239. Grand jurors shall be selected for the first term in the year at which jurors are required, commencing next after the first day of January in each year, and shall serve for one year. Trial jurors shall be selected for each term wherein they are required; but no person shall be required to attend as a trial juror more than two terms in the same year, and in counties containing a population of more than five thousand inhabitants, it shall be a cause of challenge that the person has served on a jury in a court of record within one year, unless he be a member of the regular panel. [R., 2729; C., '51, § 1639; Ex. S., 8 G. A., ch. 6, § 1; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 5.]

Where a term of the district court began on December 8, 1884, grand jurors impaneled for 1884 were held competent to return an indictment after January 1, 1885, but during the same term: State v. Winebrenner, 67-230.

That a juror not on the regular panel has served on the jury within one year is cause for challenge: Barnes v. Newton, 46-367.

318. Auditor write names. 240; 17 G. A., ch. 184. At least twenty days prior to the first day of any term at which a jury is to be selected, the auditor, or his deputy, must write out the names on the lists aforesaid which have not been previously drawn as jurors during the year, on separate ballots, and the clerk of the district court, or his deputy, and sheriff, or his deputy, having compared said ballots with the lists, and corrected the same if necessary, shall place the ballots in a box provided for that purpose. [R., § 2730; C., '51, § 1640; 9 G. A., ch. 5; 13 G. A., ch. 3; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 6.]

Before the section was amended, held, that in which he so acted, would be invalid: Dutell v. State, 4 G. Gr., 125; State v. Brandt, 41-593, might act in place of the sheriff, a drawing 602.

319. Drawing. 241; 21 G. A., ch. 42, § 2. After thoroughly mixing the same, the clerk or his deputy shall draw therefrom the requisite number of jurors to serve as aforesaid, and shall, within three days thereafter, issue a precept to the sheriff commanding him to summon the said jurors to appear before the court as provided in section two hundred and thirty of the code [§ 305]. When the grand jury shall be composed of five members only, the number drawn shall be eight, and when the grand jury shall be composed of seven members the number of grand jurors to be drawn shall be twelve; provided, that in drawing such grand jury not more than one person shall be drawn as a grand juror from any civil township, excepting where the grand jury is by law required to be drawn from a district containing fewer civil townships than the number of grand jurors required to be summoned; in which case, if the number of civil townships in such district be not less than one-half of the number of jurors required, not more than two persons shall be drawn as grand jurors from any such township; and if the number of civil townships be less than one-half of the number of jurors required not more than three persons shall be drawn as grand jurors from any such township. If more persons shall be drawn from any civil township than are hereby authorized it shall be the duty of the officer drawing such grand jury to reject all superfluous names so drawn, and to proceed with the drawing until the required number of jurors shall be secured. No person shall serve as grand juror for two consecutive years. [R., §§ 2731, 2733; C., '51, §§ 1641, 1643; 9 G. A., ch. 5; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 8.]

320. Precept. 242. The sheriff shall immediately obey such precept, and, on or before the day for the appearance of said jurors, must make return thereof, and on failure to do so, without sufficient cause, is liable to be fined for a contempt in any amount not exceeding fifty dollars. [R., § 2734; C., '51, § 1644.]

Service of precept may be made by deputy sheriff and special bailiffs appointed under § 476: State v. Arthur, 39-631.

321. Grand jurors to attend. 243. Except when required at a special term which has been called in vacation, the grand jury need not be summoned after the first term, but must appear at the next term without summons, under the same penalty as though they had been regularly summoned. [R., § 2736; C., '51, § 1646.]

322. Precept set aside. 244. Where, from any cause, the persons summoned to serve as grand or trial jurors fail to appear, or when from any cause the court shall decide that the grand or trial jurors have been illegally elected or drawn, the court may set aside the precept under which the jurors were summoned, and cause a precept to be issued to the sheriff commanding him to summon a sufficient number of persons from the body of the county, to serve as jurors at the term of court then being holden, which precept may be made returnable forthwith, or at some subsequent day of the term, in the discretion of the court. [R., § 2738.]

This section does not apply to cases where a sufficient number of grand jurors fail to appear: State v. Pierce, 8-231.

Where the list of jurors was accidentally destroyed, it was held proper for the court to order a new precept. Under such precept, commanding the sheriff to summon a new jury from the body of the county, held, that a jury taken from ten out of twenty townships in the county was sufficient: State v. Arthur, 39-631.

The fact that the jury is filled up by persons specially summoned is not a valid ground of objection when no abuse of discretion on the part of the court is shown: Emerick v. Sloan, 18-139.

The correctness of the action of the court in discharging a grand jury as having been illegally drawn cannot be raised by motion to set aside an indictment found by another jury summoned in its place, especially where no prejudice has resulted: State v. Hart, 67-142.

323. Payment. 245; 15 G. A., ch. 16. At the close of each term the clerk of the court must make out a certificate to each juror of the amount to which he is entitled for his services, which certificate shall authorize the county auditor to issue a warrant to each juror for the said amount on the county treasurer without the same being audited by the board of supervisors. [R., § 2739; C., '51, § 1649.]

CHAPTER 11.

OF SECURITIES AND INVESTMENTS.

324. Form of. 246. Whenever security is required to be given by law, or by order on judgment of a court, and no particular mode is prescribed, it shall be by bond. [R., § 4113; C., '51, § 2505.]

325. For whose benefit. 247. Such security, when not otherwise directed, may, if for the benefit of individuals, be given to the party intended to be thereby secured. If in relation to the public matters concerning the inhabitants of one county or part of a county, it may be made payable to the county; if concerning the inhabitants of more than one county, it may be made payable to the state. But a mere mistake in these respects will not vitiate the security. [R., § 4114; C., '51, § 2506.]

The giving of a bond to the "people of Woodbury county," instead of to the county, held not such a mistake as to vitiate the security: Charles v. Haskins, 11-329.

326. Remedy when defective. 248. No defective bond or other security, or affidavit, in any case, shall prejudice the party giving or making it, provided it be so rectified within a reasonable time after the defect is discovered, as not to cause essential injury to the other party. [R., § 4119; C., '51, § 2511.]

So held in case of appeal bond on appeal from the county court: Mitchell v. Goff, 18-424; and held applicable to a bond on appeal from a justice of the peace: Brock v. Manatt, 1-128.

As to amendment in cases of bond or affidavit for attachment, see notes to § 4246.

327. Surety; qualifications. 249. The surety in every bond provided for by this code must be a resident of this state, and worth double the sum to be secured beyond the amount of his debts, and have property liable to execution in this state equal to the sum to be secured. Where there are two or more sureties in the same bond, they must, in the aggregate, have the qualification prescribed in this section. [R., § 4126.]

328. Affidavit. 250. The officer whose duty it is to take a surety in any bond provided for by this code, shall require the person offered as surety to make affidavit of his qualification, which affidavit may be made before such officer or other officer, authorized to administer oaths. The taking of such an affidavit, shall not exempt the officer from any liability to which he might otherwise be subject for taking insufficient security. [R., § 4125.]

Negligence in approving bond: The clerk of the courts is liable for injury resulting from his negligence in approving the sureties on a bond required to be approved by him, if the party injured is without fault. But it will be otherwise if there is also negligence on the part of complainant: Parks v. Davis, 16-20.

The clerk may be liable for taking insufficient surety on a stay bond, and taking the affidavit of the surety as to his qualification does not exempt the officer approving the bond from liability in accepting insufficient security: Hubbard v. Switzer, 47-681.

The action of an officer approving and accepting a bond may be either judicial or ministerial, depending upon the particular thing he is required to do; and held that the action of a clerk in accepting and approving a stay bond after expiration of the time limited by statute was judicial: Maynes v. Brockway, 55-457.

An action for damages for negligence of an officer in approving a stay bond does not accrue until the expiration of the stay: Steel v. Bryant, 49-116; Moore v. McKinley, 60-367.

Where a clerk approved a stay bond upon a certificate of the clerk of another county as to the sufficiency of the surety, and indorsed a statement on the back of the bond that the surety thereon was responsible, and it afterwards appeared that the bond had not been, in fact, signed by the surety whose name appeared thereon, held, that the certificate being as to the responsibility of the surety and not as to the genuineness of his signature, the clerk making such certificate was not liable for loss occasioned by reason of the acceptance of the same: Bringolf v. Burt, 44-184.

The fact that the clerk makes inquiry of the surety as to the value of his property, and is informed that it is sufficient, does not relieve him from liability in approving a bond, nor will he be relieved by the fact that he assured the party complaining that he would disregard the bond and issue execution upon evidence showing its sufficiency, and the further fact that no motion for additional security was made in court by such party, and refused: Haverly v. McClelland, 57-182.

The clerk will be liable for negligence of his deputy in approving a bond with insufficient security, and will have an action over against such deputy on his bond for the damages. The fact that the principal has previously accepted the same surety on other bonds will not relieve the deputy from liability: Moore v. McKinley, 60-367.

The members of the board of supervisors are not liable for damages resulting from the approval of an insufficient bond, when their action results from an honest mistake or error of judgment, whether of law or fact; but they are personally liable for neglect, carelessness and official misconduct in such matters: Wason v. Mitchell, 18-143.

Under a statute requiring a bond to be approved by certain officers, it was held that in a suit thereon it was unnecessary to aver and prove such approval in the first instance: State v. Fredericks, 8-553.

329. Fidelity company as surety. 21 G. A., ch. 157, § 1. Whenever any person who now or hereafter may be required or permitted by law to make, execute, and give a bond or undertaking with security conditioned for the faithful performance of any duty, or of the doing or not doing of anything in said bond or undertaking specified, any officer who is now or shall hereafter be required to approve the sufficiency of any such bond or undertaking may, in the discretion of such officer, in lieu of the securities now required by law, upon satisfactory evidence, accept such bond or undertaking and approve the same whenever the conditions of such bond or undertaking are guaranteed by a company or corporation duly organized or incorporated within this state, under the laws thereof, or authorized by law to do business in this state, and authorized to guarantee the fidelity of persons holding positions of public or private trusts; and which company shall have an unpaired paid-up capital of not less than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars; provided, that nothing herein contained shall apply to bonds in criminal cases.

330. Release of. 21 G. A., ch. 157, § 2. Such company may be released from its liability as such surety on any bond on the same terms and conditions, and in the same manner, as is by law prescribed for the release of individual persons as such sureties, it being the true intent and meaning of this act to enable companies created, incorporated or chartered for the purpose of insuring the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, to become surety on bonds required by law, subject to all the rights and liabilities of private persons.

331. Notice of suit against. 21 G. A., ch. 157, § 3. Whenever suit is required to be brought on any bond given by such company service shall be had upon any agent of such company in this state, and if there is no agent in the state, then service may be had by serving the auditor of state thirty days before the term of court in which the suit is sought to be brought;

and it shall be the duty of the auditor of state to immediately, upon service being made upon him, to mail a copy of such notice to such company at their principal place of business, and any notice so served shall be deemed to be good and sufficient service on any such company.

332. Estoppel. 21 G. A., ch. 157, § 4. Any company which shall execute any bonds as surety under the provisions of this act shall be estopped, in any proceeding to enforce the liability which it shall have assumed to incur, to deny its corporate power to execute such instrument or assume such liability; and provided, that private property of stockholders shall be liable for debts of the corporation to the full amount of capital stock held by such stockholders.

333. 21 G. A., ch. 157, § 5. Section 679. of the code [§ 1144] shall not apply to bonds executed by fidelity surety companies, in accordance with the provisions of this act.

334. 21 G. A., ch. 157, § 6. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are, and the same are hereby repealed.

335. Investments, how made. 251. Where investments of money are directed to be made, and no mode of investment is pointed out by statute, they must be made in the stocks or bonds of this state, or of those of the United States, or upon bond or mortgage of real property of the clear unincumbered value of at least twice the investment. [R., § 4115; C., '51, § 2507.]

336. When surety discharged. 252. When such investment is made by order of any court, the security taken shall in no case be discharged, impaired, or transferred, without an order of the court to that effect entered on the minutes thereof. [R., § 4116; C., '51, § 2508.]

337. Re-investment. 253. The clerk or other person appointed in such cases to make the investment, must receive all moneys as they become due thereon, and apply or re-invest the same under the direction of the court, unless the court appoint some other person to do such acts. [R., § 4117; C., '51, § 2509.]

338. Account, when rendered. 254. Once in each year, and oftener if required by the court, the person so appointed must, on oath, render to the court an account in writing of all moneys so received by him, and of the application thereof. [R., § 4118; C., '51, § 2510.]

339. Delivery of property or deposit of money. 255. When it is admitted by the pleading or examination of a party that he has in his possession, or under his control, any money or property capable of delivery, which is in any degree the subject of litigation, and which is held by him as trustee for another party, the court, or judge thereof, may order the same to be deposited in the office of the clerk, or delivered to such party with or without security, subject to the farther direction of the court; or may order such money to be deposited in a bank with the consent of the parties in interest, to the credit of the court in which the action is pending, and the same shall be paid out by such bank only upon the check of the clerk annexed to the certified order of the court directing such payment. [R., § 3416.]

340. Obedience compelled. 256. Whenever a court, or judge, in the exercise of its or his authority, has ordered the deposit or delivery of money or other property, and the order is disobeyed, the court, besides punishing the disobedience, may make an order requiring the sheriff to take the money or property, and deposit or deliver it in conformity with the directions of the court or judge. [R., § 3417.]

341. Sheriff; power. 257. The sheriff has the same power in such cases as when acting under an order for the delivery of personal property. [R., § 3418.]

DEPOSIT OF FUNDS BY ADMINISTRATOR, GUARDIAN, TRUSTEE OR REFEREE.

342. Final report and discharge. 22 G. A., ch. 41, § 1. Whenever any administrator, guardian, trustee or referee shall desire to make his final report as such and who shall then have in his possession or under his control in his fiduciary capacity, any funds, moneys, or securities due, or to become due to any heir, legatee, devisee, or other person, the payment of which might then be made to such heir, legatee, devisee or other person if living or present within the county where such appointment as administrator, guardian, trustee or referee was made, such funds, moneys or securities may be deposited with the clerk of the district court of the county wherein such appointment was made, and if he shall otherwise discharge all the duties imposed upon him by such appointment he may take the receipt of the clerk of the district court for such funds, moneys or securities so deposited, which receipt shall specifically set forth from whom said funds, moneys or securities were derived, the amount thereof, and the name of the person to whom due or to become due, if known. Thereupon said administrator, guardian, trustee or referee may file such receipt with his final report, and if it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court, that he has in all other respects complied with the law governing his appointment and duties, the court may approve such final report and enter his discharge. Provided, that notice of such contemplated deposit, and if [of] final report shall be given for the same time and in the same manner as now required in case of final report by administrators.

343. Liability of clerk. 22 G. A., ch. 41, § 2. The clerk of the district court with whom any deposit of funds, moneys or securities shall be made as provided in the preceding section, shall enter in a book to be provided and kept for the purposes hereof, the amount of such deposit, the character thereof, the date of its deposit, from whom received, from what source derived, to whom due or to become due, if known. He shall be liable upon his bond for all funds, moneys, or securities which may be deposited with him, under the provisions hereof. If the funds, moneys or securities so deposited with the clerk shall not be paid to the person to whom the same is due, or to become due, within one year from the date of its deposit the clerk shall then deposit such funds, moneys or securities with the county treasurer for the use of the county wherein such appointment was made, taking the treasurer's receipt therefor, countersigned by the county auditor, who shall thereupon charge upon the books of his office and against the treasurer the amount named in such receipts.

344. Duty of treasurer. 22 G. A., ch. 41, § 3. Whenever any funds, moneys or securities shall be deposited with the county treasurer, as provided in this act, he shall enter in a book provided and kept for that purpose, the date of such deposit, the amount thereof, from whom received, the source from which derived, and the name of the person to whom the same is due or to become due, if known. Whenever the claimant therefor, upon proper application made to the district court, shall satisfactorily show to such court that he is the rightful owner of said funds, moneys or securities and entitled thereto, the court by order entered of record shall direct the county auditor to issue a warrant on the county treasurer for said money, funds or securities, and upon such order the said treasurer shall pay to the person named in such order the funds, moneys or securities to which the claimant shall have shown himself entitled.

OF NOTARIES PUBLIC.

345. Appointment. 258. The governor may appoint and commission one or more notaries public in each county, and may at any time revoke such appointment. The commissions of all notaries public heretofore, or hereafter, issued prior to the fourth day of July, A. D. 1876, shall expire on that day, and commissions subsequently issued shall be for no longer period than three years, and all such commissions shall expire on the fourth day of July in the same year. The secretary of state shall, on or before the first day of June, A. D. 1876, and every three years thereafter, notify each notary when his commission will expire. [R., § 195; C., '51, § 78.]

A notary public is a public officer, and the acts of one who is such de facto, though not de jure, cannot be collaterally assailed; therefore held that a deposition taken by a de facto notary could not be suppressed on the ground that such notary had not qualified as required by law: Keeney v. Leas, 14-464.

A court will take judicial notice of the official character of a notary public, and of the county for which he is appointed: Rowland v. Brown, 37 N. W. Rep., 403.

346. Issuance of commission. 259. Before any such commission is delivered to the person appointed, he shall:

1. Procure a seal on which shall be engraved the words "notarial seal" and "Iowa," with his surname at length, and at least the initials of his christian name;

2. Execute a bond to the state of Iowa in the sum of five hundred dollars, conditioned for the true and faithful execution of the duties of his office, which bond shall be approved by the clerk of the district court of the proper county;

3. Write on said bond, or a paper attached thereto, his signature, and place thereon a distinct impression of his official seal;

4. File such bond with attached papers, if any, in the office of the secretary of state;

5. Remit to such secretary the fee required by law;

When the secretary of state is satisfied that the foregoing particulars have been fully complied with, he shall deliver the commission to the person appointed. [R., §§ 197, 200, 207-9; C., '51, §§ 80, 83; 12 G. A., ch. 60.]

An official certificate of the notary is not receivable in evidence without his seal attached, but the seal may be attached subsequently to the date of signing the certificate: Rindskoff v. Malone, 9-540.

Although the statute does not in terms prescribe that the acts of the notary shall be authenticated by his seal, there could have been no other purpose in requiring him to procure a seal; and held that a wafer with the name, etc., of the notary written thereon was not a sufficient authentication; and that the genuineness of his signature could not be shown by the certificate of the clerk of the court: Stephens v. Williams, 46-540, and see notes to § 355.

The acts of the notary should be authenticated both by his seal and his signature: Tunis v. Withrow, 10-305; Chase v. Street, 10-593.

An affidavit before a notary, not attested by his seal, lacks an essential requisite: Slyfield v. Healy, 32 Fed. Rep., 2.

An affidavit showing the county by the usual venue, and to which the notary affixed his signature with his official designation, and to which his seal was affixed showing the city of his residence, held to sufficiently show that the person purporting to administer the oath as a notary public was a notary and had authority to act: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

An affidavit will be presumed to have been sworn to within the jurisdiction of the notary taking it, although the caption is entitled as of another county: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 67-691.

Where an affidavit is headed with the name of the state and county, and the notary's signature is authenticated with a seal, such signature is sufficient if it contains his name with the addition "Notary Public," without stating the state or county for which he is notary: Stone v. Miller, 60-243.

The court will take judicial notice of the seal of a notary public, attached to the jurat of an affidavit, and knowing from the seal used as required by the state statute that he is notary for the state of Iowa, the court will take judicial notice of the county in which he is authorized to act as notary: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

But the signature of a certificate of acknowledgment must show the county for which the notary was appointed, which must be that in which the certificate purports to have been taken, the name of the county being deemed a part of the official signature of the notary. The fact that the name of the county appears on the seal is not sufficient, that not being a matter required to be shown by the seal: Willard v. Cramer, 36-22; Greenwood v. Jouswold, 69-53.

347. Record of appointment. 260; 22 G. A., ch. 100. When the secretary of state delivers the commission to the person appointed, he shall make a certificate of such appointment, and forward the same to the clerk of the district court of the proper county, who shall file and preserve the same in his office, and it shall be deemed sufficient evidence to enable such clerk to certify that the person so commissioned is a notary public during the time such commission is in force.

348. Revocation. 261. Should the commission of any person appointed notary public be revoked by the governor, the secretary of state shall immediately notify such person, and the clerk of the district court of the proper county, through the mail.

349. Powers and duties. 262. Each notary is invested with the powers and shall perform the duties which pertain to that office by the custom and law of merchants. [R., § 196; C., '51, § 79.]

Acts of notary, how authenticated, see notes to § 346.

350. Keep record. 263. Every notary public is required to keep a true record of all notices given or sent by him, with the time and manner in which the same were given or sent, and the names of all the parties to whom the same were given or sent, with a copy of the instrument in relation to which the notice is served, and of the notice itself.

351. Records deposited. 264. On the death, resignation, or removal from office of any notary, his records, with all his official papers, shall, within three months therefrom, be deposited in the office of the clerk of the district court in the county for which such notary shall have been appointed; and if any notary, on his resignation or removal, neglects for three months so to deposit them, he shall be held guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished accordingly, and be liable in an action to any person injured by such neglect; and if an executor or administrator of a deceased notary wilfully neglects for three months after his acceptance of that appointment, to deposit the records and papers of a deceased notary which came into his hands, in said clerk's office, he shall be held guilty of a misdemeanor and punished accordingly.

352. Removal; resignation. 265. If a notary remove his residence from the county for which he was appointed, such removal shall be taken as a resignation. [R., § 203; C., '51, § 86.]

353. Custody of records. 266. Each clerk aforesaid shall receive and safely keep all such records and papers of the notary in the cases above named, and shall give attested copies of them under the seal of his court, for which he may demand such fees as by law may be allowed to the notaries, and such copies shall have the same effect as if certified by the notary. [R., § 294; C., '51, § 87.]

CHAPTER 13.

OF COMMISSIONERS IN OTHER STATES.

354. How appointed; power. 267. The governor may appoint and commission in each of the United States and territories, one or more commissioners, to continue in office for the term of three years from the date of commission, unless such appointment shall be sooner revoked by the governor; such commissioners, when qualified as hereinafter provided, shall be empowered to administer oaths, take depositions and affidavits to be used in the courts of this state, and to take acknowledgments or proof of deeds and other instruments to be recorded and used in this state. [13 G. A., ch. 44, § 1.]

355. Seal. 268. Each commissioner, exercising the authority conferred upon him by this chapter, shall have an official seal, on which shall be engraved the words "COMMISSIONER FOR IOWA," with his surname at length, and at least the initials of his christian name; also the name of the state in which he has been commissioned to act, which seal must be so engraved as to make a clear impression on wax or wafer. [10 G. A., ch. 119; 13 G. A., ch. 44, § 4.]

The certificate of such commissioner held upon the paper as here contemplated: Gage v. not to be sufficiently authenticated by his seal, Dubuque & P. E. Co., 11-310, and see notes to when the word "Iowa" was written in the § 346. of the seal instead of being impressed

356. Signature and seal. 269. A signature and impression of such seal of any commissioner, qualified as herein provided, and corresponding with that on file in the office of the secretary of state, shall be entitled to the same credit as evidence in the courts and public offices of this state, as the signature and seal of a clerk of the district court or notary public of this state. [13 G. A., ch. 44, § 5.]

357. Compensation. 270. Such commissioner is authorized to demand for his services the same fee as may be allowed for similar services by the laws of the state in which he is to exercise his office. [Same, § 6.]

358. Official acts. 271. Oaths administered by any such commissioner, affidavits and depositions taken by him, and acknowledgments as aforesaid certified by him over his official signature and seal, are made as effectual in law to all intents and purposes, as if done and certified by a clerk of the district court or justice of the peace of this state. [Same, § 2.]

As to the requisites of the seal, see § 355 and notes.

359. Qualification. 272. Before such commissioner can perform any of the duties of his office, he is required to take and subscribe an oath that he will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and that he will faithfully perform the duties of such office; which oath shall be taken and subscribed before some judge or clerk of a court of record in the state in which the commissioner is to exercise his appointment, and certified under the hand of the person taking it, and the seal of his court, or before a duly authorized commissioner for Iowa, resident in said state, which certificate shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state of this state, and on which shall be the official signature and a clear impression of the official seal of such commissioner. [Same, § 3.]

360. Duty of secretary of state. 273. The secretary of state, upon the reception of the certificate as provided in section two hundred and sixty-nine of this chapter [§ 356], shall examine the same, and if this chapter has been strictly complied with, it shall be his duty to forward to said commissioner a certificate properly attested, that he has been duly commissioned as commissioner for Iowa; and that he is duly qualified as required by the laws of Iowa authorizing the appointment of commissioners in other states; and it shall be the further duty of the secretary of state to forward a duplicate of said certificate to the secretary of the state in which said commissioner may have been appointed. [Same, § 8.]

361. List of to be published. 274. The secretary of state shall cause to be published with the session laws of each general assembly, a full and complete list of all commissioners for Iowa who are duly qualified, and whose commissions do not expire on or before the fourth day of July of the year in which such publication is made, which list shall give the postoffice address, date of qualification, and date of expiration of the commission of each commissioner. [Same, § 11.]

362. Power of commissioners of other states. 275. Commissioners of the like nature appointed in this state, under the authority of any other of the United States or territories, are hereby invested with the authority of a justice of the peace to issue subpoenas, requiring the attendance of witnesses before them to give their testimony by deposition or affidavit, in any matter in which such deposition or affidavit may be taken by the law of such other state, and they are also authorized to administer oaths in any matter in relation to which they are required or permitted by such law of the other states; and false swearing in such cases is hereby made subject to the penal laws of this state relating to perjury; provided that such commissioner shall cause to be filed in the office of the secretary of state a certificate of the secretary of the state or territory for which he claims to act, that he is properly appointed and qualified as required by the laws of said state, and has in his possession a certificate that this section has been complied with. [Same, § 12.]

363. Record of appointments. 276. The secretary of state shall keep in his office a complete record of all appointments made by the governor, pursuant to the provisions of this chapter. [Same, § 13.]

CHAPTER 14.

OF THE ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS.

364. Who authorized. 277; 18 G. A., ch. 62; 21 G. A., ch. 126. The following officers are authorized to administer oaths, and take and certify the acknowledgment of instruments in writing:

Each judge of the supreme court;

Each judge of the district court;

[Each judge of the circuit court;]

The clerk of the supreme court;

The deputy clerk of the supreme court;

Each clerk of the district court as such, [or as clerk of the circuit court]:

Each deputy clerk of the district [and circuit] courts;

Each county auditor;

Each deputy county auditor;

Each sheriff and his deputies, in cases where they are authorized by law to select commissioners or appraisers, or to impanel jurors for the view or appraisal of property, or are directed as an official duty to have property appraised, or take the answers of garnishees;

Each justice of the peace within his county;

Each notary public within his county;

The governor of the state, the secretary of state, the auditor of state, and the treasurer of state, are authorized to administer oaths in any matter pertaining to the business of their respective offices, or that may come before them for consideration and action as members of the executive council. [R., §§ 201, 1843, 2684, 3201; C., '51, §§ 979, 1594, 1865; 11 G. A., ch. 5; 13 G. A., ch. 146.]

365. Affirmation. 278. Persons conscientiously opposed to swearing may affirm, and shall be subject to the penalties of perjury as in case of swearing. [R., 1844; C., '51, § 980.]

TITLE IV.

RELATING TO COUNTY, TOWNSHIP, TOWN AND CITY GOVERNMENT.

CHAPTER 1.

OF COUNTIES.

366. Body corporate; powers. 279. Each county is a body corporate for civil and political purposes only, and as such may sue and be sued; shall keep a seal such as provided by law; may acquire and hold property and make all contracts necessary or expedient for the management, control, and improvement of the same; and, for the better exercise of its civil and political powers, may make any order for the disposition of its property, and may do such other acts and exercise such other powers as may be allowed by law. [R., § 221; C., '51, § 93.]

A county is strictly a political corporation, a grant of power to a designated portion of the people to aid and arrange the machinery of government for the whole state. It is not designed for pecuniary profit, nor has it any powers but such as pertain to its strict municipal and public character: Jefferson County v. Ford, 4 G. Cr., 367.

Although clothed with corporate powers, counties stand low down in the scale of corporate existences, and are reckoned as quasi-corporations, as distinguished from municipal corporations, and they are held to a much less extended liability than the latter. They are not liable to an action by a private party for negligence of their officers in respect to highways, unless the statute has expressly created such liability: Soper v. Henry County, 26-264.

A county is a political corporation invested with certain limited and specified powers, which are divided among and are to be exercised by a class of agents or county officers appointed for that purpose. Their duties are not only defined, but the mode of performing them is often prescribed by law, and this being done, the power must be exercised precisely as it is given: Hull v. Marshall County, 12-142.

367. Jurisdiction. 280. Counties bounded by a stream or other water, have concurrent jurisdiction over the whole of the waters lying between them. [R., § 223; C., '51, § 94.]

Jurisdiction being given to the state over crimes committed upon the Mississippi river between the north and south boundaries of the state, held, that the jurisdiction of the district court of any county extended over acts committed upon the river between the north and south boundaries of such county: State v. Mullen, 35-199.

RELOCATION OF COUNTY SEAT.

368. How secured. 281. Whenever the citizens of any county desire a relocation of their county seat, they may petition their board of supervisors respecting the same at any regular session. [9 G. A., ch. 49, § 1.]

Proceedings for the relocation of a county seat are special in their character. The board of supervisors is clothed with no other powers with reference thereto than those conferred by statute: Loomis v. Bailey, 43-400.

It is not error for the board to refuse to entertain a petition of this kind, presented at an adjourned session: Ellis v. Board of Supervisors, 40-301.

The legislature cannot, by any act declaring a county seat permanent, deprive the voters of the right to change such county seat as provided by statute. If land has been conveyed to a county for public use under the condition that the location shall be permanent, it should be reconveyed to the grantor in case of a removal: Twiford v. Alamakee County, 4 G. Cr., 60.

369. Petition for. 282. Such petition shall designate the place at which the petitioners desire to have the county seat relocated, and shall be signed by none but legal voters of said county, and shall be accompanied by affidavits sufficient to satisfy said board that the signers are all legal voters of said county, and that the signatures on said petition are all genuine. [Same, §§ 2, 3.]

Where jurats to the affidavits required under this section were imperfect in that they did not show the official title of the officer, or were entirely without signature, held, the board might allow them to be amended: Stone v. Miller, 60-243.

It is a compliance with the statute to show by affidavit that the signers of the petition were legal voters at the time of signing: Ibid.

370. Remonstrances. 283. Remonstrances, signed by legal voters of the county only, and verified in like manner as the petition, may also be presented to the board. If the same persons petition and remonstrate they shall be counted only on the remonstrance, and if a greater number of legal voters remonstrate against the relocation than petition for it, no election shall be ordered. [Same, § 9.]

No other papers, except petition and remonstrance, are to be considered. A re-petition is not authorized; and names appearing both on remonstrance, and re-petition are to be counted on the remonstrance: Loomis v. Bailey, 45-400.

Those signing petition, remonstrance and re-petition should be counted as remonstrants: Jamison v. Board of Supervisors, 47-388.

While the board in passing upon the sufficiency of the petition and remonstrance acts in a judicial capacity, it is not authorized to consider any evidence not specified, and cannot, therefore, consider counter-affidavits: Herrick v. Carpenter, 54-340.

If the number of signers to the remonstrance exceeds the number of signers to the petition the election should not be ordered, although the number of signers to the petition exceeds the majority of the legal voters of the county as provided in § 372: Loomis v. Bailey, 45-400; Duffees v. Sherman, 48-287.

371. Notice. 284. Sixty days' notice of the presentation of such petition shall be given by three insertions in a weekly newspaper, if there be one printed in the county; if no paper be therein printed, by posting the same in every township in the county and on the door of the court-house therein. [Same, § 5.]

The notice is sufficient if the first of the three insertions is sixty days before the presentation of the petition: Bennett v. Hetherington, 41-142.

The giving of notice is not jurisdictional, and a failure therein will not invalidate the election: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

372. Submission of question. 285. Upon the presentation of such petition signed by at least one-half of all the legal voters in the county as shown by the last preceding census, if the notice hereinbefore prescribed shall have been given, the board shall order that at the next general election a vote shall be taken between said place and the existing county seat, and shall require a constable of each township in the county to post notices of such order in three public places in such township at least fifty days before said election, and shall also publish a notice of such election in some newspaper, if there be one published in the county, for four consecutive weeks, the last publication to be at least twenty days before said election. [Same, § 4.]

The election should not be ordered unless the number of signers to the petition not only exceeds the majority of the legal voters of the county, but also exceeds the number of signers to the remonstrance: Loomis v. Bailey, 45-100; Duffees v. Sherman, 48-287.

The provision as to posting notices is directory, and a failure to comply therewith will not render an election invalid: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

The decision of the board upon the sufficiency of the petition and notice is judicial, and is conclusive until set aside in some method provided for direct review: Baker v. Board of Supervisors, 40-226; Bennett v. Hetherington, 41-142.

The limitation provided in § 4454 upon the time within which an action by certiorari to correct an error of the board in holding a petition sufficient may be brought commences to run only from the time the board orders an election, and not from the time they decide that the petition is sufficient: Jamison v. Board of Supervisors, 47-388, 391.

373. Election. 286. Such election shall be conducted as elections for county officers. The ballot shall state that it was cast for the county seat and name the place voted for. [Same, §§ 6, 7.]

If the ballot expresses the intention of the voter beyond a reasonable doubt it should be counted, without regard to technical inaccuracies, or the form adopted. The language of the ballot is to be construed in the light of all facts connected with the election: Hawes v. Miller, 56-395.

374. Removal. 287. If the point designated in the petition obtain a majority of all the votes cast, the board of supervisors shall make a record thereof, and declare the same to be the county seat of said county, and shall remove the records and documents thereto as early as practicable thereafter. [Same, § 8.]

The result of the election may be declared and record thereof made at a special meeting: Cole v. Board of Supervisors, 11-553.

The fact that in declaring the result of the vote the board also fixes the time within which the records shall be removed is no ground for restraining the removal in accordance with the vote, even though there be no authority to fix such time: Ibid.

The fact that there is a controversy pending as to which of two places is duly selected as the county seat is a proper ground for enjoining a county official from ordering the erection of a county building at one of such places: Rice v. Smith, 9-570.

Where fraud or illegality in the election is alleged, an injunction may be granted to prevent the removal of the records; and in such proceedings the validity of the election may be tried: Ibid.; Sweatt v. Faville, 23-321.

Action of the board in canvassing the vote is ministerial, but its action in ordering a removal in accordance with the count is judicial, and may be reviewed on certiorari: Herrick v. Carpenter, 54-349.

Where the board has decided the petition for submission to be legal, and such action has been reversed upon certiorari, the board will be guilty of an error which may be corrected if they canvass the votes at an election upon such question and make an order for removal thereon: Ibid.

375. How often. 288. The vote for relocation above provided for, shall not take place in any county oftener than once in three years. [Same, § 2.]

The right to a new election at the expiration of three years does not deprive parties of the right to call in question by injunction or otherwise the validity of an election to remove: Sweatt v. Faville, 23-321, 327.

BONDED INDEBTEDNESS.

376. When bonds may issue. 289; 15 G. A., ch. 9; 16 G. A., ch. 125, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 154; 18 G. A., ch. 183; 19 G. A., ch. 147; 20 G. A., ch. 80; 21 G. A., ch. 22; 22 G. A., ch. 91. In any county the outstanding indebtedness of which, on the first day of January, 1888, exceeded the sum of five thousand dollars, the board of supervisors, by a vote of two-thirds of all the members thereof, are empowered, if they deem it for the public interest, to fund the same and issue bonds of the county therefor, in sums not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars each, having not more than ten years to run, and bearing a rate of interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, which bonds shall be substantially in the following form: [13 G. A., ch. 54, § 1; 14 G. A., ch. 126.]

No. —.

The county of — in the state of Iowa, for value received, promises to pay — or order, at the office of the treasurer of said county in — on the first day of —, 18—, or at any time before that date, at the pleasure of the county, the sum of — dollars, with interest at the rate of — per cent. per annum, payable at the office of said treasurer semi-annually, on the first days of — and — in each year on presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached. This bond is issued by the board of supervisors of said county under the provisions of chapter — of the code of Iowa, and in conformity with a resolution of said board, dated — day of —, 18—.

In testimony whereof, the said county by its board of supervisors, has caused this bond to be signed by the chairman of the board, and attested by the auditor, with the county seal attached, this — day of —, 18—.

Attest: [SEAL]

Chairman of Board of Supervisors.

Auditor —.

And the interest coupon shall be in the following form:

§ —. The treasurer of — county, Iowa, will pay the holder hereof, on the — day of —, 18—, at his office in —, — dollars, for interest on county bond No. —, issued under provisions of chapter — of the code of Iowa.

County Auditor.

The validity of negotiable bonds, issued in satisfaction of a judgment, in the hands of innocent holders for value, cannot be questioned by showing that the judgment was rendered upon a warrant issued in excess of the constitutional limitation: Sioux City & St. P. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168; Same v. Same, 52-26.

377. Bonds issued. 290; 15 G. A., ch. 9; 16 G. A., ch. 125, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 154; 18 G. A., ch. 183; 19 G. A., ch. 147; 20 G. A., ch. 80; 21 G. A., ch. 22; 22 G. A., ch. 91. Whenever bonds, issued under this chapter, shall be duly executed, numbered consecutively and sealed, they shall be delivered to the county treasurer and his receipt taken therefor, and he shall stand charged on his official bond with all bonds delivered to him and the proceeds thereof, and he shall sell the same, or exchange them, on the best available terms for any legal indebtedness of the county, outstanding on the first of January, 1888, but in neither case for a less sum than the face value of the bonds and all interest accrued on them at the date of such sale or exchange. And if any portion of the said bonds are sold for money, the proceeds thereof shall be applied exclusively for the payment of liabilities existing against the county at and before the date above named. When they are exchanged for warrants and other legal evidences of county indebtedness, the treasurer shall at once proceed to cancel such evidences of indebtedness, by indorsing on the face thereof the amount for which they were received, the word "canceled" and the date of cancellation. He shall also keep a record of bonds sold or exchanged by him by number, date of sale, amount, date of maturity, the name and postoffice address of purchasers, and, if exchanged, what evidence of indebtedness were received therefor, which record shall be open at all times for inspection by the public. Whenever the holder of any bond shall sell or transfer it, the purchaser shall notify the treasurer of such purchase, giving at the same time the number of the bond transferred and his postoffice address; and every such transfer shall be noted on the record. The treasurer shall also report, under oath, to the board at each regular session, a statement of all bonds sold or exchanged by him since the preceding report, and the date of such sale or exchange; and, when exchanged, a list or description of the county indebtedness exchanged therefor, and the amount of accrued interest received by him on such sale or exchange, which latter sum shall be charged to him as money received on bond fund, and so entered by him on his books; but such bonds shall not be exchanged for any indebtedness of the county except by the approval of the board of supervisors of said county. [13 G. A., ch. 54, § 2.]

378. Board liable. 16 G. A., ch. 125, § 2. Any members of a board of supervisors in any county having four thousand inhabitants and over, according to the last preceding census, who shall vote to order an issue of bonds under this act in excess of the constitutional limit, shall be held personally liable for the excess of such issue.

379. Tax to pay bonds. 291. The board of supervisors shall cause to be assessed and levied each year upon the taxable property of the county, in addition to the levy authorized for other purposes, a sufficient sum to pay the interest on outstanding bonds issued in conformity with the provisions of this chapter accruing before the next annual levy, and such proportion of the principal, that at the end of three years the sum raised from such levies shall equal at least twenty per cent. of the amount of bonds issued; at the end of five years at least forty per cent. of the amount; and at and before the date of maturity of the bonds, shall be equal to the whole amount of the principal and interest; and the money arising from such levies shall be known as the bond fund, and shall be used for the payment of bonds and interest coupons, and for no other purpose whatever; and the treasurer shall open and keep in his books a separate and special account thereof, which shall at all times show the exact condition of said bond fund. [13 G. A., ch. 54, § 3.]

This section does not limit the board in its levy to the amount of tax here required, and taxes levied thereunder are exempt from the limitation contained in § 1321; Stowæ City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 52-26.

380. Additional tax. 22 G. A., ch. 47, § 1. In all counties wherein county bonds have been issued in pursuance of a vote of the people to obtain money for the erection of any public building, and wherein the annual tax named in the proposition so submitted to the people for the purpose of paying the annual interest accruing upon such bonds, is insufficient to pay the same as it matures, the boards of supervisors are hereby authorized to levy for said purpose and no other a tax of one and one-half mills on the dollar for the year 1888 and a tax of one mill on the dollar for the years 1889, 1890 and 1891, and thereafter a tax of one-half mill on the dollar until said bonds are paid; provided that this act shall not prevent the levy of a greater tax than above mentioned, if any such proposition, so submitted to the people authorize such greater levy.

381. Payment. 292. Whenever the amount in the hands of the treasurer belonging to the bond fund, after setting aside the sum required to pay interest maturing before the next levy, is sufficient to redeem one or more bonds, he shall notify the owner of such bond or bonds that he is prepared to pay the same, with all interest accrued thereon, and if not presented for payment or redemption within thirty days after the date of such notice, the interest on such bonds shall cease, and the amount due thereon shall be set aside for its payment whenever presented. All redemptions shall be made in the exact order of their issuance beginning at the lowest or first number; and the notice herein required shall be directed to the postoffice address of the owner, as shown by the record kept in the treasurer's office. [13 G. A., ch. 54, § 4.]

382. Executive council levy tax. 293. If the board of supervisors of any county which has issued bonds under the provisions of this chapter, shall fail to make the levy necessary to pay such bonds, or interest coupons at maturity, and the same shall have been presented to the county treasurer, and the payment thereof refused, the owner may file the bond, together with all unpaid coupons with the auditor of state, taking his receipt therefor, and the same shall be registered in the auditor's office; and the executive council shall, at their next session as a board of equalization, and at each annual equalization thereafter, add to the state tax to be levied in said county, a sufficient rate to realize the amount of principal or interest past due, and to become due prior to the next levy, and the same shall be levied and collected as a part of the state tax, and paid into the state treasury, and passed to the special credit of such county as bond tax, and shall be paid by warrant, as the payments mature, to the holder of such registered obligations, as shown by the register in the office of the state auditor, until the same shall be fully satisfied and discharged; any balance then remaining being passed to the general account and credit of said county. [Same, § 5.]

REFUNDING BONDED INDEBTEDNESS OF COUNTIES, CITIES AND TOWNS.

383. By board or council. 17 G. A., ch. 58, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 175; 21 G. A., ch. 14. Counties, cities and towns are hereby authorized and empowered, if by a vote of two-thirds of the board of supervisors or city or town council, as the case may be, it be deemed for the public interest, to refund the indebtedness of such corporation, evidenced by the bonds thereof now outstanding, and to issue the coupon bonds of such corporation in sums not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, having not more than twenty years to run, redeemable in lawful money of the United States of America, at the pleasure of such corporation, after five years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest payable semi-annually at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, which bonds shall be substantially in the following form:

No. —.

The — of —, in the state of Iowa, for value received, promises to pay — or — order, at the office of the treasurer of said — in —, on the first day of —, or at time before that date after the expiration of five — years at the pleasure of the said —, the sum of — dollars, with interest at the rate of — per cent. per annum, payable at — semi-annually, on the first days of — and — in each year on presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached. This bond is issued by the — of said — under the provisions of chapter — of the session laws of the seventeenth general assembly of Iowa, and in conformity with a resolution of said —, dated — day of —, 18—. In testimony whereof the said — has caused this bond to be signed by the — [L. S.] — and attested by the — seal attached this — day — of —, 18—. And the interest coupons shall be in the following form:

The treasurer of —, Iowa, will pay to the holder hereof on the — day of —, 18—, at — in —, — dollars for interest on — bond No. —, issued under provisions of chapter — of the session laws of the seventeenth general assembly.

[By a legalizing act (21 G. A., ch. 21), the provisions of this section as amended by 20 G. A., ch. 175, were declared applicable to bonds outstanding April 11, 1884.]

384. Issue. 17 G. A., ch. 58, § 2. The treasurer of any such corporation is hereby authorized to sell and dispose of the bonds issued under this act at not less than their par value, and to apply the proceeds thereof to the redemption of the outstanding bonded debt; or he may exchange such bonds for outstanding bonds par for par; but the bonds hereby authorized shall be issued for no other purpose whatever; provided, however, such corporation may appropriate not to exceed two per centum of the bonds herein authorized to pay the expenses of preparing, issuing, advertising and disposing of the same, and may employ a financial agent therefor.

385. Levy to pay. 17 G. A., ch. 58, § 3. The board of supervisors or common council of any city or town, as the case may be, shall cause to be assessed and levied each year upon the taxable property of the county, city, or town, as the case may be, in addition to the levy authorized for other purposes a sufficient sum to pay the interest on outstanding bonds issued in conformity with the provisions of this act, accruing before the next annual levy, and such proportion of the principal that at the end of eight years the sum raised from such levies shall at least equal fifteen per cent. of the amount of bonds issued; at the end of ten years at least thirty per cent. of the amount, and at or before the date of maturity of the bonds, shall be equal to the whole amount of the principal and interest; and the money arising from such levies shall be known as the bond fund, and shall be used for the payment of bonds and interest coupons, and for no other purpose whatever; and the treasurer of such county, city or town, shall open and keep in his book a separate and special account thereof, which shall, at all times, show the exact condition of said bond fund.

386. Notice to redeem. 17 G. A., ch. 58, § 4. Whenever the amount in the hands of the treasurer of any such county, city, or town belonging to the bond fund, after setting aside the sum required to pay the interest coupons maturing before the next levy, is sufficient to redeem one or more bonds, he may notify the owner of such bond or bonds that he is prepared to pay the same, with all interest accrued thereon, and if said bond or bonds are not presented for payment or redemption within thirty days after the date of such notice, the interest on such bond shall cease, and the amount due thereon shall be set aside for its payment whenever presented; provided, however, that nothing herein shall be construed to mean that any such bond or bonds issued in accordance with this act, shall be due or payable before the expiration of five years after its date of issue. All redemptions shall be made in the exact order of their issuance, beginning at the lowest or first number, and the notice herein required shall be directed to the postoffice address of the owner, as shown by the record kept in the treasurer's office.

387. Executive council levy tax. 17 G. A., ch. 58, § 5. If the board of supervisors of any county, or the common council of any city or town which has issued bonds under the provisions of this act shall fail to make the levy necessary to pay such bonds or interest coupons at maturity, and the same shall have been presented to the treasurer of any such county, city, or town, and payment thereof refused, the owner may file the bond, together with all unpaid coupons, with the auditor of state, taking his receipt therefor, and the same shall be registered in the auditor's office, and the executive council shall at their next session, as a board of equalization, and at each annual equalization thereafter, add to the state tax to be levied in said county, city, or town, a sufficient rate to realize the amount of principal or interest past due and to become due prior to the next levy, and the same shall be levied and collected as a part of the state tax, and paid into the state treasury, and passed to the credit of such county, city, or town, as bond tax, and shall be paid by warrant as the payments mature to the holder of such obligation, as shown by the register in the office of the state auditor until the same shall be fully satisfied and discharged; provided, that nothing shall be construed to limit or postpone the right of any holder of any such bonds, to resort to any other remedy which such holder might otherwise have.

388. Special charter cities. 18 G. A., ch. 140, § 1. All cities and towns organized under special charters, are hereby vested with all the power and authority under such restrictions and provisions, as are "cities and towns," by and under the provisions of chapter fifty-eight of the laws of the seventeenth general assembly [§§ 353-387]; and for such purpose the words "cities and towns," wherever used in such chapter fifty-eight, shall be construed as including "cities" and "towns" when organized under special charters.

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

389. Number; election. 294. The board of supervisors in each county shall consist of three persons, except where the number may heretofore have been, or hereafter be, increased in the manner provided by section two hundred and ninety-nine of this chapter [§ 394]. They shall be qualified electors, and be elected by the qualified voters of their respective counties, and shall hold their office for three years. [9 G. A., ch. 73, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 148, § 1.]

390. When elected. 295. At the general election in each year, there shall be at least one supervisor elected in each county, who shall not be a resident of the same township with either of the members holding over, and who shall continue in office three years. [9 G. A., ch. 73, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 148, § 2.]

391. Meeting of. 296. The members of the board shall meet at the county seat of their respective counties, on the first Mondays of January, April, June, September, and the first Monday after the general election in each year, and such special meetings as are provided for by law. [13 G. A., ch. 148, § 3.]

Upon the final adjournment of a meeting of the board the members have no power to assemble or to transact any business required to be transacted in session until the next regular meeting, unless they be convened in special session in the meantime in the manner prescribed in § 400: Scott v. Union County, 63-583.

392. Quorum. 297. A majority of the board of supervisors shall be a quorum to transact business, but should a division take place on any question when only two members of the board are in attendance, the question shall be continued until there is a full board of supervisors. [Same, § 5.]

It is not necessary that everything done by the board of supervisors must be entered of record in order to be binding, but there should at least be an assent to such action given by a majority of the members of the board, while in session, before it will be binding upon the county: Rice v. Plymouth County, 43-136.

393. Resignation. 298. The absence of any supervisor from the county for six months in succession shall be a resignation of his office. [Same, § 6.]

394. Number. 299. The board of supervisors of any county may, and when petitioned to do so by one-fourth of the electors of said county shall, submit to the qualified voters of the county at any regular election, the question, "Shall the number of supervisors be increased to five," or "seven," as the board shall elect in submitting the question. If the majority of the votes cast shall be for the increase of the number, then, at the next ensuing election for a supervisor, the requisite additional supervisors shall be elected, whose terms of office shall be determined by lot in such a manner that one-half of the additional members shall hold their office for three years, and one-half for two years. In any county where the number of supervisors has been increased to "five" or "seven" the board of supervisors, on the petition of one-fourth of the legal voters of the county, shall submit to the qualified voters of the county at any regular election the question, "Shall the number of supervisors be reduced to five," or "three?" If a majority of the votes cast shall be for the decrease, then the board of supervisors shall be reduced to the number indicated by such vote, and thereafter there shall be annually elected the number requisite to keep the board full. [Same, § 7.]

Where the board of supervisors is thus increased, the additional members are not to be designated on the ballots for their election in any different manner from the others: Bradfield v. Wart, 36-291.

SUPERVISOR DISTRICTS.

395. Board establish. 15 G. A., ch. 39, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 68. The board of supervisors of each county may, at their regular meeting in June, A. D. 1874, or at their regular June meeting in any even-numbered year thereafter, divide their respective counties, by townships, into a number of supervisor districts corresponding to the number of supervisors in their respective counties, or at such regular meeting they may abolish supervisors' districts and provide for electing supervisors for the county at large.

396. How constituted. 15 G. A., ch. 39, § 2. Such districts shall be as nearly equal in population as possible, and shall each embrace townships as nearly contiguous as practicable, each of which said districts shall be entitled to one member of such board, to be elected by the electors of said district.

397. Election of members. 15 G. A., ch. 39, § 3. In case such division, or any subsequent division, shall be found to leave any district or districts without a member of such board of supervisors, then at the next ensuing general election a supervisor shall be elected by and from such district having no member of such board; and, if there be two such districts or more, then the new member or members of said board shall be elected by and from the district or districts having the greater population according to the last state census, and so on till each of such districts shall have one member of such board.

398. Redistricting. 15 G. A., ch. 39, § 4. Any county may be redistricted, as provided by the preceding sections of this act, once in each and every two years, and not oftener, and nothing herein contained shall be construed or have the effect to lengthen or diminish the term of office of any member of such board.

ORGANIZATION — POWERS.

399. Organization. 300. The board of supervisors, at their first meeting in every year shall organize by choosing one of their number as chairman, who shall preside at all the meetings of the board during the year. Every chairman of the board of supervisors shall have power to administer an oath to any person concerning any matter submitted to the board or connected with their powers. [R., § 308.]

400. Special meetings. 301. Special meetings of the board of supervisors shall be held only when requested by a majority of the board, which request shall be in writing, addressed to the county auditor, and shall specify the object for which such special meeting is desired. The auditor shall thereupon fix a day for such meeting, not later than ten days from the day of the filing of the petition with him, and shall immediately give notice in writing to each of the supervisors personally, or by leaving a copy thereof at his residence, at least six days before the day set for such meeting. The notice shall state the time and place where the meeting will be held and the object of it, as stated in the petition; and at such special meeting no business other than that so designated in the petition and notice shall be considered or transacted. The auditor shall also give public notice of the meeting by publication in not exceeding two newspapers published in the county, or, if there be none, by causing notice of the same to be posted on the front door of the court-house of the county, and in two other public places therein, one week before the time set therefor. [R., § 309.]

Any business transacted at a special meeting of the board will be presumed to have been lawful: Allen v. Cerro Gordo County, 34-54.

Upon the final adjournment of a meeting of the board the members have no power to assemble or to transact any business required to be transacted in session until the next regular meeting, unless they be convened in special session in the manner prescribed in this section: Scott v. Union County, 63-583.

401. Failure of duty. 302. If any supervisor shall neglect or refuse to perform any of the duties which are, or shall be, required of him by law as a member of the board of supervisors, without just cause therefor, he shall, for each offense, forfeit one hundred dollars. [R., § 311.]

402. Powers. 303; 16 G. A., ch. 80; 18 G. A., ch. 46. The board of supervisors at any regular meeting shall have the following powers, to wit:

1. To appoint one of their number chairman, and also a clerk in the absence of the regular officers;
2. To adjourn from time to time, as occasion may require;
3. To make such orders concerning the corporate property of the county as they may deem expedient;
4. To examine and settle all accounts of the receipts and expenditures of the county, and to examine, settle, and allow all just claims against the county unless otherwise provided for by law;

5. To build and keep in repair the necessary buildings for the use of the county and of the courts;

6. To cause the county buildings to be insured in the name of the county, or otherwise, for the benefit of the county, as they shall deem expedient, and in case there are no county buildings, to provide suitable rooms for county purposes;

7. To set off, organize, and change the boundaries of townships in their respective counties, designate and give names thereto and define the place of holding the first election;

8. To grant licenses for keeping ferries in their respective counties as provided by law;

9. To purchase for the use of the county, any real estate necessary for the erection of buildings for county purposes, to remove or designate a new site for any county buildings required to be at the county seat, when such removal shall not exceed the limits of the village or city at which the county seat is located;

10. To require any county officer to make a report, under oath, to them on any subject connected with the duties of his office, and to require any such officer to give such bonds, or additional bonds, as shall be reasonable or necessary for the faithful performance of their several duties; and any such officer who shall neglect or refuse to make such report or give such bonds within twenty days after being so required, may be removed from office by the board by a vote of a majority of the members elected;

11. To represent their respective counties, and to have the care and management of the property and business of the county in all cases where no other provision shall be made;

12. To manage and control the school fund of their respective counties as shall be provided by law;

13. To appoint commissioners to act with similar commissioners duly appointed in any other county or counties, and to authorize them to lay out, alter, or discontinue any highway extending through their own and one or more other counties, subject to the ratification of the board;

14. To fix the compensation of all services of county and township officers not otherwise provided for by law and to provide for the payment of the same;

15. To authorize the taking of a vote of the people for the relocation of the county seat as provided by law;

16. To alter, vacate, or discontinue any state or territorial highway within their respective counties;

17. To lay out, establish, alter, or discontinue any county highway heretofore or now laid out, or hereafter to be laid through or within their respective counties as may be provided by law;

18. To provide for the erection of all bridges which may be necessary, and which the public convenience may require within their respective counties, and to keep the same in repair;

19. To determine what bounties, in addition to those already provided by law, if any, shall be offered and paid by their county on the scalps of such wild animals taken and killed within their county as they may deem it expedient to exterminate. But no such bounty shall exceed five dollars;

20. To purchase for the use of the county any real estate necessary for the erection of buildings for the support of the poor of such county and for a farm to be used in connection therewith;

21. To have and exercise all the powers in relation to the poor given by law to the county authorities;

22. To make such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, as they may deem necessary for the government of their body, the transaction of business, and the preservation of order;

23. The board of supervisors shall constitute the board of county canvassers;

24. It shall not be competent for said board of supervisors to order the erection of a court-house, jail, poor-house, or other building, or bridge, when the probable cost will exceed five thousand dollars, nor the purchase of real estate, for county purposes, exceeding two thousand dollars in value, until a proposition therefor shall have been first submitted to the legal voters of the county, and voted for by a majority of all voting for and against such proposition at a general or special election, notice of the same being given for thirty days previously, in a newspaper, if one is published in the county, and if none be published therein, then by written notice posted in a public place in each township in the county. Provided, that the board of supervisors of any county having a population of more than ten thousand, may appropriate, for the construction of any one bridge, which is or may hereafter become a county charge, within the limits of such county, or may appropriate towards the construction of any bridge across any unnavigable river which is the dividing line between any two counties in this state, and between one county in this state, and another state, such sum as may be necessary, not exceeding the sum of forty dollars a lineal foot for superstructure, but in no case shall they appropriate for said purpose, including superstructure and approaches, a sum exceeding fifteen thousand dollars. Provided, however, that in any county having a population exceeding fifteen thousand, said board may appropriate as aforesaid, not to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars. Provided, that no county shall expend a sum exceeding fifteen thousand dollars in aid of the construction of a bridge across a stream which is the dividing line between two counties. [R., § 312; 10 G. A., ch. 60; 11 G. A., ch. 87, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 38; 14 G. A., ch. 1, § 1; ch. 53; ch. 130, § 1.]

In general: By the enactment of the statutory provisions substituting the board of supervisors for the county judge it was the intention of the legislature to confer upon such board all the powers and duties before that time devolving upon the county judge so far as they related to the management of the affairs of the county and the government thereof: Yant v. Brooks, 19-87.

Par. 3. The control and management of county property is given to the board. See ¶ 11 and notes.

Par. 4. Claims: A claim cannot be a "just claim" against the county to be allowed under this provision unless the law somewhere either requires or authorizes its payment: Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

The board has a discretion as to the allowance of claims against the county unless otherwise provided: Bean v. Board of Supervisors, 51-53.

The acts of the county judge in allowing certain claims against the county, and issuing warrants thereon, held to be ministerial, and not judicial: Campbell v. Polk County, 3-467.

Where no vote was taken or record made as to the allowance of a claim by the board, but it was seen and inspected at a meeting of the board by all the members, and marked allowed by one of them, with the knowledge and consent of all, this being the rule in the ordinary course of business, held, that it sufficiently appeared that the claim was allowed: Griggs v. Kimball, 42-512.

The allowance of a claim by the board, and the issuance of a warrant therefor, does not constitute an adjudication such as to preclude inquiry as to its correctness, and a warrant thus issued may be impeached for illegality: Hospers v. Wyatt, 63-261.

An appeal may be taken from an order of the board of supervisors denying a claim for salary by a county officer: Garber v. Clayton County, 19-29.

But a creditor is not obliged to appeal from the action of the board disallowing his claim, but may, instead, bring action against the county: Armstrong v. Tama County, 34-309; Curtis v. Cass County, 49-421.

When a claim presented to the board is not allowed the claimant may bring his action, and cannot be defeated therein because of the failure of the board to take action or make a record thereof: White v. Polk County, 17-413.

It being provided by statute that the district court of Lee county might be held in the city of Keokuk, provided the authorities of the city should furnish, free of charge, the necessary rooms for the use of the county in holding court, held, that the county was not liable for the rent of rooms used for that purpose, under an arrangement made by the sheriff: Lee County v. Deming, 3 G. Gr., 101.

The expense of providing a polling place at the general election is not charged to the county: Turner v. Woodbury County, 57-440.

The expenses of township elections to vote aid to railroads are not chargeable to the county: McBride v. Hardin County, 58-219.

No action may be brought against the county on an unliquidated claim until the same has been presented to the board and payment demanded: See § 3815 and notes.

Par. 5. Public buildings: The board may order the purchase of real estate, not exceeding $2,000 in value, and the erection thereon of a public building not costing to exceed $5,000, without submitting the question to a vote: Merchant v. Tama County, 32-200.

Under the Code of '51, held, that a county judge (possessing substantially the authority of the present board of supervisors) had power to contract for the erection of a county court-house or other public building for the use of the county, but could not be compelled by mandamus to submit to the voters of the county the question whether such a contract should be entered into: State ex rel. v. Napier, 7-425.

A county is not liable in damages for injuries received by reason of negligence in the construction of a court-house. The principle holding a county liable for the defective construction of a county bridge is not to be extended further or made to apply to public buildings. In such cases there is a difference between the liability of quasi-corporations, such as counties, and that of municipal corporations: Kincaid v. Hardin County, 53-430.

Therefore, held, that a county was not liable for damages caused by the overflow of water from a county ditch, such overflow being due to an accumulation of sediment therein: Green v. Harrison County, 61-311; Nutt v. Mills County, 61-754.

The county cannot be made liable upon implied agreement beyond the limit of the contract entered into by the board for the erection of a public building: Reichard v. Warren County, 31-381.

Par. 11. Power to contract: The power being given to a county, by § 366, to hold property, and by this section to the board of supervisors to control it, held, that the power to make all contracts necessary to the protection and perfection of the title to such property rests in such board: Allen v. Cerro Gordo County, 34-54; Page County v. American Emigrant Co., 41-115.

Therefore, held, that a contract by the county to give to an agent a portion of its interest in the swamp lands in compensation for procuring the allowance of the same by the government was valid: Ibid.

Compromising claims: A county has power to make a valid compromise of a disputed claim: Grimm v. Hamilton County, 37-290; Mills County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 47-66; Collins v. Welch, 58-72.

The board of supervisors have authority to accept from an officer who is in default a promissory note in settlement of the claims of the county against him; and such note will be based upon such consideration that it can be enforced: Sac County v. Hobbs, 72-69.

Under Code of '51, held, that settlement with the county judge in a matter properly going to him for settlement was binding upon the county, whether he had required from the person making settlement the report contemplated by law or not: Foweshiek County v. Stanley, 9-511.

Defending claims: If the board of supervisors neglect or refuse to defend a suit against the county a citizen tax-payer may intervene and do so: Greeley v. Lyon County, 40-72.

Offering reward: The board may offer a reward for the recovery of funds stolen from the county, but not for the arrest of the criminal: Hawk v. Marion County, 48-472.

Where a reward was offered by a county for the recovery of money, held, that a person giving information leading to the recovery of a portion of the money was entitled to a pro rata share of the reward: Ibid.

Where a person in another state acts upon the promise made by a board of supervisors in Iowa to pay a reward for the arrest and conviction of persons who have robbed the county treasury, he is bound to know the fact that the board has no power to offer such reward. In such case the members of the board will not be individually liable: Huthsing v. Bosquet, 3 McCrary, 569.

Peace officers acting under process in arresting a criminal are not entitled to a reward offered for such arrest unless the terms of the reward offered clearly include them: Means v. Hendershott, 24-78.

Employment of agents: The board has authority to employ a special agent or attorney to assist in the collection of taxes not collectible by the county treasurer: Wilhelm v. Cedar County, 50-254.

As incidental to the care and management of the county property, the board may, in a proper case, employ an agent to aid them; and therefore, held, an agent employed by the county to find a purchaser for indemnity swamp lands might maintain action for the value of his services: Call v. Hamilton County, 62-448.

Employment of counsel: The board may, whenever they deem it expedient, employ counsel to prosecute or defend actions against the county, or to perform other services, and no form of vote by the board or entry of the fact of such employment of record is necessary to the validity of the contract. It may be proved by parol: Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46-138; Jordan v. Osceola County, 59-388.

The board may employ counsel, in addition to the district attorney, to prosecute criminal cases: Hopkins v. Clayton County, 32-15.

The county judge, when that office existed, had the power, and it was his duty, to secure the services of an attorney whenever he thought such services were needed, and he might pay a reasonable compensation therefor out of the county treasury: Chickasaw County v. Bailey, 13-435.

Attorney assisting in prosecution: The district attorney cannot render the county liable for services of an additional attorney employed by him to aid in criminal prosecutions: Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46-138; Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

A county can be made liable to pay for additional counsel only as the board of supervisors has determined such counsel to be necessary. The court cannot, at the request of the district attorney, appoint assistant counsel and thereby bind the county to pay therefor, at least unless on account of the absence of the district attorney, and in order to prevent the failure of justice: Seaton v. Polk County, 59-626.

In the absence of the district attorney the court may appoint a special prosecutor, but as to whether in such case the county is rendered liable for his compensation the court were equally divided: White v. Polk County, 17-413.

Recovery against county for services rendered on appointment of court to assist in the prosecution in a particular case, held proper: Curtis v. Cass County, 49-421.

It may be that in proper cases the court may appoint and require a member of the bar to appear and represent the state in a habeas corpus proceeding, although no compensation therefor is provided: Miller v. Buena Vista County, 68-711.

A justice of the peace has no power to appoint an attorney to prosecute a criminal action in behalf of the state, and no compensation can be recovered by reason of such an appointment: Davis v. Linn County, 24-508. See, further, notes to § 268.

Liability for contracts made by officers or agents: A member of the board of supervisors has no power to bind the county by acts, contracts or declarations in the absence of authority of the board authorizing him to do so. He stands on the same footing as any other agent: Rice v. Plymouth County, 43-136.

The chairman of the board of supervisors has no more authority to make contracts binding on the county than has any other member; but the chairman or any other member may be empowered by consent, without any formal action, to make contracts for proper purposes as agent for the board: Tatlock v. Louisa County, 46-138.

The board having the power to do an act may properly direct the performance of it by a committee: Hopkins v. Clayton County, 32-15.

Acceptance by the board of supervisors of the report of a committee appointed to settle with an agent will bind the board to the terms of the settlement, in the absence of fraud or mistake: Ringgold County v. Allen, 42-697.

Ratification: While ratification of an unauthorized contract may be inferred from acquiescence therein with knowledge of all the material facts, yet, held, that where such ratification was claimed on account of payments being reported as made thereunder by the treasurer, it must appear not only that he reported the contract in full, but also that the board examined his report in this respect: Wilhelm v. Cedar County, 50-254.

Where the board, when not in session, offered a reward for the recovery of money stolen from the county, held, that a ratification thereof made afterward while in session, even after the acts had been done on which the reward was claimed, would render the county liable: Hawk v. Marion County, 48-472.

Certain action of the board in appointing a committee to examine a bridge built under contract, etc., held not to amount to an acceptance of the work or ratification of the change. A conditional acceptance, even when not authorized, will not necessarily amount to a full acceptance: Mallory v. Montgomery County, 48-681.

Implied contract: The county cannot be made liable upon implied agreement beyond the limit of the contract entered into by the board for the erection of a public building: Reichard v. Warren County, 31-381.

Estoppel: Where the county denies that its right and title to land has passed under a claimed conveyance thereof, it is estopped from collecting taxes on such land for the period during which it claims that it had not parted with the title: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Story County, 36-48.

Where a county accepts payment of taxes from a person claiming to own lands, and with full knowledge of such claim, it is estopped from afterwards asserting title in itself to such lands: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 39-507; Andubon County v. American Emigrant Co., 40-460. (On a subsequent appeal in the leading case the doctrine there stated was doubted by some members of the court: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 55-94.)

The county is estopped from asserting title to lands which it has assessed and sold for taxes as the property of another: Austin v. Bremer County, 44-155.

Where a county has taxed property in the name of a person as owner, it cannot afterwards, when he brings action to restrain the collection of the tax, deny that he is the owner of the land: Brandriff v. Harrison County, 50-164.

A mere unauthorized assessment of lands by the county will not estop it from afterwards asserting title, the adverse claimant not having parted with his money or changed his position in reliance upon such act: Page County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 40-520.

Unauthorized acts of county officers in levying taxes on lands which are at the time claimed by the county will not constitute an estoppel as against the county: Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 46-226.

A county will not be estopped or bound by the acts of its officers which are in violation of law, and void: Howard County v. Bullis, 49-519; Gill v. Appanoose County, 68-20.

Representations of authorized agents of a county, made in connection with a sale of its lands, that there are no taxes assessed against them, will estop the county from collecting taxes for preceding years: Calhoun County v. American Emigrant Co., 93 U. S., 124.

An action by a county to set aside a conveyance will not render taxes levied on the property after such conveyance void: American Emigrant Co. v. Iowa R. Land Co., 52-323.

In a particular case, held, that it was not sufficiently shown that taxation of certain lands by a county was made by such inadvertence or mistake that it should not be estopped from asserting title thereto: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 55-94.

The fact that land has been taxed to a purchaser, who has obtained title thereto from the county by fraud, will not estop the county from asserting its title: Bixby v. Adams County, 49-507.

Assignment of notes to: Under some circumstances a county may take an assignment of notes, and in an action by the county against the maker of a note it will be presumed that the circumstances were such as to authorize the assignment to the county until the contrary is shown: Marshall County v. Hanna, 57-372.

Trust property: Where public lands were granted to counties, the proceeds thereof to be used in erecting county buildings, held, that such proceeds were held in trust by the counties, and in an action by the county to recover a portion of such fund a general indebtedness due defendant from the county could not be set off: Davis v. Muscatine County, Mor., 161.

Construction of ditches: Where the board of supervisors, in pursuance of a proper application, have had a ditch constructed, and have paid the contractor the amount of his claim therefor, a person whose land is taxed for its construction cannot restrain the collection of such taxes. His objection ought to be made sooner: Noyes v. Harrison County, 57-312.

While it has been held in this state, against the decided weight of authority in other states, that counties are liable for damages caused by reason of the negligent construction and maintenance of county bridges, the court is not disposed to extend the rule which has been held applicable to bridges so as to make the county liable for damages resulting from the negligent construction of a county ditch, or from negligence in allowing the same to become obstructed: Green v. Harrison County, 61-311; Nutt v. Mills County, 61-754.

Construction of levees: In a proceeding before the board of supervisors to authorize the construction of a levee, and the assessment of taxes therefor upon adjacent lands, it is essential that a petition signed by residents interested in the improvement shall be presented. Unless this requirement is complied with the supervisors can obtain no jurisdiction: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

Construction of roads: The county has authority to aid in the construction of a road, and warrants issued for that purpose are valid: Long v. Boone County, 32-181.

Par. 12. School fund: The board of supervisors cannot take advantage of the exemptions from tax sales accorded to school-fund mortgages, and buy in land sold for taxes upon which such a mortgage exists, for the express purpose of defeating a prior mortgage. The purchase of such tax title not being necessary for the protection of the fund, they have no power to make it: Miller v. Gregg, 26-75.

Par. 18. Bridges: The board of supervisors have authority to contract for the erection of bridges within the limits of cities in the county: Oskaloosa Steam-Engine Works v. Pottawattamie County, 72-134.

Liability for defects: The county being expressly empowered to make and repair bridges and levy a bridge tax for such purposes (§ 1270), it is its duty, and not that of the road supervisors, to build and keep in repair bridges of such size as to require an extraordinary expenditure of money to construct them, or the repairs upon which involve a considerable expense; and the county is liable for the damages resulting from negligence in building or failing to repair: Wilson v. Jefferson County, 13-181; Brown v. Jefferson County, 16-339; Soper v. Henry County, 26-264; Kendall v. Lucas County, 26-395; Davis v. Allamakee County, 40-217; Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40-394; Chandler v. Fremont County, 42-58; Huston v. Iowa County, 43-456; Krause v. Davis County, 44-141; Cooper v. Mills County, 69-350.

The general language of this paragraph is to be construed in connection with the general provisions of the statute regulating the making and repairing of highways (§ 1464 et seq.): Soper v. Henry County, 26-264.

What deemed county bridges: The county is not responsible for bridges which it is contemplated shall be built and kept in repair by the road district (§ 1464), and for damages resulting from the unsafe condition of which the road supervisor is made personally liable, after notice in writing (§ 1504): Soper v. Henry County, 26-264; Chandler v. Fremont County, 42-58; Taylor v. Davis County, 40-295.

But even though it may be the obligation of the road supervisors to make small repairs on county bridges for the purpose of keeping them in order, the county is not thereby relieved from its liability as to such bridges: Roby v. Appanoose County, 63-113.

Where a bridge, not originally built by the county, which was twelve feet in span, and could be built for seventy-five dollars, was defective for want of a railing which would have cost five dollars, and the road district had ample means for repairing or rebuilding if necessary, held, that such bridge was not a county bridge, and the county was not liable for injuries received from defects therein: Chandler v. Fremont County, 42-58.

Held, that the county was not liable for damages resulting from the falling of a bridge, where it did not appear that it had ever assumed control thereof, or made appropriation for building it or keeping it in repair, and that the records of the board showing the appropriation for rebuilding, after the accident, were not admissible to establish such liability: Tiller v. Iowa County, 48-90.

The fact that the county is authorized to change the location of a highway, and that it is required that the new highway shall be put into as good condition as the old one, will not render it liable for defects in a small bridge upon such new highway, although the committee of the board of supervisors authorized to examine such new highway has accepted it: Taylor v. Davis County, 40-295.

Bridges properly designated county bridges, and for the construction or repair of which the county is liable, are bridges of the larger class requiring an extraordinary expenditure of money: Idid.

That citizens or another corporation has contributed to the construction of the bridge does not relieve the county from liability for negligence in constructing it or keeping it in repair: Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40-394, and see Albee v. Floyd County, 46-177.

The board has power to construct, and levy taxes for, a free bridge over a stream, although within the limits of an incorporated city, when it will accommodate the county and traveling public at large: Bell v. Fouch, 21-119; Barratt v. Brooks, 21-144.

The board may also aid in the construction of free bridges, erected with the sanction of the proper authorities, for public use upon public lines of travel within as well as without incorporated towns or cities: Ibid.

While the county is liable for injuries resulting, through its fault, from defective bridges erected by it upon a public highway within a town which is not made a separate road district, yet when the town becomes incorporated as a city of the second class, and its organization as such is perfected, the city becomes bound to keep its bridges in repair, and is, in the absence of contract, alone liable for their safe condition: McCullom v. Black Hawk County, 21-409.

The provision found in § 726 that public bridges exceeding forty feet in length over any stream crossing a state or county highway shall be constructed and kept in repair by the county is applicable to all bridges and not merely to those within city limits. But this provision does not affect the question whether bridges less than forty feet in length are to be deemed county bridges, and that fact depends upon their necessity to the public, their character and cost, and the financial ability of the road district in which they are located to construct and maintain them: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

Where, by the provisions of § 403, relating to bridges near a county line, one county constructs a bridge along the line of a county road within the limits of another county, it becomes liable for injury resulting from negligence in constructing and maintaining such bridge: Ibid.

Extent of liability: The county is to be held to the exercise of such care with reference to its bridges as reasonably prudent and careful men would use in the conduct and management of their own affairs of like importance: Cooper v. Mills County, 69-350.

The county is liable not only for the defective construction of a bridge, but for negligently and carelessly adopting an insufficient plan therefor: Ferguson v. Davis County, 57-601.

Where it appeared that the plan, in accordance with which a contract for the erection of a bridge was made and carried out, was defective, and that, although prepared by the contractor, it was so prepared at the direction of the county and against his advice as to particular features, held, that such contractor was not liable for defects of the bridge constructed by him due to a defective plan: Holland v. Union County, 68-56.

The approaches to a county bridge constitute a part of the bridge, and the county is liable for defects in the construction of such approaches: Moreland v. Mitchell County, 40-294; Albee v. Floyd County, 46-177.

The county may be liable for injuries received by a person who, in the night-time, goes upon a newly-constructed bridge and suffers injury by reason of the embankments not being completed or properly guarded: Van Winter v. Henry County, 61-684.

It is error to instruct the jury that as a matter of law the embankment constituting the approach to the bridge is to be regarded as a part of it. That is a question for the jury: Nims v. Boone County, 66-272; Nims v. Boone County, 68-642.

Where a span of a bridge over a bayou was separated from the main bridge over a stream on the same line of road by some twenty feet of embankment, held, that whether such span was a part of the main bridge was a question for the jury: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

In an action against a county for damages resulting from the falling of one span of a bridge, held, that the jury should not have been limited to the consideration of evidence relating to the condition of that portion of the bridge alone: Hughes v. Muscatine County, 44-672.

A county may be liable for injuries received from the falling of a bridge, which, though properly constructed, has become unsafe by decay of the timbers, if it has failed to exercise care and diligence in inspecting and repairing the same, whether the need of such repairs is open and obvious or not: Huff v. Poweshiek County, 60-529.

The county will be liable for negligence in failing to inspect and repair where a bridge, though properly constructed, has been built so long that in the exercise of ordinary care and diligence the board of supervisors ought to have known that it would in such time become dangerous: Ferguson v. Davis County, 57-601.

The county may also become liable for failure of its authorities, upon being notified of the dangerous condition of the bridge, to have it examined and repaired if defective, and its use in the meantime prevented: Ibid.

But where it appeared that an examination had been made by a competent person, who reported that the bridge would run about four years, held, that the fact that it had already stood for a period greater than the average life of the timber of which it was composed would not render the county liable unless some member of the board knew or was informed of its unsafe condition, or, in the exercise of reasonable care, should have known such condition: Ibid.

Where it appeared that the county authorities had placed a written notice of the defective condition of a bridge somewhere thereon, and put a pole across one end of it, but there was nothing to show that such notice or pole was there when plaintiff received his injury, held not error to refuse an instruction assuming that defendant would not be liable if notice was given and the bridge obstructed, and such notice or obstruction were subsequently removed by some unauthorized person: Brown v. Jefferson County, 16-339.

Contributory negligence: In an action against a county to recover damages for injuries received by reason of a defective bridge, defendant may show that plaintiff had knowledge of the unsafe condition of the bridge and might have reached his destination by another road equally convenient, over a good bridge: Walker v. Decatur County, 67-307.

It will not, however, as a matter of law, constitute contributory negligence that plaintiff, knowing the bridge in question was unsafe, did not take another road which was safe and convenient, the bridge at which the accident occurred not having been barricaded but left open for public travel: Ibid.

Par. 22: The rules and regulations here contemplated are for their own government and not for the government of other bodies or boards: Hunter v. Jasper County, 40-568.

Par. 24: The members of a board of supervisors violating these provisions by voting to erect a building or bridge, the probable cost of which exceeds the amount here specified, without having submitted the question to vote, are guilty of a misdemeanor under § 5274: State v. Conlee, 25-237.

Where the erection of a building, the probable cost of which exceeds $5,000, has been formally authorized, the board are limited to the amount authorized by such vote, and an indebtedness contracted beyond that amount is void: Reichard v. Warren County, 31-331.

The county cannot be held on an implied contract for a quantum meruit where an express contract would have been unauthorized. The acceptance and occupation of a building, erected at greater expense than that authorized, will not render the county liable for its cost beyond the amount authorized: Ibid.

The board may order the purchase of real estate, not exceeding $2,000 in value, and the erection thereon of a public building not costing to exceed $5,000, without submitting the question to a vote: Merchant v. Tama County, 32-200.

In the submission of a proposition for the outlay of money, two distinct objects, each calling for a certain specified amount, cannot be included in one proposition: Gray v. Mount, 45-591.

Before the amendment made by 18th G. A., ch. 46, held, that the submission here authorized could only be made at a general election: Ibid.; Yant v. Brooks, 19-87.

Where a proposition was made to a county

403. Bridges on county line roads. 17 G. A., ch. 40, § 1. Wherever a county line road intersects a stream of sufficient width to require a county bridge, and the point of intersection does not afford a suitable site for the construction of such bridge, and there is a good site for the erection of a bridge wholly within one or the other of said counties, at a reasonable distance from the county line, the boards of supervisors of the respective counties to be benefited by said bridge may make the necessary appropriations for the construction and maintenance of such bridge, the same as they might do if said bridge was located on county line.

Where, under the provisions of this statute, one county erects a bridge along a county road but within the limits of another county, it may be held liable for injuries resulting to sell property to it for a court-house, and the proposition was submitted to the voters and acquiesced in by them, held, that such action did not constitute an acceptance, but only authorized an acceptance by the board of supervisors, and in the absence of such action on the part of the board the contract was not binding on the county: Starr v. Board of Supervisors, 22-491.

And held that such a proposition must be accompanied, when submitted to vote, by a provision to lay a tax for the payment thereof, as provided in § 432. Ibid.

The proceeds of swamp lands may be appropriated to the building of public bridges when duly authorized by the vote of the people: Barrett v. Brooks, 21-144.

The submission of such a question to vote need not include the submission of the contract under which the bridge is to be built: Ibid.

That proceeds of swamp lands are appropriated by a vote of the electors to the construction of a bridge does not restrict the board from appropriating a further sum from the bridge fund: Bell v. Foutch, 21-119.

Under § 407, authorizing the voting of taxes by a township to aid in the construction of county bridges, the electors of the township can only vote such taxes when the cost is at least $10,000, which estimate or cost must be fixed by the board of supervisors: Ritz v. Tannahill, 69-476.

Par. 19. Bounties for scalps of wild animals: To entitle a party to recover the additional bounty herein contemplated; the animals must be taken and killed within the county: Murray v. Jones County, 72-286.

from negligence in constructing and repairing such bridge: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

404. Establishing highway to avoid bridging. 21 G. A., ch. 85, § 1. The board of supervisors shall have the power to change and establish highways along streams where they can avoid building a bridge or bridges over said stream, and said highway shall be placed in good traveling condition by said county board of supervisors; and all cost accruing in the establishment of said road shall be paid out of the county bridge fund.

405. Commission to assess damages. 21 G. A., ch. 85, § 2. The board of supervisors shall have power wherever such highway is necessary to be established, at their regular session, to appoint three disinterested persons to assess the damages of the same.

406. Appeal. 21 G. A., ch. 85, § 3. In all cases the party or parties aggrieved by said assessment may appeal to the circuit [district] court, but the party or parties appealing must give sufficient bond for costs, to be approved by the clerk of said court.

407. Cities, towns or townships may aid county bridges. 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 1. It shall be lawful for any township, incorporated town, or city, including cities acting under special charters, to aid in the construction of county bridges when the estimated cost of the same is not less than ten thousand dollars, as fixed by the board of supervisors, as hereinafter provided.

See Ritz v. Tannehill, 69-476.

408. Petition; notice, election, rate, levy. 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 2. Whenever a petition shall be presented to the council or trustees of any incorporated town or city, or trustees of any township, signed by a majority of the resident property tax-payers of such township, incorporated town, or city, asking that the question of aiding the construction of a county bridge, to be situated in whole or in part within such township, incorporated town, or city, or within the township in which such incorporated town or city is situated, be submitted to the voters thereof, it shall be the duty of the trustees or council of such incorporated town or city, or trustees of such township, to immediately give notice of a special election, by publication in some newspaper published in the county, if any be published therein, and also by posting such notice in five public places in such township, incorporated town or city, at least ten days before such election, which notice shall specify the time and place of holding said election, the proposed location of the bridge to be aided, the rate per centum of tax to be levied, and whether the entire per centum voted is to be collected in one year, or one-half collected the first year, and all the conditions in the petition. At such election the question of taxation shall be submitted, and if a majority of the votes polled be for taxation, then the recorder of the incorporated town, the clerk of the city or township, or clerk of said election shall forthwith certify to the county auditor the rate per centum of tax then voted by said township, city, or incorporated town, the year or years during which the same is to be collected, and the time and terms upon which the same, when collected, is to be paid as hereinafter provided under the stipulation contained in the notice under which such election was held, which said certificate shall be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county, and filed in the office of the county auditor. When such certificate shall have been filed and recorded as aforesaid, the board of supervisors of the county shall, at the time of levying the ordinary taxes next following, levy the tax certified as above, under the provisions of this act, and cause the same to be placed on the tax list of the proper township, incorporated town, or city, indicating in their order, when and in what proportion the same is to be collected; and these facts shall be noted upon the tax list by the auditor. Said tax shall be collected at the time or times specified in said order in the same manner, and be subject to the same penalties for non-payment after the same becomes due and delinquent, as other taxes.

409. Limit of tax. 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 3. The aggregate amount of tax to be voted or levied under the provisions of this act in any township, incorporated town, or city, shall not exceed five per centum of the assessed value of the property therein, respectively, nor shall it exceed one-half the estimated cost of the bridge sought to be aided as fixed by the board of supervisors.

410. Tax paid out. 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 4. The moneys collected under the provisions of this act shall be paid out by the county treasurer, on the order of the board of supervisors of the county, and such order shall specify that it is on the special bridge fund belonging to the township, incorporated town, or city from which such tax has been collected, but in no case shall the said board make such order until the conditions specified in the petition and notice have been complied with.

411. Conditions. 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 5. The petitioners may provide, by stipulations contained in the petition for the tax, the conditions upon which the board of supervisors may order the money, when collected, paid out.

412. Expenses of election. 19 G. A., ch. 63, § 6. The expense of giving notice and holding the election provided for herein, shall be audited and paid out of the county fund like other claims against the county.

413. Surplus bridge fund. 18 G. A., ch. 88, § 1. Whenever any county in this state is free from debt, and has a surplus in its bridge fund, after providing for the necessary repairs of bridges in said county, then the board of supervisors of such county may, out of such surplus, make improvements on the highways upon the petition of one-third of the resident freeholders of any township in said county, but in no case shall they be authorized to run the county in debt for such improvements of the highways, and whenever they shall make such improvements they shall let the work by contract to the lowest responsible bidder, after having advertised for proposals in some newspaper printed in the county for not less than fourteen days previous to the letting of said contract.

414. Transfer of bridge fund to city. 18 G. A., ch. 45, § 1. In each county in this state containing a city of the first class within the corporate limits of which there are any bridge or bridges, exceeding three hundred feet in length, constructed by such city, and for the cost of constructing which such city shall be indebted in a sum of not less than one hundred thousand dollars, the board of supervisors hereby is required to annually set apart and pay to such city out of the bridge fund of such county, the whole amount of bridge tax collected on the taxable property within the limits of such city for that year, until such indebtedness shall be fully paid. Thereupon such bridge or bridges [shall] become free, and such city hereby is required to apply the money so set apart and paid to it, and the tolls meanwhile collected on such bridge or bridges, after first paying the necessary expense of maintaining the same, on such indebtedness, and it shall be unlawful to use or apply the same or any part thereof for or to any other purpose, except that so much thereof as may be necessary for that purpose may be used to repair any bridge or bridges in such city, the repair of which is required for public safety.

415. Rebuilding public buildings with insurance money. 19 G. A., ch. 54, § 1. In any county in this state, where the public buildings thereof, or any of them, have been or may hereafter be destroyed by fire, wind, or lightning, the board of supervisors of such county, for the purpose of reconstructing the same, may appropriate, in addition to the amount now authorized by law, the amount received by way of insurance on such building or buildings so destroyed.

416. Tax for relief of soldiers and sailors and families. 22 G. A., ch. 105, § 1. The board of supervisors of the several counties of this state are hereby authorized to levy, in addition to the taxes now levied by law, a tax not exceeding three-tenths of one mill upon the taxable property of their respective counties, to be levied and collected as now provided by law for the assessment and collection of taxes, for the purpose of creating a fund for the relief and for funeral expenses of honorably discharged indigent Union soldiers, sailors and marines, and the indigent wives, widows and minor children not over fourteen years of age in the case of boys and not over sixteen years of age in the case of girls, of such indigent or deceased Union soldiers, sailors or marines, having a legal residence in said county to be disbursed as hereinafter provided.

417. Soldiers' relief commission. 22 G. A., ch. 105, § 2. The board of supervisors in each county of this state shall on or before the first Monday of September, 1888, appoint three persons, who are residents of such county, at least two of whom shall be honorably discharged Union soldiers, one to serve three years, one to serve two years, one to serve one year from date of appointment, and each year thereafter one person to serve for three years, such persons so appointed, when organized by the selection of one of their number as chairman, and one as secretary, shall be designated and known as "The Soldiers' Relief Commission." The members of said commission shall qualify by taking the usual oath of office and shall each give bonds in the sum of five hundred dollars for the faithful performance of their duties. In the event of a vacancy in said commission occurring from any cause, the board of supervisors shall fill the vacancy for the unexpired term.

418. Meeting and duties of; compensation. 22 G. A., ch. 105, § 3. The soldiers' relief commission shall meet at the county auditor's office on the first Monday in September of each year, and at such other times as is deemed necessary, and shall examine and determine who are entitled to relief under the provisions of this act, and shall make lists of such persons, and at the September meeting such commission, after determining the probable amount necessary for the purpose provided herein, shall certify the amount to the board of supervisors, and the board of supervisors of each county, at its September meeting each year, shall make such levies as shall be necessary to raise the required relief fund, not exceeding three-tenths of a mill on the taxable property of such county. The soldiers' relief commission shall fix the amount to be paid in each case, the aggregate not to exceed the levy of said tax for any one year and shall certify the lists to the county auditor. The auditor shall within twenty days thereafter, transmit to the township clerks in his county a list of the names of the persons in the respective townships to whom relief has been awarded and the amount thereof. The auditor, on the first Monday of each month after said fund is ready for distribution shall issue his warrant to the soldiers' relief commission, upon the county treasurer, for the several amounts awarded. Such commission shall disburse the same to the person or persons named in the lists, taking receipts therefor; or such fund may be disbursed in any other manner directed by the commission; provided, however, that when said commission is satisfied that any person entitled to relief under this act will not properly expend the amount allowed, the commission may pay the amount to some suitable person who shall expend the same for such person in such manner as the commission may direct; and provided, further, that said commission, at any meeting, may decrease, increase, or discontinue any amount before awarded, and may add new names to the lists, which shall be certified to the county auditor. The soldiers' relief commission shall, at the end of each year, make to the board of supervisors a detailed report of the transactions of such commission; such report shall be accompanied with vouchers for all moneys disbursed.

419. Removal. 22 G. A., ch. 105, § 4. The board of supervisors may at any time remove any member of the commission for neglect of duty or maladministration and appoint others in the place of members thus removed.

420. Burial of soldiers and sailors. 20 G. A., ch. 178, § 1. It shall be the duty of the board of supervisors in each of the counties of this state, to designate some suitable person in each township, whose duty it shall be to cause to be decently interred the body of any honorably discharged soldier, sailor, or marine, who served in the army or navy of the United States during the late war, who may hereafter die without leaving sufficient means to defray funeral expenses. Such burial shall not be made in any cemetery or burial ground used exclusively for the burial of the pauper dead. Provided, the expenses of such burial shall not exceed the sum of thirty-five dollars; and provided further, that in case surviving relatives of the deceased shall desire to conduct the funeral, and are unable or unwilling to pay the charges therefor, they shall be permitted so to do, and the expenses shall be paid as herein provided.

421. Head-stone. 20 G. A., ch. 178, § 2. The grave of any such deceased soldier, sailor, or marine, shall be marked by a head-stone containing the name of the deceased and the organization to which he belonged or in which he served. Provided, such head-stone shall not cost more than the sum of fifteen dollars, and shall be of such design and material as may be approved by the board of supervisors.

422. Expense. 20 G. A., ch. 178, § 3. The expenses of such burial and head-stone shall be paid by the county in which such soldier, sailor, or marine shall have died. And the board of supervisors of such county is hereby authorized and directed to audit the account and pay the said expenses, in similar manner as other accounts against such county are audited and paid.

423. Soldiers' monuments and memorial halls. 21 G. A., ch. 62, § 1. A tax, not to exceed one mill on the dollar on the assessed valuation of any county, may be voted for the purpose of erecting monuments and memorial halls on which or in which shall be included the names of all deceased soldiers and sailors and all who may hereafter die, who enlisted or entered the service from the county where such appropriations may be made and also the names of such other deceased soldiers as the grand army posts of said county shall direct, as hereinafter provided.

424. Voting tax. 21 G. A., ch. 62, § 2. Whenever a petition shall be presented to the board of supervisors of any county in this state signed by a majority of the members of the grand army posts in said county asking said board of supervisors to submit to the legally qualified voters of said county, at the next general election, after said petition shall have been presented, the question of aiding in the erection of a soldiers' and sailors' monument or memorial hall, as provided for in section one of this act [§ 423]. At such election the question of taxation shall be submitted, the form of the ballot shall be "for taxation" and "against taxation" and if a majority of the ballots polled be for taxation, then the board of supervisors of said county at the time of levying the ordinary taxes, next succeeding said election shall levy such tax as is voted under the provisions of this act, the same to be placed upon the tax lists of said county and collected as other taxes.

425. Collection and expenditure. 21 G. A., ch. 62, § 3. The taxes when collected by the county treasurer shall be drawn and expended for the erection of such soldiers' and sailors' monuments or memorial halls under the direction of a committee of three to be selected by a majority of all the members of the grand army posts in the county where such tax is voted, and the county auditor shall draw his warrants upon the treasurer for said money at the times and in the amounts as may be directed by said committee and shall charge it with the same and the committee shall settle and account with the board of supervisors for all money so drawn in the same manner as is now or may hereafter be provided by law for the settlement of the accounts of township clerks. Provided, this act shall not be held to apply to any county which has before the passage of this act made an appropriation for the erection of a soldiers' monument under the provisions of chapter one hundred and sixty-two of the acts of the twentieth general assembly.

426. Majority of board. 305. No tax shall be levied, no contract for the erection of any public buildings entered into, no settlement with the county officers made, no real estate purchased or sold, no new site designated for any county buildings, no change made in the boundaries of townships, and no money appropriated to aid in the construction of highways and bridges, without a majority of the whole board of supervisors voting therefor and consenting thereto. [R., § 313.]

The authority of a county to aid in the construction of a road is here necessarily implied, and warrants issued therefor are valid: Long v. Boone County, 32-181.

While it is not necessary that everything done by the board must be entered of record or be put in writing in order to be binding, yet there should at least be an assent to such action given by a majority of the members of the board, while in session, before it will be binding on the county: Rice v. Plymouth County, 43-136.

427. Publication of notices. 306. The clerk of the district court, sheriff, auditor, treasurer, and recorder shall designate the newspapers in which the notices pertaining to their several offices shall be published, and the board of supervisors shall designate the papers in which all other county notices shall be published; and in counties having a population exceeding eighteen thousand inhabitants, the board shall designate as one of such papers, a paper published in a foreign language, if there be such in its county.

This refers only to county notices and not to notices in reference to the commencement of actions or sales upon execution, in which cases plaintiff may designate the papers in which publication shall be made: See § 5112, and note.

428. Publication of proceedings. 307; 20 G. A., ch. 197, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 86, § 2. The board of supervisors shall, at its January session of each year, select two newspapers published within the county, or one, if there be but one published therein, having the largest number of bona fide yearly subscribers within the county, which circulation shall be determined as follows: in case of contest the applicants shall each deposit with the county auditor on or before a day named by the board of supervisors, a certified statement subscribed and sworn to before some competent officer, giving the names of the several postoffices and the number and the names of the bona fide yearly subscribers receiving their papers through each of said offices living within the county, such statements to be in sealed envelopes and opened by the county auditor upon direction by the board of supervisors to do so, and the two applicants thus showing the greatest number of bona fide yearly subscribers living within the county shall be the county official papers in which all the proceedings of the county board of supervisors, the schedule of bills allowed, and the reports of the county treasurer, including a schedule of the receipts and expenditure, shall be published at the expense of the county during the ensuing year, and the cost of such publication shall not exceed one-third the rate allowed by law for legal advertisements, and provided, that in counties having a population of seventeen thousand inhabitants or more, three papers (not more than two of which shall be published in the same town) may be selected in which such proceedings shall be published with the same limitation as to compensation, and the county auditor shall furnish all such papers selected a copy of such proceedings for that purpose; and furthermore provided, that in counties having two county seats each district shall be regarded as a county for that purpose. In case charges of fraud are made by an aggrieved publisher, the board shall seek other evidence of circulation and the aggrieved publisher shall have the right of appeal to the circuit [district] court for redress of grievance. Said appeal shall be taken as in ordinary actions, and in case of appeal, neither publisher to the contest shall receive pay for publishing such proceedings until the case is disposed of in the circuit [district] court.

Decisions under the original section: The proprietor or publisher of a newspaper has no interest in the selection of his paper for the publication of proceedings, etc., that he can maintain an action in his own name to compel the board to comply with the law, and order such publication in his paper: Welch v. Board of Supervisors, 23-199; Smith v. Yoram, 37-89; Iowa News Co. v. Harris, 62-501.

The schedule of the receipts and expenditures, with the names of all claimants, etc., required to be published under the provisions of Code, § 304, before its repeal, were not required to be published under this section as a part of the proceedings of the board: McBride v. Hardin County, 58-219. Nor was the treasurer's semi-annual report to be so published: Haislett v. Howard County, 58-377.

Where the board entered into a contract for the publication of matter authorized to be published by them, in four newspapers instead of two as authorized by law, but at such rate that the aggregate amount of compensation was less than that which they they were authorized to pay for the proper printing of such matter, held, that their action could not be restrained by injunction at the suit of a taxpayer: Sperry v. Kretchner, 65-525.

429. Books kept. 308. The board is authorized and required to keep the following books:

1. A book to be known as the "minute book," in which shall be recorded all orders and decisions made by them, except those relating to highways. All orders for the allowance of money from the county treasury, shall state on what account and to whom the allowance is made, dating the same and numbering them consecutively through each year;

2. A book to be known as the "highway record," in which shall be recorded all proceedings and adjudications relating to the establishment, change, or discontinuance of highways;

3. A book to be known as the "warrant book," in which shall be entered in the order of their issuance, the number, date, amount, name of drawee of each warrant drawn on the treasury, and the number of warrants as directed in relation to the minute book. [R., § 318.]

It is not necessary that everything done by the board be entered of record in order to be binding, although there must at least be an assent thereto given by a majority of the members while in session: Rice v. Plymouth County, 43-136.

The fact that the members of the board, when not in session, expressed views different from their recorded action will not affect such action as recorded: Palo Alto County v. Burlingame, 71-201.

QUESTIONS SUBMITTED TO THE PEOPLE.

430. What questions. 309; 15 G. A., ch. 70, § 4. The board of supervisors may submit to the people of the county at any regular election, or at any special one called for that purpose, the question whether money may be borrowed to aid in the erection of any public buildings, whether any species of stock, not prohibited by law, shall be permitted to run at large and at what time it shall be prohibited, and the question of any other local or police regulation not inconsistent with the laws of the state. And when the warrants of a county are at a depreciated value, they may, in like manner, submit the question whether a tax of a higher rate than that provided by law shall be levied, and in all cases when an additional tax is laid, in pursuance of a vote of the people of any county, for the special purpose of repaying borrowed money, or constructing, or aiding to construct, any highway or bridge, such special tax shall be paid in money, and in no other manner. [R., § 250; C., '51, § 114.]

[As to meaning of the word "stock," and as to submitting to vote the question whether stock shall be permitted to run at large, see § 2253.]

Submission of proposition: Where the proposition submitted to the voters was to issue bonds for the erection of a court-house and provide a tax for their payment, and the ballots were "for court-house bonds" and "against" the same, a majority of the ballots cast being in the affirmative, held, that such vote authorized the levy of a tax as well as the issuance of the bonds: Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kossuth County, 41-57.

Where a proposition is submitted for ratification at an election it is necessary that the voters shall be advised of the nature or terms of the contract or proposition submitted, and when or where they are called upon to express by vote their assent or dissent: Page County v. American Emigrant Co., 41-115.

The manner and form of notice is not essential if there has been sufficient notice in fact upon which the voters of the county have acted; and in a particular case, held, that a notice of submission of a proposition for the disposition of swamp lands by the county was sufficient, although such notice was not in the form required by statute: Ibid.

Two or more propositions may be submitted to vote at the same time, but they cannot be joined together so as to make the adoption of each depend upon the adoption of all the others: McMullan v. Lee County, 3-311; Gray v. Mount, 45-591.

If the board are authorized to borrow money they may do it by means of negotiable bonds, but if not so authorized they have no authority to issue such bonds, and bonds so issued would be void. [Decided under § 114, Code 1851]: Hull v. Marshall County, 12-142; Casady v. Woodbury County, 13-113.

When authorized by vote of the people the counties of Iowa have the power to issue negotiable bonds for borrowed money or extraordinary expenditures: Carpenter v. Buena Vista County, 5 Dillon, 556.

431. Mode. 310. The mode of submitting such questions to the people shall be the following: the whole question, including the sum desired to be raised, or the amount of tax desired to be levied, or the rate per annum, and the whole regulation, including the time of its taking effect or having operation, if it be of a nature to be set forth, and the penalty for its violation if there be one, shall be published at least four weeks in some newspaper printed in the county. If there be no such newspaper, the publication shall be by being posted up in at least one of the most public places in each township in the county, and in addition, in at least five among the most public places in the county, one of them being the door of the court-house, for at least thirty days prior to the time of taking the vote. All such notices shall name the time when such question will be voted upon, and the form in which the question shall be taken, and a copy of the question submitted shall be posted up at each place of voting during the day of election. [R., § 251; C., '51, § 115.]

Where the question submitted was whether a special tax should be levied to pay depreciated county warrants, held, that the omission to specify for what year the tax should be levied rendered the submission invalid: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39-124, 149.

432. Provision for tax. 311. When a question so submitted involves the borrowing or the expenditure of money, the proposition of the question must be accompanied by a provision to lay a tax for the payment thereof in addition to the usual taxes, as directed in the following section, and no vote adopting the question proposed will be of effect unless it adopt the tax also. [R., § 252; C., '51, § 116.]

The adoption of a proposition for the expenditure of money is of no effect unless the submission of such proposition was accompanied by the provision to lay a tax for the payment thereof. The provisions of this section held applicable to submission of propositions provided for in subdivision 24, § 402: Starr v. Des Moines County, 22-491. But it is not necessary that the provision for levying the tax be a distinct proposition to be voted upon separately from the main one; each proposition, however, must be accompanied by such provision: McMillan v. Lee County, 3-311.

433. Rate. 312. The rate of tax shall in no case be more than one per cent. on the county valuation in one year. When the object is to borrow money for the erection of public buildings as above provided, the rate shall be such as to pay the debt in a period not exceeding ten years. When the object is to construct, or to aid in constructing, any highway or bridge, the annual rate shall not be less than one mill on the dollar of valuation, and any of the above taxes becoming delinquent shall draw the same interest with the ordinary taxes. [R., § 253; C., '51, § 117.]

The authority of a county to aid in the construction of a road is here necessarily implied, and warrants issued therefor are valid: Long v. Boone County, 32-181.

434. Levy to continue. 313. When it is supposed that the levy of one year will not pay the entire amount, the proposition and the vote must be to continue the proposed rate from year to year, until the amount is paid. [R., § 254; C., '51, § 118.]

435. Record of adoption. 314. The board of supervisors, on being satisfied that the above requirements have been substantially complied with, and that a majority of the votes cast are in favor of the proposition submitted, shall cause the proposition and the result of the vote to be entered at large in the minute book, and a notice of its adoption to be published for the same time and in the same manner as above provided for publishing the preliminary notice, and from the time of entering the result of the vote in relation to borrowing or expending money, and from the completion of the notice of its adoption in the case of a local or police regulation, the vote and the entry thereof on the county records shall be in full force and effect. [R., § 255; C., '51, § 119.]

After the authority to levy the tax has been provided by law, in order to make it valid: duly conferred by vote of the people, the board Iowa R. Land Co. v. Woodbury County, must proceed to make a levy of the tax, as 39-172.

436. Rescinding. 315. Propositions thus adopted, and local regulations thus established, may be rescinded in like manner and upon like notice by a subsequent vote taken thereon, but neither contracts made under them, nor the taxes appointed for carrying them into effect, can be rescinded. [R., § 256; C., '51, § 120.]

437. Number of petitioners. 316. The board shall submit the question of the adoption or rescission of such a measure when petitioned therefor by one-fourth of the voters of the county, unless a different number be prescribed by law in any special case. [R., § 257; C., '51, § 121.]

438. Record as evidence. 317. The record of the adoption or rescission of any such measure shall be presumptive evidence that all the proceedings necessary to give the vote validity have been regularly conducted. [R., § 258; C., '51, § 122.]

439. Excess of tax. 318. In case the amount produced by the rate of tax proposed and levied exceeds the amount sought for the specific object, it shall not, therefore, be held invalid, but the excess shall go into the ordinary county funds. [R., 259; C., '51, § 123.]

440. Distinct fund. 319. Money so raised for such purposes is specially appropriated, and constitutes a fund distinct from all others in the hands of the treasurer until the obligation assumed is discharged. [R., § 260; C., '51, § 124.]

441. Funds uncalled for. 16 G. A., ch. 84, § 1. In any county of this state, where any special levy has been made to pay any claim, bond or other indebtedness, and the same shall have remained in the treasury of the county, uncalled for, for a period of three years, the board of supervisors of such county may authorize such unclaimed fund to be transferred to the general county fund.

CHANGING NAMES OF UNINCORPORATED TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

442. Board may change. 16 G. A., ch. 146, § 1. The board of supervisors may change the name of unincorporated towns or villages within their respective counties in the manner herein prescribed.

443. Petition. 16 G. A., ch. 146, § 2. When any number of the inhabitants of such town or village shall desire to change the name thereof, there shall be filed in the office of the county auditor of the proper county, at least ten days before the regular meeting of the board of supervisors, a petition for that purpose, which must be signed by at least two-thirds of the qualified electors of said town or village, setting forth the name by which said town or village is known, its location as near as practicable, and giving the name which they desire the town shall thereafter be known by.

444. Notice. 16 G. A., ch. 146, § 3. Notice of the filing of said petition and the time and place when the same shall be heard, and the objects and purposes thereof, shall be given at least four weeks before the regular meeting of the board of supervisors, in like manner as the publication of original notices in civil actions where the defendant cannot be personally served within the state; or by posting up a notice of said petition in three public places in the town or village the name of which is sought to be changed, at least four weeks before the meeting of said board, and also one copy of said notice for the same length of time on the front door of the court-house of the proper county wherein the last term of the district court was held.

445. Hearing; remonstrances. 16 G. A., ch. 146, § 4. At the first regular meeting of said board after publication of notice is completed, the board of supervisors shall proceed to hear and determine said petition, unless said hearing is for good cause continued until the next meeting; and said board on the hearing of said petition, shall hear any remonstrances against the proposed change, and in all its proceedings in relation to the hearing of said petition and remonstrances to the same, the said board shall be governed by the law regulating the hearing of petitions for the establishment of highways, so far as they are applicable and not inconsistent with this act.

446. Change ordered. 16 G. A., ch. 146, § 5. If, on the hearing, it shall appear to the said board that two-thirds of the qualified electors of said town or village in good faith signed said petition for change of name, and desired the same, then the said board shall order said name to be changed as prayed for.

447. Record; notice. 16 G. A., ch. 146, § 6. Said order of the board shall thereupon be entered of record, giving the name of said town or village as set forth in said petition, the new name given, the time when the change shall take effect which shall not be less than thirty days thereafter, and directing that notice of said change shall be published in at least one newspaper published in said county, if any; and if there is no newspaper published in said county, then said notice shall be published by posting the same for four weeks on the front door of the court-house where the last term of the district court of said county was held.

448. Proof of publication. 16 G. A., ch. 146, § 7. The ordinary proof of such publication shall be filed in the office of the county auditor, shall be by him filed for preservation, and on the day fixed by the board as aforesaid the change shall be complete.

449. Costs. 16 G. A., ch. 146, § 8. In all cases arising under the provisions of this act where there is no remonstrance or opposition to said petition, the petitioners shall pay all costs; but in all other cases, costs shall abide the result of the proceeding, and be taxed to either party, in the discretion of the board, or divided equitably between the parties.

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE COUNTY AUDITOR.

450. Duties of. 320. The county auditor shall:

1. Record all the proceedings of the board in proper books provided for that purpose;
2. Make full entries of all their resolutions and decisions on all questions concerning the raising of money, and for the allowance of money from the county treasury;
3. Record the vote of each supervisor on any question submitted to the board, if required by any member present;
4. Sign all orders issued by the board for the payment of money, and record in a book provided for the purpose, the reports of the county treasurer of the receipts and disbursements of the county;
5. Preserve and file all accounts acted upon by the board, with their action thereon, and perform such special duties as are or may be required of him by law;

6. Designate upon every account on which any sum shall be allowed by the board, the amount so allowed and the charges for which the same was allowed;

7. Deliver to any person who may demand it, a certified copy of any record or account in his office on payment of his legal fees therefor. [R., §§ 319, 320; 12 G. A., ch. 160, § 1.]

[The auditor to report the expenses of the county for criminal prosecutions to the clerk, see § 455.]

Mandamus may be brought to compel the proper officer to attach the county seal to a warrant drawn by him or his predecessor on the treasurer, to make it conform to the requirements of § 458. Such action will be barred under § 3734, ¶ 3, in three years from the issuance of the warrant, and not from the time demand was made to have the seal attached: Prescott v. Gonser, 34-175.

The county auditor not being authorized to receive money due on school-fund notes, his sureties cannot be held for money paid to him in satisfaction of a judgment for such funds: Mahaska County v. Ruan, 45-328.

Sureties of the auditor are liable for overdrafts made by him from the treasury in the payment of his compensation. The auditor being authorized to sign orders, the treasurer is not in fault in paying them: Ibid.

Where a county auditor surrenders securities of the school fund in his hands under improper circumstances, he becomes liable on his bond for damages resulting therefrom; and if no actual damages are shown he is at least liable for nominal damages: Madison County v. Tullis, 69-720.

In an action against a board of supervisors, service of notice cannot be made on the county auditor: Polk v. Foster, 71-26.

451. Signing warrants. 321. The auditor shall not sign or issue any county warrant except upon the recorded vote or resolution of the board of supervisors authorizing the same, except for jury fees, and every such warrant shall be numbered, and the date, amount, and number of the same, and the name of the person to whom issued, shall be entered in a book to be kept by him in his office for the purpose. [R., § 321.]

If a vote is legally passed authorizing the issuance of warrants, and the failure to record it is a mere clerical omission, such failure to record will not invalidate a warrant otherwise legally and properly issued: Clark v. Polk County, 19-248; Long v. Boone County, 36-60, 66.

As no recorded vote is necessary to authorize the issuance of warrants for jury fees, held, that the fact that no vote authorizing certain warrants appeared of record did not necessarily render such warrants invalid: Clark v. Polk County, 19-248.

County warrants are not negotiable instruments: Ibid.

This section is directory and not mandatory, and a warrant issued where there is no recorded vote is not on that account void: Griggs v. Kimball, 42-512.

Where a warrant is issued by the proper officers to a contractor for work done under an unauthorized contract, and the warrant is paid, the county cannot recover back the amount thus paid: Long v. Boone County, 36-60.

452. School fund. 322. Whenever the auditor of any county shall receive from the state auditor, notice of the apportionment of school moneys to be distributed in the county, he shall file the same in his office and transmit a certified copy thereof to the county treasurer, and he shall also lay a certified copy thereof before the board at its next regular meeting. [R., § 322.]

453. Court-house. 323. The county auditor shall have the general custody and control of the court-house in each county respectively, subject to the direction of the board of supervisors. [Ex. S., 8 G. A., ch. 2.]

454. Report to secretary of state. 324. The county auditor shall report to the secretary of state the name, office, and term of office of every county officer elected or appointed, within ten days after their election and qualification, and the secretary of state shall record the same in a book to be kept for that purpose in his office. [R., § 291.]

455. Report expenses of prosecutions. 18 G. A., ch. 22, § 2. In order to enable the clerk of the district court properly to comply with the provisions of section two hundred and three of the code, [§ 264] it is made the duty of the county auditor to report to said clerk, before the first day of November in each year, the expenses of the county for criminal prosecutions during the year ending the thirtieth day of September preceding, including, but distinguishing the compensation of district [county] attorney.

[The penalty for violation of this section is provided by § 515, which is a part of the same act as the foregoing.]

456. Who eligible. 325. The clerk of the district court and county recorder shall each be eligible to the office of county auditor, and may discharge the duties of both offices. [12 G. A., ch. 160, § 7.]

457. Cannot be treasurer. 326. The offices of county auditor and county treasurer shall not be united in the same person. The auditor and his deputy are prohibited from acting as attorney, either directly or indirectly, in any matter pending before the board of supervisors.

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE COUNTY TREASURER.

458. Duties. 327. The treasurer shall receive all money payable to the county, and disburse the same on warrants drawn and signed by the county auditor and sealed with the county seal, and not otherwise; and shall keep a true account of all receipts and disbursements, and hold the same at all times ready for the inspection of the board of supervisors. [R., § 360; C., '51, § 152.]

Liability: The county treasurer is only held to a reasonable degree of care and diligence, and if, notwithstanding such care, moneys of the county are stolen from him, he is not liable: Ross v. Hatch, 5-149.

Where a county treasurer deposited public money in a bank which subsequently failed, held, that this constituted an unlawful disposal of the public funds for which he was liable on his bond: Lowry v. Polk County, 51-50.

Where, under the statutory provision authorizing the deposit of public money in a bank to be selected for that purpose, upon the giving of bond by such bank, if the bond is given and allowed to remain outstanding it constitutes security, not merely for the first deposit, but for other deposits which may subsequently be made: Poor v. Merrill, 68-436.

Demand upon the person in charge of the bank where the deposit is made is sufficient to constitute a breach of the bond in case of non-payment of the funds: Ibid.

Where a certificate of deposit is issued for the repayment of the deposit when it is returned, but no objection to the payment of the money is made on the ground of the failure to return such certificate, the fact that it is not returned will not defeat the right to recover, it being afterwards surrendered: Ibid.

One who has wrongfully borrowed county funds of the treasurer, and repaid them, cannot be held liable to the county: Marshall County v. Baum, 53-528.

Where a county treasurer had made use of county funds in a partnership business, but it did not appear that such illegal use was known to his partner, or that all the funds so used had not been paid back, held, that the county could not establish a trust in lands held in the name of such partner: Ibid.

Under the provisions of previous statutes, held, that as to the state revenue the county treasurer was required to account to the auditor of state, and could not by a settlement with the county authorities defeat an action for deficiency of state funds unaccounted for by him: Ford v. Jefferson County, 4 G. Gr., 273; Jefferson County v. Ford, 4 G. Gr., 367.

Where the treasurer failed to cancel warrants redeemed by him as required by law, and they were stolen, without fault on his part, and again put in circulation, and paid, held, that there was such neglect of duty as to render him liable: Johnson County v. Hughes, 12-360.

A county treasurer having paid over to the treasurer of a school district taxes belonging to such district without a warrant signed by the president and countersigned by the secretary, as required by law, and the treasurer of the district having failed to account for all the money so paid over, held, that the directors of the district must, under the circumstances, have known that such money came into the hands of their treasurer, and might have protected themselves by requiring from him a sufficient bond; that the irregular payment by the county treasurer was not the proximate cause of the loss, and he was not liable therefor: District T^p v. Bowman, 55-129.

As to bond of county treasurer and his liability thereon, see § 1139, and notes.

Warrants: A warrant to which the county seal is not affixed is not valid. The county may be liable on the indebtedness for which such warrant was issued, but not on the warrant: Springer v. Clay County, 35-241. As to compling auditor to affix the seal in a proper case, see note to § 450.

A county treasurer, in taking up and canceling warrants, is a servant of the county; and, although he issues a new warrant for an excess of warrants presented in payment of indebtedness to the county, instead of a certificate of overplus as provided by law, a recovery of such overplus may be had as against the county: Barney v. Buena Vista County, 33-261.

Collection of taxes: A special tax for, and in aid of, a railway company is not payable to the county; and where the tax payer becomes entitled to have it refunded the treasurer may refund it so far as the proceeds of such tax are in his hands, without a warrant from the auditor: Barnes v. Marshall County, 56-20.

459. Indorsement of warrants. 328. When the warrant drawn by the auditor on the treasurer is presented for payment, and not paid for want of money, the treasurer shall indorse thereon a note of that fact and the date of presentation, and sign it, and thenceforth it shall draw interest at the rate of six per cent.; and when a warrant which draws interest is taken up, the treasurer is required to indorse upon it the date and amount of interest allowed, and such warrant is to be considered as canceled and shall not be re-issued. [R., § 361; C., '51, § 153.]

A county cannot stop interest on outstanding warrants by notice that it is ready to redeem the same. Nothing short of actual tender is sufficient for that purpose: Roony v. Dubuque County, 44-128. But see now the provision in the next section.

Judgment may be rendered against a county upon a county order or warrant drawn upon the county treasurer: Steel v. Davis County, 2 G. Gr., 469.

Where a warrant is issued, payable out of a special fund, and the county has ample power to provide such fund for the payment of the warrant, a general judgment against the county upon such warrant may be rendered. Demand on the board of supervisors to levy a

Taxes paid without objection by the tax payer, and received by the treasurer under color and by virtue of his official authority, must be accounted for by him. Irregularities or illegalities in the assessment and collection of taxes will not constitute a defense in an action, on his part, for taxes actually received: Mahaska County v. Ingalls, 14-170.

The treasurer, and not the auditor, should receive money belonging to the school fund: Mahaska County v. Searle, 44-492; Mahaska County v. Ruan, 45-328.

The county is not liable for wrongful acts of the treasurer in wilfully, and without authority, collecting taxes in excess of the sum due, where it has not subsequently approved the act or been benefited thereby: Estep v. Keokuk County, 18-199.

tax to pay the warrant is not necessary: Mills County Nat. Bank v. Mills County, 67-697.

It seems, however, that in such case the creditor, after obtaining judgment on the warrant, could not by mandamus compel the treasurer to pay his judgment out of the general fund, a method of raising the amount for the payment of claims against the special fund being provided by statute: Ibid.

A warrant drawn, payable "out of any money in the county treasury not otherwise appropriated," is a general warrant payable unconditionally, and action may be brought thereon without proof that there is any money in the treasury subject to such warrant. (Overruling Brown v. Johnson County, 1 G. Gr., 486): Campbell v. Polk County, 3-467.

460. Call for warrants. 19 G. A., ch. 103, § 1. County treasurers are hereby authorized to issue calls for outstanding warrants at any time he may have sufficient funds on hand for which such warrant was issued; and from and after such calls have been made, public interest shall cease on all warrants included in said call.

461. Notice. 19 G. A., ch. 103, § 2. County treasurers shall publish said notice twice in the newspaper having the largest circulation in the county in which such publication is made, and each notice shall designate the warrants called.

462. Order of payment. 21 G. A., ch. 84, § 1. The treasurer shall keep a record of the number and amount of the warrants presented and indorsed for non-payment, which shall be paid in the order of such presentation. When there are funds in the treasury for their payment to an amount sufficient to render it advisable, he shall give notice to what number of warrants the funds will extend, or the number which he will pay, by posting a written notice in his office, and at the expiration of thirty days from the date of such posting, interest on the warrants so named as being payable shall cease.

463. Warrants divided. 329. When a person wishing to make a payment into the treasury presents a warrant of an amount greater than such payment, the treasurer shall cancel the same and give the holder a certificate of the overplus, upon the presentation of which to the county auditor, he shall file it and issue a new warrant of that amount, and charge the treasurer therewith, and such certificate is transferable by delivery, and will entitle the holder to the new warrant, which, however, must be issued in the first drawee's name. [R., §§ 362, 755; C., '51, §§ 154, 490.]

Where the treasurer failed to cancel warrants as here provided, and they were stolen without fault on his part, and again put in circulation and paid, held, that there was such neglect of duty as to render him liable: Johnson County v. Hughes, 12-360.

Where the treasurer issued what purported to be warrants instead of certificates for such overplus as here provided, such instruments were held invalid: Barney v. Buena Vista County, 33-261.

464. Warrant book. 330. The treasurer shall keep a book, ruled so as to contain a column for each of the following items in relation to the warrants drawn on him by the auditor — the number, date, drawee's name, when paid, to whom, original amount, and interest paid on each. [R., § 363; C., '51, § 155.]

465. Separate accounts. 331. The treasurer shall keep a separate account of the several taxes for state, county, school and highway purposes, opening an account between himself and each of those funds, charging himself with the amount of the tax, and crediting himself with the amounts paid over severally, and with the amount of delinquent taxes when legally authorized so to do. [R., § 364; C., '51, § 156.]

466. Warrants canceled. 332. The warrants returned by the treasurer shall be compared with the warrant book, and the word "canceled" be written over the minute of the proper numbers in the warrant book, and the original warrant be preserved for at least two years. [R., § 365; C., '51, § 159.]

467. Returns of. 333. The treasurer is required to make weekly returns to the auditor of the number, date, drawee's name, when paid, to whom paid, original amount, and interest, as kept in the book before directed. [R., § 366; C., '51, § 160.]

468. Accounts. 334. A person re-elected to, or holding over the office of treasurer, shall keep separate accounts for each term of his office. [R., § 367; C., '51, § 161.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF THE COUNTY RECORDER.

469. Duties of. 335. The recorder shall keep his office at the county seat, and he shall record at length, and as speedily as possible, all instruments in writing which may be delivered to him for record, in the manner directed by law. [R., § 358; C., '51, § 150.]

470. Treasurer eligible. 336. The same person may be eligible to, and hold the office of county recorder and county treasurer; provided, the number of inhabitants in such county does not exceed ten thousand. [10 G. A., ch. 129, § 8.]

471. Women eligible. 18 G. A., ch. 40, § 1. No person shall be disqualified for holding the office of county recorder on account of sex.

CHAPTER 6.

OF THE SHERIFF.

472. Duties. 337. The sheriff shall, by himself or his deputies, execute according to law, and return all writs and other legal process issued by lawful authority and to him directed or committed, and shall perform such other duties as may be required of him by law. [R., § 383; C., '51, § 170.]

Liability of: A sheriff who seizes property beyond the limits of his own county is a wrong-doer, and is liable to the owner and possessor in an action for trespass: Parmlee v. Leonard, 9-131.

A sheriff who commits a trespass by taking goods illegally is liable after going out of office, though his successor sells the same and receives the money: Duke v. Vincent, 29-308.

Failure to make return of execution, etc., as required by § 4262 renders the sheriff liable for damages only when such failure has resulted in injury to the plaintiff: Musser v. Maynard, 55-197.

A sheriff is not liable in damages for failure to levy execution upon property in defendant's hands if he uses ordinary skill and diligence in the discharge of his duties: Crosby v. Hungerford, 59-712.

Deputy-sheriff: The sheriff is responsible for the acts of his deputy, and action upon the sheriff's bond, and not upon the bond of the deputy, is the proper remedy in case of neglect or failure of the deputy to pay over to the person entitled thereto money collected by him: Brayton v. Town, 12-346.

In executing process the deputy-sheriff acts

473. Disobedience. 338. His disobedience of the command of any such process is a contempt of the court from which it issued, and may be punished by the same accordingly, and he is further liable to the action of any person injured thereby. [R., § 384; C., '51, § 171.]

474. Charge of jail. 339. He has the charge and custody of the jail or other prison of his county, and of the prisoners in the same, and is required to receive those lawfully committed, and to keep them himself, or by his deputy or jailer, until discharged by law. [R., § 385; C., '51, § 172.]

475. Conservators of the peace. 340. The sheriff and his deputies are conservators of the peace, and to keep the same, or to prevent crime, or to arrest any person liable thereto, or to execute process of law, may call any person to their aid, and, when necessary, the sheriff may summon the power of the county. [R., § 386; C., '51, § 173.]

476. Attend courts; bailiffs. 341. The sheriff shall attend upon the district [and circuit] courts of his county, and while either remains in session he shall be allowed the assistance of such number of bailiffs as either may direct. They shall be appointed by the sheriff, and shall be regarded as deputy-sheriffs, for whose acts the sheriff shall be responsible. [R., § 387; C., '51, § 174.]

The bailiffs here provided for are entitled to compensation from the county, which shall be reasonable in amount: Brungolf v. Polk for the sheriff, and the latter is responsible for whatever is done: Headington v. Langland, 65-276.

Therefore the sheriff is liable under his bond for the wrongful act of the deputy in making a levy: Ibid.

In case of vacancy in the office of sheriff caused by his suspension, the duties of the office do not devolve upon his deputy, but the vacancy is to be filled by the board of supervisors under § 1224: McCue v. Circuit Court, 51-60.

Resisting sheriff: A receiver directed to take possession of property may call upon the sheriff to prevent the commission of the crime of resisting the execution of such order on the part of the person in possession of the property: State v. Rivers, 65-653.

Suspension: When a sheriff is suspended from office by order of court, and the district attorney is directed to file a petition for his removal (§§ 1228, 1229), such suspension will continue after the term although there may not be time to file the petition and serve the notice before the adjournment of the term: McCue v. Circuit Court, 51-60.

County, 4-1554, 561; and such bailiffs may serve a precept for a jury: State v. Arthur, 39-631.

477. Not act as attorney. 342. No sheriff, deputy-sheriff, coroner, or constable, shall appear in any court as attorney or counsel for any party, nor make any writing or process to commence, or to be in any manner used in the same, and such writing or process made by any of them shall be rejected. [R., § 388; C., '51, § 175.]

This section does not prevent the officers from stating the violation of a penal law: Santo named from making complaint before a magistrate. v. State, 2-165, 221.

478. Cannot be purchaser. 343. No sheriff, deputy-sheriff, coroner, or constable, shall become the purchaser, either directly or indirectly, of any property by him exposed to sale under any process of law, and every such purchase is absolutely void. [R., § 389; C., '51, § 176.]

479. Execution of process after expiration of term. 344. Sheriffs and their deputies may execute any process which may be in their hands at the expiration of their office, and, in case of a vacancy occurring in the office of sheriff from any cause, his deputies shall be under the same obligation to execute legal process then in his or their hands, and return the same, as if the sheriff had continued in office, and he and they will remain liable therefor under the provisions of law as in other cases. [R., § 390; C., '51, § 177.]

480. Deliver to successor. 345. Where a sheriff goes out of office, he shall deliver to his successor all books and papers pertaining to the office, and property attached and levied upon, except as provided in the preceding section, and all prisoners in the jail, and take his receipt specifying the same, and such receipt shall be sufficient indemnity to the person taking it. [R., § 391; C., '51, § 178.]

This section is directory only, and if the attached property, etc., be actually delivered to the incoming sheriff he would become responsible therefor, and the outgoing officer would be discharged, although no receipt was given: McKay v. Thorington, 15-25; McKay v. Leonard, 17-569.

An offer on the part of the outgoing sheriff to deliver attached property to the incoming one, and a waiver of delivery by the latter, discharges the former from further responsibility for the safe keeping of the property: Fockler v. Martin, 32-117.

481. Successor may serve. 346. If the sheriff die or go out of office before the return of any process, then in his hands, his successor, or other officer authorized to discharge the duties of the office, may proceed to execute and return the same in the same manner as the outgoing sheriff should have done, but nothing in this section shall be construed to exempt the outgoing sheriff and his deputies from the duty imposed on them by section three hundred and thirty-seven of this chapter [§ 472], to execute and return all process in their hands at the time the vacancy in the office of sheriff occurs. [R., § 3264.]

482. New process. 347. On the election or appointment of a new sheriff all new process shall be directed to him. [R., § 392; C., '51, § 179.]

483. Deed by successor. 348. If the sheriff, who has made a sale of real estate on execution, die, or go out of office before the period of redemption expires, his successor shall make the necessary deed to carry out such sale.

CHAPTER 7.

OF THE CORONER.

484. Duties. 349. It is the duty of the coroner to perform all the duties of the sheriff when there is no sheriff, and in cases where exception is taken to the sheriff as provided in the next section. [R., § 393; C., '51, § 183.]

The sureties upon the official bond of the coroner are accountable on such bond for his acts while acting as ex officio sheriff: Tieman v. Haw, 49-312.

485. Serve process. 350. In all proceedings in the courts of record, where it appears from the papers that the sheriff is a party to the action; or where, in any action commenced or about to be commenced, an affidavit is filed with the clerk of the court, stating that the sheriff and his deputy are absent from the county, and are not expected to return in time to perform the service needed; or stating a partiality, prejudice, consanguinity, or interest, on the part of the sheriff, the clerk or court shall direct process to the coroner, whose duty it shall be to execute it in the same manner as if he were sheriff. [R., § 394; C., '51, § 184.]

To make a service of notice by the coroner, as such, good, it must appear from the record that the sheriff was disqualified to act: Beard v. Smith, 9-50; Chord v. McCoy, Mor., 311.

Where the sheriff is disqualified by interest or other personal reason, the coroner, and not the deputy-sheriff, should act: Minott v. Vineyard, 11-90.

This section applies in criminal as well as in civil cases, and upon the filing of the affidavit here contemplated the coroner should be directed to act in place of the sheriff: State v. Hardin, 46-623.

486. Same. 351. When there is no sheriff, deputy-sheriff, or coroner qualified to serve legal process, the clerk of the court may, by writing under his hand and the seal of the court certifying the above fact, appoint any suitable person specially in each case to execute such process, who shall be sworn, but he need not give bond, and his return shall be entitled to the same credit as the sheriff's when the appointment is attached thereto. [R., § 395; C., '51, § 185.]

Where the disqualification of the sheriff is made known before the issuance of a writ, and also the disqualification of the coroner, it is not objectionable to direct the writ to the person specially appointed: Minott v. Vineyard, 11-90.

The credit to be given to the return of the person so appointed will depend on the validity of the appointment. In a particular case the appointment held not to show sufficiently that there was "no sheriff, deputy-sheriff, or coroner qualified," etc.: Currens v. Ratcliffe, 9-309.

487. Inquest. 352. The coroner shall hold an inquest upon the dead bodies of such persons only as are supposed to have died by unlawful means. When he has notice of the dead body of a person supposed to have died by unlawful means, found or being in his county, he is required to issue his warrant to a constable of his county, requiring him to summon forthwith three electors of the county to appear before the coroner at a time and place named in the warrant. [R., § 396; C., '51, § 186.]

488. Warrant. 353. The warrant may be in substance as follows:

STATE OF IOWA, }
 — County. }

To any constable of the said county:—In the name of the state of Iowa you are hereby required to summon forthwith three electors of your county, to appear before me at (name the place), at (name the day and hour or say forthwith), then and there to hold an inquest upon the dead body of ———, there lying, and find by what means he died.

Witness my hand this — day of —, A. D. 18—.

A. B., Coroner of — County.

[R., § 397; C., '51, § 187.]

489. Service. 354. The constable shall execute the warrant, and make return thereof at the time and place named. [R., § 398; C., '51, § 188.]

490. Jurors. 355. If any juror fails to appear, the coroner shall cause the proper number to be summoned or returned from the by-standers, immediately, and proceed to impanel them and administer the following oath in substance:

"You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will diligently inquire and true presentment make, when, how, and by what means the person whose body lies here dead came to his death, according to your knowledge and the evidence given you." [R., § 399; C., '51, § 189.]

491. Subpoenas; contempts. 356. The coroner may issue subpoenas within his county for witnesses, returnable forthwith, or at such time and place as he shall therein direct, and witnesses shall be allowed the same fees as in cases before a justice of the peace, and the coroner has the same authority to enforce the attendance of witnesses, and to punish them and jurors for contempt in disobeying his process, as a justice of the peace has when his process issues in behalf of the state. [R., § 400; C., '51, § 190.]

492. Oath. 357. An oath shall be administered to the witnesses in substance as follows:

“You do solemnly swear that the testimony which you shall give to this inquest concerning the death of the person here lying dead, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.” [R., § 401; C., '51, § 191.]

493. Testimony. 358. The testimony shall be reduced to writing under the coroner's order, and subscribed by the witnesses. [R., § 402; C., '51, § 192.]

494. Verdict. 359. The jurors having inspected the body, heard the testimony, and made all needful inquiries, shall return to the coroner their inquisition in writing, under their hands in substance as follows, and stating the matters in the following form suggested, as far as found:

 ——— County. }

An inquisition holden at ———, in ——— county, on the ——— day of ———, A. D. 18— before ———, coroner of the said county, upon the body of ——— (or a person unknown) there lying dead, by the jurors whose names are hereto subscribed. The said jurors upon their oaths do say (here state when, how, by what person, means, weapon, or accident, he came to his death, and whether feloniously).

In testimony whereof the said jurors have hereunto set their hands, the day and year aforesaid:

(which shall be attested by the coroner.) [R., § 403; C., '51, § 193.]

495. Kept secret. 360. If the inquisition find that a crime has been committed on the deceased, and name the person whom the jury believe has committed it, the inquest shall not be made public until after the arrest directed in the next section. [R., § 404; C., '51, § 194.]

496. Arrest. 361. If the person charged be present, the coroner may order his arrest by an officer or any other person present, and shall then make a warrant requiring the officer or other person to take him before a justice of the peace. [R., § 405; C., '51, § 195.]

497. Warrant. 362. If the person charged be not present, and the coroner believes he can be taken, the coroner may issue a warrant to the sheriff and constables of the county, requiring them to arrest the person and take him before a justice of the peace. [R., § 406; C., '51, § 196.]

498. Proceedings upon. 363. The warrant of a coroner in the above case shall be of equal authority with that of a justice of the peace, and when the person charged is brought before the justice, such justice shall cause an information to be filed against him, and the same proceedings shall be had as in other cases under information, and he shall be dealt with as a person held under an information in the usual form. [R., § 407; C., '51, § 197.]

499. Form of. 364. The warrant of the coroner shall recite substantially the transactions before him and the verdict of the jury of inquest leading to the arrest, and such warrant shall be a sufficient foundation for the proceeding of the justice instead of an information. [R., § 408; C., '51, § 198.]

500. Inquest; return. 365. The coroner shall then return to the district court the inquisition, the written evidence, and a list of the witnesses who testified material matter. [R., § 409; C., '51, § 199.]

501. Disposition of body. 366. The coroner shall cause the body of a deceased person which he is called to view, to be delivered to his friends if any there be, but if not, he shall cause him to be decently buried and the expense to be paid from any property found with the body, or, if there be none, from the county treasury, by certifying an account of the expenses, which, being presented to the board of supervisors, shall be allowed by them, if deemed reasonable, and paid as other claims on the county. [R., § 410; C., '51, § 200.]

502. When no coroner. 367. When there is no coroner, and in case of his absence or inability to act, any justice of the peace of the same county is authorized to perform the duties of coroner in relation to dead bodies, and in such case he may cause the person charged to be brought before himself by his warrant, and may proceed with him as a justice of the peace. [R., § 411; C., '51, § 201.]

503. May summon physician; fees. 368; 20 G. A., ch. 64. In the above inquisition by a coroner, when he or the jury deem it requisite, he may summon one or more physicians or surgeons to make a scientific examination, who, instead of witness fees, shall receive such reasonable compensation as may be allowed by the county board of supervisors. [R., § 412; C., '51, § 202.]

The compensation of such witnesses is to be fixed by the coroner, or justice acting in his place, and his jurisdiction in such matter is exclusive. He may be compelled by damus to act, but no appeal is provided: Cushman v. Washington County, 45-255; Sanford v. Lee County, 49-148.

CHAPTER 8.

OF THE COUNTY SURVEYOR.

504. Duties. 369. The county surveyor shall make all surveys of land within his county which he may be called upon to make, and his surveys shall be held as presumptively correct. [R., § 413; C., '51, § 203.]

505. Transcribing field-notes, etc. 370. The field-notes and plats made by the county surveyor shall be transcribed into a well-bound book under the supervision of the surveyor, when desired by a person interested and at his expense. [R., § 414; C., '51, § 204.]

506. Original field-notes. 371. Previous to making any survey, he shall furnish himself with a copy of the field-notes of the original survey of the same land, if there be any in the office of the county auditor, and his survey shall be made in accordance therewith. [R., § 415; C., '51, § 205.]

507. Corners. 372. He is required to establish the corners by taking bearing trees and noting particularly their course and distance, but if there be no trees within reasonable distance, the corners are to be marked by stones firmly placed in the earth, or by mounds. [R., § 416; C., '51, § 206.]

508. Rules. 373. In the resurvey and subdivisions of lands by county surveyors, their deputies, or other persons, the rules prescribed by acts of congress and the instructions of the secretary of the interior shall be in all respects followed. [13 G. A., ch. 183.]

509. Plat and copy, evidence. 374. The county surveyor shall, when requested, furnish the person for whom the survey is made with a copy of the field-notes and plat of the survey, and such copy certified by him, and also a copy from the record, certified by the county auditor, with the seal, shall be presumptive evidence of the survey and of the facts herein required to be set forth, and which are stated accordingly, between those persons who join in requesting it, and any other person then concerned who has reasonable notice that such a survey is to be made and the time thereof. [R., § 417; C., '51, § 207.]

510. Book furnished. 375. The board of supervisors is required to furnish a substantial, well-bound book, in which the field-notes and plats made by the county surveyor may be recorded. [R., § 418; C., '51, § 208.]

511. Plat. 376. The plat and record shall show distinctly of what piece of land it is a survey; at whose personal request it was made, the names of the chainmen, and that they were approved and sworn by the surveyor, and the date of the survey; and the courses shall be taken according to the true meridian, and the variation of the magnetic from the true meridian stated. [R., § 419; C., '51, § 209.]

512. Chainmen. 377. The necessary chainmen and other persons must be employed by the person requiring the survey done, unless otherwise agreed; but the chainmen must be disinterested persons and approved of by the surveyor, and sworn by him to measure justly and impartially to the best of their knowledge and ability. [R., § 420; C., '51, § 210.]

513. Administer oaths. 378. County surveyors, when establishing defaced or lost land corners or lines, may issue subpoenas for witnesses and administer oaths to them, and all fees for service of officers and attendance of witnesses shall be the same as in proceedings before justices of the peace. [14 G. A., ch. 101.]

CHAPTER 8a.

COUNTY OFFICERS TO REPORT INFORMATION OR STATISTICS.

514. Upon call. 18 G. A., ch. 22, § 1. It is hereby made the duty of each county officer, whenever called upon by the governor or either house of the general assembly so to do, to communicate to the governor, or such house, any information that may be in his possession as such officer, and to furnish any statistics at his command when thus called upon.

515. Penalty. 18 G. A., ch. 22, § 4. Failure on the part of any officer to perform any duty required of him by this act, shall render him liable to prosecution and punishment for misdemeanor.

CHAPTER 9.

OF TOWNSHIPS AND TOWNSHIP OFFICERS.

516. Formation; change. 379. The board of supervisors of each county shall divide the same into townships, as the convenience of the citizens may require, accurately defining the boundaries thereof, and may from time to time make such alterations in the number and boundaries of the townships as it may deem proper; provided, however, that if the congressional township lines are not adopted and followed, the board of supervisors shall not change the lines of any civil township so as to divide any school district or sub-district, unless a majority of the voters of such district or sub-district shall petition therefor. [R., § 441; C., '51, § 219; 14 G. A., ch. 122.]

[For similar provision as to dividing school districts, see § 2918.]

A township is not a corporation authorized to sue and to be sued. It is no more than a legal subdivision of a county for governmental purposes and has no corporate powers as such: Township of West Bend v. Munch, 52-132; Wells v. Stomback, 59-376.

But if the action is brought in the name of the township the petition may be amended by the substitution of the name of the officer of the township as plaintiff, who is entitled to the custody of the money sued for: Wells v. Stomback, 59-376

The board has the power, and it is its duty, to divide the county into townships, and it has the power to divide the townships and create new ones when the public convenience requires that that be done: Lones v. Harris, 71-478.

517. Must be ten voters. 380. No township shall be organized in which at the time of organization there shall not be at least ten legal voters; provided, that each county shall have one civil township. [9 G. A., ch. 73, § 1.]

518. Changes recorded. 381. The description of the boundaries of each township, and of all alterations in them, and of all new townships, shall be recorded in full in the records of the board of supervisors and of the township. [R., § 442; C., '51, § 220.]

OF DIVIDING TOWNSHIPS.

519. Application for. 382; 20 G. A., ch. 106. When any township has within its limits an incorporated city or town with a population exceeding fifteen hundred inhabitants, the electors of such township residing without the limits of such city or town, may, at the January, April, or June session of the board of supervisors of the county, petition to have such township divided into two townships; the one to embrace the territory without, and the other the territory within such corporate limits; which petition shall be accompanied by the affidavit of three individuals, to the effect that all the signatures to such petition are genuine, and that the signers thereof are all legal voters of said township, residing outside said corporate limits. Remonstrances signed by such legal voters may also be presented at the hearing before the board of supervisors hereinafter provided for, and, if the same persons petition and remonstrate, they shall be counted on the remonstrance only. [14 G. A., ch. 52, §§ 1, 2.]

520. Notice. 383. Notice of the time when such petition will be presented, shall be given by two publications in a weekly newspaper published in the township, the last of which publications shall be at least ten days prior to the time fixed for the presentation of such petition; or if no paper is printed in such township, or the papers therein printed refuse to make such publication, the notice herein contemplated shall be given by posting in five public places in the township, two of which shall be without and three within such corporate limits. [Same, § 3.]

521. Division. 384; 21 G. A., ch. 48. If such petition is signed by a majority of the electors of such township residing without the corporate limits of such city or town, the board of supervisors shall divide such township into two townships, as prayed therein, but except for election purposes, including the appointment of all judges and clerks of election rendered necessary by the change, such division shall not take effect until the first Monday of January next ensuing. Provided that when the citizens of any township so set off desire to dissolve their township organization and return again to the township from which they were taken, they may do so by the same procedure as provided in sections three hundred and eighty-two and three hundred and eighty-three [§§ 519, 520] for the division except that said petition shall be signed by a majority of the electors of both townships. [Same, §§ 4, 5.]

Where the application for division is properly made, the board of supervisors has no discretion and may be compelled by mandamus to make such division: Henry v. Taylor, 57-72.

The new township does not become independent until its complete organization, which is on the 1st of January following, when the officers elected for it enter upon the discharge of their duties: Lamb v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 39-333.

Upon the formation of a new township, no election except one for the election of officers of such township can be held until after the 1st of January following. Special elections contemplated or authorized by law to be held prior to that time must be held in the old or original township: Williams v. Poor, 65-410.

522. First election. 385. When a new township is formed, the board of supervisors shall call the first township election, to be held at such place as it may designate, on the day of the next general election. [R., § 453; C., '51, § 231.]

523. Warrant for. 386. The auditor shall issue a warrant for such first election, stating the time and place of the same, the officers to be elected, and any other business which is to be attended to; and no other business shall be done than such as is so named. [R., § 454; C., '51, § 232.]

The warrant provided for by this section relates only to the first election in a new township. Failure to issue it will not render subsequent elections invalid: Lones v. Harris, 71-478.

524. How served. 387. Such warrant may be directed to any constable of the county, or to any citizen of the same township, by name, and shall be served by posting up copies thereof in three of the most public places in the township fifteen days before the day of the election; the original warrant shall be returned to the presiding officer of the election, to be returned to the clerk when elected, with a return thereon of the manner of service, verified by oath if served by any other than an officer. [R., § 455; C., '51, § 233.]

525. Election. 388. The election shall be conducted as other township elections, and the electors shall proceed to elect the officers named in this chapter. [R., § 457; C., '51, § 235.]

OFFICERS — DUTIES.

526. Officers. 389. In each township there shall be elected three trustees, one clerk, one assessor, two constables, and two justices of the peace, but where a city or incorporated town is situate in a township, the trustees of the township may order the election of one or two additional justices and constables, and at least one justice and constable shall reside within the limits of such city or town. [R., §§ 443, 726; C., '51, § 221.]

527. May employ attorney. 20 G. A., ch. 120, § 1. Whenever litigation shall arise involving the right or duty of township trustees to certify or levy taxes which have been authorized upon expressed conditions, then, in such cases, if the trustees are made parties to said litigation, they shall have authority to employ attorneys in behalf of said township, and are further authorized to levy the necessary tax to pay for said legal services, and to defray the unavoidable expenses of said litigation.

528. Assessors. 390; 16 G. A., ch. 6; 18 G. A., ch. 201, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 110. At the general election in the year 1882, and biennially thereafter, there shall be elected in each township a part of which is included within the incorporate limits of any incorporated city or town, by the qualified voters of such township residing without the corporate limits of such city or town, one assessor in the same manner as provided by law for the election of township assessors, and at the regular municipal election of each incorporated town or city in the year 1882, and biennially thereafter, whether such city or town embraces one or more townships or parts of townships, there shall be elected by the qualified voters of such city or town one or more assessors for such city or town, and such assessors shall be restricted in the discharge of their official duties to the limits within which they are elected, and shall hold their offices for the term of two years from the first day of January next ensuing. The city council of any incorporated city having a population of ten thousand or over may, by a resolution to be adopted at least five weeks before the time for any regular municipal election, determine whether it shall be necessary to elect more than one assessor, and fix the number thereof, not exceeding three, and thereupon the mayor of such city shall make proclamation of such determination in like manner, and at the same time that he shall proclaim the election of other city officers to be elected at the municipal election next ensuing, and such resolution shall also divide such city into districts for assessment purposes; and the county auditor of the county in which such city is situate, upon being notified of such division, shall provide a separate assessment book for each of said assessment districts. Said assessors, when so elected, shall give bond and qualify, receive the same compensation, be under like penalties, and perform the same duties in like manner as township assessors, except as herein provided. In case there should be a failure to elect, [or] a vacancy shall occur in the office of assessor within such incorporated city, the city council may elect some suitable person to perform the duties of such office for the unexpired term. It shall be the duty of such assessors, if more than one shall have been elected, to meet at least once a week, and oftener if they shall deem it necessary, and carefully compare valuations in order to secure a uniform assessment of all the property of such city, and when so met they shall constitute a board of assessment, a majority of whom shall determine the value of any property as to which difference may arise in such board: Provided, that the city council of any city or town, having a population as aforesaid shall have power in the year 1882 by resolution to increase the number of assessors not exceeding three, and to appoint the additional number provided for; and each assessor so appointed shall qualify and act and hold their [his] office for the term as provided for in this act.

Under the original section held that an assessor elected by the city as therein prescribed was not a city but a township officer: Lannie v. Waverly, 42-486.

This section, both as it originally stood and as re-enacted by the sixteenth general assembly, applies only to townships containing cities incorporated under the general incorporation law and not those existing under special charter: State v. Finger, 46-25.

Where two townships being included within the corporate limits of a city comprise but one assessorial district, the county board of equalization cannot equalize taxation as between such townships, but can only act upon the whole district: Getchell v. Board of Supervisors, 51-107.

529. Division of work between assessors. 18 G. A., ch. 201, § 2. It shall be the duty of such assessors, if more than one shall have been elected, to agree between themselves for such systematic distribution of their work as will most efficiently further the satisfactory completion of the same within the time prescribed by law; and in assessing the property of such incorporated city, each shall faithfully and industriously work to that end, and for any failure or delinquency in that respect on the part of any or all of said assessors, he or they shall be liable as provided by section eight hundred and twenty-seven of the code of 1873 [§ 000].

530. Place of election. 391. The trustees shall designate the place where elections will be held, and whenever a change is made from the usual place of holding elections in the township, notice of such change shall be given by posting up notices thereof in three public places in the township, ten days prior to the day on which the election is to be held. [R., § 444; C., '51, § 222.]

No provision is made for the payment by the county of compensation for the place thus designated, and it is not liable therefor: Turner v. Woodbury County, 57-440; McBride v. Hardin County, 58-219.

531. Record. 392. They shall cause a record to be kept of all their proceedings. [R., § 445; C., '51, § 223.]

Written orders for the relief of poor persons, given by the township trustees under § 2152, are valid, without being otherwise made of record under this section or § 534: Bremer County v. Buchanan County, 61-624.

The complaint to trustees as fence-viewers is not part of their proceedings, and need not be in writing nor of record: Tubbs v. Ogden, 46-134.

532. Trustees; duties. 393. The township trustees are the overseers of the poor, fence-viewers, and the township board of equalization and board of health, and shall have charge of all cemeteries within the limits of their township dedicated to public use when the same is not controlled by other trustees or incorporated bodies. [R., § 446; C., '51, § 224.]

[Further as to cemeteries, see §§ 562-568.]

533. Refusing to serve. 394. Any person elected to a township office and refusing to qualify and serve, shall forfeit the sum of five dollars, which may be recovered by action in the name of the county, to the use of the school fund in the county, but no person shall be compelled to serve as a township officer two terms in succession. [R., § 447; C., '51, § 225.]

534. Clerk; duties. 395. The township clerk shall keep accurate records of the proceedings and orders of the trustees, and perform such other acts as may be required of him by law. [R., § 448; C., '51, § 226.]

Entries made on the record by one township clerk from memoranda of the action of the trustees made by the previous clerk are admissible as a part of the record: Moses v. Penquit, 72-611. See note to § 531.

535. Oaths. 396. He is authorized to administer the oath of office to all the township officers, and he shall make a record thereof, and also of all who file certificates of their having taken the oath before any other officer authorized to administer the same. [R., § 449; C., '51, § 226.]

536. 16 G. A., ch. 110, § 1. Township clerks shall have power to administer oaths to township officers, judges of election, clerks of election, and highway supervisors, for services rendered in their respective townships.

537. Notify auditor. 397. The clerk, immediately after the election of officers in his township, shall send a written notice thereof to the county auditor, stating the names of the persons elected and the time of the election, and shall enter the time of the election of each officer in the township record. [R., § 450; C., '51, § 228.]

538. Receipts and disbursements. 16 G. A., ch. 50, § 1. Hereafter it shall be the duty of township clerks in each county in the state, on the morning of the day of each general election, and before the hour for opening the polls, to post up at the place where such general election is to be held in his township, a statement, in writing, showing all receipts of money and disbursements in his office, for the preceding year, such statement to be certified by the trustees of the said township.

539. Constables; duty. 398. The constables shall serve all warrants, notices, and other process, lawfully directed to them by the trustees or clerk of the township, or any court, and perform such other duties as are or may be required by law. [R., § 451; C., '51, § 229.]

540. 399. Constables are ministerial officers of justices of the peace. [R., § 452; C., '51, § 230.]

A constable is properly a township officer, although he is considered as a county officer for some purposes: State v. Bevans, 37-178.

A justice of the peace has no authority to appoint a special constable to assist peace officers in seizing liquors. He cannot give to a special constable thus appointed general authority: Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

TOWNSHIP COLLECTOR.

541. When elected. 400. There shall be elected at the general election in every year, a township collector in and for each organized township in every county, except the township in which the county seat is located, who shall hold office for one year; provided, the board of supervisors of the county shall order the election of township collectors as in this chapter hereinafter provided. [12 G. A., ch. 137, § 1.]

542. Qualification of. 401. He shall qualify as other elective officers, and give a bond to the county in a penal sum equal to double the whole amount of tax to be by him collected, which shall be presented to and approved by the board of supervisors of the county and recorded the same as the bond of county officers. [Same, § 2.]

543. Auditor's duty. 402. The auditor, in counties where township collectors are elected, shall make out a duplicate tax-list of each township, and deliver the same, with the original, to the county treasurer. [Same, § 4.]

544. Treasurer's duty; powers of collector. 403. The county treasurer shall deliver to each township collector in the county, as soon as he has qualified, such duplicate tax-list of his township and take his receipt therefor, specifying the total amount of the tax charged in such list, and charge the same over to each township collector in a book to be kept for that purpose; and such duplicate tax-list, when so made out and delivered to the township collectors, may be used as an execution, and shall be sufficient authority for them to collect the taxes therein charged in any township in the county by distress and sale or otherwise, as now provided by law for the collection of taxes by the county treasurer; and the county treasurer shall not receive or collect any of the taxes charged in any duplicate tax-list so delivered, except the tax of non-residents of the township, until the same has been returned to him as hereinafter provided. The said county treasurer shall procure for and deliver to each township collector with said tax-list, a tax receipt-book, with a blank margin or stub, upon which the said township collector shall enter the number and date of the tax-receipt given to the tax-payer, the amount of tax and by whom paid, which said tax-receipt book shall be returned to the county treasurer, with the said duplicate tax-list, as hereinafter provided. [Same, § 5.]

A warrant is not required to be attached to such duplicate tax-list: Shaw v. Orr, 30-355, 361.

545. Notice. 404. Upon the receipt of said tax-lists, each township collector, immediately, shall cause the notice of the reception thereof to be posted up in some conspicuous place in every school district in the township, and in every ward of any city therein, so located as will be most likely to give notice to the inhabitants thereof, and also publish such notice for four weeks in one or more weekly papers, if any published in the township, designating in such notice a convenient place in such township where he will attend from nine o'clock A. M. to four o'clock P. M., at least once in each week, on a day to be specified in said notice until March first following, for the purpose of receiving payment of taxes, and each collector shall attend accordingly, and he shall proceed to collect and receipt for all taxes therein charged, in the same manner as now provided by law for the collection of taxes by the county treasurer, and all the laws which apply to and govern the collection of taxes, by county treasurers, shall apply to and govern the collection of taxes, by said township collector, when not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter. [Same, § 6.]

546. Demand taxes; distress and sale. 405. Every collector, after the first of March in each year, shall call at least once on each person whose tax remains unpaid, or at the place of his usual residence, if in the township for which such collector has been chosen, and shall demand the payment of the taxes charged to him on his property. In case any person shall attempt to remove from the township, property on which tax is due, without leaving sufficient to pay such tax, at any time after the duplicate comes into his hands, the collector shall attach such property and hold the same until the tax is paid, or make the tax out of such property. In case any person shall refuse or neglect to pay the tax, or shall have removed from said township, the collector shall levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person who ought to pay the same, or of any goods and chattels on which the said tax was assessed, wheresoever the same may be found within the county. The collector shall give public notice of the time and place of sale, and of the property to be sold, at least six days previous to the sale, by advertisements to be posted up in at least three public places in the township where such sale shall be made. The sale shall be made by public auction, and if the property shall be sold for more than the amount of the tax, penalty, and costs, the surplus shall be returned to the person in whose possession such property was when the distress was made. [Same, § 7.]

547. Monthly statements. 406. The township collectors shall make monthly statements to the county treasurer of the amount of tax collected by them on each fund, and pay the same over to the county treasurer and take his receipt therefor; and they shall complete the collection of the tax charged in the said duplicate tax-lists, by distress and sale or otherwise, on or before the first Monday in May next after the receipt of said duplicate tax-list, and pay over the amount so collected to the county treasurer and return to him the said tax-lists and receipt-books, and make a full and complete settlement for the taxes so collected with the county treasurer, which settlement shall be subject to the examination and correction by the board of supervisors of the county at its next session. [Same, § 8.]

The provision as to return of tax-list to the directory and does not limit his authority to treasurer by the first Monday in May is merely act after that time: Shaw v. Orr, 30-355.

548. Compensation. 407. Each township collector shall receive for his services the following compensation: 1. Two per cent. of all sums collected by him on the first two thousand dollars, and one per cent. on all sums in excess thereof collected by him otherwise than by distress and sale, to be paid out of the county treasury. 2. Five per cent. upon all taxes collected by him by distress and sale, which percentage and costs shall be collected of the delinquent tax-payer, and the same fees in addition to the said five per cent. as constables are entitled to receive for the sale of property on execution. [Same, § 9.]

549. Unpaid taxes. 408. After the return of said duplicate tax-lists and settlement as provided above, the county treasurer shall receive, receipt for, and collect any unpaid taxes in the county, and shall proceed to advertise and sell all the real estate in the county upon which the taxes have not been paid, for the unpaid taxes thereon as provided by law. [Same, § 10.]

550. When there is failure to collect. 409. If any of the taxes mentioned, in the tax-list shall remain unpaid, and the collector shall not be able to collect the same, he shall deliver to the county treasurer an account of the taxes so remaining due; and upon making oath before the county auditor, or in case of his absence before any justice of the peace, that the sums mentioned in such account remain unpaid, and that he has not, upon diligent inquiry, been able to discover any goods or chattels belonging to or in the possession of the person charged with or liable to pay such sums, whereon he could levy the same, he shall be credited by the county treasurer with the amount thereof, but such oath and credit shall only be presumptive evidence of the correctness thereof. [Same, § 11.]

551. Liability. 410. Such collector and his sureties shall be liable for the loss by theft or otherwise, of any money collected by him and in his possession. [Same, § 13.]

552. When election of collector ordered. 411. The board of supervisors of each county in the state having a population exceeding seven thousand inhabitants, as shown by the last preceding census, are hereby authorized and empowered to order an election of a township collector in each organized township in their county, by a resolution to that effect, passed at their regular meeting in June in any year by a two-thirds vote of the board, which shall be spread upon the records of the board, and the first election of township collectors in such county shall be held at the next general election after the passage of such resolution, and every year thereafter until the said resolution is repealed by the board, by a like vote, at their regular meeting in June in any year. They shall be voted for and elected in the manner of the other township officers, and in all counties in the state where such resolution is not in force, as provided in this section, then sections four hundred and one to four hundred and eleven inclusive, of this chapter [§§ 542-552] shall be inoperative and of no effect. [Same, § 12.]

CHANGING NAME OF TOWNSHIP.

553. How changed. 412. Any township desirous of changing its name, may petition the board of supervisors of the county in which such township is situated; and if it shall appear to said board that a majority of the actual resident voters of such township are in favor of such change, such board shall cause three notices to be posted up in three of the most public places of such township, for at least thirty days previous to the next session of said board, which notice shall state the fact that a petition has been presented to said board by the citizens of said township praying for a change of the name of the same, and the name prayed for in said petition, and that unless those interested in the change of such name shall appear at the next regular session of said board and show cause why said name shall not be changed, there will be an order made granting such change, which notice shall be attested by the auditor. [9 G. A., ch. 80, § 1.]

554. Order. 413. If, at the time fixed for the hearing of said petition, said board is satisfied that there is a majority in favor of such change of name, said board shall make an order granting such change, which shall be attested by the auditor and recorded in the office of the recorder of the county where such township is situated. [Same, § 2.]

555. Costs. 414. The cost of such change and recording shall be paid by the petitioners. But should it appear to said board that a majority of the citizens of such township are opposed to such change, such petition shall be dismissed and the cost of the proceeding taxed against the petitioners. [Same, § 2.]

BOARD OF HEALTH.

556. Trustees constitute. 415. The township trustees shall have power to make whatever regulations they deem necessary for the protection of the public health, and respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within their respective townships; provided, that their jurisdiction as such board shall not extend to any city or incorporated town situated therein. [11 G. A., ch. 107, §§ 1, 2.]

[Further, as to trustees constituting board of health, see § 2570 et seq.]

557. Regulations published. 416. Notice shall be given of all regulations made, by publishing the same in a newspaper published in the township, or, where there is no newspaper, by posting in five public places therein. [Same, § 3.]

558. Power. 417. The trustees may order the owner or occupant, at his own expense, to remove any nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness found on private property within such time as they deem reasonable, and if such person neglects to do so he shall forfeit a sum of not exceeding twenty-five dollars for every day during which he knowingly permits such nuisance or cause of sickness to remain after the time prescribed for the removal thereof. The order shall be in writing, and served by any constable of the town in the usual way of serving notices in civil suits. If the owner or occupant fails to comply with such order, the trustees may cause the nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness to be removed, and all expenses incurred thereby shall be paid by such owner or occupant. [Same, §§ 5, 6, 7.]

559. Enforcing regulations. 418. The trustees shall have power to employ all such persons as shall be necessary to carry into effect the regulations adopted and published according to the powers vested in the trustees and to fix their compensation; to employ physicians in case of poverty, and to take such general precautions and actions as they may deem necessary for the public health. [Same, § 8.]

The provisions of this section are superseded by § 2578: Staples v. Plymouth County, 62-364.

560. Punishment. 419. Any person who shall wilfully violate any of the regulations so made and published by the trustees, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to a fine or imprisonment, such fine not to exceed one hundred dollars, and such imprisonment not to exceed thirty days. [Same, § 9.]

561. Expenses. 420. All expenses, now or hereafter incurred by the trustees of a township in the exercise of the powers heretofore or herein conferred, shall be borne by the township. The trustees shall certify the amount required to pay such expenses to the board of supervisors of the county, and that board shall, at the time it levies the general taxes, and in addition thereto, levy on the property of such township a sufficient tax to pay the amount so certified by the trustees. The tax so levied shall be collected by the county treasurer with the other taxes, and be by him paid over to the township clerk. [Same, §§ 10, 11.]

The board will not be bound by the action of individual members in authorizing a physician to render services. Such action must be by the board as a body: Young v. Blackhawk County, 66-460.

RELATING TO CEMETERIES.

562. Laying out. 16 G. A., ch. 130, § 1. Where there is located in any township one or more cemeteries the owner or owners of the same, or any party or parties owning an interest therein, may cause the same to be surveyed, platted and laid out into subdivisions and lots, numbering the same by progressive numbers, giving the dimensions, length and breadth thereof, with reference to known or permanent monuments to be made; and which plat shall accurately describe all the subdivisions of the tract of land used or designed to be used as a cemetery; said plat shall be recorded in the office of the county recorder, and filed with and recorded by the township clerk and preserved by him among the records of his office.

563. Conveyance of lots. 16 G. A., ch. 130, § 2. All conveyances of subdivisions or lots of a cemetery thus platted, shall be by deed from the proper owner, which deed shall be recorded with the township clerk in a book kept by him for that purpose, for the recording of which the said clerk shall be entitled to a fee of fifty cents for each instrument recorded, to be paid by the party desiring the record made.

564. Condemning any lands. 16 G. A., ch. 130, § 3. The township trustees are hereby empowered to condemn or purchase and pay for out of the general fund, and enter upon and take any lands within the territorial limits of such township for the use of cemeteries in the same manner as is now provided for incorporated cities and towns.

565. Tax. 16 G. A., ch. 130, § 4. They shall at the regular meeting in April, levy a tax sufficient to pay for any such lands so condemned or purchased, or for the necessary improvement and maintenance of cemeteries thus established. They shall have power to control any such cemeteries, or appoint trustees for the same or sell it to any private corporation for cemetery purposes.

566. Power of officers. 17 G. A., ch. 106, § 1. The trustees, board of directors or other officers having the custody and control of any cemetery in this state shall have power, subject to the by-laws and regulations of said cemetery, to inclose, improve and adorn the grounds of such cemetery, to construct avenues in the same, to erect proper buildings for the use of said cemetery, to prescribe rules for improving or adorning the lots therein, or for the erection of monuments or other memorials of the dead upon such lots; to prohibit any use, division, improvement or adornment of a lot which they may deem improper.

A grantor of land conveyed to township trustees for use as a cemetery cannot maintain action by mandamus against them to compel its use for such purpose, before it has been actually appropriated to that purpose, it not appearing that the use to which it was to be put constituted any part of the consideration for the sale: Christy v. Whitmore, 67-60.

567. Penalty for injuring or defacing graves, etc. 17 G. A., ch. 106, § 2. Any person who shall wilfully and maliciously destroy, mutilate, deface, injure or remove any tomb, vault, monument, gravestone or other structure, placed in any public or private cemetery in this state, or any fences, railing or other work for the protection or ornamentation of said cemetery, or of any tomb, vault, monument or gravestone, or other structure aforesaid, on any cemetery lot within such cemetery, or shall wilfully and maliciously destroy, cut, break, or injure any tree, shrub, plant, or lawn within the limits of said cemetery, or shall drive at unusual and forbidden speed over the avenues or roads in said cemetery, or shall drive outside of said avenues and roads and over the grass or graves of said cemetery, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof before any court of competent jurisdiction, be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a term of not less than one nor more than thirty days, in the discretion of the court, and such offender shall also be liable in an action of trespass in the name of the person or corporation having the custody and control of said cemetery grounds, to pay all such damages as have been occasioned by his unlawful act or acts, which money, when recovered, shall be applied by said person or corporation to the reparation and restoration of the property so injured or destroyed, if the same can be so repaired or restored.

568. Watchmen. 17 G. A., ch. 106, § 3. It shall be lawful for the trustees, directors, or other officers having the custody and control of any cemetery in this state, to appoint as many day and night watchmen of their grounds as they may think expedient; and such watchmen, and also all their sextons, superintendents, gardeners, and agents stationed upon or near said grounds, are hereby authorized to take and subscribe before any mayor of a city, or justice of the peace of the township where such cemetery is situated, an oath of office similar to that required by law of constables, and upon the taking of such oath, such watchmen, sextons, superintendents, gardeners and agents, shall have, exercise and possess all the powers of police officers within and adjacent to the cemetery grounds, and they and each of them shall have power to arrest any and all persons engaged in violating the laws of this state in reference to the protection, care and preservation of cemeteries, and of the trees, shrubbery, plants, structures, grass and adornments therein, and to bring such persons so offending before any justice of the peace within such township, to be dealt with according to law.

OF CITIES AND INCORPORATED TOWNS.

569. How incorporated. 421; 18 G. A., ch. 79. When the inhabitants of any part of any county not embraced within the limits of any city or incorporated town shall desire to be organized into a city or incorporated town, they may apply by petition in writing, signed by not less than twenty-five of the qualified electors of the territory to be embraced in the proposed city or incorporated town, to the circuit [district] court of the proper county, which petition shall describe the territory proposed to be embraced in such city or incorporated town, and shall have annexed thereto an accurate map or plat thereof and state the name proposed for such city or incorporated town, and shall be accompanied with satisfactory proofs of the number of inhabitants within the territory embraced in said limits. [12 G. A., ch. 61, § 2.]

570. Commissioners; election. 422. When such petition shall be presented, the court shall forthwith appoint five commissioners who shall at once call an election of all the qualified electors residing within the territory embraced within said limits as described and platted, to be held at some convenient place within said limits, the notice for which shall be given by publication in some newspaper published within said limits, if any there be, for three successive weeks, and by posting notices in five public places within said limits; said posting and the first publication to be not less than three weeks preceding such election. Such notice shall specify the place and time of such election and a description of the limits of said proposed town or city, and that a description and plat thereof are on file in the office of the clerk of the circuit [district] court. Said commissioners shall act as judges and clerks of the election, and shall qualify as required by law for judges and clerks of township elections, and shall report the result of the ballot to the court aforesaid. The ballot used at said election shall be "For incorporation," "Against incorporation." [Same, § 3.]

[The word "township" as used in the fourth line from the bottom of this section is "county" in the printed Code; but is as here given in the original of the Code as passed by the legislature and found in the office of the secretary of state.]

Where notice, instead of being given as required by statute, was published only on the morning of the day of election, held, that although a majority of the votes cast were in favor of organization, the election was void: State ex rel. v. Young, 4-561.

571. Result published. 423. If a majority of the ballots cast at such election be in favor of such incorporation, the clerk shall, immediately on the return of the commissioners being filed in his office, give notice of the result by publication in a newspaper, or, if no newspaper be published in the county, by posting in five public places within the limits of the proposed city or town; and in such notice he shall designate to which of the classes of incorporation hereinafter prescribed, such city or town shall belong. A copy of the notice, with proper proof of its publication, shall be filed with the papers, and a certified copy of all papers and record entries relating to the matter on file in the clerk's office, shall be filed in the recorder's office of the county and in the office of the secretary of state. [Same, § 4.]

572. Incorporation complete. 424. When certified copies are made and filed as required by the preceding section, and officers are elected and qualified for such city or town as hereinafter provided, the incorporation thereof shall be complete; whereof notice shall be taken in all judicial proceedings. [Same, § 5.]

A court will take judicial notice in what county a given incorporated town is situated: State v. Reader, 60-527.

573. First election; notice. 425. When the incorporation of such city or town is completed, the commissioners shall give notice for two consecutive weeks of the time and place of holding the first election of officers therefor by publication in a newspaper, or, if none be published within the limits of such city or town, by posting in five public places within the limits of the same. At such election the qualified electors residing within the limits of such city or town shall choose officers therefor, to hold until the first annual election of officers according to its grade, as hereinafter in this chapter prescribed. The commissioners shall act as judges and clerks of the election, and otherwise it shall be conducted and the officers elected thereat shall be qualified in the manner prescribed by law for the election and qualification of township officers. [Same, § 6.]

[The words, "of such city or town," as they stand in the printed Code between "electors" and "residing," in the seventh line of the section, are not in the original section of the Code as passed by the legislature and now preserved in the office of the secretary of state.]

CONTIGUOUS TERRITORY ANNEXED.

574. Petition. 426. When the inhabitants of a part of any county adjoining any city or town shall desire to be annexed to such city or town, they may apply by petition in writing to the circuit [district] court of the proper county, signed by not less than a majority of the electors residing within the territory proposed to be annexed; which petition shall state at whose instance it is presented, and shall be accompanied by an accurate plat or map of such territory. [R., § 1038.]

It is not competent in the petition for incorporation to provide for the exemption in the annexed territory of certain property from city taxes, and such provision is a nullity: Hayzlett v. Mt. Vernon, 33-229.

575. Procedure. 427. Like proceedings, as nearly as applicable, shall be had on such petition as are prescribed in sections four hundred and twenty-two and four hundred and twenty-three of this chapter [§§ 570, 571], provided, that notice of the election shall also be served on the mayor or other presiding officer of the town or city to which the annexation is proposed, and such election shall be held in the territory proposed to be annexed. [R., § 1039.]

576. Proposition submitted. 428. The council or trustees of said city or town may give the consent thereof to such annexation, or they may, in their discretion, provide by ordinance or resolution for submitting to the electors at the next annual election of municipal officers the question whether such annexation shall be made; and if such consent be given, or if a majority of the electors of such city or town voting at such election shall vote in favor of annexation, then on the return of such vote to the proper authority of such city or town, a resolution or ordinance shall be adopted or passed declaring that the territory described in the petition has been annexed to and is a part of such city or town; and the clerk or recorder of the said city or town shall make out two copies of the petition, plat, orders of the circuit [district] court, abstract of votes, and resolutions or ordinances in relation to such annexation, with a certificate that the same are correct, attested by the seal of such city or town and he shall deliver one of said copies to the recorder of the county, who shall, having first made record thereof in the proper books of record, file and preserve the same, and the other of said copies shall be forwarded by the clerk or recorder of said city or town to the secretary of state. [R., § 1041.]

577. Annexation, when complete. 429. So soon as said resolution or ordinance declaring such annexation has been adopted, and the said copies transmitted, delivered, and recorded, the said territory shall be deemed and taken to be a part and parcel of the said city or town, and the inhabitants residing therein shall have and enjoy all the rights and privileges of the inhabitants within the original limits of such city or town. [R., § 1042.]

578. Extension by application to council. 18 G. A., ch. 56, § 1. In addition to the methods now provided by law for extending city limits, whenever the owner or owners of lands adjoining the limits of any city of the first or second class, organized under the general laws of the state of Iowa, shall desire to have their lands brought within the limits of such city, they may apply to the city council of such city to have the limits of the city extended so as to include such lands, and shall attach to the application a map of such lands, showing their situation, with respect to the existing limits of the city. If the city council shall assent to the extension of the limits of the city, as applied for, a minute thereof shall be indorsed upon the map by the city clerk, and the same shall then be acknowledged by the owner and recorded in the office of the recorder of the proper county, as provided in section five hundred and sixty of the code [§ 995]. Thereafter the limits of the city shall be extended so as to conform to the line proposed and so assented to by the city council.

BY CORPORATION.

579. Submission of question. 430. When any municipal corporation shall desire to annex any contiguous territory thereto, not embraced within the limits of any city or town, it shall be lawful for the trustees or council of the corporation, by an ordinance passed for that purpose at least one month before the regular annual election, to submit the question of annexation to the qualified electors of such corporation; and if a majority of the electors of the corporation voting on the question shall vote in favor of such annexation, the council or trustees of such corporation shall present to the circuit [district] court a petition praying for such annexation, which petition shall describe the territory proposed to be annexed to such municipal corporation, and have attached thereto an accurate map or plat thereof, and like proceedings shall be had upon said petition as are provided in sections four hundred and twenty-two and four hundred and twenty-three of this chapter [§§ 570, 571] so far as the same may be applicable; and if the result of the election be favorable to the proposed annexation, the same record shall be made as provided in said sections, and thereupon the said contiguous territory proposed to be annexed shall be in law deemed and taken to be included in, and shall be a part of said municipal corporation, and the inhabitants thereof shall in all respects be citizens thereafter of the said municipal corporation.

Extension of limits of an incorporated city or town and bringing additional land or people under municipal authority are acts of like nature with the incorporation of such city or town, and depend for their authority upon the same constitutional provisions: Morford v. Unger, 8-82.

Property which is so far removed from the local government as not to derive benefit therefrom, and which the owner desires to use as farming land and not for laying off into city lots, cannot, by being included in city limits against the will of the owner, be subjected to city taxation, even though it is provided that it shall be assessed only at its value for farming land: Ibid.

While enlargement of boundaries of a city or town whereby the property of individuals is brought within the corporate limits without the consent of its owners, and subjected to taxation for town purposes, may not be an infringement of the constitutional provision against taking private property for public use without compensation, yet it may become so by an unreasonable extension in taking in lands not at all needed for buildings and population, and taxing the same for the benefit of the portion of the corporate domain which may be peopled or occupied. In such cases the courts will limit the taxing power whenever practicable to the point or line where it ceases to operate beneficially to the proprietor in a municipal point of view: Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16-271; Fulton v. Davenport, 17-404.

Facts in particular cases considered as determining whether the property was properly subject to municipal taxation or not: Morford v. Unger, 8-82; Butler v. Muscatine, 11-433; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16-271; Hershey v. Muscatine, 22-184.

Where the land thus included is laid off into lots and platted as an addition, it becomes subject to municipal taxation: Fulton v. Davenport, 17-404.

So where the proprietors of undedicated town property, being locally within the corporate limits, hold such close proximity to the settled and improved parts of the town that the corporate authorities cannot open and improve its streets and alleys, and extend to the inhabitants thereof its usual police regulations and advantages, without incidentally benefiting such proprietors in their personal privileges and accommodations, or in the enhancement of their property, then the power to tax the property arises; but in its exercise great care and circumspection should be observed less perchance injustice and oppression should ensue: Ibid.

Certain tracts of land in Dubuque held not liable to taxation for municipal objects under the foregoing doctrines: Davis v. Dubuque, 20-458.

Where a tract of land within the extended limits of the city lay near one of the principal streets, and was so surrounded as to receive current benefits from the expenditures made by the city as well as permanent increase in value, held, that it was liable to municipal taxation: O'Hare v. Dubuque, 22-144.

But held that a lot was not liable to such taxation which was not upon a principal street, nor accessible by any street leading to the business part of the city, and was surrounded exclusively by agricultural and mineral lands, and was not benefited by current expenditures: Ibid.

The doctrine of Morford v. Unger, supra, with reference to the extension of city limits, is also applicable to lands used for agricultural purposes within the corporate limits as originally laid out: Buell v. Ball, 20-282; Deeds v. Sanborn, 22-214.

Tracts of forty and ten acres respectively, all lying together, occupied for agricultural purposes, remote from the city proper, no streets or alleys having been worked near them, held not liable for municipal taxation: Deeds v. Sanborn, 26-419.

Lands included within an extension of the city limits but used exclusively for agricultural purposes, and not affected by the current expenditures of the city, no money being spent for improvements thereon, and no streets or alleys being worked for their benefit, such lands not being used for buildings and not being enhanced in value by being within the corporate limits, held not subject to municipal taxation: Deiman v. Fort Madison, 30-542.

The fact of payment of previous taxes will not estop the property owner from claiming the exemption of his property from municipal taxation: Ibid.

Property included within the corporate limits, deriving no benefit from being thus included, and used alone for agricultural purposes, and not demanded for use as city property, nor possessing a value on account of its adaptation for dwellings or business, is exempt from taxation; but property which is held for the opportunity of bringing it into the market as city lots is not entitled to exemption. So, if land within the city limits is used for the purpose of dwellings or business, it cannot ordinarily be claimed to be exempt from taxation, even though the city fails to open or improve the streets leading thereto: Durant v. Kauffman, 34-194.

Municipal taxes from which farm property within the corporate limits is exempt are those which but for municipal purposes would not have been levied, such as taxes to support the police of the city, its necessary lights, water, sewerage, fire department, local government, etc.; but such property is not exempt from taxes voted by the city in aid of a railway, which might be levied as effectually upon property not included within the city: Sears v. Iowa Milland R. Co., 39-417.

A tract of one hundred acres within city limits, used only for farming purposes and having no houses thereon, but against which streets abut, and adjoining an addition laid out in lots and partially improved, held subject to city taxes: Brooks v. Polk County, 52-460.

The fact that land included within the city limits is used for agricultural purposes will not render the taxation thereof illegal, it not being shown that it is used exclusively for such purposes, nor that it does not derive such benefit from the expenditure of municipal taxes that it is properly subject to such taxation: Tubbesing v. Burlington, 68-691.

The character and use of the land alone are not sufficient to determine the question of exemption. It is important to consider the benefits, if any, derived from the expenditure of municipal taxes. Although land is adjudged not to be liable to municipal taxation for a particular year, such adjudication will not necessarily show that municipal taxes thereon for previous years were illegal: Ibid.

A tract of land used for railway depot purposes, and situated within the boundaries of the city, is to be deemed subject to municipal taxes, although not platted into lots: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12-112.

580. By proceedings in court. 431. When any incorporated city shall desire to annex to such corporation any abutting and contiguous territory thereto, which is not embraced within the limits of any city, and which territory has been laid out in lots or parcels containing two acres or less, the council of such corporation may present to the circuit [district] court of the county in which such city is situate, a petition setting forth the facts and describing the territory that is desired to be annexed, and that the same has been laid out as above mentioned, together with the names of each owner of any portion of such territory, without describing at length, if there is more than one such owner, the particular portion of such territory owned by each, which petition shall have attached thereto a map or plat of such territory. A notice of the filing of such petition shall be served by publication in one daily or weekly newspaper published in such city, and by posting in five public places in the territory outside of said city for the period of four weeks; and the corporation shall be plaintiff and said owners defendants, and issues joined and the cause tried in the ordinary manner as far as applicable, except that no judgment for costs shall be rendered against any defendant who does not make any defense. If the court find the allegations of the petition to be true, and that justice and equity require that said territory or any part thereof should be annexed to such corporation, a decree shall be entered accordingly, and from the time of entering such decree, the territory therein described shall be included in and become a part of such corporation. The powers conferred under the provisions of this section shall also apply to cities acting under special charters.

This section is not void as conferring legislative power upon the circuit court in violation of the constitution, art. 3, § 1; nor is the provision that this section shall apply to cities acting under special charter controlled or neutralized by § 906: Burlington v. Leebrick, 43-252.

581. Corporations unite. 432; 17 G. A., ch. 3, § 1. When any city or incorporated town shall desire to be annexed to another and contiguous city or incorporated town, the council or trustees of each of such cities or towns, shall appoint three commissioners to arrange and report to such council or trustees respectively the terms and conditions on which the proposed annexation can be made; and if the council or trustees of each of such cities or towns, approve of the terms and conditions proposed, they shall, by proper ordinance, so declare; and thereupon the council or trustees of each of such cities or towns, by ordinance passed, and one publication had thereof at least ten days prior to the general annual election therein, may submit the question of such annexation, upon the said terms and conditions so proposed, to the electors of their respective cities or towns, and if a majority of the electors of each vote in favor of such annexation, the council or trustees of each shall, by proper ordinance, so declare; and a certified copy of the whole proceedings for annexation of the city or town to be annexed being filed with the clerk or recorder of the city or town to which the annexation is made, the latter shall file with the secretary of state and in the recorder's office of the county, a certified copy of all proceedings had by both of such cities or towns in the matter of such annexation. [R., § 1044.]

582. Annexation complete. 433; 17 G. A., ch. 3, § 2. When certified copies of the proceedings for annexation are filed as contemplated in the preceding section, the annexation shall be deemed complete, and the terms and conditions mentioned in section four hundred and thirty-two of the code [§ 581] shall be part of the law for the government of the city or town to which annexation is made, and said city or town shall have the power and it shall be its duty to pass such ordinances, not inconsistent with law, as will carry into effect and maintain the terms of such annexation, and thereafter the city or town annexed shall be governed as part of the city or town to which the annexation of it is made; and any citizen of the annexed city or town may institute and maintain legal proceedings to compel the city or town, and the council or trustees thereof, to which annexation is made, to execute such terms and conditions; provided, that such annexation shall not affect or impair any rights or liabilities then existing for or against either of such cities or towns, and that they may be enforced the same as if no such annexation had taken place; and provided further, that a city or town separated from another city or town by an intervening city, town, or territory may be annexed to such city or town in the manner hereinbefore provided, but such annexation shall not be consummated and completed until such intervening city, town, or territory is also annexed. Any proceedings which may have been commenced under said sections as amended under the provisions of this act and prior to the taking effect of this act for the annexation of a city or town, are hereby declared valid and legal, and such proceedings may be completed in accordance with said sections and the provisions of this act.

EXTENSION OF CITY LIMITS.

583. Additional mode. 16 G. A., ch. 47, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 169, § 1. In addition to the methods now provided by law, any city or incorporated town in this state may have its limits enlarged in the manner herein prescribed.

Under these provisions it is not necessary that the territory annexed be abutting or contiguous, and laid out in lots or parcels, as is required under the provisions of § 580: Glass v. Cedar Rapids, 68-207.

584. Council may fix limits. 16 G. A., ch. 47, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 169, § 2. The council may fix the boundaries of the city or incorporated town as enlarged to the proposed extent, which boundaries shall, as far as practicable, be terminated by straight lines drawn parallel respectively to the corresponding lines of the government survey.

585. Submission of question. 16 G. A., ch. 47, § 3; 17 G. A., ch. 169, § 3. The question of making such extension must then be submitted to the vote of all the qualified electors inhabiting the whole city or town as thus proposed to be enlarged. A day must be fixed for such election by resolution of the council of the city or town whose limits are proposed to be enlarged, and notice thereof must be given by proclamation of the mayor of said city or town of the time of holding such election, and setting forth the exact question to be presented to the electors for determination; which proclamation shall be published for four weeks consecutively prior to said election in some newspaper published in said city or town, which notice shall be deemed sufficient notice of said election and its purposes to all the inhabitants of the city or town as proposed to be enlarged; and if at such election the number of legal votes cast for such extension shall exceed those cast against it, the mayor shall issue his proclamation announcing that fact, and from thenceforth the limits of said city or town shall be enlarged as proposed.

586. Taxation of lands. 16 G. A., ch. 47, § 4; 17 G. A., ch. 169, §§ 4, 5. 20 G. A., ch. 158. No lands included within said extended limits which shall not have been laid off into lots of ten acres or less, or which shall not subsequently be divided into parcels of ten acres or less, by the extension of streets or alleys, and which shall also in good faith be occupied and used for agricultural or horticultural purposes, shall be taxable for any city or town purpose except that they may be subjected to a road tax to the same extent as though they were outside of the city or town limits, which said tax shall be paid into the city treasury. The provisions of this chapter shall apply to cities organized and acting under special charters.

This provision, making distinction between ten acres, is not unconstitutional: Leicht v. Burlington, 73-29.

Under this provision, held, that land included within territory annexed to a city under a previous similar statute by which the lots exempt from taxation because used for agricultural purposes must exceed twenty acres, became exempt under the new statute, although not exempt under the previous one, by virtue of which the annexation was made: Winzer v. Burlington, 68-279.

Municipal corporations have no vested right to tax rural or farming property within their limits for city purposes, and if such right is given by statute it is competent for the legislature to take it away: Ibid.

The fact that the owner has a residence upon land not platted, and used for agricultural purposes, does not destroy his right to exemption under this statutory provision: Ibid.

In general, as to the taxation of agricultural lands within city limits, see notes to § 579.

ABANDONMENT OF SPECIAL CHARTERS.

[For acts applicable only to cities under special charters, see §§ 906-986.]

587. By city or town. 434. Any city or town incorporated by special charter, or in any other manner than that provided by this chapter, may abandon its charter and organize itself under the provisions of this chapter with the same territorial limits, by pursuing the course hereinafter prescribed. [Ex. S., 9 G. A., ch. 25, § 1; 11 G. A., ch. 69.]

The mere act of a town, existing under special charter, in electing officers provided by the general incorporation act, at the time and in the manner there contemplated, does not amount to a surrender of its charter, and an organization under the provisions of the general act; and where the officers, etc., are not the same the officers so elected will not even be officers de facto: Decorah v. Bullis, 25-12.

Mere irregularities in effecting the change cannot be made available in a suit by the city to enforce payment of an assessment not valid under the general law: Des Moines v. Casady, 21-570.

Where, upon an election to re-organize a city under the general incorporation laws, and abandon its special charter, a person who had been acting as city marshal under the special charter was re-elected, and was entitled, under § 591, to hold such office until qualification under the new election, held, that the city council could not, between the time of re-election and qualification, reduce his salary: Cox v. Burlington, 43-612.

588. Petition; action upon; election ordered. 435. Upon the petition of fifty legal voters in any such city or town to the council or trustees thereof, praying that the question of abandoning its charter be submitted to the legal voters, the council or trustees shall immediately direct a special election to be held, at which such question shall be decided, specifying at the same time, the time and place of holding the same, and appointing the judges and clerks of the election. [Ex. S., 9 G. A., ch. 25, §§ 2, 3.]

589. Proclamation; notice. 436. The mayor, or in case there is no mayor, the president of the council or board of trustees, shall at once issue a proclamation giving notice of such election, of the question submitted to the electors, and of the time and place of holding the election; which proclamation shall be published for four consecutive weeks in some newspaper published in such city or town; and if there is none published therein, then such proclamation shall be published by posting a copy thereof in five public places within the corporate limits of such city or town, one of which shall be on the door of the mayor's office. [Same, § 4.]

590. Manner of voting; result. 437. At such election, those who desire to vote in favor of the abandonment of the charter shall deposit a ballot with the words "in favor of abandonment;" those desiring to vote against the abandonment shall deposit a ballot with the words "against abandonment." The election shall be conducted in other respects as elections for city officers are conducted under the charter. The abstract of votes shall be returned to the city council or board of trustees, who shall canvass the same and declare the result, which shall be entered on the journal. [Same, § 5.]

591. Officers elected; ordinances; resubmission. 438; 19 G. A., ch. 164. If a majority of the votes cast at such election be in favor of the abandonment of the charter, the council or trustees shall immediately call a special election for the election of officers for such corporation according to its class as defined by this chapter; and from and after the election and qualification of such officers, the former charter of such city or town shall be considered as abandoned, and such city or town shall be considered as organized, and shall have all the rights and be subject to all the liabilities of the class to which it belongs, but the officers so elected shall hold their offices only until the next annual municipal election in such city or town; except in cities of the first class, where such special election is, or shall have been, held on the first Monday of March of an even year, when they shall hold their offices for the term of two years thereafter. All ordinances of such city or town in force at the time of the abandonment of such special charter, not inconsistent or in conflict with the general incorporation laws of the state, shall be and remain in force until otherwise altered, amended, or repealed by the council or trustees of such new organization. If a majority of the votes be against abandonment, that question cannot be again submitted until after the expiration of one year from the time of such election. [Same, § 6.]

592. Vested rights. 439. All rights and property of every description which were vested in any municipal corporation under its former organization, shall be deemed and held to be vested in the same municipal corporation under the organization herein contemplated; and no right or liability, either in favor of or against such corporation existing at the time, and no suit or prosecution of any kind, shall be affected by such change; provided, that when a different remedy is given by this chapter which can properly be made applicable to any right existing at the time such change is made, the same shall be deemed cumulative to the remedies before provided, and may be used accordingly. [Same, § 7.]

SEVERANCE OF TERRITORY.

593. Application. 440. When the inhabitants of a part of any town or city shall desire to have the part of the territory of such city or town in which they reside severed from, or stricken out of the limits of such city or town, they may apply by petition in writing, signed by a majority of the resident property holders of that part of the territory of such city or town, to the circuit [district] court of the county, which petition shall describe the territory proposed to be thus severed or stricken out of the limits of such city or town, and have attached thereto an accurate map or plat thereof, and shall also name the person or persons authorized to act in behalf of the petitioners in the prosecution of said petition. [R., § 1048.]

Land not needed for city purposes, and not benefited by being within the corporation, should be severed upon proper proceedings being taken, and the part severed should not be held liable for municipal indebtedness incurred during its attachment, if it was not liable to municipal taxation whilst attached: Evans v. Council Bluffs, 65-238.

The provisions of this section apply to any territory within a city or town, whether such territory is or is not laid out into lots and blocks. If so laid out it seems that the severance would operate as an extinguishment of the rights of the corporation in the streets and alleys of such portion: McKean v. Mt. Vernon, 51-306; Way v. Centre Point, 51-708.

Where property was sought to be charged with a tax levied by a municipal corporation, such property being situated in a plat that had been vacated since the levy, held that, under the statute providing for such vacation, it was proper to admit evidence that the city was indebted in a large sum prior to the vacation of the plat, the property being liable for its proportion thereof: Deeds v. Sanborn, 26-419.

Previous statutes as to severance construed: Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11-482.

594. Notice. 441. Notice of the filing of the same shall be given by publication in a newspaper published in said city or town, or by posting a notice of the same in five public places in said city or town four weeks previous to the succeeding term of said court, which notice shall contain the substance of said petition and state the term of court at which the hearing thereof will be had. [R., § 1049.]

595. Hearing; affidavits. 442. The hearing of such petition may be had by the court, or either party may demand a jury, and the proper authorities of such city or town, or any person interested in the subject-matter of said petition, may appear and contest the granting of the same; and affidavits in support of or against said petition may be prepared and submitted, and may be examined by the court or jury, and the court may, in its discretion, permit the agent or agents named in the petition to amend or change the same, except that no amendment shall be permitted whereby the territory embraced in said petition shall be increased or diminished without continuing the case to the next term, and requiring new notice to be given as above provided. [R., § 1050.]

This peculiar provision for the introduction of affidavits in evidence is not improper. The question to be determined is whether the interests of the territory in question require the severance, and upon appeal from the decision the only question is whether the court and jury abused the discretion reposed in them by the statute: Ashley v. Calliope, 71-466.

596. Trial; commissioners appointed. 443. If the court or jury, after hearing the petition and evidence, shall be satisfied that said petition has been signed by a majority of the property holders residing within the limits of the part of the city or town described in the petition and plat, and that the limits have been accurately described, and a correct map or plat thereof made and filed, and if the court or jury shall be further satisfied that the prayer of the petitioners should be granted, the court shall appoint three disinterested persons commissioners to adjust the terms upon which such part shall be so stricken out as to any liabilities of such city or town that have accrued during the connection of such part with such corporation. [R., § 1051.]

A decision granting the severance of certain territory, as prayed in a proceeding, such as is here contemplated, overruled on appeal, for the reason that, under the circumstances, justice and equity did not require it: Mosier v. Des Moines, 31-174.

597. Hearing and report. 444. The commissioners so appointed shall take and subscribe an oath that they will impartially perform their duties as such, and shall, at a time by them fixed, hear the agent named in the said petition and also the proper authorities of the city or town in regard to the subject-matter to them submitted, and report to the next succeeding term of said court their doings and judgment in the premises, and upon the filing of said report the court shall decree in accordance therewith and with the prayer of said petition; provided, that for good and sufficient cause, and upon a proper showing, the court may reject or set aside said report, and appoint new commissioners, and continue the cause for further action to be had thereon. [R., § 1052.]

598. Transcript. 445. The clerk shall forthwith file a certified transcript of such decree, together with the petition and map, in the office of the recorder of the county and in the office of the secretary of state. [R., § 1053.]

599. Costs. 446. When such certified transcripts are filed, the severance shall be deemed complete. The costs shall be paid by the petitioners, but each party shall pay their own witness fees. [R., § 1054.]

[As to severance of territory from cities acting under special charter, see § 907.]

DISCONTINUANCE.

600. How effected. 447. Whenever one-fourth of the legal voters of any city or incorporated town in this state shall petition the circuit [district] court of the county wherein such corporation is situated for the discontinuance of the same, the said court shall cause to be published for at least thirty days, a notice stating that the question of discontinuing such corporation will be submitted to the legal voters of the same at the next annual corporation election. [11 G. A., ch. 142, § 1.]

601. Ballot. 448. The form of ballot shall be, "For the incorporation," and "Against the incorporation." [Same, § 2.]

602. Majority required; indebtedness. 449. If a two-thirds majority of all the legal votes cast for and against such proposition shall be cast "against the incorporation," then the same may be discontinued. The vote provided for in this and the two preceding sections shall not be construed to discontinue any corporation until the said corporation shall have made ample provisions for the payment of all its indebtedness, and for the faithful performance of all its contracts and obligations, and shall have levied the requisite tax therefor. [Same, § 3.]

603. Canvass and return. 450. The vote for this purpose shall be taken, canvassed, and returned in the same manner as other municipal elections, and all expenses of the same paid by the corporation so voting. No more than one such election shall be held in the same year. [Same, § 4.]

604. Records deposited. 451. The books, documents, records, papers, and corporate seal of any city or town so discontinued shall be deposited with the county auditor of the county for safe keeping and reference in future; and all court records of any mayor or other officer shall be deposited with the nearest justice of the township, who shall have authority to execute and complete all unfinished business standing on the same. [Same, § 5.]

605. Publication. 452. Whenever the incorporation of any city or town shall have been discontinued under the provisions of the four preceding sections, the auditor of the county wherein such corporation was situated shall publish such fact for thirty days in a county paper, if one is published in the county; if not, shall post three notices for the same length of time, and also certify the fact to the secretary of state. [Same, § 6.]

606. Payment of debts; surplus. 453. For the payment of its indebtedness, the corporation shall issue warrants in cases where there is no money in the treasury, and the county treasurer shall collect the tax which shall be levied to pay such indebtedness as hereinbefore contemplated and prescribed as he collects other taxes, and pay the said warrants; and any surplus of this fund shall be passed over to the temporary school fund of the district where the same was levied. [Same, § 7.]

CHANGING NAMES.

607. By city or town. 19 G. A., ch. 16, § 1. The corporate name of any city of the first or second class or incorporated towns in this state may be changed in the manner prescribed by this act.

608. Proposal. 19 G. A., ch. 16, § 2. The council of any city of the first or second class, or any incorporated town may, by resolution, propose a change of the corporate name of such city or incorporated town setting forth therein the proposed new name, which shall not be the same as that of any city of either the first or second class or incorporated town or postoffice existing in this state at the time of the passage of such resolution.

609. Question submitted; notice. 19 G. A., ch. 16, § 3. The question of making such change shall then be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of such city or incorporated town at the next following annual election, or at a special election, as the council may provide. Notice that a change of name is to be voted on at any election shall be published in a newspaper published in said city or incorporated town at least ten days before the election.

610. Manner of voting; result. 19 G. A., ch. 16, § 4. The manner of voting on the question of change shall be by having printed or written on the ballots, "Shall the name be changed as proposed?" followed by the word "yes," or "no." If a majority of the votes cast for and against are in favor of the proposed change, the clerk of the city or incorporated town shall enter upon the records of the city or incorporated town the result of such election, and set forth in such record the new name adopted for such city or incorporated town, as well as the original name thereof, and shall cause to be filed a certified copy of the entry so made in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which such city or incorporated town is situated and in the office of the secretary of state.

611. Change complete. 19 G. A., ch. 16, § 5. When certified copies are made and filed, as required by the preceding section, the change of name shall be deemed complete, and the new name thus adopted shall be judicially recognized in all subsequent proceedings wherein said city may be interested.

612. Rights or liabilities not affected. 19 G. A., ch. 16, § 6. Nothing herein contained shall in any manner affect the rights or liabilities of said city or incorporated town, nor invalidate any contract to which the said city or incorporated town may be a party before such change.

POWERS.

613. Enumerated. 454. Cities and towns organized as provided in this chapter shall be bodies politic and corporate under such name and style as they may select at the time of their organization, and may sue or be sued; contract or be contracted with; acquire and hold property, real and personal; have a common seal which they may change and alter at pleasure, and have such other privileges as are incident to municipal corporations of like character or degree not inconsistent with the laws of the state. [R., § 1047; C., '51, § 664.]

Extent of powers: Cities have no inherent jurisdiction to make laws or adopt regulations of government. They are governments of enumerated powers, acting by delegated authority, and are therefore different from state legislatures, which may exercise such powers of government coming within a certain designation of legislative power as the constitution does not expressly or impliedly prohibit: Keokuk v. Scroggs, 39-447.

Cities can exercise such powers as are expressly granted and such implied ones as are necessary to make available the powers expressly conferred and essential to effect the purposes of the corporation, and these powers are strictly construed: Ibid.

Only such powers and rights can be exercised under a grant of power to a municipal corporation as are clearly comprehended in the words of the act or derived therefrom by necessary implication, regard being had to the object of the grant: Clark v. Davenport, 14-494.

A municipal corporation can possess and exercise the following powers and no others: first, those granted in express words; second, those necessarily implied or necessarily incident to the powers expressly granted; third, those absolutely essential to the declared objects and purposes of the corporation: Merriam v. Moody's Ex'rs, 25-163; Hanger v. Des Moines, 52-193; Clark v. Des Moines, 19-199.

Any doubt or ambiguity arising from the terms used by the legislature in a grant of power to a municipal corporation must be resolved against the existence of the power and in favor of the public: Clark v. Davenport, 14-494; Merriam v. Moody's Ex'rs, 25-163;

State v. Smith, 31-493; Keokuk v. Scroggs, 39-447; Logan v. Pyne, 43-524.

Power of a municipal corporation to provide for the accomplishment of certain results does not necessarily impose upon it a liability for their imperfect accomplishment: Vanhorn v. Des Moines, 63-447.

Liability for acts of officers: The city is not liable for neglect or non-feasance of its officers or agents in exercising the powers conferred: Ogg v. Lansing, 35-495.

A municipal corporation will not be liable for the acts of its officers which it has no power to authorize: Field v. Des Moines, 39-575.

A city is not liable for the acts of its officers in attempting to enforce police regulations. As it cannot authorize them to do an unlawful act, neither can it become liable for such act by ratification: Calwell v. Boone, 51-687.

The fact, that the officers of an incorporated town engage in doing an act in violation of its ordinances, without effort being made to prevent their doing such act, will not render the corporation liable for damages: Ball v. Woodbine, 61-83.

Where a peddler was arrested under an ordinance which was void, and suffered the penalty imposed thereunder without proper action to defeat the infliction of the penalty and without appeal, held, that he had afterwards no right of action against the city for the amount paid by him: Trescott v. Waterloo, 26 Fed. Rep., 592.

As to liability of city for malfeasance or negligence of its officers in regard to street improvements, see notes to § 624.

As to liability for loss from failure of water supply, see notes to § 641.

614. 455. All municipal corporations organized under this chapter shall have the general powers and privileges, and be subject to the rules and restrictions granted and prescribed in the succeeding section. [R., § 1056.]

615. Nuisances, riots, gaming houses, markets. 456. They shall have power to prevent injury or annoyance from anything dangerous, offensive, or unhealthy, and to cause any nuisance to be abated; to regulate the transportation and keeping of gunpowder or other combustibles, and to provide or license magazines for the same; to prevent and punish fast or immoderate riding or driving of horses through the streets; to regulate the speed of trains and locomotives on railways running over the streets or through the limits of the city or incorporated town by ordinance, and enforce the same by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars; to establish and regulate markets; to provide for the measuring or weighing of hay, coal, or any other article of sale; to prevent any riots, noise, disturbance, or disorderly assemblages; to suppress and restrain disorderly houses, houses of ill-fame, billiard tables, nine or ten pin alleys, or tables and ball alleys, and to authorize the destruction of all instruments or devices used for purposes of gaming, and to protect the property of the corporation and its inhabitants and to preserve peace and order therein. [R., § 1057.]

Nuisances: The power given by this section in relation to nuisances is to abate them, and in the exercise of this power a city cannot provide for the punishment by fine of one who maintains a nuisance: Nevada v. Hutchins, 59-506.

The power to abate nuisances does not enable the council to determine conclusively that a particular thing constitutes a nuisance; and if it orders the removal of a thing which is in fact not a nuisance, the person causing its removal will be individually liable in damages: Cole v. Kessler, 64-59.

The power to suppress does not imply the power to punish, and must be exercised in such way that suppression shall be the direct, and not merely the incidental, result of the exercise of power: Chariton v. Barber, 54-360.

Markets; power as to markets: The power given to a city to establish and regulate markets necessarily carries with it the power to prohibit the sale of meat, etc., at other times and places than those provided for: Davenport v. Kelley, 7-102.

The city may authorize an individual to erect a market building upon private property and lease stalls therein, and treat such building as a public market, prohibiting sales at other places: Le Claire v. Davenport, 13-210.

The city may provide that any person who shall use or keep any stall in the market for the purpose of selling meat or provisions without authority of law shall be subject to a penalty: State v. Leiber, 11-407.

The lease of a stall in a city market may be made by the city without regard to the prohibitions or requirements relating to the sale of real estate by the city: Dubuque v. Miller, 11-583.

The power here given to regulate markets and provide for the measuring and weighing of articles for sale implies that the corporation is empowered to do all things essential and necessary to the proper exercise of the power expressly provided, and the corporation may therefore declare that certain scales shall be deemed city scales, appoint a weigh-master, and make it unlawful to sell certain articles unless weighed upon such scales: Davis v. Anita, 73-325.

The power to establish and regulate markets does not authorize the city to pass an ordinance to prevent the peddling of meats until it has established a meat market, and not then unless it may be as a regulation of the market: Burlington v. Dankwardt, 73-170.

Obstruction of streets: Under an ordinance giving the cars of a street railway precedence over other vehicles, and providing that any persons unnecessarily obstructing the running of such cars should be punished by fine, held, that where there was no impediment to the removal of a vehicle from the track of a street railway, the owner, failing to remove it, and thereby impeding the running of a car, was subject to a fine, although such removal would cause him inconvenience and the obstruction was intended to be but for a few moments: State v. Foley, 31-527.

The city council may require the removal of scales erected in the street for the purpose of carrying on a private business: Emerson v. Babcock, 66-257.

As to shade-trees in streets, see § 1503 and notes.

Disorderly houses, gambling, etc.: Under the authority here given to prevent riots, disturbances, disorderly assemblages, etc., the city may provide that the keeping of any houses within the city limits where loud or unusual noises are permitted, or where persons are permitted to congregate and engage in the use of profane and vulgar language to the disturbance of others, shall be considered and punished as a common nuisance: Centerville v. Miller, 57-56; Centerville v. Miller, 57-225.

The authority to repress and restrain disorderly houses may be exercised by providing for the punishment of persons entering such houses or being found there: State v. Botkin, 71-87.

An ordinance providing for the punishment of persons found in disorderly houses is not invalid by reason of the fact that defendant might prove he was lawfully there. Such fact may be shown as a defense: Ibid.

The authority to destroy all instruments or devices used for the purposes of gaming does not confer power to punish any one or prescribe penalties for permitting gambling or engaging therein: New Hampton v. Conroy, 56-498.

Authority to suppress gambling does not give authority to punish such act as a misdemeanor: Mt. Pleasant v. Breeze, 11-399.

The power given to suppress and restrain

616. Danger from fire. 457. They shall have power to make regulations against danger from accidents by fire, to establish fire districts, and, on petition of the owners of two-thirds of the grounds included in any square or block, to prohibit the erection thereon of any building or any addition to any building, unless the outer walls thereof be made of brick and mortar, or of iron and stone and mortar, and to provide for the removal of any building or additions erected contrary to such prohibition. [R., § 1058; 12 G. A., ch. 106.]

[As to power of board of public works to require fire-proof buildings, etc., see § 895. As to power of cities of first class to establish fire limits, etc., see § 818.]

An ordinance of the city passed under the authority of this section, authorizing the destruction of private buildings to prevent the spread of fire does not make a corporation liable for property so destroyed: Field v. Des Moines, 39-575.

An ordinance establishing fire limits, and prohibiting the erection of wooden buildings within such limits, cannot be legally passed except in accordance with the provisions of this section: Des Moines v. Gilchrist, 67-210.

houses of ill-fame, and, under § 660, to make ordinances to improve the morals, etc., of the inhabitants, does not authorize a city to pass an ordinance to punish the keeping of a house of ill-fame: Chariton v. Barber, 54-360.

But a municipal corporation does have authority, under this section, to provide by ordinance for the punishment of intoxication: Bloomfield v. Trimble, 54-399.

The power to suppress or restrain billiard tables may be exercised by way of license: Burlington v. Lawrence, 42-681.

Nor can the council prohibit the keeping or maintaining of lumber yards or wood yards within the fire limits: Ibid.

The power to establish fire limits is not included in the power given to establish fire districts: Ibid.

An ordinance with reference to prevention of fires, held, in a particular case, to be beyond the powers conferred upon a city by special charter, with reference to providing against calamities by fire: Keokuk v. Scroggs, 39-447.

617. Burial of the dead. 458. They shall have power to regulate the burial of the dead; to provide without the limits of the corporation places for the interment of the dead, to prevent any sub-interments within such limits and to cause any body interred contrary to such prohibition to be taken up and buried without the limits of the corporation. [R., § 1060.]

618. Animals running at large. 459. They shall have power to restrain and regulate the running at large of cattle, horses, swine, sheep, and other animals within the limits of the corporation, and to authorize the distraining, impounding, and sale of the same for the penalty incurred and costs of the proceeding, to prevent the running at large of dogs and injuries therefrom, and to authorize the destruction of the same when at large contrary to any prohibition to that effect. [R., § 1061.]

Animals which are not permitted to run at large within a city, upon coming within its limits from without, may be taken up and dealt with in accordance with the ordinances of the city, although their owner may live outside the city and where such animals are permitted by law to be at large: Gosselink v. Campbell, 4-296.

619. Theatrical exhibitions. 460. They shall have power to regulate or prohibit all theatrical exhibitions of whatever name or nature, for which money or any other reward is in any manner demanded or received; but lectures on scientific, historical, or literary subjects shall not come within the provisions of this section. [R., § 1062.]

620. Public library. 461. The establishment and maintenance of a free public library is hereby declared to be a proper and legitimate object of municipal expenditure; and the council or trustees of any city or incorporated town may appropriate money for the formation and maintenance of such a library, open to the free use of all its inhabitants under proper regulations, and for the purchase of land and erection of buildings, or for the hiring of buildings or rooms suitable for that purpose, and for the compensation of the necessary employees: provided, that the amount appropriated in any one year for the maintenance of such a library shall not exceed one mill upon the dollar upon the assessed valuation of such city or town. Any such city or incorporated town may receive, hold, or dispose of any and all gifts, donations, devises, and bequests that may be made to such city or incorporated town for the purpose of establishing, increasing, or improving any such public library; and the city or town council thereof may apply the use, profits, proceeds, interests, and rents accruing therefrom, in such manner as will best promote the prosperity and utility of such library. Every city or incorporated town, in which such a public library shall be maintained, shall be entitled to receive a copy of the laws, journals, and all other works published by authority of the state after the establishment of such library, for the use of such library, and the secretary of state is hereby authorized and required to furnish the same from year to year to such city or incorporated town. But no appropriation of money can be made under this section, unless the proposition is submitted to a vote of the people; and at the municipal election of such city or town, the question, "Shall the city (or town council, as the case may be) accept the benefit of the provisions of this section." [13 G. A., ch. 45; 14 G. A., ch. 17.]

[Additional powers to levy a tax for public library purposes are given to cities of the first class by § 820.]

621. Auctioneers and transient merchants. 462. They shall have power to regulate and license sales by auctioneers and transient merchants within their corporate limits, provided, that the exercise of the power shall not interfere with sales made by sheriffs, constables, coroners, marshals, executors, guardians, assignees of insolvent debtors or bankrupts, or any other person required by law to sell real or personal property. [9 G. A., ch. 97.]

The legislature may confer upon a city power to tax transient merchants doing business in the city: Mt. Pleasant v. Clutch, 6-546.

This section gives general power to regulate and license sales by auctioneers, etc.: Decorah v. Dunstan, 38-96.

A resident merchant, engaged in selling goods at retail, who employs an auctioneer to sell part of his goods, is not an auctioneer in such sense that he can be compelled to pay a license under this section: Oskaloosa v. Tulliss, 25-440.

An ordinance discriminating in favor of resident merchants of the city as against other merchants of the state or non-resident merchants, or in favor of those selling goods of domestic manufacture and against those selling goods of foreign make, by imposing a license tax upon the latter which is not required of the former, is unconstitutional: Marshalltown v. Blum, 58-184; Pacific Junction v. Dyer, 64-38.

As to peddlers, see notes to next section.

622. Regulations; licenses. 463; 16 G. A., ch. 24; 19 G. A., ch. 136. They shall have power to regulate, license or prohibit the sale of horses or other domestic animals at auction in the streets, alleys or public places; to regulate, license and tax all carts, wagons, drays, coaches, hacks, omnibusses, and every description of conveyance kept for hire; to regulate, license and tax taverns, restaurants, eating houses; to regulate, license and tax or prohibit beer and wine saloons, but no license issued therefor shall extend beyond the first day of May following the grant thereof; to regulate, license and tax or prohibit billiard saloons, pool tables, and all other tables kept for hire, ten-pin or other ball alleys, shooting galleries or places; to regulate and license pawn-brokers and peddlers; to regulate, license or prohibit circuses, menageries, theaters, shows, and exhibitions of all kinds, except such as may be exempted by the general laws of the state; and to regulate or prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors not prohibited by the laws of the state. [R., § 1063; 12 G. A., ch. 154, § 1.]

[The provisions of §§ 613 to 622, inclusive, are made applicable to cities under special charter: See § 908. Further powers of a similar character are given to cities of the first class by

§ 725, and to cities in general by §§ 731-740. Municipal corporations are given power to regulate or prohibit sale of liquors within two miles of corporate limits: See § 2421.]

Power to license: Neither the power to tax nor the power to regulate gives the right to license. So held in case of taverns, etc., under this section: Burlington v. Bumgardner, 42-673.

But under the power to prohibit the sale of wine, beer, etc., the city may impose a license: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47-597.

The power to license does not authorize taxation for revenue. Licenses are a part of the police regulations and should be charged for as such; and while a court may interfere if the sum charged as license is unjust or oppressive, or levied for the purpose of raising revenue, yet where it does not appear that the charges fixed by the corporation for the expense and enforcement of the license and the protection of the person licensed, under police regulations connected with or growing out of the license, are not necessary and proper, the court will not interfere: Burlington v. Putnam Ins. Co., 31-102.

The right to fix the charge for the license, which is vested in the city, will also authorize it to vary the amount with different parties as may be deemed prudent and just: Ibid.

Where an ordinance of a city assumes the power to license, and declares that licenses shall be taken by certain persons, the council may by resolution fix the amount to be charged: Ibid.

Where the city has power to impose a license it may leave the amount thereof within certain limits to the discretion of the mayor: Decorah v. Dunstan, 38-96.

A municipal corporation can exercise no power of taxation such as here contemplated unless it be expressly conferred by the legislature or absolutely necessary to carry out some other power expressly conferred, and in case of doubt the power will be denied: State v. Smith, 31-493.

Peddlers: While the power to regulate and license peddlers is given to cities, such power can be exercised only under an ordinance, and if an ordinance is passed for such purpose, and is such that the court must, upon mere examination, declare it unreasonable, it is void: State Center v. Barenstein, 66-249.

A charter authorizing a city to license and tax peddlers, etc., and bankers, dealers in money and notes and other evidence of indebtedness, and warrants of all kinds, held not to authorize the city to impose a license on insurance agents: State v. Smith, 31-493.

Therefore, held, that an ordinance authorizing the mayor, at his discretion, to charge peddlers a license of from one to twenty-five dollars, without stipulating the terms of such license, was unreasonable and void: Ibid.

Taking orders for goods to be manufactured does not constitute the person taking such orders a peddler requiring a license under an ordinance for the licensing of peddlers: Spencer v. Whiting, 68-678.

Also, held, that a particular sale of articles to one person on his request, such articles not being offered in general, nor to other persons, did not constitute the seller a peddler: Ibid.

Regulation of sale of liquors: Previous to the adoption of the present prohibitory statute, held, that a city might prohibit the sale of liquors which were not prohibited by state law under the statute then existing: Burlington v. Kellar, 18-59.

And that the statutory provisions giving the power to regulate the sale of such liquors were neither special nor local laws, nor an improper delegation of legislative authority: State v. King, 37-462.

Where a general law exists prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, a charter giving to the city an exclusive authority to license the sale of liquors will not confer upon such city an exclusive power to punish the violation of the general statute: State v. Gurlock, 14-444.

A city or town has no authority to provide a penalty for the sale of intoxicating liquors, the sale of which is prohibited by statute: Foster v. Brown, 55-686; New Hampshire v. Couroy, 56-498; Cantril v. Sainer, 59-26.

Where an ordinance prohibited the sale of liquors, some of which the municipality had the power to regulate the sale of, while the sale of others was prohibited by general statute, held, the ordinance would be supported and enforced so far as within the lawful authority of the corporation: Eldora v. Burlingame, 62-32.

Licenses for the sale of liquors not prohibited by general statute are not contracts between the city and the person licensed, but are merely temporary permits to do what would otherwise be an offense, issued in the exercise of police power and subject to the direction of government, which may revoke them as it deems fit: Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61-672.

Whether in case of a revocation of the license the person licensed would, in a proper proceeding, be entitled to have refunded to him the pro rata proportion of the license paid, quere: Ibid.

A license tax paid to a city for the privilege of selling intoxicating liquors cannot, after the enjoyment of the license for the period stipulated therein, be recovered back upon the ground that the statute under which it was granted has been declared unconstitutional: Kraft v. Keokuk, 14-86.

As to statute authorizing city to regulate sale of liquor within two miles of the city limits, see § 2421.

623. Streets, alleys, public grounds, and railways. 464; 15 G. A., ch. 6. They shall have power to lay off, open, widen, straighten, narrow, vacate, extend, establish and light streets, alleys, public grounds, wharves, landing, and market places, and to provide for the condemnation of such real estate as may be necessary for such purposes. They shall also have the power to authorize or forbid the location and laying down of tracks for railways and street railways on all streets, alleys, and public places; but no railway track can thus be located and laid down until after the injury to property abutting upon the street, alley, or public places upon which such railway track is proposed to be located and laid down has been ascertained and compensated in the manner provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement in chapter four of title ten of the code of 1873. [R., § 1064.]

Eminent domain: The city does not have the power of eminent domain except as expressly granted by statute: Field v. Des Moines, 39-575.

Under the provisions of a city charter authorizing the appointment of commissioners to assess damages for taking private property by a city, held, that the city council could not, after having appointed commissioners for that purpose, set aside the report made by them, and appoint new commissioners to assess the same damages: State ex rel. v. Keokuk, 9-438.

A railway company, lessee of another company under a lease which may be perpetual at the election of the lessee, has such an interest in property owned by the lessor that it should be a party to proceedings to condemn such property for city purposes: Storm Lake v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 62-218.

Location of streets: The action of a city council, in determining whether the location of a street is demanded by the public interest, cannot be questioned by judicial proceedings: Cherokee v. Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot, etc., Co., 52-279.

Diversion of travel from other streets cannot be taken into consideration in estimating the damage to property from the opening of a street: Ibid.

The fact that a city has power to open and vacate streets will not render it liable for failure to keep a street open and in repair, whereby travel is diverted from a ferry outside of the city limits: Prosser v. Ottumwa, 42-509.

The power of the state to establish highways within the limits of cities or incorporated towns is not vested in the board of supervisors: Gallagher v. Head, 72-173.

Vacation of streets: The city council has authority to vacate streets and alleys, and may exercise such power simply by the enactment of an ordinance calculated to effect that object. This power is not limited by the provisions of § 997, relating to the method of vacating streets and alleys in a plat: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66-687.

The city council has the power to divert the ground covered by an alley which is vacated from a public to a private use by granting it to a private individual: Ibid.

The city council may vacate an alley for the purpose of allowing it to be devoted to a private use, if the power is in other respects rightfully exercised, and no private rights are injuriously affected: Marshalltown v. Corney, 61-578.

Where the power to vacate streets is wisely and discreetly used, its exercise will not be restrained at the suit of a private individual claiming to be injured: Gray v. Iowa Land Co., 26-387.

It seems that the general assembly may authorize a city to vacate streets, although under its charter as existing at the time of dedication of the streets no such power existed. It is doubtful, at least, if a property owner can have such vested interest in streets as to prevent such vacation: Stubenrauch v. Neyenesch, 54-567.

Action of the city council in vacating streets cannot be interfered with by proceedings in equity. Certiorari is the proper remedy: Ibid.

The burden is upon plaintiff seeking to enjoin the vacation of a street to prove that he had rights at the time the street was vacated which were abridged by such vacation: Sawyer v. Meyer, 45-152.

A city having authority to vacate streets cannot be made to respond in damages for injuries resulting therefrom to an adjoining property owner: Barr v. Oskaloosa, 45-275.

The vacation of a street is not such taking of private property as to entitle a property owner to compensation for any loss resulting therefrom: Ibid.

The power to vacate streets being vested in the city, it can be exercised only by the council or trustees; parol evidence of abandonment is not competent: Lathrop v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-105.

The power to narrow or widen or vacate a street is practically unlimited when it is exercised for the public good, but it cannot be arbitrarily exercised, and is subject to equitable control. However, an abutting lot owner cannot upon slight grounds prevent the accomplishment of that which is a material benefit to the public, and the decision of the city council will ordinarily be conclusive as to the question whether the vacation of a street is for the public good. In a particular case, held, that the damage to abutting property owners was not such as to justify overruling the action of the city council: Williams v. Carey, 73-194.

The proper steps having been taken for vacation of streets by owners of property in a plat (as contemplated by § 999), such vacation becomes effective as against the city, subject only to the judicial determination as to whether the rights of private persons are affected. The city council cannot, by subsequently directing such street to be opened, affect the validity of such vacation: Conner v. Iowa City, 66-419.

The fact that the vacation of a portion of a plat will close streets therein, and thus abridge the number of ways of access to the property of the proprietor of another portion of the plat, will not be ground for objecting to such vacation, if one or more ways are left, reasonably convenient, so that no substantial right is abridged: Lorenzen v. Preston, 53-580.

Abandonment of streets: A city cannot authorize streets dedicated to public use to be closed. This can only be done lawfully after they are vacated in the manner prescribed by law. The fact that, after dedication is made, the public does not use the streets, does not of itself authorize the party making the dedication to resume possession of the land: Prince v. McCoy, 40 532.

If streets are in such condition that they are incapable of use, an injunction cannot be maintained by one who has no other right than as one of the general public to prevent them from being temporarily inclosed for private purposes: Ibid.

Where plaintiff had held possession of property for thirty years under claim of right, and the city had made no attempt or claim to occupy the same as a street, held, that any right of the city to use the property for a street must be regarded as abandoned: Samplol v. Dubuque (e 4) 676.

The severance of a portion of the territory of a city it would seem, would operate as an extinguishment of the rights of the corporation in the streets and alleys: McKean v. Mt. Vernon, 51-306.

The city council may authorize the laying of a railway track along an alley in accordance with statutory authority, although the effect thereof may be to close the alley for other purposes: Heath v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 51-11.

As to title to streets, dedication, abandonment, etc.: see notes to § 996.

Lighting: A city cannot be enjoined at the suit of a taxpayer from contracting for electric lighting, although there is an existing contract for lighting by gas: Searl v. Abraham, 73 507.

Right to locate railways upon streets: Since the change made in Code, § 1262, by 15 G. A., ch. 47 (see § 1930), the power to authorize the laying down of tracks for street and other railways, and the use of steam motors thereon, does not exist except as here given, the earlier case of Milburn v. Cedar Rapids, 12-243, and many cases following it, being no longer applicable: Stanley v. Davenport, 64-163; Stange v. Hill & West Dubuque St. R. Co., 54-669.

The provisions of this section are not applicable to cities acting under special charter: Ibid.; Simplot v. Chicago, M. & St. P. St. Co., 5 McCray, 138.

An ordinance authorizing the construction of railway tracks upon city streets, without making the right to occupy such streets conditional upon payment of damages as required by statute, does not confer any rights upon the railway company: Stange v. Dubuque, 62-703.

Where the fee of the street is in the city for the use and benefit of the public, the general assembly has the control thereof, and may prescribe the terms and conditions under which the public may use such streets: Sears v. Marshalltown Street R. Co., 65-742.

Consent by city council: The statute does not prescribe the manner by which authority may be granted to a railroad company to construct its track upon the streets of the city, and such authority may be given by resolution duly passed, or by vote duly taken, appearing in the proper record of the city: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-105.

The city council may authorize the laying of a railway track over an alley, although the effect may be to prevent the use of the alley for other purposes. Whether the same rule would apply in case of a street, quere: Heath v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61-11.

But the city council is not authorized to devote an alley to a railway track for the private benefit of some individual; and the fact that leave has been granted to lay the track over an alley for purely private benefit will not prevent a subsequent grant of a right to a railway company to lay a track through such alley for public use: Ibid.

The city having been given by this section the power to grant the right to lay down a railway track over its streets, all else in connection therewith is a matter of detail and within the discretion of the city, subject only to equitable control and proper police regulations: O'Neil v. Lamb, 53-795.

Compensation to property owners: A railway which has been located over the streets of a city, at a time when compensation to adjacent property owners for such use of the street was not required, cannot lay new switches and side tracks in connection with such railway, without making compensation: Drady v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 57-393; Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-105.

The statutory provisions requiring compensation apply to a railroad authorized by ordinance and partly constructed prior to the time that the change in the statute went into effect: Mulholland v. Des Moines, A. & W. R. Co., 60-740; Hanson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 61-588.

Where a railway company had commenced the use of its track constructed under permission granted by the city council before the statutory change requiring compensation, held, that it could not afterward be made liable for damages to abutting lot owners: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-105.

When the road is located upon private property and not upon a street an abutting owner cannot recover damages resulting from the ordinary operation of the road: Edward v. Burlington & N. R. Co., 66-410. Nor can damages be recovered from the city in such a case for injuries from an embankment: Callahan v. Des Moines, 63-705.

The provisions as to making compensation for injury to property abutting on a street upon which a railway track is proposed to be located are only applicable to property owners whose property abuts upon the portion of the street occupied by the track, and not to owners of property abutting upon a street which is merely crossed by the track: Morgan v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 64-589.

The damages to be allowed to an abutting property owner by reason of the construction of a track over a street are not limited to damages arising from a change of grade, but extend to all legitimate damages which are contemplated in other provisions for condemning the right of way: Drady v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 57-393.

In estimating the damages caused by the operation of a steam railway along a street where damages to the property owner have not been previously assessed and paid, the fact that such operation has diverted travel from the street may be shown in evidence as showing the manner in which the rental value of the property has been diminished, and for the purpose of ascertaining the measure of damage: Stange v. Dubuque, 62-303.

In an action for such damages all the facts attending the use and operation of the railroad may properly be given in evidence as bearing upon the effect of the operation of the road on the rental value of the property: such, for instance, as annoyance to the occupants of the property by noise, escape of fire from engines, etc.: Wilson v. Des Moines, O. & S. R. Co., 67-509.

In a proceeding to assess damages to abutting property by reason of the location and operation of a railway upon a street, the property owner is entitled to be compensated for injuries which he will sustain on account both of the laying down of the track in the street on which his property abuts, and of the appropriation of his land, if any, which is taken for right of way purposes: McClellan v. Chicago, I. & D. R. Co., 67-568.

The provisions of this section as to the manner of assessment of damages resulting from the location of a railway upon the streets of a city refer exclusively to the company and not to the abutting owner: such owner does not have any interest in the fee of the street, and he cannot take steps to have his damages assessed by a sheriff's jury according to the provisions applicable where property is taken for right of way; therefore, he may bring action for damages without such proceeding: Mulholland v. Des Moines, A. & W. R. Co., 60-740.

The provision with reference to assessing damages for laying a railroad track through the streets refers exclusively to the railroad company and not to the abutting owners. The latter cannot have his damages assessed in that manner: Stough v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-641.

As the abutting property owner is not authorized to cause his damages to be assessed, and the corporation alone can institute the proceedings, an action by the property owner may be maintained for damages accruing to him before the assessment is made: Wilson v. Des Moines, O. & S. R. Co., 67-509.

A right of action for injuries to an abutting property owner accrues at once and is entire, and must be brought in five years. Such a right of action does not pass to the grantee under a conveyance made subsequent to the time when the right of action accrues, and, without an assignment of such cause of action to him, grantee can maintain no action for such injuries: Pratt v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 72-249; Jolly v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 72-739.

Special damages: A railway company which so negligently builds its track over the streets of a city, or so occupies such streets, as to create a nuisance, is liable in damages to any one suffering therefrom special injury not common to the whole public: Park v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 43-636; Frith v. Dubuque, 45-406.

It is immaterial in such case whether the party injured owns the fee in the street or not: Cattle v. Muscatine Western R. Co., 44-11; Frith v. Dubuque, 45-406; Cain v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 54-255.

If a railway, therefore, be constructed in a careless, improper and negligent manner, to the injury of an abutting property owner, he may recover damages, provided his injury be special: Cain v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 54-255.

So the city may, by ordinance, make and enforce reasonable restrictions, and a use of the street in violation of such restrictions will be a nuisance for which a person sustaining special damage may recover: Ibid.

The city is not liable for damages resulting from the laying down of tracks, etc., under permission granted by it: Frith v. Dubuque, 45-406.

Although a railway company is liable for negligence in failing to keep its crossings where the track intersects the street in proper condition, such liability does not relieve the city from liability for injuries arising from such defect in its streets: Fowler v. Strawberry Hill, 74-614.

As to the measure of damages in such cases, see Cattle v. Muscatine W. R. Co., 44-11; Frith v. Dubuque, 45-406; O'Connor v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 56-735; Kucheman v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 46-366.

Equitable control: The doctrine of equitable control over the use of the streets by railway companies, which was recognized when such companies had the right to use the streets of cities for railway purposes without compensation to property owners, or consent of the city, has now no application: Heath v. Des Moines & St. Louis E. Co., 61-11.

Street railways: Aside from any special provision in the city charter, it may be regarded as the doctrine of this state that the city may authorize the construction of a street railway in its streets: Damour v. Lyons, 44-276.

The provision that a railway track can be located and laid down only upon damages to abutting owners being paid does not apply to street railways, and the city council may authorize the location of such tracks upon the streets without payment of damages caused thereby: Sears v. Marshalltown Street R. Co., 65-712.

In the absence of special authority conferred by the legislature, the city has no authority to authorize the use of a steam motor on a street railway, and it will be liable in damages for injuries resulting from the use of such motor on the streets under its permission: Stanley v. Davenport, 54-463.

As to right to permit use of streets by horse railway, see O'Neil v. Lamb, 53-725.

Under this section a city has the right to grant the exclusive privilege to a reasonable length of time to construct and operate a street railway over any and all streets of the city, but it could not make such exclusive grant in perpetuity. Such a grant to a company to operate a street railway by horse power will not, however, preclude the grant to another company of the right to operate a street railway by other power: Des Moines Street R. Co. v. Des Moines Broad-Gauge Street R. Co., 73-513.

The right to grant an exclusive privilege to operate a street railway did not exist prior to the enactment of this section in the Code of 1873: but held that an ordinance granting such exclusive privilege prior to that time was ratified by action of the city after this section was enacted: Ibid.

Under the decision as to the right of a street railway company under an exclusive charter

624. Grading; sewerage. 465. They shall have power to provide for the grading and repairs of any street, avenue, or alley, and the construction of sewers, and shall defray the expenses of the same out of the general funds of such city or town, but no street shall be graded except the same be ordered to be done by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the city council or trustees. [13 G. A., ch. 65; 14 G. A., ch. 45, § 1.]

[Expense of grading alleys is not to be paid out of the general fund: See § 629.]

Grade of streets: As a rule the base line is to govern as to the grade, but a mistake may be shown in that as well as in other figures: Freeland v. Muscatine, 9-461.

The city is not liable in its corporate capacity for negligence of the engineer in establishing for a private person the grade of a street in accordance with the ordinances of the city: Waller v. Dubuque, 69-541.

A city may be rendered liable by the acts of its officers in making excavations below the established grade: Ibid.

The city is not liable for damages resulting from the grading of its streets, if done in a careful and skilful manner: Ellis v. Iowa City, 29-229.

But the city is liable in such cases if the grading is done in an unskillful manner, as where the natural drainage is destroyed and no means is provided for the escape of surface water: Ibid.; Cotes v. Davenport, 9-227; Templin v. Iowa City, 14-59; Ross v. Clinton, 46-606.

As to change of grade and liability for damages caused thereby, see § 635 and notes.

Damages from surface water: It is the duty of the city, in case of obstructing the natural flow of surface water, to provide waterways sufficient to carry off the water that may reasonably be expected to accumulate, as well as that from floods, freshets, etc.: Damour v. Lyons, 44-276.

An adjoining property owner cannot be held guilty of contributory negligence in building his walls in reference to the grade of the street, nor in storing goods in the cellar which is not subject to being flooded if the city does not allow the street to become obstructed: Ibid.

A municipal corporation in raising the grade of a street is under obligation to provide at least temporary means of escape for surface water to prevent its being backed upon adjoining property: Cotes v. Davenport, 9-227.

How long this escape must be kept open, and whether the closing of the means so provided is an act of negligence, are questions of fact for the jury: Ross v. Clinton, 46-606.

to lay its track over the streets of a city, held, that acts of the officers of the city in attempting to prevent the company from doing so were a violation of the injunction in that case: Des Moines Street R. Co. v. Des Moines Broad-Gauge R. Co., 75-585.

A grant to a street railway company of the exclusive right to operate a street railway over streets of the city by animal power does not prevent the grant to another company of the right to operate street cars by other power: Teachout v. Des Moines Broad-Gauge St. R. Co., 75-722.

It is the duty of the city to provide waterways sufficient to carry off the water that might reasonably be expected to accumulate, judging by such floods as have previously occurred; and where it appeared that there had been two previous storms of equal severity, held, that the finding that the rainfall was not unusual was not contrary to the evidence: Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50-197.

A city is not ordinarily, if ever, liable for failure to provide culverts or gutters adequate to keep the surface water off from adjoining lots below grade, particularly if the injury would not have occurred had the lots been filled up to a level with the street: Freiburg v. Davenport, 63-119.

As between a property owner and the city, the property owner is required, in order to protect himself from accumulation of surface water, to raise his lot to grade, and the same principle must obtain between adjoining owners: Phillips v. Waterhouse, 69-199.

A city is under no obligation to raise the lots to the line of grade of the streets, nor chargeable with the duty of keeping such lots free from overflow of water. The lot owner may escape annoyance or loss by such overflow by filling his lot to grade, or constructing sewers and sluices, but the city is not liable for the failure to drain such lots: Gilfeather v. Council Bluffs, 69-310.

A city is not liable for damages resulting from obstruction of overflow water as it is from the obstruction of water flowing in the natural channel: Morris v. Council Bluffs, 67-343.

The supreme court has never gone further in maintaining the property owner in the right to protection against surface water than to hold that the city must provide temporary means of escape therefor. But it has on the other hand held that an owner of a lot below grade must take notice of any exposure by bringing the street to grade, and must exercise reasonable diligence to protect himself by bringing his own lot to a corresponding grade: Ibid.

Liability for failure to repair: Being clothed with the power to establish and keep in repair its streets, the exercise of such power is not discretionary, and a city is liable to an action for damages resulting from an injury caused by a failure in that respect, as, for instance, by reason of an obstruction from snow and ice: Collins v. Council Bluffs, 32-324; or by reason of an obstruction upon the sidewalk placed there by the adjoining owner: Rowell v. Williams, 29-210.

Further as to sidewalks, see infra.

Where the city makes improvements and property owners build, etc., with reference thereto, the city is liable for neglect to keep such improvements in repair, although they would not be liable originally for not making the improvements. So held in case of damages from the obstruction of a sewer: Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50-197.

A city is liable for injuries received by reason of a hole in its street of which the street commissioner has been notified prior to the injury: Case v. Waverly, 36-545.

The fact that the municipal corporation has no funds with which to make repairs, and that it is indebted beyond the constitutional limit, is no defense in an action against such city for damages received from defects in its sidewalks: Rice v. Des Moines, 40-638.

Failure to make improvements: A city cannot obligate itself by contract to make an improvement which it has a right to make, nor render itself liable in damages for failure to make it, except in so far as it is necessary to make contracts and incur liabilities in the prosecution of the work: Stewart v. Council Bluffs, 50-668; S. C., 58-642.

Negligence in making improvements: Where a municipal corporation has authority to make improvements in streets it is liable for damages occasioned by the improper and negligent manner in which such power is executed: Wallace v. Muscatine, 4 G. Gr., 373.

Where the city, in making an improvement in front of the property of an abutting owner, does so in a negligent and unskillful manner, he may recover damages for injury occasioned thereby, but cannot treat the construction as a nuisance and proceed to abate it by his own acts: McGregor v. Boyle, 34-268.

Where a city makes improvements creating a necessity for a culvert, it would be guilty of negligence in failing to provide such culvert, and in doing so it must exercise reasonable care, judgment and skill in its construction: Van Pelt v. Davenport, 42-308.

The fact that the money for the making of an improvement was appropriated by the county will not release the city making the improvement from liability therefor: Ibid.

While the city has power to change the grade of streets, thereby reducing or elevating their natural surface, yet if in making such change it is negligent, so that adjacent lots are injured, the city is liable for damages: Hendershot v. Ottumwa, 46-658.

Therefore, held, that where, in raising the grade of a street by making an embankment, the earth deposited for that purpose rolled upon an adjoining lot, the city was liable: Ibid.

Allowing a water company to lay its mains will not render the city liable for damages to premises from water caused by the filling up of a ditch by such water company, the granting of such privilege not being in itself negligence: Ross v. Clinton, 46-606.

A party cannot recover damages caused to his property by the act of the city in diverting a stream of water against it, if he might, by ordinary diligence and at a moderate expense, have prevented the damage: Hoehl v. Muscatine, 57-444; Fuller v. Muscatine, 57-457.

The party suffering injury from water by reason of erecting his building where a stream of water has been flowing for ten years cannot recover for injury to his building from such stream, whether he has ever consented to the flow of the stream or not: Hoehl v. Muscatine, 57-444.

Where negligent and reckless driving over a street that is out of repair causes an injury the driving is deemed the proximate cause and the city will not be liable for damages resulting: De Camp v. Sioux City, 74-392.

The township trustees cannot include an incorporated town in a road district, and the road supervisor has no authority over its streets. For an accident resulting from acts of such supervisor in repairing such streets the town is liable: Clark v. Epworth, 56-462.

Acts or negligence of officers: A municipal corporation is liable for the malfeasance or neglect of its agents in the construction of public works on the same principle that a natural person is liable for damages resulting from his carelessness, unskillfulness or wrongdoing: Templin v. Iowa City, 14-59; Cotes v. Davenport, 9-227.

If by mistake or error of judgment on the part of proper officers who are competent and act in good faith an improvement is made in such manner that injury results therefrom the city will not be held responsible therefor: Van Pelt v. Davenport, 42-308.

Although the city acts through its officers in making improvements, and is bound by their negligence, yet it is not liable for a mere mistake or error of judgment in making an improvement, if reasonable skill, prudence and care be exercised; but it may be liable for negligence in allowing an obstruction to remain after it has been shown to be such: Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50-197.

The instruction that in constructing culverts, sewers, etc., a municipal corporation is only required to use ordinary care, and that if the city had an engineer competent to take charge of the work, and he planned the sewers, etc., and honestly believed them to be of sufficient capacity, the city would not be liable for mistakes therein, held, properly refused where there was no evidence to support it: Parker v. Des Moines, 53-679.

Where a municipal corporation is vested with full power to construct an improvement, and its location or the general plan adopted is within the exclusive control of the municipality, it cannot be held liable for improper exercise of judgment in the execution of the plan: Wicks v. De Witt, 54-130.

Where a municipal corporation in exercising the right to grade, protect and improve its streets and construct necessary bridges, etc., acts in good faith in the adoption of plans of skillful and competent engineers and workmen, it is not liable for an unforeseen and unexpected damage resulting from the diversion of a stream by reason of such improvement, where such damage results notwithstanding the exercise of reasonable caution, prudence and skill: Fulleam v. Muscatine, 57-457.

Proof of a custom in a certain city of barricading excavations in the streets in any particular manner is not receivable for the purpose of showing or rebutting negligence in the particular case. A custom will not render it necessary for the city to do more, nor excuse it for doing less, than is required in the exercise of ordinary care: Koester v. Ottumwa, 34-41.

A municipal corporation is not liable beyond the actual damage caused by its negligence. Exemplary, punitive or speculative damages cannot be given: Collins v. Council Bluffs, 35-432.

Obstructions: Where an obstruction from which an injury results is not the mere result of a defect, but is an object entirely foreign to the street itself, the duty of the city is, if it allows such obstruction to remain at all, to see that it is kept in such a situation as that the safety of travelers on the street is not endangered by it; and the fact that at the time the obstruction is first placed on the street it is sufficiently protected will not relieve the city from liability for an injury resulting from a change in the situation, although such change is not known to the city authorities: Duffy v. Dubuque, 63-171.

It is doubtful whether, under any circumstances, a village street should, in law, be regarded as obstructed by vehicles left by farmers along the sides of the street, where their teams are fed. At any rate, a sleigh standing for fifteen minutes at the side of the street, for the purpose of unloading goods, ought not to be regarded as such obstruction: Sikes v. Manchester, 59-65.

Adjacent property owners cannot maintain an action for injunction to prevent the city from changing the bed of a stream so as to make it run, in a part of its course, along a street, it not appearing that the work permanently obstructs the street: McMahon v. Council Bluffs, 12-263.

Unlawful use of streets: The city is responsible for the use of its streets, and liable for damages for injuries resulting from an unlawful use thereof by it, although the council or officers, in permitting such use, aid an unlawful act: Stanley v. Davenport, 54-463.

Dangers adjoining streets: It is the duty of a municipal corporation to protect travelers against passing from its streets into dangers and obstructions, and it is a question for the jury to determine whether the defect or obstruction is so near the highway as to be dangerous to persons traveling thereon: Mandersen v. Dubuque, 29-73.

Approaches to street: A city is not bound to provide a safe way, or any way, by which streets may be entered from private property; and where plaintiff was injured in passing along a private way on to a street where an excavation had been made, held, that the city was not liable: Goodin v. Des Moines, 55-67.

A person who is on the street in the ordinary course of business, although not passing along it at the time, may recover for negligence of the city in allowing an obstruction thereon from which he receives an injury: Duffy v. Dubuque, 63-171.

So held where the person injured had stopped with one foot on the sidewalk and the other upon the ground of an adjoining lot for the purpose of procuring a drink from the hydrant: Ibid.

Defects in portion of the street not traveled: The liability of a city as to the safety of its streets exist not only as to the ordinary traveled part of such street, but also to the gutters and sidewalks; and where a city dug a ditch across a street, and constructed a bridge over the same, held, that it was not only liable for failure to keep the bridge in repair as far as built, but that it must afford a safe and convenient crossing for the ditch of the same width of the street: Rusch v. Davenport, 6-443.

If a street be open for public travel for but a part of its width, and the other part is not in condition to be used by the public, the city will not be chargeable with negligence for failing to improve the whole of the street, or for accidents occurring to those attempting to use the part not improved; but where the whole street is open to use it is the duty of the city to keep it in a reasonably safe condition for the entire width, that is, from sidewalk to sidewalk: Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 57-748.

Where there is nothing in the character of the improvement upon a street to indicate that it is the intention of the city that travel shall be confined to a particular portion thereof, the city will not be relieved from the duty of keeping such street in repair for its entire width: Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 64-251.

Where a street is open for travel its entire width the city is bound to keep it in safe condition from sidewalk to sidewalk, and cannot by an excavation temporarily withdraw it from public use without using proper precautions to prevent travelers at night from driving thereon; and in an action for injuries resulting from the negligence of the city in leaving an excavation in the streets unprotected, it is not competent to show that there was no travel at the point where the excavation was made: Crystal v. Des Moines, 65-502.

The court is not prepared to say that it is the duty of the city to keep every street safe for travel throughout its entire width, regardless of its location, amount of travel and all other circumstances; and held, that the refusal of an instruction, that the law imposes on a municipal corporation the duty to keep its streets in a reasonably safe condition to the whole width of the street, was not error where the jury were instructed that if the street was not safe for persons passing over the same while using reasonable care, and the city had knowledge of the unsafe condition or should have had such knowledge, it was guilty of negligence: Fulliam v. Muscatine, 70-436.

Defects or obstructions in sidewalks: The city is liable for damages occasioned by injuries received by reason of an obstruction upon the sidewalk placed there by the adjoining property owner: Rowell v. Williams, 29-210.

Where an injury results not merely from the dangerous and defective condition of the walk itself, but by reason of a defective scuttle covering constructed for private use of an adjoining property owner, either with or without the authority of the city, the property owner is liable for such injury: Calder v. Smalley, 66-219.

In such case it is immaterial that a tenant in possession of the premises has agreed with the owner thereof to keep the scuttle closed: Ibid.

The construction of ways in a sidewalk to the cellars of adjacent buildings is not necessarily negligence. If such ways are so constructed that when open they are sufficiently conspicuous to be seen by a pedestrian using the sidewalk, in the exercise of proper diligence, or are sufficiently lighted in the nighttime to disclose the danger to such person, it cannot be held that the mere omission to have barriers around them is per se evidence of negligence: Day v. Mt. Pleasant, 70-193.

In an action against a city for damages received from the existence of a cellar-way occupying a part of the sidewalk and left without railing, guard or protection, held, that the question whether the leaving of such cellar-way without other guard or protection than the door thereto was negligence was a question to the jury: Ibid.

Sidewalk constructed by property owner: An allegation in a petition for the recovery of damages for injuries resulting from a defective sidewalk in which it is alleged that such sidewalk had been ordered and caused to be constructed by the corporation is sufficiently supported by proof that the work was done by the property owner. It is a fair presumption that it was done at least with the permission of the city: Barnes v. Newton, 46-567.

To hold a city liable for injuries received from a defective sidewalk it is not necessary to show by evidence that the city built the sidewalk or had assumed control over it: Shannon v. Tama City, 74-22.

Although an incorporated town may not be liable for failure to construct sidewalks, yet where it appears that a sidewalk has been constructed, the corporation becomes liable for failure to maintain it in repair, no matter by whom constructed: Beaman v. Mason City, 78-233.

Frequency of use: The liability of a municipal corporation for injury from a defective sidewalk should not be made dependent upon the probability or frequency of its use by persons not acquainted with its condition. The corporation is bound to maintain its sidewalks in a reasonably safe condition for the protection of such persons as may possibly use them contrary to such assumed probability: Thomas v. Brooklyn, 58-438.

'Stepping off' sidewalk: In determining whether the corporation was liable for injuries received from stepping off the sidewalk into a ditch, held, that the question was not whether the sidewalk was not reasonably safe for the traveling public, but whether, all things considered, it was reasonably safe for plaintiff at the time of the accident, and held, that under the circumstances the accident appeared to have been the result of want of ordinary care on the part of the plaintiff: McLaury v. McGregor, 54-717.

Difficulties: A city is charged with the duty of keeping its streets in reasonable repair, and the difficulties which may attend the performance of that duty will not relieve it from such performance: Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 64-251.

The extent of sidewalk in a city is not to be taken into consideration by the jury in deciding whether the city officer used proper diligence in removing the snow and ice: Lindsay v. Des Moines, 68-368.

Snow and ice: The duty to keep streets in repair requires the city to remove obstructions from deposits of snow. To repair means to restore to a good state after partial destruction. And held, that the city was liable for damages from an injury caused by snow and ice remaining upon a sidewalk after knowledge thereof by the proper officers of the city and sufficient opportunity to remove the same: Collins v. Council Bluffs, 32-324.

The mere fact that a street is in a dangerous condition because of snow and ice rendering the walks and crossings slippery, due to the operation of natural causes, will not render the city liable, even if such snow and ice are not removed within a reasonable time. It is only when they are suffered to remain on the sidewalk in such an uneven and rounded form that a person cannot walk over it, while using due care, without danger of falling down, that such snow and ice constitute a defect for which the city is responsible: Broburg v. Des Moines, 63-523.

Evidence of former negligence: In an action against a city for negligence in permitting an obstruction in a street, held, that evidence that smaller obstructions had often existed at the same place was admissible as showing the need of greater diligence on the part of the city: Moore v. Burlington, 49-136.

In such cases evidence may be introduced of such facts as tended to render the obstruction dangerous: Ibid.

It is the condition of the streets at the time of the injury which determines the city's liability; unsafe condition at a prior time cannot be shown to render it liable: Cramer v. Burlington, 42-315.

Subsequent repairs: In an action for damages sustained from defect in a bridge, where the question is whether the bridge was a city bridge, and under the care and supervision of the city, evidence to show that the city reconstructed and repaired it after the injury occurred is not admissible to show the relation of the city to the bridge at the time of the injury: Holmes v. Hamburg, 47-348.

The fact that a walk was repaired several months after the time of the alleged accident should not be admitted for the purpose of showing that it was probably defective at the time of such accident: Parkhill v. Brighton, 61-103.

Subsequent defective condition: Although the condition of a sidewalk soon after the accident, alleged to have been due to its defective condition, might be of such a character as to indicate that such condition had existed substantially at the time of the accident, yet, where the length of time intervening is such that evidence in respect to a subsequent defective condition would more probably lead to a wrong inference than a correct one, it ought not to be admitted: Ibid.

Notice of defects: Evidence that a plank in a sidewalk was at various times out of place, held sufficient as showing the existence of a notorious defect so as to charge the city with notice thereof: Hollenbeck v. Marshalltown, 62-21.

If the defect is notorious and has remained so a sufficient length of time to enable the city, by reasonable diligence, to know of its existence and to repair it, the law conclusively presumes either that such diligence has been exercised and that the knowledge which such diligence would procure has been acquired, or that the city has been culpably negligent in not employing such diligence: Rice v. Des Moines, 40-638; Montgomery v. Des Moines, 55-101.

Where an injury from the improper method of filling a ditch in the street resulted six weeks after the filling of such ditch, held, that the jury might properly find that if there was any defect it could have been discovered by the city in the exercise of reasonable diligence within that time: Rosenberg v. Des Moines, 41-415.

A municipal corporation is liable for injuries received by reason of a sidewalk having become out of repair and in an unsafe and dangerous condition, if it appears that, knowing it to be in that condition, it was allowed to remain for such length of time that it might, in the exercise of ordinary care and reasonable diligence, have been repaired before the injury: Townsend v. Des Moines, 42-657.

A municipal corporation cannot be held guilty of negligence on account of defects in a sidewalk not arising from its original construction, without express notice of the existence of the defect or obstruction has been brought home to it, or such defect or obstruction has been so notorious as to be observed by all: Doulon v. Clinton, 33-397; Cramer v. Burlington, 39-512.

Therefore proof of the mere existence of a defect in a sidewalk is not enough to establish negligence on the part of the corporation; and in the absence of other evidence of negligence there can be no recovery for injuries received by reason of such defect: Doulon v. Clinton, 33-397.

It is not sufficient to charge the city with notice that two or more citizens of the city knew of the dangerous condition of the walk: Cramer v. Burlington, 39-512.

To render a municipal corporation liable for an injury arising from an obstruction in its streets it must be shown that through its officers it had notice of the obstruction, or that such obstruction had existed so long as to raise a presumption that knowledge thereof was possessed by such officers: Sikes v. Manchester, 59-65.

A city will be liable for injuries received from defects in a sidewalk which, originally constructed in a proper manner, has afterwards become out of repair, if it had actual knowledge of the defect in such time that with the exercise of reasonable diligence it might have repaired the defect and thereby prevented the injury, or if the defect was of such a nature and had existed for such a period of time that with the exercise of ordinary care and diligence in the discharge of its duty it would have learned of its existence in time to have prevented the injury: Cook v. Anamosa, 66-427.

Where a defect is one which is not readily prevented the city will not be charged with notice thereof by reason of existing and apparent defects at a distance from the one which has caused the injury: Ruggles v. Nevada, 63-185; Goodson v. Des Moines, 66-255.

Neither can evidence be introduced against defendant's objection to show that after the accident loose boards were seen upon other parts of the sidewalk: Goodson v. Des Moines, 66-255.

The fact that the defective condition of a plank walk at one point is known to the officers of the city does not affect them with knowledge of its defective condition at a point half a block away, so as to render the city liable for damages resulting from the defective condition at the first point: Conklin v. Marshalltown, 66-122.

A city cannot be held guilty of negligence in not having knowledge that a street is dangerous by reason of accumulations of snow and ice where there is no evidence tending to show that any one observed that the street was in a dangerous condition prior to the time of the accident for which recovery is sought: Broburg v. Des Moines, 63-523.

The city marshal, not being charged by statute or ordinance with any duty with reference to the inspection and repair of streets or sidewalks, notice to him of a defect in a sidewalk is not notice to the city: Cook v. Anamosa, 66-427.

Notice to the mayor or council or the street committee, or the individual members thereof, will effect notice to the city of defects in its streets: Ibid.

In a particular case, held, that the defect was not so apparent that the city was negligent in failing to ascertain its existence before the occurrence of the injury: Ibid.

Notice to members of the city council of the obstruction of a sewer, held sufficient to charge the city with notice thereof; and held that it was not necessary to show that the council while in session expressly authorized the obstruction in order to charge the city with liability therefor: Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50-197.

While a city will be bound by notice of a defect communicated to a member of the city council, such notice must relate to the defect which caused the injury, and a notice to a member of the council of defects which have been repaired before the accident will not charge the city with notice of another defect which does cause the accident, although it occurs at the place where the repairs have been made: Carter v. Monticello, 68-178.

The testimony of travelers or sojourners, as well as of citizens, is competent to show that defects in the streets were so notorious as to charge the city officers with knowledge thereof: Varnham v. Council Bluffs, 52-698.

Contributory negligence of party injured: All that can be demanded of a party in regard to obstructions in the street is ordinary care to avoid them: Hanlon v. Keokuk, 7-488.

A person injured cannot recover for injuries received from the defect in a sidewalk which could have been discovered by the exercise of ordinary care: Cressy v. Postville, 59-62.

In order to recover for an injury resulting from a defect in a street the plaintiff must show that the street was not safe, and that he was in the exercise of ordinary care. But the action may be supported, although the primary cause is an accident which prevents the exercise of care to avoid the injury, if it occurred without the fault of the person injured: Manderschid v. Dubuque, 25-108.

Where there is a defect such as a declivity in the street which is not guarded by railing, and which is so situated that it would be contributory negligence on the part of any one to drive his team over such declivity, and a horse, properly hitched in the street, breaks loose and is injured by running over such declivity, the city is not liable: Moss v. Burlington, 60-438.

Where a resident of a city, having knowledge of an excavation in an unused street, turned his mare at large and she was injured by falling into such excavation, held, that, as he had equal means of knowledge of the danger with the officers of the city, he was equally guilty of negligence, and could not recover: Gribble v. Sioux City, 38-390.

Sidewalks and cross-walks are constructed for foot travelers, and a person who, without some good and sufficient reason, walks elsewhere and is injured, should not be permitted to complain that he has been injured through the fault and negligence of the city: O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 42-539.

On a subsequent trial of the case, held, that facts were shown sufficient to take the case out of the rule therein laid down: O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 52-746.

Where a person undertakes to drive a horse in one direction, while looking and talking in another direction, and no special exigency is shown, such person must be considered as voluntarily assuming the risk of driving against any obstacle in the way, and he cannot be said to be in the exercise of due care, especially when outside of the usually traveled highway, and in the vicinity of a dwelling-house where more or less obstacles are to be found; and held, that it was error to instruct the jury in such case that they might consider the presence of other persons with whom the injured party was conversing, in determining whether such party was negligent in driving against the obstacle: Tuffree v. State Center, 57-553.

Where an obstruction in the street is in plain view of the driver of a vehicle, and his attention is in no manner diverted so as to excuse him from seeing it, and he drives against it or into it, he is guilty of contributing proximately to any injuries which may result: Yahn v. Ottumwa, 60-429.

If the plaintiff knew that it was imprudent to go over a walk, and there was another one by which he could have reached his destination, he is to be considered guilty of contributory negligence in attempting to walk, even cautiously, over it in the dark instead of taking the other way: Parkhill v. Brighton, 61-103.

A person who is injured by reason of defects in the sidewalk cannot be defeated of recovery therefor by reason of knowledge of the defective condition of the walk, except as he has been guilty of negligence operating to his injury. He is not to be denied relief simply because he goes upon a street which he knows to be dangerous: Rice v. Des Moines, 40-638. And see Walker v. Decatur County, 67-307.

Knowledge by the party injured, previous to the injury, of the defect from which the injury results, will not defeat his claim for damages if he was not guilty of negligence: Ross v. Davenport, 66-548.

It is error, in an action for injuries from a defective walk, to refuse an instruction that if the jury find that plaintiff, at the time of passing over the walk, knew that it was unsafe and that it was imprudent to pass over it at that time, in consequence of darkness or any other cause, and that with this knowledge he still persisted in passing over it, though there was another walk which he might have taken going in the same direction he desired to go, then his own negligence contributed to the accident and he could not recover: McGinty v. Keokuk, 66-725.

It is not negligence to travel the streets of a city on a dark night without a lantern, or to walk rapidly therein: Moore v. Burlington, 49-136.

In determining whether a plaintiff who has been injured by a defect in a sidewalk has contributed to the injury by his own negligence, it is proper for the jury to take into consideration the hour of the night the injury was received, the darkness of the night, whether the plaintiff was under the influence of intoxicating liquors, etc.: Cramer v. Burlington, 39-513.

In an action for personal injuries received from defects in a street, the jury may properly be instructed that the law demanded of plaintiff the exercise of ordinary care, and that in determining whether he exercised such care they should consider all the circumstances of the case, the hour of the night, etc., but it is not proper to instruct them that greater caution was demanded of plaintiff in passing upon a street after night than in daytime. The degree of care to be used is the same at all times: Stier v. Oskaloosa, 41-353.

In order to constitute contributory negligence it is not necessary that plaintiff must have known of the danger and assumed the risk before it can be said that he was negligent. The true rule is that plaintiff should have used due care and caution to discover the danger; but held erroneous to charge the jury that in order to render plaintiff, suing for damages for injuries received from a defective sidewalk, chargeable with contributory negligence preventing his recovery, it must appear that he went voluntarily into apparent danger: Munger v. Marshalltown, 56-216.

The fact that a party in crossing a street has crossed a place which he knew to be dangerous when he might, without increasing the distance and without inconvenience, have crossed at another place, will not prevent his recovery; but if, knowing that the place was dangerous, he knew or ought to have known that it was not prudent to cross at such place, and there was another way which he might have taken without material inconvenience, he cannot recover: Hartman v. Muscatine, 70-511.

A person cannot be excused if he consciously incurs danger which there is no necessity for incurring: Fulliam v. Muscatine, 70-436.

A person is not as a matter of law guilty of contributory negligence because, knowing a walk to be unsafe, he does not cross the street, as he might do with safety, instead of taking the walk. Such question is for the jury: Kendall v. Albia, 13-241.

Intoxication: Under evidence showing that plaintiff suing for injuries received from a defective sidewalk was intoxicated at the time of the accident, held, that the verdict of the jury allowing only nominal damages would not be interfered with on appeal: Hubbard v. Mason City, 64-245.

The fact of intoxication of the person injured, at the time of the injury, may be shown as tending to show contributory negligence: Cramer v. Burlington, 39-512.

Imputed negligence: Where it was sought to impute negligence to a party suing for injuries received from obstructions in a street while traveling thereon, held, that the fact that the owner of the team which plaintiff was driving knew that the team was unmanageable could not be imputed to plaintiff as negligence in the absence of such knowledge on his part: Martin v. Algona, 40-390.

Remedy over against property owner: The fact that the city has a remedy over against a private party who has so used a sidewalk, or left exposed a dangerous place, as to cause injury to a traveler, does not relieve the city of its duty towards such traveler to keep sidewalks in repair, and guard places of danger of which it has notice: Rowell v. Williams, 29-210.

Where a person places an obstruction in a street he cannot deny and of the city that it shall remove the obstruction at its expense if it had knowledge of it, and in case of failure to remove it after such knowledge, that it shall be precluded from looking to him for indemnification for damages which it is compelled to pay for the injury caused by the obstruction. Such circumstances would not establish contributory negligence on the part of the city, defeating its right to recovery from the property owner: Sioux City v. Weare, 59-95.

If a person for his private advantage, under permission from the city, makes an excavation in the street, and the city erects a barrier on one side of it, the person making the excavation is not thereby relieved from the duty of erecting a barrier on the other side if the safety of travelers requires it: Ottumwa v. Parks, 43-119.

Where suit was brought against a city for damages sustained by reason of an excavation in the street made by a property owner, and such property owner employed an attorney to defend in such action against the city, held, that in the action by the city against the property owner to recover the amount of damages which it had been compelled to pay on account of such injury, the measure of damages was the amount of the judgment with interest and cost which had been recovered in the action against the city: Ibid.

Where joint judgment for injuries from negligence in the obstruction of a street is recovered against a municipal corporation and the party guilty of causing the obstruction, the corporation cannot require that plaintiff proceed first against the co-defendant, even though he has property subject to execution: Palmer v. Stacy, 41-340.

Even where the city directs sidewalks to be made or repaired, and assesses a special tax upon abutting lots to pay therefor, the lot-owner failing to make the improvement, after being notified, does not become liable for injuries by reason of failure to make such improvement, or to make repairs, as the case may be: Keokuk v. Independent Dist., 53-352.

The city cannot escape liability for the defective condition of its streets for the reason that a third person is under obligation to keep such portion in repair. So held with reference to defective crossings on the street put in by a railway company: Fowler v. Strawberry Hill, 74-644.

625. Grading alleys. 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 1. The city council or trustees of any incorporated city or town, organized under special charter or under the provisions of the general incorporation laws of the state, are hereby authorized and empowered to provide by ordinance for the unimprovement of alleys (in said city or town) by grading the same, and for the assessment of the expenses thereof, upon the owners of lots or parcel of land abutting on said alley, pro rata, according to the front feet of said lots or parcel of land; provided, that such ordinance shall not be adopted except after the presentation to said council of a written petition for the unimprovement of such alley, signed by a number of the owners of property so to be assessed therefor equal to a majority of the owners of such property.

[This section as applicable to cities under special charter is modified by § 932, and as applicable to cities of the first class is repealed and other provisions substituted by § 821.]

626. Contract. 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 2. It shall be the duty of such city council or trustees to require the work of grading such alley to be done under contract therefor, to be entered into with the lowest responsible bidder; provided, that all bids for such work may be rejected by such council or trustees, if by them deemed to be exorbitant, and new bids ordered.

627. Assessments a lien. 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 3. All assessments for the grading of alleys under this act shall be a lien upon the lots and lands assessed, and shall bear the same rate of interest, and the said property assessed may be sold for payment thereof in the same manner, at any regular or adjourned sale, with the same forfeiture, penalties, and rights of redemption, and certificates and deeds on such sales shall be made in the same manner and with like effect, as in cases of sales for non-payment of the annual taxes of such cities or towns respectively, as now or hereafter provided by law in respect thereto.

628. Mode of assessment. 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 4. Such city council or trustees may provide by ordinance for the particular mode of making and returning the assessment hereinbefore authorized, and payment of such assessments may, if so directed by said council or trustees, be enforced in the manner and by the proceedings provided for by sections four hundred and seventy-eight, four hundred and seventy-nine, and four hundred and eighty-one of the code [§§ 649, 650, 652].

629. Expense. 15 G. A., ch. 51, § 5. So much of section four hundred and sixty-five, chapter ten, title four [§ 624], as requires the expense of the grading of alleys to be paid out of the general funds of any incorporated city or town, are [is] hereby repealed.

630. Sidewalks; curbing; paving; special tax. 466. They shall have power to construct sidewalks, to curb, pave, gravel, macadamize, and gutter any highway or alley therein, and to levy a special tax on the lots and parcels of land fronting on such highway or alley to pay the expense of such improvement. But unless a majority of the resident owners of the property subject to assessment for such improvement petition the council or trustees to make the same, such improvements shall not be made until three-fourths of all the members of such council or trustees shall, by vote, assent to the making of the same. [13 G. A., ch. 65; 14 G. A., ch. 45, § 2.]

[Further provisions as to paving and taxes therefor in cities are found in §§ 741-745 and §§ 824-833.]

Sidewalks: The construction of a sidewalk is a public rather than a private improvement, and the property is not subject to a mechanic's lien for the expense thereof: Coenen v. Staub, 74-32.

As to liability for injuries from defects in, or obstructions upon, sidewalks, see notes to § 624.

As to what improvements may be made under this section: "Macadamizing" includes "trimming" and "guttering": McNamara v. Estes, 22-246.

"To pave" may include all things necessary to make a level and convenient surface for horses, carriages and foot passengers of any convenient or practical material: Buell v. Bail, 20-281, 290.

The authority to "pave," given in a special charter, held to include the power to macadamize and gutter: Warren v. Henley, 31-31.

A sidewalk is a part of the street and may be paved with brick or stone under the same authority which authorizes the improvement of the rest of the street: Ibid.

The laying of a plank sidewalk is within the authority to cause streets to be paved or macadamized: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12-112.

Where an improvement consisted in an entire raising and changing of the surface of the street, held, that it was an improvement for which a special tax might be levied under this section, and not "repairing" as contemplated by the preceding section, to be paid for out of the general funds: Koons v. Lucas, 52-177.

Where the improvement, such as paving or macadamizing, becomes worn out, it may be renewed at the expense of the owners of abutting property: Coutes v. Dubuque, 68-550.

The question whether an improvement is demanded by the public wants or necessities is to be determined by the city council, and then determination is conclusive except for want of authority or fraud or oppression: Ibid.

The statute confers no authority to assess abutting property for grading or filling a street: Bucroft v. Council Bluffs, 63-646; Seo-field v. Council Bluffs, 68-695.

Such grading or filling as may be properly part of the work of paving may be charged upon abutting lots as a portion of the expense of paving, but any considerable filling or substantial change of the grade does not, in a proper sense, constitute a part of the work of paving: Ibid.

Where a city constructed a sewer through a street, rendering it necessary to tear up the macadamizing previously done and macadamize again, held, such expense was not one for which abutting property could be specially assessed, but that it was incident to the construction of the sewer, and might, as such, be paid out of the general fund: Burlington v. Palmer, 67-681.

The city may grade and macadamize less than the whole width of the street where it is not shown to be for the injury or oppression of owners of property adjacent thereto: Morrison v. Hershire, 32-271, 276.

Who responsible for: An owner of a corner lot may be required to pay for the cost of macadamizing one-fourth of the square occupied by the intersection of the streets abutting his property: Wolfe v. Keokuk, 48-129.

A special tax for the improvement of a street cannot be taxed to a street railway company occupying a portion of such street: Koons v. Lucas, 52-117.

Special assignments, under this section, held to be covered by the provisions of a lease requiring the tenant to pay all taxes assessed upon the property during such lease: Cassady v. Hammer, 62-359.

The assessment is to be made upon owners of property abutting upon the part of the street which is improved: Kendig v. Knight, 60-29.

Proceedings: Improvements may be ordered either when the proper petition is presented, or by three-fourths vote without such petition: Tallant v. Burlington, 39-543.

In ordering an improvement in the absence of a petition therefor, the council may act upon information furnished by the report of a committee as well as upon their own knowledge in determining the necessity of the improvement: Brewster v. Davenport, 51-427.

Under the provisions of a special charter somewhat similar to this section, held, that a party, who with others signed and presented to the council a petition praying that certain improvements should be made, could not object to the proceedings thereunder on the ground that a sufficient number of property owners had not signed such petition. The proceedings would be binding as to him, although they might not be as to others who had not signed: Burlington v. Gilbert, 31-356.

Levying and collecting the tax: Making the cost of such improvements a charge upon abutting property is an exercise of the power of taxation and not of the right of eminent domain, and such a provision is not unconstitutional as being unequal, applying to particular individuals or classes, and not uniform: Warren v. Henley, 31-31.

The power to make special assessments is distinct from the power of general taxation; but both may be granted by the legislature: Fairfield v. Ratcliff, 20-396.

All expenses of street improvements may be, in accordance with the law, assessed upon abutting property without regard to the benefits to be conferred upon such property: Gatch v. Des Moines, 63-718.

The powers given a city or town to make special assessments against abutting property for street improvements are usually strictly construed: Bucroft v. Council Bluffs, 63-646.

While such power must be clearly given, it will be enforced when it is within the reasonable construction of the law: McNamara v. Estes, 22-246.

The city council may provide the mode under which the taxes contemplated in this and the following section shall be assessed and authorize the city auditor to make such assessment: Burlington v. Quick, 47-222.

The word "lot," in this section, means any portion, piece or division of land: Buell v. Ball, 20-282.

Exemption from special assessment: School property is not exempt from liability for taxation by special assessment for improvement of streets, building of sidewalks, etc. Though, perhaps, such tax cannot be enforced by a sale of the property, it may be exacted in some other manner, probably by an action: Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55-150.

But the city has no authority to assess expenses of constructing a sewer upon abutting property belonging to the state. It has such powers only with reference to taxing property for improvements as are conferred upon it by statute, and the power of subjecting the property of the state to the payment of such assessment is not contemplated by statutory provisions: Polk County Savings Bank v. State, 69-24.

Method of making special assessments: The fact that in assessing the costs of improvements upon communicating streets the entire frontage of the corner lot upon both streets is made the basis of assessment does not amount to double assessment of such property: Morrison v. Hershire, 32-271.

Where a corner lot faced upon two streets, and the tenant thereof was under obligation to keep up sidewalks in front of the lot, etc., held, that he was liable for taxes assessed for the construction of sidewalks on each of the streets: Des Moines v. Dorr, 31-89.

An owner of a corner lot may be required to pay for the cost of macadamizing one-fourth of the square occupied by the intersection of the streets on which his property abuts: Wolf v. Keokuk, 48-129.

The assessment is to be made upon owners of property abutting upon the part of the street which is improved: Kendig v. Knight, 60-29.

Special assessments for street improvements held to be covered by the provisions of a lease requiring the tenant to pay all taxes assessed upon the property during such lease: Cassady v. Hammer, 62-359.

The fact that an improvement, made on two streets in pursuance of two different resolutions, is made the basis of one assessment on both streets does not render the tax illegal: Kendig v. Knight, 60-29.

Under the statute improvements may be ordered by the city council either when the petition is presented, signed by the requisite number of property owners, or upon a three-fourths vote of the council without such petition: Tallant v. Burlington, 39-543.

In ordering an improvement in the absence of a petition therefor, the council may act upon information furnished by the report of a committee as well as upon their own knowledge in determining the necessity of the improvement: Brewster v. Davenport, 51-427.

A party who signs and joins in presenting to the council a petition praying for a certain improvement cannot afterwards object to the proceedings upon such petition on the ground that a sufficient number of property owners did not sign it. The proceedings would be binding as to him although they might not be as to others not signing: Burlington v. Gilbert, 31-356.

The fact that the city issues warrants in payment of expenses of improvements on the street, greater in amount than the actual cost of the improvements, for the purpose of making up a deficiency caused by the warrants being below par, will not be a ground of objection to the assessment on the part of an adjoining property owner whose property is assessed for such improvements: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

Notice of assessment: Notice by publication is sufficient to warrant personal judgment against the property owner for the expense of filling up a lot according to a proper resolution: Independence v. Purdy, 46-202.

Although the statute does not in terms require notice of an assessment for special improvements to be given to the property owner, yet such notice is an indispensable requisite to the exercise of the taxing power, and an ordinance providing for such assessment without such notice and opportunity to the party assessed to appear and object to the assessment on his property is void: Gatch v. Des Moines, 63-718.

At least this is true where the statute or ordinance provides for an assessment according to the benefits, so that in making the assessment an opinion is to be formed and discretion exercised by the assessors: Trustees of Griswold College v. Davenport, 65-633.

So where an ordinance providing for the filling of lots, to prevent the standing of stagnant water thereon, made no provision for notice to the owner of the property, and no notice of the proceeding was in fact served upon him, so as to give him opportunity to show that no such burdensome and extraordinary expenditure as contemplated by the resolution adopted under such ordinance was necessary for the abatement of the nuisance, held, that the proceedings were void: Bush v. Dubuque, 69-233.

It is immaterial, in such a case, that the lot owner has notice and an opportunity to be heard before the tax is assessed upon his lots. He has a right to have the council enjoined from involving the city in an unauthorized and illegal contract to fill his lots to a greater height than necessary, and to expend more money than they had a right to collect from him for such improvement: Ibid.

Where the proportion of taxes to be levied upon abutting property is determined by the frontage of the property upon the street improved, and nothing is necessary to determine the amount of tax to be charged to the property owner except a mathematical computation, no discretion being left to the city council, no notice of the assessment is necessary: Amery v. Keokuk, 72-701.

Under an ordinance providing that a resolution for the improvement of streets and taxation of costs to abutting owners should be published before being acted upon, held, that such requirement was mandatory, and that proceedings under a resolution not thus published were void: Roche v. Dubuque, 42-250.

Method of collecting special assessments: A city which has properly ordered special assessments for improvements, and paid the contractor for the same, may, in an action, recover from property owners the respective amounts with which they are chargeable: Burlington v. Quick, 47-222.

It seems that an action by the city to recover such assessments can only be brought after it has paid the contractor: Ibid., 229.

Proceedings for the collection of special assessments will not be reviewed upon appeal, except in case of manifest abuse resulting in substantial prejudice: Des Moines v. Stephenson, 19-507.

A municipal corporation which has the power to levy and collect a certain tax cannot delegate its powers so as to enable its assignee to collect such tax in his own name, either in an action at law or in equity, but the city may proceed to collect such tax after a void assignment thereof, and enforce its lien: McInerney v. Reed, 23-410.

Estoppel: Where the owner of abutting property knows that it is the intention to assess the cost of improvements of the adjoining street upon such property, and makes no objection, he will be estopped from questioning the regularity of the assessment: Robinson v. Burlington, 50-240. And see Patterson v. Baumer, 43-477.

But where a land owner protests against the work being done, and it is done notwithstanding his remonstrance, he is not estopped from contesting the regularity of the assessment, although he has not taken steps to enjoin the prosecution of the work: Tallant v. Burlington, 39-543.

A property owner is not estopped from objecting to the validity of an assessment on the ground that the method of making such assessment has not been complied with, by standing by and allowing the improvement to be made without objection, if he might have supposed that the improvement was to be paid for out of the general fund: Hager v. Burlington, 42-661.

Where proceedings for the levy of a special assessment for the improvement of a street are void for want of jurisdiction from the beginning, a property owner is not estopped to deny the validity of the assessment on the ground that he has made no objection to the proceeding while the improvement was in progress: Starr v. Burlington, 45-87.

Liability of city on special assessment certificates: Where, in pursuance of a contract for improving a street, the city issued certificates of assessment against owners of abutting lots, which by the contract were to be taken by the contractor in full payment for the work performed, and by reason of the nature of the improvement it was not chargeable against abutting property, but might be contracted for by the city, and paid out of the general revenue, held, that a recovery against the abutting property owners not being possible, the city became liable: Bucroft v. Council Bluffs, 63-646; Polk County Savings Bank v. State, 69-24.

Where the city issues in payment for work certificates of assessment upon abutting property, it thereby impliedly agrees that they are not invalid; and if it is shown that they are invalid the city becomes liable for the contract price of the work: Scofield v. Council Bluffs, 68-695.

The whole contract does not become void by reason of the invalidity of the certificates, but the contract price measures the right of recovery as against the city: Ibid.

631. Repair sidewalks. 467; 22 G. A., ch. 15. They shall have power to repair sidewalks, and to assess the expense thereof on the property in front of which such repairs are made. [13 G. A., ch. 65; 14 G. A., ch. 45, § 4.]

[As to liability for injuries from defects in sidewalks, see notes to § 624.]

632. Temporary sidewalks. 468. They shall have power to provide for the laying of temporary plank sidewalks upon the natural surface of the ground, without regard to grade, on streets not permanently improved, at a cost not exceeding forty cents a lineal foot, and to provide for the assessment of the cost thereof on the property in front of which the same shall be laid. [13 G. A., ch. 65; 14 G. A., ch. 45, § 5.]

633. Limitation of action for injury. 22 G. A., ch. 25, § 1. In all cases of personal injury resulting from defective streets or sidewalks or from any cause originating in the neglect or failure of any municipal corporation, or its officers to perform their duties in constructing or maintaining streets or sidewalks, no suit shall be brought against the corporation after six months from the time of the injury unless written notice specifying the place and circumstances of the injury shall have been served upon such municipal corporation within ninety days after the injury.

634. Special charter cities. 22 G. A., ch. 25, § 2. All the provisions of this act shall be applicable to all cities in this state now organized under special charters.

635. Change of grade; damages. 469. When any city or town shall have established the grade of any street or alley, and any person shall have built or made any improvements on such street or alley according to the established grade thereof, and such city or town shall alter said established grade in such a manner as to injure or diminish the value of said property, said city or town shall pay to the owner or owners of said property so injured the amount of such damage or injury, which shall be assessed by three persons — one of whom shall be appointed by the mayor of such city or town, one by the owner of the property, and one by the two so appointed, or in case of their disagreement, by mayor and owner, or in case of their disagreement, by the city council or town trustees. If the owner of such property shall fail to appoint one such appraiser in ten days from the time of receiving notice so to do, then the city council or town trustees shall appoint all such appraisers, and no such alteration of grade shall be made until said damages so assessed shall have been paid or tendered to the owner of the property so injured or damaged. The appraisers shall be sworn to faithfully execute their duties according to the best of their ability. Before entering upon their duties, they shall give notice by publication for three weeks in one or more newspapers printed in such city, of the time and place of their meeting for the purpose of viewing the premises and making their assessment. They shall view the premises, and, in their discretion, receive any legal evidence and may adjourn from day to day. When the appraisement shall be completed, the appraisers shall sign and return the same to the city council or town trustees within thirty days of their appointment. The city council or town trustees shall have power, in their discretion, to confirm or annul the appraisement, and if annulled, all the proceedings shall be void, but if confirmed, an order of the confirmation shall be entered. Any person interested may appeal from the order of confirmation to the circuit [district] court of the county in which such city or town is situated, by notice in writing to the mayor at any time before the expiration of twenty days after the entering the order of confirmation. Upon the trial of the appeal, all questions involved in the proceedings, including the amount of damages, shall be open to investigation, and the burden of proof shall, in all cases, be upon the city or town to show that the proceedings are in conformity with this section. The cost of any proceedings incurred prior to the order of such city council or trustees confirming or annulling the appraisalment, shall in all cases be paid by such city or town. [14 G. A., ch. 40.]

Establishing grade: The grade of a street can only be established by ordinance. It is not dependent upon the actual lowering or raising of the surface. If the property owner erects buildings or otherwise improves his lots before such action is taken by the city council he cannot recover for any changes in the surface of the street made after such improvement pursuant to grade lines established by the council, provided such changing of the surface be not negligently done: Kepple v. Keokuk, 61-653.

Where an ordinance provided that the grade line should be ascertained by or calculated for the middle of the street, held, that it was improper in improving streets to the grade established by the ordinance to take the outer line of the street as the grade line. In determining whether there has been a change of grade the height of the surface of the street must govern and it is wholly immaterial whether a change by which the surface is made to vary from the grade be by reason of earth or wood or iron. So held with reference to railroad tracks laid upon the street: Given v. Des Moines, 70-637.

Where the natural surface of the street is above or below the established grade line, the abutting property owners cannot require the city to excavate or fill up the street to grade; and therefore held, that where the track of the railroad was on a level with the natural surface of the street the railroad company could not be required to lower such track to the established grade so long as the street itself was not lowered to such grade: Given v. Des Moines, 70-637.

A city may be rendered liable by the acts of its officers in making excavations beyond the established grade: Freeland v. Muscatine, 9-461.

The city is not liable for the negligence or want of skill of the city engineer in fixing the grade of a street in accordance with the ordinances of the city: Waller v. Dubuque, 69-541.

Change of grade: Macadamizing the street, thereby raising the surface about one foot, held not to constitute a change in grade, as it would be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the street was left at the proper grade line to receive the material: Wimren v. Healy, 31-31.

Alteration in the surface of the street due to an improvement, but without any substantial change in the grade of the surface as originally fixed, will not entitle the property owner to damages for change of grade: Coates v. Dubuque, 68-550.

The change of grade of a street necessarily effects a change of grade of cross-streets in intersecting the same: Conklin v. Keokuk, 73-343.

Liability for damages: A city has authority to change the grade of its streets, and the fact that a property owner has built in accordance with the established grade, and thereafter the grade is changed to his injury, will not entitle him to damages except as the statute gives compensation or his property has been injured by negligence or unskillfulness in making the change: Russell v. Burlington, 30-262.

Aside from statutory provisions the city is not liable for necessary damages done to property in consequence of establishing or changing the grade of streets, etc.: Creat v. Keokuk, 4 G. Gr., 47; and a party claiming the benefit of the remedy provided by statute must pursue the method pointed out: Cole v. Muscatine, 14-296; Cotes v. Davenport, 9-227; Burlington v. Gilbert, 31-356.

The right to compensation only arises when improvements have been made subsequently to the establishment of the grade, but the damages for which compensation is to be made are those accruing to the entire real estate, and not alone those accruing to the improvements: Dalzell v. Davenport, 12-437.

The city is made liable in such cases not only for injury to the property, but for damages resulting from the value of the property being diminished. Such diminution is not to be estimated alone on the improvements erected subsequently to the establishment of the grade, but upon the whole property: Hempstead v. Des Moines, 52-303.

The improvements referred to in the statute, the making of which entitles the property owner to damages in case of change of grade, are those made on lots situated on a street the grade of which is changed: Ibid.

Where improvements are made to correspond with the street as constructed under an existing grade, it will be presumed, in assessing damages resulting from a change in such grade, that the street was constructed in accordance with the grade as previously established, and that the change in grade necessitated a corresponding change in the surface of the street: Thompson v. Keokuk, 61-187.

Property is to be deemed improved according to the established grade of the street within the meaning of this section whenever it is so improved that it can be comfortably and conveniently used for the purpose for which it is devoted, while the street upon which it abuts is maintained at that grade. Such question is for the jury to decide, and it is error to instruct them that the question whether the improvements were made according to the grade depends entirely upon whether they were intentionally built above the line: Conklin v. Keokuk, 73-343.

It is not the passage of an ordinance changing the grade which gives right of action to a property owner for damages, but the actual making of the physical changes therein contemplated: Hempstead v. Des Moines, 63-36.

When the council affirms the appraisal it determines that it will make the physical change necessary to conform the street to the grade established, and from that time the right of compensation constitutes a claim in favor of the owner of the property, and in case of his death his executor or administrator and not his heirs are the proper parties to prosecute an appeal in the proceedings to collect such damages: Conklin v. Keokuk, 73-343.

Where the grade is changed and the street cut down from curb to curb, the right of action for the change of grade of the sidewalk as well as for the change in grade of the street accrues, and a subsequent and separate action for injuries resulting from the change of the grade of the sidewalk cannot be maintained: Ibid.

In estimating the damages opinions of witnesses may be received as to the value of the property before and after the change in grade: Dalzell v. Davenport, 12-437.

Where the effect of the change in grade is such as upon the whole to increase the value of the property, the owner cannot recover for incidental disadvantage or expense resulting therefrom: Meyer v. Burlington, 52-560.

In an action for damages for changing the grade the question to be determined by the jury is whether the alteration of the grade diminished the value of plaintiff's property. If the property is benefited more than it is injured by the change, there is no right to recover damages: McCash v. Burlington, 72-26.

Where, by filling the lot and raising the house to correspond to the grade as changed, the value of the property was made greater than before the change, held, that the cost of filling the lot and raising the house should be taken into account in determining the damage: Thompson v. Keokuk, 61-187.

The statute provides the steps to be taken by the city, when it proposes to change the grade, for the purpose of determining the damage to property owners, etc., and the city having failed to take such steps is liable to an action by a property owner for the damages, and he is not limited to injunction or mandamus to compel the city to pursue the statutory course: Noyes v. Mason City, 53-418.

As no appeal is provided for in the proceedings contemplated by statute for the assessment of damages and such assessment may be annulled by the city council, the lot owner is not confined to the remedy there provided, and may maintain an action for damages: Hempstead v. Des Moines, 52-303.

Where the city proceeds to alter the grade of a street without taking the proper steps for ascertaining damages, the property owner has no adequate remedy except to enjoin the city from making the alterations until it has the damages assessed, and pays or tenders the amount so ascertained. He may, however, if he sees fit, allow the city to make the alteration and then bring suit to recover the damages: Phillips v. Council Bluffs, 63-576.

A party who before the making of improvements waives, in writing, his claims for damages, cannot afterwards make a claim for damages when the city has acted in accordance with the plan to which he has thus given his assent: Burlington v. Gilbert, 31-356.

These provisions as to changing grade of streets are, by § 650, made applicable to cities acting under special charter, and while another statute (§ 928) makes similar provisions specially applicable to such cities, yet that statute does not repeal the general provisions which are applicable to such cities, and the two are to be construed together: Phillips v. Council Bluffs, 63-576.

Appeal: The notice of appeal must be given to the mayor. If sufficient in form and given to the person who holds the office of mayor, it is immaterial whether directed to the mayor in his official capacity, or to the city or to the individual: Conklin v. Keokuk, 73-343.

On the trial of the appeal the city cannot challenge a tax payer as juror: Ibid.

636. Land taken for public purpose. 470. They shall have power to purchase or condemn, and pay for out of the general fund, and enter upon and take any lands within or without the territorial limits of such city or town for the use of public squares, streets, parks, commons, cemeteries, hospital grounds, or any other proper or legitimate municipal use, and to inclose, ornament and improve the same. They shall have entire control of the same, and shall have power, in case such lands are deemed unsuitable or insufficient for the purpose for which they were originally granted, to dispose of and convey the same; and conveyances executed in accordance with this chapter shall be held to extinguish all rights and claims of any such town or city to such lands existing prior to such conveyance. But when such lands are so disposed of and conveyed, enough thereof shall be reserved for streets to accommodate adjoining property owners. [10 G. A., ch. 127; 13 G. A., ch. 80.]

[General provisions as to cemeteries are found in §§ 562-568. Certain cities under special charter are given authority to use public grounds for school purposes: See § 925. Cities may purchase property at execution sale: See § 730.]

The act of 1864 (10 G. A., ch. 127), in so far as it was attempted thereby to confer upon cities and towns the power to sell and convey squares and parks therein, laid off and dedicated by individuals, held void as authorizing a perversion of a trust. Whether the corporation might not be given power to part with whatever interest it possessed in the property, quære: Warren v. Mayor, 22-351. And further, see notes to § 996.

DONATION OF DEPOT GROUNDS TO RAILWAYS.

637. Sites for depots, shops, etc. 19 G. A., ch. 133, § 1. It shall be lawful for any incorporated town or city to procure for the purpose of donating, and to donate, to any railway company owning a line of railroad in operation or in process of construction in such incorporated town or city, sufficient land for depot grounds, engine-houses, and machine-shops for the construction and repair of engines, cars, and other machinery necessary to the convenient use and operation of said railroad.

638. Submission of question. 19 G. A., ch. 133, § 2. Before such donation shall be made or appropriation of funds to procure land for such purpose, a petition shall be presented to the trustees or council of such incorporated town or city, signed by a majority of the resident freehold taxpayers of such incorporated town or city, asking that such donation be made and limiting the sum to be appropriated for that purpose. Upon the presentation of such petition, a special election of such city or town shall be called. On the ballots used at such election shall be printed the words, "for the donation" and "against the donation," and if a two-thirds majority of the qualified electors voting at such election shall vote for the donation, said trustees or council shall determine the site to be donated, designating the boundaries thereof, and the amount to be appropriated in procuring said site, not exceeding the amount named in said petition; and may in the name of such incorporated town or city procure said land by purchase, or by payment of the estimated damages in case said land or any part thereof shall be taken in the name of such railway company by process of condemnation for railroad purposes, and may also vacate any streets and alleys within the boundaries of said site and may prescribe the terms, conditions, and limitations upon which such grant shall be made, which shall be binding upon the railway company accepting such donation: Provided that land set apart as a park, public square, or levee shall not be appropriated or donated under the provisions of this act, and no land occupied with buildings used for business purposes or as private residences shall be appropriated or donated under the provisions of this act, unless the consent of the owners thereof shall first be obtained.

WATER OR GAS WORKS; ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANTS.

639. Powers to erect. 471; 22 G. A., ch. 11, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 26. They shall have power to erect water-works, or to establish and maintain gas-works or electric light plants, with all the necessary poles, wires, burners and other requisites of said gas-works or electric light plants, or to authorize the erection of the same; but no such works shall be erected or authorized until a majority of the voters of the city or town at a general or special election, by vote, approve the same.

This section applies to cities acting under special charter as well as to others: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396.

640. Jurisdiction beyond limits. 472. They shall have power to construct or authorize the construction of such works without their limits, and for the purpose of maintaining and protecting the same from injury, and the water from pollution, their jurisdiction shall extend over the territory occupied by such works, and all reservoirs, streams, trenches, pipes, and drains, used in, and necessary for the construction, maintenance, and operation of the same, and over the stream or source from which the water is taken for five miles above the point from which it is taken; and to enact all ordinances and regulations necessary to carry the power herein conferred into effect. [14 G. A., ch. 78, §§ 2, 3, 4.]

641. Privilege to individuals. 473. When the right to build and operate such works is granted to private individuals or incorporated companies by said cities and towns, they may make such grant to inure for a term of not more than twenty-five years, and authorize such individual or company to charge and collect from each person supplied by them with water, such water rent as may be agreed upon between said person or corporation so building said works, and said city or town; and such cities or towns are authorized and empowered to enter into a contract with the individual or company constructing said works, to supply said city or town with water for fire purposes, and for such other purposes as may be necessary for the health and safety thereof, and to pay therefor such sum or sums as may be agreed upon between said contracting parties. [Same, § 5.]

A city so indebted that a contract by it for the erection of water-works would be void (may still) contract to pay out of its ordinary revenues a sum as rent for the supplying of water to the city and its inhabitants as part of its ordinary expenses: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396.

An ordinance granting to a private company the right to build and operate such works, and providing that the city may, upon certain terms, purchase them, is not an incurring of an indebtedness within the meaning of art. 11, § 3, of the constitution: Burlington Water Co. v. Woodward, 49-58.

The power to make a contract with a water company as exercised in the passage of a certain ordinance upheld in a particular case: Burlington Water Co. v. Woodward, 49-58.

The proviso exempting from water-tax the property outside of the benefit of water-works is not unconstitutional: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396, 405.

The fact that a water company, which has agreed to furnish water to the city for the extinguishment of fires, fails to do so, will not render it liable to an action by a property owner for damages for the destruction of his property by reason of such failure, there being no privity of contract between the property owner and the company: Davis v. Clinton Water-Works Co., 54-59.

The fact that a city is authorized to provide for a water supply will not render it liable for failure to make adequate provision for the extinguishment of fires, nor would the fact that it had a contract with the water-works company to protect it against all actions which might be brought against it for malfeasance or neglect on the part of the company render it liable: Vauhorn v. Des Moines, 63-447.

Where a company was authorized to erect water-works and charge certain rates for water furnished, with the privilege to the city of buying the works upon certain terms, held, that such water-works were not public property and were subject to taxation: Appeal of the Des Moines Water Co., 48-321.

The buildings, machinery and mains of such a company are all real estate. The mains are appurtenant to the principal structure, and although they may extend into another township the whole property is taxable in the township where the works are situated: Ibid.

642. May condemn private property. 474. Said cities or towns are hereby authorized to condemn and appropriate so much private property as shall be necessary for the construction and operation of said water-works; and when they shall authorize the construction and operation thereof by individuals or corporations, they may confer, by ordinance, upon such person or corporation the said power to take and appropriate private property for said purpose. [Same, § 6.]

Cities may authorize the construction of such works by foreign corporations, and in such case they may confer upon such foreign corporation the power to condemn private property: Dodge v. Council Bluffs, 57-580.

643. Water rents. 475. All cities and incorporated towns constructing such works are authorized to assess, from time to time, in such manner as they shall deem equitable, upon each tenement or other place supplied with water, such water rents as may be agreed upon; and at the regular time of levying taxes in each year, said city or town is hereby empowered to levy and cause to be collected, in addition to the taxes now authorized to be levied, a special tax on taxable property in said city or town, which tax, with the water rents hereby authorized, shall be sufficient to pay the expenses of running and operating such works, and if the right to build, maintain and operate such works is granted to private individuals or incorporated companies by such cities or towns, and said cities or towns shall contract with said individuals or companies for a supply of water for any purpose, such city or town shall levy each year, and cause to be collected, a special tax as provided for above sufficient to pay off such water rents so agreed to be paid to said individual or company constructing said works; provided, however, that said tax shall not exceed the sum of five mills on the dollar for any one year, nor shall the same be levied upon the taxable property of said city or town which lies wholly without the limits of the benefit or protection of such works, which limit shall be fixed by the city council or board of trustees each year before making said levy. [Same, § 8.]

The proviso exempting from water tax the is not unconstitutional: Grant v. Davenport, property outside of the benefit of water-works 36-396, 405.

644. Gas-works and electric plants. 22 G. A., ch. 11, § 2. Sections four hundred and seventy-two, four hundred and seventy-three, four hundred and seventy-four and four hundred and seventy-five of the code of 1873 [§§ 640-643] shall be held to apply to the establishment and maintainance [maintenance] of gas-works and electric light plants as fully as they do to the erection of water-works.

645. Bonds. 22 G. A., ch. 11, § 3. Incorporated cities and towns for the purpose of establishing such gas-works or electric light plants shall have the power to issue their bonds running for not more than twenty years at a rate of interest not higher than six per cent., provided, that the total amount of indebtedness for all purposes in said cities shall not exceed the five per cent. of the assessed valuation of said cities as provided by the constitution.

646. Questions submitted. 22 G. A., ch. 11, § 4. No such gas-works or electric light plant shall be established by any city or town until a majority of the legal voters thereof, at a general or special election, decide in favor of the same. The council may order the question, whether such gas-works or electric light plant shall be established by the city or town, submitted to a vote as herein contemplated, at any general election or at any election specially called for that purpose; or the mayor shall submit said question, upon the petition of twenty-five property owners of each ward in the city or town. Notice of said election shall be given in two newspapers published in said city or town if there are two, if not, then in one, for, at least, two consecutive weeks. The ballots shall either be printed or written and in the following form—"for electric light plant" (or "for gas-works," as the case may be), or, "against electric light plant" (or "against gas-works").

PROCEEDINGS TO CONDEMN PROPERTY.

647. Assessment. 476. When it shall be deemed necessary by any such corporation to enter upon or take private property for any of the above uses, an application in writing shall be made to the circuit [district] court, which application shall describe, as correctly as may be, the property to be taken, the object proposed, and the owners of the property, and of each lot or parcel thereof known, and notice of the filing thereof shall be given as is required to commence a civil action in said court. After such notice shall have been given, the court shall proceed to determine the compensation to be paid for the taking of the property, and for that purpose shall impanel a jury, and the mode of procedure therein shall be the same, so far as applicable, as in an action by ordinary proceedings. The assessment shall be made so that the amount payable to each owner may be ascertained either by allotting it to each owner by name or on each lot or parcel of land, and the inquiry and assessment shall in other respects be made by the jurors under such instructions as shall be given by the court. The jurors shall be sworn to make the whole inquiry and assessment, but may be allowed to return a verdict as to part and be discharged as to the rest, in the discretion of the court, and in case they shall be discharged from rendering a verdict in whole or in part, another jury may be impaneled at the earliest convenient time, which shall make the whole inquiry and assessment, or the part not made, as the case may be. [R., § 1065; 13 G. A., ch. 80.]

The purposes here enumerated are the only ones for which the city has power to take private property. It does not have the power of eminent domain except as expressly granted: Field v. Des Moines, 39-575, 585.

A railroad company, lessee of another company under a lease which may be perpetual at the election of such lessee, has such an interest in the property owned by the lessor that it should be a party to proceedings under this section to condemn such property: Storm Lake v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 62-218.

643. Payment; possession; costs. 477. When the amount of compensation due to any of the owners of the property to be taken shall be ascertained, the court shall make such order as to its payment or deposit as may be deemed just and proper, and may require adverse claimants to any part of the money or property to interplead, so as to fully settle their rights and interests, and may direct the time and manner in which possession of the property shall be taken or delivered, and may, if necessary, enforce an order giving possession. But none of the property shall be actually taken or occupied until the compensation thus ascertained shall have been paid, or secured to be paid. The costs occasioned by the inquiry and assessment shall be paid by the corporation, and as to the other costs which may arise, they shall be charged or taxed as the court, in its discretion, may direct; no delay in making an assessment of compensation, or in taking possession, shall be occasioned by any doubt which may arise as to the ownership of the property, or any part thereof, or as to the interest of the respective owners; but in such cases the court shall require the deposit of the money allowed as compensation for the whole of the property, or the part in dispute; and in all cases as soon as the corporation shall have paid the compensation assessed, or secured its payment by a deposit of money under the order of the court, possession of the property may be taken and the public work or improvement progress. [R., § 1066.]

SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS.

649. How enforced. 478. Each municipal corporation may, by a general ordinance, prescribe the mode in which the charge on the respective owners of lots or lands, and on the lots or lands, shall be assessed and determined for the purposes authorized by this chapter; such charge, when assessed, shall be payable by the owner or owners at the time of the assessment personally, and shall also be a lien upon the respective lots or parcels of land from the time of the assessment. Such charge may be collected and such lien enforced by a proceeding in law or in equity, either in the name of such corporation, or of any person to whom it shall have directed payment to be made. In any such proceedings, where pleadings are required, it shall be sufficient to declare generally for work and labor done, and materials furnished on the particular street, alley or highway. Proceedings may be instituted against all the owners or any of them, to enforce the lien against all the lots or land, or each lot or parcel, or any number of them embraced in any one assessment, but the judgment or decree shall be rendered separately for the amount properly chargeable to each. Any proceedings may be severed, in the discretion of the court, for the purpose of trial, review, or appeal. [R., § 1068; 12 G. A., en. 111; 14 G. A., ch. 45, § 6.]

[As to special assessments for street improvements in cities of the first class, see §§ 824-837.]

This section makes the charges a lien upon abutting property, and it is not necessary that the ordinance shall so provide: Kendig v. Knight, 60-29.

This section, in so far as it authorizes the rendering of a personal judgment against the property owner, held not unconstitutional: Burlington v. Quick, 47-222, 226; and it seems that an action by the city can only be brought after it has paid its contractors: Ibid., 229.

Under provisions of a special charter making costs of special improvements a lien upon abutting property, held, that the property owner was not individually liable for the tax for improvements assessed against his lot: Buell v. Ball, 20-282.

As to whether he could be constitutionally made individually liable for such taxes, quære: Ibid.

In a proceeding to recover the costs of constructing sidewalks, under a city ordinance, held error to render personal judgment against parties not personally notified to make the improvements as required by ordinance, or who did not acquire ownership of the property until after the improvements were made: Des Moines v. Casady, 21-570.

Counter-claim: In an action by a city to recover from a property owner a special tax for improvement in streets, defendant cannot set up a counter-claim against the city for damages to his property by reason of the negligent performance of the work. Such a counter-claim, if established, would be payable out of the general fund of the city, and should not be allowed to be deducted from the special fund raised for the improvement: Burlington v. Palmer, 67-681.

Where a property owner brought action to restrain the sale of his property for the payment of a special tax, held, that the city might, by way of counter-claim, ask judgment for the amount of the tax, and was entitled to such relief: Kendig v. Knight, 60-29.

Recovery of illegal tax: Under an ordinance of a city under special charter, substantially the same in its provisions as the statute, with reference to county taxes illegally paid, held, that an illegal tax paid under protest might be recovered back: Tallant v. Burlington, 39-543.

Under such ordinance, held, that a person who had paid an illegal special assessment might recover the same in an action: Robinson v. Burlington, 50-240.

The discretion to be exercised by the court in regard to severing proceedings, as herein provided, will not be reviewed upon appeal, except in case of manifest abuse resulting in substantial prejudice: Des Moines v. Stephenson, 19-507.

650. Charge enforced. 479. In any such proceeding, where the court trying the same shall be satisfied that the work has been done, or materials furnished, which, according to the true intent of the act, would be properly chargeable upon the lot or land through or by which the street, alley or highway improved, repaired, or lighted, may pass, a recovery shall be permitted, or a charge enforced, to the extent of the proper proportion of the value of the work or materials which would be chargeable on such lot or land, notwithstanding any informality, irregularity, or defect in any such municipal corporation or any of its officers. But in such case the court may adjudge as to costs as may be deemed proper, and in cases where an assessment shall have been regularly made, and payment shall have been neglected or refused at the time when the same was required, any municipal corporation may be entitled to demand and recover, in addition to the amount assessed and interest thereon at ten per cent. from the time of the assessment, five per cent. to defray the expenses of collection, which shall be included in any judgment or decree which may be rendered. The provisions and powers conferred in this chapter from section four hundred and sixty-five to section four hundred and seventy-nine, inclusive [§§ 624-650], shall apply to cities acting under special charters. [R., § 1069; 12 G. A., ch. 111.]

[As to proceedings by cities of the first class and cities under special charter to cure irregularities, etc., in special assessments, see § 834; and as to method of collecting special assessments in cities of first class, see §§ 870, 871.]

If an improvement is such as the city is authorized to make, according to the true intent of the law, all errors and irregularities should be discarded and a recovery permitted for the proper proportion of the value of the work from the abutting property owner: Burlington v. Quick, 47-222, 228.

The fact that the cost of the improvement is not assessed on the owner of the property in the manner provided by ordinance is an informality which should be disregarded where it appears that after the improvement was made the cost was ascertained and the property owner notified of the amount due, and an opportunity was given him to pay it. Under such circumstances the formal assessment made against the property owner is not an essential requisite to a recovery: Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

The irregularity or defect which under this section can be disregarded must be a mere error or omission to do something which in no manner affects the jurisdiction of the city. Unless jurisdiction has been acquired, the proceedings of the city will be void: Ibid.

Want of notice of the assessment and levy are formal irregularities which will not defeat recovery for the cost of the sewer in an action authorized by this section. This right of recovery depends upon doing the work in the manner and for the purposes authorized by law and may be adopted at any time: Dittoe v. Lavenport, 36 N. W. Rep., 895.

The fact that an improvement is made on two streets in pursuance of two different resolutions, but that in making the assessment the entire improvement on both streets is taken into consideration, does not render the tax illegal: Kendig v. Knight, 60-29.

Additional powers may be granted by general statute to cities existing under special charter, as is here done: Lytle v. May, 49-224.

This section, in so far as it is to apply to cities acting under special charter, differs from the corresponding one in the Revision, and should not be construed as retroactive: Starr v. Burlington, 45-87, 90.

FILLING OR DRAINING LOTS.

651. Proceedings. 480. Municipal corporations shall have power to cause any lot of land within their limits on which water at any time becomes stagnant, to be filled up or drained in such manner as may be directed by a resolution of the council or trustees; and such owner or his agent, shall, after service of a copy of such resolution, or after a publication of the same in some newspaper of general circulation in such corporation for two consecutive weeks, comply with the directions of such resolution within the time therein specified; and in case of a failure or refusal to do so, it may be done at the expense of said corporation; and the amount of money so expended shall be a debt due to said corporation from the owner of said lot, and shall, moreover, from the time of the adoption of such resolution, be a lien on such lot or lots. [R., § 1070; 12 G. A., ch. 111.]

[For similar provisions as to cities under special charter, see § 926.]

The city has no authority to order such lots to be filled to grade where it appears that a much less amount of filling would prevent stagnant water standing thereon: Bush v. Dubuque, 69-233.

The word "lot" means any portion, piece or division of land: Buell v. Ball, 20-282.

Service by publication is sufficient under this section. Personal service is not necessary: Independence v. Purdy, 46-202.

CERTIFYING SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS FOR COLLECTION.

652. To auditor. 481. Any municipal corporation may, in addition to the means provided by the three preceding sections, if, by ordinance, it so elects, cause any or all delinquent charges, assessments, and taxes made or levied under and by virtue of, and for the purpose specified in said section or referred to therein, to be certified to the county auditor of the county, and be collected and paid over by the treasurer of the county in the same manner as taxes are authorized to be by this chapter. [12 G. A., ch. 111; 13 G. A., ch. 14.]

While special assessments may be thus certified and collected they are not subject to the penalties provided for non-payment of other taxes, but only to those provided by § 650: Ankeny v. Henningsen, 54-29.

After an entry of the municipal taxes upon the county books, sales are to be made therefor as though they were a part of the county taxes: Morrison v. Hershure, 32-271.

For mere irregularities in the levy and apportionment of taxes, injunction against their collection cannot be maintained against a city: Ibid.

A statute similar to this section, giving to cities organized under special charter power to collect taxes by certifying them to the county treasurer, was held not to take away the right previously existing to provide for the collection of such tax by action in the courts: City of Dubuque v. Harrison, 34-163.

The levy and collection of special taxes upon particular property by a municipal corporation must follow the law authorizing them with the same degree of strictness as in other cases of taxation. Where an ordinance requires publication before such tax is due and payable, the tax cannot become due and payable until this requirement is complied with: Dubuque v. Woolton, 28-571.

RELATING TO PARKS.

653. Park commissioners. 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 1. Cities acting under special charters and cities and incorporated towns may provide by ordinance for the election of three park commissioners and the terms thereof shall be three, four and five years, respectively, and their successors shall be elected for the full term of five years, and such park commissioners shall reside in such city or town.

654. Powers of. 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 2. Said park commissioners shall have exclusive control of such parks and shall manage, improve, and supervise the same.

655. Taxes for parks. 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 3. The councils of such cities and incorporated towns, may by resolution submit to the qualified electors of such city or town, at a regular or special election, the question whether there shall be levied upon the assessed property thereof a tax not exceeding two mills on the dollar, for the purpose of purchasing real estate for parks and the improvement of parks, or for either or both of said purposes.

656. Levy and collection. 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 4. Said councils shall, in the resolution ordering such election, specify the rate of taxation proposed and the number of years the same shall be levied, and if a majority of the votes cast at such election shall be in favor of such taxation, said council shall levy the tax so authorized, which shall be collected and paid over to the treasurer of such city as other taxes thereof are collected, which shall be known as "Park Fund," and shall be paid on the order of the commissioners and to be expended for the purposes herein provided and for no other purpose whatever.

657. Disbursement; account. 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 5. Said commissioners may use said fund for improving such parks, or for purchasing additional grounds or laying out and improving avenues thereto, and do all things necessary to preserve such parks, and they may appoint one or more park policemen, and pay such police force out of said fund; said commissioners shall keep a full account of their disbursements, and all orders drawn on said fund shall be signed by at least two of said commissioners.

658. Bonds. 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 6. Said commissioners shall each give a bond to the use of such city in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, before they shall be permitted to enter upon such duty, which bonds shall be approved by the auditor, recorder or clerk, of such city or town, and by him retained in his office.

659. Penalty. 20 G. A., ch. 151, § 7. It shall be deemed a misdemeanor for any person to cut, break or deface any tree or shrub growing in any such park or parks, or avenues thereto, except by authority of such commissioners.

ORDINANCES, FINES AND SUITS.

660. For what purposes; penalty. 482. Municipal corporations shall have power to make and publish, from time to time, ordinances, not inconsistent with the laws of the state, for carrying into effect or discharging the powers and duties conferred by this chapter, and such as shall seem necessary and proper to provide for the safety, preserve the health, promote the prosperity, improve the morals, order, comfort, and convenience of such corporation and the inhabitants thereof, and to enforce obedience to such ordinances by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days. [R., §§ 1071, 1072, 1073.]

The right to enforce a city ordinance is limited to a pecuniary penalty unless there is some express act giving power to inflict other punishment: Burlington v. Kellar, 18-59.

A town cannot pass an ordinance creating a forfeiture unless clear and distinct authority be given therefor: Gosselink v. Campbell, 4-296.

A fine cannot be enforced by forfeiture without trial and adjudication: Ibid.

The fact that the present statutes do not authorize forfeitures as a method of enforcing an ordinance does not prevent the city from providing that a license shall be forfeited on certain conditions, and enforcing such forfeiture: Hurber v. Baugh, 43-514.

A city may, for violation of the ordinance under which a license is granted, declare the same forfeited: Ottumwa v. Schaub, 52-515.

A city has no authority to pass an ordinance creating a forfeiture of goods and chattels as a penalty for violation of an ordinance, unless that power is expressly conferred: Henke v. McCord, 55-378.

No authority being expressly conferred by statute to punish, by forfeiture, the keeping of intoxicating liquors for sale, held, that an ordinance to that effect was invalid: Ibid.

An action to recover a fine imposed by ordinance may properly be brought in the name of the town: Centerville v. Miller, 51-712.

Proceedings to punish for violation of an ordinance constitute a criminal prosecution: Jaquith v. Royce, 42-406; State v. Vail, 57-108; Creston v. Nye 74-369.

The regularity of the incorporation of a city or town, existing de facto, cannot be inquired into collaterally in an action brought for the violation of an ordinance: Decorah v. Gillis, 10-234.

A municipal corporation cannot be enjoined from passing an act because, if passed, it would be unconstitutional, or void: Des Moines Gas Co. v. Des Moines, 44-505.

Under the authority here given, the city may provide for the punishment of intoxication: Bloomfield v. Trimble, 54-399.

But the city cannot, under this authority, fix fire limits and prevent the erection of wooden buildings therein. Such power can only be exercised as authorized by § 616: Des Moines v. Gilchrist, 67-210.

As to whether judicial notice can be taken of the ordinances of a city, see notes to § 662.

As to publication, see § 672.

661. Published ordinances. 19 G. A., ch. 128, § 1. Where any city or town, organized under the general incorporation laws of the state, shall cause, or have heretofore caused its ordinances to be published in book or pamphlet form, such book or pamphlet shall be received as evidence of the passage and legal publication of such ordinances, as of the dates mentioned or provided for therein, in all courts and places without further proof.

662. Fines recovered. 483. Fines may, in all cases, and in addition to any other mode provided, be recovered by suit or action before a justice of the peace or other court of competent jurisdiction, in the name of the proper municipal corporation, and for its use. And in any such suit or action where pleading is necessary, it shall be sufficient to declare generally for the amount claimed to be due in respect to the violation of the ordinance, referring to its title and the date of its adoption or passage, and showing as near as may be the facts of the alleged violation. [R., § 1074.]

This section has no reference to criminal prosecutions, and applies solely to civil actions for the recovery of a fine or forfeiture: Goodrich v. Brown, 30-291.

The mayor of a city is required to take judicial notice of city ordinances in a prosecution for their violation, without their being pleaded: Conboy v. Iowa City, 2-90; State v. Leiber, 11-407; Laporte City v. Goodfellow, 47-572; and see § 811.

A court cannot take judicial notice of the ordinances of a city: Garvin v. Wells, 8-286; Goodrich v. Brown, 30-291; Wolf v. Keokuk, 48-129.

Courts will take judicial notice of the charter or laws under which a city is incorporated, and it is not therefore necessary, in an action for negligence in regard to its streets, to allege and prove the power possessed by the city over its streets under the laws of the city: Slier v. Osceola, 41-353.

As the statute requires the court to take judicial notice of the fact of the incorporation of incorporated towns, it will take judicial notice of the acts by which a town becomes incorporated so far as they are made to appear upon public records provided by law for such purpose; and as the petition for the incorporation must describe the territory of the town accompanied by a plat and be presented to the circuit court of the proper county, the court will take judicial notice in what county the incorporated town is situated: State v. Reader, 60-527.

663. Commitment. 484. Whenever a fine and costs imposed for the violation of any ordinance are not paid, the person convicted may, by the officer having jurisdiction of the case, be committed until the fine and costs are paid, not to exceed thirty days. [13 G. A., ch. 81, § 2.]

664. Use of county jails. 485. Any city or town shall have the right to use the jail of the county for the confinement of such persons as may be liable to imprisonment under the ordinances of such city or town, but it shall be liable to the county for the cost of keeping such prisoners. [Same, § 1.]

665. Limitation of suits and prosecutions. 486. All suits for the recovery of any fine, and prosecutions for the commission of any offense made punishable as herein provided, shall be barred in one year after the commission of the offense for which the fine is sought to be recovered, or the prosecution is commenced. [R., § 1075.]

666. Trial by jury. 18 G. A., ch. 77, § 1. On an information for a violation of an ordinance of an incorporated town or city of the second class, the defendant shall not be entitled to a trial by jury; but shall be tried by the court without a jury except on appeal. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this are hereby repealed.

This provision is not applicable to cities in which there is a superior court. As appeals are taken directly from such court to the supreme court, in such cases, there is a right to trial by jury: Creston v. Nye, 74-369.

667. Labor on highways. 487; 19 G. A., ch. 32. All municipal corporations are hereby empowered to provide that all able-bodied male residents of the corporation between the ages of twenty-one and forty-five years shall, between the first day of April and the first day of September each year, either by themselves or satisfactory substitute, perform two days' labor upon the streets, alleys, or highways within such corporation, at such times and places as the proper officer may direct, and upon three days' notice in writing given. They may further provide that, for each day's failure to attend and perform the labor as required at the time and place specified, the delinquent shall forfeit and pay to the corporation any sum not exceeding three dollars for each day's delinquency, and in case of failure to pay such forfeit within ten days the supervisor of highways or street commissioner of said corporation shall recover the same by action in the name of the supervisor of the highways or street commissioner of said corporation; and no property or wages belonging to said person shall be exempt to the defendant on execution; said judgment to be obtained before the mayor of said corporation, or any justice of the peace in the proper township, which money when collected shall be expended upon the streets of the corporation; and that all such sums remaining unpaid on the first day of September in each year may be treated and collected as taxes on property, and the same shall be a lien on all the real property of the delinquent that may be listed for taxation, and assessed and owned by him on the first day of November of the same year.

668. Highways outside corporate limits; appropriations for. 488; 18 G. A., ch. 52. Any city or incorporated town may aid in the construction and repair of any highway leading thereto, by appropriating therefor a portion of the highway tax belonging to said city or incorporated town, not exceeding fifty per cent. thereof, annually, as hereinafter provided. When a petition shall be presented to the council or trustees, signed by one-third of the resident tax payers of said city or town, asking that the question of aiding in the construction or repair of any highway leading thereto be submitted to the voters thereof, the council or trustees, immediately, shall give notice of a special election by posting notice in five public places in said town, at least ten days before said election, which notice shall specify the time and place of holding said election, the particular highway proposed to be aided, the proportion of the highway tax then levied and not expended, or next thereafter to be levied, to be appropriated; at which election the question of "appropriation" or "no appropriation" shall be submitted, and if a majority of votes polled be for appropriation, then the council or trustees may aid in the construction and repair of said highway to the extent of said appropriation, in the same manner as they otherwise would if said highway was within the corporate limits of said city or town; but no part of such highway tax shall be expended more than two miles from the limits of such city or town. Provided, that in incorporated towns, and cities of the second class, whether organized under a special charter or under the general incorporation law, with a population under ten thousand inhabitants, whenever one-third of the resident tax payers of such incorporated town or city shall petition the trustees or council of such incorporated town or city, asking that a portion of the highway tax of such incorporated town or city may be used to aid in the construction or repair of highways outside and within three miles of the limits of such incorporated town or city, such trustees or council may, upon the presentation of such petition, order a part of the highway tax of such incorporated town or city, not exceeding twenty-five per cent. thereof, to be used and expended to aid in the construction or repair of highways outside and within three miles of the limits of such incorporated town or city. [14 G. A., chs. 13, 98.]

669. Adoption of ordinances. 489; 18 G. A., ch. 146, § 2. All ordinances and resolutions, or orders for the appropriation or payment of money, shall require for their passage or adoption the concurrence of a majority of all the trustees of any municipal corporation; ordinances of a general or permanent nature shall be fully and distinctly read on three different days, unless three-fourths of the council shall dispense with the rule; no ordinance shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, and no ordinance or section thereof shall be revised or amended unless the new ordinance contain the entire ordinance or section reviewed or amended, and the ordinance or section so amended shall be repealed. Provided, that in incorporated towns, ordinances and resolutions, or orders for the appropriation or payment of money, shall require for their passage or adoption a concurrence of four trustees, or of three trustees and the mayor. [R., § 1122; 14 G. A., ch. 111, § 5.]

[Signature of mayor to ordinances of city is required by § 710.]

Adoption: Under the provision requiring an ordinance to be read on three different days before its passage, it is not meant that the ordinance must be read at three general meetings. Where it appeared that an ordinance was read on three different days, held, that this was sufficient, although the last two of the meetings at which it was read were special meetings held by adjournment: Cutcomp v. Utt, 60-156.

It is not necessary that the three readings be before the same body. If one or more of them take place before the change of the council by reason of an election, and another afterward, that is sufficient. The council is deemed a continuing body: McGraw v. Whitson, 69-348.

It is not intended that all unfinished business pending before the council shall be dropped at each change of membership by reason of new members taking their seats: Ibid.

Where by less than the three-fourths vote required by the statutory provision above referred to the requirement of reading on three different days was dispensed with and the ordinance declared passed on the day of the first reading, held, that such ordinance was void: Hornor v. Rowley, 51-610.

It is not necessary that the yeas and nays on a vote to suspend the rule requiring reading on three different days be recorded; and where a sufficient number of members to suspend the rule appear to have been present, and such motion is declared adopted, it will be presumed that a sufficient majority voted therefor: State v. Vaul, 53-550.

The record reciting the suspension of a rule requiring three readings on separate days cannot be impeached, in a prosecution under an ordinance thus passed, by oral evidence showing that such suspension was not carried by the requisite majority: Eldora v. Burlingame, 62-32.

The provisions requiring three readings apply only to ordinances and not to resolutions: Strohm v. Iowa City, 47-42.

The words "for the appropriation or payment of money" limit "resolutions" as well as "orders," and other resolutions than those "for the appropriation or payment of money" (for instance, to change the boundaries of a city or town), do not require the concurrence of a majority of all the trustees: Ibid.

Where it appeared from the journal of the proceedings of the council that a certain resolution was adopted, the nature of which was such that under the statute a three-fourths vote was necessary to pass it, held, that it would be presumed that a sufficient number voted for it, as required by law: Brewster v. Davenport, 51-427.

Under the rule of the council of a city, providing that a member directly interested in any question could not vote thereon, held, that in a particular case a certain member was interested otherwise than as the general public in the making of an improvement, and that an ordinance in respect thereto, which only received a sufficient number of votes for its passage by counting the vote of such member, was not valid: Busfington Wheel Co. v. Burnham, 60-493.

The act of the mayor as presiding officer of the council, in announcing the vote of the council, is ministerial and not judicial. He cannot by an erroneous and arbitrary announcement qualify or render invalid the action of the council: Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

So where the mayor erroneously announced that a resolution was not adopted for a reason that it did not receive a three-fourths vote, when a majority vote was all that was necessary to its adoption, held, that the resolution was legally adopted: Ibid.

Containing more than one subject: An ordinance defining and prescribing the punishment for certain offenses, and in which many such offenses are included, does not contain "more than one subject:" State v. Wells, 46-662.

The provision that an ordinance shall contain but one subject is a limitation on the power of the council to enact ordinances. It is mandatory, and an ordinance passed in violation of it is inoperative because of want of power in the council to enact it: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66-687.

But this provision does not forbid the enactment in a single ordinance of all the legislation which may be necessary to the accomplishment of a single object. Therefore, held, that an ordinance providing for the vacation of an alley and granting the ground covered by the vacated alley to a private person, was not void as containing more than one subject: Ibid.

Subject expressed in title: Where the title of an ordinance absolutely prohibiting the sale of vinous and malt liquors was "Regulating the use and sale of intoxicating liquors," held, that the subject of the ordinance was not clearly expressed in the title and that the ordinance was therefore void: Cantril v. Sainier, 59-26.

Amendment: Under the statutory provision requiring that an ordinance or section thereof shall not be revised or amended unless the new ordinance contains the entire ordinance or section revised or amended, held, that where but one section of an ordinance is amended that section alone need be contained entire in the amendment: Decorah v. Dunstan, 38-96.

Where a city, by ordinance, granted to a street railway the right to lay a single or double track over its streets, in pursuance of which a single track was laid, and afterwards the city, before the laying of a double track, amended the ordinance so as to prohibit the laying of such double track, held, that the amendment was a change in the terms of the contract entered into by the original ordinance, and was therefore void: Burlington v. Burlington Street R. Co., 49-144.

Repeal: An ordinance making provisions repugnant to a former one will operate to repeal it, though the former one be not contained in the latter: Des Moines v. Hillis, 55-643.

It seems that where it is required that a resolution for a particular purpose must be passed by a vote greater than a majority vote, a repeal thereof is sufficient if concurred in by a majority vote: Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

Record of adoption: A paper purporting to be a resolution passed by a city council levying a tax, marked on the back "adopted," such indorsement being in the handwriting of a person who was at the time city recorder, is not competent evidence of the action of the council. It is not such a record as the law requires: Hintrager v. Kiene, 62-605.

It is competent for the city, when not inconsistent with the restrictions of its charter, to prescribe by ordinance the steps to be taken in order to acquire jurisdiction over particular subjects. If these steps are not taken, and the requirements of the ordinance are mandatory, the act of the city in attempting to exercise its authority will be void: Dubuque v. Wooton, 28-571; Starr v. Burlington, 45-87.

Therefore, where an ordinance providing for improvement of streets required that such improvement should be ordered by resolution describing the streets and the improvement, and that notice be given by publication, held, that both these requirements were mandatory, and the record failing to show the passage of the resolution or its publication, the city acquired no jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and the sale of adjoining property for the making of such improvements was void: Starr v. Burlington, 45-87.

Resolutions for the making of improvements: Where an ordinance provided the kind, character and width of sidewalks, and the resolution directed the construction of a particular sidewalk in accordance with such ordinance, held, that this was a sufficient designation of the material, etc., of which the sidewalk was to be constructed: Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

Where a committee was appointed by the council to report on the propriety of establishing a certain sidewalk, but only one of the committee reported and the work was ordered, held, that in such matters the councilmen might act upon personal knowledge or otherwise, and the action was not invalid: Brewster v. Davenport, 51-427.

Void ordinance: The fact that a provision in an ordinance is void does not necessarily give a tax payer the right to an injunction against the exercise of power thereunder: Dodge v. Council Bluffs, 57-560.

670. Eligibility to office; interest in contract. 490. No trustee or member of any council shall, during the time for which he has been elected, or for one year thereafter, be appointed to any municipal office which shall be created, or the emoluments of which shall be increased during the term for which he shall have been elected, except in the cases provided in this chapter; nor shall any such trustee be interested, directly or indirectly, in the profits of any contract or job for work, or services to be performed for the corporation. [R., § 1122.]

671. Salary not to be changed. 491. The emoluments of no officer whose election or appointment is required by this chapter, shall be increased or diminished during the term for which he shall have been elected or appointed; nor shall any change of compensation affect any officer whose office shall be created under the authority of this chapter during his existing term, unless the office be abolished; and no person who shall have resigned or vacated any office shall be eligible to the same during the time for which he was elected or appointed, when during the same time the emoluments had been increased. [R., § 1122.]

The term of office, as here contemplated, commences with the election and not with the qualification of the officer: Cox v. Burlington, 43-612.

An ordinance cannot be passed under § 813, which allows cities of the first class to change the method of compensation of police judges, marshals, etc., from fees to a fixed salary, which shall change the compensation of such officers during the term of office for which they were elected: Bryan v. Des Moines, 51-590.

672. Ordinances recorded and published. 492. All ordinances shall, as soon as may be after their passage, be recorded in a book kept for that purpose and be authenticated by the signature of the presiding officer of the council and the clerk, and all by-laws of a general or permanent nature, and those imposing any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, shall be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the municipal corporation, and it shall be deemed a sufficient defense to any suit or prosecution for such fine, penalty, or forfeiture, to show that no such publication was made; provided, however, that if no such newspaper is published within the limits of the corporation, then and in that case, such by-laws may be published by posting up three copies thereof in three public places within the limits of the corporation, two of which places shall be the postoffice and the mayor's office of such town or city; and such by-laws and ordinances shall take effect and be in force at the expiration of five days after they have been published. [R., § 1133; 11 G. A., ch. 34, § 1.]

[The word "or" in the seventh line, between "suit" and "prosecution," is "as" in the printed Code. As to publication, see also § 660.]

Where it was required that a resolution for improvement of a street be published, held, that personal service on a party rendered publication unnecessary so far as he was concerned: Ibid.; Chariton v. Holliday, 60-391.

Where by ordinance a resolution for the making of improvements and assessing the expense thereof on abutting property is required to be published, a failure to make such publication will render the resolution void: Dubuque v. Wooton, 28-571; Starr v. Burlington, 45-87.

Action to enjoin the enforcement and carrying out of an ordinance cannot be maintained on the ground that it has not been properly published as required by the charter, where such publication might be completed after the time when the action is brought: Dodge v. Council Bluffs, 57-560.

Where it is attempted to disprove the publication of an ordinance by way of a defense in a criminal prosecution thereunder, oral evidence is admissible to establish the fact of publication: Eldora v. Burlingame, 62-32.

The city council has no authority to direct the publication of their proceedings, aside from the ordinances enacted by them, and bind the city therefor: Stodger v. Red Oak, 64-465.

Where the ordinance of a municipal corporation is introduced in evidence, it is to be considered at least prima facie valid and in force without proof of publication: State v. King, 37-462.

673. Yeas and nays. 493; 18 G. A., ch. 146, § 3. On the passage or adoption of every by-law or ordinance, and every resolution or order to enter into a contract by any council of any municipal corporation, the yeas and nays shall be called and recorded; and to pass or adopt any by-law, ordinance, or any such resolution or order, a concurrence of a majority of the whole number of members elected to the council shall be required; all appointments of officers by any council shall be made viva voce, and the concurrence of a like majority shall be required and the names of those, and for whom they voted, on the vote resulting in an appointment, shall be recorded. No money shall be appropriated by the council except by ordinance. Provided, that in incorporated towns, by-laws, ordinances, resolutions, or orders to enter into any contract, shall require for their passage or adoption a concurrence of four trustees, or of three trustees and the mayor. [R., § 1134.]

Yeas and nays: The requirement that the yeas and nays be called and recorded upon the passage of an ordinance is mandatory, and unless the record affirmatively shows such fact the ordinance will be invalid: Olin v. Meyers, 55-209.

Majority vote: Upon the passage of an ordinance the yeas and nays must be called and entered of record, and a majority of all the members elected to the council must vote in favor of the ordinance before it can be regarded as passed; but a resolution, unless it is proposed thereby to enter into a contract, may be lawfully passed by a majority of the members present: Laughlin v. Washington, 63-652.

Resolutions for the appropriation of money are required to be passed by a majority vote of all the members, but other resolutions only require the occurrence of a majority of those present: Stroh v. Iowa City, 47-42.

Contracts: This section defines how the order to contract shall be made and evidenced when directed by the council, but it is not a limitation on the power of the city to contract otherwise. Municipal corporations may, through their authorized agents, contract in parol the same as individuals: Indianola v. Jones, 29-282; Duncombe v. Fort Dodge, 38-281.

Election of officers: The method of appointing officers here provided must be followed in filling vacancies in an elective office under § 729: State v. Dickie, 47-629.

674. Vote required. 494. No street or highway shall be opened, straightened, or widened, nor shall any other improvement be made which will require proceedings to condemn private property without the concurrence, in the ordinance or resolution directing the same, of two-thirds of the whole number of the members elected to the council, and the concurrence of a like majority shall be required to direct any improvement or repair of a street or highway, the cost of which is to be assessed upon the owners of the property, unless two-thirds of the owners to be charged therefor shall petition in writing for the same. [R., § 1135.]

COLLECTION OF TAXES.

675. Certifying to county officers. 495. The council or trustees, as the case may be, of each municipal corporation is required to cause to be certified to the county auditor, on or before the first Monday of September of each year, the percentage or number of mills on the dollar of tax levied for all city purposes by them on the taxable property within said corporation for the year then ensuing, as shown by the assessment roll of said city for said year, and the said auditor is required to place the same on the tax books of the county in the same manner as county taxes are placed thereon, which tax for municipal purposes shall be collected by the county treasurer; and in all things relating to the collection of the same, and the sale of real or personal property, he is authorized and required to proceed according to the provisions of the statutes regulating the sale of property for delinquent state and county taxes, and in all sales for such, or any delinquent taxes for municipal purposes, if there be other delinquent taxes due from the same person, or lien on the same property, the sale shall be for all the delinquent taxes; and such sales, and all sales made under or by virtue of this section or the provisions of law herein referred to, shall be of the same validity, and, in all respects, be deemed and treated as though such sales had been made for the delinquent state or county taxes exclusively. And in any city or town incorporated under or by special charter, which now is, or hereafter may be regulated by or subject to the general incorporation laws, all delinquent taxes, except such as were levied to pay indebtedness created to take stock or aid in the building of railways, remaining unpaid upon the tax books of such city or town, shall be certified at the time, collected and paid over as above directed. And the county treasurer shall include said delinquent taxes so certified with the delinquent state and county taxes on his books, and collect the same by sale of real or personal property in the same manner as is by statute required for delinquent state and county taxes; and all sales of property for such delinquent municipal taxes shall be as valid, and, in all respects, be deemed and treated as though such sales had been made for delinquent state and county taxes. [R., § 1123; 10 G. A., ch. 25, § 3.]

[The word "tax," in the ninth line of the section, is erroneously printed "taxes" in the printed Code, and so also "or" in the twenty-first line is printed "and." For similar provision as to cities under special charter, see § 960.]

These provisions, as others of the general law as to cities and towns, apply only to those organized under such general law, and not to those having special charters. (Decided under Rev., § 1123): Burk v. Jeffries, 20-145.

In cities acting under special charter in which city taxes are made a perpetual lien upon real estate, and the city collector is authorized to collect the same by sale, a sale under § 1353 for state and county taxes does not divest the property from the lien of city taxes, and the purchaser takes subject thereto; nor does the sale for city taxes of one year divest the property of the lien of city taxes for former years: Dennison v. Keokuk, 45-266.

Under this section sales can be made by the county treasurer for city taxes as for other taxes: Morrison v. Hershire, 32-271.

Under a previous statute authorizing cities to sell real and personal property for delinquent taxes, and provide needful rules and regulations for the proper enforcement of their powers as to taxation, held, that such city might provide a penalty for non-payment of taxes, and for the sale of property for such taxes and penalties, and provide further that in redeeming from such sale a penalty be paid, in addition to the amount for which the property was sold: Augustine v. Jennings, 42-198.

Where a city for many years failed to bring forward on its tax books or attempt to collect taxes claimed to be delinquent although the same property was regularly assessed for subsequent taxes which were paid, held, that it would thereby be considered as having abandoned all claim to such tax: Bradley v. Hintrager, 61-337.

676. Taxes limited. 496. The amount which may be so certified, assessed, and collected, shall not exceed ten mills on the dollar, to defray its general and incidental expenses. [R., § 1124.]

The tax provided in § 4274 may be in addition to the tax authorized by this and the following section: Rice v. Walker, 44-458.

677. Road taxes. 19 G. A., ch. 153, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 46, § 1. All property now subject to taxation in any city or town, which by law is not subject to taxation for general municipal purposes, shall, nevertheless, be liable to taxation for road purposes as may be provided by the council of such city or town, but not exceeding the rate of five mills upon the dollar of the assessed valuation thereof. And all personal property necessary for the use and cultivation of agricultural or horticultural lands shall be liable for such road taxes, but shall not be liable for any other city tax.

The provisions of this section do not authorize taxation for road purposes of property subject to general taxation, in excess of the ten-mill limit here fixed: Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Hamilton County, 73-313.

678. Sinking fund. 497. For the purpose of creating a sinking fund for the gradual extinguishment of the bonds and funded debt of any municipal corporation, the council thereof may, in their discretion, annually, levy and collect, in addition to the other taxes of said corporation, a tax of not more than two mills on the dollar upon the assessed value of said property appraised and returned as aforesaid, which shall be paid into said treasury and be applied by order of the city council towards the extinguishment of the said bonds and funded debt, and to no other purpose whatever. [R., § 1125; 13 G. A., ch. 59.]

Recovery of tax by action: The grant of power to a municipal corporation to levy and collect a tax carries with it all the usual, ordinary and necessary means for the exercise of the power, and while the city may not have the right to collect such taxes by a sale of property, yet the lien may be enforced by an action in equity for that purpose: McInerney v. Reed, 23-410.

Action may be maintained to collect city taxes, although another remedy is provided by law: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56; Burlington v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 41-134.

Where the charter of a city authorizes it to levy and collect taxes, the city council may, by ordinance, provide for the collection of such taxes by judicial proceedings in the courts, and the fact that by statute subsequent to the charter another method of collection is provided will not take away the right of resorting to legal proceedings: Dubuque v. Harrison, 34-163.

The power given to cities to provide by ordinance for the collection of taxes is cumulative merely, and does not, if adopted, deprive the city of other remedies: Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55-150.

An action for the collection of taxes is subject to the same limitation as any action to recover a debt: Burlington v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 41-134.

In an action to recover taxes, penalties provided by law for non-payment thereof may also be recovered: Ibid.

Vested right: The right of a city to taxes already accrued cannot be released by legislation: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56.

A city has no power to levy a road tax upon property subject to taxation for general purposes, in excess of the limit of ten mills: Ibid.

679. Paying over taxes. 498. The treasurer of the county shall pay over to the treasurer of any municipal corporation, all moneys received by him arising from taxes levied belonging to such municipal corporation, on or before the first day of March in each year; and such moneys as said county treasurer may receive after that time, for delinquent taxes belonging to such corporation, he shall pay over to the treasurer thereof when demanded. [R., § 1126.]

680. Taxing dogs; animals. 499. The council of any municipal corporation shall have power, whenever in their opinion the interests of the corporation require it, to lay and collect a tax on dogs and other domestic animals not included in the list of taxable property, for the state and county purposes; which said tax shall be collected by the collector of such corporation and paid into the treasury thereof. [R., § 1128.]

[In the printed Code "which" in the fifth line is erroneously printed "and." As to powers in regard to dogs, given to cities under special charter, see § 913.]

LOANS AND BONDS.

681. Loans. 500. Loans may be negotiated by any municipal corporation in anticipation of the revenues thereof, but the aggregate amounts of such loans shall not exceed the sum of three per cent. upon the taxable property of any city or town. [R., § 1129.]

682. 16 G. A., ch. 95, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 79; 21 G. A., ch. 108. Section five hundred of chapter ten, title four, of the code of Iowa [§ 681], is amended by striking out the word "three" in the third line of said section, and inserting the word "five;" provided, that the provisions of this act shall not apply to cities having over six thousand inhabitants, or less than one thousand inhabitants, and in all other cases such loans shall not exceed the sum of three per cent. on such property.

[Cities of the first class may issue improvement bonds: See §§ 827, 828.]

A municipal corporation may issue bonds to a judgment creditor in payment of a judgment. Possibly such bonds would be invalid if given in excess of the limitation, even if given for the extinguishment of an antecedent and valid indebtedness; but in an action by the city against a third person who is liable to the city for the indebtedness which it thus attempts to pay, such invalidity of the bonds cannot be set up to show that the city has not been compelled to pay such indebtedness: Sioux City v. Weave, 59-95.

683. Refunding. 16 G. A., ch. 57, § 1. Cities and towns are hereby authorized, upon such terms as they may deem just and for their best interest, to settle, adjust, renew or extend such indebtedness as may be owing by or claimed against them and evidenced by the bonds or other negotiable promissory instruments of such municipal corporation, and to issue new securities for such indebtedness, except as hereinafter mentioned.

684. Special tax. 16 G. A., ch. 57, § 2. Said several corporations are hereby authorized, whenever any extension or renewal of such indebtedness is made, to provide for the payment of the interest and principal of such extended or renewed indebtedness, by the levy and collection of the necessary taxes, at the same time and in the same manner as other taxes; and the levy, collection and payment of such taxes may be enforced by proper legal process, when necessary, in addition to the ordinary means provided by law for the levy and collection of taxes.

685. Current expenses not included. 16 G. A., ch. 57, § 3. This act is intended to and shall apply only to the settlement, adjustment and extension or renewal of bonds and securities heretofore issued and outstanding at the time of this act, and not including warrants or other evidences of indebtedness issued or incurred for current expenses of such corporations.

686. New securities. 16 G. A., ch. 57, § 4. New bonds or securities issued by virtue hereof, shall in no case be for a greater sum than the principal and accrued interest unpaid on the bond or security for which such new bond or security may be given.

[As to the funding of indebtedness of cities, see §§ 755-762 and of towns, see § 707. See, also, on the same subject, §§ 383-387, applicable to counties, cities and towns.]

ELECTION AND QUALIFICATION OF OFFICERS.

687. Annual election. 501. The first Monday of March shall be the regular annual period for the election of municipal officers, and all officers whose election is provided for in this chapter, or may be provided for by ordinance, shall be elected on that day. The trustees or council of every municipal corporation shall direct the place or places for holding elections for municipal officers, and whenever the corporation is divided into wards or precincts, there shall be one such place in each ward and precinct, and any person who, at the time of any election of municipal officers, would be a qualified elector under the laws of the state for county officers, and shall have actually resided in the ward or precinct in which he offers to vote for the ten days last preceding the election, shall be deemed a qualified voter; and all elections shall in all respects be held and conducted in the manner prescribed by law in case of township elections. [R., § 1130; 10 G. A., ch. 25, § 4.]

[The word "township" in the last line is erroneously printed "county" in the Code.]

688. Elections; certificate. 502. At all elections in cities and incorporated towns which are not divided into election districts or wards, the mayor and trustees, any three of whom shall be a quorum, shall serve as judges, and the recorder shall serve as clerk, and after canvassing the votes which may be given at such election, they shall declare the result, and the recorder shall make out and deliver to each person elected to any office in such city or town a certificate of such election. [R., § 1131.]

689. Returns; canvass. 503. The returns of all municipal elections in cities and incorporated towns which are divided into election districts or wards, shall be made to the clerk or recorder of the corporation, and shall be opened by him on the third day after election. He shall call to his assistance the mayor of the corporation, or if there be no mayor, or the mayor shall have been a candidate at such election, then any justice of the peace of the county, and shall, in his presence, make out an abstract and ascertain the candidates elected in all respects as required by law for the canvass of the returns of county elections, and shall, in like manner, make out a certificate as to each candidate so elected and cause the same to be delivered to him or to be left at his place of abode. [R., § 1131.]

690. Oath of office; bond; vacancy. 504. All officers elected or appointed in any municipal corporation, shall take an oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and the trustees or council of any municipal corporation may require from such officers, as they may think proper, a bond, with proper penalty and surety, for the faithful discharge of the duties of their office; and such trustees or council shall have the power to declare the office of any person appointed or elected to any office who shall fail to take the oath of office, or give bond when required, for ten days after he shall have been notified of appointment or election, vacant, and proceed to appoint as in other cases of vacancy. [R., § 1132.]

691. Compensation of council or trustees. 505. The compensation of the council or trustees shall not exceed one dollar to each member for every regular or special meeting of the board, and shall not exceed fifty dollars to each in any one year. [R., § 1095.]

[As to compensation of members of city council in cities of first class, see § 816.]

692. Jurisdiction of mayor. 506. The mayor of each city or incorporated town shall be a magistrate and conservator of the peace, and, within the same, have the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace in all matters, civil and criminal, arising under the laws of the state or the ordinances of such city or town; and the rules of law regulating proceedings before a justice of the peace shall be applicable to proceedings before such mayor; but the criminal jurisdiction hereby conferred shall be co-extensive with the county in which such city or town is situated. [R., §§ 1085, 1102, 1105.]

The civil jurisdiction of a mayor, like that of a justice of the peace, extends throughout the county: Weber v. Hamilton, 72-577.

The jurisdiction of the mayor under this section is not exclusive, but concurrent with that of justices of the peace: Jaquith v. Royce, 42-406; and the rules governing changes of venue before justices are applicable in proceedings before a mayor: Finch v. Marvin, 46-284; but the filing of a motion for a change of venue does not deprive the mayor of his jurisdiction, and if the motion is overruled the ruling is, at most, simply an error, and a judgment subsequently rendered is not void: Ottumwa v. Schaub, 52-515.

Rules regulating appeals from justices in criminal cases are applicable to proceedings before the mayor: State v. Hoag, 46-337.

This section is not applicable to police courts (§ 808): Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572.

Although the mayor is clothed with the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, there is no provision for allowing him the same or any other fees in criminal cases when exercising such jurisdiction. By an omission, no compensation in such cases is provided and none can be recovered from the county: Upton v. Clinton County, 52-311.

Mayor's court: The court of a mayor is not a court of record: Santo v. State, 2-165, 220.

693. Jurisdiction exclusive. 18 G. A., ch. 189, § 1. The mayor of cities of the second class or incorporated towns, shall have exclusive jurisdiction of violations of the city ordinances; provided, that if he is unable to hold court, or in case of his absence from the city or town, the action may be brought before any justice of the peace having an office in the city or town. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

OF THE CLASSES OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

694. How classified. 507. In respect to the exercise of certain corporate powers and duties of certain officers, municipal corporations are divided into cities of the first and cities of the second class, and incorporated towns. [R., § 1077.]

695. Defined by population. 508. Every municipal corporation having a population of fifteen thousand and upwards, shall be a city of the first class; every municipal corporation having a population exceeding two thousand, but not exceeding fifteen thousand, shall be a city of the second class; and every municipal corporation having a population not exceeding two thousand shall be deemed an incorporated town. [R., § 1078.]

696. Change of grade. 509; 15 G. A., ch. 52. The governor, auditor, and secretary of state, or any two of them, within six months after the returns of any census taken by authority of the state or any town or city council, have been filed in the office of the secretary of state, shall ascertain what cities of the second class are entitled to become cities of the first class, and what incorporated towns are entitled to become cities of their proper class. And the governor shall cause a statement thereof to be prepared by the secretary of state, which statement he shall cause to be published in some newspaper published in the city of Des Moines, and also in some newspaper printed in each of the cities and incorporated towns the grade of which shall have been so advanced, and a copy of said statement shall also be transmitted by the secretary of state to the next general assembly, and any such city or incorporated town shall, at the next regular annual period for the election of municipal officers, proceed to organize according to its new grade, by the election of officers properly belonging thereto, and on their election and qualification the term of service of any former officer shall expire. [R., § 1079.]

[The word "shall" in the last line is omitted in the printed Code.]

697. When class is changed the proper ordinances to be passed.

510. So soon as the statement shall be published, as above provided, showing that any city or incorporated town will be entitled, at the next regular annual period for the election of municipal officers to be organized into a city of the first or second class, as the case may be, the proper authority of such city or incorporated town shall make and publish such ordinances as may be necessary to perfect such organization in respect to the election, duties, and compensation of officers or otherwise. [R., § 1080.]

OF INCORPORATED TOWNS.

698. Officers. 511; 17 G. A., ch. 9. The corporate authority of incorporated towns organized for general purposes shall be vested in one mayor, one recorder, and six trustees, to be elected by the people, who shall be qualified electors residing within the limits of the corporation, and who shall constitute the council of the incorporated town, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The mayor and recorder shall hold their offices for one year, and the trustees shall hold their offices for three years. At the first election after this law is in force six trustees shall be elected, two of whom shall serve for one year, two for two years, and two for three years, to be determined by lot at the first meeting of the council after the trustees are qualified, and thereafter two trustees shall be elected annually. [R., § 1081.]

699. Mayor; recorder. 512; 17 G. A., ch. 9; 18 G. A., ch. 146. § 1. The mayor shall preside at all meetings of the council, and shall have the right to vote upon all questions coming before the council. In the absence of the mayor, the council shall elect one of their number to preside pro tempore. The recorder shall be clerk of the corporation, and shall attend all meetings of the council, and shall make a fair and accurate record of all proceedings, rules and ordinances made and passed by the council, and the same shall at all times be open to the inspection of the electors of the corporation, but in no event shall the recorder have the right to vote on any question before the council. [R., § 1082.]

700. Vacancies. 513. The council shall have power to order special elections to fill vacancies, which may happen in the board, from the qualified electors of the corporation, who shall hold their office until the next annual election and until their successors are elected and qualified, and in the absence of the mayor and recorder from any meeting of the council, the council shall have power to appoint any two of their number to perform the duties of mayor and recorder for the time being. [R., § 1083.]

701. Treasurer and other officers; compensation. 514. The council of any incorporated town shall have power to provide by ordinance for the election of a treasurer, and such subordinate officers as they may deem necessary for the good government of the corporation, to prescribe their duties and compensation, or the fees they shall be entitled to receive for their services, and to require of them an oath of office, and a bond, with surety, for the faithful discharge of their duties. The election of any such officer shall be at the regular annual election, and no appointment of any officer shall endure beyond one week after the qualification of the members of the succeeding council. [R., § 1084.]

702. Marshal. 515. A marshal shall be appointed by the trustees, and shall be the principal ministerial officer of the corporation, and shall have the same power that constables have by law, co-extensive with the county, for offenses committed within the limits of the corporation. He shall execute the process of the mayor, and receive the same fees for his services that constables are allowed in similar cases. [R., § 1086.]

703. Removal. 516. By the concurrent vote of five members of the council, the mayor, recorder, or any member of the council, or any officer of the corporation, may be removed from office; but no such removal shall be made without a charge in writing being made and an opportunity of hearing being given, unless the officer against whom the charge is made shall have removed out of the limits of the corporation, and when any officer shall cease to reside within the limits of the corporation, it shall be deemed a good ground for a removal from office. [R., § 1087.]

704. Filling vacancies. 19 G. A., ch. 124, § 1. Whenever, from death or other cause, a vacancy in the office of mayor, recorder, councilman, trustee, or other officer, in any incorporated town, shall occur, such vacancy shall be filled by the council of such incorporated town at the first regular meeting of such council after such vacancy shall occur, or as soon thereafter as may be.

705. By ballot. 19 G. A., ch. 124, § 2. The manner of filling such vacancy shall be by ballot, and the person receiving a majority of the votes of the whole number of the members elected to the council shall be declared duly elected to fill such vacancy, and, on duly qualifying, shall hold such office until the next annual election, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

706. 19 G. A., ch. 124, § 3. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

707. Refunding bonds. 22 G. A., ch. 20, § 1. Incorporated towns having outstanding bonded indebtedness of not less than one thousand dollars and past due at the time of the passage of this act are hereby authorized, by a vote of two-thirds of the town council, to refund such indebtedness as evidenced by the bonds thereof, and to issue the coupon bonds of such corporation in sums not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, having not more than twenty years to run, redeemable in lawful money of the United States at the pleasure of such corporation, after five years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest payable semi-annually at a rate not exceeding seven per centum per annum.

OF CITIES.

708. Organization. 517. The corporate authority of cities organized under this chapter, shall be vested in a mayor and a board, to be denominated the city council, together with such officers as are in this chapter mentioned, or may be created under its authority. [R., § 1090.]

709. Mayor. 518; 16 G. A., ch. 58. The mayor shall be elected biennially in cities of the first class, and annually in cities of the second class, by the qualified voters of the city. He shall be a qualified elector and reside within the limits of the city, and shall hold his office for the term for which he shall have been elected and qualified. He shall keep an office at some convenient place in the city, to be provided by the council, and shall keep the corporate seal of the city in his charge; he shall act as president of the city council, shall sign all commissions, licenses, and permits granted by the authority of the city council, and such other acts as by law or ordinance may require his certificate. [R., § 1091; 10 G. A., ch. 25, §§ 1, 2.]

er to a notice it would that the mayor of this class is to be elected by the people of the city council for a term of one year. (See McCleary, 22 7, (filed in 1877, the mayor is now elected by the council.)

The mayor of the city may be protected by the council in any case arising out of his office.

The mayor of the city is not liable with the councilmen under the provisions of the law relating to the liability of the councilmen.

liable for his or her official acts or omissions in the exercise of his or her official duties. (Pollock v. Thomson, 22 391)

The action of the mayor in erroneously announcing that a resolution is adopted, for the reason that it has not received a three-fourth vote, when a majority vote is all that is necessary, is not judicial in its character in a case that it cannot be called into question in a collateral proceeding. The council's arbitrary announcement cannot have the effect to nullify the act of the majority of the city council. (Chariton v. Holliday, 60-791)

710. Signatures of ordinances. 20 G A, ch 192, § 1 The mayor of every city of the first and second class, except of less than eight thousand inhabitants by the last census report in this state, shall sign every ordinance or resolution passed by any city of the first or second class before such ordinance or resolution shall take effect or be in force.

711. Special session. 20 G A, ch 192, § 2 If the mayor of any city of the first and second class only as above excepted shall refuse to sign any ordinance or resolution after it has been passed by the council of such city he shall call a meeting of such city council within fourteen days after the passage of such ordinance or resolution and shall return the ordinance or resolution to them with his reasons for refusing to sign the same.

712. Passing over veto. 20 G A, ch 192, § 3 Upon the return of the ordinance or resolution by the mayor to the city council they may pass the same upon a call of the yeas and nays by not less than two thirds vote of all the members of such council over the mayor's veto and the clerk or recorder of such city shall certify on said ordinance that the same was passed by a two thirds vote of the council and sign the same officially as clerk or city recorder.

713. Two-thirds vote. 20 G A, ch 192, § 4 But if any ordinance fails to obtain at least a two thirds majority of all the council elected of such city after being vetoed by the mayor then such ordinance or resolution shall be void and of no effect.

The provisions of these four sections last above are made applicable to cities under special charter: See § 914.]

714. Mayor. 519 In case of the mayor's death, disability, resignation, or other vacation of his office, the city council shall order a special election as soon as practicable, to fill the vacancy for the remainder of the time of office, and may appoint one qualified person to act as mayor until such special election. The mayor of the city shall be its chief executive officer and conservator of the peace, and it shall be his special duty to cause the ordinances and the regulations of the city to be faithfully and constantly obeyed, he shall supervise the conduct of all the officers of the city, examine the grounds of all reasonable complaints made against any of them, and cause all the violations of their duty, or their neglect, to be promptly corrected or reported to the proper tribunal for punishment and correction, he shall have and exercise within the city limits the powers conferred upon the sheriffs of counties to suppress disorders and keep the peace, he shall also perform such other duties compatible with the nature of his office, as the council may from time to time require, he shall receive such salary payable quarterly, out of the city treasury, as may be provided by ordinance, but the amount of such salary shall neither be increased nor diminished during an incumbent's term of office. (R, § 1091.)

715. Waters. 520, 18 G A, ch 23 The numbers, divisions, and boundaries of the several waters of all cities and towns incorporated, shall remain as fixed when this code goes into operation, and shall not be changed by the city council.

Said council may at any time create new wards, or alter those now established, or the boundaries thereof, as may be deemed expedient; but in cities of the second class the number of wards now existing shall not be increased to a greater number than seven, nor decreased to a less number than three. [R., § 1092.]

716. Election of councilmen. 521; 17 G. A., ch. 14; 19 G. A., ch. 25. In cities of the second class the qualified electors of each ward shall, on the first Monday of March of each year, elect by a plurality of votes one member of the city council, who shall at the time be a resident of the ward and a qualified elector therein. His term of office shall be two years, so that there may always be in the council two members from the same ward whose term of office shall expire in different years; but at the first election held on the organization of a new city government under this chapter, two members of the city council shall be elected in each ward, and the city council shall determine by lot their term of service, so that one trustee from each ward may serve for two years, and one for one year. In cities of the first class, the qualified electors of each ward shall, on the first Monday of March of the year 1882, elect by a plurality of votes, one member of the city council who shall at the time be a resident of the ward and a qualified elector thereof. And in the same year the qualified electors of cities of this class shall also elect two members at large of such city council, each of whom shall be a resident and qualified elector of the city in which he shall be elected. But in order that their term of service expire in different years, the council at the first regular meeting shall determine by lot which of the aldermen-at-large shall serve one, and which two years. The term of service of the other aldermen shall be determined in the same way, time, and manner; in cases where the number is uneven the majority shall serve one year. On the first Monday of March of each year thereafter the qualified electors shall elect for the term of two years one alderman-at-large and one in each ward where the term of their alderman expires: Provided, that when any city of the first class embraces within its corporate limits the whole or parts of two or more different townships, two of which townships or parts thereof contain one thousand electors each, that only one of the aldermen-at-large herein provided for shall be elected from any one of such townships or parts of townships. [R., § 1093.]

717. Organization; duties; clerk. 522. The members elected for each city shall, on the second Monday after their election, assemble together and organize the city council. A majority of the whole number of members shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, they shall be judges of the election returns and qualification of their own members; they shall determine the rule of their own proceedings and keep a journal thereof, which shall be open to the inspection and examination of any citizen; they may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as they shall think fit to prescribe; and shall elect from their own body a temporary president; they shall also appoint from the qualified electors of the city, a city clerk who shall have the custody of all the laws and ordinances of the city, and shall keep a regular and correct journal of the proceedings of the council, and shall perform such other duties as may be required by the ordinance of the city. The clerk in office at the expiration of the term of service of any council, shall continue in office until his successor shall be appointed and qualified. [R., § 1093.]

The provision that the council shall be judges of the election returns and qualification of their own members does not mean that they are to canvass the returns of the election; but they may go around the returns and decide questions arising in respect thereto. It seems also that they are judges of the returns for all city officers, including mayor: Ex parte Stahli, 16-369, 376. As to who is permanent president of the council, see note to § 709.

718. Seal for clerk. 523. Each city council shall cause to be provided for the clerk's office a seal, in the center of which shall be the name of the city, and around the margin the words "city clerk," which shall be affixed to all transcripts, orders, or certificates which may be necessary or proper to authenticate under the provisions of this chapter or any ordinances of the city. For all attested certificates and transcripts, other than those ordered by the city council, the same fees shall be paid to the clerk as are allowed to county officers for the same services. [R., § 1094.]

719. Warrants. 22 G. A., ch. 3, § 1. The city auditor or city clerk or other officer of such cities whose duty it is to draw warrants of any city of the first or second class or any city organized under special charter shall not draw any warrant, except upon the vote of the city council, and he shall on the first Monday of each month furnish the council a sworn and complete list of all warrants, and the amount thereof drawn by him during the preceding month, and such list shall state on whose account, and the object and purposes for which the same were drawn, and the auditor or other proper officer of such city shall publish such report monthly in the official newspaper of such city.

720. Warrants presented; calls. 22 G. A., ch. 3, § 2. The city treasurer of such cities shall keep a list of all warrants presented for payment, and the date of presentation and of the particular fund upon which they are drawn. Warrants so presented where there are no moneys in the funds on which they are drawn to pay the same, shall be indorsed as follows: "Presented and not paid for want of funds," and thereafter such warrants shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, except warrants issued by a resolution of the city council, or contract with the city in which it is provided that they shall not bear interest. Warrants shall be paid in the order of their presentation from the particular fund upon which they are drawn, and whenever there is an accumulation in the city treasury of any city of the first class or city organized under a special charter the sum of two thousand, five hundred dollars or in the city treasury of any city of the second class the sum of five hundred, in any fund or sufficient to pay all warrants drawn on that fund, he shall call in warrants to the amount of such fund for payment in the order of their presentation or the city council may at any time direct a call. The notice of such call shall be published in two of the daily newspapers of the cities of the first class or cities organized under special charters for one week, and in one daily or weekly newspaper in cities of second class or cities organized under special charters, and shall state that after a certain date, no interest will be paid on warrants therein described. He shall set out in such notice the several numbers of warrants to be paid. Warrants issued by any such cities shall not be tendered or received by the county treasurer in payment of city taxes.

721. Amount of warrant. 22 G. A., ch. 3, § 3. The city auditor or other proper officer shall draw no single warrant for an amount in excess of five hundred dollars.

722. Powers of council; compensation of officers. 524. The city council shall possess all the legislative powers granted in this chapter and other corporate powers of the city not herein, or by some ordinance of the city council, conferred on some officer of the city; they shall have the management and control of the finances, and all the property, real and personal, belonging to the corporation; they shall determine the times and places of holding their meetings, which shall at all times be open to the public; and the mayor, or any three members, may call special meetings, by notice to each of the members of the council personally served, or left at his usual place of abode; they shall appoint or provide by ordinance, that the qualified electors of the city, or of the wards or districts, as the case may require, shall elect all such city officers as may be necessary for the good government of the city, and for the due exercise of its corporate powers, and which shall have been provided for by ordinance, as to whose election or appointment provision has not herein been made; and all city officers whose term of service is not prescribed, and whose powers and duties are not defined by this chapter, shall perform such duties, exercise such powers, and continue in office such term of time, not exceeding one year, as shall be prescribed by ordinance; but all officers to be elected, shall be elected at the regular annual election for municipal corporations. The officers of cities shall receive such compensation and fees for their services as the council shall by ordinance prescribe. [R., § 1095.]

723. Board of health; fire companies. 525. The city council shall have power to establish a board of health, with all the powers and duties specified in sections four hundred and fifteen, four hundred and sixteen, four hundred and seventeen and four hundred and eighteen of the ninth chapter of this title [§§ 556-559]; to establish a city watch, or police, to organize the same under the general supervision of the mayor, or marshal, to prescribe their duties and powers, and to establish and organize fire companies and provide them with proper engines and such other instruments as may be necessary. [R., § 1695; 11 G. A., ch. 107, § 1.]

[As to boards of health and fire companies in cities under special charter, see §§ 961 and 920.]

In establishing boards of health, etc., as here provided, the city acts as a quasi-sovereignty, and is not responsible to individuals for the neglect or non-feasance of its agents or officers in executing the powers so conferred: Ogg v. Lansing, 35-495.

The provisions of this section as to a board of health are repealed by the later provisions as to a state board of health: See §§ 2578-2580; Staples v. Plymouth County, 62-364.

724. Regulation of markets. 526. No charge or assessment of any kind shall be made or levied on any wagon or other vehicle, or the horses thereto attached, or on the owner thereof, bringing produce or provisions to any of the markets in the city for standing in or occupying a place in any of the market spaces of the city, or in the streets contiguous thereto, on market days and evenings previous thereto; but the city council shall have full power to prevent forestalling, to prohibit or regulate huckstering in the markets, to prescribe the kind and description of articles which may be sold, and the stands or places to be occupied by the vendors, and may authorize the immediate seizure and arrest, or removal from the markets, of any person violating its regulations as established by ordinance, together with any article of produce in their possession, and the immediate seizure and destruction of tainted or unsound meat or other provisions. [R., § 1096.]

[For general provisions as to markets, see § 615.]

725. Additional powers. 22 G. A., ch. 16, § 1. All cities of the first class and cities of the second class having over seven thousand inhabitants and cities organized under special charters in this state in addition to the powers now granted, shall have the further and additional powers conferred by this act, as follows, to wit: they shall have power to establish, build and regulate market houses, slaughter houses; to license and regulate bill posters; to repair temporary sidewalks without notice to the property owner and provide by ordinance for the manner of assessing the expense thereof on the property in front of which such repairs are made; to remove snow or ice from the sidewalk without notice to the property owner and provide by ordinance for the manner of assessing the expense thereof on the property in front of which such snow or ice shall be removed; provided, however, that the expense thereof shall not exceed one and one-half cent per front foot of any lot; provided, that the snow or ice has remained upon the walk for the period of fifteen hours; to repair paving, curbing, sewers and catch-basins; to regulate telegraph, telephone, electric light, district telegraph and other electric wires, and provide the manner in which, and places where the same shall be placed upon, along or under the streets and alleys of such city; to regulate the price of gas, electric light, water rates and to regulate and fix the charges for water meters, gas meters, electric light meters, or any other device or means necessary for determining the consumption of gas, water or electric light. This shall not be construed to authorize the passage of an ordinance or resolution on the making of any contract, whereby the above powers are abridged. To fix the charges for making gas, electric light, steam heating, water, telephone and district telegraph connections; to compel street railway companies, whenever any street is ordered paved to pave and maintain in width three and one-half feet each way commencing at the center of the space between the rails, and in case of failure to do so to provide by ordinance for such paving and maintenance, and for the manner of assessing against such companies the cost thereof; to compel railroad companies to erect, construct, maintain and operate under such regulations as may from time to time be provided by the council, suitable gates upon public streets at railroad crossings; to provide that magazines used for the keeping of gunpowder, inflammable oils and other combustibles, shall not be located or maintained within a certain distance of the corporate limits of such cities; to provide that before any association, company, society, order, exhibition or aggregation of persons shall parade or march upon the streets of such cities, that they shall first obtain from the mayor of such city a permit, when issued to be without charge, and the same shall state the time, manner and conditions of such parade or march; to provide by ordinance that the width of all streets and alleys, of all additions to such cities, shall be graded in the same manner, and that they shall conform to the width of the existing streets and alleys of such cities; to expel and remove from office, by a vote of three-fourths of the members of the city council any elective officer of such city charged with any crime under the statutes of this state, and such removal shall be as provided by section five hundred and thirty of the code, title four, chapter ten [§ 729], for the removal of members of the city council, to make its bonds for all purposes now provided by law or hereafter to be provided by law, payable on or before a date named, or payable at a time certain, as the city council may determine. And such cities shall have full control of the bridge fund levied and paid upon the property within their corporate limits, and shall have the right to use the same for the construction of bridges and culverts and approaches thereto, repairing the same and paying bridge bonds and interest thereon, issued by such city; and it is hereby made the duty of the board of supervisors of the counties within which such cities are located to levy annually upon all of the taxable property within such city such a per centum for that purpose as may be directed by the city council of such cities not exceeding the limit fixed by law: provided that no contract heretofore made respecting the application of the bridge tax shall be affected hereby.

726. Highways, bridges, streets and squares. 527. The city council shall have the care, supervision, and control of all public highways, bridges, streets, alleys, public squares and commons within the city, and shall cause the same to be kept open and in repair, and free from nuisances; all public bridges exceeding forty feet in length, over any stream crossing a state or county highway, shall be constructed and kept in repair by the county; provided, that the city council may appropriate a sum not exceeding ten dollars per lineal foot to aid in the construction of any county bridge within the limits of such city, or may appropriate a like sum to aid in the construction of any bridge contiguous to said city on a highway leading to the same, or any bridge across any unnavigable river which divides the county in which said city is located from another state; and that no street or alley which shall hereafter be dedicated to public use by the proprietor of ground in any city, shall be deemed a public street or alley, or to be under the use or control of the city council, unless the dedication shall be accepted and confirmed by an ordinance especially passed for such purpose. [R., § 1095; 13 G. A., ch. 179; 14 G. A., ch. 1, § 2; ch. 130, § 2.]

[As to transfer of portion of county bridge fund to city in certain cases, see § 414. As to voting aid for construction of county bridges, see §§ 407-412.]

Road taxes in city limits: Property within city limits is not subject to taxation by township trustees for highway purposes: Marks v. Woodbury County, 47-452; Hawley v. Hoops, 12-506.

Township trustees cannot include an incorporated town in a road district (see § 630), and a road supervisor has no authority over its streets. For an accident resulting from acts of such supervisor in repairing such streets the town is liable: Clark v. Epworth, 56-462.

Bridges: The county has the right to erect public bridges on public highways inside the limits of a city: Foutch, 21-119; Barrett v. Brooks, 21-144.

The provisions of this section do not preclude the county from exercising its authority to build bridges at other places within city limits where the public good requires: Oskaloosa Steam-Engine Works v. Pottawattamie County, 72-134.

The provision of this section that bridges forty feet or more in length shall be deemed county bridges is applicable to bridges outside as well as within city limits, but it has no effect in determining whether bridges less than forty feet in length are to be deemed county bridges. That will depend upon the necessity and importance to the public of each bridge, its character and cost, and the financial ability of the road district in which it is located to construct and maintain it: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

As to the liability of the county for injuries resulting from defects in bridges which it is under obligation to maintain, see notes to § 402, subd. 18.

Before the repeal of the statute allowing cities to erect toll bridges, held, that a city might erect free or toll bridges at its option, and convert the one into the other: Scott v. Des Moines, 34-552.

The conveyance to a city for free and public use of a bridge built as a toll bridge by private enterprise and with the aid of individual subscriptions, in return for which the right of free passage was granted to such subscribers, held not to obligate the city to keep such bridge in repair, or prevent their erecting a new toll bridge on the site of the one purchased, and denying free passage thereon to the subscribers to the old bridge: Ibid.

The city is only required to keep bridges within its limits in reasonable and ordinarily good repair: Holmes v. Hamburg, 47-348.

A municipal corporation is liable for material furnished by it for repairs upon a bridge for a county road within the corporate limits: Tubbs v. Maquoketa, 32-564.

727. Wharves, docks and piers. 528. The city council shall have power to establish and construct and regulate landing-places, wharves, docks, piers, and basins, and to fix the rates of landing, wharfage, and dockage, and to use for the purpose aforesaid any public building or any property belonging to or under the control of the city, and the city council shall have the use and control, for the above purpose, of the shore or bank of any lake or river not the property of individuals, to the extent, and in any manner, that the state can grant such use or control. The city council shall have the power to appoint or provide that the qualified electors shall elect harbor masters, wharf masters, port wardens, and other officers usual and proper for the regulation of the navigation, trade, or commerce of such city, to define their duties and powers, and to fix their fees or compensation. Copies of examination and surveys, and of the proceedings of any port warden in the usual discharge of the duties of such officers, certified under his hand and seal, shall be presumptive evidence of the facts therein duly stated. [R., § 1098.]

The streets of a city are rarely subject to use for many purposes to which a highway in the country would not be, and a street adjoining a navigable river may properly be used for the purpose of a wharf: Llought v. Keokuk, 4-199.

A paved street, terminating at the water's edge, at which boats can moor for loading and unloading, may constitute a wharf: Keokuk v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-196.

A city may establish wharves and provide that fees be paid for the use thereof, and in the exercise of this police power may designate the place where the boats shall receive and discharge freight and passengers: Ibid.; Muscatine v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-185.

Such regulations are not in conflict with the provisions of the constitution of the United States with reference to commerce: Ibid.

An ordinance providing a charge for the landing of boats at places within the city limits where there are no wharves may be sustained in order to prevent boats from discharging and receiving freight where no wharves have been constructed, to the inconvenience of shippers and consignees: Keokuk v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-196.

Such provisions may be made applicable to the landing of boats within the city limits, even upon the premises of the owner: Dubuque v. Stout, 32-47; Dubuque v. Stout, 32-80.

But the right to collect wharfage must follow and not precede the establishment of wharves: Dubuque v. Stout, 32-47; Muscatine v. Hershey, 18-39.

Where the ordinance fixes the fees to be paid by boats using the city wharves, such fees can be recovered unless it is shown that the charges are beyond the limit of just compensation: Keokuk v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-196.

But the person using the public wharves does not become liable to compensation therefor unless the rates of compensation have been fixed: Muscatine v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-185.

The erection of a wharf must be presumed to have been made for the use and benefit of the public, like the paving of a street or other public improvement, unless the contrary is shown: Ibid.

Where the city has permitted the erection and use for years of a private wharf, it cannot without compensation to the owner appropriate the benefits of such wharf by demanding wharfage from boats landing thereat: Grant v. Davenport, 18-179.

A riparian proprietor outside of the corporation limits may erect a wharf on the shore of a navigable stream, conforming to state regulations, if any, and without obstruction to navigation. But within the corporation limits the city has the paramount right in this respect, and may regulate, but not destroy, a private wharf: Ibid.

728. Ferries. 529. The city council of any city shall have the exclusive power to establish and to regulate, and to license ferries from such city, or any landing therein, to the opposite shore, or from one part of said city to another, and in granting such license to impose such reasonable terms and restrictions in relation to the keeping of such ferries, and the time, manner, and rates of the carriage and transportation of persons and property as the city council may prescribe, and the city council shall have power to provide for the revocation of any such license, and for the punishment by proper fines and penalties of the violation of any ordinance prohibiting unlicensed ferries, or regulating those established and licensed. [R., § 1099.]

729. Removals; vacancies. 530. Any member of the city council may be expelled or removed from office by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to the city council, but not a second time for the same cause; any officer appointed by the city council may be removed from office by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to the city council, and provision may be made by ordinance as to the mode in which charges shall be preferred and a hearing be had; in all cases of vacancies in the city council they shall be filled by special election, and in case any office of an elective officer, except members of the city council, shall become vacant before the regular expiration of the term thereof, the vacancy shall be filled by the city council until a successor is elected and qualified, and such successor shall be elected for the unexpired term at the first annual election that occurs after the vacancy shall have happened. [R., § 1101.]

The filling of vacancies in elective offices must be by a majority of all the council, as provided in § 673: State v. Dickie, 47-629.

730. May purchase at execution sale. 18 G. A., ch. 89, § 1. Any city of the first or second class, organized under the general laws of this state, shall have power to acquire real estate, or an interest therein as a purchaser at an execution sale where such city is the plaintiff in execution, or otherwise interested in the proceeding, and to dispose of the property, or interest therein, so acquired, and also to dispose of any real estate, or interest therein, including any streets or portion thereof vacated or discontinued, however acquired or held by such city, in such manner and upon such terms as the city council shall deem just and proper.

731. Itinerant doctors, junk dealers, pawnbrokers. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 1. Cities organized under the general incorporation laws of the state, in addition to the powers now granted them, shall have power: To regulate, license and tax itinerant doctors, physicians and surgeons, junk dealers, and to prohibit pawnbrokers and junk or second-hand dealers purchasing or receiving from minors without the written consent of their parents or guardians.

732. Numbering buildings. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 2. To require all buildings to be numbered; and in case of the failure of the owners to comply with such requirement, to cause the same to be done, and to assess the cost thereof against the property or premises numbered.

733. Water-courses. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 3. To deepen, widen, cover, wall, alter or change the channel of water-courses within their corporate limits.

734. Chimneys and heating apparatus. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 4. To regulate and control the construction of chimneys, stacks, flues, fire-places; hearths, stove-pipes, ovens, boilers, and heating apparatus used in or about buildings, and to require and regulate the construction of fire-escapes, and to cause any or all of them to be removed, or placed in a safe condition, when considered dangerous, and to assess the cost thereof on the property and against the owners thereof.

735. Manufactories; unsafe buildings. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 5. To regulate manufactories which are dangerous in causing or promoting fires; to prevent the deposit of ashes and combustible matter in unsafe places; and to cause all such buildings and inclosures as may be in a dangerous or unsafe state to be put in a safe condition.

736. Lights; bonfires; fire-works. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 6. To regulate the use of lights in stables, shops and other places, and the building of bonfires, and to regulate or prohibit the use of fire-works, fire-crackers, torpedoes, roman candles, sky-rockets and other pyrotechnic displays.

737. Inspection of steam-boilers and magazines. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 7. To provide for the inspection of steam-boilers, and all places used for the storage of explosive or inflammable substances or materials, and to prescribe the necessary means and regulations to secure the public against accidents and injuries therefrom, and to assess the costs and expense of such proceedings against the property and owners thereof.

738. Packing-houses; soap factories; tanneries. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 9. To establish all needful regulations as to the management of packing and slaughter-houses, renderies, tallow-chandleries and soap-factories, bone-factories, tanneries, and manufactories of fertilizing and chemicals within the limits of such cities, and the deposit and removal of all offensive material and substances, and the engendering of offensive odors and sights therefrom, as will protect the public against the same.

739. Gas and water connections. 19 G. A., ch. 89, § 8; 21 G. A., ch. 116. City councils of all cities organized under the general incorporation laws or special charters of the state of Iowa shall have power to require the connections from gas pipes, water pipes, steam-heating pipes and sewer to the curb line of adjacent property to be made before the permanent improvement of the street whereon they are located; and to regulate the making of such connections on streets already improved, and in case the owners of property on such streets shall fail to make such connections within the time fixed by such council, they may cause such connections to be made, and to assess against the property in front of which such connections are made, the cost and expense thereof.

740. Sewer connections. 21 G. A., ch. 116; 22 G. A., ch. 9. They shall also have power to compel all property owners on streets along which sewers shall have been constructed to make proper connections therewith and to use the same for proper purposes, and in case the owners of property on such street shall fail to make such connections within the time fixed by such council they may cause such connections to be made and to assess against the property in front of which such connections are made the cost and expenses thereof.

GENERAL PAVING FUND.

741. Paving intersections. 19 G. A., ch. 38, § 1. The cost of paving the intersections of streets and alleys in all cities organized under the general incorporation laws of this state, including cities acting under special charters therein, and which have not commenced to pave the same at the expense of the property fronting on the street or streets paved, shall be paid for out of a general paving fund to be raised or created as hereinafter provided: Provided, nothing herein contained shall prevent councils of said cities from requiring railroads and street railways to pave any portion of said intersections.

742. Special tax. 19 G. A., ch. 38, § 2. In addition to the taxes which they are now empowered to levy, the city council of any such city are hereby authorized to levy a special tax, not exceeding two mills on the dollar on the assessed valuation of all the property in such city, for the purpose of creating such general paving fund.

743. How used. 19 G. A., ch. 38, § 3. The money raised by the tax hereby authorized to be levied shall not be used for any other purpose than that hereby contemplated.

744. Pledging tax. 19 G. A., ch. 38, § 4. It shall be competent for any city authorized by this act to levy such tax, to anticipate the collection thereof by borrowing money and pledging such tax, whether levied or not, for the payment of the money so borrowed, but such money shall be used or appropriated to no other purpose.

745. Paving already done. 19 G. A., ch. 38, § 5. Any city organized or acting as aforesaid, and which shall have paved the intersections of any of its streets and alleys at the expense of the property fronting on said street, may, by ordinance, avail itself of the benefits of this act: Provided, such ordinance shall receive the affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the members of the city council thereof.

CONSTRUCTION OF SEWERS IN CITIES.

746. Sewerage fund. 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 1. Any city within this state may levy a tax of not more than two mills on the dollar in addition to the maximum tax now authorized by law for the purpose of commencing a general system of sewerage in such city, and the money so raised shall constitute a sewerage fund, and shall be applied to no other purpose.

The limitation of two mills on the dollar applies only where the city is divided into sewerage districts, and the sewerage tax is levied on the property within such districts without regard to its location with reference to the sewer: Ditloe v. Davenport, 74-66.

747. Private property taken. 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 2. When, for the purpose of carrying off the water of any stream which flows within or through the said city, it becomes expedient to cause a principal sewer to pass through private property, the right to condemn such property for this purpose is hereby conferred upon its council. And the powers granted shall be the same in other respects as those enjoyed by railway companies, by and under the provisions of the code. The proceedings to enforce their powers shall also be the same, except that all damages shall be assessed by a board of three commissioners. These shall be appointed by the city council and may be changed at the pleasure thereof. They must be free from all personal interest in subjects brought before them for their adjudication, and they may decide on any question of damages that may arise in respect to any of the property that may be claimed to be injured by the construction of said sewer.

748. Construction. 16 G. A., ch. 107, § 3. Instead of constructing such principal sewer itself, the city may authorize its construction by any individual or company, and may agree to pay therefor out of the sewerage fund.

And the city council may also make all needful rules and regulations in relation to any of the sewers in their respective cities and may regulate the manner in which any property holder may connect therewith, and may also prescribe all needful regulations pertaining thereto.

749. Sewers for state buildings. 18 G. A., ch. 55, § 1. In any incorporated city, or city acting under special charter, within the limits of which may be situated any state buildings, the trustees or commissioners having charge of said buildings or of the construction thereof, shall have authority to construct sewers therefor, through or under any of the streets or alleys of said city.

750. 18 G. A., ch. 55, § 2. All acts or parts of acts, conflicting with this act are hereby repealed.

[As to sewers in cities of the first class, see §§ 838-858, and in cities under special charter, see §§ 943-952.]

TAX TO AID IN BUILDING BRIDGES OVER BOUNDARY RIVERS.

751. Amount. 21 G. A., ch. 13, § 1. Taxes not to exceed five per centum on the assessed value of any incorporated city having over five thousand inhabitants, may be voted to construct, or to aid any company which is or may be incorporated under the laws of the state of Iowa, in the construction of a highway bridge, commencing or terminating in such city, across any navigable boundary river of the state of Iowa.

752. Submission of question; levy. 21 G. A., ch. 13, § 2. Whenever a petition shall be presented to the council of any incorporated city, containing the population herein provided, signed by a majority of the resident freehold tax payers of said city, asking that the question of construction or aiding any company incorporated under the laws of the state of Iowa, in the construction of a highway bridge over such river, be submitted to the voters thereof, it shall be the duty of the council of such incorporated city to immediately give notice of a special election, by publication in some newspaper published in such city: and also by posting copies of such notice in five public places in such incorporated city at least ten days before such election which notice shall specify the time and place of holding such election and in case of a petition to vote aid to such incorporated company, the name of the company proposed to be aided, minimum rate per centum of the tax to be levied, the amount which the board of supervisors are instructed and authorized to cause to be collected each year and in case of proposed aid to such company said notice to also state the amount of work required to be done on such bridge, and any other condition which shall be performed before said tax or any part thereof shall become due, collectible or payable, until the conditions are complied with by such company. Such notice may also contain terms and conditions to be performed by such company receiving such aid, after the completion of such bridge, which terms and conditions shall become obligatory and binding upon such company and its successors and assigns. At such election the question of taxation shall be submitted to the electors of such incorporated city, and the form of the ballots shall be: "For taxation" and "Against taxation" and if a majority of the votes polled be "For taxation" then the clerk of such city shall forthwith certify to the county auditor of the county in which such city is situated, the result of said election, the maximum rate per centum of tax thus voted, the years during which the same is to be collected, the amount to be collected each year and, provided aid is voted to such incorporated company, the name or designation of such company, and the terms and conditions upon which the same when collected is to be paid to such company, together with an exact copy of the notice under which such election was held, which the county auditor shall at once cause to be recorded in the office of the re-order of deeds of the county. When such certificate shall have been recorded, the board of supervisors of the county shall at the time of the levying the ordinary taxes, levy each year on the taxable property of such incorporated city such taxes as are voted under the provisions of this act, as shown by said certificate, and cause the same to be placed on the tax lists of said incorporated city. Said taxes shall be collected in the same manner, and subject to the same laws after they are collected or collectible as other taxes; in conformity with the terms and conditions of the notice submitting the question of taxation to said electors.

753. Tax paid out. 21 G. A., ch. 13, § 3. The moneys collected under the provisions of this act shall be paid out by the county treasurer to the treasurer of such company to whom such aid is voted for the purpose of such highway bridge, or the treasurer of such incorporated city, upon the order of the president or a majority of the directors of such company or the order of the council of such incorporated city, at any time after such council, or a majority of its members, shall have certified to the county treasurer that the conditions required as set forth in the notice for the special election at which the tax was voted, have been complied with; and said council or a majority of its members shall make such certificate whenever such conditions shall have been so performed.

754. Forfeiture. 21 G. A., ch. 13, § 4. Should taxes levied under the provisions of this act remain in the county treasury more than one year after the same shall have been collected, the right to them shall be considered forfeited, and the same shall be refunded to the tax payers, and the board of supervisors shall cause the same to be canceled, and stricken from the tax books of the county, which cancellation shall remove all liens created by the levy of said taxes.

[By § 924 this whole act is made applicable to cities under special charter.]

FUNDING OUTSTANDING INDEBTEDNESS.

755. When authorized. 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 1. All cities organized under the general incorporation laws of the state, and having a population of five thousand or more according to the census of 1885, and whose outstanding indebtedness, evidenced by the warrants of said cities exceeds the sum of ten thousand dollars, are hereby authorized and empowered to fund the same and issue bonds of said cities therefor, in sums of not less than one hundred and not more than one thousand dollars each, having not more than twenty years to run, and bearing a rate of interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually. And such cities may also in the same manner refund the indebtedness of said corporations evidence by bonds thereof heretofore issued and outstanding at the time of the passage of this act.

756. Form of bond. 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 2. Said bonds shall be substantially in the following form:

No. ——. The city of —, in the state of Iowa, for value received promises to pay — — [or order, at — on the — day of —]. 18—, or at any time before the [that] date, at the pleasure of said city, the sum of — dollars, with interest at the rate of — per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually at — on the — days of — and — in each year, upon presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached. This bond is issued by the city council of said city, under the provisions of chapter —, of the acts of the twenty-second general assembly of the state of Iowa, and in conformity with a resolution of said city council, dated — day of —, 18—.

In testimony whereof the said city council of the city of — have caused this bond to be signed by its mayor and attested by its auditor or clerk with the seal of said city affixed, this — day of —, 18—.

— —, Auditor or Clerk.

— —, Mayor of the City of —.

And the interest coupons attached to said bonds shall be substantially in the following form:

No. —. The treasurer of the city of —, in the state of Iowa, will pay the holder hereof on the — day of —, 18—, at —, the sum of — dollars for interest on city bond No. —, Series of —, issued under the provisions of chapter — of the acts of the twenty-second general assembly of the state of Iowa.

— —, City Auditor or Clerk.

[The portion of this form inclosed in brackets is found in the act of 21 G. A., but not in that of 22 G. A. They seem to have been omitted by accident from the latter act, which is in other respects identical with the former except that it includes cities of a less population and applies to outstanding bonds as well as warrants.]

757. Negotiation. 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 3. Whenever any bonds issued under the provisions of this chapter shall be duly executed, numbered consecutively and sealed, they shall be delivered to the treasurer of said city issuing the same, and his receipt taken therefor, and he shall stand charged on his official bond with all bonds so delivered to him and the proceeds thereof, and he shall sell them on the best available terms or exchange them for any legal indebtedness of said city, evidenced by the outstanding warrants or bonds of said city outstanding at the date of the final passage of this act, but in no case shall said bonds be so sold or exchanged for a less sum than their face value and all interest accrued at the date of said sale or exchange; and if any such bonds shall be sold for money, the proceeds thereof shall be applied exclusively to the payment of such bonds or indebtedness outstanding at the date of the final passage of this act. When they are exchanged for warrants of said city said treasurer shall at once cancel said warrants as by the ordinances of said city provided. He shall keep a record of all bonds sold or exchanged by him, by number, date of sale, amount, date of maturity, the name and address of the purchaser, and if exchanged, what evidences of debt were received therefor, which record shall at all times be open to the inspection of the citizens of said city; said treasurer shall also report under oath to the city council of said city, at each first regular session thereof in each month, a statement of all such bonds so sold or exchanged by him since his last report and the date of such sale or exchange, and when exchanged, a description of the city indebtedness exchanged therefor.

758. Limit. 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 4; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 4. No bonds shall be issued under this act in excess of the constitutional limit nor for any other purposes than to fund the outstanding indebtedness of said cities evidenced by the warrants of said cities outstanding at the date of the final passage of this act, or to refund outstanding bonds, at such time or by contracts existing at such date and to be performed within the year 1888.

759. Tax to pay interest. 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 5. The city council of all cities issuing bonds under and by virtue of this chapter shall cause to be assessed and levied each year upon all the taxable property of said city, in addition to the levy for other purposes, a sum sufficient to pay the interest on bonds outstanding issued in conformity with and by virtue of the provisions of this act, accruing before the next annual levy, and such proportion of the principal, that at the end of five years the sum raised shall equal at least twenty per cent. of the amount of bonds issued; at the end of ten years at least forty per cent. of said amount; at the end of fifteen years at least sixty-five per cent. of said amount, and at or before the date of the maturity of said bonds a sum equal to the whole amount of the principal and interest, and the money arising from such levies shall be known as the bond fund, and shall be used for the payment of the bonds issued under and by virtue of the provisions of this act, and the interest thereon and for no other purpose.

760. Redemption of bonds. 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 6. Whenever the amount in the hands of the treasurer belonging to the bond fund, after deducting the amount required to pay the interest on said bonds maturing before the next levy, shall be sufficient to redeem one or more bonds, he shall notify the owner of such bond or bonds that he is prepared to pay the same with all interest accrued thereon, and if not presented for payment or redemption within thirty days after the date of such notice, the interest on such bonds shall cease and the amount due thereon shall be set aside for the payment thereof whenever presented. All redemptions shall be made in the exact order of their issuance, and the notice herein required shall be directed to the address of the owner of said bonds as shown by the record thereof kept in the treasurer's office.

761. Enforcement of payment. 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 7; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 7. If the city council of any city which has issued bonds under the provisions of this act, shall fail to make the levy necessary to pay such bonds and interest coupons at maturity and the same shall have been presented to the treasurer of such city, and payment thereof refused, the owner may file the bond together with all unpaid coupons with the auditor of state, taking his receipt therefor, and the same shall be registered in the auditor's office, and the executive council at their next session as a board of equalization, and at each annual equalization thereafter shall add to the state tax to be levied in said city a sufficient rate to realize the amount of principal and interest past due and to become due prior to the next levy, and the same shall be collected as part of the state tax and paid into the state treasury and passed to the credit of such city, as bond tax, and shall be paid by warrants as the payments mature to the holder of such bond as shown by the register of the state auditor, until the same shall be fully satisfied and discharged; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to limit or postpone the right of any holder of any such bonds to resort to any other remedy which such holder might otherwise have.

762. Embezzlement. 21 G. A., ch. 78, § 8; 22 G. A., ch. 17, § 8. Any member of the council or any officer of any city levying and collecting taxes under the provisions of this act who shall in any manner participate in, or advise the diversion of said tax to any other purpose than that provided for in this act shall be deemed guilty of the crime of embezzlement, and shall be punished accordingly

SUPERIOR COURTS.

763. What cities may establish. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 2. Any city in this state containing seven thousand inhabitants whether organized under a special charter or the general act for the incorporation of cities and towns, may establish a superior court as hereinafter provided, which, when established, shall take the place of the police court of such city.

764. Question submitted. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 2. Upon the petition of one hundred citizens of any such city, the mayor by and with the consent of the common council, may at least ten days before an annual election for city officers, issue a proclamation submitting to the qualified voters of said city, the question of establishing said court. At the same election and every fourth year thereafter (if the said court is established), there shall be elected a judge of the superior court, the votes for whom shall be upon the same ballot with other city officers. Should a majority of all the votes cast at such election be in favor of said court, the same shall thereby be established, and the said judge shall qualify and hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor is elected and qualified. Immediately after each election of said judge, the mayor of said city shall transmit a certificate of the election of said judge to the governor of the state, who shall thereupon issue to him a commission empowering him to act as judge as herein provided.

This act is not unconstitutional as providing for the exercise of legislative power by the people. In confers upon cities certain powers which may be accepted and exercised by a vote of the people, but the validity of the act of the legislature is not made dependent upon popular vote: Lytle v. May, 49-224.

765. Judge. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 3. Said judge shall be a qualified elector of the city, and be possessed of the legal acquirements prescribed in section two hundred and eight of the code of Iowa [§ 281], and shall subscribe in writing the same oath required of judges of the district court and file the same with the mayor of the city, and shall give bond to the state of Iowa in the sum of four thousand dollars, for the faithful discharge of his duties, which bond must be filed with and approved by the mayor; and the effect of such election and qualification shall be to abolish the office of police judge of such city.

766. Vacancy. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 4. In case of a vacancy occurring in the said office of judge the mayor, by and with the consent of the common council, shall appoint a judge, who shall hold the office until the next annual city election, and until his successor is elected and qualified, who shall be chosen to fill the unexpired time.

767. Terms. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 5. Said judge shall hold at least one term of court in each month, except in August, commencing on the first Monday in each month, but as a police court it shall always be open for the dispatch of business.

768. Number of terms each year. 22 G. A., ch. 40, § 4. Said court shall hold at least eight, and not to exceed eleven terms each year, the times thereof being arranged by the judge of the court in such manner as shall least conflict with the terms of the district court of the county where said superior court is held, the terms to be fixed by the general order made of record at least ten days before the first term of that year, but no term need be held in the month of August.

769. Jurisdiction. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 6; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 40, § 1. Said court shall have jurisdiction in all civil matters concurrent with the district court as now and as may hereafter be provided by law, except in probate matters and actions for divorce, alimony and separate maintenance. It shall have exclusive original jurisdiction to try and determine all actions, civil and criminal, for the violation of city ordinances, and all jurisdiction conferred on police courts as now or as may hereafter be provided by law; and concurrent jurisdiction with justices of the peace, and writs of error and appeals may be taken from justices' courts in the township in which the court is held, and by consent of parties from any other township in the county. For the trial of criminal actions on information and complaint the court shall be open at such times under such rules as the court shall prescribe. In actions by attachment, where real property is levied on by writs of attachment, the officer levying the writ shall make entry thereof in the incumbrance book in the office of the clerk of the district court, in like manner and with like effect as of levies made in the district court. And parties may be committed to the city prison for confinement or punishment instead of the county jail, at the option of the judge: Provided, however, that in the absence of the said judge, or in case of his inability to act, then during such time proceedings for the violation of city ordinances may be had before a justice of the peace residing in such city.

[The latter part of this section, commencing "and parties may be committed," etc., is an amendment to the original § 6 of 16 G. A., ch. 143, added by 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 3. Sec. 1 of 22 G. A., ch. 40, repeals § 6 of the act of 16 G. A., but it does not appear that it was intended thereby to repeal the amendment, which is therefore here retained.]

The superior court has, as to cases originally brought therein, concurrent jurisdiction throughout the county with courts of general jurisdiction. The limitation of jurisdiction to the township in which the city is located applies only to appeals and writs of error from justices of the peace: Winet v. Berryhill, 55-41.

Under the original section the jurisdiction of superior courts over appeals in civil cases from justices of the peace in the township was not exclusive of that of the circuit courts in the respective counties: Hickox v. Nutting, 55-403; Hickox v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 55-431.

770. Change of venue; trial without jury; appeal. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 7; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 4; 22 G. A., ch. 40, § 2. Changes of venue may be had from said court in all civil actions to the district court of the county, in the same manner, for like causes and with the same effect as the venue is changed from the district court as now or hereafter may be provided by law. All criminal actions, including those for the violation of the city ordinances shall be tried summarily and without a jury, saving to the defendant right of appeal to the district court, which appeals shall be taken in the same time and manner as appeals are taken from justices' courts in criminal actions.

Under a previous statute held that there was no law in force authorizing an appeal from a superior court except to the supreme court, and therefore the defendant in a prosecution in the superior court had the right of trial by a jury: Creston v. Nye, 74-369.

771. Powers of judge in vacation. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 8. The said judges shall have the same power in regard to injunctions, writs, orders and other proceedings, out of courts as are now or may be hereafter possessed for [by] the judges of the district [or circuit] courts; and may also administer oaths, take acknowledgments and depositions (except depositions to be used in his own court), and solemnize marriages. But he shall not practice in any of the courts of this state.

772. Procedure. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 9. The superior court shall be a court of record, and all statutes in force respecting venue and commencement of actions, the jurisdiction, process, and practice of the [circuit and] district court, the pleadings and mode of trial of action at law or in equity, and the enforcement of its judgments by execution or otherwise, and the allowance and taxing of costs, and the making of rules for practice or otherwise, shall be deemed applicable to the superior court, except wherein the same may be inconsistent with the provisions of this act. The records and papers properly filed in a cause in [either] the district [or circuit] court[s] are equally evidence in said superior court.

773. Seal. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 10. The said court shall have and use its own seal, having on the face thereof the words, "superior court," and the name of the city, county and state.

774. Clerk. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 11. As long as the business of the court can be done with convenience and dispatch, without a clerk, the judge shall be the clerk of the said court. Whenever, from the accumulation of causes and other demands upon the court a clerk shall become necessary, the city recorder, or clerk, shall be the clerk of the superior court, and shall receive such compensation for his services as the city council may from time to time allow; and he shall perform the duties in said court provided by law for the clerk of the circuit [district] court, and shall give bonds as required of the said judge.

775. Marshal. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 12. The city marshal shall be the executive officer of said court and his duties and authority in court and in executing process shall correspond with those of the sheriff of the county in the circuit [district] court, and with process from that court, and he shall receive the same fees and compensation as the sheriff for like services. But the process of said court may be also served by the sheriff.

776. Compensation of judge. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 13. The judge of said court shall receive in full compensation for his services the sum of two thousand dollars per annum, to be paid to him quarterly; the first two quarters of the municipal year shall be paid from the city treasury, and the last two quarters from the county treasury wherein said city is located. The costs and fees of said court in civil actions shall be the same as in the [circuit and] district courts except herein otherwise provided, and the clerk of the superior court shall account for and pay over to the city all fees that may be paid into the said court, and also for all fines for the violation of city ordinances. Of all other fines he shall render the same account as is provided for justices of the peace. In actions for the violation of city ordinances, if unsuccessful, the city shall pay all costs, the same as provided by law for the county in other criminal actions prosecuted in the name and behalf of the state. The fees in criminal actions shall be the same as in justices' courts, and shall be paid and accounted for as hereinbefore stated, and as otherwise provided by law for justices of the peace and their courts.

777. Jury. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 14; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 5. When causes are assigned for trial, any party desiring a jury shall then make his demand therefor, or the same shall be deemed to have been waived. Causes in which a jury has been demanded shall be tried first in their order, and when a disposition shall have been made of such causes, the jury shall be discharged from further attendance at that term. No juryman shall be detained longer than one week, except upon trial commenced within the first week of his attendance.

778. Selection of jurors. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 15. In order to provide jurors for said court, the judge, mayor, and recorder shall immediately after qualifying and every three months thereafter, make out a list of twelve names of persons from the body of the county in which the city is situated, qualified to serve as jurors in the district court, which list shall be furnished to the clerk of said superior court, and from this list there shall be drawn by the clerk and marshal nine persons in the same manner as jurors are drawn in the district court, and a precept from the court shall issue accordingly five days before the first day of next term, as provided by law in like cases in the district court.

779. Juries, how constituted; costs. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 16; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 40, § 3. The jury shall consist of six qualified jurors, unless, when a jury is demanded as provided in section three of this act [§ 777], the party at that time shall demand a jury of twelve, and in all civil cases the party requesting a jury of twelve shall at the time of making such demand deposit with the clerk the entire additional expense of the additional jurors, which sum shall be fixed by the court and paid to the clerk at the time of making such demand. If the judge shall deem proper, he shall cause a special venire to issue for said extra jurors, or for any number not exceeding twenty-four, or he may order the marshal to complete the same from the by-standers. The pay for all jurors shall be two dollars per day and mileage, to be taxed with the costs, which in all civil cases shall be paid by the county in the same manner as in [circuit and] district court[s]. All such deposits of additional expense for jurors shall be paid into the county treasury at the close of each term of such superior court, and the county treasurer shall give duplicate receipts therefor, one receipt to be held by said clerk, and the other to be presented by him to the county auditor, who shall charge the treasurer with the amount thereof in the proper account.

[The reference to "section three of this act" is evidently a mistake, section five of 19 G. A., ch. 24, which is the act in which the words are used, being probably intended. That section is § 777 above.]

As a party may have a trial by a jury of twelve by depositing the amount necessary to cover the additional expense caused thereby, the provisions of this section are not unconstitutional: Connors v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 74-383.

780. Challenges. 22 G. A., ch. 40, § 5. In all civil cases where the jury shall consist of six jurors the challenges allowed to either party shall be limited to three each, but where the jury shall consist of twelve jurors the same number of challenges shall be allowed to either party as is now or may hereafter be allowed in the district court.

781. Appeals. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 17; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 7. All appeals from judgments or orders of said court or the judge thereof in civil actions shall be taken to the supreme court in the same manner and under the same restriction, within the same time, and with the same effect as appeals are taken from the circuit [district] to the supreme court.

782. Judgments made liens. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 18; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 8. Judgments in said court may be made liens upon real estate in the county in which the city is situated, by filing transcripts of the same in the circuit [district] court, as provided in sections three thousand five hundred and sixty-seven and three thousand five hundred and sixty-eight of the code [§§ 4816, 4817], relating to judgments of justices of the peace and with equal effect, and from the time of such filing it shall be treated in all respects as to its effect and mode of enforcement as a judgment rendered in the circuit [district] court as of that date, and no execution can thereafter be issued from the said superior court on such judgment, and no real property shall be levied on, or sold on process issued out of the court created under the provisions of this act; and judgments of said superior court may be made liens upon real estate in other counties in the same manner as judgments in the [circuit and] district courts.

783. City attorney. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 19. It shall be the duty of the city attorney or solicitor to file informations in the superior court for violation of city ordinances and prosecute the same, and for such services he shall receive such compensation as the city council shall allow.

784. Judge as magistrate. 16 G. A., ch. 143, § 20; 19 G. A., ch. 24, § 9. The said judge shall be ex officio a magistrate and in preliminary examinations the proceedings and practice shall be the same as before any other magistrate, and all warrants issued in criminal proceedings under the seal of the court, may be used in any other part of the state without further attestation, in like manner as if issued by the district court.

785. Short-hand reporters. 21 G. A., ch. 44, § 1. The judges of the several superior courts in the state may appoint, whenever in the judgment of either of them it will expedite the public business, a short-hand reporter, who shall be well skilled in the art and competent to discharge the duties required, for the purpose of recording the oral testimony of the witnesses, in all civil cases, upon the request of either party thereto.

786. Appointment and compensation. 21 G. A., ch. 44, § 2. All of the provisions of section three thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven of the code [§ 5029] shall apply to the appointment and compensation of such short-hand reporter, and to the testimony so taken, so far as the same shall be applicable, except that the compensation of such short-hand reporter shall not exceed five dollars per day for the time actually employed.

OF CITIES OF THE SECOND CLASS.

787. Mayor. 531; 18 G. A., ch. 120. The mayor of cities of the second class shall be the presiding officer of the city council, and shall constitute a member of such council and shall have a casting vote where there is a tie in all cases including the election of officers and passage of ordinances, and all other matters provided for in sections four hundred and eighty-nine and four hundred and ninety-three of the code [§§ 669, 673]. [12 G. A., ch. 188.]

788. Election of officers and terms. 532. The qualified electors of each city of the second class shall elect a city treasurer, who shall hold his office for one year, and a city solicitor, who shall hold his office for two years; each of said officers shall have such powers and perform such duties as are prescribed in this chapter, or by any ordinance of the city council not inconsistent therewith. In all such cities, the marshal, deputy-marshal, and police, shall be elected by the city council, and shall hold their offices during its pleasure. [R., § 1103; 7 G. A., ch. 24; 14 G. A., ch. 7.]

[In the sixth line "therewith" is "herewith" in the printed Code. As to marshals in cities of the first class, see §§ 798-801, and in cities under special charter, see § 915.]

Where neither the duties nor the compensation of city solicitor are fixed by the council, he should, unless otherwise instructed, perform such duties within the usual scope of the authority of such officer as the interests of the city may require; and he may recover reasonable compensation therefor: Kinnie v. Waverly, 42-437; Kinnie v. Waverly, 42-486.

789. Officers elected biennially. 21 G. A., ch. 141, § 1. The mayor, treasurer, assessor, solicitor, shall be elected biennially in cities of the second class, by the qualified electors of the city. They shall be qualified electors and shall reside within the limits of the city and they shall hold their respective offices for the term for which they have been elected and qualified.

790. Terms of office. 21 G. A., ch. 141, § 2. The terms of office for the mayor, treasurer, assessor, and solicitor shall be two years and the first election under this act shall be held on the first Monday of March, 1887.

791. Marshal. 533. The marshal of the cities of the second class shall execute and return all writs and processes to him directed by the mayor, and, in criminal cases, or cases in violation of city ordinances, he may serve the same in any part of the county; he shall suppress all riots, disturbances, and breaches of the peace, apprehend all disorderly persons in the city, and shall pursue and arrest any person fleeing from justice in any part of the state; he shall apprehend any person in the act of committing any offense against the laws of the state or ordinances of the city, and forthwith bring such person before the mayor, or other competent authority for examination and trial; he shall have, in the discharge of his proper duties, like power, be subject to like responsibilities, and shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases. [R., § 1104.]

[As to marshal in cities of first class, see § 801.]

792. Erection of jail. 19 G. A., ch. 154, § 1. Any city of the second class shall have the power to erect and maintain a city jail, and to purchase the necessary grounds therefor, and to appropriate out of its general fund the amounts necessary for said purposes.

793. Water-works bonds. 22 G. A., ch. 10, § 1. In all cases when a city of the second class has determined or hereafter may determine to erect water-works to be owned and operated by the city as provided in section number four hundred and seventy-one of the code [§ 639], it shall be lawful for such city to issue its bonds to procure the money for such purpose to an amount not exceeding five per cent. upon the taxable property of such city; but in no case shall the aggregate indebtedness of the city by the issue of such bond[s] be increased beyond the limit of indebtedness fixed by the constitution of the state; and no money procured upon the issue of such bonds shall be used for any other purpose than the erection of such water-works. No such bond shall bear a greater rate than six per cent. interest, nor be drawn to run more than twenty years.

OF CITIES OF THE FIRST CLASS.

794. Powers of mayor; appointment of police. 534. The mayor of the cities of the first class, shall, at the first regular meeting of the city council in the month of April of every year, and at such other times as he may deem expedient, report to the city council concerning the municipal affairs of the city, and recommend such measures as to him may seem advisable; he shall appoint one chief of police and as many subordinate officers and watchmen as the city council may deem necessary, who shall hold their appointments during the pleasure of the mayor; he shall have power, in cases of emergency, to appoint as many special watchmen as he may think proper, but such appointments shall be reported to and subject to the action of the city council at its next meeting. [R., § 1105.]

795. Election of officers by council. 16 G. A., ch. 33, § 1; 17 G. A., ch. 20, § 1. In all cities of the first class incorporated under the general incorporation laws of this state, whose population according to the census of 1875 was not less than nineteen thousand, the city council at the first regular meeting in April in each and every year thereafter shall elect one city marshal, one city solicitor, one city physician, one building commissioner, one city civil engineer, one superintendent of city markets, one street commissioner, and when deemed necessary by the council, one wharf-master, who shall hold their respective offices for the term of one year and until their successors are elected and qualified, they shall be responsible to the city council for the true and faithful performance of the duties of their respective offices and shall receive for their services such compensation as the city council shall by ordinance from time to time provide, and for the election of the officers provided for in this section it shall require an affirmative vote of a majority of all the members elected to the city council.

796. Other officers; bonds. 16 G. A., ch. 33, § 2; 17 G. A., ch. 20, § 2. The qualified electors of every such city shall elect one treasurer, one auditor, and one police judge, who shall hold their respective offices for the term of two years and until their successors are elected and qualified. Each of said officers shall have such powers and perform such duties as are prescribed by chapter ten, title four, of the code, and in any ordinance of the city not inconsistent with the code. The officers provided for in this and the preceding section shall each be required to give bonds with two sureties each in such sum for the faithful performance of their respective duties as the city council shall from time to time prescribe by ordinance, and the officers provided for in this act may be removed from their respective offices as is provided by section five hundred and thirty of the code [§ 729]; provided, that the provisions of this act shall not apply to cities organized under special charter.

797. 17 G. A., ch. 20, § 3. So much of section five hundred and thirty-four of the code [§ 794] as was superseded by chapter thirty-three of the sixteenth general assembly, is hereby revived, anything in subdivision one of section forty-five of the code [§ 49], to the contrary notwithstanding.

798. Officers; terms. 535. The qualified electors shall elect a marshal, a civil engineer, a treasurer, an auditor, a solicitor, police judge, and a superintendent of the market, who shall hold their offices for two years, and until their successors are elected and qualified; each of said officers shall have such powers and perform such duties as are prescribed in this chapter; or in any ordinance of the city, not inconsistent herewith. [R., § 1106; 13 G. A., ch. 12.]

799. Marshal. 20 G. A., ch. 7, § 1. The mayors of cities of the first class organized under the general incorporation laws of the state and having a population of not less than twenty-two thousand and three hundred by the United States census of 1880 shall, subject to the approval of the city council, appoint a marshal who shall be ex officio chief of police, and shall hold his office at the pleasure of the mayor. The marshal so appointed shall have all the powers conferred by the statutes of the state and ordinances of the city on the chief of police and the marshal, except the appointment of deputy-marshals, and shall perform the duties of both offices. He may designate one or more members of the regular police force of the city to act as deputy-marshals, and such designated policemen shall have all powers now conferred on deputy-marshals.

800. 20 G. A., ch. 7, § 2. All acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

801. Powers and duties of marshal. 536. The city marshal shall execute and return all process to him directed by the mayor or judge of the police court, and shall attend on the sittings of said court; he shall have power to execute any such process, by himself or deputy, in any part of the county; he shall suppress all riots, disturbances, and breaches of the peace, apprehend all persons committing any offense against the laws of this state or the ordinances of the city, and forthwith bring such persons before the proper authority for examination or trial; he shall have power to pursue and arrest any person fleeing from justice in any part of the state, and to receive and execute any proper authority for the arrest and detention of criminals fleeing or escaping from other places or states, and to appoint one or more deputies for whose official acts he shall be responsible; he shall have, in the discharge of his proper duties, like powers, be subject to like responsibilities, and shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases. [R., § 1107.]

[The marshal may be given a fixed salary in lieu of fees: See § 813.]

The county is not liable to the city marshal for fees for services in criminal cases, notwithstanding the last clause of this section. He is a city officer, and is presumed to be payable by the city: Christ v. Polk County, 48-302.

In cases where for the same services the fees allowed to sheriffs are greater than those allowed to constables, the marshal can only recover fees allowed constables: Bryan v. Des Moines, 51-590.

The marshal not being charged with any duty in respect to streets and sidewalks, notice to him of defective condition of a sidewalk will not be notice to the city: Cook v. Anamosa, 66-427.

A city marshal who has properly seized stock running at large within the city limits may keep it in such manner as he sees fit, and will not lose jurisdiction thereof by placing it in a pound beyond the city limits: Pierce v. Evans, 36-495.

802. Police; width of tires; hack stands; rates. 537; 21 G. A., ch. 92. The city council shall, by a general ordinance, direct the number of officers of the police and watchmen to be appointed. They shall also provide, in addition to the regular watch, for the appointment of a reserve watch, to consist of a suitable number of persons in each ward, to be called into duty as the council may prescribe, and by the mayor or officers of police under his direction, in special cases of emergency. The duty of the chief and other officers of the police, and of the watchmen, shall be, under the direction of the mayor and in conformity with the ordinances of the city, to suppress all riots, disturbances, and breaches of the peace; to pursue and arrest any person fleeing from justice in any part of the state; to apprehend any and all persons in the act of committing any offense against the laws of the state or the ordinances of the city, and forthwith to bring such person or persons before the police court or other competent authority for examination and at all times to diligently and faithfully enforce all such laws, ordinances, and regulations for the preservation of good order and public welfare as the city council may ordain, and for such purposes they shall have all the power of constables. The mayor, marshal, chief of police, and watchmen of the city may, upon view, arrest any person who may be guilty of a breach of the ordinances of the city, or of any crime against the laws of the state, and may, upon reasonable information, supported by affidavits, procure process for the arrest of any person who may be charged with a breach of any of the ordinances of the city. The city council shall have the power to prescribe by ordinance the width of the tires of all wagons, drays, and other vehicles habitually used in the transportation of persons and articles from one part of the city to another, or in the transportation of coal, wood, stone, or lumber into the city; to establish stands for hackney-coaches, cabs, and omnibusses, drays and express wagons, and enforce the observance and use thereof; and to fix the rates and prices for the transportation of persons and property in such coaches, cabs, and omnibusses from one part of the city to another.

[Chief of police and police officers may be given a fixed salary: See § 813.]

INFIRMARY — HOUSE OF REFUGE — WORKHOUSE — POLICE COURT.

803. Infirmary. 538. The city council shall have power to establish and maintain an infirmary for the accommodation of the poor of the city, either within or without the limits of the city, and to provide for the distribution of outdoor relief to the poor. [R., § 1111.]

804. House of refuge. 539. The city council shall have power to establish and maintain, either within its limits or within the county in which it is situated, a house of refuge or a house of correction, and a workhouse, or either of them, and place the same under the management and control of such directors, superintendents, and other officers as the council may, by ordinance, provide. All children under the age of sixteen years, who shall be convicted of any offense made punishable by imprisonment under any ordinance of the city, or who shall be liable to be committed to prison under any such ordinance, may be confined in such house of refuge, and may be there kept, or apprenticed out, under such rules as the directors of the house of refuge may prescribe, until they arrive at the age of eighteen years. Any person over the age of sixteen years convicted of the violation of any ordinance, and liable to be punished therefor by imprisonment, may, in lieu thereof, be committed to the house of correction, or to the workhouse, as may be provided by ordinance. [R., § 1112.]

805. Directors. 540. The board of directors of any house of refuge established by any city, are authorized to appoint a committee of one or more of their own number, with power to execute and deliver, on behalf of said board, indentures of apprenticeship for any inmate of said institution whom they may deem a proper person for an apprenticeship to a trade or occupation, to such person as said committee or the board may select; and said indentures shall have the like force and effect as other indentures of apprenticeship under the laws of this state, and said indentures shall be filed and kept in said institution by the superintendent thereof, and it shall not be necessary to file the same in any other place or office. [R., § 1113.]

806. Recommitment. 541. When any inmate of said institution shall have been apprenticed and proved untrustworthy and unreformed, he or she shall be recommitted to the said institution to be held in the same manner as before said apprenticeship. [R., § 1115.]

807. City prison; station houses; police court and clerk. 542. The city council shall have power to erect, establish and maintain a city prison, which shall be in the keeping of the city marshal under such rules and regulations as the city council shall provide. They shall provide one or more watch or station houses; they shall also provide suitable rooms for holding police court;

they shall provide, by ordinance, for the election by the qualified electors of the city, or for the appointment by the police judge, of a clerk of such police court, and for the selection, summoning, and impaneling its juries, and for all such matters touching said court as may tend to its efficiency, and the dispatch of business. No clerk of said court shall be in any way concerned as counsel or agent in the prosecution or defense of any person before such court. [R., § 1116.]

[The city prison must be provided with a separate apartment for the detention of females: See § 6126, 6127.]

808. Police judge. 543. The police judge shall have, in all criminal cases, the powers and jurisdiction vested in justices of the peace; he shall also have power to take the acknowledgment of deeds and other writings, and shall have jurisdiction of all violations of the ordinances of the city. Every such police court shall be deemed a court of record, shall have a seal, to be provided by the city council, with the name of the state in the center, and the style of the court around the margin. [R., § 1117; 13 G. A., ch. 12.]

While exercising the powers and jurisdiction of justices of the peace, juries may be necessary (§ 6070), and under the preceding section the council may provide for impaneling them; but in the trial of offenses against an ordinance of the city the defendant has no right to a trial by jury, nor a change of venue: Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572.

The provisions of the Code relating to police courts, so far as they differ from the corresponding provisions of the Revision, are not applicable to cities under special charter: Weir v. Allen, 47-482.

809. Fees of police judge. 544. The police judge holding the police court shall be entitled to receive, in all criminal cases prosecuted in behalf of the state, the same fees, to be collected in the same manner, as a justice of the peace in like cases; and in cases prosecuted in behalf of the city, such fees, not exceeding those for services of the like nature in state prosecutions, as the council may, by ordinance, prescribe; and shall also receive such salary or compensation as the city council may in like manner prescribe. [R., § 1118; 13 G. A., ch. 12.]

It seems that it would not be proper for the council to provide that the police judge should only have fees in cases where judgment should be rendered in favor of the city: Crane v. Des Moines, 47-105.

The statute (§ 813) allowing judges of police courts a fixed salary in lieu of fees, held to authorize the allowance to a police judge of a salary in lieu not only of fees from the city, but from any source whatever, so that the city might recover from the judge fees received by him from the state in prosecutions under state laws: Des Moines v. Hillis, 53-643.

Where, by ordinance, the police judge is given a salary in lieu of fees, the city becomes entitled to his fees in state cases, and the judge may bring action for such fees and account for them to the city: Labour v. Polk County, 70-568.

810. Court open; jurors. 545. The police court shall always be open for the dispatch of business; and the jurors in said court shall have the qualifications of jurors in the district court. [R., § 1119; 13 G. A., ch. 12.]

811. Appeal. 546. An appeal may be taken from the police court, in like manner as from a justice of the peace, on the trial whereof the appellate court shall take judicial notice of the ordinances of the city. [R., § 1120; 13 G. A., ch. 12.]

[As to courts taking judicial notice of city ordinances, see § 662 and notes.]

812. Mayor to act. 547. Until a police judge shall be elected and qualified, the mayor of any such city shall have all the powers and jurisdiction of such judge, and shall hold the police court in such manner as required of the police judge, and shall be entitled to demand and receive the same fees and compensation as may be provided for the police judge or police court. [R., § 1121.]

[The superior court, where there is one, exercises the jurisdiction of the police court: See § 763, 769.]

COMPENSATION OF OFFICERS.

813. Salaries in lieu of fees. 17 G. A., ch. 56, § 1. All cities of the first class, organized under the general incorporation law, and all cities organized under special charter, may provide by ordinance that all judges of police courts or other city courts, city marshals, chiefs of police, police officers, and all other officers elected or appointed, shall receive, in lieu of all fees now allowed by law or ordinance, such fixed salary, in monthly or quarterly instalments as may be provided by ordinance, when not provided by law, which salary, when it shall have been fixed, shall not be increased or diminished during their terms of office.

An ordinance changing the compensation of the officers named from fees to salary, as contemplated by this act, cannot affect such as are in office at the time of the passage of the act, during their term of office: Bryan v. Des Moines, 51-590.

This statute is not unconstitutional as delegating legislative authority to the city council: Des Moines v. Hillis, 55-643.

814. No other compensation. 17 G. A., ch. 56, § 2. No such officer of any such city shall receive, for his own use, any fees or other compensation for his services of such city, than that which shall be provided as contemplated in section one of this act [§ 813]; but all such fees as are now or may hereafter be allowed by law for such services, shall, by such officer, when collected, be paid into the city treasury, at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by ordinance.

An officer having received a salary under an ordinance in pursuance of the preceding section is estopped from claiming fees: Bryan v. Des Moines, 51-590.

It is immaterial that he has collected fees and paid them into the city treasury under protest: Christ v. Des Moines, 53-144.

The city may recover from the police judge fees received by him in criminal cases prosecuted in behalf of the state, whether received from defendants in such case or from the county: Des Moines v. Hillis, 55-643.

But the police judge may sue the county for such fees: Labour v. Polk County, 70-568.

815. Repealing clause; proviso. 17 G. A., ch. 56, § 3. All acts and parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed; provided, that the intent of this act is not to abolish any fees now allowed by law, but to require the same to be paid into the city treasury.

816. Compensation of councilmen. 22 G. A., ch. 24, § 1. There shall be paid to members of the city council of cities of the first class, an amount prescribed by ordinance not in excess of two hundred and fifty dollars per annum, and this amount shall be in full compensation of all services of such councilmen of every kind and character whatsoever, connected with their official duties.

817. 22 G. A., ch. 24, § 2. All acts and parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

818. Fire regulations. 22 G. A., ch. 21, § 1. Cities of the first class, shall have power to make regulations against danger or accidents by fire, to establish fire limits and to prohibit the erection thereon of any building or addition to any building unless the outer walls and roof thereof be made of brick and mortar or of iron and stone and mortar or of other non-combustible material and to provide for the removal of any building or addition erected contrary to such prohibitions.

819. 22 G. A., ch. 21, § 2. The provisions of section four hundred and fifty-seven of the code of 1873 [§ 616] shall not apply to cities of the first class.

820. Library tax. 22 G. A., ch. 18, § 1. All cities of the first class organized as such since January first, 1885, that have accepted the benefits of the provisions of section four hundred and sixty-one of the code of Iowa [§ 620], shall in addition to the powers conferred by said section have power to levy and collect a tax not to exceed three mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation of such city or town to pay the interest on any indebtedness heretofore contracted or that may hereafter be contracted or incurred for the purchase of land and the erection of buildings for a public library or the hiring of rooms or buildings for such purposes or for the compensations of the necessary employees as provided in section four hundred and sixty-one of the code [§ 620] and to create a sinking fund for the extinguishment of such indebtedness.

821. Improvement of alleys. 22 G. A., ch. 13, § 1. So much of section one, chapter fifty-one, acts of the fifteenth general assembly [§ 625] as requires cities of the first class to provide by ordinance for the improvement of alleys after presentation of petition by owner of property to be assessed, is hereby repealed and such cities of the first class organized under the general incorporation laws of the state may provide by ordinance how such improvements shall be made; and hereafter said cities of the first class may order an alley to be improved, graded or macadamized by resolution passed by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of such council and on voting on such resolution the yeas and nays shall be recorded.

822. Appropriations. 22 G. A., ch. 4, § 1. All cities of the first class shall make their appropriation for all the different expenditures of the city government for each fiscal year at or before the beginning thereof, and it shall be unlawful for the city council or any officer, agent or employee of the city, to issue any warrant, enter into any contract, or appropriate any money in excess of the amount thus appropriated, for the different expenses of the city, during the year for which said appropriation shall be made, and any such city shall not appropriate in the aggregate, an amount in excess of its annual legally authorized revenue, but nothing herein shall prevent such cities from anticipating their revenues for the year for which such appropriation was made, or from bonding or refunding their outstanding indebtedness, provided, that this section shall not apply to cities of the first class organized since 1881.

823. Bids for supplies. 22 G. A., ch. 4, § 2. Such cities shall advertise in at least two newspapers published in said cities for three weeks, two insertions each week for bids for furnishing all supplies of every kind, for the several departments of [the] city, not required to be advertised for by the board of public works; said advertisements to be published two weeks before the beginning of each fiscal year. Each officer or board in charge of any department in said cities, shall furnish and file in the city clerk's office, thirty days before the beginning of each fiscal year, a sworn, detailed statement of the supplies necessary for his or their department during the next fiscal year.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS IN CITIES OF FIRST CLASS.

824. Special assessments. 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 1. Cities of the first class, that have been or may be so organized since January first, 1881, shall have power to open, widen, extend, grade, construct permanent sidewalks, curb, pave, gravel, macadamize and gutter, or cause the same to be done in any manner they may by ordinance deem proper, any street, highway, avenue or alley within the limits of such city, and may open, extend, widen, grade, park, pave or otherwise as aforesaid, improve part of any such street, highway, avenue or alley, and levy a special tax as hereinafter provided, on the lots and lands fronting and abutting on such street, highway, avenue or alley, and where said improvements are proposed to be made to pay the expenses of the same. But unless the owners, resident in such city, of a majority of the front feet owned by them, of the property subject to assessment as hereinafter provided, for such improvements, shall petition the council of such city to make the same, such improvements shall not be made until three-fourths of all the members of such council shall by vote, assent to the making of the same: Provided, that the construction of permanent sidewalks, curbing, paving, graveling or macadamizing of any such street, highway, avenue or alley, shall not be done until after the bed of the same shall have been brought so near to the grade as established by the ordinances of such city, as that said sidewalks, curbs, paving or other improvements as aforesaid, when fully completed, will bring said streets, highways, avenues or alleys fully up to said established grade.

825. Contract. 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 2. It shall be the duty of the council of said city to require all of the work necessary to the making of any improvements authorized by section one hereof [§ 824], to be done under contract thereof, to be entered into with the lowest responsible bidder, and bonds with good and sufficient surety for the faithful performance of such work, shall be required to be given by the contractors; provided, that all bids for such work, or any part thereof, may be rejected by such council, and new bids ordered.

826. Improvement districts; taxes; collection. 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 3. Any such city shall, for the purpose of effectuating the objects enumerated in section one hereof [§ 824], have power, by ordinance, to create improvement districts, which shall be consecutively numbered. The cost of opening, extending, widening, grading, constructing permanent sidewalks, curbing, paving, graveling, macadamizing and guttering any street, highway, avenue or alley, within any improvement district, except spaces in front of city property, and any other property exempt from special taxes except the intersections of streets, highways or avenues and space opposite alleys, and except as to paving, graveling or macadamizing between and outside the rails of railways and street railways, shall be assessed upon the lots and lands abutting the same, in proportion to the front feet so abutting upon such street, highway, avenue or alley, where said improvements are proposed to be made. The assessment of the special taxes herein provided for shall be made as follows: The total cost of the improvement, except spaces in front of city property and any other property exempt from special taxation, and except as to intersections of streets, highways or avenues, and space opposite alleys, and except as aforesaid, as to the paving, graveling or macadamizing between and outside the rails of any railway or street railway, shall be levied upon the property as aforesaid, and become delinquent as herein provided; one-fifth shall become delinquent in ninety days after such levy, one-fifth in two years, one-fifth in four years, one-fifth in six years, and one-fifth in eight years, after the levy is made. Such special taxes shall be payable by the owners of the property upon which they are levied as aforesaid, at or before the times they become delinquent, as hereinbefore provided and in the instalments herein mentioned; and shall also be a lien upon the lots and lands so assessed, and shall draw interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the time of the levy aforesaid, until the same shall be paid or become delinquent, whichever shall first happen, said interest to be payable semi-annually, or annually as the council of such city may deem best. The property so assessed may be sold for the payment of any instalment of said tax or interest as aforesaid, which is payable and delinquent at the time in the same manner, at any regular or adjourned sale or special sale called therefor, with the same forfeitures, penalties and right of redemption, and certificates and deeds on such sales shall be made in the same manner and with like effect as in case of sales for non-payment of the ordinary taxes of such city, as now or hereafter provided by law in respect thereto: Provided, however, that the sale of any property for the non-payment of any instalment as aforesaid, either of tax or interest, shall not be taken or construed as in any manner affecting the validity of the lien on the same for any instalment thereof, with interest as aforesaid, which may subsequently become delinquent and payable. Such city council may provide by ordinance for the mode of making and returning the assessment hereinbefore authorized; and payment of such assessment after they become delinquent, and if [of] interest as aforesaid, may, if so directed by said council, be enforced by suit in court, in the manner and by the proceedings provided by sections four hundred and seventy-eight and four hundred and eighty-one of the code [§§ 649, 652]. In case of omissions, errors, or mistakes in making such assessment or levy, in respect of the total cost of the improvement, or in case of deficiencies or otherwise, it shall be competent for the council to make a supplemental assessment and levy to support such deficiencies, omissions, errors or mistakes; said supplemental assessment and levy shall be a lien on the lots and lands as aforesaid, shall be payable in the same manner and in the same instalments, shall draw interest at the same rate, and shall be capable of enforcement in the same manner as hereinbefore provided, with respect to the original assessment and levy. Said taxes shall constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the costs of the opening, extending, widening, grading, or any other improvements herein specified, of the street, highway, avenue or alley, on which the property abuts, upon which the same are levied, and shall be used and appropriated to no other purpose than the payment of the costs of said improvements, and any bonds which may be issued as hereinafter provided, until the whole cost of said improvement, and all of said bonds, with interest, shall be fully paid and satisfied.

827. District tax bonds. 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 4. For the purpose of paying the costs of the improvements mentioned and specified in section three hereof [§ 826], and which costs are to be assessed and levied as aforesaid, upon the lots and lands as aforesaid, the council of any such city shall have power and may by ordinance cause to be issued bonds of such city, to be called "Improvement Bonds of District No. —," said bonds to be issued in four series, the first series in the aggregate to be for an amount not exceeding one-fifth of the total cost of the expense of the opening, extending, widening, grading or other improvement as aforesaid of the particular street, highway, avenue or alley, to defray the costs at which said bonds are issued, and to be payable in not exceeding two years from date thereof; the second series to be for a like aggregate amount and payable in not exceeding four years from date thereof; the third series to be for a like aggregate amount and payable in not exceeding six years from date thereof, and the fourth series to be for a like aggregate amount and to be payable in not exceeding eight years from date thereof; all of said bonds to bear not exceeding six per cent. per annum interest, payable annually or semi-annually as said council may provide, with interest coupons attached, to express on their face the name of the street, highway, avenue or alley to defray the costs for which they are issued, and also that the last four instalments of the special taxes and assessments assessed and levied or to be assessed and levied as aforesaid on the lots and lands abutting on the street, highway, avenue or alley so as aforesaid opened, extended, graded, or in any other manner as aforesaid improved, shall be and constitute a sinking fund for the payment of said bonds and interest thereon, and to be used and appropriated to no other purpose until the whole of said bonds with interest thereon shall have been paid and fully discharged. Said bonds shall not be negotiated or sold for less than their par value and may be respectively for amounts ranging from one hundred dollars to one thousand dollars as said council may provide by ordinance. The proceeds arising from said bonds shall be applied exclusively to and appropriated and used for no other purpose than the liquidation of the costs of the improvements as aforesaid to and upon the particular street, highway, avenue or alley, to defray the cost of which said bonds are issued.

828. City bonds. 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 5. Whenever the council of any such city shall deem it expedient they shall have power for the purpose of paying the costs of opening, extending, widening, grading, paving, curbing, guttering, graveling or macadamizing spaces in front of city property and of other property exempt from special taxation, the intersections of any streets, highways, avenues or alleys and the space opposite alleys, to issue bonds of the city to run for not exceeding twenty years and to bear interest payable semi-annually at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, with coupons attached, to be called "City Improvement Bonds," and which shall not be sold for less than par, and the proceeds of which shall be used for no other purpose than paying for the cost of the improvements aforesaid and upon the particular streets, highways, avenues or alleys, the intersections of which and spaces opposite which are improved as aforesaid; provided, that no bonds can be issued to pay for any such improvements as aforesaid except when the same become a part of and are necessary to fully complete the improvements as aforesaid of any street, highway, avenue or alley undertaken to be made or made under section three hereof [§ 826].

829. Paving tracks. 20 G. A., ch. 20, § 6. All railway companies and street railway companies in cities of the first class as provided in section one of this act [§ 824], shall be required to pave, or repave between rails and one foot outside of their rails, at their own expense and cost. Whenever any street, highway, avenue or alley shall be ordered paved or repaved by the council of any such city, such paving or repaving between and outside of the rails, shall be done at the same time and shall be of the same material and character as the paving or repaving of the street, highway, avenue or alley upon which said railway track is located, or of such other material as said council may order, and when said paving or repaving is done said companies shall lay in the best approved manner the strap or flat rail. Such railway companies shall keep that portion of the streets, highways, avenues or alleys between and one foot outside of their rails, up to grade and in good repair, using for such purpose the same material with which the street, highway, avenue or alley is paved upon which the track is laid, or such other material as said council may order. In the event of the neglect or refusal of such railway companies to pave, or repave, or repair as aforesaid, when so ordered and directed as aforesaid by the council of such city, such city shall have power to pave, repave or repair between and outside of said rails as herein required of such railway companies, and the cost and expenses of the same to assess and levy as a special tax upon any of the real estate or personal property of such railway company, within the corporate limits of said city, which tax shall be a lien upon said property, shall become delinquent in sixty days after it is levied, shall draw interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, and said city shall have power to enforce the payment of the same in the same manner and by the same means and with and under the same penalties as is provided herein with reference to special taxes upon the abutting property on the streets, highways, avenues or alleys, ordered to be improved as aforesaid, as hereinbefore provided.

830. City may open or grade. 21 G. A., ch. 160, § 2. Any city of the first class organized as such since January first, A. D. 1886 in addition to the requirements of chapter twenty of the laws of the twentieth general assembly of Iowa [§§ 824-829] may provide by ordinance that any part of the expense of opening, widening, extending and grading only of any street, highway, avenue or alley in front of or alongside of abutting property that is, under said act, subject to special assessment therefor shall be paid by the city instead of assessing the whole cost to such abutting property as therein required and in such case the same may be paid for in the same manner as street intersections and spaces in front of city property under section five of said chapter twenty [§ 828] and this section shall be deemed a part of said chapter twenty.

831. Special improvement tax. 21 G. A., ch. 160, § 3. Such cities of the first class organized as such since January first, 1883, for the purpose of paying the city improvement bonds, authorized under section five of said chapter twenty of the laws of the twentieth general assembly [§ 828] or of paying for such improvements themselves and those authorized by section two hereof [§ 830], are hereby authorized and required to levy annually until the same is paid for, a special city improvement tax upon all the property within the city not exceeding three mills on the dollar to be collected the same as other taxes and the money so arising therefrom shall constitute a special fund for the payment of said bonds and interest and improvements to be used and appropriated to no other purpose. In issuing such city improvement bonds in such city under said section five and section two hereof [§§ 828 and 830] such city may make any of the same become due at periods as soon as such levy will provide sufficient funds for the payment of the same and such bonds shall be deemed issued in anticipation of the revenue herein provided for their payment.

832. Diversion of tax. 21 G. A., ch. 160, § 4. Any officer of such city or member of the city council who shall participate in or assist in any diversion of said tax or the moneys collected thereunder to any other purpose than those provided in this act shall be guilty of the crime of embezzlement and be punished accordingly.

833. Paving fund tax. 22 G. A., ch. 12, § 1. All cities of the first class that have been, or may be organized under the general incorporation laws of cities in this state since January first, 1881, shall have power to levy not exceeding five mills on the dollar on the assessed valuation of all taxable property in such cities for the purpose of creating a fund to pay the costs and expenses incurred by such cities in the building of pavement or other city street improvement now authorized by law to be made by cities at the intersections of streets, highways, avenues, alleys or other places when the costs and expenses of such street improvements are not assessable against the fronting or abutting property and such cities may anticipate the collection of said tax and issue city improvement bonds to run for a period not exceeding twenty years and may create a sinking fund to pay the accrued and accruing interest and principal of said bonds at their maturity as the council shall provide by ordinance.

834. Re-assessment of special taxes. 22 G. A., ch. 44, § 1. In cities of the first class and cities organized under special charter, whenever, by reason of an alleged non-conformity to any law or ordinance, or by reason of any omission or irregularity, any special tax or assessment is either invalid or its validity is questioned, the city council may make all necessary orders and ordinances and may take all necessary steps to correct the same and to re-assess and to re-levy the same, including the ordering of work, with the same force and effect as if made at the time provided by law or ordinance relating thereto; and may re-assess and re-levy the same with the same force and effect as an original levy. Whenever any apportionment or assessment is made and any property is assessed too little or too much, the same may be corrected and re-assessed for such additional error as may be proper, or the assessment may be reduced even to the extent of refunding the tax collected.

835. Re-levy and collection. 22 G. A., ch. 44, § 2. Any special tax upon re-assessment or re-levy shall, so far as is practicable, be levied and collected as the same would have been if the first levy had been enforced.

836. Time waived. 22 G. A., ch. 44, § 3. Any provision of any law or ordinance specifying a time when or the order in which acts shall be done in a proceeding which may result in a special tax, shall be taken to be subject to the qualifications of this act.

837. Legalizing. 22 G. A., ch. 44, § 4. Any and every ordinance or part thereof of any such city heretofore passed in substantial conformity with this act is hereby legalized.

SEWERS IN CITIES OF FIRST CLASS.

838. Construction; districts; tax. 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 34. All cities of the first class in the state may provide by ordinance for the construction of sewers, or may divide the city into sewerage districts in such manner as the council may determine, and pay the cost of constructing same out of the general revenue of the city, or assess the cost upon the adjacent property, or may levy a certain sewerage tax within the sewerage district, out of which to pay for the construction of the same, which sewerage tax shall not exceed in any one year, two mills on the dollar of the assessed value of the property within such district, or may pay a part of the cost of such construction out of the general revenue, a part by the assessment of adjacent property, and a part by levying a tax upon all the property within the sewerage district, or may pay for the same by pursuing any two of the methods herein named.

The city may create one sewerage district, comprising all its territory. An ordinance having been duly passed providing for the construction of sewers, the city may, by resolution, exercise the authority, and apply it to any particular sewer. A call of yeas and nays is not essential on passage of such resolution: Grimmell v. Des Moines, 57-144.

Sewerage in a populous city is not merely a private matter for the convenience of a few persons, but is a matter of public concern affecting the health and lives of the inhabitants, and a city or town may, in pursuance of law, assess the expense of the construction of a sewer upon abutting property, without regard to the benefits conferred upon such property: Gatch v. Des Moines, 63-718.

The ordinance should provide for notice to the property owner and opportunity to appear and object to the assessment on his property: Ibid.

The city cannot assess the expense of constructing a sewer upon abutting property belonging to the state: Polk County Savings Bank v. State, 69-24.

The construction of one sewer leading through two or more connecting streets may be ordered in one proceeding, and the assessment made upon abutting property for the whole work: Grimmell v. Des Moines, 57-144.

Where a city had, prior to the passage of this act, levied a tax for, and commenced the construction of, a sewer, which constitutes a main artery in the system of sewerage of the city, held, that it could not change the mode of paying for further improvements, and require the adjacent property to pay the whole expense thereafter to be incurred; and further, held, that the legislature could not, by a legalizing act, render valid such improper action of the city: Independent School Dist. v. Burlington, 60-500.

Where the resolution of the council ordering a sewer adopts the plat of the engineer by reference thereto, and thus furnishes a means of obtaining precise knowledge of the tax assessed to each tract and individual and the total cost of the sewer, it is sufficiently definite: Ditloe v. Davenport, 74-66.

839. Bids. 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 2. It shall be the duty of such city council to require the work of constructing such sewers to be done under contract therefor, to be entered into with the lowest responsible bidder, and bonds with surety for the faithful performance of such work shall be required to be given by the contractors; provided, that all bids for such work may be rejected by such council if by them thought to be exorbitant, and new bids ordered.

840. Collection of tax. 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 3. All special tax levied for the construction of sewers under this act shall be payable by the owners personally at the time of such assessment, and shall also be a lien upon the lots and lands so assessed and shall bear such rate of interest, and the said property assessed may be sold for the payment thereof, in the same manner at any regular or adjourned sale or special sale called therefor, with the same forfeitures, penalties and right of redemption and certificates and deeds on such sales shall be made in the same manner and with like effect as in case of sales for non-payment of the ordinary annual taxes of such cities respectively, as now or hereafter provided by law in respect thereto, or the city council may provide by ordinance for the sale of such assessed property at a special tax sale to be called therefor, after giving notice therefor three consecutive weeks in one of the newspapers published in said city; the last of which publications shall be at least ten days before the day of sale.

841. Mode of assessment. 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 4. Such city council may provide by ordinance for the particular mode of making and returning the assessments hereinbefore authorized, and payment of such assessments may, if so directed by said council, be enforced by suit in court, in the manner and by the proceedings provided for by sections four hundred and seventy-eight, four hundred and seventy-nine and four hundred and eighty-one of the code [§§ 649, 650, 652].

842. Powers under other provisions. 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 5. Nothing in this act contained shall take away, impair or interfere with the powers conferred by section four hundred and sixty-five of the code [§ 624], for the construction of sewers, and payment therefor in whole as therein provided.

843. Cross-sewers. 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 6. The city council shall have power to provide, by ordinance, terms and conditions on which cross-sewers may be attached to, or connected with main sewers; and in cases where sewers have been constructed in whole or in part by special assessment, may pay unto the parties who have been so assessed, the money, or a part thereof charged and collected for the privilege of attaching such cross-sewers.

844. 17 G. A., ch. 162, § 7. Provided, that nothing in this section shall be held or taken to repeal, impair or in any manner affect chapter fifty-four, acts of the sixteenth general assembly [§§ 943-947], or any provision thereof.

845. Sewer tax. 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 9. In case the council of any city of the first class that has been or may be so organized since January first, 1881, shall assess the cost, in whole or in part, of the construction of sewers on the adjacent property, it may, instead of making said special tax payable at the time of such assessment, levy the whole of such special tax on said property at one time, and provide by ordinance that the same shall become payable and delinquent as follows, viz: One-fifth in sixty days, one-fifth in two years, one-fifth in three years, one-fifth in four years, and one-fifth in five years after the levy is made. Said special tax shall be payable by the owners of the property on which it is levied at or before the time it becomes delinquent and in the instalments hereinbefore mentioned, and shall be a lien upon the lots and lands so assessed and upon which it is levied, shall draw interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum from the time of the levy thereof until the same shall be paid or become delinquent whichever shall first happen. The payment of each and every instalment of such tax may be enforced in the same manner, under the same penalties, and by the same methods as is provided in section three or section four of the act to which this is amendatory [§§ 840, 841]: Provided, however, that the sale of any property for the non-payment of any instalment as aforesaid shall not be taken or construed as in any manner affecting the validity of the lien on the same for any instalment thereof which may subsequently become delinquent. Said taxes shall constitute a sewerage fund for the payment of the cost of constructing sewers in front, rear or through the property upon which they are levied, and shall be used for and appropriated to no other purpose than the payment in whole or in part, as the case may be, of the cost of constructing said sewers so located or any bonds which may be issued as hereinafter provided.

846. Bonds. 20 G. A., ch. 25, § 10. Whenever any such city exercises the powers granted in section nine hereof [§ 845], it may, for the purpose of anticipating the collection of said special taxes, and it may for the purpose of anticipating the collection of any sewerage taxes it has power to levy under section one of the act to which this is supplementary [§ 838], by ordinance cause to be issued its bonds, to be called "sewerage bonds;" said bonds to be issued in four series, each series, in the aggregate respectively, to be for an amount not exceeding the amount of special taxes, as provided in section nine hereof [§ 845] which become delinquent respectively in two, three, four and five years after their levy; and for such further amount as said city may propose to levy and have the power to levy for each of the respective years aforesaid under the provisions of section one [§ 838] of the act to which this is amendatory, on the property within the sewerage district in which said sewer or sewers are to be or have been constructed, the first series to be payable in not exceeding two years from the date of their issue; the second series to be payable in not exceeding three years from the date of their issue; the third series to be payable in not exceeding four years from the date of their issue; and the fourth series to be payable in not exceeding five years from the date of their issue; all of said bonds to bear interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum, interest payable annually or semi-annually, as said council may provide, with interest coupons attached, to express on their face the name of the street, highway, avenue, or alley, on which the sewer is located, to defray the cost of which they are issued, and also that the last four instalments of the special taxes assessed and levied as aforesaid on property abutting on the particular part of the street, highway, avenue or alley on which said sewer or sewers are located, as also the sewerage tax levied, or to be levied, on the property in the sewerage district to defray the cost of the particular sewer or sewers named as aforesaid in said bonds, shall be and constitute a sinking fund for the payment of said bonds and interest; and to be used and appropriated to no other purpose until the whole of said bonds, with interest, shall have been fully paid and discharged. Said bonds shall not be negotiated or sold for less than their par value, and may be respectively for amounts ranging from one hundred dollars to one thousand dollars, as said council may by ordinance provide. The proceeds arising from said bonds shall be applied exclusively to, and appropriated and used for, no other purpose than the liquidation of the costs of constructing the sewer or sewers upon the particular street, highway, avenue or alley, to defray the cost of which said bonds are issued.

847. Other provisions applicable. 21 G. A., ch. 160, § 1. All the provisions of chapter one hundred and sixty-two of the laws of the seventeenth general assembly of the state of Iowa and amendments and acts supplementary thereto [§§ 838-844] shall be applicable to and hereby conferred upon cities of the first class, organized as such since January first, A. D. 1886, notwithstanding the fact that any such city may have, prior to the time of becoming such city of the first class, commenced a general system of sewerage by the levy and expenditure of any tax therefor, under the provision of chapter one hundred and seven of the acts of the sixteenth general assembly of Iowa [§§ 746-748].

848. Additional power. 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 1. All cities of the first class containing according to the census of 1885 a population of over thirty thousand authorized by section one of chapter one hundred and sixty-two of the acts of the seventeenth general assembly [§ 838] to provide by ordinance for the construction of sewers, shall have the power and be subject to the conditions and requirements hereinafter provided.

849. Notice of resolution. 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 2. Whenever cities subject to the provisions of this act shall deem it necessary to construct any sewer the council shall declare by resolution the necessity therefor and shall state the kind, size, location and designate the terminal points thereof and notice for twenty days of the passage of such resolution shall be given not less than two weeks nor more than four weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in such city and by handbills posted in conspicuous places along the line of the proposed sewer. Said notices shall state the time and place when and where the property owners along the line of said proposed sewer can make objections to the necessity of the construction thereof.

850. Plan and specifications. 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 3. If the council shall thereafter determine to construct such sewer it shall declare the same by resolution stating the kind, size, terminal points thereof and location. The city engineer shall at once file the plans and specifications therefor in the office of the board of public works for public inspection and the proposals for bids and letting the contract shall be in compliance with the provisions of chapter one hundred and sixty-eight, laws of the twenty-first general assembly and chapter one hundred and sixty-two, laws of the seventeenth general assembly and acts amendatory thereto [§§ 838-844 and 859-880].

851. Assessment of cost. 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 4. When the contract is awarded for the construction of said sewer, the board of public works, in connection with the city engineer shall constitute the board of assessors and shall at once proceed to make the assessment on the various lots to be charged therewith in proportion, as nearly as may be to the benefits which in their opinion shall result from such sewer and such lots respectively and file the same with the city council as soon as practicable after the awarding of the contract and in estimating the benefits to result from such sewer no account shall be taken of improvements and each lot shall be considered as wholly unimproved.

852. Publication. 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 5. Before adopting the assessments so made, the council shall publish notice for two consecutive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation in the corporation stating the time and place, when and where said assessments will be confirmed by the city council and if any person object to his assessment he shall file his objections in writing with the city clerk on or before such date and when the assessment is confirmed by the council it shall be complete and final.

853. Vote necessary. 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 6. The concurrence of two-thirds of the members of the city council shall be necessary to confirm the assessment made by the board of assessors.

854. Assessment, 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 7. When it shall appear to the council that a special assessment is invalid by reason of informality or irregularity in the proceedings or when any assessment shall be adjudged to be illegal by a court of competent jurisdiction, the council may order a re-assessment and the proceedings upon a re-assessment shall be conducted in the same manner as provided in respect to the original assessment.

855. Limit. 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 8. There shall not be assessed to the lots or land adjacent to the line of any sewer an amount in excess of three dollars per lineal foot, and whenever any assessment shall be made to the limit herein prescribed and the board of assessors and city council shall determine that certain lots or land adjacent to the line of such sewer is not benefited in whole or in part, the council shall order and deliver to the contractor a warrant drawn on the sewer fund for the amount that cannot be assessed on the property not benefited.

856. 22 G. A., ch. 6, § 9. Chapter one hundred and sixty-six, laws of the twenty-first general assembly, the same being entitled, "An act supplementary to chapter one hundred and sixty-two of the laws of the seventeenth general assembly," is hereby repealed.

857. Tax. 22 G. A., ch. 7, § 1. All cities of the first class that have been organized under the general incorporation laws of the state since the first day of January, 1881, shall have power to levy a tax not exceeding five mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation of all taxable property within such cities for the purpose of creating a fund to pay the cost and expense incurred by such cities for the purpose of constructing sewers at the intersections of streets, highways, avenues, alleys or other places, where the costs and expenses incurred are not assessable against the fronting, abutting, or adjacent property as now provided by law, and to enable such cities to make such sewer improvements at intersections as aforesaid or to include and pay a part of the costs assessable against private property as is provided in section one of chapter one hundred and sixty-two, acts of the twenty-ninth [seventeenth] general assembly [§ 838].

858. Bonds. 22 G. A., ch. 7, § 2. Such cities shall have the power to anticipate said sewer tax and the collection of the same and to issue city sewerage bonds based on the anticipated levy and collection of said tax, which said bonds when so issued, to run for a period not exceeding twenty years and to create a sinking fund for the payment of said bonds with accrued and accruing interest and principal by the levy of such taxes therefor as now authorized by law a part of the revenue of which to be appropriated for the payment of said bonds out of said sinking fund as the city council shall provide by ordinance.

CONTRACTS, BONDS AND ASSESSMENTS FOR PAVING, CURBING AND SEWERING IN CERTAIN CITIES OF THE FIRST CLASS.

859. What cities. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 1. All cities of the first class in this state, containing according to any legally authorized census or enumeration a population of over thirty thousand shall have the powers and be subject to all of the provisions of this act.

860. Contracts. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 1. When the council of any such city shall direct the paving, curbing or sewerage of any street or streets the board of public works of such city shall make and enter into contracts for furnishing materials and for curbing and paving or sewerage, as the case may be, of any such street or streets either for the entire work in one contract or parts thereof in separate and specified sections as to them may seem best; provided that no work shall be done under any such contract until a certified copy shall have been filed in the office of the city clerk.

861. Proposals. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 2. All such contracts shall be made by the board of public works in the name of the city upon such terms of payment as shall be fixed by the council and shall be made with the lowest bidder or bidders upon sealed proposals after public notice for not less than three weeks in at least two newspapers of said city which notice shall state the kind and amount of work to be done and specify the different kinds of material for which bids shall be received.

862. Bond of contractor. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 4. Each contractor shall be required to give a bond to the city with sureties to be approved by the council for the faithful performance of the contract, and the council shall have power to institute suit in the name of the city to enforce all such contracts.

863. Duty of city engineer. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 3. It shall be the duty of the city engineer to furnish the board of public works with proper grades and lines and see that the work is done in accordance with the ordinances and regulations of the city with respect to such grades and lines.

864. Bonds. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 4. For the purpose of providing for the payment of the cost and expense of any such improvement or improvements, the council shall be authorized from time to time, as the work progresses, upon estimates to be furnished by the board of public works, to make requisitions upon the mayor of the city for the issue of bonds of the city in such sums as shall be deemed best, and it shall be the duty of the mayor to make and execute bonds accordingly in the name of the city to an amount not exceeding the amount of the contract price of any such improvement, and the incidentals attending the same. Said bonds to bear the name of the street or streets improved, to be signed by the mayor, and countersigned by the city clerk, and sealed with the corporate seal of the city, and shall all bear the same date, and be payable seven years after date, and redeemable at any time at the option of the city, and shall bear interest at the rate of not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually.

865. Issuance. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 7. When said bonds shall have been issued by the mayor, and sealed with the corporate seal of the city, they shall be delivered to the clerk, who shall register them in a book to be kept for that purpose, and countersigned and deliver them to the committee or person authorized to negotiate the same, taking receipts therefor.

866. Negotiation. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 8. Said committee or person authorized to negotiate said bonds shall negotiate the same in such manner as they or he may think best, and for such prices as may be obtainable for the same, not less than par, and shall pay all moneys received therefrom to the treasurer of the city, and report to the city clerk the number of bonds sold, and the amount received therefor, and before delivering the same to the purchaser they shall be countersigned by the said committee or other person so authorized to negotiate the same.

867. Proceeds. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 9. All moneys received by the city treasurer from the sale of said bonds, shall be kept by him in a separate fund and paid out on requisition of the council, accompanied by affidavit of the city engineer, that work has been done or material furnished to the amount of said requisition and that it is required for payment of the same, and all moneys received by said treasurer shall be kept in the same manner, and subject to all the regulations regarding other money of the city, except that he shall keep a separate account of the same and all interest received upon the same shall be credited to such fund.

868. Assessment against property. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 10; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 5. When any such improvement shall have been completed it shall be the duty of the council to ascertain the entire amount of the bonds sold and the interest thereon to the date of completion which shall be taken to be the costs of such improvement and the entire amount of such cost, including the intersection of streets and alleys shall then be assessed by the board of public works and city engineer, constituting the board of assessors, upon the property fronting or abutting upon said improvement: provided that nothing in this act shall be construed as authorizing the council to assess a greater amount than three dollars per lineal foot on account of the construction of sewers: and provided further that the cost of any such improvement shall not be assessed on property belonging to the state.

869. Notice. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 6. The board of public works shall cause a plat of the street or streets on which any improvement shall be made showing the separate lots of ground and the name of all such owners and the amount assessed against each lot or piece of ground and shall give two weeks' notice in two newspapers of the city and by handbills posted in conspicuous places on the line of such street or streets of the time and place where for the period of twenty days thereafter the same may be seen for the correction of errors, and after having corrected such errors as may be made known to them, said board shall file the same in the office of the city clerk and shall deliver a copy of said plat and schedule to the auditor of the county in which said city is situated.

870. Collection. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 12; 22 G. A., ch. 5, § 7. Said assessment shall be placed on the tax duplicate or list of the county and shall be payable at the office of the county treasurer in seven equal instalments with interest at six per centum from the date of the assessment upon the unpaid portion thereof, the first of which with interest on the whole amount at six per cent. shall be payable at the first semi-annual payment of taxes next succeeding the time said assessment is placed on said duplicate and the others annually thereafter, and said assessment shall be collected in the same manner and bear the same penalties when delinquent as now provided by law for the collection of other taxes.

871. Lien. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 13. Said assessments with interest accruing thereon shall be a lien upon the property abutting upon the street or streets on which any such improvement is made from the commencement of the work, and shall remain a lien until fully paid and shall have precedence over all other liens excepting ordinary taxes and shall not be divested by any judicial sale, provided that such lien shall be limited to the lots bounding or abutting on such street or streets, and not exceeding in depth therefrom one hundred and fifty feet.

872. Payment in instalments. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 14. The owner of any property against which an assessment shall have been made for the cost of any such improvement, shall have the right to pay the same in full with interest thereon at six per cent. from the time said assessment was made, or after having paid one or more of said seven instalments and interest, he may at any time pay in full the balance of his assessments remaining unpaid with interest thereon at six per cent. from the time when the preceding payment became due, and such payment in full shall satisfy and discharge the lien upon said property, and any owner of such property who shall divide the same so that the feet front on any such improvement are divided into separate lots or parcels may discharge the lien in like manner upon any one or more of such lots or parcels, by payment of the amount unpaid thereon calculated by the ratio of feet front of such lot or lots or parcel or parcels to the feet front of the whole lot.

873. Bonds paid. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 15. All moneys received from assessments shall be appropriated to the payment of the interest and redemption or payment of the bonds, or of the certificates hereinafter provided for as the case may be that shall be issued for said improvements, and if any interest shall become due on any of said bonds, when there is no fund from which to pay the same, the council shall be authorized to make a temporary loan for the payment thereof.

874. Certificates. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 16. If by reason of the prohibition contained in section three, article eleven of the constitution of this state it shall at any time be unlawful for any such city to issue bonds as by this act provided, it shall be lawful for such city to provide by ordinance for the issuance of certificates to contractors, who under contract with the city shall have constructed any such improvement, in payment therefor, each of which certificates shall state the amount or amounts of one or more of the assessments made against an owner or owners and lot or lots on account and for payment of the cost of any such improvement, and shall transfer to the contractor, and his assigns, all of the right and interest of such city to, in and with respect to every such assessment, and shall authorize such contractor and his assigns to receive, sue for and collect, or have collected every such assessment embraced in any such certificate, by or through any of the methods provided by law for the collection of assessments for local improvements, including the provisions of this act.

875. Waiver of objections. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 17. Whenever the owner or owners of any lot or lots, the assessment or assessments against which is or are embraced in any such certificate shall severally promise and agree in writing endorsed on such certificate that, in consideration of having the right to pay his or their assessment or respective assessments in instalments, they will not make any objection of illegality or irregularity as to their respective assessments, and will pay the same with interest thereon at such rate not exceeding six per cent., as shall by ordinance or resolution of the city council of such city be prescribed and required, he or they shall have the benefit and be subject to all of the provisions of this act authorizing the payment of assessments in annual instalments relating to the lien and collection and payment of assessments so far as applicable.

876. Assessment collectible. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 18. Any owner of any lot or lots assessed for payment of the cost of any such improvement who will not promise and agree in writing as provided by section seventeen hereof [§ 875], shall be required to pay his assessment in full, when made, and the same shall be collectible by or through any of the methods provided by law for the collection of assessments for local improvements, including the provisions of this act.

877. Mistake in description. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 19. Any mistake in the description of the property or in the name of the owner shall not vitiate the lien.

878. When improvements authorized. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 20. The council of any such city shall not have the right to authorize any improvement under this act unless the owners of two-thirds of the feet front of the property abutting upon the street or streets to be improved shall petition therefor, or unless the same shall be voted for by three-fourths of the members of the council.

879. Part of street. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 21. Any part or section of any street may be improved under this act as well as an entire street.

880. 21 G. A., ch. 168, § 22. All acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

881. How constituted. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 1. There shall be established and created in every city of the first class, having a population according to any legally authorized census of more than thirty thousand inhabitants, a board of public works, which shall consist of two members, residents of such city, to be appointed by the mayor, by and with the approval of the city council, on or before the first Monday of April, 1889. One member shall be appointed for the term of two years, and the other for the term of three years, and they shall hold their office until their successors are duly appointed and qualified, and their successors shall be appointed in the manner hereinbefore provided for the term of three years. The mayor shall fill all vacancies occurring in said board by and with the approval of the city council but no member of the city council or city officer shall be appointed a member of said board.

882. Salary. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 2. The salary of each member of such board of public works shall be not less than fifteen hundred dollars and not more than twenty-five hundred dollars per year, as may be fixed by the city council, but the salary shall not be reduced during the term of office of any member. Each member of said board before entering upon the discharge of his duties, shall take an oath to faithfully discharge the duties of his office, and enter into a bond with the city with two or more good and sufficient sureties to be approved by the city council, in a sum not less than twenty thousand dollars. The conditions of said bond shall be for the faithful performance of the duties of such members, and no member of said board shall ever be directly or indirectly interested in any contract entered into by them, on behalf of such city, nor shall they be interested either directly or indirectly in the purchase or sale of any material to be used or applied in or about the uses and purposes contemplated by this act.

883. Consultation with city engineer. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 3. Said board shall consult the city engineer of such cities in regard to the plans, specifications and advisability of making any improvements, or doing any work contemplated by the provisions of this act, and the city engineer shall furnish said board, from time to time, estimates of the cost of material for any improvement to be ordered or advertised for by said board together with the plans and specifications therefor.

884. Contracts. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 4. Contracts for all public improvements made by said board of public works, shall be drawn by the city solicitor of such cities and he shall charge not less than three nor more than ten dollars for each contract, and said money shall be collected by him from the contractors, and pay the same monthly to the city treasurer for the use of such cities, and said charge shall include a copy of said contract and specifications to be furnished to such contractors.

885. Bids. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 5. Said board of public works shall advertise for bids and make all contracts on behalf of the city, for all material and work for public improvements in excess of two hundred dollars, whenever the same shall be ordered by the city council, or voted for at some general or special election, by the voters of such cities, and proposals for bids shall be published, at least two weeks, in two of the daily newspapers in such cities, and said publication shall be completed at least two weeks before the making and entering into any contract by said board. The proposals for bids shall state the amount and different kinds of material to be furnished and kind of improvement, and the time and conditions upon which bids shall be received. The board shall have power to reject any or all bids. All such contracts shall be made with the lowest bidder, but it shall not be necessary before proposals are published or bids received to determine specifically the kind of material to be used. All contracts made and entered into by said board shall be subject to the approval of the city council.

886. For what purposes. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 6. Said board shall advertise for bids and make contracts for the lighting of streets, alleys and public places of such cities and for the removal of all garbage.

887. Superintend public works. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 7. Said board shall superintend the performance of all public work, and the erection or construction of all improvements contemplated by this act. It shall approve the estimates of the city engineer, which may be made from time to time, of the cost of work as the same progresses, to accept any work done or improvement made, when the same shall be fully completed, according to contract, subject to the approval of the city engineer, and they shall perform such other duties, as may be devolved upon them by ordinance or resolution of such city.

888. Disapproval of plans. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 8. Whenever said board shall disapprove of the plans, specifications or estimates furnished by the city engineer, they shall report said fact at once in writing to the city council and state their reasons for such disapproval.

889. What works. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 9. Said board shall take special charge of the construction, repairing and superintendence of all streets, alleys, highways, sidewalks, public grounds, cleaning streets and alleys, lamps and light for lighting the streets, alleys, highways, parks, public places and public buildings of such cities.

890. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 10. It shall take special charge of the construction, repairing and superintendence of all paving, sewers, bridges, viaducts, public buildings and grading of streets and alleys, subject to the approval of the city engineer.

891. Expenditures. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 11. Said board of public works shall control and direct all expenditures to be made by its department, and sign and draw orders for the same, and all orders given, bills and accounts created by said board of public works, shall first be endorsed by each of the members thereof, and approved by the city council, or they shall state their reasons in writing why they have not endorsed the same, before the same shall be ordered paid.

892. Extra work. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 12. Said board shall not order any extra work in excess of that contained in any contract, or pay out any money for any extras whatsoever, without submitting and recommending the same to the city council and receiving its authority therefor.

893. Appointing powers. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 13. It shall have power to appoint agents and employees, subject to the approval of the city council, absolutely necessary for the doing of the work of said board, but such agents or employees shall be actually engaged in the construction or improvement of the public works of such city, and shall not include any assistants, superintendents, book-keepers or secretaries, but said last-named offices shall be filled and duties connected therewith performed by said board of public works, without extra compensation.

894. Plans for improvements. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 14. It shall require all plans and specifications for all buildings costing over five thousand dollars, according to the estimate of the contractor or builder, to be submitted to them for the joint approval of said board, and the city engineer, and no such building shall be erected until the above requirements have been complied with. It shall require any person before erecting any building or improvement within said city to first obtain a permit from said board of public works, and said board shall charge not more than one mill on the dollar of the cost of the construction of any such building or improvement, to be based on the architect's or builder's estimate, and the money derived and collected by said board for such purpose shall be by them monthly paid to the city treasurer for the benefit of the city.

895. Fire protection. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 15. Said board shall have the power to require fire-proof roofs to be used on all buildings erected in squares or blocks of such cities, when the outer walls thereof are constructed of non-combustible materials, and to require non-combustible material to be used in the outer walls of all buildings built or erected in such squares or blocks within the fire limits of such cities.

896. Mains. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 16. It shall have power and be required by and with the advice of the city engineer to superintend the laying of all water, gas, and steam-heating mains and all connections therefor, and laying of telephone, telegraph, district telegraph and electric wires in the manner provided by the ordinances of such city.

897. Fire-escape. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 17. It shall be the duty of such board to regulate the size, number and manner of construction of fire-escapes, doors and stairways of theaters, tenement houses, audience rooms and all public buildings, whether now built or hereafter to be built, used for the gathering of a large number of people, so that there may be convenient, safe and speedy exit in case of fire.

898. Semi-annual report. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 18. Said board shall on the first day of April and the first day of December in each year, and at the expiration of the term of office of any member of said board, submit a full, complete and detailed statement to the city council of all work done by it, giving the amount of expenditures, and the names of the persons who have received any pay on account of such public work, and the amount of such pay, and for what the same was paid, and the number of permits issued, and the amounts received therefor. Such report shall further state that since the last report no member of said board has been directly or indirectly interested in any contract let by said board, or work ordered or superintended by them; that they have not been interested in the sale or purchase of any material used in the construction of said work or improvements, and that they have not received, or expect to receive any presents or compensation from any contractor, or other person interested in said work or improvement, and said report shall be duly sworn to by each member of said board.

899. Record. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 19. Said board shall keep a full and complete record and copies of all contracts, plans, maps, specifications, plats, and record of every kind whatsoever, growing out of any work or improvement made or superintended by said board, and the number of all building permits issued, and the location and cost of such buildings and improvements, and shall keep a full account of all expenditures made by it since its last report. No member of said board shall purchase any material of any kind whatsoever, without giving a written order therefor, signed by at least one member of said board.

900. Removal of members. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 20. Any member of such board may at any time be removed from office by a vote of two-thirds of the city council for sufficient cause, and the proceedings in that behalf shall be entered in the records of the council; provided that the council shall previously cause a copy of the charges against such member or members sought to be removed to be served upon him or them, together with a notice of the time and place of hearing the same at least ten days previous to the time assigned and opportunity to be given him or them to make his or their defense.

901. Office. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 21. Said board shall be provided with a suitable office with fuel, lights, stationery, apparatus, utensils, etc., at the expense of the city.

902. Further powers. 22 G. A., ch. 1, § 22. Said board shall have such further powers and perform such duties as the city council may lawfully from time to time prescribe by ordinance not inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

AMENDMENT OF SPECIAL CHARTERS.

903. Mode of procedure. 548. On the presentation of a petition signed by one-fourth of the electors, as shown by the vote at the next preceding charter election, of any city or town acting under a special charter or act of incorporation, to the governing body thereof, asking that the question of the amendment of such special charter or act of incorporation be submitted to the electors of such city or town, such governing body shall, immediately, propose sections amendatory of said charter or act of incorporation, and submit the same, as requested, at the first ensuing charter election. At least ten days before such election, the mayor of such city or town shall issue his proclamation setting forth the nature and character of such amendment, and shall cause such proclamation to be published in a newspaper published therein; or, if there be none, he shall cause the same to be posted in five public places in such city or town. On the day specified, the amendment shall be submitted to the electors thereof for adoption or rejection, and the form of the ballots shall be "for the amendment," or "against the amendment." [R., § 1141.]

This provision allowing cities to amend their or special laws for the incorporation of cities and towns: Von Phul v. Hammer, 29-222. charters, held not in conflict with the constitution, article 3, section 30, forbidding local

904. Proclamation. 549. If a majority of the votes cast is in favor of said amendment, the mayor, or chief officer, shall issue his proclamation ac-

ordingly; and the said amendment shall thereafter constitute a part of said charter. [R., § 1142.]

905. Submission at special election. 550. The legislative body of said city or town, may submit any amendment to the vote of the people as aforesaid at any special election; provided, one-half the electors as aforesaid petition for that purpose, and the proceedings shall be the same as at the general election. [R., § 1143.]

STATUTES APPLICABLE ONLY TO CITIES UNDER SPECIAL CHARTER.

906. Statutes prior to code. 551. All acts and parts of acts passed subsequent to the fourth day of July, A. D. 1858, and prior to the taking effect of this code, relating to cities of the first and second class and incorporated towns, or to any or either of said classes of municipal corporations, and applicable, both to such corporations as are acting under special charter, and to such as are incorporated under the general act of which this chapter is an amendment, are repealed by the code only so far as they affect the latter, and not as they affect corporations acting under special charters. All rights, powers, privileges, duties, directions, and provisions whatever, contained in and enacted by such acts and parts of acts, shall remain in full force and effect so far as municipal corporations acting under special charters are concerned, and the provisions of this chapter shall not apply to any city or town incorporated prior to the eighteenth day of July, A. D. 1858, unless the same be adopted as hereinbefore provided.

This section does not abrogate the last clause of § 580, making that section applicable to cities acting under special charters: Burlington v. Leebrick, 43-252.
Applied: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47-597, 589.

907. Severance of territory. 17 G. A., ch. 117, § 1. When any city, incorporated under a special charter, and having, according to the returns of the census taken under and by authority of the state of Iowa in the year 1875, a population of not less than ten thousand, nor more than twelve thousand inhabitants, shall desire to have any portion of the territory embraced within its limits severed from or stricken out of the limits of such city, the city council of said city may, upon a vote of two-thirds of the whole number of members of such council, present to the circuit [district] court of the county in which such city is situated a petition setting forth the facts and describing the territory that is desired to have severed, with the names of each overseer of any portion of such territory, so far as shown by the assessment list of such city, which petition shall have attached thereto a map or plat of such territory. A notice of the filing of such petition shall be served by publication in one of the daily newspapers published in such city, for the period of four weeks prior to the meeting of the circuit [district] court in which said petition is filed. And the city shall be plaintiff, and said overseers defendants, and issues joined, and the cause tried in the same manner as other causes so far as applicable, except that no judgment for costs shall be rendered against the defendants. If the court finds the allegations of the petition to be true and that justice and equity require that said territory, or any part thereof, should be severed from such city, a decree shall be entered accordingly, and from the time of entering such decree the territory therein described shall be severed from and no longer be a part of such city.

908. Additional powers. 21 G. A., ch. 93, § 1. Sections four hundred and fifty-four to four hundred and sixty-three inclusive [§§ 613-622], and section three thousand seven hundred and twenty of the code of Iowa, 1873 [§ 4971], and all the provisions of chapter eighty-nine of the nineteenth general assembly [§§ 731-738] are hereby made applicable to the cities acting under special charters, the same as if such cities were therein specially enumerated.

909. Cumulative. 21 G. A., ch. 93, § 2. Nothing in section one of this act [§ 908] shall be construed or considered as repealing any law now in existence granting authority to any cities incorporated under special charters but wherever authority on any of the subjects mentioned in foregoing laws is now in existence the provisions of said section shall be deemed merely cumulative thereto.

910. Election of officers. 21 G. A., ch. 93, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 27. All cities organized under special charters are hereby authorized to provide by ordinance for the election of mayor and city marshal, recorder, assessor, treasurer, collector, auditor and city attorney for such terms as the city council may deem expedient. Provided, that no such term of office shall exceed two years.

911. Wood or lumber yards. 21 G. A., ch. 93, § 4. Cities organized under special charters are hereby authorized to prohibit, or regulate, the piling or depositing of any kind of wood, lumber, or timber upon any lot or property within the city limits within a distance of one hundred yards of any dwelling-house.

912. Repairing dangerous building. 21 G. A., ch. 93, § 5. Cities organized under special charters, are hereby authorized to provide by ordinance, for the repair of any building which is dangerous, or which may be liable to fall, and to levy and collect a special tax, against the property and owner thereof for the expense thereof as other special taxes are levied and collected.

913. Prohibiting dogs. 17 G. A., ch. 25, § 1. All cities existing and acting under special charters, which do not now have the powers herein enumerated, shall have power to regulate, restrain, license or prevent the running at large of dogs within said cities, and to require dogs to be kept upon the premises of the owners thereof, unless licensed to run upon streets, alleys, and other places other than the premises of the owner, and to provide for the destruction of the same when found in said cities contrary to and in violation of the provisions of any ordinance or by-laws passed pursuant to the powers herein granted.

914. Mayor to sign ordinances. 22 G. A., ch. 2, § 1. The provisions of chapter one hundred and ninety-two of the acts of the twentieth general assembly [§§ 710-713] relating to the powers and duties of mayors of cities of the first and second class, shall be and are hereby made applicable to cities organized under special charters.

915. Election of city marshal. 18 G. A., ch. 24, § 1. All cities in this state organized and existing under special charters, shall have power to provide by ordinance for the appointment of a city marshal by the council of such city, or for the election of such officer by the electors thereof, or may dispense with such officer, and confer the duties pertaining thereto upon any other officer or person.

916. City assessor. 16 G. A., ch. 90, § 1. The qualified electors of all cities organized and existing under special charters, shall, at their regular annual election, elect one city assessor, who shall hold his office for the term of one year and until his successor is elected and qualified.

917. Additional assessor. 20 G. A., ch. 74, § 1. The qualified voters of all cities organized and existing under special charters having a population of not less than twelve thousand nor more than thirteen thousand as shown by the census of Iowa 1880 shall, at their regular annual election, in addition to the city assessor elected in accordance with chapter ninety of the acts of the sixteenth general assembly [§ 916], also elect an assessor whose duty it shall be to assess the property within said city, for state and county purposes, in the manner provided by law. Such assessor shall hold his office for the term of one year from the first day of January next ensuing after their election.

918. Equalization. 20 G. A., ch. 74, § 2. The assessment made as aforesaid shall be equalized by the city council of such city, who shall have the same powers in relation thereto as are delegated by law to the township trustees.

919. Policemen. 22 G. A., ch. 23, § 1. In all cities in this state organized under special charters all policemen shall be appointed and may be removed by the mayor of such city.

920. Fire department. 21 G. A., ch. 171, § 1. All cities acting under special charter, are hereby authorized in addition to the taxes now authorized by law, to levy and cause to be collected a special tax on the taxable property of such cities, sufficient to pay the expense of organizing, keeping and maintaining a paid fire department, including the expenses of constructing, purchasing, leasing and maintaining the proper and necessary buildings, grounds and apparatus therefor, provided, however, that said tax shall not exceed the sum of two mills on the dollar in any one year.

921. Improvements. 22 G. A., ch. 14, § 1. All cities in this state organized and existing under special charters, are hereby vested with all the power and authority conferred by chapter twenty of the acts of the twentieth general assembly of the state of Iowa [§§ 824-829] upon cities of the first class therein named.

922. Cumulative. 22 G. A., ch. 14, § 2. Nothing in section one of this act [§ 921] shall be construed or considered as repealing any law now in existence granting authority to any cities incorporated under special charter but whatever authority upon any of the subjects in the foregoing law, is now in existence shall be deemed cumulative to the provisions of said section one hereof.

923. Railway tracks in streets. 18 G. A., ch. 96, § 1. Section four hundred and sixty-four of the code of 1873, as amended by chapter six of the public laws of the fifteenth general assembly [§ 623], shall be applicable to cities and towns organized and acting under special charters, and such cities and towns shall have all the powers conferred by said section on cities and towns incorporated under the general incorporation law.

924. Bridges over boundary rivers. 21 G. A., ch. 98, § 1. The provisions of an act passed at the present session of this general assembly, entitled "An act to enable cities to aid in the construction of highway bridges over navigable boundary rivers of the state of Iowa" [§§ 751-754], shall apply to cities incorporated and acting under special charters as well as to cities incorporated under the general incorporation of law, and wherever the words city clerk are used in said act they shall be construed and understood to mean city recorder in any case where a city has not a city clerk but has a city recorder.

925. Public grounds for school purposes. 18 G. A., ch. 80, § 1. All special chartered cities or towns, having a population not exceeding five thousand inhabitants, situated on the Mississippi or Missouri rivers, having within their limits public grounds heretofore set apart or dedicated for levee or warehouse purposes, and in which the use of such grounds for such purposes has ceased or been abandoned, may use such grounds for school purposes, and the city council or other governing body of such city or town may authorize the use of such grounds by any school district on such terms and conditions as said council or governing body may determine.

926. Filling or draining lots. 19 G. A., ch. 90, § 1. All cities acting under special charters shall have power to cause any lot or piece of land within their limits, on which water at any time becomes stagnant, to be filled up or drained in such manner as may be directed by a resolution of the city council, and the owner, or his agent, of such lot or piece of land shall, after service of a copy of such resolution, or after a publication of the same in some newspaper of general circulation in such city for two consecutive weeks, comply with the directions of such resolution within the time therein specified, and in case of a failure or refusal so to do it may be done at the expense of such city, and the amount of money so expended shall be a debt due from the owner of said lot or piece of land to said city, and shall also be a lien on said lot or piece of land from the time of the adoption of said resolution.

927. Special assessment. 19 G. A., ch. 90, § 2. Any such city may, in addition to the means provided by section one, of this act [§ 926], if by ordinance it so elects, cause the expense of such filling to be levied as a special tax on such lot or piece of land, and may collect the same by tax-sale in such manner as may be provided by such ordinance.

928. Change of grade. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 8. When the grade of any street or alley shall have been established, and any person shall have built or made improvements on such streets or alley according to the established grade thereof, and such city shall alter said established grade in such a manner as to injure or diminish the value of said property, said city shall pay to the owner or owners of said property so injured the amount of such damage or injury.

929. Damages assessed. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 9. Said damage or injury shall be assessed by three commissioners, who shall be disinterested freeholders, to be appointed by the city council. They shall, before entering upon their duty, be sworn to execute the same according to the best of their ability. Before entering upon their duty the city shall cause notice to be given, which notice shall be signed by the commissioners and published for three weeks in one or more newspapers printed in such city, of the time and place of their meeting for the purpose of viewing the premises and making their assessments. They shall view the premises, and, in their discretion, receive any legal evidence, and may adjourn from day to day; either one of whom shall have the power, in the presence of the others, to administer an oath or oaths to any witness or witnesses to be examined before them.

930. Confirmed, appeal; costs. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 10. When the appraisalment shall be completed the commissioners shall sign and return the same to the city council within thirty days of their appointment. The city council shall have power, in their discretion, to confirm or annul the appraisalment, and if annulled, all proceedings shall be void; but if confirmed, an order of the confirmation shall be entered. Any person interested may appeal from the order of confirmation to the [circuit or] district court of the county in which such city is situated, by notice in writing to the mayor, at any time before the expiration of twenty days after entering the order of confirmation. Upon the trial of the appeal, all questions involved in the proceedings, including the amount of damages shall be open to investigation. The cost of any proceedings incurred prior to the order of such city council confirming or annulling the appraisalment, shall in all cases be paid by such city.

931. Removal of commissioners. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 11. The city council shall have power to remove commissioners, and from time to time appoint others in the place of such as may be removed, refuse, neglect, or be unable from any cause to serve.

932. Improvement of alleys. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 12. So much of section one, chapter fifty-one, acts of the fifteenth general assembly [§ 625] as requires cities to provide by ordinance for the improvement of alleys after presentation of petition by owners of property to be assessed, is hereby repealed, and such cities organized under special charters, may provide by ordinance how such improvements shall be made, and thereafter may order any alley to be improved, graded or macadamized, by resolution passed by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of such council, and on voting on such resolution the yeas and nays shall be recorded.

933. Condemning property. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 13. All property taken and condemned by virtue or [of] any power heretofore conferred or herein granted may be so taken and condemned and such power may be exercised and pursued without resorting to proceedings in court in the first instance to enforce the same, anything in any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

934. Transient merchants. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 14. The city council of any such city may regulate and license sales by transient merchants, bankrupt and dollar stores and the like. Provided, that the exercise of such power shall not interfere with sales made by sheriffs, constables, coroners, marshals, executors, guardians, assignees of insolvent debtors, or other persons, required by law to sell real or personal property.

935. Annual tax; road tax. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 15. The city council of all cities acting under special charters, with a population of not more than fifteen thousand inhabitants, as shown by the last state census, shall have power to levy an annual tax of not to exceed three per cent. of the assessed value of all taxable property within its limits, for the purpose of defraying the annual current expenses of the city, carrying on its municipal affairs and paying its bonded indebtedness; provided, that no other or greater assessment shall be made in any one year than the amount herein authorized, anything in any law to the contrary notwithstanding; while all other cities acting under special charters may levy the taxes now authorized by law, and when such city constitutes a road district, may levy a road tax in addition to the road tax now allowed by law of two mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation, which road tax shall in no case exceed five mills; provided, however, the city council may provide by ordinance that all property lying within the corporate limits of any city acting under a special charter, and which is not now subject to tax for city purposes, by reason of the said property being used for agricultural, horticultural or gardening purposes, shall be subject to a road tax not exceeding the sum of forty cents for each one hundred dollars of the valuation thereof, for the purpose of keeping in repair the roads, streets and bridges lying within that part of any such city where the property is not subject to taxation for city purposes.

936. Collection. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 16. When, by the provisions of special charters, taxes or revenue of any kind are required to be collected by the marshal or any other designated officer, the city council of any such city shall have the power to provide by ordinance for the collection of such taxes or revenue, and the discharge of all other duties relating thereto by any other officer or person.

937. Numbering houses. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 17. Cities acting under special charters shall have power to provide by ordinance for the numbering of houses by the owners or lessees thereof.

938. Drainage. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 18. All such cities shall have power to require the owner or lessee of any lot or tract of ground extending into, across, or bordering on any hollow or ravine which constitutes a drain for surface water, or a water-course of any kind, who shall by grading or filling such lot or tract of ground obstruct the flow of water through such water-courses, to construct through such lot or land such a drain or passage-way for water as the council may designate, and to enforce the same by proper penalties, or the city may construct such drains at the expense of the owners, and assess the cost thereof on the lots or tracts of ground.

939. Poll tax. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 19. All such cities shall have power to enforce the payment of poll tax in such manner as it may determine by suit, penalties or otherwise, as may be provided by ordinance.

940. Police power. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 20. In regard to the police powers, sanitary regulations, and regulations for the prevention and spread of fires, and of contagious diseases, the enumerated powers shall not be construed as a limitation of the general powers.

941. General laws. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 21. No general law as to powers of cities organized under the general incorporation act, shall in any manner be construed to affect the charter or laws of cities organized under special charters, and while they continue to act under such charters, unless the same shall have special reference to such cities.

See Bartemeyer v. Rohlf's, 71-582.

942. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 22. Section seven, chapter two hundred and thirty-eight, acts of the sixth general assembly of the state of Iowa, approved January twenty-seventh, A. D. 1857, is hereby repealed.

SEWERS IN CITIES UNDER SPECIAL CHARTER.

943. Sewer districts; tax. 16 G. A., ch. 54, § 1. All cities in this state organized and existing under special charters, having a population of not less than ten thousand as shown by the last preceding state census, may provide by ordinance for the construction of sewers, or may divide the city into sewerage districts in such manner as the council may determine, and pay the cost of constructing same out of the general revenue of the city, or assess the cost upon the adjacent property, or may levy a certain sewerage tax within the sewerage district, out of which to pay for the construction of the same, which sewerage tax shall not exceed in any one year, two mills on the dollar of the assessed value of the property within such district. Or may pay a part of the cost of such construction out of the general revenue, a part by the assessment of adjacent property, and a part by levying a tax upon all the property within the sewerage district, or may pay for the same by pursuing any two of the methods herein named.

944. Contract. 16 G. A., ch. 54, § 2. It shall be the duty of such city council to require the work of constructing such sewers to be done under contract therefor to be entered into with the lowest responsible bidder, and bonds with surety for the faithful performance of such work shall be required to be given by the contractors. Provided, that all bids for such work may be rejected by such council, if by them thought to be exorbitant and new bids ordered.

945. Special tax. 16 G. A., ch. 54, § 3. All special tax levied for the construction of sewers under this act shall be payable by the owners, personally at the time of such assessment, and shall also be a lien upon the lots and lands so assessed and shall bear such rate of interest, and the said property assessed may be sold for the payment thereof in the same manner at any regular or adjourned sale or special sale called therefor, with the same forfeitures, penalties and right of redemption and certificates, and deeds on such sales shall be made in the same manner and with like effect as in case of sales for non-payment of the ordinary annual taxes of such cities respectively as now or hereafter provided by law in respect thereto, or the city council may provide by ordinance for the sale of such assessed property at a special tax sale to be called therefor, after giving notice therefor three consecutive weeks in one of the newspapers published in said city; the last of which publications shall be at least ten days before the day of sale.

946. Assessment. 16 G. A., ch. 54, § 4. Such city council may provide by ordinance for the particular mode of making and returning the assessments hereinbefore authorized, and payment of such assessments may, if so directed by said council, be enforced by suit in court, in the manner and by the proceedings provided for by sections four hundred and seventy-eight, four hundred and seventy-nine, and four hundred and eighty-one of the code [§§ 649, 650, 652].

947. Other provisions. 16 G. A., ch. 54, § 5. Nothing in this act contained shall take away, impair, or interfere with the powers conferred by section four hundred and sixty-five of the code [§ 624] for the construction of sewers, and payment therefor in whole as therein provided.

948. Cross-sewers. 16 G. A., ch. 54, § 6. The city council shall have power to provide, by ordinance, terms and conditions on which cross-sewers may be attached to or connected with main sewers; and in cases where sewers have been constructed in whole or in part by special assessment, may pay unto the parties who have been so assessed, the money, or a part thereof charged and collected for the privilege of attaching such cross-sewers.

949. Special provisions. 22 G. A., ch. 8, § 1. All cities in this state organized and existing under special charters having a population of not less than ten thousand nor more than fifteen thousand as shown by the now last preceding state census, shall have power to construct, reconstruct and repair sewers or to authorize the construction, reconstruction and repair of the same.

950. Sewer districts. 22 G. A., ch. 8, § 2. All cities in this state organized and existing under special charters having a population of not less than ten thousand, nor more than fifteen thousand, as shown by the now last preceding state census may provide by ordinance for the construction, reconstruction and repair of sewers or may divide the city into sewerage districts in such manner as the council may determine and pay the cost of the construction, reconstruction and repairing the same out of the general revenue of the city or assess the cost upon the adjacent property or may levy a certain sewerage tax within the sewerage district out of which to pay for the construction, reconstruction and repair of the same, or may pay a part of the cost of such construction, reconstruction and repair out of the general revenue, a part by the assessment of adjacent property and a part by levying a tax upon all the property within the sewerage district, or may pay for the same by pursuing any two of the methods herein named.

951. Tax. 22 G. A., ch. 8, § 3. The whole of the sewerage tax to pay for the cost of constructing, reconstructing and repairing sewers in any of the methods provided in the last section may be levied on the property at one time and the city council of any such city may provide by ordinance that such tax shall become payable and delinquent, part in the year in which same shall be levied and other parts in subsequent years, apportioning the same into as many parts and payable in as many years as the city council may by ordinance determine.

952. Contracts. 22 G. A., ch. 8, § 4. In making contracts with contractors for the construction, reconstruction or repair of sewers the contracts promising to pay the contractors may be made in negotiable form and the city may therein agree to levy and order the collection of such tax therefor at such time or times as may have been provided by ordinance and to pay for such construction, reconstruction or repair from the proceeds of such tax when collected.

COLLECTION OF TAXES BY CITIES UNDER SPECIAL CHARTERS.

953. Mode. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 1. All cities in this state organized and existing under special charters, may provide by ordinance when taxes both general and special shall become delinquent, and the rate of interest which they shall thereafter bear, which rate shall not exceed twenty-five per cent. per annum; and for the sale of delinquent, special and general taxes, on such terms and at such a rebate of the principal or interest, or both, as the city council may determine; and in the notice required by law to be given it will be sufficient to state the description of the lot or parcel of real estate to be sold for delinquent taxes of the current year, and also the lot or parcel of real estate on which the delinquent taxes for previous years remain due and unpaid, and the amount of taxes delinquent for previous years without naming such previous years, and the amount of interest and costs, if any, against each lot or parcel of real estate, in which may be included special taxes delinquent, at such rate of interest as the city council may determine, not to exceed the rate allowed by law at the time the taxes were assessed, and the total amount of taxes, interest and cost against such lot or parcel of real estate.

954. Sales. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 2. In all advertisements for the sale of real property for taxes, and in entries required to be made in any manner connected with the assessment or collection of taxes, letters and figures may be used to denote numbers, fractions of numbers, and amounts, as are commonly used in other business transactions, and no irregularity or informality in the advertisement shall affect the legality of any sale, or the title of any property conveyed if it shall appear that said property was subject to taxation for the year or years for which the same was sold, and that the tax was due and unpaid at the time of sale; and in all cases the advertisement shall be sufficient notice to the owners and persons having an interest in or claiming title to any lot or parcel of real estate, of the sale of their property for delinquent taxes, and a failure of the collector to make a personal demand of taxes shall not affect the validity of any sale or the title to property acquired under such sale.

955. Collecting special taxes. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 3. The city council may provide by ordinance that all special taxes hereafter assessed and levied shall bear the same rate of interest as the annual taxes from and after the same becomes due and delinquent, which rate shall not exceed twenty-five per cent. per annum; and all special taxes remaining due and delinquent at the date when the annual taxes become delinquent, shall be collected at the time and in the manner the annual delinquent taxes are collected, and the same shall be included with the annual delinquent taxes, if any remain delinquent, and the city council may provide by ordinance that all special taxes or assessments which shall become due and delinquent prior to the delinquency of the annual taxes, shall be collected by a sale of the real estate so taxed or assessed specially called therefor, and the kind of notice to be given, and may also provide for the collection of such tax by suit, such as is authorized by sections four hundred and seventy-eight and four hundred and seventy-nine of chapter ten, title four, of the code [§§ 649, 650].

956. Receipt. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 4. The collector shall in all cases, make out and deliver to the tax payer a receipt, which receipt shall contain the description and assessed value of each lot or parcel of real estate, and the assessed value of personal property; and in case the property has been sold for taxes and not redeemed, the date of such sale and to whom sold, also, the amount of the tax, interest and costs, if any, giving a separate receipt for each year, whereupon he shall make the proper entries of such payments on the books of his office. And the council may provide by ordinance, that no person shall be permitted to pay the taxes of any one year until the taxes for the previous years shall be first paid; and provide that the receipt herein contemplated shall be conclusive evidence that all taxes, and the costs of every kind against the property described in such receipt, are paid to the date of such receipt; and provide that for any failure or neglect on the part of the collector, or on the part of any one acting as a collector, he and his bondsmen shall be liable to an action on his official bond for the damages sustained by any person or the city through such neglect.

957. Certificate of purchase. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 5. The collector of taxes, or person authorized to act as collector, shall make, sign and deliver to the purchaser of any real property sold for the payment of any taxes authorized by the provisions of this act, or by any law applicable to cities acting under special charters, a certificate of purchase, which shall have the same force and effect as certificates issued by county treasurers for the sale of delinquent county taxes.

958. Redemption. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 6; 17 G. A., ch. 174, § 1. Real property sold under the provisions of this act, or by virtue of any power heretofore given, may be redeemed at any time — before the right of redemption is cut off, as hereinafter provided — by payment to the collector, or to the person authorized to act as collector, to be held by him subject to the order of the purchaser on surrender of the certificate, or in case the same is lost or destroyed, on his making affidavit of such fact, and of the further fact that it was not assigned, of the amount for which the same was sold, and twenty per centum of such amount immediately added as a penalty, with ten per cent. interest per annum on the whole amount thus made from the day of sale, and also the amount of all taxes, either annual or special, with interest and cost, paid at any time by the purchaser subsequent to the sale, and a similar penalty of twenty per cent. added as before on the amount of the payment made at any subsequent time, with ten per cent. interest per annum on the whole of such amount or amounts from the day or days of payment. Provided, that such penalty for the non-payment of the taxes at any such subsequent time or times, shall not attach unless such subsequent tax or taxes shall have remained unpaid for thirty days after they become delinquent. The collector, or person authorized to act as collector, shall, upon the application of any party to redeem real property sold as aforesaid and being satisfied that such person has a right to redeem the same, and on the payment of the proper amount issue to such party a certificate of redemption, in substance and form as provided by section eight hundred and ninety-one of chapter two, title six, of the code [§ 1376], and shall make the proper entry thereof in the sale book, which redemption shall thereupon be deemed complete without further proceedings. The provisions of section[s] eight hundred and ninety-two, eight hundred and ninety-three, and eight hundred and ninety-four, of chapter two, title six, of the code [§§ 1377-1379], shall so far as the same are applicable, and not herein changed or modified, apply to sales of real estate for delinquent taxes herein contemplated, provided, that where the words “treasurer of the county,” or “treasurer” are used in said sections, the words “collector of the city,” or “collector,” or person authorized to act as collector shall be substituted.

959. Deed. 16 G. A., ch. 116, § 7. Immediately after the expiration of ninety days from the date of service of the notice, as prescribed by section eight hundred and ninety-four of chapter two, title six, of the code [§ 1379], the collector or person authorized to act as collector then in office, shall make out a deed for each lot or parcel of land remaining unredeemed, and deliver the same to the purchaser, upon the return of the certificate of purchase. Any number of parcels of real estate bought by one person, may be included in one deed, if required by the purchaser. Deeds executed by the collector or person authorized to act as collector, may be in form substantially as provided by section eight hundred and ninety-six, chapter two, title six, of the code [§ 1381], and shall be signed and acknowledged by him in his official capacity, and all deeds and conveyances hereafter made and executed on account of any general or special tax sales shall have the same force and effect as deeds made by county treasurers for delinquent county taxes, and the purchaser, as well as the owner of any real property sold on account of such general or special delinquent tax, shall be entitled to all the rights and remedies which are granted and prescribed by sections eight hundred and ninety-seven, eight hundred and ninety-eight, eight hundred and ninety-nine, nine hundred, nine hundred and one, nine hundred and two, nine hundred and three, nine hundred and four and nine hundred and five, of chapter two, title six, of the code [§§ 1382-1391]; provided, that wherever the words " county " or " county treasurer " are used, the words " city " or " city collector " or person authorized to act as collector shall be substituted.

960. Taxes certified to auditor. 17 G. A., ch. 99, § 1. The council of each municipal corporation, acting under a special charter may, if they deem it expedient, provide by ordinance for certifying to the auditor of the county in which such city is situated on or before the first Monday of September of each year, or such other time as may be fixed by law for the levy of state and county taxes, the percentage or number of mills on the dollar of tax levied for all city purposes by them on the taxable property within the corporation for the year then ensuing, as shown by the assessment roll of said city for said year, and the county auditor when such certification is made, is required to place the same on the tax books of the county in the same manner as state and county taxes are placed thereon, which tax for municipal purposes shall be collected and paid over to the proper officer by the county treasurer, with the same restriction, powers and liabilities, and under the same regulations as to power, mode and manner of proceeding in every respect as in relation to state and county taxes, and in all things relating to the sale of real and personal property, he is authorized and required to proceed according to the provisions of the statutes regulating the sale of property for delinquent state and county taxes, and in all sales for such or any delinquent taxes for municipal purposes, if there be other delinquent taxes due from the same person, or a lien on the same property, the sale shall be for all the delinquent taxes, and such sales and all sales made under or by virtue of this act, shall be of the same validity, and in all respects be deemed and treated as though such sales had been made for delinquent state or county taxes exclusively.

BOARDS OF HEALTH IN CITIES UNDER SPECIAL CHARTERS.

961. Appointment. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 1. The mayor and aldermen of each city in this state acting under a special charter shall have full power and authority to appoint a local board of health consisting of three or five members, a majority of whom shall be members of the city council. The mayor of the city shall be ex officio one of said members of the board of health, and the chairman thereof. The manner of the appointment and duration of office of said board shall be determined by the ordinances of said city.

962. Physician; clerk; quorum. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 2. The board of health may appoint a physician to the board, who shall hold office during the pleasure of the board. The city clerk shall be the clerk of said board, unless some other clerk may be provided by the ordinances of said city. The said board of health may regulate all fees and charges of the physician and clerk and all persons employed by them in the execution of the health laws, and the rules, regulations, and orders of said board. A majority of the members of said board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of all business and the exercise of the powers conferred upon said board.

963. Reports. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 3. It shall be the duty of such clerk and physician to report at least once a year to the state board of health the proceedings of such board, and such other facts as may be required, on blanks in accordance with instructions received from the state board. They shall also make special reports whenever required so to do by the state board.

964. Rules and regulations. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 4. Said local board of health may make such regulations, rules, and orders respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and cases of sickness within their jurisdiction, and on any boats in their ports and harbors, and for the prevention of nuisances and the preservation of the public health, as said board may judge necessary for the public health and safety.

965. Punishment of violations. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 5. Said cities shall have the power and may provide by ordinance for the punishment by fine and imprisonment of any person who shall knowingly violate or fail to comply with any rule, regulation, or order of such local board of health, but the fine shall not exceed one hundred dollars, or the imprisonment thirty days. The prosecutions for the violation of any rule, regulation, or order of such board of health shall be in the name of the city appointing such board of health; and shall be conducted in the same manner and before the same tribunals as other prosecutions for the violation of other ordinances of such city.

966. Abatement of nuisances. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 6. Any such board of health may order the owner or occupant of any property, place, or building, at his own expense, to remove or abate any nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness found on such property, within twenty-four hours, or such time as is deemed reasonable, after personal notice shall have been served upon such owner or occupant; and said board of health may, in its discretion, specify in its notice the manner of such removal or abatement of said nuisance, cause of sickness, or source of filth, and if such owner or occupant neglects to comply with such order he may be punished in accordance with the provisions of section five hereof [§ 965].

967. Abatement by board. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 7. Whenever the owner or occupant fails to comply with such order, said board may cause the nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness to be removed, and all expenses incurred thereby shall be paid by the owner, occupant, or other person who caused or permitted the same to be, and the same shall be a lien upon the said property whereon said nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness existed. And the said expenses may be recovered and the lien enforced by a civil action in the name of said city in any court of competent jurisdiction.

968. Action without notice. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 8. Whenever the owner or occupant of such property, place, or building shall not be found in said city, or whenever the said board of health may deem immediate action necessary, the said board may, without notice to such owner or occupant, immediately proceed to remove said nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness, and the expense thereof shall be a lien upon such property, place, or building, and the same may be enforced in any court having jurisdiction by an action in the name of the city.

969. Prevention of nuisances. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 9. Whenever any person or persons are engaged in a work, or doing things, or threatening to do things which, in the opinion of the board of health, will result in a nuisance, or in danger to the public health, the said board of health may order said work or the doing of such things to be discontinued, or not to be done, and in case any such person or persons shall fail to comply with any such order after personal service of a notice thereof, such person or persons may be proceeded against and punished under the provisions of section five hereof [§ 965].

970. Publication of rules. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 10. Whenever any such board of health shall establish any general regulations for the public health, under section four hereof [§ 964], the same shall be published daily for two consecutive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation in such city, and upon the completion thereof the same [shall] be and remain binding and obligatory during the term of office of said board, unless sooner revoked or changed by said board. And no notice of such general regulations shall be necessary other than said before-mentioned publication.

971. Officer to serve notice. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 11. Whenever it is necessary, under this act, that any notice be served, the same may be served by any city officer, or by any other person whom the board of health may appoint or designate.

972. Tenements; regulation. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 12. The board when satisfied upon due examination that any cellar, room, tenement, or building in said city, occupied as a dwelling-house, has become, by reason of the number of inhabitants, or want of cleanliness, or other cause, unfit for such habitation and the cause of nuisance or sickness to the occupants thereof or the public, may issue a notice to the occupants or any of them, requiring the premises to be put into a proper condition as to cleanliness or health, or, if such board see fit, requiring the occupants to quit or remove from the premises within such time as said board deems reasonable. If the persons so notified neglect or refuse to comply with the terms of the notice, the board may cause the premises to be properly cleaned at the expense of the owners, and such expense shall be a lien on said property, and may be enforced in any court having jurisdiction; or said board may remove the occupants forcibly and close up the premises, and the same shall not again be occupied as a dwelling-house without permission of the board. And the persons notified and failing to comply with the order of the board may be punished in accordance with the provisions of section five hereof [§ 965].

973. Congregation of people; vaccination. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 13. Whenever by reason of the prevalence of small-pox or other contagious or infectious disease in any such city, or the vicinity thereof, the board of health may deem it dangerous to permit the congregation together of large crowds of people, the said board of health may, with the consent of the city council, by public proclamation published once in some newspaper of general circulation in said city, prohibit the congregation of people in schools, churches, theaters, and in all other buildings in said city, and it shall thereupon become the duty of the principals, teachers, or other persons in charge of said schools, and of the persons in charge of such churches, theaters, or other buildings specified in said publication, to keep the same closed, and to prevent the congregation of people therein; and when small-pox is prevalent in said city or its vicinity, the said board of health may, with the consent of the city council, by notice served upon the teachers or persons in charge of any of the public or private schools, prevent the admission therein of any pupils, until such pupils shall have proved to the satisfaction of the board of health, or the persons by it selected for that purpose, that such pupils have been vaccinated within the past five years or such time as the board may designate. And said board may in like manner prevent the admission of persons not furnishing satisfactory proof of vaccination, into churches, theaters, or other buildings, by notifying the persons in charge thereof not to admit such persons.

974. Right to enter. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 14. Whenever the board of health shall think it necessary for the preservation of the lives or the health of the inhabitants to enter a place, building, or vessel, within its jurisdiction, for the purpose of examining into and destroying, removing, or preventing any nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness, and shall be refused such entry, any member of the board may make complaint, under oath, before any justice of the peace, or any tribunal having jurisdiction to enforce the ordinance of such city, whether such judicial officer be a member of said board or not, stating the facts of the case so far as he has knowledge thereof. Such tribunal shall thereupon issue a warrant directed to the sheriff or any constable of the county, or the city marshal, commanding him to take sufficient aid, and, being accompanied by two or more members of said board of health, between the hours of sunrise and sunset, repair to the place where such nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness may be, and the same destroy, remove, or prevent under the direction of such members of the board of health.

975. Isolation of contagious diseases. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 15. When any person coming from abroad or residing within such city shall be infected, or lately shall have been infected, with small-pox or other sickness dangerous to the public health, the board of health shall make provision in the manner by them deemed best for the safety of the inhabitants, by removing such sick or infected person to a separate house, if it can be done without damage to his health, and by providing nurses and other assistance and supplies, which shall be charged to the person himself, his parents, or other person liable for his support, if able; otherwise at the expense of the county to which he belongs.

976. Same. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 16. If any afflicted person cannot be removed without danger to his health, the board of health shall make provision for him, as directed in the preceding section, in the house in which he may be, and in such case they may cause the persons in the neighborhood to be removed, and take such other means as may be deemed necessary for the safety of the inhabitants.

977. Removal. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 17. Any justice of the peace, or tribunal having jurisdiction to enforce the ordinance of such city, on application under oath, showing cause therefor, by any member of said board of health, shall issue his warrant directed to the sheriff or constable of the county, or city marshal, commanding him under the direction of the board of health to remove any person infected with contagious disease, or to take possession of condemned houses and lodgings, and to provide nurses and attendants and other necessaries for the care, safety, and relief of the sick.

978. Meetings; report. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 18. Every such board of health shall meet for the transaction of business on the first Monday of May and the first Monday of October in each year, and at such other times as occasion may require, and the clerk of said board shall transmit his annual report to the secretary of the [state] board within two weeks after the October meeting. Said report shall embrace a history of any epidemic disease which may have prevailed within his district. The failure of the clerk to prepare or have prepared, and forward, such report shall be considered a misdemeanor, for which he shall be subject to a fine of not more than twenty-five dollars.

979. Powers of cities. 19 G. A., ch. 168, § 19. This act shall not in any way limit the powers of the cities embraced therein, in relation to matters affecting the public health; and the city councils of said cities may by ordinance provide for the manner of the exercise of the powers herein conferred by said boards of health; and said city councils may at all times require said boards of health to report to them their doings, and may supervise, modify, or rescind their actions, orders, rules, or regulations.

REFUNDING BONDS OF CITIES UNDER SPECIAL CHARTERS.

980. May refund. 22 G. A., ch. 19, § 1. All cities in this state having a population of more than two thousand, organized and existing under special charters are hereby authorized and empowered if, by a vote of two-thirds of the city council it be deemed for the public interest, to refund the indebtedness of any such city evidenced by the bonds thereof, heretofore issued, and outstanding at the time of the passage of this act and to issue the coupon bonds of such city in denominations of not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars and having not more than twenty years to run, redeemable in lawful money of the United States at maturity and bearing interest payable semi-annually at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum. The principal of such bonds shall be made payable at the office of the treasurer of the city, but the interest upon such bonds may be made payable either in the city of New York, state of New York or the city of Boston, state of Massachusetts, or the city of Chicago, state of Illinois or at the office of the treasurer of the city. Such bonds as well as the coupons, shall be canceled when paid and destroyed in the presence of the city council, which shall cause to be kept a register of all such bonds issued and also of all bonds or coupons which are canceled or destroyed. Such bonds shall be signed by the mayor of the city and attested by its clerk with the seal of the city attached and shall be so signed and attested in open session of the city council and a register shall be then made and kept thereof and such bonds so executed shall be at once delivered to the city treasurer of the city, who shall be liable on his official bond for the safe keeping thereof and the proceeds thereof until he parts therewith under the direction of the city council.

981. Form of bond. 22 G. A., ch. 19, § 2. The bonds issued under this act shall be substantially in the following form:

“No. —.

“The city of — in the state of Iowa for value received promises to pay — — or — order at the office of the treasurer of — in — on the first day of — the sum of — dollars, with interest thereon from date until paid at the rate of — per cent. per annum payable semi-annually at the — in the city — of —, state of —, on the first days of — in each year on presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached.

“This bond is issued by the city council of said city under and in accordance with the provisions of chapter — of the session laws of the twenty-second general assembly of the state of Iowa and in conformity with a resolution of said city council dated — day of —, 18—.

“In testimony whereof the said city council of the city of — has caused this bond to be signed by the mayor of said city and attested by its city clerk with the seal of said city attached thereto, this — day of —, 18—.”

And the interest coupons on each bond shall be in substantially the following form:

“The city of —, in the state of Iowa, will pay to the holder hereof on the — day of —, 18—, at the — in the city of —, in the state of —, — dollars for interest on — bond No. —, issued under the provisions of chapter — of the session laws of the twenty-second general assembly of the state of Iowa;” and such coupons shall be signed by the city clerk or recorder.

982. Negotiation. 22 G. A., ch. 19, § 3. The city council of any such city is hereby authorized to sell and dispose of the bonds issued under this act at not less than their par value and to apply the proceeds thereof to the redemption of the outstanding bonded debt or may exchange such bonds for outstanding bonds par for par, but the bonds hereby authorized shall be issued for no other purpose whatever; provided, however, that the city council of such city may, if deemed advisable, appropriate not to exceed two per centum of the bonds herein authorized to pay the expenses of preparing, issuing, advertising and disposing of the same and may employ a financial agent therefor.

983. Tax for interest. 22 G. A., ch. 19, § 4. The city council of any such city shall cause to be assessed and levied each year upon the taxable property of such city in addition to the levy authorized for other purposes a sufficient sum to pay the interest on all outstanding bonds issued in conformity with this act accruing before the next annual levy and also such proportion of the principal as shall fall due before such next annual levy, and such city council may at its option, in addition to the levy hereinbefore authorized, levy an amount not exceeding two mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation of such city in any one year for the purpose of purchasing and canceling any of its bonds issued under this act before the maturity of the same. And the money arising from such levies shall be known as the bond fund and shall be used for the payment of the bonds and interest coupons and for the purchase and canceling of the bonds and for no other purpose whatever. And the treasurer of such city shall open and keep in his book a separate and special account thereof which shall at all times show the actual condition of such bond fund.

984. Purchase of bonds. 22 G. A., ch. 19, § 5. The city council of any such city shall have power to purchase any of the bonds issued under this act before the maturity of the same and to this purpose may at its option appropriate any monies in the bond fund not required to pay bonds or interest coupons maturing before the next annual levy, provided that in the purchase of such bonds there shall be paid in no case a premium to exceed five per centum of the face value of the bond above the amount actually due thereon.

985. Enforcement of payment. 22 G. A., ch. 19, § 6. If the city council of any such city which has issued bonds under the provisions of this act shall fail to make the levy necessary to pay such bonds or interest coupons at maturity and the same shall have been presented to the treasurer of any such city and payment thereof refused the owner may file the bond together with the unpaid coupons with the auditor of state taking his receipt therefor and the same shall be registered in the auditor's office and the executive council shall at their next session as a board of equalization and at each annual equalization thereafter add to the state tax to be levied in such city a sufficient rate to realize the amount of principal or interest past due and to become due prior to the next levy and the same shall be levied and collected as a part of the state tax and paid into the state treasury and passed to the credit of such city as bond tax and shall be paid by warrant as the payments mature to the holder of such obligation as shown by the register in the office of the state auditor until the same shall be fully satisfied and discharged provided that nothing herein shall be construed to limit or postpone the right of the holder of any such bonds to resort to any other remedy which such holder might otherwise have.

986. Other provisions. 22 G. A., ch. 19, § 7. Nothing in this act shall take away, impair or interfere with the powers conferred by chapter fifty-eight of the session laws of the seventeenth general assembly of the state of Iowa entitled "An act to authorize counties, cities and towns to refund outstanding bonded debt at a lower rate of interest and to provide for the payment of the same" as amended by chapter one hundred and forty of the session laws of the eighteenth general assembly of the state of Iowa [§§ 383-388], making the same applicable to cities organized under special charters.

CHAPTER 11.

OF GENERAL REGULATIONS AFFECTING COUNTIES, TOWNS, AND CITIES.

987. Sectarian schools. 552. Public money shall not be appropriated, given, or loaned by the corporate authorities, supervisors, or trustees of any county, township, city, or town, or municipal organization of this state, to, or in favor of, any institution, school, association or object, which is under ecclesiastical or sectarian management or control. [14 G. A., chs. 57, 134.]

988. Cannot take stock. 553. No county, city, or incorporated town in this state, shall, in their corporate capacity, or by their officers, directly or indirectly, subscribe for stock, or become interested as a partner, shareholder, or otherwise, in any banking institution, whether the same be a bank of issue, deposit, or exchange, nor in any plank road, turnpike, or railway, or in any other work of internal improvement; nor shall they be allowed to issue any bonds, bills of credit, scrip, or other evidences of indebtedness for any such purposes — all such evidences of indebtedness for said purposes being hereby declared absolutely void; provided, nevertheless, that this section shall not be so construed as to prevent, or in any wise to embarrass, the counties, cities, or towns, or any of them, in the erection of their necessary public buildings, bridges, laying off highways, streets, alleys, and public grounds, or other local works in which said counties, cities, or towns may respectively be interested. [R., § 1345.]

989. Bonds in aid of railways. 554. All bonds or other evidences of debt, hereafter issued by any corporation to any railway company as capital stock shall be null and void, and no assignment of the same shall give them any validity. [R., § 1346.]

990. Recovery on coupons. 555. In all actions now pending or hereafter brought in any court in this state, on any bond or coupon issued, or purporting to be issued, by any county, city, or incorporated town for railway purposes, a former recovery against such corporation on any one or more, or any part of such bonds or coupons, shall not bar or estop any defense such corporation has made, or can make to such bonds or coupons in the action in which such former recovery was had; but the corporation sought to be charged in any such action now pending or hereafter brought, may allege and prove any matter of defense in such action to the same extent, and with the same effect, as though no former action had been brought or former recovery had. [Ex. S., 9 G. A., ch. 34.]

991. Officers cannot discount warrants. 556. No officer of any county or other municipal corporation, or any deputy or employee of such officer shall, either directly or indirectly, be permitted to take, purchase, or receive in payment, exchange, or in any way whatever, any warrant, scrip, or other evidence of the indebtedness of such corporation, or any demand against the same, for a less amount than that expressed on the face of the warrant, scrip, or other evidence of indebtedness or demand. [R., § 2186.]

992. Indorsement of warrants. 557. The treasurer of every county, or other municipal corporation, when he shall receive any warrant, scrip, or other evidence of indebtedness of such corporation, shall indorse thereon the date of its receipt, from whom received, and what amount. [R., § 2187.]

993. Penalty. 558. Any officer of any county or other municipal corporation, or any deputy or employee of such officer, who violates any of the provisions of this chapter, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars, and not more than five hundred dollars for each offense. [R., § 2188.]

[Provision as to bonds of counties, cities and towns are found in §§ 383-388.]

CHAPTER 12.

OF PLATS.

994. In town or city. 559. Every original owner or proprietor of any tract or parcel of land, who has heretofore subdivided, or shall hereafter subdivide the same into three or more parts for the purpose of laying out any town or city, or any addition thereto or any part thereof, or suburban lots, shall cause a plat of such subdivision, with references to known or permanent monuments, to be made, which shall accurately describe all the subdivisions of such tract or parcel of land, numbering the same by progressive numbers, and giving the dimensions and length and breadth thereof, and the breadth and courses of all the streets and alleys established therein. Descriptions of lots or parcels of land in such subdivisions, according to the number and designation thereof on said plat contained, in conveyances or for the purposes of taxation, shall be deemed good and valid for all intents and purposes. The duty to file for record a plat as provided herein, shall attach as a covenant of warranty in all conveyances of any part or parcel of such subdivision by the original owner or proprietors against any and all assessments, costs, and damages paid, lost, or incurred by any grantee, or person claiming under him, in consequence of the omission on the part of said owner or proprietors to file such plat.

995. Statement on plat. 560. Every such plat shall contain a statement, to the effect that the above or foregoing subdivision of (here insert a correct description of the land or parcel subdivided), as appears on this plat, is with the free consent and in accordance with the desire of the undersigned owners and proprietors, which shall be signed by the owners and proprietors, and shall be duly acknowledged before some officer authorized to take the acknowledgment of deeds; and when thus executed and acknowledged, said plat shall be filed for record and recorded in the office of the recorder of the proper county. [13 G. A., ch. 77.]

As the survey establishes the lines of a street, etc., while the plat is but a record of such survey, in case of any conflict the actual survey will govern: Bradstreet v. Dunham, 65-248.

996. Dedication to public use. 561. The acknowledgment and recording of such plat, is equivalent to a deed in fee-simple of such portion of the premises platted as is on such plat set apart for streets or other public use; or as is thereon dedicated to charitable, religious or educational purposes. [R., § 1021; C., '51, §§ 561, 637.]

Rights acquired by the city: The title to land dedicated for streets, public squares, etc., is in the city, being in trust for the public, and such property cannot be taken on execution against the city, or for any other than trust purposes: Ransom v. Boal, 29-68.

The purchaser of city or town property acquires no ownership of or interest in the streets adjoining such property other than that which is given to the whole public, the right of way over them; and he cannot object to the construction of a railroad over such streets on the ground that compensation for the right of way is not made to him: Milburn v. Cedar Rapids, 12-246.

In the cities of Keokuk and Dubuque, which were laid out by the United States, the fee in the streets is in the adjacent property owners, subject to the public use: Haight v. Keokuk, 4-199; Dubuque v. Maloney, 9-450.

There is no substantial difference between the streets in which the legal title is in individuals and those in which it is in the public as to the rights of the public therein. The construction of a permanent freight depot so as to obstruct the street is subversive and repugnant to the dedication, but not the occupation of the streets by tracks, pipes, etc., subject to the reasonable control of the state and city: Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S., 324 (affirming S. C., 4 Dillon, 593).

The fee of the streets is in the city for the use of the general public, not the people of the city alone, and the legislature may authorize them to be used by a railroad company for the construction of its road without the consent of the city and without compensation: Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 24-455.

But a city has no authority to control or grant rights and privileges to, or in, its streets, unless it has so been authorized: Stanley v. Davenport, 54-463; and as to the right of railway companies to construct their tracks upon the streets of cities, see notes to § 623.

The city acquires as against adjoining owners and the original proprietor control over the whole street and not simply over the surface; and it may maintain an action for material, as coal, etc., removed therefrom, whether such material be superficial or subterranean: Des Moines v. Hall, 24-234.

The nature of the property which a city acquires in its streets is different from that which it may have in real estate, such as it is authorized to acquire for other purposes: Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 24-455.

Rights of adjacent property owners: Although under the provisions as to statutory dedication the owners of lots do not own the fee of the adjacent street, yet they have a peculiar interest in the street, which neither the local nor general public can pretend to claim. This interest is an easement appurtenant to their lots and partakes of the nature of property: Cadle v. Muscatine Western R. Co., 44-11.

Therefore, where a railway company having the right to construct its road over the streets of a city does so in a careless and negligent manner, the adjoining property owners may recover special damages resulting therefrom: Ibid.

Purchasers of lots in the portion platted acquire a right of way over the streets and alleys therein: Yost v. Leonard, 34-9.

Where a party filing a plat reserved therein the right to construct a mill-race across one of the streets, held, that he became bound to erect and maintain a bridge across the race at his own expense: Waterloo v. Union Mill Co., 59-437.

Where the fee in the street is in the adjoining property owner, neither the city nor any individual has a right, against the will or consent of the owner of the adjoining lot, to construct a cistern under the street or sidewalk: Dubuque v. Maloney, 9-450.

An adjacent property owner cannot excavate areas under the sidewalk except with the consent of the city authorities: Davis v. Clinton, 50-585.

Platting of streets: Where a plat shows the dedication of two streets at right angles to each other, the square formed by their intersection will be presumed to be included in the dedication: Yost v. Leonard, 34-9.

To make out a dedication of a street appearing on a plat, it is necessary to show, not only that the plat was laid out, but also that the party laying it out had title thereto: Porter v. Stone, 51-373.

Dedication in a town plat held sufficient, in a particular case, to convey the fee in a street indicated thereon: Stange v. Hull & West Dubuque St. R. Co., 54-669.

Evidence in a particular case, held not sufficient to establish a dedication of a street which was shown by the last of three plats filed, but not by the first two, under which the rights of the parties attached: Manchester v. Hoag, 66-649.

When lots are sold on a plat bounded by a street or highway, that fact raises a strong presumption of the intent to pass the soil to the center of the street or highway, and it will so pass unless the highway be expressly excluded: Dubuque v. Maloney, 9-450.

But this rule is not applicable to land reserved for public use on the opposite side of the highway from the lots thus sold, and the lot purchaser acquires no title to the land thus reserved: Cook v. Burlington, 30-94.

Where the owner of land on both sides of a section line platted the portion on one side, locating a street on such line, held, that the dedication covered the entire width of the street: McDunn v. Des Moines, 34-467.

The existence of a plat, even though defective, and the sale of lots, bounded according to its descriptions, by the persons platting the land, establish the animus dedicandi as to the streets laid out on such plat, which, when shown, is sufficient to establish a way or street, even though there be no record of such plat made in the form prescribed by law: Shea v. Ottumwa, 67-39.

Dedication: A proprietor laying off an addition to an incorporated town or city, though he may grant only the use of or easement in the streets, or reserve minerals therein (Dubuque v. Benson, 23-248), cannot confer upon some other public corporation rights in and control over the streets and alleys: therefore, held, that the entry upon a plat that the proprietors "do hereby convey to Polk county for the use of the public the streets and alleys as marked on this plat, and dedicate the same to the public," was inoperative, and the platting, acknowledgment, recording, etc., being sufficient to constitute a statutory dedication, the fee of the streets vested in the city: Des Moines v. Hall, 24-234.

A grantor filing a plat and procuring the proper certificates thereto cannot afterwards object that it was not in accordance with law and that the requirements of the statute have not been complied with: Scott v. Des Moines, 64-438.

And the grantor, or those claiming under him, cannot defeat a dedication made in such plat, on the ground that it was not recorded at once nor until after the grantor's death: Ibid.

Where a strip of land between a street and a river was not included in the plat, held, that it could not be considered as dedicated to the public: Cowles v. Gray, 14-1.

In order to show a dedication apart from the plat there must be an act of dedication within the prescribed limit of time and an acceptance thereof by the public: Ibid.

Where the plat of a town contained a square designated "public square," and lots were sold on the faith of such plat, and afterwards another plat was duly made and recorded changing the designation of the square, with the representation to prior lot purchasers that it was for the public use and control, and the city took possession of the square as public property, held, that the corporation had the title to such square for the use of the public and in trust for it: Pella v. Scholte, 21-463.

Marking a square on the plats as "garden square" held not necessarily to express or imply a dedication to the public: Pella v. Scholte, 24-283.

Where a square was marked upon a plat as "market square," and thereafter treated by the city as public, and was for that reason omitted from taxation, which facts were known to the dedicator and those claiming under him, held, that the circumstances showed an intention to dedicate such square to the public: Scott v. Des Moines, 64-438.

Also held, in such case, that the designation of the square as "market square" did not show an intention to impose on the dedication a condition that it be used only for market purposes and that a market building be erected thereon: Ibid.

A dedication of a portion of land covered by a city plat for public purposes, as by marking it "public square," which dedication is accepted by the city, imposes upon the city an obligation to hold the property in trust for the uses and purposes expressed, and the city cannot divert it to another and different use, as by selling it to private owners: Warren v. Mayor of Lyons City, 22-351.

Where a plat contained a square marked "church square," held, that such designation did not constitute a dedication to any particular church association, although but one such association existed at the time in the town: Christian Church v. Scholie, 2-27.

Under the evidence in particular cases, held, that subdivisions of plats marked as "square," or "public square," were dedicated to the public: Livermore v. Maquoketa, 35-358; Bayliss v. Supervisors, 5 Dillon, 549.

Where lots are sold with reference to a town plat, upon which certain land is dedicated to public use, the purchasers acquire, as appurtenant to their purchases, a vested right to the use of the land dedicated to public use, of which they cannot be divested by the owner who made the dedication or by the town in its corporate capacity: Lester v. Burlington, 18-361.

Where lots were sold in accordance with a plat upon which a certain square was marked "public square," and afterwards "garden square," and with the representation that the square was for the public and was to remain forever an open and unoccupied space, and the value of lots sold was increased thereby, held, that a purchaser could enjoin the grantees of such square from platting lots and erecting buildings thereon: Fisher v. Beard, 40-625.

Where the general government as owner laid off land into lots, streets, squares, etc., for a city and sold lots according to such plan, held, that at the sale and conveyance implied that a grant or covenant to the purchasers of the lots that the streets and public squares should forever be open to the public, free from all claims of proprietors inconsistent with such use, but that the dedication did not operate as a grant to the city of the fee in the streets, and that such fee-title passed to the adjoining property owners, subject to the easement of the public, with the power in the city to regulate the public use of such streets and squares, as the representative of the public, for the purpose of vindicating the public right: Dubuque v. Maloney, 9-450.

Where, by act of congress, certain land in front of a street leading to a navigable river was reserved from sale for public use, with the declaration that it should remain forever free for highways and other purposes, held, that such dedication was in the nature of a contract which could not be afterwards abrogated or repealed, and that the municipal corporation, succeeding to the title of the land thus reserved, held it for the same purposes and could not divert it for other purposes: Cook v. Burlington, 30-94.

Where the owner of land laid out an addition to a city and by the plat donated and granted the "streets, alleys and public grounds, etc., for public purposes," and designated a tract of ground next to the river as "Reserved Land," held, that the city did not by such donation acquire the right to the property so reserved: Grant v. Davenport, 18-179.

Acceptance of dedication: By accepting a charter making a platted addition to the city limits, held, that the city thereby accepted the addition and the dedication of the streets therein laid out: Des Moines v. Hall, 24-234.

Where, in the plat of an addition to the city, a street was laid out ninety feet in width, but was only opened to a width of sixty feet, fences being erected by lot owners upon the line of the street as thus improved and used, and the strip not used being thus inclosed for twenty-five years, held, that the city could not claim the strip thus inclosed, and that it would be presumed that the city had only accepted the dedication to the extent that the street had been opened: Bell v. Burlington, 68-296.

Action of the city council in adopting the report of a committee recommending an acceptance of streets as dedicated on a plat not yet filed, held not to amount to an acceptance of such streets upon the subsequent filing of such plat: Laughlin v. Washington, 63-652.

Where a plat was filed for record, and the streets as designated thereby remained open to the public for two or three weeks, and were to some extent passed over and used by the public, but were afterwards closed, held, such facts did not constitute an acceptance by the city of the proposed dedication. Mere user will not be sufficient to constitute an acceptance; it must be shown to have been open and notorious, and continued for such a length of time that an acceptance can be presumed: Ibid.

Non-user: The right of the public in the streets and alleys accrues upon the acknowledgment and recording of the plat, and continues until it is either divested by some act of the public authorities, or lost by adverse possession, and it is immaterial as to the rights of the public whether such streets and alleys are improved or not. Therefore, a railway company has no right to fence its track where it crosses streets and alleys thus laid out, although they are not improved and used: Lathrop v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-105.

The occupation by a party dedicating, for ten years thereafter, will not bar the rights of the public, unless it appear that he held under claim of right adverse to the public: McDunn v. Des Moines, 34-467; Livermore v. Maquoketa, 35-358.

Diversion of streets or public grounds: The title to streets is vested in the city for the use of the public, and such use is to be controlled by the legislative power of the state. The city cannot grant the use of the streets for any purpose not thus authorized: Stanley v. Davenport, 54-463.

A city taking public lands which have been already dedicated to public use cannot devote the same to private uses, or convey them to others for such private use; and in an action by an adjoining lot owner having an interest in the preservation of the land for the uses for which it was originally dedicated, the city may be enjoined from making a conveyance thereof: Cook v. Burlington, 30-94.

Purchasers of lots abutting upon land dedicated by the original owner to a public use acquire such rights therein as will enable them to enjoin a diversion of it by the corporation to uses and purposes foreign to and inconsistent with the objects of the grant: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that while the grant of the right of way to a railway might not be inconsistent with the public use of lands reserved to the corporation for public purposes, yet a legal conveyance thereof in fee to a railway company was inconsistent with such use: Ibid.

But it does not follow that abutting owners may maintain an action for an obstruction in the street which does not affect them differently from the public generally: Ingram v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 38-669.

The city takes title to such portions of its territory as are dedicated for public purposes, subject to a trust to hold and use it for the purpose expressed, and cannot dispose of it for other purposes: Warren v. Mayor of Lyons, 22-351.

A former statute attempting to confer upon cities and towns the power to sell and convey squares and parks therein laid off and dedicated by individuals, held void as authorizing

997. Altering or vacating streets. 562. Streets and alleys so platted and laid out, or which have been platted or laid out under any prior law of this state regulating private plats, may be altered or vacated in the manner provided by law for the alteration or discontinuance of highways. [R., § 1029.]

Upon the vacation of the streets in a plat the title of the land occupied by them does not revert to the grantor: Day v. Schroeder, 46-546; Pettingill v. Devin, 35-344, 355.

This section does not limit the power given to the city council by § 623 to vacate streets and alleys. It is to be presumed that it was

998. Vacating plat. 563. Any such plat may be vacated by the proprietors thereof, at any time before the sale of any lot therein, by a written instrument declaring the same to be vacated, duly executed, acknowledged, or proved and recorded in the same office with the plat to be vacated; and the execution and recording of such writing shall operate to destroy the force and effect of the recording of the plat so vacated, and to divest all public rights in the streets, alleys, commons, and public grounds laid out or described in such plat. And in cases where any lots have been sold, the plat may be vacated, as herein provided, by all the owners of lots in such plat joining in

The term "proprietors" as used in this and the following sections indicates the owners of the land and not alone the persons who originally plat the land. Owners who have ac-

a perversion of a trust. Whether the corporation might not be given power to part with whatever interest it possessed in the property, quære: Ibid.

Public squares dedicated to a city are held in trust for the public, and cannot be sold on execution to satisfy the debts of the city: Ransom v. Boal, 29-68.

Property dedicated as public grounds may be used for purposes varying according to the circumstances, to be judged by the proper legal authorities, but such property cannot be applied to private purposes: Platt v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74-127.

The fact that the use of a street is interrupted by an improper obstruction will not show an abandonment where the use is such as the public wants at the time require, nor will the city be estopped by virtue of such improper use from asserting its rights in the streets: Waterloo v. Union Mill Co., 72-437.

The statute of limitations will not run to defeat the exercise by a city of its municipal powers in establishing and maintaining a street: Ibid.

Grants dedicated to public use can be used for the purposes expressed in the act of dedication only, and the grantor and even the proprietor of lots abutting may, by injunction, restrain a diversion to any other purpose resulting in an injury to him: Pettingill v. Devin, 35-344.

Reversion: It does not follow that the title reverts to the grantor upon a failure to use the land for the purposes indicated. Such a dedication passes the fee from the grantor without the contingent right of reversion, and any person injuriously affected may prevent the diversion from the purposes designated by injunction: Ibid.

Upon the vacation by the city of a street in the city plat the title of the property covered thereby does not revert to the original owner: Day v. Schroeder, 45-546.

enacted to cover cases not included in the other, and as it contains provisions applicable to streets and alleys in incorporated villages to which the other section is not applicable, it will be limited to such cases: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66-687.

[9 G. A., ch. 78, § 1.]
quired title from such original proprietors may exercise the powers conferred: McGrew v. Lettsville, 71-150.

999. Part of plat vacated. 564. Any part of a plat may be vacated under the provisions and subject to the conditions of this chapter, provided such vacating does not abridge or destroy any of the rights and privileges of other proprietors in said plat, and provided further, that nothing contained in this section shall authorize the closing or obstructing of any public highways laid out according to law. [Same, § 2.]

The fact that the vacation of a portion of a plat will close streets therein, and thus abridge the number of ways of access to the property of the proprietor of another portion of the plat, will not be ground for objecting to such vacation, if one or more ways are left reasonably convenient, so that no substantial right is abridged: Lorenzen v. Preston, 53-580.

The proper steps having been taken for the vacation of a street, such vacation becomes effective as against the city, subject only to the judicial determination as to whether the rights of private persons are affected. The city council cannot, by subsequently directing such street to be opened, affect the validity of the vacation: Conner v. Iowa City, 66-419.

This section contemplates the case of separate proprietors having distinct and separate interests, and they may vacate part of the town plat. The instrument of vacation, in a particular case, held certain as to the part affected. The authority conferred to vacate a part of the plat does not have the effect to limit the boundaries of an incorporated town and to take that part of which the plat is vacated out of the corporation. It therefore, does not affect the authority of the corporation over the lands covered by the part of the plat vacated. As to streets and alleys that were never opened, such vacation does not destroy any of the rights of any owner of land within the town: McGrew v. Lettsville, 71-150.

1000. Streets inclosed. 565. When any part of a plat shall be vacated as aforesaid, the proprietors of the lots so vacated may inclose the streets, alleys, and public grounds adjoining said lots in equal proportions. [Same, § 3.]

1001. Recording. 566. The county recorder, in whose office the plats aforesaid are recorded, shall write in plain, legible letters across that part of said plat so vacated, the word "vacated," and also make a reference on the same to the volume and page in which the said instrument of vacation is recorded. [Same, § 4.]

1002. Replatting. 567. The owner of any lots in a plat so vacated, may cause the same and a proportionate part of adjacent streets and public grounds to be platted and numbered by the county surveyor; and when such plat is acknowledged by such owner, and is recorded in the record office of the county, such lots may be conveyed and assessed by the numbers given them on such plat. [Same, § 5.]

1003. Public squares used for school purposes. 21 G. A., ch. 75, § 1. It shall be lawful for the people of any incorporated town, located wholly within an independent school district in which is situated a public square or plat of ground, deeded or dedicated to the said town or the public, by the proprietor of the town, or of any addition thereof, to transfer or re-dedicate such plat or square, to the purpose of a public school-house lot, to be used either for the erection thereon of a public school-house, or as school grounds, in connection with such school-house.

1004. Manner of transfer. 21 G. A., ch. 75, § 2. The manner of procedure to effect the change or transfer of the purpose for which such lot or square shall be used, as is authorized in section one, of this act [§ 1003], shall be as follows: When a plat or lot of the character described in section one, of this act [§ 1003], is located in such incorporated town, and one-half of the resident voters of such town, according to the last census thereof, national or state, shall petition the mayor and town council of such town, asking said city authorities to submit to the voters of the town at a general or special election the question whether or not such public square, lot or plat shall be transferred, dedicated and used for the purposes of a public school-house lot, for the use of the independent district in which the same is situated, said mayor and town council shall submit the question to the voters of the town, in accordance with the prayer of said petitioners after giving ten days' notice thereof, by written or printed notices, in which the proposition submitted, shall be clearly set forth, and signed by said mayor three of which notices shall be posted in public and conspicuous places in the town, and one shall be published in the last two issues, preceding such election in a weekly newspaper published in the town, or if there be no such newspaper published in the town then in the weekly newspaper published elsewhere in the county, having the largest circulation in said town. Such notice shall state the manner of voting, which shall be by ballot, and substantially as follows: The ballot shall contain in print, ink or pencil the words "For transferring lot or block or square (as the case may be, describing it) to the purposes of a public school-house lot;" or "Against transferring lot or block or square (as the case may be, describing it) to the purposes of a school-house lot." And such election shall be held as per notice given and be conducted as ordinary town elections are, under the supervision of the town authorities, who shall canvass the vote as by law provided in other cases. If it shall appear that two-thirds or more, of all the legal votes cast at such election, for and against the proposition submitted, have been cast in favor of the transfer of such lot or block or square, to the purposes of a public school-house lot, then such transfer shall be held to have been completed, and the lot or block or square may be appropriated and used for the purposes so indicated, by said vote and shall be no longer held for any other purpose. If less than two-thirds of the votes cast at such election are found to be in favor of the transfer then it shall be held that the proposition failed and no transfer shall be effected.

1005. Plat by auditor. 568. Whenever the original owner or proprietor of any subdivision of land, as contemplated in section five hundred and fifty-nine of this chapter [§ 994], have sold or conveyed any part thereof, or invested the public with any rights therein, and have failed and neglected to execute and file for record a plat as provided in section five hundred and fifty-nine of this chapter, the county auditor shall notify some, or all, of such owners and proprietors by mail or otherwise, and demand the execution of said plat as provided; and if such owners or proprietors, whether so notified or not, fail and neglect to execute and file for record said plat for thirty days after the issuance of such notice, the auditor shall cause to be made the plat of such subdivision and any surveying necessary therefor. Said plat shall be signed and acknowledged by the auditor, who shall certify that he executed [it] by reason of the failure of the owners or proprietors named to do so, and filed for record; and, when so filed for record, shall have the same effect for all purposes as if executed, acknowledged, and recorded by the owners or proprietors themselves. A correct statement of the costs and expenses of such plat, surveying, and recording, verified by oath, shall be by the auditor laid before the first session of the board of supervisors, who shall allow the same, and order the same to be paid out of the county treasury, and who shall, at the same time, assess the said amount, pro rata, upon all the several subdivisions of said tract, lot, or parcel so subdivided; and said assessment shall be collected with and in like manner as the general taxes, and shall go to the general county fund; or said board may direct suit to be brought in the name of the county before any court having jurisdiction, to recover of the said original owners or proprietors, or either of them, the said cost and expense of procuring and recording said plat.

1006. Platting for assessment and taxation. 569. Whenever any congressional subdivision of land of forty acres or less, or any lot or subdivision is owned by two or more persons in severalty, and the description of one or more of the different parts or parcels thereof cannot, in the judgment of the county auditor, be made sufficiently certain and accurate, for the purposes of assessment and taxation without noting the metes and bounds of the same, the auditor shall require and cause to be made and recorded, a plat of such tract or lot of land with its several subdivisions in accordance with the provisions of this chapter; and he shall proceed in such cases according to the provisions of section five hundred and sixty-eight [§ 1005], and all the provisions of said section in relation to plats of towns, cities and so forth, shall govern as to the tracts and parcels of land in this section referred to.

1007. Insufficiency of description in deed. 570. Every conveyance of land in this state, shall be deemed to be a warranty that the description therein contained is sufficiently definite and accurate to enable the auditor to enter the same on the plat book required by law to be kept; and when there is presented to be entered on the transfer book, any conveyance in which the description is not, in the opinion of the auditor, sufficiently definite and accurate, he shall note said fact on said deed with that of the entry for transfer, and shall notify the person presenting the same that the land therein not sufficiently described must be platted within thirty days thereafter. Any person aggrieved by the opinion of the auditor, may, within said thirty days, appeal therefrom to the board of supervisors, by claiming said appeal in writing, and thereupon no further proceeding shall be taken by the auditor, and at their next session the board of supervisors shall determine said question and direct whether or not said plat shall be executed and filed and within what time; and if the grantor in such conveyance shall neglect for thirty days thereafter to file for record a plat of said land and of the appropriate congressional subdivision in which the same is found, duly executed and acknowledged as required by the auditor, or in case of appeal as directed by the board of supervisors, then the auditor shall proceed as is provided in section five hundred and sixty-eight of this chapter [§ 1005], and cause such plat to be made and recorded, and thereupon the same proceedings shall be had and rights shall accrue, and remedies had, as are in said section provided. Such plat shall describe said tract of land and any other subdivisions of the smallest congressional subdivision of which the same is part, numbering them by progressive numbers, setting forth the courses and distances, and number of acres, and such other memoranda as are usual and proper; and descriptions of such lots or subdivisions according to the number and designation thereof on said plat shall be deemed good and sufficient for all purposes of conveyancing and taxation.

1008. Plats legalized. 571. None of the provisions of this chapter shall be construed to require replatting in any case where plats have been made and recorded in pursuance of any law heretofore in force; and all plats heretofore filed for record, and not subsequently vacated, are hereby declared valid, notwithstanding irregularities and omissions in the manner or form of acknowledgment or judge's certificate; but the provisions of this section shall not affect any action or proceeding now pending.

1009. Penalty. 572. Any person who shall dispose of or offer for sale, or lease any lots in any town, or addition to any town or city, until the plat thereof has been duly acknowledged and recorded as provided in this chapter, shall forfeit and pay fifty dollars for each lot and part of lot sold or disposed of, leased, or offered for sale. [R., § 1027.]

As this section only imposes a penalty on the person selling and not on one buying lots, the plat of which is not acknowledged and recorded, the vendee may enforce against the vendor a contract for the sale of such lots, and as to such vendee the contract will not be void: Watrous v. Blair, 32-58. The contract of sale is not illegal: the vendor may recover the consideration of the sale, and the vendee may enforce specific performance thereof: Pangborn v. Westlake, 6-546.

CITY AND TOWN LOTS.

1010. Certificate that land is unincumbered. 18 G. A., ch. 53, § 1. Whenever any person or corporation shall lay out any parcel of land into town or city lots in accordance with chapter twelve, title four, of the code, such person shall procure from the treasurer of the county in which the land lies a certified statement that the land thus laid out into lots, streets and alleys is free from taxes, and shall also procure a certified statement from the recorder of such county, that the title in fee to said land is in such proprietor and that the same is free from every incumbrance which certified statements shall both be filed with the recorder before the plat of said town or city lots shall be admitted to record or of any validity; provided, however, that if the parcel of land so laid out shall be incumbered with a debt certain in amount, and which will fall due not more than two years after the making of the affidavit herein-after provided for, and which the creditor will not accept with accrued interest to the day of proffered payment, if it draws interest, or with a rebate of interest at the rate of six per centum per annum if it draws no interest, or if the creditor cannot be found, then such proprietor, and if a corporation its proper officer or agent, may file with the recorder of such county his affidavit, stating either that such proprietor has offered to pay such creditor the full amount of his debt, with interest or with a rebate of interest, as the case may be, and that such creditor would not accept the same, or that such creditor cannot be found, whereupon such proprietor may execute a bond double the amount of such incumbrance with three sureties who shall be freeholders of the county, to be approved by the recorder and clerk of the county, which bond shall run to the county, and shall be for the benefit of the purchasers of any of such town or city lots, and shall be conditioned for the payment of such incumbrance and the cancellation thereof of record as soon as practicable after the same becomes due and for the holding of all such purchasers and those claiming under them forever harmless from such incumbrance, and when such affidavit and bond shall have been filed with the recorder, together with a certificate of the treasurer that said land is free from taxes, and the certificate of the recorder that the title in fee to said land is in such proprietor, and that the same is free from all incumbrance except that secured by said bond, said plat shall be admitted to record, and be equally valid as if such proprietor had filed with the recorder the certificate of such recorder that said land was free from all incumbrance.

1011. Recording. 18 G. A., ch. 53, § 2. All the certificates, affidavits and bonds provided for in the preceding section shall be recorded in connection with the plat to which they relate in the office of the recorder before the said plat or the record thereof shall be of any validity.

1012. Bearings and distances. 18 G. A., ch. 53, § 3. The record and plat of every town or city, or addition thereto, which may be thus laid out shall give the bearing and distance from some corner of a lot or block in said town or city or part thereof, to some corner of the congressional division of which said town, city or addition is a part.

1013. Not to affect annexation. 18 G. A., ch. 53, § 4. The provisions of this act shall not prevent the annexation of contiguous territory to cities and towns under sections four hundred and twenty-six, four hundred and twenty-seven, four hundred and twenty-eight and four hundred and twenty-nine of chapter ten, title four of the code [§§ 574-577], and chapter forty-seven of the laws of the sixteenth general assembly, as amended by chapter one hundred and sixty-nine of the laws of the seventeenth general assembly [§§ 583-586].

1014. 18 G. A., ch. 53, § 5. Chapter twenty-five of the laws of the fifteenth general assembly, and chapter sixty-three of the laws of the sixteenth general assembly are hereby repealed.

RESURVEY OF TOWN PLATS.

1015. In case of loss. 15 G. A., ch. 54, § 1. In all cases where the original town plat of any city, town, or village, of this state, or any of the additions to any such city, town, or village, shall have been heretofore or may hereafter be lost, mislaid, or destroyed after the sale and conveyance of any subdivision, block, or lot thereof, by the original owner or proprietor, to any person or persons, before the same shall have been recorded, it shall be lawful for any three persons interested in such city, town, village, or addition thereto, to have such original city, town, village, or addition to any such city, town, or village resurveyed and replatted, and such plat made a matter of record, as hereinafter set forth; provided, that in no case shall such replat be made a matter of record without the consent in writing, indorsed thereon, of the original owner or proprietor of such city, town, village, or addition thereto, if he be alive and his residence known to those who desire such replat recorded.

1016. How made. 15 G. A., ch. 54, § 2. The county surveyor of any county of this state in which is situated any such city, town, village, or addition thereto as contemplated in section one of this act [§ 1015], is hereby authorized, empowered, and, upon payment to him of his legal fees by the persons interested, required to resurvey any such city, town, village, or addition thereto, and shall make out a plat of such city, town, village, or addition so resurveyed, which plat shall in all respects, as near as possible, conform to the original lines of said city, town, village, or any addition thereto, that may be resurveyed, and it shall in all respects be made out as required by section five hundred and fifty-nine of the code [§ 994.] And in order to the perfect completion of such resurvey and plat, the said surveyor is empowered and authorized to subpoena witnesses, administer oaths, and to take evidence touching said original plat, lines, subdivisions of said city, town, village, or addition thereto sought to be surveyed and replatted; also as to whether the original proprietor be dead or living, and touching all things necessary to enable him to accurately establish the lines and boundaries of said city, town, village, or addition thereto, and the various subdivisions thereof: provided, that in all cases, before any such resurvey shall be made, the county surveyor of the proper county shall give four weeks' notice of in some newspaper published in the county, if there be any, of such contemplated resurvey, and, in case there is no such paper published in the county, then by posting up four written notices in four of the most public places in the county, one of which shall be in said district proposed to be resurveyed.

1017. Plat certified and filed; contesting. 15 G. A., ch. 54, § 3. When the surveyor shall have completed said plat, as hereinbefore contemplated, he shall attach his certificate thereto, to the effect that said plat is a just, true, and accurate plat of said city, town, village, or addition so surveyed by him; and the said plat and certificate thereto shall be filed for record in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county, and from the date of such filing it shall be regarded and treated, in all courts of law and equity in this state, as though the same had been made by the original owners or proprietors of said lands so resurveyed and replatted: provided, that any person or persons deeming themselves aggrieved by said resurvey or replatting may at any time, within six months from the date of filing said plat for record, commence action by bill in chancery in the [circuit or] district court against the persons employing the surveyor as aforesaid and setting up their causes of complaint, and asking that said record be canceled.

1018. Adjudication. 15 G. A., ch. 54, § 4. If it shall appear on the trial of said cause that the said city, town, village, or addition thereto was originally laid out and platted, that the original owner or proprietor had sold any or all of the lots of such city, town, village, or addition, or that he intended to dedicate to the public the streets, alleys, or public squi[a]res of such city, town, village or addition, that the plat thereof had never been recorded, but was lost or mislaid, that the owner or proprietor is dead, or his residence unknown, and that the resurvey and replat so filed for record is a substantially accurate survey and plat of the original plat of such city, town, village, or addition thereto, then the said bill shall be dismissed at the costs of the complainants; otherwise the court shall set aside said replat and cancel the same of record at the costs of defendants.

VACATION OF TOWN PLATS.

1019. Manner. 15 G. A., ch. 61, § 1. Whenever the owners of any piece of land, not less than forty acres in amount, which has been platted into town lots, and the plat of which has been recorded, shall desire to vacate said plat or part of plat, it may be done in manner following: A petition signed by all the owners of the town or part of the town to be vacated shall be filed in the clerk's office of the district court of the district in which the land so platted lies, and notice of such petition shall be given, at least four weeks before the meeting of the court, by posting notices in three conspicuous places in the town where the vacation is prayed for, and one upon the court-house door of the county. At the term of court next following the filing of petition and notice, the court shall fix a time for hearing the petition, and notice of the day so fixed upon shall be given by the clerk of the court in some newspaper published in the county at least one week before the day appointed for the hearing. At the hearing of the petition, if it shall appear that all the owners of lots in the town or part of town to be vacated desire the vacation, and that there is no valid objection thereto, a decree shall be entered vacating such portion of the town, and the streets, alleys, and avenues therein, and for all purposes of assessments such portion of the town shall be as it [if] it had never been platted into lots; provided, however, that, if any street as laid out on the plat shall be needed for the public use, it shall be excepted from the order of vacation, and shall remain a public highway; and further provided, that this act shall not affect cities of the first and second class.

TITLE V.

OF ELECTIONS AND OFFICES.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS, AND THEIR TERMS.

1020. General election. 573; 19 G. A., ch. 115. The general election for state, district, county and township officers shall be held throughout the state on the second Tuesday of October in each odd-numbered year, and in each even-numbered year said general election shall be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November. [R., § 159; C., '51, § 237.]

[By an amendment to the constitution which will be found at the end of art. 2 of the constitution, the general election is to be held in each year on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November.]

1021. Special election. 574. Special elections authorized by any law, or held to supply vacancies in any office to be filled by the vote of the qualified voters of the entire state, or of any district, county, or township, may be held at the time designated by such law, or by the officer authorized to order such election. [R., § 460.]

1022. Vacancies filled. 575. All vacancies in office created by the expiration of a full term, shall be supplied at the general election next preceding the time of expiration. [R., § 461.]

1023. Term of office. 576; 16 G. A., ch. 72. The term of office of all officers except highway supervisors, chosen at a general election for a full term, shall commence on the first Monday of January next thereafter, except when otherwise provided by the constitution. The term of office of highway supervisors shall commence fifteen days after the date of the general election. The term of an officer chosen to fill a vacancy shall commence as soon as he has qualified therefor. [R., § 462.]

See Const., art. 4, § 15.

1024. Proclamation. 577. At least thirty days before any general election, the governor shall issue his proclamation designating all the offices to be filled by the vote of all the electors of the state, or by those of any congressional, legislative, or judicial district, and transmit a copy thereof to the sheriff of each county. [R., § 462.]

1025. Notice. 578. The sheriff shall give at least ten days' notice thereof, by causing a copy of such proclamation to be published in some newspaper printed in the county; or, if there be no such paper, by posting such a copy in at least five of the most public places in the county. [R., § 463.]

Where the time of the regular election is fixed by law such time is to be taken notice of judicially: Davis v. Best, 2-96.

Failure to give proper notice of an election will not invalidate it. In matters of such public nature the observance of the particular requirement is not a prerequisite to validity, and the statutes as to notice are to be deemed directory. The people are not to be disfranchised or deprived of their voice by the omission of some duty by an officer: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

If an election has in fact been held at the proper time, and it is not alleged or shown that any portion of the electors failed in knowledge of the pendency of the question submitted at such election, or to exercise their franchise, it will not be held void on account of want of notice: Ibid.

1026. Same when special election. 579. A similar proclamation shall be issued before any special election ordered by the governor, designating the time at which such special election shall be held, and the sheriff of each county in which such election is to be held, shall give notice thereof as above provided. [R., § 464.]

1027. In odd-numbered years. 580. The governor, lieutenant-governor, and superintendent of public instruction, shall be chosen at the general election in each odd-numbered year. [R., § 465; 10 G. A., ch. 52, § 2.]

See Const., art. 4, § 15.

1028. In even-numbered years. 581. The secretary of state, auditor of state, treasurer of state, register of state land office, and attorney-general, shall be chosen at the general election in each even-numbered year, and their term of office shall be two years. [R., § 466.]

As to secretary, auditor and treasurer, see Const., art. 4, § 22. As to attorney-general, see Const., art. 5, § 12.

1029. Judges supreme court. 582. One judge of the supreme court shall be chosen at the general election in each odd-numbered year, and a judge of said court shall also be chosen at the general election in the year 1876, and each sixth year thereafter.

1030. Additional judge. 16 G. A., ch. 7, § 2. The regular term of the additional judge of the supreme court, provided for by this act [§ 177] shall commence on the first Monday of January, 1879, and he shall be chosen at the general election in the year 1878, and every six years thereafter.

See Const., art. 5, §§ 3, 11.

1031. Clerk and reporter of supreme court. 583. The clerk and reporter of the supreme court shall be chosen at the general election in the year 1874, and each fourth year thereafter, and their terms of office shall be four years. [10 G. A., ch. 22, § 1; 11 G. A., chs. 88, 89.]

[Sections 584, 585 and 586 of the Code are in effect repealed as to election of district and circuit judges by §§ 233 and 236, and as to election of district attorneys by § 267.]

The act [§ 233] which abolished the circuit court also abolished the office of circuit judge: Crozier v. Lyons, 72-401.

1032. Representatives. 587. Members of the house of representatives shall be chosen by the qualified voters of the respective representative districts in each odd-numbered year. [R., § 470.]

See Const., art. 3, § 3.

1033. Senators. 588. Senators in the general assembly, to succeed those whose term of office is about to expire, shall be chosen by the qualified voters of the respective senatorial districts in each odd-numbered year, for the term of four years. [R., § 471.]

See Const., art. 3, § 5.

1034. County officers. 589. Each county shall elect at the general election in each even-numbered year, a clerk of the district [and circuit] court[s], and a recorder of deeds; and in each odd-numbered year, an auditor, a treasurer, a sheriff, a coroner, a county superintendent, and a surveyor; and each of said officers shall hold his office for the term of two years. [R., §§ 224, 472, 473; C., '51, § 96; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 62; 10 G. A., ch. 100; ch. 129, §§ 3, 4; 12 G. A., ch. 160, § 1.]

[Women are by § 2828 made eligible to school offices, and by § 471 to the office of county recorder.]

1035. Justices and constables. 590. Two justices of the peace and two constables shall be chosen by the qualified voters of each township at the general election of each even-numbered year, and shall hold their offices for the term of two years. [R., § 474.]

[Section 591 of the Code is superseded by §§ 1038-1041 below.]

1036. Additional justices and constables. 592. One or two additional justices of the peace, and one or two additional constables may be elected in each township if the trustees so direct, by posting up notices of the same in three of the most public places in the township, at least ten days before election. [R., § 477.]

1037. How voted for. 593. Justices of the peace and constables shall be considered as county officers under the provisions of this title, but they shall be voted for by the voters of their respective townships. [R., § 478; C., '51, § 243.]

1038. Township trustees. 17 G. A., ch. 12, § 1. There shall be three trustees elected in each township, who shall hold their office for the term of three years, except as hereinafter provided.

1039. One trustee each year. 17 G. A., ch. 12, § 2. At the general election in 1878 there shall be elected in each township of the state, three trustees, one of whom shall hold his office for one year, one for two years, and one for three years, their respective terms to be determined by lot by the board of canvassers of said township; and annually thereafter there shall be one trustee elected, who shall continue in office for three years and until his successor is elected and qualified.

1040. 17 G. A., ch. 12, § 3. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

1041. Township clerk, assessor, highway supervisor. 18 G. A., ch. 161, § 1. At the general election in the year 1880, and biennially thereafter, there shall be elected in each civil township of the state by the qualified electors thereof in the manner prescribed by law, one township clerk, one assessor, and one highway supervisor for each highway district, who shall hold their offices for the term of two years and until their successors are elected and qualified.

1042. 18 G. A., ch. 161, § 2. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

[As to method of voting for road supervisors and township assessors, see §§ 1082-1084.]

The ballots for justice of the peace should be canvassed by the board of supervisors under the provisions of § 1098: Lynch v. Vermazen, 61-76. although he is to be voted for under this section like a justice of the peace as a county officer by the voters of his township: State v. Bevans, 37-178.

The constable is properly a township officer

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

1043. Repeal. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 1. Chapter two, title five of the code, is hereby repealed and the following sections of this act enacted in lieu thereof.

[The repealed chapter embraces Code, §§ 594-602.]

1044. Election precincts in cities. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 2. For all purposes of elections known to the laws of the state of Iowa after July fourth, 1886, no city of the state shall have attached to its jurisdiction for the purpose of voting at such elections any part of a township or territory outside of the corporate boundaries of such city and the voting precincts in such city for all elections now provided by law whether township, city, county, state, national or special elections, shall be the wards of such city or if a ward or wards are divided into voting precincts in any city, then for such city or cities such divisions shall be the voting precincts and all territory of a township or townships in which such city may be situated and outside of the corporate limits of such city shall be divided into one or more voting precincts for all election purposes, as may be determined by the board of supervisors as now provided by law. All acts or parts of acts that might seem to be in conflict with this section of this act are hereby changed to the extent of being made to conform herewith.

1045. Board of registers. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 12. In all incorporated cities of this state having a population of twenty-five hun-

The signature of the applicant shall be made at the right-hand end of the line under the column "signature," one of the registers having first administered to him this form of oath: "You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will fully and truly answer all such questions as shall be put to you touching your place of residence, name, place of birth, your qualifications as an elector, and your right, as such, to register and vote under the laws of this state." After which the registers or either of them shall propound questions to the applicant for registration in relation to his name; his then place of residence, street and number; how long he has resided in the precinct where the vote is offered; what was the last place of his residence before he came into that precinct and also as to his citizenship, and whether a native or naturalized citizen, and, if the latter, when, where, and in what court, or before what officer he was naturalized, or whether by act of congress; whether he came into the precinct for the purpose of voting at that election; how long he contemplates residing in the precinct; and all such other questions as may tend to test his qualifications as a resident of the precinct, citizenship and right to vote at the poll; then, if the applicant appears to have the right to be registered, the registers shall fill out the above prescribed form of statement, whereupon the applicant shall sign as aforesaid, and thus his statement for registration shall be complete under oath.

Former provisions for registry were held not in conflict with constitution, art. 2, § 1, prescribing the qualification of electors: Edmunds v. Banbury, 28-267. And an election without registry, where such was required by law, was held void, the provisions of the law being mandatory and imperative: Nefzger v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 46-642.

1047. Statements filed; return. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 6. Such statements shall be dated and numbered consecutively, beginning with number one each time for registration aforesaid. No person shall register at any other place than as above designated, or at any other time, except as herein-after provided. At the close of each day's registration, the registry shall be ruled off to prevent fraudulent entries, and after the completion of the final registration and the certified copy provided for in section eight hereof [§ 1049], the registers shall forthwith return the registration to the city clerk, who shall keep the same at all times open to public inspection.

1048. List of voters. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 7; 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 12. The registers shall within three days after the registration for each general annual election has been made, prepare an alphabetical list for their respective voting precincts of the names of all persons so registered; their residences; their last preceding places of residence, and the dates of removal when removals occur within one year; their nativity; their color; their term of residence in precinct, county and state; whether naturalized, date of papers, the naturalizing court, or place of naturalization if court is not known; whether naturalized by act of congress; and date of application for registration; which list they shall forthwith post or cause to be posted up conspicuously at the usual place of holding elections at such precinct for inspection of the public.

1049. Correction of lists; challenges. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 8. The registers shall be in attendance again at their respective places for the registration of voters on the Wednesday of the week preceding the day of each election, in the state, provided by law for township, city, county, state, national or special elections, for the purpose of revising or correcting the lists aforesaid, and for this purpose they shall meet at nine o'clock A. M. and remain in session until eight o'clock P. M., of that day; and they shall there revise, correct, add to, and strike from, and complete the said lists, and shall on that day receive and add to the said lists the names of any persons who would on said election days, be entitled, under the provisions of the constitution and the laws of this state to exercise the right of suffrage in their election precincts. Upon the revision and completion of each of said lists, the registers shall make a copy thereof, which duly certified by the registers, with the proper number and date of registry in each case added, the registers shall deliver or cause to be delivered to the judges of election of the proper precinct on every such election day, before the opening of the polls. The judges of election shall carefully preserve the said lists for their use on election day; no vote shall be received at any election aforesaid unless the name of the person offering the vote be on such registry made and completed as before provided, preceding the election; a person whose name is on the registry may be challenged, and the same oath shall be put, and the same proceedings had as are prescribed by law for all such cases. This section shall be taken and held by every judicial and other tribunal as mandatory and not as directory. The judges of election shall designate one of their number, or one of the clerks, at the opening of the polls, to check the name of every voter voting in such precinct whose name is on the registry. Any vote which shall be received by the judges of election in contravention of any provisions of this act shall be void, and shall be rejected from the count in any legislative or judicial proceeding wherein any result of the election is involved. The judges of election shall deliver the lists aforesaid to the official as by law provided to whom they shall deliver the returns of the elections. The registers under their duties aforesaid shall register every male applicant who would be twenty-one years of age on the day of the next election, if otherwise qualified, and every applicant who has commenced to reside in such precinct, at least the legal time before such election, now required by law, down to the date of the election, in order to be a legal voter in such precinct, according to the character of the election about to take place, shall be entered in such registry, but unless, on the day of election, he shall have resided for the legal time in such election precinct, he cannot vote therein, although otherwise qualified.

1050. Appearance and hearing. 21 G. A., ch. 61, § 9. The proceedings of said registers shall be open, and all persons entitled to vote in said precinct shall have the right to be heard by such registers in reference to corrections or additions to said lists. No name shall be placed upon any such lists of the name of persons, nor shall any name be added thereto, except of one who shall have appeared in person before said registers, and shall have furnished, upon demand, and to the satisfaction of the registers, the same proofs of his right to register as may by law be required by judges of election of any person desiring to vote. Provided: that if an elector is, on account of sickness, which confines him to his residence in his precinct, unable to go to the registers on any day they shall be in session, it shall be the duty of the registers, on the affidavit made before them, of a registered elector to visit such sick elector at his place of residence in the precinct and place the name of such sick person on the registration list if he be found entitled to be registered. Such visits by the registers for the registration of such invalids shall be at no time during any registration day except between the hours of seven A. M. and eight A. M. or between nine P. M. and ten P. M. Any one of the registers, on the points hereinbefore provided, may at any time administer an oath or affirmation to any applicant, that he shall true answers make to all questions put to him touching his qualifications as an elector.

1051. Penalty. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 10. If any register shall fail to perform any duty in any of the preceding sections of this act prescribed, he shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, to be recovered on the complaint of any person, before any court of competent jurisdiction; and if any register or judge of election shall wilfully neglect or disregard any duty imposed in any of said sections, or make or permit to be made any registration, statement or list, except at the time and place and in the manner in said sections prescribed, or shall knowingly make or permit to be made any false statement, as aforesaid, or if any person shall wilfully make, or authorize to be made any statement in said section required, false in any particular, or shall violate any provisions thereof, every such register or judge of election, and every such person or persons, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than twenty days nor more than six months or both at the discretion of the court.

1052. Notice. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 12. The times and places of making registrations of voters shall be published by the mayor in the two leading political party daily newspapers published in every such city for a period of three days prior to the opening of the registry book, or if there are no daily papers of the two leading political parties published in such city, then the notice shall be published one week before the date for the opening of the registry book, in the weekly paper of each of such political parties, inviting the voters to present themselves for registration at their respective precincts within the proper time, under the risk of being debarred the privilege of voting at such election.

1053. Regulation of elections. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 13; 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 9. During the receiving and counting of the ballots in any voting precincts of such cities, and in any voting precinct made up of the township outside of the city limits, whose polling place is within the corporate limits of said city, as hereinafter provided, it shall be unlawful for persons to congregate or loiter within one hundred feet of the voting place, or to hinder or delay in any manner any elector in reaching or leaving the place fixed for casting his ballot. It shall be unlawful for any person within said distance of one hundred feet, to give or offer to give any ticket or ballot to any one not a judge of election, or to fold or unfold, or display any ballot which he intends to cast so as to reveal its contents or to solicit the vote of any elector, or attempt in any way to influence him in the matter of casting his vote. The judges of election shall so far as practicable, prevent any violation of this section, by having printed copies of this section conspicuously posted within one hundred feet of the voting place and in other ways, and they and each of them shall order the arrest of any person guilty of violating any of its provisions, or guilty of any breach of the peace, or disorderly conduct, and all special policemen and all other persons are authorized and required to obey the lawful orders and commands of said judges of elections, given to prevent violations of this section. But orders for the arrest of such persons shall not prevent them from properly casting their votes. The city council is authorized and required to detail and employ on the nomination of the principal political committee of each political party recognized as the two leading parties from citizens or the police force of the city, from two to four special policemen for each precinct, and duly empower them for the special occasion of each election, who shall be men of good character and reputation, in equal numbers from each of the leading political parties, to prevent the violation of any of the terms, provisions or requirements of this section, or of any order or command made in pursuance of any provision hereof, and any person violating or attempting to violate any of such terms, provisions, requirements, orders or commands shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished as provided in the last penal clause of section ten of this act [§ 1051], and no other peace officer for preserving order, shall exercise his authority at or near such voting places than those above named unless called in by an unexpected, dire emergency: Provided, that nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the presence at the polls, of any persons who are authorized by law to perform or charged likewise, with the performance of official duties at the election, or of any persons not exceeding three from each political party having candidates to be voted for, at such elections, to act as challenging committees who are duly appointed and accredited by the principal committee of such political parties, or organizations, respectively or of persons not exceeding three from each such political parties, appointed and accredited in the same manner, as before prescribed, for challenging committees to witness the counting of ballots.

1054. Polling places for country precincts. 21 G. A., ch. 161, § 14. Voting precincts made up of the townships outside of the city limits of the city which is situated in such township or townships may, if preferred for the convenience of the voters therein, have their polling places for all election purposes, at some room or rooms in the court-house, or other buildings within the corporate limits of such city as the board of supervisors may provide. Section six hundred and eighteen, chapter three, title five of the code is hereby repealed.

1056. How often. 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 2. The registers shall make a complete new registry of voters for the general annual election of 1888, and for that of every fourth year thereafter. For all other general annual state elections they shall prepare a new registry list, based on that of the last preceding general annual election, and every person whose name appears upon such registry list of the last preceding general annual election shall be entered upon the new registry list as also the facts showing his qualification as a legal voter, as they appear upon such last preceding registry list.

1057. Other elections. 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 3. For all other general or special elections, whether state, county, city or township, the registry list for the last preceding general annual election shall be used, and every person registered thereon shall be considered as registered to vote at such election, except as such list may be corrected and changed by the registers, as by law provided. Said registers shall meet upon the Saturday preceding every election, whether general or special, township, city, state or national, instead of upon Wednesday as provided in section eight of said chapter one hundred and sixty-one [§ 1049], and except as to said change of meeting from Wednesday to Saturday preceding said election, all of the provisions of said section eight shall remain unimpaired and in full force.

1058. Certified lists. 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 4. Upon the revision and completion of said registry lists they shall be duly certified by the registers, who, after making the same corrections upon and additions to the alphabetical lists, shall deliver the registry and alphabetical lists to the judges of election for the proper precinct, on every such election day, before the hour for the opening of the polls.

1059. Compensation. 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 5. During the days when the registers are in session, they shall, when not actually engaged in registering voters, prepare the alphabetical lists and complete their labors with all reasonable dispatch. They shall receive as compensation two dollars and fifty cents per day, for each calendar day, upon which they shall be employed, for all services required of them under the provisions of this act. They shall be paid their compensation by the county, except that in case of city elections they shall be paid by the city.

1060. City clerk. 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 6. The city clerk shall carefully preserve all registry and alphabetical lists and poll books and other papers pertaining to the last preceding election for eighteen months after the election at which they were first issued, and may then destroy them unless a contest be then pending over the election of a person voted for at such election, in which case he shall preserve those so bearing upon such contest until after the same has been finally disposed of. He shall on the application of the registers, deliver to them, prior to their first meeting for each election, the registry and alphabetical lists and poll books which they require in order to properly prepare the necessary lists for the next ensuing election, all of which shall be returned to him by them when they have completed their work for such election, except such as they are required to deliver to the judges of election.

1061. Registration on election day. 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 7. The registers shall also be in session on the day for the holding of each and every election, at some place convenient to, but not within one hundred feet of the voting place, and during all the hours in which, by law, the polls are required to be kept open, for the purpose only of granting certificates for registration to persons who, being electors, are not registered; but no such certificate shall be granted except to a person who was absent from the city during all the days fixed for the registration of voters for that election, or to a person who, being a foreigner, has received his final papers since the last preceding day for the registration of voters for that election; or to a person whose name was on the preceding Saturday, and in the absence of such person, stricken from the registry list, and who, on said day of election, shall prove to the satisfaction of said registers that he is a lawfully qualified elector of said voting precinct. These certificates shall contain all the data showing the qualification of the voter as is required for regular registration, and in addition, the special matter showing the voter's right to a certificate under this section. The proper statement shall be signed and sworn to by the voter before one of the registers, and it shall be supported by the affidavit of a freeholder who is a registered voter in that precinct, who shall make oath to the qualification of the applicant as a voter in that precinct; and if the applicant be one whose name was stricken from the registry list, said affidavit of such freeholder shall contain the fact showing the right of said applicant to vote in that precinct. The certificate shall be handed in to the judges of election with the voter's ballot. The data therefrom, showing the voter's name and his qualification as a voter, shall be entered on the registry lists by the judges and clerks of the election, under the appropriate headings, and the original certificate shall be returned to the city clerk, who shall carefully preserve it, in the same manner, and for the same time as the registry lists and poll books. The certificate, before delivery to the applicant, shall be certified by the registers to the effect that the person therein named is a qualified voter in that precinct, and that he is entitled to be registered as such, under this section.

1063. 22 G. A., ch. 48, § 11. So much, and so much only, of chapter one hundred and sixty-one, acts of the twenty-first general assembly of the state of Iowa [§§ 1043-1054], as is in conflict herewith, is hereby repealed.

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE GENERAL ELECTION.

1064. Election precincts. 603. At the general elections, each township shall be an election precinct, and a poll shall be opened at the place of election therein. But the board of supervisors may, in their judgment, divide any township in their county into two or more precincts. [R., § 480; C., '51, § 245; 9 G. A., ch. 23, § 11; 14 G. A., ch. 86.]

[As to election precincts in cities, see § 687.]

1065. Notice. 604. In that case they shall number or name the several precincts and cause the boundaries of each to be recorded in their minute book, and notice thereof to be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the county for three consecutive weeks at least once a week, the last publication to be made at least thirty days before the next election. [9 G. A., ch. 23, § 2.]

1066. Place of voting. 605. No person shall vote in any other precinct than that in which he resides at the time. [Same, § 7.]

By going into a township and remaining there for the sole purpose of voting, with no intention of remaining longer, one will not acquire sufficient residence to entitle him to vote; but if the removal is in good faith, no length of residence is necessary: State v. Minnick, 15-123.

Where the time, place and manner of holding elections are not prescribed by the constitution, but committed to the legislature, the reception of votes out of the precinct or the county of elector's residence may be constitutionally authorized: Morrison v. Springer, 15-304.

If no requirements as to the length of residence were contained in the constitution, the legislature might fix such length of residence as it should see fit: Ibid.

The residence of a voter is the place of his domicile or place of abode, as distinguished from the residence acquired as a sojourner for business, education or other temporary purpose. Therefore, held, that a student in the university at Iowa City, sent there and supported by his father, and making his father's home his "headquarters" during vacation, was not entitled to vote in Iowa City, though he had been there the requisite length of time and had no present intention of leaving there when he ceased to attend the university: Vanderpoel v. O'Hanlon, 53-246.

If the ballot of a voter is received it is no ground of complaint that an improper oath has been administered to him touching his qualifications: State ex rel. v. O'Day, 69-368.

Persons in military service: A soldier serving in the volunteer forces of the federal government does not thereby lose nor change his place of residence, which remains that of the county of his residence at the time of entering the service; and if he should be in such county on the day of election he would unquestionably have the right to vote, if otherwise qualified: Morrison v. Springer, 15-304.

And held, that the legislature may authorize the casting of ballots by soldiers at points where they are stationed outside the state: Ibid.

Under the statute authorizing persons absent from the state in military service to vote at general elections, held, that the submission of a proposition for the disposition of swamp lands at a special election at which persons in the military service could not vote was not illegal: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Boone County, 34-45.

1067. Judges and clerks. 606. There shall be three judges of election in each precinct, who shall be appointed by the board of supervisors at their meeting in September; and there shall be two clerks of the election, one of whom shall be the township clerk, and the other some elector named by him, and if the township clerk does not attend, then the two clerks shall be chosen by the judges of election; provided, that the township trustees and township clerks shall be judges and clerks of election in those precincts where they respectively reside. [R., § 481; C., '51, § 246; 9 G. A., ch. 23, § 3.]

1068. Vacancies. 607. If any judge does not attend in time, or refuses to be sworn, his place shall be filled by an elector appointed by those who do attend; and if no judge is present at the time for opening the polls, the electors present shall choose three qualified persons to act as judges of election. [R., § 482; C., '51, § 247; 9 G. A., ch. 23, § 4.]

1069. Clerks. 608. If the clerks, or either of them, are not present at the opening of the polls, or, being present, refuse to be sworn, the judges of election shall fill their places from the electors present. [R., § 483; C., '51, § 248.]

1070. Oath. 609. Before opening the polls each of the judges and clerks shall take the following oath: I, A. B., do solemnly swear that I will impartially, and to the best of my knowledge and ability, perform the duties of judge (or clerk) of this election, and will studiously endeavor to prevent fraud, deceit, and abuse in conducting the same. [R., § 484; C., '51, § 249.]

These provisions are directory. A failure of the officers mentioned to be sworn will not vitiate the election, and in a case involving the validity of an election, the fact that the officers were sworn may be proved aliunde. The return is not conclusive: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

1071. How administered. 610. Any one of the judges or clerks present may administer the oath to the others, and it shall be entered in the poll books, subscribed by the person taking it, and certified by the officer administering it. [R., § 485; C., '51, § 250; 9 G. A., ch. 23, § 5.]

1072. Polls open; proclamation. 611. The polls shall be opened at nine o'clock in the forenoon, unless vacancies shall have to be filled as above, in which case they are to be opened as soon thereafter as may be, and they shall be kept open until six o'clock in the afternoon; and if the judges deem it necessary for receiving the ballots of all the electors, they may keep them open until nine o'clock in the evening. Proclamation thereof shall be made at or before the opening of the polls, and half an hour before closing them. [R., § 486; C., '51, § 251.]

1073. Preservation of order. 612. Any constable of the township who may be designated by the judges of election is directed to attend at the place of election, and he is authorized and required to preserve order and peace at and about the same; and if no constable be in attendance, the judges of the election may appoint one or more specially, by writing, who shall have all the powers of a regular constable. [R., § 487; C., '51, § 252.]

1074. Disturbance. 613. If any person conducts in a noisy, riotous or tumultuous manner at or about the polls so as to disturb the election, or insults or abuses the judges or clerks of election, the constable may forthwith arrest him and bring him before the judges, and they, by a warrant under their hands, may commit him to the jail of the county for a term not exceeding twenty-four hours; but they shall permit him to vote. [R., § 488; C., '51, § 253.]

1075. Boxes. 614. The board of supervisors shall provide for each precinct in the county, for the purpose of elections, one box with lock and key. [R., § 489; C., '51, § 254.]

1076. Poll books. 615. The county auditor shall prepare and furnish to each precinct two poll books, having each of them a sufficient column for the names of the voters, a column for the number, and sufficient blank leaves to contain the entries of the oaths, certificates, and returns; and also all books, blanks, and materials necessary to carry out the provisions of the chapter on registration of voters. [R., § 490; C., '51, § 255; 12 G. A., ch. 171, §§ 1, 9.]

1077. Ballots. 616. The ballots shall designate the office for which the persons therein named are voted for. [R., § 491; C., '51, § 256.]

1078. Voting. 617. In voting, the electors shall deliver their ballots to one of the judges, and he shall deposit them in the ballot-box. [R., § 492; C., '51, § 257.]

[Section 618 of the Code is repealed by § 1054.]

1079. Challenge. 619. Any person offering to vote, whether his name be on the register or not, may be challenged as unqualified by any judge or elector; and it is the duty of each of the judges to challenge any person offering to vote whom he knows or suspects not to be duly qualified. [R., § 493; C., '51, § 258; 13 G. A., ch. 174, § 3.]

1080. Oath. 620. When any person is so challenged, the judges shall explain to him the qualifications of an elector, and may examine him as to his qualifications, and if the person insists that he is qualified, and the challenge is not withdrawn, one of the judges shall tender to him the following oath: "You do solemnly swear that you are a citizen of the United States, that you are a resident of this precinct, that you are twenty-one years of age as you verily believe, that you have been a resident of this county sixty days, and of this state six months next preceding this election, and that you have not voted at this election." And if he takes such oath his vote shall be received. [R., § 494; C., '51, § 259.]

1081. Name entered. 621. The name of each person, when his ballot is received, shall be entered by each of the clerks in the poll-book kept by him, so that there may be a double list of voters. [R., § 495; C., '51, § 260.]

ELECTION OF ROAD SUPERVISOR AND TOWNSHIP ASSESSOR.

1082. Who may vote for. 17 G. A., ch. 71, § 1. No person shall vote for supervisor of highways of any highway district other than that in which he resides at the time of election, nor shall any person living in a city or incorporated town, which constitutes a part of a township, and which has a corporate assessor, vote for a township assessor.

1083. Road supervisors. 17 G. A., ch. 71, § 2. The township trustees of each township or election precinct, shall cause to be prepared a separate ballot-box to receive the votes for supervisors of highways, with as many different compartments as there are highway districts in the township, or election precincts, and numbered accordingly, and each person voting shall at the time he gives in his vote for supervisor of highways, which shall be on a separate ballot, state to the judges of election the number of the highway district in which he resides, and his vote shall be placed in the corresponding compartment of said ballot-box.

1084. Township assessor. 17 G. A., ch. 71, § 3. Where any township or election precinct embraces the whole or any part of any city or incorporated town having a corporate assessor, a separate ballot-box for township assessor shall be prepared by the township trustees, and the vote for township assessor shall be in such township on a separate ballot, and every person voting for such officer, shall, at the time, if required, prove to the judges of election that he resides outside of the limits of such city or incorporated town, and his vote for such officer shall be placed in the ballot-box made for that purpose.

CANVASS BY JUDGES OF ELECTION.

1085. Canvass. 622. When the poll is closed, the judges shall proceed to canvass and ascertain the result of the election. [R., § 496; C., '51, § 261.]

1086. Compare lists; double ballots. 623. The canvass shall be public, and shall commence by a comparison of the poll-lists from the beginning, and a correction of any errors which may be found therein until they agree. If two or more ballots are found so folded together as to convince the

If the ballot expresses a certain intent by the elector, for instance if it bears the name of a person that is eligible to the office balloted for, it affords the most satisfactory evidence that it was the elector's intention to vote for that person; but when it is apparent that the intent of the elector is imperfectly expressed by the ballot, as when the person intended to be voted for is not identified by it, extrinsic evidence is admissible in aid of such imperfection. In such cases resort may be had to the circumstances surrounding the election. Therefore, held, that ballots cast for F. Wimmer might be counted for E. Wimmer, it appearing that there was no person of the name of F. Wimmer eligible to the office, and that the name was printed on the ballots in the belief that it was the name of the person who was a candidate. Whether an elector who has cast a defective ballot can be permitted to testify as to his intent, quere: Wimmer v. Eaton, 72-374.

judges that they were cast as one, they shall not be counted, but they shall have the words "rejected as double" written upon them, be folded together again, and kept as herein directed. [R., § 497; C., '51, § 262.]

1087. Ballot rejected. 624. If, at any stage of the canvass, a ballot, not stating for what office the person therein named is voted for, is found in the box when officers of different kinds are to be elected, it is to be rejected. [R., § 499; C., '51, § 264.]

1088. Excess of names. 625. If a ballot be found containing the names of more persons for an office than can be elected to that office, and such ballot form an excess above the number voting, it shall be rejected as to that office, the cause of rejection being indorsed thereon, and disposed of as hereafter directed; and if it does not form such excess, so many of the names first in order as are required shall be counted. [R., § 500; C., '51, § 265.]

1089. Tally-list. 626. As a check in counting, each clerk shall keep a tally-list. [R., § 501; C., '51, § 266.]

1090. Excess of ballots. 627. If the ballots for any officer are found to exceed the number of the voters in the poll-lists, that fact shall be certified with the number of the excess in the return, and if it be found that the vote of the precinct where the error occurred would change the result in relation to a county officer, if the person elected were deprived of so many votes, then the election shall be set aside as to him in the precinct where such excess occurs and a new election ordered therein, providing that no person or persons residing in another precinct at the time of the general election shall be allowed to vote at such special election; but if the error occur in relation to a township officer, the trustees may order a new election or not, in their discretion. If the error be in relation to a district or state officer, the error and the number of the excess are to be certified to the state canvassers, and if it be found that the error would affect the result as above, a new vote shall be ordered in the precinct where the error happened, and the canvass be suspended until such new vote is taken and returned. When there is a tie vote and such an excess, there shall be a new election as above directed. [R., § 498; C., '51, § 263; 14 G. A., ch. 12.]

The meaning of the word "error" as here used would be more accurately expressed by the use of the word "excess." The supervisors should not order a new election for a county officer unless it appears that there is an excess of ballots as to that office: Rankin v. Pitkin, 50-313.

Evidence as to a mistake in a count of the ballots as to one candidate is immaterial upon the question as to whether there was a mistake in the count as to another candidate: McIntosh v. Livingston, 41-219.

1091. Return each poll. 628. A return in writing shall be made in each poll-book, setting forth in words written at length, the whole number of ballots cast for each officer, except those rejected, the name of each person voted for, and the number of votes given to each person for each different office, which return shall be certified as correct, signed by the judges, and attested by the clerks. Such return shall be substantially as follows:

At an election at the house of ———, in ——— township, or in ——— precinct of ——— township, in ——— county, state of Iowa, on the ——— day of ———, A. D. ——— there were ——— ballots cast for the office of (governor) of which

A—— B—— had —— votes.
C—— D—— had —— votes.

(and in the same manner for any other officer.)

A TRUE RETURN: L—— M——, }
N—— O——, } Judges of the election.
P—— Q——, }

ATTEST: R—— S——, }
T—— U——, } Clerks of election.

[R., § 502; C., '51, § 267.]

It is not fatal to the certificate that it does not contain full particulars of time and place. The caption and the certificate may be taken together: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

While the canvassers cannot adjudicate upon the sufficiency of returns, where the case comes into a court of justice, the court or jury trying it may go behind the returns and even behind the ballot-box in some cases. Ibid.

1092. Disposition of poll-books. 629. One of the poll-books containing such return, with the register of election attached thereto, in cases where such register is required by law, shall be delivered to the township clerk, and be by him filed in his office. The other poll-book, with its return, shall be inclosed, sealed, superscribed, and delivered by one of the judges of election within two days to the county auditor, who shall file the same in his office. [R., §§ 333, 503; C., '51, § 268; 9 G. A., ch. 23, § 6; 12 G. A., ch. 171, § 11; 14 G. A., ch. 74.]

[The words between "thereto" in the second line and "shall" in the third line are erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

1093. Ballots and tally-lists. 630. When the result of the election is ascertained, the judges shall cause all the ballots, including those rejected, with the tally-list, to be placed in some convenient condition for preservation and deposited with the township clerk, who is to keep them until the time is passed which is allowed for contesting the election of any officer voted for. [R., § 504; C., '51, § 269.]

1094. Result certified. 631. In townships constituting a single precinct, the judges of the election shall certify the result as to township officers immediately after the canvass above directed; but where there are two or more precincts in a township, the trustees and clerk thereof shall meet on the day after the election, and canvass the votes given for township officers as shown by the returns from the precincts.

The board of supervisors and not the township trustees have authority to canvass the ballots for justice of the peace: Lynch v. Vermazen, 61-76.

1095. Tie vote. 632. When there is a tie between two persons for a township office, the clerk shall notify them to appear at his office at a given time to determine the same by lot before one of the trustees and the clerk, and the certificate of election is to be given accordingly. If either party fail to appear or to take part in the lot, the clerk shall draw for him. [R., § 547; C., '51, § 316.]

1096. Township officers notified. 633. The ballots for township officers having been canvassed, the clerk shall, within five days thereafter post up in three public places in the township written notices containing the names of persons elected to township offices at such election, and requiring each of them to appear before the proper officer and qualify according to law. [R., § 548; C., '51, § 317; 9 G. A., ch. 89.]

COUNTY CANVASS.

1097. Returns not made. 634. If the returns from all the precincts are not made to the county auditor by the third day after the election, on the fourth day he shall send messengers to obtain them from those precincts whose returns are wanting, the expense of which shall be paid out of the county treasury. [R., § 505; C., '51, § 270.]

1098. Supervisors to canvass. 635. At their meeting on the Monday after the general election, at twelve o'clock noon, the board of supervisors shall open and canvass the returns and make abstracts, stating in words written at length the number of ballots cast in the county for each office, the name of each person voted for, and the number of votes given to each person for each different office. [R., §§ 335, 506; C., '51, § 271.]

Returns: The action of the board in canvassing returns is ministerial rather than judicial. Nor is there any discretion to be exercised. The board has no authority to judge of the validity of returns or of votes. Its duty is to receive the returns and count them, provided they are sufficiently proved to be such, although irregular. (So held in regard to the canvass of votes at special election as to the relocation of a county seat under 5 G. A., ch. 46): State ex rel. v. County Judge, 7-186; State v. Bailey, 7-390.

The canvassers may reject improper returns, such as are not properly signed, or have not been in the proper custody, or have been mutilated or changed; and after they have declared the result they may, by mandamus, be compelled to re-assemble and recanvass the vote to correct a mistake in improperly rejecting returns: Price v. Harned, 1-473; or in counting improper returns: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 13-139.

Where an officer was authorized to examine the returns of an election for a county seat, and, on being satisfied that either place voted for had a greater number of votes than the other, the record of such result was to be made, held, that he had no authority to inquire into the legality of the votes cast, but was bound by the returns as made to him: United States ex rel. v. Commissioners, Mor., 31.

In a case involving the validity of votes cast at an election the court is not precluded by the return, but he may receive evidence as to the compliance with the law on the part of the officers of the election, and may therefore receive evidence that the officers were duly sworn, although such fact does not appear on the face of the return: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

Where two corresponding returns were made out by the judges of election, one of which was on its face informal and unauthenticated, and the other was formal and on its face duly authenticated, held, that the county board of canvassers could not refuse to receive evidence aliunde to establish the former, and yet receive such evidence to defeat the latter, but must count the votes as returned: State v. Cavers, 22-343.

Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the canvassers to declare elected and certify to the election of the party receiving the highest number of votes: Bradfield v. Wart, 36-291.

Where the canvass of votes at an election was to be made by the county judge calling to his assistance two justices of the peace, and an action by mandamus was instituted to compel a recanvass, held, that such mandamus properly issued to the judge alone and not to the board as originally constituted: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 7-186; Rice v. Smith, 9-570.

Where a writ of mandamus was granted to compel a re-assembling of the canvassing board of the county by the county judge for the purpose of recanvassing the returns, held, that the primary writ should issue to such county judge in his individual name, and that upon failure of the other members of the board summoned by him, in pursuance of law, to constitute such board and canvass such returns to comply with the writ, an alias writ might be directed to such other members and a proper canvass compelled: State ex rel. v. Smith, 9-334.

The duties imposed upon the members of the board of supervisors in relation to canvassing votes cast at elections may be enforced by mandamus, but an action of damages for their non-performance will not lie: Jayne v. Drorbaugh, 63-711.

Injunction: Although mandamus may have issued to compel a board of canvassers to count and record the votes contained in certain returns, yet an injunction restraining any action under the count as thus recorded will not be improper or inconsistent with the mandamus if it appears that the votes which the board is directed to canvass should not be counted owing to matters existing outside of the returns: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

Certificate: It is not fatal to the certificate that it does not contain full particulars as to the time and place of the election. The caption and the certificate may be taken together: Ibid.

Where it was required that a certificate of the election, at which a railroad aid tax was voted, should be certified by the clerks of the election, held, that a certificate signed by the judges and attested by the clerks was sufficient: Casady v. Lowry, 49-523.

1099. Form of abstracts. 636. The abstract of the votes for each of the following classes shall be made on a different sheet:

1. Governor and lieutenant-governor;
2. All state officers not otherwise provided for;
3. Representatives in congress;
4. Senators and representatives in the general assembly from the county alone;
5. Senators and representatives in the general assembly by districts comprising more than one county;
6. Judges of the district court, district [county] attorneys, [and judges of the circuit court;]

7. County officers. [R., § 507; C., '51, § 272; 14 G. A., ch. 22, §§ 1, 2.]

1100. Duplicates. 637. Two abstracts of all the votes cast for any state or judicial district officer shall be made, and one forwarded to the secretary of state, and the other filed by the county auditor. [R., § 507; C., '51, § 272.]

1101. Result. 638. The person having the greatest number of votes for any office is to be declared elected. [R., § 508; C., '51, § 273.]

Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the canvassers to declare elected and certify to the election of the party receiving the highest number of votes: Bradfield v. Wart, 36-291.

1102. Declaration. 639. Each abstract of the votes for such officers as the county alone elects, shall contain a declaration of whom the canvassers determine to be elected, except when two or more persons receive an equal and the greatest number of votes. [R., § 509; C., '51, § 275.]

1103. Returns filed. 640. When the canvass is concluded, the board shall deliver the original returns to the auditor to be filed in his office, and shall cause each of the abstracts mentioned in the preceding section to be recorded in a book to be kept for recording the result of county elections, and to be called the "election book." [R., §§ 335, 510; C., '51, § 276.]

1104. Certificate. 641. When any person thus elected has appeared and given bond, and taken the oath of office as directed in this title, there shall be delivered him a certificate of election, under the official seal of the county, in substance as follows:

STATE OF IOWA, }
 ——— COUNTY. }

At an election holden in said county on ——— day of ———, A. D. ———, A. B. was elected to the office of ——— of the said county, for the term of two years from the first Monday of January, A. D. ——— (or if he was elected to fill a vacancy, say for the residue of the term ending on the ——— day of ———, A. D. ———), and until his successor is elected and qualified, and he has qualified by giving bond and taking the oath of office as required by law.

[L. s.]

A. B.,

President of the board of canvassers.

WITNESS: E. F., county auditor.

Which certificate shall be presumptive evidence of his election and qualification. [R., §§ 511, 514; C., '51, § 277; 9 G. A., ch. 36.]

1105. Of senators and representatives. 642. The certificates of senators and representatives in the general assembly may vary from the foregoing according to the nature of the case, and the requirements of law, and shall be made out in duplicate, one copy to be forwarded to the secretary of state, and the other to be delivered to the member on request. [R., § 512; C., '51, § 278.]

1106. Tie vote. 643. When two or more persons receive an equal and the highest number of votes for an office to be filled by the county alone, the auditor shall issue a notice to such persons of such tie vote and require them to appear at his office on a day named in the notice, within twenty days from the election day, and determine by lot which of them is to be declared elected. [R., § 515; C., '51, § 281.]

1107. Lot. 644. The county auditor shall notify the board of canvassers, or, in case of their absence or inability, the recorder and sheriff, of such lot and on the day fixed, the parties interested, or such of them as may appear, shall determine, by a lot fairly arranged by the three officers, which of them is to be declared elected; and the three officers shall certify such lot and its result under their official names and the seal of the county, to be affixed by the county auditor, and the certificate shall be recorded in the election book, and the auditor shall deliver to the person elected his certificate of election on the terms prescribed in this chapter. [R., § 516; C., '51, § 282.]

1108. Abstracts for governor and state officers. 645. Within ten days after the election day, the county auditor shall envelope and seal up by itself, one of the abstracts of votes for governor and lieutenant-governor, and indorse upon it in substance "abstract of votes for governor and lieutenant-governor. from ——— county," and address it to the speaker of the house of representatives. The abstract of votes for other state officers, and for such district officers as are to be returned to the secretary's office, are to be enveloped, sealed, and indorsed in like manner, and directed to the secretary of state. The several packages shall then be placed in one envelope and transmitted to the secretary by mail. [R., §§ 517, 518; C., '51, §§ 283-4.]

1109. For senator or representative for district. 646. When a senator or representative in the general assembly is elected by a district composed of more than one county, the board of county canvassers shall, at the time of canvassing the vote of the county, make and certify an abstract of the votes cast in their county for such office, similar to the abstract required by section six hundred and thirty-six of this chapter [§ 1099], and the auditor shall seal up, direct, and transmit such abstract to the secretary of state as provided in section six hundred and forty-five of this chapter [§ 1108]. He shall also transmit a similar abstract to the county auditor of each other county in the district, who shall file the same in his office. [10 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 1, 2.]

1110. State canvassers. 647. The board of state canvassers shall open the abstracts transmitted to the secretary of state, as provided by the last section, and canvass the votes therein returned at the time of canvassing the state vote, or at such other time as they may fix, and in all cases at least twenty days prior to the time fixed by law for the meeting of the next general assembly; and in case of a special election, within five days after the receipt of such abstracts, and shall immediately make out, certify, and transmit by mail to the county auditor of each county in such district, to be by him filed in his office, an abstract of such canvass similar to the abstract required by section six hundred and forty-five of this chapter [§ 1108]. [Same, § 3.]

1111. Certificate. 648. They shall, also, make and sign a certificate showing who is elected to the office of senator or representative in such district, designating it by its number and similar to the certificate required by section six hundred and fifty-five of this chapter [§ 1108], and the secretary of state shall deliver it to the person appearing by it to be elected to such office on his demanding it. [Same, § 4.]

STATE CANVASS.

1112. Returns procured. 649. If the abstracts from any county are not received at the office of the secretary of state by the fourth Monday after the day of election, the secretary is authorized to send a messenger to the auditor of such county, who shall furnish such messenger with the abstracts, or, if they have been sent, with a copy of them, and he shall return them to the secretary without delay. [R., § 519; C., '51, § 285.]

1113. Abstracts opened. 650. The abstracts, when received by the secretary, shall be kept in his office unopened until the day appointed for opening them, and shall be opened only in the presence of the board of canvassers. [R., § 520; C., '51, § 286.]

1114. Board of canvassers. 651. The executive council constitute a board of canvassers for the state, but no member thereof shall take part in canvassing the votes for any office, for which he himself is a candidate. [R., § 521; C., '51, § 287.]

1115. Time of canvass. 652. On the Thursday following the fourth Monday after the day of election, the board of state canvassers shall open and examine the returns if they are received from all the counties, and if not all received, they may adjourn, not exceeding twenty days, for the purpose of obtaining the returns from all the counties, and when these are received shall proceed with the canvass. [R., § 522; C., '51, § 288.]

1116. Abstracts. 653. They shall make an abstract stating the number of ballots cast for each office, the names of all the persons voted for, for what office they respectively received the votes, and the number of votes each received, in words at length, and stating whom they declare to be elected to each office; which abstract shall be signed by the canvassers in their official capacity, and as state canvassers, and have the seal of the state affixed. [R., § 523; C., '51, § 289.]

[The word "each" in the fourth line is "the" in the printed Code.]

1117. Record of canvass. 654. The secretary shall record the abstract in a book to be kept by him for recording the result of state elections, and to be called the election book, and also file the abstract. [R., § 524; C., '51, § 290.]

1118. Certificate. 655. A certificate shall be prepared for each person elected, in substance as follows:

STATE OF IOWA.

At an election holden on the — day of — A. B. was elected to the office of — of said state, for the term of — years from the first Monday, (or day, as the case may be) of January, A. D. —, (or, if to fill a vacancy, say, for the residue of the term ending on the — day of —, A. D. —.)

Given at Des Moines, this — day of —, A. D. —.

Which certificate shall be signed by the governor, if present, if not by the secretary, with the seal of the state affixed in either case, and be attested by the other canvassers, but in the absence of the governor the secretary's certificate shall be signed by the auditor. [R., § 525; C., '51, § 291.]

1119. Delivery. 656. Such certificate shall be delivered to the persons elected when he has qualified as provided in chapter five of this title. [R., § 526; C., '51, § 292.]

1120. Notice. 657. The governor shall cause the persons elected to be notified thereof immediately, either by mail or by a sheriff or constable, who shall return his doings to the secretary's office. [R., § 527; C., '51, § 293.]

1121. Representative in congress. 658. The certificate of the election of a representative in congress shall be signed by the governor, with the seal of the state affixed, and be countersigned by the secretary of state, and the governor shall cause it to be delivered to the person elected. [R., § 528; C., '51, § 291.]

ELECTION OF REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS.

[The act apportioning the state into representative districts, as given in the appendix, contains, also, the following sections:]

1122. How elected. 19 G. A., ch. 163, § 13. Each of said districts shall be entitled to one representative in congress, and the first election of members of congress under this act shall be at the general election in the year 1882. Members of congress shall be elected at the general election held every two years thereafter.

1123. Returns; canvass. 19 G. A., ch. 163, § 14. The returns of elections for members of congress under this act shall be made to the secretary of state; and the canvass shall be made by the board of state canvassers; which return and canvass shall be made as required by law for the return and canvass of auditor of state.

CHAPTER 4.

OF ELECTORS OF PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT.

1124. Election of. 659. On the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and every four years thereafter, or on such day as the congress of the United States may direct, a poll shall be opened in each precinct for the election of electors of president and vice-president of the United States. [R., § 535; C., '51, § 301.]

See U. S. Const., art. II, § 1

1125. Ballots. 660; 16 G. A., ch. 23. The names of all the electors to be chosen shall be written or printed on each ballot, and each ballot shall contain the name of at least one inhabitant of each congressional district into which the state may be divided, and against the name of each person shall be designated the number of the congressional district to which he belongs. [R., § 536; C., '51, § 302.]

1126. How conducted. 661. This election shall be conducted, and the returns made, as directed in relation to the election of state officers and representatives in congress, except as herein otherwise expressed. [R., § 537; C., '51, § 303.]

1127. Duty of county canvassers. 662. The board of county canvassers shall examine the returns, make, sign, envelope, and seal up the abstracts, and indorse and direct them as provided in other cases, and the county auditor shall transmit them to the secretary of state by mail. In case of his failure so to do, or if they are not received by the secretary of state within fifteen days after the election, he may send a special messenger for them as in other cases. [R., §§ 538, 539; C., '51, §§ 304, 305.]

1128. Time of state canvass. 663. On the twentieth day after the day of election, or before that time, if the returns are received from all the counties, the board of state canvassers shall open and examine the returns and make an abstract as directed in regard to the general elections, which shall be recorded by the secretary in the election book. [R., § 540; C., '51, § 306.]

1129. Method. 664. The canvass shall be public, and in canvassing the returns, the persons having the greatest number of votes are to be declared elected; and if more than the requisite number of persons are found to have the greatest and an equal number of votes, the election of one of them shall be determined by lot, to be drawn by the governor in the presence of the other canvassers. [R., § 541; C., '51, § 307.]

[The word "an," before "equal" in the fourth line, is erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

1130. Certificate. 665; 22 G. A., ch. 50. After the expiration of ten days from the day the canvass is completed the governor shall issue a certificate of election under his hand and the seal of the state and cause it to be served on each person elected, notifying him to attend at the seat of government at noon on the second Monday in January next following their appointment and report himself to the governor as in attendance; but in case of a contest of election of an elector the governor shall withhold the certificate until the contest is determined. [R., § 542; C., '51, § 308.]

1131. Meeting; filling vacancies. 666; 22 G. A., ch. 50. The electors so attending shall meet at noon of said Monday and the governor shall provide them a list of all the electors, and in case of the absence of any elector or if the proper number of electors shall, for any cause, be deficient, those present shall forthwith elect from the citizens of the state, so many persons as will supply the deficiency. [R., § 543; C., '51, § 309.]

1132. Notice. 667. Such choice being certified to the governor, he shall cause the person chosen to be notified immediately. [R., § 544; C., '51, § 310.]

1133. Election; certificate. 668; 22 G. A., ch. 50. The college of electors, being full, shall meet at the capitol at noon of the said second Monday in January or as soon thereafter on that day as practicable, and proceed to the election in conformity with the constitution of the United States and the laws of congress enacted by authority thereof: And it shall be the duty of the governor, as soon as practicable, to communicate under the seal of the state to the secretary of state of the United States, a certificate or certificates complying with the requirements of section three of the act of congress entitled An act to fix the day for the meeting of the electors of president and vice-president and other purposes approved February third, 1887. [R., § 545; C., '51, § 311.]

[As to method of contesting election, see §§ 1212-1216.]

1134. Compensation. 669. The electors shall receive a compensation of five dollars for every day's attendance, and the same mileage as members of the general assembly. [R., § 546; C., '51, § 312.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF QUALIFICATION FOR OFFICE.

1135. Must qualify. 670. No civil officer shall enter on the duties of his office until he has qualified himself as required in this chapter. [R., § 549; C., '51, § 319.]

See Const., art. 11, § 5.

1136. Governor and lieutenant-governor. 671. The governor and lieutenant-governor, by taking an oath in the presence of the general assembly in convention assembled, administered by a judge of the supreme court, to the effect that he will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and will faithfully, impartially, and to the best of his knowledge and ability, discharge the duties incumbent upon him as governor, or lieutenant-governor, of this state. [R., § 550; C., '51, § 320.]

1137. Members of general assembly. 672. Members of the general assembly, by taking the oath prescribed for them in the third article of the constitution. [R., § 551; C., '51, § 321.]

1138. Judges. 673. The judges of the supreme, district, [and circuit] courts, by taking and subscribing an oath in writing to the effect that they will support the constitution of the United States and that of the state of Iowa, and that, without fear, favor, affection, or hope of reward, they will, to the best of their knowledge and ability, administer justice according to the law equally to the rich and the poor, and, unless elected by the people, shall be commissioned by the governor. [R., § 552; C., '51, § 322; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 76.]

1139. Bond. 674. County supervisors and township trustees, with the officers already named in this chapter, are not required to give bond. All other civil officers elected by the people, with those specified hereafter in this chapter, are required to give bond with a condition in substance as follows:

That as — (naming the office) in — township, county (or state of Iowa) he will render a true account of his office and of his doings therein to the proper authority when required thereby or by law; that he will promptly pay over to the person or officer entitled thereto, all money which may come into his hands by virtue of his office; that he will promptly account for all balances of money remaining in his hands at the termination of his office; that he will exercise all reasonable diligence and care in the preservation and lawful disposal of all money, books, papers, securities, or other property appertaining to his said office, and deliver them to his successor or to any other person authorized to receive the same; and that he will faithfully and impartially, without fear, favor, fraud or oppression, discharge all duties now or hereafter required of his office by law. [R., § 5534; C., § 51, §§ 323-4.]

A bond given by an officer when not required by statute, where no benefit or advantage accrues to him by reason of its execution, cannot be enforced: State v. Heisey, 56-404.

• The county treasurer is only held to a reasonable degree of care and diligence, and if, notwithstanding such care, moneys of the county are stolen from him, he is not liable: Ross v. Hatch, 5-149.

But where a county treasurer deposited the county funds in a bank, by the failure of which they were lost, held, that he was liable therefor, although no suitable place was in fact provided by the county for keeping the funds: Lowry v. Polk County, 51-50.

As to liability of treasurers of school districts, see notes to § 2846.

The sureties of a sheriff are liable for trespass committed by him in attempting to discharge the duties of his office: Charles v. Haskins, 11-329.

The sureties on the official bond of a constable are liable for damages resulting from an unauthorized sale by him of property exempt from execution: Strunk v. Ocheltree, 11-158; also, for unlawful acts in making an arrest in excess of his duty: Clancy v. Kenworthy, 74-740.

Where an officer assumes to act under a warrant or order which is unauthorized, and his acts under which are illegal, his sureties will be liable for damages sustained: Tieman v. Hau, 49-312.

Sureties on the coroner's bond are liable for his acts while serving as ex officio sheriff: Ibid.

A justice of the peace and his sureties are liable on his bond for his failure to deliver to his successor or to the owner notes placed in his hands as justice for collection: Latham v. Brown, 16-118; Bessinger v. Dickerson, 20-260.

Sureties upon a new bond are not liable for moneys coming into the principal's hands before the execution of such bond: Ibid.

As between sureties on different bonds, the liability for money coming into the hands of the officer is not dependent upon the time of making demand upon him therefor by the person entitled thereto, and his refusal to pay; if the proper inquiry is, when was the money received: Thompson v. Dickerson, 22-360.

Sureties are holden only for the term for which their bond was given, even though the bond does not express the limit of such term. The fact that the officer holds over beyond his term on account of failure to fill his office will not extend the liability of the sureties beyond the original term of office: Wapello County v. Bigham, 10-39.

Sureties on a treasurer's bond are not liable for money received prior to its execution, unless the defalcation took place after that time: Warren County v. Ward, 21-84.

The sureties for each term are liable for the deficit of that term, and the officer cannot during one term pay off deficiencies of a preceding term so as to throw the entire deficiency on the sureties on his bond for the second term: Myers v. Farmer, 52-20.

Sureties on an additional bond are not liable for any default occurring before they became sureties, unless the bond is so specially drawn as to cover past as well as prospective delinquencies: Bessinger v. Dickerson, 20-260.

The sureties in a new or additional bond of a county treasurer, which is not retrospective in its terms, will be bound for public moneys in the hands of their principal at the time of its execution, although a previous bond then existed with different sureties; but not for past derelictions of duty or misconduct: Mathaska County v. Ingalls, 16-81.

Sureties are not liable for money received by the officer and appropriated to his own use or otherwise disposed of prior to the execution of the bond on which they are sureties, so that at the time such bond is executed the money is not in the hands of the officer: Independent School Dist. v. McDonald, 39-564.

In an action on the official bond of a county treasurer, held, that it sufficiently appeared that the defalcation for which recovery was sought occurred subsequently to the giving of the bond sued on: Carroll County v. Ruggies, 69-269.

Where it appeared that at the semi-annual settlement preceding the giving of the bond there was no deficiency in the treasurer's account, held, that the sureties of the treasurer, insisting that a defalcation existed at the time of the giving of the second bond, had the burden of proving such fact: Ibid.

Where a holding-over officer executed a bond with sureties for the entire term under the mistaken belief that he was entitled to hold for the entire term, but at the next election he was duly elected to fill the vacancy, held, that the sureties on the first bond were not co-sureties with those on the bond given in pursuance of the last election for the period subsequent to the last election, and could not be compelled to contribute for a defalcation occurring during that time: Boone County v. Jones, 58-373.

Sureties on the bond of a public officer are not liable for defalcations occurring prior to the execution of the bond upon which they become sureties: Held v. Bagwell, 58-139.

The sureties on an official bond will not be relieved of liability on the ground that blanks, existing in the bond at the time of its signature by them, were subsequently filled, if it appears that such bond was executed by them in the expectation that such blanks would be properly filled, which was afterwards done: Wright v. Harris, 31-272.

Where an official bond to which the names of several sureties are procured is signed by them, while the blank in which the names of the sureties are to be entered remains unfilled, and such blank is afterwards filled with the names of those who actually sign the bond, and it is delivered in this form, the sureties cannot avoid it by proof that they signed it upon condition that before delivery other names were to be procured as sureties which were not in fact procured: Carroll County v. Ruggles, 69-269.

The fact that the name of one of the persons signing as surety is not filled into the blank left for that purpose will not charge the officer accepting the bond with notice of any condition affecting the liability of other sureties: Ibid.

A bond signed by a surety will be binding upon him although his name is not filled into the blank left for that purpose in the body of the bond: Moore v. McKinley, 60-367.

Where persons, intending to become sureties for an officer upon his bond, signed different blank bonds, and afterward upon the amount of the bond which was required of him being determined he filled up one of such blanks with the proper amount, held, that the sureties thereby became bound, they having constituted him their agent and vested him with absolute power to do all that was necessary to make and deliver a binding official bond: Lee County v. Welting, 70-198.

Where the sureties on the bond leave it with a third person with the direction that it shall be delivered only on certain conditions, such as securing additional sureties, etc., but such third person delivers the bond to the principal without the performance of such condition, and the principal delivers it to the board who approve it without knowledge of the conditions, the sureties are bound: Taylor County v. King, 73-153.

Where an officer being elected and failing to qualify was afterwards appointed to the same position, and filed a bond which had been previously prepared and signed to enable him to qualify under his election, held, that the sureties on such bond were not liable thereunder: Winneshek County v. Maynard, 44-15.

In an action against the sureties it is not necessary to aver and prove in the first instance that they have been approved as required by law: State v. Fredericks, 8-553.

The fact that judgment is recovered against the officer on his bond will not bar the right to sue the sureties thereon. The action against principal and sureties may be joint, but need not necessarily be so: Charles v. Haskins, 11-329.

Where the estate of the principal obligor is insolvent there is no obligation upon the county for whose benefit the bond is given to file a claim for the amount due on the bond against the estate of the deceased obligor, but action may be brought at once against the sureties: Pottawattamie County v. Taylor, 47-520.

Where an officer is authorized to receive money in his official capacity he will be liable on his bond for failure to pay the same over to the parties entitled thereto: Wright v. Harris, 31-272.

Money received by the clerk of a court upon a judgment rendered thereunder comes into his hands by virtue of his office and his sureties are liable on his bond for failure to pay such money over to the proper parties: Morgan v. Long, 29-434.

The clerk of a court is liable upon his official bonds for money paid into court as a tender and transferred to him by his predecessor, and the question whether the money so paid was legally tendered or not is immaterial: Billings v. Teeling, 40-607.

Under a statute directing redemption from execution sale to be made by payment of money to the clerk, held, that the sureties on the bond of the sheriff were not liable for money paid to him for the purpose of effecting redemption: Sample v. Davis, 4 G. Gr., 117.

The county treasurer and his sureties are liable on his bond for money received by him from tax payers as part payment for taxes: Warren County v. Ward, 21-84.

Where an officer executed a bond for the disposition of certain public money for a specified purpose, held, that the sureties were liable on such bond, although the money had been paid over to him for that purpose in violation of law, that is, contrary to the requirements of law, the purpose for which it was to be used being lawful: Muscatine County v. Carpenter, 33-41.

Judgment and satisfaction thereof for official delinquencies prior to the execution, during the same term of office, of a second bond, will not bar recovery upon such second bond for delinquencies occurring after its execution, and the satisfaction will not bar contribution by sureties on the second bond against sureties on the first: Warren County v. Ward, 21-84.

As to the effect of a settlement in case of an officer holding over, see notes to § 1156.

1140. Oath. 675. Every civil officer who is required to give bond, shall take and subscribe on the back of his bond, or on a paper attached thereto, to be certified by the officer administering it, an oath that he will support the constitution of the United States and that of the state of Iowa, and that to the best of his knowledge and ability he will perform all the duties of the office of (naming it) as provided by the condition of his bond within written. [R., § 561; C., '51, § 331.]

1141. Form. 676. The oath of office provided by article eleven of the constitution for all civil officers not otherwise expressly provided for, may be substantially in the following form: I, ———, do solemnly swear that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and that I will faithfully and impartially, to the best of my ability, discharge all the duties of the office of ——— (naming it) in ——— (naming the township, county, district, or state, as the case may be), as now or hereafter required by law. [R., § 562; C., '51, § 332.]

1142. Bonds. 677. The bonds of state and district officers shall be given to the state, those of county and township officers to the county. [R., § 555; C., '51, § 325.]

Whether the state can maintain an action on the county treasurer's bond, quere: State v. Henderson, 40-242.

The members of the board of supervisors are not liable for damages resulting from the approval of insufficient bond, when their action results from an honest mistake or error of judgment, whether of law or fact, but they are personally liable for neglect, carelessness and official misconduct in such matters: Wasson v. Mitchell, 18-153.

1143. Penalty of bond. 678. The bond of the secretary of state shall be in the penal sum of not less than five thousand dollars.

Of the auditor of state, in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars.

Of the treasurer of state, in the sum of not less than three hundred thousand dollars.

Of the state printer, in the sum of not less than five thousand dollars.

Of the state binder, in the sum of not less than two thousand dollars.

Of the attorney-general, in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars.

Of the register of the state land office, in the sum of not less than five thousand dollars.

Of the reporter of the supreme court, in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars.

Of the clerk of the supreme court, in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars.

[Of each district attorney, in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars.]

Of the superintendent of public instruction, in the sum of not less than two thousand dollars.

The bonds of county treasurers, clerks of the district [and circuit] courts, county recorders, coroners, county surveyors, township assessors, auditors, county superintendents, sheriffs, and of justices of the peace and constables, shall each be in a penal sum to be fixed by the board of supervisors; but those of the treasurer, clerks of the district [and circuit] courts, auditors, and sheriffs, shall not be in a less sum than five thousand dollars each, and those of justices and constables, not less than five hundred dollars each. [R., §§ 128, 135, 165, 377, 556, 557; C., '51, §§ 326-7; 10 G. A., ch. 22, § 2; ch. 52, § 3; ch. 129, § 5; 12 G. A., ch. 160, § 4.]

[As to bond of county attorney, see § 267.]

1144. Sureties. 679. Every official bond shall be given with at least two sureties, and all sureties shall be freeholders within the state; the bonds of the state printer and binder shall be given with at least three sureties, and those of the treasurer of state and each county treasurer with at least four sureties. [R., §§ 135, 165, 558, 559; C., '51, §§ 328-9.]

[As to fidelity company being accepted as surety, see §§ 329-334. As to liability of sureties, see notes to § 1139.]

1145. Approval. 680. The bonds of state officers must be approved by the governor before being filed; those of district [county] attorneys, by the district judges of their respective districts; those of county officers and township clerk, by the board of supervisors, and of township officers, by the township clerk. The approval shall in all cases be indorsed upon the bond and signed by the officer approving, or the president of the board. But in case the board of supervisors should decide that a bond which is to be approved by them is insufficient, or such bond is not approved the first day of the session, then a reasonable time, not to exceed five days, is to be allowed the officer elect to supply a sufficient bond, or to approve the same. [R., §§ 377, 560; C., '51, § 330; Ex. S., 9 G. A., ch. 27, § 2.]

[As to approval of bond of county attorney, see § 267.]

The provisions of § 1156 that the bond of an officer who is re-elected shall not be approved until such officer qualifies and has accounted for public funds and property which have been under his control, imposes upon the officer authorized to approve the bond a duty to the public only, and neglect thereof will not render him liable to sureties on the new bond: Held v. Bagwell, 58-139; District T'p v. McCord, 54-346.

It is not necessary in an action on the bond to aver and prove in the first instance that the sureties have been approved as required by law: State v. Fredericks, 8-553.

The fact that approval of an official bond by the proper officer does not appear of record, or that it does not appear that the proper certificate was made as required by law that the officer had properly accounted for funds in his hands during a preceding term, cannot be urged as a defense to the bond: Boone County v. Jones, 54-699.

The board of supervisors being vested with the power to require an officer to give a bond or additional bond when deemed requisite, a bond required of an officer holding over, there being a doubt as to whether he was holding over by virtue of his former election and was still liable on his old bond, or was holding by virtue of a new election in pursuance of which the bond was required, held valid, irrespective of whether the new election was valid or not: Ibid.

Want of approval of a bond of a county officer by the board of supervisors does not render the bond invalid: Moore v. McKinley, 60-367.

1146. Failure of board to approve. 681. If the board of supervisors refuse or neglect to approve the bond of any county officer elect, he may present the same for approval to the judge of the circuit [district] court, who shall fix a day for the hearing. Notice of such hearing shall be served upon the board of supervisors as provided by law for the service of original notice; and due proof of such service being made to the judge at the time fixed, he shall, unless good cause for postponement be shown, proceed to hear and determine the sufficiency of the bond, and, if satisfied that the same is sufficient, he shall approve the same, and such approval shall have the same force and effect as an approval by the board of supervisors at the time the same was presented to them for approval, would have had. [14 G. A., ch. 16.]

1147. Where filed. 682. The bonds and oaths of state officers shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, except those of the secretary, which shall be filed and recorded in the office of the auditor; those of county and township officers in the county auditor's office, except those of the county auditor, which shall be kept in the county treasurer's office, and those of justices of the peace, which shall be filed by the auditor in the office of the clerk of the district court, after the same have been approved and recorded. [R., § 553; C., '51, § 333; Ex. S., 9 G. A., ch. 27, § 2; 12 G. A., ch. 160, §§ 4, 5.]

1148. Recording. 683. The auditor of each county shall keep in his office a book to be known as the record book of officers' bonds, and record in said book, the official bonds of all county officers, including justices of the peace and constables, filed in his county; and also keep an index to said book, in which, under the title of each office, shall be entered the names of each principal and his sureties, and the date of the filing of the bond. [9 G. A., ch. 25, §§ 1, 2, 4.]

1149. Penalty for not recording. 684. Any county officer who shall enter upon the discharge of the duties of his office, without first having caused his official bond to be recorded, shall forfeit to the county of which he is an officer, the sum of five dollars for each official act by him performed prior to the recording of said bond, and the chairman of the board of supervisors of each county is hereby required to bring suit for, or collect such penalty in the name of his county; and it shall be considered a misdemeanor for any officer who is required to give bond to act in such official capacity without giving such bond as is provided by law, and he shall be liable to a fine for an amount not exceeding the amount of the bond required of him. [Same, § 5.]

1150. When to qualify. 685. The governor and lieutenant-governor shall qualify within ten days after the result of the election shall be declared by the general assembly; judges of the supreme, district [and circuit] courts, by the first day of January following their election; and all other officers by the first Monday of January following their election. [R., § 564; C., '51, § 334.]

1151. Time extended. 21 G. A., ch. 54, § 1. All county and township officers who have been or may be prevented by sickness, the inclement state of the weather or other unavoidable casualty from qualifying for their respective offices by the first Monday of January following their election shall be held to have legally qualified if they do so qualify within ten days thereafter.

1152. Effect of failure. 686. A failure to qualify within the time prescribed shall be deemed a refusal to serve. [R., § 564; C., '51, § 334.]

1153. Election contested. 687. When any election is contested, the person elected shall have twenty days in which to qualify after the day of the decision. [R., § 565; C., '51, § 335; 10 G. A., ch. 34, § 4.]

1154. Effect of bonds. 688. The bonds of officers shall be construed to cover duties required by law subsequent to giving them. [R., § 566; C., '51, § 336.]

Where, subsequently to the giving of a treasurer's bond, he was by law made custodian of the school fund, held, that his sureties were liable for his default in the management of that fund: Mahaska County v. Ingalls, 14-170.

1155. Want of compliance. 689. No official bond shall be void for want of compliance with the statute, but it shall be valid in law for the matter contained therein. [R., § 567; C., '51, § 337.]

A bond which is not good as a statutory obligation may be good as a bond at common law: State v. Fredericks, 8-553.

The fact that the bond of a public officer was acknowledged and sworn to before a person not qualified to administer oaths, held a mere irregularity which was waived by the acceptance and approval of the bond: State v. Minton, 49-591.

The giving of a bond to the "people of Woodbury county," instead of to the county, held not such a mistake as to vitiate the security: Charles v. Haskins, 11-329.

Where a bond was given by a county treasurer "unto the county of Warren and state of Iowa," held, that it was for the security of the county and not the state: State v. Henderson, 40-242.

Irregularity in the election in pursuance of which the officer claims the office and executes the bond cannot be urged as a defense to the bond, either on behalf of principal or surety: Boone County v. Jones, 54-699.

1156. Accounting before approval. 690. When the incumbent of an office is re-elected, he shall qualify as above directed; but when the re-elected officer has had public funds or property in his control, under color of his office, his bond shall not be approved until he has produced and fully accounted for such funds and property to the proper person to whom he should account therefor; and the officer or board approving the bond shall indorse upon the bond before its approval the fact that the said officer has fully accounted for and produced all funds and property before that time under his control as such officer; and when it is ascertained that the incumbent holds over another term by reason of the non-election of a successor, or for the neglect or refusal of the successor to qualify, he shall qualify anew within a time to be fixed by the officer who approves of the bonds of such officers. [R., § 568; C., '51, § 338.]

An officer when he enters upon a subsequent term must be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have on hand all the funds with which he is chargeable, and proof of the amount which should have been on hand at that time will be prima facie proof that it was on hand. The fact that his bond is approved without his having produced and accounted for all funds and property, as here required, will not exempt his sureties from liability: District T'p v. McCord, 54-346.

The settlement with the county provided for by § 1401, in case of an officer holding over, is conclusive against him and the sureties on his new bond that he has the amount of money on hand which is shown by such settlement: Boone County v. Jones, 54-699.

But if such settlement is procured upon the production of checks, certificates of deposit, etc., without any effort to ascertain whether they really represent money, it is not binding upon the sureties, and they may show that the defalcation had taken place prior to the giving of their bond. But the treasurer himself is estopped from showing that he did not have the money on hand as he represented he had, even though the board knew of his fraud and participated therein: Webster County v. Hutchinson, 60-721. This estoppel, however, does not apply in a criminal prosecution for embezzlement, and the treasurer may, notwithstanding his statements to the board, show that the embezzlement occurred during a previous term, and at such time as that the prosecution therefor is barred by the statute of limitations: State v. Hutchinson, 69-478.

The provision of § 1401, for indorsement upon the bond of an officer, that he has accounted for public funds previously coming into his hands, is directory; and where it appeared that there was no defalcation at the previous semi-annual settlement, held, that the sureties insisting that such defalcation had taken place before the acceptance of the bond signed by them, had the burden of proving that fact: Carroll County v. Ruggles, 69-269.

The term for which an incumbent holding over is to occupy the office and qualify is not a full term, but only until the vacancy can be legally filled by election: Dyer v. Bagwell, 54-487; Boone County v. Jones, 58-373.

Where a holding-over officer executed a bond with sureties for the entire period of the term of the person in whose place he held over, under a mistaken belief that he was entitled to hold for the entire term of such officer, and at the next election was duly elected to fill the vacancy in such office, and executed a new bond, held, that the sureties on the first-named bond were not co-sureties with those on the second bond for the period subsequent to the last election, and could not be compelled to contribute for a defalcation occurring during that time: Boone County v. Jones, 58-373.

The duty of an officer not to approve the bond until the person qualifying has accounted as required in this section is a duty to the public only, and neglect thereof will not render such officer liable to the sureties on the new bond: Held v. Bagwell, 58-139.

Surety is not liable for defalcation prior to the giving of the bond on which he becomes surety: Ibid.

An officer holding over after re-election and failing to file a new bond is still an officer de facto, and not a person falsely assuming to be an officer under § 5270, at least until his office is declared vacant: State v. Bates, 23-96.

As to liability of sureties upon the original bond of an officer holding over after the expiration of his term, see note to § 1139.

1157. Temporary officer. 691. Any person temporarily appointed to fill an office during the incapacity or suspension of the regular incumbent, shall qualify in the manner required by this chapter for the office so to be filled.

CHAPTER 6.

OF CONTESTING ELECTIONS.

1158. Causes for. 692. The election of any person to a county office may be contested by any elector of the county:

1. When malconduct, fraud, or corruption on the part of the judges of election in any precinct, or of any board of canvassers, or any member of either board, sufficient to change the result;

2. When the incumbent was not eligible to the office at the time of the election;

3. When the incumbent has been duly convicted of an infamous crime before the election, and the judgment has not been reversed, annulled, or set aside, nor the incumbent pardoned at the time of the election;

4. When the incumbent has given or offered to any elector, or any judge, clerk, or canvasser of the election, any bribe or reward in money, property, or thing of value for the purpose of procuring his election;

5. When illegal votes have been received or legal votes rejected at the polls sufficient to change the result;

6. For any error in any board of canvassers in counting the votes, or in declaring the result of the election if the error would affect the result;

7. For any other cause which shows that another was the person legally elected. [R., §§ 569, 571; C., '51, §§ 339, 341.]

[The word "when," at the beginning of the first subdivision, is "for" in the corresponding section of the Revision and in the bill as reported by the Code commissioners. The change to "when" was doubtless an oversight.]

Where before election a candidate for a county office offered and held out as an inducement to obtain votes that he would perform the duties of the office for a less amount than the fees provided by law, and turn the balance of the fees into the county treasury, held that this was the offer of a bribe by the officer to the electors, and his election might be contested under this section: Carrothers v. Russell, 53-316.

It does not constitute bribery at an election to relocate a county seat for persons interested in the location at a particular place to agree to give or furnish facilities for the convenience of the whole county, such as to agree to give property or money which will be for the advantage of the whole country, as, for instance, land on which to erect buildings, money for the erection of a bridge and high school building, etc.: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212; Hawes v. Miller, 56-395.

Where an agent authorized to represent a railway company in securing the adoption of a proposition to levy a tax in behalf of such railway held out as an inducement to voters to vote the tax that the company would pay them fifty per cent. on the dollar for their certificates when issued, and thereby influenced the action of some of the voters at such election, held, that the tax was thereby rendered illegal: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67-728.

Where, at an election to pass upon a contract for the sale of swamp land, improper inducements by way of personal advantage were held out to the electors of the county, held, that the contract thus ratified by them could not be enforced: Palo Alto County v. Harrison, 68-81.

To constitute a fraud in the submission of a proposition at a special election there must be some showing of artifice to conceal material facts within the knowledge of the persons submitting the proposition to vote, and which are not open and obtainable by others. There cannot be deemed to be a fraudulent concealment of matters which are public, and can be as well known to the people and voters as to the officers submitting the question to vote: Starr v. Board of Supervisors, 22-491.

1159. Incumbent. 693. The term "incumbent" in this chapter, means the person whom the canvassers declare elected. [R., § 570; C., '51, § 340.]

1160. Change in result. 694. When the misconduct complained of is on the part of the judges of election in a precinct, it shall not be held sufficient to set aside the election, unless the rejection of the vote of that precinct would change the result as to that office. [R., § 572; C., '51, § 342.]

1161. Court, how constituted. 695. The court for the trial of contested county elections, shall be thus constituted: The chairman of the board of supervisors shall be the presiding officer, and the contestant and incumbent may each name a person who shall be associated with him. [R., § 573; C., '51, § 343.]

1162. Clerk. 696. The county auditor shall be clerk of this court, and keep all papers and record the proceedings in the election book, in manner similar to the record of the proceedings of the district court. But when the county auditor is a party, the court shall appoint a suitable person as clerk, whose appointment shall be recorded. [R., § 571; C., '51, § 344.]

1163. Statement of contest. 697. The contestant shall file in the office of the county auditor, within twenty days after the day when the votes were canvassed, a written statement of his intention to contest the election, setting forth the name of the contestant and that he is an elector of the county, the name of the incumbent, the office contested, the time of the election, and the particular causes of contest, which statement shall be verified by the affidavit of the contestant, or some other elector of the county, that the causes set forth are true as he verily believes. The contestant must also file with the county auditor a bond, with security to be approved by said auditor, conditioned to pay all costs in case the election be confirmed, or the statement be dismissed, or the prosecution fail. When the auditor is a party, the clerk of the district court shall receive such statement and approve such bond. [R., § 575; C., '51, § 345.]

1164. Names of voters. 698. When the reception of illegal or the rejection of legal votes is alleged as a cause of contest, the names of the persons who so voted, or whose votes were rejected, with the precinct where they voted or offered to vote, shall be set forth in the statement. [R., § 576; C., '51, § 346.]

1165. Trial; notice. 699. The chairman of the board of supervisors shall thereupon fix a day for the trial, not more than thirty, nor less than twenty days thereafter; and shall cause a notice of such trial to be served on the incumbent, with a copy of the contestant's statement, at least ten days before the day set for trial. [R., §§ 577, 579, 580; C., '51, §§ 347, 349, 350.]

1166. Judges. 700. The contestant and incumbent shall each file in the auditor's office, on or before the day of trial, a written nomination of one associate judge of the contested election, who shall be sworn in manner and form as trial jurors are in trials of civil action. If either the contestants or the incumbent fail to nominate, the presiding judge shall appoint for him. When either of the nominated judges fails to appear on the day of trial, his place may be filled by another appointment under the same rule. [R., §§ 577-8; C., '51, §§ 347-8.]

1167. Postponement. 701. The trial shall proceed at the time appointed unless postponed for good cause shown by affidavit, the terms of which postponement are in the discretion of the court. [R., § 583; C., '51, § 353.]

1168. Powers of court. 702. The proceedings shall be assimilated to those in an action, so far as practicable, but shall be under the control and direction of the court, which shall have all the powers of the district court necessary to the right hearing and determination of the matter, to compel the attendance of witnesses, swear them and direct their examination; to punish for contempt in its presence or by disobedience to its lawful mandate, to adjourn from day to day, to make any order concerning intermediate costs, and to enforce its orders by attachment. It shall be governed by the rules of law and evidence applicable to the case. [R., §§ 584, 588, 591; C., '51, §§ 354, 358, 361.]

[The word "intermediate" in the seventh line is erroneously printed "immediate" in the Code.]

1169. Testimony. 703. The testimony may be oral or by depositions, taken as in an action at law in the district court. [R., § 581; C., '51, § 351.]

1170. Subpcenas. 704. Subpcenas for witnesses may be issued at any time after the notice of trial is served, either by the clerk of the district court, or by the county auditor. The command to a witness may be, to appear at —, on —, to testify in relation to a contested election, whereby A. B. is contestant and C. D. is incumbent. [R., §§ 582, 586; C., '51, §§ 352, 356.]

1171. Sufficiency of statement; amendment. 705. The statement shall not be dismissed for want of form, if the particular causes of contest are alleged with such certainty as will sufficiently advise the incumbent of the real grounds of contest. If any part of the causes are held insufficient, they may be amended, but the incumbent will be entitled to an adjournment if he state on oath that he has matter of answer to the amended causes, for the preparation of which he needs further time. Such adjournment shall be upon such terms as the court deem reasonable; but if all the causes are held insufficient, and an amendment is asked, the adjournment shall be at the cost of contestant. If no amendment is asked for or made, or in case of entire failure to prosecute, the proceedings may be dismissed. [R., §§ 585, 591; C., '51, §§ 355, 361.]

1172. Process; fees. 706. The style, form, and manner of service of process and papers, and the fees of officers and witnesses, shall be the same as in the district court, so far as the nature of the case admits. [R., § 586; C., '51, § 356.]

1173. Trial. 707. The trial of contested county elections shall take place at the county seat, unless some other place within the county is substituted by the consent of the court and parties. [R., § 587; C., '51, § 357.]

1174. Sheriff to attend. 708. The court, or the presiding judge, may direct the attendance of the sheriff or a constable when deemed necessary. [R., § 589; C., '51, § 359.]

1175. Voters testify. 709. The court may require any person called as a witness who voted at such election, to answer touching his qualifications as a voter; and if he was not a qualified voter in the county where he voted, then to answer for whom he voted; and if the witness answers such questions, no part of his testimony on that trial shall be used against him in any criminal action. [R., § 590; C., '51, § 360.]

1176. Compensation of judges. 710. The judges shall be entitled to receive four dollars a day for the time occupied by the trial. [R., § 593; C., '51, § 363.]

1177. Costs. 711. The contestant and the incumbent are liable to the officers and witnesses for the costs made by them respectively. But if the election be confirmed, or the statement be dismissed, or the prosecution fail, judgment shall be rendered against the contestant for costs; and if the judgment be against the incumbent, or the election be set aside, it shall be against him for costs. [R., § 594; C., '51, § 364.]

1178. How collected. 712. A transcript of the judgment, filed and recorded in the office of the clerk of the circuit [district] court as provided in relation to transcripts from justices' courts, shall have the same effect as there provided, and execution may issue thereon. [R., § 595; C., '51, § 365.]

1179. Certificate withheld. 713. If notice of contesting the election of an officer is filed before the certificate of election is delivered to him, it shall be withheld until the determination of the contest. [R., § 597; C., '51, § 367.]

1180. Judgment. 714. The court shall pronounce judgment whether the incumbent or any other person was duly elected, and the person so declared elected will be entitled to his certificate on qualification. If the judgment be against the incumbent, and he has already received the certificate, the judgment annuls it. If the court find that no person was duly elected, the judgment shall be that the election be set aside. [R., § 592; C., '51, § 362.]

1181. How enforced. 715. When either the contestant or incumbent shall be in possession of the office, by holding over or otherwise, the presiding judge shall, if the judgment be against the party so in possession of the office and in favor of his antagonist, issue an order to carry into effect the judgment of the court, which order shall be under the seal of the county, and shall command the sheriff of the county to put the successful party into possession of the office without delay, and to deliver to him all books and papers belonging to the same, and the sheriff shall execute such order as other writs. [10 G. A., ch. 34, § 1.]

1182. Appeal. 716. The party against whom judgment is rendered may appeal within twenty days to the circuit [district] court, but if he be in possession of the office, such appeal shall not supersede the execution of the judgment of the court as provided in the preceding section, unless he give a bond with security, to be approved by the circuit [district] judge, in a sum to be fixed by the judge, and which shall be at least double the probable compensation of such officer for six months, which bond shall be conditioned that he will prosecute his appeal without delay, and that if the judgment appealed from be affirmed, he will pay over to the successful party all compensation received by him while in possession of said office after the judgment appealed from was rendered. [Same, § 2.]

Whether notice of appeal in such case should be in writing, quære; but where verbal notice was given at the time the judgment of the court of contest was rendered, and the parties then agreed as to disposition to be made of the ballot-box, held, that the notice was sufficient under the circumstances: McIntosh v. Livingston, 41-219.

The fact of good faith and claim of right on the part of the officer de facto will not affect the right of the officer de jure to the emoluments of the office: McCue v. Wapello County, 56-698.

1183. Judgment on appeal. 717. If, upon appeal, the judgment be affirmed, the circuit [district] court may render judgment upon the bond for the amount of damages against the appellant and his sureties on the bond. [Same, § 3.]

OF CERTAIN STATE OFFICERS.

1184. By whom. 718. The election of any person to any state office, except that of governor or lieutenant-governor, or to the office of district judge, [circuit judge], or district [county] attorney, may be contested by an eligible person who received votes for the same office, for any of the causes before mentioned. [R., § 598; C., '51, § 368.]

1185. Court. 719. The court for the trial of contested state elections shall consist of three judges, not interested, of the supreme, district, [or circuit] court, or any of them, as may be convenient. [R., § 599; C., '51, § 369.]

1186. Clerk. 720. The secretary of state shall be the clerk of this court. But if the person holding that office is a party to the contest, the clerk of the supreme court, or in case of his absence or inability, the auditor of state shall be clerk. [R., § 600; C., '51, § 370.]

1187. Statement filed. 721. The statement must be filed with such clerk within thirty days from the day when the votes are canvassed. [R., § 601; C., '51, § 371.]

1188. Time of trial; notice. 722. The clerk shall as soon as practicable, ascertain which three of the judges residing nearest the seat of government can attend the trial, fix a time therefor, and notify the judges, and cause a copy of the statement and a notice of the time fixed for trial to be served upon the incumbent, and a notice of the time to be served upon the contestant at least twenty days before the day of trial, and returns thereof to be made to him. When convenient, the service of the above papers may be made by the clerk of this court. The time for the trial shall not be set beyond the last Monday of January following the election. [R., § 601; C., '51, §§ 371-2.]

1189. Subpœnas; depositions. 723. The secretary of state, the several clerks of the supreme and district courts, under their respective seals of office, and either the judges of the supreme, district, [or circuit] courts, under their hands, may issue subpœnas for witnesses to attend this court; and disobedience to such process may be treated as a contempt. Depositions may also be taken as in the case of contested county elections. [R., § 603; C., '51, § 373.]

1190. Process. 724. Process and papers may be issued to and served by the sheriff of any county. [R., § 604; C., '51, § 374.]

1191. Place of trial. 725. The trial shall take place at the seat of government, unless some other place be substituted by consent of the court and both parties. [R., § 605; C., '51, § 375.]

1192. Compensation of judges. 726. The judges shall be entitled to receive for their travel and attendance, the sum of six dollars each per day, with such mileage as is allowed to members of the general assembly, to be paid from the state treasury. [R., § 606; C., '51, § 376.]

1193. Judgment filed; execution. 727. A transcript of the judgment rendered by such court, filed in the office of the clerk of the supreme court, shall have the force and effect of a judgment of the supreme court, and execution may issue therefrom in the first instance, and against the party's property generally. [R., § 607; C., '51, § 377.]

1194. Power of judge. 728. The presiding judge of this court shall have authority to carry into effect any order of the court after the adjournment thereof, by attachment or otherwise. [R., § 608; C., '51, § 378.]

1195. Other provisions. 729. The provisions of this chapter in relation to contested county elections, are applied to contested state elections when applicable, except as herein otherwise directed. [R., § 609; C., '51, § 379.]

OF MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

1196. By whom. 730. The election of any person to a seat in either branch of the general assembly may be contested by any qualified voter of the district to be represented. [R., § 610; C., '51, § 380.]

1197. Statement served. 731. The contestant shall, within thirty days after the canvass, serve on the incumbent a statement as required in relation to county officers, except the list of illegal votes, which shall be served with the notice of taking depositions relative to them, and if no such deposition is taken, then twenty days before the first day of the next session. [R., § 611; C., '51, § 381.]

1198. Subpœnas. 732. Any judge or clerk of a court of record may issue subpœnas in the above cases as in those before provided, and compel the attendance of witnesses thereunder. [R., § 612; C., '51, § 382.]

1199. Depositions. 733. Depositions may be taken in such cases in the same manner and under the same rules as in an action at law in the district court; but no cause for taking the same need be shown. [R., § 613; C., '51, § 383.]

1200. Return of depositions. 734. A copy of the statement, and of the notice for taking depositions with the service indorsed, and verified by affidavit, if not served by an officer, shall be returned to the officer taking the depositions, and then with the depositions shall be sealed up and transmitted to the secretary of state with an indorsement thereon showing the nature of the papers, the names of the contesting parties, and the branch of the general assembly before which the contest is to be tried. [R., § 614; C., '51, § 384.]

1201. Statement and depositions; notice. 735. The secretary shall deliver the same unopened to the presiding officer of the house in which the contest is to be tried, on or before the second day of the session, regular or special, of the general assembly next after taking the depositions, and the presiding officer shall immediately give notice to his house that such papers are in his possession. [R., § 615; C., '51, § 385.]

1202. Power of general assembly. 736. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to abridge the right of either branch of the general assembly to grant commissions to take depositions, or to send for and examine any witness it may desire to hear on such trial. [R., § 616; C., '51, § 386.]

OF GOVERNOR.

1203. By whom. 737. The election of any person declared duly elected to the office of governor or lieutenant-governor, may be contested by an eli-eligible person who received votes for the office contested. [R., § 617; C., '51, § 387.]

See Const., art. 4, § 5.

1204. Notice of contest. 738. The contestant shall, within thirty days after the proclamation of the election, deliver to the presiding officer of each house of the general assembly a notice of his intent to contest, and a specification of the grounds of such contest as before directed. [R., § 618; C., '51, § 388.]

1205. Notice to incumbent. 739. As soon as the presiding officers have received the notice and specifications, they shall make out a notice directed to the incumbent, including a copy of the specifications, which shall be served by the sergeant-at-arms. [R., § 619; C., '51, § 389.]

1206. To each house. 740. The presiding officers shall also immediately make known to their respective houses that such notice and specifications have been received. [R., § 620; C., '51, § 390.]

1207. Court, how chosen. 741. Each house shall forthwith proceed, separately, to choose seven members of its own body in the following manner:

1. The names of members of each house, except the presiding officer, written on similar paper tickets, shall be placed in a box, the names of the senators in their presence by their secretary, and the names of the representatives in their presence by their clerk:

2. The secretary of the senate in the presence of the senate, and the clerk of the house of representatives in the presence of the house, shall draw from their respective boxes the names of seven members each;

3. As soon as the names are thus drawn, the names of the members drawn by each house shall be communicated to the other, and entered on the journals of each house. [R., § 621; C., '51, § 391.]

1208. Powers and proceedings of committee. 742. The members thus drawn shall constitute a committee to try and determine the contested election, and for that purpose shall hold their meetings publicly at the place where the general assembly is sitting at such times as they may designate; and may adjourn from day to day, or to a day certain, not more than four days distant, until such trial is determined; shall have power to send for persons and papers, and to take all necessary means to procure testimony, extending like privileges to the contestant and the incumbent, and shall report their judgment to both branches of the general assembly, which report shall be entered on the journals of both houses. [R., § 622; C., '51, § 392.]

1209. Testimony. 743. The testimony shall be confined to the matters contained in the specifications. [R., § 623; C., '51, § 393.]

1210. Judgment. 744. The judgment of the committee pronounced in the final decision on the election shall be conclusive. [R., § 624; C., '51, § 394.]

1211. Other provisions. 745. The provisions of this chapter in relation to other contested elections are applied to a contested election for governor, when applicable, except as herein otherwise directed. [R., § 626; C., '51, § 396.]

OF PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

1212. By whom. 22 G. A., ch. 49, § 1. The election of any presidential elector may be contested by any eligible person who received votes for the same office for any of the causes enumerated in chapter six title five of the code of 1873.

1213. Court. 22 G. A., ch. 49, § 2. The court for the trial of contested elections for presidential electors shall consist of the chief justice of the supreme court who shall be presiding judge of the court and the four judges of the district court, not interested, being nearest the capital of the state — two of whom with the chief justice shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the court. If the chief justice should for any cause be unable to attend at the trial the next senior judge or the one longest on the supreme court bench if of equal rank shall preside in place of the chief justice and any question arising as to the membership of the court shall be determined by the members of the court not interested in the question. The secretary of state shall be the clerk of the court or in his absence or inability to act, the clerk of the supreme court shall be the clerk. Each member of the court before entering upon the discharge of his duties shall take an oath before the secretary of state or some officer qualified to administer oaths that he will support the constitution of the United States and that of the state of Iowa and that without fear, favor, affection or hope of reward he will, to the best of his knowledge and ability administer justice according to law and the facts in the case.

1214. Statement. 22 G. A., ch. 49, § 3. The contestant shall file the statement provided for in this chapter in the office of the secretary of state within ten days from the day on which the returns are canvassed by the state board of canvassers, and within the same time serve a copy of the same, with a notice of the contest, on the incumbent.

1215. Trial. 22 G. A., ch. 49, § 4. The clerk of the court shall immediately after the filing of the statement notify the judges specified in section two of this act [§ 1213], and fix a day for the organization of the court within three days thereafter and also notify the parties to the contest. The judges shall meet on the day fixed and organize the court and make and announce such rules for the trial of the case as they shall deem necessary for the protection of the rights of each party and a just and speedy trial of the case and commence the trial of the case as early as practicable thereafter and so arrange for and conduct the trial that a final determination of the same and judgment shall be rendered at least six days before the second Monday in January then next following.

1216. Judgment. 22 G. A., ch. 49, § 5. The judgment of the court shall determine which of the parties to the action is entitled to hold the office of presidential elector and shall be authenticated by the presiding judge and clerk of the court and filed with the secretary of state and the judgment so rendered shall constitute a final determination of the title to the office and a certificate of appointment shall be issued to the successful party as an elector.

1217. Other provisions. 22 G. A., ch. 49, § 6. Sections seven hundred and twenty-three, seven hundred and twenty-four and seven hundred and twenty-five of the code [§§ 1189-1191] shall apply to this act.

CHAPTER 7.

OF REMOVAL AND SUSPENSION FROM OFFICE.

1218. Causes. 746. All county and township officers may be charged, tried, and removed from office for the causes following:

1. For habitual or wilful neglect of duty;
2. For gross partiality;
3. For oppression;
4. For extortion;
5. For corruption;

6. For wilful maladministration in office;
7. Upon conviction of a felony;
8. For a failure to produce and fully account for all public funds and property in his hands at any inspection or settlement. [R., § 628; C., '51, § 397.]

[The word "partiality" in the second subdivision is erroneously printed "impartiality" in the Code.]

1219. By whom made. 747. Any person may make such a charge, and the district court shall have exclusive original jurisdiction thereof by the service of original notice. [R., § 629; C., '51, § 398.]

1220. Proceedings. 748. The proceedings shall be as nearly like those in other actions at law as the nature of the case admits, excepting where otherwise provided in this chapter. [R., § 630; C., '51, § 399.]

1221. Petition. 749. The petition shall be by an accuser against the accused, and shall contain the charges with the necessary specifications under them and be verified by any elector. [R., § 631; C., '51, § 400.]

1222. Notice. 750. It will be sufficient that the notice require the accused to appear and answer the petition of A. B. (naming the accuser), for "official misdemeanors;" but a copy of the petition must be served with the notice. [R., § 632; C., '51, § 401.]

1223. Clerk of court. 751. If the person who holds the office of clerk of the district [and circuit] court is the accused in either of those capacities, his removal or suspension shall operate in both courts and the petition may be filed with the county auditor, and both he and the clerk may issue subpoenas for witnesses, and the county auditor shall deliver the papers to the judge of the district court, on its sitting. [R., § 634; C., '51, § 403.]

1224. Suspension. 752. If a continuance of the action take place beyond the return term, the court may suspend the accused from the functions of his office until the determination of the matter, if sufficient cause appear from testimony, or affidavits then presented; and if such suspension take place, the board of supervisors shall temporarily fill the office by appointment. [R., § 635; C., '51, § 404.]

In case of suspension of sheriff the person appointed by the board, as here provided, and not the deputy-sheriff (as provided by § 1239 in the case of disability of the sheriff), is authorized to act: McCue v. Circuit Court, 51-60.

The board may so appoint in case an officer is suspended, under § 1228, although the petition provided for in § 1229 be not filed at the term: Ibid.

1225. Filling place. 753. When the accused is an officer of the court and is suspended, the court may supply his place by appointment for the term. [R., § 638; C., '51, § 407.]

1226. Trial; judgment. 754. The question of fact shall be tried as in other actions, and if the accused is found guilty, judgment shall be entered removing the officer from his office, and declaring the latter vacant; and a copy thereof shall be certified to the county auditor, who shall cause it to be entered in the election book. [R., § 636; C., '51, § 405.]

1227. Costs. 755. The accuser and the accused are liable to costs as in other actions. [R., § 637; C., '51, § 406.]

1228. Suspension of clerk or sheriff. 756. The judges of the district [and circuit] courts in their respective districts, shall have authority, on their own motion, to suspend from office any clerk of those courts, or sheriff of a county, for any of the causes mentioned in this chapter coming to their own knowledge, or manifestly appearing from the papers or testimony in any proceeding in court. [R., § 639; C., '51, § 408.]

The action is commenced by the district court taking cognizance of the matter and entering an order requiring the district attorney to file a petition, and such action operates as a suspension, although the petition be not filed at that term. The vacancy so caused may be filled by the board of supervisors under § 1224: McCue v. Circuit Court, 51-60.

1229. Petition filed. 757. Upon such suspension the court may direct the district [county] attorney to file a petition in the name of the county; but it need not be verified. [R., § 640; C., '51, § 409.]

1230. Suspension certified. 758. Such order of suspension shall be certified to the county auditor and be by him entered in the election book. [R., § 641; C., '51, § 410.]

SUSPENSION OF STATE OFFICERS.

1231. Accounts examined. 759. Whenever, in the judgment of the governor, the public service requires it, he shall appoint a commission of three competent accountants, who shall examine the books, papers, vouchers, moneys, securities, and other documents in the possession or under the control of any state officer, shall make out a full, complete and specific statement of the transactions of said officer, with, for, or on behalf of the state, showing the true balances in each case and report the same to the governor with such suggestions as they may deem proper. [R., §§ 46, 47, 55, 56.]

1232. Defalcation; suspension. 760. Whenever any commission appointed as aforesaid, or under the provisions of section one hundred and thirty-two, of chapter nine, of title two of this code [§ 167], shall report that any officer has been guilty of any defalcation or misappropriation of the public money, or that his accounts, papers, and books are improperly or unsafely kept, and that the state is liable to suffer loss thereby, the governor shall forthwith suspend such officer from the exercise of his office, and require him to deliver all the money, books, papers, and other property of the state to the governor to be disposed of as hereinafter provided. [R., § 48.]

The provisions of this statute contemplate suspension and not an entire removal of the officer, and the section is therefore not unconstitutional as applied to officers whose election and term of office are provided for by Const., art. 4, sec. 22: Brown v. Duffus, 66-193.

1233. Consequences. 761. After such suspension, it shall be unlawful for such officer to exercise or attempt to exercise any of the functions of his office until such suspension shall be revoked, and any attempt to exercise said office after such suspension, shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and shall subject the offender for each offense to the penalty of not more than one year's imprisonment in the county jail, and not more than one thousand dollars fine, to be recovered and enforced as provided by law. [R., § 49.]

1234. Temporary appointment. 762. In every such case of suspension, the governor shall appoint some suitable person to fill, temporarily, the office, and such person having qualified as required by law, shall perform all the duties and enjoy all the rights to the said office belonging, until the removal of the suspension of his predecessor or the election of a successor. [R., § 51.]

1235. Duty of governor. 763. Whenever the governor shall suspend any such public officer, he shall direct the proper legal steps to be taken to indemnify the state from loss. [R., § 52.]

1236. Compensation of commissioners. 764. The commissioners provided for in this chapter shall each receive the sum of three dollars per day, for the time actually employed in the performance of their duties. [R., § 53.]

1237. Powers. 765; 16 G. A., ch. 20. Said commissioners shall have power, when in session to administer oaths, to issue subpoenas, to call any person before them to testify in reference to any fact connected with their investigation; also to require such person to produce any papers or books which the district court might require to be produced. [R., § 54.]

CHAPTER 8.

OF DEPUTIES.

1238. What officers may appoint. 766; 19 G. A., ch. 117; 22 G. A., ch. 36, § 1. The secretary, auditor, and treasurer of state, the superintendent of public instruction, the register of the state land office, clerk of the supreme court, county auditor, treasurer, sheriff, surveyor, and recorder may appoint a deputy and each clerk of the district court may appoint one deputy or in counties having a population in excess of thirty thousand inhabitants more than one if so ordered by the court, for whose acts he shall be responsible, and from whom he shall require bonds; which appointment must be in writing and be approved by the officer who has the approval of the principal's bond, and shall be revocable by writing under the principal's hand, and both the appointment and the revocation shall be filed and kept in the office of the secretary of state and county auditor respectively. [R., §§ 421, 643, 645; C., '51, §§ 411, 414; 9 G. A., ch. 5; 12 G. A., ch. 115; ch. 134, § 2; 14 G. A., ch. 38.]

The sheriff is responsible for acts of his deputy, and when the latter collects money on execution and fails to pay it over to the party entitled thereto, an action should be brought against the sheriff himself. The bond of the deputy is for the protection of his principal: Brayton v. Town, 12-346.

The deputy-sheriff has no original power, but acts simply as a representative of the sheriff, who is his principal, and who is responsible for the manner in which he performs the duty assigned to him: Headington v. Langland, 65-276.

Where a deputy treasurer and book-keeper was employed by the board of supervisors, held, that for defalcation of such officer, without fault on the part of the treasurer, the latter was not liable: Scott County v. Fluke, 34-317.

1239. Powers of deputy. 767; 16 G. A., ch. 4. In the absence or disability of the principal, the deputy shall perform the duties of his principal pertaining to his own office; but when any officer is required to act in conjunction with or in the place of another officer, his deputy cannot supply his place; provided, that in counties having two county seats, the deputy may hereafter perform any and all acts of the principal. [R., § 643; C., '51, § 412.]

During the absence or disability of the principal the deputy stands in his place, and any official acts performed by him are regarded as having been performed by the principal. Therefore, held, that service of notice of appeal upon the deputy clerk, evidenced by an acceptance of such notice signed in the name of the clerk by the deputy, was sufficient: Sanxey v. Iowa City Glass Co., 63-542.

The statutory provision that the deputy shall perform the duties of the principal pertaining to his office in the absence or disability of the principal was not designed to withhold from the deputy the power to perform such duties except in the absence or disability of such principal. The deputy may act in the presence of the principal as well: Moore v. McKinley, 60-367.

The sheriff is not bound by service of notice which is accepted by his deputy, acceptance of service not being an official act: Chapin v. Pinkerton, 58-236.

Where the duties of a public officer are of a ministerial character they may be discharged by deputy; duties of a judicial character cannot be so discharged. The deputy has the right to subscribe the name of his principal, and the act of the deputy in the name of his principal, within the scope of his authority, is the act of his principal. And held, that a deputy clerk had authority in the name of the principal to certify to the acknowledgment of a deed under § 3128: Abrams v. Irvine, 9-87; or to a copy of a judgment record: Greosons v. Davis, 9-219.

The deputy clerk has the same power to administer oaths as his principal: Wood v. Bailey, 12-46. And it is not necessary that the absence or inability of the principal should be stated: Finn v. Rose, 12-565.

The deputy county treasurer has, prima facie, authority to sign the name of his principal to a certificate of redemption from tax sale: Byington v. Allen, 11-3.

As to action of deputy in place of sheriff in drawing jurors, see § 318 and notes.

The suspension from office of a sheriff, as provided in § 1228, is not such disability on his part as will authorize the deputy to act in his place. In such case his duties are to be performed by the person appointed under §§ 1224-5: McCue v. Circuit Court, etc., 51-60.

Where acts required by law to be performed by certain officers are not performed by them, but by unauthorized persons, it is as if such acts were not done at all. So held in regard to the action of a deputy-sheriff in connection with the selection of the grand jury, the statute at that time in force providing for the performance of such acts by the sheriff only: State v. Brandt, 41-593.

1240. Who may be appointed. 768. The secretary, treasurer, and auditor of state can neither of them appoint either of the others his deputy; nor can either the clerk of the district court, auditor, recorder, treasurer, or sheriff of a county, appoint either of the others. [R., § 644; C., '51, § 413.]

1241. Sheriff. 769. The sheriff may appoint such number of deputies as he sees fit. [R., § 646; C., '51, § 415.]

1242. Oath. 770. Each deputy shall take the same oath as his principal, which shall be indorsed upon and filed with the certificate of his appointment. [R., § 647; C., '51, § 416.]

1243. Compensation. 771. When a county officer receiving a salary is compelled by the pressure of the business of his office to employ a deputy, the board of supervisors may make a reasonable allowance to such deputy. [R., § 648; C., '51, § 417.]

The allowance to the deputy may be fixed, at the time he is appointed, in the form of a stipulated salary, and in such case the amount fixed will limit the recovery: but where no allowance is fixed the county must pay a reasonable compensation for the necessary services rendered, and the payment is not left discretionary: Bradley v. Jefferson County, 4 G. Gr., 300; Harvey v. Tama County, 46-522; Washington County v. Jones, 45-260, 265. But a deputy employed merely for the personal accommodation of the officer cannot recover compensation from the county: Harvey v. Tama County, 46-522.

The officer himself cannot recover against the county for money paid as compensation for a deputy. The county is liable to the deputy and not to the principal: Mahaska County v. Ingalls, 14-170.

The deputy clerk may recover compensation under this section in addition to the salary allowed the clerk as provided by § 5036: Washington County v. Jones, 45-260, 265.

Where an officer accepts his position with a knowledge of the work to be done and the remuneration promised, while he may employ assistants, he cannot recover compensation for them: Benton v. Decatur County, 36-504.

The county is under no legal obligation to reimburse the county auditor an amount paid out by him for services of a deputy: Ibid.

CHAPTER 9.

OF ADDITIONAL SECURITY AND THE DISCHARGE OF SURETIES.

1244. Additional security. 772. Whenever the governor shall deem it advisable that the bonds of any state officer should be increased and the security enlarged, or a new bond given, he shall notify said officer of the fact, the amount of new or additional security to be given, and the time when the same shall be executed, which said new security shall be approved and filed as provided by law. [R., § 660.]

1245. New bond. 773. Any officer or board who has the approval of another officer's bond, when of opinion that the public security requires it, upon giving ten days' notice to show cause to the contrary, may require him to give such additional security by a new bond, as may be deemed requisite, within a reasonable time to be prescribed. [R., §§ 349, 350; C., '51, §§ 418, 419.]

1246. Effect. 774. If a requisition made under either of the foregoing sections be complied with, both the old and the new security shall be in force; and if not complied with, the office shall become and be declared vacant, and the proceeding be certified to the proper officer to be recorded in the election book or township record. [R., §§ 651, 661; C., '51, § 420.]

1247. Sureties relieved. 775. When any surety on the bond of a civil officer conceives himself in danger by remaining surety, and desires to be relieved of his obligation, he may petition the approving officer or board above referred to for relief, stating the ground of his apprehension. [R., § 652; C., '51, § 421.]

1248. Notice. 776. The surety shall give the principal at least twenty-four hours' notice of the presenting and filing of the petition, with a copy thereof. At the expiration of this notice, the approving officer may hear the matter or may postpone the hearing as the case permits or requires. [R., § 653; C., '51, § 422.]

1249. Hearing; order; effect. 777. If, upon the hearing, there appears substantial ground for apprehension, the approving officer or board may order the principal to give a new bond and to supply the place of the petitioning surety within a reasonable time to be prescribed; and upon such new bond being given, the petitioning surety upon the former bond shall be declared discharged from liability on the same for future acts; which order of discharge shall be entered in the proper election book, but the bond will continue binding upon those who do not petition for relief. [R., § 655; C., '51, § 424.]

Sureties upon the new bond are not liable before such new bond was executed: Thompson v. Dickerson, 22-360.

1250. Failure to comply. 778. If the new bond is not given as required, the office shall be declared vacant, and the order to that effect entered in the proper election book. [R., § 656; C., '51, § 425.]

1251. Justice of the peace. 779. If the proceedings relate to a justice of the peace and he is removed from office, the county auditor shall notify the proper township trustees or clerk of the removal. [R., § 657; C., '51, § 426.]

1252. Subpœnas. 780. The approving officer may issue subpœnas in his official name for witnesses, compel their attendance and swear them. [R., § 658; C., '51, § 427.]

CHAPTER 10.

OF VACANCIES AND SPECIAL ELECTIONS.

1253. Civil office, when vacant. 781. Every civil office shall be vacant upon the happening of either of the following events at any time before the expiration of the term of such office, as follows:

1. The resignation of the incumbent;
2. His death;
3. His removal from office;
4. The decision of a competent tribunal declaring his office vacant;
5. His ceasing to be a resident of the state, district, county, or township in which the duties of his office are to be exercised, or for which he may have been elected;
6. A failure to elect at the proper election, there being no incumbent to continue in office until his successor is elected and qualified, nor other provision relating thereto;
7. A forfeiture of office as provided by any law of the state;
8. Conviction of an infamous crime, or of any public offense involving the violation of his oath of office;
9. The acceptance of a commission to any military office, either in the militia of this state or in the service of the United States which requires the incumbent in the civil office to exercise his military duties out of the state for a period not less than sixty days. [R., § 662; C., '51, § 429; 9 G. A., ch. 54.]

A resignation in writing made to the proper officer creates a vacancy without any formal acceptance on the part of such officer: Gates v. Delaware County, 12-405.

The acceptance by an officer of another office which is incompatible with that which he holds would vacate the one first held; but the incompatibility must be such as arises from the nature of the offices or their relation to each other; and held that the office of captain in the military service of the United States was not so incompatible with that of district attorney as that an acceptance of the one should necessarily make a vacancy in the other. (Decided before the passage of 9 G. A., ch. 54, being subd. 9 of this section): Bryan v. Cattell, 15-538.

The legislature may add to or change the methods in which vacancies may occur, and make such changes applicable to existing officers and those holding them: Ibid.

1254. Resignations. 782; 17 G. A., ch. 107, § 1. Resignation of civil officers may be made as follows:

1. By the governor to the general assembly, if in session; if not, to the secretary of state;

2. By senators and representatives in congress, and by all officers elected by the qualified voters of the state or chosen by the general assembly, and by judges of courts of record, and district [county] attorneys, to the governor;

3. By senators and representatives in the general assembly, to the presiding officer of their respective bodies, if in session, who shall immediately transmit information of the same to the governor; if such bodies are not in session, to the governor;

4. By all county officers to the board of supervisors, and by members of the board of supervisors, to the county auditor;

5. By all township officers, to the township clerk; and by the township clerk to the township trustees, or any one of them;

6. By all officers holding by appointment, to the officer or body by whom they were appointed. [R., § 663; C., '51, § 430; 10 G. A., ch. 69; 13 G. A., ch. 148, § 6.]

1255. Vacancies. 783. Vacancies shall be filled as follows:

In the offices of clerk and reporter of the supreme court, by the supreme court;

In all other state offices, and in the membership of any board or commission created by the state, where no other method is specially provided, by the governor;

In county offices by the board of supervisors; and in the membership of such board by the county clerk, auditor, and recorder;

In township offices by the trustees, but where the offices of the three trustees are all vacant, the clerk shall appoint, and if there be no clerk, the county auditor shall appoint. [R., § 664; C., '51, § 436; 11 G. A., ch. 88; 12 G. A., ch. 86, § 2; ch. 137, § 3; 13 G. A., ch. 47; ch. 148, § 6.]

See Const., art. 4, § 10.

The governor has no power to create a vacancy for the purpose of filling it. There must be a vacancy before the right or power to fill it can exist: Bryan v. Cattell, 15-538.

Where an elective officer is appointed by the board of supervisors to fill a vacancy he is not subject to removal by such board at pleasure, but is entitled to hold for the residue of the unexpired term unless removed for cause: State ex rel. v. Chatburn, 63-659.

In case of failure of an officer to enter upon his office at the time provided by law there is a vacancy which should be filled by appointment. The incumbent is not entitled to hold over, and the sureties on his bond are not liable if he hold over after the term for which they are bound has ceased: Wapello County v. Bigham, 10-39.

1256. Term continues. 784. Every officer elected or appointed for a fixed term, shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified, unless the statute under which he is elected or appointed expressly declares the contrary; provided, that this section shall not be construed in any way to prevent the removal or suspension of such officer during or after his term, in cases provided by law. [C., '51, § 241; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 75.]

An officer who holds over after his term on account of a failure to elect a successor only holds until the vacancy in the office can be legally filled by election: Dyer v. Bagwell, 54-487.
See Const., art. 3, § 3; art. 4, §§ 2, 15, 22; art. 5, §§ 3, 5, 12, 13.

1257. Appointments. 785. Appointments under the provisions of this chapter shall be in writing, and continue until the next election at which the vacancy can be filled and until a successor is elected and qualified, and be filed with the secretary or proper township clerk, or in the proper county office, respectively. [R., § 667; C., '51, § 439.]

1258. Qualification. 786. Persons appointed to office as herein provided, shall qualify in the same manner as those elected, within a time to be prescribed in their appointments, and the provisions of the chapter relating to qualification for office are extended to them. [R., § 668; C., '51, § 440.]

1259. Removed. 787. A person appointed as herein contemplated, may be removed by the officer appointing, and no person can be appointed who has been removed from office within one year. [R., § 669; C., '51, § 441.]

Where an elective officer is appointed by the board of supervisors to fill a vacancy he is not subject to removal by such board at pleasure, but is entitled under Const., art. 11, § 6, to hold for the residue of the unexpired term unless removed for cause: State ex rel. v. Chalburn, 63-659.

1260. Possession of office. 788. When a vacancy occurs in a public office, possession shall be taken of the office room, and of the books, papers, and all things pertaining to the office, to be held until the election or appointment and qualification of a successor, as follows:

Of the office of the county auditor, by the clerk of the district court;

Of that of the clerk or treasurer, by the county auditor;

Of any of the state officers, by the governor; or in his absence or inability at the time of the occurrence, as follows:

Of the secretary, by the treasurer;

Of the auditor, register of the land office, or superintendent of public instruction, by the secretary;

Of the treasurer, by the secretary and auditor, who shall make an inventory of the money and warrants therein, sign the same, and transmit it to the governor if he be in the state; and the secretary shall take the keys of the safes and desks after depositing the books, papers, money, and warrants therein, and the auditor shall take the key of the office room. [R., § 671; C., '51, § 444.]

1261. Election to fill vacancies. 789. Vacancies occurring in the township offices, ten days; in county offices, fifteen days; and in all other public elective offices, thirty days prior to a general election, shall be filled thereat. When a vacancy occurs in the office of representative in congress, or senator or representative in the general assembly, and the body in which such vacancy exists will convene prior to such election, the governor shall order a special election to fill such vacancy at the earliest practicable time, and ten days' notice of such election shall be given. [R., § 672; C., '51, §§ 35, 431-5.]

1263. Vacancy in board. 17 G. A., ch. 107, § 2. In case of a vacancy from any cause, other than resignation or expiration of term, occurring in any of the boards of trustees or directors of state institutions, it shall be the duty of the secretary of the board wherein the vacancy shall happen, to notify the governor thereof immediately; provided, that this section shall not apply to vacancies in the board of regents of the state university.

1264. Duty of governor. 17 G. A., ch. 107, § 3. Upon receiving notice of vacancies which are required to be filled by the general assembly, the governor shall at once notify that body thereof, if it be in session, and immediately upon its next convening if it be not. He shall also notify the board of regents of all vacancies occurring therein by resignation.

SPECIAL ELECTIONS.

1265. Provisions for. 791. The provisions relating to general elections, shall govern special elections except where otherwise provided by law. [R., § 673; C., '51, § 26.]

1266. Canvass. 792. In all cases where special elections are held to fill vacancies in the offices of senator or representative in the general assembly, or representative in congress, the board of county canvassers shall meet at twelve o'clock m., on the second day after said election, to canvass the votes cast at such election, and the auditor, within four days after such election, shall transmit to the secretary of state an abstract of the votes cast at said election, if there be more than one county in the district. [9 G. A., ch. 88, §§ 1, 3.]

1267. State canvass. 793. Within fifteen days after said election, in the case last mentioned, the board of state canvassers shall meet and canvass the votes cast to fill such vacancy, and if the returns have not been received from all the counties composing said district, they may adjourn to such day as they deem necessary, not exceeding ten, for the purpose of receiving said returns. [Same, § 4.]

1268. In office of justice. 794. Whenever a vacancy occurs in the office of a justice of the peace or constable more than thirty days prior to any general election, the county auditor shall immediately notify the clerk of the township in which the vacancy exists, and the township clerk, within five days after receiving such notice, shall notify each of the trustees of his township in writing, fixing the time and place that they shall meet for the purpose of filling such vacancy by appointment. Such notice may be served by any constable of the township, and shall be served at least five days prior to such meeting. [11 G. A., ch. 137, §§ 1, 2.]

1269. Trustees to appoint. 795. The trustees shall meet in accordance with such notice and fill such vacancy, and in five days after such appointment has been made, the township clerk shall record it in the township record book, and shall cause a notice to be served upon the person so appointed, informing him of his appointment, by any constable in the township in the manner prescribed by law for the service of notices, and any person so appointed and notified, shall qualify within ten days after such notice has been served upon him. The auditor may approve of the bond of a justice of the peace and constable so appointed, by the recommendation of the sufficiency of the sureties upon such bond, signed by any member of the board of supervisors. [Same, §§ 3, 4, 5.]

TITLE VI.

OF REVENUE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE ASSESSMENT OF TAXES.

1270. Levy; amount of. 796; 15 G. A., ch. 28; 18 G. A., ch. 13; 20 G. A., ch. 182; 22 G. A., ch. 43. The board of supervisors of each county shall, annually, at their September session, levy the following taxes upon the assessed value of the taxable property in the county:

1. For state revenue, one and a half mills on a dollar, or such rate as may be directed by the executive council, not exceeding two mills on a dollar;

2. For ordinary county revenue, including support of the poor, not more than four mills on a dollar and a poll tax of fifty cents; provided, however, that in counties having a population of twenty thousand and less, excepting counties having an area exceeding nine hundred square miles, such levy may be six mills or less; provided, however, that in any county in which the levy is herein limited to four mills, the board of supervisors may submit the question of increasing the same to six mills or less to a vote of the electors at any general election, and if at such election a majority of the electors declare in favor of such increase, the board of supervisors may levy the same for the year following such election at the next meeting at which the general levy is made;

3. For support of schools, not less than one, nor more than three mills on a dollar;

4. For making and repairing bridges, not more than three mills on a dollar. [R., § 710; C., '51, § 454; Ex. S., 8 G. A., ch. 24; 11 G. A., ch. 87, § 1.]

As to what action of the board is sufficient to constitute a levy, see West v. Whitaker, 37-598.

These provisions contain and confer the only power given by law to the board of supervisors to levy county taxes for any purpose, except under §§ 430 and 433. Section 4274 does not authorize the levy of a tax in excess of the limit here imposed: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39-134.

The board have power to use the bridge tax in the erection of bridges within city limits: Oskaloosa Steam-Engine Works v. Pottawattamie County, 72-134.

EXEMPTIONS.

1271. Property exempt. 797; 21 G. A., ch. 97. The following classes of property are not to be taxed, and they may be omitted from the assessments herein required:

1. The property of the United States and of this state, including university, agricultural college and school lands, and all property leased to the state; the property of a county, township, city, incorporated town or school district, when devoted entirely to the public use and not held for pecuniary profit; public grounds, including all places for the burial of the dead; fire-engines, and all implements for extinguishing fires, with the grounds used exclusively for their buildings and for the meetings of the fire companies; all public libraries, grounds and buildings of literary, scientific, benevolent, agricultural, and religious institutions, and societies devoted solely to the appropriate objects of these institutions, not exceeding six hundred and forty acres in extent, and not leased or otherwise used with a view to pecuniary profit; and all property leased to agricultural, charitable institutions, and benevolent societies, and so devoted during the term of such lease; provided, that all deeds by which such property is held shall be duly filed for record before the property therein described shall be omitted from the assessment;

2. The books, papers, and apparatus belonging to the above institutions, used solely for the purposes above contemplated, and the like property of students in any such institution, used for their education;

3. Money and credits belonging exclusively to such institutions and devoted solely to sustaining them, but not exceeding in amount or income the sum prescribed by their charter;

4. Animals not hereafter specified, the wool shorn from sheep belonging to the person giving the list, his farm produce harvested within one year previous to the listing, private libraries not exceeding three hundred dollars in value, family pictures, kitchen furniture, beds and bedding requisite for each family, all wearing apparel in actual use, and all food provided for the family; but no person from whom a compensation for board or lodging is received or expected, is to be considered a member of a family within the intent of this clause;

5. The polls or estates, or both, of persons who by reason of age or infirmity may, in the opinion of the assessor, be unable to contribute to the public revenue; such opinion, and the facts on which it is based, being in all cases reported to the board of equalization by the assessor, or any other person, and subject to reversal by them;

6. The farming utensils of any person who makes his livelihood by farming, and the tools of any mechanic, not in either case to exceed three hundred dollars in value;

7. Government lands entered or located, or lands purchased from this state, shall not be taxed for the year in which the entry, location or purchase is made;

8. The homestead, not to exceed five hundred dollars in value, of the widow of any federal soldier or sailor who died during the late war while in service or who has since died of wounds received or disease contracted while in such service. Provided, that the provisions of this act [subdivision] shall only apply to persons who do not own other real estate than such homestead. [R., § 711; C., '51, § 455; 9 G. A., ch. 31, § 1; 10 G. A., ch. 79, § 1.]

[As to the taxation of lands granted to railroads, see § 1282.]

Public property: Lands held by the United States in trust for grantees are subject to taxation as property of such grantees. A valid legal title is not necessary to authorize taxation: Stockdale v. Treasurer of Webster County, 12-536.

Prior to the expiration of five years from the filing of a declaratory statement in case of an entry of public lands under the homestead law, a person seeking to avail himself of the provisions of the homestead act acquires no taxable interest in the land: Moriarty v. Boone County, 39-634.

Where public lands were entered by forged scrip, and the entry subsequently canceled on that account and a new entry allowed, held, that the lands were not taxable in the hands of the pre-emptor prior to the valid entry: Reynolds v. Plymouth County, 55-90.

If a party gets a land warrant from the government which, because of his own fraud, is canceled, but afterwards by a proper application gets a warrant giving him an equity in the land, he is not liable for taxes on the land from the time between the issue of the first and second warrants: Bronson v. Kukuk, 3 Dillon, 490; Pitts v. Clay, 27 Fed. Rep., 635.

In such a case the second warrant cannot be regarded as a substitute for the first, nor is there any estoppel against the party obtaining the warrant towards a purchaser under a tax sale from asserting the invalidity of the first warrant: Ibid.

A tract of land omitted by mistake in making entry under a certificate, and which was subsequently, by compromise, entirely omitted from such location, another tract being substituted in its place, held not subject to taxation: Scott v. Chickasaw County, 46-253.

The provisions of the act of congress admitting Iowa into the Union, exempting bounty lands granted for military services from taxation for a term of three years from the date of the patent, held not applicable to lands entered upon military land warrants by the assignees thereof: Sands v. Adams County, 11-577.

Under similar provisions, held, that the actual date of the patent when issued, and not the date of the entry under which title vested in the grantee, was to be considered in determining the time when the land became taxable in the hands of patentees: Fisher v. Wisner, 34-447.

Where lands granted by the United States to aid in the improvement of the Des Moines river were conveyed to the state, to be conveyed by it to the parties entitled thereto as the work should progress, held, that until such conveyance was actually made by the state the lands were not subject to taxation: Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Polk County, 10-1.

Under the railroad land grant acts, by which, upon the completion of a twenty-mile section of road, the company became entitled to certain sections of public land as therein provided, held, that such land was taxable in the hands of the company from the time of the completion of the section of road, although certificates for it were not obtained until afterward: Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21-221; Lubuque & P. R. Co. v. Webster County, 21-235.

Facts in a certain case held not to show that the lands were reserved and the title withheld by competent authority, and therefore held that the lands were taxable: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Fitchpatrick, 52-244.

But where at the time the railroad became entitled to land under the grant it was occupied by a party claiming a homestead entry thereon, held, that it did not thereupon become subject to taxation, the United States holding it in trust for one or the other of the parties, and having still a duty to perform with reference thereto: Dickerson v. Yetzer, 53-681.

The fact that during nearly a month there was no adverse claim, and during that time the railroad company neglected to procure title, held not to render the land taxable to the company, in the absence of any showing that the neglect to procure title was for the purpose of escaping taxation: Ibid.

Railroad lands earned by the construction of the road, but not certified, and held by the government on account of conflicting claims, are not taxable while so withheld, and a tax title acquired at the sale thereof during such time is void: Doe v. Iowa R. Land Co., 54-657; Grant v. Iowa R. Land Co., 54-673.

Land which is held by the government to which a company or individual may ultimately acquire title by reason of a grant, but which has never been certified or set apart, and is incapable of identification, is not subject to taxation: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Woodbury County, 29-247.

Under a grant of land to a state to aid in the construction of a railway, which lands were by the state granted to the company, held, that a patent by the governor to the company was evidence that the lands conveyed thereby were then earned by such company, and that the patent issued as soon as the lands were earned, and that parol evidence was only admissible to show that the company had fraudulently presented the issuance of a patent at the proper time for the purpose of avoiding payment of taxes upon the land earned: McGregor & M. R. R. Co. v. Brown, 39-655.

Where a railroad land grant provided that the property be patented by the governor to the company entitled to the same upon the completion of its road, held, that, in the absence of any showing of fraud upon the part of the company in causing a delay in the conveyance of title, the land became subject to taxation only upon actual conveyance by the governor, although such conveyance was delayed beyond the time when the company was entitled to the same: Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co. v. Plymouth County, 40-609.

The property of the state is not subject to special assessment for improvement of streets: Polk County Savings Bank v. State, 69-24.

Agricultural college lands leased for a term of years, with a provision for forfeiture on non-payment of rents, and with the privilege to lessee of purchasing at the expiration of the lease, held not subject to taxation: Trustees of Agl. College v. Webster County, 34-141.

Property of counties: The statutory provision that property of a county shall be exempt from taxation when devoted entirely to the public use, and not held for pecuniary profit, amounts to a declaration that before there was such statutory provision lands held by one county situated within another were not subject to taxation: Guthrie County v. Carroll County, 34-108.

Taxes levied by the county upon lands to which it has an equitable title are void, and the purchaser thereof at tax sale, being affected with notice of such fact, acquires no title: Gibson v. Howe, 37-168.

Land acquired and held by a county in order to secure to it an amount due from a defaulting officer is not taxable: Ibid.

Where a county repudiates a contract of sale made by it, it cannot subject the land to taxation: Moore v. Morledge, 42-26.

Swamp lands owned by the county at the time of an assessment of real property are not subject to taxation as against a subsequent purchaser thereof: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Story County, 36-48.

And where the sale of such land did not embrace the entire amount thereof held by the county, and the portions of the land sold were not yet determined upon, held, that the portions afterwards conveyed in pursuance of such sale were not subject to taxation until they were designated: Ibid.

Swamp land is not liable to taxation so long as it is held and owned by the county. Where it is conveyed by the county after the close of the assessment, it should be passed as not subject to taxation for that year: Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45-453.

Swamp lands belonging to one county situated in another would be exempt from taxation were it not for the provision inserted in § 1274 declaring such lands taxable: Guthrie County v. Carroll County, 34-108.

Property devoted to public use: Property devised to trustees of a town in trust for the improvement of a public park, to be held as a perpetual fund for that purpose, interest and revenues only to be used, is not exempt from taxation in the hands of such trustees. To be exempt, the property in such case must be devoted entirely to public use and not held for pecuniary profit: Mitchellville v. Board of Supervisors, 64-554.

The exemption of the property of a school district, used for school purposes, from taxation, by reason of its being property devoted to a public use, extends only to general taxes and does not relieve it from a special tax assessed by a municipal corporation within which it is situated for building sidewalks: Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55-150.

The property of a water company which is authorized to furnish water to a city and its citizens, its rates being under the control of the council and its property being subject to be bought by the city at a certain price, is not public property in such sense as to be exempt from taxation: Appeal of Des Moines Water Co., 48-324.

Property of educational and religious institutions: The residence of a professor owned by a college, and a parsonage owned by a church, are so devoted to the appropriate objects of such institutions as to be exempt from taxation: Trustees of Griswold College v. State, 46-275.

Where the officiating pastor of a church held the legal title to certain lots in his own name, and allowed the same to be used by such church and the school connected therewith, without charge, held, that the property was not exempt from taxation: Laurent v. Muscatine, 59-404.

Property conveyed to a religious society as a gift, with no conditions as to the use to which it shall be devoted, remaining vacant and unimproved at the time of taxation and sale, is not exempt: Kirk v. St. Thomas Church, 70-287.

Where property was acquired by a religious institution under such circumstances as to be exempt from taxation, but had already been subject to taxation for seven months of the year, held, that its acquisition by such association did not relieve it from liability for the taxes of the year in which it was thus procured: First Cong. Church v. Linn County, 70-396.

The exemption from taxation in such a case was not intended to act retrospectively, and exempt from prior taxes or prior liability for taxes, but only to exempt the property from future liability: Ibid.

Church property leased for other purposes is subject to taxation: See § 3092.

Burying grounds: As to a certain portion of property in controversy, which it was shown was used as a burying ground, held, that it was exempt from taxation and a tax sale thereof was void; but as to the balance of the property, which was held in trust for a church but was not used as church property, held, that it was not exempt: Mulroy v. Churchman, 52-238.

Property of charitable and benevolent societies: Where a charitable society invested its "widows' and orphans' fund" in real property, which was leased for business purposes, the proceeds being strictly applied to the proper objects of the fund, held, that such property was not exempt from taxation: Fort Des Moines Lodge v. Polk County, 56-34.

Tools: The term "tools" in this section, held to include the press, types, imposing stones and other implements of a printer necessary to carry on his business: Smith v. Osburn, 53-474.

Property of insane persons: Where the assessor omits to assess the land of an insane person on the ground that it is within the exemption of this section in favor of persons who, by reason of age or infirmity, are unable to contribute to the public revenue, the treasurer has no authority to enter such land for taxation, the act of the assessor being only reversible by the board of equalization: Ordway v. Smith, 53-589.

Construction of exemptions: The legislature having declared the liability of property to taxation, courts are not justified in indulging in fine distinctions in defeating the legislative will. The exemption must rest upon some clear and just ground: Morseman v. Younkin, 37-350.

A statute exempting property from execution or order of sale upon a judgment or decree of court cannot be construed to exempt it from taxes, or sale therefor: Slane v. McCarrroll, 40-61.

If property taxable under a previous general statute is afterwards claimed to be exempted by a later statute, the exemption must be shown to be clearly and unequivocally expressed: Davenport Nat. Bank v. Mittelbuscher, 4 McCrary, 361.

An exemption from taxes being an exception is strictly construed; therefore, held, that such exemption applied only to general taxes and not to special assessments for local improvements: Cassady v. Hammer, 62-359.

Taxation is the rule, exemption the exception, and the statute under which exemption is claimed should therefore be strictly construed: Trustees of Griswold College v. State, 46-275; Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55-150.

Exemption from taxation is not in the nature of a contract between the state and the property owner, and does not prevent subsequent legislation altering the law and removing the exemption: Shiner v. Jacobs, 62-392.

Therefore, held, that an exemption to the owner of land by reason of the planting of trees thereon might be limited by a subsequent statute applicable to land planted before the passage of the later act: Ibid.

Tax sale of exempt property: The purchaser at tax sale of property exempt from taxation acquires no lien thereon for taxes voluntarily paid for subsequent years, although the property had passed to a third person who could not claim the exemption: Byington v. Wood, 12-479.

Lands purchased from state or U. S.: The terms "entry" and "location" when applied to acquisition of lands from the government have a fixed and certain meaning, and cannot be applied to the grant of land by a congressional act, and therefore lands acquired by a congressional grant operating in present to pass the title without conveyance or other assurance are not exempt from taxation under subd. 7 of this section: Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654; Goodnow v. Litchfield, 67-691.

It has not been decided by the courts of Iowa, in such cases, that government lands are not taxable until a year after they are patented. The time of patenting does not affect the question as to their taxability: Ibid. (Criticising Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S., 773.)

Therefore, held, that lands claimed by railroad companies under grants from the state in 1858, by virtue of a supposed grant from congress, which grant was made effectual by act of congress in the year 1861, were taxable for the year 1861. Ibid.

It was held, however, in a similar case by the supreme court of the United States, that such lands were not taxable until the year 1862: Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S., 773.

Although the technical title to lands above the Racoon forks, claimed under the Des Moines river grant, did not pass from the United States until the passage of the additional act of 1861, yet the claimants to such lands under the original grant had such title that the lands in their hands were subject to taxation before the passage of the later act. The confirmatory act of 1861 related back to the first grant and perfected the title from that date: Stryker v. Polk County, 22-131; Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40-66.

The latter case was reversed, however, in the supreme court of the United States: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 101 U. S., 781.

Prior to the enactment of subd. 7 of this section, held, that such lands acquired after the close of the assessment for the current year were not liable to taxation for that year: Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Polk County, 10-1; Tallman v. Treasurer, 12-531; Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45-453.

1272. Forest and fruit trees. 798; 17 G. A., ch. 50, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 190. For every acre of forest trees planted and cultivated for timber within the state, the trees thereon not being more than twelve feet apart and kept in a healthy condition, the sum of one hundred dollars shall be exempted from taxation upon the owner's assessment, for ten years after each acre is so planted; provided, that such exemption be applied only to the realty owned by the party claiming the exemption, not to exceed each one hundred and sixty acres of land, upon which the trees are grown and in a growing condition. For every acre of fruit trees planted and suitably cultivated within the state, the trees thereon not being more than thirty-three feet apart and kept in a healthy condition, the sum of fifty dollars shall be exempted from taxation upon the owner's assessment, for five years after each acre is planted. Such exemption shall be made by the assessor at the time of the annual assessment, upon satisfactory proof that the party claiming the same has complied with this section; and the assessor shall return to the board of equalization the name of each person claiming exemption, the quantity of lands planted to timber or fruit trees, and the amount deducted from the valuation of his property. Provided, that the amount so deducted shall not exceed one-half of the valuation of the realty on which such exemption is claimed. [12 G. A., ch. 92, §§ 1, 2, 3.]

An exemption from taxation is not in the nature of a contract between the state and the property owner, and does not prevent subsequent legislation altering the law and removing the exemption. Therefore, held, that 18 G. A., ch. 190, limiting the amount of exemption under this section, was applicable to timber land planted before the passage of the act: Shiner v. Jacobs, 62-392.

[Section 799 of the Code is repealed by 17 G. A., ch. 50, § 2.]

The action of the board in granting exemptions could only be reviewed upon appeal or by certiorari, and not by an injunction: District T'p v. Brown, 47-25.

1273. Rebate in case of loss. 800; 15 G. A., ch. 66. The board of supervisors shall have power to rebate in whole or in part the taxes of any person whose buildings, crops, stock, or other property has been destroyed by fire, tornado, or other unavoidable casualty, if said property has not been sold for taxes or if said taxes have not been in default for thirty days at the time of destruction. But the loss for which such rebate is allowed shall be such only as is not covered by insurance. [R., § 818; Ex. S., 8 G. A., ch. 12.]

Where a tax payer makes application, after he has paid his taxes, to have them refunded under this section, the treasurer may refuse to pay such rebate on a simple order by the board that it be refunded without a direct order upon him to that effect: Crosby v. Floete, 65-370.

1274. What taxable. 801. All other property, real and personal, is subject to taxation in the manner directed. Ferry franchises and toll-bridges, for the purposes of this title, are considered as real property. Horses, cattle, mules, asses, sheep, swine, and money, whether in possession or on deposit, and including bank-bills, money, property, or labor due from solvent debtors on contract or on judgment, mortgages and other like securities, and accounts bearing interest, property situated in this state belonging to any bank, or company, incorporated or otherwise, whether incorporated by this or any other state, public stocks or loans, household furniture, including gold and silver plate, musical instruments, watches, and jewelry, private libraries, for their value exceeding three hundred dollars, carriages, threshing machines, and every description of vehicle, farm utensils, machines and machinery, mechanic tools, and professional libraries for their aggregate value over three hundred dollars, boats and vessels of every description, wherever registered or licensed, and whether navigating the waters of this state or not, if owned either wholly or in part by inhabitants of this state, to the amount owned in this state. Any and all lands in this state which are owned or held by any other county or counties claiming title under locations with swamp land indemnity scrip, or otherwise, shall be taxed the same as other real estate within the limits of the county. [R., § 712; C., '51, § 456; 13 G. A., ch. 187.]

[The words "mechanic tools," in the thirteenth line, are erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

What property is taxable: A valid legal title is not necessary to authorize taxation. Lands held by the United States in trust for grantees are subject to taxation as property of such grantees: Stockdale v. Treasurer, etc., 12-536.

Under the railroad land grant acts by which upon the completion of a twenty-mile section of road the company became entitled to certain sections of public land as therein provided, held, that such land was taxable in the hands of the company from the time of the completion of the section of road, although certificates for it were not obtained until afterwards: Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21-221; Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Webster County, 21-235.

Mortgages held by non-residents are not taxable in this state: Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 12-539.

A purchase money mortgage is not exempt from taxation. To tax such security is not, at least as to the person owning the mortgage, double taxation: McGregor v. Vanpel, 24-436.

The taxation of a mortgage debt in the hands of the mortgagee, and also of the property in the hands of the mortgagor, is not double taxation: Meyer v. Dubuque County, 49-193.

Where, under a bond for a deed or instrument of a similar nature, the vendee goes into possession as owner and becomes liable for the taxes, the grantor should be taxed for the unpaid purchase money as moneys and credits: Ibid.

Under particular facts indicating that conveyance of real property to a tax payer was intended as between the parties merely as security for a loan, held, that the board of equalization was authorized to assess the property to the former owner, and the purchase price to the presumed purchaser as moneys and credits: Waller v. Jaeger, 39-228.

Notes which are left in another state for safe keeping are still subject to taxation in this state to the owner residing here. The debts exist independently of the notes themselves and follow the owner, though as to moneys and credits under the control of an agent in another state for the purpose of investment for profit, the rule might be different. (See § 1296): Hunter v. Board of Supervisors, 33-376.

Where the owner of a farm had made an executory oral agreement to convey the same at a future time, a part of the consideration being paid, the balance to be paid at the time of conveyance, held, that the unpaid purchase money was a credit within the meaning of this section, although payment could not be demanded until conveyance was tendered: Per-rine v. Jacobs, 64-79.

Railway property: The right of way of a railroad company, and land held by it for depot purposes, are subject to taxation. Although they are taken for public use they are the property of the corporation: Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12-112.

Under the act of 1858, which made the property of a railway corporation taxable through its shares of stock only, it was held that real property inside a city, owned by the company and used as depot grounds, was liable for sidewalk tax: Ibid.

Under former statutes by which the property of corporations was taxable only through the shares of stock of its stockholders, held, that land owned by a railroad company was not taxable as real property: Tallman v. Treasurer, 12-531; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Dubuque, 17-120; Faxton v. McCosh, 12-527; Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 12-539. Also held, that the provision of the Code of '51, that stock owned by non-resident stockholders in railroad and similar corporations in this state should be taxable in the county where either terminus of the road was situated, was valid: Faxton v. McCosh, 12-527.

Under the Revision the property of railroads was to be assessed and taxed in the same manner as the property of individuals: Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21-221; Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Webster County, 21-235.

As to whether the track, depot grounds, buildings, etc., of a railway corporation, situated within the limits of a city, were under 9 G. A., ch. 173, which imposed a tax of one per cent. per annum upon the gross earnings in lieu of all taxes for any and all purposes, subject to municipal taxation, the supreme court were equally divided: Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 16-348; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Dubuque, 17-120.

But under 12 G. A., ch. 196, similar to the act last referred to, it was held that such property was subject to taxation for municipal purposes and that the one per cent. was only in lieu of state and county taxes: Dunleith & Dubuque Bridge Co. v. Dubuque, 32-427; Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633; Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47-196; and that 14 G. A., ch. 26, § 9, by which it was sought to release railway companies from such taxes previously levied, was unconstitutional: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56.

As to whether, under the acts of 1862 and 1868 above referred to, the rolling stock of a railway corporation was subject to municipal taxation in the city where the company had its principal place of business, see the cases of Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co.; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Dubuque; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., supra.

As to taxation of railway property under present law, see §§ 1281, 1286, 2016-2022.

Corporate property and stocks: The real property of a private corporation for pecular profit is taxable as other property, and the shares of stock in such companies are also taxable under § 1289; as to whether both may be taxed at once, and whether that would be double taxation, quære: Appeal of Des Moines Water-Works, 48-324.

Although the taxation of the property of a corporation to the corporation, and the shares of its capital stock to its stockholders, may amount to double taxation, yet such a provision is not unconstitutional: Cook v. Burlington, 59-251.

Premiums received by an insurance company, being a gross income, are not taxable property so as to permit of a tax levy thereon by a municipal corporation under an authority to collect taxes upon "taxable property:" Dubuque v. Northwestern L. Ins. Co., 29-9; Burlington v. Putnam Ins. Co., 31-102.

Assets of a life insurance company, consisting of loans, notes taken for premiums, bonds, cash, etc., are subject to taxation as belonging to the class of moneys and credits, but the company is entitled to deduct therefrom (under § 1291) liability to its stockholders and policy-holders: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74-178.

The assessment of stock in a mutual loan and building association cannot be diminished by the deduction of the debts of the owner: Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72-42.

As to the taxation of bank stock, see §§ 1289, 1297.

Prior to the enactment in 1873 of the provision as to lands held by a county under the swamp land grant, such lands were not liable to taxation in another county: Guthrie County v. Carroll County, 34-108; Callanan v. Wayne County, 73-709.

1275. Credit. 802. The term "credit" as used in this title, includes every claim and demand for money, labor, or other valuable thing, and every annuity or sum of money receivable at stated periods, and all money or property of any kind secured by deed, mortgage, or otherwise; but pensions of the United States, or any of them, and salaries or payments expected for services to be rendered, are not included in the above term. [R., § 713; C., '51, § 457.]

As to what is included under the head of credits in case of a corporation, see note to preceding section; also notes to § 1291.

1276. How listed. 803. Every inhabitant of this state, of full age and sound mind, shall assist the assessor in listing all property subject to taxation in this state of which he is the owner, or has the control or management, in the manner hereinafter directed; the property of a ward is to be listed by his guardian, of a minor, by his father if living, if not, by his mother if living, and if not, by the persons having the property in charge; of a married woman, by herself or husband; of a beneficiary for whom property is held in trust, by the trustee, and the personal property of a decedent, by the executor; of a body corporate, company, society, or partnership, by its principal accounting officer, agent, or partner. Property under mortgage or lease is to be listed by and taxed to the mortgagor or lessor, unless it be listed by the mortgagee or lessee. [R., § 714; C., '51, § 458.]

It is the duty of the mortgagor of real property to pay the taxes thereon: Porter v. Laferty, 33-254; Dayton v. Rice, 47-429.

While the property which is under mortgage or lease may be assessed to the mortgagor, the mortgage itself is to be assessed as personal property to the mortgagee, and if he be a non-resident it cannot be assessed in this state: Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 12-539.

Where a purchaser of real estate under contract for a deed takes possession thereof, he is liable for the taxes thereon, and on subsequently taking the deed cannot require the vendor to covenant against such taxes: Miller v. Corey, 15-166.

The personal property of a decedent should, as a rule, be assessed in the county of which he died a resident, and not in the county where the executor resides: McGregor's Ex'rs v. Vampel, 24-436.

Where the administrator is a resident of the same county where decedent died, but of another township, the personal property coming into possession of the administrator should be assessed in the township where the administrator resides: Cameron v. Burlington, 56-320.

As to the county in which personal property of decedent is to be assessed, see note to § 1288.

1278. Listing property of another. 805. Any person required to list property belonging to another, shall list it in the same county in which he would be required to if it were his own, except as herein otherwise directed, but he shall list it separately from his own, giving the assessor the name of the person or estate to whom it belongs; but the undivided property of a person deceased, belonging to his heirs, may be listed as belonging to his heirs without enumerating them. [R., § 716; C., '51, § 461.]

1279. Where taxed; partnership. 806. When a person is doing business in more than one county, the property and credits existing in any one of the counties shall be listed and taxed in that county, and the credits not existing in or pertaining especially to the business in any county, shall be listed and taxed in that where the principal place of business may be. Any individual of a partnership is liable for the taxes due from the firm. [R., § 717; C., '51, § 463.]

[The word "in" in the fourth line, preceding "or," is erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

1280. Insurance companies. 807. Every insurance company doing business in this state, except joint-stock and mutual companies organized under the laws of this state, shall, at the time of making the annual statements as required by law, pay into the state treasury as taxes, two and one-half per cent. of the gross amount of premiums received in this state during the preceding year, taking duplicate receipts therefor, one of which shall be filed with the auditor; and upon the filing of said receipts, and not till then, the said auditor shall issue the annual certificate as provided by law; and the said sum of two and one-half per cent. shall be in full for all taxes, state and local. [R., § 718; C., '51, § 464; 12 G. A., ch. 138, § 38; 14 G. A., ch. 106, § 6.]

1281. Real property of railways. 808. Lands, lots, and other real estate belonging to any railway company, not exclusively used in the operation of the several roads, and all railway bridges across the Mississippi and Missouri river, shall be subject to assessment and taxation on the same basis as the property of individuals in the several counties where situated. [14 G. A., ch. 26, §§ 8, 10.]

The right of the railway company to use the government bridge over the Mississippi river at Davenport, held not taxable, except as railroad property under § 2016: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Davenport, 51-451.

The provisions of this section relate to the bridges mentioned, while those of § 2018 apply to other railway bridges. This section is not unconstitutional on the ground that it is not of uniform operation: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74-283.

These bridges are to be taxed as bridges and not as a part of the railroad, whether owned by the railroad or by private individuals: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Sabula, 19 Fed. Rep., 177.

While the United States supreme court has decided that it is the duty of the Union Pacific Railroad Company to operate its whole line, including the bridge at Council Bluffs, yet so much of the bridge as is in Iowa may be taxed under the Code of Iowa as a bridge, and not merely the bridge as a part of the road, more especially since that railroad enjoys in relation thereto all the substantial franchises of a bridge company: Union Pacific R. Co. v. Potawatamie County, 4 Dillon, 497.

As to taxation of railway property in general, see notes to § 1274.

1282. Railroad land grants. 20 G. A., ch. 28, § 1. All lands lying within the state of Iowa, which have been heretofore granted or may be hereafter granted to any railroad company or corporation by the general government or by the general government to the state of Iowa and by the state granted to any such railroad company or corporation shall be subject to assessment and taxation within the counties wherein situated from and after the year the same may be earned, to the same extent as though patents had been issued to, and the title of record was in such railroad companies or corporations. The fact that such lands are claimed by more than one such company or corporation shall in no way affect the liability of such lands to assessment and levy, provided, nothing herein contained is intended to subject any lands to taxation for the past that were not taxable prior to the passage of this act.

1283. Evidence. 20 G. A., ch. 28, § 3. Parol evidence shall be admissible to prove when said lands were earned.

1284. 20 G. A., ch. 28, § 4. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

1286. Other railway property. 810. All railway property not specified in section eight hundred and eight of this chapter [§ 1281], shall be taxed upon the assessment made by the executive council as provided in chapter five of title ten, at the same rates, by the same officers, and for the same purposes as individual property under the provisions of this chapter; and all provisions of this title relating to the levy and collection of taxes shall apply to the taxes so levied upon railway property. [14 G. A., ch. 26, §§ 6, 7.]

Under the act of 1858, which made the property of railway corporations taxable through their shares of stock only, it was held that real property inside a city, owned by the company and used as depot grounds, was liable for sidewalk tax: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12-112.

As to taxation of railway property generally, see notes to § 1274.

1287. Telegraph and express companies. 811. All property, real and personal, including their franchises, owned by telegraph and express companies, shall be listed and assessed for taxation and shall be subject to the same levies as the property of individuals. [12 G. A., 180; 13 G. A., ch. 100.]

[Further as to taxation of telegraph companies, see § 2109-2116.]

1288. Assessment; bankers. 812; 15 G. A., ch. 63. All taxable property shall be taxed each year, and personal property shall be listed and assessed each year in the name of the owner thereof on the first day of January; except moneys and credits of associations, organized under the general incorporation laws of this state, for the purpose of transacting a banking business, and moneys and credits of private bankers, and others who have loaned money, bought notes, mortgages, or other securities within the year previous to the time of assessing; in every such instance the average value of the moneys and credits which have been in the possession or under the control of the person making the list during the year previous to the time of making said assessment, shall be listed for taxation. Real property shall be listed and valued in the year 1873 and each second year thereafter, and shall be assessed at its true cash value, having regard to its quality, location, and natural advantages, the general improvement of the vicinity, and all other elements of its value; and in each year in which real estate is not regularly assessed, the assessor shall list and value any real property not included in the previous assessment. [R., §§ 719, 720; C., '51, §§ 460, 465.]

Personal property: A tax based upon an assessment of personal property to the person owning the same at the time of assessment, but who did not own it on January 1st preceding, is illegal and its collection may be enjoined. Personal property brought into the state after January 1st is not taxable for that year: Wangler v. Black Hawk County, 56-384.

A person should not be assessed for any year upon personal property not owned by him on the 1st day of January of such year: Tackaberry v. Keokuk, 32-155.

The rule as to the place of taxing movable property is hard to fix, but it is not a correct rule that such property is to be taxed in the township where it is on the 1st of January: Rhyno v. Madison County, 43-632.

As a general rule personal property is taxed where the owner resides: Ament v. Humphrey, 3 G. Gr., 255.

Moneys and credits are assessable and taxable at the place of the owner's residence and not elsewhere, and an assessment at another place is void: Barber v. Farr, 54-57.

A debt of which a note is evidence is subject to taxation where the creditor resides, although the note itself is deposited in another state for safe keeping: Hunter v. Board of Supervisors, 33-376.

Where plaintiff had been residing with his family at Osceola, but afterwards went to Chicago, engaging in business there without removing his family, held, that he was still subject to taxation in Osceola: Nugent v. Bates, 51-77.

Facts in a particular case as to domicile and residence held sufficient to show that the property of plaintiff was not assessable in the township where he was assessed: Babcock v. Township Board of Equalization, 65-110.

Property in transitu from or through a state cannot be taxed. Hence, corn cribbed in Iowa as an incident to its shipment through or from the state is not taxable. If, however, it is put in cribs with no purpose of immediate shipment, but to await the future course of the markets, or for the purpose of avoiding taxation, the transit will be considered as at an end: Ogilvie v. Crawford County, 2 McCrary, 148.

A stock of merchandise located within a district should be taxed there for school purposes, although the owner resides in a different district: Ament v. Humphrey, 3 G. Gr., 355; Lemp v. Hastings, 4 G. Gr., 448.

If personal property has no established locality, and is used in doing business in a county or district in which the owner does not reside, it is to be listed and assessed at the place at which the owner resides; but if it has a known locality, and is used in doing business in that locality, it must be listed and taxed in the county or district where it is thus used: Lemp v. Hastings, 4 G. Gr., 448.

Where a tax payer sought by replevin to recover a horse seized for municipal taxes, held, that he could not recover in the absence of an averment that the personal property on which such tax was levied was not habitually used within the city: Buell v. Schawle, 39-293.

Where personal property within a city is owned by a non-resident the officer or agent who has control thereof stands in the place of the owner, and its situs as to taxation, unless otherwise prescribed, is his place of business: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56, 67.

It is the province of the general assembly to determine what property actually in the state is taxable. Money loaned and invested within the state and under the control and management of an agent here may be taxed under the provisions of statute: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

Notes which are left in another state for safe-keeping are still subject to taxation in this state to the owner residing here. The debts exist independently of the notes themselves, and follow the owner, though as to moneys and credits under the control of an agent in another state for the purpose of investment for profit the rule might be different: Hunter v. Board of Supervisors, 33-376.

The clause of the section as amended, "the average value of the moneys and credits which have been in the possession or under the control of such person . . . shall be listed for taxation," does not authorize the assessor to assess against a bank the average of deposits during the preceding year: Branch v. Marengo, 43-600.

Capital employed by a banker, consisting of bonds and treasury notes of the United States, is not taxable, and the excess of his deposits and bills payable over his cash and bills receivable can be deducted from his moneys and credits: Campbell v. Centerville, 69-439.

Real estate: Real estate not liable to assessment at the time the assessment is closed should be passed without assessment that year: Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45-453; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Polk County, 10-1; Tallman v. Treasurer, 12-531.

The land, buildings, machinery or water-mans of a water company are all real estate and appurtenant to the lot on which the main work are located, and are to be assessed in that township although the mains extend into another township: Appeal of Des Moines Water Co., 48-324.

Thus, also, gas-mains and pipes are appurtenant to the lots on which the gas-works are situated: Capital City Gas Light Co. v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 51-31.

The entry by the assessor upon his list of town lots by number is a sufficient description to embrace not only the lots proper, but everything appurtenant thereto: Ibid.

Where a guardian under authority of court to make a sale of real property agreed with the proposed purchaser that the conveyance and purchase money mortgage should be dated back, and in such form the sale was confirmed by the court, held, that taxes on the property for the period between the date of the conveyance and the confirmation of the sale could not be assessed against such purchaser: Ordway v. Smith, 53-539.

There can be no new and independent valuation of real property by the assessor in even-numbered years, unless it be as to such as has been omitted in the previous assessment. Even as to such property it is doubtful whether the assessor has anything to do therewith. As a matter of convenience he might list it, but he is not required to do even this: Snell v. Hart Dodge, 45-564.

Improvements made upon real estate during the first year after an assessment cannot be taxed until the next regular assessment, although the personal property of the owner subject to taxation is decreased by that much. Notwithstanding the provision that "all taxable property shall be taxed each year," the enhanced value of real estate should not be regarded as taxable property until the real estate is assessed in the manner provided: Richards v. Wapelo County, 48-507.

A party cannot complain that he is prejudiced in the fact that his land and improvements thereon, which constitute a part of the realty, are assessed separately: Robertson v. Anderson, 57-165.

Nursery stock is not personal property, but a part of the realty, and should be included with the realty in making the assessments: Wilson v. Cass County, 69-147.

However, the rate of taxation upon realty and personalty being the same, held, that the valuation of such stock as personalty instead of realty under an aggregate valuation was an irregularity which should have been corrected by an application to the board of equalization, and did not authorize an injunction against the collection of such taxes: Ibid.

Provisions as to the assessment of real estate are not applicable to the assessment of the right of way of a railroad company. The entire property of the railway company is to be assessed as personal property each year: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67-199.

The board of equalization has no authority to equalize assessments of real estate in the years when such assessments are not authorized to be made: Goold v. Lyon County, 74-95.

1239. Credits, annuities, bank-notes, stock. 813. Depreciated bank-notes and the stock of corporations and companies shall be assessed at their cash value; credits shall be listed at such sum as the person listing them believes will be received or can be collected thereon, and annuities, at the value which the person listing believes them to be worth in money. [R., § 721; C., '51, § 466.]

Although the taxation of the property of a corporation to the corporation, and the shares of its capital stock to its stockholders, may amount to double taxation, yet such a provision is not unconstitutional: Cook v. Burlington, 59-251.

The real property of a private corporation is to be assessed under § 1302. The shares of stock of such companies are, under this section, taxable in the hands of the owners thereof. Whether both shares and property may be taxed, and whether that would amount to double taxation, quære: Appeal of the Des Moines Water Co., 48-324.

The stockholder is taxable upon his interest in the corporate property, including surplus, as well as upon his capital stock: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74-178.

The shares of stock of a stockholder in a bank incorporated under the general incorporation laws of the state are to be taxed to the owner as his individual property: Henkle v. Keota, 68-334.

Under the provisions of the Code of '51, held, that a banking corporation doing business within the limits of the state was subject to the payment of municipal taxes: McGregor v. McGregor Branch of State Bank, 12-79.

It seems that under this section, construed in connection with § 1815, with reference to taxation of savings banks, the stockholder in such a bank is to pay taxes on his stock, at least to the extent the same is not taxed to the bank: Davenport Nat. Bank v. Mittelbuscher, 4 McCrary, 361.

1290. Stock in building associations. 16 G. A., ch. 163, § 1. The shares of stock of mutual loan and building associations shall be assessed at their cash value, but only the unredeemed shares of such stock shall be taxed and such unredeemed shares shall be listed to the individual owners thereof.

1291. Deducting debts. 814. In making up the amount of money or credits which any person is required to list, or have listed or assessed, he will be entitled to deduct from the gross amount, all debts in good faith owing by him, but no acknowledgment of indebtedness not founded on actual consideration, and no such acknowledgment made for the purpose of being so deducted, shall be considered a debt within the intent of this section, and so much only of any liability of such person as security for another shall be deducted, as the person making the list believes he is equitably or legally bound to pay, and so much only as he believes he will be compelled to pay on account of the inability of the principal debtor, and if there are other sureties able to contribute, then so much only as he in whose name the list is made will be bound to contribute; but no person will be entitled to any deduction on account of any obligation of any kind given to any insurance company for the premiums of insurance, nor on account of any unpaid subscription to any institution, society, corporation or company; and no person shall be entitled to any deduction on account of any indebtedness contracted for the purchase of United States bonds, or other non-taxable property. [R., § 722; C., '51, § 467; 13 G. A., ch. 181.]

This provision for the deduction of debts is not in conflict with the constitutional prohibition against local or special laws for the assessment or collection of taxes: Macklot v. Davenport, 17-379.

Where the tax payer having been acting as an agent for a non-resident for the loaning of money, and having been taxed as agent for such money, executed notes to the persons who had been principals, by which he became personally liable as borrower for the money in his hands for investment, and then set off, as against such money in his hands, the amount of his individual indebtedness on the obligations thus executed, held, that, it not appearing that there was any fraud nor want of good faith, he was not subject to assessment for such property, the amount of his indebtedness being greater than the amount of his moneys and credits as thus estimated: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 67-37.

Whether a tax payer is entitled to have an acknowledgment of indebtedness entered into by him deducted from the amounts of moneys and credits which he is required to list for assessment depends upon whether it is founded upon an actual consideration. If it is founded upon such consideration, and evidences an actual indebtedness, he is entitled to have it deducted regardless of the motive which may have influenced him to incur the obligation: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 67-182.

Where property of a non-resident was under the control and management of an agent in the state, within the provision of § 1296, held, that the fact that he gave a note to his principal for the amount of such notes for the purpose of exempting them from taxation, such note not representing any real indebtedness, would not entitle such agent to deduct from the amount of the notes under his control the amount of such fictitious indebtedness: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

Stock in a corporation is not to be classed as credits under this section in such a sense that debts of the owner can be set off against its value for purposes of assessment: Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72-42.

To the contrary it has been held that the holder of stock in a national bank may set off against it indebtedness owing by him: Richards v. Rock Rapids, 31 Fed. Rep., 505.

A corporation being bound to pay to its stockholders all its capital and profits upon the winding up of its affairs, the amount which the stockholders would receive were the corporation wound up is an indebtedness which may be deducted from the amount of moneys and credits belonging to the corporation. Therefore, held, that the assets of a life insurance company, consisting of securities, premium notes, cash, etc., were subject to deduction for the purpose of taxation, of the amount of liability of the corporation to its stockholders and also its liability to its policy-holders as determined by § 1743: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74-178.

So held, also, in case of a fire insurance company: Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 75-770.

The moneys and credits of a corporation from which are to be deducted its liabilities do not include real estate and other property for which taxation is specifically provided: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74-178.

1292. Who deemed merchant. 815. Any person owning, or having in his possession, or under his control, within this state, with authority to sell the same, any personal property purchased with a view of its being sold at a profit, or which has been consigned to him from any place out of this state to be sold within the same, shall be held to be a merchant for the purposes of this title; such property shall be listed for taxation, and in estimating the value thereof, the merchant shall take the average value of such property in his possession or under his control during the next year previous to the time of assessing, and if he has not been engaged in the business so long, then he shall take the average during such time as he shall have been so engaged, and if he be commencing, he shall take the value of the property at the time of assessment. [R., § 723; C., '51, § 468.]

A person engaged in buying and packing pork is a merchant within the meaning of this section, and the fact that the property is held with a view of selling it out of the state does not affect the liability of the owner to taxation upon such property. The fact that the property was purchased on credit or on borrowed capital will not relieve the owner from taxation thereon. His debts can only be deducted from his moneys and credits under § 1291: McConn v. Roberts, 25-152.

1293. Who a manufacturer. 816. Any person who purchases, receives, or holds personal property of any description for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by any process of manufacturing, packing of meats, refining, purifying, or by the combination of different materials, with a view of making gain or profit by so doing, and by selling the same, shall be held to be a manufacturer for the purpose of this title, and he shall list for taxation the average value of such property in his hands, estimated as directed in the preceding section; but the value shall be estimated upon those materials only which enter into the combination or manufacture. [R., § 724; C., '51, § 469.]

1294. Manufacturing companies. 18 G. A., ch. 57, § 1. Corporations organized under the laws of this state for pecuniary profit, and engaged in manufacturing as defined by section eight hundred and sixteen of the code [§ 1293], and which have their capital represented by shares of stock, shall, through their principal accounting officers, list their real estate, personal property, and moneys and credits, in the same manner as is required of individuals, and their machinery used in their manufacturing establishments shall, for the purposes of this act, be regarded as real estate.

1295. Stock exempt. 18 G. A., ch. 57, § 2. The owners of capital stock of manufacturing companies, as herein provided for, having listed their property as above directed, shall be exempt from assessment and taxation.

1296. Agent personally liable. 817. Any person acting as the agent of another, and having in his possession, or under his control or management, any money, notes, credits, or personal property belonging to such other person with a view to investing or loaning, or in any other manner using the same for pecuniary profit, shall be required to list the same at the real value, and such agent shall be personally liable for the tax on the same; and if he refuse to render the list, or to swear to the same, the amount of such money, property, notes, or credits, may be listed and valued according to the best knowledge and judgment of the assessor, subject to the provisions of section eight hundred and twenty-four of this chapter [§ 1303]. [R., § 725.]

[The word "and" is erroneously printed in the Code between "notes" and "credits."]

These provisions are not unconstitutional. The property involved being protected by the laws of the state to the same extent as any other property, and the rate of taxation being the same, it cannot be said that the property may, by such provision, be appropriated to public use without compensation: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

Although for some purposes the situs of moneys and credits is deemed to be where the owner resides, yet such property may be deemed within the state for the purpose of taxation and may be taxable as well as other kinds of personal property situated within the state under the control and management of an agent: Ibid.

An agent cannot escape taxation on the money thus under his management and control by executing to his principal a note for the amount of such money not representing any real indebtedness on the part of the agent. Such fictitious indebtedness would not be within the statutory provision allowing a setting off of debts as against moneys and credits: Ibid.

In a particular case, held, that the party did not have the possession, management and control of the property of another as agent in such sense as to make him liable for taxes thereon: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 67-182.

Section applied: Hunter v. Board of Supervisors, 33-376.

NATIONAL BANKS.

1297. Shares taxed. 818. All shares of the banking associations organized within this state, pursuant to the provisions of the acts of congress to provide a national currency secured by a pledge of United States stocks, and to provide for the circulation and redemption thereof, held by any person or body corporate, shall be included in the valuation of the personal property of such person or body corporate in the assessment of taxes in the township, incorporated town, or city, where such banking association is located and not elsewhere, whether the holder thereof resides there or not, but not at a greater rate than is assessed on other moneyed capital in the hands of individuals.

[The word "provide" in the third line is erroneously printed "procure" in the Code.]

Previous statutory provisions as to taxation of shares in national banks held inoperative for the reason that the capital and not the shares of stock of state banking institutions were under the state statutes then existing subject to taxation, and therefore, under the national banking act, shares of stock in national banks could not be taxed: Hubbard v. Board of Supervisors, 23-130; Olmstead v. Board of Supervisors, 24-33; Lauman v. Des Moines County, 29-310.

But under subsequent state statutes, held, that shares in state banks became subject to taxation so that stock in national banks became taxable: Morseman v. Younkin, 27-350.

Under the act of congress with reference to the taxation of national banks, the shares of stock and the real estate of such banks are alone subject to taxation. Personal property belonging to such associations cannot be taxed: National State Bank v. Young, 25-311.

Although § 1815 provides a new method for the taxation of savings banks, yet the difference in such methods of taxation as to savings banks and national banks does not constitute a discrimination in taxation as against national banks so as to render the provisions as to taxation of such banks unlawful under the national banking act: Davenport Nat. Bank v. Board of Equalization, 64-140.

Until the supreme court of Iowa shall put a different construction upon § 1289, the federal courts hold that it does not exempt shares of stock in savings banks from taxation altogether, but that it and § 1815, in regard to savings banks, construed together, mean that the stockholder shall pay taxes on his shares of stock, at least to the extent that there is no taxation upon the same against the bank: Davenport National Bank v. Mittelbuscher, 4 McCrary, 361.

The fact that stock in a national bank is assessed to the shareholder, whilst savings banks are taxed upon their capital stock and their shares are not taxable, does not render the tax on the national bank stock illegal, it not appearing that the tax in one case is greater than in the other: Davenport National Bank v. Board of Equalization, 123 U. S., 83.

To render the assessment of shares of stock in national banks void, as in violation of R. S. of U. S., § 5219, it must be shown there is, in fact, a higher burden of taxation imposed upon the money thus invested than is assessed upon other moneyed capital. It is not sufficient to show that the method of taxation is different: Richards v. Rock Rapids, 31 Fed. Rep., 505.

1298. Listing; collecting tax. 819. The principal accounting officer of each of said associations, between the first and fifteenth days of January of each year, shall list the shares of the association, giving the assessor the name of each person owning shares, and the amount owned by each; and for the purpose of securing the collection of taxes assessed upon said shares, each banking association shall be liable to pay the same as the agent of each of its shareholders, under the provisions of section eight hundred and seventeen [§ 1296]; and the association shall retain so much of any dividend belonging to any shareholder as shall be necessary to pay any taxes levied upon his shares. [Same, § 2.]

The assessment against a shareholder does not authorize the seizure of property of the bank for its liquidation: First Nat. Bank v. Hershire, 31-18.

The bank is not absolutely liable for the taxes upon shares, but to render it liable it must be shown that it has, or has had, dividends or other money or property belonging to the delinquent shareholder: Hershire v. First Nat. Bank, 35-272.

1299. Further provisions. 820. If, at any time, congress shall amend the acts aforesaid, then each assessor shall assess the shares in any such national bank in such manner as to conform to such amended act of congress; provided, that such shares shall not be assessed at a greater rate than is imposed by law on other moneyed capital in the hands of individuals in this state. [Same, § 3.]

CLASSIFICATION OF PROPERTY.

1300. What to show. 821. The board of supervisors of each county, shall, at their meeting in January in each year, classify the several descriptions of property to be assessed, for the purpose of equalizing such assessment; and the county auditor shall deliver to each assessor in the county, on or before the fifteenth day of January in each year, a certificate of such classification, together with a suitable plat of his township on which to check each parcel of land assessed, and suitable books in duplicate, properly ruled and headed, in which to enter the following items:

1. The name of the individual, corporation, company, society, partnership, or firm, to whom any property shall be taxable;

2. His or their lands, by township, range, section, or part of section, and when such part is not a congressional division or subdivision, some other description sufficient to identify it; and town lots, naming the town in which they are situated, and their proper description by number and block, or otherwise, according to the system of numbering in the town;

3. Personal property as follows: number of cattle, number of horses, number of mules, number of sheep, number of swine over six months old, number of carriages and vehicles of every description, with a separate column for the value of each, value of merchandise, amount of capital employed in manufacture, amount of money and credits, amount of taxable furniture, amount of stock or shares in any corporation or company, not required by law to be otherwise listed and taxed, amount of taxable farming utensils or mechanics' tools, amount of all other personal property not enumerated, and the number of polls; and a column for remarks. But no entry shall be made on said books of any animal under the age of one year, except as above provided. [R., §§ 732, 733; 9 G. A., ch. 173, §§ 4, 5.]

[A column is to be provided in the assessor's book for dogs: See § 2290.]

Classification: The obvious purport of this section is that like property should be put in the same class: Cassett v. Sherwood, 42-623.

The object of this classification by the board is for the benefit of the assessor: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74-283

Valuation of real property: It is the duty of the assessor to value different pieces of real property in accordance with his own judgment, and it is not proper for the county board of equalization to fix the values upon different classes of real property: Burnham v. Barber, 70-37.

Therefore it is not proper for the board to fix the valuation each assessor shall place upon the different classes of real property, such as improved, unimproved, etc.: Ibid.

The assessor is not required to examine each forty-acre tract, but of necessity must arrive at the value from information derived from others, having regard to the elements of value prescribed by statute: Beeson v. Johns, 59-166.

Description of real property: A description of property as the "N. W. part of the N. E. $\frac{1}{4}$ of the N. E. $\frac{1}{4}$, containing three acres," is not sufficient to support a tax title: Roberts v. Deeds, 57-320.

Where it is admitted that property is subject to taxation and lawfully assessed, mere insufficiency in the description under which it is assessed to enable a stranger to identify it will not defeat the tax: Shaw v. Orr, 30-355.

Under a previous statute, held, that the fact of non-assessment might be shown to defeat the tax title; and if the description of the property assessed did not cover the description of the property conveyed in the deed, there was no assessment in fact: Innemeart v. Gorgas, 41-439.

A town lot entered upon the assessment books by description carries with it mains, pipes, etc., of water or gas works situated thereon as appurtenances, although such mains and pipes extend beyond such lot or even into another township: Appeal of the Des Moines Water Co., 48-324; Capital City G. L. Co. v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 51-31.

As to taxation of shares of stock, see § 1239 and notes.

DUTY OF ASSESSOR.

1301. Listing property. 822. Each assessor shall enter upon the discharge of the duties of his office on the third Monday in January in each year, and shall, with the assistance of each person assessed, or who may be required by law to list property belonging to another, enter in the books furnished him for that purpose, the several items specified in the preceding section; entering the names of the persons assessed in alphabetical order, so far as practicable by allotting to each letter its requisite number of pages in each of the said books. He shall note opposite each piece or parcel of property by him assessed, in a column of his book prepared for that purpose, the number of the highway, independent school districts, district township, or sub-district in which said property is situated. [R., § 733; C., '51, § 471; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 15.]

[As to listing of dogs, see § 2288.]

Assessment essential: The assessment or recorded valuation of property by an officer having power to make such assessment or valuation is an indispensable step in the exercise of the taxing power. Such recorded valuation constitutes the basis of the levy, and without it there cannot properly be a levy. It is the tax payer's right to have the amount of his tax entered upon the record provided by law for the same, that he may know in advance the amount which can be collected and govern himself accordingly. It is not enough that the alleged tax is a proportionate part of the burden which the property may be called upon to bear: Worthington v. Whitman, 67-190.

Therefore, held, that where the assessor had failed to assess the personal estate of a person deceased the treasurer could not recover the taxes on the property of the estate by presenting a claim therefor to the executor for allowance: Ibid.

The county cannot recover from the estate of decedent under a claim that his property was not all assessed for taxation, the amount claimed not being based upon any actual assessment or levy: Appanoose County v. Vermilion, 70-365.

Time and manner: It is competent for the legislature to provide that one kind of property shall be assessed once in two years, and another kind assessed every year. It is also competent to provide that property belonging to railway companies shall be assessed in a different manner than the same kind of property belonging to other owners, or that the property of railway companies shall be assessed by a special tribunal provided by statute: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67-199.

Evidence: A book shown to be in fact the assessment book of the township is receivable in evidence, although it does not show the name of the assessor nor that he was sworn: Brown v. Scott, 34-575.

In the absence of any showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the entry of taxes upon the tax list was made at the proper time and by lawful authority: Silcott v. McCarty, 62-161.

Where it was sought to show that a tax deed was void because the property had not been assessed for the year for which it was sold for taxes, held, that evidence that no assessment books for the year were found in the proper office twenty years afterward was not sufficient to overcome the presumption in favor of the regularity of the tax deed confirmed by the fact that the land appeared on the tax lists for that year: Slocum v. Slocum, 70-259.

By wrong assessor: Where an assessor, elected for an incorporated town, assessed land not situated within the town limits, held, that the assessment so far as it included land outside of the town was illegal, even though the officer was an assessor de facto, and that a sale for taxes based upon such assessment was void: Bailey v. Fisher, 38-229.

Irregularity: The tax payer will not be granted relief on account of irregularity in the assessment, where it does not appear that the assessment was excessive or unjust: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40-66.

The question as to what is a mere irregularity in exercising the taxing power is of such character that each case must be determined upon its own peculiar facts and circumstances: Capital City Gas Light Co. v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 51-31.

Where personal property was owned jointly by several persons, the respective interest of each not being readily ascertainable, and was assessed to one of such owners alone, held, that no part of such assessment was illegal: Meyer v. Dubuque County, 49-193.

Curative act: Held, that a statute authorizing an assessment to be made in 1858 for the taxes of 1857 rendered valid an assessment made in that manner: Peirce v. Weare, 41-378.

The clerical duty of listing may be performed by a person employed by the assessor. See note to next section.

1302. Assessment; refusing to assist. 823. The assessor shall list every person in his township, and assess all the property, personal and real, therein, except such as is heretofore specifically exempted; and any person who shall refuse to assist in making out a list of his property, or of any property which he is by law required to assist in listing, or who shall refuse to make the oath required by the next section, shall forfeit the sum of one hundred dollars, to be recovered in the name of the county for the use of common schools therein; and the assessor shall assess such person according to the best information he can get. [R., § 734.]

The assessment is not invalid, although the assessor employ another to make the valuations of property, if they are afterwards submitted to him for correction and approval; and it is no objection that the mere clerical duty of listing was performed by another: Snell v. Fort Dodge, 45-565.

The assessor should not assess and need not list real property assessed the preceding year: Ibid.

The real property of a private corporation for pecuniary profit is taxable as other property, and the shares of stock in such companies are also taxable under § 1239; whether both may be taxed at once, and whether that would be double taxation, quære: Appeal of the Des Moines Water Co., 48-324.

As to the taxation of property of companies owning water-works, see same case under § 641.

The rule as to the place of taxing movable property is hard to fix, but it is not a correct rule that such property is to be taxed in the township where it is on the 1st of January; § 1288 applies only as to ownership: Rhyno v. Madison County, 43-632.

If a person is requested to make oath as provided, and refuses, he is liable for the forfeiture. It is not necessary that the oath be actually administered to him, and he cannot escape liability by showing irregularities in the qualification of the assessor, if the officer was such de facto. The fact that the assessor was such officer and was acting in that capacity may be established by his own testimony: Washington County v. Miller, 14-584.

The property which a party is required by law to assist in listing as distinguished from his own includes personal property which he holds in a fiduciary capacity as executor or trustee, and, therefore, property of decedent who was a resident of the county at the time of his death, in the hands of his executor, should be assessed in the township of the residence of such executor: Cameron v. Burlington, 56-320.

All property, personal and real, is subject to be listed for purposes of taxation except such as is exempted from taxation by statute: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74-178.

Under particular facts, held, that the person assessed was a resident of the county in which the assessment was made: King v. Parker, 73-757.

1303. Oath. 824. The assessor shall administer an oath, or affirmation, to each person assessed, to the effect that he has given in a full, true, and correct inventory of all the taxable property owned by him, and all property which he is required by law to list, to the best of his knowledge and belief; and in case any one refuses to make such oath, or affirmation, the assessor shall note the fact in the column of remarks opposite such person's name, and should it afterwards appear that such person so refusing has not given a full list of his property, or that which he was by law required to list, any property so omitted shall be entered on the book at double its ordinary assessable value, and taxed accordingly. [R., § 735; C., '51, §§ 474-5.]

It is not required that the property owner subscribe to the oath. The statute being penal should be strictly construed. And held, that a party who simply refused to sign a printed affidavit did not render himself liable for the penalty provided: Marion County v. Kruidenier, 72-95.

1304. State valuation. 18 G. A., ch. 109, § 2. The assessor shall, before administering the oath or affirmation, as is provided in section eight hundred and twenty-four of the code [§ 1303], to the person assessed, inform him of the valuation put upon his property, and notify him if he feels aggrieved to appear before the board of equalization, and show why the assessment should be changed.

An assessor has no authority to require an oath or affirmation, or administer the same, until he has given information of the valuation placed upon the tax payer's property, and advised him, if he feels aggrieved, to appear before the board of equalization and show wherein the assessment should be changed. In an action to recover the penalty for refusing to make such oath or affirmation it must appear that the assessor gave such information and notice and had authority to administer the oath: Marion County v. Galvin, 73-18.

It seems that this section is unconstitutional for the reason that the subject-matter thereof is not embraced in the title of the act in which it is found: Henkle v. Keota, 68-334.

1305. Return of books. 825. Each assessor shall, on or before the first Monday in April of each year, deliver to the clerk of his township, one of the assessment books, to be used by the trustees for the equalization of assessments, and for the levy of taxes for township and highway purposes. Said book shall have the several columns of numbers and values correctly footed up and amount of personal property assessed to each person carried forward into a column under the head of "total personal property;" the other book he shall return to the office of the county auditor on or before the third Monday in May of each year, which book shall be a correct copy of the first, after the same has been corrected by the township board of equalization. [R., § 736; C., '51, § 478; 11 G. A., ch. 61, § 10.]

Where property is duly assessed to the owner, the omission of the name of the owner in transcribing the tax upon the tax list will not invalidate the assessment: Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

Real estate not liable to assessment at the time the assessment is closed should be passed without assessment for that year: Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45-453; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Polk County, 10-1; Tallman v. Treasurer, 12-531.

1306. Owner unknown. 826. When the name of the owner of any real estate is unknown, it shall be lawful to assess such real estate without connecting therewith any name, but inscribing at the head of the page the words, "owners unknown" and such property, whether lands or town lots, shall be listed, as near as practicable, in the order of the numbers thereof; and no one description shall comprise more than one town lot, or more than the sixteenth part of a section or other smallest subdivision of the land according to the government surveys, except in cases where the boundaries are so irregular that it cannot be described in the usual manner in accordance with such surveys. [R., § 737.]

It is doubtful whether the assessor is required to look to the records for the purpose of ascertaining the state of the title in order to assess real property in the name of the owner thereof. The fact that he assesses a tract described as the smallest governmental subdivision to unknown owners, when in fact the record shows that it is owned in two parcels by different owners, will not render the sale in pursuance thereof void: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44-622.

Where the same tract is assessed to "unknown owner" and also in the name of the real owner, the former assessment is invalid and a sale thereunder void: Nichols v. McGlathery, 43-189.

Land of a known owner need not be assessed in forties, but may be assessed in a body: Corbin v. De Wolf, 25-124; Bulkley v. Callanan, 32-461.

It would be presumed from the fact that the name of the owner is not shown by the assessment that the intention of the assessor was to assess the property to an unknown owner: Burdick v. Connell, 69-458; Griffin v. Tuttle, 74-219.

1307. Penalty. 827. If any assessor shall fail or neglect to perform any of the duties required of him by this chapter, at the time and in the manner specified, he shall be liable to a fine of not less than twenty nor more than five hundred dollars, to be recovered in an action brought in the district court, in the name of the county, and the judgment shall be against him and his bondsmen. [R., § 738.]

1308. Publication of revenue laws. 828. The auditor of state is hereby authorized and required to cause to be published, in pamphlet form, the revenue laws of this state, for the benefit of township assessors; and shall cause the same to be distributed to the county auditors, who shall distribute the same to the township assessors of their respective counties. [11 G. A., ch. 61, § 11.]

TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

1309. Powers. 829. The township trustees shall constitute a board of equalization for their respective townships, and have power to equalize the assessments of all tax payers within the same, except in such cities and incorporated towns as elect a township assessor, in which case the city council shall be the board of equalization, and shall perform such duties in substantially the same manner as is required of a township board of equalization, by increasing or diminishing the valuation of any piece of property, or the entire assessment of any tax payer, as they may deem just and necessary for an equitable distribution of the burden of taxation upon all the property of the township; provided, that such boards shall keep a record of their proceedings. [13 G. A., ch. 89, § 1.]

The township board possesses the power to equalize the assessments of persons to the same extent as it was possessed by the board of supervisors under Revision, § 739: Keck v. Board of Supervisors, 37-547.

The board is authorized to add to the assessment of the tax payer's moneys and credits and increase his assessment as based thereon: King v. Parker, 73-757.

The board has no authority to equalize assessments of real property in even-numbered years: Goold v. Lyon County, 74-95.

The provisions of this section as to cities do not apply to cities acting under special charter (arguendo): State v. Finger, 46-25.

Under statutes relating to cities acting under special charter, held, that the city council was authorized to act as a board of equalization as in cities under the general incorporation law: Kinsey v. Sweeney, 63-254.

The irregular exercise of the powers here conferred upon the city council will not deprive a party of the right of appeal under § 1312: Ingersoll v. Des Moines, 46-553.

Under Revision, § 739, which gave the board of supervisors authority to equalize the assessments of individuals, held, that they might raise or lower the assessments of particular persons when they believed that the assessment was too low or too high; and that, while they might properly receive evidence before doing so, they were not required to receive evidence in all cases, and that their discretion in such matter could not be controlled by proceedings under writ of certiorari, but only upon appeal, if at all; Smith v. Board of Supervisors, 30-531.

A tax payer is bound to know that his property has been assessed, and if he feels aggrieved thereby to appear before the board of equalization. In case of an over-assessment the tax payer cannot first apply for its correction to the board of supervisors: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74-283.

Where the tax payer attacks the action of the board of equalization in raising his assessment on the ground that it has not jurisdiction, it is for him to prove the fact upon which the alleged want of jurisdiction rests, for instance, that there was not a quorum present, or that the majority did not concur, or that there was no proper evidence to act upon: King v. Parker, 73-757.

The fact that a particular class of property is assessed to owners thereof at less than is proper will not authorize the board to increase the assessment on such property in the case of one particular tax payer. Such a change would increase rather than diminish the irregularity of assessment: Ingersoll v. Des Moines, 36-553.

The provision as to the record of the action of the board is directory, and the fact that the record does not show any action on the part of the board will not prevent an appeal where there has been a controversy determined before them: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

1310. Time of meeting; duties. 830. Said board shall meet for that purpose at the office of the township or city clerk on the first Monday in April of each year, and continue from day to day until completed; and at such meeting they may also add to the assessment as returned by the assessor, any taxable property in the township, city, or incorporated town, not included therein, placing the same to the name of the owner, if known, and assessing the value thereof. [Same, § 2.]

Where, under previous statutes, the board of supervisors were given similar powers to be exercised at their "June meeting," held, that the provision specifying the meeting was directory only, and that the exercise of the power at a subsequent meeting was not void: Easton v. Savery, 44-654, 658; Hill v. Wolfe, 28-577.

1311. Raising assessments. 18 G. A., ch. 109, § 3. At the first meeting of the board of equalization of any township, town or city, they shall decide what assessment should in their opinion be raised and make an alphabetical list of names of the individuals whose assessment it is proposed to raise, and post a copy of the same in a conspicuous place in the office or place of meeting of said board, and also in each postoffice located in said township, town or city, and the board shall, if, in their opinion, some assessments should be raised, hold an adjourned meeting, with at least one week intervening after posting said notices, before final action thereon, which notices shall state the time and place of holding such adjourned meeting.

Where the property owner appears before the board and is heard on the matter in controversy, he cannot afterward object to want of the notice here provided for. It was intended by this provision to give the tax payer an opportunity to be heard before the assessment made by the assessor could be lawfully increased by the addition of supposed omitted property, or by an increase of the assessment, and such notice must be given before the board can act. A notice that the board has increased the assessment is not sufficient: Henkle v. Keota, 68-334.

The statute in which this section is found is not unconstitutional as embracing a subject-matter not in the title, at least so far as this section is concerned: Ibid.

If the tax payer is present at the time of the action of the board, and is heard as to matters in controversy, he cannot afterwards object to want of notice: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

1312. Correcting assessment; appeals. 831; 18 G. A., ch. 109, § 1. Any person who may feel aggrieved at anything in the assessment of his property, may appear before said board of equalization in person, or by agent, at the time and place mentioned in the preceding section, and have the same corrected in such manner as to said board may seem just and equitable, and the assessors shall meet with said board and correct the assessment books as they may direct. Appeals may be taken from all boards of equalization to the circuit [district] court of the county where the assessment is made, within sixty days after the adjournment of such board of equalization, but not afterward. [R., § 740; 12 G. A., ch. 92, § 4; 13 G. A., ch. 89, § 3.]

Other remedies, when allowable:

Where the assessment is erroneous merely as being excessive, the only remedy is an application to the board of equalization, and if necessary an appeal therefrom. The fact that the party has no knowledge of the assessment until too late to make such application makes no difference: Nugent v. Bates, 51-77.

A mere error of the assessor in assessing, as personalty, property which should properly be included with the realty is such an error as must be corrected, if at all, by application to the board of equalization: Wilson v. Cass County, 69-147.

Failure to appear before the board of equalization to have an over-assessment corrected will not defeat the action of a party against an assessor for maliciously making such over-assessment, when the fact of the over-assessment was not known: Parkinson v. Parker, 48-667.

Where land was sold for taxes, a part of which was the personal tax of one not the owner of the land, and which was not a lien upon the land, held, that the owner might, after redeeming from the sale, sue for the recovery from the county of the part erroneously included in the sale, and it was not necessary that he should have gone before the board of equalization: Brownlee v. Marion County, 53-487.

In case of erroneous assessment, as, for instance, where property properly assessable to a firm in one county is also assessed to one of the partners in another county, the only remedy is by a proceeding before the board of equalization. An action to recover back taxes erroneously assessed cannot be maintained in such case: Harris v. Fremont County, 63-639.

Replevin: The right to levy taxes may be questioned by an action of replevin to recover back property claimed to be illegally seized for such taxes: Buell v. Ball, 20-282.

But in such an action the property owner cannot contest the tax by showing that the ordinance under which the tax was levied was procured by fraud: Ibid.

In an action of replevin against a county treasurer for property seized under a tax warrant, plaintiff, though erroneously assessed, cannot inquire into the regularity of a tax levied by a board having authority and jurisdiction: Bilbo v. Henderson, 21-56.

The tax payer must apply for relief from erroneous taxation to the board of equalization, and without doing so cannot, in an action of replevin, recover for property seized for such taxes: Buell v. Schaale, 39-293.

Injunction: The proper remedy for an erroneous and excessive assessment is by application to the board of equalization and not by injunction. But in case the law authorizing the tax is unconstitutional or the levy is without authority or jurisdiction, other remedies may be pursued: Mucklot v. Davenport, 17-379.

Injunction is not the proper remedy for determining the distribution of taxation among the several townships. The board of supervisors being a board of equalization for that purpose their action can only be reviewed by certiorari or upon appeal: District T^p v. Brown, 47-25.

A court of equity will not interfere by injunction to release the tax payer from a tax erroneously or irregularly levied, but may do so when the tax is wholly void, as, for instance, when it is levied upon exempt property or under an unconstitutional law: Powers v. Bowman, 53-359; Smith v. Osburn, 53-474.

But an assessment against personal property not taxable in the county, being without authority of law, is void, and equity will entertain jurisdiction to enjoin its collection. The jurisdiction of the board of equalization in such cases is not exclusive: Barber v. Farr, 54-57.

The collection of taxes which are illegal may be enjoined by action in equity: Wangler v. Black Hawk County, 56-384.

Equity will not interpose to prevent the collection of a tax on account of mere irregularities. If the tax is unauthorized by law, or is imposed upon exempt property, or is fraudulently assessed, equity will relieve: Conway v. Younkin, 28-295.

For mere irregularities in the apportionment of the taxes of a municipal corporation, the collection of its revenues cannot be enjoined by a tax payer: Morrison v. Hershire, 32-271.

A court of equity will not interfere to prevent the collection of taxes authorized by law, and to which the property is lawfully liable on account of errors or irregularities in the assessment: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

In such cases, if it does not appear that there is a want of power to levy the tax or that the property is not justly liable thereto or that the tax is excessive, equity will not grant relief: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40-66.

If a tax is illegal and not merely irregular, its enforcement may be restrained by injunction. So held where the county board of equalization had exceeded its powers in raising an individual assessment: Rood v. Board of Supervisors, 39-444.

Injunction may properly be granted to restrain the enforcement of an illegal tax. An action of replevin to regain possession of property distrained for the payment of the tax is not a full and complete remedy at law, such as will deprive the tax payer of his equitable remedy: Spencer v. Wheaton, 14-38.

A court of equity will not relieve a tax payer from the payment of proper and just taxes against his property on account of irregularities in the manner of placing the tax upon the tax-book: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112.

It is not necessary in seeking relief from an unauthorized assessment to apply to the board of equalization in the first instance. The case is different from that of erroneous or excessive assessment. A proceeding to enjoin may be resorted to in such cases, and in such proceeding the county treasurer is a proper party defendant: Hubbard v. Board of Supervisors, 23-130.

In an action by tax payers against the county officers to restrain the levying of a tax to pay railroad bonds the bondholders must be made parties to the suit in order to bind them, though they may not be absolutely necessary parties: Ex parte Holman, 28-88.

Residents and tax payers have such direct legal interest in the question of the validity of taxes that they are authorized to join in an action to declare them void: Wilkinson v. Van Orman, 70-230.

Mandamus: A party may by mandamus compel the board to act, but their discretion cannot be controlled by such action: Meyer v. Dubuque, 45-192.

Certiorari: Where the board orders a reduction of the taxation of an individual, but the assessor fails to make the correction in accordance with such order, and his books are turned over to the auditor, the tax payer may maintain an action of certiorari to have the error corrected: Keck v. Board of Supervisors, 37-547.

Where a county board of equalization acts in a case not within its jurisdiction certiorari is the proper remedy: Royce v. Jenney, 50-676.

But where the board has jurisdiction the exercise of its discretion cannot be reviewed in this manner: Smith v. Board of Supervisors, 30-531.

If the board has jurisdiction its action cannot be reviewed by certiorari, no matter what the motive is under which an assessment is changed: Polk County v. Des Moines, 70-351.

A tax payer is a proper party to maintain an action to question the validity of the proceedings of the city council acting as a board of equalization in reducing the taxes upon individual property: Collins v. Davis, 57-256.

Appeal: Where the board of equalization on its own motion raises the assessed value of a tax payer's property, no appearance before the board to have such action corrected is necessary to entitle the tax payer to appeal: Ingersoll v. Des Moines, 46-553.

This section does not prescribe the formalities to be pursued, and when proper notice of appeal is served the court to which the appeal is taken acquires jurisdiction and may properly overrule any motions to dismiss the appeal for irregularity: Bremer County Bank v. Bremer County, 42-394.

No bond is required upon the taking of such appeal: Ingersoll v. Des Moines, 46-553.

The amendment limiting the right of appeal to the time specified took away such right in cases in which that time had elapsed without any appeal being taken prior to the taking effect of the amendment: Slocum v. Fayette County, 61-169.

Upon such an appeal evidence may be introduced by the parties in addition to the matter shown by the record, and the court becomes an assessing tribunal clothed with authority to determine anew the sum in which the tax payer is to be assessed: Grimes v. Burlington, 74-123.

Upon appeal by a person seeking to have his assessment reduced the court has no authority to increase the assessment: Appeal of Des Moines Water Co., 48-324; German Am. Savings Bank v. Burlington, 54-609.

In such an appeal the property owner has no right to a jury trial. The duty of the court is to do what it is claimed the board failed to do, that is, make a just and equitable assessment. On appeal to the supreme court that court has the same duty and must weigh the evidence as an original question, as is done in equity cases, and determine therefrom what is the just and equitable value of the property for the purpose of taxation: Davis v. Clinton, 55-549; Dunlieth, etc., Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55-553.

A tax payer whose real property is assessed at more than its true cash value may still have redress, on appeal from the board of equalization, if his property is taxed as high as other property of greater value. And in a particular case, held, that under such circumstances the supreme court would, on appeal, reduce the valuation of plaintiff's real estate in order that it might correspond to other property: Burham v. Barber, 70-87.

Appearance cures any defect in the service of the notice of appeal: Richards v. Rock Rapids, 72-77.

The city council, while acting as a board of equalization, represents the city and may, if an appeal is taken from its action, support it in the appellate court, and the city solicitor may properly appear for the council in such matter: Kinnie v. Waverly, 42-437.

COUNTY BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

1313. Powers. 832. The board of supervisors shall constitute a county board of equalization, and shall equalize the assessments of the several townships, cities and incorporated towns of their county, at their regular meeting in June of each year, substantially as the state board equalize assessments among the several counties of the state. [R., § 739; Ex. S., 8 G. A., ch. 24, § 3.]

The board may equalize by adding to, or deducting from, the valuation of different classes of property in the different townships, as well as by increasing or diminishing the aggregate valuation of all the property therein: Harney v. Board of Supervisors, 44-203.

After personal property has been classified by the board of supervisors, and assessments have been made and returned thereon, the board, as a board of equalization, may, if they believe that any class in one town or township is valued too high or too low, add or deduct the proper per centum for the purposes of equalization: Ibid.

While the township trustees have power to equalize assessments of tax payers within their township, yet the board of supervisors may overrule their action for the purpose of securing uniform taxation throughout the county upon the different classes of property. (See § 1300): Cassett v. Sherman, 42-623.

Therefore, held, that where bank stock was assessed at sixty per cent. of its par value in all townships except one, the county board of equalization might raise the assessment of bank stock of holders thereof in that township to the same per cent.: Ibid.

The action of the county board of equalization can only be reviewed upon appeal or by certiorari, not by injunction: Macklot v. Davenport, 17-379; District T'p v. Brown, 47-25.

The board has no power to raise or lower the assessment of an individual tax payer: Royce v. Jenney, 50-676; and a tax based thereon is void: Rood v. Board of Supervisors, 39-444.

A tax payer cannot apply to the board of supervisors for relief against an over-assessment: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74-283.

The board of supervisors have no jurisdiction to determine the right of a municipal corporation to assess taxes, and they cannot remit taxes on the ground of absence of such right: District T'p v. Moore, 39-605.

Where two townships, being included within the corporate limits of a city, constitute but one assessorial district, the board has no authority to increase the assessment of one of such townships. It may only equalize as between different assessorial districts: Getchell v. Board of Supervisors, 51-107.

1314. Abstract. 833. Each county auditor shall, on or before the third Monday in June in each year, make out and transmit to the auditor of state, an abstract of the real and personal property in his county, in which he shall set forth:

1. The number of acres of land in his county, and the aggregate value of the same, exclusive of town lots, returned by the assessors as corrected by the county board of equalization;

2. The aggregate value of real property in each town in the county, returned by the assessor as corrected by the county board of equalization;

3. The aggregate value of personal property in his county;

4. An abstract of the aggregate value and number of cattle, the aggregate value and number of horses, the aggregate value and number of mules, the aggregate value and number of sheep, the aggregate value and number of swine over six months old, as the same are returned by the assessors of his county. [R., § 741; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 6.]

STATE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

1315. Organization; duties. 834. The executive council shall constitute the state board of equalization, and shall meet at the seat of government on the second Monday of July in each year in which real property is assessed. The auditor of state shall be clerk of the board by virtue of his office, and shall lay before it the abstracts transmitted to him by the county auditors, as required by the preceding section, and then the board shall proceed to equalize the valuation of real property among the several counties and towns in the following manner:

1. They shall add to the aggregate valuation of real property of each county, which they shall believe to be valued below its proper valuation, such percentage in each case as will raise the same to its proper valuation;

2. They shall deduct from the aggregate valuation of real property of each county, which they shall believe to be valued above its proper valuation, such percentage in each case as will reduce the same to its proper valuation. [R., § 742; C., '51, §§ 481-2.]

The state board has no power to equalize personal property: Harney v. Board of Supervisors, 44-203.

1316. Rate of state tax. 835. The state board shall also determine each year, at the same time, the rate of state tax to be levied and collected, not exceeding two mills on the dollar. [R., § 743; Ex. S., 8 G. A., ch. 24, § 1.]

1317. Record; change of valuation. 836. Said board shall keep a full record of their proceedings, and they shall finish their equalization on or before the first Monday of August, immediately after which the auditor of state shall transmit to each county auditor, a statement of the percentage to be added to, or deducted from the valuation of real property in his county, and a statement of the rate of state tax fixed as aforesaid. The county auditor shall add to or deduct from the valuation of each parcel of real property in his county the required percentage; rejecting all fractions of fifty cents or less in the result, and counting all over fifty cents as one dollar. [R., § 743; C., '51, § 483.]

AUDITORS SHALL TRANSMIT ASSESSMENTS.

1318. Tax list. 837. After the equalization in June, hereinbefore provided, and before the first Monday in November, the county auditor shall transcribe the assessments of the several townships into a suitable book to be provided at the expense of the county, properly ruled and headed with distinct columns, in which shall be entered the names of tax payers, descriptions of lands, number of acres and value, number of town lots and value, value of personal property, and each description of tax, with a column for polls and one for payments. [R., § 745; C., '51, § 486.]

Where the collection of a road tax was authorized, but owing to a change in the method of assessment of railway corporations no one was authorized to put the tax for a certain year upon the tax list, held (under Rev., § 745), that such duty devolved upon the clerk of the board of supervisors: Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kossuth County, 41-57, 66.

The auditor may correct errors found in the assessments upon transcribing them, and insert the name of an owner in the tax book: Adams v. Snow, 65-435.

1319. Consolidated tax. 838. All taxes which are uniform throughout any civil township or independent school district, shall be formed into a single tax, entered upon the tax list, in a single column, and denominated a consolidated tax; and each tax receipt shall show the percentage levied for each separate fund. [13 G. A., ch. 138, § 1.]

LEVY.

1320. Made and recorded. 839. At the regular meeting in September in each year, the board of supervisors shall levy the requisite tax for the current year in accordance with law, and shall record the same in the proper book, and the county auditor shall, as soon as practicable, complete the tax list by carrying out in a column by itself the consolidated tax, highway tax, polls, irregular tax, if any be levied, and total tax, and after adding up each column of said taxes, he shall, in his abstract at the end of each township, incorporated town, or city list, apportion the consolidated tax among the respective funds to which it belongs, according to the number of mills levied for each of said funds, showing a summary of the total amount of each distinct tax. [R., § 746; C., '51, § 485; 13 G. A., ch. 138, § 2.]

[As to levy of dog tax, see § 2289. As to levy of road tax, see § 1464, 1467.]

When to be made: The statutory provisions as to the time for making the levy are only directory, and a levy at a meeting preceding that at which the levy should be made will not be void, no prejudice having resulted to the party complaining: Easton v. Savery, 44-654.

So where a school-house tax was not levied by the board of supervisors at the meeting at which it should have been levied, held, that it might be levied afterward with the annual levy of the next year: Ferrin v. Benson, 49-325.

Upon a final adjournment of a meeting of the board of supervisors, the members have no power to assemble or to transact any business required to be transacted in session until the next regular meeting, unless they be convened in special session in the meantime, in the manner prescribed by statute, and any action taken by them by way of making a levy without being so convened will be void: Scott v. Union County, 63-383.

Record: The record of a levy need not be signed individually by the persons authorized to make the levy. An entry of the action upon the proper record is sufficient: Martin v. Cole, 38-141.

It is not competent to prove the fact of levy by parol evidence where none appears of record: Moore v. Cooke, 40-290.

Absence of all record of a levy will not conclusively show that none was made, but absence of the record is a circumstance tending to show that none was made, and may be sufficient to overcome the prima facie evidence in favor of the levy which is afforded by a tax deed: Eintrager v. Kiene, 62-605.

A previous statute directing that the levy should be recorded in the proper book, held directory, and that a record kept upon loose sheets of paper containing the essential facts of a levy and preserved in the proper office constituted a sufficient levy to support the tax: Prouty v. Tallman, 65-354.

The record of the action of the board in a particular case showing a recommendation of the committee for the voting of a tax, and the adoption of such report, held sufficient to show a valid levy: West v. Whitaker, 37-598.

Where the records of a board of officers authorized to make a levy showed that they met on a certain date, forming a board to levy taxes for the year 1859, and "decided as follows," the number of mills of tax for special purposes being mentioned, held, that such record sufficiently showed the making of a levy for that year: Tallman v. Cooke, 43-330.

Actual levy required: Where a tax is authorized by special vote it must be actually levied, the act of the electors in authorizing the levy not being alone sufficient: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Woodbury County, 39-172.

1321. For bonded indebtedness. 840. It shall not be lawful for the board of supervisors of any county, to levy taxes in any one year for the payment of bonded indebtedness, except as provided in section two hundred and ninety-one, chapter one, title four of this code [§ 379], including judgments founded on such indebtedness, of more than three mills on the dollar upon the last corrected valuation. But this shall not be construed to reduce the rate of taxation below the rate fixed for one year, in any county in which a specific rate was fixed by the vote of such county authorizing the issue of such bonds. [10 G. A., ch. 124, § 1.]

The limit here imposed does not apply to a judgment: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 52-26.

1322. Errors corrected. 841. The county auditor may correct any clerical or other error in the assessment or tax book, and when such correction, affecting the amount of tax, is made after the books shall have passed into the hands of the treasurer, he shall charge the treasurer with all sums added to the several taxes, and credit him with all the deductions therefrom and report the same to the supervisors. [R., § 747.]

Where a correction of the rate of taxation was authorized, but, owing to a change in the method of assessment of railway corporations, no one was authorized to put the tax for a certain year upon the tax list, held, that such duty devolved upon the clerk of the board of supervisors (now the auditor): Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kossuth County, 41-57.

The auditor is authorized to correct errors found in the assessment upon transcribing them, and the name of the owner may be inserted by him in the tax book: Adams v. Snow, 65-435.

Where the assessor omitted to insert in his list the name of one of two joint owners of property, held, that the assessment book might properly be corrected in that respect: Conway v. Younkin, 28-295.

To authorize a correction in the assessment or tax book as to the valuation of property there must be an error or mistake shown. An averment that the valuation was not fair or reasonable is not sufficient to justify a change: Jones v. Tiffin, 24-190.

Where it appeared that the assessment roll had been corrected by some one, and that as so corrected it had remained on file as a record in the auditor's office, and been regarded in subsequent proceedings as correct, held, that Sufficiency of: A motion in a city council "to levy a tax," which is adopted, constitutes a present levy: Snell v. Fort Dodge, 45-564.

Where there is a sufficient levy of taxes, mere irregularities will not affect their validity: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168.

Effect: After the levy of taxes by a county to which another county is attached for revenue, and the placing of the tax lists in the treasurer's hands, the county thus attached cannot by subsequent separation acquire any rights in such taxes: Hilliard v. Griffin, 72-331.

As to levy of taxes in aid of railroads, see § 2083.

a party objecting to the correction as not made by proper authority had the burden of showing that it was incorrect and that the taxes assessed were inequitable or unjust, it appearing that unless covered by such correction the land had been entirely omitted from assessment: Beeson v. Johns, 59-166.

Where the lands of non-residents were not returned on the assessment rolls for a particular year, and at the time of transcribing the assessments such lands were entered on the tax list by the county auditor, who listed the lands and fixed the valuation thereof, and delivered the tax list, including such lands, to the county treasurer, upon which sales for delinquent taxes were made, held, that such assessment and sales thereunder were valid: Robb v. Robinson, 66-590.

The powers conferred upon the auditor to correct errors in the assessment include the power to insert property which has been omitted and is subject to taxation. The time within which the auditor may make this correction is not limited by statute, and it may be made after the levy of the tax: Parker v. Van Steenburg, 68-174.

The power here given to the auditor includes the power to determine when a mistake has been made: Fuller v. Butler, 72-729.

TAX BOOK AND LIST.

1323. Show sale. 842. The county auditor, when making up the tax book of the county and before said book is placed in the hands of the county treasurer for collection of the taxes therein, shall designate each piece or parcel of real estate sold for taxes and not redeemed, by writing in a plain manner opposite to each such piece the word "sold." [12 G. A., ch. 75, § 1.]

A failure of the officer to so designate a parcel as sold and not redeemed when he should do so does not affect the sale previously made: Playter v. Cochran, 37-258.

1324. Tax list delivered. 843; 21 G. A., ch. 132. The county auditor shall make an entry upon the tax list showing what it is, and for what county and year it is, and then shall deliver it to the county treasurer on or before the thirty-first day of December, taking his receipt therefor; and such list shall be full and sufficient authority for the county treasurer to collect taxes therein levied. But no informality therein, and no delay in delivering the same after the time above specified, shall affect the validity of any taxes, or sales, or other proceedings for the collection of taxes under this title. [R., § 748; C., '51, § 487.]

The tax list is a complete protection to the treasurer in making distress and sale thereunder: See § 1339.

The tax warrant provided for under the corresponding section of the Revision was held not essential, the power of the treasurer to sell being derived from the statute directly: Parler v. Sexton, 29-421; Johnson v. Chase, 30-308; Hurley v. Powell, 31-64; Rhodes v. Sexton, 33-540; Madson v. Sexton, 37-562; Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153; and therefore the provision in relation to the warrant is omitted in the Code: Code Comm's Report.

After the tax duplicate is made out and is placed in the treasurer's hands it constitutes the best and only evidence in whose name any particular tract of land is taxed, and it remains such at least until there is another assessment, which for the time, and until another tax duplicate is made out, becomes the evidence in whose name real estate is taxed: Fuller v. Butler, 72-729.

When tax books are placed in the hands of the county treasurer for collection he is charged with the taxes and is required to collect and account for them, and his duty to do so cannot be divested by separation of a portion of the territory over which the taxes have been assessed and levied: Hillard v. Griffin, 72-331.

1325. Aggregate valuation certified. 844. At the time of the delivery of said list to the treasurer, the auditor shall make to the auditor of state a certified statement showing the aggregate valuation of lands, town property, and personal property in the county, each by itself, and also the aggregate amount of each separate tax as shown by said tax book. [R., § 748.]

DUTY OF TREASURER.

1326. Entering previous delinquent taxes. 845. The treasurer, on receiving the tax book for each year, shall enter upon the same in separate columns, opposite each parcel of real property or person's name, on which, or against whom any tax remains unpaid for either of the preceding years, the year or years for which such delinquent tax so remains due and unpaid. And any sale for the whole or any part of such delinquent tax, not so entered, shall be invalid. [R., § 750; C., '51, § 488.]

Under this section a personal tax which is a lien upon realty, as well as a real property tax, is to be brought forward and entered as against the property: Cummings v. Easton, 46-183.

The treasurer should thus bring forward any personal tax which has become a lien upon real property and enter it opposite such real property, although the personal tax was not assessed against the person who was the owner of such property at the time the assessment was made, nor the person owning the property at the time of making the entry: Ibid.

Although under such provision any sale for the whole or any part of a delinquent tax not thus brought forward is declared to be invalid, the right to enforce a performance of the duty of entering upon the tax books taxes remaining unpaid for preceding years cannot be barred so long as the right to enforce the taxes exists. So held in an action to compel the treasurer to enter up and collect a railroad tax: Harwood v. Brownell, 48-657.

Where a person purchases land against which no delinquent taxes appear, the treasurer cannot, by afterwards bringing forward delinquent taxes which had not been properly brought forward, make them a lien upon the property as against such purchaser. Taxes not thus brought forward cease to be a lien: Jiska v. Ringgold County, 57-630.

The provision of § 1352, for refunding to the purchaser at a tax sale taxes illegally exacted, are applicable to taxes not carried forward as thus required, and for which the sale is therefore illegal: Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

The lieu of previous taxes not included in the sale is divested by the sale, and such previous taxes cannot be enforced: See § 1353 and notes.

A tax sale for delinquent tax of previous years not carried forward on the tax books is invalid: Gardner v. Early, 69-42; Barke v.

Early, 72-273; Hooper v. Sac County Bank, 72-280; Buckley v. Early, 72-289.

A sale for taxes not carried forward is not void but voidable, and advantage of the objection should be taken within five years under the provisions of § 1388: Griffin v. Bruce, 73-126; Guthrie v. Harker, 27 Fed. Rep., 586.

Where personal property taxes were never carried forward except that they were entered in a separate book showing the names of persons so taxed and the amount of such taxes and the page on which the tax appeared on the tax lists in the office, held, that such entries did not constitute a carrying forward of the taxes as required by this section and that a sale therefor was invalid: Dows v. Dale, 74-108.

1327. Penalty on taxes not brought forward. 15 G. A., ch. 29, § 1. In all cases where the county treasurer in any county in this state has neglected for the term of four years, or more, to bring forward the delinquent taxes on personal property, on the tax books, as required in section eight hundred and forty-five, chapter one, title six of the code [§ 1326], or has for four years or more neglected to collect said tax by distress and sale of personal property or real estate, upon which said tax is a lien, it shall be the duty of the board of supervisors of the county to remit all of the penalties and interest that may have accrued on such delinquent taxes, on the payment by the person liable for the same of the original amount of such tax.

This statute does not release the treasurer from liability for not collecting such taxes, and is not therefore void as impairing the obligation of contracts. Nor is the statute a special law for the assessment and collection of taxes within the meaning of article 3, § 30, of the constitution. Nor is the statute void as against public policy as encouraging delinquencies in the payment of taxes: Beecher v. Board of Supervisors, 50-538.

1328. Treasurer to collect. 846. The treasurer, after making the above entry, shall proceed to collect the taxes, and the list shall be his authority and justification against any illegality in the proceedings prior to receiving the list; and he is also authorized and required to collect, as far as practicable, the taxes remaining unpaid on the tax books of previous years. [R., § 751.]

1329. Notice of previous sale. 847. Each county treasurer shall, when any person offers to pay taxes on any real estate marked "sold" notify such person that such property has been sold for taxes, and inform him for what taxes said property was sold, and at what time said sale was effected. [12 G. A., ch. 75, § 2.]

The neglect of the treasurer to thus notify a party paying taxes does not affect a sale already made nor authorize a redemption therefrom after the time for redemption has expired: Playter v. Cochran, 37-258.

1330. Certificate of taxes due. 848. The county treasurer shall certify, in writing, the entire amount of taxes and assessments due upon any parcel of real estate, and all sales of the same for unpaid taxes or assessments shown by the books in his office, with the amount required for redemption from the same, if still redeemable, whenever he shall be requested so to do by any person having any interest in said real estate, and paid or tendered his fees for such certificate at the rate of fifty cents for the first parcel in each township, incorporated town, or city, and ten cents for each subsequent parcel in the same township, town or city. Each description in the tax list shall be reckoned a parcel in computing the amount of such fees.

1331. Effect. 849. Such certificate, with the treasurer's receipt showing the payment of all the taxes therein specified, and the auditor's certificate of redemption from the tax sales therein mentioned shall be conclusive evidence for all purposes and against all persons, that the parcel of real estate in said certificate and receipt described was, at the date thereof, free and clear of all taxes and assessments, and sales for taxes or assessments, except sales whereon the time of redemption had already expired, and the tax purchaser had received his deed.

1332. Treasurer liable. 850. For any loss resulting to the county, or any subdivision thereof, or to any tax purchaser, or tax payer, from an error in said certificate or receipt, the treasurer and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond.

1333. Assessment of omitted property. 851. The county treasurer shall assess any real property subject to taxation, which may have been omitted by the assessor, board of equalization, or county auditor, and collect taxes thereon, and in such cases he is required to note opposite the tract or lot assessed, the words, "by treasurer;" provided, that such assessment shall be made within two years after the tax list shall have been delivered to him for collection, and not afterwards. [R., § 752; C., '51, § 851; 11 G. A., ch. 104.]

The omission of the words "by treasurer" does not render the assessment so made by him invalid, in view of the duty imposed upon the owner by the following section: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

1334. Defective assessment; duty of owner. 852. In all cases where real property subject to taxation shall not have been assessed by the township assessor or other proper officer, the owner thereof, by himself or his agent, shall have the same properly assessed by the treasurer and pay the taxes thereon; and no failure of the owner to have such property assessed, or to have the errors in the assessment corrected, and no irregularity, error, or omission in the assessment of such property, shall affect in any manner the legality of the taxes levied thereon, or affect any right or title to such real property which would have accrued to any party claiming or holding under and by virtue of a deed executed by the treasurer as provided for by this title, had the assessment of such property been in all respects regular and valid. [R., § 753.]

An error in assessments does not affect the validity of a tax sale: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160, 172.

An error of the assessor under § 1306, in assessing land to unknown owner, is cured by this section: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44-622, 632.

This section is applicable to taxes levied for construction of drains, etc., under § 1852: Patterson v. Baumer, 43-477.

As to effect of illegality of part of a tax upon the sale, see notes to § 1352.

1335. When liens. 853; 21 G. A., ch. 133. All taxes upon real estate shall, as between vendor and purchaser, become a lien upon such real estate on and after the thirty-first day of December in each year. [9 G. A., ch. 110.]

Taxes are not, prior to the date specified, a lien against which the covenants of grantor's deed operate. Therefore, where a contract of sale was made prior to that date and a deed executed subsequently and in pursuance thereof, held, that such taxes were not covered by the covenants of the deed: Sackett v. Osborn, 26-146.

This provision does not necessarily relieve the vendor from personal liability for taxes upon property which is sold by him before the date specified. When a portion of the property on which the tax is levied remains un-disposed of, the collector having no authority to apportion it, the vendor remains liable for all: Shaw v. Orr, 30-355.

Where land is conveyed after the date specified the grantor is liable under the covenants of his deed for the taxes assessed for that year, but is not liable to the purchaser of his grantee for personal taxes of the latter, for which, together with the realty tax due thereon, the land has been sold at tax sale and from which the last purchaser has redeemed: Baldwin v. Mayne, 42-181.

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE COLLECTION OF TAXES.

1336. What receivable. 854. Auditor's warrants shall be received by the county treasurer in full payment of state taxes, and county warrants shall be received at the treasury of the proper county for the ordinary county tax, but money only shall be received for the school tax. Highway taxes may be discharged and highway certificates of work done received as provided by law. [R., § 754; C., '51, § 489.]

1337. Legal tender; national bank notes. 855. The county treasurers are authorized and required to receive in payment of all taxes by them collected, together with the interest and principal of the school fund, treasury notes issued as legal tender by the government of the United States, and the notes issued by the banks organized under, and in accordance with, the conditions of the act of the congress of the United States entitled, "An act to provide a national currency secured by a pledge of United States stocks, and to provide for the redemption thereof," approved February 25, 1863. [9 G. A., ch. 17, § 1; 10 G. A., ch. 43, § 1.]

1338. By treasurer of state. 856. The treasurer of state is hereby required to receive of the several county treasurers the above mentioned notes, in payment of any claims the state may have against any county for any part of the permanent school fund, or for any taxes due the state; and the said state treasurer shall pay out said notes in redemption of outstanding auditor's warrants. [9 G. A., ch. 17, § 5; 10 G. A., ch. 43, § 4.]

DISTRESS AND SALE.

1339. Payment by instalments; personal property liable. 857; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 1. No demand of taxes shall be necessary, but it shall be the duty of every person subject to taxation to attend at the office of the treasurer, unless otherwise provided, at some time between the first Monday in January and the first day of March following, and pay his taxes in full; or, he may pay the one-half thereof before the first day of March succeeding the levy and the remaining half thereof before the first day of September following; provided, that in all cases where the half of any taxes has not been paid before the first day of April succeeding the levy thereof, the whole amount of taxes charged against such entry shall become delinquent from the first day of March following such levy; and in case the second instalment of any taxes be not paid before the first day of October succeeding its maturity, penalty shall be computed on such instalment from the first day of September designating the maturity of such instalment; provided also, that in all cases where taxes are paid by instalment as herein provided, each of such payments, except road taxes, shall be apportioned among the several funds for which taxes have been assessed, in their proper proportions. And if any one neglect to pay his taxes at or before maturity, as herein provided, the treasurer may make the same by distress and sale of his personal property not exempt from taxation, and the tax list alone shall be sufficient warrant therefor. [R., § 756; C., '51, § 492.]

[By special provision the changes made in this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194, took effect the second Monday in November, 1884.]

The tax a debt: A tax lawfully levied becomes a debt which may be recovered by action at law, even though its collection is otherwise provided for, unless the special remedies provided by statute are made exclusive: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56.

Equitable remedy: Where the statutory remedy for collection of taxes is plain, adequate and speedy, a court of equity will not interfere to enforce their collection: Cedar Rapids & M. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

Working out: The fact that a railroad has not been notified to work out the part of the road tax which might be paid in work will not authorize the restraining of the collection of the entire tax. Perhaps, upon a proper offer to work out the proportion which may be paid in work, the collection of that part might be enjoined: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168.

Personal taxes: A tax upon personal property becomes a lien against the owner thereof from the time of his assessment at the place of his residence, and a subsequent removal before the payment of the tax will not relieve him from liability: Toothaker v. Moore, 9-468.

Payment by stranger: While a mere stranger has not the right to pay taxes, yet if payment be made by such an one, and received by the treasurer, the property cannot be afterward sold for such tax: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Guthrie, 53-383.

Payment by mortgagor: It is the duty of the mortgagor of real property to pay the taxes thereon: Porter v. Lufferty, 33-254; Dayton v. Rice, 47-429.

The mortgagor is the party primarily liable to pay the taxes on the mortgaged property, even after foreclosure sale, during the period of redemption, and any tax title acquired by the mortgagor during that time will be held as having been acquired by him in trust for the purchaser at the foreclosure sale, and he cannot set up such title in opposition to the title of such purchaser: Dayton v. Rice, 47-429.

Lienholder: A mortgagee is entitled to pay taxes on the mortgaged property, and upon redemption being made from him by the holder of the junior lien, is entitled to have such taxes reimbursed: Strong v. Burdick, 52-630.

A junior incumbrancer paying taxes due upon the premises acquires a first lien for the amount thereof: Evans v. Burns, 67-179.

Assignee for benefit of creditors: Where taxes were levied on property after an assignment for the benefit of creditors, held, that as by § 3308 the assignee was authorized to pay such taxes as a preferred claim, he should be required to pay to the mortgagee of lands upon which such taxes became a lien, and who had been required to redeem the land from sale for such taxes, the amount levied upon personal property covered by the assignment with six per cent. interest: Brooks v. Eighmeyer, 53-276.

No claim for taxes is required to be filed before the assignee, nor need any demand be made. The assignee must, at his peril, ascertain whether the property or fund in his hands is liable for assessments or levies of taxes: Huiscamp v. Albert, 60-421.

Vendee: Where a purchaser of real estate under contract for a deed takes possession thereof, he is liable for the taxes thereon, and on subsequently taking the deed cannot require the vendor to covenant against such taxes: Miller v. Corey, 15-166.

While, as between vendor and vendee in possession under contract of sale, it is the duty of the latter to pay the taxes, yet the former may pay them to protect his title, and for any amount paid in removing tax incumbrances with six per cent. interest thereon, he is entitled to a lien upon the land after decree for a conveyance in performance of the contract: Lillie v. Case, 54-177.

The vendor is not necessarily relieved from personal liability for taxes upon property sold by him before November 1, which is the time when taxes become a lien upon real property, under § 1335. If a portion of the property on which a tax is levied remains undisposed of, the collector having no authority to apportion the tax, the vendor remains liable for all: Shaw v. Orr, 30-355.

The vendee being deemed in equity to be the owner and entitled to possession must pay his proportion of the taxes accruing upon the land from the date his right to possession arose: Sherman v. Savery, 2 McCrary, 107.

Where the title was wrongfully conveyed by the vendor to another, although he was held by a court of equity to be the trustee for the vendee proper, yet the payment of taxes by him was held not to be voluntary, and he was allowed to recover for taxes paid while the relation existed: Ibid.

Purchase subject to: The purchaser of land upon which taxes are due and unpaid takes subject to the lien of such taxes, but does not become personally liable therefor: Ritchie v. McDuffie, 62-46.

Under a lease providing that the tenant should pay all the taxes assessed against the property during the continuance of the lease, held, that he was liable for special assessments for local improvements, such as paving and curbing of adjacent streets: Cassady v. Hammer, 62-359.

A purchaser of land on which taxes are due does not become personally liable therefor: Ritchie v. McDuffie, 62-46.

The tax list is sufficient warrant, even when the tax is a special one, to protect the treasurer in his proceedings thereunder from liability for any irregular or illegal proceedings of the officers connected with the levy of tax, provided such levy is authorized: Games v. Robb, 8-193.

Where a tax has been legally ordered by officers de jure certainly, if not de facto, against a person liable to be taxed, and the officer has been duly chosen and qualified to collect such tax, he will, in the absence of fraud on his part, be protected, and is not answerable for any irregularity in the proceedings: Hershey v. Fry, 1-593.

This section does not make taxes upon personal property a lien thereon: Jaffray v. Anderson, 66-718.

1340. Notice of sale. 858. When the treasurer distrains goods, and the owner shall refuse to give a good and sufficient bond for the delivery of said goods on the day of sale, he may keep them at the expense of the owner, and shall give notice of the time and place of their sale within five days after the taking, in the manner constables are required to give notice of the sale of personal property under execution; and the time of sale shall not be more than twenty days from the day of taking, but he may adjourn the sale from time to time, not exceeding five days in all, and shall adjourn at least once when there are no bidders, and in case of adjournment he shall put up a notice thereof at the place of sale. Any surplus remaining above the taxes, charges of keeping, and fees for sale, shall be returned to the owner, and the treasurer shall, on demand, render an account in writing of the sale and charges. [R., § 757; C., '51, § 493.]

1341. Collection by deputies. 859. Immediately after the taxes become delinquent, each county treasurer shall proceed to collect the same by distress and sale of the personal property of the delinquent tax payers, in the manner prescribed in the preceding section, and for this purpose he shall, within sixty days after the taxes become delinquent, appoint one or more deputies to aid and assist him in collecting the delinquent taxes in his county. Each deputy so appointed, shall receive as a compensation for his services, and expenses, the sum of five per cent. on the amount of all delinquent taxes collected and paid over by him, which percentage he shall collect from the delinquent, together with the whole amount of delinquent taxes and interest; and in the discharge of his duties as such assistant collector, should it become necessary to make the delinquent taxes by distress and sale, he shall be entitled to receive the same compensation, in addition to the five per cent. provided for in this section, as constables are entitled to receive for the sale of property on execution. But this section shall not apply, so far as it authorizes the appointment of deputies, to any county in which township collectors of taxes are elected, and the owners or agents of land that has been sold for delinquent taxes shall have the same privilege and extension of time for paying taxes as other tax payers whose land has not been so sold. [9 G. A., ch. 173, § 17; 12 G. A., ch. 137, § 6.]

The fact that lands have been advertised for sale for taxes does not prevent a sale of personal property to pay the same. If the lands, however, had been actually sold to pay the taxes, personal property could not be subjected to their payment: Emerick v. Sloan, 18-139.

A failure of the treasurer to collect the taxes by distress and sale of personal property, when he might do so, will not invalidate a subsequent sale of real property for such taxes: Stewart v. Corbin, 25-144.

The receipt of a deputy collector should have the same force and effect as that of the treasurer: Jones v. Welsing, 52-220.

A person appointed to collect taxes cannot recover from a private person additional fees for services performed under an alleged contract to pay such additional compensation in consideration of his remaining in office and performing the duties thereof: Fawcett v. Eberly, 58-544.

1342. Resistance. 860. If the treasurer, or his deputy, be resisted or impeded in the execution of his office, he may require any suitable person to assist him therein, and if such person refuse the aid, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding ten dollars to be recovered by civil action in the name of the county, and the person resisting shall be liable as in the case of resisting the sheriff in the execution of civil process. [R., § 758; C., '51, § 494.]

1343. Taxes certified to other county. 861. In all cases of delinquent taxes, in any county where the person upon whose property the same were levied, shall have removed into another county of the state, leaving no property within the county where the taxes were levied, out of which the same can be made, the treasurer of the county where said taxes are delinquent, shall make out a certified abstract of said taxes as they appear upon the tax book, and forward the same to the treasurer of the county in which the person resides, or has property, who is owing said taxes, whenever the treasurer transmitting said abstract has reason to believe that said taxes can be collected thereby. [12 G. A., ch. 190, § 1.]

of said abstract in the office of the treasurer to whom the same is sent, it shall have the full force and effect of a levy of taxes in that county, and the collection of the same shall be proceeded with in the same manner provided by law for the collection of other taxes. [Same, § 2.]

1345. Penalty. 863. The officer collecting taxes so certified into another county, shall, in addition to the penalties provided by law on delinquent taxes, assess and collect the further penalty of twenty per cent. on the whole amount of such taxes, inclusive of the penalties thereon. [Same, § 3.]

1346. Return. 864. The officer receiving said abstract, shall, whenever in his opinion the taxes are uncollectible, return the abstract with the indorsement thereon of "uncollectible," and in case said taxes are collected, the officer receiving the same shall transmit the amount to the treasurer of the county where said taxes were levied, less the penalty provided by section eight hundred and sixty-three of this chapter [§ 1345]. [Same, § 4.]

DELINQUENT — LIEN — PENALTY.

1347. When delinquent; liens. 865; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 1. All taxes due and unpaid on the first day of March or the first day of September, shall become delinquent and draw interest as hereinafter provided; and taxes upon real property are hereby made a perpetual lien thereon against all persons except the United States and this state; and taxes due from any person upon personal property shall be a lien upon any real property owned by such person, or to which he may acquire a title; and the treasurer is authorized and directed to collect the delinquent taxes by the sale of any property upon which the taxes are levied, or any other personal or real property belonging to the person to whom the taxes are assessed. [R., § 759; C., '51, § 495; Ex. S., 8 G. A., § 6.]

[By special provision the changes made in this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194, took effect the second Monday in November, 1884. As to priority of tax in case of assignment for benefit of creditors, see § 3308.]

A personal tax is not a mere personal claim against the person taxed, but is a charge upon his real property: Garrettson v. Schofield, 44-35; Cummings v. Easton, 46-183; Paulson v. Rule, 49-576.

Personal property taxes become a lien on land acquired subsequently to the assessment: Cummings v. Easton, 46-183.

Such taxes do not become a lien upon real property of the tax payer until such taxes are due, and they cannot be deemed due before a levy thereof is made: Castle v. Anderson, 69-428.

It is a general rule appertaining to the law of taxation that taxes are not a lien upon property of the tax payer, unless a lien is expressly created or provided for by statute; and as no lien upon personal property is provided for, taxes are not a lien thereon: Juffray v. Anderson, 66-718.

Taxes are not a lien upon personalty until distraint therefor is made after the mode pointed out by statute; hence a person purchasing personal property before distraint has been made for taxes is protected against a subsequent distraint for taxes assessed against his vendor, and a mortgagee of personal property who takes possession under his mortgage and sells the property, either directly or through a decree or order of the court, before any distraint is made, is entitled to the proceeds so far as they may be necessary to pay his claim, as against the taxes assessed against the mortgagor: Maish v. Bird, 22 Fed. Rep., 180.

Taxes are not a lien upon personal property and therefore do not have priority over other claims against such property when in the hands of a receiver. The special statutory provisions with reference to assignments for the benefit of creditors (§ 3308) are not applicable in such case: Howard County v. Strother, 71-683.

Payment by person not the owner: Taxes paid by one claiming title adversely to the real owner without his consent cannot be recovered back from the owner after the adverse title is declared void. The mere fact that the real owner knew that the adverse claimant was paying the taxes under claim of title is not sufficient ground for inferring a promise to repay: Garrigan v. Knight, 47-525; Read v. Howe, 49-65.

A party who pays tax upon land without any right to do so, and having no claim whatever to the property, cannot recover the taxes paid from the rightful owner who has purchased the land since the payment of such taxes. No request to pay can be presumed in such a case: La Rue v. King, 74-288.

A party who pays taxes upon the land of another, whose title is of record, cannot claim that the owner is thereby estopped from asserting his title: Merrill v. Tobin, 30 Fed. Rep., 738.

Payment under supposed title: Where title to land was for a long time in litigation between parties claiming title under conflicting grants, and one of them paid the taxes, and it was finally decided that the title was in the other, held, that the one who paid the taxes might recover the amount so paid from the one adjudged owner of the land: Goodnow v. Moulton, 51-555; Goodnow v. Plumb, 52-711; Goodnow v. Wells, 54-326; Goodnow v. Stryker, 61-261; Goodnow v. Stryker, 62-221; Goodnow v. Wells, 76-774.

Under such circumstances, held, that the payment of taxes voluntarily made by the person claiming title to the property, with full knowledge of the adverse claimant of the title, and made under belief on the part of the person making such payment, arising from a mistake of law, that he had such title, might be recovered back from the adverse claimant upon the title being determined to be in the latter: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63-275; Iowa Homestead Co. v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co., 63-285; Goodnow v. Chapman, 64-602; Goodnow v. Wolcott, 65-201; Goodnow v. Oakley, 68-25.

Although where one of two parties holding the title to property has paid the taxes, and the other afterwards establishes his title to the property, the one who has made payment cannot claim the right to recover from the other on account of such payment, yet, if the successful party accepts the benefit of such payment, an action to recover the payments may be maintained against him by the party making them: Goodnow v. Stryker, 61-261.

Where a company to whom lands were certified under a railroad grant paid the taxes thereon, and subsequently the title was found to be in another under a swamp land grant, held, that the taxes paid by the former company under the belief that it had a legal title and in ignorance of the swampy character of the land, which fact alone defeated its title, could be recovered from the party holding the swamp land grant, who had made no offer to pay such taxes: American Emigrant Co. v. Iowa R. Land Co., 52-323.

One who, while making an honest claim to be the owner of real estate, pays taxes thereon, it afterward being determined that the title is in another, is entitled to be reimbursed for such expenditure: Fogg v. Holcomb, 64-621; Leather v. Ross, 74-630.

In such case, the payments being made for the protection of the property and redounding to the benefit of the real owner, he ought and will be required to reimburse the person who made them for the amount paid: Bradley v. Cole, 67-650.

So held where the title to property was claimed under an execution sale and sheriff's deed which were afterwards held defective: Ibid.

Where the purchaser of property at execution sale makes redemption from a previous tax sale of the property he cannot recover from the former owner the amount paid: Barr v. Patrick, 59-134.

Where there are two claimants to property and each pays the taxes thereon, the one who is adjudged not to be the owner cannot recover from the other the amount of taxes thus paid. A request by him to the other to make payment, which is the basis of recovery in such case, cannot be inferred under the circumstances: Montgomery County v. Severson, 68-451.

Where recovery is had by one claimant of property who has paid the taxes, against another who has been adjudged to be the legal owner, interest on the amount paid by the unsuccessful claimant at the legal rate may be recovered, commencing at the date of payment: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63-275; Iowa Homestead Co. v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co., 63-285; Goodnow v. Stryker, 63-569; Goodnow v. Plumb, 64-672; Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654; Goodnow v. Oakley, 68-25; Leather v. Ross, 74-630.

The amount which a party making payment of taxes is entitled to recover should be made a lien upon all the land collectively for the gross amount of the payments made: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63-275; Goodnow v. Stryker, 63-569; Goodnow v. Plumb, 64-672; Goodnow v. Oakley, 68-25; Leather v. Ross, 74-630.

The grantee of a person who is entitled to recover taxes thus paid is not, in the absence of express assignment of the right thereof, entitled to recover them from the person who has been adjudged the rightful owner of the property: Seymour v. Shea, 62-708.

A recovery of taxes thus paid cannot be had as against one who was not the owner of the premises at the time the payments were made, but has subsequently become such owner: Fogg v. Holcomb, 64-621.

But the grantee of a person who has been adjudged to have been the real owner at the time the taxes were paid, and acquiring his title by quitclaim, stands in the shoes of his grantor, and the lands in his hands are subject to the claim or lien of the party thus paying the taxes; but such grantee is not to be held personally liable for taxes paid before the purchase of the property by him: Bradley v. Cole, 67-650.

The relief which may be had by a party paying taxes by reason of a mistake respecting the title as against the person benefited is not valid as against a third person purchasing the land without notice that there is any claim thereon for taxes so paid, and the taxes so paid will not be a lien as against such purchaser. Bowen v. Duffie, 66-88.

The statute of limitations as against an action by a party who has paid taxes on land on a claim of ownership, but has been held not to be the owner, to recover such taxes from the party adjudged to be the owner, commences to run from the time the title to the property as between the claimants is judicially determined: Goodnow v. Stryker, 62-221; Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63-275; Bradley v. Cole, 67-650; Goodnow v. Oakley, 68-25.

A party cannot recover from the owner of the title taxes which he has paid on land more than five years prior to the time of bringing action to recover the same: La Rue v. King, 74-288.

As to the claim made in some of these cases, that there had been a previous adjudication of the right to recover the taxes, see Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654.

1348. Penalty. 866; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 1. The treasurer shall continue to receive taxes after they become delinquent until collected by distress and sale; and if the one-half of the taxes charged against any entry on the tax book in the hands of a county treasurer be not paid before the first day of April after the same has been charged; or if the remaining half of such taxes has not been paid before the first day of October after its maturity, he shall collect, in addition to the tax of each tax payer so delinquent, as penalty for non-payment, interest on such delinquent taxes, at the rate of one per cent. per month thereafter until paid; provided, that in all cases where the half of any taxes has not been paid before the first day of April after the same has been charged on the tax books, penalty as above shall be collected on the whole amount of taxes charged against such entry from the first of March succeeding the levy; and provided also, that the penalty prescribed by this section shall not apply upon taxes levied by any court to pay judgment on city or county indebtedness, but upon such taxes no other penalty than the interest, which such judgment draws, shall be collected; and provided further, nothing in this chapter shall be construed to alter the present rules governing the collection of road taxes, save that all such tax collected by the county treasurer shall be included in the first instalment, and provided further, that the penalties provided by this section shall not apply to or be collected upon any taxes levied in aid of the construction of any railroad in this state. [R., § 760; C., '51, § 497; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 18; 13 G. A., ch. 90.]

[By special provision the changes made in this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194, took effect the second Monday in November, 1884.]

Interest and penalties on taxes should be computed only from the time such taxes are placed on the tax list, and not from the time when they should have been listed and were not: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

Where taxes, void when levied, are subsequently made valid by a curative act, penalties for non-payment attach for the period prior to the time that the act takes effect: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39-124; Iowa R. Land Co. v. Carroll County, 39-151.

If a valid tender is made of the amount due for any specified tax, such tender stops interest on that tax without reference to whether it is good as to other taxes or not: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Carroll County, 39-151.

Failure of the county to sell land for taxes when it may do so will not defeat its right to recover penalties thereafter accruing on the same taxes: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

The fact that the title to land is doubtful or in dispute will not be a ground for relieving a person asserting a right thereto from penalties for non-payment of taxes: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40-66.

Where the title of the owner to one portion of his estate is disputed by the state, and to the other by the United States, and the state in view of these facts assures him that no legal steps will be taken to enforce payment of taxes until his title is adjusted, he will not be compelled to pay more than the statutory interest allowed for the non-payment of ordinary debts, and not the penalty for the non-payment of taxes: Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S., 773.

Where the state refuses payment for a series of years unless payment of taxes be made for the time between the entry and the quieting of the title by act of congress, penalties are not recoverable: Ibid.

Where a new revenue law was passed retrospective in its operations, held, that the method of collecting penalties already accrued should be in accordance with the previous law, and that penalties accruing under the new law on taxes previously levied should be enforced in accordance with such new law: Bartruff v. Remy, 15-257.

The repeal of a statute under which delinquent taxes have accrued, and the enactment of a new statute providing for the collection of taxes with interest, will not operate to remit the interest accrued, although the new law contains no express saving clause: State ex rel. v. Stewart, 11-251.

The right of a county to the penalty accrued on delinquent taxes is not impaired by the repeal of the statute providing for such penalties: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153; Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69-648.

But such repeal terminates the right to additional penalties: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69-648.

So held in regard to the amendment of this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194: Ibid.; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hartshorn, 30 Fed. Rep., 541 (overruling Snell v. Campbell, 24 Fed. Rep., 880).

The last clause of the section held unconstitutional as applied to contracts executed before that provision took effect: Lansing v. County Treasurer, 1 Dillon, 522, 528.

1349. Receipt. 867. The treasurer shall, in all cases, make out and deliver to the tax payer a receipt, stating the time of payment, the description and assessed value of each parcel of land, and the assessed value of personal property, the amount of each kind of tax, the interest on each, and cost, if any, giving a separate receipt for each year; and he shall make the proper entries of such payments on the books of his office. Such receipt shall be in full of the party's taxes for that year, but the treasurer shall receive the full amount of any county, state or school tax whenever the same is tendered, and give a separate receipt therefor. [R., § 760; 12 G. A., ch. 140.]

[The word "cost," in the fourth line, is erroneously printed "costs" in the Code.]

The receipt of a deputy collector should have the same force and effect as that of the treasurer: Jones v. Welsing, 52-220.

Payment of taxes may be proved by parol. Soheld, even under a statute requiring the tax payer to take a duplicate receipt and file it with the county judge and obtain his indorsement upon the original, and providing that no receipt without such indorsement should be receivable in evidence: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

Entry of payment by a county treasurer in his books does not operate to discharge the taxes, and only those misled by such entry, or who act upon the faith thereof, can in equity claim to be prejudiced by such entry, when the taxes are not in fact paid: Amber v. Clayton, 23-173.

Where a party in ignorance of a tax sale pays the taxes for which the sale was made and receives the treasurer's receipt therefor, such payment does not defeat the sale: Jones v. Welsing, 52-220.

A tax payer has the right to direct the application of any sums paid by him to the payment of such taxes as he sees fit: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Carroll County, 39-151.

The stub of a tax receipt is evidence showing payment of the tax such as to defeat a subsequent sale of the property: Harrison v. Sauervein, 70-291.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence did not sufficiently show previous payment of taxes to render the sale void: Slocum v. Slocum, 70-259.

1350. Apportionment. 868. The treasurer of each county shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, apportion the consolidated tax of each civil township or independent school district in his county, collected during the preceding month, among the several funds to which it belongs, according to the number of mills levied for each fund contained in said consolidated tax, and having entered the amount of tax for each fund, including other taxes collected during the preceding month, upon his cash account, he shall report the amount of each distinct tax to the county auditor, who shall charge him up with the same. [13 G. A., ch. 138, § 3.]

1351. Separate funds. 869. The county auditor shall keep full and complete accounts with the county treasurer, with each separate fund or tax by itself, in each of which accounts he shall charge him with the amounts in his hands at opening of such account, whether it be delinquent taxes, notes, cash, or other assets belonging to such fund, the amount of each tax for each year when the tax book is received by him, and all additions to each tax or fund, whether by additional assessments, interest on delinquent taxes, amount received for peddlers' licenses or other items, and shall credit the treasurer on proper vouchers, for money disbursed, for double and erroneous assessments, including all improper and illegal assessments, the correction or remission of which causes a diminution of the tax, and for unavailable taxes, or such as have been properly and legally assessed, but which there is no prospect of collecting. [R., § 761; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 7.]

1352. Refunding erroneous tax. 870. The board of supervisors shall direct the treasurer to refund to the tax payer any tax, or any portion of a tax, found to have been erroneously or illegally exacted or paid, with all interest and costs actually paid thereon, and in case any real property subject to taxation shall be sold for the payment of such erroneous tax, interest or costs as above mentioned, the error or irregularity in the tax may at any time be corrected as above provided, and shall not affect the validity of the sale, or the right or title conveyed by the treasurer's deed, if the property was subject to taxation for any of the purposes for which any portion of the taxes for which the land was sold was levied, and the taxes were not paid before the sale, and the property had not been redeemed from sale. [R., § 762.]

This section authorizes the refunding of illegal or erroneous taxes, though voluntarily paid, and even after they have been divided up and distributed among the state, school, road and other funds, and where the supervisors refuse to refund the same the sum may be recovered from the county: Lawman v. Des Moines County, 29-310; Richards v. Wapello County, 48-507; Isbell v. Crawford County, 40-102; Tallant v. Burlington, 49-543.

Where a tax is illegal through the erroneous action of the board in raising an assessment, it may be recovered back: Dickey v. Polk County, 58-287.

Failure to pursue remedies to arrest the collection of such taxes will not waive or forfeit the right to recover them: Ibid.

Taxes not brought forward as required by § 1326, and which are therefore erroneously included in the amount for which property is sold, may be recovered back by the tax purchaser from the county: Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

Where relief is sought from a tax levy which is in excess of the limit imposed upon taxation, relief will be granted as against the excess of the tax over the constitutional limit, and the tax will be sustained to the extent to which it is valid. After the tax has been paid, such sums as are in excess of the limit, may be recovered back: McPherson v. Foster, 43-48.

Where property was sold for an amount of tax, part of which was not a lien thereon, held, that the owner might recover from the county the amount of such tax, with costs, interest and penalties, which he was compelled to pay in order to redeem: Brownlee v. Marion County, 53-487.

The statutory provision last above referred to does not apply when the tax payer has voluntarily redeemed from a sale absolutely void by reason of the taxes having been previously paid, and the money so paid in redemption cannot be recovered: Morris v. Sioux County, 42-416; Sears v. Marshall County, 59-603.

Where payment of taxes is voluntarily made with knowledge of all the facts, under the belief that by law the property belongs to the person paying the taxes, such person cannot afterward recover back the money so paid upon the title being adjudged to be in another. Such taxes cannot be deemed erroneous or illegal: Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 40-16.

Where a tax is not merely informal and irregular, but is illegal and void as being levied upon property not liable to taxation, and the owner of the property makes payment under protest, the rule is that he may recover it back, although there is no distraint or seizure of his property: Wnzer v. Burlington, 68-279; Thomas v. Burlington, 69-140.

The holder of a tax title, which is adjudicated to be void, cannot recover from the county taxes paid by him upon the property subsequently to the acquisition of his tax title: Scott v. Chickasaw County, 53-47.

Where the purchaser of property at a tax sale paid taxes thereon for a subsequent year, but the sale was afterwards declared void for the reason that the property was not subject to taxation for the year for the taxes for which it was sold, held, that the subsequent tax was not erroneously or illegally exacted or paid in such sense that the county was under obligation to refund it: Iowa E. Land Co. v. Guthrie, 53-383.

The statutory provision for the recovery of illegal taxes paid is not applicable to a case of erroneous assessment made in the exercise of lawful authority. The only relief in such cases is by application to the board of equalization: Harris v. Fremont County, 63-639.

Where a tax payer had indebtedness which he might in a proper manner have offset against property for which he was taxed, but took no steps to have such deduction allowed, either by the assessor or by the board of equalization, and, about two years after the payment of the taxes under the assessment, applied to have refunded to him the amount thus paid in excess of what would have been his proper assessment held, that such application was too late, and that as there was no error or illegality in the assessment, the recovery of the amount could not be had: Leonard v. Madison County, 64-418.

Where an illegal tax has been collected for the benefit of the county and has been expended, it would be proper to refund it from other funds belonging to the county. So where an illegal tax has been collected for the state or for a school or road district, and has been paid over, it would be proper to refund it, if necessary to do so, from other funds belonging to the state or the school or road district which has thus received and enjoyed the benefit of the illegal tax: District Tp v. District Tp, 56-85.

Where it became necessary to refund a tax which had been paid over to a school district, and it appeared that the original school district was no longer in existence, the territory having been divided into three districts, held, that the treasurer should have apportioned the tax among the districts formed out of the original territory and repaid the tax pro rata from the funds coming to each, and that having repaid it entirely from the funds of one of the districts, that district was entitled to maintain an action for contribution against the others: Ibid.

The money which is to be returned to the tax payer should be taken from the particular fund or funds into which it went when the tax was collected: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Woodbury County, 64-212.

No judgment can be rendered against a county on account of taxes illegally or erroneously collected for any of the public organizations or corporations for whose benefit the county treasurer collects taxes, without proof that there remain in the treasury funds belonging to such organizations or corporations which might properly be applied to the extinguishment of such judgment: Ibid.

The board of supervisors has no authority to refund a road tax out of the county funds: Stone v. Woodbury County, 51-522.

Bridge taxes are to be collected and disbursed by the county and constitute a part of the county funds and should be refunded out of the county treasury: Dickey v. Polk County, 58-287.

Although a special tax cannot be refunded out of other taxes, yet where it was shown that there remained a sufficient amount in the treasury to refund out of a particular fund the amount illegally paid going to such fund, held, that a recovery was proper: Ibid.

Under similar provisions in a city charter, held, that taxes illegally exacted might be recovered back, although they had been paid over to the contractor who had made the improvements for which the tax was levied: Tallant v. Burlington, 39-543.

A special tax in aid of a railroad which has been paid over by the treasurer to the company cannot be refunded: Buller v. Board of Supervisors, 46-326.

In such case the tax cannot be refunded out of the county treasury, nor can the county devote other taxes collected for such company, and still in the treasury, to the payment of that illegally collected: Des Moines & M. R. Co. v. Lowry, 51-486.

A special tax voted in aid of a railway company should, when paid, be kept as a distinct fund subject to the rights of the company and tax payer. In no event can the county acquire any beneficial interest therein, and the claim of the tax payer to have such taxes refunded to him is a claim against the treasurer who has received the tax, and not against the county: Barnes v. Marshall County, 56-20.

The supervisors being authorized to require the treasurer to refund taxes illegally collected, a suit against the county for the recovery of such taxes cannot be maintained, the proper proceeding being against the officers to compel the proper action by them: Everly v. Jasper County, 72-149.

The cause of action against the county for illegal or erroneous taxes paid accrues at the very moment of payment of taxes, if at that time the taxes are erroneous and illegal. The statute of limitations against such action commences to run then, and not from the time that the error or illegality is adjudicated: Callanan v. Madison County, 45-561; Hamilton v. Dubuque, 50-213; Scott v. Chickasaw County, 53-47.

A party cannot, by neglecting to demand the refunding of such tax, delay the running of the statute: Beecher v. Clay County, 52-140.

And the ignorance of plaintiff that the levy was illegal will not enable him to take advantage of the exception of the statute of limitations in case of fraud or mistake provided in § 3735: Ibid.

Where taxes have been paid but the land is sold by the treasurer for such taxes by mistake, the owner has five years from the discovery of the mistake in which to bring the action: Storm Lake Bank v. Buena Vista County, 66-128.

By the latter part of this section a sale for aggregate taxes, only a part of which are illegal and erroneous, is valid: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160; Parker v. Sexton, 29-421; Sully v. Kuehl, 30-275; Hurley v. Powell, 31-64; Rhodes v. Sexton, 33-540; Genther v. Fuller, 36-604; Madson v. Sexton, 37-562.

A sale will be upheld if any portion of the tax for which the land is sold is valid: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44-622; Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

As to recovery by person paying taxes on property, of which he is found not to be the owner, from the person who derives the benefit from such payment, see notes to § 1347.

TAX SALE.

1353. When and how made. 871; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 2. On the first Monday in December in each year, the county treasurer is required to offer at public sale at his office, all lands, town lots, or other real property on which taxes of any description for the preceding year or years shall remain due and unpaid, and such sale shall be made for and in payment of the total amount of taxes, interests, and costs due and unpaid on such real property. [R., § 763; C., '51, § 496.]

[By special provision the changes made in this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194, took effect the second Monday in November, 1884.]

Whence power derived: The tax warrant provided for in the Revision was not essential to the power to sell, the power of the treasurer in that respect being derived from the statute directly: Parker v. Sexton, 29-421; Johnson v. Chase, 30-308; Hurley v. Powell, 31-64; Rhodes v. Sexton, 33-540; Madson v. Sexton, 37-562; Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153.

The power to make a tax sale is not derived from the tax list but from the statute. Under previous statutes, held, that the tax warrant was a material step, and the legislature could not make a tax deed conclusive as to the existence of such warrant: Corbin v. Hull, 21-70.

Also, held, that the clerk could sign a tax warrant as acting county judge: Ibid.

Also, held, that it was not essential that it appear from the warrant when signed by the clerk in place of the county judge that the latter was absent or incapacitated from acting: Ibid.; Sully v. Kuehl, 30-275.

Under the act of 1847 sale for delinquent taxes could only take place in pursuance of a judgment in the district court against the land for taxes due and unpaid for the term of two years from the first of January next after the delinquent tax list had been filed in his office: Bleidorf v. Abel, 6-5.

Under the statutory provision of 1858 a sale for taxes delinquent less than two years was invalid: Williams v. Gleason, 5-284.

Further as to previous statutes on the same subject, see Scott v. Babcock, 3 G. Gr., 133.

Repeal of statute: Where a statute authorizing sale for taxes is repealed without any clause preserving the provisions at the time existing for the collection of taxes levied and delinquent, and the new law contains no provision for selling land for taxes previously delinquent, a sale after such repeal for previous delinquent taxes will be invalid: Bleisdorn v. Abel, 6-5.

A sale takes place under the law in force at the time it occurs, and the legislature may modify and change the provision as to sale for taxes already delinquent: Sully v. Kuehl, 30-275.

Taxes in fact paid: The delinquency of the owner to pay the taxes is an essential fact upon which the power of sale rests, and proof that the taxes were in fact paid may be made for the purpose of defeating the sale; but under statutes providing for the foreclosure of a tax title by action in court, held, that the owner was precluded by the decree from afterwards setting up and proving the fact of such payment: Gaylord v. Scarff, 6-179.

A tax deed made pursuant to a sale for taxes which had been paid prior to the sale conveys no title: Walton v. Gray, 29-440.

In such case the sale is void: Morris v. Sioux County, 42-416; Patton v. Luther, 47-236.

And this is so whether payment has been made by the owner or by one having no interest in the land; so where the taxes were paid by one bidding under a tax sale subsequently declared void, and the tax thus paid for that year was refunded, held, that the property could not afterwards be sold for the taxes for that year: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Guthrie, 53-383.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence showed that the tax for which the sale was made had been paid and the deed was therefore held void: Harber v. Sexton, 66-211.

In such case, held, that the holder of the tax title should be repaid by the holder of the legal title for taxes paid by him as the holder of such tax title with six per cent. interest thereon from the time of payment, and that the right of recovery was not barred by the statutory limitation: Ibid.

Where a portion of the tax which should have been assessed upon certain real property was by mistake assessed as personal tax, and the part of the tax appearing as the part assessed against the property was paid, held, that a sale of such property for delinquent taxes due thereon was invalid: Capital City Gas Light Co. v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 51-31.

The fact that the owner pays the taxes and takes receipt after sale of the property therefor does not invalidate the sale nor prevent a deed from issuing to the purchaser: Jones v. Welsing, 52-220.

That a deed in pursuance of such sale is void, see § 1332 and notes.

For taxes not brought forward: Failure of the treasurer to enter on the tax list the fact of previous taxes being delinquent and unpaid, as required by § 1326, will render the sale for such delinquent taxes invalid and void. Such a sale is without authority and void, and yet it may be true that it would by lapse of time ripen into a perfect title: Gardner v. Early, 69-42.

Failure to sell personal property: A failure of the treasurer to collect taxes by distress and sale of personal property, when he might do so, will not invalidate a subsequent sale of real property for such taxes: Stewart v. Corbin, 25-144.

The treasurer is not bound to seize and sell personal property for personal property tax, but he may sell real property therefor: Garrettson v. Scofield, 44-35.

Sale of personal property: The fact that lands have been advertised for sale for taxes does not prevent a sale of personal property to pay the same. If the lands, however, had been actually sold to pay the taxes, personal property could not be subjected to their payment: Emerick v. Sloan, 18-139.

Public sale: Where there is no offering for sale and no bidding, but the treasurer marked the land as sold, held, that there was no valid sale: Besore v. Dosh, 43-211.

A sale which is private instead of public is void, and is not such a one as is contemplated or required by the statute: Chandler v. Keeler, 46-596.

Where the treasurer on the date of the annual sale announced an adjournment from day to day, and posted notice of that fact, and several months afterward, without any intervening adjournment, and without further notice, sales were made to persons furnishing lists of land without publicly reading from the list or announcing the description, held, that the sale was not public and was void: Butler v. Delano, 42-350.

Where it appeared that lands were not bid off in separate parcels, nor publicly offered, but the sale was left open from day to day and not adjourned to any particular time, and there was no adjournment of the prior sale to the date at which the sale was claimed to have been made, which was not the legal date of sale, held, that the proof was sufficient to overcome the prima facie evidence of regularity presented by the deed, and that it sufficiently appeared that there was no sale and the deed was void: Thompson v. Ware, 43-455.

Where in such case it was shown that the agent of the purchaser applied at the treasurer's office and selected certain tracts of land which were marked and entered upon the books as having been sold to him and a certificate issued, held, that the sale was absolutely void, not being such a public sale as the statute requires: Miller v. Corbin, 46-150.

Where by arrangement between the treasurer and the land owner certificates were issued to the purchaser without any actual offering of the land or any payment of the taxes by the purchaser, held, that there was no sale: Hogdon v. Green, 56-733.

Where the sale was a public sale held in pursuance of law, and there was in fact a sale of the land in controversy without fraud, held, that an irregularity in the manner of sale and an error in the recital of the date on which it was made would not defeat the title acquired: Phelps v. Meade, 41-470.

Where there is something constituting a sale done at the proper time and place and in a public manner, the sale will not be deemed void, though irregular: Stocum v. Stocum, 70-259.

So held, where, at the proper time and place, the treasurer checked off to a party not present, but who had previously authorized him to do so, tracts of land as sold to such person and afterward issued to him a certificate therefor: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that although the evidence tended to show that no sale had been advertised to be held on the first Monday in October, and that the sale in question was not an adjourned sale, but that it was advertised to take place at the time it did, it was not void: Ibid.

That fraud of the officers, or of the purchaser, will avoid the sale, see § 1382 and notes.

For what taxes: There must be but one sale for the total amount of taxes due and unpaid. A second sale for taxes which were due, and delinquent at the time of a previous sale, would be void. Such taxes cease to be a lien: Preston v. Van Gorder, 31-250; Bowman v. Thompson, 36-505.

By a sale the lien of taxes for previous years is extinguished: See notes to § 1382. And this is true as well in favor of the owner who redeems from such sale as the purchaser: Hough v. Basley, 47-330.

The same property cannot be twice sold at the same sale for the taxes of two different years: Shoemaker v. Lacy, 38-277; S. C., 45-422.

The tax sale does not divest the owner of title, but it remains in him until the tax deed is executed: Williams v. Heath, 22-519; Lake v. Gray, 35-44.

Where taxes were levied by a county to which another county was annexed for taxing purposes, and afterwards the new county sold the land for the non-payment of such taxes, held, that the new county not having any right to collect the taxes, the sale was void, and the deed founded thereon conveyed no title: Hilliard v. Griffin, 72-331.

The fact that the land is not sold for all the delinquent taxes existing at the time of the sale is an irregularity merely which cannot defeat a sale after the execution and recording of the deed made in pursuance thereof: Kessey v. Connell, 68-430.

The provision of § 1361, for sale of land for a portion of the taxes due thereon, where, upon being offered for two years for the whole amount of the taxes due, it has remained unsold for want of bidders, does not imply that a sale in other cases for a portion of the tax delinquent at the time of the sale will be invalid: Ibid.

A subsequent sale for taxes subsequently becoming delinquent will not divest the rights of a previous purchaser unless a deed is issued in pursuance of such subsequent sale. If such sale is redeemed from, the rights of the prior tax purchaser remain unaffected: Gray v. Coan, 30-536.

Redemption from a subsequent tax sale will not defeat the lien of a prior sale: Gray v. Coan, 40-327.

Sale for taxes, a part of which are legal, is valid: See notes to § 1352.

Subsequent sale: The power to sell lands for delinquent taxes is not limited to the sale at which such lands are first subject to be sold for such taxes, but may be exercised at any subsequent sale: Litchfield v. Hamilton County, 40-66.

Where two tax sales are made of the same property for the same taxes, and the first is void on account of fraud committed at such sale, a second sale may be valid: Mallory v. French, 44 133.

A second sale for railroad taxes is legal: Cowell v. Merrill, 60-53.

A tax deed for property sold for state and county taxes does not convey to the purchaser a title free from the lien of unpaid city taxes, nor does the city tax deed, made in pursuance of a sale for city taxes of one year, divest the lien of the city for taxes for prior years: Dennison v. Keokuk, 45-266.

As to the tracts in which the sale shall be made, see § 1357 and notes.

1354. Notice. 872. The notice to be given of such sale shall state the time and place thereof, and contain a description of the several parcels of real property to be sold for the delinquent taxes of the preceding year, and such real property as has not been advertised for the taxes of previous years and on which the taxes remain due and delinquent, and the amount of taxes and amount of interest and costs against each tract, and the name of the owner, when known, or person, if any, to whom taxed. [R., § 764; C., '51, § 498; Ex. S., 8 G. A., ch. 24, § 5.]

Land should be advertised in the same tracts or parcels in which it is entered in the tax book and assessed: Corbin v. De Wolf, 25-124; McClintock v. Sutherland, 35-487; and should be sold and deeded by the same description as set out in the advertisement: Martin v. Cole, 38-141.

Town lots situated in the same block and lying contiguous may be assessed at a gross amount and advertised together: McClintock v. Sutherland, 35-487.

Under the provisions of a former statute requiring the treasurer in advertising lands taxed to unknown owners to embrace the largest quantity practicable in the description, held, that a sale in pursuance of advertising in that manner was valid: Henderson v. Oliver, 32-512.

The treasurer should so advertise as to incur as little expense as possible consistently with a due compliance with the law; therefore, held, that the whole or a part of a section of land in a contiguous body belonging to the same owner should be advertised as one tract and not in its smallest subdivisions: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 29-124; Cedar Rapids & M. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153, 176.

This was formerly the provision also as to land assessed to unknown owners, but this provision was omitted in the Code, the Code commissioners saying that it "is entirely inconsistent with the settled policy of our law in regard to such sales, under the decision of the supreme court "that lands are to be advertised and sold under the descriptions and in the tracts or parcels in which they are entered in the tax book." See Code Comrs' Rep.

Property is to be advertised but once, and the sale of such as is advertised may be made at a sale held any time thereafter pursuant to adjournments regularly made: Hurley v. Street, 29-429.

An omission to include certain lands in the advertisement, held not sufficient to defeat a deed made in pursuance of a sale thereof, the owner being bound to know that his taxes are delinquent: Shawler v. Johnson, 52-472.

The tax deed is conclusive as to fact of advertisement: See notes to § 1382.

1355. Publication. 873; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 3. The county treasurer shall give such notice by causing the same to be published once in each week for three successive weeks, the last publication to be at least one week prior to the day of sale, in some newspaper printed in such county, if any such there be, or if not, then in the nearest newspaper in this state having a general circulation in such county: and also by causing a copy of such notice to be posted on the door of the county court-house at least four weeks before the day of sale. But no newspaper shall be selected unless it has two hundred regular weekly subscribers, and has been regularly printed and published for at least three months preceding the fifteenth of November of said year in the same county, and has at least twenty actual subscribers in the county wherein the delinquent property is situated, for at least three months preceding the fifteenth of November of that year. And in all cases where the treasurer may doubt the qualifications of any paper as above fixed, he shall require proof thereof by the affidavit of the publisher. [R., § 764; 10 G. A., ch. 115, § 2; 11 G. A., ch. 103; 14 G. A., ch. 11, § 2.]

[The word "had" is erroneously printed in the Code after "has" in the eleventh line of this section. By special provision the change made in this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194, took effect the second Monday in November, 1884.]

The publisher of a newspaper cannot by its being the only one in the county: Welch v. Board of Supervisors, 23-199.

1356. Costs. 874. The treasurer shall charge and collect, in addition to the taxes and interest, a sum not exceeding twenty cents on each tract of real property advertised for sale, which sum shall be paid into the county treasury, and the county shall pay the costs of publication, but in no case shall the county be liable for more than the amount charged to the delinquent lands for advertising, and if the treasurer cannot procure the publication of said notice for that sum, or, if for any other reason the treasurer is unable to procure the publication of said notice, he shall post up written notices of said sale in four of the most public places in his county four weeks before sale, and notice so given shall have the same force and effect as though the same had been published in a newspaper. In that case, he shall, before making such sale, file in the office of the auditor of his county, a copy of said notice with his certificate indorsed thereon, setting forth that said notice had been posted up in four of the most public places in his county four weeks before the sale, which said certificate shall be subscribed by him and sworn to before said auditor, and shall be presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated. [R., § 764; Ex. S., 8 G. A., ch. 24, § 4; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 10; 10 G. A., ch. 115, § 2.]

1357. Time and place. 875. The county treasurer shall, at his office on the day of the sale, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon, offer for sale, separately, each tract or parcel of real property advertised for sale, on which the taxes and costs shall not have been paid. [R., § 765; C., '51, § 499.]

The sale should be in the same tracts or parcels in which the land is assessed and advertised: Martin v. Cole, 33-141.

Where the owners of land are known its assessment in larger tracts than the smallest government subdivision is authorized, and a sale in the tract in which it is thus assessed will be valid: Corbin v. De Wolf, 25-124; Stewart v. Corbin, 25-144; Edridge v. Kuehl, 27-160; Bulkeley v. Callanan, 32-461; Smith v. Easton, 37-584.

Where the law authorizes the assessment of land in larger subdivisions than forty-acre tracts it may be so sold: Ware v. Thompson, 29-65; Johnson v. Chase, 30-308.

Under a former statutory provision requiring the advertisement of land assessed to unknown owners to be made in the largest practicable quantities, held, that in such cases an entire section might be advertised, sold and decided in one tract, the term parcel or tract being properly applicable to the whole section: Martin v. Coie, 33-141.

Where the use and nature of lots require them to be regarded as one parcel the law will so treat them, and the sale of such property as one lot will be held valid: Weaver v. Grant, 39-294.

Although a sale in gross of two separate

1358. Bid; purchaser; homestead. 876. The person who offers to pay the amount of taxes due on any parcel of land, or town lot, for the smallest portion of the same is to be considered the purchaser, and when such purchaser shall designate the portion of any tract of land or town lot for which he will pay the whole amount of taxes assessed against any such tract or lot, the portion thus designated shall, in all cases, be considered an undivided portion. In all cases where the homestead is listed separately as a homestead, it shall be liable only for the taxes thereon. [R., § 766; C., '51, § 501; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 9.]

Purchase by county: A county cannot become the purchaser of lands at tax sale; Bruck v. Broesicks, 18-593.

Bid: Under this section the bid of a purchaser is to be for an undivided portion of the entire tract, if for less than the whole, and he acquires that undivided interest in the whole tract: Brundige v. Maloney, 52-218.

Therefore, held, that an offer to pay taxes on a forty-acre tract offered for sale for "fourteen acres" was so uncertain as to render void a deed executed in conformity with such bid, and a notice given in pursuance thereof: Poindexter v. Doolittle, 54-52.

An undivided interest cannot be sold for taxes on the whole property: Cragin v. Henry, 40-158.

The sale of an undivided interest in land on which the taxes remain unpaid, the taxes having been paid upon the other undivided interest, is competent and proper: Peirce v. Weare, 41-378.

Where it appears that the sale is not for the whole amount of the tax it will be presumed, in support of the deed, that the sale was made under the provisions of § 1361: Griffin v. Tuttle, 74-219.

1359. Sale continued. 877. The treasurer shall continue the sale from day to day as long as there are bidders, or until the taxes are all paid. [R., § 767; C., '51, § 499.]

Whether it was illegal or even improper for the treasurer to regard all sales made under a continuance as of the date of the commencement of such sale, quere: Phelps v. Meade, 41-470; and the deed is conclusive that continuances were properly made, etc.: See notes to § 1382.

tracts of land is prima facie void, and a deed made thereon showing such fact is also void upon its face, yet such sale and deed may be supported and shown to be valid by evidence that the two tracts were occupied and used as one parcel and for one purpose: Greer v. Wheeler, 41-85.

Where lands were sold en masse, held, that the objection that the sale was void on that account should not be considered upon appeal, where no objection was made in the petition attacking the tax title, and no relief was asked for upon that ground: Wallace v. Berger, 25-456.

As to deed of lands sold in gross, see notes to § 1382.

Description: Where the description of property to be sold was indefinite, held, that the owner of the land could not make objection, on that ground, to the sale of the premises for a valid tax: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12-112.

Sale by a municipal corporation for taxes held invalid for the reason that the register of sales on the officer's certificate indicated that there was not a sufficient description of the property: Vaughan v. Stone, 55-213.

Sale of homestead: Under a law exempting the homestead from liability for any taxes except those due upon it exclusively, neither an officer making a tax sale nor the person purchasing thereat can extend the liability of the homestead by a sale and purchase of it in connection with other lands: Penn v. Clemans, 19-372.

Two or more lots jointly composing the homestead may be sold as one tract, and the sale will not be invalid as being in mass: Weaver v. Grant, 39-294.

Unless the homestead is listed separately all the taxes against the owner become liens thereon as upon any other real property: Salter v. Burlington, 42-531.

1360. Resale. 878. The person purchasing any parcel or part thereof shall forthwith pay to the treasurer the amount of taxes and costs charged thereon, and on failure to do so, the said parcel shall at once again be offered as if no such sale had been made. Such payments may be made in the same fund receivable by law in payment of taxes. [R., § 768; C., '51, § 502.]

1361. Sale for portion of tax. 16 G. A., ch. 79, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 6. It shall be the duty of the several county treasurers of this state, on the first Monday of December in each year, or [at] any adjourned sale thereafter, to offer and sell at public sale, to the highest bidder therefor, all lands and town lots which then remain liable to sale for delinquent taxes, and which have heretofore been advertised and offered at public sale and passed for want of bidders, for two or more years, by giving general notice of such sale for six weeks previous thereto in the official papers of each of their respective counties, which said notice shall refer to and embrace the general provisions of this act; and in case of redemption of any real estate sold under the provisions of this act, the purchaser shall only receive the amount paid and a pro rata proportion of the penalty, interest and costs.

[By special provision the changes made in this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194, took effect the second Monday of November, 1884.]

Under this section the owner in making redemption must pay the amount due on the real estate at the time of sale, and that amount must be regarded as the full amount of interest, taxes, penalties and costs as provided by the existing law: Soper v. Espeset, 63-326.

The deed being presumptive evidence that the sale was lawfully made it will be presumed that the sale was made under the provision of this act if it appears to have been for less than the whole amount of taxes due: Griffin v. Tuttle, 74-219.

1362. Apportionment on redemption. 16 G. A., ch. 79, § 2. In ascertaining the interest and penalties to be paid upon the redemption of such real estate from such sale, the sum due on any piece or parcel of real estate sold under and by virtue of the provisions of this act, shall be taken to be the full amount of taxes, interest and costs due on such parcel at the time of such sale; and all the provisions of the revenue laws of Iowa, not inconsistent with this act, shall apply to such sale, and to the redemption of any real estate sold by virtue of this act; and the amount so paid for any parcel of real estate shall be apportioned pro rata among the different funds to which it belongs.

1363. Unavailable tax. 16 G. A., ch. 79, § 3. The amount of taxes due on any real estate sold under the provisions of this act, in excess of the amount for which the same was sold, shall be credited, as unavailable tax, to the county treasurer, by the county auditor, apportioning the amount among the different funds to which the same belongs. The amount of such excess due to funds belonging to the state, shall be reported by the county auditor to the auditor of state as unavailable, who shall give the county credit for the same.

1364. Owner may pay before sale. 879. Any person owning or claiming lands, or town lots, advertised for sale as aforesaid, may pay to the county treasurer, at any time before the sale thereof, the taxes due thereon with interest, cost of advertising, and all the costs which may have accrued up to the time of such payment. [R., § 769.]

1365. Advertisement. 880. In all advertisements for the sale of real property for taxes, and in entries required to be made by the county auditor, treasurer, or other officer, letters and figures may be used as they have been heretofore, to denote townships, ranges, sections, parts of sections, lots, blocks, date, and the amount of taxes, interest, and costs. And no irregularity or informality in the advertisement shall affect in any manner the legality of the sale, or the title to any real property conveyed by the treasurer's deed under this chapter, but, in all cases, the provisions of this chapter shall be sufficient notice to owners of the sale of their property. [R., § 770.]

1366. Certificate of publication. 881. The treasurer shall obtain a copy of said advertisement, together with a certificate of the due publication thereof, from the printer or publisher of the newspaper in which the same shall have been published, and shall file the same in the office of the county auditor, and such certificate shall be substantially in the following form:

C— D—,
 County Auditor — County, Iowa.

[R., § 771.]

A failure to comply with the provisions of this section does not invalidate the tax deed: Hurley v. Powell, 31-64.

1367. Record of sales. 882. The county auditor shall attend all sales of real property for taxes made by the treasurer, and make a record thereof in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, therein describing the several parcels of real property on which the taxes and costs were paid by the purchaser, as they are described in the list or advertisement on file in his office, stating in separate columns the amount as obtained from the treasurer's tax list, of each kind of tax, interest, and costs for each tract or lot, how much and what part of each tract or lot was sold, to whom sold, and date of sale. The treasurer shall also keep a book of sales in which, at the time of sale, he shall make the same records. He shall also note in the tax list, opposite the description of the property sold, the fact and date of such sale. [R., § 772.]

The record of sales is receivable in evidence: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356, 375; Chandler v. Keeler, 46-596.

A failure to make the record of the fact of sale as here required will not enable a subsequent purchaser at an execution sale to take title paramount to that of the tax purchaser, where the tax deed is recorded prior to the execution sale; but if such deed was not recorded, and the purchaser at execution sale had no notice, actual or otherwise, it would seem that he would be protected: Negus v. Yancy, 23-417.

1368. Sale adjourned. 883; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 4. When all the parcels of real property advertised for sale shall have been offered, and a portion thereof shall remain unsold for want of bidders, the treasurer shall adjourn the sale to some day not exceeding two months from the time of adjournment, due notice of which day shall be given at the time of adjournment, and also by keeping a notice thereof posted in a conspicuous place in the treasurer's office; but no further advertisement shall be necessary. On the day fixed for the re-opening of the sale the same proceedings shall be had as provided hereby for the sale commencing on the first Monday of December. And further adjournments shall be made from time to time, not exceeding two months, and the sales shall be thus continued until the next regular annual sale, or until all the taxes shall have been paid. [R., § 773.]

[By special provision the changes made in this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194, took effect the second Monday of November, 1884.]

While it may not be essential to the validity of a sale made at an adjournment to show that a record of the adjournment has been made, still it is proper that such an entry should be made on the register of sales, and the fact that no such entry appears thereon is a circumstance tending to show that there was no such adjournment. It is proper, therefore, on such a question, to admit the register of sales in evidence: Chandler v. Keeler, 46-596.

A written memorandum of the adjournment of a sale kept by the treasurer is not a record, and is incompetent to overthrow the presumption of regularity raised by the deed: Clark v. Thompson, 37-536.

An averment in an answer attacking the validity of a tax sale, that it was made on a day not authorized by law, precludes the supposition that it may have been made on a day authorized by reason of adjournment: Plympton v. Sapp, 55-195.

The tax deed is conclusive that continuances were properly made: See notes to § 1382.

As to sales on the first Monday of succeeding months, see § 1371 and notes.

1369. Penalty. 884. If any treasurer or auditor shall fail to attend any sale of lands as required by this chapter, either in person or by competent deputy, he shall be liable to a fine of not less than fifty nor more than three hundred dollars, to be recovered by an action in the district court against the treasurer or auditor, as the case may be, and his bondsmen. And if such officer or deputy shall sell, or assist in selling, any real property, knowing the same to be not subject to taxation, or that the taxes for which the same is sold have been paid, or shall knowingly and wilfully sell, or assist in selling, any real property for payment of taxes to defraud the owner of such real property, or shall knowingly and wilfully execute a deed for property so sold, he shall be liable to a fine of not less than one thousand nor more than three thousand dollars, or to imprisonment not exceeding one year, or to both fine and imprisonment, and to pay the injured party all damages sustained by any such wrongful act, and all such sales shall be void. [R., § 774; 9 G. A., ch. 17, § 11.]

1370. Fraud of officers. 885. If any county treasurer or auditor shall hereafter be, either directly or indirectly, concerned in the purchase of any real property sold for the payment of taxes, he shall be liable to a penalty of not more than one thousand dollars, to be recovered in an action in the district court, brought in the name of the county against such treasurer or auditor, as the case may be, and his bondsmen; and all such sales shall be void. [R., § 775.]

The act of the treasurer in bidding off land as the agent of another for compensation constitutes sufficient fraud to invalidate the deed: Corbin v. Beebe, 36-336.

And where a party sent a sum of money to the treasurer with instructions to bid off for him the amount sent, for which services he was to be paid a commission, and the sale was thus made, held, that the treasurer was "concerned in the purchase," and the sale was void: Everett v. Beebe, 37-452.

Where it appeared that land was marked on the record of the tax sale as sold to a party who was not present and did not bid, and did not have knowledge of nor consent to the sale, and the certificate of sale was issued in the name of that party, but retained by the deputy treasurer making the sale, and afterward an assignment of such party to him was procured, and it appeared that the name of the party was used to enable the officer to acquire title, held, that the sale was void for fraud: Ellis v. Peck, 45-112.

Where the deputy treasurer as guardian of a minor son caused property to be bought in at a tax sale, and paid the amount of the bid out of the funds of such minor, causing a certificate of purchase to be assigned to him, held, that he was so far concerned in the purchase as to render the sale void: Kirk v. St. Thomas Church, 70-287.

The act of an employee in the treasurer's office in bidding in land for another in which he afterwards acquired an interest, he being at the time of the bid not a deputy, but merely employed in clerical services, held not sufficient to render the sale invalid: Lorain v. Smith, 37-67.

In view of the lapse of time in a particular case and the expiration of the five-year limitation, held, that it was too late to question the right of the treasurer to buy in the certificate of a tax sale, and execute a deed to himself: Guthrie v. Harker, 27 Fed. Rep., 586.

Where the sale is void as provided in the last clause of this section, for fraud, the owner may set up and show such fraud to defeat the tax title in any action in which the holder thereof relies upon such title: Corbin v. Beebe, 36-336.

The word "void" is here used in the sense of voidable. A tax deed which might be void for fraud in the hands of the original purchaser will be good in the hands of a subsequent purchaser in good faith without notice of the fraud: Ellis v. Peck, 45-112.

And further as to fraud of officers or purchasers and the effect thereof, see § 1382 and notes.

1371. Subsequent sale. 886. If, from neglect of officers to make returns, or from any other good cause, real property cannot be duly advertised and offered for sale on the first Monday of October, the treasurer shall make the sale on the first Monday of the next succeeding months in which it can be made, allowing time for the publication as provided in this chapter. [R., § 776.]

A deed reciting a sale as made on the first Monday of a subsequent month to that on which the regular sale is directed to be made by statute will not be deemed void as showing a sale at a time not authorized by law: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160.

A tax sale held subsequently to the first Monday in October will not be void although there is no record of a sale being commenced on the date required by law, nor of an adjournment from that date to the actual date of sale: Easton v. Savery, 44-654.

Where it appears from the deed that the sale was made on the first Monday of some month subsequent to October, it will be presumed that a proper cause existed for holding the sale at such time. The reason therefor need not appear of record: Ibid.; Sully v. Kuehl, 30-275; Love v. Welch, 33-192.

If the non-existence of these conditions can in any event be shown to defeat the tax title, the burden of proof is upon the party who assails it: Love v. Welch, 33-192.

CERTIFICATE OF PURCHASE.

1372. How made; what contain. 887. The county treasurer shall make out, sign, and deliver to the purchaser of any real property sold for the payment of taxes as aforesaid, a certificate of purchase, describing the property on which the taxes and costs were paid by the purchaser, as the same was described in the records of sales, and also how much and what part of each tract or lot was sold, and stating the amount of each kind of tax, interest, and costs for each tract or lot for which the same was sold, as described in the records of sales, and that payment had been made therefor. If any person shall become the purchaser of more than one parcel of property, he may have the whole included in one certificate, but each parcel shall be separately described. [R., § 777; C., '51, § 503.]

The certificate does not pass the title to the purchaser, but it remains in the owner until the execution of a deed: Williams v. Heath, 22-519; Lake v. Gray, 35-44.

The purchaser of land at tax sale acquires no right or interest therein until he receives a deed. While the property is subject to redemption he has but a chattel interest, and such interest does not pass by an attempted conveyance of the property itself: Rice v. Bates, 68-393.

The certificate of purchase simply gives the purchaser a lien for the taxes, interest, costs and penalties, etc.: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160; Mallory v. French, 38-431.

A certificate issued under a tax sale which omitted the name of the town or addition, but was correct in other particulars, held competent and sufficient to prove that said premises were redeemed, in an action of right based upon such redemption: Rice v. Nelson, 27-148.

The certificate is evidence of the facts recited therein, but in case it is found to be in conflict with the record of sales, the latter will prevail: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356, 374; Henderson v. Oliver, 32-512.

Where the holder of a certificate of purchase at tax sale brought action for waste in removing a building from the premises sold, and got judgment, which was made a lien upon the building and the premises to which it had been removed, held, that his lien upon the building thereby became junior to that of a mortgagee taking his mortgage subsequently to the sale but before judgment: Phillips v. Myers, 55-265.

The owner of the certificate may recover treble damages for waste or trespass: See §§4579, 4580.

1373. Assignment. 888. The certificate of purchase shall be assignable by indorsement, and an assignment thereof shall vest in the assignee, or his legal representative, all the right and title of the original purchaser; and the statement in the treasurer's deed of the fact of the assignment shall be presumptive evidence of such assignment. In case said certificate is assigned, then the assignment of said certificate shall be placed on record in the office of the county treasurer in the register tax sales. [R., § 778; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 12.]

A certificate of purchase at tax sale possesses none of the peculiar characteristics of negotiable paper, and the transferee is not protected as the indorsee of such instruments: Watson v. Phelps, 40-482.

One who takes by assignment a certificate of purchase of property at a tax sale acquires no greater right than the purchaser at the sale, and as to all the infirmities thereof stands in the shoes of the purchaser: Light v. West, 42-138; Besore v. Dosh, 43-211.

An assignee by indorsement of the certificate without notice of a prior transfer thereof acquires a better title thereunder than one who had previously taken the assignment of such original certificate: Griswold v. Wilson, 36-156.

Where the purchaser at tax sale did not pay the amount bid, but such amount was subsequently paid by another, and an assignment of the certificate by the bidder was thereupon procured to be made to such third person, held, that the bidder had no interest in the sale, and the fact that prior to the assignment he had executed a deed for the property covered thereby under another title would not defeat the claim of the assignee of the certificate: Lloyd v. Bunce, 41-660.

Under the provision of the Revision of 1860, which did not require the recording of the assignment of a tax certificate, held, that the assignee from the tax purchaser after the assignment of such certificate to another was not protected: Smith v. Stephenson, 45-645.

Assignment of the certificate of purchase to a person who has purchased the property subsequently to the sale amounts to a redemption: Bowman v. Eckstien, 46-583.

The fact that a party who has no right to redeem procures an assignment of the certificate of purchase under the representation that he is entitled to and will redeem, but does not do so, will not entitle persons adversely claiming title to any relief: Curtis v. Smith, 42-665.

The statute does not make the record of the assignment constructive notice of the rights of the assignee. The owner of the property may effect redemption by contract with the holder of the certificate instead of in the mode pointed out by statute. But if he elects to take that course he must know at his peril that the person with whom he deals is the owner of the certificate: Swan v. Whaley, 75-623.

If the treasurer executes a deed to the person entitled to the certificate of purchase, it will be valid though no written assignment is recorded: Ibid.

1374. Payment of subsequent taxes. 889. The county treasurer shall also make out, sign, and deliver to the purchaser of any real property sold for taxes aforesaid, duplicate receipts for any taxes, interest, and costs, paid by said purchaser, after the date of said purchase for any subsequent year or years, one of which receipts said purchaser shall present to the county auditor, to be by him filed in his office, and a memorandum thereof entered on the register of sales. And if he neglect to file such duplicate receipt with the auditor before the redemption, such tax shall not be a lien upon the land, and the person paying such tax shall not be entitled to recover the same of the owner of such real estate. [10 G. A., ch. 100, § 1.]

Where the duplicate receipt for subsequent taxes paid by the tax purchaser is not filed, etc., the owner may redeem without paying such taxes: Keenedy v. Bigelow, 43-74.

This provision as to filing duplicate receipts does not apply to payment of taxes by purchaser or owner of the land after the execution of the tax deed: Barke v. Early, 72-273.

The purchaser cannot pay taxes for years previous to the sale which have not been included in the amount for which the property was sold, and thereby compel the owner, in redeeming, to pay such taxes: Sheppard v. Clark, 58-371.

These provisions as to filing the duplicate tax receipts are not applicable as to taxes paid after issuance of the deed: Thode v. Spofford, 65-294; Elliott v. Parker, 72-746.

Taxes paid by the purchaser after redemption is made by the owner cannot be recovered, and if he pays them upon the supposition that the redemption is illegal he does so at his peril: Byington v. Allen, 11-3; Byington v. Walsh, 11-27.

A purchaser of property exempt from taxation acquires no such interest by such purchase as will give him the right to a lien for taxes paid for subsequent years, though the property has passed to a third person who cannot claim the exemption: Byington v. Wood, 12-479.

As to recovery of taxes paid under a sale which is not valid, see notes to §§ 1382 and 1384.

REDEMPTION.

1375. How effected. 890; 19 G. A., ch. 45. Real property, hereafter sold under the provisions of this chapter, may be redeemed at any time before the right of redemption is cut off, as hereinafter provided, by the payment to the county auditor of the proper county, to be held by him subject to the order of the purchaser, of the amount for which the same was sold and ten per centum of such amount immediately added as a penalty, with ten per cent. interest per annum on the whole amount thus made from the day of sale, and also the amount of all taxes, interest, and costs paid for any subsequent year or years, and a similar penalty of ten per centum added as before on the amount of the payment for each subsequent year, with ten per cent. interest per annum on the whole of such amount or amounts from the day or days of payment, unless such subsequent taxes shall have been paid by the person for whose benefit the redemption is made, which fact may be shown by the treasurer's receipt; and provided further, that such penalty for the non-payment of the taxes of any such subsequent year or years shall not attach, unless such subsequent tax or taxes shall have remained unpaid until the first day of March after they become due, so that they have become delinquent, nor shall any of said penalties apply in the cases mentioned in the last clause of section eight hundred and sixty-six of this chapter [§ 1348]. [R., § 779; C., '51, § 505; 13 G. A., ch. 90; ch. 173, § 13.]

[The act (19 G. A., ch. 45) which changed the penalty provided for by this section from twenty to ten per cent. contained a proviso that it should "not affect sales already made or penalties upon taxes hereafter paid upon sales made before the taking effect of this act."]

Redemption of whole: Where a party, by reason of owning any interest in the property, has a right to redeem, he may redeem the whole, and the purchaser may require him to redeem the whole, if any: Curl v. Watson, 25-35; Rice v. Nelson, 27-148.

Redemption of part: A sale of several distinct subdivisions or parcels of land in gross is irregular, and neither the officer who makes the sale nor the purchaser thereat will be permitted to take advantage of such wrongful act so as to defeat the right of redemption to a portion of the land so sold: Penn v. Clemans, 19-372.

In such case the purchaser or the officer has the right to receive only the amount pro rata paid at the sale with the penalty and interest thereon, and this, too, whether the property was assessed and taxed for more or less than its actual or relative value: Ibid.

The owner of an undivided interest in property cannot be required to pay the taxes due upon the whole property, and if a sale is made for taxes upon the whole he may redeem his interest: Cragin v. Henry, 40-158.

From sale for portion of tax: Under § 1361, providing that, where property has been offered two or more years and not sold for want of bidders, it shall be offered and sold to the highest bidder, and in case of redemption the purchaser shall only receive the amount paid and a pro rata proportion of the penalty, interest and costs, the owner in making redemption from such sale must pay the amount due on the real estate at the time of sale including the penalties, interest and costs accrued up to that time, no matter how much less than the amount due the land was sold for: Soper v. Espeset, 63-326.

Amount to be paid: Where the proper notice is not given of the expiration of the period of redemption, and the owner subsequently seeks to make redemption, the amount to be paid is the amount for which the land was sold and the penalties and interest provided by law. The fact that part of the taxes to be included in the amount to be paid in making redemption were paid more than five years before the time of redemption will not relieve the owner from the obligation to pay them. The redemption is from the sale and not from the claim for taxes: Long v. Smith, 67-22.

The owner in redeeming must pay the penalty upon the taxes paid by the purchaser, subsequently to the sale, as well as upon the amount paid at the sale: Mulligan v. Hintrager, 18-171.

Under former provisions, held, that the holder of a certificate of purchase was not entitled to receive repayment of city taxes upon the property paid by him, but that the provision as to repayment of taxes paid by the purchaser related only to state and county taxes: Byington v. Rider, 9-566.

Where land was sold for a portion only of the taxes delinquent at the time of the sale, and the purchaser immediately thereafter paid the balance of the delinquent taxes, held, that the party redeeming must pay to the purchaser the amount of such taxes paid by him with six per cent. interest: Kessey v. Connell, 68-430.

Where the duplicate receipt for subsequent taxes paid by the tax purchaser is not filed, etc., the owner may redeem without paying such taxes: Kennedy v. Bigelow, 43-74.

Redemption can only be made by payment of the amount required by law. The auditor cannot issue a certificate which shall have the effect to cut off the right of the holder of the certificate of purchase when no money is paid. Therefore, held, that where the board of supervisors directed the auditor to draw a warrant upon the county treasurer for a sum sufficient to redeem the property of a pauper from tax sale, and the auditor, without having issued such warrant or received any money for the redemption, issued a certificate of redemption of the land to the county, such certificate was not valid: Reeves v. Bremer County, 73-165.

The provisions of this section and of the preceding are simply that when a person entitled to redeem has paid to the auditor the amount necessary to effect the redemption as shown by the duplicate receipts on file in the auditor's office, the redemption is completed, and no other claim can be asserted against him or the land for taxes which have been paid by the purchaser of the property. But these provisions have no application to cases in which the redemption is effected by suit in equity, in which case the redemptioner is required to pay the interest and penalty provided by this section on each instalment of taxes which has been paid by the purchaser, although, such taxes being paid after the issuance of the deed, no certificate thereof has been filed with the auditor: Slyfield v. Barnum, 71-245.

Effect of redemption: The sale of land for taxes does not divest the title of the owner, and if redemption is made the title remains free from such lien in all respects as if the taxes had been paid before sale: Lake v. Gray, 35-44.

Redemption by one lienholder inures to the benefit of all, and after the redemption is made the title and liens stand in the same manner as though no sale had taken place: Elsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Redemption from a subsequent tax sale does not defeat the lien of a prior sale: Gray v. Coan, 30-536; S. C., 40-327.

Certificate of purchase; rights of holder: Until the execution of a tax deed the title to the property remains in the original owner, even though the period of redemption has expired without redemption being made, and such owner may maintain ejectment against the holder of a tax certificate whose title has not been perfected by the issuance of a deed: Williams v. Heath, 22-519.

Assignment of certificate: The assignment of a certificate of purchase to a tenant in common, or the husband of such tenant in possession receiving rents and profits, and therefore under obligation to pay the taxes, amounts to a redemption: Burns v. Byrne, 47-285.

The assignment of a tax certificate during the period for redemption to one who has purchased the land subsequently to the sale amounts to a redemption, and such purchaser does not hold the land free from the lien of prior taxes not included in such sale: Bowman v. Eckstien, 46-583.

Where one of two tenants in common in real property bid off the same for much less than the amount of taxes due, and afterwards conveyed his interest to his co-tenant and assigned to him his tax certificate, held, that money paid by the latter in satisfaction of the amount paid by his co-tenant and subsequent taxes, with the purpose of making redemption, and paid back to him as holder of the certificate, could be recovered from him by the county: Emmet County v. Griffin, 73-163.

By agreement: It is competent for a tax purchaser and the land owner to agree that redemption may be made after the time when the right of redemption has expired, and as to the rate of interest to be paid upon making such redemption: Shoemaker v. Porter, 41-197.

Voluntary: Money paid in redeeming land from a tax sale which is entirely void for the reason that no taxes were due on the property at the time of sale is voluntarily paid and cannot be recovered back: Morris v. Sioux County, 42-416.

Construction: The most liberal and benign construction is to be given to the statutory provisions for the redemption of real estate sold for taxes: Burton v. Hintrager, 18-348; Penn v. Clemans, 19-372; Rice v. Nelson, 27-148; Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44-623; Foster v. Bowman, 55-237.

1376. Certificate of redemption. §91. The county auditor shall, upon application of any party to redeem any real property sold under the provisions of this chapter, and being satisfied that such party has a right to redeem the same, and upon the payment of the proper amount, issue to such party a certificate of redemption, setting forth the facts of the sale substantially as contained in the certificate of sale, the date of the redemption, the amount paid, and by whom redeemed, and he shall make the proper entries in the book of sales in his office, and shall immediately give notice of such redemption to the county treasurer. Such certificate of redemption shall then be presented to the treasurer, who shall countersign the same and make the proper entries in the books of his office, and no certificate of redemption shall be held as evidence of such redemption without such signature of the treasurer. [R., §780.]

Who may redeem: In construing the redemption laws providing as to who may redeem from a tax sale, the word "owner" is held to be a generic term which embraces the different species of interest which may be carved out of a fee-simple estate: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

A party having any right or interest in the property may redeem, but a mere stranger to the title cannot: Byington v. Bookwalter, 7-512.

A person having no interest in the property has no right to redeem, and if he pays money for that purpose the act neither vests title in him nor divests that of the tax purchaser, nor does it inure to the benefit of one having the right to redeem: Penn v. Clemans, 19-372.

A purchaser at a tax sale may disregard a redemption by a stranger to the title, and at the expiration of the period of redemption demand the execution and delivery of the proper treasurer's deed. If, however, the tax purchaser should consent to the redemption being made by a stranger, and should accept payment of the redemption amount from him, thereby intentionally giving up his claim to the land and receiving money paid in exchange therefor, this would in effect be a redemption and would inure to the benefit of the true owner of the property: Wood v. Welpton, 29 Fed. Rep., 405.

The wife has such an interest in the homestead belonging to the husband as to entitle her to redeem: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

The right of the wife to redeem from a tax sale of the homestead continues until one year after she becomes discoverd: Diffner v. Krapfel, 23-37.

Wherever the right of dower will be cut off by a tax sale, the widow is entitled to dower, or her assignee may redeem, although the dower has not yet been assigned or admeasured: Rice v. Nelson, 27-148.

A lessee under a lease made subsequently to a sale may redeem the leased premises, even without the knowledge or consent of the owner: Byington v. Rider, 9-586.

Purchase of property under execution against the owner, whether made before or after a tax sale, gives the purchaser such an interest as to entitle him to redeem: Byington v. Walsh, 11-27.

Where a party buys land at execution sale which has been sold for taxes, he cannot, after making redemption, recover the amount so paid from the former owner: Barr v. Patrick, 59-134.

The holder of the patent title may redeem although there is an outstanding tax title acquired under a prior sale: Launcester v. County Auditor, 2 Dillon, 478.

A person coming into possession under color of title after a tax sale and before the expiration of the period for redemption has such an interest in the property as to be entitled to redeem: Foster v. Bowman, 55-237.

An heir of a mortgagee has sufficient equitable interest to be entitled to redeem: Burton v. Hintrager, 18-348.

Where the guardian of a minor had, by order of the court, sold lands of his ward, taking a mortgage to secure deferred payments of purchase money, held, that the ward had such interest in the land so sold as to be entitled to redeem from a tax sale: Witt v. Mewhirter, 57-545.

The administrator of a party holding a mortgage upon real estate has a right to redeem: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

An executor under the will of the deceased owner of real property, in which will disposition of the property is directed to be made by such executor, has a sufficient interest in the land to make redemption: White v. Smith, 68-312.

Title of party claiming right to redeem held sufficient: Viele v. Van Steenberg, 31 Fed. Rep., 249.

Act of officer in redemption: Failure of the treasurer to enter a memorandum of redemption on the list of sales will not make it invalid: Byington v. Bookwalter, 7-312.

If the owner pays the proper amount to redeem, such redemption is not defeated by error of the officer in issuing the certificate of redemption as to what sales or taxes are redeemed from: Colbin v. Stewart, 44-543.

1377. Minors and lunatics. 892. If real property of any minor or lunatic is sold for taxes, the same may be redeemed at any time within one year after such disability is removed, in the manner specified in the following section, or such redemption may be made by the guardian or legal representative under section eight hundred and ninety [§ 1375], at any time before the delivery of the deed. [R., § 779; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 14.]

The right of a minor or lunatic to redeem, under this section, is limited to his own interest in the property, and does not extend to that of other owners or tenants in common: Jacobs v. Porter, 34-341; Stout v. Merrill, 35-47; Muller v. Porter, 35-166.

The simple production from the custody of the guardian of a minor, who was a near relative, of an acknowledged conveyance, held not to make out a prima facie case of ownership in the minor entitling him to redeem: Walker v. Sargent, 47-448.

Where a minor holds a mortgage upon land sold at tax sale, he may redeem to the extent of such interest: Lloyd v. Bunce, 41-660.

To entitle a minor to redeem after the general time of redemption has expired, he must have been the owner of the property sold at the time of the sale: Burton v. Hintrager, 18-348; Tullman v. Cooke, 39-402.

Where land has been redeemed from sale, but by reason of failure of the officer to make proper entry thereof the fact of redemption does not appear, a deed issued in disregard of such redemption is void and passes no title to the purchaser: Fenlon v. Way, 40-196.

The right of the auditor to allow a redemption cannot be questioned, nor the redemption set aside, in an action to compel the treasurer to make a deed. The treasurer cannot disregard the action of the auditor: Hartman v. Anderson, 48-309.

Discretion of officer: When one seeks to redeem from a tax sale under an equity or a claim not based upon a recorded title, which the law provides shall support the right of redemption, the county officers must permit the redemption if they are satisfied he in good faith relies upon such equity or claim. The county officers cannot exercise judicial functions and cannot determine questions of title of this kind. Moreover, in cases wherein the county officers are authorized and required to permit redemption, the courts will allow and enforce the right. It cannot be possible that in a case wherein the officers would be required to permit redemption, the courts would deny the right: Cummings v. Wilson, 59-14.

Cancellation: A party who has taken the proper steps to make redemption is not bound by the action of the auditor in canceling the redemption certificate upon the stub thereof, unless he acquiesces therein and surrenders the certificate, and receives the money paid in making the redemption: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Stub as evidence: The stub of a redemption certificate is admissible in evidence to show the fact of redemption: Ibid.

Ratification: The acceptance by a tax sale purchaser of the amount of redemption money paid in to redeem operates as a ratification of the treasurer's act in issuing the certificate of redemption: Byington v. Hampton, 13-23.

Where the rights of a minor in the property sold are acquired after the sale, whether by conveyance or descent, the time for redemption is not extended: Stevens v. Cassidy, 59-113.

The grantee of a minor has only five years from his purchase of the property to bring the action: McCaughan v. Tatman, 53-508.

The extension of time for bringing the action in favor of the minor does not operate to the benefit of the purchaser as against such minor, and such purchaser must bring any action on his tax title within five years from the execution and recording of his deed: Ibid.

The disability of a minor is removed by his death, and the year within which redemption must be made commences to run from that time, and not from the time when he would have come of age: Gibbs v. Sawyer, 48-443.

The right of a minor to redeem is assignable and will pass by conveyance: Stout v. Merrill, 35-47, 57.

Redemption by a guardian may be made before the execution of the tax deed, under the general provisions as to redemption, or after the execution of the deed, by equitable action: Witt v. Mewhirter, 57-545.

This section simply prescribes when the right to bring the action shall terminate, but does not provide that it can only be brought during the year after the minor comes of age. It may be brought by the guardian or the minor before the minor attains majority: Ibid.

The fact that a minor may redeem at any

1378. Equitable action. 893. Any person entitled to redeem lands sold for taxes after the delivery of the deed, shall redeem the same by an equitable action in a court of record, in which all persons claiming an interest in the land derived from the tax sale, as shown by the record, shall be made defendants, and the courts shall determine the rights, claims, and interest of the several parties, including liens for taxes and claims for improvements made on the land by the person claiming under the tax title. And no person shall be allowed to redeem land sold for taxes in any other manner after the service of the notice provided for by the next section, and the execution and delivery of the treasurer's deed. [11 G. A., ch. 124, §§ 1, 2.]

Mistake and other grounds: The fact that the owner of property was a citizen in North Carolina, residing there during the civil war, held sufficient to entitle him to redeem property sold at tax sale after the period of redemption had expired: Finley v. Brown, 22-538.

Where, through mistake of the officer, the owner failed to redeem from a valid sale, but redeemed from a subsequent invalid one, which he supposed was the only sale, he was allowed to redeem after the deed had been executed, it being held that the mistake lying at the door of the officer was sufficient ground for equitable relief: Noble v. Bullis, 23-559.

Where the record showed two different sales of the same property for taxes for the same year, and it appeared that the land owner had in good faith redeemed from one of the sales believing that was the only one, held, that he might in equity maintain an action to redeem from the deed issued in pursuance of the other sale, and should be permitted to do so by paying the amount for which the land sold at the other sale, with the legal interest and penalties, but without costs of sale: Shoemaker v. Lacey, 38-277.

A party making redemption may rely upon the representations of officers as to the facts of the sale, and their mistake, error or negligence is sufficient ground to support a right of redemption by action after the execution of the tax deed: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44-622.

Where a person making redemption from a tax sale paid the amount of subsequent taxes given him by the auditor as having been paid by the tax purchaser, and received a certificate of redemption, and supposed that by such redemption all the taxes upon the land were satisfied, when in fact one item of tax for one of the years was not paid, and the land was afterwards sold therefor, held, that such owner might have the deed under the latter sale set time within a year after the removal of disability will not entitle him to possession against the holder of a valid tax deed. His interest in the land is an equity to be enforced, if at all, in a court of equity: McCaughan v. Tattman, 53-508.

Where, in an equitable action to redeem on account of minority, plaintiff offers to redeem if he shall be required to do so, and defendant denies his right of redemption and claims to hold an absolute title, the costs should be taxed to defendant upon judgment being rendered in plaintiff's favor: Strang v. Burris, 61-375.

aside and be allowed to redeem therefrom: Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co. v. Storm Lake Bank, 55-696.

Mere mistake on the part of the land owner in failing to pay his taxes when they become due and omitting to redeem from the tax sale is not sufficient ground to entitle him to redeem in equity: Playter v. Cochran, 37-258.

Where the purchaser at the sale made inquiry as to taxes upon the property but not as to tax sales, held, that he was not entitled to redeem from a deed issued in pursuance of such a sale: Moore v. Hamlin, 38-482.

Where defendant had asked the treasurer to offer a certain tract of land for sale, and he had refused on the ground that no taxes were delinquent thereon, which was a mistake, and the land was subsequently offered and bid in by plaintiff, after which, with knowledge of the tax sale and within the time to redeem, defendant had bought the patent title to the property, held, that there was no ground for setting aside plaintiff's tax title at the suit of defendant: Gow v. Tidrick, 48-284.

In a particular case, where a party claimed the right to redeem in equity from a tax deed on the ground of certain unsuccessful offers to make redemption before the expiration of the time, consisting of visits to the auditor's office, which was found closed, etc., held, that the fact that twenty-six days elapsed after the making of such offer, and before the expiration of the time for redemption, without further steps being taken, precluded equitable relief: Harrison v. Owens, 57-314.

Inaccuracy of statement in a letter by the treasurer to a property owner as to the amount which would be necessary to redeem the property from the tax sale, held not sufficient to entitle such property owner to redeem in equity after the expiration of the statutory period: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675.

Where taxes are by mistake paid on other land than that intended, and the land of the owner goes to sale without payment, such owner has no relief against his mistake: Maawell v. Hunter, 65-121.

Where plaintiff sought to redeem from a tax sale after the time fixed by statute had expired, because of a mistake of the clerk in not stating such sale in response to a general offer to pay all taxes and redeem all property sold, held, that such general offer, without any request to redeem from the specific sale in question, and the mistake of the clerk or negligence of the owner in not having the sale in question redeemed from under such general offer, would not raise an equity in favor of plaintiff as against an innocent purchaser: Bolinger v. Henderson, 23-165.

Tender: In an action to redeem from a tax sale to avoid liability for the costs of the action tender should be made of the amount due defendant for taxes paid: Curl v. Watson, 25-35; Poindexter v. Doolittle, 54-52.

Where a party was allowed by equitable action to redeem from a tax sale after the deed had been issued, on the ground of a bona fide attempt to redeem in proper time, which was rendered unavailing by error of the officer, held, that he should pay in making redemption the amount which he should have paid at the time of the offer to redeem with six per cent. interest, and that as no offer to pay such amount had been made he should pay the costs of the action: Corning Town Co. v. Davis, 44-622.

Offer to pay: Where the party attacking a tax title at the same time offers to redeem therefrom, and afterwards succeeds in defeating such title on the issue made by the other party as to its validity, he should not be subjected to the costs of trial of that issue: Broquet v. Sterling, 56-357.

Amount to be repaid: Where a party seeks relief from a tax title under which the purchaser has procured a deed and is in possession, such redemption will be allowed only upon payment of a sum which would be sufficient to pay all taxes if they had not been paid by the purchaser: Thode v. Spofford, 65-294.

The rule that a party who succeeds in defeating a tax deed must pay to the person holding under such deed the amount which the owner would have had to pay if such purchaser had not paid the taxes at the sale is not applicable where a party seeks by equitable action to redeem from an illegal sale before the tax deed is issued. The treasurer's certificate of sale does not vest in the purchaser the title and interest of the state and county. The amount which plaintiff should be required to pay in such a case is the taxes which the owner was legally bound to pay, with six per cent. interest: Roberts v. Merrill, 60-166.

In an equitable action to redeem after execution of the deed the party seeking to redeem should be required to refund to the purchaser the amount of taxes paid by him subsequently to the execution of the deed, with interest and penalty thereon, whether duplicate receipts for such taxes have been filed with the auditor or not: Elliott v. Parker, 72-746.

Where a party holding a tax deed appearing to be valid on its face had in good faith paid taxes for fifteen years, held, that the owner of the land redeeming from such tax sale in an action in equity should be required to repay the tax thus paid by the holder of the tax title: Buck v. Holt, 74-294.

There is to be a full equitable adjustment of the rights of the parties; and rents and profits, as well as claims for improvements, are to be taken into consideration in the action to redeem in equity. Where such rents and profits have been more than sufficient to repay all the taxes, interest and penalty which the law imposes, the owner may have his title quieted against the holder of the tax title without further redemption: Strang v. Burris, 61-375.

Where the owner, prior to the expiration of the time of redemption, offers to redeem, and such offer is refused by the holder of the certificate, he may afterwards be allowed to redeem in equity by paying the amount due: Butterfield v. Walsh, 36-534.

Where the owner of an undivided one-half interest in property covered by a tax sale and deed was allowed to redeem therefrom in an equitable action, held, that such owner was properly required to pay one-half the value of improvements made by the tax purchaser, and entitled to be credited with the rental value of the property exclusive of the improvements while occupied by the tax purchaser; and in such case further held that as plaintiff could not have ascertained in advance and tendered the amount necessary to redeem, one-half the cost might properly be taxed to defendant: Elliott v. Parker, 72-746.

In an equitable action to redeem under this section the question of improvements is to be considered. It is not to be left to be determined under the occupying claimant law: Serrin v. Brush, 74-489.

Costs: Where in an equitable action to redeem on account of minority the plaintiff offers to redeem if he shall be required to do so, and defendant denies his right of redemption, and claims to hold an absolute title, the costs should be taxed to defendant upon judgment being rendered in favor of plaintiff: Strang v. Burris, 61-375.

The costs necessarily incurred in establishing plaintiff's right to redeem under this section constitute part of the expense of redemption and ought to be paid by the party who exercises such right: Serrin v. Brush, 74-489.

As to the right of the party whose tax title is declared void to recover the taxes paid by him, see notes to § 1382.

Equitable redemption from parties holding in trust: A party charged with the payment of taxes as agent cannot acquire a tax title to his principal's land; and under the facts of a particular case, held, that the party acquiring a tax title was the agent of the owner, and therefore that his title was void: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675.

Where the guardian of a minor purchased a tax title by quitclaim deed from the purchaser at the sale, which deed was made to him as guardian, held, that the conveyance inured to his ward's benefit and that a purchaser from him was chargeable with notice thereof and could not hold the lands as against the ward: Rankin v. Miller, 43-11.

A vendee taking possession under title bond and enjoying the rents and profits is, as between himself and the vendor, liable for the payment of accruing taxes, and cannot therefore acquire, or cause to be acquired, a tax title as against his vendor: Hunt v. Rowland, 22-53.

Neither can a third person bid in the land for taxes at the dictation of such vendee, with the proceeds of produce from the land, and hold it as against the vendor: Ibid.

A mortgagor cannot acquire a tax title to the prejudice of a mortgagee; neither can a vendee who is in possession under a title bond, with the agreement to pay taxes, acquire as against the vendor a tax title under a sale made prior to the bond for a deed. The duty of the vendee under such circumstances would be to redeem the property, and money so paid would be applied as a payment on the purchase money: Cowdry v. Cuthbert, 71-733.

It is the duty of the holder of a life estate to pay the taxes, and he cannot acquire a tax title against the reversioner: Ollenan v. Kelgore, 52-38.

A purchaser of property at foreclosure sale cannot afterwards acquire a valid tax title as against a junior mortgagee, and the latter may be allowed to redeem upon payment of the taxes paid by such purchaser: Anson v. Anson, 20-55.

The obligation to pay taxes due before the sale or mortgage of the property is upon the vendor or mortgagor, and does not pass to one who purchases with an agreement to pay off the mortgage: Porter v. Lafferty, 33-254.

But the vendee having knowledge of the mortgage and its covenants, and therefore knowing that his vendor was under obligation to pay the taxes, undertaking to discharge the mortgage, cannot afterwards acquire a valid tax title by purchase at tax sale for such unpaid taxes so as to defeat the mortgage: Ibid.

The mortgagor or his grantee who assumes the payment of the mortgage cannot acquire a valid tax title as against the lien of the mortgagee: Bowen v. Kurtz, 37-239.

A mortgagee having the right to pay taxes for the protection of his security, a purchase by him at a tax sale of the property will be regarded merely as a payment of the taxes made for that purpose, by which neither he nor any person holding under him can acquire a tax title: Eck v. Swennumson, 73-423.

A person in possession of and claiming title to land can acquire no additional right to a tax deed if the taxes were a lien upon the land when he took possession. It is the duty of a person acquiring the title and possession of land to pay the taxes, and he can acquire no right or title against the mortgagee by neglect of such duty: Stears v. Hottelbeck, 33-550.

One purchasing land subject to the lien of taxes, and releasing his grantor from obligation to pay the same, is presumed to have assumed their payment: Ibid.

The mortgagor or his grantees with knowledge of the mortgage cannot acquire a tax title as against the mortgagee: Ibid.; Fair v. Brown, 40-209.

Although the mortgagee is under no obligation to pay the taxes upon the premises, yet he is authorized to redeem from a tax sale, and cannot, by acquiring title through such a sale, defeat the lien of prior mortgages: Fair v. Brown, 40-209.

A junior mortgagee who has paid taxes on the property, upon redemption being made from him can recover only, as to taxes, the amount paid with six per cent. interest. He is not entitled to recover statute penalties: Garrettson v. Scofield, 44-35.

Where a creditor takes a tax title to property of the debtor under the agreement that he is to hold the same as security, not only for advances before procuring it, but also for a judgment held by him against the debtor, such title will be deemed in equity as a mortgage, and the debtor will be allowed to redeem therefrom: Jordan v. Brown, 56-281.

In such cases, while the deed will not be absolute against the holder himself, it will be absolute against other claimants to the land who do not take advantage of the right to redeem: Ibid.

Tax deeds procured by fraud and collusion on the part of the mortgagor and the tax purchaser may be set aside at the suit of the mortgagee sought to be defrauded thereby: Connolly v. Connolly, 63-202.

Where plaintiff sought to subject lands occupied by defendant to a debt contracted by defendant's father, and defendant asked in a cross-bill to have the title quieted in her, it appearing that plaintiff had, pending litigation, redeemed the land from tax sale, held that, upon confirming defendant's title, the latter must pay to plaintiff the amount paid in such redemption: Semple v. McCrary, 46-37.

Persons not debarred from acquiring tax title: A person who is not in possession of real estate, but who claims title thereto under a void tax deed, can become a purchaser at a subsequent tax sale, procure a treasurer's deed, and thereunder claim title: Neal v. Frazier, 63-451.

While an owner of land, or one under obligation to pay taxes thereon, cannot acquire a tax title so as to defeat incumbrancers, or others setting up a title adverse to him, yet one who has no interest in the land and is under no obligation to pay the taxes, and is a stranger to the owner, may acquire a tax title thereon, even though he is in possession: Curtis v. Smith, 42-665.

Acquiring tax title by tenant in common: A tax title acquired by a tenant in common upon the common property will inure to the benefit of his co-tenants. He cannot thereby defeat their title: Weare v. Van Meter, 42-128; Flinn v. McKinley, 44-68; Fulton v. Chidester, 46-588; Shell v. Walker, 54-386; Smith v. Smith, 68-608; Clark v. Browne, 70-139.

The grantee of a tenant in common cannot acquire a tax title against co-tenants of his grantor: Austin v. Barrett, 44-488.

The husband of a tenant in common in possession with his wife in the enjoyment of the profits cannot, by neglecting to pay the taxes and purchasing the property at tax sale, acquire a valid title as against her co-tenants: Burns v. Byrne, 45-285.

A tax deed acquired by a tenant in common is not sufficient in equity to divest the interest of a co-tenant, even though the holder of the deed may have acquired the tax certificate before becoming tenant in common: Tice v. Derby, 59-312; Flinn v. McKinley, 44-68.

Under particular facts, held, that a tax purchaser was to be considered a tenant in common of the property, and therefore that the other party interested therein might make redemption from him upon payment of the proper amount: Conn v. Conn, 58-747.

A tenant in common not in possession may purchase an outstanding tax title for his own benefit: Alexander v. Sully, 50-192.

Under the circumstances of a particular case, held, that defendant having purchased from one whom he knew to have an undivided interest, and gone into possession, was a tenant in common with the owners of the remaining interest, and a tax title acquired by him would be presumed to be held for the benefit of all: Shell v. Walker, 54-386.

Relief against a tenant in common who has procured a tax title upon the common property is not barred by the statute of limitations as to actions on tax titles, the real ground of the remedy being fraud of the tenant in attempting to acquire a tax title against his co-tenant: Austin v. Barrett, 44-488.

Contribution as to taxes paid by co-tenant: The tenant in common acquiring a tax title will be regarded as holding the title thus acquired in trust for his co-tenants until the presumption is rebutted by their refusal to contribute, and the tenant holding the title thus acquired can enforce contribution by action: Weare v. Van Meter, 42-128.

Where a person purchased an undivided interest in real property without any notice or knowledge that any claim would be made for taxes previously paid by the owner of the other undivided interest, held, that the latter could not recover a portion of such taxes from the former, or make them a claim against the land: Stover v. Cory, 53-708.

Where a co-tenant pays the taxes upon the whole property he will be limited in his recovery of the proportionate share due from other co-tenants to the amount paid with legal interest: Oliver v. Montgomery, 39-601.

A tenant in common paying taxes upon the common property acquires a lien thereon for reimbursement: Oliver v. Montgomery, 42-36.

Amount to be paid in redeeming in such cases: In making redemption from a tax title acquired by one whose relations to the owner are such that he cannot acquire a valid tax title against such owner, and who has paid subsequent taxes on the premises, the owner should pay to the holder of the title the same amount he would have to pay to the treasurer in case the taxes had not been paid by the claimant under the tax sale: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675.

Where plaintiff bought certain land at a tax sale, and defendant, with fraudulent intent, procured from a former owner a quit-claim deed, and on the strength thereof redeemed the land from plaintiff just before the expiration of the period of redemption, it appearing that the property had passed from defendant to an innocent purchaser, held, that plaintiff, upon proving the fraudulent character of the transaction, might recover from defendant the value of the land at the time of redemption less the amount paid him to redeem: Burgan v. Smith, 47-236.

Estoppel: One who buys property at a tax sale cannot claim an estoppel against one who, holding a tax deed of the property sold, was present and bid against him and gave no notice of his title under the tax deed, unless the former can show that he was not fully aware of the latter's title, or that he relied upon his action, or was in some way deceived or injured thereby: Case v. Albee, 28-277.

Conclusive: A redemption by action to which all persons appearing of record to have an interest in the property are made parties is conclusive evidence, and will be binding upon an assignee of notes secured by a mortgage on the premises whose assignment is not recorded, although he is not a party: Van Gorder v. Hanna, 72-572.

EXECUTION OF DEED — NOTICE GIVEN.

1379. Notice of expiration of time for redemption. 894. After the expiration of two years and nine months after the date of sale of the land for taxes, the lawful holder of the certificate of purchase may cause to be served upon the person in possession of such land or town lot, and also upon the person in whose name the same is taxed, if such person resides in the county where the land is situated, in the manner provided by law for the service of original notices, a notice signed by him, his agent, or attorney, stating the date of sale, the description of the land or town lot sold, the name of the purchaser, and that the right of redemption will expire and a deed for said land be made, unless redemption from such sale be made within ninety days from the completed service thereof. Service may be made upon non-residents of the county by publishing the same three times in some newspaper printed in said county, and if no newspaper is printed in said county, then in the nearest newspaper published in this state. But any such non-resident may file with the treasurer of the county a written appointment of some resident of the county where his lands or lots are situated as agent upon whom service shall be made, and in such case, personal service of said notice shall be made upon said agent. Service shall be deemed completed when an affidavit of the service of said notice, and of the particular mode thereof, duly signed and verified by the holder of the certificate of purchase, his agent, or attorney, shall have been filed with the treasurer authorized to execute the tax deed. Such affidavit shall be filed by said treasurer, and entered upon the records of his office, and said record or affidavit shall be presumptive evidence of the completed service of notice herein required; and, until ninety days after the service of said notice, the right of redemption from such sale shall not expire. Any person swearing falsely to any fact or statement contained in said affidavit shall be deemed guilty of perjury and punished accordingly. The cost of serving said notice, whether by publication or otherwise, together with the cost of the affidavit, shall be added to the redemption money. [R., § 781; 14 G. A., ch. 124.]

Time for redeeming: The right to redeem is terminated after the expiration of ninety days from completed service of notice whether the deed be then executed or not: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Under former statutes, held, that redemption could not be made after the expiration of three years from the time of sale, although the deed had not been taken by the purchaser: Pearson v. Robinson, 44-413; Scofield v. McDowell, 47-129.

Under the same provisions, held, also, that the fact that the purchaser did not record his deed would not entitle the owner to redeem after the three years allowed, and that the fact that the purchaser went into possession and received rents and profits, before the recording of his deed, to an amount sufficient to satisfy the tax, interest and penalties, would not entitle the owner to redeem in an equitable action: Spengin v. Forry, 37-242.

The law in force at the time of sale regulates the time within which redemption may be made, and not that in force at the time of the assessment: Negus v. Yancey, 22-57.

Where the period allowed for redemption by the laws under which a tax sale was made was three years, held, that a statute enacted before the expiration of that time after the sale, extending the time to four years, was unconstitutional. Whether a statute reducing the time, or abrogating it entirely, would not likewise be unconstitutional, quere: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

Where a statute gave to married women an extended time within which to redeem, held, that a repeal of such statute did not operate to take away the right of redemption from sales previously made: Myers v. Copeland, 20-22.

Persons under disability: Where a person has the right to redeem within a time given by the general clause of the statute, such person may, if within either of the classes of persons to whom, by reason of disability, a greater time is given, redeem within such additional time: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

Further as to redemption by minors, lunatics, etc., see § 1377, and notes.

Notice of expiration of time for redemption; when necessary: The provision for service of notice of the expiration of the period of redemption is applicable only where such service is possible, and where it is impossible the time of redemption will expire without notice, as, for instance, where the property is assessed to an unknown owner and is not in the actual occupancy of any one, and in such cases a deed may issue in consummation of the sale after the expiration of the three years allowed for redemption: Tuttle v. Griffin, 64-453; Chambers v. Haddock, 64-556; Meredith v. Phelps, 65-118; Walker v. Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot, etc., Co., 65-563; Burdick v. Connell, 69-458.

In such cases the right of redemption expires at the end of three years, and redemption cannot afterward be made, although no deed has yet been executed: Meredith v. Phelps, 65-118.

When land is unoccupied and taxed to unknown owners, there is no person on whom notice can be served, and the authority of the treasurer to execute the deed is not dependent upon the service of notice: Garmoe v. Sturgeon, 65-147.

The fact that in an action based on such a sale the fact of giving notice is urged will not estop the tax title purchaser from showing that notice was not required: Walker v. Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot, etc., Co., 65-563.

No notice is required to be served upon persons not in possession of the property and in whose names the property is not taxed: Burdick v. Connell, 69-458.

Person in possession: Where a timber lot not suitable for cultivation is used by a person in such way as such land is ordinarily used, he is to be deemed in possession, and is to be served with notice: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Notice is only required to be given to persons in actual possession, not to one who is merely in constructive possession: Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

Where property is taxed to unknown owners, and the owner thereof is not in possession at the time of the sale, notice is not required to be given to such owner, although he has, after the expiration of three years but prior to the execution of the deed, gone into possession of the property: Meredith v. Phelps, 65-118.

Where a railway company is in possession of a portion of the premises, condemned for right of way, it has the right of redemption, and such right cannot be cut off without notice of the expiration of the period for redemption. A tax deed executed without such notice would not extinguish the right of the company: Garmoe v. Sturgeon, 65-147.

A person who, at the time of the service of notice, had no possession except such as had been exercised by ploughing two furrows on the land in question, without any right to do so being made to appear, held not sufficient in possession to be entitled to notice: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

Acts of the owner of city property, actually occupied as such, in causing weeds to be cut and hauled therefrom, held sufficient to show that he was in possession and entitled to notice: Sapp v. Walker, 66-497.

Where a part owner of property was a member of the family of a brother residing upon the land, but had no control over it, held, that she was not in possession in such a sense that it was necessary to serve notice upon her. The possession contemplated by this section is actual and not constructive. It involves the occupying and controlling of the land and not mere residence upon it: Rowland v. Brown, 75-679.

That a person be in actual possession it is not necessary for him to live on the land or have some person representing him stay upon it. The owner of cultivated land who leases it, reserving part of the crop as rent, is in actual possession when it is surrendered to him, even though he does not remain on the land: Whitney v. Farsons, 73-137.

Even though the petition of plaintiff asking to redeem on account of failure to give notice to him as the person in possession of the land does not aver that he was in possession, he may prove such fact under such allegation made by him in his answer to defendant's cross-petition: Ibid.

Subsequent changes: If the notice is served on the proper person, the right of the holder to a deed at the end of ninety days after the proof of such service is filed cannot be affected by any changes which may occur as to the taxation of the property or its ownership, between the time of such service and the proof of service or issuance of the deed, even though there is delay in making the proof of service: Rice v. Bates, 68-393.

Mortgagee: The notice required to be served before a tax deed can be made need not be served on the mortgagee unless he is in possession: Hall v. Guthridge, 52-408.

Person to whom taxed: Where land is not taxed in the name of the owner, the omission to serve notice upon such owner not in possession will not invalidate the deed: Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

Where at the time of the service of notice the land was listed and assessed for taxation to a purchaser of the same holding by a deed not recorded, and the assessor's book so showing was in the auditor's office, held, that notice must be served upon him although the land was still in possession of his grantor, upon whom notice was properly served: Heaton v. Knight, 63-686.

A party cannot, by procuring a quitclaim to property on which he holds a certificate and having it assessed to himself and then collusively assigning his certificate to another, have valid notice served upon himself which shall entitle the assignee to a deed and give such assignee a title which he can then transfer to the original holder of the certificate: Cummings v. Browne, 61-355.

Where the junior mortgagee bid in the property at foreclosure, and then secured the purchase of the property at tax sale in the name of another for his benefit, and had notice of the expiration of the period of redemption served upon himself as the owner, held, that such notice was insufficient, and the tax deed should be set aside: Frank v. Arnold, 73-370.

The object of the law being to give notice to the owner of the land, it is the duty of a purchaser to examine the records and ascertain in whose name the land is taxed and give notice to such person. It may properly be considered that until it is listed for taxation it is taxed to the same person as in the previous year; but when it is listed for taxation in the name of another person and assessed to him, and the assessment returned to the auditor, then from the time of such listing it may properly be said to be taxed to that person: Heaton v. Knight, 65-434; Adams v. Snow, 65-435.

Where there is a conflict between the assessor's books and the tax duplicates placed in the treasurer's hands, the property is to be deemed taxed to the person whose name appears on the tax duplicate: Fuller v. Butler, 72-729.

Where no person is in possession of the land and it is taxed to an unknown owner, the tax purchaser is entitled to a deed without giving any expiration notice. He is not bound to look back of the assessment: Griffin v. Tuttle, 74-219.

Where the land was taxed to "H. Corlis," and the expiration notice was directed to "H. Corless," held, that the two names were substantially the same and the notice was sufficient: Nycum v. Raymond, 73-224.

Where a party owned land appearing on the treasurer's books as taxed to persons unknown, but the records showed his ownership and that he had been owner for several years, during which the land had been taxed in his name, held, that the taxation in the name of such party held good until a subsequent taxation of the land in the name of some other party, and the subsequent taxation of the property to an unknown owner would not relieve the holder of the certificate from the obligation to give notice to such owner: Hartley v. Boynton, 5 McCrary, 453.

In an action to redeem from tax sale on the ground that proper notice of the expiration of the time of redemption was not given before the issuance of the tax deed, plaintiff should aver that the land was taxed in the name of some one for the year when the notice should have been given. If not taxed in the name of any owner at the time notice is to be given, notice is not required: Grove v. Benedict, 69-346.

Where the notice was served upon the owner of the legal title, the land being assessed for that year to unknown owners, and it not appearing that any one else was in possession, held, that the owner of the legal title would be presumed to be in possession and that the service was sufficient: Hall v. Guthridge, 52-408.

Notice is to be given to the person in whose name the land is taxed, but it is not required that such person shall be the owner of the land: Kessey v. Connell, 68-420.

Actual knowledge of the publication of notice will not obviate the necessity of service of notice in cases where such service is required by statute: Reed v. Thompson, 56-455.

Uncertainty of notice: Where the bid on which a forty-acre tract of land was sold was for "fourteen acres" thereof, and the notice so described it, held, that the notice was void for uncertainty in the description: Poindexter v. Doolittle, 54-52.

A notice sufficiently describing the land except that it designates it as containing thirty acres instead of forty acres, where the description would be complete without any designation of the quantity, will not be rendered insufficient by reason of such mistake: Rowland v. Brown, 75-679.

Who to give notice: To constitute a person the holder of the certificate of purchase so as to authorize him to make affidavit as to the publication of notice to redeem, it is not necessary that he have physical possession of the instrument. By that term is meant the owner of it, or the one who at the proper time will be entitled to a deed under the sale; and where the holder of a certificate had surrendered it to the treasurer for cancellation upon the issuance of a treasurer's deed, which was without authority at the time, held, that he was not afterwards precluded from serving notice as holder of the certificate: Rice v. Bates, 68-393.

Also held, that the fact that such holder had executed a conveyance of the property covered by the certificate of purchase to a third person did not preclude his giving notice and receiving the deed, his right as purchaser before receiving a deed not being such an interest in the property as would pass by a conveyance thereof: Ibid.

By the expression "lawful holder" is meant one who in law is the holder of the certificate and entitled to the rights and benefits which may accrue under it. To make a person such lawful holder it is not necessary that he have the formal assignment of the certificate provided for in § 1373: Swan v. Whaley, 75-623.

Who may serve notice: Service made by the holder of the tax certificate in person is not prohibited and is sufficient: Hall v. Gulhridge, 52-408.

The provision that the notice shall be served in the manner prescribed for the service of original notice relates to the mode of service and does not prescribe any rule as to the person or officer who shall make the service or as to the return. Service can be made only by the holder of the certificate, his agent or attorney, and the affidavit of one of these parties as to service by him is the only competent method of proving such service: Ellsworth v. Van Ort, 67-222.

Notice by publication; name: If land is taxed by mistake in the wrong name, and the case is a proper one for giving notice of the expiration of the period of redemption by publication, the published name should be that of the person in which the land is taxed and not that of the owner: Hillyer v. Farneman, 65-227.

The practice of writing only the initial letters of given names has become so common that a notice directed to a person in such manner should not be deemed on that account insufficient: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

Blanket notice: The statute evidently contemplates that a notice shall be given by the holder of each certificate of purchase, and a fair construction of it requires that a separate notice shall be given to each person in possession or to whom each tract of land is taxed. A mere blanket notice covering numerous pieces of land, directed to different owners collectively, is not sufficient: White v. Smith, 68-313; Adams v. Burdick, 68-666.

Proof of service: The affidavit required by statute to constitute proof of completion of service of notice must be by the holder of the certificate, his agent or attorney, and an affidavit by the proprietor of the paper in which the notice was published, in case of service by publication, is not sufficient: American Missionary Ass'n v. Smith, 59-704; Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675; Sweeley v. Van Steenburg, 69-696; Viele v. Van Steenburg, 31 Fed. Rep., 249.

A mere request by the holder of a tax certificate to the foreman of a newspaper in which publication of notice is made, to make an affidavit and return it to the treasurer, will not constitute such foreman an agent of the holder so as to render the proof of publication sufficient: Chambers v. Haddock, 64-556.

Where the affidavit of proof of service referred to another affidavit, not proper to be received in itself to show service, held, that such service was sufficient to incorporate the latter into the former, and that the papers together showed proper service: Stull v. Moore, 70-149.

Where proof of the service of a notice consisted of an unverified return made thereon and an affidavit of the holder of the certificate stating that service had been made as shown by the return, that was held sufficient: Rowland v. Brown, 75-679.

Where there was a mistake in the affidavit as to the name of the land-owner, but reference was therein made to the notice attached thereto, which was the notice served by publication, and in such notice the name was correctly inserted, held, that the proof was sufficient: Rice v. Haddock, 70-318.

The proof of service of the notice need not show the county in which the service was made, the place of actual service not being material: Rowland v. Brown, 75-679.

An affidavit of the holder of the certificate that the publication was made for three consecutive weeks, but which did not state when the publication was made, held not sufficient: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 63-675.

Where the affidavit stated the date of the first publication, and stated that three publications in a weekly newspaper had been made, held, that it was sufficient: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

Where the affidavit of publication showed that the paper in which the publication was made was "A weekly newspaper published in said county," held, that it sufficiently appeared that it was a newspaper printed in said county: Nycum v. Raymond, 73-224.

Affidavit in a particular case, held to sufficiently refer to the paper containing the notice: Johnson v. Brown, 71-609.

Where the affidavit does not state where the newspaper in which such notice was inserted was published, nor the date of the publication of the notice, it is wholly insufficient to authorize the treasurer to issue the deed: Kessey v. Connell, 68-430.

It is the duty of a purchaser to make some showing which will authorize the treasurer to make a deed, and he should make such a record as upon its face shows authority for the treasurer to act: Ibid.

Failure to enter upon the record the affidavit showing service will not invalidate a deed. The notice itself as well as the record thereof is to be taken as evidence of the fact, and if the affidavit be lost it may be shown by copy duly proven, although not entered on the record: Baker v. Crabb, 73-412.

Failure to give notice: A deed issued without competent evidence being filed of the service of notice to redeem is without authority: Rice v. Bates, 68-393.

A treasurer's deed issued before expiration of ninety days from the filing of an affidavit of service of notice is invalid: Svope v. Prior, 58-412; Cummings v. Wilson, 59-14.

Where a deed is void because prematurely issued, the surrender and cancellation of the certificate is also void, and the certificate has the same force and effect as though it had never been surrendered. If, thereafter, proper notice is given, or the party is prevented by an injunction at the suit of the owner, to whom notice would be given, from giving such notice, the time of redemption will expire ninety days from the giving or attempting to give such notice: Long v. Smith, 62-329.

And if the person procuring an injunction against the giving of notice and procuring a deed by the tax payer neglects to make or offer to make redemption until after the time when a deed could have been procured if not prevented by such injunction, he will not be entitled to redeem at all: Ibid.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to justify the court in finding that the tax register showed, when examined by the agent or owner before making redemption, that the affidavit required by statute was filed at such a date as to make his redemption proper: Ellsworth v. Green, 59-622.

Effect of defective proof: Where there has been sufficient notice of the expiration of the time for redemption, but although there is an attempt to comply with the statute with reference to proof of service of notice, such proof is not in accordance with the statutory requirements by reason of not stating facts required to be stated, the period of limitation of five years will run in favor of the holder of a deed executed in pursuance of such defective notice. In such case the tax deed is not void in the sense that it is executed without authority: Trulock v. Bentley, 67-602.

Where the proof of notice is not such as is required, but the deed is nevertheless issued, although it shows on its face that the proof was improper, yet the deed is not to be deemed void, and the period of limitations of an action to attack the same commences to run from the time of its execution: Bolin v. Francis, 72-619.

Presumption as to notice: The statute does not require that the affidavit shall show the facts necessary to justify service by publication, as, for instance, that a person served was a non-resident. It is only required to show the service and mode thereof. If the facts are such that the mode of service was not justifiable, the deed can be impeached, but it is made presumptive evidence of its own validity in that respect, and the party asserting it has the burden of showing the impeaching facts: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

The deed is prima facie evidence that the notice has been properly and sufficiently served on the right person: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178; Baker v. Crabb, 73-412.

The deed is at least prima facie evidence of the proper giving of notice, and the party attacking a deed for want of service of the required notice upon the owner must show that the land was assessed to some owner by name, and not to an unknown owner: Fuller v. Armstrong, 53-683.

Where the notice and proof of service on their face are regular, and a deed is issued in accordance therewith, the burden of overthrowing this prima facie evidence is upon the person attacking the deed: Wilson v. Crafts, 56-450.

In the absence of proof that the land was occupied or taxed to some person, it will be presumed in support of the deed that the facts were such as that service of notice was not required: Chambers v. Haddock, 64-556; Garmoe v. Sturgeon, 65-147.

Notice may be served personally or by publication; and where it appears that notice by publication is made, but is defective, a deed being presumptive evidence of sufficient service, it will be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary that personal notice was given: Baker v. Crabb, 73-412.

The presumption must obtain that the land was taxed to and notice served on a living person: White v. Smith, 68-313.

The tax deed is not conclusive evidence of the giving of notice as required: Reed v. Thompson, 56-455.

Where it appeared that the land was taxed to a known owner for the year for the taxes for which the sale was made, and that there was an attempt to serve notice of the expiration of the period of redemption upon such owner, which was insufficient, and an action to quiet title was brought against him, held, that it sufficiently appeared that the land was not taxed to an unknown owner to overcome the presumption in favor of the deed: Ellsworth v. Cordrey, 65-303.

Change of statute: Notice as required in this section is not necessary where the sale was made before its enactment, although the deed was not executed until after the Code took effect: Robinson v. First Nat. Bank, 48-354.

1380. Deed executed. 895. Immediately after the expiration of ninety days from the date of service of the written notice hereinbefore provided, the treasurer then in office shall make out a deed for each lot or parcel of land sold and remaining unredeemed, and deliver the same to the purchaser upon the return of the certificate of purchase. The treasurer shall demand twenty-five cents for each deed made by him on such sales, but any number of parcels of land bought by one person may be included in one deed, if desired by the purchaser. [R., §§ 781-2; C., '51, §§ 503-4.]

When land has been redeemed: The treasurer has no authority to make a deed for land which has been redeemed, and such deed would be void: Fenton v. Way, 40-196.

Without notice to redeem: Unless a notice has been served on the person in whose name the land is taxed, the sheriff is not authorized to execute the deed. As long as the right of redemption exists there is no complete sale, and the period of limitation provided by § 1388 does not commence to run: Slyfield v. Barnum, 71-245.

If the notice to redeem, required by the statute, has not been served, or if the proof of the service of the notice required by law is not on file in the treasurer's office when the deed is executed, the land remains subject to redemption, but the deed is not void. It conveys title to the purchaser, who holds it subject to be defeated by the redemption of the land, when the right of redemption is established and exercised in the manner provided by law: Ibid.; Bowers v. Hallock, 71-218.

Second deed: When the first deed executed by the treasurer is so imperfect or informal as not to pass the title, he has the power and it is his duty to execute a second and corrected deed conveying the title: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356; Parker v. Sexton, 29-421; Hurley v. Street, 29-429; Johnson v. Chase, 30-308; Gray v. Coan, 30-536; Geuther v. Fuller, 36-604.

If the sale is legal the purchaser has the right to be clothed with the legal title, which can only be done by the execution of a valid deed. If the deed executed is void from any cause existing in the form of the body of the deed, or of the acknowledgment, the treasurer has the right to execute a valid deed, provided he can do so in conformity with the actual facts of the sale: Lorain v. Smith, 37-67.

Where the treasurer has made a valid deed he has no authority to make a second one, and if a second one should be made it could have no effect upon the title conveyed by the first: Bulkeley v. Callanan, 32-461; Martin v. Cole, 33-141.

The authority to execute a second deed is conferred upon the treasurer in order to enable him to correct errors committed in the first. A second deed not executed to correct either mistake, misdescription, incorrect recital, or other matter in the first deed in conflict with the facts, but for the object of perverting the truth and falsifying the tax record, will be void: Gould v. Thompson, 45-450.

A person who claims title to real estate of which he is not in possession, under a void tax deed, may become the purchaser at a subsequent tax sale and procure a treasurer's deed, and thereunder claim title: Neal v. Frazier, 63-451.

Description: The lot or parcel of land in which the property is to be described in the deed is to be the same as that under which it was advertised and sold: Martin v. Cole, 33-141.

Parol evidence is admissible to apply the description contained in the certificate of purchase to its subject-matter: Judd v. Anderson, 51-345.

Defective description in assessment and tax books, and deed, cannot be cured by extraneous evidence: Roberts v. Deeds, 57-320.

Uncertainty: Where the certificate of sale and the tax deed describe land having no necessary identity, with that which has been taxed and is delinquent, they do not of themselves constitute sufficient evidence of a sale to uphold a tax deed, but rather negative it. Likewise, where the tax list shows that land is taxed by a description which is void for uncertainty, no title will pass under the sale or deed: Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Scott, 44-143.

Where the purchaser at the sale offered to pay the tax on a forty-acre tract for "fourteen acres," and the land sold was thus described in the notice and deed, held, that the deed was void for uncertainty in its description, and in the notice required by statute to be served before its execution: Poindexter v. Doolittle, 54-52.

A description of property as the northwest part of the N. E. $\frac{1}{2}$ of the N. E. $\frac{1}{4}$, etc., containing three acres, held insufficient in an assessment and sale and tax deed to support a tax title, and that such title would be void for such defective description, although the sale was made for delinquent taxes of the owner of the property, which were a lien thereon. Such an objection goes to the validity of the tax title irrespective of the validity of the taxes: Roberts v. Deeds, 57-320.

A tax sale under an assessment of a certain number of acres in a certain corner of a subdivision can apply only to that number of acres in the form of a square, and a deed of the tract in any other form executed under such a sale will be valid only so far as the land conveyed therein is embraced in such square: Immegart v. Gorgas, 41-439.

Abbreviations: Abbreviations such as are in general and common use in the description of land, and are not misleading, may be used in the deed: Jenkins v. McTigue, 22 Fed. Rep., 148.

Where there was no word or mark prefixed to the figures representing the value of the property upon the assessor's book; but it was not shown or claimed that the omission of the dollar mark in any way actually misled plaintiff, or prevented him from paying whatever sum was properly assessed against his property, held, that the figures occurring in the column headed "value of land" rendered the assessment sufficient: Ibid.

Specific performance: In an action in the nature of a proceeding to enforce specific performance of tax sale by the execution of a tax deed, held, that the amount bid for the property being a grossly inadequate price therefor, equitable relief would not be granted: Harper v. Sexton, 22-142.

Undivided interest: The treasurer has no authority to deed an undivided interest in property for taxes due upon the whole: Cragin v. Henry, 40-158.

Delay: Where property was sold for a city tax claimed to have been levied fourteen years prior, and it did not appear upon the book of delinquent taxes which the city had adopted as a standard, held, that the city must be considered as having abandoned such taxes, and that the tax title was void: Bradley v. Hintrager, 61-337.

Where a tax deed was not taken for eleven years after the party claiming under the sale was entitled thereto, if at all, held, that as against those dealing with the owner of the land it must be presumed that the right to the deed had been abandoned: Ockendon v. Barnes, 43-615.

1381. Form of. 896. Deeds executed by the treasurer shall be substantially in the following form:

Know all men by these presents, that whereas the following described real property, viz: (here follows the description) situated in the county of —, and state of Iowa, was subject to taxation for the year (or years) A. D. —, and whereas the taxes assessed upon said real property for the year (or years) aforesaid remained due and unpaid at the date of the sale hereinafter named; and whereas the treasurer of said county did, on the — day of —, A. D. 18—, by virtue of the authority in him vested by law, at (an adjournment of) the sale begun and publicly held on the first Monday of —, A. D. 18—, expose to public sale at the office of the county treasurer in the county aforesaid, in substantial conformity with all the requisitions of the statute in such case made and provided, the real property above described, for the payment of the taxes, interest, and costs then due and remaining unpaid on said property, and whereas, at the time and place aforesaid, A. B. of the county of — and state of —, having offered to pay the sum of — dollars and — cents, being the whole amount of taxes, interest, and costs then due and remaining unpaid on said property, for (here follows the description of the property sold) which was the least quantity bid for; and payment of said sum having been by him made to said treasurer, said property was stricken off to him at that price; and whereas, the said A. B. did, on the — day of —, A. D. 18—, duly assign the certificate of the sale of the property as aforesaid and all his right, title, and interest to said property to E. F., of the county of — and state of —; and whereas, by the affidavit of — filed in said treasurer's office on the — day of —, A. D. —, it appears that due notice has been given, more than ninety days before the execution of these presents, to — and — of the expiration of the time of redemption allowed by law; and whereas, three years have elapsed since the date of said sale, and said property has not been redeemed therefrom as provided for by law.

Now, therefore, I, C. D., treasurer of the county aforesaid, for and in consideration of said sum to the treasurer paid as aforesaid, and by virtue of the statute in such case made and provided, have granted, bargained, and sold, and by these presents do grant, bargain, and sell unto the said A. B. [or E. F.] his heirs and assigns, the real property last hereinbefore described to have and to hold unto him the said A. B. [or E. F.] his heirs and assigns forever: subject, however, to all the rights of redemption provided by law. In witness whereof I, C. D., treasurer as aforesaid, by virtue of the authority aforesaid, have hereunto subscribed my name on this — day of —, 18—. [R., § 783.]

STATE OF IOWA, }
— County, } ss.

I hereby certify that before me — — in and for said county, personally appeared the above named C. D., treasurer of said county, personally known to me to be the treasurer of said county at the date of the execution of the above conveyance, and to be the identical person whose name is affixed to and who executed the above conveyance as treasurer of said county, and acknowledged the execution of the same to be his voluntary act and deed as treasurer of said county, for the purposes therein expressed.

Given under my hand [and seal] this — day of —, A. D. 18—.

EFFECT OF DEED.

1382. Vests title; evidence. 897. The deed shall be signed by the treasurer in his official capacity, and acknowledged by him before some officer authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds; and, when substantially thus executed and recorded in the proper record of titles to real estate, shall vest in the purchaser all the right, title, interest, and estate of the former owner in and to the land conveyed, and also all the right, title, interest, and claim of the state and county thereto, and shall be presumptive evidence in all the courts of this state, in all controversies and suits in relation to the rights of the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, to the land thereby conveyed, of the following facts:

1. That the real property conveyed was subject to taxation for the year or years stated in the deed;
2. That the taxes were not paid at any time before the sale;
3. That the real property conveyed had not been redeemed from the sale at the date of the deed;
4. That the property had been listed and assessed;
5. That the taxes were levied according to law;
6. That the property was duly advertised for sale;
7. That the property was sold for taxes as stated in the deed.

And it shall be conclusive evidence of the following facts:

1. That the manner in which the listing, assessment, levy, notice, and sale were conducted was in all respects as the law directed;
2. That the grantee named in the deed was the purchaser;
3. That all the prerequisites of the law were complied with by all the officers who had, or whose duty it was to have had, any part or action in any transaction relating to or affecting the title conveyed, or purporting to be conveyed, by the deed, from the listing and valuation of the property up to the execution of the deed, both inclusive, and that all things whatsoever required by law to make a good and valid sale, and to vest the title in the purchaser were done, except in regard to the points named in this section, wherein the deed shall be presumptive evidence only.

And in all controversies and suits involving the title to real property claimed and held under and by virtue of a deed executed substantially as aforesaid by the treasurer, the person claiming title adverse to the title conveyed by such deed, shall be required to prove, in order to defeat the said title, either that the said real property was not subject to taxation for the year or years named in the deed, that the taxes had been paid before the sale, that the property had been redeemed from the sale according to the provisions of this chapter, and that such redemption was had or made for the use and benefit of persons having the right of redemption under the laws of this state, or, that there had been an entire omission to list or assess the property, or to levy the taxes, or to give notice of the sale, or to sell the property; but no person shall be permitted to question the title acquired by a treasurer's deed without first showing that he, or the person under whom he claims title, had title to the property at the time of the sale, or that the title was obtained from the United States or this state after the sale, and that all taxes due upon the property have been paid by such person, or the person under whom he claims title as aforesaid; provided, that in any case where a person had paid his taxes, and through mistake in the entry made in the treasurer's books or in the receipt, the land upon which the taxes were paid was afterwards sold, the treasurer's deed shall not convey the title; provided further, that in all cases where the owner of lands sold for taxes shall resist the validity of such tax title, such owner may prove fraud committed by the officer selling the same or in the purchaser to defeat the same, and if fraud is so established such sale and title shall be void. [R., § 784; C., '51, § 503.]

I. FORM.

Acknowledgment is essential to the validity of the tax deed, and any defect therein is not cured by a general act legalizing defective acknowledgments: Goodykoontz v. Olsen, 54-174.

Indexing: As to what is a sufficient indexing of the tax deed, see Peirce v. Weare, 41-378.

What law governs: The validity of acts affecting the assessment, levy and delinquency of taxes and tax sales is determined under the laws in force at the time the acts were done: Penn v. Clemans, 19-372.

II. WHAT VESTS IN PURCHASER.

Effect: The title conveyed by the tax sale is not derivative, but a new title in the nature of an independent grant by the sovereign authority, and the purchaser takes free from any incumbrances, claims or equities connected with the prior title: Crum v. Cotting, 22-411.

A tax title is a perfect title and extinguishes a patent title, and the fact that a person making a contract to convey has only a tax title will not constitute a breach of such contract: Kramer v. Riche, 70-535.

It is the deed, and not the sale, that vests the title in the purchaser: Lake v. Gray, 35-44.

Until the deed is executed the title remains in the original owner: Williams v. Heath, 22-519.

A tax deed issued to a person as holder of the certificate of sale who is already deceased conveys no title to him or his heirs: Butterfield v. Walsh, 36-534.

Rights of purchaser under: When plaintiff claiming title under a bond for a deed against which the statute of limitations had run was seeking to redeem from a tax deed made during his minority, held, that the tax deed conveyed to the defendant the right of interposing the statute of limitations against such title bond, as the holder of the legal title himself might have done in an action by plaintiff against him: Byington v. Stone, 51-317.

Innocent purchaser: A purchaser under a tax deed which is void because of payment of the taxes before the sale cannot claim protection as an innocent purchaser as against the owner of the property: Harrison v. Sauerwein, 70-291.

Property assessed: The deed cannot be effectual as a conveyance beyond the property actually assessed: Judd v. Anderson, 51-345.

Lien of prior taxes: The purchaser takes all the interest of the state and county in the property, and therefore takes it free from the liens of all taxes unpaid at the date of sale: Bowman v. Thompson, 36-505.

Such prior taxes cease to be a lien, and a subsequent sale therefor would be void: Preston v. Van Gorder, 31-250.

But where a party purchased land subsequently to a tax sale thereof, and then procured the assignment to himself of the tax certificate, held, that the land was not in his hands discharged from the lien of taxes due prior to the sale, and by mistake omitted in making such sale, but that the assignment of the certificate operated merely as a redemption from the sale: Bowman v. Eckstien, 46-583.

In a city acting under a special charter, which authorized a separate sale by the city for city taxes, held, that a sale for state and county taxes did not divest the property of the lien of such city taxes, and that the purchaser took subject thereto: Dennison v. Keokuk, 45-266.

Recovery of subsequent taxes paid under a void tax title: Subsequent taxes paid in good faith by the holder of a void tax title may be recovered of the owner: Claussen v. Rayburn, 14-136.

The tax purchaser may recover such taxes, whether paid for and on account of the holder of the patent title or his assignor or grantor: Guise v. Early, 72-283.

A tax purchaser may maintain an action after eviction against the real owner for taxes paid on the property in good faith, and if by such payment he has relieved the land from the lien of such taxes he should have a lien thereon for the amount paid. This is especially true where the owner asks and obtains affirmative relief by cancellation of the tax deed. Where a party asks equity he should be required to do equity: Orr v. Travacier, 21-68.

A tax purchaser whose title is held void may recover of the property owner the taxes paid by him in good faith subsequently to the acquisition of his title: Stewart v. Corbin, 38-571.

In such case the party who has paid the taxes may, in an action in which the invalidity of his deed is declared, have a decree against the owner for taxes paid with six per cent. interest thereon: Harrison v. Sauerwein, 70-291.

Where a party seeks in an equitable action to set aside a tax deed which is valid on its face he should be required to pay the amount of the taxes paid by the purchaser in pursuance of such sale: Gardner v. Early, 69-42.

Where a party failed to recover the property under his tax title because equity would not sustain it, held, that he still might recover the amount expended in the acquisition of the title and for taxes paid on the land: Hunt v. Rowland, 28-349.

A party who, in a pleading asking the setting aside of a tax title, offers to repay to the holder of such title the amount paid by him, with interest, etc., should be required to pay that amount upon a judgment in his favor setting aside the tax title: Corbin v. Woodbine, 33-297.

Where, until the answer was filed, the record failed to show that plaintiff had any knowledge of the tax title set up therein, held, that it was sufficient to make an offer to refund the taxes in a replication to such answer: White v. Smith, 68-313.

The purchaser cannot pay taxes for years previous to the sale which have not been included in the amount for which the property was sold, and thereby compel the owner, in redeeming, to pay such taxes: Sheppard v. Clark, 58-371.

Where a life estate was vested in the occupant of property with the provision that the owner of the fee should pay the taxes thereon, and the title of the owner of the fee was sold on foreclosure of a mortgage, held, that the purchaser at the foreclosure sale was under obligation to pay the taxes to the holder of the life estate who had paid them, and that upon failure of the purchaser to make such payment they might be recovered back from such purchaser: Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. King, 66-322.

Where there are conflicting claims to property and one party allows the taxes to become delinquent, the other cannot, after enforcing his claim against the property and buying it in at execution sale, recover the amount of taxes which he is compelled to pay to redeem the property from the former owner: Barr v. Patrick, 59-134.

Taxes paid by the purchaser after redemption is made by the owner cannot be recovered, and if he pays them upon the supposition that the redemption is illegal he does so at his peril: Byington v. Allen, 11-3; Byington v. Walsh, 11-27.

A purchaser of property exempt from taxation acquires no such interest by such purchase as will give him the right to a lien for taxes paid for a subsequent year, though the title has passed to a third person who cannot claim the exemption: Byington v. Wood, 12-479.

A purchaser at tax sale who has in good faith paid the subsequent taxes on the property may, after eviction by the owner, recover the amount so paid: Claussen v. Rayburn, 14-136.

The fact that in an action upon a tax title such title is held void is not an adjudication defeating the tax purchaser's right to recover the taxes paid: Stewart v. Corbin, 38-571.

Where defendant acquiring title by assignment of a bond for a deed agreed to pay certain taxes, but bought the property in at tax sale for such taxes, and afterward at suit of the wife of the assignor, who did not join in the assignment, it was held void as being a conveyance of the homestead, held, that defendant could only recover the amount of taxes paid and interest at six per cent., and not a higher interest or penalty: Stinson v. Richardson, 48-541.

Amount of recovery: In recovering for taxes subsequently paid the tax purchaser is entitled to only six per cent. interest: Orr v. Travacier, 21-68; Early v. Whittingham, 43-162; Thompson v. Savage, 47-522.

Where it was found in a proceeding to redeem from tax sales that the first sale was invalid while the other two were valid, it was decided that plaintiff should pay the amount of legal taxes upon the land which defendant had paid under the first sale and six per cent. thereon; and should also pay the statute penalty and interest upon the other sales, and also the subsequent taxes paid by defendant: Curl v. Watson, 25-35.

As the tax deed vests in the purchaser all the right, title and interest of the state and county, the tax purchaser may, upon his deed being declared void on account of fraud or other defect in the sale for taxes due upon the property, recover from the owner the full amount which the owner would have to pay the treasurer to satisfy taxes for which the sale was made, and taxes subsequently paid, if they had not been paid by the purchaser: Everett v. Beebe, 37-452; Light v. West, 42-138; Besore v. Dosh, 43-211; Sexton v. Henderson, 45-160; Miller v. Corbin, 46-150; Springer v. Bartle, 46-688; Crumb v. Davis, 54-25; Walker v. Beaver, 50-504.

But this rule has no application where the land was not subject to taxation for the year for the taxes for which it was sold: Sully v. Poorbaugh, 45-453.

Nor does the rule apply where the title is void for the reason that there was no assessment, levy or sale: Early v. Whittingham, 43-162.

In cases where sales were or could have been lawfully made for taxes, but were rendered void by reason of fraud or other causes, the holder of the tax deed may recover the tax, interest and penalty provided by statute in the payment of delinquent taxes. Even if the taxes for which the land was sold were not a lien on the land, the purchaser may recover the taxes actually paid subsequently to the sale, with six per cent. interest thereon, and no more. The purchaser paying taxes due after the execution of the tax deed may recover on the ground that the land owner ought to reimburse him for the money he expended in good faith for the benefit of the land owner. Where the deed, assessment and other proceedings are void, the purchaser claiming under them cannot recover for subsequent taxes paid by him, for the reason that the taxes were not a lien, and the owner was under no obligation to pay them: Barke v. Early, 72-273.

The sale and deed convey the interest of the state and county in the property, but not the tax itself, and a tax purchaser is not entitled to recover from the owner the tax paid where the sale and deed, owing to defective description, are void: Roberts v. Deeds, 57-320.

A tax title being held void for the reason that no taxes were levied for the year for which the land was sold, held, that a tax purchaser could not recover from the owner the amount of taxes paid at the sale, but could only recover taxes paid by him for years subsequent to the sale and within five years next preceding the commencement of an action to recover the same: Thompson v. Savage, 47-522.

Where the sale is void the purchaser is only subrogated to the rights of the county, and therefore his action against the owner to recover the taxes paid must be brought within five years after such taxes become delinquent: Ibid.; Brown v. Painter, 44-368; Seaton v. Peck, 48-250.

An action by the purchaser at a tax sale to recover for taxes paid by him is barred in five years; but held that where plaintiff, in an action to set aside tax deeds under which defendant claimed, offered to pay defendant the amount of all taxes paid by him which might be found legally due from plaintiff to defendant, the plaintiff could not set up the bar of the statute as to the claim for taxes thus paid: Barke v. Early, 72-273.

Payment of taxes made more than five years before bringing suit to recover them back, and not made for the protection of the title in behalf of the rightful owner, but for the purpose of depriving him of title, cannot be recovered back: Thode v. Spofford, 65-294.

The statutory provisions requiring the filing of a certificate of taxes by the purchaser do not apply to taxes paid by him as owner after he acquires a tax deed: Ibid.

Where a tax title is at the suit of the holder of the legal title declared void on the ground that the taxes for which the sale was made had in fact been paid, the holder of the legal title should be required to repay to the holder of the tax title all the taxes paid by him on the land with six per cent. interest thereon, and such repayment should not be limited to taxes paid within five years. The obligation to repay being merely an incidental equity is not subject to the bar of the statute: Harber v. Sexton, 66-211.

The rule in regard to recovery of taxes paid, in case the sale is irregular or the deed is void by reason of some inherent invalidity which limits the recovery to taxes paid within five years prior to the bringing of action, does not apply where the owner seeks to redeem from a tax sale which has not culminated in a deed by reason of the failure of the tax purchaser to give notice of the expiration of the period of redemption. In such case the amount paid at the sale with the taxes and interest as provided by law must be paid without regard to the length of time which may have expired after the sale: Long v. Smith, 67-22.

Purchaser not subject to: Where a tax sale was held void and the title declared to be in the original owner, and thereafter the tax purchaser commenced action for taxes paid by him subsequent to the purchase, held, that an innocent purchaser of the land from such original owner after the judgment would not be deemed to have notice of the claim for the recovery of taxes paid: Thompson v. Savage, 47-522.

The record showing the payment by the holder of the tax title will not constitute constructive notice to such purchaser so as to charge him therewith: Forey v. Bigelow, 56-831.

Recovery by claimant of property of taxes paid thereon from person afterwards adjudged owner: See notes to § 1347.

III. DEED AS EVIDENCE.

Presumption: The tax deed may be made presumptive evidence of the regularity and validity of all prior proceedings; and as to minor matters relating to the mode or manner of exercising the power of taxation, which may be dispensed with, it may be made conclusive, but there are some indispensable requisitions which must be observed, and as to these the deed cannot be made conclusive: Allen v. Armstrong, 16-508.

The corresponding section of the Revision (§ 784), which declared that the tax deed should be conclusive evidence of the regularity of all prior proceedings, held unconstitutional in so far as it attempted to make the deed conclusive as to the existence of the essential prerequisites of the taxing power, such as assessment, levy, sale, etc., as depriving a person of his property without due process of law; but it was held that as to non-essentials, or matters simply directory, the deed may be made conclusive. Also held, that it was competent for the legislature to make such deed prima facie evidence of its own validity and the regularity of prior proceedings: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356, 385.

Under the same statutory provision, held, that the deed was prima facie evidence of those things of which it was improperly declared to be conclusive: Hurley v. Woodruff, 30-260.

Whether the legislature can make a tax deed, which is false in fact, conclusive evidence of the matters therein recited, quere: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

The provisions of this section as to the effect of the deed as evidence apply in equity as well as at law: Clark v. Thompson, 37-536.

It is competent for the legislature to declare that the acts of de facto officers shall be valid: Allen v. Armstrong, 16-508.

The presumption is in favor of the validity of a tax deed: Grove v. Benedict, 69-346.

As evidence: One asserting title under a tax deed has but to introduce it in evidence and the law puts upon his adversary the burden of showing its invalidity. He will not be guilty of fraud in asserting title under it, only as he has actual knowledge that it was invalid, or introduces it in evidence with intent to accomplish some unlawful purpose: Brownell v. Storm Lake Bank, 63-754.

The tax deed is competent evidence of the assignment of the certificate of purchase to the grantee of the deed: Stahl v. Roost, 34-475.

Where by city charter under ordinance the collection of taxes is made presumptive evidence of the regularity of prior proceedings, a party claiming that a deed is void because of irregular assessment of a special tax must allege and prove the same: McNumara v. Estes, 22-246.

Where the special charter of a city under which property was sold for taxes provided that its collector's deed should have the same force and effect as a treasurer's deed, and also that a demand of the tax must be made before sale, held, that although the deed might be prima facie evidence of the regularity of prior proceedings it was not conclusive as to the fact of demand, and might be overthrown by evidence on that point: Lathrop v. Howley, 50-39.

Prima facie evidence: The deed is prima facie evidence of assessment. The fact that the assessment book does not show all the facts necessary to establish the assessment does not prove that such facts do not exist: Genther v. Fuller, 36-604.

The deed is prima facie evidence as to the fact of sale: Leavitt v. Watson, 37-93.

Also of the fact of assessment: Madson v. Seaton, 37-562.

A treasurer's deed is presumptive evidence of the fact that the property sold for taxes has been listed and assessed, and the introduction of the deed in the proper form casts upon the other party the burden of proving that in fact no legal assessment has been made: Jenkins v. McTigue, 22 Fed. Rep. 148.

The deed is presumptive evidence that the taxes for which the sale is made, if for prior years, have been properly brought forward, and if such objection is not made until the time within which the deed can be attacked has elapsed, the property owner cannot afterwards question the sale on that ground: Guthrie v. Hurker, 27 Fed. Rep., 586.

The deed is prima facie evidence as to the fact of assessment, listing and levy, but it is conclusive as to the manner: Robinson v. First Nat. Bank, 48-354.

Where the tax deed shows a sale for less than the whole amount due it will be presumed that such sale was made under the provisions of § 1361: Griffin v. Tuttle, 74-219.

Where the deed shows on its face that it was made at a sale begun on the first Monday of a month subsequent to October, it is prima facie evidence that some of the reasons mentioned in § 1371 existed for commencing the sale at such subsequent day: Lorain v. Smith, 37-67.

A party attacking the deed on the ground that the sale was not made at the proper time must at least show that the facts which would have authorized a sale at the date when the sale appears to have been made did not exist: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160; Love v. Welch, 34-192; Bullis v. Marsh, 56-744.

While the tax sale register is admissible in evidence, yet its failure to show the offering of the land on the first Monday of October, which is the regular day for tax sale, does not overcome the prima facie evidence of regularity arising from the deed itself: Bullis v. Marsh, 56-747.

The tax deed is at least prima facie evidence of the fact of service of notice of expiration of the period of redemption: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

Even though the evidence of notice by publication shows that such publication was not sufficient it will be presumed that personal notice was given which was sufficient in the absence of evidence to the contrary: Baker v. Crabb, 73-412.

A party claiming adversely to the deed must prove that the land was assessed in some name in order to create a necessity for proof of service of notice on such person: Fulmer v. Armstrong, 53-683; Chambers v. Hadcock, 64-556.

Where such notice and proof of service appear on their face to be regular, and a deed is issued in accordance therewith, any person asserting the invalidity of the deed upon the ground that the service was not made as the proof shows, or that the person served was not the right person, has the burden of overcoming the prima facie evidence furnished by the papers: Wilson v. Crafts, 56-460.

May be rebutted: Where it appears that an essential step in the proceeding has not been complied with, the prima facie effect of the deed is overcome: Rayburn v. Kuhl, 10-92.

A failure to recite a certain fact in an attempt to recite the performance of all the requisite steps toward the execution of a tax deed is evidence by implication that such fact did not exist, and repels the prima facie effect of the deed: Long v. Burnett, 13-28.

Evidence of a failure, after search, to find any record of a tax sale for the year in which the sale is claimed to have been made, throws upon the holder of the tax deed the burden of proving such essential step, and overcomes the prima facie evidence of the deed: Ibid.

Facts in a particular case held sufficient to overcome the presumption as to assessment arising from the deed: Easton v. Suvery, 44-654.

Where a record is required to be made of any fact essential to the validity of the tax, parol evidence of the existence of that fact cannot be substituted. So in regard to a levy, where the records being introduced were found not to contain any evidence of a levy, held, that the presumption of levy arising from the execution and recording of the deed was overcome, and the burden of proving a levy in fact was thrown upon the party claiming under the deed, which he could sustain only by showing that a record once existed which had been lost or destroyed: Moore v. Cooke, 40-290.

Where the evidence showed the entire absence of the records which would exist in case assessment of property, levy of tax, and sale for non-payment thereof, had been made, and it did not appear that such records had been lost or destroyed, held, that the prima facie evidence furnished by the deed was sufficiently overcome: Early v. Whittingham, 43-162.

When, upon the introduction of the assessment books, it appears that the description of the property is void for uncertainty, such evidence shows a want of assessment of the land described in the deed, and throws upon the party claiming under the deed the burden of proving that the property assessed was the same as that deeded: Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Scott, 44-143.

A levy of the tax being essential to the validity of the sale, the deed is only presumptive evidence of such levy, and as a valid levy cannot be established by parol evidence, if no record of a levy can be found in the proper office, the presumption that there was a levy arising from the deed is overcome: Prouty v. Tallman, 65-354; Williams v. Poor, 65-410.

But in a particular case, held, that a sheet of paper containing an order of the properly authorized board making a levy was a sufficient record without having been recorded in a book: Prouty v. Tallman, 65-354.

Conclusive evidence: A deed reciting the fact of a lawful sale of the property is conclusive evidence of such sale: Gould v. Thompson, 45-450.

The fact that the treasurer does not proceed to collect the taxes by distress and sale will not render invalid a deed made in pursuance of a subsequent sale of land therefor; as to that matter the deed is conclusive: Stewart v. Corbin, 25-144.

Under the provisions of the Revision which authorized a warrant of sale being issued to the county treasurer under which the sale was to be made, held, that as such warrant was not an essential part of the taxing power and might have been dispensed with by the legislature, the tax deed might properly be held conclusive evidence of the regularity of such warrant: Hurley v. Powell, 31-64.

The tax deed is conclusive as to the notice or advertisement: Allen v. Armstrong, 16-508; Madson v. Serton, 37-562; Scotfield v. McDowell, 47-129; Bullis v. Marsh, 56-747.

That a certain tract of land, the taxes upon which are delinquent, is not contained in the advertisement will not render a sale thereof void. The owner being presumed to know that the taxes on his land were delinquent, and that such land was subject to be sold at the sale as advertised, cannot complain of want of notice: Shawler v. Johnson, 52-472.

The tax deed is conclusive as to the copy of the advertisement having been filed as required by statute: Hurley v. Powell, 31-64.

It is also conclusive as to the manner of assessment: Easton v. Perry, 37-681.

And as to the manner of sale: Ware v. Little, 35-234; Smith v. Easton, 37-584.

Where by the deed it appears that the sale was of an entire tract which might have been sold en masse if assessed to unknown owners, the deed will be conclusive evidence that the assessment was in such manner as that the proceedings were valid: Easton v. Perry, 37-381.

The deed is conclusive as to the regularity of prior proceedings: Leavitt v. Watson, 37-93; Martin v. Cole, 38-141.

And as to the regularity of the assessment, listing and levy: Robinson v. First Nat. Bank, 48-354.

It is conclusive that the sale was made at the proper time: Clark v. Thompson, 37-5'6; Phelps v. Meade, 41-470; Shawler v. Johnson, 52-472; Slocum v. Slocum, 70-259.

A mistake in the recital as to the date of sale will not invalidate the deed: Hurlburt v. Dyer, 36-474.

The assessment, levy and sale being admitted in fact, the deed is conclusive as to the manner thereof: Bulkley v. Callanan, 32-461.

Where a deed shows that a sale was made in a manner which, under some circumstances, would be proper, those circumstances are conclusively presumed to have existed and the deed is valid: Ware v. Little, 35-234.

If there has been a sale in fact the deed is conclusive as to the manner, for instance, as to the method of offering the lands for sale. So held where it appeared that lands were struck off to parties who had furnished written bids: Leavitt v. Watson, 37-93.

If there was a bona fide sale in substance and in fact, the tax deed is conclusive evidence that it was done at the proper time and manner, these being merely directory and not fundamental: Phelps v. Meade, 41-470; Callanan v. Hurley, 93 U. S., 387.

Where the assessor left off from the head of his book the words "owners unknown," but entered the lands without connecting them with any name, fixed the value of the land for the purpose of taxation, and entered it with the proper valuation upon the tax list, and entered the amount of the various taxes properly therein, held, that such entry related to the manner in which property of unknown owners was to be listed and assessed, and that, consequently, the treasurer's deed was conclusive: Jenkins v. McTigue, 22 Fed. Rep., 148.

The statutory provisions making a tax deed conclusive evidence as to certain facts is applicable in equity as well as at law, and a court of equity cannot set the deed aside for matters as to which it is properly made conclusive evidence: Clark v. Thompson, 37-536.

Not conclusive: The deed cannot be made conclusive as to the fact of assessment: Powers v. Fuller, 30-476.

Although the tax deed is conclusive as to the regularity of the assessment, yet where land was assessed in the name of the owner and also to owner unknown, held, that the latter assessment was entirely void, and a deed issued in pursuance of a sale thereunder was not valid: Nichols v. McGlathery, 43-389.

Recitals in the deed are not conclusive as to whether the property was in fact sold: McNamara v. Estes, 22-246.

A tax deed is not conclusive evidence that a sale, private in its nature, is a public sale such as is required. It is always competent to show fraud committed by the officers, or any arrangement between the officers and the purchaser which substitutes a private for a public sale such as the law contemplates. Such a purchase is a fraud upon the owner of the land and renders the sale invalid: Butler v. Delano, 42-350.

The deed is conclusive as to manner of sale to only a limited extent. It is always competent to defeat it by showing fraud of the officer or purchaser at such sale: Ibid.; Thompson v. Ware, 43-455; Chandler v. Keeler, 46-596.

The deed cannot be regarded as conclusive evidence of a sale which the treasurer had no power to make: Gardner v. Early, 69-42.

It is not conclusive evidence of the regularity of proceedings which are shown upon its very face to have been irregular, as, for instance, a sale in gross: Boardman v. Bourne, 20-134.

It is not conclusive evidence of the giving of notice of expiration of the time of redemption. The notice of which the statute makes a deed conclusive evidence is notice of sale: Reed v. Thompson, 56-455.

Sale in gross: A tax deed showing upon its face a sale of distinct tracts in gross is void: Boardman v. Bourne, 20-134; Byam v. Cook, 21-392; Ferguson v. Heath, 21-438; Harper v. Sexton, 22-442; Ackley v. Sexton, 24-320; Hurlburt v. Dyer, 36-474; Gray v. Coan, 30-536.

Where several distinct and separate tracts of land are sold en masse, the sale and deed thereunder are void: Rankin v. Miller, 43-11.

In a particular case, held, that the recitals of the deed showed a sale in a quarter-section tract, although it also recited the amount of tax due on each forty-acre subdivision thereof: Clark v. Thompson, 37-536.

But the deed is not conclusive that the sale was made in gross, and the sale may be valid although the deed is void: Ware v. Thompson, 29-65.

That a tax certificate shows the sale to have been made in parcels does not estop the treasurer who has executed the deed from denying its validity: Byum v. Cook, 21-392.

A sale in gross of tracts larger than forties if assessed to a known owner is not void, and unless it appears from the deed that the owner was unknown that fact will not be presumed: Smith v. Easton, 37-584; Bulkley v. Callanan, 32-461.

Where a deed shows a sale in parcels it is conclusive, and proof that the sale was actually in gross will not be received: Rima v. Cowan, 31-125; Sibley v. Bullis, 40-429; Clark v. Thompson, 37-536; Chandler v. Keiler, 44-371.

The legislature having authorized sales in tracts larger than the smallest government subdivision in certain cases a tax deed is conclusive evidence as to the regularity of the sale in that respect: Martin v. Cole, 38-141.

No objection to the validity of the tax title can, after the expiration of five years from the time of sale, be made on the ground that the deed shows upon its face that several tracts of land were sold for a gross sum: Monk v. Corbin, 58-503.

As to sales en masse see notes to § 1357.

IV. WHAT MUST BE SHOWN TO DEFEAT.

Party must show title: The provision of this section that no person shall question the title acquired under a tax deed without first showing that he or the person under whom he claims had title to the property at the time of the sale, etc., is intended to prevent a stranger from questioning the tax title, but the holder of a prior tax title is not thereby prohibited from questioning the title of a subsequent tax purchaser: Adams v. Burdick, 68-666.

It cannot be presumed that by this provision the legislature intended to deprive any person of a remedy for actual fraud existing independently of the statute. While the section gives a remedy only to the owner of the land, it cannot be held to deny a similar remedy to others. If fraud has been committed, and by it some one has been injured, a remedy is provided by the general principles of equity jurisprudence: Singer Mfg. Co. v. Yerger, 2 McCrary, 583.

Where defendant claims under a treasurer's deed, upon its face sufficient to convey title, the court cannot consider any evidence of the invalidity of the deed, without finding that plaintiff was holder of the patent title: Foster v. Ellsworth, 71-262.

A legal title, though not of record, is sufficient to entitle the holder to defend against a tax title: Chandler v. Keiler, 49-526.

No person can question the title acquired by tax deed without first showing that he or the person under whom he claims had title to the property at the time of sale. The title required to be shown is such a one that a party claiming thereunder, if plaintiff, could recover on the strength thereof: Lockridge v. Daggett, 54-332.

One who would question the validity of a tax title acquired under a treasurer's deed must show that he has a title or interest in the lands in dispute: Robinson v. Bailey, 26 Fed. Rep., 219.

Where a person attacking a tax sale fails to establish a patent title in himself, he cannot have relief against such tax title: Varnum v. Shuler, 69-92.

Where plaintiff failed to introduce any evidence tending in any manner to prove that he had title to the land at the time of sale, held, that he could not be allowed to prove fraud committed at the sale for the purpose of defeating a tax title: Pitt's Sons Mfg. Co. v. Beed, 69-546.

Where the person calling in question the title acquired by a tax deed testifies that he is the owner of the property claimed by him, and this testimony is admitted without objection, it is prima facie sufficient to show title to the property authorizing him to question the validity of the deed: Hintrager v. Kiene, 62-605.

A patent issued by the state, accompanied by a copy of the patent issued by the United States to the state, duly authenticated by the commissioners of the general land office, held sufficient evidence of title to warrant the person claiming such title in questioning the validity of a tax title: Callanan v. Wayne County, 73-709.

Proof of title in the party seeking to redeem held sufficient: Bowers v. Hallock, 71-218.

The word owner, used in an agreed statement of facts, held to mean a person having title as required by this section: Frank v. Arnold, 73-370.

Payment of tax must be shown: The provisions of this section, that a person questioning the title acquired by the treasurer's tax deed shall first show that all taxes due upon the property have been paid by him or the person under whom he claims title, is applicable as to any taxes remaining unpaid and due to the state or county, but it does not require that the property owner seeking to question a tax title must first pay to the holder of the title all the taxes which the latter has paid, with interest and penalties. It is sufficient in such case that the person seeking to set aside the tax title shall aver his readiness and willingness to pay any amount of taxes which shall be found to have been paid by the holder of the tax title: Taylor v. Ormsby, 66-109; Adams v. Burdick, 68-666.

A defendant who has a right to demand from plaintiff the payment of taxes which it is claimed are unpaid must raise the objection that it does not appear that all the taxes due upon the property have been paid, by demurrer, or such objection will be deemed waived: Adams v. Burdick, 68-666.

It is a sufficient compliance with this provision requiring that a person attacking a tax title shall show that taxes due on the land have been paid, that the party acting for the plaintiff made a tender of the amount and an offer to pay taxes due on the land in controversy to the county auditor after the treasurer's deed was executed, and in his petition offers to pay whatever amount is found due: Heaton v. Knight, 63-686.

Tender of the sum due is equivalent to payment, and if for any reason the amount cannot be ascertained, plaintiff may ask the court to ascertain and determine it, averring his readiness to pay the amount so ascertained. But it is not sufficient to aver that complainant is unable to ascertain the amount due without stating facts showing such inability and without offering any proof upon the subject: Lawler v. Brett, 20 Fed. Rep., 219.

The defense of fraud contemplated in the last proviso of this section may be shown to defeat the title whenever it is resisted by the owner, and it is not necessary for the owner to show in such case that the taxes have been paid: Corbin v. Beebee, 36-336; Miller v. Corbin, 46-150.

Such proviso is not applicable where the party claiming adversely to the tax purchaser seeks to defeat the tax deed on a ground which will render it invalid. It does not apply where the tax title is defeated by an estoppel which would have been equally effective as against any other title: Bullis v. Noble, 36-618.

Under the corresponding provisions of the Revision, held, that a land owner might set up the fact that there was no assessment in fact without showing payment of the taxes: Immegart v. Gorgas, 41-439.

Where a tax title is asserted under a deed which is void, the owner is not required to show that the sum necessary to redeem the land was tendered: Adams v. Snow, 65-435.

The purpose of the provision that no person shall question the title acquired by a treasurer's deed without showing that all taxes upon the property have been paid by him or the person under whom he claims is to enforce the payment of taxes and stimulate land owners to discharge the duty imposed on all citizens to pay taxes levied upon their lands. It is not sufficient in the petition attacking a tax title to offer to pay taxes if plaintiff is found to be entitled to redeem. This requirement applies to all action in which it is sought to redeem from a tax sale on the ground that the tax deed was issued without notice of the expiration of the time for redemption: Maxwell v. Palmer, 73-595.

Prior payment of taxes: Proof of payment of taxes before the sale will overcome the deed and defeat the purchaser's title: Gaylord v. Scarff, 6-179.

In such a case the deed is void: Patton v. Luther, 47-236.

If it be shown that the land was in fact redeemed the deed will be void, notwithstanding a failure of the officer to make proper entry of redemption: Fenton v. Way, 40-196.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence showed that the taxes for which the sale was made had been paid, and the deed was therefore held void: Harber v. Sexton, 66-211.

Further to the effect that the deed is void when the taxes have in fact been paid, see notes to § 1353.

Fraud of officer: As to what constitutes fraud of officers and the effect thereof upon the sale, see § 1370 and notes.

As to what constitutes a public sale, see notes to § 1353.

Fraud of purchaser: A purchaser, either in person or by agent, at a sale where the bidders form themselves into a ring and take turns in bidding, is presumed to be a party to such unlawful proceeding, whether it is affirmatively shown that he entered into any agreement sanctioning it or not, and his title will be void: Kerwer v. Allen, 31-578.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held, that there had been such a combination at the sale as to render it void: Easton v. Mawkinney, 37-601.

A tacit understanding among bidders that they will not bid against each other will invalidate a sale: Johns v. Thomas, 47-441; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Yarger, 2 McCrary, 584; Frank v. Arnold, 73-370.

The fact that at the tax sale one person bids in property for two others, indicating the person for whom he bids, in each instance, does not amount to a combination constituting fraud in the absence of any fraudulent agreement between the purchasers for whom the bids are made, nor does the fact that at such sale two different agents made purchases for the same person constitute fraud: Pearson v. Robinson, 44-413.

The fact that the principal and his agent are both present at the tax sale bidding in the property will not render the purchase by the agent for the principal invalid: Jury v. Day, 54-573.

A tax title will not be affected by the fact that the agent who bought in the property for the principal himself stood in such relation to the property that he could not have purchased it: Ibid.

The fact that all the tracts sold at a tax sale were bought in for the full amount of the tract, held not to prove combination among the bidders: Holsey v. Gordon, 47-693.

It appearing that there were three bidders at a tax sale, and that they did not bid against each other, and this being the only evidence of a fraudulent combination, held, that it was not sufficient and that fraud could not be presumed: Beeson v. Johns, 59-166.

Facts in a particular case held not sufficient to show fraud in procuring a tax title so as to render it inferior to a prior mortgage: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Wright, 51-606.

Testimony of a witness in an action to defeat a tax sale, that the purchaser by his conduct prevented competition in reference to many pieces of land bid for by him, etc., held to be immaterial and properly excluded, there being no offer to connect it with the piece in controversy: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160.

Effect of fraud: Where the sale is void for fraud, under the provisions of statute, the owner may set up and show such fraud to defeat the tax title in any action in which the holder thereof relies upon such title: Corbin v. Beebee, 36-336.

A ring sale, being voidable but not void, cannot be questioned after the lapse of the five-year period of limitation: Bullis v. Marsh, 56-747.

Innocent purchaser not affected with fraud: A tax title which is void for fraud, as provided by statute, will nevertheless be held good in the hands of a purchaser for value without notice of such fraud, the word "void" being construed as voidable: Van Shaack v. Robbins, 36-201; Sibley v. Bullis, 40-429; Ellis v. Peck, 45-112; Huston v. Markley, 49-162.

A purchaser in good faith from the tax purchaser, without notice of irregularities, will not be affected by the fact that the sale was in gross, or not publicly made: Martin v. Ragsdale, 49-589.

Where assessment has been made and other essential jurisdictional steps have been taken, the sale cannot be regarded as absolutely void although fraudulent, and the innocent purchaser is therefore protected; but where there is a fatal defect, as, for instance, a want of levy, the sale is absolutely void, and a good faith purchaser for value acquires no title. The defects of such a tax title appear of record, and the purchaser acquires no equity as against the land owner: Ellis v. Peck, 45-112.

Where the treasurer, in pursuance of a proposition made by a party before the sale opened, to take all lands not sold to others, made out certificates to such party after the sale was completed, there being no bids, such party 1383. Saving clause. 898. The provisions of this title shall not affect sales heretofore made, or tax deeds given in pursuance of sales made before the taking effect of this code.

Therefore, held, that notice as required in § 1379 was not necessary, although the deed was not executed until after the taking effect of the Code: Robinson v. First Nat. Bank, 48-354.

of the holder thereof cannot recover from the county taxes paid by him upon the property subsequently to the acquisition of such title: Scott v. Chickasaw County, 53-47.

The owner by voluntarily redeeming from such a sale does not become subrogated to the rights of the purchaser against the county: Morris v. Sioux County, 42-416, 418.

An action by the purchaser to recover from the county the taxes, interest and costs for which the sale is made in case the sale is void because no taxes were due by reason of mistake in the description, is not barred until five years from the discovery of the mistake: Storm Lake Bank v. Buena Vista County, 66-128.

SALES WRONGFULLY MADE.

1384. Purchaser indemnified. 899. When, by mistake or wrongful act of the treasurer, land has been sold on which no tax was due at the time, or whenever land is sold in consequence of error in describing such land in the tax receipt, the county is to hold the purchaser harmless by paying him the amount of principal and interest and costs to which he would have been entitled had the land been rightfully sold, and the treasurer and his bondsmen will be liable to the county to the amount of his official bond; or the purchaser, or his assignee, may recover directly of the treasurer, in an action brought to recover the same in any court having jurisdiction of the amount, and judgment shall be against him and his bondsmen; but the treasurer or his bondsmen shall be liable only for his own or his deputies' acts. [R., § 785; C., '51, § 509.]

This authorizes the purchaser to recover from the county in such cases the amount paid by him with interest, but not the penalties which would have accrued subsequently to the time of sale if the tax had been legal and the sale had not been made: Corbin v. Davenport, 9-239; Coulter v. Mahaska County, 17-92.

The purchaser at tax sale may thus recover from the county the portion of taxes included in the amount for which the sale is made which could not be rightfully included therein by reason of not having been brought forward by the treasurer: Parker v. Cochran, 64-757.

Where a tax title is void, the holder thereof cannot recover from the county taxes paid by

[Sec. 900 was repealed by 16 G. A., ch. 145, enacting a substitute, which is repealed by 17 G. A., ch. 101, the following being enacted in its stead.]

1385. Sale of school lands. 17 G. A., ch. 101, § 1. Whenever any school or university land bought on credit, is sold for taxes, the purchaser at such tax sale shall only acquire the interest of the original purchase in such lands, and no sale of any such lands for taxes, shall prejudice the rights of the state or the university therein, or preclude the recovery of the purchase money, or the interest due thereon, and in all cases, where real estate is mortgaged or otherwise incumbered to the school or university fund, the interest of the person who holds the fee alone, shall be sold for taxes, and in no case shall the lien or interest of the state be affected by any sale of such incumbered real estate, made for taxes. [R., §§ 810, 811.]

1386. Other public lands. 17 G. A., ch. 101, § 2. The foregoing provisions shall be extended to, and shall include all lands exempted from taxation by the provisions of this title, including lands of the United States and of this state, or of any county, township, city, incorporated town or school district, including agricultural college lands, swamp lands, burial grounds, fair grounds, public squares, public groves, or public ornamental grounds, and to any legal or equitable estate therein held, possessed or claimed for any public purpose, and no assessment or taxation of such lands, nor the payment of any such taxes, by any person, or the sale and conveyance for taxes of any such lands, shall in any manner affect the right or title of the public therein, or prejudice the public thereto, nor shall any such payment or sale, confer upon the purchaser, or person who pays such taxes, any right or interest in such land, adverse or prejudicial to the public right, title or ownership thereto; provided, that this section shall not in any manner affect or prejudice the rights of any person or party to any action now pending, which was commenced prior to the fourth day of July, 1876.

As against a mortgage to the school or university fund, only the interest of the person holding the fee-title can be sold for taxes: Crum v. Cotting, 22-411.

Such purchaser takes subject to the mortgage: Jasper County v. Rogers, 17-254.

And acquires only the right to redeem from such mortgage: State v. Shaw, 28-67, 76.

The state purchasing at foreclosure sale under such mortgage takes free from the lien of delinquent taxes, and a conveyance from it passes title to the purchaser discharged from such liens: Helphrey v. Ross, 19-40; Miller v. Gregg, 26-75.

Any purchaser at a foreclosure sale under such mortgage, equally with the state, takes free from the lien of delinquent taxes: Lovelace v. Berryhill, 36-379.

A purchaser at tax sale of premises covered by a school-fund mortgage has a lien thereon junior to that of the mortgage, and in an action to foreclose the school-fund mortgage must be made a party or his right of redemption will not be extinguished: Ayres v. Adair County, 61-728.

Where real estate is mortgaged to the school fund, the interest of the person who holds the fee shall alone be sold for the taxes, and the lien or interest of the school fund is not affected by such sale: Winnebago County v. Brones, 68-682.

A mortgage designed to be a security to the university fund is within the provisions of the statute relating to the sales of land in such cases, whether made directly to the institution or to its proper officer: Lovelace v. Berryhill, 36-379.

Where the surety of a note given for the purchase of school lands, who has a mortgage thereon for security, buys in the land at foreclosure sale under such mortgage, he acquires a title free from claims of a purchaser at the tax sale: La Rue v. King, 74-288.

1387. Land not subject to taxation. 901. Whenever it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the county treasurer, either before the execution of a deed for real property sold for taxes, or if the deed be returned by the purchaser, that any tract or lot was sold which was not subject to taxation, or upon which the taxes had been paid previous to the sale, he shall make an entry opposite such tract or lot on the record of sales, that the same was erroneously sold, and such entry shall be evidence of the fact therein stated. And in such cases the purchase money shall be refunded to the purchaser as provided by this chapter. [R., § 789.]

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

1388. Period. 902. No action for the recovery of real property sold for the non-payment of taxes shall lie, unless the same be brought within five years after the treasurer's deed is executed and recorded as above provided; provided, that where the owner of such real property sold as aforesaid, shall, at the time of such sale be a minor or insane, or convict in the penitentiary, five years after such disability shall be removed shall be allowed such person, his heirs, or legal representatives to bring their action. [R., § 790.]

What statute applicable: A tax deed having been executed while the Revision was in force, held, that the provisions of the Revision and not of the Code of '73 should determine when the period of limitation against the tax title commenced to run: Bailey v. Howard, 65-290.

Constitutionality: This section is not unconstitutional: Barrett v. Love, 48-103.

In what cases applicable: The provision as to limitation of actions with reference to tax titles applies to a sale which is simply voidable but not void, and such sale cannot be questioned after the lapse of five years: Bullis v. Marsh, 56-747.

After the lapse of five years no objection to the validity of the tax title can be made on the ground that the deed shows upon its face that several tracts of land were sold for a gross sum: Ibid.; Monk v. Corbin, 58-503.

If the failure of the treasurer to make proper entry of the years for which taxes are delinquent is not taken advantage of, and a deed issues, then the statute of limitations begins to run in favor of such deed, and after five years it cannot be questioned on account of such defect: Guthrie v. Harker, 27 Fed. Rep., 586.

The statutory provision above referred to applies only to cases where real property has been "sold for the non-payment of taxes," and therefore the limitation does not run where there has been actually no sale whatever: Case v. Albee, 28-277.

Nor is the provision applicable where the taxes for which the sale was made had in fact been paid: Patton v. Luther, 47-236.

Nor where the tax title is void by reason of there having been no assessment, levy or sale: Early v. Whittingham, 43-162; Nichols v. McGlathery, 42-189.

But the fact that the deed shows on its face irregularities in the manner of assessment, levy or sale will not prevent the limitation from running against it: Thomas v. Stickle, 32-71; Douglass v. Tullock, 34-262; Peirce v. Weare, 41-378; Bullis v. Marsh, 56-747.

The limitation applies to an action by the holder of the deed as well as to one brought by the original owner of the land: Brown v. Painter, 38-456; Laverty v. Sexton, 41-435; Barrett v. Love, 48-103.

It is not intended by this section to secure to the owner five years within which to attack the tax title, and the holder of the tax deed may, within that time, institute proceedings to quiet his title against such owner: Stevenson v. Bonesteel, 30-286.

An action by a tax purchaser against the owner to recover taxes paid by the former upon his tax title is barred in five years from such payment: Brown v. Painter, 44-368; Hamilton v. Dubuque, 50-213.

The fact that the deed was executed and recorded more than five years before the commencement of the action does not constitute a valid objection to the introduction of the deed in evidence. Whether the party gains possession under such deed depends upon whether or not the owner of the patent title was in possession at the expiration of five years from the execution of the deed: Monk v. Corbin, 58-503.

Where the rights of the tax purchaser are barred he cannot assert any claim thereunder to have his tax title established as paramount to any other title, nor can he be permitted to redeem from a foreclosure sale: La Rue v. King, 74-288.

Where there is want of power to make a sale it is void and the limitation of this section does not apply, but where the sale is simply voidable it cannot be questioned after five years from the recording of the deed. A sale for taxes of past years not properly carried forward on the tax books is of the latter class: Griffin v. Bruce, 73-126.

Where the tax deed is improperly executed by reason of the proof of service of notice not being such as is required by statute by reason of a mere defect in such proof, the service of notice having been actually made and a deed issued in pursuance of such notice, the holder of the tax title is protected after the expiration of five years from the execution of such deed: Trulock v. Bentley, 67-602; Rice v. Haddock, 70-318; Bolin v. Francis, 72-619.

But where there has been no notice the deed is void and the limitation does not validate it: Wilson v. Russell, 73-395; Slyfield v. Healy, 32 Fed. Rep., 2.

Where action to recover property claimed by a tax purchaser under an invalid sale was brought before the expiration of the period of redemption, held, that the filing of an amendment in such action after the period of limitation had elapsed for the purpose of alleging tender of taxes paid by defendant would not render the action subject to the bar of the statute: Barke v. Early, 72-273.

In mandamus: The right of action by mandamus to compel the execution of a deed is barred in three years, and such period commences to run from the time when the holder of the certificate of purchase might, by proper steps on his part, become entitled to the execution of the deed. Therefore, held, that where by ordinance of a city a deed for property sold for municipal taxes might have been executed at a certain time by the giving of ninety days' notice, the failure to give such notice would not prevent the statutory period from commencing to run at the time when, by proper notice, the deed might have been procured: Hinrager v. Traut, 69-746.

When period commences to run: Under the Revision, which limited the action to five years from "the date of the sale," held, that the limitation did not commence to run until the sale was complete, that is, until the delivery and recording of the tax deed: Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160; Henderson v. Oliver, 28-20; McCready v. Sexton, 29-356, 373.

Under that provision the action of the purchaser for the recovery of the land was barred after five years from the time when the right of the purchaser to a deed became perfect: Thornton v. Jones, 47-397.

Also held, under that provision, that the purchaser could not, by his own act in failing to take a deed when he became entitled thereto, prevent the limitation commencing to run against him: Hintrager v. Hennessy, 46-600.

Under the provisions of the Code of '51 as to the limitation of actions to foreclose a tax deed, held, that the right of action accrued six months after the purchaser became entitled to his deed under the sale: Atkins v. Paige, 50-668.

The change in the language of this section from that of the corresponding section of the Revision in regard to the limitation of action in such cases was simply the adoption of the judicial construction put upon the law as it was contained in the Revision: Griffith's Ex'r v. Carter, 64-193.

Where it does not appear that the deed has been recorded the statute does not begin to run. The burden of showing the recording of the deed so that the statute has begun to run devolves upon the party relying upon the statutory bar: Scroggs v. Garver, 69-680.

The statute of limitations begins to run against the tax purchaser from the time he might have been entitled to a deed if he had pursued the course prescribed by statute: La Rue v. King, 74-288.

Although the limitation as against the holder of a tax deed commences to run from the time he becomes entitled to his deed, the same rule does not apply as against the owner, and he may assert his right to the land by taking possession within five years from the recording of the deed: Griffith's Ex'r v. Carter, 64-193; Cassady v. Sapp, 64-203.

Until some one is in actual possession of the land the purchaser at a tax sale is not required to bring an action to prove his right of possession. If the owner of the patent title takes possession within five years after the tax deed is executed and recorded, then if the holder of the tax title fails to bring action within five years from such time, his right of action is barred: Adams v. Griffin, 66-125.

Where the tax purchaser took his deed in 1876, but such deed was improperly issued for the reason that due proof of service of notice of expiration of the time of redemption had not been filed, and afterward, in 1883, such proof was filed, and in 1884 a deed was issued, and a few days thereafter the holder of the patent title took possession of the property which had before that time been unoccupied, held, that an action by the holder of the tax title to quiet his title being brought within five years from the filing of proper proofs, and the issuance of the second deed, was not barred: Ibid.

Where action was commenced by the holder of a tax title within five years after his deed was recorded, but more than five years after he was entitled to receive his deed, and after it was actually executed, and it appeared that defendant went into possession within five years after plaintiff was entitled to take it, held, that the action was not barred. The rule established is, that if the validity of a tax title is disputed within five years from the date when the treasurer's deed might have been taken, the one claiming thereunder must commence his action for the recovery of the land within that period. But this rule can have no application to a case where the validity of the title is disputed for the first time after the expiration of that period: Francis v. Griffin, 72-23.

The limitation commences to run at the execution and recording of the tax deed, irrespective of the question of possession, and if at that time the property is unoccupied, and during the five years the owner of the fee takes actual possession and holds it until the expiration of the period of limitation, the right of the holder of the tax title to recover under his deed is completely barred: Barrett v. Love, 48-103; Barrett v. Holmes, 102 U. S., 651.

But if the land remains unoccupied until the expiration of the period of limitation, the title of the holder of the tax deed becomes complete, and an action by him against the original owner taking possession after that time is not barred under the statute: Moingona Coal Co. v. Blair, 51-447; Lewis v. Soule, 52-11; Bullis v. Marsh, 56-747; Goslee v. Tearney, 52-455.

The holder of a tax deed to unoccupied land is presumed to have constructive possession thereof: Rice v. Haddock, 70-318.

And if the owner of the patent title does not, either by taking actual possession or by bringing action, question the validity of the tax deed within the period of limitation, the bar of the statute becomes complete in favor of the holder of the tax deed, and possession taken by the former owner after the period of limitation has expired will be ineffectual: Moingona Coal Co. v. Blair, 51-447; Lewis v. Soule, 52-11; Goslee v. Tearney, 52-455; Zent v. Picken, 54-535; Maxwell v. Hunter, 65-121.

Possession of land necessary to bar an action under a tax title is not required to be of the adverse, hostile and exclusive character required under the general statute of limitations. Its validity depends not so much on the extent and character of the improvements of the land as on the possession which would enable the holder of the tax title to commence his action for the land: Griffith's Ex'r v. Carter, 64-193.

If the tax deed is absolutely void it works no change in the constructive possession which is considered to be in the holder of the patent title, and after five years have elapsed without the taking of possession, such void deed is barred by the statute of limitations and no rights can be asserted thereunder: Fallon v. Luther, 47-236.

Where the original owner has been continuously in possession of property by reason of the exercise of such ownership thereover as the nature of the property admits of, no acts of control on the part of the tax purchaser, such as taking wood therefrom and the like, will constitute adverse possession in him: Brett v. Farr, 66-684.

In such cases the fact that by diligence or otherwise the tax purchaser has succeeded in paying the taxes on the property subsequently to the purchase before the owner has been able to do so will not constitute evidence of possession so as to support a plea of limitation under the statute: Ibid.

The holder of a tax deed has no occasion to take any action for the establishment of his right in the property until such right is disputed: Francis v. Griffin, 72-23.

As the right to redeem is not cut off until the service of notice required by § 1379, the period of limitation provided by this section does not commence to run, although the deed has been issued without the requirement as to notice being complied with: Styfield v. Barnum, 71-245.

Quieting title: After the limitation has run against the tax title the original owner, remaining in possession, may maintain an action against the holder of such title to remove the cloud of the tax deed and quiet the title. Such action is not barred by the limitation provided in the statute: Peck v. Seaton, 41-566; Larerty v. Sexton, 41-435; Wallace v. Seaton, 44-257; Patton v. Luther, 47-236; Tabler v. Callanan, 49-362.

Where a party in possession under tax deed asks to have his title quieted against a party claiming adversely the latter cannot rely upon the limitation to bar the action: Wright v. Lacy, 52-248.

Where plaintiff, in possession under a tax deed more than five years old, brought action to quiet title against a defendant claiming under the patent title, held, that defendant in such action was barred by the statute of limitation from attacking the deed as fully as if it were attacking such deed in a direct action: Shawler v. Johnson, 52-472.

An action to quiet title as against a person holding under a tax deed on the ground that such deed is void, the holder of the title being in possession, cannot be maintained after the five years have expired: Jeffrey v. Brokaw, 35-505.

Where plaintiff, claiming under a tax title, brought action against the original owner to quiet his title, and the original owner, being then in possession, pleaded the limitation and also asked affirmative relief against the plaintiff's title, held, that the fact that defendant was barred affirmative relief would not prevent his defeating plaintiff's action by showing that plaintiff's title was void, and he was allowed thereupon to have his title quieted as against the plaintiff: Miller v. Corbin, 46-150.

In an action to quiet title, where defendant sets up a tax title, plaintiff may set up the bar of the statute: Keokuk & D. M. R. Co. v. Lindley, 48-11.

Where a licensee bought in a tax title more than five years after the execution of the tax deed, held, that as the possession of the licensee was that of his licensor, the holder of the patent title, and as the owner had thus been in possession more than five years, the tax title was barred and the licensee acquired no rights thereunder: Ibid.

A subsequent purchaser from the holder of a tax deed whose rights are barred, taking with notice of the possession of the owner, is bound thereby: Thode v. Spofford, 65-294.

The purchaser from a minor of land sold for taxes may avail himself of the exception of the statute limiting action to property sold at tax sale to five years from the execution and recording of the tax deed in favor of the minor, but such purchaser must bring his action within five years from the date of his purchase: McCaughan v. Tatman, 53-508.

But neither this extension nor the fact that the minor has a year after the removal of the disability in which to redeem from the sale will operate in favor of a person claiming under the tax title as against the minor, and such person must bring his action within five years as specified in the statute: Ibid.

Strangers to the title: The limitation as to the right of action applies only as between the tax purchaser and the owner at the time of sale or one deriving title from such owner. When a person not the owner and having mere color of title comes into possession, the holder of the tax title may have the same time as the holder of any other valid title to test the right of the occupant: Lockridge v. Daggett, 47-679; S. C., 54-332.

A plaintiff who has failed to establish a competent title in himself cannot dispute the tax title, and have his title quieted upon the ground that the right of action of the holder of the tax title has become barred: Varnum v. Shuler, 69-92.

1389. Officers de facto. 903. In all suits and controversies involving the question of title to real property held under and by virtue of a treasurer's deed, all acts of assessors, treasurers, auditors, supervisors, and other officers de facto shall be deemed and construed to be of the same validity as acts of officers de jure. [R., § 786.]

See Peirce v. Weare, 41-387.

1390. When assessed to wrong person. 904. No sale of real property for taxes shall be considered invalid on account of the same having been charged in any other name than that of the rightful owner, if the said property be in other respects sufficiently described. [R., § 787.]

1391. Certified copies of records. 905. The books and records belonging to the offices of the county auditor and county treasurer, or copies thereof, properly certified, shall be deemed sufficient evidence to prove the sale of any real property for taxes, the redemption thereof, or the payment of taxes thereon. [R., § 788.]

The stub of a redemption certificate is admissible in evidence under this section: Ellsworth v. Low, 62-178.

PEDDLERS.

1392. Amount of tax. 906; 15 G. A., ch. 62. A tax for state purposes shall be levied upon peddlers of merchandise not manufactured in this state, for a license to peddle throughout the state for one year as follows: upon each peddler of watches or jewelry, or either of them, thirty dollars; upon each peddler of clocks, fifty dollars; upon each peddler of dry goods, fancy articles, notions, or patent medicines, as follows: upon each peddler thereof, ten dollars; upon each peddler who pursues his occupation with a vehicle drawn by one animal, twenty-five dollars; if drawn by two and less than four, fifty dollars; if drawn by four or more animals, seventy-five dollars; provided, however, that nothing in this section shall apply to wholesale dealers in any of the above enumerated articles, who use wagons for the delivery of goods sold at wholesale prices and by the box or package. [R., § 791; C., '51, § 510.]

1393. License. 907. Such license may be obtained from the auditor of the county upon paying the proper tax to the treasurer thereof, and may issue for a less period than one year for the proportionate amount of tax, and all such licenses shall state the date of the expiration of the same; and any person so peddling without a license, or after the expiration of his license, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and the person actually peddling is liable, whether he be the owner of the goods or not. Upon conviction of peddling without a license as aforesaid, the offender shall forfeit and pay to the county treasurer, in addition to the fine imposed upon him for the misdemeanor, double the amount of license for one year as fixed by section nine hundred and six of this chapter [§ 1392]. [R., § 792; C., '51, §§ 511, 512.]

PUBLIC SHOWS.

1394. License to exhibit in county outside of city. 16 G. A., ch. 131, § 1. Before any person can exhibit any traveling show or circus, not prohibited by law, or show any natural or artificial curiosity or exhibition of horsemanship in a circus or otherwise, for any price, gain, or reward, in any county outside of the limits of any city or incorporated town, he shall obtain a license therefor from the county auditor, upon the payment to the county treasurer of such sum as may be fixed by the board of supervisors, not exceeding one hundred dollars for each and every place in the county at which such show or circus may exhibit.

1395. Penalty for exhibiting without license. 16 G. A., ch. 131, § 2. If any person shall exhibit any show above contemplated without having first obtained such license, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and punished accordingly, and shall forfeit and pay double the amount fixed for such license, for the use and benefit of the school fund.

CHAPTER 3.

PROVISIONS FOR THE SECURITY OF THE REVENUE.

1396. County responsible to state. 908. Each county is responsible to the state for the full amount of tax levied for state purposes, excepting such amounts as are certified to be unavailable, double, or erroneous assessments, as hereinafter provided. [R., § 793.]

1397. Defaulting treasurer. 909. If any county treasurer prove to be a defaulter to any amount of state revenue, such amount shall be made up to the state within the next three coming years by additional levies, in such manner as to annual amounts as the board of supervisors may direct. In such cases the county can have recourse to the official bond of the treasurer for indemnity. [R., § 794.]

Whether the state may have recourse to the treasurer's bond, quere: State v. Henderson, 40-242.

1398. Interest on warrants. 910. When interest is due and allowed by the treasurer of any county, or the state treasurer, on the redemption of auditor's warrants, or county warrants, the same shall be receipted on the warrants by the holder of the same, with the date of the payment, and no interest shall be allowed by the auditor of state or board of supervisors except such as is thus receipted. [R., § 795.]

1399. Discounting warrants. 911. If the state treasurer, or any county treasurer, discount auditor's warrants at less than the amount due thereon, either directly or indirectly, or through third persons, they shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, to be prosecuted as other fines. [R., § 796.]

The offense defined in this section and the loss to the state or county occurs: State v. Brandt, 41-593, 612. following is different from that under § 5214. These sections are applicable to cases where no

1400. Loaning or depositing public funds. 912; 17 G. A., ch. 155. County treasurers shall be liable to a like fine for loaning out, or in any manner using for private purposes, state, county or other funds in their hands, except that whenever permitted by the boards of supervisors of their respective counties, by resolution entered of record, they may deposit any such funds in any bank or banks chartered by the laws of the state, or any national or private banks in this state, to any amount not exceeding an amount to be fixed by such resolution; providing, that before any such deposit is made the bank in which it is proposed to make the same, shall first file a bond with sureties to be approved by the treasurer and the board of supervisors in double the maximum amount permitted to be deposited as aforesaid, and conditioned to hold the treasurer making the deposits of the county, harmless from all loss by reason of such deposit or deposits. Said bond shall be filed with the county auditor, and action may be brought thereon either by said treasurer or the county, as the board of supervisors may elect. And the state treasurer shall be liable to a fine of not more than ten thousand dollars for a like misdemeanor, to be prosecuted by the attorney-general in the name of the state. But nothing done under the provisions of this act shall alter or affect the liability of the treasurer or the securities on his official bonds. [R., § 797.]

Under this section a county treasurer is prohibited from depositing county funds in a bank, and where such deposit was made and the funds lost by the failure of the bank the treasurer was held liable therefor. (Decided before the amendment of this section): Lowry v. Polk County, 51-50.

Where a bond is given under this section and allowed to stand it constitutes security not merely for the first deposit, but for other deposits which may subsequently be made: Poor v. Merrill, 68-436.

Demand upon the person in charge of the bank where the deposit is made is sufficient to show a breach of the bond: Ibid.

Where a certificate of deposit is issued for the repayment of the deposit when presented, but no objection to the payment of the money is made on the ground of the failure to return such certificate, the fact that it is not returned will not defeat the right to recover, it being afterwards surrendered: Ibid.

PAYMENTS BY COUNTY TREASURER.

1401. Settlement with treasurer. 913. At their regular meetings in January and June of each year, the board of supervisors shall make a full and complete settlement with the county treasurer, and they shall make and certify to the auditor of state, all credits to the treasurer for double or erroneous assessments, and unavailable taxes, also all dues for state revenue, interest, or delinquent taxes, sales of land, peddler's licenses, and other dues, if any; also the amounts collected for these several items, and revenues still delinquent, each year to itself. Said reports shall be forwarded by mail. [R., § 798; C., '51, §§ 157-8.]

This settlement with the county is conclusive upon the treasurer and his sureties, and they cannot show that it was fraudulent for the purpose of showing that the defalcation subsequently appearing had really occurred before such settlement: Boone County v. Jones, 54-699. See, also, notes to § 1156.

1402. Payments to state treasurer. 914; 17 G. A., ch. 122, § 1; 20 G. A., ch. 194, § 5. The treasurer of each county shall, on or before the fifteenth day of each month, prepare a sworn statement of the amount of money in his hands on the first day of that month belonging to the state treasury, and forward the same by mail to the auditor of state, and he shall, each year, unless otherwise directed by the state auditor, pay into the state treasury, on or before the fifteenth day of April, all the money due the state remaining in his hands on the first day of April, and on or before the fifteenth day of December, all the money due the state remaining in his hands on the tenth day of December; he shall also, at any time when directed by the auditor of state, forthwith pay into the state treasury, or treasury of any county, any or all the money due the state and remaining in his hands. In case the treasurer of any county shall fail to prepare and forward the statement required in this section, he shall forfeit and pay for each and every failure a sum not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, to be recovered in an action brought in the name of the state auditor, against him and his bondsmen, in any court of record. [R., § 799.]

[By special provision the change made in this section by 20 G. A., ch. 194, took effect on the second Monday of November, 1884.]

1403. Account with state. 916. The state auditor shall make and transmit to each county auditor, on the first day of May of each year, a statement of the county treasurer's account with the state treasurer, which account shall be submitted by said auditor to the board of supervisors at their next meeting, and if they find the same to be incorrect in any particular, they shall forthwith certify the facts in relation to the same to the auditor of state. [R., § 801.]

1404. Settlement with county treasurer. 917. When a county treasurer goes out of office, he shall make a full and complete settlement with the board of supervisors, and deliver up all books, papers, moneys, and all other property appertaining to the office, to his successor, taking his receipt therefor. The board of supervisors shall make a statement, so far as state dues are concerned, to the auditor of state, showing all charges against the treasurer during his term of office, and all credits made, the delinquent taxes and other unfinished business charged over to his successor, and the amount of money paid over to his successor, showing to what year and to what account the amount so paid over belongs. They shall also see that the books of the treasurer are correctly balanced before passing into the possession and control of the treasurer elect. [R., § 802.]

The board of supervisors may accept from a treasurer who is in default a promissory note for the amount of his indebtedness; and such note will not be void for want of consideration: Sac County v. Hobbs, 72-69.

1405. Each fund kept separate. 918. The state treasurer shall keep each distinct fund coming into his possession as public money, in a separate apartment of his safe, and, at each quarterly settlement with the state auditor, he shall count each fund in the presence of the auditor to see if the same agrees with the balance found on the books. The total amount acknowledged to belong to each fund shall be exhibited before the court. County treasurers shall account with such persons as the board of supervisors may direct in like manner, and a report of such accounting shall be made to the board at their next meeting, by the person so appointed by them. [R., § 804.]

1406. Penalty for official delinquency. 919. If any county auditor, or county treasurer, or other officer shall neglect or refuse to perform any act or duty specifically required of him by any provision of this title, such officer shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and indicted therefor; and, being found guilty, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, for the payment whereof his bondsmen shall also be liable; and he and his bondsmen shall also be liable to an action on his official bond for the damages sustained by any person through such neglect or refusal. [R., §§ 744, 749, 805; 12 G. A., ch. 75, § 3.]

1407. Duty of auditor. 16 G. A., ch. 113, § 1. The auditor of the state is hereby authorized and empowered to draw his warrant on the state treasury, in favor of any county in this state for the amount of any excess in any fund or tax due the state from said county excepting the state taxes.

1408. Refund excess to county. 16 G. A., ch. 113, § 2. Whenever, it shall appear from the books in his office, that there is a balance due any county, and in excess of any revenue due the state, except state taxes, it shall be his duty to draw his warrant for such excess, in favor of the county entitled thereto, and forward the said warrant by mail or otherwise, to the county auditor of the county to which said money belongs, and charge the amount so sent to the said county.

1409. Duty of county auditor. 16 G. A., ch. 113, § 3. The county auditor to whom said warrant is sent, shall immediately upon receipt thereof deliver the same to the county treasurer of his county and charge the amount of the warrant to said county treasurer in the same manner as any other fund is charged on the books of his office, and the county auditor shall also, on receipt of said warrant from the auditor of state acknowledge receipt of the amount of said warrant to said state auditor.

TITLE VII.

OF HIGHWAYS, FERRIES AND BRIDGES.

CHAPTER 1.

OF ESTABLISHING HIGHWAYS.

1410. Jurisdiction over. 920. The board of supervisors has the general supervision over the highways in the county, with power to establish and change them as herein provided, and to see that the laws in relation to them are carried into effect. [R., § 819; C., '51, § 514.]

[The board of supervisors is given power to establish highways along streams where it is practicable to thus avoid bridging such stream: See §§ 404-406.]

Easement: A highway is nothing but an easement, comprehending the right of all the individuals in the community to pass and re-pass, with the incidental right of the public to do all acts to keep it in repair. The fee remains in the original owner: Dubuque v. Maloney, 9-450; Overman v. May, 35-89.

The prescriptive right to use material to keep the road in repair does not include the right to take material from the right of way for the repair of other public highways. Therefore, held, that the prescriptive right to span a river with a bridge, and use such bridge, did not include the right to quarry stone under the bed of the river under such bridge for general use in the repair of highways: Overman v. May, 35-89.

Nothing passes as incident to the grant of an easement but what is requisite to its fair and reasonable enjoyment. Therefore, where a party dedicating a street reserved the right to construct a mill-race across it, held, that the reservation should be construed in the same way as the grant of a like privilege, and that the party was under obligation to restore the street, as nearly as possible, to its former condition by the construction and maintenance of a bridge across it: Waterloo v. Union Mill Co., 59-437.

Where the highway becomes impassable the public has the right to go upon adjoining premises for the purpose of passing, and such act will not constitute trespass upon such adjoining premises: Irwin v. Yeagar, 74-174.

What constitutes: Something more than the mere right to use land for the purpose of travel is necessary to constitute a highway. It must be traveled or at least capable of use in that way to make it such: State v. Shinkle, 40-131.

By § 1515, bridges are a part of the public highway, and are therefore under the general supervision of the board of supervisors. The board cannot be compelled by mandamus to build, that being discretionary: State ex rel. v. Morris, 43-192.

Public highways: It is the duty of the legislature to establish public highways for the passage and intercourse of the people of the state. It may properly provide for the establishment of such highways as are necessary to enable every citizen to discharge his duties to the state, have access to market, school, church, etc., and in that case it may properly provide for the taking of private property, although in a particular case but one person is primarily or principally benefited: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

A citizen has the right to have access to the public roads, and the public has the right to have access to him, and a road which is the only one between a citizen and the public may properly be deemed a public road, although he is the only person reached: Johnson v. Board of Supervisors, 61-89; Pagels v. Oaks, 64-198.

Private ways: A former statute (11 G. A., ch. 127), providing for the establishment of roads which were denominated private, to be established on the petition of the applicant alone, and at his cost, and which the public was not bound to work or keep in repair, and over which the party securing their establishment might exercise exclusive control, held unconstitutional as authorizing the taking of private property for a private and not a public use: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

Jurisdiction: All the jurisdiction in relation to roads and highways formerly exercised by county judges is now conferred upon the board of supervisors: Kennedy v. Dubuque, C. & M. R. Co., 34-421.

Under particular statutes, held, that the power to establish a highway within the corporate limits of a city existed in the same tribunal which had authority to establish highways outside of such corporate limits: Knowles v. Muscatine, 20-248.

A county has power to grade and improve its public roads, and issue warrants in payment therefor: Long v. Boone County, 32-181.

Boards of supervisors have no authority to establish highways within the corporate limits of cities or incorporated towns: Gallaher v. Head, 72-173.

Dedication: A highway may exist in this state arising from dedication and prescription, notwithstanding the provisions of the statute for the establishment of highways: Mosier v. Vincent, 34-478; Baldwin v. Herbst, 54-168.

A highway may be established by the dedication of land for that purpose and its acceptance by the public: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655

Where the dedication of right of way for a highway is claimed to have been made by the land owner, proof of use may be competent to show an acceptance, and the lapse of any particular period of time is unnecessary if the evidence is otherwise sufficient to show an intention to dedicate. If the owner of land knows for a series of years that the public are using and making a road thereon as a highway and expending money in its improvement, and he acquiesces in what they are doing, such facts will be considered evidence tending to show actual dedication: State v. Birmingham, 74-407.

1411. Width. 921. Highways hereafter established must be sixty-six feet in width, unless otherwise directed; but the board of supervisors may, for good reasons, fix a different width, not less than forty feet, and they may be increased or diminished within the limits aforesaid, altered in direction, or discontinued, by pursuing substantially the steps herein prescribed for opening a new highway. [R., §§ 820, 821; C., '51, §§ 515, 516.]

The auditor has no power to establish a highway of less width than sixty-six feet, and if he attempt to do so the board of supervisors may set aside his action: State v. Wagner, 45-482.

Although the road is established by the auditor, and is less than sixty-six feet in width, if the record of his action is read over to and approved by the board, such action becomes substantially the action of the board, and is proper: State v. Barlow, 61-572.

The fact that the road as established is wider than authorized does not render the order establishing it void. It is an irregularity which cannot be taken advantage of in a collateral proceeding: Knowles v. Muscatine, 20-248.

The statute (§ 1947) authorizing street railways to extend their lines beyond the city limits over highways which are of the width of one hundred feet or more contemplates and authorizes the establishment of highways more than sixty-six feet in width: Linn County v. Hewitt, 55-505.

A road supervisor may be enjoined from erecting a bridge at the side of the highway where it will cause injury to a hedge of an adjoining land owner, and render necessary the destruction of shade trees in front of his premises, when it might, with some additional expense, be constructed in the middle of the highway without causing such damage: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

There is no presumption that a highway originating by prescription is of the width required in case of highways laid out under the statute. The width of such highway is a question of fact for the jury, to be determined from the facts and circumstances. The court cannot, as a matter of law, say that a road acquired by prescription or use is of any particular width beyond such portion as is actually used by the public: Davis v. Clinton, 58-389.

Where, by agreement constituting dedication of a highway to public use, it was stipulated that the road should be established as it had been used, and the width as thus used was found to be twenty-six feet, held, that the highway as established by the dedication was properly determined to be of that width: Hugh v. Haigh, 69-382.

Where an order of the county court establishing a highway was based upon the plat of the commissioner, upon which plat it was described as thirty-three feet in width, held, that it must be presumed to have been intended to establish a highway of that width although not so specified in the order of establishment: State v. Schilb, 47-611.

As to width of bridges, see § 1515 and notes.

1412. Petition. 922. Any person desiring the establishment, vacation, or alteration of a highway, shall file in the auditor's office of the proper county, a petition in substance as follows: To the board of supervisors of — county. The undersigned asks that a highway, commencing at —, and running thence — and terminating at — be established, vacated, or altered (as the case may be).

Before a highway can be lawfully established a petition asking its establishment must be presented to the board of supervisors. Until this is done the board have no jurisdiction or power to establish a highway, and if it does so its action is absolutely void. And where the petition asked for the opening and re-establishment of a highway, held, that proceedings thereunder to establish were not authorized. Also held, that in such cases the county could not be estopped by the acts of its auditor, and the board, from setting up the illegality of the proceeding: Curtis v. Pocahontas County, 72-151.

The petition for a highway need not follow the precise language of the statute: McCollister v. Shuey, 24-362.

If it asks for the appointment of a commissioner to locate a highway, etc., instead of for the establishment of the highway, it is not so materially defective as to invalidate the proceedings: State v. Pitman, 38-252.

Where the notice was that a petition would be presented for a new road, and the petition asked that a commissioner be appointed and the necessary steps taken to open the road, held, that there was a substantial compliance with the statute: Stevens v. Board of Supervisors, 41-341.

The petition need not specify the width of the proposed highway. Such specification is surplusage: State v. Wagner, 45-482.

A petition will not be insufficient to give the board jurisdiction merely because it runs to the county auditor, who is the clerk of the board, instead of to the board itself, or because it does not expressly ask for the establishment of the road, when its object is abundantly evident, in that it states that the road is needed and asks for the appointment of a commissioner: State v. Barlow, 61-572.

Under former statutes requiring that the petition for the establishment of a highway should be signed by at least twelve householders of the county, held, that the absence of an allegation that the petitioners were householders, or of any fact of such fact in the record, was not a fatal defect, if the road was otherwise a legal one: Keyes v. Tait, 19-123.

A proceeding to establish a public highway being in its nature public and for the benefit of the whole public, a contract by the party who has commenced such proceeding, for its abandonment, is contrary to public policy and void: Jacobs v. Tobiason, 65-245.

1413. Bond. 923. Before filing such petition the auditor shall require the petitioner to file in his office a bond, with sureties to be approved by such auditor, conditioned that all expenses growing out of the application will be paid by the obligors in case the contemplated highway is not finally established, altered, or vacated, as asked in the petition. [R., § 826; C., '51, § 521.]

A failure to require the bond here mentioned will not invalidate the proceedings: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32-130.

If the auditor allows the petition to be filed without a bond, and proceeds to act upon it, his action cannot be said to be without jurisdiction, the provision in regard to a bond being simply directory: State v. Barlow, 61-572.

1414. Commissioner. 924. If satisfied that the foregoing prerequisites have been complied with, the auditor shall appoint some suitable and disinterested elector of the county a commissioner to examine into the expediency of the proposed highway, alteration, or vacation thereof, and report accordingly. [R., § 828; C., '51, § 523.]

DUTY OF COMMISSIONER.

1415. What to consider. 925; 18 G. A., ch. 50. The commissioner is not confined to the precise matter of the petition, but may inquire and determine whether that or any highway in the vicinity, answering the same purpose and in substance the same, be required; but such highway must not be established through any burying ground which is exempt from execution; nor through any garden, orchard, or ornamental ground contiguous to any dwelling-house, nor so as to cause the removal of any building without the consent of the owner. [R., § 830; C., '51, § 525; 12 G. A., ch. 47.]

Under the corresponding section of Code of 1851, held, that the commissioner had no authority to lay out a highway beyond the termini fixed in the petition, and the proceedings as to any such portion would be void: State v. Molly, 18-525.

1416. Convenience. 926. In forming his judgment, he must take into consideration both the public and private convenience, and also the expense of the proposed highway. [R., § 831; C., '51, § 526.]

1417. Report. 927. After a general examination, if he shall not be in favor of establishing the proposed highway, he will so report, and no further proceedings shall be had thereon. [R., § 832; C., '51, § 527.]

An adverse report ends all proceedings under the petition, and the report of another commissioner appointed by the auditor would have no validity: Cook v. Trigg, 52-709.

A report against a road by the commissioner is an official determination, and the application cannot be considered as longer pending: Morgan v. Miller, 59-481.

Where it appeared that upon proper petition a commissioner was appointed to view and lay out a road, and that he made a survey and report, but that no further action was taken, held, that this was not sufficient to show the establishment of the highway: Carey v. Weitgenant, 52-660.

1418. To lay out highway. 928. If he deems such establishment expedient, he may proceed at once to lay out the highway as hereinafter directed, and may report accordingly, if the circumstances of the case are such as to enable him to do so, without pursuing the course pointed out in the next section. [R., § 833; C., '51, § 528.]

1419. Survey made. 929. If the precise location of the highway cannot be otherwise given, he must cause the line of the highway to be accurately surveyed and plainly marked out. [R., § 834; C., '51, § 529.]

1420. Commissioner sworn. 930. Any commissioner, other than the county surveyor, must be sworn to faithfully and impartially discharge his duty as such commissioner, and, after being thus qualified, he shall have power to swear the assistants employed to a faithful and impartial performance of their respective duties in laying out the highway described in his commission. [R., § 835; C., '51, § 530; 14 G. A., ch. 27.]

That the officer by whom the commissioner was sworn was not qualified to administer oaths is no such irregularity that the proceedings will be set aside on that account: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32-130.

1421. Mile posts and stakes. 931. Mile posts must be set up at the end of every mile and the distance marked thereon, and stakes must be set at each change of direction, on which shall be marked the bearing of the new course. Stakes must also be set at the crossing of fences and streams, and at intervals in the prairie, not exceeding a quarter of a mile each; in the timber, the course must be indicated by trees suitably blazed. [R., § 836; C., '51, § 531.]

The provisions of this section and the one following are directory only, and the failure to comply with them will not render the proceedings illegal or void. Whether it is intended that they shall be followed when the commissioner proceeds to lay out the highway without the aid of a surveyor (under § 1418) may well be questioned: McCollister v. Shuey, 24-362.

1422. Bearing trees; monuments. 932. Bearing trees must, when convenient, be established at each angle and mile post, and the position of the highway relative to the corners of sections, the junction of streams, or any other natural or artificial monument, or conspicuous object, must, as far as convenient, be stated in the field-notes and shown on the plat. [R., § 837; C., '51, § 532.]

1423. Plat and field-notes. 933. A correct plat of the highway, together with a copy of the field-notes of the surveyor, if one has been employed, must be filed as part of the commissioner's report. [R., § 838; C., '51, § 533.]

1424. Report objections; claims for damages. 934; 19 G. A., ch. 80. Within thirty days from the day of his appointment, the commissioner must file his report in the auditor's office, and if it be in favor of the establishment of the highway, shall report the number of bridges required, if any, and the probable cost thereof on the proposed highway, the auditor must appoint a day, not less than sixty nor more than ninety days distant, when the matter will be acted upon; on or before which day, all objections to the establishment of the highway and claims for damages by reason of the establishment thereof, must be filed with the auditor. [R., §§ 840, 841; C., '51, §§ 535-6.]

Where final action appeared to have been had at a date subsequent to the one fixed, held, that it would be presumed that by proper resolution action was postponed to the day upon which it was had: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32-130.

The fixing of the date for final hearing less than sixty days distant is an irregularity which will not invalidate subsequent proceedings, nor render them subject to collateral attack: State v. Kinney, 39-226.

Where an auditor set a day for final hearing one day beyond the limit here fixed, and afterward, in a proceeding to enjoin the road supervisor from opening the road so laid out, there was a trial involving the validity of the road, and the opening of the same was perpetually enjoined, held, that the same was a binding adjudication that no road had ever been established: Dicken v. Morgan, 59-157.

A party whose claim is not filed within the time fixed has no constitutional right to damages: See notes to § 1436.

1425. Day fixed. 935. The time for the commissioner to commence the examination shall be fixed by the auditor, and if he fails to so commence, or to report as prescribed in the preceding section, the auditor may fix another day or extend the time for making such report, or may appoint another commissioner. [R., § 829; C., '51, § 524.]

NOTICE — HIGHWAY ESTABLISHED.

1426. Notice served. 936; 19 G. A., ch. 109. Within twenty days after the day is fixed by the auditor as above provided, a notice shall be served on each owner or occupier of land lying in the proposed highway, or abutting thereon, as shown by the transfer books in the auditor's office, who resides in the county, in the manner provided for the service of original notice in actions at law; and such notice shall be published for four weeks in some newspaper printed in the county, if any such there be, which notice may be in the following form:

To all whom it may concern: The commissioner appointed to locate, vacate, or alter (as the case may be) a highway commencing at — in — county, running thence (giving the names of the owners of the land through which the proposed road passes as they appear upon the transfer books of the auditor's office) (describe in general terms all the points as in the commissioner's report), and terminating at — has reported in favor of the establishment, vacation, or alteration thereof, and all objections thereto or claims for damages must be filed in the auditor's office on or before noon of the — day of —, A. D. —, or such highway will be established, vacated, or altered without reference thereto.

I— R—, County Auditor.

When notice is given to the persons appearing by the transfer books to be the unconditional owners of the land, and also by publication, the jurisdiction becomes complete. Notice to conditional owners, or others not shown by the transfer books (and not occupants), is not necessary: Wilson v. Hathaway, 42-173.

Such notice should be served personally upon the owner as shown by the transfer books, when he resides in the county, but if he be a non-resident, then upon the actual occupant of the land, although the name of such occupant does not appear from such books: Alcott v. Acheson, 49-569.

It is only residents of the state, in actual occupancy of land, who are entitled to personal notice. Notice need not be given to a foreign railway company across whose right of way the highway passes, by personal service upon its officers or agents. Publication of notice is sufficient in such case. Also held, that as the railway company did not appear from the transfer books to be owner of its right of way, it was not entitled to notice: State ex rel. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 68-135.

Error in the description of the starting point of the highway in the petition and notice, held sufficient to render the proceedings thereunder void, although such error was discoverable by careful examination on the face of the petition and notice: Butterfield v. Pollock, 45-257.

Under a previous statute, requiring thirty days' notice to be given of the filing of a petition for the highway, but containing no provision requiring the recording of such notice and proof of posting thereof, held, that the court would be warranted from the evidence of the appointment of commissioners, and the giving of notice, and the long lapse of time during which the right of the public had remained unchallenged, in inferring that the requisite proof had been made and lost: Keyes v. Tait, 19-123.

Under such statute, held, that proof of the method of posting the notice might be made to the board of supervisors by parol evidence, and it would be presumed that proof in that manner was made, although the affidavits filed showing proof were not sufficient: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32-130; Carr v. Fayette County, 37-608.

In order to enable the auditor to act it is not necessary that there be filed formal proof of publication of the notice required by statute; his determination that notice has been duly published, while not conclusive, is sufficient to cast upon any one questioning his action the burden of proving want of publication: Pagels v. Oaks, 64-198.

Under the Revision held, that a recital in the record that due notice had been given was prima facie evidence of that fact: State v. Pitman, 35-252.

The failure to give notice as required renders the action in establishing the highway void, and notice will not be presumed from the fact of establishment alone: State v. Anderson, 39-274; State v. Weimer, 64-243; McBurney v. Graves, 66-314.

The statutory provision for vacation of highways requiring notice, etc., are not applicable to vacation of streets and alleys which by statute (§ 623) are under the control of the city council: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66-687.

1427. Auditor may establish. 937. If no objections or claims for damages are filed on or before noon of the day fixed for filing the same, and the auditor is satisfied the provisions of the preceding section have been complied with, he shall proceed to establish such highway as recommended by the commissioner upon the payment of costs. If such costs are not paid within ten days, the auditor shall report his action in the premises to the board of supervisors at their next session, who may affirm the action of the auditor or establish such highway at the expense of the county.

The auditor has no power to fix the width of a highway established by him at less than sixty-six feet: See § 1411 and note.

Under 12 G. A., ch. 160, held, that the action of the auditor was subject to review by the board: Brooks v. Payne, 38-263; and that an appeal from the action of the auditor did not lie, but only from the action of the board: Newell v. Perkins, 39-244.

In order to enable the auditor to act, it is not necessary that there be filed formal proof of publication of the notice required by the preceding section; his determination that notice has been duly published, while not conclusive, is sufficient to cast upon any one questioning his action the burden of proving want of publication: Pagels v. Oaks, 64-198.

1428. New notice given. 938. If the auditor is satisfied the notice has not been served and published as provided in section nine hundred and thirty-six of this chapter [§ 1426], he shall appoint another day and cause such notice to be served or published as provided in said section, and thereafter proceed as provided in the preceding section.

1429. Objections or claims. 939. If objections to the establishment of the highway or claims for damages are filed, the further hearing of the application shall stand continued to the next session of the board of supervisors, held after the commissioners appointed to assess damages have reported.

The fact that the only claim for damages which is filed is paid will not authorize the auditor to establish the highway, but the hearing must be continued to the next meeting of the board: Kessler v. Hirshire, 52-568.

DAMAGES CLAIMED.

1430. Appraisers appointed. 940. When claims for damages are filed, and on the day appointed for filing the same, the auditor must appoint three suitable and disinterested electors of the county as appraisers to view the ground on the day fixed by him, and report upon the amount of damages sustained by the claimants; such report shall be made and filed in the auditor's office within thirty days after the day they are appointed. [R., §§ 843, 847; C., '51, §§ 538, 542; 9 G. A., ch. 141; 12 G. A., ch. 160, § 2.]

Timber growing upon the land appropriated for the purpose of a public highway remains the property of the former owner, and is not to be taken into account in estimating his damages: Dealon v. Polk County, 9-594.

Where, upon failure of one of the appraisers to meet with the others on the day fixed, they adjourned instead of filling his place, held, that, in the absence of any proof of prejudice caused thereby, the proceedings would not be treated as erroneous upon a review by certiorari: Johnson v. Board of Supervisors, 61-89.

1431. Claims and objections in writing. 941. All claims for damages and objections to the establishment, vacation, or alteration of the highway must be in writing, and the statements in the application for damages shall be considered denied in all the subsequent proceedings. [R., § 842; C., '51, § 537.]

This section and § 1436 do not provide in what cases damages shall be allowed, and do not authorize the recovery of damages, either by an adjacent property owner or any other person, for the vacation of a highway: Brady v. Shinkle, 40-576; Ellsworth v. Chickasaw County, 40-571.

1432. Appraisers notified. 942. The auditor shall cause notice of their appointment to be given to each of the appraisers, fixing the hour at which they are to meet at the office of the auditor, or of some justice of the peace therein named. [R., § 844; C., '51, § 539.]

1433. Vacancies filled. 943. If the appraisers are not all present within one hour of the time thus fixed, the auditor or justice, as the case may be, shall fill the vacancy by the appointment of others. The appraisers must be sworn to discharge their duty faithfully and impartially. [R., §§ 845, 846; C., '51, §§ 540-1.]

Where, upon the absence of one of the appraisers, instead of his place being filled, action was postponed to another date, when he was present and acted, held, that in the absence of a showing of prejudice there was no error: Johnson v. Supervisors, 61-89.

1434. Time for final action. 944. Should the report not be filed in time, or should any other good cause for delay exist, the auditor may postpone the time for final action on the subject, and may, if expedient, appoint other commissioners. [R., § 848; C., '51, § 543.]

1435. Costs. 945. Should no damages be awarded the applicant therefor, the whole of the costs growing out of his application shall be paid by him. [R., § 850; C., '51, § 545.]

FINAL ACTION.

1436. Testimony received; damages determined; conditions. 946. When the time for final action arrives, the board of supervisors may hear testimony, receive petitions for and remonstrances against the establishment, vacation, or alteration, as the case may be, of such highway, and may establish, vacate, or alter, or refuse to do so, as in their judgment, founded on the testimony, the public good may require. Said board may increase or diminish the damages allowed by the appraisers, and may make such establishment, vacation, or alteration, conditioned upon the payment in whole or in part of the damages awarded, or expenses in relation thereto. [R., § 851; C., '51, § 546.]

Proceedings before the board: Where two applications are, in effect, for the same road, by different routes, they may be considered together: Brown v. Ellis, 26-85.

Where, in a proceeding before the board, one of the members refused to be sworn as a witness unless required to, but it appeared that his evidence, if given, would have been cumulative, and the action in the premises was not dependent upon it, held, that the discretion of the board in the matter would not be interfered with: Ibid.

Dismissal: The proceeding is not for the benefit of the person commencing it, but is by the state for the benefit and advantage of the public, and the petitioner acquires no rights or advantages by it. Therefore, an agreement by him for a consideration to abandon the proceeding is against public policy and void: Jacobs v. Tobriason, 65-245.

The fact that previous proceedings for establishment of a highway have been dismissed by the board will not bar their right to establish a highway over the same lines, upon a subsequent application: Pagels v. Oaks, 64-198.

Time for hearing: Where final action appeared to have been had at a date subsequent to the one fixed, held, that it would be presumed that, by proper resolution, action was postponed to the day upon which it was had: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32-130.

The fixing of the date for final hearing less than sixty days distant is an irregularity which will not invalidate subsequent proceedings, nor render them subject to collateral attack: State v. Kinney, 39-226.

Where, upon failure of one of the appraisers to meet with the others on the day fixed, they adjourned instead of filling his place, held, that, in the absence of any proof of prejudice caused thereby, the proceedings would not be treated as erroneous upon a review by certiorari: Johnson v. Board of Supervisors, 61-89.

Conditional establishment: Where the establishment is conditioned on the payment of the expenses thereof, it is not necessary that the time for such payment be fixed in the order: Brown v. Ellis, 26-85.

Where the proceedings did not definitely locate a portion of the highway upon the ground, but left it to be located by the petitioners, held, that such establishment as to the portion thus left to be located not being shown, the highway could not be deemed established in any part: Barnes v. Fox, 61-18.

Where a highway is established upon conditions, it is not to be regarded as fully established so as to become a legal highway until the conditions are complied with: State v. Glass, 42-56.

A final order once made as contemplated by statute acquires the character of an adjudication as to the establishment of the highway and the amount of damages, if any, and the parties cannot again litigate the question in a new proceeding. The judgment is conclusive until set aside: Hupert v. Anderson, 35-578.

Although the road is established on a different line from that requested and recommended, the action, while it may be erroneous, will not be void: Davenport Mutual Savings, etc., Ass'n v. Schmidt, 15-213.

If upon an appeal from the action of the board as to the amount of damages, the circuit court increase the amount allowed, the board may reconsider their action and refuse to establish the highway: Nelson v. Goodykoontz, 47-32.

An order for the establishment of the highway, conditioned upon payment of damages, etc., is such a final order as may be appealed from under § 1449. It is not necessary to wait for the unconditional order contemplated in the following section: McNicols v. Wilson, 42-385.

Consent to the establishment of a highway will not confer jurisdiction to establish a particular line contemplated, and in the absence of proper notice the proceeding will be void: Barnes v. Fox, 61-18.

Where a highway was established by consent in pursuance of a written contract executed through mistake of fact, held, that a court of equity might reform and correct the written contract, and enjoin the laying out of the highway as established: Mastelar v. Edgarton, 44-495.

Record: The record with reference to the establishment of a road is admissible in evidence where it shows substantially the same route as petitioned for, and the petition need not be offered to render the record admissible, if it appears that it was presented, filed and acted upon: State v. Lane, 26-223.

Vacation of highway: Where the auditor acts improperly in establishing a highway, the board may set aside his action and vacate the highway thus improperly established: State v. Wagner, 45-482.

The statutory provisions by which the same steps are required to vacate as to establish a highway are not applicable to the vacation of streets and alleys. The city council has authority to vacate streets and alleys by ordinance: Dempsey v. Burlington, 66-687.

Where two roads were established on the same line, and upon due notice one of them was vacated, held, that such order of vacation would not operate upon both but only upon the road as to which notice was given: Larkin v. Harris, 36-93.

Under the provisions of a former statute, that if money was advanced for the payment of damages caused by the location of a highway the highway could not be discontinued without repayment of such damages, and that the claim for the refunding of the damages was a lien on the land covered by the highway, held, that an action in equity to recover the amount paid to the land owner for a highway afterwards discontinued might be maintained: Brown v. Bridges, 36-279.

Damages: In estimating the damages resulting from the fact that the location of a highway will render the construction of fences by the adjoining property owner necessary, the jury may be limited to considering the cost of constructing such fence as is proper under the circumstances, and should not estimate the cost of a fence sufficient to turn sheep and hogs, they not being permitted to run at large. The fact that a fence which will become necessary upon the establishment of a highway will be of advantage to the owner cannot be taken into consideration in estimating his damages: Bland v. Hixenbaugh, 39-532.

It is improper in estimating the damages to allow the owner as part of his compensation a certain amount for fence thereby made necessary. If by the establishment of the road the land is thrown open and left unfenced, this fact may enter into the consideration in determining the depreciation in value of the remaining premises. But the owner should not be allowed for the cost of fence, as such: Haurahan v. Fox, 47-102.

One of the owners in common of land may recover damages caused by the establishment of a highway to the extent of his ownership, although no claim for damages is made by the other one: Ibid.

If the land owner, after the assessment of damages and pending an application to establish the road, erects a fence upon the proposed highway, he cannot have damages for the removal thereof allowed to him on appeal: Holton v. Butler, 22-557.

Timber growing upon the land appropriated for the purpose of a public highway remains the property of the former owner, and is not to be taken into account in estimating his damages: Deaton v. Polk County, 9-594.

It is the duty of the jury assessing the compensation for real estate appropriated to the use of the public as a street to personally examine the premises: Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153.

Damages for relocation: The true rule for estimating damages in case of relocation of a highway over land of the same party is to determine the amount which the damages for the new or relocated line would exceed the damages sustained by reason of the old one: Jewett v. Israel, 35-261.

And this rule is applicable whether damages for the location of the first line were allowed or not. But the damages by reason of the location of the new line are not to be diminished by reason of advantages and benefits which tend to increase the value of the land to be set off against damages caused by the relocation: Israel v. Jewett, 29-475.

Damages for vacation: A party whose right to the use of a highway is simply that enjoyed by the general public cannot recover damages for its vacation, whether his land abuts upon a part of the highway not vacated or upon a portion of the highway actually vacated: Ellsworth v. Chickasaw County, 40-571; Brady v. Shinkle, 40-576; Barr v. Oskaloosa, 45-275.

A claim for damages cannot be considered after the final order of establishment: Smiths v. Dubuque County, 1-492.

Where no claim for damages is filed, or the claim is disallowed because not filed within proper time, or upon consideration of the claim no damages are allowed by the appraisers, a property owner cannot object to the establishment of the highway on the ground that his property is taken without compensation. While he has a constitutional right of compensation, it must be claimed and established in the manner pointed out by law: McCrorry v. Griswold, 7-248; Connolly v. Griswold, 7-416; Dunlap v. Pulley, 28-469; Abbott v. Board of Supervisors, 36-354.

The land owner may, by appeal from the appraisalment, have the amount of his damages assessed by a jury of twelve. If he fails to take such appeal and have such assessment, he cannot afterwards complain that his property is taken for public use without due process of law: Tharp v. Witham, 65-566.

Review of proceedings by certiorari: The question as to the propriety of establishing the road, and the legality of the proceedings to that end, may be reviewed by certiorari: McCrorry v. Griswold, 7-248.

An order establishing a highway is a matter affecting the public only, and an individual can have no interest in that question such as to warrant him in appealing from the order of establishment, but he may be entitled to an appeal from the action of the board in regard to the allowance of damages: Ball v. Humphrey, 4 G. Gr., 204; Myers v. Simms, 4-300.

Upon a writ of certiorari from the proceeding of the board, it is not proper to review its decision upon the question whether the public interests demand a proposed road, or whether it is practicable and expedient to establish it. The court can only determine whether the board is proceeding within its jurisdiction or not: Tiedt v. Carstensen, 61-334.

Where a certiorari proceeding is instituted against the board of supervisors, calling in question their action in establishing a highway, and such action is held to be illegal, the costs should be taxed, not against the board, but against the petitioners for the highway: Tiedt v. Carstensen, 64-131.

The action of the board in allowing or refusing damages can only be reviewed on appeal: See notes to § 1449.

Change of location by prescription: Where there have been proceedings to locate a highway and it has been established and used as such, pursuant to such proceedings, and by mistake the highway as used varies slightly from the one established, the use will not constitute a prescriptive right outside of the limits of the established highway: State v. Welpton, 34-144; State v. Gould, 40-372; State v. Schiib, 47-611.

Where by request of a land owner the supervisor, in opening an established highway, deflects therefrom upon the land of such owner, and the road so located is worked and used by the public, the action of the owner amounts to a dedication as to the portion outside of the established highway: Ryan v. Kennedy, 62-37.

Where the public have traveled and used a road different from the established highway for the period of prescription, it acquires a right by prescription in the road thus traveled: Kelsey v. Furman, 36-614.

A mistake as to the location of the line used, by reason of which it varies from the section line on which the land owner supposed he was allowing it to be used, will not give rise to a prescriptive right to the road as used, and the owner may correct the mistake and confine the travel to the intended line without being guilty of obstructing the highway: State v. Crow, 30-258.

The fact that a fence is built along a highway at the time it is laid out and thus remains for twenty years is sufficient evidence to show that it is not upon the highway, although by subsequent location from field-notes the fence appears to be within the limits of the highway: Cattell v. Wilhelm, 39-288.

A curative act to render valid defective proceedings for the establishment of highways is constitutional: Bennett v. Fisher, 26-497.

1437. Unconditional order. 947. In the latter case, a day shall be fixed for the performance of the condition, which must be before the next session of the board, and if the same is not performed by the day thus fixed, the board shall, at such session, make some final and unconditional order in the premises. [R., § 852; C., '51, § 547.]

1438. Record. 948. Any order made or action taken in the establishment of a highway, shall be entered in the highway record, distinguishing between those made or taken by the auditor and those by the board of supervisors.

1439. Plat and field-notes. 949; 15 G. A., ch. 19. After the highway has been finally established, the plat and field-notes must be recorded by the auditor, and he shall certify the same to the township clerk, and the township clerk shall certify to and direct the supervisor of highways to have the same opened and worked subject to the provisions of the next section. [R., § 855; C., '51, § 550.]

1440. Fences. 950. A reasonable time must be allowed to enable the owners of land to erect the necessary fences adjoining the new highway; and when crops have been planted or sowed before the highway is finally established, the opening thereof shall be delayed until the crop is harvested. [R., §§ 856, 857; C., '51, §§ 551-2.]

A land owner is not liable to indictment for obstructing a highway in not removing the fences where a newly established highway crosses his land, at least until he has had reasonable notice from the supervisor to do so: State v. Kallife, 32-189.

1441. Minors; insane persons. 951. The rights and interests of minors and insane persons, in relation to the establishment, vacation, and alteration of highways, and all matters connected therewith, are under the control of their guardians. [R., § 860; C., '51, § 555.]

1442. Streets in villages. 952. All public streets of towns or villages not incorporated, are a part of the highway; and all supervisors of highways, or persons having charge of the same, in the respective districts of such towns or villages, shall work the same as provided by law. [12 G. A., ch. 148.]

1443. In cities or towns. 953. Such portions of all highways as lie within the limits of any city or incorporated town shall conform to the direction and grade and be subject to all regulations of other streets in such town or city. [R., § 916.]

There is a clear distinction between streets and highways in cities and incorporated towns and in unincorporated towns; the latter are regarded as a part of the highways of the county, while the former are subject to the exclusive control of the officers of the municipality: Gallagher v. Head, 72-173.

1444. Lands of state institutions. 954. Highways or streets shall not be established or opened across the lands reserved by the state for its various institutions lying adjacent thereto, without the express consent of the general assembly. [12 G. A., ch. 110, § 1.]

IN TWO OR MORE COUNTIES.

1445. Action of supervisors. 955. The establishment, vacation, or alteration of a highway, either along or across a county line, may be effected by the concurrent action of the respective boards of supervisors in the mode above prescribed; except that the auditor of neither county can make the final order in such case. The commissioners in such cases must act in concert, and the highway will not be deemed established, vacated, or altered in either county until it is so in both. [R., § 861; C., '51, § 556.]

1446. State and county roads; concurrent action. 956. Hereafter there shall be no distinction between highways heretofore known as state roads and county roads; both are alike subject to the provisions of this chapter. Highways established by the concurrent action of the board of supervisors of two or more counties, can only be discontinued by the concurrent action of the board of supervisors of the several counties in which the same may be situated, but such highways shall be treated in all other respects as provided in this title. [R., § 879.]

CONSENT HIGHWAYS.

1447. How established. 957. Highways may be established without the appointment of a commissioner, provided the written consent of all the owners of the land to be used for that purpose be first filed in the auditor's office; and if it is shown to the satisfaction of the board of supervisors, that the proposed highway is of sufficient public importance to be opened and worked by the public, they shall make an order establishing the same, from which time only shall it be regarded as a highway. [R., § 858; C., '51, § 553.]

1448. When survey necessary. 958. If a survey for the establishment of the highway named in the preceding section is necessary, the board of supervisors, before ordering such survey, may require the parties asking for the establishment of such highway to pay, or secure the payment of, the expenses of such survey. [R., § 859; C., '51, § 554.]

APPEALS.

1449. From what taken; how perfected. 959. Any applicant for damages claimed to be caused by the establishment of any highway may appeal from the final decision of the board of supervisors to the circuit [district] court of the county in which the land lies; but notice of such appeal must be served on the county auditor within twenty days after the decision is made. If the highway has been established on condition that the petitioners therefor pay the damages, such notice shall be served on the four persons first named in the petition for the highway, if there are that many who reside in the county. [R., § 873.]

Appeal: The propriety of the action, with reference to the allowance of damages, can only properly be raised by appeal: McCune v. Swafford, 5-552; Warner v. Doran, 30-521.

Upon an appeal, not only the amount of damages, but also the right to any damages, may be determined: Spray v. Thompson, 9-40.

An appeal brings up nothing for determination except the claim for damages. The action of the board of supervisors in establishing the road cannot be reviewed: Pollard v. Dickinson County, 71-438.

An appeal lies from the action of the board entirely rejecting a claim for damages: Vandeeve v. Clark, 37-184.

Therefore, held, that an appeal from the action of the board in disallowing a claim for damages on the ground that claimant was not the owner of the land, but in which it was expressly stated that no objection was made to the amount of the damages assessed by the jury, properly raised the question as to the correctness of the action of the board in rejecting the claim for damages: Ibid.

An order for the establishment of the highway conditioned upon the payment of damages is such a final order as may be appealed from. It is not necessary to wait for the unconditional order which follows the payment of the damages: McNichols v. Wilson, 42-385.

The fact that petitioners for the highway have renounced all right thereto that they might have by the action of the board in making the location conditional upon their payment of the damages assessed does not defeat the right of the claimant to prosecute his appeal from the assessment of damages, where petitioners do not entirely retire from the controversy and renounce all benefits which may arise from any action in the premises: Ibid.

1450. By petitioner. 960. An appeal may also be taken by the petitioner for the highway as to amount of damages, if the establishment of the highway has been made conditional upon his paying the damages, by his serving notice of such appeal on the county auditor, and applicant for damages within twenty days after the decision of the board of supervisors, and filing a bond in the office of such auditor, with sureties to be approved by him, conditioned for the payment of all costs occasioned by such appeal unless the appellant fails to recover a more favorable judgment in the circuit [district] court than was allowed him by such board. [R., § 874.]

If the notice is not served upon the applicant within proper time he may appear and move to dismiss the appeal, and such appearance will not confer jurisdiction nor waive

Under previous statutory provisions allowing the county auditor to act in the matter of establishing highways, subject to the final approval of the board of supervisors, held, that an appeal would not lie from the orders of such auditor, but only from the final action of the board: Newell v. Perkins, 39-244.

As to reviewing the action of the board by certiorari, see notes to § 1436.

Notice of appeal: The twenty days within which notice of appeal may be served commences to run from the time of making the conditional order for the establishment of the highway, upon payment of damages, and not from the making of the final unconditional order, after such damages have been paid: McNichols v. Wilson, 42-385.

Where a claim for damages is disallowed by the commissioners, and its payment is not required by the order establishing the highway, it is not required that service of notice of an appeal by the claimant be made upon the petitioners: Raymond v. Clay County, 68-130.

There does not appear to be any express provision as to the time which shall elapse between the service of notice of appeal and the first day of the term at which the case shall be deemed triable, but it seems it should be at least ten days: Scott v. Lasell, 71-180.

Appearance: Where the notice is served within twenty days, and the only objection is as to the sufficiency of proof of such service, an appearance and objection to the service confers jurisdiction: Labbey v. McIntosh, 60-329.

If the notice is not served upon the applicant within proper time he may appear and move to dismiss the appeal, and such appearance will not confer jurisdiction nor waive his rights: Spurrier v. Wirtner, 48-486.

his rights (explaining Robertson v. Eldora R. & Coal Co., 27-245): Spurrier v. Wirtner, 48-486.

1451. Transcript filed. 961. In the cases contemplated in the two preceding sections, the auditor shall, within ten days after the notices aforesaid are served and filed in his office, make out and file in the office of the clerk of said court, a transcript of the papers on file in his office and proceedings of the board in relation to such damages. The claimant for damages shall be plaintiff.

iff, and the petitioner for the highway defendant, except the damages have been ordered paid out of the county treasury, in which case the county shall be defendant. [R., § 873.]

Parties to the appeal: It is not proper to make the road itself defendant in the appeal: Myers v. Old Mission, etc., Road, 7-315.

The county is not a proper party to the appeal unless the damages have been ordered paid out of the county treasury, in which case the statute provides that the county shall be defendant: Deaton v. Polk County, 9-594.

Although a claim for damages is disallowed and no order for its payment made in establishing the road, the county should be made defendant on an appeal by the claimant: Raymond v. Clay County, 68-130.

Transcript: The fact that the transcript is made out and filed with the clerk of the court before the service of the notice of appeal upon the auditor is a mere irregularity, in no manner affecting the jurisdiction of the court: Libbey v. McIntosh, 60-329.

Failure of the appellant to file notice of appeal with the auditor after the service thereof, until there are not ten days remaining between the service of notice and the first day of the next term, will not prevent the cause being triable at such term. It is the duty of the appellant to file the notice in time to allow a transcript to be filed: Scott v. Lasell, 71-180.

Filing fee: A rule of court providing that, upon failure of appellant to pay the filing fee, appellee might pay it and have the appeal dismissed, held not applicable where the appellant had paid the fee before motion to dismiss by appellee was filed: Cole v. Laub, 35-590.

The proceeding in which an appeal is taken may be denominated a civil case within the rule providing for payment of filing fee by appellant on the first day of the term: Scott v. Lasell, 71-180.

1452. Proceedings in court. 962. The amount of damages the claimant is entitled to, shall be ascertained by said circuit [district] court in the same manner as in actions by ordinary proceedings, and the amount so ascertained shall be entered of record, but no judgment shall be rendered therefor. The amount thus ascertained shall be certified by the clerk to the board of supervisors, who shall, thereafter, proceed as if such amount had been by them allowed the claimant as damages.

Trial of the appeal: The owner of the land is entitled to have his damages assessed anew upon appeal although no damages whatever were allowed by the appraisers: Deaton v. Polk County, 9-594.

The question as to the amount of damages may be tried de novo upon appeal: Prosser v. Wapello County, 18-327.

The appellant is entitled to a new assessment of his damages by jury upon the appeal: Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153.

It is not necessary, in order to secure a hearing, upon appeal, as to the amount of damages, that a motion should have been made before the board to set aside the report of the appraisers: Sigafoos v. Talbot, 25-214.

It is necessary that the party claiming damages on the appeal, if he seeks to recover damages to the tract out of which the right of way is taken, should show that he is owner thereof, and if the evidence fails to establish title in him he can recover only for such immediate and necessary damages as result to him as an occupant of the land: Costello v. Burke, 63-361.

The damages herein referred to must be estimated with reference to the extent of the interest of the claimant in the property from which the appropriation is to be made, and the claimant must therefore allege and prove the extent of his interest: Ibid.

Damages must be ascertained, on appeal, in view of the rights of the parties as settled by the supervisors; and where by subsequent action of the supervisors, after the determination of his damages, the amount of damages was increased, held, that the claimant might, by amended pleadings on the appeal, claim additional damages. The claimant may on appeal plead as in an action by ordinary proceedings, and therefore he is entitled to amend so as to ask more than was claimed before the board: Pollard v. Dickinson County, 71-438.

If, pending an application to establish a road, and after the damages have been assessed, a land owner erects a fence upon the proposed highway, he cannot have damages for the removal of such fence allowed on appeal: Holton v. Butler, 22-557.

Final action after determining damages on appeal: When the amount of damages has been fixed by the trial of the appeal, the board of supervisors may proceed to final action as if that amount had been originally allowed by them: McNichols v. Wilson, 42-385.

If the amount of damages is increased on the appeal, the board may reconsider their action and refuse to establish the highway: Nelson v. Goodykoontz, 47-32.

The county cannot be prejudiced by the recovery by claimant on an appeal of damages greater than allowed by the supervisors, for the reason that the road cannot be established until the trial of the appeal. The supervisors may make the establishment of the road conditioned on the payment of the damages: Polard v. Dickinson County, 71-438.

1453. Costs. 963. If the appeal has been taken by the claimant, the petitioner for the highway, or the county must pay the costs occasioned by the appeal; but the county shall pay only when the damages have been ordered to be paid out of the county treasury. If the petitioner for the highway appeals, he must pay the costs, unless the claimant recovers a less amount than was allowed him by the board, in which case the costs shall be paid by the claimant. Judgment shall be rendered in accordance with the foregoing provisions. [R., § 873.]

The recovery of costs by the claimant upon his appeal is not made contingent upon whether the amount of his damages is increased by the court: Hawrahan v. Fox, 47-102.

Neither the petitioner nor the county can be made to pay the costs of the appeal until the appeal has been determined and the costs have been adjudged. The appellant should advance the filing fee: Scott v. Lasell, 71-180.

LOST FIELD-NOTES.

1454. Resurvey. 964. When by reason of the loss or destruction of the field-notes of the original survey, or in cases of defective surveys or record, or in cases of such numerous alterations of any highway since the original survey, that its location cannot be accurately defined by the papers on file in the proper office, the board of supervisors of the proper county may, if they deem it necessary, cause such highway to be resurveyed, platted, and recorded as hereinafter provided. [R., § 913.]

Where the necessary steps were taken to establish a road, but the clerk failed to record the field-notes, and no record of the final order was found, held, a proper case for the supervisors to order a resurvey: Balke v. Bailey, 20-124. But where a highway has never been in fact established a resurvey thereof is of no effect: Carey v. Weitgenant, 52-660.

The board cannot vary the line of road as originally surveyed to conform it to a way acquired by prescription. The alterations referred to in the provisions as to resurvey have reference to such changes in the road as have occurred by orders or surveys made after the original survey, and which tend to such confusion that the location of the road is not accurately defined or pointed out by the record: Blair v. Boesch, 59-554.

But it is competent for the board to hear evidence as to where the original survey was actually made, and being satisfied from the evidence that the resurvey is upon the line as originally surveyed, to approve and confirm such survey, although it does not conform to the original field-notes: Ibid.

Proceedings for resurvey will be void where there was no original establishment of the highway sought to be resurveyed. It is not the office of such proceedings to cure original proceedings which were fatally defective: Barnes v. Fox, 61-18.

Where a portion of the record of the establishment of a highway was lost, and the resurvey showed the highway to be not on the section line, as indicated by a portion of the record remaining, and the evidence showed that the resurvey corresponded with the original survey, held, that the resurvey was properly confirmed: Ackerson v. Van Vleck, 72-57.

1456. Proceedings; record. 966. In case objection shall be made by any person claiming to be injured by the survey made, the board of supervisors shall have full power to hear and determine upon the matter, and may, if deemed advisable, order a change to be made in the survey. Upon the final determination of the board, or in case no objection be made at the term named in the notice of the survey, they shall approve of the same and cause the field-notes and plat of the highway to be recorded as in case of the establishment or alteration of highways, and thereafter such records shall be received by all courts as conclusive proof of the establishment and existence of such highway, according to such survey and plat. [R., § 915.]

1457. Highway plat book. 967. If the same has not been heretofore done in any other manner, the county auditor shall, within six months after this code takes effect, cause every highway in his county, the legal existence of which is shown by the records and files of his office, to be platted, in a book to be obtained and kept for that purpose, and known as the "highway plat book." Each township shall be platted separately, on a scale of not less than four inches to the mile, and such auditor shall have all changes in or additions to the highways legally established, immediately entered upon said plat book, with appropriate references to the files in which the papers relating to the same may be found.

1458. Copy furnished. 968. Within the time aforesaid, the auditor shall furnish to the township clerks a certified copy of said plat book, so far as the same relates to their respective townships, which shall be carefully preserved in the office of said clerks. The auditor shall notify said clerks of all changes made in the plat book relative to the highways, so far as the same relate to their townships respectively; on receipt of which, said clerks shall immediately make corresponding changes on the maps in their respective offices. [R., § 889.]

[Clerk to furnish supervisor with plat of his district: See § 1484.]

SIDEWALKS ON HIGHWAYS.

1459. By owner. 20 G. A., ch. 147, § 1. It shall be lawful for any owner of land adjoining or abutting on a public road or highway outside the limits of any city or town, to build and construct a sidewalk on and along said highway for his own use and for the use of the public traveling on foot; said sidewalk shall not exceed four feet in width and shall be located along the side of the highway and may be constructed of any material suitable for a foot walk, provided, that said sidewalk shall not be so constructed as to interfere with the proper use and employment of any lands or premises along which it passes, and provided further, that the persons building such walk shall keep the same in repair, and shall be liable for all injuries occasioned by his failure to keep the same in repair.

1460. Penalty for injury to. 20 G. A., ch. 147, § 2. Any person who shall destroy, injure, or drive or ride upon a sidewalk, so constructed or heretofore constructed, except at highway crossings, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than five dollars for each offense, and shall be liable to the party who has built or maintained said sidewalk for all damages.

CONSTRUCTION OF CATTLE-WAYS.

1461. Across highway. 16 G. A., ch. 111, § 1. Upon application by any person to the board of supervisors of any county for permission to construct a cattle-way across, over or under any public highway, the board may grant the same; provided, said cattle-way shall not interfere with the travel upon such highway; but the person who applied for such cattle-way shall construct the same at his own expense and be responsible for all damages that may arise from its construction or from the same not being kept in good condition, and that the grade of the highway over the cattle-way shall not exceed one foot in ten.

1462. Repairs. 16 G. A., ch. 111, § 2. If the person on whose land such cattle-way is constructed, fails to keep the same in good repair, then it shall be the duty of the road supervisor to make all repairs necessary and charge the same to the owner of the land upon which such cattle-way is constructed, and upon his refusal or failure to pay, the supervisor shall recover the same in an action brought in his own name in any court having competent jurisdiction; which money when collected, shall be expended for improving or repairing the public highway, in the road district where such cattle-way is constructed. Provided, that no person shall construct any cattle-way so as to obstruct the freedom of the public in watering at any running stream.

1463. Township trustees. 22 G. A., ch. 92, § 1. Any person or persons desiring to build a cattle-way across a public highway under any township bridge may apply to the board of trustees of the township wherein such bridge is located at the regular April meeting of such board. The said board of trustees may grant such right upon such application and prescribe such conditions in regard to the maintenance of said bridge and cattle-way as they may deem just and proper.

CHAPTER 2.

OF WORKING HIGHWAYS.

1464. Powers and duties of trustees. 969. The township trustees of each township shall meet on the first Monday in April, or as soon thereafter as the assessment book is received by the township clerk, and on the first Monday in October in each year. At the April meeting said trustees shall determine:—

1. Upon the amount of property tax to be levied for highways, bridges, guide-boards, plows, scrapers, tools, and machinery adapted to the construction and repair of highways, and for the payment of any indebtedness previously incurred for highway purposes, and levy the same, which shall not be less than one nor more than five mills on the dollar on the amount of the township assessment for that year;

2. Whether any portion of said tax shall be paid in labor, and, if so, what portion may be so paid;

3. Upon the amount that will be allowed for a day's labor done by a man, and by a man and team, on the highway;

4. At the October meeting, said trustees shall divide their respective townships into such number of highway districts as they may deem necessary for the public good, and, at said meeting, they shall settle with the township clerk and supervisors of highways. [R., §§ 880, 891, 895; C., '51, § 568; 9 G. A., ch. 96, § 5; ch. 163, § 1; 12 G. A., ch. 100, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 20.]

A road district cannot be sued: White v. Road District, 9-203; Wilson v. Jefferson County, 13-181.

The power of the trustees to divide the township into road districts does not extend to such portions as are embraced within a city. And they have no power to levy a road tax in such portions. The city council have control of the highways and streets of the city (§ 726): Marks v. Woodbury County, 47-455; Hawley v. Hoops, 12-506.

As incorporated towns are given power to provide for grading and repair of their streets (§ 624), they must have control over such streets, and the road supervisor and township trustees have no authority over them: Clark v. Epworth, 56-462.

Road tax may be levied upon the property of railway companies, although such property is not placed upon the assessor's book: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168, 177.

1465. General township fund; clerk to give bond; custody of implements. 970. The trustees shall set apart such portion of the tax specified in the preceding section of this chapter, as they deem necessary for the purpose of purchasing the tools and machinery and paying for the guide-boards mentioned in said section, and the same shall constitute a general township fund; and such trustees shall require the township clerk to give bond in such sum as they deem proper, conditioned as the bonds of the county officers, which bond, and the sureties thereon, shall be approved by said trustees. Said clerk shall take charge of and properly preserve and keep in repair such tools, implements, and machinery as may be purchased with said general township fund, and shall have authority to determine at what time the supervisors of the several districts may have the custody and use of the same or any part thereof, and shall be responsible for the safe keeping of the same, when not in the custody of some one of the supervisors for use in working the highways in his district, and shall receive such compensation as the trustees shall provide to be paid out of such fund. [9 G. A., ch. 163, § 1; 12 G. A., ch. 100, § 6.]

The "general fund" is the money set apart for that purpose as here contemplated, and does not embrace money received by the clerk from the county treasurer under § 1488: Henderson v. Simpson, 45-519.

The trustees have no authority to contract indebtedness for the purchase of tools and machinery, until a tax is levied and set apart for that purpose. "Indebtedness previously contracted," in the preceding section, does not refer to such indebtedness for tools and machinery. The trustees may, after the tax is levied and set apart, anticipate the collection of the tax and purchase tools and machinery upon credit: Wells v. Grubb, 58-384; Hanks v. North, 58-396; Revolving Scraper Co. v. Tuttle, 61-423.

The clerk might maintain an action for funds belonging to his township in the hands of third persons. If he deposits such funds in his individual name, without notice to the banker of their character, such act amounts to a conversion; the deposit belongs to the clerk individually, and if seized by garnishee process under attachment on his individual debt, without notice of its character, cannot be recovered back as public funds: Long v. Emsley, 57-11.

The township clerk is the proper party to bring an action against a road supervisor for moneys received by him belonging to the general township fund which he fails to pay over: Wells v. Stomback, 59-376.

And it seems that in such case the clerk might sue on the supervisor's bond: Kellogg v. Bare, 62-468.

As to taxation of property within a city or town for road purposes, see § 677.

1466. Control of fund. 971. The trustees shall order and direct the expenditure of the general township fund.

ROAD TAXES.

1467. How levied and paid out. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 1. The board of supervisors of each county may, at the time of levying taxes for other purposes, levy a tax of not more than one mill on the dollar of the assessed value of the taxable property in their county, which tax shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner as other taxes are collected and shall be known as the county road fund, and shall be paid out only on the order of the board of supervisors for work done on the highways of the county, in such places as the board shall determine, and the county treasurer shall receive the same compensation for collecting this tax as he does for collecting corporation taxes; Provided, that the amount levied by the board of township trustees under section nine hundred and sixty-nine of the code [§ 1464] together with the amount thus levied shall not be in excess of five mills.

1468. Expenditure. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 2. The board of supervisors shall, at their regular meeting in April of each year, determine from the auditor's and treasurer's books, the amount of money collected and credited to said road tax fund. They shall, also, determine the manner in which said tax shall be expended, whether by contract or otherwise.

1469. Consolidation of road districts. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 4. The board of township trustees, may, at their regular meeting in April, 1884, or at any regular April meeting thereafter, on petition of a majority of the voters of said township consolidate the several road district[s] in the township into one highway district: Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the trustees from again subdividing the township into subdistricts and returning to the present plan of road work, at any regular April meeting, after two years' trial of the plan provided by this act.

1470. Collection of tax. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 5. The trustees may order the township highway tax for the succeeding year paid in money and have the same collected by the county treasurer the same as other taxes.

1471. Letting of work by contract. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 6. In all cases where the township shall have organized into one highway district, as contemplated in section four of this act [§ 1469], the board of township trustees shall order and direct the expenditure of all the highway funds and labor belonging or owing to the township; and to this end the trustees may let by contract to the lowest responsible bidder (should they deem him competent to the proper performance of such work) any part, or all of the work on the highways for that year, in the township, or they may appoint a township superintendent of highways, with one or more assistants, should they deem it best so to do, to superintend all or any part of such work, subject always to the direction of the township trustees; provided only, the said trustees shall not incur any indebtedness for such purposes, unless the same has been, or shall at the time be, provided for by an authorized levy.

1472. Expenditure of tax. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 7. The trustees shall cause both the property and poll road tax belonging to the township, to be equitably and judiciously expended for highway purposes in the township highway district, and shall cause the highways to be kept in as good condition as the means at their command will admit of.

1473. Noxious weeds. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 8. The trustees shall cause the noxious weeds growing on the highways in their township to be cut twice a year, if deemed necessary to exterminate the same, and have them cut at such times as to prevent their growing to seed; and for this purpose, the trustees may allow any land owner a reasonable compensation for destroying such weeds on the highways abutting his lands and have him credited for the same on his road tax for that year.

1474. Term and compensation of superintendent. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 9. The trustees shall fix the term of office and per diem of the superintendent of highways and his assistants, should such be employed; provided, the superintendent shall not be hired for more than one year at a time and his per diem shall not exceed three dollars; and that the contract shall be conditioned so that the trustees may dispense with his services at any time, when in their judgment it shall be for the best interests of the township so to do.

1475. Expenditure of tax. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 10. The trustees shall cause at least seventy-five per cent of the township highway tax to be properly expended for highway purposes by the fifteenth day of July each year.

1476. Highway funds consolidated. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 11. In all cases where the one highway district plan shall be adopted, the highway funds belonging to the several road districts in the township, prior to the change, shall be placed to the credit of the general township highway fund, and all claims for work done or material furnished for road purposes, and unsettled for prior to the change, shall be paid out of such funds.

1477. Qualification of officers. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 12. The trustees shall require the township clerk, contractor, and superintendent, contemplated in this act, each to qualify, as other township officers, and to execute a bond with approved sureties, for twice the amount of money likely to come into their hands, respectively, by reason of this act.

1478. Compensation of trustees, treasurer and clerk. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 13. The trustees shall receive the same compensation per day for time necessarily spent in looking after the highways, as they do for other township business; the county treasurer shall receive the per cent. for collecting the highway taxes contemplated in this act that he does for collecting corporation taxes; and the township clerk shall receive two per cent. of all the money coming into his hands by reason of this act, and by him paid out for road purposes.

1480. Powers and duties of contractors and superintendents. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 15. The powers, duties, and accountability imposed on highway supervisors, so far as consistent with this act, shall apply with equal force to contractors, superintendents and assistants contemplated in this act.

1481. Township system takes effect. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 16. In all cases where the one highway district for the township shall have been adopted, it shall be competent for the township trustees to designate when the same shall take effect as to the working of the roads.

1482. Adoption of one district plan. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 17. Sections four to fifteen inclusive, of this act [§§ 1469-1480] shall apply and be in force only in such townships as adopt the one highway district plan provided for in this act.

1483. 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 18. All acts and parts of acts so far as inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

TOWNSHIP CLERK.

1484. Furnish plat. 972. The township clerk shall furnish each supervisor, to be by him transferred to his successor in office, with a copy of so much of the map or plat furnished such clerk by the auditor as relates to the highways in the district of such supervisor, and, from time to time, mark thereon the changes in or additions to such highways as the same are certified to him by the auditor. [R., § 890; C., '51, §§ 573-74.]

This map is not essential to the authority of the supervisor and gives him no additional power: Mosier v. Vincent, 34-478. It is in no legal sense a process, and is no protection to him in opening a highway indicated thereon: Campbell v. Kennedy, 34-494. Copy of plat book for the township to be furnished by the auditor to the township clerk: See § 1458.

1486. Collection of tax. 974. The township clerk shall make an entry upon such tax list showing what it is, for what highway district, and for what year, and shall attach to the list his warrant under his hand, in general terms, requiring the supervisor of such district to collect the taxes therein charged as herein provided; and no informality in the above requirements shall render any proceedings for the collection of such taxes illegal. The clerk is hereby required to cause such lists to be delivered to the proper supervisors of his township within thirty days after the levy, and take receipts therefor; and such list shall be full and sufficient authority for the supervisor to collect all taxes therein charged against resident property holders in his district. [R., § 893.]

1487. Delinquent tax certified. 975. The township clerk shall, on or before the second Monday in October in each year, make out a certified list of all land, town lots, and personal property on which the highway tax has not been paid, and the amount of tax charged on each parcel of land, town lot, or personal property, designating the district in which the same is situated, and transmit the same to the auditor, who shall enter the amount of tax to each piece of land or town lot and person taxed for personal property, in the column ruled for that purpose, the same as other taxes, and deliver the same to the county treasurer, charging him with the same, which shall be collected by such treasurer in the same manner that county taxes are collected; and in case the township clerk shall fail or neglect to make such return, he shall forfeit and pay to the use of the township, for highway purposes, a sum equal to the amount of tax on said land, which may be collected by suit on his official bond before any court having competent jurisdiction. [R., § 898; 9 G. A., ch. 96, §§ 7, 8; 12 G. A., ch. 76.]

Irregularities in the making of returns by the township clerk, or in the manner of placing the taxes upon the treasurer's books, will not render the tax invalid: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153, 177; Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39-124; Same v. Carroll County, 39-151, 154.

1488. Taxes paid to clerk. 976; 22 G. A., ch. 45. The county treasurer shall, on the last Monday in April and October in each year, pay to the township clerk all the highway taxes belonging to his township which are at such times in his hands, taking the duplicate receipts of such clerk therefor, one of which shall be delivered by such treasurer, on or before the first Monday in May and November in each year, to the trustees. [R., § 910.]

These taxes when collected become no part of the county fund and cannot be appropriated or disbursed by the county. If illegally collected, they cannot be refunded to the tax payers out of the county revenue, and the county is not liable in an action for their recovery: Stone v. Woodbury County, 51-522.

The clerk may maintain an action for funds belonging to his township in the hands of third persons. If he deposits the funds in his individual name without notice to the banker of their character, such act amounts to conversion and the deposit belongs to him individually, and if seized by garnishment process under attachment on his individual debt, without notice as to the character of the fund, it cannot be recovered back: Long v. Emsley, 57-11.

The township clerk is the proper party to bring suit on the supervisor's bond for failure to account for taxes. Such duty does not pertain to the trustees: Wells v. Stomback, 59-376; Keller v. Bare, 62-468.

Road taxes collected by the county treasurer and paid over to the township clerk, except as far as they belong to the general fund, are to be distributed in the same manner as other road taxes, without any special action of the township trustees: Henderson v. Simpson, 45-519.

A road supervisor who fails to pay over the proportion of the road taxes collected by him, which has been by the trustees apportioned to the general fund, is liable therefor in an action on his bond, although he may have expended for road purposes all the money collected by him: Wells v. Stomback, 59-376.

1489. Specify district. 18 G. A., ch. 36, § 1. It shall be the duty of the auditor to provide a column which shall show the road districts to which the highway taxes belong, as transmitted by the township clerks, according to section nine hundred and seventy-five of the code of 1873 [§ 1487].

1490. Statement. 18 G. A., ch. 36, § 2. It shall be the duty of the county treasurer, when he pays to the township clerks highway taxes, according to section nine hundred and seventy-six [§ 1488], to furnish, at each time and to each clerk, a statement showing the road district or districts to which it belongs.

SUPERVISOR — POWER, DUTIES.

1491. Qualification; exemption. 977. The supervisor must reside in the district for which he is elected or appointed, and no person shall be required to serve as supervisor who is exempt from performing labor on the highway. [R., § 881.]

The township trustees may redistrict the township, and if by such redistricting the supervisor of the district becomes a resident of another district than that for which he was elected, his office becomes vacant: Mauck v. Lock, 70-266.

A supervisor is subject to the same liability for improper or careless exercise of his powers as a city or town is in relation to its streets; and held that he was personally liable for damages to an adjacent land owner resulting from the diversion of a stream of water from his land, by reason of alteration in the highway made by the supervisor: McCord v. High, 24-336.

A road supervisor may be guilty of trespass in removing an obstruction, as, for instance, a dwelling-house, if the act is not done for the purpose of opening the highway, but for the malicious purpose of injuring the owner: Wilding v. Hough, 37-446.

As incorporated towns are given power to provide for grading and repairing their streets, they must have control over such streets, and the road supervisors and township trustees have no power over them: Clark v. Epworth, 56-462.

A road supervisor may be restrained by injunction from repairing the highway in such a manner as to interfere with the rights or wishes of an adjoining owner: Bills v. Beltnap, 36-583.

Further as to removing shade-trees, see § 1503.

1492. Bond; vacancy. 978: 16 G. A., ch. 167. Each supervisor shall be required to give bond in such sum and with such security as the township clerk may deem requisite, and conditioned that he will faithfully and impartially perform all the duties devolving upon him, and appropriate all moneys that may come into his hands by virtue of his office according to law, and in case of a vacancy occurring in any highway district within a township, the township clerk shall fill such vacancy by appointment. [R., § 884.]

The trustees have no authority to receive the taxes collected by the supervisor and are not the proper parties to bring suit on his bond for failure to account for such taxes. Such suit should be brought by the clerk: Keller v. Bare, 62-468.

1493. Notice to; penalty for refusal to serve. 979. The township clerk shall notify each supervisor within five days after his election or appointment, and if he shall fail to appear before said township clerk, unless prevented by sickness, within ten days, and give bond and take the oath of office, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of five dollars, and in case of his failing or refusing to pay the same, his successor in office shall collect the said amount by suit or otherwise, and apply the same to the repairing of highways in his district. [R., § 883.]

1494. To post notices. 980. The supervisors shall, within ten days after receiving the tax list specified in sections nine hundred and seventy-three and nine hundred and seventy-four [§§ 1485, 1486], post up in three conspicuous places within his district, written notices of the amount of highway tax assessed to each tax payer in said district. [R., § 894; 9 G. A., ch. 163, § 2; 12 G. A., ch. 100, § 3.]

1495. How tax expended. 981. The supervisor shall cause all tax collected by him to be expended for the purposes specified in section nine hundred and sixty-nine of this code [§ 1464], on or before the first day of October of that year, except the portion set apart for a general township fund as provided in said section, which shall be by the supervisor paid over to the township clerk from time to time as collected, and his receipt taken therefor. [9 G. A., ch. 163, § 3; 12 G. A., ch. 100, § 4.]

A road supervisor who fails to pay over the proportion of the road taxes collected by him, which has been by the trustees apportioned to the general fund, is liable therefor in an action on his bond, although he may have expended for road purposes all the money collected by him: Wells v. Stomback, 59-376.

1496. Expended in each district. 982. The money tax levied upon the property in each district, except that portion set apart as a general township fund, whether collected by the supervisor or county treasurer, shall be expended for highway purposes in that district, and no part thereof shall be paid out or expended for the benefit of another district. [C., '51, § 578; 9 G. A., ch. 163, § 4; 12 G. A., ch. 100, § 5.]

Road tax collected by the county treasurer and paid over to the clerk, except so much thereof as belongs to the general fund (under § 1464), is to be distributed in the same manner as other road tax, without any special action of the trustees: Henderson v. Simpson, 45-519.

1497. Who to perform labor. 983. The supervisor shall require all able-bodied male residents of his district between the ages of twenty-one and forty-five, to perform two days' labor upon the highway between the first day of April and September of each year. [10 G. A., ch. 76, § 2; 12 G. A., ch. 100, § 9.]

1498. Notice of time and place; receipts. 984. The supervisor shall give at least three days' notice of the day or days and place designated to work the highways to all persons subject to work thereon, or who are charged with a highway tax within his district, and all persons so notified must meet said supervisor at such time and place with such tools, implements, and teams as the supervisor may designate, and shall labor diligently under the direction of the supervisor for eight hours each day; and for such two days' labor performed, the supervisor shall give to the person a certificate, which certificate shall be evidence that such person has performed labor on the public highway, and shall exempt such person from performing labor in payment of highway poll-tax in that or any other highway district for the same year. And the supervisor shall give any person who may perform labor in payment of his highway tax, if demanded, a receipt showing the amount of money earned by such labor, which shall be evidence of the payment of said tax to the amount specified in the receipt. [R., §§ 886, 896; C., '51, § 588.]

[The provisions of this section are modified as to hours, etc., by § 1479.]

A failure to notify the tax payer to work on the portion of his tax which may be paid in work will not authorize the restraining of the collection of the entire tax: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168, 177.

A man who is not able-bodied is not liable to the penalty for not appearing to work on the highway when summoned. The fact that he does not make known his condition when summoned, or sends a substitute who is rejected as incompetent, will not deprive him of the benefit of his exemption: Martin v. Gadd, 31-75.

1499. Penalty for failure to attend or work. 985; 16 G. A., ch. 21. Each person liable to perform labor on the highway as poll tax, who shall fail or neglect to attend, either in person or by satisfactory substitute, at the time and place appointed, with the designated tool, implement, or team, having had three days' notice thereof, or having attended, shall spend his time in idleness, or disobey the supervisor, or fail to furnish said supervisor, within five days thereafter, some satisfactory excuse for not attending, shall forfeit and pay to said supervisor the sum of three dollars for each day's delinquency; and in case of failure to pay such forfeit within ten days, the supervisor shall recover the same by action in the name of the supervisor; and no property or wages belonging to said person shall be exempt to the defendant on execution; said judgment to be obtained before any justice of the peace in the proper township, which money, when collected, shall be expended on the public highway. [R., § 887.]

1500. Compensation of supervisor. 986; 20 G. A., ch. 200, § 3. The supervisor shall be allowed the sum of two dollars per day for each day's labor, including the time necessarily spent in notifying the hands and making out his return, which sum shall be paid out of the highway fund, after deducting his two days' work. When there is no money in the hands of the clerk with which to pay the said supervisor, he shall be entitled to receive a certificate for the amount of labor performed, which certificate shall be received in payment of his own highway tax for any succeeding year. [R., § 888; C., '51, § 2547; 9 G. A., ch. 163, § 5; 10 G. A., ch. 76, § 1; 12 G. A., ch. 100, § 7.]

1501. Report. 987. The supervisors of the several districts of each township shall report to the township clerk on the first Monday of April and October of each year, which report shall embrace the following items:

1. The names of all persons in his district required to perform labor on the public highway, and the amount performed by each;

2. The names of all persons against whom suits have been brought, as required by section nine hundred and eighty-five [§ 1499], and the amount collected of each;

3. The names of all persons who have paid their property highway tax in labor, and the amount paid by each;

4. The names of all persons who have paid their property tax in money, and the amount paid by each;

5. A correct list of all non-resident lands and town lots on which the highway tax has been paid, and the amount paid by each;

6. A correct list of all non-resident lands and town lots on which the highway tax has not been paid, and the amount of tax on each piece;

7. The amount of all moneys coming into his hands by virtue of his office, and from what sources;

8. The manner in which moneys coming into his hands by virtue of his office have been expended, and the amount, if any, in his possession;

9. The number of days he has been faithfully employed in the discharge of his duty;

10. The condition of the highways in his district, and such other items and suggestions as said supervisor may wish to make, which report shall be signed and sworn to by said supervisor and filed by the township clerk in his office. [R., § 897; C., '51, § 580; 9 G. A., ch. 163, § 2.]

1502. Tax certified and collected. 988. If it appears from such report, that any person has failed to perform the two days' labor required, or any part thereof, and that the supervisor has neglected to collect the amount in money required to be paid in case of such failure, the clerk shall add the amount required to be paid in case of such failure to such person's property tax, and certify the same as required in section nine hundred and seventy-five [§ 1487], and the auditor shall enter the same on the proper tax list, and the treasurer shall collect the same as required in said section nine hundred and seventy-five.

1503. Shade trees; timber; drainage. 989; 16 G. A., ch. 29, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 87, § 1. The supervisor is not permitted to cut down or injure any tree growing by the wayside which does not obstruct the highway, and which stands in front of any town lot, inclosure, or cultivated field or any ground reserved for any public use, where such tree is intended to be preserved for shade or ornament, by the proprietor of the land, on or adjacent to which the tree is standing; and it shall not be lawful for the supervisor to enter upon any inclosed or uninclosed lands for the purpose of taking timber therefrom without first receiving permission from the owner or owners of said lands, nor to destroy or injure the ingress or egress to any property, or to turn the natural drainage of the surface water to the injury of the adjoining owners. [R., § 901; C., '51, § 587.]

Shade trees which do not obstruct the highway, and the removal of which is not necessary to properly improve it, are not to be removed in opposition to the wishes of an adjoining owner on whose portion of the highway the trees are growing: Bills v. Belknap, 36-583; Everett v. Council Bluffs, 46-66.

Shade trees at the side of the highway which would not obstruct or interfere with the traveled track, if it were located in the middle of the highway, should be permitted to stand: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

Where a hedge was planted after a highway was in use, and for the purpose of fencing between a field and the highway, held, that the planting and maintenance of the hedge amounted to a dedication of the land outside of the hedge for the purpose of the highway, although at the time the hedge was planted a fence for its protection was maintained outside of the hedge: Ibid.

1504. Damages from unsafe bridge or highway. 990; 17 G. A., ch. 52. When notified in writing that any bridge or any portion of the public highway is unsafe, the supervisor shall be liable for all damages resulting from the unsafe or impassable condition of the highway or bridge, after allowing a reasonable time for repairing the same. And if there is in his district any bridge erected or maintained by the county, then, in that event, he shall, on such notice of the unsafe condition of such county bridge, as soon as he reasonably can, obstruct passage on such bridge and use strict diligence in notifying at least one member of the board of supervisors of his county in writing of the unsafe condition of such bridge; and if he fails so to obstruct and notify, he shall be liable for all damages growing out of the unsafe condition of such bridge, occurring between the time he is so notified and such time as he neglects in obstructing such passage; and any person who shall remove such obstruction shall be liable for all damages occurring to any person resulting from such removal. Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to relieve the county from liability for the defects of said bridge. [R., § 902; C., '51, § 582.]

The road supervisor is required to build only such bridges as can be built from the limited means at his disposal. Other bridges are to be deemed county bridges: Casey v. Tama County, 75-655.

It is not the duty of the supervisor to build bridges requiring a large expenditure of money, nor is he liable for failure to keep such bridges in repair when such repair would involve a considerable expense. Such matters are under the control of the board of supervisors: Wilson v. Jefferson Co., 13-181. And see § 402, ¶ 18 and notes.

1505. Extraordinary repairs. 991. For making such extraordinary repairs, the supervisor may call out any or all the able-bodied men of the district in which they are to be made, but not more than two days at one time without their consent, and persons so called out shall be entitled to receive a certificate from the supervisor, certifying the number of days' labor performed, which certificate shall be received in payment for highway tax for that or any succeeding year at the rate per day established for that year. [R., § 903; C., '51, §§ 583, 586.]

1506. Penalty. 992. If any able-bodied man, when duly summoned for any such purpose, fails to appear and labor diligently by himself or substitute, or send satisfactory excuse therefor, or to pay the value of such work in money at any time before suit is brought, he is liable to a fine of ten dollars, to be recovered by suit before any justice of the peace in the name of the supervisor, and for the use of the highway fund of the district. [R., § 904; C., '51, § 585.]

A man not able-bodied is not liable to the penalty here prescribed. The fact that he does not make known his condition when summoned, or sends a substitute who is rejected as incompetent, will not deprive him of the benefit of his exemption: Martin v. Gadd, 31-75.

1507. Obstructions removed. 993. The supervisor shall remove obstructions in the highways caused by fences or otherwise, but he must not throw down or remove fences which do not directly obstruct the travel upon the highway, until reasonable notice in writing, not exceeding six months, has been given to the owner of the land inclosed in part by such fence. [R., § 905; C., '51, § 594.]

The statutory provision as to notice regarding removal of obstructions is applicable in case of obstructions placed in a highway after it is opened, and a fence directly obstructing travel cannot be thrown down without notice, although the party maintaining it may be liable to indictment for obstructing the highway: Mostier v. Vincent, 34-478.

The reasonable notice required to be given by a supervisor in case of opening a highway is such notice and for such a length of time as, under all the facts and circumstances of the case, is reasonably proper to enable the party notified to perform the act which the notice is intended to give him opportunity to perform, and in the ordinary manner. It need not be six months in all cases: Blackburn v. Powers, 40-681.

The verdict in a particular case finding that a notice of three days for the removal of a fence was sufficient notice, held not reversible error in the absence of the evidence on which the jury acted: Mosher v. Vincent, 39-607.

The obstructions which the supervisor is authorized to remove in opening the highway are obstacles, impediments, or hindrances, or anything impeding progress thereon. They need not be such as to render the highway impassable: Patterson v. Vail, 43-142.

The supervisor may be compelled by mandamus to perform the duty of opening the highway as required by statute: Ibid.; Larkin v. Harris, 36-93.

Proof of a mutual mistake as to the line of a highway, as used, by which it varies from that intended, and that an obstruction in the highway, as used, is an attempt to correct such mistake, will make the obstruction legal: State v. Crow, 30-258.

If the right to use a way is acquired by the public, but its nature is such that the right cannot be exercised on account of natural obstacles, a person cannot be held guilty of the crime of obstructing such highway, as it cannot be said that the public are by his acts prevented from using it: State v. Shinkle, 40-131.

A party cannot be prevented by injunction from closing or obstructing a highway that is in such condition that it cannot be used by the general public: Prince v. McCoy, 40-533.

But where a highway was impassable as laid out, by reason of standing timber, and a track was used for the period of prescription, crossing the highway at different points, held, that the existence of such natural obstruction in the highway as laid out would not excuse the obstruction of the traveled track, whether upon the established highway or upon the line used by prescription: State v. McGee, 40-595.

Relief against unlawful obstruction: Equity will afford relief to one specially injured by the erection of an obstruction upon a highway, by directing and requiring its removal and enjoining its continuance. Such obstructions are public nuisances and will be abated and enjoined by a court of equity at the suit of a party aggrieved thereby: Hougham v. Harvey, 33-203.

An unlawful obstruction of a public highway is a public nuisance not generally actionable, and a private person has a right of action only when he suffers an injury distinct from the public as a consequence of the wrongful act: Ingram v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 38-669.

A party does not, in an action for mandamus, show himself entitled to have a public highway opened by showing that such highway is located near his lands, and that the public travel is upon his lands and not upon the highway. It would not follow that such travel would be upon the highway even if opened: Moon v. Cort, 43-503.

Criminal obstruction: The land owner is not liable to indictment for obstructing the highway by reason of his not removing fences where a newly established highway crosses his land, at least until he has had reasonable notice from the supervisor to do so: State v. Ratliff, 32-189.

Failure to remove an obstruction placed in a highway by another, for instance by a former owner, does not, at least in the absence of notice, constitute the offense of obstructing a highway: State v. Robinson, 52-228.

1508. Condition; guide-boards. 994. The supervisor shall keep the highway in as good condition as the funds at his disposal will permit, and shall place guide-boards at cross-roads and at the forks of the highways in his district; said boards to be made out of good timber, the same to be well painted and lettered, and placed upon good substantial hard-wood posts, to be set four feet in and to be at least eight feet above ground. [R., § 907; C., '51, § 577; 9 G. A., ch. 96, § 1.]

While the public have a right to the full width of the highway they cannot use it so as to injure adjoining property, and if the construction of a bridge at one side of the road would cause injury to the property on that side the supervisor may be required to build it in the center of the highway: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

The judgment of the road supervisor must govern as to the construction, etc., of the highway, and no one has a right to make a material change in his plans without being guilty of defacing the highway within the meaning of the statute (§ 5301): State v. Hunter, 68-447.

The acts of a supervisor in the exercise of his ministerial duties in the construction of bridges, etc., are subject to control by an action to enjoin the improper exercise of his powers: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

Threatened illegal action of a supervisor in opening a highway, removing fences, interfering with water-courses, etc., in the discharge of his official duty, may be restrained by injunction: Bolton v. McShane, 67-207.

1509. Canada thistles. 995. The supervisor of highways, when notified in writing that any Canada thistles are growing upon any vacant or non-resident lands or lots within his district, the owner, agent, or lessee of which is unknown, shall cause the same to be destroyed and make return in writing to the board of supervisors of his county, with a bill for his expenses or charges therefor, which shall be audited and allowed by said board and paid from the county fund; and the amount so paid shall be entered up and levied against the lands or lots on which said thistles have been destroyed, and collected by the county treasurer the same as other taxes and returned to the county fund. [14 G. A., ch. 66.]

[Supervisors or persons owning or occupying land, allowing Canada thistles to blossom or mature, punished: See § 5422.]

1510. Settlement. 996. The supervisors are required to meet the township trustees at their meeting on the first Monday in October in each year, at which time there shall be a settlement of the accounts of such supervisors connected with the highway fund, for putting up guide-boards and for any other services; and after payment of the supervisors, the trustees shall order such distribution of the fund in the hands of the township clerk, as they may deem expedient for highway purposes, and the clerk shall pay the same out as ordered by the trustees. [R., § 909; 9 G. A., ch. 96, § 2.]

The fund here referred to is the balance of the general fund provided by the trustees under § 1465, and does not include moneys coming into the clerk's hands from the county treasurer as taxes collected by the latter, except so far as such moneys properly belong to the general fund: Henderson v. Simpson, 45-519.

The clerk is the proper party to bring suit on the supervisor's bond for failure to account for taxes: Keller v. Bare, 62-468.

1511. Orders issued. 997. Should there be no money in the treasury on final settlement of the supervisors with the trustees, said trustees shall order the township clerk to issue orders for the amount due the supervisors. The orders so issued shall be numbered with the number of the district to which they belong and shall be received the same as money in the payment of highway tax in the district to which they are issued. [Same, § 3.]

Such orders are payable in money out of the general township fund. If such fund is not sufficient, the trustees may be compelled to levy a tax for their payment. The provision that they are receivable in payment of highway tax is merely an additional method of payment, and the supervisors cannot be compelled to secure payment in that way: Tobin v. Township of Emmetsburg, 52-81.

1512. Neglect to perform duty; penalty. 998. Any supervisor failing or neglecting to perform the duties required by this chapter, shall forfeit and pay for the use of the highway fund of his district the sum of ten dollars; the township clerk shall, in case of such failure or neglect, commence suit in his name for the collection of the same, before any justice of the peace within the proper township. [R., § 900; 9 G. A., ch. 96, § 4.]

1513. Hedges in highway. 999. Where any owner or occupant of land adjoining or abutting upon any highway may desire to plant a hedge upon the line of the same, he shall be allowed to build his fence upon such highway; but he shall not build the fence more than five feet within the outer line of said highway, and said fence may be built on both sides of all highways of fifty feet or more in width at the same time. Such owner or occupant shall not be allowed to occupy such highway as aforesaid for more than ten years, and not more than six months before such hedge shall be planted, and at the expiration of such time he shall remove such fence upon the order of the supervisor of the district where such highway is situated. [9 G. A., ch. 51.]

1514. Turning to right. 1000. Persons meeting each other on the public highways, shall give one-half of the same by turning to the right. All persons failing to observe the provisions of this section shall be liable to pay all damages resulting therefrom, together with a fine, not exceeding five dollars, which fine shall be appropriated to repairing the highways in the district where the violation occurred; but no prosecution shall be instituted except on complaint of the person wronged. [R., § 908.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF FERRIES AND BRIDGES.

BRIDGES.

1515. Part of highway; width. 1001. Bridges erected or maintained by the public, constitute parts of the highway, and must not be less than sixteen feet in width. [R., § 822.]

Bridges are a part of the highway: Brown v. Jefferson County, 16-339; and are therefore under the general supervision of the board of supervisors, under § 1410. They cannot be compelled by mandamus to build: The State v. Morris, 43-192.

As to liability of county for defects in county bridges, etc., see notes to § 402, ¶ 18.

The statutory provision as to the width of bridges is not to be construed to mean that a bridge is not required to be constructed under any circumstances more than sixteen feet in width. If the circumstances require that it shall be of greater width, and it is so constructed, the liability for defects therein will not be limited to sixteen feet but extend to the whole width: Rusch v. Davenport, 6-443.

The act of a board of supervisors in contracting for a bridge of less than the statutory width, though erroneous, is not void, and such error will not defeat a recovery by the other parties to the contract in an action thereon: Mallory v. Montgomery County, 48-681.

Bridges in a public highway ought to be broad enough to permit all farm machinery to be drawn over them, and for the passage of all vehicles and machinery in use which are drawn upon the public highways: Quinton v. Burton, 61-471.

1516. Fast driving. 1002. Any person riding or driving faster than a walk across any bridge maintained at the public charge, shall be subject to pay the following penalties: When the bridge is twenty-five feet in length, and does not exceed one hundred, the sum of one dollar for each offense; when it is over one hundred, and does not exceed two hundred feet in length, the sum of three dollars for each offense; where it is over two hundred, and does not exceed three hundred feet in length, the sum of five dollars for each offense; and the further additional sum of one dollar for each offense for every hundred feet in length in excess of three hundred, to be recovered by civil action in the name and for the county in which the bridge is situated. If the bridge is situated in more than one county the action is maintainable in or by either. [R., § 823; 9 G. A., ch. 112, § 1.]

TOLL-BRIDGES.

1517. How established. 1003. The board of supervisors may grant licenses for the erection of toll-bridges across any water-courses or other obstruction which justifies the establishment of such bridge, and which calls for an expenditure that cannot be met without serious inconvenience to the revenues of the county. In granting such licenses, preference shall be given to the owner of the land on which the bridge is proposed to be located, if he applies for the privilege, and is, in other respects, a competent person to erect such bridge. [R., § 1214; C., '51, § 726.]

If a person is given authority or license from the county to erect a toll-bridge, his failure to compensate the land owner for damages sustained on account of the property taken for the purpose of such erection would not warrant the land owner in tearing down and removing the bridge so erected. The remedy to the land owner would be complete and ample by legal proceedings: Beebe v. Stutsman, 5-271.

1518. License; right of way. 1004. When any corporation or individual shall obtain from the board of supervisors, license for the construction of a toll-bridge across any of the streams of this state, such corporation or individual may take and appropriate so much private property as shall be necessary for a right of way therefor and all approaches thereto, in such width as such corporation or individual may desire, not exceeding sixty feet. [12 G. A., ch. 145, §§ 1, 2.]

1519. Damages assessed. 1005. If the owner of the property over which such way extends shall refuse to grant the same, and the damages therefor cannot be settled by agreement, all damages which the owner, or any person having an interest in or improvement upon the property to be taken, will sustain by reason of the appropriation of such property, shall be assessed, and the right of way taken on the application of either party under the provisions of chapter three, of title ten, of this code. [12 G. A., ch. 145, § 3.]

1520. Between different counties or states. 1006. Where the extremities of the bridge lie in different counties, a license must be procured from each of such counties, and if different rates of toll are fixed by the different boards of supervisors, each has power to fix the rates of travel which is going from its own county. A similar principle shall be observed where only one of the extremities of the bridge is within this state. [R., § 1216; C., '51, § 728.]

1521. Limitation of license; tolls. 1007. Such licenses may be granted to continue for any period not exceeding fifty years, and the rate of toll may be fixed, in the first instance, in such a manner as to be unalterable within any stipulated period not exceeding ten years; after that time it shall be under the control of the board of supervisors. [R., § 1217; C., '51, § 729.]

1522. Exclusive privilege. 1008. The board of supervisors is also authorized to stipulate in the license, that no other bridge or ferry shall be permitted across the same obstruction within any distance not exceeding two miles of such bridge, and for a period not exceeding ten years; any violation of the terms of such stipulation is a nuisance, and he who causes it is guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 1218; C., '51, § 730.]

1523. Failure of duty. 1009. When it is made to appear to the board of supervisors, after ten days' notice to the person licensed, that he fails substantially to perform his duties according to law, the board may revoke his license. [R., § 1212; C., '51, § 724.]

1524. Day or night; rate of toll. 1010. All toll-bridges must be so regulated as to allow persons to pass at any hour of the night or day, but the board of supervisors may, in its discretion, in fixing the rates of toll, permit a greater amount to be collected during certain hours of the night-time. [R., § 1222; C., '51, § 734.]

TOLL-BRIDGES OVER STREAMS DIVIDING COUNTIES.

1525. Purchase. 20 G. A., ch. 13, § 1. Boards of supervisors in adjoining counties each of which contains according to the last census a population exceeding ten thousand inhabitants shall have authority to purchase and acquire any toll-bridge erected across any stream dividing said counties at the place said bridge is erected and keep and maintain the same at joint expense as a free public bridge, provided that the total cost of such bridge shall not exceed the sum of ten thousand dollars.

1526. Proceedings for; compensation. 20 G. A., ch. 13, § 2. If said boards of supervisors are able to agree upon the terms upon which they will purchase such bridge and the proportion each will pay towards the purchase and maintenance of the same, such agreement shall be reduced to writing signed by the respective chairmen and recorded in the records of their proceedings. But if they are unable to thus agree the county desiring to purchase said bridge may institute a special proceeding in the circuit [district] court of either of said counties, and said cause shall be conducted as an equitable cause and the court shall determine whether there is any public necessity for said bridge, the relative benefit the same will be to the two counties and based upon such benefit the proportion each county shall bear in the purchase and maintenance of said bridge, and shall enter decree accordingly, either or both parties having the right of appeal to the supreme court. Upon entering of a decree in favor of the purchase of such bridge it shall be the duty of said respective boards of supervisors at once to proceed to complete the purchase upon such terms as are determined on and to forthwith levy the necessary taxes to make the payments and said counties shall thereafter keep and maintain such bridge and be responsible for the safe condition thereof as provided by law.

FERRIES.

1527. License. 1011. The board of supervisors has power to grant such ferry licenses as may be needed within its county, for a period not exceeding ten years. [R., § 1200; C., '51, § 712.]

The rights of a riparian owner, at common law and under the statute, in relation to a ferry franchise, discussed; and held that a stranger has no right to land ferry-boats upon the soil of such owner, nor can he use a highway laid out across the land of such owner, without compensation to him: Prosser v. Wapello County, 18-327; Prosser v. Davis, 18-367.

A ferry franchise is not lost by the death of the party to whom it is granted, but passes to his personal representatives: Lippencott v. Allander, 27-460.

The revocation of a ferry license by a board of supervisors may be appealed from: Lippencott v. Allander, 25-445.

1528. Rates. 1012. The board may prescribe the rates of ferriage, as well as the hours of the day or night during which the ferry must be attended, both of which may, from time to time, be changed at the discretion of the board. [R., § 1201; C., '51, § 713.]

1529. Exclusive privilege. 1013. In granting a ferry license, the board of supervisors has power to make the privilege granted exclusive, for a distance not exceeding one mile in either direction from said ferry, in which case no person shall keep a public ferry within the prescribed distance, unless, after twenty days' notice to the person who has obtained such privilege, it is made to appear to the board that the public good requires both ferries, and a new license is issued for the second ferry accordingly. The notice herein required must be served personally on the owner, or on the person in charge of the ferry-boat. [R., § 1202; C., '51, § 714.]

Grants of exclusive ferry licenses, even over navigable streams as the Mississippi river, are upheld on grounds of public necessity or advantage: Burlington, etc., Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48-133; United States ex rel. v. Fanning, Mor., 348.

The grant of a ferry franchise necessarily implies the right to exclusive privileges within the prescribed limits: Phillips v. Bloomington, 1 G. Gr., 498.

If a ferry license does not purport to confer an exclusive privilege, an exclusive right cannot be inferred: McEwen v. Taylor, 4 G. Gr., 532.

The use of a navigable river for a public highway is of paramount importance and will prevail over a privilege granted for a ferry. If the mode of operating the ferry is such as to encroach upon the free navigation of the stream, the owner of the ferry must yield to such free navigation, although the owner of a boat navigating the stream would be liable for any wilful injury done to the ferry: Steamboat Globe v. Kurtz, 4 G. Gr., 433.

A person not possessing a franchise may, within the limits of an exclusive franchise granted to the owner of the ferry, transport his own teams and conveyances, for instance, where he is a carrier of the United States mails, but he cannot make such private individual right the medium or cover for carrying passengers whose transportation legally belongs to the owner of the franchise: Weld v. Chapman, 2-524.

1530. Preference. 1014. In granting a ferry license, preference must be given to the keeper of a previous ferry at the same point, and if it be a new ferry, preference shall be given to the owner of the land; but if there is no such, or if, after giving the same notice as is required by the last section, he fails to make application for such license, or if, in the opinion of the board, he is an improper person to receive the same, it may be conferred on any other proper applicant. [R., § 1203; C., '51, § 715.]

1531. Between different counties. 1015. Where the opposite shores of the stream are in different counties, a license from either is sufficient, and the board of supervisors first exercising jurisdiction by granting a license, retains that jurisdiction during the term of such license. [R., § 1204; C., '51, § 716.]

1532. Between different states. 1016. Where but one side of a river is within this state, the board of supervisors possesses the same power, so far as the shore of this state is concerned, as though the river lay wholly within this state. [R., § 1205; C., '51, § 717.]

In such case the grant of a franchise gives v. Chapman, 2-524; Burlington, etc., Ferry no rights beyond the limits of the state: Weld Co. v. Davis, 48-133.

1533. Bond. 1017. The board of supervisors, upon being satisfied that the requirements of this chapter have been complied with, and that a ferry is needed at such place, and that the applicant is a suitable person to keep it, must grant the license, which, however, shall not issue until the applicant files a bond, with sureties to be approved by the board or auditor, in a penalty not less than one hundred dollars, with the condition that he will keep the ferry in proper condition for ferrying, and attend the same at all times fixed by the board for running the same, that he will neither demand nor take any illegal tolls, and that he will perform all other duties which are, or may be enjoined on him by law, which bond shall be filed in the county auditor's office. [R., § 1207; C., '51, § 719.]

1534. Express and mail. 1018. Every ferryman must transport the public expresses of the United States and of this state, and also the United States mail, at any hour of the day or night. [R., § 1209; C., '51, § 721.]

A public ferryman is a common carrier and charged with the duties and liabilities of such: Stimmer v. Merry, 23-90.

PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO BOTH FERRIES AND TOLL-BRIDGES.

1535. License recorded. 1019. All licenses for ferries and toll-bridges must be entered upon the records of the board of supervisors, and shall contain the rates of toll allowed. [R., § 1208; C., '51, § 720.]

1536. Posting rates. 1020. The rates of toll must be conspicuously posted up at each extremity of the bridge, or on the boat, door of the ferry house, or some other conspicuous place near the ferry. [R., §§ 1210, 1220; C., '51, §§ 722, 732.]

1537. Penalty. 1021. The failure to have such list posted up as aforesaid, justifies any person in refusing the payment of tolls, and where such failure is habitual, the proprietor of the bridge or ferry is liable to pay twenty-five dollars, and the action therefor may be brought in the name of the county against such proprietor, or on the bond of the proprietor of the ferry; the amount recovered in either case to be paid into the county treasury. [R., §§ 1211, 1220; C., '51, §§ 723, 732.]

1538. Notice of application. 1022. Before a license can be granted for either a bridge or ferry, notice of the intended application therefor must be posted up in at least three public places on each side of the river, if both are within the state, and in the township and neighborhood in which the proposed bridge or ferry is to be erected or kept, at least twenty days prior to the making of such application. [R., §§ 1206, 1219; C., '51, §§ 718, 731.]

1539. Penalty for taking illegal toll. 1023. The taking of illegal toll by the grantees of any of the licenses herein contemplated, subjects the offender to the penalty of twenty-five dollars for every such offense, to be recovered by suit on the bond of such licensee, or against him individually, by the person who paid the illegal toll for his own benefit, or he may bring suit in the name of the county, in which case the proceeds shall go into the county treasury. [R., § 1236; C., '51, § 748.]

1540. Forfeiture. 1024. A failure in other respects to comply substantially with the terms fixed by the board, works a forfeiture of any of the licenses herein authorized, and also subjects the party guilty of such failure to damages for all the injury resulting therefrom, for which he is liable on his bond. [R., § 1237; C., '51, § 749.]

1541. Refusal to pay tolls; penalty. 1025. Any person who refuses to pay the regular tolls established and posted up in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, or who shall run through or pass around the toll gates with a view of avoiding the payment of just tolls or dues, forfeits the sum of five dollars for every offense, which, together with costs of suit, may be recovered by the person entitled to such toll by civil action; but nothing herein contained shall prevent a person from fording a stream across which a toll bridge or ferry has been constructed. [R., § 1238; C., '51, § 750.]

1542. Rules established. 1026. The proprietor of any bridge or ferry authorized by this chapter, may establish rules for the regulation of passengers, travelers, teams, and freight passing or traveling thereon, and may enforce those rules by penalties, not exceeding five dollars for any one offense, which penalties may be recovered by civil action in the name of the proprietor aforesaid; but such rules must be published by being conspicuously posted up before they can be thus enforced. [R., § 1239; C., '51; § 751.]

1543. Franchise sold. 1027. Any of the franchises contemplated in this chapter are subject to execution, and shall be sold as personal property, and be subject to the same rights and consequences, except that the purchaser may take immediate possession of the property. [R., § 1240; C., '51, § 752.]

1544. Carries what. 1028. The sale of any such franchise carries with it all the material, implements, rights of way, and works of whatever kind, necessary for or ordinarily used in the exercise of such franchise. [R., § 1241; C., '51, § 753.]

1545. Free ferry. 1029. Nothing in this chapter contained shall be so construed as to prevent any person, city, incorporated town, or village, from establishing a free ferry at any point where a license to keep a ferry has been granted under the provisions of this chapter; provided, that where said free ferry is established, said person or company shall pay a reasonable compensation to the persons owning said ferry for all boats, ropes, and other material, if the same be fit for use; and when said free ferry is established at a point at or near where a license has been granted to an individual, such individual shall be exonerated from any further obligation in relation to the ferry. Bond and security shall be given in like manner by the person or company establishing the free ferry as required in this chapter. [R., § 1245; C., '51, § 757.]

1546. Mill owners. 1030. Nothing in this chapter shall be so construed as to prevent owners of mills from crossing themselves or customers free of charge. [R., § 1246; C., '51, § 758.]

RAILWAY AND TOLL-BRIDGES.

1547. Supervisors to control location. 1031. Any railway or bridge company that now is, or hereafter may be, incorporated in pursuance of the laws of this state, or of the states of Wisconsin, Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska or Dakota, is authorized to construct a railway bridge across the Mississippi, Missouri or Big Sioux rivers, connecting with the eastern or western terminus, as the case may be, of any railway abutting on the Iowa bank of either of said rivers, at such place as shall be designated therefor by the board of supervisors of the county wherein such abutting is to be made and extending toward a point on the opposite bank that may be selected by such company. [10 G. A., ch. 130, §§ 1, 2, 4.]

1548. Plan to be approved. 1032. No bridge shall be built under the provisions of the preceding section, until the plan thereof has been submitted to and approved by the board of supervisors of the county in which the bridge is to be partly located. [Same, § 3.]

1549. For teams and passengers; toll for. 1033. Any such company may, with the consent of said board of supervisors, construct such bridge with suitable highways and foot ways for teams and foot passengers, and charge such rates of toll therefor as may be approved by said board. [Same, § 6.]

1550. Ferry established. 1034. Any such company may establish a ferry across said rivers at or near the termini of its road, for the sole purpose of crossing the freight and passengers of such highways, until the bridge is ready for use. [Same, § 7.]

1551. Navigation. 1035. No bridge erected under the provisions of this chapter shall be so located or constructed as to unnecessarily impede, injure, or obstruct the navigation of said rivers. [Same, § 11.]

1552. Bonds and stock. 1036. Any such company may issue its bonds or obligations for an amount not exceeding the cost of such bridge, and of its road in the state, and may secure the payment thereof by a mortgage on the same, and may issue certificates of common and preferred stock; the preferred stock to be issued only on condition that the holders of the common stock give their written consent thereto. [Same, § 5.]

1553. Resident director; process. 1037. Each company acting under the provisions of this chapter shall elect at least one director, who shall be a citizen of and reside in the state of Iowa, and such company shall be liable to be sued in any court of competent jurisdiction in the state, and service of the original notice on said resident director shall be sufficient notice to the company of the pendency of the action. [Same, §§ 8, 9.]

1554. Contract by city for use of bridge. 15 G. A., ch. 5, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 173, § 2. All cities situated on any river in the state of Iowa or any river forming the boundary line of the said state, whether organized and existing under special charter or general law, and from which to the opposite shore of any of said rivers a bridge has been or may be constructed by any railroad or other private company, corporation or person, shall have power to contract with the company, co[r]poration or person owning such bridge for the use of the same as a public highway; which use may be jointly with any company, corporation or person having or desiring the right to use the same for the passage of cars propelled by steam or otherwise, or may be for the sole use of such portion of such bridge as may be devoted and adapted to highway travel, and in such contract may have the right to assume the sole or any portion of the liability for damage to persons or property by reason of their being on any portion of said bridge or on any approach to either end thereof caused by the running of cars or locomotives by any corporation, company or person entitled to use the said bridge, whether the damage results from the negligence of the persons engaged in running said cars or locomotives or otherwise, and to indemnify and save harmless the owners of said bridge, and any or all corporations, companies or persons entitled to use the same from all liability or damage so caused to the extent or proportion thereof assumed in the said contract. And the said city may cause to be assessed and levied, each year, upon the taxable property of said city a tax not exceeding ten mills on the dollar, each year, to raise a special fund to carry out the terms of the said contract. And the said city may thereafter and during the continuance of said contract manage and control the said bridge so far as necessary to regulate the highway travel thereon, and may regulate the same as a free or toll-bridge, and prescribe such rates of toll as to it, from time to time, shall seem proper, and make all necessary police regulations for the government of the highway travel on said bridge.

TITLE VIII.

OF THE MILITIA.

CHAPTER 1.

[This chapter (secs. 1038 to 1057), after being amended by 16 G. A., ch. 66, was repealed by 17 G. A., ch. 125, and a substitute enacted, which was in turn repealed by the following act.]

1555. Who constitute; exemptions. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 1. All able-bodied male citizens of the state, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, who are not exempted from military duty according to the laws of the United States, shall constitute the military force of this state; provided, that all persons who have served in the United States service and have been honorably discharged therefrom, are exempt from duty under the military laws of the state; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit any person from becoming a member of any military organization, or holding any office in the militia of this state. [Const., Art. 6, § 1.]

1556. List returned. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 2. Assessors in each township are required to make and return to the county auditor of their respective counties, at the time of making the annual assessment, a correct list of persons subject to military duty, which list may be revised and corrected by the board of supervisors, and the county auditor shall, in the month of June in each even-numbered year, or at such other time as the governor may direct, certify to the adjutant-general a true copy of said list, and in each odd-numbered year he shall certify to the number of names on said list.

1557. Governor to call out. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 3. When a requisition shall be made by the president of the United States for troops, the governor, as commander-in-chief, shall, by his proclamation, order out for active service the militia of the state, or such portion thereof as may be necessary, designating the same by draft, if a sufficient number shall not volunteer, and may organize the same, and commission officers therefor; and when so ordered out for service, the militia shall be subject to like regulations, and receive from the state like compensation and subsistence, as are prescribed by law for the army of the United States.

1558. When. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 4. The commander-in-chief shall have power, in case of insurrection, invasion or breaches of the peace, or imminent danger thereof, to order into the service of the state such of its military force as he may deem proper, and under the command of such officers as he shall designate.

1559. Sheriff may call. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 5. In case of any breach of the peace, tumult, riot, or resistance to process of this state, or imminent danger thereof, it shall be lawful for the sheriff of any county to call for aid upon the commandant of any military force within his county, immediately notifying the governor of such action; and it shall be the duty of the commandant upon whom such call is made, to order out in aid of the civil authorities the military force, or any part thereof, under his command.

1560. Command. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 6. The command of any force called into service under sections four and five [§§ 1558, 1559] shall devolve upon the senior officer of such force, unless otherwise specially ordered by the commander-in-chief.

1561. Compensation. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 7. The military forces of this state, when in the actual service of the state in time of insurrection, invasion, or immediate danger thereof, shall, during their time of service, be paid, by an appropriation especially made therefor, the following sums each for every day actually on duty: To each general, field and staff officer, four dollars; to every other commissioned officer, two dollars and a half; to every non-commissioned staff officer, two dollars; to every other enlisted man, one dollar and a half.

1562. By county. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 8. All officers and soldiers, while on duty or assembled therefor pursuant to the order of any sheriff of any county in cases of riot, tumult, breach of peace, or whenever called upon to aid the civil authorities, shall receive the same compensation as provided for in section seven [§ 1561], and such compensation shall be audited, allowed, and paid by the supervisors of the county where such service is rendered, and shall be a portion of the county charges of said county, to be levied and raised as other county charges are levied and raised.

1563. Iowa National Guard. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 9; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 1. The active militia shall be designated "The Iowa National Guard," and shall consist of six regiments of infantry, and shall be recruited by volunteer enlistments.

1564. Brigades; enlistments. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 10. The entire state shall be composed of not more than two brigades, to be commanded by two brigadier-generals. The commander-in-chief shall assign all regiments, battalions and companies to such brigades as he shall think proper. All enlistments therein shall be for five years, and made by signing enlistment papers prescribed by the adjutant-general, and taking the following oath or affirmation, which may be administered by the enlisting officer, to wit:

"You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will bear true allegiance to, and that you will support the constitution of the United States and the state of Iowa, and that you will serve the state of Iowa faithfully in its military service for the term of five years, unless sooner discharged or you cease to become a citizen thereof; that you will obey the order of the commander-in-chief and such officers as may be placed over you, and the laws governing the military forces of Iowa—so help you God."

1565. Staff of commander-in-chief; adjutant-general. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 43. The staff of commander-in-chief shall consist of an adjutant-general, an inspector-general, a quartermaster-general, a commissary-general, and surgeon-general, and such other officers as he may think proper to appoint. The adjutant-general shall rank as a major-general. He shall issue and transmit all orders of the commander-in-chief, with reference to the militia or military organizations of the state, and shall keep a record of all officers commissioned by the governor, and of all general and special orders and regulations, and of all such matters as pertain to the organization of the state militia and the duties of an adjutant-general, and, except in times of war or public danger, he shall perform the duties of quartermaster-general, as required by law, without additional compensation therefor. He shall have charge of the state arsenal and grounds, and shall receive and issue all ordnance stores and camp equipage on order of the commander-in-chief. He may appoint, with the approval of the governor, an ordnance-sergeant, at a salary of not more than five hundred dollars per year, who shall, under the direction of the adjutant-general, take charge of the state arsenal and grounds, and shall aid and assist him in the discharge of his duties. He shall furnish, at the expense of the state, such blanks and forms as shall be approved by the commander-in-chief. He shall also, on or before the first day of December next preceding the regular session of the general assembly, and at such other times as the governor shall require, make out a full and detailed account of all the transactions of his office, with the expense of the same for the preceding two years, and such other matters as shall be required by the governor. He shall reside at the state capital, and hold his office during the pleasure of the governor, and shall receive for his services one thousand five hundred dollars per year.

[Further as to reports, see §§ 117-121.]

1566. Generals; election and staff of. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 12. The generals of brigades shall be elected by the officers and enlisted men of each brigade respectively, and shall hold their office for five years, or until removed by court-martial or resignation. On recommendation of brigade commanders, the governor shall appoint and commission the brigade staff, as follows: Assistant-adjutant-general, with rank of lieutenant-colonel; assistant-inspector-general, with rank of major; surgeon, with rank of major; quartermaster, with rank of captain; commissary, with rank of captain; and two aids-de-camp, with rank of first lieutenant; judge advocate, with rank of major.

1567. Regiments; officers of. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 13; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 2. A regiment shall consist of eight companies. The colonel and lieutenant-colonel and major of all regiments shall be elected as hereinafter provided. The regimental staff shall consist of a surgeon, with rank of major; assistant surgeon, with rank of captain; chaplain, with rank of captain; adjutant, with rank of first lieutenant; quartermaster, with rank of first lieutenant; who shall be appointed and commissioned by the governor, on recommendation of the regimental commander. The colonel of each regiment shall appoint by warrant, countersigned by the adjutant, a sergeant-major, quartermaster-sergeant, commissary-sergeant, hospital-steward, color-sergeant, ordnance-sergeant, drum-major, fife-major, and one bugler, who shall constitute the non-commissioned staff. All field officers shall hold their offices for five years. The commissions of all staff officers shall expire when the officer nominating them or his successor shall make new nominations to their respective offices, and such nominations shall be confirmed by the commander-in-chief.

1568. Band. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 14. The generals of brigades and regimental commanders, may cause to be organized and enlisted a band, under the leadership of the principal musician of his command, not to exceed sixteen in number, who shall be subject to the orders of such leader, and shall be under the command of such brigade, or regimental commander, and shall be subject to the same regulations as are prescribed for other enlisted men.

1569. Company; officers of. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 15. A company shall consist of a captain, a first lieutenant, a second lieutenant, five sergeants, four corporals, two musicians, and not less than forty nor more than sixty-four privates and non-commissioned officers. Company officers shall be elected by members of the company, and shall hold their offices for five years. All non-commissioned officers of companies, on recommendation of their captains, shall be appointed by the warrant of the regimental commander, countersigned by the adjutant. All elections of line officers shall be ordered by the regimental commander. All elections of field and general officers shall be ordered by the commander-in-chief. The orders for such election shall be sent to the commanding officer of the company in which said election is ordered, who shall in turn issue his special order for such election, giving at least six days' notice thereof, posting said order in three public places accessible to the members of his command, and where practicable, the same shall be published in one or more newspapers in the county where said company is located. All voting shall be by ballot, and no voting by proxy shall be legal; and a majority of all votes cast shall be necessary to elect. The senior officer present at such election shall preside. The returns of elections, properly attested, shall be made promptly within five days from the date of election, to the commanding officer of the regiment, who shall promptly forward the result of said election to the brigade commander, who shall report the same to the adjutant-general of the state, by whose approval the commander-in-chief will issue commissions accordingly: provided, that at the organization of a new company the election shall be conducted under such regulations as the adjutant-general shall prescribe.

1570. By-laws. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 16. Every company and regiment may make by-laws for its own government not in conflict with this act or general orders or regulations, which shall be binding upon the members.

1571. Term of service. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 17. Every officer and soldier of the Iowa National Guard shall be held to duty for the full term of five years, unless regularly discharged for good and sufficient cause by the commandant of his regiment, approved by the commander-in-chief; provided, that said term of five years shall in all cases commence from the time such officer or soldier shall have become an active member of any band, company, regiment, or brigade organized or commissioned under the laws of this state, and now belonging thereto. All persons serving five years consecutively in the national guards shall, on application, be entitled to an honorable discharge, exempting them from military duty except in time of war or public danger.

1572. Discipline. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 18. The organization, equipment, discipline and military regulations of the Iowa National Guard shall strictly conform to the regulations for the government of the army of the United States, in all cases except as herein otherwise provided, and all orders and regulations governing troops, not in conflict with the constitution of this state and the provisions of this act, shall be binding upon all the members of the Iowa National Guard.

1573. Exemptions of members and property. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 19. Every officer and soldier in the Iowa National Guard shall be exempt from jury duty, from head or poll tax of every description, during the term he shall perform military duty. The uniforms, arms and equipments of every member of the state guard shall be exempted from all suits, distresses, executions or sales for debt or payment of taxes. The Iowa National Guard shall, in cases except treason, felony or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at drills, parades, encampments, and the election of officers, and in going to and returning from the same.

1574. Drills. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 20. The commandant of each regiment shall order monthly or semi-monthly, day or evening drills, by the companies of his command, and the members thereof shall receive no compensation for their services while attending such drills.

1576. Field duty. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 22. The commanding officer of any encampment may cause those under his command to perform any field or camp duty he shall require, and may put under arrest during such encampment or parade any member of his command who shall disobey a superior officer, or be guilty of disorderly or unmilitary conduct, and any other person who shall trespass on the parade or encampment grounds, or in any way interrupt or molest the orderly discharge of duty by members of his command; and he may prohibit the sale of all spirituous or malt liquors within one mile of such encampment, and enforce such prohibition by force, if necessary; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to interfere with the regular business of any liquor dealer whose place of business shall be situated within said limits.

1577. Ammunition. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 23. For the use of the Iowa National Guard in target practice, the adjutant-general shall issue to each infantry or cavalry company on the requisition of the commanding officer thereof, an amount not exceeding one thousand rounds of fixed ammunition in each year, and for the use of the artillery he shall issue in each year not exceeding fifty pounds of powder to each company.

1578. Stores. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 24. Upon the organization of any company or regiment of the National Guard, on the requisition of its commanding officer, and the approval of the governor, the adjutant-general shall issue all necessary ordnance and ordnance stores; provided, however, that when any arms or munitions are delivered to any commander, he shall execute and deliver to the adjutant-general a bond, payable to the people of the state of Iowa, in sufficient amount, and with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the governor, conditioned for the proper use of such arms and munitions, and return of the same, when requested by the proper officers, in good order, wear, use and unavoidable loss and damage excepted. All arms shall be kept at the company or regimental armory.

1579. Inspection. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 25. Such inspection of the Iowa National Guard shall be made as the commander-in-chief may from time to time direct.

1580. Embezzlement of state property. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 26. Any officer or soldier of the Iowa National Guard knowingly making any false certificate, or false return of state property in his hands, or wilfully neglecting or refusing to apply all money drawn from the state treasury for the purpose named in the requisition therefor, shall be guilty of embezzlement and fraud, and shall be punished in the manner as provided for like offenses in the criminal code of this state.

1581. Uniforms. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 27. The several regiments of the Iowa National Guard shall adopt the present dress uniform of the army of the United States.

1582. Same. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 28. The field, staff and line officers of the Iowa National Guard shall provide themselves with the uniform prescribed for officers of the same rank in the United States army within ninety days from the date of commission.

1583. Penalty for failure to return arms, etc. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 29. Every officer or soldier who shall wilfully neglect to return to the armory of the company, or place in charge of the commanding officer of the company to which he belongs, any arms, uniform or equipment, or portion thereof, belonging to the state, within six days after being notified by said commanding officer to make such return, or to place the same in his charge, shall be fined not more than fifty dollars or imprisoned not more than thirty days.

1584. Penalty for injuring or disposing of same. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 30. Every person who shall wilfully or wantonly injure or destroy any uniform, arm, equipment, or other military property of the state, and refuse to make good such injury or loss, or who shall sell, dispose of, secrete, or remove the same, with intent to sell or dispose thereof, shall be fined not more than two hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

1585. Fines for absence or misconduct; suit for. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 31. Every soldier absent without leave or sufficient excuse from any parade, drill or encampment, shall be fined two dollars for each day of absence; and for any unsoldierly conduct at drill, parade or encampment he may be fined not more than ten dollars, such fines to be collected by civil suit; and all suits for the collection of fines shall be brought in the name of the state of Iowa, for the use of the company to which the soldier fined belongs; but in no case shall the state pay any costs of such suits. Nothing herein shall be construed to prevent any company or band imposing such fines upon its members as it may think proper in its by-laws, which fines may be enforced in the same manner as hereinbefore provided for the collection of fines for absence from drill, parade or encampment.

1586. Judge-advocate. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 32. A judge-advocate, with the rank of major, shall be appointed for each brigade, and hold office during the pleasure of the commander-in-chief, who shall perform the duties of such office in the court-martial held in his district; and no other person shall prosecute or defend in such courts; but, when he shall be unable to attend, from any cause, or shall be disqualified by interest or relationship, the commander-in-chief may designate the judge-advocate of another brigade to act in his place.

1587. Court-martial. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 33. Commissioned officers, for neglect of duty, disobedience of orders or unsoldierly or ungentlemanly conduct, may be tried by court-martial, provided that no sentence of any court-martial shall affect the life, liberty or property of any citizen of Iowa, according to the regulations provided in like cases in the army of the United States. The commander-in-chief, by order, shall designate the time and place of holding such courts, and the names of officers composing it, consisting of not less than three nor more than six. The senior officer named shall preside, and shall be of superior rank to the officer on trial, when practicable. Witnesses for the prosecution and defense may be summoned to attend by subpoena signed by the judge-advocate. Any witness, duly summoned, who shall fail to appear and testify may be, by warrant of the president of the court, directed to the sheriff or any constable, arrested and treated as in like cases before civil courts. The fees of all witnesses shall be the same as allowed in civil cases, to be taxed with the necessary expenses of the judge-advocate and the court, by the president of the court, and paid by the state treasurer, on the auditor's warrant, to the judge-advocate, who shall pay all expenses of the trial, when received by him.

1588. Sentence. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 34. The sentences of courts-martial shall be approved or disapproved by the commander-in-chief, who may mitigate or remit any punishment awarded by sentence of court-martial, when such sentence shall have been approved by the brigade commander. The record of all the proceedings and the sentence of a court-martial in every case, with the order approving or disapproving it, shall be deposited in the office of the adjutant-general.

1589. Military board. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 35. Every brigade and regimental commander in the Iowa National Guard is hereby authorized to appoint a military board or commission, of not less than three nor more than five officers, whose duty it shall be to examine the capacity, qualifications, propriety of conduct and efficiency of any commissioned officer in his command, who may be reported to the board of commission; and upon the report of said board, if adverse to such officer, and if approved by the commander-in-chief, the commission of such officer shall be vacated; provided, always, that no officer shall be eligible to sit on such board whose rank or promotion would in any way be affected by the proceedings; and two members, at least, shall be of equal or superior rank with the officer examined; and if any officer shall refuse to report himself, when directed, before such board, the commander in chief may, upon the report of such refusal by his commander, declare his commission vacated.

1590. Military organizations. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 36. It shall not be lawful for any body of men whatever, other than the regularly organized volunteer militia of this state, and the troops of the United States, to associate themselves together as a military company or organization, or to drill on parade within the limits of this state without the license of the governor thereof, which license may at any time be revoked; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to prevent social or benevolent organizations from wearing swords.

1591. Soldiers to provide uniforms. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 37. Every soldier of the Iowa National Guard shall provide and keep himself provided with a uniform, according to the rules and regulations prescribed by law, and subject to such restrictions, limitations and alterations as the commander-in-chief may direct.

1592. Payment for same. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 38. In lieu of uniforms being furnished in kind by the state, there shall annually be paid to each soldier having complied with section thirty-seven [§ 1591], the sum of four dollars, to be paid under such provisions as the commander-in-chief may direct, unless a majority of the members of a company prefer to own their uniforms, in which case there shall be no payment to the members of said company, as herein contemplated, but the said uniforms shall be the property of the members of said company respectively furnishing the same; but in no event shall the state be liable for the payment of any money in lieu of uniforms, or for any purpose contemplated by this act, unless such payment can be made without exceeding the annual appropriation provided for by this act.

1593. To belong to state. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 39. In all other cases except those provided for in the preceding section, all uniforms and other military property shall belong to the state and be used for military purposes only, and each soldier, upon receiving a discharge or otherwise leaving the military service of the state, or upon demand of his commanding officer, shall forthwith surrender the said uniform, together with all other articles of military property that may be in his possession, to said commanding officer.

1594. Expenses. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 40. There shall be allowed annually for postage, stationery and office incidentals to each brigade headquarters, the sum of twenty-five dollars, to each regimental headquarters, the sum of twenty-five dollars, and to each company headquarters the sum of ten dollars.

1595. Same. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 41. There shall be allowed annually to each company for armory rent, fuel, lights, and like necessary expenses, the sum of fifty dollars.

1596. Adjutant-general's office. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 42. Such clerical assistance shall be employed in the adjutant-general's office, as shall in the opinion of the governor, be actually necessary, and any person so employed, shall receive, for the time they may be actually necessarily on duty, such compensation as the governor may prescribe.

1597. Regulations. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 43. The commander-in-chief is authorized to make and publish regulations for the government of the Iowa National Guard in accordance with existing laws.

1598. Punishment for military offense. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 44. Any soldier guilty of a military offense may be put and kept under guard by the commander of a company, regiment or brigade, for a time not extending beyond the term of service for which he is then ordered.

1599. Companies may be disbanded. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 45; 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 3. The commander-in-chief shall disband any company of the Iowa National Guard when it shall fall below a proper standard of efficiency, and he may order special inspections with a view to disbandment.

1600. Words construed. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 46. In this chapter the word "soldiers" shall include musicians, and all persons in the volunteer or enrolled militia, except commissioned officers, and the word "company" shall include battery.

1601. Medical staff. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 47. The medical staff of the Iowa National Guard shall have charge of that branch of the service under the supervision of the surgeon-general.

1602. Surgeon. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 48. A surgeon in charge in the field or at a camp of instruction may draw, on requisition, such medical stores and supplies as in his judgment may be needed, and for which he shall account, on forms provided by the quartermaster-general.

1603. Surgeon-general. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 49. The surgeon-general may prescribe the necessary forms and blanks for the work of his department; and all subordinate surgeons of the Iowa National Guard will obey his orders, and report, as often as he may prescribe, the transactions of their department.

1604. Term of enlistment. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 50. Nothing in this act shall be construed to extend the time of any officer beyond the time for which he was elected, or that of any soldier beyond the time for which he was enlisted.

1605. Appropriation. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 51. There is hereby appropriated the sum of twenty thousand dollars per annum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, out of the state treasury, not otherwise appropriated, for the purposes named in this act. And all warrants against said appropriation necessary to carry out the provisions of this act shall be drawn by the auditor of state upon the state treasurer, upon the certificate of the adjutant-general, approved by the governor. And no indebtedness shall be created under the provisions of this act not covered by the appropriation herein made.

1606. Additional appropriation. 20 G. A., ch. 65, § 5. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of chapter seventy-four, laws of the eighteenth general assembly as herein amended, there is hereby made the additional appropriation of fifteen thousand dollars per annum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated, and all warrants against said appropriation shall be drawn by the auditor of state upon the state treasurer upon the certificate of the adjutant-general approved by the governor.

1607. 18 G. A., ch. 74, § 52. Chapter one hundred and twenty-five, acts of the seventeenth general assembly, and all other acts or portions of acts in conflict herewith, are hereby repealed.

TITLE IX.

OF CORPORATIONS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF CORPORATIONS FOR PECUNIARY PROFIT.

1608. Who may incorporate. 1058; 22 G. A., ch. 86, § 2. Any number of people may associate themselves and become incorporated for the transaction of any lawful business, including the establishment of ferries, the construction, ownership, operation and maintenance of canals, railways, bridges or other works of internal improvement, and the purchase, ownership, operation and maintenance of any railroad sold or transferred under power of sale or foreclosure of any mortgage deed or trust; but such incorporation confers no power or privilege not possessed by natural persons, except as hereinafter provided. [R., § 1150; C., '51, § 673.]

1609. Powers. 1059. Among the powers of such body corporate are the following:

1. To have perpetual succession;
2. To sue and be sued by its corporate name;
3. To have a common seal, which it may alter at pleasure;
4. To render the interests of the stockholders transferable;
5. To exempt the private property of its members from liability for corporate debts, except as herein otherwise declared;
6. To make contracts, acquire and transfer property, possessing the same powers in such respects as private individuals now enjoy;
7. To establish by-laws, and make all rules and regulations deemed expedient for the management of their affairs in accordance with law. [R., § 1151; C., '51, § 674.]

Powers: A corporation is presumed to be clothed with the usual powers necessary and proper to enable it as such to carry out the purposes of its existence: Home Ins. Co. v. Northwestern Packet Co., 32-223.

Therefore, held, that an insurance company had authority to acquire, by assignment, the claims of a shipper of goods insured by it against the common carrier in whose hands they were destroyed: Ibid.

Corporations are invested with such powers only as are expressly conferred upon them and such other powers as are necessary to carry out those powers expressly granted: Teachout v. Des Moines Broad Gauge St. R. Co., 75-722.

For the purpose of effecting the objects of a corporation its powers are as broad and comprehensive as those of an individual, unless the exercise of the asserted power is expressly prohibited: Thompson v. Lambert, 44-239.

Where an agricultural society was organized for the proper objects of such a corporation, the power to borrow money and execute notes and mortgages not being expressly assumed or prohibited, held, that it had by implication authority to exercise such powers as to indebtedness created for the necessary and proper purposes of carrying out the objects of the corporation: Ibid.

The simple act of going surety for another is out of the line of the prosecution of any business: Lucas v. White Line Transfer Co., 70-541.

For a proper purpose it has power to borrow money by executing notes and mortgages: Thompson v. Lambert, 44-239.

The power to mortgage the property of the corporation is incident to the ordinary powers of such corporation: Dunham v. Iselt, 15-284.

And where the power to borrow money may necessarily be implied, it may be exercised by issuance of negotiable bonds: Des Moines Gas Co. v. West, 50-16.

Under a charter by which a corporation had authority to purchase, etc., "any real estate or other property," etc., held, that it was not beyond its power to purchase its own stock: Iowa Lumber Co. v. Foster, 49-25.

Where the articles of incorporation of a college did not expressly give it power to raise and control funds by taking endowment notes held, by a divided court, that it had the power to accept and enforce payment of such notes: Simpson Centenary College v. Bryan, 50-293.

Unless restrained by statute, a corporation may sell or dispose of its property, and one corporation may purchase property from another corporation, both possessing in this respect the same power as individuals. It will not, therefore, constitute fraud upon creditors that the property of the corporation is conveyed by it to another corporation in which its stockholders own stock: Howell v. Marshall County Canning Co., 72-666.

A stockholder in a corporation may maintain an action to restrain the corporation from acts in excess of its corporate power: Teachout v. Des Moines Broad Gauge St. R. Co., 75-722.

Corporations of all kinds may be bound by contracts not under seal. They may make a binding contract in writing not under seal, and may also be held liable under verbal contracts. So, also, they may ratify and adopt as their own a contract made by an officer out of the usual scope of his duties: Merrick v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 11-74.

The recital as to the making of a contract, not entered on the record at the time it was originally written, by the secretary, but at a subsequent meeting directed to be entered on the record, will not be receivable as against the other party to such contract: Colfax Hotel Co. v. Lyon, 69-683.

Where a party with the knowledge and consent of the directors of a corporation borrowed money on his individual note for the use of the corporation, which money was used by it in paying its debts, held, that the corporation was bound to repay to such party the money so borrowed by him: Humphrey v. Patrons, etc., Ass'n, 50-607.

Corporations may ratify contracts made without their authority and thus become bound thereby like natural persons. Thus an acceptance of payment for services rendered under a contract and in accordance with its terms may amount to a ratification of such contract: Athearn v. Independent Dist., 33-105.

Where a corporation became the successor to an individual in the manufacture and sale of luggies, held, that it had authority to accept from the individual whom it succeeded an order accepted by him upon particular terms: Cook Mfg. Co. v. Randall, 62-244.

Held, that a corporation organized for the manufacture and sale of musical instruments, and not having the power to engage in the business of loaning money, might still take from its agent, in payment of an indebtedness due from him, the note of a third party belonging to him: Western Organ Co. v. Reddish, 51-55.

Corporations can make contracts and transfer property, possessing the same powers in such respects as private individuals. A corporation has therefore the right to prefer one creditor to another, and the fact that the preference is exercised in favor of a shareholder or director is immaterial, although the shareholder or director may have voted for the proposition, and the security given was to secure an indebtedness to himself: Warfield v. Marshall County Canning Co., 72-666.

Power as to real property: The power of a railway corporation to whom public lands are granted to hold such lands is a question between the corporation and the government, and cannot be raised as against the corporation by a third party in an action by the company for possession of the lands so granted: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lewis, 53-101.

The grant, by the law under which a corporation is organized, of the power to make contracts gives it the power to make a sale of its real property and convey the same: Buell v. Buckingham, 16-284.

A limitation upon the power to sell operates also as a limitation on the power to convey: Middleton Savings Bank v. Dubuque, 15-394.

Exemption of property of members from liability for debts: The corporation may exempt the private property of its members from liability for corporate debts: Spense v. Iowa Valley Const. Co., 36-407; Larson v. Dayton, 52-597.

The only case in which the private property of members becomes liable for corporate debts is that specified in the statute relating to failure to take proper steps in organizing (§ 1618): First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43-424, 436.

A stockholder can be made liable to the creditors of a corporation only to the extent of his unpaid subscription to the capital stock: Warfield v. Marshall County Canning Co., 72-666.

Where a statute exempted from liability for corporate debts stockholders in corporations organized under the general incorporation laws, held, that in order that the stockholders of the corporation should be exempt from liability it must appear that the corporation was organized under such general statute: Kaiser v. Lawrence Savings Bank, 56-104.

Where a corporation is stockholder in another corporation, the stockholders of the former are not thereby individually stockholders in the latter, and cannot be held liable as such: Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49-317.

The power to sue and be sued: A corporation must sue and be sued in its corporate name: Chicago, D. & M. R. Co. v. Keisel, 43-39.

Corporate name: A variance from the true style of a corporation will not have the effect to defeat its contract if it appears that the corporation was intended to be bound by and described in the instrument: Athearn v. Independent Dist., 33-105.

Where a note was made payable to the order of "The Equitable Life Insurance Company of Iowa at its office," and was dated at the "Office of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, Des Moines, Iowa," held, that although the two names were not identical, yet it was reasonably apparent that they referred to the same corporation: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Gleason, 56-47.

Where the name of the corporation consists of a number of words, the omission, alteration or transposition of any of the words in the name used, if the words in the name used are synonymous with the true name of the corporation, is not a misnomer: Martin v. Central Iowa R. Co., 59-411.

The use of the word "railroad" instead of "railway" in naming a corporation in an indictment for embezzling the funds of such corporation, held not to be material: State v. Goode, 63-593.

A railroad company cannot, in a legal proceeding, be properly designated by the initial letters of the words constituting its name, even though it may be possible to show that it is popularly known by its initial letters: Accola v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70-185.

Change of name: Where a note given in aid of a corporation operating a college provided that upon the payment of a proportion of the note a scholarship in the college should be issued, and afterward the corporate name of the institution was changed, held, that the new corporation succeeding to the rights of the old might sue upon such note, and the maker would be entitled to a scholarship therein according to the same terms: Trustees of Northwestern College v. Schwagler, 37-577.

The corporate name is that which is adopted in the articles of incorporation. If the name is changed it must be done by changing the articles, and the best evidence as to the contents of the articles is the articles themselves; therefore, held, that parol evidence of a change of name was not sufficient: Chicago, D. & M. R. Co. v. Keisel, 43-39.

1610. Articles adopted and recorded. 1060; 17 G. A., ch. 23. Previous to commencing any business, except that of their own organization, they must adopt articles of incorporation, which must be signed and acknowledged by the incorporators, and recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county where the principal place of business is to be, in a book kept therefor; the recorder must record such articles as aforesaid, within five days after the same are filed in his office, and certify thereon the time when the same was filed in his office, and the book and page where the record thereof will be found. The said articles and certificate of recorder shall be then recorded in the office of secretary of state, in a book kept for that purpose. [R., § 1152; C., '51, § 675; 13 G. A., ch. 172, §§ 2, 3.]

A failure to file the articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state does not, under § 1618, render the stockholders individually liable (the section being discussed in the opinions of a divided court): First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43-424; followed in Eisfeld v. Kenworth, 50-389.

As to change of articles see § 1615 and notes.

1611. Limit of indebtedness. 1061; 20 G. A., ch. 22; 21 G. A., ch. 57. Such articles of incorporation must fix the highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which the corporation is at any one time to be subject, which must in no case, except in that of risks of insurance companies, exceed two-thirds of its capital stock. Provided, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to the bonds or other railway securities to be hereafter issued or guaranteed by railway companies of this state, in aid of the location, construction and equipment of railways, to the amount of not exceeding sixteen thousand dollars per mile of single track, standard gauge, or eight thousand dollars per mile of single track, narrow gauge, lines of road for each mile of railway actually constructed and equipped. Provided, further, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to the debentures or bonds of any company, duly incorporated under the provisions of this chapter, the payment of which debentures or bonds shall be secured by an actual transfer of real estate securities for the benefit and protection of purchasers of said debentures or bonds, such securities to be at least equal in amount to the par value of such bonds or debentures, and to be first liens upon unincumbered real estate worth at least twice the amount loaned thereon. [R., § 1153; C., '51, § 676.]

The incurring of liabilities greater than here provided does not render the stockholders individually liable: Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 43-317.

A private corporation is liable, at least to the extent of the consideration received, for indebtedness contracted in excess of the limit imposed by the articles of incorporation. In such case the corporation is estopped from setting up the limit: Humphrey v. Patrons', etc., Ass'n, 50-607.

The debt of a corporation beyond the limits of its indebtedness is not invalid even though held by the director of the corporation. The director in this respect occupies no different position from that of any other creditor, if the debt was contracted in good faith: Garrett v. Burlington Plow Co., 70-697; Warfield v. Marshall County Canning Co., 72-666.

NOTICE PUBLISHED.

1612. For what time. 1062. A notice must also be published, for four weeks in succession, in some newspaper as convenient as practicable to the principal place of business. [R., § 1154; C., '51, § 677.]

It seems that acts of a corporation will not be valid as corporate acts unless publication of notice of the organization is made as required by law: Eisfeld v. Kenworth, 50-389.

1613. What to contain. 1063. Such notice must contain:

1. The name of the corporation and its principal place of transacting business;

2. The general nature of the business to be transacted;

3. The amount of capital stock authorized, and the times and conditions on which it is to be paid in;

4. The time of the commencement and termination of the corporation;

5. By what officers or persons the affairs of the corporation are to be conducted, and the times at which they will be elected;

6. The highest amount of indebtedness to which the corporation is at any time to subject itself;

7. Whether private property is to be exempt from corporate debts. [R., § 1155; C., '51, § 678.]

Where the articles of incorporation did not state the principal place of business, or the time of commencement of business, held, that the publication of such articles was not sufficient notice, and that there was such failure to comply with this section as to render the stockholders individually liable under § 1618: Clegg v. Grange Co., 61-121.

As to contracts in excess of the limit of indebtedness, see notes to § 1611.

1614. May begin business. 1064; 17 G. A., ch. 23. The corporation may commence business as soon as the articles of incorporation are filed in the office of the recorder of deeds, and their doings shall be valid if the publication in a newspaper is made, and articles recorded in the office of the secretary of state within three months from such filing in the recorder's office. [R., § 1156; C., '51, § 679; 13 G. A., ch. 772, § 4.]

Failure to file articles in the office of secretary of state within three months does not render the acts of the corporation void, nor deprive it of its franchises without proceedings being instituted for that purpose: First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43-424.

1615. Change of articles. 1065; 22 G. A., ch. 88. Any of the provisions of the articles of incorporation may be changed at any annual meeting of the stockholders or special meeting called for that purpose; but said changes shall not be valid unless recorded and published as the original articles are required to be; and said changes in the articles need only be signed and acknowledged by the officers of said corporation. [R., § 1157; C., '51, § 680.]

A change in the articles made in the manner therein provided, and properly recorded and published, is as binding upon stockholders who do not as upon those who do consent thereto: Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. White, 5-409.

If a corporation procures an alteration to be made in its charter by which a new and different business is superadded to that originally contemplated, such of the stockholders as do not assent to the alteration will be absolved from liability on their subscriptions to the capital stock: Ibid.

But where a change in the charter merely related to the time of payment of instalments of subscriptions to stock, held, that by the subscription under the charter the subscriber assented to the change afterward made in pursuance of such provisions: Ibid.

Where the corporation has assumed to make a contract authorized by its amended articles, and has received the consideration therefor, it cannot escape liability upon the ground that such amended articles had not been recorded: Humphrey v. Patrons', etc., Ass'n, 50-607.

Articles of incorporation of a company organized for pecuniary profit can be amended only by an instrument signed and acknowledged by the person or persons duly authorized so to do and recorded: Day v. Mill Owners' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 75-694.

A material or radical change in the objects of a corporation will release the subscriber of stock from liability thereon, but immaterial changes which cannot possibly prejudice such subscriber will not affect him: Union Ag'l, etc., Ass'n v. Neill, 31-95.

An amendment to a charter not materially changing the original purposes of the corporation, held not sufficient to excuse stockholder from liability for stock subscribed: Peoria & R. I. R. Co. v. Preston, 35-115.

Amendments to the articles of incorporation of a college in accordance with provisions made therein for amendment, affecting the method in which trustees were to be appointed, but not the general purposes and objects of the corporation, held not sufficient to release the maker of a scholarship note from his liability thereon: Washington College v. Duke, 14-14.

1616. Dissolution. 1066. No corporation can be dissolved prior to the period fixed in the articles of incorporation, except by unanimous consent, unless a different rule has been adopted in their articles. [R., § 1159; C., '51, § 682.]

1617. Notice of. 1067. The same period of newspaper publication must precede any such premature dissolution of a corporation as is required at its creation. [R., § 1160; C., '51, § 683.]

1618. Individual property liable. 1068. A failure to comply substantially with the foregoing requisitions in relation to organization and publicity, renders the individual property of the stockholders liable for the corporate debts. But this section shall not be deemed applicable to railway corporations and corporators, and stockholders in railway companies shall be liable only for the amount of stock held by them in said companies. [R., §§ 1166, 1338; C., '51, § 689.]

Under this section, held, that a failure to file the articles did not alone render the stockholders individually liable: First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43-424; Eisfeld v. Kenworth, 50-389; Stokes v. Findlay, 4 McCrary, 205.

In the clause "in relation to organization and publicity," the word "and" should be construed as "or." A failure in either respect will render the stockholders individually liable: Eisfeld v. Kenworth, 50-389.

So held in case of a failure to publish any notice whatever: Ibid.; Marshall v. Harris, 55-182.

Where the articles of incorporation did not state the principal place of business, or the time of commencement of business, held, that the publication of such articles was not sufficient notice, and that there was such failure to comply with the requirements as to notice as to render the stockholders individually liable: Clegg v. Grange Co., 61-121.

Failure to comply with the statutory requirements as to posting a copy of the by-laws and a statement of the amount of capital stock subscribed, etc., will not render the stockholders liable: Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49-317; McKellar v. Stout, 14-359.

A failure to properly keep the books, as required by statute, does not render the stockholders individually liable. If the books are fraudulently kept, those guilty of participation in the fraud may be held liable: Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49-317.

Nor does the incurring of liabilities greater than allowed by statute render the stockholders individually liable: Ibid.

While there may be irregularities or omissions to comply with provisions merely directory, which would be sufficient to sustain an action brought to declare a forfeiture, but are insufficient to sustain an action to enforce individual liability of a stockholder, yet if the attempt to incorporate is under a general law, and there is a material non-compliance therewith, then there is such want of incorporation that exemption from individual liability is not secured: Kaiser v. Lawrence Savings Bank, 56-104.

In case of suit against individuals claiming exemption from liability on the ground of their having become a corporation under a general statute, a stricter measure of compliance with the statutory requirements must be shown than in case the plea of nul tiel corporation is set up in a suit between the corporation and the stockholder or other individual, on liability contracted: Ibid.

Where a contract is made with an unincorporated association, or a part of the members thereof, the other contracting party is bound thereby: Reding v. Anderson, 72-498.

Stockholders in railway companies are, by express provision, not liable beyond the amount of stock held by them in such companies: First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43-424.

A construction company having power under its articles to construct and operate a railway is a railway corporation within the meaning of the statute: Ibid.; Langan v. Iowa & M. Const. Co., 49-317.

DURATION.

1619. How renewed. 1069. Corporations for the construction of any work of internal improvement, or for the business of life insurance, may be formed to endure fifty years; those formed for other purposes cannot exceed twenty years in duration; but in either case they may be renewed, from time to time, for periods not greater respectively than was at first permissible, if three-fourths of the votes cast at any regular election for that purpose be in favor of such renewal, and if those wishing a renewal will purchase the stock of those opposed to the renewal at its fair current value. [R., § 1158; C., '51, § 681; 12 G. A. ch. 173, § 26.]

Whether the provisions of this section as to renewal are applicable to such corporations as are described in § 1649, quære: Byers v. McCartney, 62-339.

1620. For agricultural, horticultural, and cemetery purposes.

1070. Corporations for agricultural or horticultural purposes, and cemetery associations, may be formed to endure any length of time that may be provided in the articles of incorporation; but the general assembly may, at any session, fix a time when all such corporations shall be dissolved. Such corporations shall not own to exceed nine sections of land, and the improvements and necessary personal property for the proper management thereof; and the articles of incorporation shall provide a mode by which any member may, at any time, withdraw therefrom, and also the mode of determining the amount to be received by such member upon withdrawal and for the payment thereof to such member, subject only to the rights of the creditors of such corporation. [R., § 1185.]

FRAUD — CONSEQUENCES OF.

1621. Penalty for. 1071. Intentional fraud in failing to comply substantially with the articles of incorporation, or in deceiving the public or individuals in relation to their means or their liabilities, shall subject those guilty thereof to fine and imprisonment, or both, at the discretion of the court. Any person who has sustained injury from such fraud, may also recover damages therefor against those guilty of participating in such fraud. [R., § 1163; C., '51, § 686.]

To render stockholders liable for fraud in deceiving the public as to the means or liabilities of the corporation, there must be something done with the fraudulent intention of deceiving. The intention to deceive is not sufficient. There must be some act fraudulently done: Miller v. Bradish, 69-278.

Fraud in such cases is not to be presumed. The fact that a person is a stockholder in an insolvent corporation does not, of itself, render him liable: Spense v. Iowa Valley Const. Co., 36-407.

Where it is sought to recover from individual officers of a corporation the amount of a judgment against the corporation, under a claim that such officers have rendered themselves liable by fraud, proof of absence of intentional fraud and diversion of assets to their own use will relieve defendants from liability. This section applies only to officers or others guilty of intentional fraud: Hoffman v. Dickey, 54-135.

And held that, in an action for damages under this section, the particular respect in which there was a failure to comply with the articles, etc., resulting in damage to plaintiff, or the particular act of deception, etc., must be specified: White v. Hosford, 37-566.

The rule that, when there is no principal who can be made legally responsible, the agent who attempts to act for and bind the principal will himself be personally chargeable, applied to the case of officers of a bank illegally organized: Allen v. Pegram, 16-163.

1622. Diversion of funds. 1072. The diversion of the funds of the corporation to other objects than those mentioned in their articles and in the notices published as aforesaid, if any person be thereby injured, and the payment of dividends which leave insufficient funds to meet the liabilities of the corporation, shall be deemed such frauds as will subject those therein concerned to the penalties of the preceding section, and such dividends, or their equivalent, in the hands of individual stockholders shall be subject to said liabilities. [R., § 1164; C., '51, § 687.]

To render officers liable for diversion of funds or paying dividends so as to leave insufficient funds to meet liabilities, it must appear that the entire property of the corporation is not sufficient to pay its indebtedness. A dividend may lawfully be declared although the corporation does not have cash on hand sufficient to pay all its liabilities: Miller v. Bradish, 69-278.

The word "liability" as used in this section means existing indebtedness the payment of which can be enforced, and does not include the corporate liability for payment of capital stock, such liability being remote and contingent. The amount of the capital stock is therefore not to be included in determining whether the liabilities of the corporation exceed its funds so as to render the declaration of a dividend illegal: Ibid.

If the corporation has sufficient assets to pay all its debts at the time a dividend is paid, held illegal, nor a diversion of the funds to ob-then the payment of such dividend cannot be jects other than those authorized: Ibid.

1623. Insurance companies. 1073. Dividends by insurance companies, made in good faith before their knowledge of the happening of actual losses, are not intended to be prevented or punished by the provisions of the preceding section. [R., § 1165; C., '51, § 688.]

1624. Forfeiture. 1074. Either such failure, or the practice of fraud in the manner hereinbefore mentioned, shall cause a forfeiture of all the privileges hereby conferred, and the courts may proceed to wind up the business of the corporation by an information in the manner prescribed by law. [R., § 1167; C., '51, § 690.]

1625. Keeping false accounts. 1075. The intentional keeping of false books or accounts by any corporation, whereby any one is injured, is a misdemeanor on the part of those concerned therein, and any person shall be presumed to be concerned therein whose duty it was to see that the books and accounts were correctly kept. [R., § 1168; C., '51, § 691.]

BY-LAWS, INDEBTEDNESS, TRANSFER OF SHARES, NON-USER.

1626. By-laws posted. 1076. A copy of the by-laws of the corporation, with the name of all its officers appended thereto, must be posted in the principal places of business, and be subject to public inspection. [R., § 1161; C., '51, § 684.]

1627. Amount of stock and indebtedness posted. 1077. A statement of the amount of capital stock subscribed, the amount of capital actually paid in, and the amount of the indebtedness in a general way, must also be kept posted up in a like manner; which statement must be corrected as often as any material change takes place in relation to any part of the subject-matter of such statement. [R., § 1162; C., '51, § 685.]

A failure to comply with this, or with the property of stockholders liable: See notes to preceding section, does not render the private § 1618.

1628. Transfer of shares. 1078. The transfer of shares is not valid, except as between the parties thereto, until it is regularly entered on the books of the company, so as to show the name of the person by, and to whom transferred, the numbers or other designation of the shares and the date of the transfer; but such transfer shall not in any way exempt the person making it from any liability of said corporation created prior thereto. The books of the company must be so kept as to show intelligibly the original stockholders, their respective interests, the amount paid on their shares, and all transfers thereof; and such books, or a correct copy thereof, so far as the items mentioned in this section are concerned, shall be subject to the inspection of any person desiring the same. [R., § 1169; C., '51, § 692.]

The provision of statute as to the transfer of shares is intended as a protection to the company, and only applies where the sale or transfer in some way conflicts with the interests of the corporation: Moor v. Walker, 46-164.

A provision of the by-laws of a corporation, that no transfer of stock shall be valid unless approved by the board of directors, may be enforced to protect the rights of the corporation, but cannot be used to defeat the rights of others and operate as a restraint upon the disposition of the stock. The transferee may hold the stock and enforce a transfer thereof in proper form in the absence of any right or lien of the company to or upon such stock: Farmers', etc., Bank v. Wasson, 48-336.

In the absence of any contract and provisions of the charter and by-laws, a corporation has no implied lien upon the shares of a stockholder indebted to it to secure such indebtedness, and a transfer of stock by such stockholder to secure his individual debt will not be fraudulent as to the corporation in the event that he is indebted to it, and will be valid although not assented to and approved by its directors as required by its by-laws: Ibid.

Shares in the capital stock of the corporation are the property of and under the control of the shareholder. Even though the by-laws of the association require that in order to constitute a valid transfer the same must be entered upon the stock-book, yet this does not limit the absolute right of sale and alienation by the stockholder: Hershire v. First Nat. Bank, 35-272.

The written assignment and delivery of the certificates of stock, coupled with authority to transfer the same upon the books of the company, is sufficient to vest in the transferee the right to the stock: Courtright v. Deeds, 37-503.

The transfer of stock on the books of a corporation upon surrender of a previous certificate, without the issuance of a stock certificate in conformity therewith, is sufficient to bind the corporation and third persons to such transfer: First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47-575.

Although a transfer not entered on the books of the company is valid as between the parties thereto, it will not be valid as against an attaching creditor, who proceeds in the manner provided by § 4181, to attach the stock as the property of the person who appears on the books to be the owner thereof. If the attaching creditor or a purchaser had knowledge of the transfer it may be that the court of equity would protect the transferee's rights: Pt. Madison Lumber Co. v. Batavian Bank, 71-270.

A failure to properly keep the books, as here provided, does not render the stockholders individually liable. If the books are fraudulently kept those guilty of participation in the fraud may be held liable under § 1621: Langan v. L. & M. Const. Co., 49-317.

1629. Non-user. 1079. Any corporation organized in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, shall cease to exist by the non-user of its franchises for two years at any one time, but such body shall not forfeit its franchises by reason of its omission to elect officers, or to hold meetings at any time prescribed by the articles of incorporation or by-laws, provided such act be done within two years of the time appointed therefor. [R., § 1170; C., '51, § 693.]

1630. Expiration. 1080. Corporations whose charters expire by their own limitation, or the voluntary act of the stockholders, may, nevertheless, continue to act for the purpose of winding up their concerns. [R., § 1171; C., '51, § 694.]

A corporation will be kept alive by statute for the purpose of discharging its contracts and disposing of its property: Muscatine Western E. Co. v. Horton, 38-33, 45.

The voluntary dissolution of a corporation does not take away its power to act for the purpose of winding up its affairs, nor affect the right of a creditor, in equity at least, to be released from the inequitable consequences of such dissolution: Muscatine Turnverein v. Funk, 18-469.

1631. Sinking fund. 1081. For the purpose of repairs, rebuilding, or enlarging, or to meet contingencies, or for the purpose of a sinking fund, the corporation may establish a fund which they may loan, and in relation to which they may take the proper securities. [R., § 1176; C., '51, § 699.]

PRIVATE PROPERTY LIABLE FOR CORPORATE DEBTS.

1632. Individual liability. 1082. Neither anything in this chapter contained, nor any provisions in the articles of incorporation, shall exempt the stockholders from individual liability to the amount of the unpaid instalments on the stock owned by them, or transferred by them for the purpose of defrauding creditors, and execution against the company may, to that extent, be levied upon the private property of any such individual. [R., § 1172; C., '51, § 695; 13 G. A., ch. 172, § 6.]

Apportionment: In an action by a creditor of the corporation against a stockholder to compel payment of the balance due on stock, held, that under an allegation that the plaintiff was enforcing his claim unequally against different stockholders, and accepting settlements with others without crediting the payment thereof upon his claim, a receiver should be appointed and the prosecution of plaintiff's action be enjoined until the amounts due from all the stockholders could be ascertained and reported so that a pro rata apportionment might be made: Habitzel v. Latham, 35-550.

Stock issued at less than par: The officers of the corporation cannot issue to a creditor stock of the corporation to be accepted by him at less than its par value in payment of his claim, with the agreement that it is to be paid-up stock, and the creditor thus accepting stock becomes liable as the holder of unpaid stock to the extent that the par value exceeds the debt for which it is taken: Jackson v. Traer, 64-469.

A creditor thus accepting stock becomes a stockholder although he has not subscribed for stock. A subscription for stock is only necessary to render a person a stockholder where the stock is not delivered: Ibid.

The fact that the stock was, at the time of its issuance and acceptance, worthless, would not relieve a stockholder, accepting it, from liability: Ibid.

The president and directors of an insolvent corporation may issue stock to a creditor in payment of his claim at less than its par value if such a transaction is for the benefit of the corporation, without rendering him liable for the balance of its par value: Clark v. Bever, 31 Fed. Rep., 670.

The officers of a corporation cannot, without express authority, sell the stock of the corporation at a less rate than its par value as fixed by the charter: Oliphant v. Woodburn Coal, etc., Co., 63-332.

A creditor who accepts stock issued to him by the officers of the corporation below par in payment of his debt holds the same as unpaid stock to the extent that its par value exceeds his claim: Jackson v. Traer, 64-469.

The public has a right to assume, where the stock of a company has all been issued as full-paid stock, that it has been paid for in full, either in money or in property at a fair value; but while the fact that full-paid stock has been issued upon a partial payment of its face might be ground for proceeding in the interest of the public to wind up the company, it is not a ground upon which the stockholder who has received paid-up stock can object to the validity of the contract for the purchase of such stock: Goff v. Hawkeye Pump, etc., Co., 62-691.

Unpaid instalments: Where all the capital stock of a corporation outstanding was such as had been issued to stockholders who had conveyed to the corporation the patent-right for an article which the corporation was authorized to manufacture, and such patent-right had become worthless, held, that such stockholders could not claim that their stock was paid up, and were liable for the amount of their stock: Chisholm v. Foray, 65-333.

Officers of a corporation cannot, by agreement with a stockholder, release him, to the prejudice of creditors, from his obligation to pay his subscription unless the transaction is characterized by the utmost fairness. Therefore, held, that conveyances of real estate made to a corporation by directors and other stockholders in full payment of their stock, at a price largely in excess of its real value, did not release such stockholders from liability for the excess of their subscriptions over the real value of the property conveyed, even to creditors becoming such after the conveyance: Osgood v. King, 42-478.

Where the president of a corporation gave a mortgage to the corporation in payment of shares of stock to the amount of such mortgage, and the same was included in the statement of the company's assets, held, that he could not afterwards surrender such stock and receive back the mortgage after insolvency of the company: Burnham v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 36-632.

Although the mortgage in such case provided that it was payable in the capital stock certificates of the company, yet, held, that as those doing business with the company had not an opportunity to know the terms of the mortgage, it could not be discharged as to the creditors of the company by surrender of the identical shares of stock which had been issued therefor: Ibid.

Under the national banking act making stockholders liable, in case of failure of the bank, in an amount equal to the amount of stock held by them, a holder of stock at the time of the dissolution of the bank becomes liable for the indebtedness thus arising upon such stock, although he holds the shares as collateral security, or as a trustee: Hale v. Walker, 31-344.

Subscription payable in property: The fact that a subscription for stock was to be paid in property instead of money does not relieve the subscriber from liability, if the property was not turned over as agreed. The company cannot, by any arrangement or action upon its part, release the subscriber from his liability: Singer v. Given, 61-93.

Set-off: The subscriber cannot, as between himself and the creditor, set up claims for services, or for use of property, for which the corporation is indebted to him: Ibid.

Release of subscriber: A railroad corporation may make, if acting in good faith, a valid and binding contract, releasing a stockholder from liability upon his subscription to the stock of the corporation, either with or without the consent of the creditors and stockholders: Gelpcke v. Blake, 19-263.

Enforcement of liability: An execution against the company can only be levied on the private property of a stockholder after a judgment has been obtained against him as provided in § 1634: Bayliss v. Swift, 40-648; and see Hampson v. Weare, 4-13; Bailey v. D. W. E. Co., 13-97.

Where there is a failure to comply with the requirements of the statute with reference to organization and publicity, such as to render the stockholder individually liable, he becomes primarily liable, and may be sued in the first instance. His relation to the creditor is not different from what it would have been if no attempt had been made at incorporation: Marshall v. Harris, 55-182.

1633. Corporate property exhausted. 1083. In none of the cases contemplated in this chapter, can the private property of the stockholders be levied upon for the payment of corporate debts, while corporate property can be found with which to satisfy the same; but it will be sufficient proof that no property can be found, if an execution has issued on a judgment against the corporation, and a demand has been thereon made of some one of the last acting officers of the body for property on which to levy, and if he neglects to point out any such property. [R., § 1173; C., '51, § 696.]

The fact of demand and refusal may be shown by the official return upon the execution. Such return, as between the corporation and the creditor, must be regarded as conclusive. Evidence may be introduced to show that no such return was made, but it is not competent to dispute it by showing that no demand was made as therein stated: Singer v. Given, 61-93.

1634. Proceedings against stockholder. 1084. Before any stockholder can be charged with the payment of a judgment rendered for a corporate debt, an action shall be brought against him, in any stage of which he may point out corporate property subject to levy; and upon his satisfying the court of the existence of such property, by affidavit or otherwise, the cause may be continued, or execution against him stayed, until the property can be levied upon and sold, and the court may subsequently render judgment for any balance which there may be after disposing of the corporate property; but, if a demand of property has been made as contemplated in the preceding section, the costs of said action shall in any event, be paid by the company or the defendant therein, but he shall not be permitted to controvert the validity of the judgment rendered against the corporation, unless it was rendered through fraud and collusion. [R., § 1174; C., '51, § 697.]

An execution against the company can only be levied on the private property of a stockholder after a judgment has been obtained against him as provided by statute: Bayliss v. Swift, 40-648; and see Hampson v. Weare, 4-13; Bailey v. Dubuque Western R. Co., 13-97.

The action against the stockholder, here contemplated, is an ordinary action, followed by an ordinary judgment; after which an execution against the corporation may, to the extent of such judgment, be levied upon the private property of the stockholder, as provided in § 1632: Bayliss v. Swift, 40-648.

This section contemplates the rendition of a judgment against the stockholder, and not merely the awarding of an execution against him: Singer v. Given, 61-93.

A prior statute upon the same subject considered: Donworth v. Coolbaugh, 5-300.

To charge a stockholder it must appear that there was a valid claim against the corporation: Corse v. Sanford, 14-235.

1635. Indemnity; contribution. 1085. When the private property of a stockholder is taken for a corporate debt, he may maintain an action against the corporation for indemnity, and against any of the other stockholders for contribution. [R., § 1175; C., '51, § 698.]

1636. Franchise sold on execution. 1086. The franchise of a corporation may be levied upon under execution and sold, but the corporation shall not become thereby dissolved, and no dissolution of the original corporation shall affect the franchise, and the purchaser becomes vested with all the powers of the corporation therefor. Such franchise shall be sold without appraisal. [R., § 1177; C., '51, § 700.]

1637. Production of books. 1087. In any proceedings by or against a corporation, or against a stockholder, to charge his private property or the dividends received by him, the court is invested with power to compel the officers to produce the books of the corporation, on the motion of either party, upon a proper cause being shown for that purpose. [R., § 1178; C., '51, § 701.]

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

1638. Single person may incorporate. 1088. A single individual may entitle himself to all the advantages of this chapter, provided he complies substantially with all its requirements, omitting those which from the nature of the case are inapplicable. [R., § 1179; C., '51, § 702.]

1639. Estoppel. 1089. No body of men acting as a corporation under the provisions of this chapter, shall be permitted to set up the want of a legal organization as a defense to an action against them as a corporation; nor shall any person sued on a contract made with such a corporation, or sued for an injury to its property, or a wrong done to its interest, be permitted to set up a want of such legal organization in his defense. [R., § 1181; C., '51, § 704.]

A party contracting with a corporation cannot deny its corporate existence: Howe Machine Co. v. Snow, 32-433; Courtright v. Deeds, 37-503, 511.

A person sued upon such contract cannot set up want of legal organization, etc.: Washington College v. Duke, 14-14.

Among acts which would constitute acting as a corporation, such as by statute would prevent the corporation from denying its legal existence, would be the adoption and use of a corporate seal, the taking of subscriptions and the issue of certificates of stock: but the acts of persons as members of a religious society in holding business meetings, and acquiring property, receiving and paying out money, appointing agents to make settlements, etc., held not sufficient to constitute such "acting as a corporation;" also held, that the passage of by-laws is not an assumption of distinctive corporate powers; nor is the attempt to incorporate: Kirkpatrick v. United Presb. Church, 63-372.

Where the corporation has assumed to make a contract authorized by its amended articles, and has received the consideration therefor, it cannot escape liability upon the ground that such amended articles had not been recorded: Humphrey v. Patrons', etc., Ass'n, 50-607.

The fact that a member of the board of directors has been irregularly elected constitutes no defense in an action against the corporation for indebtedness created: Carrothers v. Newton Mineral Spring Co., 61-681.

When a corporation seeks to enforce the bequests in a will, duly admitted to probate, its claim cannot be resisted on the ground that it has not been legally organized. Such objection can be taken only by a proceeding by quo warranto: Quinn v. Shields, 62-129.

The estoppel provided for by this section certainly applies only to a body of men acting as a corporation for pecuniary profit. Whether the section can be applied to persons acting as a corporation other than for pecuniary profit, quære: Kirkpatrick v. United Presb. Church, 63-372.

1640. Legislative control. 1090. The articles of incorporation, by-laws, rules, and regulations of corporations hereafter organized under the provisions of this title, or whose organization may be adopted or amended hereunder, shall, at all times, be subject to legislative control, and may be, at any time, altered, abridged, or set aside by law, and every franchise obtained, used, or enjoyed by such corporation, may be regulated, withheld, or be subject to conditions imposed upon the enjoyment thereof, whenever the general assembly shall deem necessary for the public good.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

1641. Filing articles; permit. 21 G. A. ch. 76, § 1. Hereafter any corporation for pecuniary profit other than for carrying on mercantile or manufacturing business organized under the laws of any other state or of any territory of the United States or of any foreign country desiring to transact its business, or to continue in the transaction of its business in this state shall be and hereby is required, on and after September, [first] A. D. 1886, to file with the secretary of state a certified copy of its articles of incorporation duly attested, accompanied by a resolution of its board of directors or stockholders, authorizing the filing thereof and also authorizing service of process to be made upon any of its officers or agents in this state engaged in transacting its business, and requesting the issuance to such corporation of a permit to transact business in this state. Said application to contain a stipulation that said permit shall be subject to each of the provisions of this act. And thereupon the secretary of state shall issue to such corporation a permit in such form as he may prescribe for the general transaction of the business of such corporation. And upon the receipt of such permit such corporation shall be permitted and authorized to conduct and carry on its business in this state. Provided that nothing in this act contained shall be construed, to prevent any foreign corporations, from buying, selling, and otherwise dealing, in notes, bonds, mortgages, and other securities, or from enforcing the collection of the same, in the federal courts, in the same manner, and to the same extent, as is now authorized by law.

1642. Permit essential. 21 G. A., ch. 76, § 2. No foreign corporation which has not in good faith complied with the provisions of this act, and taken out a permit, shall hereafter be authorized to exercise the power of eminent domain or exercise any of the rights and privileges conferred upon corporations until they have so complied herewith and taken out such permit.

1643. Removal of causes. 21 G. A., ch. 76, § 3. Any foreign corporation sued or impleaded in any of the courts of this state upon any contract made or executed in this state or to be performed in this state or for any act or omission, public or private, arising, originating, or happening in the state, who shall remove any such cause from such state court into any of the federal courts held or sitting in this state, for the cause that such corporation is a non-resident of this state or a resident of another state than that of the adverse party, or of local prejudice against such corporation, shall thereupon forfeit and render null and void any permit issued or authority granted to such corporation to transact business in this state; such forfeiture to be determined from the record of removal, and to date from the date of filing of the application on which such removal is affected [effected], and whenever any corporation shall thus forfeit its said permit no new permit shall be issued to it for the space of three months, unless the executive council shall for satisfactory reasons cause it to be issued sooner.

This statute is unconstitutional for the reason that it makes the stipulation not to remove cases to the federal courts a condition for obtaining the permit to do business: Baron v. Burnside, 121 U. S., 186.

1644. Penalty. 21 G. A., ch. 76, § 4. Any foreign corporation that shall carry on its business and transact the same on and after September first, 1886, in the state of Iowa by its officers, agents, or otherwise, without having complied with this statute and taken out, and having a valid permit shall forfeit and pay to the state for each and every day in which such business is transacted and carried on the sum of one hundred dollars to be recovered by suit in any court having jurisdiction. And any agent, officer or employee who shall knowingly act or transact such business for such corporation when it has no valid permit as provided herein shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and for each offense shall be fined not to exceed one hundred dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed thirty days and pay all costs of prosecution.

1645. 21 G. A., ch. 76, § 5. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions hereof are hereby repealed; provided, that nothing contained in this act shall relieve any company, corporation, association or partnership from the performance of any duty or obligation now enjoined upon them or required of them or either of them by the laws now in force.

DOUBLE LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS IN BANKS.

1646. When incurred. 18 G. A., ch. 208, § 1. Chapter one of title nine of the code of 1873, is hereby amended by adding thereto as follows: That all stockholders or shareholders in associations or corporations organized under said chapter one aforesaid, for the purpose of transacting a banking business, buying or selling exchange, receiving deposits of money, or discounting notes, shall be individually and severally liable to the creditors of such association or corporation of which they are stockholders or shareholders, over and above the amount of stock by them held therein, to an amount equal to their respective shares so held for all its liabilities accruing while they remained such stockholders; and should any such association or corporation become insolvent, and its assets be found insufficient to pay its debts and liabilities, its stockholders may be compelled to pay such deficiency in proportion to the amount of stock owned by each, not to exceed the extent of the additional liability hereby created.

The provisions of the constitution, art. 8, § 9, rendering stockholders in a banking corporation or institution individually liable to an amount equal to their respective shares, is held to apply to banks of issue, and not to banks merely of discount and deposit: Allen v. Clayton, 63-11.

Under such constitutional provisions the liability of a stockholder in a bank is not limited in an action against him by a creditor to the proportional sum that can be collected from another stockholder, nor is it affected by the fact of fraudulent acts of the receiver or officers of the bank, nor can such stockholder delay the collection of the amount for which he is liable in order to secure contribution from other stockholders also liable: Stewart v. Lay, 45-604.

1647. Distribution to creditors. 18 G. A., ch. 208, § 2. Should the whole amount for which the stockholders are made individually responsible as provided by section one of this act [§ 1646] be found in any case to be inadequate to the payment of all the debts of any such association or corporation, after the application of its assets to the payment of such debts, then the amount due from such stockholders on account of their individual liability created by this act, as such, shall be distributed equally among all the creditors of such corporation in proportion to the amount due to each.

1648. How measured. 18 G. A., ch. 208, § 3. The personal liability in this chapter provided for is over and above the stock owned by the stockholders in such corporations and any amount paid thereon.

CHAPTER 2.

CORPORATIONS OTHER THAN THOSE FOR PECUNIARY PROFIT.

1649. How created; endure how long. 1091; 21 G. A., ch. 71; 22 G. A., ch. 87. Associations for the establishment of seminaries of learning, churches, lyceums, libraries, lodges of odd fellows, or masons, and other institutions of a benevolent or charitable character; temperance societies and trades union and other organizations of labor, for the regulation, by lawful means of prices of labor, of hours work, and other matters pertaining to industrial pursuits, agricultural societies, subordinate granges of the patrons of husbandry, and associations for the detection of horse-thieves, and of other depredators upon property, may become incorporated in the manner directed in the preceding chapter, so far as applicable, and shall thereby become vested with all the powers and privileges, and subject to all the liabilities provided by that chapter, except as herein modified. Corporations organized under this chapter shall endure for the period of fifty years from and after their organization unless sooner dissolved by a vote of three-fourths of all the members thereof or by operation of law, and all corporations heretofore organized hereunder shall be extended for a like period unless sooner dissolved in like manner. [R., §§ 1187, 1190, 1191; C., '51, § 708; 13 G. A., ch. 151.]

For the purpose of effecting the objects of such corporation it has power to borrow money by executing notes and mortgages: Thompson v. Lambert, 44-239.

An agricultural society has not, in the absence of express authority in its articles, any power to employ persons to convey people to the fair held by such society, and is not liable for negligence of persons thus employed: Bathe v. D catur County Ag'l Soc'y, 73-11.

The provisions of § 1659, which limit the power of associations or corporations not for pecuniary profit to take by will more than one-fourth of the estate of a person leaving a wife, child or parent surviving, are applicable to voluntary associations of that kind whether incorporated or not: Byers v. McCartney, 62-339.

Whether the provisions of § 1619, as to renewal of corporations, are applicable to corporations such as herein specified, quære: Ibid.

1650. Articles recorded. 1092. Their articles of incorporation shall be recorded by the recorder of deeds of the county where the principal place of business is kept only; but a newspaper publication is not requisite. [R., § 1188; C., '51, § 709; 13 G. A., ch. 172, § 7.]

1651. Dividend. 1093. No dividend, nor distribution of property among the stockholders, shall be made until the dissolution of the corporation. [R., § 1188; C., '51, § 710.]

1652. Degrees conferred. 1094. Corporations of an academical character are invested with authority to confer the degrees usually conferred by such institutions. [R., § 1189; C., '51, § 711.]

CHARITABLE, SCIENTIFIC, AND RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATIONS.

1653. How formed. 1095. Any three or more persons of full age, citizens of the United States, a majority of whom shall be citizens of this state, who desire to associate themselves for benevolent, charitable, scientific, religious, or missionary purposes, may make, sign, and acknowledge before any officer authorized to take the acknowledgments of deeds in this state, and have recorded in the office of the recorder of the county in which the business of such society is to be conducted, a certificate in writing, in which shall be stated the name or title by which such society shall be known, the particular business and objects of such society, the number of trustees, directors, or managers to conduct the same, and the name of the trustees, directors, or managers of such society for the first year of its existence. [R., § 1193; 13 G. A., ch. 172, § 8.]

1654. Certificate; powers. 1096. Upon filing for record the certificate as aforesaid, the persons who shall have signed and acknowledged such certificate, and their associates and successors, shall, by virtue hereof, be a body politic and corporate by the name stated in such certificate, and, by that, they and their successors shall and may have succession, and shall be persons capable of suing and being sued, and may have and use a common seal, which they may alter or change at pleasure; and they and their successors, by their corporate name shall be capable of taking, receiving, purchasing, and holding real and personal estate; and of making by-laws for the management of its affairs, not inconsistent with law. [R., § 1194; 13 G. A., ch. 172, § 9.]

1655. Trustees or managers. 1097. The society so incorporated, may, annually, or oftener, elect from its members its trustees, directors, or managers at such time and place, and in such manner as may be specified in its by-laws, who shall have the control and management of the affairs and funds of the society a majority of whom shall be a quorum for the transaction of business; and whenever any vacancy shall happen among such trustees, directors, or managers, by death, resignation, or neglect to serve, such vacancy shall be filled in such manner as shall be provided by the by-laws of such society. When the body corporate consists of the trustees, directors, or managers of any benevolent, charitable, literary, scientific, religious, or missionary institution, which is or may be established in this state, and which is or may be under the patronage, control, direction, or supervision of any synod, conference, association, or other ecclesiastical body in such state, established agreeably to the laws thereof, such ecclesiastical body may nominate and appoint such trustees, directors, or managers according to usages of the appointing body, and may fill any vacancy which may occur among such trustees, directors, or managers; and when any such institution may be under the patronage, control, direction, or supervision of two or more of such synods, conferences, associations, or other ecclesiastical bodies, such bodies may severally nominate and appoint such proportion of such trustees, directors or managers as shall be agreed upon by those bodies immediately concerned. And any vacancy occurring among such appointees last named, shall be filled by the synod, conference, association, or body having appointed the last incumbent. [R., § 1195; 10 G. A., ch. 12.]

Where a corporation is organized for the purpose of holding and disposing of the property of a religious society, and its officers are elected by the members of the church, the courts will not interfere by mandamus to restore to membership in the corporation a person expelled from the church organization for an alleged offense where there are no property rights involved: Sale v. First Regular Baptist Church, 62-26.

The civil courts will not revise the decisions of churches or religious associations upon ecclesiastical matters, but will interfere with the action of such associations when rights of property or civil rights are involved: Bird v. St. Mark's Church, 62-567.

1656. Academical; meetings. 1098. Any corporation in this state of an academical character, the memberships of which shall consist of lay members and pastors of churches, delegates to any synod, conference, or council, holding its annual meetings alternately in this and one or more adjoining states, may hold its annual meetings for the election of officers and the transaction of business in any adjoining state to this, at such place therein as the said synod, conference, or council shall hold its annual meeting; and the elections so held, and business so transacted, shall be as legal and binding as if held and transacted at the place of business of the corporation in this state. [14 G. A., ch. 48.]

1657. Election. 1099. In case an election of trustees, directors, or managers shall not be made on the day designated by the by-laws, said society for that cause shall not be dissolved, but such election may take place on any other day directed by such by-laws. [R., § 1196.]

1658. Name. 1100. The provisions of this chapter shall not extend or apply to any association or individual who shall, in the certificate filed with the recorder, use or specify a name or style the same as that of any previously existing incorporated society in the county. [R., § 1197; 13 G. A., ch. 172, § 10.]

1659. Devise or bequest. 1101. Any corporation formed under this chapter shall be capable of taking, holding, or receiving property by virtue of any devise or bequest contained in any last will or testament of any person whatsoever; but no person leaving a wife, child, or parent, shall devise or bequeath to such institution or corporation more than one-fourth of his estate after the payment of his debts, and such devise or bequest shall be valid only to the extent of such one-fourth. [R., § 1198.]

The words "such institution" here used refer to the associations named in § 1649; and such associations, whether incorporated or not, cannot take by will more than one-fourth of the estate of a testator who leaves a wife, child or parent: Byers v. McCartney, 62-339.

1660. Re-incorporation. 1102. The trustees, directors, or stockholders of any existing benevolent, charitable, scientific, missionary, or religious corporation, may, by conforming to the requirements of section ten hundred and ninety-five of this chapter [§ 1653], re-incorporate themselves, or continue their existing corporate powers, and all the property and effects of such existing corporation shall vest in and belong to the corporation so re-incorporated or continued. [R., § 1199.]

1661. Changing name; amending articles. 15 G. A., ch. 40, § 1. Any corporation other than those for pecuniary profit may change the corporate name thereof, or amend the articles of incorporation or the original certificate thereto, by a vote of the majority of the members or stockholders of the said corporation in such manner as may be provided by the articles of incorporation thereof.

1662. How effected. 15 G. A., ch. 40, § 2. In case of the body corporate consisting of the trustees, directors, or managers of any benevolent, charitable, literary, scientific, religious, or missionary institution under the patronage of any synod, conference, association, or other ecclesiastical body in the state, or two or more of them, said amendment or change may originate with either of the said trustees, directors, or managers, or with either of the said patronizing bodies, but such change or amendment shall not be made without the vote of a majority of each of said trustees, directors, or managers, and of each of the said patronizing bodies, legally expressed and certified thereto by the secretary, clerk, or recording officer of such board of trustees, directors, or managers and each of the patronizing bodies.

1663. Record. 15 G. A., ch. 40, § 3. The change or amendment of the articles of incorporation shall be recorded by the recorder of deeds as the original articles of incorporation are required to be, and the recorder shall make upon the margin of such record a reference to the book and page of the record of such original articles of incorporation; and from and after the date of such act of recording such change or amendment shall be in full force and effect as the original articles of incorporation so amended.

1664. Effect. 15 G. A., ch. 40, § 4. The corporation by its new name or with such amended articles of incorporation or certificate shall be entitled to all the rights, powers, immunities, and franchises that it possessed before such change or amendment, and shall be liable upon all contracts, obligations, liabilities entered into, incurred, or binding on such corporation by or under the old name or articles of incorporation to the same extent and manner as though no such change or amendment had been made.

CHAPTER 3.

OF STATE AND COUNTY AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES, AND THE STOCK-BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION.

1665. Meeting of agricultural society. 1103. There shall be held at the capitol of the state, on the second Wednesday of January in each year, a meeting of the board of directors of the Iowa state agricultural society, together with the president of each county society in the state, or other delegate therefrom duly authorized in writing, who shall, for the time being, be members of the board; and at such meeting, officers and directors shall be chosen, the place for holding the next annual exhibition shall be determined, premiums on essays and field crops shall be awarded, and all questions relating to the agricultural development of the state may be considered. [R., § 1701.]

1666. Officers; terms. 1104. The officers chosen at such meeting shall be a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and five directors. The president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, shall serve one year, and shall be directors by virtue of their office. The other directors shall serve two years, so that the entire number of such directors in the board shall always be ten, one-half of whom shall be chosen annually. Any five members of the board shall constitute a quorum when regularly convened; and the president of the society shall have power to call meetings of the board whenever he may deem it expedient. [R., § 1700.]

1667. Premium list. 1106. The premium list and rules of exhibition shall be determined and published by the board of directors prior to the first of April in each year. [R., § 1702.]

1668. Annual report. 1107. The said board of directors shall make an annual report to the governor, embracing the proceedings of said society and board of directors for the past year, and an abstract of the proceedings of the several county societies, as well as a general view of the condition of agriculture throughout the state, accompanied with such essays, statements, and recommendations as they may deem interesting and useful, which reports shall be published by the state under the supervision of the secretary of the society. The number of copies to be published shall be three thousand, all of which shall be bound in a manner and style uniform with those bound by the state for the years one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine and one thousand eight hundred and sixty; but said binding shall not cost more than thirty cents per copy. [R., § 1703; 10 G. A., ch. 109, § 5.]

1669. Distribution of reports. 1108. The secretary of state shall distribute the reports as follows: Ten copies to the state university, ten copies to the state library, ten copies to the state agricultural college, one copy to each member of the general assembly, the remainder to the secretary of the state agricultural society, by him to be distributed to the county agricultural societies; and one copy shall be sent to the board of supervisors of each organized county in which there is no agricultural society. [10 G. A., ch. 109, § 6; 12 G. A., ch. 136, § 2.]

DISTRICT AND COUNTY SOCIETIES.

1670. Premiums awarded. 1109. All county agricultural societies shall, annually, offer and award premiums for the improvement of stock, tillage, crops, implements, mechanical fabrics, articles of domestic industry, and such other articles and improvements as they may deem proper. And they shall also so regulate the amount of premiums and the different grades of the same, that small as well as large farmers and artisans may compete therefor. [R., § 1697.]

[The word "so" in the fifth line, between "also" and "regulate," is erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

Such societies may offer a premium to the winner at a horse-race held on its grounds during its annual fair. The provisions of § 1675 with reference to gambling and horse-racing does not apply to races controlled by the society: Delier v. Plymouth County Ag'l Soc'y, 57-481.

1671. List of awards. 1110. Each county society shall publish, annually, a list of the awards and an abstract of the treasurer's account, in one or more newspapers of the county or adjoining counties, and a report of their proceedings during the year, and a synopsis of the awards. They shall also make a report of the condition of agriculture in their county, to the board of directors of the Iowa state agricultural society, which shall be forwarded by mail or otherwise to the secretary of said society on or before the first of December of each year. And the auditor of state, before issuing his warrant in favor of said societies for any amount, shall demand the certificate of the secretary of the state society that such report has been made. [R., § 1698.]

1672. Appropriation from county. 1111. Whenever any county agricultural society, organized according to law, shall have procured in fee-simple, free from incumbrance, land for fair grounds not less than ten acres in extent, the board of supervisors of said county may appropriate and pay to such society, a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars for every thousand inhabitants in said county, to be expended by such society in fitting up such fair grounds, but for no other purpose; but not more than one thousand dollars shall in the aggregate be appropriated to any one society. [11 G. A., ch. 128, § 1.]

1673. Aid from state. 1112. When any county or district agricultural society, composed of one or more counties, have made their report to the state society as provided in the preceding section, and raised during the year any sum of money for actual membership, they shall be entitled to an equal sum, not exceeding two hundred dollars, from the state treasury, upon affidavit of the president, secretary, or treasurer of said society, that such sum was raised for the legitimate purposes of the society during the current year, accompanied by the certificate of the secretary of the state agricultural society that they have reported according to law. [R., § 1704; 10 G. A., ch. 109, § 1; 12 G. A., ch. 136, § 1.]

1674. Report to supervisors. 1113. Each society receiving such appropriation, shall, through its secretary, make to the board of supervisors a detailed statement, with vouchers, showing the legal disbursement of all the moneys so received. [11 G. A., ch. 128, § 2.]

FAIRS.

1675. Regulations. 1114; 18 G. A., ch. 147. No person shall be permitted to sell any intoxicating liquors, wine, or beer of any kind, or be engaged in any gambling or horse-racing, either inside the inclosure where any county or district or state agricultural society fair is being held, or within one hundred and sixty rods thereof, during the time of holding such fair; and any person found guilty of any of the offenses herein enumerated, shall be fined in a sum not less than five nor more than fifty dollars for every such offense. [10 G. A., ch. 109, § 2.]

As to premiums for horse-races see notes to § 1670.

1676. Permits. 1115. The president of any district or county agricultural society may grant a written permit to such persons as he may deem necessary, to sell fruit, provisions, and other necessaries to such persons as may be in attendance at any such fair, under such regulations and restrictions as the board of directors may prescribe. [Same, § 3.]

1677. Police power. 1116. The president of any such society shall be empowered to arrest, or cause to be arrested, any person, or persons, engaged in violating any of the provisions contained in section eleven hundred and fourteen of this chapter [§ 1675], and cause them forthwith to be taken before some justice of the peace, there to be dealt with as provided for in said section; and he may seize, or cause to be seized, all intoxicating liquors, wine, or beer, of any kind, with the vessels containing the same, and all tools or other implements used in any gambling, and may remove, or cause to be removed, all shows, swings, booths, tents, carriages, wagons, vessels, boats, or any other nuisance that may obstruct, or cause to be obstructed, by collecting persons around or otherwise, any thoroughfare leading to the inclosure in which such agricultural fair is being held; and any person owning or occupying any of the causes of obstruction herein specified, who may refuse or fail to remove such obstruction or nuisance, when ordered to do so by the president of such society, shall be liable to a fine of not less than five and not more than twenty dollars for every such offense. [Same, § 4.]

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

1678. Meeting of. 1117. There shall be held on the third Tuesday in January in each year, a meeting of the Iowa state horticultural society, for the transaction of business and the election of officers and directors, corresponding in numbers and titles to those of the Iowa agricultural society, and for like periods of time, at which the place of holding the next meeting, and the times and places of holding exhibitions shall be determined; premiums on essays may be awarded and all questions relating to horticultural development considered. [14 G. A., ch. 25, § 3.]

1680. Annual report. 1119. The secretary of said society shall make an annual report to the governor of the state, embracing the proceedings of the society, with a bill of items showing for what purposes the money hereinafter appropriated was paid out for the past year, the general condition of horticultural interests throughout the state, together with essays, statements of facts, and recommendations as he may deem useful, to be published by the state under the supervision of the society. [Same, § 4.]

1681. Printing and distribution of. 1120; 18 G. A., ch. 6. The number of copies of said report shall be five thousand, all of which shall be bound in a style uniform with the reports of said society for the years 1869 and 1870, and shall be distributed by the secretary of state as follows: Twelve copies each to the governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, auditor of state, treasurer, register of state land office, attorney-general, judges of the supreme court, and to each member of the general assembly; two hundred copies to the Iowa state agricultural college, five copies to the Iowa state university, five copies to the Iowa state horticultural society, two copies to each incorporated college in the state, one copy each to the auditor and clerk of the district court of each county to be kept in the office, and one copy to each newspaper published in the state; the remainder to be distributed by direction of said society. [Same, § 5.]

1682. Appropriation for. 1121; 20 G. A., ch. 128. The sum of twenty-five hundred dollars is appropriated, annually, for the use and benefit of said society, and shall be paid by the auditor of state upon the order of the president of said society, in such sums, and at such times, as may be for the interests of said society; but two hundred dollars of said amount shall be awarded in premiums for the growing of forest trees in this state. [Same, § 6.]

PUBLICATION OF PROCEEDINGS OF IMPROVED STOCK BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION.

1683. Annual proceedings. 20 G. A., ch. 134, § 1. The annual proceedings of the Iowa state association of improved stock breeders of which C. F. Clarkson is president and Fitch B. Stacy is secretary, including the accepted essays and addresses, together with the report of discussions, is hereby authorized and directed to be printed by the state, under the supervision of the association, as the reports of the state agricultural and horticultural societies are now published.

1684. Number; distribution. 20 G. A., ch. 134, § 2. The number of copies to be so published shall be limited to five thousand annually, not exceeding three hundred pages each, all of which shall be bound in pamphlet form. They shall be distributed as follows: To the governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, auditor of state, state treasurer, each member of the general assembly, the state horticultural society, the state agricultural society, the state library, the Iowa state university and the Iowa state agricultural college, each twenty copies. To each county auditor to be kept in the office, to each public library, to each incorporated college in the state, to each president and secretary of each county and district fair, and to each president and secretary of each dairymen's or stock growers' association, two copies; the remainder to be distributed under the direction of the association.

CHAPTER 4.

OF INSURANCE COMPANIES.

1685. How formed. 1122. When any number of persons associate themselves together for the purpose of forming an insurance company, or for any other purpose than life insurance, under the provisions of chapter one of this title, they shall publish a notice of such intention, once in each week for four weeks, in some public newspaper in the county in which such insurance company is proposed to be located; and they shall also make a certificate, under their hands, specifying the name assumed by such company, and by which it shall be known, the object for which said company shall be formed, the amount of its capital stock, and the place where the principal office of said company shall be located; which certificate shall be acknowledged before and certified by some notary public or clerk of a court of record, and forwarded to the auditor of state, who shall submit the same to the attorney-general for examination, and if it shall be found by the attorney-general to be in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, and not in conflict with the constitution and laws of the United States, and of this state, he shall make a certificate of the fact and return it to the auditor of state, who shall reject the name or title applied for by any company when he shall deem the same too similar to any one already appropriated by any other company, or likely to mislead the public. [12 G. A., ch. 138, § 1.]

1686. Certificate; powers. 1123. When the certificate of said company shall have received the approval of the attorney-general and auditor of state, the company shall cause the same to be recorded as required by law for recording articles of incorporation; and said persons, when incorporated, and, having in all respects complied with the provisions of this chapter, are hereby authorized to carry on the business of insurance as named in such certificate of incorporation, and by the name and style provided therein, and shall be deemed a body corporate with succession; they and their associates, successors, and assigns, to have the same general corporate powers, and be subject to all the obligations and restrictions of said chapter one of this title except as may be herein otherwise provided. [Same, § 2.]

CAPITAL REQUIRED.

1687. Amount; shares; notes. 1124. No joint-stock company shall be incorporated under the provisions of this chapter, with a smaller capital than fifty thousand dollars, or a larger one than one million dollars, as may be specified in the certificate of incorporation, which stock shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, of which capital not less than twenty-five per cent., and in no case less than twenty-five thousand dollars, shall be paid up in cash. The balance of the capital of said company may consist of the bonds or notes of the stockholders; nor shall any company, on the plan of mutual insurance, commence business in this state until agreements have been entered into for insurance with at least two hundred applicants, the premiums upon which shall amount to not less than twenty-five thousand dollars; of which at least five thousand dollars shall have been paid in actual cash, and for the remainder of which, notes of solvent parties, founded upon actual application for insurance made in good faith, shall have been received. No one of the notes received as aforesaid shall amount to more than five hundred dollars; and no two thereof shall be given for the same risk, or made by the same person or firm, except where the whole amount of such notes does not exceed the sum of five hundred dollars; nor shall any note be regarded or represented as capital stock, unless a policy be issued upon the same within thirty days after the organization of the company taking the same, upon a risk that shall be for no shorter period than twelve months. Each of said notes shall be payable, in whole or in part at any time when the directors shall deem the same requisite for the payment of losses by fire or inland navigation, and such incidental expenses as may be necessary for transacting the business of said company. And no note shall be accepted as part of such capital stock, unless the same shall be accompanied by a certificate of a justice of the peace, notary public, or clerk of the district court of the county in which the person executing such note shall reside, that the person making the same is, in his opinion, pecuniarily good and responsible for the same, in property not exempt from execution by the laws of their state; and no such note shall be surrendered while the policy for which it was given continues in force. [Same, § 3.]

1688. Subscriptions. 1125. Having published the notice, and filed the publisher's affidavit of the publication thereof with the auditor of state, together with the certificate required by section eleven hundred and twenty-two of this chapter [§ 1685], the persons named in the certificate of incorporation, or a majority of them, shall be commissioners to open books for the subscription of stock to the company, at such times and places as to them may seem convenient and proper, and shall keep the same open until the full amount specified in the certificate is subscribed; or, in case the business of said company is proposed to be conducted on the plan of mutual insurance, then to open books to receive propositions and enter into agreements in the manner and to the extent specified in section eleven hundred and twenty-four of this chapter [§ 1687]. [Same, § 4.]

DIRECTORS — OFFICERS.

1689. Election. 1126. The affairs of any company organized under the provisions of this chapter, shall be managed by not more than twenty-one, nor by less than five directors, all of whom shall be stockholders. Within thirty days after the subscription book shall have been filled, a majority of the subscribers shall hold a meeting for the election of directors — each share entitling the holder thereof to one vote; and the directors then elected shall continue in office until their successors have been duly chosen and have accepted the trust. [Same, § 5.]

1690. Annual meetings. 1127. The annual meetings for the election of directors, shall be holden during the month of January, at such time as the by-laws of the company may direct; provided, however, that if for any cause the stockholders shall fail to elect at any annual meeting, then they may hold a special meeting some day subsequent thereto for that purpose, by giving thirty days' notice thereof in some newspaper in general circulation in the county in which the principal office of the company shall be located, and the directors chosen at any such annual or special meeting, shall continue in office until the next annual meeting and until their successors, duly elected, shall have accepted. [Same, § 9.]

1691. Powers of directors; president. 1128. The directors shall choose, by ballot, a president from their own number, and shall fill all vacancies which shall arise in the board or in the presidency thereof; and the board of directors thus constituted, or a majority of them, when convened at the office of the company, shall be competent to exercise all the powers vested in them by this chapter. [Same, § 10.]

1692. Secretary; by-laws. 1129. The directors of any such company shall have power to appoint a secretary, and any other officers or agents necessary for transacting the business of the company, paying such salaries, and taking such securities as they may deem reasonable; they may ordain and establish such by-laws and regulations, not inconsistent with this chapter, or with the constitution and laws of the United States and of this state, as shall appear to them necessary for regulating and conducting the business of the company; and they shall keep full and correct entries of their transactions, which shall at all times, be open to the inspection of the stockholders, and to the inspection of persons invested by law with the right thereof. [Same, § 11.]

INVESTMENTS — EXAMINATION — INSURANCE.

1693. Funds invested. 1130. It shall be lawful for any insurance company organized under this chapter, to invest its capital and the funds accumulated in the course of its business, or any part thereof, in bonds and mortgages on unincumbered real estate within the state of Iowa, worth double the sum loaned thereon, exclusive of buildings, unless such buildings are insured in some responsible company, and the policy transferred to said company, and also in stocks of this state, or stocks or treasury notes of the United States,— in the stocks or bonds of any county or incorporated city in this state authorized to be issued by the legislature of this state; and to lend the same, or any part thereof, on the security of such stocks or bonds, or treasury notes, or upon bonds and mortgages as aforesaid and not otherwise; and to change and re-invest the same in like securities as occasion may, from time to time, require; but any surplus money over and above the paid-up capital stock of any such company organized under this chapter, or incorporated under any law of this state, may be invested in or loaned upon the pledge of the public stock or bonds of the United States, or any one of the states, or the stocks, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness of any solvent, dividend-paying institutions incorporated under the laws of this state or of the United States, except their own stock; if the current market value of such stock, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness, shall be at all times, during the continuance of such loans, at least ten per cent. more than the sum loaned thereon. [Same, § 6.]
