A second levy cannot be made until the first is disposed of: Downard v. Crenshaw, 49-296. A sale under an execution which has expired is valid if the levy was made while the execution was in force: Butterfield v. Walsh, 21-97. And see notes to § 4262.

4316. Notice to defendant; sale void without. 3087. If the defendant is in actual occupation and possession of any part of the land levied on, the officer having the execution, shall, at least twenty days previous to such sale, serve the defendant with written notice, stating that the execution is levied on said land, and mentioning the time and place of sale; and sales made without the notice required in this section, may be set aside on motion made at the same or the next term thereafter. [R., § 3318.]

Notice is not required where defendant is not personally in possession or actual occupation of the property: Babcock v. Gurney, 42-154; Bennett v. Burton, 44-550.

The owner is not, within the meaning of this section, "in the actual occupation" of land leased to, and occupied by, a tenant; but where the owner is in the actual use and enjoyment of the property, although not residing thereon, he is in such actual occupation and possession as is here required. So held where the owner, by means of employees residing on the land, was operating a saw-mill thereon: Fleming v. Maddox, 30-239.

The provision that in the cases here referred to the sale may be set aside does not invest the court below with such discretion that its action cannot be reviewed on appeal. Though mandatory rather than permissive, it seems there might be cases within the letter of the statute where it would not be enforced: Jensen v. Woodbury, 16-515.

This section applies to sales under special as well as under general execution: Ibid.; Fleming v. Maddox, 30-239.

It is not essential that the return of the execution show notice to the party in possession of the premises. It would be presumed that such notice was given according to the requirements of the statute: Corriel v. Doolittle, 2 G. Gr., 385.

4317. Plan of division. 3088. At any time before nine o'clock A. M. of the day of the sale, the defendant may deliver to the officer a plan of division of the land levied on, subscribed by him, and in that case the officer shall sell according to said plan so much of the land as may be necessary to satisfy the debt and costs and no more. If no such plan is furnished, the officer may sell without any division. [R., § 3319.]

This section applies to sales under special as well as general execution: Taylor v. Trulloch, 59-558.

Distinct or separate parcels or tracts which can have no increased value by reason of being sold together cannot be sold en masse, even if no bid is made for them when offered separately. This is the common-law rule. The provision of this section as to subdivision does not affect that rule except as here specified: Williams v. Allison, 33-278, 288. And as to the effect of a sale en masse, see notes to § 4311.

4318. When purchaser fails to pay. 3089. When the purchaser fails to pay the money when demanded, the plaintiff or his attorney may elect to proceed against him for the amount; otherwise the sheriff shall treat the sale as a nullity, and may sell the property on the same day, or after a postponement as above authorized. [R., § 3320; C., '51, § 1913.]

Where the execution debtor bid off the property and afterwards failed to pay the money, held, that the officer could not, on the next day, accept the next highest bid and strike off the property to such bidder: Swortzell v. Martin, 16-519.

While the sheriff must sell for cash, yet if the person entitled to the proceeds is the purchaser, he can properly treat the satisfaction of the judgment as a cash payment: Beal v. Blair, 33-318.

Where the execution creditor bids in the property, although he cannot be required to pay to the sheriff that part of the purchase money which is to be credited on his judgment, he is to pay the costs, and if he does not do so the sheriff is to treat the sale as a nullity: Reese v. Dobbins, 51-282.

Where a purchaser at the sale bids with the understanding, and upon the condition, that the amount bid is first to be used to satisfy existing liens on the premises, his bid cannot be enforced unless the proceeds are thus applied: Vanslyck v. Mills, 34-375.

Where the property sold was defendant's undivided interest in a crop, and the bid was by the acre, held, that under the circumstances of the case the bid should be considered as so much per acre for the acres which defendant's portion of the crop would amount to, and not as that amount for defendant's undivided interest in each acre of the crop: Denny v. Cochran, 51-652.

Where the property has been sold to the plaintiff in execution he has not a right thereafter to withdraw his bid and prevent the satisfaction of the judgment, at least without the assent of the sheriff, and probably also that of the execution debtor: Downard v. Crenshaw, 49-296.

Where an agent, acting for the execution

4319. Sales vacated. 3090. When any person shall purchase at a sheriff's sale any real estate on which the judgment upon which the execution issued was not a lien at the time of the levy, and which fact was unknown to the purchaser, the court shall set aside such sale on motion, notice having been given to the debtor as in case of action, and a new execution may be issued to enforce the judgment, and upon the order being made to set aside the sale, the sheriff or judgment creditor shall pay over to the purchaser the purchase money; said motion may also be made by any person interested in the real estate. [R., § 3321.]

This section held not applicable to a case where defendant had title to the property sold, and the judgment was not a lien thereon, because it was rendered in another county and no transcript was filed in the county where the land was situated: Chambers v. Cochran, 18-159.

4320. Money levied on. 3091. Money levied upon may be appropriated without being advertised or sold. The same may be done with bank-bills, drafts, promissory notes, or other papers of the like character, if the plaintiff will receive them at their par value as cash, or if the officer can exchange them for cash at that value. [R., § 3222; C., '51, § 1914.]

creditor, by mistake bid more for land offered at the sale than he was authorized, but immediately withdrew his bid and paid costs of sale, held that, as the execution debtor had not changed his position on account of the sale, the withdrawal was authorized and the property might be again offered for sale: Fuson v. Connecticut General L. Ins. Co., 53-609.

Where it was claimed that the bid was misunderstood by the sheriff, and by mistake the record thereof differed from the bid made, held, that the bidder having notice of the record, and having failed to comply with the bid as claimed to have been made, was not entitled to relief after redemption of the premises: Morrison v. Spencer, 72-445.

If the judgment is against principal and surety, and the sale be set aside, as here provided, the surety will not be held discharged, unless he has, by reason of the sale, changed his condition or been prejudiced: Ibid.

See, also, notes to § 4311.

Bank-bills, etc., may be levied on and sold: See § 4271 and notes.

4321. Judgment against executor or decedent. 3092. When a judgment has been obtained against the executor of one deceased, or against the decedent in his life-time, which the personal estate of the deceased is insufficient to satisfy, the plaintiff may file his petition in the office of the clerk of the court where the judgment is rendered against the executor, the heirs and devisees of real estate, if such there be, setting forth the facts, and that there is real estate of the deceased, describing its location and extent, and praying the court to award execution against the same. [R., § 3323; C., '51, § 1918; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 29.]

[The printed Code has "a lien" in the fifth line, in place of "rendered," as above and as in the original. The section so stood in the bill as reported by the Code commissioners, following 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 29, but before adoption by the legislature it was amended to read as here given and as it originally stood in the Revision. This amendment was not incorporated into the printed Code.]

The judgment should be filed and approved as a claim of the fourth class, within the time specified in § 3625, for payment out of the personal estate: Bayliss v. Iowers, 62-601.

4322. Notice. 3093. The person against whom the petition is filed shall be notified by the plaintiff to appear on the first day of the term, and show cause, if any he have, why execution should not be awarded. [R., § 3324; C., '51, § 1919; 13 G. A., ch. 150, § 1.]

4323. How served and returned. 3094. The notice shall be served and returned in the ordinary manner, and the same length of time shall be allowed for appearance as in civil actions, and service of such notice on non-resident defendants may be had in such cases by publication. [R., § 3325; C., '51, § 1920; 13 G. A., ch. 150, § 2.]

4325. Non-age. 3096. The non-age of the heirs or devisees shall not be deemed such sufficient cause. [R., § 3327; C., '51, § 1922.]

4326. Mutual judgments set off. 3097. Mutual judgments, the executions on which are in the hands of the same officer, may be set off the one against the other; except that the costs shall not be set off, unless the balance of cash actually collected on the large judgment is sufficient to pay the costs of both judgments, and such costs shall be paid therefrom accordingly. [R., § 3328; C., '51, § 1923.]

Judgment against two persons, jointly, may be set off against a judgment in favor of one of them against the creditor in such joint judgment: Ballinger v. Tarbell, 16-491.

Judgments cannot be set off, the one against the other, unless they are strictly mutual and are still in fact the property of the respective parties thereto: Bell v. Perry, 43-368.

Where the judgment has been fraudulently assigned for the purpose of preventing the set-off, such set-off may be obtained in an action in equity: Hurst v. Sheets, 14-322.

But where the assignment was verbally made, before the recovery of the judgment sought to be set-off, the assignment not appearing to be fraudulent, a set-off was denied: Gray v. McCallister, 50-497.

Where judgment was rendered against one party for costs, and subsequently in a second action the same party recovered a judgment for debt against the other party, held, that the judgment for costs should be set off against the judgment for debt, notwithstanding the assignment of the judgment for debt to the attorney in satisfaction of his claim for services in the action for which he had filed a claim for a lien: Tiffany v. Stewart, 60-207.

In an attachment suit, where the defendant sued, by way of counter-claim, on an attachment bond executed by plaintiff to others, held, that he might have judgment thereon set off against a judgment in favor of such plaintiff: Branch of State Bank v. Morris, 13-136.

This provision as to setting off mutual judgments is not defeated by an attorney's lien: National Bank v. Eyre, 3 McCrary, 175.

Where judgments are originally mutual, but have ceased to be mutual by reason of the assignment of one of them, they cannot be set off, the one against the other: Gallagher v. Pendleton, 55-142.

4327. When sale absolute. 3098. When real property has been levied upon, if the estate is less than a leasehold having two years of an unexpired term, the sale is absolute. [R., § 3329; C., '51, § 1924.]

4328. When redeemable. 3099. When the estate is of a larger amount, the property is redeemable as hereinafter prescribed. [R., § 3330; C., '51, § 1924.]

APPRAISEMENT OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

4329. How made; effect. 3100. Personal property levied upon and advertised for sale on execution must be appraised before sale by two disinterested householders of the neighborhood, one of whom shall be chosen by the execution debtor and the other by the plaintiff, or in case of the absence of either party, or if either or both parties neglect or refuse to make choice, the officer making the levy shall choose one or both, as the case may be, who shall forthwith proceed to return to said officer a just and true appraisement, under oath, of said property if they can agree; and in case they cannot agree, they shall choose another disinterested householder, and with his assistance they shall complete such appraisement, and the property shall not be sold for less than two-thirds of said valuation; provided, the same shall be offered for three successive days at the same place and hour of day as advertised, and if no offer equal to two-thirds the value thereof be made, then it shall be lawful to sell said property for one-half of said valuation.

Where one of the appraisers selected by an execution creditor lived thirty-five miles from the property, held, that the sale should be set aside as against such creditor, who was a purchaser thereat, it appearing that the appraisal was at less than one-half the value of the land, the selection of the appraiser being in violation of the requirement that he should be a householder of the neighborhood: Woods v. Cochrane, 38-484.

The fact that one of the appraisers is selected by the deputy sheriff does not vitiate the sale. It is a mere irregularity, not affecting the power of the officer to sell nor the validity of the title acquired by the purchaser: Davis v. Spaulding, 36-610.

The fact that where it appears that the sheriff appointed one appraiser, his return does not show that the party for whom he acted in making such appointment was absent or refused to appoint, will not render the sale void: Preston v. Wright, 60-351.

Whether the appraisers in fixing the value of the property should find the amount of prior liens and incumbrances and fix the value with reference thereto, or should fix the whole value without reference to prior liens, and leave the matter of ascertaining such liens to the sheriff, quære. But held, that a judicial sale could not be set aside as having been made for an amount less than the two-thirds value, except it should be made to appear that it was for less than two-thirds of the value after deducting incumbrances: Brown v. Butlers, 40-5.4.

Where a party sought relief on the ground that the sale was for less than two-thirds of the appraised value, held, that he had the burden of showing such fact, and unless it was established affirmatively, the sale could not be set aside: Barber v. Tryon, 41-349.

Further held, that the purchaser at such a sale is not bound to look beyond the records for the purpose of determining whether apparent liens or incumbrances have not been discharged. Where the records show an incumbrance which, added to the amount paid, makes two-thirds of the appraised value, the sale should not be set aside, although evidence is introduced to show that the incumbrance has been in fact satisfied: Ibid.; McDonald v. Johnson, 48-72.

The property appraised must be sold for a sum which, when added to the prior incumbrance, shall realize to the debtor two thirds of the fair value of the property as the same has been ascertained by the appraisement: Sargent v. Pittman, 16-469; McDonald v. Johnson, 48-72.

A sale for a less proportion than that authorized will be invalid, at least as between the parties, and the fact that the debtor's title is doubtful, or other circumstances affecting the value of the property, will be immaterial. Such fact should be taken into account by the appraisers, and the value fixed by them should be that of defendant's interest in the property: Maple v. Nelson, 31-322.

Rent accruing after the execution of the sheriff's deed is not directly the subject of sale, but passes merely as an incident. It is not necessary, therefore, that it be appraised separately from the land. It would be presumed that that right was considered in determining the appraised value of the property: Townsend v. Isenberger, 45-670.

An appraisal is not proper evidence of the value of the property in an action by a third person claiming to be the owner thereof and seeking to recover for its conversion: Flannigan v. Althouse, 56-513.

Failure to have the appraisal made, held not to affect the validity of the sale as to the purchaser: Shaffer v. Bolander, 4 G. Gr., 201.

The purchaser at the sale is not required to take notice of the regularity of the appraisement: Johnson v. Carson, 3 G. Gr., 499.

But, per contra, held, that the provisions as to appraisement were not merely directory, but affected the question of power to sell, on which the validity of the sale depended: Sprott v. Reid, 3 G. Gr., 489.

Any change in the appraisement laws calculated to impair rights under existing contracts cannot be made applicable to an execution sale in an action brought under such contract: Burton v. Emerson, 4 G. Gr., 393.

Where, at the time of the making of a contract, the law does not provide for appraisement, and, at the time of judgment thereunder, appraisement is provided for, the sale should be made under the law in force at the time of the contract, and appraisement should not be allowed: Olmstead v. Kellogg, 47-460.

While legislation depriving the judgment debtor of the benefit of appraisement or redemption laws is not inhibited by any constitutional provision, still under the statutory provision that the repeal of a prior statute shall not affect any act done or right accruing, and which has been established, etc., held, that a judicial sale upon a judgment rendered before the taking effect of the Code should be made under the law as to appraisement and redemption existing when the judgment was rendered, and not in accordance with the law in existence at the time of the sale, under which the right to appraisement was taken away: Holland v. Dickerson, 41-367.

But where the judgment was rendered after the taking effect of the Code upon a contract made before that time, held, that the sale should be according to the Code provisions which took away the right of appraisement, and not in accordance with the law as it existed at the time of the making of the contract: Babcock v. Gurney, 42-154; Fonda v. Clark, 43-300.

Appraisement pertains to the remedy, and is to be governed by the law of the forum and not that of the lex loci contractus: Shaffer v. Bolander, 4 G. Gr., 201.

REDEMPTION.

4330. Deed or certificate. 3101. If the property sold is not subject to redemption, the sheriff must execute a deed therefor to the purchaser; but if the same is subject to redemption, he shall execute to such purchaser a certificate containing a description of the property and the amount of money paid by such purchaser, and stating that unless redemption is made within one year thereafter according to law, he or his heirs or assigns, will be entitled to a deed for the same. [R., § 3331; C., '51, § 1925.]

Deed: As there might possibly be circumstances under which a court of equity might order a sale of real property without redemption, a decree ordering a sale without redemption, while it may be erroneous, will not be void for want of jurisdiction: Truer v. Whitman, 56-443.

So, although it is held in the federal courts that decrees in foreclosure proceedings in such courts in this state where, by state laws, redemption from foreclosure sale is provided for, should not order an absolute sale without redemption, yet such a decree, though erroneous, will not be void and cannot be collaterally attacked: Moore v. Jeffers, 53-202.

Where land was sold under the appraisal law of 1860, and notice of election to have the sale made subject to redemption was not filed with the clerk within the time required by that statute, held, that defendant was not entitled to have the sale set aside and made subject to redemption: Gillett v. Edgar, 22-293.

Where a purchaser takes a deed immediately after the sale, relying upon the claim that the opposite party has no right to redeem, it is not necessary that an offer to redeem be made in order to entitle the execution defendant to have the deed set aside: Fitzgerald v. Kelso, 71-731.

And see notes to § 4353.

Assignment of certificate: The assignment to a junior lienholder of the certificate of purchase "and the lands therein described," held to transfer to the assignee not only the title under the certificate, but also the purchaser's right under a tax title which was matured in his hands at the time of the assignment: Scribner v. Vandercook, 54-580.

The assignee in good faith of the certificate of purchase from a purchaser at the sale cannot be held responsible for the application of the purchase money by the sheriff: Gray v. Dye, 39-360.

Where a creditor pays money to the purchaser, claiming it to be by way of redemption, and takes an assignment of the certificate, he acquires by such assignment the rights of the purchaser, even though his redemption is not effectual: Wilson v. Conklin, 22-453; Rush v. Mitchell, 71-333.

A junior lienholder may become the purchaser at a sale under a prior lien, or may take an assignment of a certificate of purchase under such sale; and where the acts of such junior lienholder were not such as required by statute in case of redemption, held, that they would be considered as a purchase rather than an attempt to redeem: Streeter v. First Nat. Bank, 53-177.

Where the holder of a portion of the notes secured by mortgage foreclosed the mortgage and bid off a portion of the land, and also procured the assignment to him of the certificate of purchase of the same premises at a sale of the balance of the land for the remaining note secured by the mortgage, and also purchased at judicial sale the equity of redemption of a grantee of the land who had taken it agreeing to pay the mortgage, held, that the assignment of the certificate was in the nature of a redemption: Brooks v. Keister, 45-303.

The assignee of a certificate of purchase takes it subject to any equities existing against the assignor: Van Gorder v. Lundy, 66-448.

A purchaser of an equity of redemption has no rights other than those of the execution debtor, and cannot, on making redemption from the holder of the certificate of purchase, insist upon the assignment of such certificate: Hurn v. Hill, 70-38.

The legal title of the owner of the property is not divested and transferred to the purchaser until the expiration of the period of redemption. During the period of redemption the purchaser has an equitable title only, which may or may not ripen into a legal title: Shumer v. Hammond, 51-401.

The purchaser acquires only a lien for the amount of his purchase money and interest, which may ripen into a perfect title at the expiration of the time allowed for redemption: Curtis v. Millard, 14-128.

4331. By defendant. 3102. The defendant may redeem real property at any time within one year from the day of sale as herein provided, and will, in the meantime, be entitled to the possession of the property. But in no action where the defendant has taken an appeal from the [circuit or] district court, or stayed execution on the judgment, shall he be entitled to redeem. [R., § 3332; C., '51, § 1926; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 30.]

Period for redemption: Under a statutory provision, not now in force, which authorized action at law on a note secured by mortgage, and provided that the judgment in such case might be declared a lien from the date of the recording of the mortgage, and that the mortgagor or a lienholder might redeem from such sale as from any other sale under execution, held, that a lienholder, although not a party to the proceeding, could not redeem except within the time and in the manner thus provided: Mayer v. Farmers' Bank, 44-213.

Where the execution and return were kept in the office of the attorney for the execution plaintiff, and not filed in the clerk's office, and an inquiry there, and also of the attorney, failed to secure a knowledge of the amount necessary to effect redemption, held, that upon a tender being made after the expiration of the time for redemption it should have been allowed: Hammersham v. Fairall, 44-462.

The fact that property is misdescribed in a mortgage and sale thereunder, and that the description is subsequently corrected during the period of redemption, the party entitled to redeem being a party to the proceeding and asking no relief, will not operate to extend the period for redemption: McKissick v. Mill Owners' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50-116.

The statutory right to redeem within one year cannot be extended by an act of the party claiming the right, such as a suit to redeem, or the like, without more: Hughes v. Feeter, 23-547.

In a particular case, held, that an action brought by a purchaser of land at an execution sale against execution defendant during the period for redemption, in which it was sought to have the title declared to be in the purchaser as against such execution defendant, did not constitute a fraud against the execution defendant, such as to entitle him to make equitable redemption after the statutory period had expired: Bradford v. Bradford, 60-201.

Where, by reason of a mistake of the clerk in computing the amount required to redeem, the amount paid was not quite sufficient, held, that the redemptioner might, after the expiration of the year, have equitable relief against the deed upon paying the deficiency and interest on the whole amount up to the time of completing the redemption: Wakefield v. Rotherham, 67-444.

In computing the year allowed for redemption the day of sale is excluded, and redemption may be made any time during the corresponding day of the same month of the next year: Teucher v. Hiatt, 23-527.

The statutory right of redemption can be exercised only within the period and in the manner prescribed by the statute creating it: Teabout v. Jaffray, 74-28.

Where the party does not tender and bring into court the amount necessary for making the redemption he cannot, after the time for redemption has expired, have equitable relief against the issuance of the deed: McConkey v. Lamb, 71-636.

Redemption waived: Under the provision that the taking of an appeal defeats the right of redemption, it is immaterial whether a supersedeas bond is filed on the appeal or not: Dobbins v. Lusch, 53-304.

The provision that stay of execution waives the right of redemption is applicable to cases where such stay is taken in a justice's court where the judgment is rendered, and afterwards a sale of real property under such judgment is had by filing a transcript thereof in the circuit court: Brown v. Markley, 58-689.

The restriction upon the right of redemption in case of taking an appeal or stay of execution does not apply to creditors who would otherwise be entitled to redeem, and such creditors have the same right to redeem in case the debtor takes an appeal or a stay as in other cases: Sieben v. Becker, 53-24.

An appeal or stay of execution by the execution debtor will not defeat the right of redemption by his vendee: Thayer v. Coldren, 57-110.

Where a surety does not object (as provided in § 3068) to stay of execution being granted, he will be considered as having assented thereto, if taken, and held to have thereby waived the right to redeem his property, if sold under such judgment: Chase v. Welty, 57-230.

When the appeal is not perfected by serving notice upon the clerk as well as upon the opposite party until after the sale, the right to redeem from the sale exists, and a deed executed immediately will be invalid as against the subsequent redemption: Fitzgerald v. Kelso, 71-731.

By defendant's vendee: The right of redemption may be in both the judgment debtor and his vendee where the property has been conveyed with covenants of title prior to the execution sale: Harvey v. Spaulding, 16-397.

The vendee of an execution defendant may redeem. He is to be considered as within the meaning of the term "defendant," as used in this section: Thayer v. Coldren, 57-110. And see § 4352.

Further as to who may redeem, see § 4333 and notes.

Sale of debtor's redemption right: Defendant's right of possession and redemption during the statutory period may be levied upon and sold under execution: Barnes v. Cavanagh, 53-27; Crosby v. Elkader Lodge, 16-399.

But such redemption right cannot be sold under an execution issued on the balance of the same judgment under the original sale was made: Hardin v. White, 63-633.

By the first sale the creditor exhausts his right as to the property, and it is immaterial that the same indebtedness is embraced in two different decrees, one by foreclosure of a personal property mortgage, and the other upon foreclosure of a mortgage on real property. If real property is sold under special execution issued under a decree on foreclosure of the real property mortgage, the debtor's right of redemption therein cannot be levied on and sold under a general execution issued upon a decree rendered in foreclosure of the personal property mortgage: Ibid.

A judgment recovered against the debtor during the period allowed him for redemption becomes a lien on his interest in property in which he has the right of redemption, and in case he or his grantee by conveyance made after such judgment redeems from the prior sale, such judgment may be enforced against the property so redeemed, although the holder of the judgment failed to exercise his own statutory right of redemption from the sale: Curtis v. Millard, 14-138.

After redemption by the debtor or his grantee or assignee of land sold in partial satisfaction of a judgment, it at once becomes liable to pay the unsatisfied balance of such judgment: Crosby v. Elkader Lodge, 16-399; Stein v. Chambliss, 18-474.

Therefore, held, where a debtor conveyed his right of redemption to his wife and furnished her the money to make redemption, with intent to hinder and delay his creditors, the land so redeemed remained subject to the balance of the judgment: Peckenbaugh v. Cook, 61-477.

The execution debtor does not, by redemption from a sale of his property for a portion of the judgment, acquire the same rights which would be acquired by a creditor or by a purchaser who is a stranger to the judgment, or by a mortgagee in case of redemption from such sale, and the land may be sold again in case of such redemption under execution for the balance of the judgment: Campbell v. Maginnis, 70-589.

The purchaser of property from a judgment debtor which has been sold upon execution has the same right to redemption which the judgment debtor has. Where the sale is under foreclosure of mortgage covering different instalments and for the amount of only one of such instalments, the grantee, having redeemed, holds the property free from the lien of the judgment for other instalments covered by the same mortgage, whereas, if the judgment debtor had himself redeemed, the property would have become subject to the payment of such other instalments: Harms v. Palmer, 73-446.

While a party cannot have successive foreclosures of the same mortgage lien, this rule has no application where the right to foreclose for notes not yet due is expressly reserved by the decree of the court: Burroughs v. Ellis, 76-61.

Where the debtor's right of redemption was sold under a second execution, held, that he might within the time for redeeming from the first sale make redemption from both sales, and that the purchaser at the second sale had no ground of objection to such redemption: Harrison v. Wilmering, 72-727.

Redemption in foreclosure proceedings: Where it was provided by statute that foreclosure sales should be subject to redemption as in case of sales under general execution, and afterwards other statutory provisions as to redemption were made, held, that such provisions were applicable to sales on foreclosure although such sales were not specifically mentioned: Davis v. Spaulding, 36-610.

The provisions of this section are applicable to foreclosure sales: Barret v. Bluckman, 47-565.

4332. When by creditors. 3103. For the first six months after such sale, his right to redeem is exclusive; but if no redemption is made by him at the end of that time, any creditor of the defendant whose demand is a lien upon such real estate, may redeem the same at any time within nine months from the day of sale. But a mechanic's lien, before judgment thereon, is not of such character as to entitle the holder to redeem. [R., § 3333; C., '51, § 1927.]

Time for redemption by creditor or lienholder: A creditor or lienholder cannot make statutory redemption after the expiration of nine months: Newell v. Pennick, 62-123.

And this is so even though the purchaser is also a junior judgment creditor: George v. Hart, 56-706.

Redemption by creditor within the first six months, during which the debtor's right to redeem is exclusive, will be good as to a subsequent lienholder. It is only the debtor and purchaser who can object to such redemption: Wilson v. Conklin, 22-452.

The time within which the creditor may redeem cannot be enlarged by the assent of the purchaser: Hurn v. Hill, 70-38.

4333. Who creditor. 3104. Any creditor whose claim becomes a lien prior to the expiration of the time allowed by law for the redemption by creditors, may redeem. A mortgagee may thus redeem before or after the debt secured by the mortgage falls due. [R., § 3334; C., '51, § 1928.]

A holder of a simple judgment lien has not an equitable right to redeem from a senior lienholder, after the execution of the sheriff's deed, made in pursuance of a sale thereunder. So held in case of a sale under foreclosure of a mechanic's lien, made under the Revision, which provided that such actions should be at law: Diddy v. Rösser, 55-699.

The purchaser of property at a sale under a judgment which is junior to a mortgage may redeem from such mortgage before the foreclosure thereof, in the same manner as the debtor himself might have redeemed: Hammond v. Leavitt, 59-407.

A mortgagee may redeem from an execution sale of the property covered by his mortgage, although the liability secured by the mortgage is only a contingent one and may possibly never ripen into a certainty: Crossen v. White, 19-109.

Method of making redemption: See § 4335 and notes.

By agent: A redemption of real property from sale under execution, made within the proper time by a sub-agent under color of authority, whose act was subsequently ratified by the principal, held sufficient against the purchaser under the sale: Teucher v. Hiatt, 23-527.

Mechanic's lien: The holder of a mechanic's lien before judgment thereon not being entitled to redeem, he does not become entitled to redeem by obtaining a mere money judgment on his claim as against a person not the owner of the property upon which the lien is claimed: Spink v. McCall, 52-432.

A mortgagee cannot, after buying in the property at his own foreclosure sale for a portion of his judgment, redeem under such sale by virtue of the judgment held by him, either before or after a redemption is made by the mortgagor. The purchase of the property at the sale exhausts his lien with reference thereto: Todd v. Davey, 60-532.

Neither can an assignee of a portion of the mortgage debt redeem from a sale on foreclosure of another portion of such debt, whether his assignment was made before or after such foreclosure: Harms v. Palmer, 61-483.

A party who has no interest in the property sold, but is only liable as surety or otherwise for the payment of the indebtedness for which the sale is made, has not a right to redeem: Brooks v. Keister, 45-303; Miller v. Ayres, 59-424.

A judgment creditor who has purchased the property under his execution may redeem from a sale made under a senior judgment lien: Seevers v. Wood, 12-295.

And an attorney who has bought in the property for his client at a sale under execution in favor of such client may exercise such right of redemption which the client would have as against another sale under senior judgment: Ibid.

A junior lienholder whose debt antedates the homestead may redeem from the sale of the homestead under a senior lien, and, for the purpose of entitling himself to thus redeem, may show by evidence in vultu, as against the senior lienholder who has purchased at the execution sale, the fact as to the date of his claim with reference to the commencement of the homestead right: Phelps v. Finn, 45-447.

A creditor holding a judgment which is a lien upon real property of his debtor may become the purchaser of such real property at a sale under another judgment, and make redemption from such sale in the same manner as if some other person had been the purchaser: Citizens' Savings Bank v. Percival, 61-183.

An execution creditor who has bid in the property under his own execution does not have a lien upon such property for any unsatisfied balance of his claim by virtue of which he or his assignee can redeem under such sale. (Overruling Crosby v. Elkader Lodge, 16-399): Clayton v. Ellis, 50-590.

Where the execution defendant has no right of redemption, a judgment creditor, who did not become such until after the sale, cannot redeem: Brown v. Markley, 58-689.

Where the party seeking to redeem was one of several plaintiffs at whose suit the property in question was in equity declared subject to their judgments and sold to satisfy the same, held, that redemption could not be made by him: Hayden v. Smith, 58-285.

A judgment creditor of a grantor, who has made a fraudulent conveyance, has not such a lien upon the property thus conveyed as to entitle him to redeem the same from execution sale, made under a decree obtained by other judgment creditors subjecting such property to the lien of their judgments: Howland v. Knox, 59-46.

4334. May redeem from each other. 3105. Creditors having the right of redemption may redeem from each other within the time above limited, and in the manner herein provided. [R., § 3335; C., '51, § 1929.]

4335. Terms of. 3106. The terms of redemption in all cases will be the reimbursement of the amount paid by the then holder, added to the amount of his own lien, with interest upon the whole at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, together with costs, subject to the exception contained in the next section. But where a mortgagee whose claim is not yet due is the person from whom the redemption is thus to be made, a rebate of interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum must be made by such mortgagee on his claim. [R., § 3336; C., '51, § 1930.]

Method of making redemption: In redemptions made before the expiration of nine months before the date of sale the redemption is to be performed by the parties themselves, without the aid of the clerk, and the only evidence of the transaction necessary is the proper transfer of the certificate of sale. The statutory provisions with reference to the action of the clerk are applicable only to redemptions, as provided for, after the expiration of nine months: Goode v. Cummings, 35-67.

A redemption after six and prior to nine months of the sale can be made between the parties, without the aid of the clerk: and if the parties do just what, in law, is necessary to effect the redemption, the act will be deemed a redemption: Lamb v. Feeley, 71-742; West v. Fitzgerald, 72-306.

These provisions as to the amount to be paid in order to effect redemption refer to statutory redemption from execution sale, and not to a case where a junior lienholder, not made party to a foreclosure proceeding, seeks to redeem from the sale thereunder by an action in equity: Jones v. Hartsock, 42-147. And as to equitable redemption, see notes to § 4557.

Such junior lienholder seeking to redeem in equity from a prior judgment under which there has been no sale must pay the full amount of such judgment, but in making statutory redemption from a sale under the judgment he is only required to pay the amount for which the property was bid in at the sale, with interest, costs, etc.: Hays v. Thode, 18-51; Tuttle v. Dewey, 44-306; Iowa County v. Beeson, 55-262.

In redeeming from an execution creditor who has bought in the property at the sale the debtor need only pay the amount bid by such creditor, and is not required to pay, in addition thereto, any portion of the judgment remaining unsatisfied by the sale. Such balance is not a lien upon the property sold. (Overruling Crosby v. Elkader Lodge, 16-399): Clayton v. Ellis, 50-590.

There is no distinction between the debtor and the creditor as to the matter of making redemption: Ibid.

Where a junior creditor attempts to redeem from a senior creditor who has taken an assignment of a certificate of purchase, he must pay to such senior creditor the amount of purchase money and also the amount of the senior creditor's lien: Wilson v. Couklin, 22-452.

Where a mortgage was foreclosed for one instalment of the debt secured thereby, and the decree directed that the entire property covered should be sold and any balance realized in excess of the instalment due should be applied to the payment of instalments not yet due, and the property was bid in by the mortgagee for the entire amount secured by the mortgage, held, that the mortgagor could not redeem from such sale upon payment simply of the amount of the instalment already due with interest and costs, but only upon payment of the entire amount for which the property was bid in by the purchaser, although such purchaser had not paid to the clerk any sum except the costs: Williams v. Dickerson, 66-105.

A judgment creditor whose lien is subsequent to an unrecorded deed cannot defeat the priority of the deed by first redeeming from a prior judgment creditor. The grantee in the deed may redeem from the subsequent judgment creditor in such case by paying the amount due the prior judgment creditor: Fords v. Vance, 17-94.

Where a party redeems from a sale under a judgment which by mistake is for too small an amount, he is under no obligation to tender more than the amount for which the property was bid in with interest and costs: Day v. Cole, 44-452.

Where the holder of the first two of three mortgages on the same property foreclosed the first and bid in the property at the sale thereunder, and thereafter the holder of the third foreclosed and bid in the property at his sale, and then redeemed from the sale under the first after nine months from the date of such sale, held, that such redemption was made under the right of the mortgagor and not as junior creditor, and that the redemptioner did not thereby acquire priority over the second mortgage: Dickerman v. Lust, 66-444.

4338. Junior may redeem. 3109. A junior judgment creditor may redeem from a senior judgment creditor, by paying to the party, the clerk, or the sheriff, if execution has issued, the full sum due, with interest and costs, and shall become thereby vested with the title to the judgment so redeemed. [R., § 3339.]

4339. Money paid to sheriff. 3110. If paid to the sheriff, he shall give to the party redeeming a certificate that he has paid such sum for the redemption of the judgment, describing it, which being presented to the clerk, he shall enter such redemption on the judgment docket, as he shall also do if the money is paid to himself. [R., § 3340.]

4340. Junior in turn from senior. 3111. Whenever a senior creditor redeems from a junior creditor, the latter may in return redeem from the former, and so on, as often as the land is taken from him by virtue of a paramount lien. [R., § 3341; C., '51, § 1933.]

4341. When right expires. 3112. After the expiration of nine months from the day of sale, the creditors can no longer redeem from each other except as hereinafter provided. But the defendant may still redeem at any time before the end of the year as aforesaid. [R., § 3342; C., '51, § 1934.]

The following provisions (§§ 4342 to 4348) apply only to redemptions after the expiration of nine months: Goode v. Cummings, 35-67.

See, as to this section, notes to § 4332.

4343. Claim extinguished. 3114. In case it is thus held by a redeeming creditor, his lien, and the claim out of which it arose, will be held to be extinguished, unless he pursues the course pointed out in the next section. [R., § 3344; C., '51, § 1936.]

The omission to file the statement will not prejudice the right of other creditors to redeem, nor defeat the right of the debtor to demand the extinguishment of all the claims of the creditor so failing to file his statement: Goode v. Cummings, 35-67.

Where a junior mortgagee did the acts necessary as between the parties to amount to a redemption after six months and prior to the expiration of nine months from the sale, and did not, within ten days after the expiration of the nine months, enter on the sale book the amount he was willing to credit on his claim, held, that his mortgage was extinguished: Lamb v. Feeley, 71-742.

4344. Exception; entry of credit. 3115. If he is unwilling to hold the property and credit the defendant therefor with the full amount of his lien, he must, within ten days after the nine months aforesaid, enter on the sale book the utmost amount that he is thus willing to credit on his claim. [R., § 3345; C., '51, § 1937.]

Omission by a creditor who has made redemption to make the entry in the sale book as required by this section, in case he is not willing to credit the execution defendant with the full amount of the claim under which such redemption is made, will not prejudice the rights of other creditors to redeem nor defeat the right of the debtor to demand the extinguishment of all the claims of the creditor so failing to make such entry: Goode v. Cummings, 35-67.

Such provisions apply only to redemptions made after the expiration of nine months from the date of sale. Previous to that time no entry in the sale book is required: Ibid.

Redemption in all cases except where otherwise provided by statute has the effect to discharge and satisfy the whole of the debt and lien under which it is made: West v. Fitzgerald, 72-306.

The absolute right of redemption on the part of creditors is terminated at the end of nine months from the date of the sale, and it is for the creditor last redeeming within the nine months to determine whether the right of redemption shall be again opened to the other creditors. If he is willing to have his lien and claim wholly extinguished he is entitled to hold the property at that price, and no further redemption can be made by the creditors. If he is not willing to take the property in full satisfaction, then he must, within ten days, enter on the sale book the utmost amount he is willing to credit on his claim, and by so doing he confers upon the other creditors the right to redeem under the provisions of § 4345: Woonsocket Institution v. Goulden, 28 Fed. Rep., 900.

This provision, as to the whole of the redemptioner's claim being satisfied, unless the steps pointed out by statute are taken to prevent its having that effect, are applicable to redemptions made before the expiration of nine months as well as those made after that time: West v. Fitzgerald, 72-306.

The statute does not prescribe the statement to be entered by a junior creditor redeeming from a judgment sale as to the amount which he is willing to allow on his claim, and if it indicates with sufficient certainty such amount it is sufficient: Craig v. Alcorn, 46-560.

Failure of the clerk to enter in the sale book the amount which a redeeming creditor is willing to allow on his claim, when a statement thereof is furnished by the creditor in due time, the statement being in fact known to the parties affected thereby within the ten days given by statute for making the entry, will not operate to defeat the effect of such entry, the object of the requirement being to secure to the debtor notice of the intention of the redemptioner; and actual notice will effect that purpose: Ibid.

4345. Farther redemption. 3116. Any unsatisfied lien creditor, within ten days after the expiration of the time thus allowed to make the entry required in the last section, may redeem the property by paying the amount of the legal disbursements of the last holder as hereinbefore regulated, added to the amount thus entered on the sale book, together with interests and costs. [R., § 3346; C., '51, § 1938.]

[The words "of the time," following "expiration" in the second line, are erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

Whether a senior lienholder may redeem from a junior who has already redeemed from him, quære; but redemption under this section must be within one year, as provided by § 4331: Phelps v. Finn, 45-447.

4346. Final redemption. 3117. Such redemptioner shall also credit the defendant with the full amount of his lien, unless within ten days after redeeming as aforesaid, he likewise makes a like entry on the sale book, in which case any unsatisfied lien creditor may in like manner redeem within ten days as aforesaid, and so on until there are no more unsatisfied liens, or until the expiration of the year for redemption, the defendant having the final privilege of redeeming from the last redemptioner at the end of the year. [R., § 3347; C., '51, § 1939.]

4347. Mode. 3118. The mode of making the redemption is by paying the money into the clerk's office for the use of the persons thereto entitled.

The person so redeeming, if not defendant in execution, must also file his affidavit, or that of his agent or attorney, stating as nearly as practicable the amount still unpaid and due on his own claim. [R., § 3348; C., '51, § 1940.]

Where the party making redemption pays, and the clerk in good faith receives, a banker's check, or currency which is not legal tender, before the expiration of the time for redemption, the redemption will be complete, although in case of the check the money is not realized thereon by the clerk until after the time for redemption has expired: Webb v. Watson, 18-537.

Whenever a payment to the clerk would be good, a payment or tender to the party entitled to receive the money will be equally valid. The provisions of the Code of '51, allowing money to be paid to the clerk, held to be for the benefit of the holder, and that a payment to the execution plaintiff would be effectual: Armstrong v. Pierson, 5-317.

Whether the requirement that an affidavit be filed by a creditor redeeming applies to redemptions made before the expiration of nine months, doubted: Wilson v. Conklin, 22-452.

4348. Entry in sale book. 3119. The clerk shall thereupon give him a receipt for the money, stating the purpose for which it was paid. He must also, at the same time, enter in the sale book a minute of such redemption, of the amount paid, and the amount of the lien of the last redemptioner as sworn to by him. [R., § 3349; C., '51, § 1941.]

4349. Assignment of certificate. 3120. A creditor redeeming as above contemplated, is entitled to receive an assignment of the certificate issued by the sheriff to the original purchaser as hereinbefore directed. [R., § 3350; C., '51, § 1942.]

4350. Redemption of portion. 3121. When the property has been sold in parcels, any distinct portion may be redeemed by itself. [R., § 3351; C., '51, § 1943.]

4351. Tenants in common. 3122. When the interests of several tenants in common have been sold on execution, the undivided portion of any or either of them may be redeemed separately. [R., § 3352; C., '51, § 1944.]

4352. Transfer of right. 3123. The rights of a defendant in relation to redemption are trausterable, and the assignee has the like power to redeem. [R., § 3353; C., '51, § 1945.]

See notes to § 4331.

SHERIFF'S DEED.

4353. Deed. 3124. If the defendant or his assignee fail to redeem, the sheriff must, at the end of the year, execute a deed to the person who is entitled to the certificate as hereinbefore provided, or to his assignee. If the person entitled be dead, the deed shall be made to his heirs, but the property will be subject to the payment of the debts of the deceased in the same manner as if acquired during his life-time. [R., § 3354; C., '51, § 1946.]

Sheriff's deed: The recital of the execution in a sheriff's deed is not essential to its validity, and any variance or mistake in such recital will not impair the deed: Humphrey v. Beeson, 1 G. Gr., 199.

Sufficiency of description in the deed may cure any uncertainty of description in the levy and return: Hopping v. Burnam, 2 G. Gr., 39.

The sheriff in office at the time the deed is executed is the proper person to make a deed, and not a person who was sheriff at the time of the sale but whose term of office has expired: Conger v. Converse, 9-554. And see § 483.

The fact that the deed is executed by a deputy is no cause for setting it aside at the instance of the defendant in execution: Chase v. Parker, 14-207.

A deed issued prior to the expiration of the period of redemption is not necessarily void. It may be equivalent to a certificate of purchase, and admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing the sale: Warfield v. Woodward, 4 G. Gr., 386.

The fact that the sheriff gives a deed absolute in form instead of issuing a certificate of purchase will not defeat the right of redemption, and cannot be considered prejudicial to a party entitled to redeem: Olmstead v. Kellogg, 47-460.

The fact that the deed is improperly executed before the expiration of the period of redemption will not render it invalid, if redemption is not made: Conner v. Long, 63-295.

If the deed is issued to one who is not a purchaser, the presumption is that the sheriff had evidence of the fact that the purchaser's rights had been transferred to the person to whom the deed was issued: Ibid.

To whom deed made: The judgment debtor and the purchaser are ordinarily the only parties who can object that the right of redemption has not been properly exercised; and where money had been paid for the purpose of making the redemption, by a party claiming the right to redeem, and had been accepted by the purchaser and the certificate assigned, held, that the sheriff could not refuse to make a deed to the assignee of the certificate on any real or supposed right in the execution plaintiff to resist such redemption: Kilbride v. Munn, 55-445.

The sheriff may make his deed to a different person from the purchaser, with such purchaser's consent: Ehleringer v. Moriarty, 10-78.

Where the person making redemption is the owner, or redeems as owner and not as creditor, he is not entitled to a sheriff's deed: Dickerman v. Lust, 66-444.

If a party not entitled to redeem, nevertheless pays money for that purpose and secures an assignment of the certificate of purchase, he is entitled to a deed. The execution defendant or his grantee has no ground of objection: Rush v. Mitchell, 71-333. And see notes to § 4330.

Right to crops, rent, etc.: The estate of the debtor is not divested until execution of the deed, and any crops upon the premises already matured do not pass thereby, although they were not matured when the purchaser became entitled to his deed: Everingham v. Braden, 58-133.

A purchaser under an execution sale is entitled to the rent accruing or falling due after the execution of the sheriff's deed, and the fact that the sale is in an action by attachment upon notice by publication does not prevent the application of the rule: Townsend v. Isenberger, 45-670.

Where a party, by holding over after the execution of a sheriff's deed to the premises, becomes a tenant at will, he becomes so as to the land in its condition at that time and liable to action for the rental value of the premises with unmaturing crops growing thereon: Martin v. Knapp, 57-336.

After the execution of the sheriff's deed the tenant of the former owner ceases to have any right to the possession, and if he takes crops therefrom he must account to the execution purchaser and not to the former owner: Ibid.

A tenant of the execution defendant, sowing or planting crops after the sale, with knowledge that they cannot be harvested before the expiration of the period of redemption, is not entitled to possession for the purpose of harvesting such crops, after the right of the purchaser to possession under his deed has become complete: Wheeler v. Kirkendall, 67-612.

Taking deed for benefit of another: A contract whereby a third person was to purchase certificates of sale of real property sold under execution, and upon securing a deed to the property convey a portion or all of it to the other party to the contract, who had lost his right of redemption, held not to constitute a mortgage, or to entitle the latter to any right of redemption except in accordance with the express terms of the contract: Hensley v. Whiffin, 53-426.

Where a purchaser under execution agrees to convey to the debtor the property purchased upon being paid a certain amount within a certain time, the debtor cannot, after failure to pay the amount within the time agreed, maintain an equitable action to redeem: Turkington v. Corley, 59-28.

In a particular case, held, that even though a purchase at execution sale was made for the benefit of another with the right to him to avail himself thereof upon payment of certain specified amounts, yet the party seeking to avail himself of the purchase did not show such payments as to entitle him to the benefits of the agreement: Jack v. Brown, 60-271.

Under particular facts, held, that the purchase at execution sale was in trust, and that sufficient steps for redemption having been taken, the execution of the sheriff's deed should have been ordered to be made to the person who, by agreement between the parties, had effected the redemption: Kennedy v. Stranahan, 39-205.

4354. Recording. 3125; 21 G. A., ch. 146. The purchaser of real estate at a sale on execution, need not place any evidence of his purchase upon record until sixty days after the expiration of the full time of redemption. Up to that time, the publicity of the proceedings is constructive notice of the rights of the purchaser, but no longer. [R., § 3355; C., '51, § 1947.]

Recording; notice: One who, in good faith, purchases the property after the expiration of the period allowed for recording the deed, and before it is recorded, is not affected with constructive notice of the proceedings: Harrison v. Kramer, 3-543; Churchill v. Morse, 23-229.

But a failure to record the deed is not material as against one who is not a purchaser in good faith, or who purchases with actual notice of the sale: Harrison v. Kramer, 3-543; Walker v. Schreiber, 47-529, 533.

Only a bona fide purchaser, without notice, is protected against a deed not recorded: Rush v. Mitchell, 71-333.

A party cannot complain of delay in taking and recording the sheriff's deed unless he acquires his interest after the period allowed for recording: Wood v. Young, 38-102.

The constructive notice of the sheriff's sale, imparted by the publicity of the proceedings themselves and the recording of the sheriff's deed, affects only those persons claiming under the title divested by the sale and not those claiming under an independent or hostile title: Hultz v. Zollars, 39-589; Gardner v. Jaques, 42-577.

Where the certificate is assigned by the purchaser to a third person, failure by the assignee to put his deed on record will not defeat his claims as against a subsequent purchaser from the assignors. The requirement of notice applies only as against purchasers from the judgment defendant: Lindley v. Mays, 66-265.

A levy upon and sale of land in another county than that in which the judgment is rendered, without the filing of a transcript of the judgment, are not proceedings of which a subsequent purchaser of the property is bound to take notice until the deed is actually recorded: McGinnis v. Edgell, 39-419.

The deed, when duly executed and recorded, is notice of the prior proceedings, and it is immaterial whether the judgment under which the execution issued was properly indexed or not: Cushing v. Edwards, 68-145.

4355. Deeds imply regularity. 3126. Deeds executed by a sheriff in pursuance of the sales contemplated in this chapter, are presumptive evidence of the regularity of all previous proceedings in the case, and may be given in evidence without preliminary proof. [R., § 3356; C., '51, § 1948.]

Where a sheriff's deed is silent as to the nature of the writ under which the sale is made, and no other evidence is offered, the sale is to be presumed regular: Childs v. McChesney, 20-431.

But aside from statutory provisions, it is not evidence of the regularity of prior proceedings, nor even of the existence of the judgment or execution. So held in case of a sale under strict foreclosure without proceedings in court, ac-ording to the provisions of Code of '51: Seever v. Drennon, 29-235.

Recitals in a sheriff's deed to the effect that at the sale the property conveyed was struck off to the purchaser "together with other real estate . . . for the sum of," etc., held not sufficient to show a sale for a gross sum and overcome the presumption that the officer selling did his duty: Foley v. Kane, 53-64.

4356. Damages. 3127. When real estate has been sold on execution, the purchaser thereof, or any person who has succeeded to his interest, may, after his estate becomes absolute, recover damages for any injury to the property committed after the sale and before possession is delivered under the conveyance. [R., § 3357; C., '51, § 1949.]

4357. "Defendant," "plaintiff." 3128. The term "defendant" as herein used, is intended to designate the party against whom, and the term "plaintiff" the party in favor of whom, any execution is issued. [R., § 3358; C., '51, § 1951.]

The term defendant, as here used, must be construed to mean the particular debtor or person who has the legal, or possibly an equitable, title in and to the premises sought to be redeemed, but does not include the surety for the indebtedness who has no interest in the property sold: Miller v. Ayres, 59-424.

4358. Applicable to justice's proceedings. 3129. The provisions of this chapter are intended to embrace proceedings in justices' courts, so far as they are applicable; and the terms "sheriff" and "clerk" are accordingly to be understood, as qualified in this chapter, in the same manner in this respect as in that relative to attachment. [R., § 3359; C., '51, § 1952.]

REVIVOR OF JUDGMENTS.

An execution issued in the name of a deceased plaintiff without the indorsement here provided for may be enjoined: Meek v. Bunker, 33-169.

name of a deceased person, and judgment is rendered and sale had thereunder, the proceedings are invalid: White v. Secor, 58-533.

And see notes to § 4056.

Where action is brought, by mistake, in the 4360. Officer's duty. 3131. The sheriff, in acting upon an execution indorsed as provided in the last section, shall proceed as if the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs, or the personal representatives or heirs, were the only plaintiffs in the execution, and take bonds accordingly. [R., § 3483.]

4361. Affidavit required. 3132. Before making the indorsements named above, an affidavit shall be filed with the clerk by one of the plaintiffs or personal representatives, or heirs or their attorney, of the death of the defendant, and that the persons named as such are the personal representatives or heirs, and in the case of personal representatives, they shall file with the clerk a certificate of their qualification, according to law in this state. [R., § 3484.]

[The words "of the defendant," in the third line, should evidently be "of the plaintiff," but the section stands as here given, both in the printed Code and the original bill.]

4362. Death of part of defendants. 3133. The death of part only of the defendants, shall not prevent execution being issued, which, however, shall operate alone on the survivors and their property. [R., § 3485.]

At common law an execution cannot be issued on a judgment after the death of defendant therein, and sales made in pursuance of such execution are void, and this rule is recognized by this section. The fact that the property levied on under the execution is already held by the sheriff by writ of attachment levied before the death of the judgment debtor will not affect the rule: Welch v. Battern, 47-147.

The right to issue an execution against property of execution defendant terminates at his death, and, in the absence of any order or proceeding re-establishing such right, the sale and deed under such execution are ineffective for any purpose: Boyle v. Maroney, 73-70.

The death of defendant after levy, but before sale, cannot be shown for the purpose of defeating the sale. So held where the judgment was in partition for costs, and was made a special lien upon the shares of the property of vendee: Sprott v. Reid, 3 G. Gr., 489.

A judgment against a person afterwards deceased should be filed with claims against the estate and approved as a claim of the fourth class, within the time specified in § 3625, in order to secure payment out of the personal estate. If not thus filed, the action authorized by § 4321 to subject real property of decedent to execution thereon cannot be maintained: Bayless v. Powers, 62-601.

A judgment against a decedent may be revived against his administrator: Carnes v. Crandall, 10-377.

A creditor cannot bring an action to revive, as against the heirs, a judgment rendered against decedent in his life-time. The only method provided for the enforcement of such a judgment is by proceedings against decedent's estate: Bridgman v. Miller, 50-392.

4363. Execution quashed. 3134. The defendant may move the court to quash an execution, on the ground that the personal representatives or heirs of a deceased plaintiff are not properly stated in the indorsement on the execution, and, during the vacation of the court, may obtain an injunction, upon its being made to appear that the persons named are not entitled to the judgment on which the execution was issued. [R., § 3486.]

PROCEEDINGS AUXILIARY TO EXECUTION.

4364. Defendant examined. 3135. When execution against the property of a judgment debtor, or one of several debtors in the same judgment, has been issued from the district, [circuit], or supreme court to the sheriff of the county where such debtor resides, or if he do not reside in the state, to the sheriff of the county where the judgment was rendered or a transcript of a justice's judgment has been filed, and execution issued thereon is returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, the owner of the judgment is entitled to an order for the appearance and examination of such debtor. [R., § 3375; C., '51, § 1953.]

4365. Upon affidavit as to property. 3136. The like order may be obtained at any time after the issuing of an execution, upon proof, by the affidavit of the party or otherwise, to the satisfaction of the court or officer who is to grant the same, that any judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply towards the satisfaction of the judgment. [R., § 3376; C., '51, § 1954.]

A second examination without a new affidavit may be held as a continuation of an examination previously had: McDonnell v. Henderson, 74-619.

4366. By whom order granted. 3137. Such order may be made by the district [or circuit] court of the county in which the judgment was rendered, or to which execution has been issued, or in vacation by a judge thereof. And the debtor may be required to appear and answer before either of such courts or judges, or before a referee appointed for that purpose by the court or judge who issued the order, to report either the evidence or the facts. [R., §§ 3377, 3385; C., '51, § 1955.]

4367. Debtor interrogated. 3138. The debtor, on his appearance, may be interrogated in relation to any facts calculated to show the amount of his property, or the disposition which has been made of it, or any other matter pertaining to the purpose for which the examination is permitted to be made. And the interrogatories and answers shall be reduced to writing and preserved by the court or officer before whom they are taken. All examinations and answers under this chapter shall be on oath, and no person shall, on such examination, be excused from answering any question on the ground that his examination will tend to convict him of a fraud, but his answers shall not be used as evidence against him in a prosecution for such fraud. [R., § 3378; C., '51, § 1956.]

4368. Witnesses examined. 3139. Witnesses may be required by the order of the court or judge, or by subpoenas from the referee, to appear and testify upon any proceedings under this chapter in the same manner as upon the trial of an issue. [R., § 3379.]

Proceedings for contempt in violating an order of the court are to be tried before the court without a jury: McDonnell v. Henderson, 74-619.

4369. Disposition of property. 3140. If any property, rights, or credits, subject to execution are thus ascertained, an execution may be issued and they may be levied upon accordingly. The court or judge may order any property of the judgment debtor not exempt by law, in the hands either of himself or any other person or corporation, or due to the judgment debtor, to be delivered up, or in any other mode applied towards the satisfaction of the judgment. [R., § 3380; C., '51, § 1957.]

4370. Receiver. 3141. The court or judge may also, by order, appoint the sheriff of the proper county, or other suitable person, a receiver of the property of the judgment debtor, and may also, by order, forbid a transfer or other disposition of the property of the judgment debtor, not exempt by law, or may forbid any interference therewith. [R., § 3381.]

4371. Equitable interest. 3142. If it shall appear that the judgment debtor has any equitable interest in real estate in the county in which proceedings are had, as mortgagor, mortgagee, or otherwise, and the interest of said debtor can be ascertained as between himself and the person holding the legal estate, or having any lien on, or interest in the same, without controversy as to the interest of such person, the receiver may be ordered to sell and convey such real estate or the debtor's equitable interest therein, in the same manner as is provided by this code for the sale of real estate upon execution. [R., § 3382.]

4372. Sheriff liable. 3143. If the sheriff shall be appointed receiver, he and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond for the faithful discharge of his duties as such. [R., § 3383.]

4373. Continuance. 3144. The judge or referee acting under the provision of this chapter, shall have power to continue his proceedings from time to time until they shall be completed. [R., § 3384.]

4374. Defendant failing to appear. 3145. Should the judgment debtor fail to appear after being personally served with notice to that effect, or should he fail to make full answers to all proper interrogatories thus propounded to him, he will be guilty of contempt, and may be arrested and imprisoned until he complies with the requirements of the law in this respect. And if any person, party, or witness, disobey an order of the court or judge, or referee, duly served, such person, party, or witness may be punished as for contempt. [R., § 3386; C., '51, § 1958.]

The corresponding provisions of Revision, §§ 3375-3390, for compelling the judgment debtor to appear and answer as to his property, and to deliver in satisfaction of the execution any property thus discovered, on penalty of contempt, were held unconstitutional, not because providing for imprisonment for debt, but as authorizing the determination in a summary proceeding, without a jury, and in a court of inferior jurisdiction (the county court), of questions as to liability of property, etc., not adjudicated in the original judgment, and the enforcement by imprisonment of an order made in such proceedings: Ex parte Grace, 12-208.

The foregoing sections are constitutional, the proceedings provided for being required to be before a court of general jurisdiction or a judge thereof: Eikenberry v. Edwards, 67-619.

4375. Service of order. 3146. The order mentioned herein shall be in writing and signed by the court or judge or referee making the same, and shall be served in the same manner as an original notice in other cases. [R., § 3387.]

Where it appears that a party was present at every stage of the proceedings and had opportunity to be heard, it is not necessary to show that he was served with the written order here contemplated: McDonnell v. Henderson, 74-619.

4376. Compensation of officers and witnesses. 3147. Sheriffs, referees, receivers, and witnesses, shall receive such compensation as is allowed for like services in other cases, to be taxed as costs in the case, and the collection thereof from such party or parties as ought to pay the same shall be enforced by an order. [R., § 3388.]

4377. Warrant of arrest. 3148. Upon proof to the satisfaction of the court, or officer authorized to grant the order aforesaid, that there is danger that the defendant will leave the state, or that he will conceal himself, the said court or officer, instead of the order aforesaid, may issue a warrant for the arrest of the debtor, and for bringing him forthwith before the court or officer authorized to take his examination as hereinbefore provided. After being thus brought before the said court or officer, he may be examined in the same manner and with the like effect as is above provided. [R., § 3389; C., '51, § 1959.]

4378. Bond. 3149. Upon being brought before the court or officer, he may enter into an undertaking in such sum as the court or officer shall prescribe, with one or more sureties, that he will attend from time to time for examination before the court or officer as shall be directed, and will not, in the meantime, dispose of his property, or any part thereof; in default whereof he shall continue under arrest, and may be committed to jail on the warrant of such court or officer from time to time for safe keeping until the examination shall be concluded. [R., § 3390.]

EQUITABLE PROCEEDINGS.

4379. How and when brought. 3150. At any time after the rendition of a judgment, an action by equitable proceedings may be brought to subject any property, money, rights, credits, or interest therein belonging to the defendant, to the satisfaction of such judgment. In such action, persons indebted to the judgment debtor, or holding any property or money in which such debtor has any interest, or the evidences of securities for the same, may be made defendants. [R., § 3391.]

The provisions of this section are applicable to equitable interests in real estate: Bridgman v. McKissick, 15-260.

4380. Answers verified; petition taken as true. 3151. The answers of all defendants shall be verified by their own oath, and not by that of an agent or attorney, and the court shall enforce full and explicit discoveries in such answers by process of contempt; or upon failure to answer the petition, or any part thereof, as fully and explicitly as the court may require, the same, or such part not thus answered, shall be deemed true, and such order made or judgment rendered as the nature of the case may require. [R., § 3392.]

4381. Lien created. 3152. In the case contemplated in the two preceding sections, a lien shall be created on the property of the judgment debtor, or his interest therein, in the hands of any defendant or under his control, which is sufficiently described in the petition, from the time of the service of notice and copy of the petition on the defendant holding or controlling such property or any interest therein. [R., §§ 3393, 3394.]

While a judgment at law is a lien upon any equitable interest of the debtor in real property (§ 4089 and notes), it is not so in such sense as to affect bona fide purchasers without notice, and a judgment creditor may, by proceedings under this and the preceding sections, acquire a superior lien upon the property by reason of his greater diligence: Bridgman v. McKissick, 15-260.

4382. Surrender of property enforced. 3153. The court shall enforce the surrender of the money, or securities therefor, or of any other property of the defendant in the execution which may be discovered in the action, and for this purpose may commit to jail any defendant or garnishee failing or refusing to make such surrender until it shall be done, or the court is satisfied that it is out of his power to do so. [R., § 3395.]

TITLE XIX.

OF PROCEEDINGS TO REVERSE, VACATE, OR MODIFY JUDGMENTS, OR THE PROCEEDINGS OF BOARDS OR INDIVIDUALS ACTING JUDICIALLY.

CHAPTER 1.

OF PROCEEDINGS TO REVERSE, VACATE, OR MODIFY JUDGMENTS IN THE COURTS IN WHICH RENDERED.

4383. By court where rendered. 3154. The district [or circuit] court in which a judgment has been rendered, or by which, or by the judge of which, a final order has been made, shall have power after the term at which such judgment or order was made to vacate or modify such judgment or order:

1. By granting a new trial for the cause, within the time, and in the manner prescribed by the sections on new trials;
2. By a new trial granted on proceedings against defendants served by publication only, as prescribed in title seventeen, chapter nine, section two thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven [§ 4084];
3. For mistake, neglect, or omission of the clerk, or irregularity in obtaining a judgment or order;
4. For fraud practiced by the successful party in obtaining the judgment or order;
5. For erroneous proceedings against a minor or person of unsound mind, when the condition of such defendant does not appear in the record, nor the errors in the proceedings;
6. For the death of one of the parties before the judgment in the action;
7. For unavoidable casualty or misfortune preventing the party from prosecuting or defending;
8. For error in a judgment shown by a minor within twelve months after arriving at full age. [R., § 3499.]

Petition to vacate: The application should be by petition and not by motion; but where a motion was filed and the question as to the right to a new trial was determined thereunder without objection, held, that the action of the court would not be reversed on appeal: Storm Lake v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 62-218.

The fact that a motion for a new trial has been previously made and overruled does not debar the party from seeking, by proceedings under this section, to have the judgment vacated on other grounds than those previously urged. Such application may be united with other facts than those directly connected with the cause in which the vacation is sought, when such facts constitute a defense to the claim upon which the judgment was founded: Reno v. Teagarden, 24-144.

Where judgment is against joint defendants and one of them shows himself entitled to have it set aside, it should be set aside as to both: Storm Lake v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 62-218.

In what cases granted: The statutory provisions as to vacating judgments are applicable to judgments in adversary proceedings, but not to an order for a guardian's sale of property: Bunce v. Bunce, 59-533.

Grounds for vacating; fraud: The term fraud is used in this section in its ordinary sense: Lumpkin v. Snook, 63-515.

It may admit of question whether a false statement in a pleading, which the opposite party has a full and fair opportunity to deny, can amount to fraud practiced by the successful party: Miller v. Albaugh, 24-128.

Fraud and negligence of defendant's attorney in not interposing a valid defense is not a ground for vacating a judgment and granting a new trial: Jones v. Leech, 46-186.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that a combination was shown to surprise and defraud the plaintiff in the proceeding in which the judgment had been rendered from which relief was sought: Pfiffner v. Krapfel, 28-27.

A party cannot be charged with fraud in procuring a judgment, unless some device or artifice is resorted to in obtaining it whereby the court is misled or deceived, and the party against whom it is rendered is prevented from asserting his claim or making his defense. The mere fact of offering in evidence a tax deed, valid on its face, but which may be invalid by reason of some fact connected with a prior proceeding in which the deed was obtained, and of which the person offering it has no knowledge, will not constitute fraud: Brownell v. Storm Lake Bank, 63-754.

The production of false testimony may amount to such fraud as to entitle the adverse party to a new trial, but this will not be so if the opposite party, being advised in advance that testimony of that character would be resorted to, neglects to produce evidence which he knows of to meet such false testimony: Heathcote v. Haskins, 74-566.

Where it appears that a defendant had allowed default to be rendered against him under a promise of the attorney of a co-defendant that his interests would be protected without his appearance, held, that he was entitled to a new trial: Bennet v. Carey, 72-476.

Dismissal of an action cannot be considered as having been procured by fraud where it is alleged to have been on the ground that the party was lulled into a sense of security by promises on the part of the other party to make some fair offer of compromise: Dahlhoff v. Keenan, 66-679.

The promise of a person seeking to foreclose a mechanic's lien, that he will pay the claim of a prior lienholder upon the premises if such lienholder will not appear and assert his prior lien, will not constitute fraud authorizing the setting aside of the judgment thus obtained on failure of the promisor to make such payment, even though the promise was made without intention of performance: Lumpkin v. Snook, 63-515.

A court of equity can only grant relief from a judgment for grounds specified by the statute, even though such relief is not sought until after the expiration of the year within which the proceedings provided for by statute are to be brought: Ibid.

The district court has jurisdiction of an action in which it is sought to set aside a judgment in the probate court for fraud: Cowin v. Tootle, 31-513.

Fraud of the prevailing party on the former trial being shown which is sufficient to constitute reasonable grounds to believe that a different result may be anticipated on the retrial, the judgment should be vacated and the new trial ordered: Brown v. Byam, 59-52.

The fraud shown in a particular case held sufficient to warrant the setting aside of the judgment: Independent School Dist. v. Schreiner, 46-172.

In divorce cases: A decree of divorce obtained by fraud of the successful party may be set aside under the statutory provision, even though the rights of innocent third parties have intervened by reason of a remarriage, and in the petition for such relief it need not be alleged that rights of innocent parties have not intervened, that fact being immaterial: Rush v. Rush, 46-648; S. C., 48-701.

The fact that the party procuring the fraudulent decree has again married will not prevent its being set aside: Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 46-437.

A party who has remarried after procuring a fraudulent decree of divorce which is set aside upon application of the opposite party may be convicted of adultery in such remarriage: State v. Whitcomb, 52-85.

Casualty or misfortune: That a party intended to appear and defend an action, but was prevented from doing so by a severe illness which rendered him incapable of attending to and interposing his defense, held sufficient ground for a vacation of the judgment against him by default: Luscomb v. Maloy, 26-444.

And so held where defendant, having left home in time to return to the trial, was prevented from doing so by sickness: Brewer v. Holborn, 34-473.

The evidence in a particular case held not to establish casualty or misfortune sufficient under this section to warrant the setting aside of a judgment: Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Rodecker, 47-162.

That defendant was misled by an error in the copy of the notice served upon him in regard to the date of commencement of the term of court might be a sufficient averment of unavoidable casualty or misfortune, but where the petition contained an inconsistent averment that defendant had taken legal advice as to whether the error relieved him from obligation to appear at the proper time, held, that he did not make out a case for relief: Jrions v. Keystone Mfg. Co., 61-406.

Where it appeared that notice of the action was served on a married woman who was defendant therein, and she testified that she did not suppose that it concerned her individually, and therefore failed to defend, held, that there was not sufficient unavoidable casualty or misfortune shown to entitle her to have it set aside: Teabout v. Roper, 62-603.

The fact that a party asking a new trial is a foreigner, and laboring under that disadvantage in making defense, will not be sufficient to constitute casualty or misfortune entitling him to a new trial: Heathcote v. Haskins, 74-566.

Sickness of counsel is a sufficient excuse for want of attention to the case, where it appears that such sickness has not been of such long standing that the party must be deemed guilty of negligence in not employing another attorney to take his place: Snell v. Iowa Homestead Co., 67-405.

Irregularity: A judgment rendered by default upon a petition not filed by the time stated in the notice, as required by § 3805, held sufficiently irregular to be set aside upon application: Morgan v. Small, 33-118.

In case of death of plaintiff before judgment: A judgment rendered in a party's favor after his death, without substitution of his representatives, is not void, but only voidable, and is not to be set aside as a matter of course. Such judgment would, at least in another action, be conclusively presumed to have been rendered while plaintiff was living: Gilman v. Donovan, 53-362.

At any rate, under this section, proceedings to have such judgment set aside must be brought within a year, and the judgment will not be vacated until it is determined that there is a valid defense to the action in which the judgment was rendered: Ibid.

Lost record: The fact that after rendition of judgment all the written evidence upon which an equity case had been tried was lost, held not to be a sufficient reason for granting a new trial: Loomis v. McKenzie, 48-416.

In case of judgment against minor: Under this section the right of an infant defendant to attack a judgment against him is fixed and determined, and it is not allowable for the infant to come in as a matter of course with a new defense, or new evidence, and try the case over again: Bickel v. Erskine, 43-213; Webster v. Page, 54-461.

The minor can only take advantage of error in the judgment apparent on the record, and such as would be ground for reversal on writ of error or appeal: Ibid.

A minor cannot, after the expiration of the year allowed by this section, question the correctness of a judgment against him by collateral proceedings: Dahms v. Alston, 72-411.

Where in an action against a minor an attorney appeared for him, and was during the trial appointed guardian ad litem, and made defense, held, that there was no ground, in the absence of prejudice being shown, to authorize setting aside the verdict and granting a new trial: Webster v. Page, 54-461.

Where the court appointed a guardian ad

4384. Petition for new trial. 3155. Where the grounds for a new trial could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered before, but are discovered after the term at which the verdict, report of referee, or decision was rendered or made, the application may be made by petition filed as in other cases, not later than the second term after the discovery, on which notice shall be served and returned, and the defendant held to appear as in an original action. The facts stated in the petition shall be considered as denied without answer. The case shall be tried as other cases by ordinary proceedings, but no petition shall be filed more than one year after the final judgment was rendered. [R., § 3116.]

In what cases: This provision contemplates application for a new trial made after the expiration of the three days. If made within that time, it should be by motion; if afterwards, by petition: First Nat. Bank v. Murdough, 40-26.

Where the ground for a new trial is discovered so near the close of the term that application cannot be made at that term, it may be made at the following one: Alger v. Merritt, 16-121.

Time for application: Where an amended petition for a new trial was filed after the expiration of one year, setting out new grounds, held, that it could not be considered: Harnett v. Harnett, 59-401.

Laches cannot be imputed to a party who brings his action within the time given: Independent School Dist. v. Schreiner, 46-172.

The petition in such cases need only show the facts upon which the new trial is asked as in other cases: Stineman v. Beath, 36-73.

The petition should be entitled as in the original cause: Hintrager v. Sumbargo, 54-604.

Notice: Where the original proceeding is by attachment, notice of petition for new trial by a plaintiff in the original action may be litem to answer for a minor, and an answer was filed by him denying the allegations of the petition, but it appeared that neither the minor nor the guardian knew of the facts which showed that no claim existed, held, that the minor was entitled to a new trial under the provisions of this section: Heathcote v. Haskins, 74-570.

Negligence: The fact that a judgment is for an amount in excess of what was actually due will not be a ground for setting aside the judgment where the party was represented by an attorney, who consented to the entry of judgment, and it does not appear that there was any fraud or concealment. The judgment can be modified as to the amount of the recovery only for mistake or omission of the clerk, fraud by the successful party in obtaining the judgment, or unavoidable casualty or misfortune preventing the party from prosecuting or defending. Relief will not be granted for negligence of the party in ascertaining the defense in time to plead it in the action: McConkey v. Lamb, 71-636.

To entitle a party to new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, it must appear that he exercised all reasonable diligence to discover the evidence before the trial and rendition of judgment, and that he was unable to do so: Heathcote v. Haskins, 74-566.

served in the same manner as the original notice in an attachment proceeding; that is, by publication or personal service on defendant without the state: Darrance v. Preston, 18-396.

Grounds of: A petition charging that the attorney of defendant procured a charge in the entry of judgment after the record had been read and approved by the court, held to sufficiently set out fraud on the part of defendant and entitle plaintiff to a new trial. Also held, that it was not necessary in the petition to charge fraud in words, but that fraud was sufficiently set out by alleging the facts constituting it without designating them as fraud: Lafever v. Stone, 55-49.

Sickness of the party's attorney will be ground for a new trial only when it has not been of such long duration that the party is guilty of negligence in failing to employ another attorney. If it appears that the case is such that another attorney, if employed, might have conducted it as well as the one disabled, it will not be a sufficient ground: Snell v. Iowa Homestead Co., 67-405.

Where a party bases his petition for a new trial on the ground of accident or surprise, he must show that he could not, by reason of the accident or surprise, with reasonable diligence, properly defend the action, or could not, by such diligence, have discovered the evidence previously to the trial: Richards v. Nuckolls, 19-555.

Newly-discovered evidence set out in a particular case as a ground for a new trial in an action for divorce, held not sufficient: Harnett v. Harnett, 59-401.

Where it appeared that one of the attorneys for a party did not appear through misunderstanding as to the extent of his employment, and the other, living out of the district, was misinformed by the opposite attorney as to the time for holding the term of the court, in consequence of which judgment was rendered against defendant, held, that there was not such negligence as to defeat the right to another trial upon petition: Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 49-657.

Where the newly-discovered evidence was that of a witness on the former trial whose testimony was entirely contradictory to that first given, held, that the new trial was properly refused, as such evidence would not authorize a different judgment from that rendered: Carpenter v. Brown, 50-451.

The rules applicable in determining when newly-discovered evidence will be a ground for a motion for new trial are also applicable in determining when such newly-discovered evidence will be sufficient to entitle the applicant to relief upon petition for new trial: Morrow v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61-487.

Diligence: A party asking a new trial on the ground of newly-discovered evidence must show the exercise of diligence in procuring or discovering such evidence: Stuckslager v. McKee, 40-212; Miller v. Albaugh, 24-128.

But only reasonable diligence need be shown: Stineman v. Beath, 36-73.

Where a petition for a new trial on account of newly-discovered evidence stated that such evidence did not come to plaintiff's knowledge until about the close of the trial, held, that he should have asked a continuance on account of such evidence, and, having failed to do so, was not entitled to relief: Bailey v. Landingham, 52-415.

But he need only allege that he could not with reasonable diligence have discovered the testimony before the trial; what was done by him, or what facts existed to show due diligence, is matter of evidence, and need not be stated in the petition, although necessary in an affidavit accompanying a motion for a new trial on such ground: Woodman v. Dutton, 49-398; but, holding contra, see Cohol v. Allen, 37-449.

Change of venue: Upon the trial of the petition a change of venue may be granted as in other cases: Gibbs v. Buckingham, 48-96; State v. Whitcomb, 52-85.

Trial of the petition: The court may first hear and decide upon the grounds to vacate the judgment, and such trial should not be by jury. (Overruling Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Gillett, 38-434): Carpenter v. Brown, 50-451.

The provision that the case should be tried as other cases refers to the mode of producing evidence in the ordinary manner instead of by affidavit, as in the case of the motion: Ibid.

Although a trial by jury is not authorized in such a case, yet if a party asks a jury he cannot afterwards complain of the submission of questions of fact to it: Bennett v. Carey, 72-476.

Pendency of appeal: The fact that an appeal from the original judgment is taken and pending cannot be pleaded in bar of an action under this provision: Cook v. Smith, 58-607.

Effect of petition: The filing of a petition for a new trial under this section cannot have any greater force and effect than would a motion seeking the same thing when filed within the time prescribed by statute. The petition for a new trial is deemed denied by operation of law, and before there can be a new trial the court must make an order granting it, which should be entered of record among the proceedings of the court: Brown v. Byam, 59-52.

No new question: In this proceeding a party seeking a new trial is not entitled to raise any new question such as that of estoppel; the only effect of the order is the award of a new trial in the original cause: Bennett v. Carey, 72-476.

New trial in equity: An action in equity asking a new trial cannot be sustained where a plaintiff may have relief under the statutory provisions as to a petition for new trial: Hintrager v. Sumbargo, 54-604.

A court of equity will direct new trials in actions at law, in cases where such new trials would have been ordered by the courts wherein the actions were tried, had timely application been made to them, provided proper reasons are shown why application was not made in time, or the grounds upon which the interference of chancery is claimed arose after the courts of law were deprived of power to grant the relief: Bowen v. Troy Portable Mill Co., 31-460.

Courts of equity have jurisdiction to grant relief against a judgment where the ground of relief is not discovered until after the expiration of one year; but the extent of the jurisdiction of a court of equity is to grant relief on the grounds enumerated in the preceding section: McConkey v. Lamb, 71-636.

4385. Mistakes of clerk and irregularity. 3156. The proceedings to correct mistakes or omissions of the clerk, or irregularity in obtaining a judgment or order, shall be by motion served on the adverse party, or on his attorney in the action, and within one year; and when made to vacate a judgment because of irregularity in obtaining it, must be made on the second day of the succeeding term. [R., § 3500.]

Payment and satisfaction of a judgment by defendant will not bar a proceeding by plaintiff, within proper time, to correct a mistake of the clerk: Goldsmith v. Clausen, 14-278.

This section does not apply to an application for the entry of a judgment nunc pro tunc which has been entirely omitted: Fuller v. Stebbins, 49-376.

Nor does such statutory provision apply to a motion to correct a record, made by a party against whom the court has by mistake rendered a personal judgment without having jurisdiction to do so: Shelley v. Smith, 50-543.

4386. When petition must be filed. 3157. The proceedings to obtain the benefit of subdivisions four, five, six, seven, and eight of section three thousand one hundred and fifty-four, of this chapter [§ 4383], shall be by petition, verified by affidavit setting forth the judgment or order, the facts or errors constituting a cause to vacate or modify it, and the facts constituting a defense to the action if the party applying was a defendant, and such proceedings must be commenced within one year after the judgment or order was made, unless the party entitled thereto be a minor or person of unsound mind, and then within one year from the removal of such disability. [R., § 3501.]

Application to vacate a judgment must be made within a year: Hunt v. Stevens, 26-399.

The time within which the proceedings must be instituted commences to run from the entry of the judgment, and not from the time of final judgment on appeal. It seems that taking an appeal waives the right to this proceeding: Gray v. Coan, 48-424.

If the proceeding to set aside a judgment for fraud is brought within the period allowed by statute it cannot be objected to as not prosecuted with sufficient diligence. The fact that the judgment has been assigned to an innocent party before the bringing of the action does not defeat the right to relief against it: Independent School Dist. v. Schreiner, 46-172.

The statutory limitations to proceedings to vacate or set aside a judgment do not apply to actions in equity founded upon the general jurisdiction which equity exercises to grant relief in cases of fraud: District T'p v. White, 42-608.

A court of equity will grant a new trial in an action at law, if the time for applying for relief under the statute has elapsed, only when proper reasons are shown for such application: Ibid.; Bowen v. Troy Portable Mill Co., 31-460; Bond v. Epley, 48-600.

A party who has knowledge of the error complained of before the expiration of the year, and does not pursue his remedy as herein provided, cannot have equitable relief against the judgment: Freeman v. Hart, 61-535.

Where a mistake of the clerk has remained undiscovered until too late to correct it by motion, under the statutory provision, the party being without fault and remediless in law, may be granted relief in an action in equity, and the fact that the erroneous judgment has been affirmed on appeal will not affect such right: Partridge v. Harrow, 27-96.

A judgment cannot be set aside in an equitable proceeding or enjoined on grounds which would be sufficient to secure a new trial under the statutory provision above referred to: Hintrager v. Sumbargo, 54-604.

The law contemplates that the motion to set aside a judgment should be made at the term next succeeding the one at which entry of the judgment was made. If such motion is afterwards made, the mistake should be clearly manifest and the court fully satisfied that no prejudice could result therefrom: Keeney v. Lyon, 21-277.

That the petition to set aside is not verified as required by statute will not render the proceedings thereunder void. Such defect should be taken advantage of by motion to strike the pleading from the files: Rush v. Rush, 46-648, 651.

That the application for vacating or setting aside does not set forth the facts constituting a defense is a defect which must be taken advantage of by motion for more specific statement, or possibly by demurrer, but cannot be made available on a trial on the merits or by objection on appeal: Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 30-191.

4387. Proceedings. 3158. In such proceedings the party shall be brought into court in the same way, on the same notice as to time, mode of service, and mode of return, and the pleadings shall be governed by the principles, and issues be made up by the same form, and all the proceedings conducted in the same way, as near as can be, as in original action by ordinary proceedings, except that defendant shall introduce no new cause, and the cause of the petition shall alone be tried. [R., § 3502.]

The proceedings authorized under this statute are in the nature of a writ of error coram nobis and are provided for a review of a case, after final judgment, in the very court wherein it was rendered. The jurisdiction of all other courts of such proceeding is thereby excluded, and a change of venue cannot be had: Gilman v. Donovan, 59-76 (apparently overruling

State v. Whitcomb, 52-85, in which it was held that if the proceeding was properly commenced in the court where the judgment was rendered, a change of venue to another county might be had as in other cases).

No new cause such as that a party asking a new trial is estopped from claiming it can be introduced: Bennett v. Carey, 72-476.

4388. Valid defense. 3159. The judgment shall not be vacated on motion or petition until it is adjudged that there is a valid defense to the action in which the judgment is rendered; or, if the plaintiff seeks its vacation, that there is a valid cause of action; and when judgment is modified, all liens and securities obtained under it shall be preserved to the modified judgment. [R., § 3503.]

The proceedings provided for by this section contemplate a trial as to whether there is a valid defense. Plaintiff need not again introduce the evidence necessary in the first instance to entitle him to recovery: Morton v. Coffin, 29-235.

If the court finds that there are not sufficient grounds for vacating the judgment, it need not inquire into the validity of the defense offered. If it becomes necessary to do so, however, not only the sufficiency of the answer, but the truth of its averments must be determined: Niagara Ins. Co. v. Kodecker, 47-162.

The judgment is only to be vacated after a trial of the defense on its merits, and the finding of the sufficiency thereof: Brewer v. Holborn, 34-473.

No showing of defense to the action in which the judgment was obtained being made, the judgment should not be set aside: Russell v. Pottawottamie County, 29-256.

It must appear that a plaintiff seeking relief from a judgment against him has a valid action before the judgment can be vacated: Coleman v. Case, 66-534.

Where irregularity and fraud in obtaining a judgment were found, but there was no evidence that there was a valid defense, held error to order the judgment vacated: Dryden v. Wyllis, 51-534.

The court should first try the question of the validity of the defense, and if that should appear insufficient should overrule the application: Miracle v. Lancaster, 46-179.

The court, without a jury, is to decide upon the question of whether the judgment shall be vacated or not, and a new trial granted: Carpenter v. Brown, 50-451.

It is not the duty of the court, where it is sought to have a judgment vacated on the ground of fraud in procuring it, to carefully weigh the evidence and determine upon which side there is a preponderance as to whether there is a defense to the action or not, but to examine the evidence produced, and therefrom, in connection with the evidence introduced on the former trial, determine whether there is a reasonable ground to believe that a different result will be reached upon a retrial; and it is not proper for the court to render another judgment without first having decided whether the original judgment should be set aside and a new trial ordered: Brown v. Byam, 59-52.

Where the party asking that a judgment be set aside presents a meritorious defense, the court will not pass upon the sufficiency of the evidence to support it. If the evidence tends to support it, even though it is not conclusive as to the facts, that will be sufficient: Bowen v. Troy Portable Mill Co., 31-460; State Ins. Co. v. Granger, 62-272.

The court in which a judgment is rendered may, in a proceeding to set it aside, inquire as to whether jurisdiction was acquired by service of notice or otherwise, although the judgment itself recites the fact of service: Newcomb v. Dewey, 27-381.

Such a proceeding is a direct attack, and the fact of want of service being shown, the judgment should be vacated: State Ins. Co. v. Granger, 62-272.

An appeal lies from a proceeding to vacate a judgment for fraud: Dryden v. Wyllis, 51-534.

Such appeal is not triable in the supreme court de novo: Independent School Dist. v. Schreiner, 46-172.

A party cannot, by moving to vacate a judgment, and then appealing from the order refusing to grant such relief, extend the time for taking appeal from the judgment: Russell v. First Nat. Bank, 65-242.

4389. First try grounds to vacate. 3160. The court may first try and decide upon the grounds to vacate or modify a judgment or order before trying or deciding upon the validity of the defense or cause of action. [R., § 3504.]

4390. Injunction. 3161. The party seeking to vacate or modify a judgment or order, may obtain an injunction suspending proceedings on the whole or part thereof, which injunction may be granted by the court or the judge upon its being rendered probable, by affidavit or petition sworn to, or by exhibition of the record, that the party is entitled to have such judgment or order vacated or modified. [R., § 3505.]

4391. When judgment is affirmed. 3162. In all cases of affirmance of the judgment or order, when the proceedings have been suspended, judgment shall be rendered against the plaintiff in error for the amount of the former judgment, interests, and costs, together with damages at the discretion of the court, not exceeding ten per cent. on the amount of the judgment. [R., § 3506.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF APPELLATE PROCEEDINGS IN THE SUPREME COURT.

4392. From what appeals taken. 3163. The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction over all judgments and decisions of all other courts of record, as well in case of civil actions as in proceedings of a special or independent character. [R., § 2631; C., '51, § 1555.]

[The jurisdiction of the supreme court is provided for in article five of the constitution.]

I. JURISDICTION.

Not original: The supreme court has no original jurisdiction. It can review or correct judgments of a lower court only upon appeal or writ of error: Powell v. Spaulding, 3 G. Gr., 417; Westbrook v. Wicks, 36-382; Reed v. Murphy, 2 G. Gr., 568; Preston v. Daniels, 2 G. Gr., 536.

It can only try issues presented on appeal. It cannot, by way of a ruling on a motion, determine that, by reason of matters arising pending the appeal and shown by affidavit, appellee should be barred from further prosecuting the case: Simonson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 48-19.

Appeals are tried upon the record in the court below. Original pleading and proceedings are never filed or had in the supreme court: Manatt v. Starr, 72-677.

Not conferred by consent: Parties cannot by agreement confer jurisdiction upon the supreme court in a case in which an appeal is not authorized. So held, where, by consent, an appeal in a criminal case was taken without judgment having been rendered: Rutter v. State, 1-99.

For correction of errors: In a law case it is a court for the correction of errors at law, and it will not decide a case upon an agreed statement of facts which does not purport to embody the evidence, and when no error of law is presented: Harvey v. Miller, 25-219.

Appeals in equity: The distinction between the law and equity attributes of the supreme court as recognized in Const., art. 5, § 4, is too well defined to be erased by legislative action: Claussen v. Lafrenz, 4 G. Gr., 224.

The supreme court can only acquire jurisdiction in a chancery cause by appeal, and it can only review and decide questions made in and decided by the court below. Upon a trial de novo of a chancery cause, it cannot consider new testimony, and it has no power to entertain a bill of review: McGregor v. Gardner, 16-538.

The method to be pursued for securing a trial de novo upon appeal may be regulated by statute: Richards v. Hintrager, 45-253.

The right to a trial de novo upon appeal cannot be insisted upon unless the method prescribed by statute for securing such form of trial has been pursued: Cross v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 51-683.

The right of trial de novo may be limited with respect to the amount in controversy: See notes to § 4402.

But the right of trial de novo in equitable actions cannot be entirely taken away by statute: Sherwood v. Sherwood, 44-192.

Jurisdiction of the supreme court in chancery cases can be exercised only upon appeal and not upon writ of error: Stockwell v. David, 1 G. Gr., 115.

The supreme court has jurisdiction to hear a case de novo on appeal only in actions in chancery and not in special proceedings: Brett v. Myers, 65-274.

Its jurisdiction may be restricted by the general assembly; and therefore, held, that where an act gave the district court final jurisdiction in a matter, there was no right of appeal from its judgment to the supreme court: Lampson v. Platt, 1-556.

II. APPEALS FROM FINAL JUDGMENT.

Forfeiture of bail bond: An order declaring a bail bond forfeited, and taxing costs to defendant, is a final judgment in such sense that an appeal may be taken therefrom: State v. Conneham, 57-351.

Dismissal of appeal from justice: The overruling of a motion to dismiss the appeal from a justice on the ground that the court has no jurisdiction of such an appeal is such final order as may be appealed from: Curran v. Excelsior Coal Co., 63-94.

A decree in a partition proceeding, setting the rights and interests of the parties, is final in its nature, and may be appealed from before the division of the property in accordance therewith is actually made: Williams v. Wells, 62-740.

Decree for an accounting: Where, in an equitable action, plaintiff sought to have a deed set aside and also asked to have an accounting, and a decree for a reconveyance was made with an order of reference for an accounting, held, that an appeal from the decree for reconveyance might be taken, and that therefore an appeal from the decree for accounting would not bring up the question as to the correctness of the decree for reconveyance: McMurray v. Day, 70-671.

Void judgment: The fact that a judgment is entered wholly without authority, as, for instance, by a person not qualified as judge, before whom the trial is had by consent, will not prevent the correction of the error on appeal, although the judgment itself is absolutely void: Petty v. Durall, 4 G. Gr., 120.

Judgment by default: An appeal may be taken from a judgment by default: Doolittle v. Shelton, 1 G. Gr., 271; Woodward v. Whitescarver, 6-1.

An order denying to the district attorney the right to appear for the county, where the county is a party, is a decision from which an appeal may be taken: Clark v. Lyon County, 37-469.

Arrest of judgment: An order of court arresting judgment is not such a final judgment as that an appeal may be taken therefrom: Wallis v. Sparks, Mor., 20.

An order punishing for contempt cannot be reviewed by appeal: See § 4748.

When cross-bill is pending: An appeal may be taken from a decree which determines the rights of the parties to property in controversy, even though a cross-bill be still pending: Lucas v. Pickel, 20-490.

Ministerial act: Under a statute allowing an appeal from "all decrees and decisions of the county court," held, that an appeal could not be taken from the mere ministerial act of the county judge: Kennedy v. Cress, 19-42.

Judgment must appear: The record must show the rendition of judgment, that being a jurisdictional fact: Heath v. Groce, 10-591; Warder v. Schwartz, 65-170.

A party against whom no judgment has been rendered cannot appeal: Boyce v. Wabash R. Co., 63-70.

III. RIGHT OF APPEAL AND WAIVER.

Must affirmatively appear: The supreme court can entertain an appeal only when a judgment has been rendered from which an appeal may be taken. The judgment must be affirmatively shown, and the court will dismiss the case where it does not appear that such judgment has been rendered, even though the parties fail to present the objection; for, being jurisdictional in its nature, the parties cannot waive it by silence or consent: Green v. Ronen, 59-83; Groves v. Richmond, 58-54.

Where the record shows a verdict to have been rendered, but does not show that a judgment has been entered thereon, the appeal should be dismissed: Heath v. Groce, 10-591; Pittman v. Pittman, 56-769.

By what law determined: The right of appeal is governed by the law in force at the time judgment was rendered: Rivers v. Cole, 33-677; Davenport v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 37-624.

Another remedy: The fact that there is another remedy for the error complained of does not take away the right of appeal from an erroneous judgment or decision in cases where an appeal is authorized: Wilson v. Shorick, 21-332.

Waiver by accepting benefits; estoppel: A party who accepts the benefits of an adjudication, so far as favorable to him, thereby waives his right to appeal therefrom: Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 55-157; Independent Dist. v. District T'p, 44-201; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Byington, 14-572.

The acceptance of a portion of the judgment admitted to be due will not waive the right to appeal from a part of the judgment claimed to be erroneous: Upton Mfg. Co. v. Huiske, 69-557.

If the right of appeal has been waived the appeal will be dismissed on motion: Independent Dist. v. District T'p, 44-201.

Whether such question can be raised on motion after the appeal has been determined, doubted; but under the peculiar facts of a particular case, held, that there had been no such acceptance of benefits as to constitute a waiver: Crane v. Guthrie, 48-693.

Where a party to the suit has had his claim satisfied by reason of having redeemed the property from execution sale, he thereby loses his right to appeal: West v. Fitzgerald, 72-306.

Acceptance of fine: Under a statute allowing to the prosecution an appeal from the action of a justice of the peace in criminal cases, held, that the acceptance by the county treasurer of the fine imposed by the justice would not deprive the state of the right to appeal: State v. Tait, 22-140.

Payment of judgment: A party who has paid a judgment against him cannot afterward appeal from such judgment: Borgalt-hous v. Farmers', etc., Ins. Co., 36-250.

An appeal cannot be maintained after the judgment complained of has been satisfied, if such satisfaction is made solely for the purpose of relieving property from the lien of such judgment. Such a satisfaction must be considered voluntary: Hipp v. Crenshaw, 64-404.

The mere payment of the fees of an officer for his service in an action will not estop the unsuccessful party from prosecuting an appeal: State ex rel. v. Martland, 71-543.

Involuntary payment; under protest: Payment of the judgment, to prevent its satisfaction by sale of real property under execution which has already been levied thereon, will not constitute such voluntary payment as to defeat the right to appeal: Grim v. Semple, 39-570.

So held, also, as to payment made after the taking of appeal and under protest to prevent sale of property under special execution: Burrows v. Stryker, 45-700.

Acceptance of tender: Where the amount of a tender was paid into court and judgment was rendered for plaintiff for that amount, from which he appealed, claiming an additional sum as interest, and plaintiff, after the announcement of the judgment and signing of the bill of exceptions, had accepted the amount of the tender, held, that the right of appeal was not thereby waived: Dudman v. Earl, 49-37.

It will not amount to a waiver of an appeal that money paid in to the clerk by the opposite party is applied in part by the clerk in satisfaction of a claim for an attorney's lien, without the knowledge of appellant, where he, as soon as he becomes aware of the fact, repudiates the transaction, and pays back to the clerk the amount so paid in: Jewell v. Reddington, 57-92.

Change of venue by consent: Where, after perfecting his appeal from a judgment, the party consented to a transfer of the case to another court for trial, held, that the appeal was thereby waived: Lillie v. Skinner, 46-329.

Issuance of execution: The issuance of execution after perfecting the appeal and filing transcript and abstract in supreme court, on which execution nothing was realized, held not to be a waiver of the appeal, on which the appeal would be dismissed on motion: Hornish v. Peck, 53-157.

Filing transcript in another county: The right to appeal is not waived by filing transcripts of the judgment in other counties so as to make it a lien on property in such counties: Tama County v. Melendy, 53-395.

Action to enjoin judgment: An action in equity to enjoin the collection of a judgment waives the right to appeal from such judgment: Gordon v. Ellison, 9-317.

The bringing of a second action waives any error in dismissing a former action brought for the same indebtedness: Ibid.; Lieback v. Stahle, 66-749.

Judgment procured by the party appealing: A party will not be allowed to appeal from a judgment which he caused to be rendered on his own motion: Hughes v. Feeter, 23-547.

Taking stay of execution is, by § 4288, made a waiver of the right to appeal: Seacrest v. Newman, 19-323.

4393. From orders. 3164. Appeal may also be taken to the supreme court from the following orders:

1. An order made affecting a substantial right in an action, when such order, in effect, determines the action and prevents a judgment from which an appeal might be taken;

2. A final order made in special proceedings affecting a substantial right therein, or made on a summary application in an action after judgment;

3. When an order grants or refuses, continues or modifies a provisional remedy; or grants, refuses, dissolves, or refuses to dissolve an injunction or attachment; when it grants or refuses a new trial, or when it sustains or overrules a demurrer;

4. An intermediate order involving the merits and materially affecting the final decision;

5. An order or judgment on habeas corpus. [R., § 2632; C., '51, § 1556.]

Order vacating a judgment: A final order in a proceeding to vacate a judgment for fraud is a "final order in a special proceeding, affecting a substantial right therein," from which an appeal may be taken: Dryden v. Wyllis, 51-534.

Certiorari proceeding: An appeal will lie in a certiorari proceeding from a decision granting the writ and ordering a stay of proceedings in the court to which the writ issues: Iske v. Newton, 54-586.

Revocation of permit to sell liquor: An order of a district judge (§ 2368), revoking a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, is a final order in a special proceeding, affecting a substantial right, from which an appeal may be prosecuted: State v. Schmidt, 65-556.

A provisional remedy is one provided for temporary purposes, as to meet a present exigency, and an order for temporary alimony may therefore be appealed from: Blair v. Blair, 74-311.

Intermediate orders must affect the merits: An appeal will not lie from an intermediate order or ruling, as upon questions of practice or the admission or exclusion of evidence, but only from such judgments or orders as determine the rights of the parties to the relief or remedy asked, or to a substantial right as to the course of proceedings, whereby the cause is determined or is tried in a manner not authorized by law. The decision appealed from must be one affecting the merits of the case. (Explaining McCoy v. Julien, 15-371): Richards v. Burden, 31-305.

Erroneous action of the lower court in allowing a party to introduce additional evidence, when an equity case is remanded to the lower court for a decree in harmony with the opinion of the supreme court, is not a ruling so materially affecting the final decision as to authorize an appeal therefrom before final decision is rendered. It cannot be said that there will necessarily be an adjudication against the party complaining by reason of such error: Garmoe v. Sturgeon, 67-700.

Continuance: An order of continuance is a mere intermediate order, not materially affecting the merits, and an appeal does not lie therefrom: Jaffray v. Thompson, 65-323.

A finding of facts, even though considered as an intermediate order, is not considered as so far prejudicial to the substantial rights of the party to whom it is adverse that an appeal can be taken therefrom before final judgment: Boyce v. Wabash R. Co., 63-70.

Order as to prosecution in disbarment: The ruling of the court in a disbarment proceeding, in refusing to compel a member of the bar to prosecute the case, is not such as that an appeal can be taken therefrom: Byington v. Moore, 70-206.

Motion to expunge: An appeal lies from an order sustaining a motion to expunge a final order from the records, such an order for a change of the record virtually constituting a new trial: Guthrie v. Guthrie, 71-744.

The ruling on a motion to suppress depositions cannot be reviewed on appeal before final judgment: Baldwin v. Mayne, 40-687.

Exceptions to interrogatories: A ruling upon exception to interrogatories, answers to which would be used as evidence in the trial of the case, held not to be a ruling from which an appeal could be taken: State v. Arns, 72-555.

Change of venue: Appeal cannot be taken from an order granting or refusing a change of venue: Allerton v. Eldridge, 56-709.

On such an appeal the supreme court acquires no jurisdiction, and will refuse to entertain the case, although no objection on that ground is made by either party: Groves v. Richmond, 58-54.

Where the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties, the fact that the action is brought in the wrong county will not render the overruling of a motion for a change of venue such ruling as may be reviewed upon appeal before final judgment: Horak v. Horak, 68-49.

But where the motion for change of venue was treated as raising the question whether the action on a bail bond was properly brought in the county where the suit was commenced, and by that county, for the use of the school fund, or whether it should not have been brought in and by another county, held, that the decision of that question would be treated in the same manner as though made upon a demurrer, and an appeal therefrom would be entertained: Lucas County v. Wilson, 59-354.

If, however, the ruling upon the motion for change of venue is properly excepted to, an appeal from the final judgment will bring up the ruling for review if it was adverse to the party appealing: McCracken v. Webb, 36-351; Allerton v. Eldridge, 56-709.

Intermediate order reviewed on appeal from final judgment: In general, error in intermediate orders upon questions of practice, the admission of evidence, etc., from which an appeal cannot be directly taken, may be urged upon appeal from the final judgment: Richards v. Burden, 31-305.

But in such cases the error in the intermediate order will not be considered unless the record shows that a final judgment was rendered: Shannon v. Scott, 40-629; Jordan v. Henderson, 19-565.

An intermediate order may be reviewed on appeal from the final judgment taken within the proper time after the rendition of such judgment, although the time for appeal from such intermediate order separately has elapsed. The failure to appeal from an intermediate order, even when such appeal is allowable, will not waive the right to have such order reviewed on appeal from final judgment: Jones v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 36-68.

An appeal from final judgment brings up for review all intermediate rulings to which exceptions are taken. So held as to a ruling setting aside a default: Palmer v. Rogers, 70-381.

An order requiring security for costs cannot be appealed from, but appeal may be taken from an order dismissing an action for failure to give such security: Des Moines Valley, etc., Ins. Co. v. Henderson, 38-446.

Order not contemplated by law: Where an intermediate order was one which the law did not contemplate, held, that it would be presumed that such order would not affect the final decision, and an appeal therefrom would not lie: Battell v. Lowery, 46-49.

Ruling on demurrer: An appeal may be taken from the ruling on a demurrer if the party against whom the ruling is made excepts and elects to stand on his demurrer or pleading, as the case may be. It is not necessary that it appear that final judgment has been rendered: Coven v. Boone, 48-350.

But if the party pleads over or amends, he thereby waives any error in the ruling: See notes to § 3369.

A plaintiff, to whose petition a demurrer has been sustained, has the right to appeal, unless it appears that such right has been in some manner waived: Hampton v. Jones, 58-317.

An appeal may be taken from the action of the court in overruling plaintiff's demurrer to defendant's answer and dismissing the action upon plaintiff's refusing further to plead, and giving a judgment for costs against plaintiff: Arnold v. Kreutzer, 67-214.

Motion to strike: A ruling striking matter from a petition on motion, thus preventing plaintiff from introducing evidence of matter thus alleged, may be reviewed by appeal before final judgment: Stanley v. Davenport, 54-463.

The fact that the cause is still pending below does not prevent the supreme court from determining an appeal from an intermediate order involving the merits: Ibid.

A refusal by the court to sustain a motion to strike out a part of a petition not designed to show a distinct cause of action is not a ruling from which direct appeal will lie: Specht v. Spangenberg, 70-488.

The ruling on a motion to strike a petition of intervention from the files on the ground that the original action had been settled, held to be an intermediate order from which an appeal would lie: First Nat. Bank v. Gill, 50-425; Bicklin v. Kendall, 72-490.

Motion for new trial: This section expressly provides that an appeal may be taken where the court refuses a new trial, and it is immaterial whether any judgment has been rendered on the verdict or not: Baldwin v. Foss, 71-389.

Ad quod damnum: An appeal in an ad quod damnum proceeding from a decision of the court overruling a motion to set aside the verdict and quash the writ, held proper without final judgment being rendered: Burnham v. Thompson, 35-421.

Dissolution of attachment: An appeal lies from an order dissolving or sustaining an attachment: Johnson v. Butler, 1-459.

But such appeal does not bring up the main case for review, except so far as material to the understanding and disposition of the order from which the party appeals: Berry v. Gravel, 11-135.

Judgment in garnishment: An appeal may be taken from a judgment holding or discharging a garnishee: Bebb v. Preston, 1-460; National Bank v. Chase, 71-120.

Dissolution of injunction: An appeal will lie from the action of a court in dissolving an injunction granted by a judge in vacation: Trustees v. Davenport, 7-213.

The action of a judge allowing or refusing an injunction in vacation may be reviewed by appeal therefrom (an express statutory provision having changed the law under which Monticello Bank v. Smith, 25-248; Jewett v. Squires, 30-92; In re Curley, 34-184, and other cases, were decided): Bennett v. Hetherington, 41-142.

Appointment of receiver: An appeal may be taken from an order appointing or refusing to appoint a receiver: Callanan v. Shaw, 19-183.

Recommitment of cause to arbitrators: An order recommitting a cause to arbitrators is a decision from which an appeal lies: Brown v. Harper, 54-546.

Substitution of other defendants: An order of court substituting other defendants in a case and releasing the original defendants may be appealed from, and such appeal may be prosecuted even though after such substitution the new defendants have procured a transfer of the case to the circuit court of the United States: Sunberg v. District Court, 61-597.

Dismissal of habeas corpus proceedings: Under a statute authorizing an appeal from a county court to the district court, upon the merits, of any matter affecting the rights and interests of individuals, held, that an order of the county court overruling a motion to dismiss proceedings under a writ of habeas corpus was not a final judgment from which an appeal would lie: Smith v. Bigelow, 19-459.

4394. Order by judge. 3165. If any of the above orders are made by a judge, the same is reviewable in the same way as if made by a court. [R., § 2633.]

4395. Court may prescribe rules. 3166. The court may, also, in its discretion, prescribe rules for allowing appeals on such other intermediate orders or decisions as is deemed expedient, and for permitting the same to be taken and tried during the progress of the trial in the court below; but such intermediate appeals must not retard proceedings in the court from which the appeal is taken. [R., § 2634; C., '51, § 1557.]

4396. Mistake of clerk below. 3167. A mistake of the clerk shall not be ground for an appeal until the same has been presented and acted upon by the court below. [R., § 3498.]

Section applied: Daniels v. Clafin, 15-152; Rising v. Teabout, 73-419.

4397. Motion to correct error. 3168. A judgment or order shall not be reversed for an error which can be corrected on motion in an inferior court, until such motion has been made there and overruled. [R., § 3545.]

When necessary: Any objection to erroneous action of the court below, which might have been corrected in that court if attention had been called thereto, will not be considered if first raised in the supreme court: Garvin v. Cannon, 53-716.

So held as to an objection which might have been raised in the lower court by motion in arrest of judgment: Smith v. Warren County, 49-236.

So held, also, in regard to the objection that the judgment was excessive, no motion to correct such error having been made in the court below: Black v. Boyd, 52-719; Dickey v. Harmon, 26-501; Finch v. Billings, 22-228; Keller v. Jackson, 58-629.

So held, also, where the objection that the judgment below was improperly entered in vacation was not made in that court: Carmichael v. Vandebur, 50-651.

A party who has failed to ask for the correction of a judgment in the court below, in a matter as to which it might have been there corrected, cannot complain thereof on appeal: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

If plaintiff has failed to show himself entitled to recovery defendant should move the court to direct a verdict in his favor or ask an instruction to that effect. He cannot have a reversal without motion in the lower court for a verdict upon the ground that the evidence does not sustain the allegations of the petition: Kirk v. Litterst, 71-71.

An error or mistake as to the amount of the judgment cannot be corrected in the supreme court unless a motion to correct the same has first been made in the lower court: Rising v. Teabout, 73-419. But see Kenyon v. Tramel, 71-693.

Motion to set aside default: A judgment by default will not be reviewed in the supreme court until a motion to set it aside has been made and overruled in the court below: Hunt v. Stevens, 25-261; Savings Bank v. Horn, 41-55.

Thus, objection to judgment by default, that the notice was not served in time to render defendant in default, cannot be raised on appeal if no motion to set aside default was made below: Pigman v. Deuney, 12-396; McKinley v. Betchtel, 12-561.

So held, also, as to objections to judgment by default, on the ground of defective manner of service, or defect in the notice itself: Van Vark v. Van Dam, 14-232; Bethel v. Leay, 14-592; Downing v. Harmon, 13-535; Decatur County v. Clements, 18-536; Pratt v. Western Stoge Co., 27-363.

Errors in taxation of costs cannot be urged in the supreme court unless motion for retaxation has been made in the court below: Hemphill v. Salladay, 1 G. Gr., 301; Yeager v. Circle, 1 G. Gr., 438.

Motion for retrial by defendant served by publication: As the statute gives to a defendant served by publication only a right to retrial upon motion within a specified time, he cannot, on appeal, object to the sufficiency of the service, unless such motion for retrial has first been made and overruled in the lower court: Berryhill v. Jacobs, 19-346; S. C., 20-246.

Reason of the provision: The statutory provision above referred to was designed to prevent the expense and delay of appeal where the error relied upon is a mere irregularity, mistake or omission on the part of some ministerial officer, or the court itself, which could readily be corrected in the trial court on motion: Pigman v. Denney, 12-396.

Other cases, applying the statutory provision, are as follows: Robison v. Saunders, 14-539; Barnes v. Hayick, 15-602; Carleton v. Byington, 17-579; Boyd v. Rutledge, 25-271; Coakley v. McCarty, 34-105; Grimes v. Hamilton County, 37-290.

Mistakes of clerk cannot be urged as objections to the judgment on appeal unless a motion to correct such error has first been made in the lower court: Daniels v. Clafflin, 15-152.

Applicable in appeals from justices' courts: The same provision is applicable in case of appeal from the judgment of a justice of the peace: Smith v. Parker, 28-359; Leonard v. Hallem, 17-364.

But not in case of writ of error from the judgment of a justice of the peace which is entered without jurisdiction: Holmes v. Hull, 48-177.

4398. Motion for new trial. 3169. The supreme court may review and reverse on appeal any judgment or order of the district [or circuit] court, although no motion for a new trial was made in such courts. [11 G. A., ch. 49, § 1.]

The preceding section applies only to such errors as, without motion, would not be called to the attention of the lower court. This section renders a motion for new trial in the lower court unnecessary in order to authorize the appellate court to review any judgment or order of the court below: Brown v. Rose, 55-734; Drefahl v. Tuttle, 42-177.

Before the enactment of this statutory provision, held, that a judgment would not be reversed, on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the evidence, when a motion for a new trial upon that ground had not been made in the court below: Brayton v. Boone, 19-506.

But the question was unsettled whether a motion for a new trial was necessary to bring up for review errors of law occurring at the trial: Presnall v. Herbert, 34-539; Rindskoff v. Lyman, 16-260.

A motion for new trial was, however, held not necessary in order to enable the supreme court, on appeal, to review a decision upon the admissibility of evidence properly excepted to when such decision virtually disposes of the whole case: McCoy v. Julien, 15-371.

This provision affects the remedy, and hence is not unconstitutional as applying to actions arising before its passage: Johnson v. Semple, 31-49.

Nor is it in conflict with Const., art. 5, § 4, providing that in actions at law the supreme court shall be a court for the correction of errors. Previous to the enactment of this provision, that court would review, as matter of law, the ruling of the lower court upon a motion for a new trial on the ground that the

What deemed sufficient calling attention of court to error: Where a motion for change of venue is resisted on the ground that the court to which it is proposed to send the case has no jurisdiction of such cases, and notwithstanding such objection the change is granted to such court, the error may be reviewed on appeal, although no motion to change the order and send the case to a court which would have had jurisdiction is made by the objecting party: Sayles v. Deluhrey, 64-109.

Statute not applicable: Such provision applies only to such errors as without motion would not be called to the attention of the lower court: Brown v. Rose, 55-734.

Motion for new trial: The necessity of a motion being made below to correct errors, etc., is not removed by the following section, making motion for new trial unnecessary to secure the review of a cause in the supreme court: Webster v. Cedar Rapids & St. P. R. Co., 27-315.

verdict was contrary to the evidence, and this act simply authorizes the court to treat the case as if such motion for a new trial was made and entered, and may be regarded as a standing motion in all cases: Coffin v. City Council, 26-515.

Where exceptions are duly preserved in the course of the trial they may be brought up on appeal, although the motion for new trial is stricken from the files because filed too late: Beems v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 58-150.

The necessity of a motion being made below to correct errors, etc., is not removed by the provision making motion for new trial unnecessary to secure the review of a cause in the supreme court: Webster v. Cedar Rapids & St. P. R. Co., 27-315.

Under this provision, however, errors of law committed by the judge might be reviewed on appeal without any motion for new trial: Delvee v. Boardman, 20-446; Presnall v. Herbert, 34-539.

Nor does such provision dispense with the necessity of taking exceptions to rulings objected to: Root v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 29-102; Eason v. Gester, 31-475.

Where defendant moved in arrest of judgment, and thereupon, in order to cure the defect insisted upon, plaintiff amended his petition and introduced certain evidence to which a demurrer was sustained, the judgment arrested, and defendant recovered costs, held, that no motion for a new trial was necessary in order to present the exceptions, duly taken, on appeal: Coates v. Galena & C. U. R. Co., 18-277.

4399. Finding of facts; evidence certified. 3170. Where a cause is tried by the court, it shall not be necessary, in order to secure a review of the same in the supreme court, that there should have been any finding of facts or conclusions of law stated in the record, but the supreme court shall hear and determine the same whenever it shall appear from a certificate of the judge, agreement of parties or their attorneys, or, in case the evidence consists wholly of written testimony, from the certificate of the clerk, that the transcript contains all the evidence introduced by the parties on the trial in the court below. [11 G. A., ch. 49, § 2.]

How reviewed: Before the enactment of this section it was held that, in order to enable the supreme court, on appeal, to review the correctness of the findings of the court below upon the facts, exceptions must have been taken to such findings and a new trial asked for: Kelso v. Ely, 11-501; Gillett v. Foreman, 11-512.

Before the enactment of this section there was, in an action at law tried by the court without a jury, no way of securing the review on appeal of the conclusions of the court upon the evidence, unless there was a special finding of facts by the court, except by a motion for new trial based upon the ground that the judgment was against the evidence, and an exception to the ruling on such motion: Warner v. Pace, 10-391; Corner v. Gaston, 10-512; Roberts v. Hoyt, 12-345; Allman v. Gilbert, 14-538; Robison v. Saunders, 14-539; Reynolds' Heirs v. Miller, 14-97.

The certificate referred to cannot be made by the judge in vacation, unless by agreement of parties. The term "judge" means the same as if the word "court" had been used: Luse v. Des Moines, 22-590.

In the absence of the certificate, or an agreement of the parties, the supreme court cannot, on appeal, review the conclusion of the court upon the evidence: Wormley v. District T'p, 45-666.

It is only when the evidence is all before the supreme court that it can review a finding of the court below as to a question of fact: Van Ripper v. Baker, 44-450.

As to certificate of clerk, short-hand notes, etc., see notes to § 4414.

Assignment of errors: This section does not dispense with assignment of errors: Sisters of Visitation v. Glass, 45-154.

Trial de novo on appeal: The section is applicable only in actions at law, and therefore does not interfere with the provisions for securing a trial de novo in equity cases: Ibia; Vinsant v. Vinsant, 47-594.

Finding of facts, and effect thereof, see § 3950 and notes.

As the finding of the court upon a question of fact in an action at law has the force of a verdict of a jury, the admission of improper evidence in such a case will be a ground for reversal, as fully and to the same extent that it would be in an action tried by a jury, where it does not appear but that such improper evidence was considered by the court in its final determination of the case: Jaffray v. Thompson, 65-323.

4400. How docketed. 3171. The cause shall be docketed as it was in the court below, and the party taking the appeal shall be called the appellant, and the other party the appellee. [R., § 3508.]

A case should on appeal be entitled as in the lower court: Hollenbeck v. Stearns, 73-570.

Where a case is docketed in the supreme court under another title than that in which it is tried in the lower court the appeal will be dismissed: Lewis v. Minthorn, 73-80.

4401. Process. 3172. The court may issue all writs and process necessary for the exercise and enforcement of its appellate jurisdiction. [R., § 2635; C., '51, § 1558.]

4402. Time for taking; amount in controversy; certificate. 3173. Appeals from the district [and circuit] courts may be taken to the supreme court at any time within six months from the rendition of the judgment or order appealed from, and not afterward. But no appeal shall be taken in any cause in which the amount in controversy between the parties as shown by the pleadings, does not exceed one hundred dollars, unless the trial judge shall certify that such cause involves the determination of a question of law upon which it is desirable to have the opinion of the supreme court, but this limitation shall not affect the right of appeal in any cause in which is involved any interest in real property. [R., § 3507; C., '51, § 1973.]

I. TIME FOR TAKING.

In computing the six months within which an appeal may be taken, the day on which judgment was rendered will be excluded and the corresponding day at the end of the time included: Carleton v. Byington, 16-588.

Therefore, held, that an appeal taken September 30, from a judgment rendered March 30, was in time: Parkhill v. Brighton, 61-103.

The service of the notice within the time specified is sufficient. It is not necessary that it be filed with the clerk within that time: Baldwin v. Tuttle, 23-66.

Securing the clerk's fees for a transcript is not necessarily a part of the perfecting of the appeal which must be completed within six months: Fairburn v. Goldsmith, 56-347.

An appeal from final judgment taken within the proper time will raise objections to previous proceedings in the case although more than the time prescribed for taking the appeal has elapsed since such previous proceedings: Holladay v. Johnson, 12-563.

Where judgment relates back: Where judgment is entered in vacation as of the preceding term, by agreement, the period for taking appeal will commence to run from the time the decision is, in fact, made, and not from the time to which by agreement it relates back: Carter v. Sherman, 63-689.

Where the judgment appealed from bore date more than the prescribed length of time before the taking of the appeal, but it appeared that the cause was held under advisement and decided in vacation and within the prescribed time, without any agreement that judgment should be entered as of the last day of the preceding term, held, that the appeal was not barred: Kendall v. Lucas County, 26-395.

Where a decree, in an action seeking to have set aside a deed of real property, and for a reconveyance thereof, and also for an accounting of rents and profits and improvements, was rendered for reconveyance upon payment by plaintiff of the sum paid, with interest, and also the value of the improvements, less rents and profits, etc., and the case was sent to a referee to take an account, held, that an appeal from the decree as to the reconveyance, etc., must be taken within six months from the time such decree was entered, and that the questions involved therein could not be raised on an appeal taken more than six months after that time, but within the six months after a final decree, based upon the referee's report, as to the accounting. Such decree is to be deemed final, although something further is required to be done afterwards: McMurray v. Day, 70-671.

Where a decree was rendered in a cause, adjudicating all the issues between the original parties, but the final disposition of the cause was delayed by reason of an intervention, held, that the time for taking an appeal from the decision of the issues between the original parties commenced to run from the time of such first decree, and its correctness could not be called into question in any appeal taken after six months from such decree: Carter v. Davidson, 73-45.

Ruling on motion for new trial: An appeal taken within six months from the decision of the court on a petition for a new trial, but more than six months from the rendition of the judgment upon the verdict, does not bring up for review the action of the court in rendering such judgment and its proceedings prior thereto, the appeal therefrom being barred: Cohol v. Allen, 37-449; Carpenter v. Brown, 50-451.

Where judgment is entered and afterwards a motion for new trial is made and overruled, an appeal from the judgment must be taken within six months after the entry thereof, and an appeal from the overruling of the motion for a new trial will not raise any question not involved in the ruling upon such motion: Patterson v. Jack, 59-632.

An appeal in an equity case not taken until more than six months after the rendition of judgment, although within six months from the time of the overruling of a motion for a new trial, does not bring up for consideration in the supreme court any of the proceedings of the court prior to the filing of the motion, and therefore does not enable the court to try the case de novo: Bosch v. Bosch, 66-701.

II. AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY.

Determined by the pleadings: To justify an appeal it must appear from the pleadings that it was possible for the court, consistently therewith, to render judgment against one of the parties to the action for more than one hundred dollars: Madison v. Spitznogle, 58-369.

When the amount in controversy appears by the pleadings to exceed one hundred dollars an appeal may be taken, and it is immaterial that, upon the trial, the evidence does not support the claim to that amount: Ormsby v. Nolan, 69-130.

The allegations and not the prayer of the pleading govern in determining the amount in controversy: Cooper v. Dillon, 56-367.

The amounts of the original claim and a counter-claim cannot be added together in determining the amount in controversy under this section: Madison v. Spitznogle, 58-369; Fox v. Duncan, 60-321.

Where defendant concedes a part of the claim, the amount in controversy is the part not admitted: Thompson v. French, 57-559.

Tender: Thus, if by tender defendant reduces the amount of plaintiff's claim which is contested to not exceeding one hundred dollars, there can be no appeal without a certificate: Marlow v. Marlow, 56-299.

If plaintiff's claim is admitted and a counter-claim interposed, the counter-claim determines the amount in controversy: Alsip v. Hard, 38-697.

Where defendant claims a credit of more than one hundred dollars on a claim for less than that amount, but does not interpose a counter-claim, the amount in controversy does not exceed the plaintiff's claim: Kurtz v. Hoffman, 65-260.

Part of claim abandoned: Where the plaintiff claims more than one hundred dollars, but no evidence is introduced in support of a part of it, so that such part may be deemed abandoned, such part will not be considered in determining the amount in controversy: Ibid.

If by reason of dismissal of a part of plaintiff's cause of action the amount in controversy is reduced below one hundred dollars, the right of appeal does not exist: Cooper v. Wilson, 71-204.

So by amending after verdict plaintiff may reduce the amount of claim so as to prevent the right of appeal: Wilson v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 74-212.

Consolidation of actions on appeal from a justice, whereby the amount in controversy is increased to over one hundred dollars, will entitle to an appeal: Brock v. Barr, 70-390; Edwards v. Cosgro, 71-296.

Interest included: Where an action to set aside a previous judgment for one hundred dollars and costs was brought a year after the rendition of such judgment, held, that the interest accrued on the judgment would be included in determining the amount in controversy: Dryden v. Wyllis, 51-534.

Where the claim in controversy is for one hundred dollars and interest from commencement of suit, it is sufficient to entitle to an appeal: Koltze v. Messebrink, 74-242; Grijun v. Harriman, 74-436.

Where writ of error was brought in the circuit court to review the judgment of a justice of the peace for one hundred dollars, held, that interest accrued on the judgment before suing out the writ of error would be included in determining the amount in controversy in the circuit court, and that the amount involved exceeded one hundred dollars: Holmes v. Hull, 48-177.

But in case of an appeal from a judgment of a justice of the peace for one hundred dollars, held, that the amount in controversy in the circuit court was to be determined by the pleadings in the justice's court, and that interest on the justice's judgment could not be included: Hays v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 64-593.

Costs taxed in the case and included in the judgment cannot be considered in determining the amount in controversy. That depends upon the pleadings: Hakes v. Dott, 54-17; Bradenberger v. Rigler, 68-300.

Costs in justice's court: In an appeal from the action of a court on appeal from a judgment before a justice of the peace, the costs in the justice's court cannot be included in determining the amount in controversy: Ardery v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 65-723.

In an action of replevin wherein defendant does not claim ownership of the property but only an interest therein, less than one hundred dollars in value, such interest and not the entire value of the property determines the amount in controversy: Mohme v. Livingston, 54-458; Davis v. Upright, 54-752.

Appeal dismissed: Where the amount in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars, and there is no certificate of the judge, the appeal will be dismissed: Harrington v. Pierce, 38-260.

Amount must appear to defeat jurisdiction: As the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in every case not falling within the exception of the statutory provision as to amount in controversy, the fact as to the amount, to bring a case within the exception and defeat the jurisdiction of the supreme court on appeal, must affirmatively appear: Babcock v. Board of Equalization, 65-110; Henkle v. Keota, 68-334.

This provision as to the amount in controversy applies only to cases where the amount in controversy as shown by the pleadings does not exceed one hundred dollars. It does not have reference to cases where the pleadings show no amount in controversy: District T^p v. Independent Dist., 72-687.

III. CERTIFICATE AS TO QUESTION INVOLVED.

Must state the question: It is not sufficient that the certificate of the judge states that the case "involves the determination of a question of law," etc., but it must state the question of law upon which the decision of the supreme court is desired. (So held in pursuance of a rule of court requiring the question to be set out, overruling in this respect Fell v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 43-177, decided before the adoption of such rule.) If the question is not thus set out where a certificate is necessary, the appeal will be dismissed: King v. Derby, 51-11; Wetz v. Austin, 51-342; Minnich v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 51-363; Throckmorton v. Horton, 52-137; Dawley v. Houck, 53-733.

And such rule of the court is not void as limiting the jurisdiction of the court further than authorized by statute: Wilson v. Iowa County, 52-339.

The question must be one of law, as distinguished from one of fact, and the certificate must specifically point out the questions of law, which must not be mingled with questions of fact: Gillooby v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 61-53; Chilton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 72-689.

The certificate should not submit questions of fact: Riddle v. Fletcher, 72-454.

It is not sufficient that the certificate states that "a question" is involved: it must state that the case involves "a question of law:" Kierulff v. Adams, 40-31.

Questions presented in a particular case held not to be questions of law: Landers v. Boyd, 59-758.

Where the court is required to determine the law on a given state of ultimate facts, as certified, all of the necessary facts should be found by the trial court: Vreeland v. Ellsworth, 71-347.

Mere abstract questions: The statute does not contemplate that mere abstract questions of law shall be certified, but only such as are decisive of the case: Eckert v. Fickel, 59-545.

Certificate must intelligibly state the questions without the record: The certificate must point out the questions upon which it is desirable to have the opinion of the court in such a way as to be intelligible in and of themselves, without requiring the court to examine the whole case and determine what the questions are: Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 63-514.

The certificate must be sufficiently explicit and definite to explain itself without reference to the record or any part of it: Mecker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 64-641; White v. Beatty, 64-331; Bower v. Kavanaugh, 62-757.

The questions certified should embrace statements of the specific facts which are to be taken into consideration by the court; it is not sufficient to refer generally to the facts as shown by the evidence: Brown v. Petrie, 56-209.

A certificate of the judge which fails to indicate the specific question or questions to be determined, but presents the whole case and every question involved therein, without showing what they are, or what one or more of them it is deemed desirable to present for determination, is not sufficient: Dunn v. Zoller, 61-227.

The certificate must contain the abstract question of law which it is desired the supreme court shall determine. It will not make an examination of the record in order to determine what ruling it is desired to review: Buchanan County Bank v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co., 62-494; Long v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 64-541.

A question of law should be plainly set out in the certificate: McLenon v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 69-320.

The certificate should point out the question to be determined and recite the facts upon which the question of law arises, so that it may be determined without resorting to the evidence in the case. It is not sufficient to refer the court to the record and ask it to determine whether there was error in particular matters: Ibid.

The certificate must set out and define the question which it is thought desirable to have determined, and the question set out should be so explicit as to render an examination of the record unnecessary: Bennett v. Parker, 67-451.

It is not proper to certify a general question which cannot be fully determined without a search of the entire record and a determination of two or more questions: Wheaton v. Foster, 58-661.

Where the certificate stated that there was a question of law involved in certain instructions which involved more than one question, and did not point out which one it was desired to have determined, held, that it was not sufficient: Gregg v. White, 55-744.

Several questions must be so stated that the supreme court can readily ascertain the point to be determined, and that it is a question of law. Questions of law and fact cannot be mingled together under the guise of a question of law: Centerville v. Drake, 58-564.

The certificate in a particular case held sufficient: Nichols v. Wood, 66-225.

Examination of the record: The court will sometimes look at the record for the purpose of determining whether the question certified properly arises in the case, and will refuse to consider the question if it appears that it has not been properly raised: Swails v. Cissna, 61-693; McLenon v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 69-320.

The court will not, upon a certificate, consider an instruction differing from that which appears by the record to have been given in the case: Cunningham v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 67-514.

The court cannot answer questions certified, but which are not presented in the record: Ibid.; Miller v. Buena Vista County, 68-711.

And the court will not consider a certificate sufficiently specific which requires examination of the record to determine what the question certified is: Votaw v. Corwin, 62-39.

Certificates held defective: A certificate of a question as to whether judgment could be rendered for a party "upon the agreed statement of facts filed in the case," held not sufficient: Dawley v. Houck, 53-733.

Held, in a particular case, that the certificate did not sufficiently point out the question of law upon which the opinion of the supreme court was desired: Fitch v. Flynn, 58-159.

In cases which come before the supreme court only upon a question certified by the judge of the lower court, the supreme court has jurisdiction only to determine such questions of law as may be certified. If the question certified is one of fact, it cannot be determined: Hanna v. Collins, 69-51.

Must set out question: A certificate which does not set out the question of law upon which it is desirable to have the opinion of the supreme court is not sufficient: Brandenberger v. Rigler, 68-300.

A certificate is not sufficient which asks whether certain action was erroneous "in view of all the evidence in the case:" Gillooby v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 61-53.

Where the appellant's abstract failed to show that the judge's certificate stated that it was desirable to have the opinion of the supreme court on the question certified, held, that the supreme court did not acquire any jurisdiction by the appeal: Milliken v. Daugherty, 59-294.

Sufficiency of evidence: While the sufficiency of the evidence to support a verdict may, in a certain sense, be said to be a question of law, yet it is not such a question as can be certified: Hudson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 59-581.

Questions involved: The certificate must state that the questions certified are involved in the case: Van Sickle v. Downs, 72-624; Ball v. Van Kiper, 74-146; Beach v. Donovan, 74-543.

Questions must be such as arise and are argued: It is not the province of the supreme court to decide questions certified but not argued, nor questions argued but not certified, nor questions certified and argued where it is shown that they do not arise in the case: Spiesberger v. Thomas, 59-606.

Questions not certified: Only such questions as are presented in the certificate will be considered: Thorpe v. Dickey, 51-676; Miller v. Haley, 66-260.

The supreme court has no jurisdiction in such cases to determine any questions except those certified: Arderly v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 65-723; Vreeland v. Ellsworth, 71-347; Chilton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 72-689.

Questions presumed to have arisen: Where the question is certified by the trial judge, it will be presumed that it arises in the case unless it is shown affirmatively otherwise: Noble v. Chase, 60-261.

It will be presumed that the facts are correctly found, whether any finding appears of record or not, unless the contrary appears: Thorpe v. Dickey, 51-676.

Questions certified will be presumed to have been involved in the case; but where it is claimed by the appellee that such questions did not arise in the case the supreme court will look into the record to determine that fact: Parker v. Michaels, 74-209.

The court will not go back of the record to determine whether an assumption of facts therein is warranted: Miller v. Haley, 66-260.

Or whether the case involves the question of law stated in the certificate: Curran v. Excelsior Coal Co., 63-94.

Presumption as to facts; remanding: The presumption being that the court found the fact upon which the question of law is based, and that such fact appeared of record, upon a determination of the question of law the case may be remanded for final judgment, and the party will not be entitled to a further trial unless on account of newly-discovered evidence: Andrews v. Burdick, 64-692.

Provisions constitutional; cases in equity: The statutory provision requiring a certificate in cases involving less than the amount named applies to chancery cases as well as actions at law, and as thus applied is not unconstitutional, as depriving a party in such cases of a right of appeal and trial de novo. It amounts simply to a restriction or regulation of appeals in such cases: Andrews v. Burdick, 62-714; Johns v. Pattee, 61-393; Teager v. Landisley, 69-725.

Time of making certificate: The certificate of the judge must be made at the time of the trial, and before the adjournment of the term of court at which the judgment is rendered: Fallon v. District T'p, 51-206; Independence v. Purdy, 48-675; Rose v. Wheeler, 49-52; Lomax v. Fletcher, 40-705; Rivers v. Cole, 38-677; Hershfield v. First Nat. Bank, 39-699; Nicely v. Rogers, 39-441.

The parties cannot by stipulation provide that the certificate may be made in vacation: Fallon v. District T'p, 51-206.

The certificate must be given at the time of the trial, unless delayed upon order or for cause: Angus v. Shannon, 60-311.

Where the date of certificate shows that it was given after the term at which the case was tried it cannot be considered: Sayles v. Smith, 71-241.

The certificate must be signed by the trial judge at the term at which the case is tried. A signature afterwards made nunc pro tunc will not give the supreme court jurisdiction, even though the failure to sign the certificate at the term was an oversight on the part of the judge: Hinesley v. Mahaska County, 69-511.

The certificate cannot be properly made until the case is finally disposed of, as by the ruling on a motion vacating a judgment and granting a new trial: Hickok v. Buell, 51-655.

The making and filing of a certificate during the same term, but subsequent to the rendition of judgment, is not sufficient; it must be made by the time the final judgment is rendered: Foye v. Walker, 62-251.

Where the certificate was filed after judgment, but it did not appear when it was signed, held, that the appeal would be dismissed: Hakes v. Dott, 54-17.

Where the certificate was entitled of a proper term, but did not show when it was made, nor that it was made at the time of the trial, or even during the term of the trial, 4403. Appeal by co-parties. 3174. A part of several co-parties may appeal; but in such case they must serve notice of the appeal upon all the other co-parties, and file the proof thereof with the clerk of the supreme court. [R., § 3517; C., '51, § 1979.]

Co-parties: It is essential in an appeal from the decree in a partition proceeding taken by one defendant that notice of appeal be served upon his co-defendant, otherwise the supreme court cannot review a ruling which would necessarily affect the interest of such co-defendant, and the appeal will be dismissed: Hunt v. Hawley, 70-183.

held, that it was not sufficient: Babcock v. Chickasaw County, 60-752.

Where it appears that the certificate was signed at the proper time it will be presumed that it was also filed in proper time: Long v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 64-541.

Not a matter of right: The purpose of the law in requiring a certificate in such cases was to prevent appeals in such cases in which the amount is trifling, unless there is an important question of law involved which should be decided in order that the decision may serve as a precedent, and the trial judge should not give a certificate unless he deems such question to be involved: Meeker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 64-641.

Cannot be stipulated for: The parties cannot stipulate that the judge shall give a certificate in such cases. It is not a right of the unsuccessful party to have the certificate, and it can only properly be made where the judge believes it to be desirable for the proper administration of justice that some specified question in the case should be settled by the court of last resort: Fallon v. District T'p, 51-206.

Appellant cannot question the correctness of a certificate given by the trial judge, stating the questions on which the opinion of the supreme court is desired. The court is not bound to give any certificate at all, and if the appellant does not get the questions certified which were tried he is not bound to appeal: Hager v. Adams, 70-746.

The certificate is jurisdictional: The sufficiency of the certificate is a jurisdictional matter, and if it is not sufficient the court will take notice of it, although the objection is not made: White v. Beatty, 64-331.

Jurisdiction is conferred by the certificate and not by the pleadings or the evidence: Beach v. Donovan, 74-543.

IV. INTEREST IN REAL ESTATE.

Right of public highway: Where the case involves the right of the public to occupy and use real estate as a highway, an interest in real estate is involved within the meaning of this section: McBurney v. Graves, 66-314.

Establishment of lien: The fact that it is sought to establish a lien, special or general, upon real estate, does not make the case one involving an interest in real property, authorizing an appeal without regard to the amount in controversy: Colyar v. Pettit, 63-97; Johns v. Pattee, 61-393.

Therefore, held, that an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien was not within the exception: Andrews v. Burdick, 62-714.

Failure to serve notice upon co-parties is not jurisdictional, but the court can consider such questions in the case as affect only the rights and interests of the appellant and the adverse party: Moore v. Held, 73-538.

Where the supersedeas bond recited expressly that one of two defendants alone had appealed, and such defendant's name alone appeared in the heading of the notice of appeal, held, that he only could be considered as having appealed, although the body of the notice spoke of the appeal being by defendants: Webster v. Cedar Rapids & St. P. R. Co., 27-315.

One defendant cannot upon appeal complain of any error which results in injury only to his co-defendant: Eyre v. Cook, 9-185.

Must be party to the record: One who has not had himself made a party to the record cannot appeal from the judgment, although having an interest therein: Borgathous v. Farmers', etc., Ins. Co., 36-250; Ferguson v. Board of Supervisors, 44-701.

If a person having an interest in the result desires to question the action of the court, he should apply to be made a party. Until he is thus made a party he is in no way liable for costs, and therefore cannot be allowed to interfere with the rights of the original parties in the suit by appeal: State ex rel. v. Jones, 11-11.

If such a person should apply to be made a party and his application be refused, such refusal might be investigated upon appeal: Phillips v. Shelton, 6-545.

Where the complainant simply asks to redeem, a senior incumbrancer may appeal from an improper order in permitting the redemption, so that he does not get the full amount due on his mortgage, although he did not answer the bill: White v. Hampton, 13-259.

The parties for whose benefit suit is brought or defended, under § 3754, are not parties in such sense as to have the right of appeal: Fleming v. Mershon, 36-413.

In an action against the unknown owners of certain land, held, that there could be no appeal on behalf of the land, or the owners thereof, unless some one appeared in the action and made himself a party as the owner: Fuller v. Unknown Owner, etc., 9-430.

Persons for whom plaintiff sues, but not named in the petition as plaintiffs, cannot appeal. And plaintiff in such a case has no ground to complain if the court strikes from the petition such parts thereof as have reference to such plaintiffs not named: Yarish v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co., 72-556.

A deceased party cannot appeal nor can the right of his estate be adjudicated if an appeal in form is taken: Tracy v. Roberts, 59-624.

4404. Parties not joining. 3175. If the other co-parties refuse to join, they cannot, nor can any of them, take an appeal afterwards; nor shall they derive any benefit from the appeal, unless from the necessity of the case. [R., § 3518; C., '51, § 1980.]

A party who has not appealed cannot insist upon other or different relief from that awarded him in the court below: Alexander v. Buffington, 66-360; Devoe v. Hall, 60-749.

A party not appealing can have no relief: Huff v. Olmstead, 67-598; Lamb v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 70-238.

Parties who do not join in the appeal cannot present questions affecting their claims or interest not involved in the questions arising upon the appeal as taken by appellant. They can have no modification of the decree: Butler v. Barkley, 67-491.

4405. When deemed to join. 3176. Unless they appear and decline to join, they shall be deemed to have joined and shall be liable for their due proportion of costs. [R., § 3519; C., '51, § 1981.]

If such co-defendant does join in the appeal, appellant may thereupon urge any objection as to the judgment against his co-defendant which ultimately affects his own liability: Engleken v. Webber, 44-558.

If co-parties, upon being served, elect to join in the appeal, they are entitled to all the benefits thereof, and may be allowed to file an assignment of errors, and be heard: Barlow v. Scott's Adm'rs, 12-63.

4406. Part of judgment or order. 3177. An appeal from part of an order, or from one of the judgments of a final adjudication, or from part of a judgment, shall not disturb or delay the rights of any party to any judgment, or part of a judgment, or order not appealed from, but the same shall proceed as if no such appeal had been made. [R., § 3510.]

NOTICE AND FILING TRANSCRIPTS.

4407. How taken; notice. 3178. An appeal is taken by the service of a notice in writing on the adverse party, his agent, or any attorney who appeared for him in the case in the court below, and also upon the clerk of the court wherein the proceedings were had, stating the appeal from the same, or from some specific part thereof, defining such part. [R., § 3509; C., '51, § 1974.]

Error in notice: The fact that the notice of appeal designates the judgment as having been rendered at a different day from that shown by the transcript will not defeat the appeal, if not being claimed but that the appeal is from the judgment intended to be referred to in the notice or that it is not taken in time: Kennedy v. Rosier, 71-671.

Service of notice: To give the supreme court jurisdiction, the service of notice upon appeal is as essential, where there is no voluntary appearance, as is the service of original notice in suits commenced in the lower court: McClellan v. McClellan, 2-312; Lewis v. Miller, 4 G. Gr. 95.

Service of notice of appeal upon the adverse party and upon the clerk is necessary to give the supreme court jurisdiction of the cause, and the fact of such service should be stated in the abstract: Phillips v. Foilett, 69-39.

Appellant can have no relief on appeal as against a judgment in favor of a party not served with notice: Hunt v. Clark, 46-291.

Where the notice of appeal was directed to J. M. W. instead of to John M. W., and acceptance of service was made by the attorney of the proper person, held, that the defect was immaterial: Horst v. Wagner, 43-373.

The statute makes no provision for service by leaving a copy with a member of the party's family, as is authorized in case of service of an original notice, and such a service will not be valid: Draper v. Taylor, 47-407.

Service of notice of appeal upon the wife of attorney for appellee is not sufficient. Such notice of appeal can be served only in the manner prescribed by statute: Webster v. Carson, 69-243.

Service of notice of appeal may be made by taking a written acknowledgment of service by the person upon whom it is served: Sanxey v. Iowa City Glass Co., 68-542.

Service of notice of appeal on the deputy clerk, shown by an acceptance of service signed by him with the name of the clerk by himself as deputy, is sufficient notice of appeal: Ibid.

Service of notice cannot be made by a party to the action: Draper v. Taylor, 47-407; Marion County v. Stanfield, 8-406.

Previous to the enactment of the provisions of § 4444, there was no method authorized for service of notice of appeal by publication: McClellan v. McClellan, 2-312.

Filing with clerk: It is not necessary that the notice be filed in the office of the clerk within the time allowed for perfecting the appeal: Baldwin v. Tuttle, 23-66.

But, upon service of the notice, it should be filed or deposited with the clerk, and it thereupon becomes one of the original papers in the case and a part of the record. It is such a portion of the record as that it may be corrected by proper proceedings in the court in which it is filed, for instance, for the purpose of making it show the correct date of service upon the clerk: Brier v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 66-602.

New notice after delay in procuring appeal: Where four years had intervened between the taking of the appeal and the filing of the transcript, held, that the case would not be heard on motion of the appellant without additional notice to appellee, who had made no appearance: Byington v. Robinson, 16-591.

Must appear: Service of notice of appeal is essential to give the court jurisdiction of the case, and that fact must be shown by the record: Michel v. Michel, 72-577.

The fact of the taking of the appeal must be shown in the abstract or the appeal will not be considered: Names v. Names, 74-213.

Substituted defendant: Where plaintiff appealed from an order substituting a third party in place of the sheriff against whom the action was brought, held, that the appeal might be prosecuted by plaintiff upon the sheriff without notice being served upon the substituted party, the substitution having been made on the joint application of the sheriff and such third party: Sunberg v. Babcock, 61-601.

Notice upon supervisors: The county auditor is not the agent of the board of supervisors in such sense that service of notice of appeal can be made upon him in an action against the members of such board: Polk v. Foster, 71-26.

A notice of appeal from a judgment brings up all the objections properly saved on the trial of the cause, including the motion for a new trial: Gullihier v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 59-416.

Appearance in the supreme court is a waiver of any irregularity in taking the appeal: Romaine v. Commissioners, Mor., 357. But if the lower court had no jurisdiction it will not be conferred by an appeal: Burlington University v. Stewart's Ex'rs, 12-442.

Such appearance is a waiver of notice: Morrow v. Carpenter, 1 G. Gr., 469.

Where there is no judgment rendered in the court below from which an appeal may be taken, consent of parties will not give the supreme court jurisdiction: Long v. Long, Mor., 381; Rutter v. State, 1-99; Kimble v. Riggins, 2 G. Gr., 245.

Appearance in the supreme court by filing additional abstract, etc., will not waive objection on account of want of notice, if such appearance is made prior to the expiration of the time during which notice might be served: Brier v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 66-602.

Unless the abstract shows the taking of an appeal it does not show that the supreme court has acquired jurisdiction of the case, and the appeal will be dismissed, even though the appellee appears and does not urge the objection: Plummer v. People's Nat. Bank, 73-752.

Effect of appeal: An appeal from a final decree in a chancery case deprives the trial court of all further jurisdiction in the case until it is remanded. It cannot make an order retaxing the costs, or amending the record: Levi v. Karrick, 15-444; McGlaughlin v. O'Rourke, 12-459.

And this rule applies also in actions at law, when the entire cause is brought to and pending in the supreme court on appeal: Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 30-191; Carmichael v. Vandebur, 51-223.

Correction of record: The appeal does not so divest the jurisdiction of the lower court but that it may order a lost record substituted, or correct its record by supplying omissions, and do whatever else is proper to be done to enable the supreme court to review its alleged errors: Steiner v. Steiner, 49-70; Becker v. Becker, 50-139; State v. Dillard, 52-749; Mahaffy v. Mahaffy, 63-55; Maxon v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 67-226; Buckwalter v. Craig, 24-215.

The court below may settle and sign a bill of exceptions after appeal is taken, if done within the time allowed for that purpose: Tiffany v. Henderson, 57-490.

The lower court retains jurisdiction after

4408. When perfected; transcript. 3179; 22 G. A., ch. 35. An appeal shall not be perfected until the notice thereof has been served upon both the party and the clerk, and the clerk paid or secured his fees for a transcript; whereupon the clerk shall forthwith transmit by mail, express, or messenger, not a party nor the attorney of a party, a transcript of the record in the cause, or so much thereof as the appellant in writing in the notice has directed, to which shall be appended copies of the notices of appeal, and of the supersedeas bond if any. But no transcript of the record need be forwarded to the supreme court until a denial of appellant's abstract of the record has been served and if no denial shall be made no transcript of the record shall be required. If such denial shall be entered without good and sufficient cause therefor the costs for such transcript of the record shall be taxed to the party making the denial. [R., § 3511; C., '51, §§ 1975-6.]

Appeal perfected: Where the abstract states that plaintiff appealed it will be assumed, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, that everything was done which was necessary in order to take an appeal: Day v. Hawk-eye Ins. Co., 72-597.

The appeal is not taken and perfected until the proper notice is served on the clerk of the court: Fitzgerald v. Kelso, 71-731; State v. Rogers, 71-753.

The appeal is perfected when service of notice is made, etc., as here contemplated, although the notice to co-parties provided for in § 4403 is not given: Moore v. Held, 73-538.

Fee for transcript: The appeal is not perfected until the fees for transcript are paid or secured, and giving a supersedeas bond cannot be regarded as "securing" such fees; and held, that after service of notice of appeal and filing of supersedeas bond, but before paying or securing costs of transcript, appellant had the right to abandon his appeal, and that the trial court had authority to entertain application by such party for a new trial, and grant it: Loomis v. McKenzie, 57-77.

The time within which the appeal is to be perfected by paying or securing the fees for transcript is not fixed. Filing an abstract and having the cause docketed is evidence of good faith, and the cause will not be dismissed for want of transcript. While one must be fur-the taking of the appeal to perfect the record by giving the certificate as to the evidence introduced in an equitable case: Goff v. Hawkeye Pump, etc., Co., 62-691.

After the taking of appeal, a motion to amend the record cannot be entertained by the lower court without notice to the opposite party: Eno v. Hunt, 8-436.

nished, if insisted upon by appellee, time will be given to do so, unless appellant or his counsel have had notice that one would be required, and through negligence have failed to furnish it: Fairburn v. Goldsmith, 56-347.

Failure to file transcript: The objection that appellant has not filed a transcript must be raised by motion and not after submission upon the argument: Simplot v. Dubuque, 49-630.

Appeal dismissed or judgment affirmed for failure to file transcript, see § 4410.

When abstract is to be deemed denied so that a transcript is necessary, see notes to § 4424.

Transcript may be unnecessary; reporter's notes: Where the abstract of appellant is satisfactory to the opposite party, there is no necessity for the clerk's transcript, nor for the transcript of the reporter's notes which have been properly filed in the original form in the court below. The appellant may make out his abstract from whatever source he sees fit: Hampton v. Moorhead, 62-91.

If the abstract is not controverted by appellee, the court will not look into the transcript of the original evidence, nor will it refuse to try the case simply because such transcript is not filed: Austin v. Bremer County, 44-155.

4409. When tried. 3180. The notice of appeal must be served at least thirty days, and the cause filed and docketed at least fifteen days before the first day of the next term of the supreme court, or the same shall not then be tried unless by consent of parties. If the appeal is taken less than thirty days before the term, it must be so filed and docketed before the next succeeding term. [R., § 3513; C., '51, § 1978.]

4410. Failure to file transcript and docket. 3181. If the appellant fails to file a transcript and have the cause docketed as provided in the preceding section, or fails to file at the time the transcript should be filed, the certificate of the clerk of the inferior court, stating when he was served with notice, and that he has not had sufficient time to prepare the transcript, the appellee may file a certified copy of the judgment or order appealed from, and of the notice served on such clerk, and, on motion, have the appeal dismissed or the judgment or order appealed from affirmed. [R., § 3514.]

In the absence of the certificate of the clerk below, excusing the failure to file a transcript on the ground that he has not had sufficient time to prepare it, the appellee may, by filing a certified transcript of the judgment, have the judgment affirmed on motion. This section is not merely directory, but must be complied with to entitle a party to be heard in the supreme court, unless waived by agreement or act of the appellee: Turner v. Hine, 37-500.

Appellee can only have the appeal dismissed or the judgment affirmed when notice of appeal has been served the proper length of time before the term; but a showing that the clerk was served in time will be sufficient to authorize an affirmance on motion for failure to file the transcript, without a showing that the party also was served: Pratt v. Western Stage Co., 26-241.

By § 4412 the appeal is not to be dismissed or the judgment affirmed on account of failure to docket or file transcript, if it appears that the appeal was taken in good faith and not for delay, and an affirmance, where bad faith does not appear, will be set aside: Engleken v. Schultz, 40-703.

If appellee, upon being served with the abstract, or within a reasonable time thereafter, does not indicate to appellant that he desires a transcript, but insists thereon at the term at 4411. Filing by appellee. 3182. If the transcript has been sent up, but the appellant does not file the same when the same should be filed as herein provided, the appellee may file the same, and may, on motion, have the appeal dismissed or the judgment affirmed, as the court, from the circumstances of the case, shall determine. [R., § 3515.]

The provision of the rules of the court for affirmance on motion for failure of the appellant to file a printed abstract does not supersede the provision of this section authorizing an affirmance on motion for failure to file the transcript with the clerk, but in the latter case

4412. Failure in good faith. 15 G. A., ch. 56, § 1. No appeal to the supreme court of the state shall be dismissed or judgment of court below affirmed because the said cause was not docketed or transcript filed in supreme court, if it be made to appear that an appeal was taken in good faith and not for delay, or if, from the conduct of appellee or his counsel, appellant was induced to believe no motion to dismiss or affirm would be made.

Section applied: Engleken v. Schultz, 40-703. And see notes to §§ 4408 and 4410.

4413. Failure to assign errors. 3183. If, the transcript being filed, errors are not assigned and filed with the clerk of the supreme court, and a copy of the same served on the appellee or his attorney ten days before the first day of the trial term, the appellee may have the appeal dismissed or the judgment or order affirmed, unless good cause for the failure be shown by affidavit. [R., § 3516.]

If the assignment of errors is filed at the time required, it cannot be stricken from the files, although not served or filed until appellee's argument is filed: Conner v. Long, 63-295.

Appeal will be dismissed if assignment of errors is not served in time. It seems that, if properly served on the appellee, he could not complain of the mere non-filing of the same which the cause is to be submitted by filing a motion to dismiss or affirm, time will be given to procure a transcript, and if necessary a continuance for that purpose will be granted: White v. Savery, 49-197.

Where the parties stipulate that a transcript shall be dispensed with, unless the court requires one to be filed and provide that reasonable time shall be granted for that purpose, the court will grant such time: Artz v. Culbertson, 71-366.

The court will not dismiss the appeal on motion for failure to file a transcript, but order the transcript to be filed and continue the case until it can be done: Manson v. Ware, 63-345; Aldrich v. Price, 57-151.

Failure to file a transcript can only be taken advantage of by motion to dismiss the appeal or affirm the judgment, and cannot be urged on final hearing: Holmes v. Hull, 48-177.

A judgment of affirmance may be set aside upon a proper showing such as to authorize such action: Scarff v. Patterson, 37-503.

If the motion to dismiss the appeal is overruled by the court pro forma, in order that it may be left for determination on the final submission, such action will not prevent its full consideration on the final determination of the cause: Green v. Ronen, 62-89.

appellee, to be entitled to an affirmance, must file a certified copy of the judgment as a basis of the court's action, which is not required where the failure is merely to file the printed abstract: Hunger v. Patterson, 37-501.

with the clerk: Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 48-206.

An assignment of errors presented by appellant in connection with his reply to appellee's argument will not be considered: Betts v. Glenwood, 52-124.

Where the assignment of errors is not filed until after the term to which the appeal is taken, nor until after appellee's argument is filed, questions raised by the assignment cannot be considered: Wise v. Usry, 72-74.

An assignment of errors not filed within ten days before the first day of the term, and not until appellant's argument is filed, cannot be considered: Russell v. Johnston, 67-279.

Whether appellant may, upon proper showing, file an assignment of errors after the time fixed by statute, quære: Walker v. Russell, 73-340.

This section has reference to the original assignment of errors, and not to any amended or additional assignment that may be filed. An amended assignment may be filed on leave to do so; but costs in the case up to the time of filing the amended assignment may be taxed to the appellant: Stanley v. Barringer, 74-34.

Objection for want of assignment must be made prior to the final trial and subraission or it will be deemed waived, although the court may, notwithstanding such waiver, require an assignment: Andrews v. Burdick, 62-714.

4414. What shall be sent up. 3184. In an action by ordinary proceedings, and in an action by equitable proceedings, tried in whole or in part on oral testimony, all proper entries made by the clerk, and all papers pertaining to the cause and filed therein, except subpoenas, depositions, and other papers which are used as mere evidence, are to be deemed part of the record. But in an action by equitable proceedings, tried upon written testimony, the depositions and all papers which were used as evidence are to be certified up to the supreme court, and shall be so certified, not by transcript but in the original form. But a transcript of a motion, affidavit, or other paper, when it relates to a collateral matter, shall not be certified unless by direction of the appellant. If so certified when not material to the determination of the appeal, the court may direct the person blamable therefor to pay the costs thereof. [R., § 3512; C., '51, § 1977.]

Matters outside the record cannot be considered: The record of the proceedings in the lower court is the only basis for action in the supreme court. Extrinsic evidence cannot be considered: Bell v. Pierson, Mor., 21.

The supreme court has no original jurisdiction and cannot review or correct judgments of the lower court upon motion and affidavits outside of the lower court, showing fraud in the procurement of the judgment: Powell v. Spaulding, 3 G. Gr., 417.

Even in an equity case the supreme court cannot hear depositions taken after the trial of the case in the court below and never submitted to such court: Perkins v. Testerman, 3 G. Gr., 207.

An amended return of service of notice cannot be filed originally in the supreme court: Pitkey v. Gleason, 1-85.

The record in the supreme court cannot be changed or explained by affidavits presented for that purpose, nor by the certificate of the clerk of the court below, except so far as such certificate is as to the matters appearing of record in his court: Musgrave v. Brady, Mor., 456.

A paper purporting to be a bill of exceptions, but not certified as part of the record, cannot be considered: Conrad v. Baldwin, 3-207.

What deemed parts of record: An agreement of attorneys with reference to the extension of the time for filing a bill of excep-

Appellant may, after objection is made to his assignment of errors as not being sufficiently specific, amend such assignment by leave of court: Loughran v. Des Moines, 72-382.

An amended assignment, filed more than ten days before the term at which the cause is submitted, and duly served, will be considered: Kendig v. Overhulser, 58-195.

An amended assignment of errors which is not in time for the term to which the case was appealed, but was in time for a subsequent term to which the case was continued, and at which it was tried, held to be filed in sufficient time: Brown v. Rose, 55-734.

Assignment made at end of appellant's argument, and not objected to by appellee until after the filing of his argument and within two days of the submission of the case, held sufficient: University of Des Moines v. Livingston, 57-307.

Further as to assignment of errors, see § 4437 and notes.

tions, when reduced to writing and filed, becomes a part of the record without being embodied in a bill of exceptions: State ex rel. v. Chamberlin, 74-266.

And see § 4042 and notes.

Certificate of clerk: A certificate of the clerk as to what evidence was presented in an action tried by ordinary proceedings will not be regarded; such evidence must be made matter of record by being embodied in the bill of exceptions signed by the judge: Jordan v. Quick, 11-9; Garber v. Morrison, 5-476.

A paper cannot be made a part of the record by mere certificate of the clerk: State ex rel. v. Jones, 11-11; Harmon v. Chandler, 3-150.

The bill of exceptions filed in the trial court, a transcript of which is sent to the supreme court, cannot be contradicted by the certificate of the clerk of the trial court. So held where the bill of exceptions showed a note sued on to be non-negotiable, while the note filed by plaintiff's attorney after the trial of the cause, and certified by the clerk by copy to the supreme court, showed that it was negotiable: Daniels v. Gower, 54-319.

The supreme court cannot notice matters certified by the clerk of the lower court which do not appear of record in such court: Keller v. Killion, 9-329.

It is not the duty of the clerk to certify or set out the evidence offered, and the supreme court cannot act upon his statements as to what the evidence was. It must be embodied in a bill of exceptions properly certified by the judge: Potter v. Wooster, 10-334.

The certificate of the clerk that certain instructions were given and were objected to by appellant, held not sufficient to raise the question as to their insufficiency: Knight v. Kelley, 10-104.

The certificate of the clerk as to what appears of record in his court will not prevail against the recital of the record itself as transmitted by him: Holmes v. Budd, 11-186.

The affidavit of the clerk is not admissible to contradict his certificate to the transcript showing it to be full, complete and perfect: Cortiss v. Conable, 74-58.

Certificate of judge is not competent to contradict the recitals in a bill of exceptions: Pearson v. Maxfield, 47-135; Dedric v. Hopson, 62-562; Conner v. Long, 63-295.

A motion to strike evidence from the abstract because not preserved by a bill of exceptions properly raises the question whether there was a bill of exceptions or not: Morris v. Steele, 62-238.

On such a motion the record must speak for itself and can neither be attacked nor supported by affidavits: Ibid.; Moriarty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-696.

Where it appears that a bill of exceptions is embodied in the abstract without having been properly made a part of the record in the lower court it may be stricken out on motion: Wadsworth v. First Nat. Bank, 73-425.

The fact that the evidence is not so certified as to be properly a part of the record may be raised by motion to strike it from the record, but will not be a ground for affirming the judgment, as the record, without the evidence, may show error entitling appellant to reversal: Brackett v. Belknap, 40-704.

The supreme court will determine upon final hearing whether the record is such that the case can be considered upon its merits, especially where appellee insists in his argument that it cannot: Alexander v. McGrew, 57-237.

Defects in record: An objection that the record on appeal does not properly embody the evidence cannot be supported by affidavit. If the objection does not appear on the face of the record, it may be amended upon suggestion of diminution, or if the record in the court below requires change to make it correspond with the facts, proper steps should be taken to amend it there: Hughes v. Stanley, 45-622.

That the entire record is not before the supreme court is not sufficient either to warrant the dismissal of the appeal or to strike from the files what is there. The extent to which a loss of a portion of the record will prejudice the parties will be considered on the final determination of the cause: Mayo v. Temple, 14-585.

If it should appear in a law case that the evidence is not all before the supreme court, it would not dismiss the appeal if there were questions which might be determined without all the evidence being before it: Balm v. Nunn, 63-641.

If the record is in such condition that the supreme court cannot determine from the pleadings what the issues are, it may remand the cause in order that the parties may have an opportunity to replead: Lyon v. Tevis, 8-79.

Evidence must be of record below: A bill of exceptions cannot be considered in the supreme court unless it is embodied in the record certified from the court below: Platner v. Mofford, 1 G. Gr., 476.

But if no question is made the court presumes the evidence presented in filing the abstract was properly preserved. If that fact is called in question by a denial, the court will go to the transcript to determine it: Wilson v. First Presbyterian Church, 60-112.

Even if it appears that the transcript contains a paper not properly identified by the bill of exceptions, this fact will not warrant the striking the whole bill of exceptions from the record: Hardy v. Moore, 62-65.

Where no steps are taken to strike from the files a portion of the record claimed to have been erroneously certified, it cannot be disregarded on final hearing: Eddie v. Applegate, 14-273.

As to how writings, etc., must be identified in the bill of exceptions, see § 4041 and notes.

Although the record purports to contain all the evidence heard before a referee, yet if it does not appear that the evidence was preserved by a bill of exceptions, or a certificate of the referee, or otherwise identified, the court cannot consider that it has the evidence before it: Donovan v. Hayes, 62-36.

Where it is made to appear that the bill of exceptions was not presented to the attorney of the opposite party, as required by rule of the lower court, such bill of exceptions should be stricken out on motion in the supreme court: Christenson v. Central Iowa R. Co., 63-703.

To secure a review of a law action it is not essential that the evidence and instructions should be certified by the judge. It is sufficient that the evidence is properly made part of the record by bill of exceptions, and the instructions are identified by the bill of exceptions or in other proper manner: Wilson v. First Presbyterian Church, 60-112.

Parties may, by stipulation, agree as to what the evidence was on which the case was tried in the court below, for the purpose of having a trial on appeal upon errors assigned, although the case is equitable: Hutchinson v. Wells, 67-430.

Insufficient record: Where the evidence and instructions referred to in the bill of exceptions, and by it made part of the record, are not actually included in the transcript, for the reason that they are not found on file by the clerk, the supreme court cannot pass upon errors in rulings upon the evidence or instructions to the jury, it not appearing that the abstract corrects such defect: Bonney v. Cocke, 61-303.

Transcript of the record: While a bill of exceptions in an action by ordinary proceedings should be brought to the supreme court by copy, and not in its original form, yet an error in this respect only works a continuance to obtain a correct transcript: Fernow v. DuBuque & S. W. R. Co., 22-528.

A bill of exceptions transmitted to the supreme court with the record, but not embraced in it, nor certified to by the clerk as being a part of the record, cannot be considered: State v. Leis, 11-416.

It will not be a ground for striking the transcript from the files that it appears that it was delivered to the attorney of the party, where it is not shown that it was not afterward forwarded in the manner directed: Dedric v. Hopson, 62-562.

As to bringing up an original paper for inspection, see § 4439.

In equity cases: On appeal in a case tried by ordinary proceedings, a transcript should be sent up, but if tried by equitable proceedings upon written testimony, the depositions and papers are to be sent up in their original form: Baldwin v. Tuttle, 23-66.

If the original evidence is not certified up in such cases, the same presumption obtains in favor of the correctness of the ruling below as in an action at law: State v. Orwig, 27-528.

An objection that papers of record in the court below are certified to the supreme court by copy instead of in their original form should be raised in time to permit the other party to correct the error, if it be one, by filing the original papers. Such an objection not made before the final submission of the case will not be regarded: McDonald v. Farrell, 60-335.

Certificate of clerk: It is to be presumed that the papers certified by the clerk as a part of the record in the case were properly filed in such case, although the fact of their authenticity and connection with the transaction does not appear from the papers themselves: Mays v. Deaver, 1-216.

The certificate of the clerk to which he attaches loose and detached depositions in their original form, stating that the transcript contains the original depositions in the case, is not sufficient to enable the court to try the case anew: Wetherell v. Goodrich, 22-583.

Evidence presented in the record in an equity case, triable de novo, which is in no way certified or identified as that upon which the trial was had in the court below, will be stricken out on motion: Bracket v. Belknap, 41-592.

In an equitable action tried on written evidence it is not necessary that such written evidence be embodied in and preserved by bill of exception, but the certificate of the clerk that it is all sent up is sufficient to enable the supreme court to act upon it: Ticonic Bank v. Harvey, 16-141.

A certificate of the clerk that the transcript contains all the evidence "appearing on file" will not be sufficient: Davenport v. Ells, 22-296; Grant v. Grant, 46-478.

The certificate of the clerk that the record contains all the evidence offered in the court below, in a case tried wholly upon depositions and papers on file, is sufficient to enable the supreme court to consider the case on appeal; and the provisions of § 3949, as amended, requiring a certificate of the judge to be given at the trial term, has no application in such a case: Cross v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 58-62.

Where the clerk certified as follows: "The depositions accompanying this transcript, marked A, B, C, D and E, are all of the evidence in such case used on the trial thereof," and the depositions were found thus marked, held, that they were sufficiently identified, in the absence of a suggestion or showing of substitution: Chambers v. Ingham, 25-222.

Reporter's notes: In order to make the evidence as taken down by the short-hand reporter a part of the record, it must be transcribed by him, and filed in the court below: Gaylord v. Taft, 53-756; Lowe v. Lowe, 40-220.

The reporter's translation of his notes does not become a part of the record unless certified to by him as correct. A certificate of the judge, that the notes referred to in a bill of exceptions contain all the evidence, will not be sufficient: Richards v. Lounesbury, 65-587.

The evidence in a case may be preserved by the short-hand report thereof duly certified, without being embodied in a bill of exceptions: De Long v. Lee, 73-53.

Where the judge certifies to a short-hand writer's transcript of the evidence it is thereby sufficiently made part of the record, although the reporter was not appointed by the court, but acted at the request of one of the parties: Lutz v. Aylesworth, 66-629.

If there is a certificate of the judge to the reporter's notes, to the effect that they contain all the evidence introduced or offered in the case, it will be presumed that the statement is true, and that no evidence was afterwards introduced, although the judgment was not rendered until some time subsequent to the making of such certificate: Royer v. Foster, 62-321.

As to how reporter's notes are made part of the record, see § 5029 and notes to § 4042.

Under § 3949 as it now stands the certificate of the clerk is for the purpose of identifying and authenticating the record, and not for the purpose of making written evidence a part of the record, which must be done by the certificate of the judge: Runge v. Hahn, 75-733.

4415. Power to obtain perfect transcript. 3185. The appellant shall file a perfect transcript, and to that end the clerk of the court below must, at any time, on his suggestion of the diminution of the record and on the payment of fees, certify up any omitted part of the record, according to the truth, as the same appears in his office of record; and such applicant shall not be entitled to any continuance in order to correct the record, unless it shall clearly appear to the court that he is not in fault. Subject to which requirement, either party may, on motion before trial day, obtain an order on the clerk below, commanding him to transmit at once to the supreme court a true copy of such imperfect or omitted part of the record as shall be in general terms described in the affidavit or order. Such motion must be supported by affidavit, unless the diminution be apparent or admitted by the adverse party, and must not be granted unless the court is satisfied that it is not made for delay. [R., § 3524.]

Correction of record: Upon suggestion of diminution of the record, a party may have the record in the lower court corrected or amended by proper proceedings therein, and present the record as thus amended to the supreme court by supplemental abstract: Mahaffy v. Mahaffy, 63-55.

Mistake in the record as to date of service of notice of appeal on the clerk may be corrected upon motion in the court in which the notice is filed: Brier v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 66-603.

While evidence not offered or relied upon in the court below cannot be considered by the supreme court on appeal, yet where the record as filed is incomplete, it is competent for the lower court, even after appeal, to order all the evidence submitted at the trial to be certified: Campbell v. Long, 20-382.

Where it was made to appear to the court by affidavit that the record was defective, held, that the court might, in the exercise of a sound discretion, remand the case for the purpose of ascertaining and embodying in a proper bill of exceptions the evidence upon which the former trial was had: Tasker v. Marshall, 4-544.

The record before the court must be taken as conclusive of the facts recited. If erroneous in any respect, the error should have been corrected by proper proceedings in the court below: Stiles v. Botkin's Estate, 30-60.

The record on which the case is to be tried on appeal must be made up in the court below. The supreme court will not, on motion, amend such record, as by inserting a finding of facts alleged to be lost: Dobbins v. Lusch, 53-304.

Lost records of the court below cannot be supplied by affidavit in the supreme court: Morris v. Steele, 62-228.

The substitution of a lost pleading in the court below is to be made in that court and not in the supreme court: Tomlinson v. Funston, 1 G. Gr., 544.

Correction of omissions or mistakes: Appeals are based upon the records of the cause remaining in the court below. The supreme court has no jurisdiction to correct mistakes or supply omissions in such records: Bartle v. Des Moines, 37-635.

A motion made in the supreme court, supported by affidavits, to strike out the bill of exceptions as not correctly embodying the evidence, cannot be considered: Hughes v. Stanley, 45-622.

Any correction of the record must be made in the court below. The transcript is the authoritative record in the supreme court, and, after being certified, it cannot be impeached by a certificate of the clerk of the court below, or by any extrinsic evidence: Gardner v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 68-588.

Motion for correction of a record may properly be made in the lower court without any order or leave from the supreme court: Reynolds v. Sutliff, 71-549.

Since the abolition of the circuit court, applications for change in or correction of the records of that court should be made to the district court: De Wolfe v. Taylor, 71-648.

Supplying lost records: The written evidence upon which an equity case is tried becomes a part of the record, and if it is lost it is to be supplied by substitution. Such loss after judgment, and pending appeal, is not ground for a new trial: Loomis v. McKenzie, 48-416.

Where, after the taking of an appeal, the papers were lost without appellant's fault, held, that the court below should, on motion, have ordered substitution thereof: Steiner v. Steiner, 49-70.

Where a party, while his appeal was pending, filed in the court below a motion to supply his lost notice of appeal, which was done after the hearing of evidence with reference thereto, held, that as the evidence was conflicting, the order would not be disturbed: State v. Dillard, 52-749.

Where an additional transcript of a justice of the peace filed in the lower court in a proceeding by writ of error from the judgment of such justice of the peace was not sent to the supreme court with the transcript, but appeared to be lost, held, that the certificate of the judge and clerk were receivable to show that such amended transcript had been filed in the lower court: Coffeen v. Hammond, 3 G. Gr., 241.

Further as to correction or substitution of the record in lower court after appeal, see notes to § 4392.

Partial record: If appellant presents a partial record, which is, however, sufficient to clearly show the ruling appealed from, and it is manifest that the omitted parts could not aid the opposite party, the record will be sufficient to enable the court to pass upon the questions thereby raised: Hall v. Smith, 15-584.

STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

4416. Supersedeas bond. 3186. An appeal shall not stay proceedings on the judgment or order, or any part thereof, unless the appellant shall cause to be executed before the clerk of the court which rendered the judgment or order, by one or more sufficient sureties to be approved by such clerk, a bond to the effect that the appellant shall pay the appellee all costs and damages that shall be adjudged against the appellant on the appeal; also that he will satisfy and perform the judgment or order appealed from in case it shall be affirmed, and any judgment or order which the supreme court may render, or order to be rendered by the inferior court, not exceeding in amount or value the original judgment or order, and all rents or damages to property during the pendency of the appeal out of the possession of which the appellee is kept by reason of the appeal. If the bond is intended to stay proceedings on only a part of the judgment or order, it shall be varied so as to secure the part stayed alone. When such bond has been approved by the clerk, and filed, he shall issue a written order commanding the appellee and all others to stay proceedings on such judgment or order, or on such part as is superseded as the case may be. No appeal or stay shall vacate or affect the judgment appealed from. [R., §§ 3527-8; C., '51, § 1983.]

An appeal is not perfected by the filing of a supersedeas bond alone, but service of notice of appeal is also necessary, and until such notice is served, at least on the clerk, such officer should not recall an execution or issue an order to stay proceedings thereunder: Pratt v. Western Stage Co., 26-241.

A bond, irregular in form, held sufficient as a statutory appeal bond: Fried v. Schricher, 14-119.

An order of discharge in a habeas corpus proceeding cannot be suspended by supersedeas bond pending an appeal: State v. Kirkpatrick, 54-373.

Where no supersedeas bond is filed, the appeal does not vacate or affect the judgment, and proceedings thereon are not stayed: Phillips v. Germon, 43-101.

A supersedeas bond is not essential in perfecting the appeal; it does not secure the clerk's fees for transcript, so as to render unnecessary the payment or securing of the same in order to perfect the appeal: Loomis v. McKenzie, 57-77.

The giving of a supersedeas bond does not supersede or render void a delivery bond previously given to secure the release of attached property: Williams v. Robison, 21-493; State v. McClothlin, 61-312.

A supersedeas bond given in an action by a party claiming a public office, and who has been adjudged entitled thereto, does not suspend his right to exercise such office in pursuance of the judgment, and to receive the salary incident thereto; and therefore in an action on such supersedeas bond the sureties are not liable for salary accruing pending the suit: Jayne v. Drorbaugh, 63-711.

When an order has been determined to have been correctly made, it is then too late for a party to claim relief because he was not allowed to supersede it: Yetzer v. Martin, 58-612.

Where, on appeal, judgment as to one party appealing was affirmed, but as to the co-party reversed, held, that the party as to whom it was affirmed and his sureties were liable on their appeal bond: Knight v. Waters, 15-420.

Sureties on a supersedeas bond are not discharged by an entry in the supreme court, by consent, of a judgment by the terms of which extension of time of payment and stay of execution are granted. Their relation to the action is not such as gives them control over it, and the party has a right to do whatever the law authorizes in such cases: Drake v. Smythe, 44-410.

Where the appeal is simply dismissed, allowing the judgment in the lower court to remain in full force, such dismissal has the effect of affirming the judgment of the court below, and the parties to the supersedeas bond become liable thereon: Coon v. McCormack, 69-539.

Where the defense to an action on an appeal bond was that the judgment appealed from was fraudulently obtained by depriving defendant of his day in court, held, that such fact, if true, was no defense to the judgment rendered in the supreme court upon trial de novo, to which defendant appeared and in which he was heard, it not being alleged that such fraud prevented a full and fair trial on appeal: Knight v. Waters, 18-345.

The language of this section relating to rents and damages which are to be covered by the bond is a specification only as to the conditions of the bond; and if such condition is not contained in the bond, the party executing it cannot in an action thereon be held liable for rents or profits accruing during the appeal: Gill v. Sullivan, 62-529.

4417. Conditions of bond; approval. 3187. In cases wherein the appellant has perfected his appeal to the supreme court, and the clerk of the district [or circuit] court has unjustly refused to approve the appeal bond offered, or makes the penalty therein too large, or the conditions thereof unjust, the appellant may move the supreme court if in session, or in its vacation, on such written notice to the appellee as the judge may prescribe, may move any judge thereof to determine the conditions, fix the penalty, and approve the appeal bond. The motion, verified by the affidavit of the appellant or his attorney, shall contain a brief statement of the nature of the action in which the appeal was taken, of the judgment or order appealed from, of the steps taken by the appellant with reference to his appeal, and of his giving, or offering to give, an appeal bond, of the action of the clerk of the court below with reference to such bond, and wherein he has acted wrongfully; and if the supreme court, or any judge thereof, considers that the clerk has made unjust conditions in the bond, or the penalty thereof too high, or has wrongfully refused to approve the same, such court or judge shall issue an order prescribing the conditions of the appeal bond, fixing the penalty thereof, and either approve it or direct the clerk of the supreme court so to do, which bond shall be filed with the officer last named. The supreme court, or judge thereof, may order that all or any part of the papers and records in the cause appealed, or certified copies thereof, be produced on the hearing of such motion, and pending the disposition thereof, may make an order staying the enforcement of the judgment or order appealed from, and on such terms as are just. The order, if made by the judge, shall be in writing and signed by him, and upon the service thereof, or of a certified copy, when made in court, upon the clerk of the court below, all proceedings in the court appealed from shall be stayed, and all orders, processes, executions, or other papers issued therefrom shall be recalled, and the appellant be placed in the same condition that he was when the judgment or order appealed from was made or rendered. [14 G. A., ch. 8.]

4418. Insufficient security. 3188. If the appellee believe the bond defective, or the sureties insufficient, he may move the supreme court if in session, or in its vacation, on ten days' written notice to the appellant, may move any judge of said court, or the judge of the court below where the appeal was taken, to discharge the bond, and if the court or such judge shall consider the sureties insufficient, or the bond substantially defective in securing the rights of the appellee, the court or such judge shall issue an order discharging such bond, unless a good bond, with sufficient sureties, be executed by a day by him fixed. The order, if made by a judge, shall be in writing and signed by him; and upon his filing, or the filing of a certified copy of the order when made in court, in the office of the clerk of the inferior court, execution and other proceedings for enforcing the judgment or order may be taken, if a new and good bond is not filed and approved by the day as aforesaid. [R., § 3529.]

4419. New bond. 3189. But another order staying proceedings may be issued by the clerk, upon the execution before him of a new and lawful bond with sufficient sureties as hereinbefore provided. [R., § 3530.]

4420. Penalty of bond. 3190. If the judgment or order is for the payment of money, the penalty shall be in at least twice the amount of the judgment and costs. If not for the payment of money, the penalty shall be sufficient to save the appellee harmless from the consequences of taking the appeal. But it shall in no case be less than one hundred dollars. [R., § 3531; C., '51, § 1984.]

Where, in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, a personal judgment for the amount claimed is rendered against defendant, and the lien is declared established upon the property, and the property is ordered sold upon special execution to satisfy the judgment, and it is directed that a general execution issue for any sum remaining unpaid after exhausting said property, the penalty of the appeal bond should be twice the amount of the judgment rendered. The value of property on which the judgment is especially declared a lien cannot be taken into account in fixing the bond: Flynn v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 62-521

4421. Partial stay. 3191. The taking of the appeal from a part of a judgment or order, and the filing of a bond as above directed, does not cause a stay of execution as to any part of the judgment or order not appealed from. [R., § 3532; C., '51, § 1985.]

4423. Property surrendered. 3193. Property levied upon and not sold at the time such countermand is received by the sheriff, shall forthwith be delivered up to the judgment debtor. [R., § 3534; C., '51, § 1988.]

It seems that this section refers only to personal property: Swift v. Conboy, 12-444.

TRIAL — JUDGMENT.

4424. Proceedings. 3194. The supreme court may reverse or affirm the judgment or order below, or the part of either appealed from, or may render such judgment or order as the inferior court or judge should have done, according as it may think it proper. [R., § 3536; C., '51, § 1989.]

I. THE ABSTRACT.

Form: The fact that what is filed and intended as an abstract is not so entitled or designated will not prevent the court from considering it if its nature is apparent: Noble v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61-637.

Where the questions of law and fact involved in different cases are the same, they may be presented to the supreme court on one record: King v. Glass, 73-205.

Should contain what: It is not proper to set out in the abstract the entire testimony of witnesses, by question and answer, without excluding matter that is immaterial: Vaughn v. Smith, 58-553; Tootle v. Taylor, 64-629.

Nor should writs, services, and other writings not material to the case, be set out: Tootle v. Taylor, 64-629.

The abstract should show the fact of service of notice of appeal: Phillips v. Follett, 69-39.

Costs of improper abstract: The appellant, although successful, should not be allowed the full cost of an abstract containing unnecessary matter: Chandler v. Fremont County, 42-58; Macomber v. Peck, 39-351; Martin v. Cole, 38-699; York v. Clemens, 41-95; Byrlee v. Mendel, 39-382; Dye v. Young, 55-433; Poole v. Hintrager, 60-180; Donahue v. McCosh, 70-733; Baldwin v. Foss, 71-389.

Costs of additional abstract of appellee should not be taxed to appellant where his own abstract fairly presents the questions to be determined: Brown v. Byam, 59-52.

An agreed abstract; amendment: If an agreed abstract is presented, the case will be heard on that, and no amendment presented by one of the parties will be considered: Holmes v. Lucas County, 53-211.

But an agreed abstract will not operate to waive statutory requirements as to appeal: Lewis v. Pearson, 50-702; nor the objection that the abstract does not appear to contain all the evidence: Allen v. Hull, 56-767.

Case determined upon abstract: The supreme court does not look beyond the abstract where a case has been argued and submitted with an apparent understanding that such abstract contains all that is material to its determination: Montgomery County v. American Emigrant Co., 47-91.

Unless there is a disagreement in the abstracts the supreme court does not examine the transcript, and the abstracts constitute the record. Where a certificate of the judge is necessary to entitle the party to appeal it should be set out in the abstract: Barnes v. Independent Dist., 51-700.

The supreme court will not, as a general rule, look into the transcript except for the purpose of determining the correctness of the abstract, where that is disputed in the manner required by the rules of court: State v. Smouse, 49-634.

In the absence of a conflict of abstracts the court treats the abstract as the record in the case, and if it is not sufficiently intelligible to show the rulings made the court acts upon the presumption that there is no error: Eldredge v. Bell, 64-125.

Should show appeal: The abstract must show the taking of an appeal: Plummer v. People's Nat. Bank, 73-752; Names v. Names, 74-213.

How correctness of abstract questioned: The correctness of the statements of the abstract cannot be impeached by a mere statement in argument: Van Winkle v. Iowa Iron, etc., Fence Co., 56-245; Rankin v. Muller, 43-11.

Where the abstract, although failing to show that a bill of exceptions was filed in the court below, contains matter which it could not properly contain unless made of record, the court will regard the appellant as claiming that it was made of record, and a direct statement to that effect will not be necessary. If the appellee desires to claim that no bill of exceptions was filed he must do so in an additional abstract: Thompson v. Silvers, 59-670.

Where the abstract filed by appellant purports to be an abstract of all the evidence, it will be assumed, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, that the evidence set out therein was properly made of record. If the opposite party wishes to claim that the evidence was not made of record he should file an additional abstract so stating, and the statement of such additional abstract will be assumed to be true if not denied: State v. Tucker, 68-50.

Where appellant's abstract stated the taking of an exception, which was not denied in the amended abstract, held, that the court would consider that the exception properly appeared in the record: Palmer v. Rogers, 70-381.

An abstract cannot be impeached or contradicted by a certificate of the clerk of the court below: White v. Savery, 49-197.

Nor can it be altered or changed by affidavit or certificate of the judge: Pearson v. Maxwell, 47-135.

A so-called amended abstract, setting out affidavits showing the judgment to be different from that contained in the abstract, will not be considered: Holmes v. Lucas County, 53-211.

Where an abstract purports to contain a copy of a paper which is part of the record, it is not necessary for it to state that what it sets out is the whole paper, but it will be presumed to be so unless the contrary is shown: Baird v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61-359.

Motion to strike evidence from abstract: If the abstract sets forth evidence not made of record, the appellee may, on motion, have such evidence stricken therefrom: Mudge v. Agnew, 56-297.

If no question is made as to the filing of the bill of exceptions, the court presumes that the evidence has been properly preserved. If the appellee states in his abstract that no proper bill of exceptions has been filed, and moves to strike out the evidence on that ground, the court does not take the statement as true, but refers to the transcript for a determination: Wilson v. First Presbyterian Church, 60-112.

A statement in appellee's abstract that no exceptions were taken as set out in the appellant's abstract will be deemed true if not denied or avoided by appellant: Armstrong v. Nillen, 70-51.

Court will not look beyond abstract: Where the evidence in a case was stricken from the abstract and the transcript as not being properly embodied therein, and leave was given to perfect the record, and a perfect transcript was filed, but no new abstract, held, that the court could only consider the original abstract with the evidence stricken therefrom: Weider v. Overton, 47-538.

Matter must be of record: The court cannot take the abstractor's statement of a fact where there is no claim that the fact appears from the record: Dickerman v. Lubiens, 70-345; Anderson v. Leaverich, 70-741.

Abstract of all the evidence: The court will not, against the objection of appellee, review a finding of facts made by a court, jury, or referee, unless the abstract purports to contain all the evidence introduced on the trial below: Andrews v. Kerr, 49-680; Price v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 42-16; Rice v. Plymouth County, 53-635; Walker v. Plummer, 41-697; Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co. v. Secor, 70-647.

Where a review of the findings of a jury on the evidence is sought, the abstract should contain the statement that it contains all the evidence: Kearney v. Ferguson, 50-72; Andrews v. Kerr, 49-680; Parsons v. Parsons, 66-754.

It is not sufficient that it appear that all the evidence is in the bill of exceptions: Rice v. Plymouth County, 53-635.

Where an abstract fails to state that all the evidence is before the supreme court, that court will not review the findings of the court below on a question of fact: Van Riper v. Baker, 44-450; Commercial Bank v. King, 47-64.

It must also appear from the abstract that all the evidence is made of record: Wormley v. District T'p, 45-666.

Where the abstract does not purport to be an abstract of all the evidence, an objection that the damages are excessive cannot be considered: Brant v. Lyons, 60-172.

Where the abstract shows that it does not contain all the evidence, the case will not be reversed if there might have been evidence supporting the judgment: Entz v. Miller, 54-551.

That it appears from the abstract itself that it does not contain the testimony of all the witnesses will prevent the supreme court from trying the case de novo: Hart v. Hart, 74-487.

On an appeal from the ruling of the lower court in setting aside an indictment it is not necessary that the abstract shall show all the evidence presented on the motion, where it appears that the ground for setting it aside was not sufficient: State v. Smith, 74-580.

The fact that an abstract does not contain immaterial evidence received on the trial in the lower court will not prevent trial of the case anew: Buck v. Holt, 74-294.

Where the ground upon which the lower court gives judgment is that, upon the facts specially found, plaintiff is not entitled to recover, it is not necessary that the abstract on appeal contain the evidence or the instructions of the court: Connors v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 71-490.

Must purport to contain all the evidence: An abstract which states that all the evidence in the case was reported and certified to by the reporter of the court, and duly certified by the court as being all the evidence offered in said trial, will not be sufficient to enable the court to try the case de novo if it fails to state that it (the abstract) contains all the evidence, that is, an abstract of all the evidence upon which the case was tried: Cassady v. Spofford, 57-237; Ward v. Snook, 61-610; Hall v. Harris, 61-500; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Findley, 59-591; Ohrt v. Ober, 51-540; Conwell v. House, 57-754; Names v. Names, 74-213.

If a party wishes to make it appear that his abstract is an abstract of all the evidence, that fact should be specifically stated in the abstract. It is not sufficient to set out in the abstract the certificate of the judge, or clerk or reporter, showing that the evidence is all made of record in the lower court: Porter v. Stone, 62-442; Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co. v. Secor, 70-647; Fulliam v. Muscatine, 70-436; Woodrum v. Carraher, 69-145; Hasner v. Patterson, 70-681; Morgan v. Wilfley, 71-212; Drake v. Kaiser, 73-703; Polk County v. Nelson, 75-648.

While the abstract should purport to contain all the evidence, it is not usually necessary nor desirable that it should, in fact, contain all the evidence: Huff v. Farwell, 67-298.

An abstract stating that "the testimony was taken on written deposition, and was essentially as follows," is not sufficient to show that the abstract contains all the evidence: Britt v. Case, 58-757.

The language of the record may be abbreviated in an abstract, but it is not proper for counsel to determine what are the facts established, or what is the effect of the evidence, or to substitute what they may consider as substantially the same: Blohm v. Sweney, 66-604.

A statement in an abstract that it contains "all the evidence bearing upon or introduced to sustain the issues and findings as to which plaintiff appealed," held not sufficient: Roe v. Wilmot, 51-689.

What sufficient to show that the abstract contains all the evidence: The statement in the abstract to show that all the evidence is comprehended therein is sufficient, if the opposite party and the court are fairly apprised that the appellant claims that he has presented an abstract of all the evidence, and in such cases the court will presume that he has, unless appellee sets out additional evidence: Miller v. Wolf, 63-233.

Where an abstract contains a statement that it is an abstract of all the evidence, it is assumed, not only that this statement is true, but that the evidence was made of record by due certification, unless it is made to appear to the contrary; but where the certificate relied upon is set out, and appears to be insufficient, that presumption will not be entertained: Alexander v. McGrew, 57-287.

Where the abstract stated that "the foregoing evidence is by the court duly certified to be all the evidence offered by either party on the trial of this cause," held, that it would be presumed that the evidence had properly been made of record by a bill of exceptions: Macleod v. Geyer, 53-615.

A recital in the abstract that it was an abstract of all the evidence, and that within a proper time a bill of exceptions was filed embracing in the record the testimony set out, held, sufficient to show that the evidence was before the court on appeal: Deere v. Needles, 65-101.

Where the abstract purported to contain all the evidence, and recited that the evidence was taken down in writing by order of the court, and made a part of the record, held, that there was sufficient to entitle appellant to a trial de novo: Stoddard v. Hardwick, 46-160.

Where the abstract purports to be an abstract of all the evidence, and sets out certificates of the trial judge showing that a bill of exceptions was signed, it will be presumed that the evidence was all made of record, and is all before the supreme court, unless an additional abstract is filed by the opposite party: Bailey v. Mutual Benefit Ass'n, 71-689.

Where depositions were referred to in the certificate of the judge as being marked by certain letters, and the abstract did not identify the depositions and documents printed therein as being referred to in the certificate, but it was alleged in an amended abstract, filed by appellant, that all the evidence offered, introduced or used in the trial was set out in the original and amended abstracts, which allegation was denied, held, that the court could presume that it had all the evidence before it: Paine v. Means, 65-547.

Where the abstract stated that a party filed a garnishee's answer "as follows, omitting formal parts," no issue appearing to have been joined thereon, and therefore no evidence having been admissible, held, that this statement was sufficient to show that all the evidence on which the court acted in ruling upon a motion for judgment on the garnishee's answer appeared to be presented: Van Winkle v. Iowa Iron, etc., Fence Co., 56-245.

Where by the language of the abstract the opposite party and the court are fairly apprised that appellant claims that he has presented all the evidence, it will be assumed that he has done so unless the appellee sets out additional evidence in an amended abstract: Miller v. Wolf, 63-233.

Where a certificate of the judge that the record contains all the evidence is essential on appeal, if the abstract sets out the fact that the certificate was made on the date thereof it is not necessary that such certificate be set out in the abstract: Yant v. Harvey, 55-421.

In a particular case, held, that appellant's abstract sufficiently purported to contain an abstract of all the evidence: Higgins v. Mendenhall, 51-135.

Setting out instructions: Where an abstract does not purport to set out the instructions, or any of them, in full, but simply sets forth parts of sentences of various instructions claimed to be erroneous, the court cannot pass upon their correctness: State v. Nichols, 38-110.

Where the abstract does not contain all the instructions given, alleged error in refusing an instruction cannot be considered: State v. Williamson, 68-351.

Abstract deemed true: The abstract filed by appellant, in the absence of an additional abstract, constitutes the record and is regarded as a verity: White v. Savery, 49-197.

If appellant's abstract is not denied by appellee and shown to be untrue by an amended abstract it will be assumed to be true: Ibid.; Kearney v. Ferguson, 50-72; Hardy v. Moore, 62-65.

If appellee files an amended abstract which is not denied it will be assumed to be true: Kearney v. Ferguson, 50-72.

If appellee's amended abstract is denied by another abstract filed by appellant, then the court will look into the transcript and determine its character: White v. Savery, 49-197.

In the absence of an amended abstract denying the statements contained in appellant's abstract, the latter is deemed to be true, notwithstanding such a denial is made in the argument of counsel: Forner v. Sasseen, 63-110; Weaver v. Kintzley, 58-191; Keudrick v. Eggleston, 56-128.

Where appellee discusses questions raised upon the instructions without objecting or suggesting that they are not truly set out in the abstract, his denial in the amended abstract, that the instructions given and refused are not properly set out, will not be considered: Roberts v. Leon Loan, etc., Co., 63-76.

Where the abstract on its face appears to be full and complete, the statement that it contains all the evidence cannot be overcome by a mere denial by appellee, so as to require an examination of the abstract, but he must set forth the omitted evidence: Andrews v. Kerr, 49-680; Allen v. Bryson, 67-591; Mielenz v. Quasdorf, 68-726; Aller v. Pennell, 51-537; Huff v. Farwell, 67-298; McArthur v. Landerman, 62-307; Brooks v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73-179.

The party filing an additional abstract purporting to supply defects and omissions in the original abstract thereby admits that the two abstracts together contain all the evidence given on the trial: Wells v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 56-520; Wilson v. Palo Alto County, 65-18; Cross v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 58-62; Connors v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 74-383.

If an abstract states that it contains all the evidence, but an amended abstract is filed by appellee giving additional evidence, without claiming that, as thus corrected, the abstract does not give all the evidence, it will be presumed that the abstracts together bring all the evidence before the court: Cross v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 51-683.

Even if appellant's abstract contains no averment that all the evidence is found therein, if appellee files an amended abstract setting out evidence alleged to have been omitted from the original, without any statement or claim that the two abstracts together do not contain all the evidence, appellee cannot afterwards urge that the evidence is not all before the court: Van Sandt v. Cramer, 60-424; Starr v. Burlington, 45-87; Ferguson v. Davis County, 51-220; Cummings v. Browne, 61-385; Balm v. Nunn, 63-641; O'Brien v. Harrison, 59-686.

Where the abstract of appellant does not purport to contain all the evidence, the appellee may set forth in his amended abstract other portions, coupled with the denial that with these additions the abstracts contain all the evidence, and will not be estopped from relying upon such statement in denial: Cartwright v. Copeess, 60-195; Hall v. Harris, 61-500; Howe v. Jones, 66-156; Hassett v. Hassett, 66-304; Alexander v. McGrew, 57-287; Hunter v. Des Moines, 74-215.

And if such objection is made it will be deemed true, unless appellant shows by an amended abstract that the evidence was properly certified: Roby v. Hall, 57-213.

Such statement, that the abstracts together do not present all the evidence, will be deemed true unless denied by appellant: Love v. Donaldson, 63-631.

If an abstract is not denied by the appellee in an amended abstract, the record set out will be taken to be correct, as, for instance, it will be assumed that a bill of exceptions was filed. But if such facts are denied in an amended abstract, the denial will be taken to be true in the absence of a transcript: Brainard v. Simmons, 58-464.

Unless an additional or amended abstract be denied it will be regarded as presenting the record correctly, and will prevail against the original abstract: Hart v. Jackson, 57-75; Ham v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 61-716; Lucas v. Jones, 44-298; Daniels v. Langdon, 52-741; Cole v. Coskery, 63-526; Maxwell v. La Brune, 68-689; Brooks v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73-179.

And this is true even though it seeks to eliminate something from appellant's abstract: Richardson v. Hoyt, 60-68; Burkhart v. Ball, 59-629; Kearney v. Ferguson, 50-72.

The statement in an amended abstract that there is no bill of exceptions will be deemed correct unless denied: Foley v. Hefferson, 70-572.

Service and filing of amended abstract: Where an amended abstract is served thirty days before the cause is submitted it will not be stricken from the files because not served within the time required by the rules, where no prejudice could have resulted from the delay: Green v. Ronen, 62-89.

Where appellee's amended abstract was served twenty days before the case was submitted, and the motion to strike involved nothing but the cost of printing, held, that appellant sustained no prejudice from the delay in service, and the abstract could not be stricken from the files: Davidson v. Carter, 55-117.

Where an additional abstract, filed after the filing of appellee's argument, was filed three months before the cause was submitted, and appellee had opportunity to examine it and correct any misstatements or error contained in it, and filed an additional argument based, in part, upon the record as made by the additional abstract, held, that such additional abstract might be considered: Palo Alto County v. Harrison, 68-81.

The fact that an amended abstract is filed without leave or notice is not ground for striking it from the files: Frost v. Parker, 65-178.

An amendment to appellant's abstract, rendered necessary by reason of a motion in the court below after the record was made up and the appeal taken, should not be stricken from the files because not served upon appellee: Peterson v. Adamson, 67-739.

It is not unusual to allow a party to file an amended abstract when he discovers his case is not fully presented in the original abstract. This should be done, however, before the case is submitted and at such a time as that the other party will not be prejudiced thereby: Wells v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 56-520.

Where a motion was submitted with the case asking the court to strike from the files an amended abstract and argument of the opposite party because not filed within the time agreed upon between the parties, held, that while the motion would be overruled, no costs would be taxed to the unsuccessful party for printing such abstract and argument: Keegan v. Malone's Estate, 62-208.

Appellant cannot, after the appellee has argued his case, amend his abstract without leave of court and thus substantially change the record upon which the case is submitted. If leave to amend is asked, it may be granted upon such terms as seem proper under the circumstances, but an amendment filed without leave after the filing of appellee's argument will be stricken out on motion: In re Caywood's Will, 56-301.

Appellant cannot file an additional abstract with his argument in reply except to controvert the correctness of appellee's additional abstract: Johnson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 51-25.

An amendment to appellant's abstract will not be stricken from the files because filed without leave, even though filed after the cause has been argued by appellee: Hart v. Pottawattamie County Mut. F. Ins. Co., 74-39.

Under some circumstances, doubtless, a submission may be set aside and the case would then be open for proper changes in the record, but an amended abstract filed after the case is submitted, without the submission being set aside, will not be considered: Fletcher v. Terrell, 50-267; Rogers v. Carman, 54-715.

An application by appellant to amend his abstract after the case is submitted, which application is not accompanied by a motion to set aside the submission, cannot be allowed: State v. Hamilton, 57-596.

The court will not summarily affirm a cause after it is prepared for submission on the part of the appellant, on the ground of delay in presenting the abstract and argument. If prejudice has resulted to the other party by delay, redress must be sought in some other way: Fowler v. Strawberry Hill, 74-644.

Name of judge: A failure to comply with rule 117, requiring abstracts to show name of trial judge, will prevent the appeal being considered until such defect is corrected: Kissinger v. Council Bluffs, 72-471.

II. ARGUMENTS.

Failure of appellant to file argument or brief will be considered an abandonment of the appeal: Mores v. Hanchett, 54-747; Dinning v. Bement, 54-156; Cline v. Phipps, 62-759; Lamp v. Sievers, 66-85.

In such case the decision of the lower court will be affirmed: Devore v. Adams, 68-385.

Although in an equity case the opening and closing on appeal may fall upon appellee, yet the failure of appellee to file an opening argument will not warrant the appellant in failing to file any argument whatever. If he does so, his appeal will be regarded as abandoned: Scott v. Neises, 61-62.

The supreme court will never decide questions which are not argued upon both sides, except where there exists an absolute necessity for their decision: McKern v. Albia, 69-447.

And the court will stop the consideration of a case not argued by appellee, upon reaching the conclusion that it ought to be reversed on any one ground: Deeds v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 69-164; Gulfeather v. Council Bluffs, 69-310.

Assignments not argued: Assignments of error which are not discussed or insisted upon in argument will not be considered: Chise v. Freeborn, 29-110; Soward v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-551; Snyder v. Eldridge, 31-129; Howe v. Fostenson, 31-600; Abbott v. Board of Supervisors, 36 354; Cook v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 37-426; Hale v. Gibbs, 43-380; Huiras v. Berkeley, 51-701; Betts v. Glenwood, 52-124; Hepmon v. Dubuque, 52-713; Rice v. Plymouth County, 53-635; Smith v. Hickenbottom, 57-733; Clark v. Epworth, 61-750; Beeson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 62-173; Wood v. Whitton, 66-295; Wood v. Hal-lowell, 68-377.

The supreme court will not consider assignments of error not argued by counsel, even though they are stated in his argument: Manning v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 64-240; Patterson v. Seaton, 70-689.

An objection which is merely referred to in such a way as might be sufficient as an assignment of errors, but is not argued, will not be considered: Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654.

Where the only argument made in support of an error assigned is a mere restatement of the assignment, it will not be considered. If counsel are unable or unwilling to suggest cogent reasons in support of an alleged error, the court will not assume that duty: Marker v. Dunn, 68-720.

Where no reasons are given in support of an assignment it will not be considered by the court: Parsons v. Parsons, 66-754.

Errors assigned but not referred to in the opening argument are deemed waived, and cannot be referred to for the first time in appellant's reply: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49-664.

Where the assignments are referred to, and the general theory of the case is argued as inconsistent with the instructions given, and calling for the instructions refused, which giving or refusing is assigned as error, the assignment will not be deemed waived, although the instructions are not specifically discussed: Clark v. Ralls, 50-275.

Opening and closing argument: In a trial de novo in the supreme court, the party having the burden of proof in the case is entitled to the opening and closing of the argument: Steel v. Fife, 48-99; Alexander v. McGrew, 57-287; Devore v. Adams, 68-385.

And where the burden of proof was upon appellee, held, that a reply filed by appellant to appellee's closing argument might be stricken out on motion: Steel v. Fife, 48-99.

Erroneous reasoning assigned as the ground of objection to action of the lower court will not prevent the court from considering a valid objection properly made in the lower court: Gilman v. Donovan, 59-76.

Filing of argument: An argument will not be stricken out on motion because not filed in time: Bartle v. Des Moines, 37-635.

But if the court is asked to do so, it will tax the costs to the party filing the argument after the proper time, unless the failure to file within the time prescribed by the rules has been reasonably excused: Renwick v. Bancroft, 59-116; Smith v. McFadden, 56-482.

While not striking the argument from the files because not filed in time, the court will, in a proper case, inflict penalties, or continue the case when asked to do so: Cox v. Forrest City & S. R. Co., 66-289.

Especially will the argument not be stricken from the files because not filed in time, where the party moving to strike does not desire to file any argument on his part: Kellam v. McAlpine, 63-251.

Arguments filed with the clerk after the case is submitted are, by order of the court, not sent to the justices: Wells v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 56-520.

An argument improperly filed, as where appellee has improperly filed the opening argument, may be stricken from the files, but will not entitle the opposite party to judgment for costs: Devore v. Adams, 68-385.

Service of argument: Where a cause is submitted in a regular manner it will not be remanded upon the mere statement of opposing counsel, in a petition for rehearing, that the argument was not properly served: Hall v. Harris, 61-500.

Where cases are argued together in the supreme court, in an oral argument, the court will look at the printed arguments in the cases to determine what portion of the oral argument was intended to be applicable to each, and a point raised in the oral argument will not be considered in a case the brief of which does not raise such point: Iowa Limestone Co. v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co., 63-285.

It is improper for counsel to present together questions peculiar to different cases, although such cases have other questions in common: Hooper v. Sac County Bank, 72-280; Guise v. Early, 72-283.

Taxation of costs: Where an argument contained numerous misleading errors, evidently due to want of time or negligence in reading the proof, held, that the costs thereof could not be taxed with the costs in the case: Fair v. Brown, 40-209.

References to abstract: It is improper in a printed argument to refer to matters contained in the abstract without giving the page of the abstract where such matters may be found: Herriott v. Kersey, 69-111.

Improper argument: It is improper for an attorney in argument to make a statement of facts outside of the record impeaching the judicial conduct of the judge before whom the case is tried: Paine v. Frost, 67-282.

Improper remarks by counsel in printed argument adverted to and criticised: Sax v. Drake, 69-760.

On motion of appellant a portion of appellee's argument was stricken out on account of its abusive character: Cassidy v. Palo Alto County, 58-125.

III. WHAT QUESTIONS WILL AND WHAT WILL NOT BE CONSIDERED ON APPEAL.

a. Question Not Raised in the Court Below.

New objections not considered: An objection not made or question not raised in the court below cannot be considered on appeal: Dean v. Hall, 4 G. Gr., 425; Hintermeister v. State, 1-101; Mumma v. McKee, 10-107; State v. Groome, 10-308; Berry v. Gravel, 11-135; Rockwell v. Kimball, 11-524; Elder v. Littler, 15-65; Starry v. Starry, 21-254; Kruck v. Prine, 22-570; McNaught v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-336; Evans v. Hawley, 35-83; Stanberry v. Dickerson, 35-493; State v. Cuddy, 40-419; Price v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 42-16; Trayer v. Reeder, 45-272; Davis v. Nolan, 49-683; Argall v. Pugh, 56-308; Wetmore v. McStillan, 57-344; Wire v. Foster, 62-114; Babeck v. Board of Equalization, 65-110; Goodnow v. Plumb, 67-661; Garretson v. Equitable Mutual Life, etc., Ass'n, 74-419.

A party is not to be surprised in the supreme court by new objections and issues not made in the court below, based upon defects of which he was not advised by motion or otherwise in the lower court, and which it would have been in his power to remedy had objection been taken thereto in proper time and manner: Patterson v. Stiles, 6-54.

An objection cannot be considered on appeal which is different from that made in the court below: Oliver v. Depew, 14-490; Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 44-335; Swan v. Bourmes, 47-501.

The court will not consider objections which are not based upon exceptions taken on the trial in the court below: Spelman v. Gill, 75-717.

The record should show affirmatively that at some stage of the proceedings the very defect complained of was presented to the court: Shuck v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 73-333.

No change of base: A party must, on appeal, stand in the posture in which he placed himself in the lower court. He cannot change his base after the appeal: Garland v. Wholebau, 20-271.

No new issues: An issue not raised in the court below cannot be urged for the first time in the supreme court: Latterett v. Cook, 1-1; Brazelton v. Jenkins, Mor., 15.

The objection to plaintiff's recovery that his claim is within the statute of frauds, not having been raised below by demurrer or answer, cannot be raised on appeal: Lower v. Lower, 46-525.

Ruling cannot be supported on ground not urged below: A ground not urged in the court below cannot, on appeal, be relied upon to sustain a ruling of that court, which is erroneous on the ground upon which it is based: Knapp v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 65-91.

Service of notice: Objections to the service of the notice will not be considered on appeal where the record facts fail to show any ruling thereon in the lower court: Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153.

An objection to jurisdiction not raised in the court below cannot be raised on appeal unless the record shows the case to be coram non judice: Bridgman v. Wilcut, 4 G. Gr., 563.

An objection which does not go to the jurisdiction of the court below, but merely to plaintiff's right to bring action, will not be considered on appeal unless made in the lower court: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633.

Although the objection that the court has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter or parties may be raised for the first time in the supreme court, yet if it appears that the lower court had jurisdiction of the parties, but only erred as to the kind of proceedings adopted, the objection cannot be first raised on appeal: Gould v. Hurto, 61-45.

Where it appears that there is a want of jurisdiction in the court below, or where the ruling made is in excess of the authority or power of the court, it is the duty of the supreme court to recognize such want of jurisdiction, even if no objection be made: Groves v. Richmond, 53-570; St. Joseph Mfg. Co. v. Harrington, 53-380.

An objection to a pleading not raised by motion or demurrer in the court below, and passed upon by it, cannot be considered on appeal: Ruddick v. Patterson, 9-103; Williams v. Sill, 12-511; Clews v. Traer, 57-459; Davis v. Burt, 7-56; Gifford v. Ferguson, 19-166; McCoy v. Cornell, 40-457.

So held as to a defect in verification not objected to in the lower court: Moses v. Risdon, 46-251.

Objection that the petition is not sufficiently specific cannot be urged for the first time on appeal: Davis v. Walter, 70-465.

Objections to the form of the pleading cannot be taken for the first time on appeal: Willson v. Harris, 68-443.

An objection that the relief granted is not asked in the pleading cannot be raised for the first time on appeal: Iowa Lumber Co. v. Foster, 49-25; Williams v. Wilcox, 66-65.

Issues not raised: Where the parties have themselves tried a case on the theory that the question presented on the trial is raised by the pleadings, the court may properly submit such question to the jury, and a party cannot complain on appeal that no such issue was raised by the pleadings: Hoyt v. Hoyt, 68-703.

Error in granting change of venue to an improper court will be reviewed on appeal, although the party did not, in applying for the change, designate the court to which a change was sought: Sayles v. Deluhrey, 64-109.

A defense not pleaded in the court below will be disregarded on appeal: Thomson v. Lee County, 22-206; Barlow v. Brock, 25-308.

A variance between the allegations and the proofs cannot be first raised on appeal: Singer v. Given, 61-93.

Swearing the jury: The supreme court will not disturb a judgment upon the ground that the jury in the cause was not sworn when such question was in no way raised in the court below: State v. Schlagerl, 19-169.

Objections to evidence, what sufficient, see notes to § 4039.

Objections to instructions, see notes to § 3996.

Special verdict: Objection that the answer to an interrogatory propounded to the jury is not sufficient cannot be first made on appeal: Timins v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 72-94.

The form of the judgment cannot be objected to for the first time upon appeal: Barlow v. Brock, 25-308.

Where there is but a general exception to a judgment below, and the court is not asked by motion or otherwise to correct it, the appellant will not be heard to allege objections to the form of the judgment on appeal: Robinson v. Keith, 25-321.

A motion to vacate an injunction cannot be first made after appeal: Bishop v. Carter, 29-165.

Motion non obstante: A question which can only be raised by motion for judgment non obstante veredicto cannot be first raised on appeal: Coonrod v. Benson, 2 G. Gr., 179.

Objections deemed waived: Objections not made in the court below will be considered waived, and the judgment in an action at law will not be reversed on appeal upon a point not presented to, nor passed upon by, the court below: Iowa Homestead Co. v. Duncombe, 51-525.

By pointing out specific objections a party is deemed to have waived any objections not pointed out: Des Moines Valley, etc., Ins. Co. v. Henderson, 38-446.

New arguments or authorities may be presented on appeal, although no new question can be raised: District T'p v. French, 40-601.

New reasons: Failure of the party objecting to the action of the lower court to urge a good reason in support of his point or objection will not prevent the supreme court from considering such reason and basing its action thereon: Bond v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 87-712.

The fact that the appellate court reaches its conclusions upon grounds different from those upon which the court below bases its judgment will have no effect as to such judgment if the conclusion reached is the same: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

All objections appearing of record may be urged: A party has the right to make, in the supreme court, all objections which legitimately arise on the record, whether made in the court below or not, except in cases where it is required that objections urged in the court below shall be stated in writing or made to appear of record: McGovern v. Keokuk Lumber Co., 61-265.

Therefore, held, that the question of the sufficiency of affidavits to support a motion for change of venue was properly before the supreme court on appeal, although no objection thereto appeared of record, the party appealing having duly excepted to the ruling on the motion: Ibid.

b. What the Record Must Show in Order that a Question May be Reviewed.

Final action: Where the abstract does not show what the final action of the court was, nor that any appeal has been taken, the court cannot determine the appeal: Pittman v. Pittman, 56-769.

A party complaining of erroneous rulings must make it appear from the record that judgment was rendered against him: Shannon v. Scott, 40-629.

The court cannot entertain an appeal unless the record presented shows that the court below entered a judgment or order from which an appeal may be taken: Tague v. Benner, 71-651.

Must show prejudice: The supreme court will not reverse a cause for error committed below unless it is affirmatively shown by the record that such error was actually prejudicial to appellant: Blackburn v. Powers, 40-681; Fulmer v. Fulmer, 22-231.

Matters not of record: Evidence, instructions, etc., not made part of the record will not be considered on appeal: Daniels v. Langdon, 52-741.

Where the supreme court cannot determine from the record what issues are before it, the case may be remanded, in order that the parties may replead: Lyon v. Tevis, 8-79.

How fully the evidence must be set out: In order that rulings on the admission or exclusion of evidence may be reviewed upon appeal, it is not necessary that all the evidence be presented in the record. It is only necessary that the record shall show the rulings admitting or excluding the evidence, the purport of the evidence so passed upon, and the ground of objection: Smith v. Johnson, 45-308; Brooks v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73-179.

The evidence in full is required in law actions only when, as an objection to the judgment, it is urged that the verdict is not supported by the testimony. Upon no other question would it be proper to take all the evidence to the supreme court on appeal. The supreme court will pass upon the correctness of instructions or rulings as to the admission or rejection of testimony when the bill of exceptions contains a statement that there was evidence tending to prove the facts to which the instructions are applicable, or states evidence, not necessarily in full, about which the question as to the admissibility of evidence arises: Kelleher v. Keokuk, 60-473.

A general statement in a bill of exceptions as to what the party sought to establish, without a statement of the exact evidence offered, will not be sufficiently definite to enable the court to pass upon an exception to a ruling on such evidence: Cousins v. Westcott, 15-253.

A statement in a bill of exceptions that it contains the substance of the evidence is not sufficient where it is necessary, in order to authorize the court to pass on the action of the court below, that it shall have before it all the evidence in the case: Thompson v. Mumma, 21-65; Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Green, 21-335; Lea v. Roads, 22-408; McKenzie v. Kitler, 27-254; Jemison v. Gray, 29-537; Davis v. Card, 33-592; Hubbard v. Epperson, 40-408; Walker v. Beaver, 50-504.

Where the bill of exceptions, after setting out evidence, continued, "being all the evidence offered by the plaintiff to sustain the issue on his part," held, that it sufficiently appeared that the evidence was all in the record to enable the supreme court to review the ruling of the lower court on a motion for nonsuit: Rowan v. Lamb, 4 G. Gr., 468.

Where it is necessary that the record shall be shown to contain all the evidence, such fact must appear from the judge's certificate and not merely from his reference to such a certificate made by the short-hand reporter: Walker v. Beaver, 50-504.

When insufficiency of evidence is relied upon as ground for new trial in the lower court, and the motion is overruled, the ruling cannot be reviewed unless the record contains all the evidence: State v. Lyon, 10-340; State v. Hochenberry, 11-269; Parsons v. Chapman, 11-294; McCool v. Galena & C. U. R. Co., 17-461; Garber v. Clayton County, 19-29; Beal v. Stone, 22-447; McKenzie v. Kitler, 27-254; Smith v. Cedar Falls & M. R. R. Co., 30-244; Davis v. Card, 33-592; Iverson v. Union Pacific R. Co., 59-243; Crystal v. Des Moines, 65-502.

The supreme court will not disturb a verdict, on appeal, for insufficiency of evidence to support it, if it has not all the evidence before it: Barker v. Kuhn, 38-392.

Where the evidence on which the court below acted is not before the supreme court, the action of the lower court cannot be inquired into so far as it purports to be based upon the evidence: Skiff v. Mershon, 7-79.

Impeaching evidence: In order that the action of the lower court in rejecting evidence offered to impeach a witness may be reviewed, the record should show the evidence given by the witness and what it was proposed to prove for the purpose of impeachment: Shephard v. Brenton, 20-41.

Rulings upon evidence; prejudice must appear: Where the answers to questions objected to, or sought to be elicited by such questions, are not shown by the record, the supreme court cannot review the ruling of the lower court in sustaining or overruling such objections. It must affirmatively appear that the action of the court, even if erroneous, was prejudicial: Mays v. Deaver, 1-216; Speers v. Fortner, 6-553; Haman v. Hale, 7-153; Willey v. Hall, 8-62; Lucas v. Jones, 44-298.

When evidence is admitted over objection thereto: In reviewing the action of the court in overruling an objection to a question, the material inquiry is not whether an improper question was asked, but whether improper testimony was received, and error cannot be made to appear until it is shown that the question objected to was answered, and what the answer was: Thurston v. Cavenor, 8-155; Campbell v. Chamberlain, 10-337; State v. Keeler, 28-551; Manny v. Woods, 33-265; Mosier v. Vincent, 34-478.

It must be made to appear what the witness testified to, and that such testimony was material and prejudicial: Oliver v. Depew, 14-490; Bradley v. Kavanagh, 12-273.

Where a record is admitted over an objection thereto, but the record is not made to appear in the bill of exceptions, the ruling cannot be reviewed: Oliver v. Depew, 14-490.

The record must disclose facts affirmatively showing that the admission of evidence over objection was error to the prejudice of the party objecting, to warrant reversal on that ground: Green v. Cochran, 43-544; Higley v. Newell, 28-516.

But where evidence is admitted over the objection of a party it will be presumed that the court considered it, and that, if it was erroneously admitted, prejudice resulted: Leasman v. Nicholson, 59-259.

When evidence is excluded: In order to determine whether prejudice has resulted to a party by the exclusion of evidence offered by him, the answers, or the facts proposed to be proved by the witness in response to the question asked, must be made to appear. Unless prejudice be thus shown, the error in sustaining objection to the question or the evidence offered will not be ground of reversal: Jenks v. Knott's Mexican Silver Mining Co., 58-549; Gronan v. Kukukuk, 59-18; Bays v. Hunt, 60-251; Kelleher v. Keokuk, 60-473; Klaman v. Malvin, 61-752; Shellito v. Sampson, 61-40; State v. Montgomery, 65-483.

The court must be advised by the record of the character of the proposed evidence and the facts which the party desiring to introduce it claimed would have been established by it: Votaw v. Diehl, 62-676; Paddleford v. Cook, 74-433.

When the purpose of a question is not disclosed by the record, the supreme court will not interfere with the ruling of the court below in excluding it: State v. Ross, 21-467.

Where the bill of exceptions is so indefinite and uncertain that it cannot be determined what the evidence excluded was to which objection is made, the supreme court will not, on appeal, pass upon the correctness of the action of the lower court: Hunt v. Daniels, 15-146.

A ruling of the court in refusing to require the production of a written instrument cannot be reviewed on appeal unless it appears that the instrument would have tended to establish the issue on the part of the party calling for it: Greenough v. Sheldon, 9-503.

Error of the court in excluding evidence will be deemed without prejudice unless the record shows that such evidence was material to the issues: Atkins v. Anderson, 63-739.

But if the record states what the evidence rejected tended to prove, such statement will be presumed to be true, and will enable the appellate court to determine whether such rejection, if erroneous, was material: Spaulding v. Adams, 63-437; Chase v. Scott, 33-309.

If the materiality of the evidence sought to be introduced is apparent on the face of the question asked, it is not necessary that it appear that the party seeking to introduce it state what he expects to prove thereby; but if this is not apparent, the party seeking to introduce the evidence must state what he expects to prove, and thus make the materiality of the question appear: Mitchell v. Harcourt, 62-349; Votaw v. Diehl, 62-676; Kuhn v. Gustafson, 73-633.

Review of instructions: What record must show, see notes to § 3996.

Findings of fact by the court below will be presumed correct and supported by the evidence, if the evidence is not all before the supreme court: Napier v. Wiseman, 3 G. Gr., 246; Hamilton v. Walters, 3 G. Gr., 556; Rosseau v. Fine, 1-98; Snell v. Kimmell, 8-281.

An order of the lower court will not be interfered with on appeal where the supreme court has not before it all the evidence upon which the lower court acted: Krause v. Hampton, 11-457; Adams v. Peck, 14-508.

The granting of a new trial on the ground of newly-discovered evidence will not be interfered with on appeal if it does not affirmatively appear that all the evidence on which it was granted is before the appellate court: Souden v. Craig, 20-477; S. C., 21-580.

Statement of judge as to evidence: Where a judge, in overruling a motion for a new trial, certifies that the newly-discovered evidence on which a new trial is asked is cumulative, such statement will be regarded, on appeal, as true, when the evidence itself is not before the court: Seymour v. Hoyt, 23-19.

A judgment will not be interfered with, on appeal, because not warranted by the evidence, unless all the evidence is before the appellate court: Green v. McFaddin, 5-549.

IV. WHAT WILL AND WHAT WILL NOT WARRANT REVERSAL.

a. Presumptions of Regularity.

In favor of action below: Every reasonable presumption is to be entertained in favor of the ruling of the court below and the correctness of its judgment: Davis v. Moffit, 4 G. Gr., 92; Hendrie v. Rippey, 9-351; David v. Leslie, 14-84; Morris v. Steacie, 62-228; Hintrager v. Kiene, 62-605; Bower v. Webber, 69-286; In re Will of Norman, 72-84.

This presumption in favor of the action of the court below will prevail unless overcome by something appearing of record: Brobst v. Thompson, 4 G. Gr., 135; Lawson v. Campbell, 4 G. Gr., 413; Speers v. Fortner, 6-553; Scott v. Ford, 56-370.

The presumption is in favor of the action of the lower court, and it will be interfered with only where it affirmatively appears that some prejudicial error has been committed: Hunt v. Higman, 70-406.

If in any view the action of the court can be sustained, the presumption in favor of its correctness will prevail: Arneson v. Thorstad, 72-145.

An appellate court is always bound to exercise presumptions in favor of the judgment it reviews, unless it is shown that the law and justice have been violated by such judgment: State v. Hopkins, 67-285.

Where the record does not show what the issues in the case were, such issues will be presumed as would render the action of the court proper: Holland v. Union County, 68-56.

It will be presumed that there was sufficient testimony to support the judgment rendered unless the contrary appears: Brady v. Malone, 4-146; Hefferman v. Burt, 7-320; Jennings v. Conn, 11-542; Willet v. Millman, 61-123; Phillips v. Phillips, 46-703.

It will be presumed, in favor of the finding of the court, that lawful evidence authorizing such finding was introduced and considered: Henry v. Evans, 58-560.

The supreme court will not, for the purpose of reversing a cause, presume that the proof established a state of facts which would render the decision of the court below erroneous, if a state of facts can be supposed under which such decision would be correct: Crane v. Ellis, 31-510.

Where the record shows some evidence on which a ruling could be supported, it will be upheld, no evidence to the contrary appearing: Blythe v. Blythe, 25-266.

Where there is nothing in the bill of exceptions showing the existence of grounds on which a motion for new trial is based, it will be presumed in support of the action of the court in overruling such motion that such grounds were not shown to exist: Keys v. Francis, 28-321.

Where no finding of facts is made the presumption is that the court found such facts as will justify the conclusion of law, and the conclusion will not be held erroneous unless there is a finding of facts from which error affirmatively appears, or error appears otherwise from the record: Oskaloosa v. Pinkerton, 51-697.

Where it does not appear upon what facts the decision of the lower court was based, such a finding of facts will be presumed as will support the decision: Fouts v. Pierce, 64-71.

Where the judgment below is based upon an authentication of a judgment from another state, which is insufficient, the presumption will be entertained that there was other evidence sufficiently showing such judgment, unless the contrary appears: Clemmer v. Cooper, 24-183.

Where it appears that attorneys' fees were taxed, after rendition of judgment in the case, as they might properly be, it will be presumed that such taxation was made upon proper evidence being introduced, although it does not appear that there was any such evidence: Kelso v. Fitzgerald, 67-266.

In the absence of a showing in the record to the contrary, the supreme court will presume that there was before the lower court sufficient evidence to justify the finding that defendant had been duly and legally served with process: Kent v. Coquillard, 67-500.

Where appellants were defaulted, and the record did not show what proof was introduced to sustain the bill, held, that it would be presumed there was enough evidence to support the averment upon which judgment was rendered: Senple v. Lee, 13-304.

Where the decree recites that certain matters essential to the jurisdiction of the court were made to appear, it will be presumed on the appeal that they were made to appear in the proper manner and that the court rendering such decree performed its duty: Jewett v. Miller, 12-85.

The supreme court will presume in favor of the regularity of the proceedings below, even though such proceedings are not shown by the record: Dixon v. State, 3-416.

Where the record showed that the trial was not by jury, held, that it would be presumed that a jury was waived, although that fact did not appear: Hawkins v. Rice, 40-435.

Error must affirmatively appear: Error will not be presumed, and the party alleging the existence of error to his prejudice must make it affirmatively appear: Hudson v. Mathews, Mor., 94; Issett v. Oglevie, 9-313; Way v. Lamb, 15-79; Carpenter v. Parker, 23-450; Messer v. Reginnitter, 32-312; Stewart v. Bishop, 33-584; State v. Foster, 40-303; Thompson v. Winnebago County, 48-155; Pottawattamie County v. Marshall County, 56-410.

Must be clearly manifest: Wherever error is complained of it should be made to appear not only affirmatively but with reasonable certainty: Randolph Bank v. Armstrong, 11-515; Gantz v. Clark, 31-254.

Presumption in favor of record: Where an abstract showed an interlineation with a pen, and it appeared that the finding of the court below would not have been justified unless the allegation of the petition was such as shown by the abstract as amended by the interlineation, held that, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, it would be presumed that the abstract as thus amended was correct: Mahaska County v. Ruan, 45-328.

Defect in the record: Error cannot be presumed from mere omission or defect in the transcript. It must appear affirmatively. Unless it does so appear, the presumption of law is that the proceedings of the court below were legal and proper: Mackemer v. Benner, 1 G. Gr., 157.

Where a demurrer to a portion of the counts of an answer was sustained, and no action as to other counts appeared of record, but they might properly have been stricken out, held, that it would be presumed they were stricken out and that the action of the court was proper: District T^op v. Smith, 39-9.

Presumption as to pleadings: Where there was a cross-petition, and the case was tried as though a reply thereto had been filed, held, that the court would presume there was such reply, although none appeared in the record: Hervey v. Savery, 48-313.

Where ruling does not appear: If it appears that a motion or demurrer was filed in the lower court, but it does not appear that any ruling was made thereon, it will be presumed that such motion or demurrer was waived: Sigler v. Woods, 1-177; Busick v. Bumm, 3-63; Boardman v. Beckwith, 18-292; State v. Ross, 21-467; First Nat. Bank v. Carpenter, 41-518; Moore v. Gilbert, 46-508.

Incidental rulings: The presumption in favor of the correctness of the rulings of the court below is especially applicable to those questions which are ever recurring and depend for their solution upon the discretion of the court: Clinton Nat. Bank v. Torry, 30-85; Thompson v. Burulam, 35-411.

Acts done in court in the progress of the case are presumed to be in accordance with law unless the contrary is made to appear. A presumption as to the regularity of the proceedings of the lower court will always be exercised, and error in such proceedings must be affirmatively shown to warrant a reversal: McCue v. Wapello County, 56-698.

Facts presumed: The presumption to be entertained in support of the ruling of the lower court requires that, if it would be correct under any presumable state of facts not inconsistent with the pleadings and the record, it shall be upheld: Ward's Heirs v. Cochran, 36-432; Johnson v. Mautz, 69-710; Stone v. Hawkkeye Ins. Co., 68-737; Freher v. Geeseka, 5-472.

Where sufficient ground appears upon which the judgment of the court below can be upheld, it will be presumed that the judgment was rendered on such ground: Frederick v. Mitchell, 1-100; State v. Gibbs, 39-318; Steel v. Miller, 40-402.

One of several grounds: If there be several grounds upon which a ruling may have been based, it will be upheld if any of such grounds are sufficient to support it, and if, among several insufficient grounds, one would be sufficient under certain conditions that may have existed, the supreme court will presume that such conditions existed and that the ruling was based thereon: Worthington v. Olden, 31-419.

Where a case is submitted to the jury on two issues, and a verdict is returned in favor of one of the parties which is sustainable on one of the issues upon the evidence introduced, but not by any evidence in support of the other, it will be presumed that the verdict was upon the issue upon which there was evidence supporting it, and any error of the court below in refusing to take the other issue from the jury will be deemed to have been error without prejudice: Calder v. Smalley, 66-219.

Where an instruction was correct as to one question of fact involved and incorrect as to another, and it appeared that, under the evidence, the second question could not have been found as assumed in the instruction without the verdict being contrary to the evidence, held, that it would be presumed the verdict was found upon facts in harmony with the first branch of the instruction, and the error as to the other branch was without prejudice: State v. Sanders, 30-582.

If no ground can be discovered nor is pointed out upon which the action of the court can be upheld, the presumption of regularity will be overcome: Baird v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61-359.

Where but one ground of objection is urged it must be presumed the ruling was on that ground, though erroneous: Emery v. Emery, 54-106.

Admission of evidence: If evidence may have been admissible under some aspects which the case may have assumed, and all the evidence is not before the court, it will be presumed that there was a state of facts authorizing the admission of the evidence objected to: Chase v. Scott, 33-309.

Where it appears that evidence was excluded, but it does not appear upon what ground, it will be presumed that there was some ground therefor, where the evidence is not all before the court: Cook v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 37-426.

If objection to evidence is sustained, and the record does not show the ground of the objection, if the evidence is vulnerable to any objection, it will be presumed that was the one made and sustained: Hoben v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 20-562.

Where no other evidence than that appearing in the record could legitimately have been presented in the court below, it will not be presumed that the action of the court was based on anything not appearing of record: McGovern v. Keokuk Lumber Co., 61-265.

Where the evidence is not all before the court, the action of the court in dissolving an injunction will not be reversed, but it will be presumed that a sufficient showing was made to justify the action of the court below: Gray v. Montgomery, 17-66.

Where the evidence is not all before the court it will be presumed that there was evidence sufficient to support the verdict: State v. Pitman, 38-252.

The same presumptions of regularity obtain in favor of the proceedings in a case in equity as in an action at law. Unless the contrary appears it will be presumed that the decree was authorized by the evidence: Garner v. Pomroy, 11-149.

Where the evidence upon which the court below has acted is not all before the supreme court, it will be presumed that the action of the lower court was proper under the evidence: State v. Postlewait, 14-446; McIntosh v. Kilbourne, 37-420; Laughlin v. Main, 63-580; State v. Drorsky, 73-484.

Instructions: As to the presumption in regard to giving or refusing instructions, see notes to § 3996.

b. What Errors Deemed Prejudicial.

Exceptions on immaterial point not considered: See § 4043 and notes.

Errors waived: That amending or pleading over waives error in ruling on demurrer, see § 3860 and notes.

Application by a party for the reconsideration by the court of its ruling on a motion for a new trial will not waive error committed in such ruling and prevent the party from taking advantage thereof on appeal: Anderson v. Cahill, 65-252.

Error in former action: Where suit was brought against several defendants for damages arising from illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, and the owner of the property in which the business was conducted was made a joint defendant, and a judgment by default was rendered against one of the sellers, the owner asking to be allowed to defend for such party; and afterward, a change of venue being first had as to the owner, judgment was rendered against him making the first judgment a lien against his property, held, that he could not on appeal in the latter case raise any error committed in refusing him leave to defend in the former case: Putney v. O'Brien, 53-117.

Where justice has been done: Where it appears that justice has been done, and that a new trial would result in the same verdict or the same judgment, the action of the court in refusing to grant a new trial on the ground of errors of law committed will not be reversed on appeal: Dawson v. Wisner, 11-6.

If the court below has erred in the decision of a legal proposition, and the supreme court can see that with the necessary correction the verdict on the second trial must be the same as the first, then the granting of a new trial by the lower court might be reversed; but if it is not manifest that upon such correction of error the second trial would result as the first, the action of the lower court in granting a new trial will not be interfered with: Braddy v. Lumery, 11-29.

While a verdict will not be sustained that is clearly against erroneous instructions, yet, in a particular case, as the court below did not so regard it, and it appeared that substantial justice was done by the verdict, held, that it would not be reversed for that reason alone: Allison v. King, 25-56.

Judgment will not be reversed because of an alleged erroneous instruction by the court, when the judgment is more favorable to the appellant than a fair construction of the evidence justifies: McNally v. Shobe, 22-49.

Where the jury were not sufficiently instructed as to the measure of damages, but it appeared that their verdict was not beyond the just sum that plaintiff ought to recover as lawful damage, held, that the judgment should not be reversed: Cooper v. Central R. of Iowa, 44-134.

A judgment will be affirmed upon appeal if it is correct, although the reasons given for it by the court below may have been erroneous: Jamison v. Perry, 38-14; Whiting v. Root, 52-292.

A cause will not be reversed because of an inconsiderable error in the amount of the judgment rendered: Callanan v. Shaw, 24-441; Keokuk County v. Howard, 42-29.

Remission of excess: Where a judgment is rendered for an amount in excess of that due, but on appeal the successful party offers to remit the excess over the proper amount, the judgment will not be reversed: Morrill v. Miller, 3 G. Gr., 104.

Failure to give nominal damages not ground for reversal: The supreme court will not reverse a judgment because nominal damages were not allowed, even though it appears that the appellant was entitled thereto: Watson v. Van Meter, 43-76; Rowley v. Jewett, 56-492; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Findley, 59-591; Case Threshing Machine Co. v. Haven, 65-359; Watson v. Moeller, 63-161; Wire v. Foster, 62-114.

An omission to assess nominal damages, where there is a mere technical right of recovery, is not ground for reversal: Norman v. Winch, 65-263.

Although a case will not be reversed where the only right involved is that to nominal damages, yet if it does not appear that no more than nominal damages could be recovered, the refusal of the court to allow any recovery may be reversed: Madison County v. Tullis, 69-720.

c. Review of Ruling Granting or Refusing New Trial.

Discretion of lower court not interfered with on appeal: See notes to § 4044.

Conflict in evidence: The action of the lower court in overruling a motion for a new trial based on the ground that the verdict is against the evidence will not be interfered with, on appeal, if the conflict in the testimony is great, and its weight is not clearly against the verdict: Ackley v. Berkeley, 22-226.

Where there is a conflict in the evidence the action of the court below in overruling a motion for a new trial will not be disturbed, on appeal, unless a clear case of abuse of discretion is made to appear: Hubbell v. Ream, 31-289.

Where there is a conflict in the evidence the supreme court will not interfere with the action of the lower court in refusing to set aside the verdict on the ground that it is not supported by the evidence: Chambers v. Brown, 69-213.

Where the evidence is conflicting, and the court below, which heard the evidence, with full opportunity for observing the manner and appearance of the witnesses, has overruled a motion for a new trial on the ground that it is not supported by the evidence, the supreme court will not interfere: Snyder v. Eldredge, 31-129; Mahaney v. Bell, 42-383.

The discretion of the trial court in overruling a motion for a new trial on the ground that the verdict is contrary to the evidence will not be reversed where there is a conflict in the testimony: Russ v. Steamboat War Eagle, 14-363; Brockman v. Berryhill, 16-183; Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Green, 22-508; Pierce v. Walker, 23-424; McCabe v. Knapp, 23-308; Callanan v. Shaw, 24-441; Schrimper v. Heilman, 24-505; Hull v. Alexander, 26-569; Sherman v. Western Stage Co., 24-515, 554; Garland v. Wholeham, 26-185; Todd v. Branner, 30-439; Snyder v. Nelson, 31-238; Bergert v. Davenport City R. Co., 34-571.

Verdict against manifest justice: When the court conscientiously believes that a verdict is against the truth or the weight of the submitted evidence a new trial should unhesitatingly be ordered; but to justify such interference the mind should be brought irresistibly to the conclusion that the verdict was not the result of a free, sound and unbiased exercise of judgment on the part of the jury, and that manifest injustice would result if the verdict is permitted to stand: McKay v. Thorington, 15-25.

Whenever a verdict is clearly, not doubtfully, against the manifest justice of the case, it is the duty of the trial judge unhesitatingly to set it aside; but where there is a conflict of evidence, and the jury, being clearly charged as to the law, have found a verdict which the trial court has refused to set aside, the supreme court will not interfere: Smith v. Williams, 23-28.

Manifest error: The error in overruling a motion for new trial must be clearly manifest to warrant a reversal: Bellamy v. Doud, 11-285.

Verdict against immaterial evidence: To justify the granting of a new trial on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of the evidence, such want of evidence must relate to a material issue legitimately raised by the pleadings. The refusal of the lower court to grant a new trial when the objection is that the verdict is contrary to immaterial evidence, though admitted without objection, will not be reversed or disturbed on appeal: Parker v. Hendrie, 3-263; Scott v. Morse, 54-732.

Verdict supported by evidence: It is not the province of the supreme court to overrule both the jury and the lower court in a conclusion reached by them as between conflicting evidence: Sloan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 62-723.

Where the verdict finds support in the evidence the supreme court will not reverse the action of the court below in refusing to grant a new trial, although it believes that the preponderance of evidence is the other way: Johnson v. Chicago, E. I. & P. R. Co., 58-348.

Excessive verdict: The court below, having a full opportunity of understanding whether the verdict is excessive, should fearlessly assume the responsibility of setting it aside on that ground, but the supreme court will be very reluctant to disturb verdicts in this respect: Bower v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 42-546.

Where, in an action for personal injuries, the jury has rendered a verdict which the court below has refused to set aside as excessive, the supreme court will not, ordinarily, interfere: Brown v. Jefferson County, 16-339.

What the record must show: The supreme court cannot undertake to say that the lower court has abused its discretion, either in granting or refusing a new trial, unless the whole case is presented to it by the record: Barker v. Brown, 15-70.

Action of lower court overruled: If the verdict is clearly in conflict with the evidence, and works manifest injustice, the refusal of the trial court to grant a new trial may be overruled on appeal: Sadler v. Bean, 38-684.

Where there is no doubt as to the incorrectness of the verdict, the supreme court will grant relief therefrom by overruling the action of the lower court in refusing a new trial: Martin v. Orndorff, 20-217; Lester v. Sallack, 31-477.

Where material findings of fact in a special verdict are wholly unsupported by the evidence, and the court below has overruled a motion for new trial, the supreme court will reverse the judgment: McCarty v. James, 62-257.

Passion or prejudice: But such decision will not be disturbed unless so barren of support as to warrant the finding that it was the result of passion or prejudice: Schermer v. Gendt, 52-742.

Verdict not the result of free and unbiased judgment: Where the mind is brought inevitably to the conclusion that the verdict was not the result of a free, honest and unbiased exercise of judgment on the testimony submitted, and that manifest injustice will result if judgment is rendered thereon, the court below should grant a new trial; and where such a case is made clearly apparent to the supreme court a new trial will be ordered, though refused by the court below: Jourdan v. Reed, 1-135; Fawcett v. Woods, 5-100; Byington v. Woodward, 9-360.

Discretion subject to review: An error of the court in granting or refusing a new trial on a legal proposition is reviewable on appeal with no more presumption in its favor than a ruling made in any other stage of the case: Byington v. Woodward, 9-360. And see notes to § 4044.

Where the court below in granting or refusing a new trial misstates a legal proposition it is as much the subject of revision as any other question. In such cases the granting or refusing the motion is not a question of discretion, but is to be determined upon the law applicable to the case: Stewart v. Ewbank, 3-191; Riley v. Monohan, 26-507.

While in most cases the question of the granting of a new trial is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and such discretion will not be interfered with, yet if the grounds for a new trial appear of record and come within the well-recognized rules of law the action of the court in refusing a new trial may be reversed: Jones v. Fenimore, 1 G. Gr., 134; Shaw v. Sweeney, 2 G. Gr., 587; Humphreys v. Hoyt, 4 G. Gr., 245; In re Will of Coffman, 12-491.

Other grounds for new trial: Where the ground for new trial is accident or surprise, or that injustice has been done, the trial court is vested with a large discretion, which will not be interfered with on appeal unless the error affirmatively appears: Hull v. Denstinger, 61-240.

The action of a trial court in passing upon misconduct of counsel as a ground for new trial will be sustained on appeal unless it clearly appears to have been erroneous: Sunberg v. Babcock, 66-515.

Whether a new trial should be granted for misconduct of the jury is left largely to the sound discretion of the trial court, which is in a much better position to determine whether the rights of the parties have been affected by such misconduct than the supreme court can be, and if the lower court has determined that there should be another trial on that ground, its discretion will not be interfered with unless it is made to appear very clearly that there has been an abuse of discretion: Perry v. Coltingham, 63-41.

Where, upon the allegations of misconduct of the jury made as a ground for a new trial, there is a conflict in the evidence, the finding of the court in ruling upon such motion must have the same force as its finding upon any other question of fact arising in an action at law: Watson v. Stotts, 68-639.

The supreme court will not interfere with the action of the court below in refusing to grant a new trial on the ground of misconduct of the jury where there is a conflict in the evidence as to the nature of such misconduct: Todd v. Brunner, 30-439.

A new trial will not be granted on appeal when a witness has given material evidence without being sworn, unless it be shown that the party complaining, or his attorney, did not know of the fact until after the verdict: Riley v. Monohan, 26-507.

Where new trial is granted: An order granting a new trial may be reviewed: Stewart v. Ewbank, 3-191; Cook v. Sypher, 3-484; Newell v. Sanford, 10-396.

But the supreme court will exercise a presumption in favor of the correctness of the ruling of the court below, and will not interfere with an order granting a new trial where it does not affirmatively appear that the action is erroneous: Boarman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 32-391.

It is a constant practice in the supreme court to refuse to disturb the action of the court below when a new trial is granted, although the ruling of the lower court would also have been upheld if the new trial had been refused: Ibid.; McKay v. Thorington, 15-25.

When the trial court determines that the verdict is contrary to the evidence, and ought to be set aside on that ground, the case must be a very clear one to warrant an appellate court in interfering with its action: Moran v. Harris, 63-390.

Where the trial judge has determined that the fair administration of the law demands that a new trial should be granted for any cause which the law recognizes as a ground for a new trial, his action will be interfered with on appeal only when it is shown that he has abused the discretion with which the law vests him: Loyers v. Winch, 65-168.

The action of the court in setting aside a verdict and granting a new trial will not be interfered with where it does not appear that the discretion reposed in the trial court has been abused or erroneously exercised: Laverenz v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 53-321.

Where it appears that the court below, with full knowledge of all the circumstances transpiring at the trial, has ordered a new trial, the supreme court will not interfere therewith, unless error in the action of the court is made affirmatively to appear: Finley v. David, 7-3.

The supreme court seldom interferes with a ruling of the court below in granting a new trial, and would not be justified in doing so except in a clear case: Lytton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 69-336.

A stronger case should be made to justify the interposition of the supreme court when a new trial has been granted than where it has been refused: Ruhl v. McDonald, 7-90; Newell v. Sanford, 10-396; Shepherd v. Brenton, 15-84; Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Green, 21-335; Chapman v. Wilkinson, 22-541; White v. Poorman, 24-105; Roberts v. Jones, 30-525; Forney v. Ralls, 30-559; Pickering v. Kirkpatrick, 32-163; Boarman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 32-391; Tegeler v. Jones, 33-231; New York Piano Forte Co. v. Mueller, 38-552; Howell v. Snyder, 39-610; Conklin v. Dubuque, 54-571.

Where the trial court has set aside the verdict and granted a new trial, the supreme court will not be inclined to set aside the ruling on appeal: Robinson v. Bacon, 24-409.

Where a court grants a new trial on the ground that the jury were confused and misled by the instructions, the supreme court will not interfere: Reeves v. Royal, 2 G. Gr., 451.

An order granting a motion for a new trial will not be disturbed on appeal when the grounds alleged are fairly supported and there is nothing to show abuse of discretion: Sanders v. Clark, 22-275.

While it is true that a stronger showing should be made to justify an interposition of the supreme court when a new trial has been granted than when refused, yet, where the court in ordering a new trial misapplies a legal proposition, such ruling should be reviewed where made upon motion for new trial, the same as upon the ruling on any other legal question, and in so doing the discretion of the trial court as to granting new trials is not interfered with: Mehan v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55-305.

No discretion is reposed in the court in determining whether or not evidence which is relied on to entitle the party to a new trial on the ground of newly-discovered evidence is cumulative, and a ruling of the court in granting a new trial upon the showing as to such evidence will be reviewed as readily as though the court had refused to grant the new trial: Manson v. Ware, 63-345.

If the verdict is contrary to instructions, and the lower court has granted a new trial on that ground, its action will not be disturbed on appeal, nor the instructions given be reviewed. It is the duty of the jury to regard the instructions as the law, and find a verdict accordingly, whether they be right or wrong: Caffrey v. Groome, 10-548; Savery v. Busick, 11-487; Jewett v. Smart, 11-505; Taylor v. Cook, 14-501; Porter v. Thomson, 22-391.

Where, under the evidence, it is apparent that the jury has disregarded an instruction of the court, the supreme court will reverse the action of the lower court in failing to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial on that ground: Nichols v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 69-154.

And further as to duty of jury to follow the instructions, see notes to § 3996.

The action of the lower court in setting aside a verdict will not, in general, be interfered with on appeal on the ground that it is not sustained by the evidence: Engs v. Priest, 65-232.

Abuse of discretion must appear: Where a new trial is granted by the lower court on the ground that the verdict is not sufficiently supported by the evidence, the action of such court in determining such question will not be disturbed on appeal unless it appears that there has been an abuse of discretion in such ruling: Hill v. Denstinger, 61-240; Stewart v. Dunlap, 61-243; Conklin v. Dubuque, 54-571; Pickering v. Kirkpatrick, 32-163; Able v. Frazier, 43-175; McNair v. McConber, 15-368.

And where the verdict has been set aside by the court below as not supported by the evidence, and a new trial granted, it will require a stronger showing to warrant the interference of the appellate court than when a new trial asked on similar grounds has been refused: Jenkins v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 32-97.

Where the verdict or the report of the referee is set aside by the court below, the supreme court will reluctantly interfere, and will do so only when there is nothing found in the record to support the ruling: Lyons v. Harris, 73-292.

Action of the court in sustaining a motion for a new trial on the ground of surprise will not be reversed unless the supreme court is well satisfied that such discretion has been abused: Schumaker v. Gelpcke, 11-84.

Conclusive preponderance of evidence: To authorize the reversal of the decision of the court below setting aside a verdict on account of insufficiency of evidence, there should appear such conclusive preponderance of evidence in its support as would show that injustice would be done: Worthington v. Olden, 31-419; Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Green, 21-335.

The case must be very clear to warrant the appellate court in interfering with the action of the trial court in setting aside a verdict as contrary to the evidence: Boran v. Harris, 63-390.

Error and abuse of discretion must be made to appear to justify a reversal of such action of the lower court: Brett v. Bassett, 63-340.

Excessive damages: The supreme court will hesitate long before interfering with the action of the trial court in setting aside a verdict on the ground that the damages found by the jury are excessive and appear to have been given under the influence of passion and prejudice: White v. Beck, 64-122.

Weight of evidence; manifest injustice: While there is no question as to the right of the supreme court to set aside a verdict and award a new trial when the verdict is against the weight of evidence or the truth of the case, yet, to justify such interference, the mind should be brought irresistibly to the conclusion that the verdict was not the result of a free, sound and unbiased exercise of judgment on the part of the jury, and that manifest injustice would result if the verdict should be permitted to stand: McKay v. Thorington, 15-25.

Mistake as to legal proposition: The discretion with which the court is clothed as to granting a new trial is a legal discretion, and its exercise must accord with the rules of law. If a new trial is granted upon insufficient cause, or for reasons in conflict with the law, such action will be regarded as an abuse of the discretion of the court, and will be reversed on appeal with the same freedom as if made at any other stage of the trial: Ruble v. McDonald, 7-90; Shepherd v. Brenton, 15-84; Stockwell v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 43-470.

Although it will require a stronger case to warrant the supreme court in reversing the action of the court below where a new trial has been granted than where it has been refused, yet, if the evidence is clearly and explicitly supported by the verdict, the action of the lower court in granting a new trial may be reversed: Cedar Falls & M. R. Co. v. Rich, 33-113.

Concurring verdicts: Where several trials have resulted in the same verdict and the trial court has refused to set the last one aside as against the evidence, it would require a very strong case to justify an interference by the appellate court: Burlington Gas Light Co. v. Greene, 28-289; Kuss v. Steamboat War Eagle, 14-363; Terpenning v. Gallup, 8-74; Hollenbeck v. Marshalltown, 62-21.

Where concurring verdicts have been rendered and the last one is allowed to stand by the trial court, this fact will authorize the presumption on the part of the supreme court that another trial would result in the same way: Penn v. McLaughlin, 36-538.

However, a second verdict concurring with the previous one which has been set aside as against the evidence, by no means concludes the court from again granting a new trial, and especially when the second application is based upon a different ground from that contained in the first: Jourdan v. Reed, 1-135.

Where a verdict was set aside because one juror had not concurred therein, and upon a subsequent trial the same verdict was rendered, held, that the fact that the result had been concurred in by twenty-three jurors would have much weight in sustaining the action of the court below in refusing to grant a new trial on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the evidence: State v. Cross, 12-66.

But if the jury have disregarded the law, or their verdict is fairly against the evidence, a new trial will be granted, even though it is a second verdict: Corbin v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 27-316.

d. Review of Verdict of Jury.

Not interfered with if supported by evidence: The supreme court will not on appeal disturb the verdict of the jury as against the evidence on a question of fact, if there is any evidence to support it: Harper v. Spofford, 46-11; Cole v. Coskery, 63-526; Walter v. Little, 66-431.

To warrant a reversal on that ground the verdict must be clearly against the weight of evidence: Booth v. Small, 25-177; Harper v. Madren, 21-407; Ayres v. Hartford Ins. Co., 21-193; Starker v. Luse, 33-595.

The supreme court interferences very reluctantly with the verdict of a jury, and never unless it is clearly unsupported by the evidence or has been otherwise improperly reached: Miller v. Mutual Benefit L. Ins. Co., 39-304.

Where the court instructed the jury that to warrant a verdict on a particular issue in behalf of one of the parties the evidence must be clear, satisfactory and conclusive in his favor, and a verdict was rendered for such party on such issue, held, that the supreme court would not on appeal set aside such verdict on the ground that the evidence was conflicting, if it appeared that the jury might, without bias or prejudice, have concluded that in their minds the evidence was of such a character: Hoadley v. Hammond, 63-599.

Where the evidence is conflicting the supreme court will not set aside the verdict on the ground that it is not supported by the evidence: Hall v. Hunter, 4 G. Gr., 539; Pilmer v. Branch of State Bank, 19-112; Jones v. Jones, 19-236; Eason v. Webster, 20-591; Reeves v. Reeves, 20-597; Ellwood v. Wilson, 21-523;

Law v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 32-534; Maxon v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 67-226; Cottrell v. Southwick, 71-50.

Where there is a conflict in the evidence and the verdict is not palpably against the weight of evidence, the appellate court will not interfere: Crabtree v. Messersmith, 19-179.

Where the determination of a question upon the evidence involves the credibility of contradictory witnesses, it is a matter peculiarly for the jury: Peck v. Hendershott, 14-40.

When the jury have determined the question as to the credit which should be given to the testimony of a particular witness, when such question fairly arises in the case, their finding will not be set aside: Cottrell v. Southwick, 71-50.

Honest and unbiased judgment of jury: Where there is a conflict in the evidence, the supreme court will not on appeal interfere with the verdict of a jury unless it is well satisfied of the insufficiency of the evidence to convince the reason, conscience and judgment of the triers: Todd v. Branner, 30-439.

Unless there is some foundation for the conclusion that the findings of the jury are not the result of honest, intelligent and unbiased judgment on their part, the supreme court will not disturb their verdict: Martin v. Algona, 40-390.

Preponderance not controlling: Where there is a mere conflict in the evidence, even though it strongly preponderates against the verdict, and there is a conviction in the minds of the supreme court that a different result would more nearly accord with justice, these facts are not sufficient to justify it in directing a new trial: Garretty v. Brazell, 34-100.

Where the evidence is conflicting the supreme court will not set aside the verdict of a jury, although they might have been better satisfied upon the evidence with a different result: White v. Clark, 39-338; Starker v. Luse, 33-595; Hyde v. Lookabill, 66-453.

A strong preponderance of evidence against the verdict, and a conviction that a different result would more nearly accord with justice, are not sufficient to justify the supreme court in ordering a new trial, where they are not satisfied from the absence of evidence to support a verdict that it was not the result of a free, honest, unbiased and intelligent exercise of judgment and conscience on the part of the jury, and that justice will fail if the verdict is not set aside: Garretty v. Brazell, 34-100; Parker v. Dubuque S. W. R. Co., 34-399; Myers v. Dresden, 40-660; Allison v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 42-274.

Question of negligence: If the conclusion of negligence can be, by the jury, reasonably drawn from the circumstances, such conclusion will not be interfered with on appeal, although the opposite conclusion appears to the court to be the more reasonable; but if the general result appears to be wrong, and the jury, as appears from their special findings, are unable to assign any certain or tangible ground for their conclusion, the court should interfere: Ford v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-627.

Question of fraud: It being the peculiar province of the jury to determine questions of fraud in fact, when alleged, the supreme court will not, on appeal, interfere with a judgment on the verdict in a case involving fraud, where it does not appear that the jurors could not, in the exercise of their unbiased and intelligent discretion, have properly found as they did: Votaw v. Diehl, 62-676.

Where the question is as to whether a transaction was fraudulent, the supreme court will not interfere with the verdict of the jury, who had the opportunity to see the witnesses and judge of their credibility, unless the evidence is so against the verdict as to raise a presumption of passion or prejudice on the part of the jury: Enneking v. Scholtz, 69-473.

Passion or prejudice must appear: Where there is a conflict in the evidence the supreme court will not set aside a verdict unless it appears that it is the result of passion or prejudice: Melhop v. Doan, 36-630; Moore v. Moore, 39-461; First Nat. Bank v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 40-572; Hull v. Bullou, 58-585; French v. Reel, 70-122; Gibson v. Fischer, 68-29.

To authorize a reversal on the ground that the verdict is against the evidence there must be such failure of proof as to raise the presumption that it was the result of passion or prejudice and not of an intelligent and honest exercise of discretion by the jury: McCormicks v. Fuller, 56-43.

Verdict set aside: It is with reluctance and caution that an appellate court interferes with the verdicts of juries. Where there is reasonable doubt, or a conflict of evidence, the verdict will be upheld; but if there is no such doubt or conflict, the duty to set aside the verdict is plain: and in the case under consideration the verdict was set aside: McAulich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20-338.

And in particular cases, held, that the verdict was so clearly contrary to the evidence that the judgment upon such verdict should be reversed: Martin v. Orndorff, 20-217; Lester v. Sallack, 31-477; Miller v. Mutual Benefit Ins. Co., 34-222.

Where there is an entire want of evidence to support or establish a fact essential to the verdict, a judgment based upon such verdict will be reversed on appeal: Carlin v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 37-316.

If the verdict is clearly unsupported by the evidence and appears to have been the result of passion or prejudice, the supreme court will not hesitate to reverse on that ground: Woodward v. Squires, 39-435.

The supreme court will reverse the case where, under the law as given the jury by the court, the verdict is contrary to the undisputed evidence: Eckerd v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 70-353.

Excessive verdict: A judgment will not be interfered with as excessive where it is within the province of the jury to determine under all the circumstances the amount that plaintiff is entitled to recover, as, for instance, where exemplary damages are allowable: Dynes v. Robinson, 11-137.

It is the province of the supreme court on appeal to set aside a verdict which is excessive and remand the case for trial by another jury. The court will, however, usually not make an absolute order remanding the case for another trial in such cases, but will allow plaintiff to elect whether he will take another trial or accept a certain amount which would not seem to the court to be open to the objection of being excessive: Cooper v. Mills County, 69-350.

Verdict contrary to instructions: A verdict in conflict with the instructions will be set aside on appeal without regard to their correctness. The instructions are the law of the case for the jury: Sullivan v. Otis, 39-329; Morse v. Johnson, 38-430; Cobb v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 38-601; Farley v. Budd, 14-289; Browne v. Hickie, 68-330. And see notes to § 3996.

If instructions are conflicting the verdict will not be set aside if in harmony with the correct instructions: Cobb v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 38-601.

Finding of facts by court, review of, see notes to § 3950.

Judgment of court on facts, review of, see notes to § 4070.

Findings of referee, review of, see notes to § 4028.

V. HEARING AND DETERMINATION OF APPEAL.

a. Dismissal or Affirmance.

For failure to file transcript, etc., see §§ 4410-4413.

Where appellant's right has terminated, see § 4442 and notes.

Other grounds: Where it did not appear that a general verdict had been found or that judgment had been rendered, held, that the appeal ought to be dismissed on motion: Martin v. State F. Ins. Co., 58-609.

The existence of the judgment from which the appeal is taken is a jurisdictional fact, and if the existence of such judgment does not appear from the abstract the appeal will be dismissed: Warder v. Schwartz, 65-170.

Affirmance or dismissal on motion will not be granted on the ground that the case is not triable de novo, and there is no assignment of errors. Such an objection can only be raised on final hearing: White v. Savery, 49-197.

An objection that the record, on appeal, does not sustain the errors assigned, can only be determined upon final hearing and not on motion: Balm v. Nunn, 63-641.

Cause remanded for repleading: When the record is in such condition that the supreme court cannot determine from the pleadings what issues are before it, the cause may be remanded in order that the parties may have an opportunity to replead: Lyon v. Tevis, 8-79.

Dismissal of appeal by appellant: The state may, as appellant, dismiss its appeal from a ruling of the lower court when it does not appear that such dismissal will prejudice the rights of the appellee: State v. Moriarty, 20-595.

Where a suit for mandamus was brought against the individuals composing the board of canvassers of an election to relocate a county seat (who were the county supervisors), and upon trial the mandamus was awarded, from which defendants appealed, held, that the appeal could not be dismissed in the supreme court upon motion of a subsequently elected board of supervisors, such board being merely the nominal party: State v. Covers, 22-343.

Affirmance without prejudice: It is competent for the supreme court, in the decision of a motion addressed to its discretion, to order the affirmance of the judgment without prejudice to the rights of the appellant to a new trial in the court below: White v. Poorman, 24-108.

Where a decree had been affirmed by reason of the defective condition of the record preventing a trial de novo, and afterward it was sought to have a re-investigation of the case upon a perfected record, held, that the decree could not be re-opened, but that, in view of the peculiar circumstances of the case, the court would order that such decree should not conclude the rights of either party in a new action: Van Orman v. Spafford, 20-215.

Second motion: A motion to dismiss an appeal is no bar to a motion for the same purpose made upon a new and more perfect record: Seacrest v. Newman, 19-323.

b. Method of Trial of Appeal.

In actions at law, see § 3948 and notes.

In actions in equity, see § 3949 and notes.

Correcting assessments: An appeal in an action by special proceedings is to be tried according to the method provided for ordinary or for equitable proceedings according to the nature of the action: Davis v. Clinton, 55-549.

Probate of will: A proceeding for the probate of a will being a special proceeding cannot be tried in the supreme court de novo, but must be reviewed on errors assigned in the record: Ross v. McQuiston, 45-145; Sisters of Visitation v. Glass, 45-154; In re Will of Donnelly, 68-126.

An action to test the validity of a will is not triable de novo on appeal: Kelsey v. Kelsey, 57-253.

Summary proceedings: A trial de novo can be had only in equitable proceedings. In summary proceedings, as, for instance, to cancel a judgment, the supreme court only has jurisdiction for the correction of errors at law: Brett v. Myers, 65-274.

A habeas corpus proceeding will be heard on appeal on errors assigned as in an ordinary proceeding: Drumb v. Keen, 47-435.

A proceeding to restore lost corners, as provided by statute, being a special proceeding involving merely a legal right, will be reviewed on appeal as an ordinary and not as an equitable action: In re Harrington, 54-33.

c. Affirmance or Reversal in General; Remand- ing; Final Judgment.

Want of jurisdiction of the subject-matter in the court below may be raised for the first time on appeal to the supreme court: Walters v. Steamboat Mollie Dozier, 24-192.

And the want of jurisdiction of the lower court may be taken notice of by the supreme court although not raised: Groves v. Richmond, 53-570.

Where a change of venue was granted to a court having no jurisdiction to try the case, held, that the want of jurisdiction in the trial court could be urged in the supreme court, although not raised below, and the judgment was reversed: Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 59-485.

Under such circumstances the supreme court will not review the questions arising on the trial in the court having no jurisdiction: Bennett v. Cary, 57-221; Gilman v. Donovan, 59-76.

After the court determines that it has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter, it will dismiss the appeal: Stough v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-641.

Affirmance where result is correct: Where the judgment of the court below is found to be correct, it will be affirmed although the reasons given therefor are erroneous: Whiting v. Root, 52-293; Jamison v. Perry, 38-14.

If a party has no standing in a court of equity upon his bill and the answer thereto, the court will not, on appeal, reverse the case because it was dismissed on motion, even though that might be an irregular method of practice: Hoag v. Madden, 70-612.

Cannot be affirmed on another ground:

Where a motion to set aside a verdict and grant a new trial is overruled upon all the grounds urged except one, and on appeal the action of the court on this ground is held to be erroneous, the case will be reversed without inquiry as to whether the motion should not have been sustained on other grounds, the opposite party not having appealed with reference to the ruling on such grounds: Collins v. Brazill, 63-432.

Where a demurrer is erroneously sustained upon one ground and overruled upon another as to which it should have been sustained, the action of the court will be reversed on appeal in order that the appellant may be enabled to take such action as he might have taken in the lower court if the demurrer had been sustained on the proper ground: District Tp v. Independent Dist., 63-188.

Nor to party successful below: A party against whom no judgment has been rendered cannot question the correctness of the proceedings in the lower court, and if the judgment is reversed so far as it is in his favor, he should not be bound thereby so far as the proceedings are adverse to him, but should be given an opportunity for a new trial: Boyce v. Wabash R. Co., 63-70.

Where a judgment contains two adjudications, one in favor of a party and one against him, and he appeals from the entire judgment, it will be presumed that he appeals from that portion adverse to him: and especially is this true where the relief sought by the appeal, if granted, would render the judgment of the court below nugatory. On such appeal the judgment will not be interfered with in behalf of the party not appealing: Henninger v. Hennessy, 46-600.

In a law action, where the case is reversed on plaintiff's appeal, no relief can be furnished defendant on an appeal by him: Minthorn v. Hemphill, 73-257.

Entire reversal for error as to one count: Where error is committed as to only one of two counts upon which plaintiff recovers, but it does not appear clearly as to the amount recovered on each count, the entire judgment will be reversed: Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Walker, 49-273; Bond v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 67-712.

Where an ordinance provided for a fine for maintaining a nuisance, and a person was under such ordinance fined and the abatement of the nuisance ordered, and the supreme court held that the ordinance, in so far as it provided for a fine, was in excess of authority and void, held, that it would not sustain so much of the judgment as provided for the abatement of the nuisance, but would reverse the whole judgment: Nevada v. Hutchins, 59-503.

Affirmance where several issues are involved: The affirmance of a general judgment is an affirmance thereof with respect to all the issues decided thereby, although the opinion be based upon but one of such issues: Finch v. Hollinger, 46-216.

Where a judgment is entire it should be affirmed or reversed as to all the parties appealing: Cavender v. Smith's Heirs, 5-157, 195.

Case remanded as to cross-action: A cause may be remanded for new trial as to a cross-action, with an order that such trial shall extend to that alone, and that the judgment on plaintiff's original action remain undisturbed: McAfferty v. Hale, 24-355.

Opinion of court on points which become immaterial: When a case is reversed upon errors in instructions and sent back for a new trial, the court will not express its opinion as to errors claimed to have been made in the admission or rejection of evidence which may not occur on a new trial: Gould v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 66-590.

The court will not on appeal undertake to determine any question which can have no influence in determining the rights of the parties before it, however important such question may be in the abstract, and particularly is this true when there is a difference of opinion among the members of the court as to such question: Payne v. Humeston & S. R. Co., 70-584.

Effect of affirmance of ruling on demurrer: Where a demurrer was submitted without stipulation for either party to amend or plead over, and the action of the court in overruling the demurrer was excepted to, and judgment for the other party entered, held, that upon the affirmance of the ruling on the demurrer the judgment was final, and the unsuccessful party could not have the cause remanded for the purpose of pleading over: Grimes v. Hamilton County, 37-290.

In such a case the court will not, upon affirming the action of the court below, grant leave to the appellant to withdraw his demurrer and proceed to trial upon the merits: Dunlap v. Cody, 31-260.

The action of the supreme court in sustaining the decision of the court below overruling a demurrer will be final as against the unsuccessful party only where judgment has been entered against him in the court below for failure to plead or to proceed with the case: Tyler v. Langworthy, 37-355.

Effect of reversal; new trial: It is only where the facts are settled by agreement of the parties or by the finding of a court or referee, or by a special verdict of the jury, that upon reversal in the supreme court in an action triable by ordinary proceedings, the court may render final judgment for the party unsuccessful in the lower court. In other cases a new trial must be awarded: Atz v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-293; Gray v. Regan, 37-688; Harwood v. Case, 37-692.

Where the facts are not thus determined, and the cause is reversed and remanded to the lower court, judgment should not there be rendered without a retrial: Harwood v. Case, 37-692.

Where a judgment rendered below upon a report of a referee was set aside, on appeal, as in conflict with the law and evidence, and the case was remanded, held, that the lower court should have proceeded in the same manner as though such report had been set aside upon motion there made: Gray v. Regan, 37-688.

A reversal of a judgment leaves the parties in the condition they were in before the judgment was rendered, and parties who have not appealed are not deprived of their standing in the court after the reversal of the judgment by reason of their not having joined in the appeal: Case v. Blood, 71-632.

When final judgment will be entered on reversal: The supreme court cannot render final judgment where it reverses a cause on the ground that a new trial should have been granted below. It can only enter up such judgment as the court below should have rendered: Payne v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47-605.

So held in a case where a judgment was reversed because not supported by the evidence, and it also appeared that the evidence was substantially the same on a former trial in which judgment had likewise been reversed on the same ground: Ibid.

Upon a determination in the supreme court that there was error in refusing to admit certain testimony offered in the court below, the supreme court cannot proceed to render judgment as though the testimony had been admitted. The offered evidence might not be sufficient proof of the fact which it tended to establish, or might have been overthrown by other evidence. The issue must be again passed upon by the lower court: Mendell v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 20-9.

Where defendant has not had an opportunity to defend in the court below, for example, in case of default upon service by publication, the supreme court will not, in case of reversal, enter final judgment, but remand the case for the purpose of allowing defense to be made: Doolittle v. Shelton, 1 G. Gr., 272.

Where defendant in the court below, upon his demurrer being overruled, stood thereon and appealed, and the ruling was reversed, held, that he was not entitled to judgment in the supreme court, but that the case must be remanded, and the plaintiff would have leave to amend: Ware v. Thompson, 29-65.

Where the court below made a finding of facts unfavorable to defendant, and to which he excepted, and rendered judgment for defendant upon another question, and upon appeal by plaintiff the judgment was reversed, held, that as the correctness of the finding of facts could not be inquired into, although defendant also appealed, for the reason that there was no judgment against him, the court would not enter up judgment upon the finding of facts, but remand the case to the district court to retry the issues of law and fact: Boyce v. Wabash R. Co., 63-70.

The reversal on appeal of an order directing the issuance of a writ of possession on the ground that it is irregular merely, and not because the adverse party is entitled to possession, does not entitle such adverse party, on motion, to an order for a writ of restitution. If the writ of possession is yet undetermined the right thereto cannot be decided upon a mere motion: Lombard v. Atwater, 46-501.

Where the judgment upon a special verdict is reversed on an error below the supreme court may render such judgment as should have been rendered below: Gilmore v. Ferguson, 28-422.

Where a case is reversed on the ground that upon a finding of facts made by the court the judgment is erroneous as a matter of law, final judgment may be rendered on such finding: Shaw v. Nachtwy, 43-653.

In such a case the supreme court may remand the cause for final judgment in the lower court, and judgment below should be entered up without a retrial: Roberts v. Corbin, 28-355; Drefahl v. Tuttle, 42-177.

Where a party has sued under a statute authorizing the recovery of tieble damages, and the judgment in his favor is held to be erroneous on appeal, the supreme court cannot give him judgment for actual damages on a different cause of action: Bond v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 67-712.

Effect of reversal for conflict between verdict and instructions: Where a judgment is reversed because the verdict is inconsistent with the instructions of the court and special findings thereunder, although the correctness of the instructions will not be considered, the supreme court will not render a final judgment on the special findings, and in accordance with the instructions, but will remand the cause so that the correctness of the instructions may be determined by an appeal from the judgment of the court on the special findings: Baird v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55-121; S. C., 61-359.

Affirmance of judgment as modified: Where special findings were inconsistent with the general verdict, in so far as the latter included an allowance on one count of the petition, held, that the court could modify the judgment by striking therefrom the amount allowed on that count and affirm it as to the balance: Cobb v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 38-601.

Where final judgment should be entered: Where the judgment will affect the title to real estate it should be entered in the lower court, and the case will be remanded for that purpose: Hait v. Ensign, 61-724.

What is the final judgment: If final judgment is rendered in the supreme court on appeal, it is the judgment of that court which constitutes the final adjudication of the cause and not the judgment of the court below: Griffin v. Seymour, 15-30.

Final judgment at subsequent term: The supreme court having reversed a cause and remanded it for a new trial will not, at a subsequent term, on motion of appellant, render judgment in his favor. In analogy to the rule as to the lower courts, entries or orders made at a previous term will only be changed to correct an evident mistake: Roberts v. Corbin, 26-315, 329.

Cancellation or correction of judgments: The supreme court has power, aside from any statutory provision, to correct or cancel judgments improvidently entered through mistake or oversight: Drake v. Smythe, 44-410.

Additional recovery on appeal; foreclosure of mortgage: Where the mortgagee in an action to foreclose a mortgage accepted and receipted the record for the amount found due thereon, and thereafter the mortgagor conveyed the property to a third person, and afterward the mortgagee, within due time, prosecuted his appeal and obtained a decree for an additional amount, held, that the additional decree thus secured was not a lien as against the purchaser who took without notice of any intention on the part of the mortgagee to prosecute such appeal: Davis v. Bonar, 15-171.

Money paid over in pursuance of judgment: Where plaintiff, in an action to ascertain which of two persons was entitled to certain money due on real property purchased by him, paid the money into court, and it was adjudged to belong to one of the parties defendant and was paid over to him, and thereafter the other defendant appealed, held, that upon reversal of the judgment the appellant was not entitled to a recovery against the plaintiff for the money thus brought into court and already paid over to the other defendant: White v. Butz, 32-335.

Remitting excess, and final judgment in supreme court for balance: On an appeal in an action in which usury was pleaded as a defense, held, that plaintiff might remit the usury and take judgment in the supreme court for the principal, and that judgment might also be entered there for the ten per cent. penalty for the use of the school fund: Thompson v. Purnell, 10-205.

Where plaintiff, in an action to recover damages for injury to stock on defendant's railroad track, recovered double damages in the lower court, but on appeal it was considered that the service of notice was not sufficient to entitle him to double damages, held, that the case would be reversed unless plaintiff consented to a judgment for simple damages and submitted to pay the costs of appeal: Keyser v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 56-440.

Where the supreme court reversed a case for error in including certain items in the judgment therein, and, on a petition for rehearing, appellee offered to remit such portion of the judgment as was held erroneous and asked for judgment for the balance, held, that such offer would be accepted, even on rehearing, and a judgment for the balance was entered: Hyde v. Minneapolis Lumber Co., 53-243.

Where the attention of the court is called, upon a petition for rehearing, to the fact that there is error in the allowance of interest, and the opposite party offers to remit the excess, the judgment will be reduced to the proper amount without granting a rehearing, and the costs of the appeal will be taxed to the appellee: Gere v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 67-272.

Where the judgment is for too large an amount by reason of an erroneous assessment of interest, if the party recovering the judgment remits the amount of the excess, judgment may be affirmed with such correction, and it is not necessary that it be remanded: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-530.

Remitting in lower court: Where an offer to remit the excess in the judgment was made in the lower court, after service of notice of appeal, and the appeal was nevertheless prosecuted, held, that the successful party might, upon remitting the excess, have affirmance of the judgment in the court below with costs, but that if no such remission was entered, then the judgment would be reversed: Waggoner v. Turner, 69-127.

The successful party may, in the lower court, remit the amount of the excess or submit to a new trial: Kitterman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 69-440.

Remittitur where verdict is excessive: Where the verdict is evidently excessive by reason of an error in assessing the amount of recovery, the supreme court may order the successful party to remit the amount of excess or submit to a new trial: Howe v. Sutherland, 39-484.

In a particular case, held, that the amount of damages allowed in an action for personal injuries, although mental anguish was a proper element to be considered, was so excessive as to indicate passion or prejudice, and appellee was allowed the option of accepting a less amount or submitting to a reversal: McKinley v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 44-314.

A verdict in an action against a railway company for personal injuries being deemed by the supreme court excessive under the evidence in the case, and the result of prejudice, they directed that appellee might take judgment for a certain amount, and that if he had not elected to do so within the time set, judgment should be reversed: Lombard v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47-494.

Where judgment was entered below for less than the amount of the verdict on the ground that it was excessive, held, that the cause should be reversed and remanded with direction to the lower court to allow plaintiff to accept such judgment or submit to a new trial: Noel v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 44-292.

A verdict will not be reduced in the supreme court on the ground that it is excess ve unless such relief has been asked in the court below: Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55-582; Dickey v. Harmon, 26-501.

Election to remit: While, if the verdict is excessive, it may be set aside on appeal and remanded, yet the court will not usually make an absolute order of remand, but allow the successful party to elect to take a certain amount which the court consider not excessive, or submit to a new trial: Cooper v. Mills County, 69-350.

Costs in case of remittitur: Where a judgment was modified in the supreme court on account of excessive interest having been included therein, but it did not appear that attention had been called to the error in the court below, held, that costs of appeal should be taxed to appellant: Bayliss v. Hennessy, 54-11.

Where the mistake in the judgment is such that it would probably have been corrected if a motion therefor had been made, the costs will be taxed to appellant: Sauwey v. Iowa City Glass Co., 68-542; Kaufman v. Dostal, 73-691.

Where the judgment is excessive in amount, and it does not appear that any offer was made to remit the excess in the court below, costs of the appeal will be taxed to the appellee, although he may make the remission in the supreme court and prevent the case from being remanded: Payne v. Billingham, 10-360.

Where, before costs were made on appeal, the successful party offered in writing to remit all the judgment above a certain amount, which offer was refused, and, upon final hearing, the other party was allowed to recover more than the amount offered, held, that the costs of appeal were to be taxed to him: Montelius v. Wood, 56-254.

Decision of the case binding on second appeal: A decision upon appeal in a case constitutes the law of the case, and will not on a subsequent appeal in the same case be overruled or re-examined, however well satisfied the court may be that it is erroneous: Adams v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 55-94; Barton v. Thompson, 56-571; Simplot v. Dubuque, 56-639; Star Wagon Co. v. Szezy, 63-520; Ellis v. State Ins. Co., 68-578; District T'p v. Independent Dist., 69-88; Ravindan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-527; Drake v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-59; Davis v. Curtis, 70-338; Babeock v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 72-197.

Where the court has once definitely passed upon the case on one appeal, it will not, on a second appeal, reconsider its ruling thereon, unless there has been such change of the issues or other circumstances of the case as to raise a new question, touching the applicability of the former decision to the case as thus made on the second appeal. The only method for procuring a reconsideration of the decision on the first appeal is by rehearing: Minnesota Linseed Oil Co. v. Montague, 65-67.

Appeal not considered after dismissal for defects: Where an appeal is dismissed on the ground of defects in the record, it is incompetent for appellant, without obtaining a rehearing, to bring the case again before the court upon the same appeal on a corrected record: Green v. Ronen, 62-89.

Where an appeal is dismissed for the reason that appellant has not moved in the lower court to have the error complained of corrected, before appealing, a dismissal of the appeal and affirmance of the judgment will not prevent him, if not too late, from making the motion in the court below and again appealing; from the refusal of the court to sustain it: Berryhill v. Jacobs, 20-246.

Where a judgment procured by appellee for failure of appellant to file a transcript was set aside on the ground that appellant had previously dismissed the appeal, held, that appellant could not afterwards prosecute his appeal, the formal setting aside of the judgment being a determination that the court had no longer any jurisdiction of the case: Dewey v. Pierce, 69-81.

To what court remanded; change of venue: Where a change of venue is improperly granted and the judgment of the court to which the change is taken is reversed for that error, the cause should be remanded to that court from which the change of venue was taken: Ferguson v. Davis County, 51-220; Bennett v. Carey, 57-221; Gilman v. Donovan, 59-76; Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 59-185.

Such an order was made without discussion in McCracken v. Webb, 36-531.

A procedendo is not necessary to authorize the court below to redocket and proceed with the case in a proper manner. That may be done, on proper notice to the adverse party, at any time after the time for rehearing has expired: State v. Knouse, 33-365; Becker v. Becker, 50-139.

Notice of further proceedings in lower court: The opposite party is entitled to some notice that the case is again upon the docket before judgment can be rendered, upon the case being remanded: Messenger v. Marsh, 6-491.

Proceedings in lower court after reversal and remand: After a cause is remanded with direction that a certain judgment be entered, no fact existing prior to the first hearing in the lower court can be interposed as a reason against the entry of such judgment: Lord v. Ellis, 11-170.

As to whether amended or additional pleadings may be filed in the court below after a cause is reversed and remanded, see notes to § 3395.

Where a decree was reversed on the ground that the court below had erred in overruling a motion to strike certain depositions from the files, for the reason that they had been taken without authority, and the cause remanded, held, that the court below could not be required to dismiss the cause or enter decree for the opposite party, but must proceed to try the case anew: Kershman v. Swehla, 62-654.

Where a cause was reversed on one point and sent back for a new trial and further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion in the supreme court, held, that plaintiff (appellee on the appeal) was not required to introduce evidence on an issue determined in his favor on the former trial and which was regarded as settled in his favor on the appeal, and as to which no inquiry was authorized by the opinion; and this even though defendant, in an amended answer after the cause was remanded, had denied the fact involved therein: Croup v. Morton, 53-599.

Where a motion for a new trial is overruled in the court below and that action of the court is reversed on appeal, nothing remains to the court below but to proceed with a new trial. It cannot receive other affidavits and pass again upon the motion for a new trial: Pomroy v. Parmlee, 10-154.

If judgment is reversed for error of law in entering judgment on a finding of facts and the case remanded for a proper judgment upon such finding, judgment should be entered without a retrial: Roberts v. Corbin, 28-355; Drefahl v. Tuttle, 42-177.

Where the judgment in the supreme court leaves nothing for the lower court to do on the remanding of the cause except to enforce the performance of the duties imposed by the judgment of the supreme court upon an officer of the lower court by requiring him to pay over money in his hands, there is no occasion for a trial: Howe v. Jones, 71-92.

But this rule is not applicable where a motion for a verdict upon the evidence is overruled in the lower court, and on appeal it is held that such motion should have been sustained. The lower court might have, even after sustaining the motion, allowed the introduction of other evidence omitted by mistake or inadvertence, and the supreme court will not, by rendering final judgment upon the motion for verdict upon the evidence, cut off the opportunity which would have existed in the lower court to introduce such additional evidence: Meadows v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 67-57.

Where it was held on appeal that a new trial had been improperly granted on account of insufficient evidence, and the cause was remanded, held, that defendant was not entitled to judgment in the court below, but that it was the duty of that court to proceed and determine the issues joined in the petition for new trial as if no appeal had been taken: Dryden v. Wyllis, 53-390.

Where plaintiff in an action on a tax title set up generally the payment of taxes without specifying times or amounts, and the title was held invalid and the cause remanded for determination of amount plaintiff was entitled to recover for taxes paid and judgment therefor, held, that defendant might appear in the lower court and contest plaintiff's claim for taxes paid: Müller v. Corbin, 48-525.

If, from the judgment of the supreme court, it appears that the cause of action no longer exists, or, in other words, there is nothing left upon which the court below can act, the cause, upon being remanded to the lower court, should be dismissed, and refusal of the lower court to do so may be corrected by certiorari: Edgar v. Greer, 14-211.

The court below should, upon the filing of a procedendo directing it to enter judgment in accordance with the opinion of the supreme court, proceed to enter such judgment irrespective of any notice by the adverse party of his intention to file a petition for a rehearing: Fenton v. Way, 44-438.

Where an answer containing three distinct defenses was demurred to, the demurrer sustained, and upon appeal the action of the court reversed as to the first cause, the other two not being passed upon, held, that defendant had no standing in the court below except on the first cause, but on a subsequent appeal the defendant had the right to have the sufficiency of the other defenses passed upon: Bates v. Kemp, 15-223.

Method of securing, see § 3949 and notes.

The hearing and determination: On an appeal in an equitable action the court will examine into the merits of the case for the purpose of administering justice, guided only by the universal principles of equity jurisprudence, not being confined to errors apparent on the record: Austin v. Carpenter, 2 G. Gr., 131.

On such an appeal the facts as well as the law of the case are again reviewed and adjudicated: Pierce v. Wilson, 2-20.

The court, however, can only act upon the testimony upon which the decree below was rendered: Walker v. Ayres, 1-449.

It cannot, although the case be triable de novo, consider testimony not presented to and considered by the court below: McGregor v. Gardner, 16-533.

Upon trial de novo the court cannot determine a question as to which no issue is raised on the trial below: Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Iasbronck, 68-554.

The difference between a court having appellate jurisdiction proper and a court for the correction of errors at law is, substantially, that the former tries cases de novo and renders such judgment as should be rendered upon the facts and the law, while the latter simply inquires into alleged errors of law committed by the lower court. Under our constitution the supreme court has jurisdiction to try de novo on appeal only chancery cases: Sherwood v. Sherwood, 44-192.

If a case is tried as an equitable one in the court below, and the proper steps are taken to secure a trial de novo on appeal, the case must be so tried, and not upon assignment of errors. The method of trial in the supreme court is dependent upon the manner in which the case was tried below, and not upon the nature of the case: Blough v. Van Hoorebeke, 43-40.

Case not to be remanded: It is not the duty of the court in a trial de novo, when it appears that the evidence is not sufficient to support the judgment in the court below, to remand the case for a new trial in order that the party who is unsuccessful on the appeal may have the opportunity of introducing additional evidence: Wickersham v. Reeves, 1-413.

Affirmance; former adjudication: A judgment in an equity case which is affirmed on appeal to the supreme court, for the reason that proper steps were not taken to secure a hearing on the merits, is conclusive as a former adjudication, and may be pleaded as such when the same question arises in another action, although the decision of the supreme court, if the case could have been heard on the merits, would have been different: Trescott v. Bates, 51-409.

When case will be remanded: Where the supreme court holds that an equitable action is not triable de novo on appeal for want of the proper steps having been taken, but reverses the judgment on errors assigned, it cannot enter a final decree, but must send the case back for further proceedings: Jordan v. Winsor, 48-180; Kershman v. Swaha, 62-654.

Where objection to non-joinder of necessary parties defendant is made for the first time on the hearing of a case triable de novo in the supreme court, such want of proper parties will not cause the bill to be dismissed, but the action will be remanded with leave to have the necessary parties brought in: Postlewait v. Howes, 3-365.

Where the trial court had struck a deposition of a party from the files because not taken within the time required by order of the court, held, on appeal, that although such action of the court was erroneous, the supreme court would not proceed to try the case anew on the evidence submitted below and the deposition thus stricken from the files, but would remand it for the purpose of allowing the opposite party to present additional evidence, so that the party whose deposition was thus stricken out would not be able to take advantage of the error of the court below in refusing to consider his deposition: Sweet v. Brown, 61-669.

When an equity cause is, upon appeal, not tried de novo, but is reversed on errors assigned, and remanded, it stands for trial anew as a law action: Jordan v. Winsor, 48-180.

Modification of decree: The supreme court will not, on appeal, make a modification of a decree so as to render it more favorable to the party who does not appeal, even though it may seem from the record that such change would be proper if there had been an appeal by such party: Smith v. Wolf, 55-555.

Where there was nothing in the record indicating that an appeal was taken for delay, and the judgment of the lower court was affirmed after the expiration of the time fixed therein for performance by the unsuccessful party, held, that the time for performance should be extended so as to allow an opportunity to such party to perform the decree as affirmed: Daniels v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. B. Co., 56-192.

Final decree: Where an equity case is appealed and tried anew, and the action of the court below is determined to have been erroneous, the successful party is entitled to have such decree as is proper on the record as made in the court below entered up in the supreme court: First Nat. Bank v. Baker, 60-132.

Where an equity case is tried anew on appeal it is the duty of the supreme court to render such judgment as the court below should have rendered: Kaufman v. Dostal, 73-691.

While the successful party is ordinarily entitled to a decree in the supreme court, and the cause cannot be remanded, yet there are exceptions to such rule. Where it appeared that by mistake the allegations of the petition were erroneous in the description of a highway with reference to which relief was asked, held, that the case might be remanded for the purpose of enabling plaintiff to amend his petition so as to secure such relief, it not appearing that plaintiff or his attorney was chargeable with negligence in connection with such mistake: White v. Farlie, 67-628.

In lower court: While either of the parties is entitled, upon a trial de novo, to have a final decree entered in the supreme court, yet if the judgment is such as to affect the title to real estate, it should properly be entered in the court where the case was tried: Hait v. Ensign, 61-724.

Proceedings in lower court after remand: After an equitable action has been tried de novo in the supreme court and remanded to the lower court for decree, in accordance with the decision of the supreme court, the party cannot amend his pleadings and present a defense that existed when the issues were first tried in the court below: Seaton v. Henderson, 47-131.

After reversal in a suit in equity, which is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion, it stands precisely as any suit in equity stands between the submission and the entry of the decree, the court being fully advised in the premises and the decision announced as to what decree should be entered upon the pleadings and evidence as they stand. The introduction of new evidence, omitted by inadvertence, or the filing of additional or amended pleadings, might be allowed in the discretion of the court, in view of the circumstances and in furtherance of substantial justice; but could not be claimed as a right: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 44-335.

The allowance of an amendment and tendering a new issue after trial de novo in supreme court, and remanding of cause for judgment in court below and procedendo filed, should be made only on the strongest showing of accident or mistake, or for matters arising subsequent to the decree, or the like. A party cannot be allowed to try his cause by piecemeal. But where a showing of diligence is made by affidavits, sufficient to entitle a party to show mistake and introduce a new issue, the question of diligence in discovery of the mistake is not further in issue, and neither that issue nor any of the former issues in the case, but only the new issue, is to be tried: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 55-91.

When an equity case is remanded for judgment in the lower court, the parties may introduce material evidence which has been discovered since the original trial, and may set up matters materially affecting the merits of the case which have occurred since the former trial, and the amendment to the pleadings necessary to such purpose may be made; but a party cannot set up by way of amendment matter existing at the time of the former trial, and which he omitted to set up at that time: Sanwey v. Iowa City Glass Co., 68-542.

A grant of leave, in a decree entered under procedendo from the supreme court, to one defendant to withdraw her answer, held not to have the effect of continuing or dismissing the case as to such defendant, especially when the decree was immediately afterwards set aside, and a new decree entered without such leave: McGregor v. McGregor, 21-441.

Where a cause is remanded to the lower court after trial de novo, merely for judgment, without further directions, judgment must be rendered as a matter of course, and upon motion, unless the unsuccessful party shall bring himself within some recognized rule which would entitle him to a new trial: Austin v. Wilson, 57-586.

Where, in an equity case, there cannot be a trial de novo because of error in excluding evidence in the lower court which does not appear of record, the supreme court cannot render a final judgment, but will remand the cause. In such a case the court below cannot render a final decree, but must permit a new trial: Kershman v. Swehla, 62-654.

Erroneous action of the lower court in allowing a party to introduce additional evidence after an equitable cause has been remanded to the court below for a decree in conformity with the opinion of the court, is not an order so materially affecting the final decision that an appeal can be taken therefrom before the rendition of final judgment: Garmoe v. Sturgeon, 67-700.

e. Rules, and Exercise of Powers.

The rules of practice in courts of last resort ought to be framed and interpreted rather with a view to the submission of causes upon their merits than to their disposition merely upon technical grounds: Palo Alto County v. Harrison, 68-81.

The rules of the supreme court as to the practice therein have the force and effect of laws duly enacted. They cannot be regarded as matter of mere form, and until abrogated must be substantially, at least, obeyed in the preparation of abstracts: State ex rel. v. O'Day, 68-213.

The constitution gives the supreme court jurisdiction and power to "exercise a supervisory control over all inferior judicial tribunals throughout the state," and while ordinarily such control must be exercised in strict accordance with the rules of procedure which obtain in actions at law or in equity, yet in anomalous and exceptional cases the court is not bound hand and foot and rendered powerless to redress palpable injustice caused by the erroneous action of a lower court: Poole v. Seney, 70-275.

4425. Judgment against sureties on stay bond. 3195. The supreme court, where it affirms the judgment, shall also, if the appellee moves therefor, render judgment against the appellant and his sureties on the bond above mentioned for the amount of the judgment, damages, and costs referred to therein, in case such damages can be accurately known to the court, without an issue and trial. [R., § 3537; C., '51, § 1986.]

If appellee take a new judgment against former judgment is merged therein and its appellant and sureties on his appeal bond, the lien destroyed: Swift v. Conboy, 12-444.

4426. Damages for delay. 3196. Upon the affirmance of any judgment or order for the payment of money, the collection of which in whole or part has been superseded by bond as above contemplated, the court shall award to the appellee damages upon the amount superseded; and, if satisfied by the record that the appeal was taken for delay only, must award such sum as damages, not exceeding fifteen per cent. thereon, as shall effectually tend to prevent the taking of appeals for delay only. [R., § 3538; C., '51, § 1990.]

Where there is not a money judgment in the court below against appellants, this and the preceding sections do not confer power on the supreme court to render such judgment on the appeal bond. Although an appeal be taken solely for delay, yet it is only where the collection of money and the judgment therefor has been superseded by bond that damages may be awarded, as here contemplated, against the party taking the appeal: Berryhill v. Keilmeyer, 33-20.

It appearing that appellant had been at the 4427. Process. 3197. If the supreme court affirm the judgment or order, it may send the cause to the court below to have the same carried into effect, or it may itself issue the necessary process for this purpose and direct such process to the sheriff of the proper county, as the party may require. [R., § 3539; C., '51, § 1991.]

It is not obligatory upon the supreme court to issue process, etc., as here contemplated: Roberts v. Corbin, 26-315, 331.

4428. Restitution of property. 3198. If, by the decision of the supreme court, the appellant becomes entitled to a restoration of any part of the money or property that was taken from him by means of such judgment or order, either the supreme court or the court below may direct execution or writ of restitution to issue for the purpose of restoring to such appellant his property or the value thereof. [R., § 3540; C., '51, § 1992.]

Restoration of property taken under the judgment appealed from cannot, in case of reversal, be given as a summary remedy where such property has, by voluntary sale or by seizure and sale, passed to an innocent purchaser, or has, in the bona fide discharge of a trust, pursuant to an order of court, been turned over to another: Hanschild v. Stafford, 27-301.

Where, upon appeal, it was decided that a writ of possession had been irregularly issued by the court below, held, that such fact did not, of itself, entitle the appellant to a restoration of the possession taken from him by such writ: Lombard v. Atwater, 46-501.

Where, at the time of sale under a judgment, an appeal therefrom was pending, upon

4429. Title not affected. 3199. Property acquired by a purchaser in good faith under a judgment subsequently reversed, shall not be affected by such reversal. [R., § 3541; C., '51, § 1993.]

Purchase at sheriff's sale by the plaintiff in execution, or his attorney, with actual knowledge of a pending appeal, is at the peril of the purchaser, and such person is not protected as a bona fide purchaser: Twogood v. Franklin, 27-239.

In case of a purchase by a judgment creditor before notice of appeal, if he again recovers on another trial, his title is not affected: Frazier v. Crafts, 40-110.

Where the purchaser at a judicial sale, and the grantee holding under him, paid only the costs and not the whole amount bid, held, that expense of printing abstract and argument, presenting the question raised by the appeal, held, that it was not proper to award damages against appellant for having taken the appeal: Ragan v. Day, 46-239.

It is only where a judgment or order for the payment of money is appealed from, or where the damages can be accurately known to the supreme court without an issue or trial, that the court is authorized to award to appellee damages against appellant for taking the appeal: Branscomb v. Gillian, 55-235.

the subsequent determination of which the judgment was reduced to an amount less than that for which the plaintiff bought in the property at the sale, held, that defendant was not entitled to an order upon plaintiff to repay the excess, but that the property should be restored to defendant: Munson v. Plummer, 58-736.

Where the judgment under which the successful party has acted is reversed, it becomes his legal duty to restore to the other party all the property or its value taken under the judgment, and, upon failure to do so, action may be brought against him without previous demand: Zimmerman v. National Bank, 56-133.

not having paid value they could not be regarded as good faith purchasers; and held, further, that the attorney for the plaintiff in the lower court and on appeal could not, upon purchase of the property, become entitled to protection as a good faith purchaser: O'Brien v. Harrison, 59-686.

The provisions for the protection of a purchaser at judicial sale as against a subsequent reversal are not designed for the benefit of parties claiming under a distinct title: Wood v. Young, 38-102.

4430. Power to imprison. 3200. The supreme court shall have power to enforce its mandates upon inferior courts and officers by fine and imprisonment, which imprisonment may be continued until obeyed. [R., § 3542.]

4431. Rehearing. 3201; 19 G. A., ch. 144. If a petition for rehearing be filed the same shall suspend the decision, if the court on its presentation, or one of the judges if in vacation, shall so order, in either of which case such decision shall be suspended until after the final arguments provided for in the next section. [R., § 3543.]

Upon the same case and record: A new case cannot be made on a petition for rehearing, nor matters insisted upon which were not presented in the original case: Hintrager v. Hennessy, 46-600, 604; Mann v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 46-637, 643.

So the court cannot, upon rehearing, consider an additional abstract or amended record not before them at the first hearing: Cramer v. Burlington, 45-627; Nixon v. Downey, 49-166; Parsons v. Parsons, 66-754.

An additional abstract filed by appellee upon rehearing cannot be considered: Simplot v. Dubuque, 49-630.

The fact of an appeal having been taken not being shown by the abstract, held, that such fact could not be shown on a petition for rehearing: Hintrager v. Hennessy, 46-600.

The fact that additional evidence has been discovered since the trial of the case in the court below is no ground for rehearing: Zuver v. Lyons, 40-510.

Certificate of appeal to U. S. supreme court: The certificate that the validity of a statute was drawn in question in the case on the ground that it was in conflict with the constitution of the United States will not be given where the question of such conflict was first raised in the petition for rehearing in the supreme court. The fact which is essential to give the supreme court of the United States jurisdiction on appeal from the state supreme court must appear on the face of the record. It is not sufficient that it be made in the argument of counsel: Martin v. Cole, 58-141.

Copy of opinion: Before the modification of rule 92 of the supreme court, held, that the requirement that a copy of the petition for rehearing should be delivered to the attorney of the adverse party must be observed: Austin v. Wilson, 52-731.

A petition for rehearing which does not contain the original opinion printed in full, or a reference to the number and page of the Northwestern Reporter in which the opinion is printed, will be stricken from the files: Korvick v. Mitchell, 68-273.

Remitting excess on rehearing: Where a cause was reversed on appeal because the judgment for plaintiff included an item erroneously allowed, held, that appellee might, on rehearing, offer to remit the excess over the amount of the proper judgment, and judgment for the balance would be entered in the supreme court: Hyde v. Minneapolis Lumber Co., 53-243.

Not granted to party who has not argued; may be granted on court's own motion: The supreme court will not grant a rehearing upon the application of a party who failed to file or make an argument when the cause was submitted. But if it is satisfied that error has been committed, it will, on its own motion, order a rehearing for the purpose of correcting the error: Wachendorf v. Lancaster, 61-569.

Argument on rehearing: After the opposite party has filed a reply to the petition for rehearing, neither party has the right to file any other argument: Webster County v. Hutchinson, 60-721.

Bill of review: The statute having provided for a petition for rehearing and not for a bill of review, an implication arises against the right to file a bill of that kind: McGregor v. Gardner, 16-538.

Effect of curative act: Where a curative act is passed while a case in which the defect sought to be cured is raised is pending in the supreme court on rehearing, the case will be regarded precisely as if no opinion had been previously filed, and the defect will be deemed cured: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Sac County, 39-124, 151.

In case of division: Where the judgment on appeal stands affirmed by reason of a division in the supreme court, such affirmation is subject to reconsideration on rehearing as any other judgment: Zeigler v. Vance, 3-528.

If, on rehearing, the court is equally divided as to whether the former opinion should be adhered to, the case will stand as if the court had been equally divided on the first hearing, and the judgment will be affirmed: Richards v. Burden, 59-723, 754.

Effect of rehearing after procedendo: After the decision of a cause by the supreme court, a procedendo was filed in the court below, whereupon the proper steps were taken to remove the cause to the federal court. Subsequently, and within the proper time, a petition for rehearing was filed in the supreme court and allowed; held, on a motion to dismiss in the supreme court, that the cause was still pending there, and had not been removed to the federal court by proceedings in the court below: McKinley v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 44-314; Railroad Co. v. McKinley, 99 U. S., 147.

Provisions applicable in criminal cases: The provisions as to rehearing found in the code of civil procedure are applicable in criminal cases as well as in civil, and in favor of the state as well as the defendant: State v. Jones, 64-349.

4432. Argument. 3202; 19 G. A., ch. 144. The party filing a petition for rehearing may make the same an argument or a brief of authorities upon which he relies for a rehearing, and if he desires to make an oral argument in support of his petition, and as upon rehearing, he shall make an indorsement upon his argument, or brief either in writing or print, stating in substance that the petition[er] for a rehearing will ask to be heard orally in support thereof, which notice shall be served with the petition for rehearing upon the adverse party, and deposited with the clerk of the supreme court; and in such case such petitioner and the counsel for the adverse party shall have the right to be heard orally thereon at the next term of said court, or any subsequent term to which the same is continued. In such case it shall be the duty of the clerk to place the cause wherein the petition is filed upon the docket for the next term of the court beginning not less than twenty days after the depositing of the petition, indorsed as aforesaid, in his office. [R., § 3544.]

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

4433. Docketing causes. 3203. The clerk shall docket the causes as the same are filed in his office, and shall arrange and set a proper number for trial for each day of the term, placing together those from the same judicial district, and shall cause notice of the manner he has set such causes to be published and distributed in such manner as the court may direct. [R., § 3535.]

4434. Hearing argument. 3204. The court shall hear all the causes docketed, when not continued by consent, or for cause shown by the party, and the party may be heard orally or otherwise, in his discretion. [R., § 3548.]

As to arguments, see notes to § 4424 and Rules 52-57 and 99.

4435. Opinion filed. 3205. No cause is decided until the opinion in writing is filed with the clerk. [R., § 3550.]

Section construed: Baker v. Kerr, 13-384.

That the opinion must be in writing, see § 182.

4436. On remand. 3206. If remanded to the inferior court to be carried into effect, such decision and the order of the court thereon, being certified thereto and entered on the records of the court, shall have the same force and effect as if made and entered during the session of the court in that district. [R., § 3551.]

4437. Assignment of errors. 3207. An assignment of error need follow no stated form, but must, in a way as specific as the case will allow, point out the very error objected to. Among several points in a demurrer, or in a motion, or instructions, or rulings in an exception, it must designate which is relied on as an error, and the court will only regard errors which are assigned with the required exactness; but the court must decide on each error assigned. [R., § 3546.]

Necessary in a law case: In a law action an assignment of errors is absolutely essential to the consideration of the case on appeal, and it is immaterial that but one point is relied upon, and that this is apparent from the record and argument: Barnhart v. Farr, 55-366.

The court cannot consider objections not made in the assignment of error: Wood v. Whitton, 66-295.

An objection not made in the assignment, but first raised in the argument, will not be considered: Roberts v. Cass, 27-225.

Not necessary in equity: In an equitable action triable de novo on appeal, an assignment of errors is not necessary: Hackworth v. Zollars, 30-433; Sherwood v. Sherwood, 44-192.

Where judgment is entered below on the admissions and allegations of the pleadings in an equity case, the cause on appeal is triable de novo on such allegations and admissions, and an assignment of errors is not necessary: Early v. Burt, 68-716.

On appeal from ruling on motion or demurrer: When an appeal is taken in an equity case from a ruling upon motion or demurrer, error must be assigned: Powers v. O'Brien County, 54-501; Patterson v. Jack, 59-632.

Trial of equitable actions upon assignment of errors: Where an equity case is not in proper form for trial de novo, it may be heard like an action at law on assignment of errors properly preserved by exceptions: Schmeltz v. Schmeltz, 52-512; Cross v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 51-683; Jordan v. Wimer, 45-65; Lutz v. Kelly, 47-307; Lynch v. Lynch, 28-326; Jones v. Clark, 37-586; Malloy v. Luscombe, 31-269.

Record must show error assigned: Where the record does not show that the ruling complained of in the assignment of errors was in fact made, such question cannot be considered: Borland v. McNally, 48-440.

What the assignment should show: An assignment of errors should plainly state the error complained of and not merely refer to the parts of the record wherein the objection complained of is said to appear: Wood v. Whitton, 66-295.

Assignments held insufficient: An assignment "that the court erred in its action in regard to the jury," held too indefinite: Hannon v. Chandler, 3-150.

An assignment that there was error in allowing the introduction of evidence objected to by plaintiff, and that the court erred in finding for defendant, held too indefinite: Garratt v. Wells, 63-236.

An assignment that "the court erred in overruling the defendant's exceptions to the report of the referee and entering judgment against defendant," held not sufficiently specific: Hoefler v. Burlington, 59-281.

An assignment that "the court erred in rendering judgment for appellee" is not sufficiently specific: Tomblin v. Ball, 46-190.

The assignment that a verdict is contrary to the law as given by the court is too general: Wood v. Hollowell, 68-377.

Assignments that "the court erred in admitting improper and rejecting proper testimony," and that "the court erred in admitting certain evidence of the defendant against plaintiff's objection," held not sufficiently specific: Merchants' Union Barbed Wire Co. v. Rice, 70-14.

Assignments of error that the verdict is contrary to law, and that the court erred in admitting testimony on the trial, and that the court erred in excluding testimony on the trial, and that the court erred in overruling defendant's motion in arrest of judgment and for a new trial, are not sufficiently specific: Armstrong v. Nillen, 70-51.

Assignments held not sufficiently specific in the following cases: Haues v. Twogood, 12-582; Wilson v. Hillhouse, 14-199; Morris v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 45-29; Oschner v. Schunk, 46-293; Bardwell v. Clare, 47-297; McCormick v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47-345; Nockles v. Eggspieler, 47-400; Moffatt v. Fisher, 47-473; Benton v. Nichols, 47-698; Belts v. Glenwood, 52-124; Black v. Boyd, 52-719; Brown v. Rose, 55-734; Wilson v. Klokonteger, 56-764; Low v. Fox, 56-221; Vanderberg v. Camp, 68-212; Smith v. James, 73-35; Wadsworth v. First Nat. Bank, 73-425.

On demurrer: A general assignment of error in the sustaining of a demurrer based on several grounds is not sufficiently specific: Waukon v. Strouse, 74-547.

Errors in instructions: Unless the particular points claimed to be erroneous in instructions are specifically designated, an assignment of error thereon will not be regarded: Peck v. Hendershott, 14-40; Brewington v. Patton, 1-121.

An assignment of error in giving certain instructions, in refusing certain others, and in modifying certain others, specifying them in each case, held sufficiently specific: Sherwood v. Snow, 46-481.

An assignment of errors in giving instructions, designating them by number, as in "instructing the jury that," stating in substance a brief proposition of law, held sufficient: Kendig v. Overhulser, 58-195.

An assignment of errors stating that "the court erred in giving on its own motion each of the instructions numbered," setting out the numbers of the instructions objected to, is sufficiently specific: Clark v. Ralls, 50-275.

The assignment that the court erred in refusing to give certain instructions mentioned by number, and each one thereof, and in giving others mentioned by number, and in giving each thereof, is sufficiently specific: Wood v. Whitton, 66-295; Hammer v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-623.

Where several instructions present but a single proposition, the assignment that the court erred in refusing to give them and each of them specifically, points out the error objected to: Hathaway v. State Ins. Co., 64-229.

An assignment based upon instructions generally, without pointing out specific portions claimed to be erroneous, is not sufficient: Peck v. Hendershott, 14-40.

Where the assignment indicates clearly the instructions asked and refused, and that the court erred in refusing them, such assignment is sufficient without pointing out the particular objection relied upon: Schaefer v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 62-624.

Error in ruling on motion: Where a motion is made upon a statutory ground, and the overruling of the motion is assigned as error, such assignment will be sufficiently specific although the motion has specified more than one thing as constituting the irregularity complained of in the motion: Thomas v. Hoffman, 62-125.

Assignment of error in the overruling of a motion to dismiss, which motion was based on a single ground, held sufficiently specific: Nichols v. Wood, 66-225.

Error in ruling on motion for a new trial: A general assignment of error in overruling a motion for a new trial will not bring before the court the question whether the verdict finds sufficient support in the evidence, where that is only one of several grounds relied upon in the motion: Leekins v. Nordyke, etc., Co., 66-471.

A general assignment of error in overruling motion for new trial, when such motion was based on several different grounds, is not sufficiently specific: Reilly v. Ringland, 44-422; Richardson v. McCormick, 47-80; Stevens v. Brown, 60-403; Marsel v. Bouman, 62-57; Terry v. Taylor, 64-35; McCormick v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47-345; Oschner v. Schunk, 46-293; Foley v. Kirkland, 66-227; Hasner v. Patterson, 70-681; Kirk v. Litterst, 71-71.

An assignment of errors in overruling a motion for a new trial, where no specific grounds of error are pointed out, is not sufficient: Morris v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 45-29.

Where the error assigned was that the court erred in overruling the first, second and third grounds of defendant's motion for a new trial, and it appeared that the grounds referred to, while stated in three different ways, amounted to the same thing and embraced a single proposition, held, that the assignment was sufficient: Kitterman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 69-440.

Error in ruling on demurrers: An assignment of error in the ruling of the court sustaining the several demurrers of different defendants is not sufficiently specific: Bradley v. Johnson, 67-614.

Error in judgment: An assignment that the court erred in rendering judgment against the party who appeals could be valid only where the court below had rendered its decision in writing, stating the facts found and the conclusions of law thereon, or where the case had been tried by the court and the evidence was all brought up by a bill of exceptions: Dean v. White, 5-286.

Deciding each error: The provision requiring the court to decide on each error assigned construed: Baker v. Kerr, 13-384.

Filing assignment, see § 4412.

Errors not argued deemed waived: See notes to § 4424.

4438. Motion book. 3208. All motions must be entered in the motion book, and shall stand over till the next morning after the morning on which entered, and till after having been publicly called by the court, unless the parties otherwise agree, and the adverse party shall be deemed to have notice of such motion. [R., § 3547.]

4439. Original paper sent up. 3209. Where a view of an original paper in the action may be important to a correct decision of the appeal, the court may order the clerk of the court below to transmit the same, which he shall do in some safe mode, to the clerk of the supreme court, who shall hold the same subject to the control of the court. [R., § 3525.]

Where the objection made in the court below to the introduction of a contract in evidence was that its appearance indicated that it had been altered since its execution, and there was no evidence tending in any manner to explain such alteration, held, that the supreme court could not pass upon the sufficiency of such objection, where the appellant had not secured the transmission to the supreme court of the instrument to which the objection was made: Wing v. Stewart, 68-13.

4440. Security for costs. 3210. The appellant may be required to give security for costs under the same circumstances as those in which plaintiffs in civil actions in the inferior court may be so required. [R., § 3526.]

4441. Death of party. 3211. The death of one or all of the parties shall not cause the proceedings to abate, but the names of the proper persons shall be substituted, as is provided in such cases in the district [and circuit] court, and the case may proceed. The court may also, in such case, grant a continuance when such a course will be calculated to promote the ends of justice. [R., § 3520.]

Where, pending an appeal in a divorce case, one of the parties dies, the action abates, both as to the claim for divorce and as to alimony: Barney v. Barney, 14-189.

The fact that the death of a party to the appeal is suggested to the supreme court and made a matter of record does not constitute a revival of the cause against the heirs or representatives of such party: Ibid.

A person claiming to be administrator of a party to an action in the lower court cannot, on appeal, object to the correctness of the abstract and other proceedings, he not having been made a party to the case in the lower court nor upon the appeal: Magarrall v. Magarrall, 74-378.

4442. Dismissal of appeal. 3212. Where appellant has no right, or no further right to prosecute the appeal, the appellee may move to dismiss the appeal, and if the grounds of the motion do not appear in the record, or by a writing purporting to have been signed by the appellant and filed, they must be verified by affidavit. [R., § 3521.]

Where the appellant is not entitled to prosecute the appeal, as, for instance, after payment of the amount of judgment and acceptance of the same by the appellant, the appeal will be dismissed on motion: Independent Dist. v. District Tp, 44-201.

It is possible that where an appeal is prosecuted from an intermediate order affecting the merits, and the action is, in the meantime, prosecuted to final judgment in the court below, such fact might be brought to the attention of the supreme court as a ground for dismissal of the appeal: Stanley v. Davenport, 54-463.

Where appellant by motion and affidavit sought to show that pending the appeal appellee (the plaintiff) had accepted a sum of money in full settlement of the judgment recovered below, and appellant thereupon asked that the appellee should take nothing further in the cause and be barred from the further prosecution of the action, and that appellant be discharged from further liability, which motion was resisted on the ground that a part of the judgment had been assigned before settlement, and that there was fraud in obtaining the settlement, held, that the court could not grant the motion and appellant must either dismiss or prosecute his appeal: Simonson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 48-19.

To justify a dismissal of the appeal upon a showing that appellant has no further right to prosecute it, that fact should clearly appear. Where there is any doubt as to the facts the appeal will not be dismissed: Lewis v. Tilton, 62-100.

Where a party appealed from a decree restraining his use of property for a certain purpose, and on motion it was made to appear that he had lost his interest in the property, held, that the appeal would not be further entertained for the purpose of determining the question of costs: Faucher v. Grass, 60-505.

Where a party in whose name the action is prosecuted appears on appeal by his affidavit and otherwise not to be the real party in interest and not to have authorized the prosecution of the action, the appeal may be dismissed. Such showing by the party in whose name the appeal was prosecuted will constitute a virtual abandonment of the appeal: Gresham v. Chantry, 69-728.

Where a motion to dismiss an appeal, because appellant is not entitled to prosecute it, is based upon facts as to which the affidavits filed by the respective parties are in conflict, the appeal will not be dismissed: Long v. Smith, 67-22.

Where the claim of a party to the cause has been extinguished by reason of his having exercised the right to redeem property of the opposite party from sale under execution, such fact may be shown for the purpose of procuring the dismissal: West v. Fitzgerald, 72-306.

Further as to dismissal, see notes to § 4424.

4443. Proceedings in such case. 3213. The appellee may, by answer filed and verified by himself, agent, or attorney, plead any facts which render the taking of the appeal improper, or destroy the appellant's right of further prosecuting the same, to which answer the appellant may file a reply, likewise verified by himself, his agent, or attorney, and the questions of law or fact therein shall be determined by the court. [R., § 3522.]

4444. Notices, how served. 3214. The service of all notices of appeal, or in any way growing out of such rights or connected therewith, and all notices in the supreme court, shall be in the way provided for the services of like notices in the [circuit or] district court, and they may be served by the same person and returned in the same manner, and the original notice of the appeal must be returned immediately after service to the office of the clerk of the district [or circuit] court where the suit is pending. [R., § 3523.]

As to service of notice, see § 4407 and notes.

4445. Executions. 3215. Executions issued from the supreme court shall be the same as those from the district [or circuit] court and attended with the same consequences, and shall be returnable in the same time. [R., § 3552.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF CERTIORARI.

4446. When writ may issue. 3216. The writ of certiorari may be granted whenever specially authorized by law, and especially in all cases where an inferior tribunal, board, or officer exercising judicial functions is alleged to have exceeded his proper jurisdiction, or is otherwise acting illegally, when in the judgment of the superior court there is no other plain, speedy, and adequate remedy. [R., § 3487; C., '51, § 1965.]

Discretion of court: In an action of certiorari, the result of which is to annul the action of an inferior tribunal, board or officer, it is peculiarly the duty of the court to interfere only in a case properly made, and even then the court may exercise a proper measure of discretion. It is not bound to grant a writ on merely technical grounds, and where no prejudice is shown: Woodworth v. Gibbs, 61-398; Johnson v. Supervisors, 61-89.

Certiorari and appeal: The writ of certiorari is never used to correct a mere error, but only to test the jurisdiction of a tribunal and the legality of its action: State v. Roney, 37-30.

When a party has the right of appeal he cannot proceed by certiorari: Ransom v. Cummins, 66-137; State v. Schmidtz, 65-556.

Where an inferior court illegally exercises its jurisdiction, and there is no adequate remedy by appeal, the writ of certiorari will lie: Coburn v. Mahaska County, 4 G. Gr., 242; Davis County v. Horn, 4 G. Gr., 94.

Certiorari will not lie where there is a plain, adequate and speedy remedy by appeal: Independent School Dist. v. District Court, 48-182.

After reversal on appeal: The judgment of a lower court being reversed on appeal and remanded for further proceedings in accordance with the opinion, such court has no jurisdiction to take any action inconsistent with such opinion, and if it attempts to do so its proceedings may be corrected by certiorari: Edgar v. Greer, 14-211.

Justice of peace; summary proceeding: Where a justice of the peace exercises a new jurisdiction created by statute, in which the proceedings are summary, and in a course different from the general principles of the common law, certiorari and not appeal is the proper method of having the action of the justice reversed: Dubuque v. Rebman, 1-444.

Judgment wrongfully set aside: Where the court has jurisdiction of the parties at the time of making an order or entering a judgment, its action cannot be attacked by certiorari; the remedy then is by appeal: but an order made or judgment entered without jurisdiction may be corrected on certiorari: Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Duffie, 67-175; Rowley v. Baugh, 33-201.

Failure to appeal: A party who fails to appeal within the time limited by law is not entitled to sue out the writ: Sunberg v. District Court, 61-597.

Where a party has, through his own fault, lost a plain, speedy and adequate remedy, which he might have availed himself of, as the right to appeal, he is not entitled to a remedy in certiorari: Fagg v. Parker, 11-18.

So he will not be allowed to select some erroneous ruling of an inferior tribunal and have it corrected by certiorari: O'Hare v. Hempstead, 21-33.

Administrator's settlement: The proper remedy for a refusal of the county court to correct a mistake in an administrator's final settlement is by appeal, and not by certiorari: Ibid.

Condemnation proceedings: Where, in right of way proceedings, it was not claimed that the land was such as could not be taken for right of way, nor that sufficient and proper notice had not been given, but simply that sufficient damages were not assessed and that the award was made on a day subsequent to that fixed in the notice, held, that the remedy, if any, was by appeal, not certiorari: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co. v. Whelan, 64-694.

Commissioners properly appointed to appraise damages for the taking of land for a right of way cannot be considered a tribunal exercising judicial functions and held liable for exceeding their jurisdiction or acting illegally when the proceedings are regular, even though the case is one in which there is no right to condemn the right of way: Forbes v. Delashmutt, 68-164.

The proceedings of an inferior tribunal to establish a highway will not be annulled on certiorari unless it is shown that it has exceeded its jurisdiction, or is otherwise acting illegally: McCollister v. Schuey, 24-362.

Where a board is given a discretion, a court cannot on certiorari inquire into the correctness of their decisions: Hildreth v. Crawford, 65-339.

The statutes in reference to this subject do not contemplate that the decisions of inferior tribunals in regard to matters of fact, where the tribunal is clothed with authority to decide with reference to matters submitted to it, and the subject-matter and the parties are within its jurisdiction, may be reviewed by a writ of certiorari: Tiedt v. Carstensen, 61-334; Darling v. Boesch, 67-702.

Board of equalization: Certiorari is not the proper proceeding to control the discretion of a board of supervisors acting as a board of equalization: Smith v. Board of Supervisors, 30-531. Whatever the motive of the alleged wrongful action of the board, it cannot be deemed illegal in such sense as to be reviewed in that manner: Polk County v. Des Moines, 70-351.

Where a board of equalization acts in a case not within its jurisdiction, certiorari is the proper remedy: Royce v. Jenney, 50-676.

County seat; relocation: The action of a board of supervisors in determining upon the sufficiency of remonstrances, and the number of names signed thereto, in proceedings for the relocation of a county seat, is ministerial, and may be reviewed on certiorari: Herrick v. Carpenter, 54-340.

Intoxicating liquors; permits: The court cannot on certiorari review the finding of the board of supervisors in granting a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, as to the good moral character of the applicant, or as to whether the granting of the permit was necessary for the accommodation of the neighborhood. But it may determine whether the proceedings were illegal by reason of no certificate whatever, signed by the electors as required by statute, having been presented to the county auditor: Darling v. Boesch, 67-702.

Tax for railroad; illegal voting: The correctness of the action of township trustees in submitting a proposition to vote a tax for a railroad may be determined by certiorari, but not the question whether there has been fraud or illegal voting: Jordon v. Hayne, 36-9.

Assessor to correct errors: Where an assessor has failed to make on his books the corrections ordered by the township board of equalization, and such books have passed beyond his control into the hands of the auditor, an action of certiorari to have the same corrected is the proper remedy: Keck v. Board of Supervisors, 37-517.

School directors; illegal acts: Illegal acts of a board of school directors in directing their secretary not to certify to the board of supervisors a tax voted by the electors of the district may be corrected on certiorari: Smith v. Powell, 55-215.

City council; streets: Certiorari will lie to control the action of a city council in improperly vacating streets: Stubenrauch v. Neyensch, 54-567.

Legislative acts of a city council in passing ordinances cannot be interfered with by certiorari: Iske v. Newton, 54-586.

Remitting taxes: The action of the city council in hearing a petition for the reduction of a tax and granting the same is a judicial action and properly brought in question by certiorari: Collins v. Davis, 57-256.

Who entitled to: A person in no way affected by the proceeding cannot interfere therewith by writ of certiorari: Davis County v. Horn, 4 G. Gr., 94; Iske v. Newton, 54-586.

A tax payer may, in this proceeding, question the action of a city council in remitting taxes assessed against another tax payer, although such plaintiff have no greater interest in the matter than other tax payers: Collins v. Davis, 57-256.

Any citizen has sufficient interest in the granting of a permit to sell intoxicating liquors to entitle him to have the proceedings reviewed and the errors and irregularities therein corrected by certiorari without having any pecuniary interest in the matter: Darling v. Boesch, 67-702.

Tax payers of different townships cannot join as plaintiffs in an action of certiorari to test the validity of such taxes: Woodworth v. Gibbs, 61-398.

In a proceeding to review the action of the board of supervisors in assessing the costs of constructing a levy upon adjoining land, different property owners whose property will be subject to assessment on that question may join as plaintiffs: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

Several owners of distinct pieces of land cannot join in a proceeding by certiorari to correct the action in assessing damages resulting from the establishment of a road: Chambers v. Lewis, 9-583.

4447. By whom granted. 3217. The writ may be granted by the district [or circuit] court, or, in vacation, by a judge or clerk thereof, but if to be directed to either of such courts or judges, then by the supreme court, or, in vacation, by a judge thereof, and shall command the defendant therein to certify fully to the court from which the same issues, at a specified time and place, a transcript of the records and proceedings, as well as the facts in the case, describing or referring to them, or any of them, with convenient certainty, and also to have then and there the writ. [R., § 3488; C., '51, § 1966.]

Before the circuit court was abolished and its jurisdiction transferred to the district court it was held that the former had, under this section, exclusive jurisdiction in civil, and the latter in criminal, cases. (See, also, §§ 206 and 207): Keniston v. Hewitt, 48-679.

Even though the form of the writ is erroneous, yet if in response to it defendant brings for review all the facts before the court which were considered, no prejudice can result on account of such error: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

4448. Stay of proceedings. 3218. If a stay of proceedings is sought, the writ can only be issued by a court or judge, who may require a bond and fix the penalty and conditions thereof; the sureties thereon may be approved by the judge granting, or clerk who issues the writ. [R., § 3489; C., '51, § 1967.]

It not being provided that judgment upon the bond should be summarily entered against a surety as provided in the case of appeal bonds, such a judgment will be erroneous: Smith v. Bissell, 2 G. Gr., 379.

4449. Petition. 3219. The petition for the writ must state facts constituting a case wherein the writ may issue, and must be verified by affidavit, and the supreme court or judge issuing the writ, may require notice of the application to be given the adverse party, or may grant the writ without notice. If a stay of proceedings is sought, the writ can only be granted on reasonable notice of the time, place, and court or judge before whom the application will be made. [R., § 3490; C., '51, § 1968.]

In regard to this section the Code commissioners say: "If no stay of proceedings is sought the writ should issue, as of course, by the clerk, like writs of error to justices of the peace. If to be directed to a district or circuit court, as to whether it should issue with or without notice can be well left to the discretion of the supreme court or judge. Notice should be required in all cases where proceedings are to be stayed."

4450. Service and return. 3220. The writ must be served and the proof of such service made in the same manner as is prescribed for the original notice in a civil action, except that the original shall be left with the defendant, and the return or proof of service made upon a copy thereof. [R., § 3491; C., '51, § 1969.]

4451. Defective return. 3221. If the return of the writ be defective, the court may order a further return to be made, and may compel obedience to the writ and to such further order, by attachment if necessary. [R., § 3492; C., '51, § 1970.]

4452. Trial; judgment. 3222. When full return has been made, the court must proceed to hear the parties, or such of them as may attend for that purpose, on the record proceedings and facts as certified, and such other testimony, oral or written, as either party may introduce pertinent to the issue, and may give judgment affirming or annulling the proceedings in whole or in part, or, in its discretion, correcting the same and prescribing the manner in which the party or either of them shall further proceed. [R., § 3493; C., '51, § 1971.]

Sufficient return: Where a proceeding by certiorari was brought to determine the legality of the action of the board of supervisors in submitting to vote the question of changing the location of a county seat, held, that the return of the board showing upon what evidence the board proceeded, and in what manner they reached the result upon which the order was based, was proper: Stone v. Miller, 60-243.

Upon a return of the writ of certiorari, held, that it was the duty of the court to examine not only the statement of the defendant made in the return, but also the evidence submitted: Ibid.

Although the writ may be defective in not having a sufficient certificate as to the record, yet if the facts deemed material are in fact certified no objection on account of the insufficiency of the writ can be afterwards raised: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

When the judge returns that notice has been given it will be taken as duly and properly established that notice was given in the proper manner; but if the proof of notice is set out, and it appears to be insufficient, the correctness of the finding of the judge as to the notice will be overcome: Schroder v. Carey, 11-555.

In a certiorari proceeding a certificate of the county auditor as to whether oral evidence was received before the board of supervisors

4453. How prosecuted; appeal. 3223. The action shall be prosecuted by ordinary proceedings so far as applicable, and from the decision of the district [or circuit] court an appeal lies as in other ordinary actions, and the record shall be prepared in the same manner. [R., § 3494; C., '51, § 1972.]

Under the Revision, held, that the proceeding by certiorari was a special proceeding and not a special action: Ainsworth v. House, 31-504.

4454. Limitation on right. 3224. No writ shall be granted after twelve months have elapsed from the time the inferior court, tribunal, board, or officer has, as alleged, exceeded his proper jurisdiction, or has otherwise acted illegally.

The period of limitation commences to run against a proceeding by certiorari to correct error in the action of a board of supervisors in holding a petition for the relocation of a county seat sufficient (§ 372) from the time the board decides to submit the question to vote, and not from the time it passes upon the petition: Jamison v. Board of Supervisors, 47-388.

Where the board of supervisors had, with-touching a particular question is not competent to overturn the action of the board: Woolsey v. Board of Supervisors, 32-130.

Under the Revision, held, that the court could not, in this proceeding, consider errors or illegalities relating to or dependent upon facts not stated in the petition or the writ: Everett v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 28-417; Smith v. Board of Supervisors, 30-531.

Also held, under the Revision, that the case could be heard only on the record returned and that other evidence could not be introduced: Jordon v. Hayne, 36-9.

Under present provisions the court is allowed to consider other evidence than that presented in the return of the writ, but it is not intended to extend the remedy so that inquiry can be made into matters other than the jurisdiction and legality of the proceedings of the inferior court. The provision for the introduction of other evidence is for the purpose of permitting the consideration of all the facts involved in the case bearing upon the issues in the proceeding, touching the jurisdiction and compliance with the law in the case reviewed: Tiedt v. Carstensen, 61-334.

The supreme court cannot, upon certiorari from a lower court, inquire whether the evidence before the latter justified the order made, and thus review, as upon appeal, its decision: Wise v. Chaney, 67-73.

out being authorized to do so, established a ditch and afterwards levied a tax to pay for the construction of the same, held, that a proceeding by certiorari to review their action in levying such tax could be brought within one year after the levy, although more than one year after the alleged establishment of the ditch had expired: Shepard v. Supervisors of Johnson County, 72-258.

TITLE XX.

OF PROCEDURE IN PARTICULAR CASES.

CHAPTER 1.

OF ACTIONS FOR THE RECOVERY OF SPECIFIC PERSONAL PROPERTY.

4455. Where brought; petition. 3225. An action for the recovery of specific personal property may be brought in any county in which the property or some part thereof is situated; the petition must be verified and must contain:

1. A particular description of the property claimed;
2. Its actual value, and where there are several articles, the actual value of each;
3. The facts constituting the plaintiff's right to the present possession thereof, and the extent of his interest in the property, whether it be full or qualified ownership;
4. That it was neither taken on the order or judgment of a court against him, nor under an execution or attachment against him, or against the property. But if it was taken by either of these modes, then it must state the facts constituting an exemption from seizure by such process;
5. The facts constituting the alleged cause of detention thereof, according to his best belief;
6. The amount of damages which the affiant believes the plaintiff ought to recover for the detention thereof. [R., § 3553; C., '51, § 1703.]

Venue: An action of replevin must be brought in the county where defendant resides or some portion of the property is situated. Section 4460 does not authorize the bringing of the action in the county from which the property had been wrongfully removed, unless such county is that of the defendant's residence: Hibbs v. Dunham, 54-559; Parker v. Norris, 56-295.

If the action is brought in another county than that of the residence of defendant or in which some of the property is situated, a change of place of trial should be granted upon application: Parker v. Norris, 56-295.

The venue in such actions is not limited to the county of the residence of the defendant, and if action is brought where the property is situated, the defendant must either disclaim any interest or claim to the property or defend the action in the county where the suit is brought; he is not entitled to a change of the place of trial to the county of his residence: Porter v. Dalhoff, 59-459.

This rule is applicable in actions where bond is not given, and the possession of the property before judgment is not sought. It is also applicable where, although possession of property is sought, no property is actually seized, and that fact will not entitle defendant to have the venue changed to the county of his residence: Laughlin v. Main, 63-580.

Failure of plaintiff to show that the property is situated in the county in which suit is brought will not defeat his action. The remedy of defendant in such case, if the action is brought in the wrong county, would be by motion to transfer it to the proper county, and in case of failure to make such application, no objection to the place of bringing the action can be interposed: Goldsmith v. Willson, 67-662.

Petition; verification: If the petition is not verified the writ cannot legally issue, nor be sustained if issued: Cure v. Wilson, 35-205.

In such an action before a justice of the peace, a sworn petition must be filed before a writ can issue, but it need not be filed before return day. The action is sufficiently commenced by service of original notice: Duffy v. Dale, 42-215.

Description of property: The action cannot be maintained for the recovery of an article that cannot in its nature be distinguished from others, but where the petition described the property as a "six-barreled pistol, called a six-shooter or revolver," held, that the specific article was sufficiently described to support the action: Wright v. Ross, 2 G. Gr., 266.

The description of the property as a "certain storehouse, warehouse and the goods therein contained, being the store, etc., etc., known and designated as the store of your petioner," held sufficient: Ellsworth v. Henshall, 4 G. Gr., 417.

The description in a petition designating the property by an enumeration of the different articles, followed by an averment that they were in the defendant's possession, held sufficient: Fort Dodge v. Moore, 37-388.

In an action for the possession of a piano, held, that a mistake in setting out the number of such instrument as a part of its description would not entitle defendant to a judgment, provided that the mistake clearly appeared: Stephens v. Williams, 46-540.

Plaintiff's right: Plaintiff claiming property by virtue of a chattel mortgage should not allege that he is the absolute and unqualified owner thereof, but should state the nature of his interest. Under an allegation of absolute ownership he cannot recover on proof of an interest as mortgagee: Kern v. Wilson, 73-490.

Wrongful detention: A failure to allege in the petition the wrongful detention of the property is a substantial defect which may be taken advantage of by demurrer or by motion in arrest of judgment or upon appeal: Draper v. Ellis, 12-316.

Where the petition alleged that plaintiff was the absolute owner and entitled to the property, and that defendant wrongfully detained the same, but in further stating the ground of detention showed a state of facts which did not justify the recovery by plaintiff, held, that a demurrer to the petition should have been sustained: Houghtaling v. Hills, 59-287.

Cause of detention in a particular case held to be sufficiently stated: Nolan v. Jones, 53-387.

Exemption of property: The facts constituting the exemption of the property from levy under execution and which are required by statute to be stated, where it is sought to recover property taken under execution, are the facts which render the property exempt from execution under § 4297: Armel v. Lendrum, 47-535.

Although such exemptions are allowed only to residents, yet in a petition to recover such property seized on execution, the fact of residence in the state need not be averred, but non-residence may be set up as a defense: Newell v. Hayden, 8-140.

Prayer for judgment: Although the petition in replevin may be defective in failing to ask a judgment for the possession of property, yet, if the plaintiff is found to be entitled to such possession and no objection to the petition is made in the court below, that objection cannot be raised on appeal: Williams v. Wilcox, 66-65.

Value: The allegations in the petition as to the value of the property or defendant's interest therein do not limit the amount of defendant's recovery in case he is successful, even though such allegations of the petition are not denied by him: Chicago & S. W. R. Co. v. Northwestern U. Packet Co., 38-377.

Answer: A denial of the essential averments of the petition which puts them in issue is sufficient to require plaintiff to maintain the cause of action set up. There is no such technical effect to be given the answer as was given some of the common-law pleas in such cases: Jansen v. Effe, 10-227.

Right of possession: The question in replevin is, who was entitled to the possession of the property at the time the action was brought: Campbell v. Williams, 39-646; Kingsbury v. Buchanan, 11-387.

Replevin will not lie in favor of one who is already in possession of the property in controversy, nor can it be successfully maintained against one who does not detain possession of the property: Hove v. McHenry, 60-227.

One who has sold the property of another, and is neither in possession of it nor colluding with his assignee as to keeping possession, cannot be made liable in an action of replevin: Coffin v. Gephart, 18-256.

Action of replevin cannot be maintained under an executory agreement to deliver possession of property, where no possession has been obtained nor act done under the agreement: Berry v. Berry, 31-415.

Detention: The gist of the action of replevin is the wrongful detention of the property: Draper v. Ellis, 12-316.

Ownership is not necessary to enable a party to recover. The present possession may be recovered by one entitled thereto, even against the owner: McCoy v. Cadde, 4-557.

A person who claims ownership in goods in an action of replevin and establishes an interest therein is entitled to recover although such interest is not the entire value of the property: Jones v. Hetherington, 45-681.

To entitle plaintiff to recover in an action of replevin it is not essential that he should have the legal title to the property, but he may recover on a naked right of possession, such as that of mortgagor, where mortgagee has not asserted his right to possession: Goldsmith v. Wilson, 67-662.

Ownership as evidence of right to possession: A plaintiff may urge his right to possession and maintain it by proof of ownership, which in the absence of proof to the contrary carries with it the right to possession: Cassel v. Western Stage Co., 12-47.

Proof of possession is affirmative proof of ownership, and makes out a prima facie case, but proof of an after-acquired possession, it appearing that it was procured wrongfully, will not avail: Cumberledge v. Cole, 44-181.

Burden of proof: In an action of replevin the burden of proof is upon plaintiff, and he must recover solely upon the strength of his own title and not upon the weakness of that of his opponent: Hamilton v. Iowa City Nat. Bank, 40-307.

In an action of replevin the burden is upon plaintiff to show himself entitled to possession of the property. If defendant relies upon the claim of plaintiff being fraudulent, the burden of proof is then upon him to establish such fraud: Hardy v. Moore, 62-65.

An answer by defendant setting up a purchase of the property from a third person who is alleged to have been the owner thereof, as defendant believes, is equivalent to denying plaintiff's ownership and throws the burden of proof of ownership upon him: Litchfield v. Halligan, 48-126.

Setting up claims of another: Where a plaintiff in a replevin suit abandoned the case, and the issue as to who was entitled to possession was between the defendant holding possession under execution against a third party and an intervenor claiming under a bill of sale from plaintiff, held, that the intervenor's bill of sale made out a prima facie case for him, and defendant could not defeat it by showing title in plaintiff: Burrows v. Waddell, 52-195.

Where one took possession of certain property as purchaser, asking the payment of certain mortgages, and brought action of replevin therefor in his own name, held, that he was not in a position to assert or protect the rights of the mortgagees as their agent: McNorton v. Akers, 24-369.

Demand, when necessary: Proof of demand will only be required where it is necessary to terminate defendant's right of possession or confer such right on plaintiff: Stanchfield v. Palmer, 4 G. Gr., 23; Gilchrist v. Moore, 7-9; Smith v. McLean, 24-322; Redding v. Page, 52-406; Osvego Starch Factory v. Lendrum, 57-573.

One who verbally bargains for the sale of personal property but pays nothing thereon, no time or place being fixed for its delivery, must make demand and tender of the purchase money (in the absence of an agreement for credit) before the action for replevin will lie. A tender after suit brought will not entitle plaintiff to recover: Hart v. Livingston, 29-217.

Where the taking of the property by defendant has been wrongful, no demand before suit is necessary: Robinson v. Keith, 25-321; Delancey v. Holcomb, 26-94; Jones v. Clark, 37-586.

Where plaintiff and defendant claim under distinct or independent titles, demand is not necessary: Redding v. Page, 52-406.

Where plaintiff alleged that he was the owner of property and that defendant claimed possession thereof under a levy against a third person wrongfully claiming title thereto, held, that an averment of demand was not necessary: Osvego Starch Factory v. Lendrum, 57-573.

To recover property seized under execution or attachment: If property is erroneously seized on execution against a third party, the party entitled to the possession thereof may bring action to recover the same: Gamble v. Ackley, 12-27; Shea v. Watkins, 12-605; Ramsden v. Wilson, 49-211.

And this is true even though the property is not in the possession of the officer, but of his bailee: Ralston v. Black, 15-47.

And the same rule holds in case of a seizure under a writ of attachment against one not the owner: Miller v. Bryan, 3-58; Smith v. Montgomery, 5-370.

Replevin may be maintained by the owner of property against an officer who has seized and holds it under a writ of replevin issued against another person, in an action to which the real owner was not a party: Davis v. Gambert, 57-239.

The fact that the writ under which the officer claims to hold is from another court than that in which the action of replevin is brought will not deprive the latter court of jurisdiction: Ramsden v. Wilson, 49-211; Seaton v. Higgins, 50-305.

The provision for replevying property in the hands of an officer under judicial process cannot be applied as between a federal court and a state officer holding the property under the authority of a state court: Senior v. Pierce, 31 Fed. Rep., 625.

Replevin will lie for property wrongfully seized by an officer under execution, as, for instance, where the process under which the levy is made is void: Armel v. Lendrum, 47-535.

So where the levy was under process issued under an unconstitutional statute, held, that replevin would lie for the property: Cooley v. Davis, 34-128.

The general rule is that property seized on a legal writ issued by a court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter under a valid statute cannot be replevied by the owner: Armel v. Lendrum, 47-535.

So held where it was sought to show that the judgment under which the levy was made had been satisfied: Ibid.

Exempt property: The party whose property is attached may maintain replevin if it is exempt from execution although he has failed to move to have the attachment dissolved on that ground as he might have done: Wilson v. Stripe, 4 G. Gr., 551.

Notice: An action of replevin cannot be maintained against an officer to recover property claimed to have been improperly seized by him unless written notice of the claim of such person is first served upon him: See notes to § 4280.

But if the officer proceeds to trial upon the simple issue as to the right of property he may be considered as waiving the notice, and cannot afterwards, by interposing the technical defense of want of notice, defeat the action. It is enough if in such case he is allowed to recover costs: Warder v. Hoover, 51-491.

In what cases replevin will lie; right to office: Parties cannot in replevin try the right to office held by a person not a party to the action, as, for instance, by claiming that a levy by a person acting as an officer was not valid by reason of his not having properly qualified: Lufkin v. Preston, 57-28.

Between partners: The right of possession, and the value of such right, recognized in the action, must be such as are recoverable in an action at law, and the accounts of partners and the extent of interest of each, as growing out of the partnership relation, cannot be determined: Kuhn v. Newman, 49-424.

Possession of note: Action under this chapter may be brought by the maker to recover the possession of a promissory note: Graff v. Shannon, 7-508.

And it is not a valid objection in such action that the note, being paid, is of no value: Savery v. Hays, 20-25.

A bailee who gives a receipt for property is estopped from denying his bailor's right to possession, and cannot set up the ownership of a third party as a defense to an action of replevin: Reed v. Reed, 13-5.

A joint owner cannot recover in replevin from a pledgee of his co-owner's interest, where he could not if the action had been against the part owner who made the pledge: Frans v. Young, 24-375.

Undivided interest; growing crops: While it is well settled that where chattels of the same nature and quality belonging to different owners are mingled in one mass, any owner may claim his aliquot part by replevin, yet where property of different owners is not susceptible of division, as in case of growing crops or in case of joint ownership of a single piece of property, replevin will not lie by one joint owner, because the property sought to be recovered is not susceptible of seizure and delivery to plaintiff: Read v. Middleton, 62-317.

Property severed from the realty: Where a party has by his own tortious act severed an article from the realty which but for such severance would still be real property, replevin will lie for its recovery. But such an act will not render the property liable to execution, if as a part of the realty it was exempt: Congregational Society v. Fleming, 11-533.

Action may also be brought for the recovery of a house which, as between the parties, is mere chattel property: District Tp v. Moorehead, 43-466.

Replevin will lie to recover a building which is being wrongfully removed from the land of the owner: Crum v. Hill, 40-506.

Rescission of sale: In an action for the recovery of property sold, on the ground that a note given in consideration therefor was void, held, that as the note was apparently valid and was outstanding, a judgment for the recovery of the property was erroneous: Gittings v. Carter, 49-338.

Property seized for taxes: Property seized to satisfy a tax may be recovered in this action when the tax is levied without authority, but not in cases where the authority exists but has been irregularly exercised: Macklot v. Davenport, 17-379; Buell v. Bull, 20-282.

So action will not lie in such case, when the levy was authorized and the warrant under which the treasurer acted was valid, although the assessment was erroneous: Bilbo v. Henderson, 21-56.

Where personal property is taken by an officer to secure payment of taxes, the owner cannot maintain replevin on the ground that a portion of the taxes were illegal, if a part were legal: Emerick v. Sloan, 18-139.

Intoxicating liquors: Replevin will not lie to recover intoxicating liquors seized by an officer by virtue of a search-warrant issued under the provisions of the prohibitory liquor law: Funk v. Israel, 5-438; Weir v. Allen, 41-482.

And this is true even though the recovery is sought on the ground that sufficient facts did not exist to authorize such seizure: Cooley v. Davis, 34-128.

4456. No counter-claim. 3226. The action shall be by ordinary proceedings, but there shall be no joinder of any cause of action not of the same kind, nor shall there be allowed any counter-claim. [R., § 4175.]

Although the statute prohibits any counter-claim in such action, held, that an action for the possession of a note on the ground that it had been paid could properly be set up as a counter-claim to an action on the note: Sigler v. Hidy, 56-504.

4457. Process on Sunday. 3227. If the plaintiff allege in his petition that he will lose his property unless process issue on Sunday, the order may be issued and served on that day. [10 G. A., ch. 14.]

4458. New parties. 3228. If a third person claim the property or any part thereof, the plaintiff may amend and bring him in as a co-defendant, or the defendant may obtain his substitution by the proper mode, or the claimant may himself intervene by the process of intervenor. [R., § 3561; C., '51, § 1684.]

A person claiming to hold a prior incumbance should be allowed to become a party upon application: Parrott v. Hughes, 10-459.

In case of intervention the judgment concludes the original defendant and the intervenor: Witter v. Fisher, 27-9.

The provisions of the statute allowing intervention by a party claiming the property, or any part of it, do not prevent such person from bringing replevin against the sheriff to recover possession of the property: Davis v. Gambert, 57-239.

An assignee in bankruptcy acquires such an interest in the property of the bankrupt fraudulently conveyed that he may maintain an independent action to recover such property. Wetmore v. McMillan, 57-344.

Where a party has himself substituted for the sheriff in an action of replevin, plaintiff, if entitled to a judgment against the original defendant, is entitled to judgment against such substituted defendant for costs: Komick v. Perry, 61-238.

BOND — ORDER.

4459. When bond required. 3229. When the plaintiff desires the immediate delivery of the property, he shall execute a bond to the defendant, with sureties to be approved by the clerk, in a penalty at least equal to twice the value of the property sought, conditioned that he will appear at the next term of the court and prosecute his suit to judgment and return the property

if a return be awarded, and also pay all costs and damages that may be adjudged against him. The bond shall be filed with the clerk of the court, and is for the use of any person injured by the proceeding, and a judgment for money rendered against the plaintiff shall go against the sureties on the bond. [R., § 3554.]

Judgment against sureties on the bond: Where the judgment in a replevin suit determines the title of the property, it cannot be questioned in an action on the bond; but when such judgment simply determines the right to possession, the title may be afterwards investigated, in action on the bond, to determine the amount of damages: Harmann v. Goodrich, 1 G. Gr., 13; Buck v. Rhodes, 11-343; Hawley v. Warner, 12-42.

The surety on the bond cannot appeal from a judgment against his principal in a justice's court, and relitigate his principal's claim to the property; he is bound by the judgment: Crites v. Littleton, 23-205.

While the judgment should direct the return of the property, nevertheless the surety will be bound, although the judgment against the principal be only for the value of the property: Mason v. Richards, 12-73.

Where plaintiff dismisses his action and thereupon a judgment for the return of the property is entered in favor of defendant, the question of title is not settled by the judgment, and it is competent, in an action on the replevin bond, to show by way of defense that the ownership of the property was actually in the plaintiff: Buck v. Rhodes, 11-343.

The judgment entered on the replevin bond is at least prima facie evidence of the measure of damages in an action against the obligor in a bond of indemnity given to a surety on the replevin bond; and where to this is added proof that he has paid the whole amount of the judgment, it is sufficient to establish his claim unless rebutted: Lyon v. Northrup, 17-314.

In an action upon a replevin bond for the non-return of the property, the record in the replevin suit is admissible in evidence: McGinnis v. Hart, 6-204.

The liability of the sureties cannot be increased by the action of other creditors after the bond is given and the writ served: McNorton v. Akers, 24-369.

The sureties are regarded as in court and bound by the judgment against the principal; and if, by his consent, a judgment is rendered against him containing a provision that it shall be stayed a certain length of time, the sureties are not thereby released: Hershler v. Reynolds, 22-152.

The court may render an alternative judgment and enter the same so far as it is for money against the sureties on the bond: Wilkins v. Treymor, 14-391.

Aside from statutory provision judgment against sureties cannot be rendered without their being made parties to an action on the bond and having their day in court: Jansen v. Effey, 10-227; Mason v. Richards, 12-73; Hurd v. Gallcher, 14-394.

Where the party from whom the property is taken is adjudged not to be entitled to its possession, the liability upon the bond ceases, and there is no authority for holding sureties liable to a different degree and to another party claiming under an entirely different title: Christy v. Vest, 36-285.

Where attached property is replevied and released by bond in that action, the attaching creditor may pursue the property or the sureties on the bond, but he cannot hold the sureties and at the same time subject the property to another liability in the same action: Struman v. Robb, 37-311.

Where an action of replevin was brought to recover possession of property to which plaintiff was entitled by verdict alone, and subsequently his action was consolidated with others in which the title to the property was involved, the only thing preventing a judgment for plaintiff in the replevin suit being such consolidation, held, that the sureties upon the replevin bond were discharged from any liability: Edwards v. Cottrell, 43-194.

Measure of damages: Where the property is taken under the writ, and defendant shows himself entitled to its return, the judgment on the replevin bond should be for the value of the property at the date of the trial and not for its value at the time of seizure: Clement v. Duffy, 54-632.

Also held, that, where plaintiff in the replevin suit had been to the expense of threshing and marketing grain which had been seized by him in the stack, the proper amount of such expense should be deducted from the value of the grain: Ibid.

4460. Clerk to issue order. 3230. The clerk shall thereupon issue an order, under his hand and seal of the court, directed to the sheriff, requiring him to take the property therein described and deliver the same to the plaintiff. And where the petition shows that the property has been wrongfully removed into another county from the one in which the action is commenced, the order may issue from the county whence the property was so wrongfully taken, and may be served in any county where the property may be found, in the same manner and with like effect as in the county where suit is brought. [R., § 3555; C., '51, § 1997; 14 G. A., ch. 123.]

The writ: Quashing the writ should not have the effect of abating the suit: Minott v. Vineyard, 11-90.

It is error to render judgment against plaintiff for mere failure to produce the writ when called for after it has served its purpose and property has been seized thereunder: Saubman v. Greatrakes, 34-598.

In a summary proceeding by motion to quash a writ on the ground of fraud in procurring the jurisdiction of the property, the evidence to authorize the court to set aside its process ought to be clear and satisfactory: Gordon v. Bucknell, 38-438.

4461. Following property. 3231. When any of the property is removed to another county after the commencement of the action, counterparts of the proper order may issue on the demand of the plaintiff to such other county, and may be executed upon such goods found in such county, and farther orders and the necessary counterparts thereof may issue as often as may be necessary. [R., § 3556.]

ORDER — EXECUTION OF.

4463. Defendant examined on oath. 3233. When it appears by affidavit that the property claimed has been disposed of, or concealed so that the order cannot be executed, the court or judge may compel the attendance of the defendant, and examine him on oath as to the situation of the property, and punish a wilful obstruction or hindrance, or disobedience of the order of the court in this respect as in case of contempt. [R., § 3558.]

Evidence of contempt in disobeying the order of court with reference to the property should be by affidavit as provided in relation to contempts in general. Oral evidence is not proper: State v. Myers, 44-580.

4464. Property delivered to plaintiff. 3234. The sheriff having taken the property, or any part thereof, shall forthwith deliver the same to the plaintiff. [R., § 3560.]

Where the sheriff, instead of taking actual possession of the property and delivering it to the plaintiff, left it with the defendant, taking his receipt therefor, held, that plaintiff acquired no possession of the property, and was entitled to an alternative judgment: Davis v. Bayless, 51-435.

A plaintiff in an action to recover property claimed to be exempt from execution, which is levied upon by an officer, and which is returned to plaintiff upon the execution of the bond, may give good title to a third party purchasing of him, and the lien of the execution will not, upon judgment being rendered against the plaintiff, revive against the property in the hands of such purchaser. The officer can only have recourse on the bond: Gimble v. Ackley, 12-27.

If the plaintiff had no title to the property, then he could confer none, although the property was in his possession under the writ, and a purchaser from him would take nothing by the purchase: Ibid.

Where plaintiff in an action against an officer has obtained possession of property levied upon and then dismisses before issue is joined, and the property is allowed to remain in plaintiff's hands, a mortgage executed by plaintiff while the property is thus in his possession will be superior to the claim of the officer under a writ of restitution or a subsequent levy, the plaintiff being in fact the real owner: Case v. Woleben, 52-389.

Where defendant elects to take a money judgment, it is no defense that part of the property has been lost or destroyed while in plaintiff's possession: Lillie v. McMillan, 52-463.

4465. Delivery bond. 3235. At any time before the actual delivery to the plaintiff, the defendant may stay all proceedings under the aforesaid order and retain the property in his own possession, by executing a bond to the plaintiff, with sureties to be approved by the clerk or sheriff, conditioned that he will appear in and defend the action, and deliver the property to the plaintiff if he recover judgment therefor, in as good a condition as it was when the action was commenced, and that he will also pay all costs and damages that may be adjudged against him for the taking or detention of the property.

Where defendant in an action of replevin retains the property by giving a delivery bond, subsequent loss or destruction of the property in defendant's hands will not release him from the obligation to account for its value under his bond in case of judgment against him: Hinkson v. Morrison, 47-167.

4466. Inspection; appraisalment. 3236. But when the property is so retained by the defendant, he shall permit the sheriff and plaintiff to inspect the same; and if the plaintiff so request, the sheriff shall cause the property to be examined and appraised by two sworn appraisers, chosen by the parties to the action, or, in their default, by the sheriff himself, in the manner provided for other cases of appraisalment; and he shall return their appraisalment with the execution.

4467. Return of order. 3237. The sheriff must return the order on or before the first day of the trial term, and shall state fully what he has done thereunder. If he has taken any property he shall describe particularly the same. And if he has taken a bond from the defendant as provided in the preceding section, he shall file the same with his return. [R., § 3559.]

JUDGMENT AND EXECUTION.

4468. Assessment of value and damages. 3238. The jury must assess the value of the property, as also the damages for taking or detention, whenever by their verdict there will be a judgment for the recovery or the return of the property, and when required so to do by either party, must find the value of each article thereof. [R., § 3082.]

Where the jury found generally for defendant for a particular sum, but did not award him the possession of the property. held, that it would not be presumed that the successful party was found entitled to the possession of the property: Hunt v. Bennett, 4 G. Cr., 512.

Where the property is taken by plaintiff under the writ and judgment is rendered in his favor, a failure to assess the value of the property cannot be prejudicial to defendant: Williams v. Wilcox, 66-65.

The failure to return the value of each article will not prevent the party entitled to the property from having judgment for the aggregate value. Therefore a failure of plaintiff to prove the value of particular articles, a recovery of which is sought in the action, will not be a ground for taking the case from the jury: Goldsmith v. Wilson, 67-662.

Error of the jury in finding the entire value of the property instead of plaintiff's interest therein will not defeat the judgment where plaintiff has not elected to take judgment for the value of the property, and defendant may satisfy the judgment by turning over the property itself: Ormsby v. Nolan, 69-130.

4469. Form of judgment. 3239. The judgment shall determine which party is entitled to the possession of the property, and shall designate his right therein, and if such party have not the possession thereof, shall also determine the value of the right of such party, which right shall be absolute as to an adverse party having no right in such property, and shall also award such damages to either party as he may be entitled to for illegal detention of such property. [R., §§ 3562, 3567.]

Judgment: Although, after the property is seized, it be determined in some other forum that plaintiff is not the owner of the property, yet defendant is not entitled to judgment as by default for its value, and plaintiff may introduce evidence upon the question of value: Dehr v. Lampton, 31-172.

Defendant taking a money judgment can recover only the value of his right in the property, and that value cannot exceed the amount of the claims for which he held the property when taken from him: McNorton v. Akers, 24-369.

Where an action of replevin is brought against a party having a lien upon the property, he is entitled to a judgment for its possession or for the value of his interest therein, but is not entitled to judgment for the full value of the property: Knudson v. Gieson, 38-234.

Where property is wrongfully taken from a sheriff who holds it under execution levy, the execution plaintiff in an action for damages is limited in his recovery to the amount still due him with interest and costs: Hayden v. Anderson, 17-158.

Where in an action of replevin to recover property seized under an execution it is determined that the execution is void, plaintiff should have a judgment for the return of the property, although his additional claim that the execution which is against another party as defendant is wrongfully levied upon property of which he is the rightful owner is not sustained: Balm v. Nunn, 63-641.

If plaintiff establishes his right to the property he may have judgment for its value, although at the time suit was brought the property was not in defendant's possession: Hardy v. Moore, 62-65.

The entire legal rights of the parties to the suit in the property in controversy should be adjudicated in the main action, and such an adjudication is as conclusive and final as in any other action: Hayden v. Anderson, 17-153.

Judgment for defendant should direct the return of the property: Chadwick v. Miller, 6-34; Mason v. Richards, 12-73; Jansen v. Effey, 10-227.

Judgment in favor of defendant may include interest on the value of the property from the time it was taken by the plaintiff: Hurd v. Gallaher, 14-394.

It is only in the judgment that it is necessary to specify which party is entitled to the property. Where plaintiff was in possession under the writ, a verdict of the jury for the plaintiff, simply, was held sufficient to warrant judgment that he was entitled to the possession: Newlien v. Reed, 30-496.

The party found entitled to possession may have judgment for the money value, or have return of the property, at his election: McNorton v. Akers, 24-369.

And an alternative judgment, allowing plaintiff execution for the specific property, or, in case that cannot be obtained, then for its value, is proper: Clark v. Warner, 32-219.

If defendant is entitled to judgment, he may have a money judgment against plaintiff and his sureties for the value of the property: Armel v. Lendrum, 47-535.

Measure of damages: In an action against a sheriff to recover property illegally seized, plaintiff cannot show by way of damages that he was compelled, for the purpose of getting the writ, to deposit with his surety a bond as indemnity: Wilson v. Hillhouse, 14-199.

Plaintiff is not limited in recovering damages for detention of the property to cases where he takes a judgment for its possession, but may have such damages for detention also, where he elects to take judgment for the value of the property: Cook v. Hamilton, 67-394.

Where the petition stated that plaintiff was in possession of the goods as agent, and the value of such goods, and that defendant had deprived plaintiff of their possession, held, that the value of the goods stated was the amount of recovery which could be had against defendant if he could not obtain the goods: Morris v. Burley, 74-45.

Dismissal: Plaintiff cannot, without defendant's consent, so dismiss the action as to deprive him of his right to have damages assessed and a return of the property awarded: Hall v. Smith, 10-45.

Where plaintiff dismisses his action, and defendant seeks to have the damages sustained by him assessed, plaintiff is considered as being in default and cannot demand a jury trial: Wilkins v. Treynor, 14-391.

Upon dismissal of the action by plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to the return of the property, or judgment for the value of his interest therein: Marshall v. Bunker, 40-121.

The dismissal of the action by plaintiff will not prevent defendant from recovering judgment for "the value of his right," and the cause should be retained for the purpose of settling such right. But if such matter is pleaded by defendant after the dismissal by the plaintiff, the latter should not be regarded as in default, but should be allowed to plead and introduce evidence upon the issue raised: Crist v. Francis, 50-257.

Where plaintiff sought to recover possession of property held by the sheriff, but did not allege service of notice of his ownership upon the sheriff, and thereafter, upon demurrer being interposed on that ground, the court allowed him to dismiss his action upon payment of costs, and, upon payment to the sheriff of the amount of the judgment for which the property was seized, to retain possession of the property, held, that under the facts appearing there was no error: Reisner v. Currier, 58-213.

4470. Execution; form of. 3240. The execution shall require the sheriff to deliver the possession of the same, particularly describing it, to the party entitled thereto, and may, at the same time, require the sheriff to satisfy any costs, damages, or rents and profits, with interest, recovered by the same judgment, out of the property of the party against whom it was rendered subject to execution, and the value of property for which judgment was recovered to be specified therein, if a delivery thereof cannot be had, and shall in that respect be deemed an execution against property. [R., § 3253.]

4471. Plaintiff's option. 3241. If the party found to be entitled to the property be not already in possession thereof by delivery under the provisions of this chapter, or otherwise, he may, at his option, have execution for the specific delivery of the property, or for the value thereof as determined by the jury. And if any article of the property cannot be obtained on execution, he may take the remainder with the value of the missing articles. [R., §§ 3563, 3568.]

Whether the successful party must make his election as to whether he will take the property or its value, at the time of judgment, or may do so when execution issues, seems left in doubt; but where the judgment was that plaintiff have immediate possession of the property, and, in default thereof, recover the value, held, that the judgment amounted to an election to take the property, and it should have been accepted when tendered, and the judgment satisfied: Oskaloosa Steam Engine Works v. Nelson, 54-519.

The provision allowing the successful party to have execution for the property or its value at his option is intended to apply only to cases in which the court has jurisdiction to try and determine the merits of the controversy: Williams v. Chapman, 60-57.

Under the statute two distinct remedies are provided: First, the delivery of the property to plaintiff; second, where this is not or cannot be done, the rendition of a judgment in his favor for value. Only the first of these forms of proceeding is in the nature of the common-law action of replevin, and the other partakes of the nature of a common-law proceeding in detinue: Laughlin v. Main, 63-580.

Where the judgment was for a return of the property, and in default thereof that plaintiff recover of defendant a certain sum as the value of the same, held, that defendant could elect to tender the property within a reasonable time, and that when a tender was made within such time the plaintiff might be enjoined from enforcing by execution the alternative judgment for the money value: McClellan v. Marshall, 19-561.

Where a party took judgment for the property, held, that such judgment was an election by him to take the property instead of a money judgment for its value, and he was only entitled to its value in default of recovery of the property by proper process, and upon tender of the property he was bound to receive it and enter satisfaction of the judgment: Oskaloosa Steam Engine Works v. Nelson, 54-519.

Where by defendant's own act and the act of plaintiff the property is restored to defendant before judgment is rendered in his favor, he cannot recover the value of the property but only damages for its unlawful detention: Harrow v. Ryan, 31-156.

4472. Judgment on bond. 3242. When property for which a bond has been given, as hereinbefore provided, is not forthcoming to answer the judgment, and the party entitled thereto elects to take judgment for the value thereof, such judgment may be entered against the principal and sureties in the bond.

See notes to § 4459.

4473. When property has been concealed. 3243. When it appears by the return of the officer, or by the affidavit of the plaintiff, that any specific property which has been adjudged to belong to one party, has been concealed or removed by the other, the court or a judge may require him to attend and be examined on oath respecting such matter, and may enforce its order in this respect as in the case of contempt. [R., § 3564.]

4474. Exemption. 3244. A money judgment taken under the provisions of this chapter in lieu of property exempt from execution, shall also be, to the same extent, exempt from execution, and from all set-off or diminution either by the adverse party or by any other person, and such exemption may, at the option of the party, be stated in the judgment. [R., § 4176.]

Where the property has been voluntarily sold, a money judgment for the purchase price thereof is not exempt: Harricr v. Fassett, 56-264.

CHAPTER 2.

OF ACTIONS FOR THE RECOVERY OF REAL PROPERTY.

4475. By ordinary proceedings; joinder; counter-claim. 3245. Actions for the recovery of real property shall be by ordinary proceedings, and there shall be no joinder and no counter-claim therein, except of like proceedings and as provided in this chapter. [R., § 4177.]

4476. Parties; right. 3246. Any person having a valid subsisting interest in real property, and a right to the immediate possession thereof, may recover the same by action against any person acting as owner, landlord, or tenant of the property claimed. [R., § 3569; C., '51, § 2002.]

Parties: A person who has taken possession of and erected improvements upon land under a parol license to mine has such an interest in the real estate that the owner cannot revoke the license at once, and the licensee may assert his right to possession by this action:

Bush v. Sullivan, 3 G. Gr., 344; Beatty v. Gregory, 17-109.

This action cannot be brought against the holder of a tax certificate, (Arguendo): Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160, 174.

A person who is the agent of the owner of real property cannot maintain such action in his own name: McHenry v. Painter, 58-365.

Although action may be brought against the tenant of a non-resident, the statute of limitations does not run in favor of such non-resident: Heaton v. Fryberger, 38-185.

The owner of an undivided interest may recover such interest: Hughes v. Holliday, 3 G. Gr., 30.

The widow may bring this action for her dower. She is not limited to a statutory pro-

4477. Title. 3247. The plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title. [R., § 3591; C., '51, § 2020.]

Plaintiff's title: In an action of this kind the plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title. Under the pleadings he must show the legal title to be in himself: Huntington v. Jewett, 25-249.

Plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title and not on the weakness of defendant's: Hurley v. Street, 29-429.

As plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title, if he fails to establish such title he cannot sustain his action, whether defendants have any right or not: Reed v. Wright, 2 G. Gr., 15.

Where the conveyance upon which plaintiff relied as showing title was found to be fraudulent, held, that he could not recover: Boulton v. Orr, 51-473.

If defendant sets up an adverse and independent chain of title in a cross-bill, plaintiff cannot, by way of demurrer, object to defects and informalities in such title, raising an issue as to persons not parties in the case: Lathrop v. American Emigrant Co., 41-547.

One who is in possession as a mere trespasser or intruder cannot protect himself by setting up an outstanding title in a stranger: Williams v. Swetland, 10-51.

Where plaintiff in an action to recover real property claimed under a tax deed and set out an abstract of the title, showing title in defendant at the time of such tax sale, held that, on introduction of evidence of the payment of taxes by defendant before the sale, he was entitled to judgment without proving title to have been in him at that time, the admissions in plaintiff's abstract of title being sufficient for that purpose: Easton v. Randall, 45-111.

The provision that plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title is not applicable in actions to quiet title: Russell v. Nelson, 32-215.

If judgment is for defendant it should be that plaintiff has no title, not that defendant has title: Litchfield v. Railroad Co., 7 Wall., 270.

What sufficient chain of title: Where both parties claim title through a common grantor, it is sufficient to prove the derivation of title from him without proving his title: Cooley v. Brayton, 16-10; Byers v. Rodabaugh, 17-53.

A deed of a party claiming from a grantor not shown to have had title is not sufficient to establish title in the party claiming it, nor to ceeding for admeasurement, nor to an action in equity. The statute of limitations does not commence to run against her right until it is denied: Rice v. Nelson, 27-148.

An equity will not support an action at law to recover possession of land against the holder of the legal title: Pendergast v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 53-326.

In an action at law where no equitable defense is pleaded, the legal title must prevail: Goepinger v. Ringland, 62-76.

In an action to recover real estate based alone upon right of possession, plaintiff cannot recover if he is not the owner of the legal title: Kitteringham v. Blair Town Lot, etc., Co., 66-280.

As to equitable defenses, see notes to § 4482.

raise a presumption of actual possession in such party: Wearin v. Munson, 62-466.

In order to establish title in himself, a party must show not only a conveyance to him from another, but trace the title to the general government. The fact that a deed offered in evidence for the purpose of establishing a party's title does not clearly describe the premises is not ground for refusing to receive it: Heinrichs v. Terrell, 65-25.

Where plaintiff claimed title by virtue of a conveyance, but it appeared from the chain of title that prior to the deed to his grantor a deed to the property had been made by the then owner to another party, held, that this previous conveyance being unexplained, the title did not appear to be in plaintiff, and he could not claim anything thereunder: Huston v. Markley, 49-162.

In showing a good title plaintiff must not only show conveyance from a previous grantee, but that such grantee had title: Armstrong v. Pierson, 4 G. Gr., 45.

In an action of right plaintiff is only required to show title back to a landlord of defendant's whose title defendant has acknowledged, defendant being estopped thereby: Morrison v. Wilkerson, 27-374.

Parol evidence: To the general rule that parol evidence is not admissible to prove title to real estate there are exceptions. If the title paper is lost its contents may be shown; or a parol purchase of real estate may be proved, followed by payment of the purchase money or the taking of possession under such contract; or if the vendor is himself the witness to prove such sale, parol evidence is admissible: Davis v. Stroh, 17-421.

Sufficiency of evidence of title: One who seeks to overturn a legal title must have proof, clear, satisfactory and conclusive, and not made up of loose and random conversations: Parker v. Pierce, 16-227.

Where a mother had procured land from her husband under decree of divorce and granted it to her daughter, and there was nothing in the record to show but that the daughter still held the legal title, though her husband had obtained a judgment for the land in an action against the mother alone, subsequent to the conveyance, held, in an action by the husband against a third party for trespass, that he had failed to show title: O'Hagan v. Clinesmith, 24-249.

4478. Tenant in common. 3248. In an action by a tenant in common, or joint tenant of real property against his co-tenant, the plaintiff must show, in addition to his evidence of right, that the defendant either denied the plaintiff's right or did some act amounting to such denial. [R., § 3605; C., '51, § 2027.]

4479. Service on agent. 3249. When the defendant is a non-resident, having an agent of record for the property in the state, service may be made upon such agent in the same manner and with the like effect as though made on the principal. [R., § 3572; C., '51, § 2004.]

PETITION — ANSWER — TRIAL.

4480. Form of petition. 3250. The petition may state generally that the plaintiff is entitled to the possession of the premises, particularly describing them, also the quantity of his estate and the extent of his interest therein, and that the defendant unlawfully keeps him out of possession, and the damages, if any, which he claims for withholding the property; but if he claims other damages than the rents and profits, he shall state the facts constituting the cause thereof. [R., § 3570.]

The petition may contain a general averment of the right claimed without a statement of the facts upon which it is intended to sustain such right: Phillips v. Blair, 38-649.

It is sufficient for plaintiff to state the extent of his interest, etc. He need not state the evidence upon which he expects to prove it: Larum v. Wilmer, 35-244.

Plaintiff may recover for the use and occupation as well as for the title and possession: Dunn v. Starkweather, 6-466. And see notes to § 4491.

4481. Abstract of title. 3251. The plaintiff shall attach to his petition, and the defendant to his answer, if he claims title, an abstract of the title relied on, showing from and through whom such title was obtained, together with a statement showing the page and book where the same appears of record. If such title, or any portion thereof, is not in writing, or does not appear of record, such fact shall be stated in the abstract, and either party shall furnish the adverse party with a copy of any unrecorded conveyance, or furnish a satisfactory reason for not so doing within a reasonable time after demand therefor. No written evidence of title shall be introduced on the trial, unless it has been sufficiently referred to in such abstract, which, on motion, may be made more specific, and may be amended as other proceedings.

Under Revision, which did not contain this section, held, that copies of the title papers need not be attached to the petition, the provision as to setting out the writing on which the action is founded (see § 3854) not being applicable to such a case: Boardman v. Beckwith, 18-293.

4482. Answer. 3252. The answer of the defendant, and of each if more than one, must set forth what part of the land he claims, and what interest he claims therein generally, and if as mere tenant, the name and residence of his landlord. [R., § 3573; C., '51, § 2005.]

Before the adoption of the provision allowing equitable defenses in an action at law, (§ 3861), an equitable title was held to be no defense against a legal one: Page v. Cole, 6-153; Farley v. Goocher, 11-570.

In an action of right to recover possession of real estate it is a good equitable defense to show that defendant took possession and made improvements under a contract of sale made by plaintiff's grantor of which plaintiff had notice at the time of purchasing and which defendant has always stood ready to carry out: Warren v. Crew, 22-315.

In an action based on a legal title to recover possession of real property, the defendant may show as an equitable defense that he is in possession under a contract of purchase with plaintiff's grantor, of which plaintiff had notice before acquiring his title: Baldwin v. Lowe, 22-367.

In an action at law to recover possession defendant may plead and rely upon an equitable title as a defense, even though by reason of the statute of limitations he is precluded from affirmative relief: Adams County v. Graves, 75-642.

A prior adjudication may be introduced in evidence without being pleaded as an estoppel: Larum v. Wilmer, 35-244.

Defendant is not obliged to set out details of his title, but only what he claims; but if he undertakes to show his title he should give it such definiteness that his adversary may be informed and enabled to meet it: Gillis v. Black, 6-439.

4483. Landlord substituted. 3253. Whenever it appears that the defendant is only a tenant, the landlord may be substituted by the service upon him of original notice, or by his voluntary appearance, and the judgment shall be conclusive against him. [R., §§ 3571, 3589; C., '51, § 2003.]

This section does not require the landlord to be made a party; it is only permissive: State v. Orwig, 34-112.

4484. Possession. 3254. Where the defendant makes defense, it is not necessary to prove him in possession of the premises. [R., § 3575; C., '51, § 2007.]

Where defendant denies plaintiff's right to the premises, his actual possession need not be proved: Kerr v. Leighton, 2 G. Gr., 196.

4485. Alienation. 3255. An action for the recovery of real property against a person in possession, cannot be prejudiced by any alienation made by such person after the commencement of the action. [R., § 3578.]

4486. Power to enter and survey. 3256. The court, on motion and after notice to the opposite party, may, for cause shown, grant an order allowing the party applying therefor to enter upon the land in controversy and make survey and admeasurement thereof, for the purposes of the action. [R., § 3592; C., '51, § 2021.]

4487. Order therefor. 3257. The order must describe the property, and a copy thereof must be served upon the owner or person having the occupancy and control of the land. [R., § 3593; C., '51, § 2022.]

4488. Verdict. 3258. The verdict may specify the extent and quantity of the plaintiff's estate, and the premises to which he is entitled, with reasonable certainty, by metes and bounds and other sufficient description according to the facts as proved. [R., § 3594.]

4489. General verdict. 3259. A general verdict in favor of the plaintiff without such specifications, entitles the plaintiff to the quantity of interest or estate in the premises as set forth and described in the petition. [R., § 3595.]

4490. Judgment for damages only. 3260. If the interest of the plaintiff expire before the time in which he could be put in possession, he can obtain a judgment for damages only. [R., § 3579; C., '51, § 2010.]

This section has reference to cases where plaintiff holds a limited or determinable interest which expires, and not to cases where he holds an absolute estate, and pending the suit conveys to a third person. In the latter case the suit may be prosecuted to judgment in the name of the original plaintiff (§ 3766): Jordan v. Ping, 32-64.

This provision was apparently framed with reference to the case of a lease or demise: Olive v. Daugherty, 2 G. Gr., 393.

4491. Use and occupation. 3261. The plaintiff cannot recover for the use and occupation of the premises for more than six years prior to the commencement of the action. [R., § 3576; C., '51, § 2008.]

The widow in an action for the recovery of dower may recover damages from the grantee of her husband from the time of demand for a period not exceeding the six years' limitation: O'Ferrall v. Simplot, 4-381.

Judgment for the use and occupation of the premises for the full six years cannot be rendered against heirs upon whom descent has been cast within that time. They are only liable for the time during which they have been in possession after the death of the ancestor. A claim for rents and profits accruing before the death of the ancestor must be prosecuted against the administrator: Cavender v. Smith, 8-360.

This six-year limitation applies only in actions to recover real property. General actions for rents, etc., are barred in five years under the provisions of § 3734: Muir v. Bozarth, 44-499.

So actions for use and occupation generally are barred within five years: Tibbets v. Morris, 42-120.

This limitation does not prevent a party from setting off rents and profits of real estate against a claim for improvements under the occupying claimant law: See § 3151 and notes.

4492. Improvements set off. 3262. When the plaintiff is entitled to damages for withholding, or using, or injuring his property, the defendant may set off the value of any permanent improvements made thereon to the extent of the damages, unless he prefers to avail himself of the law for the benefit of occupying claimants. [R., § 3596; C., '51, § 2023.]

Setting off improvements: If plaintiff waives damages, or all but nominal damages, defendant cannot interpose a claim for improvements made: Daniels v. Bates, 2 G. Gr., 151.

Improvements upon land purchased by defendant may be set off as well as those made by him: Wright v. Stevens, 3 G. Gr., 63.

If defendant avails himself of the benefit of the occupying claimant law, rents and profits may be set off against his claim for improvements: See § 3151 and notes.

4493. Wanton aggression. 3263. In case of wanton aggression on the part of the defendant, the jury may award exemplary damages. [R., § 3597; C., '51, § 2024.]

4494. Tenant; extent of liability. 3264. A tenant in possession in good faith, under a lease or license from another, is not liable beyond the rent in arrear at the time of suit brought for the recovery of land, and that which may afterward accrue during the continuance of his possession. [R., § 3598.]

This section applies only to cases where tenant is joined as defendant or in some manner restrained from paying rent to his landlord. Otherwise he is not bound to retain rent in his hands to await the result of the litigation: Gardner v. Gardner, 25-102.

4495. Growing crops. 3265. If the defendant aver that he has a crop sowed, planted, or growing on the premises, the jury finding for the plaintiff, and also finding that fact, shall further find the value of the premises from the date of the trial until the first day of January next succeeding, and no execution for possession shall be issued until that time, if the defendant executes, with surety to be approved by the clerk, a bond in double such sum to the plaintiff, conditioned to pay at said date the sum so assessed. This bond shall be part of the record, and shall have the force and effect of a judgment, and if not paid at maturity, the clerk, on the application of the plaintiff, shall issue execution thereon against all the obligors. [R., § 3599.]

These provisions are not applicable where defendant is a tenant under an execution debtor, and plants or sows his crops knowing that they cannot be harvested before his right of possession will be terminated by the expiration of the period of redemption after execution: Wheeler v. Kirkendall, 67-612.

4496. Writ of possession. 3266. When the plaintiff shows himself entitled to the immediate possession of the premises, judgment shall be entered and a writ of possession issued accordingly. [R., § 3577; C., '51, § 2009.]

After plaintiff in an action to recover possession has had judgment in his favor and defendant has been put out of possession by legal process, plaintiff may have an injunction in an equitable action to restrain defendant from continuing in possession of the property in disregard of the judgment and process: Ten Eyck v. Sjoburg, 68-625.

4497. Judgment for rent accruing. 3267. The plaintiff may have judgment for the rent of the possession which accrues after judgment and before delivery of possession, by motion in the court in which the judgment was rendered, ten days' notice thereof in writing being given, unless judgment is stayed by appeal and bond given to suspend the judgment, in which case the motion may be made after the affirmance thereof. [R., § 3600.]

NEW TRIAL.

4498. When granted; grounds of. 3268. In any of the cases provided for by this chapter, the court, in its discretion, may grant a new trial on the application of any party thereto, or those claiming under a party, made at any time within one year after the former trial, although the grounds required for a new trial in other cases are not shown; but only one such new trial shall be granted. [R., § 3584; C., '51, § 2014; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 31.]

Greater latitude is allowed in granting new trials in such actions than in other actions, though the discretion given the court is a legal one: White v. Poorman, 24-108.

Such discretion may be reviewed on appeal. But unless it appears that it has been improperly exercised the action of the court will not be reversed: Coleman v. Case, 66-534.

It cannot be said that the discretion of the court has been improperly exercised in refusing a new trial unless it fairly appears that a different result could be reasonably expected should a new trial be granted: Ibid.

Where an appeal is taken from a judgment in an action of right, and the cause is remanded from the supreme court to the lower court for judgment in accordance with its opinion, the judgment so rendered is a judgment of the lower court, and a new trial may be granted in the same manner as if no appeal had been taken: Butterfield v. Walsh, 25-263.

While these provisions apply to such actions only, yet the fact that an equitable defense was set up and tried in such action does not prevent the granting of a new trial: Ibid.; Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 49-657.

The showing for a new trial in a particular case held sufficient: Floyd v. Hamilton, 10-552.

These provisions do not apply in actions to quiet title: Russell v. Nelson, 32-215.

It is not contemplated by these statutory provisions that the adverse party shall have notice of the application for a new trial, nor that he shall be allowed to controvert a showing made therefor: Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 55-157.

4499. Notice of new trial. 3269. If the application for a new trial is made after the close of the term at which the judgment was rendered, the party obtaining a new trial shall give the opposite party ten days' notice thereof before the term at which the action stands for trial. [R., § 3585.]

4500. Rights not affected. 3270. The result of such new trial, if granted after the close of the term at which the first trial took place, shall in no case affect the rights of third persons acquired in good faith for a valuable consideration since the former trial. [R., § 3586; C., '51, § 2015.]

4501. Damages. 3271. But the party, who, on such new trial, shows himself entitled to lands which have thus passed to a purchaser in good faith, may recover the proper amount of damages against the other party, either in the same or a subsequent action. [R., § 3587; C., '51, § 2016.]

4502. Writ of restitution. 3272. The party who has been successful in such new trial, shall, if the case require it, have his writ of restitution to restore him his property. [R., § 3588; C., '51, § 2017.]

QUIETING TITLE.

4503. Who may bring action. 3273. An action to determine and quiet the title of real property may be brought by any one having, or claiming an interest therein, whether in or out of possession of the same, against any person claiming title thereto, though not in possession. [R., § 3601; C., '51, § 2025.]

Who may bring action: Action to quiet title may be brought by a party out of possession against one in possession. Plaintiff is not required to resort to an action for possession: Lewis v. Soule, 52-11; Lees v. Wetmore, 58-170.

And plaintiff may, in such case, also ask the recovery of possession: Lees v. Wetmore, 58-170.

But aside from statutory provision, a party not in possession cannot maintain an action to remove a cloud from his title: Harrington v. Cabbage, 3 G. Gr., 307.

While an action to recover real property is the appropriate and most effectual remedy where defendant is in possession, nevertheless in such cases an action to quiet title may be maintained: Lewis v. Soule, 52-11.

In the federal courts a party out of possession having the legal title cannot have such equitable relief, his remedy at law being sufficient: Whitehead v. Entwistle, 27 Fed. Rep., 778; Newman v. Westcott, 29 Fed. Rep., 49.

A party who has sold and conveyed all his interest in the title to land cannot thereafter maintain an action to quiet the title of the same: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 39-507.

One who has an equitable title to land may maintain an action to quiet title against one who has no right thereto, without first having his legal title perfected, as, for instance, by having the reformation of his deed in equity. But the purchaser of a void title has no equity as against a rightful claimant of the property: Rankin v. Miller, 43-11.

Executors entitled to the possession and control of land for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of a will have sufficient interest to support this action: Laverty v. Sexton, 41-435.

If a tax deed upon unoccupied land has been recorded, either the tax purchaser or the original owner may bring action against the other to quiet title within the five years' limitation provided by § 1388: Barrett v. Love, 48-103.

One who does not show competent title in himself cannot have the title to property quieted as against the holder of a tax title, although the statutory period has run against an action by such tax-title holder to assert his rights in the property: Varnum v. Shuler, 69-92.

When action maintainable: The owner and possessor of real estate is entitled to go into equity to quiet his title against one who lays claim thereto and gives out and claims that he has title: Standish v. Dow, 21-363.

Where plaintiff had been in possession, under claim and color of title, at the time defendant acquired a void tax title, held, that plaintiff could recover and hold possession as against defendant holding under such void title, and be restored in equity to his rights, notwithstanding defects in his claim of title: Keokuk & D. M. R. Co. v. Lindley, 48-11.

Where a bond for a deed had been executed, and afterwards the agreement had been rescinded, but the bond was not delivered up, held, that an action to quiet title as against the holder of the bond was proper: Smith v. Van Campen, 40-411.

The owner of land who has remained in possession thereof for such length of time after the issuance of a tax deed that action by the holder of the tax title to recover possession is barred may maintain action against the holder of such tax title to remove the cloud caused by the tax deed, and such action will not be barred by the statute which bars an action for the recovery of real property sold for the non-payment of taxes: Peck v. Sexton, 41-566.

Where defendant set up a tax deed, and plaintiff, in reply, alleged that defendant's rights thereunder were barred, held, that this did not amount to an admission by plaintiff of defendant's title, and would not prevent a decree for plaintiff: Tabler v. Callanan, 49-362.

The fact of a cloud upon the title of property sold cannot be set up as ground for enjoining an action for the purchase money, but may perhaps be interposed to prevent the enforcement of the judgment when recovered: Dietz v. Mock, 47-451.

This action can only be brought against a person claiming title (decided under Code of '51 and Revision): Fejervary v. Langer, 9-159; Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27-160, 176.

4504. Petition. 3274. The plaintiff must file his petition under oath, setting forth the nature and extent of his estate, and describing the premises as accurately as may be, and averring that he is credibly informed and believes that the defendant makes some claim adverse to the estate of the petitioner, and praying for the establishment of the plaintiff's estate against such adverse claims, and that the defendant be barred and forever estopped from having or claiming any right or title to the premises adverse to the plaintiff. The notice in such action shall accurately describe the property, and, in general terms, the nature and extent of plaintiff's claim, and shall be served as in other cases. [R., § 3602; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 32.]

Notice of publication: The action may, by statutory provision, be brought against a non-resident defendant on notice by publication: Miller v. Davison, 31-435. But a judgment in such case will not bar the non-resident, who has made no appearance, from afterward asserting his right to the property in a federal court: Pitts v. Cloy, 27 Fed. Rep., 635.

A petition substantially embodying the averments here mentioned, with a general prayer for equitable relief, will justify the granting of this relief, though it be not specifically asked: Paton v. Lancaster, 38-494.

4505. Disclaimer of title. 3275. If the defendant shall appear and disclaim all right and title adverse to the plaintiff, he shall recover his costs. In all other cases the costs shall be in the discretion of the court. [R., § 3603; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 33.]

4506. Equitable proceedings. 3276. In all other respects, the action contemplated in the three preceding sections shall be conducted as other actions by equitable proceedings, with the modifications prescribed by this chapter so far as the same may be applicable. [R., § 3604; C., '51, § 2026.]

The proceedings under these provisions for quieting title are not special proceedings: Miller v. Davison, 31-435.

An action to quiet title under the statute is, in effect, an equity suit and must be brought and determined as such: Balmear v. Otis, 4 Dillon, 558.

The provisions that, in an action to recover real property, plaintiff must rely solely on the strength of his own title (§ 4477), and in regard to new trials in such actions (§ 4498), are not applicable in actions to quiet title: Russell v. Nelson, 32-215.

Relief, other equitable relief, as well as a decree quieting title, may be asked in the same petition: Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 49-657.

A court of equity has jurisdiction to quiet title and to restrain those having adverse titles from setting them up against the paramount title, but defects and irregularities in the title arising out of the official acts of the ministers of the law will not be cured. However, the action of the court in exercising its power in such a case would not be void for want of jurisdiction, but merely erroneous: Stevenson v. Bonesteel, 30-286.

Where a case stood upon a cross-bill to quiet title and a defense of an oral contract to convey, held, that it was of equity jurisdiction, and a motion to transfer it to the law docket was properly overruled: Harlan v. Porter, 50-446.

Unless it appears that the cloud upon plaintiff's title cannot be removed by an action of ejectment, or that the title could not be settled so as to prevent a multiplicity of suits without the aid of chancery, complainant will be left to his remedy at law: Harrington v. Cabbage, 3 G. Gr., 307.

As the right of possession to property is something distinct from the title, it does not follow that, upon judgment for defendant for costs in an equitable action to set aside defendant's title, the defendant is entitled to the right of possession: Lombard v. Atwater, 43-399.

Where plaintiff claims in such an action that he is owner of the property, a judgment in his favor is an adjudication of any right of ownership thereto which defendant might have set up: Reed v. Douglas, 74-244.

In this action the recovery of the possession of the property may be awarded by decree: Wyland v. Mendel, 78-739.

PERMANENT SURVEY OF LANDS; LOST CORNERS.

4507. Surveys upon agreement; record; plat. 15 G. A., ch. 8, § 1. Whenever the owner or owners of adjacent tracts of land shall desire to establish permanently the lines and corners thereof between them, he, she, or they may enter into a written agreement to employ and abide by the survey of some surveyor; and after said survey is completed, a plat thereof, with a description of all corners and lines plainly marked and described thereon, together with the written agreement of the parties, shall be recorded in the recorder's office of the county where the lands are situated; or after any survey of lands is completed and the parties interested therein as owners are satisfied with such survey, or when the owners of adjoining lands desire to perpetuate existing lines and corners heretofore made between them, it shall be lawful for them to cause a plat thereof to be made, with a description of all such lines and corners made thereon, which plat shall be acknowledged before some officer authorized to take the acknowledgment of deeds, and signed by each of said owners as an agreement between them so far as relates to such lines and corners; all of which shall be recorded in the recorder's office of the county in which the lands are situated; and the lines and corners so made and described, and recorded, shall be binding upon the parties entering into said agreement and signing said plats, their heirs, successors, and assigns, and shall never be changed.

4508. Application for commission; notice. 15 G. A., ch. 8, § 2. Whenever one or more proprietors of land in this state, the corners and boundaries of whose lands are lost, destroyed, or are in dispute, or who are desirous of having said corners and boundaries permanently established, and who will not enter into agreement as provided by section first of this act [§ 4507], it shall be lawful for said proprietor or proprietors that they shall cause a notice in writing to be served on the owner or owners of adjacent tract or tracts, if known and residing in the county where said lands are situated, or if not known and not residing in such county, by publishing in a newspaper published in such county, and if no newspaper shall be published, then by putting up in four different public places in said county, a written or printed notice to the effect that on a day named therein he, she, or they will make application to the district court of the county in which said lands are situated, at its next succeeding term, for the appointment of a commission of one or more surveyors to make survey of and permanently establish said corners and boundaries, which notice shall be posted up at least four weeks before the time appointed for said application; and one of said notices shall be in the precinct or township in which said corners and boundaries are situated.

In what cases: It is only where the location of the government corner cannot be definitely ascertained that a dispute as to a boundary line can possibly arise. If the corner has been obliterated or lost, then evidence of its true location may be heard by the commissioners, and upon a consideration of such evidence and a survey the disputed boundary is established by them: Mitchell v. Wilson, 70-332.

The fact that division lines have been established by a surveyor, where such action of the surveyor is disputed, does not prevent proceedings to fix such lines from being brought and the lines established under these provisions: Strait v. Cook, 46-57.

Proceedings: Such proceedings are special proceedings triable on appeal like an ordinary action and not de novo: In re Harrington, 54-33.

Where the commissioners have determined facts which render the final location of the corner a mere matter of measurement, they may properly postpone the expense of actual survey until the court acts upon their report: Ibid.

The proceeding contemplated in this statute is a summary proceeding designed to determine and locate the true division line between land holders without issue in court or trial by jury: Gates v. Brooks, 59-510.

The statute, although not contemplating trial by jury, is not unconstitutional on that account: Ibid.; Coombs v. Quinn, 66-469.

Actions of this character not being triable de novo on appeal, the finding of the commissioners and court must have the force and effect of the verdict of a jury: Vitoe v. Richardson, 58-575.

The report of the commissioners cannot have the effect of the verdict of a jury. The commissioners are simply officers of the court, appointed for the purpose of aiding the court in establishing the true boundary line: Mitchell v. Wilson, 70-332.

When a petition is presented to the court for the appointment of a commission under this statute, the court has jurisdiction to look into the nature of the controversy and dismiss the petition if the controversy does not appear to be such as to justify the appointment of a commission: Smith v. Scoles, 65-733.

The petition should state the facts in dispute sufficiently to enable the court to determine the nature of the controversy. If it does not, a motion for more specific statement will be proper. If the court errs in dismissing the petition, this action can be reviewed on appeal after its dismissal. The party would not have the right to commence a new proceeding on the same facts: Ibid.

Where it was stated in a petition that certain persons named as defendants were the only persons that would be affected by the proceedings, and it appeared that but one of them had been served with a notice or had made appearance, held, that the court nevertheless acquired jurisdiction to appoint a commissioner as between the plaintiff and the defendant who appeared, unless it was shown that there were other persons who were necessary parties: Nesselrode v. Parish, 59-570.

Evidence: Commissioners appointed in this proceeding need not notify defendant of the time of making the survey, but if they fail to notify him so that he can offer evidence, and material evidence is thus omitted to his prejudice, the report should be rejected: Nesselrode v. Parrish, 52-269.

Service by publication: In such a proceeding, in order to warrant service by publication as therein contemplated, the facts authorizing such publication must appear from the record: Ibid.

Report: The evidence, plat and survey accompanying the report is a part of it and becomes of record in the same manner as the report, and therefore it is not necessary that they be preserved by a bill of exceptions: Davis v. Curtis, 68-66.

It was not the intention of the legislature to impose upon the commissioners the trial of the question of adverse possession of lands, and where they find no marked government corner, but do find one that has been acquired in by the adjoining proprietors for ten years, they should report that fact to the court, and it should be the end of the proceeding: Ibid.

Hearing: The court is authorized on hearing the report of the commissioner to strike out evidence reported and confirm his report upon the remaining evidence without resubmitting it to the commissioner: Caldwell v. Nash, 68-658.

An any time before the final submission of the cause, the court may, at least upon proper showing, receive any evidence tending to show the location of the corner and the boundary line; and in its discretion it may set aside the report of the commissioners and make a new reference to the same or other commissioners to consider the new evidence together with what had been previously taken, and, if deemed necessary, to make another survey: Mitchell v. Wilson, 70-332.

Restoring survey: The land is not to be resurveyed as if there had been no survey, but the original survey is to be restored in such manner that the different tracts affected thereby shall bear the same relation to each other as by the original survey: Moreland v. Page, 2-139; Newcomb v. Lewis, 31-488.

The true method of establishing a lost corner in a particular case considered: Anderson v. Peterson, 74-482.

4509. Appointment and proceedings of commission. 15 G. A., ch. 8, § 3. Upon the filing of proper petition and proof of due notice aforesaid, the said court shall appoint a commission of one or more surveyors, entirely disinterested, to make said survey, who shall proceed to make said survey and report his or their proceedings to that or the next term of said court, accompanied by a plat and notes of said survey; and each of said surveyors shall be authorized to administer an oath to any of the assistants necessary in the execution of said survey, to faithfully and impartially perform their respective duties, and take the evidence under oath administered by the surveyor, and incorporate the same with his or their survey, of any person or persons, who may be able to identify any original government corner, or witness thereto, or government line, tree, or other noted object, or any other legally established corner, or other corners that have been recognized as such by the adjoining proprietors for over ten years.

4510. Proceedings in court. 15 G. A., ch. 8, § 4. Upon the filing of said report, any person whose interests may be affected by said survey shall be at liberty to enter his objections to said report, and the court shall hear and determine said objections, and enter an order or judgment either approving or rejecting said report, or modifying and amending the same according to the rights and interests of the parties, or may refer the same back to said commission to correct their report and survey in conformity with the judgment of the court; or the court may for good reason set aside said commission and appoint a new one, who shall proceed anew, and determine the boundaries and corners of the lands in question. The corners and boundaries established in said survey, as approved in the final judgment of the court, if not appealed from within thirty days, shall be held and considered as permanently and unalterably established according to said survey. The expenses and costs of the surveys and suit shall be apportioned among all the parties according to their respective interests.

OF PARTITION.

4511. By equitable proceedings. 3277. The action for partition shall be by equitable proceedings, and no joinder or counter-claim of any other kind shall be allowed therein, except as provided by this chapter. [R., § 4178.]

Partnership: Where land belongs to a partnership a partner has no such interest therein as to entitle him to an action for partition: Pennybacker v. Leary, 65-220.

Water-power: A water-power owned in common is subject to partition: Doan v. Metcalf, 46-120; Cooper v. Cedar Rapids Water-Power Co., 42-398.

Dower: In action for partition the distributive share of the widow may be determined and set off, and proceedings for admeasurement of dower are not exclusive. But partition should not be brought to compel an election between the homestead and a distributive share of the property until it has been determined whether any, and if so, how much, of the realty must be sold for the payment of debts: Thomas v. Thomas, 73-657.

In severalty: Partition cannot be had of real estate owned in severalty by several owners, for the purpose of determining metes and bounds of the several portions: Johnson v. Moser, 72-523.

Joinder; counter-claim: This section does not prevent a defendant in a foreclosure proceeding from asking relief which involves the partition of the land covered by the lien: Hammond v. Perry, 38-217.

So, also, a claim of defendants against plaintiff, for rent, damages, etc., pertaining to the property, may be set up in the answer and should be heard: Metcalf v. Hoopgardner, 45-510.

But an agreement entered into by a son to pay a certain mortgage on his parents' property, the proceeds of which were advanced to him, held not to be after the parents' death such a lien on the son's share as could be set up against him in a proceeding under the statute for the partition of the property. But the obligation of such a son to pay taxes on said land, under the lease of the same to him, is such a lien as can be set up as a counter-claim against a grantee taking with notice of such agreement: Rider v. Clark, 54-292.

PLEADINGS — PARTIES — TRIAL.

4512. Petition. 3278. The petition must describe the property and respective interests of the several owners thereof, if known. If any interests, or the owners of any interests are unknown, contingent, or doubtful, these facts must be set forth in the petition with reasonable certainty. [R., §§ 3606-7; C., '51, §§ 2028-9.]

4513. Abstract of title. 3279. The plaintiff shall attach to his petition, and the defendant to his answer, if he claims title, an abstract of the title relied on, showing from and through whom such title was obtained, together with a statement showing the page on which the same appears of record. If such title, or any portion thereof, is not in writing, or does not appear of record, such fact shall be stated in the abstract, and either party shall furnish the adverse party with a copy of any unrecorded conveyance, or furnish a satisfactory reason for not so doing within a reasonable time after demand therefor. No written evidence of title shall be introduced on the trial, unless it has been sufficiently referred to in such abstract, which, on motion, may be made more specific, and may be amended as other pleadings.

4514. Contingent interests. 3280. Persons having contingent interests in such property may be made parties to the proceedings, and the proceeds of the property so situated, or the property itself in case of partition, shall be subject to the order of the court until the right becomes fully vested. The ascertained share of any absent owner shall be retained, or the proceeds invested for his benefit under like order. [R., §§ 3647-8; C., '51, §§ 2069-70.]

4515. Lien creditors. 3281. Creditors having a specific or general lien upon the entire property may be made parties at the option of the plaintiff or defendant. [R., § 3608; C., '51, § 2030.]

4516. Answer. 3282. The answers of the defendants must state among other things the amount and nature of their respective interests. They may deny the interest of any of the plaintiffs, and, by supplemental pleading, if necessary, may deny the interest of any of the other defendants. [R., § 3610; C., '51, § 2032.]

4517. Issues; trial. 3283. Issues may thereupon be joined and tried between any of the contesting parties, the question of cost on such issues being regulated between the contestants agreeably to the principles applicable to other cases. [R., § 3612; C., '51, § 2034.]

INCUMBRANCES.

4518. Reference to ascertain incumbrances. 3284. Before making any order of sale or partition, the court may refer to a clerk, or a referee, to report the nature and amount of general incumbrances by mortgage, judgment, or otherwise, if any there be upon any portion of the property. [R., §§ 3623-4; C., '51, §§ 2045-6.]

4519. Proof of. 3285. The referee shall give the parties interested at least five days' notice of the time and place when he will receive proof of the amounts of such incumbrances. [R., § 3625; C., '51, § 2047.]

4520. Issue as to incumbrance. 3286. If any question arise as to the validity or amount of an incumbrance, or the payment of the same, the court may direct an issue to be made up between the incumbrancer and an owner, which shall be decisive of their respective rights; and upon a sale it may order the money to be retained or invested to await final action in relation to its disposition, and notice thereof to be forthwith given to the incumbrancer unless he has already been made a party. [R., §§ 3628-9; C., '51, §§ 2050-1.]

The holder of a mortgage not made a party to the proceedings does not lose his lien on the premises: Lewis v. Atkinson, 15-361.

Where partition was made in ignorance of a mortgage on part of the land and the mortgage was subsequently foreclosed, held under the circumstances not to be error to set aside the partition and make a new one: Bridges v. Howard, 18-116.

4521. Undivided interests. 3287. If the lien is upon one or more undivided interests, the holder thereof shall be made a party, and the lien shall, after partition or sale, remain a charge upon the particular interests of the proceeds thereof, but the amount of costs is a charge upon those interests, paramount to all other liens. [R., § 3609; C., '51, § 2031.]

When liens exist on some of the shares, the lienholders should be made parties, and an account of the amount due on their liens should be taken before order of sale (when sale becomes necessary), in order that a purchaser shall know just the extent of the liens and their rate of interest, and that the interest of the respective parties and all the parties may be protected: Metcalf v. Hoopingardner, 45-510.

4522. Not to delay distribution. 3288. The proceedings in relation to incumbrances shall not delay the distribution of the proceeds of other shares in respect to which no such difficulties exist. [R., § 3631; C., '51, § 2053.]

4523. Confirmation. 3289. After all the shares and interests of the parties have been settled in any of the methods aforesaid, judgment shall be rendered confirming those shares and interests, and directing partition to be made accordingly. [R., § 3615; C., '51, § 2037.]

Undivided interests: These provisions clearly imply that partition is admissible only between persons owning undivided interests, that is, joint owners or tenants in common: Johnson v. Moser, 72-523.

Judgment conclusive: Any claim to the property not set up by a party to the suit before judgment is barred. Nor can a party afterwards set up a different right to the property than that claimed in the suit: Olver v. Montgomery, 29-601.

Appeal: An appeal may be taken from a decree settling the rights and interests of the parties. Such decree is in that respect final: Williams v. Wells, 62-740.

A party who is, by the decree, adjudged to have no interest in the property may appeal from such decree as a final judgment as to himself: Ramsey v. Abrams, 58-512.

PARTITION.

4524. Referees appointed. 3290. Upon entering such judgment, the court shall appoint referees to make partition into the requisite number of shares, or if it is apparent, or the parties so agree, that the property cannot be equitably divided into the requisite number of shares, a sale may be ordered. [R., §§ 3616, 3618, 3619; C., '51, §§ 2038, 2040-41.]

Referees: Where the shares of the parties or the description thereof is not settled by law, or by consent, referees are necessary. So held in an action for the partition of water-power: Doan v. Metcalf, 46-120.

Partition by selling: The power of the legislature to provide that the shares of all parties of property owned in common shall be sold where a division thereof cannot be made has been too long acquiesced in to be now called in question. The owner of an undivided interest has the right at any time to have partition made, and if the premises cannot be divided by metes and bounds, he has the right to compel a sale, and such proceeding is not depriving a party of his property without due process of law: Metcalf v. Hoopingardner, 45-510.

When parties by contract assume the relation of tenants in common in real estate, the law fixes their respective rights, one of which is that the partnership may be dissolved, so to speak, and that, if necessary, the common property may be sold and the proceeds divided: Ibid.

The court may order a sale of the property, even where it is capable of being divided, if the division will materially diminish the value: Branscomb v. Gillian, 55-235.

4525. Shares marked out. 3291. When a partition is deemed proper, the referees must mark out the shares by visible monuments, and may employ a competent surveyor and the necessary assistants to aid them therein. [R., § 3637; C., '51, § 2050.]

4526. Report of referees. 3292. The report of the referees must be in writing, signed by at least two of them. It must describe the respective shares with reasonable particularity, and be accompanied by a plat of the premises, and must allot the shares to their several owners. [R., § 3638; C., '51, §§ 2060-61.]

4527. Special allotments. 3293. For good and sufficient reasons appearing to the court, the referees may be directed to allot particular portions of the land to particular individuals. In other cases the shares must be made as nearly as possible of equal value. [R., § 3617; C., '51, § 2039.]

It is a good and sufficient reason for allotting a particular portion to one tenant in common that he has acquired a homestead in that portion of the undivided premises, or has made valuable improvements thereon: Thorn v. Thorn, 14-49.

In making a final settlement and division between tenants in common the court will look into the peculiar circumstances, and will protect one of the tenants who has made improvements on a portion of the premises by allowing him for such improvements, and if the land is partitioned may allow him the particular property upon which the improvement was made as a portion of his share: Cooper v. Frederick, 4 G. Gr., 403.

The doctrine that where a tenant in common lays out money in improvements he must be compensated therefor before partition is made, or receive in the partition the portion so improved, is not applicable to cases where the other tenants in common contributed to the improvements: Conrad v. Starr, 50-470.

4528. Partition of part. 3294. When partition can be conveniently made of part of the premises, but not of all, one portion may be partitioned and the other sold as hereinafter provided. [R., § 3640; C., '51, § 2062.]

4529. Report set aside. 3295. On good cause shown, the report may be set aside and the matter again referred to the same or other referees. [R., § 3641; C., '51, § 2063.]

Upon setting aside the referee's report the case may again be referred to the same or any other referee. If the case is not again sent to a referee a new trial should be granted and the case again tried upon the issues of fact in the manner determined by law or the agreement of the parties. The court should not for itself, in such a case, try issues of fact, no agreement for trial in that form having been made: Lyons v. Harris, 73-292.

4530. Judgment. 3296. Upon the report of the referees being confirmed, judgment thereon shall be rendered that the partition be firm and effectual forever. [R., § 3642; C., '51, § 2064.]

A judgment in partition proceedings operating as a conveyance is to be construed by the same rules which apply to ordinary conveyances. Therefore if the estate created would be "in entirety" if held under an ordinary deed, so it must be under the judgment: Hoffman v. Stigers, 28-302.

4531. Costs. 3297. All the costs of the proceedings in partition shall be paid, in the first instance, by the plaintiffs, but eventually by all the parties in proportion to their interests, except those costs which are created by contests above provided for. [R., § 3645; C., '51, § 2065.]

In an action for partition, a defendant who disclaims any right or interest in or title to the premises at the time the action is brought, or afterwards, and does not appear to be in possession or acting inconsistently with the disclaimer, is entitled to be dismissed with his costs: Urban v. Hopkins, 17-105.

In determining whether there was a contest respecting the extent of the plaintiff's share, so as to affect the question of costs, the court will not be justified in taking a very critical view of the proceedings; the question is whether there was practically a contest; and if the parties actually engaged in such contest, whether regularly raised in the pleadings or not, that fact is sufficient to control the question of costs: Duncan v. Duncan, 63-150.

4532. Attorneys' fees. 20 G. A., ch. 184, § 1. In all actions for partition of real estate where there is no defense made no greater attorney fee shall be allowed by the court to be taxed for and as attorney fees in such action for partition than provided in section two hereof [§ 4533].

Where an action was brought in form for partition, but in fact to determine the title to real estate which was in dispute, held, that the fees of plaintiff's attorney could not be taxed as a part of the costs: McClain v. McClain, 52-272.

4533. Limit. 20 G. A., ch. 184, § 2. For the first two hundred dollars or less in value of the property to be partitioned ten per cent., for the excess of two hundred dollars to five hundred dollars five per cent., and for the excess over five hundred to one thousand dollars three per cent., for all excess over one thousand one per cent.

SALE.

4534. Referees to give bond. 3298. Before proceeding to sell, the referees shall give a bond, in a penalty to be fixed by the court, payable to the parties who are entitled to the proceeds, with sureties to be approved by the clerk, conditioned for the faithful discharge of their duties. At any time thereafter, the court may require farther and additional security, and upon failure of the referees to comply with such order, they may be removed by the court and others appointed; and the court may at any time, for satisfactory reasons, remove such referees and appoint others. [R., § 3620; C., '51, § 2042.]

4535. Notice; private sale; appraisalment. 3299; 21 G. A., ch. 130. The same notice of sale shall be given as when lands are sold on execution by the sheriff, and the sale shall be conducted in like manner. Provided, that whenever in the discretion of the court such lands can be disposed of to better advantage, and with less expense at private sale than in the manner hereinbefore provided, the same may be sold in compliance with such terms as are ordered by the court, but in such case the real estate shall be duly appraised by three disinterested freeholders to be appointed by the court, and sold for not less than the appraised value. [R., § 3621; C., '51, § 2043.]

4537. Conveyance. 3301. If the sale be approved and confirmed by the court, an order shall be entered directing the referees, or any two of them, to execute conveyances pursuant to such sale. But no conveyances can be made until all the money is paid, without receiving from the purchaser a mortgage of the land so sold, or other equivalent security. [R., § 3633; C., '51, § 2055.]

Approval of sale: The approval of the sale is essential, and inadequacy of price alone is sufficient to justify the court in refusing its approval: Loyd v. Loyd, 61-243.

Fraud: Where it appears that the purchaser at a judicial sale, in partition, for a consideration induced other persons intending to bid from so doing, the sale and approval of the court will be set aside for fraud: Fleming's Heirs v. Hutchinson, 36-519.

4538. Validity. 3302. Such conveyances so executed, being recorded in the county where the premises are situate, shall be valid against all subsequent purchasers, and also against all persons interested at the time who were made parties to the proceedings in the mode pointed out by law. [R., § 3634; C., '51, § 2056.]

4539. When parties are married. 3303. If the owner of any share thus sold has a husband or wife living, and if such husband and wife do not agree as to the disposition that shall be made of the proceeds of such sale, the court must direct it to be invested in real estate, under the supervision of such person as it may appoint, taking the title in the name of the owner of the share sold as aforesaid. [R., § 3635; C., '51, § 2057.]

4540. Sales disapproved. 3304. If the sales are disapproved, the money paid and the securities given must be returned to the persons respectively entitled thereto. [R., § 3636; C., '51, § 2058.]

4542. Life estates. 3306. If a tenant for life or years be entitled as such to a part of the proceeds of the sale, and if the parties cannot agree upon the sum in gross which they will consider an equivalent for such estate, the court shall direct the avails of the incumbered property to be invested and the proceeds to be paid to the incumbrancer during the life-time of the incumbrance. [R., § 3630; C., '51, § 2052.]

Where a wife's dower interest was only a life estate it was held that it was not such a case as contemplated by this section, and that she could not be compelled to allow the property to be sold and the proceeds invested: Clark v. Richardson, 32-399.

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

4543. Of personal property. 3307. Any mortgage of personal property to secure the payment of money only, and where the time of payment is therein fixed, may be foreclosed by notice and sale as hereinafter provided, unless a stipulation to the contrary has been agreed upon by the parties, or may be foreclosed by action in the proper court. [R., § 3649; C., '51, § 2071.]

Sale valid: In a particular case, held, that the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage in which the sale was in accordance with the agreement between the parties was valid, no want of good faith on the part of the mortgagee being shown: Gear v. Schrei, 57-666.

Personal judgment: The mortgagee is not precluded from recovery upon the mortgage debt because he permits the property covered by the mortgage to be sold for an inferior claim or lien: Jones v. Turck, 33-246.

If, in the foreclosure proceeding, any property be sold not covered by the mortgage, no title will pass by such sale, and therefore injunction cannot be maintained by a junior mortgagee to restrain the foreclosure of a senior mortgage upon property which it is claimed is not covered thereby: Rankin v. Rankin, 67-322.

Under the circumstances of a particular case, held, that a sale under mortgage was valid, and that the fact that the property was by a previous appraisal higher than by a subsequent one under which it was sold, was not evidence of fraud: Tootle v. Taylor, 64-629.

Where a part of the chattels included in the chattel mortgage have been sold, it seems that the purchaser may require the balance of the property to be exhausted before taking the part sold, but he cannot require the mortgagee to foreclose his mortgage before it is due; and where he complains of negligence of the mortgagee in allowing other property to escape, he must show, in order to entitle himself to relief, that such property would have been sufficient to satisfy the mortgage: High v. Brown, 46-259.

A sale made under power to sell given by the mortgage, without the posting of notices as required by law, will not be invalid in such sense that it will not confer title upon the purchaser, but it will pass a perfect title to the property and the mortgagor will be divested of his right and interest in it: Campbell v. Wheeler, 69-588.

Redemption by creditor: A creditor of the mortgagor may, before forfeiture, pay the mortgage debt and levy upon the property, or, if a forfeiture has taken place, he may tender the amount, and, if refused, go into chancery to redeem at any time before the equity of redemption has been barred by foreclosure, or he may garnish the mortgagee for the value of the property in excess of the debt secured: Torbert v. Hayden, 11-435.

When the debt secured by the mortgage is entirely paid off by a sale of a portion of the property sufficient to pay the debt and all costs connected with the sale, the right to possession of the unsold portion of the property ceases to exist either at law or in equity against the mortgagor or his assignee: Bellamy v. Doud, 11-285.

In equity: A chattel mortgage may also be foreclosed by an action in equity: Packard v. Kingman, 11-219.

A party claiming to hold a prior incumbrance should be allowed, on application, to be made a party to the foreclosure: Parrott v. Hughes, 10-459.

4544. Notice. 3308. The notice must contain a full description of the property mortgaged, together with the time, place, and terms of sale. [R., § 3650; C., '51, § 2072.]

4546. Return. 3310. The service and return must be made in the same manner as in the case of the original notice by which civil actions are commenced, except that no publication in the newspapers is necessary for this purpose, the general publication directed in the next section being a sufficient service upon all the parties in cases where service is to be made by publication. [R., § 3652; C., '51, § 2074.]

4547. Notice of sale. 3311. After notice has been served upon the parties, it must be published in the same manner, and for the same length of time, as is required in cases of the sale of like property on execution, and the sale shall be conducted in the same manner. [R., § 3653; C., '51, § 2075.]

4548. Title of purchaser. 3312. The purchaser shall take all the title and interest on which the mortgage operated. [R., § 3654; C., '51, § 2076.]

4549. Bill of sale. 3313. The sheriff conducting the sale shall execute to the purchaser a bill of sale of the personal property, which shall be effectual to carry the whole title and interest purchased. [R., § 3655; C., '51, § 2077.]

4550. Evidence of service perpetuated. 3314. Evidence of the service and publication of the notice aforesaid, and of the sale made in accordance therewith, together with any postponement or other material matter, may be perpetuated by proper affidavits thereof. [R., § 3656; C., '51, § 2079.]

4551. Affidavits. 3315. Such affidavits shall be attached to the bill of sale, and shall then be receivable in evidence to prove the facts they state. [R., § 3657; C., '51, § 2080.]

4552. Validity of sales. 3316. Sales made in accordance with the above requirements, are valid in the hands of a purchaser in good faith, whatever may be the equities between the mortgagor and mortgagee. [R., § 3658; C., '51, § 2081.]

4553. How contested. 3317. The right of the mortgagee to foreclose, as well as the amount claimed to be due, may be contested by any one interested in so doing, and the proceeding may be transferred to the district [or circuit] court, for which purpose an injunction may issue if necessary. [R., § 3659; C., '51, § 2082.]

After a transfer of the cause to court by injunction or otherwise the case stands as a foreclosure in court, and, where usury is made to appear, a judgment of forfeiture in favor of the school fund may be rendered: Haultm v. Parsons, 33-207.

The injunction is not to issue as a matter of right where it is not necessary to protect the rights of parties interested, and they have already adopted another proceeding affording a full and complete remedy: Sweet v. Oliver, 56-744.

This provision does not prevent one whose property is seized without shadow of right, upon the pretense that it is covered by the mortgage (as where it has been, by valid agreement, released from the mortgage at the time of its purchase from the mortgagor), from bringing an action at law to recover the property: Black v. Howell, 56-630.

4554. Deeds of trust. 3318. Deeds of trust of real or personal property may be executed as securities for the performance of contracts, and shall be considered as, and foreclosed like mortgages. [R., § 3673; C., '51, § 2096.]

OF REAL PROPERTY.

4555. By equitable proceedings. 3319. No deed of trust, or mortgage of real estate, with or without power of sale, made since the first day of April, A. D. 1861, shall be foreclosed in any other manner than by action in court by equitable proceedings. [R., §§ 3660, 3673, 4179; C., '51, §§ 2083, 2096; 11 G. A., ch. 116.]

The nature of foreclosure proceedings discussed: Kramer v. Ribman, 9-114.

Remedy exclusive: This section simply requires that the holder of a mortgage shall proceed, if at all, in a certain manner. It does not refer to a case where a party seeks to redeem from an absolute deed as from a mortgage, and in such case the court may decree that plaintiff pay the amount necessary to redeem within a time fixed or the deed will become absolute: White v. Lucas, 46-319.

Petition: A petition asking judgment upon a note, and an execution against the property covered by a mortgage given to secure the same, is not a petition to foreclose the mortgage, and does not address itself to the chancery jurisdiction of the court: Ballard v. Koons, 10-534.

A bill asking foreclosure of a mortgage and making third parties defendants for the purpose of cutting off their equities is not objectionable for multifariousness: Greither v. Alexander, 15-470.

Prayer: Foreclosure of a mortgage may be granted in an equitable action, where it would be proper relief under the facts stated, under a prayer for general relief, although a foreclosure is not specifically asked: Hait v. Ensign, 61-724.

An attachment may be prayed for in connection with the action to foreclose a mortgage: Baldwin v. Buchanan, 10-277.

Foreclosure against right of way: The mortgagee of land from which a right of way has been condemned, and who has not been made party to such proceeding, may have a foreclosure against the entire property, with a judgment providing that the property be first offered for sale subject to the right of way, and in case it will not sell for enough to pay off the mortgage, then that the right of way be sold with the property or separate from it as shall be found most advantageous: Severin v. Cole, 38-463.

For instalment: See notes to § 4561.

Claim against estate: Where the mortgagor of real estate has died and the mortgagee has filed in the county court the notes secured as claims against the estate, which have been allowed but not paid, the mortgagee may either obtain judgment in the probate court or foreclose the mortgage by separate proceeding: Moore v. Ellsworth, 22-299.

Correction of mortgage: The mortgagee is entitled, after foreclosure and sale of the property thereunder, to have a misdescription of the mortgage reformed: Provost v. Rebnan, 21-419.

Notice by publication: When a non-resident executes a mortgage upon property in Iowa, it must be held that he executes the same with reference to the laws of Iowa relating to such instruments, and the statutory methods for the enforcement of such conveyances must be deemed a part of the contract of the parties. Hence, in foreclosure proceedings in the state courts, a decree of foreclosure in a proceeding against a non-resident served with notice by publication is proper, the judgment being in rem only: Palmer v. McCormick, 28 Fed. Rep., 541.

Assignees as plaintiffs: Two assignees of different notes secured by the same mortgage cannot properly bring a joint action to foreclose the mortgage: Raukin v. Major, 9-297.

Where, pending an action to foreclose as to part of the notes secured by a mortgage, a person acquired a note secured by the same mortgage, but junior to those sued on, and from a person not made defendant, held, that such assignee had a right to foreclose, subject to the prior lien, but could not assert such right in an action for possession of the property: Kemerer v. Bourne, 53-172.

Mortgagor as party: A mortgagor who has divested himself of all interest in the mortgaged property is not a necessary party defendant in an action to foreclose: Murray v. Catlett, 4 G. Gr., 108; Johnson v. Monell, 13-300.

This is so even though the mortgagor is the only person against whom a personal judgment might be rendered. When the only object of the proceeding is to appropriate the mortgaged property to the satisfaction of the debt, the mortgagor who has conveyed all his interest in the property is not a necessary party: Johnson v. Foster, 68-140.

If it appears upon the face of the proceeding that the mortgagor has divested himself of all interest in the mortgaged property, there can be no necessity or propriety in making him a party. But a mortgagor who has conveyed his interest by a deed containing covenants of warranty against incumbrances still has such interest in the foreclosure suit as to authorize his being made party defendant on his own application: Gifford v. Workman, 15-34.

One who defends the foreclosure of a mortgage, claiming that the mortgagors had no interest in the mortgaged premises, cannot object that the mortgagors are not in court when their absence works no prejudice to him: Williams v. Meeker, 29-292.

The debtor not necessary party: Where a mortgage is given to secure an indebtedness of another party, the original debtor is not a necessary party in an action to foreclose the mortgage: Deland v. Mershon, 7-70.

Subsequent mortgagees are not indispensable parties to the foreclosure, and the fact that such a party is not brought in cannot be made a ground of objection by other defendants: Heimstreet v. Winnie, 10-430; Donnelly v. Rusch, 15-99.

A second mortgagee is not bound by a foreclosure proceeding under a prior mortgage to which he is not made a party, although he had both actual and constructive notice of such prior mortgage: Anson v. Anson, 20-55.

Subsequent mortgagees and purchasers of the mortgaged premises, who are not made parties to an action to foreclose a prior mortgage, are not bound by the foreclosure: Gouver v. Winchester, 33-303.

The senior mortgagee cannot acquire equities against a junior mortgagee by the payment of a judgment, obtained in a suit to which the latter is not a party, nor by any arrangement between the former and the mortgagor, no matter in what form the mortgage exists: Davis v. Rogers, 28-413.

Subsequent purchaser: The purchaser of mortgage premises whose deed is recorded at the time of the institution of the foreclosure proceedings will not be bound by the decree unless made a party: Porter v. Kilgore, 32-379.

A purchaser of the premises at foreclosure sale is subrogated to the mortgagee's rights, and when the foreclosure proceeding is still pending on the cross-petition of one of the defendants, claiming a portion of the land, the purchaser may file his petition of intervention, setting forth his interests, and asking to be joined with the plaintiff in his action: Dyer v. Harris, 22-268.

A foreclosure in which a purchaser of a part of the land from the mortgagor is not made party is not void. Such purchaser holds the equity of redemption and nothing more, and a purchaser at the sale under the decree takes title subject to such equity of redemption: Dougllass v. Bishop, 27-214.

Subsequent lienholder: In an action to foreclose a mortgage a person holding a subsequent lien should be made a party. Otherwise he can not only redeem from the sale within the statutory period, but, if he neglect to do so, he may still redeem from the mortgage debt by paying it with interest and any other proper charges, and may have an accounting of the rents and profits and an application made thereof as against the mortgage debt: Bunce v. West, 62-80.

A judgment lienholder is not a necessary party to an action to foreclose a mortgage against a homestead upon which the judgment is not a lien, and such judgment creditor has no right of redemption except the statutory right to be exercised within nine months: Sutherland v. Tyner, 72-232.

Holder of senior lien: While the beneficiary in a trust deed which is prior to the mortgage is a proper, he is not a necessary, party to the foreclosure, his interests being paramount to those of the mortgagor, and not to be affected thereby. The junior mortgagee is bound to take notice of prior liens properly recorded and of rights thereunder: Standish v. Dow, 21-363.

Homestead rights: The rights of the wife in the homestead cannot be cut off by a sale under foreclosure to which she is not made a party, even though her marriage to the owner of the property is subsequent to the mortgage: Chase v. Abbott, 20-154.

The defense that property covered by a mortgage is the homestead of defendant must be set up in the foreclosure proceeding, and if not thus interposed cannot be made a ground for resisting the title of the purchaser under the foreclosure: Haynes v. Meek, 14-320.

Where the wife is made a party to the foreclosure of a mortgage executed by the husband alone, and the fact that the premises constitute the homestead does not appear in the mortgage nor upon the face of the petition, and such fact is not set up by the wife, the foreclosure is conclusive upon her as to any claim of homestead in the premises: Oleson v. Bullard, 40-9.

Mechanic's lien: Where a person claiming a mechanic's lien is made a party to the foreclosure of the mortgage, and in such action the lien of the mortgage is declared superior, the holder of the lien cannot thereafter claim such lien as against a purchaser at the foreclosure sale: Grosbeck v. Ferguson, 43-532.

The holder of a sheriff's certificate of purchase at execution sale, subject to be defeated by redemption, has such an interest in the property that he may be made a party defendant in an action to foreclose a mortgage against the property: Brobst v. Thompson, 4 G. Gr., 135.

Dower right: Where a wife does not join in a mortgage, and the husband dies before foreclosure, the widow being made a party to the foreclosure proceeding is not under obligation to set up as a defense her dower right in the property; and a foreclosure sale, in the absence of such defense on her part, will not divest her dower interest, the facts alleged in the petition not being such as to show the existence of such interest: Moomey v. Maas, 22-380.

4556. Separate suits on note and mortgage. 3320. If separate suits are brought in the same county on the bond or note, and on the mortgage given to secure it, the plaintiff must elect which to prosecute. The other will be discontinued at his cost. [R., § 3663; C., '51, § 2086.]

This section is applicable although the covenants on which the law action is based are contained in the mortgage itself: Brown v. Cascaden, 43-103.

Where the liability secured by a mortgage had been submitted to arbitrators and an award made, held, that it was proper to sue upon such award and for the foreclosure of the mortgage in the same actions: McKinnis v. Freeman, 38-364.

Junior claims: Where a party is made defendant to the foreclosure, who, it is alleged, has some claim upon or interest in the property junior to the plaintiff's lien, it is incumbent upon such defendant, if he claims a lien superior to that of plaintiff, to allege and show the existence of such lien: Wolfinger v. Betz, 66-594; Vaughn v. Eckler, 69-332.

Administrator: In an action to foreclose, the mortgagor's administrator has a right to appear and set up the defense of usury, although the property has been sold under a subsequent deed of trust. Especially is this so when the grantee did not assume the payment of the prior mortgage: Huston v. Stringham, 21-36.

The administrator of the estate of a deceased mortgagor is a proper party defendant in an action to foreclose: Hodgdon v. Heidman, 66-645.

Purchaser pending foreclosure: A railway company which, pending a proceeding to foreclose a mortgage, acquires a right of way from defendant in such proceeding, is bound by the decree rendered therein, although not made a party: Jackson v. Centerville, M. & A. R. Co., 64-292.

Subsequent proceedings as to lienholder not made a party: Where a junior lienholder has not been made party to a foreclosure, a subsequent action of foreclosure may be brought against him, in which he may set up his rights and have them enforced as fully as if he had been a party to the original proceeding, and the effect of a decree in such subsequent proceeding will be the same as if a decree had been rendered against him in the original action: Shaw v. Heisey, 48-468.

Where, after foreclosure and sale, a subsequent incumbrancer was made a party to the proceeding by service of notice, no reference being made therein to the fact of sale, and no rights by virtue of the sale being claimed, held, that a decree by default upon such service did not cut off his right to inquire into the regularity of the sale: White v. Watts, 18-74.

The fact that necessary parties are not joined as defendants in a foreclosure proceeding will not defeat the rights of the mortgagee under a mortgage, even though the sale to him on foreclosure is not valid: Harsh v. Griffin, 72-608.

After a general judgment upon the note secured by the mortgage an action may be maintained to foreclose the mortgage; the mortgage is not merged in the judgment: Matthews v. Davis, 61-225; Morrison v. Morrison, 38-73.

Merger of the note in judgment does not merge the mortgage: Shearer v. Mills, 35-499.

4557. Judgment; sale and redemption. 3321. When a mortgage or deed of trust is foreclosed by equitable proceedings, the court shall render judgment for the entire amount found to be due, and must direct the mortgaged property, or so much thereof as is necessary, to be sold to satisfy the same, with interest and costs. A special execution shall issue accordingly, and the sale thereunder shall be subject to redemption as in cases of sale under general execution. [R., § 3661; C., '51, § 2084.]

Costs included: A decree of foreclosure may include costs incurred up to the time of decree, but cannot be made to include items not embraced in the mortgage itself: Bates v. Ruddick, 2-423.

Attorneys' fees: A mortgagee is not entitled on foreclosure to attorneys' fees as against the mortgagor unless expressly stipulated for in the mortgage: Bondurant v. Taylor, 3 G. Gr., 561.

A stipulation in the mortgage and the note secured thereby for attorneys' fees is valid and does not constitute usury: Weatherby v. Smith, 30-131; Coe v. Lindley, 32-437.

Where there is such stipulation in the mortgage, and no stipulation for attorneys' fees is contained in the notes secured, such fees can be taxed only as against the parties to the mortgage: Floyd County v. Morrison, 40-188.

One who purchases property subject to a mortgage and agrees to "take up the mortgage and pay for it all" is liable for attorneys' fees under a provision in the mortgage: Johnson v. Harder, 45-677.

Where a mortgage provided that a certain sum as attorneys' fees should be taxed by the court and included in the costs, held, that the attorney's fee could not be recovered unless the action of foreclosure proceeded to final decree: Schmidt v. Potter, 35-426.

Where the mortgage provided for reasonable attorneys' fees, not less than fifty dollars, and there was no evidence or admission as to what amount a reasonable attorney's fee in the case was, held, that it was error to allow more than the minimum amount, although a claim for a larger amount was made in the petition: Hawley v. Howell, 60-79.

Where the mortgage provided for a reasonable attorney's fee, but it did not appear that any evidence as to the reasonable amount of the fee was introduced, held, that the plaintiff on foreclosure could not recover any greater fee than that specifically provided for in the notes: Sawyer v. Perry, 62-238.

Penalty for usurious interest: A judgment for the state by way of forfeiture for usurious interest reserved in the mortgage is not covered by the mortgage lien, and becomes a lien on the premises only from the time of rendition: Lewis v. Barnby, 14-88.

Amount of decree: Where the court below in a decree of foreclosure directed an accounting on the notes secured thereby, etc., and that execution issue for the amount thus appearing due, held, that the court should have determined the precise amount of credits and rendered judgment accordingly: Wilson Sewing Machine Co. v. Rutledge, 60-39.

Where the facts were such that the assignee of the mortgage became entitled to the balance due thereon after satisfaction of a prior assignee who held the same as collateral security, held, that it was proper to render a decree in favor of the second assignee for such balance without specifying the amount to which he was entitled: Pike v. Gleason, 60-150.

Lien: Where, in a foreclosure proceeding, it was stipulated that judgment should be entered and stayed without liability on the part of the surety on the stay bond, held, that it was the evident intent of the parties that the plaintiff should hold and not waive his mortgage lien and that he was entitled to a decree of foreclosure: Rice v. Covey, 54-112.

Covenants: Where a mortgagee foreclosed a mortgage and bought in the property at the sale for the full amount of the judgment, held, that he could not recover upon the covenants of warranty in the mortgage for the amount afterward paid to discharge prior liens thereon: Todd v. Johnson, 51-192.

Where the mortgagee of property bought the same in at foreclosure sale in full satisfaction of the mortgage, held, that he had no right of action under the covenants of the mortgage requiring the mortgagor to keep the premises in good repair, or for waste committed by the mortgagor while in possession before the sale: Corbin v. Reed, 43-459.

Personal judgment: If the mortgage stipulates that no general execution is to be issued thereunder, a personal judgment should not be rendered: Kennion v. Kelsey, 10-443.

In an action to foreclose a mortgage given by one person as security for a note executed by another, but not signed by the mortgagor, personal judgment should not be rendered against such mortgagor: Anderson v. Reed, 11-177.

Where one of the defendants in an action to foreclose a mortgage was not a party to the mortgage and never undertook to pay the same, and the petition did not charge a personal liability for the debt secured, held, that it was erroneous to render a personal judgment against him: Carleton v. Byington, 24-172.

Before a personal judgment in an action of foreclosure can be rendered against the mortgagor, it must appear that the relation of debtor and creditor exists between the mortgagor and mortgagee, and there must be an obligation to pay independently of and in addition to the property: Weil v. Churchman, 52-253.

Where the wife joins in the mortgage, but not in the note secured thereby, and there is no provision in the mortgage expressly stipulating for personal liability, she does not become personally liable for the debt: Reed v. King, 23-500; Knox v. Moser, 69-341.

It is not essential to the proceeding that personal judgment be rendered for the amount of the debt, and an action of foreclosure may be maintained against the owners of the property, subject to the mortgage, although they are not personally liable for the indebtedness: Johnson v. Foster, 68-140.

Where property was conveyed subject to two existing mortgages and was then again mortgaged by the grantee, held, that a purchaser of the property at foreclosure sale under the last mortgage would take the property subject to such prior mortgages of which he had notice, and could not afterwards, upon an assignment of the second of such mortgages, enforce the same personally against the mortgagor without having in any way subjected the property to the satisfaction of such mortgage: Crowley v. Harader, 69-83.

Notice of an action to foreclose a mortgage having been properly given, the court will render a personal judgment for the amount due, although the notice does not claim any specific sum of money: York v. Boardman, 40-57.

Special execution: The court cannot, on rendering decree of foreclosure, order that special execution thereon be stayed for a specified time: Carroll v. Reddington, 7-386.

Although the general rule is that the land is to be subjected to the payment of several notes covered by one mortgage in the order of their maturity, yet the court may by decree direct otherwise, and if the last note is to be paid first, it would be error to issue a general execution on the judgment for such note without having first directed the sale of the land and application of the proceeds to its satisfaction: Ayers v. Rivers, 64-543.

A special execution under decree of foreclosure of a mortgage on a town lot, commanding the sheriff to sell the lot in conformity with the statute, held not to be illegal as requiring the whole lot to be sold: Southard v. Perry, 21-488.

Where a special execution was improperly issued and a sale was had thereunder, but the same sale under a general execution would have been equally effective, held, that the error as to the form of execution was purely technical and the sale could not be set aside: O'Connell v. Cotter, 44-48.

Sale of portion of premises: A decree of foreclosure should only order the sale of so much of the mortgaged premises as is necessary to satisfy the amount due. To order the sale of the whole property absolutely, and direct that the amount remaining after paying the judgment be brought into court to answer its order, is erroneous: Malony v. Fortune, 14-417.

Sale en masse: If the premises consist of distinct parcels which are sold in a lump, the sale should be set aside in a proceeding brought for that purpose: Lay v. Gibbons, 14-377.

Rights of purchaser: Where the mortgagee purchases at a sale under the mortgage he buys with full notice of all defects: Boyd v. Ellis, 11-97.

While a purchaser takes subject to the equitable rights of the party in possession, yet where the property has been conveyed by him by a fraudulent conveyance, he has no remaining interest which can be set up or conveyed as against such purchaser: Wright v. Howell, 35-288.

Dower right: A foreclosure of the mortgage in which the wife has joined and a sale of the property thereunder will defeat her dower interest in such property: Moomey v. Maas, 22-380; Mead v. Mead, 39-28.

Equity will recognize and enforce a sale and conveyance of the dower interest before the dower has been assigned or admeasured; and so where one purchases under a foreclosure of a mortgage given by husband and wife of the wife's property, which foreclosure occurred after the death of the wife and before the husband's interest had been admeasured, held, that such purchaser became an assignee or owner of the husband's interest, and acquired all the rights which the husband had before possessed as survivor in the premises: Huston v. Seeley, 27-183.

Remainder: Where it appeared that the interest of the mortgagor was that of a remainder over after a life estate in the property, held, that the foreclosure and sale should be made applicable to such remainder, and a purchaser should hold the same upon the same conditions as the mortgagor: Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. King, 58-598.

Purchase by trustee: In the absence of any express provision in the trust deed, and against an objection of a bondholder who as intervenor had become party to the suit, held, that it was erroneous for the court, on the foreclosure of a trust deed made to secure bonds issued by a corporation, to direct that the trustee should bid in the property for the benefit of all the bondholders at its fair market price: Sanvey v. Iowa City Glass Co., 63-707.

So held where bonds owned by one bondholder had been guaranteed by other bondholders, so that the bidding in of the property for the entire amount of the bonded indebtedness would satisfy the judgment in favor of the bondholders and release the guarantor of such bonds: Ibid.

Inadequacy of price: Gross inadequacy of price of itself is a strong badge of fraud, and though not conclusive in itself, yet when coupled with other circumstances tending to prove fraud, it becomes controlling and conclusive evidence: Boyc v. Ellis, 11-97.

Purchase pendente lite: A purchaser from the mortgagor pending a proceeding to foreclose may, by appearing in the action, have the judgment direct that a portion of the property not affected by his purchase shall be first sold for the satisfaction of the mortgage, and if he does not do this, and the decree provides for the sale of the premises without regard to his interest, he cannot afterwards question the sale: Jackson v. Centerville, M. & A. R. Co., 64-292.

Possession: A purchaser at a foreclosure sale is not entitled to possession until the expiration of the year for redemption: Barrett v. Blackmar, 47-565; Myton v. Davenport, 51-583.

Rents and profits: Defendant has the right of possession during the year for redemption after the foreclosure sale. Plaintiff, whose claim is satisfied by the sale, has no right to the rents. Neither has the purchaser at the foreclosure sale: Hill v. Hewett, 35-563.

Crops: The mortgagor has the right to possession until the expiration of the year of redemption, and during that time has the right to crops growing on the premises: White v. Griggs, 54-650.

Crops matured but not yet harvested, standing on the premises at the time of the foreclosure sale, and belonging to a tenant who has been in possession under lease from the mortgagor, do not pass by the sale, but are personal property: Hecht v. Dettman, 56-679.

Order of application of proceeds: Where the mortgage secures two or more notes maturing at different times, the proceeds of the foreclosure should be applied to the payment of the notes in the order in which they fall due, whether they are assigned or not and without reference to the time or order of assignment. The instalments in such case are regarded as so many successive mortgages having priority accordingly: Isett v. Lucas, 17-503.

In such case the holder of a portion of the notes who has proceeded to foreclose the mortgage without making the holder of another note, earlier becoming due, a party, does not cut off the lien of the holder of the previous note, who may proceed to foreclose the mortgage as to the same property, without alleging or proving any fraud in the previous action: Sangster v. Love, 11-580.

Sale for instalment: The sale of mortgaged property under foreclosure for an instalment of the debt discharges the property in the hands of the purchaser or the debtor or his vendee, after redemption from the lien of the mortgage, from any claim under the other instalments: Escher v. Simmons, 54-269.

A sale in pursuance of foreclosure passes to the purchaser all the title and interest of the mortgagor and mortgagee in and to the property sold, and the purchaser takes free from the lien of the unpaid instalments: Poweshiek County v. Dennison, 36-244.

Where some of the notes secured by a mortgage are transferred, foreclosure and sale of the premises in an action by the assignee will exhaust the lien of the mortgagee as to notes still held by the mortgagee upon the land so sold: Harns v. Palmer, 61-483.

It may be provided in the decree of foreclosure for one instalment of the amount secured by the mortgage that the mortgagee's lien on the property for the notes not then due shall be preserved: Burroughs v. Ellis, 76-648.

Redemption: By this section there is the same right to redeem from a sale in a foreclosure proceeding as from an ordinary sale under execution, and the same right of possession by the debtor during the redemption period: Barrett v. Blackmar, 47-565.

This section simply declares that there may be statutory redemption from sale under a foreclosure. Such redemption may be by one who is not a party to the suit, but must be made within the time and in the manner prescribed by the statute as to other execution sales: Newell v. Pennick, 62-123.

The right of equitable redemption is not taken away by the provision for statutory redemption from the sale. It exists independent of statute: American Buttonhole, etc., Co. v. Burlington Mut. Loan Ass'n, 61-451; Spurgin v. Adanson, 62-661.

Under former statutory provisions by which a judgment against a firm was not a lien upon real property belonging to the firm, held in the individual name of one of the members, such judgment creditor could not redeem from a purchaser of the real property at a foreclosure sale under a mortgage given by the individual member holding the title: Stadler v. Allen, 44-198.

A decree cutting off the lien of a junior incumbrancer does not deprive him of any right he may have by virtue of statutory redemption: Watts v. White, 12-330.

Prior statutory provisions: Under the Code of '51, which did not contain express provision for redemption from sales under foreclosure proceedings, held, that the general provisions as to redemption from sales under execution did not apply in such cases: Kramer v. Rebman, 9-114; Stoddard v. Hays, 12-576; Martin v. Jones, 15-240.

Where a second mortgagee brought action to determine the priority of liens as between himself and a senior mortgagee, and a sale was ordered of the property, held, that such sale might properly be without redemption, the senior mortgagee having been executed before the provisions for redemption at foreclosure sale took effect: Gargan v. Grimes, 47-180.

Who may redeem: One who has a mortgage upon property as that of another cannot claim the right of redemption after foreclosure of the mortgage on the ground that he has not been made a party to the proceeding in his own right, but only in the representative capacity in which he purported to act: Foster v. Young, 35-27.

The rule that the right of redemption from the mortgage debt after the foreclosure sale exists only in favor of a person who has a lien upon the identical title or interest upon which the mortgage rests means only that the lien shall not rest upon a wholly independent title, that is, one which can be valid only in case the mortgagor has no title, and does not prevent a tax purchaser from making redemption, although his lien is not derived from the mortgagor: Ayres v. Adair County, 61-728.

Redemption from sale for one instalment: The grantee of the mortgagor, by conveyance before the rendition of judgment in foreclosure of the mortgage, may redeem from a sale under the judgment of foreclosure for a part of the debt and hold the property free from any lien under the mortgage or under the judgment against his grantor for the balance of the debt: Escher v. Simmons, 54-269; Todd v. Davey, 60-532.

Where a mortgage is foreclosed for one instalment of the debt, and during the period for redemption the mortgagor conveys the property to a third person, agreeing to redeem, and afterwards does redeem, such third person takes the property free from the lien of the mortgage for the balance: Micklewait v. Raines, 58-605.

Plaintiff in a foreclosure proceeding having bought in the property and the mortgagor having redeemed from such sale, held, that plaintiff's remedy against the property was exhausted irrespective of whether the mortgagees were parties to the proceeding or not: Blake v. Black, 55-252.

After redemption by a mortgagor from sale under foreclosure for a portion of the mortgage debt, the mortgagee cannot again subject the land to the payment of a part of the debt remaining unsatisfied. This rule holds where the mortgage secures different notes, some of which are assigned to a third party, and the foreclosure and sale of the premises in an action by the assignee exhausts the lien of the mortgage upon such premises: Harms v. Palmer, 61-483.

Where a junior mortgage is assigned, and the assignment is not made of record, a foreclosure of the senior mortgage to which the junior mortgagee is made a party is binding upon the assignee of such junior mortgage, and he can only make statutory redemption, although not made a party, where the fact of his interest is not known to the party foreclosing: Reel v. Wilson, 64-13.

Expiration of period; misdescription: A reformation of the mortgage to correct a misdescription may be had at the suit of the mortgagee, but such reformation would not cut off the right to redeem as to property not described in the original foreclosure: Provost v. Rebman, 21-419.

4558. General execution. 3322. If the mortgaged property does not sell for sufficient to satisfy the execution, a general execution may be issued against the mortgagor, unless the parties have stipulated otherwise. [R., § 2662; C., '51, § 2085.]

This section does not apply to a case where the mortgage is given to secure the debt of another party, and the mortgagor does not sign the note or become otherwise liable for the payment of the debt. (Overruling Deland v.

The fact that property is misdescribed in a foreclosure and sale thereunder, and that the description is subsequently corrected in a proceeding brought during the period of redemption, to which the party entitled to redeem is made a party and in which he asks no relief, will not extend the period for redemption: McKissick v. Mill Owners' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50-116.

Equitable relief: A failure to redeem from a foreclosure within the time set by statute because of losses suffered by mortgagor by reason of a grasshopper plague affords the mortgagor no ground for equitable relief against the mortgagee in possession under the decree of foreclosure. Courts of equity cannot alone base a decree against a defendant upon a misfortune of the complainant. If the legal title is vested in the defendant, as it is in this case, he cannot be deprived thereof, save upon some ground which affects him or shows that it would be inequitable or unjust for him to retain his legal advantage against the superior equity of the opposing party: Palmer v. McCormick, 30 Fed. Rep., 82.

Mershon, 7-70); Chittenden v. Gossage, 18-157; Anderson v. Reed, 11-177; Weil v. Churchman, 52-253. But see Newbury v. Rutter, 38-179, which refers to Deland v. Mershon, 7-70, with approval.

4559. Junior incumbrancer entitled to assignment. 3323. At any time prior to the sale, a person having a lien on the property which is junior to the mortgage, will be entitled to an assignment of all the interest of the holder of the mortgage, by paying him the amount secured, with interest and costs, together with the amount of any other liens of the same holder which are paramount to his. He may then proceed with the foreclosure or discontinue it at his option. [R., § 3665; C., '51, § 2088.]

A tender made by a junior to a senior mortgagee before sale, for the principal, interest and costs then accrued, is sufficient, though not accepted until after sale: Marshall v. Rudick, 28-487.

The manifest object of this provision is to secure to the junior lienholder the right to protect his lien by buying in the paramount incumbrance. If the junior lien attaches to but a portion of the property covered by the senior mortgage, and all parts of it are subject to be sold alike for the satisfaction of the debt secured by that mortgage, the junior lienholder is undoubtedly entitled, upon payment of the debt, to have an assignment of the interest of the holder of the mortgage, and may first apply the portion of the property covered by the senior mortgage alone, to the satisfaction of the debt secured by that mortgage, and afterwards may appropriate the property covered by the junior lien, or such portion of it as remains after satisfaction of the debt secured by the senior mortgage, to the payment of his claim: Grant v. Parsons, 67-31.

But where the senior mortgage is a lien upon premises a portion of which constitutes the homestead, while the junior mortgage covers only such portion of the same premises as are not embraced in the homestead, the junior mortgagee is not entitled, upon payment of the senior incumbrance, to an assignment thereof so far as it affects the homestead, for the reason that the homestead is only liable for the satisfaction of so much of the senior mortgage as shall remain unsatisfied after the other portion of the property is exhausted. But the junior lienholder may, if he so elects, have an assignment of the interest of the senior mortgagee in the property other than the homestead, and enforce that mortgage accordingly: Ibid.

The right of a junior judgment creditor to redeem from a senior creditor after the issuance of execution does not take away nor impair the right of a junior creditor to redeem from a senior mortgagee previous to the foreclosure thereof: Hammond v. Leawitt, 59-407.

A purchaser of property at a sale under a judgment may redeem from a prior mortgagee by paying or tendering to the mortgagee the full amount due thereon: Ibid.

In an action by the senior mortgagee to foreclose, to which the junior mortgagee is made party, the latter may by agreement with plaintiff's attorney pay to such attorney the amount necessary to entitle him to an assignment of the mortgage with an agreement that the action shall be prosecuted for the benefit of the junior mortgagee: Harbach v. Colwin, 73-638.

Where a junior mortgagee is not made party to the foreclosure of a senior mortgage, the senior mortgagee buying in the property at the sale may redeem from the claim of the junior mortgagee. In such case, the junior mortgagee upon redeeming would not be entitled to a conveyance of the estate, but only to an assignment of the prior mortgage, and therefore the prior mortgagee, as purchaser of the equity of redemption at the sale, may redeem from the junior mortgage just as the mortgagor might have done: Smith v. Shay, 62-119.

In making such redemption from sale under foreclosure of the junior mortgage, the amount to be paid would be, not the amount bid at such sale, but the amount of the indebtedness secured by the junior mortgage: Ibid.

The holder of land sold at foreclosure sale which is subject to redemption by a judgment creditor not made a party to the foreclosure proceeding has a right to redeem from such lien by paying off the judgment and discharging his lien: Kraft v. James, 64-159.

4560. Overplus. 3324. If there is an overplus remaining after satisfying the mortgage and costs, and if there is no other lien upon the property, such overplus shall be paid to the mortgagor. [R., § 3666; C., '51, § 2089.]

Where a surplus was realized by the sheriff from the sale of a homestead under special execution, and the defendant permitted the sheriff, without objection, to apply such surplus upon other executions, and turn the same over to such execution creditors, held, that the debtor was estopped from seeking to recover such surplus from the sheriff: Brumbaugh v. Zollinger, 59-384.

The overplus may be garnished in the hands of the sheriff by a creditor of the mortgagor: Hoffman v. Wetherell, 42-89.

Or such surplus may be applied to another execution against defendant in the hands of the sheriff: Payne v. Billingham, 10-360.

4561. Other liens. 3325. If there are any other liens on the property sold, or other payments secured by the same mortgage, they shall be paid off in their order. And if the money secured by any such lien is not yet due, a suitable rebate of interest must be made by the holder thereof, or his lien on such property will be postponed to those of a junior date, and if there are none such, the balance will be paid to the mortgagor. [R., § 3667; C., '51, § 2090.]

A court having jurisdiction as to an instalment due may retain jurisdiction over the parties and the cause until the whole debt falls due: McDowell v. Lloyd, 22-448.

Where interest is made payable annually, the mortgage may be foreclosed for an annual instalment due and unpaid, although the principal is not yet due: Bahr v. Armat, 9-39.

Where the sheriff is not directed as to the disposition of the surplus, and in good faith, without knowledge of subsequent liens, applies such surplus upon other executions in his hands against the mortgagor, he is not liable to the holders of such subsequent liens: Polk County v. Sypher, 17-338.

Contests as to the surplus may be determined upon motion: Ibid.

4562. How much sold. 3326. As far as practicable, the property sold must be only sufficient to satisfy the mortgage foreclosed. [R., § 3668; C., '51, § 2091.]

Where the mortgaged property is susceptible of division, only such portion should be sold as may be necessary to satisfy the debt, and a refusal to sell in such parcels as are sufficient for that purpose will invalidate the sale: Grapengether v. Fejeruary, 9-163.

4563. Satisfaction acknowledged. 3327. Whenever the amount due on any mortgage is paid off, the mortgagee, or those legally acting for him, must acknowledge satisfaction thereof in the margin of the record of the mortgage, or by execution of an instrument in writing, referring to the mortgage, and duly acknowledged and recorded. If he fails to do so within sixty days after being requested, he shall forfeit to the mortgagor the sum of twenty-five dollars. [R., § 3670; C., '51, § 2093.]

The penalty is incurred by a failure to enter satisfaction within the time stipulated after request, and a subsequent entry of satisfaction, even before suit brought for the penalty, does not relieve therefrom: Deeter v. Crossley, 26-180.

There must be express satisfaction; and a conveyance from the mortgagee to the mortgagor, not referring to the mortgage, will not be sufficient: Ibid.

The penalty cannot be recovered from one who is assignee of the note secured by the mortgage, but has no written or recorded assignment of the mortgage: Low v. Fox, 56-221.

4564. Entry by clerk. 3328. Whenever a judgment of foreclosure shall be entered in any court, the clerk thereof shall make upon the margin of the record of the mortgage foreclosed, in the recorder's office, a minute showing that said mortgage was foreclosed, in what court foreclosed, and giving the date of the decree; and when such decree shall be fully paid off and satisfied upon the judgment docket of such court, the clerk of said court shall enter satisfaction in full upon the margin of such mortgage, and he shall be allowed as compensation for such service the sum of twenty-five cents, to be taxed as a part of the costs in the case. [14 G. A., ch. 67.]

4565. Foreclosure of title bond. 3329. In cases where the vendor of real estate has given a bond or other writing to convey the same on payment of the purchase money, and such money or any part thereof remains unpaid after the day fixed for payment, whether time is or is not of the essence of the contract, such vendor may file his petition asking the court to require the purchaser to perform his contract, or to foreclose and sell his interest in the property. [R., § 3671; C., '51, § 2094.]

Rights of parties: A title bond invests vendee with an interest which can be reached by the vendor in a manner similar to the foreclosure of a mortgage: Mullin v. Bloomer, 11-360.

These provisions do not take away the rights of vendor to pursue any remedies he may have without regard to such provisions: Page v. Cole, 6-153.

The vendor may still proceed at law for any matured and unpaid instalment of the purchase money: Hershey v. Hershey, 18-24; Poweshiek County v. Dennison, 36-244.

These provisions are merely permissive and do not take away any right which the grantor may have under the instrument by way of forfeiture: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Mickel, 41-403; Johnson v. Thornton, 54-144; Mickelwait v. Leland, 54-662.

Time may be made of the essence of a contract so that upon failure to pay within a time specified all rights under the bond will be forfeited: Schmidt v. Williams, 72-317.

As to how a vendor's lien may be reserved, see § 3111.

Until vendor declares a forfeited vendee is deemed in possession as purchaser, and his possession is therefore adverse to vendor: Montgomery County v. Severson, 64-326.

This section held applicable to a case where the owner of land had agreed to convey to a railroad company the right of way over his land in consideration of their fencing the track and the construction of a crossing; and held, that the lien under such contract was superior to the claims of the purchaser of the road at foreclosure sale: Varner v. St. Louis & C. R. Co., 55-677.

The assignee of a note given for the purchase money by the holder of a title bond has the same rights and remedies as the payee, and may bring action in his own name to foreclose the bond or contract: Stebly v. Sears, 38-507; Guest v. Byington, 14-30.

Foreclosure for one instalment: Upon the maturity of a portion of a series of notes for the purchase money, the vendor may bring action to foreclose his title bond: Tupple v. Viers, 14-515.

And a foreclosure for an instalment due, and a sale thereunder, has the same effect as in a similar action on the mortgage. The purchaser takes free from any claim of the vendor for unpaid instalments: Poweshiek County v. Dennison, 36-244.

Where the vendor proceeds to foreclose the contract of sale, he loses his lien for any balance of the purchase money not paid by the foreclosure sale: Todd v. Davey, 60-532.

Acceptance binds vendee: By the acceptance of a title bond specifying the sale and the vendee's contract to pay the purchase money at a specified time, the vendee becomes bound: Huse v. McDaniel, 33-406.

The fact that no notes or other obligations are executed by the person to whom is given a bond to convey will not show that he is not bound by the bond. Such a contract will not be considered as unilateral unless it is plain and clear that a unilateral contract was intended. In the absence of such proof of intention it will be presumed that the parties intended it to be mutually obligatory: Flanders v. Merrill, 38-583.

Liability of assignee: Where a contract to convey is assigned by the vendee to a third person, and accepted by him, and rights claimed thereunder, such assignee thereby assumes all the obligations of his assignor, and can be held personally liable thereunder: Wightman v. Spofford, 56-145.

Personal liability: Under a contract by which the owner of land held under execution had an election to repurchase within a given time, held, that no personal obligation was incurred on which judgment could be recovered: Stroup v. Haycock, 56-729.

Where, in a bond for a deed, vendee does not bind himself to pay for the premises, an acceptance of such bond creates no obligation on his part, but simply secures to him an option to pay the stipulated price and interest or take the land. When he neglects to pay according to such stipulations, the privilege of taking the land which he has under the agreement may become terminated in accordance with its provisions, and no demand against the vendee in favor of the vendor will exist after such termination: Huston v. Kline, 64-376.

Vendee estopped: The vendee in possession under a bond for a deed cannot acquire tax title against the owner under a sale made prior to the execution of the bond for a deed: Cowdry v. Cuthbert, 71-733.

Equitable mortgage: Where the legal title is conveyed under such circumstances that it will in equity be held to be a mortgage, a separate agreement to reconvey his entire interest and rights to the debtor in the property may be foreclosed as herein provided: Rubelman v. Rummel, 72-40.

Tender of deed: In an action to recover the purchase money of real estate and foreclose the interest of the vendee therein no tender of conveyance is required, for the reason that the court of equity can so mould the judgment or decree as to protect the rights of the vendee: Stevenson v. Polk, 71-278.

Limitation: An action to foreclose a title bond is barred in the same time that an action on a mortgage would be. Day v. Baldwin, 34-380.

Personal judgment: A judgment against the vendee and a foreclosure of the bond may be had in the same action, as in a suit to foreclose a mortgage: Hartman v. Clarke, 11-510.

Subsequent purchaser made party: In an action to foreclose a title bond to convey an undivided interest in real property, held, that a subsequent purchaser of a part of the property was properly made defendant and might in an action ask that the lien be enforced against the portion not claimed by him, and that a partition of the land be made: Hammond v. Perry, 38-217.

Foreclosure, not forfeiture: In an action on a title bond for balance of purchase money it is error to declare the bond forfeited and discharge the land therefrom. The lien of the vendor for the balance due should be foreclosed and the property sold to satisfy the judgment: Gamut v. Gregg, 37-573.

Conveyance by plaintiff: In an action to foreclose a title bond, held not error to render a decree requiring plaintiff to convey the property described in the bond to the purchaser under the decree, by a deed containing the covenants stipulated in the bond, upon payment by the purchaser of the full amount found due plaintiff on the bond: Wall v. Ambler, 11-274.

Vendee's possession: Where vendee enters into possession under a contract of sale, he is, after the sale of the premises under foreclosure of the contract, bound to surrender possession to the holder of the legal title without notice. He cannot claim to be a tenant at will: Cole v. Gill, 14-527.

Execution of deed: In a proceeding to foreclose a title bond to real estate brought by an executrix, who was also under the will devisee of the property with power to convey, held, that a decree requiring that the deed to be delivered to defendant upon payment of the debt should be executed by plaintiff as executrix, instead of as devisee, was erroneous: Grimmell v. Warner, 21-11.

General execution: On the foreclosure of a title bond of real estate it is proper to award a general execution for any balance remaining due after the sale of the property on special execution: Ibid.

Redemption: Subsequent lienholders not made parties to the foreclosure may redeem as from sale on foreclosure of mortgage: Dukes v. Turner, 44-575.

The grantee of a grantee under a title bond may maintain an action to redeem from the sale under foreclosure of the title bond by the grantor, to which he is not a party: Ibid.

4566. Vendee deemed mortgagor. 3330. The vendee shall in such cases, for the purpose of the foreclosure, be treated as a mortgagor of the property purchased, and his rights may be foreclosed in a similar manner. [R., § 3672; C., '51, § 2095.]

See notes to preceding section.

CHAPTER 5.

OF ACTIONS FOR NUISANCE, WASTE AND TRESPASS.

4567. Nuisance; what constitutes. 3331. Whatever is injurious to health, or indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as essentially to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, is a nuisance, and a civil action by ordinary proceedings may be brought thereon by any person injured thereby; in which action the nuisance may be enjoined or abated, and damages also recovered therefor. [R., §§ 3713-15; C., '51, §§ 2131-3.]

In actions at law: In an action at law damages may be recovered for a nuisance, and the nuisance itself may be abated; therefore in an action for damages for a nuisance the plaintiff is entitled to have his damages assessed by a jury, notwithstanding the fact that he may couple with his claim for damages a prayer that the defendants may be enjoined from continuing the nuisance: Miller v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 63-680.

Notwithstanding this provision authorizing abatement of a nuisance in an action at law, proceedings for abatement may still be brought in equity: Bushnell v. Robeson, 62-540; Gribben v. Hansen, 69-255.

What deemed: A livery-stable in a city is not necessarily a nuisance, but may be so under some circumstances: Shiras v. Olinger, 50-571.

As to duties of adjoining lot owners with reference to building, etc., see Cook v. Benson, 62-170.

The fact that stock-yards are necessary to the operation of the railroad will not prevent recovery by a property owner for damages from unwholesome odors therefrom, it not appearing that such odors were unavoidable and that the yards might not have been located elsewhere: Shively v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. R. Co., 74-169.

A slaughter-house may be a nuisance in residence portions of a city, even though carried on in as careful a manner as possible. Individual property owners may have damages separate from the public, and may maintain a joint action for injunction, although owning separate property: Bushnell v. Robeson, 62-540.

The fact that property is purchased and used for residence, while a business is being prosecuted which is afterward complained of as a nuisance, will not prevent a court of equity from exercising its discretion to grant an injunction to restrain the continuance of the nuisance: Ibid.

Plaintiff also in the wrong: Where plaintiff's premises themselves constitute and contribute to the nuisance of which he complains, he cannot have relief against defendant: Cassady v. Cavenor, 37-300.

Not only the condition but the location of the alleged nuisance must be considered in determining whether the premises are objectionable: Baker v. Bohannon, 69-60.

Intent: In a civil action for damages for a nuisance the intention of the defendant in doing the act complained of need not be inquired into unless upon the question of exemplary damages: Bonnell v. Smith, 53-281.

Public and private: A nuisance may be both public and private, and if an individual suffers special damages thereby he may maintain an action therefor: Ewell v. Greenwood, 26-377; Platt v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74-127.

A dam, although lawfully erected, may constitute a public nuisance in that it causes the water to overflow adjacent lands, by reason whereof such water is rendered impure and the overflowed land kept marshy and filled with noxious weeds and putrid vegetation, whereby the air becomes corrupted, infected, etc.: State v. Close, 35-570.

A private person has a right of action for a public nuisance only when he suffers an injury distinct from the public as a consequence of the wrongful act: Ingram v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 38-669.

While a nuisance may as to some matter affect the public for which a private action will not lie, if as to other things it works an injury to the individual which is not shared by the public, he may have a remedy: Park v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 43-636.

Obstruction of highway: To entitle a party to recover damages for the obstruction of a highway he must show not only the existence of the highway and the fact of obstruction, but that he has sustained some special damage or injury therefrom not shared by the public in general: Brant v. Plumer, 64-33.

A nuisance resulting from an obstruction to a highway leading to the premises of a party and interfering with the access thereto, and causing other special damage, is ground for recovery in an action by the person injured. In such cases action may be maintained though many persons other than plaintiff suffer like injuries from the same nuisance: Park v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 43-636.

As to shade trees in highways, see § 1503 and notes.

As affecting property rights: A city which has contracted for a supply of gas cannot set up a defense that the gas works were a nuisance which they had no power to legalize: Davenport Gas, etc., Co. v. Davenport, 13-239.

Where property used as a house of ill fame is seized by an officer without authority of law, the officer is liable for damages suffered thereby, notwithstanding the illegal character of the use: Tieman v. Haw, 49-312.

Measure of damages: In an action for a nuisance in allowing water to stand upon an owner's premises until it becomes offensive, the measure of damages should be limited to the diminution in value of the use of the premises affected thereby during the time during which the nuisance existed: Quinn v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 63-510.

In an action for an injury to property by reason of a nuisance of such character that it may be discontinued, plaintiff is only entitled to recover depreciation in rental value during the existence of the nuisance: Shively v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. R. Co., 74-169.

Percolating water: Where a property owner allows water to accumulate in excavations upon his premises so as to constitute a nuisance, he will be liable for damages caused to the adjoining owner by the percolation of such water upon the premises of the latter: Ibid.

Surface water: A property owner has the right to construct a building upon his premises so as to cause the water falling upon such building to be discharged at one or more places, and if such discharge is caused to be made upon a street or alley, an adjoining property owner cannot complain because, by reason of his own lot being below grade, it is injured by the flow of such water thereon: Phillips v. Waterhouse, 69-199.

Continuance of nuisance; liability of grantee: It seems that the liability of the grantee for the continuance of a nuisance caused by the act of the grantor upon the premises prior to the conveyance is not dependent upon notice to the grantee of the continuance of the nuisance: Druke v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 63-302.

Where an injury is permanent the damage is spoken of as original and as accruing wholly when the wrongful acts are done; and is distinguished from an injury which is regarded as continuing, that is, an injury that could and should be terminated, and is to be compensated strictly with reference to the past and upon the theory that it will be terminated. In the former case, a recovery for damages subsequently accruing from the original wrong cannot be had against a subsequent purchaser of the property: Bizer v. Ottumwa Hydraulic Power Co., 70-145.

Continuing damages: Where damages from a nuisance do not occur at the time of the doing of the act from which the damage subsequently results, the party owning the property damaged at the time that the damage occurs may sue thereon, although he was not the owner at the time the act was done which caused the damage: Miller v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 63-680.

Where a railway company laid a side-track in the street of a city twelve feet nearer the side of the street than authorized by city ordinance, and the owner of property fronting on the street sued for damages occasioned to such property by running cars over and leaving them standing upon said side-track, held, that the nuisance was continuing and not permanent, and that the occupant of the property might maintain the action, although such occupant was not the owner of the property so as to be entitled to sue for the original damage in laying the track, and although an action for such original damage would be barred: Cain v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 54-255.

Abatement by board of health: Exclusive jurisdiction to determine what constitutes a nuisance and to abate nuisances is not conferred upon the local board of health, but a private action for damages against a person maintaining a nuisance by one specially injured thereby may be brought without the action of the board having been invoked: Baker v. Bohannon, 69-60.

Abatement by person injured: At common law a person has a right to abate a nuisance which is injurious to him as distinct from the public: State v. Moffett, 1 G. Gr., 247.

The right of abatement of a nuisance by private act of a party injured thereby is authorized only in case of a particular emergency requiring a more speedy remedy than can be had by the ordinary proceedings at law and must be exercised with the least practicable injury: Moffett v. Brewer, 1 G. Gr., 348.

A party who seeks to abate a nuisance with his own hands cannot be justified in the destruction of property unless it be absolutely necessary. It is only the offensive use of it that he is justified in abating: Morrison v. Marquardt, 24-35.

Nuisances may be abated by an individual only where they in fact exist. The determination of an individual that a nuisance exists does not make the thing a nuisance, and if he destroys property on the ground that it is a nuisance he is responsible, unless it is established that the property destroyed constituted a nuisance: Cole v. Kegler, 64-59.

Although a person may abate a nuisance upon the premises of another when the same is injurious to him or when there is a reasonable certainty that he will be injured by it, yet it cannot be said that he is negligent in not abating such nuisances unless there is an apparent danger that he will sustain some substantial damage: Copper v. Dolvin, 68-757.

Notice to abate: All that is required, in order to impose upon a party, whose building constitutes a nuisance by reason of throwing water upon the land of his neighbor, the duty of abating the nuisance, is that he be informed of its existence. No formal notice is necessary: Ibid.

Abatement in equity: A party cannot have a nuisance upon the premises of another abated on his complaint when a similar nuisance is maintained upon his own premises: Cassady v. Cavenor, 37-300.

Proceedings for the abatement of a nuisance are of a more summary character than actions, and a forfeiture may be enforced for that purpose: Gosselink v. Campbell, 4-296.

In order to abate a nuisance existing by reason of a stream or pond of water becoming impure from substances being cast into it, it is not necessary that such a stream or pond be filled up. The source from which the impurities originate may be removed or the parties operating the nuisance restrained from future acts of the kind: Pinley v. Hershey, 41-389.

Where it is determined that premises are so occupied as to create a nuisance, but it is not found that they are a nuisance, that is, a nuisance per se, the court can only enjoin such use of the premises as will amount to a nuisance: Richards v. Holt, 61-529; Shiras v. Olinger, 50-571.

A blacksmith shop is not a nuisance per se, and a party cannot be enjoined from transacting the business of blacksmithing upon his premises. The decree in such cases should require the owner to so change his shop and so prosecute his business that no annoyance should result therefrom to others: Faucher v. Grass, 60-505.

Where a building on an adjoining lot is so used as to become a nuisance to plaintiff he may have the unlawful use enjoined, but not the building itself, nor will the court enjoin a use which it does not appear that the party is likely to make of the premises: Trulock v. Merte, 72-510.

Where smoke and soot from the smoke-stack of a water-works company came upon plaintiff's premises in such a manner as to deprive him of the comfortable enjoyment of his property, but the health of himself and family was not affected thereby or his property destroyed, held, that while such injury constituted a nuisance for which the plaintiff might recover at law, yet he would not be entitled to have an abatement thereof in equity. The rule in equity is that where the damages sustained can be admeasured and compensated equity will not interfere where the public benefit greatly outweighs private and individual convenience: Daniels v. Keokuk Water-Works, 61-549.

The fact that a party recovers damages for something, on the ground that it has been injurious to him as a nuisance, does not necessarily show that it is a nuisance at the time of the trial, and that he is therefore entitled to have it abated: Fuller v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61-125.

Criminal nuisance: See § 5470.

4568. Waste by guardian or tenants. 3332. If a guardian, tenant for life or years, joint tenant or tenant in common, of real property commit waste thereon, he is liable to pay three times the damages which have resulted from such waste, to the person who is entitled to sue therefor. [R., § 3716; C., '51, § 2134.]

4569. Forfeiture and eviction. 3333. Judgment of forfeiture and eviction may be rendered against the defendant, whenever the amount of damages so recovered is more than two-thirds the value of the interest such defendant has in the property wasted, and when the action is brought by the person entitled to the reversion. [R., § 3717; C., '51, § 2135.]

4570. Who deemed to have committed. 3334. Any person whose duty it is to prevent waste, and who has not used reasonable care and diligence to prevent it, is deemed to have committed it. [R., § 3718; C., '51, § 2136.]

4571. Treble damages. 3335. For wilful trespass in injuring any timber, tree, or shrub on the land of another, or in the street or highway in front of another's cultivated ground, yard, or town lot, or on the public grounds of any town, or any land held by this state for any purpose whatever, the perpetrator shall pay treble damages of the suit of any person entitled to protect or enjoy the property aforesaid. [R., § 3719; C., '51, § 2137.]

4572. Timber to repair highway. 3336. Nothing herein contained authorizes the recovery of more than the just value of timber taken from uncultivated woodland, for the repair of a public highway or bridge upon the land in its immediate neighborhood. [R., § 3720; C., '51, § 2138.]

4573. Remainder and reversion. 3337. The owner of an estate in remainder or reversion, may maintain either of the aforesaid actions for injuries done to the inheritance, notwithstanding any intervening estate for life or years. [R., § 3721; C., '51, § 2139.]

4574. Heir. 3338. An heir, whether a minor or of full age, may maintain these actions for injuries done in the time of his ancestor as well as in his own time, unless barred by the statute of limitations. [R., § 3722; C., '51, § 2140.]

4575. Purchaser under execution. 3339. Whenever lands or tenements are sold by virtue of an execution, the purchaser at such sale may maintain his action against any person for either of the causes above mentioned, occurring or existing after his purchase. [R., § 3723; C., '51, § 2141.]

4576. Suitable repairs. 3340. This provision is not intended to prevent the person who occupies the lands in the meantime, from using them in the ordinary course of husbandry, or from using timber for the purpose of making suitable repairs thereon. [R., § 3724; C., '51, § 2142.]

4577. Unnecessary use. 3341. But if for this purpose he employs timber vastly superior to that required for the occasion, he will be deemed to have committed waste and will be liable accordingly. [R., § 3725; C., '51, § 2143.]

4578. Settlers on public lands. 3342. Any person settled upon and occupying any portion of the public lands held by the state, is not liable as a trespasser for improving it or cultivating it in the ordinary course of husbandry, nor for taking and using timber or other materials necessary and proper to enable him to do so, provided the timber and other materials be taken from land properly constituting a part of the "claim" or tract of land so settled upon and occupied by him. [R., § 3726; C., '51, § 2144.]

4579. Holder of tax certificate. 3343. The owner of a treasurer's certificate of purchase of land sold for taxes, may recover treble damages of any person committing waste or trespass thereon as hereinbefore provided. [9 G. A., ch. 154, § 1; 10 G. A., ch. 93.]

4580. Disposition of money. 3344. All moneys recovered in an action brought under the preceding section, shall be paid by the officer collecting the same, to the auditor of the county in which such lands are situated, and the same shall be held by such auditor, and an entry thereof made by him in a book kept for that purpose, until such lands are redeemed or a treasurer's deed therefor shall have been executed to the holder of said certificate. If redemption be made, the money shall be paid to the owner of the land, and if not redeemed, to the person to whom such deed is executed. [9 G. A., ch. 154, § 8.]

CHAPTER 6.

OF ACTIONS TO TEST OFFICIAL AND CORPORATE RIGHTS.

4581. For what causes. 3345. A civil action by ordinary proceedings may be brought in the name of the state as plaintiff in the following cases:

1. Against any person unlawfully holding or exercising any public office or franchise within this state, or any office in any corporation created by this state;

2. Or against any public officer who has done or suffered any act which works a forfeiture of his office;

3. Or against any person acting as a corporation within this state without being authorized by law;

4. Or against any corporation doing or omitting acts, which amount to a forfeiture of their rights and privileges as a corporation, or exercising powers not conferred by law;

5. Or against any persons claiming under any letters patent, granted by the proper authorities of this state, for the purpose of annulling or vacating the same, as having been obtained by fraud, or through mistake or ignorance of a material fact, or when the defendants have done or omitted an act in violation of the terms or conditions on which the letters were granted, or have by any other means forfeited the interest acquired under the same. [R., §§ 3732, 3757; C., '51, §§ 2151, 2175.]

To annul legislative act: It would seem that quo warranto will not lie for the purpose of declaring void or annulling a legislative act passed by a state or an inferior municipal corporation: State ex rel. v. Lyons, 31-432.

The right to an office cannot be determined by bringing replevin for the records, etc., of such office: Desmond v. McCarthy, 17-525.

But a court may determine without an action which of two persons claiming to be sheriff is the lawful officer authorized to serve its process: McCue v. Circuit Court, 51-60.

The right of a party to an office cannot be tested in a habeas corpus proceeding: Ex parte Strahl, 16-369.

Contested elections: Where the council of a city is, by its charter, the judge of the qualification and election of its own members, but has never provided any method of trying contested election cases, a person claiming to be elected mayor may, by proceeding by information in quo warranto, have his right to such office determined: State ex rel. v. Funck, 17-365.

Quo warranto is the proper proceeding to determine the defendant's right to exercise the functions of an office, although as between the defendant and the relator the proper board has decided in favor of the latter: State v. Minton, 49-591.

The right to preside at the meeting of the city council is a franchise which may be contested by this proceeding. An original bill for an injunction is not the proper remedy: Cochran v. McCleary, 22-75.

Organization of school district: Action in the name of the state to determine whether the electors of a certain territory are authorized to exercise the corporate powers of a school district should be against such electors in person and not against the school district as such: State v. Independent School Dist., 44-227.

To close the business of a corporation: An action may be brought upon the relation of the auditor to close the business of an in-insurance company for failure to comply with the statutory provisions as to the method of conducting such business, and for the purposes of such action it will be assumed that the corporation was duly organized: State ex rel. v. Iowa Mutual Aid Ass'n, 59-125.

If term of office expires while proceeding pending: Where the office for the recovery of which the action is brought is one to which no compensation attaches, it is not error for the court to dismiss the suit when, at the time of trial, the term of office contested for has expired. So held in case of sub-director of school district: State ex rel. v. Porter, 58-19.

4582. Joinder; counter-claim. 3346. To such action there shall be no joinder of any other cause of action, nor any counter-claim. [R., § 4180.]

4584. By private person. 3348. If the district [county] attorney, on demand, neglect or refuse to commence the same, any citizen of the state having an interest in the question, may apply to the court in which the action is to be commenced, or to the judge thereof, for leave to do so, and, upon obtaining such leave, may prosecute the action to final judgment in other respects as provided. [R., § 3735.]

4585. Petition. 3349. The petition shall contain a plain statement of the facts which constitute the grounds of the proceeding, and, with the notice, and all the subsequent pleadings and proceedings, shall conform to the rule given for procedure in civil actions in title seventeen of this code, except so far as the same are modified by this chapter. [R., §§ 3736-8; C., '51, §§ 2154-6.]

4586. Liability for costs. 3350. When such action is brought upon the relation of a private individual, that fact shall be stated in the petition, and the order allowing him to prosecute may require that he shall be responsible for costs in case they are not adjudged against the defendant. In other cases the payment of costs shall be regulated by the same rule as in criminal actions. [R., § 3746; C., '51, § 2164.]

4588. Several claimants. 3352. When several persons claim to be entitled to the same office or franchise, a petition may be filed against all or any portion thereof, in order to try their respective rights thereto, in the manner provided by this chapter. [R., § 3743; C., '51, § 2161.]

JUDGMENT.

4589. Effect of. 3353. If judgment be rendered in favor of such claimant, he shall proceed to exercise the functions of the office after he has qualified as required by law. [R., § 3740; C., '51, § 2158.]

A supersedeas bond, given on appeal from the judgment of the court that the plaintiff is entitled to the office sued for, does not suspend his right to such office and to the salary incident thereto, to which he becomes entitled by the judgment; and, therefore, in an action upon such appeal bond, after affirmance of the judgment, the appellee cannot recover the salary accruing during the pendency of the appeal: Jayne v. Drowbaugh, 63-711.

4590. Books and papers. 3354. The court, after such judgment, shall order the defendant to deliver over all books and papers in his custody or under his control belonging to said office. [R., § 3731; C., '51, § 2159.]

4591. Suit for damages. 3355. When the judgment has been rendered in favor of the claimant, he may at any time within one year thereafter, bring suit against the defendant and recover the damages he has sustained by reason of the act of the defendant. [R., § 3742; C., '51, § 2160.]

4592. Judgment of ouster against corporation. 3356. If the defendant be found guilty of unlawfully holding or exercising any office, franchise, or privilege, or if a corporation be found to have violated the law by which it holds its existence, or in any manner to have done acts which amount to a surrender or forfeiture of its privileges, judgment shall be rendered that such defendant be ousted and altogether excluded from such office, franchise, or privilege, and also that he pay the costs of the proceeding. [R., § 3744; C., '51, § 2162.]

4595. Action against officers. 3359. When judgment of ouster is rendered against a corporation on account of the misconduct of the directors or officers thereof, such officers shall be jointly and severally liable to an action by any one injured thereby. [R., § 3755; C., '51, § 2173.]

TRUSTEES APPOINTED.

4596. Corporation dissolved. 3360. If a corporation is ousted and dissolved by the proceedings herein authorized, the court shall appoint three disinterested persons as trustees of the creditors and stockholders. [R., § 3748; C., '51, § 2166.]

4597. Bond. 3361. Said trustees shall enter into a bond in such a penalty and with such security as the court approves, conditioned for the faithful discharge of their trust. [R., § 3749; C., '51, § 2167.]

4598. Action on. 3362. Suit may be brought on such bond by any person injured by the negligence or wrongful act of the trustees in the discharge of their duties. [R., § 3750; C., '51, § 2168.]

4599. Duty of trustees. 3363. The trustees shall proceed immediately to collect the debts and pay the liabilities of the corporation, and to divide the surplus among those thereto entitled. [R., § 3751; C., '51, § 2169.]

4600. Books delivered to. 3364. The court shall, upon application for that purpose, order any officer of such corporation or any other person having possession of any of the effects, books, or papers of the corporation, in any wise necessary for the settlement of its affairs, to deliver up the same to the trustees. [R., § 3752; C., '51, § 2170.]

4601. Inventory. 3365. As soon as practicable after their appointment, the trustees shall make and file in the office of the clerk of the court, an inventory of all the effects, rights, and credits which come to their possession or knowledge, the truth of which inventory shall be sworn to. [R., § 3753; C., '51, § 2171.]

4602. Powers. 3366. They shall sue for and recover the debts and property of the corporation, and shall be responsible to the creditors and stockholders respectively, to the extent of the effects which come into their hands. [R., § 3754; C., '51, § 2172.]

4603. Penalty for refusing to obey order of court. 3367. Any person who, without good reason, refuses to obey any order of the court, as herein provided, shall be deemed guilty of contempt of court, and shall be fined in any sum not exceeding five thousand dollars and imprisoned in the county jail until he comply with said order, and shall be farther liable for the damages resulting to any person on account of his refusal to obey such order. [R., § 3756; C., '51, § 2174.]

CHAPTER 7.

OF ACTIONS ON OFFICIAL SECURITIES, AND FINES AND FORFEITURES.

4604. Official bonds; construed. 3368. The official bond of a public officer is to be construed as a security to the body politic or civil corporation of which he is an officer, and also to all the members thereof, severally, who are intended to be thereby secured. [R., § 3727; C., '51, § 2145.]

For similar provisions, see § 3757.

4605. Judgment no bar. 3369. A judgment in favor of a party for one delinquency, does not preclude the same or another party from an action on the same security for another delinquency, except that sureties can be made liable in the aggregate only to the extent of their undertaking. [R., § 3728; C., '51, § 2147.]

4606. Fines and forfeitures. 3370. Fines and forfeitures not otherwise disposed of, go into the treasury of the county where the same are collected for the benefit of the school fund. [R., § 3729; C., '51, § 1158; 9 G. A., ch. 35, § 3; 11 G. A., ch. 10, § 3.]

Suit for the penalty on a bail bond may be brought by the county. It is the trustee, and entitled to sue under the provisions of § 3749: Shelby County v. Simmonds, 33-345.

The fact that a fine or forfeiture is to go into the county treasury does not make the county a party to the action within the provisions of § 3795 so as to give the defendant the right to a change of venue: State v. Merrihue, 47-112.

The county in which the action upon the appeal bond is properly brought is the county entitled to the money collected thereon: Lucas County v. Wilson, 61-141.

The county in which the fine is collected under this section is the county in which the judgment for the fine is rendered and execution therefor is issued, and not the county in which such execution is enforced against property of defendant: Pottawattamie County v. Carroll County, 67-456.

That fines and forfeitures are to go to school fund, see § 2994, and Const., art. 9, § 4.

4607. By whom prosecuted. 3371. Actions for the recovery thereof may be prosecuted by the officers or persons to whom they are by law given in whole or in part, or by the public officer into whose hands they are to be paid when collected. [R., § 3730; C., '51, § 2149.]

4608. Collusion. 3372. A judgment for a penalty or forfeiture rendered by collusion, does not prevent another prosecution for the same subject-matter. [R., § 3731; C., '51, § 2150.]

CHAPTER 8.

OF ACTIONS OF MANDAMUS.

4609. Definition of. 3373. The action of mandamus is one brought in a court of competent jurisdiction, to obtain an order of such court commanding an inferior tribunal, board, corporation, or person, to do or not to do an act, the performance or omission of which the law enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station. Where discretion is left to the inferior tribunal or person, the mandamus can only compel it to act, but cannot control such discretion. [R., §§ 3761, 3763; C., '51, § 2180.]

I. IN GENERAL.

Civil action at law: The action of mandamus is a "civil action at law." Brown v. Crego, 29-321.

Nature of the action discussed generally with reference to the Code of '51: Chance v. Temple, 1-179.

When action allowed: This writ should not issue unless there is some wrong on the part of the tribunal, corporation, board or person to be commanded: Price v. Harned, 1-473.

Writ in federal courts auxiliary: The holding of the federal courts is that a proceeding by a writ of mandamus to enforce a judgment is not a suit in the jurisdictional sense, but a proceeding auxiliary to the judgment, whether brought before or after it is rendered: Ex parte Hoiman, 28-88, 102.

But a proceeding may be maintained in a state court to enforce the judgment of a federal court: Brown v. Crego, 32-498.

Federal courts; state statute: Mandamus proceedings in the United States courts for this state are not governed by the provisions of the state statutes in relation to such proceedings: United States ex rel. v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2 Dillon, 527.

Mandamus to enforce obedience to statute: The writ of mandamus generally issues to compel obedience to some specific duty by a public functionary, and while it will not issue to direct the action of such person, where the action is discretionary with him, yet where the law enjoins upon him the performance of a specific act, obedience to that law may be enforced by the writ: United States ex rel. v. Commissioners, Mor., 31.

Mandamus against a successor in office: Where the duty is only imposed upon a public functionary in his official capacity, the performance of it may be enforced against the successor of the person who should have performed the act: Ibid.

The only remedy: Where a positive official duty is enjoined by law upon an officer, as to the manner of the performance of which he has no discretion, the only adequate remedy, ordinarily, is the writ of mandamus: Benjamin v. District T'p, 50-648.

To compel railroad to open crossings: The duty of a railway corporation to construct an open crossing for the accommodation of a person owning land on both sides of the track, at his request, as required by law, is one which may be enforced by mandamus: Boggs v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 54-435.

To compel removal of obstructions in highway: Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel a road supervisor to remove obstructions in a public highway: Larkin v. Harris, 36-93; Patterson v. Vail, 43-142.

Against board of canvassers: Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel a board of canvassers to declare the proper party elected and so certify under §§ 1101, 1102: Bradfield v. Wart, 36-291.

The board of county canvassers may be compelled to re-assemble, after having declared the result of their canvass, and re-canvass the returns to correct a mistake: Price v. Harned, 1-473; State ex rel. v. County Judge, 13-139.

To turn over books to successor; replevin: Mandamus, not replevin, is the proper remedy to compel an officer of a corporation to produce and turn over the books of his office to his successor: Keokuk v. Merriam, 44-432.

To cure defective tax deed: A treasurer, who has executed a tax deed which is so irregular or imperfect as not to convey the title which the purchaser acquired at the tax sale, may, by mandamus, be compelled to execute a second and corrected deed (arguendo): McCready v. Seaton, 29-356, 377.

To compel auditor to draw warrant: The district court can, by writ of mandamus, compel the auditor of state to draw a warrant on the treasurer of state for the sum due a public officer on his salary: Bryan v. Cottell, 15-538.

To compel auditor to attach seal: Mandamus may be brought against a county auditor to compel him to attach the county seal to a warrant issued by him or his predecessor: Prescott v. Gonser, 34-175.

To reinstate member of religious corporation: A court will not, upon an application for a writ of mandamus against a religious corporation, compel the reinstatement of a member expelled and inquire into the rightfulness of such action, it appearing that no property interest or other valuable civil right has been affected: Sale v. First Regular Baptist Church, 62-26.

To compel official action: A public officer cannot be compelled by mandamus to execute a contract binding upon the state: Chance v. Temple, 1-179, 200.

Where a board of school directors refuse to act in a particular case mandamus will lie, as, for instance, to compel a board of directors to restore territory to a district township, there being no appeal from the refusal of the board to act in such a case: Albin v. Board of Directors, 58-77.

A board may be required by mandamus to act in a matter as to which a duty is enjoined upon it: Hightower v. Overhauser, 65-347; District T'p v. Independent Dist., 72-687.

The courts may by mandamus compel school directors to re-admit a pupil who has been unlawfully excluded by reason of a rule which the directors had no power to make: Perkins v. Board of Directors, 56-476.

The common-law rule that mandamus will not be granted when the right sought to be enforced is doubtful, even though applicable under the statutory provisions, does not refer to a case where the doubt is one arising upon the mere construction of a judicial order, or a legal doubt as to the effect or meaning of a record: Larkin v. Harris, 36-93.

The duty of school officers to obey the decisions of the state superintendent made on an appeal to him may be enforced by mandamus: Newby v. Free, 72-379.

Demand is not necessary where the proceeding is brought to enforce the performance of a public duty which is pointed out by statute, although it may be necessary as to a matter of private right: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 7-186; State ex rel. v. Bailey, 7-390.

II. MANDAMUS TO COMPEL LEVY, COLLECTION, ETC., OF TAXES.

To pay debt not in judgment: A creditor by a simple contract debt has no legal right to mandamus to compel a city to levy a tax for his payment, unless the debt is contracted under a special law or vote authorizing such proceeding to enforce payment. But it is otherwise after judgment has been obtained and it can be paid in no other way: State ex rel. v. Davenport, 12-335; Coy v. City Council, 17-1.

If the debt is contracted under some special law or for some special purpose, and the law or contract makes it obligatory on the officers to levy, collect and place in the treasury the means to meet such indebtedness, such duty may be enforced without the return of an execution nulla bona: State ex rel. v. Davenport, 12-335.

To pay for property taken: Where it becomes the duty of a city to make compensation for property taken and to levy a tax therefor, the performance of such duty may be enforced by mandamus: State ex rel. v. Keokuk, 9-438.

When taxes ordered levied: Where county officers were directed by writ of mandamus to levy a tax which ought to have been made some time before, the treasurer should proceed to collect the tax in the same manner as if it had been levied when it ought to have been. The tax must therefore be treated as delinquent from the time when the levy ought to have been made and not from the time when it actually was made: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 12-237.

Constitutional limit of taxation: The board of supervisors cannot be compelled by mandamus to levy a tax beyond the constitutional limit of taxation: Polk v. Winett, 37-34.

Writ may direct continual levy: Where a city council is directed by mandamus to levy a tax not exceeding the limit of taxation to pay off a judgment against the city, the order may direct that in case the amount realized is not sufficient to pay off the judgment an additional tax for that purpose shall be levied for subsequent years: Coy v. City Council, 17-1.

Treasurer to pay over tax already collected: An action by mandamus may be maintained to compel a treasurer to pay over a tax levied and collected to pay a judgment: Brown v. Crego, 32-498.

And this remedy may be pursued in the state court although the judgment is in the federal court: Ibid.

The county treasurer may be compelled by mandamus to pay over to a railroad company a tax collected for its benefit: McGregor & S. C. R. Co. v. Birdsall, 30-255.

If the duty to levy and collect a tax for the payment of a special indebtedness is imposed, it is not performed by making the levy and providing generally for the payment of the tax, but should be specifically executed by setting apart the tax as a special fund for the purpose: State ex rel. v. Davenport, 12-335.

If the levy is made and the officer is proceeding with such dispatch as the law requires and permits to collect the same, he will not be in default: Ibid.

Tax payer's right to intervene: In an action against an officer to compel the performance of a legal duty in the levying of a tax, a tax payer cannot intervene on the ground that the tax would be void when levied: Harwood v. Quinby, 44-385.

Impossible performance: It is not proper to grant a writ of mandamus commanding a performance beyond the powers of the defendant: Rice v. Walker, 44-458.

Refusal of officers to obey mandate: Where the county supervisors refuse to obey the mandate of the federal court to levy a tax, but there is no refusal on the part of the county treasurer to collect the tax if one were levied, the federal court will not set aside the statute which confides to the supervisors of the county exclusively the right to assess a county tax, and assess such tax itself by its own commissioner: Rusch v. Supervisors, Woolworth, 313.

Power of federal courts: The federal courts may exercise the same authority by mandamus to compel the payment of a judgment against a municipal corporation as may be exercised by the state courts: Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall., 166.

Mandamus and not bill in equity and injunction is the appropriate remedy in cases like the above: Ibid.; Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall., 481.

Appointment of marshals by federal court to enforce mandate: The federal courts have the power to appoint a marshal as a commissioner to levy and collect a tax against a municipal corporation, when the board of supervisors have disobeyed or evaded the law of the state or the peremptory mandate of the federal court: Supervisors v. Rogers, 7 Wall., 175; Lansing v. County Treasurer, 1 Dillon, 522.

Federal mandate; state injunction: Where the defendants had been enjoined by the state courts from levying a tax before suit had been brought in the United States courts, held, that the injunction was not a sufficient answer to an alternative writ of mandamus commanding them to levy a tax to pay a judgment afterwards recovered. It is immaterial whether the injunction of the state court was before or after the judgment obtained in the United States court, or whether before or after the institution of the suit. It is not a question which court first obtained jurisdiction of the case: Mayor v. Lord, 9 Wall., 409; Supervisors v. Durant, 9 Wall., 415; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall., 166.

III. INTERFERENCE WITH DISCRETION.

Not permitted: Mandamus is not designed to enable a party to have a review of the action of officers when they are clothed with a discretion, or when their action depends upon facts to be ascertained by them: Scripture v. Burns, 59-70.

An officer's discretion is not to be controlled by mandamus: Christy v. Whitmore, 67-60.

Courts cannot by mandamus compel the discretion of officers or tribunals. So, a board of supervisors cannot thus be compelled to build a bridge, or rebuild one when fallen down: State ex rel. v. Morris, 43-192.

Where a board of school directors have a discretion in a particular matter, such discretion cannot be controlled whether they have exercised it wisely or not: Clark v. Board of Directors, 24-266.

A county superintendent vested with a dis-

4610. Issued by whom. 3374. The order may be issued by the district [or circuit] court, to any inferior tribunal, or to any corporation, officer, or person; and by the supreme court, to any district [or circuit] court, if necessary, and also in any other case where it is found necessary for that court to exercise its legitimate power. [R., §§ 3761, 3764; C., '51, §§ 2179, 2181.]

Mandamus cannot issue from the supreme court except to a court of record: Westbrook v. Wicks, 36-382.

It is a well settled principle that courts of 4611. Extent of remedy by. 3375. The plaintiff in any action, except those brought for the recovery of specific, real, or personal property, may also as an auxiliary relief have an order of mandamus to compel the performance of a duty established in such action. But if such duty, the performance of which is sought to be compelled, is not one resulting from an office, trust, or station, it must be one for the breach of which a legal right to damages is already complete at the commencement of the action, and must also be a duty of which a court of equity would enforce the performance. [R., § 3767.]

The duty of the officers of a mutual fire insurance company to make an assessment for the payment of a loss may be enforced by cretion in the matter cannot be compelled by mandamus to issue a teacher's certificate: Bailey v. Ewart, 52-111.

Mandamus will not lie to control the action of a board of equalization; it can only be brought to compel them to act: Meyer v. Dubuque County, 43-592.

Where an act is to be performed or omitted in the discretion of a party the performance cannot be enforced by an action of mandamus: Milwaukee Malt Extract Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 73-98.

It is not judicial discretion for township trustees to arbitrarily refuse to certify as by law they are required to do on grounds which they have no right to take into consideration: Harwood v. Quinby, 44-385.

appellate jurisdiction cannot issue a writ of mandamus except in aid of their appellate powers: United States ex rel. v. Commissioners, Mor., 31.

mandamus: Harl v. Pottawattamie County Mut. F. Ins. Co., 74-39.

4612. Other remedy. 3376. An order of mandamus shall not be issued in any case where there is a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of the law, except as herein provided. [R., § 3765; C., '51, § 2182.]

That a judgment debtor has an effectual remedy against one of two joint debtors will not prevent him from proceeding by mandamus against the other, where that is the proper remedy against the latter: Palmer v. Stacy, 44-340.

Mandamus will not lie against a board of school directors, where the party has the right of appeal to the county superintendent: Marshall v. Sloan, 35-445; Barrett v. Directors, 73-134.

But mandamus is the proper remedy to compel a board of school directors to carry out a vote of the electors, and it is not necessary to first prosecute an appeal from their action to the county superintendent: Benjamin v. District T'p, 50-648.

Mandamus is not the proper remedy for compelling a clerk to issue execution on a judgment, there being a plain, speedy and adequate remedy by application to the court or judge for an order for such execution: Pickell v. Owen, 66-485.

An action on an officer's bond for damages for failure to perform an official duty is not such speedy and adequate remedy as to prevent resort to mandamus to compel the performance of the duty: Prescott v. Gonser, 34-175.

4613. In whose name. 3377. The order of mandamus is granted on the petition of any private party aggrieved, without the concurrence of the prosecutor for the state, or on the petition of the state by the district [county] attorney, when the public interest is concerned, and is in the name of such private party or of the state, as the case may be in fact brought. [R., § 3761.]

Party aggrieved: The order is granted on the petition of a private party aggrieved: Harwood v. Case, 37-692.

Therefore, held, that under the act allowing townships to vote a tax to aid in the construction of railroads the company could not, by mandamus, compel a treasurer to collect the tax until it showed itself entitled to receive the tax and the whole amount thereof: Ibid.

Where a writ of mandamus was sued for to compel a mayor to issue a license to the applicant, and the city, while the suit was in progress, repealed the ordinance authorizing the issuance of the license, held, that the action for mandamus could no longer be prosecuted: Cutcomp v. Utt, 60-156.

Mandamus will not be granted on the petition of a private person in a matter in which it does not appear that he has any interest: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280.

In a matter of public right any citizen may be a relator in an action for a mandamus: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 7-186.

A private citizen may maintain an action against the directors of a school district to compel action upon a petition to have part of a district township attached to an independent district for school purposes: Hightower v. Overhaulser, 65-347.

Electors of a precinct, the returns of which are thrown out by a canvassing board, are proper parties to bring action of mandamus against the board to compel the canvassing of such returns: State ex rel. v. Bailey, 7-390.

4614. Petition. 3378. The plaintiff in such action shall state his claim, and shall also state facts sufficient to constitute a cause for such claim, and shall also set forth that the plaintiff, if a private individual, is personally interested therein, and that he sustains and may sustain damage by the non-performance of such duty, and that performance thereof has been demanded by him, and refused or neglected, and shall pray an order of mandamus commanding the defendant to fulfill such duty. [R., § 3762.]

As to the interest which a private individual must show in order to enable him to maintain an action to compel the opening of a highway, see Moon v. Cort, 43-503; State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280.

4615. Other pleadings. 3379. The pleadings and other proceedings in any action in which a mandamus is claimed, shall be the same in all respects as nearly as may be, and costs shall be recoverable by either party as in an ordinary action for the recovery of damages. [R., § 3766.]

Demurrer: Where the facts stated in an application for mandamus do not entitle the plaintiff to the relief asked, a demurrer and not a motion to dismiss is the proper remedy: Meyer v. Dubuque County, 43-592.

A demurrer in this action must specify the ground of objection to the pleading attacked as in other actions at law: District T'p v. Independent Dist., 72-687.

Jurisdiction: An objection to the jurisdiction which relates to the character and residence of parties comes too late when first made after judgment and then can only be urged on error. If made and improperly overruled, it would be valid and binding until reversed on writ of error: Ex parte Holman, 28-88.

Continuance: An action for mandamus has no such personal interest in the action of the board of supervisors or a county officer authorized to make publication in a newspaper as to compel by mandamus the selection of his paper for that purpose: Welch v. Board of Supervisors, 23-199.

Where the question is one of public right, and the object is to procure the enforcement of a public duty, a private citizen cannot have the duty enforced on the ground that failure to enforce it results in private injury to him, but only when injury to the public is shown: Crane v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 74-330.

Against partnership by member thereof: The common-law rule that a party in his individual capacity cannot bring an action against a partnership, board of trustees, or other body of which he is a member, does not apply to this proceeding: Cooper v. Nelson, 38-440.

Tax payer's right to intervene: In an action against an officer to compel the performance of a legal duty in the levying of a tax, a tax payer cannot intervene on the ground that the tax would be void when levied: Harwood v. Quinby, 44-385.

A party cannot have relief by mandamus without making the showing required by the statute: Scripture v. Burns, 59-70.

may be continued until the acts required are performed: Palmer v. Jones, 49-405.

So where a city council is directed by mandamus to levy a tax not exceeding the limit of taxation to pay off a judgment against the city, the order may direct that, in case the amount realized is not sufficient to pay off the judgment, an additional tax for that purpose shall be levied for subsequent years: Coy v. City Council, 17-1.

Nunc pro tunc entry on journal: Where a writ of mandamus issued without any order of the court having been entered on the journal record of the clerk, but a note of it was entered on the clerk's and judge's dockets, held, that the court on motion would allow the judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc: Supervisors v. Durant, 9 Wall., 736.

4616. Injunction may issue, when; joinder. 3380. When the action is brought by a private person, it may be joined with a cause of action for such an injunction as may be obtained by ordinary proceedings, or with the causes of action specified in section three thousand three hundred and seventy-five [§ 4611], but no other joinder, and no counter-claim shall be allowed. [R., § 4181.]

4617. Peremptory order. 3381. When the plaintiff recovers judgment, the court may include therein a peremptory order of mandamus, directed to the defendant, commanding him forthwith to perform the duty to be enforced, together with a money judgment for damages and costs, upon which an ordinary execution may issue. [R., § 3768.]

The writ of mandamus can now only issue after judgment, and not as an original or intermediate process: Wright v. Connor, 34-240.

Where a writ was directed to a board of canvassers, held, that it was not necessarily erroneous, although one of the former members had become functus officio: State ex rel. v. Bailey, 7-390.

The proceeding under a writ of mandamus to compel a canvass of votes at an election does not, in all cases, determine the ultimate right. It may still be necessary after a canvass to resort to quo warranto or an injunction for a contest of election: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 7-186.

A peremptory writ of mandamus should is-4618. Return. 3382. The order shall simply command the performance of the duty, shall be directed to the party and not the sheriff, and may be issued in term or vacation, and returnable forthwith, and no return except that of compliance shall be allowed; but time to return it may, upon sufficient grounds, be allowed by the court or judge, either with or without terms. [R., § 3769.]

It is not proper to grant a writ of mandamus commanding a performance beyond the powers of defendant. But if the defendant has wrongfully put it out of his power to do the act he may be liable in damages: Rice v. Walker, 44-458.

To make return of a writ of mandamus to collect a tax properly responsive to the writ, all the facts should be alleged and the amount collected thereunder stated, so that the court can determine the excuse of the officer in case sue to an officer in his individual name and not merely by the name of his office: State ex rel. v. Smith, 9-334.

A writ of mandamus compelling the mayor and aldermen of the city of Davenport to levy a tax is properly directed, although the corporate name, by which the charter provides that the city shall sue and be sued, is the "City of Davenport": Mayor v. Lord, 9 Wall., 409.

A writ of mandamus directing payment of certain orders by the treasurer of a school district, without description of the orders by numbers or amounts, is defective: State ex rel. v. District T'p, 11-155.

of failure to execute the mandate, and also whether the amount of the judgment has been realized. A return merely stating that a levy has been made to pay this and other claims is erroneous: Benbow v. Iowa City, 7 Wall., 313.

The return of a marshal may be amended to show that the writ was exhibited to each of the supervisors at the time of the service—this being a matter of common practice: Supervisors v. Durant, 9 Wall., 736.

4619. Performance by another. 3383. The court may, upon application of the plaintiff, besides, or instead of proceeding against the defendant by attachment, direct that the act required to be done, may be done by the plaintiff or some other person appointed by the court at the expense of the defendant, and upon the act being done, the amount of such expense may be ascertained by the court, or by a reference appointed by the court as the court or judge may order, and the court may render judgment for the amount of such expenses and costs, and enforce payment thereof by execution. [R., § 3770.]

4620. Temporary orders. 3384. During the pendency of the action, the court, or judge in vacation, may make temporary orders for preventing damage or injury to the plaintiff until the case is decided. [R., § 3771.]

4621. Security. 3385. When the state is a party, it may appeal without security. [R., § 3772.]

CHAPTER 9.

OF INJUNCTIONS.

4622. Grounds for. 3386. An injunction may be obtained as an independent remedy in an action by equitable proceedings, in all cases where such relief would have been granted in equity previous to the adoption of this code; and in all cases of breach of contract or other injury, where the party injured is entitled to maintain, and has brought an action by ordinary proceedings, he may, in the same cause, pray and have a writ of injunction against the repetition or continuance of such breach of contract or other injury, or the committal of any breach of contract or injury of a like kind, arising out of the same contract, or relating to the same property or right, and he may also, in the same action, include a claim for damages or other redress. [R., §§ 3773, 3778; C., '51, § 2180.]

In actions at law: Where an injunction is asked in an action at law as here contemplated, it is not necessary for a party to bring himself within the rules and usages of a court of equity in granting such relief: Hall v. Crouse, 14-487.

To entitle plaintiff to an injunction under such statutory provision, he need not allege that he will sustain an irreparable injury if the injunction is not granted, or that defendant is insolvent: Mills v. Hamilton, 49-105.

The fact that the action is improperly brought in equity, when it should have been brought at law, will not prevent plaintiff having the relief here provided for: Ibid.

A petition for injunction in ordinary proceedings must show a continuance or repetition of the injury: Berger v. Armstrong, 41-447.

The injunction may be granted before the determination of the case in which it is asked, the other party of course being heard: Ewell v. Greenwood, 26-377.

Where a defendant had sold to plaintiff the good-will of a business, and obligated himself under a penalty not to prosecute the same business in the same place for a limited time, held, that the only remedy for a breach of the agreement not to prosecute the business was an action for the penalty, and that an injunction could not be had under the statutory provision last above referred to, to restrain defendant from violating his contract: Stafford v. Shortreed, 62-524.

Such statutory provision does not confer upon a court of law in such proceedings either general or special chancery powers, nor clothe it with power to grant any other relief or remedy not before possessed, except that of an injunction: Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 33-422, 475.

Jurisdiction: The authority to allow an injunction is an incident of chancery jurisdiction and can only be exercised by courts clothed with general chancery powers or by virtue of legislative enactment: Cummings v. Des Moines, W. & S. W. R. Co., 36-173.

To restrain trespass; adequate remedy at law: An injunction ought not to be granted to restrain a mere trespasser, the party injured in such cases having an adequate remedy at law: Wilson v. Hughell, Mor., 461.

Where, after judgment in plaintiff's favor in an action for possession of real property, in which plaintiff's right to the property is fully adjudicated, and the issuance and service of a writ of assistance, by virtue of which defendant is put out of possession, he again takes possession of the property, plaintiff may have an injunction to prevent defendant from continuing to hold possession in disobedience of the judgment and process: Ten Eyck v. Sjoburg, 68-625.

Threatened injury: A court of equity will interfere by injunction to protect a right only where there is apparent danger that the right will be invaded: Trulock v. Merte, 72-510.

Injunction will not be allowed against a threatened trespass, where it does not appear but that plaintiff has a full, complete and adequate remedy at law for any and all trespasses which may be committed, and especially is this true where the statute offers triple damages for any injuries inflicted by such trespass and makes the same criminal: Cowles v. Shaw, 2-496.

To preserve a right: A court of equity will ordinarily interfere by injunction to preserve or continue a right until the termination of the litigation upon the result of which the right itself depends: Teabout v. Jaffray, 74-28.

Insolvency: To authorize the interference of a court of equity by injunction to prevent trespass upon real estate, there must be some distinct ground of equitable jurisdiction, such as the insolvency of defendant, the prevention of waste or irreparable injury, or a multiplicity of suits: Council Bluffs v. Stewart, 51-385.

Where defendant in an action for trespass which is being continued is insolvent, an injunction to restrain the commission thereof may be properly issued: Gibbs v. McFadden, 39-371.

In the absence of a motion for more specific statement, an allegation in the petition that defendant is proof against execution is sufficient without more specific averment of the fact of insolvency: Burroughs v. Saterlee, 67-396.

Irreparable injury: If the injury threatened be irreparable, chancery will interfere by injunction. Therefore, held, that a petition which alleged that threatened illegal acts of a road supervisor in throwing down a fence to open a highway would cause irreparable injury showed ground for relief in equity: Bolton v. McShane, 67-207.

A district township may have an injunction to restrain another district township from removing a school-house from the territory of the former. It is not limited to an action at law for the trespass: District Tp v. District Tp, 54-115.

Injunction is an extraordinary remedy, to be granted only when the party is likely to suffer some irreparable injury against which he has no other speedy or adequate remedy. Therefore, held, that an injunction should not be granted to restrain a street railway company, having the right to do so in the charter from the city, from laying its track on a street, although it was claimed that it was using a certain kind of rail or was building according to a certain gauge which would render its track a nuisance, there being no requirement as to the kind of rail nor the gauge to be used: Waterloo v. Waterloo Street R. Co., 71-193.

To restrain opening or obstructing highway: Where a road supervisor has served notice to have a road opened as an official act by virtue of proceedings in which it is claimed that a highway has been established, the owner of property which would be trespassed upon in opening the road may maintain an action for injunction to restrain the contemplated trespass before any actual trespass upon his land is committed: Morgan v. Miller, 59-481.

Equity will interfere by injunction to restrain road supervisors and others from removing or interfering with fences, hedges, water-courses and the like in the discharge of their official duty. Relief in such cases is not based upon the ground of the irreparable character of the injury and the insolvency of defendant: Bolton v. McShane, 67-207.

An injunction will not lie to restrain a party from obstructing or inclosing a street or highway when it is in such condition that it cannot be used for that purpose: Prince v. McCoy, 40-533.

A party who will suffer no injury except in common with the public by reason of the obstruction of a highway will not be entitled to an injunction to restrain such obstruction: Ibid.

Obstruction of navigable stream: Where the riparian owner shows that the filling up of the banks of a navigable stream beyond high-water mark will occasion him special damages different in degree or kind from such as will be sustained by the public, he may maintain an injunction to prevent such injury: Musser v. Hershey, 42-356.

To prevent ejectment suits: The rule of the common law, on account of which it was held that an injunction might be granted in equity to restrain the prosecution of actions of ejectment, when the title had been properly determined between the parties, no longer exists, and an injunction will not be allowed for the purpose of restraining a second suit to which a previous adjudication might be pleaded as a bar: Gray v. Coan, 36-296.

A suit to enjoin the prosecution of an action to recover real property on the ground that a deed in defendant's chain of title has been lost is allowed. In such case he has no adequate remedy at law: Butch v. Lash, 4-215.

To restrain taking private property for public use: An injunction will not be allowed to restrain a party from committing an injury by an attempt to take private property under pretense of legal authority for a highway, it not appearing that any authority to do so actually exists, unless it appears that such party is insolvent and unable to respond to an action at law for damages, or that the injury would be such that it could not be adequately compensated in money: Dimwiddie v. Roberts, 1 G. Gr., 363.

After the assessment of damages for right of way of a railway has been made, the land owner may enjoin the further use of his premises by the company until the damages are paid: Richards v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 18-259; Hibbs v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 39-340.

Where one of the purposes for which the condemnation proceedings were ostensibly had was within the provisions of the statute, and the ground of complaint was that defendant sought to defraud plaintiff by proceeding under the statute ostensibly for a proper purpose, when the real and only purpose was to procure land for a use for which property could not be condemned, held, that the proceedings might be enjoined: Forbes v. Delashmitt, 68-164.

As the right of appeal is given in proceedings for condemning right of way, the party to such proceedings cannot by injunction take advantage of irregularities therein. The remedy by appeal is exclusive: Phillips v. Watson, 63-28.

Vacation of streets; certiorari: Injunction will not be granted to restrain the vacation of streets by a city council, there being a complete remedy by certiorari: Stubenrauch v. Neyenesch, 54-567.

To restrain enforcement of illegal taxes: An injunction will lie to restrain the sale of personal property levied on to satisfy a tax illegally levied. Replevin would not be a full remedy: Spencer v. Wheaton, 14-38.

Injunction is the proper remedy to restrain the levy and collection of an illegal tax on shares of stock in a national bank: Olmstead v. Board of Supervisors, 24-33.

A resident and tax payer of a school district may maintain a suit to enjoin the collection of a tax levied without authority of law: Williams v. Peinny, 25-436.

An injunction is the proper remedy to restrain the collection of a tax which is not only erroneous, but void: Standard Coal Co. v. Independent Dist., 73-304.

The jurisdiction of equity to restrain the enforcement of an illegal tax has been too long recognized and too frequently resorted to in this state to be now made a matter of serious question: Zorger v. Township of Rapids, 36-175; Brandirff v. Harrison County, 50-164.

An injunction is not the proper remedy against an erroneous or excessive assessment; the tax payer should apply to the board of equalization; but ultra if the law authorizing the tax is unconstitutional, or the levy is without authority or jurisdiction: Macklot v. Davenport, 17-379.

That a tax is merely irregular, for instance, by reason of property which should be included with the realty in an aggregate valuation being separately assessed as personalty, is not a ground for enjoining the collection of the tax. Such error should be corrected by application to the board of equalization: Wilson v. Cass County, 69-147.

In an action to enjoin the collection of an illegal tax, a number of persons having separate interests, but equally interested in the relief, may join as plaintiffs: Brandirff v. Harrison County, 50-164.

And in such case, one or more parties thus interested may maintain an action for the benefit of the others having a like interest. (Overruling Fleming v. Mershon, 36-413): Ibid. And see Palo Alto Banking, etc., Co. v. Mahar, 65-74.

Residents and tax payers of an independent district may join in an action to declare taxes levied therein for school purposes to be void: Wilkinson v. Van Orman, 70-230.

Two or more owners of distinct pieces of land cannot join in an action to restrain the levy and enforcement of a municipal tax upon their property on the ground that their land is so situated as not to be subject to the levy of such taxes: Lewis v. Eshleman, 57-663.

Where a tax in aid of a railroad was declared defeated by the judges of the election, but the township clerk improperly certified in regular form to the board of supervisors that the proposition was carried, and the board thereupon levied the tax, held that, as the tax was not voted, its collection might be restrained by injunction, and certiorari was not an available remedy: Cattell v. Lowry, 45-478.

To restrain official action: A citizen and tax payer may maintain an action to enjoin the issuance by the county auditor of a warrant in payment of a refund of taxes illegally ordered by the board of supervisors. The determination by the board of the legality of such a refunding is not an adjudication which must be attacked only upon appeal or by certiorari: Hospers v. Wyatt, 63-264.

Citizens and tax payers of a county may maintain an injunction against a county official to prevent the erection of a county courthouse at an improper place: Rice v. Smith, 9-570.

Where it appeared that the officers of a school district were about to accept a schoolhouse which did not comply with the terms of the contract for its construction and was much less valuable than provided by such contract, held, that an injunction might be granted against such officers at the suit of tax payers to prevent the acceptance of such building: Carthan v. Lang, 69-384.

A tax payer cannot by injunction restrain officers of the county in the performance of their duties, even though irregular, where it does not appear that their action is such as to be prejudicial to him: Sperry v. Kretchner, 65-525.

A party seeking an injunction to restrain the execution of a tax deed upon property must show that he has an interest in such property entitling him to such relief: Johnson v. Brett, 64-162.

A court of equity may interfere by injunction to prevent a conveyance by a municipal corporation of lands held by it for public purposes. Although such conveyance, being inconsistent with the purposes for which it is held, might be void, yet it may be enjoined to prevent the title from passing into the hands of various grantees, by reason of which parties seeking to restrain the improper use of the land might be driven to a multiplicity of suits: Cook v. Burlington, 30-94.

An officer may be made a party to restrain him in the discharge of official duties, where the discharge of his duties will be the means of consummating or aiding fraudulent purposes or of working oppression or injustice, although the officer is guilty of no wrong or unlawful purpose. But costs will not ordinarily be adjudged against him: Palo Alto Banking, etc., Co. v. Mahar, 65-74.

So held in an action to which the county recorder was made a party defendant and in which it was sought to enjoin him from recording certain conveyances which it was alleged were being executed in pursuance of a fraudulent confederation to defraud plaintiff of his title: Ibid.

Legislative action of the state or of a municipal corporation within the scope of its powers cannot be restrained by injunction, even though the threatened act, if passed, would be unconstitutional and void: Des Moines Gas Co. v. Des Moines, 44-505.

Injunction will not be granted at the suit of a tax payer to restrain a city from making a contract for lighting by electricity, even if such contract, if performed, might involve indebtedness beyond the constitutional limit: Searle v. Abraham, 73-507.

In regard to elections: A citizen of a county is authorized, as plaintiff, to prosecute an action for an injunction to restrain improper action of officers when counting votes on the question as to removing the county seat: Collins v. Ripley, 8-129.

In an injunction proceeding the validity of an election to remove a county seat may be tried: Sweatt v. Fuville, 23-321.

Where an election as to change of county seat had been ordered by the board of supervisors, made upon a petition and notice therefor, and the vote was favorable to the change, held, that those opposing such change had no cause for equitable relief justifying an injunction, the order for the vote being conclusive until set aside by certiorari: Bennett v. Hetherington, 41-142.

It is doubtful whether any court has the power or jurisdiction to enjoin an election to be held by the people pursuant to public law: Lamb v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 39-333.

Right to public office: Action by original bill for an injunction is not the proper method for trying the right to a public office or franchise. The remedy by information in quo warranto should be adopted. But it would seem that a temporary injunction might be granted as an auxiliary remedy in such case: Cochran v. McCleary, 22-75.

An action in equity for an injunction is not the proper method to determine which of two persons has the right to teach a school and who is the legal sub-director in the district township: District T^{pp} v. Barrett, 47-110.

To restrain proceedings at law: Equity will not interfere by injunction to restrain the prosecution of an action at law where it does not appear that plaintiff is insolvent or that there is any ground for a discovery, or that the facts upon which relief is sought cannot be made as fully available in an action at law as in equity: Smith v. Short, 11-523.

It is not the province of equity to interfere where there is a complete remedy at law, and especially when it is sought to restrain an action at law pending a hearing in equity: Central Iowa E. Co. v. Moulton & A. R. Co., 57-249.

A court of equity will enjoin proceedings in an action of forcible entry and detainer only where a certain and manifest irreparable injury will result unless its restraining power is exerted: Crawford v. Paine, 19-172.

Where parties are both residents of the state, the one may invoke the aid of a court of equity of the state to prevent the other from prosecuting an action in the courts of another state which will result in injury and fraud. Such jurisdiction is founded upon authority vested in courts of equity over persons within their jurisdiction and amenable to process, to restrain them from doing acts which will work wrong and injury to others, and which are contrary to equity and good conscience: Trager v. Landsley, 69-725; Hager v. Adams, 70-746.

Where plaintiff was under contract entitled to a conveyance of a right of way, held, that it was proper in an action for specific performance thereof to ask an injunction to restrain defendant from proceedings to have damages for the right of way assessed by a jury: Chicago & S. W. R. Co. v. Swinney, 38-182.

A court of equity cannot by injunction interfere with criminal proceedings in a court of law: Suess v. Noble, 31 Fed. Rep., 855.

Where an injunction has been granted restraining plaintiff in an action pending in the same court from dismissing such action, the supreme court will not, on appeal in the latter action, allow the parties to dismiss the case in violation of such injunction: Dubuque Branch of State Bank v. Rhombert, 37-664.

To restrain enforcement of judgment: A court of equity has authority to enjoin proceedings to enforce a judgment which is void for want of jurisdiction: Connell v. Stelson, 33-147.

Injunction may be granted to restrain enforcement of a judgment at law rendered without notice to the defendant therein, and upon a claim against which he had a good defense: Givens v. Campbell, 20-79.

A party seeking to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment at law must show that he has a defense to the action, or make such a case as to satisfy the court that if a new trial is had a different result will be obtained: Way v. Lamb, 15-79.

The enforcement of a judgment at law will not be restrained by injunction where it is not shown that the judgment is unjust or oppressive, or in other words that there would be a good defense to the claim if the judgment should be set aside. A court of equity will not set aside a judgment and open up the litigation until it appears that the result will be other or different from that already reached: Taggart v. Wood, 20-236.

A court of equity will not interfere by injunction to restrain the enforcement of a judgment on a ground which might have been urged as a matter of defense in the action on which the judgment was recovered: Faulkner v. Campbell, Mor., 148.

To authorize a party to relief against a judgment at law, and to pay an execution thereon, it must appear that it is against conscience to execute such judgment, and also that the injured party could not have availed himself of the same facts at or before the trial, and that there was no fault or negligence on his part: Kreichbaum v. Bridges, 1-14; Shricker v. Field, 9-366.

Matters antecedent to the bringing of the action in which the judgment was recovered which is sought to be enjoined, which matters might have been interposed as a defense in such action, cannot be made the basis of a suit in equity to enjoin the judgment: Lamb v. Drew, 20-15.

In a motion to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment the court cannot go behind the judgment to determine the regularity of the proceedings: Hampson v. Weave, 4-13.

In the absence of fraud, accident or mistake, equity cannot interfere to restrain the enforcement of a judgment at law, although it be wrong, unjust or inequitable: Finch v. Hollinger, 47-173.

Equity will not enjoin the collection of a judgment at law where the legal remedy is full, ample and complete, unless possibly there has been fraud, accident or surprise, without fault or negligence on the part of the complaining party: Freeman v. Hart, 61-525.

Held, that a judgment defendant could not have the enforcement of the judgment enjoined on the ground that he had a claim against the assignee of the judgment, who was his attorney in the action in which the judgment was recovered, for negligence in defending such action, it not appearing that the attorney was insolvent. Under such circumstances there is no such relation of trust or confidence as to entitle the judgment debtor to relief: Baker v. Ryan, 67-708.

Where the provisions of a judgment were that it should be paid in a town order at the expiration of a certain time, and before that time execution was issued, and, when the time expired, the order was not tendered, and afterwards, without any offer to perform, an injunction was asked against such execution, held, that plaintiff was not entitled to relief by reason of his failure to tender the order: Anamosa v. Wurzbacher, 37-25.

Where a judgment was rendered by default upon agreement that it should be satisfied only out of certain specified property, held, that an injunction was properly granted in an action by the debtor to restrain its enforcement against other property than that agreed upon: Montgomery v. Gibbs, 40-652.

An action to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment should be brought against the officer who is proceeding to enforce the judgment: Death v. Bank of Pittsburgh, 1-382.

To restrain sale on execution: Injunction will be granted to prevent the sale on execution of real property, when such property does not belong to the judgment debtor and the sale would cast a cloud upon the title: Key City Gas Light Co. v. Munsell, 19-305.

But a sale will not be enjoined if the judgment is a lien upon the property, although it is junior to other liens: Wiedner v. Thompson, 66-283.

To restrain enforcement of chattel mortgage: As the purchaser at foreclosure sale can acquire title only to such property as is covered by the mortgage, an action cannot be maintained by a junior mortgagee to restrain the foreclosure of a senior mortgage upon property which, it is claimed, is not covered by such senior mortgage: Rankin v. Rankin, 67-322.

To restrain nuisance: Courts of equity have general jurisdiction to entertain an action to abate a nuisance, and, although such jurisdiction has generally been exercised only in actions where property rights of the plaintiff are affected, yet it is competent for the legislature to extend this jurisdiction to cases where no property rights of the plaintiff as distinct from the general public are involved, and to authorize a suit to abate a nuisance to be brought by any citizen of the county: Littleton v. Fritz, 65-488.

So held under § 2384, authorizing a suit in equity by a citizen of the county to enjoin the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors: Ibid.

The fact that the act enjoined is one which is by statute made a criminal one will not prevent a court of equity having jurisdiction to abate it by injunction: Ibid.

Further as to what may be enjoined as a nuisance, see § 4567 and notes.

To restrain conveyances, attachments, etc.: Where real property standing in the name of a person not a defendant is attached, as having been conveyed by defendant to defraud creditors, an action for an injunction may be maintained against the grantee in such fraudulent conveyance to prevent alienation of the property by him to an innocent purchaser, until the determination of the attachment suit: Joseph v. McGill, 52-127.

A creditor who has not yet recovered a judgment cannot have an injunction to restrain the debtor from disposing of his property: Buchanan v. Marsh, 17-494.

A mortgagee, although he has not recovered judgment, may maintain an action for injunction to prevent a judicial sale of the mortgaged premises on the ground that it is fraudulently intended to defeat his rights, but a general creditor not yet having recovered judgment could not do so: Brigham v. White, 44-677.

One who has conveyed property by a warranty deed has no such interest therein that he can maintain injunction against the threatened sale thereof under a subsequent judgment, under which it is sought to subject the property on the ground that the conveyance was in fraud of creditors: Small v. Somerville, 58-362.

The grantee may, under proper circumstances, maintain an action for injunction to restrain his grantor and others from prosecuting a fraudulent confederation to convey the property so as to defeat his title: Palo Alto Banking, etc., Co. v. Mahar, 65-74.

In an injunction to restrain a sale by the trustee under a mortgage containing a power of attorney, where it did not appear that there was fraud or mistake, or that plaintiff would sustain an irreparable injury by such sale, and it was shown that plaintiff was aware of the condition of the title of which he complained at the time of taking the conveyance in part payment for which the mortgage was given, held, that there was no ground for an injunction: Crocker v. Robertson, 8-404.

Equity may, at the suit of the grantee of real property by a warranty deed, restrain the transfer of notes given for the purchase money where it appears that there was a breach of warranty as to a portion of the property. But such restraint will extend only to such amount as is necessary to make good to the grantee the damage resulting from the breach of warranty: McDunn v. Des Moines, 34-467.

Where property claimed by plaintiff was seized on attachment issued against a third person, and was replevied from the officer by plaintiff and taken into possession of plaintiff, held, that he could not have an injunction to restrain the levy of other attachments by other parties against such third person upon the same property: Patterson v. Seaton, 64-115.

To restrain payment of county warrant: An injunction restraining payment of a county warrant cannot operate to defeat a recovery upon such warrant negotiated before the injunction suit was commenced: McCormick v. Grundy County, 24-382.

To restrain sale of partnership property: Where plaintiff as administratrix of a deceased partner showed in her petition that the defendants, the copartners of her intestate, were insolvent and were disposing of the firm property and appropriating it to their own use, and that unless defendants were restrained by injunction there was danger of the property and assets of the firm being wholly lost, held, that there was a proper case for an injunction restraining defendants from disposing of the partnership property: Fletcher v. Vandusen, 52-448.

4623. Temporary or permanent. 3387. In any of the cases mentioned in the preceding section, the injunction may either be a part of the judgment rendered in the action or it may, if proper grounds therefor are shown, be granted by order at any stage of the case before judgment, and shall then be known as a temporary injunction. [R., § 3775; C., '51, § 2191.]

4624. Temporary, when allowed. 3388. Where it appears by the petition therefor, which must be supported by affidavit, that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief demanded, and such relief, or any part thereof, consists in restraining the commission or continuance of some act which would produce great or irreparable injury to the plaintiff; or where, during litigation, it appears that the defendant is doing, or threatens, or is about to do, or is procuring, or suffering to be done, some act in violation of the plaintiff's rights respecting the subject of the action, and tending to render the judgment ineffectual, a temporary injunction may be granted to restrain such act. It may also be granted in any case where it is specially authorized by statute.

An affidavit to the petition to the effect that the contents thereof are true, as the affiant believes, constitutes a sufficient verification: Kelley v. Briggs, 58-332.

If an amended pleading in an action for injunction is not sworn to, the temporary injunction may be dissolved on that ground, but it will be error to dismiss the action and proceed to personal judgment: Porter v. Moffett, Mor., 108; S. C., Mor., 153.

Although an injunction be improperly issued on account of defects in the petition, yet if these defects are corrected by amendment the injunction should not be dissolved: Sweatt

v. Faville, 23-321; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Carpenter, 27-487.

And this is true even though the amendment is made after the motion to dissolve is filed: Crawford v. Paine, 19-172.

A temporary injunction will not be issued where the facts stated in the petition, if proved, would not entitle the party to relief: Zorger v. Township of Rapids, 36-175.

In a suit brought under § 2384, to enjoin illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, a temporary injunction may be granted as in any other case: Littleton v. Fritz, 65-488. And see notes to that section.

4625. By whom granted. 3389. A temporary injunction may be granted:

1. By the court or judge thereof in which the action is pending or is to be brought;

2. By any judge of the district [or circuit] court of such district;

3. By any judge of the supreme, or a judge of any other district [or circuit] court.

But in cases where an action is pending, and it is applied for to affect the subject-matter of such action, it can only be granted by the court, or judge thereof, in which such action is pending. Nor shall it be granted by any judge mentioned in the second subdivision hereof, unless it satisfactorily appears by affidavit that the court or judge thereof in which the action is brought, cannot, for want of time, sickness, or other disability, hear the same, or that the residence of the judge is inconvenient, or that it is for some sufficient reason impracticable to make the application to him. Nor shall it be granted by any judge mentioned in the third subdivision hereof, unless it be made satisfactorily to appear to such judge, by affidavit, that the application therefor cannot, for some sufficient reason, be made to either of the courts or judges mentioned in the first or second subdivision of this section.

A judge may act under this section during term time, while the court is not actually in session, as well as in vacation between terms: Thompson v. Benepe, 67-79.

Although the granting as well as the refusal of a temporary injunction rests much in the discretion of the court, and such discretion will not be controlled except where there is a manifest abuse or mistake of the law, yet where an appeal was taken from an order granting a preliminary injunction involving a simple question of law upon undisputed facts, held, that the question would be determined on appeal and not postponed to final hearing: Fuson v. Connecticut General L. Ins. Co., 53-609.

A party cannot, by appealing from an order denying a temporary injunction and executing a supersedeas bond, have the benefit of such temporary injunction: Troupe v. Eade, 42-552.

Affidavits in resistance of an application for a temporary injunction are merely evidence which do not become a part of the record, unless preserved by bill of exceptions: Hart v. Foley, 67-407.

A temporary injunction issued in vacation is not dissolved by failure to procure an additional order therefor at the next term of court: Curtis v. Crane, 38-459.

An injunction relating to property held under attachment, where the attachment is the gist of the proceeding, must be brought in the same court where the attachment suit is pending: Cooney v. Moroney, 45-292.

A federal court will not, by temporary injunction, restrain proceedings in a state court in a criminal case, even though proceedings for its removal to the federal court have been taken: Wagner v. Drake, 31 Fed. Rep., 849.

4626. Notice to defendant who has answered. 3390. An injunction shall not be granted against a defendant who has answered, unless he has had notice of the application.

4627. Notice in other cases. 3391. An injunction to stop the general and ordinary business of a corporation, or the operations of a railway, or of a municipal corporation, or the erection of any building or other work, or the board of supervisors of any county, or to restrain a nuisance, can only be granted upon reasonable notice of the time and place of the application to the party to be enjoined.

Section applied: District T'p v. Barrett, 47-110.

This section held not applicable where one district township sought to restrain another from removing school-houses from the territory of the former: District T'p v. District T'p, 54-115.

4628. Refusal by court conclusive. 3392. No injunction shall be granted by a judge, after the application therefor has been overruled by the court; nor by a court or judge when it has been refused by the court or judge thereof in which the action is brought. A judge refusing an injunction, shall, if requested by either party, give him a certificate thereof.

4629. Motion to dissolve. 3393. The defendant may move to dissolve the injunction, either before or after the filing of the answer. [R., § 3790; C., '51, § 2206.]

4630. Issued by clerk. 3394. If the order is made by the court, the clerk shall make an entry thereof in the court record, and issue the order accordingly. If made in vacation, the judge must indorse said order upon the petition. [R., § 3776; C., '51, § 2192.]

This provision that the order for a temporary injunction shall be indorsed upon the petition is not mandatory, and the fact that it is made upon a separate piece of paper will not render subsequent proceedings thereunder void: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

4631. Bond. 3395. In the cases contemplated in the preceding sections, the order of allowance must direct the injunction to issue only after the filing of a bond in the office of the clerk of the proper court, in a penalty to be therein fixed, with sureties to be approved by such clerk, and conditioned for the payment of all damages which may be adjudged against petitioner by reason of such injunction. [R., § 3777; C., '51, § 2193.]

Additional bond: Under statute, as well as by rules of equity practice, it is competent for the court, in case the litigation wherein the injunction has been granted shall be protracted, to require an additional bond or further security to meet such contingency: Crawford v. Paine, 19-172.

Action on the bond for damages: The bond contemplated by statute in case of a temporary injunction is to cover such damages as may be adjudged against the obligors in an action brought thereon. The amount of damages cannot be adjudged in the original action. No such issue can be joined therein: Fountain v. West, 68-380.

A party can be damaged by an injunction only in case he is prevented by it from exercising or enjoying some right or privilege which he desired or was entitled to enjoy; and where an injunction was sought for the purpose of restraining the negotiation of a promissory note, and defendants by their answer negatived the allegation that they were about to negotiate the note, held, that no damage was shown to have accrued to them by reason of the granting of the injunction: Bank of Monoe v. Gifford, 70-580.

Attorneys' fees: In an action on the bond, reasonable compensation for legal services in securing a dissolution of the injunction may be recovered; but not attorneys' fees for services in defending the entire suit: Behrens v. McKenzie, 23-333; Langworthy v. McKelvey, 25-48.

Where an action was brought to have certain taxes declared illegal and void, and a temporary injunction was granted restraining their collection, but no steps were taken to have such injunction dissolved before final hearing, when it was dissolved, held that, the injunction being merely auxiliary, defendant was not entitled in an action on the injunction bond to recover attorneys' fees: Carroll County v. Iowa R. Land Co., 53-685.

If the injunction is dissolved after hearing on the merits, and this is all there is in the case, counsel fees might be recovered. Such recovery is not confined to cases where the injunction is dissolved on motion: Langworthy v. McKelvey, 25-48.

Where the motion to dissolve is made in good faith and affidavits filed in support thereof, but the court declines to pass upon it until final hearing, when the injunction is dissolved after hearing upon the merits, counsel fees for preparation of motion, etc., may be recovered in suit upon the bond: Wallace v. York, 45-81; Fountain v. West, 68-380.

An allowance of attorneys' fees for time spent in drawing useless affidavits would be improper: Ellwood Mfg. Co. v. Rankin, 70-403.

Fees for the services of an attorney in a case in the supreme court after the dissolution of the injunction should not be allowed: Ibid.

Where an injunction is the only relief sought, and dissolution is procured only upon final hearing, attorneys' fees should, in an action on the bond, be allowed for defending in the entire action: Reece v. Northway, 58-187.

An attorney's fee may be recovered where the injunction is dissolved on motion, and also where it is dissolved on final hearing, if it is the only relief sought. It may also be allowed in case of partial dissolution or modification, where such is the relief sought in the motion, but not where the motion is to dissolve as an entirety and is only partially sustained or a modification is granted: Ford v. Loomis, 62-586.

Dismissal of action: In an action on an injunction bond given to stay execution on a judgment, where it was alleged that an action for injunction had been dismissed, held, that the entry on the judgment calendar, "dismissed as per stipulation," was not sufficient evidence as to that fact in the absence of a showing as to what that stipulation was: Toule v. Leacox, 59-42.

Other damages: Where real estate depreciates in value during the time that sale thereof is prevented by injunction proceedings, there is no presumption that the owner, if not prevented, would have sold before depreciation and saved himself from loss, and damages are not recoverable for loss of sale unless it is made to appear that there was a bona fide application on the part of some person to buy, and that the sale was lost by reason of the injunction: Reece v. Northway, 58-187.

Failure to allow plaintiff nominal damages in an action brought upon an injunction bond will not be ground for reversal if no actual damages are shown: Boardman v. Willard, 73-20.

4632. Condition of bond when to restrain judgment. 3396. When proceedings in a civil action, or on a judgment or final order, are sought to be enjoined, the suit must be brought in the county and court in which such action is pending, or the judgment or order was obtained. The bond must also in that case be further conditioned to pay such judgment, or comply with such final order if the injunction is not made perpetual, or to pay any judgment that may be ultimately recovered against the party obtaining the injunction on the cause of action enjoined. [R., § 3778; C., '51, § 2179.]

Where it is sought to restrain the sale of property on execution under a judgment, on the ground that the judgment is void, the suit must be brought in the county and court where the judgment was obtained: Anderson v. Hall, 48-346; Bennett v. Hanchett, 49-71; Grattan v. Matteson, 51-622.

This provision is applicable in case of special as well as of general execution: Lockwood v. Kitteringham, 42-257.

In an action to recover damages for having wrongfully enjoined a sale under execution, held, that the costs made under the execution enjoined would be presumed to have been included in the amount for which the subsequent execution was issued, and that the cost of the judgment would be the only damage recoverable for delay in the sale: Johnston v. Moser, 72-654.

Defendant having a lot of unburned brick which were damaged by rain while an injunction was in force restraining him from carrying on the manufacture of such brick on the premises, held, that the writ of injunction as issued did not prevent him from taking steps to protect the brick from the rain, and if he was negligent in that respect he could not recover for damages sustained thereby: Behrens v. McKenzie, 23-333.

Defense; insanity: A bond given in an injunction proceeding is in the nature of an executed rather than an executory contract, and the fact that the one signing the bond and enjoying the benefit of the writ was insane at the time of signing it will constitute no defense to an action on the bond, if it appears that his insanity was not known to the opposite party: Ibid.

Summary damages should not be allowed on dissolution of an injunction unless they are such as are the immediate and necessary result of the allowance of the writ and depend simply upon computation for their determination, as the allowance of interest when the payment of money is restrained. In other cases the party should be left to his remedy by an action: Taylor v. Brownfield, 41-264.

Bond construed: In a particular case, held, that the bond rendered the obligor liable only for costs of the proceeding and not for other damages which accrued: Gifford v. Mohr, 47-279.

Right of action accrues on the bond at the final determination of the injunction suit, and not at the previous dissolution of the temporary injunction: Bank of Monroe v. Gifford, 65-648.

Where the action is to enjoin the sale of a particular piece of property under a judgment, the bond need not be for twice the amount of the judgment: Hardin v. White, 63-633.

It seems, however, that it would not apply where it should be sought to enjoin the sale of property not belonging to defendant in execution, but belonging to a third person who seeks the injunction: Ibid.

Where the object of the action is to declare a judgment or final order of a court invalid, action must be brought in the court where the judgment or order was obtained; but where it is sought to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment because of some matter which has arisen since the judgment was rendered, and not on the ground that it should never have been entered, or that it is invalid, or that it should not be enforced, the action need not be brought in the court where the judgment was recovered, but may be brought in the county of defendant's residence: Baker v. Ryan, 67-708.

An action to set aside a sheriff's sale and deed on the ground that the property was exempt as a homestead may be brought in a different court from that in which the judgment was rendered: Visek v. Doolittle, 60-602.

When a transcript of a judgment before a justice of the peace is filed in the office of the clerk of the circuit court, it becomes a judgment of that court, and a suit to enjoin proceedings thereon must be brought in that court: Anderson v. Hall, 48-346.

If the action is brought in the wrong county the court acquires no jurisdiction even by consent, and the action cannot be removed to the proper county: Ibid.

Where an execution issuing from the supreme court is sought to be enjoined, the action may properly be brought in the court of any county where it is sought to enforce such execution: Davis v. Bonar, 15-171; Massie v. Mann, 17-131.

4633. Penalty. 3397. The penalty of the bond must be fixed by the court or judge who makes the order, and must be doubly sufficient to cover any probable amount of liability to be thereby incurred. [R., § 3779; C., '51, § 2195.]

4634. Defendant to show cause. 3398. The court or judge before granting the writ, may, if deemed advisable, allow the defendant an opportunity to show cause why such order should not be granted. [R., § 3781; C., '51, § 2197.]

VACATION OF.

4635. Application for dissolution. 3399. If the order is granted without allowing the defendant to show cause, he may, at any time before the next term of the court, apply to the judge who made the order to vacate or modify the same; or the application may be made to the judge of the court in which the action is pending. [R., § 3782; C., '51, § 2198; 14 G. A., ch. 112.]

4636. Notice; showing. 3400. Such application must be with notice to the plaintiff, and may rest upon the ground that the order was improperly granted, or it may be founded on the answer of defendants and affidavits. In the latter case the plaintiff may fortify his application by counter-affidavits, and have reasonable time therefor. [R., § 3783; C., '51, § 2199.]

Upon answer: Where the facts alleged in the petition as a ground for the injunction are plainly, directly and fully denied by the answer, the injunction may be dissolved upon the answer alone: Shricker v. Field, 9-366; Anderson v. Reed, 11-177; Stevens v. Myers, 11-183; Taylor v. Dickinson, 15-483; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Carpenter, 27-487; Ingraham v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 34-249; Russell v. Wilson, 37-377.

In a particular case, held, that the equities of the petition were sufficiently denied in the answer to warrant a dissolution: Carrothers v. Newton Mineral Spring Co., 61-681.

Where defendant bases his motion to dissolve the temporary injunction on his answer alone the plaintiff may resist the dissolution by affidavits in support of his petition although no affidavits are offered by defendant: Palo Alto Banking, etc., Co. v. Mahar, 65-74.

An answer which does not fully meet the equities set up in the petition will not justify the dissolution of a temporary injunction, although it may be sufficient to support a judgment for defendant on the final trial: Trotter v. Purnley, 39-203.

Where one material allegation of a petition for injunction to restrain the collection of a judgment was not denied by the answer, held, that the temporary injunction should not have been dissolved, but should have been continued to the final hearing: Gates v. Ballou, 54-485.

Where plaintiff sought to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment, alleging that large payments had been made thereon which had not been credited, and that fact was not denied in the answer, held, that the temporary injunction should have been dissolved only as to that part of the injunction not alleged to have been paid, and as to the other part it should have been continued to the hearing: Marsh v. Mead, 57-535.

To warrant the dissolution upon answer alone, the answer must be upon personal knowledge, and of such character as to entitle it to as much credit as the averments of the bill. If its statements are such as to leave the mind of the court in reasonable doubt as to whether the equities are sufficiently answered, the injunction ought not to be dissolved: Simmett v. Moles, 38-25; Fargo v. Ames, 45-494.

Even where all the equities of the bill are denied by the answer, it does not follow as a matter of course that the injunction will be dissolved. Its dissolution or continuance rests very much in the sound discretion of the court, to be governed by the nature of the case: Shricker v. Field, 9-366.

An injunction should not be dissolved without proof, on an answer which admits the allegations of the petition and seeks to avoid their effect by pleading affirmative matter: Ibid.; Judd v. Hatch, 31-491; Fargo v. Ames, 45-494; Mills v. Hamilton, 49-105; Huskins v. McElroy, 62-508; Hayes v. Billings, 69-387.

Upon the hearing of a motion to dissolve an injunction the plaintiff may file an amended petition, and if it states a good cause for an injunction, not overborne by the adverse showing, the injunction should be continued: Crawford v. Paine, 19-172.

Where the final relief sought will be ineffectual if the temporary injunction is dissolved, it will be continued to the final hearing, even though the equities of the bill are fully denied in the answer: Joseph v. McGill, 52-137.

Where fraud is the gravamen of a petition, or it is apparent that by dissolution a party will lose all benefit to accrue from final success, the court may refuse to dissolve the injunction until final hearing: Sinnett v. Moles, 38-25; Stewart v. Johnston, 44-435; Brigham v. White, 44-677; Fargo v. Ames, 45-494; Johnston v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-537.

The general rule is that where all the material allegations of the petition for an injunction are fully and satisfactorily denied in the answer, upon the personal knowledge of the defendant, the preliminary injunction, if one has been allowed, will be dissolved. There are some exceptions to this rule, and one of them is where the gravamen of the petition is fraud: Walker v. Stone, 70-103.

The ruling of the court continuing a preliminary injunction to the hearing is largely a matter of discretion, and not to be reversed unless such discretion has been abused: Ibid.

Where there was no showing that the continuance of the injunction to the hearing would result in any substantial injury to defendant, and it appeared that the dissolution might materially injure plaintiff, held, that a refusal of the court to dissolve the injunction would not be reversed on appeal: Kelley v. Briggs, 58-332.

An injunction restraining the taking of private property for public use until compensation is made should not be dissolved while the question as to the right to compensation is pending and undetermined: Trustees of Iowa College v. Davenport, 7-213; Conolly v. Griswold, 7-416.

It being provided by statute that an injunction to restrain a nuisance can only be granted upon reasonable notice of the time and place of application to the party to be enjoined, held, that an injunction for that purpose, having been granted without notice, should be set aside on motion, and that an appearance to move to dissolve, accompanied by answer to the petition in the case, was not a waiver of the right to have such dissolution: Hughes v. Eckerson, 55-641.

The dissolution of the injunction does not operate to dismiss the action: See notes to preceding section.

While an injunction should not be dissolved until after answer by defendant, this rule has no application where the party failing to answer is a merely nominal party: Shricker v. Field, 9-366.

Where it appeared that there had been no unreasonable delay in the service of the notice after the granting of the writ, held, that a motion to dissolve for want of notice was properly overruled, when made after service; also, that appearance waived any objection to the form or sufficiency of such notice: Sweatt v. Faville, 23-321.

As to curing defects by amendment, to prevent dissolution, see notes to § 4624.

An injunction cannot be dissolved on the ground that the service of the writ precedes the acquisition of jurisdiction of the person by appearance when the original notice is defective: District T'p v. District T'p, 54-115.

Where the writ of temporary injunction is broader than the petition, the remedy is not by motion for dissolution, but for modification of the writ: Ford v. Loomis, 62-586.

Upon motion to dissolve, the opposite party is not entitled, as a matter of course, to a continuance: Taylor v. Dickinson, 15-483.

The renewal of a motion already filed in another court to dissolve the injunction is not a second motion within the prohibition of the statute: Carrothers v. Newton Mineral Spring Co., 61-681.

It may be that, upon a dissolution, damages which are the immediate and necessary result of the allowance of the writ, and which depend simply upon computation for their determination, may be recovered by a summary proceeding; but damages consequential in their nature, as expenses, attorneys' fees, etc., can only be recovered in an independent action: Taylor v. Brownfield, 41-264.

Sustaining a motion to dissolve a temporary injunction which has been granted ex parte upon a showing then made does not bar the right to a perpetual injunction upon full proof at the final hearing: Fisher v. Beard, 40-625.

The dissolution of the injunction does not necessarily operate to dismiss the bill: Russell v. Wilson, 37-377; Massie v. Mann, 17-131; Walters v. Fredericks, 11-181.

While the continuance or dissolution of an injunction rests in the sound discretion of the court originally passing upon the question, yet this is a legal discretion, and if based upon sufficient grounds will be reversed on appeal: Sinnett v. Moles, 38-25; Stewart v. Johnston, 44-435.

Appeal from order of dissolution: After the dissolution of a temporary injunction it cannot be restored on appeal, although another might be granted if the case has not proceeded to a hearing, and if the granting of another such injunction would be of any use: Ellwood Mfg. Co. v. Rankin, 70-403.

4638. Only one motion. 3402. Only one motion to dissolve or modify an injunction upon the whole case shall be allowed. [R., § 3793.]

VIOLATION OF.

4639. Punished. 3403. Any judge of the supreme, district, [or circuit] court, being furnished with an authenticated copy of the injunction, and also with satisfactory proof that such injunction has been violated, shall issue his precept to the sheriff of the county where the violation of the injunction occurred, or to any other sheriff, naming him, more convenient to all parties concerned, directing him to attach said defendant, and bring him forthwith before the same or some other judge, at a place to be stated in said precept. [R., § 3785; C., '51, § 2201.]

Where a party is in court and hears an order for the injunction pronounced, he is as much bound thereby as if he had actually been served with the writ: Milne v. Van Buskirk, 9-558.

So long as an injunction remains in force the party bound thereby must obey it: Langworthy v. McKelvey, 25-48.

In seeking to punish a party for the violation of an injunction it must be taken in the form in which it was looked at by the court rendering it: Lamb v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 39-333.

Proof of a violation of the injunction should usually be made by affidavit: State v. Myers, 44-580.

Contempt of court in violating an injunction should be dealt with as other contempts. The proceedings are merely incidental to the original proceeding and there is no appeal: First Cong. Church v. Muscatine, 2-69.

4640. Contempt purged. 3404. If, when thus produced, he files his affidavit denying or sufficiently excusing the contempt charged, he shall be released, and the affidavit shall be filed with the clerk of the court for presentation. [R., § 3786; C., '51, § 2202.]

4641. Bond required. 3405. But if he fail to do so, the judge may require him to give bond, with surety, for his appearance at the next term of the court, and also for his future obedience to the injunction, which bond shall be filed with the clerk. [R., § 3787; C., '51, § 2203.]

4642. Committed to jail. 3406. If he fail to give such security, he may be committed to the jail of the county where the proceedings are pending until the next term of the court. [R., § 3788; C., '51, § 2204.]

4643. Contempt punished. 3407. If the security be given, the court at the next term shall act upon the case and punish the contempt in the usual mode. [R., § 3789; C., '51, § 2205.]

See notes to § 4639. As to violation of injunction in liquor cases. see §§ 2384, 2387.

OF SUBMITTING CONTROVERSIES WITHOUT ACTION OR IN ACTION.

4644. Agreed statement of facts. 3408. Parties to a question in difference which might be the subject of a civil action, may, without action, present an agreed statement of the facts thereof to any court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter. [R., § 3408; C., '51, § 1843.]

Pleadings are not necessary in such a case: Donald v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 52-411.

4645. Affidavit. 3409. It must be shown by affidavit that the controversy is real, and that the proceeding is in good faith to determine the rights of the parties thereto. [R., § 3409; C., '51, § 1844.]

This provision is jurisdictional, and in the absence of compliance therewith a court cannot take cognizance of the case: Keeline v. Council Bluffs, 62-450.

4646. Judgment. 3410. The court shall thereupon hear and determine the case, and render judgment thereon as if an action were pending. [R., § 3410; C., '51, § 1845.]

4647. Record. 3411. The statement, the submission, and the judgment, shall constitute the record. [R., § 3411.]

4648. How enforced. 3412. The judgment shall be with costs, and it may be enforced, and shall be subject to review, in the same manner as if it had been rendered in an action, unless otherwise provided for in the submission. [R., § 3412.]

4649. Submission of cause pending. 3413. The same may be also done at any time before trial in any action then pending, subject to the same requirements and attended by the same results as in a case without action, and such submission of a stated case shall be an abandonment by both parties of all pleadings filed in such cause, and the cause shall stand on the agreed case alone, which must provide also for any lien had by any attachment, and for any property in the custody of the law, else such lien and such legal custody will be held waived. [R., § 3413.]

Where pending the trial of a cause the facts were agreed upon by the parties "to save expense and to simplify the issue" upon which the court should render judgment, held, that it was the duty of the court to give such judgment, whether legal or equitable, as the facts agreed upon should be deemed to warrant or require: Logan v. Hall, 19-491.

Where a party has submitted a cause upon an agreed statement of facts, the court should enter such judgment as to his rights under the facts agreed upon as will establish the respective rights of the parties: Kraft v. James, 64-159.

4650. Judgment. 3414. The parties may, if they think fit, enter into an agreement in writing, that upon the judgment of the court being given in the affirmative or negative of the questions of law raised by such special case, particular property therein described, or a sum of money fixed by the parties, or to be ascertained by the court, or in such manner as the court may direct, shall be delivered to and vested in one of the parties by the other, or in case of money, shall be paid by one of such parties to the other of them, either with or without costs of the action, and the judgment of the court may be entered for the transfer and delivery of such property, or for such sum as shall be so agreed or ascertained, with or without costs, as the case may be. [R., § 3414.]

4651. Costs. 3415. In case no agreement shall be entered into as to the costs of such action, the same shall follow the event, and be recovered by the successful party. [R., § 3415.]

CHAPTER 11.

OF ARBITRATIONS.

4652. What controversies. 3416. All controversies which might be the subject of civil action, may be submitted to the decision of one or more arbitrators, as hereafter provided. [R., § 3675; C., '51, § 2098.]

Under statute any "civil action" may be submitted to arbitration, and in this term is included everything except those cases which come under the criminal jurisdiction of the court. Therefore an equitable cause of action is subject to submission: Tomlinson v. Hammond, 8-40.

The question whether or not an alleged nuisance should be abated may be submitted to arbitration without the submission of any claim for damages: Richards v. Holt, 61-529.

4653. Written agreement. 3417. The parties themselves, or those persons who might lawfully have controlled a civil action in their behalf for the same subject-matter, must sign and acknowledge a written agreement, specifying particularly what demands are to be submitted, the names of the arbitrators and court by which the judgment on their award is to be rendered. [R., §§ 3676, 3677; C., '51, §§ 2099, 2100; 9 G. A., ch. 174, § 5.]

Method of submission: The subject-matter of the award must be definitely specified: Woodward v. Atwater, 3-61.

Under the statutory provision as to submission the arbitrators must be named in the agreement in order that the parties may have a judgment on the award: McKnight v. McCullough, 21-111.

If the submission is not acknowledged as required by statute, the award cannot be received as made under a statutory submission, although it may be good at common law, and an action maintained thereon: Fink v. Fink, 8-313.

If submission is by order of court, an acknowledgment is not necessary: Ibid.

The same degree of particularity is not required in the acknowledgment of an agreement of submission as is required in case of an instrument conveying real property: McKnight v. McCullough, 21-111.

An agreement for submission must contain a provision for judgment by some court upon the award. Without this it will not be such a submission as contemplated by statute, though it may be binding at common law as a settlement; but, in such cases, the result cannot be treated as an award under the statute: Love v. Burns, 35-150.

Where submission of arbitration between a school district and its treasurer covered "the money alleged to be due and owing" by the treasurer of the district, held, that such submission properly covered money due for several years, including some for which there ought to have been previous settlement: District T'p v. Rankin, 70-65.

The submission to arbitration in a particular case held to be sufficiently certain: Donican v. Mulry, 69-583.

A party in interest cannot be bound by an agreement to arbitrate made by other parties in interest without his authority: Sweeney v. Davidson, 68-386.

A corporation may submit controversies to arbitration although no such express power is conferred by its charter. Courts are disposed to encourage settlement by arbitration: District T'p v. Rankin, 70-65.

The parties may agree that judgment on the award shall be rendered by a justice of the peace, and, if so, he will have jurisdiction, provided the amount is such as to bring the case within his cognizance: Van Horn v. Bel-lar, 20-255; King v. Hampton, 4 G. Gr., 401; Whitis v. Culver, 25-30.

Where it was provided in the agreement that judgment should be rendered "by any court having jurisdiction," and judgment was rendered by the district court of the county where both parties resided, held, that as such court was the only one which (at that time) had jurisdiction, the agreement was sufficient to warrant such judgment: McKnight v. McCullough, 21-111.

Common-law submission: The statutory provisions as to the method of submission, etc., must be followed if the parties desire judgment upon the award; but a submission and award may be good as at common law between the parties although these provisions are not observed, as, for instance, where the submission is in parol. An award so made may be enforced by action thereon, and may be set up as a defense to an action brought for the subject-matter therein settled: Conger v. Dean, 3-463; Foust v. Hastings, 66-522.

Parties may bind themselves by an agreement to submit a controversy to arbitration in a manner different from that required by statute, and if the submission and award are sufficiently certain to constitute a bar to a subsequent action for the same matter the award will be upheld: Zook v. Spray, 38-273.

A common-law submission to arbitration is always construed most liberally and with a view of effecting the purpose of the parties to it, even though it does not comply with the statutory requirements: McKinnis v. Freeman, 38-364.

To defeat a recovery on an award under a common-law submission, it is necessary for defendant to impeach the award in some proper manner: Foust v. Hastings, 66-522.

4654. What submitted. 3418. The submission may be of some particular matters or demands, or of all demands which the one party has against the other, or of all mutual demands on both sides. [R., § 3678; C., '51, § 2101.]

4655. Action pending. 3419. A submission to arbitration of the subject-matter of a suit, may also be made by an order of court, upon agreement of parties after suit is commenced. [R., § 3679; C., '51, § 2102.]

In case of submission by order of court, upon agreement of parties, the pleadings constitute the submission, and an agreement that judgment may be rendered on the award is not necessary. The court does not lose its control of the matter, and may render judgment upon the award, or may set it aside, in whole or in part: Schohmer v. Lynch, 11-461.

A submission of matters involved in a pending suit may be made by agreement of parties without an order of court: Higgins v. Kinneady, 20-474.

The term "suit," used in the statutory provisions as to submitting pending proceeding, is broader than the term "action," and a special proceeding may, by order of court, be submitted to arbitrators by agreement of parties: Marion v. Ganby, 68-142.

Submission of a pending suit may be made without any instrument in writing. The statutory provision requiring a written agreement, signed and acknowledged, is applicable to controversies in which no action has been commenced: Ibid.

4656. Procedure. 3420. All the rules prescribed by law in cases of referees, are applicable to arbitrators except as herein otherwise expressed, or except as otherwise agreed upon by the parties. [R., § 3680; C., '51, § 2103.]

Unless the submission provides otherwise, or a consent to a majority award is in a proper manner shown, all the arbitrators must concur in the award: Richards v. Holt, 61-529.

Where an agreement for submission provided that the award might be made by the arbitrators or any two of them, and after the award had been made and set aside a resubmission was ordered by the court, held, that if, before such resubmission, one of the arbitrators resigned, a submission for a finding by the two remaining arbitrators would not be valid, and that the agreement must be construed as contemplating a submission to three arbitrators: Cary v. Bailey, 55-60.

The finding of arbitrators upon a hearing of which one party had no notice and at which he was not present nor represented will not be binding upon him, though the instrument under which the arbitration is had does not expressly provide that the parties are to have notice or be heard: Dormoy v. Knower, 55-722.

The parties may, by agreement, determine the rules that shall govern the arbitrators, as that the award of the majority shall be binding: Thompson v. Blanchard, 2-44.

It need not appear affirmatively from the return that the witnesses were examined under oath, nor, it seems, that the arbitrators were sworn: Tomlinson v. Hammond, 8-40.

The arbitrators are not required, like referees, to make separate return of facts found and conclusions of law thereon: McKnight v. McCullough, 21-111.

4657. Revocation. 3421. Neither party shall have the power to revoke the submission without the consent of the other. [R., § 3681; C., '51, § 2104.]

4658. Neglect to appear. 3422. If either party neglect to appear before the arbitrators after due notice, except in case of sickness, they may, nevertheless, proceed to hear and determine the cause upon the evidence which is produced before them. [R., § 3682; C., '51, § 2105.]

4659. Time for award. 3423. If the time within which the award is to be made is fixed in the submission, no award made after that time shall have any legal effect, unless made upon a recommitment of the matter by the court to which it is reported. [R., § 3683; C., '51, § 2106.]

4660. If not fixed. 3424. If the time of filing the award is not fixed in the submission, it must be filed within one year from the time such submission is signed and acknowledged, unless by mutual consent the time is prolonged. [R., § 3684; C., '51, § 2107.]

4661. Award; how made. 3425. The award must be in writing, and shall be delivered by one of the arbitrators to the court designated in the agreement, or it may be inclosed and sealed by them and transmitted to the court, and not opened until the court so orders. [R., § 3685; C., '51, § 2108.]

Return of award: Although the award is not transmitted to the court in the method required by statute, yet it will be sufficient if it is delivered by one of the arbitrators to the clerk, and all chance for prejudice from the irregularity is expressly rebutted: Higgins v. Kinneady, 20-474.

A delivery of the award to the clerk in person in vacation held sufficient: McKnight v. McCullough, 21-111.

Where the affidavit of one of the arbitrators filed as required by statute did not give the names of the parties to the controversy, but by mistake gave the names of the other arbitrators as the persons by whom he had been appointed, etc., held, that the notary taking such affidavit might be allowed to testify that it was properly sworn to, and that the names of the arbitrators had been inserted by mistake in place of the names of the parties: Higgins v. Kinneady, 20-474.

Clerical defects working no prejudice should not invalidate the proceedings: Ibid.

An affidavit of arbitration made and filed after the making of the award, and in pursuance of agreement between the parties that it might be so done, held sufficient: Ogden v. Forney, 33-205.

The arbitrators need not return separate findings of facts and conclusions of law: See notes to § 4656.

Sufficiency: Where the award, under the submission of a controversy as to the amount due to a municipal corporation from its treasurer, stated the amount of his deficiency, held, that while it might have made a more detailed statement of the account, the finding would not be open to objection on the ground of uncertainty: District T'p v. Rankin, 70-65.

Validity; presumptions: Every presumption is in favor of the correctness of the determination of the arbitrators: Tomlinson v. Hammond, 8-40.

Where no mistake or injustice in the award is shown it will be upheld: Struthers v. Clark, 40-508.

Impeachment: The award may be impeached by proof that matters were considered by the arbitrators which were not submitted, or that they have committed material errors or mistakes to the prejudice of either party, or have omitted to consider matters submitted, or on account of fraud: Thompson v. Blanchard, 2-44.

Proof is admissible to show that no evidence was given to the arbitrators upon a particular subject, the burden being upon the party seeking to impeach the arbitration to satisfy the jury of any mistake of the arbitrators, and also that he was prejudiced thereby: Ibid.

The award may be impeached by showing that the arbitrators did not pass upon questions embraced in the submission and essential to determine the rights of the parties: Sharp v. Woodbury, 18-195; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 49-604.

In an action upon an award good at common law, but not made under a statutory submission, the fact that the arbitrators have considered matters not submitted, or have committed such mistakes as prejudice either party, or have omitted to consider matters which were submitted, may be shown for the purpose of impeaching the award: Love v. Burns, 35-150.

It is competent to introduce evidence to show that one of the arbitrators intrusted with the award for delivery to the court discovered a mistake in it before delivery and thereupon refused to deliver it: Shulte v. Hennessy, 40-352.

Effect: Where an agreement for submission to arbitration provided that the award should be made within thirty days, and it was afterwards made and set aside by mutual consent, and an action at law was commenced after the expiration of the thirty days, no further steps having been taken under the submission by either party, held, that the submission would not bar the action, and it was not incumbent upon the party bringing the action to first apply to have the arbitrators act, or others appointed, and a new award made: Simplot v. Simplot, 14-449.

An award cannot be relied upon unless pleaded: Dougherty v. Stewart, 43-648.

Civil liability of arbitrators: Arbitrators act in a judicial capacity, and cannot be held liable for damages for an award alleged to have been made fraudulently and corruptly, if within their jurisdiction: Jones v. Brown, 54-74.

Where an award was filed in defiance of an injunction, held, that it must be presumed that it was disregarded and worked no prejudice, and that an action for damages against the arbitrators would not lie: Ibid.

The fact that the award is valueless by reason of wilful misconduct of the arbitrators may be shown for the purpose of defeating their claim for compensation for services: Bever v. Brown, 56-565.

HEARING IN COURT.

4662. Hearing in court. 3426. The cause shall be entered on the docket of the court at the term to which the award is returned, and shall be called up and acted upon in its order. But the court may require actual notice to be given to either party, when it appears necessary and proper, before proceeding to act on the award. [R., § 3686; C., '51, § 2109.]

Power of court over: As to the power of a court over an award there is a material difference between the cases where the reference is under a statute provision or is made by a rule of court, and those where it is solely by an agreement of the parties as at common law. In the latter case the arbitrators constitute a tribunal created by the parties themselves, and the courts have but little authority over them. Nearly all the authority which does exist in regard to them is in courts of equity: Burroughs v. David, 7-154.

Therefore, held, that allegations of fraud of the opposite party in not making a full and true exhibit of the matters relating to the arbitration on the hearing before the arbitrators could not be considered in an action on the arbitration bond: Ibid.

As the justice has no authority to try the case upon its merits, but only to render judgment on the award, or reject it and recommit it for a new hearing, no trial upon the merits can be had on an appeal from the action of the justice: Whitis v. Culver, 25-30.

Setting aside: To entitle a party to have an award set aside on the ground of mistake, he must not only clearly show a mistake, and that he was prejudiced thereby, but also that if it had not occurred the award would have been different: Tomlinson v. Tomlinson, 3-375; Gorham v. Millard, 50-554.

Although an award can only be set aside for mistake, partiality, or fraud in the arbitration, yet, to constitute such conduct, evil intention is not a necessary ingredient; and where one of the parties was informed by one of the arbitrators that no testimony upon a certain question would be received, and afterwards such testimony was received on the other side, held, that the award should be set aside: Sullivan v. Frink, 3-66.

An award should not be set aside for newly discovered evidence which is merely cumulative: McDaniels v. Van Fosen, 11-195.

The action of arbitrators in awarding costs to the successful party should not be interfered with unless a clear abuse of discretion is shown: Ratliff v. Mann, 5-423.

The court cannot change the award as to the taxation of costs. Its only authority is to recommit if improper: Landreth v. Bass, 12-606.

Resubmission: The award should only be rejected for want of jurisdiction in the arbitrators, but it should be recommitted for any reason which would justify the granting of a new trial after verdict: Depew v. Davis, 2 G. Gr., 260.

Upon recommitment the arbitrators need not be again sworn, nor need the award upon such commitment show that they were sworn in the first instance: Tomlinson v. Hammond, 8-40.

Disqualification or misconduct of arbitrators: Where a contract of lease provided that the rents should be determined by an appraisal of the property by three persons, of whom each should appoint one, and the two thus chosen should select the third, held, that such contract implied that the persons to be selected should be indifferent between the parties, and that it appearing that the appraiser appointed by one of the parties was a brother and confidential agent of such party, which fact was unknown to the other, the appraisal was void: Pool v. Hennessy, 39-192.

Where it appeared that one of the arbitrators procured the signature of another by representing that the other would sign it, which was not done, and such arbitrator was persistent in signing the award, although counsel had not been heard in argument and before the case was finally submitted, and when it appeared that plaintiff desired to introduce further evidence, and that such arbitrator was on unfriendly terms with plaintiff, held, that such arbitrator was not a proper person to act, and that a resubmission of the matter to the same arbitrators was error. In such case the award should have been rejected and the parties left to their ordinary remedies: Brown v. Harper, 54-546.

Setting aside in equity: Where a new school district had been organized from a part of the territory of an old one, and the two boards, upon failure to agree to the division of assets and liabilities, had appointed arbitrators as required by § 2831, held, that a court of equity might entertain jurisdiction to set aside an award of such arbitrators for gross errors in computation: District Tp v. District Tp, 51-286.

4664. Force and effect of award. 3428. When the award has been adopted, it shall be filed and entered on the records, and shall have the same force and effect as the verdict of a jury. Judgment may be entered and execution issued accordingly. [R., § 3688; C., '51, § 2111.]

The court has no authority to change the award by adding interest thereto. It should enter judgment on the award according to its terms, unless it appears that the award is inequitable, or that the arbitrators abused their discretion in apportioning the costs: District Tp v. Independent Dist., 60-141.

Where the agreement of submission specifies the court wherein the award is to be filed, this sufficiently indicates the court wherein the judgment is to be rendered: Ibid.

As to what court may be given jurisdiction to render judgment, see notes to § 4653.

4665. Appeal. 3429. When an appeal is brought on such judgment, copies of the submission and award, together with all affidavits, shall be returned to the supreme court. [R., § 3689; C., '51, § 2112.]

Appeal: An appeal will not lie from the judgment of a justice of the peace on an award. Any error committed by him in rejecting or recommitting an award, or failure to do so, may be reviewed on writ of error: Whitis v. Culver, 25-30.

An appeal will lie from an order resubmitting a cause to arbitrators: Brown v. Harper, 54-546.

The acts of the court in sustaining a motion to set aside the award cannot be reviewed where the record does not show upon what facts the court acted: Hamble v. Owen, 20-70.

4666. Costs. 3430. If there is no provision in the submission respecting costs, the arbitrators may award them in their discretion. [R., § 3690; C., '51, § 2113.]

4667. Rights saved. 3431. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect in any manner the control of the court over the parties, the arbitrators, or their award; nor to impair or affect any action upon an award, or upon any bond or other engagement to abide an award. [R., § 3692; C., '51, § 2115.]

TRIBUNALS OF VOLUNTARY ARBITRATION.

4668. How established. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 1. The district court of each county, or a judge thereof in vacation, shall have the power, and upon the presentation of a petition, or of the agreement hereinafter named, it shall be the duty of said court, or a judge thereof in vacation, to issue in the form hereinafter named, a license or authority for the establishment within and for each county of tribunals for voluntary arbitration and settlement of disputes between employers and employed in the manufacturing, mechanical, or mining industries.

4669. Petition or agreement for. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 2. The said petition or agreement shall be substantially in the form hereinafter given and the petition shall be signed by at least twenty persons employed as workmen, and by four or more separate firms, individuals, or corporations within the county, or by at least four employers, each of whom shall employ at least five workmen, or by the representative of a firm, corporation or individual employing not less than twenty men in their trade or industry; provided, that at the time the petition is presented, the judge before whom said petition is presented, may, upon motion require testimony to be taken as to the representative character of said petitioners, and if it appears that said petitioners do not represent the will of a majority, or at least one-half of each party to the dispute, the license for the establishment of said tribunal may be denied, or may make such other order in this behalf as to him shall seem fair to both sides.

4670. License to issue; record. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 3. If the said petition shall be signed by the requisite number of both employers and workmen, and be in proper form and contain the names of the persons to compose the tribunal, being an equal number of employers and workmen, the judge shall forthwith cause to be issued a license substantially in the form hereinafter given, authorizing the existence of such tribunal and fixing the time and place of the first meeting thereof, and an entry of the license so granted shall be made upon the journal of the district court of the county in which the petition originated.

4671. Jurisdiction; continuance. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 4. Said tribunal shall continue in existence for one year from date of the license creating it, and may take jurisdiction of any dispute between employers and workmen in any mechanical, manufacturing, or mining industry, or business, who shall have petitioned for the tribunal, or have been represented in the petition therefor, or who may submit their disputes in writing to such tribunal for decision. Vacancies occurring in the membership of the tribunal shall be filled by the judge or court that licensed said tribunal, from three names, presented by the members of the tribunal remaining in that class, in which the vacancies occur. The removal of any member to an adjoining county, shall not cause a vacancy in either the tribunal or post of umpire. Disputes occurring in one county may be referred to a tribunal already existing in an adjoining county. The place of umpire in any of said tribunals and vacancies occurring in such place, shall only be filled by the mutual choice of the whole of the representatives, of both employers and workmen constituting the tribunal, immediately upon the organization of the same, and the umpire shall be called upon to act after disagreement is manifested in the tribunal by failure during three meetings held and full discussion had. His award shall be final and conclusive upon such matters only as are submitted to him in writing and signed by the whole of the members of the tribunal, or by parties submitting the same.

4672. Organization. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 5. The said tribunal shall consist of not less than two employers or their representatives, and two workmen or their representatives. The exact number which shall in each case constitute the tribunal, shall be inserted in the petition or agreement, and they shall be named in the license issued. The said tribunal, when convened shall be organized by the selection of one of their members as chairman and one as secretary, who shall be chosen by a majority of the members, or if such ma-majority cannot be had after two votes, then by secret ballot, or by lot, as they prefer.

4673. Place of meeting ; compensation ; expenses. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 6. The members of the tribunal shall receive no compensation for their services from the city or county, but the expenses of the tribunal, other than fuel, light and the use of the room and furniture, may be paid by voluntary subscription, which the tribunal is authorized to receive and expend for such purposes. The sessions of said tribunal shall be held at the county seat of the county where the petition for the same was presented, and a room in the courthouse or elsewhere for the use of said tribunal shall be provided by the county board of supervisors.

4674. Proceedings. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 7. When no umpire is acting, the chairman of the tribunal shall have power to administer oaths to all witnesses who may be produced, and a majority of said tribunal may provide for the examination and investigation of books, documents and accounts pertaining to the matters in hearing before the tribunal, and belonging to either party to the dispute; provided, that the tribunal may unanimously direct that instead of producing books, papers and accounts before the tribunal, an accountant agreed upon by the entire tribunal may be appointed to examine such books, papers and accounts, and such accountant shall be sworn to well and truly examine such books, documents and accounts, as may be presented to him, and to report the results of such examination in writing to said tribunal. Before such examination, the information desired and required by the tribunal shall be plainly stated in writing, and presented to said accountant, which statement shall be signed by the members of said tribunal, or by a majority of each class thereof. Attorneys at law or other agents of either party to the dispute, shall not be permitted to appear or take part in any of the proceedings of the tribunal, or before the umpire.

4675. Umpire. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 8. When the umpire is acting he shall preside and he shall have all the power of the chairman of the tribunal, and his determination upon all questions of evidence, or other questions in conducting the inquiries there pending, shall be final. Committees of the tribunal consisting of an equal number of each class may be constituted to examine into any question in dispute between employers and workmen which may have been referred to said committee by the tribunal, and such committee may hear, and settle the same finally, when it can be done by a unanimous vote; otherwise the same shall be reported to the full tribunal, and be there heard as if the question had not been referred. The said tribunal in connection with the said umpire shall have power to make or ordain and enforce rules for the government of the body when in session to enable the business to be proceeded with, in order, and to fix its sessions and adjournments, but such rules shall not conflict with this statute, nor with any of the provisions of the constitution, and laws of Iowa.

4676. Question defined ; award. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 9. Before the umpire shall proceed to act, the question or questions in dispute shall be plainly defined in writing and signed by the members of the tribunal, or a majority thereof of each class, or by the parties submitting the same, and such writing shall contain the submission of the decision thereof to the umpire by name, and shall provide that his decision thereon, after hearing shall be final. The umpire shall be sworn to impartially decide all questions that may be submitted to him during his term of office. The submission and his award may be made in the form hereinafter given, and said umpire must make his award within ten days from the time the question or questions in dispute are submitted to him. Said award shall be made to the tribunal; and if the award is for a specific sum of money, said award may be made a matter of record by filing a copy thereof in the district court of the county wherein the tribunal is in session. When so entered of record it shall be final and conclusive, and the proper court may, on motion of any one interested enter judgment thereon; and when the award is for a specific sum of money may issue final and other process to enforce the same.

4677. Form of petition. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 10. The form of the joint petition or agreement praying for a tribunal under this act shall be as follows:

To the District Court of — County, (or to a judge thereof as the case may be): The subscribers hereto being the number, and having the qualification required in this proceeding, being desirous of establishing a tribunal of voluntary arbitration for the settlement of disputes in the (here name the branch of industry), trade, and having agreed upon A, B, C, D, and E representing the employers, and G, H, I, J, and K representing the workmen, as members of said tribunal, who each are qualified to act thereon, pray that a license for a tribunal in the — trade may be issued to said persons named above.

4678. Form of license. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 11. The license to be issued upon such petition may be as follows:

trade) the following subject-matter, viz.: (Here state full, and clear the matter submitted), and we hereby agree that his decision and determination upon the same shall be binding upon us, and final, and conclusive upon the question thus submitted, and we pledge ourselves to abide by, and carry out the decision of the umpire when made.

4680. Award in writing. 21 G. A., ch. 20, § 13. The umpire shall make his award in writing to the tribunal, stating distinctly his decisions on the subject-matter submitted, and when the award is for a specific sum of money, the umpire shall forward a copy of the same to the clerk of the proper court.

CHAPTER 12.

OF ACTIONS AGAINST BOATS OR RAFTS.

4681. Against boats. 3432. In an action brought against the owners of any boat to recover any debt contracted by such owner, or by the master, agent, clerk, or consignee thereof, for supplies furnished, or for labor done, in, about, or on such boat, or for materials furnished in building, repairing, fitting out, furnishing or equipping the same, or to recover for the non-performance of any contract relative to the transportation of persons or property thereon, made by any of the persons aforementioned, or to recover injuries to persons or property by such boat, or the officers or the crew thereof, done in connection with the business of such boat, a warrant may issue for the seizure of such boat, as hereinafter provided. [R., § 3693; C., '51, § 2116.]

State jurisdiction: The jurisdiction of federal courts of admiralty is exclusive of the jurisdiction of the state court to entertain a proceeding in rem against a boat on a cause of action cognizable in admiralty, and corresponding provisions of the Revision, assuming to confer such jurisdiction upon the state courts, are unavailing for that purpose. (Overruling Trevor v. Steamboat Ad. Hine, 17-349); The Hine v. Trevor, 4 Wall., 555; Walters v. Steamboat Molhe Dozier, 24-192.

Petition: Under the provisions of the Revision, held, that the petition in such a proceeding in rem need not aver that the boat was within the jurisdiction of the state at the time suit was commenced. It is the service of the warrant that brings the property within the jurisdiction of the court. If the contract for the breach of which action is brought is violated within the waters of this state, and the boat is seized under warrant properly issued, the court will have jurisdiction although such contract was made elsewhere: Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14-214.

What charges enforceable: Under the provisions of Code of '51, which made certain charges a lien against the boat, held, that the seizure and sale of the boat under the laws of another state did not divest it of such lien:

Haight v. Steamboat Henrietta, 4-472; Ogden v. Ogden, 13-176.

Also, held, that the boat was liable for money collected from consignments of goods for freight due a railroad company from whom the goods were received to be forwarded to their destination, and that such transaction was a "contract relative to the transportation of" freight: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Steamboat Woodsides, 10-465.

The use of a barge may constitute a supply for which a claim against the boat may be enforced in such proceedings: Steamboat Kentucky v. Brooks, 1 G. Gr., 398.

It is sufficient to allege that the contract was made with the boat: West v. Barge Lady Franklin, 2-522.

Under the provisions of Code of '51, held, that the remedy intended was not designed solely for the benefit of the party furnishing the supplies, but that a lien could be transferred by assignment and enforced by the transferee: Strother v. Steamboat Hamburg, 11-59.

Jurisdiction: A warrant and seizure of a boat thereunder is essential to confer jurisdiction upon the court. The proceeding is one in rem: Ham v. Steamboat Hamburg, 2-460.

4682. Petition and warrant. 3433. The original petition must be in writing, sworn to and filed with the clerk or the justice of the peace, who shall thereupon issue a warrant to the proper officer, commanding him to seize the boat, its apparel, tackle, furniture, and appendages, and detain the same until released by due course of law. [R., § 3701; C., '51, § 2121.]

4683. Warrant issued on Sunday. 3434. And the warrant may be issued on Sunday, if the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, shall state in his petition and swear thereto, that it would be unsafe to delay proceedings till Monday. [R., § 3702.]

4684. Service of notice. 3435. It shall be sufficient service of the original notice in such an action, to serve it on the defendant, or on the master, agent, clerk or consignee of such boat; and if none of them can be found, the notice may be served by posting up a copy thereof on some conspicuous part of the boat. The warrant shall be served according to the direction it contains. [R., § 3703; C., '51, § 2122.]

4685. By whom served. 3436. Any constable or marshal of any corporate town may serve and execute the warrant provided for in said section, whether the same issue from the office of the clerk of the district [or circuit] court, or of a justice. [R., § 3704.]

4687. Discharge by giving bond. 3438. The boat may be discharged at any time before final judgment, by the giving a bond with sureties, to be approved by the officer serving the warrant, or by the clerk or justice who issued it, in a penalty double the plaintiff's demand, conditioned that the obligors therein will pay the amount which may be found due to the plaintiff, together with the costs. [R., § 3706; C., '51, § 2124.]

A formal entry of discharge under the bond is not necessary to render the principal and sureties liable thereon. Nor need the bond be formally approved if it is accepted by the officer and the boat released: White v. Tisdale, 12-75.

4688. Special execution. 3439. If judgment be rendered for the plaintiff before the boat is thus discharged, a special execution shall be issued against it. If it have been previously discharged, the execution shall issue against the principal and sureties in the bond without further proceedings. [R., § 3707; C., '51, § 2125.]

A judgment may be rendered against the boat, and at the same time against the sureties on a bond on which the boat has been discharged: Ogden v. Ogden, 13-176.

4689. What first sold. 3440. The officer may sell any of the furniture or appendages of the boat, if by so doing he can satisfy the demand. If he sell the boat itself, he must sell it to the bidder who will advance the amount required to satisfy the execution, for the lowest fractional share of the boat, unless the person appearing for the boat desire a different and equally convenient mode of sale. [R., § 3708; C., '51, § 2126.]

4690. Fractional share sold. 3441. If a fractional share of the boat be thus sold the purchaser shall hold such share or interest jointly with the other owners. [R., § 3709; C., '51, § 2127.]

4691. Appeal. 3442. If an appeal be taken by the defendant before the boat is discharged as above provided, the appeal bond, if one be filed, will have the same effect in discharging the boat as the bond above contemplated, and execution shall issue against the obligors therein after judgment in the same manner. [R., § 3710; C., '51, § 2128.]

4692. Saving clause. 3443. Nothing herein contained is intended to affect the rights of a plaintiff to sue in the same manner as though the provisions of this chapter had not been enacted. [R., § 3711; C., '51, § 2129.]

4693. Petition. 3444. In actions commenced in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, it is sufficient to allege the contract to have been made with the boat itself. [R., § 3712; C., '51, § 2130.]

Section applied: West v. Barge Lady Franklin, 2-522.

RAFTS.

4694. Liability of. 3445. Any raft found in the waters of this state, shall be liable for all debts contracted by the owner, agent, clerk, or pilot thereof, on account of work done or services rendered for such raft. [R., § 3698.]

Under the provision of this section that any raft found in the waters of the state shall be liable for all debts contracted by the owner, agent, clerk or pilot thereof on account of work done or service rendered for such raft the lien referred to will attach under a contract with the pilot, although between him and the owner there is an agreement that the former shall bear all the expenses: Hanson v. Hiles, 34-350.

4696. Action against raft. 3447. The action may be brought directly against the raft, and the same rules shall govern, and the same process shall be had in such action, as are in this chapter prescribed for actions against owners of boats. [R., § 3700.]

4697. Appearance; what deemed. 3448. The execution by or for the owner of such boat or raft, of a bond, whereby possession of the same is obtained or retained by him, shall be an appearance of such owner as a defendant to the action. [R., § 4130.]

CHAPTER 13.

OF HABEAS CORPUS.

4698. Petition. 3449. The petition for the writ of habeas corpus must be sworn to, and must state:

1. That the person in whose behalf it is sought is restrained of his liberty, and the person by whom, and the place where he is so restrained, mentioning the names of the parties, if known, and if unknown, describing them with as much particularity as practicable;

2. The cause or pretense of such restraint, according to the best information of the applicant; and if it be by virtue of any legal process, a copy thereof must be annexed, or a satisfactory reason given for its absence;

3. It must state that the restraint is illegal, and wherein;

4. That the legality of the imprisonment has not already been adjudged upon a prior proceeding of the same character, to the best knowledge and belief of the applicant;

5. It must also state whether application for the writ has been before made to, and refused by, any court or judge, and if such application has been made, a copy of the petition in that case, with the reasons for the refusal thereto appended, must be produced, or satisfactory reasons given for the failure to do so. [R., § 3801; C., '51, § 2213.]

Civil proceeding: A habeas corpus proceeding is civil, not criminal, and should be instituted in the name of the person restrained, as plaintiff: State v. Collins, 54-441.

Who deemed plaintiff: The person restrained is to be regarded as the petitioner or plaintiff: Ibid.; Thompson v. Oglesby, 42-598; Rivers v. Mitchell, 57-193.

Jurisdiction: Where the allegations of the petition are sufficient to authorize the writ, the judge acquires jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter, and an order made by him will not be void, but at most voidable, and subject only to attack in a direct proceeding: Shaw v. McHenry, 52-182.

Right to office: If the officer issuing the writ under which the prisoner is restrained acted under color of office, the question whether he is such officer de jure cannot be raised in a habeas corpus proceeding, but aliter if he is a mere usurper without color of office. The right to an office cannot be contested in this proceeding: Ex parte Strahl, 16-369.

Military restraint: A return by respondent that he is a military officer of the United States holding the person restrained for the crime of desertion awaiting trial by court-martial is sufficient, and the prisoner will be remanded: Ex parte Anderson, 16-595.

A soldier while on furlough is not within the jurisdiction of the military authorities, and may be arrested by the civil authorities without conflict: Ex parte McRoberts, 16-600.

In extradition proceedings: The court may, on habeas corpus, inquire into the sufficiency of the evidence to support a requisition under the provisions as to extradition. The determination of the governor as to the sufficiency of the evidence is not conclusive: Jones v. Leonard, 50-106.

Custody of child: Proceedings by habeas corpus for the custody of a child are not criminal in their nature. The action should be in the name of the person alleged to be illegally restrained, and not in that of the state, and in case of failure to secure the discharge the costs should not be taxed to the county: State v. Collins, 54-441.

And see notes to §§ 3432 and 3433.

Where a writ was sought to recover the custody of a child from its father, held, that it was not a sufficient answer that he had sent the child out of the state, where it did not appear but that he could secure its return if he desired to do so: Rivers v. Mitchell, 57-193.

4699. By whom presented. 3450. The petition must be sworn to by the person confined, or by some one in his behalf, and presented to some court or officer authorized to allow the writ. [R., § 3802; C., '51, § 2214.]

4700. Writ. 3451. The writ of habeas corpus may be allowed by the supreme, district, [or circuit] court, or by any judge of either of those courts, and may be served in any part of the state. [R., § 3803; C., '51, § 2215.]

4701. Application; to whom made. 3452. Application for the writ must be made to the court or judge most convenient in point of distance to the applicant, and the more remote court or judge, if applied to for the writ, may refuse the same unless a sufficient reason be stated in the petition for not making the application to the more convenient court, or a judge thereof. [R., § 3805; C., '51, § 2217.]

The person to be deemed the applicant is the one whose liberty is restrained and not the one by whom the petition may be presented on behalf of such person, if it is presented by another than the person restrained: Thompson v. Oglesby, 42-598.

If the proceeding is for the recovery of the custody of a child, it may be brought in any county wherein the sworn petition states that the child is to be found: Rivers v. Mitchell, 57-193.

4702. Writ refused. 3453. If, from the showing of the petitioner, the plaintiff would not be entitled to any relief, the court or judge may refuse to allow the writ. [R., § 3806; C., '51, § 2218.]

4703. Reasons indorsed. 3454. If the writ is disallowed, the court or judge shall cause the reasons of said disallowance to be appended to the petition and returned to the person applying for the writ. [R., § 3809; C., '51, § 2221.]

WRIT ALLOWED.

4704. Form of writ. 3455. But if the petition show a sufficient ground for relief, and is in accordance with the foregoing requirements, the writ shall be allowed, and may be substantially as follows:

THE STATE OF IOWA,

To the sheriff of, etc., [or to A — B —, as the case may be.]

You are hereby commanded to have the body of C — D —, by you unlawfully detained, as is alleged, before the court [or before me, or before E — F —, judge, etc., as the case may be] at —, on —, [or immediately after being served with this writ], to be dealt with according to law, and have you then and there this writ, with a return thereon of your doings in the premises. [R., § 3807; C., '51, § 2219.]

4705. How issued. 3456. When the writ is allowed by a court it is to be issued by the clerk, but when allowed by a judge he must issue the writ himself, subscribing his name thereto without any seal. [R., § 3868; C., '51, § 2220.]

4707. On judge's own motion. 3458. Whenever any court or judge authorized to grant this writ, has evidence, from a judicial proceeding before them, that any person within the jurisdiction of such court or officer is illegally imprisoned or restrained of his liberty, such court or judge shall issue or cause to be issued, the writ as aforesaid, though no application be made therefor. [R., § 3811; C., '51, § 2223.]

4708. County attorney notified. 3459. The court or officer allowing the writ, must cause the district [county] attorney of the proper county to be informed of the issuing of the writ, and of the time and place, where and when it is made returnable. [R., § 3828; C., '51, § 2240.]

Attorney to represent state: Where notice of the proceeding has not been given to the district attorney the court has no authority to appoint an attorney to represent the state and render the county liable for his fees: Miller v. Buena Vista County, 68-711.

SERVICE.

4709. By whom. 3460. The writ may be served by the sheriff, or by any other person appointed for that purpose, in writing, by the court or judge by whom it is issued or allowed. If served by any other than the sheriff, he possesses the same power, and is liable to the same penalty for a non-performance of his duty, as though he were the sheriff. [R., § 3812; C., '51, § 2224.]

4710. Mode. 3461. The proper mode of service is by leaving the original writ with the defendant, and preserving a copy thereof on which to make the return of service. [R., § 3813; C., '51, § 2225.]

4711. Defendant not found. 3462. If the defendant cannot be found, or if he have not the plaintiff in custody, the service may be made upon any person having the plaintiff in his custody, in the same manner and with the same effect as though he had been made defendant therein. [R., § 3814, C., '51, § 2226.]

4714. Plaintiff taken. 3465. If the plaintiff can be found and if no one appear to have the charge or custody of him, the person having the writ may take him into custody, and make return accordingly. And to get possession of the plaintiff's person in such cases, he possesses the same power as is given by the last section for the arrest of the defendant. [R., § 3817; C., '51, § 2229.]

4715. Want of form. 3466. The writ of habeas corpus must not be disobeyed for any defects of form or misdescription of the plaintiff or defendant, provided enough is stated to show the meaning and intent of the writ. [R., § 3822; C., '51, § 2234.]

4716. Penalty for eluding. 3467. If the defendant attempt to elude the service of the writ of habeas corpus, or to avoid the effect thereof by transferring the plaintiff to another, or by concealing him, he shall, on conviction, be imprisoned in the penitentiary or county jail not more than one year, and fined not exceeding one thousand dollars. And any person knowingly aiding or abetting in any such act, shall be subject to the like punishment. [R., § 3841; C., '51, § 2253.]

4717. Refusal to give copy of process. 3468. An officer refusing to deliver a copy of any legal process by which he detains the plaintiff in custody, to any person who demands such copy, and tenders the fees therefor, shall forfeit two hundred dollars to the person so detained. [R., § 3842; C., '51, § 2254.]

PRECEPT.

4718. When to issue. 3469. The court or judge to whom the application for the writ is made, if satisfied that the plaintiff would suffer any irreparable injury before he could be relieved by the proceedings as above authorized, may issue a precept to the sheriff, or any other person selected instead, commanding him to bring the plaintiff forthwith before such court or judge. [R., § 3818; C., '51, § 2230.]

4719. Evidence. 3470. When the evidence aforesaid is farther sufficient to justify the arrest of the defendant for a criminal offense committed in connection with the illegal detention of the plaintiff, the precept must also contain an order for the arrest of the defendant. [R., § 3819; C., '51, § 2231.]

4720. How served. 3471. The officer or person to whom the precept is directed, must execute the same by bringing the defendant, and also the plaintiff if required, before the court or judge issuing it, and thereupon the defendant must make return to the writ of habeas corpus in the same manner as if the ordinary course had been pursued. [R., § 3820; C., '51, § 2232.]

4721. Examination. 3472. The defendant may also be examined and committed, or bailed, or discharged, according to the nature of the case. [R., § 3821; C., '51, § 2233.]

PLEADINGS — TRIAL — JUDGMENT.

4722. Presumption. 3473. Any person served with the writ is to be presumed to be the person to whom it is directed, although it may be directed to him by a wrong name or description or to another person. [R., § 3823; C., '51, § 2235.]

4723. Appearance. 3474. Service being made in any of the modes hereinbefore provided, the defendant must appear at the proper time and answer the said petition, but no verification shall be required to the answer. [R., §§ 3824, 4182; C., '51, § 2236.]

4724. Body of plaintiff. 3475. He must also bring up the body of the plaintiff, or show good cause for not doing so. [R., § 3825; C., '51, § 2237.]

Where a writ was sought to recover the custody of a child from its father, held, that it was not a sufficient answer that he had sent the child out of the state, where it did not appear but that he could secure its return if he desired to do so: Rivers v. Mitchell, 57-193.

4725. Penalty. 3476. A wilful failure to comply with the above requirements, renders the defendant liable to be attached for contempt, and to be imprisoned till a compliance is obtained, and also subjects him to the forfeiture of one thousand dollars to the party thereby aggrieved. [R., § 3826; C., '51, § 2238.]

4726. Attachment. 3477. Such attachment may be served by the sheriff, or any other person thereto authorized by the judge, who shall also be empowered to bring up the body of the plaintiff forthwith, and has, for this purpose, the same powers as are above conferred in similar cases. [R., § 3827; C., '51, § 2239.]

4727. Answer. 3478. The defendant in his answer must state plainly and unequivocally whether he then has, or at any time has had, the plaintiff under his control and restraint, and if so, the cause thereof. [R., § 3829; C., '51, § 2241.]

4729. Copy of process. 3480. If he holds him by virtue of a legal process or written authority, a copy thereof must be annexed. [R., § 3831; C., '51, § 2243.]

4730. Demur or reply. 3481. The plaintiff may demur or reply to the defendant's answer, but no verification shall be required to the reply, and all issues joined therein shall be tried by the judge or court. [R., § 3832; C., '51, § 2244.]

Method of trial: The trial is to be as in ordinary proceedings: Drumb v. Keen, 47-435.

Appeal: Therefore, upon appeal, the case will not be tried de novo: Shaw v. Nachtwey, 43-653.

The finding of the lower court as to the facts will have the effect of a verdict of the jury as in other cases by ordinary proceeding: Drumb v. Keen, 47-435; Jennings v. Jennings, 56-288; Bonnett v. Bonnett, 61-199; Fouts v. Pierce, 64-71.

The supreme court will reverse the action of the lower court as to its finding of facts only where such finding is manifestly unsupported by the evidence: Kline v. Kline, 57-386; Jenkins v. Clark, 71-552.

But the court may review the correctness of the action of the lower court as based upon its finding of facts: Shaw v. Nachtwey, 43-653.

The officer against whom the action is brought has, it would seem, sufficient interest to be allowed to appeal: Jackson v. Boyd, 53-536.

The taking of an appeal from an order of discharge and filing a supersedeas bond does not stay the order of discharge: State v. Kirkpatrick, 54-373.

Action of a judge may be appealed from: See § 4394.

4731. Commitment questioned. 3482. Such replication may deny the sufficiency of the testimony to justify the action of the committing magistrate, on the trial of which issue all written testimony before such magistrate may be given in evidence before the court or judge in connection with any other testimony which may then be produced. [R., § 3833; C., '51, § 2245.]

The fact that the person arrested and brought before a committing magistrate waives preliminary examination does not debar him from the privilege of introducing evidence in a habeas corpus proceeding to question the sufficiency of the testimony to warrant his commitment: Cowell v. Patterson, 49-514.

It is not competent for plaintiff seeking to be released by habeas corpus from commitment on preliminary examination to state in his petition the substance of the evidence before the committing magistrate, and, by having defendant admit the correctness of such evidence, thereby make up the case which is to be presented to the court: State ex rel. v. Rosencrans, 65-382.

4732. Action of grand jury. 3483. But it is not permissible to question the correctness of the action of the grand jury in finding a bill of indictment, or of the trial jury in trial of a cause, nor of a court or judge when acting within their legitimate province and in a lawful manner. [R., § 3834; C., '51, § 2246.]

Where prisoner is held under indictment: An indictment is presumptive evidence of the guilt of the prisoner, and, if it is for a capital offense, bail may be denied when applied for by habeas corpus. The court cannot be required in such cases to look behind the indictment and consider the evidence on which it was found: Hight v. United States, Mor., 407.

In case of contempt: Imprisonment for disobedience of an order of court which is erroneous only and not void cannot be inquired into by habeas corpus: Ex parte Grace, 12-208.

One court will not interfere by habeas corpus with proceedings in another court to punish a party for contempt, unless such proceedings are so grossly irregular as to be void: Ex parte Holman, 28-88; Robb v. McDonald, 29-380.

The supreme court cannot in a habeas corpus proceeding review an order of imprisonment for contempt and reverse it, unless the act constituting the alleged contempt was such that it can pronounce as a matter of law that it was not a contempt: State ex rel. v. Seaton, 61-563.

After conviction by a court having jurisdiction, though such conviction be irregular or erroneous, the party is not entitled to the writ, and this is true of a conviction before a magistrate; and where the defendant was found guilty before the proper police magistrate of a city for violation of an ordinance of such city, and sentenced to imprisonment, held, that he could not be released on the ground that the ordinance under which he was convicted was invalid: Platt v. Harrison, 6-79.

Proceedings in another court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the person cannot be inquired into or corrected by a habeas corpus proceeding: Ex parte Holman, 28-88; Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572.

A judgment which is authorized by law,

4733. Discharge. 3484. If no sufficient legal cause of detention is shown the plaintiff must be discharged. [R., § 3835; C., '51, § 2247.]

The provisions of § 4134 as to certain orders of a judge made in vacation, that they shall be in force only during vacation and the first two days of the ensuing term of court, does not apply to the order in a habeas corpus proceeding made during vacation: Shaw v. McHenry, 52-182.

When an order of discharge is made, no further proceedings are to be had: State v. Kirkpatrick, 54-373.

4734. Irregularity of commitment. 3485. Although the commitment of the plaintiff may have been irregular, still, if the court or judge is satisfied from the evidence before them, that he ought to be held to bail, or committed either for the offense charged, or any other, the order may be made accordingly. [R., § 3836; C., '51, § 2248.]

A defect in the warrant of commitment will not entitle the prisoner to discharge if the court or jury is satisfied from the evidence that the prisoner ought to be committed for rendered in a court having jurisdiction, cannot be questioned by habeas corpus. Therefore, held, that a judgment of the lower court could not be attacked by habeas corpus on the ground that the judge had refused a change of venue and a jury trial: Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572.

The order of a judge having jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter, not being void, but, at most, voidable, cannot be set aside or evaded in a habeas corpus proceeding before another court or judge: Shaw v. McHenry, 52-182.

Habeas corpus cannot be invoked for the purpose of obtaining relief for mere errors and irregularities in the action of the court. Where the person has had a trial as to whether he was guilty of the crime for which he is imprisoned, the question of whether he committed the crime cannot be again determined upon habeas corpus, nor can an erroneous taxation of costs be questioned in that manner: State v. Orton, 67-554.

An attack by habeas corpus upon the validity of a judgment is of a collateral character, and cannot be sustained unless the judgment is void: Turney v. Barr, 38 N. W. Rep., 550.

Proceedings in federal court: A state court cannot, on habeas corpus, release a person held in custody by the United States marshal by order of a federal court: Ex parte Holman, 28-88.

Costs: Where defendant is successful it is not proper to tax the costs to the county, nor to the person restrained where the application is made by another for his release, and it does not appear that the proceedings were brought by his consent. Whether they should be taxed to the person instituting the proceedings, quære: State v. Collins, 54-441.

the offense charged, or any other, and in such case the prisoner should be remanded into custody and a proper order made in relation to the case. Jackson v. Boyd, 53-536.

4735. Bail increased or diminished. 3486. The plaintiff may also, in any case, be committed, let to bail, or his bail be mitigated or increased, as justice may require. [R., § 3837; C., '51, § 2249.]

4736. Defendant retained in custody. 3487. Until the sufficiency of the cause of restraint is determined, the defendant may retain the plaintiff in his custody, and may use all necessary and proper means for that purpose. [R., § 3838; C., '51, § 2250.]

4737. Right to be present waived. 3488. The plaintiff, in writing, or his attorney, may waive his right to be present at the trial, in which case the proceedings may be had in his absence. The writ will in such cases be modified accordingly. [R., § 3839; C., '51, § 2251.]

4738. Disobeying order. 3489. Disobedience to any order of discharge subjects the defendant to attachment for contempt, and also to the forfeiture of one thousand dollars to the party aggrieved, besides all damages sustained by him in consequence of such disobedience. [R., § 3840; C., '51, § 2252.]

4739. Papers filed with clerk. 3490. When the proceedings are before a judge, except when the writ is refused, all the papers in the case, including his final order, shall be filed with the clerk of the district court of the county wherein the final proceedings were had, and a brief memorandum thereof shall be entered by the clerk upon his judgment docket. [R., § 3843; C., '51, § 2253.]

CHAPTER 14.

OF CONTEMPTS.

4740. What deemed. 3491. The following acts or omissions are deemed to be contempts, and are punishable as such by any of the courts of this state, or by any judicial officer acting in the discharge of an official duty, as hereinafter provided:

1. Contemptuous or insolent behavior toward such court while engaged in the discharge of a judicial duty which may tend to impair the respect due to its authority;

2. Any wilful disturbance calculated to interrupt the due course of its official proceedings;

3. Illegal resistance to any order or process made or issued by it;

4. Disobedience to any subpoena issued by it and duly served, or refusing to be sworn, or to answer as a witness;

5. Unlawfully detaining a witness or party to an action or proceeding pending before such court, while going to or remaining at the place where the action or proceeding is thus pending;

6. Any other act or omission specially declared a contempt by law. [R., § 2688; C., '51, § 1598.]

Jurisdiction: In the absence of statute, each court of record is the sole and final judge in matters of contempt with reference to its proceedings: First Cong. Church v. Muscatine, 2-69.

The visiting committee of an insane hospital has no authority under the Code to punish a witness for contempt for refusing to testify when summoned before it: Brown v. Davidson, 59-461.

Nature of proceeding: The proceeding to punish a contempt of process is merely incidental to, and, to a great extent, independent of, the original proceeding in which it may be invoked. It is in its nature criminal: First Cong. Church v. Muscatine, 2-69.

An action for contempt is a criminal action, and if in the federal courts the United States is a party thereto: Durant v. Supervisors, Woolworth, 377.

Contempt of court: Contemptuous or insolent behavior as here contemplated must be toward the court while it is engaged in judicial duty, and such behavior must tend to impair the respect due to its authority in order that such acts may be punishable as contempt: Dunham v. State, 6-245.

If by general rule, or by special rule made as to some cause on trial, a publication of the testimony pending the investigation has been prohibited, a wilful violation of such rule might amount to contempt on the ground that it would be a resistance to the rule thus made, and especially if the rule itself declared such act a contempt: Ibid.

It would seem that the provisions of the Code must be regarded as a limitation upon the power of courts to punish for any other contempts than those therein specified: Ibid.

The publication of newspaper comments upon the decision of a court when the case is disposed of and the decision announced are not punishable as contempt: Ibid.

Publication of articles in a newspaper reflecting upon the conduct of a judge in relation to a cause disposed of before such publication does not amount to a contempt: State v. Anderson, 40-207.

Argument by attorney: After the decision of the court has been made the time for argument in reference thereto has passed, and an attorney cannot, except by asking and obtaining leave, further argue the question or deny the statements of the court with reference to the facts involved in such determination: Russell v. French, 67-102.

Violation of injunction: The writ of injunction, for the violation of which the proceedings are instituted, need not be filed in the proceeding: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

While the provision for a fine of $500 for violation of an injunction prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors is extraordinary in amount, it is not in that respect unconstitutional: Ibid.

Attachment for contempt is the proper mode of enforcing obedience to a continuing order in the nature of a mandatory injunction: State v. Baldwin, 57-266.

In replevin: The judge is authorized in vacation to punish as contempt an unlawful obstruction or hindrance to an order for the taking of property: State v. Myers, 44-580.

In mandamus: Where a writ of mandamus to collect a tax is disobeyed by the board of supervisors, but one action for contempt is allowed against them, and that a joint action. If the board are severally proceeded against, the actions may be consolidated so long as the act charged is disobedience of the same writ of mandamus: Durant v. Supervisors, Woolworth, 377.

Action against receiver: It is contempt to bring an action in a state court against a receiver appointed by a federal court without first obtaining leave of the court appointing the receiver. It is immaterial whether the property is thereby disturbed or not: Thompson v. Scott, 4 Dillon, 508.

Refusal to make affidavit: A witness may be punished for contempt in refusing to make an affidavit, and to answer questions as provided by §§ 4943, 4944, and the fact that the affidavit desired would not be legally admissible in the proceeding in which it is sought is no excuse for such refusal: Robb v. McDonald, 29-330; State ex rel. v. Seaton, 61-563.

Refusal to disclose property: See § 4374.

Attachment of witness: A party cannot take advantage of the refusal of the court to attach a witness for contempt who refuses to produce evidence: Manning v. Perkins, 16-71.

4741. In courts of record. 3492. In addition to the above, any court of record may punish the following acts or omissions as contempts:

1. Failure to testify before a grand jury, when lawfully required to do so;
2. Assuming to be an officer, attorney, or counselor of the court, and acting as such without authority;
3. Misbehavior as a juror, by improperly conversing with a party, or with any other person in relation to the merits of an action in which he is acting or is to act as a juror, or receiving a communication from any person in respect to it without immediately disclosing the same to the court;
4. Disobedience by an inferior tribunal, magistrate, or officer, to any lawful judgment, order, or process of a superior court, or proceeding in any matter contrary to law, after it has been removed from such tribunal, magistrate, or officer. [R., § 2689; C., '51, § 1599.]

4742. How punished. 3493. The punishment for contempts may be by fine or imprisonment, or both, but where not otherwise specially provided, courts of record are limited to a fine of fifty dollars and an imprisonment not exceeding one day, and all other courts are limited to a fine of ten dollars. [R., § 2690; C., '51, § 1600.]

The court cannot punish an attorney for contempt by revoking or suspending his license. That can only be done in the manner provided by § 295 et seq.: State v. Start, 7-499.

Nor can it, by summary proceeding for contempt, compel a party to deliver to the sheriff a key or property claimed by another: S. C., 7-501.

A judge may, in vacation, impose the same punishment for contempt as if he were acting in court: State v. Myers, 44-580.

The judge or court imposing a fine for contempt may direct imprisonment of defendant until such fine be paid; the extent of imprisonment being limited by the directions of § 5894: Ibid.

A party who is in contempt has no right to be heard in defense of the action in which the contempt has been adjudged, but failure to pay money awarded as temporary alimony for which judgment has been entered does not constitute contempt in this respect: Baily v. Baily, 69-77.

A proceeding for contempt for violating an order of injunction issued in an equity case may be prosecuted in a court of equity. The same court must inflict the punishment for contempt in which the order violated is granted: Manderscheid v. District Court, 69-240.

It is proper to conduct the proceedings for contempt under the title of the cause out of which the contempt arises: Ibid.

Any irregularity in serving a rule to show cause against punishment for contempt will be waived by the appearance of the party: Ibid.

A party charged with contempt has not a right to a jury trial although the act charged also constitutes a crime. The punishment for the contempt is not a punishment of the act as a crime, and the crime may be separately punished: Ibid.

In a proceeding against an attorney for contempt the accusation should specify the manner in which he was disrespectful to the court. If it was done by insulting language, the words used by the accused should be given; if by disrespectful acts, those acts should be described so that the accused may know what words or acts he is required to meet. In a particular case, held, that the charge of contempt "in disobeying the orders of your Honor while engaged in your official capacity" was not sufficiently specific: Perry v. State, 3 G. Gr., 550.

In such case the finding or judgment should specify the particular charge or charges upon which the attorney's guilt is pronounced: Ibid.

4743. Imprisonment. 3494. But if the contempt consists in an omission to perform an act which is yet in the power of the person to perform, he may be imprisoned until he performs it. In that case the act to be performed must be specified in the warrant of the commitment. [R., § 2691; C., '51, § 1601.]

4744. When affidavit necessary. 3495. Unless the contempt is committed in the immediate view and presence of the court, or comes officially to its knowledge, an affidavit showing the nature of the transaction is necessary as a basis for further action in the premises. [R., § 2692; C., '51, § 1602.]

The affidavit here required need not show that affiant has personal knowledge of the facts: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

4745. Notice to show cause. 3496. Before punishing for contempt, unless the offender is already in the presence of the court, he must be served personally with a rule to show cause against the punishment, and a reasonable time given him therefor; or he may be brought before the court forthwith, or on a given day, by warrant, if necessary. In either case he may, at his option, make a written explanation of his conduct under oath, which must be filed and preserved. [R., § 2693; C., '51, § 1603.]

Arrest: While it is true that proceedings to punish for contempt are in a certain sense of a criminal nature, they are not governed by the code of criminal procedure, but by a special statute, and under such provisions it is sufficient to serve a rule upon defendant to show cause against the punishment, and the court is not bound to secure the arrest of defendant and his personal presence before proceeding against him: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

Where the proper order had been served upon defendant, held, that the court might proceed to take evidence, although defendant was not present personally or by counsel: Ibid.

A warrant may be made returnable on a certain day, which may be at a subsequent term, and it may direct the arrest of a person in contempt, in vacation, and provide for his release on bail: State v. Archer, 48-310.

Excuse or explanation: Where a reasonable time is asked to prepare a written explanation it should be granted: State v. Duffy, 15-425.

Upon a proceeding for an alleged contempt in failing to obey an order of court, defendant may by answer show that there was no contempt in fact by reason of the impossibility of performing the required act. He is not required to proceed by appeal or otherwise for a modification of the original order: Hogue v. Hayes, 53-377.

A party cannot, in a proceeding for contempt for disobedience to a judicial order rendered by a court having jurisdiction, call in question the correctness of the order itself. The only legitimate inquiry in such case is, did the court have jurisdiction, and did it make an order which has been violated: State v. Baldwin, 57-266.

It is improper to punish for contempt, even when committed in the presence of the court, without giving the offending party opportunity to make a written explanation of his conduct under oath for the purpose of excusing the contempt or reducing the punishment, and such reasonable opportunity must be given before the party is adjudged guilty of contempt and punishment therefor is inflicted. When the court deems that a contempt of its authority has been committed in its presence, the attention of accused should be called thereto and a reasonable time fixed within which he may make the written explanation contemplated by the statute. He should not be called upon to do so on the instant when the accusation is made, unless the emergency is more than ordinarily great: Russell v. French, 67-102.

Where the statement of an administrator, required by order of court to pay over money received by him as such, shows the receipt of such money, but does not show its disbursement upon lawful claims, he does not purge himself of contempt by showing that he has disbursed the money upon claims not lawfully presented and allowed, and that he has no money of his own with which to satisfy the claim against him: Wise v. Chaney, 67-73.

Hearing: Where it is complained that after appearance of defendant in answer to a citation to show cause the case is set down for hearing at such time as not to allow defendant sufficient opportunity to prepare therefor, he should make a special showing for postponement: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

Contempt proceedings cannot be tried by jury; but as to the doing of the act, quære: McDonnell v. Henderson, 74-619.

4746. Testimony reduced to writing. 3497. Where the action of the court is founded upon evidence given by others, such evidence must be in writing, and be filed and preserved, and if the court act upon their own knowledge in the premises, a statement of the facts upon which the order is founded must be entered on the records of the court, or be filed and preserved when the court keeps no record. [R., § 2694; C., '51, § 1604.]

These provisions apply to all proceedings for contempt, including those for refusing to deliver property under a writ of replevin (§ 4463): State v. Myers, 44-580.

An order entering a fine for contempt will be reversed when a statement of facts, upon which the order is founded, is not entered on the record in a case where the court acts upon its own knowledge: State v. Utley, 13-593; Skiff v. State, 2-550; State v. Dougherty, 32-261.

Where neither the record nor the warrant of commitment shows upon what evidence or facts an order of commitment is based, nor whether the same were within the knowledge of the court, the order will be reversed on certiorari: State v. Folsom, 34-583.

Although a failure of the judge to file and preserve a statement of the facts on which the order of contempt is founded will render the contempt invalid, yet where the transcript of the examination of a witness showing the questions asked, and the refusal to answer was filed by the judge with his certificate, held, that it constituted a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the statute, although the transcript was made afterwards by a short-hand writer from notes taken at the time: Lutz v. Aylesworth, 66-629.

As to examination of witnesses in proceedings for contempt of injunction in liquor cases, see § 2387.

In a proceeding for contempt for publishing false, scandalous and defamatory articles in relation to the judge of the court, it is proper to hear testimony of witnesses as to the meaning and intent of the articles, and whether the same in their opinion referred to or meant the court or the judge thereof: Henry v. Ellis, 49-205.

The writ of injunction for the violation of which the proceedings are instituted need not be filed in the proceeding: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

4747. Warrant; statement of. 3498. When the offender is committed, the warrant must state the particular facts and circumstances on which the court acted in the premises, and whether the same was in the knowledge of the court, or was proved by witnesses. [R., § 2695; C., '51, § 1605.]

In a particular case, held, that the warrant of commitment for violating an injunction sufficiently recited the facts and circumstances on which the court acted in making the order: Goetz v. Stutsman, 73-693.

See, also, notes to preceding section.

4748. Certiorari. 3499. No appeal lies from an order to punish for a contempt, but the proceedings may, in proper cases, be taken to a higher court for revision by certiorari. [R., § 2696; C., '51, § 1606.]

This special provision controls the general provision as to appeals, and extends to contempts by disobedience of injunction as well as other process: First Cong. Church v. Muscatine, 2-69.

Section applied: Dunham v. State, 6-245.

4749. No bar to indictment. 3500. The punishment for a contempt constitutes no bar to an indictment; but if the offender is indicted and convicted for the same offense, the court in passing sentence must take into consideration the punishment before inflicted. [R., § 2697; C., '51, § 1607.]

4750. "Court" defined. 3501. Any officer authorized to punish for contempt, is a court within the meaning of this chapter. [R., § 2698; C., '51, § 1608.]

CHAPTER 15.

OF CHANGING NAMES.

4751. By courts. 3502. The district [or circuit] court has power to change the names of persons in the following manner: [R., § 3844; C., '51, § 2256.]

and eyes, the place of his birth, and who were his parents. [R., § 3845; C., '51, § 2257.]

4754. Publication. 3505. Previous to the time thus prescribed for the taking effect of such change, the applicant shall cause notice thereof to be published for four successive weeks in the newspaper directed by the court. [R., § 3847; C., '51, § 2259.]

4755. Proof filed. 3506. The ordinary proof of such publication being filed in the office of the clerk of the court, shall be by him filed for preservation, and on the day fixed by the court as aforesaid the change shall be complete. [R., § 3848; C., '51, § 2260.]

TITLE XXI.

OF JUSTICES OF THE PEACE AND THEIR COURTS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF JUSTICES OF THE PEACE AND THEIR COURTS.

4756. Jurisdiction. 3507. The jurisdiction of justices of the peace, when not specially restricted, is co-extensive with their respective counties; but does not embrace suits for the recovery of money against actual residents of any other county, except as provided in section three thousand five hundred and thirteen of this chapter [§ 4762]. [R., § 3849; C., '51, § 2261.]

Limited: Justices of the peace having no powers except as given them by statute possess only limited jurisdiction, and their official acts, to be valid, must be in accordance with the provisions of statute: Cook v. United States, 1 G. Gr., 39.

Must appear: In a court of inferior jurisdiction such as that of a justice of the peace, the record must show the facts which confer the jurisdiction or his judgment is void: Goodrich v. Brown, 30-291.

Action against resident of another county; consent: A justice does not acquire jurisdiction over an action against a resident of another county, even though he appear and proceed to trial without objection: Chapman v. Morgan, 2 G. Gr., 374; Boyer v. Moore, 42-544; McMeans v. Cameron, 51-691.

A failure to raise this objection before the justice of the peace before whom the action is properly brought does not prevent a party from raising it on appeal: McMeans v. Cameron, 51-691.

Service within township: The justice does not acquire jurisdiction by notice served in the township where suit is brought, upon a resident of another county, and a judgment rendered thereon is void. Defendant is not required to appear and plead, suggesting want of jurisdiction: Hamilton v. Millhouse, 46-74.

Attachment: If the suit is for money against an actual resident of another county, the fact that an attachment is sought against property in the county in which suit is brought will not confer jurisdiction: Gates v. Wagner, 46-355.

What constitutes residence in the county: A resident of one county went with his family to another county to reside there temporarily, boarding at a hotel while building a school-house under a contract, with intention of returning to his former home when the work was completed. Held, that he did not become a resident of the latter county so as to give a justice of the peace of that county jurisdiction in an action against him: Bradley v. Fraser, 54-389.

4757. Amount in controversy. 3508. Within the prescribed limit it extends to all civil cases, except cases by equitable proceedings, where the amount in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars; and, by consent of parties, it may be extended to any amount not exceeding three hundred dollars. [R., § 3850; C., '51, § 2262.]

It is actual and not legal residence that is contemplated by the statute. The fact that defendant's domicile is in another county than that in which suit is brought does not prove that he is an actual resident of such other county, though that may be his legal residence. Therefore, held, that a contractor upon a railroad who had resided in another county for seven years, and was absent from that county only for the purpose of constructing such railroad, and expected to return to that county as soon as the job upon which he was at work should be completed, was not an actual resident of such other county within the meaning of this section, it appearing that he was living and keeping house with his family during the time that he was performing his contract in the county where suit was brought: Fitzgerald v. Arel, 63-104.

A person may be engaged in business in a county and personally present superintending it, and yet not be an actual resident of the county: Fitzgerald v. Grinnell, 64-261.

Suits against copartners: Where suit is brought before a justice of the peace against two persons jointly, as partners, and one of such partners is resident of another county, the justice of the peace acquires no jurisdiction as to such partner by service upon him in the county of his residence. The justice may acquire jurisdiction to render judgment against the firm by service upon the resident partner, but not as against the non-resident partner individually: Ebersole v. Ware, 59-663.

And see notes to § 3790.

Actions against corporations: See notes to §§ 3787 and 3789.

No equitable jurisdiction: A justice has no equitable jurisdiction: David v. Ryan, 47-642, 646.

Therefore, held, that where an action was brought before a justice upon a note blank as to amount, the plaintiff could not, on appeal, ask a reformation of the note and judgment thereon as reformed, for the reason that he thereby sought to introduce an equitable cause of action which could not be tried before a justice: Hollen v. Davis, 59-444.

Jurisdiction not exclusive: The jurisdiction of justices over cases where the amount does not exceed one hundred dollars is not exclusive: Nelson v. Gray, 2 G. Gr., 397; Hutton v. Drebbilbis, 2 G. Gr., 593; Chapman v. Morgan, 2 G. Gr., 374.

Amount in controversy; claim: The amount claimed, and not the amount appearing to be due on the instrument in suit, is the criterion for jurisdiction: Stone v. Murphy, 2-35.

Determined by pleadings, not by judgment: If the amount in controversy, as shown by the pleadings, exceeds one hundred dollars, the justice has no jurisdiction even to render judgment for one hundred dollars or less: Gillett v. Richards, 46-652.

Where the notice shows that the claim is for more than one hundred dollars, defendant may properly disregard it, and nothing can afterwards be done by the plaintiff by which the justice can acquire jurisdiction; and in such a case, held, that if such defendant appeared and demurred to the jurisdiction, the plaintiff could not give the justice jurisdiction by filing his petition for an amount within the jurisdiction of the justice: Hynds v. Fay, 70-493.

Where the amount claimed by the plaintiff is such as to bring the case within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, the fact that he erroneously renders judgment for an amount in excess of his jurisdiction will not render his judgment void, and the excess may be remitted: Reed v. Shum, 63-378.

Account: In an action on account for a balance within the jurisdiction of a justice, the entire account is in controversy, although the recovery cannot exceed the amount claimed: Hall v. Biever, Mor., 113.

Attorney's fee: The amount of attorney's fee provided for in the note is not to be taken into consideration in determining the amount in controversy, the attorney's fee being part of the costs: Spiesberger v. Thomas, 59-606.

Counter-claim: In determining the amount in controversy it is not proper to add together the amounts of the original claim and of a counter-claim: Madison v. Spitznogle, 58-369.

Interest included: Where the claim stated in the notice was for one hundred dollars with interest and costs, held, that such a statement entitled plaintiff to interest on the amount demanded from the time of commencement of suit, and therefore the amount claimed was over one hundred dollars, and the justice had no jurisdiction: Galley v. Tama County, 40-49.

Determined by petition: But where the petition claimed one hundred dollars, and the notice stated that that amount was claimed, but also stated that unless defendant appeared, etc., judgment would be rendered "for the whole amount with interest and costs," held, that the amount claimed did not exceed one hundred dollars, and the justice had jurisdiction: Moran v. Murphy, 49-68.

Consent to jurisdiction beyond one hundred dollars: A clause in a note giving a justice of the peace jurisdiction in an action thereon to the amount of three hundred dollars will entitle plaintiff to bring action thereon before any justice who, but for the amount in controversy, would have had jurisdiction without such clause. The execution of such note and its acceptance by payee constitute a sufficient consent to give the justice jurisdiction: Marshalltown Bank v. Kennedy, 53-357.

Where a note dated and payable at Des Moines recited that judgment might be taken thereon "before any justice in said county," the only county mentioned therein being that of the maker's residence, Dallas county, held, that the specification did not operate to give a justice of the peace in Polk county, before whom action was properly brought, jurisdiction of the case to an amount in excess of the amount of one hundred dollars: Brown v. Davis, 59-641.

Attorney's fee: Where the claim was for three hundred dollars, on a promissory note with attorney's fees, it being stipulated in such note that a justice of the peace should have jurisdiction thereof, held, that the claim as to attorneys' fees was merely descriptive of the note and did not make the amount in controversy greater than three hundred dollars: Long v. Loughran, 41-543.

It is the fact of consent which gives the justice jurisdiction where the amount in controversy exceeds one hundred dollars, and if such fact exists, his judgment for more than that amount will be valid even though no record of the fact of consent appears: Schlisman v. Webber, 65-114.

In an attachment proceeding the amount in controversy is the claim plaintiff seeks to enforce, and not the value of the attached property: Hoppe v. Byers, 39-573.

Garnishment: If the judgment is for an amount within the jurisdiction of the justice, he may, in a proper proceeding, render judgment against a garnishee for the entire amount due under such judgment, although, by reason of costs, the judgment against the garnishee exceeds the sum for which the justice may render judgment in an original action. The proceeding by garnishment is merely auxiliary to the original judgment and follows it as an incident for its enforcement: Gillett v. Richards, 46-652; Hodge v. Ruggles, 36-42.

A justice of the peace, who has jurisdiction of the indebtedness which is sought to be recovered by reason of consent of parties, where the amount in controversy exceeds one hundred dollars, has also jurisdiction of an attachment proceeding auxiliary thereto, although there is no consent to jurisdiction for more than one hundred dollars as to the attachment: Houghton v. Bauer, 70-314.

WHERE SUITS MAY BE BROUGHT.

4758. Where parties reside. 3509. Suits may in all cases be brought in the township where the plaintiff or defendant, or one of several defendants, resides. [R., § 3851; C., '51, § 2263; 12 G. A., ch. 149.]

A trial had before the proper justice, but taking place outside of his township, by consent of parties, held not to be void for want of jurisdiction: Rogers v. Loop, 51-41.

That a suit before a justice is brought in the wrong township is not ground for change of venue. Such fact should be pleaded in abatement. Whether a motion to dismiss would be proper in such case, quære: Meunch v. Breitenbach, 41-527.

4759. Where served. 3510. They may also be brought in any other township of the same county, if actual service on one or more of the defendants is made in such township. [R., § 3852; C., '51, § 2264.]

Defendant may be sued in any township where service is obtained on him, provided he be a resident of the county: Klingel v. Palmer, 42-166.

Service of notice upon defendant in his own township will not give the justice jurisdiction of defendant in an action brought in another township of the same county, but the justice having jurisdiction of the subject-matter may acquire jurisdiction of defendant by appearance: Auspach v. Ferguson, 71-144.

4760. To recover personal property; attachment. 3511. Actions to recover personal property, and suits commenced by attachment, may be commenced in any county and township wherein any portion of the property is found, and justices shall have jurisdiction therein within the county. [R., § 3853; C., '51, § 2265.]

In such cases the jurisdiction of a justice is not limited to the township in which the defendant resides, or in which the property may be found, but is co-extensive with the county: Leversee v. Reynolds, 13-310; Biddle v. Allender, 14-410.

The justice has jurisdiction throughout the county without regard to the particular township in which the parties reside or the property is situated. (Overruling Meunch v. Breitenbach, 41-527); Knowles v. Pickett, 46-503.

But the justice does not have jurisdiction of an action for the recovery of money against a resident of another county, although an attachment is sought in such action against property in the county where suit is brought: Gates v. Wagner, 46-355.

Removal of property from county: These provisions relate to the location of the property at the time the case is commenced, and not at the time it is seized under the writ. The removal of the property from the county after the commencement of the action, but before seizure, will not defeat the jurisdiction of the justice or the right to levy on the property: Craft v. Franks, 34-504.

4761. Non-resident. 3512. If none of the defendants reside in the state, suit may be commenced in any county and township wherein either of the defendants may be found. [R., § 3854; C., '51, § 2266.]

4762. Contracts in writing. 3513. On written contracts, stipulating for payment at a particular place, suit may be brought in the township where the payment was agreed to be made. [R., § 3855; C., '51, § 2267.]

A justice may entertain jurisdiction in a suit upon a written contract stipulating for payment in his township, although the defendant be a resident of another county, and not served within the township where the suit is brought: Klingel v. Palmer, 42-166; Baker v. Jamison, 73-698.

For similar provisions as to courts of record, see § 3786.

4763. In adjoining township. 3514. If there is no justice in the proper township qualified or able to try the suit, it may be commenced in any adjoining township in the same county. [R., § 3856; C., '51, § 2268.]

JUSTICE'S DOCKET.

4764. What entered upon. 3515. Every justice of the peace shall keep a docket in which shall be entered, in continuous order, with the proper date to each act done:

1. The title to each cause;

2. A brief statement of the nature and amount of the plaintiff's demand, and defendant's counter-claim, if any, giving date to each where dates exist;

3. The issuing of the process, and the return thereof;
4. The appearance of the respective parties;
5. Every adjournment, stating at whose instance and for what time;
6. The trial, and whether by the justice or by a jury;
7. The verdict and judgment;
8. The execution, to whom delivered, the renewals, if any, and the amount of debt, damages, and costs indorsed thereon;
9. The taking and allowance of an appeal, if any;
10. The giving a transcript for filing in the clerk's office, or for counterclaim, if one is given;
11. A note of all motions made, and whether refused or granted. [R., § 3857; C., '51, § 2269.]

The provision of ¶ 3 is directory, and the failure to note the return of an execution, before judgment against a garnishee garnished thereunder, cannot be taken advantage of by the garnishee to reverse a judgment against him: Houston v. Walcott, 1-86. Also, held, that failure of the justice to note in his docket the return of notice would not affect his jurisdiction: Bridges v. Arnold, 37-221.

The last subdivision does not refer to motions made on the trial to exclude evidence. Objections to evidence, and rulings thereon, need not be entered on the docket: Miller v. O'Neal, 9-446.

An entry in the docket in the taking the allowance of the appeal, being an entry required to be made, will prevail over the entry on an appeal bond as to the date of filing and approving the same where the two are in conflict: Moore v. Manser, 9-47.

SUITS — HOW BROUGHT.

4765. Parties; proceedings. 3516. The parties to the action may be the same as in the circuit [district] court, and all the proceedings prescribed for that court, so far as the same are applicable and not herein changed, shall be pursued in justices' courts. The powers of the court are only as herein enumerated. [R., § 3858; C., '51, § 2270.]

A justice of the peace has no power to give instructions to a jury sitting in the trial of a case before him: St. Joseph Mfg. Co. v. Harrington, 53-380.

The provisions of § 4084 for retrial of actions where service is by publication are, under this section, applicable to proceedings in justices' courts: Taylor & Farley Organ Co. v. Plumb, 57-33.

The last sentence of the section refers to title 21 of the Code, and not to the Code as a whole: Fitzgerald v. Grimmell, 64-261.

4766. Appearance; notice. 3517. Actions in justices' courts are commenced by voluntary appearance or by notice. [R., § 3859; C., '51, § 2271.]

Voluntary appearance gives the justice jurisdiction as to the party without any service of notice whatever: Aces v. Hancock, 4-568.

The appearance waives any defect in the notice: Houston v. Walcott, 1-86.

Appearance by motions for continuance and for change of venue waives objection to the notice or service: Shaffer v. Trimble, 2 G. Gr., 464.

Special appearance to object to sufficiency of service of notice confers jurisdiction: Church v. Crossman, 49-444.

An appearance to cross-examine witnesses, even though general appearance is disclaimed, will confer jurisdiction: Rahn v. Greer, 37-627.

Where the attorney of defendant was present at the time set for trial and asked to look at the papers, and told the justice that he had no jurisdiction or authority to try the case, held, that these acts did not constitute an appearance giving the justice jurisdiction: Holmes v. Hull, 48-177.

As to appearance by agent, see § 4773.

Where the justice has not jurisdiction of the subject-matter, voluntary appearance will not confer jurisdiction; for instance, where defendant is a resident of another county: McMeans v. Cameron, 51-691; Boyer v. Moore, 42-544; Chapman v. Morgan, 2 G. Gr., 374.

4767. Petition not necessary. 3518. When by notice, no petition need be filed, except where the petition must be sworn to, but the notice must state the cause of action in general terms sufficient to apprise the defendant of the nature of the claim against him. [R., § 3860; C., '51, § 2272.]

When the cause of action is such that it must be sworn to, the petition need not be filed until the return day. An original notice alone is sufficient to commence the action: Duffy v. Dale, 42-215.

A technical setting forth of the cause of action is not demanded, but a notice stating it in general terms, if sufficient to apprise the defendant of the nature of the claim against him, is all that is required: Fauble v. Stewart, 35-379.

Where the cause of action stated in the notice was "$40 damages in the sale of oxen," plaintiff was allowed to prove and recover upon a warranty made in such sale; and it was held that the notice sufficiently set forth such cause of action: Dilley v. Nusum, 17-233.

Where the claim was upon a written instrument of guaranty of a promissory note, and the notice stated the claim as upon "a promissory note," held, that the notice was sufficient: Francis v. Bentley, 50-59.

Where the notice of suit in the justice's court set out the cause of action as a claim for a certain sum with interest, etc., etc., and the petition filed on the return day claimed to recover the same sum, with interest, etc., upon a bond signed by defendant as surety, held, that the petition was not based upon a different cause of action from that stated in the notice: Winneshiek County v. Humpal, 61-172.

Under notice of a claim for money due for "damages for the illegal and wrongful taking and detention" of property, "and as damages for the detention thereof," held, that plaintiff could recover the value of property wrongfully taken: Paden v. Griffith, 12-272.

As to defective notice, see § 4771.

Technical precision in pleading is not required, see notes to § 4779.

4768. Notice to whom. 3519. It must be addressed to the defendant by name, but if his name is unknown, a description of him will be sufficient. It must be subscribed by the plaintiff, or the justice before whom it is returnable. [R., § 3861; C., '51, § 2273.]

As to unknown defendants, see § 3762.

4769. State amount; time and place. 3520. It must state the amount for which the plaintiff will take judgment, if the defendant fail to appear and answer at the time and place therein fixed. [R., § 3862; C., '51, § 2274.]

The notice should state the hour when defendant is required to appear, and where the notice fixed the time as "11 o'clock M.," held, that it was not sufficient: Hodges v. Brett, 4 G. Gr., 345.

A notice in which the return day is left blank is of no validity: Phinney v. Donahue, 67-192.

In stating the place it is not essential that the notice give the township of the justice: Johnson v. Dodge, 19-106.

4770. Limit of time. 3521. The time thus fixed in the notice must not be more than fifteen days from the date, and the notice must be served not less than five days previous to the trial. [R., § 3863; C., '51, § 2275.]

Where the notice was served less than five days previous to trial, held, that judgment thereon was erroneous, but not void. Judgment on a defective or insufficient notice can only be attacked by appeal and not collaterally: Shea v. Quintin, 30-53; Ballinger v. Tarbell, 16-491.

4771. Service and return. 3522. The service and return thereto must be made in the same manner as in the circuit [district] court, except that no service shall be made by publication other than is herein provided, nor shall any return made by another than the sheriff or a constable of the county be valid unless sworn to. [R., § 3864; C., '51, § 2276.]

A defective notice, if service is properly had, does not affect the jurisdiction of the court nor the validity of the proceeding. If the justice err in holding the notice sufficient, advantage thereof must be taken on appeal if at all: Dougherty v. McManus, 36-657.

Error in rendering judgment on a defective notice or insufficient service cannot be corrected by writ of error unless a motion to set aside the judgment is first made before the justice: Leonard v. Hallem, 17-564; Smith v. Parker, 28-359.

If the justice has no jurisdiction by reason of entire want of notice, the defendant need not move for correction of the error in rendering judgment against him, but may, if he knows of the judgment in time, have the error corrected by writ of error, or may afterward bring an independent action to set it aside: Holmes v. Hull, 48-177.

The officer's return is the best evidence of the service of notice and is not overcome by failure to enter the fact of return of service on his docket: Bridges v. Arnold, 37-221.

The determination by the justice of the peace of the sufficiency of the evidence of service cannot be collaterally attacked: Baker v. Jamison, 73-98.

The notice is not "process," and may, under some circumstances, be served out of the county, although it is provided that process from a justice's court cannot issue into another county (§ 4881): Klingel v. Palmer, 42-166.

4772. Defendant may pay officer. 3523. The defendant may at any time pay to the officer having the process, or to the justice of the peace, the amount of the claim, together with the costs which have then accrued, and thereupon the proceedings shall cease. [R., § 3865; C., '51, § 2277.]

APPEARANCE OF PARTIES.

4773. Agent's authority. 3524. An agent appearing for another may be required by the justice to show his authority, if written, or prove it by his own oath or otherwise, if verbal. [R., § 3866; C., '51, § 2278.]

A service of original notice upon the agent will not constitute service upon the principal, though the agent may bind the principal by appearance: Brown v. Newman, 13-546.

4774. One hour given. 3525. The parties in all cases are entitled to one hour in which to appear after the time fixed for appearance, and neither party is bound to wait longer for the other. [R., § 3867; C., '51, § 2279.]

A judgment rendered against defendant before the expiration of the hour allowed by statute for appearance, though erroneous, is not void, and cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Piersol, 65-498.

Where the record of a judgment by default recited that it was entered after the expiration of the hour allowed, held, that the record was conclusive in that respect, and could not be impeached by affidavits that the hour had not expired: Cory v. King, 49-365.

4775. Postponement. 3526. Upon the return day, if the justice be actually engaged in other official business, he may postpone proceedings in the case until such business is finished. [R., § 3868; C., '51, § 2280.]

4776. Adjournment by justice. 3527. If from any cause the justice is unable to attend to the trial at the time fixed, or if a jury be demanded, he may adjourn the cause for a period not exceeding three days, nor shall he make more than two such adjournments. [R., § 3869; C., '51, § 2281.]

4777. Adjournment on showing. 3528. In case of the absence of witnesses, either party at his own cost may obtain an adjournment not exceeding sixty days, by filing an affidavit like that required to obtain a continuance in the circuit [district] court for the like cause. [R., § 3870; C., '51, § 2282.]

A continuance by consent to an indefinite time will not enable one party to obtain judgment by default against the other without notice to the other as to the time when the cause is again set for trial: Rowley v. Baugh, 33-201.

After the death of a party before trial, a continuance may be granted to allow an administrator to be appointed, so that he may be made party: Caughlin v. Blake, 55-634.

4778. Condition of. 3529. Either party applying for an adjournment, must, if required by the adverse party, consent that the testimony of any witness of the adverse party who is in attendance be then taken to be used on the trial of the cause. [R., § 3871; C., '51, § 2283.]

4779. Pleadings. 3530. The pleadings must be substantially the same as in the circuit [district] court. They may be written or oral. If oral, they must in substance be written down by the justice in his docket, and sworn to when such verification is necessary. [R., § 3872; C., '51, § 2284.]

Technical exactness and nicety in pleading are not required before a justice of the peace: Wright v. Phillips, 2 G. Gr., 191; Taylor v. Barber, 2 G. Gr., 350; Packer v. Cockayne, 3 G. Gr., 111; Burton v. Hill, 4 G. Gr., 379; Hall v. Monahan, 1-554; Greff v. Blake, 16-222; Root v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 29-102.

Technical rules of pleading which prevail in courts of record are not applicable to proceedings in justices' courts: Francis v. Bentley, 50-59.

The same technical precision is not required in stating a cause of action or defense: Finch v. Central R. of Iowa, 42-304.

What sufficient: If the cause of action is stated in general terms, with sufficient certainty to apprise the defendant of the nature of plaintiff's demand, it is sufficient: Shea v. Livingston, 32-158.

Great liberality of construction should be indulged in relation to such pleadings: Blake v. Graves, 18-312; Emerick v. Clemens, 26-332.

In an action before a justice on account the charges were set forth as follows: "To dental work," "extracting teeth, etc." the date of each, with the amount thereof, being set opposite each charge. Held to be a sufficiently specific statement: Brownell v. Smith, 13-287.

Formal errors and irregularities are to be disregarded on appeal: See § 4839.

Variance: Where the pleadings are oral, or even where they are written, exact correspondence in the proof is not required: West v. Moody, 33-137.

Variance between the evidence and the statement of the cause of action on the justice's docket should not be held fatal on appeal: Rife v. Pierson, 2 G. Gr., 129.

In a case originating before a justice, where full and formal pleadings are not required, a judgment will not be reversed because evidence is introduced that finds no support in a specific allegation of the pleadings, where both parties have covered the point in their evidence without objection: Miller v. Cassady, 25-323.

Under a general allegation, in an action against a carrier, of the loss of a trunk, held, that plaintiff might prove whatever was necessary to establish such loss: Byers v. Lessees of Des Moines Valley R. Co., 21-54.

Objections to pleadings: If the plaintiff fails to state his cause of action in a sufficiently clear manner, the objection should then be taken, if at all, and cannot be made when the evidence is offered to sustain it: Delany v. Reade, 4-292.

Substantial requirements: But pleadings are required to be substantially the same as in the district court, and therefore it was held error, even in a trial before a justice, to admit evidence of defect in the proper execution of an instrument under a denial of indebtedness thereon: Glidden v. Higbee, 31-379.

Oral pleading: The requirement that an oral pleading be written down by the justice in his docket is merely directory, and a failure to comply therewith should not be allowed to prejudice a party so pleading: West v. Moody, 33-137.

It is not necessary that the justice should set out the claim with the particularity required in a formal petition: Stone v. Murphy, 2-35.

In writing down defendant's oral plea the 4780. Counter-claim. 3531. A counter-claim must be made, if at all, at the time the answer is put in. [R., § 3873; C., '51, § 2285.]

In order that a counter-claim may be properly interposed so as to defeat plaintiff's right to dismiss the action, it must be set up in a justice should state the substance of the defense relied on, and not what he infers was meant thereby: Jordan v. Quick, 11-9.

On appeal, the transcript of the justice's docket, where the plaintiff's claim has been orally stated, must show the amount and nature of plaintiff's demand: Sears v. Tubbs, 4 G. Gr., 409.

If the cause of action is sufficiently entered upon the docket the loss of the original notice will be immaterial: Shawg v. Bruce, 3-324.

Style of plaintiffs: Where plaintiffs were designated in the notice as "heirs at law" of the payee of the note sued on, held, that they did not sue as heirs, and if they did it was immaterial: King v. Gottschalk, 21-512.

Bill of particulars: In an action before a justice on an account, plaintiff must, when demanded, furnish a bill of particulars, or name the items so that the justice can enter them on his docket: McKenney v. Hopkins, 20-495.

Substitution of administrator upon death of party: Upon the death of defendant after commencement of suit and before return day, the administrator may be substituted and the cause may be continued by one or more adjournments until an administrator can be appointed: Caughlin v. Blake, 55-634.

Denial presumed: Where, on appeal, it appears that a trial was had before the justice on the merits, a denial of plaintiff's right to recover will be presumed to have been made although it does not appear of record: Sinnamon v. Melbourn, 4 G. Gr., 309; Heath v. Coltenback, 5-490; Hall v. Denise, 6-534; Clark v. Burnes, 7-6; Weimer v. Linhard, 12-359; Richman v. Brown, 25-33.

But where the entry of the justice indicates that there was no denial of a set-off, it should be regarded as admitted: Brock v. Manatt, 5-270.

written answer filed, or must be stated to the justice and the substance thereof entered on his docket: Kuhn v. Bone, 10-392.

4781. Written instruments. 3532. The original, or a copy of all written instruments upon which a cause of action or counter-claim is founded, must be filed with the claim founded thereon, or a sufficient reason given for not doing so. [R., § 3874; C., '51, § 2286.]

The failure of the justice to mark an instrument as filed will not prejudice the rights of the party filing it: Stone v. Murphy, 2-35.

Nor prevent its being admitted in evidence in a trial on appeal: Eggleston v. Collis, 10-554.

4782. Change of place of trial. 3533. Either party, before the trial is commenced, may have the place of trial changed, upon filing an affidavit that the justice is prejudiced against him, or is a near relation to the other party, or is a material witness for the affiant, or that the affiant cannot obtain justice before him; but no more than one change shall be allowed to each party, unless the justice to whom the case shall be transmitted is related to either party by consanguinity or affinity within the fourth degree, or is a witness, or has been an attorney employed in the action, in either of which events, a second change may be allowed to the same party. [R., § 3875; 14 G. A., ch. 127.]

It is not error to refuse a change after the trial is commenced: McKenney v. Hopkins, 20-495.

Where there was one trial in which the jury disagreed, and the cause was continued; and before the second trial an affidavit was filed asking a change, on the ground that the justice was a material witness for affiant, held, that the application was made in time: Marshall v. Kinney, 1-580.

The change must be granted where a motion and affidavit are filed complying with the requirements of the statute: Berner v. Frazier, 8-77.

As to another justice acting, see § 4879.

The fact that suit is brought in the wrong county is not a ground for change of venue to the right county: Post v. Brownell, 36-497.

Nor is the fact that suit is brought in the wrong township a ground for such change; the objection is to be raised by plea in abatement: Meunch v. Breitenbach, 41-527.

4783. Next nearest justice. 3534. When said change is allowed, said justice shall transmit all the original papers in said case, and a transcript of his proceedings to the next nearest justice in the township, if there be any, if not, to the next nearest justice in his county, and said justice shall proceed to try said case, and if he cannot try the same immediately, he shall then fix a time therefor, of which all parties shall take notice. [R., § 3876.]

Although the justice from whom the change is taken commit an error in sending the case to a justice who is not the nearest one in the county to whom it might be sent, yet the justice to whom the case is thus sent cannot review such decision, and will have jurisdiction, and his action cannot be collaterally attacked: Tennis v. Anderson, 55-625.

It is necessary that the justice granting a change shall designate by name the next justice to whom the case is sent. This is a judicial determination, and in no other way can it be known who is the proper justice to whom the case has been transferred. Until the justice does determine and designate such nearest justice, the change of venue is not complete and no other justice can acquire jurisdiction: Bremner v. Hollowell, 59-433.

4784. Title to real property. 3535. If the title to real property be put in issue by the pleadings, supported by affidavit, or shall manifestly appear from the proof on the trial of the issue, the justice shall, without further proceedings, certify the cause and papers, with transcript of his docket showing the reason of such transfer, to the circuit [district] court, where the same shall be tried on the merits. No cause so transferred shall be dismissed because the justice erred in transferring the same. [R., §§ 3877-8; C., '51, §§ 2287-8.]

That title cannot be determined in action of forcible entry and detainer, see § 4869.

4785. Other causes severed. 3536. But when a case is thus transferred, or dismissed on account of the title to land being involved, if there are other causes of action not necessarily connected, they may be severed and the latter tried before the justice. [R., § 3879; C., '51, § 2289.]

THE TRIAL.

4786. Demand for jury. 3537. Unless one of the parties demand a trial by jury at or before the time for joining issue, the trial shall be by the justice. [R., § 3880; C., '51, § 2290.]

For a reasonable time after the filing of defendant's answer plaintiff has the right to demand a jury trial: Hall v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 65-258.

4787. Dismissal of action. 3538. If the plaintiff fails to appear by himself, his agent or attorney, on the return day, or at any other time fixed for the trial, the justice shall dismiss the case and render judgment against him for costs, except in the case provided in the next section. [R., § 3881; C., '51, § 2291.]

If plaintiff appears before decision on a motion for nonsuit on account of his non-appearance, the motion should be overruled: Wright v. Phillips, 2 G. Gr., 191.

4788. Written instrument filed. 3539. When the suit is founded on an instrument of writing, purporting to have been executed by the defendant, in which the demand of the plaintiff is liquidated, if the signature of the defendant is not denied under oath, and if the instrument has been filed with the justice previous to the day for appearance, he may proceed with the cause whether the plaintiff appear or not. [R., § 3882; C., '51, § 2292.]

A nonsuit for failure of plaintiff to appear with the justice prior to appearance day, as should not be entered where the action is upon a written instrument which has been filed authorized by law: Jewett v. McLelland, 3 G. Gr., 568.

4789. Default in such case. 3540. In the case provided for in the last section, if the defendant does not appear, judgment shall be rendered against him for the amount of the plaintiff's claim. [R., § 3883; C., '51, § 2293.]

4791. Counter-claim. 3542. In the cases contemplated in the last two sections, if the defendant has previously filed a counter-claim, founded on a written instrument purporting to have been signed by the plaintiff, calling for a certain sum, the justice shall allow such counter-claim in the same manner as though the defendant had appeared, and shall render judgment accordingly. [R., § 3885; C., '51, § 2295.]

4792. Judgment set aside. 3543. Judgment dismissing the cause, or by default, may be set aside by the justice at any time within six days after being rendered, if the party applying therefor can show a satisfactory excuse. [R., § 3886; C., '51, § 2296.]

This section applies only to cases where there has been personal service. In case of judgment upon service by publication, § 4084 is applicable: Taylor & Farley Organ Co. v. Plumb, 57-33.

A judgment by default cannot be set aside on a showing, supported by affidavits, that the justice entered judgment by default before a particular time of day. The recitals of the judgment are conclusive upon that point: Cory v. King, 49-365.

Where defendant appears and demands a jury, and judgment is rendered against him for want of an answer, such judgment is not by default in such sense that it can be set aside on motion, as provided for in case of judgment by default: Rhodes v. De Bow, 5-260.

So, where defendant appeared and answered, but did not appear at time of trial, and judgment was rendered against him, held, that it was not a judgment by default: Douglass v. Langdon, 29-245.

No notice to the opposite party of a motion to set aside default is necessary: Stivers v. Thompson, 15-1; Park v. Ratcliffe, 42-42.

As to what is a satisfactory excuse, much is left to the discretion of the justice: Stivers v. Thompson, 15-1.

A judgment of a justice will not be reversed on writ of error for error in rendering default, which might have been corrected by motion under this section, when no such motion was made before the justice; § 4397 is applicable in such case: Leonard v. Hallem, 17-564; Smith v. Parker, 28-359.

4793. New trial. 3544. In such cases a new day shall be fixed for trial, and notice thereof given to the other party or his agent. [R., § 3887; C., '51, § 2297.]

4794. Costs. 3545. Such orders shall be made in relation to the additional costs thereby created as the justice shall think equitable. [R., § 3888; C., '51, § 2298.]

An order of the justice, upon setting aside default, that it be at the cost of defendant, held correct: Stivers v. Thompson, 15-1.

4795. Execution recalled. 3546. Any execution which may in the meantime have been issued, shall be recalled in the same manner as in cases of appeal. [R., § 3889; C., '51, § 2299.]

4796. Jury summoned. 3547. If a jury trial be demanded, the justice shall issue his precept to some constable of the township, directing him to summon the requisite number of jurors possessing the same qualifications as are required in the circuit [district] court. [R., § 3890; C., '51, § 2301; 9 G. A., ch. 174, § 6.]

4797. Number of jurors. 3548. The jury shall consist of six jurors, unless a smaller number be agreed upon between the parties. Each party is entitled to three peremptory challenges and no more. Any deficiency in their number, arising from any cause, may be supplied by summoning others in the manner above directed. [R., § 3891; C., '51, § 2302.]

4798. Discharge of jury. 3549. The justice may discharge the jury, when satisfied that they cannot agree, and shall immediately issue a new precept for summoning another, to appear at a time therein fixed, not more than three days distant, unless the parties otherwise agree. [R., § 3892; C., '51, § 2303.]

4799. Motion in arrest. 3550. No motion in arrest of judgment, or to set aside a verdict, can be entertained by a justice of the peace. [R., § 3893; C., '51, § 2304.]

Instructions: A justice of the peace has no power to give instructions to a jury sitting in the trial of a case before him: St. Joseph Mfg. Co. v. Harrington, 53-380.

Where it appeared upon writ of error to the circuit court that the justice had given instructions to the jury, held, that the cause should have been remanded for new trial, although the giving of instructions was not urged as error: Ibid.

Taking case from jury: Where a jury is called in a case before a justice, and duly impaneled, the justice cannot take the case from the jury. His only power is to discharge the jury if they fail to agree: Hunt v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 74-231.

Setting aside verdict; new trial: A justice of the peace has no authority to set aside a verdict of the jury: Dupont v. Downing, 6-172.

Nor to grant a new trial: Helmich v. Johnson, Mor., 89.

The justice has no power to set aside the verdict or to arrest the judgment, when the verdict is rendered. He has no discretion in the matter, but is required absolutely to enter judgment for the amount thereof, and in so doing he performs a merely clerical duty: Atkinson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 70-68.

Retaxing costs: The justice cannot entertain a motion after judgment to retax costs: Miller v. Haley, 66-260.

4800. Verdict. 3551. The verdict of the jury must be general. But where there are several plaintiffs or defendants, the verdict may be for or against one or more of them. [R., § 3894; C., '51, § 2305.]

In an action for balance due for the purchase of property, it is error to render judgment on a verdict of the jury "for the plaintiff" without an assessment of damages: Bartle v. Plane, 68-227.

If the verdict returned by the jury is incorrect in form, the justice may advise the jurors as to the proper form, and direct a new verdict in that form to be rendered: Wright v. Phillips, 2 G. Gr., 191.

JUDGMENT AND PROCEEDINGS INCIDENT THERETO.

4801. Judgment. 3552. In cases of dismissal, confession, or on the verdict of a jury, the judgment shall be rendered and entered upon the docket forthwith. In all other cases, the same shall be done within three days after the cause is submitted to the justice for final action. [R., § 3895; C., '51, § 2306.]

When to be entered: A judgment on the verdict of a jury should be entered up forthwith; and where there was a delay of sixty days in entering judgment, held, that the judgment so entered was void: Harper v. Abee, 10-389.

Such judgment might be reversed on a writ of error, but cannot be appealed from: Ibid.; Brown v. Scott, 2 G. Gr., 454; Guthrie v. Humphrey, 7-23.

"Forthwith" means within a reasonable time; and held that, where a confession was made on Saturday night before a justice and entered up Monday morning, it was in time; and that even when there is unreasonable delay, the judgment would, as between the parties, be voidable, but not void: Burchett v. Casady, 13-342.

Where a verdict was rendered at 10:30 P. M. on one day and judgment entered on the docket at 11 A. M. the next day, it was held that the statute was sufficiently complied with: Davis v. Simma, 14-154.

Entry upon the docket constitutes the rendition of the judgment: Brown v. Scott, 2 G. Gr., 454.

Form: A justice in rendering judgment need follow no particular form: Stowers v. Milledge, 1-150; Barrett v. Garragan, 16-47; Church v. Crossman, 41-373.

An entry reciting, "after hearing all the testimony on both sides it is believed that the plaintiff is entitled to seventy-five dollars debt," etc., held sufficient to constitute a judgment: Stowers v. Milledge, 1-150.

Where the transcript of the judgment of a justice of the peace showed the time, place, parties, matter in dispute and the result, held, that it showed all the requisites of a valid judgment: Church v. Crossman, 41-373.

Where the time, place, parties, matter in dispute and the result were so concisely and clearly stated as to be unmistakable, held, that the entry was sufficient: Barrett v. Garagan, 16-47.

Entries in particular cases, irregular in form, held sufficient: Moore v. Manser, 9-47; Lavalle v. Badgley, 33-155.

Presumptions: In a collateral proceeding liberal rules are recognized in relation to judgments of justices of the peace: Williams v. Brown, 28-247.

4802. In excess of jurisdiction. 3553. If the sum found for either party exceed the jurisdiction of the justice, such party may remit the excess and take judgment for the residue, but he can never afterward sue for the amount so remitted. [R., § 3896; C., '51, § 2307.]

4803. Dismissal. 3554. Instead of so remitting the excess, the party obtaining such verdict may elect to have judgment dismissing the action, in which case the plaintiff shall pay the costs. [R., § 3897; C., '51, § 2308.]

[The word "plaintiff" in the last line is "said parties" in the original rolls, but as the Revision and the Code commissioners' report each have the section as herein given, the word "plaintiff" is retained as in the printed Code, "said parties" being probably a clerical error corrected by the editor.]

4804. Mutual judgments. 3555. Mutual judgments between the same parties, rendered by the same or different justices, may be set off against each other. [R., § 3898; C., '51, § 2309.]

4805. Course pursued. 3556. When rendered by the same court, the same course shall be pursued as is prescribed in the circuit [district] court. [R., § 3899; C., '51, § 2310.]

4806. By different justices. 3557. If the judgment proposed to be set off was rendered by another justice, the party offering it must obtain a transcript thereof, with a certificate of the justice who rendered it indorsed thereon, stating that no appeal has been taken, and that the transcript was obtained for the purpose of being used as a counter-claim in that case. [R., § 3900; C., '51, § 2311.]

4807. Time. 3558. Such transcript shall not be given until the time for taking an appeal has elapsed. [R., § 3901; C., '51, § 2312.]

4808. Docket entry. 3559. The justice so giving a transcript shall make an entry of the fact in his docket, and all other proceedings in his court shall thenceforth be stayed. [R., § 3902; C., '51, § 2313.]

4809. Execution for balance. 3560. Such transcript being presented to the justice who has rendered a judgment between the same parties as aforesaid, if execution has not been issued on the judgment rendered by him, he shall strike a balance between the judgments and issue execution for such balance. [R., § 3903; C., '51, § 2314.]

4810. Execution on transcript. 3561. If execution has already issued, the justice shall also issue execution on the transcript filed with him, and deliver it to the same officer who has the other execution. [R., § 3904; C., '51, § 2315.]

4811. Executions set off. 3562. Such officer shall treat the lesser execution as so much cash collected on the larger, and proceed to collect the balance accordingly. [R., § 3905; C., '51, § 2316.]

4812. Costs. 3563. The above rules as to counter-claim are subject to the same prohibition as to setting off costs, when the effect will be to leave an insufficient amount of money actually collected to satisfy the costs of both judgments, as is contained in the rules of proceeding in the circuit [district] court. [R., § 3906; C., '51, § 2317.]

4813. Transcript filed. 3564. When the judgment of another justice is thus allowed to be set off, the transcript thereof shall be filed among the papers of the case in which it is to be so used, and the proper entry made in the justice's docket. [R., § 3907; C., '51, § 2318.]

4814. Refusal to allow set-off. 3565. If the justice refuses the judgment as a set-off, he shall so certify on the transcript, and return it to the party who offered it. When filed in the office of the justice who gave it, proceedings may be had by him in the same manner as though no transcript had been certified by him. [R., § 3908; C., '51, § 2319.]

4815. Judgment by confession. 3566. A judgment by confession without action, may be entered by a justice of the peace for an amount within his jurisdiction, and the provisions of law regulating judgments by confession in courts of record, shall, as far as applicable, apply to confessions of judgment before a justice of the peace, and the justice shall enter such judgments on his docket, and may issue execution thereon as in other cases. [R., §§ 3397, 3401; C., '51, §§ 1837, 1841.]

FILING TRANSCRIPTS IN THE CLERK'S OFFICE.

4816. May be done when. 3567. The party obtaining a judgment in a justice's court for more than ten dollars, may cause a transcript thereof to be certified to the office of the clerk of the circuit [district] court in the county. [R., § 3909; C., '51, § 2320.]

A transcript of a judgment before a justice can only be filed and become a lien in the county where rendered. To make it a lien in another county, a transcript must be taken to such county from the judgment as filed in the clerk's office in the county where rendered: Blaney v. Hanks, 14-400. The filing of a transcript does not prevent the prosecution of an appeal or writ of error: Wilson v. Robinson, 61-357.

4817. Manner and effect. 3568. The clerk shall forthwith file such transcript, and enter a memorandum thereof in his judgment docket, noting the time of filing the same, and from the time of such filing it shall be treated in all respects, as to its effect and mode of enforcement, as a judgment rendered in the circuit [district] court as of that date. And no execution can thereafter be issued by the justice on the judgment. [R., § 3910; C., '51, § 2321.]

Execution on the judgment so filed may be issued at any time within twenty years: McCoy v. Cox, 54-595.

EXECUTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

4818. When and by whom issued. 3569. Executions for the enforcement of judgments in a justice's court, may be issued as provided in this chapter, at any time within ten years from the entry of the judgment, but not afterward. [R., § 3911; C., '51, § 2322.]

This section, extending the time within which execution may issue on the judgment beyond that provided in the Revision, is applicable to cases in which the time allowed under the Revision had not expired when the Code was enacted, but not to cases where such time had expired: Woods v. Haviland, 59-476. In general, see § 4258 and notes.

4819. Form. 3570. Such execution shall be against the goods and chattels of the defendant therein, and shall be directed to any constable of the county. [R., § 3912; C., '51, § 2323.]

An execution specifying who recovered the judgment and against whom it was recovered, but not reciting formally the names of the parties to the action, held sufficient: Williams v. Brown, 28-247.

Immatured crops cannot be levied upon and sold on execution as personal property: Ellithorpe v. Reidesil, 71-315.

4820. Return. 3571. It must be dated on the day on which it is issued, and made returnable within thirty days thereafter. [R., § 3913; C., '51, § 2324.]

4821. Renewable. 3572. If not satisfied when returned, it may be renewed from time to time by an indorsement thereon to that effect, signed by the justice, and dated of the date of such renewal. [R., § 3914; C., '51, § 2325.]

4822. For thirty days. 3573. Such indorsement must state the amount paid on such execution, and shall continue the execution in full force for thirty days from the date of renewal. [R., § 3915; C., '51, § 2326.]

4823. Property sold. 3574. Property levied on before such renewal, may be retained by the officer and sold after renewal. [R., § 3916; C., '51, § 2327.]

A sale after the expiration of the execution newal as here contemplated, will be valid: under which levy is made, and without re- Walton v. Wray, 54-531.

APPEALS.

4824. When allowed. 3575; 18 G. A., ch. 163. Any person aggrieved by the final judgment of a justice, may appeal therefrom to the circuit [district] court in the county. But no appeal shall be allowed in any case when the amount in controversy does not exceed twenty-five dollars. [R., § 3917; C., '51, § 2328.]

Right of appeal: Whenever, in any case, there is final judgment before a justice, the right of appeal is given, unless denied by express provision or necessary implication. So held in an action against a defendant for violation of a city ordinance under a charter giving justices jurisdiction in such cases: Dubuque v. Rebman, 1-444.

But if the justice exercises a new jurisdiction created by statute, in which the proceedings are summary and different from the common law, certiorari and not appeal is the proper method of review: Ibid.

Only after judgment: A party cannot appeal from the verdict of a jury. There must first be a judgment by the justice upon such verdict: Kimble v. Riggis, 2 G. Gr., 245; Brown v. Scott, 2 G. Gr., 454; Guthrie v. Humphrey, 7-23.

From judgment by default: An appeal may be taken from a judgment by default: Butler v. Heeb, 38-429.

From nonsuit: An appeal may be taken from a judgment of nonsuit on the evidence: Gilson v. Johnson, 4-463.

The dismissal of action against a garnishee may be reviewed by appeal: Hodge v. Ruggles, 36-42.

From judgment upon the evidence: If the final judgment of the justice upon the evidence is wrong, the proper remedy is by appeal and not by writ of error: Lane v. Goldsmith, 23-240.

Errors of law committed in proceedings which end in final judgment, and which affect the merits of the controversy, may be reviewed on appeal unless waived: Belding v. Torrence, 39-516.

The right of appeal exists whether the judgment complained of, if final, is one of law or fact: Griffin v. Moss, 3-261.

Judgments not final: An error of the justice in entertaining jurisdiction where there is no notice, and rendering judgment on default, should be corrected by writ of error and not by appeal: Craine v. Fulton, 10-457.

So an error of the justice in refusing to en-tain jurisdiction and dismissing the case cannot be reviewed by appeal: Belding v. Torrence, 39-516.

Where the justice dismisses the action for failure of plaintiff to appear, and renders judgment against him for costs, the plaintiff is not thereby precluded from recovering in another action, and therefore the judgment is not final and can be reviewed only on writ of error. No appeal can be taken in such case: Stricker v. Holtz, 50-291.

Error in ruling on a demurrer cannot be reviewed on appeal, as the appeal brings up the case for trial on the merits, and waives all such errors or irregularities: Leftwick v. Thornton, 18-56.

Judgment on an award cannot be reviewed on appeal, as the result would be to try the case anew instead of passing only upon the validity of the award: Whitis v. Culver, 25-30.

As between appeal and writ of error, see, also, § 4846.

Amount in controversy: This limitation of the right of appeal to cases in which the amount in controversy exceeds twenty-five dollars is not unconstitutional as depriving the party of a trial before a common-law jury in such cases. The constitution authorizes the legislature to provide for trial by jury of less than twelve, in inferior courts, irrespective of the right of appeal: Higgins v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 60-50.

Where the defendant makes a tender which is not accepted, the amount in controversy is the difference between the amount claimed and the amount tendered, and if that does not exceed twenty-five dollars no appeal is allowed: Young v. McWaid, 57-101.

In determining the amount in controversy under this section the costs taxed up by the justice of the peace will not be taken into consideration: Curran v. Excelsior Coal Co., 63-94.

Where plaintiff claimed less than twenty-five dollars in his account, and defendant set up, not by way of counter-claim, but as a defense, the payment of more than twenty-five dollars to plaintiff on the indebtedness, held, that the amount in controversy was what was claimed and not what defendant alleged that he had paid: Boyle v. Wilcox, 59-466.

Where the amount claimed by plaintiff is more than twenty-five dollars and he recovers less than that amount, and defendant appeals, the amount in controversy is that claimed by plaintiff, and not that for which judgment is rendered, for plaintiff may, on appeal, if he establishes his right thereto, recover the whole amount of his claim: Lundak v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 65-473.

The question whether the amount in controversy between the parties exceeds twenty-five dollars is to be determined from the pleadings. Whenever one of the parties to the litigation has asserted a claim or demand in his pleadings upon which he asks relief against his adversary, which the other party denies, a controversy exists between them as to such claim or demand, and it is immaterial that upon the trial of the appeal the party asserting such demand does not introduce evidence to substantiate it, or is able to prove but a portion of it. Such failure of evidence will not justify the dismissal of the appeal where the amount stated in the pleadings is sufficient: Sterner v. Wilson, 68-714.

Where plaintiff's cause of action was for less than twenty-five dollars, but defendant interposed a counter-claim for more than that amount, and judgment was rendered against plaintiff for costs and he appealed, held, that as the appeal brought up the whole controversy for trial anew, the amount of the counter-claim was involved and the appeal was proper: Perry v. Conger, 65-588.

If the party in whose favor judgment is rendered for more than twenty-five dollars remits the excess over that amount the opposite party cannot appeal: Milner v. Gross, 66-252.

Where plaintiff on a claim for one hundred dollars recovers less than twenty-five dollars he may, before appeal is taken, remit all claim for more than twenty-five dollars, and thus prevent appeal: Bateman v. Sisson, 70-518; Vorwald v. Marshall, 71-576.

As to dismissal of appeal where the amount in controversy is not sufficient, see notes to § 4839.

As to what is deemed the amount in controversy in other cases, see §§ 4757 and 4402 and notes.

Waiver of right to appeal: A party may by agreement, before or after the judgment is rendered, relinquish or waive his right of appeal from such judgment. (Overruling Clark v. Gibson, Mor., 328): Lyon v. Sanders, 3 G. Gr., 332.

4825. Time. 3576. The appeal must be taken and perfected within twenty days after the rendition of the judgment. [R., § 3918; C., '51, § 2329.]

An appeal is not perfected until the bond is filed and the sureties approved: Brown v. Beckett, 13-185; McKeever v. Horine, 12-227.

An appeal taken after the lapse of twenty days is in effect no appeal, and the case should be stricken from the docket of the circuit court. In such case the court has no jurisdiction to render any judgment except for costs: Martin v. Croker, 62-328.

A party cannot appeal from a judgment entered before a justice of the peace by his consent: Stever v. Heald, 61-709.

The filing of the transcript in the clerk's office does not prevent the taking of appeal or writ of error: Wilson v. Robinson, 61-357.

Waiver of error: Any error in the ruling upon an incidental motion is waived by answering and proceeding in the case: Rahn v. Greer, 37-627.

Error in dismissing an action upon refusal to give security for costs is waived by commencing a new suit on the same cause of action: Gordon v. Ellison, 9-317.

Withdrawal, abandonment or dismissal of appeal: A party may withdraw his appeal, at least with the acquiescence of the other party: McKeever v. Horine, 12-227.

After giving of notice and bond, but before filing of transcript, the appellant may withdraw his appeal and move before the justice to have the judgment set aside: Park v. Ratcliffe, 42-42.

Where the steps for an appeal were taken before the justice, but it was not prosecuted for four years, held, that appellant could not object to his property being subjected to the payment of the judgment: Warder v. Rivers, 64-412.

A party may be allowed to dismiss his appeal in the court to which it is taken: Harper v. Albee, 10-389; Goodenow v. Perry, 12-350.

A party has the same right to dismiss his appeal as to dismiss any other action: Harris v. Laird, 25-143.

Motion before justice to correct error:

Where the party prejudiced by the error of the justice might have it corrected on motion before the justice, he cannot maintain a writ of error to correct the error until he has made such motion and it has been overruled: Leonard v. Hallem, 17-564; Smith v. Parker, 23-359.

But if the justice has no jurisdiction the party prejudiced need take no steps before the justice to remedy the error in assuming jurisdiction, but may proceed by writ of error, or, if he does not know of the judgment in time for that, may maintain an independent action to set the judgment aside: Holmes v. Hull, 48-177.

Party to appeal: It is only parties to the action that have a right to appeal. A surety on a replevin bond cannot appeal from a judgment against his principal, and relitigate his principal's claim to the property: Crites v. Littleton, 23-205.

Appeals to superior court: See § 769 and notes.

When the method of taking an appeal provided by the next section is pursued, the appeal must be perfected within twenty days as in other cases: McBrearty v. Dyer, 6-528.

The appeal is not effected by a writ or process, but by notice, an appeal bond and a certified transcript of the proceedings: May v. Wilson, 20-117.

4826. By clerk. 3577. If within twenty days the appellant is prepared to take his appeal, and is prevented only by the absence or death of the justice, or his inability to act, he may apply to the clerk of the circuit [district] court of the county for the allowance of his appeal. [R., § 3919; C., '51, § 2330.]

4827. How secured. 3578. Such application shall be founded on an affidavit, stating the amount and nature of the judgment, and the time of the rendition thereof, as nearly as practicable, and the reason why he thus applies. [R., § 3920; C., '51, § 2331.]

4828. Action of clerk. 3579. The clerk has thereupon the same power to act in the premises as the justice would have had. He may require the books and papers of the justice to be delivered to him, for which purpose he may issue a precept to the sheriff to that effect, if necessary, and may make out and file the transcript. After this he shall return to the office of the justice of the peace all the papers proper to be kept by the justice. [R., § 3921; C., '51, § 2332.]

4829. Form of bond. 3580. The appeal shall in no case be allowed until a bond in the following form, or its equivalent, is taken and filed in the office of the justice or clerk as above provided, in an amount sufficient to secure the judgment and costs of appeal:

The undersigned acknowledge ourselves indebted to ——— in the sum of ——— dollars, upon the following condition: Whereas ——— has appealed from the judgment of ———, a justice of the peace, in an action between ——— as plaintiff and ——— defendant.

Now, if said appellant pays whatever amount is legally adjudged against him in the further progress of this cause, then this bond to be void.

Approved,	A—— B——, principal.
E—— F——, justice.	C—— D——, surety.

If the judgment be affirmed, or if on a new trial the appellee recovers, or if the appeal be withdrawn or dismissed, judgment shall be rendered against the principal and surety in said bond. [R., § 3922; C., '51, § 2333.]

The bond: A bond equivalent in form to that given in the statute and substantially complying with its requirements is sufficient: Moore v. Manser, 9-47.

Where the bond is not, in form or substance, such as is required by statute, it is error to enter up judgment thereon against the sureties, as authorized by statute when the bond is in the form prescribed: Wilson v. Knight, 3 G. Gr., 126.

Any defect in the bond may be cured by tendering a sufficient bond in the court to which the appeal is taken (such case being within the general provisions of § 326, as to defective bonds): Brock v. Manatt, 1-128.

The justice is not entitled to any fee for approving an appeal bond which is prepared by the attorney and handed him ready for approval: Nickay v. Maloy, 53-33.

The justice may refuse to approve the bond unless the surety justifies as here required, and may require the surety to himself make affidavit as to his qualification: Lane v. Gottsmith, 23-240.

As to judgment against sureties, see § 4843.

4830. Proceedings suspended. 3581. Upon the appeal being taken in accordance with the foregoing provisions, all farther proceedings in the cause by him shall be suspended. [R., § 3923; C., '51, § 2334.]

On failure to file transcript the appeal may be regarded as abandoned and the execution may issue: Goodman v. Allen, 72-616. Further as to abandonment, see notes to § 4824.

4831. If execution issued. 3582. If, in the meantime, an execution has been issued, the justice shall give the appellant a certificate that the appeal has been allowed. Upon that certificate being presented to the constable, he shall cease farther action, and release any property that may have been taken in execution. [R., § 3924; C., '51, § 2335.]

4832. Papers filed. 3583. Upon the taking of any appeal, the justice shall file in the office of the clerk of the circuit [district] court, all the original papers relating to the suit, with a transcript of all the entries in his docket. [R., § 3925; C., '51, § 2336.]

Whenever the transcript and papers from the justice are filed in the office of the clerk of the court to which appeal is taken, the cause is to be deemed in that court: Holloway v. Baker, 6-52.

Notes or other evidences of indebtedness, claimed to be those on which the action before the justice was based, and not certified by the justice with his record, are not to be received in evidence on the appeal unless marked filed by the justice or otherwise identified as the same as those used in the trial of the case before the justice. Otherwise the identity of the cause of action tried on appeal with that tried before the justice would not appear: Graft v. Diltz, 2 G. Gr., 570.

The certificate of an ex-justice in relation to proceedings had before him while in office is not entitled to legal consideration: Brown v. Scott, 2 G. Gr., 454.

An amended transcript sent up by the justice within the time for filing transcript should be considered: Smith v. Snodgrass, 4 G. Gr., 282.

The justice is not required to pay the clerk's fee for the filing of the transcript in the circuit court, and therefore cannot demand prepayment to him of such fee before filing his transcript in the clerk's office: McKay v. Maloy, 53-33.

The term "filed" as used in this section and the following means simply deposited in the clerk's office. Failure of the clerk to minute it as filed on the appearance docket will not defeat such filing: Harrison v. Clifton, 75-636.

Amendment of pleadings, see notes to § 4839.

4833. Deemed in court. 3584. Upon the return of the justice being filed in the office of the clerk, the cause will be deemed in the circuit [district] court. [R., § 3926; C., '51, § 2337.]

Where the appellant refused to pay the filing fee, and afterwards the transcript was lost so that the clerk could not file it when the fee was afterwards tendered, and no substitute was procured, held, that appellant must be considered to have abandoned his appeal: Goodman v. Allen, 72-616.

Notice not essential to jurisdiction, see notes to § 4837.

Dismissal of appeal, see notes to § 4824.

4834. Return amended. 3585. The circuit [district] court may, by rule, compel the justice to allow an appeal, or to make or amend his return according to law. [R., § 3927; C., '51, § 2338.]

Where a party fails to take the proper steps to compel the furnishing of a perfect transcript, he cannot take advantage of such defect for judgment on appeal: Whitmore v. Divilbis, 10-68.

Application to the court to which the appeal is taken, to require a more complete transcript, should not be refused if made in due time: Atwater v. Woodward, 4 G. Gr., 431.

4835. Mistakes corrected. 3586. Where an omission or mistake has been made by the justice in his docket entries, and that fact is made unquestionable, the circuit [district] court may correct the mistake or supply the omission, or direct the justice to do so. [R., § 3928; C., '51, § 2339.]

Correction of justice's record may be made by the court to which the appeal is taken, if a mistake or omission therein is unquestionably established, in order that the case may be fully tried on the issues presented before the justice: Cooper v. Woodrow, 3-189.

The court may hear evidence explaining a mistake or showing an omission in the justice's record: Brown v. Beesett, 13-185.

4836. Return, when made. 3587. If an appeal is allowed ten days before the next term of the circuit [district] court, the justice's return must be made at least five days before that term. All such cases must be tried when reached, unless continued for cause. [R., § 3929; C., '51, § 2340.]

Should be filed for regular term: The "next" term of court at which the transcript should be filed is the next regular term. The return should not be made to a special term: Coon v. Matthews, 10-290.

Trial term: Unless ten days intervene between the taking of the appeal and the commencement of the next term, neither party can be required to go to trial at that term: Seeberger v. Miller, 20-428.

The rule as to the trial term is the same as in case of original actions in the same court: Mediken v. Mason, 10-406.

Dismissal or affirmation for failure to file transcript: Failure of the justice to file his transcript at the proper term is not sufficient ground for an affirmation of the judgment: Fisher v. Harber, 10-293.

If the appellant fails to have a transcript filed it may be filed by appellee, and he may then have the appeal dismissed or the judgment affirmed: Holloway v. Baker, 6-52.

The neglect of the justice to make the return in the proper time is not a ground for dismissing the appeal: Whitcomb v. Holloway, 4 G. Gr., 311. And see Whitehead v. Thorp, 22-425.

Under a rule of court allowing appellee to pay the filing fee and have the appeal docketed and the judgment of the justice affirmed, upon a failure of appellant, after taking the appeal, to pay the fee and cause the case to be docketed, the appellee is not entitled to such affirmance where the clerk docketed the case without having required the fee in advance from appellant: Squires v. Millett, 31-169.

If the default or omission in paying the docket fee in such cases is remedied before the opposite party has suffered any detriment or made objection on that account, a motion for affirmance should not afterwards be allowed on that ground: Hinman v. Weiser, 9-561; Robertson v. Eldora R., etc., Co., 27-245.

So an offer of appellant to pay the fee before the ruling of the court on the motion to affirm would render it improper to sustain the motion: Squires v. Millett, 31-169.

But where the rule of court required payment of docket fee by appellant by the morning of the second day, and the motion to affirm was made on the third day and determined on the ninth day, held, that an offer on the last-named day by appellant to pay the fee, without showing a good excuse for not having sooner paid it, would not render an order of affirmance made on such motion erroneous: State v. Glass, 9-325.

So, where the rule required payment of the docket fee at the beginning of the term, held, that an order of affirmance in pursuance of such rule, made several days after the beginning of the term, should not be set aside on motion, no excuse for the delay being made to appear: Heald v. House, 39-198.

It is erroneous to affirm under such a rule on account of non-payment of filing fee, where the appeal is taken only seven days before the term, ten days being required to make the appeal triable at the next term: Seeburger v. Miller, 20-428.

Where the rule of court provides for affirmance upon the filing of the transcript by appellee in case of appellant's failure to file it, a dismissal should not be granted on such ground, especially if appellee has not filed the transcript: Heiserman v. Rush, 22-240.

While under rule of court an appeal may be dismissed by a stated time in default of payment of the docket fee by appellant, an additional penalty cannot be imposed for such failure: Baude v. Orten, 4 G. Gr., 351.

4837. Notice of appeal. 3588. If an appeal is not allowed on the day on which judgment is rendered, written notice thereof must be served on the appellee or his agent, at least ten days before the term of the court to which the cause is returnable, provided there be ten days intervening, or the suit, on motion of the appellee, shall be continued at the cost of the appellant. [R., § 3930; C., '51, § 2341.]

Notice is not essential to give the court to which the appeal is taken jurisdiction, but failure to give proper notice simply entitles the appellee to a continuance: Bond v. Davis, 37-163.

Service of notice of appeal on appellee is not necessary if the appeal is allowed and perfected on the day on which judgment is rendered: Holloway v. Baker, 6-52.

Appearance waives notice: The appearance of an appellee in the court to which the appeal is taken will amount to a waiver of any irregularity or defect in the taking of the appeal, provided the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter: Wilgus v. Gettings, 19-82.

Notice or appearance must be shown: Where it does not appear affirmatively that proper notice of appeal was given, or that appellee appeared, judgment should not be rendered against the appellee: Quillan v. Windsor, 6-396; McCormick v. Bishop, 3 G. Gr., 99.

4838. How served. 3589. Such notice may be served like the original notice, and if the appellee or his agent have no place of residence in the county, it may be served by being left with the justice. [R., § 3931; C., '51, § 2342.]

4839. Effect of appeal. 3590. An appeal brings up a cause for trial on the merits, and for no other purpose. All errors, irregularities, and illegalities are to be disregarded under such circumstances, if the cause might have been prosecuted in the circuit [district] court. [R., § 3932; C., '51, § 2343.]

Method of trial; what questions considered: As an appeal brings up the case for hearing upon the merits, defects in the service of the original notice are not material: Graves v. Heaton, 11-169.

Technical errors of pleading are to be disregarded: King v. Gottschalk, 21-512.

Error in overruling a demurrer is waived by the appeal and the case is to be tried on its merits; advantage of such an error can be taken only by writ of error, if at all: Leftwich v. Thornton, 18-56.

Where the justice improperly sustained a demurrer to an answer, held, that such action should be disregarded and evidence under the answer admitted: Oleson v. Hendrickson, 12-222.

A variance between the petition and the original notice as to the facts of plaintiff's cause of action cannot be raised on appeal: Frink v. Whicher, 4 G. Gr., 382.

Objections to depositions other than for incompetency or irrelevancy should not be regarded unless made in the justice's court: Alverson v. Bell, 13-308.

If the cause of action before the justice is stated in different forms and a recovery is had in one form, an appeal brings up the whole case for trial on the merits and not merely the right to recover in the particular for which was upheld below. Eduards v. Trulock, 37-244.

Upon an appeal by defendant from a judgment against him for a part of plaintiff's claim in the justice's court, the plaintiff may, if he shows himself entitled thereto, recover a larger sum than that recovered before the justice: Lundak v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 65-473.

Where, upon a demurrer being sustained in the justice's court to plaintiff's petition, such petition was amended and plaintiff recovered thereon, but on appeal the plaintiff withdrew his amendment and a trial was had on the merits and plaintiff again recovered, held, that defendant was not entitled to reverse judgment on the circuit if there was no issue, that objection not having been made until after verdict: Ranne, v. Temple, 54-240.

Jurisdiction of court: A trial from the judgment of the justice in a case in which he had no jurisdiction over the subject-matter (as where the defendant is a resident of another county) does not give the circuit jurisdiction in the case, even though it might properly have been originally brought in that court: McMeas v. Jameson 31-391.

So, also, where the amount in controversy is in excess of that of which the justice may take jurisdiction: Galley v. Tama County, 40-49.

The same point was ruled without discussion in Chapman v. Morgan, 2 G. Gr., 317.

Appearance on appeal as conferring jurisdiction: Where the subject-matter of the appeal is one over which the court to which the appeal is taken has jurisdiction, the appearance of the party against whom the appeal is taken will confer jurisdiction on that court to try the case, although there was no judgment in the justice's court from which an appeal could be taken: Dangoth v. Thompson, 1-243. To the contrary: Kamble v. Eugin 2 G. Gr., 215.

Appearance to the appeal cures want of jurisdiction if the plaintiff or defendant in the justice's court by receiving notice having been served: Dick v. Jensen, 4 G. Gr., 297.

Amount in controversy on the appeal is the amount claimed by the plaintiff, and not the amount of the judgment before the justice: Nichols v. Wood, 65-23.

Plaintiff cannot recover, in addition to the amount claimed by the pleadings, interest on the judgment rendered by the justice: Hays v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 64-593.

Dismissal of action: If a cause properly commenced before a justice is tried without authority by another justice the cause should not be dismissed on appeal, but the unwarranted action disregarded: Ely v. Dillon, 21-47.

Judgment against sureties on bond, see § 4843 and notes.

Affirmance for failure of appellant to appear: If the appellant fails to appear the circuit may affirm the judgment of the justice: Wright v. Clark, 2 G. Gr., 86; Taylor v. Barber, 2 G. Gr., 350.

Presumption as to issues: If it appears there was a trial on the merits a denial of plaintiff's cause of action will be presumed, if no issue appears on the pleadings: See notes to § 4779.

Amendment of the pleadings: A party cannot in the court to which the appeal is taken, file new or amended pleadings as matter of right, but he may be allowed to do so upon proper terms after showing sufficient excuse for the omission to file the same in the justice's court: Ward v. Hudson, 21-79, Stanton v. Warren, 31-15, Warren v. Scott, 32-22, Pay v. Coover, 31-111.

Leave to file amendments, even upon cause shown, is a matter of discretion: Criswell v. Bouman, 40-367.

In the absence of any showing of facts or circumstances requiring that a permit be given permission to file an amendment, held not an abuse of discretion to refuse leave to do so: Tucker v. Srett, 35-80.

The necessity of showing excuse may be waived by agreement of the parties: Warick v. Scott, 32-29.

The discretion of the court in allowing an amendment will not be interfered with unless it is clear that prejudice has resulted: Dunton v. Thornton, 15-211.

The allowing of an amendment correcting the name of the partner by being a plaintiff, is held not erroneous: Adair v. Zang, 41-536.

In order to secure a trial of the appeal upon the very merits of the case, errors or insufficiencies in the pleadings should be allowed to be cured by amendment: Crow v. Murphy, 52-695.

4840. New demand. 3591. No new demand or counter-claim can be introduced into a case after it comes into the circuit [district] court, unless by mutual consent. [R., § 5933; C., '51, § 2344.]

A new cause of action or defense, of which the justice would not have had jurisdiction, cannot be set up on appeal as, for instance, a claim for equitable relief: Hollen v. Davis, 59-444.

Nor can a claim for rescission of a contract be thus set up: Graschel v. Bowman, 40-351.

Although the statute forbids any new demand or counter-claim being set up on the appeal, defendant may file an amended answer setting up the defense of payment. Such matter does not constitute a new demand or a counter-claim: St. Louis Type Foundry v. Budes, 60-525.

4841. Appellant pay costs. 3592. The appellant must pay the costs of the appeal, unless he obtains a more favorable judgment than that from which he appealed. [R., § 5934; C., '51, § 2345.]

There is no ground for apportionment of costs if the judgment is less favorable than that before the justice: Best v. Dean, 8-519.

But this section is only applicable to an appeal by the party who recovers the judgment before the justice: Ibid.; Howder v. Overholser, 48-365.

Where the appeal was by defendant from a judgment against him before the justice, and on the appeal plaintiff recovered on only a part of several items of demand included in the first judgment, held, that the case was a proper one for apportionment of costs: Howder v. Overholser, 48-365.

The fact that judgment on appeal by the party recovering judgment before the justice is only enough greater in amount than that recovered before the justice to cover accrued interest thereon will not render the judgment more favorable to appellant in such sense as to entitle him to recover costs: Trair v. Filkins, 10-563.

4842. When appellee to pay. 3593. If the judgment below is against the appellant, he may proffer to pay a certain amount, with costs, and if the final amount recovered be less favorable to the appellee than such proffer, he shall pay costs of appeal. [R., § 3935; C., '51, § 2246.]

If the party against whom judgment is rendered by the justice appeals therefrom, and desires to avoid the costs of appeal in the event that appellee recovers on appeal a less amount, he (appellant) must proffer to pay a certain sum, and accrued costs, and then, if the judgment for appellee on appeal is for less than the amount proffered, the costs of the appeal will fall upon appellee: Best v. Dean, 8-519.

The proffer must be of a certain amount with costs; otherwise the appellee, if he recover judgment on appeal, is entitled to judgment for the entire costs, although he did not recover more than the amount proffered: Powell v. Western Stage Co., 2-50.

These provisions do not restrict the statutory provisions as to an offer to contest judgment (§ 4109): Watts v. Lamberston, 39-273.

4843. Sureties. 3594. Any judgment in the circuit [district] court against the appellant shall be entered up against him and his sureties jointly. [R., § 3936; C., '51, § 2347.]

Judgment against sureties on the appeal bond should be limited to the amount of the bond: Perry v. Denson, 1 G. Cr., 467.

Although it is error in the court to enter up judgment against the appellant for a greater sum than the penalty of the bond, yet such a judgment would not be void for want of jurisdiction: Freeman v. Hart, 61-525.

If the appeal is dismissed because the amount in controversy is insufficient to warrant an appeal, judgment may be rendered against appellant and the sureties on the bond for the amount of the judgment in the court below and the costs of appeal: Pescott v. Bacon, 91-702.

Surety may appeal: A surety against whom judgment is rendered on the appeal bond has such an interest in the judgment that if erroneous he may move for its correction or for a new trial, or may appeal therefrom: Freeman v. Hart, 61-525.

4844. Damages. 3595. If an appeal is taken for delay, the circuit [district] court shall award such damages, not exceeding ten per cent. on the amount of the judgment below, as may seem right. [R., § 3937; C., '51, § 2348.]

4845. Appeal from default. 3596. If the appeal is taken from a judgment by default, the defendant may file in the circuit [district] court, and the plaintiff reply thereto, any pleadings necessary to properly set forth any defense he may have to the action. In such case, the costs of the trial before the justice shall be taxed to the defendant.

This provision extends to defaults for want of appearance as well as to defaults for failure to plead: McFarland v. Lowry, 40-467.

It is the absolute right of the party appealing from a judgment against him by default to file an answer on appeal, and in the absence of any rule or special order of court with reference to the time for filing such pleading, he may do so at any time before the case is reached for trial: Harty v. Des Moines & M. R. Co., 54-327.

But before the adoption of this section the defendant could not, in such cases, as matter of right, file an answer interposing a defense without showing some reason or excuse for not having answered before the justice: Rudick v. Vail, 7-44; Crane v. Fulton, 10-457; Leftwick v. Thornton, 18-56.

As to filing new pleadings in other cases, see notes to § 4839.

In case of an appeal by a defendant from a judgment against him by default before the justice, if defendant does not appear nor interpose a defense in the court to which the appeal is taken, the judgment may be affirmed on plaintiff's motion: Atkins v. McCreathy, 8-214.

In such case defendant may appear and cross-examine witnesses in the same manner as in case of default in ordinary cases in such court. But if he makes no appearance the judgment of the justice may be affirmed without again introducing the evidence: Harty v. Des Moines & M. R. Co., 54-327.

In the absence of any general rule of court to the contrary, such cases cannot be disposed of, even on failure of the party appealing to appear, until reached for trial on the regular call of the docket: Ibid.

Where defendant in default in the justice court does not offer to file any answer until after the case is reached for trial, the court may properly refuse to allow such answer to be filed, the provisions of § 3842 being applicable: McDowell v. Booth, 72-141.

On appearance without interposing a defense the defendant in default before the justice may contest the amount of plaintiff's recovery, but not his right to recover: Leftwich v. Thornton, 18-56.

WRITS OF ERROR.

4846. When allowed. 3597. Any person aggrieved by an erroneous decision in a matter of law, or other illegality in the proceedings of a justice of the peace, may remove the same, or so much thereof as is necessary, into the circuit [district] court for correction. [R., § 3938; C., '51, § 2349.]

Decisions of justices upon matters of law are reviewable upon writ of error; and where (the decision of the justice is final and does not affect the right of the plaintiff to recover in another action, but is upon a question affecting the jurisdiction of the justice, the capacity of the parties to sue or be sued, etc., is to be viewed on writ of error and not upon appeal: Belding v. Torrence, 39-516.

This is a proper remedy where a justice errs by refusing to take jurisdiction: Ibid.

Or where he improperly takes jurisdiction, or renders judgment by default: Craine v. Fulton, 10-457.

Error of the justice in overruling a demurrer should be taken advantage of by writ of error. It would be waived by appeal: Leftwich v. Thornton, 18-56.

The action of the justice in rejecting or recommitting an award, or refusing to do so, may be reviewed by writ of error: Whitis v. Culver, 25-30.

Where the right of plaintiff to exemplary damages was not raised by motion or demurrer, but the case was submitted to the jury, held, that the defendant could not, by writ of error, call in question the judgment entered by the justice on the verdict of the jury, on the ground that it allowed exemplary damages: Atkinson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 70-68.

As to when appeal is the proper remedy, see § 4824 and notes.

A writ of error brings up for review only such questions as were raised in the justice's court. The question of the jurisdiction of the justice not being raised in that court cannot be raised on an appeal to the supreme court: Edwards v. Cosgro, 71-296.

The fact that the party recovering the judgment files a transcript thereof in the clerk's office does not prevent the judgment being reviewed by writ of error: Wilson v. Robinson, 61-257.

There is no provision for writ of error from a justice in criminal cases. Appeal is the only method of review: See § 6095 and notes.

4847. Affidavit. 3598. The basis of the proceedings is an affidavit filed in the office of the clerk, setting forth the errors complained of, and must be filed in the same time, and the notice must be the same as in case of appeal. [R., § 3939; C., '51, § 2350.]

Affidavit for the writ: The affidavit may be made by the attorney of the party asking the writ, when he shows himself sufficiently acquainted with the facts to make the necessary statements: Dixon v. Brophrey, 29-460.

The affidavit need not show that the party resisted the decision of the justice of which he complains, or excepted thereto, or that he applied to the justice to correct it: Ibid.

The affidavit required to obtain a writ of error must be signed by the affiant. It is not sufficient that it be sworn to without signing: Crenshaw v. Taylor, 70-386.

4848. Writ. 3599. The clerk shall thereupon issue an order commanding the justice to certify the record and proceedings so far as they relate to the facts stated in the affidavit. [R., § 3940; C., '51, § 2351.]

Where it does not appear to whom the writ was directed it will be presumed it was directed to the proper justice if he makes return thereto: Sayles v. Delukrey, 64-109.

A mere failure to issue the writ of error held

4849. Copy served; return. 3600. A copy of the affidavit shall accompany the order, and be served upon the justice, who shall, with the least practicable delay, make the return required. [R., § 3941; C., '51, § 2352.]

not to render subsequent proceedings erroneous, the return having been properly made by the justice, in answer to the affidavit for the writ: Rhodes v. De Bow, 5-260.

Dismissal for insufficiency of affidavit: Where the statements of error made in the affidavit are insufficient and do not show error, the proceeding may be dismissed on motion before the hearing of the case: Elliott v. Mitchell, 3 G. Gr., 237.

Notice: A proceeding by writ of error without notice to the appellee cannot be entertained: Sprote v. Marshall, 4 G. Gr., 344.

The hearing is upon the return, and not the affidavit: See notes to § 4849.

The justice should not only certify matters appearing of record by the entries upon his docket, or a bill of exceptions, but any other proceeding stated in the affidavit for the writ, and may be required to certify as to objections made to evidence, and as to the evidence received, so far as it is within his recollection, although not preserved by bill of exceptions; but this is only for the purpose of enabling the court to determine as to the correctness of rulings upon objections to evidence, etc., and not for the purpose of trying again questions of fact, which can only be done on appeal: Miller v. O'Neal, 9-446.

4850. Proceedings stayed. 3601. All proceedings in the justice court subsequent to judgment, may be stayed by a bond, entered into like that required in cases of appeals, and on which judgment shall be entered against the principal and surety in like manner and under like circumstances. [R., § 3942; C., '51, § 2353.]

While no bond is required in case of the prosecution of a writ of error, yet if one is not given the judgment of the justice may be enforced notwithstanding the writ of error, and even though a judgment in the circuit court on the writ of error is superseded by a

It is upon the return of the justice, and not upon the affidavit, that the question of error is to be determined: Stone v. Murphy, 2-35; Lane v. Goldsmith, 23-240.

If the return of the justice does not show the error complained of, the affidavit on which the writ is procured amounts to nothing for that purpose: Vance v. Kirfman, 20-13.

The justice of the peace is only required to show in his return such matters as are rendered necessary by the affidavit for the writ: Spiesberger v. Thomas, 59-606.

bond given on appeal to the supreme court: Thomas v. Nicklas, 58-49; Fellersells v. Allen, 56-717.

Failure to file supersedeas bond does not prevent writ of error: Wilson v. Robinson, 61-357.

4851. Amended return. 3602. The circuit [district] court may compel an amended return when the first is not full and complete. [R., § 3943; C., '51, § 2354.]

Where the facts are reasonably apparent from the return, it is not error to refuse to order a further return to correct a mere clerical error: Olin v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 61-250.

4852. Judgment. 3603. The circuit [district] court may render final judgment, or it may remand the cause to the justice for a new trial, or such further proceedings as shall be deemed proper, and may prescribe the notice necessary to bring the parties again before the justice. [R., § 3944; C., '51, § 2355.]

The question to be determined is whether the justice erred in the particular decision complained of in the affidavit for the writ of error: Hays v. Gorby, 3-203; State v. Nichols, 5-413.

The court will not, on the writ of error, review the findings of the justice as to questions of fact. Appeal is the proper remedy: Taylor v. Rockwell, 10-530; State v. Roney, 37-30.

And this is true although all the evidence before the justice is set out in a bill of exceptions: Lane v. Goldsmith, 23-240.

The court can render final judgment only where no trial is necessary. If there must be a new trial, the case should be sent back to the justice. The court has no authority to retain and try the case itself: Swan v. Bournes, 47-501.

On a writ of error from a judgment of a justice of the peace upon a verdict which did not properly specify the amount of recovery, held, that upon determination that the judgment was erroneous, the cause should have been remanded to the justice and the court could not render judgment: Bartle v. Plane, 68-227.

There may be cases where the final judgment should be rendered in the district court after the determination of the writ of error: Logan v. Samsel, 74-87.

Under statutory provisions as to appeals similar to those now regulating writs of error, held, that upon reversal of the action of the justice it was not proper to order a new trial in the court in which the appeal was decided: Davis v. Curtis, 2 G. Gr., 575.

Though the justice may not have had jurisdiction, yet upon the removal to the circuit court, that court obtains jurisdiction, and its judgment is not void, although erroneous: Finch v. Hollinger, 47-173, 176.

The judgment of a justice should not be reversed on writ of error for any error which might have been corrected by the justice on motion, unless such motion is made and overruled: Leonard v. Hallem, 17-564; Smith v. Parker, 28-359.

If, after the application for and service of the writ, but before the hearing, the opposite party causes the judgment to be modified so as to correct the error, no objection to such modification being made, the judgment should not be reversed on the hearing, although the party making the modification might be required to pay the costs of the proceeding by writ of error: Rahn v. Greer, 37-627.

4853. Restitution. 3604. If the circuit [district] court render a final judgment, reversing the judgment of the justice of the peace after such judgment has been collected in whole or in part, it may award restitution with interest and issue execution accordingly, or it may remand the cause to the justice for this purpose. [R., § 3945; C., '51, § 2356.]

RECOVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY — ATTACHMENT.

4854. Action to recover personal property. 3605. The proceedings to gain possession of personal property wrongfully withheld, will be the same as are prescribed in such cases in the circuit [district] court, except as modified in this chapter. [R., § 3946; C., '51, § 2357.]

4855. Attachments. 3606. Attachments are not allowable in justices' courts, if the sum claimed is less than five dollars. And if more is claimed and less recovered, the plaintiff shall pay all the costs of the proceedings so far as they relate to the attachment. [R., § 3947; C., '51, § 2358.]

For less than five dollars: Although attachments are not allowable in justice courts if the sum claimed is less than five dollars, yet in such an action the judgment may be for less than five dollars, and the fact that it is will not necessarily render the attaching plaintiff liable on his bond: Trachten. The Call, 2 G. Gr., 214.

4856. Garnishee. 3607. The constable has the same power to administer an oath to the garnishee and to take his answer, as is given to the sheriff in cases of attachment in the circuit [district] court. [R., § 3948; C., '51, § 2360.]

4857. Appearance. 3608. Garnishees may be required to appear and answer at the time fixed for the appearance of the parties to the action. [R., § 3949; C., '51, § 2361.]

The justice having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the defendant may render judgment against a garnishee who has answered, although he be a resident of another county: Smith v. Dickson, 58-44. A justice acquires no jurisdiction in a garnishment proceeding by reason of service of notice of garnishment in another county: Gage v. Maschneyer, 72-690.

4858. Against absentees. 3609. When an attachment or order for the delivery of property has been issued by any justice of the peace in any action, and it shall be found that the defendant is absent so that personal service cannot be had, the justice, upon the return day, unless the defendant appear, shall make an order fixing the day for the trial, not less than sixty days thereafter and requiring notice to be given by any constable as provided in the next section. [R., § 3950.]

4859. Notice by posting. 3610. Upon such order being made, at least sixty days' notice of the pendency of such action shall be given by posting up written or printed notices in three public places in the township where the action was commenced, and such notices shall have the effect of a service by publication in the circuit [district] court, and the justice shall proceed to hear the cause upon the day specified for that purpose; but no bond shall be required of the plaintiff after judgment as may be in the circuit [district] court. [R., § 3951.]

That the notice so posted does not state the township in which the action is pending will not invalidate the judgment: Johnson v. Dodge, 19-106.

FORCIBLE ENTRY OR DETENTION OF REAL PROPERTY.

4860. Action for. 3611. A summary remedy for forcible entry or detention of real property is allowable:

1. Where the defendant has by force, or intimidation, or fraud, or stealth, entered upon the prior actual possession of another in real property, and detains the same;
2. Where a lessee holds over after the termination, or contrary to the terms of his lease;

3. Where the defendant continues in possession after a sale by foreclosure of a mortgage, or on execution, unless he claims by a title paramount to the lien by virtue of which the sale was made, or by title derived from the purchaser at the sale, in either of which cases, such title shall be clearly and concisely set forth in the defendant's pleading [R, § 3952; C., '51, § 2362. 9 G. A., ch 174, § 7]

4861. Rent in arrear. 3612 The mere non-payment of rent by the time stipulated in the lease does not enable a plaintiff to resort to this action unless expressly so stipulated in the lease [R, § 3953, C., '51, § 2363]

4862. Who may bring. 3613 The legal representative of a person who might have been plaintiff if alive, may bring this suit after his death [R, § 3954, C., '51, § 2364.]

4863. Notice to quit. 3614 Before suit can be brought in any except the first of the above classes, three days notice to quit must be given to the defendant in writing [R, § 3955, C., '51, § 2365]

Under peculiar facts, held, that defendant went into possession as assignee of an unexpired lease and not by force and was therefore entitled to the expiration of the lease, entitled to three days notice to quit Gifford v King 54-525

Proof of service of such notice by affidavit of a person not an officer, in the manner provided for service of original notices by private persons is not sufficient to establish the notice to be received in evidence without further proof. The notice is not one in an action, but one which forms the basis of a private action is the fact of possession alone and not the right to possession. A person may render himself liable to this action by entering on his own premises by force from or stealth, even when he has the right to immediate possession Stephens v McCoy 26 639, Emster v Bennett 31-15

4865 Where brought. 3616 The proceedings may be had before a justice of the peace of the township where the premises are situated, or at or it and must be proved as any other matter in law Hollingsworth v Sullivan 24 0

The fact that, instead of serving the three days notice to quit service is made on three days notice to terminate a tenancy will be sufficient by § 190, the act being one in which no such thirty days notice is necessary, will not render the proceedings under such notice after the expiration of thirty days from the service thereof, void and without jurisdiction but will be a irregularity only Shuver v Klinckenberg, 67-344

there is no justice therein able or qualified to act, they may be brought before some justice in any adjoining township. They shall be governed by the same rules as other cases before justices of the peace except as herein modified. [R., § 3957; C., '51, § 2367.]

Jurisdiction of the action: A justice of the peace alone has original jurisdiction in such proceedings, and therefore, when an appeal is taken from his judgment, the appellate court should try the case as made before the justice and not allow it to be changed and entirely new issues made: Dicks v. Hatch, 10-380.

The district court can acquire no jurisdiction in such cases, not even by stipulation of the parties: Easton v. Fleming, 51-305.

The allowance on appeal of an amendment to the petition more particularly describing the property, but not in any way changing the issue, held not ground for reversal: Kuhn v. Kuhn, 70-682.

4866. Time for appearance. 3617. The time for appearance and pleading must not be less than two, nor more than six days from the time the notice is served on the defendant. [R., § 3958; C., '51, § 2368.]

The fact that the notice is served nine days before the time fixed for appearance instead of two to six days as here provided will not deprive the court of jurisdiction nor render its proceedings void. The notice will be defective only: Shuver v. Klinkenberg, 67-544.

4867. Adjournment. 3618. No adjournment shall be made for more than ten days, nor to any other place except by consent of parties. [R., § 3959; C., '51, § 2369.]

4868. Judgment. 3619. If the defendant is found guilty, judgment shall be entered that he be removed from the premises, and that the plaintiff be put in possession thereof, and an order of removal shall issue accordingly, to which shall be added a clause commanding the officer to levy the costs as in ordinary cases. [R., § 3960; C., '51, § 2370.]

4869. Title not investigated. 3620. The question of title cannot be investigated in this action. And nothing herein contained prevents a party from suing for a trespass, or from testing the right of property in any other manner. [R., § 3961; C., '51, § 2371.]

The party who has been in possession cannot make use of such action instead of an action of right in order to have the right of possession determined: Settle v. Henson, Mor., 111.

Where defendant sets up a paramount title, or the question of title is otherwise involved, the action cannot be maintained: Bosworth v. Farrenholtz, 4 G. Gr., 440. But see §§ 4784-5.

Where the petition stated the title of plaintiff for the purpose of showing that defendant was a tenant holding over after the termination of a tenancy at will, held, that it did not thereby appear that title was involved: Jordan v. Walker, 52-647.

Where defendant denied plaintiff's title, and averred title in himself, such answer not being in any way responsive to the petition, and the averment being a mere conclusion of law, held, that no question of title was thereby raised: Jordan v. Walker, 56-686.

Where plaintiff alleged entry by defendant by fraud and stealth, and defendant, denying entry by fraud and stealth, alleged that he had entered and was in possession with permission of plaintiff under a contract of purchase, held, that this allegation did not raise a question of title, but was in effect a mere denial of plaintiff's allegations: Oleson v. Hendrickson, 12-222.

Proof of title is not admissible for the purpose of showing constructive possession in the absence of other evidence of possession: Stephens v. McCloy, 36-659.

See, also, § 4784.

4870. Bar. 3621. Thirty days' peaceable and uninterrupted possession with the knowledge of the plaintiff after the cause of action accrued, is a bar to this proceeding. [R., § 3962; C., '51, § 2372.]

Neither the good faith with which the defendant went into possession, nor the fact that he made improvements on the property, are material under this section, nor sufficient to constitute a defense in the absence of the kind and length of possession contemplated: Fultz v. Black, 3-569.

4871. No joinder. 3622. An action of this kind cannot be brought in connection with any other, nor can it be made the subject of counter-claim. [R., § 3963; C., '51, § 2373.]

4872. Order for removal. 3623. The order for removal can be executed only in the day-time. [R., § 3964; C., '51, § 2374.]

4873. Effect of appeal or writ of error. 15 G. A., ch. 41. An appeal or writ of error, taken in the usual way, if the proper security is given, suspends the execution for costs, and may, with the consent of the plaintiff, prevent the warrant of removal from being executed, but not otherwise. [R., § 3965; C., '51, § 2375.]

Issuance and execution of an order of removal, after judgment for plaintiff in such an action, should not be enjoined on the averment that defendant intends to appeal. Whether after appeal is taken he might have such injunction upon a showing that he will sustain irreparable injury, quære: Curd v. Farrar, 47-504.

4874. Restitution. 3624. The circuit [district] court, on the trial of the appeal, may issue an order of removal or restitution as the case may require. [R., § 3966; C., '51, § 2376.]

The fact that plaintiff has prosecuted to judgment a second action of forcible entry and detainer constitutes a waiver of his right to appeal in a former action for the same purpose in which he has been defeated: Liebuck v. Stahle, 66-749.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

4876. Or county auditor. 3626. If his office becomes vacant by death, removal from the township, or otherwise, before his successor is elected, the said docket and papers shall be placed in the hands of the county auditor, to be by him turned over to the successor of the justice when elected and qualified. [R., § 3968; C., '51, § 2378.]

4877. Successor may issue execution. 3627. The justice with whom the docket of his predecessor is thus deposited, may issue execution on or give a transcript of any judgment there entered, in the same manner and with like effect as the justice who rendered the judgment might have done; and in case of the death, absence, or inability to act of any justice, or in case of the vacation of the office of any justice from any cause, then in such case, execution may be issued from the docket of said justice or transcript given therefrom, by any other justice in said township with like effect as might have been done by the justice who rendered the judgment. [R., § 3969; C., '51, § 2379; 13 G. A., ch. 188.]

The certificate of an ex-justice in relation to proceedings had before him while in office is not entitled to legal consideration: Brown v. Scott, 2 G. Gr., 454.

4878. Successor; how determined. 3628. When two or more justices are equally entitled to be deemed the successor in office of any justice as aforesaid, the county auditor shall determine by lot which is the successor, and certify accordingly; such certificate shall be in duplicate, one copy of which shall be filed in the office of such auditor, and the other given to such successor. [R., §§ 3970-1; C., '51, §§ 2380-1.]

4879. Interchange. 3629. In case of sickness or other disability, or necessary absence of a justice at the time fixed for a trial of a cause or other proceeding, any other justice of the township may, at his request, attend and transact the business for him without any transfer to another office. The entries shall be made in the docket of the justice at whose office the business is transacted, and the same effect shall be given to the proceedings as though no such interchanging of official service had taken place. [R., § 3972; C., '51, § 2382.]

Whether another justice of the county can act at the request of the one before whom the suit is brought, but who, by reason of relations with one of the parties, deems that it would be improper for him to try the case, doubted: Ely v. Dillon, 21-47.

4880. Special constables. 3630. Any justice of the peace may, in writing, specially depute any person of suitable age to perform any particular duty properly devolving upon a constable, and for that particular purpose he shall be subject to the same obligations and receive the same fees. If such person be appointed to serve an attachment, execution, or order, for the delivery of property, he shall, before levying upon such property, execute a bond to the state of Iowa in a penal sum of not less than two hundred dollars, to be fixed by the justice, with one or more freeholders as sureties, to be approved by and filed with the justice making the appointment, and the usual official oath shall be indorsed thereon and signed. For any breach of such bond, any person injured thereby may bring suit thereon in his own name, and recover the same damages as upon a constable's bond in like cases. [R., § 3973; 9 G. A., ch. 174, § 8.]

A special constable appointed under this section is not a peace officer within the meaning of § 5491. The appointment may be to perform a particular duty, but it cannot be general, as to assist peace officers to seize liquor: Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

4881. No process. 3631. No process can issue from a justice's court into another county, except when specially authorized. [R., § 3974; C., '51, § 2384.]

"Process," as here used, does not include the county in some cases: Klingel v. Fahner, original notices, which may be served out of 42-166.

4882. Sheriff and constable. 3632. The constable is the proper executive officer in a justice's court, but the sheriff may perform any of the duties required of him. The powers and duties of the sheriff in relation to the business of the circuit [district] court, so far as the same are applicable and not modified by statute, devolve upon the constable in relation to the justice's court. [R., § 3975; C., '51, § 2385.]

4883. Justice his own clerk. 3633. The justice may be regarded as his own clerk and perform the duty of both judge and clerk. [R., § 3976; C., '51, § 2386.]

4884. Successor to renew execution. 3634. When the term of office of a justice of the peace for any cause expires, his successor may issue execution, or renew execution in the same manner and under the same circumstances as the former justice might have done if his term of office had not expired. [R., § 3977; C., '51, § 2387.]

4885. Board of supervisors furnish docket. 3635. The board of supervisors of each county shall furnish to each justice of the peace of such county, a well-bound blank record book of not less than four quires, with index, suitable for a docket, upon the certificate of such justice that the same is necessary for the business of the office. [11 G. A., ch. 53.]

TITLE XXII.

OF EVIDENCE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF EVIDENCE.

4386. Who competent; defendant in criminal case. 3636; 17 G. A., ch. 168, § 1. Every human being of sufficient capacity to understand the obligation of an oath, is a competent witness in all cases, both civil and criminal, except as herein otherwise declared. Defendants in all criminal proceedings shall be competent witnesses in their own behalf, but cannot be called as witnesses by the state; and should a defendant not elect to become a witness, that fact shall not have any weight against him on the trial, nor shall the attorney or attorneys for the state during the trial, refer to the fact that the defendant did not testify in his own behalf; and should he do so, such attorney or attorneys will be guilty of a misdemeanor, and defendant shall for that cause alone be entitled to a new trial. [R., § 3978; C., '51, § 2388.]

This section, in so far as it limits witnesses to human beings "of sufficient capacity to understand the obligation of an oath," is not in conflict with Const., art. 1, § 4, such qualification being assumed therein: and where a little girl of less than nine years of age was not allowed to testify, it not appearing what other inquiry was made as to her capacity, the supreme court refused to interfere: Kilburn v. Mullen, 22-498.

A person of sufficient capacity to understand the obligation of an oath is a competent witness in any case, unless he is included in some of the exceptions in the statute: State v. Reinsberger, 71-746.

As to defendant in a criminal prosecution being a witness, see § 5954.

As to reference by prosecuting attorney to defendant's failure to testify being ground for new trial, see § 5874.

4387. Credibility. 3637. Facts which have heretofore caused the exclusion of testimony, may still be shown for the purpose of lessening its credibility. [R., § 3979; C., '51, § 2389.]

As affected by religious belief: Lack of belief in God, or future conscious existence, does not render a witness incompetent, nor does it render incompetent a party's dying declaration; but proof of such fact is admissible to lessen the credibility of his testimony or of such declaration: State v. Elliott, 45-486.

The fact that a witness does not believe in a God, and that He will reward or punish us according to our deserts, may be shown as affecting the credibility of the witness, but it is erroneous to confine the evidence to a belief in future rewards and punishments: Searey v. Miller, 57-613.

The facts as to belief are not to be brought out by cross-examination, but by proof of declarations, etc.: Ibid.

A witness cannot be required to testify to his want of belief in any religious tenet nor to divulge his opinions on matters of religious faith for the purpose of affecting his credibility by showing that he does not believe in a future conscious state of existence: Dedric v. Hopson, 62-562.

As affected by mental condition: The credibility of a witness may be impeached by showing an abnormal condition of the mind, caused by disease or habits which impair the memory: Alleman v. Stejnp, 52-626.

The fact that a witness was under the influence of liquor at the time of the occurrence with reference to which he testifies will not destroy the credibility of his testimony with reference thereto, although it will undoubtedly impair it, and if he is corroborated as to the occurrences, or his recollection appears distinct and clear, he may be entitled to belief: State v. Castello, 62-401.

Suppression of facts: Failure of a party as a witness to give a full and fair statement of matters involved in the issues of the case may be regarded as affecting the credibility of his testimony. Intentional suppression of facts is to be regarded in the same light as false statement of facts of like bearing: Lee v. Cresco, 47-499.

Interest: See notes to next section.

Credibility as affected by interest in criminal cases, see notes to § 5954.

4888. Interest. 3638. No person offered as a witness in any action or proceeding in any court, or before any officer acting judicially, shall be excluded by reason of his interest in the event of the action or proceeding, or because he is a party thereto, except as provided in this chapter. [R., § 3980.]

Under our statute the interest of a witness does not disqualify him, but can only be shown for the purpose of lessening his credibility, but the rules relating to the admissibility of evidence showing the interest of the witness are the same as at common law: Erickson v. Bell, 53-627.

Therefore, held, in accordance with the rule of the common law, that testimony to establish declarations of a witness, to the effect that he is interested in the event of the suit, is not admissible: Ibid.

Interest of a witness in behalf of one of the parties should be considered as affecting his credibility and for no other purpose: Holloway v. Griffith, 32-409.

The jury may properly be instructed to consider the interest of a witness, his hopes and fears, etc.; and in an action against a railway, held, that such instruction was not erroneous as tending to reflect upon the credibility of railroad employees: Hatfield v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61-434.

Held proper on cross-examination to show that the witness was a bondsman for the party by whom he was called, that fact being one proper to be considered by the jury in determining what weight and credit ought to be given to his testimony: State v. Calkins, 73-128.

4889. When one party is deceased. 3639. No party to any action or proceeding, nor any person interested in the event thereof, nor any person from, through, or under whom any such party or interested person derives any interest or title by assignment or otherwise, and no husband or wife of any said party or person, shall be examined as a witness in regard to any personal transaction or communication between such witness and a person at the commencement of such examination, deceased, insane, or lunatic; against the executor, administrator, heir-at-law, next of kin, assignee, legatee, devisee, or survivor of such deceased person, or the assignee or guardian of such insane person or lunatic. But this prohibition shall not extend to any transaction or communication as to which any such executor, administrator, heir-at-law, next of kin, assignee, legatee, devisee, survivor, or guardian, shall be examined on his own behalf, or as to which the testimony of such deceased or insane person or lunatic shall be given in evidence. [R., § 3982.]

Constitutionality: This section is not unconstitutional as in violation of the provision of Const., art. 1, § 4, with relation to competency of witnesses. Under the constitutional provision it is still competent for the legislature to declare that interest in the event of a suit shall or shall not disqualify the witness: Karney v. Paisley, 13-89; Donnell v. Braden, 70-551.

To what actions the provision is applicable: The disqualification provided for in this section is not limited to actions brought by an executor, assignee or guardian, but applies also in actions against such parties. It extends, however, only to cases where the witness is examined as against such executor, assignee or guardian, and not to cases where he is examined by such party: Leasman v. Nicholson, 59-259.

This section is applicable to a controversy between the heirs of deceased: Neas v. Neas, 61-641.

Where an administrator, though a party, was not a necessary party, and the suit was dismissed as to him, held, that the testimony of plaintiff as to a personal transaction between himself and decedent was competent: Campbell v. Mayes, 38-9.

The section is not applicable in an action against an administrator de bonis non where the transaction as to which the witness is called to testify was with a prior administrator since deceased: Dunne v. Deery, 40-251.

In a controversy between creditors as to which was entitled to property in the hands of an administrator, who was joined as a party defendant, held, that the case was not one in which such administrator was a party, so as to prevent one of the creditors who was a party to the suit from testifying as to transactions with decedent: Gordon v. Kennedy, 36-167.

Who excluded as parties: This section excludes as to certain matters the testimony, first, of parties to the action, and, secondly, of persons interested therein: that a party is shown not to have any interest in the matter will not render him competent: Williams v. Barrett, 52-637.

The testimony of a party to an action brought by an heir or administrator and relating to a personal communication between himself and deceased is not competent, although such party has no interest in common with the other defendants against such heir or administrator: Burton v. Baldwin, 61-283.

Where one of the parties defendant in an action by an administrator had entered into a stipulation for judgment against him to a particular amount, held, that he was no longer a party to the action in such sense as to be disqualified from testifying under the section, although judgment had not yet been formally rendered: Couger v. Bean, 58-321.

What interests sufficient to disqualify: The interest of an administrator no longer disqualifies him from testifying in an action to which he is a party. But if the adverse party is an executor, so as to bring the case within the statutory provision heretofore given, the administrator cannot testify: Schmid v. Kreismer, 31-479.

The interest which disqualifies must be a legal certain and immediate interest. If it be a doubtful one, the objection goes to the credibility of the witness: Birge v. Rhinehart, 36-369.

The true test of such interest is that the witness will either gain or lose by the direct, legal operation and effect of the judgment, or that the record will be legal evidence for or against him in some other action. If the interest is of a doubtful nature, the objection goes to the credit of the witness, and not to his competency: Wormley v. Hamburg, 40-22.

The interest contemplated as sufficient to exclude a witness is such as would, at common law, disqualify him. Where the witness has equal interest on both sides, he will not be disqualified: Goddard v. Leffingwell, 43-249.

The interest sufficient to disqualify must be present, certain and vested. It will not be sufficient that at a prior time the witness might have been the holder of an equitable interest in the property in controversy: Zerbe v. Reigart, 42-229.

In an action by an administrator against a person to recover property of the estate wrongfully appropriated, an heir of decedent who would be entitled to a distributive share of the estate not required for the payment of debts is an interested witness unless it appears that the estate is insolvent: Ivers v. Ivers, 61-721.

In such case a mere disclaimer by the witness of any interest in the estate will not render him competent, as such disclaimer will not operate to release his interest: Ibid.

In an action by the widow and administratrix of a deceased person to recover from the heirs property claimed to belong to the estate, testimony of the heirs as to a gift to them of the property by deceased during his life-time is not admissible: Samson v. Samson, 67-253.

In such case, held, that the husband of one of the heirs, who was present during the transaction, and, at his wife's request, joined with her in an undertaking to make payments to her father in consideration of the property received, was not a competent witness as to the transaction: Ibid.

But the wife of one of the heirs, who was present at the time of the transaction with such heir, but was not a party to such transaction, held a competent witness: Ibid.

In an action by a person claiming as heir against defendants claiming title to property of deceased through a sheriff's sale, held, that one of such defendants was not a competent witness as to a personal transaction with deceased tending to show an abandonment of the homestead right in the property sold: Baker v. Jamison, 73-698.

In an action by a corporation against the executor of the decedent, held, that a stockholder of plaintiff could not be allowed to testify as to a contract between plaintiff and decedent: First Nat. Bank v. Owen, 52-107.

The statute is not to be construed as applicable only to witnesses who are interested in favor of the party introducing them: Donnell v. Braden, 70-551.

A person whose liabilities would not be affected by the result of the action, held not incompetent to testify under this section: Fuller v. Lendrum, 58-353.

Under a corresponding provision (Rev., § 3982), which excluded the evidence of the adverse party in a suit by or against an executor, as to facts transpiring before decedent's death, held, that the payee of the note in controversy, who had transferred it to the plaintiff as a good faith purchaser before maturity, had no interest in an action brought thereon against the administrator of the maker of the note such as to disqualify him from testifying: Burroughs v. McLain, 37-189.

The facts in a particular case held not to show any interest on the part of a witness disqualifying him to testify as to admissions made to him by deceased: Bixley v. Wormley, 44-347.

What deemed personal transactions: It is only as to personal transactions between himself and deceased that a party is prohibited from testifying: Sypher v. Savery, 39-258, 264; Haverly v. Alcott, 57-171.

The payment of a note to the deceased is a personal transaction within the meaning of this section: Williams v. Brown, 45-102. So is the delivery of a deed from witness to decedent: Wood v. Broliar, 40-591.

The evidence of the wife of a party to the note to prove that he executed the note as surety would be inadmissible: Auchampaugh v. Schmidt, 72-656.

In an action against an administrator a note claimed to have been given by decedent to plaintiff for labor performed by plaintiff's wife for deceased, held, that testimony of the wife respecting the amount of labor performed by her for deceased was not admissible: Ashworth v. Grubbs, 47-353.

Where it is sought to recover against an administrator for work done, etc., with the knowledge or assent of deceased, in such way as to raise an implied promise, the party seeking to recover cannot give evidence of the work done: Peck v. McKean, 45-18; Smith v. Johnson, 45-308; Wilson v. Wilson, 52-44.

Where a child seeks to recover compensation from the estate of a deceased parent for services rendered under express agreement for compensation, such child cannot be allowed to give evidence as to the kind or character of the work done, as such evidence would tend to prove a contract between herself and parent: Cowan v. Musgrave, 73-384.

In an action by the wife of deceased upon a note executed to her in a settlement between deceased and defendant, held, that evidence of defendant as to what occurred at the time of such settlement was not admissible: Wilcox v. Jackson, 51-208.

Where plaintiff proposed to prove upon his own testimony, in an action against an administrator for services alleged to have been rendered decedent under contract, that he had never received payment for such services, held, that the evidence was properly rejected: Van Sandt v. Cramer, 60-424.

In a suit against the wife in respect to the homestead for the purpose of enforcing a claim under a conveyance of the same in which she joined with the husband, her testimony as to what was said to her by her husband at the time of the conveyance, he being since deceased, is not admissible: Palmer v. Palmer, 62-204.

Where a defendant, in an action by an executor on a note, attempted to show that such note was not the property of deceased, but of a third person, for whom deceased acted as agent, for the purpose of rendering admissible evidence by defendant of payment made to deceased on such note, held, that such evidence of payment was not to be received until defendant had satisfied the court of the relation of agency as claimed: Williams v. Brown, 45-102.

The testimony of an heir is not incompetent as to conversations which he heard between deceased and defendant: Swozey v. Collins, 40-540.

The personal transactions and communications which, under this section, may not be testified to by the wife are those had between her and the deceased personally. She is not incompetent to testify thereto if had between the deceased and her husband; therefore, held, that she might testify in regard to conversations between her husband and deceased as to which she was a mere listener: Johnson v. Johnson, 52-586.

The section does not forbid testimony as to personal transactions and communications between deceased and another person than the witness. The personal transaction or communication must be had with the witness in order to make his testimony inadmissible: Lines v. Lines, 54-600.

This section does not prevent one party to a suit testifying to a conversation between the deceased and a co-party: Smith v. James, 72-515.

In an action by an administrator, held, that defendant was not incompetent as a witness to testify as to the payment of money to a third person upon a lien as to which deceased appeared also to have made payment, the transaction being with the third person and not with deceased: Wormley v. Hamburg, 46-144.

The doing of certain acts in the presence of deceased, not depending for their value as evidence upon his presence, held not to be a personal transaction with him in such sense as to prevent the wife of the party from testifying in respect thereto: Dougherty v. Deency, 41-19.

In an action by an administrator against defendant to recover a subscription alleged to have been paid by deceased to trustees and by said trustees to defendant, held, that defendant was a competent witness as to the transaction between himself and such trustees: Sypher v. Savery, 39-258.

That a party defendant, in an action by an administrator, after stating that he signed the note sued on in his own house, was allowed to state who were in the house at that time, was held not error under this section: Conger v. Bean, 58-321.

In an action by an administrator on a note executed to intestate, the party executing the note is not precluded from testifying as to the date on which the note was actually made: Barlow v. Buckingham, 68-169.

Acts and conduct of legatees in a will towards testator do not constitute a personal transaction between legatee and testator as to which the legatees cannot be called to testify in a proceeding to probate the will: Parsons v. Parsons, 66-754.

The husband of the legatee under the will is a competent witness to testify as to the mental condition of testator. Such condition does not relate to a personal transaction within the meaning of this section: Severin v. Zack, 55-28.

It is not necessary that the testator should proclaim or state to the subscribing witnesses to his will that the instrument is his will. And it is wholly unnecessary that there should be any personal transaction between the testator and the subscribing witnesses: Bates v. Officer, 70-343.

In particular cases, held, that the facts testified to by witness did not involve a transaction between the witness and decedent within the meaning of the section: Mages v. Turley, 60-407; Miller v. Dayton, 57-425.

In rebuttal: A plaintiff coming within the terms of this section cannot testify as to personal transactions between himself and deceased, even to rebut the testimony of decedent's widow: Cumaday v. Johnson, 40-587.

Removal of prohibition by testimony of administrator, heir, etc.: The prohibition prescribed in this section does not extend to any transaction as to which the administrator has been examined in his own behalf: Ivers v. Ivers, 61-521.

In an action by a husband against the heirs of his deceased wife to set aside a conveyance made by him to her during her life-time, held, that the fact that defendant was introduced as a witness would only remove the prohibition against the testimony of plaintiff with reference to such transactions as were testified to by defendant: Wood v. Brolliar, 40-551.

The fact that the executor or administrator testifies as to one transaction does not entitle the opposite party to testify in reference to other transactions with the decedent: Luehrsmann v. Hoings, 60-708.

The contestants of a will, in an action to probate the same, having testified only as to their relations with deceased, held, that it was not competent for one of the proponents to testify as to matters proposed to be proved by him: Sisters of Visitation v. Glass, 45-154.

The statute contemplates that when the administrator or other representative of the deceased testifies as to a personal transaction and describes it, then a party may also testify in relation thereto and give his version of the transaction; but the fact that the administrator refers to a personal transaction as possible does not open the way for the admission of such testimony: In re Estate of Edwards, 58-41.

When the executor testifies in his own behalf, but not as to a personal transaction, and his testimony is not adverse to the opposite party, the fact of his being a witness does not remove the prohibition as to personal transactions: Ibid.

Where the administrator testifies as to transactions between defendant and deceased raising an implied promise or obligation on the part of defendant to pay, defendant may testify as to what the real arrangement was in relation thereto: Bailey v. Keyes, 52-90.

Where a deposition is incompetent by reason of the interest of one of the parties to the suit, and the action is afterwards dismissed as to that party, it will become competent as to the others. The common-law rule as to the competency of a witness, by which his deposition, if incompetent on account of interest at the time it was taken, will always remain incompetent, will not apply: Campbell v. Mayes, 38-9.

But if the testimony of the witness is incompetent, when taken, by reason of his being a party, it is not admissible although at the time it is offered the status of the witness has changed and he is no longer a party: Burton v. Baldwin, 61-283.

The objection under this section is not to the competency of the witness but to the competency of the testimony: Ibid.

Under previous statutory provisions (Rev., § 3982, which differed materially from the present section), the administrator of a decedent was not incompetent as a witness to testify in an action brought by him to recover from another possession of property of such decedent: Bradley v. Kavanagh, 12-273.

So in a proceeding against an estate to enforce a claim the administrator was held competent: Stiles v. Botkin's Estate, 30-60.

The widow of decedent was held not incompetent to testify in an action against the administrator of decedent to recover compensation for support furnished to such widow during the life-time of such decedent: Romans v. Hay's Adm'r, 12-370.

And therefore defendant in a replevin suit for goods taken on attachment was not placed in such a position by the death of the plaintiff in the attachment suit that he became incompetent as a witness: Bevan v. Hayden, 13-122.

Where an action was pending against a defendant, who subsequently died, and whose administrator was then substituted, held, that a deposition of plaintiff taken before defendant's death was not admissible in evidence: Quick v. Brooks, 29-484.

Also held, that the statute was not applicable to a case where the person deceased was merely a trustee and the person beneficially interested was living: Watson v. Russell, 18-79.

The fact that matters sought to be proved by a witness who is defendant in a suit brought against him as surviving partner for contribution, by the administrator of his deceased partner, are connected with transactions of the firm, and that the surviving member is a witness, cannot have effect to annul the statutory provisions with reference to such testimony: Hosmer v. Burke, 26-353.

In an action between a surviving member of a partnership and a creditor of a deceased member, held, that defendant was not incompetent to testify as to a personal transaction between him and such deceased member: Brown v. Allen, 35-306.

In an action by an assignee in bankruptcy of a surviving partner against a supposed debtor of the firm, held, that defendant was not prohibited from testifying as to personal transactions with the deceased partner: Ruddick v. Otis, 33-402.

Where in an action against an executor the only question was as to the amount of money contained in an express package which never reached the deceased, the testimony of plaintiff was competent to prove the amount of money contained in such package when deposited by him in the express office, such evidence, for the specific purpose for which it was offered, being competent from the necessity of the case: Sykes v. Bates, 26-521.

In an action against the executor of a deceased person, held, that the wife of plaintiff was not incompetent, the exclusion of the wife as a witness against her husband not having been made on the ground of interest: Wendeling v. Besser, 31-248.

Parties who were competent witnesses at common law in the cases referred to in the statutory provision are not rendered incompetent by it: Cummins v. Hull's Adm'r, 35-253.

And therefore evidence of a party to facts and circumstances relating to the loss of a paper was held receivable as preliminary proof in order to warrant secondary proof of its contents: Keech v. Cowles, 34-259.

The statutory provisions held not to operate to exclude the testimony of a party who was made a competent witness by statute, as to prove usury in a contract: Rinehart v. Buckingham, 34-409.

4890. Depositions taken conditionally. 3640. Any person may have his own deposition, or that of any other person, read and used as evidence in all cases where his evidence would be incompetent by the provisions of the preceding section, by causing such deposition to be taken, either before or after suit brought, during the life-time or sanity of the person against whom, his executor, heir, or other representative, the same is to be used; provided, such deposition shall have been taken and filed ten days prior to the death or insanity of such person. If after suit brought, such deposition may be taken in the usual manner; if before, then the same may be taken de bene esse, as provided by law.

4891. Husband and wife. 3641; 15 G. A., ch. 33. Neither the husband nor wife shall in any case be a witness against the other, except in a criminal prosecution for a crime committed one against the other, or in a civil action or proceeding one against the other; but they may in all civil and criminal cases be witnesses for each other. [R., § 3983; C., '51, § 2391.]

Where husband and wife are joint defendants, the wife may be called to testify for plaintiff. In such case she is not a witness against her husband, within the meaning of this section: Richards v. Burden, 31-305.

A wife, summoned as garnishee in an action against her husband, is not exempt from answering interrogatories touching her indebtedness to him. The subjection of such indebtedness to the payment of claims against him cannot be regarded as against his interests: Thompson v. Silvers, 59-670.

In an action against a wife to subject property conveyed to her by her husband to the payment of his debts, the husband is not a competent witness to testify, for the purpose of defeating such conveyance, that he was insolvent at the time the conveyance was made. There is no warrant for engrating upon the statute the rule that the husband may be allowed to testify against his wife if his testimony is against himself also: Stephenson v. Cook, 64-265.

The husband or wife, as the case may be, is a competent witness against the other in a prosecution for adultery: State v. Bennett, 31-24; State v. Huzen, 39-648.

In a prosecution for adultery the wife is a competent witness to prove the marriage: State v. Huzen, 39-648. Also in bigamy, which is a crime by the one against the other within the meaning of the statutory provision: State v. Sloan, 55-217; State v. Hughes, 58-165.

Statements of the wife showing the guilt of her husband of a crime with which he is charged may be proved for the purpose of impeaching her evidence in his favor, but not as independent evidence: State v. Davis, 74-578.

The wife of one of two defendants charged with the commission of a crime, who are tried separately, is a competent witness for the state as against the other defendant, she not being examined as to any communication made by her husband to her: State v. Rainsbarger, 71-746.

Under Rev., § 3983, which prohibited the husband or wife being witnesses for or against each other, except in criminal cases, held, that this was a privilege which rested with the other party to the marriage relation, and might be waived by such party under Rev., § 3986 (see last clause of § 4893), and was not intended for the benefit of the opposite party in the suit: Russ v. Steamboat War Eagle, 14-363; Blake v. Graves, 18-312 (explaining Karney v. Paisley, 13-89).

The objection that the wife was a witness against her husband before the grand jury, upon the finding of an indictment, cannot be raised for the first time after conviction upon such indictment: State v. Houston, 50-212.

Testifying for or against herself and the heirs, by a widow, after the death of the husband, is not the same as testifying for or against the husband if alive, nor is her evidence as to a conversation had between plaintiff and her husband inadmissible on the ground of confidential communications between herself and husband: Pratt v. Delavan, 17-307.

This section and the following must be read together. In order to render the testimony of a husband or wife incompetent under this section the marriage relation must exist at the time the husband or wife is offered as a witness: Parcell v. McReynolds, 71-623.

As to admissibility of evidence of wife in criminal prosecutions against her husband, and as to her credibility in such cases, see notes to § 5954.

An objection to the husband or wife, when called as a witness against the other, is an objection to the competency of such witness and should be taken at the time when the witness is sworn or it is proposed to examine such witness and not afterward. If the objection is not interposed until after the close of the examination, it will be deemed waived: Watson v. Riskamire, 45-231.

4892. Communications between husband and wife. 3642. Neither husband nor wife can be examined in any case as to any communication made by the one to the other while married, nor shall they, after the marriage relation ceases, be permitted to reveal in testimony any such communication made while the marriage subsisted. [R., § 3984; C., '51, § 2392.]

A transfer of a claim from husband to wife is not a communication within the meaning of this section: Hanks v. Van Garder, 59-179.

Exclamations made by the wife upon the killing of her son by her husband, held not communications between husband and wife within the meaning of this section: State v. Middleham, 62-150.

4893. Professional confidence. 3643. No practicing attorney, counselor, physician, surgeon, minister of the gospel, or priest of any denomination, shall be allowed in giving testimony to disclose any confidential communication properly intrusted to him in his professional capacity, and necessary and proper to enable him to discharge the functions of his office according to the usual course of practice or discipline. Such prohibition shall not apply to cases where the party in whose favor the same are made waives the rights conferred. [R., §§ 3985-6; C., '51, §§ 2393-4.]

Between physician and patient: As it may be lawful under some circumstances to produce a miscarriage, a communication by a woman to a physician in relation to such matter will be privileged in the absence of a showing that it was not for a lawful purpose: Guptill v. Verback, 58-98.

Statements by a person injured, as to the cause of the injury, made to the physician called to treat him, in response to a question by the physician as to how the injury occurred, are privileged, and cannot be disclosed by the physician to whom they were made: Raymond v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 65-152.

It would manifestly violate the spirit of the statutory provision as to privileged communications to permit a physician to disclose a communication made in his presence to his partner: Ibid.

Between attorney and client: Statements made in the presence of an attorney will not necessarily be considered as privileged communications as to which he may not testify: Shaffer v. Mink, 60-754.

Although communications between attorney and client may not be testified to by the attorney or his clerk, others in whose presence such communications are made are not forbidden nor excused from testifying as to them: State v. Sterrett, 68-76.

Previous threats against the life of a party, for whose murder defendant was on trial, made to an attorney whom defendant was consulting in regard to a civil suit against such party, held not to be a privileged communication: State v. Meuserter, 46-88.

In a garnishment proceeding against an attorney, held, that his relations to his client would not excuse him from answering to whom and under what conditions he had paid over moneys of his client sought to be reached by the garnishment: Williams v. Young, 46-140.

A communication to one supposed to be an attorney, but who was not such at the time, but was studying and was soon after admitted, held not privileged: Sample v. Frost, 10-266.

That a person to whom communications were made was an acting magistrate and usually did the business of defendant, and frequently gave him advice and counsel, held not sufficient to make a communication to such person privileged: Pierson v. Steortz, Mor., 136.

An attorney is competent to testify where it appears that he was not the attorney of the party with reference to any matters about which he testifies, and that no information respecting such matters was obtained from him through the confidential relation of attorney and client: Reinhart v. Johnson, 62-255.

A party to a suit, who is also a witness, cannot be called on to state a confidential communication made to his attorney: Barker v. Kuhn, 38-392.

4894. Public officers. 3644. A public officer cannot be examined as to communications made to him in official confidence, when the public interest would suffer by the disclosure. [R., § 3987; C., '51, § 2395.]

4895. Judge competent. 3645. The judge of the court is a competent witness for either party, and may be sworn upon the trial. But in such case it is in his discretion to order the trial to be postponed or suspended and to take place before another judge. [R., § 4005; C., '51, § 2408.]

4896. Civil liability. 3646. No witness is excused from answering a question upon the mere ground that he would be thereby subjected to a civil liability. [R., § 3988; C., '51, § 2396.]

4897. Criminating questions. 3647. But when the matter sought to be elicited would tend to render him criminally liable, or to expose him to public ignominy, he is not compelled to answer except as provided in the next section. [R., § 3989; C., '51, § 2397.]

It is not alone left to the witness to determine whether the answer would tend to criminate him. While he is not required to explain how the answer would criminate him, the court may determine whether the answer can directly or indirectly have that effect: State v. Duffy, 15-425.

Where it is apparent to the court that the answer to the question could not criminate the witness he may be compelled to answer: Richman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 532.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that the witness could not be required to answer: Printz v. Cheeney, 11-469.

Plaintiff in an action for seduction may refuse to answer as a witness whether she has had previous illicit intercourse with other men, as the matter sought to be elicited would subject her to public ignominy: Brown v. Kingsley, 38-220.

Where a witness who has taken advantage of his privilege is afterwards prosecuted, the fact that he so refused to testify cannot be given in evidence against him: State v. Bailey, 54-414.

The fact that it is the duty of a peace officer to file information for violation of liquor law known to him will not make the question whether he knows of any place where such liquors are sold criminating: Hunt v. McCalla, 20-20.

If witness waives his privilege and testifies as to matter tending to criminate him, he must testify in all respects relative to the matter material to the issue: State v. Fay, 43-651.

An employee cannot refuse to answer questions on the ground that answers thereto would tend to criminate his employer, and this is the rule also where the employer is a corporation: United States Express Co. v. Henderson, 69-40.

Where cross-interrogatories propounded under a commission to take a deposition ask the witness whether or not he has committed a crime, and remain unanswered, the party propounding them has no right to have them read, and the fact of their being unanswered brought to the attention of the jury: Slocum v. Knosby, 70-75.

4898. Previous conviction. 3648. A witness may be interrogated as to his previous conviction for a felony. But no other proof of such conviction is competent except the record thereof. [R., § 3990; C., '51, § 2398.]

It is not proper to ask a witness whether he has ever been convicted of a crime. The statute allows such question only as to previous conviction of felony: Hanners v. McClelland, 74-318

4899. Moral character. 3649. The general moral character of a witness may be proved for the purpose of testing his credibility. [R., § 3991.]

Under the common-law rule, the moral character of a witness could not be shown, but only his reputation for want of truth and veracity. The object of this section is to change this rule, and therefore the general reputation may be now shown, but not the witness' character as known to the witness, independent of his reputation: State v. Egan, 59-636.

But a question as to the general moral character of the witness in the community in which he resides is proper as calling for his general reputation: State v. Froelick, 70-213. And see State v. Hart, 67-142.

A man's reputation for truth and veracity is what is said of him in the community in which he lives: Dance v. McBride, 43-624.

Evidence as to the reputation of witness "among the business men with whom he deals" is inadmissible: Bays v. Herring, 51-286.

It is competent for a witness, whose reputation for general morality and truth is assailed, to sustain his character by showing that those having the best opportunity of knowing his reputation have heard nothing said respecting his character; and in a particular case, held, that certain language of the court indicating that evidence of this kind was the best evidence of good reputation was erroneous, yet that such error was, under the circumstances, without prejudice: State v. Nelson, 58-208.

Proof of a specific vice, as want of chastity, is not competent for the purpose of discrediting the competency of a witness: Kilburn v. Mullen, 22-498.

The witness cannot be supported by showing that he was not guilty of specific immorality in connection with equivocal circumstances which he states as having given him a bad repute: State v. Woodworth, 65-141.

A person cannot be said to have a good

4900. Whole of a writing or conversation. 3650. When part of an act, declaration, conversation, or writing, is given in evidence by one party, the whole on the same subject may be inquired into by the other; thus when a letter is read, all other letters on the same subject between the same parties may be given. And when a detached act, declaration, conversation, or writing, is given in evidence, any other act, declaration, or writing which is necessary to make it fully understood or to explain the same, may also be given in evidence. [R., § 3992; C., '51, § 2399.]

The whole of the act, declaration or conversation may be given in evidence by one party when another has introduced a part: Court-right v. Deeds, 37-503.

The other act or declaration contemplated moral character when he has a bad reputation as to a particular vice: Ibid.

The fact of assault and battery cannot be shown as bearing upon the question of moral character: Kitteringham v. Dance, 58-632.

A witness cannot be asked whether he was not successfully impeached in the trial of another case: State v. Wooderd, 20-541.

The fact of dishonesty in a particular transaction will not destroy the evidence of a witness: Wilson v. Patrick, 34-362.

Held not proper, under this section, to ask a witness who has admitted that he has been guilty of horse-stealing, how long he has been engaged therein; such fact would have no bearing upon the moral character of the witness: State v. McIntire, 58-572.

Where defendant in a criminal prosecution becomes a witness on his own behalf, evidence tending to show that his moral character is bad is admissible, as in the case of any other witness: State v. Kirkpatrick, 63-554.

The truthfulness of a witness is always presumed, and evidence is not admissible for the purpose of establishing his credibility, as, for instance, that he has held public office, etc., where no attempt to impeach him has been made: Walter v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 39-33.

Where the effort is made to impeach a witness by proof of contradictory statements, it is not competent to support his evidence by proof of general good moral character or reputation for truth and veracity: State v. Archer, 73-320.

Under § 5954, this section is applicable equally in criminal cases: and where one of two co-defendants is called to testify for the other, he may be impeached as any other witness: State v. Hardin, 46-623.

by this section must be something which is necessary to make the previous or subsequent act or declaration fully understood, or to explain it. It is not all that a party may have said at other times in regard to the matter in controversy which may be thus introduced: Dougherty v. Posegatz, 3-88. And see Williams v. Donaldson, 8-168.

Where a subject is introduced in the examination of a witness, and a part of the facts shown, the opposite party may inquire as to all the facts on the same subject: Jones v. Hopkins, 32-503.

A letter in reply to a letter which is admitted in evidence is also admissible as a part of the same communication: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Sherwood, 62-309.

Where a letter contains distinct statements of facts which cannot be misunderstood if read alone, one is admissible without the other: Brayley v. Ross, 33-505.

Parol evidence of the contents of a lost letter necessary to make another letter "fully understood" is admissible: Collins v. Bane, 34-385, 389.

If part of an account in an account book is relied on, the whole must be received: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163, 189.

Where part of a conversation is given in evidence by one party, the whole on the same subject may be inquired into by the other: Gaddis v. Lord, 10-141; Hess v. Wilcox, 58-380.

Proof of statements made in connection with a plea of guilty in a criminal case is not admissible in a civil case where the fact of such plea of guilty may be shown: Root v. Sturdivant, 70-55.

Where, on the trial of a criminal action, one declaration of defendant was admitted, but subsequent declarations were offered, but refused, such action will not be held erroneous, unless it affirmatively appear that such subsequent declarations were necessary to explain the first, or make it fully understood: State v. Vance, 17-138.

Statements as to what third persons said, which would be mere hearsay evidence, are not admissible even to get the whole of a conversation before the jury: Sims v. Moore, 61-128.

The rule of this section does not apply so as to allow a party to the rest of a conversation a part of which he has himself shown in evidence: State v. Elliott, 15-72.

The fact that the witness did not hear all the conversation will not render him incompetent to testify as to what he did hear, but will only go to the credibility of such testimony: Mays v. Deaver, 1-216; State v. Elliott, 15-72.

Detached conversations held not sufficiently connected to allow the introduction of the second as necessary to explain the first: Williams v. Donaldson, 8-108.

4901. Writing and printing. 3651. When an instrument consists partly of written and partly of printed form, the former controls the latter when the two are inconsistent. [R., § 3993; C., '51, § 2400.]

4902. Understanding of parties. 3652. When the terms of an agreement have been intended in a different sense by the parties to it, that sense is to prevail against either party in which he had reason to suppose the other understood it. [R., § 3994; C., '51, § 2401.]

This section only applies to instruments which arise out of and are the expression of the agreement of two minds: Pierson v. Armstrong, 1-282, 287.

Section applied: Snow v. Flannery, 10-318; Stout v. Fire Ins. Co., 12-371, 380; Wilkinson v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 30-119, 127; Thompson v. Locke, 65-429.

If the language used by and known to the parties to the contract is ambiguous or fairly admits of more than one construction, that meaning is to be given it in which it is understood by the other party, whether the party so acting has reason to believe it was so understood by the other party or not: Minnesota Linsed Oil Co. v. Montague, 65-67.

This section does not authorize the introduction of parol evidence to vary the written contract by showing that the intent of the parties was different from that implied in the words used therein: Walker v. Manning, 6-519.

4903. Historical and scientific works. 3653. Historical works, books of science or art, and published maps or charts, when made by persons indifferent between the parties, are presumptive evidence of facts of general notoriety or interest. [R., § 3995; C., '51, § 2402.]

The books and maps which are admissible under this section are such as are published for circulation among the people generally. They must be printed or otherwise published, so that the presumption will follow that their contents will be or may be generally known. A record filed in a public office is not such a publication as is here contemplated: Heinrichs v. Terrell, 65-25.

To render a map or plat admissible under this section it must be public, and must be shown to be the work of a disinterested person: Pfotzer v. Mullaney, 30-197.

A city map, purporting to have been made by the city engineer, and proved to have been re-organized and used by the city as substantially correct, is admissible in evidence: Nolser v. Chicago, B & Q. R. Co., 73-268.

The herd-book of a particular breed of cattle is receivable in evidence under this section: Kuhns v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65-528.

But without proof that a herd-book offered in evidence is recognized as correct by cattle dealers, and that the animal referred to is the same as the one herein entered, the herd-book is inadmissible: Crawford v. Williams, 48-247.

Standard medical books are admissible as evidence of the author's opinions as to methods of medical skill or practice: Bowman v. Woods, 1 G. Gr., 441.

The statutory provision as to medical books does not render inadmissible in evidence that which was before admissible, and standard medical authorities are not therefore the best evidence of what they teach or whether they differ. The testimony of experts is admissible on such points and also as to what are standard authorities, etc.: Brodhead v. Wittse, 35-429.

A statement in a medical work that bears upon the question at issue in a case is not to be excluded on account of indefiniteness: Quackenbush v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 73-458.

4904. Subscribing witness. 3654. When a subscribing witness denies or does not recollect the execution of the instrument to which his name is subscribed as such witness, its execution may be proved by other evidence. [R., § 3996; C., '51, § 2403.]

Section applied: Ballinger v. Davis, 29-512.

4905. Handwriting. 3655. Evidence respecting handwriting may be given by comparison made by experts, or by the jury, with writings of the same person which are proved to be genuine. [R., § 3997; C., '51, § 2404.]

Comparison: The writing with which comparison is made must be proved to be genuine by testimony of witnesses who saw the party write it, or by the party's admission, when not offered by him, or in some such a positive manner. The genuineness of the standard cannot be proved by a witness who has seen the party write generally. The standard, however, need not be a writing connected with the case: Hyde v. Woolfolk, 1-159.

A paper offered in evidence for the mere purpose of furnishing the jury a standard of comparison is admissible only where no collateral issue can be raised concerning it; that is, when the paper is conceded to be genuine, or is such that the other party is estopped to deny it, or belongs to the witness, who was himself previously acquainted with the party's handwriting, and exhibits the paper in confirmation and explanation of his own testimony: Wilson v. Irish, 62-260.

The genuineness of the writing made the basis of the comparison, called the standard writing, should be proved by direct and positive evidence. A writing cannot be thus used when its genuineness rests only upon evidence based upon comparison with other writing claimed to be genuine: Winch v. Norman, 65-186.

The party whose handwriting it is sought to prove may, on his behalf, offer in evidence writings of his own proved to be genuine, and is not to be limited to such writings as were made before the issue as to genuineness of handwriting was raised. Therefore, held, that defendant might offer in evidence his signature to his answer in the case: Singer Mfg. Co. v. McFarland, 53-540.

An instrument purporting to be executed by the party whose signature is in question, and duly acknowledged, is not admissible in proof of handwriting. It might be properly executed and acknowledged, although the signature were in the handwriting of another: Hyde v. Woolfolk, 1-159.

4906. Private writing. 3656. Every private writing, except a last will and testament, after being acknowledged or proved and certified in the manner prescribed for the proof or acknowledgment of conveyances of real property, may be read in evidence without farther proof. [R., § 4000; C., '51, § 2407.]

On appeal in an equitable action, triable de novo, the supreme court will make a comparison of the writings: Morris v. Sargent, 18-90. And see Baker v. Mygatt, 14-131.

But in an action by ordinary proceeding, the determination of the court upon the genuineness of a signature is, upon appeal, entitled to the same consideration as the verdict of a jury: Lay v. Wissman, 36-305.

Evidence of the genuineness of the party's signature on a hotel register held admissible for the purpose of proving by comparison the genuineness of a signature in question, although such evidence also tended to contradict the testimony of the party that he had not been at the place where such registry was claimed to have been made: State v. Calkins, 73-128.

Expert testimony: The opinion of an ordinary witness, formed upon comparison of the writings alone, is not admissible. No one but an expert can be allowed to give an opinion formed upon such comparison; but to be an expert in regard to handwriting the witness need not be a man of any particular calling: Hyde v. Woolfolk, 1-159; Mixer v. Bennett, 70-329.

The competency of the witnesses in a particular case, held to be sufficiently shown: Ibid.

The mere fact that a person is clerk of the courts will not entitle him to testify as an expert in regard to handwriting: Winch v. Norman, 65-186.

Weight of expert testimony based on comparison: Expert testimony as to the genuineness of a signature, based upon comparison of handwriting, is of the lowest order, and ought not to be allowed to overthrow positive and direct evidence of credible witnesses who testify from personal knowledge: Borland v. Walrath, 33-130.

Expert testimony as to handwriting is of the lowest order and of the most unsatisfactory character: Whitaker v. Parker, 42-585.

To render an instrument admissible under this section it must appear, if the instrument was a mutual one, that it was so executed as to be binding upon both parties, and an acknowledge by one will not be sufficient: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lewis, 53-101. And see § 4909 and notes.

4907. Entries by deceased person. 3657. The entries and other writings of a person deceased, made at or near the time of the transaction and in a position to know the facts therein stated, are presumptive evidence of such facts when the entry was made against the interest of the person so making it, or when made in a professional capacity or in the ordinary course of professional conduct, or when made in the performance of a duty specially enjoined by law. [R., § 3998; C., '51, § 2405.]

Against interest: Verbal declarations of one deceased, against his pecuniary interest, in relation to facts of which he is immediately and personally cognizant, and made under circumstances excluding a probable motive to falsify, are admissible as evidence in an action against third persons: Mahaska County v. Ingalls, 16-81.

Entries in books made by a person who is deceased are admissible as evidence when clearly against his interest. Whether they must be made at or near the time of the transactions entered, quære. But they are inadmissible to prove the absence of other entries, when the omission would be favorable to the party making the entries: State v. Wooderd, 20-531.

Where entries are offered as being against the interest of the party making them, such interest should be made clearly to appear: Ibid.

The jury may be told that testimony of this kind, though competent, yet as the right of cross-examination does not exist, is not highly favored by the law: Ibid.

Declarations of a deceased witness against his interest are receivable in evidence: Scott County v. Fluke, 34-317.

Therefore in an action against a county treasurer, held, that the admissions of an assistant employed by the board of supervisors and for whom the treasurer was not responsible, to the effect that the misappropriation of funds was due to his own defalcation, were admissible: Ibid.

But declarations of a deceased witness not against his interest are not receivable, although they directly tend to contradict declarations made by him against his interest: Wilson v. Patrick, 34-362; Wescott v. Wescott, 75-628.

Entries in books of account made by third persons are only admissible where it is shown that the party making them is dead and that the entries are against his interest: Sypher v. Savery, 39-258.

Dying declarations are admissible as such only in case of homicide, where the death of the deceased is the subject of the charge and the circumstances of the death are the subject of the declaration. They are not admissible in an action by an heir to prove that property conveyed to him by the ancestor making the declarations was not by way of advancement: Middleton v. Middleton, 31-151.

Declarations of a living witness who is competent and within the reach of process are hearsay and not admissible: Hutchinson v. Watkins, 17-475.

Family records: An entry by a deceased parent in the family Bible as to the date of birth or death of an individual is admissible as the declaration of the parent making the entry, but it must appear that such parent is dead: Greenleaf v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 30-301.

BOOKS OF ACCOUNT.

4908. When admissible. 3658. Books of account containing charges by one party against the other, made in the ordinary course of business, are receivable in evidence only under the following circumstances, subject to all just exceptions as to their credibility:

1. The books must show a continuous dealing with persons generally, or several items of charge at different times against the other party in the same book or set of books;

2. It must be shown by the party's oath or otherwise that they are his books of original entries;

3. It must be shown in like manner that the charges were made at or near the time of the transactions therein entered, unless satisfactory reasons appear for not making such proof;

4. The charges must also be verified by the party or clerk who made the entries, to the effect that they believe them just and true, or a sufficient reason must be given why such verification is not made. [R., § 3999; C., '51, § 2406.]

To prove charges in ordinary course of business: Books of accounts are admissible to prove charges by one party against the other, made in the ordinary course of business, and for no other purpose: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163.

The party offering the books must prove what his ordinary course of business is: Ibid.; Karr v. Stivers, 34-123.

And in a particular case, held, that in the absence of any explanation as to what the ordinary course of dealing of the parties was, certain entries did not appear to be made in the usual course of business: Karr v. Stivers, 34-123.

Books of original entry are not admissible for the purpose of proving payment or loans of money unless that comes within the ordinary business of the party in whose behalf the books are kept: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163; Young v. Jones, 8-219; Sloan v. Ault, 8-229; Snell v. Eckerson, 8-284; Cummins v. Hull's Adm'r, 35-253.

Such books are therefore inadmissible to prove a special agreement, or delivery of goods under such agreement, or to prove delivery of goods to a third person, or an agreement to pay a balance due from other parties: Lyman v. Bechtel, 55-437.

But if the payment or loan of money constitutes, in any just sense, the ordinary business of the party, and the charges are made in the ordinary course of business, they may be proved by the books of account: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163; Young v. Jones, 8-219; Orcutt v. Hanson, 70-604.

The business of keeping a retail store is not generally such business as to justify the introduction of the books of account kept therein to prove charges for money loaned: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163; Sloan v. Ault, 8-229.

Proof of a course of business between the parties, of lending and charging in a book of account, will not be sufficient to make such book admissible in evidence: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163.

Admissible in other cases: Books of account are admissible in behalf of a party who made the entries therein, upon the ground of necessity, and upon the presumption that unless they be received there will be a total failure of proof. They are receivable, therefore, as to the daily sale and barter of merchandise and other commodities, the performance of services and the letting of articles to hire, circumstances so frequent in succession, and generally so trivial in their individual amount, that the procuring of formal proof would not compensate for the time bestowed: Karr v. Stivers, 34-123.

Where charges for stone purchased from plaintiff were not made at the time the stone was taken, but were made as soon as defendant notified him how many had been taken, held, that a satisfactory reason was thus shown for not making the entries at the time of the transaction: Anderson v. Ames, 6-486.

Whole account admissible: However, when a defendant avails himself of credits shown by a book account in his favor, he cannot object to the account being used to show charges against him. The whole account must be taken together: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163.

Parol evidence not admissible to vary: Parol evidence of the party making the entries is not admissible for the purpose of explaining the language used by him. The book of account when admitted becomes written evidence and speaks for itself: Cummins v. Hull's Adm'r, 35-253.

Where the cause of action is founded upon transactions embraced in books of account of one of the parties, the adverse party is not bound to rely upon such books of account, but may introduce other evidence as to the transaction, and such other evidence, although entirely oral, will not be secondary: Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 40-264.

It is not permissible to substitute evidence as to the contents of the book for the book itself: Churchill v. Fulliam, 8-45.

Copies: The books of account must themselves be produced on the trial, and it is not competent to prove their contents by attaching copies to a deposition: Peck v. Parchen, 52-46.

Copies of books of account which would themselves be admissible in evidence are not competent: Halstead v. Cuppy, 67-600; Creswell v. Slack, 68-110.

A receipt the best evidence: Where the books show that a receipt was given for money, it is the best evidence and must be produced or accounted for: Sloan v. Ault, 8-229.

Showing account barred: Even though the books show the account sought to be proved by them to be barred by the statute of limitations, they are still admissible in evidence for the purpose of laying the foundations for showing defendant's written admission or promise removing the bar, or for showing from defendant's testimony that the cause of action still subsists: Thorn v. Moore, 21-285.

Not admissible to prove agreement: The entry of a contract or agreement made by the party in his own book is not receivable in evidence. So held in case of a memorandum or stock book in which purchases of stock, etc., were noted: Hart v. Livingston, 29-217; Whisler v. Drake, 35-103.

Must be books of original entry: Where it appeared that a certain book was used as a mere memorandum book from which an entry of charges against parties in what was called the sales book was made, held, that the sales book was the book receivable in evidence as the book of original entry and not the memorandum book: Hancock v. Hintrager, 60-374.

Where it appeared that as the party's books were kept the ledger was not a book of original entries, but the party testified that a particular entry in the ledger was there made originally and not by transfer from any other book, held, that such fact did not render the ledger admissible in evidence to prove such item: Fitzgerald v. McCarty, 55-702.

Preliminary proof: In general, no party other than the one making the entries is competent to make the supplementary oath necessary for the admission of the book: Karr v. Stivers, 34-123.

Time-books, kept by officers or employees of defendant, held properly excluded when offered in evidence without being supported by testimony of those who kept them as to their correctness: Ford v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co., 54-723.

Where books of account were introduced in evidence containing entries by different persons, held, that they were admissible as to entries made by persons who were called as witnesses and gave the requisite statutory evidence in relation thereto, although not as to entries not thus proven: Herriott v. Kersey, 69-111.

When a witness refers to books of account in aid of his statements, the books are competent to show a mistake in his testimony; and in such case formal proof is not necessary: Davenport v. Cummings, 15-219.

Credibility: The preliminary proof being made, the question of the admissibility of books in evidence is for the court; the degree of credit given them, and the question of whether the charges are in the ordinary course of business, are to be determined by the jury: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163; Young v. Jones, 8-219.

When the proper preliminary proof is made the books should be received in evidence, and any objection on account of discrepancies, etc., affecting their credibility only, should be left to the jury: Eyre v. Cook, 9-185.

INSTRUMENTS AFFECTING REAL PROPERTY.

4909. Evidence. 3659. Every instrument in writing affecting real estate, which is acknowledged or proved, and certified as hereinbefore directed, may be read in evidence without farther proof. [R., § 4001; C., '51, § 1227.]

The certificate of acknowledgment is prima facie evidence of the fact of acknowledgment, but not conclusive, and may be overcome by other evidence, the burden of proof being upon the party seeking to rebut the effect of the certificate: Morris v. Sargent, 18-90.

The right to contradict the certificate exists, for instance, when fraud is supposed in obtaining the acknowledgment, or when the certificate is alleged to be false, and it is proposed to show that the deed was never acknowledged: Tatum v. Goforth, 9-247.

But it is not contemplated that a defective certificate is to be supplied or made good by other evidence: O'Farrell v. Simplot, 4-381.

The deed, such as here contemplated, being in the custody of the grantee, will be presumed to have been delivered, and being in writing will import a consideration, and these facts need not be proved before offering the instrument in evidence: Wolverton v. Collins, 34-238.

Recitals in an instrument which is admissible by reason of acknowledgment are prima facie evidence of the facts recited: Beal v. Blair, 33-318.

A deed which is not properly acknowledged may still be received in evidence: Gould v. Woodward, 4 G. Gr., 82.

An instrument, such as here described, is not evidence of the handwriting of the person by whom it purports to be signed: Hyde v. Woolfolk, 1-159.

Where proof is made of the loss or inability to produce the original deed the record thereof may be introduced in evidence without evidence of the execution of such deed: Carter v. Davidson, 70-45.

As to acknowledgments, in general, see §§ 3128-3133.

4910. Record or certified copy. 3660. The record of such instrument, or a duly authenticated copy thereof, is competent evidence whenever by the party's own oath or otherwise the original is shown to be lost, or not belonging to the party wishing to use the same, nor within his control. And in such case it is no objection to the record that no official seal is appended to the recorded acknowledgment thereof, if, when the acknowledgment purports to have been taken by an officer having an official seal, there be a statement in the certificate of acknowledgment that the same is made under his hand and seal of office, and the records show by a scroll or otherwise that there was such a seal, which will be presumptive evidence that the official seal was attached to the original certificate. [R., § 4002; C., '51, § 1228.]

Proof of loss of original: The record of such instrument is not admissible as evidence unless it is shown that the original is lost or does not belong to the party wishing to use the same or is not within his control: Williams v. Heath, 22-519; Ackley v. Sexton, 24-320; Courtright v. Deeds, 37-503; Jaffray v. Tharpson, 65-322; State v. Penny, 70-190.

What sufficient showing as to inability to produce: Where it is not shown that the instrument is lost, the party desiring to introduce a copy thereof should show both that it does not belong to him and that it is not under his control: but it will not be considered to be within his control merely from the fact that he may compel its production by a subpoena duces tecum: McNichols v. Wilson, 42-385.

In a criminal prosecution where the introduction of a mortgage in evidence became material in behalf of the state, held, that the testimony of the prosecuting witness, that he did not have possession of the original instrument, was not sufficient showing to authorize the admission of secondary evidence: State v. Penny, 70-190.

Where it was testified by the attorney of a party that the party offering in evidence the record of a deed did not have the original deed and that he could obtain no knowledge as to where it was, held, that the record should have been admitted: Olleman v. Kelgore, 52-38.

Where an agent of the party who alone had held possession of the papers, which had never been in the hands of the party himself, testified to the loss, held, that the showing was sufficient: Corbin v. Beebee, 36-336.

Where a party offering in evidence a deed proved that application had been made to a person who ought to have had the deed, and search had been made among papers among which it probably would have been found, without success, held, that secondary evidence was properly admitted: Laird v. Kilbourne, 70-83.

It does not follow that deeds belong to a grantee simply because they are executed to his grantor. They may contain a description of many other tracts of land owned by such grantor or his other grantees: McNichols v. Wilson, 42-885.

Where it appeared that the original was part of the files of a case in the supreme court and could have been readily procured, held, that a copy was not admissible in evidence: Byington v. Oaks, 32-488.

But where a deed had been introduced in evidence in a case in another county and was in the hands of the court there, held, that it was sufficiently shown not to be in the possession or under the control of the party: Ingle v. Jones, 43-286.

Proof of delivery: The provisions of statute as to the admissibility of the record of an instrument in evidence do not dispense with the necessity of proof of delivery of the original in cases where such proof would be necessary, if the original itself were introduced: Foley v. Howard, 8-56.

Land patent: This section does not apply to a record copy of a patent of lands from the United States: Curtis v. Hunting, 6-536. But see § 4913.

4911. Retrospective. 3661. The provisions of the preceding section are intended to apply to all instruments heretofore recorded, as well as those hereafter to be recorded. [R., § 4003; C., '51, § 1229.]

4912. Not conclusive. 3662. Neither the certificate, nor the record, nor the transcript thereof, is conclusive evidence of the facts therein stated. [R., § 4004; C., '51, § 1230.]

See notes to § 4909.

UNITED STATES AND STATE PATENTS.

4913. When deemed of record; copies. 16 G. A., ch. 10. United States and state patents for lands in this state, that have been or hereafter may be recorded in the recorder's office of the county in which the lands are situated, shall be deemed matters of record, and certified copies thereof, under the hand of the recorder, may be received and read in evidence in all the courts in this state, with like effect as other certified copies of original papers recorded in his office. In order to entitle said patents to be recorded, no acknowledgment, as required by chapter six of the code, shall be necessary.

STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

4914. Written evidence. 3663. Except when otherwise specially provided, no evidence of the contracts enumerated in the next succeeding section is competent, unless it be in writing and signed by the party charged or by his lawfully authorized agent. [R., § 4006; C., '51, § 2409.]

Effect of the statute: Although the English statute of frauds provides "that no action shall be brought," while ours provides that "no evidence, etc., is competent," the effect is the same in both cases; and English and American authorities upon the construction of the former are applicable to the latter: W estheimer v. Peacock, 2-528.

The contract itself is not void, but may be subsequently revived so as to become binding: Berryhull v. Jones, 35-335.

What sufficiently in writing: A resolution of a board of supervisors is sufficient written evidence of a contract by them to convey real estate to enable the vendee to enforce the same: Grimes v. Hamilton County, 37-290.

The written evidence need not be contained in one paper, nor need the papers be contemporaneous; and parol evidence may be received to connect or explain them. In case of a sale of land at auction, the notice of sale containing the terms, etc., the plat upon which the name of defendant as purchaser, with price, etc., was entered by the clerk of the sale, and a letter signed by defendant declining to have anything further to do with the property, were held sufficient, with parol evidence, to comply with the requirements of the statute: Lee v. Mahoney, 9-344.

Auctioneer; administrator: Neither party can be the other's agent for the purpose of signing the writing sufficient to bind such other party; and while an auctioneer, having no interest except as such, may sign such writing and thereby bind both parties, yet where the auctioneer is an administrator making a sale under direction of the court, he has such interest as to render him incompetent to bind a purchaser to the contract: Wingate v. Herschauer, 42-506.

Writing not delivered: A writing signed by defendant and kept in his possession without delivery is not available to take a case out of the statute: Steele v. Fife, 48-99.

Oral testimony: Verbal testimony is not admissible to supply any defects or omissions in the written evidence which is relied upon to take a case out of the statute of frauds; and where telegrams were relied upon as constituting a written contract, the language of which was unintelligible unless aided by extrinsic evidence, held, that the evidence was not sufficiently proven: Watt v. Wisconsin Cranberry Co., 63-730.

The written evidence of a contract cannot be aided or added to by parol testimony: Vaughn v. Smith, 58-553.

Whether a contract within the statute of frauds may be proved by parol evidence of the contents of lost writings, which, if in existence, would be competent for that purpose, quære: Elwell v. Walker, 52-256.

Where the promise to pay the debt of another is sufficiently evidenced in writing, parol evidence to show that the debt has not been paid is admissible although it also bears upon the question of the promise: Harbert v. Skinner, 37-208.

If the party sought to be charged has in writing admitted the contract, this is sufficient to take the case out of the statute, no matter to whom the writing may have been addressed: Warfield v. Wisconsin Cranberry Co., 63-312.

4915. What contracts. 3664. Such contracts embrace:

1. Those in relation to the sale of personal property, when no part of the property is delivered, and no part of the price is paid;
2. Those made in consideration of marriage;
3. Those wherein one person promises to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another, including promises by executors to pay the debt of their principal from their own estate;
4. Those for the creation or transfer of any interest in lands, except leases for a term not exceeding one year;
5. Those that are not to be performed within one year from the making thereof. [R., § 4007; C., '51, § 2410.]

Sale; delivery: The delivery of goods under an oral contract of sale to a common carrier (not designated by the purchaser) in the usual course of transportation is sufficient to render a parol contract for the sale of chattels binding: Bullock v. Stcherge, 4 McCrary, 184.

A parol contract creating a lien upon personal property equally with one for the sale of such property is made binding by delivery: Brown v. Allen, 35-306.

Sufficiency of delivery in particular cases discussed: Marsh v. Bird, 31-599; Brown v. Wade, 42-647.

In consideration of marriage: Where it is attempted, by letters, to prove a contract to convey real estate, in consideration of marriage, the letters should show a distinct proposition that, in consideration of the marriage, the one party would convey such real estate, and an acceptance of the proposition by the other party in as broad and distinct

How objection raised: The objection that a contract is within the statute of frauds, and therefore that any parol evidence thereof is inadmissible, cannot be raised, unless the objection is made in the pleadings or when the evidence is offered: Holt v. Brown, 63-319.

When parol evidence of a contract within the statute of frauds is introduced upon trial without objection, it cannot afterwards be objected to upon appeal: Crossen v. White, 19-109.

Executed contract: Although a promise by one party to be individually responsible for the debts of another would be within the statute, yet if such a promise has been performed the objection of the statute cannot be enforced: Putnam v. Swinney, 63-383.

Order of introduction of evidence: Parties are not restricted as to the order of the introduction of evidence, and evidence of a sale which is within the statute of frauds may first be introduced, to be afterward followed by proof of partial performance, taking the case out of the statute: Campbell v. Ormsby, 65-518.

Relief in equity: Equity will not relieve against the statute of frauds for the mere purpose of preventing the repudiation of a contract actually entered into which is in violation of such statute, but may relieve against the repudiation of such contract where an innocent party has been misled to his injury. The attempted fraud against which equity will relieve consists not merely in refusing to do what the party has agreed to do, but in deceiving the other out of his property: Burden v. Sheridan, 36-125.

terms as it was made: Elwell v. Walker, 52-256.

Answering for debt or default of another: Where a father agreed to be answerable for his son's debts in consideration of a forbearance to sue the son, held that, in the absence of a release of the liability as against the son, the agreement so to pay the debt could not be enforced, although the forbearance to sue might constitute a consideration: Westheimer v. Peacock, 2-528.

An agreement upon certain contingencies to step into the place of another and assume his obligations is within the statute and cannot be established by parol: Kauffman v. Harstock, 31-472.

A contract to indemnify another, and hold him harmless against anticipated loss, cannot be established by parol: Ibid.

Where goods were furnished one party and charged to him upon agreement of another to pay for them, held, that the agreement of the latter must be regarded as collateral and within the statute of frauds: Langdon v. Richardson, 58-610.

Where the plaintiff, who had been a laborer in the employ of a subcontractor, alleged that the defendant, who was the main contractor, had orally agreed to pay the claim due to the plaintiff from the subcontractor if the plaintiff would refrain from filing a mechanic's lien, and plaintiff alleged that he had thereupon delayed filing such lien, but it did not appear that he had by reason of such agreement lost his lien, nor released the subcontractor, held, that the promise of the principal contractor was a promise to answer for the debt of another, which must be in writing: Vaughn v. Smith, 65-579.

Under the facts in a particular case, held, that an agreement sued upon amounted to an undertaking to answer for the debt of another: Beerkle v. Edwards, 55-750.

An oral acceptance can be enforced only where, by reason of having funds in his hands or otherwise, the payment by the acceptor will be the payment of his own debt; otherwise the oral acceptance will be within the statute of frauds: Walton v. Manderville, 56-597.

Where the main purpose of the promisor is not to answer for another, but to subserve some purpose of his own, the promise is not within the statute of frauds, although in form it may be a promise to pay another's debt, and although, incidentally, the performance of it may have the effect of extinguishing the liability of another: Mills v. Brown, 11-314; Johnson v. Knapp, 36-616.

Where an obligation is an original undertaking by a party, entered into for his own benefit, it is not to be deemed within the statute of frauds: Clinton Nat. Bank v. Studemann, 74-104.

A promise by one of several co-parties to another co-party to pay a share of the cost of an appeal to be taken by the latter, it appearing that the party making such promise expected to derive some benefit from the appeal, held not to be a promise made to answer for the debt of another: Wilson v. Smith, 73-429.

The fact that the discharge of a person's own duly contracted debt will also operate to discharge the debt of another does not bring the obligation to discharge such debt within the statute of frauds: Chamberlin v. Ingalls, 38-300.

An agreement by A., B. and C. that A. shall pay the amount of the indebtedness which he owes B. to C., to apply on an indebtedness from B. to C., is not within the statute of frauds: Lester v. Bowman, 39-611.

An absolute promise by a party to assume and pay the indebtedness of another is not within the statute of frauds, but it must be shown to be supported by a consideration: Eunford v. Purcell, 4 G. Gr., 488.

Where the purchaser of a boat entered into an agreement with the holder of a lien thereon to pay the amount of the lien, held, that the undertaking was not to answer for the debt or default of another: Barker v. Guillian, 5-510.

In an action against a bank upon certain bank-bills of an insolvent bank, in which recovery from defendant for the value of such bills was sought on the ground that they had been taken on the strength of its representations as to their validity, held, that the cause of action was not within the statute of frauds: Tarbell v. Stevens, 7-163.

An agreement by a vendee to pay off a mortgage upon the property purchased makes the indebtedness his own and is not within the statute of frauds: Bowen v. Kurtz, 37-239.

Where defendant purchased lands of one V., agreeing to pay a debt owing from V. to plaintiff out of the purchase money, held, that the agreement was not within the statute of frauds and might be enforced by plaintiff against defendant: Morrison v. Hogue, 49-574.

Held, also, that a contract between defendant, plaintiff and said V., that defendant should pay V.'s debt to plaintiff out of the price of such land and in consideration of the release of an attachment upon the land, was not within the statute: Ibid.

Where one of two persons whose names were affixed to a promissory note, although claiming that the signature of his name thereto was a forgery, assured the holder that the note would be paid, held, that such promise was one to answer for the default of another person and was not binding, not being in writing: Smith v. Tramel, 68-488.

An oral promise to pay the debt of another, which should be in writing, cannot constitute an estoppel so as to be binding: Ibid.

Where property was delivered upon the faith of a promise by the surety to sign the note therefor, held, that such promise was not within the statute: Van Riper v. Baker, 44-450.

Held, that if a loan was made to three, one only receiving the money, the others would be bound, although their promise was not in writing: Dee v. Downs, 50-310.

Where one agrees to execute a note as surety for another, such agreement is a promise to answer for the debt of that other and is within the statute of frauds, and cannot be enforced unless the agreement is in writing. It differs from a case where the party receives a benefit from the agreement: Dee v. Downs, 57-589.

Where the promise to answer for the debt of another is made upon a new and original consideration, it is not within the statute: Johnson v. Knapp, 36-616; Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Walker, 39-406; Lamb v. Tucker, 42-118.

An agreement by an incoming partner to become liable for the debts of the firm in consideration of the property acquired by the purchase is not within the statute of frauds, and the creditors may recover thereon: Poole v. Hintrager, 60-180.

The parol promise of a new firm to pay the debts of a firm to whose business they succeed is within the statute of frauds, and is not binding unless in writing, or unless the promise by the new firm is made by all the members thereof and amounts to a novation of the debt, merging it and extinguishing all liability under the old debt: Sternburg v. Callanan, 14-251.

Transfer of interest in land: A verbal contract for the sale of land in consideration of services to be performed and cash to be paid is within the statute of frauds, if possession is not taken and no part of the services are performed or the cash paid: Morgan v. McLaren, 4 G. Gr., 536.

An agreement to procure a conveyance of land is not within the statute: Bannon v. Bean, 9-395.

So held in case of an agreement to foreclose a mortgage and sell the property and authorize the sheriff's deed to be made to another party, or to buy the property in at the sale and then make a deed: Cooley v. Osborne, 50-526.

A parol promise made by a judgment debtor after execution sale, that he would make a deed to the purchaser correcting a mistake in the sheriff's deed, held to be within the statute of frauds: Butcher v. Buchanan, 17-81.

A contract for the sale of improvements on public lands where the party selling has no title to the land itself is not a contract for the sale of an interest in the real property: Zickafosse v. Hulick, Mor., 175.

Where the person having a legal title to land suffers another to go on with improvements, in the expectation of a conveyance raised in him by the acts, encouragement or assurance of the owner, the transaction may be taken out of the statute of frauds: McCoy v. Hughes, 1 G. Gr., 370.

A parol agreement to relinquish interest in real property in consideration of the discharge of indebtedness would seem to be valid: Hotchkiss v. Cox, 47-655.

Fraud and undue influence in the procurement of a deed may be shown by parol evidence, notwithstanding the statute of frauds: Day v. Loven, 51-364.

Where land was sold with the agreement that, in case of resale by the vendee, the vendor should receive as additional compensation one-half the excess received by vendee above the amount paid vendor, held, that under the agreement no interest in the land was retained by vendor, which it was necessary under the statute of frauds to have evidenced in writing: Miller v. Kendig, 55-174.

A parol license to mine premises, under which the licensee enters into and holds possession, and which is established also by the licensor's testimony, is valid under the statute of frauds, but it would be otherwise if possession was not taken under and by virtue of the license: Anderson v. Simpson, 21-399.

A parol mining license is not absolutely void, but is only voidable. If the owner of the soil desires to revoke such license he should refund the expenses incurred in improvements, or give such reasonable notice as would enable the occupant to secure the products contemplated for his labor and improvements: Bush v. Sullivan, 3 G. Gr., 344.

An agreement between parties to be copartners in all their undertakings, and tenants in common in all real estate acquired, is within the statute of frauds: Thorn v. Thorn, 11-146.

A parol agreement to enter into a partnership for the purpose of dealing in real estate does not come within the provision as to contracts for the creation or transfer of an interest in land, and need not be evidenced in writing: Richards v. Grinnell, 63-44.

Parol evidence is admissible to show that a conveyance to two individuals was intended to be for the benefit of the partnership, and not to create in them a tenancy in common: Paige v. Paige, 71-318.

A contract of partnership for the purchase and sale of land is not a contract for the creation or transfer of interest in lands within the statute of frauds: Pennybacker v. Leary, 65-220.

Where the owner of land was prevented from making redemption from a tax sale upon promise of the tax purchaser to convey after a tax deed was executed, held, that the agreement, though in parol, was not within the statute of frauds: Judd v. Mosely, 30-423.

A deed signed with the wife's name by the husband is within the statute of frauds as to her interest: Morris v. Sargent, 18-90.

A parol ratification of a conveyance of real property will not render it valid nor estop a party from disclaiming it: Hubbard v. German Catholic Congregation, 34-31.

Where a wife receives the purchase money of property conveyed by her husband, in the conveyance of which she does not join to relinquish her dower interest, she may, in consideration of the money received, make an oral contract relinquishing her dower interest in such property: Dunlap v. Thomas, 69-358.

If a sale of land is within the statute of frauds when made, the fact that one of the parties places himself in a condition in which he is able to perform the contract on his part will not take it out of the operation of the statute: Wilson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 41-443.

An express trust not evidenced in writing cannot be enforced against the trustee. The mere refusal of the trustee to perform the contract, and his denial of its existence, will not authorize a court of chancery to enforce the contract: McClain v. McClain, 57-167.

Where property was conveyed to a trustee to be converted into money and the entire proceeds paid out as directed by the grantor, without any advantage to accrue to the trustee, held, that an agreement by the trustee as to the disposal of the proceeds was within the statute of frauds and should have been in writing: McGinness v. Barton, 71-644.

A resulting trust arising from the furnishing of funds by one party, with which real estate is purchased by another in his own name, is not within the statute of frauds, but may be established by parol: Nelson v. Worral, 20-469.

But such implied trust cannot be established by parol, where the party claiming it did not actually advance the purchase money: Burden v. Sheridan, 36-125.

Parol evidence is admissible to establish a resulting trust in an entry of government lands by one for another: Sullivan v. McLennans, 2-437.

It is not necessary, in such case, to show that the money was advanced at the time: Bryant v. Hendricks, 5-256.

A party cannot be allowed to show by parol that land purchased by him and conveyed to another was intended as a gift to him, or that it was purchased for his use: Holland v. Hensley, 4-222.

Further as to trusts, see § 3105 and notes.

Parol leases: In the exception as to leases it is the term of the lease that is referred to, and not the time from the making thereof within which it is to be performed. Verbal leases for a year are good although made to commence in futuro: Sobey v. Brisbee, 20-105; Jones v. Marcy, 49-188.

As to possession under parol lease, see notes to next section.

Contracts not to be performed within a year: In order to be within the clause of the statute relating to contracts not to be performed within a year, the contract itself must show from the nature of its subject-matter, by its express terms, or by necessary implication, that its performance within a year is forbidden. It is not sufficient to bring it within the statute that the parties manifestly intended to occupy more than a year in its performance: Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Walker, 39-406.

A contract for services to be paid for upon the death of the person to whom the services are to be rendered is not within the statute of frauds: Riddle v. Backus, 38-81.

Contracts here referred to are such as are not to be performed within a year on either side: Smalley v. Greene, 52-241.

Such provision does not apply to contracts for the creation or transfer of an interest in lands: Sobey v. Brisbee, 20-105.

4916. Exceptions. 3665. The provision of the first subdivision of the preceding section, does not apply when the article of personal property sold is not at the time of the contract owned by the vendor and ready for delivery; but labor, skill, or money, are necessarily to be expended in producing or procuring the same; nor do those of the fourth subdivision of said section apply where the purchase money, or any portion thereof, has been received by the vendor, or when the vendee, with the actual or implied consent of the vendor, has taken and held possession thereof under and by virtue of the contract, or when there is any other circumstance, which, by the law heretofore in force, would have taken a case out of the statute of frauds. [R., § 4008; C., '51, § 2411.]

Where labor or money are to be expended: In case of a sale of personal property the fact that the goods are to be shipped by express from one place to another at an expense does not bring the case within the exception; such is not a case where "labor, skill or money are necessary to be expended," etc.: Partridge v. Wilsey, 8-459.

The facts taking a contract out of the statute of frauds may exist and be proved outside the contract itself. In a contract for a sale of hogs, held, that proof that at the time it was made the hogs were not owned by the vendor, but that labor, skill or money would be necessary to procure them, would be sufficient: Bennett v. Nye, 4 G. Gr., 410.

A parol contract for a lien on personal property, where the property is not owned by the vendor at the time of the sale, but is still to be purchased by him, is not within the statute of frauds: Brown v. Allen, 35-306.

Taking and holding possession: A sale or gift of real estate is, under our statute, just as complete and perfect when made by parol and followed by possession under it, with the consent of the vendor, as if it were made in writing: Hughes v. Lindsey, 31-329.

A sale of real estate in parol, accompanied with possession, is valid: Chamberlin v. Robertson, 31-408; Tuttle v. Becker, 47-486.

But it must appear that the possession was taken under the contract and with the knowledge of the other party: Carrolls v. Cox, 15-455.

The mere continuance in possession by a tenant is not sufficient to render valid a verbal contract: Mahana v. Blunt, 20-142.

A license to mine is valid, though resting wholly in parol, if possession is taken and held thereunder with actual consent of the licensor: Anderson v. Simpson, 21-399.

The fact that one of the members of a partnership withdraws from the management of the business, under a contract to sell his interest to his partner, leaving such partner in possession of the property and the business, does not show that the latter has taken and held possession under and by virtue of the contract so as to take the case out of the statute of frauds: Wilmer v. Farris, 40-309.

A parol contract for the exchange of land accompanied by delivery of actual possession of land exchanged in accordance with the contract is valid: Baldwin v. Thompson, 15-504.

An oral agreement rescinding a contract of sale to a person in possession may be established by evidence showing that the party in possession thereof held as tenant instead of owner, paying rent, etc., in accordance with the terms of such oral agreement: Barton v. Smith, 66-75.

Where acts of possession relied upon to show partial performance are of doubtful character, and may have been done with other views than as a part performance of the agreement, they do not take the case out of the statute; but where the acts are undisputed, and the sole question is whether they are done in the performance of the contract as claimed by one party, or of another contract as claimed by the other party, then the question as to what the contract was under which they were done must be established by a preponderance of the evidence: Sweeney v. O'Hora, 43-34.

Where a contract is taken out of the statute of frauds by part performance by one of the parties, by taking possession of the property conveyed, the contract may be enforced by the other party, as well as by the one who has partly performed: Ibid.

Where the defendant had no title to the land at the time he put plaintiff in possession, but represented that he had title and afterward procured a conveyance, held, that he was estopped from setting up the fact that such representations were fraudulent: Renkin v. Hill, 49-270.

The taking and holding possession under a verbal assignment of a lease, held not to take the contract of assignment out of the statute of frauds: Hunt v. Coe, 15-197.

A verbal lease for five years, under which lessee is in possession, is valid: Nordyke & Marmon Co. v. Hawkeye Woolen Mills Co., 53-521.

Part performance: If a party seeks to take a case out of the statute of frauds on the ground of a part performance, it is indispensable that the parol contract, agreement or gift should be established by clear, unequivocal and definite testimony: Williamson v. Williamson, 4-279.

Execution of a deed, payment of the purchase money, or part of it, and possession of the premises, are sufficient to constitute part performance of a parol contract to convey and take it out of the statute of frauds: Trayer v. Reeder, 45-272.

Proof of part performance of a contract of lease for the term of more than a year will not take such contract out of the statute: Hunt v. Coe, 15-197.

To take a case out of the operation of the statute of frauds on the ground of part performance, it is indispensable that the acts done should be referable exclusively to the contract; but a preponderance of evidence alone is sufficient to show that fact: Sweeney v. O'Hora, 43-34; York v. Wallace, 48-305.

Where property was delivered by plaintiff to defendant under the agreement that defendant was to pay plaintiff $100 each year during the latter's life, held, that it was partially performed and not within the statute: Saun v. Saun, 49-704.

Where it is agreed to pay for services in land the party rendering the services may recover the value of the land under an oral contract: Bonnon's Estate v. Urlon, 3 G. Gr., 228.

If an oral assignment of a judgment is made in consideration of services to be rendered in obtaining such judgment, and the services are thereafter rendered, the assignment will thereby be taken out of the statute of frauds: Howe v. Jones, 57-130.

A parol contract for the sale of land accompanied by a payment of part of the purchase money makes, under the statute, a valid agreement, even although there was a prior written memorandum which could not be introduced in evidence because unstamped: Sykes v. Bates, 26-251.

Facts considered and held not to prove a delivery of notes in payment of the purchase money for real estate, or such an execution of the verbal contract of sale as to take the case out of the statute of frauds: Auter v. Miller, 18-405.

Where a sum of money in bank-bills was deposited with the vendor as part payment of a contract, full payment of which was to be made by the vendee in coin, and the bills were afterwards returned to the vendee for the purpose of enabling him to secure the coin and make full payment, and the contract was never fulfilled by the vendee, held, that the vendor could not maintain an action to recover the value of the bills thus returned to the vendee: Jones v. Taylor, 1 G. Gr., 434.

There is great doubt as to whether the mere agreement that an indebtedness from the seller to the buyer shall go on the sale as a part of the purchase money will constitute part payment: Brown v. Wade, 42-647.

Where exchange of horses was agreed upon, and as a part of the consideration it was agreed that a debt from one party to the other should be extinguished, held, that the extinguishing of the indebtedness took place at once and constituted a part performance sufficient to take the contract out of the statute of frauds, although the actual change of possession of the horses did not take place at that time: Peake v. Conlan, 43-297.

The term "purchase money" as used in the statute means the consideration. Where such consideration was the conveyance to the vendor by the vendee of another piece of property, held, that proof that such conveyance was executed would take the case out of the statute of frauds: Devin v. Humer, 29-297.

So where the consideration for a contract to convey land was the performance of services, held, that proof of performance of such services would take the case out of the statute: Stem v. Nysonger, 69-512.

4917. When not denied in the pleadings. 3666. The above regulations relating merely to the proof of contracts, do not prevent the enforcement of those which are not denied in the pleadings, unless in cases where the contract is sought to be enforced, or damages to be recovered for the breach thereof, against some person other than him who made it. [R., § 4009; C., '51, § 2412.]

If the contract is not denied in the answer of defendant it is to be enforced against him, although in such answer he may expressly insist upon the benefit of the statute: Auter v. Miller, 18-405.

In a particular case, held, that a denial in the answer was sufficient to prevent the enforcement of the contract alleged in the petition, and which was within the statute of frauds: Mahana v. Blunt, 20-142.

4918. Party made witness. 3667. Nothing in the above provisions shall prevent the party himself against whom the unwritten contract is sought to be enforced, from being called as a witness by the opposite party, nor his oral testimony from being evidence. [R., § 4010; C., '51, § 2413.]

Where a party seeking to enforce a contract which should be in writing intends to rely upon the evidence of the party making it, he should so state in his petition, otherwise it will be subject to demurrer: Babeock v. Meek, 45-137.

If plaintiff relies on the testimony of defendant to establish the contract, he cannot contradict or supplement such testimony by that of other witnesses. The testimony of defendant is conclusive: Auter v. Miller, 18-405; Thorn v. Moore, 21-285.

Nor can plaintiff introduce other evidence to impeach defendant's credibility: Hunt v. Coe, 15-197.

The provision allowing the opposite party to be called to establish a contract which should be in writing does not apply to the testimony of the agent of such party. His testimony cannot be received for that purpose: Burnside v. Rawson, 37-639.

In a particular case, held, that the contract sued upon was sufficiently established by the evidence of one of the defendants to entitle the plaintiff to recover against the defendants thereon, although it was within the statute of frauds and not in writing: Dewey v. Life, 60-361.

If the testimony of the party called as a witness establishes the oral contract, then such contract is as well proven under the statute of frauds as if it had been in writing. Whether such testimony of the party is sufficient to prove the contract is a question of fact for the jury and should not be taken away from them by an instruction: Byerlee v. Mendel, 39-382.

Where the evidence of defendant clearly established an oral contract to convey land, held, that the contract might be enforced: Smith v. Phelps, 32-537.

PROTEST.

4919. Certificate of notary. 3668. The usual protest of a notary public without proof of his signature or notarial seal, is prima facie evidence of what it recites concerning the dishonor and notice of a bill of exchange or promissory note, and a copy from his record, properly certified to by him, shall receive such faith and credit as it is entitled to by the law and custom of merchants. [R., §§ 199, 4011; C., '51, § 2414.]

The certificate of protest is only evidence of notice when it recites that notice was given: Sather v. Rogers, 10-231; Thorp v. Craig, 10-461.

It is only evidence of the facts therein recited, and where it shows that the notice was directed to the indorser at a particular place it will not be presumed that such place was the residence of such indorser: Bradshaw v. Hedge, 10-402.

But a certificate of protest stating that the notary notified the indorsers is sufficient although it does not show that the residences of the several parties are at the places to which the notices were addressed: Fuller v. Dingman, 41-506.

It is not necessary to annex to, or set out in, the notary's certificate, the notice referred to therein, nor need the certificate, in words, formally refer to the seal: Jones v. Berryhill, 25-289.

If the certificate states that notices of protest properly addressed were deposited in the postoffice, it will be presumed that the postage was prepaid: Brooks v. Day, 11-46.

When the certificate of protest states that the notary notified the proper parties in a certain manner, the credit due the certificate will generate the presumption that the mode adopted accomplished the result certified to, unless it affirmatively appear that the method adopted could not have done so; but if the notary only certifies as to the steps taken, then, to make out a prima facie case, it must further appear that such steps would effectuate notice: Wamsley v. Rivers, 34-463.

The fact that the certificate is dated at a time subsequent to that of the dishonor and protest will not render it incompetent: Chatham Bank v. Allison, 15-337.

The protest of a notary is not receivable without his seal, but such defect may be cured by the affixing of the seal by the notary at the trial: Rindskoff v. Malone, 9-540.

The certificate of a notary public as to the protest of a bill or note is not admissible against defendant in a criminal case, as he is entitled to be confronted with the witnesses against him: State v. Reidel, 26-430.

PROCEEDINGS OF OFFICERS AND INFERIOR COURTS.

4920. Presumption. 3669. The future proceedings of all officers, and of all courts of limited and inferior jurisdiction within this state shall, like those of a general and superior jurisdiction, be presumed regular, except in regard to matters required to be entered of record, and except where otherwise expressly declared. [R., § 4120; C., '51, § 2512.]

Presumption as to regularity of official acts: Every legal presumption should be entertained that an officer has done his duty: Cole v. Porter, 4 G. Gr., 510; Goodrich v. Beaman, 37-563.

Such presumption will be entertained in the absence of any showing to the contrary: Budd v. Durall, 36-315; Spiller v. Schofield, 43-571.

Where it is the duty of an officer to do an act, it must be presumed that such duty has been performed: In re Estate of Edwards, 58-431.

There is a presumption that those charged with public trusts act honestly and in good faith: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168.

An act of an officer which may have been within his official powers will be presumed to have been within such powers in the absence of all evidence to the contrary: Winneshiek County v. Maynard, 44-15; Babcock v. Wolf, 70-676.

Official acts, even though ministerial in their nature, must be regarded as prima facie correct: Smith v. District T'p, 42-522.

There is a legal presumption in favor of the due execution of papers emanating from a public office: French v. Keel, 61-143.

Where the return of an officer on a writ of attachment showed a levy upon property, but did not state that the property was that of defendant, held, that the presumption of regularity would obtain in favor of such return: Rowan v. Lamb, 4 G. Gr., 468.

A court will not presume that an officer in the service of process failed to discharge a plain duty imposed upon him by law, nor infer facts inconsistent with the return of the writ, in order to divest rights acquired under it, or defeat the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction: Pursley v. Hays, 22-310.

Where a person in authority is required to do a certain act which could not be omitted without a neglect of duty, the performance of it will be presumed unless the contrary is proved: Dollarhide v. Board of Commissioners, 1 G. Gr., 158.

Therefore, where it was required by statute that commissioners for a particular purpose should be sworn, held, that although in this respect compliance with the statute did not appear in the report of such commissioners, it would be presumed that the law was complied with: Ibid.

It must be presumed that the officers of the court in any particular matter performed their duty unless the contrary appears. Therefore, held, that where the trial of a criminal case was had at a special term of the court, it would be presumed that notice of the holding of such term, as required by law, had been given: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

Where the venue of an affidavit does not appear it will be presumed that the justice of the peace signing it administered the oath in the county in which he was authorized to act: Snell v. Eckerson, 8-234.

This section applies to a proceeding of the board of supervisors in establishing a highway: McBurney v. Graves, 66-314.

Where the tribunal determines that the essential steps to give it jurisdiction have been taken, and makes that determination a matter of record, the statute raises the presumption in favor of the correctness of the determination, but it does not raise the presumption in favor of the jurisdiction of the tribunal in the absence of any determination by it that it had jurisdiction: Ibid.

Section applied: State v. Lanc, 26-223; Lees v. Wetmore, 58-170.

Acts of justice of the peace: It may be presumed in favor of the judgment of a justice of the peace that acts which are shown to have been done were done in such order as was necessary in order that the jurisdiction should be properly exercised: Hodge v. Ruggles, 36-42; Church v. Crossman, 49-444.

While it may be that the decision of a justice of the peace that he has jurisdiction is presumed to be right until the contrary is shown, yet where the assumption upon which the decision is based appears, and the decision is thereby shown to be erroneous, the presumption in favor of the justice's jurisdiction is thereby rebutted: Brown v. Davis, 59-641.

Jurisdiction having once been acquired by a justice of the peace, the presumption is that it continues to judgment, in the absence of a showing to the contrary: Moore v. Reeves, 47-30.

Therefore where judgment was rendered against a garnishee on his answer more than three days after it was filed, held, that it would be presumed that the case was properly continued to the day judgment was rendered: Ibid.

Where a justice has acquired jurisdiction, subsequent proceedings are deemed regular and cannot be collaterally assailed. Therefore, held, that a recital on the justice's docket of continuance by agreement could not be contradicted by affidavits denying such agreement: Caughlin v. Blake, 55-634.

So, also, the recitals of the justice's record as to the time in the day at which default is entered is conclusive as against collateral attack: Cory v. King, 49-365.

The correctness of a judgment as to a question arising in a case of which the justice has jurisdiction cannot be questioned in an action by scire facias on the judgment: Haggarty v. Burr, 22-219.

Where it appears that the justice has rendered a judgment for more than one hundred dollars, as he may do by the consent of the parties, it not being required that such consent shall appear of record, it will be presumed in favor of the judgment that it exists: Schlissman v. Webber, 65-114.

RECORDS OF ANOTHER COURT.

4921. In same county. 3670. The records and papers properly filed in a cause in either the district [or circuit] court of a county, are equally evidence in the other court. Depositions taken for either court may be used in the other with the same effect, subject to like objection, as if taken in such court. [12 G. A., ch. 86, § 9.]

HOW TESTIMONY IS TO BE PROCURED.

4922. Clerks to issue subpoenas. 3671. The clerks of the several courts shall, on application of any person having a cause or any matter pending in court, issue a subpoena for witnesses under the seal of the court, inserting all the names required by the applicant in one subpoena, which may be served by the sheriff, coroner, or any constable of the county, or by the party or any other person. When a subpoena is not served by the sheriff, coroner, or constable, proof of service shall be shown by affidavit; but no costs of serving the same shall be allowed. [R., § 4012.]

4923. To whom directed; duces tecum. 3672. The subpoena shall be directed to the person therein named, requiring him to attend at a particular time or place to testify as a witness, and it may contain a clause directing the witness to bring with him any book, writing, or other thing under his control, which he is bound by law to produce as evidence. [R., § 4013; C., '51, § 2415.]

4924. How far compelled to attend. 3673. Witnesses in civil cases cannot be compelled to attend the district [or circuit] court out of the state where they are served, nor at a distance of more than seventy miles from the place of their residence, or from that where they are served with a subpoena, unless within the same county. No other subpoena but that from the district [or circuit] court can compel his attendance at a greater distance than thirty miles from his place of residence, or of service, if not in the same county. [R., § 4014; C., '51, § 2416.]

The limitation as to the distance beyond which witnesses cannot be required to attend upon subpoena in a civil case does not apply to garnishees, who may be compelled to attend from any distance within the state: Westphal v. Clark, 42-371.

4925. Fees in advance. 3674. Witnesses are entitled to receive in advance, if demanded, their traveling fees to and from the court, together with their fees for one day's attendance. At the commencement of each day after the first, they are further entitled, on demand, to receive the legal fees for that day in advance. If not thus paid they are not compelled to attend or remain as witnesses. [R., § 4015; C., '51, § 2417.]

By appearing, a witness waives the right to demand mileage before testifying: Stockberger v. Lindsey, 65-471.

4926. Contempt. 3675. For a failure to obey a valid subpoena, without a sufficient cause or excuse, or for a refusal to testify after appearance, the delinquent is guilty of contempt of court. He is also liable to the party by whom he was subpoenaed for all consequences of such delinquency, together with fifty dollars additional damages. [R., § 4016; C., '51, § 2418.]

4927. Proceedings for. 3676. Before a witness is thus liable for a contempt for not appearing, he must be served personally with the process, by reading it to him, and by leaving a copy thereof with him, if demanded, and it must be shown that the fees and traveling expenses allowed by law were tendered to him, if required; or it must appear that a copy of the subpoena, if left at his usual place of residence, came into his hands, together with the said fees and traveling expenses above mentioned. [R., § 4017; C., '51, § 2419.]

4928. Serving subpoena. 3677. If a witness conceal himself, or in any other manner attempt to avoid being personally served with a subpoena, any sheriff or constable having the subpoena, may use all necessary and proper means to serve the same, and for that purpose may break into any building or other place where the witness is to be found, having first made known his business and demanded admission. [R., § 4018; C., '51, § 2420.]

4929. Prisoner. 3678. A person confined in any prison in this state, may, by order of any court of record, be required to be produced for oral examination in the county where he is imprisoned, and in a criminal case in any county in the state; but in all other cases his examination must be by a deposition. [R., § 4019.]

Defendant in a criminal action has no absolute right to demand the personal attendance of a convict in the penitentiary or county prison, under an order of court, but the exercise of the power of the court to require the production of such prisoner is discretionary: State v. Kennedy, 20-372.

4930. Deposition of. 3679. While a prisoner's deposition is being taken, he shall remain in the custody of the officer having him in charge, who shall afford reasonable facilities for the taking of the depositions. [R., § 4020.]

PROCURING DEPOSITIONS.

4931. Powers of officer. 3680. When by the laws of any other state or country, testimony may be taken in this state to be used in the courts of such state or country, and also in all cases herein provided for taking depositions, the persons authorized to take such depositions have power to issue subpoenas and compel obedience thereto, to administer oaths, and to do any other act of a court which is necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose for which they are acting. [R., § 4021; C., '51, § 2477.]

4932. Subpoenas. 3681. Subpoenas issued by them are valid to the same extent as those emanating from a justice's court, and may be served and returned in the same manner. [R., § 4022; C., '51, § 2478.]

4933. Officers to serve. 3682. Any sheriff or constable, when called upon for that purpose, shall serve such subpoenas and make return thereof. [R., § 4023; C., '51, § 2479.]

4935. Pleading taken true, or continuance. 3684. Or if he shows by his own testimony or otherwise, that he could not have a full personal knowledge of the transaction, the court may order his pleading to be taken as true; such order, however, is subject to be reconsidered during the term of the court, upon satisfactory reasons being shown for such delinquency. [R., § 4025; C., '51, § 2481.]

The pleading is not to be taken as true unless the court upon application make an order to that effect: Hay v. Frazier, 49-454.

PRODUCTION OF BOOKS AND PAPERS.

4936. How procured. 3685. The district [or circuit] court may, by rule, require the production of any papers or books which are material to the just determination of any cause pending before it, for the purpose of being inspected and copied by or for the party thus calling for them. [R., § 4026; C., '51, § 2423.]

The granting of the rule requiring the party to produce papers lies in the discretion of the court: Sheldon v. Mickel, 40-19; Allison v. Vaughan, 40-421.

Delay or negligence in asking for the rule might be sufficient ground for refusing to grant it: Ibid.

A party cannot be required to produce a document without having notice of such requirement and a reasonable time for its production: Greenough v. Stuldon, 9-593.

The agent of a telegraph company may be required to produce messages: Woods v. Miller, 65-168.

4937. Petition; rule. 3686. The petition for that purpose must state the facts expected to be proved by such books or papers, and that, as the petitioner believes, such books and papers are under the control of the party against whom the rule is sought, and must show wherein they are material. The rule shall thereupon be granted to produce the books and papers, or show cause to the contrary, if the court deems such rule expedient and proper. [R., § 4027; C., '51, § 2424.]

4938. Failure to obey. 3687. On failure to obey the rule, or show sufficient cause for such failure, the same consequences shall ensue as if the party had failed to appear and testify when subpoenaed by the party now calling for the books and papers. [R., § 4028; C., '51, § 2425.]

4939. Writing called for by one party. 3688. Though a writing called for by one party is by the other produced, the party thus calling for it is not obliged to use it as evidence in the case. [R., § 4029; C., '51, § 2426.]

DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

4940. Affidavit. 3689. An affidavit is a written declaration under oath, made without notice to the adverse party. [R., § 4030.]

This clearly implies that an affidavit should be signed by the affiant: Crenshaw v. Taylor, 70-386.

The jurat or certificate need not state the name of the person signing or swearing to the affidavit: Stone v. Miller, 60-243.

It is not necessary that the jurat expressly show that the person sworn is the person who subscribed to the affidavit. A jurat in the following form, "subscribed in my presence and sworn to before me," giving the date, held sufficient: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

The signature to a jurat by an officer writing his name with the designation, "Notary Public," is sufficient without adding the name of the county in and for which he is a notary. The court will take judicial notice of the fact that he is a notary for that county: Ibid.

Where an affidavit is headed with the name of the state and county, and the signature of the notary is authenticated with a seal, such signature is sufficient if it contains the name of the notary with the addition "Notary Public," without stating the state or county for which he is notary: Stone v. Miller, 60-243.

Where the venue of the affidavit is not indicated, it will be presumed that the oath was administered within the county in which the justice of the peace administering it had jurisdiction, that being the county in which the action was pending and in which the pleading was filed: Snell v. Eckerson, 8-284.

Although, in the caption, the affidavit is entitled of one county, while it appears to have been sworn to before a notary public in another county, the presumption is that the notary public took the affidavit within his own jurisdiction, and the caption will not be sufficient to show that it was sworn to without such jurisdiction: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 67-691.

Where an affidavit offered in evidence is authenticated by the signature and seal of a notary public, but the jurat does not refer to the seal, the notary may amend the jurat: Hallett v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 22-259.

4941. Before whom made. 3690. An affidavit may be made within or without this state before any person authorized to administer oaths. [R., § 4035.]

[The word "oaths," in the second line, is "them" in the original rolls, but is here retained as printed in the Code, as probably inserted by the editor by way of correction.]

4942. Out of the state. 3691. Affidavits taken out of the state before any judge or clerk of a court of record, or before a notary public, or a commissioner appointed by the governor of this state to take acknowledgment of deeds in the state where such affidavit is taken, are of the same credibility as if taken within the state. [R., § 4036; C., '51, § 2475.]

The fact that the officer before whom an affidavit is made, out of the state, is authorized to administer oaths may be established alibunde: Levy v. Wilson, 43-605.

While the laws of other states will be presumed to be the same as the laws of this state, requiring the seal of the notary to have engraved thereon the name of his state, yet where the court receives and acts upon an affidavit for change of venue sworn to before a notary public of another state, whose seal does not bear the name of his state, it will be presumed that some showing was made that the seal was such as required by the laws of the state where the jurat was executed: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 67-691.

4943. How compelled. 3692. When a person is desirous of obtaining the affidavit of another who is unwilling to make the same fully, he may apply to any officer competent to take depositions as herein declared, by petition, stating the object for which he desires the affidavit. [R., § 4038; C., '51, § 2480.]

4944. Subpœna issued. 3693. If such officer is satisfied that the object is legal and proper, he shall issue his subpoena to bring the witness before him, and if he fails then to make a full affidavit of the facts within his knowledge to the extent required of him by the officer, the latter may proceed to take his deposition by question and answer in writing in the usual way, which deposition may afterwards be used instead of an ordinary affidavit. [R., § 4039; C., '51, § 2481.]

The party subpoenaed cannot be excused from making the affidavit or answering the questions propounded on the ground that the affidavit desired would not be legally admissible in proceedings for which it is sought. Neither the officer before whom the witness is brought, nor the witness himself, is allowed to determine that question in advance, and a failure to respond to the subpoena or to answer when brought before the officer may be punished as a contempt: Robb v. McDonald, 29-330.

A justice of the peace to whom such application is made has full power to pass upon the question of the legality or propriety of the affidavit sought, and is not without jurisdiction to issue a subpoena to compel such affidavit, though as a matter of law it appears on the face of the petition therefor that it could not, when taken, have any legal use. An order of the justice of the peace imprisoning a witness for contempt in refusing to make the affidavit when properly required will not be inquired into by the supreme court in a habeas corpus proceeding: State ex rel. v. Seaton, 61-563.

But this section is not applicable where the affidavit is sought merely for information. The use for which the affidavit or deposition may be taken is manifestly a legal use as evidence, and the officer should not issue a subpoena where the affidavit required is not ostensibly for such legal use; and if ostensibly for such use, the officer should still be satisfied that it is desired for such use in fact. Therefore, where the affidavit was sought, not for use in a pending proceeding, but to procure information for the purpose of commencing an action, held, that the witness committed for contempt in refusing to obey the subpoena should have been discharged on habeas corpus: Dudley v. McCord, 65-671.

4945. Notice. 3694. The officer thus applied to may, in his discretion, require notice of the taking of such affidavit or deposition to be given to any other person interested in the subject-matter, and allow him to be present and cross-examine such witness. [R., § 4040; C., '51, § 2482.]

4946. Witness produced. 3695. The court or officer to whom any affidavit is presented as a basis for some action, in relation to which any discretion is lodged with such court or officer, may, if deemed proper, require the witness to be brought before some proper officer and subjected to cross-interrogatories by the opposite party. [R., § 4041; C., '51, § 2483.]

Similar provision, see § 4123.

4948. Publications; how proved. 3697. Publications required by law to be made in a newspaper, may be proved by the affidavit of any person having knowledge of the fact, specifying the times when, and the paper in which, the publication was made. But such affidavit must, for the purposes now contemplated, be made within six months after the last day of publication [R., § 4042; C., '51, § 2427.]

As to proof of publication of original notice, see § 3825 and notes.

4949. Posting up papers. 3698. The posting up or service of any notice or other paper required by law, may be proved by the affidavit of any competent witness attached to a copy of said notice or paper, and made within six months of the time of such posting up. [R., § 4043; C., '51, § 2428.]

See McLenon v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 69-330.

4950. Other facts. 3699. Any other fact which is required to be shown by affidavit, and which may be required for future use in any action or other proceeding, may be proved by pursuing the course above indicated, as nearly as the circumstances of the case will admit. [R., § 4044; C., '51, § 2429.]

4951. How perpetuated. 3700. Such proof so made may be perpetuated and preserved for future use, by filing the papers above mentioned in the office of the clerk of the circuit [district] court. And the original affidavit appended to the notice or paper, if there be one, and if not, the affidavit by itself, is presumptive evidence of the facts stated therein, but does not preclude other modes of proof now held sufficient. [R., § 4045; C., '51, § 2430.]

MAPS, PLATS, RECORDS, ENTRIES.

4952. Field-notes and plats. 3701. A copy of the field-notes of any surveyor, or a plat made by him and certified under oath as correct, may be received as evidence to show the shape or dimensions of a tract of land, or any other fact whose ascertainment requires only the exercise of scientific skill or calculation. [R., § 4046; C., '51, § 2431.]

4953. Copies of record and entries. 3702. Duly certified copies of all records and entries, or papers belonging to any public office, or by authority of law filed to be kept therein, shall be evidence in all cases of equal credibility with the original record or papers so filed. [R., § 4047; C., '51, § 2432.]

In an action for a breach of warranty in a deed for land purchased as swamp, held, that a certified abstract from the United States land office was admissible in evidence to show that the land in question was not certified as swamp, and to throw upon defendant the burden of proving that the land had passed under the swamp grant: Shorthill v. Ferguson, 44-249.

Under the provisions of a railroad land grant authorizing the selection of indemnity lands, and an act of congress providing that in such case lists of the land certified by the commissioner of the general land office should be regarded as conveying the fee-simple title, held, that a duly certified copy of the original certified lists of selections under the grant, on file in the office of the commissioner of the general land office, was properly admitted in evidence: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lewis, 53-101.

Where letters were on file in the state land office which would be themselves admissible in evidence, held, that they might be proven by copies certified by the register: Bellows v. Todd, 34-18, 26.

A certified copy of a paper in a public office, but which is of such nature that it is not authorized by law to be kept there, is not receivable in evidence: Morrison v. Coad, 49-571.

Parol evidence is not competent to correct a mistake in a duly certified copy of a record: Monk v. Corbin, 58-503.

A copy of a public document, or what purports to be such copy, found in the custody of a public officer, is not admissible in evidence under the rule admitting public documents, unless it be properly authenticated or proved to be correct: Pfotzer v. Mullaney, 30-197.

As to certified copies of recorded instruments, see § 4910 and notes.

The certificate of the custodian of a record stating its contents is not admissible in proof thereof. Neither will such certificate be received as evidence of the contents of a lost or destroyed record; nor can facts which are required to be of record, but which have been omitted, be proved by the certificate of the officer required to keep such record: Goodrich v. Conrad, 24-254.

The auditor's plat-book, made up from records in the recorder's office, is not admissible in evidence as a duly certified copy of the records of conveyances, to establish the title of the party whose name is entered thereon: Heinrichs v. Terrell, 65-25.

The reports of the register of the state land office are not receivable in evidence: Gordon v. Bucknell, 38-438.

4954. Books of original entries. 3703. The recorder in each of the several counties in this state, shall cause to be procured a book, entitled "copies of original entries," to be kept as a record in his office, in which shall be copied a list of the original entries of land within his county, with name of the person or persons entering the same and the date of such entry, for which he shall receive a reasonable compensation, to be audited and allowed by the board of supervisors of his county. [R., § 4048.]

4955. Copies of. 3704. Said book, containing a copy of such entries, when compared with the originals, and certified to as true copies by the register of the land office at which such original entries were made, shall be deemed a matter of record, and certified copies thereof under the hand of said recorder may be received and read in evidence in all the courts in this state, with like effect as other certified copies of original papers recorded in his office. [R., § 4049.]

4956. Additional entries. 3705. Said recorder shall, from time to time, as he may deem it necessary, procure in the same manner copies of any additional entries, under the same restrictions and with like effect until all the lands in his county shall have been entered, and certified copies of the entries thereof procured. [R., § 4050.]

4958. Maps, etc., in office of surveyor-general. 3707. Copies of all maps, official letters, and other documents in the office of the surveyor-general of the United States, when certified to by that officer according to law, shall be received by the courts of this state as presumptive evidence of the existence of the originals and that said copies are copies of the original, notwithstanding such maps, official letters, or other papers, may themselves be copied. [R., § 4052.]

4959. Certificate as to loss of paper. 3708. The certificate of a public officer that he has made diligent and ineffectual search for a paper in his office, is of the same efficacy in all cases as if such officer had personally appeared and sworn to such facts. [R., § 4053; C., '51, § 2434.]

4960. Duplicate receipt of receiver of land office. 3709. The usual duplicate receipt of the receiver of any land office, or if that be lost or destroyed, or beyond the reach of the party, the certificate of such receiver that the books of his office show the sale of a tract of land to a certain individual, is proof of title equivalent to a patent against all but the holder of an actual patent. [R., § 4054; C., '51, § 2435.]

This section held applicable to the receiver of the Des Moines river land office: Stone v. McMahan, 4 G. Gr., 72.

4961. Certificate of register. 3710. The certificate of the register or receiver of any land office of the United States as to the entry of land within his district, shall be presumptive evidence of title in the person entering to the real estate therein named. [R., § 4055.]

This section relates to the remedy and applies to all actions in the courts of the state whether the land is situated in the state or not: Pierson v. Reed, 16-257.

Where the statute requires an officer to make a statement or certificate in writing, such writing is competent evidence of the fact stated or certified: Clark v. Polk County, 19-248.

4962. Signature presumed genuine. 3711. In the cases contemplated in the last seven sections, the signature of the officer shall be presumed to be genuine, until the contrary is shown. [R., § 4056; C., '51, § 2436.]

JUDICIAL RECORD.

4963. Of this state or federal courts. 3712. A judicial record of this state, or of any of the federal courts of the United States, may be proved by the production of the original, or by a copy thereof certified by the clerk or the person having the legal custody thereof, authenticated by his seal of office, if he have one. [R., § 4057; C., '51, § 2437.]

It is not necessary to account for the original before introducing a copy: Dupont v. Downing, 6-173.

The record of a judgment is sufficiently authenticated if the certificate of the clerk identifies the transcript to be a true copy, and there is a further certificate of the presiding judge that such attestation is in due form of law: Lewis v. Sulliff, 2 G. Gr., 186.

Where a party relies upon a prior adjudication, he should introduce in evidence not only a copy of the judgment but also a copy of the pleadings: Campbell v. Ayers, 6-339.

4964. Of another state. 3713. That of another state may be proved by the attestation of the clerk and the seal of the court annexed, if there be a seal, together with a certificate of a judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate that the attestation is in due form of law. [R., § 4058; C., '51, § 2438.]

The certificate of a judge, whether the presiding officer of the court or not, to the attestation by the clerk, is sufficient: Simons v. Cook, 29-324.

The certificate of the judge is conclusive that the attestation of the record is in due form, and if it appears to be made by a deputy in the name of the principal, it is conclusive as to the authority of the deputy to make such certificate: Greasons v. Davis, 9-219; Young v. Thayer, 1 G. Gr., 196.

Parol evidence may be received to show the practice and usage in the courts of another state, and whether a record conforms thereto, and its effect: Greasons v. Davis, 9-219.

Where a foreign judgment is introduced in evidence on the trial in the court below, and it appears not to be sufficiently formal and authoritative as a judgment on its face to authorize a recovery upon it, the presumption will be on appeal that it was supported by proper evidence to entitle it to faith and credit, unless the contrary appears by affirmative showing: Clemmer v. Cooper, 24-185.

4965. Of a justice of the peace. 3714. The official certificate of a justice of the peace of any of the United States to any judgment and the preliminary proceedings before him, supported by the official certificate of the clerk of any court of record within the county in which such justice resides, stating that he is an acting justice of the peace of that county, and that the signature to his certificate is genuine, is sufficient evidence of such proceedings and judgment. [R., § 4059; C., '51, § 2439.]

The certificate of the clerk should show that the justice of the peace was a justice within the same county, and also that he was an acting justice of the peace at the time of signing the certificate: Guesdorf v. Gleason, 10-495.

The certificate of a retired justice of the peace in relation to his former official proceedings has no more weight than that of a mere stranger: Brown v. Scott, 2 G. Gr., 454.

The successor in office of a retired justice is the proper person to make the certificate here contemplated as to any of the official proceedings of his predecessor shown by the records in his office, and the certificate of the clerk of a court that the justice is an acting justice and his signature genuine is sufficient: Railroad Bank v. Evans, 32-202.

Where in the body of a certificate of a jus-

A copy of the record of the judgment properly authenticated is competent evidence without proof of the official character of the person rendering the judgment: Railroad Bank v. Evans, 32-202.

The method prescribed by act of congress for authenticating a judicial record is not exclusive of that which a state may adopt with reference to such authentication in its own courts: Latterelt v. Cook, 1-1.

A certificate of the clerk of the circuit court of West Virginia, stating that he was the successor of the clerk of the county court of Virginia in which the judgment was rendered before the formation of the state of West Virginia, held competent evidence of that fact and of the existence of the judgment: Darrah v. Watson, 36-116.

The attestation of the copy of the record in another state must be according to the form used in the state from which the record comes: Roop v. Clark, 4 G. Gr., 294.

Attestation of a foreign judgment in the name of the clerk by a deputy, together with the presiding judge's certificate of the official character of such clerk and deputy, and that the certificate is in due form of law, held sufficient: Young v. Thayer, 1 G. Gr., 196.

the justice of the peace he states his official character, the failure to affix his official designation to the signature of the certificate will not affect its validity: Ibid.

The admission in evidence of the transcript from the docket of a justice of the peace in a foreign state, held not error where such transcript was embraced in the certified copy of proceedings in the court of common pleas where the judgment sued on was rendered on appeal: Clemmer v. Cooper, 24-185.

The provisions of the statutes of the United States as to the mode in which the judicial proceedings of a state may be authenticated so as to be given effect in other states refer only to courts of general jurisdiction and not to those of inferior jurisdiction, such as justices of the peace: Gay v. Lloyd, 1 G. Gr., 78.

4966. Of a foreign country. 3715. Copies of records and proceedings in the courts of a foreign country may be admitted in evidence, upon being authenticated as follows:

1. By the official attestation of the clerk or officer in whose custody such records are legally kept; and,
2. By the certificate of one of the judges or magistrates of such court, that the person so attesting is the clerk or officer legally intrusted with the custody of such records, and that the signature to his attestation is genuine; and,

3. By the official certificate of the officer who has the custody of the principal seal of the government under whose authority the court is held, attested by said seal, stating that such court is duly constituted, specifying the general nature of its jurisdiction, and verifying the seal of the court. [R., § 4060; C., '51, § 2440.]

EXECUTIVE AND LEGISLATIVE RECORD.

4967. Executive acts. 3716. Acts of the executive of the United States, or of this or any other state of the Union, or of a foreign government, are proved by the records of the state department of the respective governments, or by public documents purporting to have been printed by order of the legislatures of those governments respectively, or by either branch thereof. [R., § 4061; C., '51, § 2441.]

4968. Proceedings of legislature. 3717. The proceedings of the legislature of this or any other state of the Union, or the United States, or of any foreign government, are proved by the journals of those bodies respectively, or of either branch thereof, and either by copies officially certified by the clerk of the house in which proceeding was had, or by a copy purporting to have been printed by their order. [R., § 4062; C., '51, § 2442.]

The journals of the respective houses of the general assembly are competent evidence to show the proceedings of such houses: Kochler v. Hill, 60-543.

The original acts of the general assembly, deposited with the secretary of state, as provided by law, are the ultimate proof of the statutes, whatever errors there may be in the printed copies of such statutes. The court will inform itself and take judicial notice of the true reading of the statutes as thus shown: Clare v. State, 5-509; commented upon in State v. Donehey, 8-396.

The acts thus deposited are the bills which receive the signatures of the officers, etc., and behind them it is impossible for any court to go for the purpose of ascertaining what the law is: Duncombe v. Prindle, 12-1.

The enrolled bill, duly signed and filed in the office of the secretary of state, is at least presumptive evidence of its due enactment, and the court will take judicial notice of what appears from such record to be the law. The fact that the journal of one of the houses of the legislature fails to show that the statute passed such house will not be sufficient to overcome such presumption: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

4969. Printed copies of the statutes. 3718. Printed copies of the statute laws of this or any other of the United States, or of congress, or of any foreign government, purporting or proved to have been published under the authority thereof, or proved to be commonly admitted as evidence of the existing laws in the courts of such state or government, shall be admitted in the courts of this state as presumptive evidence of such laws. [R., § 4063; C., '51, § 2443.]

Printed copies of the statute laws of a state purporting to have been published under its authority are admissible as evidence of such laws: Webster v. Rees, 23-269.

But the method here provided does not exclude other methods, such as producing copies duly authenticated under the seal of the state: Latterett v. Cook, 1-1.

The testimony of witnesses, however, would not be admissible to prove the statutes of another state: Ibid.

Parol evidence of a witness familiar with the laws of another state is not admissible for the purpose of showing the powers of a notary public under the statutes of that state: State v. Cross, 68-180.

Parol evidence of a person familiar with the practice in other states may be received to show that certain books are commonly received by the courts of that state as evidence of the statute laws thereof: Greasons v. Davis, 9-219.

Courts do not take judicial notice of the statutes of another state. If a party relies upon such statutes, he must plead them as any other fact; and it will not be sufficient to refer to them by their title or date of approval, nor by stating what are their general provisions and requirements: Carey v. Cincinnati & C. R. Co., 5-357; Taylor v. Runyan, 9-522.

The presumption is that the laws of a foreign state are the same as our own. If it is claimed that they are different from our own, that fact must be averred and proved: Bean v. Briggs, 4-464; Crafts v. Clark, 31-77; S. C., 38-237; Sayre v. Wheeler, 31-112; Sayre v. Wheeler, 32-559; Stephens v. Williams, 46-540; Church v. Crossman, 49-444; Webster v. Hunter, 50-215; Neese v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 55-604; Hadley v. Gregory, 57-157.

In a prosecution for bigamy, evidence of a marriage in another state which is sufficient in form to be valid under the laws of this state will be sufficient, the statutes of the state where the marriage was celebrated being presumed to be the same as those of this state in the absence of proof to the contrary: State v. Nadal, 69-478.

The presumption is that the rule of law on a particular question is the same in another state as in this state: Leiber v. Union Pacific R. Co., 49-688.

4970. Written law; unwritten law. 3719. The public seal of the state or county affixed to a copy of the written law or other public writing, is also admissible as evidence of such law or writing respectively. The unwritten laws of any other state or government may be proved as facts by parol evidence, and also by the books of reports of cases adjudged in their courts. [R., § 4064; C., '51, § 2444.]

4971. Ordinances of any city or town. 3720. The printed copies of the ordinances of any municipal corporation published by its authority, and transcripts of any ordinances or of any act or proceeding of a municipal corporation recorded in any book, or entries on any minutes or journals kept under the direction of such municipal corporation, and certified by its clerk, shall be received in evidence for any purpose for which the original ordinances, books, minutes, or journals would be received and with as much effect. The clerk shall furnish such transcripts, and he shall be entitled to charge therefor at the rate that the clerk of the district court is entitled to charge for transcripts of records from that court. [R., § 1076.]

[The provisions of this section are by § 908 made applicable to cities under special charter.]

In a proceeding under a city ordinance it is competent to prove publication thereof by introducing the original ordinance with a certificate of the clerk that it was regularly enacted and published as required. Such evidence is original, not secondary: Des Moines v. Casady, 21-570.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to identify a certain book as the ordinance book of a city: Ottumwa v. Schaub, 52-515.

Entries in a record book of a board of directors of a district township, held sufficiently verified in a particular case: Cooper v. Nelson, 38-440.

As to courts taking judicial notice of city ordinances, see notes to § 662.

DEPOSITIONS.

4972. When taken and by whom. 3721. After the commencement of a civil action or other civil proceeding, if a witness resides within this state but in a different county from the place of trial, or is about to go beyond the reach of a subpoena, or is for any other cause expected to be unable to attend court at the time of trial, the party wishing his testimony, may, whenever he deems it expedient, take his deposition in writing before any person having authority to administer oaths; and if the action is by equitable proceedings and to be tried on written evidence, then, without any other reason therefor, either party may so take the deposition of any witness. [R., § 4065; C., '51, § 2445.]

Whether the reason shown for taking the deposition is a valid one or not, if objection is not made to the taking, it may be read if the witness is not in court: Cook v. Blair, 50-128.

Where a deposition is taken upon notice, and the adverse party appears and does not object to the want of statutory ground, the objection for want of such ground for taking the deposition may be deemed waived, but the deposition of a witness or the transcript of his evidence, taken in short-hand on a former trial, is not admissible in a law action without some statutory ground for taking his deposition appears or such objection is waived: Baldwin v. St. Louis, K. & N. R. Co., 68-37.

That the grounds must appear in the deposition, see § 4994 and notes.

As to introduction of depositions when taken, see § 5002 and notes.

4973. Notice. 3722. Reasonable notice of the name of a witness and the time and place when and where the same will be taken, must be given to the opposite party; but if notices are given in the same case by the same party, and of the taking of depositions at different places upon the same day, they shall be invalid; and no party shall be required to take depositions on the day of the general election, or on the fourth day of July. [R., § 4066; C., '51, § 2446; 13 G. A., ch. 167, § 34.]

Where the notice stated the place for taking the deposition as the office of "Squire Moore," and the certificate showed that it was taken at the office of "Enos Moore," held, that the notice was insufficient in that respect, and the deposition was properly suppressed: McClintock v. Crick, 4-453.

Objection to the sufficiency of the notice is waived by appearing and cross-examining the witness: Nevan v. Roup, 8-207.

Where a party to an action dies after notice is served to take depositions, but before they are taken, they are illegal and should be stricken from the files on motion: Kershman v. Swihela, 59-93.

Parties who have been properly served with notice of the taking of a deposition cannot object to it because other parties were not notified: Glenn v. Glenn, 17-498.

Stating name of witness: The name of the witness whose testimony is to be taken should be stated in the notice: Pulmer v. Branch of State Bank, 16-321.

If there is a material difference between the name of the witness as given in the notice and that of the person whose deposition is taken, the deposition may be suppressed on motion: Strayer v. Wilson, 54-565.

Where an agreement was made to take the deposition of S. M. Kinne, and the deposition of Sally E. McKinne was taken, held, that it was properly suppressed upon motion: Glenn v. Gleason, 61-28.

4074. On commission. 3723. The deposition of a witness residing out of the county, may be taken before one or more commissioners on written interrogatories. [R., § 4067; C., '51, § 2447.]

If the witness resides out of the county, but within the state, his deposition may be taken either on commission or on notice; if he resides out of the state, it can only be on commission; if within the county, it must be by notice: Fabian v. Davis, 5-456.

If the witness resides out of the state, but his deposition can be taken within the county where suit is pending, it may be taken on notice, and need not be by commission: Anderson v. Easton, 16-56.

4975. Commissioner selected. 3724. The party wishing to take such deposition may select any of the officers mentioned in the next section as such commissioners, or the parties may agree upon, or the court appoint in the commission, any other individual for that purpose. [R., § 4068; C., '51, § 2448.]

[The word "party," in the first line, is erroneously printed "officer" in the Code.]

4976. Who may act. 3725. The clerk, or any judge of any court of record, or any commissioners appointed by the governor of this state to take acknowledgment of deeds in another state, or any notary public, or any consular or consular agent of the United States, may be selected and appointed by the party such commissioner, either by the name of office of such officer, or by his individual name and official style, and the name of the court of which such constituted commissioner is clerk or judge, and the name of the state and county; or, if without the United States and Canada, the name of the state and town or city in which such commissioner of deeds, notary, or consul or consular agent resides, must be stated in the notice and in the commission issued. [R., § 4069; C., '51, § 2449.]

A commission directed to "any notary public within and for" any certain county and state is sufficient to comply with the requirements of the statute: Sheriff v. Hull, 37-174.

In a commission to take a deposition in the United States or Canada it is sufficient to name the county and state in which the commissioner resides. It is not necessary to name the city or town: Lyon v. Barrows, 13-428.

A mistake in the title of the court of which the commissioner was clerk, and in the name of such clerk, held fatal: Jones v. Smith, 6-229.

Where the commission was directed to the "clerk of the district court of Morgan county," etc., and the deposition was taken and certified by the "clerk of the court of common pleas" of that county, held, that the deposition should have been suppressed: Plummer v. Roads, 4-587.

But if it were made to appear in any sufficient manner that there was no district court such as that mentioned in the notice, and that the court of common pleas was a court of the same character and jurisdiction, the objection to the deposition would not be sufficient: Ibid.

Where a commission to take depositions was directed "To any notary public in and for the county of Baltimore, the state of Maryland," and the depositions were taken by a person designating himself as "a notary public of the state of Maryland, duly commissioned and qualified, residing in the city of Baltimore and the state of Maryland," held, that the depositions should be excluded, and that parol evidence was not admissible to show that notaries public in the city of Baltimore were notaries for the whole state: State v. Cross, 68-180.

It is not proper to select and direct a commission in the alternative to several of the officers mentioned by statute: Levally v. Harmon's Admir, 20-533.

If a notary before whom depositions are taken is such an officer de facto, they cannot be suppressed on the ground that he had not properly qualified and was not such officer de jure: Keeney v. Leas, 14-464.

4977. Qualification. 3726. None of the above named officers are permitted to take the depositions aforesaid, by virtue of a commission directed to him merely as such officer, unless within the limits to which his official jurisdiction extends. [R., § 4070; C., '51, § 2450.]

4978. Notice; action before a justice. 3727. Reasonable notice must be given the adverse party of a time when a commission will be sued out of the office of the clerk of the court in which the action is pending; if such action is in an inferior court, then from the office of the clerk of the circuit [district] court, for taking the deposition of the witness, naming him, which notice must be accompanied with a copy of the interrogatories to be asked such witness. [R., §§ 4071, 4092; C., '51, §§ 2450, 2465.]

As to notice, see notes to § 4973.

4979. Cross-interrogatories. 3728. At or before the time thus fixed, the opposite party may file cross-interrogatories. If cross-interrogatories are not filed, the clerk shall file the following:

1. Are you directly or indirectly interested in this action? and if interested, explain the interest you have;

2. Are all your statements in the foregoing answers made from your personal knowledge? and if not, do your answers show what are made from your personal knowledge, and what are from information, and the source of that information? if not, now show what is from information, and give its source;

3. State everything you know concerning the subject of this action, favorable to either party. [R., § 4072; C., '51, § 2452.]

4980. Rules. 3729. Subject to the regulations herein contained, the court may establish farther rules for taking depositions and all other acts connected therewith. [R., § 4077; C., '51, § 2454.]

NOTICE — SERVICE OF.

4981. Reasonable notice. 3730. The notice hereinbefore mentioned, is at least, when served on the attorney, ten days, and when served on the party within the county, five days; if served on the party anywhere else, the notice shall be that required under other similar circumstances in the service of an original notice; and when depositions are to be taken in pursuance of the first of the above methods, one day in addition must be allowed for every thirty miles' travel from the place where the notice is served, to that where the depositions are to be taken. No party shall be required to take depositions when the court is in actual session. [R., § 4073; C., '51, § 2453.]

When service is on a party, the additional days for the distance of travel as provided by statute are to be added to the five days; and, in all cases, in computing the time, the first day is to be excluded, and the last included: Richardson v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 8-260.

The five days' notice referred to by statute is not intended to mean five clear days: Bonney v. Cocks, 61-303.

Where it does not appear that any travel is necessary from the place where the party lives or the place where notice is served to the place where the deposition is to be taken, it should not be suppressed for insufficiency of notice on account of want of allowance for time of travel: Adams v. Peck, 4-551.

The provisions of this section, with reference to the time of notice, relate to the county in which the depositions are to be taken and not to the county in which the action is pending: Kennedy v. Rosier, 71-671.

4982. How served. 3731. The notice, or notice and copy of interrogatories, may be served by the same persons on the same persons, in the same manner, and may be returned, and the return shall be authenticated in the same way, as should be an original notice in the same cause when served other than by publication. [R., § 4074.]

4983. On attorney. 3732. It may also be served personally on any attorney of the adverse party of record in the cause. [R., § 4075.]

4984. By filing in clerk's office. 3733. Whenever the adverse party has been notified by publication only, and has not appeared, he shall be deemed served with the notice, or the notice and interrogatories, by the filing of the same with the clerk in the cause. [R., § 4076.]

Depositions taken upon such notice as here provided are admissible on a retrial of the cause after default is set aside, as provided in § 4084. The fact that such depositions were taken without any cross-examination by defendant will not exclude them: Watson v. Russell, 18-79.

MANNER OF TAKING DEPOSITIONS.

4985. Commission; form of. 3734. The commission issues in the name of the court and under its seal. It must be signed by the clerk, and need contain nothing but the authority conferred upon the commissioner, instructions to guide him, and a statement of the cause and court in which the testimony is to be used, and a copy of the interrogatories on each side appended. [R., § 4078; C., '51, § 2455.]

It is not essential that the notice and interrogatories be on file in the clerk's office on the day fixed for the commission to issue. The opposite party having been served with a copy of the interrogatories, the filing of the original interrogatories is not necessary to enable him to file his cross-interrogatories. A delay of seven days in issuing a commission after the date fixed in the notice, held not such a defect as to warrant the exclusion of the deposition when taken: Bonney v. Cocke, 61-303.

If it be shown that the commission is issued by the clerk, under the seal of the court, it will be presumed to have issued by authority of the court, which, for all practical purposes, is the same as if it had issued in its name: Plummer v. Roads, 4-587.

As to the effect of unimportant deviations, see § 4992 and notes.

4986. How taken. 3735. The person before whom any of the depositions above contemplated are taken, must cause the interrogatories propounded, whether written or oral, to be written out, and the answers thereto to be inserted immediately underneath the respective questions. The answers must be in the language, as nearly as practicable, of the witness, if either party requires it. The whole being read over by or to the witness, must be by him subscribed and sworn to in the usual manner. [R., § 4079.]

A deposition in which the questions and answers were written out by the attorney of one of the parties was held to have been properly suppressed, where it appeared that the opposite party was not present and did not consent thereto: Hurst v. Larpin, 21-484.

Where the notice stated that the deposition would be taken between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 6 P. M., and it was in fact completed and the witness was gone before 1 A. M., at which time the attorney for the opposite party was present to examine the witness, held, that it was receivable in evidence, no showing of bad faith or improper conduct being made, and it not appearing what the opposite party expected to prove by his cross-examination: Scharfenburg v. Bishop, 35-60.

4987. Exhibits appended. 3736. All exhibits produced before the person taking the deposition or proved or referred to by any witness, or correct copies thereof, must be appended to the depositions and returned with them, unless sufficient reasons be shown for not so doing. [R., § 4080; C., '51, § 2457.]

A deposition should not be suppressed because of failure to attach as exhibits certain deeds and notes incidentally referred to by the witness, but not in his control or forming the basis of the action, and about the contents of which there is no dispute: Lyon v. Barrows, 13-428.

A witness may embody in his deposition, by way of exhibit, answers made in another deposition, although the opposite party was not a party to the taking of such other deposition: Bixby v. Carshaddon, 63-164

4988. Certificate. 3737. The person taking the deposition shall attach his certificate thereto, stating that it was subscribed and sworn to by the deponent at the time and place therein mentioned. The whole, including the commission and interrogatories, when any such were issued, must then be sealed up and returned to the clerk of the proper county by mail, unless some other mode be agreed upon between the parties. [R., § 4081; C., '51, § 2458.]

The certificate of the officer must show that the requirements of the statute with relation to the taking of depositions, such as, for instance, that the deposition has been read to the witness before signing, have been complied with; and held, that a certificate merely showing the fact of signing and swearing, and the time and place thereof, was not sufficient: Ball v. Sykes, 70-525.

The person executing the commission and making a return of his doings should appear to be the person commissioned, and should so appear of record from the certificate appended to and returned with the commission; but where the commission was issued to Fred. R.—, and the certificate was signed F. A. R.—, held, that the presumption that the commission was sent to the person named therein, and the certificate signed by a name which might be that of the person to whom it was sent, were sufficient to show that the commission was properly executed; also held, that the re-issuance of the commission on an order of the court, in order that the proper return might be made, was not error, no prejudice being shown: Byington v. Moore, 62-470.

Where it appears from the caption of a deposition that it was taken before the proper officer, in the proper county, and that the witness was first duly sworn, and from the certificate that the deposition was read over by said witness, and subscribed and sworn to by said deponent therein, it sufficiently appears that the statute has been complied with: Vaughn v. Smith, 58-553.

The officer taking the deposition may, if his certificate is defective in not showing facts essential to render the deposition receivable in evidence, return an amended certificate, which, in the absence of any showing or complaint that it does not state the facts, may be accepted as true, and this may be done even after the filing of a motion to suppress the deposition for the defects in the first certificate: McKinley v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 44-314.

The notary's certificate should be authenticated with his seal: Stephens v. Williams, 46-540.

4989. Neither party to be present. 3738. Where a deposition is taken upon interrogatories, neither party, nor his agent or attorney, shall be present at the examination of a witness, unless both parties are present or represented by an agent or attorney, and the certificate shall state such fact if party or agent is present. [R., § 4082.]

Where the statutory provision, that neither a party nor his agent nor attorney shall be present at the examination of a witness whose deposition is taken upon written interrogatories unless both parties are present or represented, has been violated, prejudice will be presumed to result therefrom, at least in the absence of a showing to the contrary: Sheriff v. Hull, 37-174.

4990. Opened; custody. 3739. The depositions when thus returned, must be opened by the clerk and placed on file in his office, after which he shall at any time furnish any person with an attested copy of the same upon payment of the customary fees, but must not allow them to be taken from his office previous to the next term of the court, unless by the mutual written consent of the parties. [R., § 4083; C., '51, § 2459.]

Failure of the clerk to make entry on the appearance docket of the fact of filing a deposition will not prevent its being introduced in evidence: Byington v. Moore, 62-470.

Where depositions were allowed to be taken out in violation of such provision, but for an honest purpose, and the violation was merely technical and without prejudice, held, that the subsequent admission of the deposition in evidence was not sufficient error to warrant a reversal: Wolverton v. Ellis, 18-413.

It is not a ground for suppression of a deposition that it has been taken from the clerk's office by the attorney of the opposite party during the next term of court after filing: Hogaboom v. Price, 53-703.

A deposition taken by one party may be introduced in evidence by the other: See notes to § 5002.

4991. Returned by mail. 3740. The depositions when thus returned by mail, must be directed to the clerk of the court. They shall state on the outside of the envelope the title of the cause in which they are to be used. [R., § 4084; C., '51, § 2460.]

4992. Unimportant deviations. 3741. Unimportant deviations from any of the above directions, shall not cause the depositions to be excluded where no substantial prejudice could be wrought to the opposite party by such deviation. [R., § 4085; C., '51, § 2461.]

A mistake merely clerical in the date named in the caption, held not sufficient to exclude the deposition; but a mistake in the commission as to the title of the court of which the commissioner was clerk, and in the name of the clerk, held fatal: Jones v. Smith, 6-229.

The fact that the notice and commission stated the name of the witness in full, while the deposition only set out the initials of his first name, held not sufficient to justify the suppression of the deposition: Grimes v. Martin, 10-347.

As to sufficiency of commission, etc., see § 4985 and notes.

4993. Authentication of. 3742. Where depositions are directed to be taken before a judge or justice of the peace, merely by his name of office, the return must contain an authentication by the clerk of the proper court, under his seal of office, verifying the fact that the person who took the deposition is really such officer. [R., § 4086; C., '51, § 2462.]

4994. Deposition to show reason for taking. 3743. The deposition in each of the above cases must show that the witness is a non-resident of the county, or such other fact as renders the taking of the deposition legal, and no such deposition shall be read on the trial, if, at the time, the witness himself is produced in court. [R., § 4087; C., '51, § 2463.]

Whether the reason shown for taking the deposition is a valid one or not, if objection is not made to the taking, it may be read if the witness is not in court: Cook v. Blair, 50-128.

If the deposition shows that the witness is a non-resident, that is sufficient, although the witness states that he expects to be present at the trial; and unless he is actually present the deposition should not be excluded: Nevan v. Roup, 8-207.

Where the ransom given for taking a deposition was that the witness did not expect to be able to attend the next term of court, but the cause did not come on for trial until the second term of court after the deposition was taken, held, that it was improper to admit such deposition in evidence without a showing of some reason why witness was not present at the trial: Sax v. Davis, 71-406.

4995. In justice's court. 3744. Depositions taken to be used in a justice's court, shall be transferred to the court to which the cause is appealed, and used on the trial of such appeal in the same manner as if regularly taken therein. [R., § 4093; C., '51, § 2466.]

Objections to depositions other than for incompetency or irrelevancy should be made in the justice's court, and should not be sustained if made for the first time on appeal: Alverson v. Bell, 13-308.

PERPETUATING TESTIMONY.

4996. Manner. 3745. The testimony of a witness may be perpetuated in the following manner. [R., § 4094.]

4997. Petition; statements. 3746. The applicant shall file in the office of the clerk of the district [or circuit] court, a petition, to be verified, in which shall be set forth specially, the subject-matter relative to which testimony is to be taken, and the names of the persons interested, if known to the applicant; and if not known, such general description as he can give of such persons, as heirs, devisees, alienees, or otherwise. The petition shall also state the names of the witnesses to be examined, and the interrogatories to be propounded to each; that the applicant expects to be a party to an action in a court of this state, in which such testimony will, as he believes, be material, and the obstacles preventing the immediate commencement of the action, where the applicant expects to be the plaintiff. [R., § 4095.]

Where, in a proceeding to perpetuate testimony, the petition stated the name of the person interested as the "C. B. & Q. R. R. Co.," held, that it was not a sufficient designation of the corporation whose name was the "Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company" so as to render the evidence taken in such proceeding afterwards admissible as against such corporation: Accola v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70-185.

4998. Order of court or judge. 3747. The court, or the judge thereof, may forthwith make an order allowing the examination of such witnesses. The order shall prescribe the time and place of the examination; how long the parties interested shall be notified thereof, and the manner in which they shall be notified. [R., § 4096.]

4999. Cross-interrogatories. 3748. When it appears satisfactorily to the court or judge that the parties interested cannot be personally notified, such court or judge shall appoint a competent attorney to examine the petition and prepare and file cross-interrogatories to those contained therein. The witnesses shall be examined upon the interrogatories of the applicant, and upon cross-interrogatories where they are required to be prepared, and no others shall be propounded to them; nor shall any statement be received which is not responsive to some of them. The attorney filing the cross-interrogatories shall be allowed a reasonable fee therefor, to be taxed in the bill of costs. [R., § 4097.]

5000. Before whom taken. 3749. Such depositions shall be taken before some one authorized by law to take depositions, or before some one specially authorized by the court or judge, and shall be returned to the clerk's office of the court in which the petition is filed. [R., § 4098.]

5001. Court or judge to approve. 3750. The court or judge, if satisfied that the depositions have been properly taken and as herein required, shall approve the same and order them to be filed; and if a trial be had between the parties named in the petition, or their privies or successors in interest, such depositions, or certified copies thereof, may be given in evidence by either party where the witnesses are dead or insane, or where their attendance for oral examination cannot be obtained as required; but such depositions shall be subjected to the same objections for irrelevancy and incompetency as may be made to depositions taken pending an action. [R., § 4099.]

[The word "taken," in the last line, is erroneously printed "therein" in the printed Code.]

EXCEPTIONS TO DEPOSITIONS.

5002. Notice of filing; exceptions. 3751; 17 G. A., ch. 26. The clerk shall, forthwith, after filing depositions in his office, issue a notice of the filing of such depositions, reciting therein the title of the cause, names of witnesses, and the date of filing such depositions, and serve the same upon the attorneys of the parties in the action therein recited. Said notice shall be deemed duly served, when the clerk shall have deposited copies of the same in the postoffice at the place where such cause is pending for trial, duly directed to the postoffice address of the respective attorneys for the parties in such action, which notice shall be so mailed by the clerk on the day he filed such deposition; and if the postoffice address of any of the attorneys of the parties is unknown to the clerk, he shall then deposit said notice, addressed to such attorney or attorneys, at the postoffice where such cause is then pending for trial. No exceptions to depositions other than for incompetency or irrelevancy shall be regarded, unless made by motion filed by the morning of the second day of the first term held after the depositions have been filed by the clerk; provided, such depositions have been filed three days prior thereto. If the depositions are afterwards received during such term, such motion shall be filed by the morning of the third day after such depositions are filed. All motions to suppress depositions must be filed before the cause is reached for trial.

Objections: An objection that a question propounded to the witness on the taking of his deposition is leading cannot be taken after the deposition is returned into court and offered in evidence. It should be made when the deposition is taken: Keeney v. Chilis, 4 G. Gr., 416; Mumma v. McKee, 10-107.

The better rule is to require that objections to the form of interrogatories proposed, where the deposition is to be taken by commission, should be made before the commission issues: Jones v. Smith, 6-229.

Motions to suppress depositions are to be made before the commencement of the trial: Frazier v. Smith, 10-591; Bays v. Herring, 51-286.

Such requirement as to time for filing exceptions is applicable to the objection that questions in the deposition are improper or do not call for the best evidence: Nelson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-564.

This requirement is applicable to a motion to suppress a portion of a deposition on the ground that it is not proper cross-examination. The mere noting of the objection on the deposition at the time it is taken is not sufficient: Johnson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 51-25.

This statutory provision held applicable to an objection that the statutory cross-interrogatories were not answered in a deposition taken upon commission, and also where it was objected that copies of notes referred to in the answers were not attached: Harris Mfg. Co. v. Marsh, 49-11.

An entry in the notice book of the court purporting to show the filing of depositions which are not actually filed will not limit the time of filing motion to suppress such depositions; and such motion may be made after the case has been called for trial where the depositions have not previously been filed: Accola v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70-185.

An objection to a deposition for defect in the notice, first interposed when it is offered in evidence on the trial, will not be regarded, although exception was taken to the notice before the commission issued: Pilmer v. Branch of State Bank, 16-321.

Where the attorney, on the day that the cause was called for trial, asked time in which to file objections, and it appeared that the depositions had been on file more than thirty-six hours, and it did not appear but that the attorney had had knowledge of such fact, held, that his application was properly overruled: Byington v. Moore, 62-470.

Objection to the admissibility of the evidence of a witness who is incompetent, as where a husband or wife is called to testify against the other, should be made at the time the witness is called, and is too late if not interposed until the end of the deposition or when it is offered to be read in evidence on the trial: Watson v. Riskamire, 45-231; Greedy v. McGee, 55-759.

Where, as soon as it was apparent in the course of taking a deposition that certain testimony therein was incompetent, the opposite party moved to strike such testimony out, and had such motion entered by the notary taking the deposition, held, that the objection was taken in time and might be considered: Leather v. Ross, 74-630.

An objection to the competency of the deposition, where the witness is claimed to be incompetent because the action is by an administrator, made at the time of the trial, cannot be considered where the same deposition has been received in a previous trial in the same case without objection: McMillan v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 56-421.

An objection to testimony on the ground that it relates to a personal transaction between the witness and decedent in an action by or against an administrator is an objection to competency, and therefore not within the statutory provision requiring that objections other than for incompetency or irrelevancy shall be made on the second day of the first term after the deposition is filed: Burton v. Baldwin, 61-283.

* The objection that the witness, although examined before a notary public in this state, is not a resident of this state, must be deemed waived if not taken when the residence of the witness is first disclosed; and where the counsel for the adverse party has been present and interposed no objection to the taking of the deposition until it has been signed, the objection cannot be maintained: Burrows v. Stryker, 47-477.

Objection to a part of the deposition on the ground that it is not proper cross-examination is too late if not made until the deposition is offered in evidence: Bixby v. Carskaddon, 63-164.

Where exceptions to questions and answers were filed with the notary taking the deposition, but it did not appear that the same were brought to the attention of the court within the time required by statute, held, that they could not afterwards be relied upon: Neimeyer v. Cass County Bank, 42-124.

Where a deposition is taken for use in a justice's court, objections thereto other than for incompetency or irrelevancy should be made in the justice's court, and cannot be made for the first time when the case is tried on appeal: Alverson v. Bell, 13-308.

An objection relating to the legality of the proof at the time it is offered cannot be required to be made at the time of taking the deposition: Horseman v. Todhunter, 12-230.

Exclusion of depositions: The mere fact that depositions in an equity case are filed after the time within which by order of the court the party has been required to file them is not sufficient ground for striking them from the files in the trial of the case: Sweet v. Brown, 61-669.

It will not constitute reversible error that a deposition is received which is taken after the time allowed to the party for taking depositions, when it appears that additional time was also allowed to the other party for the same purpose: Gardner v. Trenary, 65-646.

A deposition should not be excluded unless objection is made thereto: Crick v. McClintic, 4 G. Gr., 290.

A general objection to a deposition, a portion of which is properly admissible, is insufficient: Whitaker v. Sigler, 44-419.

The overruling of a motion to suppress a deposition is error without prejudice where the witness testifies in person on the trial and such testimony is more favorable to the party complaining than that contained in the deposition: Curry v. Allen, 60-387.

Striking out portion of deposition: The court cannot, upon motion, strike out a portion of an interrogatory in a deposition, leaving the answer standing: Pelamourges v. Clark, 9-1.

A question and answer in a deposition should not be suppressed entirely where they are proper as to one matter referred to therein, but embrace something which is improper: Adae v. Zangs, 41-536.

Matters stated in answers to interrogatories in a deposition held to be such as not called for by the question and therefore subject to be stricken out on motion: Hendricks v. Wallis, 7-224.

The rule requiring an answer to be responsive to the interrogatory should be substantially enforced: McCarver v. Nealey, 1 G. Gr., 360.

Introduction of deposition: A deposition need not be introduced by the party taking it, but the other party may introduce it if he so desire: Hale v. Gibbs, 43-380; Wheeler v. Smith, 13-564; Pelamourges v. Clark, 9-1, 16; Crick v. McClintic, 4 G. Gr., 290.

Depositions properly taken may be introduced by either party for the purpose of establishing any material point in the case: Brown v. Byam, 65-374.

A stipulation that a deposition when taken shall be receivable in evidence upon the trial of any case pending in the court named, between the same parties, will render a deposition taken in one such case admissible in any other: Holmes v. Budd, 11-186.

The party on whose behalf a deposition has been taken cannot read a portion thereof and omit other portions. The entire deposition, so far as competent and pertinent, should be read or none: Kilbourne v. Jennings, 40-473.

A deposition taken by a party is under his control, and, although he cannot withdraw it from the files, he can withhold it at pleasure, or any part of it, but the opposite party may introduce it in evidence if he sees fit, or a portion thereof not introduced by the party taking it: Hale v. Gibbs, 43-380.

It is not error to allow a party to read a portion of the deposition of the opposite party, taken by him, where it contains an admission: Van Horn v. Smith, 59-142.

One party may introduce a deposition taken by his adversary, but which such adversary declines to introduce. If the witness has been examined as to different transactions, a party introducing the deposition may introduce such portions of it as touch one or more portions of the transaction, and decline to introduce it as to others. But he cannot be permitted to introduce a portion of it as to any given subject while declining to introduce all that the witness has said upon that subject: Citizens' Bank v. Rhutaset, 67-316.

Depositions taken in a former action may be introduced in a subsequent action between the same parties without notice that such depositions will be offered in the subsequent action: Shaul v. Brown, 28-37.

Depositions taken in one action may be used in a subsequent action between the privies of the parties to the former action: Atkins v. Anderson, 63-739.

But a party should not be permitted to use depositions upon the trial of one cause which have been taken in another without having filed them in the cause for which he proposes to use them or obtained leave before the commencement of the trial to so use them. Otherwise the opposite party would not have the opportunity which the statute contemplates of taking exception to such depositions: Searle v. Richardson, 67-170.

5003. Hearing. 3752. The court shall, on motion of either party, hear and decide the questions arising on exceptions to depositions before the commencement of the trial. [R., § 4090; 10 G. A., ch. 85, § 4.]

5004. Errors waived. 3753. Errors of the court in its decision upon exception to depositions are waived, unless excepted to. [R., § 4091.]

5005. Costs. 3754. In all cases of taking depositions as hereinbefore provided, the costs thereof must be paid in the first place by the party at whose instance they are taken, subject like other costs to be taxed against the failing party in the suit. [R., § 4100; C., '51, § 2474.]

PUBLIC PRINTER AND BINDER

Sections 3764 to 3768 are repealed. See § 136a.

5019. Prices for printing. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 23. The state printer shall be paid the following prices for all work done for the state in an acceptable manner, as hereinbefore provided and no more.

(a) For composition on laws, journals, reports, circulars and all other printed matter, except blanks, fifty cents per thousand "ems" and seventy cents per thousand for figure work when figures are arranged in columns and three or more justifications are required, and ninety cents per thousand "ems" for rule and figure work. Provided, plain indexes such as those of the statutes of this state shall be reckoned as ordinary composition.

(b) For book press work the compensation shall be two dollars and fifty cents for the first one thousand impressions of sixteen pages and one dollar and fifty cents per thousand for each additional one thousand impressions from the same form. If in finishing a job of press work it shall be necessary to print an eight-page form the compensation shall be the same as for a sixteen-page form, and if there shall not be one thousand impressions in any one book form the compensation shall be the same as for one thousand. No extra charge shall be allowed for dry pressing of sheets which shall be done in all cases when so directed by the secretary of state.

(c) For printing blanks on one side of a sheet of folio post or larger paper two dollars and fifty cents for the first one hundred impressions, and seventy-five cents per hundred for each additional one hundred impressions up to five hundred; each additional hundred above five hundred, forty cents per one hundred. On paper smaller than folio post two dollars for first one hundred impressions and fifty cents per one hundred for each additional one hundred impressions up to five hundred, each additional one hundred, thirty cents. Where both sides of a blank can be printed at once only one impression shall be paid for. Provided, that when the blank contains over one thousand ems of composition, pica or smaller measure, such additional composition shall be paid for as provided in subdivision (a) of this section, and when such matter must be adjusted to ruled lines thirty per cent. additional shall be allowed on the composition therefor. When two or more blanks or jobs are printed at the same time on the same slant, they shall be counted as a single impression.

5020. No constructive charges. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 24. No constructive charges of any kind shall be allowed the state printer. And he shall be allowed only for press work done and type actually set up and imposed, or for paper actually printed, and he shall fill [file] with the secretary of state a copy of each job of work, on which each item of charge is made at the time of rendering his account. Before the secretary can issue him the receipt contemplated by this act, the actual number of "ems" and number of impressions of press work in each job shall be specified with a statement that the law has been strictly complied with, and that no constructive charges are embraced in his account, as rendered, which statement shall be verified by the affidavit of the state printer. Where type set for messages or documents shall be used twice, the state printer shall have pay for the same but once, but he shall be allowed one dollar and fifty cents for re-imposing each sixteen-page form where it is to be used a second time.

5021. Prices for binding. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 25. The state binder shall be paid the following prices for all work done for the state in an acceptable manner as heretofore provided:

(a) For folding and trimming all documents, not stitched, ten cents per hundred copies.

(b) For folding, trimming and stitching documents not covered, fifteen cents per one hundred copies.

(c) For folding, stitching and binding in paper covers all messages, reports, documents, not exceeding one sheet allowing sixteen pages for a sheet, one dollar and twenty-five cents per one hundred copies of sixteen pages or less, and for each additional sheet of sixteen pages or less twenty-five cents per one hundred copies the cover to be counted as one sheet.

(d) For folding, sewing, and binding in paper covers the journals of the two houses eighteen cents per copy.

(e) For folding, sewing, and binding in muslin or cases with gilt letters same style as agricultural report for the year 1886, twenty-five cents per copy for a volume of four hundred pages or less and for additional one hundred pages or fraction thereof four cents.

(f) For folding, sewing and binding in half sheep, with gilt letters for title same style as the Iowa documents for 1886, forty cents per copy for each volume of four hundred pages or less and four cents for each additional hundred pages or fraction thereof.

(g) For folding, stitching and binding the acts and resolutions of each general assembly in board with muslin backs and paper sides, same as laws of 1886, eleven cents per copy.

(h) For folding, sewing and binding in law sheep same style as the report of the supreme court fifty-five cents per copy, for each volume of four hundred pages, or less, and four cents for each additional one hundred pages or fraction thereof.

(i) For ruling he shall be allowed the sum of seventy-five cents per hour for time actually employed.

5022. Certificate for part of work. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 26. At any time during the progress of the printing or binding of the laws, or the journals of either house, or any other work amounting to more than one hundred pages the secretary of state may issue his certificate for one-half the value of the work thus far done, to be ascertained by said secretary, and upon said certificate being presented to the auditor of state, he shall draw his warrant for the amount therein named.

5023. Saving clause. 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 42. Nothing in this act shall be so construed as will in any manner affect the compensation of the present state printer and binder during the unexpired term of their offices.

SUPREME JUDGES — ATTORNEY-GENERAL — CLERK.

5024. Judges of supreme court. 3769; 18 G. A., ch. 27. The salary of each judge of the supreme court shall be four thousand dollars per annum. [Ex. S., 9 G. A., ch. 19, § 3; 11 G. A., ch. 57, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 112, § 4; 12 G. A., ch. 27, § 5; 14 G. A., ch. 37, § 5.]

5025. Attorney-general. 3770; 21 G. A., ch. 172. The salary of the attorney-general shall be fifteen hundred dollars, per annum, and whenever he is required by the duties of his office, or by directions of the governor or general assembly, to attend any of the courts of this state, or any federal courts of this or any other state, he shall receive in addition to his salary, five dollars for each day he attends such courts, and the same mileage in going to and from such courts, as is allowed members of the general assembly, for attending sessions thereof, to be computed by the nearest practicable route. [11 G. A., ch. 67; 12 G. A., ch. 53, § 1.]

5026. Clerk of supreme court and deputy; fees. 3771; 17 G. A., ch. 74, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 117, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 118, § 6. The salary of the clerk of the supreme court shall be twenty-two hundred dollars per annum; and the salary of the deputy clerk of the supreme court shall be fifteen hundred dollars per annum.

The clerk shall collect the following fees, and account for them as provided in section three thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight of the code [§ 5030], and shall also keep account of and report in like manner all uncollected fees:

Upon filing each appeal, three dollars;

Upon entering judgment when the cause has been tried on its merits, two dollars;

Upon each continuance, one dollar;

Upon issuing each execution, one dollar and twenty-five cents;

Upon entering satisfaction of each judgment, fifty cents;

Upon each writ, rule or order to be served upon any person not in court, twenty-five cents;

For copying an opinion to be transmitted to an inferior court upon reversal of a judgment or an order, to be paid by the party against whom the costs are adjudged, or for a copy of such opinion, or any record made at the request of any person, for each one hundred words, ten cents. [R., §§ 2949, 4134-5; C., '51, §§ 2525-6; 12 G. A., ch. 27, § 5; 14 G. A., ch. 37, § 5.]

[Sec. 3773, as to fees of clerk of supreme court in criminal cases, is repealed by 17 G. A., ch. 74, § 2.]

5027. Execution for fees of clerk. 3773. If any of the foregoing fees of the clerk are not paid in advance, execution may issue therefor, except where the fees are payable by a county or the state.

DISTRICT OFFICERS.

[Sec. 3774, as to salary of district judges, is superseded by § 244.]

[Sec. 3775, as to compensation of district attorneys, is repealed by § 279.]

5028. In case of conviction. 3776. In cases of conviction, the fees contemplated in the preceding section shall be taxed against the defendant, and when collected paid into the county treasury. [10 G. A., ch. 38, § 2.]

[Since the repeal of the preceding section, this one is evidently of no effect. Sec. 277, as to compensation of county attorney, does not allow him fees.]

5029. Short-hand reporters. 3777; 18 G. A., ch. 195, § 2. Short-hand reporters shall receive compensation as follows: For each day actually in attendance in court under the order of the judge, such sum as may be fixed by the judge not exceeding six dollars per day, to be audited and paid by the county upon the certificate of the judge of the court, but the judge shall not order the attendance of said reporter, except during that part of the term when in his judgment the reporting of testimony will be required, and he shall discharge said reporter from farther attendance at each term as soon as in his judgment the reporting of testimony will not be farther required for such term; and for making transcripts of his original notes, for each one hundred words, six cents; but where such transcripts are desired in any civil case, the fees therefor shall be paid by the party desiring the same, and the amount allowed such reporter for reporting testimony in any case shall, in all instances, except where the defendant in a criminal case is acquitted, be taxed as a part of the costs in the case; provided, that when the defendant in any criminal cause, who shall have perfected an appeal from a judgment against him, presents to the judge satisfactory proof by affidavit or otherwise, that he is unable to pay for such transcript, the court, if in the opinion of the judge justice will be thereby promoted, may order said transcript to be made at the expense of the county; and the original notice [notes] of any testimony taken in any case shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the court and become a part of the record in said case, and said notes or any transcript thereof duly certified by the reporter of said court, shall be admissible in any case in which the same are material and competent to the issue therein, with the same force and effect as depositions, and subject to the same objections, so far as applicable; and said original notes, or the transcript thereof or any part thereof, may be referred to in any bill of exceptions, and when duly transcribed and certified, shall be inserted therein on appeal; and upon demand of any person for a duly certified transcript of any designated portion of the original notes of testimony in any case, it shall be the duty of said reporter to transcribe the portion so designated, and duly certify the same upon payment of fees therefor; provided, that when the reporter taking the notes in any case in court has ceased to be the official short-hand reporter of that court, any transcript by him made therefrom and duly certified by him under oath, as a full, true and complete transcript of said notes, shall have the same force and effect as though certified in the same manner by the official short-hand reporter of said court. [14 G. A., ch. 99, §§ 2, 3.]

The reporter's transcript of the evidence on a former trial is not admissible in a law action without a showing of reason for not producing the witness himself. The transcript cannot be received except under circumstances which would make the deposition of the witness admissible upon statutory grounds: Baldwin v. St. Louis, K. & N. R. Co., 68-37.

A transcript of the evidence on a former trial cannot be read without any showing of the absence of witnesses, or of inability to produce the original documents, and without notice to the other party: Case v. Blood, 71-632.

Where it appeared that a witness whose testimony had been taken on a former trial was out of the state and absent without the fault of the party desiring to call such witness or his counsel, held, that the report of his testimony on a former trial was admissible; also held, that the rule with reference to notice for taking depositions had no application to the introduction of the transcript in evidence, but if any notice of its proposed introduction was necessary the five days' notice given in this case was sufficient: Fleming v. Shenandoah, 71-456.

As to making the evidence of record by the short-hand report thereof, see notes to §§ 3949, 4041, 4042, 4414.

As to short-hand reporters in superior courts, see §§ 785, 786.

5030. Accounting for fees. 3778. The secretary of state, auditor of state, and register of the state land office, shall keep an accurate and particular account of all fees received by them, which shall be verified by affidavit, and rendered monthly to the treasurer of state, and they shall pay the amounts thus received to such treasurer at the end of each month. [13 G. A., ch. 112, § 8.]

5031. Judge's salary not increased. 3779. During the term for which any judge may have been elected or appointed, his salary shall not be increased by this chapter, except that any judge elected to fill a vacancy shall receive the salary herein provided. [Same, § 6.]

5032. Salaries paid monthly. 3780. The salaries of all officers mentioned in this chapter shall be paid in monthly instalments at the end of each month, and shall be in full compensation for all services, except as otherwise expressly provided in this chapter. [Same, § 7.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF COUNTY AND TOWNSHIP OFFICERS.

5033. Clerk of district court. 3781. The clerk of the district [or circuit] court shall be entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

For filing any petition, appeal, or writ of error, and docketing the same, one dollar and fifty cents;

For every attachment, fifty cents;

For every cause tried by jury, one dollar and fifty cents;

For every cause tried by the court, seventy-five cents;

For entering any final judgment or decree, seventy-five cents;

For taxing costs, fifty cents;

For issuing execution or other process after judgment or decree, fifty cents;

For filing and properly entering and indorsing each mechanic's lien, the same to be taxed as other costs in case a suit is brought thereon, one dollar;

For certificate and seal, fifty cents;

For filing and docketing transcript of judgment from another county or a justice of the peace, fifty cents;

For entering any rule or order, twenty-five cents;

For issuing writ or order, not including subpoenas, fifty cents;

For issuing commission to take depositions, fifty cents;

For entering sheriff's sale of real estate, fifty cents;

For entering judgment by confession, one dollar;
 For entering satisfaction of any judgment, twenty-five cents;
 For all copies of record or papers filed in his office, transcripts, and making complete record, ten cents for each hundred words;
 For taking and approving a bond and sureties thereon, fifty cents;
 For declaration of intentions by an alien to become a citizen, twenty-five cents;

For all services on naturalization of aliens, including oaths and certificate, fifty cents;

In criminal cases, and in all causes in which the state or county is a party plaintiff, the same fees for same services as in suits between private parties. When judgment is rendered against the defendant, the fees shall be collected from such defendant. Where the state fails, the clerk's fees shall be paid by the county;

For making out transcripts in criminal cases appealed to the supreme court, when the defendant is unable to pay, for each one hundred words, ten cents, to be paid by the county. [R., §§ 430, 1852, 4136, 4140-1; C., '51, §§ 2531-2; 13 G. A., ch. 68.]

[Additional compensation is allowed by § 248.]

Entering an order for change of venue entitles the clerk to a fee which must be paid before such change can take place: Stryker v. Rivers, 47-108.

The clerk cannot charge a fee for services required to be performed by him for which no specific fee is allowed: Sprout v. Kelly, 37-44.

The clerk is entitled to receive the fees provided for by statute, no matter when they are collected. Until collected the fees remain a charge in favor of the clerk, as compensation for the work for which they are charged: Peet v. White, 43-400.

Compensation allowed to the clerk is to be in full of all official services, and includes any sum allowed for probate business, but the clerk is to be given in addition such reasonable allowance for deputy hire as the pressure of business of his office demands: Washington County v. Jones, 45-260.

It appearing that the clerk had received from the county compensation on the idea that he should not be allowed fees which might be collected after the expiration of his office, held, that he had no right thereafter to uncollected fees: Ibid.

Previous statutes as to compensation of clerk construed and applied in a particular case: Ibid.

Under previous statutory provisions as to compensation, held, that all fees of every kind in excess of the fixed salary, and any additional amount allowed by the board of supervisors, was to be paid over by the clerk to the county: Boone County v. Wilson, 38-372.

By § 5039 the fees and charges for the service in the settlement of an estate are limited to a gross sum, and those provisions will control as against the charges allowed by this section: Packer's Estate v. Corlett, 71-249.

A clerk is not entitled to the fees provided in §§ 5039 and 5088. He is only entitled to the fees and compensation provided in this section, unless the board otherwise directs and allows. For extra services in completing, correcting and re-arranging the records of the office, upon taking charge thereof, he is not entitled to any additional compensation. No fee is provided for issuing jurors' certificates, directed to the auditor, showing the amount of fees which the juror is entitled to for his services: Palo Alto County v. Burlingame, 71-201.

The fact that upon one settlement with the board the clerk is allowed to retain fees to which he is not entitled will not estop the board from refusing to allow similar fees in the settlement as to a subsequent period: Ibid.

5034. Pensions and bounties. 3782. The clerks of the district court shall certify under the seal of such court, to all applications and other papers requiring the certificate and seal of a court of record to procure pensions, bounties, and back pay for soldiers or other persons entitled thereto, whenever requested by the applicant, his agent, or attorney, and such clerk shall be entitled to the sum of ten cents only for such service. [10 G. A., ch. 88.]

5035. In probate matters. 3783. There shall be such compensation paid such clerk for his services in probate matters out of the fees collected by him for probate business, as the board of supervisors may allow. [12 G. A., ch. 134, § 1.]

5036. Limitation of compensation; deputies. 3784; 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 36, § 2. The total amount of compensation of such clerk for all official services shall not exceed the sum of eleven hundred dollars per annum, in counties having a population not exceeding ten thousand; the sum of thirteen hundred dollars per annum in counties having a population in excess of ten thousand, but not exceeding twenty thousand; nor the sum of fifteen hundred dollars per annum in counties having a population in excess of twenty thousand, but not exceeding thirty thousand. If the fees collected by the clerk in any county in any one year shall exceed the sums aforesaid, the excess shall be paid into the county treasury for the use of the county fund. In case the aggregate amount of fees so received by the clerk in any one year is less than the limit of his compensation as herein fixed, and such amount is deemed inadequate compensation by the board of supervisors, they may allow such additional amount as they may deem just and proper, within the limits herein prescribed. When in the judgment of the board of supervisors it is necessary to the proper discharge of the duties of the office, said board may, upon application of the clerk, authorize said clerk to employ a deputy or clerk, at a salary not exceeding the rate of six hundred dollars per annum for the time actually employed. Provided, however, that in all counties having a population of twenty-five thousand and not over thirty-six thousand as shown by the last state census, where the board of supervisors find it necessary to have a deputy clerk, deputy treasurer and deputy auditor, there shall be allowed as compensation to such deputy clerk, deputy treasurer, and deputy auditor, for their service, a sum equal to not more than two-thirds the salary or compensation of the county clerk, county treasurer and county auditor of such county, respectively, as the board of supervisors may direct; provided, that in counties having a population in excess of forty thousand, the court, upon application of the clerk, may authorize said clerk to appoint, subject to the approval of the board of supervisors, not more than three deputies and one or more clerks, and determine in its order the number of such deputies and clerks. Provided, that in counties having a population in excess of thirty thousand, but not to exceed forty thousand, the board of supervisors may allow such compensation to the clerk, deputies and clerks as they may deem just and proper, but that the sum total of such compensation allowed shall not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars; and provided further, that in counties having a population in excess of forty thousand, the board of supervisors may allow such compensation to the said clerk, deputy and clerks, as they may deem just and proper, but the total compensation shall not exceed the fees received by such clerk, or the sum of five thousand dollars, if such fees be less than said sum; provided further, that in any county having a population of over thirty thousand and under forty thousand, and which is within a judicial district in which the circuit has been divided, the board of supervisors, if they find it necessary, may employ an additional deputy or clerk for duties in connection with the probate records, at a compensation not exceeding six hundred dollars per annum. Provided further, that in each county having two county seats, the compensation of clerk of courts, including the amount paid his deputies and clerks, shall not exceed three thousand dollars, in any one year, any excess of fees collected to be paid into the county treasury as above provided. [R., § 4327; 10 G. A., ch. 68.]

The limitation contained in this section applies to the compensation of the clerk for all official services: he is not entitled to receive, in excess of the limit here imposed, the fees as commissioner of insanity specified in § 5102: Moore v. Mahaska County. 61-177. Further, see notes to § 5033.

5037. Report to supervisors; fees collected. 3785. The clerk of the district court, as such [and as clerk of the circuit court] shall report to the board of supervisors of his county at each regular session, a full and complete statement of the amount of fees received by him, which shall be verified by the affidavit of such clerk. [R., § 431.]

5038: Unclaimed witness fees. 3786: 19 G. A., ch. 151. The clerk of the district [and circuit] courts shall, on the first Monday in January and July of each year, pay into the county treasury for the use of the county all fees of whatever kind in his hands at the date of preceding payment and still unclaimed, and at the time of so doing he shall take from the treasurer duplicate receipts thereof, giving the title of the cause and style of the court in which the same was pending, with the names of the witnesses, jurors, officers, or other persons, and the amount each one is entitled to receive, one of which receipts he shall file with the county auditor, who shall charge the amount thereof to the treasurer as so much county revenue, and shall enter the same upon the proper records as a claim allowed, and on demand by the persons entitled to said fees he shall issue county orders for the amount due each person respectively. [R., §§ 353-6.]

5039. For marriage licenses and fees in probate matters. 3787. There shall be paid the clerk of the circuit [district] court the following fees:

For issuing marriage licenses, one dollar:

For all services performed in the settlement of the estate of any decedent, except where actions are brought by the administrator or against him, or as may be otherwise provided herein, where the value of the estate does not exceed three thousand dollars, three dollars;

Where such value is between three and five thousand dollars, five dollars;

Where such value is between five and seven thousand dollars, eight dollars;

Where the value exceeds eight thousand dollars, ten dollars;

And in addition to the foregoing, for making a complete record in cases where the same is required by law or directed by an order of the court, for every one hundred words, ten cents;

All of which fees shall be paid into the county treasury. [R., § 436; 9 G. A., ch. 71, § 4; ch. 137; 12 G. A., ch. 86, § 15.]

See notes to §§ 5033 and 5036.

The sheriff is also entitled, for attending district [and circuit] courts, and for other service for which no compensation is allowed by law, such annual salary as may be fixed by the board of supervisors, but in no case less than two hundred dollars nor more than four hundred dollars; and the sheriff shall make a full report to the board of supervisors at their January meeting of each year, showing the full amount of fees received by him for the previous year in pursuance of this act.

5063. 19 G. A., ch. 94, § 24. All acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

In general: The compensation of the sheriff is fees, and he cannot claim a quantum meruit for his services: Wapello County v. Monroe County, 39-349.

These fees, together with the salary provided by statute, are in full of all services, and the sheriff cannot make extra charge for guarding and waiting on prisoners: Grubb v. Louisa County, 40-314.

The provisions as to various items of charge considered: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41-554.

Jury to assess damages: The sheriff is allowed but one fee for summoning a jury to assess the damages to owners of land taken for works of internal improvement. He may not claim a separate fee for each tract when only one jury is summoned: Robb v. Albion, K. & D. M. R. Co., 44-440.

Warrant of arrest: Where two or more defendants are jointly indicted, they may be arrested on a joint warrant or several warrants, and the sheriff's fee will be for serving one warrant or several, as the case may be: State v. Hunter, 33-361.

Serving warrant: The provision as to serving warrant applies to a warrant for seizing intoxicating liquors, and repeals the provisions of § 5083 so far as they relate to compensation of sheriffs: Painter v. Polk County, 70-596.

Attending with prisoner: The sheriff is not entitled to compensation for attending the court with the prisoner, but only for such attendance before the judge not at a regular term of court: Ibid.

Notices: Where a person not an officer serves notices, etc., his charges cannot be taxed as costs: Conway v. McGregor & M. R. Co., 43-32.

Sheriff's sale: As to sheriff's fee in case of purchase of property by plaintiff in execution, see Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 42-495.

The sheriff is entitled to a percentage upon the amount of a sheriff's sale of real estate, where the judgment plaintiff is purchaser and the amount of the bid is not paid to the sheriff but credited on the judgment: Litchfield v. Ashford, 70-393.

Keeping jail: The sheriff has charge of the county jail and is required to perform the duties of jailer. He may appoint a deputy to act in such capacity; but such jailer cannot recover compensation from the county: McDonald v. Woodbury County, 48-404.

Keeping attached property: The sheriff is individually responsible to a person employed by him to take care of attached property, and any claim for necessary expenses of keeping such property is to be presented by the sheriff and not by the person employed by him for that purpose: Rowley v. Painter, 69-432.

Mileage: A sheriff is entitled to mileage for actual travel and no more. When only one trip is necessary to bring several prisoners from the penitentiary and return them, he should only charge mileage for one prisoner: Barnes v. Marion County, 54-482.

For service of subpoenas on the same witnesses in several state cases, made in one trip, the sheriff is entitled to mileage for but one trip: Redfield v. Shelby County, 64-11.

The route of travel referred to in the previous statute as fixing the amount of mileage to be allowed for conveying prisoners, etc., held to be the route usually traveled by persons pursuing a journey between the given points; and held, that where the usual and speediest route was by rail, the sheriff might convey the prisoner in that way and charge mileage for the distance traveled, although there was a shorter route by highway: Maynard v. Cedar County, 51-430.

A sheriff is not entitled to mileage for conveying a prisoner from the county jail to the court room, where it does not appear but that the two places are in the same building: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41-554.

Where a sheriff was entitled by statute to fees and mileage for attending the prisoner before the court or judge when required, held, that for attendance before the court with five prisoners at the same time and for the same purpose he was entitled to but one fee and mileage for one prisoner: Ibid.

The same fees should be allowed for conveying a prisoner to the reform school as for conveying a convict to the penitentiary: Ibid.

Under Code, § 3788, as it originally stood, allowing the sheriff, in full compensation for conveying each convict to the penitentiary, sixteen cents for each mile traveled, to be computed from the county seat by the most direct route of travel, held, that the sheriff was entitled to that rate of mileage for each mile traveled on the journey going and returning: Harding v. Montgomery County, 55-41.

But such compensation was in full of all services, and the sheriff could not charge car fare and hotel bills in addition to the mileage thus allowed: Ibid.

The allowance made by that section for conveying an insane person to an asylum was held applicable only where the person conveyed had been adjudged insane under statutory provisions: Ibid.

Copy fees: Under statutes providing for service of subpoenas by delivering a copy, and that the sheriff shall have fees for copies of papers required by law when made by him, held, that he is entitled to the copy fee in addition to the fee for service, where the copy was made by him: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41-554.

In computing compensation for copies of subpoenas the sheriff should be allowed ten cents for each one hundred words or any number less than one hundred; twenty cents for any number greater than one hundred and less than two hundred, and so on: Painter v. Polk County, 70-596.

Serving execution, fee for, under previous statute, see Bell v. Weddington, 54-561.

Salary: The board of supervisors may properly fix the amount of the sheriff's annual salary at the beginning of his term, and the rendering of the service on the faith of such action will constitute a contract binding upon the county: Holmes v. Lucas County, 53-211.

Bailiffs: Where a bailiff is appointed and performs services for which fees are allowed by law, such bailiff becomes entitled to the fees, which must be taken into account in fixing the compensation to be allowed him by the board of supervisors: Bringolf v. Polk County, 41-554.

Mistake as to fees: Where a sheriff had presented his claim for certain services which had been allowed by the party and paid, held, that he could not afterward recover additional compensation for the same services, although in his original claim he had not asked all that the law allowed him for such services: Harding v. Montgomery County, 55-41.

Where the board of supervisors had, by reason of erroneous certificates of the clerk, paid fees and costs to the sheriff in some cases twice or thrice over, held, that the county might recover back the money as paid by mistake: Holmes v. Lucas County, 53-211.

Contract as to fees: An agreement by a sheriff to accept a fixed sum in lieu of legal fees for services to be performed will be null and void as against public policy and against the provisions of statute, whether the sum to be paid be greater or less than the legal fees: Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 40-200.

5064. In criminal causes. 3790. In all criminal cases where the prosecution fails, or where the money cannot be made from the person liable to pay the same, the facts being certified by the clerk or justice as far as their knowledge extends, and verified by the affidavit of the sheriff, the fees allowed by law in such cases shall be audited by the county auditor, and paid out of the county treasury. [R., § 4146; C., '51, § 2537.]

This section applies only to sheriffs' fees, and does not render the county liable for costs of printing abstract and argument on appeal by defendant to the supreme court, although on such appeal the judgment against defendant be reversed: Red v. Polk County, 56-98; State v. Rainsbarger, 74-540.

This section does not render the county liable for costs in a bastardy proceeding, such proceeding being civil, and not criminal: McAndrew v. Madison County, 67-54.

Under the provision of Rev. Stats. of '43, held, that counties were liable for costs in a criminal case in which a noUe prosequi was entered, or in which an indictment was quashed, or judgment entered for defendant on demurrer: Bonney v. Van Buren County, 2 G. Gr., 230.

COUNTY SUPERVISORS.

5065. Members of board of supervisors. 3791; 19 G. A., ch. 159; 21 G. A., ch. 15. The members of the board of supervisors shall each receive four dollars for each day actually in session, and two dollars and fifty cents per day, exclusive of mileage, when not in session but employed on committee service, and six cents per mile for every mile traveled in going to and from the regular and adjourned sessions of the board and in going to and from the place of performing committee service: Provided, that in counties having a population, as shown by the last preceding census, of ten thousand or less, they shall not receive compensation for session service for more than twenty days in one year; and in counties having a population of more than ten thousand, but less than twenty-three thousand, for more than thirty-five days of such service in one year; and in counties having a population of twenty-three thousand or over, for more than forty days of such service in one year, and in counties having a population of forty thousand or over, not more than fifty days in one year. [12 G. A., ch. 10; 13 G. A., ch. 14, § 4.]

RECORDER — TREASURER.

5066. Recorder. 3792. The recorder shall be entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

For recording each instrument containing four hundred words, fifty cents; For every additional hundred words, or fraction thereof, ten cents. [R., § 4143; C., '51, § 2534.]

5067. Treasurer. 3793; 17 G. A., ch. 122, § 3; 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 2. Each county treasurer shall receive for his services the following compensation: Three-fourths of one per cent. of all money collected by him as taxes due any incorporated city or town, to be paid out of the same;

2. Three per cent. of all taxes collected by him for all other tax funds, to be paid out of the county treasury;

3. For each certificate of purchase issued for land sold for non-payment of taxes, twenty cents;

4. For paying money into the state treasury when required by law, or the auditor of state, such compensation as the board of supervisors shall allow, not exceeding one-fourth of one per cent. on the amount so paid, which allowance shall be paid by the county.

5. When the aggregate amount of compensation allowed by this and the next section exceeds twelve hundred dollars in any one year in counties where taxes are collected by township collectors, or fifteen hundred dollars in counties having no township collectors, the excess shall be paid into the county treasury, but when, in the judgment of the board of supervisors, it is necessary for the proper discharge of the duties of the office, said board may, upon application of the treasurer, authorize said treasurer to employ a deputy or clerk, at a salary not exceeding the rate of six hundred dollars per annum for the time actually employed; provided, that in counties where population does not exceed ten thousand, the salary shall not exceed thirteen hundred dollars in any case, and the board shall not allow to exceed three hundred dollars clerk hire in such counties; and provided, that in counties having more than thirty thousand population, the board of supervisors may grant such additional compensation for treasurer, deputy or clerk hire as they may deem just and proper. [R., § 777; 10 G. A., ch. 129, § 6; 11 G. A., ch. 75; 13 G. A., ch. 166.]

An attempt of the board of supervisors to make an allowance to the treasurer greater than authorized by statute cannot be construed into an allowance to the extent to which an allowance is authorized: Griffin v. Clay County, 63-413.

treasurer's compensation the three per cent. of taxes collected is to be computed on all tax funds, including railroad aid taxes, yet this section does not authorize the deduction from such taxes of such per cent. for collection: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74-24

While in making up the amount of the 5068. Information as to taxes due. 3794. The county treasurer shall, if applied to by letter, inclosing thirty cents value in postage stamps, asking for information of the amount of taxes upon any specified parcel or parcels of land in his county, answer the same correctly by mail, giving direct answers to all the inquiries in such letter respecting the amount and interest of the unpaid taxes as the same appears from the tax books in his office. If the total of such land specified in any one letter exceeds three hundred and twenty acres, then such treasurer is not bound to answer such letter unless it contains, besides the thirty cents above provided, ten cents in addition for every one hundred and sixty acres when the total acres specified in such letter exceed the said three hundred and twenty acres; but the aggregate fees thus charged shall in no case exceed the sum of fifty cents; and upon the return to such treasurer of the letter or a copy thereof so sent by him, with the amount due as shown by such letter, such treasurer shall pay such taxes and return a receipt therefor by mail. [9 G. A., ch. 168, § 1.]

5069. Penalty for failure. 3795. Any treasurer who shall neglect for twenty days after the receipt of any such letter, with money inclosed as aforesaid, to answer the same fully as required in the preceding section, or who shall directly or indirectly receive or be concerned in receiving any greater com-compensation for the service mentioned in the preceding section than is therein provided, shall forfeit to the person aggrieved, for each offense, the sum of fifty dollars, which may be recovered in a civil action in any court having jurisdiction. [Same. § 2.]

5070. Accounting for money. 3796. The county treasurer shall enter in a book kept for that purpose, all moneys received by him for services rendered, designating for what the same was received, and shall render an account verified by affidavit to the board of supervisors at each session thereof, stating fully all money so received and from what source derived, and any excess to which he would be entitled under the preceding section over and above the sum therein limited shall be paid into the county treasury. [10 G. A., ch. 129, § 9.]

AUDITOR.

5071. Fees. 3797. The county auditor shall be entitled to charge and receive the following fees:

For recording each bond required to be by him recorded, fifty cents;

For transfers made in the transfer books, for each deed, twenty-five cents;

For issuing certificate of redemption of land sold for taxes, twenty-five cents;

For each certificate issued by the treasurer for lands sold for non-payment of taxes, fifteen cents. [R., § 777; 9 G. A., ch. 25, § 3.]

5072. Limit of compensation; deputy. 3798; 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 3. The total compensation of the auditor, in any one year, shall not exceed the sum of twelve hundred dollars, inclusive of fees, but when, in the judgment of the board of supervisors, it is necessary for the proper discharge of the duties of the office, said board may, upon application of the auditor, authorize said auditor to employ a deputy or clerk, at a salary not exceeding the rate of six hundred dollars per annum; provided, that in counties of more than twenty-five thousand population, the board of supervisors may grant such additional compensation to the auditor, deputy, or clerks, as they deem it just and proper. [12 G. A., ch. 160, § 6; 9 G. A., ch. 5, §§ 4, 5.]

Where a county auditor during one term received, by reason of the action of the board, a certain amount, with the stipulation that the fees of the office should be applied thereon; and upon re-election applied for increase of salary and was allowed a smaller sum, nothing being said as to fees, held, that under the latter allowance he was entitled to the fees in addition to the salary allowed: Madison County v. Holliday, 43-251.

The county is under no legal obligation to reimburse the auditor an amount paid out by him for services of a deputy: Benton v. Deatur Co., 36-504.

5073. Population determined by census. 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 4. It shall be the duty of the board of supervisors, in fixing the compensation of the officers as provided in this act, to take the latest state or national official census as their guide in so doing.

5074. Account of fees; report. 18 G. A., ch. 184, § 5. [14 G. A., ch. 134.]

There is no provision for the compensation of the mayor of a city exercising the powers of a justice: See § 693 and notes. cases is not authorized to collect such fees for him. They constitute a personal claim in his favor against the county: Labour v. Polk County, 70-563.

CHAPTER 3.

OF WITNESSES, JURORS, AND SPECIAL CASES.

5087. Jurors. 3811. Jurors shall receive the following fees:

For each day's service or attendance in courts of record, two dollars, and for each mile traveled from his residence to the place of trial, the sum of ten cents;

For each day's service before a justice of the peace, one dollar.

No mileage shall be allowed jurors before justices, nor talesmen.

Jurors' fees in justice's courts shall be taxed as part of the costs.

Immediately after the adjournment of each term of a court of record, the clerk thereof shall certify to the county auditor a list of the jurors, with the number of days' attendance and mileage to which each one is entitled. [R., § 4154; C., '51, § 2545; 9 G. A., ch. 15, §§ 2, 3; 10 G. A., ch. 92.]

Where a case before a justice of the peace commenced in one week and extends into the next, Sunday should not be computed in the number of days of service: Anson v. Dwight, 18-241.

The clerk is not entitled to any fees for drawing such certificates: Palo Alto County v. Burlingame, 71-201.

5088. Fees taxed as costs. 3812; 15 G. A., ch. 32; 16 G. A., ch. 39. For every case tried in a court of record by jury, there shall be taxed as a part of the costs as a jury fee the sum of six dollars, which shall be collected as other costs and paid into the county treasury by the clerk, who shall report the same to the board of supervisors at each regular session thereof, who shall cause the same to be charged to the treasurer. [9 G. A., ch. 15, § 4.]

The provision requiring a party to pay a jury fee, or increasing the jury fee, is not in conflict with Const., art. 1, § 9: Adae v. Zangs, 11-536, 542; Little v. McGuire, 43-447; Steele v. Central R. of Iowa, 43-109; State v. Verwayne, 44-621.

Although a trial occupy but part of a day, if there is no other jury trial on the same day a full day's jury fee should be charged up. What should be the rule when there is more than one jury trial on the same day, quære: State v. Verwayne, 44-621.

This provision for charging litigants with part of the expense of jury trials is not intended to limit the amount to be paid by a county from which change of venue in a criminal case is taken for the fees of jurors in the trial of such case; and recovery may be had for the entire jury fee, and not simply for the portion authorized to be taxed as costs in the case: Jones County v. Linn County, 68-63.

The clerk is not entitled to the fees provided for in this section: Palo Alto County v. Burlingame, 71-201.

5089. Commissioners to appraise property. 3813. Every appraiser or commissioner appointed or selected to appraise the damages caused by taking private property for public use, shall receive the same compensation as jurors in courts of record, but when called to appraise property taken on judicial process, they shall receive twenty-five cents per hour. [R., § 4158; C., '51, § 2550.]

5090. Witnesses. 3814; 16 G. A., ch. 62. Witnesses in any court of record, except in the police courts, shall receive for each day's attendance, one dollar and twenty-five cents; in the police courts, witnesses shall receive for each day's attendance, the same fees and mileage as are allowed before justices of the peace;

Before a justice of the peace, fifty cents for each day;

Mileage for actual travel per mile each way, five cents.

An attorney, juror, or officer, who is in habitual attendance on the court for the term at which he is examined as a witness, shall be entitled to but one day's attendance.

Witnesses called to testify only to an opinion founded on special study or experience in any branch of science, or to make scientific or professional examinations and state the result thereof, shall receive additional compensation, to be fixed by the court, with reference to the value of the time employed and the degree of learning or skill required; provided, that such additional compensation so fixed shall not exceed four dollars per day while so employed.

For attending before the grand or trial jury, or court, in criminal cases, where the defendant is adjudged not guilty, the fees above provided for attending the district or justice's court shall be paid by the county, upon a certificate of the clerk or justice showing the amount of the services to which they are entitled. [R., § 4153; C., '51, § 2544.]

A witness summoned to attend in several state cases is entitled to compensation for his actual attendance in all the cases, but cannot recover fees for each separate case, where he is required to attend in more than one at the same time: Hardin v. Polk County, 39-661.

A rule of court providing that witnesses subpoenaed in cases between different parties should draw but one per diem was upheld in a particular case: Meffert v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 34-430.

A witness for the prosecution who comes from another state at the request of the prosecution, and testifies in a case in which defendant is adjudged not guilty, should be compensated by the county for his mileage outside of as well as within the state, but such mileage cannot be taxed as costs: Westfall v. Madison County, 62-427.

A witness is not entitled to fees for the time during which he is confined in jail on commitment by a magistrate for failure to give security to appear as a witness for the state in a criminal prosecution: Markwell v. Warren County, 53-422.

Where a justice of the peace dismisses a criminal prosecution for failure of the prosecuting witness to appear, the costs, including witness fees, may properly be taxed to the county: Cassidy v. Palo Alto County, 58-125; unless the justice has ground for taxing them against the prosecuting witness as provided in § 6089: Palo Alto County v. Moncrief, 58-131.

Where the county fails to pay costs properly taxed against it, action may be brought against it therefor: Cassidy v. Palo Alto County, 58-125.

Under the Code of '51 there was no provision giving a witness summoned for defendant in a criminal prosecution the right of claiming witness fees from the county treasurer, and in such case it was held that he must look to the party summoning him for his fees: Donnelly v. Johnson County, 7-419.

As to fees for defendant's witnesses in criminal prosecutions, see, also, § 5095.

A witness is entitled to fees from the county for attendance in a criminal case on a preliminary examination before a justice: Johnson County v. Porter, 4 G. Gr., 79.

A justice of the peace has no power to issue a subpoena for a witness upon a preliminary examination until an information has been filed by him or the defendant has been arrested without warrant and brought before him, and the witness attending in response to such subpoena cannot recover fees from the county. The witness is bound to know at his peril whether the justice of the peace has power to issue the subpoena or not: Warnstaff v. Louisa County, 76-585.

To entitle a party to fees as an expert it must be shown that he was called as such, and to testify to an opinion founded on his special study and experience: Snyder v. Iowa City, 40-646.

5091. Unclaimed witness fees. 3815; 19 G. A., ch. 151, § 1. Each justice of the peace shall, on the first Monday of January and July, each year, pay into the county treasury, for the use of the county, all fees of whatsoever kind in his hands at the date of preceding payment and still unclaimed, and at the time of so doing he shall take from the treasurer duplicate receipts therefor, giving the title of the cause, with the names of the witnesses, jurors, officers, or other persons, and the amount each one is entitled to receive, one of which receipts he shall file with the county auditor, who shall charge the amount thereof to the treasurer as so much county revenue, and shall enter the same upon the proper records as a claim allowed, and on demand by the persons entitled to said fees he shall issue county orders for the amount due each person respectively.

5092. Statement of unclaimed fees. 19 G. A., ch. 151, § 2. Each county treasurer shall make a certified statement of all unclaimed fees in his hands at the time of the taking effect of this act, showing the title of the cause, style of the court, name of the individual, and the amount to which each one is entitled, and file the same with the county auditor, who shall charge the treasurer in the county fund with the aggregate amount so certified, and place the same on the proper record as a claim allowed, and issue county orders therefor upon demand by the parties entitled thereto.

5093. Penalty for failure. 3816. Any failure to pay over to the county treasurer witness fees as contemplated by this title, is a misdemeanor, and shall be prosecuted as provided by law. [R., § 352.]

5094. Witness fees paid by party or county. 3817. When the county or any party has paid the fees of any witness, and the same is afterward collected from the adverse party, the person or county so paying the same shall, upon the production of the receipt of such witness or other satisfactory evidence, be entitled to such fee, whether it be in the hands of the justice or clerk, or has been paid into the county treasury. [9 G. A., ch. 165.]

5095. Fees in criminal cases. 3818; 18 G. A., ch. 207. In no criminal case shall witnesses for the defense be subpoenaed at the expense of the county, except upon order of the court or judge before whom the case is pending, then only upon a satisfactory showing that the witnesses are material and necessary for the defense; and the board of supervisors shall in no case audit or allow any claims for witness fees for the defendant in criminal cases except upon order or judgment of court or judge thereof, and such order may be made at the time of trial or other disposition of the case, and upon such showing as the court may require. [12 G. A., ch. 141.]

The county is not liable for the fees of defendant's witnesses in a criminal case before a justice of the peace unless they have been subpoenaed upon order of the justice as thus provided: Kennedy v. Delaware County, 59-123.

This provision in regard to requiring the court to make an order for subpoenaing witnesses for defendant does not affect the right of a witness not subpoenaed to his fees, if he attends as a witness in the trial of the case, and his evidence is material for the defense: Jones County v. Linn County, 68-63.

It is not necessary under this provision, in order to authorize a district judge to order the payment of witness fees to witnesses who have attended and testified for defendant without being subpoenaed, that such an order should be made upon a showing or application by the accused: Ibid.

An order of the judge can be made when judgment is finally entered or when such order is made or action had as disposes of the case: Ibid.

Held not error to refuse an order for all the witnesses asked for defendant upon the showing made in a particular case: State v. Benge, 61-658.

5096. Other fees. 3819. Any officer legally called on to perform any of the following services, in cases where no fees have been fixed therefor, shall be entitled to receive:

For drawing and certifying an affidavit, or giving a certificate not attached to any other writing, twenty-five cents;

For affixing his official seal to any paper, whether the certificate be under seal or not, thirty-five cents;

5097. Conveying prisoner to jail. 3820. Every officer or person who shall arrest any person with a warrant or order issued by any court or officer, or who shall be required to convey a prisoner from a place distant from the county jail to such jail on an order of commitment, shall be allowed to charge as fees, which shall be collectible the same as other fees in criminal cases, besides the fees allowed by law, whatever sums such officer or person shall actually and necessarily pay for carriage hire in so conveying such person to jail. [13 G. A., ch. 175; 14 G. A., ch. 97.]

5098. Taking up estrays. 3821. Any person taking up any stray horse, mule, jack or jenny, fifty cents;

For every head of neat cattle, twenty-five cents;

For all other kinds of animals, fifteen cents.

For appointing the appraisers, making the necessary entry, certificate, and return, the justice shall receive fifty cents. [9 G. A., ch. 102, §§ 22, 23.]

5099. Trespassing animals. 3822. In all cases where services shall be performed by any officer or other person in respect to estrays or trespassing animals, the following fees or compensation shall be allowed: To the justice of the peace for administering the oath to the taker-up or finder, making an entry thereof, with the report of the appraisers, and making and transmitting a certificate thereof to the clerk of the district court, fifty cents; to the clerk for taking proof of the ownership of the property and granting certificate of the same, twenty-five cents; for registering each certificate transmitted to him by the justice as aforesaid, ten cents; for advertisements, including the newspaper publication, fifty cents; to the sheriff on account of sales made by him in pursuance of chapter three, of title eleven, four per cent. on the amount; to the constable, for each warrant served on appraisers, twenty-five cents; to each appraiser, twenty-five cents; all which said costs and charges, with the exception of the justice's for granting a certificate of ownership, and the sheriff's commission, shall be paid by the taker-up to the person entitled thereto, whenever the service shall be performed; the printer of the county paper for publishing the notice shall receive the price of his published or ordinary advertising rates; in all cases where it shall be necessary to make publication in a newspaper, the taker-up or finder, as the case may be, shall be required to deposit with the clerk of the district court, a sum of money sufficient to pay the same, previous to the publication thereof; all which costs and charges shall be reimbursed to the taker-up or finder in all cases where restitution of the property shall be made to the owner, or the same shall be delivered to the sheriff to be sold, or where money or bank-notes shall be paid into the county treasury, in addition to the reward to which such person may be entitled for such taking up or finding as aforesaid. [R., § 1520; 14 G. A., ch. 20, § 4.]

5100. Publishing stray notices. 3823. The public printer shall receive for each stray notice published, a sum agreed upon by the secretary of state, not, however, exceeding thirty cents for each insertion; and when the appraised value of the stray exceeds fifteen dollars, the finder shall pay the justice a sum sufficient to pay the clerk's fee, postage, and the cost of publishing such notice. If more than one animal is taken up at the same time, they shall be included in one entry and advertisement, and no additional fees shall be required or allowed in such case, and said clerk shall subscribe for one copy of such paper, to be paid for out of the county treasury, which paper shall be filed and preserved in the office of said clerk. [9 G. A., ch. 102, §§ 9, 10, 14.]

If the highway extends into more than one county, such expenses when so adjudged shall be paid by the several counties in proportion to the length of time occupied on the highway in each county. [R., §§ 872, 877.]

5102. Commissioners of insanity. 3825. The commissioners of insanity shall be allowed at the rate of three dollars per day each, for all the time actually employed in the duties of their office. They shall also be allowed their necessary and actual expenses, not including charges for board. The clerk, in addition to what he is entitled to as commissioner, shall be allowed one-half as much more for making the required record entries in all cases of inquest and of meetings of the board for any purpose, and for the filing of any papers required to be filed. He shall also be allowed twenty-five cents for each notice or process given or issued under seal as herein required. The examining physician shall be entitled to the same compensation as a commissioner, and to mileage at the rate of five cents per mile each way. The sheriff shall be allowed for his personal services in conveying a patient to the hospital and returning therefrom, at the rate of three dollars per day for the time necessary and actually employed, and mileage the same as is allowed him in other cases, and for other services the same fees as for like services in other cases. Witnesses shall be entitled to the same fees as witnesses in the circuit [district] court. The compensation and expenses provided for above, shall be allowed and paid out of the county treasury in the usual manner. Whenever the commissioners issue their warrant for the admission of a person to the hospital, and funds to pay the expenses thereof are needed in advance, they shall estimate the probable expense of conveying such person to the hospital, including the necessary assistance, and not including the compensation allowed the sheriff, and on such estimate, certified by the clerk, the auditor of the county shall issue an order on the county treasurer for the amount as estimated in favor of the sheriff or other person intrusted with the execution of such warrant; the sheriff or other person executing such warrant, shall accompany his return with a statement of the expenses incurred, and the excess or deficiency may be deducted from or added to his compensation, as the case may be. If funds are not so advanced, such expenses shall be certified and paid in the manner above prescribed on the return of the warrant. When the commissioners order the return of a patient, compensation and expenses shall be in like manner allowed. [12 G. A., ch. 179, §§ 14, 15; 13 G. A., ch. 109, § 48.]

As to clerk's fees under this section, see note to § 5036.

The disbursing officer of each hospital for the insane shall pay the per diem and mileage allowed such visiting committee, and each member of such visiting committee shall certify under oath to such disbursing officer, the number of days he has served and the number of miles traveled. [14 G. A., ch. 91, § 9.]

Any attorney selected by a peace officer, for appearing and prosecuting before a justice of the peace a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors, five dollars. [R., §§ 1578, 4168; C., '51, § 2561.]

An attorney appointed by the court to defend a pauper prisoner may maintain action against the county for compensation for such services although under the statute no provision for such compensation is made. (Overruling Whicher v. Cedar County, 1 G. Gr., 217); Hall v. Washington County, 2 G. Gr., 473.

The provisions of this section limiting the amount which an attorney shall receive in such cases are not unconstitutional: Samuels v. Dubuque County, 13-536.

The county is not liable for fees of attorney appearing before a justice of the peace in a prosecution for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, unless he was selected for that duty by the peace officer filing the information (under § 2408): Blair v. Dubuque County, 27-181; Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

The peace officers contemplated in that section do not include a special constable appointed under the provisions of § 4880: Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

A peace officer authorized under § 2408 to select an attorney to prosecute violations of the intoxicating liquor law may select another attorney than the county attorney, and the attorney thus selected will be entitled to the fees herein authorized: Work v. Wapello County, 73-357.

Where several violations are charged in the same information or indictment, the attorney is entitled to the fee for only one prosecution. Schulte v. Keokuk County, 74-292.

5110. Change of venue, or appeal. 3830. An attorney cannot in such case be compelled to follow a case to another county or into the supreme court, and if he does so, may recover an enlarged compensation, to be graduated on a scale corresponding to the prices above allowed. [R., § 4169; C., '51, § 2562.]

No duty is hereby imposed upon an attorney appointed to defend a criminal to present the case to the supreme court, but if, in the exercise of his discretion, he does appear there, the statute provides a compensation shall be paid him by the county. The amount of such compensation is not to be what his services would have been reasonably worth in case he had been employed by the county, but an enlarged compensation, graded on a scale corresponding to the prices fixed for a trial in the district court. Therefore, held that an allowance of twenty-five dollars for arguing the case in the supreme court was proper: Baylies v. Polk County, 58-557.

5111. One attorney. 3831. Only one attorney in any one case shall receive the compensation above contemplated, nor is he entitled to this compensation until he files his affidavit that he has not, directly or indirectly, received any compensation for such services from any source. [R., § 4170; C., '51, § 2563.]

This section must be complied with. It is not sufficient that the affidavit states the claim is just and true: Ryce v. Mitchell County, 65-447.

5112. Publication of legal notices. 3832. In all cases where publication of legal notices of any kind are required or allowed by law, the person or officer desiring such publication shall not be required to pay more than one dollar per square of ten lines of brier type, or its equivalent, for the first insertion, and fifty cents per square for each subsequent insertion; and any person desiring such publication, who shall have tendered such notice to the editor, proprietor, or person conducting some newspaper, published weekly or oftener in such county, having the largest circulation, and has offered to pay for the publication of the same at the rate herein named, and in case the publication of such notice is refused at the price above fixed, then the officer or person desiring such publication shall procure the insertion of such notice in the newspaper nearest the county seat of such county having a general circulation that will publish such notice at the rate herein provided; which publication shall in all respects have the same effect in law and equity as if such notice had been published in the county where such action was commenced or sale is to take place. And in all cases of publication of notices in connection with commencement of actions in court, or sales upon execution, the plaintiff may designate the newspaper published within the county in which such notice shall be published. [10 G. A., ch. 115, § 1.]

The plaintiff has the right to designate the newspaper in which publication of original notices or notices of execution sales shall be made; § 427 is not applicable to such cases: Herriman v. Moore, 49-171.

5113. Printing delinquent tax list. 3833. The compensation for printing the delinquent tax list, shall be at a rate not exceeding twenty cents for each tract of real property advertised for sale; and in case there is no newspaper published in the county where such lands lie then the treasurer shall cause the publication to be made in the nearest newspaper having a circulation in such county, provided that no newspaper shall be considered as one of general circulation unless it has two hundred regular weekly subscribers. [Same, § 2.]

5114. Arbitrators and referees. 3834. The compensation of arbitrators shall be, for each day actually and necessarily spent in the discharge of their duty, two dollars, or such other sum as may be agreed upon by the parties in interest. The fees of referees acting under a submission made by or agreed to by the parties in a case pending in a court of record, shall be fixed by the court or judge and taxed as a part of the costs in the case. [R., § 3691; C., '51, § 2114.]

[The words following "judge," at the end of the section, are not in the original. They are retained as in the printed Code, as having probably been inserted by the editor.]

5115. Depositions. 3835. Any officer or person taking depositions is authorized to charge therefor at the rate of ten cents per hundred words, exclusive of the certificate. [R., § 4160; C., '51, § 2552.]

5116. Receipt for fees paid. 3836. Every person charging fees shall, if required by the person paying them, give him a receipt therefor, setting forth the items and the date of each. [R., 4157; C., '51, § 2549.]

5117. When fees payable. 3837. When no other provision is made on the subject, the party requiring any service shall pay the fees therefor upon the same being rendered, and a bill of particulars being presented if required. [R., § 4164; C., '51, § 2557.]

Where an attorney in a case requires services, his client, and not the attorney, is liable therefor: Doughty v. Paige, 48-483.

If a justice of the peace has prepared and certified a transcript on appeal he cannot be required to deposit it with the clerk until his fees therefor are paid: McKay v. Maloy, 53-33. To the same effect as to clerk of court of record, see Dickerson v. Shelby, 2 G. Gr., 460.

5118. Setting up advertisements. 3838. In all cases where an officer in the discharge of his duty is required to set up an advertisement, he shall, when not otherwise provided, be allowed twenty-five cents, and if an advertisement is required to be published in a newspaper, the money therefor shall be paid by the party and may be taxed in the bill of costs. [R., § 4165; C., '51, § 2558.]

5119. Table of fees. 3839. Every officer entitled to fees, shall keep posted up in his office a fair table thereof on pain of forfeiture of two dollars per day, for the benefit of the county, for each day he fails to keep such tables of fees thus posted up. [R., § 4166; C., '51, § 2559.]

5120. Higher fees. 3840. Any officer who wilfully takes higher or other fees than are allowed by law, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be fined therefor a sum not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars. [R., § 4167; C., '51, § 2560.]

Any contract for higher fees than those provided, or for an amount which might prove to be higher, would be void: Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 40-200.

5121. Recovery from county where crime committed. 3841. Where costs are paid by a county other than the one where the offense was committed, the amount of such costs shall be deemed a charge in favor of such county, and against the one in which the offense was committed, and may be recovered by action in any court having jurisdiction. [9 G. A., ch. 66, § 2.]

This section simply provides that when costs are paid by the county where the trial is had they shall be charged to the county where the indictment is found. It does not determine for what costs the county shall be liable: State v. Rainsberger, 74-539.

The provisions of § 5088, as to taxing jury fees, do not affect the amount of recovery under this section: Jones County v. Linn County, 68-63.

This section applies in case of change of venue, and probably in case of preliminary examination, but is not applicable where one county (under § 5544) takes jurisdiction of a crime committed in an adjoining county but within five hundred yards of the boundary between them: Floyd County v. Cerro Gordo County, 47-186.

5122. Fees paid in advance; fee bill. 3842. No officer or other person mentioned in this title, is entitled to any of the fees mentioned herein in advance, where the same grows out of any criminal prosecution. But in all other cases, except where the fees or compensation is payable by the state or county, or when the orders, judgments, or decrees of courts or justices of the peace are to be entered or performed, or their writs executed, the officer performing any of the services named in this chapter, is entitled to his fees in advance if he demand them. After the expiration of sixty days from the rendition of a final judgment not appealed, removed, or reversed, the clerk of the court or a justice of the peace in whose office the judgment is entered, may, and on demand of any party entitled to any part thereof, shall issue a fee bill for all costs of such judgment, which shall have the same force and effect as an execution issued by such officer, and shall be served and executed in the same manner. [Same, § 1.]

The party against whom the judgment is rendered is primarily liable for all the costs to the parties entitled thereto. They may issue their fee bill therefor, and failing in that they may, by motion, require the successful party to pay such of the costs as accrued at his instance, as provided in § 4145. The statute does not contemplate the issuance of a fee bill against a party against whom no judgment has been rendered: McConkey v. Chapman, 58-281.

5123. Fees payable by state or county. 3843. In all cases where fees or compensation as distinguished from a certain and fixed salary, are, by the provisions of this title to be paid any officer or other person out of the county or state treasury, no part of the same shall be audited or paid, until a particular account has been filed in the auditor's office of the county or state, verified by affidavit, and showing clearly for what services such fees or compensation are claimed, and when the same was rendered.

A claim for the fees of a justice of the peace, fees cannot make the certificate and verification required by § 5052: Labour v. Polk
The successor of the justice entitled to the County, 70-568.

5124. Offices, fuel and stationery. 3844. The board of supervisors shall furnish the clerk of the district [and circuit] court, sheriff, recorder, treasurer, auditor, and county superintendent, with offices at the county seat, together with fuel, lights, blanks, books, and stationery necessary and proper to enable them to discharge the duties of their respective offices; but in no case shall any of such officers be permitted to occupy an office also occupied by a practicing attorney.

PART FOURTH.

CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

TITLE XXIV.

OF CRIMES AND PUNISHMENTS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST THE SOVEREIGNTY OF THE STATE.

5125. Treason. 3845. Whoever is guilty of treason, by levying war against the state, or adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort, shall be punished by imprisonment for life at hard labor in the state penitentiary. Treason is not aailable offense. [R., § 4188; C., '51, § 2565; 14 G. A., ch. 136.]

5126. Misprision of treason. 3846. If any person have knowledge of the commission of the crime of treason against the state and conceal the same, and not as soon as may be disclose such offense to the governor or some judge within the state, he is guilty of misprision of treason, and shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding three years nor less than one year. [R., § 4189; C., '51, § 2566.]

5127. Evidence. 3847. No person can be convicted of the crime of treason, unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court. [R., § 4190; C., '51, § 2567.]

CHAPTER 2.

OFFENSES AGAINST THE LIVES AND PERSONS OF INDIVIDUALS.

5128. Murder. 3848. Whoever kills any human being with malice aforethought, either express or implied, is guilty of murder. [R., § 4191; C., '51, § 2568.]

Human being; infant unborn: An infant in the womb is not a human being within the meaning of this section; certainly not before it is quick: Abrams v. Foshee, 3-274.

An infant does not become possessed of independent life in such sense as to be subject of homicide until independent circulation has been established: State v. Winthrop, 43-519.

It is not necessary that an indictment for murder should allege that the deceased was a human being: State v. Stanley, 83-526, 531.

Malice aforethought: In murder of either degree there must be malice aforethought, express or implied: State v. Johnson, 8-525; Fouts v. State, 4 G. Gr., 500.

Malice aforethought is essential to the crime of murder, but it is not necessary that it should have existed for any considerable length of time. It is sufficient if it existed for any length of time before the commission of the act: State v. Decklotts, 19-447; State v. Hockett, 70-442; State v. Sopher, 70-494.

Malice inferred: Malice may, as at common law, be implied in case of homicide from any act unlawful and dangerous in its nature, unjustifiably committed. Therefore held, that, independently of § 5163, death caused in an unlawful attempt to procure an abortion was murder in the second degree: State v. Moore, 25-128.

Persons conspiring to do an unlawful act which is a trespass only will be guilty of murder only when death results in the prosecution of the design; but if the unlawful act be a felony, or more than a trespass, death resulting will be murder in all, although it happen beside the original design: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 505.

Use of deadly weapon: The malice implied by the use of a deadly weapon is malice aforethought, such as will sustain a conviction for murder. Malice may be inferred from the deliberate, violent use of a deadly weapon: State v. Zeibart, 40-169.

When a man assaults another or uses upon another a deadly weapon in such a manner that the natural, ordinary and probable result of the use of such weapon in such manner would be to take life, the law presumes that such person so assaulting intended to take life: State v. Sullivan, 51-142; State v. Hockett, 70-442.

But it is error to charge the jury that malice is proved by the selection and use of a deadly weapon in a deadly manner without legal excuse. Such fact merely raises a presumption of malice subject to be rebutted: State v. Townsend, 66-741; State v. Perigo, 70-357.

An instrument may or may not be a deadly weapon, depending upon the manner in which it is used: and in a particular case, held, that a stick of wood might be found to be a deadly weapon: State v. Brown, 67-289.

The fact that deceased was in a feeble condition, so that a blow of less force caused his death than would have been required to take the life of a healthy man, even if that fact is not known to the assailant, will not constitute a defense: State v. Castello, 62-404.

Where it appeared that defendant sought a meeting with deceased at which the act was committed by the use of a revolver, held, that his having used a revolver tended to indicate that defendant sought the meeting with the intent to take the life of deceased: State v. Jones, 64-349.

An instruction that malice would be implied from the unlawful and intentional use of a dangerous or deadly weapon in such manner that the natural consequence of the act would be to destroy the life of another, held not erroneous where there was no evidence that the killing was accidental or upon provocation: State v. Rainsburger, 71-746.

Previous fight: The fact that there was a fight before the act of defendant was committed resulting in homicide will not necessarily show that he did not act with malice aforethought: State v. Dillon, 74-653.

Death from wound: If death ensues from a wound given in malice, not in its nature mortal, but which being neglected or mismanaged causes death, this will not excuse the person who gave it, and he will be held to have caused the death, unless he can make it clearly and certainly appear that the maltreatment of the wound or the misconduct of the person wounded, and not the wound itself, was the sole cause of the death: State v. Morphy, 33-270.

From poison: Where death is caused by the administration of poison, the crime will be murder if the poison is unlawfully administered and without a good intention. Such administration of the poison constitutes the required deliberation, premeditation and intent to kill, and it is immaterial whether or not there is a specific intent to kill: State v. Wells, 61-629.

Malpractice of physician: A person who assumes to act as a physician in good faith, with good motives and honest intentions, however erroneous the course of treatment he adopts, is not to be held criminally liable if death results from such treatment: State v. Schulz, 55-628.

Acceleration of death: An act which accelerates death may constitute homicide even though the person dying would have soon died from other causes: State v. Smith, 73-32.

Resisting officer: In a prosecution for murder in resisting an officer, the official character of the officer need not be shown by record evidence. It is sufficient if it is shown that he was acting as officer de facto: State v. Zeibart, 40-169.

Indictment: It is not necessary that an indictment for murder should specifically charge, as at common law, that the defendant murdered the deceased. The use of other words of the same import will be sufficient: State v. O'Neil, 23-272.

Although the indictment must charge that the killing was done with malice aforethought, it is not essential that these identical words be used. It is sufficient if words are used of the same import, or if it clearly appears from the language used that malice aforethought is charged, or can, without doubt, be implied: State v. Thurman, 66-693.

Therefore, where the indictment charged murder in the second degree, committed by the administration of drugs and the use of an instrument for the purpose of procuring an abortion, and charged these acts as maliciously done, and with the specific intent to produce an abortion, held, that malice aforethought was sufficiently charged: Ibid.

In an indictment for murder under our statute it is necessary to charge that the homicide was done with malice aforethought: State v. Newberry, 26-467.

Words used in the indictment in a particular case, held to be equivalent to the expression "malice aforethought:" State v. Neeley, 20-108.

In an indictment for murder it is sufficient to aver that the wound was inflicted on the person of deceased, that his death was caused by it, and that the act was within the jurisdiction of the court. The wound need not be more particularly described: Nash v. State, 2 G. Gr., 286.

Evidence: What the defendant said and did several hours after the commission of homicide cannot be shown unless it is claimed that the evidence tends to prove insanity, and if it is so claimed such claim ought to be stated: State v. Hockett, 70-442.

Evidence tending to show the character of a mob, and what they contemplated accomplishing, is admissible in the prosecution of one of the number for murder committed in carrying out the plan: State v. McCahill, 72-111.

5129. First degree. 3849; 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 2, § 1. All murder which is perpetrated by means of poison, or lying in wait, or any other kind of wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing, or which is committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate any arson, rape, robbery, mayhem or burglary, is murder in the first degree, and shall be punished with death or imprisonment for life, at hard labor, in the state penitentiary, as determined by the jury, or by the court if the defendant pleads guilty. [R., § 4192; C., '51, § 2569; 14 G. A., ch. 136.]

What constitutes: The distinctive peculiarity of murder in the first degree, as defined by statute, is that it must be accompanied with the premeditated intention to take life. The killing must be premeditated. Wherever, then, in case of deliberate homicide, there is a specific intention to take life, the offense, if consummated, is murder in the first degree. If there is not a specific intention to take life, it is murder in the second degree: State v. Gillick, 7-287, 311; State v. Johnson, 8-525.

An intention to take life may be presumed from the use of a deadly weapon in a manner in which death would most likely ensue, and proof of such a killing is primary evidence that it is wilful, deliberate and premeditated: Ibid.

Premeditation implies more than deliberation. It means to meditate and deliberate before concluding to do the deed; not only to wilfully take life, but to predetermine, to contrive by previous meditation; but no specific time is required for premeditation or deliberation: State v. Johnson, 8-525.

The intent must have preceded the killing long enough to admit of premeditation and deliberation. They need not have existed for any particular length of time if previously formed and continuing until the killing: State v. Soper, 70-494; State v. Hockett, 70-442.

It is not sufficient to charge murder in the first degree that the indictment alleges the killing as wilful and premeditated only: State v. Boyle, 28-522.

The indictment must charge that the killing was wilful, deliberate and premeditated. The allegation that the assault was so will not suffice: State v. Knouse, 29-118; State v. Thompson, 31-393.

So, an indictment charging that the assault was wilful, deliberate and premeditated, and that the blow from which deceased died was wilful, deliberate and premeditated, but not charging that it was dealt for the purpose of killing, or that the killing itself was wilful, does not charge murder in the first degree: State v. McCormick, 27-402; State v. Walkins, 27-415.

The facts to bring the case within the first degree of murder must be set out. Naming the offense in the introductory and closing portions of the indictment as murder in the first degree will not cure the defect. An indictment which would be sufficient at common law for murder is not necessarily sufficient to charge murder in the first degree under the statute: Ibid.

Under an indictment for murder in the first degree, as wilful, deliberate and premeditated, evidence is admissible that the crime was committed in the perpetration of robbery: State v. Johnson, 72-393.

To constitute the crime of murder in the first degree it is essential that the killing be done with malice aforethought, that it be done wilfully, and also that it be done deliberately and premeditatedly; but if it is charged and proven that the wounds were inflicted with specific intent to kill, and also that they were inflicted deliberately and premeditatedly, it is not necessary that it be charged and proven that the intent to kill was deliberate and premeditated: State v. Shelton, 64-333; State v. Perigo, 70-657.

A wilful killing is simply an intentional killing, and nothing more is necessary to make the killing wilful except the intended result of the act. It is not necessary, therefore, to charge that the killing was wilful where it is charged that the act causing the homicide was done with the specific intent to kill and murder: State v. Townsend, 66-741.

It is not necessary in charging murder in the first degree to use the precise language of the statute. It is sufficient if the words used are fully equivalent: Ibid.

The fact that the killing is wilful does not make it murder in the first degree, and an indictment charging wilful killing with malice aforethought would be good as an indictment for murder, but not for murder in the first degree: State v. Keasling, 74-523.

An indictment charging an assault with intent to kill, wilfully, etc., and that defendant did thereby, wilfully, etc., inflict a mortal wound of which the deceased then and there did die, sufficiently alleges murder in the first degree although there is no averment that the killing was done wilfully, etc.: State v. Stanley, 33-526.

Proof of design to kill at the time of killing would show malice aforethought, but would not show premeditation or deliberation: Fouts v. State, 4 G. Gr., 500.

The proof of killing, without more, does not raise the presumption that such killing was wilful, deliberate and premeditated: State v. McCormick, 27-402.

Whether, in case the killing is committed in the perpetration or intent to perpetrate some of the felonies mentioned by the statute, it should be charged as wilful, deliberate and premeditated, quere: Ibid.

Indictment: The jury cannot find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree when the indictment is only sufficient to charge defendant with murder in the second degree: Fouts v. State, 4 G. Gr., 500.

It is prejudicial error to put a party on trial for murder in the first degree under an indictment charging only murder in the second degree, although the party is only convicted of the lesser offense: State v. Boyle, 28-522; State v. Knouse, 29-118.

Where, on an indictment not sufficient to charge murder in the first degree, the defendant was found guilty in that degree, and defendant on appeal asked that the sentence be modified to one which would be proper under the indictment for the second degree, the court so reduced the sentence: State v. McCormick, 27-402.

But where, in a similar case, defendant denied the sufficiency of the evidence to establish his guilt in any degree, and demanded a new trial, held, that he was entitled thereto: State v. Watkins, 27-415.

Poison: Where death is caused by the administration of poison, the crime will be murder if the poison is unlawfully administered and without a good intention. Such administration of poison constitutes the required deliberation, premeditation and intent to kill, and it is immaterial whether or not there is a specific intent to kill: State v. Wells, 61-629.

Lying in wait: The expression "lying in wait," used in the statute in defining murder in the first degree, means lying in ambush or concealment: State v. Cross, 68-180.

Evidence: In a particular case, held, that the evidence, although circumstantial, was sufficient to sustain a conviction for murder in the first degree: State v. Stomley, 33-526.

Included crime: The crime of manslaughter is necessarily included in that of murder, and upon the trial for murder in the first degree, all the degrees of criminal homicide should be explained and submitted to the jury: State v. Clemons, 51-274; State v. Glyn-don, 51-463.

Punishment: The provision that the jury may determine whether the punishment for murder in the first degree shall be capital is not unconstitutional: State v. Hockett, 70-442.

Further see notes to §§ 5128, 5130, 5131 and 5155.

5130. Second degree. 3850. Whoever commits murder otherwise than is set forth in the preceding section, is guilty of murder of the second degree, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for life, or for a term not less than ten years. [R., § 4193; C., '51, § 2570.]

A specific intention to kill is not essential to constitute murder at common law, nor, under our statute, to constitute murder in the second degree: State v. Decklots, 19-447; State v. Morphy, 35-270; State v. Mewherter, 46-88.

An allegation that defendant caused death by acts intended to produce miscarriage, when not necessary to save life, sufficiently charges murder in the second degree: State v. Leeper, 70-748.

Evidence held not sufficient to support a verdict of murder in the second degree: State v. Havercamp, 54-350.

Neither deliberation nor premeditation is an essential element of the crime of murder in the second degree, or of assault with intent to commit murder: State v. Keasling, 74-528.

5131. Degree; how determined. 3851. Upon the trial of an indictment for murder, the jury, if they find the defendant guilty, must inquire, and by their verdict ascertain, whether he be guilty of murder of the first or second degree; but if such defendant be convicted upon his own confession in open court, the court must proceed by the examination of witnesses to determine the degree of murder, and award sentence accordingly. [R., § 4194; C., '51, § 2571.]

In case of a plea of guilty the record should show that the witnesses were examined by the court and the degree of the crime thus fixed: McCauley v. United States, Mor., 486.

A defendant cannot be found guilty of murder in the first degree when the indictment is only sufficient to charge murder in the second degree: Fouts v. State, 4 G. Gr., 500.

Where the jury, upon the trial of an indictment for murder in the first degree, found defendant "guilty as charged in the indictment," held, that such verdict was fatally defective as not sufficiently ascertaining the degree of the offense: State v. Moran, 7-236.

The jury, if they do not find defendant guilty of murder in either degree, may, under § 5851, convict him of manslaughter: Gordon v. State, 3-410.

Where defendant was charged with committing murder in the perpetration of robbery and burglary, and the verdict of the jury was "guilty as charged in the indictment," held, that this was a sufficient finding of the degree of the crime and was a conviction of murder in the first degree: State v. Weese, 53-92.

And see notes to § 5129.

5132. Jury to fix punishment. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 2, § 2. Upon trial of an indictment for murder, the jury, if they find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree, must designate in their verdict whether he shall be punished by death, or imprisonment for life at hard labor in the penitentiary. But if such defendant be convicted upon a plea of "guilty," the court shall designate whether he shall be punished by death or imprisonment for life at hard labor in the penitentiary.

The provisions of this section are not in conflict with article 5, §§ 1-5, of the state constitution, vesting the judicial power in certain courts consisting of certain judges: State v. Hockett, 70-442.

A verdict of imprisonment for life is sufficient without specifying "at hard labor:" State v. Trout, 74-545

5133. Judgment and execution. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 3; 18 G. A., ch. 2, § 3. Whenever the court or jury shall designate that a defendant shall be punished by death, the court pronouncing judgment shall fix the day of the execution thereof, which shall not be less than one year after the day on which the judgment is rendered, and not longer than fifteen months, during which time the defendant, against whom judgment of death has been pronounced, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary of the state.

5134. Papers sent governor. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 4. Immediately after the entry of the judgment of death, the court rendering such judgment must transmit by mail to the governor of the state, a copy of the indictment, plea, verdict, judgment, and of the testimony in the case.

5135. Warrant of execution. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 5. When a judgment of death is pronounced, a certified copy of the entry thereof in the record book must be furnished to the officer whose duty it is to execute the same, who shall proceed and execute accordingly, and no other warrant or authority is necessary to require or justify the execution.

5136. Reprieve. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 6. The only officer[s] who shall have power to reprieve or suspend the execution of a judgment of death, are the governor and the sheriff, as provided in the next section, unless in case of an appeal to the supreme court, as provided in section eighteen of this act [§ 5048].

5137. Insanity or pregnancy. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 7. When the sheriff is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the defendant is insane or pregnant, he may summon a jury of twelve persons on the jury list, to be drawn by the clerk, who shall be sworn by the sheriff well and truly to inquire into the insanity of [or] pregnancy of the defendant and a true inquisition return, and they shall examine the defendant and hear any evidence that may be presented, and by written inquisition, signed by each of them, find as to the insanity or pregnancy, and unless the inquisition find the defendant insane or pregnant, the sheriff shall not suspend the execution. But if the inquisition find the defendant insane or pregnant, he shall suspend the execution and immediately transmit the inquisition to the governor.

5138. Subsequent warrant. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 8. Whenever a judgment of death has not been executed on the day appointed by the court therefor, from any cause whatever, the governor, by a warrant under his hand and the seal of the state, shall fix the day of execution, which warrant shall be obeyed by the sheriff, and no one but the governor can then suspend its execution.

5139. Time and manner of execution. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 9. A judgment of death must be executed by the sheriff on the day fixed in the judgment, between sunrise and sunset, by hanging the defendant by the neck until he is dead.

5140. Place of execution. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 10. A judgment of death must be executed within the walls of the jail of the county in which the judgment was rendered, or within a yard or inclosure adjoining thereto, unless as provided in the next two sections.

5141. In another county. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 11. If there be no jail in the county in which the judgment was rendered, or if it becomes unfit or unsafe for the confinement of prisoners, or be destroyed by fire or otherwise, and the jail of any other county has been legally designated for the imprisonment of the defendant until the day fixed for his execution, the judgment must be executed within the walls of the jail of the county so designated, or within a yard or inclosure adjoining the same, and by the sheriff of such county.

5142. Two jails. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 12. If there be two or more jails or prisons in the same county, a judgment of death shall be executed within the walls of either of such jails or prisons, or within an inclosure adjoining thereto, as the court rendering such judgment shall therein direct.

5143. Witnesses at execution. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 13. The sheriff executing a judgment of death, must, at least three clear days before inflicting the punishment of death, notify the judge of the district court of his county, the district [county] attorney, the clerk of the district court, together with two physicians and twelve respectable citizens of his county, to be selected by him and the sheriff of the county in which the trial was had and the offense committed (if it be in a different county), to be present as witnesses of such execution. He must also at the request of the defendant permit one or more ministers of the gospel, whom the defendant shall name, and any of his relations to attend the execution, and also such magistrates, peace officers, and guards as the sheriff shall deem proper, but no person other than those mentioned in this section can be present at the execution, nor shall any person under age be permitted to witness the same.

5144. Certificate of sheriff and judges. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 14. The sheriff or his deputy executing the judgment of death, and the judges attending the execution must prepare and sign with their name of office, a certificate, setting forth the time and place of the execution, and that judgment was executed upon the defendant according to the foregoing provisions, and must cause the certificate to be signed by the public officers, and at least twelve persons not relations of the defendant who witnessed the execution.

5145. Filed and published. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 15. The sheriff or his deputy executing such judgment of death, must cause the certificate to be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county in which the judgment was rendered, and a copy thereof to be published in a newspaper printed at the capital of the state, and in one, if any, published in his county.

5146. Stay of execution by appeal. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 16. An appeal by the defendant to the supreme court from a judgment of death shall stay the infliction of that punishment, but the defendant is to be retained in custody to abide the judgment on the appeal.

5148. Proceedings on affirmance. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 18. When a judgment of death has been affirmed, the supreme court must cause a copy of the entry of judgment to be remitted to the governor, to the end that a warrant of the execution may be issued by the governor. The governor shall send his warrant of execution by a special messenger, or by mail, to the proper officer, and shall name therein the day and time of execution, but shall not appoint an earlier day than that fixed by the judgment of the district court. The officer receiving the same shall execute the warrant of the governor as therein directed and shall report his action both to the governor and the district court which rendered the original judgment. If for any cause the execution does not take place on the day appointed by the governor, the governor may from time to time appoint another day for the execution until the judgment is carried into effect.

5149. Pending indictments. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 19. All indictments pending in any court of this state for any crime committed in violation of said section three thousand eight hundred and forty-nine of the code [§ 5129], shall be prosecuted to final judgment, and all crimes that have been committed in violation of said section shall be subject to indictment, trial and punishment in the same manner as they would have been had said section not been repealed.

5150. 17 G. A., ch. 165, § 20. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

5152. Fighting or challenging to duel. 3853. Any person who fights a duel with deadly weapons, or is present at the fighting of such duel as aid, second, or surgeon, or advises, encourages, or promotes such duel, although no homicide ensue; and any person who challenges another to fight a duel, or sends or delivers any verbal or written message purporting or intended to be such challenge, although no duel ensue, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars nor less than four hundred dollars, and imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than three years nor less than one year. [R., § 4196; C., '51, § 2573.]

5153. Accepting challenge. 3854. Any person who accepts such challenge, or who consents to act as a second, aid, or surgeon on such acceptance, or who advises, encourages, or promotes the same, although no duel ensue, shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding section. [R., § 4197; C., '51, § 2574.]

5154. Posting for not accepting. 3855. If any person post another, or in writing or print use any reproachful or contemptuous language to or concerning another for not fighting a duel, or for not sending or accepting a challenge, he shall be fined not exceeding three hundred dollars nor less than one hundred dollars, and shall be imprisoned in the county jail not more than six months nor less than two months. [R., § 4198; C., '51, § 2575.]

5155. Manslaughter. 3856. Any person guilty of the crime of manslaughter, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding eight years, and by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [R., § 4199; C., '51, § 2576.]

What constitutes: Manslaughter is not a degree of murder, but a distinct offense, included, however, in the crime of murder: State v. White, 45-325, 327; and under an indictment for murder a defendant may be convicted of manslaughter: See notes to § 5139.

The common-law definition of manslaughter has not been changed by our statute: State v. Shelledy, 8-477; State v. Moore, 25-128.

The offense defined: State v. Abarr, 39-185; State v. Spangler, 40-365; State v. Hockett, 73-442.

Homicide committed otherwise than wilfully, deliberately, and with premeditation, may be manslaughter or murder in the second degree, depending upon the absence or presence of malice: State v. Spangler, 40-365.

A homicide committed in sudden passion or heat of blood, without premeditation and without malice, is not murder in the second degree, but manslaughter: Ibid.; State v. Decklotts, 19-447.

Provocation: Great provocation may reduce a homicide to manslaughter, but can never render it justifiable or excusable: State v. Vance, 17-138.

Merely words will not constitute sufficient provocation to reduce a homicide to manslaughter. Held, also, that the fact that deceased had been criminally intimate with defendant's wife's sister was not sufficient: State v. Hockett, 70-442.

Intent: Lawful and peaceful intentions will not excuse an unlawful homicide by subsequent violence, though they might bear upon the degree of the homicide. If the conviction is for manslaughter the previous intent is immaterial: State v. Castello, 62-404.

Punishment for manslaughter in a particular case, where the facts indicated on the part of defendant an entire recklessness of the consequences in the unnecessary use of a dangerous weapon in self-defense, held not excessive: State v. Fitzsimmons, 63-656.

Where it appeared that defendant pointed a loaded gun at deceased under circumstances not justifying killing, and deceased seized it to prevent injury, and it was discharged in the struggle without any purpose on the part of defendant, held, that the latter would be guilty of manslaughter, and the circumstances of the case would not wholly excuse the homicide, but might be regarded by the court in fixing

5156. Maiming or disfiguring. 3857. If any person, with intent to maim or disfigure, cut or maim the tongue; cut out or destroy an eye; cut, slit, or tear off an ear; cut, bite, slit, or mutilate the nose or lip; cut off or disable a limb or any member of another person, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, and by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars nor less than one hundred dollars. [R., § 4200; C., '51, § 2577.]

The offense of maiming and disfiguring necessarily includes an assault and battery, within the meaning of § 5851: Benham v. State, 1-542.

While a specific intent to disfigure is an essential element of the crime, yet such intent may be inferred or presumed if the act is done deliberately and the disfigurement is reason-

5157. Robbery. 3858. If any person, with force or violence, or by putting in fear, steal and take from the person of another any property that is the subject of larceny, he is guilty of robbery, and shall be punished according to the aggravation of the offense as is provided in the following two sections. [R., § 4201; C., '51, § 2578.]

What constitutes: To constitute robbery there must be animus furandi; compelling the payment of money which is due, by threats of violence, is not robbery, but is an offense under § 5170: State v. Hollyway, 41-200.

The means used to put in fear need not be such as would put in fear one used to the ways of the world: State v. Carr, 43-418.

A sudden snatching from the hand of another is sufficient force and violence to constitute robbery: Ibid.

The crime of robbery includes all the elements of larceny from the person, defined in § 5211, with the addition of the element of violence or putting in fear, and the fact that the evidence shows the crime to be robbery will not render erroneous a conviction under that section: State v. Graff, 66-482.

Negligence: The careless use of a dangerous and deadly weapon, whereby a person is killed, constitutes manslaughter, although no harm is intended: State v. Hardie, 47-647.

Where one by his negligence contributes to the death of another he is guilty of manslaughter, and it is no defense that the death of deceased was caused by the negligence of others as well as that of the defendant: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 507.

Indictment: In an indictment for manslaughter in exposing a newly-born child, causing its death, held, that it was not necessary to allege that defendant was in duty bound to provide for and protect the child, or that the child was unable to help itself: State v. Behm, 72-533.

Instruction as to other crime: In a trial for manslaughter it is not necessary to define the crime of murder in either degree, nor is it necessary to define any included crime where it appears that defendant admits the killing but seeks to justify and excuse it. But if there is any evidence sustaining the claim that the blow was accidental, the law in relation to accidental killing should be given to the jury: State v. Hartzell, 58-520.

As to instructions with reference to manslaughter on trial for murder, see notes to § 5129.

ably to be apprehended as the natural and probable consequence of the act: State v. Jones, 70-505.

Where an assault is made with intention of committing a bodily injury which will constitute a disfigurement no other intention to disfigure need be proven: State v. Clark, 69-196.

The property taken need not be in the actual possession or presence of the person robbed. It is sufficient if it is so in his possession or under his control that violence or putting in fear is the means used to take it. So held, where a robber by violence extorted from the owner information of the place where valuables were kept in another room of the house, and, leaving her bound, went and took the property: State v. Calhoun, 72-432.

Indictment: An indictment for robbery need not in express terms charge an assault; if it charge putting in bodily fear and danger of life it will be sufficient in this respect, the charge of an assault being thereby necessarily implied: State v. Brewer, 53-735.

An indictment stating that defendant, with force, etc., and by putting in fear, etc., "did take, steal and carry away from the said," etc., is not sufficient to charge this offense. It should charge a taking, etc., from the person: State v. Leighton, 56-595.

An indictment charging that defendant made an assault upon the person named, "and with force and violence unlawfully and feloniously did steal, take and carry away from the person of" said person, etc., held sufficient to charge robbery: State v. Kegan, 62-106.

Evidence that a person was robbed of a certain number of dollars in gold pieces of specified denominations and also of a certain number of dollars in silver coin, held sufficient to show that the person was robbed of gold and silver coins of denominations mentioned in the indictment: State v. Helvon, 65-289.

5158. Armed. 3859. If such offender at the time of such robbery is armed with a dangerous weapon, with intent, if resisted, to kill or maim the person robbed; or if being so armed he wound or strike the person robbed; or if he has any confederate aiding or abetting him in such robbery present and so armed, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding twenty years nor less than ten years. [R., § 4202; C., '51, § 2579.]

The question whether a cord used by the robber to bind the person robbed was a dangerous weapon may be left to the jury: State v. Calhoun, 72-432.

5160. Rape. 3861; 21 G. A., ch. 114, § 1. If any person ravish and carnally know any female of the age of thirteen years or more, by force and against her will, or carnally know and abuse any female child under the age of thirteen years, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for life or any term of years. [R., § 4204; C., '51, § 2581.]

What constitutes: The force necessary on the one hand, and the resistance required on the other, to constitute the crime, depend upon the relative mental and physical strength of the parties and the circumstances surrounding them: State v. Tarr, 28-397.

Where a female was imbecile, and the prisoner, knowing such fact (which might be inferred from his having had some conversation with her), used some force, and there was nothing to indicate consent on her part, held, that the act would be considered to have been against her will, and that in such case actual opposition or dissent need not be shown: Ibid.

It seems that a defendant might, under the statutory definition, be convicted of the crime of rape, committed upon a woman so destitute of mind that she was incapable of consent, without proof of any resistance on her part, notwithstanding the provisions of § 5162: State v. Atherton, 50-189.

Under this section the criminal knowledge and abuse of a female child under the age of ten [now thirteen] years is rape, and an assault with intent to commit such crime is an assault with intent to commit rape. The fact that defendant does not know that the child is under that age will be immaterial: State v. Newton, 44-45.

Where it does not appear that active resistance was made, the age of prosecutrix is important to be considered. If, though over the age of consent, she is still very young, with mind not enlightened upon the nature of the act, this consideration should lead the jury to demand a less clear opposition than if she were older and more intelligent. Consent involves submission, but submission does not necessarily involve consent; and while in most cases such submission of the adult female would imply consent, yet the mere submission of a young and uninformed female in the hands of a strong man cannot be taken to show consent: State v. Cross, 12-66.

Where a female over the age specified is presumed capable of giving consent, yet the fact that a female over that age lacked pubertal development may be considered in support of her claim that she did not understand the nature of the intended act: State v. McCaffrey, 63-479.

Two or more may be jointly indicted for the crime, one being the principal and the other accessories: State v. Comstock, 46-265.

The crime of rape necessarily includes both a simple assault, and an assault with intent to commit the crime, within the meaning of § 5851: State v. Vinsant, 49-241; State v. Peters, 56-263.

On a trial for rape defendant may be convicted of an assault with intent to commit the crime, and even though consent is shown at the time of the commission of the act, it may be shown to have been absent at the time of the commission of the assault: State v. Cross, 12-66; State v. Atherton, 50-189.

In a particular case, held, that an instruction as to the effect of duress was properly given: State v. Ward, 73-532.

Indictment: The sex of the person injured in a particular case held to sufficiently appear from the language of the indictment, although not specifically alleged: State v. Hussey, 7-409.

The indictment in a particular case held to sufficiently indicate the person ravished: State v. Pennell, 56-29.

Evidence: It is not necessary to establish the non-consent or force by proof of outcries or of a struggle, nor need actual penetration be shown by the testimony of the prosecutrix herself. But the jury may say whether, from all the circumstances, the requisite facts are shown: State v. Tarr, 28-397.

The absence of any marks of violence, or of outcries, etc., at the time, may be considered as against the evidence of prosecutrix: State v. Tomlinson, 11-401.

Absence of such outcries and complaints tends strongly to rebut the hypothesis of guilt, but is not conclusive, and the age, etc., of prosecutrix is to be considered: State v. Cross, 12-66.

The better rule is to admonish the jury as to the difficulty of disproving the charge, and call their attention to the fact whether outcry was made at the time: State v. Hagerman, 47-151.

The fact of prosecutrix making complaint is proper evidence, but the particulars of such complaint are not: State v. Richards, 33-420.

But the evidence as to complaints need not be limited necessarily to the fact of complaint being made. It may extend to showing what the person made complaint of: State v. Mitchell, 68-116.

The particular facts stated by the prosecutrix are not admissible in evidence except when elicited on cross-examination, or by way of confirming her testimony after an attempt to impeach it: State v. Clark, 69-294.

Therefore, held, that a letter written by prosecutrix, relating the circumstances of the alleged crime, was not admissible: Ibid.

Evidence that bruises were found upon prosecutrix two and one-half or three weeks after the alleged injury, held properly admitted. The length of time that had elapsed would be for the jury as affecting the credibility of the evidence, but would not render it incompetent: State v. McLaughlin, 44-82.

Proof of another crime of the same character committed at a different time upon or against another person and having no connection with the crime charged is not admissible. So held in a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape as to evidence of similar assaults at previous times upon other persons; but held, that proof of previous assaults on prosecutrix was admissible to show intent: State v. Walters, 45-389.

Evidence as to reputation of prosecutrix for want of chastity should be limited to such reputation before the alleged crime was committed, the claim of the defendant being that the act was with the consent of the prosecutrix: State v. Ward, 73-532.

In a prosecution for rape, held, that statements of prosecutrix made on the same day on which the crime was charged to have been committed, that she had had criminal intercourse with defendant and would have it again, were admissible in evidence as tending to show the character of prosecutrix and her feelings toward defendant: State v. Cook, 65-560.

Evidence considered, and held insufficient to justify conviction for the crime: State v. Tomlinson, 11-401.

Corroboration required, see § 5958 and notes.

Included crimes: Assault and battery is not necessarily included in the crime of rape: State v. McDevitt, 69-549.

Assault: As to assault with intent to commit rape, see § 5172 and notes.

5161. Compelling to marry. 3862. If any person take any woman unlawfully and against her will, and by force, menace, or duress, compel her to marry him or any other person, or to be defiled, he shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years. [R., § 4205.]

No particular amount of force is necessary to constitute the offense of defilement under this section, and it was probably intended to cover cases in which there is no force, excepting that which is constructive, and in which the act is accomplished principally by menace or duress, acting to subdue the will; but it contemplates at least an act against the will. The defendant is not required to show an affirmative act of consent to make out a defense: Pollard v. State, 2-567.

5162. Carnal knowledge. 3863. If any person unlawfully have carnal knowledge of any female by administering to her any substance, or by any other means producing such stupor or such imbecility of mind or weakness of body as to prevent effectual resistance, or have such carnal knowledge of an idiot or female naturally of such imbecility of mind or weakness of body as to prevent effectual resistance, he shall, upon conviction, be punished as provided in the section relating to ravishment. [R., § 4206; C., '51, § 2583.]

See notes to § 5160.

5163. Producing miscarriage of pregnant woman. 3864; 19 G. A., ch. 19. If any person, with intent to produce the miscarriage of any pregnant woman, wilfully administer to her any drug or substance whatever, or, with such intent, use any instrument or other means whatever, unless such miscarriage shall be necessary to save her life, he shall be imprisoned in the state prison for a term not exceeding five years, and be fined in a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars. [R., § 4221.]

Abortion is the act of miscarriage and producing young before the natural time or before the foetus is perfectly formed. It is not within the definition of murder and is not criminal unless expressly made so by the statute: Abrams v. Foshee, 3-274.

It is not necessary to constitute the crime that the woman should be quick with child, nor, providing there is criminal intent, is it necessary that the substance administered should be such as would produce a miscarriage: State v. Fitzgerald, 49-260.

The crime is committed in the county where the drug or other substance is administered, and not where the miscarriage actually takes place; § 5543 does not apply: State v. Hollenbeck, 36-112.

It is not a crime under this section for a woman to procure an abortion on herself: Hatfield v. Gano, 15-177.

Where death is caused in the procurement of an abortion, it is error to instruct the jury that defendant in a prosecution for causing such death may be convicted of manslaughter. He will be guilty of murder in the second degree or nothing: State v. Moore, 25-128.

An indictment alleging that certain acts were done with the design and intention to produce a miscarriage, which it is averred was not necessary to save the life of the woman, is sufficient to charge murder in second degree: State v. Leeper, 70-748.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section: State v. Montgomery, 71-630.

As to civil liability for commission of abortion, see Kansz v. Ryan, 51-232.

5164. Enticing female child for prostitution. 3865; 21 G. A., ch. 114, § 2. If any person take or entice away any unmarried female, under the age of eighteen years from her father, mother, guardian, or other person having the legal charge of her person, for the purpose of prostitution, he shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for not more than three years, or by fine of not more than one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4207; C., '51, § 2584.]

The fact that defendant believed, and had good reason to believe, that the female was over the age specified, constitutes no defense if she was in fact under that age: State v. Ruhl, 8-447. (And as to similar point see State v. Newton, 44-45.)

If the parents are dead and no guardian has been appointed the persons with whom the female resides as a member of the family, and who have her wholly under their care and protection, would have "the legal charge of her person" within the meaning of the section: Ibid.

It is not sufficient to constitute an offense under this section that the accused entice away the female for his own carnal enjoyment, and such enjoyment would not constitute prostitution: Ibid.

As to corroboration of the evidence of prosecutrix, see § 5958.

5165. Enticing away child. 3866; 21 G. A., ch. 114, § 3. If any person maliciously, forcibly, or fraudulently lead, take, decoy, or entice away any child under the age of fourteen years, with the intent to detain or conceal such child from its parent, guardian, or any other person having the lawful charge of such child, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [R., § 4208; C., '51, § 2585.]

5166. Seduction. 3867. If any person seduce and debauch any unmarried woman of previously chaste character, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4209; C., '51, § 2586.]

What constitutes: Mere unlawful sexual commerce for a consideration paid is not seduction. There must be some artifice or false promise by which the virtuous female is induced to surrender her person. But the allegations in the indictment in a particular case, of representations as to the innocence of the act and promises of presents, etc., held sufficient on demurrer: State v. Fitzgerald, 63-268.

To "debauch" implies to "have carnal knowledge of" (arguendo): Wood v. Matthews, 47-409.

Where the evidence fails to show artifice, promise, flattery, deception, or the like, it will not be sufficient to sustain a conviction: State v. Crawford, 34-40.

A woman who, without promise of marriage, yields to the embraces of a man who avowedly visits her for that purpose, and threatens to cease visiting her if she refuses to comply with his desires, cannot recover for seduction: Baird v. Bohner, 72-318.

An indictment charging that defendant seduced and debauched, etc., etc., is sufficient without charging the facts as to the means made use of to accomplish such end: State v. Curran, 51-112; State v. Conlright, 53-333.

Evidence: The exact amount or kind of seductive arts necessary to establish the offense cannot be defined. Every case must depend upon its own peculiar circumstances, together with the conditions in life, advantages, age and intelligence of the parties: State v. Higdon, 32-262.

It is not necessary that the false promises or seductive arts be reasonable in their character and likely to have been relied upon by the prosecutrix; but the fact that they were extraordinary and made by a person who, to the knowledge of the prosecutrix, was not capable of performing them, should be considered by the jury in determining whether they were sufficient: State v. Groome, 10-308.

The fact that false promises of marriage were made at the time with intent to break them would be immaterial. Such false promises of marriage would be sufficient: State v. Prizer, 49-531.

To warrant a conviction of defendant upon the evidence of prosecutrix there should not be any strained construction put upon her language in order to sustain the verdict. It is to be expected that she should, so far as possible, shield herself and cast the blame upon defendant. Therefore, in a particular case, a conviction was reversed on the ground that the evidence of prosecutrix did not, by fair and reasonable construction, show any arts, false promises, etc.: State v. Haven, 43-181.

Where, in a prosecution for seduction, prosecutrix testified that she resisted, and defendant overcame such resistance by force, held, that the court should have instructed the jury that, if they found such to be the fact, defendant was entitled to an acquittal, the crime under such facts being rape, and not seduction: State v. Lewis, 48-578.

In a particular case, held, that it sufficiently appeared from the evidence that prosecutrix was an unmarried woman: also that the seductive arts were such as were sufficient to constitute the crime, being promises to marry, etc.: also, that the corroboration was sufficient: State v. Heatherton, 60-175.

Evidence of an offer by prosecutrix, after the commencement of the prosecution, to settle for a sum of money, held not admissible: State v. Dedrick, 51-467.

Where it appeared that defendant was a suitor of the prosecutrix before and for some time after the illicit intercourse, held, that his conduct during the entire time might be inquired into in determining whether her consent was gained by seductive means: State v. Curran, 51-112.

As to corroboration required, see § 5958 and notes.

Previously chaste character of prosecutrix: The word character as used in the statute defining the crime as the seduction of any unmarried woman "of previously chaste character" is used in its true sense as distinguished from reputation, but a female may be of unchaste character without being guilty of any act of sexual intercourse. Obscenity of language, indecency of conduct and undue familiarity with men may serve to indicate the true character. It is for the jury to decide, under all the circumstances, as to the character of the prosecutrix: Andre v. State, 5-389; Boak v. State, 5-430.

A female who has been unchaste may reform and acquire a chaste character, such as is referred to in the statute: State v. Carron, 18-372.

Evidence that prosecutrix has a bad reputation for chastity is not admissible, but evidence that her reputation in that respect is good may be received in rebuttal of evidence tending to prove acts of lewdness: State v. Prizer, 49-531; State v. Shean, 32-88.

Proof of unchaste conduct on the part of prosecutrix just prior to the alleged seduction would entitle defendant to acquittal; therefore, an instruction that proof of such conduct should be considered against prosecutrix held erroneous, in that it did not go far enough in stating the effect of such conduct: State v. Carr, 60-453.

Where the woman is examined as a witness to prove the seduction, she may, on cross-examination, be asked as to matters which would show a want of chastity previous to such seduction. The question of chastity is directly in issue: State v. Sutherland, 30-570.

Instruction as to effect of proof of improper liberties allowed to others than defendant prior to the alleged crime, held misleading, in that the meaning of such term was left ambiguous: State v. Carr, 60-453.

Evidence of improper conduct of prosecutrix occurring eight years before the trial, and when she was but fourteen years of age, held properly excluded: State v. Dunn, 53-526.

Previously chaste character is not essential in a civil action by an unmarried female for seduction: See § 3760 and notes.

Presumption: The previous chaste character of the prosecutrix is presumed, and the onus is upon defendant to overcome such presumption by preponderance of evidence: State v. Wells, 43-671; State v. Higdon, 32-262; Andre v. State, 5-389.

Such presumption may be rebutted by proven or admitted facts or circumstances in the case: State v. Bowman, 45-418.

The presumption in favor of the chastity of the prosecutrix is not a presumption against the innocence of defendant. He is presumed innocent of the fact, but the presumption is also entertained in favor of the rectitude of her character: Andre v. State, 5-389.

An instruction that the presumption of chastity might be overcome by proof of wantonness or indiscretion indicating an unchaste character, but which made no reference to other matters which might indicate unchastity, held not erroneous where there was no evidence of other facts indicating unchastity: State v. Bell, 49-440.

As to presumption of chastity in a civil action for damages and evidence to overcome it, see West v. Druff, 55-335.

Only the previous character is put in issue, and all evidence of improper conduct after the time of seduction should be excluded: State v. Wells, 48-671.

Questions as to chastity must clearly refer to a time previous to the seduction: State v. Deitrick, 51-467.

Previously chaste character is not essential in a civil action by a parent for seduction of a minor daughter: Updegraff v. Bennett, 8-72.

5167. Marriage a bar. 3868. If, before judgment upon an indictment, the defendant marry the woman thus seduced, it is a bar to any further prosecution for the offense. [R., § 4210; C., '51, § 2587.]

Such a marriage is encouraged by the law, and contracts entered into in contemplation thereof are not invalid as being made under duress, and will be upheld: Armstrong v. Lester, 43-159.

5168. Kidnapping. 3869. If any person wilfully and without lawful authority, forcibly or secretly confine or imprison any other person within this state against his will; or forcibly carry or send such person out of the state; or forcibly seize and confine or inveigle or kidnap any other person with the intent either to cause such person to be secretly confined or imprisoned in this state against his will, or to cause such person to be sent out of this state against his will, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4211; C., '51, § 2588.]

5169. Exposing child. 3870. If the father and mother of any child under the age of six years, or any person to whom such child has been intrusted or confided, expose such child in any highway, street, field, house, or outhouse, or in any other place with intent wholly to abandon it, he or she, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years. [R., § 4212; C., '51, § 2589.]

"Father and mother" construed to mean "father or mother." Either parent alone may commit the crime: State v. Smith, 46-670, 672.

5170. Malicious threats to extort. 3871. If any person, either verbally or by any written or printed communication, maliciously threaten to accuse another of a crime or offense, or to do any injury to the person or property of another, with intent thereby to extort any money or pecuniary advantage whatever, or to compel the person so threatened to do any act against his will, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than two years or by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [R., § 4213; C., '51, § 2590.]

Extortion and pecuniary advantage are not necessary ingredients of this offense. An indictment charging defendant with maliciously threatening, etc., with intent "to compel the person, etc., to do an act against his will," is sufficient: State v. Young, 36-122.

An indictment charging defendant with verbally threatening to kill and murder two certain persons, with intent, etc., held sufficient without setting out the threatening words used; also held that a threat to kill two persons constituted but one offense: State v. O'Mally, 48-501.

In the absence of a felonious intent it is not robbery to compel, by means of threats of personal violence, the payment of money; but such an act is an offense under this section: State v. Hollyway, 41-200.

5171. Assault with intent to murder. 3872. If any person assault another with intent to commit murder, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years. [R., § 4214; C., '51, § 2591.]

In an indictment for an assault with intent to commit an offense it is not necessary to make all the averments required in an indictment for the offense itself. Therefore, held not necessary in charging an assault with intent to murder to charge that the assault was made with malice aforethought: State v. Newberry, 26-467.

An assault with intent to commit murder does not admit of different degrees, since the intent is the gist of the offense, but it necessarily includes a simple assault: State v. Jarvis, 21-44.

And a defendant indicted under this section may be convicted of that offense: State v. Shepard, 10-126.

An assault with intent to commit manslaughter is included in an assault with intent to commit murder, and a party may be convicted of the former offense under an indictment charging the latter, as provided by § 5851: State v. White, 45-325 (overruling S. C., 41-316); State v. Schle, 52-608; State v. Connor, 59-357.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence was sufficient to show that the assault was made with premeditation and intent to kill: State v. Brown, 67-289.

The facts in a prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder, held sufficient to show that the punishment inflicted was excessive and sentence was modified accordingly: State v. Doering, 48-650.

5172. With intent to commit rape. 3873. If any person assault a female with intent to commit a rape, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding twenty years. [R., § 4215; C., '51, § 2592.]

What constitutes: It must appear that the intent of defendant was to gratify his passions, notwithstanding any possible resistance prosecutrix should make: State v. Cross, 12-66; State v. Hagerman, 47-151.

The intent to commit the crime of rape necessarily includes an attempt to overcome the resistance of the woman and accomplish the connection by force; and to establish assault with intent to commit rape, the evidence must show that the assault was made with the intent to use whatever degree of force might be necessary to overcome the resistance and accomplish the object: State v. Canada, 68-397; State v. Kendall, 73-255.

Assault with intent to commit rape does not necessarily include assault and battery: State v. McDevitt, 69-549.

Defendant may be found guilty of an assault with intent to commit, etc., although at the time of accomplishing the act there was such consent as to deprive the act of the character of rape: State v. Cross, 12-66; State v. Atherton, 50-189.

Assault with intent to carnally know a child under the age fixed by § 5160, is an assault with intent to commit rape, and in such case it is not necessary to prove that defendant knew the fact as to the age of the child. Proof of that fact itself is sufficient: State v. New- ton, 44-45. And upon a similar point, see State v. Ruhl, 8-447.

Evidence: In a prosecution for this crime the conduct of the parties towards each other, both before and after the alleged offense, may be shown in evidence: Mallett v. Beale, 66-70. Facts in a particular case held sufficient to show the intent with which the assault was committed: State v. McIntire, 66-339.

Evidence of intoxication is admissible for the purpose of showing absence of intent in such a case: State v. Donovan, 61-369.

The jury should be told that if they find from the evidence that defendant was so drunk as to be incapable of an intent to ravish the prosecutrix they should find him not guilty: Ibid.

There is no legal presumption that any offense or any specific result is intended by a man chasing a woman: Ibid.

Under the facts of a particular case, a new trial was granted for the insufficiency and unsatisfactory nature of corroborating testimony, and for want of proper instructions as to the effect of a jest as indicating criminal intent: State v. Warner, 25-200.

Whether the provisions of § 5958, requiring corroboration of evidence of the injured party in a prosecution for rape, are applicable in an assault with an intent to commit rape, quere: State v. McIntire, 66-339.

Whether the provisions of § 5958, requiring corroboration of evidence of the injured party in a prosecution for rape, are applicable in an assault with an intent to commit rape, quere: State v. McIntire, 66-339.

Whether the provisions of § 5958, requiring corroboration of evidence of the injured party in a prosecution for rape, are applicable in an assault with an intent to commit rape, quere: State v. McIntire, 66-339.

Whether the provisions of § 5958, requiring corroboration of evidence of the injured party in a prosecution for rape, are applicable in an assault with an intent to commit rape, quere: State v. McIntire, 66-339.

Whether the provisions of § 5958, requiring corroboration of evidence of the injured party in a prosecution for rape, are applicable in an assault with an intent to commit rape, quere: State v. McIntire, 66-339.

Whether the provisions of § 5958, requiring corroboration of evidence of the injured party in a prosecution for rape, are applicable in an assault with an intent to commit rape, quere: State v. McIntire, 66-339.

5173. With intent to maim, rob, steal, etc. 3874. If any person assault another with intent to maim, rob, steal, or commit arson or burglary, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4216; C., '51, § 2593.]

One who intentionally bites off a person's ear is guilty of an assault with intent to disfigure, and not merely with intent to injure: State v. Clark, 69-196.

5174. Great bodily injury. 3875. If any person assault another with intent to inflict a great bodily injury, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [R., § 4217; C., '51, § 2594.]

This crime is sufficiently charged in an information which accuses defendant of an assault and battery, alleging that defendant wilfully and maliciously struck and beat the person injured with intent of doing him great bodily injury: State v. Carpenter, 23-506.

An indictment charging an assault and battery with intent to inflict great bodily injury does not charge more than one offense. The battery is simply an aggravation: Cokely v. State, 4-477.

When the felonious intent is shown, that which would be an assault if unaccompanied with such intent will be such when thus accompanied: State v. Malcolm, 8-413.

Under an indictment for this offense defendant may be convicted of a simple assault, as provided in § 5851: Orton v. State, 4 G. Gr., 140.

A great bodily injury is an injury to the person of a more grave and serious character than an ordinary battery, but it cannot be definitely defined. The question whether the injury inflicted in a particular case constitutes a great bodily injury is for the jury: State v. Gillett, 56-459.

Where a person makes an assault on another and inflicts upon him an injury of a more grave and serious character than an ordinary battery, the presumption is warranted that he intended to inflict a great bodily injury, if there is no evidence tending to show that he intended a less injury: Ibid.

While a person is presumed to have intended all consequences which are to be ordinarily apprehended as the result of his act, yet expert evidence is not admissible to show what results might have been apprehended by a physician of skill and experience as likely to result from such an assault: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

5175. With intent to commit any felony. 3876. If any person assault another with intent to commit any felony or crime punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, where the punishment is not otherwise prescribed, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4218; C., '51, § 2595.]

Under this section an assault with intent to commit manslaughter may be punished: State v. White, 45-335.

To convict of assault with intent to commit murder the evidence should show that defendant's act was unlawful, that it was committed with intent to take life, and that it was with malice aforethought. If the evidence as to malice aforethought is not sufficient to support the verdict of the jury, the court may, on motion for new trial, sentence defendant for assault with intent to commit manslaughter: State v. Keasting, 74-528.

5176. Mingle poison with food, etc. 3877. If any person mingle any poison with any food, drink, or medicine, with intent to kill or injure any human being, or wilfully poison any spring, well, cistern, or reservoir of water, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years and by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [R., § 4219; C., '51, § 2596.]

5177. Assault and battery. 3878. Whoever is convicted of an assault, or an assault and battery, where no other punishment is prescribed, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [R., § 4220; C., '51, § 2597.]

Assault; what constitutes: To constitute an assault it is not necessary that defendant should have been in such position as to inflict injury on the person assaulted with the weapon used, provided it appears that he intended and endeavored to inflict such injury and had means and ability to do so, and was only prevented from doing so by the interference of others: State v. Malcolm, 8-413.

It is an assault to present an unloaded gun or pistol at another in a manner calculated to terrify the person aimed at, if the latter does not know or has no reason to believe that the weapon is not loaded: State v. Shepard, 10-126.

An indictment charging that defendant did make an assault with a certain dangerous weapon, to wit, a gun with which he was armed, etc., but not alleging that the gun was loaded, nor the manner of using it, nor that it was pointed or discharged, held sufficient to charge an assault: Ibid.

An assault may be committed without doing any personal injury: State v. Myers, 19-517.

Assault and battery: The statute merely prescribes the punishment for the offenses of assault, and assault and battery, and leaves them to be defined by the common law: State v. Twogood, 7-252.

It constitutes assault and battery to forcibly and violently take property claimed under chattel mortgage from the person in possession thereof, where it is necessary, in order to effect the purpose, to inflict personal injury: State v. Boynton, 75-753.

Justification: Angry words are no justification for an assault and battery. Neither is it unlawful for a party to forbid an angry person coming upon the former's premises: Thompson v. Mumma, 21-65.

The fact that an officer has levied upon property exempt from seizure is no justification for an assault: Cokely v. State, 4-477.

In a prosecution for an assault it is not proper to ask the prosecuting witness whether he had not at a previous time struck the defendant: State v. Montgomery, 65-483.

How charged: Information charging defendant with inhumanly beating his own child sufficiently charges the offense of assault and battery; but the name of the person on whom the offense was committed should be given: State v. Bitman, 13-485.

An information for assault and battery is sufficient which charges violent beating, wounding, etc., without alleging that such acts were done in anger and in a wilful manner, and with the purpose to hurt and inflict corporal injury: State v. Boynton, 75-753.

As to assault included in other crimes, see notes to § 5851.

5178. Carrying concealed weapons. 3879. If any person carry upon his person any concealed weapon, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not more than thirty days; provided, that this section shall not apply to police officers and other persons whose duty it is to execute process or warrants, or make arrests.

The intent or purpose with which the weapon is carried is not an element of the offense, nor is it required that it be carried with defendant's knowledge, or wilfully, that is, with set purpose. The obvious purpose is to forbid the carrying of weapons on the person with the knowledge of the accused that the weapon was so carried, and that it was a weapon. If the weapon was carried through restraint, or ignorance, or for any innocent or lawful purpose, such fact may be shown by the defense; it need not be negated in the indictment: State v. Williams, 70-52.

CHAPTER 3.

OFFENSES AGAINST PROPERTY.

5179. Burning inhabited dwelling in night-time. 3880. If any person wilfully or maliciously burn in the night-time, the inhabited building, boat, or vessel of another, or wilfully and maliciously set fire to any other building, boat, or vessel owned by himself or another, by the burning whereof such inhabited building, boat, or vessel is burnt in the night-time, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for life or any term of years. [R., § 4222; C., '51, § 2598.]

5180. In day-time. 3881. If any person wilfully or maliciously burn in the day-time the inhabited building, boat, or vessel of another, or any building, boat, or vessel adjoining thereto; or wilfully and maliciously set fire to any building, boat, or vessel owned by himself or another, by the burning whereof such inhabited building, boat, or vessel is burnt in the day-time; or in the day-time wilfully and maliciously set fire to any building, boat, or vessel owned by himself or another, by the burning of which any such inhabited building, boat, or vessel is burnt in the night-time, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding thirty years. [R., § 4223; C., '51, § 2598.]

[The last word of this section, in the original rolls, is "days" instead of "years," but as the Revision and the Code commissioners' report each have the section as here given, the word "years" is retained as in the printed Code, the substitution of "days" in the original being evidently a mistake corrected by the editor. It admits, however, of serious doubt whether the strict language of the original would not govern in such case.]

5181. Burning uninhabited dwelling, etc., in night-time. 3882. If any person wilfully and maliciously burn in the night-time, any uninhabited dwelling-house, boat, or vessel belonging to another, or any court-house, jail, college, church or any building erected for public use, or any other building, boat or vessel, by the burning whereof any building, boat, or vessel mentioned in this section is burnt in the night-time, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding twenty years. [R., § 4224; C., '51, § 2600.]

5182. In the day-time. 3883. If any person wilfully and maliciously burn in the day-time any building, boat, or vessel mentioned in the preceding section, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding fifteen years. [R., § 4225; C., '51, § 2601.]

5183. Burning mills, locks, dams, depots, etc. 3884. If any person wilfully and maliciously burn, either in the night or day-time, any warehouse, store, manufactory, mill, railroad depot, barn, stable, shop, office, outhouse, or any building whatsoever of another, other than is mentioned in the preceding sections of this chapter, or any bridge, lock, dam, or flume, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years. [R., § 4226; C., '51, § 2602.]

An indictment charging defendant with building was not a barn but only a shed: State burning a certain "building, etc., called a v. Smith, 28-565. barn," held sufficient, though in fact the 5184. Setting fire with intent to burn. 3885. If any person set fire to any building, boat, or vessel mentioned in the preceding sections of this chapter, or to any material with intent to cause any such building, boat, or vessel to be burnt, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4227; C., '51, § 2603.]

An averment that defendant set fire to certain material in the store of a person named is not sustained by proof that he set fire to such material in a building owned by such person but in a room occupied by a tenant as a store: State v. Tennery, 9-436.

But in such case an averment that the fire was applied in a room within the store building of such person, held proper: Ibid.

Where defendant set a lighted candle in hay and other combustible material, with intent to burn a barn, but neither the barn nor the material was ignited or burned, held that, nevertheless, he was guilty under this section. The lighting of the candle was "setting fire, etc., to any material:" State v. Johnson, 19-230.

5185. Burning or destroying lumber, fences, grain, etc. 3886. If any person wilfully and maliciously burn, or otherwise destroy or injure any pile or parcel of wood, boards, timber, or lumber, or any fence, bars, or gate, or any grain, hay, or other vegetable product severed from the soil, or any standing tree, grain, grass, or other standing product of the soil, the property of another, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4228; C., '51, § 2604.]

5187. Burning to injure insurers. 3888. If any person wilfully burn any building, goods, wares, merchandise, or other chattels which are insured against loss or damage by fire, or wilfully cause or procure the same to be burned, with intent to injure the insurer, whether such person be the owner of such property or not, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years. [R., § 4230; C., '51, § 2606.]

5188. Setting out fire. 3889; 17 G. A., ch. 55. If any person wilfully, or without using proper caution, set fire to and burn, or cause to be burned, any prairie or timbered land, or any enclosed or cultivated field, or any highway, by which the property of another is injured or destroyed, he shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. [R., § 4231; C., '51, § 2607.]

Under this section, held, that a party was liable for damages resulting to others, only where he set the fire out wilfully or without using the proper caution: Conn v. May, 36-

241, and cases cited. And see notes to following section.

Under statute somewhat similar to this, but providing that the party setting out a fire should be liable for damages sustained, held, that he would not be liable where he had not willingly or maliciously permitted or suffered the fire to pass over his premises so as to injure another: De France v. Spencer, 2 G. Gr., 462; Hanlon v. Ingram, 3-81.

5189. Allowing fire to escape. 3890. If any person set fire to and burn, or cause to be burned, any prairie or timber land, and allow such fire to escape from his control, between the first day of September in any year and the first day of May following, he shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [9 G. A., ch. 53.]

Setting out fire in a cultivated field is not within the scope of this section: Brunell v. Hopkins, 42-429. (But see, now, the previous section as amended.)

Under this section a party is absolutely liable for all damages resulting from the act prohibited, without regard to the question of negligence: Conn v. May, 36-241. See note to preceding section.

5190. Burglary. 3891. If any person break and enter any dwelling-house in the night-time, with intent to commit any public offense; or, after having entered with such intent, break any such dwelling-house in the night-time, he shall be deemed guilty of burglary, and shall be punished according to the aggravation of the offense as is provided in the next two sections. [R., § 4232; C., '51, § 2608.]

Breaking: The pushing open of a closed door is a sufficient breaking within the meaning of the law to constitute burglary: State v. Reid, 20-413.

Indictment: An indictment charging burglary in breaking and entering a house described as the property of a man whose wife owned the legal title, the property being occupied as a homestead, held proper, the possession being in the person named, as head of the family: State v. Short, 54-392.

When the indictment charged that the building broken and entered was the property of H., held, that proof that H. was in possession as tenant was sufficient proof of ownership: State v. Golden, 49-48.

Burglary is an offense against the possession. At common law the ownership was required to be laid in the tenant or person in possession, and this rule is not changed by any provision of statute, although, under § 5687, it would probably be immaterial whether the possession was laid in the land owner or the tenant if the offense was in other respects sufficiently described: State v. Rivers, 68-611.

In a prosecution for burglary it is material only to prove that the person named in the indictment as owner was in occupancy and possession of the building: State v. Teeter, 69-717.

It is not necessary that the indictment for burglary should allege that some one was in the house at the time of the commission of the crime: State v. Reid, 20-413.

It is not necessary that the indictment show that goods, wares and merchandise were kept for use, sale or deposit in the building; nor is it necessary that the indictment set out the names of the dwellers in the house. An erroneous allegation as to the ownership of the building is not material when the crime is in other respects described with sufficient definiteness: State v. Eamons, 72-265.

Time: In an indictment for burglary, held, that an allegation of breaking and entering on a certain day, in the night-time of said day, constituted a sufficient allegation that the offense was committed in the night-time: State v. Ruby, 61-86.

The heinousness of the crime committed in the night-time is deemed much greater than when committed in the day-time: State v. Frahm, 73-355.

Intent: An indictment charging a breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny is sufficient without averring that the intention was to steal property of a greater value than twenty dollars: State v. Jones, 10-206.

The fact that an indictment for burglary does not charge the breaking and entry as "burglarious" does not render the indictment bad. The breaking and entering with the required intent constitute the crime: State v. Short, 54-392.

The intent being made a necessary element in the crime here defined, intoxication may be weighed by the jury in considering whether such intent existed: State v. Bell, 29-316.

Evidence: Proof of a larceny committed after the breaking and entering is admissible as showing the intent with which the breaking and entry were committed: State v. Golden, 49-48.

The fact of the breaking and entry may be considered in determining the intent with which the breaking and entry were committed, in connection with the other circumstances of the case: State v. Teeter, 69-717.

The possession of goods recently stolen in connection with the commission of a burglary is not of itself sufficient evidence upon which to find defendant guilty of the burglary: State v. Shaffer, 59-290; State v. Tilton, 63-117.

But such possession, in connection with other evidence of guilty conduct, such as the possession of burglarious tools, etc., is prima facie evidence of guilt, sufficient to convict: State v. Reid, 20-413.

The mere possession of goods stolen from the building in which the burglary is alleged to have been committed does not have the same tendency to connect the person found in the possession of such goods with the burglary as it does with the larceny, and is not prima facie evidence of guilt of the burglary; but when it is shown that the two offenses were committed at the same time, and by the same person, the fact of the possession of goods stolen at that time from the building has necessarily the same tendency to prove the person in possession thereof guilty of burglary as of the larceny: State v. Rivers, 68-611; State v. Frahm, 73-355.

Compound offense: The two offenses of breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny, and the crime of larceny alone, cannot be committed by the same act so as to constitute a compound offense under § 5685: State v. Ridley, 48-370; State v. Rhodes, 48-702; State v. McFarland, 49-99.

Under an indictment which charges both the felonious breaking and entering, and larceny, the latter charge may be disregarded and trial and conviction had under the former: State v. Hayden, 45-11; State v. Shaffer, 59-290.

See further as to compound offenses, etc., § 5685 and notes.

5191. Being armed or assaulting a person. 3892. If such offender, at the time of committing such burglary, is armed with a dangerous weapon, or so armed himself after having entered such dwelling-house, or actually assault any person being lawfully therein, or has any confederate present aiding and abetting in such burglary, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for life or any term of years. [R., § 4233; C., '51, § 2609.]

The portion of an indictment charging assault with intent to murder may be dismissed and defendant tried for burglary alone: State v. Struble, 71-11.

5192. When not armed. 3893. If such offender commit such burglary otherwise than is mentioned in the preceding section, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding twenty years. [R., § 4234; C., '51, § 2610.]

5193. Possession of burglar's tools. 15 G. A., ch. 13, § 1. If any person shall be found, having in his possession at any time any burglar tools or implements, with intent to commit the crime of burglary, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days, and it shall be the duty of the court before whom such conviction is had to retain possession of such burglar tools or implements, to be used in evidence in any court in which said person is tried.

5194. Other breakings and enterings. 3894. If any person with intent to commit any public offense, in the day-time break and enter, or in the night-time enter without breaking, any dwelling-house; or at any time break and enter any office, shop, store, warehouse, railroad car, boat, or vessel, or any buildings in which any goods, merchandise, or valuable things are kept for use, sale, or deposit, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4235; C., '51, § 2611; 13 G. A., ch. 185.]

One who receives the stolen goods is not an accomplice in the crime of breaking and entering here defined: State v. Hayden, 45-11.

The crime of entering a dwelling-house in the night-time with intent to commit a public offense is included in that of burglary, under the provisions of § 5851, so that under an indictment for the latter offense a defendant may be convicted of the former: State v. Maxwell, 42-208.

The offense is against the owner of the building, and his name, and not that of the owner of goods, etc., therein, which the accused intended to steal, should be given in the indictment. If the name of such owner is not known it should be so stated: State v. Morrisey, 22-158.

While the offense defined by this section is similar to that of burglary, defined by § 5190, an indictment which describes the house as a place "in which goods were kept for use, sale and deposit," sufficiently specifies that the offense charged is one under this section, and not under the other: State v. Franks, 64-39.

Possession of burglarious tools within a few hours after the commission of the crime may be proven as tending to connect defendant with the crime, and such evidence is admissible for that purpose although it shows in fact a distinct substantive offense: Ibid.

5195. Attempting to break and enter. 18 G. A., ch. 11, § 1. If any person, with intent to commit any public offense, shall attempt to break and enter any dwelling-house, at any time, or to enter any dwelling-house in the night-time without breaking, or at any time to break and enter any office, shop, store, warehouse, railroad car, boat, vessel, or any building in which any goods, merchandise, or valuable things are kept for use, sale or deposit, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year.

5196. Selling or concealing mortgaged property. 3895. If any mortgagor of personal property, while his mortgage of it remains unsatisfied, wilfully destroy, conceal, sell or in any manner dispose of the property covered by such mortgage without the consent of the then holder of such mortgage, he shall be deemed guilty of larceny and be punished accordingly. [R., § 4236.]

An indictment under this section should aver that the mortgage remains unsatisfied: State v. Gustafson, 50-194.

The consent of the mortgagee here contemplated, while it prevents the act from being a crime, does not constitute a waiver of his lien on the property: Oswald v. Hayes, 42-104, 106.

Where a mortgage of personal property provided that, if the mortgagor removed it from the county, the mortgagee might take possession of and sell it, held, that a mere removal from the county would constitute no offense under this section, and a subsequent concealment or sale would not be an offense in the county where the mortgage was executed; but it seems the offense would be committed in the county from which the property was thus subsequently taken for the purpose of concealment and sale: State v. Julien, 48-445.

A subsequent mortgage of the same property by the mortgagor is not void under this statutory provision: Tootle v. Taylor, 64-629.

It is the selling of mortgaged property without the consent of the then holder of the mortgage that is made criminal. Consent of the mortgagor, given before the execution of the mortgage, that the mortgaged property may be sold, may, however, constitute a continuing consent, at least until the act consented to could properly be done, and may prevent an act in accordance with such consent from being criminal. The rule as to the inadmissibility of parol evidence to contradict a written contract is not applicable in such case. If the consent is such, in whatever way it may be given, that the seller honestly believes that he is authorized to sell the property, his honest act cannot be converted into a criminal one by the rules of evidence: Walker v. Camp, 69-741.

It is not criminal to purchase mortgaged chattels: McDonald v. Norton, 72-652.

5197. Driving away stock. 3896. If any person knowingly or wilfully drive off, or suffer or permit to be driven off, any horned or other stock of another to a distance exceeding three miles from the residence of the owner, or of his agent having charge of such stock, or the range in which such stock is usually in the habit of running, without the consent of such owner or agent, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days; and any justice of the peace in any county through which the stock thus driven off should pass, or in which it may be found, shall have jurisdiction of the offense. [9 G. A., ch. 34, §§ 1, 2; 12 G. A., ch. 108; 14 G. A., ch. 88.]

To authorize a recovery under this section for damages suffered it is necessary to allege and prove that defendant had knowledge of the fact that the animal had entered his drove and was being taken away: Chamberlain v. Gage, 20-303.

5198. Stealing or knocking off fruit in day-time. 3897. If any person maliciously or mischievously enter the inclosure of another, with intent to knock off, pick, destroy, or carry away; or having lawfully entered, do afterwards wrongfully knock off, pick, destroy, or carry away any apples, peaches, pears, plums, grapes, or any other fruit or flower of any tree, shrub, bush, or vine, he shall be punished, for the first offense, by a fine not less than five dollars nor exceeding one hundred dollars, with the costs of conviction, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days; and should any person be found guilty of a second violation hereof, he shall be fined not less than ten dollars and costs of conviction, or imprisonment as above provided. [9 G. A., ch. 120; 12 G. A., ch. 74, § 1.]

5199. Same in night-time. 3898. If any person maliciously or mischievously enter the inclosure of another in the night-time and knock off, pick, destroy, or carry away any apples, peaches, pears, plums, grapes, or other fruit or flower of any tree, shrub, bush, or vine; or, if any person having entered the inclosure of another in the night-time, with the intent to knock off, pick, destroy, or carry away any fruit or flower as aforesaid be actually found therein, he shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not less than twenty-five nor to exceed one hundred dollars and costs of conviction, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [12 G. A., ch. 74, § 2.]

A party has no right to prevent a trespass of life, or by inflicting great bodily injury, as by this kind by the use of means dangerous to a spring-gun: Hooker v. Miller, 37-613.

5200. Destroying or injuring fruit trees. 3899. If any person maliciously or mischievously bruise, break, pull up, cut down, carry away, destroy, or in anywise injure any fruit or ornamental tree, shrub, or vine, growing or standing on the land of another, he shall be punished by a fine not less than ten nor exceeding one hundred dollars and costs of conviction, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [Same, § 4.]

5201. Disturbing stock. 3900. Any person who knowingly discharges fire-arms of any description within, or in the immediate vicinity of, any inclosure where cattle, hogs, or sheep are being fed for the purpose of fattening the same; or any person who enters such inclosure with fire-arms, or dog, unless such person shall be the owner of said stock, or have the control of the same, or shall have permission from such owner or the person having control thereof to enter said premises, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [14 G. A., ch. 14, § 1.]

[Sec. 3901 is repealed by § 2496a.]

INTERFERENCE WITH RAILWAYS.

5202. Shooting or throwing at train. 16 G. A., ch. 148, § 1. If any person shall throw any stone, or other substance of any nature whatever, or shall present or discharge any gun, pistol, or other fire-arm at any railroad train, car, or locomotive engine he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished accordingly.

5203. Jumping off cars in motion. 16 G. A., ch. 148, § 2. If any person not employed thereon, or not an officer of the law in the discharge of his duty, without the consent of the person having the same in charge, shall get upon, or off, any locomotive engine, or car of any railroad company while said engine or car is in motion, or elsewhere than at the established depots of such company, or who shall get upon, cling to, or otherwise attach himself to any such engine or car, for the purpose of riding upon the same, intending to jump therefrom, when such engine or car is in motion, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days.

Where the recovery for injury received while getting off of a train while in motion is sought to be defeated on the ground that such act was unlawful and constituted contributory negligence, plaintiff may, under allegation of freedom from contributory negligence, prove that the act was with the consent of the conductor: Raben v. Central Iowa R. Co., 74-732.

5204. Uncoupling locomotive or cars. 19 G. A., ch. 112, § 1. If any person shall wilfully and maliciously uncouple or detach the locomotive or tender or any of the cars of any railroad train, or shall in any manner aid, abet, or procure the doing of the same, such person shall be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both, at the discretion of the court.

5205. Seizing or running locomotive. 19 G. A., ch. 112, § 2. If any person shall unlawfully seize upon any locomotive, with or without any express, mail, baggage, or other car attached thereto, and run the same upon any railroad, or shall aid, abet, or procure the doing of the same, such person shall be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary not exceeding ten years, or by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, or both, at the discretion of the court.

5206. Wrongfully running hand-car. 19 G. A., ch. 112, § 3. If any person shall, without permission from the proper authority, wrongfully take or run any hand-car upon any railroad in this state, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than thirty days, at the discretion of the court: Provided, that if by such unlawful use of any hand-car any locomotive or car is thrown from the track, or a collision produced, or any person injured thereby, he shall, on conviction, be imprisoned in the penitentiary for a term of not more than five years; and provided further, that if by reason of such unlawful use of any hand-car any person is killed, such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter.

5207. Interference with air-brake or bell-rope; arrest. 19 G. A., ch. 112, § 4. If any person not an employee upon the railroad shall wrongfully interfere with any automatic air-brake or bell-rope upon any railroad car, or use the same for the purpose of stopping or in any way controlling the movement of the train, [he] shall be subject to the penalty provided in section three of this act [§ 5206] for the unlawful running of a hand-car on any railroad; and any conductor or brakeman on a railroad train shall have power to arrest such person so offending and deliver him to some peace officer on the line of the railroad.

CHAPTER 4.

LARCENY AND RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS.

5208. Larceny defined. 3902. If any person steal, take, and carry away of the property of another, any money, goods, or chattels; any writ, process, or public record; any bond, bank-note, promissory note, bill of exchange, or other bill, order, or certificate; or any book of accounts respecting money, goods, or other things; or any deed or writing containing a conveyance of real estate; or any contract in force; or any receipt, release, or defeasance; or any instrument or writing whereby any demand, right, or obligation is created, increased, extinguished, or diminished, he is guilty of larceny, and shall be punished, when the value of the property stolen exceeds the sum of twenty dollars, by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years; and when the value of the property stolen does not exceed the sum of twenty dollars, by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [R., § 4237; C., '51, § 2212.]

Felonious taking: To constitute larceny the property must have been feloniously taken from the owner without his consent, or obtained by false representations, etc. If given by the owner to the defendant by virtue of his employment as agent, servant, or otherwise, and afterwards converted, the offense is embezzlement: Ennis v. State, 3 G. Gr., 67.

A felonious taking is a taking without color of right or excuse for the act, and it may safely be said that there was no color of right or excuse if the defendant knew that he had no authority to take the property, and with this knowledge he knowingly carried it away and converted it to his own use: State v. Rivers, 60-381.

A taking from the person is not necessary to constitute larceny (a special penalty therefor being provided in § 5211); and picking up money dropped by another, with unlawful intent, and converting the same to one's own use without the knowledge of the owner, is sufficient to constitute the offense: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

If the original possession of the property was innocent a subsequent conversion will not constitute larceny: State v. Wood, 46-116.

Where an auctioneer employed to sell impounded animals sold one of them as his own, and it was taken away by the purchaser, held, that there was sufficient taking to constitute larceny on the part of the person selling: State v. Hunt, 45-673.

A pledgee has such special property in the thing pledged that a taking from him by the pledgor may be larceny: Bruley v. Rose, 57-651.

Intent: Taking property into possession with intent to appropriate it is larceny, although the property is afterward let go, the latter fact being proper to be considered by the jury in determining the intent with which possession was taken: Georgia v. Kepford, 45-48.

To warrant a conviction for larceny the prosecution should show that possession was taken with the intent then existing in the mind of defendant to steal the property. Such intent, however, may be shown by subsequent acts and conduct: State v. Wood, 46-116.

If one sell or dispose of the property of another under the well founded, though erroneous, belief that he is authorized so to do, he is not guilty of larceny: State v. Barrackmore, 47-684.

The act of an employee in giving away the employer's property, although without authority, may not necessarily constitute larceny, if the circumstances are such as to negative a criminal intent: Mielenz v. Quasdorf, 68-726.

In a prosecution for larceny of two colts, held, that evidence that the sale of the colts by a former owner to the prosecutor was a mere sham, and that they had afterward been sold by such former owner to defendant, should have been admitted: State v. Waltz, 52-227.

A pretended claim that money taken is due for services will not constitute a defense if it appears from the circumstances that such claim was a sham and that defendant intended to fraudulently appropriate the money: State v. Bond, 8-540.

Where defendant offered to prove by one at whose house he stopped that his acts were such as to show that it was not his intention to steal the property, held, that such offer was too indefinite and the evidence was properly excluded: State v. Hart, 29-268.

Lost property: To render the finding or conversion of lost property larceny, it must be shown that the person so finding and converting knew the owner of the property: State v. Taylor, 25-273.

The crime of larceny as to lost property consists in the original taking and not in a subsequent lack of diligence in attempting to find the owner, nor in a subsequent conversion. The omission to take the steps required by statute for the finding of the owner will not render the party guilty of larceny, if the owner was not known at the time of the taking: State v. Dean, 49-73.

If one picks up a pocket-book which has been dropped from the pocket of the owner, and with an unlawful intent converts it to his own use without the knowledge of the owner, he is guilty of larceny: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

Ownership: In an indictment for larceny of chattels in which a person has a special property or which he holds in trust, the ownership may be laid in either the general owner or the one having the special property: State v. Mullen, 30-203.

The ownership of property need not be shown to have been in the party from whom it was taken, if it was in his possession: State v. Stanley, 48-221.

In the case of larceny of property in the possession of a receiver, the indictment may properly lay the ownership of the property in the receiver: State v. Rivers, 60-381.

From possession of officer: Larceny from a receiver in possession of property is not from the possession of an officer in such sense as to constitute that specific crime as defined by statute: Ibid.

As intoxicating liquors seized by an officer on a warrant for their forfeiture are not subject to replevin, it would be a crime under the statute providing for the taking of goods from an officer to take possession of them under such a writ: State v. Harris, 38-242.

What property subject to larceny: A raccoon is not subject to larceny: Warren v. State, 1 G. Gr., 106.

Intoxicating liquors, although kept for sale contrary to law, are subject of larceny: State v. May, 20-305.

"Money" and "bank-notes" are subjects of larceny: State v. Carr, 43-418.

Indictment; description of notes or bills: An indictment describing money and notes as "gold and silver coin" and "Clark's Exchange Bank bills of the value of," etc., held sufficient: Munson v. State, 4 G. Gr., 483.

So, also, an indictment held sufficient which charged the taking of "a promissory note for the payment of money, commonly called a bank-note, purporting, etc., of the value of," etc.: State v. Bond, 8-540.

So also one charging the larceny of "$180 in bank-notes, usually known and described as greenbacks:" State v. Hockenberry, 30-504.

So held, also, where the property was described as bank-bills of the amount and value of, etc., "the number and denomination of which are to the jury unknown:" State v. Hoppe, 39-468.

It is not required that, in an indictment for larceny of an instrument in writing, the property shall be more particularly described than any other stolen property; therefore, held, that an indictment charging that defendant took, etc., a bill of exchange, to wit, an order for the payment of money (describing it), and of the value of $20.97, was sufficient: State v. Pierson, 59-271.

Where the indictment alleges the value of a check charged to have been stolen, such allegation must be taken as equivalent to an allegation that the instrument called for at least that amount of money: Ibid.

Indictment for larceny from a bank, describing the property as seven one hundred dollar notes, of the value and denomination of one hundred dollars each, consisting of national bank notes, national currency notes, called greenbacks, and all of the aggregate value of seven hundred dollars, held sufficient as to description: State v. Graham, 65-617.

Evidence: A pertinent, well-connected chain of circumstances, showing that certain money found is the same as that taken from the prosecutor, is sufficient evidence of larceny of such money from him, although he cannot identify any of the particular bills: State v. Hoppe, 39-468.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence was sufficient to identify the bills found on the person of defendant to be the same as those charged to have been stolen from the prosecutor, the general appearance, manner of folding and denomination of the bills being the same: State v. Buckley, 60-471.

Proof that defendant charged with the larceny of bank-notes, and in whose possession notes resembling those stolen were found soon after the larceny, had money of the same denomination some two or three months before the larceny was committed, would not be admissible in behalf of defendant: State v. Graham, 65-617.

Proof of the denomination, etc., of bills being made, it will be presumed that they were genuine: State v. Pratt, 20-287.

Evidence in particular cases held sufficient to sustain a conviction for larceny: State v. Lillard, 59-479; State v. Day, 60-100.

Corpus delicti: Where the evidence in a prosecution for larceny showed that the horse charged to have been stolen was put into the stable at night and was gone the next morning, held, that the corpus delicti was sufficiently proven: State v. Rodman, 62-456.

Circumstantial: In a prosecution for larceny, held proper to instruct the jury that the evidence to establish the facts necessary to convict the defendant may be direct or circumstantial, or partly direct and partly circumstantial; direct, as by persons who saw the act; or circumstantial, as by evidence of facts from which the guilt of defendants may be fairly presumed: State v. Brady, 27-126.

Proof of non-consent: The rule requiring the production of the best evidence of which the nature of the case admits would require the introduction of the owner of the stolen goods to prove his non-consent to the taking except in cases where the property is stolen from a bailee, or some other person holding possession thereof, or where it is impossible to produce the evidence of the owner: State v. Osborne, 28-9.

Recent possession of stolen property: Possession of the stolen property immediately after a larceny is presumptive proof that the party so in possession is guilty of the larceny: State v. Brady, 27-126; State v. Golden, 49-48.

Such presumption is sufficient to convict unless rebutted: State v. Hessians, 50-135.

Recent possession of stolen property, unexplained, is evidence of guilt: Johnson v. Miller, 63-529.

But such possession is presumptive proof only after the stealing has been proved: State v. Taylor, 25-273.

The possession must be recent in order that it shall be admissible in evidence to prove the guilt of the accused: Warren v. State, 1 G. Gr., 106.

What is to be deemed recent possession depends very much on the character of the goods stolen. If they are such as to pass readily from hand to hand, the possession, in order to raise a presumption of guilt, should be much more recent than if they are of a class of property which circulates more slowly or is rarely transmitted: State v. Walker, 41-217.

There may be cases where the possession is so long after the commission of the crime that the court will refuse to submit the question to the jury, deciding as a matter of law that the possession is not recent, but in all other cases the question is one of fact: Ibid.

In a particular case, held, that an instruction directing the jury that, as a matter of law, proof of possession of part of the stolen goods four months after the commission of the crime was recent possession, from which a strong presumption of guilt arose, unless such possession was satisfactorily explained, was erroneous: Ibid.

The admission of defendant that ten months previous to the time the property is found in his possession he had no such property does not show the possession of the property to be recent in such sense as to throw upon him the burden of explaining such possession: State v. Wallace, 47-660.

The fact that stolen property is found in defendant's place of business will not alone raise the presumption of guilt, there being other inmates of the place. But if defendant admits the possession of the property and seeks to prove that it was not the property stolen, the evidence may properly be submitted to the jury: State v. Griffin, 71-372.

Where a stolen horse when found, soon after the larceny, was being ridden by a traveling companion of the defendant, held, that evidence of such fact was a circumstance tending to prove defendant's guilt, and sufficient to warrant his conviction: State v. Pennyman, 68-216.

It seems that where the party in whose possession recently stolen goods are found claims to have bought them of a real person, naming him, or of the thief, when there was no previous acquaintance or evidence of collusion, such explanation must be negated by the state; but an explanation by such party that he bought of a stranger is not sufficient to oblige the state to disprove the statement before the presumption of guilt will arise: State v. Brown, 25-561.

The person charged with larceny may explain his possession of stolen property by showing what was said to him at the time he acquired possession: State v. Jordan, 69-506.

Evidence of recent possession of stolen property and falsity of explanations made thereof, held sufficient in a particular case to warrant a conviction: State v. Hallett, 63-259.

While the presumption of guilt from recent possession, being recognized by the law, may be termed a presumption of law, it may also be termed a presumption of fact, as implying that from such fact the law will raise a presumption: State v. Kelly, 57-644.

The presumption arising from the recent possession of stolen goods may be overcome by testimony establishing facts inconsistent with guilt. Good character may serve in some cases to overcome such presumption: Ibid; State v. Richart, 57-245.

Where the prosecution relies upon possession by defendant of recently stolen property, the defendant is not required to overthrow such presumption by a preponderance of evidence of the honesty of such possession. Evidence sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt in his favor is sufficient: State v. Richart, 57-245; State v. Emerson, 48-172.

In such cases it is sufficient to authorize an acquittal if the evidence is such as to raise a reasonable doubt whether defendant honestly came into possession of the stolen goods. An instruction that the jury should acquit if the evidence left it reasonably doubtful whether defendant acquired the possession by theft, held correct: State v. Peterson, 67-564.

Unexplained possession by the defendant of recently stolen property is a circumstance against him, and will justify conviction unless there is such evidence of good character or other circumstances as to raise a reasonable doubt of guilt, or, if an explanation has been made, the jury should be instructed to acquit if the explanation is enough to raise a reasonable doubt: State v. Kirkpatrick, 72-500.

In a particular case, held, that the method of finding the goods at a place not in the dwelling-house of the defendant, and under circumstances indicating a knowledge on the part of others as to their location, were sufficient to prevent the recent possession relied upon from being satisfactory evidence of guilt: Warren v. State, 1 G. Gr., 106.

If the jury fail to find from the evidence that defendant was in any manner engaged in the larceny of the property they should acquit, although he has failed to show that he came honestly into possession: State v. Jones, 33-9.

The fact that recent possession of stolen property has not been explained in a manner consistent with defendant's innocence will not in itself necessarily establish his guilt: State v. Jordan, 69-506.

Possession of other stolen property than that for the larceny of which defendant was on trial, held admissible, not as showing the commission of another crime, but as contradicting the explanation made by defendant as to the possession by him of the property stolen in the commission of the larceny for which he is on trial: State v. Ditton, 48-677.

Recent possession of property acquired by breaking into a store-room, if not explained, raises the presumption that the breaking and entering were with intent to commit larceny: State v. Golden, 49-48.

To warrant conviction of defendant on proof of subsequent possession of the stolen property the identity of the property should be satisfactorily established: State v. Osborne, 45-425.

That the explanation of the possession of recently stolen property will require an acquittal, so far as the evidence of guilt consists in such recent possession, if it raises a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt, see notes to § 5813.

See further, as to presumption from possession of stolen property, cases cited under § 5210.

Grand and petit larceny: There are not two degrees in the crime of larceny, but only in the punishment; and a conviction for larceny bars a subsequent prosecution for grand larceny: State v. Murray, 55-530.

So, also, a conviction for petit larceny bars a prosecution for larceny from the person under § 5211: State v. Gleason, 56-203.

Under an indictment for larceny of property of greater value than twenty dollars defendant may be convicted upon proof of a larceny of part of the property less than twenty dollars in value. The offense is the same: State v. Hessian, 58-68.

In a trial upon an indictment for larceny charging the value of the property as exceeding twenty dollars, it is not necessary to instruct the jury as to the difference in the degrees of the offense of larceny. They should merely be instructed to find the value of the property: Ibid.

The finding of the jury that the value of the property did not exceed twenty dollars will not deprive the court of jurisdiction, under an indictment for larceny, to impose the proper sentence for the lesser offense, although larceny of goods less than twenty dollars in value is a misdemeanor exclusively cognizable before a justice of the peace: State v. Church, 8-252; State v. Stingley, 10-488.

And see notes to Const., art. I, § 11.

Where the jury are in reasonable doubt as to whether the value of the property stolen exceeds twenty dollars in value they should only convict of the lesser crime: State v. Wood, 46-116.

Value of property stolen: The verdict on an indictment for larceny should fix the value of the property stolen, so that the court may know of which degree of the offense the defendant is convicted. If the verdict does not so fix the value a new trial should be awarded: Ray v. State, 1 G. Gr., 316.

Such new trial will not be unlawful as putting the defendant twice in jeopardy (Const., art. I, § 12): State v. Redman, 17-329.

The jury should be instructed to assess the value of the property at what it would bring in the market, and not at what it was worth to the owner: State v. Smith, 48-595.

The fact that the value of the property was over twenty dollars, as well as the stealing itself, must be made out beyond a reasonable doubt to warrant a conviction of the higher offense. A preponderance of evidence alone will not be sufficient: State v. Wood, 46-116.

The jury should be instructed that if they are not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the value of the property stolen exceeds twenty dollars they should convict of only the lower degree: State v. McCarty, 73-51.

The question whether the offense is to be tried as a felony or a misdemeanor is to be determined by the value of the property as stated in the indictment or information, and not by the value as found by the trial jury: State v. Church, 8-252.

It is error to instruct the jury that the question is as to the value of the property to the owner. The true rule is the real value of the property in the market: State v. Smith, 48-595.

Where the testimony as to the value is conflicting, the supreme court will not reverse the case unless there is such want of evidence in support of the verdict as to give rise to the presumption that it was not the result of an honest and intelligent exercise of judgment by the jury: State v. Scott, 48-597.

Recovery of stolen property: Where stolen property is sold to a third person and afterwards retaken from him by the owner, he may recover the price paid in an action against the seller, even though the seller has not been convicted of the larceny: Barton v. Faherty, 3 G. Gr., 327.

Venue: Where property is stolen within the jurisdiction of another state and brought within this state, the offense is punishable as larceny in this state in any county into which the stolen goods are taken, on the principle that the continued possession of property stolen is in itself larceny. Every act of the thief in the removal of the property and keeping it from the possession of the owner is, in contemplation of law, an offense: State v. Bennett, 14-479.

In an indictment for larceny the venue may be laid in any county in which the thief was possessed of the stolen goods: State v. Lillard, 59-479.

5209. In night-time in house, store, boat, etc. 3903; 15 G. A., ch. 11. If any person in the night-time commit larceny in any dwelling-house, store, or any public or private building, or in any boat, vessel, or water-craft, when the value of the property stolen exceeds the sum of twenty dollars, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years; and when the value of the property stolen does not exceed twenty dollars, by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4238; C., '51, § 2613.]

An acquittal of larceny from a dwelling-house in the night-time prevents a subsequent prosecution for robbery in the same transaction, as each includes the crime of larceny: State v. Mikesell, 70-176.

And see notes to following section.

5210. Same in day-time. 3904; 15 G. A., ch. 11. If any person in the day-time commit larceny as specified in the preceding section, and the value of the property stolen exceeds twenty dollars, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years; and when the value of the property stolen does not exceed twenty dollars, by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4239; C., '51, § 2614.]

The provisions of this and the preceding section merely point out certain circumstances which are an aggravation of the offense of larceny, and will subject the offender to a severer penalty. The facts of the time and place of the commission affect only the degree of punishment which shall be imposed upon the offender: State v. Elsham, 70-531.

Larceny from a dwelling-house in the night-time and in the day-time are not different offenses; but each differs from simple larceny only in the circumstances affecting the degree of punishment, and they may be charged in the same indictment: Ibid.

Where defendant was indicted for stealing personal property of less than twenty dollars in value from a dwelling-house in the day-time, held, that the offense was one within the jurisdiction of the district court: State v. Dawson, 17-584.

The possession of goods recently stolen by breaking into a store-room, if not explained, raises the presumption that the party in possession thereof committed the breaking with intent to commit larceny. Such possession is competent as tending to prove the guilty intent: State v. Golden, 49-48; and as to the presumption from such possession in cases of larceny, see notes to § 5208.

5211. From building on fire or from the person. 3905. If any person commit the crime of larceny by stealing from any building on fire; or by stealing any property removed in consequence of an alarm caused by fire; or by stealing from the person of another, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding fifteen years. [R., § 4240; C., '51, § 2615.]

A former conviction or acquittal, before a justice of the peace, of the crime of larceny, is a bar to an indictment under this section for stealing from the person, when based on the same act. The latter is larceny and nothing more: State v. Gleason, 56-203.

The crime of larceny from the person is included in the crime of robbery, defined in § 5157, and an indictment for the former offense is sustained by evidence which establishes the latter: State v. Graff, 66-482.

5212. Falsely personating. 3906. If any person falsely personate or represent another and in such assumed character receive any money or property intended to be delivered to the person so personated, with intent to convert the same to his own use, he is guilty of larceny, and shall be punished accordingly. [R., § 4241; C., '51, § 2616.]

This section abrogates the common-law rule that a trespass is necessary to constitute larceny. The cases provided for here would not be larceny at common law: State v. Brown, 25-561.

Representations made by acts or declarations intended to induce the belief that the person making them is some one else may be sufficient to constitute the crime, although not amounting to direct representations that the party's name is that of the person whom he personates: State v. Goble, 60-447.

5213. Appropriating found property. 3907. If any person come, by finding, to the possession of any personal property of which he knows the owner, and unlawfully appropriate the same or any part thereof to his own use, he is guilty of larceny, and shall be punished accordingly. [R., § 4242; C., '51, § 2617.]

To render finding or conversion of lost property larceny, it must be shown that the person so finding and converting knew the owner of the property: State v. Taylor, 25-273.

The crime consists in the original taking, and not in a subsequent lack of diligence in attempting to find the owner, nor in a subsequent conversion. An omission to take the steps specified in § 2350 et seq. will not render the party guilty under this section, where the owner was not known at the time of the taking: State v. Dean, 49-73.

If one picks up a pocket-book which has been dropped from the pocket of the owner, and with an unlawful intent converts it to his own use without the knowledge of the owner, he is guilty of larceny: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

The fact that money which is claimed to have been found is returned when demanded will not show that there was not intent to convert, sufficient to constitute larceny. The question whether the finder knew the owner and intended to appropriate the property is for the jury: State v. Bolander, 71-706.

See further notes to § 5208.

5214. Embezzlement by public officers. 3908. If any state, county, township, school, or municipal officer, or officer of any state institution, or other public officer within the state, charged with the collection, safe keeping, transfer, or disbursement of public money, fails or refuses to keep in any place of deposit that may be provided by law for keeping such money, until the same is withdrawn therefrom upon warrants issued by the proper officer, or deposits such money in any other place than in such safe, or unlawfully converts to his own use in any way whatever, or use by way of investment in any kind of property, or loan without the authority of law any portion of the public money intrusted to him for collection, safe keeping, transfer or disbursement, or converts to his own use any money that may come into his hands by virtue of his office, shall be guilty of embezzlement to the amount of so much of said money as is thus taken, converted, invested, used, loaned, or unaccounted for, and, upon conviction thereof, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding five years and fined in a sum equal to the amount of money embezzled; and, moreover, is forever after disqualified from holding any office under the laws or constitution of this state. [R., §§ 806, 807, 4243; C., '51, § 2618.]

The offense here defined is different from the offenses described in §§ 1399, 1400. The latter sections contemplate cases where no loss results, but this one refers to cases where the money is unaccounted for; and to sustain this construction the word "or" preceding the words "unaccounted for" will be construed "and." An indictment under this section should charge that the money is "unaccounted for:" State v. Brandt, 41-593.

A deputy state treasurer is an officer within the meaning of this section, and may be indicted for embezzlement: Ibid., 606.

Conversion is established by showing demand and refusal, unless a sufficient excuse is shown for such refusal: State v. Bryan, 40-379.

One who has acted de facto as a public officer cannot deny that he is such an officer when indicted for malfeasance: State v. Stone, 40-547.

To constitute the offense here defined the money must have been both misapplied and lost, and the crime consists only in converting, using or loaning so much of the public money intrusted to the officer for safe keeping as is taken and unaccounted for: State v. Parsons, 54-405.

It being provided that the boards of directors of independent school districts shall elect a treasurer, held, that a indictment against such treasurer, designating him as "treasurer of the board of directors of the independent school district of," etc., was sufficient: Ibid.

The fact that the officers of a municipal corporation loaned the public funds in violation of the statute does not prevent the same being recovered in an action by the corporation against the person to whom they were so loaned or his surety: District T'p v. Calvin, 59-189.

A county treasurer prosecuted for embezzlement may show that the defalcation took place at such time that the prosecution is barred by the statute of limitations, although, by fraudulent statements to the board of supervisors, he made it appear subsequently to such actual defalcation that he had on hand the necessary balance and that his accounts were correct. The rule of estoppel applicable in a civil action against the treasurer cannot be enforced in a criminal prosecution: State v. Hutchinson, 60-478.

5215. Other embezzlement. 3909; 21 G. A., ch. 30. If any officer, agent, clerk or servant of any incorporated company, or voluntary association, or if any clerk, agent or servant of any private person, or of any copartnership except persons under the age of sixteen years, or if any attorney-at-law, collector or other person, who in any manner receives or collects money or any other property for the use of and belonging to another, embezzles or fraudulently converts to his own use, or takes and secretes with intent to embezzle and convert to his own use without the consent of his employer, master, or the owner of the money or goods collected, or received any money or property of another, or which is partly the property of another and partly the property of such officer, agent, clerk, servant, attorney-at-law, collector, or other person which has come to his possession or under his care in any manner whatsoever, he shall be deemed guilty of larceny and punished accordingly. And in a prosecution for such crime it shall be no defense that such officer, agent, clerk, servant, collector, attorney-at-law, or other person was entitled to a commission or compensation out of such money or property as compensation or commission for collecting or receiving the same, for or on behalf of the owner thereof. Provided, it shall be no embezzlement on the part of such agent, clerk, servant, attorney-at-law, collector, or other person to retain his reasonable compensation or collection fee, for collecting or receiving the same; but this proviso shall not authorize or warrant an attorney-at-law to retain any money or property as compensation, or as money and property on which he has an attorney's lien after the filing of a bond as provided for in section two hundred and sixteen of the code [§ 294]. No offense committed before the taking effect of this act shall be affected by the repeal of section three thousand nine hundred and nine of the code.

To constitute the crime here defined there must exist the relation of master and servant, or employer and employee, and the property stolen or converted must have been received by virtue of such employment: State v. Johnson, 49-141.

"Money or property," as here used, includes bills of exchange, etc. The crime defined is similar to that of larceny, and covers cases where, by reason of the trust reposed in defendant, the act would not be larceny at common law. Whatever would be property under one section would be under the other: State v. Orwig, 24-102.

Where the taking is not animo furandi, but the property is delivered to the defendant voluntarily while he is in the employ of the owner, and afterwards is appropriated by him, the crime is not larceny but embezzlement: Ennis v. State, 3 G. Gr., 67.

The crime of embezzlement embraces all the elements of larceny except the actual taking of the property or money embezzled: State v. Baldwin, 70-180.

The clause "without the consent of his employer" applies to embezzling and converting as well as to taking and secreting. That fact is a necessary element of the offense here definied and should be charged in the indictment: State v. Foster, 11-291.

Where the owner of a watch delivered it to another under an agreement that the latter was to trade it for a wagon and receive a certain sum as compensation for his services, held, that the relation between the parties was such that the wrongful conversion by the person intrusted with the watch constituted embezzlement: State v. Foster, 37-404.

Conversion may be shown either by direct proof of the fact of conversion or by proof of demand and refusal, but mere proof of the receipt of funds and failure to account therefor on demand, while sufficient to establish embezzlement by a public officer, under § 5214, is not sufficient to show embezzlement by an agent or servant: State v. Bryan, 40-379.

Where an agent, in order to make his books balance and cover up deficiencies on account of sums of money before appropriated to his own use, reported certain sums as unpaid which were in fact received by him, held, that he was guilty of embezzling such sums: Bowman v. Brown, 52-437.

Under this section an agent of a corporation may be guilty of embezzlement, although under the age of sixteen years: State v. Goode, 68-593.

And an agent may be guilty of embezzling his employer's money, either by actual conversion or by secreting the same with intent to convert: Ibid.

It is not necessary to allege the particular nature or character of the employment, but it is sufficient to aver generally that defendant was in the employment of the person named, as his clerk, without specifying particularly the employment. The words "such employment" in the latter part of the section relate to the general character of the employment rather than the particular business in which the accused was engaged when he received the money or property into his possession: State v. Jamison, 74-602.

5216. Same by carriers or persons intrusted. 3910. If any carrier or other person to whom any money, goods or other property, which may be the subject of larceny, has been delivered to be carried for hire, or if any other person intrusted with such property, embezzle or fraudulently convert to his own use any such money, goods, or other property, either in the mass as the same were delivered or otherwise, and before the same were delivered at the place or to the person where and to whom they were to be delivered, he is guilty of larceny and shall be punished accordingly. [R., § 4245; C., '51, § 2620.]

The offense here defined can only be committed upon property which "has been delivered to be carried for hire:" State v. Stoller, 38-321.

5217. Receiving stolen goods. 3911. If any person buy, receive, or aid in concealing any stolen money, goods, or any property, the stealing of which is declared to be larceny, or property obtained by robbery or burglary, knowing the same to have been so obtained, he shall be punished, when the value of the property so bought, received, or concealed by him exceeds the sum of twenty dollars, by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year; and when the value of the property so bought, received, or concealed by him does not exceed the sum of twenty dollars, by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [R., § 4246; C., '51, § 2621; 9 G. A., ch. 121.]

Merely assisting the defendant by giving him his breakfast and feed for stolen horses, knowing that they were stolen, held not sufficient to warrant a conviction of this offense. The accused must have aided in concealing or hiding the property: Upton v. State, 5-465.

The fact of aiding in concealing stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen, necessarily implies a felonious intent: State v. Turner, 19-144.

The crime here defined may be committed as to property procured by burglary or robbery as well as by larceny: Ibid.; State v. Lane, 68-384.

To receive stolen property, with knowledge of the theft, is sufficient to constitute the crime: State v. Lane, 68-384.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to support a verdict for receiving and aiding in concealing, although no physical possession of the goods by defendant was shown: State v. St. Clair, 17-149.

Defendant's explanations in a particular case as to how he came into possession of the property being conflicting and unsatisfactory, a verdict of guilty of receiving stolen goods was held proper: State v. Mayer, 45-698.

5218. Same on second conviction. 3912. If any person after having been convicted of the offense of buying, receiving, or aiding in the concealment of stolen money, goods, or any property, the stealing of which is larceny, or property obtained by robbery or burglary, be again convicted of the like offense; or if any person at the same term of court is convicted of three distinct acts of buying, receiving, or aiding in the concealment of stolen property, or property obtained by robbery or burglary, knowing the same was so obtained, he shall be punished as provided in the preceding section. [R., § 4248; C., '51, § 2623.]

Under Revision, § 4247, which provided that if a person previously convicted of larceny committed another larceny, or was convicted therefor, or was at the same term of court convicted of three distinct larcenies, he should be deemed a common and notorious thief and be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than three years, held, that the punishment there prescribed should be inflicted when the facts authorizing it appeared on the trial of the accused for larceny; that the section did not describe a distinct crime, and did not contemplate that the indictment need state the facts necessary to make the accused "a common and notorious thief," or charge him with being such: State v. Riley, 28-547.

[This section is identical with Revision,

§ 4248, but there the "preceding section" was Revision, § 4247, which is not inserted in the Code; consequently the punishment under the "preceding section" as here provided is very different from that contemplated in the section where it originally stood.]

5219. Receiver convicted without principal. 3913. In any prosecution for the offense of buying, receiving, or aiding in the concealment of stolen property, or property obtained by robbery or burglary, knowing the same was so obtained, it shall not be necessary to aver nor to prove on the trial thereof that the person who stole, robbed, or took the property has been convicted. [R., § 4249; C., '51, § 2624.]

5220. Measure of value of stolen goods. 3914. If the property stolen consist of any bank-note, bond, bill, covenant, bill of exchange, draft, order, or receipt, or any evidence of debt whatever; or any public security, or any instrument whereby any demand, right, or obligation may be assigned, transferred, created, increased, released, extinguished, or diminished, the money due thereon or secured thereby and remaining unsatisfied, or which in any event or contingency might be collected thereon, or the value of the property transferred or affected, as the case may be, shall be adjudged the value of the thing stolen. [R., § 4250; C., '51, § 2625.]

Where the indictment alleges the value of a check charged to have been stolen, such allegation must be taken as equivalent to an allegation that the instrument called for at least that amount of money: State v. Pierson, 59-271.

Indictment for larceny from a bank, describing the property as seven one hundred dollar notes, of the value and denomination of one hundred dollars each, consisting of national bank notes, and national currency notes, called greenbacks, and all of the aggregate value of seven hundred dollars, held sufficient: State v. Graham, 65-617.

For other cases as to the description, in the indictment for larceny, of notes and bills alleged to have been stolen, see § 5308.

5221. Taking goods from officer. 3915. If any person knowingly and without authority of law, take, carry away, secrete, or destroy any goods or chattels while the same are lawfully in the custody of any sheriff, coroner, marshal, constable, or other officer, and rightfully held by such officer by virtue of execution, writ of attachment, or other legal process issued under the laws of Iowa, he shall be deemed guilty of larceny, and shall be punished, when the value of the property so taken, carried away, secreted, or destroyed, exceeds the sum of twenty dollars, by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than one year; and when the value of the same does not exceed twenty dollars, by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days. [R., § 4251.]

Intoxicating liquors seized on a warrant issued on information for their forfeiture (under § 2401) are not subject to replevin, and to take them from a proper officer under such writ would be an unlawful act under this section: State v. Harris, 38-242.

A receiver does not hold property under what is denominated a legal process issuing out of any court, and he is not an officer within the meaning of this section. Therefore it is proper to charge the wrongful taking of property from him as larceny, laying the ownership of the property in the receiver: State v. Rivers, 60-381.

5222. Deposited by officer for safe keeping. 3916. The possession or custody of goods and chattels by any person with whom the same have been left or deposited for safe keeping, to be returned for the purpose of being disposed of on legal process, shall be deemed to be the possession and custody of the officer having or depositing the same, and entitled to the custody thereof, and in a prosecution under the preceding section, the property taken, carried away, secreted, or destroyed, as therein mentioned, may be laid in the officer entitled to the custody thereof at the time of the commission of the offense. [R., § 4252.]

CHAPTER 5.

FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING.

5223. Forgery defined. 3917. If any person with intent to defraud, falsely make, alter, forge, or counterfeit any public record, or any process issued or purporting to be issued by any competent court, magistrate, or officer, or any pleading or proceeding filed or entered in any court of law or equity; or any attestation or certificate of any public officer, or other person, in relation to any matter wherein such attestation or certificate is required by law, or may be received or be taken as legal proof; or any charter, deed, will, testament, bond, writing obligatory, power of attorney, letter of credit, policy of insurance, bill of lading, bill of exchange, promissory note, or any order, acquittance, discharge, or accountable receipt for money, or other valuable thing; or any acceptance of any bill of exchange, or order; or any indorsement, or assignment of any bill of exchange, promissory note, or order, or of any debt or contract; or any instrument in writing, being, or purporting to be, the act of another, by which any pecuniary demand or obligation, or any right or interest in or to any property whatever, is or purports to be created, increased, transferred, conveyed, discharged or diminished, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years. [R., § 4253; C., '51, § 2626.]

Forgery defined: Forgery is the feloniously making or materially altering, with intent to defraud, of any writing which, if genuine, might apparently be of legal efficacy or the foundation of a legal liability: State v. Johnson, 26-407; State v. Thompson, 19-299.

In a prosecution for forgery in altering a receipt, the fact that defendant could not reap any personal advantage from the alteration is not a defense; the making or alteration of any writing with a fraudulent intent, whereby another may be prejudiced, is forgery: State v. Wooderd, 20-541.

The criminal intent, inferred from forging an instrument and using it in support of a claim, cannot be negated by proof that the claim is a just one: Ibid.

It would constitute forgery to falsely sign a person's name to a mortgage, although such person is not owner of the property described therein, if the mortgage contains covenants which would create pecuniary liability on the part of the maker: State v. Jamison, 74-613.

It is not necessary to aver the genuineness or validity of the instrument forged. The essence of the crime consists in the doing of the act with intent to defraud. If the writing is invalid on its face it cannot be the subject of forgery, but it may be if the invalidity must be made out from extrinsic facts. State v. Pierce, 8-231; State v. Johnson, 26-407.

In order to constitute forgery it is not necessary that the signature of the instrument be false, a fraudulent alteration, making the instrument such as was not signed by the maker, is sufficient: Caulkins v. Whistler, 29-495.

Alteration of an undated receipt by affixing a date thereto, so as to make it appear as a receipt for a subsequent account, is sufficient to constitute forgery: State v. Maxwell, 47-454.

The detaching of a condition from an instrument, by which it is converted from a non-negotiable to a negotiable instrument, held to constitute forgery: State v. Stratton, 27-420.

Where the defendant counterfeited the certificate of a justice of the peace as to the presentation and destruction of gopher scalps, for which a bounty is allowed by § 3287, held, that the act was sufficient to constitute forgery: State v. Johnson, 26-407.

The act of one who is intrusted with the making of an instrument, and who fraudulently makes a promissory note which is voluntarily signed by the other party, is not such a fraudulent making of the note as to constitute forgery: Douglass v. Matting, 29-498.

Where the indictment charged the forgery of an instrument signed by "Wright and Whaley," and the instrument when offered in evidence appeared to be signed "Wright Whaley," and it also appeared that this signature was an attempted signature of "Wright and Whaley," held, that the instrument was properly admissible: State v. Nichols, 38-110.

To constitute forgery of a bill of exchange or order it is not necessary that it contain the name of a payee or drawee. It is sufficient that it purports to create a liability against the person signing it: State v. Bauman, 52-68.

In a prosecution for forgery, held, that a particular instrument therein set forth sufficiently purported to create a liability against the person whose name was written thereto: Ibid.

The alteration of an unsigned indorsement, on the back of a note, of money paid, will not constitute forgery, where it does not appear but that such indorsement was a mere private memorandum made by the holder and not intended as a receipt: State v. Davis, 53-252.

A forwarding of a forged application for insurance by an insurance agent for the purpose of procuring the commission due to him upon such application, held to constitute forgery although the company refused to issue a policy upon such application: Fountain v. Smith, 70-282.

An indictment alleging in substance that the defendant falsely and feloniously, and with intent to defraud, made a negotiable promissory note, describing it and setting out a copy, is sufficient to charge the crime: State v. Stuart, 61-203.

The instrument should be set forth in the indictment, or some excuse for not doing so should be shown, but no technical form of words is necessary: State v. Johnson, 26-407.

The person intended to be defrauded, or the extent or particulars of the fraud, need not be stated: State v. Maxwell, 47-454.

Forgery, and uttering and publishing as true a forged instrument, are distinct offenses, and an indictment charging both is bad for duplicity. (Overruling State v. Nichols, 38-110): State v. McCormack, 56-585.

It is not necessary that the indictment allege the name of the person to whom the instrument was uttered: State v. Hart, 67-142.

Evidence: On a trial for the forgery of receipts, it is competent to show the payment of the indebtedness receipted for: State v. Woodard, 20-541.

While proof of another act of forgery or uttering forged paper may be introduced, it is doubtful whether it ought not to be confined to a case where the former transaction was with reference to paper of the identical character of that involved in the act charged: State v. Saunders, 68-370.

When such other transaction is sought to be shown in evidence, it must appear that in the transaction a crime was committed: Ibid.

And it is necessary that the other instrument referred to must be produced or its absence accounted for: Ibid.; State v. Breckenridge, 67-204.

That defendant, on the trial of a civil cause in the county of his residence, produced the forged instrument which he is charged with forging, may be considered by the jury as tending to show that the forgery was committed in that county: State v. Thompson, 19-299.

Where the defendant is charged with forging an indorsement on the back of an order purporting to be drawn by one bank on another, proof of the existence of the bank is not required. Nor is it necessary to aver the genuineness or validity of the instrument forged: State v. Pierce, 8-231.

Where there was a variance between the allegations of the indictment and the proof as to the date of the instrument set out in an indictment for forgery, but it was such as could not have misled defendant to his prejudice, held, that the variance was immaterial: State v. Blanchard, 74-628.

5224. Uttering forged instrument. 3918. If any person utter and publish as true any record, process, certificate, deed, will, or any other instrument of writing mentioned in the preceding section, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited, with intent to defraud, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than fifteen years and fined not exceeding one thousand dollars. [R., § 4254; C., '51, § 2627.]

The fact that defendant, in uttering a forged note, falsely represented himself to be the payee of the note, is sufficient evidence of intent without other evidence that he had knowledge of the forgery: State v. Williams, 66-573.

To justify a conviction for passing a forged instrument, the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant had knowledge of the forgery: Ibid.

It is not necessary that the indictment allege the name of the person to whom the instrument was uttered: State v. Hart, 67-142.

See, further, notes to preceding section.

5225. Forgery of public securities. 3919. If any person with intent to defraud, falsely make, utter, forge, or counterfeit any note, certificate, state bond, warrant, or other instrument, being public security for money or other property issued or purporting to be issued by authority of this state, or any other of the United States; or any indorsement or other writing purporting to transfer the right or interest of any holder of such public security, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than twenty years nor less than five years. [R., § 4255; C., '51, § 2628.]

5226. Counterfeiting. 3920. If any person make, alter, forge, or counterfeit any bank-bill, promissory note, draft, or other evidence of debt issued or purporting to be issued by any corporation or company duly authorized for that purpose by any state of the United States, or any other government or country, with intent to injure or defraud, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years, or by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4246; C., '51, § 2629.]

5227. Having counterfeit in possession. 3921. If any person has in his possession any forged, counterfeited, or altered bank-bill, promissory note, draft, or other evidence of debt issued or purporting to be issued as is mentioned in the preceding section, with intent to defraud, knowing them to be so forged, counterfeited or altered, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4257; C., '51, § 2630.]

Intent to defraud any person or corporation need not be averred (§ 5698), nor need it be alleged that the intent to defraud was "felonious" or "wilful." The language of the statute is sufficient: State v. Callendine, 8-288.

The description of the bank-bills in a particular case held insufficient, and held, also, that a copy of such bills should have been set out in the indictment: Ibid.

5228. Uttering counterfeit securities. 3922. If any person utter or pass, or tender in payment as true, any false, altered, forged, or counterfeited note, certificate, state bond, warrant, or other instrument of public security, or any bank-bill, promissory note, draft, or other evidence of debt issued or purporting to be issued by any corporation or company duly authorized as heretofore mentioned, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited, with the intent to injure or defraud, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4258; C., '51, § 2631.]

An indictment charging the accused with uttering, passing and tendering in payment, etc., is not bad as charging more than one offense: State v. Barrett, 8-536.

It is not necessary, in such case, to charge an intent to defraud any particular person: Ibid.; State v. Newland, 7-242.

But if the name and incorporation of the bank intended to be defrauded is mentioned, it must be proved as stated: State v. Newland, 7-242.

But proof of the incorporation by reputation is sufficient (§ 5240): Ibid.; State v. Barrett, 8-536.

5229. Second conviction. 3923. If any person, having been convicted of the offenses described in the preceding section, afterward be convicted of a like offense; or if any person at the same term of the court is convicted of three such distinct offenses, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two years, nor more than ten years. [R., § 4259; C., '51, § 2632.]

5230. Making tools for counterfeiting. 3924. If any person engrave, make, or mend, or begin to engrave, make, or mend any plate, block, press, or other tool, instrument, or implement; or make or provide any paper or other materials adapted and designed for the forging or making any false and counterfeit note, certificate, state bond, warrant, or other instrument of public security for money or other property of this state, or any other of the United States; or any bank-bill, promissory note, draft, or other evidence of debt issued or purporting to be issued by any corporation or company; and every person who has in his possession any such plate or block engraved in any part, or any press or other tool, instrument or implement, paper or other material adapted and designed as aforesaid, with intent to use the same, or to cause or permit the same to be used in forging or making any such false and forged certificates, notes, bonds, warrants, public securities, or evidences of debt, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for not more than five years nor less than two years. [R., § 4260; C., '51, § 2633.]

5231. Counterfeiting coin. 3925. If any person forge or counterfeit any gold or silver coin current by law or usage within this state, and if any person have in his possession at the same time five or more pieces of false money or coin counterfeited in the similitude of any gold or silver coin current as aforesaid, knowing the same to be false and counterfeit, and with intent to utter or pass the same as true, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years nor less than one year. [R., § 4261; C., '51, § 2634.]

On the trial of an indictment under this section it should be proved that the accused had in his possession "five or more pieces" to make out the offense defined: State v. Pepper, 11-347.

The word "and," occurring in the second line of this section, construed to mean "or," and held, that either of the acts described would constitute the offense; also, that an indictment charging both of them would charge but one offense, and would therefore not be open to the objection of duplicity: State v. Myers, 10-448.

So, if the counterfeiting and the having in possession with intent, etc., be charged in different counts, the indictment will not be bad if both counts refer to the same transaction: State v. McPherson, 9-53.

The possession, as contemplated here, may consist in having the counterfeit coin deposited in a secret place within the knowledge and control of the accused: State v. Washburn, 11-245.

It is not necessary to charge that the coin was counterfeited in a similitude to the current coin of the United States, or that it was of any value: State v. Williams, 8-533.

The counterfeiting of coin of the United States may be punished under this section; the jurisdiction of the federal courts over such offense is not exclusive: State v. McPherson, 9-53.

5232. Uttering or having in possession counterfeit coin. 3926.

Any person who has in his possession any number of pieces less than five of the counterfeit coin mentioned in the preceding section, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, with intent to utter or pass the same as true; and any person who utters, passes, or tenders in payment any false and counterfeit coin, knowing the same to be false and counterfeit, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding eight years, or fined not more than five hundred dollars and imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4262; C., '51, § 2635.]

In an indictment for the uttering of counterfeit money the name of the person injured must appear, if known, and if not known such fact must be stated. The provision that no indictment shall be quashed if an indictable offense is named therein does not apply to such defect: Buckley v. State, 2 G. Gr., 162.

5233. Connecting parts or altering. 3927. If any person fraudulently connect together different parts of several genuine bank-bills, notes, or other instruments in writing, so as to produce one instrument; or alter any note or instrument in writing in a matter that is material, with intent to defraud, the same shall be deemed forgery in like manner as if such bill or note or other instrument had been forged and counterfeited, and the offender shall be punished accordingly. [R., § 4263; C., '51, § 2636.]

5234. Affixing fictitious signatures. 3928. If any fictitious or pretended signature of an officer or agent of any corporation be fraudulently affixed to any instrument of writing, purporting to be a note, draft or other evidence of debt issued by such corporation, with intent to utter or pass the same as true, it is a forgery, though no such person may ever have been an officer or agent of such corporation, nor such corporation have ever existed. Every person guilty of this offense shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars, and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4264; C., '51, § 2637.]

5235. Obliteration of records or instruments. 3929. The total or partial erasure or obliteration of any record, process, certificate, deed, will, or any other instrument in writing mentioned in this chapter, with the intent to defraud, shall be deemed forgery, and the offender shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4265; C., '51, § 2638.]

5236. Second and third convictions. 3930. If any person having been convicted of either of the offenses mentioned in the preceding section be afterwards convicted of a like offense; or if any person at the same term of court, be convicted of three such distinct offenses, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years, nor less than three years. [R., § 4266; C., '51, § 2639.]

5237. Having instruments for counterfeiting. 3931. If any person cast, stamp, engrave, make, or mend, or have in his possession any mould, die, press, or other instrument or tool adapted and designed for the forging and counterfeiting of any coin before mentioned with intent to use the same, or permit the same to be used for that purpose, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4267; C., '51, § 2640.]

5238. Counterfeiting foreign coin. 3932. If any person forge or counterfeit any gold or silver coin of any foreign government or country, with intent to export the same to injure or defraud any such government or the citizens thereof, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years. [R., § 4268; C., '51, § 2641.]

5239. Forging or counterfeiting seals. 3933. Every person who is convicted of having forged, counterfeited, or falsely altered the great seal of this state; or the seal of any public office authorized by law; or the seal of any court, corporation, city, or county; or who falsely makes, forges, or counterfeits any impression purporting to be the impression of any such seal with intent to defraud, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years. [R., § 4269; C., '51, § 2642.]

5240. Existence of corporation proved by reputation. 3934. On the trial of any person for forging or counterfeiting any bill, note, or any other evidence of debt purporting to be issued by any incorporated company; or for uttering, passing, or attempting to pass; or having in possession the same with intent to utter or pass such bill, note, or evidence of debt, it is not necessary to prove the incorporation by the charter or act thereof, but the same may be proved by general reputation, and persons of skill are competent witnesses to prove that such bill, note, or evidence of debt is forged or counterfeit. [R., § 4270; C., '51, § 2643.]

This section is equally applicable to the charge of falsely indorsing a note or bill, etc.: State v. Pierce, 8-231.

In an indictment for uttering and passing counterfeit bills, etc., it is not necessary to charge an intent to defraud any particular person: State v. Barrett, 8-536; State v. Newland, 7-242.

But if the incorporation of the bank intended to be defrauded is mentioned, it must be proved as stated: State v. Newland, 7-242.

But under this section proof of that fact by reputation is sufficient: Ibid.

5241. Counterfeiting brands or stamps. 3935. If any person with intent to defraud, falsely make, forge, or counterfeit any stamp or brand authorized by law to be affixed to any substance or thing whatever; or, knowing such stamp or brand to be counterfeit, use the same as genuine with intent to defraud, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years. [R., § 1911.]

See § 3249.

CHAPTER 6.

OFFENSES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE.

5242. Perjury. 3936. If any person on oath or affirmation, lawfully administered, wilfully and corruptly swear or affirm falsely to any material matter in any proceeding in any court of justice, or before any officer thereof; or before any tribunal or officer created by law; or in any proceeding in regard to any matter or thing in or respecting which an oath or affirmation is or may be required or authorized by law, he is guilty of perjury, and shall be punished, if the perjury was committed on the trial of a capital crime, by imprisonment in the penitentiary for life or any term not less than ten years; and if committed in any other case, by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years nor less than two years. [R., § 4271; C., '51, § 2644.]

What constitutes: The matter falsely sworn to must be material, and its materiality must be established by the evidence, and cannot be left to presumption or inference: State v. Aikens, 32-403.

Falsely swearing in an affidavit for continuance that a witness is absent from the county will constitute perjury, and it cannot be said that the oath is not material to the issues in the case: State v. Shupe, 16-36.

Held, that a defendant, who, under Revision, § 2742 (providing that a claim barred by the statute of limitations might be established by the testimony of the opposite party), was called by plaintiff as a witness for the purpose of establishing a claim by own testimony, and who testified falsely, might be punished for perjury: State v. Voght, 27-117.

Under the provisions of the bankruptcy act requiring a schedule to be sworn to, and providing that false swearing should prevent the applicant's discharge, and also providing that he might be examined, and for false swearing in such examination should be deemed guilty of perjury, held, that mere false swearing in the schedule would not constitute perjury: United States v. Dickey, Mor., 412.

Indictment: The materiality of the false testimony must be shown by averment in the indictment, but this may be done either by express averment or the statement of such facts as show its materiality: State v. Cunningham, 66-94.

In an indictment for perjury in making a false return to the assessor under oath, it must be averred, not only that certain property was withheld from the statement, but also that such property was assessable within the township within which the assessor was authorized to act: Ibid.

Indictment for false statement in a schedule sworn to in a proceeding in bankruptcy should state wherein such statement is false and incorrect: United States v. Morgan, Mor., 341.

In an indictment for perjury it is not necessary nor usual to aver that the court trying the case in which the perjury was committed had jurisdiction of such acts. It is sufficient to aver that the issue was duly joined in such court which came on for trial in due form of law: State v. Newton, 1 G. Gr., 160.

Under § 5697 it is sufficient to set forth the substance of the offense charged and before what court the oath was taken, averring such court to have full power to administer the same, etc.: Ibid.

An indictment charging perjury in testifying before a grand jury, and alleging that they were investigating a specified charge against a party named; that they had authority to investigate such charge, and that the matters sworn to by the defendant (particularly stated and their falsity charged) were material in that investigation, held sufficient. It is not necessary in such a case to allege that the party charged with the offense under investigation by the grand jury was or was not guilty thereof: State v. Schull, 27-263.

It is sufficient to charge that defendant was duly sworn before a court having authority, etc., and it is not necessary to allege that the oath was administered by any one: State v. O'Hagan, 38-504.

But an indictment not averring that the court or person before whom the oath was taken had authority to administer the same is not sufficient: State v. Nickerson, 46-447.

An indictment for perjury is bad which alleges that the oath was administered by one not clothed with authority to administer it: State v. Phippen, 62-54.

Therefore where the indictment charged that the oath was administered by a certain person as an officer, but at a time which by law was prior to the time when he was authorized to enter upon the discharge of his duties, held, that the indictment was subject to demurrer: Ibid.

It is necessary to aver the jurisdiction and authority of the officer before whom the oath was taken to administer the oath, but this may be done by express averment that the officer had such right, or by setting out such facts as make it judicially appear. Under the averment that he was authorized and empowered by law to administer the oath, the facts essential to his jurisdiction and authority may be shown: State v. Cunningham, 66-94.

An indictment for perjury need not charge that the prisoner knew the falsity of the matter sworn to, unless the assignment of perjury is upon a statement of the accused as to his belief: State v. Raymond, 20-582.

Variance: Where the indictment charged that defendant testified that he saw M. enter upon premises of "Jason P." and saw him "getting and carrying away" corn therefrom, while the negative averment was that defendant did not see M. enter the premises of said "Joseph P." nor see him "gather and carry away" said corn, held, that the substitution of Joseph for Jason was clearly a clerical error, not affecting the substantial rights of the party, and that the effect of "gather" was, in the connection used, the equivalent of the word "getting": Ibid.

Knowledge: Under a statute defining perjury as "wilfully and corruptly deposing, affirming or declaring any matter to be fact knowing the same to be false, or denying any matter to be fact knowing the same to be true," held, that an indictment was not sufficient which omitted to charge such knowledge: State v. Morse, 1 G. Gr., 503.

It should be clearly and distinctly averred in the indictment that defendant swore "falsely," that word being used in the statutory definition: State v. Nickerson, 46-447.

An indictment for perjury which charged that defendant at a certain time testified to certain matters whereas he "did know" they were false, held, by fair construction, to charge knowledge at the time defendant testified and to be sufficient in that respect: State v. Wood, 17-18.

Advice of counsel: In a prosecution for perjury, it being material to determine whether the testimony given was wilfully false, the fact that advice of counsel was taken by defendant as to the facts about which he testified is material: State v. McKinney, 42-205.

Evidence: It is not necessary that there be two witnesses to the giving of testimony upon which the perjury is assigned, but only as to its falsity: State v. Wood, 17-18.

The evidence of one witness as to the falsity of the matter sworn to, supported by evidence of strong corroborating circumstances, is sufficient to warrant a conviction: State v. Raymond, 20-582.

While the jury cannot consider any other perjury than that assigned in the indictment for the purpose of determining defendant's guilt as to such other perjury, yet when the evidence thereof is legitimately brought out, and relates to the subject-matter of the perjury charged, it may be considered in determining defendant's corrupt intent: Ibid.

5243. Subornation of. 3937. If any person procure another to commit perjury, he is guilty of subornation of perjury, and shall be punished as provided in the preceding section. [R., § 4272; C., '51, § 2645.]

5244. Attempt to suborn. 3938. If any person endeavor to incite or procure another to commit perjury, though no perjury be committed, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4273; C., '51, § 2646.]

5245. Bribery of public officers. 3939. If any person give, offer, or promise to any executive or judicial officer or member of the general assembly after his election or appointment, and either before or after he has been qualified or has taken his seat, any valuable consideration, gratuity, service, or benefit whatever, with intent to influence his act, vote, opinion, or judgment in any matter, question, cause, or proceeding which may be pending or which may legally come or be brought before him in his official capacity, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not more than one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4274; C., '51, § 2647.]

5246. Acceptance of bribes by officers. 3940. If any executive or judicial officer, or member of the general assembly, accept any valuable consideration, gratuity, service, or benefit whatever, or any promise to make the same or to do any act beneficial to such officer or member under the agreement or with the understanding that his vote, opinion, decision, or judgment, shall be given in any particular manner or upon any particular side of any question, cause, or other proceeding which is, or may by law be, brought before him in his official capacity, or that in such capacity he will make any particular nomination or appointment, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than ten years, or be fined not more than two thousand dollars and imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4275; C., '51, § 2648.]

5247. Disqualification. 3941. Every person who is convicted under either of the two preceding sections of this chapter, shall forever afterward be disqualified from holding any office under the laws or constitution of this state. [R., § 4276; C., '51, § 2649.]

5248. Corrupt solicitation of places of trust. 3942. If any person, directly or indirectly, give, offer, or promise any valuable consideration or gratuity to any other person not being such officer as is mentioned in the preceding section, with intent to induce such other person to procure for him by his interest, influence, or any other means whatever any place of trust within this state, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars and imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4277; C., '51, § 2650.]

5249. Acceptance of such rewards. 3943. If any person, not being such officer as is referred to in the preceding sections of this chapter, accept and receive of another any valuable consideration or gratuity whatever as a reward for procuring, or attempting to procure, any office or place of trust within this state for any person, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4278; C., '51, § 2651.]

5250. Bribery of jurors, referees, etc. 3944. If any person give, offer, or promise any valuable consideration or gratuity whatever, to any one summoned, appointed, or sworn as a juror; or appointed or chosen arbitrator, or umpire, or referee; or to any master in chancery; or appraiser of real or personal estate; or auditor, with intent to influence the opinion or decision of any such person in any matter, inquest, or cause which may be pending or can legally come before him, or which he may be called on to decide in either of said capacities, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4279; C., '51, § 2652.]

5251. Acceptance of bribes by such persons. 3945. If any person summoned, appointed, or sworn as a juror; or appointed arbitrator, umpire, or referee; or master in chancery; or auditor; or appraiser as aforesaid, take or receive any valuable consideration, or gratuity whatever to give his verdict, award, or report in favor of any particular party, in a matter for the hearing or decision of which such person has been summoned, appointed, or chosen as aforesaid, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4280; C., '51, § 2653.]

5252. Attempt to corrupt such persons. 3946. If any person attempt to improperly influence any juror in any civil or criminal cause, or any one drawn, or summoned, or appointed, or sworn as such juror, or any arbitrator or referee, in relation to any cause or matter pending in, or to be brought before the court for which such juror has been drawn, summoned, appointed, or sworn; or for the hearing and decision of which such arbitrator or referee has been chosen or appointed, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months. [R., § 4281; C., '51, § 2654.]

5253. Jurors acting corruptly. 3947. If any person drawn, summoned, or sworn, as a juror, make any promise or agreement to give a verdict for or against any person in any civil or criminal cause, or corruptly receive any paper, evidence, or information from any one in relation to any matter or cause for the trial of which he is sworn, without the authority of the court or officer before whom such cause or matter is then pending, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding three months. [R., § 4282; C., '51, § 2655.]

5254. Sheriff and other officers receiving bribes. 3948; 20 G. A., ch. 123. If any sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable, marshal, deputy marshal, policeman or any police officer of any city or town, or coroner, receive from a defendant, or any other person, any money or other valuable thing as a consideration or inducement for omitting or delaying to arrest any defendant, or to carry him before a magistrate or to prison; or for postponing, delaying, or neglecting the sale of property on execution; or for omitting or delaying to perform any other duty pertaining to his office, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding six months, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4283; C., '51, § 2656.]

5255. Officers not to accept valuable considerations. 22 G. A., ch. 83, § 1. If any state, county, township, city, school or other municipal officer, not mentioned in section 3940 or 3948 of the code of Iowa of 1873 [§ 5246 or § 5254], at any time after his election or appointment to such office, shall, directly or indirectly, accept any valuable consideration, gratuity, service, or benefit whatever, or the promise thereof, other than the compensation allowed said officer by law, conditioned upon said officer doing or performing any official act, casting an official vote, making or procuring the appointment of any person to a place of trust or profit, or using his official influence or authority, to give or procure for any person public employment, or conditioned upon said officer refraining from doing or performing any of the foregoing acts or things enumerated, such officer shall upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for any term of time, not exceeding two years, or in the county jail not exceeding one year, or fines in any sum not less than twenty or more than three hundred dollars.

5256. Penalty for offering bribes. 22 G. A., ch. 83, § 2. If any person directly or indirectly, give, offer or promise, or conspire with others to give, offer, or promise to any officer, contemplated in the foregoing section, after said officer's election or appointment to office any valuable consideration, gratuity, service or benefit whatever with a view or for the purpose of corruptly influencing said officer's official acts or votes, such person shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary for any term of time not exceeding two years, or in the county jail not exceeding one year, or be fined in any sum not exceeding three hundred dollars, or less then [than] twenty dollars.

5257. Refusing to execute process. 3949. If any officer authorized to serve process wilfully refuse to execute any lawful process to him directed, requiring him to apprehend or confine any person charged with, or convicted of, any public offense; or wilfully delay or omit to execute such process, whereby such person escape, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4284; C., '51, § 2657.]

5259. Compounding felonies. 3951. If any person having knowledge of the commission of any offense punishable with imprisonment in the penitentiary for life, take any money or valuable consideration, or gratuity, or any promise therefor, upon an agreement or understanding, expressed or implied, to compound or conceal such offense, or not to prosecute the same, or not to give evidence thereof, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than six years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [R., § 4286; C., '51, § 2659.]

A contract entered into for the compounding of a felony is void, and the law will not afford either party thereto affirmative relief: Allison v. Hess, 28-388. And an instrument based upon an agreement not to prosecute for a felony is void: Peed v. McKee, 42-689.

The defendant in a criminal prosecution, being convicted, executed certain notes to the prosecuting witness and her attorney, to be delivered if the prosecutrix should sign an application for defendant's pardon, or if, upon appeal and reversal of the case, defendant should be acquitted or discharged. And it was also agreed that a civil action by the prosecutrix for damages should be discontinued. Held, that the agreement for the delivery of the note was void as against public policy, as tending to stifle the prosecution of crime: Haines v. Lewis, 54-301.

Evidence in a particular case held not sufficient to show that a contract was entered into for the purpose of compromising a felony: Malli v. Willett, 57-705.

If a person corruptly exacts a consideration from another for an agreement not to prosecute, he is guilty under this section, although he took such consideration for the benefit of another: State v. Ruthven, 58-121.

The fact that a person guilty of a crime under this and the following section is an officer, coming within the provisions of § 5254, does not exempt him from the higher punishment prescribed in this section: Ibid.

5260. Compounding lesser felonies. 3952. If any person having knowledge of the commission of any offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a limited term of years, is guilty of the offense described in the preceding section, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, and by fine not exceeding four hundred dollars. [R., § 4287; C., '51, § 2660.]

5261. Suffering prisoner to escape. 3953. If any jailor or other officer voluntarily suffer any prisoner in his custody upon a charge or conviction of a felony punishable by imprisonment for life, to escape, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than ten years, nor less than one year. [R., § 4288; C., '51, § 2661.]

5262. Same. 3954. If any jailor or other officer voluntarily suffer any prisoner in his custody upon charge or conviction of any other felony to escape, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than eight years, or by fine not more than one thousand dollars. [R., § 4289; C., '51, § 2662.]

5263. Same. 3955. If any jailor or other officer suffer any prisoner in his custody upon charge or conviction of any public offense to escape, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years. [R., § 4290; C., '51, § 2663.]

5264. Assisting prisoner to escape. 3956. If any person by any means whatever aid or assist any prisoner lawfully detained in the penitentiary, or in any jail or place of confinement for any felony, in an attempt to escape, whether such escape be effected or not, or forcibly rescue any person held in legal custody upon any criminal charge, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding ten years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4291; C., '51, § 2664.]

5265. Same. 3957. Every person who by any means whatever aids or assists any prisoner lawfully committed to any jail or place of confinement charged with or convicted of any criminal offense other than a felony in an attempt to escape, whether such escape be effected or not; or who conveys into such jail or place of confinement any disguise, instrument, arms, or other things proper or useful to facilitate the escape of any prisoner so committed, whether such escape be effected or attempted or not, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4292; C., '51, § 2665.]

5266. Same from officer. 3958. Every person who aids or assists any prisoner in escaping, or attempting to escape, from the custody of any sheriff, deputy sheriff, marshal, constable, or other officer or person who has the lawful charge of such prisoner upon any criminal charge, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years. [R., § 4293; C., '51, § 2666.]

Assisting a prisoner to escape from an officer having him in charge under a warrant issued by a magistrate under § 5497, for threatening to commit a public offense, is within the meaning of this section. Whether the prisoner had in fact threatened to commit the offense as charged in the warrant is immaterial: State v. Bates, 23-86.

5267. Prisoner escaping from county jail. 3959. If any person confined in a county jail upon any conviction for a criminal offense, break such jail and escape therefrom, he shall be imprisoned in such prison not exceeding one year, to commence from and after the expiration of the former sentence, and fined not exceeding three hundred dollars. [R., § 4295; C., '51, § 2668.]

5268. Resisting execution of process. 3960. If any person knowingly and wilfully resist or oppose any officer of this state, or any person authorized by law, in serving or attempting to execute any legal writ, rule, order, or process whatsoever, or shall knowingly and wilfully resist any such officer in the discharge of his duties without such writ, rule, order, or process, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars nor less than fifty dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4296; C., '51, § 2669; 12 G. A., ch. 150.]

It is no defense that the process is irregular or defective, if it is one that the magistrate has authority to issue: State v. Foster, 10-435.

It will be presumed that the officer was proceeding to execute the process in a proper manner, and the indictment need not set forth the acts showing that he complied with the requisites of the statute: State v. Freeman, 8-428.

The officers here contemplated are those only who are authorized to execute legal writs, orders, etc., and resistance to a road supervisor engaged in removing obstructions from a public road in his district is not within this section: State v. Putnam, 35-561.

Under Revision, § 4296, before its amendment, it was held that to resist a peace officer making an arrest without a warrant was not an offense under this statute: State v. Lovell, 23-304.

A receiver properly appointed and directed by the court to take possession of property is an officer within the meaning of this section, and resistance to him in an attempt to take such possession is a crime under this provision: State v. Rivers, 66-653.

One who resists an officer in making arrest of another cannot justify such resistance on the ground that the person to be arrested was not guilty: Montgomery v. Sutton, 67-497.

5269. Refusing to assist officer. 3961. If any person, being lawfully required by any sheriff, deputy sheriff, coroner, constable, or other officer, wilfully neglect or refuse to assist him in the execution of his office in any criminal case, or in any case of escape or rescue, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or by fine not more than one hundred dollars. [R., § 4297; C., '51, § 2670.]

5270. Falsely assuming to be officer. 3962. If any person falsely assume to be a judge, justice of the peace, magistrate, sheriff, deputy sheriff, coroner, or constable, and take upon himself to act as such or require any one to aid or assist him in any matter pertaining to the duty of any such officer, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year or by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars. [R., § 4298; C., '51, § 2671.]

Where a constable who was re-elected proceeded to perform the duties of his office without qualifying anew as required by § 1156, held, that he was not falsely assuming to be an officer under this section: State v. Bates, 23-96.

5271. Exercising office without authority or under color. 3963. If any person take upon himself to exercise or officiate in any office or place of authority in this state, without being legally authorized; or if any person by color of his office, wilfully and corruptly oppress any person under pretense of acting in his official capacity, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year; or by both fine and imprisonment. [R., § 4299; C., '51, § 2672.]

A constable may be guilty of the offense here defined: State v. Beavans, 37-178.

5272. Stirring up quarrels. 3964. If any judge, justice of the peace, clerk of any court, sheriff, coroner, constable, attorney or counselor at law, encourage, excite, or stir up any suit, quarrel, or controversy between two or more persons, with intent to injure such person or persons, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars; and shall be answerable to the party injured in treble damages. [R., § 4300; C., '51, § 2673.]

5273. Neglect of duty by public officers. 3965. When any duty is or shall be enjoined by law upon any public officer, or upon any person holding any public trust or employment, every wilful neglect to perform such duty, where no special provision has been made for the punishment of such delinquency, is a misdemeanor. [R., § 4301; C., '51, § 2674.]

5274. Misdemeanors. 3966. When the performance of any act is prohibited by any statute, and no penalty for the violation of such statute is imposed, the doing of such act is a misdemeanor. [R., § 4302; C., '51, § 2675.]

Supervisors violating the provisions of § 402, case where such submission is required, are ¶ 24, by voting to erect a public building guilty, under this section, of a misdemeanor: without submitting the question to vote, in a State v. Conlee, 25-237.

5275. Punishment for. 3967. Every person who is convicted of a misdemeanor, the punishment of which is not otherwise prescribed by any statute of this state, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [R., § 4303; C., '51, § 2676.]

5276. False entries and returns. 3968. If any public officer fraudulently make or give false entries, or false returns, or false certificates of receipts in cases where entries, returns, certificates, or receipts are authorized by law, he shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4304; C., '51, § 2677.]

[In the original rolls, between what are §§ 5266 and 5267, occurs a section which is not in the printed Code, but is substantially the same as this, except as to punishment. It reads as follows:

“If any public officer fraudulently make or give false entries, or false returns, or false certificates or receipts, where entries, returns, certificates or receipts are authorized by law, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years.”]

A county auditor who gives a false certificate of the receipt by the treasurer of a certain sum in payment of interest upon a school-fund note is guilty under this section, although the auditor is authorized to issue in case of such payment a receipt and not a certificate: State v. Morse, 52-509.

It is not necessary in charging this offense to charge an intent to defraud any particular person: Ibid.

5278. Officers failing to pay over fees. 3970. If any justice of the peace, clerk of the district or other court, county recorder, or any other officer who by law is authorized to receive and required to pay over fees of office, or who is or may be authorized to impose or collect fines, shall fail, neglect, or refuse to pay over as prescribed, or as may hereafter be prescribed by law, all such fees and fines, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, besides being liable in a civil action for the amount of such fines and fees as he may have thus illegally withheld or appropriated. [R., § 4308.]

5279. Making false entries in relation to fees. 3971. If any justice of the peace, clerk of the district or other court which is now or may hereafter be established, county recorder or other officer, who by law is authorized or required to keep a court docket, or who is or may be required to keep an account of fees or fines, and to pay over, or in any way account for the same, shall in any manner falsify such docket or account, or shall fail, neglect, or refuse to make an entry upon such docket or account, of such fees and fines, as are required to be paid over according to law, such justice of the peace, clerk of the district court, or clerk of any other court, county recorder and other officer shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be subject and liable to be prosecuted therefor in any court having jurisdiction of the offense. [R., § 4309.]

5280. Officers misappropriating fees. 3972. Any justice of the peace, clerk of the district or of any other court which is or may be established, county recorder, or other officer who may be found guilty of the offense of appropriating to his own use fees of office or fines collected for violation of law, or of neglecting to pay over the same as prescribed by law, shall be removed from office by the court before or by whom the offense may be tried and judgment or conviction had, and each and every person so found guilty shall be punished by a fine not exceeding three hundred dollars nor less than ten dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. [R., § 4310.]

5281. Report of fees. 3973. All officers required by the provisions of this code to collect and pay over fines and fees, shall, on the first Monday in January in each year, make report thereof under oath to the board of supervisors of the proper county, showing the amount of fines assessed and the amount of fines and fees collected, together with the vouchers for the payment of all sums by him collected to the proper officer required to keep the same. [R., § 4314.]

5282. Same by clerks, mayors and justices. 3974. The clerks of the several courts of this state, except of the supreme court, and all mayors of incorporated towns and cities, and justices of the peace, shall, on the first Monday of January of each year, make a report in writing to the board of supervisors of their respective counties, of all forfeited recognizances in their several offices; of all fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed in their respective courts, and which by law go into the county treasury for the benefit of the school fund; in what cause or proceedings, when, for what purpose, against whom, and for what amount rendered; whether said fines, penalties, forfeitures and recognizances have been paid, remitted, canceled, or otherwise satisfied; if so, when, how, and in what manner; if not paid, remitted, canceled, or otherwise satisfied, what steps have been taken to enforce the collection thereof, and the prospect of such collection. Such report must be verified under oath, to the effect that the same is full, true, and complete of the matters therein contained, and of all things required by this section to be reported; and any officer failing so to do shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, may be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars. [9 G. A., ch. 29; 14 G. A., ch. 58.]

5284. Failure to take official oath. 3976. If any officer or person wilfully fails to take the oath required by law before entering on the discharge of the duties of any office, trust or station, or makes any contract which contemplates an expenditure in excess of the law under which he was elected or appointed, or fails to report to the proper officer showing the expenditure of all public moneys with proper vouchers therefor by the time required by law, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by both at the discretion of the court. [R., §§ 216, 2184.]

CHAPTER 7.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF AND TRESPASS ON PROPERTY.

5285. Injuries to beasts. 3977. If any person maliciously kill, maim, or disfigure any horse, cattle, or other domestic beast of another; or maliciously administer poison to any such animals; or expose any poisonous substance with intent that the same should be taken by them, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars. [R., § 4318; C., '51, § 2678.]

An indictment alleging the malicious killing of a sow, held sufficient; and held that it was not necessary to allege and prove that a hog is a "domestic beast:" State v. Euslow, 10-115.

An indictment charging the maiming and disfiguring of an animal is not bad for duplicity; any one or all of the acts here mentioned may be charged in the same indictment, and the proof need only cover so much of the allegation as constitutes a complete offense. To constitute the offense of disfiguring, the disfigurement need not be permanent or great: State v. Harris, 11-414.

While mere wanton injury to an animal without malice against any person may not be sufficient to constitute the offense of malicious injury to animals, yet, though the owner may be unknown, if the act is done maliciously for the purpose and with the intent of injuring such person, it is sufficient: State v. Linde, 54-139; State v. Williamson, 68-351.

The infliction of a wilful and wanton injury upon an animal is evidence that the act is malicious both as to the animal and the owner: State v. Williamson, 68-351.

5286. To dams, locks, mills, machinery, etc. 3978. If any person maliciously injure or destroy any dam, lock, canal, trench, or reservoir, or any of the appurtenances thereof, or any of the gear or machinery of any mill or manufactory; or maliciously draw off the water from any mill pond, reservoir, canal, or trench; or destroy, injure, or render useless any engine or the apparatus thereto belonging, prepared or kept for the extinguishing of fires, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year and by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [R., § 4319; C., '51, § 2679.]

A similar provision in a former statute held to abate it as a private nuisance: State v. Moffett, 1 G. Gr., 247.

5287. To bridges, railways, highways, etc. 3979. If any person maliciously injure, remove, or destroy any bridge, rail or plank road; or place or cause to be placed any obstruction on such bridge or road; or wilfully obstruct or injure any public road or highway; or maliciously cut, burn, or in any way break down, injure, or destroy any telegraph post, or in any way cut, break, or injure the wires or any apparatus thereto belonging, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4320; C., '51, § 2680.]

Where a highway is duly laid out, the fact that it is not yet traveled will not prevent the act of obstructing it from being criminal: Harrow v. State, 1 G. Gr., 439.

Error in the description of the highway, so long as its identity is not doubtful, will not vitiate a conviction for obstructing it: Ibid.

A party obstructing a highway, by fence or otherwise, may be punished under the provisions of § 5470, although the road supervisor might, under other provisions of the statute, rightfully remove the obstruction: State v. Berry, 12-58.

Under an indictment for obstructing a "county road," a road established by statute only can be shown. Evidence of a highway by use or prescription is not admissible: State v. Snyder, 25-208.

In prosecutions for obstructing a public highway the state is not confined to documentary proof of the establishment thereof, but may show the highway by proof of consent and user, and the fact that the highway is not of statutory width will be no defense: State v. Robinson, 28-514.

A party failing to remove a fence, where a newly established highway crosses his land, is not liable to indictment for obstructing a highway, at least until after reasonable notice by the supervisor to remove the same: State v. Kattijf, 32-186.

Malice is not a necessary element of the offense of obstructing a highway; intent is only important to show whether it was wilful or merely accidental: State v. Gould, 40-372.

It is not a punishable offense to obstruct a highway which, by reason of natural obstacles, cannot be used by the public: State v. Shinkle, 40-131.

But if part of the line of road is traveled, it would not excuse a party who obstructs it that another part was impassable as laid out: State v. McGee, 40-595.

Platform scales erected in a public street for private business may be removed by order of the city council: Emerson v. Babcock, 66-257.

As a railroad company is allowed, under § 1930, to temporarily obstruct a highway for the purpose of constructing its track, an allegation in an indictment showing such obstruction will not be sufficient to charge a crime, without averments showing a violation of the provisions of that section of the statute: State v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 63-708.

See further as to obstruction of highways, § 5470 and notes.

In a prosecution for obstructing the track of a railway it is not necessary to allege or prove that the obstruction did actually obstruct and hinder trains: State v. Clemens, 38-257.

As to railroads, see § 5298 and notes.

5288. Setting loose or injuring rafts and boats. 3980. If any person maliciously cut away, let loose, injure, or destroy any boom or raft of wood, logs, or other lumber, or any boat or vessel fastened to any place, of which he is not the owner or legal possessor, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, and shall also forfeit to the use of the person so injured double the amount of damages by him thereby sustained to be recovered in an action at law. [R., § 4321; C., '51, § 2681.]

5289. Injuring trees and breaking down fences. 3981. If any person maliciously cut down, injure, or destroy any fruit or ornamental trees or other tree, vine, or shrub of another, standing or growing for ornament or use; or maliciously break down, mar, deface, or injure any fence, hedge, or ditch inclosing lands belonging to another; or throw down or open any gate or bars not his own or under his charge and leave them open, whereby an injury is done to another; or maliciously injure, destroy, or sever from the land of another any produce thereof or anything attached thereto, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by both imprisonment and fine at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4322; C., '51, § 2682.]

5290. Injuring monuments, mile-stones, sign-boards, etc. 3982. If any person maliciously take down, injure, or remove any monument erected, or any tree marked as a boundary of any tract of land, city, or town lot; or destroy, deface, or alter the marks of any such monument or tree made for the purpose of designating such boundary, or injure or deface any mile-stone, post, or guide-board erected on any public way; or remove, deface, or injure any sign-board; or break or remove any lamp or lamp-post, or extinguish any lamp on any bridge, way, street, or passage, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 2343; C., '51, § 2683.]

[The word "or," in the third line, is erroneously printed "on" in the Code.]

5291. Trespass by digging, cutting, carrying away, etc. 3983. If any person wilfully commit any trespass by cutting down or destroying any timber or wood standing or growing on the land of another; or by carrying away timber or wood being on such land; or by digging or carrying away any earth, stone, marble, slate, coal, copper, lead, iron ore, or any other ore or metal; or by taking and carrying from such land any grass, hay, corn, grain, fruit or other vegetables; or carrying away from any wharf, street, or landing-place, any goods whatever in which he has no interest, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. If in any case the value of the property so cut down, carried away, or otherwise taken shall not exceed the sum of fifty dollars, then the person so offending shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [R., § 4324; C., '51, § 2684; 11 G. A., ch. 28.]

A person may be punished for the crime of malicious trespass committed in cutting and carrying away timber from school land, although the title to the land is still in the United States: Chalfont v. United States, Mor., 214.

The name of the owner of the land upon which the trespass is charged to have been committed should be set out in the indictment, or, if unknown, the indictment should so state: State v. McConkey, 20-574.

An indictment for cutting down and destroying standing timber upon the land of another is not sustained by proof of carrying away wood being on such land. The two acts as here specified are distinct: Ibid.

Under Rev., § 4324, differing from this section, it was held that the value of the property need not be found: State v. Gigher, 23-318.

A party has no right to prevent malicious trespass by the use of means dangerous to life, or by inflicting great bodily injury, as by a spring-gun: Hooker v. Miller, 37-613.

5292. On gardens, orchards, etc. 3984. If any person wilfully commit any trespass by entering upon the garden, orchard, or improved land of another, with intent to take, carry away, destroy, or injure the trees, shrubs, grain, grass, hay, fruit, or vegetables there being, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days. [R., § 4325; C., '51, § 2685.]

5293. Injuries to buildings and fixtures. 3985. If any person maliciously injure, deface, or destroy any building or fixture attached thereto, or wilfully and maliciously destroy, injure, or secrete any goods, chattels, or valuable papers of another, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, and is liable to the party injured in a sum equal to three times the value of the property so destroyed or injured in a civil action. [R., § 4326; C., '51, § 2686.]

An indictment charging in one count that accused "injured and defaced" a building is not objectionable on the ground of duplicity. The clauses in this section being disjunctive, either one or all the acts here specified may be charged in one count and constitute the same offense: State v. Hockenberry, 11-269.

Malicious injury to a church building is punishable under this section, and it is sufficient to aver ownership in the trustees, as such, without setting out the character of their title: State v. Brant, 14-180.

5294. Defacing public buildings. 3986. If any person wilfully write, make marks, or draw characters on the walls or any other part of any church, college, academy, school-house, court-house, or other public building; or wilfully injure or deface the same, or any wall or fence inclosing the same, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days. [R., § 4327; C., '51, § 2687.]

5295. Defacing and destroying proclamations, notices, etc. 3987. If any person intentionally deface, obliterate, tear down, or destroy in whole or in part, any transcript, or extract from or of any law of the United States, or of this state, or any proclamation, advertisement, or notification set up at any place within this state by authority of law or by order of any court, during the time for which the same is to remain set up, he shall be fined in a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [R., § 4328; C., '51, § 2688.]

5296. Taking property for boat or vessel. 3988. If any owner, master, clerk, or any other person having charge of or belonging to any boat, vessel, or raft, take any cord wood or any other species of property from the owner or his agent, without the knowledge of such owner or agent, or without paying the customary price for the same, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months. [R., § 4329; C., '51, § 2689.]

5297. Injuries to monuments of state boundary. 3989. If any person wilfully dig up, pull down, break, or destroy, or in any other manner injure or remove any of the cast-iron pillars or other evidences planted and fixed, or which may hereafter be planted or fixed, in and along any part of the boundaries of this state, he may be indicted therefor, and, upon conviction before any court having competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by fine not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4330; C., '51, § 2690.]

5298. Placing obstructions on railways. 3990. If any person or persons shall wilfully and maliciously place any obstruction on the track of any railroad in this state, or remove any rail therefrom, or in any other way injure such railroad, or do any other thing thereto, whereby the life of any person is or may be endangered, he or they shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for life, or for any term not less than two years. [R., § 4331.]

It being found that defendant knew the railroad was being used for the purpose of carrying freight and passengers, and intended to place the obstruction on the road, malice will be implied: State v. Hessenkamp, 17-25.

The fact that the land where the obstructions were placed on the track belonged to defendant, and the railroad company had no right of way over it, or had violated the covenants of its contract with respect thereto, would be no defense in an action under this section: Ibid.

In a prosecution for obstructing the track of a railway, it is not necessary to allege or prove that the obstruction did actually obstruct and hinder trains: State v. Clemens, 38-257.

See, also, § 5287 and notes.

5299. Breaking levees. 3991. If any person maliciously injure, break, or cause to be broken, any levee erected to prevent the overflow of land within this state, such person so offending shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4332.]

5300. Obstructing public ditches or drains. 3992. If any person place any obstruction in any of the public ditches or drains made for the purpose of draining any of the swamp lands in this state, he shall, upon conviction, be compelled to remove said obstructions and be fined not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not more than thirty days at the discretion of the court. [9 G. A., ch. 135.]

5301. Obstructing or defacing roads. 15 G. A., ch. 17. If any person without authority or permission from the proper road supervisor, shall in any manner obstruct, deface, or injure any public road or highway, by breaking up, plowing, or digging within the boundary lines thereof, he shall upon conviction be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, at the discretion of the court.

No one has a right to make a material change in a highway inconsistent with the plans of the road supervisor. To do so will constitute a defacing of the highway within the meaning of this section. The judgment of the supervisor must govern as to the proper plan: State v. Hunter, 68-447.

CHAPTER 8.

OFFENSES AGAINST THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

5302. Bribery of electors. 3993. If any person offer or give a bribe to any elector for the purpose of influencing his vote at any election authorized by law; and if any elector entitled to vote at such election receives such bribe, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4333.]

It does not constitute bribery at an election to relocate a county seat for persons interested in the location at a particular place to agree to give certain facilities for the convenience of the whole county, such as offering a building for courts and officers, conveying real estate to the county, paying money toward the erection of a bridge, subscribing toward a high school, etc.: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212; Hawes v. Miller, 56-395.

A promise by a candidate to pay into the public treasury, if elected, a part or all of his compensation, is an offer of a bribe to electors, and disqualifies the person making it, if elected, for holding the office: Carrothers v. Russell, 53-346.

Giving or offering a bribe to an elector is a ground for contesting an election: See § 1158 and note.

5303. Voting more than once. 3994. If any elector unlawfully vote more than once at any election which may be held by virtue of any law of this state, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4334; C., '51, § 2692.]

5304. When not qualified. 3995. If any person knowing himself not to be qualified, vote at any election authorized by law, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months. [R., § 4335; C., '51, § 2693.]

In an indictment for this offense it is not necessary to show that the election was held by the proper and legal officers, or to state the manner in which defendant was disqualified: State v. Douglass, 7-413.

5305. Non-resident of county. 3996. If any person go or come into any county of this state, and vote in such county, not being a resident thereof, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4336; C., '51, § 2694.]

5306. Not a resident of the state for six months. 3997. If any person wilfully vote who has not been a resident of this state for six months next preceding the election, or who, at the time of the election, is not twenty-one years of age, or who is not a citizen of the United States, or who is not duly qualified from other disability to vote at the place where, and time when the vote is to be given, he shall be fined in a sum not exceeding three hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4337; C., '51, § 2695.]

It is no defense under this section that defendant consulted others (not persons learned in the law) as to his right to vote, and was advised that he was qualified: State v. Sheeley, 15-404.

Voting in a township other than that of the voter's residence is an offense under this section, and it is not necessary to charge or prove that accused voted for or against any one. The casting of a ballot being proved, it would be presumed that it designated the name of some person for some office: State v. Minnick, 15-123.

5307. Counseling to vote when not qualified. 3998. If any person procure, aid, assist, counsel, or advise another to give his vote, knowing that such person is disqualified, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars nor less than fifty dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4338; C., '51, § 2696.]

5308. Inducing to vote by false representation. 3999. If any person furnish an elector with a ticket or ballot, informing him that it contains a name or names different from those which are written or printed therein, with an intent to induce him to vote contrary to his inclination, or fraudulently or deceitfully change a ballot of any elector, by which such elector is deprived of voting for such candidate or person as he intended, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years, and by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars nor less than one hundred dollars. [R., § 4339; C., '51, § 2697.]

5309. Preventing from voting by force or threats. 4000. If any person unlawfully and by force, or threats of force, prevent or endeavor to prevent, an elector from giving his vote at any public election in this state, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months, and a fine not more than two hundred dollars. [R., § 4340; C., '51, § 2698.]

5310. Bribing clerks, judges, etc. 4001. If any person give or offer a bribe to any judge, clerk, or canvasser of any election authorized by law, or any executive officer attending the same, as a consideration for some act done, or omitted to be done, contrary to his official duty in relation to such election, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding seven hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4341; C., '51, § 2699.]

5311. Procuring vote by influence or threats. 4002. If any person procure, or endeavor to procure, the vote of any elector, or the influence of any person over other electors at any election, for himself, or for or against any candidate by means of violence, threats of violence, or threats of withdrawing custom, or dealing in business or trade, or enforcing the payment of debts, or bringing a suit or criminal prosecution, or any other threat of injury to be inflicted by him, or by his means, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4342; C., '51, § 2700.]

5312. Judges or clerks making false entries, etc. 4003. If any judge or clerk of any election authorized by law, knowingly make or consent to any false entry on the list of voters, or poll-books; or put into the ballot-box, or permit to be so put in, any ballot not given by a voter; or take out of such box, or permit to be so taken out, any ballot deposited therein, except in the manner prescribed by law; or by any other act or omission designedly destroy or change the ballots given by the electors, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4343; C., '51, § 2701.]

5313. Illegally receiving or rejecting votes. 4004. When any one who offers to vote at any election is objected to by an elector as a person not possessing the requisite qualifications, if any judge of such election unlawfully permit him to vote without producing proof of such qualification in the manner directed by law, or if any such judge wilfully refuse the vote of any person who complies with the requisites prescribed by law to prove his qualifications, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars nor less than twenty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months. [R., § 4344; C., '51, § 2702.]

5314. Misconduct to avoid election. 4005. If any judge, clerk, or executive officer designedly omit to do any official act required by law; or designedly do any illegal act in relation to any public election, by which act or omission the votes taken at any such election in any city, town, precinct, township or district, be lost, or the electors thereof be deprived of their suffrage at such election; or designedly do any act which renders such election void, he shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4345; C., '51, § 2703.]

5315. Not returning poll-books. 4006. If any judge, clerk, or messenger, after having been deputed by the judges of the election to carry the poll-books of such election to the place where by law they are to be canvassed, wilfully or negligently fail to deliver such poll-books within the time prescribed by law, safe, with the seal unbroken, he shall, for every such offense, be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, nor less than fifty dollars. [R., § 4346; C., '51, § 2704.]

5316. Improper registry. 4007. Any person who shall cause his name to be registered, knowing that he is not or will not become a qualified voter in the township where his name is registered previous to the next election, or who shall wrongfully personate any registered voter, and any person causing, aiding, or abetting any person in either of said acts, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and punished for each offense by imprisonment in the state prison not less than one year. [12 G. A., ch. 171, § 10.]

CHAPTER 9.

OFFENSES AGAINST CHASTITY, MORALITY, AND DECENCY.

5317. Adultery. 4008. Every person who commits the crime of adultery, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than three years, or by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year; and when the crime is committed between parties only one of whom is married, both are guilty of adultery and shall be punished accordingly. No prosecution for adultery can be commenced but on the complaint of the husband or wife. [R., § 4347; C., '51, § 2705.]

Void divorce: Where a decree of divorce is void for want of jurisdiction it will not bar a prosecution for adultery: State v. Fleak, 54-429.

Where a husband procured a divorce and remarried, but subsequently the decree of divorce was set aside and declared void at the suit of the wife, under title 19, chapter 1, of Code, on the ground that it was procured by fraud, held, that the divorce was no defense in a prosecution for adultery committed in cohabiting with the second wife: State v. Whitcomb, 52-85.

An erroneous belief of the validity of a divorce will not constitute a defense in a prosecution for adultery committed in a second marriage: Ibid.

Connection by force: The act may constitute adultery as to the man, although as to the woman it is effected by force and against her will: State v. Donovan, 61-278.

To constitute adultery on the part of the man the consent of the woman need not be established. If willingly done on his part the crime is complete: State v. Sanders, 30-582.

Commencement of prosecution by husband or wife: It is sufficient if the prosecution is commenced by the husband or wife. It may be continued without further co-operation on the part of such party: State v. Baldy, 17-39.

Where the wife instituted the proceedings before an examining magistrate, in which the defendant was held to answer, but did not appear before the grand jury or otherwise in the further prosecution of the case, held, that the prosecution was sufficiently commenced upon the complaint of the wife: State v. Dingee, 17-232.

An unmarried person may be guilty of the crime of adultery, and complaint against such person may be made by the husband or wife of the married party, although such married party is not prosecuted: State v. Wilson, 22-364.

The appearance of the wife before the grand jury, in response to a subpoena, and giving testimony against the husband without intending to prefer a charge, but supposing she was required to do so, would not constitute a complaint by the wife: State v. Donovan, 61-278; State v. Stout, 71-343.

The prosecution may be sufficiently commenced by the husband or wife, either by making complaint before the grand jury or by filing a preliminary information before a magistrate. If commenced by filing information it is not necessary that the husband or wife appear further in the proceedings. It is not necessary that the name of the husband or wife be indorsed on the indictment as private prosecutor: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

The words "husband or wife," as used in this section, refer to and mean the spouse of the person charged with the offense: Bush v. Workman, 64-205.

An averment in the indictment that the prosecution was commenced by the husband or wife is not conclusive, and, if not so commenced, advantage of that fact may be taken by defendant: State v. Roth, 17-336.

It is essential that the state prove that the prosecution was so commenced. An averment in the indictment will not be presumptive proof thereof: State v. Henke, 58-457.

The allegation that the prosecution was so commenced must be proven by the state like other material averments of the indictment, and is to be determined by the jury upon the evidence given at the trial, and not by the court on affidavits upon a motion to dismiss the prosecution: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

The fact that the prosecution is commenced by the husband or wife does not enter into or constitute any of the facts which go to make up the crime, and therefore, although such fact must be proven, it is not necessary that it be established beyond a reasonable doubt: State v. Donovan, 61-278.

Failure to instruct the jury as to the necessity of the prosecution being so commenced is not error, where that fact appears without dispute in the evidence and such instruction is not asked by the defendant: State v. Hazen, 39-648.

Indictment: As any act of adultery committed between the parties within the statutory period of limitation might be proven under an indictment charging one such act, the allegation in the indictment of other acts committed on divers other days may be rejected as surplusage, and the indictment will not be bad: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

The better practice is to indict the parties guilty of adultery separately, although they may be indicted jointly: State v. Dingee, 17-232.

5318. Bigamy. 4009. If any person who has a former husband or wife living, marry another person, or continue to cohabit with such second husband or wife in this state, he or she, except in the cases mentioned in the following section, is guilty of bigamy and shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4348; C., '51, § 2706.]

Continuing to cohabit within the state after a bigamous marriage is a crime under this section, whether the marriage was consummated within or without the state: State v. Sloan, 55-217; State v. Nadal, 69-478.

Defendant may be prosecuted for continuing to cohabit within the state, although a prosecution for the bigamous marriage is barred: State v. Sloan, 55-217.

Venue: The prosecution may be had in any county where the defendant unlawfully cohabits with a second wife, although the marriage was consummated in another county: State v. Hughes, 58-165.

Evidence: The provision that the prosecution can be commenced only by the husband or wife leads to the inference that the offense is a crime by the husband or wife against the other rather than against society in general, and upon such prosecution the one may be a witness against the other under § 4891: State v. Bennett, 31-24; State v. Hazen, 39-648.

In a prosecution for adultery, record proof of marriage is not indispensable. It may be established by the testimony of the husband or wife: State v. Wilson, 22-364.

Admissions of defendant as to the fact of marriage, when voluntary, and not of the character of confessions exacted by improper inducements, are admissible as evidence of the marriage: State v. Sanders, 30-582.

Admissions of the woman with whom the husband is charged to have committed the crime are not competent evidence: State v. McGuire, 50-153.

The provisions of § 5319, as to the presumption arising from absence, in the case of a prosecution for bigamy, do not apply as against a defendant in a prosecution for adultery to establish the validity of his marriage with a wife who had previously been married: State v. Henke, 58-457.

Different acts: Where but one act of adultery is charged and evidence as to different acts is introduced, but the prosecution after the close of the evidence elects to rely upon one particular act referred to in the evidence, such election withdraws from the jury the evidence as to the other acts and cures any errors which may have been committed in admitting evidence with reference thereto: State v. Donovan, 61-278.

Evidence of other acts of adultery committed between the same parties prior to the statutory period of limitation or in another county than that in which the indictment is found are admissible to show the disposition of the parties, and may be taken, in connection with opportunity to commit the crime within the statutory period and within the jurisdiction of the court, as evidence that the crime was then committed: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

Indictment: An indictment for this crime, stating that the date of the lawful marriage was to the grand jury unknown, that it took place in Illinois, and that at the time of the second marriage the former marriage relation still existed, held sufficient as against the objections, first, that it did not state the date of the first marriage; second, that it did not state that such marriage was lawful and valid by the laws of Illinois; third, that it did not appear that the lawful wife was still living at the date of the second marriage: Ibid.

An indictment under this section need not negative the exceptions contained in the next section: State v. Williams, 20-98.

Evidence: The testimony of a witness who saw the marriage is sufficient without record evidence thereof: Ibid.; State v. Hughes, 58-165.

While admissions of marriage or cohabitation will not authorize conviction, yet when the evidence shows a long recognition by defendant of the woman as his wife, and actual marriage, proof of admission of marriage and cohabitation may be shown: State v. Nadal, 69-478.

The testimony of either husband or wife, together with proof of continued cohabitation as husband and wife, raises such a presumption of an actual legal fact as to make it incumbent upon the defendant to rebut such presumption: Ibid.

In a prosecution for cohabiting in this state after a void marriage in another state, it is not necessary to prove the marriage to have been in accordance with the laws of such state, if it would have been sufficient under the laws of this state, there being no evidence that the laws of such state are different from those of this state: Ibid.

Under an indictment alleging the celebration of the void marriage at a particular place, evidence will be sufficient which shows the celebration of the marriage anywhere within the same state: Ibid.

In a prosecution for cohabiting with a second wife, evidence of the bigamous marriage in another county is proper, not to show a crime in that county, but to fix the nature of the subsequent cohabitation: State v. Hughes, 58-165.

It seems that the fact that defendant acted under reputable legal advice in contracting the second marriage would be no defense: Ibid.

The crime is one by the husband or wife against the other within the scope of § 4891, allowing the husband or wife to be a witness against the other: State v. Sloan, 55-217; State v. Hughes, 58-165.

In a prosecution for bigamy, evidence of lewdness on the part of the injured party is incompetent: State v. Nadal, 69-478.

5319. Exceptions. 4010. The provisions of the preceding section do not extend to any person whose husband or wife has continually remained beyond seas, or who has voluntarily withdrawn from the other and remained absent for the space of three years together, the party marrying again not knowing the other to be living within that time; nor to any person who has good reason to believe such husband or wife to be dead; nor to any person who has been legally divorced from the bonds of matrimony. [R., § 4349; C., '51, § 2707.]

The provisions of this section, as to presumption arising from absence, do not apply as against a defendant, in a prosecution for adultery, to establish the validity of his marriage with a woman who had previously been married: State v. Henke, 58-457.

5320. Knowingly marrying husband or wife. 4011. Every unmarried person who knowingly marries the husband or wife of another, when such husband or wife is guilty of bigamy thereby, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding three years, or by fine not more than three hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4350; C., '51, § 2708.]

5321. Lewdness. 4012. If any man or woman not being married to each other lewdly and viciously associate and cohabit together, or if any man or woman, married or unmarried, is guilty of open and gross lewdness and designedly make any open and indecent, or obscene exposure of his or her person, or of the person of another, every such person shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months, or by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars. [R., § 4351; C., '51, § 2709.]

Acts of private incontinence are not sufficient to constitute the offense here described: State v. Marvin, 12-499.

An indictment under this section should charge that the parties were not married to each other: State v. Clinch, 8-401.

Evidence that defendant in a prosecution for lewdness had a wife and children whom he had deserted, held admissible: State v. Lyon, 10-340.

Occasional acts of sexual intercourse in a secret manner between parties living in the relationship of master and servant may not be sufficient alone to constitute the crime of lewdness. But such acts and the birth of a child may be shown as tending with other circumstances to prove that the parties were in fact living together as husband and wife: State v. Kirkpatrick, 63-554.

5322. Keeping house of ill-fame. 4013; 20 G. A., ch. 142, § 1. If any person keeps a house of ill-fame, resorted to for the purpose of prostitution or lewdness, such person shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than six months nor more than five years. [R., § 4352; C., '51, § 2710.]

What constitutes prostitution: It is for the jury to say what acts are, under the circumstances, sufficient to render a person a prostitute, and it is not for the court to instruct as to what sexual intercourse is or is not sufficient to establish the fact: State v. Rice, 56-431.

Keeping house of ill-fame: An indictment against a person for keeping a house of ill-fame is sufficient if it charges the offense as committed within the county. The house need not be more specifically described: State v. Shaw, 35-575.

If the facts constituting an offense under this section be properly charged in the indictment, the fact that the term nuisance is used to designate it will not invalidate the indictment nor make it an indictment for the offense defined in § 5472: State v. Shaw, 35-575.

The offense here defined is distinct from that defined in § 5472, in that, in the latter case, it must be "to the disturbance of others:" State v. Odell, 42-75; State v. Alderman, 40-375.

Evidence that the owner of a house kept as a house of ill-fame by the tenant was in the habit of spending a part of his time there, held insufficient to show that such owner was guilty as a keeper of such house: State v. Pearsall, 43-630.

5323. Lease rendered void. 4014. When the lessee of a dwelling-house is convicted of keeping the same as a house of ill-fame, the lease or contract for letting such house is, at the option of the lessor, void, and such lessor may thereupon have the like remedy to recover possession as against a tenant holding over after the expiration of his term. [R., § 4353; C., '51, § 2711.]

5324. Leasing house for such purpose. 4015. If any person let any house, knowing that the lessee intends to use it as a place or resort for the purpose of prostitution and lewdness, or knowingly permit such lessee to use the same for such purpose, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding six months. [R., § 4354; C., '51, § 2712.]

The acts here described constitute but one offense, and an indictment charging both of them is not bad for duplicity: State v. Abrahams, 6-117.

To render the defendant guilty of knowingly permitting the use, something more must be shown than his mere inactivity or failure to take steps to prevent such illegal use. Some act or declaration showing an affirmative assent must be shown: Ibid.; Abrahams v. State, 4-541.

Instructions to the effect that evidence showing that defendant was keeping a house and using it as his own, and exercising such control over it as men usually have over their own houses, will authorize the jury to find that defendant kept the house, and that the jury might find that defendant had knowledge of the character of the house and assented thereto, from the publicity of the lewd conduct carried on there and the public reports of its ill-fame, and his knowledge of such reports, as well as his personal conduct and his conversation with inmates and visitors, held proper: State v. Wells, 46-662.

A previous conviction under an indictment charging only an offense under § 5472 will not warrant a sentence, on conviction under this section as it stood before amendment, of imprisonment in the penitentiary for a second conviction: State v. Holmes, 56-588.

The character of the house and of those frequenting it may be fixed by reputation, but the fact that defendant is the keeper of such a house cannot be proven by evidence of common reputation as to his character: State v. Head, 7-411.

As to keeping of house of ill-fame being a nuisance, see § 5472 and notes.

The state may prove the bad character of the house by evidence of the bad character of the persons resorting thereto, and of the inmates thereof; but the general reputation of the house itself should be excluded: State v. Lyon, 39-379.

To charge a person with letting a house for purposes of prostitution is slander per se: Halley v. Gregg, 74-563

5325. Enticing to house of ill-fame. 4016; 20 G. A., ch. 142, § 2. If any person entice back into a life of shame any person who has heretofore been guilty of the crime of prostitution, or who shall inveigle or entice any female before reputed virtuous to a house of ill-fame, or knowingly conceal or assist or abet in concealing such female, so deluded or enticed for the purpose of prostitution or lewdness, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than three nor more than ten years. [R., § 4355; C., '51, § 2713.]

5326. Penalty for prostitution. 20 G. A., ch. 142, § 3. If any person for the purpose of prostitution or lewdness resorts to, uses, occupies or inhabits any house of ill-fame or place kept for such purpose, or if any person be found at any hotel, boarding-house, cigar store or other place leading a life of prostitution and lewdness, such person shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years.

5327. Evidence. 20 G. A., ch. 142, § 4. The state, upon the trial of any person indicted for keeping a house of ill-fame, may, for the purpose of establishing the character of the house kept by defendant, introduce evidence of the general reputation of such house as so kept, and such evidence shall be competent for such purpose.

This section is not unconstitutional as depriving accused of liberty or property without due process of law. In order to render defendant punishable it must be established not only that the house in question is a house of ill-fame, but also that it is resorted to for the purpose of prostitution or lewdness, and it is as to the character of the house that the evidence of reputation is made admissible: State v. Haberte, 72-138.

5328. Violating sepulchre and exposure of dead bodies. 4017. If any person, without lawful authority, wilfully dig up, disinter, remove or carry away any human body, or the remains thereof, from its place of interment; or aid, assist, encourage, incite or procure the same to be done or attempted; or wilfully receive, conceal, or dispose of any such human body, or the remains thereof; or if any person, with the intent to commit any of the aforesaid acts, partially performs the same; or if any person wilfully and unnecessarily, and in an improper manner, indecently expose, throw away, or abandon any human body, or the remains thereof, in any public place, or in any river, stream, pond, or other place, every such offender shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than two years, or by fine not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment. [R., § 4356; C., '51, § 2714.]

[A substitute for the original section, 18 G. A., ch. 182, § 2. The change consists in more fully specifying the acts punished and in increasing the punishment.]

Evidence that a body is disinterred during the night-time secretly, and is concealed, is evidence tending to show that it was disinterred for an unlawful purpose: State v. Pugsley, 75-742.

5329. Bodies for medical purposes. 4018; 20 G. A., ch. 195. Any coroner or undertaker, or the superintendent or managing officer of any public asylum, hospital, poor-house or penitentiary shall deliver to any medical college or school or any physician in this state for the purpose of medical and surgical study, the body or remains of any deceased person except when such body has been interred, but no such body shall be so delivered without the consent of the relatives or friends of such deceased person if any such are known, nor when such deceased person expressed a desire during his last sickness that his body should be interred. If the body of any person is so delivered and the same shall be subsequently claimed by any relative or friend of such deceased person, such body shall be given up to such relative or friend. Any person who delivers or receives any body or remains having knowledge that any of the foregoing provisions have been violated shall upon conviction thereof be punished as provided in the foregoing section. [14 G. A., ch. 82, §§ 1, 4.]

5330. Burial after dissection. 4019. The person receiving such body as contemplated in the preceding section, shall decently bury the remains thereof after such body shall have been used as aforesaid, and in case of a failure to so do such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished by fine not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars. [Same, § 2.]

5331. Record kept. 18 G. A., ch. 182, § 3. Any physician receiving the body or remains of a deceased person for the purpose of medical or surgical study; and any professor or person in charge of a medical college or school at which such body or remains are received for such purpose, shall, in a suitable book, make or cause to be made a legible record of the time when, the name and description of the person from whom, and the place where such body or remains were received, and whether or not such body or remains when so received was inclosed in any box, cask or other receptacle, and, if so inclosed, shall record a description of such box, cask or receptacle, sufficient to identify the same, together with the shipping marks or directions, if any, on same; and also a description of such body or remains, including the length, weight and sex of same, the apparent age of the person at the time of death, color of hair, or beard if any, and any and all marks or scars on such body by which same might be identified, and whether or not such body when so received was mutilated so as to prevent identification of same. And such physician, professor or person, shall keep the said record, and on demand exhibit same, as also any and all such bodies or remains of deceased persons then in his charge, for the inspection of any sheriff or his deputy: provided, such record shall not be required one year or more after such body was received. Any physician or professor or teacher in a medical college or school who uses or allows or permits others under his or her control or charge to use the body or remains of a deceased person for the purpose of medical or surgical study without the record as aforesaid having been first made; or on demand being made by the sheriff or his deputy as aforesaid, shall refuse and fail to exhibit any such record or body in his charge or under his control to such officer for his inspection, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

5332. Remains, how used. 4020. The remains of any person received as aforesaid, shall be used for the purpose of medical and surgical study alone, and in this state only, and whoever shall use such remains for any other purpose, or shall remove the same beyond the limits of this state, or in any manner traffic therein, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction, be imprisoned for a term not exceeding one year in the county jail. [14 G. A., ch. 182, § 3.]

5333. Injuring monuments, tombstones, etc. 4021. If any person wilfully destroy or injure any tomb, grave-stone, monument, or other thing placed or designated as a memorial of the dead; or any fence, railing, or other thing placed about the same; or any place inclosed for the burial of the dead; or wilfully destroy, injure or remove any tree, shrub, or plant within such inclosure, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment. [R., § 4357; C., '51, § 2715.]

5334. Obscene books, pictures, etc. 4022. If any person import, print, publish, sell, or distribute any book, pamphlet, ballad, or any printed paper containing obscene language or obscene prints, pictures, or descriptions manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth; or introduce into any family, school, or place of education; or buy, procure, receive, or have in his possession any such book, pamphlet, ballad, printed paper, picture, or description, either for the purpose of loan, sale, exhibition, or circulation; or with intent to introduce the same into any family, school, or place of education, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [R., § 4359; C., '51, § 2717.]

5335. Obscene literature; articles of immoral use. 21 G. A., ch. 177, § 1. Whoever sells, or offers for sale, or gives away, or has in his possession with intent to sell, loan, or give away, any obscene, lewd, indecent, or lascivi-ous book, pamphlet, paper, drawing, lithograph, engraving, picture, photograph, model, cast, or any instrument, or article of indecent or immoral use, or any medicine, article, or thing designed or intended for procuring abortion, or preventing conception, or advertises the same for sale, or writes or prints any letter, circular, hand-bill, card, book, pamphlet, advertisement, or notice of any kind, giving information, directly, or indirectly, when, where, how, or by what means any of the articles or things hereinbefore mentioned can be purchased or otherwise obtained or made, shall, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, nor less than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court.

5336. Circulating through the mail. 21 G. A., ch. 177, § 2. Whoever deposits in any postoffice within this state, or places in charge of any person to be carried or conveyed, any of the articles or things named in section one, of this act [§ 5335], or any circular, hand-bill, card, advertisement, book, pamphlet or notice of any kind, giving information, directly or indirectly, when, how, where, or by what means any of the articles or things mentioned in section one, of this act [§ 5335], can be purchased or obtained, or knowingly or wilfully receives the same to carry or convey, or knowingly carries or conveys the same in any manner, except in the United States mail, shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, nor less than fifty dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year, or both fined and imprisoned at the discretion of the court.

5337. Printing or publishing. 21 G. A., ch. 177, § 3. Whoever prints or publishes or causes to be printed or published in any newspaper published or circulated in this state any advertisement of medicine, drug, nostrum, or apparatus for the cure of private or venereal diseases, or shall circulate or distribute any newspaper containing such an advertisement or notice mentioned in this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, nor less than fifty dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court.

5338. Giving obscene literature to minors. 21 G. A., ch. 177, § 4. Whoever sells, lends, gives away, or shows, or has in his possession with or without intent to sell, give away, or show to any minor child, any book, pamphlet, magazine, newspaper, story paper, or other paper devoted to the publication, or principally made up of criminal news, police reports, or accounts of criminal deeds, or pictures and stories of immoral deeds, lust, or crime, or exhibits upon any street or highway, or any place within the view, or which may be within the view of any minor child, any of the above described books, papers, or pictures, or uses or employs any minor child to give away, sell, or distribute, or who, having the care, custody, or control of any minor child, permits such child to sell, give away, or distribute any such books, papers, or pictures above described, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars nor less than fifty dollars, or be imprisoned not more than six months in the county jail, or both fined and imprisoned at the discretion of the court.

5339. Warrants for search or seizure. 21 G. A., ch. 177, § 5. All magistrates and police judges in this state are authorized, on due complaint, supported by oath or affirmation, of one or more persons, to issue a warrant directed to the sheriff of the county within which such complaint shall be made, or to any constable or police officer within said county, directing him or them, or any of them, to search for, seize, and take possession of such books, papers, circulars, articles, and things named in section one of this act [§ 5335], and said magistrate or police judge shall deliver personally or shall transmit, inclosed and under seal, specimens thereof to the prosecuting attorney of his county, and shall deposit within the county jail of his county or other secure place as to him shall seem meet, inclosed and under seal, the remainder thereof, and shall, upon the conviction of the person or persons offending under the provisions of this act, forthwith, in the presence of the person or persons upon whose complaint the said seizure or arrest was made, if he or they shall elect to be present, destroy, or cause to be destroyed, the remainder thereof so seized as aforesaid, and shall cause to be entered upon the record of his court the fact of such destruction.

5340. Exceptions. 21 G. A., ch. 177, § 6. Nothing in this act shall be construed to affect teaching in regularly chartered medical colleges; or the publication or use of standard medical books, or the practice of regular practitioners of medicine, or druggists in their regular business; or the possession by artists of models in the necessary line of their art.

5341. 21 G. A., ch. 177, § 7. All acts inconsistent with this [act] are hereby repealed.

5342. Disturbing worshiping congregations or other assemblies. 4023. If any person wilfully disturb or disquiet any assembly of persons met for religious worship, by profane discourse or rude and indecent behavior, or by making a noise either within the place of worship or so near as to disturb the order and solemnity of the assembly, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. If any person or persons unlawfully or wilfully disturb or interrupt any school, school meeting, teachers' institute, lyceum, literary society, or any other lawful assembly of persons being in the peace of the state, such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [R., § 4360; C., '51, § 2718; 9 G. A., ch. 146.]

5343. Selling near camp-meeting. 4024. If any person within one mile from the place where any religious society is collected together for religious worship in any field or woodland, expose to sale or gift any spirituous or other liquors, or any article of merchandise, or any provisions or other article of traffic, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [R., § 4361; C., '51, § 2719.]

5344. Exceptions. 4025. The preceding section does not apply to tavern or grocery keepers exercising their calling or business in the places mentioned in their licenses, if they have such; nor to any distillers or manufacturers or others in the prosecution of their ordinary calling or business, so as to prevent them from vending or exposing to sale the articles above prohibited at their place of residence; nor to any person who has a written permit from the person having the charge of such religious society to sell any of such prohibited articles, on complying with the regulations of such religious assembly and with the laws of the state. [R., § 4362; C., '51, § 2720.]

5345. Keeping gambling-houses. 4026. If any person keep a house, shop, or place resorted to for the purpose of gambling; or permit or suffer any person in any house, shop, or other place under his control or care to play at cards, dice, faro, roulette, equality, or other game, for money or other thing, such offender shall be fined in a sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year, or be both fined and imprisoned. In a prosecution under this section, any person who has the charge of or attends to any such house, shop, or place, may be deemed the keeper thereof. [R., § 4363; C., '51, § 2721.]

What constitutes: To constitute gambling as here contemplated, it is not necessary that the money or "other thing" should be "put up." Playing at a game with the understanding that the loser shall pay for the drinks around, which arrangement is carried out, is sufficient: State v. Maurer, 7-406; State v. Cooster, 10-453; State v. Leicht, 17-28; State v. Bishel, 39-42.

The offense of keeping a gambling-house is as complete if the house is kept for one day as if kept for a year. It does not consist in causing or continuing a public nuisance, as contemplated in § 5472: State v. Crogan, 8-523.

It is not necessary that the place occupied be generally or habitually resorted to, if it is kept for that purpose. One act of gambling, as well as many, will complete the offense: State v. Cooster, 10-453.

An indictment against a tavern-keeper for suffering gaming in violation of statute need not state the names of the persons who played nor the sums of money for which they played, nor the property lost or won: Romp v. State, 3 G. Gr., 276.

5346. Search-warrant against. 4027. If any person make oath before a justice of the peace that he has probable cause to suspect, and does suspect that any house, building, or place, naming the house or place and the occupant, is unlawfully used as a common gaming-house, or place for the purpose of gaming for money or other property, and that persons resort to the same for that purpose, whether they be known to the complainant or not, such justice may issue his warrant for the purpose of searching such house or building for all such implements or gambling devices mentioned in the preceding section, and for the apprehension of the occupant or keeper of said house or building; and after such search, seizure, and arrest, the said implements and keeper shall be carried before such justice of the peace to be dealt with as provided by law. And any gambling device brought before the justice may be destroyed by him, and an entry thereof shall be made upon his docket. [R., § 4364; C., '51, § 2722.]

5347. Gaming and betting. 4028. If any person play at any game for any sum of money or other property of any value, or make any bet or wager for money or other property of value, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [R., § 4365; C., '51, § 2723.]

Playing at billiards or "pin-pool" with the agreement or understanding that the losing party shall pay for the game, is gambling: State v. Book, 41-550; State v. Miller, 53-154.

Whether the game played is one of skill or one of chance is immaterial under this section: State v. Miller, 53-154.

5348. Gaming contracts void. 4029. All promises, agreements, notes, bills, bonds, or other contracts, mortgages, or other securities, when the whole or any part of the consideration thereof is for money or other valuable thing won or lost, laid, staked, or bet, at or upon any game of any kind or on any wager, are absolutely void and of no effect. [R., § 4366; C., '51, § 2724.]

Wager: A wager contract based upon the result of an election is void as against public policy: David v. Ransom, 1 G. Gr., 383.

Where, in pursuance of a contract previously made between the parties to a wager, plaintiff delivered to the successful party an article and charged it to the other party to the

A charge that defendant keeps a house resorted to, sufficiently charges intent and knowledge, and still more does the charge that he permits, etc., gambling, imply knowledge: State v. Cure, 7-479.

And an indictment charging that accused, being the keeper of a house resorted to for the purpose of gambling, knowingly and unlawfully did permit, etc., held sufficient, although it would have been better to have expressly charged that the house was under the control of accused: State v. Middleton, 11-246.

The "keeping," etc., and the "permitting," etc., constitute one and the same offense, and an indictment charging them both in separate counts is not objectionable on the ground of duplicity: State v. Cooster, 10-453.

An indictment substantially charging that defendant did keep a house, etc., in which he did permit divers persons, to the jurors unknown, to play at cards, etc., for money, cigars, beer and other things, held sufficient: State v. Kaufman, 59-273.

See, further, notes to § 5347.

But playing at cards for recreation or amusement is not prohibited: State v. Leicht, 17-28.

The offering by an agricultural society of a premium to the winner at a horse-race held under its authority does not constitute an offense under this section: Delier v. Plymouth County Ag'l Society, 57-481.

wager, held, that he could not recover from the person so charged the value of the article furnished: Ibid.

But held, that a request by the party charged, and subsequent to the determination of the wager, to deliver the article to the successful party, would render him liable if delivery was made in pursuance of such request: Ibid.

Recovery of money: Money lost on a wager and paid over cannot be recovered back: Thrift v. Redman, 13-25.

Recovery from stakeholder: A party depositing money or other property with a stakeholder as a wager may recover it back before it is paid over to the winner: Shannon v. Baumer, 10-210.

An action may be maintained against a stakeholder who has paid over to the winning party money placed in his hands as a wager after he has been notified by the loser not to do so: Atkins v. Flemming, 29-122.

Where a promissory note for an amount greater than the wager was deposited with a stakeholder, and by him turned over to the winner, who appropriated it to his own use, held, that the original owner might recover from such winner the excess of the value of the note over the amount of the wager: Shaw v. Gardiner, 30-111.

A demand upon the stakeholder by one of the parties to the wager for the entire amount in his hands, on the ground that he is successful in the wager, is not a revocation of the wager so as to entitle him to recover from such stakeholder the amount deposited by him, and afterwards paid over in pursuance of the result of the wager to the opposite party: Okerson v. Crittenden, 62-297.

Action upon wagering contract: Action cannot be maintained upon a note showing upon its face that it was given in a betting transaction: Sipe v. Finarty, 6-394.

And even if the note is given upon an apparent consideration the agreement between the parties may be such as to make it clearly a wagering contract: Craig v. Andrews, 7-17.

Contracts and negotiable instruments of the character here described are void, even in the hands of an innocent purchaser, before maturity: Ibid.; Traders' Bank v. Alsop, 64-97.

Where one, in behalf of himself and others, deposited a sum as a wager, held that, in an action to recover such sum from the stakeholder, he could only recover the amount actually belonging to him, the contract being absolutely void and plaintiff having therefore no authority to sue for the others thereunder: Toney v. Snyder, 50-73.

Options: To invalidate a contract on the ground of the illegality of the transaction, as being a gambling or option contract, it must be shown that on the part of both parties the transaction was with the knowledge and purpose that no actual delivery of the property which was the subject of the sale should be made. If one of the parties acts in good faith, with the intention and expectation of delivering or receiving the property, the transaction as to him will be valid, and will be a sufficient consideration for a contract in his hands based thereon: Murry v. Ocheltree, 59-435.

Certain instructions to the effect that instruments purporting to convey the title to grain were void because they were issued to pay losses which might be suffered in the purchase of commodities, wherein it was not the purpose or intention of either of the parties that the purchase or sale should be consummated by the delivery or receipt of the article purchased or sold, but on the contrary it was the purpose of all the parties that the same should be settled by the payment of the difference between the purchase or selling price and the market price at the time of settlement, held correct: Lowe v. Young, 59-364.

The option contracts that are void are such as do not contemplate the actual delivery of the commodity purchased, but rather contemplate that the subject of the contract is not intended to be delivered: Gregory v. Wattowa, 58-711.

When the parties to an executory contract for the sale of property intend that there shall be no delivery thereof, but that the transaction shall be settled by the payment of the difference between the contract price and the market price of the commodity at the time fixed, the contract is void: First Nat. Bank v. Oskaloosa Packing Co., 66-41.

If the agent through whom the purchase is made knows that the transaction is an option contract, he cannot recover money advanced by him to one of the parties for the purpose of carrying on the transaction: Ibid.

While contracts for the sale and delivery of grain in the future, which are virtually bets in relation to the future price of grain, are of a purely gambling and criminal character, and, where their true character is known, the courts should hold them void, yet contracts for future delivery are, to some extent, a necessity, and they are as legitimate as any other, and that, too, though the parties may contemplate a possibility of settlement by the payment of differences. The real intention of the parties must determine the character of the transaction, and in arriving at the intention the court must be governed by the evidence and not by conjectures based upon its knowledge of other contracts: Tomblin v. Calten, 69-229.

A dealer in grain may sell and agree to deliver at some future time that which he has not, but which he expects to go into the market and buy: Douglas v. Smith, 74-468.

5349. Dealing in options; bucket-shops. 20 G. A., ch. 93, § 1. It shall be unlawful for any corporation, association or society, person, or persons to keep within this state any store, office or other place, wherein is conducted or permitted the pretended buying or selling of grain, pork, lard, or any mercantile or agricultural products on margins, without any intention of future delivery, whether such pretended contracts are to be performed within or without this state; and the keeping of all such places is hereby prohibited; and it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, association or society, within this state, to make or enter into any contract, or pretended contract, such as is above stated and referred to, and all such contracts are hereby prohibited; the intention of this act being to prevent and prohibit within this state the business now engaged in and conducted in places commonly known and designated as bucket-shops. Provided, however, that this act shall not apply to or in any way affect any contract for the actual buying or selling of any commodity whatever for present or future delivery, where the actual delivery or receipt of the thing sold is contemplated, and in good faith intended by either of the parties to the contract.

5350. Penalty. 20 G. A., ch. 93, § 2. Any person whether acting individually or as a member of any copartnership, corporation, association or society, guilty of violating any of the provisions of this act [§ 5349] shall upon conviction thereof be adjudged to pay a fine for each offense of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or be both fined and imprisoned at the discretion of the court.

5351. Incest. 4030. If any man marry his father's sister, mother's sister, father's widow, wife's mother, daughter, wife's daughter, son's widow, sister, son's daughter, daughter's daughter, son's son's widow, daughter's son's widow, brother's daughter or sister's daughter; or if any woman marry her father's brother, mother's brother, mother's husband, husband's father, son, husband's son, daughter's husband, brother, son's son, daughter's son, son's daughter's husband, daughter's daughter's husband, brother's son, or sister's son; or if any person being within the degrees of consanguinity or affinity in which marriages are prohibited by this section, carnally know each other, they shall be deemed guilty of incest, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary for a term not exceeding ten years and not less than one year. [R., §§ 4337-9.]

The marriage of persons sustaining to each other any of the degrees of relationship here specified is incest. Carnal knowledge in such case need not be alleged or shown: State v. Schaunhurst, 34-547.

The words brother and sister, as here used, refer to illegitimate as well as legitimate children of the same parents: Ibid.

To constitute incest the parties must have carnal knowledge of each other. A woman who is ravished cannot be said to have carnal knowledge of the man. Connection between persons within the prohibited degrees, consummated by force, is rape and not incest: State v. Thomas, 53-214.

Under a statute providing that brother and sister who, being of the age of sixteen years or upwards, should have sexual intercourse together, having a knowledge of their consanguinity, should be guilty of incest. held, that it was essential, in order to constitute the crime, that both parties be over the age specified: United States v. Hiler, Mor., 330.

Evidence: The register of marriages is sufficient evidence of the incestuous marriage (§ 3388): State v. Schaunhurst, 34-547.

Admissions and declarations of the parties are also admissible to show the fact of marriage: Ibid.

5352. Cruelty to animals. 4031. If any person torture, torment, deprive of necessary sustenance, cruelly beat, mutilate, cruelly kill, or overdrive any animal; or unnecessarily fail to provide the same with proper food, drink, shelter, or protection from the weather; or cruelly drive or work the same when unfit for labor; or cruelly abandon the same; or carry or cause the same to be carried on any vehicle, or otherwise, in an unnecessarily cruel and inhuman manner, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [R., § 4558; C., '51, § 2716; 13 G. A., ch. 176, §§ 1, 2.]

5353. By railways, when transporting. 4032. No railway company in this state, in the carrying or transportation of cattle, sheep, swine, or other animals, shall confine the same in cars for a longer period than twenty-eight consecutive hours, unless delayed by storm or other accidental cause, without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, for a period of at least five consecutive hours. In estimating such confinement, the time the animals have been confined without such rest on connecting railways from which they are received shall be computed, it being the intention of this section to prevent their con-tinous confinement beyond twenty-eight hours, except upon contingencies hereinbefore stated; and animals unloaded for rest, water, and feeding, under the provisions of this section, shall be properly fed, watered, and sheltered during such rest by the owners or persons in custody thereof, or in case of their default in so doing, then by the railway company transporting them, at the expense of said owners or persons in custody thereof, and said company shall have a lien upon such animals for food, care, and custody furnished, and shall not be liable for any detention of such animals authorized by this section. Any railway company, owner, or custodian of such animals who shall fail to comply with the provisions of this section, shall, for each and every such offense, be liable for, and forfeit and pay a penalty of not less than one hundred and not greater than five hundred dollars. But when such animals shall be carried in cars in which they shall and do have proper food, water, space, and opportunity for rest, the foregoing provisions in regard to their being unloaded shall not apply. [13 G. A., ch. 176, § 3.]

5354. Keeping cock-pits and fighting dogs, bears, etc. 4033. If any person keep or use, or in any way be connected with, or be interested in the management of, or receive money for the admission of any person to any place kept or used for the purpose of fighting or baiting any bull, bear, dog, cock, or other creature, or engage in, aid, abet, encourage, or assist in any bull, bear, dog, or cock fight, or a fight between any other creature, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. [Same, § 7.]

5371. Penalty. 18 G. A., ch. 137, § 2. For a violation of the provisions of the foregoing section, the vendor shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not less than five dollars nor exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days.

5373. Penalty. 22 G. A., ch. 79, § 2. Any person who violates any provision hereof shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor for each violation, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined for the first offense not less than twenty dollars nor more than fifty dollars, and every subsequent offense under this act shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars.

FRAUD IN CANNED FOOD.

5374. Label. 21 G. A., ch. 174, § 1. It shall hereafter be unlawful in this state for any packer of or dealer in hermetically sealed, canned or preserved fruits, vegetables, or other articles of food to knowingly offer such canned or preserved articles for sale for consumption in this state after October first, 1886, unless the cans or jars which contain the same shall bear the name, address and place of business of the person, firm or corporation that canned or packed the articles so offered, or the name of the wholesale dealer in this state who sells or offers the same for sale; together in all cases with the name of the state, city, town or village, where the same were packed, plainly printed thereon, preceded by the words "Packed at," such name, address and place of business shall be plainly printed on the label, together with a mark or term indicating clearly the grade or quality of the articles contained therein.

5376. Exemptions. 21 G. A., ch. 174, § 3. All goods packed prior to the passage of this act are exempted from the provisions of this act.

5377. Penalty; board of health. 21 G. A., ch. 174, § 4. Any packer or dealer who shall violate any of the provisions of this act [§§ 5374-5379], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars for each offense in the case of retail dealers, and in case of wholesale dealers and packers by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars for each offense. The term "packer" and "dealer," as used in this act, shall be deemed to include any firm or corporation doing business as a dealer in or packer of the articles mentioned in this act. It shall be the duty of any board of health in this state, cognizant of any violation of this act, to inform the district attorney, whose duty it shall be to institute proceedings against any person who is charged with a violation of the provisions of this act, and in case of conviction shall receive twenty-five per cent. of the fines actually collected, which shall be in addition to any salary he may now receive under the law.

CHAPTER 11.

OFFENSES AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY.

5380. Lotteries and lottery tickets. 4043. If any person make, or aid in making or establishing any lottery in this state; or advertise or make public any scheme for any such lottery; or advertise or offer for sale any ticket or part of a ticket in any lottery; or sell, negotiate, dispose of, purchase, or receive the same; or have in his possession any ticket or paper purporting to be the number of any ticket of any lottery, with intent to sell or dispose of the same on his own account or as the agent of another, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4377; C., '51, § 2730.]

The disposal of lands by a scheme in which parties were to buy tickets and draw therefor, held a lottery, and a contract of purchase thus entered into was held void: Guenther v. Dewein, 11-133.

5381. Disposing of liquors to Indians or intoxicated persons. 4044. If any person give, sell, or dispose of, any spirituous or intoxicating drinks to any Indian within this state, or to any person who is intoxicated, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4378; C., '51, § 2735.]

5382. Allowing minors in billiard-rooms, saloons, etc. 15 G. A., ch. 59, § 1. It shall be unlawful for any person who keeps a billiard-hall, beer-saloon, or nine or ten pin alley, or the agent, clerk, or servant of any such person, or any person having charge or control of any such hall, saloon, or alley, to permit any minor or minors to remain in such hall, saloon, or alley, or to take part in any of the games known as billiards, nine or ten pins.

5383. Penalty. 15 G. A., ch. 59, § 2. For a violation of the provisions of the foregoing section the offender shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not less than five dollars nor exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days.

Under this act it is the duty of saloon-keepers not only not to permit, but to prevent, minors remaining in their saloons, and the same duty is imposed on their employees. If the keeper or employee fails to take proper measures to prevent, he is to be deemed to permit it, and the liability will not depend upon the knowledge of the keeper or his employee of the fact that the person is a minor: State v. Probasco, 62-400.

5384. Selling fire-arms to minors. 20 G. A., ch. 78, § 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly sell, present or give any pistol, revolver or toy pistol to any minor.

5385. Penalty. 20 G. A., ch. 78, § 2. Any violation of this act [§§ 5384, 5385] shall be punishable by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail of not less than ten nor more than thirty days.

5386. Civil rights. 20 G. A., ch. 105, § 1. All persons within this state shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the accommodations, advantages, facilities and privileges of inns, public conveyances, barber shops, theaters and other places of amusement; subject only to the conditions and limitations established by law, and applicable alike to every person.

5387. Penalty for violating. 20 G. A., ch. 105, § 2. Any person who shall violate the foregoing section by denying to any person, except for reasons by law applicable to all persons, the full enjoyment of any of the accommodations, advantages, facilities or privileges enumerated in said section, or by aiding or inciting such denial, shall, for each offense, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

An indictment under this statute should allege not only a refusal to grant equal accommodations, but absence of any good reason therefor: State v. Hall, 72-525.

Before the enactment of this statute it was held that the refusal of the owner of a skating rink to permit any particular person, as, for instance, a person of color, to enter and enjoy the privileges of his rink, did not give rise to a cause of action in behalf of the person thus denied, although the rink was kept open as a place of public amusement, it not being shown that the business of operating it was carried on under a license or privilege granted by the state, or the municipal corporation in which it was conducted, or that it was in any manner regulated or governed by any of the police regulations of the city: Bowlin v. Lyon, 67-536.

5388. Bringing paupers into state. 4045. If any person knowingly bring within this state any pauper or poor person, with the intent of making him a charge on any of the townships or counties therein, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and stand charged with his support. [R., § 4379; C., '51, § 2736.]

5389. Transacting business without license. 4046. If any person carry on or transact any business or occupation without license therefor, when such license is required by any law of this state, he shall be fined in a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [R., § 4380; C., '51, § 2737.]

5390. Circulation of foreign bank-notes. 4047. If any person pay out, or offer to pay, or in any manner put in circulation, or offer to put in circulation, any bank-note, bill, or other instrument intended to circulate as money issued or purporting to be issued by any bank, individual, or corporation elsewhere than in this state, excepting treasury notes, notes of any bank organized under the law of the United States, any other description of currency issued by the authority of congress, or notes of the branches of the state bank of Iowa, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction before any court having jurisdiction, be fined the sum of five dollars for each note, bill, or other instrument as aforesaid so paid out or offered to be paid out, put in circulation or offered to be put in circulation. In prosecutions under this section it shall not be necessary to state in the indictment or information the name of the bank issuing the notes, nor to prove the existence of the bank or other person purporting to issue the notes; but it shall be sufficient to allege in general terms the fact of paying out, or attempting to pay out, as the case may be, of bank-notes issued out of this state; and the proof may be made as if the particulars were alleged; and any number of offenses may be included in the same prosecution, provided that where the total fines alleged shall not exceed one hundred dollars, the offense shall be cognizable and may be tried before a justice of the peace and other co ordinate jurisdictions; and when the total fines alleged exceed one hundred dollars, it shall be within the jurisdiction of the district court. [10 G. A., ch. 53.]

Under ch. 147 of Code of '51, providing a penalty for issuing any bills, etc., to be put in circulation as money, held, that a deed given to secure the issuance of such notes was void: Reynolds v. Nichols, 12-398.

[Secs. 4048, 4049, 4050 and 4051 are repealed by the following section.]

5391. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 1. Sections 4048, 4049, 4050, and 4051 of the code, chapter 69 of the public laws of the fifteenth general assembly, and chapter 122 of the laws of the sixteenth general assembly are repealed and the following enacted in lieu thereof.

5392. Killing of certain game at certain seasons punished. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 2; 18 G. A., ch. 193; 20 G. A., ch. 67. It shall be unlawful for any person within the state to shoot or kill any pinnated grouse or prairie chicken, between the first day of December and the first day of September next following; any woodcock, between the first day of January and the tenth day of July; any ruffed grouse or pheasant, wild turkey or quail, between the first day of January and the first day of October; any wild duck, goose, or brant, between the first day of May and the fifteenth day of August; or any wild deer, elk or fawn, between the first day of January and the first day of September.

5394. Trapping beaver. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 4. It shall be unlawful for any person to kill, trap, or ensnare, any beaver, mink, otter, or muskrat, between the first day of April and the first day of November, except where such killing, trapping, or snaring may be for the protection of private property.

5395. Having in possession. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 5. It shall be unlawful for any person, company, or corporation, to buy or sell, or have in possession, any of the birds or animals named in section two of this act [§ 5392] during the period when the killing of such bird or animal is prohibited by said section two, except during the first five days of such prohibited period; and the having in possession by any person, company, or corporation of any such birds or animals during such prohibited period, except during the first five days thereof, shall be deemed prima facie evidence of a violation of this act [§§ 5391-5402].

5396. Shipping out of state. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 6. It shall be unlawful for any person, company, or corporation at any time to ship, take, or carry out of this state any of the birds or animals named in section two of this act [§ 5392]; but it shall be lawful for any person to ship to any person within this state, any game birds named in said section two, not to exceed one dozen in number in any one day, during the period when by this act [§§ 5391-5402] the killing of such birds is not prohibited: Provided, he shall first make an affidavit before some person authorized to administer oaths, that said birds have not been unlawfully killed, bought, sold, or had in possession, are not being shipped for sale or profit, giving the name and postoffice address of the person to whom shipped, and the number of birds to be so shipped. A copy of such affidavit, indorsed, "A true copy of the original," by the person administering the oath, shall be furnished by him to the affiant, who shall deliver the same to the railroad agent or common carrier receiving such birds for transportation, and the same shall operate as a release to such carrier or agent from any liability in the shipment or carrying of such birds. The original affidavit shall be retained by the officer taking the same, and may be used as evidence in any prosecution for violation of this act [§§ 5391-5402]. Any person swearing falsely to any material fact of said affidavit, shall be guilty of perjury, and punished accordingly.

5397. Penalty. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 7. If any person shall kill, trap, ensnare, buy, sell, ship, or have in possession, or ship, take, or carry out of the state, contrary to the provisions of this act [§§ 5391-5402], any of the birds or animals named in this act, or shall wilfully destroy any eggs or nests of birds named in this act, shall be punished by a fine of ten dollars for each bird, beaver, mink, otter, or muskrat; twenty-five dollars for each wild deer, elk, or fawn, and ten dollars for each nest or the eggs therein, so killed, trapped, ensnared, bought, sold, shipped, had in possession, destroyed, or shipped, taken or carried out of the state, and shall stand committed to the county jail for thirty days unless such fine and costs of prosecution are sooner paid.

5398. Penalty against carrier. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 8. If any railway, express company, or other common carrier, or any of their agents or servants, knowingly receive any of the above-mentioned birds or animals for transportation or other purpose, during the periods hereinbefore limited and prohibited, or at any other time except in the manner provided in section six of this act [§ 5396], they shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

5400. Where prosecution brought. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 10. Prosecutions for violations of this act [§§ 5391-5402] may be brought either in the county in which the offense was committed or in any other county where the person, company, or corporation complained of has had or has in his or their possession any birds or animals herein named, bought, sold, killed, trapped or ensnared, in violation of any of the provisions of this act.

5401. Attorney to manage prosecution; fee. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 11. and both the fee of such attorney and the informant shall be taxed as costs in the case against the person convicted. Provided, that the county shall in no case be held liable for said attorney's fee or penalty.

5402. 17 G. A., ch. 156, § 12. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

[Secs. 4052 and 4053 are repealed by 15 G. A., ch. 50, § 10.]

5403. Obstructing passage of fish; fishing with seine or net. 15 G. A., ch. 50, § 6; 16 G. A., ch. 70, § 3. No person shall place, erect, or cause to be placed or erected, across any of the rivers, creeks, ponds, or lakes of this state, any dam, seine, weir, fish-dam, or other obstruction, in such manner as to prevent the free passage of fish up or down through such water-courses, unless otherwise ordered by the commissioner; and from and after the passage of this act [§§ 5403, 5404] it shall be unlawful for any person to use any seine or net for the purpose of catching fish, except minnows, that are natives of the waters of the state; provided, always, that it shall be lawful for the fish commissioner to take fish in any of the public waters at any time and by any method, for the purpose of propagation or for the purpose of exchanging with fish commissioners of other states or of the United States. [Provisions somewhat similar are found in §§ 2310, 2311.]

5405. Trapping fish. 4054; 15 G. A., ch. 50, § 10. Any person who shall go upon the premises of any person or corporation, whether inclosed or not, and shall be found seeking to take, by any means whatsoever, except a hook and line, any fish, shall be deemed guilty of trespass, and may be prosecuted in the name of the state of Iowa by any person in possession of said premises, before any justice of the peace, or other court of competent jurisdiction, and fined in any sum not less than five nor more than fifty dollars. [9 G. A., ch. 4, § 4; 14 G. A., ch. 54, § 3.]

5406. Spearing season. 20 G. A., ch. 9, § 1. No person shall take by spearing with a gaff, spear or other device any fish from any of the permanent lakes or ponds or outlets or inlets thereto within the state of Iowa, between the first day of November and the thirty-first day of May next following.

5407. Unlawful vending. 20 G. A., ch. 9, § 2. It shall be unlawful for any person, company, or corporation, knowingly to buy or sell, or offer for sale, or have in his or their possession, any fish which shall have been taken from any of the permanent lakes or ponds, or outlets or inlets thereto within this state by spearing with gaff, spear or other device between the first day of November and the thirty-first day of May next following. And any person who may draw from the water any game fish such as pike, bass, and the like when seining for minnows for bait, shall return the same without injury under the penalties of this act [§§ 5406-5411].

5408. Penalty. 20 G. A., ch. 9, § 3. Any person found guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of this act [§§ 5406-5411] shall upon conviction before any magistrate be fined not less than five dollars nor more than twenty dollars for the first offense, and for the second or any subsequent offense not less than twenty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and shall stand committed until such fine be paid.

5409. Place of action. 20 G. A., ch. 9, § 4. Prosecution for violations of this act [§§ 5406-5411] may be brought and maintained in any county in which offense was committed or in any county where the person, company, or corporation against whom complaint is made, has or has had or has bought or sold or offered for sale any fish which were taken by spearing in violation of this act.

5410. Prosecutor appointed; fees. 20 G. A., ch. 9, § 5. In all prosecutions under this act [§§ 5406-5411], the court before whom the same is brought, or in which it shall be prosecuted, shall appoint an attorney for the prosecution of the case, and such attorney and the person filing the information under this act shall each be entitled to a fee of five dollars for each and every conviction, which fees of such attorney and informant shall be taxed as costs in the case against the person or persons so convicted, and any fish found in the possession of any person, company or corporation in violation of the provision of this act may be seized and sold for the purpose of paying the costs in the case, but in no case under this act [§§ 5406-5411] shall any county be liable for the fees of such attorney or informant.

5411. Spearing on one's own premises. 20 G. A., ch. 9, § 6. Nothing in this act [§§ 5406-5411] shall prevent any person from taking fish of his own propagation or from waters wholly within his own land, to which there is no natural outlet through which the fish pass up or down.

5412. Bringing diseased sheep into the state. 4055. If the owner of sheep, or any person having the same in charge, knowingly import or drive into this state sheep having any contagious disease; or turn out or suffer any sheep having any contagious disease, knowing the same to be so diseased, to run at large upon any common, highway, or uninclosed lands; or sell or dispose of any sheep, knowing the same to be so diseased, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by fine in any sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [9 G. A., ch. 35, §§ 1, 2.]

A contract for the sale of sheep having contagious diseases cannot be enforced against the purchaser, even when he knew of such disease before purchasing. The statute is intended, not for the protection of the purchaser only, but of the public. Held, however, that the statute would not apply where the seller did not know that the disease with which the sheep were afflicted was contagious, and that in such case the contract could be enforced: Caldwell v. Bridal, 48-15.

5413. Bringing in diseased horses, mules, etc. 4056. If any person knowingly import or bring within this state, any horse, mule, or ass, affected by the diseases known as nasal gleet, glanders, or button-farcey, or suffer the same to run at large upon any common, highway, or uninclosed land, or use or tie the same in any public place, or off his own premises, or sell, trade, or offer for sale or trade any such horse, mule, or ass, knowing the same to be so diseased, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars; and in default of payment shall be imprisoned for any period not to exceed twelve months, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [11 G. A., ch. 10, §§ 1, 2.]

5414. Diseased horses, mules, etc., running at large. 4057. If any horse, mule, or ass, reasonably supposed to be diseased with nasal gleet, glanders, or button-farcey, be found running at large without any known owner, it shall be lawful for the finder thereof to take such horse, mule, or ass, so found, before some justice of the peace, who shall forthwith cause the same to be examined by some veterinary surgeon, or other person skilled in such diseases, and if, on examination, it is ascertained to be so diseased, it shall be lawful for such justice of the peace to order such diseased animal to be immediately destroyed and buried; and the necessary expense accruing under the provisions of this section shall be defrayed out of the county treasury. [Same, § 5.]

See § 2283.

5415. Hog cholera. 21 G. A., ch. 79, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 67. All traffic in swine which have died with the swine plague or hog cholera or from other infectious or contagious diseases within the state is hereby prohibited and it shall be unlawful for any person to haul in any vehicle or public conveyance any dead hogs which have so died or are known to be affected with such disease, upon any public road or highway or upon any inclosure other than that upon which said hogs have died. It shall also be unlawful for any person, negligently or wilfully to allow his hogs or those under his control, infested with hog cholera or other plague or contagious disease, to escape his control or run at large.

5416. Burning or burying. 21 G. A., ch. 79, § 2. Any person having in his possession swine which have died from the swine plague, hog cholera or other infectious disease shall within a reasonable time cause the same to be burned or buried to a depth of at least thirty inches so as to prevent the spread of the disease.

5417. Penalty. 21 G. A., ch. 79, § 3. Any person violating or failing to comply with any provisions of this act [§§ 5415, 5416] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by fine of not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars at the discretion of the court.

5418. Diseased cattle. 4058; 21 G. A., ch. 156, § 2. Any person or persons driving any cattle into this state, or any agent, servant, or employee of any railroad or other corporation who shall carry, transport, or ship any cattle into this state, or any railroad company, or other corporation or person who shall carry, ship or deliver any cattle into this state, or the owners, controllers, lessees, or agents or employees of any stock yards, receiving into such stock yards or in any other inclosures for the detention of cattle in transit, or shipment, or re-shipment or sale, any cattle brought or shipped in any manner into this state which at the time they were either driven, brought, shipped, or transported into this state, were in such condition as to infect with or to communicate to other cattle, pleuro-pneumonia, or splenic or Texas fever, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than three hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months, in the discretion of the court. [12 G. A., ch. 185, §§ 1, 3, 4.]

5419. Action for damages. 4059; 21 G. A., ch. 156, § 3. Any person who shall be injured or damaged by any of the acts of the persons named in section four thousand and fifty-eight [§ 5418], and which are prohibited by such section, in addition to the remedy therein provided, may bring an action at law against any such persons, agents, employees or corporations mentioned therein, and recover the actual damages sustained by the person or persons so injured, and neither said criminal proceeding nor said civil action, in any stage of the same be a bar to a conviction or to a recovery in the other. [Same, §§ 2, 4.]

The repeal and re-enactment of this section already incurred: Kemnish v. Ball, 30 Fed. Rep., 759.
without a special saving clause did not (under § 49, subd. 1) release liability for penalties

5420. Diseased hop roots or cuttings. 4060. If any person use, transplant, or cultivate, or bring into this state for the purpose of using, planting, cultivating, or selling, any hop roots, plants, or cuttings, which may be diseased in any manner, or infected with lice or vermin of any kind, or which may be brought from any state or country in which the cultivation of hops has been retarded or impaired by the presence of any disease, lice, or vermin of a contagious character, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars, and imprisoned not less than five nor more than twenty days. [12 G. A., ch. 195, §§ 1, 2.]

5421. Seizure and destruction of diseased plants. 4061. If complaint is made before a justice of the peace by one or more responsible persons, that they have good reason to believe that hop roots have been introduced into, or are being cultivated in the city or township where they reside in violation of this act, the justice before whom such complaint is made shall issue a warrant authorizing any peace officer to seize such roots, and they shall be held in charge by such officer until suit has been brought against the person or persons so offending, and the cause determined; and in case it is found that the said plants, roots, or cuttings are diseased, or are infected by lice or vermin of a contagious character, the officer before whom suit is brought will order the said roots, plants or cuttings to be burned, charging the expense of doing the same as costs upon the party owning or cultivating the roots, plants, or cuttings; and in no case will he allow them to be planted or delivered to a third party, until the fact is established that they are not infected with any vermin or disease of a contagious character. [Same, § 3.]

5422. Canada thistles. 4062. If any person or corporation, after having been notified in writing of the presence of Canada thistles on any lands owned or occupied by such person or corporation; or if any highway supervisor, after having been notified in writing of the presence of Canada thistles on the highway under his jurisdiction, shall permit such thistles or any part thereof to blossom or mature, such person, corporation, or highway supervisor, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished accordingly. [12 G. A., ch. 143; 13 G. A., ch. 177.]

5423. Killing birds. 4063; 22 G. A., ch. 103, § 3. If any person kill, trap, ensnare, or in any manner destroy any of the birds of this state, excepting birds of prey, the migratory aquatic birds, English sparrows, and those which are useful for food, and the killing of which at certain seasons of the year is now permitted by law, or in any manner destroy the eggs of such birds as are hereby intended to be protected from destruction, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than five nor more than twenty-five dollars. But persons killing birds for scientific purposes, or for preservation in museums and cabinets, shall be exempt from the penalties of this section, upon making satisfactory proof of the purposes for which they have killed any such bird or birds. [13 G. A., ch. 74.]

5424. Peace officer to file information. 22 G. A., ch. 103, § 1. It shall be the duty of every peace officer who may have knowledge of any violation of the provisions of section four thousand and sixty-three of the code [§ 5423] to immediately file an information against the person so violating said provisions before some justice of the peace having jurisdiction of said offense and to cause the arrest of such person and to immediately give the county attorney all information within his knowledge concerning such violation.

5425. Neglect of duty. 22 G. A., ch. 103, § 2. Any peace officer who may have knowledge of any violation of the provisions of said section four thousand and sixty-three [§ 5423] and shall fail and neglect to perform his duty as herein specified shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be fined not less than two nor more than ten dollars.

5426. Boxing tumbling-rods of threshing machines. 4064; 15 G. A., ch. 38. If any person run any threshing machine in this state, without having the two lengths of tumbling-rods next the machine, together with the knuckles or joints and jacks of the tumbling-rods, safely boxed and secured while the machine is running, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by fine of not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars for every day or part of a day he shall violate this section; and any person who shall, knowingly, permit either his own grain, or any that may be in his possession or under his control, to be threshed by a machine the rods, knuckles, or joints of which are not boxed in accordance with the requirements of this section, shall be liable to a like fine as that prescribed for the person running such machine, both of which fines may be recovered in an action brought before any court of competent jurisdiction. [11 G. A., ch. 135, §§ 1, 2; 12 G. A., ch. 45.]

This section does not make defendant absolutely liable. Proof of running a threshing machine not secured as here required establishes negligence, but the rule still applies that contributory negligence on the part of the person injured will defeat a recovery: Reynolds v. Hindman, 32-146.

A person injured through a violation of this provision has a right of action, and it is sufficient to allege the violation as the basis of the right to recover, and as constituting the negligence complained of: Messenger v. Pate, 42-443.

Where a contract was made for threshing to be done with a machine not boxed, etc., as here required, held, that the contract was void, and that such fact was a good defense in an action for services rendered thereunder: Dillon v. Allen, 46-299.

5427. Steam-boilers. 15 G. A., ch. 14, § 1. It shall be the duty of any person ow[n]ing or operating steam-boilers in this state to provide such boilers with steam-gauge, safety-valve, and water-gauge and keep the same in good order.

5429. Blacklisting employees. 22 G. A., ch. 57, § 1. If any person, agent, company or corporation, after having discharged any employee from his or its service shall prevent or attempt to prevent by word or writing of any kind such discharged employee from obtaining employment with any other person, company or corporation, except by furnishing in writing on request a truthful statement as to the cause of his discharge, such person, agent or corporation, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars nor less than one hundred dollars, and such person, agent, company or corporation shall be liable in penal damages to such discharged person to be recovered by civil action; but this section shall not be construed as prohibiting any person or agent of any company or corporation from informing in writing any other person, company or corporation setting forth a truthful statement of the reasons for such discharge.

5430. Same by agents. 22 G. A., ch. 57, § 2. If any railway company, any other company or partnership or corporation in this state shall authorize or allow any of its or their agents to blacklist any discharged employees or attempt by word or writing or any other means whatever to prevent such discharged employee or any employee who may have voluntarily left said company's service from obtaining employment with any other person or company except as provided for in section one hereof [§ 5429], such company or partnership shall be liable in treble damages to such employee so prevented from obtaining employment, to be recovered by him by a civil action.

CHAPTER 12.

OFFENSES AGAINST THE PUBLIC PEACE.

5431. Affray. 4065. If two or more persons voluntarily or by agreement engage in any fight, or use any blows or violence towards each other in an angry or quarrelsome manner, in any public place to the disturbance of others, they are guilty of an affray, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [R., § 4386; C., '51, § 2738.]

5432. Unlawful assembly. 4066. When three or more persons in a violent or tumultuous manner assemble together to do an unlawful act, or, when together, attempt to do an act, whether lawful or unlawful, in an unlawful, violent, or tumultuous manner to the disturbance of others, they are guilty of an unlawful assembly, and every such offender shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [R., § 4387; C., '51, § 2739.]

5433. Riot. 4067. When three or more persons together and in a violent or tumultuous manner commit an unlawful act, or together do a lawful act in an unlawful, violent, or tumultuous manner to the disturbance of others, they are guilty of a riot, and every such offender shall be punished as is provided in the preceding section. [R., § 4388; C., '51, § 2740.]

In order to constitute a riot it is necessary engaged in some physical act of violence; that the persons implicated shall be actually Scott v. United States, Mor., 142.

5434. Conviction. 4068. Any person guilty of unlawfully assembling, or of a riot, may alone be indicted and convicted thereof, but it must be alleged in the indictment and proved on the trial that three or more persons were engaged therein. [R., § 4389; C., '51, § 2741.]

5435. Exciting disturbance. 4069. If any person make or excite any disturbance in any tavern, store, or grocery, or at any election, or public meeting, or in any other place where the citizens are peaceably and lawfully assembled, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [R., § 4390; C., '51, § 2742.]

5436. Injuring houses, boats, etc. 4070. If any person or persons unlawfully or riotously assembled, pull down, injure, or destroy, or begin to pull down, injure, or destroy, any dwelling-house or other building; or destroy or attempt to injure or destroy any boat or vessel; or perpetrate any premeditated injury on the person of another, not being a felony, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, and shall also be answerable to any person injured to the full amount of the damages by him sustained, in an action at law. [R., § 4391; C., '51, § 2743.]

5437. Racing or fast driving on highways. 4071. Any person who shall be guilty of racing horses, or driving upon the public highway in a manner likely to endanger the persons or lives of others, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days.

5438. Breach of Sabbath. 4072. If any person be found on the first day of the week, commonly called Sabbath, engaged in any riot, fighting, or offering to fight, or hunting, shooting, carrying fire-arms, fishing, horse-racing, dancing, or in any manner disturbing any worshiping assembly, or private family; or in buying or selling property of any kind, or in any labor, the work of necessity and charity only excepted, every person so offending shall, on conviction, be fined in a sum not more than five dollars nor less than one dollar, to be recovered before any justice of the peace in the county where such offense is committed, and shall be committed to the jail of said county until the said fine, together with the costs of prosecution, shall be paid; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to those who conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, or to prevent persons traveling, or families emigrating, from pursuing their journey, or keepers of toll-bridges, toll-gates, and ferrymen from attending the same. [R., §§ 4392-3.]

An express or implied contract for sale of property, made on Sunday, where the parties are not embraced within the exceptions of this section, will not be enforced by the courts: Watrous v. Blair, 32-58, 61; Pike v. King, 16-49.

Vendee of property sold on Sunday may retain it without paying the price agreed upon. The law will leave the parties where it finds them: Pike v. King, 16-49; Kinney v. McDermot, 55-674.

If the contract is to pay for property bought and sold on Sunday, the plaintiff cannot recover the value aside from the contract: Pike v. King, 16-49.

A vendee obtaining possession of property under a Sunday contract may maintain replevin for such property when subsequently taken from him by the vendor by force: Kinney v. McDermot, 55-674.

The execution of a note on Sunday is within the prohibition of this section, and such note is, as against the maker, void in the hands of the payee or his assignees. And in this respect the laws of another state where the note was executed will be presumed to be the same as those of this state: Sayre v. Wheeler, 31-112; S. C., 32-559.

The burden of proving that a contract made on Sunday is within one of the exceptions of this section is upon the party claiming under the exemption, which is in the nature of a proviso: Ibid.

A note signed on Sunday, but not, in fact, delivered until Monday, is not void: Bell v. Mahin, 69-408.

The defense that a contract is void because made on Sunday must be specially pleaded: Riech v. Bolch, 68-526.

It does not follow that where the contract only is unlawful the plaintiff cannot recover upon the original consideration in a proper case: Sayre v. Wheeler, 31-112.

Though the contract be void as made on Sunday the parties may make a valid contract with reference to the same subject-matter on a subsequent week-day, and it would seem that a subsequent ratification of the Sunday contract would be binding: Harrison v. Colton, 31-16.

To amount to the ratification of a contract of lease executed on Sunday something more than mere occupation of the premises must be shown. Such occupancy might render the tenant liable under an implied promise for a quantum meruit, but not for the rent stipulated. To constitute a ratification there must be some new promise to perform the terms of the lease, or something equivalent thereto: McIntosh v. Lee, 57-356.

The admission of a debt such as will take it out of the bar of the statute of limitations is not void because made on Sunday: Ayres v. Bane, 39-518.

A party to a Sunday contract cannot set up the fact of its execution on Sunday to defeat it in the hands of one who is a good faith assignee thereof for value and without notice of the illegality: Johns v. Bailey, 45-241.

A negotiable note made on Sunday, but dated on another day, and having nothing on its face to indicate its invalidity, is not void in the hands of a bona fide holder acquiring it before maturity without notice: Clinton Nat. Bank v. Graves, 48-228.

The transferee, after maturity, without knowledge of the fact that the note bearing date on a secular day was actually executed on Sunday, may recover thereon. The defense to the note is not an equity which may be set up against one who purchases after maturity: Leightman v. Kadelska, 58-676.

An action for damages for fraud in trading a horse affected with glanders, held not maintainable where it appeared that the trade was made on Sunday: Gunderson v. Richardson, 56-56.

In an action for damages resulting from the frightening of plaintiff's horse by defendant's dog, held, that the fact that the accident happened on Sunday, while plaintiff was riding on a business errand, would not defeat his right of recovery: Schmid v. Humphrey, 48-652.

Nor will the fact that a railway train is operated in violation of the Sunday law render the railway company liable for damages accidentally occurring from the operation of such train without fault or negligence on the part of the company: Tingle v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 60-338.

CHAPTER 13.

CHEATING BY FALSE PRETENSES, GROSS FRAUDS, AND CONSPIRACY.

5439. False pretenses. 4073. If any person designedly and by false pretense, or by any privy or false token, and with intent to defraud, obtain from another any money, goods, or other property; or so obtain the signature of any person to any written instrument, the false making of which would be punished as forgery, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than seven years, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4394; C., '51, § 2744.]

What constitutes: This changes the common-law rule as to cheats, and a person may be guilty of cheating by false pretenses, consisting of representations and acts, although no false tokens are used: State v. Reidel, 26-430.

The crime of cheating by false pretenses may be committed by means of false representations. Therefore, held, that the indictment charging defendant with obtaining the signature of prosecutor to a promissory note, by means of false representations and pretenses that such note was an order for a certain number of patent churns, etc., well knowing such representations to be false, was sufficient: State v. Joaquin, 43-131.

A false promise will not sustain the charge of a crime under this section. There must be a pretense and representation, in fact, that is false, and which was relied upon by the party defrauded; but the fact that a false promise was combined with the false pretense does not take away the criminal character of the act: State v. Dove, 27-273.

So, where a party, under the pretense of having come to pay a debt, on a promise to pay the same, fraudulently procured from his creditor and got into his possession a receipt for his debt, held, that the facts constituted an offense as here contemplated: Ibid.

A person who, by falsely personating another, obtains property with intent to convert it to his own use, is guilty of larceny (§ 5212): State v. Brown, 25-561.

Where defendant was indicted for obtaining property in exchange for a lot of a certain description which he pretended to point out, but it was in fact located elsewhere than was indicated and was of no value, held, that the party to whom the lot was shown was justified in believing the lot described was located as indicated, and that it was not error to refuse to instruct the jury that it must be shown that the party to whom the representations were made exercised ordinary prudence and diligence to inform himself of the truth of the representations: State v. McConkey, 49-499.

Also held that in such case the crime would have been complete, even if it had appeared that defendant was the owner of the lot which he pointed out as that conveyed by him: Ibid.

Representations made by acts or declarations intended to induce the belief that the person making them is some one else may be sufficient to constitute the crime, although not amounting to direct representations that the party's name is that of the person whom he personates: State v. Goble, 60-447.

To constitute the crime, the person must have obtained, by means of the false pretenses, either the title to the property, or the unqualified right of possession thereof, for some length of time: State v. Anderson, 47-142.

Obtaining an indorsement of credit on a note by false pretenses, with intent to defraud, does not constitute an offense under this section: State v. Moore, 15-412.

False promises, coupled with false statements of fact, may amount to false pretenses: State v. Montgomery, 56-195.

The question is for the jury whether the false representations actually misled the person claimed to have been defrauded, and in determining that question they should take into account his age, experience, state of health, etc.: Ibid.

The jury should be told that it is necessary to prove that defendant made the false representations, knowing them to be false, and that the other party was deceived and thereby induced to act: State v. Rivers, 58-102.

Where defendant was indicted for false pretenses in procuring a bank to accept as collateral security an invalid mortgage, held, that previous and subsequent dealings with the bank might be shown as throwing light upon the intent of the defendant and the fact as to whether the cashier was in fact deceived: Ibid.

Where defendant had borrowed money on the representation that his brother was to arrive with money, coupled with the promise to use it in payment of the sum borrowed, held, that such representation and promise amounted to a pretense that he had the money: State v. Fooks, 65-196.

To support a conviction it need not appear that the false pretenses were the only inducements for giving credit or delivering property to the accused. It is sufficient if they had such effect that without their influence upon the mind of the party defrauded he would not have parted with the property or given credit: Ibid.

If the false representations are made with the design of deceiving and thereby obtaining property, and have that effect, the guilty party cannot escape on the ground of weak credulity: Ibid.

Where defendant procured property by representing that he had purchased a farm in the neighborhood, held, that the crime was committed: State v. Fooks, 65-452.

Where a buyer acquires property by reason of statements by him to the seller respecting his condition, made to induce the sale, which statements he knows to be false, it is no defense that he nevertheless intended to pay for the property: State v. Neimeier, 66-634.

In the case of obtaining a signature by false pretenses the crime is committed when the instrument is delivered, and not when the signature is obtained. The delivery of the instrument with intent to defraud is essential: State v. McGinnis, 71-685.

This crime might be committed by fraudulently procuring a mortgage from another, although the maker was not the owner of the property described therein, if the mortgage contained covenants imposing pecuniary liability on the maker: State v. Jamison, 74-613.

Indictment: In an indictment for obtaining money under false pretenses, the false pretenses should be particularly set forth: United States v. Ross, Mor., 164.

An indictment for this offense cannot be predicated upon representations which are mere matters of opinion: State v. Webb, 26-262.

An indictment charging that by means of false token and pretenses, etc., the defendant obtained the property described, held to sufficiently charge that the party to whom the pretense was made relied thereon: State v. McConkey, 49-499.

In a particular case, held, that the indictment sufficiently charged that the party defrauded parted with his property on the faith of defendant's false representations: State v. Neimeier, 66-634.

An indictment charging the obtaining by false pretenses of certain notes, designating them as property, and in a second count charging the obtaining in the same manner of the same notes, but designating them as written instruments, the false making of which would be forgery, does not charge two offenses. Such charges might be contained in the same count without rendering the indictment bad for duplicity: State v. House, 55-466.

It is not sufficient to charge in the indictment that the defendant by means of false pretenses induced another to sign a written instrument, the false making of which would be forgery; it must also be averred that he obtained from such person the instrument so signed: State v. Clark, 72-30.

The indictment must show delivery of the instrument obtained by false pretenses, but it is not necessary that any person should have been actually defrauded: State v. Jamison, 74-613.

Venue: That the false representations were made in another county will not prevent the offense being punishable in the county where the property was obtained. The latter county is the one where the offense was committed: State v. House, 55-466.

5440. Fraudulent conveyances. 4074. Any person who knowingly being a party to any conveyance, or assignment of any estate or interest in lands, goods, or things in action, or of any rents or profits arising therefrom; or being a party to any charge on such estate, interest, rents, or profits, made or created with intent to defraud prior or subsequent purchasers, or to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors or other persons; and every person who, being privy to or knowing of such fraudulent conveyance, assignment, or charge, puts the same in use as having been made in good faith, shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4395; C., '51, § 2745.]

The intention to hinder and delay creditors is the essential element in the crime here defined. An instrument such as is referred to is void: Davenport v. Cummings, 15-219.

To establish the crime, a fraudulent intent in fact, as distinguished from an intent which may be presumed in law, must be shown: Lillie v. McMullen, 52-463.

"Other persons," as here used, means some one who had, or might have, a claim of right to the property conveyed, which might be enforced at law or in equity. The intention with which a conveyance is made cannot render the act criminal, if no legal or equitable rights of others are affected thereby: Day v. Lown, 51-364.

Where the mortgagee of a mortgage executed in fraud of creditors, as contemplated in this section, seeks to recover possession of the property thereunder, the mortgagor may set up the invalidity of the mortgage as a defense: Galpin v. Galpin, 74-454

5441. Suppression of will. 4075. If any person having in his possession, or under his control, any last will and testament of any deceased person, wilfully suppress, secrete, deface, or destroy the same, or any codicil thereto belonging, with intent to injure or defraud any devisee, legatee, or other person, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than seven years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year. [R., § 4396; C., '51, § 2746.]

5442. False weights and measures. 4076. If any person with intent to defraud, use a false balance, weight, or measure, in the weighing or measuring of anything whatever that is purchased, sold, bartered, shipped, or delivered for sale or barter, or that is pledged or given in payment, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars nor less than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4397; C., '51, § 2747.]

5443. Seizure. 4077. The magistrate granting the warrant of arrest for this offense must also direct the seizure of the false weights, balances or measures; and if the party be convicted, or they are found to be false, they shall be forfeited to the county, and, after being made of the standard weight or measure, may be sold and the money arising from such sale must be paid into the county treasury. [R., § 4398; C., '51, § 2748.]

5444. Altering brands, stamps, marks, etc. 4078. If any person falsely alter any stamp, brand, or mark on any cask, package, box or bale, containing merchandise or produce, made by a public officer appointed for that purpose, in order to denote the quality, weight, or quantity of the contents thereof, with intent to defraud, he shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars and imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4399; C., '51, § 2749.]

5445. Counterfeiting mark of another. 4079. If any person counterfeit any mark, stamp or brand of another, or falsely mark any cask, package, box, or bale, as to quality or quantity, with intent to defraud, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment. [R., 4400; C., '51, § 2750.]

The fact of making and branding, with intent to deceive, without reference to whether the articles so marked or branded are to be sold or not, is sufficient to constitute the crime here defined: State v. Burge, 7-255.

5446. Fraudulently using stamped box, etc. 4080. If any person with intent to defraud, use any cask, package, box, or bale, marked, branded, or stamped by another, for the sale of merchandise or produce of an inferior quality, or less in quantity or weight than is denoted by such mark, stamp, or brand, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court. [R., § 4401; C., '51, § 2751.]

5447. Gross fraud or cheat. 4081. Every person who is convicted of any gross fraud or cheat at common law, shall be punished as provided in the preceding section. [R., § 4402; C., '51, § 2752.]

Punishment is here provided for gross frauds and cheats, and under this provision all frauds and cheats are certainly not punishable. Slanderous words charging a person with cheating, defrauding, etc., are therefore not actionable per se: Lucas v. Flinn, 35-9.

5448. Fraudulent destruction of boats, etc. 4082. If any person cast away, sink, or otherwise destroy, any raft, boat, or vessel, within any county of this state with intent to defraud any owner or insurer thereof, or the owner or insurer of any property laden on board the same, or of any part thereof, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding two thousand dollars and imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4403; C., '51, § 2753.]

5449. Fitting out for that purpose. 4083. If any person lade, equip, or fit out, or assist in lading, equipping, or fitting out, any raft, boat, or vessel, with intent that the same be cast away, burnt, sunk, or otherwise destroyed, to injure or defraud any owner or insurer thereof, or of any property laden on board the same, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4404; C., '51, § 2754.]

5450. Making false bills of lading. 4084. If any owner of any boat or vessel, or of any property laden or pretended to be laden on board the same; or if any other person concerned in the lading or fitting out such boat or vessel, make out and exhibit, or cause to be made out and exhibited, any false estimate of any goods or property laden, or pretended to be laden, on board such boat or vessel with intent to injure or defraud any insurer of such boat or vessel or property, or of any part thereof, he shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than three years. [R., § 4405; C., '51, § 2755.]

5451. Making false affidavits or protests. 4085. If any master or other officer of any boat or vessel, make, or cause to be made, any false affidavit or protest; or if any owner or other person concerned in such boat or vessel, or in the goods or property laden on board the same, procure any such false affidavit or protest to be made, or exhibit the same with intent to injure, deceive, or defraud any insurer of such boat or vessel, or of the goods or property laden on board of the same, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by fine not exceeding three thousand dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4406; C., '51, § 2756.]

5452. Conspiracy to prosecute. 4086. If two or more persons conspire or confederate together with intent, falsely and maliciously, to cause or procure another person to be indicted, or in any way impleaded or prosecuted for an offense of which he is innocent, whether such person be so impleaded, indicted, or prosecuted or not, they shall be deemed guilty of a conspiracy, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than five years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars nor less than one hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year. [R., § 4407; C., '51, § 2757.]

5453. Conspiracy in general. 4087. If any two or more persons conspire or confederate together with the fraudulent or malicious intent wrongfully to injure the person, character, business or property of another; or to do any illegal act injurious to the public trade, health, morals or police; or to the administration of public justice; or to commit any felony, they are guilty of a conspiracy, and every such offender, and every person who is convicted of a conspiracy at common law, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than three years. [R., § 4408; C., '51, § 2758.]

What constitutes: To constitute the crime of conspiracy the accused must confederate together to do either a criminal act, or an act which is not criminal by criminal means. In the latter case the acts constituting the illegal means must be specifically charged: State v. Potter, 28-554; State v. Stevens, 30-391; State v. Jones, 13-269.

In order that the object of the conspiracy may be criminal, the injury intended should appear on the face of the indictment to be a criminal one; such an injury as the statute makes an offense: State v. Stevens, 30-391.

An indictment charging conspiracy with fraudulent intent wrongfully to injure the character of prosecutrix by obtaining a divorce from her by making false charges of adultery, etc., does not charge facts sufficient to constitute conspiracy as against such prosecutrix: Ibid.

Where the conspiracy is to do a criminal act, it is sufficient if it be described by the proper name or term by which it is usually known in law: State v. Potter, 28-554; State v. Savoye, 48-562.

An indictment charging defendants with conspiracy to procure prosecutrix to go with them with a view of bringing about a sham marriage and thus causing her seduction, held sufficient to charge a conspiracy to commit a crime without charging that she was married or of previously chaste character: State v. Savoye, 48-562.

A charge that defendants conspired to "cheat and defraud," held not sufficient to charge the crime of conspiracy: State v. Jones, 13-269.

A conspiracy to take from an officer on a writ of replevin intoxicating liquors seized under information for their forfeiture is a conspiracy to do an unlawful act under § 5221, and therefore punishable: State v. Harris, 38-242.

A charge of conspiracy to injure the property of another will not be supported where it appears that the acts complained of were done in the exercise of an avowed legal right, the existence of which the testimony strongly, if not conclusively, establishes, and that they were not done as a result of a conspiracy to wrongfully injure said property: State v. Flynn, 28-26.

The combination and agreement of the parties to commit a crime may be proven by the circumstances connected with the transaction which is the subject of the accusation. In other words, conspiracy may be shown by circumstantial evidence: State v. Sterling, 34-443.

An indictment for a conspiracy to "rob and steal" is not bad as charging more than one offense. Even should the conspiracy contemplate the commission of several distinct felonies, the crime would be single: Ibid.

Where the intended act charged is not criminal, the indictment should charge with what means the act was to be done; but if the intended act charged is criminal, an indictment charging a conspiracy to commit such injury need not charge the means intended to be used: State v. Ormiston, 66-143.

While the offense of conspiracy may be complete without the commission of the overt act which the conspirators agreed to commit, and it is unnecessary to charge the commission of such act, even if committed, yet it is usual to set out the commission of the act by way of aggravation of the offense; and where the overt act is thus charged it does not follow necessarily that the indictment is designed to charge anything more than conspiracy, and if it does not appear that defendant was or was intended to be put on trial for anything but the crime of conspiracy, such indictment will not be defective as charging more than one crime: Ibid.

An allegation that defendants conspired to assault a person with intent to inflict great bodily injury charges conspiracy to assault and inflict such injury, and is not open to the objection of charging conspiracy with intent to intend: Ibid.

The crime is completed when the conspiracy is formed, and it is immaterial whether the object intended be accomplished or not: State v. Savoye, 48-562.

Acts and declarations of co-conspirators: The acts and declarations of one of two or more persons charged with a conspiracy in the commission of a crime are not admissible as against the others, unless a foundation is first laid sufficient, in the opinion of the court, to establish prima facie the fact of conspiracy, or proper to be laid before the jury to establish such fact. State v. Nash, 7-347, 384.

Where two defendants were jointly indicted for horse stealing, held, that upon the trial of one the state could prove that the other conducted a witness to the horses, for the purpose of showing when and how the horses were found, without first showing the existence of a joint purpose or conspiracy: State v. Bowers, 17-46.

Admissions of a co-conspirator, made after the common enterprise is at an end, are not admissible except against himself: State v. Arnold, 48-566.

Where several defendants were jointly indicted for murder, held, that it was error to admit against one of them declarations of co-defendants made after the commission of the crime: State v. Westfall, 49-328; State v. Smith, 54-656.

But acts and declarations of an accomplice, made while engaged with defendant in furthering, aiding and abetting a common design in the commission of a larceny, are admissible in evidence against him: State v. Hudson, 50-157.

Upon the trial of one of several co-defendants jointly indicted for burglary, held, that acts and conversations of the other defendants, tending to establish familiar relations and association of all the parties, and that they were in company at about the time of the commission of the crime, were admissible for the purpose of connecting defendant with the crime: State v. Stevens, 67-557.

5454. Pools and trusts. 22 G. A., ch. 84, § 1. If any corporation organized under the laws of this state or any other state or country for transacting or conducting any kind of business in this state, or any partnership or individual shall create, enter into, become a member of or a party to any pool, trust, agreement, combination or confederation with any other corporation, partnership or individual to regulate or fix the price of oil, lumber, coal, grain, flour, provisions or any other commodity or article whatever; or shall create, enter into, become a member of or a party to any pool, agreement, combination or confederation to fix or limit the amount or quantity of any commodity or article to be manufactured, mined, produced, or sold in this state, shall be deemed guilty of a conspiracy to defraud, and be subject to indictment and punishment as provided in the next section.

5455. Penalty. 22 G. A., ch. 84, § 2. Any person or corporation found guilty of a violation of this act [§ 5454] shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor to exceed five thousand dollars, and stand committed until such fine paid.

5456. Witnesses. 22 G. A., ch. 84, § 3. Upon the trial of an indictment against a corporation or a copartnership for a violation of the first section of this act [§ 5454], all officers and agents of such corporation or copartnership shall be competent witnesses against the defendant on trial and such officers and agents may be compelled to testify against such defendant and produce all books and papers in his custody or under his control pertinent to the issue in such trial, and shall not be excused from answering any such question, or from producing any books and papers because the same might tend to criminate such witness; but nothing which such witness shall testify to, and no books or papers produced by him shall in any manner be used against him in any suit, civil or criminal, to which he is a party.

5457. 22 G. A., ch. 84, § 4. All acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

5458. False warehouse receipts. 4088. If any person issue any receipt or voucher, stating or purporting to state the receipt by him from another, of any property for storage or safe keeping without having in good faith received, and at the time having in his possession or under his control, such property; or issue any second receipt or voucher for any property while his former receipt or voucher for the same, or any part thereof, shall be outstanding and uncanceled; or sell, incumber, transfer, ship, or in any manner remove beyond his immediate control, any property for which a receipt or voucher has been given by him as aforesaid, in violation of the terms of such receipt or voucher, without the written consent of the person holding such receipt or voucher, except to enforce his lien for storage and warehouse charges as provided by law; or sell, transfer, or dispose of any receipt or voucher, given or purporting to have been given by any person for property in store, knowing that such person has not in his possession such property or any part thereof, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisonment in the penitentiary of this state not exceeding five years. [9 G. A., ch. 84.]

It is not competent for a defendant charged with crime under this section to show that the shipment or disposal of the property was with the knowledge or verbal consent of the person holding the receipt. The provision is intended for the protection of the community as well: State v. Stevenson, 52-701.

5459. Swindling in sale of grain or seed. 22 G. A., ch. 78, § 1. Whoever, either for his own benefit or as the agent of any corporation, company, association or person, obtains from any other person anything of value, or procures the signature of any such person, as maker, indorser, guarantor or surety thereon, to any bond, bill, receipt, promissory note, draft, check, or any other evidence of indebtedness, as the whole or part consideration of any bond, contract or promise given the vendee of any grain, seed or cereals binding the vendor or any other person, corporation, company, association, or the agent thereof, to sell for such vendee any grain, seed or cereals at a fictitious price, or at a price equal to or more than four times the market price of such grain, seed or cereals; and whoever sells, barter or disposes of, or offers to sell, barter or dispose of, either for his own benefit or as the agent of any corporation, company, association or person, any bond, bill, receipt, promissory note, draft, check, or other evidence of indebtedness, knowing the same to have been obtained as the whole or part consideration for any bond, contract or promise given the vendee of any grain, seed or cereals binding the vendor or any other person, corporation, company, association, or the agent thereof, to sell for such vendee any grain, seed or cereals at a fictitious price, or at a price equal to or more than four times the market price of such grain, seed or cereals, shall on conviction thereof be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than three years, or be fined in the sum of not more than five hundred dollars nor less than one hundred dollars, or both, at the discretion of the court.

5460. Weight of flour. 22 G. A., ch. 80, § 1. In all cases where flour, meal, and other mill products, are sold by the sack or package purporting to weigh a certain number of pounds, the weight of such sack, or package shall be plainly marked, or stamped thereon. And if any such sack or package sold, shall weigh less than the amount marked thereon, the person so selling the same, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than five dollars, or more than twenty-five dollars, in the discretion of the court.

5461. Unlawfully wearing badge. 22 G. A., ch. 104, § 1. Any person who shall wilfully wear the badge or button of the Grand Army of the Republic or the insignia or rosette of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, or use the same to obtain aid or assistance within this state, unless he shall be entitled to wear the same under the rules and regulations or constitution of such organizations, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not to exceed thirty days, or a fine not to exceed twenty dollars.

5462. Swindling by three-card-monte. 16 G. A., ch. 102, § 1. Whoever by the means of three-card-monte, so called, or any other form or device, sleight of hand, or other means whatever, by use of cards or instruments of like character, obtains from another person any money or other property of any description, shall be deemed guilty of the crime of swindling, and shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not less than two hundred dollars nor more than two thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two years nor more than five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. All persons aiding, encouraging, advising or confederating with, or knowingly harboring or concealing, any such person or persons, or in any manner being accessory to the commission of the above described offense, or confederating together for the purpose of playing such games, shall be deemed principals therein, and punished accordingly.

This act embraces any "sleight-of-hand" performance, whether done by the use of cards or other devices: State v. Quinn, 47-368.

5463. Jurisdiction of offense. 16 G. A., ch. 102, § 2. The jurisdiction of all the offenses described in section one of this act [§ 5462] which shall be committed on any railroad car, coach, train, boat, or other public conveyance, or in or at any railroad station or depot, shall be in any county through which said car, coach, train, boat, or other public conveyance may pass during the trip or voyage, or in which the trip or voyage may begin or terminate, and in all other cases the jurisdiction shall be in the county in which the offense is committed.

5464. Who may make arrest. 16 G. A., ch. 102, § 3. Every person shall possess the power and authority, and it shall be the duty of every conductor, or other employee on any railroad, car or train, and of every captain, clerk or other employee on any boat, or station agent at any railway depot, or the officers of any fairs or fair grounds, and the proprietors of any place of public resort, and their employees, with or without warrant, to arrest any person or persons whom they or either of them shall find in the act of committing any of the offenses mentioned in the first section of this act [§ 5462], or any person or persons, whom he or they may have good reason to believe to have been guilty of the commission of the said offenses, and to take such person or persons before a magistrate in any county where jurisdiction to try said offenses exists by virtue of this act [§§ 5462-5467], and deliver such person or persons so arrested to the magistrate, and make written complaints under oath of the facts. And for executing the powers conferred by this section, the person making the arrest shall possess the same powers in all respects as are exercised by officers with warrants, including the power to summon assistance; and it shall be the duty of the person making such arrest to also arrest the person injured or defrauded by reason of the commission of any of the offenses mentioned in section one of this act [§ 5462], and take such person before the examining magistrate, who shall require such person to give security to appear and testify on the trial of the cause, and such person or persons shall not be deemed to be guilty of the offense mentioned in section one of this act [§ 5462], nor of the offense of gambling, unless such person or persons shall have failed to appear and give evidence on the trial. And the persons performing the services required by this act shall receive the same compensation as sheriffs receive for like services.

5465. Duty of conductor, captain, etc. 16 G. A., ch. 102, § 4. It shall be the duty of any conductor, captain, hotel or saloon-keeper, proprietor or manager of any public conveyance or place of public resort, and the officers of any fair or fair grounds, to eject from his car, train, boat, hotel, saloon, public conveyance, fair grounds or place of public resort, any person known to him or whom he has good reason to believe to be a three-card-monte-man, or who offers to wager or bet money or other valuable things upon what is commonly known as three-card-monte, or bet on any trick, or game with cards or other gaming device, and for such ejection no action for damage shall be maintained. And any parties operating any public conveyance by which passengers are carried shall keep posted up a copy of this law in such conveyance.

5466. Conductor, captain, etc., to be deemed guilty. 16 G. A., ch. 102, § 5. Any conductor of a railroad train, captain of any steamboat, proprietor or manager of any public conveyance, officer of any fair or fair grounds, or place of public resort, any hotel or saloon-keeper or their agent or employee, who shall fail, neglect or refuse to perform the duties herein mentioned, or who shall knowingly suffer or permit a violation of this act [§§ 5462-5467], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and the jurisdiction of such offense shall be the same as that provided in section two of this act [§ 5463].

5467. Evidence. 16 G. A., ch. 102, § 6. Any person may be convicted for violation of section number one of this act [§ 5462], on his own confession out of court, or upon the testimony of an accomplice.

5468. Frauds upon hotel-keepers. 18 G. A., ch. 76, § 1. Any person who shall obtain food, lodging, or other accommodation at any hotel, inn, boarding or eating-house, with intent to defraud the owner or keeper thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding thirty days.

5469. Evidence. 18 G. A., ch. 76, § 2. Proof that lodging, food, or other accommodation was obtained by false pretense, or by false or fictitious show or pretense of baggage, or that the party refused or neglected to pay for such food, lodging or other accommodation on demand, or that he absconded or left the premises without paying or offering to pay for such food, lodging or other accommodation, or that he surreptitiously removed, or attempted to remove, his baggage, shall be prima facie proof of the fraudulent intent mentioned in section one of this act [§ 5468]; but this act shall not apply to regular boarders, nor when there has been an agreement for delay in payment.

CHAPTER 14.

NUISANCES, AND ABATEMENT THEREOF.

5470. What deemed nuisances. 4089. The erecting, continuing, or using any building or other place for the exercise of any trade, employment, or manufacture, which by occasioning noxious exhalations, offensive smells, or other annoyances, becomes injurious and dangerous to the health, comfort, or property of individuals or the public, the causing or suffering any offal, filth, or noisome substance to be collected or to remain in any place to the prejudice of others; the obstructing or impeding without legal authority the passage of any navigable river, harbor, or collection of water; or the corrupting or rendering unwholesome or impure the water of any river, stream, or pond; or unlawfully diverting the same from its natural course or state to the injury or prejudice of others; and the obstructing or incumbering by fences, buildings or otherwise, the public highways, private ways, streets, alleys, commons, landing-places, or burying grounds, are nuisances. [R., § 4409; C., '51, § 2759.]

What constitutes: While each of the acts enumerated is declared to be a nuisance, it is not declared in express terms which of them, or whether any of them, is a common nuisance under § 5473. They are public or private, as they tend to the public injury or only to the injury of private individuals: State v. Close, 35-570.

The close proximity of such a nuisance to a public highway, thus affecting those passing, would constitute it a public nuisance; so would causing the water of a mill-dam to become corrupt and to overflow, thus rendering the adjoining land marshy, etc., whereby the air should become corrupted and infected, etc.: Ibid.

Platform scales erected in a public street for private business may be ordered removed: Emerson v. Babcock, 66-257.

Shade trees at the side of the highway, which would not interfere with the traveled track if confined to the center of the highway, should be permitted to stand: Quinton v. Burton, 61-71. And see § 1503 and notes.

As to power of municipal corporation to abate nuisances, see § 615.

A party obstructing a highway by a fence or otherwise may be punished under this section, although the road supervisor might, under § 1507, have a right to remove the obstruction: State v. Berry, 12-58.

See further as to the obstruction of highways, § 5287, and cases there cited.

As to use of building for sale of intoxicating liquors, see § 2384 and notes.

Public benefit no defense: A defendant indicted for nuisance will not be permitted to show that the public benefit resulting from his act is equal to the public inconvenience arising from it: State v. Kaster, 35-221.

Evidence of offense not charged: Under an indictment charging the use of premises for the keeping of hogs, etc., occasioning noxious exhalations, offensive smells, etc., held, that evidence of noise made by the animals at night, annoying persons living in the vicinity, was receivable as part of the facts connected with the nuisance, although such disturbance could not be proved under the allegation of "other nuisances" specified in the indictment: Ibid.

The punishment provided in § 5473 is applicable to public as well as private nuisances embraced within the definition of this section: Ibid.

Abatement: A petition asking the abatement of a nuisance should be definite enough to enable the court to identify with certainty the obstruction to be removed: Sloan v. Rebman, 66-81.

Where it was shown that the nuisance was occasioned by the keeping of hogs within certain pens, held, that it was not proper in the abating of such nuisance to require the removal of lumber and materials composing the fence around such pens: State v. Kaster, 35-221.

The statutory provisions for the abatement of the nuisance do not take away the common-law right of the person injured by the erection of a mill-dam from abating it as a private nuisance: State v. Moffett, 1 G. Gr., 247.

5471. Manufacture of gunpowder. 4090. If any person carry on the business of manufacturing gunpowder, or of mixing or grinding the composition therefor, in any building within eighty rods of any valuable building erected at the time when such business may be commenced, the building in which such business is thus carried on is a public nuisance, and such person is liable to be prosecuted accordingly. [R., § 4410; C., '51, § 2760.]

5472. Houses of ill-fame, gambling, etc. 4091. Houses of ill-fame kept for the purpose of prostitution and lewdness, gambling-houses, or houses where drunkenness, quarreling, fighting, or breaches of the peace are carried on or permitted, to the disturbance of others, are nuisances, and may be abated and punished as provided in this chapter. [R., § 4411; C., '51, § 2761.]

"To the disturbance of others" is the feature of the offense of keeping a house of ill-fame, as here described, which distinguishes it from that defined by § 5323: State v. Alderman, 40-375; State v. Odell, 42-75.

Failure to use the words "to the disturbance of others" in charging the keeping of a house where drunkenness, etc., are carried on, renders the indictment bad, but does not make it an indictment for an offense under § 5345: State v. Dean, 44-648.

Although the quarreling, fighting, etc., occur on the sidewalk in front of, and not in, the house of defendant, yet if it is the character of the house which attracts the disorderly persons there, the defendant is guilty of keeping a nuisance: State v. Webb, 25-235.

Where defendant, at a farm house, kept and sold wine which was not drunk upon the premises by those buying it, but upon the highway a half mile or more from the house, resulting in riotous conduct, etc., held, that he was not guilty of an offense under this section: State v. Dieffenbach, 47-638.

A boat may be within the meaning of the term "house of ill-fame" as here used: State v. Mullen, 35-199.

An indictment charging all these offenses as constituting a nuisance does not charge more than one offense: State v. Spurbeck, 44-667.

So, an indictment charging the doing of acts prohibited in this section, and also acts declared to be a nuisance in connection with the sale of intoxicating liquors, is not bad for duplicity. Such acts committed at one time constitute but one nuisance, and could not be the basis of separate indictments: State v. Dean, 44-648.

A defendant may be convicted of keeping a nuisance on proof that he kept a place described in the indictment as a brewery and saloon where drinking, quarreling, fighting and breaches of the peace were carried on and by the defendant permitted to be carried on, to the disturbance of others, although there is no recurrence of such acts, and this even though the indictment charges such acts as occurring on more than one occasion: State v. Pierce, 65-85.

The prosecution may show that drinking, quarreling, etc., occurred at the place, but without the building, if they occurred by defendant's permission or where occasioned by the business which he carried on in the building: Ibid.

Evidence is admissible to show that the actions and appearance of persons immediately after going from the place indicated that they were intoxicated: Ibid.

A person is drunk in the legal sense within the meaning of the statute when he is so far under the influence of intoxicating liquors that his passions are visibly excited or his judgment impaired: Ibid.

Intoxicating liquors: A person keeping intoxicating liquors for sale for a proper purpose will not be guilty of the crime of nuisance on account of unlawful sales made by a clerk without his knowledge or authority: State v. Hayes, 67-27.

As the so-called prohibitory amendment submitted to the people by the nineteenth general assembly was not properly submitted, the act of selling beer which was therein prohibited did not become a nuisance within the general terms of the statute describing that offense: State v. Johnson, 61-504.

See further as to use of building for sale of intoxicating liquors, § 2384 and notes.

5473. Punishment and abatement. 4092. Whoever is convicted of erecting, causing, or continuing a public or common nuisance as described in this chapter, or at common law when the same has not been modified or repealed by statute, where no other punishment therefor is specially provided, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and the court, with or without such fine, may order such nuisance to be abated, and issue a warrant as hereinafter provided. [R., § 4412; C., '51, § 2762.]

The punishment here provided for the crime of nuisance is also to be applied to a person found guilty of that offense under § 2384 (keeping a building, etc., where intoxicating liquors are sold contrary to law): State v. McGrew, 11-112; State v. Collins, 11-141; State v. Schilling, 14-455; State v. Little, 42-51, 54; State v. Dean, 44-648.

The nuisance may be single, though all the various acts constituting it under the last section are charged: State v. Spurbeck, 44-667; and so an indictment charging the doing of the acts prohibited in § 2384 and § 5473 is not bad for duplicity. Such acts committed at one time constitute but one nuisance, and defendant cannot be convicted of separate nuisances for acts committed under those two sections at the same time: State v. Dean, 44-648.

The court may order a defendant fined under this section to be imprisoned until the fine is paid in accordance with the provisions of § 5894, or imprisoned at hard labor under § 6136: State v. Jordan, 39-387; State v. Anwerda, 40-151.

The punishment here provided is applicable to public as well as private nuisances embraced within the definition of § 5470: State v. Kaster, 35-221.

5474. Process. 4093. When upon indictment, complaint, or action, any person is adjudged guilty of a nuisance, the court before whom such conviction is had, may, in addition to the fine imposed, if any, or to the judgment for damages or costs for which a separate execution may issue, order that such nuisance be abated or removed at the expense of the defendant, and after inquiry into and estimating as nearly as may be the sum necessary to defray the expenses of such abatement, the court may issue a warrant therefor. [R., § 4413; C., '51, § 2763.]

Where the nuisance to be abated was a boat on the Mississippi river, anchored east of the middle of the channel, held, that as the Iowa court had jurisdiction, under § 3, to arrest an offender and punish an offense committed thereon, it also had power to order such boat seized and sold in case it was found to be a nuisance: State v. Mullen, 35-199.

Where it was shown that the nuisance was occasioned by the keeping of hogs within certain pens, held, that it was not proper in the abating of such nuisance to require the removal of lumber and materials composing the fence around such pens: State v. Kaster, 35-221.

A petition asking the abatement of a nuisance should be definite enough to enable the court to identify with certainty the obstruction to be removed: Sloan v. Rebman, 66-81.

The statutory provisions for the abatement of the nuisance do not take away the common-law right of the person injured by the erection of a mill-dam from abating it as a private nuisance: State v. Moffett, 1 G. Gr., 247.

5475. Warrant. 4094. When the conviction is had upon an action before a justice of the peace and no appeal is taken, the justice, after estimating as aforesaid the sum necessary to defray the expenses of removing or abating the nuisance, may issue a like warrant. [R., § 4414; C., '51, § 2764.]

5476. Execution of stayed. 4095. Instead of issuing such warrant, the court or justice may order the same to be stayed upon motion of the defendant, and upon his entering into an undertaking in such sum and with such surety as the court or justice may direct, to the state, conditioned either that the defendant will discontinue said nuisance, or that within a time limited by the court and not exceeding six months, he will cause the same to be abated and removed as either is directed by the court; and upon his default to perform the condition of his undertaking, the same shall be forfeited and the court in term time or vacation, or justice of the peace, as the case may be, upon being satisfied of such default, may order such warrant forthwith to issue, and a scire facias on such undertaking. [R., § 4415; C., '51, § 2765.]

5477. Expenses. 4096. The expense of abating a nuisance by virtue of a warrant can be collected by the officer in the same manner as damages and costs are collected on execution, except that the materials of any buildings, fences, or other things, that may be removed as a nuisance, may be first levied upon and sold by the officer, and if any of the proceeds remain after satisfying the expense of the removal, such balance must be paid by the officer to the defendant or to the owner of the property levied upon, and if said proceeds are not sufficient to pay such expenses, the officer must collect the residue thereof. [R., § 4416; C., '51, § 2766.]

CHAPTER 15.

OF LIBEL.

5478. Definition. 4097. A libel is the malicious defamation of a person made public by any printing, writing, sign, picture, representation, or effigy, tending to provoke him to wrath or expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or to deprive him of the benefits of public confidence and social intercourse; or any malicious defamation made public as aforesaid, designed to blacken and vilify the memory of one who is dead, and tending to scandalize or provoke his surviving relatives or friends. [R., § 4417; C., '51, § 2767.]

A petition in a civil action for damages for what would be a libel under this section is sufficient, though the alleged libel does not charge plaintiff with a public offense. The plaintiff will be entitled to recover at least nominal damages, though no special damages be alleged. The publications which the law regards are actionable per se: Call v. Larabee, 60-212.

In case of libel it is not necessary that the publication should charge plaintiff with the commission of a statutory crime, and it is not necessary to plead special damages: Halley v. Gregg, 74-563.

5479. Punishment. 4098. Every person who makes, composes, dictates, or procures the same to be done; or who wilfully publishes or circulates such libel; or in any way knowingly or wilfully aids or assists in making, publishing, or circulating the same, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [R., § 4418; C., '51, § 2768.]

5480. Truth given in evidence. 4099. In all prosecutions or indictments for libel, the truth thereof may be given in evidence to the jury, and if it appear to them that the matter charged as libelous was true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the defendant shall be acquitted. [R., § 4419; C., '51, § 2769.]

See Const., art. 1, § 7.

5481. Publication. 4100. No printing, writing, or other thing is a libel unless there has been a publication thereof. [R., § 4420; C., '51, § 2770.]

5482. Definition of. 4101. The delivering, selling, reading, or otherwise communicating a libel; or causing the same to be delivered, sold, read, or otherwise communicated to one or more persons or to the party libeled, is a publication thereof. [R., § 4421; C., '51, § 2771.]

5483. Law and fact. 4102. In all indictments or prosecutions for libel, the jury, after having received the direction of the court, shall have the right to determine at their discretion the law and the fact. [R., § 4422; C., '51, § 2772.]

The "direction of the court" means instructions by the court. This section applies only in criminal prosecutions for libel, not in actions for damages: Forshee v. Abrams, 2-571.

Similar provision, see § 5823.

Although the jury determine both the law and the facts, yet the court has the right to instruct the jury in this as well as other criminal cases, and the conclusive presumption is that the jury will follow the instructions of the court. Therefore an erroneous instruction of the court in such case will be regarded as prejudicial and a ground for reversal, as in other cases: State v. Rice, 56-431.

TITLE XXV.

OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF PUBLIC OFFENSES.

5484. Division of. 4103. Public offenses are divided into:

1. Felonies;
2. Misdemeanors. [R., § 4428; C., '51, § 2816.]

5485. Felony. 4104. A felony is a public offense which is, or in the discretion of the court may be, punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary. [R., § 4429; C., '51, § 2817.]

5486. Misdemeanor. 4105. Every other public offense is a misdemeanor. [R., § 4430; C., '51, § 2818.]

5487. How punishable. 4106. No person can be punished for a public offense except upon legal conviction in a court having jurisdiction thereof. [R., § 4431; C., '51, § 2819.]

5488. All offenses bailable except. 4107. All defendants are bailable both before and after conviction, by sufficient surety, except for offenses heretofore punishable with death under the laws of the state, where the proof is evident, or the presumption great.

Where a bail bond recited that defendant was charged with "feloniously killing two persons," held that, as the offense was not necessarily punishable with death, the bond was not void under § 3211 of Code of '51 (since repealed): State v. Klingman, 14-404.

The fact that defendant is charged with an offense punishable with death will not justify a magistrate in refusing bail, if the proof is slight, or that which is offered tends to show that it was an offense committed under mitigating circumstances and would not be punishable with death: Ibid.

A defendant examined by a magistrate upon charge of murder in the second degree committed in another state is entitled to bail, notwithstanding the language of § 5561: State v. Hufford, 23-579.

See Const., art. 1, § 12.

And in general as to bail, see § 5971 et seq.

5489. Defendant convicted of murder. 17 G. A., ch. 103, § 1. No defendant convicted of murder shall be admitted to bail.

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE TERM MAGISTRATE, AND HIS POWERS, PEACE OFFICERS AND OFFICERS OF JUSTICE, AND COMPLAINTS.

5490. Magistrates; duties. 4108. Any judge of the supreme, district, [or circuit] courts, any judge of any city court, any justice of the peace, any mayor of any incorporated city or town, any police, or other special justice of such city, or town, shall have power to hear complaints and preliminary informations, to issue warrants, order arrests, require security to keep the peace, make commitments and take bail in the manner directed by this code. They are designated under the general term magistrate, and may exercise the jurisdiction hereby conferred on them as follows:

1. Judges of the supreme, district, [and circuit] courts throughout the state, in any county in which they may be at the time of complaint made;

2. Judges of city courts, justices of the peace, mayors of incorporated cities and towns, and police and other special justices of such cities and towns, within their respective counties. [R., §§ 4439, 4447; C., '51, §§ 2823, 2778.]

[Judges of superior courts are magistrates: See § 781.]

5491. Peace officers. 4109. The following persons respectively are designated in this code under the general term, peace officer:

1. Sheriffs and their deputies;
2. Constables;
3. Marshals and policemen of incorporated cities and towns. [R., § 4440; C., '51, § 2830.]

A special constable appointed by a justice of the peace under the provisions of § 4880 is not a peace officer: Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

The marshal is a peace officer and may therefore arrest a person guilty of vagrancy and serve the order of a justice of the peace committing such person to imprisonment, and hold the prisoner under such order: State v. Watson, 66-670.

5492. Officers of justice. 4110. Magistrates and peace officers are sometimes designated by the term, officers of justice. [R., § 4441.]

5493. Information defined. 4111. Complaint of preliminary information is a statement in writing, under oath or affirmation made before a magistrate, of the commission, or threatened commission, of a public offense and accusing some one thereof. [R., § 4530; C., '51, § 2822.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF THE PREVENTION OF PUBLIC OFFENSES BY THE RESISTANCE OF THE PARTY ABOUT TO BE INJURED AND OTHERS.

5494. Who may resist. 4112. Lawful resistance to the commission of a public offense may be made by the party about to be injured; or by others. [R., § 4442.]

5495. In what cases. 4113. Resistance sufficient to prevent the offense may be made by the party about to be injured:

1. To prevent an offense against his person;
2. To prevent an illegal attempt by force to take or injure property in his lawful possession. [R., § 4443.]

The nature of the resistance must, however, have regard to the nature of the offense to be committed. The common-law rule that the party is only justified in using a deadly weapon in a deadly manner, in self-defense, when it appears that he is in imminent peril of death or great bodily harm (see State v. Thompson, 9-188), is not changed by this section: State v. Kennedy, 20-569.

5496. Any person may aid another. 4114. Any other person, in aid or defense of the person about to be injured, may make resistance sufficient to prevent the offense. [R., § 4444.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF SECURITY TO KEEP THE PEACE.

5497. Public offense threatened. 4115. Whenever complaint is made before a magistrate, that any person has threatened to commit any public offense punishable by the laws of this state, and such magistrate is satisfied that there is reason to fear the commission of such offense, he may issue a warrant for the arrest of the person complained of; and the officer to whom the same shall be delivered for service, shall forthwith arrest and bring the accused before such magistrate; or, in case of his absence or inability to act, before the nearest and most accessible magistrate of the same county. When the name of the person complained of is unknown, he may be designated in the warrant by any name, and the warrant issued in pursuance hereof may be executed by any peace officer in any county of the state; provided, that when issued by a magistrate other than a judge of the supreme, district, [or circuit] courts, it cannot be served in any county other than that in which it is issued, unless authenticated as is required in case of a warrant of arrest issued on a preliminary information. [R., §§ 4447-54.]

[There is no provision for authentication such as is contemplated in the last of the section: See § 5574.]

5498. Proceedings before magistrate. 4116. When the person arrested is taken before a magistrate other than the one who issued the warrant, the peace officer who executed the same, and who has charge of the person arrested, must, at the same time, deliver to the magistrate before whom the person arrested is taken, the warrant with his return indorsed and subscribed by him, and the complaint and other affidavits, if any, on which the warrant was issued, must be sent to the magistrate before whom the person arrested is taken, and if they cannot be procured, the complainant and his witnesses, if any, must be subpoenaed, if necessary, by the magistrate before whom the person arrested is taken, to appear before him and make a new complaint and affidavits. [R., § 4455.]

5499. Examination. 4117; 17 G. A., ch. 35. When the person complained of is brought before the magistrate, if the charge be controverted, the magistrate must take testimony in relation thereto; and a change of venue may be had as in preliminary examinations. The evidence must be reduced to writing and subscribed by the witnesses. [R., § 4456.]

A failure of the justice to reduce the examination to writing is no ground for dismissing the proceeding when brought into the district court: Gribble v. State, 3-217.

5500. Discharge ordered; costs. 4118. If it appear that there is no just reason to fear the commission of the offense alleged to have been threatened, the person complained of must be discharged, and the complainant may be ordered to pay the costs of the proceeding if the magistrate regards the complaint as unfounded and frivolous, and, unless when the proceeding is before a judge of the supreme, district, [or circuit] court, may issue execution therefor, and when the proceeding is before a judge of the supreme, district, [or circuit] court, he shall transmit the complaint, affidavits, warrant, and order, to the clerk of the district court of the county, who shall file the same, make a memorandum thereof in the judgment docket, and issue execution therefor immediately. [R., § 4457.]

Whether or not there is any right of appeal from an order taxing the costs to complainant, quære; but a motion to retax the costs made before a justice of the peace, the successor of the one by whom such taxation was made, not filed until three years after the order taxing the costs, held properly overruled: State v. Rogers, 58-644.

5501. Defendants bound over. 4119. If there be just reason to fear the commission of the offense the person complained of shall be required to enter into an undertaking in such sum as the magistrate may direct, with one or more sufficient sureties, to abide the order of the district court of the county at the next term thereof, and in the meantime to keep the peace towards the people of this state, and particularly towards the person against whom, or whose property, there is reason to fear the offense may be committed. [R., § 4458.]

Threats of violence to another may be ground to bind over to keep the peace, although coupled with a condition which includes the performance of a professional duty: Ritchey v. Davis, 11-124.

5502. Committed to jail. 4120. If the undertaking required by the last section be given, the party complained of must be discharged. If he do not give it, the magistrate must commit him to prison, specifying in the warrant the requirements to give security, the amount thereof, and the omission to give the same. [R., § 4459.]

5503. Discharged. 4121. If the person complained of be committed for not giving an undertaking, he may be discharged by a magistrate upon giving the same. [R., §§ 4460, 4464.]

5504. Disposition of papers. 4122. The undertaking, together with the complaint, affidavits, if any, and other papers in the proceeding, must be returned by the magistrate to the district court of the county by the first day of the next term thereof. [R., § 4461.]

5505. Assault in presence of court or magistrate. 4123. Any person who, in the presence of a court or magistrate, shall assault or threaten to assault another, or to commit an offense against the person or property of another, or contends with another with angry words, may be ordered, without the process, to enter into an undertaking to keep the peace for a period of time not exceeding beyond the next term of the district court of the county as hereinbefore provided, and in case of his omission to comply with said order, he may be committed accordingly. [R., § 4462.]

IN DISTRICT COURT.

5506. Bond required on conviction. 4124. The district court may, on the conviction of any person for an offense against the person or property of another, when necessary for the public good, require the defendant to enter into an undertaking to keep the peace as hereinbefore provided, and on his omission to do so, may commit him accordingly. [R., § 4463.]

5507. Appearance. 4125. A person who has entered into an undertaking to keep the peace, when required by a magistrate as hereinbefore provided, must appear on the first day of the next term of the district court of the county, and if the complainant appear and the person bound by the undertaking does not appear, the court may forfeit his undertaking, and order the same to be prosecuted unless his default be excused. [R., § 4465.]

5508. Judgment. 4126. If the principal in the undertaking appear, and the complainant does not appear, or if neither of the parties appear, the court shall enter an order discharging the undertaking; but if both parties appear, the court shall hear their proofs, and may require a new undertaking in such sum as it shall prescribe for a period not exceeding one year; and may commit the defendant until the same be given. Judgment shall be entered against the party held to keep the peace for all the costs of the proceeding; but if it is made to appear to the court that the proceeding was instituted without probable cause, the court may render judgment against the complainant for such costs. [R., § 4466.]

The plaintiff is not bound to appear, and a failure to appear and prosecute does not subject him to judgment for costs, under § 5675: State v. Holliday, 22-397.

But he may become liable if he does further prosecute and his complaint is found groundless: State v. Leathers, 16-406.

If plaintiff does not appear, defendant is not entitled to a trial, but should be discharged. The decision of the justice is not to be called in question: State v. White, 47-555.

Before defendant in a criminal prosecution was permitted to be a witness in his own behalf he was held not a competent witness in this proceeding: State v. Darrington, 47-518.

That the evidence before the justice was not taken down in writing, as provided by § 5499, is not ground for dismissing the proceeding against defendant. On the hearing, other evidence may be received than that produced before the justice, and if defendant is discharged, the costs in the district court should not be taxed against him: Gribble v. State, 3-217.

A person bound over to appear in the district court under security to keep the peace may be held liable for the costs, although the prosecutor does not appear in that court: Houston v. United States, Mor., 174.

Insanity is a defense to an action for breach of a bond to keep the peace: State v. Geddis, 42-264.

5509. When undertaking broken. 4127. An undertaking to keep the peace is broken by the forfeiture of the same, by the court, as hereinbefore provided, or upon the conviction of the party bound by the undertaking of a breach of the peace. [R., § 4467.]

5510. Suit brought. 4128. Upon the district [county] attorney producing evidence of such conviction to the district court to which the undertaking is returned, the court must order the undertaking to be prosecuted, and the district [county] attorney must, thereat, commence an action upon it. [R., § 4468.]

5511. Record of conviction. 4129. In the action, the offense stated in the record of conviction must be alleged as the breach of the undertaking, and is conclusive evidence thereof. [R., § 4469.]

CHAPTER 5.

OF VAGRANTS.

5512. Who deemed. 4130. The following persons are vagrants: All persons who tell fortunes, or where lost or stolen goods may be found; all common prostitutes and keepers of bawdy houses or houses for the resort of prostitutes; all habitual drunkards, gamblers, or other disorderly persons; all persons wandering about and having no visible calling or business to maintain themselves; all persons begging in public places, or from house to house, or procuring children so to do; all persons going about as collectors of alms for charitable institutions under any false or fraudulent pretenses; all persons playing or betting in any street or public or open place, at, or with any table or instrument of gaming at any game or pretended game of chance. [R., § 4470; 'C., '51, § 3310.]

5513. Complaint, warrant. 4131. Upon complaint made on oath to any magistrate against any person as being such vagrant within his local jurisdiction as defined in this code, he shall issue a warrant for the arrest of such person, and his examination, and the complaint, warrant and arrest shall be governed by the provisions of the last chapter, as nearly as practicable, except as hereinafter provided. [R., § 4471; C., '51, § 3311.]

5514. Arrest. 4132. All peace officers shall arrest any vagrant whom they may find at large and not in the care of some discreet person, and take him before some magistrate of the county, city or town in which the arrest is made. [R., § 4472.]

5515. Taking before magistrate. 4133. If the arrests authorized in the last two sections are made during the night, the officer must keep the person arrested in confinement until the next morning, and if arrests are made within the local jurisdiction of a police or city court, the persons arrested must be taken before a judge or justice of such court, unless he be absent. [R., § 4473.]

5516. Security for good behavior. 4134. If it appear by the confession of such person, or by competent testimony, that such person is a vagrant, the magistrate before whom he is brought may require of such person an undertaking, with sufficient surety, for good behavior for the term of one year thereafter. [R., § 4474.]

5517. Commitment. 4135. The magistrate shall make up, sign, and file with the clerk of the district court of the county, a record of conviction of such person as a vagrant, specifying, generally, the nature and circumstances of the charge, and shall, in default of such security being given, by warrant under his hand, commit such vagrant to the county jail of the county, city or town, as the case may be, until such security be found, or such vagrant discharged according to law. [R., § 4475; C., '51, § 3312.]

5518. Breach of undertaking. 4136. The committing of any of the acts which constitute such person so bound a vagrant, shall be deemed a breach of the condition of such undertaking. [R., § 4476; C., '51, § 3313.]

5519. New security. 4137. On a recovery upon any such undertaking, the court before which such recovery may be had, may, in its discretion, either require new sureties for good behavior, or may commit such vagrant to the common jail of the county for any time not exceeding six months. [R., § 4477; C., '51, § 3314.]

5520. Discharge of bail. 4138. Any person committed to jail for not finding sureties for good behavior, may be discharged by any magistrate upon giving such sureties for good behavior as were originally required of such person. [R., § 4478; C., '51, § 3315.]

TRIAL IN DISTRICT COURT.

5521. Hearing. 4139. The district court to which the papers are returned, shall, on demand of the defendant, impanel a jury to inquire into and determine the truth of the charge made against him; and the rules and regulations of law governing said court in the trials of misdemeanors shall be applicable to and govern it in the trial herein contemplated. [R., § 4479; C., '51, § 3316.]

5522. Judgment. 4140. If no jury be demanded, the district court may revise such conviction and discharge such vagrant from the undertaking or confinement absolutely, or upon sureties for good behavior, in its discretion. [R., § 4480; C., '51, § 3317.]

PUNISHMENT.

5523. Imprisonment. 4141. Such district court may, in its discretion, order any such vagrant to be kept in the common jail for any time not exceeding six months at hard labor. [R., § 4481; C., '51, § 3318.]

5524. Labor. 4142. If there be no means in such jail for employing offenders at hard labor, such court may direct the keeper thereof to furnish such employment as it shall specify to such vagrant as may be committed thereto, either by a justice or any court, and for that purpose to purchase any necessary raw materials and implements, not exceeding such amount as the court shall prescribe, and to compel such persons to perform such work as shall be allotted to them. [R., § 4482; C., '51, § 3319.]

5525. Expenses. 4143. The expenses incurred in pursuance of such order shall be audited by the board of supervisors of the county, and paid out of the county treasury. [R., § 4483; C., '51, § 3320.]

5526. Proceeds of labor. 4144. One-half of the net proceeds of such labor shall be paid to the person earning the same, upon his discharge from imprisonment, and the other half shall be paid into the county treasury for the use of the county. [R., § 4484; C., '51, § 3321.]

5527. Male vagrants kept at hard labor. 16 G. A., ch. 69, § 1. If any male person, physically able to perform manual labor, shall be found in a state of vagrancy, or practicing common begging, he shall, on conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not exceeding fifty dollars, and sentenced to hard labor in the jail of the county, for which labor they [he] shall receive a credit at the rate of seventy-five cents per day until said fine and cost of prosecution, and accruing costs, shall be paid.

5528. Duty of boards of supervisors. 16 G. A., ch. 69, § 2. The board of supervisors of the several counties are hereby authorized to provide for carrying the provisions of the foregoing section into effect, for which purpose they may, by order entered upon their journals, declare that the jail shall extend to and include the lands of the proper county, and every form and kind of labor commonly performed therein by male persons.

CHAPTER 6.

OF RESISTANCE TO PROCESS AND SUPPRESSION OF RIOTS.

5529. Calling out power of county. 4145. When the sheriff or other officer authorized to execute process, finds, or has reason to apprehend, that resistance will be made to the execution thereof, he may command as many male inhabitants of his county as he may think proper, and any military companies in the county, armed and equipped, to assist him in overcoming the resistance, and, if necessary, in seizing, arresting, and confining the resisters, and their aiders and abettors, to be punished by law. [R., § 4489; C., '51, § 2793.]

See, also, § 475.

5530. Certify to court names of resisters. 4146. The officer shall certify to the court from which the process issued, the names of the resisters and their aiders and abettors, to the end that they may be punished for a contempt. [R., § 4490; C., '51, § 2794.]

5531. Refusing to assist. 4147. Every person commanded by a public officer to assist him in the execution of process, as provided in section four thousand one hundred and forty-five of this chapter [§ 5529], who, without lawful cause, refuses or neglects to obey such command, is guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 4491; C., '51, § 2795.]

5532. Military force. 4148. If it appear to the governor that the power of any county is not sufficient to enable the sheriff to execute process delivered to him, he may, on the application of the sheriff, order such posse or military force from any other county or counties as is necessary. [R., § 4492; C., '51, § 2796.]

5533. Unlawful assemblages. 4149. When persons to the number of twelve or more, armed with dangerous weapons, or persons to the number of thirty or more, whether armed or not, are unlawfully or riotously assembled in any city or town, the judges, sheriff, and his deputies if they be present, the mayor, aldermen, marshal, constables, and justices of the peace of such city or town, must go among the persons assembled, or as near them as may be safe, and command them, in the name of the state, immediately to disperse. [R., § 4493; C., '51, § 2797.]

5534. Arrest. 4150. If the persons assembled do not immediately disperse, the magistrates and officers must arrest them, that they may be punished according to law, and for that purpose may command the aid of all persons present or within the county. [R., § 4494; C., '51, § 2798.]

5535. Refusing to aid. 4151. If any person commanded to aid the magistrate or officer, without good cause neglect to do so, he is guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 4495; C., '51, § 2799.]

5536. Failure of duty. 4152. If a magistrate or officer having notice of an unlawful or riotous assembly as above provided in this chapter, neglect to proceed to the place of assembly, or as near thereto as he can with safety, and to exercise the authority with which he is invested for suppressing the same and arresting the persons, he is guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 4496; C., '51, § 2800.]

5537. Calling aid. 4153. If the persons so assembled and commanded to disperse, do not immediately disperse, any two of the magistrates or officers before mentioned, may command the aid of a sufficient number of persons, and may proceed in such manner as, in their judgment, is necessary to disperse the assembly and arrest the offenders. [R., § 4497; C., '51, § 2801.]

5538. Armed force. 4154. When an armed force is called out for the purpose of suppressing an unlawful or riotous assembly, or arresting the offenders, it must obey such orders in relation thereto as have been made by the governor, or by a judge of the supreme, district, [or circuit] court, a sheriff, or magistrate, as the case may be. [R., § 4498; C., '51, § 2802.]

CHAPTER 7.

OF LOCAL JURISDICTION OF PUBLIC OFFENSES.

5539. Who subject to laws of state. 4155. Every person, whether an inhabitant of this or any other state or country, or of a territory, or district of the United States, is liable to punishment by the laws of this state for a public offense committed by him therein, except where it is by law cognizable exclusively in the courts of the United States. [R., § 4500; C., '51, § 2803.]

5540. District court. 4156. The local jurisdiction of the district court, is of offenses committed within the county in which it is held, and of such other cases as are, or may be, provided by law. [R., § 4502.]

Evidence as to venue: In a prosecution for assault it is sufficient for the state to prove the county in which the offense was committed. It is not requisite to prove either the village, city or township: State v. Gibson, 29-295.

The court will take judicial notice of the county in which an incorporated town is situated. Proof of the commission of the act in a certain town is sufficient proof of the commission within the county in which the town is located: State v. Reader, 60-527.

The venue of a crime must be proven to warrant a conviction. Therefore where the prosecuting witness testified that the offense was committed at her father's house, and her father testified that he lived in the county where the case was tried, but there was no proof to show where he lived when the offense was committed, held, that the venue was not sufficiently proven: State v. Carr, 60-453.

Testimony in a particular case considered, and held to show that the crime charged in the indictment was committed in another county than that in which the indictment was found, and that the conviction was erroneous: State v. Byam, 54-409.

Offense on Mississippi river: Jurisdiction being given to the state to punish offenses committed on the Mississippi river between the north and south boundaries of the state, the jurisdiction of the district court of each county bounded upon the river extends over the crimes committed upon such river between the north and south boundaries of such county: State v. Mullen, 35-199.

The jurisdiction of such court may extend to the punishment of the act of keeping a nuisance upon a boat moored to the east shore of an island situated on the east side of the center of the channel, and floating or resting upon the ground according to the stage of the water: Ibid.

5541. Offenses consummated within state. 4157. When the commission of a public offense commenced without this state is consummated within the boundaries thereof, the defendant is liable to punishment therefor in this state, though he was without the state at the time of the commission of the offense charged; provided he consummated the offense through the intervention of an innocent or guilty agent within this state, or any other means proceeding directly from himself; and in such case the jurisdiction is in the county in which the offense is consummated. [R., § 4505; C., '51, § 2804.]

Stealing property in another state and bringing it within this state is not an act contemplated by this section, but the thief is punishable in this state in the county into which the property is taken under the provisions as to larceny: State v. Bennett, 14-479.

5542. Fighting duel without the state. 4158. When an inhabitant or resident of this state, by previous appointment or engagement, fights a duel, or is concerned as second therein without the jurisdiction of the state, and in such duel a wound is inflicted upon any person whereof he die within this state, the jurisdiction of the offense is in the county where the death may happen. [R., § 4506; C., '51, § 2805.]

5543. Offense partly in county. 4159. When a public offense is committed in part in one county and part within another, or when the acts or effects constituting, or requisite to the consummation of the offense, occur in two or more counties, jurisdiction is in either county. [R., § 4507; C., '51, § 2806.]

This section does not apply to the crime of abortion. Where the drug, etc., is administered in one county and the miscarriage occurs in another, the crime is completed where the drug is administered: State v. Hollenbeck, 36-12.

5544. Near boundary of two counties. 4160. When a public offense is committed on the boundary of two or more counties, or within five hundred yards thereof, the jurisdiction is in either county. [R., § 4508; C., '51, § 2807.]

Where one county takes jurisdiction of a crime committed in an adjoining county, but within five hundred yards of the boundary, the former cannot recover the costs of prosecution from the latter: Floyd County v. Cerro Gordo County, 47-186.

prejudiced where the crime is alleged to have been committed in one county and the evidence shows that it was committed in an adjoining county within five hundred yards of the boundary line: State v. Pugsley, 75-742.

The substantial rights of defendant are not

This provision is not unconstitutional: Ibid.

5545. On boats, rafts, etc. 4161. When an offense is committed within the jurisdiction of this state on board a boat, raft, or vessel navigating a river, lake, or canal, or lying therein in the prosecution of her voyage, the jurisdiction is in any county through which the boat, raft, or vessel is navigated in the course of her voyage, or in the county where the voyage shall terminate. [R., § 4509; C., '51, § 2808.]

A former statutory provision that an offense committed on any vessel might be prosecuted in any county through which the vessel "may have passed on that trip," held not to be confined to that part of the voyage performed before the commission of the offense, but to extend to the entire trip: Nash v. State, 2 G. Gr., 286.

5546. Jurisdiction in any county in certain cases. 4162. The jurisdiction of an indictment for the crime of forcibly, and without lawful authority seizing and confining another, or kidnaping him with intent, against his will, to cause him to be confined or imprisoned within the state, or to be sent out of the state; or of taking or enticing away a child under the age of twelve years from the parents, guardian, or other person having the legal charge of the person, with the intent to detain or conceal such child; or of taking or en-

ting away an unmarried female of previously chaste character under the age of fifteen years, for the purpose of prostitution; or of taking any woman unlawfully and against her will, or by force, menace, or duress, compelling her to marry against her will; or of seducing and debauching any unmarried woman of previously chaste character, is in any county in which the offense is committed, or into or out of which the person upon whom the offense was committed may, in the prosecution of the offense, have been brought, or in which an act is done by the offender in instigating, procuring, promoting, aiding in, or being an accessory to the commission of the offense, or in abetting the parties concerned therein. [R., § 4510; C., '51, § 2809.]

5547. Bigamy. 4163. When the offense of bigamy is committed in one county, and the defendant is apprehended in another, the jurisdiction is in either county. [R., § 4511; C., '51, § 2810.]

A prosecution for bigamy under § 5318 may be had in any county where the defendant unlawfully cohabits with a second wife, although the marriage was consummated in another county: State v. Hughes, 58-165.

5548. When conviction a bar. 4164. When the offense is within the jurisdiction of two or more counties, a conviction or acquittal thereof in one county is a bar to prosecution or indictment thereof in another. [R., § 4512.]

CHAPTER 8.

THE TIME OF COMMENCING CRIMINAL ACTIONS.

5549. Murder. 4165. A prosecution for murder may be commenced at any time after the death of the person killed. [R., § 4513; C., '51, § 2811.]

5550. What within eighteen months. 4166. An indictment for a public offense must be found within eighteen months after the commission thereof, in the following cases, and not after:

1. Taking or enticing away an unmarried female, under the age of fifteen years, for the purpose of marriage or prostitution;
2. Seducing or debauching an unmarried female, of previously chaste character;
3. For rape and adultery;
4. For an assault with intent to commit a rape. [R., § 4514; C., '51, § 2812.]

The limitation in a criminal action cannot be raised by demurrer to the indictment, but such fact must be specially pleaded: State v. Hussey, 7-409; State v. Groome, 10-308.

Nor can such limitation be raised by motion in arrest of judgment: State v. Deitrick, 51-467.

Where the crime of adultery is charged as committed on a particular day, defendant may be convicted by proof of the commission of the offense on any day within the statutory period of limitations: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

So with the crime of seduction: State v. Bell, 49-440.

It is not material that the time of the commission of the offense, as stated in the indictment, should be such as to bring it within the period of limitations: See notes to § 5686.

5551. Three years. 4167. In all other cases an indictment for a public offense must be found within three years after the commission thereof, and not afterwards. [R., § 4515; C., '51, § 2813.]

A defendant in a prosecution for embezzlement is not estopped by subsequent fraudulent statements from showing that the defalcation actually took place at such time that the prosecution therefor is barred: State v. Hutchinson, 60-478.

It is not error to instruct the jury that they must find that the crime of assault with intent to maim was committed on or about the time charged or at any date within the statutory period of limitations prior to the finding of the indictment: State v. Fry, 67-475.

5552. Misdemeanor triable before a justice. 4168. A prosecution for a misdemeanor, triable before a justice of the peace, must be commenced within one year after the commission thereof, and not after.

5553. Defendant out of state. 4169. If, when the offense is committed, the defendant is out of the state, the indictment or prosecution may be found or commenced within the time herein limited after his coming into the state, and no period during which the party charged was not usually and publicly resident within the state is a part of the limitation. [R., § 4516; C., '51, § 2814.]

The period of the defendant's non-residence need not, however, be stated in the indictment. If he relies upon the bar of the statute of limitations he should plead the same, to which the state may reply the non-residence, and thus raise the issue: State v. Hussey, 7-409.

The latter clause of this section is not to be restricted to offenses committed when the defendant is out of the state, but applies equally to all cases: State v. McIntire, 58-572.

5554. Indictment deemed found. 4170. An indictment is found within the meaning of this chapter, when it is duly presented by the grand jury in open court and there received and filed. [R., § 4517; C., '51, § 2815.]

CHAPTER 9.

OF FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE.

5555. Agents appointed to apprehend; expenses. 4171; 17 G. A., ch. 65. The governor of the state may, in any case authorized by the constitution and laws of the United States, appoint agents to demand of the executive authority of any other state or territory, or from the executive authority of any foreign government any fugitive from justice charged with treason or felony, and the accounts of the agents appointed for that purpose must be audited by the auditor of state and paid out of the state treasury. The expenses to be allowed agents for returning fugitives from justice, shall be the fees paid the officers of the state upon whose governor the requisition is made; and the agent shall receive not exceeding ten cents per mile, each way, for all necessary travel of himself and for each fugitive, five cents per mile additional for the number of miles which such fugitive shall have been conveyed. Bills for such expenses shall be made out in such manner as to show the actual route traveled, and the number of miles, and be verified by affidavit, and be accompanied by proof that the fugitive for whom requisition was made has been returned and delivered into the custody of the proper authority; provided, that the state shall, in no case, pay the costs of returning the fugitive where he has not been tried, unless it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the governor that the want of trial has not been owing to any fault or neglect on the part of the person or persons interested in the prosecution. [R., § 4518; C., '51, § 3282.]

To constitute a person a fugitive from justice he must have been in the state where the crime is alleged to have been committed, must have there committed the crime, and must have fled therefrom to escape punishment.

The state is not bound to surrender one of its citizens who has constructively committed a crime in another state, without having been there in person: Jones v. Leonard, 50-106.

5556. No other compensation. 4172. No compensation, fee, or reward of any kind, can be paid to, or received by, a public officer of this state for a service rendered or expense incurred in procuring from the governor the demand mentioned in the last section, or the surrender of the fugitive, or for conveying him to this state, or detaining him therein, except as provided by law. [R., § 4519.]

A deputy sheriff who has, under a contract with the surety on the bail bond of an escaped criminal, ascertained the whereabouts of such criminal and brought him back under requisition, cannot recover from such surety the sum stipulated in the contract, such contract being in violation of this section: Day v. Townsend, 70-538.

5557. Penalty. 4173. A violation of the last section is a misdemeanor. [R., § 4520.]

5558. Sworn evidence; copy of indictment. 4174. No executive warrant for the arrest and surrender of any person demanded by the executive authority of any other state or territory, as a fugitive from the justice of such state or territory, and no requisition upon the executive authority of any other state or territory, for the surrender of any person as a fugitive from the justice of this state, shall be issued, unless the requisition from the executive authority of such other state or territory, or the application for such requisition upon the executive authority of such other state or territory shall be accompanied by sworn evidence that the party charged is a fugitive from justice, and by a duly attested copy of an indictment, or a duly attested copy of a complaint, made before a court or magistrate authorized to receive the same. [R., § 4521.]

The fact that the governor considers the evidence submitted to him sufficient, and issues his warrant accordingly, does not preclude inquiry by the courts as to the sufficiency of such evidence, and his decision may be questioned in a habeas corpus proceeding: Jones v. Leonard, 50-106.

5559. Requisition from another state. 4175. Whenever a demand is made upon the governor of this state by the executive of any other state or territory, in any case authorized by the constitution and laws of the United States, for the delivery of any person charged in such state or territory with any crime, if such person is not held in custody or under bail to answer for any offense against the laws of the United States or of this state, he shall issue his warrant under the seal of the state, authorizing the agent who makes such demand, either forthwith or at such time as may be designated in the warrant, to take and transport such person to the line of this state at the expense of such agent, and may also by such warrant require all peace officers to afford all needful assistance in the execution thereof. [R., § 4522; C., '51, § 3283.]

EXAMINATION BY MAGISTRATE.

5560. Complaint and warrant. 4176. If any person be found in this state charged with any crime committed in any other state or territory, and liable by the constitution and laws of the United States to be delivered over upon the demand of the governor thereof, any magistrate may, upon complaint on oath setting forth the offense and such other matters as are necessary to bring the case within the provisions of law, issue a warrant for the arrest of such person. [R., § 4523; C., '51, § 3284.]

This and the following sections are only applicable where the party against whom the proceeding is brought is charged with a crime committed in some other state, etc., before some court, magistrate or other officer, by an indictment, information or other accusation known to the law of such state. Unless such fact is made to appear the magistrate has no jurisdiction: State v. Hufford, 28-391.

5561. Bail. 4177. If, upon examination, it appear that there is reasonable cause to believe the complaint true, and that such person may be lawfully demanded of the governor, he shall, if not charged with murder, be required to enter into an undertaking, with sufficient surety in a reasonable sum, to appear before such magistrate at a future day, allowing reasonable time to obtain the warrant from the governor, and abide the order of such magistrate in the premises. [R., § 4524; C., '51, § 3285.]

5562. Committed. 4178. If such person does not give bail, or if he is charged with the crime of murder, he must be committed to prison, and there detained until such day, in like manner as if the offense charged had been committed within this state. [R., § 4525; C., '51, § 3286.]

If charged with murder in the second degree, he is entitled to be released on bail under Const., art. 1, § 12, notwithstanding the language of this and the preceding sections: State v. Hufford, 23-579.

5563. Forfeiture of bail. 4179. A failure of such person to attend before the magistrate at the time and place mentioned in the undertaking, is a forfeiture thereof. [R., § 4526; C., '51, § 3287.]

Where bail has been taken without it being shown that the party was charged, etc., in some other state, as specified in note to § 5560, the proceedings are void, and a recovery cannot be had on the bond: State v. Hufford, 28-391.

5564. Discharge. 4180. If such person appear before the magistrate upon the day ordered, he must be discharged unless he is demanded by some person authorized by the warrant of the governor to receive him, or unless the magistrate see good cause to commit him or to require him to enter into a new undertaking for his appearance at some other day to await a warrant from the governor. [R., § 4527; C., '51, § 3288.]

5565. Arrest on governor's warrant. 4181. Whether the person so charged be bound to appear, be committed, or discharged, any person authorized by the warrant of the governor may at any time take him into custody, and the same is a discharge of the undertaking, if there be one. [R., § 4528; C., '51, § 3289.]

5566. Costs. 4182. The complainant in any such case is answerable for all the costs and charges, and for the support in prison of any person so committed, and the magistrate before issuing his warrant or hearing the cause, must require the complainant to give security for the payment of all such costs, or may require them in advance. [R., § 4529; C., '51, § 3290.]

EXPENSES.

5567. Conditions. 4183. Upon the appointment of any agent for the arrest of a fugitive from justice under the provisions of this chapter, the governor is hereby authorized to make it a condition upon such appointment, and the issue of the writ, that the same shall be executed without expense to the state, if in his opinion justice and equity so require. [12 G. A., ch. 39, § 1.]

5568. Paid by state. 4184. When, in the opinion of the governor, expenses incurred in the arrest of fugitives from justice should be paid by the state, such expenses shall be made out by items in detail, and sworn to, and approved by him and at least two other members of the executive council, and when so approved shall be audited and paid out of the general revenue of the state, and this section shall be sufficient authority for the payment of the same. [Same, § 2.]

CHAPTER 10.

OF WARRANTS OF ARREST ON PRELIMINARY INFORMATION.

5569. Complaint. 4185. When complaint is made before a magistrate of the commission of some designated public offense, triable on indictment in the county in which such magistrate has local jurisdiction, and charging some person with the commission thereof, he may issue a warrant for the arrest of such person. The complaint may be in form substantially the same as provided in section four thousand six hundred and sixty-three of chapter fifty-two of this title [§ 6061].

5570. Warrant. 4186. The warrant of arrest on a preliminary information, must be substantially in the following form:

COUNTY OF ———,

THE STATE OF IOWA.

To any Peace Officer in the State:

Preliminary information upon oath having been this day laid before me that the crime of (designating it) has been committed, and accusing A. B. thereof:

You are, therefore, commanded forthwith to arrest the said A. B. and bring him before me at (naming the place), or in case of my absence or inability to act, before the nearest or most accessible magistrate in this county.

Dated at ——— this ——— day of ———, A. D. 18—.

C—— D——, Justice of the Peace,
(or as the case may be.)

Subpoena as witnesses E—— F—— and G—— H——. [R., § 4534; C., '51, § 2827.]

The fact that the warrant for arrest on preliminary examination is returnable on the next day after its issuance instead of forthwith will not render it void: State v. Freeman, 8-428.

5571. What to contain. 4187. The warrant must specify the name of the defendant, and if it be unknown to the magistrate, may designate him by any name. It must also state, by name or general description, an offense which authorizes the magistrate to issue the warrant, the time of issuing it, and the county, city, town, township, or village where it was issued, and must be signed by the magistrate with his name of office. [R., § 4535; C., '51, § 2828.]

5572. Directed. 4188. It must be directed to "any peace officer in the state." [R., § 4536; C., '51, § 2829.]

5573. Order for bail. 4189. If the offense stated in the warrant be a misdemeanor, the magistrate issuing it must make an indorsement on the warrant as follows: "Let the defendant, when arrested, be admitted to bail in the sum of ——— dollars, if he desires to give bail," and fix in the indorsement the amount in which bail may be taken. [R., § 4537.]

5574. How executed. 4190. The warrant of arrest may be delivered to any peace officer for execution, and executed in any county in the state. [R., § 4538; 13 G. A., ch. 137.]

5575. Defendant brought before magistrate. 4191. If the offense stated in the warrant be a felony, the officer making the arrest must take the defendant before the magistrate who issued it at the place mentioned in the command thereof, or, in the event of his absence or inability to act, before the nearest or most accessible magistrate in the county in which it was issued. [R., § 4539; C., '51, § 2831.]

A bail bond in case of felony taken before a magistrate in the county where the prisoner is arrested, the warrant having been issued in another county, would not be good as a statutory bond, and would not become a lien on the property of the obligors as provided in § 6004; but the bond having been accepted and the defendant discharged thereunder, it may be enforced: State v. Cannon, 34-322.

5576. Bail in case of misdemeanor. 4192. If the offense stated in the warrant be a misdemeanor, and the defendant be arrested in another county, the officer must, upon being required by the defendant, take him before a magistrate or the clerk of the district court of the same county in which he was arrested, for the purpose of giving bail, and the magistrate or clerk before whom he is taken in such county, must take bail from him accordingly for his appearance at the district court of the county in which the warrant was issued, on the first day of the next term thereof. [R., § 4540; C., '51, § 2832.]

5577. Order for discharge. 4193. On taking bail in the case provided for in the preceding section, the magistrate or clerk taking such bail must make on the warrant an order, signed by him with his name of office, for the discharge of the defendant, substantially as follows:

COUNTY OF (here name the county),

THE STATE OF IOWA.

To (here state the name of the officer who has the defendant in custody, with the addition of his name of office, thus, A. B. sheriff of — county, according to the truth).

The defendant named in the warrant of arrest in your custody, under the authority thereof, for the offense therein designated, having given sufficient bail to answer the same, by the undertaking herewith delivered to you, you are commanded forthwith to discharge him from custody, and without unnecessary delay deliver this order, together with the said undertaking of bail, to the clerk of the district court of — county, on or before the first day of the next term thereof.

Dated at —, this — day of —, A. D. (or as the case may be.)

— —, Justice of the Peace,
(or as the case may be.)

And must deliver the warrant with the order thereon, together with the undertaking of bail, to the officer having the defendant in custody, who shall forthwith discharge the defendant from arrest and without unnecessary delay, and on or before the first day of the next term of the court at which the defendant is required to appear, deliver or transmit by mail or otherwise the warrant, with the order thereon, together with the undertaking of bail, to the clerk of the court at which the defendant is required to appear, who shall forthwith file the same in his office; and the magistrate who issued the warrant shall return to the clerk the affidavits of the informant and his witnesses, upon which the warrant was issued, on or before the first day of the next term of the court, and the clerk shall, when the affidavits are returned by the magistrate, file the same in his office, with the warrant and undertaking of bail. [R., § 4541; C., '51, § 2833.]

5578. If bail be not given. 4194. If bail be not forthwith given by the defendant as provided in the two preceding sections, the magistrate or clerk must redeliver to the officer the warrant, and the officer must take the defendant before the magistrate who issued it, at the place mentioned in the command thereof, or, if he be absent or unable to act, before the nearest or most accessible magistrate in the county in which the warrant was issued. [R., § 4542; C., '51, § 2834.]

5579. Proceedings after arrest. 4195. In all cases when the defendant is arrested, he must be taken before the magistrate or clerk without unnecessary delay, and the officer must at the same time deliver to the magistrate or clerk the warrant, with his return thereon, indorsed and subscribed by him in his name of office. [R., § 4543; C., '51, § 2835.]

5580. Before another magistrate. 4196. If the defendant be taken before a magistrate in the county in which the warrant was issued, other than the magistrate who issued it as hereinbefore provided, the affidavits on which the warrant was issued must be sent to such magistrate, or if they cannot be procured, the informant and his witnesses, must be subpoenaed to make new affidavits. [R., § 4544; C., '51, § 2836.]

CHAPTER 11.

OF ARREST, AND BY WHOM AND HOW MADE.

5581. Defined. 4197. Arrest is the taking of a person in custody in a case, and in the manner authorized by law. [R., § 4545; C., '51, § 2837.]

What constitutes: It is not essential in order to constitute an arrest that the sheriff should have informed the prisoner of his intention to make the arrest, and that he was a peace officer. While the prisoner might ordinarily be entitled to such information, the legality of the arrest as between the sheriff and other parties is in no manner affected by the sheriff's failure in these respects: Miller v. Dickinson County, 68-102.

Jurisdiction first acquired: The court first acquiring authority over the accused by his arrest, or by otherwise obtaining custody of his person through its officers, first acquires jurisdiction of the case. The finding of an indictment does not confer jurisdiction of the person of the accused: Ex parte Baldwin, 69-502.

The power to imprison necessarily includes the power to arrest: Davenport v. Bird, 34-524.

Wrongful arrest outside of state: It is no defense that defendant was arrested in another state without authority and brought to this state by force and against his will: State v. Ross, 21-467.

5582. By whom. 4198. An arrest may be made by a peace officer, or by a private person. [R., § 4546.]

5583. With warrant. 4199. A peace officer may make an arrest in obedience to a warrant delivered to him. [R., § 4547.]

5584. By peace officer without warrant. 4200. A peace officer without a warrant may make an arrest:

1. For a public offense committed or attempted in his presence;
2. Where a public offense has in fact been committed, and he has reasonable ground for believing that the person to be arrested has committed it. [R., § 4548; C., '51, § 2840.]

A peace officer may make an arrest without a warrant when a public offense has in fact been committed, and he has reasonable ground for believing that the person arrested has committed it; and it is erroneous to charge the

A court will not, upon the trial of an indictment on a plea of not guilty, inquire as to whether or not the defendant was properly or improperly brought within the jurisdiction of the court: State v. Day, 58-678.

Reward for arrest: A city cannot legally offer a reward for the arrest and conviction of a criminal: Hanger v. Des Moines, 52-193. Nor can a county offer such reward; but it may offer a reward for the recovery of stolen property: Hawk v. Marion County, 48-472.

Where a person in another state acts upon the promise made by a board of supervisors in Iowa to pay a reward for the arrest and conviction of persons who have robbed the county treasury, he is bound to know that the board has no power to offer such reward. Nor in such case will the members be individually liable: Huthsing v. Bosquet, 3 McCrary, 569.

Peace officers acting under process in arresting a criminal are not entitled to a reward offered for such arrest, unless the terms of the reward offered clearly include them: Means v. Hendershott, 24-78.

See, further, § 5556 and note.

jury, in such a case, that, if the officer makes an arrest without a warrant, he will be liable, unless the party arrested was likely to escape: Montgomery v. Sutton, 67-497.

5585. By private person. 4201. A private person may make an arrest:

1. For a public offense committed or attempted in his presence;
2. When a felony has been committed, and he has reasonable ground for believing that the person to be arrested has committed it. [R., § 4549; C., '51, § 2846.]

5586. Oral order of magistrate. 4202. A magistrate may orally order a peace officer, or a private person, to arrest any one committing, or attempting to commit, a public offense in the presence of such magistrate, which order shall authorize the arrest. [R., § 4550; C., '51, § 2845.]

5587. Time. 4203. An arrest may be made on any day, or at any time of the day or night. [R., § 4551; C., '51, § 2850.]

of his authority to make it, and that he is a peace officer, if such be the case, and require him to submit to his custody, except when the person to be arrested is actually engaged in the commission of, or attempt to commit, the offense, or flies immediately after its commission, and if acting under the authority of a warrant, he must give information thereof and show the warrant if required. [R., § 4552; C., '51, §§ 2839, 2841, 2847.]

5589. When resisted. 4205. When the arrest is being made by an officer under the authority of a warrant, after information of the intention to make the arrest, if the person to be arrested either flee or forcibly resist, the officer may use all necessary means to effect the arrest. [R., § 4553; C., '51, § 2844.]

In a prosecution for murder committed in resistance of lawful arrest, the information and warrant under which the arrest was sought to be made may be given in evidence: State v. Meshek, 61-316.

5590. May break and enter premises. 4206. To make an arrest, if the offense be a felony, a private person, if any public offense, a peace officer acting under the authority of a warrant, or without a warrant, may break open a door or window of a house in which the person to be arrested may be, or in which they have reasonable grounds for believing he is, after having demanded admittance and explained the purpose for which admittance is desired. [R., § 4554; C., '51, §§ 2843, 2848.]

5591. Breaking out. 4207. Any person who has lawfully entered a house for the purpose of making an arrest under the provisions of the preceding section, may break open the door or window thereof if detained therein, when necessary for the purpose of liberating himself; and an officer may do the same, when necessary for the purpose of liberating a person who, acting in his aid, and by his command, lawfully entered for the purpose of making an arrest, and detained therein. [R., § 4555.]

5592. Refusing to assist. 4208. Any person making an arrest may orally summon as many persons as he deems necessary to aid him in making the arrest, and all persons failing to obey such summons shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 4556.]

5593. What constitutes. 4209. An arrest is made by an actual restraint of the person to be arrested, or by his submission to the custody of the person making the arrest. [R., § 4557; C., '51, § 2838.]

5594. Force. 4210. No unnecessary force or violence shall be used in making an arrest. [R., § 4558.]

5595. Restraint. 4211. A person arrested is not to be subjected to any more restraint than is necessary for his detention. [R., § 4559.]

5596. Taking weapons. 4212. He who makes an arrest may take from the person arrested all offensive weapons which he may have about his person, and must deliver them to the magistrate before whom he is taken, to be disposed of according to law. [R., § 4560.]

Police officers, upon the arrest of one charged with felony, may make search of his person for stolen property, instruments used in the commission of the crime, or any article which may give a clue to its commission or the identification of the criminal: Reifsnnyder v. Lee, 44-101.

The sheriff is justified in searching the person arrested and taking from him money or property connected in any way with the crime charged, or which may serve in identifying the prisoner, or be used by him in effecting an escape: Commercial Exchange Bank v. McLeod, 65-665.

Property thus taken from a prisoner by the officer, and which is not connected with nor the fruit of the crime for which he is arrested, is in the possession of the officer for the person under arrest, and is no more subject to attachment than if it were in the prisoner's personal possession: Ibid.

But where the money taken from the prisoner was the money obtained by him through the commission of the crime for which he was arrested, held, that it was subject to garnishment in the hands of the officer at the suit of the person rightfully entitled thereto: Reifsnnyder v. Lee, 44-101.

Where a trunk belonging to a party under arrest was produced and opened under pretense of making a criminal examination, held, that money therein contained was not subject to levy of attachment: Pomroy v. Parmlee, 9-140.

As to search-warrants, etc., see §§ 6027-6051 and notes.

5597. Escape. 4213. If a person, after being arrested, either by a peace officer without a warrant, or by a private person, escape, or be rescued, the person from whose custody he escaped or was rescued, may immediately pursue and retake him in any part of the state, and for that purpose may, if necessary, break open the door or window of a house in which he may be, or in which he has reasonable ground to believe he is, after having stated his purpose and demanded admittance, and when the person escaping or rescued was in custody under a warrant or commitment, this may be done at any time under the original warrant or commitment. [R., § 4561; C., '51, § 2851.]

5598. Person arrested by by-stander. 4214. A peace officer may take before a magistrate a person who, being engaged in a breach of the peace, is arrested by a by-stander and delivered to him. [R., § 4562; C., '51, § 2842.]

5599. Arrest by private person. 4215. A private person who has arrested another for the commission of an offense, must, without unnecessary delay, take him before a magistrate or deliver him to a peace officer. [R., § 4563; C., '51, § 2849.]

5600. Must accompany. 4216. A private person who makes an arrest and delivers the person arrested to a peace officer, must also accompany the officer before the magistrate. [R., § 4564.]

5601. By officer with warrant. 4217. An officer making an arrest in obedience to a warrant, shall proceed with the person arrested as commanded by the warrant, or as provided by law. [R., § 4565.]

Where, at the time of an arrest, the party arrested was intoxicated, held, that the officer was not liable in damages for having kept the person in custody without bringing him before the justice until he was in proper condition for trial: Arneson v. Thorstad, 72-145.

5602. Arrest without warrant. 4218. When an arrest is made without a warrant, whether by a peace officer or a private person, the person arrested shall, without unnecessary delay, be taken before the nearest or most accessible magistrate in the county in which the arrest is made; and the grounds on which the arrest was made shall be stated to the magistrate by affidavit, subscribed and sworn to by the person making the statement before the magistrate, in the same manner as upon a preliminary information, as nearly as may be. [R., § 4566.]

Where an officer makes an arrest without a warrant on proper cause, he may detain the offender for a reasonable time until he can be taken before a magistrate for examination, and will not be liable in trespass for doing so: Hutchinson v. Sangster, 4 G. Gr., 340.

HEARING BEFORE MAGISTRATE.

5603. Information ordered filed. 4219. If the magistrate believes from the statements in the affidavit that the offense charged is triable in the county in which the arrest was made, and that there is sufficient ground for a trial or preliminary examination, as the case may require, and that it will not be inconvenient for the witnesses on the part of the state that such trial or preliminary examination should be had before him, he shall proceed as if the person arrested had been brought before him on arrest under a warrant, and, if the case be one within his jurisdiction to try and determine, shall order an information to be filed against him. [R., § 4567.]

5604. Hearing before another magistrate. 4220. If the magistrate believes from the statements in the affidavit that the offense charged is triable in the county in which the arrest is made, and that there is sufficient ground for a trial or preliminary examination, and that it will be more convenient for the witnesses on the part of the state that such trial or examination should be had before some other magistrate, he shall, by a written order by him signed with his name of office, commit the person arrested to a peace officer, to be by him taken before such magistrate in the same county who has jurisdiction to try or examine the charge as the case may require, and as shall be convenient for the witnesses on the part of the state, and deliver the affidavit and the order of commitment to the peace officer, who shall proceed with the person arrested as directed by the order; and such magistrate, when the person arrested is brought before him, shall proceed as on an arrest under a warrant, and, if the case be within his jurisdiction to try and determine, shall order an information to be filed against the person arrested. [R., § 4568.]

5605. Offense triable in another county. 4221. If the magistrate believes from the statements in the affidavit that the offense charged is triable in a county different from that in which the arrest is made, and that there is sufficient ground for a trial or preliminary examination, he shall, by a written order by him signed with his name of office, commit the person arrested to a peace officer, to be by him taken before a magistrate in the county in which the offense is triable, who has jurisdiction to make either preliminary examination into the charges, or try and determine the same, as the case may require, and, if the offense be a misdemeanor only triable on indictment, shall fix in the order the amount of bail which the person arrested may give for his appearance at the district court of the county in which the offense is indictable, on the first day of the next term thereof, to answer an indictment. [R., § 4569.]

5606. Bail; commitment; discharge. 4222. If bail be given as provided in the preceding section, it may be either before the magistrate making the order, or the magistrate in the county in which the offense is triable before whom he is taken under the order, or a magistrate of any county through which he passes in going from the county in which the arrest was made to that in which the offense is triable, or the clerk of the district court of either of said counties; and, when given, the magistrate or clerk taking the same shall make on the order of commitment an order for the discharge of the person arrested from custody, who shall forthwith be discharged accordingly, and to transmit by mail, or otherwise, to the clerk of the district court of the county at which the person arrested is bound to appear, on or before the first day of the next term thereof, and as soon as it can be conveniently done after taking the bail, the affidavits, the order of commitment and discharge, together with the undertaking of the bail, who shall file the same together in his office. [R., § 4570.]

5607. Transfer to another county. 4223. If bail be not given as provided in the last two preceding sections, before the magistrate in the county in which the arrest was made, or if the offense charged is a felony, or a misdemeanor triable on information, the magistrate must deliver the affidavits and the order of commitment to a peace officer, who shall proceed with the person arrested as directed by the order, or provided by law; and the magistrate in the county in which the offense is triable, when the person arrested is brought before him, shall proceed as on an arrest under a warrant, and if the case be within his jurisdiction to try and determine, shall order an information to be filed against the person arrested. [R., § 4571.]

[The word "preceding," in the second line, is erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

5608. What magistrate; bail. 4224. In the cases contemplated in the last three sections, the officer having the person arrested in custody, under the order, shall take him before the proper magistrate in the county in which the offense is triable, which is most convenient for the witnesses on the part of the state, unless, in case of a misdemeanor triable on indictment as herein-

before provided, the person arrested desires to give bail, in which case he shall take him before the most convenient magistrate in the county in which the offense with which he is charged is triable, or any county through which he passes in going from the county in which the arrest was made to the county in which the offense is triable, or before the clerk of the district court of either of said counties for the purpose of giving bail. [R., § 4572.]

5609. Officer's return. 4225. In all cases, the peace officer, when he takes a person committed to him under an order as provided in this chapter before a magistrate, or clerk of the district court, either for the purpose of giving bail, if bail be taken, or for trial or preliminary examination, must make his return on such order, and sign such return with his name of office, and deliver the same to the magistrate or clerk. [R., § 4573.]

CHAPTER 12.

OF PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS.

5610. Right to counsel. 4226. When the defendant is brought before the magistrate on arrest, either with or without a warrant, the magistrate must immediately inform him of the offense with which he is charged, and of his right to the aid of counsel in every stage of the proceedings. [R., § 4575; C., '51, § 2852.]

5611. Time to procure. 4227. The magistrate must allow the defendant a reasonable time to send for counsel, and, if necessary, must adjourn the examination for that purpose. [R., § 4576; C., '51, § 2853.]

5612. Examination; change of venue. 4228. The magistrate, immediately after the appearance of counsel, or, if the defendant require the aid of counsel, after waiting a reasonable time therefor, must proceed to examine the case; provided, however, that before said examination is commenced, said defendant may have a change of venue upon filing an affidavit that the magistrate is prejudiced against him, is a material witness for either party, or that the defendant cannot obtain justice before him, as affiant verily believes. On filing of such affidavit a change of venue must be allowed, and the magistrate must immediately transmit all original papers and a transcript of the record entire in the case, to the next nearest magistrate in the township against whom no objection exists, if there be any, if not, to the next nearest magistrate in the county against whom no such objections in the opinion of the justice exists, who shall proceed with said examination as hereinafter provided. Only one such change of venue shall be allowed. [R., § 4577; C., '51, § 2854.]

5613. Adjournment. 4229. The examination must be terminated at one session unless the magistrate, for good cause shown, adjourn it. [R., § 4578; C., '51, § 2855.]

5614. For how long. 4230. No examination can be adjourned for a longer period than thirty days. [R., § 4579; C., '51, § 2856.]

5615. Commitment or bail. 4231. If an adjournment be had for any cause, the magistrate shall commit the defendant for examination, or require him to give ample security for his appearance at the time and place to which the examination is adjourned. [R., § 4580; C., '51, § 2857.]

5616. When no jail. 4232. If there is no jail in the county, the sheriff must retain the defendant in his custody until the examination. [R., § 4582; C., '51, § 2859.]

5617. Witnesses. 4233. The magistrate must issue subpoenas for any witnesses required either by the state or by the defendant, and the witnesses who appear at the examination must be examined in the presence of the defendant. [R., § 4583; C., '51, § 2860.]

Until defendant is arrested, a magistrate has no authority to issue a subpoena for a witness to appear at the examination of such defendant. So where a subpoena was sent to another state before filing of information or arrest of defendant, and the witness attended in response thereto, but defendant having been in the meantime arrested, waived examination, held, that the witness could not recover fees from the county (distinguishing Westfall v. Madison County, 62-427): Warnstaff v. Louisa County, 76-585.

The person filing complaint is to be treated as the prosecuting witness, and the fact that he is subpoenaed as a witness by the state does not change his situation: In re Trenchard, 16-53.

5618. Depositions. 4234. The deposition of a witness who resides out of the county in which the examination is had, may be taken, on application of the defendant on the order of the magistrate, before any officer authorized to take depositions in civil cases; which order shall not be made until three days after the filing with the magistrate of the written interrogatories to be propounded to the witness; nor until three days after the service of notice on the state, or on the attorney who appears for the state, of the filing of such interrogatories.

5619. Cross-interrogatories. 4235. Before the order to take the deposition is made, the state may file cross-interrogatories to be propounded to the witness, which shall be answered by him in the deposition.

5620. Read in evidence. 4236. At the expiration of three days from the filing of the interrogatories, and the service of the notice thereof on the state as above provided, the magistrate may order the testimony of the witness to be taken in answer to the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, if any, on file; and the deposition thus taken may be read as evidence on the examination; nor shall the same be excluded because of any irregularity in the taking of it, if the magistrate is satisfied that the irregularity complained of could work no substantial prejudice to the opposite party.

[Section 4237, which made defendant a competent witness in his own behalf in such cases, was repealed by 17 G. A., ch. 168, § 2, by which act that privilege was extended to defendant in all criminal proceedings. See §§ 4886 and 5954.]

5621. Cross-examination of defendant. 4238. When the defendant testifies in his own behalf, he shall be subject to a cross-examination as an ordinary witness, provided, that, in the cross-examination, the state shall be strictly confined to the matters testified to in the examination-in-chief.

Before the amendment of §§ 4886 and 5954, allowing defendant in a criminal prosecution to be a witness in his own behalf, he might testify in a preliminary examination: State v. Laffer, 38-422.

But he was not a competent witness for himself on a trial on an information for security to keep the peace (§ 5508): State v. Darrington, 47-518.

TRIAL.

5622. Witnesses excluded. 4239. While a witness is under examination before the magistrate, he may exclude all others who have not been examined. He may also cause the witnesses to be kept separate, that they may not converse with each other until they are all examined. [R., § 4591; C., '51, § 2867.]

5623. Others excluded. 4240. The magistrate must also, upon the request of the defendant, exclude from hearing the examination all persons except the magistrate, his clerk, the peace officer who has the custody of the defendant, the attorney or attorneys representing the state and the defendant and his counsel. [R., § 4592.]

5624. Minutes of examination. 4241. The magistrate shall, in the minutes of the examination, write out or cause to be written out, the substance of the testimony given on the examination by each witness examined before him, showing the name of the witness, his place of residence, and his business or profession, and the amount to which each witness is entitled for mileage and attendance. [R., § 4593; C., '51, § 2868.]

The minutes so taken by the magistrate are not competent as evidence on the trial of the case in the district court: State v. Collins, 32-36; State v. Hull, 26-293; nor are they admissible for the purpose of impeaching a witness: State v. Hayden, 45-11. And see notes to § 5676.

But the testimony given on the preliminary examination by a witness who dies before the trial may be proved on the trial by witnesses who heard it: State v. Fitzgerald, 63-268.

And these minutes may also be used before the grand jury: See § 5672 and notes.

5625. Certificate. 4242. After the examination is closed, the magistrate must attach together the complaint, the warrant or order of commitment, if any, under which the defendant was brought before him, the minutes of the examination, including all depositions on file with him and used in the examination, and annex thereto his certificate, which must set forth in substance the time and place of examination, and that the minutes thereof are true, and the certificate must be signed by the magistrate, with his name of office. [R., § 4594; C., '51, §§ 2869-70.]

Although the minutes are not properly certified to by the magistrate, yet if the grand jury act thereon, and return a proper memorandum thereof to the court in connection with the indictment, as required by § 5672, the

The magistrate or a person appointed by him to write out the minutes of the testimony cannot recover compensation therefor from the county. The usual fees of the magistrate in such cases for conducting the examination are all that are allowed: Sanford v. Lee County, 49-148.

The magistrate is entitled to be reimbursed by the county for expenses of stationery used in taking down minutes of the evidence: Evans v. Story County, 35-126.

defendant cannot object to the calling of witnesses whose names are indorsed on the back of the indictment, and a memorandum of whose testimony is thus returned: State v. Kepper, 65-745.

5626. Discharge. 4243. If, after hearing the testimony, it appear to the magistrate, either that a public offense has not been committed, or that there is no sufficient reason for believing the defendant guilty thereof, he must order the defendant to be discharged; and such order must be indorsed on the minutes of the examination or annexed thereto and signed by the magistrate, to the following effect: "There being no sufficient cause for believing the defendant guilty of the offense herein mentioned, or of any other offense, I order him to be discharged." [R., § 4595; C., '51, § 2871.]

5627. Holding for trial. 4244. If it appears from the examination that a public offense triable on indictment has been committed, and that there is sufficient reason for believing the defendant guilty thereof, the magistrate shall in like manner indorse on or annex to the minutes of the examination, an order signed by him to the following effect: "It appearing to me by the within minutes that the offense therein mentioned, or any other offense triable on indictment, according to the fact, stating generally the nature thereof, has been committed, and there is sufficient cause for believing the defendant guilty thereof, I order that he be held to answer the same." [R., § 4596; C., '51, § 2872.]

The fact that such finding was made by the justice will be presumed in an action on a bail bond given by the person bound over; but if not made, such fact is a proper matter of defense: State v. Patterson, 23-575.

The warrant of commitment in a particular case held sufficient: Cowell v. Patterson, 49-514.

BAIL.

5628. Order admitting. 4245. If bail be taken by the magistrate, the following words in substance must be added to the order mentioned in the preceding section, "and I have admitted him to bail to answer thereto by the undertaking hereto annexed,"—and the undertaking of bail must be annexed thereto. [R., § 4598; C., '51, § 2874.]

5629. Authorized. 4246. If bail be not given by the defendant, then the magistrate must add to the order mentioned in section forty-two hundred and forty-four [§ 5627] the following words in substance: "and that he be admitted to bail in the sum of (here state the amount), and that he be committed to the jail of the county of (here name the county), until he give such bail." [R., § 4599; C., '51, § 2874.]

5630. Warrant of commitment. 4247. If the magistrate order the defendant to be committed, he shall make out a warrant of commitment, signed by him with his name of office, and deliver it with the defendant to the officer to whom he is committed, or, if the officer be not present, to a peace officer who shall deliver the defendant into the proper custody, together with the warrant of commitment, which warrant may be in form following:

THE STATE OF IOWA,
To the Sheriff of ——— County:

An order having been this day made by me, that A—— B—— (the name of the defendant), be held to answer upon a charge of (state the offense), you are commanded to receive him into your custody and detain him in the jail of the county until he be legally discharged.

Dated at ———, this ——— day of ———, A. D. ———. [R., § 4600; C., '51, § 2875.]

5631. Witnesses bound. 4248; 18 G. A., ch. 130, § 1. On holding the defendant to answer, the magistrate must take from each material witness examined by him on the part of the state, a written undertaking, to the effect that he will appear and testify at the court to which the defendant is bound to answer, when required in the further progress of the cause, and that he will not evade or attempt to evade the service of a subpoena, or that he will forfeit the sum of one hundred dollars. [R., § 4601; C., '51, § 2876.]

5632. Security. 4249. Whenever the magistrate is satisfied by oath, or otherwise, that there is reason to believe that any such witness will not fulfill his undertaking and appear and testify unless surety be required, he may order the witness to enter into a written undertaking with sureties, and in such sum as he may deem proper for his appearance. [R., § 4602; C., '51, § 2877.]

5633. Minors and married women. 4250. Minors and married women who are material witnesses against the defendant, may, in like manner, be required to procure sureties for their appearance as provided in the preceding section. [R., § 4603; C., '51, § 2878.]

5634. Witness committed. 4251. If a witness, required to enter into an undertaking to appear and testify, either with or without sureties, refuse compliance with the order for that purpose, the magistrate must commit him until he comply or be legally discharged. [R., § 4604; C., '51, § 2879.]

A witness who is required by a committing magistrate to enter into a written undertaking, with security, to appear and testify on the trial of the case, and is committed to jail for failure to furnish security, is not entitled to witness fees for the time he is thus held in confinement: Markwell v. Warren County, 53-423.

As to binding over witnesses on appeal, see § 6099.

5635. Return to district court. 4252. When a magistrate has discharged a defendant, or held him to answer an indictment, he must return to the district court of the county, on or before its opening, on the first day of the next term thereof, and as soon after the closing of the examination as practicable, all the papers mentioned in section four thousand two hundred and forty-two of this chapter [§ 5625], together with the undertaking of bail for the appearance of the defendant, and the undertakings of the witnesses, or for them, taken by him. [R., § 4605; C., '51, § 2880.]

5636. In case not triable on indictment. 4253. If it appear from the examination that a public offense has been committed which is not triable on indictment, but on information only, and that there is sufficient reason for believing the defendant guilty thereof, the magistrate shall retain all the papers, and forthwith order an information to be filed against the defendant, before him. If he have not jurisdiction to try and determine the same, he shall indorse on, or annex to, the minutes of the examination an order, signed by him, to the following effect: "It appearing to me by the within minutes that the offense of (here state its name, or nature generally), has been committed, and that there is sufficient reason for believing the defendant guilty thereof, I order that an information be filed against him therefor before (here name some magistrate who is the nearest and most accessible in the same county, and who has jurisdiction, giving the name of office), and that the defendant be committed to any peace officer to be taken before such magistrate." And the magistrate shall thereupon cause each material witness on the part of the state to enter into a written undertaking, to the effect that he will appear forthwith before the magistrate before whom the defendant is to be taken, or that he will forfeit the sum of fifty dollars, and deliver the undertaking, with all the other papers to a peace officer, who shall forthwith proceed as directed by the order, and take the defendant before such magistrate, and deliver all the papers with the undertakings of the witnesses to the magistrate directed in the order, and make his return thereto, and sign the same with his name of office, and the magistrate before whom he is taken shall thereupon proceed accordingly. [R., § 4607.]

5637. Costs. 4254; 15 G. A., ch. 30. When the defendant is discharged, the justice shall, if he is satisfied that the prosecution is malicious or without probable cause, tax the costs against the complainant and render judgment therefor; but the person against whom such judgment is rendered may appeal in the same manner, and with the same effect, as is provided for a prosecuting witness in section four thousand six hundred and ninety-one [§ 6089] of this code, otherwise the costs shall be taxed against the state.

Under the provisions of the Revision allowing appeals by the state it was held that the power here conferred of taxing costs against the prosecuting witness in certain cases might be exercised by the district court upon the trial of a criminal cause on appeal, although such order was not entered by the justice of the peace before whom the case was originally tried, and although no additional evidence was introduced to show absence of probable cause: In re Trenchard, 16-53.

Also held, that, where the judgment was for defendant, the prosecuting witness might appeal from an order of the justice taxing to him the costs of prosecution: State v. Roney, 37-30.

The justice is invested with discretion as to the taxation of costs to the prosecutor, and his conclusion cannot be reversed by the district court unless he has abused such discretion. And the correctness of the judgment of the justice must be determined by an inspection of the record, and not by new evidence: State v. Kerns, 64-306.

An appeal by prosecuting witness from an order taxing the costs of the prosecution to him must be taken at the time judgment is rendered and not afterwards: State v. Knapf, 61-522.

As to taxation of costs in district court, see § 5675 and notes. And see § 6089 and notes.

CHAPTER 13.

OF SELECTING, DRAWING, SUMMONING, AND IMPANELING OF THE GRAND JURY.

5638. Selecting. 4255. The selecting, drawing, and summoning of the grand jury is as prescribed in the code of civil practice. [R., § 4608; C., '51, § 2881.]

It is not a valid objection to a grand jury that the judges of election, in making returns of names of persons to serve as grand jurors, returned in all eighty-five names instead of seventy-five, as required by § 312, if the extra names had been stricken off before the grand jury was drawn and the proper number have been regularly drawn and summoned. Neither is it a sufficient objection that the names thus returned were not entered in the election book: State v. Knight, 19-94.

Where there has been no substantial departure in the selection, drawing, etc., of the grand jury affecting substantially the rights of defendant, a motion to set aside the indictment for irregularities in connection with their selection should not be sustained: State v. Brandt, 41-593.

It would seem that deviations from the method pointed out for the selection, etc., of the grand jury, of a slight and unimportant nature, should not be regarded: State v. Carney, 20-82.

In general, see §§ 305-323.

5639. Method; vacancies filled. 4256; 21 G. A., ch. 42, § 3. At a term of court at which grand jurors are required to appear, the panel shall be called and the names of the grand jurors appearing shall be entered on the record. From the number of jurors thus summoned and appearing the clerk shall select, by lot, the required number. If more grand jurors have appeared than the number required to fill the panel, the remaining number shall be discharged for the term. If from any cause, either then or afterward, the number of the panel be reduced to a less number than required, the court may order the sheriff of the county to summon a sufficient number of qualified persons to complete the panel. [R., § 4609; C., '51, § 2881.]

The impaneling is the final formation by the court of the grand jury, the act immediately preceding the swearing of the jury which ascertains who are to be sworn: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 446.

Filling panel: If a grand juror is discharged subsequently to the formation of the jury, the panel should be filled by the summoning of another juror: Norris' House v. State, 3 G. Gr., 513.

Objection to the substitution of one grand juror for another without having the vacancy filled in the manner here required must be made at the time of such substitution: State v. Howard, 10-101.

A judgment of conviction will not be reversed on the ground that, subsequently to the formation of the grand jury, one of the jurors was excused and a person substituted, as to whom defendant did not have opportunity to exercise his right of challenge, if not appearing that the new juror was disqualified or the defendant prejudiced: State v. Fowler, 52-103.

Where grand jurors were absent at a term of court by reason of instruction from the judge that they need not appear unless specially summoned, held, that it was error to impanel a grand jury omitting therefrom the persons thus failing to appear, and that a motion to quash an indictment found by such grand jury should have been sustained: State v. Bowman, 73-110.

After challenges allowed: In case of the challenge of an individual juror, there is no provision for summoning another juror in his place. The member thus challenged does not cease to become a member of the grand jury, and his place is not to be supplied; and an indictment found by the requisite number of grand jurors as to whom no cause of challenge by defendant is interposed will be good: State v. Ostrander, 18-435.

But where, by challenges to nine of the grand jurors, the number was reduced below twelve, held, that the court should, upon application of the district attorney, have ordered the vacancies in the grand jury to be filled: State v. Garhart, 35-315.

So where six grand jurors were challenged it was held not error to reorganize the jury and fill up the panel: State v. Mooney, 10-506.

Where, by reason of the sustaining of challenges to individual jurors, the panel is left with a less number than fifteen jurors qualified to act in the case in which the challenges have been allowed, it is competent for the court to order the panel to be filled by an addition of the requisite number of jurors to act only in such case; and it is the duty of the court to thus fill the panel where by challenges it is reduced to less than twelve, but it is not error to refuse to thus fill the panel where twelve or more of the regular jurors remain unchallenged: State v. Shelton, 64-333.

See, further, §§ 5641-5647 and notes.

New precept: The provision of § 322 for the issuance of a new precept applies only to a case where all the jurors fail to appear, or it is determined that the whole panel has been illegally selected or drawn. Such provision has no reference to the case of failure of jurors to attend: State v. Pierce, 8-231.

Where a part of the grand jury fails to appear, the court may orally direct the sheriff to summon a sufficient number to complete the panel, which order should be entered of record, but a written precept is not necessary: State v. Miller, 53-84; State v. Miller, 53-154.

The discharge of one grand jury and the impaneling of another to which there is no objection except the fact that the first has been erroneously discharged will be no ground for quashing an indictment found by the second: State v. Hughes, 58-165.

At least this is so where there is no allegation or showing of prejudice or possible injustice to defendant from the fact of the discharge of the first jury: State v. Hart, 67-142.

Re-summoning: A grand jury having once been discharged may be re-summoned at the same term: State v. Reid, 20-413.

The court has no power to remove, reform or change the members of the grand jury: Keitler v. State, 4 G. Gr., 291.

5640. Person summoned to fill vacancy. 4257. Persons summoned by the sheriff to supply a deficiency in the requisite number of grand jurors, serve only during the term at which they are summoned. [R., § 4610; C., '51, § 2881.]

Where a grand jury composed in part of jurors summoned to supply a deficiency were discharged, and again summoned at the same

5641. Challenge. 4258. A defendant held to answer to a public offense, may challenge the panel of the grand jury, and the state or defendant may challenge any individual juror. [R., § 4611; C., '51, § 2882.]

Who may challenge: The proper method of taking advantage of irregularity in the selection, summoning or impaneling the grand jury, where the defendant has been held to answer before the formation of the grand jury, is by challenge to the panel: State v. Hart, 29-268; State v. Hinkle, 6-380; Dixon v. State, 3-416; State v. Howard, 10-101; State v. Ingalls, 17-8.

In order to support the action of the court below in overruling a motion to set aside the indictment on the ground that the grand jury was irregularly drawn, where it does not appear whether the defendant was held to answer before indictment or not, it will be presumed that he was: State v. Gibbs, 39-318.

Where defendant was bound over to appear before the grand jury after the grand jury was organized, held, that he was still entitled to exercise his right of challenge to such grand jury: State v. Mooney, 10-506.

A defendant under arrest in a preliminary proceeding, but not yet bound over to appear before the grand jury, is not entitled to challenge grand jurors although it is possible that his case may afterwards come before them: State v. Fitzgerald, 63-265.

A defendant not bound over to appear before the grand jury before the finding of an indictment against him cannot be deprived of the right to attack the indictment for causes which would have been grounds of challenge: Dutell v. State, 4 G. Gr., 125; Norris' House v. State, 3 G. Gr., 513.

Before the enactment of the provision in this section authorizing challenges of individual jurors on the part of the state, it was held that the prosecution had no right of challenge: Keitler v. State, 4 G. Gr., 291.

Time for challenge: The time within which the right of challenge to grand jurors shall be exercised is not prescribed, and the prisoner ought to be permitted to exercise it at any time before the consideration of his case. Therefore, where a case is re-submitted to the same grand jury after a previous indictment has been set aside, the prisoner should be allowed an opportunity to challenge the members of such grand jury on the ground that they have previously formed and expressed an opinion in returning the first indictment:

5642. To individual juror by state. 4259. A challenge to an individual juror may be made by the state, for one or more of the following causes:

1. That he is related either by affinity or consanguinity nearer than in the fifth degree, or stands in the relation of agent, clerk, servant, or employee to any person held to answer for a public offense whose case may come before the grand jury;

2. That he is bail for any one held to answer for a public offense, whose case may come before the grand jury; term, held, that such persons were properly summoned as members: State v. Reid, 20-413, 422.

State v. Osborne, 61-330; State v. Gillick, 7-287.

Defendant should exercise his right of challenge at the proper time or it will be held waived: State v. Harris, 38-242.

Where defendant was in court to answer an indictment, and on motion the indictment was quashed, and the court then referred the matter to the grand jury for further consideration, and they returned an indictment charging defendant with a different crime, held, that an objection to the panel should have been then raised, and could not be taken advantage of afterwards: State v. Ruitwen, 58-121.

An objection to the grand jury must be made before pleading to the indictment: State v. Reid, 20-413.

Challenges must be interposed before the swearing of the jury: See § 5649.

A judgment of conviction will not be reversed on the ground that, subsequently to the formation of the grand jury, one of the jurors was excused and a person substituted, as to whom defendant did not have opportunity to exercise his right of challenge, it not appearing that the new juror was disqualified or the defendant prejudiced: State v. Fowler, 52-103.

Waiver of challenge: A defendant bound over to answer may waive his right to challenge the grand jury, and will not be in default if he does not appear for that purpose: State v. Klingman, 14-404; Ringgold County v. Ross, 40-176.

Nor will his bail bond be forfeited by failure to so appear: Ringgold County v. Ross, 40-176.

Presence of defendant: It seems that the right of challenging an individual grand juror may be exercised or waived by defendant's attorney in the absence of defendant, even on a trial for felony. The presence of defendant at this proceeding is not made essential. At any rate, where it does not appear that there was any objection for which defendant could have challenged a juror, alleged error in forming the grand jury in defendant's absence will be error without prejudice: State v. Fetter, 25-67.

Error not cured by conviction: The fact that defendant is convicted does not cure any error in refusing him the privilege of challenging grand jurors: State v. Osborne, 61-330.

3. That he is defendant in a prosecution similar to any prosecution to be examined by the grand jury;

4. That he is, or within one year preceding has been, engaged or interested in carrying on any business, calling, or employment, the carrying on of which is a violation of law, and for which the juror may be indicted by the grand jury.

5643. To the panel. 4260. A challenge to the panel can be interposed only for the reason that they were not appointed, drawn, or summoned as prescribed by law. [R., § 4612; C., '51, § 2883.]

A challenge to the panel need not be demurred or pleaded to by the state. Defendant must introduce evidence in support of his challenge or it will be overruled: State v. Gillick, 10-98.

The burden of showing irregularity in the selection of grand jurors is upon the party making the challenge: State v. Hartman, 10-589.

That the grand jury was reorganized during the term, held not a ground for challenge to the panel: State v. Mooney, 10-506.

A defendant held to answer must interpose these grounds of objection at the time the grand jury is impaneled and not afterward: See § 5724 and note.

As to method and time of challenging the panel, see § 5641 and notes.

5644. By defendant to individual juror. 4261. A challenge to an individual juror by the defendant, may be made for one or more of the following causes only:

1. That he is a minor, insane, or not competent by law to serve as such juror;

2. That he is a prosecutor upon a charge against the defendant;

3. Having formed or expressed such an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner as would prevent him from rendering a true verdict upon the evidence submitted on the trial. [R., § 4613; C., '51, § 2884.]

Exemption from service (under § 306) is a personal privilege which may be waived: State v. Adams, 20-486.

Alienage: That a member of the grand jury is an alien is a ground of challenge, but not a ground for setting aside an indictment: State v. Gibbs, 39-318.

Alienage will not be presumed. The party asserting it as a ground of challenge has the burden of proving it: State v. Haynes, 54-109.

Bias; opinion of guilt or innocence: Under a statutory provision somewhat different from this section, held, that it was only where a juror had formed or expressed an unqualified opinion of defendant's guilt that he was disqualified as a juror, and that the fact that he had formed an opinion which, upon further interrogation, he stated was not unqualified, did not render him incompetent: State v. Hinkle, 6-380.

The statement of a juror that he had read some portion of the evidence taken at the coroner's inquest upon the body of the person with whose killing defendant was charged, but did not know that he had read the whole of it, and that he thought he had formed an opinion from what he had read as to the guilt of defendant, but that he had no prejudice or bias such as would prevent him from listening to the evidence and passing upon the question of guilt as impartially as though he had never heard of the case, held not sufficient to show that he was disqualified: State v. Shelton, 64-333.

Where, under § 5677, a case is sent back to the same grand jury after a former indictment found by them is set aside, it is a sufficient cause of challenge to the jurors that they have heard the evidence upon which the previous indictment was found, and by the finding of such indictment have formed and expressed an opinion as to the guilt of defendant: State v. Gillick, 7-287; State v. Osborne, 61-330.

It seems that a challenge to a grand juror may be allowed for any cause that would constitute an objection to a petit juror: State v. Gillick, 7-287.

As to the time and method of making the challenges, see notes to § 5641.

5645. Decided by the court. 4262. Challenges to the panel or to an individual juror must be decided by the court. [R., § 4615; C., '51, § 2886.]

5646. Challenge to panel allowed. 4263. If a challenge to the panel be allowed, the grand jury is prohibited from inquiring into the charge against the defendant by whom it was interposed. If the jury does so and finds an indictment the court must set it aside. [R., § 4616; C., '51, § 2887.]

5647. To individual juror. 4264. If a challenge to an individual juror be allowed, he shall not be present at, or take any part in, the consideration of the charge against the defendant. [R., § 4617; C., '51, § 2888.]

In such case there is no provision for summoning another juror in place of one as to whom a challenge is sustained. He does not cease to be a member of the grand jury, and his place cannot be supplied under § 5639. An indictment against a defendant held to answer, found by grand jurors as to whom no challenge by defendant has been sustained (if sufficient in number), will be good (explaining Norris' House v. State, 3 G. Gr., 513; State v. Ostrander, 18-435. And see notes to § 5639.

5648. Effect of violation. 4265. The grand jury must inform the court of a violation of the last section, that it may be punished as a contempt. [R., § 4618; C., '51, § 2889.]

5649. Joinder in challenges; time for challenge. 4266. When several persons are held to answer for one and the same offense, no challenge to the panel can be made unless they all join in such challenge, nor can any objection be interposed by a defendant to the grand jury or to any individual juror for any cause of challenge after they are sworn. [R., § 4619; C., '51, § 2890.]

An objection to the grand jury, or an individual juror, cannot be interposed, by a defendant held to answer before the formation of the grand jury, for any cause of challenge after the jury is sworn: State v. Ingalls, 17-8; Dixon v. State, 3-416; State v. Hinkle, 6-380; State v. Howard, 10-101; State v. Hart, 29-268. And see § 5641 and notes.

A defendant held to answer has an opportunity to challenge a juror before the jury is sworn, and, failing to do so then, cannot afterward make objection: State v. Gibbs, 39-318.

Where defendant was bound over to appear before the grand jury after the grand jury was organized, held, that he was still entitled to exercise his right of challenge to such grand jury: State v. Mooney, 10-506.

This section must be confined to defendants who have an opportunity of interposing the objection therein allowed. A defendant not bound over to appear before the grand jury prior to the finding of an indictment against him is not deprived of the right to attack the indictment for causes which would have been grounds of challenge: Norris' House v. State, 3 G. Gr., 513; Dutell v. State, 4 G. Gr., 125.

A defendant under arrest in a preliminary proceeding, but not yet bound over to appear before the grand jury, is not entitled to challenge grand jurors, although it is possible his case may afterwards come before them: State v. Fitzgerald, 63-268.

5650. Foreman. 4267. From the persons summoned to serve as grand jurors, the court must appoint a foreman; the court must also appoint a foreman when the person already appointed is discharged, excused, or from any cause becomes unable to act before the grand jury is finally discharged. [R., § 4620; C., '51, § 2891.]

The foreman may be selected either from those summoned to supply a deficiency: State v. Brandt, 41-593, 605.

5651. Oath to foreman. 4268. The following oath must be administered to the foreman of the grand jury: "You, as foreman of the grand jury, shall diligently inquire and true presentment make of all public offenses against the people of this state, committed or triable within this county, of which you have, or can obtain legal evidence; you shall present no person through malice, hatred, or ill-will, nor leave any unpresented, through fear, favor, or affection, or for any reward, or the promise or hope thereof, but in all your presentments, you shall present the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, according to the best of your skill and understanding. So help you God." [R., § 4621; C., '51, § 2892.]

5652. Oath to others. 4269. The following oath must thereupon be administered to the other grand jurors present: "The same oath which your foreman has now taken before you on his part, you and each of you shall well and truly observe on your part. So help you God." [R., § 4622; C., '51, § 2893.]

5653. Charged by the court. 4270. The grand jury being impaneled and sworn, may be charged by the court. In doing so, the court shall give them such information as it may deem proper as to the nature of their duties, and any charges for public offenses returned to the court or likely to come before the grand jury. And it is hereby made the duty of the court to specially give in charge to the grand jury, the provisions of law regulating the accounting by public officers for fines and fees collected by them, and providing for the suppression of intemperance. [R., § 4623; C., '51, § 2894.]

5654. Discharge. 4271. The grand jury on the completion of its business shall be discharged by the court. But whether its business be completed or not, it is discharged by the final adjournment thereof. [R., § 4625; C., '51, § 2896.]

An indictment may be found by a grand jury any time during a term of court which commenced within the year for which the jury was chosen, and has extended into the following year without adjournment: State v Winebrenner, 67-230.

And see § 317 and notes.

CHAPTER 14.

OF THE POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE GRAND JURY.

5655. Powers. 4272. The grand jury has power, and it is made its duty, to inquire into all indictable offenses committed, or which may be tried, within the county, and present them to the court by indictment. [R., § 4626; C., '51, § 2897.]

The grand jury may on their own motion find an indictment against defendant on a charge which has been previously dismissed by them and without its re-submission to them by the court: State v. Collins, 73-542.

5656. Evidence. 4273; 18 G. A., ch. 130, § 2. The indictment must in all cases be found only upon evidence given by witnesses produced, sworn and examined before the grand jury, or furnished by legal documentary evidence, or upon the minutes of evidence giving by witnesses before a committing magistrate. [R., § 4627; C., '51, § 2899.]

The examination of an incompetent witness by the grand jury will not vitiate the indictment: State v. Tucker, 20-508.

The court cannot inquire into the character of evidence upon which the grand jury acted in finding an indictment. So held where it was claimed that after the witnesses were examined one of the grand jurors was discharged and his place supplied by a by-stander, the evidence not being again presented: State v. Fowler, 52-103.

Where an indictment is set aside and the case recommitted to the same grand jury, they may consider evidence of witnesses who have already been before them without their being recalled: State v. Clapper, 59-279.

The grand jury is simply a court of inquiry and may call any person before it, whether favorable or unfavorable to the prosecution, and evidence given before the grand jury in an investigation as to the commission of a crime cannot, in the event of the death of the witness before the trial, be proved on the trial as the testimony of such witness, for the reason that there could be no cross-examination before the grand jury; and on the other hand the testimony of a witness on such investigation, tending to fix the crime upon another person than the one subsequently indicted for it, cannot be shown by defendant in case of the death of such witness, at least where the investigation before the grand jury was without the presence or knowledge of the prosecuting officer: State v. Porter, 74-623.

See, further, § 5672 and notes.

5657. Administer oath. 4274. The grand jury has power, by its foreman, to administer the oath to all witnesses produced and examined before it. [R., § 4628.]

5658. Clerk. 4275; 22 G. A., ch. 38. It is the duty of the grand jury to appoint one of its number, who is not foreman, clerk thereof, who must take and preserve the minutes of the proceedings and of the evidence given before it, except the votes of the individual members thereof on finding an indictment. Provided, that in counties having a population, as shown by the last preceding census, of twenty thousand or over, the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion may appoint a competent person, not a member of the grand jury, clerk thereof, who shall receive a compensation of three dollars per day. He shall take no part in the proceedings aside from his clerical duties, and he shall strictly abstain from expressing an opinion upon any question before the grand jury either to the jury or to any member thereof, and shall not be present when any vote is being taken upon the finding of an indictment. And provided, further, that the following oath must be administered to such clerk: "You as clerk of the grand jury shall faithfully and impartially perform the duties of clerk and you will not reveal to any one the proceedings of the grand jury. You will strictly abstain from expressing any opinion upon any question before the jury, either to the jury or any member thereof, so help you God." [R., § 4629.]

As to the minutes of evidence, their return, and for what they may be used, see § 5676 and notes.

5659. Evidence for defendant. 4276. The grand jury is not bound to hear evidence for the defendant, but it is its duty to weigh all the evidence submitted to it, and when it has reason to believe that other evidence within its reach will explain away the charge, it may order such evidence to be produced. [R., § 4630; C., '51, § 2900.]

5660. Member as witness. 4277. If a member of the grand jury knows, or has reason to believe that a public offense has been committed, triable in the county, he must declare the same to his fellow-jurors, and be sworn as a witness upon the investigation before them. [R., § 4631; C., '51, § 2901.]

5661. Special duty. 4278. It is made the special duty of the grand jury to inquire:

1. Into the case of every person imprisoned in the jail of the county on a criminal charge and not indicted;
2. Into the condition and management of the public prisons within the county;
3. Into the wilful and corrupt misconduct in office of all county officers;
4. Into the obstruction of highways. [R., § 4632; C., '51, § 2902.]

The grand jury cannot report to the court the result of their inquiry into the conduct of county officers otherwise than by indictment; and the members of a grand jury charging a county officer with misconduct otherwise than by indictment may render themselves liable to an action of libel: Rector v. Smith, 11-302.

5662. Issue subpoenas. 4279. The clerk of the court must, whenever required by the foreman of the grand jury or district [county] attorney, issue subpoenas for witnesses to appear before the grand jury. [R., § 4633; C., '51, § 2903.]

5663. Access to county jails and public records. 4280. The jury is entitled to free access at all reasonable times to the county jails, and to the examination without charge, of all public records within the county. [R., § 4634; C., '51, § 2904.]

5664. Advice of county attorney. 4281. The grand jury may, at all reasonable times, ask the advice of the district [county] attorney, or the court; and the district [county] attorney may attend before it for the purpose of examining witnesses when the grand jury deems it necessary. [R., § 4635; C., '51, § 2905.]

5665. Who present. 4282. Such attorney shall be allowed at all times to appear before the grand jury on his own request, for the purpose of giving information relative to any matter cognizable by it; but no such attorney, nor any other officer or person, except the grand jury, must be present when the question is taken upon the finding of an indictment. [R., § 4636; C., '51, § 2906.]

5666. Should find indictment when. 4283. The grand jury should find an indictment when all the evidence before it, taken together, is such as in its own judgment would, if unexplained, warrant a conviction by the trial jury. When the evidence is not such, it should not. [R., § 4637.]

5667. Proceedings secret. 4284. Every member of the grand jury must keep secret the proceedings of that body and the testimony given before them, except as hereinafter required. Nor shall any grand juror or officer of the court disclose the fact that an indictment for a felony has been found against any person not in custody or under bail, otherwise than by presenting the same in court, or issuing or executing process thereon, until such person has been arrested. A violation of this section is a misdemeanor. [R., § 4638; C., '51, § 2907.]

This provision is general and without limit as to time. A grand juror is not allowed to make affidavit for the purpose of showing that an indictment was not found by the concurrence of twelve jurors: State v. Gibbs, 39-318, 322. And see State v. Mewherter, 46-88.

The fact that a bailiff was present in the grand jury room during their proceedings, though not when the final vote was taken, held not sufficient to affect the validity of the indictment: State v. Kimball, 29-267.

5668. Exception. 4285. A member of the grand jury may be required by the court to disclose the testimony of a witness examined before them, for the purpose of ascertaining whether it is consistent with that given by the witness before court, or to disclose the testimony given before them by any witness upon a charge against him of perjury. [R., § 4639; C., '51, § 2908.]

This may be done for the purpose of impeaching a witness who testified before the grand jury: State v. Hayden, 45-11.

5669. Jurors not to be questioned. 4286. No grand juror shall be questioned for anything he may say, or any vote he may give, in the grand jury, relative to a matter legally pending before them, except for perjury of which he may have been guilty in making an accusation, or in giving testimony to his fellow-jurors. [R., § 4640; C., '51, § 2909.]

5671. Failure to obey subpoena. 4288. If a witness fail to attend before the grand jury, in obedience to a subpoena issued for that purpose and duly served, the court shall, upon the application of the district [county] attorney, or foreman of the grand jury, proceed and coerce the attendance of the witness, and may punish his disobedience as in the case of a witness failing to attend on the trial. [R., § 4642.]

5672. Minutes of preliminary examination. 4289; 18 G. A., ch. 130, § 3. All the papers and other matters of evidence relating to the arrest and preliminary examination of the charge against defendants who have been held to answer, returned to the court by magistrates, shall be laid before the grand jury, and shall be competent evidence upon which an indictment may be found if the grand jury are satisfied that such evidence alone, or with other evidence, if unexplained, would warrant a conviction by the trial jury; and the grand jury need not have before them for examination any witness who was examined before the committing magistrate and a minute of whose evidence has been returned by said magistrate, unless requested by the district [county] attorney, and if an indictment is found in whole or in part upon the minutes of evidence taken before a committing magistrate, the clerk of the grand jury shall write out a brief minute of the substance of such evidence, and the same shall be returned to the court with the indictment. If upon investigation the grand jury refuses to find an indictment, it shall return all of said papers to the court, with an indorsement thereon, signed by the foreman, to the effect that the charge is dismissed, and thereupon the court must order the discharge of the defendant from custody, if in jail, or the exoneration of the bail, if bail be given, unless the court should, upon good cause shown, be of opinion that the charge should be again submitted to the grand jury, in which case the defendant may be continued in custody, or on bail, until the next term of the court. [R., § 4643.]

Where an indictment is found by a grand jury upon the minutes of the testimony before the magistrate the names of the witnesses examined before the magistrate may be indorsed on the back of the indictment, and they may then be examined for the prosecution without their having testified before the grand jury: State v. Rodman, 62-456.

Although the minutes of the evidence given before a committing magistrate are not certified to by him, as required by § 5624, yet where an indictment is found upon such minutes, and a minute thereof is returned by the grand jury as here provided, it will be presumed that they ascertained by satisfactory and competent evidence, before taking action, that the minutes were a true record of the evidence given before the magistrate; and the absence of such certificate is not ground for objecting to a witness, a minute of whose evidence is thus returned with the indictment: State v. Kepper, 65-745.

See §§ 5624, 5625 and 5656 and notes.

5673. Dismissal of charge. 4290. Such dismissal of the charge, does not prevent the same from being again submitted to a grand jury as often as the court may direct; but without such direction, it cannot again be submitted. [R., § 4644.]

After the dismissal of a charge, and without re-submission thereof to the grand jury, they may find an indictment against the defendant for such charge on their own motion: State v. Collis, 73-542.

CHAPTER 15.

OF THE FINDING AND PRESENTMENT OF INDICTMENT.

5674. How many jurors must concur. 4291; 21 G. A., ch. 42, § 4. An indictment cannot be found without the concurrence of four grand jurors, when the grand jury is composed of five members; and not without the concurrence of five grand jurors when the grand jury is composed of seven members. Every indictment must be indorsed "a true bill," and the indorsement must be signed by the foreman of the grand jury. [R., § 4645; C., '51, § 2910.]

Concurrence of grand jurors: Under the section before amendment, held, that while the panel should contain fifteen jurors, and be kept full if any were discharged, yet the statute did not require that all be present at the finding of an indictment; and if any were absent by reason of a challenge having been interposed and sustained as to them at the instance of a defendant held to answer, provided twelve concurred in finding the indictment, it would be good (§ 5647 and notes): State v. Ostrander, 18-435. And see notes to § 5639.

Record conclusive: Where the record shows that an indictment was found by a full grand jury, the fact that such grand jury was composed of less than the required number of jurors cannot be shown by evidence aliunde: Hall v. State, 4 G. Gr., 73.

Objection on account of irregularity in the finding of an indictment is waived by pleading and submitting without objection to the verdict: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

It is not necessary that the record, on appeal, state that the indictment was found by a legal grand jury, nor that it contain their names. The indorsement of the indictment by the foreman as a true bill is conclusive evidence that it was duly found and concurred in by a sufficient number of the grand jury: Ibid.

Affidavits of grand jurors are not competent for the purpose of proving that an indictment duly returned was not concurred in by twelve grand jurors: State v. Gibbs, 39-318; State v. Newberger, 46-88.

After an indictment has been presented and become a matter of record, it is not competent for the grand jurors who found it to testify that they did not vote to find the bill, or how they voted, or what they intended to find. Therefore, held, that where the indictment charged acts constituting murder in the first degree, it was not competent to present affidavits of the grand jurors showing that they had refused to find an indictment for murder and intended to charge only manslaughter, even though, in the introductory part of the indictment, the crime was named as manslaughter: State v. Davis, 41-311.

Indorsement by foreman: An indorsement of the name of the foreman giving the initials of his Christian name instead of his full name, held sufficient: State v. Groome, 10-308.

The requirement that the foreman's name be subscribed to the indorsement of "a true bill" is merely directory, and if it otherwise appear that the indictment was properly returned by the grand jury, the absence of the proper indorsement by the foreman cannot be taken advantage of after conviction: Wan-kou-chaw-neek-kaw v. United States, Mor., 332.

The fact that it does not appear that the indictment is indorsed "a true bill" and marked filed by the clerk cannot be raised for the first time on appeal: Hughes v. State, 4-554.

5675. Private prosecutor. 4292. When an indictment is found at the instance of a private prosecutor, the following must be added to the indorsement required by the preceding section, "found at the instance of" (here state the name of the person), and in such case, if the prosecution fails, the court trying the cause may award costs against the private prosecutor, if satisfied, from all the circumstances, that the prosecution was malicious or without probable cause. [R., § 4346.]

The court has the authority to tax costs to the prosecutor, and it will be presumed that such authority is correctly exercised in the absence of a showing to the contrary: State v. Donnell, 11-452.

A party considering himself aggrieved by the action of the court must have the evidence on which the court acted presented to the supreme court on appeal in order to secure a review of such action: Ibid.

The mere failure of a private prosecutor to appear and prosecute a defendant put under bonds to keep the peace, as contemplated in §§ 5507 and 5508, will not warrant a judgment against such prosecutor for costs: State v. Holaday, 22-397.

The requirement of the indorsement of the name of the private prosecutor at whose instance the indictment is found is directory only, and for the purpose of enabling the court to tax the costs against such prosecutor in case the prosecution fails. The requirement of § 5317, that a prosecution for adultery shall be commenced only on complaint of the husband or wife of the offending party, does not render it necessary that the name of such husband or wife be indorsed on the indictment as prosecutor: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

As to taxation of costs by a justice of the peace against a prosecuting witness and on appeal, see § 5637 and notes, and § 6089 and notes.

5676. Names of witnesses indorsed on indictment. 4293; 18 G. A., ch. 130, § 4. When an indictment is found, the names of all witnesses on whose evidence it is found must be indorsed thereon before it is presented to the court, and the minutes of the evidence of such witnesses must be presented with the indictment to the court, and filed by the clerk of the court, and remain in his office as a record; but the minutes of evidence shall not be open for the inspection of any person except the judge of the court, the district [county] attorney or his clerk, the defendant and his counsel, or the clerk of such counsel, and the clerk of the court must within two days after demand made, furnish the defendant or his counsel a copy thereof without charge, or permit the defendant's counsel or the clerk of such counsel to take a copy. [R., § 4647; C., '51, § 2913.]

Indorsing names of witnesses: The objection that the names of witnesses examined before the grand jury are not indorsed on the indictment should be raised in the trial court or it will be regarded as waived: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

Names of witnesses before the grand jury who do not give any material testimony, and the minutes of whose testimony are not returned, need not be indorsed on the indictment: State v. Little, 42-51.

Affidavits cannot be received to show that witnesses whose names are not indorsed, and minutes of whose evidence are not returned, were examined before the grand jury: Ibid.

It is not error in the court to permit, upon motion of the prosecuting attorney, an indorsement to be made on the back of the indictment of the name of a witness who has been before the grand jury: State v. Robinson, 47-489.

The fact that the witness' name was indorsed on the indictment, and what appeared to be minutes of his testimony attached thereto, will not entitle the prosecution to introduce him on the trial under the provisions of § 5806, unless he was actually examined as a witness before the grand jury: State v. Porter, 74-623.

Failure of the state to produce all the witnesses that testified before the grand jury is not a wrong nor a presumption of wrong. The state is not required to produce all such witnesses at the trial of the case: State v. Dillon, 74-653.

As to what is a sufficient indorsement of witnesses' names, so as to entitle the prosecution to call them upon the trial, see § 5806 and notes.

Returning minutes of testimony: The minutes need not be attached to, or made a part of, the indictment, and a mere failure to file the same should not deprive the state of its evidence: State v. Postlewait, 14-446.

It is sufficient that they be returned into court and filed with the clerk: State v. Hamilton, 42-655.

That they are handed to the clerk and deposited with him sufficiently constitutes a filing: State v. Guisenhouse, 20-227.

That the minutes include testimony taken in other cases does not necessarily invalidate them: Ibid.

The minutes, when returned, become a part of the record and cannot be impeached by affidavits: State v. Little, 42-51.

Failure of the clerk to file the minutes of testimony returned by the grand jury cannot be raised by demurrer to the indictment: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

If the minutes of testimony are returned by the grand jury with the indictment and placed by the clerk in his office, and remain there as a part of the record, this is a sufficient filing within the requirement of the statute, although it would be better practice for the clerk to indorse such minutes as filed: Ibid.

The minutes of the testimony thus returned by the grand jury cannot be introduced as independent evidence on the trial. If it is sought by them to impeach a witness, the foundation for such impeachment must be laid in the usual way: State v. Ostrander, 18-435.

Nor are such minutes admissible to impeach a witness on the trial by showing a conflict between his evidence and that appearing to have been given by him before the grand jury: State v. Haylen, 45-11.

The fact that the minutes of the evidence returned by the grand jury do not support the indictment is not ground for quashing it or setting it aside: State v. Harris, 36-268.

Documentary evidence or evidence identifying it need not be set out or noticed in the minutes: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271.

Although the minutes of the evidence taken before the committing magistrate are not certified to as required by statute in such cases, yet if the grand jury act upon such minutes and return with the indictment a memorandum of the testimony thus submitted to them, it will be presumed that they had before them sufficient evidence that the minutes on which they acted were true minutes of the evidence before the magistrate, and the witnesses whose evidence is thus returned and whose names are properly indorsed upon the indictment cannot be excluded from testifying on the trial: State v. Kepper, 65-745.

Minutes of evidence given before the grand jury are to be taken by its clerk: See § 5638.

Failure to indorse names of witnesses on indictment, and failure to return the minutes of evidence therewith, are grounds for setting aside the indictment: See § 5722, ¶ 2, and notes.

Witnesses whose names are not so indorsed, and minutes of whose evidence are not so returned, cannot be called by the prosecution except upon notice thereof having been previously given to the defendant: See § 5806 and notes.

5677. Minutes used on re-submission. 18 G. A., ch. 130, § 5. When, on demurrer, motion to set aside, or otherwise, an indictment is held insufficient, and an order is made to re-submit the case to the same or other grand jury, or where the grand jury have ignored a bill and the same has been ordered back to the same or other grand jury for further investigation, it shall be unnecessary to summon the witnesses again before such jury in such cases, but the minutes of the testimony returned with the defective indictment, or ignored bill, or information, shall be detached and returned to the grand jury, and thereupon, without more, such grand jury may find a bill and attach said minutes of the evidence thereto and return said indictment therewith into court in the usual manner; and the grand jury may also, in either case, take additional testimony.

Where an indictment is set aside and the case recommitted to the same grand jury, there is no objection to their considering the evidence of witnesses who have already been before them without calling them the second time: State v. Clapper, 59-79.

When a case is sent back to the same grand jury, the prisoner should be allowed to challenge the members of such grand jury on the ground of having formed and expressed an opinion by the finding of the first indictment: State v. Osborne, 61-330.

5678. 18 G. A., ch. 130, § 6. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

5679. Presented to the court. 4294. The indictment, when found and indorsed, as prescribed by this chapter, must be presented by the foreman, in the presence of the grand jury, to the court, and marked "filed" by the clerk of the court, and remain in his office as a record. [R., § 4648; C., '51, § 2914.]

Presentation to the court: The requirement that the indictment must be presented, etc. is directory only, and a failure of the clerk to make the indorsement on the indictment will not invalidate the proceedings (explaining State v. Glover, 3 G. Gr., 249): State v. Axt, 6-511; State v. Shepard, 10-126.

In the absence of an affirmative showing to the contrary it will be presumed that the requirements of the statute as to the presentation were complied with: State v. McIntire, 59-267.

Where defendant moved to strike the indictment from the files because it had been altered by erasure and insertion of other words, held, that the affidavits introduced disproved the defendant's allegation: State v. Hughes, 58-165.

Indorsement by the clerk: No record of the filing of the indictment, other than the indorsement of the clerk on the indictment itself, need be made, at least not until after the arrest of the accused: Wrocklege v. State, 1-167; Herring v. State, 1-205.

It is not essential that the indorsement on the indictment should recite that it was presented by the foreman, in the presence of the grand jury, to the court: State v. Jolly, 7-15.

A mistake in the indorsement on the indictment as to the county in which it was filed, held not a fatal error, where it appeared that it was presented and filed in the proper county: State v. Smouse, 50-43.

Indorsements in particular cases held to be in substantial compliance with the provisions of the statute as to presenting and filing: Dixon v. State, 4 G. Gr., 381; Wrocklege v. State, 1-167.

The court should be named in the indorsement, although a failure to do so will not be fatal: State v. Jolly, 7-15.

Failure of the clerk to file the indictment will not invalidate the proceedings: State v. Rivers, 58-102.

The fact that it does not appear that the indictment was marked filed by the clerk cannot be raised for the first time on appeal: Hughes v. State, 4-554.

And see notes to preceding section.

Substitution of lost indictment: If the indictment is lost or abstracted after the arraignment of defendant, the court may, upon motion, substitute a copy and proceed upon the record thus made, the same as upon the original indictment: State v. Rivers, 58-102; State v. Stevisiger, 61-623.

Where, an indictment being lost, a second one was returned for the same offense, which being held defective, and the original being found, a trial was had under the first indictment, held, that such proceedings were proper and could not be dismissed on the ground of another indictment pending: Reddan v. State, 4 G. Gr., 137.

CHAPTER 16.

OF INDICTMENT; ITS FORM AND REQUISITES.

5680. Defined. 4295. An indictment is an accusation in writing found and presented by a grand jury, legally convoked and sworn, to the court in which it is impaneled, charging that a person therein named has done some act, or been guilty of some omission, which, by law, is a public offense punishable on indictment. [R., § 6449; C., '51, § 2915.]

5681. What must contain. 4296. The indictment must contain:

1. The title of the action, specifying the name of the court to which it is presented, and the name of the parties;
2. A statement of the facts constituting the offense, in ordinary and concise language, without repetition, and in such a manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended. [R., § 4650.]

An indictment describing the offense in the language of the statute will be sufficient without naming it; but naming the offense without stating the facts constituting it will not be sufficient. If the facts are properly stated, a wrong name will not vitiate the indictment, but will be mere surplusage: State v. Shaw, 35-575; State v. Davis, 41-311.

The facts constituting a public offense must be charged in the indictment, and when a statute creating such offense describes it in general terms, constituting a legal conclusion, the indictment must specifically describe the offense so as to bring it within the legal conclusion: State v. Brandt, 41-593, 607.

An indictment cannot be aided by intendment, or an omission supplied by construction. The facts necessary to constitute the offense must be in the manner indicated set out and averred: State v. Potter, 28-554.

Section applied: State v. Jamison, 74-602.

See, further, notes to the next two sections and §§ 5689-5691, and §§ 5689-5691.

5682. Form. 4297. It may be substantially in the following form:

District Court of the County of ———.

The State of Iowa }
against }
A. B. }

The grand jury of the county of ———, in the name and by the authority of the state of Iowa, accuse A. B. of the crime of (here insert the name of the offense, if it have one, such as treason, murder, manslaughter, robbery, larceny, or the like, or if it have no general name, then a brief general description of it as given by law, such as "mingling poison with food, with intent to kill a human being"), committed as follows:

The said A. B., on the first day of January, A. D. 18—, in the county as aforesaid (here insert the act or omission constituting the offense).

[R., § 4651.]

_____, District [County] Attorney, of the _____ [county] judicial district.

Formal parts: The expressions "State of Iowa" and "The State of Iowa" are essentially the same: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

An indictment in which the presentment is "in behalf of the state of Iowa" is good, although the expression "In the name and by the authority of the state of Iowa" is a more appropriate style. It need not be expressed in each proceeding in the conduct of a prosecution that it is made "in the name and by the authority," etc.: Wrocklege v. State, 1-167.

An indictment improperly naming the court, or failing to state the term thereof, is not subject to demurrer on that ground: State v. Schill, 27-263.

A mistake in the name of the state, or in the spelling of the name of the county, will not vitiate the indictment. These facts are not such as to prejudice the substantial rights of the defendant: State v. Gurlock, 14-444.

The fact that on the face of the indictment there is no title to the action, in accordance with the form given in this section, where the body of the indictment sets forth the names of the parties, does not constitute a valid objection thereto on motion or demurrer: State v. McIntire, 59-264; State v. McIntire, 59-267.

It is not essential that the indictment be signed by the district attorney: State v. Ruby, 61-86; State v. Wilmoth, 63-380.

5683. Direct and certain. 4298. The indictment must be direct and certain as regards:

1. The party charged;
2. The offense charged;

3. The particular circumstances of the offense charged, when they are necessary to constitute a complete offense. [R., § 4652.]

The party charged: An indictment against "a man in Turner Hall whose name to the grand jurors is unknown," held insufficient: Geiger v. State, 5-484.

The offense; particular circumstances: Only such facts need be stated in the indictment as are required to be proved on the trial: Nash v. State, 2 G. Gr., 286, 294.

In a prosecution under § 5214 for loaning public money, held, that an indictment stating that defendant "loaned" a certain sum of money "without authority of law," etc., was too general and should have stated the person to whom the money was loaned. So, also, in another count charging the conversion, etc., of public money, held, that the manner of conversion should have been specified: State v. Brandt, 41-593, 609, 611.

The facts constituting an offense must be stated in the indictment in language direct

An indictment signed A. B., "Pros. Atty. pro tem.," etc., held sufficient: Wrocklege v. State, 1-167.

Venue: An indictment for larceny corresponding to the form given in this section, charging the offense as committed "in the county aforesaid," held sufficiently specific as to the venue of the crime: State v. Lillard, 59-479.

So an indictment in this form sufficiently charges that the offense was committed in Iowa: State v. Winstrand, 37-110.

Conclusion: In an indictment under a statute it is not necessary in the conclusion to refer specifically to the statute under which the indictment is found: Zumhoff v. State, 4 G. Gr., 526.

The formal ending of an indictment, "and so the jurors, etc., do say that the said," etc., is but a legal conclusion, and will not cure any defect in the charging part of the indictment: State v. Parsons, 54-405.

A mistake in the conclusion of the indictment in reciting the name of the person injured, such name being correctly given in the body of the indictment, held immaterial: State v. McCuniff, 70-217.

The name of the offense charged need not be stated: See notes to preceding section.

Further, see notes to next section, and to §§ 5639-5691.

and certain as to the circumstances which are necessary to show a crime punishable by law. Omissions cannot be supplied by construction: State v. Porter, 28-554; State v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 63-508.

Where the acts charged are such that they are lawful under certain circumstances, it is not sufficient to allege that they were unlawfully done, but the existence of the facts showing the acts to be unlawful must be set out in the indictment: State v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 63-508.

The act of keeping liquors for sale, and the selling contrary to law, each constitutes a nuisance by statute, but the particular circumstances in this respect must be charged in the indictment, and if not charged cannot be proven: State v. Tierney, 74-237.

Needless particularity: Where a person or thing necessary to be mentioned in the indictment is described with unnecessary particularity, all the circumstances of the description must be proved: State v. Newland, 7-242; State v. Hesner, 55-494.

So held where the kind of liquor sold was specified in an indictment for illegal sale: State v. Hesner, 55-494.

Therefore, under an indictment for passing counterfeit bills on a certain bank, held, that the existence of such bank must be established, although by statutory provision the name of the bank need not have been charged: State v. Newland, 7-242.

Where the place is stated in the indictment as a matter of local description and not of venue, it is necessary to prove it as laid although it need not have been stated: State v. Crogan, 8-523.

But on the same point the supreme court was equally divided in State v. Verden, 24-126

See, further, notes to §§ 5681 and 5689-5691.

5684. Defendant's name. 4299. When a defendant is indicted by a fictitious or erroneous name, and in any subsequent stage of the proceedings before execution, his true name is discovered, an entry shall be made in the record of the proceedings, of his true name, referring to the fact of his being indicted by the name mentioned in the indictment, and the subsequent proceedings shall be in the true name, substantially as follows:

The State of Iowa
against
A. B., indicted by the name of C. D. }

5685. Must charge but one offense. 4300. The indictment must charge but one offense, but it may be charged in different forms to meet the testimony, and if it may have been committed in different modes and by different means, the indictment may allege the modes and means in the alternative; provided, that in case of compound offenses, where, in the same transaction, more than one offense has been committed, the indictment may charge the several offenses, and the defendant may be convicted of any offense included therein; provided further, that this section shall in no manner affect any provision of this code providing for the suppression of intemperance. [R., § 4654; C., '51, § 2917.]

Duplicity; charging distinct crimes: Although this section prohibits the charging of more than one offense in the same indictment, yet where two counts of the indictment charged two distinct offenses, one committed in the county where the indictment was found and the other in another county, held, that the latter count was mere surplusage and did not render the indictment bad: State v. Smouse, 50-43.

The same rule is applicable in case of an information: State v. Smouse, 49-631.

Objection to the indictment on the ground of duplicity cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court: State v. Henry, 59-391.

And held, that where one of the counts was dismissed before the introduction of any evidence, and the plea of guilty entered as to the remaining count, the defect in the indictment was cured and the defendant properly convicted: State v. Buck, 59-382.

An indictment charging a conspiracy to rob and steal does not necessarily charge more than one offense. The fact that the conspiracy, if consummated, would involve several distinct felonies would not render the indictment for the conspiracy bad for duplicity: State v. Sterling, 34-443; State v. Kennedy, 63-197.

Where the indictment charges a conspiracy to commit a crime and also the commission of the overt act, it appearing that it was not intended to charge nor put defendant on trial for any other crime than that of conspiracy, the indictment will not be considered objectionable: State v. Ormiston, 66-143.

But where the indictment charged other crimes outside of the conspiracy and not merely the overt act, held, that it was fatally defective: State v. Kennedy, 65-197.

An indictment charging an assault and battery does not charge two offenses. Every battery includes an assault: State v. Twogood, 7-252.

Nor does an indictment charging assault and battery with intent to commit great bodily injury charge more than one offense: Cokely v. State, 4-477.

Charging threats to kill two persons does not render the indictment objectionable as charging two offenses, the threat being the gist of the offense: State v. O'Mally, 48-501.

Objection for duplicity, when raised: The court should, on application, allow the defendant to withdraw his plea of not guilty for the purpose of making objection to the indictment on the ground of duplicity. Indeed there would be no impropriety, it seems, in requiring an election to be made in such case, without the plea being withdrawn: State v. Abrahams, 6-117.

Separate counts: A defendant cannot be charged with two distinct offenses in a single count. In felony, if two or more distinct offenses are contained in the same indictment though in different counts, it may be quashed or the prosecutor compelled to elect on which charge he will proceed; but such election will not be required to be made where several counts are introduced solely for the purpose of meeting evidence as it may transpire, the charges being substantially for the same offense: State v. McPherson, 9-53.

After the jury has returned a verdict of guilty on one count and not guilty on others, and a motion for arrest of judgment and a new trial, based, among other things, upon this alleged misjoinder of offenses, has been overruled, and there is nothing to show on appeal that the several counts relate to separate transactions, the objection on that ground will not be sustained: Ibid.

Where one indictment consists of two portions, each constituting a full and complete charge of an offense different from that stated in the other, it may be considered as containing two counts, although the two portions are not designated as such: State v. Dow, 73-587.

In charging the same offense in different forms the pleader is not compelled to use alternative forms of expression: State v. Watrous, 13-489.

An indictment charging the same transaction in different forms in separate counts is not objectionable for duplicity: State v. Bran-non, 50-372; State v. House, 55-466.

Where it is charged in one count for murder that the offense was committed with a certain knife, and in another that it was committed with a certain sharp instrument, to the grand jury unknown, it is not necessary that the counts be charged in the alternative, it being clear from the language that but one offense is sought to be charged: State v. Dillon 71-653.

Requiring prosecution to elect: Where an indictment is not otherwise assailed for charging distinct crimes, the prosecutor ought to be required to elect upon which charge he will proceed: State v. Fildment, 35-541.

Different violations of ordinances: It may be provided in an ordinance that any number of violations may be included in one prosecution: Elulora v Burlingame, 62-32.

Continuing offenses: In an indictment for retailing intoxicating liquors by the dram, any number of acts may be charged without constituting duplicity, the offense being a continuing one: Zunhoff v. State, 4 G. Gr., 526.

Under an ordinance making each separate unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor an offense, held, that an information charging the sale of liquor to persons unknown was not bad for duplicity, as it, in effect, charged one sale to several persons jointly: State v. King, 37-462.

Various acts constituting same offense: Where a statute contains several things in the alternative, an indictment charging all of them will not be considered as charging more than one offense: State v. Cooster, 16-453; State v. Myers, 10-448.

So an indictment charging the uttering, passing, and tendering, etc., of a counterfeit bill, under § 5228, charges but one offense: State v. Barrett, 8-536.

And so held in case of an indictment for a nuisance, charging the commission of all the acts of illegally selling intoxicating liquors, keeping the same for sale, etc., etc., within the terms of §§ 2284, 5472: State v. Dean, 44-648; State v. Spunbeck, 44-667; State v. Winebrenner, 67-230.

The prosecution in such cases will not be required to support and cover all the alternative charges with its proof, but only so much as will show that the offense was committed in some of the ways specified: State v. Cooster, 10-453.

Under § 5324, providing a punishment for letting a house, knowing that the lessee intends to use it for improper purposes, and knowingly permitting the lessee to use it for such purposes, an indictment charging both the letting and the knowingly permitting the prohibited use is not improper: State v. Abrahams, 6-117.

Under § 5293, providing a punishment for maliciously injuring and defacing a building, held, that an indictment charging defendant with maliciously injuring and defacing a dwelling was not objectionable for duplicity: State v. Hockenberry, 11-260.

Under § 5285, providing for the punishment of any person who shall maliciously kill, maim or disfigure an animal, held, that an indictment charging that defendant did maliciously maim and disfigure an animal was not objectionable: State v. Harris, 11-414.

Under a statute prohibiting the keeping for sale or the selling of intoxicating liquors, held, that an indictment charging both did not charge distinct offenses: State v. Becker, 20-438.

Under a statute making it a nuisance to manufacture, sell, or keep with intent to sell, intoxicating liquors contrary to law, either or all of such acts may without duplicity be charged in the same indictment: State v. Banghman, 20-497.

Compound offenses: When the same act or transaction at the same point of time constitutes two or more offenses, it is a compound offense, and the different crimes thus committed may be charged in the same indictment under this section; but the two offenses, of breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny, and the crime of larceny alone, cannot be so committed by the same act as to constitute such compound offense: State v. Ridley, 48-370; State v. Rhodes, 48-702.

In such a case the crime of breaking and entering with unlawful intent is completely consummated before the larceny is committed: State v. Ridley, 48-370.

Burglary is not a compound offense including larceny, and an indictment charging both burglary and larceny is improper, as charging two offenses: State v. McFarland, 49-99.

Where an indictment charges breaking and entering with felonious intent, and stealing, the charge of stealing may be regarded as surplusage; and if the case is tried as upon the indictment for the breaking and entering, a conviction thereunder will not be erroneous on the ground of duplicity. It is otherwise where, under such indictment, the defendant is convicted of larceny: State v. Shaffer, 59-290.

An indictment charging that defendant feloniously broke and entered a store, with intent, etc., and that he stole, carried away, etc., held not objectionable as charging two offenses, the charge as to stealing, etc., being merely surplusage: State v. Hayden, 45-11.

The offense of larceny in the night-time from a dwelling-house, and that of larceny from a dwelling-house in the day-time, are not different offenses from that of larceny, but differ from it only in the circumstances affecting the degree of punishment, and they may be charged in the same indictment: State v. Elsham, 70-531.

An indictment charging in one count forgery, and in a second the uttering of the forged instrument, charges two offenses, and is bad. (Overruling State v. Nichols, 38-110): State v. McCormack, 56-585.

Rape, committed by a man upon a woman who is related to him within the degrees prohibited by § 5351, does not constitute incest, and an indictment charging both offenses is bad for duplicity: State v. Thomas, 53-214.

Distinct acts of adultery, committed with different persons, could not be charged in the same indictment; but where different acts of the same person were charged, held, that as any such criminal act, committed within the period of limitations, could be proven under an indictment charging but one act of adultery, the allegation that adultery with the person named was committed on divers other days might be rejected as surplusage, and the indictment was not objectionable for duplicity: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

See, further, as to surplusage in indictments, § 5691, ¶ 4.

Conviction for included offense: A defendant put on trial for an indictable offense may be convicted of an offense necessarily included therein, although the latter be of such character that it is not indictable, but only triable on information. And such conviction is not in violation of the provisions of art. 1, § 11, of the constitution: State v. Jarvis, 21-44; State v. Shepard, 10-126.

Under the provisions of §§ 5850, 5851, a defendant may be convicted of a lower degree of the crime charged in the indictment, or of any offense necessarily included therein: See notes to these sections.

As to reasonable doubt as to the degree of the offense, see § 5814 and notes.

5686. Time. 4301. The precise time at which the offense was committed need not be stated in the indictment, but it is sufficient if it allege that the offense was committed at any time prior to the time of the finding thereof, except where the time is a material ingredient in the offense. [R., § 4655.]

Time, when not material: That the allegation as to the time of commission of the offense does not bring it within the statutory period of limitation is not a ground of demurrer to the indictment: State v. Hussey, 7-409; State v. Groome, 10-308; State v. Deitrick, 51-467.

It is not material that the time at which the offense is alleged to have been committed should be so charged as to bring it within the statutory period of limitation for the prosecution of the offense. The precise time need only be stated in indictments for acts which were only made criminal at some particular time: State v. Deitrick, 51-467.

The time alleged in the indictment need not be proved as laid. Therefore, held, that under an indictment for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, the selling at another time than that claimed in the indictment would support a conviction: State v. Knouse, 33-365.

Where defendant was charged under several counts with distinct offenses of selling intoxicating liquors on different days specified, held, that it was not error to refuse to charge the jury that, to find him guilty as charged in each count, they must find that he sold to the person and at the time therein charged: State v. Malung, 11-339.

In a prosecution for the violation of the intoxicating liquor law time is not a material ingredient, and the precise time need not be stated. Defendant may be convicted for any offense of that description committed within the period of limitation: State v. Wambold, 72-468.

Where the prosecution introduced evidence that the crime was committed at the particular time alleged in the indictment, and defendant's evidence was to the effect that he was not at the place where the offense was alleged to have been committed within three or four days of such time, held, that the jury were properly instructed that they might convict if they found the crime was committed on another day than that charged, and within the time prescribed by the statute of limitations for the prosecution of the crime: State v. Bell, 49-440.

Where an indictment charges that the offense was committed on a day certain, the prosecution may still prove the commission of the offense at a time prior to the day named and within the period of limitation: State v. Kirkpatrick, 63-554; State v. Johnson, 69-623.

Where the statute with reference to punishment for crime is changed, it is not necessary to show in the indictment whether the offense was committed prior or subsequent to such change: State v. Reylets, 74-499.

Videlicet: Where time is immaterial, if alleged under a videlicet, it need not be proved, and a repugnance between the allegations under the videlicet and other portions of the indictment will not vitiate it. If time is material, even though it be alleged under the videlicet, it is conclusive and traversable, and if repugnant to the premises will vitiate the indictment: State v. Freeman, 8-428.

Continuing offenses: An indictment charging a nuisance as committed "on or about" a day specified is sufficient as to time: Cokely v. State, 4-477.

In an indictment for a continuing offense, such as keeping a nuisance, no particular day need be alleged, but the doing of the prohibited act may be laid with a continuando. If so alleged, the trial will prevent another prosecution for the act charged at any time previous to the finding of the indictment: Our House v. State, 4 G. Gr., 172.

Time material: While the time is not material, yet where the offense of selling intoxicating liquors on a certain day was alleged and defendant pleaded guilty, held, that the time thus specified would determine the law under which the court was authorized to act, the law as to method of trial having been changed previous to the time alleged for the commission of the offense: State v. Rollet, 6-535.

While the allegation of the day upon which the offense was committed is not usually material, yet if, in an indictment for perjury, it is alleged that the oath was administered by a certain person as an officer before the date when, by law, he became entitled to enter upon the discharge of the duties of his office, the time will be deemed material and the indictment bad: State v. Phippen, 62-54.

See, further, § 5690, ¶ 4.

As to limitation of prosecution for crime, see §§ 5549-5554 and notes.

5687. Name of person injured. 4302. When an offense involves the commission of, or an attempt to commit, an injury to person or property, and is described in other respects with sufficient certainty to identify the act, an erroneous allegation as to the name of the person injured, or attempted to be injured, is not material. [R., § 4656.]

Name of person injured: Under the provisions of this section neither the name of the party injured, as used in the indictment, nor a name having the same sound, need necessarily be proved: State v. Emleigh, 18-122.

And held that an indictment, under § 5211, for stealing from the person certain property, in which the property was charged to be that of the party from whose person it was stolen, while the proof showed it to belong to him and another jointly, was sufficient: State v. Cunningham, 21-433.

Where, in an indictment for resisting an officer, the name of the officer was misstated, held, that an erroneous allegation respecting the name of the person injured was not material, and a variance was not fatal: State v. Flynn, 42-164.

Where an indictment for robbery incorrectly stated the name of the person alleged to have been robbed, held, that a conviction of defendant thereunder was not improper: State v. Carr, 43-418.

In an indictment for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors it is not necessary to set out the names of the persons to whom the liquor was sold: State v. Becker, 20-438.

Under an information charging sales of intoxicating liquors to persons unknown, held, that proof of a sale to one person did not constitute a variance: State v. King, 37-462.

A misnomer of the person assaulted will not render an indictment for assault with intent to kill fatally defective, it appearing that defendant was in no way prejudiced by such mistake: State v. Crawford, 66-318.

Where, in an indictment for embezzlement, the name of the corporation whose property was alleged to be embezzled was erroneously stated, by reason of using the word "railroad" therein in place of railway, held, that such slight error was immaterial: State v. Goode, 68-593.

A mistake in stating in the conclusion of the indictment the name of the person injured, held not material, his name being correctly stated in the charging part: State v. McCunniff, 70-217.

An erroneous allegation as to the ownership of the building in burglary is not material when the crime is in other respects described with sufficient certainty: State v. Emmons, 72-265.

Idem sonans: Where the orthography of an indictment composes a name which by the ordinary rules of pronunciation produces a different sound from the true one, the two names will not be considered equivalent: Donnel v. United States, Mor., 141.

Variance as to name: In an indictment for bigamy charging the second marriage to have been with "Jane Jaco," while the proof showed the name of the person to have been "Jane Frances Jaco," held, that there was no variance: State v. Williams, 20-98.

5688. Construction. 4303. The words used in an indictment must be construed in their usual acceptation in common language, except words and phrases defined by law, which are to be construed according to their legal meaning. [R., § 4657.]

5689. Words of statute. 4304. Words used in a statute to define a public offense need not be strictly pursued in an indictment, but other words conveying the same meaning may be used. [R., § 4658; C., '51, § 2919.]

Following statutory definition: An indictment under a statute is sufficient if it follows the language of the statute: State v. Seamons, 1 G. Gr., 418; State v. Chambers, 2 G. Gr., 308; Romp v. State, 3 G. Gr., 276; State v. Brewer, 53-735.

If the indictment charges the crime substantially in the words of the statute, or in language equivalent thereto, it is sufficient: Buckley v. State, 2 G. Gr., 162; Munson v. State, 4 G. Gr., 483.

Where the statute uses descriptive language to define a public offense, that language must be followed or words of the same meaning must be used: Fouts v. State, 4 G. Gr., 500.

While it is not necessary that the indictment should follow the very language of the statute, it should charge the facts and circumstances constituting the offense in substantial compliance with the statute: Reddan v. State, 4 G. Gr., 137.

If the statute contains evident tautology, or terms some of which necessarily includes the others, it is not essential that all be used. It is sufficient if the indictment fully describe the offense: United States v. Lapoint, Mor., 146.

The substance of the statutory definition must be contained in the indictment: United States v. Dickey, Mor., 412.

The words used must have the same substantial meaning and import as those used in the statute, and the material facts which constitute the offense must be stated with such a degree of certainty and in such a manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what was intended and the court to pronounce judgment upon a conviction according to the law of the case: State v. Allen, 32-491.

Therefore, where an illegal sale of liquor was charged, held, that the name of the person to whom the sale was made should have been stated, although the statute simply provided for the punishment of any person selling or giving liquor "to another person:" Ibid.

Ordinary language, if a person of good understanding may know thereby what is intended, is sufficient: State v. Stanley, 33-526.

The facts constituting a public offense must be charged in the indictment, and when a statute creating such offense describes it in general terms constituting a legal conclusion, the indictment must specifically describe the offense so as to bring it within the legal conclusion: State v. Brandt, 41-593, 607.

As to whether, in a prosecution of a public officer for loaning public money, an indictment stating that defendant "loaned" a certain sum of money "without authority of law," etc., was too general, and should have stated the person to whom the money was loaned, the court was equally divided: Ibid., 609, 617.

An indictment following the statute, and using the language there employed in defining the offense of unlawfully exposing a child with intent to abandon it, held sufficient: State v. Smith, 49-670.

Where an offense is created by statute, it is sufficient to charge it in the words of the statute, unless the words used are such that they do not necessarily charge the offense. Therefore, held, that an indictment charging that defendant did "seduce and carnally know and debauch" was sufficient, without charging the means employed in the seduction: State v. Curran, 51-112.

Language in a particular case held suffi-

5690. What indictment must show. 4305. The indictment is sufficient if it can be understood therefrom:

1. That it was found by a grand jury of the county impaneled in the court having authority to receive it, though the name of the court is not actually stated;

2. That the defendant is named, or, if his true name is unknown to the grand jury, that fact be stated, and that he be described by a fictitious name;

3. That the offense was committed within the jurisdiction of the court, or is triable therein;

4. That the offense was committed at some time prior to the time of the finding of the indictment;

5. That the act or omission charged as the offense, is stated with such a degree of certainty, in ordinary and concise language, and in such a manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended, and the court to pronounce judgment upon a conviction according to the law of the case;

6. That when material, the name of the person injured, or attempted to be ciently equivalent to that used in the statute in describing the offense of misconduct in office by public officers: State v. Conlee, 25-237.

See, further, notes to next section.

Exception or proviso: It is only necessary to negative an exception when it occurs in the same clause of the act which creates the offense: Romp v. State, 3 G. Gr., 276.

It is only necessary that the indictment should negative exceptions made in the enacting clause. Matters of exception contained in a subsequent act need not be negated, but must be pleaded and proven by defendant if relied on as a defense: State v. Beneke, 9-203.

An exception in the purview of an act must be negated in pleading, but a proviso need not, though found in the same section, if it is not referred to in and engrafted upon the enacting clause: State v. Stapp, 29-551.

Therefore under a former statutory provision that the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors should not apply to wine from fruit grown in the state, etc., held, that an indictment for illegal sale of liquor need not allege that it was not made from native fruit: Ibid.; State v. Curley, 33-359; State v. Adler, 53-84.

Where a criminal offense is created by statute no presumption arises of an intention to render any person liable not clearly within the provisions of the statute. But if the statute is simply declarative of a common-law offense, and limitations are annexed as to the persons to be prosecuted or the manner of prosecution, one claiming exemptions from its penalty must show himself clearly within its limitations: State v. Roth, 17-336.

If provisos and exceptions are contained in distinct clauses, it is not necessary to state in the indictment that the defendant does not come within the exceptions or to negative the provisos it contains: State v. Williams, 20-98.

Therefore, held, that an indictment for bigamy need not negative the absence of defendant's former husband or wife for the statutory period, etc., stated in a subsequent section of the statute as an exception: Ibid.

The burden of proving an exemption under a proviso rests upon the party claiming it: Sayre v. Wheeler, 31-112.

injured, be set forth when known to the grand jury, or if not known to it, that it be so stated in the indictment. [R., § 4659; C., '51, § 2916.]

Court and county: An indictment improperly naming the court, or failing to state the term thereof, is not subject to demurrer on either ground: State v. Schill, 27-263.

A mistake in the name of the state, or in the spelling of the name of the county, will not vitiate the indictment: State v. Gurlock, 14-444.

Where the county and state are named in the margin at the commencement of the indictment, and the county is referred to as "said county," and the indictment avers that the grand jurors were duly selected, impaneled and sworn, the indictment sufficiently shows that it was found by a legal grand jury: Zumhoff v. State, 4 G. Gr., 526.

Name of defendant: It is only where the defendant's name cannot be discovered that the state is permitted to describe him by a fictitious name, with the statement that his name is unknown. The description of the defendant as "a man in Turner Hall whose name to the grand jury is unknown," held not sufficient: Geiger v. State, 5-484.

Where defendant answers that he is indicted in his right name, he cannot, after trial, object that he is not properly named. So held where, in the same indictment, defendant was designated by different names: State v. White, 32-17.

If misnomer is not taken advantage of on arraignment, it cannot afterward be raised, and will be waived: State v. Winstrand, 37-110.

As to giving true name on arraignment, see §§ 5718-5720.

Venue: In an indictment for retailing intoxicating liquors by the dram, held, that it was sufficient to state the crime as committed within the county, without specifying the particular premises or the city or town within which the act was done: Zumhoff v. State, 4 G. Gr., 526.

In an indictment for the illegal sale of liquors it is not necessary to describe the specific location of the building where the sale was made: State v. Becker, 20-438.

An indictment commencing "The grand jury of the county of Dubuque, in the name, etc., of the state of Iowa," charging the burglarious entering, etc., of a house "there situated," held to sufficiently lay the venue in Dubuque county: State v. Reid, 20-413.

An indictment for larceny corresponding to the form contained in § 5682, charging the offense as committed "in the county aforesaid," held sufficiently specific as to the venue of the crime: State v. Lillard, 59-479.

An indictment in the form specified by § 5682 sufficiently charges the offense as having been committed in Iowa: State v. Winstrand, 37-110.

Under an indictment for bigamy, alleging that the void marriage was celebrated at a particular place, held, that a finding of such marriage anywhere within the same state would support the allegations of the indictment. The allegation as to the place of marriage not being essential as a jurisdictional matter, or as establishing the specific character of the offense, need not be proved as laid: State v. Nadal, 69-478.

Time: See § 5686 and notes.

Naming the offense: An indictment which sufficiently describes the offense charged will be good although the offense is not named therein: State v. Hessenkamp, 17-25; State v. Baldy, 17-39.

An indictment properly describing the offense will be sufficient without naming it, but naming the offense without stating the facts constituting it will not be sufficient. If the facts are properly stated, a wrong name will not vitiate the indictment, but will be mere surplusage: State v. Shaw, 35-575; State v. Davis, 41-311.

Requisites; statement of facts: An indictment must state facts constituting an offense in language direct and certain as to the circumstances which are necessary to show a crime punishable by law. It cannot be aided nor its omissions supplied by construction: State v. Potter, 28-554; State v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 63-508.

Where the acts charged are such that they are lawful under certain circumstances, it is not sufficient to charge that they were unlawfully done, but the existence of the facts showing the acts to be unlawful must be alleged: State v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 63-508.

The facts constituting the offense must be charged in the indictment, and when the statute defining such offense describes it in general terms, constituting a legal conclusion, the indictment must specifically describe the offense so as to bring it within the legal conclusion: State v. Brandt, 41-593, 607.

Description of the offense: It is sufficient to describe the offense in such a manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended and the court to pronounce judgment: State v. Hockenberry, 30-504; State v. Close, 35-570.

The technical exactness of the common law as enforced in criminal prosecutions, whereby many guilty persons escaped the just penalties due their crimes, and which justly became the reproach of that system of jurisprudence, has been wisely superseded in this state by statutory provisions: State v. Thompson, 19-299; State v. Johnson, 26-407.

So, if the proof offered in support of the charge in an indictment is such as would not mislead a person of common understanding, it is competent: State v. Thompson, 19-299.

Ordinary language is sufficient, if a person of common understanding may know therefrom what is intended: State v. Stanley, 33-526.

Matter of defense need not be negated in the indictment: State v. Williams, 70-52.

Only such facts need be stated in the indictment as are required to be proved on the trial: Nash v. State, 2 G. Gr., 286, 294.

If the act is charged to have been against the statute it need not be charged to have been done unlawfully: Ibid.

In the case of a misdemeanor, where the facts related in the indictment appear to have been unlawful, it is not necessary to allege them to have been unlawfully done: Capps v. State, 4-502.

In a prosecution for illegal voting, the indictment need not state the date of the general election at which the crime is alleged to have been committed, nor what officers were to be voted for at such election: State v. Minnick, 15-123.

In charging a threat to kill, the fact may be stated without setting out the words used: State v. O'Mally, 48-501.

An indictment for larceny of bank-bills, stating that their number and denominations are unknown, is sufficient: State v. Hoppe, 39-468.

A description of property in an indictment for larceny as "$180 in bank-bills usually known and described as greenbacks," held sufficient: State v. Hockenberry, 30-504.

Where an information charged the illegal sale of beer, held, that the quantity sold was immaterial and need not be alleged: State v. King, 37-462.

Under an indictment for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, held, that, the sum for which the illegal sale was made being immaterial, uncertainty in stating such amount would not render the indictment bad: Clare v. State, 5-509.

Arabic figures: The use of Arabic figures in place of words in an indictment will not vitiate it: Winfield v. State, 3 G. Gr., 339.

Numeral figures with the prefix A. D. are a sufficient statement of the year: State v. Seamons, 1 G. Gr., 418.

Deadly weapons: Where an indictment charges an assault as committed with different weapons described as deadly, it is immaterial whether it be proven that defendant used one or all of such weapons: State v. McIntock, 1 G. Gr., 392.

Under a statute prescribing punishment for assault with a deadly weapon, held, that no other description of the weapon used was essential: State v. Seamons, 1 G. Gr., 418.

5691. Immaterial matters. 4306. No indictment is insufficient, nor can the trial, judgment, or other proceedings thereon be affected by reason of any of the following matters, which were formerly deemed defects or imperfections:

1. For the want of an allegation of the time or place of any material fact, when the time and place have been once stated;
2. For the omission of any of the following allegations, namely: "with force and arms," "contrary to the form of the statute, or of the statutes," or "against the peace and dignity of the state;"
3. For the omission to allege that the grand jury was impaneled, sworn, or charged;
4. For any surplusage or repugnant allegation, or for any repetition, when there is sufficient matter alleged to indicate clearly the offense and the person charged; nor,
5. For any other matter which was formerly deemed a defect or imperfection, but which does not tend to the prejudice of the substantial rights of the defendant upon the merits. [R., § 4660; C., '51, § 2920.]

Time and place: An indictment for a nuisance committed by keeping a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors is good without averments describing the locus of the offense.

See, further, notes to §§ 5681-5689, inclusive.

Description of property: Ordinary certainty in the description of property involved is required. So held in a proceeding against a building as constituting a nuisance: Norris' House v. State, 3 G. Gr., 513.

Name of owner of property: An indictment, under § 5291, for trespass in cutting down trees and carrying away the timber, which fails to set out the name of the owner of the land upon which the alleged trespass is committed, is properly demurrable: State v. McConkey, 20-574.

The name of the owner of the building should be set out in an indictment charging the breaking and entering thereof with intent to commit a felony, under § 5194. If the name of the owner is unknown it should be so stated: State v. Morrissey, 22-158.

In an indictment, under § 5294, for malicious injury to a church building belonging to an unincorporated association, the ownership of the property may be alleged as in the persons holding it in trust for such association. The character of the title or interest of such persons need not be set out: State v. Brant, 14-180.

Where the indictment stated only the initials instead of the full Christian name of a person in possession of a house in which the crime of burglary was alleged to have been committed, held, that the substantial rights of the defendant were not prejudiced by refusal of the court to charge that defendant was entitled to an acquittal: State v. Short, 54-392.

Where the indictment charged the larceny of goods from a railroad company, naming it, belonging to parties to the grand jurors unknown, held, that the indictment was sufficient: State v. McIntire, 59-264; State v. McIntire, 59-267.

It does not render an indictment defective that in describing a dwelling-house it describes it as belonging to the estate of a person deceased: State v. Franks, 64-39.

It might be necessary to describe the property particularly if an order of abatement is desired: State v. Waltz, 74-610.

Where the allegation and the proof as to the date of an instrument alleged to have been forged varied, but the variance was not such as could have misled defendant to his prejudice, held, that the variance was immaterial: State v. Blanchard, 74-628.

See, further, § 5686 and notes as to allegations as to time; and § 5690 and notes as to allegations as to venue of the offense.

Surplusage: Where a defective averment may, without detriment to the indictment, be wholly omitted, it may be considered as surplusage and disregarded. It is only an inconsistency in the material allegations that will vitiate the indictment: State v. Freeman, 8-428.

An unessential portion of the indictment may be rejected as surplusage, if without it the allegations are sufficient to charge the offense: State v. Ormiston, 66-143.

Where a portion of the indictment might have been omitted without vitiating it, such portion may be considered as surplusage, and its insertion will not render the indictment defective: State v. Ansaeme, 15-44.

Where an information for illegal sale of liquors charged the selling and giving, held, that although the giving was not punishable, the charge was sufficient, and the allegations as to the giving would be treated as void and not affecting the information: State v. Finan, 10-19.

Words in a particular case held to be surplusage: State v. Schilling, 14-455.

Where an information charges two classes of nuisances, one of which is punishable under an ordinance under which the prosecution is commenced, and the other is not thus punishable, the allegations as to the latter will be deemed surplusage, and will not affect the charge of the offense which is within the jurisdiction of the court to punish upon the information: Eldora v. Burlingame, 62-32.

Where, in an indictment for embezzling the funds of a corporation, it was alleged that defendant was over sixteen years of age, that fact not being material in case of embezzlement by the agent of a corporation, held, that the allegation was surplusage and might be disregarded: State v. Goode, 68-593.

Where the facts charged constitute an offense, the giving of a wrong name thereto will not invalidate the indictment. The name will be considered surplusage: State v. Shaw, 35-575.

5692. Presumptions; judicial notice. 4307. Neither presumptions of law nor matters of which judicial notice is taken need be stated in an indictment. [R., § 4661; C., '51, § 2921.]

Under an indictment for an assault with a deadly weapon, charging the assault as made by throwing an axe, held, that the court would take judicial notice of the fact that an axe used in such a manner was a deadly weapon, although such fact was not averred: Dollarhide v. United States, Mor., 233.

5693. Pleading judicial proceedings. 4308. In pleading a judgment or other determination of, or proceeding before, a court or officer of special jurisdiction, the facts conferring jurisdiction need not be stated in the indictment, but it is sufficient to state that the judgment or determination was duly made, or the proceedings duly had before such court or officer; but the

An information for the seizure of intoxicating liquors on the ground that they were to be sold in violation of law stated that they were "intended to be sold in violation of the provisions of chapter 6, Code of Iowa," there being many chapters of that number in said Code; held, that the information was defective, and that although the allegation that the liquors were intended to be sold in violation of law would have been sufficient, the other portions of the indictment could not be rejected as surplusage: State v. Thompson, 44-399.

As to duplicity in indictments, see § 5685 and notes.

As to description of the offense and naming defendant, see notes to § 5690.

Statutory modifications: The constitutional provision requiring an indictment on which to put defendant on trial for a crime does not make it necessary that such indictment shall conform in every particular to the requirements of the common law, but such requirements may be modified by statute: State v. Bevans, 37-178.

But the leading requisites of an indictment at common law are not dispensed with by statute: State v. Callendine, 8-288.

Defects not cured: The district attorney cannot, by making specifications after arraignment upon indictment, cure a defect therein consisting in a want of particularity as to the acts constituting the crime: United States v. Ross, Mor., 164.

A mere clerical error which can be discovered and corrected by a casual reading of the indictment itself will not render it fatally defective: State v. Crawford, 66-318.

Immaterial defects: In general, under the provisions of this section, the proceedings upon an indictment are not to be affected by any defects therein not tending to the prejudice of the substantial rights of the defendant upon the merits: State v. Gurlock, 14-444; State v. Emeigh, 18-122; State v. White, 32-17.

Charging the offense as committed in one county, and proving it to have been committed in an adjoining county within five hundred yards of the boundary line, does not tend to prejudice the substantial rights of defendant on the merits: State v. Pugsley, 75-742.

In a prosecution for illegal voting the indictment need not state the date on which the general election was held, nor what officers were to be voted for at such election: State v. Minnick, 15-123.

facts constituting the jurisdiction must be established on the trial. [R., § 4662; C., '51, § 2922.]

5694. Pleading private statute. 4309. In pleading a private statute, or right derived therefrom, it is sufficient to refer to the same by its title and the day of its approval, and the court must thereupon take judicial notice thereof. [R., § 4663; C., '51, § 2923.]

5695. Indictment for libel. 4310. An indictment for a libel need not set forth any extrinsic facts for the purpose of showing the application to the party libeled of the defamatory matter upon which the indictment is founded, but it is sufficient to state generally that the same was published concerning him, and the fact that it was so published must be established on trial. [R., § 4664; C., '51, § 2924.]

For similar provisions in regard to civil actions for libel, see § 3887.

5696. Instrument destroyed or withheld. 4311. When an instrument which is subject of an indictment, has been destroyed or withheld by the act of procurement of the defendant, and the fact of such destruction or withholding is alleged in the indictment and established on the trial, the misdescription of the instrument is immaterial. [R., § 4665; C., '51, § 2925.]

5697. Indictment for perjury. 4312. In an indictment for perjury, or subornation of perjury, it is sufficient to set forth the substance of the controversy, or matter in respect to which the offense was committed, and in what court or before whom the oath alleged to be false was taken, and that the court or person before whom it was taken had authority to administer the same, with proper allegations of the falsity of the matter on which the perjury is assigned; but the indictment need not set forth the pleadings, record, or proceedings with which the oath is connected, nor the commission or the authority of the court or person before whom the perjury was committed. [R., § 4666; C., '51, § 2926.]

Substance of false testimony: An indictment for false statement in a schedule sworn to in a proceeding in bankruptcy should state wherein such statement is false and incorrect: United States v. Morgan, Mor., 341.

In an indictment for perjury in testifying before a grand jury it is not necessary to allege that the party charged with the offense under investigation was or was not guilty thereof in order to state the facts constituting such offense: State v. Schill, 27-263.

The materiality of the false testimony must be shown by averment in the indictment, but this may be done either by express averment or by the statement of such facts as show its materiality: State v. Cunningham, 66-94.

In an indictment for perjury in making a false return to the assessor under oath it must be averred, not only that certain property was withheld from the statement, but also that such property was accessible within the township within which the assessor was authorized to act: Ibid.

Jurisdiction and authority of court or officer: It is necessary to aver the jurisdiction and authority of the officer before whom the oath was taken to administer same, but this may be done by express averment that the officer had such right, or by setting out such facts as to make this judicially appear: Ibid.

In an indictment for perjury committed before a justice of the peace, it is sufficient to aver, in relation to jurisdiction, that it was at a justice's court, held at the proper time and place, in a cause there tried, and that the justice had sufficient authority to administer an oath, without alleging that the case was within his jurisdiction: State v. Newton, 1 G. Gr., 160.

It is sufficient to charge in the indictment that defendant was duly sworn before a court having authority, etc., without alleging that the oath was administered by any one: State v. O'Hagan, 38-504.

An indictment not averring that the court or person before whom the oath was taken had authority to administer the same, held bad: State v. Nickerson, 46-447.

An indictment for perjury is bad which alleges that the oath was administered by one not clothed with authority to administer it: State v. Phippen, 62-54.

Therefore where the indictment charged that the oath was administered by a certain person as an officer, but at a time which by law was prior to the time when he was authorized to enter upon the discharge of his duties, held, that the indictment was demurrable: Ibid.

Knowledge of falsity: An indictment which charged that defendant at a certain time testified to certain matters, whereas he "did know" they were false, held to sufficiently charge knowledge of the defendant at the time defendant testified: State v. Wood, 17-18.

An indictment for perjury need not charge that the defendant knew the falsity of the matter sworn to, unless the assignment of perjury is upon a statement of the accused as to his belief: State v. Raymond, 20-582.

It should be clearly and distinctly averred that defendant swore "falsely," that word being used in § 5242, defining the offense: State v. Nickerson, 46-447.

Under a former statute it was held that an indictment was not sufficient which failed to charge knowledge of the falsity of the matter deposed to be true, or of the truth of the matter denied to be true: State v. Morse, 1 G. Gr., 503.

In general, see § 5242 and notes.

5698. Intent to defraud. 4313. In any case where an intent to defraud is required to constitute the offense of forgery, or any other offense that may be prosecuted, it shall be sufficient to allege in the indictment an intent to defraud without naming the particular person or body corporate intended to be defrauded; and on the trial of such indictment it is sufficient if there appear to be an intent to defraud the United States, or any state, county, city, or township, or any body corporate, or any officer in his official capacity, or any copartnership, or member thereof, or any particular person. [R., § 4667; C., '51, § 2927.]

The person intended to be defrauded, or the extent or particulars of the fraud, need not be stated: State v. Maxwell, 47-454.

In an indictment for having in possession counterfeit bank-bills with intent to defraud, held not necessary to state the intent to defraud any person or corporation: State v. Calendine, 8-288; State v. Barrell, 8-536.

But if the name of the bank intended to be defrauded is mentioned it must be proved as stated: State v. Newland, 7-242.

It is not necessary that an indictment for forgery allege the name of the person to whom the instrument was uttered: State v. Hart, 67-142.

But in an indictment for the uttering of counterfeit money the name of the person injured must appear, if known, and if not known such fact must be stated: Buckley v. State, 2 G. Gr., 162.

5699. Principal and accessory. 4314. The distinction between an accessory before the fact and a principal, and all persons concerned in the commission of a public offense, whether they directly commit the act constituting the offense, or aid and abet its commission, though not present, must hereafter be indicted, tried, and punished as principals. [R., § 4668; C., '51, § 2928.]

Under this section all persons concerned in the commission of a public offense, including aiders and abettors, are guilty as principals: State v. Brown, 25-561; State v. Thornton, 26-79; State v. Stanley, 48-231.

And two or more may be jointly indicted for a criminal act which is of such nature that it can be actually committed by but one person: State v. Comstock, 46-265.

Under an ordinary indictment charging the commission of a crime the defendant may be found guilty of aiding and abetting in such commission: State v. Hessian, 58-68; Bonsell v. United States, 1 G. Gr., 111; State v. Pugley, 75-742.

5700. Accessory after the fact. 4315. An accessory after the fact to the commission of a public offense, may be indicted, tried and punished, though the principal be neither tried nor convicted. [R., § 4669; C., '51, § 2929.]

5701. Compounding offense. 4316. A person may be indicted for having, with the knowledge of the commission of a public offense, taken money or property of another, or a gratuity or reward, or engagement or promise therefor, upon agreement or understanding, express or implied, to compound or conceal the offense, or to abstain from a prosecution therefor, or to withhold any evidence thereof, though the person guilty of the original offense has not been indicted or tried. [R., § 4670; C., '51, § 2930.]

5702. Indictment for embezzlement. 4317. In an indictment for the embezzlement or fraudulent conversion of money, it shall be sufficient to allege the embezzlement or fraudulent conversion to have been of money generally, without designating its particular species; and proof that the defendant embezzled, or fraudulently converted any money or bank-note, will be sufficient to support the averment, although the particular species be not proved. [R., § 4671.]

CHAPTER 17.

OF PROCESS UPON AN INDICTMENT.

5703. Bench warrant. 4318. The process upon an indictment for the arrest of an individual, shall be a bench warrant. [R., § 4672.]

The issuance of a bench warrant is not essential to give the court jurisdiction of the person of the defendant. If he appear and submit to the jurisdiction a warrant is unnecessary: State v. Ray, 50-520.

In the absence of any showing of prejudice or the improper exercise of discretion, it is not error for a judge to send a prisoner to the penitentiary for safe keeping to await his trial: State v. Porter, 34-131.

5704. Warrant ordered; bail fixed. 4319. When an indictment is filed by the clerk of the court against a defendant, not in custody, or under bail, or who has not deposited money instead of bail, the judge of the court shall make an order on the indictment, which shall be signed by him, with his name of office, that a bench warrant issue for the arrest of the defendant, and, if the offense charged in the indictment be bailable, fix the amount in which bail may be taken. [R., § 4673.]

5705. Clerk to issue warrant. 4320. The clerk, on the application of the district [county] attorney, shall accordingly, at any time after the making of the order of the judge, whether the court be in session or not, issue a bench warrant into one or more counties. [R., § 4674.]

5706. Form in case of felony. 4321. A bench warrant, if the offense be a felony, may be, substantially, in the following form:

County of ———,
The State of Iowa.

To any Peace Officer in the State:

An indictment having been found in the district court of said county, on the ——— day of ———, A. D. 18— (the day on which the indictment is marked filed by the clerk of the court), charging A. B. with the crime of (here designate the offense by the name, if it have one, or by a brief general description of it, as given by law, substantially, as in the indictment).

You are, therefore, hereby commanded to arrest the said A. B., and bring him before said court to answer said indictment, if the said court be then in session in said county, or if the said court be not then in session in said county, that you deliver him into the custody of the sheriff of said county.

Given under my hand, and the seal of said court, at my office in ———, in [SEAL] the county aforesaid, this ——— day of ———, A. D. 18—.

By order of the judge of the court.

[R., § 4675.]

———, Clerk.

5707. If misdemeanor. 4322. If the offense be a misdemeanor, the bench warrant may be in a similar form, adding to the body thereof a direction, substantially, to the following effect:

“Or, if the said A. B. require it, that you take him before a magistrate, or the clerk of the district court in said county, or in the county in which you arrest him, that he may give bail to answer the said indictment.” [R., § 4676.]

5708. If bailable. 4323. If the offense charged be bailable, the clerk must make an indorsement on the bench warrant, to the following effect: “The defendant is to be admitted to bail in the sum of ——— dollars.” (The amount fixed by the judge and indorsed on the indictment.) [R., § 4677.]

5709. Where served. 4324. The bench warrant may be served in any county in the state. [R., § 4678; C., '51, § 2935.]

5710. Proceedings. 4325. If the defendant, when arrested, be brought before a magistrate, or the clerk of the district court of the same county in which it was issued, or another county, for the purpose of giving bail, the same proceedings must be had, in all respects, as if he had been arrested on a warrant of arrest, issued by a magistrate on a preliminary information, as nearly as may be. [R., § 4679.]

5711. Process against corporation. 4326. The process upon an indictment against a corporation shall be a notice; which shall be issued by the clerk at any time after the filing of the indictment in his office, on the application of the district [county] attorney. The notice shall be under the seal of the court, and shall, substantially, notify the defendant of the finding of the indictment, of the nature of the offense charged, and that he must forthwith appear and answer the same. It may be served by any peace officer in any county in the state on any officer or agent of the defendant, by reading the same to him and leaving with him a copy thereof. It shall be returned to the clerk's office without delay, with proper evidence of its service; and, from and after two days from the time of the making of such service, the defendant shall be considered in court, and thereafter shall be considered to be present to all proceedings had on the indictment. [14 G. A., ch. 111, § 3.]

This section contemplates that there are some offenses for which corporations may be indicted and punished. It appears to be well settled that a corporation may be indicted and punished for a public nuisance, such as obstruction of the public highway, navigable streams, and the like; and held, that the corporation was liable under § 2380 the same as a natural person would be for the penalty there provided for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, to be collected for the benefit of the school fund: Stewart v. Waterloo Turn Verein, 71-226.

CHAPTER 18.

OF ARRAIGNMENT OF THE DEFENDANT.

5712. How soon; waived; corporation. 4327. As soon as practicable after an indictment is found, the defendant must be arraigned thereon, unless he waive the same; but where a corporation is defendant, arraignment shall not be required. [R., § 4680; C., '51, § 2931; 14 G. A., ch. 111, § 8.]

Presumption: If the record is silent as to the arraignment it will be presumed that defendant was duly arraigned, or waived arraignment: State v. Winstrand, 37-110.

Where it does not appear from the record that defendant has been arraigned and has pleaded, or that he even appeared, the judgment will be reversed on appeal: Powell v. United States, Mor., 17.

Waiver: Voluntarily appearing and pleading to an indictment is a waiver of arraignment: State v. Winstrand, 37-110.

Misnomer: If misnomer is not taken advantage of on arraignment it cannot afterward be raised, and will be waived: Ibid.

Where defendant answers that he is indicted in his right name he cannot, after trial, object that he is not properly named. So held where, in the same indictment, the defendant was designated by different names: State v. White, 32-17.

As to mental condition of defendant at the time of his arraignment, see § 6018 and notes.

5713. Personal presence. 4328. If the indictment be for a felony, the defendant must be personally present, but if for a misdemeanor only, his personal appearance is unnecessary, and counsel. [R., § 4681; C., '51, § 2932.]

Where the record as to defendant appearing and waiving arraignment was defective, and at a subsequent time was corrected on motion, held, that the presence of defendant at the time of said correction was not essential: State v. Westfall, 49-328.

A defendant held to appear before the grand jury is not required to be present at the time of impaneling such jury, and will not be in default on his bail bond for failure to appear at that time; his right to challenge is one which may be waived: State v. Klingman, 14-404; State v. Feller, 25-67; Ringgold County v. Ross, 40-176.

The plea of not guilty may be interposed by defendant's counsel in the absence of defendant: State v. Jones, 70-505.

As to presence of defendant during trial, see § 5736 and notes; as to his presence at rendition of verdict, see § 5846 and notes; and at pronouncing of judgment, § 5882.

5714. If in custody. 4329. When he is in custody, the court must direct the officer in whose custody he is to bring him before it to be arraigned, and the officer must do so accordingly. [R., § 4682.]

5715. If on bail. 4330. If the defendant has been discharged on bail, or has deposited money instead thereof, and does not appear for arraignment when his personal appearance is necessary, the court, in addition to the forfeiture of the undertaking of bail, or of the money deposited, may, on motion of the district [county] attorney, make an order directing the clerk to issue a bench warrant for his arrest, and fix the amount in which bail will be taken if the offense be bailable. [R., § 4683; C., '51, § 2933.]

5716. Clerk issue bench warrant. 4331. The clerk, on the application of the district [county] attorney, may, accordingly, at any time after the order, whether the court be in session or not, issue a bench warrant into one or more counties of this state for the arrest of the defendant. [R., § 4684; C., '51, § 2934.]

5717. Right to counsel. 4332. If the defendant appear for arraignment without counsel, he must be informed by the court that it is his right to have counsel before being arraigned, and must be asked if he desire the aid of counsel, and if he does, and is unable to employ any, must allow him to select, or assign him counsel, not exceeding two, who shall have free access to him at all reasonable hours. [R., § 4685; C., '51, § 2936.]

When defendant during the trial dismissed his counsel, and had new counsel appointed by the court to defend him, held, that it was not error to refuse a continuance of several days, on the appointment of such new counsel, it not appearing of record that there was any good ground for the dismissal, defendant's guilt being conclusively shown, and his ability to understand his own case being apparent: State v. House, 55-466.

Statements of the defendant in open court that he has no means to employ counsel is a solemn admission which may be used against him if that fact becomes material to any issue in the case: State v. Fooks, 65-196.

5718. Arraignment; by whom and how made. 4333. The arraignment may be made by the court, or by the clerk or district [county] attorney under its direction, and consists in reading the indictment to the defendant, and unless previously done, delivering to him a copy of the indictment and the indorsements thereon, and informing him that if the name by which he is indicted is not his true name, he must then declare what his true name is, or be proceeded against by the name in the indictment, and asking him what he answers to the indictment. [R., § 4686; C., '51, §§ 2937-8.]

Where defendant answers that he is indicted in his right name, he cannot, after trial, object that he is not properly named.

So held where, in the same indictment, the defendant was designated by different names: State v. White, 32-17.

5719. Giving name. 4334. If he gives no other name, or gives his true name, he is thereafter precluded from objecting to the indictment upon the ground of being therein improperly named. [R., § 4687; C., '51, § 2939.]

If defendant waive arraignment he cannot afterwards object that he is not indicted in his right name: State v. Winstrand, 37-110.

5720. Entry of true name. 4335. If he alleges that another name is his true name, the court must direct an entry thereof in the minutes of the arraignment, and the subsequent proceedings on the indictment may be had against him by that name, referring also to the name by which he is indicted. [R., § 4688; C., '51, § 2940.]

5721. Answer; time. 4336. In answer to the arraignment, the defendant may move to set aside the indictment, or he may demur or plead to it, and is entitled to one day after arraignment in which to answer thereto if he demand it. [R., §§ 4689, 4690; C., '51, §§ 2941-2.]

CHAPTER 19.

OF SETTING ASIDE THE INDICTMENT.

5722. Grounds. 4337. The motion to set aside the indictment can be made by the defendant on one or more of the following grounds, and must be sustained:

1. When it is not indorsed "a true bill," and the indorsement signed by the foreman of the grand jury as prescribed by this code;
2. When the names of all the witnesses examined before the grand jury are not indorsed thereon; when the minutes of the evidence of the witnesses examined before the grand jury are not returned therewith;
3. When it has not been presented and marked "filed" as prescribed by this code;
4. When any person, other than the grand jurors, was present before the grand jury when the question was taken upon the finding of the indictment, or when any person, other than the grand jurors, was present before the grand jury during the investigation of the charge, except as required or permitted by law;
5. That the grand jury were not selected, drawn, summoned, impaneled, or sworn as prescribed by law. [R., § 4691; C., '51, § 2943.]

Indorsement: The requirement of § 5674, that the foreman's name be subscribed to the indorsement of "a true bill," is merely directory, and the absence of such indorsement cannot be taken advantage of after conviction, where it otherwise appears that the indictment was properly returned: Wau-kon-chaw-neek-kaw v. United States, Mor., 332.

The fact that it does not appear that the indictment is indorsed "a true bill," and marked filed by the clerk, cannot be raised for the first time on appeal: Hughes v. State, 4-554.

See, further, § 5674 and notes.

Names of witnesses: The objection that the names of witnesses examined before the grand jury are not indorsed on the indictment should be raised in the trial court or it will be regarded as waived: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

Where, in indorsing the name of the witness on the back of an indictment, his title, instead of his Christian name, was used, held, that if the witness was as unmistakably described as he would have been by the use of his Christian name, the object of the indorsement was accomplished and no prejudice could result to defendant: State v. McComb, 18-43.

Names of witnesses before the grand jury who do not give any material testimony, and the minutes of whose testimony are not returned, need not be indorsed on the indictment: State v. Little, 42-51.

Affidavits cannot be received to show that witnesses whose names are not indorsed, and minutes of whose testimony are not returned, were examined before the grand jury: Ibid.

It is not error to allow the name of a witness examined before the grand jury to be indorsed on the back of the indictment after a trial jury is called: State v. Robinson, 47-489.

That the evidence of an incompetent witness was received by the grand jury is no reason for setting aside an indictment: State v. Tucker, 20-508.

Minutes of evidence: That the minutes of the evidence returned by the grand jury do not support the indictment is not a ground for setting it aside: State v. Harris, 36-268.

The minutes need not be attached to or made a part of the indictment, and a mere failure to file them, if they are properly returned, should not deprive the state of its evidence: State v. Postlewait, 14-446.

It is sufficient if the minutes are returned into court and filed with the clerk: State v. Hamilton, 42-655.

That they are handed to the clerk and deposited with him sufficiently constitutes a filing: State v. Guisenkause, 20-227.

That the minutes include testimony taken in other cases does not necessarily invalidate them: Ibid.

If the minutes are returned with the indictment and placed by the clerk in his office they are sufficiently filed, though it would be better for the clerk to indorse them as filed: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

Failure of clerk to file the minutes cannot be raised by demurrer: Ibid.

An indictment cannot be set aside by motion on the ground that it was found on incompetent and insufficient evidence: State v. Smith, 74-580.

See, further, §§ 5676 and 5806 and notes.

Presentment and filing: The requirement of § 5679 that the indictment must be presented, etc., is directory only, and a failure of the clerk to make the indorsement on the indictment will not invalidate the proceedings (explaining State v. Glover, 3 G. Gr., 249): State v. Act, 6-511; State v. Shepard, 10-126; State v. Rivers, 58-102.

Where defendant moved to strike the indictment from the files because it had been altered by erasure and insertion of other words, held, that the affidavits introduced disproved the defendant's allegation: State v. Hughes, 58-165.

In the absence of affirmative showing to the contrary it will be presumed that the requirements of § 5679 as to presentment and filing were complied with: State v. McIntire, 59-267.

No record of the filing of the indictment, other than the indorsement of the clerk on the indictment itself, need be made, at least not until after the arrest of the accused: Wrocklege v. State, 1-167; Herring v. State, 1-205.

Indorsements in particular cases held sufficient: Wrocklege v. State, 1-167; Dixon v. State, 4 G. Gr., 381.

It is not essential that the indorsement on the indictment should recite that it was presented by the foreman, in the presence of the grand jury, to the court: State v. Jolly, 7-15.

The court should be named in the indorsement, although failure to do so will not be fatal: Ibid.

A mistake in the indorsement on the indictment as to the county in which it was filed, held not a fatal error, where it appeared that it was presented and filed in the proper county: State v. Smouse, 50-43.

The fact that it does not appear that the indictment was marked filed by the clerk cannot be raised for the first time on appeal: Hughes v. State, 4-554.

See § 5679.

Presence of others: The fact that a bailiff was present in the grand jury room during their proceedings, though not when the final vote was taken, held not sufficient to affect the validity of the indictment: State v. Kimball, 29-267.

The objection under this paragraph, if not taken as here contemplated, cannot be raised after verdict: Ibid.

Irregularities in selecting grand jury: It is not a valid objection to a grand jury that the judges of election returned eighty-five names of persons to serve as grand jurors instead of seventy-five, as required by § 312, if the extra names had been stricken off before the grand jury was drawn, and fifteen jurors have been regularly drawn: State v. Knight, 19-94.

Under a statute requiring the board of county commissioners to deliver copies of jury lists to the clerk thirty days before the commencement of the term, held, that failure to comply therewith was a defect which might be raised by plea in abatement: United States v. Cropper, Mor., 190.

It would seem that deviations from the method pointed out for the selection, etc., of the grand jury, of a slight and unimportant nature, should not be regarded: State v. Carney, 20-82.

Where there has been no substantial departure in the selection, drawing, etc., of the grand jury affecting substantially the rights of defendant, a motion to set aside the indictment for irregularities in connection with such selection, etc., should not be sustained: State v. Brandt, 41-593.

The impaneling is the final formation by the court of the grand jury, the act immediately preceding the swearing of the jury which ascertains who are to be sworn: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 146.

The fact that, subsequently to the formation of the grand jury, one of the jurors was excused and a person substituted, as to whom defendant did not have opportunity to exercise his right of challenge, will not authorize the court to set aside the indictment, where it does not appear that the new juror was disqualified or the defendant prejudiced: State v. Fowler, 52-103.

Where grand jurors were absent at a term of court by reason of instruction from the judge that they need not appear unless specially summoned, held, that it was error to impanel a grand jury omitting therefrom the persons thus failing to appear, and that a motion to set aside an indictment found by such grand jury should have been sustained: State v. Bowman, 73-110.

Where a challenge to one grand juror has been sustained, and an indictment has been found by the remaining members, the indictment is valid and cannot be set aside on motion: State v. Ostrander, 18-435.

But where, by challenges, the number of the grand jurors is reduced below the number required for finding indictment, the vacancies should first be filled: State v. Mooney, 10-506; State v. Garhart, 35-315; State v. Shelton, 64-333.

Where a part of the grand jury fails to appear, the court may, under § 5639, orally direct the sheriff to summon a sufficient number to complete the panel, and failure to issue a written precept is not ground for setting aside the indictment: State v. Miller, 53-84; State v. Miller, 53-154.

The discharge of one grand jury and the impaneling of another to which there is no objection except the fact that the first has been erroneously discharged is not ground for setting aside an indictment found by the second: State v. Hughes, 58-165; State v. Hart, 67-142.

The objection that the grand jury was improperly summoned should be made before pleading to the indictment and not by motion in arrest of judgment: State v. Reid, 20-413.

The proper method of taking advantage of irregularity in the selection, summoning or impaneling the grand jury, where the defendant has been held to answer before the formation of the grand jury, is by challenge to the panel. Defendant cannot interpose objections after the jury is sworn: State v. Hart, 29-268; State v. Hinkle, 6-380; Dixon v. State, 3-416; State v. Howard, 10-101.

In order to support the action of the court below in overruling a motion to set aside the indictment on this ground, if it does not appear whether defendant was held to answer before indictment or not, it will be presumed that he was, and that the motion was overruled on that ground: State v. Gibbs, 39-318.

Defendant should exercise his right of challenge at the proper time or it will be held waived, and an indictment will not afterward be set aside for causes which would have been good grounds for challenge: State v. Harris, 38-242; State v. Ruthven, 58-121. See, also, State v. Fetter, 25-67.

A defendant not bound over to appear before the grand jury prior to the finding of an indictment, and against whom no charge is pending, may move to set aside the indictment for causes which would have been good grounds of challenge: Norris' House v. State, 3 G. Gr., 513; Duntell v. State, 4 G. Gr., 125.

That a defendant under arrest in a preliminary proceeding, but not yet bound over to appear before the grand jury, is not brought before the court and given an opportunity for challenging the grand jury, is not ground for setting aside the indictment: State v. Fitzgerald, 63-268.

For other cases as to the selection, drawing, summoning, impaneling, and swearing of the grand jury, see notes to §§ 5638-5654.

5723. Correction. 4338. A motion to set aside the indictment on the ground that the names of all the witnesses examined before the grand jury are not indorsed thereon; or that the name of any other witness than those so examined is indorsed thereon as prescribed in the second subdivision of section four thousand three hundred and thirty-seven hereof [§ 5722], shall not be sustained if the indorsement is corrected by the insertion or striking out of such names or name by the district [county] attorney or the clerk of the court, under the direction of the court, so as to correspond with the minutes required to be kept by the clerk of the grand jury and returned and preserved with the indictment to the court. [R., § 4692.]

It is not competent, in support of a motion to set aside an indictment under ¶ 2 of the preceding section, to show by affidavits that witnesses were summoned before the grand jury whose names are not indorsed on the indictment, and minutes of whose evidence were not returned. Such minutes are part of the record and cannot be thus impeached: State v. Little, 42-51.

Where the name of a witness examined before the grand jury was not indorsed upon the indictment it was held not error to allow the indorsement to be made upon motion of the district attorney after the trial jury is called: State v. Robinson, 47-489.

And see notes to preceding section.

5724. Objections to selection of grand jury. 4339. The ground of the motion to set aside the indictment mentioned in the fifth subdivision of section four thousand three hundred and thirty-seven hereof [§ 5722], is not allowed to a defendant who has been held to answer before indictment. [R., § 4693.]

The proper method of taking advantage of such irregularity, where the defendant had been held to answer, would be by challenge to the panel under §§ 5641 and 5643: State v. Hart, 29-268.

And the objection in such case should be made before the grand jury is sworn (§ 5649): State v. Ostrander, 18-435; State v. Gibbs, 39-318.

In order to support the ruling of the court below, where it does not appear whether defendant was held to answer before indictment, it will be presumed that he was: State v. Gibbs, 39-319.

An objection to the grand jury, or to an individual juror, cannot be interposed by a defendant held to answer before the formation of the grand jury: Dixon v. State, 3-416; State v. Hunkle, 6-380; State v. Howard, 10-101; State v. Ingalls, 17-8; State v. Hart, 29-268.

A defendant not bound over to appear before the grand jury prior to the finding of an indictment against him, and against whom no charge is pending, is not deprived of the right to attack the indictment for causes which would have been grounds of challenge: Norris' House v. State, 3 G. Gr., 513; Duntell v. State, 4 G. Gr., 125.

Where a defendant was held to answer after the grand jury was organized, held, that he was still entitled to exercise his right of challenge to such grand jury: State v. Mooney, 10-506.

That a defendant, under arrest in a preliminary proceeding, but not yet bound over to appear before the grand jury, is not brought before the court and given an opportunity for challenging the grand jury, is not ground for setting aside the indictment: State v. Fitzgerald, 63-268.

See, also, §§ 5641, 5643, 5647, and 5722 and notes.

5725. Hearing. 4340. The motion must be heard when it is made, unless for good cause the court postpone the hearing to another time. [R., § 4695; C., '51, § 2945.]

5726. If denied. 4341. If the motion be denied, the defendant must immediately answer the indictment, either by demurring or pleading thereto. [R., § 4696; C., '51, § 2946.]

5727. If granted. 4342. If the motion be granted, the court must order the defendant, if in custody, to be discharged, or if admitted to bail, that his bail be exonerated; or if he has deposited money instead of bail, that the money deposited be refunded to him, unless the court direct that the case be re-submitted to the same or another grand jury. [R., § 4697; C., '51, § 2947.]

A judgment in a criminal case being reversed on appeal for a defect in the indictment the cause was remanded for new trial with direction that preliminary thereto it might be re-submitted to another grand jury: State v. Morrissey, 22-158.

5728. If re-submitted. 4343. If the court direct that the case be re-submitted, the defendant, if already in custody, must so remain unless he be admitted to bail; or, if already admitted to bail, or money has been deposited instead thereof, the bail or money is answerable for the appearance of the defendant to answer a new indictment. [R., § 4698; C., '51, § 2948.]

5729. Order to set aside, no bar. 4344. An order to set aside the indictment as provided in this chapter, shall be no bar to a future prosecution for the same offense. [R., § 4699; C., '51, § 2949.]

CHAPTER 20.

OF PLEADING BY THE DEFENDANT.

5730. Demurrer or plea. 4345. The only pleading on the part of the defendant is a demurrer or plea. [R., § 4700; C., '51, § 2950.]

5731. How put in. 4346. The demurrer and plea must be put in in open court, and may be oral; but an entry thereof must be made on the record. [R., § 4701; C., '51, § 2951.]

CHAPTER 21.

OF THE MODE OF TRIAL.

5732. Issues; by whom tried. 4347. Issues of law shall be tried by the court. Issues of fact shall be tried by a jury. [R., § 4702.]

5733. Issues of law. 4348. An issue of law arises upon a demurrer to the indictment. No joinder in demurrer is necessary. [R., § 4703.]

5734. Issues of fact. 4349. An issue of fact arises on a plea of not guilty, or of former conviction or acquittal of the same offense. No replication or further pleading is necessary. [R., § 4704.]

5735. Trial by jury. 4350. An issue of fact must be tried by a jury of the county in which the indictment is found, unless a change of venue has been awarded. [R., § 4705.]

Defendant cannot waive a jury trial and consent to a trial by the court, there being no provision in the code of criminal procedure by which the court, without a jury, has jurisdiction to try the issues of fact in a criminal case: State v. Carman, 63-130; State v. Larrigan, 66-426.

As the defendant in a criminal action may waive a statute enacted for his benefit, he may consent that the trial proceed with a jury of less than twelve jurors; and will be bound by the verdict rendered: State v. Kaufman, 51-578.

On the trial of an appeal in the district court from a conviction before a justice of the peace defendant may waive a jury as he might have done in the justice court: State v. Ill, 74-441.

Where defendant pleaded not guilty and the jury was impaneled, and thereupon by agreement between the district attorney and defendant the jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment, held, that such verdict was not erroneous: State v. Keegan, 74-145.

5736. Presence of defendant. 4351. If the indictment be for a misdemeanor, the trial may be had in the absence of the defendant, if he appear by counsel; but if for a felony, he must be personally present. [R., § 4706.]

If defendant is shown to have been present at the beginning and conclusion of the trial, his presence at other times will be presumed, unless the contrary is shown: State v. Wood, 17-18.

If the record shows that defendant was present at arraignment, it will be presumed he was present at the rendition of the verdict where the contrary does not appear: Harri-man v. State, 3 G. Gr., 270.

And it will be so presumed in the absence of any showing to the contrary: State v. Kline, 54-183.

It would seem that the trial at which defendant accused of a felony is required to be present ends with the verdict, and that his presence at the argument and determination of a motion for new trial is not essential: State v. Decklotts, 19-447.

Where defendant is put on trial for felony, but only convicted of a misdemeanor, his presence when judgment is rendered is not necessary: Hughes v. State, 4-554.

The fact that a defendant indicted for felony, who is arraigned and personally pleads not guilty, is not present at the impaneling of the jury, or during the trial, or at rendition of judgment, will not deprive the court of jurisdiction so as to render the judgment void: Turner v. Barr, 75-758.

As to presence of defendant at arraignment, see § 5713 and notes; as to his presence at rendition of verdict, see § 5846 and notes; and at pronouncing of judgment, see § 5882.

CHAPTER 22.

OF DEMURRER.

5737. Ground. 4352. The defendant may demur to the indictment when it appears upon its face, either:

1. That it does not substantially conform to the requirements of this code;
2. That the indictment contains any matter, which, if true, would constitute a legal defense or bar to the prosecution. [R., § 4707; C., '51, § 2952.]

The question whether an offense is barred by the statute of limitations cannot be properly raised by demurrer: State v. Hussay, 7-409; State v. Groome, 10-308; State v. Deitrick, 51-467.

An indictment for conspiracy must allege the conspiracy to be for the purpose of doing an illegal act, or the doing of a legal act by illegal means, or it will be open to demurrer: State v. Harris, 38-242.

Questions as to the sufficiency of the statement of facts in the indictment to constitute the crime charged can be raised by demurrer, and the sufficiency of the indictment as a pleading is then to be determined from its averments. The fact that minutes of evidence before the grand jury are not filed by the clerk cannot be raised in that manner: State v. Eriggs, 68-416.

5738. Entry; form. 4353. The entry on the record of a demurrer, may be substantially in the following form: "The defendant demurs to the indictment." [R., § 4708.]

5739. When heard. 4354. When the demurrer is put in, the objection thereby presented must be heard immediately, or at such time as the court may appoint. [R., § 4709; C., '51, § 2954.]

5740. Jurisdiction in another county. 4355. If the demurrer is sustained on the ground that the offense charged was within the exclusive jurisdiction of another county in this state, the same proceedings shall be had as provided in sections four thousand four hundred and forty-six to four thousand four hundred and forty-nine, inclusive, of this code [§§ 5831-5834]. [R., § 4710.]

5741. Final judgment. 4356. If the demurrer is sustained because the indictment contains matter which is a legal defense or bar to the indictment, the judgment shall be final, and the defendant must be discharged. [R., § 4711.]

5742. Discharge or re-submission. 4357. If the demurrer is sustained on any other ground than that mentioned in the last two sections, the defendant must be dealt with as provided in section four thousand three hundred and forty-one of this code [§ 5726], unless the court is of opinion, on good cause shown, that the objection can be remedied or avoided in another indictment; in which case the court may order the cause to be re-submitted to the same or another grand jury, and the defendant may be dealt with as provided in section four thousand three hundred and forty-two of this code [§ 5727]. [R., § 4712.]

[It is evident by an examination of the sections referred to in this section, as well as by reference to the corresponding section in the Revision, and to the section as it appears in the Code commissioners' report, that § 5727 and § 5728 are intended to be referred to, instead of § 5726 and § 5727 respectively.]

Where a demurrer to an indictment is sustained and defendant is held to bail and his case re-submitted to the grand jury, under this section, he must then exercise his right of challenge to the grand jury or it will be held to be waived: State v. Harris, 38-242.

5743. Pleading over; final judgment. 4358. If the demurrer is overruled, the defendant has a right to put in a plea. If he fails to do so, final judgment may be rendered against him on the demurrer, and, if necessary, a jury may be impaneled to inquire and ascertain the degree of the offense. [R., § 4713; C., '51, § 2955.]

Where, upon the overruling of a demurrer to the indictment, the court proceeded to try defendant as though the plea of not guilty had been entered, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty, held, that the conviction was valid, and that defendant could not, upon motion in arrest of judgment, have it set aside and interpose the plea of not guilty: State v. Greene, 66-11.

CHAPTER 23.

OF PLEAS TO THE INDICTMENT.

5744. What allowed. 4359. There are but three pleas to an indictment.

A plea of:

1. Guilty;
2. Not guilty;
3. A former judgment of conviction or acquittal of the offense charged, which may be pleaded with or without the plea of not guilty. [R., § 4714; C., '51, § 2957.]

The whole object of jury trials in criminal cases is to ascertain whether the accused is guilty or not guilty, and it is not proper for the plea to form an issue upon a fact which, although it may be an item of evidence, is not conclusive as to the innocence of defendant. Therefore, held, that in a prosecution for the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license, the plea that defendant had a license did not raise a proper issue for trial: Peters v. State, 3 G. Gr., 74.

The fact that the record does not show that any plea was interposed by defendant will not warrant the reversal of a conviction in the lower court. It will be presumed that there was a plea upon which the trial was had: State v. Foster, 40-303.

Pleas of not guilty, and of former conviction or acquittal, may be pleaded together. Where the plea of former conviction or acquittal only was interposed, and defendant was found guilty thereof and did not ask to plead over, held, that judgment of conviction was properly entered without further trial as to his guilt: State v. Green, 16-239.

If it is proved that the former conviction or acquittal was obtained by fraud or collusion it may be disregarded: Ibid.

And see § 5862 as to judgment on plea of former conviction or acquittal.

5745. Entry; form. 4360. The plea may be entered on the record, substantially, in the following form:

1. A plea of guilty. "The defendant pleads that he is guilty of the offense charged in the indictment."
2. A plea of not guilty. "The defendant pleads that he is not guilty of the offense charged in the indictment."

3. A plea of former conviction or acquittal. "The defendant pleads that he has formerly been convicted or acquitted (as the case may be) of the offense charged in the indictment, by the judgment of the court of — (naming it), rendered on the — day of —, A. D. 18— (naming the time)." [R., § 4715.]

5746. Plea of guilty. 4361. The plea of guilty can only be put in by the defendant himself in open court. [R., § 4716.]

The fact that defendant pleads guilty upon an expression of opinion by the district attorney that the court will thereupon impose a fine of not exceeding a certain amount does not entitle him to a new trial in the event of sentence for the payment of a greater fine: State v. Reininghaus, 43-149.

A plea of guilty, even though made when the defendant is under no obligation to plead, constitutes an admission of guilt which may be shown in evidence against him: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

5747. Withdrawal of plea of guilty. 4362. At any time before judgment, the court may permit the plea of guilty to be withdrawn, and other plea or pleas substituted. [R., § 4717; C., '51, § 2961.]

The court should, on application, allow defendant to withdraw his plea of guilty, for the purpose of raising the objection that the indictment charges more than one offense: State v. Abrahams, 6-117.

It is error to refuse to allow defendant to withdraw his plea and file a motion to set aside the indictment on the ground that the grand jury was not properly selected (§ 5722): State v. Hale, 44-96.

Under this section defendant has the right to withdraw the plea of guilty and substitute therefor a different one: State v. Oehlshlager, 38-297.

Where judgment was entered upon a plea of guilty, and a motion for leave to withdraw such plea and for new trial was filed, based on the ground that defendant was surprised by the punishment inflicted being greater than expected, held, that the alleged ground of surprise was not sufficiently established to entitle the defendant to relief: State v. Buck, 59-382.

Where defendant pleaded guilty before a justice of the peace, and sentence was passed thereon, held that, on appeal to the district court, such plea might be withdrawn: State v. Kraft, 10-330; State v. Abrahams, 6-117; State v. Farlee, 74-451.

5748. Plea of not guilty. 4363. The plea of not guilty is a denial of every material allegation in the indictment; and all matters of fact may be given in evidence under it, except a former conviction or acquittal. [R., § 4718.]

The plea of not guilty may be entered by defendant's counsel in the absence of defendant: State v. Jones, 70-505.

5749. Conviction or acquittal a bar. 4364. A conviction or acquittal by a judgment upon a verdict shall bar another prosecution for the same offense, notwithstanding a defect in form or substance in the indictment on which the conviction or acquittal took place. [R., § 4719.]

Dismissal of prosecution: Defendant being put upon trial under charge of a public offense, it is not within the scope of the authority of either the prosecuting attorney or of the court to take the case from the jury of his own arbitrary will and without a controlling cause, and again hold defendant to trial on the same charge, although it be newly presented. Such proceeding amounts to an acquittal, and may be pleaded as a bar: State v. Callentine, 8-288.

the verdict is so defective that no judgment can be rendered upon it, it may be set aside and defendant again put on trial. The defective verdict will not amount to an acquittal: State v. Redman, 17-329; State v. Arthur, 21-322.

A nolle prosequi may be entered before the trial is entered upon, but after plea and the jury is sworn and the evidence is in it will amount to an acquittal: Ibid.

Discharge of jury: The fact that in the exercise of sound discretion the jury is discharged for failure to agree does not entitle defendant to be released as having been once in jeopardy: State v. Vaughan, 29-286.

The fact that material witnesses for the prosecution cannot be called because their names are not indorsed on the indictment will not be such a peremptory or controlling cause as to justify the court in dismissing the case: Ibid.

Where, after all the evidence had been introduced, the judge, on receipt of a telegram announcing the sickness of his wife, adjourned court for a few days to go home, and, on the day to which the court was adjourned, by telegram adjourned court over the term, held, that there was sufficient cause to warrant the adjournment in the discretion of the judge, and that defendant could not, on a subsequent trial, plead previous jeopardy: State v. Tattman, 59-471.

Defective verdict: Although defendant is put upon trial on a good indictment, yet if

New trial: The granting of a continuance because of the inability of prosecution to introduce material evidence which was not before the grand jury, and notice of which was not given to defendant before the trial, will not bar a subsequent trial in pursuance of such continuance: State v. Parker, 66-586; State v. Falconer, 70-416.

Motion in arrest of judgment: Where, after verdict, a motion by defendant in arrest of judgment is sustained, the proceeding cannot be relied upon, in a subsequent prosecution for the same offense, as constituting a previous conviction or acquittal under this section: State v. Clark, 69-196.

Fraudulent acquittal or conviction: Where a person guilty of a criminal act procures a fraudulent conviction or acquittal by collusion, the state may elect to treat the action of the magistrate as a farce and the judgment a nullity, and it may commence a new prosecution: State v. Green, 16-239.

Where a defendant relies upon a plea of a former conviction, and the state claims that it is not concluded thereby for the reason that it was fraudulently obtained, the burden of proof is upon the state to establish the fraud: State v. Maxwell, 51-314.

Where the same act constitutes two crimes: A previous prosecution for an act as constituting one crime will not bar a subsequent prosecution for a greater crime committed in the same act. For instance, a prosecution for assault will not bar a subsequent prosecution for a riot committed in the same transaction: Scott v. United States, Mor., 142.

A conviction for assault and battery will not bar a subsequent prosecution for assault with intent to do great bodily injury, committed in the same act: State v. Foster, 33-525.

The charge of an assault upon two persons is, in a legal sense, so far different from an assault upon one, that proof of the commission of the act in regard to one will not sustain an indictment charging an assault upon two; therefore, in a subsequent indictment for assault and battery upon one of the persons named, defendant could not show, under a plea of former conviction or acquittal, a judgment under an indictment for an assault upon two. Such reasoning does not apply, however, to an indictment for an assault by two. In such case either one may be acquitted either on a joint or on a separate indictment: State v. McClintock, 8-203.

The act of using a building for the keeping of intoxicating liquors with intent to sell in violation of law, and that of using a building for the sale of the same in violation of law, are each by statute declared to be the crime of nuisance. Therefore a conviction for nuisance committed in one of these two ways will bar a prosecution for the same crime committed in the other way in the same building prior to the first indictment: State v. Layton, 25-193.

Where a person by one muscular action and one volition passed four forged checks, held, that he committed one crime, and that a conviction for passing one of such checks would bar a subsequent prosecution as to the others: State v. Eggesht, 41-574.

Former conviction or acquittal for larceny will bar a subsequent prosecution for larceny from the person in the same act: State v. Gleason, 56-203.

A conviction for permitting a certain minor to remain in a saloon and play billiards at one date will not bar a prosecution for allowing another minor to do the same at another date: State v. Derichs, 42-196.

Crime against state and United States: The crime of counterfeiting the coin of the United States may be punished under state law, congress not having attempted to exercise the exclusive power of punishing such offenses: State v. McPherson, 9-53.

Offense against state and city: An ordinance of a city punishing an act which is punishable under the laws of the state is not, on that account, void. The act may be punished under both without violating any constitutional principle: Bloomfield v. Trimble, 54-399.

Acts for which conviction might have been had: Where it appeared that, under a previous prosecution for selling intoxicating liquor described as stomach bitters, defendant was in fact tried for all offenses for sales of intoxicating liquors, held, that he could not be prosecuted a second time for the sale of dandelion bitters during the time covered by the first prosecution: State v. Sterrenberg, 69-544.

Evidence as to identity of offense: Where defendant pleaded a former conviction before a justice of the peace, held proper to ask the justice before whom the former conviction was claimed to have been had whether the offense then charged was the same as testified to by the witnesses on the last trial, and whether the evidence was the same: State v. Maxwell, 51-314.

Pleading over: After verdict against the defendant on a plea of former conviction or acquittal, not accompanied with the plea of not guilty, if he does not ask to plead over, he may be sentenced without further trial: State v. Green, 16-239.

See, further, notes to following section.

5750. In different degree. 4365. When the defendant has been convicted or acquitted upon an indictment for an offense consisting of different degrees, the conviction or acquittal shall be a bar to another indictment for the offense charged in the former or for any lower degree of that offense, or for an offense necessarily included therein. [R., § 4720.]

Conviction of a lower degree of offense: A verdict of guilty in a lower degree of the crime than that charged in the indictment, or guilty of a crime necessarily included in that charged, operates as an acquittal of a higher degree or a higher crime, and defendant cannot, after having secured a reversal, be again put upon trial for a higher degree or a higher crime than that of which he was convicted: State v. Tweedy, 11-350; State v. Clemmons, 51-274.

Nor will the fact that defendant, being put on trial a second time for the higher degree or higher crime, is again found guilty of only the lower degree or lower crime of which he was previously convicted, render the error in improperly putting him on trial a second time of the higher degree or higher crime, error without prejudice: State v. Tweedy, 11-350.

Where the same essential element is included in two or more crimes, as, for instance, 5751. Judgment, when a bar. 4366. The judgment for the defendant on a demurrer, except where it is otherwise provided, or for an objection to its form or substance taken on the trial, or for variance between the indictment and the proof, shall not bar another prosecution for the same offense. [R., § 4721.]

5752. Plea entered by court. 4367. If the defendant fail or refuse to answer the indictment by demurrer or plea, a plea of not guilty must be entered by the court. [R., § 4722; C., '51, § 2963.]

Where, upon the overruling of a demurrer to the indictment, the court proceeded to try defendant as though the plea of not guilty had been entered, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty, held, that the conviction was valid, and that defendant could not, upon motion in larceny in the crimes of larceny from a dwelling-house in the night-time and robbery, a previous conviction or acquittal for one of such crimes will bar a subsequent prosecution for the other. In the prosecution for the one crime the defendant might be convicted of the included crime: State v. Mikesell, 70-176.

See notes to preceding section; also Const., art. 1, § 12, and notes.

arrest of judgment, have it set aside, and interpose the plea of not guilty: State v. Greene, 66-11.

It does not constitute reversible error to put defendant on trial without a plea having been entered: State v. Hayes, 67-27.

CHAPTER 24.

OF CHANGE OF VENUE IN CRIMINAL CASES.

5753. On defendant's application. 4368. In all criminal cases which may be pending in any of the district courts of this state, any defendant therein may petition the court for a change of venue to another county. [R., § 4727; C., '51, § 3270.]

5754. What stated. 4369. Such petition must set forth the nature of the prosecution, the court where the same is pending, and that such defendant cannot receive a fair and impartial trial owing to the prejudice of the judge, or to excitement or prejudice against him in such county, and must verify the same by his affidavit stating the same to be true as he verily believes. [R., § 4728; C., '51, § 3271.]

Where the petition is based upon the prejudice of the judge, the statute does not require affidavits in support thereof, nor contemplate the introduction of testimony, but the judge is not required to allow a change in such case as a matter of course: State v. Mewherter, 46-88.

An attorney appointed by the court to defend a prisoner is not incompetent to make an affidavit to prove the facts necessary to entitle the prisoner to a change of venue: State v. Mooney, 10-506.

As to counter-affidavits, see § 5757 and notes.

As to the sufficiency of the petition and affidavits, see § 5759 and notes.

5755. Verified. 4370. When the ground alleged in the petition is excitement and prejudice against him in the county, it must be verified by three disinterested persons, residents of the county from which the change is sought, in addition to the petitioner himself. [R., § 4729.]

5756. Need not state facts. 4371. The petition need not state the facts upon which the belief of the petitioner, or other person verifying the same, is founded, but may allege the belief of the particular ground thereof in general terms. [R., § 4730.]

5757. Additional testimony. 4372. The court may receive additional testimony, by affidavits only, either on the part of the defendant or the state, when the alleged ground in the petition is excitement and prejudice in the county against the petitioner. [R., § 4731.]

Upon an application for a change of venue in a prosecution for violation of a city ordinance it is not improper to consider counter-affidavits of the citizens of the city that there is no such prejudice against the defendant in the county as to entitle him to the change: State v. Wells, 46-662.

5758. Filed with clerk. 4373. The petition and affidavits, if any, must be filed with the clerk, and are parts of the record. [R., § 4732.]

5759. Court's discretion. 4374; 17 G. A., ch. 171; 18 G. A., ch. 9. The court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, must decide the matter of the petition, when fully advised, according to the very right of it. [R., § 4733; C., '51, § 3272.]

Discretion of the court: The question of allowing the change rests in the sound discretion of the court, and unless such discretion has been abused the supreme court, on appeal, will not interfere with the decision: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 447; State v. Ross, 21-467; State v. Collins, 32-36; State v. Felter, 32-49; State v. Beck, 73-616.

But this discretion is not absolute, nor an arbitrary discretion: State v. Hutchinson, 27-212.

If it appear that this discretion has been improperly exercised, the action of the court will be reviewed and reversed; and in a particular case the refusal to grant a change was held error: State v. Canada, 48-448.

The rule that the court is to pass upon the question of granting a change of venue in the exercise of a sound discretion applies to cases where the change is asked on the ground of prejudice of the judge, or excitement and prejudice of the people of the county, and although these grounds may be averred in the very language of the statute they do not entitle the prisoner to a change as a matter of right (explaining State v. Nash, 7-347; State v. Mooney, 10-506): State v. Arnold, 12-479; Gordon v. State, 3-410; State v. Barrett, 8-536.

In a particular case, held, that the showing for a change was sufficient to render the action of the court in refusing it erroneous: State v. Nash, 7-347, 366.

Abuse of discretion in denying a change of venue must be made to appear, or the decision of the court will not be interfered with, even when the ground alleged is the prejudice of the judge: State v. Ray, 50-520; State v. Knight, 19-94; State v. Ingalls, 17-8; State v. Freeman, 27-333; State v. Mewherter, 46-88.

Where the record fails to show that the evidence is all that was produced on the hearing of the application for change of venue, the supreme court cannot pass upon the correctness of the action of the lower court: State v. Malling, 11-239; State v. Leis, 11-416.

To justify a reversal of the case for the action of the judge in overruling a motion for a change of venue, the record must show affirmatively that there was an abuse of the discretion reposed in the court in determining the same: State v. Hale, 65-575.

Therefore, where an affidavit for a change of venue was a mere statement of the belief of the applicant that the judge was prejudiced, founded on alleged facts of the existence of which the applicant had no personal knowledge, held, that such affidavit was insufficient to overcome the presumption arising from the action of the court in denying the application: Ibid.

Where a showing for a change is based on the ground of excitement or prejudice of the inhabitants of the county, and is resisted by affidavits on the part of the state, the supreme court will, on appeal, be slow to interfere with an order denying the change. The record must show that there was an abuse of discretion in determining the matter: State v. Williams, 63-135.

Though the petition for a change is based upon the prejudice of the judge, and shows sufficient ground, if true, to require a change, it does not follow that the change should be granted as a matter of course. The judge may consult his own feelings, as well as the papers, and grant or deny the change as he may think the right demands, in the exercise of a sound discretion. In a particular case, held, that the showing for a change was not sufficient to require the reversal of the action of the court in refusing it: State v. Foley, 65-51.

In a particular case, held, that the showing for a change was not sufficient to necessitate a reversal: State v. Perigo, 70-657.

Where an application was made for change of venue on account of prejudice of the judge, and overruled, and subsequently, in response to an objection to a juror made by defendant, the judge remarked that he intended to give the defendant a better jury than he was entitled to, held, that this remark showed prejudice on the part of the judge, and that the motion for a change should have been sustained: State v. Read, 49-85.

It does not follow that because a change of venue on the ground of prejudice of the inhabitants of the county has been improperly denied, and the case is reversed on that ground, that when the case comes on for trial anew the defendant will be entitled to such change on the affidavits before filed: State v. Nash, 7-347, 374.

Error in overruling an application for change of venue will not entitle the defendant to a release on habeas corpus: Jackson v. Boyd, 53-536.

In civil cases, see § 3795 and notes.

In police court: There is no provision for change of venue in proceedings before a police court for violation of a city ordinance. The provisions in that respect with reference to prosecutions before justices of the peace do not apply: Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572.

Affidavits: Where the petition is based upon the prejudice of the judge, the statute does not require affidavits in support thereof, nor contemplate the introduction of testimony, but the judge is not required to allow a change in such case as a matter of course: State v. Mewherter, 46-88.

5760. To what county. 4375. If sustained, the court must, if the ground alleged be the prejudice of the judge, order the change of venue to the most convenient county in an adjoining district to which no objection exists. [R., § 4734; C., '51, § 3272.]

For other provisions as to change of venue, see § 242.

5761. Same. 4376. If sustained on the ground of excitement and prejudice in the county, it must be awarded to such county in the same district in which no such objection exists. [R., § 4735; C., '51, § 3272.]

5762. Duty of clerk. 4377. Upon the making of the order, if there be but one defendant in the case, unless all have joined in the petition, the clerk must make out and certify a transcript of all papers on file in the case, including the indictment, and file the same in his office; and a certified copy of all record entries, and all the original papers on file must be, without unnecessary delay, transmitted to the clerk of the court to which the change of venue is ordered. [R., § 4736; C., '51, § 3273.]

The transcript of record entries which is required to be made by the clerk in transferring the case upon change of venue to another county does not include the indictment itself, which is required to be transmitted in its original form: Sharp v. State, 2-454.

It is not error to allow the clerk of the court from which a change of venue is taken to amend his certificate by interlineation to supply an omission, there being no question as to the truthfulness of the amendment: State v. Gibson, 29-295.

5763. Where more than one defendant. 4378. If there be more than one defendant in the case, and all the defendants have not joined in the petition, the clerk, upon the making of such order, must, without unnecessary delay, make out and certify a transcript of all entries appearing on the record, and of all the papers on file in the case, including the indictment, and transmit the transcript so certified to the clerk of the court to which the change of venue is ordered, retaining the originals. [R., § 4737.]

5764. Duty of sheriff. 4379. If a defendant who has applied for a change of venue, which has been ordered, be in custody, the sheriff of the county from which the venue is changed, must, on the order of the court, transfer and deliver such defendant to the sheriff of the county to which such change is allowed, and upon such transfer and delivery, with a certified copy of such order, the sheriff last mentioned must receive and detain the defendant in his custody until legally discharged therefrom, and give a certificate of such delivery. [R., § 4738; C., '51, § 3274.]

5765. Proceedings. 4380. The court to which such change of venue is granted must take cognizance of the cause, and proceed therein to trial, judgment, and execution, in all respects as if the indictment had been found by the grand jury impaneled in such court. [R., § 4739; C., '51, § 3275.]

Where an indictment upon which defendant is put on trial appears to have been properly found in the county from which the change is taken, and no objection is made thereto until after verdict, defendant cannot object that it is not filed in the court in which the trial is had: Sharp v. State, 2-454.

As to bail in court to which transferred, see § 5770 and notes.

5766. Cost of change. 4381. In all changes of venue under the provisions of this chapter, the county from which the change of venue was taken shall pay the expenses and charges of removing, delivering, and keeping the defendant, and all other expenses necessary and consequent upon such change of venue and the trial of such defendant, which shall be audited and allowed by the court trying such case. [R., § 4740; C., '51, § 3276.]

Under this section, in all cases of change of venue, the county from which the case is removed is liable to the county wherein the trial is had for all the costs and expenses of the trial of the case, and not merely for the costs which may be taxed against accused in case of conviction: Jones County v. Linn County, 68-63.

An indorsement by the judge, not purporting to act as the court, recommending the allowance of an amount for costs, held not an auditing and allowance binding upon the county: Barnes v. Marion County, 54-482.

The provisions of § 5121, that where costs are paid by a county other than the one where the offense was committed the latter county shall be liable to the county in which it is tried for the costs of such trial, does not apply where one county takes original jurisdiction of a crime committed in an adjoining county but within five hundred yards of the boundary line between them: Floyd County v. Cerro Gordo County, 47-186.

This section does not declare that costs made by defendant shall be paid by the county, and it does not render the county liable for defendant's costs of abstract, transcript, etc., on an appeal in which the judgment against him is reversed: State v. Rainsberger, 74-539.

See, also, §§ 5121 and 5771.

5767. Sheriffs' fees. 4382. Sheriffs, for delivering prisoners under the provisions of this chapter, are entitled to the same fees therefor as are allowed for the conveyance of convicts to the penitentiary. [R., § 4741; C., '51, § 3277.]

5768. Transfer prosecutions to obtain jury. 4383. When any district judge in this state is satisfied from his own knowledge or otherwise, that any organized county in his district does not contain a sufficient number of inhabitants possessing the qualifications of jurors to compose grand and trial jurors for the presentment and trial of any person or persons charged with the commission of an offense in said county requiring the intervention of a grand jury, said judge shall make an order transferring all prosecutions for such offenses committed in said county to the next nearest county in the same judicial district possessing the requisite number of inhabitants qualified to serve as jurors. [R., § 4742.]

5769. In vacation. 4384. Said order may be made by the judge in vacation, or by the court, and the district court of the county to which said prosecution may be transferred, shall have full and complete jurisdiction of the offense, and the person or persons charged with committing the offense may be indicted and tried in the county to which the prosecution is so transferred, in the same manner as though the offense had been committed in said county. [R., § 4743.]

5770. Appearance in county to which transferred. 4385. When any prosecution has been transferred by the court or judge under the provisions of this chapter, the person charged with committing the offense shall be required to appear at the next succeeding term of the district court of the county to which the prosecution is transferred, and shall give bond accordingly, and the court or judge may require all material witnesses in behalf of the prosecution to enter into cognizance for their appearance at the district court of the county to which the prosecution is transferred. [R., § 4744.]

The clerk of the court to which the change is granted has power to take a recognizance for the appearance of the prisoner: State v. Merriew, 47-112.

The form of bond required under this section is substantially the same as that prescribed by § 5983: Ibid.

The requirement that in case of a change of venue the accused shall give a new bond to appear, etc., is directory, and does not operate to release the sureties on the original bail bond, who are still responsible for his appearance: State v. Brown, 16-314.

5771. Costs. 4386. The county in which the offense was committed, and from which the prosecution was transferred, shall pay all the costs attending the prosecution. [R., § 4745.]

5772. No appeal from order. 4387. No appeal or writ of error shall lie from any order for the transfer of prosecutions made under the provisions of this chapter. [R., § 4746.]

5773. Pending cases. 4388. The provisions of this chapter apply to prosecutions or charges now pending, or that may hereafter be instituted for offenses heretofore or hereafter committed. [R., § 4747.]

CHAPTER 25.

OF THE FORMATION OF TRIAL JURY.

5774. How formed. 4389. The jury for the trial of criminal actions is selected, drawn, and summoned as provided in the code of civil practice. [R., § 4751.]

As to waiving jury trial, see notes to § 5735.

As to the selection, drawing and summoning of the jurors, see §§ 305-323 and notes.

5775. Ballots prepared. 4390. At the opening of the court, the clerk shall prepare separate ballots, containing the names of the persons returned as jurors, which shall be folded each in the same manner, as near as may be, and so that the name thereon shall not be visible, and must deposit them in a box to be kept for that purpose. [R., § 4752; C., '51, § 2964.]

The provisions of this section are directory; and the failure of the clerk to comply therewith will not amount to error sufficient to reverse the judgment, unless it be shown that the court, on application, refused to require these provisions to be carried out; or unless it be otherwise shown that some substantial prejudice has resulted to defendant: State v. Gillick, 7-287.

5776. Attachment for absent jurors. 4391. When the indictment is called for trial and before drawing the jury, either party may require the names of all the jurors in the panel to be called, and that an attachment issue against those who are absent, but the court may, in its discretion, wait or not for the return of the attachment. [R., § 4753; C., '51, § 2965.]

Where the court had, earlier in the term, excused four jurors on their own statements, not under oath, but without objection at the time on the part of the defendant, held not error, when defendant's case was called for trial, to refuse to issue attachment to compel the attendance of the jurors thus excused: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 448.

While the defendant may, under this section, insist on attachment issuing for jurors who are absent from the original panel, he must insist on that right before the jury is called; otherwise he cannot object to a juror because he is not a member of the original panel: State v. Miller, 53-84.

5777. Drawing jurors. 4392. Before the name of any juror is drawn the box must be closed and shaken, so as to intermingle the ballots therein, and the clerk shall draw such ballots without seeing the names written on them, from the box, through the top or lid thereof. [R., § 4754; C., '51, § 2966.]

5778. Ballots kept separate. 4393. When the jury is completed, the ballots containing the names of the jurors sworn must be laid aside and kept apart from the ballots containing the names of the other jurors, until the jury so sworn is discharged. [R., § 4755; C., '51, § 2967.]

5779. Returned to box. 4394. After the jury is so discharged, the ballots containing their names must be again folded and returned to the box, and so on, as often as a trial is had. [R., § 4756; C., '51, § 2968.]

5780. Juror absent. 4395. If a juror be absent when his name is drawn or be set aside or excused from serving on that trial, the ballot containing his name must be folded and returned to the box as soon as the jury is sworn. [R., § 4757; C., '51, § 2969.]

5781. Talesmen. 4396. If by reason of there being one or more juries impaneled, or for any other reason, there should not remain any ballots undrawn, or if in consequence of jurors being set aside no jury can be obtained from the list of those returned by the sheriff for the trial of issues, the court may order the sheriff, or if he be a party to or interested in the cause, some other person, to summon jurors from the by-standers, or other persons, who shall be returned for the trial of the indictment. [R., § 4758; C., '51, § 2970.]

The disqualifying interest of the sheriff here referred to need not be a pecuniary interest; § 485 applies in criminal cases; State v. Hardin, 46-623; Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270-281.

The provisions of § 310, for drawing additional jurors to fill the panel, are directory, and a simple disregard of such provisions, where error does not affirmatively appear, is not sufficient to authorize reversal of judgment: State v. Harris, 64-287.

When special jurors are summoned on a special venire to fill up a jury for the trial of a particular case it is not error to call them successively in the order in which they are summoned, but it is better to place their names on ballots and draw as in selecting regular jurors, and this is the proper practice when they are summoned for the entire term: State v. Green, 20-424.

Where the court, prior to the commencement of a criminal case and without knowledge that the jury could not be obtained from the regular panel, ordered that a special venire be issued, and forty persons were summoned to act as jurors, and afterwards, the regular panel being exhausted in securing a jury in such case, jurors were called from this special panel, in the order in which their names appeared thereon, held, that the action of the court was not erroneous: State v. Ryan, 70-154.

Where the panel had been reduced by excusing jurors until it consisted of eighteen members, nine of whom were absent acting as jurors in another case, held, that it was not error for the court to order the jury to be completed from the by-standers without waiting for the return of the other jurors: State v. McCahill, 72-111.

5782. Number. 4397. The jury consists of twelve men accepted and sworn to try the issue. [R., § 4759; C., '51, § 2971.]

Where it appeared that the jury, after being impaneled, were sworn "the truth to speak upon the issues joined," held, that the oath was sufficient: Wrocklege v. State, 1-167.

See, further, notes to § 5805.

As to trial by less than twelve, see notes to § 5735.

CHAPTER 26.

OF CHALLENGING THE JURY.

5783. Challenge. 4398. A challenge is an objection made to the trial jurors, and is of two kinds:

1. To the panel;
2. To an individual juror. [R., § 4760; C., '51, § 2972.]

5784. No severance. 4399. When several defendants are tried together, they are not allowed to sever their challenges, but must join therein. [R., § 4761; C., '51, § 2973.]

5785. To panel. 4400. A challenge to the panel can be interposed only on the ground that they were not selected, drawn, or summoned as prescribed by law. [R., § 4762; C., '51, § 2974.]

It is not a ground for a challenge to the panel that the jurors may have heard the evidence in a preliminary inquiry, under § 6018, as to the prisoner's sanity: State v. Arnold, 12-479.

5786. When and how taken. 4401. A challenge to the panel must be taken before a challenge to any individual juror, and must be in writing, specifying distinctly and plainly the facts constituting the ground of challenge. [R., § 4763; C., '51, § 2975.]

A challenge to the panel cannot be made after challenges to individual jurors: State v. Davis, 41-311.

If a venire is returned so as to show its defects, the defendant must ascertain the facts as they really exist, and make any challenges to the panel which he intends to raise, before challenging individual jurors: State v. Bryan, 40-379.

5787. Trial of challenge. 4402. A challenge to the panel may be taken by either party, and upon the trial thereof the officers, whether judicial or ministerial, whose irregularity is complained of, as well as any other persons, may be examined to prove or disprove the facts alleged as the ground of the challenge. [R., § 4764; C., '51, § 2976.]

This section does not provide how the officer whose irregularity is complained of shall be examined, and the court may require that such examination be by affidavit, and refuse to hear oral evidence: State v. Linde, 54-139.

5788. Effect of allowance. 4403. If the facts of the challenge be allowed by the court, the jury must be discharged so far as the trial of the indictment in question is concerned. If it be disallowed, the court shall direct the jury to be impaneled. [R., § 4765; C., '51, § 2977.]

5789. To individual juror. 4404. A challenge to an individual juror may be taken orally, and is either:

1. For cause;
2. Peremptory. [R., § 4766; C., '51, § 2978.]

5790. For cause. 4405. A challenge for cause may be made, either by the state or by the defendant; it must distinctly specify the facts constituting the causes of challenge, and may be made for any of the following causes:

1. A previous conviction of the juror of a felony;
2. A want of any of the qualifications prescribed by statute to render a person a competent juror;
3. Unsoundness of mind, or such defects in the faculties of the mind or the organs of the body, as render him incapable of performing the duties of a juror;
4. Affinity or consanguinity, within the ninth degree, to the person alleged to be injured by the offense charged, or on whose preliminary information, or at whose instance the prosecution was instituted, or to the defendant, to be computed according to the rule of the civil law;
5. Standing in the relation of guardian and ward, attorney and client, master and servant, or landlord and tenant, or being a member of the family of the defendant, or of the person alleged to be injured by the offense charged, or on whose preliminary information, or at whose instance the prosecution was instituted, or in his employ on wages;
6. Being a party adverse to the defendant in a civil action, or having been the prosecutor against, or accused by him, in a criminal prosecution;
7. Having served on the grand jury which found the indictment, or on a coroner's jury which inquired into the death of a person whose death is the subject of the indictment;
8. Having served on a trial jury, which has tried another defendant for the offense charged in the indictment;
9. Having been on a jury formerly sworn to try the same indictment and whose verdict was set aside, or which was discharged without a verdict, after the cause was submitted to it;
10. Having served as a juror, in a civil action brought against the defendant, for the act charged as an offense;
11. Having formed or expressed such an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner as would prevent him from rendering a true verdict upon the evidence submitted on the trial;
12. Because of his being bail for any defendant in the indictment;
13. Because he is defendant in a similar indictment, or complainant or private prosecutor against the defendant or any other person indicted for a similar offense;
14. Because he is, or, within a year preceding, has been engaged or interested in carrying on any business, calling, or employment, the carrying on of which is a violation of law, and when the defendant is indicted for a like offense;
15. Because he has been a witness, either for or against the defendant, on the preliminary trial or before the grand jury. [R., §§ 4767-71; C., '51, §§ 2982-86.]

[The word "indicted," in the second line of ¶ 13, is not in the original rolls, but is retained as in the printed Code, as having probably been inserted by the editor.]

Qualifications: See §§ 305-323 and notes.

Having served on a jury in the trial of another defendant: The provision of this paragraph refers to cases where two or more defendants have been jointly indicted for the same offense, and have had separate trials: and not to cases where two defendants are separately indicted, although the offenses may be of the same kind: State v. Sheeley, 15-404; State v. Leicht, 17-28.

Having formed or expressed an opinion: Under the provisions of this section, an opinion of a juror in regard to some of the transactions involved in the case is not sufficient to disqualify him. In order to disqualify, the opinion must be as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner: State v. Bryan, 40-379.

Having formed and expressed an opinion as to the killing, in a case of homicide, is not sufficient: State v. Thompson, 9-188.

Having formed a hypothetical opinion, based upon rumors, but which would not prevent the juror from rendering a true verdict upon the evidence, will not disqualify him: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 451.

The opinion that defendant is guilty or innocent, which is good ground of challenge, is an unqualified opinion. If the opinion is qualified by the conditions that if what the juror has heard about the case is true, then defendant is guilty or not guilty, the opinion is a qualified one, and does not render the juror incompetent: State v. George, 62-682.

Where a juror stated that he had no bias or prejudice against the prisoner (who was an Indian), but merely had heard reports, which he believed, that some Indians had done the deed for which the Indian was on trial; and that the act done was wrong, unless done in self-defense, held, that this was not such ground as to exclude him from sitting as a juror: Waukon-chaw-neck-kaw v. United States, Mor., 332.

Where the juror stated that he had formed and expressed an opinion upon rumor, but that he had no ill-will or prejudice against defendant, and no personal knowledge of the circumstances of the case; and that his opinion was conditional; and if what he had heard was true he had formed an opinion, and if what he had heard was untrue he had not formed an opinion, held, that the juror was subject to challenge for cause: Trimble v. State, 2 G. Gr., 404.

Where a juror stated that he had not formed an unqualified opinion; that if what he had heard should be proved he had an opinion made up, but that he thought he had no prejudice or bias, etc., held, that he was not disqualified: State v. Sater, 8-420.

The juror having testified that he has formed and expressed an unqualified opinion, etc., should not be required to state whether it is for or against the prisoner in order to render him subject to challenge for cause: State v. Shelledy, 8-477.

Where, in a prosecution for nuisance in using a building for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, the juror testified that he was opposed to the business of saloon-keeping and to the law regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, but that as long as the law stood he was not prejudiced against a man for selling beer or wine, held, that he was a competent juror: State v. Nelson, 58-208.

Where a juror stated that he had read an account of the matter (a murder) in the papers at the time it occurred, and came to the conclusion that defendant shot the deceased, and that it was a criminal thing for him to do, etc., but also stated that he had no bias against the defendant, and believed he could fairly and without prejudice determine upon the testimony the guilt or innocence of defendant, irrespective of what he had read, held, that it was not error to refuse to sustain a challenge for cause: State v. Bruce, 48-530. And see State v. Lawrence, 38-51; State v. Sopher, 70-494.

A juror cannot be said to have formed an unqualified opinion when the opinion he has formed is based upon hearsay and not upon statements made by any one claiming to have personal knowledge, and he still thinks that he can render a true verdict: State v. Ormiston, 66-143.

Where a juror testified that he had neither formed or expressed such an opinion as would prevent him from rendering a true verdict, held, that he was qualified, although on examination he said that he had an unqualified opinion, it appearing, however, that the juror adhered to the belief that he had no opinion which would prevent him from rendering a true verdict according to the evidence: State v. Vatter, 71-557.

Persons who have not formed or expressed such an opinion as would preclude them from rendering a true verdict upon the evidence submitted on the trial are not disqualified: State v. Smith, 73-32.

Implied bias: The fact that a juror is a member of an association for the prosecution of persons generally who may be arrested for horse-stealing is not a ground for challenge upon the trial of a defendant charged with that crime: State v. Wilson, 8-407.

The fact that a juror is a resident of the city does not disqualify him to sit on a jury for the trial of a person for violation of a city ordinance: State v. Wells, 46-662.

Time of objection; new trial: If the juror is examined on oath at the proper time as to whether he has formed or expressed such an opinion as will disqualify him, and answers falsely with reference thereto, that fact being shown, may be a ground for a new trial, but such ground cannot be urged unless the witness has been interrogated with respect thereto at the proper time: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 508.

Waiver: In accepting the jury, defendant waives an objection thereto for bias or prejudice, but if either of the jurors was disqualified to act as such, he does not waive his right of objection for this cause, but may make it a ground for new trial, unless he knew at the time the jury was sworn of the fact of disqualification: State v. Groome, 10-308.

Effect of disqualification: A judgment upon the verdict rendered by a disqualified jury is erroneous, but not void. It may be reversed upon appeal, but cannot be disregarded as a nullity: Foreman v. Hunter, 59-550.

Error without prejudice: Where defendant does not exhaust all his peremptory challenges, any error in overruling a challenge to a juror for cause will be considered as error without prejudice: State v. Elliott, 45-486.

Failure of the court to sustain a challenge for cause to a juror who does not sit as one of the jurors on the trial will not constitute reversible error where it appears that defendant's peremptory challenges were not all exhausted when the jury was finally sworn: State v. Davis, 41-311.

And see notes to § 3978.

5791. Exemption. 4406. An exemption from service on a jury is not a cause of challenge, but the privilege of the person exempted. [R., § 4772; C., '51, § 2987.]

See § 3984 and note.

5792. Juror examined. 4407. Upon the trial of a challenge to an individual juror, the juror challenged may be examined as a witness to prove or disprove the challenge, and must answer every question pertinent to the inquiry thereon, but his answers shall not afterwards be testimony against him. [R., § 4773; C., '51, § 2988.]

It is not proper for counsel to ask a juror whether he has formed or expressed an opinion as to a certain supposed defense: State v. Arnold, 12-479.

The proper method in examining a juror is to direct the investigation to the general question of opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. The purpose of the inquiry is to ascertain the existence or non-existence of actual bias. Counsel may direct the inquiry so as to prove to the mind of the jury facts, circumstances, and even hypothetical cases, and thus fully present his right to challenge for cause: Ibid.

Where the juror has been challenged for cause it is within the discretion of the court to allow the opposite party the privilege of recalling him for cross-examination as to his qualifications: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 503.

5793. Other witnesses. 4408. Other witnesses may also be examined on either side; and the rules of evidence applicable to the trial of other issues shall govern the admission or exclusion of testimony on the trial of the challenge. [R., § 4774; C., '51, § 2989.]

5794. Court determine. 4409. In all challenges the court shall determine the law and the fact, and must either allow or disallow the challenge. [R., § 4775; C., '51, § 2990.]

5795. Order of challenges for cause. 4410. The state shall first complete its challenges for cause, and the defendant afterwards. [R., § 4776.]

5796. Peremptory challenges. 4411. After twelve jurors have been obtained, against whom no cause of challenge has been found to exist, peremptory challenges may be made. [R., § 4777.]

5797. Defined. 4412. A peremptory challenge is an objection to a juror for which no reason need be given, but upon which the court must exclude him. [R., § 4778; C., '51, § 2980.]

5798. Number. 4413; 22 G. A., ch. 39. If the offense charged in the indictment is or may be punishable with death, or imprisonment for life; the state and defendant are each entitled to ten peremptory challenges; if any other felony to six each; and if a misdemeanor to three each. [10 G. A., ch. 10, § 1.]

5799. Order of peremptory challenges. 4414; 22 G. A., ch. 39. The state shall be entitled to the first challenge, and shall challenge one juror, the defendant shall be entitled to the second challenge, and shall challenge one juror, the state shall be entitled to the third challenge, and shall challenge one juror, the defendant shall be entitled to the fourth challenge and shall challenge one juror; and so on alternately until all the challenges are exhausted. [10 G. A., ch. 10, § 2.]

The fact that the state waives the first peremptory challenge does not defeat the right of defendant to exercise his peremptory challenges: Smith v. State, 4 G. Gr., 189.

As to order of peremptory challenges under prior statute, see State v. Pierce, 8-231; State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 504.

As to order of challenges in civil cases, see § 3978 and notes.

That error in ruling for cause is waived by failure to exhaust peremptory challenges, see notes to § 5790.

5800. Order of different kinds. 4415. The challenges of either party need not be all taken at once, but separately, in the following order, including in each challenge all the causes of challenge belonging to the same class:

1. To the panel;
2. To an individual juror, for cause;
3. To an individual juror, peremptorily. [R., § 4781.]

5801. Vacancy filled. 4416. After each challenge which is allowed, the vacancy occasioned thereby shall, if required, be filled before any further challenge is made, and any new juror thus introduced may be challenged for cause, as well as peremptorily, if the peremptory challenges are not exhausted. [R., § 4782.]

5802. Jury sworn. 4417. No juror shall be sworn to try the issue until twelve jurors are accepted. [R., § 4783.]

5803. Bias in favor of party. 4418. Bias in a juror against either party is no cause of challenge by the other. It may be waived by the party against whom it exists. [R., § 4784.]

CHAPTER 27.

OF THE TRIAL OF AN ISSUE OF FACT IN AN INDICTMENT.

5804. Continuances. 4419. The provisions of the code of civil practice, relative to the continuances of the trial of civil causes, shall apply to the continuance of criminal actions, except that no judgment for costs shall be rendered against a defendant in a criminal action on account of such continuance, and except as in this code otherwise provided; and except that the defendant shall, if he, upon entering his plea demand it, be entitled to three days in which to prepare for trial.

Under a statutory provision, not now in force, as to the time of trial in criminal proceedings, held, that until the time fixed by law, or by the court in accordance with the provisions of statute, defendant could not be legally compelled to go to trial or show cause for continuance: State v. Harris, 33-356.

Defendant is not entitled, as a matter of right, to a continuance of a case to the term next after that at which the indictment is found: State v. Arnold, 12-479.

In a criminal case the state as well as defendant is entitled to reasonable opportunity to procure its witnesses and be prepared for trial; and where a proper application for a continuance is made by the state with sufficient showing of diligence, it should be granted: State v. Painter, 40-298.

When defendant during the trial dismissed his counsel, and had new counsel appointed by the court to defend him, held not error to refuse continuance of several days on such appointment, no ground for the dismissal appearing of record, and defendant's guilt being conclusively shown: State v. House, 55-466.

The time during the term at which the defendant shall be put upon his trial rests wholly in the sound discretion of the judge, and the fact that the court upon application of the prosecution passes the case to a later day of the term will not constitute error in the absence of any showing of abuse of discretion or prejudice: State v. Maher, 74-77.

See, further, §§ 3956, 3957, and notes.

5805. Order of trial. 4420; 17 G. A., ch. 19. The jury having been impaneled and sworn, the court must proceed in the following order:

1. The clerk or district [county] attorney must read the indictment and state the defendant's plea to the jury, and the district [county] attorney may briefly state the evidence by which he expects to sustain the indictment.

2. The attorney for the defendants may then briefly state his defense, and the evidence by which he expects to sustain it.

3. The state may then offer the evidence in support of the indictment.

4. The defendant or his counsel may then offer his evidence in support of his defense.

5. The parties may then respectively offer rebutting evidence only, unless the court, for good reasons, in furtherance of justice, permit them to offer evidence upon their original case.

6. When the evidence is concluded, unless the case is submitted to the jury on both sides without argument, the district [county] attorney must commence, the defendant follow by one or two counsel at his option, unless the court shall permit him to be heard by a larger number, and the district [county] attorney conclude, confining himself to a response to the arguments of the defendant's counsel; provided, that where two or more defendants are on trial for the same offense, they may be heard by one counsel each; and, provided further, that the court, when the affirmative of the issue is with the defendant, may, in its discretion, award to the defendant the last argument.

7. The court shall then charge the jury in writing, without oral explanation or qualification. [R., § 4785; C., '51, § 2991.]

Administering oath to jury: No form of oath to the jury is prescribed by the statute; and, in the absence of a record showing the contrary, it will be presumed that the oath administered was in due form: State v. Oslander, 18-435, 452.

Where the record recited that "the jury were duly impaneled and sworn to try the case (naming it), and a true verdict give therein, according to the evidence and the best of their ability," held, that even if that was literally the oath administered it was sufficient: Ibid.

Where it appeared that after being impaneled the jury were sworn "the truth to speak upon the issues joined," held, that the oath was sufficient: Wrocklege v. State, 1-167.

Under the provisions of the Code of '51, held, that the oath administered to the jury requiring them "the truth to speak," without including the direction "to try the issues joined," was not sufficient: Dixon v. State, 4 G. Gr., 381.

Under the provisions of the Revised Statutes of 1843 requiring an oath in a particular form, held, that where the record recited that the jury were sworn "the truth to speak" upon the issues joined between the parties, which was much less formal and solemn than the oath required by statute, such irregularity was sufficient to warrant the reversal of a conviction for murder: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

Method of impaneling: It is too late, after the verdict, to object to the manner of impaneling the jury when no objection was made on the trial: Ibid.

Dismissing juror: It is error, after the jury has been impaneled and the trial commenced, to dismiss a juror and substitute another in his place, even though the juror dismissed has been guilty of misconduct which would vitiate a verdict of guilty if rendered in such proceeding. In such a case of misconduct the jury should be dismissed and the trial commenced anew: Grable v. State, 2 G. Gr., 539.

Order of trial: The order here specified may be varied by the court in the exercise of lawful discretion: State v. Flynn, 42-164; State v. Falconer, 70-416.

Right to open and close, on plea of former conviction or acquittal, see § 5807.

Opening statement for prosecution: Statements by the district attorney, in opening the case to the jury, of facts which he expects to prove, and which if proved would be material and competent, may be made by him, if in good faith, believing and having good reason to believe he will be able to sustain them by evidence, although he is afterward unable to obtain evidence to sustain some of them: State v. Meshek, 61-316.

Before the enactment of the amendment to this paragraph, the court might, in its discretion, allow the district attorney to make a statement of the case to the jury, and the only effect of such provision is to secure, as a matter of right, what the court might, in its own discretion, have granted or refused: State v. Bateman, 52-604.

In a particular case, a lengthy statement, which was made by prosecuting attorney, of the evidence which it was expected would be introduced, and was followed by an unfair argument of the case based to a considerable extent upon facts which were wholly unsubstantiated by the evidence afterward introduced, was held sufficient misconduct to require a reversal, the defendant having objected to the remarks of the prosecuting attorney at the time; and further held, that the fact that attorney for defendant replied to his opening argument in the same manner, did not render the action of the prosecuting attorney error without prejudice: State v. Williams, 63-135.

The fact that by oversight the prosecution introduces its evidence before the indictment is read and the opening statement made will not constitute ground of reversal, such irregularity being waived by failure to interpose an objection to the introduction of evidence before the reading of the indictment: State v. Norton, 67-641.

Additional counsel for prosecution: The practice of allowing district attorneys to have the assistance of associate counsel has been too long acquiesced in, in this state, to be called in question. There can be no objection to leaving the matter of allowing associate counsel to the discretion of the court and prosecuting attorney: State v. Fitzgerald, 49-260.

It is entirely proper, with the consent of the prosecuting attorney, that other counsel be employed to assist in the prosecution, and such counsel may be employed by the prosecuting witness for that purpose: State v. Montgomery, 65-483.

That the district attorney, at his own request, is assisted in the prosecution by another attorney, is not a ground of objection on the part of defendant: State v. Ormiston, 66-143.

Burden of proof: See notes to § 5813.

Order of calling witnesses: While § 4006 does not apply to criminal cases, yet under some circumstances, and for some purposes, a witness may be called after the evidence is closed, and where no prejudice is shown from such introduction of testimony it will not be a ground for reversal: State v. Shean, 32-88.

The order in which evidence is allowed to be introduced is a matter so much in the discretion of the court that the supreme court will not feel justified in interfering unless upon the clearest showing of prejudice; so held where, upon rebuttal, the prosecution was allowed to introduce evidence in chief, while upon surrebuttal by defendant evidence in chief was excluded: State v. Bruce, 48-530.

Where evidence is offered in rebuttal which should have been offered in chief, the court may admit it as upon the original case, if in furtherance of justice it should be so admitted. The fact that it was not ostensibly so admitted will not justify a reversal in the absence of a showing of prejudice: State v. Curran, 51-112.

As to what is to be deemed rebutting testimony, see State v. Parish, 22-284.

The court is vested with discretion to permit the introduction of evidence out of the order prescribed by this section. And in the absence of showing of abuse of such discretion, it was held not error to allow the examination of a new witness in support of the indictment after several witnesses had been examined for defendant: State v. Falconer, 70-416. And see State v. Flynn, 42-164.

The state may in rebuttal support the proof before introduced by it, of the defendant's presence at the time and place of the crime, for the purpose of contradicting testimony on the part of defendant tending to show an alibi: State v. Maher, 74-77.

As to amount of evidence required, see notes to § 5813.

Statements in argument: Statements of an attorney for prosecution in a particular case, held reprehensible, but not sufficient to entitle defendant to a reversal: State v. Winter, 72-627.

Instructions: See § 5825 and notes.

5806. Evidence for state; notice. 4421; 17 G. A., ch. 168, § 3. The district [county] attorney in offering the evidence in support of the indictment, in pursuance of the order prescribed in the last section, under the second subdivision thereof, shall not be permitted to introduce any witness who was not examined before the grand jury, and the minutes of whose testimony was not taken by the clerk of the grand jury, and presented with the indictment to the court, unless he shall have given to the defendant a notice in writing, stating the name, place of residence, and occupation of such witness, and the substance of what he expects to prove by him on the trial, at least four days before the commencement of such trial. Provided, that whenever the district [county] attorney desires to introduce evidence to support the indictment, of which he shall not have given said four days' notice, because of insufficient time theretofore since he learned said evidence could be obtained, he may move the court for leave to introduce such evidence, giving the name, place of residence, and occupation of the witnesses he desires to introduce, and the substance of what he expects to prove by said witnesses, and showing diligence such as is required in a motion for a continuance, supported by affidavit, whereupon, if the court sustain said motion, the defendant shall elect whether said cause shall be continued on his motion, or the witness shall then testify; and if said defendant shall not elect to have said cause continued, the district [county] attorney may examine said witness in the same manner and with same effect, as though four days' notice thereof had been given defendant as hereinbefore provided, except that the district [county] attorney, in the examination of said witnesses, shall be strictly confined to the matters set out in his motion. [R., § 4786.]

[The words "four days," in the ninth line, are "three clear days" in the original rolls, but the former are retained here, as in the printed Code, the change having probably been made by the editor. See note to § 5809 as to similar change.]

Witnesses whose names are not indorsed on the indictment cannot be introduced by the prosecution: Smith v. State, 4 G. Gr., 189; Ray v. State, 1 G. Gr., 316.

It is error to allow the prosecution to examine a witness not examined before the grand jury (without notice, etc.), although the name of such witness is indorsed on the indictment, and what appear to be minutes of her testimony are attached thereto: State v. Porter, 74-623.

What sufficient indorsement: Variance between the name of a witness as indorsed on the indictment, and his true name, is not a valid objection, unless defendant is misled thereby: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 459.

In a particular case, held, that the difference between the name of the witness as indorsed upon the indictment, and his real name, was so slight as not to justify his exclusion: Houston v. State, 4 G. Gr., 437.

The fact that an indorsement on the indictment gives the initials only of the witness' Christian name will not render it improper to allow such witness to testify: State v. Pierce, 8-231; State v. Schlagel, 19-169.

Where, in indorsing the name of the witness on the back of an indictment, his title, instead of his Christian name, was used, held that, if the witness was as unmistakably described as he would have been by the use of his Christian name, the object of the indorsement was accomplished, and no prejudice could result to defendant from allowing the witness to be called: State v. McComb, 18-43.

A mistake in the initials of a witness whose name, is indorsed will not, in the absence of any showing of prejudice, be sufficient ground for objecting to his testimony: State v. Stanley, 33-526.

The indorsement is not the only evidence to be received on the question of identity of the witness called with the one who was examined before the grand jury. The minutes of evidence may be examined in determining that question, and such minutes, being a part of the record, need not be formally introduced in evidence; and where the name of the witness indorsed was "Mrs. Hutzel," and it appeared that the witness called was Mary E. Hutzel, held, that it would be presumed, in favor of the action of the court in allowing such witness to testify, that it appeared from the minutes that the person called was the person who was examined before the grand jury: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

Failure to indorse on the back of the indictment the name of a witness examined before the grand jury, and the minutes of whose evidence are returned, is not a ground for excluding his testimony; such defect can only be reached by motion to set aside the indictment: State v. Fowler, 52-103; State v. Flynn, 42-164.

A continuance being granted after the commencement of the trial, the ground therefor being an application by the district attorney showing discovery of evidence which it was not possible to introduce by reason of the witness not having been examined before the grand jury, and no notice of its proposed introduction having been given in proper time, held, that this did not constitute a bar to a subsequent trial: State v. Parker, 66-586; State v. Falconer, 70-416.

Failure of the state to call any of the witnesses whose names are indorsed on the indictment is no ground for presuming that the testimony of such witnesses would be in favor of defendant: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 457.

Failure of the state to produce all the witnesses that have testified before the grand jury is no wrong, and creates no presumption of wrong: State v. Dillon, 74-653.

Failure to file minutes: The mere failure to file the minutes returned by the grand jury should not prevent the state from introducing its evidence: State v. Postlewait, 14-446.

Nor should the fact that minutes of the evidence as taken before the committing magistrate are not properly certified to: State v. Kepper, 65-745.

In the examination of a witness the minutes of whose testimony were taken by the grand jury and returned with the indictment, the prosecuting attorney is not limited to the testimony given by the witness before the grand jury, but may examine him as to other matters not therein referred to: State v. Bowers, 17-46; State v. Ostrander, 18-435; State v. McCoy, 20-262.

The mere brevity of the minutes of the witness' testimony taken by the grand jury will not justify the entire exclusion of the testimony of such witness: State v. Van Vleet, 23-27.

Where the indictment is found upon minutes of testimony taken before a magistrate, as provided by § 5672, and the names of the witnesses examined by such magistrate are indorsed on the back of the indictment, they may then be called to testify by the prosecution without having been examined by the grand jury: State v. Rodman, 62-4-6.

Other witnesses: This section applies only to evidence in support of the indictment, and does not preclude the testimony of other witnesses who were not before the grand jury, and whose evidence is not returned with the indictment, as to the fact that a certain witness testified before the grand jury: State v. Fowler, 52-103.

The state may call, in rebuttal, witnesses whose names are not indorsed on the indictment, and who were not examined before the grand jury: State v. Parish, 22-284; State v. Gillick, 10-98; State v. Ruthven, 58-121; State v. Rivers, 68-611.

If defendant becomes a witness in his own behalf, witnesses to impeach him may be called who were not examined before the grand jury, without serving notice of the intention to call them: State v. Tester, 69-717.

The notice: Under this section it is sufficient that the notice be served upon defendant personally. The mode of service or authentication is not prescribed. Authentication by the person making the service is sufficient: State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 452.

The return of the sheriff without verification is sufficient to show service of the notice: State v. Pugsley, 75-742.

The purpose of the statute is to secure to the accused such knowledge of the evidence which will be given against him as will enable him to make proper preparation to contradict or explain it. But errors in such notice as to the witness' place of residence, or the facts expected to be proved by him, will not render the introduction of the testimony of the witness erroneous where the defects or mistakes in the notice are not prejudicial: State v. Rainsbarger, 74-196.

Waiver of objection: That witnesses are examined whose names are not on the indictment cannot be raised as an objection for the first time after conviction: Ray v. State, 1 G. Gr., 316; State v. Houston, 50-512.

Objection to the introduction of a witness by the prosecution whose name is not indorsed on the indictment, and without previous notice, may be waived: State v. Ward, 73-532.

For requirements as to indorsement of names of witnesses on the indictment, and the return of the minutes of evidence, see, further, § 5676 and notes.

Failure to so indorse names of witnesses, or return minutes of evidence, is ground for setting aside the indictment: See § 5722 and notes.

5807. Opening and closing by defendant. 4422. When the defendant's only plea is a former conviction or acquittal, the order prescribed in the second and third subdivisions of the section immediately preceding the last, shall be reversed, and the defendant shall first offer his evidence in support of his defense. [R., § 4787.]

As to burden of proof of affirmative defenses, see notes to § 5813.

5808. Time of argument. 4423. The court shall not restrict counsel as to time in their arguments. [R., § 4788.]

5809. Separate trials. 4424. When two or more defendants are jointly indicted for felony, any defendant requiring it may be tried separately. In other cases, defendants jointly indicted may be tried separately or jointly in the discretion of the court. [R., § 4789; C., '51, § 2992.]

When defendants jointly indicted for a felony elect to be tried separately, the order in which they shall be tried rests with the district attorney, under the direction of the court: State v. Hudson, 50-157; State v. Nash, 7-347, 373.

Where defendants are jointly indicted for a misdemeanor they may be tried jointly or separately in the discretion of the court: State v. Gigher, 23-318.

And the state, as well as defendants, in such case may ask for a separate trial: State v. Marvin, 12-499.

Where the offense is not felony it is within the discretion of the court to refuse a separate trial: State v. Kirkpatrick, 75-505.

Whether tried separately or jointly, either one of the co-defendants is a competent witness for the other: State v. Nash, 10-81; State v. Gigher, 23-318.

In case of a joint trial one co-defendant is a competent witness for the other, the jury being properly cautioned that the evidence is not to be considered in behalf of the defendant so testifying: State v. Stewart, 51-312.

Whether defendants be jointly or separately tried, a separate judgment is to be entered up as to each, and the clerk is entitled to a fee for the entry of each separate judgment; but where tried jointly he is entitled to but one trial fee: State v. Hunter, 33-361.

Acquittal of one of two defendants jointly indicted does not bar the prosecution of the other. One may be found guilty and the other acquitted: State v. McClintock, 1 G. Gr., 392.

Where defendants are jointly indicted, and the evidence shows that if both are guilty they are guilty of distinct offenses committed in separate transactions, the court should require the prosecution to elect upon which transaction it will proceed: State v. Brown, 58-298.

Two persons may be jointly indicted for the same crime without alleging that one is principal and the other accessory; or that either one was more directly the perpetrator of the act than the other: State v. Zeibart, 40-169.

5810. Conspiracy; overt act. 4425. Upon a trial for a conspiracy, in a case where an overt act is required by law to constitute the offense, the defendant cannot be convicted unless one or more overt acts be expressly alleged in the indictment, nor unless one or more of the acts alleged be proved; but other overt acts not alleged in the indictment may be given in evidence. [R., § 4790; C., '51, § 2996.]

5811. Rules of evidence. 4426. The rules of evidence in civil cases are applicable also to criminal cases, except as otherwise provided. [R., § 4805.]

See §§ 4886 and 5954 and notes.

5812. Confession of defendant. 4427. The confession of the defendant, unless made in open court, will not warrant a conviction, unless accompanied with other proof that the offense was committed. [R., § 4806.]

What constitutes confession: The term "confession" as here used does not include admissions or declarations by the defendant: State v. Schamhurst, 34-547.

The mere statement of a defendant accused of forgery that he wrote the name alleged to be forged is not sufficient to constitute a confession. To have such effect the admission must be that the writing was with fraudulent intent: State v. Knowles, 48-598.

In a prosecution for murder, held, that certain admissions of defendant that he was with deceased at or near the time and place of the commission of the crime were receivable in evidence, but that it was erroneous to consider them as confessions of guilt, and to instruct the jury on that basis: State v. Glynden, 51-463.

A confession of guilt is an admission of the criminal act itself, not an admission of the facts or circumstances from which guilt may be inferred. Statements of facts tending to show defendant's guilt are not to be treated as confessions: State v. Red, 53-69.

The admission of a person suspected of a crime that he has lied in relation to the matter is not a confession of guilt, but a circumstance against him, which may be shown in evidence: State v. Feltes, 51-495.

It is error to instruct the jury with reference to statements of defendant on the theory that they constitute confessions, when they are not admissions or acknowledgments of agency or participation in the commission of the crime, although they are such as, in connection with other facts and circumstances, warrant a conviction of guilt: State v. Jones, 33-9.

Voluntary confessions: Evidence of a confession should be examined with care, but when it is clearly established, whether made in the presence of the prosecutor or his friends, or to one person alone, if made voluntarily, it is entitled to the highest credit and greatest weight as evidence: State v. Brown, 48-382.

In order to exclude a confession as involuntary there must be some promise made or inducement held out, or injury threatened, otherwise it may be received in evidence: State v. Fortner, 43-494.

Facts considered and held not to show that the confession in question was made under such threats as to invalidate it: State v. Ostrander, 18-435.

Where an officer testified to conversations of defendant while in his custody, held, that it was not error to refuse evidence to the effect that defendant was ironed and harshly treated, it not being claimed that the treatment influenced the conversation: State v. Sullivan, 51-142.

Admissions which were freely and voluntarily made by the defendant to the officer having him in custody, and were not influenced by hope or fear, may be shown in evidence: State v. Sopher, 70-494; State v. McLaughlin, 44-82.

Involuntary confessions: Confessions

5813. Reasonable doubt. 4428. Where there is a reasonable doubt of the defendant being proven to be guilty, he is entitled to an acquittal. [R., § 4807.]

Reasonable doubt: For a definition of reasonable doubt, see State v. Ostrander, 18-435, 458.

If the jury in considering the whole case drawn from a person by hope or fear are inadmissible as evidence against him, and the jury should be directed without qualification to disregard them: State v. Fidment, 35-541.

A confession in order to be admissible must be free and voluntary; not extracted by any sort of threats, nor obtained by promises, however slight; nor by the exertion of any improper influence. If a confession has been obtained by undue influence, any statement afterwards made under the influence of that confession cannot be admitted: State v. Chambers, 39-179.

Mental condition at time of making confessions: Where defendant had introduced evidence as to his condition at the time of making certain confessions with reference to being intoxicated at that time, which evidence it was claimed indicated delirium tremens, held, that it was error to exclude the opinion of an expert as to the mental condition indicated by the proven facts: State v. Feltes, 51-495.

While it is proper that evidence as to the condition of defendant at the time of making a confession should go to the jury, he cannot insist upon being allowed to introduce such evidence before the confession itself is testified to. The time when the jury are made acquainted with his condition is immaterial: Ibid.

Question for the court: Whether confessions proposed to be introduced in evidence against a prisoner were voluntarily made, or were extorted through hope or fear caused by inducements held out to him, is a question to be determined by the court upon preliminary evidence: State v. Fidment, 35-541.

Corroboration necessary: Under this section a confession not made in open court will not warrant a conviction unless there is other proof that the offense charged has in fact been committed: State v. Turner, 19-144.

Where every other ingredient of a crime was established by other evidence, except the falsity of certain representations which were shown to have been made, and it appeared that defendant did not act in accordance with such representations, held, that voluntary confessions out of court of such falsity were sufficient, without other evidence thereof, to warrant conviction: State v. Lewis, 45-20.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that the corpus delicti was not proven aside from defendant's confessions out of court, and the conviction was therefore reversed: State v. Dubois, 54-363.

The evidence in a particular case held to be sufficiently corroborative of the confession of defendant to warrant a conviction: State v. Feltes, 51-495.

In a civil action, a confession alone will not be sufficient proof of the commission of a crime: Georgia v. Kepford, 45-48, 52.

have reasonable doubt upon any essential ingredient of the offense, this entitles the defendant to an acquittal because it generates a doubt of guilt: State v. Hennessy, 55-299.

The general instruction upon reasonable doubt which is usually given need not be repeated in each instruction which relates to the elements of the crime or facts of the case: Ibid.; State v. Cross, 68-180; State v. Maloy, 44-104.

It is not a reasonable doubt of any one proposition of fact which entitles to an acquittal, but a reasonable doubt of guilt arising upon the consideration of all the evidence in the case: State v. Hayden, 45-11.

The doctrine of reasonable doubt is wisely limited to the general conclusion of guilty or not guilty upon all the evidence in the case. It cannot safely be applied to any one fact in the case, howsoever material it may be, as, for instance, insanity: State v. Fetter, 32-49.

It is error to distinguish between two material facts and instruct as to one that it need only be fully and clearly proven: State v. Stewart, 52-284.

An hypothesis which will be sufficient to sustain a reasonable doubt must arise out of the evidence adduced and not out of facts of which there is no proof: State v. Porter, 34-131.

The court is not required to charge that the jury should acquit if they have a reasonable doubt as to a specified element of the crime. It is sufficient to instruct them generally that they should acquit if upon the whole case they have such a doubt of the guilt of defendant: State v. Curran, 51-112; State v. Stewart, 52-284.

An instruction to the effect that if, after carefully weighing all the evidence and deliberately considering the whole case, the jury had a reasonable doubt of the guilt of defendant, they should return a verdict of not guilty, held sufficient; and held also that the rule as to reasonable doubt need not be repeated in other instructions: State v. Miller, 53-154.

It is error to instruct that a preponderance of evidence in behalf of defendant is necessary to raise a reasonable doubt of guilt: State v. Porter, 64-237.

The following instruction to the jury as to reasonable doubt held proper: "Before you will be justified in convicting the defendant you must be satisfied of his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt:" State v. Helvin, 65-289.

Instructions as to reasonable doubt held sufficient in particular cases: State v. Sterling, 34-443; State v. Bodekee, 34-520; State v. Pierce, 65-85; State v. Elsham, 70-531.

Reasonable doubt of individual jurors: It is a reasonable doubt entertained by the jury and not by any one member thereof that justifies an acquittal: State v. Rorabacher, 19-154.

An instruction that a reasonable doubt must be one that arises in the minds of the whole jury, held erroneous, as liable to convey the impression that unless such doubt was shared by all the jurors there should be a conviction: State v. Stewart, 52-231; State v. Sloan, 55-217.

Each juror must, under his oath, vote according to his own convictions, and the doubt with which he has to do is the doubt in his own mind: State v. Sloan, 55-217.

Although each juror is to act upon his own judgment, and is not required to surrender his own conviction unless convinced, yet it is not necessary that such a proposition be stated in connection with the ordinary charge in regard to reasonable doubt: State v. Hamilton, 57-596.

It is not necessary that the jury be advised that each juror is to act upon his own convictions, and that he should not concur in a verdict which is against his judgment: State v. Fry, 67-475.

In civil actions: The rule of criminal law that a defendant can only be convicted upon proof of the crime charged beyond a reasonable doubt is not applicable in a civil action to recover damages for a criminal act, and in such case the plaintiff should be allowed to recover where the criminal act is established by preponderance of evidence. (Overruling Barton v. Thompson, 46-30); Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56-11; Wood v. Porter, 56-161; Lewis v. Garrelson, 56-278; Barton v. Thompson, 56-571; Kendig v. Overhulser, 58-195.

So held in an action on an insurance policy, where it was alleged as a defense that plaintiff himself caused the fire in order to get the insurance: Behrens v. Germania Ins. Co., 58-26.

In an action for false and fraudulent representations it is not necessary to prove the fact of fraud beyond a reasonable doubt, although intentional fraud might constitute a crime under the statute: Faville v. Shehan, 68-241.

Mere preponderance of evidence is sufficient to establish a fraudulent alteration of an instrument in writing: Cott v. Churchill, 61-296.

In actions for slander or libel in charging plaintiff with the commission of a crime, if defendant seeks to justify by pleading the truth of the charge, a preponderance of evidence of the commission of the crime is sufficient to support his defense. The criminal act need not be proven, as in criminal cases, beyond a reasonable doubt. (Overruling Bradley v. Kennedy, 2 G. Gr., 231; Forshee v. Abrams, 2-571; Fountain v. West, 23-9; Ellis v. Lindley, 38-461; Mott v. Dawson, 46-333); Riley v. Norton, 65-306.

Bastardy proceedings: The rule of criminal law requiring proof beyond a reasonable doubt is not applicable in favor of defendant in a bastardy proceeding: State v. McGlothlen, 56-544.

Amount of evidence: In criminal cases the jury do not weigh the evidence as in civil cases. Neither a preponderance of evidence nor any weight of preponderant evidence is sufficient to warrant a conviction in a criminal case unless it generates a full belief of the guilt of the party charged, to the exclusion of all reasonable doubt: Tweedy v. State, 5-433.

Sufficiency of evidence: While the juror is not an artificial being whose judgment is to be governed by technical and artificial rules, but is a man, and should, while acting as juror, act as a man, exercising his reason, his intelligence, his every-day judgment and his common sense, yet it is erroneous to charge that he is not at liberty to disbelieve as a juror while he believes as a man: State v. Collins, 20-85.

But error in using such language was held not sufficient to warrant a reversal where the case was otherwise fairly presented and the evidence of guilt was satisfactory: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

It is improper to instruct the jury that what satisfies the mind outside of the jury-box should do so within it. Information derived from the evidence which might be sufficient to lead a person not acting as a juror to a belief of defendant's guilt might not be sufficient to justify a verdict of guilty by such juror: State v. Ruby, 61-86.

Burden of proof as to affirmative defenses: Any negative matter, such as the absence of self-defense, the want of sufficient provocation, etc., must be shown by the state, and defendant cannot be held to have the burden of proof cast upon him to show such matters. But whenever the matter of defense is wholly disconnected from the body of the offense charged (for instance, where in homicide it is claimed that the death is caused by neglect of a wound), this general rule does not properly apply, but in such cases the burden of proof rests upon the accused: State v. Morphy, 33-270.

Burden does not shift: It is error to instruct the jury that if evidence on the part of the state, alone and unexplained, would establish beyond a reasonable doubt the guilt of the defendant, then the burden of proof is shifted to the defendant to establish his defense by a preponderance of evidence: State v. Porter, 64-237.

Burden of proof as to proviso: The burden of proving an exemption under a proviso rests upon the party claiming it: Sayre v. Wheeler, 31-112.

As to pleading exception or proviso, see notes to § 5689.

Burden of proof as to insanity: Where insanity is sought to be established as an excuse for a crime, the presumption of sanity must be overcome by a preponderance of evidence. It is not sufficient for defendant to produce such evidence as to raise a reasonable doubt of sanity, nor is he, on the other hand, required to prove the insanity beyond a reasonable doubt: State v. Fetter, 32-49; State v. Bruce, 48-530.

A preponderance of evidence of insanity raises a reasonable doubt of guilt: Ibid.

The burden of proving insanity rests upon the defendant, and he must overcome by a preponderance of evidence the proof of sanity on behalf of the prosecution: State v. Geddis, 42-264.

As to the defense of insanity as well as that of alibi, the burden of proof is upon defendant: State v. Hemrick, 62-414.

While the burden of proving insanity as a defense is upon defendant, he is only required to establish such defense by a preponderance of evidence. It is error to instruct the jury that if the evidence goes no further than to show such a state of mind to be possible or merely probable, it is not sufficient. The presumption of sanity simply imposes upon defendant the burden of proving insanity, and such presumption is not to be weighed against any measurable amount of evidence: State v. Jones, 64-349.

The fact that defendant undertakes to prove insanity does not relieve the prosecution of the burden of proving the criminal act and the criminal intent, and does not give defendant the opening and closing: State v. Fetter, 32-49.

Burden of proving alibi: Where defendant seeks to establish an alibi, the burden of proof rests upon him, and it cannot be established except by a preponderance of evidence: State v. Red, 53-69; State v. Rivers, 63-611.

But this does not abrogate the doctrine that a person cannot be convicted upon a preponderance of evidence; and if a reasonable doubt arises upon the whole evidence, and upon the evidence establishing certain essential facts, or upon evidence of facts inconsistent with the prisoner's guilt, the jury should acquit. Where defendant relies upon an alibi, the burden of proof is upon him to establish by a preponderance of evidence the fact that he was not present at the commission of the crime: State v. Red, 53-69; State v. Hamilton, 57-596; State v. Krewsen, 57-588; State v. Hemrick, 62-414; State v. Fry, 67-475.

Evidence of an alibi cannot avail unless it preponderates: State v. Reed, 62-40; State v. Rowland, 72-327.

A bare preponderance of proof in favor of defendant, where he relies upon an alibi, is sufficient: State v. Vincent, 24-570; State v. Northrup, 48-583; State v. Kline, 54-183.

It is error in such case to charge the jury that they must be fully satisfied of the alibi: State v. Hardin, 46-323; State v. Henry, 48-403.

It is not error to instruct the jury that they may acquit if there is a fair preponderance in support of the claim of alibi: State v. Johnson, 72-393.

The jury cannot acquit on the defense of alibi unless it is supported by the preponderance of the evidence on that question; but if the evidence upon that defense considered alone, or in connection with all other evidence, leaves reasonable doubt in the minds of the jury of defendant's guilt, they cannot convict: State v. Maher, 74-77.

It is error to instruct the jury that an unsuccessful attempt to establish an alibi is of great weight against defendant, and implies an admission of the truth and relevancy of the facts alleged against him. It is only a fabricated or trumped-up defense of alibi, interposed with a knowledge of its falsity, that will constitute even a circumstance against defendant, and even that is not conclusive of his guilt: State v. Collins, 20-85.

It is not erroneous to instruct the jury that the defense of alibi is one easily manufactured, and that juries are generally and properly advised by the courts to scan the proofs of an alibi with care and caution: State v. Blunt, 59-468; State v. Rowland, 72-327.

The defense of alibi does not confess the act charged, and seek to excuse it, as in the defense of insanity; and, therefore, the absence of instructions in reference to evidence of an alibi is no prejudice to the defendant, and, under the general instructions as to reasonable doubt on the facts in the case, the defendant would have the advantage of all the presumption which could arise in his favor by reason of such evidence: State v. Sutton, 70-268.

Instructions as to alibi in a particular case held not erroneous: State v. Butler, 67-643.

Recent possession of stolen property: Where there was evidence of recent possession of stolen property by defendant accused of the larceny thereof, held error to instruct the jury that the burden of proof was upon defendant to satisfy the jury that this possession was innocent. Less than a preponderance of evidence on that point may be sufficient to justify a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt: State v. Emerson, 48-172; State v. Kirkpatrick, 72-500.

In such case defendant is only required to introduce sufficient evidence as to having honestly come into possession of the goods to raise a reasonable doubt of guilt: State v. Richart, 57-245; State v. Hopkins, 65-240. And see State v. Peterson, 67-564.

It is erroneous to instruct the jury that defendant may be convicted on proof of recent possession of stolen property unless he has established to their satisfaction that he did not steal it. It is sufficient if he raise a reasonable doubt as to his guilt in so far as that question rests alone upon the fact of his possession: State v. Manley, 74-561.

Possession of the stolen property immediately after a larceny is presumptive proof that the person so in possession is guilty of the larceny: State v. Brady, 27-126; State v. Golden, 49-48.

And such presumption is sufficient to convict unless rebutted: State v. Hessians, 50-135.

The presumption arising from the recent possession of stolen goods may be overcome by testimony establishing facts inconsistent with guilt. Good character may serve in some cases to overcome such presumption: State v. Kelly, 57-644; State v. Richart, 57-245.

The fact that recent possession of stolen property has not been explained in a manner consistent with defendant's innocence will not in itself necessarily establish his guilt: State v. Jordan, 69-506.

For other cases as to presumption of guilt from recent possession of stolen property, see notes to §§ 5208-5210.

Chastity of prosecutrix in seduction: The presumption being in favor of the chastity of the prosecutrix in a prosecution for seduction, defendant relying upon the want of such chastity must prove unchastity by a preponderance of evidence. It is not sufficient merely to produce such evidence as would raise a reasonable doubt of chaste character, but the evidence must be such as to overcome the presumption of chastity by a fair preponderance: State v. Wells, 48-671. And see State v. Higdon, 32-262; Andre v. State, 5-389.

The presumption in favor of the chastity of the prosecutrix is not a presumption against the innocence of the defendant. He is presumed innocent of the fact, but the presumption is also entertained in favor of the rectitude of her character: Andre v. State, 5-389.

In a civil action for seduction the burden is upon defendant to establish unchastity, but no higher evidence or greater proof is required than to establish any other fact: West v. Druff, 55-335.

See, further, as to evidence of chastity, § 5166 and notes; and as to corroboration of the testimony of prosecutrix in rape, seduction, etc., see § 5958 and notes.

Burden of proof as to self-defense: Proof of the homicide will not throw upon the defendant the burden of proving, by preponderance of evidence, excuse or justification arising from self-defense, where such excuse or justification is apparent from the evidence of the prosecution or from the circumstances attending the homicide: Tweedy v. State, 5-433.

Where in a prosecution for homicide defendant undertakes to establish that the act was done in self-defense, it is error to instruct the jury that the burden of proving the self-defense is upon him. He is entitled to acquittal if he shows by the facts attending the commission of the offense, as appearing from his own evidence or that of the prosecution, that there is a reasonable doubt that his act was wilful: State v. Porter, 34-131.

Where there is evidence tending to show that defendant acted in self-defense, the jury should be instructed that the burden of proof is upon the state to prove that the homicide was not committed in self-defense: State v. Fowler, 52-103; State v. Cross, 68-180.

Where defendant, in a prosecution for the crime of homicide, claims that he acted in self-defense, he is entitled to acquittal if he introduces evidence raising reasonable doubt whether the act was justifiable: State v. Dillon, 74-653.

Defendant's good character; for what purpose shown: General good character of accused may be shown to rebut the presumption of guilt arising from circumstantial testimony, but it does not constitute a defense: State v. Turner, 19-144.

Good character is admissible in all criminal cases, and the jury should not be limited in their consideration of such evidence to cases where the crime is sought to be established solely by circumstantial evidence: State v. Kinley, 43-294; State v. Rodman, 62-456.

In passing upon the guilt or innocence of defendant, evidence of good character should be considered irrespective of whether the other evidence is conclusive or inconclusive, and it is for the jury to determine what weight such evidence of character shall have: State v. Gustafson, 50-194.

In trials for felony, and in some instances for misdemeanors, the prisoner is always allowed to call witnesses to his good character, and in any case of doubt proof of good character will have great weight. It is a circumstance always to be submitted to the consideration of the jury, together with the other facts of the case: State v. Nash, 7-347, 373.

It is always permissible for defendant to show his general good character and reputation as to the trait involved in the crime charged; and where defendant was on trial for perjury, held, that he should be allowed to show that his general reputation was good: State v. Kinley, 43-294.

Evidence of good character should be restricted to the general trait which is in issue. Thus, in a prosecution for larceny, the general character for honesty may be shown, but in case of seduction, evidence of character for virtue only is admissible, and not as to good character generally: State v. Curran, 51-112.

Previous good character is, of itself, no defense, but is a circumstance which should be considered by the jury in connection with all the other evidence and which may be sufficient to turn the scale in defendant's favor, but its value as evidence in any given case is to be determined by the jury: State v. Donovan, 61-278.

The jury may be instructed that, if they find good character established by the evidence, they should consider it and allow it such weight as they believe it fairly entitled to, as tending to show that men of such character would not be likely to commit the crime charged. Evidence of good character does not have a tendency to rebut the commission of the crime, except inferentially: State v. Ormiston, 66-143.

Character not in issue: Although defendant may give evidence of his good character, his character is not in issue except as he may put it in issue by offering evidence in support of it, and the court should not instruct the jury that, as defendant had a legal right to introduce testimony in support of his character, the fact that he failed to do so was a circumstance to be considered in determining the question of his guilt: State v. Kabrich, 39-277.

Failure to call a witness as to good character raises no presumption against the prisoner: State v. Dockstader, 42-436.

Evidence of good character on the part of defendant should be confined to the time prior to the finding of the indictment: State v. Kinley, 43-294.

Evidence of good conduct during confinement is not admissible to prove good character: State v. Hart, 29-268.

Where defendant offers a witness to testify as to his good character, the prosecution cannot, upon cross-examination, ask as to particular facts tending to show such character. The evidence must be confined to the general character or reputation: Gordon v. State, 3-410.

A witness as to good character of defendant may testify as to his personal observation and knowledge as to the trait of character of defendant in question, and is not limited to the general reputation of defendant in that respect in the community in which he lives: State v. Sterrett, 68-76.

Where a witness called by defendant to prove his good character testified that it was divided, held, that he might be asked on cross-examination what particular acts of defendant's life he had heard spoken of, and might state various crimes of the same character which defendant had been accused of by report during the five or six years preceding: State v. Arnold, 12-479.

Testimony as to good character should relate to the reputation of the defendant in the neighborhood where he lived at and before the commission of the alleged crime, the term character being used as synonymous with reputation: State v. Ward, 73-532.

As raising reasonable doubt: The good character of accused is for the consideration of the jury in all cases and not merely in cases of doubt, and it is for them to determine its weight; and an instruction that it is a circumstance of slight weight and entitled to but little consideration when the proof is clear is erroneous. If reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt is generated by proof of good character, defendant should be acquitted: State v. Northrup, 48-583; State v. Fitzgerald, 49-260; State v. Clemons, 51-274; State v. Jones, 52-150; State v. Lindley, 51-343.

It is error to instruct that, if there is positive evidence of guilt, then good character avails nothing and should be disregarded: State v. Horning, 49-158; State v. Jones, 52-150.

It is error to instruct the jury that previous good character is not a defense, and, as against facts positively and strongly proven and clearly indicating the guilt of defendant, it cannot avail as a ground of acquittal: State v. Lindley, 51-343.

Where there was no positive or direct evidence as to defendant's having committed the offense, held, that an instruction that good character would not overcome evidence of guilt, but in the absence of such evidence might be considered as tending to show less probability of defendant's having committed the crime, while it was erroneous in the first part could not have been prejudicial: State v. Linde, 54-139.

Evidence of good character should be considered upon the question as to the degree of the offense, as well as upon the question of guilt or innocence: State v. Jones, 52-150.

Circumstantial evidence: To justify the verdict of guilty upon circumstantial evidence it is necessary not only that the circumstances should all concur to show that defendant committed the crime, but that they are inconsistent with any other rational conclusion: State v. Johnson, 19-230.

Whether, when a party is sought to be convicted upon circumstantial evidence alone, the evidence of the circumstances must be direct and not circumstantial, quære: State v. Clemons, 51-274.

In establishing defendant's guilt by circumstantial evidence, the state is not limited to proof of circumstances tending directly to show defendant's guilt. Any competent evidence tending to prove any material fact in the case is therefore admissible: State v. Reno, 67-587.

An instruction at length upon the weight to be given to circumstantial evidence, to the effect that strong evidence of that kind is often the most satisfactory of any from which to draw the conclusion of guilt, and explaining the reason thereof, held not error: State v. Moelchen, 53-310.

Evidence with reference to the presence of defendant near where stolen goods were concealed, and of his attempt to escape arrest, held sufficient to warrant the verdict of guilty of the larceny: State v. Moody, 50-443.

In a prosecution for arson, held, that the particular circumstances shown were insufficient of themselves to establish defendant's guilt: State v. Melick, 65-614.

In a particular case, held, that circumstantial evidence relied upon to show defendant's guilt as accessory to the crime of murder was not sufficient to support a conviction: State v. Clouser, 69-313.

Corpus delicti: While the facts forming the corpus delicti must be clearly and distinctly proved, it is not necessary that the evidence should be direct and positive as distinct from circumstantial or presumptive evidence: State v. Keeler, 23-551.

Identity of defendant: Evidence of non-identity of defendant with the person committing the crime should be weighed like any other evidence offered by defendant for the purpose of showing that he did not commit the crime. It is merely evidence in rebuttal of that of the prosecution, and if it raises a reasonable doubt of guilt defendant should be acquitted although it does not preponderate over that offered by the state: State v. McCracken, 66-569.

The identity of accused with the person named in the record of a marriage may be established by admissions and identity of names, in the absence of evidence that other persons of the same name performed the marriage ceremony recited in the record: State v. Schauhurst, 34-547.

On a trial for murder, where there is evidence that would justify the jury in believing that the crime has been committed by some one, and there are circumstances which point to defendant as the guilty person, evidence of conduct explaining the bad state of feeling on the part of defendant toward the deceased is admissible: State v. Cole, 63-695.

Evidence of a witness as to facts which led him to believe that the prisoner was the person whom he saw present at the commission of a crime, held sufficient to support a verdict of guilty: State v. Lucas, 57-501.

Where the identity of defendant was in question in a prosecution for burglary, held, that evidence as to declarations made by the person committing the burglary, at the time of its commission, indicating that he was the defendant, was admissible as part of the res gestæ, and might be considered by the jury in connection with other circumstances bearing on the question of identity: State v. Kepper, 65-745.

And where it was evident that larceny or burglary was the object in view, held, that the fact that defendant was aware that the occupant of the house had in his possession a large sum of money was admissible as tending to identify defendant as the person who committed the burglary: Ibid.

Certain evidence considered, and held relevant and material as tending to implicate defendant in the crime: State v. Hudson, 50-157.

5814. Reasonable doubt as to degree. 4429. Where there is a reasonable doubt of the degree of the offense of which the defendant is proven to be guilty, he shall only be convicted of the lower degree. [R., § 4808.]

Doubt as to degree: It is error to fail to instruct the jury in accordance with this section even where proper instructions to the effect that they may convict of a lower degree or included crime are given: State v. Jay, 57-164; State v. Neis, 68-469; State v. Walters, 45-389.

To warrant a conviction of grand larceny, the fact that the value of the property exceeded twenty dollars, as well as the fact of the stealing, should be proved beyond a reasonable doubt: State v. Wood, 46-116.

It is error to fail to instruct the jury, in a Failure to produce evidence: It is not incumbent upon the prosecution to produce all the witnesses present at the commission of the act charged as a crime against defendant, but simply that proof of the whole transaction shall be produced before defendant can be put upon his defense: State v. Middleham, 62-150.

A suspicious circumstance, unexplained, whether defendant, in case he is innocent, can or cannot explain it, is only presumptive evidence tending to establish guilt. If the circumstance is one which defendant could explain if innocent, it would be simply stronger evidence against defendant than if it was one which he could not explain, though innocent; but the jury must in every case be the sole judge of its weight. Such presumption should not be deemed sufficient in law to overcome the presumption of innocence: State v. Banks, 43-595.

Failure to call witnesses by defendant to prove his general good character raises no presumption against it: State v. Dockstader, 42-436.

While it is true that the suppression or destruction of evidence is a question to be considered against the party charged with the crime, and the non-production of explanatory evidence clearly in defendant's power must weigh against him, yet this rule has no application where the evidence is equally within the reach of both parties, and is as important for the prosecution as for the defendant: State v. Foster, 55-517.

The doctrine, that the failure of the accused to introduce evidence explanatory of inculpatory circumstances may be regarded as a circumstance against him, is to be cautiously applied and only where it is manifest that proofs are in possession of the accused not accessible to the prosecution: State v. Cousins, 58-250.

An instruction that, if defendant fails to introduce proof explaining facts established by the evidence against him, it is a circumstance to be considered in determining his guilt, and that if evidence within the power of defendant, and not accessible to the state, is withheld by the defendant, the jury may infer that if produced it would be against defendant, is not objectionable as misleading the jury with reference to the effect of a failure of defendant to testify in his own behalf: State v. Rodman, 62-456.

In general as to evidence in criminal cases, see § 5954 and notes.

prosecution for larceny of property of more than twenty dollars in value, that if they are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the value of the property stolen exceeds that amount they must find that it was less than that: State v. McCarty, 73-51.

Evidence of good character should be considered upon the question as to the degree of the offense as well as upon the question of guilt or innocence: State v. Jones, 52-150.

As to conviction for lower degree or included crime, see §§ 5850, 5851.

5815. Higher offense proved. 4430. If it appear by the testimony that the facts proved constitute an offense of a higher nature than that charged in the indictment, the court may direct the jury to be discharged, and all proceedings on the indictment to be suspended, and may order the defendant to be committed or continued on bail to answer any new indictment which may be found against him for the higher offense. [R., § 4791; C., '51, § 3000.]

As to convicting for higher degree than charged in indictment, see §§ 5850, 5851.

5816. New indictment not found. 4431. If the indictment for the higher offense be submitted by the grand jury, or be not found at the next term, the court must proceed to try the defendant on the original indictment. [R., § 4792; C., '51, § 3001.]

[By reference to corresponding section of Revision (§ 4792) it is apparent that "submitted," in this section, should be "dismissed." The Code commissioners' report shows that no change from the Revision was intended.]

5817. Jury view premises. 4432. Whenever, in the opinion of the court, it is proper that the jury should view the place in which the offense is charged to have been committed, or in which any other material fact occurred, it may order the jury to be conducted in a body, in the custody of proper officers, to the place, which shall be shown them by a person appointed by the court for that purpose. The officers must be sworn to suffer no person to speak to or communicate with the jury, on any subject connected with the trial, nor to do so themselves, except the person appointed by the court for that purpose, and that only to show the place to be viewed, and to return them into court without unnecessary delay at a specified time. [R., § 4800; C., '51, § 3009.]

For similar provisions in civil cases, see § 3997.

5818. Juror as a witness. 4433. If a juror have any personal knowledge respecting a fact in controversy in a cause, he must declare the same in open court during the trial; and, if during the retirement of the jury, a juror declare any fact which could be evidence in the cause, as of his own knowledge, the jury must return into court and the juror must be sworn as a witness, and examined in the presence of the parties, if his evidence be admissible. [R., § 4801; C., '51, § 3010.]

SEPARATION OF JURY.

5819. Before final submission. 4434. The jurors sworn to try an indictment, may, at any time before the final submission of the cause to them, in the discretion of the court, be permitted to separate, except where one of the parties object thereto, or be kept together in charge of proper officers. The officers must be sworn to keep the jury together during the adjournment of the court, and to suffer no person to speak to or communicate with them on any subject connected with the trial, nor do so themselves, and to return them into court at the time to which it adjourns. [R., 4802; C., '51, § 3011.]

It will not necessarily constitute error for the court to refuse to direct, on application of defendant, that the jury shall be kept together without separation, if it is not made apparent that the court has therein exceeded its discretion, or exercised it to the prejudice of defendant's rights: State v. Gillick, 10-98.

As to the propriety of not allowing the jury to separate when the defendant objects thereto, see State v. Felter, 25-67.

In the absence of a showing of prejudice, held, that the fact that one of the jurors, while on the way to the jury room, separated himself from the others for the purpose of getting some tobacco, would not vitiate the verdict: State v. Wart, 51-587.

It is not error to permit the jury to separate during the trial under proper directions and admonitions against defendant's objection. The matter is in the discretion of the court: State v. Rainsbarger, 74-196.

It is not necessary that it appear affirmatively that the jury were in charge of a sworn officer. That will be presumed unless the contrary appears: State v. Pitts, 11-343.

See §§ 5827 and 5874.

5820. Admonition. 4435. The jury, whether permitted to separate, or kept together in charge of sworn officers, must be admonished by the court that it is their duty not to permit any person to speak to or communicate with them on any subject connected with the trial, and that any and all attempts to do so should be immediately reported by them to the court, and that they should not converse among themselves on any subject connected with the trial, or form or express an opinion thereon, until the cause is finally submitted to them. This admonition must be given or referred to by the court at each adjournment, during the progress of the trial, previous to the final submission of the cause to the jury. [R., § 4803; C., '51, § 3012.]

It need not appear of record that the jury did its duty in this respect: State v. Shelledy, were properly admonished prior to each adjournment; it will be presumed that the court 8-477.

TRIAL.

5821. Minutes of testimony kept. 4436. The court shall, on the trial of every indictment, when requested by either party, keep, or cause to be kept, by some person for that purpose by it appointed, full and accurate minutes of the testimony of each witness examined on the trial, showing the name of the witness, the place of residence, and his occupation, as well as of any oral evidence introduced, either by the state or defendant, after a plea or verdict of guilty, to be considered by the court in aggravation or alleviation of the punishment in pronouncing sentence against the defendant, which shall be certified to be full and accurate by the judge, and signed by him, and filed with the clerk, and so marked by him, which shall be deemed a part of the record of the cause. The person who acts under such an appointment shall be entitled to such compensation for his services as may be allowed by the court, which shall be paid by the proper county, and shall be taxed as costs. [R., § 4509.]

As to appointment and compensation of stenographer, see §§ 227, 228, 5029.

5822. When several defendants. 4437. Upon an indictment against several defendants, any one or more may be convicted or acquitted. [R., § 4810; C., '51, § 3014.]

5823. Trial of libel. 4438. On the trial of an indictment for a libel, the jury have the right to determine the law and the fact. [R., § 4811; C., '51, § 3015.]

See § 5483 and notes.

5824. Of offenses other than libel. 4439. On the trial of an indictment for any other offense than libel, questions of law are to be decided by the court; saving the right of the defendant and the state to except. Questions of fact are to be tried by jury. And although the jury have the power to find a general verdict which includes questions of law as well as fact, they are bound, nevertheless, to receive as law what is laid down as such by the court. [R., § 4812; C., '51, § 3016.]

INSTRUCTIONS.

5825. Court instruct jury. 4440. The court shall, on motion of either party, instruct the jury on the law applicable to the case, which must always be in writing, signed by the judge and filed with the clerk, and so marked by him, and it is to be deemed a part of the record of the cause, and no oral qualification thereof shall be permitted. [R., § 4813; C., '51, § 3017.]

Duty of court as to instructions: It is the better practice, as a rule, for the judge to put aside the instructions asked by counsel, and cover the whole ground in a methodical charge of his own: State v. Collins, 20-85. The fact that any proposition of the law upon a point involved is not stated will not avail defendant if that which was given was correct. In such a case the proper course would be to ask additional instructions to cover points not stated: State v. Tweedy, 11-350.

The court is not required to take up the several facts and circumstances testified to by the witnesses and instruct the jury as to their weight and effect: State v. Miller, 65-60.

While mere failure to instruct the jury may constitute reversible error if it should be apparent that the failure resulted in depriving defendant of a fair trial, yet where instructions are correct as far as they go, the defendant should, if he desires further instructions, ask them or he will not be heard to complain: State v. Helvin, 65-289.

In a trial for forgery, held, that a failure by the court to give instructions respecting the law applicable to the offense, and to a certain line of defense of which there was sufficient evidence to require it to be considered by the jury, though no instructions were asked by the counsel for defendant, was sufficient to warrant a reversal, the court saying that, although the court below is not bound to give instructions on its own motion where those asked by counsel are sufficient, yet, when they are defective or insufficient, the law complicated, and the offense of a high criminal character, the court should point out the controverted questions of fact and state the law applicable thereto: State v. Brainard, 25-572 (cited in State v. Hamilton, 32-572, 574).

Where the court gave full instructions as to the theory of the case relied on by the prosecution, but failed to give instructions upon an essential part of the case upon the theory upon which defendant relied, held, that judgment should be reversed: State v. O'Hagan, 38-504.

Issues: Matters of dispute arising upon the law or the evidence are not issues which the court must specifically present to the jury: State v. Nadal, 69-478.

Instructions upon questions of fact: An instruction to the effect that, if defendant did a certain act specified, the jury should infer a fraudulent intent, is not vulnerable to the objection that it assumes facts as proved: State v. Thompson, 19-299.

It is within the province of the court to state whether the facts proved, if believed, constitute the offense charged: Pollard v. State, 2-567.

An instruction which especially directed the attention of the jury to certain facts, and thereby excluded from their attention other facts bearing upon the same question, held erroneous: State v. Meshek, 51-308.

An instruction in which the court declared "that there is some evidence tending to show that defendant was drunk," where evidence of intoxication was relied upon as showing want of specific intent, held erroneous, as indicating an opinion of the court as to the weight and quantity of the evidence, unfavorable to defendant: State v. Donovan, 61-369.

Not supported by evidence: Where it appears that there was no evidence tending to show that defendant in any respect aided and abetted the commission of the crime charged, held, that an instruction with reference to his criminality if it should appear that he aided, abetted, etc., was erroneous: State v. Myer, 69-148.

Misleading: An instruction which may be misleading when applied to the particular facts of the case is erroneous: State v. Benham, 23-154.

An instruction in a prosecution for assault which assumed that the assault was made, and called particular attention to the manner of the assault, etc., when there was great doubt from the evidence whether any assault was made, held erroneous, as being misleading: State v. Bailey, 54-414.

Offense of higher degree: The giving of instructions in regard to an offense of a higher degree than that for which defendant is properly on trial will be sufficient error to warrant a reversal, although he be only found guilty of an offense for which he was properly on trial: State v. Tweedy, 11-350.

Reading from indictment: It is error to read from the indictment for the purpose of stating the issues to the jury without setting out in the instructions the part of the indictment thus read: State v. Birmingham, 74-407.

In libel: As to instructions and their effect in prosecutions for libel, see § 5483. and notes.

Objection to evidence cannot be taken by way of instructions to the jury that such evidence should not be considered: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

Additional instructions: Remarks of the court to the jury, after they had been out for a considerable time without being able to agree, as to the impropriety of a juror going into the jury-box with a predetermination as to the result which he will favor, and to hang the jury, or to cause a disagreement if the verdict cannot be rendered as he wants it, held not erroneous: State v. Lawrence, 38-51.

Where the jury, after having retired, sent to the court a communication asking further instructions as to a matter of fact in regard to which they were in doubt, held, that it was not incumbent upon the court to give them any further instructions upon such question: State v. Maxwell, 42-208.

In a particular case, held, that the court was warranted in giving additional instructions after the retirement of the jury: State v. Pitts, 11-343.

Remarks to jury: The court cannot, under the guise of determining some questions which are legitimate, make remarks in the presence and hearing of the jury which would constitute error if contained in an instruction, and thus deprive the defendant of the opportunity of having such error reviewed: State v. Stowell, 60-535.

Signing: The requirement of this section that the judge shall sign the instructions given by him is directory, and a failure to do so will not be ground for reversal when no prejudice resulted therefrom to defendant: State v. Stanley, 48-221.

If the instructions are properly passed upon by the court and embodied in a bill of exceptions, the failure to sign them will not be a ground of reversal: State v. McCombs, 13-426.

The supreme court, on appeal, will not pass upon instructions which have not been made part of the record, either by being signed as here required or embodied in a bill of exceptions: State v. Gebhardt, 13-473; State v. Watrous, 13-489.

In writing: Where it appeared that the charge of the court was given to the jury orally and afterwards reduced to writing, with the acquiescence of defendant, held, that such irregularity could not afterwards be taken advantage of: State v. Sipulk, 17-575.

Special interrogatories: Sections 4015,

5826. Asking instructions. 4441. Any instruction asked by either party to be given by the court must be in writing, and must be either given or refused, and so marked and signed by the judge, and filed with the clerk, and so marked by him, and is to be deemed a part of the record. It may be qualified in writing by the court, but not orally, and the qualification must be distinguished, intelligibly, from the instruction as originally asked by the party, and signed by the judge. [R., § 4814; C., '51, § 3018.]

The supreme court, on appeal, will not pass upon instructions which have not been made part of the record, either by being signed as here required or embodied in a bill of excep-

4016, authorizing the submission to the jury of interrogatories for special findings on particular questions of fact, is not applicable in criminal cases: State v. Fooks, 65-196; State v. Ridley, 48-370.

Directing verdict: See notes to § 5847.

For instructions as to reasonable doubt, burden of proof, alibi, etc., see notes to § 5813.

For instructions as to different degrees and included crimes, see notes to § 5814.

And generally as to instructions, see §§ 3991-3996 and notes.

See, further, notes to preceding section.

DELIBERATION.

5827. In charge of officer. 4442. After hearing the charge, the jury may either decide in court or may retire for deliberation. If they do not agree without retiring, one or more officers must be sworn to keep them together in some private and convenient place without meat or drink, water excepted, and not to suffer any person to speak to or communicate with them, nor speak to or communicate with them themselves unless it be to ask them whether they have agreed upon their verdict, and not to communicate to any one the state of their deliberation or the verdict agreed upon, until after the same shall have been declared in open court, and received by the court, and to return them into court when they shall have so agreed upon their verdict, unless by permission or order of the court, or they be sooner discharged. [R., § 4815; C., '51, § 3019.]

It is not necessary that it appear affirmatively that the jury were in charge of a sworn officer. That will be presumed unless the contrary appears: State v. Pitts, 11-343.

That one of the jurors was permitted to leave the jury room for a necessary and proper purpose, accompanied by the deputy sheriff, it appearing that the juror had no conversation with any one while absent, except with such deputy, and with him only to the extent of asking permission to retire, held not such misconduct as to make a new trial necessary: State v. Bowman, 45-418.

Communication with the jury by a deputy sheriff after their retirement in relation to procuring for them a paper introduced in evidence, held not a ground for reversal in the absence of any showing of prejudice: State v. Wart, 51-587.

Where, after the jury had retired to determine the case, one of the jurors was permitted by the court to leave the jury room and attend the trial of another case in court in which he was a party, held not error where no prejudice to defendant appeared: State v. Ferlig, 70-272.

The fact that during the deliberation of the jury one of their number, being taken sick, is permitted to separate himself from the others and take a walk in the open air, accompanied by an officer, and without communication with any person about the case, will not be ground for disturbing the judgment upon such verdict: State v. Griffin, 71-372.

As to separation of jury during the trial, see § 5819 and notes.

In general as to conduct of jury after submission of cause, see §§ 5837-5844 and notes.

As to what misconduct of the jury is ground for new trial, see notes to § 5874.

DISCHARGE OF JURY, OR OF DEFENDANT.

5828. When juror becomes sick. 4443. If before the conclusion of a trial a juror become sick so as to be unable to perform his duty, the court may order him to be discharged, and in such case a new juror may be sworn and the trial begin anew, or the jury may be discharged and a new jury then or afterwards be impaneled. [R., § 4804; C., '51, § 3013.]

5829. Want of jurisdiction. 4444. The court may also discharge the jury where it appears that it has not jurisdiction of the offense, or that the facts as charged in the indictment do not constitute an offense punishable by law. [R., § 4793; C., '51, § 3002.]

5830. Crime committed in another state. 4445. If the jury be discharged because the court has not jurisdiction of the offense charged in the indictment, and it appear that it was committed out of the jurisdiction of this state, the defendant must be discharged or ordered to be retained in custody a reasonable time, until the district [county] attorney shall have a reasonable opportunity to inform the chief executive of the state in which the offense was committed of the facts, and for said officer to require the delivery of the offender. [R., § 4794; C., '51, § 3003.]

5831. In another county. 4446. If the offense was committed within the exclusive jurisdiction of another county of this state, the court must direct the defendant to be committed for such time as shall be deemed reasonable to await a warrant from the proper county for his arrest; or, if the offense be bailable, he may be admitted to bail in an undertaking with sufficient sureties that he will, within such time as the court may appoint, render himself amenable to a warrant for his arrest from the proper county, and if not sooner arrested thereon, will attend at the office of the sheriff of the county where the trial was had, at a certain time particularly designated in the undertaking, to surrender himself upon the warrant, if issued, or that the bail will forfeit such sum as the court may fix, to be mentioned in the undertaking. [R., § 4795; C., '51, § 3004.]

5832. Papers transmitted. 4447. In the case provided for in the last section, the clerk must transmit, forthwith, a certified copy of the indictment and all the papers in the action filed with him, except the undertaking mentioned in the last section, to the district [county] attorney of the proper county. [R., § 4796; C., '51, § 3005.]

5833. Defendant discharged. 4448. If the defendant be not arrested on a warrant from the proper county he shall be discharged from custody, or his bail in the action shall be exonerated, or money deposited instead of bail shall be refunded, as the case may be, and the sureties in the undertaking must be discharged. [R., § 4797; C., '51, § 3006.]

5834. When arrested. 4449. If he be arrested, the same proceedings must be had thereon as upon the arrest of a defendant in another county on a warrant of arrest issued by a magistrate. [R., § 4798; C., '51, § 3007.]

5835. When facts do not constitute offense. 4450. If the jury be discharged because the facts set forth do not constitute an offense punishable by law, the court must order that the defendant, if in custody, be discharged therefrom, or if admitted to bail, that his bail be exonerated, or if he has deposited money instead of bail, that the money deposited be refunded, unless in its opinion a new indictment can be framed upon which the defendant can be legally convicted, in which case the court may direct that the case be submitted to the same or another grand jury. [R., § 4799; C., '51, § 3008.]

DEFENDANT COMMITTED DURING TRIAL.

5836. Notwithstanding bail given. 4451. When a defendant, having given bail, appears for trial, the court may, in its discretion, at any time after his appearance for trial, order him to be committed to the custody of the proper officer to abide the judgment or further order of the court; and he shall be committed and held in custody accordingly. [R., § 4816; C., '51, § 3020.]

CHAPTER 28.

OF THE CONDUCT OF JURY AFTER THE CAUSE IS SUBMITTED TO IT.

5837. May take papers. 4452. Upon retiring for deliberation, the jury may take with it all papers which have been received as evidence in the case, except depositions and copies of such parts of public records or private documents as ought not, in the opinion of the court, to be taken from the person having them in possession. [R., § 4817; C., '51, § 3021.]

Where a medical book was introduced as evidence, and a portion of it read to the jury, held, that it was not proper for them to take such book to the jury room, the portions which were read not being marked: State v. Gillick, 10-98.

The jury on their retirement to consider their verdict, in an appeal from a conviction in a justice's court, were permitted to take with them the papers in the case, including the information, the transcript from the justice, transcript on change of venue, affidavits, etc., held, that there was no ground for reversal in the absence of a showing that the jury, or any of them, examined the papers, or that any prejudice resulted from their action: State v. Gibson, 29-295.

Where a juror sent for and read to his fellows a law book in support of the correctness of the instructions of the judge, held, that such misconduct was error without prejudice, the instructions having been as a matter of law correct: State v. Carr, 43-418.

As applicable to this section, see notes to § 4004.

5838. Notes of testimony. 4453. The jury may also take with them notes of the testimony or other proceedings on the trial taken by themselves or any of them, but none taken by any other person. [R., § 4818; C., '51, § 3022.]

It is not proper for the officer in charge of the jury, at their request to furnish them the minutes of the testimony: State v. Griffin, 71-372.

5839. Additional instructions. 4454. After the jury have retired for deliberation, if there be any disagreement between them as to any part of the testimony, or if they desire to be informed on any point of law arising in the cause, they must require the officer to conduct them into court, and upon their being brought in, the information required must be given in the presence of, or after oral notice to, the district [county] attorney, and the defendant or his counsel. [R., § 4819; C., '51, § 3023.]

See notes to § 5825.

5840. Juror sick. 4455. If, after the retirement of the jury, one of them be taken sick so as to prevent the continuance of his duty, or any other accident or cause occur to prevent their being kept together for deliberation, the court may discharge them. [R., § 4820; C., '51, § 3024.]

Where, after all the evidence in a case had been introduced, the judge, on receipt of a telegram to the effect that his wife was sick, adjourned court for a few days and went to his home, and, on the day to which court was adjourned, by telegram adjourned court over the term, held, that there was sufficient cause to warrant adjournment in the discretion of the judge, and that the defendant could not, on the subsequent trial, plead a previous jeopardy: State v. Tatman, 59-471.

5841. Discharge by consent or on disagreement. 4456. Except as provided in the last section, the jury cannot be discharged after the cause is submitted to them until they have agreed upon their verdict and rendered it in open court, unless by the consent of both parties entered upon the record, or unless at the expiration of such time as the court may deem proper, it satisfactorily appears that there is no reasonable probability that the jury can agree. [R., § 4821; C., '51, § 3025.]

The fact that, in the exercise of sound discretion, the jury is thus discharged does not entitle the defendant to be released, as having been once in jeopardy: State v. Vaughan, 29-286.

5842. New trial. 4457. In all cases where a jury is discharged or prevented from giving a verdict by reason of any accident or other cause, except where the defendant is discharged from the indictment during the progress of the trial, or after the cause is submitted to them, the cause may be again tried at the same or another term of the court. [R., § 4822; C., '51, § 3026.]

That defendant cannot plead a trial thus terminated as previous jeopardy in bar of another trial, see notes to § 5749.

5843. Court may adjourn. 4458. While the jury is absent the court may adjourn from time to time as to other business, but it shall be nevertheless deemed open for every purpose connected with the cause submitted to the jury until a verdict be rendered or the jury is discharged. [R., § 4823; C., '51, § 3027.]

5844. Final adjournment. 4459. A final adjournment of the court discharges the jury. [R., § 4824; C., '51, § 3028.]

CHAPTER 29.

OF THE VERDICT.

5845. Jurors present. 4460. When the jury has agreed upon its verdict, it must be conducted into court by the officer having it in charge. The names of the jurors must then be called, and if all do not appear the rest must be discharged without giving a verdict. In such case the cause may again be tried at the same or another term. [R., § 4825; C., '51, § 3029.]

The provision as to calling the names of the jurors is directory only, and a failure to observe it will not be error sufficient to reverse the judgment unless prejudice is shown: State v. Burge, 7-255.

If, without consent of parties or the court, the jury seal up their verdict and separate, defendant is deprived of the substantial right given him by § 5855 to poll the jury; and therefore the receiving of such verdict constitutes error: State v. Callahan, 55-364.

Juries in cases of misdemeanors may, by consent of defendant and the state, return a sealed verdict; and it will not be prejudicial error to receive such verdict without all the jurors being present if no demand is made for the presence of all, or for the polling of the jury, or if no objection is made to the absence of the jurors: State v. Thompson, 74-119.

5846. Presence of defendant. 4461. If the indictment be for a felony, the defendant must be present at the rendition of the verdict. If it be for a misdemeanor, the verdict may be rendered in his absence. [R., § 4826; C., '51, § 3030.]

In a prosecution for murder, presence of defendant at the time of verdict is essential: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

The trial at which defendant accused of a felony is required to be present ends with the verdict; his presence at the argument and determination of a motion for new trial is not essential: State v. Decklotts, 19-447.

Where defendant is put on trial for felony, but only convicted of a misdemeanor, his presence when judgment is rendered is not necessary: Hughes v. State, 4-554.

In case of conviction for assault and battery the presence of defendant is not required, even though he has been on trial for a felony: State v. Shepard, 10-126.

As to presence of defendant at arraignment, see § 5713; as to his presence during the trial, see § 5736; and as to his presence at pronouncing of judgment, see § 5832.

5847. Verdict rendered. 4462. When the jury have answered to their names, the court or the clerk shall ask them whether they have agreed upon the verdict, and if the foreman answers in the affirmative, they must, on being required, declare the same. [R., § 4827; C., '51, § 3031.]

No particular form of words is prescribed to be used by the court in requiring the jury to declare their verdict: State v. Collins, 32-86.

When there is no testimony sustaining the charge, or when it is so slight that a verdict of guilty would be instantly set aside, the court may direct a verdict of acquittal, but not when there is a conflict of testimony: State v. Smith, 28-565.

The fact that the court causes the jury to return a verdict of guilty without deliberation or consultation, though grossly irregular, would not render a judgment based thereon void: Turney v. Barr, 75-758.

5848. General or special. 4463. The jury may either render a general verdict, or, where they are in doubt as to the legal effect of the facts proven, they may, except upon an indictment for libel, find a special verdict. [R., § 4828; C., '51, § 3032.]

There is no provision for a submission to the jury of particular questions of fact on the trial of criminal actions: State v. Ridley, 48-370; State v. Fooks, 65-196.

As to special verdict in civil cases, see § 4015.

5849. Form. 4464. A general verdict upon a plea of not guilty is either "guilty" or "not guilty," which imports a conviction or acquittal on every material allegation in the indictment. Upon a plea of a former conviction or acquittal of the same offense it is either "for the state" or "for the defendant." [R., § 4829; C., '51, § 3033.]

What sufficient verdict: If the intention of the jury is not doubtful the verdict will be upheld even without correction in form by the court: Harrell v. Stringfield, Mor., 18.

A verdict in a particular case held sufficient to authorize conviction: State v. Bond, 8-540.

Although it is not necessary for the jury to find more than that the defendant is guilty of the charge in the indictment, yet a verdict finding specially as to the facts constituting such guilt is sufficient to justify the court in rejecting the portion relating to the facts, and rendering judgment on the portion constituting a general verdict: State v. Williams, 8-533.

In a trial upon information, the words "as charged in the indictment," held mere surplusage, and of no effect on the verdict: State v. McCombs, 13-426.

A verdict expressly reciting that the jury find the defendant "guilty of aiding and concealing," etc., thus specifying the crime charged in the indictment, is a general and not a special verdict: State v. Turner, 19-144.

Where defendant was charged with knowingly having in possession and uttering a forged instrument, but in the caption and indorsement of the indictment the crime was designated as forgery, and the court, while properly directing the jury as to the facts necessary to establish the crime with which defendant was properly charged, designated it as forgery, and gave the form of the verdict as though that were the crime charged, and jury, following the form thus given, found defendant "guilty of the crime of forgery as charged in the indictment," held, that the verdict was simply informal, and was not vitiated by the error in designating the offense charged: State v. Burgson, 53-318.

Where there is a general verdict of guilty on an indictment containing several counts, if any one of them is good the judgment will be supported: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 511.

On a conviction for murder in the first degree under which it is for the jury to fix the punishment as death or imprisonment for life at hard labor in the penitentiary, a verdict is sufficiently definite which specifies imprisonment in the penitentiary for life: State v. Trout, 74-545.

Defects cured by verdict: After verdict all objections to the proceedings of the grand jury in finding the indictment come too late: Sharp v. State, 2-454.

The verdict does not cure irregularities in the trial or in the finding of the indictment, such, for instance, as the refusal to allow the defendant the right of challenge to the grand jurors: State v. Osborne, 61-330.

5850. Finding an offense of different degree. 4465. Upon an indictment for an offense consisting of different degrees, the jury may find the defendant not guilty of the degree charged in the indictment, and guilty of any degree inferior thereto, or of an attempt to commit the offense, if punishable by indictment. [R., § 4835; C., '51, § 2918.]

Different degrees: Although the offense consists of different degrees, and defendant is not found guilty of any one of the degrees, he may still be convicted of an offense necessarily included in that for which he is indicted, as provided in the following section: Gordon v. State, 3-410. Thus, held that, though manslaughter is not a degree of murder, but a distinct offense, it is necessarily included in the crime of murder: State v. Clemons, 51-274.

It seems that the last clause of the section, "if punishable by indictment," relates alone to the preceding clause, "an attempt to commit the offense:" State v. Jarvis, 21-44.

Although the inferior degree of the offense be not indictable, but triable on information only, a defendant put on trial for a degree which is indictable may be convicted in such lower degree: Ibid. And see notes to Const., art. 1, § 11.

Where defendant is put on trial for the higher degree of an offense, and is convicted of a lower, and judgment thereon is reversed on appeal, he cannot again be put on trial for a higher degree than that of which he was convicted: State v. Tweedy, 11-350; State v. Clemons, 51-274. And see notes to Const., art. 1, § 12.

Instruction as to different degrees and included crimes: On the trial of an offense of such nature that defendant might properly be convicted of a lesser degree of the offense than that charged, or an offense necessarily included in that charged, the court should instruct the jury that they may find defendant guilty of such lower degree or included offense: State v. Walters, 45-389; State v. Keganau, 62-106.

In such cases the court should explain to the jury the elements of the lower degrees of the crime, and of all crimes of which defendant might be convicted under the indictment, and it will constitute error in the court to fail to do so: State v. Vinsant, 49-241; State v. Clemons, 51-274; State v. Glynden, 51-463.

Even though the counsel for the prisoner has claimed and insisted upon the trial that the prisoner, if guilty at all, is guilty of the degree of offense charged in the indictment, yet the prisoner has the right to the proper instructions as to lower degrees of the offense: State v. Johnson, 8-525.

Under an indictment charging assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury, it is error to fail to instruct the jury that they may convict defendant of assault and battery. In such case it is not sufficient to instruct that they may convict of a simple assault, although a simple assault and an assault and battery are offenses of the same grade: State v. Welsh, 73-106.

Upon the trial of an indictment for rape the court should instruct the jury not only as to assault with intent to commit rape, but also as to simple assault, and it will constitute error to fail to do so: State v. Pennell, 56-29; State v. Peters, 56-263.

Assault and battery is not necessarily included in the crime of assault with intent to commit rape, and it is not necessary to instruct the jury that they might find defendant guilty of assault and battery: State v. McDevitt, 69-549. And see State v. McAvoy, 73-557.

In a particular case, held, that the instructions sufficiently directed the jury as to convicting for assault with intent to commit rape or assault and battery under an indictment for rape: State v. Mitchell, 68-116.

Where, in a prosecution for murder, it is admitted that the defendant by violence caused the death of deceased, and claims that his act was done in self-defense and was not unlawful, it is not error to instruct the jury that they should either convict the defendant of murder or manslaughter, or acquit him. In such cases it is not necessary to instruct the jury as to offenses lower than manslaughter, which may be included in the crime of murder charged in the indictment: State v. Mahan, 68-304.

Where, in a prosecution for murder in the first degree, the evidence is indisputable that the deceased died from the effects of a wound inflicted by the defendant, it is not necessary to instruct the jury as to crimes less in degree than that of criminal homicide: State v. Froelick, 76-213.

Failure to instruct as to lower degrees of the offense will not be error where there is no evidence which would support a conviction of a lower degree: State v. Cole, 63-695.

Error in instructing as to degree of offense: The giving of instructions in regard to an offense of a higher degree than that for which defendant is properly on trial will be sufficient error to warrant a reversal, although he be only found guilty of an offense for which he was properly on trial: State v. Tweedy, 11-350.

Putting on trial for a higher degree than charged: It is prejudicial error to put the defendant upon trial for a higher crime, or a higher degree of the crime, than is charged in the indictment: State v. Boyle, 28-522; State v. Kanouse, 29-118; State v. McNally, 32-580.

Under an indictment for murder in the second degree defendant cannot be convicted of murder in the first degree: Fouls v. State, 4 G. Gr., 500.

Where, under an indictment not sufficient to charge murder in the first degree, the defendant was found guilty in that degree, and defendant on appeal asked that the sentence be modified to one which would be proper under the indictment for the second degree, the court so reduced the sentence: State v. McCormick, 27-402.

But where, in a similar case, defendant denied the sufficiency of the evidence to establish his guilt in any degree, and demanded a new trial, held, that he was entitled thereto: State v. Watkins, 27-415.

Doubt as to degree: That in cases of reasonable doubt as to degree defendant is to be convicted only of lower degree, see § 5814 and notes.

Included crimes: See notes to next section.

5851. Included offenses. 4466. In all other cases the defendant may be found guilty of any offense, the commission of which is necessarily included in that with which he is charged in the indictment. [R., § 4836; C., '51, § 3039.]

Verdict for included offense: Under this section whatever offense is necessarily included in the crime charged in the indictment may be punished, although the indictment contains no words specifically designating the offense so included: Benham v. State, 1-542.

Although the offense consists of different degrees, and defendant is not found guilty of any one of the degrees, he may still be guilty of an offense necessarily included in that for which he is indicted: Gordon v. State, 3-410.

A defendant put on trial for an indictable offense may be punished for an offense necessarily included therein, although the latter be of such a character that it is not indictable, but only triable on information: State v. Jarvis, 21-44; State v. Shepard, 10-126. And see notes to Const., art. 1, § 11.

If defendant is found guilty of a lesser offense included in the one for which he is put on trial, such conviction operates as an acquittal of the offense for which he was indicted, and if, on appeal, judgment is reversed, he can only be tried a second time for the offense of which he was convicted: State v. Tweedy, 11-350; State v. Clemons, 51-274. And see notes to Const., art. 1, § 12.

What deemed included: Where a greater penalty is provided for the second or third conviction of an offense than for the first conviction thereof (as in § 2381), and the defendant is put on trial for such second offense, he may be convicted as for the first commission of the offense: State v. Ensley, 10-149; State v. Gaffney, 66-262.

Where all the elements of one crime are included in another which is distinguished from the first simply in having distinct elements, the fact that the evidence shows the commission of the second crime will not prevent the punishment of defendant in the prosecution for the first: State v. Graff, 66-482.

Defendant can be convicted of an offense distinct from the one specifically charged in the indictment only when the offense is an essential element of that charged, or when it is shown by proper averment in the indictment that a minor offense was in fact included in the perpetration of the one charged: State v. McAvoy, 73-557.

Every battery necessarily includes an assault: State v. Twogood, 7-252.

A simple assault is necessarily included in a charge of an assault with intent to commit bodily injury: Orton v. State, 4 G. Gr., 140.

As every intentional maiming and disfiguring includes an assault and battery, a defendant indicted for the former may be convicted of the latter, although no assault was charged in the indictment: Benham v. State, 1-542.

Under an indictment for an assault with intent to commit murder defendant may be convicted of assault and battery: Dixon v. State, 3-416.

Or of a simple assault: State v. Jarvis, 21-44; State v. Shepard, 10-126; State v. White, 45-325.

Assault with intent to commit manslaughter is necessarily included in a charge of an assault with intent to commit murder: State v. White, 45-325.

Where defendant was convicted of assault with intent to commit murder, but on motion for new trial the court was of the opinion that the evidence was not sufficient to show malice aforethought, held, that the court might properly sentence defendant for an assault with intent to commit manslaughter: State v. Keasling, 74-528.

Upon conviction of assault with intent to commit great bodily injury, obtained under an indictment of assault with intent to commit murder, a sentence for a simple assault may be proper: State v. Schele, 52-608.

While an assault and battery will not in all cases be necessarily included in an assault with intent to murder, yet under an indictment charging the latter offense as committed by acts amounting to assault and battery a conviction of assault and battery would be warranted: State v. Graham, 51-72.

On an indictment for murder defendant may be found guilty of manslaughter: Gordon v. State, 3-410; State v. White, 45-325.

Under an indictment for murder in the first degree defendant may be convicted of assault with intent to commit great bodily injury, as well as of assault with intent to murder, or with intent to maim: State v. Parker, 66-586.

A charge of the crime of rape necessarily charges also the crime of assault with intent to commit rape: State v. McLaughlin, 44-82.

It also includes a simple assault: State v. Vinsant, 49-241.

But the charge of assault with intent to commit rape does not necessarily include the crime of assault and battery: State v. McDewitt, 69-549; State v. McAvoy, 73-557.

Under an indictment for burglary defendant may be convicted of the offense of entering a dwelling-house in the night-time, defined in § 5194: State v. Maxwell, 42-208.

The crime of larceny from a dwelling-house in the night-time and that of robbery necessarily include the offense of larceny. A defendant who is tried on an indictment charging him with the commission of either of such crimes may be convicted of simple larceny; therefore, an acquittal of one of such crimes necessarily bars a subsequent prosecution for the other: State v. Mikesell, 70-176.

Instructions as to included crimes, see notes to preceding section.

Trial for higher crime or degree of crime than properly charged in the indictment is error: See notes to preceding section.

5852. Verdict against one of several. 4467. On an indictment against several, if the jury cannot agree upon a verdict as to all, they may render a verdict as to those in regard to whom they do agree, on which a judgment shall be entered accordingly, and the case as to the rest may be tried by another jury. [R., § 4837; C., '51, § 3040.]

Where two or more are indicted jointly for an offense, one may be found guilty without regard to the others: State v. McClintock, 8-203.

5853. Verdict insufficient. 4468. If the jury render a verdict which is neither a general nor special verdict, the court may direct them to reconsider it, and it shall not be recorded until it be rendered in some form from which it can be clearly understood what is the intent of the jury, whether to render a general verdict or to find the facts specially and leave the judgment to the court. [R., § 4838; C., '51, § 3041.]

Where the verdict in a criminal cause is special in nature, and defective in not giving the facts necessary to enable the court to enter judgment, the jury should be directed to retire for further deliberation, but the court may, against defendant's objection, set aside the verdict and order a retrial, and defendant is not, in such case, entitled to be discharged: State v. Arthur, 21-322.

Where the jury, in a prosecution for burglary, returned a verdict finding defendant guilty of entering a house in the night-time, and recommended him to the mercy of the court, held, that such verdict did not amount to a special verdict authorizing an acquittal, but that, failing to respond to all the facts necessary to a conviction, the jury were properly directed to reconsider it: State v. Maxwell, 42-208.

5854. Informal verdict. 4469. If the jury persist in finding an informal verdict, from which, however, it can be understood that their intention is to find for the defendant upon the issue, it shall be entered in the terms in which it is found, and the court must give judgment of acquittal. But no judgment of conviction can be given unless the jury expressly find against the defendant upon the issue, or judgment be given against him upon a special verdict. [R., § 4839; C., '51, § 3042.]

See notes to § 5849.

5855. Jury polled. 4470. When a verdict is rendered, and before it is recorded, the jury may be polled on the requirement of either party; in which case they shall be severally asked whether it be their verdict, and if any one answer in the negative, the jury must be sent out for further deliberation. [R., § 4840; C., '51, § 3043.]

As to when a sealed verdict may be received without all the jurors being present, see § 5845.

5856. If any juror disagrees. 4471. When the verdict is given, and is such as the court may receive, the clerk may immediately enter it in full upon the record, and must read it to the jury, and inquire of them whether it is their verdict. If any juror disagree, the fact must be entered upon the record, and the jury again sent out. But if no disagreement be expressed, the verdict is complete and the jury must be discharged from the case. [R., § 4841.]

5857. Acquittal on ground of insanity. 4472. If the defense be the insanity of the defendant, the jury must be instructed, if they acquit him on that ground, to state that fact in their verdict. The court may thereupon, if the defendant be in custody, and his discharge is deemed dangerous to the public peace and safety, order him to be committed to the Iowa insane hospital, or retained in custody until he becomes sane. [R., § 4842; C., '51, § 3044.]

5858. Defendant discharged. 4473. If judgment of acquittal be given on a general verdict, and the defendant be not detained for any other legal cause, he must be discharged as soon as the judgment is given. [R., § 4843; C., '51, § 3045.]

SPECIAL VERDICT.

5859. Defined. 4474. A special verdict is that by which the jury finds the facts only, leaving the judgment to the court. It must present the conclusions of fact as established by the evidence and not the evidence to prove them, and these conclusions of fact must be so presented as that nothing remains to the court but to draw conclusions of law upon them. [R., § 4830; C., '51, § 3034.]

See § 5849 and notes; also § 5853. And for similar provisions in civil cases, see § 4014.

5860. In writing. 4475. The special verdict must be reduced to writing by the jury or in their presence, entered upon the minutes of the court, read to the jury and agreed to by them, before they are discharged. [R., § 4831; C., '51, § 3035.]

5861. Form. 4476. The special verdict need not be in any particular form, but shall be sufficient if it present intelligibly the facts found by the jury. [R., § 4832; C., '51, § 3036.]

5862. Judgment upon. 4477. The court must give judgment upon the special verdict as follows:

1. If the plea be not guilty and the facts prove the defendant guilty of the offense charged in the indictment, or of any other offense of which he could be convicted in law under that indictment, judgment shall be given accordingly. But if the facts found do not prove the defendant guilty of the offense charged, or of any offense of which he could be so convicted under the indictment, judgment of acquittal must be rendered;

2. If the plea be of a former conviction or acquittal of the same offense, the court must give judgment of conviction or acquittal according as the facts prove or fail to prove the former conviction or acquittal. [R., § 4833; C., '51, § 3037.]

As to pleading former conviction or acquittal, see § 5744 and notes.

5863. Verdict insufficient. 4478. If the jury do not, in a special verdict, pronounce affirmatively or negatively on the facts necessary to enable the court to give judgment, or if they find the evidence of facts merely, and not the conclusions of fact from the evidence as established to their satisfaction, the court may order them to retire for further deliberation. [R., § 4834; C., '51, § 3038.]

CHAPTER 30.

OF BILLS OF EXCEPTION.

5864. As to what. 4479. On the trial of an indictment, exceptions may be taken by the state, or by the defendant, to any decision of the court upon matters of law, in any of the following cases:

1. In disallowing a challenge to an individual juror;
2. In admitting or rejecting witnesses or evidence on the trial of any challenge;
3. In admitting or rejecting witnesses or evidence, or in deciding any matter of law, not purely discretionary, on the trial of the issue. [R., § 4844; C., '51, § 3046.]

A general exception to the admission of testimony en masse, where such testimony includes much testimony that is unobjectionable, without having asked any ruling of the court as to its admissibility, will not entitle the defendant to have the question of admissibility of portions of such evidence considered on appeal: State v Benge, 61-658.

As to exceptions in civil cases, see §§ 4038-4043.

5865. Other matters. 4480. Nothing herein contained is to be construed so as to deprive either party of the right of excepting to any action or decision of the court which affects any other material or substantial right of either party, whether before or after the trial of the indictment, or on such trial. [R., § 4845.]

5866. Object. 4481. The office of a bill of exceptions is to make a part of the proceedings or evidence appear of record which would not otherwise so appear. [R., § 4846.]

Applied: State v. Fay, 43-651.

5867. Papers deemed part of record. 4482. All papers pertaining to the cause and filed with the clerk, and all entries made by the clerk in the record book pertaining to them, and showing the action or decision of the court upon them, or any part of them, are to be deemed parts of the record, and it is not necessary to except to any action or decision of the court so appearing of record. [R., § 4847.]

5868. How taken. 4483. Either party may allege an exception to any decision or action of the court, on any application of either party, which may be and is made orally to the court, in any stage of the proceedings upon which the decision or action of the court is not required to be, and is not, entered in the record book, and reduce the same to writing, and tender the same to the judge, whose duty it is to sign it; and if he sign the same, it shall be filed with the clerk and thereupon become a part of the record of the cause; but if the judge refuse to sign it, such refusal must be stated at the end thereof; and it may then be signed by two or more attorneys or officers of the court, or disinterested by-standers, and sworn to by the persons so signing the same, and filed with the clerk, and it shall thereupon become a part of the record of the cause. [R., § 4848; C., '51, § 3047.]

A certificate of the judge showing rulings made during the trial and exceptions thereto is a sufficient compliance with the statute to constitute a bill of exceptions: State v. Fay, 43-651.

While a certificate of the judge, sufficiently setting out or identifying the testimony, may take the place of a bill of exceptions for the purpose of making the evidence a part of the record, such certificate, equally with a bill of exceptions, must be made at the time of the trial or at such time as the court may fix; otherwise the evidence may be stricken out on appeal: State v. Newcomb, 56-335.

5869. Time allowed to examine. 4484. The judge shall be allowed one clear day to examine the bill of exceptions, and the party excepting shall be allowed three clear days thereafter to procure the signatures and file the same. [R., § 4849.]

[The word "clear," in the second and also in the third line, as in the original rolls, is omitted in the printed Code. In § 5806, "four days" is substituted in the printed Code for "three clear days" in the original, and the former expression is retained in this work as probably synonymous; but here the omission in the printed Code of the word "clear," without change in the number of days, is certainly a material alteration. See similar change in § 5881.]

5870. May be modified. 4485. If the judge and the party excepting can agree in modifying the bill of exceptions, it shall be modified accordingly. [R., § 4850.]

5871. Time allowed to prepare. 4486. Time must be given to prepare the bill of exceptions when it is necessary. When it can reasonably be done, it shall be settled at the time of taking the exception. [R., § 4851.]

CHAPTER 31.

OF NEW TRIAL.

5872. Definition. 4487. A new trial is a re-examination of the issue in the same court before another jury, after a verdict has been given. [R., § 4852; C., '51, § 3050.]

5873. Effect. 4488. The granting of a new trial places the parties in the same position as if no trial had been had. All the testimony must be produced anew and the former verdict cannot be used or referred to either in the evidence or in argument. [R., § 4853; C., '51, § 3051.]

It is improper for an attorney for the prosecution to make any reference to the verdicts in former trials which have been set aside and new trials granted: State v. Clouser, 72-302.

Where on appeal in a prosecution on information for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors defendant was convicted upon evidence as to one transaction, but a new trial being granted was convicted under evidence relating to a different transaction, but constituting the offense charged in the information, held, that there was no error, and the second trial, after the former conviction has been set aside, was entirely independent of the first trial: State v. Dow, 74-141.

Defendant cannot be again put on trial for a higher degree of the offense than that for which he was convicted: See notes to § 5850.

5874. Causes for. 4489. The court may grant a new trial for the following causes, or any of them:

1. When the trial has been had in the absence of the defendant, if the indictment be for a felony;
2. When the jury has received any evidence, paper, or document out of court not authorized by the court;
3. When the jury have separated without leave of the court, after retiring to deliberate upon their verdict, or have been guilty of any misconduct tending to prevent a fair and due consideration of the case;
4. When the verdict has been decided by lot, or by means other than a fair expression of opinion on the part of all the jurors;
5. When the court has misdirected the jury in a material matter of law;
6. When the verdict is contrary to law or evidence. But no more than two new trials shall be granted for this cause alone;
7. When the court has refused properly to instruct the jury;
8. When from any other cause the defendant has not received a fair and impartial trial. [R., § 4854; C., '51, § 3052.]

As to absence of defendant, see §§ 5713, 5736, 5846 and 5882.

As to receiving papers, etc., out of court, see notes to §§ 5837, 5839.

Misconduct of jury: To vitiate the verdict of a jury for misconduct it must be such as to satisfy the court that a fair and impartial trial has not been had, and that the verdict is contrary to the law and the evidence: State v. Accola, 11-246.

That a juror left the jury room and was temporarily absent for a proper purpose, in charge of a deputy sheriff, held not sufficient ground for granting a new trial: State v. Bowman, 45-418.

For other cases as to separation of jury, etc., see notes to §§ 5819, 5827.

Where it is sought to set aside the verdict of a jury on the ground of statements of one of the jurors as to facts not in evidence, or the like, it is necessary to show that prejudice resulted to the party complaining. Prejudice will not be presumed: State v. Woodson, 41-425.

The drinking of spirituous liquors during the time when a jury is out for the purpose of deliberating upon their verdict is sufficient misconduct to reverse a judgment on such verdict on appeal: State v. Baldy, 17-39.

Where one of the jurors was ill before submission of the cause to the jury, and took for medicinal purposes, without medical prescription, some brandy, etc., held not ground for new trial: State v. Morphy, 33-270.

Indulgence in intoxicating liquors during adjournment of the court, and before the final submission of the cause to the jury, is not ground for a new trial in the absence of a showing of prejudice resulting therefrom: State v. Bruce, 48-530.

The fact that a juror was intoxicated during an adjournment of the court, before submission of the case, held not ground for new trial, it not appearing that the juror was intoxicated while in the performance of his duties: State v. Livingston, 64-560.

Where misconduct of one of the jurors in drinking intoxicating liquor during the trial was made a ground for new trial, and the fact relied upon was shown only by defendant's affidavit, which did not state the juror's name nor the time and place, held, that the showing was insufficient, and that defendant's affidavit should be admitted, if at all, only in cases where no other proof is practicable, and failure of justice might result from its rejection: State v. McLaughlin, 44-82.

An affidavit of the defendant as to misconduct of the jury, based upon information and belief, is not sufficient: State v. Tucker, 68-50.

In general, as to misconduct of jury, see notes to § 4044.

Fair verdict of all the jurors: A juror who has consented to the verdict cannot afterwards be permitted to say that it was not his honest judgment on the facts of the case: State v. Griffin, 71-372.

It cannot be shown by affidavits of jurors that they did not voluntarily assent to the verdict: State v. Douglas, 7-413.

As to the same question in civil cases, see notes to § 4044.

Erroneous instructions to the jury, or refusing to instruct, see § 5825 and notes.

Verdict against the evidence: Where a conviction is clearly contrary to the weight of evidence the supreme court should set it aside on appeal: State v. Woolsey, 30-251.

The supreme court will, on appeal, interfere more readily with a verdict because contrary to the weight of evidence in a criminal than in a civil case: State v. Tomlinson, 11-401.

But where every material allegation of the indictment is supported by the evidence, the supreme court must be satisfied of the insufficiency of the evidence to warrant the overruling of the action of the lower court in refusing a new trial on that ground: State v. Elliott, 15-72.

The supreme court will but cautiously interfere with verdicts when it is claimed that they are against the evidence: State v. Collins, 20-85.

Where it does not appear from the evidence of record in a criminal case that the verdict was against the preponderance of evidence, a new trial will not be granted on appeal: State v. Stoker, 22-52.

Where the bill of exceptions does not profess to disclose the whole of the evidence, the supreme court will presume there was sufficient to warrant the verdict of the jury. It will not reverse on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of evidence, unless it is clearly and manifestly so: State v. Lyon, 10-340.

In a particular case, held, that the lower court should have sustained a motion for a new trial on the ground of insufficiency of evidence: State v. Hilton, 22-241.

Where the jury has rendered a verdict which the court has refused to set aside, the supreme court will not interfere if the correctness of the verdict depends upon the credit to be given the testimony of witnesses and there is nothing in such testimony rendering its truthfulness improbable: State v. Quinn, 47-368.

Fair and impartial trial: In a particular case a new trial was granted on appeal on the ground that it appeared that under the circumstances of the case the prisoner had not had a full, fair and impartial trial, although no error of law was sufficiently shown: Trulock v. State, 1-515.

Surprise: The fact that defendant is taken by surprise by the testimony of a witness may be ground for a new trial: Ibid.

Defendant is not entitled to a new trial on the ground of surmise in that his counsel did not have sufficient time to consult with regard to the defense, where no motion for continuance was made on that ground: State v. Benton, 65-482.

Misconduct of defendant's attorney: It will be a ground for a new trial that an attorney who acted for defendant in a preliminary examination in a case relating to the same transaction was allowed by the court, against defendant's objections, to assist the prosecution: State v. Halstead, 73-376.

Incompetence of defendant's attorney may, especially in cases involving the life of defendant, constitute a ground for a new trial, but to justify a reversal upon such ground there should be a strong showing both of incompetence and prejudice: State v. Benge, 61-658.

Misconduct of prosecuting attorney: Under § 4886, any reference by the district attorney to the fact that defendant has not become a witness in his own behalf is misconduct sufficient to entitle defendant to a new trial: State v. Graham, 62-108.

But where the evidence as to whether the district attorney made such reference in his argument or not is conflicting, the supreme court will abide by the action of the lower court in reference thereto: State v. Maynes, 61-119.

In a particular case, held, that the fact of an improper reference by the district attorney to the failure of defendant to become a witness was not sufficiently shown to require a reversal: State v. Black, 59-390.

Where defendant makes himself a witness and testifies as to a part only of his defense, it is not improper for the district attorney to refer to defendant's omission to testify as to other material facts within his knowledge: State v. Tatman, 59-471.

In a particular case, held, that misconduct of the district attorney in his opening statement to the jury was such as to require the granting of a new trial: State v. Williams, 63-135.

It is clearly implied in § 4886 that the attention of either the court or the jury shall not be called to the fact that defendant has failed to testify in his own behalf; and where, in arguing to the court, in the presence of the jury, a question as to an objection to the evidence, that fact was referred to, held, that there was ground for a new trial: State v. Ryan, 70-154.

Misconduct of the district attorney in asking improper questions which were promptly excluded on objection, held not sufficient in a particular case to require a new trial: State v. Noble, 66-541.

Disqualification of juror (for instance, not being an elector) is not waived by failure to object to him for cause, and may be a ground for new trial; but if defendant knew at the time that the jury were sworn that any of them were not qualified to act as jurors, he would, by failure to object, waive his right to object afterward. It must appear, however, that defendant had knowledge of the fact of disqualification before it can be inferred that he waived his objection: State v. Groome, 10-308.

But an objection to a juror on account of bias or prejudice is waived by failure to object at the proper time: Ibid.

If the juror is examined at the proper time as to whether he has formed or expressed an unqualified opinion as to defendant's guilt or innocence, and it should afterwards appear that, on such examination, he had sworn falsely as to not having formed or expressed such opinion, that fact might be a ground for a new trial. But defendant, to take advantage thereof, must show by the record that the juror was examined on oath as to the fact: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 508.

Remarks by the court, in passing upon challenges to jurors, while uncalled for, held not prejudicial to defendant and therefore not a ground for a new trial: State v. George, 62-682.

Affidavits of jurors: In a criminal case the court should receive the testimony of jurors as to any palpable misapprehension of the instructions of the court as a ground for a new trial: Packard v. United States, 1 G. Gr., 225.

The affidavits of jurors which may be received on a motion for a new trial must be voluntary. The court cannot, by rule upon the jury, compel them to answer under oath as to the manner of making up their verdict: Forshee v. Abrams, 2-571; Grady v. State, 4-461.

Affidavits of jurors cannot be received to show that they erroneously rejected evidence which was properly before them: State v. McConkey, 49-499.

Nor to show that it was agreed that if the court made no response to a request for instructions as to certain points, a verdict of guilty was to be rendered, and that this agreement was carried out: Ibid.

See, further, as to affidavits of jurors, § 4045 and notes.

Affidavits as to statements of jurors: Affidavits of the attorney of the unsuccessful party as to statements made to him by jurors, showing misconduct of the jury, held not admissible to impeach the verdict: State v. Quinton, 59-362.

An affidavit showing that a juror has made statements to the effect that the jury did not consider the instructions of the court, and that members of the jury refused to make affidavits as to that fact, cannot be considered: Grady v. State, 4-461.

Illness of defendant: Under particular facts, held, that a new trial could not be granted on the ground of defendant's claim that when giving his testimony as a witness he was suffering from nervous headache which affected his mind and memory, it appearing to the court that the facts on which the claim was based were not sufficiently shown: State v. Montgomery, 71-630.

5875. Application; when made. 4490. The application for a new trial can be made only by the defendant, and must be made before judgment. [R., § 4855; C., '51, § 3053.]

A motion for a new trial must be made before judgment: State v. Bibby, 39-465.

Presence of defendant, even in case of prosecution for a felony, is not required at the Newly-discovered evidence: The statute does not authorize a new trial in a criminal action on the ground that testimony material to the defense has been discovered since the trial, which could not with reasonable efforts have been discovered previous thereto: State v. Bowman, 45-418.

Newly-discovered evidence in a particular case, held sufficient to entitle defendant to a new trial, the right to a new trial on that ground not being discussed: State v. Foster, 37-404.

In other cases, without discussion of the right of defendant to new trial on that ground, the showing was held insufficient: State v. Wells, 48-671; State v. Johnson, 72-393.

Failure to obtain evidence: A new trial will not be granted on account of the inability of defendant to procure certain evidence which was simply cumulative and would clearly not have warranted a different verdict: State v. Nadal, 69-478.

argument and determination of a motion for a new trial under § 5736: State v. Decklotts, 19-447.

CHAPTER 32.

OF ARREST OF JUDGMENT.

5876. Grounds of. 4491. A motion in arrest of judgment, is an application to the court in which the trial was had, on the part of the defendant, that no judgment be rendered upon a verdict against him, or on a plea of guilty, and shall be granted:

1. Upon any ground which would have been ground of demurrer;
 2. When upon the whole record no legal judgment can be pronounced.
- [R., § 4856; C., '51, § 3054.]

Objections to the impaneling of the grand jury cannot be raised for the first time by motion in arrest of judgment: State v. Reid, 20-413.

But the correctness of the ruling upon a challenge to a grand juror may be questioned by this motion: State v. Haynes, 54-109.

The objection that it does not appear from the indictment that it was found within the statutory period of limitation after the commission of the offense is not a ground for arrest of judgment: State v. Deitrick, 51-467.

Where defendant demurred to the indictment, and upon the overruling of the de-murrer he neglected to plead, but was tried as if a plea of not guilty had been entered, held, that defendant was not prejudiced by the irregularity, and a motion in arrest of judgment was properly overruled: State v. Greene, 66-11.

Where a motion in arrest of judgment is sustained, the proceeding cannot be pleaded in a subsequent prosecution as constituting a previous conviction or acquittal: State v. Clark, 69-196.

As to grounds of demurrer to indictment, see § 5737 and notes.

5877. On motion of court. 4492. The court may also, upon its own observation of any of these grounds, arrest the judgment on its own motion. [R., § 4857; C., '51, § 3055.]

5878. Defendant held to answer. 4493. If the court is of opinion from the evidence on the trial that the defendant is guilty of a public offense, of which no legal conviction can be had on the indictment, he may be held to answer the offense in like manner as upon a preliminary examination. [R., § 4858; C., '51, § 3057.]

That the first trial will not be a bar to another trial, see notes to § 5749.

5879. When motion made. 4494. The motion may be made at any time before judgment, or after judgment, during the same term. [R., § 4859.]

CHAPTER 33.

OF JUDGMENT.

5880. Of acquittal. 4495. Upon a verdict of not guilty for the defendant, or special verdict upon which a judgment of acquittal must be given, the court must render judgment of acquittal immediately. [R., § 4860.]

5881. Of conviction; time for. 4496. Upon a plea of guilty, upon a verdict of guilty, or a special verdict, upon which a judgment of conviction must be rendered, the court must fix a time for pronouncing judgment. The time appointed for pronouncing judgment must be at least three clear days after the verdict is rendered, if the court remain in session so long, or if not, as remote a time as can reasonably be allowed, but in no case can the judgment be pronounced in less than six hours after the verdict is rendered. [R., §§ 4861-2; C., '51, § 3058.]

[The word "clear," in the fourth line, as in the original, is omitted in the printed Code. See note to § 5869 as to similar omissions.]

Where the record showed that the court was in session more than three days after the verdict, held, that the statute is imperative, and unless the record clearly rebutted the presumption of prejudice it could not be disregarded; and in such case the judgment was reversed and the cause remanded for judgment upon the verdict, with leave for defendant to show any cause against the same which had not been already passed upon: State v. Watrous, 13-489.

Where the defendant appears to have been sentenced before the expiration of the three days here provided, it will be presumed, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, that the court deferred its judgment to as remote a period as it reasonably could: State v. Wood, 17-18; State v. Marvin, 12-499.

Where the record did not show whether six hours intervened between the plea of guilty and the final adjournment of the term, and it appeared that a continuance was made without objection, the presumption would be that the court adjourned within less than six hours, and the case was continued for judgment by consent, and that there was no error in failing to pronounce judgment at the term in which the plea of guilty was entered: State v. Stevens, 47-276.

Where the last day of the term was fixed for pronouncing judgment, but upon that day the cause was continued for judgment until next term, when judgment was pronounced, held, that in the absence of a showing to the contrary, and of any objection at the time, it would be presumed that the continuance was for good cause or at the request of defendant: State v. Miller, 53-84.

It is not error to render judgment for the payment of a fine at the next term after conviction: State v. Ray, 50-520.

5882. Presence of defendant. 4497. For the purpose of judgment, if the conviction be for a felony, the defendant must be personally present; if it be for misdemeanor, judgment may be pronounced in his absence. [R., § 4863.]

Where the offense charged is a misdemeanor, judgment may be rendered in the absence of the defendant: Hughes v. State, 4-534.

As to presence of defendant at rendition of verdict, see § 5846 and notes.

5883. Forfeiture of bail. 4498. If the defendant has been discharged on bail, or has deposited money instead thereof, and does not appear for judgment when his personal appearance is necessary, the court, in addition to the forfeiture of his undertaking of bail, or money deposited, may make an order directing the clerk to issue a bench warrant for his arrest. [R., § 4865; C., '51, § 3061.]

5884. Bench warrant. 4499. The clerk, on the application of the district [county] attorney, may, accordingly, at any time after the order, whether the court be in session or not, issue a bench warrant into one or more counties for his arrest. [R., § 4866; C., '51, 3062.]

5885. Form. 4500. The bench warrant may be substantially in the following form:

COUNTY OF _____.

THE STATE OF IOWA,

To any Peace Officer in the State:

A. B. having been duly convicted on the _____ day of _____, A. D. '8—, in the district court of _____ county, of the crime of (here designate it generally, as in the indictment).

You are, therefore, hereby commanded to arrest the said A. B. and bring him before said court for judgment, if it be then in session, or if it be not then in session, you deliver him into the custody of the sheriff of said county.

Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at my office in _____, in [SEAL] said county, this _____ day of _____, A. D. 18—.

By order of the court.

[R., § 4867.]

_____, Clerk.

5886. Service. 4501. The bench warrant may be served in any county in the state. [R., § 4868; C., '51, § 3063.]

5887. Defendant arrested. 4502. Whether the bench warrant be served in the county where it was issued, or in another county, the officer must arrest the defendant and bring him before the court, or commit him to the officer mentioned in the warrant according to the command thereof. [R., § 4869; C., '51, § 3064.]

5888. Show cause. 4503. When the defendant appears for judgment, he shall be informed by the court, or by the clerk under its direction, of the nature of the indictment and of his plea, and the verdict, if any thereon, and must be asked whether he have any legal cause to show why judgment should not be pronounced against him. [R., § 4870; C., '51, § 3065.]

This section is declarative of the common law. The action of the court as here directed is not required to be made matter of record, although it may properly be done, but no presumption of its omission will arise from the fact that it does not appear of record: State v. Wood, 17-18; State v. Stiefe, 13-603.

Unless it otherwise appears it will be presumed that such steps were properly taken: State v. Wells, 46-662.

The fact that it does not appear that defendant had an opportunity to present matter in mitigation of sentence, on a plea of guilty, is no ground for a new trial, it not appearing that he was in any way deprived of such opportunity: State v. Reininghaus, 43-149.

It appearing that defendant had all the opportunity to prepare an application for a new trial or motion in arrest of judgment and showing in mitigation of punishment which could have been necessary, held, that the failure to fix any definite time for judgment after a continuance upon a plea of guilty was error without prejudice: State v. Stevens, 47-276.

It is not error for the judge to remark, in connection with the statement to the defendant of the charge against him, his plea thereto, the verdict of the jury, etc., upon the circumstances of the offense, and to state the reasons impelling him to pronounce against defendant a particular penalty imposed upon him. There is certainly no impropriety in the practice in this respect recognized in many of the courts of this state: State v. Hale, 65-575.

5889. What may be shown. 4504. He may show for cause against the judgment, that he is insane, or any sufficient ground for a new trial, or in arrest of judgment. [R., § 4871.]

5890. Insanity. 4505. If the court is of opinion that there is reasonable ground for believing him insane, the question of his insanity shall be determined as provided in this code, and if he is found to be insane, such proceedings shall be had as are herein directed. [R., § 4872.]

5891. New trial; motion in arrest. 4506. If he move for a new trial, or in arrest of judgment, the court shall defer the judgment, and proceed to hear and decide the motions. [R., § 4873.]

5892. Rendition of judgment. 4507. If no sufficient cause be alleged or appear to the court why judgment should not be pronounced, it shall thereupon be rendered. [R., § 4874; C., '51, § 3066.]

Judgment on plea in bar: Where defendant interposes only the plea of former conviction or acquittal, without pleading not guilty, as he might do in connection therewith, and upon verdict being found against him he does not ask leave to plead over, judgment may properly be rendered against him without further trial as to his guilt: State v. Green, 16-239.

Sentence for included crime: Where defendant, under indictment for assault with intent to murder, was found guilty of assault with intent to commit great bodily injury, and the court, doubting its authority to sentence for the latter offense under the indictment, sentenced for a simple assault, held, that there was no error prejudicial to defendant: State v. Schele, 52-608.

Sentence to hard labor: Where the jury found defendant guilty of murder in the first degree and directed that he should be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary at hard labor for life, and in rendering judgment the court sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary for life, held, that the judgment must be presumed to mean imprisonment at hard labor, and sufficiently corresponded with the verdict: State v. Cole, 63-695.

5893. Judgment for two or more offenses. 4508. If the defendant is convicted of two or more offenses, before judgment on either, the punishment of each of which is, or may be, imprisonment, the judgment may be so rendered that the imprisonment upon any one shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment upon any other of the offenses. [R., § 4880; C., '51, § 3070.]

Where two judgments of imprisonment against a defendant were rendered on the same day, but no provision was made as to the commencement of either term as here contemplated, held, that the prisoner should be held in confinement until both were served out, and that the term of imprisonment on the judgment last rendered would commence on the expiration of that under the first. Two terms of imprisonment cannot be concurrent: Mier v. McMillan, 51-240.

5894. Imprisonment for fine. 4509. A judgment that the defendant pay a fine may also direct that he be imprisoned until the fine be satisfied, specifying the extent of the imprisonment, which shall not exceed one day for every three and one-third dollars of the fine. [R., § 4881; C., '51, § 3071.]

Imprisonment for non-payment of fine: This section is applicable whether the statute under which the fine is imposed provides that punishment be by fine only or by both fine and imprisonment. The judgment should specify the extent of the imprisonment, but a failure to do so will not render the judgment void. It may be corrected on appeal: State v. Myers, 44-580, 584.

There cannot be imprisonment for non-payment of a fine unless the judgment so orders: Lanpher v. Dewell, 56-153.

The provisions of this section and of § 6087 are directory only. The extent of imprisonment for non-payment of a fine being thus fixed, a judgment that defendant be imprisoned until the fine is paid will not be void: Jackson v. Boyd, 53-536.

But when imprisonment is imposed under any statute the court should fix the extent of the imprisonment. To this extent the provision is mandatory: Ex parte Tuicher, 69-393.

This section is applicable to a fine imposed under § 2381 or § 2383, providing punishment for violation of the prohibitory liquor law, although it is therein provided defendant shall stand committed until the fine and costs assessed against him are paid: Ibid.

Although a judgment for failure to pay the five hundred dollars fine authorized under the prohibitory liquor law for violation of an injunction should limit the imprisonment to one hundred and fifty days, nevertheless a failure to make such order will not render a reversal of the judgment of fine and imprisonment necessary, but the judgment can be corrected on appeal: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

The duration of the imprisonment, under this section, cannot be determined or limited by a partial payment of the fine: Galles v. Wilcox, 63-664.

The fact of imprisonment for non-payment of a fine to the limit of the law, as above specified, does not operate as a satisfaction of the judgment (see §§ 6009, 6136, 6141): State v. Jordan, 39-387; State v. Anwerda, 40-151; Albertson v. Kriechbaum, 65-11.

But a prisoner who, having been confined for the non-payment of a fine, is liberated under the provisions as to poor convicts, contained in § 6009, is entitled to have the judgment against him satisfied: State v. Van Vleet, 23-168; State v. Peck, 37-342; State v. Jordan, 39-387; In re Jordan, 39-334.

The power to imprison for non-payment of a fine exists by virtue of this section, as incident to the power to impose a fine, and is not conferred by § 6009, providing for release of poor convicts. And if the statute authorizing the fine provides that a prisoner shall not be released under § 6009, such provision is controlling: Heaks v. Workman, 69-600.

Under the provisions of §§ 6136, 6141, that defendant may be sentenced to hard labor for non-payment of a fine, he is to be credited with one dollar and fifty cents per day upon the judgment against him, but the duration of his imprisonment cannot exceed that here specified: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47-597. And see State v. Jordan, 39-387; In re Jordan, 39-394; State v. Anwerda, 40-151.

Costs: The provisions of this section apply only to the fine and not to the costs: State v. Erwin, 44-637.

But it may be provided by statute that defendant be imprisoned for non-payment of costs as well as fine: Albertson v. Kriechbaum, 65-11.

Where imprisonment for non-payment of fine or fine and costs is authorized, such imprisonment is not a portion of the punishment for the crime, but only a method of enforcing payment of the fine or fine and costs: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that a statute making a crime punishable by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, and providing for imprisonment until payment of fine and costs, did not take the crime out of the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace: Ibid.

For violation of a city ordinance a defendant may be imprisoned until fine and costs are paid, not to exceed thirty days (§ 663): State v. Wells, 46-662.

Payment of a fine imposed, and discharge of defendant from imprisonment for its non-payment, does not satisfy the costs, and execution may issue therefor: State v. Gray, 35-503; Gray v. Ferreby, 36-146.

In a particular case, held, that a judgment was in effect a judgment for imprisonment until the fine be satisfied, and not for fine and costs, which would have been illegal: State v. Boynton, 75-753.

For similar provision, see § 6087.

5895. Committed to jail of another county. 4510. When a person is, in any event, to be committed to jail, if there be no jail or no sufficient one in the county where the party would be committed under the ordinary provisions of law, the court or magistrate committing may order him to be committed to the jail of some other county, which shall be the one which is most convenient and safe, and the county to which the cause originally belonged shall be holden for all the expenses thereof. [R., § 4884; C., '51, § 3073.]

5896. Allowance of bail for appeal. 4511. In all cases, except murder in the first degree, the court rendering judgment must make an order fixing the amount in which bail must be taken, and there shall be no execution of the judgment until such order be made. [R., § 4885.]

Failure of the court to make the order as to bail here contemplated will not entitle defendant to a discharge upon habeas corpus, but his only relief will be in such a proceeding to have the amount of bail properly fixed: Murphy v. McMillan, 59-515.

See §§ 5985, 5986, as to bail upon appeal.

CHAPTER 34.

OF EXECUTION.

5897. Copy of judgment. 4512. When a judgment of imprisonment, either in the penitentiary or county jail is pronounced, a certified copy of the entry thereof in the record book, must be forthwith furnished to the officer whose duty it is to execute the same, who shall proceed and execute it accordingly, and no other warrant or authority is necessary to justify or require its execution. [R., § 4886; C., '51, § 3074.]

5898. Commitment of defendant. 4513. If the judgment be imprisonment, or a fine and imprisonment until it be satisfied, the defendant must forthwith be committed to the custody of the proper officer, and by him detained until the judgment be complied with, or the defendant discharged by due course of law. [R., § 4897; C., '51, § 3075.]

The fact that the warrant of commitment to imprisonment is void will not entitle the prisoner to release on habeas corpus if the court or judge is satisfied from the evidence that he should be held to answer for the crime charged or any other crime (§ 4734). In such case the court or judge may make an appropriate order: Jackson v. Boyd, 53-536.

As to the order in which two or more terms of imprisonment are to be served out, see § 5893 and note.

5899. By whom executed. 4514. When the judgment is imprisonment in the county jail of the county in which the trial is had, or a fine and that the defendant be imprisoned in such county jail until it be satisfied, the judgment must be executed by the sheriff of that county. In all other cases, when the judgment is imprisonment, the sheriff of the county in which the trial was had, must deliver the defendant to the proper officer in execution of the judgment. [R., § 4898; C., '51, § 3076.]

5900. Delivery to keeper of jail. 4515. If the judgment be imprisonment, or a fine and imprisonment until it be satisfied, in the county jail of the county in which the trial was had, the sheriff of the county in which the trial was had, shall deliver a certified copy of the entry of the judgment, together with the body of the defendant, to the keeper of the jail or prison in which the defendant is to be imprisoned, and take his receipt therefor on a duplicate copy of such entry, which he must forthwith return to the clerk of the court in which the judgment was rendered, with his return thereon. [R., § 4899; C., '51, § 3077.]

5901. Preventing escape. 4516. The sheriff, or his deputy, while conveying the defendant to the proper prison, has the same authority to require the assistance of any citizen of the state in securing the defendant, and retaking him if he escape, as if the sheriff were in his own county; and every person who neglects or refuses to assist the sheriff when so required shall be punishable as if the sheriff were in his own county. [R., § 4900; C., '51, § 3078.]

5902. Return. 4517. An officer executing a judgment of imprisonment shall make a written return of the execution of such judgment forthwith after such execution, and file the same with the clerk of the court, by which the judgment was rendered. [R., § 4901.]

5903. Execution for fine. 4518. Upon a judgment for a fine, a writ of execution may be issued as upon a judgment in a civil case. [R., § 4902.]

5904. Judgment for abatement of nuisance. 4519. When the judgment is for the abatement or removal of a nuisance, or for anything other than the payment of money by the defendant, a certified copy of the entry of such judgment, delivered to the sheriff of the proper county, shall authorize and require him to execute such judgment, and he shall return the same with his doings under the same thereon indorsed to the clerk of the court in which the judgment was rendered within seventy days after the date of the certificate of such certified copy, unless it be a judgment of imprisonment, which is hereinbefore provided for. [R., § 4903.]

An order for the abatement or removal of a nuisance, to be delivered to the sheriff as here provided, should so describe the nuisance that the officer will be able to identify with certainty the object against which it is directed: Sloan v. Rebman, 66-81.

CHAPTER 35.

OF APPEALS.

5905. Review by. 4520. The mode of reviewing in the supreme court any judgment, action, or decision of the district court in a criminal case, is by an appeal. [R., § 4904.]

The chapter relating to proceedings in the supreme court in civil cases is intended to regulate generally the practice of that court in criminal cases as well. Therefore, held, that the sections relating to rehearing are applicable in criminal cases, and are applicable in behalf of the state as well as defendant: State v. Jones, 64-349.

In general, see notes to § 5923.

5906. Who may. 4521. Either the defendant or the state may take an appeal. [R., § 4905.]

5907. When taken. 4522. No appeal can be taken until after judgment, and then only within one year thereafter. [R., § 4906.]

Appeal from final judgment: An appeal in a criminal case lies only from final judgment, which is the judgment here contemplated, and not from an intermediate order or decision. (Overruling State v. Brandt, 41-593): State v. Svearengen, 43-336.

This doctrine is applicable to appeals by the state as well as by defendant: State v. Davis, 47-634.

A criminal case cannot be brought to the supreme court by agreement before rendition of final judgment: Rutter v. State, 1-99.

An appeal by defendant will not lie in a criminal case from the overruling of one ground of demurrer to the indictment where another ground of demurrer is sustained and the indictment is dismissed: State v. Hoffman, 67-281.

Not by consent after time has expired: The supreme court cannot entertain jurisdiction by consent of parties to a case after the time for taking appeal has run out: State v. Fleming, 13-443.

A party in a criminal as well as in a civil case must prosecute his appeal within the time prescribed by law, and cannot appeal after the expiration of the time allowed for appeal: State v. Westfall, 37-575.

Waiver of right: After payment of fine or serving out the imprisonment according to the sentence, defendant cannot appeal from the judgment: Ibid.

What must appear: Where the record fails to show that defendant was indicted, or was tried, or that a verdict was found against him, or that any judgment was entered, or that he has appealed, the appeal will be dismissed: State v. Quigley, 62-758.

Where the record shows no service of notice of appeal the court is without jurisdiction to examine any question in the case: State v. Leslie, 65-305.

Where it does not appear from the abstract that judgment has been rendered the appeal will be dismissed: State v. Wheeler, 65-619.

The abstract should show the fact that judgment has been entered: State v. Briggs, 73-456.

5908. How taken. 4523. An appeal is taken by the party taking it, or the attorney of such party, serving on the adverse party, or the attorney of the adverse party who acted as attorney of record in the district court at the time of the rendition of the judgment, and also on the clerk of the district court by which the judgment was rendered, a notice in writing of the taking of the appeal from the judgment. [R., § 4907.]

5909. When deemed taken. 4524. The appeal is deemed to be taken when the notices thereof, required by the last section, are filed in the office of the clerk of the court in which the judgment was rendered, with evidence of the service thereof indorsed thereon, or annexed thereto. [R., § 4908.]
