5910. Transcript; duty of clerk. 4525. When an appeal is taken, it is the duty of the clerk of the court in which the judgment was rendered, without unnecessary delay, to make out a full and perfect transcript of all papers in the case on file in his office, except the papers returned by the examining magistrate on the preliminary examination, where there has been one, and of all entries made in the record book, and certify the same under his hand and the seal of the court, and transmit the same to the clerk of the supreme court. [R., § 4909.]

In a criminal case, the record after the caption, stating the time and place of holding the court, should consist of the indictment properly indorsed as found by the grand jury, the arraignment of the accused, his plea, the impaneling of the traverse jury, their verdict and the judgment of the court: Harriman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

Other matters and proceedings, such as motions, objections, exceptions, and the like, do not form any part of the record unless made so by order of the court, by bill of exceptions, by agreement of parties, special verdict or otherwise: Ibid.

Though the defendant do not appear, or fail to file a transcript, the state may file the same, and the court will examine the record, and render such judgment as the law demands: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

5911. Several defendants may join. 4526. When several defendants are indicted and tried jointly, any one or more of them may join in taking the appeal, but those of their co-defendants who do not join shall take no benefit therefrom, yet they may appeal afterwards. [R., § 4917.]

5912. By state; no stay. 4527. An appeal taken by the state, in no case stays the operation of a judgment in favor of the defendant. [R., § 4911.]

5914. Defendant detained in custody. 4529. Where the judgment is imprisonment in the penitentiary, and an appeal is taken during the term at which the judgment is rendered, and the defendant is unable to give bail, and that fact is satisfactorily shown to the court, it may, in its discretion, order the sheriff or officer having the defendant in custody, to detain him in custody, without taking him to the penitentiary, to abide the judgment on the appeal, if the defendant desire it. [R., § 4915.]

5915. Bail; proceedings when given. 4530. When an appeal is taken by the defendant, and bail is put in, it is the duty of the clerk to give forthwith to the defendant, his agent or attorney, a certificate under his hand and the seal of the court, stating that an appeal has been taken and bail put in, and the sheriff or other officer having the defendant in custody, must, upon the delivery of such certificate to him, discharge the defendant from custody where imprisonment forms any part of the judgment, and cease all further proceedings in execution of the judgment, and return forthwith to the clerk of the court who issued it, the execution or certified copy of the entry of judgment under which he acted, with his return thereon, if such execution or certified copy has been issued, and if such execution or certified copy has not been issued, it shall not be issued, but shall abide the judgment on the appeal. [R., § 4916.]

5916. Appellant; appellee. 4531. The party taking the appeal is known as the appellant, the adverse party as the appellee, but the title of action shall not be changed in consequence of the appeal; it shall be docketed in the supreme court as it was in the district court. [R., § 4918.]

5917. How docketed; precedence. 4532. Appeals, in criminal cases, shall be docketed in the supreme court for trial at the commencement of that portion of the term which has been assigned for trying causes from the judicial district from which the appeal comes. They shall take precedence of all other business, and shall be tried at the term at which the transcript is filed, unless continued for cause, or by consent of the parties, and shall be decided, if practicable, at the same term. [R., § 4919.]

TRIAL OF THE APPEAL.

5918. Appearance of defendant. 4533. The personal appearance of the defendant in the supreme court on the trial of an appeal, is in no case necessary. [R., § 4920.]

5919. Not dismissed for informality. 4534. An appeal shall not be dismissed for any informality or defect in taking the appeal, if the same be corrected in a reasonable time, and the supreme court must direct how it shall be corrected. [R., § 4921.]

Where the record in a criminal case on appeal was not in such form that the court was authorized to pass upon it, and the prosecuting officer insisted on such defect by motion, held, that the motion would be sustained and the submission set aside, and the case be put again on the docket for such further proceedings as the rules should direct and the rights of defendant demand: State v. Havercamp, 53-737.

The mere fact that the indictment is mislaid or stolen after the trial and cannot be sent up with the writ of error to the supreme court on appeal will not authorize the supreme court to reverse the judgment: Smith v. State, 4 G. Gr., 189.

5920. Assignment of error. 4535. No assignment of error, or joinder in error, shall be necessary. [R., § 4922.]

Section applied: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

5921. Argument. 4536. The defendant shall be entitled to close the argument. [R., § 4923.]

5922. Opinion. 4537. The opinion of the supreme court must be in writing, filed with its clerk and recorded. [R., § 4924.]

5923. Decision. 4538. If the appeal was taken by the defendant from a judgment against him, the supreme court must examine the record, and without regard to technical errors or defects which do not affect the substantial rights of the parties, render such judgment on the record as the law demands. It may affirm, reverse, or modify the judgment, and render such judgment as the district court should have rendered, and may, if necessary or proper, order a new trial. It may reduce the punishment, but cannot increase it. [R., § 4925; C., '51, §§ 3097-8.]

What will be ground of reversal: Technicalities are to be disregarded: State v. Ensley, 10-149.

It is only errors and defects which affect substantial rights that can be considered: Hintermeister v. State, 1-101.

A purely technical objection, as, for instance, the erroneous discharge of one grand jury, and the summoning of another, by which the indictment was found, in the absence of any objection to the second except the discharge of the first, will not be ground for a reversal: State v. Hughes, 58-165.

Where the error urged was the overruling of a motion to set aside the judgment, based upon slight irregularities in the selection of the grand jury, the court held that they did not affect the substantial rights of the party and affirmed the judgment: State v. Carney, 20-82.

Where there is no appearance for appellant or assignment of errors, it is not the duty of the court to support the judgment of the court below by discussing imaginary errors: State v. Stewart, 71-754.

The court is not required to imagine possible objections and present reasons supporting the rulings of the district court as against them: State v. Kramer, 74-760.

Section applied: State v. Brandt, 41-593, 634.

Error without prejudice: Where the evidence is all before the court, and it is apparent that an alleged error in the instructions could not have been prejudicial to defendant, the case will not be reversed: State v. Guisenhouse, 20-227.

A verdict of guilty will not be disturbed because of an erroneous assumption by counsel when it appears that no prejudice to the rights of the prisoner resulted therefrom: State v. Turner, 19-144.

Error in prosecuting a violation of a city ordinance in the name of the state instead of the name of the city will not be ground of reversal, at least where the error was not objected to on the trial: State v. King, 37-462.

As malice aforethought is not an element of the crime of assault and battery, held, that in a criminal prosecution for assault with intent to murder, in which defendant was only convicted of assault and battery, the exclusion of evidence tending to show malice aforethought, even if erroneous, was without prejudice: State v. Graham, 51-72.

Where, after the overruling of a demurrer, defendant was tried as though on a plea of not guilty, but without any plea having been in fact made, held, that he was not entitled on appeal to have the conviction set aside and be allowed to enter a plea of not guilty: State v. Greene, 66-11.

Where the jury render a verdict for manslaughter under an indictment for murder, any error in the instructions with reference to malice as an element of murder will be error without prejudice: State v. Winters, 72-627.

Assignment of errors: The court will, in a criminal case, upon an appeal by defendant, examine the record and determine whether the law has been correctly administered, even though no formal objection has been made to the proceeding and though there be no formal assignment of error or argument: State v. Swander milk, 50-695; State v. Barlow, 50-701.

The rule that objections not raised in the court below will not be considered in the supreme court does not apply in criminal cases: State v. Potter, 28-554.

In the absence of assignment of error and of argument in criminal cases, the appellate court is required to examine the record and render such judgment upon it as the law demands, but the court will not enter into a discussion of imaginary errors: State v. Quinn, 63-396.

The record: Where the record fails to show that defendant was indicted, or was tried, or that a verdict was found against him, or that any judgment was entered, or that he has appealed, the appeal will be dismissed: State v. Quigley, 62-758.

Where the record shows no service of notice of appeal the court is without jurisdiction to examine any question in the case: State v. Leslie, 65-305.

Where it does not appear from the abstract that judgment has been rendered the appeal will be dismissed: State v. Wheeler, 65-619. And see State v. Briggs, 73-456.

Rules as to printed abstracts: The court may make reasonable rules relating to practice upon appeals, and provide that upon a sufficient showing they may be waived or modified, and it having provided that the evidence on an appeal must be abstracted and the abstract printed, it will not consider a case not presented in accordance with these rules, unless application for the waiver of such rules has been duly made: State v. Day, 58-678.

The provisions of the rules of the supreme court for suspending such rules in regard to printed abstracts in criminal cases on account of the poverty of defendant appealing must be complied with. An abstract in writing or caligraphic writing must be submitted to the attorney-general, and the fact of the inability of appellant to pay for printing must be shown by affidavit, and further it must be shown by the counsel, by affidavit or professional statement, that there is merit in the appeal: State v. Earl, 66-84.

In criminal cases the court will not examine the transcript for the purpose of finding error where the appellant has filed an abstract. It is only where leave has been granted to present the case without printed abstract that the transcript will be examined: State v. Butterfield, 73-86.

Appearance of defendant: Though the defendant do not appear, or fail to file a transcript, the state may file the same, and the court will examine the record and render such judgment as the law demands: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

Granting new trial: The supreme court will interfere more readily in a criminal than in a civil case, where a new trial, asked on the ground that the verdict is not supported by the evidence, has been refused: State v. Tomlinson, 11-401.

But it will cautiously interfere with verdicts in such cases: State v. Collins, 20-85.

When the evidence upon which defendant is convicted is so lacking in affirmative force as not to generate a belief of probable guilt, a new trial will be granted: State v. Hilton, 23-241.

While the duty of the supreme court to interfere with an unjust verdict is recognized, yet, when the testimony is conflicting, it must be satisfied of its insufficiency to convince the judgment, reason and conscience of the triers, before setting aside the conclusion arrived at by them: State v. Elliott, 15-72.

While the supreme court will exercise a just caution in interfering with the verdict of the jury, especially where the court below has refused to disturb it, yet a conviction clearly in conflict with the evidence will be set aside: State v. Woolsey, 30-251.

The supreme court cannot, on appeal, interfere with the verdict of the jury when there is clear conflict in the testimony, this rule being applicable in criminal as well as civil actions: State v. Falconer, 70-416.

In particular cases, held, that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty: State v. Moffitt, 31-316; State v. May, 20-305; State v. Campbell, 69-556.

As to grounds for granting new trial in lower court, see § 5874 and notes.

When the record must contain the whole evidence: The supreme court cannot pass upon the question whether the lower court ruled correctly upon a motion for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the evidence, unless the whole evidence upon the trial was before it: State v. Crawford, 11-143.

In bringing before the supreme court the question whether the verdict below was in accordance with the evidence, a motion for a new trial should be made in the lower court and all the evidence taken to the supreme court on appeal: State v. Hockenberry, 11-269.

The court cannot reverse the judgment on the ground that the verdict is against the evidence unless the record discloses that all the testimony is before it: State v. Pitts, 11-343; State v. Carr, 43-418.

Reducing the sentence: Where the sentence is too severe the court will reduce the punishment, but will not reverse the case on that account: State v. Madden, 35-511; State v. Little, 42-51.

The power to reduce the sentence will be exercised only when the court below has manifestly visited too severe a penalty, one disproportionate to the degree of guilt as shown by the proof: State v. Freeman, 27-333.

To justify the exercise of such power it must be made to appear that the punishment is excessive: State v. Allen, 32-248.

To authorize the supreme court on appeal to diminish the punishment, the record should show with sufficient clearness that the punishment inflicted is beyond the demands of justice: State v. Wilmoth, 63-380.

In determining whether the punishment in a particular case is excessive, the court will decide the case upon its peculiar facts, and each offender must receive the punishment he merits without regard to the punishment inflicted on others: State v. Upson, 64-248.

Where there is no evidence before it by which the proper amount of penalty may be determined, the supreme court will not reduce the punishment inflicted: State v. Baughman, 20-497.

The supreme court will not reduce the sentence of a lower court in a criminal case when the record does not disclose all the circumstances attending the commission of the offense: State v. Patton, 19-458.

The court must have some legal data upon which to base its action in reducing the sentence: State v. Baughman, 20-497.

The supreme court will not reduce the punishment imposed by the lower court unless all the evidence is before it: State v. Harris, 36-268; State v. Durston, 52-635; State v. Baughman, 20-497; State v. Joaquin, 43-131; State v. Buck, 59-382.

The supreme court will not reduce the sentence merely on an abstract of the evidence: State v. Freeman, 27-333.

Facts in a prosecution for murder held not such as to require the reduction of the sentence: State v. Houston, 50-512. So held also in a case of accessory to assault with intent to commit murder: State v. Mover, 68-61. So held also in a case of seduction: State v. Heatherton, 60-175; and in a case of burglary: State v. Franks, 64-39; and in a case of larceny: State v. Ritchie, 69-123.

In a particular case, where the highest punishment permitted by the law for the offense charged was imposed for an act which was not the most aggravated form of the crime, held, that the sentence was excessive and it was accordingly reduced: State v. Thompson, 46-699.

In particular cases, held, that the sentence should be reduced as excessive: State v. Madden, 35-511; State v. Hayden, 45-11; State v. Doering, 48-650; State v. Moody, 50-443; State v. Sullivan, 51-142.

Where defendant was convicted on an indictment improperly charging in two counts two distinct crimes and was sentenced on both counts, held, that on appeal the sentence would be reduced to what would have been a proper sentence on one count, although the objection on the ground of duplicity had not been raised in the court below: State v. Henry, 59-391.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence was insufficient to support a verdict of murder in the first degree; but it not being claimed that defendant was not guilty of manslaughter the court reduced the sentence to the proper one for the latter crime: State v. Fields, 70-196.

Effect of reversal: Upon reversal of a judgment of conviction the cause may be remanded for a new trial. Jeopardy is not considered as having attached if the defendant is erroneously convicted and obtains a reversal of the judgment: State v. Knouse, 33-365.

A judgment in a criminal case being reversed on appeal for a defect in the indictment, the cause was remanded for new trial with direction that preliminary thereto it might be re-submitted to another grand jury: State v. Morrissey, 22-158.

As to procedendo, see § 5927 and notes.

Final judgment in supreme court: The supreme court may, on appeal in criminal cases, render such judgment as the district court should have rendered: State v. Thompson, 31-393.

Costs of appeal: In case of appeal by the state, and reversal, it is improper to tax the costs to defendant: State v. Vail, 57-103.

The statute does not provide for the payment by the county of costs of printing the abstract, etc., on appeal by defendant, although judgment against him is reversed: Red v. Polk County, 56-98; State v. Rainsbarger, 74-539.

The costs of defendant for transcript, abstract, etc., in presenting his appeal are not taxable to the county even though he secures a reversal: State v. Rainsbarger, 74-539.

5924. In appeals by state. 4539. If the appeal was taken by the state, the supreme court cannot reverse the judgment, or modify it so as to increase the punishment, but may affirm it, and shall point out any error in the proceedings, or in the measure of punishment, and its decision shall be obligatory on the district court, as the correct exposition of the law. [R., § 4926.]

Upon such an appeal the supreme court cannot interfere with the judgment of the district court, whether the appeal be from a judgment upon the trial on the merits, or upon demurrer or motion. The decision of the district court ends the proceeding as against the defendant: State v. Kinney, 44-444.

In such case, the court having given an exposition of the law, no further order is necessary or allowable: State v. Keeler, 28-551.

The fact that a procedendo issues in the usual form, requiring the lower court to proceed after an appeal by the state is determined, does not give the lower court any power in such cases: State v. Kinney, 44-444.

In case of appeal by the state, and reversal, it is improper to tax costs to defendant: State v. Vail, 57-103.

And the same rule holds as to an appeal by a city in a proceeding commenced in its name for the violation of a city ordinance: Columbus City v. Culcomb, 61-672.

5925. When judgment reversed. 4540. If a judgment against the defendant be reversed without ordering a new trial, the supreme court must direct, if the defendant be in custody, that he be discharged, or if he be admitted to bail, that his bail be exonerated, or if money be deposited instead of bail, that it be refunded to him. [R., § 4927; C., '51, § 3099.]

5926. If affirmed. 4541. On a judgment of affirmance against the defendant, the original judgment shall be carried into execution as the supreme court shall direct, except as hereinafter provided. [R., § 4928; C., '51, § 3100.]

5927. Judgment recorded and transmitted. 4542. When a judgment of the supreme court is rendered it must be recorded, and a certified copy of the judgment must be forthwith remitted to the clerk of the district court in which the judgment appealed from was rendered, with proper instructions and a copy of the opinion, in such time, and in such manner, as the supreme court may, by rule, prescribe. [R., § 4929; C., '51, § 3101.]

The procedendo from the supreme court is not necessary to the jurisdiction of the district court on a new trial. The defendant may waive the objection. While consent cannot confer jurisdiction over the subject-matter, it may over the parties: State v. Knouse, 33-365. And see Becker v. Becker, 50-139.

It is not necessary to make any order remanding a cause except that contained in the procedendo: State v. Clouser, 72-302.

5928. Subsequent proceedings. 4543. After the certified copy of the entry of the judgment of the supreme court, and its instructions have been remitted as provided in the preceding section, the supreme court has no farther jurisdiction of the proceedings therein, and all proceedings which may be necessary to carry the judgment of the supreme court into effect, must be had in the court to which it is remitted, or by the clerk thereof, except as provided in the next two sections. [R., § 4930; C., '51, § 3102.]

5929. Judgment enforced. 4544. Unless where some proceedings in the district court are directed by the supreme court, a copy of the certified copy of the judgment of the supreme court, with its directions, certified by the clerk of the district court to whom the same has been transmitted, delivered to the sheriff, or other proper officer, shall authorize him to execute the judgment of the supreme court, or take any steps to bring the proceedings to a conclusion, except as provided in the next section. [R., § 4931.]

5930. Time of imprisonment deducted. 4545. If a defendant, who has been imprisoned during the pendency of an appeal, upon a new trial ordered by the supreme court shall be again convicted, the period of his former imprisonment shall be deducted by the district court from the period of imprisonment to be fixed on the last verdict of conviction. [R., § 4932.]

Where the defendant has been imprisoned during appeal, and after judgment has been reversed he is again tried and convicted, it will be presumed, in the absence of showing to the contrary, that the judge, in fixing the term of imprisonment under the second conviction, took into consideration the imprisonment under the first conviction: State v. Hopkins, 67-285.

CHAPTER 36.

OF IMPEACHMENT.

5931. Accusation. 4546. An impeachment is the written accusation of a state officer by the house of representatives before the senate, of any misdemeanor or malfeasance in office. [R., § 4937.]

5932. By whom found. 4547. A majority of all the members of the house of representatives elected must concur in an impeachment. [R., § 4938; C., '51, § 3157.]

5933. Requisites. 4548. The impeachment must specify the offenses charged with the same precision as is requisite in an indictment, and the accused must be allowed counsel as in cases of other prosecution. [R., § 4939; C., '51, § 3158.]

5934. How stated. 4549. If the impeachment charge more than one misdemeanor or act of malfeasance, they shall be stated separately and distinctly. [R., § 4940.]

5935. Accused brought before senate. 4550. When possessed of an impeachment, the senate must forthwith cause the person accused to be brought before it. [R., § 4941; C., '51, § 3159.]

5936. Process. 4551. All writs and process must be issued by the secretary of the senate, and tested in his name, and may be served by any person thereto authorized by the senate or president. [R., § 4942; C., '51, § 3160.]

5937. Answer; counsel. 4552; 21 G. A., ch. 91, § 3. Upon the appearance of the person impeached, he is entitled to a copy of the impeachment, and to a reasonable time in which to answer the same, and shall be allowed counsel as in the trial of ordinary cases. [R., § 4943; C., '51, § 3161.]

5938. Oath. 4553. Before proceeding to the trial, an oath, truly and impartially to try and determine the charge in question according to the evidence, shall be administered by the secretary of the senate to the president, and by him to each of the members of that body. [R., § 4944; C., '51, § 3162.]

5939. Suspended. 4554. Every officer impeached shall be suspended from the exercise of his official duties until his acquittal. [R., § 4948; C., '51, § 3165.]

5940. President of senate. 4555. If the president of the senate be impeached, notice thereof must be immediately given to the senate, which shall thereupon choose another president, to hold his office until the result of the trial is determined. [R., § 4949; C., '51, § 3167.]

5942. Organization of senate. 21 G. A., ch. 91, § 2. Whenever an impeachment of an officer is directed the senate shall forthwith, after the hour of final adjournment of the legislature, be organized as a court for the trial of the same at the capitol of the state, and such organization shall be held and deemed to be perfected when the presiding officer of the senate, and all the members thereof present, shall have taken the oath or affirmation prescribed; and no member of the court shall sit in the trial, or give his vote upon such trial until he shall have taken such oath or affirmation, which oath or affirmation shall be administered by the secretary of the senate to the presiding officer thereof, and by the presiding officer to each of the members of the senate. The senate sitting as a court, upon the trial of an impeachment shall have the same power to compel the attendance of its members as when engaged in the ordinary business of legislation.

5943. Record of proceedings; administering oaths. 21 G. A., ch. 91, § 4. It shall be the duty of the secretary of the senate, in all cases of impeachment, to keep a full and accurate record of the proceedings, which shall be held and taken as a public record; and shall have power to administer all requisite oaths or affirmations.

5945. Process for witnesses. 21 G. A., ch. 91, § 6. The managers elected by the house of representatives and counsel for the person impeached shall severally be entitled to process for compelling the attendance of persons or the production of papers and records required for the trial of the impeachment.

5946. Senate may adopt rules. 21 G. A., ch. 91, § 7. The senate sitting as a court of impeachment shall have full power and authority to establish such rules and regulations for the trial of the accused as may be necessary.

5947. Compensation of members. 21 G. A., ch. 91, § 8. The presiding officer, and members of the senate, while sitting as a court of impeachment, and the managers elected by the house of representatives, shall receive the sum of six dollars each per day, and mileage at the rate of five cents per mile in going from and returning to their places of residence, by the ordinary traveled routes; and the compensation of the secretary, sergeant-at-arms, and all subordinate officers, clerks and reporters shall be such an amount as shall be determined upon by a vote of the members of such court. The state treasurer shall upon presentation of a certificate or certificates signed by the presiding officer and secretary of the senate, pay all the expenses of the senate, managers, officers, clerks and reporters which may be incurred under the provisions of this act [§§ 5941-5948].

5948. To what applicable. 21 G. A., ch. 91, § 9. The provisions of this act [§§ 5941-5948] shall apply to all resolutions, and proceedings heretofore had, or hereafter to be had in the impeachment of any civil officer of this state.

5950. Penalty; removal; disqualification. 21 G. A., ch. 151, § 2. When any person impeached is found guilty, judgment shall thereupon be rendered for his removal from office and his disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust or profit under this state and such judgment shall have the effect of removing from office the person so found guilty.

5951. Senate; powers; process. 21 G. A., ch. 151, § 3. When sitting as a court of impeachment the senate shall sit in the senate chamber in the capitol and shall have power to adjourn from time to time, to dissolve when its work is concluded and to compel obedience to its process and orders. Its process, including subpoenas shall run into any part of the state, and may be served by the same officers when no person is authorized by the president or senate to serve the same, and shall have the same force and effect as subpoenas from district courts in criminal cases.

5952. Imprisonment for contempt. 21 G. A., ch. 151, § 4. The senate while sitting as a court of impeachment shall have all the powers and privileges conferred upon each house of the general assembly by sections fourteen, fifteen and sixteen of the code [§§ 18-20], provided that imprisonment for contempt shall not extend beyond the dissolution of the court of impeachment.

5953. Fees of witnesses. 21 G. A., ch. 151, § 5. The same fees shall be allowed to witnesses and to officers and other persons serving process or orders as are allowed for like services in criminal cases, but no fees can be demanded in advance. Such fees shall be certified and paid as provided by section eight of chapter ninety-one of the acts of the twenty-first general assembly [§ 5947] for the payment of other expenses subject to the right of the court to disallow all fees and charges which it shall deem unreasonable or unnecessary.

CHAPTER 37.

OF EVIDENCE.

5954. As in civil cases. 4556; 17 G. A., ch. 168, § 2. The rules of evidence prescribed in the civil part of this code, shall apply to criminal proceedings as far as applicable, and as they are not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter. [R., § 4805.]

Defendant as a witness: Before the enactment of latter part of § 4886, defendant in a criminal prosecution was not a competent witness in his own behalf: State v. Laffer, 38-422; State v. Bixby, 39-465; State v. Gigher, 23-318.

But he might testify in his own behalf in a preliminary examination: State v. Laffer, 38-422.

Cross-examination: The rules governing the cross-examination of defendant when testifying in his own behalf are the same as those applicable to the cross-examination of other witnesses, and questions may be asked for the purpose of laying a foundation for impeaching his evidence by contradicting statements made in answer to such questions: State v. Red, 53-69. And see State v. Johnson, 72-393.

Credibility: It is not error to instruct the jury that they may consider defendant's interest in the result of the action as affecting his credibility as a witness: State v. Moelchen, 53-310; State v. Sterrett, 71-386.

Competency: The rules relating to the pertinency of testimony given by other witnesses are applicable when the prisoner testifies in his own behalf; and the fact that the evidence against him is strong and his story improbable cannot have any bearing upon the admissibility of the proposed testimony: State v. Kelly, 57-644.

May testify as to knowledge: Therefore, where defendant's guilt depends upon his knowledge of a fact, he should be permitted to testify upon his knowledge of the subject: Ibid.

Comment by prosecuting attorney on defendant's not being a witness is ground for new trial: See notes to § 5874.

Instructions: The fact that the judge gives no instruction to the jury in regard to the failure of the defendant to testify will not constitute error where he has not been requested to so charge, and the matter has not been alluded to in any way during the course of the trial: State v. Stevens, 67-557.

Impeachment: When defendant in a criminal case offers himself as a witness, he may be impeached or contradicted in the same manner as other witnesses are, as provided by § 4899. His testimony is to be tested by the rules which are applicable to witnesses generally, and any fact or circumstance which might lawfully be shown for the purpose of affecting the credibility of other witnesses may be shown for the same purpose as to his testimony. Witnesses may therefore be introduced to testify that his reputation for truth and veracity is bad, and it is not necessary that the names of such witnesses shall have been indorsed on the indictment and minutes of their evidence returned by the grand jury, or notice given of the intention to introduce such witnesses: State v. Teeter, 69-717.

Where one of two co-defendants on trial jointly is introduced by his co-defendant as a witness, evidence of his bad moral character may be introduced to impeach his credibility in the same manner as in the case of any other witness: State v. Hardin, 46-623.

Co-defendants: Where two or more defendants are indicted jointly, but put upon trial separately, either one is a competent witness for the other: State v. Nash, 10-81.

Where defendants are jointly indicted and jointly put on trial, one is still a competent witness for the other: State v. Gigher, 23-318.

In such case the jury should be properly cautioned not to consider such evidence in behalf of the party testifying: State v. Stewart, 51-312.

Where several co-defendants were on trial for the crime of unlawful assembly, held, that it was error to exclude the testimony of one, offered in behalf of another and not in behalf of himself, as to what was said and done by the witness' co-defendants: Ibid.

If one of two defendants jointly indicted is called as a witness for the other, and the jury find that the one called as a witness was not an accomplice, his testimony should be regarded as that of other witnesses: State v. Schtagel, 19-169.

Testimony of husband or wife of defendant: Where a husband and wife are co-defendants the wife may, under § 4891, properly be called as a witness by her husband, and her evidence should be admitted under instructions restricting it in its application so that it shall not be considered in her own behalf: State v. Donovan, 41-587.

While the credibility of a wife testifying in behalf of her husband in a criminal prosecution is to be considered and weighed in view of her peculiar relation to defendant, it is error to charge the jury to examine her testimony with peculiar care. The same degree of care which the law requires to be given to the testimony of all witnesses should be applied to hers, and no other or different degree: State v. Guyer, 6-263; State v. Rankin, 8-355; State v. Collins, 20-85; State v. Bernard, 45-234.

It is not error to charge the jury that, while the wife is a competent witness for her husband, they should examine and consider her testimony with care and caution, and give it such credit as under the circumstances they think it entitled to: State v. Nash, 10-81.

As to when the husband or wife may be a competent witness for or against the other, see, further, § 4891 and notes.

Declarations or admissions of defendant: Declarations of the prisoner made in the very act of the crime are not admissible in his behalf unless they are part of the res gestae. So held in a prosecution for illegal sale of intoxicating liquor, with reference to the character of the liquor sold by defendant: State v. Miller, 53-84.

Admissions made in ordinary or random conversations are not generally considered in law as satisfactory proof: State v. Donovan, 61-278.

Where admissions of defendant are relied upon, it is not required that the jury accept them as a whole for the truth. They may accept those portions which are reasonable and which agree with other evidence, and reject other portions that are unreasonable and contradict other testimony: State v. McIntire, 66-333.

Conclusive presumptions and estoppels have no place in the criminal law in establishing the body of the crime charged. Therefore, held, that while statements made by a defaulting officer at the time of a settlement with him might estop him in a civil suit from claiming therein that the defalcation existed prior to such settlement, the estoppel would not apply in a criminal prosecution as showing that the offense was barred: State v. Hutchison, 60-478.

Where the significance and value of certain circumstantial evidence introduced by the prosecution depended entirely upon the fact that collateral facts appearing in evidence were contemporaneous and subsequent to the crime, held, that declarations of the accused with reference to one of the facts, made prior to the crime, were admissible in evidence as overthrowing the circumstantial evidence: State v. Cruise, 19-312.

An instruction to the jury that a certain conversation in evidence had with a prisoner upon the subject of the crime with which he was charged occurred as stated, and the statements of accused could not be reconciled upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt, then upon such evidence they might convict, held not erroneous where there was abundant and incontrovertible proof that the offense was committed: State v. Rorabacher, 19-154.

In a prosecution for incest, admissions and declarations of the parties as to the fact of the marriage claimed to be incestuous are admissible to prove it: State v. Schauhurst, 34-547.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence of theories propounded at one time by defendant as to how deceased may have met his death, and which were inconsistent with his explanation of the same thing, were held admissible, subject to any explanation as to the discrepancy, and subject also to the caution that too much importance should not be attached to the circumstance, as an innocent man finding himself suspected might make false representations to allay suspicion: State v. Feltes, 51-495.

Evidence as to statements made by defendant as to his previous occupation, held not improperly admitted in a trial for murder: State v. Moelchen, 53-310.

Testimony as to statements made by defendant with reference to injuries received by him, couched in profane language, held not admissible as against him, and that if the fact that he refuses assistance in dressing his wound was material, it should have been testified to directly without giving the language used: State v. Cross, 68-180.

The statement by defendant on arraignment that he has no means to employ counsel is a solemn admission which may be used against him if that fact becomes material to any issue in the case: State v. Fooks, 65-196.

While a prisoner arrested on preliminary information is not required to plead upon the preliminary examination, yet if he does so plead, even before the magistrate has advised him of his right to counsel, such pleading may be shown in evidence against him as an admission of his guilt: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

Declarations admissible as part of the res gestæ: Declarations made at the time of a transaction, expressive of its character, motive or object, are regarded as verbal acts indicating a present purpose or intent, and are therefore admissible as a part of the res gestæ. But where the declaration and the act are inconsistent, if the act goes beyond the declaration or contradicts it, the presumption of intention is to be gathered from the act: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 506.

Defendant's statements as to what occurred at the time of the commission of an alleged crime are competent as being part of the res gestæ: State v. Gillett, 56-459.

To render declarations admissible as a part of the res gestæ it is not necessary that they should be precisely concurrent in point of time with the principal transaction. It is sufficient if they are nearly enough concurrent to clearly appear to be so unpremeditated as to offer a reliable explanation of the principal transaction: State v. Jones, 64-349.

Where an act is done, and the actor at the time makes a statement explanatory of it, the statement is admissible as part of the res gestæ, unless the circumstances are such as to preclude the supposition that the statement was free from sinister motives. In a prosecution for murder, certain statements of defendant held to be competent: State v. Cross, 68-180.

Where defendant was on trial for the murder of a companion with whom he was traveling by team, held, that a witness who had conversed with them on the day preceding the night when the crime was committed might state as a part of the res gestæ what the deceased said about where they had come from and where they were going, although such conversation was not had in the presence of defendant: State v. Vincent, 24-570.

In a prosecution for murder, certain statements of the deceased held to be receivable as part of the res gestæ: State v. Porter, 34-131.

Testimony as to acts subsequent to the commission of the offense, held to have been improperly admitted in a particular case: State v. Fowler, 52-103.

Statements made by a burglar while in the prosecution of his crime, to the effect that he is the person who is afterwards put on trial for the crime, may be proven as part of the res gestæ: State v. Kepper, 65-745.

Where defendant seeks to show an alibi he cannot prove declarations made by himself at a certain time as to where he had been, even though such declarations were made on his return to his place of residence: State v. McCracken, 66-569.

Declarations or admissions of co-defendants: Where a declaration or confession made by a defendant before his arrest is confirmed by acts and declarations of his co-defendant, though made after the commission of the alleged offense, such acts and declarations are admissible in evidence against the prisoner as a circumstance tending to prove his confession: State v. Knight, 19-94.

Where it appeared that there was no evidence tending to show conspiracy on the part of defendants jointly indicted for murder, prior to the time of the commission of the homicide, held, that declarations of one of the defendants, made before the commission of the crime, were not receivable against the other: State v. Weaver, 57-730.

Declarations of one of the parties after the completion of the crime contemplated in the alleged conspiracy are not admissible: Ibid.

Where statements by one of two persons jointly charged with a crime are made in the presence of the other while both are in custody, silence of the latter and failure to deny such statements will not constitute an admission on his part of their truth: Ibid.

Declarations of others: Admissions of a prosecutor in a prosecution for malicious mischief to property are not receivable in behalf of defendant: State v. Delong, 12-453.

A person charged with larceny may explain his possession of the stolen property by showing what was said to him at the time he acquired possession: State v. Kelly, 57-647; State v. Jordan, 69-506.

In a prosecution for rape, evidence that prosecutrix and her father offered to withdraw the charge if defendant would pay a sum of money, held properly refused, where it did not appear that the charge had been wrongly made as a ground for extorting money: State v. McDevitt, 69-549.

Statements in the hearing of defendant: Where two defendants were jointly indicted for horse-stealing, held, that upon the trial of one it was competent to prove what was said by his accomplice in his hearing and presence with regard to taking the horses, coupled with evidence that defendant remained silent and did not object or assent to its correctness. The weight of such evidence or the presumption arising therefrom must depend on the circumstances and must be determined by the jury: State v. Bowers, 17-46.

Statements in regard to the crime, made in the presence of the defendant, may be introduced in evidence without establishing that such statements were understood by him. It is for the jury to determine from all the circumstances whether he understood what was said: State v. Middleham, 62-150.

Subsequent declarations of a person injured in an assault are not admissible either for or against defendant as independent evidence, but can be introduced to contradict or impeach the testimony of the person making such declarations, if called as a witness, the requisite foundation having been laid: State v. Emeigh, 18-122.

Dying declarations; apprehension of death: Declarations of deceased sought to be introduced in evidence as dying declarations must be shown to have been made under the sense of impending death and in the full belief that he could not recover. It is sufficient, however, if this satisfactorily appears in any mode. It may be shown by proof of evident danger, or conduct of the person making the declaration, or other circumstances, such as the nature of the wound, the state of illness, etc.: State v. Gillick, 7-287, 309; State v. Nash, 7-347; State v. Leeper, 70-748.

It is not necessary to show that at the time the declarations were made deceased was under the apprehension of immediate dissolution, or that he was in articulo mortis. It is sufficient if he believes that his death is impending and certain. The length of time that elapses between the declaration and the death furnishes no rule as to the admission of evidence, nor will a declaration which was competent when made be rendered incompetent by the subsequent revival of strength in the dying person: State v. Nash, 7-347.

To render dying declarations competent evidence against one indicted for homicide of the person making the declaration it must appear that they were made in the full belief of deceased that he would not recover and that his death was impending. In a particular case, held, that it did not sufficiently appear that deceased, at the time he made the declarations offered in evidence, entertained such belief: State v. Weaver, 57-730.

Admissibility: The competency of dying declarations is to be determined by the judge in view of all the surrounding and attendant circumstances, and he should hear and weigh the evidence both for and against the competency of such declarations before receiving them in evidence: State v. Elliott, 45-486; State v. Leeper, 70-748.

The fact that the person making dying declarations was a materialist and did not believe in a God or a future conscious existence is not competent as affecting the admissibility of such declarations, but should be received as affecting their credibility: Ibid.

Credibility: The person whose declarations are admitted must be considered as standing in the same situation as if he were sworn. Such declarations are to be given the same degree of credit as his testimony would have received if he had been examined under oath, and his state of mind at the time the declarations were made, and his behavior, and his character, may be shown for the purpose of affecting the credibility of his declarations: State v. Nash, 7-347.

The statement of deceased must be such as would be receivable if he were alive and could be examined as a witness. Therefore if the declaration shows upon its face that it is a mere opinion, it should be excluded; otherwise it should be received and its credibility left to the determination of the jury: State v. Clemons, 51-274.

Dying declarations can only be admitted in regard to facts, and such declarations are not admissible with reference to whether the act of assailant was purposely done or not: State v. Donnelly, 69-705.

How proved: Where dying declarations are orally made and a statement thereof is also reduced to writing, if the writing and the oral statements are the same, the absence of the writing should be accounted for before evidence of the oral statements can be received. But if the declarations are repeated at different times, and one of them is reduced to writing, covering different grounds and referring to different matters from those comprised in the oral statements, then both the oral and written statements may be received: State v. Tweedy, 11-350.

Where dying declarations are incomplete by reason of death intervening, or temporary inability or interruption suspending their utterance, which is never resumed, the declaration is not receivable; but the fact that it does not give a complete narrative of what occurred, or might legitimately be supposed to have occurred, will constitute no objection to its competency or sufficiency: State v. Nettlebush, 20-257.

Where dying declarations are at the time reduced to writing by one who hears them, but the writing is not read over to nor signed by declarant, the writing is not itself admissible in evidence as a dying declaration; but it may be used by the person making it, as a memorandum from which to refresh his recollection in testifying as to the declarations: State v. Fraunburg, 40-555.

The failure to produce such writing or account for its absence will not render parol evidence of the declarations incompetent: State v. Sullivan, 51-142.

An affidavit made out for affiant by another party in the language of affiant and partly in substance from affiant's statements, and not read over to affiant before signing, is not admissible to prove his statements: State v. Elliott, 45-486.

Dying declarations of another person injured: Where defendant was on trial for the murder of one person, held, that it was error to admit in evidence dying declarations of another person killed at the same time, to the effect that he was stabbed by defendant: State v. Westfall, 49-328.

Hostile feelings: Letters merely showing a state of hostile feelings between defendant and the person injured and his family connections are not admissible in evidence unless merely for the purpose of showing the existence of such feelings, and if admitted for that purpose the jury should be limited in their consideration of them to the single purpose of ascertaining the feeling of defendant toward the injured party: State v. Moffitt, 31-316.

Where malicious intent is necessary to be shown it is not competent to prove the relations existing between the family in which defendant lived and the person against whom malice is claimed to have existed: State v. McDermott, 36-107.

Threats made by defendant, after the commencement of the prosecution, against the parties engaged therein are admissible in evidence as showing the mind, spirit and purpose of defendant in his defense and in relation to the crime charged: State v. Rorabacher, 19-154.

Evidence that defendant charged with the crime and the person murdered had had an altercation, held competent, as tending to show that the parties had not lived together agreeably: State v. Moelchen, 53-310.

In the prosecution of a crime consisting of violence to an individual, it is always competent to show previous ill-feeling, bad blood or threats as tending to show a probable motive for the commission of the crime; and threats or ill-feeling by defendant toward the father of the person injured is competent evidence on a criminal charge for injury to the child of such father: State v. Fry, 67-475. And see State v. Perigo, 70-657.

On a trial for murder, where there are circumstances shown which point to defendant as the guilty person, evidence of conduct explaining the bad state of feeling on the part of defendant toward the deceased is admissible: State v. Cole, 63-695.

Conduct of defendant in averting suspicion by endeavoring to cast it upon another does not raise a strong presumption of guilt where defendant has not stated untruths respecting such third person or directly charged him with the crime: State v. Collins, 20-85.

Compromise of civil suit is not competent evidence in a criminal prosecution for stealing property for the value of which defendant was sued in such civil action: State v. Emerson, 48-172.

Conduct of prisoner when charged with crime: The bodily or mental feelings of the prisoner, when material to be proved, may be shown by the usual expression of such feelings made at the time in question. The conduct and language of the prisoner when informed of the charges against him may therefore be shown: State v. Nash, 7-347, 382.

Declarations of deceased made in the presence of defendant are admissible for the purpose of showing defendant's conduct and behavior, when charged with causing the injuries done to the deceased, whether admissible as dying declarations or not: State v. Gillick, 7-287, 309; State v. Nash, 7-347, 376; State v. Nash, 10-81.

Declarations of the injured person, not competent as dying declarations, are not receivable where they are made in the presence of the officer having defendant under arrest, but not in the presence of defendant: State v. Nash, 10-81.

Testimony tending to show that the prisoner, when arrested, was charged with the crime and made no answer, is admissible, but its value is to be determined by all the circumstances, of which the jury are to be the judges: State v. Pratt, 20-267.

Attempt to escape: Where there is some evidence tending to show that defendant, after the commission of an offense, attempted to escape, the jury may be instructed that such attempt, if made, is a circumstance prima facie indicative of guilt: State v. James, 45-412. And see State v. Schaffer, 70-371.

An instruction that "if it be found that the defendant, after he was arrested, escaped from custody and secreted himself from lawful pursuit, or that defendant attempted to escape, this raises a strong presumption of his guilt," held erroneous, as stating the rule too strongly against defendant. An attempt to escape does not raise a strong presumption of guilt, but is a prima facie indication of guilt: State v. Arthur, 23-430.

Evidence of the good conduct of one under confinement for an offense, as tending to show him an honest man, is not admissible either to prove his good character or his innocence: State v. Hart, 29-268.

While an attempt of defendant to escape from jail while awaiting trial is admissible against him, it is improper to admit evidence of an effort on the part of the persons in such jail to escape, unless it is shown that defendant participated therein: State v. Ruby, 61-86.

The fact that a person leaves a jail through a hole made therein by some one is sufficient evidence of escape, and may be shown, as a circumstance indicating guilt, in the prosecution of the crime for which defendant was under arrest: State v. Fitzgerald, 63-268.

It seems that the fact of defendant's flight, after it becomes known to him that a crime has been committed, is admissible in evidence of the commission of the act by him only in criminal cases, and not in civil actions for damages: Hopkins v. Mathias, 66-333.

There is no distinction between an actual escape and an attempt to escape, as tending to show consciousness of guilt. The latter is equally admissible with the former as against the accused: State v. Stevens, 67-557.

Where evidence was introduced of flight by defendant after his arrest and the forfeiture of his bail, held, that it was not proper in rebuttal to show that threats were made of lynching him and that the fact of such threats was communicated to him, where it did not appear that the flight was soon enough after the threats and communication to afford any indication that he was scared by the threats into flight: State v. McDevitt, 69-549.

Intent inferred from acts: Men are presumed to intend all the natural and probable consequences of their own deliberate acts: State v. Jones, 70-505.

Where the criminality of an act depends upon the intent with which it was committed, it is not necessary that the intent be established by distinct and positive proof, but it is sufficient if it can reasonably be inferred from the facts; and it is not necessary that, when such intent is sought to be established by circumstantial evidence, the proof be so far conclusive that it is inconsistent with any other rational conclusion: State v. Macwell, 42-208.

The intent with which an act is done is seldom, if ever, capable of direct and positive proof, but is to be arrived at by such just and reasonable deductions or inferences from the acts and facts proved as the guarded judgment of a candid and cautious man would ordinarily draw therefrom. The law warrants the presumption or inference that a person intends the results or consequences which ordinarily follow from an act which he intentionally commits: State v. Gillett, 56-459.

Malice presumed: Malice is presumed from the commission of an act wrongful in itself and without just cause or excuse: State v. Decklots, 19-447.

Malice may, as at common law, be implied in case of homicide from any act unlawful and dangerous in its nature, unjustifiably committed. Therefore, held, that death caused in an unlawful attempt to procure an abortion was murder in the second degree: State v. Moore, 25-128.

There is no clearer rule of evidence than that malice may be inferred from the acts of a party: State v. Londe, 54-139.

Persons conspiring to do an unlawful act which is a trespass only will be guilty of murder only when death results in the prosecution of the design; but if the unlawful act be a felony, or more than a trespass, death resulting will be murder, although it happened outside the original design: State v. Shelledy, 8-477, 505.

When a man assaults another or uses upon another a deadly weapon in such a manner that the natural, ordinary and probable result of the use of such weapon in such manner would be to take life, the law presumes that such person so assaulting intends to take life: State v. Sullivan, 51-142; State v. Hockett, 70-442. And malice will be inferred from the deliberate, violent use of a deadly weapon: State v. Zeibart, 40-169.

Further as to malice aforethought, etc., see notes to §§ 5128-5130.

Previous declarations: Evidence of statements made by defendant before the commission of the alleged murderous assault for which he was put on trial, as to his intention to go to the place where the assault was afterwards committed and his object in going there, held admissible: State v. Driscoll, 44-65.

Other unlawful purpose: Evidence tending to show that defendant went to the place of the commission of the crime with an unlawful purpose not connected with the crime committed is not admissible: Ibid.

Subsequent acts or declarations: The guilty intent of a party may be shown by his acts, conduct and declarations, not only before or at the time of, but also after, the commission of the criminal act: State v. Lewis, 45-20.

Evidence of distinct crime to show intent: While it is generally true that a person cannot be convicted of a particular crime with which he is charged by proof of another crime, yet where proof of intent to commit one crime is necessary as an element of another crime, the commission of the first may be shown to prove the intent: State v. Golden, 49-48.

Therefore, held, that in a prosecution for burglary, proof of larceny committed after the breaking and entering was admissible to show the intent with which the breaking and entering were done: Ibid.

While the general rule is that evidence of a distinct, substantive offense cannot be admitted in proof of another offense, this rule is subject to the exception that whatever serves to establish the scienter or quo animo, or a motive for the commission of the crime charged, may be shown: State v. Kline, 54-183. And see State v. Schaffer, 70-371.

Therefore, held, that it was proper on a trial for assault with intent to commit murder by shooting, where the evidence tending to connect defendant with the crime was wholly circumstantial, to permit the prosecutrix to testify that defendant had seduced her and she was pregnant by him: State v. Kline, 54-183.

On a trial of defendant for an assault with intent to commit rape, evidence of previous assaults of like character on prosecutrix is admissible to show the intent. But evidence of like assaults on other persons having no connection with the one charged, and occurring long previous, are not admissible: State v. Walters, 45-389.

Where two persons were jointly indicted for larceny, and there was evidence that the one was keeper and the other an inmate of a house of ill-fame, held, that it was improper to charge the jury that they might consider the habits of the parties defendant at the time, whether they were living together, acting together, or together were engaged in a common purpose to commit the crime, there being no evidence but their mutual relationship to indicate concert of action: State v. Graham, 62-108.

Where two or more acts are embodied in the same transaction, each constituting an assault, and together constituting but one assault, all may properly be shown to establish the animus of defendant, although one act alone would constitute the crime: State v. Montgomery, 65-483.

Evidence of a distinct crime is admissible where it tends to connect defendant with the commission of the crime charged. Therefore, in a prosecution for burglary in breaking and entering a dwelling with intent to commit assault and battery, held, that evidence that defendant knew that the occupant had a large sum of money was admissible as tending to show that it was defendant who broke and entered: State v. Kepper, 65-745.

In a prosecution for adultery other acts of adultery between the same parties prior to the statutory period of limitation, or outside of the jurisdiction of the court, are admissible in evidence as showing the disposition of the parties, and may be taken, in connection with evidence of opportunity existing within the jurisdiction and within the statutory period, as evidence of the commission of the crime: State v. Briggs, 68-416.

In a prosecution for forgery or uttering forged paper other acts of the same character may be shown to show guilty knowledge; but it is doubtful whether the other paper as to which evidence is introduced must not be of the same character and manufacture, and precisely similar to that forged or uttered upon which the charge is based: State v. Saunders, 68-370.

But in order that knowledge may be inferred from other transactions it must appear that in such other transaction a crime was committed: Ibid.

In such cases the other forged instrument, with reference to which testimony is given, must be introduced in evidence or its absence accounted for: Ibid.; State v. Breckenridge, 67-204.

Right to be confronted with witnesses: See Const., art. 1, § 10, and notes.

In general as to the rules of evidence, see §§ 4886-5005.

As to confessions of the defendant, see § 5812 and notes.

As to reasonable doubt, burden of proof, evidence of good character, and circumstantial evidence, see notes to § 5813.

The first part of this section is similar to § 5811.

5955. In prosecutions against railways. 4557. In a prosecution against a railway company for obstructing a highway or any private way, proof that any such way is in an unsafe condition, or that it is inconvenient for travel at the place of its intersection with such railway, shall be presumptive evidence that such company has obstructed such way. [14 G. A., ch. 111, § 6.]

5956. Rape. 4558. Proof of actual penetration into the body is sufficient to sustain an indictment for rape. [R., § 4101; C., '51, § 2997.]

In a prosecution for rape it is not necessary that actual penetration be shown by the testimony of the prosecutrix herself. But the jury may say whether, from all the circumstances, the requisite facts are shown to establish the commission of the crime: State v. Tarr, 28-397.

5957. Accomplice. 4559. A conviction cannot be had upon the testimony of an accomplice, unless he be corroborated by such other evidence as shall tend to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense; and the corroboration is not sufficient if it merely show the commission of the offense or the circumstances thereof. [R., § 4102; C., '51, § 2998.]

Who deemed accomplice: A detective who enters into an arrangement for the commission of a crime with the intention, from the beginning, of acting as a detective to ferret out and expose it, and who acts throughout with that motive, is not an accomplice: State v. McKean, 36-343.

One who receives stolen goods is not an accomplice in the crime of burglary committed at the time the goods are stolen: State v. Hayden, 45-11.

Where it appeared that a person who was guilty of breaking into and setting fire to a jail had notified another to be present, and such other person was near by and saw defendant enter the jail, but gave no assistance or advice, and did not know that the jail had been set on fire when he left, held, that he was not sufficiently an accomplice to render it necessary that his evidence be corroborated to warrant a conviction: State v. Reader, 60-527.

Testimony of accomplice: An accomplice is a competent witness for the prosecution: State v. Hudson, 50-157.

It is not a ground for rejecting the testimony of an accomplice that it has not been shown that he is less guilty than the defendant, or that no order of the court has been made that he should be received as a witness. (Overruling Ray v. State, 1 G. Gr., 316): Ibid.

The order of the introduction of testimony being in the discretion of the prosecution under the approval of the court, it is not necessary that evidence connecting defendant with the crime shall be introduced before the testimony of the accomplice is received: Ibid.

Acts and declarations of co-conspirators or accomplices: The acts and declarations of one of two or more persons charged with a conspiracy in the commission of a crime are not admissible as against the others unless a foundation is first laid sufficient, in the opinion of the court, to establish prima facie the fact of conspiracy, or proper to be laid before the jury to establish such fact: State v. Nash, 7-347, 384.

Admissions of a co-conspirator made after the common enterprise is at an end are not admissible: State v. Arnold, 48-566.

Acts and declarations of an accomplice while engaged with defendant in furthering, aiding and abetting a common design are receivable in evidence against him: State v. Hudson, 50-157.

Where two defendants were jointly indicted for horse-stealing, held that, upon the trial of one, the state could prove that the other person conducted a witness to the horses, for the purpose of showing when and how the horses were found, without first showing the existence of a joint purpose or conspiracy: State v. Bowers, 17-46.

Where several defendants were jointly indicted for murder, held, that it was error to admit, against one of them, declarations of co-defendants made after the commission of the crime: State v. Westfall, 49-328; State v. Smith, 54-656.

Upon the trial of one of several co-defendants jointly indicted for burglary, held, that acts and conversations of the other defendants tending to establish familiar relations and association of all the parties, and that they were in company at about the time of the commission of the crime, were admissible for the purpose of connecting defendant with the commission of the crime: State v. Stevens, 67-557.

Corroboration of evidence of accomplice: In case of a prosecution for concealing stolen property, the corroboration required of the evidence of an accomplice must go not merely to the fact of concealment, but also to the fact that the property was stolen: Upton v. State, 5-465.

The corroborating evidence must tend to connect defendant with the commission of the crime: Upton v. State, 5-465; State v. Tulley, 18-88; State v. Clemens, 38-257.

Corroborating evidence is not sufficient which merely shows the commission of the offense and the circumstances thereof without connecting defendant therewith. Therefore, held, that the mere proof that defendant was seen drunk in company with a burglar, at or near the time and place when and where the burglary was committed, was not sufficient corroborating evidence to warrant his conviction: State v. Willis, 9-582.

The corroboration need not be by the testimony of one credible witness; it may be circumstantial: State v. Stanley, 48-231.

The corroboration need not be founded upon facts directly connecting defendant with the offense. It may be founded upon circumstantial evidence: State v. Miller, 65-60.

Where the testimony of an accomplice is corroborated by other witnesses in any material point it is sufficient to convict: State v. Schlagel, 19-169.

5953. Of female in rape or seduction. 4560. The defendant in a prosecution for a rape, or for enticing or taking away an unmarried female of previously chaste character for the purpose of prostitution, or aiding or assisting therein, or for seducing and debauching any unmarried woman of previously chaste character, cannot be convicted upon the testimony of the person injured, unless she be corroborated by other evidence tending to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense. [R., § 4105; C., § 2999.]

Corroborating evidence; nature of: The corroborating evidence must tend to connect defendant with the commission of the crime: State v. Willis, 9-582; Upton v. State, 5-405; State v. Tulley, 18-88; State v. Clem-

It is not necessary that the accomplice be corroborated in every material fact. If the jury are satisfied that he speaks the truth in some material part of his testimony, in which he is confirmed by unimpeachable evidence, this may be ground for them to believe that he also speaks the truth in other parts as to which there may be no corroboration: State v. Allen, 57-431; State v. Hennessy, 55-299.

It is not necessary that the accomplice be corroborated as to the commission of the crime if he is corroborated in the material facts as to the preparation for its commission, etc.: State v. Hennessy, 55-299.

Whether in a particular case there is any corroborating evidence is a question for the court to determine, but it is for the jury to weigh such evidence and its sufficiency: State v. Miller, 65-60; State v. Dietz, 67-220.

It is the province of the jury to determine whether the corroboration is sufficient: State v. Allen, 57-431.

The fact that witnesses who might have been called to contradict the accomplice, if his testimony were false, were not called, should not be considered as corroborating such testimony: State v. Hull, 26-292.

Apparently without reference to any statutory provision, held, that the testimony of one accomplice would not constitute a sufficient corroboration of that of another to warrant conviction without other evidence: Johnson v. State, 4 G. Gr., 65.

In a prosecution for having counterfeit coin in possession with intent to pass, held, that the testimony of an accomplice as to such possession and intent was not sufficiently corroborated by evidence as to former acts of passing counterfeit money: State v. Pepper, 11-347.

The fact that the defendant and a person who has been convicted of crime were seen conversing together four or five hours before the commission of the crime, held not sufficient corroboration of the testimony of such accomplice to warrant the defendant's conviction: State v. Mikesell, 70-176.

In particular cases, held, that the testimony of an accomplice was not sufficiently corroborated to warrant conviction thereon: State v. Graff, 47-384; State v. Moran, 34-453.

The evidence in particular cases held sufficiently corroborative of the testimony of an accomplice to sustain a conviction: State v. Thornton, 26-79; State v. Wart, 51-587; State v. Dietz, 67-220.

As to corroboration necessary in cases of rape, seduction, and the like, see following section and notes.

ers, 38-257. And see notes to preceding section.

In cases of rape: In a prosecution for rape the fact that the crime has been committed by some one may be established by the testimony of the injured party alone; but to ascertain the guilty party it is necessary that the testimony of the injured party be corroborated by other evidence tending to connect defendant with the crime: State v. McLaughlin, 44-82.

The sufficiency of the corroborating evidence in a prosecution for rape is properly a question for the jury: Ibid.

Evidence that prosecutrix was bruised, etc., and made complaint, would not tend to connect defendant with the commission of the offense, and therefore should not be considered as tending to corroborate the testimony of prosecutrix: State v. Stowell, 60-535.

The corroboration in prosecutions for rape in particular circumstances, held sufficient: State v. Comstock, 46-265; State v. Mitchell, 68-116.

Assault with intent to commit rape: The corroborating testimony in a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, held insufficient in a particular case: State v. Warner, 25-200.

Whether the provisions of this section are applicable in a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, quære: State v. McIntire, 66-339.

In cases of seduction: The corroborating evidence should not be confined to the act of illicit intercourse alone, but facts showing intimacy, opportunity and inducement may be shown for that purpose: Andre v. State, 5-389.

Under this section, proof of courtship and attendant circumstances may amount to sufficient corroboration: State v. Wells, 48-671; State v. Curran, 51-112; Stevenson v. Belknap, 6-97, 103.

It is not necessary that there be specific corroboration as to the employment of seductive arts or as to the act. The fact that the parties kept company together and acted as lovers usually do, and other circumstances, may be sufficient corroboration: State v. McClintic, 73-663.

But the mere proof of acquaintance and opportunity are not sufficient corroboration of the charge of seduction. The corroborating evidence must be such as to connect defendant with the commission of the offense: State

v. Painter, 50-317; State v. Smith, 54-743; State v. Arah, 55-258.

Evidence of such relations and acquaintance between the parties as would naturally result from the fact of their being members of the same family, held not sufficient evidence in corroboration: State v. Richards, 72-17.

The corroboration in prosecutions for seduction, held sufficient in particular cases: State v. Shean, 32-88; State v. Leatherton, 60-175; State v. Fitzgerald, 63-268.

It is erroneous in a prosecution for seduction to admit a child, claimed to be the result of such seduction, to be shown to the jury, and instruct them that they may consider a resemblance between the child and the defendant as evidence in corroboration of the testimony of the prosecutrix (explaining Stumm v. Hummell, 39-478): State v. Danforth, 48-43.

But this rule is not applicable in case of a child two years old; and held, in a bastardy case, that a child of that age might be shown to the jury, and its family resemblance, if any, to defendant considered by them as tending to prove that defendant was its father: State v. Smith, 54-104.

A fact testified to by the prosecutrix alone cannot be considered as sufficient corroboration of her other testimony: State v. Kingsley, 39-439.

The court is to determine whether evidence is corroborative, that is, whether it is competent, and the jury is to pass upon the credibility of the corroborating witnesses and the weight of their testimony. Instruction to the effect that the jury were to determine whether the testimony of the prosecutrix was sufficiently corroborated, etc., held correct: State v. Bell, 49-440.

It is a question for the court to determine whether, in a prosecution for incest, and in like cases, there is any corroborating evidence. But it is for the jury to weigh and determine the effect of such evidence and its sufficiency: State v. Miller, 65-60.

The rule requiring corroboration of the testimony of the injured party, under this section, is not applicable in bastardy proceedings to charge the putative father with the support of the child: State v. McGlothlen, 56-544.

See, further, as to corroboration in cases of seduction, § 5166 and notes.

5959. Subpœnas by magistrate. 4561. A magistrate, in any criminal proceeding before him, may issue subpœnas subscribed by him with his name of office for witnesses within the state in behalf of either party thereto. [R., § 4950; C., '51, § 3168.]

5960. By clerk. 4562. The clerk of the court in which any criminal case is pending must, at all times, upon the application of the defendant or his attorney, issue as many blank subpœnas under the seal of the court, subscribed by him, for witnesses within the state, as may be required by the defendant. He must also issue subpœnas, on the part of the state, when required. [R., § 4951; C., '51, § 3170.]

5961. Who to serve. 4563. A peace officer must serve within his town or county, as the case may be, any subpœna delivered to him for service on the part of either the state or defendant, and must make a written return of the service subscribed by him and state the time and place of service, without delay. A subpœna may, however, be served by any other person. [R., § 4952; C., '51, § 3171.]

5962. How. 4564. The service of a subpoena must be by delivering a copy and showing the original to the witness personally. [R., § 4953; C., '51, § 3172.]

5963. May break door. 4565. If a witness conceal himself to avoid the service of a subpoena, the officer may break open doors or windows for the purpose of making service. [R., § 4954; C., '51, § 3176.]

5964. Disobedience. 4566. Disobedience to a subpoena, or refusal to be sworn, or to answer as a witness, may be punished by the court or magistrate as a contempt. [R., § 4955; C., '51, § 3174.]

5965. Witness, when liable. 4567. A witness wilfully disobeying a subpoena in a criminal case without good cause, shall be liable to the party injured for the amount of the damages sustained by such party. [R., § 4956; C., '51, § 3175.]

5966. Forfeiture of bond. 4568. The undertakings of witnesses in criminal cases, may be forfeited and enforced like the undertaking of bail. [R., § 4957.]

5967. Subpoena runs how far. 4569. A subpoena in a criminal case, runs into any part of the state. [R., § 4958.]

5968. In impeachment. 4570. In cases of impeachment, subpoenas may be issued on behalf of either party by the secretary of the senate. [R., § 4959.]

5969. Depositions. 4571. A defendant in a criminal case, either after preliminary information, indictment, or information, may examine witnesses conditionally or on commission, in the same manner and with like effect as in civil actions. [R., § 4960.]

Depositions may be used on behalf of defendant in criminal trials, but not on behalf of the state (Const., art. 1, § 10): State v. Collins, 32-36.

Where a deposition has been taken on behalf of the prisoner and filed in court, it is not error to allow the prosecuting attorney to read the same in evidence, it not appearing that the prisoner sought to withdraw it from the files before the trial of the case: Nash v. State, 2 G. Gr., 286.

5970. Perpetuating testimony. 4572. A person apprehensive of a criminal prosecution, may perpetuate testimony in his favor, in the same manner, and with like effect, as it may be done in apprehension of any civil action. [R., § 4961.]

CHAPTER 38.

OF BAIL, UPON BEING HELD TO ANSWER BEFORE INDICTMENT.

5971. Who may take. 4573. When the defendant has been held to answer for any bailable offense, bail must be taken by the magistrate who held him to answer, or by any judge of the supreme, district, [or circuit] courts, or by the court to which the papers on the preliminary examination are to be returned by the magistrate who held him to answer, or by the clerk of such court, or by any magistrate of the county in which the offense is triable. [R., § 4967; C., '51, §§ 3216-18.]

See § 5438 and Const., art. 1, § 12, and notes.

5972. How given. 4574. Bail is put in by a written undertaking, executed by one or more sufficient sureties (with or without the defendant, in the discretion of the court, clerk, or magistrate), acknowledged before, and accepted by, the court, clerk, or magistrate taking the same, and may be, substantially, in the following form:

COUNTY OF ———.

An order having been made on the ——— day of ———, A. D. 18—, by A. B., a justice of the peace of the township of ——— (or as the case may be), that C. D. be held to answer upon a charge of (stating briefly the nature of the offense), upon which he has been duly admitted to bail, in the sum of ——— dollars.

We, E. F. (stating his place of residence and occupation), and G. H., of (stating his place of residence and occupation), hereby undertake that the said C. D. shall appear at the district court of the county of ———, at the next term thereof, and answer said charge, and abide the orders and judgment of said court, and not depart without leave of the same, or if he fail to perform either of these conditions, that we will pay to the state of Iowa the sum of ——— dollars (inserting the sum in which the defendant is admitted to bail).

E. F.
G. H.

Acknowledged before, and accepted by me as ———, in the township of ———, in the county of ———, this ——— day of ———, A. D. 18—.

I. J., Justice of the Peace,
(or as the case may be.)

[R., § 4968; C., '51, § 3219.]

Execution of bond: The judge of the court has power to certify to the acknowledgment of the sureties of the bond, made in open court: State v. Elgin, 11-216.

The voluntary execution of a bail bond does not estop the obligors from denying the jurisdiction of the magistrate who takes it in a case where the proceedings in which it is taken are without authority: State v. Hufford, 28-391.

The bond provided for on appeal from conviction before a justice of the peace is for the appearance of defendant, and not that he will pay the amount adjudged against him on appeal: State v. Beneke, 9-203.

Acceptance of bond: Before the recognition can have any force it must appear that it was accepted as a valid undertaking by a court or magistrate of competent authority: State v. Carr, 4-289.

A failure by the clerk to indorse the bond as "accepted" will not affect the right of the state to recover thereon: State v. Emily, 24-24.

Where a prisoner has been discharged upon the filing of a bond, the acceptance by the officer will be conclusively presumed; no written approval thereon is necessary to its validity: State v. Wright, 37-523.

Presumptions: A bail bond given upon commitment by a magistrate is prima facie evidence that the magistrate made a finding that a public offense had been committed (§ 5627), and the execution of the bond and its acceptance by the magistrate are presumptive evidence that it was taken and received in place of the body of the accused: State v. Patterson, 23-575.

Signature: It is not essential that defendant should sign the bond, and manifest clerical errors therein will be disregarded: Ibid.

For what sureties liable: Sureties on a bond are not only bound for the appearance of the accused at the time and place mentioned therein, but also that he shall abide the order and judgment of the court and not depart without leave: State v. Brown, 16-314.

A failure to hold the term at which defendant is held to appear will not release his sureties from their obligation to have him at the next term, although no order is made in the case at the term mentioned in the bond. See § 215: Ibid.; State v. Ryan, 23-406.

That defendant held to answer for one crime is indicted for a higher crime does not release the sureties on his bond: State v. Bryant, 55-451.

Although a bond which is not authorized by statute, as where it is accepted by a magistrate who has no authority to take bail, will not become a lien upon the property of the obligors, as provided in § 6004, yet if voluntarily executed at the request and for the benefit of the accused, and under it he has been discharged from custody, the sureties are liable thereon: State v. Cannon, 34-322.

Surrender of defendant by sureties: A surety is not released by a surrender of the prisoner to the sheriff, unless in the manner pointed out by § 5991: State v. Tieman, 39-474.

See, further, as applicable to this section, notes to §§ 5982-6004.

5973. Qualifications of bail. 4575. The qualifications of bail are as follows:

1. Such bail must be a resident and householder, or freeholder, within the state;
2. Such bail must be worth the amount specified in the undertaking, exclusive of property exempt from execution; but the court, clerk, or magistrate taking the bail, may allow more than one bail to justify severally in amounts less than that expressed in the undertaking, if the whole justification be equivalent to one sufficient bail. [R., § 4960; C., '51, § 3220.]

5974. Justification. 4576. The bail must in all cases justify, by affidavit taken before the court, clerk, or magistrate, as the case may be, taking such bail, and the affidavit must state that they each possess the qualifications prescribed in the last section. [R., § 4970; C., '51, § 3221.]

Before an accused held to bail can demand a discharge upon tendering bond and surety, his bail must justify as here required; but a failure to require such justification will not render the bond void nor discharge the sureties: State v. Emily, 24-24; State v. Wells, 36-238.

See, further, notes to § 5972.

5975. Examination as to sufficiency. 4577. The district [county] attorney, or the court, clerk, or magistrate, as the case may be, may thereupon further examine the bail upon oath, concerning their sufficiency, in such manner as may be deemed proper. [R., § 4971; C., '51, § 3222.]

5976. Other testimony. 4578. The court, clerk, or magistrate, may also receive other testimony, either for or against the sufficiency of the bail. [R., § 4972; C., '51, § 3223.]

5977. Order. 4579. When the examination is closed, the court, clerk, or magistrate, must make an order, either allowing or disallowing the bail, and must forthwith cause the same, with the affidavits of justification, and the undertaking of bail, to be filed with the clerk of the court to which the papers on the preliminary examination are required to be sent. [R., § 4073; C., '51, § 3224.]

The clerk should file the bond, and while, if it should appear that it was deposited with the clerk before the forfeiture was declared, an omission to mark it as filed might be remedied by subsequent filing, yet the fact that it was so deposited before forfeiture should be averred and proved, otherwise the bond should not be admitted in evidence: State v. Klingman, 14-404.

Until the bail bond is before the court the forfeiture thereof cannot be entered: Ibid.

5978. Order of discharge. 4580. Upon the allowance of the bail and the execution of the undertaking, the court, clerk, or magistrate, must make an order, signed with his name of office, for the discharge of the defendant, to the following effect:

THE STATE OF IOWA,
To the Sheriff of the County of —:

C. D., who is detained by you on commitment, to answer a charge for the offense of (here designate it generally), having given sufficient bail to answer the same, you are commanded forthwith to discharge him from custody.

Dated at —, in the township of —, in the county of —, this — day of —, A. D. 18—.

[R., § 4974; C., '51, § 3225.]

K. L., Justice of the Peace,
(or as the case may be.)

5979. Disallowed. 4581. If the bail be disallowed, the defendant must be detained in custody until other bail be put in and justify. [R., § 4975; C., '51, § 3226.]

CHAPTER 39.

OF BAIL UPON AN INDICTMENT BEFORE CONVICTION.

5980. For misdemeanor. 4582. When the offense charged in the indictment is a misdemeanor, the officer serving the bench warrant, if therein required, must take the defendant before a magistrate in the county in which it was issued, or in which he is arrested, or before the clerk of the district court of either of such counties, for the purpose of giving bail. [R., § 4976; C., '51, § 3227.]

5981. Felony. 4583. If the offense charged in the indictment be a felony, the officer arresting the defendant must deliver him into custody according to the command of the warrant. [R., § 4977; C., '51, § 3228.]

5982. By whom taken. 4584. When the defendant is so delivered into custody, if the felony charged be bailable, bail must be taken by that court, or the clerk of that court, or by any magistrate in the same county. [R., § 4978; C., '51, § 3229.]

The clerk has no power to take bail under this section in vacation: State v. Carothers, 11-273.

The bond, under the statute, should be executed and acknowledged before the clerk of the district court, and the sureties should justify before him, but these are directory matters; and where the bond has been accepted, it will be valid though it was executed and the sureties qualified before the clerk of the court in another county, and though it was not acknowledged at all. The execution, its acceptance, the discharge of the prisoner thereon, and his failure to appear according to its terms, are the essential matters. It is not necessary to call the sureties and have their default entered at the time the defendant fails to appear: State v. Wells, 36-238.

5983. Form of undertaking. 4585. The bail must be put in by a written undertaking, executed by one sufficient surety, with or without the defendant, in the discretion of the court, clerk, or magistrate, acknowledged before and accepted by the court, clerk, or magistrate taking the same, and may be substantially in the following form:

COUNTY OF ———.

An indictment having been found in the district court of the county of ———, on the ——— day of ———, A. D. 18—, charging A. B. with the crime of (designating it as in the bench warrant), and he having been duly admitted to bail in the sum of ——— dollars:

We, A. B., of (stating his place of residence and occupation), and C. D., of (stating his place of residence and occupation), and E. F., of (stating his place of residence and occupation), hereby undertake that the said A. B. shall appear and answer the said indictment, and abide the orders and judgment of said court, and not depart without leave of the same, or if he fail to perform either of these conditions, that he will pay to the state of Iowa the sum of ——— dollars (inserting the sum in which the defendant is admitted to bail).

A. B.

C. D.

E. F.

Acknowledged before and accepted by me, at ———, in the township of ———, in the county of ——— this ——— day of ———, A. D. 18—.

G. H., Justice of the Peace,
(or as the case may be.)

[R., § 4979.]

If the bond is deposited with the clerk of the proper court as a record the fact that it is not marked filed is immaterial: State v. Merrihew, 47-112, 120.

The form of bond here given is substantially sufficient for the bond required upon change of venue, as provided in § 5770: Ibid., 119, 121.

The clerk of the court to which a change of venue is granted has power to take a recognizance for the appearance of the prisoner: Ibid.

The provisions of § 5770 as to giving a new bond upon change of venue, for appearance in the court to which the case is changed, are merely directory, and do not operate to release the sureties on the original bail bond, who are still responsible for defendant's appearance: State v. Brown, 16-314.

The description of the crime in the bail bond need not be so particular as in an indictment.

Where it was specified merely as "seduction" it was held sufficient: State v. Marshall, 21-143.

It is not necessary that the bond refer to the offense except in general terms. A description of the crime as "larceny in the night-time," held sufficient: State v. Merrihew, 47-112.

An averment of the petition on a bail bond alleging that it was taken in writing in such manner and form as the law provides and directs, held sufficient to show that the requirements of the law applicable to such cases were complied with: Shelby County v. Simmonds, 33-345.

The duty of the sureties is to have their principal ready to answer the judgment of the court until they have surrendered him as is provided by law or until the judgment is satisfied: State v. Stewart, 74-336.

5984. Provisions of previous chapter apply. 4586. The provisions of the preceding chapter, subsequent to the form of the undertaking, relative to the qualifications of bail, the justification, the examination, receiving other testimony against the sufficiency, and the order of allowance or disallowance thereof, and the filing of the undertaking with the affidavits, and all proceedings incidental thereto, in the cases therein provided for, apply also to the cases provided for in this chapter. [R., § 4980.]

CHAPTER 40.

OF BAIL UPON AN APPEAL TO THE SUPREME COURT, AFTER CONVICTION.

5985. When allowed. 4587. After conviction upon an appeal to the supreme court, the defendant must be admitted to bail as follows:

1. If the appeal be from a judgment imposing a fine, upon the undertaking of bail that he will pay the same, or such part of it as the supreme court may direct, and in all respects abide the orders and the judgment of the supreme court upon the appeal;

2. If the appeal be from a judgment of imprisonment, upon the undertaking of bail that he will surrender himself in execution of the judgment and direction of the supreme court, and in all respects abide the orders and judgment of the supreme court upon the appeal. The bail may be taken, either by the court where the judgment was rendered, or the judge thereof, or the district court of the county in which he is imprisoned, or the judge thereof, [or the judge of the circuit court of either of such counties] or by the supreme court, or a judge thereof, or by the clerk of either of such courts. [R., §§ 4966, 4981.]

After the bail required on appeal has been given and the appeal prosecuted, it is too late to complain of the amount of bail required: State v. Wells, 46-662.

Failure of the court in rendering judgment to fix the bail required pending appeal, as required by § 5896, will not entitle defendant to discharge on habeas corpus. His only remedy in such proceeding will be to have the amount of such bail fixed: Murphy v. McMillan, 59-515

5986. Qualifications of. 4588. The bail must possess the qualifications, must justify, and must be put in and taken in the manner prescribed in chapter thirty-eight of this title, and the same proceedings had in all respects, as nearly as applicable, varying to suit the case, and the undertaking of the bail must be, in effect, as prescribed by the preceding section. [R., § 4982.]

CHAPTER 41.

OF DEPOSIT OF MONEY INSTEAD OF BAIL.

5987. With whom and effect. 4589. The defendant, at any time after an order admitting him to bail, instead of giving bail, may deposit with the clerk of the district court to which the undertaking, in case of bail, is required to be sent, the sum mentioned in the order, and upon delivering to the officer in whose custody he is, a certificate under seal from said clerk of the deposit, he must be discharged from custody. [R., § 4983; C., '51, § 3232.]

5988. After giving bail. 4590. If the defendant has given bail, he may, at any time before the forfeiture of the undertaking, in like manner deposit the sum mentioned in the undertaking, and upon the deposit being made the bail shall be exonerated. [R., § 4984; C., '51, § 3233.]

5989. Bail after deposit of money. 4591. If money be deposited as provided in the last section, bail may be given in the same manner as if it had been originally given upon the order for admission to bail at any time before the forfeiture of the deposit. The court or magistrate before whom the bail is taken shall thereupon direct in the order of allowance, that the money deposited be refunded by the clerk to the defendant, and it shall be refunded accordingly. [R., § 4985; C., '51, § 3234.]

5990. Money; how applied. 4592. When money has been deposited, if it remain on deposit at the time of a judgment against the defendant, the clerk shall, under the direction of the court, apply the money in satisfaction of so much of the judgment as requires the payment of money, and after paying the same shall refund the surplus, if any, to the defendant, unless an appeal be taken to the supreme court, and bail put in, in which case the deposit shall be returned to the defendant. [R., § 4986; C., '51, § 3235.]

OF SURRENDER OF THE DEFENDANT.

5991. When and how done. 4593. At any time before the forfeiture of their undertaking, the bail may surrender the defendant in their exoneration, or he may surrender himself to the officer to whose custody he was committed at the time of giving bail, in the following manner:

1. A certified copy of the undertaking of bail must be delivered to the officer, who shall detain the defendant in his custody thereon as upon a commitment, and must, by a certificate in writing, acknowledge the surrender;

2. Upon the undertaking and the certificate of the officer, the district court in which the indictment is pending, or was tried, at the next term after the surrender, or, if during term time, at the same term, and upon three clear days' notice thereof to the district [county] attorney, with a copy of the undertaking and certificate, may order the bail to be exonerated. [R., § 4987; C., '51, § 3236.]

A surety is not released by a surrender of the prisoner to the sheriff, unless in the manner here pointed out: State v. Tieman, 39-474.

That the bail presented to the sheriff a certified copy of the bond, and in writing directed him to arrest defendant, held not to impose any duty upon the sheriff, or be a surrender of defendant as here contemplated: State v. Kramer, 50-582.

The failure or refusal of the sheriff to arrest the defendant will not exonerate the surety. It is the latter's duty to see that defendant is arrested, and if he fail in that duty he is liable on the bond: Ibid.

Sureties on the bail bond are not released by the fact that a sheriff does not at once serve warrant of commitment when it comes into his hands for service: State v. Stewart, 74-336.

The fact that a person released on bail voluntarily submits to being taken in custody by the surety on his bail, and then brings action of habeas corpus to secure release from such restraint with the sole purpose of testing the constitutionality of the statute under which he is arrested, will not prevent the court from trying the habeas corpus proceeding and determining the question at issue: Brown v. Duffus, 63-193.

The fact that a person arrested has previously procured his sureties to go his bail under a statute the validity of which he proposes to test will estop him from in any way rendering them liable by contesting the validity of such statute, but would not prevent his contesting the validity for the purpose of releasing them entirely from liability: Ibid.

As to effect of surrender or arrest of defendant before judgment against the bail, see § 5998 and notes.

As to recommitment of defendant by the court, see § 5999 and notes.

5992. Arrest by bail. 4594. For the purpose of surrendering the defendant, the bail, at any time before they are finally charged, and at any place within the state, may themselves arrest him, or by a written authority indorsed on a certified copy of the undertaking may empower any person of suitable age and discretion to do so. [R., § 4988; C., '51, § 3237.]

5993. On surrender, money returned. 4595. If money has been deposited instead of bail, and the defendant, at any time before the forfeiture thereof, shall surrender himself to the officer to whom the commitment was made, or directed in the manner prescribed in this chapter, the court in which the indictment is pending, or was tried, at the next term after the surrender, or, if during the term, at the same term, must order a return of the deposit to the defendant, upon producing the certificate of the officer showing the surrender, and upon three clear days' notice to the district [county] attorney, with a copy of the certificate. [R., § 4989; C., '51, § 3238.]

OF FORFEITURE OF THE UNDERTAKING OF BAIL, OR DEPOSIT OF MONEY.

5994. How forfeited. 4596. If the defendant fail to appear for arraignment, trial, or judgment, or at any other time when his personal appearance in court may be lawfully required, or to surrender himself in execution of the judgment, the court must direct an entry of such failure to be made on the record, and the undertaking of his bail, or the money deposited instead of bail, as the case may be, is thereupon forfeited. [R., § 4990.]

What constitutes forfeiture: Failure of a defendant, indicted for misdemeanor, to appear in person at the trial, or at the rendition of verdict, or at the sentence, will not constitute forfeiture of his bond if he makes appearance by counsel and thereby waives his personal presence: State v. Conneham, 57-351.

Failure of defendant to appear at the time for challenging the grand jury does not constitute a default amounting to a forfeiture of his bond: State v. Klingman, 14-404; Ringgold County v. Ross, 40-176.

A court will not be justified in holding bail, who has become responsible for the appearance of an accused to answer a certain charge, also responsible for his appearance to answer another and different charge, even in the same court: State v. Brown, 16-314.

A bond to appear to answer the indictment, and not depart without leave of court, and obey all orders of the court, is forfeited by failure of accused to surrender himself, upon being called, in satisfaction of the judgment, after he has appeared and pleaded guilty: State v. Kraner, 50-575.

A bail bond given upon being bound over by a magistrate to appear at the district court to answer to the charge of manslaughter is not rendered invalid by the fact that the accused is subsequently indicted for murder instead of manslaughter. The obligation of the bond is "to abide the judgment and order of the court and not to depart without leave of the same." State v. Bryant, 55-451.

Entry of forfeiture: A forfeiture of the bail bond cannot be entered until the bond is before the court: State v. Klingman, 14-404.

The forfeiture need not be taken on the very day on which accused was required to appear, but may be taken on any subsequent day of that or a succeeding term, unless defendant has been surrendered or discharged. It is not necessary that the accused or his bail have notice of the time when forfeiture will be claimed: State v. Brown, 16-314.

If a forfeiture of bail is not entered at the first term it will be presumed that the cause was continued by operation of law: State v. Merrihew, 47-112, 119.

One entry of default against defendants jointly indicted, who have both failed to appear, is sufficient although they have given separate bonds: State v. Lighton, 4 G. Gr., 278.

In a case where defendant was bound to appear before a justice, it was held that a default should not have been entered against him until he was formally called, and that the entry of default by the justice not showing that defendant was called, no breach of the bond was shown; but the record of the justice was held conclusive as to the appearance or non-appearance of defendant, and not to be contradicted by extrinsic evidence: State v. Gorley, 2-52.

At the time of rendering sentence for a misdemeanor the court may enter default of defendant for not appearing to submit to the judgment and thereupon declare forfeiture of the bail bond: State v. Howorth, 70-157.

The court may at any time require one convicted to appear and surrender himself or perform the judgment, and upon failure to do so default may be entered against him. He may be required to appear at any term subsequent to the term at which he is bound to appear according to the language of the bond, without notice to him or his sureties, and his appearance to answer the charge does not discharge the sureties. It will be presumed, if the forfeiture was taken at a subsequent term, that the cause was continued by operation of law to the term when default was taken: State v. Baldwin, 78-737.

A record of default cannot be varied by parol evidence: State v. Clemons, 9-534.

The record made by the court of the forfeiture of a bail bond by failure of the person bound to appear is conclusive evidence of the forfeiture, and a mere denial of the breach of the bond raises no issue: State v. Bryant, 55-451.

Order of forfeiture: An order declaring a bail bond forfeited, and taxing costs to defendant, is a final judgment in such sense that an appeal may be taken therefrom: State v. Connehan, 57-351.

The order of forfeiture is conclusive, and the sureties cannot call into question the facts upon which it is based: State v. Baldwin, 78-737.

5995. Discharge of. 4597. If, before the final adjournment of the court for the term, the defendant appear and satisfactorily excuse his failure, the court may direct an entry to be made on the record, that the forfeiture of the undertaking or deposit be discharged. [R., § 4991.]

Where, after default upon the bond is entered, the defendant is arrested upon a bench warrant and held for trial, the forfeiture of the bond is not thereby discharged: State v. Emily, 24-24.

5996. When forfeiture is not discharged. 4598. If the forfeiture is not discharged, the district [county] attorney may, at any time after the adjournment of the court for the term, proceed by civil action only upon the undertaking of the bail. [R., § 4992.]

5997. Action on undertaking. 4599. The action on the undertaking must be in the court in which the defendant was or would have been required to appear by the undertaking; provided, that when the undertaking requires the defendant to appear before a justice of the peace or a court of limited jurisdiction, or before an examining magistrate, it shall be the duty of said justice, or court, or examining magistrate, upon the forfeiture of the undertaking and within thirty days thereafter, to file the same, together with a copy of all his official entries in relation thereto, in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county; and thereupon it shall be the duty of the district [county] attorney to proceed to collect the same by a civil action in the district court of said county, or any other court of said county having jurisdiction equal to the penalty of said bond. [R., § 4993; 11 G. A., ch. 12.]

Suit on the bond: Action upon a bail bond given for appearance upon a change of venue should be brought in the county to which the venue is changed: Decatur County v. Maxwell, 26-398.

Suit for the penalty on the bail bond may be brought in the name of the county. It has the right to sue as being the trustee of an express trust: Shelby County v. Simmonds, 33-345.

Where a bond is given for the appearance of the defendant to answer an indictment, and afterward a change of venue is granted, on his application, to another county, and he fails to appear in the action in the county to which the change is granted, action on the bond for such failure to appear should be brought in the latter county: Lucas County v. Wilson, 59-354.

Under Rev., § 4993 (which did not contain the provisos of this section), held, that a bond for the appearance of a defendant before a magistrate might be sued on in the district court, and that the section was intended to apply only to actions on bail bonds given in that court: State v. Emerson, 16-206.

Under the provisions of Code of '51, which allowed an action of scire facias to be brought upon a bail bond, held, that an action of detinue would nevertheless lie as at common law: State v. Gorley, 2-52.

See, further, notes to §§ 5972, 5983.

Measure of damages: Upon forfeiture of a bail bond when the punishment is a fine, the measure of damages is not the amount of the fine and costs, but the penalty named in the bond: State v. Hirronemus, 50-545.

Disposition of forfeiture: Under the provisions of §§ 4606 and 2994, that fines and forfeitures shall go into the treasury of the county where the same are collected for the benefit of the school fund, the county in which the fine is collected is deemed to be the county in which judgment therefor is rendered and execution issued, and not the county in which the execution may be enforced against defendant's property: Pottawattamie County v. Carroll County, 67-456. See, also, Const., art. 9, § 4.

The fact that a fine or forfeiture is to go into the county treasury for the benefit of the school fund does not make the county such party to an action therefor brought by the state as to entitle defendant to a change of venue: State v. Merrihew, 47-112.

5998. Surrender before judgment; effect. 4600. If, before judgment is entered against the bail, the defendant be surrendered or arrested, the court may, in its discretion, remit the whole or any part of the sum specified in the undertaking. [R., § 4994.]

Arrest of defendant after forfeiture: Where, after default upon the bond is entered, the defendant is arrested upon a bench warrant and held for trial, the forfeiture of the bond is not thereby discharged: State v. Emily, 24-24.

If there is no surrender or arrest of defendant the court has no authority to grant relief from the forfeiture: State v. Scott, 20-63.

Death of principal in the bond two years after its forfeiture, held not a defense to an action thereon against the surety: Ibid.

Detention in another jurisdiction: The arrest and detention in another county of a prisoner who is under bond for appearance does not have the effect to release his sureties, in the absence of a showing by them that proper steps were taken to secure his production by the state at the proper time: State v. Merrihew, 47-112, 115.

The fact that defendant is in the military service of the United States or another state will not excuse the sureties for his non-appearance: State v. Scott, 20-63.

Discretion of the court: The granting of relief to the sureties upon the surrender or arrest of the defendant, as here provided, is in the discretion of the court: Ibid.

The discretion conferred on the court by this section will not be interfered with on appeal unless abuse of discretion is shown: State v. Kraner, 50-575; State v. Kraner, 50-582.

It would require a very strong showing of abuse to justify the supreme court in interfering with such discretion: State v. Hirronemus, 50-545.

CHAPTER 44.

OF THE RECOMMITMENT OF THE DEFENDANT AFTER GIVING BAIL OR DEPOSITING MONEY.

5999. Recommitted. 4601. The district court in which a criminal action is pending, or during the pendency of an appeal from its judgment in such action, or in which a judgment is to be carried into effect, may, by an order entered on the record, direct the defendant to be arrested and committed to jail until legally discharged, after he has given bail, or deposited money instead thereof in the following cases:

1. When by reason of his failure to appear, he has incurred a forfeiture of his bail, or money deposited instead thereof;
2. When it satisfactorily appears to the court that his bail, either by reason of the death of one or more of them, or from any other cause, is insufficient, or have removed from the state;
3. When upon the finding of an indictment, the court deems the bail taken by the committing magistrate insufficient. [R., § 4995; C., '51, § 3243.]

Where the accused, who is out on bail, is re-arrested for some of the causes specified in this section, he is then completely in the custody of the state, and his sureties having no more control over him are released from responsibility: State v. Holmes, 23-458; State v. Orsler, 48-343.

When a person held to appear was indicted and subsequently ordered arrested, and was so arrested, held, that it would be presumed that such arrest was on the ground that the bail was insufficient, and that the surety was therefore released: State v. Orsler, 48-343.

See § 5991 and notes, as to surrender of defendant by his sureties.

6000. Order; its requisites. 4602. The order for re-commitment of the defendant must recite generally the facts upon which it is founded, and must direct that the defendant be arrested and committed to the custody of the sheriff of the county where the depositions and statement were returned, or the indictment was found, or the conviction was had, as the case may be, to be detained until legally discharged. [R., § 4996; C., '51, § 3244.]

6001. Arrest. 4603. The defendant may be arrested pursuant to the order upon a certified copy thereof, in any county in the state. [R., § 4997; C., '51, § 3245.]

6002. Committal. 4604. If the order recite as the ground on which it is made, the failure of the defendant to appear for judgment upon conviction, the defendant must be committed according to the requirements of the order. [R., § 4998; C., '51, § 3246.]

6003. New bail. 4605. If the order be made for any other cause and the offense be bailable, the court may fix the amount of bail, and may cause a direction to be inserted in the order that the defendant be admitted to bail in the sum fixed, which must be specified in the order. [R., § 4999; C., '51, § 3247.]

CHAPTER 45.

OF UNDERTAKINGS OF BAIL, WHEN LIENS.

6004. On real estate. 4606. Undertakings of bail, from the time of filing the same in the office of the clerk of the district court in which they are required to be filed, shall be, and may be made, liens upon real estate of the persons acknowledging the same, in the same manner, to the same extent, and with like effect, as in judgments in civil actions. [R., § 5000.]

A bond which is not authorized by statute, obligors, as here provided; but if it has secured the release of the principal it may be as, for instance, where it is accepted by a magistrate who has no authority to take bail, will enforced by action: State v. Cannon, 34-322. not become a lien upon the property of the 6005. Docketing and indexing. 4607. They shall, when filed, be immediately docketed and indexed by the clerk of the court in which they are filed, as judgments in civil actions are required to be docketed and indexed. [R., § 5001.]

6006. Attested copies. 4608. Attested copies of such undertakings may be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county in which the real estate is situated, in the same manner, and with like effect, as attested copies of judgments, and shall be immediately docketed and indexed, in the same manner. [R., § 5002.]

CHAPTER 46.

OF JUDGMENTS FOR FINES, WHEN LIENS, AND HOW EXECUTIONS THEREON STAYED.

6007. On real estate. 4609. Judgments for fines, in all criminal actions rendered, are, and may be made, liens upon the real estate of the defendant, in the same manner, and with like effect, as judgment in civil actions. [R., § 5003.]

6008. Stay of execution. 4610. The defendant may have a stay of execution for the same length of time, and in the same manner, as provided by law in civil actions, and with like effect, and the same proceedings may be had therein. [R., § 5004.]

CHAPTER 47.

OF THE LIBERATION OF POOR CONVICTS.

6009. When and on what conditions. 4611. When any person convicted of a criminal offense is sentenced to pay a fine and costs only, and stand committed until sentence be performed, if the sentence be not complied with by payment of the sum due within thirty days next following, the sheriff may liberate him from prison if committed for no other cause, and if he be unable to pay such fine and costs, upon his giving his promissory note for the amount due, payable to the treasurer of the county where he was committed, on demand with interest, accompanied with a written schedule containing a true account of all his property, of every kind, by him signed and sworn to; which note and schedule must be by such sheriff delivered without delay to the treasurer for the use of the county. [R., § 5005; C., '51, § 3268.]

Under the provisions of this section, actual imprisonment for thirty days is made a prerequisite to the right to be liberated: In re Curley, 34-184.

Where a prisoner is thus liberated upon giving note, etc., he is entitled to have the judgment against him canceled: State v. Van Vleet, 23-168; State v. Peck, 37-342; State v. Jordan, 39-387; In re Jordan, 39-394.

Authority to imprison for non-payment of costs, not being expressly given by § 5894, this section does not warrant imprisonment for costs; and such imprisonment can be imposed only for non-payment of the fine: State v. Erwin, 44-637.

Under the provision (§ 6141) that such release shall not be made if, in the opinion of the sheriff, the judgment may be satisfied under the provisions for imprisonment at hard labor and credit of the amount allowed therefor on the judgment, held, that where it had been made to appear by the sheriff's answer in a habeas corpus proceeding that in his opinion the judgment could not thus be satisfied, a subsequent pleading stating a contrary opinion could not operate to prevent the discharge: In re Jordan, 39-394.

The power to commit for non-payment of a fine not being conferred by this section, but existing by virtue of § 5894, as incident to the power to impose a fine, if the statute authorizing a fine provides that a prisoner shall not be released under this section, such provision is controlling: Hanks v. Workman, 69-600.

The provisions of this section apply only to persons convicted of criminal offenses. The fine authorized by the prohibitory liquor law for violation of an injunction is not a fine for a crime, and the provisions for release of poor convicts does not apply thereto: Ibid.

In general as to imprisonment for non-payment of fine, see § 5894 and notes.

As to imprisonment at hard labor, see §§ 6136-6143.

6010. False schedule. 4612. If such convict knowingly and wilfully make any false schedule, on oath, relating to the amount or nature of his property, he is guilty of perjury. [R., § 5006; C., '51, § 3269.]

CHAPTER 48.

OF THE DISMISSAL OF CRIMINAL ACTIONS BEFORE AND AFTER INDICTMENT, FOR WANT OF PROSECUTION OR OTHERWISE.

6011. If indictment not found. 4613. When a person has been held to answer for a public offense, if an indictment be not found against him at the next regular term of the court at which he is held to answer, the court must order the prosecution to be dismissed unless good cause to the contrary be shown. [R., § 5007; C., '51, § 3248.]

6012. If not tried at second term. 4614. If a defendant indicted for a public offense, whose trial has not been postponed upon his application, be not brought to trial at the next regular term of the court in which the indictment is triable after the same is found, the court must order it to be dismissed unless good cause to the contrary be shown. [R., § 5008; C., '51, § 3249.]

Where the failure to have a trial at the next regular term after the finding of the indictment results from a default of defendant, or from his seeking to have the verdict set aside, and without a demand on his part for trial, or objection to continuance, he is not entitled to a dismissal as here provided: State v. Arthur, 21-323.

6013. Discharged on undertaking. 4615. If the defendant be not indicted or tried as provided in the last two sections, and sufficient reason therefor shown, the court may order the action to be continued from term to term, and in the meantime may discharge the defendant from custody on his own undertaking, or on the undertaking of bail for his appearance to answer the charge at the time to which the action is continued, but no such continuance can be extended beyond three terms of the court. [R., § 5009; C., '51, § 3250.]

6014. Discharge on dismissal. 4616. If the court direct the action to be dismissed, the defendant must, if in custody, be discharged therefrom, or if admitted to bail, his bail must be exonerated, and if money has been deposited instead of bail, it must be refunded to him. [R., § 5010.]

6015. Dismissal by order of court. 4617. The court may, either upon its own motion or upon the application of the district [county] attorney, and in furtherance of justice, order an action after an indictment to be dismissed, but in such case the reason of the dismissal must be set forth in the order, which must be entered upon the record. [R., § 5011; C., '51, § 3251.]

After the trial is entered upon, a dismissal of the proceedings by the court or the district attorney, except under the circumstances authorized by the preceding sections, will operate as an acquittal, and defendant cannot be again put on trial: State v. Callendine, 8-288.

A nolle prosequi may be entered before the trial is commenced, but, after plea is made, the jury sworn, and the evidence introduced, its entry will amount to an acquittal: Ibid.

The fact that material witnesses for the prosecution cannot be called because their names are not indorsed on the indictment is not sufficient to justify the court in dismissing the case: Ibid.

At any time before the impaneling and swearing of a jury it is competent for the prosecutor to nol. pros. the entire indictment, or any count or number of counts therein. The same thing may be done in case of a verdict upon an indictment containing several counts, where the jury has failed to respond to a part of the charge, and judgment may then be taken upon the balance: State v. McPherson, 9-53.

Where, by mistake, the court announces the case as dismissed, and so marks it on his calendar, and afterwards rescinds such order, there is not such a dismissal as to prevent further proceedings: State v. Manley, 63-344.

Where the indictment charges burglary and also facts constituting an assault with intent to commit murder, for the purpose of subjecting the defendant to the aggregate punishment provided by § 5191, the charge of assault with intent to commit murder may be dismissed and defendant put on trial for burglary alone: State v. Struble, 71-11.

In general, see Const., art. 1, § 12.

6016. Nolle prosequi. 4618. The entry of a nolle prosequi is abolished, and neither the attorney-general nor the district [county] attorney shall hereafter discontinue or abandon a prosecution for a public offense except as provided in the last section. [R., § 5012; C., '51, § 3252.]

6017. Bar. 4619. An order for the dismissal of the action as provided in this chapter, is a bar to another prosecution for the same offense if it be a misdemeanor; but it is not a bar if the offense charged be a felony. [R., § 5013.]

CHAPTER 49.

OF THE INSANITY OF A DEFENDANT BEFORE TRIAL OR AFTER CONVICTION.

6018. Trial. 4620. When a defendant appears for arraignment, trial, judgment, or on any other occasion when he is required, if a reasonable doubt arise as to his sanity, the court must order a jury to be impaneled from the trial jurors in attendance at the term, or who may be summoned by the direction of the court, as provided in this code, to inquire into the fact. [R., § 5015; C., '51, § 3260.]

The prisoner's mental condition at the time he appears for arraignment, or upon any other occasion when required, is thus to be inquired into, and not his condition at the time of the commission of the offense. In determining as to whether a reasonable doubt exists as to his sanity, the judge may, before impaneling the jury, investigate the whole matter, obtain all the light reasonably attainable, and determine from all the circumstances as to whether the necessity for the inquiry exists: State v. Arnold, 12-479.

It is not a ground of challenge to the panel on the trial that the jurors have heard the evidence on such preliminary inquiry as to the prisoner's sanity: Ibid.

6019. Suspension. 4621. The arraignment, trial, judgment, or other proceedings, as the case may be, must be suspended until the question of insanity is determined by the verdict of the jury. [R., § 5016; C., '51, § 3261.]

6020. Order of procedure. 4622. The trial for the question of insanity must proceed in the following order:

1. The counsel of the defendant must offer the evidence in support of the allegation of insanity;

2. The district [county] attorney must then offer the evidence in support of the case on the part of the state;

3. The parties may then respectively offer rebutting evidence only, unless the court, for good reason, in furtherance of justice, permit them to offer evidence upon their original case;

4. When the evidence is concluded, unless the case is submitted on either side, or both sides, without argument, the district [county] attorney must commence, and the defendant's counsel conclude the argument to the jury;

5. If more than one counsel on each side argue the case to the jury, they must do so alternately;

6. The court shall then, on motion of either party, charge the jury. The provisions of this code, so far as the same are applicable and not herein changed, shall regulate the trial of the question of insanity. [R., § 5017.]

6021. If sane. 4623. If the jury find that the defendant is sane, the proceedings on the indictment shall be resumed. [R., § 5018; C., '51, § 3262.]

6022. If insane. 4624. If the jury find the defendant insane, the proceedings on the indictment shall be suspended until he becomes sane, and the court, if it deem his discharge dangerous to the public peace or safety, may order that he be in the meantime committed by the sheriff to the Iowa insane hospital, and that upon his becoming sane, he be delivered by the superintendent of the hospital to the sheriff. [R., § 5019; C., '51, § 3263.]

6024. Detained in hospital. 4626. If the defendant be received into the hospital, he must be detained there until he becomes sane. When he becomes sane, the superintendent of the hospital must give notice of that fact to the sheriff and to the district [county] attorney of the proper district [county]. The sheriff must, thereupon, without delay, bring the defendant from the hospital and place him in the proper custody until he be brought to trial or judgment, as the case may be, or be legally discharged. [R., § 5021; C., '51, § 3265.]

6025. Expenses. 4627. The expense of sending the defendant to the hospital, bringing him back, and any other expense incurred, are to be paid in the first instance by the county from which he was sent, but the county may recover from the estate of the defendant, if he have any, or from a relative, or another county, town, township, or city, bound to provide for or maintain him elsewhere. [R., § 5022; C., '51, § 3267.]

6026. Fees. 4628. Sheriffs for delivering persons found to be insane, under the provisions of this chapter, are entitled to the same fees therefor, as are allowed for conveying convicts to the penitentiary. [R., § 5023.]

CHAPTER 50.

OF SEARCH-WARRANTS, AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

6027. Definition. 4629. A search-warrant is an order in writing, in the name of the state, signed by a magistrate, directed to a peace officer, commanding him to search for personal property, and bring it before the magistrate. [R., § 5024; C., '51, § 3291.]

A search-warrant is not unreasonable, within the meaning of Const., art. 1, § 8, when it is for a thing obnoxious to the law, and of a person and place particularly described, and is issued on oath of probable cause: Santo v. State, 2-165.

Therefore, held, that § 2401, authorizing the issuance of a search-warrant for the seizure of intoxicating liquors, is not unconstitutional, as not requiring sufficient particularity in description, or as authorizing unreasonable search and seizure: Ibid.

Description of the place to be searched held

6028. Upon what grounds issued. 4630. It may be issued upon either of the following grounds:

1. When the property was stolen or embezzled, in which case it may be taken on the warrant from any house or other place in which it is concealed, or from the possession of the person by whom it was stolen or embezzled, or of any other person in whose possession it may be;

2. When it was used as the means of committing a felony; in which case it may be taken on the warrant from any house or other place in which it is concealed, or from the possession of the person by whom it was used in the commission of the offense, or of any other person in whose possession it may be;

3. When it is in the possession of any person with the intent to use it as the means of committing a public offense, or in the possession of another to which he may have delivered it for the purpose of concealing it or preventing its being discovered; in which case it may be taken on the warrant from such person, from a house or other place occupied by him or under his control, or from the possession of the person to whom he may have so delivered it. [R., § 5025; C., '51, § 3292.]

[The words at the end of the section, following "control," are erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

As to disposal of imitation butter, etc., seized on search-warrant, see § 2517.

6029. Affidavit. 4631. No search-warrant can be issued but upon probable cause, supported by affidavit, naming or describing the person, and particularly describing the property and the place to be searched. [R., § 5026; C., '51, § 3293.]

6030. Applicant examined. 4632. The magistrate must, before issuing a warrant, examine on oath the applicant therefor and any witnesses he may produce, and take their affidavits in writing, and cause each affidavit to be subscribed and sworn to before him by the person making it. [R., § 5027; C., '51, § 3294.]

6031. Affidavits must set forth. 4633. The affidavit must set forth the facts tending to establish the grounds of the application, or probable cause for believing that they exist. [R., § 5028; C., '51, § 3295.]

6032. Magistrate issue. 4634. If the magistrate be thereupon satisfied of the existence of the grounds of the application, or that there is probable cause to believe their existence, he shall issue a search-warrant, signed by him with his name of office, directed to any peace officer in the county, commanding him forthwith to search the person or place named for the property specified, and bring it before him. [R., § 5029; C., '51, § 3296.]

sufficient in a particular case: State v. Thompson, 44-399.

An objection to the sufficiency of a warrant under which property has been seized cannot be raised for the first time in the district court on appeal from the justice issuing the warrant: Ibid.

For constitutional provisions relative to search-warrants, see Const., art. 1, § 8.

For provisions as to search-warrant for seizure of intoxicating liquors, see § 2401 and notes.

6034. Form of warrant. 4636. The warrant may be, substantially, in the following form:

THE STATE OF IOWA,

To any Peace Officer of said County:

Proof, by affidavit, having been this day made before me by (naming every person whose affidavit has been taken) that (stating the particular grounds of the application according to section four thousand six hundred and thirty of this chapter [§ 6028]; or, if the affidavit be not positive, that there is probable cause for believing that)—(stating the ground of the application in the same manner) you are therefore commanded, in the day-time (or at any time of the day or night, as the case may be, according to section four thousand six hundred and thirty of this chapter) [§ 6028], to make immediate search on the person of C. D., or, in the house situated (describing it or any other place to be searched, with reasonable particularity, as the case may be), for the following property, (describing it with reasonable particularity); and if you find the same, or any part thereof, to bring it forthwith before me, at (stating the place).

Dated at _____, this _____ day of _____, A. D. 18—.

E. F., Justice of the Peace.

[R., § 5031.]

An objection to the sufficiency of a warrant under which property has been seized cannot be raised for the first time in the district court on appeal from the justice issuing the warrant: State v. Thompson, 44-399.

As to requisites of search-warrants, see § 6027 and notes.

6035. By whom served. 4637. A search-warrant may in all cases be served by any of the officers mentioned in its direction, but by no other person except in aid of the officer, on his requisition, he being present and acting in its execution. [R., § 5032; C., '51, § 3297.]

6036. Officer may break open doors. 4638. The officer may break open any outer or inner door or window of a house, or any part of the house, or anything therein to execute the warrant, if, after notice of his authority and purpose, he be refused admittance. [R., § 5033; C., '51, § 3298.]

6037. Liberating person assisting. 4639. He may break open any outer or inner door or window of a house for the purpose of liberating a person, who, having entered to aid him in the execution of the warrant, is detained therein, or, when necessary, for his own liberation. [R., § 5034.]

6038. Served in day-time. 4640. The magistrate must insert a direction in the warrant, that it be served in the day-time unless the affidavit be positive that the property is on the person, or in the place to be searched; in which case, he may insert a direction that it may be served at any time of the day or night. [R., § 5035.]

6039. Return; in what time. 4641. A search-warrant must be executed and returned to the magistrate by whom it was issued within ten days after its date. After the expiration of such time, the warrant, unless executed, is void. [R., § 5036; C., '51, § 3299.]

6040. Officer receipt for property. 4642. When the officer takes any property under the warrant, he must give a receipt for the property taken, specifying it in detail, to the person from whom it was taken or in whose possession it was found, or, in the absence of the person, he must leave it in the place where he found the property. [R., § 5037; C., '51, § 3300.]

6041. Return with inventory. 4643. The officer must forthwith return the warrant to the magistrate, and at the same time deliver to him a written inventory of the property taken, made publicly or in the presence of the person from whose possession it was taken and of the applicant for the warrant, if they be present, verified by the affidavit of the officer at the foot of the inventory and taken before the magistrate, to the following effect: "I, the officer by whom the annexed warrant was executed, do swear that the above inventory contains a true and detailed account of all the property taken by me on the warrant." [R., § 5038; C., '51, § 3301.]

6042. Magistrate give copy. 4644. The magistrate, if required, must deliver a copy of the inventory to the person from whose possession the property was taken, and to the applicant for the warrant. [R., § 5039; C., '51, § 3302.]

6043. Take testimony. 4645. If the grounds on which the warrant was issued be controverted, the magistrate must proceed to take testimony in relation thereto. [R., § 5040; C., '51, § 3303.]

6044. Reduced to writing. 4646. The testimony given by each witness must be reduced to writing and authenticated by the magistrate. [R., § 5041; C., '51, § 3304.]

6045. Property restored. 4647. If it appear that the property taken is not the same as that described in the warrant, or that there is no probable cause for believing the existence of the grounds on which the warrant was issued, the magistrate shall cause it to be restored to the person from whom it was taken. [R., § 5042; C., '51, § 3305.]

6046. Delivered to owner. 4648. If the property taken by virtue of a search-warrant was stolen or embezzled, it must be restored to the owner, upon his making satisfactory proof to the magistrate of his ownership thereof, or of his right of possession thereto, as provided in the next chapter. If it was taken on a warrant issued on the grounds stated in the second and third subdivisions of section four thousand six hundred and thirty of this chapter [§ 6028], the magistrate must retain it in his possession, subject to the order of the court to which he is required to return the proceedings before him, or of any other court in which the offense which the property taken was used as a means of committing, or so intended to be, is triable. [R., § 5043; C., '51, § 3306.]

As to restoring imitation butter, etc., seized under search-warrant, see § 2517.

6047. Disposition of papers. 4649. The magistrate must annex together the affidavits taken before the issuing of the warrant, the warrant, the return, and the inventory, and return them to the next district court of the county, at or before its opening, on the first day of the next term thereof. [R., § 5044; C., '51, § 3307.]

6048. Maliciously suing out. 4650. Whoever, maliciously and without probable cause, procures a search-warrant to be issued and executed, is guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 5045; C., '51, § 3308.]

6049. Excess of authority. 4651. A peace officer who, in executing a search-warrant, wilfully exceeds his authority, or exercises it with unnecessary severity, is guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 5046.]

6050. Searching person charged with felony. 4652. When a person charged with a felony is supposed by the magistrate before whom he is brought, to have upon his person a dangerous weapon or anything which may be used as evidence of the commission of the offense, the magistrate may direct him to be searched in his presence, and the weapon or other thing to be retained, subject to his order, or the order of the court in which the defendant may be tried. [R., § 5047; C., '51, § 3309.]

6051. Property kept for evidence. 4653. When any officer, in the execution of a search-warrant, shall find any stolen or embezzled property, or shall seize any other things for which a search is allowed by this chapter, all the property and things so seized shall be safely kept by the direction of the court or magistrate, so long as shall be necessary for the purpose of being produced as evidence on any trial; and as soon as may be afterwards, all such stolen and embezzled property shall be restored to the owner thereof, and all other things seized by virtue of such warrant shall be destroyed under the direction of the court or magistrate. [R., § 5048.]

This section and § 6057 simply direct the disposition to be made of stolen or embezzled property by the officer, and the receipts to be given therefor, but they in no manner affect the competency of testimony for either the state or the accused respecting such property: State v. Mullen, 30-203.

CHAPTER 51.

OF THE DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY STOLEN OR EMBEZZLED.

6052. Held by officer. 4654. When property alleged to have been stolen or embezzled comes into the custody of a peace officer, he must hold the same subject to the order of the magistrate authorized by the next section to direct the disposal thereof. [R., § 5049; C., '51, § 3253.]

6053. Delivered to owner. 4655. On satisfactory proof of title by the owner of the property, the magistrate before whom the information is laid, or who shall examine the charge against the person accused of stealing or embezzling the same, may order it to be delivered to the owner, on his paying the reasonable and necessary expenses incurred in the preservation and keeping thereof, to be certified by the magistrate. The order shall entitle the owner to demand and receive the property. [R., § 5050; C., '51, § 3254.]

6054. From custody of magistrate. 4656. If the property stolen or embezzled come into the custody of a magistrate, it must be delivered to the owner on satisfactory proof of his title, and on his paying the necessary expenses incurred in its preservation, to be certified as before provided. [R., § 5051; C., '51, § 3255.]

6055. By order of court. 4657. If the property stolen or embezzled has not been delivered to the owner, the court before which a conviction is had, may, on proof of his title, order its restoration. [R., § 5052; C., '51, § 3256.]

Where a defendant is acquitted of the crime of larceny, money which was seized under a search-warrant as the subject of the larceny should be surrendered to the defendant; the court has no authority to retain the case upon the docket for the purpose of determining the ownership of the property: State v. Williams, 61-517.

6056. When not claimed. 4658. If the property stolen or embezzled be not claimed by the owner before the expiration of six months from the conviction of the person for stealing or embezzling it, the magistrate or other officer having it in his custody, must, on payment of the necessary expenses incurred for its preservation, deliver it to the auditor of the county to be applied under the direction of the board of supervisors thereof for the benefit of the poor of the county. [R., § 5053; C., '51, § 3257.]

6057. Officer give receipts. 4659. When the money or other property is taken from the defendant arrested upon a charge of a public offense, the officer taking it shall, at the time, give duplicate receipts therefor, specifying particularly the amount of money and the kind of property taken; one of which receipts he must deliver to the defendant, and the other he must forthwith file with the clerk of the district court of the county where the depositions and statements are to be sent by the magistrate. [R., § 5054; C., '51, § 3258.]

See note to § 6051.

OF PROCEEDINGS AND TRIALS BEFORE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

6058. Jurisdiction. 4660. Justices of the peace have jurisdiction of, and must hear, try, and determine all public offenses less than felony, committed within their respective counties, in which the punishment described by law does not exceed a fine of one hundred dollars, or imprisonment thirty days. [R., § 5055; C., '51, § 3322.]

Jurisdiction: The district court has concurrent jurisdiction with that of justices of the peace over crimes within the jurisdiction of the latter, and therefore a defendant put on trial in the district court on indictment may be convicted of a lower degree of the offense or of a crime necessarily included within the offense charged, although such lower degree or included crime is not in itself indictable, and could have been prosecuted before a justice of the peace: Orton v. State, 4 G. Gr., 140.

Where there is nothing appearing affirmatively on the face of the proceedings before a justice of the peace showing a want of jurisdiction, defendant cannot complain that the evidence shows an offense to have been committed which can only be prosecuted on indictment: State v. Stipult, 17-575.

A justice of the peace has jurisdiction over offenses consisting in the violation of city ordinances. The jurisdiction of the mayor in such cases is not exclusive: Jaquith v. Royce, 42-406.

Venue: To show that the case is within the territorial jurisdiction of a justice the prosecution need only prove that the offense was committed in the county. The township where it was committed is immaterial: State v. Gibson, 29-295.

Where defendant is brought before a justice of the peace of the proper county upon a warrant issued by another justice for an offense triable by a justice of the peace and makes no objection to the jurisdiction, he thereby waives any objection which he may have on that account and cannot raise it upon appeal: State v. Kinney, 41-424.

6059. Action commenced by information. 4661. Criminal actions for the commission of a public offense must be commenced before a justice of the peace, by an information subscribed and sworn to, and filed with the justice. [R., § 5056; C., '51, § 3323.]

If the informant subscribes and swears to the affidavit at the end of the information, it is sufficient to comply with the provisions requiring the information to be subscribed and sworn to: Devine v. State, 4-443.

As to amending, see notes to next section.

6060. Information must contain. 4662. Such information must contain:

1. The name of the county and of the justice where the information is filed;
2. The names of the parties, if the defendants be known, and if not, then such names as may be given him by the complainant;
3. A statement of the acts constituting the offense, in ordinary and concise language, and the time and place of the commission of the offense as near as may be. [R., § 5057; C., '51, § 3324.]

Under the provisions of the following section as to the form of an information, the facts constituting the offense should be stated with as much precision as in an indictment: State v. Bitman, 13-485; State v. Allen, 32-491.

Under § 2381, prohibiting the selling of intoxicating liquor to any person, held, that an information charging such sale should state the name of the person to whom the liquor was sold, and that a mere allegation that defendant "did sell intoxicating liquors in violation of," etc., was not sufficient: State v. Allen, 32-491.

Where an ordinance prohibited the sale of beer or wine to any person, an information for the violation of such ordinance charging the sale to "divers persons" was held sufficient: State v. Smouse, 49-634.

Where the information charging the keeping of intoxicating liquors for sale was entitled "State of Iowa, Clayton County," and stated the liquors to be in defendant's saloon in Strawberry Point, held, that the information sufficiently showed that the liquors were in Clayton county: State v. Thompson, 44-399.

An information charging the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors need not specify the quantity sold: State v. King, 37-462. Nor the method of sale: Devine v. State, 4-443. Nor the kind of liquor sold: State v. Whalen, 54-753. Informations in particular cases held sufficient: State v. Mohr, 53-261; Foreman v. Hunter, 59-260; State v. Johnson, 69-623.

As to sufficiency of information charging sale, etc., of intoxicating liquors, see, further, § 2406 et seq.

An information charging larceny, held defective in failing to allege that it was feloniously committed, although the accusation was in the language of the statute defining the offense: State v. Sipult, 17-575.

It is not sufficient in an information to charge the offense by its technical name; the acts constituting the offense must be stated: State v. Murray, 41-530.

Therefore, held, that in an information for an assault it was not sufficient to charge simply that defendant "did assault" the person injured: Ibid.

An information for assault and battery is sufficient which charges violently beating, wounding, etc., without charging the manner or purpose thereof: State v. Boynton, 75-753.

Where an information for violation of an

6061. Form of. 4663. The information may be substantially in the following form:

— County, The State of Iowa against A. B., defendant.	}	Before justice — (here insert the name of the justice).

The defendant is accused of the crime (here name the offense).

For that the defendant, on the — day of —, A. D. 18—, at the (here name the city, village, or township), in the county aforesaid (here state the act or omission constituting the offense as in an indictment). [R., § 5058; C., '51, § 3325.]

Under these provisions the information is required to state the facts constituting the offense intended to be charged with as much precision as an indictment: State v. Allen, 32-491; State v. Bitman, 13-485.

For form of indictment, see § 5682.

See notes to preceding section, amending information; also as to sufficiency of the information in particular cases.

6062. Filing. 4664. The justice must file such information, and mark thereon the time of filing the same. [R., § 5059; C., '51, § 3326.]

6063. Warrant. 4665. Immediately upon the filing of such information, the justice may, in his discretion, issue a warrant for the arrest of the defendant, directed in the same manner as a warrant of arrest upon a preliminary information, and may be served in like manner. [R., § 5060; C., '51, § 3327.]

6064. Service. 4666. The officer who receives the warrant must serve the same by arresting the defendant, if in his power, and bringing him without unnecessary delay before the justice who issued the same. [R., § 5061; C., '51, § 3328.]

6065. Appearance. 4667. When the defendant is brought before the justice, the charge against him must be distinctly read to him, and he shall be asked whether he is presented by his right name, and be required to plead. If he objects that he is wrongly named in the information, he must give his right name, and if he refuses to do so, or does not object that he is wrongly named, the justice shall make an entry thereof in his docket, and he is thereafter precluded from making any such objection. [R., § 5062; C., '51, § 3329.]

6066. Pleading. 4668. The defendant may plead the same pleas as upon an indictment. His pleas must be oral, and shall be entered on the docket of the justice. [R., § 5063; C., '51, § 3330.]

6067. Trial. 4669. Upon a plea other than a plea of guilty, if the defendant do not demand a trial by jury, the justice must proceed to try the issue, unless a change of venue be applied for by the defendant. [R., § 5064; C., '51, § 3331.]

A justice has no authority to try a prisoner after he has demanded a jury: Dupont v. Downing, 6-173.

As the trial before the justice may be without jury the defendant may also on appeal waive a jury in accordance with § 6100, although jury trial cannot be waived in a criminal prosecution originally commenced in the district court: State v. Ill, 78-543 ordinance was headed "State of Iowa, City of Washington, versus," etc., held, that the words "State of Iowa" were surplusage and did not make the prosecution one under the state law: State v. Smouse, 49-634.

Where an information charges an offense of which the court has jurisdiction, and also one of which it has not, the allegations as to the latter will be deemed surplusage and will not vitiate the information: Ibid.; State v. Sulhoffer, 48-283.

An information may be amended, upon application, to any extent consistent with the orderly conduct of judicial business with public interest and private rights: State v. Doe, 50-541; State v. Merchant, 38-375.

CHANGE OF VENUE.

6068. Affidavit. 4670. If a change of venue be applied for, an affidavit must be filed stating that the justice is prejudiced against the defendant, or is of near relation to the prosecutor upon the charge, or the party injured or interested, or is a material witness for either party, or that the defendant cannot obtain justice before him, as the affiant verily believes. [R., § 5065.]

Prejudice of a justice against a defendant can only be taken advantage of by motion for change of venue. The existence of prejudice will not render the conviction void: Foreman v. Hunter, 59-550.

The provisions as to change of venue from a justice of the peace do not entitle a defendant to change of venue in a trial in the police court: Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572.

6069. Allowed. 4671. If such affidavit be filed, the change of venue must be allowed, and the justice must immediately transmit all the original papers, and a transcript of all his docket entries in the case to the next nearest justice in the township, unless said justice be a party to the action, or is related to either party by consanguinity or affinity within the fourth degree, or where he has been attorney for either party in the action or proceeding, and in such case the justice before whom such action or proceeding is commenced, shall transmit all the original papers, together with a transcript of all his docket entries to the next nearest justice in the county against whom none of the above objections exist, who may require the defendant to plead as provided in section four thousand six hundred and sixty-seven of this chapter [§ 6065], if he has not already done so, and shall proceed to try the case, unless a jury trial be demanded, but no more than one change of venue in the same case shall be allowed. [R., § 5066; 9 G. A., ch. 33.]

Where the justice to whom the case is sent on change of venue refuses to act, the officer having the defendant in charge has no authority to take him before another justice, and any action of such justice in the matter would be void: Connell v. Stelson, 33-147.

The "above objections" here referred to are the ones specified in this section, and are not the same as those which are made a ground for change of venue in the first place. Prejudice of the justice is a ground for asking a change of venue, but not a ground for objection to the next nearest justice: Albertson v. Kriechbaum, 65-11.

Where defendant, in asking a change of venue, urges objections to a justice to whom the case might be sent, and thereby procures it to be sent to another justice, he cannot afterwards object that the justice to whom it is sent has not jurisdiction, for the reason that the objection made to the nearest justice was not one authorized by statute as a ground for not sending the case to him. By requesting the change to the justice before whom the case is taken, and appearing before him, defendant waives any objection to his jurisdiction: State v. McEvoy, 68-355.

SECURING JURY.

6070. Jury trial. 4672. Before the justice has heard any testimony upon the trial, the defendant may demand a trial by jury. [R., § 5067; C., '51, § 3332.]

When the police judge of a city is exercising the powers and jurisdiction of a justice (§ 808), a defendant on trial before him may demand a jury as here provided, but in a prosecution before such judge for the violation of a city ordinance, the defendant is not entitled to a jury: Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572.

A justice of the peace has no authority to try a prisoner without a jury after he has demanded a jury trial: Dupont v. Downing, 6-172.

6071. Jury; how obtained. 4673. If a trial by jury be demanded, the justice shall direct any peace officer of the county to make a list in writing of the names of eighteen inhabitants of the county having the qualifications of jurors in the district court, from which list the prosecutor and defendant may each strike out three names. [R., § 5068; C., '51, § 3333.]

A judgment rendered upon a verdict by a disqualified jury is erroneous but not void. It may be reversed upon appeal, but cannot be disregarded as a nullity: Foreman v. Hunter, 59-550.

By this section the justice is empowered to designate the sheriff, or one of his deputies, or any constable in the county, for the performance of the duty, and use his discretion in making the selection; and this power to select necessarily includes the power to institute inquiry as to the fitness of the one intended to be designated. When the question arises the informant as well as the defendant has a right to object to the one designated on the ground of unfitness for the performance of the duty. Therefore, held, that statements made in good faith in an affidavit by the informant with reference to facts claimed to constitute disqualification on the part of the constable were privileged: Rainbow v. Benson, 71-301.

6072. Striking names. 4674. In case the prosecutor or the defendant neglect or refuse to strike out such names, the justice shall direct some disinterested person to strike out the names for either or both of the parties so neglecting or refusing, and upon such names being struck out, the justice must issue a venire directed to any peace officer of the county, requiring him to summon the twelve persons whose names remain upon the list, to appear before such justice at the time and place named therein, to make a jury for the trial of the cause. [R., § 5069; C., '51, § 3334.]

6074. Names of jurors. 4676. The names of the persons returned as jurors shall be written on separate ballots, folded each in the same manner as nearly as possible, and so that the name be not visible, and shall, under the direction of the justice, be deposited in a box or other convenient thing. [R., § 5071; C., '51, § 3336.]

6075. Drawing. 4677. The justice must then draw out six of the ballots successively, and if any of the persons whose names are drawn do not appear, or are challenged, or are set aside, such further number must be drawn as will make a jury of six, after all legal challenges have been allowed. [R., § 5072; C., '51, § 3337.]

6076. Challenges. 4678. The same challenges may be taken by either party to any individual juror as on the trial of an indictment for a misdemeanor, but no challenge to the panel is allowed. [R., § 5073; C., '51, § 3338.]

6077. Talesmen. 4679. If any of the jurors named in the venire cannot be found, or do not attend, or are challenged by either party, so that a sufficient number cannot be obtained, the justice may direct the officer to summon any by-stander or others who may be competent, and against whom no sufficient cause of challenge appears, to act as jurors. [R., § 5074; C., '51, § 3339.]

6078. Failure to return; new venire. 4680. If the officer by whom the venire is received do not return it as required, he may be punished by the justice as for contempt, and the justice shall issue a new venire for the summoning of the same jurors, upon which the same proceeding shall be had as upon the one first issued. [R., § 5075; C., '51, § 3340.]

6079. Jury of six. 4681. When six jurors appear and are accepted, they shall constitute the jury. [R., § 5076; C., '51, § 3341.]

6080. Oath. 4682. The justice must thereupon administer to them the following oath or affirmation: You do swear (or you do solemnly affirm, as the case may be), that you will well and truly try the issue between the state of Iowa and the defendant, and a true verdict give according to the evidence. [R., § 5077; C., '51, § 3342.]

TRIAL AND JUDGMENT.

6081. Proceedings of jury. 4683. After the jury are sworn they must sit together and hear the proofs and allegations of the parties, which must be delivered in public. After which, they may either decide in court or retire for consideration. [R., § 5078; C., '51, § 3343.]

6082. Retire with officer; oath. 4684. If they do not immediately agree, they must retire with the officer, who shall be sworn to the following effect: "You do swear that you will keep the jury together in some private and convenient place, without meat or drink, unless otherwise ordered by the court; that you will not permit any person to speak to them, nor speak to them yourself, unless it be to ask them whether they have agreed upon a verdict, and that you will return them into court when they have so agreed." [R., § 5079; C., '51, § 3344.]

6083. Verdict. 4685. When the jury have agreed upon their verdict, they must deliver it publicly to the justice, who shall enter it on his docket. [R., § 5080; C., '51, § 3345.]

6084. Kept together. 4686. The jury must be kept together after the cause is submitted to them, until they have agreed upon and rendered their verdict, unless, for good cause, the justice sooner discharge them. [R., § 5081; C., '51, § 3346.]

6085. Discharged. 4687. If the jury be discharged as provided in the last section, the justice may proceed again to the trial in the same manner as upon the first trial; and so on until a verdict is rendered. [R., § 5082; C., '51, § 3347.]

6086. Judgment. 4688. When the defendant pleads guilty, or is convicted, either by the justice or by a jury, the justice shall render judgment thereon, or fine, or imprisonment, as the case may require, being governed by the rules prescribed for the district court, as far as the same are applicable, in rendering such judgment. [R., § 5083; C., '51, 3348.]

6087. Imprisonment for non-payment of fine. 4689. A judgment that the defendant pay a fine may also direct that he be imprisoned until the fine is satisfied. [R., § 5084.]

There can be no imprisonment for non-payment of a fine unless the judgment so orders: Lanpher v. Dewell, 56-153.

See, further, § 5894 and notes.

6088. Defendant discharged. 4690. When the defendant is acquitted, either by the justice, or by a jury, he must be immediately discharged. [R., § 5085; C., '51, § 3350.]

6089. Costs; appeal. 4691. When the defendant is acquitted, the justice shall, if he is satisfied that the prosecution is malicious or without probable cause, tax the costs against the prosecuting witness and render judgment therefor, from which he may appeal to the district court, by there giving notice to the justice that he claims such appeal, and the fact of the giving of such notice shall be entered on his record by the justice. If notice of appeal is given as herein contemplated, the justice shall, without delay, make out, sign, and file in the case a full and true statement of all the testimony admitted on the trial, and on which he bases his finding that the prosecution was malicious or without probable cause, and shall, without delay, make out a transcript of his docket entries, and shall file it, together with the statement of the testimony as aforesaid, and all other papers on file in the case, in the clerk's office of the district court of the county. And such appeal shall stand for hearing in said court at the term thereof commencing next after said papers are filed. And said court shall have full power to compel the correction by said justice of any error made apparent in his transcript, said statement of testimony, or in any papers returned by him, or may itself make the necessary correction therein, and may, on the papers, in case they shall be submitted to it, either affirm or reverse the judgment of the justice, or render such judgment as the justice should have rendered in the case. [R., § 5086.]

An appeal by a prosecuting witness from to him the costs of the prosecution in case of the action of a justice of the peace in taxing defendant's acquittal must be taken at the time judgment is rendered, and cannot be taken afterwards: State v. Knapp, 61-522.

Such appeal is to be taken to the district court, and is a criminal proceeding: Ibid.

The justice is invested with discretion as to the taxation of costs to the prosecutor, and his conclusion cannot be reversed by the district court unless he has abused such discretion. While the proceeding in the district court is called an appeal, it is in fact a writ of error, and the correctness of the judgment of the justice is to be determined by an inspection of the record. New or additional evidence should not be introduced: State v. Kerns, 64-306.

Under Revision, § 5094, which allowed ap-

6090. Certificate of conviction. 4692. Whenever a conviction is had upon a plea of guilty, or upon trial, the justice must make and sign with his name of office, a certificate of such conviction, in which it shall be sufficient briefly to state the offense charged and the conviction and judgment thereon, and if any fine has been collected, the amount thereof. [R., § 5087; C., '51, § 3351.]

6091. Judgment; how executed. 4693. The judgment shall be executed by a peace officer of the county where the conviction is had, by virtue of a warrant under the hand of the justice specifying the particulars of such judgment. [R., § 5090; C., '51, § 3354.]

6092. Fine; payment to justice. 4694. If a fine be imposed, and paid before commitment, it shall be received by the justice, and by him paid over to the county treasurer, within thirty days after the receipt thereof, for the use of the schools of the county, as provided by law. [R., § 5091; C., '51, § 3355.]

6093. Payment to sheriff. 4695. If the defendant be committed for not paying a fine, he may pay it to the sheriff of the county, but to no other person, who must, in like manner, within thirty days after the receipt thereof, pay it into the county treasury, for the use of the schools in the county, as provided by law. [R., § 5092; C., '51, § 3356.]

6094. Receipt. 4696. If the fine, or any part thereof, is paid to the justice or sheriff, he must execute duplicate receipts therefor, one of which he must file without delay, with the county auditor. [R., § 5093; C., '51, § 3357.]

APPEAL.

6095. How taken. 4697. The justice rendering a judgment against the defendant, must inform him of his right to an appeal therefrom, and make an entry on the docket of the giving of such information, and the defendant may thereupon take an appeal, by giving notice orally to the justice, that he appeals, and the justice must make an entry on his docket of the giving of such notice. [R., § 5095.]

Appeals from judgment of justice: There is no provision for a review of errors of law only, in a criminal case tried before a justice of the peace. The provisions of § 4846 et seq. as to writs of error in civil cases are not applicable in criminal prosecutions: Part of Lot, etc., v. State, 1-507; State v. Flinn, 51-133.

The provisions of this section are applicable to trials before a mayor for violation of a city ordinance (§ 692): State v. Hoag, 46-337.

The provision of the Revision allowing an appeal by the prosecution was held unconstitutional so far as it authorized a retrial in the district court of a defendant acquitted before peals by the state, held, that although the justice did not tax up the costs to the prosecuting witness, the district court might, on appeal, make such taxation under § 6100 (Rev., § 5100) without taking further evidence than that introduced on the trial, provided that was in itself sufficient to authorize its action: In re Trenchard, 16-53.

Also, held, that where the judgment was for defendant, the prosecuting witness might appeal from an order of the justice taxing to him the costs of prosecution: State v. Roney, 37-30.

See, further, as to taxation of costs against the prosecuting witness, §§ 5637, 5675, and notes.

a justice having jurisdiction of the offense: State v. Van Horton, 26-402.

But under such provision it was held that where defendant pleaded guilty the state might appeal from the judgment upon such plea, and in the district court inquiry might be made into the circumstances in order to settle the amount of fine or punishment, especially where the plea and judgment were entered in the absence of prosecutor and before the day fixed for trial: State v. Tuit, 22-140.

The receipt of the fine in such case by the county treasurer was held not such an acceptance of the adjudication as to bar all right of appeal by the prosecution: Ibid.

How taken: The mere filing of an appeal bond does not effect the appeal; it must be taken by giving notice, and if not so taken the case may be stricken from the docket of the district court: State v. Leyden, 13-433.

In order to secure an appeal, notice thereof must be given at the time judgment is rendered: State v. Knapp, 61-522.

If defendant gives proper notice of appeal there is nothing which the justice can do which will deprive the party of his right to such appeal, and therefore the justice cannot be liable in damages for refusing an appeal, or committing the party without appeal, whatever may be his motives: Anderson v. Park, 57-69.

The fact that the justice fails to inform defendant of his right to appeal, or fails to make an entry of the fact on his docket, does not render the conviction void. The defendant may have the amount of bail fixed in a habeas corpus proceeding, but is not entitled to be discharged without bail: Jacoby v. Waddell, 61-247.

Mere mistake or inadvertence will not excuse the failure to take an appeal at the time of judgment, and render an appeal afterwards taken proper: Cook v. United States, 1 G. Gr., 39.

6096. Bail; form of bond. 4698. The justice must thereupon enter an order on his docket, fixing the amount in which bail may be given by the defendant, and the execution of the judgment against the defendant shall not be stayed, unless bail in that amount be put in, by an undertaking substantially in the following form:

COUNTY OF ———.

A. B. having been convicted before C. D., a justice of the peace of said county, of the crime of (here designate it generally as in the information), by a judgment rendered on the ——— day of ———, A. D. 18—, and having appealed from said judgment to the district court of said county:

We, A. B. and E. F. (or I, E. F.) or (we, E. F. and G. H.), hereby undertake that the said A. B. will appear in the district court of said county, at the term thereof to which the appeal is returnable, and abide the judgment of said court, and not depart without leave of the same, or that we (or I, as the case may be) will pay to the state of Iowa the sum of ——— dollars (the amount of bail fixed).

A. B.

E. F.

(As the case may be.)

Acknowledged before, and accepted by me, at ———, in the township of ———, this ——— day of ———, 18—.

C. D.,

[R., § 5096; C., '51, § 3359.]

Justice of the Peace.

This bond provides only for appearance of defendant, and not that he will pay the amount adjudged against him on appeal: State v. Beneke, 9-203.

6097. Qualifications. 4699. The bail must possess the qualifications, must justify, and must be taken in the same manner prescribed in chapter thirty-eight of this title, and the same proceedings had in all respects, as nearly as applicable, except as in this chapter otherwise provided. [R., § 5097.]

6098. By whom taken. 4700. The bail may be taken by the justice who rendered the judgment, or by any magistrate in the county who has authority to admit to bail, or by the district court or the clerk thereof. [R., § 5098.]

6099. Witness bound over. 4701. When an appeal is taken, the justice must cause all material witnesses to enter into an undertaking, as in a case where a defendant is held to answer on a preliminary examination, to appear and testify on the trial of the appeal in the district court, at the term at which it is returnable, and shall, as soon as practicable, and at least ten days before the first day of such term of the district court of the county, file in the office of the clerk thereof a certified copy of the entries on his docket, together with all the undertakings and papers in the case. [R., § 5099; C., '51, § 3360.]

For similar provisions in case of preliminary examination, see §§ 5631-5634 and notes.

TRIAL IN DISTRICT COURT.

6100. Trial when appealed. 4702. The cause, when thus appealed, shall stand for trial anew in the district court, in the same manner that it should have been tried before the justice, and as nearly as practicable as an issue of fact upon an indictment, without regard to technical errors or defects which have not prejudiced the substantial rights of either party; and the court has full power over the case, the justice of the peace, his docket entries, and his return, to administer the justice of the case according to the law, and shall give judgment accordingly. [R., § 5100; C., '51, §§ 3361-4.]

On appeal the case stands for trial anew, and such trial is to be conducted in the same manner as the first or original trial: State v. Dow, 74-141.

An appeal brings up the case on its merits. There is no method by which defendant may secure a review of errors of law only: State v. Flinn, 51-133.

An appeal brings the case into the district court for trial on its merits, and the court should disregard all merely technical errors or defects not prejudicing the substantial rights of the parties, such, for instance, as that upon change of venue the case was sent to the wrong justice: State v. McEvoy, 68-355.

If no plea is entered of record by the justice of the peace it may be entered by the district court on the trial of the appeal: State v. McCombs, 13-426.

An appeal waives any irregularities in the proceedings before the justice: Ibid.

A defendant who has pleaded guilty before the justice, and been sentenced upon such plea, may, on appeal, withdraw the plea as provided in § 5747 with reference to proceedings upon an indictment: State v. Kraft, 10-330; State v. Oehlslager, 38-297; State v. Farlee, 74-451.

Where, upon the trial before the justice, two of the counts of the information were withdrawn, and defendant was convicted on a third, held, that it was error, on an appeal to the district court, to convict defendant on the two counts which had been withdrawn before the justice: State v. Shilling, 10-106.

Where defendant was tried before a justice upon an information containing several counts, and was found guilty and sentenced for one offense, held, that on appeal he was subject to retrial upon all the counts, and could not insist upon having been acquitted as to any of them: State v. Malling, 11-239.

Defendant cannot, upon trial of an appeal in the district court, have the cause remanded to the lower court in which it was tried, with directions for further proceedings therein, as to grant a change of venue it must be tried in the district court: Ottumwa v. Schaub, 52-515.

As defendant may be tried without a jury before a justice, the provisions of this section authorize the waiver of the jury on trial of an appeal from the justice, although the jury cannot be waived in criminal prosecutions originally commenced in the district court: State v. Ill, 74-441.

See, further, § 6089 and notes.

6101. Appeal not dismissed. 4703. No appeal from the judgment of a justice of the peace in a criminal case shall be dismissed. [R., § 5101.]

6102. Judgment enforced. 4704. If any proceedings be necessary to carry the judgment upon the appeal into effect, they shall be had in the district court. [R., § 5102.]

6103. Appeal to supreme court. 4705. Either party may appeal from the judgment of the district court, to the supreme court, in the same manner as from a judgment in a prosecution by indictment, and the defendant may be admitted to bail in like manner, and similar proceedings shall be had on the appeal in all respects, as nearly as applicable. [R., § 5103; C., '51, § 3366.]

6104. Judgment upon appeal. 4706. The same proceedings shall be had to carry into effect the judgment of the supreme court upon the appeal, as if it had been taken from a judgment prosecuted by indictment. [R., § 5104; C., '51, § 3367.]

CHAPTER 53.

OF PROCEEDINGS BEFORE POLICE AND CITY COURTS IN INCORPORATED CITIES AND TOWNS.

6105. Proceedings in police courts. 4707. The proceedings in police and city courts in incorporated cities and towns, in criminal cases within their jurisdiction, shall be regulated by the provisions of this code, when not otherwise regulated by law. [R., § 5105.]

This section does not give a defendant on trial in the police court for violation of a city ordinance the right to a change of venue: Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572.

A proceeding before a magistrate in the name of the city accusing defendant of the violation of a city ordinance is a criminal prosecution: Davenport v. Bird, 34-524.

The violation of an ordinance of a city punishing acts therein specified by a fine is a crime, and a prosecution to enforce the punishment is a criminal proceeding: Jaquith v. Royce, 42-406; State v. Vail, 57-103.

A proceeding before a mayor of an incorporated town to punish the violation of an ordinance is in the nature of a criminal prosecution: Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61-672.

The provision of the constitution (art. 5, § 8) requiring prosecutions to be in the name of the state of Iowa refers to such criminal prosecutions as shall be instituted and prosecuted before a tribunal provided for in the constitution under the statutes of the state, and does not refer to prosecutions for violations of city ordinances: Davenport v. Bird, 34-524.

A proceeding for a violation of a city ordinance may be brought in the name of the city when so provided by law or ordinance; but if such prosecution is brought in the name of the state, without objection thereto until upon appeal, an objection upon that ground will not be sustained: State v. King, 37-462.

An appeal by a city in a proceeding commenced in its name before a mayor by information to punish for the violation of a city ordinance is to be governed by the rules regulating appeals in criminal cases: Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61-672.

CHAPTER 54.

OF COMPROMISING CERTAIN OFFENSES BY LEAVE OF THE COURT.

6106. When allowed. 4708. When a defendant is prosecuted in a criminal action for a misdemeanor, for which the person injured by the act constituting the offense has a remedy by a civil action, the offense may be compromised as provided in the next section, except when it was committed:

1. By or upon an officer while in the execution of the duties of his office;
2. Riotously; or,
3. With an intent to commit a felony. [R., § 5106.]

6107. Stay of proceedings. 4709. If the party injured in such a case, appear before the court to which the papers on a preliminary examination are required to be returned, at any time before trial, on an indictment for the offense, or the trial of an appeal in the district court, and acknowledge in writing that he has received satisfaction for the injury, the court may, in its discretion, on payment of the costs incurred, order all proceedings to be stayed upon the prosecution, and the defendant to be discharged therefrom. But in that case the reasons for the order must be set forth therein, and entered upon the minutes. [R., § 5107.]

6108. Order a bar. 4710. The order authorized by the last section is a bar to another prosecution for the same offense. [R., § 5108.]

6109. Otherwise not allowed. 4711. No public offense can be compromised, nor can any proceedings for the prosecution or punishment thereof, upon a compromise, be stayed, except as provided in this chapter. [R., § 5109.]

CHAPTER 55.

OF PARDONS AND THE REMISSION OF FINES AND FORFEITURES.

6110. By governor. 4712. The governor shall have power to remit fines and forfeitures upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper. After conviction of murder in the first degree no pardon shall be granted by the governor until he shall have presented the matter to, and obtained the advice of, the general assembly thereon. Before presenting the matter to the general assembly for their action, he shall cause a notice containing the reasons assigned for granting the pardon to be published in two newspapers of general circulation, one of which shall be published at the capital and the other in the county where the conviction was had, and if there be no such paper in such county, then in some adjoining county, for four successive weeks, the last publication to be at least twenty days prior to the commencement of the session of the general assembly to which the matter shall be presented. [R., § 5116; C., '51, § 3278; 14 G. A., ch. 136, § 3.]

A pardon does not operate to discharge the convict from the payment of costs adjudged against him on his trial: Estep v. Lacy, 35-419.

The governor may grant a pardon upon conditions; and where one condition was that he might revoke it upon such showing as he might deem sufficient, held, that the person pardoned could not claim a judicial investigation as to whether he had violated the condition: Arthur v. Craig, 48-264.

As to power of governor to pardon, see Const., art. 4, § 16.

6111. Application for. 4713. When an application is made to the governor for a pardon, reprieve, or commutation, or for the remission of a fine or forfeiture, he may require the judge of the court, or the district [county] attorney, or attorney-general, by whom the action was prosecuted, or the clerk of such court, to furnish him without delay a copy of the minutes of the evidence taken on the trial, and of any other facts having reference to the propriety of his exercise of his powers in the premises. He may also take the testimony of such persons bearing upon such application as he may deem advisable, and for this purpose is authorized to administer the necessary oath. Any person who, in giving such testimony, shall swear falsely, and any person who shall knowingly and corruptly make any false statements in an affidavit intended to be used in connection with an application for pardon, or for remission of fine or forfeiture, shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be punished therefor as provided by law. [R., § 5120; 14 G. A., ch. 96.]

6112. Return to secretary of state. 4714. Whenever any convict is pardoned, or reprieved, or his sentence commuted, or any fine or forfeiture is remitted, it is the duty of the officer to whom the warrant is directed, as soon as may be after executing the same, to make a return in writing thereon to the secretary of state, of his doings under the same, and sign the same with his name of office, and must also file in the office of the clerk of the court in which the conviction was had, or in which it was to have been enforced, a certified copy of the warrant and return, the proper entries in relation to which shall be made by such clerk. [R., § 5121; C., '51, § 3279.]

OF ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN.

6113. Complaint. 4715. When any woman residing in any county of the state is delivered of a bastard child, or is pregnant with a child, which, if born alive, will be a bastard, complaint may be made in writing by any person to the district court of the county where she resides, stating that fact, and charging the proper person with being the father thereof. The proceeding shall be entitled in the name of the state against the accused as defendant. [R., § 1416; C., '51, § 848.]

Nature of proceeding; costs: An action not a criminal action, and the county is not under this and following sections is a civil and liable for costs in case the judgment is in favor of defendant: McAndrew v. Madison County, 67-54.

Dismissal: And held, that the mother might dismiss the prosecution and release defendant, if she chose, or receipt in full for the judgment: Holmes v. State, 2 G. Gr., 501.

Whether she might settle and receipt in full, so as to preclude the county from the right to resort to this proceeding to compel the putative father to execute a bond, with surety, to indemnify the county, quere; but she may thus preclude herself and the county from the right to maintain the proceeding to secure to her the maintenance of the child: Black Hawk County v. Cotter, 32-125; State v. Noble, 70-174.

Jurisdiction: The action cannot be maintained outside of the jurisdiction within which it arose, but a judgment therein is entitled to full faith and credit in any other state. (So held in relation to such proceeding, under the statutes of Indiana): State of Indiana v. Helmer, 21-370.

Procedure under prior statutes discussed: Mills County v. Hamaker, 11-206.

Limitation: The action is not barred in two years after pregnancy. It is not a proceeding for a statutory penalty within the provisions of § 3734: State v. Laughlin, 73-351.

Object of the proceeding: The proceeding is a civil action of a summary nature, intended to secure the maintenance of the bastard, to the end that in no event shall the public become chargeable therewith. Therefore, where another person was chargeable for the maintenance of the bastard, by virtue of having married the mother while enciente, knowing the fact, and therefore standing to the child in loco parentis, held, that the proceeding could not be maintained: State v. Shoemaker, 62-343.

If the child is not born alive, an action, if already commenced, abates, and no judgment can be rendered for maintenance, nor for costs. In no event can the defendant be liable for lying-in expenses and medical attendance upon the mother: State v. Beatty, 61-307.

It is not improper, in a bastardy proceeding, to inform the jury that the object of the proceeding is to protect the county from the expense of keeping an illegitimate child: State v. Pratt, 40-631.

After recognition of an illegitimate child the father is liable for its support under the provisions of §§ 2119, 3671: State v. Hastings, 74-574.

Evidence: The provisions of §§ 5957, 5958, requiring corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice, or of that of the prosecutrix, in case of rape, seduction, etc., to warrant a conviction in a criminal prosecution, are not applicable in this proceeding. Neither need the case against defendant be made out beyond a reasonable doubt; a preponderance of evidence is sufficient: State v. McGlothlen, 56-544.

But this rule applies to the question of guilt or innocence upon the whole case, and does not dispense with the force and effect to be given to presumptions arising from facts disclosed in evidence; and where it appeared that the child was born three months after the marriage of prosecutrix, held, that the presumption would arise that the child was begotten by the person to whom prosecutrix was married, and that unless this presumption was rebutted by clear, satisfactory and conclusive evidence, there would not be a preponderance of evidence such as to warrant conviction of defendant: State v. Romaine, 58-46.

Where the prosecutrix, after cohabiting with defendant, returned to his house, held, that proof that defendant had knowledge of declarations by her that she did so for the purpose of becoming the mother of a child and holding him for its support was not pertinent in his behalf: State v. Pratt, 40-631.

The fact that the jury find that prosecutrix had connection with other men will not preclude them from finding defendant to be the father of the child: Ibid.

In such a proceeding it is always allowable to show unchaste conduct with a man other than the defendant, and especially if the circumstances are such as not to preclude the possibility that the other was the father of the child: State v. Korver, 63-53.

Where the complainant has been guilty of illicit intercourse with a man other than the defendant, it is competent to show such fact as a circumstance to be used in corroboration of the defendant in denying the paternity of the child; and this circumstance may become very important if it is shown who the other man was, and that his intimacies and opportunities continued until after the child in question was begotten: State v. Woodworth, 65-141.

Evidence of the fact that complainant was accustomed, before and after the time the child was conceived, to occupy the same bed with a person who might have been the father of the child, is admissible as tending to affect the credibility of her testimony charging defendant with the child's paternity: State v. Read, 45-469.

A child over two years of age, whose paternity is in question in a bastardy proceeding, may be exhibited to the jury for the purpose of showing the resemblance between the child and the defendant. And held not error to allow counsel to call attention to alleged resemblances, the jury being instructed that if they did not clearly see the resemblance they should disregard all claims based thereon: State v. Smith, 54-104.

Evidence that prosecutrix was pregnant at the time of the alleged intercourse not only tends to corroborate defendant in testifying that he did not have connection with prosecutrix, but shows that he was not the father of the child, even if he did have connection with prosecutrix as alleged: State v. Smith, 61-538.

Also held, that evidence that the child was prematurely born did not corroborate the testimony of prosecutrix that defendant had connection with her at a time which was too near the birth of the child to allow full period of gestation: Ibid.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to support a verdict against the defendant: State v. Quinton, 59-362.

In a particular case, held, that under the evidence the instructions were not as favorable to the defendant as they should have been: State v. Smith, 61-538.

6114. Filing; notice. 4716. Upon the filing of the complaint, the clerk shall cause notice to be given to the person so charged as in an ordinary action. [R., § 1417; C., '51, § 849.]

6115. Lien created. 4717. From the time of the filing of such complaint, a lien shall be created upon the real property of the accused in the county where the action is pending, for the payment of any money and the performance of any order adjudged by the proper court. [R., § 1418; C., '51, § 850.]

6116. Attachment. 4718. If the complaint is verified, the district judge may order an attachment to issue thereon without bond, which order shall specify the amount of property to be seized under the attachment, and may be revoked at any time by such judge or the district court, on a showing made to either for a revocation of the same, and on such terms as such court or judge may deem proper in the premises.

6117. District attorney prosecute. 4719. The district [county] attorney, on being notified of the facts justifying a complaint as contemplated in section four thousand seven hundred and fifteen of this chapter [§ 6113], or of the filing of such complaint, shall prosecute the matter in behalf of the complainant.

6118. Issue; how tried. 4720. The issue on the trial shall be "guilty" or "not guilty," and shall be tried as an ordinary action. [R., §§ 1419, 1422; C., '51, §§ 851, 854.]

6119. Judgment and execution. 4721. If the accused be found guilty, he shall be charged with the maintenance of the child in such sum or sums and in such manner as the court shall direct, and with the costs of the suit; and the clerk may issue execution for any sum ordered to be paid immediately, and afterwards, from time to time, as it shall be required to compel compliance with the order of the court. [R., §§ 1423-4; C., '51, §§ 855-6.]

The judgment may be enforced in another state: State of Indiana v. Helmer, 21-370.

If the child is not born alive, an action, if already commenced, abates, and no judgment can be rendered, for maintenance, nor for costs. In no event can the defendant be liable for lying-in expenses and medical attendance upon the mother: State v. Betty, 61-307.

See, further, notes to § 6113.

6120. Change of order. 4722. The court may, at any time, enlarge, diminish or vacate any order or judgment rendered in the proceeding herein contemplated, on such notice to the defendant as the court or judge may prescribe.

The court has the power to vacate such an order, and it may do so if it thinks that it is better to hold defendant to the general obligation to support his child under § 2119: State v. Hastings, 74-514.

TITLE XXVI.

OF THE DISCIPLINE AND GOVERNMENT OF PRISONS, AND OF THE PENITENTIARY, ITS GOVERNMENT AND DISCIPLINE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF IMPRISONMENT FOR PUBLIC OFFENSES, AND THE DISCIPLINE OF PRISONS.

6121. Jails ; for what used. 4723. The common jails now erected, or which may hereafter be erected in the several counties in this state, in charge of the respective sheriffs, are to be used as prisons :

1. For the detention of persons charged with an offense, and duly committed for trial or examination ;

2. For the detention of persons who may be duly committed to secure their attendance as witnesses on the trial of any criminal cause ;

3. For the confinement of persons pursuant to sentence upon conviction for any offense, and of all other persons duly committed for any cause authorized by law ;

4. The provisions of this section extend to persons detained or committed by authority of the courts of the United States as well as the courts and magistrates of this state. [R., § 5122 ; C., '51, § 3103.]

6122. Keeper's duty. 4724. It is the duty of the keeper of the jail of the county to see that the same is constantly kept in a cleanly and healthy condition, and he must pay strict attention to the personal cleanliness of all the prisoners in his custody as far as may be. Each prisoner must be furnished daily with as much clean water as may be necessary for drink and for personal cleanliness, and with a clean towel and shirt once a week, and must be served three times each day with wholesome food, which must be well cooked, and in sufficient quantity. [R., § 5123 ; C., '51, § 3104.]

6123. Sheriff's duty. 4725. The sheriff of the county must keep a true and exact calendar of all prisoners committed to any prison under his care, which calendar must contain the names of all persons who are committed, their place of abode, the time of their commitment, the time of discharge, the cause of commitment, the authority that committed them, and description of their person ; and when any prisoner is liberated, such calendar must state the time when, and the authority by which such liberation took place ; and if any person escape, it must state particularly the time and manner of such escape. [R., § 5124 ; C., '51, § 3105.]

6124. Return calendar to district court. 4726. At the opening of each term of the district court within his county, the sheriff must return a copy of such calendar under his hand to the judge of such court ; and if any sheriff neglect or refuse so to do, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [R., § 5125 ; C., '51, § 3106.]

6125. What furnished prisoners. 4727. The keeper of each jail must furnish necessary bedding, clothing, fuel, and medical aid for all prisoners under his charge, and keep an accurate account of the same. [R., § 5127 ; C., '51, § 3108.]

eral counties and cities in this state, shall be provided with a separate apartment for the detention of females in such jail or prison.

6127. Females detained in separate apartments. 21 G. A., ch. 176, § 2. All females detained in such jail or prison shall be so detained only in the female apartment thereof, and it shall be unlawful for any sheriff or keeper of any jail to detain at the same time both males and females in the same apartment.

6128. When jail takes fire. 4728. Whenever, by reason of any jail being on fire, or any building contiguous or near to a jail being on fire, there be reason to apprehend that the prisoners confined in such jail may be injured or endangered thereby, the sheriff or keeper of such jail may, at his discretion, remove such prisoners to some safe and convenient place, and there confine them so long as may be necessary to avoid such danger. [R., § 5128; C., '51, § 3109.]

INSPECTORS OF JAILS.

6129. Who constitute. 4729. In each county of this state the judge of the circuit [district] court and district [county] attorney are inspectors of the jails respectively, and have power, from time to time, to visit and inspect the same, and inquire into all matters connected with the government, discipline, and police of such prisons. [R., § 5129; C., '51, § 3110.]

6131. Report. 4731. Such report must state the number of persons confined in such prison, and for what cause respectively, the number of persons usually confined in one room, the disjunction, if any, usually observed in the treatment of the prisoners, the evils, if any, found to exist in such prisons; and particularly whether any provisions of this chapter have been violated or neglected, and the cause of such violation or neglect. [R., § 5131; C., '51, § 3112.]

6132. Right to inspect. 4732. The keepers of such prisons shall admit the said inspectors, or any of them, into any part of such prisons, to exhibit to them on demand, all the books, papers, documents, and accounts pertaining to the prison or to the prisoners confined therein, and to render them every other facility in their power to enable them to discharge the duties above prescribed. [R., § 5132; C., '51, § 3113.]

6134. Refractory prisoners. 4734. If any person confined in any jail upon a conviction or charge of any offense, is refractory or disorderly, or if he wilfully destroy or injure any article of bedding, or other furniture, door, or window, or any other part of such prison, the sheriff of the county, after due inquiry, may chain and secure such person, or cause him to be kept in solitary confinement not more than ten days for any one offense; and during such solitary confinement he may be fed with bread and water only, unless other food is necessary for the preservation of his health. [R., § 5134; C., '51, § 3115.]

6135. Expenses of jail. 4735. All charges and expenses of safe keeping, and maintaining convicts and persons charged with public offenses and committed for examination or trial to the county jail, shall be paid from the county treasury, the accounts therefor being first settled and allowed by the board of supervisors; except prisoners committed or detained by the authority of the courts of the United States, in which cases the United States must pay such expenses to the county. [R., § 5135; C., '51, § 3116.]

This section does not authorize the sheriff to receive any further fees for taking charge of prisoners, etc., than as provided by §§ 5056, 5057: Grubb v. Louisa County, 40-314. And the county is not liable for the service of a jailer employed by the sheriff: McDonald v. Woodbury County, 48-404.

While the sheriff is entitled to reasonable compensation as here provided, he cannot sue the county therefor until his account has been presented for settlement and allowance: Marvin v. Fremont County, 11-463.

A person furnishing clothing to prisoners on the sheriff's request may maintain an action against the county therefor, and while only necessary clothing can be procured at the expense of the county, the discretion of the sheriff, acting in good faith, cannot be controlled by the board of supervisors. The person furnishing clothing upon the sheriff's request is only bound to know that it is for prisoners, and suitable, and, perhaps, necessary: Feldenheimer v. Woodbury County, 56-379.

The county is liable for necessaries for a prisoner, although by reason of his condition it is impossible to confine him in jail: Miller v. Dickinson County, 68-102.

An order made by a justice issuing a warrant for arrest, that the sheriff keep the prisoner in some safe place and provide for his necessities until he is able to be brought before a magistrate for trial, is a nullity and has no effect upon the liability of the county: Ibid.

HARD LABOR.

6136. May be required. 4736. Any able-bodied male person over the age of sixteen years, and not over the age of fifty years, now or hereafter confined in any jail in this state, under the judgment of any court of record or of any other tribunal authorized to imprison for the violation of any law, ordinance, by-law, or police regulation, may be required to labor during the whole or part of the time of his sentence, as hereinafter provided, and such court or other tribunal, when passing final judgment of imprisonment, whether for non-payment of fine or otherwise, shall have the power to determine, and shall determine, whether such imprisonment shall be at hard labor or not. [R., § 5126; C., '51, § 3107; 13 G. A., ch. 69, § 1.]

Where the judgment of a court of general jurisdiction is that the defendant shall be imprisoned at hard labor as provided by this section, it will be presumed that the facts as to age, etc., necessary to warrant such judgment were shown to the court: State v. Winstrand, 37-110, 113.

A judgment may direct that defendant be confined to hard labor at the rate of $1.50 per day (§ 6141), but it cannot direct that he be confined at that rate until the judgment is paid. The duration of the imprisonment is to be determined by § 5894: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47-597; State v. Jordan, 39-387; In re Jordan, 39-394; State v. Anwerda, 40-151.

Where the jury found defendant guilty of murder in the first degree and directed that he should be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary at hard labor for life, and in rendering judgment the court sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary for life, held, that the judgment must be presumed to mean imprisonment at hard labor, and sufficiently corresponded with the verdict: State v. Cole, 63-695.

6137. On highways, public grounds and buildings. 4737. Such labor may be on the streets or public highways on or about public building or grounds, or at such other places in the county where confined, and during such reasonable time of the day as the person having charge of the prisoners may direct, and not exceeding eight hours per day. [13 G. A., ch. 69, § 2.]

Section considered: In re Jordan, 39-394. And see notes to § 6136.

6138. Under whose direction. 4738; 21 G. A., ch. 153. In case the sentence be for the violation of any of the statutes of the state, the sheriff of the county where the imprisonment is, shall superintend the performance of the labor herein contemplated, and shall furnish the tools and materials, if necessary, to work with, at the expense of the county in which the convict is confined, and such county shall be entitled to his earnings. Such labor shall be performed under the direction of the board of supervisors and in accordance with such regulations as said board shall make, not inconsistent with section four thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven of the code [§ 6137] and such labor shall not be leased. [Same, § 3.]

6139. For violation of city ordinance. 4739. When the imprisonment is pursuant to the judgment of any court, police court, police magistrate, mayor, or other tribunal of any incorporated city or town, for the violation of any ordinance, by-law, or other regulation, the marshal shall superintend the performance of the labor herein contemplated, and shall furnish the tools and materials, if necessary, at the expense of the city or town requiring the labor, and such city or town shall be entitled to the earnings of its convicts. [Same, § 4.]

6140. Officer to prevent escapes. 4740. The officer having charge of any convicts for the purpose specified in this chapter, may use such means as, and no more than, are necessary to prevent escape, and if any convict attempt to escape, either while going from or returning to the jail, or while at labor, or at any time, or if he refuse to labor, the officer having him in charge, after due inquiry may, to secure such person, or to cause him to labor, use the means authorized by section four thousand seven hundred and thirty-four of this chapter [§ 6134]; provided, such punishment shall be inflicted within the jail or jail inclosure for refusal to work and shall not be considered as any part of the time for which the prisoner is sentenced. [Same, § 5.]

6141. Prisoners credited for labor. 4741. For every day's labor performed by any convict under the provisions hereof, there shall be credited on any judgment for fine and costs against him, the sum of one dollar and fifty cents, and no person shall be entitled to the benefits of the law providing for the liberation of poor convicts, if, in the opinion of the sheriff, the judgment may be satisfied by the labor of the person as herein authorized. [Same, § 6.]

Under this section a judgment may direct that defendant be confined to hard labor at the rate of $1.50 per day, but it cannot direct that he be confined at that rate until the judgment is paid. The duration of the imprisonment is determined by § 5894: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47-597; State v. Jordan, 39-387; In re Jordan, 39-394; State v. Anwerda, 40-151.

Where it has been made to appear, by the sheriff's answer in a habeas corpus proceeding, that in his opinion the judgment could not be satisfied by the labor of the convict, under the provisions of this section, a subsequent pleading stating a contrary opinion on the part of the sheriff will not operate to prevent the convict's discharge: In re Jordan, 39-394.

See, further, §§ 5894, 6087, and notes.

As to provisions for release of poor convicts, see § 6009.

6142. Cruel treatment. 4742. If any officer or other person treat any prisoner in a cruel or inhuman manner, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Same, § 7.]

6143. Protecting prisoners. 4743. The officer having such prisoner in charge shall protect him from insult and annoyance, and communication with others while at labor, and going to and returning from the same, and he may use such means as are necessary and proper therefor; and any person persisting in insulting, and annoying, or communicating with any prisoner, after being commanded by such officer to desist, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding ten dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding three days. [Same, § 8.]

CHAPTER 2.

OF THE PENITENTIARY OF THE STATE, AND THE GOVERNMENT AND DISCIPLINE THEREOF.

6144. At Fort Madison. 4744. The penitentiary at Fort Madison, in the county of Lee, shall be maintained as the penitentiary of this state in which convicts sentenced for life or any period of time shall be confined, employed, and governed, as hereinafter provided. [R., § 5136; C., '51, § 3117.]

WARDEN.

6145. Shall govern. 4745. It shall be governed by a warden, subject to the supervision of the governor of the state. [R., § 5173.]

6146. How chosen; term of office; duties. 4746; 20 G. A., ch. 17. The warden shall be elected by joint ballot of the general assembly of the state of Iowa, and shall hold his office for two years from the first day of April following his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be the general financial and superintending agent of the state for said institution, and shall be held responsible for its government and disciplinary regulations, for the receipt and disbursement of all moneys that may be appropriated for building, construction, general support, the payment of indebtedness, or salaries of his under-officers, or for any other purpose whatever in connection with said institution. [R., § 5174.]

6148. Restrictions; clerk. 4748. The warden must not carry on nor be concerned in the business of trade or commerce during his continuance in office; he must reside constantly within the precincts of the prison, and shall take charge of the penitentiary, and of all the interests of the state therewith connected, and shall appoint some suitable person as clerk, who shall also act as commissary under the direction of the warden, and one deputy, and as many guards as may be necessary to the safe keeping and government of the convicts, not exceeding one for every ten convicts under his charge, provided that at no time shall there be less than thirteen guards. [R., § 5142; C., '51, § 3128.]

6149. Monthly report. 4749. The warden shall render to the governor of state, between the first and tenth day of every month, and as nearly as practicable every thirty days, and as much oftener as the governor may require, a statement under oath, of all the transactions of the institution, including the receipts and disbursements of funds, for which disbursements he shall, in all cases, present the proper voucher, the entering into or discharging contracts, the reception and discharge of convicts, the construction, altering, or repairing the buildings, walls, etc., and of all his official acts and doings for thirty days next preceding the presentation of said monthly report, which statement must contain an exact account of all moneys received, together with a copy of all proposals received by him and from what source, and on what account, and of all moneys paid out, and for what purpose the same were expended, and a succinct account of all his doings as warden during the said period, and a reference to his authority for such action. [R., § 5177.]

6150. Biennial report. 4750; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 35. The warden shall, in addition to the monthly report provided for in the preceding section, on or before the fifteenth day of September next preceding the commencement of any regular session of the general assembly, report to the governor, under oath, all his acts and doings for the preceding two years, and the general condition of the institution financially and otherwise, together with the estimates necessary for the next succeeding two years, specifying distinctly the items for which those estimates and the basis upon which his calculations are made, and the governor may require a like or any other report before any special session of the general assembly. [R., § 5178.]

6151. Enforce discipline; discharge officers. 4751. The warden shall see that the laws and disciplinary rules and regulations of the institution are faithfully executed by his under-officers, and obeyed by the convicts; and it shall be his duty, upon failure or refusal of any clerk, deputy warden, or guard, to discharge their respective duties agreeably to law, forthwith to discharge such delinquent, and fill the vacancy by the appointment of another person; and disobedience of the convicts shall be punished by the infliction of such penalties as are now provided for by law, and the rules which are now or may hereafter be prescribed for the government of said institution; provided, that it shall be the duty of the warden to keep a register of all punishments inflicted on any convict for disobedience, disorderly conduct, indolence, and of the cause for which they were inflicted. [R., § 5179.]

CLERK.

6152. Bond; oath. 4752. The clerk of the penitentiary shall receive his appointment from and hold his office during the pleasure of the warden, and be in all things responsible to said warden. Before he enters upon the discharge of his duties he shall give bond to the state of Iowa in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, with two or more freehold securities, to be approved by the governor, conditioned that he will keep a fair, honest, impartial, and faithful record of the affairs of the penitentiary, written in a fair round hand, with proper indices, upon a system of book-keeping which shall enable him at all times to present in a plain and intelligible style the financial condition of the institution; that he will discharge all his duties of clerk and commissary faithfully, and with direct reference to the best interests of the penitentiary, agreeably to law, and that he will not become interested directly or indirectly in any contract for furnishing supplies of any nature, kind, or description for the use of said institution, and that he will yield strict and implicit obedience to the laws, rules and regulations of the institution, and to all the legal orders of the warden. He shall, also, take and subscribe an oath, which shall be indorsed on the back of said bond, that he will support the constitution of the United States, and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and that he will scrupulously observe all the conditions, stipulations, and requirements of his bond, and will faithfully discharge his duty as clerk and commissary during his continuance in office agreeably to law, according to the best of his judgment and ability; which bond shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, and suit thereon may be brought for the violation of any of its conditions in the name of the state, for the use of the warden or any other person injured by such violation. [R., § 5180.]

6153. Accounts kept. 4753. Among other entries to be made in the books of the institution, the clerk shall open a separate account in said books with the state, and he also shall have a cash, prisoner's fund, construction, repairing, provision, bedding and lights, fuel, salaries, hospital, and miscellaneous accounts, and an account with the lessees of convict labor, and an account with each officer and guard; and all the entries belonging to any one of the classes, whether they are debits or credits, shall be made under the appropriate head; and, in order to enable the warden to render his statements herein provided for to the governor, the clerk shall, whenever required by the warden, make out a complete balance-sheet and swear to the same. [R., § 5181.]

DEPUTY WARDEN.

6154. Appointment; bond; oath; duties. 4754; 18 G. A., ch. 154, § 3. The deputy warden shall receive his appointment from the warden, and shall hold his office during the pleasure of the warden; and he shall give bond and security for a like amount, and in the same manner; and take a like oath, and be in all respects subject to like responsibilities with the clerk, so far as the same are applicable. He shall keep a regular time-table of the convict labor and record the same in a book to be kept for that purpose, and he shall, moreover, keep a record of all the business under his control, and return an account thereof, together with an account of the convict labor to the clerk at the close of each day. [R., §§ 5182, 5169.]

GUARDS.

6155. Appointment; bond; oath. 4755. Each of the guards, when appointed, shall give bond to the warden, with security to be approved of by said warden, in the penal sum of one thousand dollars, conditioned that he will faithfully discharge his duty as such guard, agreeable to law and the rules and regulations of the prison, and the lawful orders of the warden; and shall also take and subscribe an oath, which shall be indorsed on the back of the bond, that he will support the constitution of the United States, and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and that he will scrupulously observe all the conditions and stipulations of his bond; which bond shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the penitentiary, and a note thereof made on the record as to the date, amount, and name of the principal and his securities. [R., § 5183.]

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

[The word "whatever," in the fourth line, is erroneously printed "any" in the Code.]

In any such action the warden is a competent witness, and his property shall not be taken or attached in any such suit, nor shall any execution issue against him on any judgment thereon, but such judgment shall stand as an ascertained claim against the state; and whenever a new warden is appointed, all the books, accounts, and papers belonging to the prison shall be delivered to him, and he shall be vested with all the powers and subject to all the obligations with regard to any contract or any debts due to or from the prison that his predecessor would have been if no change had taken place in the office. [R., § 5158; C., '51, § 3145.]

6198. Insurrection. 4798. It is the duty of all the officers and other citizens of the state, by every means in their power, to suppress any insurrection among the convicts sentenced to the penitentiary, and to prevent the escape or rescue of any such convict therefrom, or from any other legal confinement or from any person in whose legal custody they may be; and if in so doing or in arresting any convict who may have escaped, such officer or other person wound or kill such convict, or other person aiding or assisting such convict, they shall be justified and held guiltless. [R., § 5159; C., '51, § 3146.]

6199. Governor to visit. 4799. The governor shall visit said penitentiary personally, as often, at least, as once in three months, to inspect the books, papers and records of the clerk, and deputy warden, and strictly to inquire into the official conduct of the warden, to examine into the general, economical, sanitary, and disciplinary regulations of the prison; and to alter and amend the same in any manner which may be best calculated to promote economy in expenditure, and the health, safe keeping, and obedience of convicts, and all such alterations and amendments shall be reduced to writing, and signed by the governor, and filed by him with the clerk, who shall forthwith record the same. And in case it is impracticable at any time for the governor to make such visit and inspection personally, he may appoint some suitable person to perform that service and report to him; but such person so appointed shall not have the power to make any alteration in the government of the institution, but may report to the governor only; and it is hereby made the duty of the governor to perform the service personally, if practicable. [R., § 5186.]

[The word "obedience," in the seventh line, is erroneously printed "convenience" in the Code.]

6200. Appointment of visitor. 4800. In making the appointment of visitor, as provided for in the preceding section, the governor shall take care that no one is appointed who may be supposed to be under the influence surrounding said penitentiary, or any of its officers, nor shall any one be appointed who has hitherto been officially connected therewith, nor shall the same person be appointed twice in succession. [R., § 5187.]

6201. Removal of warden. 4801. Should the governor at any time become satisfied that the warden is guilty of official negligence or malfeasance, in any particular, so that the safety or health of the convicts is endangered, or any funds, appropriated for said institution, illegally invested or misapplied, or that said warden is in any manner conducting the affairs of the prison contrary to law and good faith, he shall forthwith remove said warden, notifying him of the specific causes for his removal, and also reporting to the next session of the general assembly, specifying his reasons therefor. He shall also appoint a warden to fill the vacancy thus occasioned, who shall qualify in the same manner as the regularly elected warden, but shall hold his office only until the next succeeding general assembly. [R., § 5188.]

6202. Filling vacancy. 4802. The governor shall also fill all vacancies that may occur in the office of warden by death, resignation, or otherwise, between the sessions of the general assembly, but no appointment thus made shall last over a session of the general assembly. [R., § 5189.]

For the services herein required of the governor, he shall be allowed out of the state treasury his traveling expenses, and he shall present a bill therefor, under oath, to the auditor of state, which bill, thus sworn to, shall be a sufficient voucher for the auditor to issue his warrant on the treasury of the state for the amount so claimed. [R., § 5194.]

6204. Compensation of visitor. 4804. Should the governor be compelled to appoint any person, or persons, to visit the penitentiary, as herein provided, such person shall render to the governor an account of his traveling expenses and time employed under said appointment, which account shall be sworn to, and the governor shall determine the amount to which said person is entitled, not exceeding three dollars per day and expenses, and shall give him a certificate thereof, which certificate shall authorize the auditor to issue his warrant on the treasurer of state for said amount in favor of the person entitled thereto. [R., § 5195.]

6205. Penalty for failure of duty. 4805. Should any person required to perform any duty relative to the penitentiary, wilfully fail or refuse obedience thereto, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by fine in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, and shall forfeit his office, and should said wilful failure or refusal result in the escape of any of the convicts, or in loss of any of the funds appropriated to the use and benefit of the penitentiary, provided said sum so lost shall exceed the amount of twenty dollars, he shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than two or more than ten years. [R., § 5196.]

The deputy warden of the penitentiary of the state at Fort Madison, and the warden of the additional penitentiary at Anamosa, shall each keep a book in which shall be entered a record of every infraction by a prisoner of the published rules of discipline, with the name of the prisoner guilty. Every prisoner sentenced to either of said penitentiaries for a term of years, or less, who shall have, at the end of the first month no infraction of discipline recorded against him, shall be entitled to a diminution of one day from the time he was sentenced to such penitentiary, and if, at the end of the second month, no infraction of the rules be recorded against him, he shall be entitled to two additional days of diminution from his sentence; and if he shall continue to have no such record against him for the third month, his time shall be shortened three additional days; and if he shall so continue to have no such record against him for the fourth month, his time shall be shortened four additional days; and if he shall so continue for subsequent months, he shall be entitled to five days' diminution of time from his sentence for each month he shall so continue his good behavior; and if any prisoner shall so pass the whole term of his service, he shall be entitled to a certificate thereof from the warden, and upon presentation thereof to the governor, he shall be entitled to a restoration of the rights of citizenship that may have been forfeited by his conviction and sentence; and it shall be the duty of the warden to discharge such convict from such penitentiary when he shall have served the time of his service, less the number of days he may be entitled to have deducted therefrom, in the same manner as if no such deduction had been made.

6210. Act not retrospective. 18 G. A., ch. 154, § 2. This act shall not be construed so as to increase the good time earned by prisoners in the penitentiary of the state at Fort Madison, prior to the act going into effect; provided, however, that prisoners transferred to said penitentiary from the additional penitentiary at Anamosa, shall be entitled to the same allowance for good time that they would have been allowed at said additional penitentiary.

6211. Established. 14 G. A., ch. 43, § 1. There shall be and is hereby permanently established, at or near the stone quarries, near Anamosa, Iowa, an additional penitentiary, in which convicts sentenced for life or any term of time, shall be confined, employed, and governed, as hereinafter provided.

6212. Who to be confined in. 14 G. A., ch. 43, § 14. Able-bodied male persons hereafter convicted of crime and sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary, may be taken to said quarries and additional penitentiary, and there confined and worked under the care of said warden, as soon as suitable accommodation has been provided therefor.

But no such estimate and statement shall be necessary for the first month after convicts are transferred to or confined and worked in said penitentiary quarries.

[Although the section of which the foregoing is amendatory has since been repealed, these provisions, as modified by § 6221 below, would seem to be still in force.]

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

IN CONGRESS JULY 4, 1776.

The Unanimous Declaration of the Thirteenth United States of America.

WHEN, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to affect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate, that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present king of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained, and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature—a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies, at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large, for their exercise; the state remaining, in the meantime, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislature.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others, to subject us to a jurisdiction, foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states:

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing taxes on us without our consent:

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury:

For transporting us beyond seas, to be tried for pretended offenses:

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies:

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our government:

For suspending our own legislature, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection, and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is, at this time, transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries, to complete the works of death, desolation, and tyranny, already begun, with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy, scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attention to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts, by their legislature, to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity; and we have conjured them, by the ties of our common kindred, to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connexions and correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in general congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world, for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connexion between them and the state of Great Britain, is, and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things, which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other, our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

WE, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. All legislative powers herein granted, shall be vested in a congress of the United States, which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives.

SEC. 2. The house of representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states; and the electors in each state have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

No person shall be a representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

[Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons.]* The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each state shall have at least one representative, and until such enumeration shall be made, the state of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware one, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.

When vacancies happen in the representation from any state, the executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

The house of representatives shall choose their speaker and other officers; and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SEC. 3. The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, chosen by the legislature thereof, for six years; and each senator shall have one vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the legislature of any state, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state for which he shall be chosen.

The vice-president of the United States shall be president of the senate, but shall have no vote, unless they be equally divided.

The senate shall choose their other officers, and also a president pro tempore, in the absence of the vice-president, or when he shall exercise the office of president of the United States.

The senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the president of the United States is tried, the chief justice shall preside; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit, under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment, according to law.

SEC. 4. The times, places, and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives, shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof, but the congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations except as to the places of choosing senators.

The congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

SEC. 5. Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner, and under such penalties as each house may provide.

Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house on any question, shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Neither house, during the session of congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

SEC. 6. The senators and representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emolument whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States, shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

SEC. 7. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the house of representatives; but the senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

Every bill which shall have passed the house of representatives and the senate, shall, before it become a law, be presented to the president of the United States; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and, if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law. But in all such cases, the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill, shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the president within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

Every order, resolution, or vote, to which the concurrence of the senate and house of representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the president of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the senate and house of representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

SEC. 8. The congress shall have power:

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes;

To establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures;

To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities, and current coin of the United States;

To establish postoffices and post-roads;

To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries;

To constitute tribunals inferior to the supreme court;

To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offenses against the law of nations;

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water;

To raise and support armies; but no appropriation of money, to that use, shall be for a longer term than two years;

To provide and maintain a navy;

To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces;

To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the states respectively, the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by congress;

To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever, over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular states, and the acceptance of congress, become the seat of the government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock yards, and other needful buildings; — And

To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

SEC. 9. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the states now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight; but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person.

The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

No bill of attainder or ex post facto law, shall be passed.

No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state. No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to or from one state be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state.

SEC. 10. No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

No state shall, without the consent of the congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws; and the net produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any state on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the congress. No state shall, without the consent of congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another state or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. The executive power shall be vested in a president of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the vice-president, chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

Each state shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state may be entitled in the congress; but no senator or representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector.

The electors shall meet in their respective states, and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each; which list they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate. The president of the senate shall, in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such majority, and have an equal number of votes, then the house of representatives shall immediately choose, by ballot, one of them for president; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list, the said house shall, in like manner, choose the president. But in choosing the president, the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the president, the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the vice-president. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the senate shall choose from them, by ballot, the vice-president.]*

The congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes; which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall be eligible to the office of president; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

In case of the removal of the president from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice-president, and the congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the president and vice-president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a president shall be elected.

The president shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

Before he enter on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

“I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of the United States.”

SEC. 2. The president shall be commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several states, when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion in writing of the principal officer in each of the executive departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices; and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the supreme court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for and which shall be established by law. But the congress may, by law, vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper, in the president alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

The president shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the senate, by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session.

SEC. 3. He shall from time to time give to the congress information of the state of the union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses, or either of them; and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper. He shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers. He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed; and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

SEC. 4. The president, vice-president, and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court, and in such inferior courts as the congress may, from time to time, ordain and establish. The judges, both of the supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior; and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

SEC. 2. The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity, arising under this constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states; between a state and citizens of another state, between citizens of different states, between citizens of the same state, claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens, or subjects.

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state shall be a party, the supreme court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned, the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions, and under such regulations as the congress shall make.

The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state, the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed.

SEC. 3. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

The congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

SEC. 2. The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states.

A person charged in any state with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime.

No person held to service or labor in one state, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

SEC. 3. New states may be admitted by the congress into this union; but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state; nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states, or parts of states, without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned, as well as of the congress.

The congress shall have power to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States or of any particular state.

SEC. 4. The United States shall guaranty to every state in this union, a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the legislature, or of the executive (when the legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

The congress, whenever two-thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several states, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this constitution, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the congress; provided, that no amendment, which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article; and that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the senate.

ARTICLE VI.

All debts contracted, and engagements entered into, before the adoption of this constitution, shall be as valid against the United States, under this constitution, as under the confederation.

This constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.

The senators and representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several state legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound by oath or affirmation, to support this constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

The ratification of the conventions of nine states, shall be sufficient for the establishment of this constitution between the states so ratifying the same.

Done in convention, by the unanimous consent of the states present, the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the independence of the United States of America the twelfth. In witness whereof, we have hereunto subscribed our names, Rights forfeited for desertion, etc. SEC. 1996. All persons who deserted the military or naval service of the United States and did not return thereto or report themselves to a provost-marshal within sixty days after the issuance of the proclamation by the president, dated the eleventh day of March, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, are deemed to have voluntarily relinquished and forfeited their rights of citizenship, as well as their right to become citizens; and such deserters shall be forever incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under the United States, or of exercising any rights of citizens thereof.

Exception. SEC. 1997. No soldier or sailor, however, who faithfully served according to his enlistment until the nineteenth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and who, without proper authority or leave first obtained, quit his command or refused to serve after that date, shall be held to be a deserter from the army or navy; but this section shall be construed solely as a removal of any disability such soldier or sailor may have incurred, under the preceding section, by the loss of citizenship and of the right to hold office, in consequence of his desertion.

Avoiding the draft. SEC. 1998. Every person who hereafter deserts the military or naval service of the United States, or who, being duly enrolled, departs the jurisdiction of the district in which he is enrolled, or goes beyond the limits of the United States, with intent to avoid any draft into the military or naval service, lawfully ordered, shall be liable to all the penalties and forfeitures of section nineteen hundred and ninety-six.

Right of expatriation. SEC. 1999. Whereas the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and whereas in the recognition of this principle this government has freely received emigrants from all nations, and invested them with the rights of citizenship; and whereas it is claimed that such American citizens, with their descendants, are subjects of foreign states, owing allegiance to the governments thereof; and whereas it is necessary to the maintenance of public peace that this claim of foreign allegiance should be promptly and finally disavowed: Therefore any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officer of the United States which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of the republic.

Whenever it is made known to the president that any citizen of the United States has been unjustly deprived of his liberty by or under the authority of any foreign government, it shall be the duty of the president forthwith to demand of that government the reasons of such imprisonment; and if it appears to be wrongful and in violation of the rights of American citizenship, the president shall forthwith demand the release of such citizen, and if the release so demanded is unreasonably delayed or refused, the president shall use such means, not amounting to acts of war, as he may think necessary and proper to obtain or effectuate the release; and all the facts and proceedings relative thereto shall as soon as practicable be communicated by the president to congress.

Aliens naturalized. SEC. 2165. An alien may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States in the following manner and not otherwise:

First. He shall declare on oath before a circuit or district court of the United States, or a district or supreme court of the territories, or a court of record of any of the states having common-law jurisdiction, and a seal and clerk, two years at least, prior to his admission, that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, of which the alien may be at the time a citizen or subject.

Second. He shall, at the time of his application to be admitted, declare on oath before some one of the courts above specified, that he will support the constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which he was before a citizen or subject; which proceedings shall be recorded by the clerk of the court.

Third. It shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court admitting such alien that he has resided within the United States five years at least, and within the state or territory where such court is at the time held, one year at least; and that during that time, he has behaved as a man of a good moral character, attached to the principles of the constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; but the oath of the applicant shall, in no case, be allowed to prove his residence.

Fourth. In case the alien applying to be admitted to citizenship has borne any hereditary title, or been of any of the orders of nobility in the kingdom or state from which he came, he shall, in addition to the above requisites, make an express renunciation of his title or order of nobility in the court to which his application is made, and his renunciation shall be recorded in the court.

Fifth. Any alien who was residing within the limits, and under the jurisdiction of the United States, before the twenty-ninth day of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, may be admitted to become a citizen on due proof made to some one of the courts above specified, that he has resided two years at least, within the jurisdiction of the United States, and one year at least, immediately preceding his application within the state or territory where such court is at the time held; and on his declaring on oath, that he will support the constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly, by name, to the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty whereof he was before a citizen or subject; and, also, on its appearing to the satisfaction of the court, that, during such term of two years, he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; and where the alien, applying for admission to citizenship, has borne any hereditary title, or been of any of the orders of nobility in the kingdom or state from which he came, on his moreover making in the court an express renunciation of his title or order of nobility, all of the proceedings, required in this condition to be performed in the court, shall be recorded by the clerk thereof.

Sixth. Any alien, who was residing within the limits, and under the jurisdiction of the United States, between the eighteenth day of June, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and the eighteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and twelve, and who has continued to reside within the same, may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States without having made any previous declaration of his intention to become such; but whenever any person without a certificate of such declaration of intention makes application to be admitted a citizen, it must be proved to the satisfaction of the court, that the applicant was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States, before the eighteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and twelve, and has continued to reside within the same, and the residence of the applicant within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States for at least five years immediately preceding the time of such application, must be proved by the oath of citizens of the United States; which citizens shall be named in the record as witnesses. And such continued residence within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States, when satisfactorily proved, and the place where the applicant has resided for at least five years, shall be stated and set forth, together with the names of such citizens, in the record of the court admitting the applicant; otherwise the same shall not entitle him to be considered and deemed a citizen of the United States. [Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, required by section two thousand one hundred and sixty-five of the Revised Statutes of the United States, may be made by an alien before the clerk of any of the courts named in said section two thousand one hundred and sixty-five; and all such declarations heretofore made before any such clerk are hereby declared as legal and valid, as if made before one of the courts named in said section.]

ORDINANCE OF 1787.

FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE TERRITORY OF THE UNITED STATES, NORTH-WEST OF THE RIVER OHIO.

Be it ordained by the United States, in Congress assembled, That the said territory, for the purposes of temporary government, be one district; subject, however, to be divided into two districts, as future circumstances may, in the opinion of congress, make it expedient.

Be it ordained by the authority aforesaid, That the estates both of resident and non-resident proprietors in the said territory, dying intestate, shall descend to and be distributed among their children, and the descendants of a deceased child, in equal parts; the descendants of a deceased child or grandchild, to take a share of their deceased parent in equal parts among them; and where there shall be no children or descendants, then in equal parts to the next of kin, in equal degree; and among collaterals, the children of a deceased brother or sister of the intestate, shall have, in equal parts among them, their deceased parent's share; and there shall, in no case, be a distinction between kindred of the whole and half blood; saving, in all cases, to the widow of the intestate her third part of the real estate for life, and one-third part of the personal estate; and this law relative to descents and dower shall remain in full force until altered by the legislature of the district. And until the governor and judges shall adopt laws, as hereinafter mentioned, estates in the said territory may be devised or bequeathed by wills in writing, signed and sealed by him or her, in whom the estate may be (being of full age), and attested by three witnesses; and real estates may be conveyed by lease and release, or bargain and sale, signed, sealed and delivered by the person, being of full age, in whom the estate may be, and attested by two witnesses; provided such wills be duly proved, and such conveyances be acknowledged or the execution thereof duly proved, and be recorded within one year after proper magistrates, courts and registers shall be appointed for that purpose; and personal property may be transferred by delivery; saving, however, to the French and Canadian inhabitants, and other settlers of the Kaskaskias, Saint Vincents, and the neighboring villages, who have heretofore professed themselves citizens of Virginia, their laws and customs now in force among them, relative to the descent and conveyance of property.

Be it ordained by the authority aforesaid, That there shall be appointed, from time to time, by congress, a governor, whose commission shall continue in force for the term of three years, unless sooner revoked by congress; he shall reside in the district, and have a freehold estate therein, in one thousand acres of land, while in the exercise of his office.

There shall be appointed, from time to time, by congress, a secretary, whose commission shall continue in force for four years, unless sooner revoked; he shall reside in the district, and have a freehold estate therein in five hundred acres of land, while in the exercise of his office. It shall be his duty to keep and preserve the acts and laws passed by the legislature, and the public records of the district, and the proceedings of the governor in his executive department; and transmit authentic copies of such acts and proceedings every six months, to the secretary of congress. There shall also be appointed a court, to consist of three judges, any two of whom to form a court, who shall have a common-law jurisdiction, and reside in the district, and have each therein a freehold estate in five hundred acres of land, while in the exercise of their offices; and their commissions shall continue in force during good behaviour.

The governor and judges, or a majority of them, shall adopt and publish, in the district, such laws of the original states, criminal and civil, as may be necessary and best suited to the circumstances of the district, and report them to congress from time to time; which laws shall be in force in the district until the organization of the general assembly therein, unless disapproved of by congress; but afterwards the legislature shall have authority to alter them as they shall think fit.

The governor for the time being, shall be commander-in-chief of the militia, appoint and commission all officers in the same, below the rank of general officers; all general officers shall be appointed and commissioned by congress.

Previous to the organization of the general assembly, the governor shall appoint such magistrates and other civil officers, in each county or township, as he shall find necessary for the preservation of the peace and good order in the same. After the general assembly shall be organized, the powers and duties of the magistrates and other civil officers shall be regulated and defined by the said assembly; but all magistrates and other civil officers, not herein otherwise directed, shall, during the continuance of this temporary government, be appointed by the governor.

For the prevention of crimes and injuries, the laws to be adopted or made, shall have force in all parts of the district, and for the execution of process, criminal and civil, the governor shall make proper divisions thereof; and he shall proceed from time to time, as circumstances may require, to lay out the parts of the district, in which the Indian titles shall have been extinguished, into counties and townships, subject, however, to such alterations as may thereafter be made by the legislature.

So soon as there shall be five thousand free male inhabitants of full age, in the district, upon giving proof thereof to the governor, they shall receive authority, with time and place, to elect representatives from their counties or townships, to represent them in the general assembly; provided, that for every five hundred free male inhabitants, there shall be one representative, and so on progressively with the number of free male inhabitants, shall the right of representation increase, until the number of representatives shall amount to twenty-five, after which, the number and proportion of representatives shall be regulated by the legislature; provided, that no person be eligible or qualified to act as a representative, unless he shall have been a citizen of one of the United States three years, and be a resident in the district, or unless he shall have resided in the district three years, and in either case shall likewise hold in his own right, in fee simple, two hundred acres of land within the same; provided also, that a freehold in fifty acres of land in the district, having been a citizen of one of the states, and being resident in the district, or the like freehold, and two years' residence in the district shall be necessary to qualify a man as an elector of a representative.

The representatives thus elected shall serve for the term of two years; and in case of the death of a representative, or removal from office, the governor shall issue a writ to the county or township for which he was a member, to elect another in his stead, to serve for the residue of the term.

The general assembly, or legislature, shall consist of the governor, legislative council, and a house of representatives. The legislative council shall consist of five members, to continue in office five years, unless sooner removed by congress; any three of whom to be a quorum. And the members of the council shall be nominated and appointed in the following manner, to wit: As soon as representatives shall be elected, the governor shall appoint a time and place for them to meet together, and when met, they shall nominate ten persons, residents in the district, and each possessed of a freehold in five hundred acres of land, and return their names to congress; five of whom congress shall appoint and commission to serve as aforesaid; and whenever a vacancy shall happen in the council, by death or removal from office, the house of representatives shall nominate two persons, qualified as aforesaid, for each vacancy, and return their names to congress; one of whom congress shall appoint and commission for the residue of the term. And every five years, four months at least before the expiration of the time of service of the members of the council, the said house shall nominate ten persons, qualified as aforesaid, and return their names to congress; five of whom congress shall appoint and commission to serve as members of the council five years, unless sooner removed. And the governor, legislative council, and house of representatives, shall have authority to make laws, in all cases, for the good government of the district, not repugnant to the principles and articles in this ordinance established and declared. And all bills, having passed by a majority in the house, and by a majority in the council, shall be referred to the governor for his assent; but no bill or legislative act whatever shall be of any force without his assent. The governor shall have power to convene, prorogue, and dissolve the general assembly, when in his opinion it shall be expedient.

The governor, judges, legislative council, secretary, and such other officers as congress shall appoint in the district, shall take an oath or affirmation, of fidelity and of office; the governor before the president of congress, and all other officers before the governor. As soon as a legislature shall be formed in the district, the council and house assembled, in one room, shall have authority, by joint ballot, to elect a delegate to congress, who shall have a seat in congress, with a right of debating, but not of voting, during this temporary government.

And for extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, which form the basis whereon these republics, their laws, and constitutions are erected; to fix and establish those principles as the basis of all laws, constitutions and governments, which forever hereafter shall be formed in the said territory; to provide also for the establishment of states, and permanent governments therein, and for their admission to share in the federal councils, on an equal footing with the original states, at as early periods as may be consistent with the general interest:

ARTICLES OF COMPACT.

It is hereby ordained and declared, by the authority aforesaid, That the following articles shall be considered as articles of compact between the original states, and the people and states in the said territory, and forever remain unalterable, unless by common consent, to wit:

Religion. ARTICLE 1. No person demeaning himself in a peaceable and orderly manner shall ever be molested on account of his mode of worship, or religious sentiments, in the said territory.

Common-law rights secured. ART. 2. The inhabitants of the said territory shall always be entitled to the benefits of the writ of habeas corpus, and trial by jury; of a proportionate representation of the people in the legislature, and of judicial proceedings according to the course of the common law. All persons shall beailable, unless for capital offenses, where the proof shall be evident, or the presumption great. All fines shall be moderate; and no cruel or unusual punishments shall be inflicted. No man shall be deprived of his liberty or property, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land; and should the public exigencies make it necessary, for the common preservation, to take any person's property, or to demand his particular services, full compensation shall be made for the same. And in the just preservation of rights and property, it is understood and declared, that no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said territory, that shall in any manner whatever interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements, bona fide and without fraud, previously formed.

Education; the Indians. ART. 3. Religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged. The utmost good faith shall always be observed towards the Indians; their lands and property shall never be taken from them without their consent, and in their property, rights, and liberty, they never shall be invaded or disturbed, unless in just and lawful wars, authorized by congress; but laws, founded in justice and humanity, shall, from time to time, be made, for preventing wrongs being done to them, and for preserving peace and friendship with them.

Territory; taxes; navigable waters. ART. 4. The said territory, and the states which may be formed therein, shall forever remain a part of this confederacy of the United States of America, subject to the articles of confederation, and to such alterations therein as shall be constitutionally made; and to all the acts and ordinances of the United States in congress assembled, conformable thereto. The inhabitants and settlers in the said territory shall be subject to pay a part of the federal debts, contracted, or to be contracted, and a proportional part of the expenses of government, to be apportioned on them by congress, according to the same common rule and measure by which apportionments thereof shall be made on the other states; and the taxes for paying their proportion shall be laid and levied by the authority and direction of the legislatures of the district or districts, or new states, as in the original states, within the time agreed upon by the United States in congress assembled. The legislatures of those districts or new states, shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil by the United States in congress assembled, nor with any regulations congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to the bona fide purchasers. No tax shall be imposed on lands, the property of the United States; and in no case shall non-resident proprietors be taxed higher than residents. The navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and St. Lawrence, and the carrying places between the same, shall be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said territory, as to the citizens of the United States, and those of any other states that may be admitted into the confederacy, without any tax, impost, or duty therefor.

New states. ART. 5. There shall be formed, in the said territory, not less than three, nor more than five states; and the boundaries of the states, as soon as Virginia shall alter her act of cession, and consent to the same, shall become fixed and established as follows, to wit: the western state in the said territory shall be bounded by the Mississippi, the Ohio, and Wabash rivers; a direct line drawn from the Wabash and Post Vincents, due north to the territorial line between the United States and Canada; and by the said territorial line to the Lake of the Woods and Mississippi. The middle state shall be bounded by the said direct line, the Wabash from Post Vincents to the Ohio, by the Ohio, by a direct line drawn due north from the mouth of the Great Miami, to the said territorial line, and by the said territorial line. The eastern state shall be bounded by the last-mentioned direct line, the Ohio, Pennsylvana, and the said territorial line; provided, however, and it is further understood and declared, That the boundaries of these three states shall be subject so far to be altered, that if congress shall hereafter find it expedient, they shall have authority to form one or two states in that part of the said territory which lies north of an east and west line drawn through the southerly bend or extreme of Lake Michigan. And whenever any of the said states shall have sixty thousand free inhabitants therein, such state shall be admitted, by its delegates, into the congress of the United States, on an equal footing with the original states, in all respects whatever; and shall be at liberty to form a permanent constitution and state government; provided, the constitution and government so to be formed, shall be republican, and in conformity to the principles contained in these articles; and so far as it can be consistent with the general interest of the confederacy, such admission shall be allowed at an earlier period, and when there may be a less number of free inhabitants in the state than sixty thousand.

Slavery. ART. 6. There shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in the said territory, otherwise than in the punishment of crimes, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted; provided always, that any person escaping into the same, from whom labor or service is lawfully claimed in any of the original states, such fugitive may be lawfully reclaimed and conveyed to the person claiming his or her labor or service, as aforesaid.

And after the said third day of July next, all power and authority of the government of Michigan in and over the territory hereby constituted, shall cease; provided, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to impair the rights of person or property, now appertaining to any Indians within the said territory, so long as such rights shall remain unextinguished by treaty between the United States and such Indians, or to impair the obligations of any treaty now existing between the United States and such Indians, or to impair or anywise to affect the authority of the government of the United States to make any regulations respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights, by treaty, or law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to the government to make if this act had never been passed; provided, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to inhibit the government of the United States from dividing the territory hereby established into one or more other territories, in such manner, and at such times, as congress shall, in its discretion, deem convenient and proper, or from attaching any portion of said territory to any other state or territory of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the executive power and authority in and over the said territory shall be vested in a governor, who shall hold his office for three years, unless sooner removed by the president of the United States. The governor shall reside within the said territory, shall be commander-in-chief of the militia thereof, shall perform the duties and receive the emoluments of superintendent of Indian affairs, and shall approve of all laws passed by the legislative assembly before they shall take effect; he may grant pardons for offenses against the laws of the said territory, and reprieves for offenses against the laws of the United States, until the decision of the president can be made known thereon; he shall commission all officers who shall be appointed to office under the laws of the said territory, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be a secretary of the said territory, who shall reside therein, and hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the president of the United States; he shall record and preserve all the laws and proceedings of the legislative assembly hereinafter constituted, and all the acts and proceedings of the governor in his executive department; he shall transmit one copy of the laws and one copy of the executive proceedings on or before the first Monday in December in each year to the president of the United States; and at the same time, two copies of the laws to the speaker of the house of representatives, for the use of congress. And in case of the death, removal, resignation, or necessary absence, of the governor from the territory, the secretary shall have, and he is hereby authorized and required to execute and perform, all the powers and duties of the governor during such vacancy or necessary absence.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power shall be vested in a governor and a legislative assembly. The legislative assembly shall consist of a council and house of representatives. The council shall consist of thirteen members, having the qualifications of voters as hereinafter prescribed, whose term of service shall continue four years. The house of representatives shall consist of twenty-six members, possessing the same qualifications as prescribed for the members of the council, and whose term of service shall continue two years. And the said members of the council and house of representatives shall reside in and be inhabitants of the district for which they may be elected. Previous to the first election, the governor of the territory shall cause the census or enumeration of the inhabitants of the several counties in the territory to be taken and made by the sheriffs of the said counties, respectively, and returns thereof made by said sheriffs to the governor. The first election shall be held at such time and place, and be conducted in such manner as the governor shall appoint and direct; and he shall, at the same time, declare the number of members of the council and house of representatives to which each of the counties is entitled under this act. The number of persons authorized to be elected having the greatest number of votes in each of the said counties for the council, shall be declared, by the said governor, to be duly elected to the said council; and the person or persons having the greatest number of votes for the house of representatives, equal to the number to which each county may be entitled, shall also be declared, by the governor, to be duly elected; provided, the governor shall order a new election when there is a tie between two or more persons voted for, to supply the vacancy made by such tie. And the persons thus elected to the legislative assembly shall meet at such place on such day as he shall appoint; but, thereafter, the time, place and manner of holding and conducting all elections by the people, and the apportioning the representation in the several counties to the council and house of representatives, according to population, shall be prescribed by law, as well as the day of the annual commencement of the session of the said legislative assembly; but no session, in any year, shall exceed the term of seventy-five days.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That every free white male citizen of the United States, above the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been an inhabitant of said territory at the time of its organization, shall be entitled to vote at the first election, and shall be eligible to any office within the said territory; but the qualifications of voters at all subsequent elections shall be such as shall be determined by the legislative assembly; provided, that the right of suffrage shall be exercised only by citizens of the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power of the territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of non-residents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents. All the laws of the governor and legislative assembly shall be submitted to, and, if disapproved by the congress of the United States, the same shall be null and of no effect.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That all township officers and all county officers, except judicial officers, justices of the peace, sheriffs, and clerks of courts, shall be elected by the people, in such manner as may be provided by the governor and legislative assembly. And writs of error, and appeals from the final decisions of the said courts, in all such cases, shall be made to the supreme court of the territory in the same manner as in other cases. The said clerks shall receive, in all such cases, the same fees which the clerk of the district court of the United States in the northern district of the state of New York receives for similar services.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That there shall be an attorney for the said territory appointed, who shall continue in office four years, unless sooner removed by the president, and who shall receive the same fees and salary as the attorney of the United States for the Michigan territory. There shall also be a marshal for the territory appointed, who shall hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the president, who shall execute all process issuing from the said courts when exercising their jurisdiction as circuit and district courts of the United States. And afterwards the chief justice and associate judges, and all other civil officers in said territory, before they act as such, shall take a like oath or affirmation before the said governor or secretary, or some judge or justice of the territory who may be duly commissioned and qualified, which said oath or affirmation shall be certified and transmitted by the person taking the same to the secretary, to be by him recorded as aforesaid; and, afterwards, the like oath or affirmation shall be taken, certified, and recorded, in such manner and form as may be prescribed by law. The governor shall receive an annual salary of two thousand five hundred dollars for his services as governor and as superintendent of Indian affairs. The said chief justice and associate judges shall each receive an annual salary of eighteen hundred dollars. The secretary shall receive an annual salary of twelve hundred dollars. The said salaries shall be paid quarter-yearly, at the treasury of the United States. The members of the legislative assembly shall be entitled to receive three dollars each per day, during their attendance at the sessions thereof, and three dollars each for every twenty miles' travel in going to and returning from the

The said inhabitants shall also be entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities, heretofore granted and secured to the territory of Michigan, and to its inhabitants, and the existing laws of the territory of Michigan shall be extended over said territory, so far as the same shall not be incompatible with the provisions of this act, subject, nevertheless, to be altered, modified, or repealed, by the governor and legislative assembly of the said territory of Wisconsin; and further, the laws of the United States are hereby extended over, and shall be in force in said territory, so far as the same, or any provisions thereof may be applicable.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That all justices of the peace, constables, sheriffs, and all other executive and judicial officers, who shall be in office on the third day of July next, in that portion of the present territory of Wisconsin, which will then, by this act, become the territory of Iowa, shall be, and are hereby authorized and required to continue to exercise and perform the duties of their respective offices, as officers of the territory of Iowa, temporarily, and until they or others shall be duly appointed to fill their places by the territorial government of Iowa, in the manner herein directed; provided, that no officer shall hold or continue in office by virtue of this provision, over twelve months from the said third day of July next.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That all causes which shall have been or may be removed from the courts held by the present territory of Wisconsin, in the counties west of the Mississippi river, by appeal or otherwise, into the supreme court for the territory of Wisconsin, and which shall be undetermined therein on the third day of July next, shall be certified by the clerk of the said supreme court, and transferred to the supreme court of said territory of Iowa, there to be proceeded in to final determination, in the same manner that they might have been in the said supreme court of the territory of Wisconsin.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That the sum of five thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by, and under the direction of the governor of said territory of Iowa, in the purchase of a library, to be kept at the seat of government, for the accommodation of the governor, legislative assembly, judges, secretary, marshal, and attorney of said territory, and such other persons as the governor and legislative assembly shall direct.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That from and after the day named in this act for the organization of the territory of Iowa, the term of the members of the council and house of representatives of the territory of Wisconsin shall be deemed to have expired, and an entirely new organization of the council and house of representatives of the territory of Wisconsin, as constituted by this act, shall take place as follows: As soon as practicable, after the passage of this act, the governor of the territory of Wisconsin shall apportion the thirteen members of the council, and twenty-six members of the house of representatives, among the several counties or districts comprised within said territory, according to their population, as nearly as may be (Indians excepted). The first election shall be held at such time as the governor shall appoint and direct, and shall be conducted, and returns thereof made in all respects according to the provisions of the laws of said territory, and the governor shall declare the person having the greatest number of votes to be elected, and shall order a new election when there is a tie between two or more persons voted for, to supply the vacancy made by such tie. The persons thus elected shall meet at Madison, the seat of government, on such day as he shall appoint, but thereafter, the apportioning of the representation in the several counties to the council and house of representatives, according to population, the day of their election, and the day for the commencement of the session of the legislative assembly, shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That temporarily, and until otherwise provided by law of the legislative assembly, the governor of the territory of Iowa may define the judicial districts of said territory, and assign the judges who may be appointed for said territory, to the several districts, and also appoint the time for holding courts in the several counties in each district, by proclamation to be issued by him; but the legislative assembly, at their first, or any subsequent session, may organize, alter, or modify such judicial districts, and assign the judges, and alter the times of holding the courts, or any of them.

Approved June 12, 1838.

AMENDMENTS.

AN ACT to alter and amend the organic law of the territories of Wisconsin and Iowa.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every bill which shall have passed the council and house of representatives of the territories of Iowa and Wisconsin shall, before it become a law, be presented to the governor of the territory; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it with his objections to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered; and if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law. But, in all such cases, the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays; and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journals of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the governor within three days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the assembly by adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not be so construed as to deprive congress of the right to disapprove of any law passed by the said legislative assembly, or in any way to impair or alter the power of congress over laws passed by said assembly.

Approved March 3, 1839.

AN ACT to authorize the election or appointment of certain officers in the territory of Iowa, and for other purposes.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the legislative assembly of the territory of Iowa, shall be, and are hereby authorized to provide by law for the election or appointment of sheriffs, judges of probate, justices of the peace, and county surveyors, within the said territory, in such way or manner and at such times and places as to them may seem proper; and after a law shall have been passed by the legislative assembly for that purpose, all elections or appointments of the above-named officers thereafter to be had or made shall be in pursuance of such law.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the term of service of the present delegate for said territory of Iowa shall expire on the twenty-seventh day of October, eighteen hundred and forty; and the qualified electors of said territory may elect a delegate to serve from the said twenty-seventh day of October to the fourth day of March thereafter, at such time and place as shall be prescribed by law by the legislative assembly, and thereafter a delegate shall be elected, at such time and place as the legislative assembly may direct, to serve for a congress, as members of the house of representatives are now elected.

Approved March 3, 1839.

ADMISSION OF IOWA.

AN ACT for the admission of the states of Iowa and Florida into the Union.

WHEREAS, the people of the territory of Iowa did, on the seventh day of October, eighteen hundred and forty-four, by a convention of delegates called and assembled for that purpose, form for themselves a constitution and state government; and whereas, the people of the territory of Florida did, in like manner, by their delegates, on the eleventh day of January, eighteen hundred and thirty-nine, form for themselves a constitution and state government, both of which said constitutions are republican; and said conventions having asked the admission of their respective territories into the union as states, on equal footing with the original states:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the states of Iowa and Florida be, and the same are hereby declared to be states of the United States of America, and are hereby admitted into the union on equal footing with the original states, in all respects whatsoever.

Boundaries. SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the following shall be the boundaries of the said state of Iowa, to wit: Beginning at the mouth of the Des Moines river, at the middle of the Mississippi, thence by the middle of the channel of that river to a parallel of latitude passing through the mouth of the Mankato, or Blue-earth river, thence west along the said parallel of latitude to a point where it is intersected by a meridian line, seventeen degrees and thirty minutes west of the meridian of Washington city, thence due south to the northern boundary line of the state of Missouri, thence eastwardly following that boundary to the point at which the same intersects the Des Moines river, thence by the middle of the channel of that river to the place of beginning.

Concurrent jurisdiction. SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said state of Iowa shall have concurrent jurisdiction on the river Mississippi, and every other river bordering on the said state of Iowa, so far as the said rivers shall form a common boundary to said state, and any other state or states now or hereafter to be formed or bounded by the same: such rivers to be common to both: and that the said river Mississippi, and the navigable waters leading into the same, shall be common highways, and forever free as well to the inhabitants of said state, as to all other citizens of the United States, without any tax, duty, impost, or toll therefor, imposed by the said state of Iowa.

Assent of people. SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That it is made and declared to be a fundamental condition of the admission of said state of Iowa into the union, that so much of this act as relates to the said state of Iowa shall be assented to by a majority of the qualified electors at their township elections, in the manner and at the time prescribed in the sixth section of the thirteenth article of the constitution adopted at Iowa City the first day of November, Anno Domini eighteen hundred and forty-four, or by the legislature of said state. And so soon as such assent shall be given, the president of the United States shall announce the same by proclamation; and therefrom without farther proceedings on the part of congress the admission of the said state of Iowa into the union, on an equal footing in all respects whatever with the original states, shall be considered as complete.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That said state of Florida shall embrace the territories of East and West Florida, which by the treaty of amity, settlement and limits between the United States and Spain, on the twenty-second day of February, eighteen hundred and nineteen, were ceded to the United States.

Representative in congress. SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That until the next census and apportionment shall be made, each of said states of Iowa and Florida shall be entitled to one representative in the house of representatives of the United States.

Taxation of public lands; ordinance of the convention of Iowa not obligatory on the United States. SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That said states of Iowa and Florida are admitted into the union on the express condition that they shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the public lands lying within them, nor levy any tax on the same whilst remaining the property of the United States: provided, that the ordinance of the convention that formed the constitution of Iowa, and which is appended to the said constitution, shall not be deemed or taken to have any effect or validity, or to be recognized as in any manner obligatory upon the government of the United States.

Approved March 3, 1845.

AN ACT supplemental to the act for the admission of the states of Iowa and Florida into the Union.

Laws of United States. SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the laws of the United States, which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the state of Iowa as elsewhere within the United States.

District court. SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said state shall be one district, and be called the district of Iowa; and a district court shall be held therein, to consist of one judge, who shall reside in the said district, and be called a district judge. He shall hold, at the seat of government of the said state, two sessions of the said district court annually, on the first Monday in January, and he shall, in all things, have and exercise the same jurisdiction and powers which were by law given to the judge of the Kentucky district, under an act entitled "An act to establish the judicial courts of the United States." He shall appoint a clerk for the said district, who shall reside and keep the records of the said court at the place of holding the same; and shall receive, for the services performed by him, the same fees to which the clerk of the Kentucky district is by law entitled for similar services.

Compensation of judge. SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be allowed to the judge of the said district court the annual compensation of fifteen hundred dollars, to commence from the date of his appointment, to be paid quarterly at the treasury of the United States.

United States attorney. SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed in the said district, a person learned in the law, to act as attorney for the United States; who shall, in addition to his stated fees, be paid annually by the United States two hundred dollars, as a full compensation for all extra services; the said payments to be made quarterly, at the treasury of the United States.

Marshal. SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That a marshal shall be appointed for the said district, who shall perform the same duties, be subject to the same regulations and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees, as are prescribed and allowed to marshals in other districts; and shall, moreover, be entitled to the sum of two hundred dollars annually, as a compensation for all extra services.

Propositions submitted. SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That in lieu of the propositions submitted to the congress of the United States, by an ordinance passed on the first day of November, eighteen hundred and forty-four, by the convention of delegates at Iowa City, assembled for the purpose of making a constitution for the state of Iowa, which are hereby rejected, the following propositions be, and the same are hereby, offered to the legislature of the state of Iowa, for their acceptance or rejection; which, if accepted, under the authority conferred on the said legislature, by the convention which framed the constitution of the said state, shall be obligatory upon the United States.

1. That section numbered sixteen in every township of the public lands, and, where such section has been sold or otherwise disposed of, other lands equivalent thereto, and as contiguous as may be, shall be granted to the state for the use of schools.

2. That the seventy-two sections of land set apart and reserved for the use and support of a university, by an act of congress approved on the twentieth day of July, eighteen hundred and forty, entitled "An act granting two townships of land for the use of a university in the territory of Iowa," are hereby granted and conveyed to the state, to be appropriated solely to the use and support of such university, in such manner as the legislature may prescribe.

3. That five entire sections of land to be selected and located under the direction of the legislature, in legal divisions of not less than one quarter section, from any of the unappropriated lands belonging to the United States within the said state, are hereby granted to the state for the purpose of completing the public buildings of the said state, or for the erection of public buildings at the seat of government of the said state, as the legislature may determine and direct.

4. That all salt-springs within the state, not exceeding twelve in number, with six sections of land adjoining, or as contiguous as may be to each, shall be granted to the said state for its use; the same to be selected by the legislature thereof, within one year after the admission of said state, and the same, when so selected, to be used on such terms, conditions, and regulations, as the legislature of the state shall direct: provided, that no salt-spring, the right whereof is now vested in any individual or individuals, or which may hereafter be confirmed or adjudged to any individual or individuals, shall, by this section be granted to said state: and provided also, that the general assembly shall never lease or sell the same, at any one time, for a longer period than ten years, without the consent of congress.

5. That five per cent. of the net proceeds of sales of all public lands lying within the said state, which have been or shall be sold by congress, from and after the admission of said state, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be appropriated for making public roads and canals within the said state, as the legislature may direct: provided, that the five foregoing propositions herein offered are on the condition that the legislature of the said state, by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by the convention which framed the constitution of the said state, shall provide by an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that the said state shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, nor with any regulations congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to the bona fide purchasers thereof; and that no tax shall be imposed upon lands the property of the United States; and that in no case shall non-resident proprietors be taxed higher than residents; and that the bounty lands granted, or hereafter to be granted, for military services during the late war, shall, while they continue to be held by the patentees or their heirs, remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under the authority of the state, whether for state, county, township, or any other purpose, for the term of three years from and after the date of the patents, respectively.

Approved March 3, 1845.

CONSTITUTION OF IOWA.

Preamble. WE, THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF IOWA, grateful to the Supreme Being for the blessings hitherto enjoyed, and feeling our dependence on Him for a continuation of those blessings, do ordain and establish a free and independent government, by the name of the STATE OF IOWA, the boundaries whereof shall be as follows:

Boundaries. Beginning in the middle of the main channel of the Mississippi river, at a point due east of the middle of the mouth of the main channel of the Des Moines river; thence up the middle of the main channel of the said Des Moines river, to a point on said river where the northern boundary line of the state of Missouri — as established by the constitution of that state, adopted June 12th, 1820 — crosses the said middle of the main channel of the said Des Moines river; thence westwardly along the said northern boundary line of the state of Missouri, as established at the time aforesaid, until an extension of said line intersects the middle of the main channel of the Missouri river; thence up the middle of the main channel of the said Missouri river to a point opposite the middle of the main channel of the Big Sioux river, according to Nicollett's map; thence up the main channel of the said Big Sioux river, according to the said map, until it is intersected by the parallel of forty-three degrees and thirty minutes north latitude; thence east along said parallel of forty-three degrees and thirty minutes, until said parallel intersects the middle of the main channel of the Mississippi river; thence down the middle of the main channel of the said Mississippi river to the place of beginning.

“The middle of the main channel of the Mississippi river” as here used means the middle of the main bed of the river from shore to shore: Dunleith, etc., Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55-558.

ARTICLE 1.—BILL OF RIGHTS.

Rights of persons. SECTION 1. All men are, by nature, free and equal, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

Discrimination on account of color: This section forbids discrimination by a common carrier against a passenger on account of color. Therefore, held, that a regulation of a steamboat by which a colored person was denied the privilege of a seat at the table provided for passengers could not be enforced: Coger v. Northwestern U. Packet Co., 37-145.

Also, held, that colored children cannot be excluded from the public schools, nor compelled to attend a separate school: Clark v. Board of Directors, 24-266; Smith v. Directors, 40-518; Dove v. Independent School Dist., 41-689.

Discriminations against corporations: An act providing a special method for the taxation of the property of railway companies, held unconstitutional, because not made applicable to property of the same character owned by private individuals. (See art. 8, § 2): Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633.

But the statute authorizing the recovery of double damages for stock injured by a railway company on its track where it has a right to fence is not unconstitutional as denying to any person the equal protection of the law, such provision being intended merely as a penalty for the purpose of inducing the fencing of railroads: Tredway v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 43-527.

Permits to sell liquors: This section is not violated by a statutory provision that permits to sell intoxicating liquors shall only be granted to persons of good moral character: In re Ruth, 32-250.

Nor by the provisions of the prohibitory liquor law: Santo v. State, 2-165, 216.

As to requirement that laws shall have a uniform operation, etc., see art. 1, § 6, and art. 3, § 30.

As to due process of law, see art. 1, § 9.

Political power. SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right, at all times, to alter or reform the same, whenever the public good may require it.

Political power consists of legislative, executive and judicial authority, and these all inhere in the people in the first instance: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9. And see notes to art. 3, § 1. See, further, art. 1, § 25.

Religion. SEC. 3. The general assembly shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; nor shall any person be compelled to attend any place of worship, pay tithes, taxes, or other rates, for building or repairing places of worship, or the maintenance of any minister or ministry.

The statute exempting church property from taxation is not in conflict with this section: Trustees of Griswold College v. State, 46-275.

The use of a school-house for the purpose of religious worship, when authorized by a vote of the electors of the district, is not prohibited: Davis v. Boget, 50-11.

The guaranty of religious freedom is not violated by the casual use of a public building as a place for offering prayer and doing other acts of religious worship; and the statute (§ 2879) allowing the Bible to be used in public schools, with the provision that no pupil shall be required to read it contrary to the wishes of his parent or guardian, is not unconstitutional: Moore v. Monroe, 64-367.

Religious test. SEC. 4. No religious test shall be required as a qualification for any office of public trust, and no person shall be deprived of any of his rights, privileges, or capacities, or disqualified from the performance of any of his public or private duties, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of his opinions on the subject of religion; and any party to any judicial proceeding shall have the right to use as a witness, or take the testimony of, any other person, not disqualified on account of interest, who may be cognizant of any fact material to the case; and parties to suits may be witnesses, as provided by law.

Competency of witnesses: This section renders competent as a witness for the defendant in a criminal prosecution a person who is jointly indicted with him for the same crime but is put upon a separate trial: State v. Nash, 10-81.

Even where such defendants are put upon trial jointly, either one is entitled to the testimony of his co-defendant: State v. Gigher, 23-318.

The legislature may declare that interest in the event of a suit may or may not disqualify a witness, as shall be deemed best; and the provisions of Rev., § 3983, that husband or wife should not be a witness for or against the other in a civil action to which either of them was a party, held not to be in conflict with this section: Karney v. Paisley, 13-89. But see, also, Blake v. Graves, 18-312.

The provisions of this section as to the competency of witnesses do not give a party the right to the testimony of a child not possessed of sufficient understanding, by reason of tender years, to feel the obligation of an oath: Kilburn v. Mullen, 22-498.

It is not a violation of any constitutional privilege to provide that the credibility of a witness may be affected by the fact as to his sensibility to the obligation of an oath: Searcy v. Miller, 57-613. And see notes to § 4887.

Dueling. SEC. 5. Any citizen of this state who may hereafter be engaged, either directly or indirectly, in a duel, either as principal or accessory before the fact, shall forever be disqualified from holding any office under the constitution and laws of this state.

Laws uniform. SEC. 6. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation; the general assembly shall not grant to any citizen or class of citizens, privileges or immunities, which upon the same terms shall not equally belong to all citizens.

Uniformity of operation of general laws: If a law operates upon every person within the relations and circumstances provided for, it is sufficient as to uniformity: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112, 116.

Therefore, held, that the provision (§ 2002) as to liability of a railroad company for injuries to employees is not open to the objection that it is not of uniform operation: McAulich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20-333; Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36-52; Bucklew v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-603; Central Trust Co. v. Sloan, 65-655.

So held, also, as to the provision (§ 1972) making railroad companies liable in certain cases for double damages for stock killed:

Jones v. Galena & C. U. R. Co., 16-6; Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53-632.

A curative act is not necessarily unconstitutional as not being of uniform operation: McMillen v. County Judge, 6-391.

So a law legalizing the defective organization of a specified school district was sustained: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26-340.

So a law legalizing taxes levied without authority of law: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 89-112.

The statute providing that the fact that defendant in an action was in the military service of the United States or the state should be sufficient cause for a continuance so long as such defendant was in such service, held not unconstitutional as not being of uniform operation: McCormick v. Rusch, 15-127.

A statute providing for excluding property from city limits would be unconstitutional if not made applicable to cities already incorporated as well as those to be incorporated: Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11-482.

It is not competent for the legislature to submit the question whether an act shall become a law to a vote of the people. Therefore, held, that § 18 of the prohibitory liquor law of 1855, providing for the submission of the question to vote in each county as to whether such law should be in force therein, was unconstitutional, and that the act was in force throughout the state without such submission: Santo v. State, 2-165; State v. Beneke, 9-203.

And the license act of 1857, containing a provision that the prohibitory liquor law of 1855 should not be repealed in any county except by a vote of the people of that county, was held unconstitutional for the same reason: Gebrick v. State, 5-491; State v. Weir, 33-134.

But § 114 of Code of '51, and the act of 1857 (Rev., § 287 et seq.), allowing the county judge to submit to vote in each county the question whether sheep and swine should be allowed to run at large, were held not unconstitutional on this ground, inasmuch as the law was in force without a vote of the people, and it simply authorized the people of the county to adopt a mere police regulation: Dalby v. Wolf, 14-228.

See, further, art. 3, § 1, and notes.

The statute prohibiting the sale of ale, wine and beer within two miles of the corporate limits of a municipal corporation (§§ 2421-2429), held not objectionable on the ground of want of uniformity in its operation: State v. Schroeder, 51-197.

Liberty of speech and the press. SEC. 7. Every person may speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right. No law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech, or of the press. In all prosecutions or indictments for libel, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury, and if it appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous was true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted.

Newspaper publications; contempt: The publication of newspaper comments upon the decision of a court when the case is disposed of and the decision announced are not punishable as contempt of the court: Dunham v. State, 6-245.

Publication of articles in a newspaper reflecting upon the conduct of a judge in relation to a cause disposed of before such publication does not amount to a contempt: State v. Anderson, 40-207.

Privileged communications: Words spoken by one in the performance of public or official duty, upon a just occasion, without

So, also, the provisions as to granting of permits to sell intoxicating liquors only to persons of good moral character, held not unconstitutional: In re Ruth, 32-250.

A statute dividing railroads into three classes and fixing maximum rates of charge for each class (§§ 2026, 2027), held not unconstitutional on account of lack of uniformity: Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S., 155.

Uniformity in taxation comes within the purview of the provision as to uniform operation of laws: Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56.

But a statute providing a special method for the taxation of express and telegraph companies, held not objectionable under this provision, as the burdens imposed by it fell equally upon all citizens coming within a certain class or condition: United States Ex. Co. v. Ellyson, 28-370.

The fact that a city is authorized to exempt from water-rent property within its limits which has not the benefit of the water supply does not render such a provision unconstitutional: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396.

The provisions (§ 2016) for a different method for assessing the property of railroad companies from that provided for the assessment of other property, held not to be unconstitutional as being in conflict with this section: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67-199.

Also, held, that the power given to cities to improve streets and make the cost thereof a lien upon abutting property was not void as authorizing unequal taxation: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

An act exempting lots of ten acres or more in extent from municipal taxation under certain circumstances is not unconstitutional under this section: Leicht v. Burlington, 73-29.

A city ordinance discriminating in favor of resident merchants of such city and against other merchants of the state, by imposing a license tax on the latter, would be unconstitutional as not being of uniform operation: Pacific Junction v. Dyer, 64-38. And see Marshaltown v. Blum, 58-184.

Exclusive privileges: The provisions of this section prohibiting the granting of exclusive privileges, etc., does not affect exclusive charters or franchises already granted: Burlington, etc., Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48-133.

See, further, as to uniformity of laws, art. 3, § 30, and notes.

malicious motive, are privileged communications, and are not actionable unless express malice is shown: Mayo v. Sample, 18-306.

A communication by a grand jury to the court, not required by law to be made, such as a report charging misconduct on the part of officers, but not returned by way of indictment, is not privileged: Rector v. Smith, 11-302.

Charges made in a judicial proceeding, whether civil or criminal, will not support an action for libel, though the same charges, if made under other circumstances, would constitute libel: Mass v. Meire, 37-97.

If words charged as slanderous were spoken by a witness without malice, believing them to be responsive, he would not be liable. But if what is testified to is not pertinent and material to the matter in controversy, and is spoken for the purpose of defaming plaintiff, such words are not protected: Smith v. Howard, 28-51.

Every one who believes himself to be possessed of knowledge which, if true, does or may affect the rights or interests of another, has the right to communicate in good faith his belief to such person: Mott v. Dawson, 46-533.

Words spoken of a candidate at an election for a public office, to electors whose suffrages are sought, if spoken without malice and in good faith believing them to be true, by one having reasonable cause to so believe, and with the honest purpose of protecting the public from the supposed dishonesty of such candidate, do not render the person speaking them liable in an action for slander: Ibid.

A parent has a right to know the truth of reports charging a minor child with an offense or immoral conduct, and a person having information which is sought by such parent will be completely justified in imparting the same, if acting in good faith: Long v. Peters, 47-239.

The fact that words are privileged is only presumptive evidence or the want of malice, and plaintiff may show by extrinsic evidence that there was malice nevertheless: Mielenz v. Quasdorf, 68-726.

Instructions of court in cases of libel: Although the jury in prosecutions for libel determine both the law and the facts, the court has the right to instruct them in these as well as in other criminal cases; and the conclusive presumption is that they follow the instructions of the court; therefore, an erroneous instruction will be regarded as prejudicial and a ground for reversal as in other cases: State v. Rice, 56-431.

The doctrine that the jurors are judges of the law as well as of the facts, in libel, applies only to criminal prosecutions, and not to civil actions for damages: Forshee v. Abrams, 2-571.

See §§ 5478-5483 and § 5823.

Personal security. SEC. 8. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable seizures and searches, shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue but on probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons and things to be seized.

Searches and seizures: A search-warrant is not unreasonable in the legal sense when it is for a thing obnoxious to the law, and of a person and place particularly described, and is issued on oath of probable cause: Santo v. State, 2-165.

Therefore, held, that the provision (§ 2401) for the issuance of a search-warrant for the seizure of intoxicating liquors is not unconstitutional as not requiring sufficient particularity in description, or as authorizing unreasonable search and seizure: Ibid.

Description of the place held sufficient in a particular case: State v. Thompson, 44-399.

An objection to the sufficiency of a warrant under which property has been seized cannot be raised for the first time in the district court on appeal from the justice issuing the warrant: Ibid.

The sheriff is justified in searching the person arrested and taking from him money or property in any way connected with the crime charged, or which may serve in identifying the prisoner, or be used by him in effecting an escape. But property thus taken is not subject to attachment: Commercial Exchange Bank v. McLeod, 65-665.

Police officers upon the arrest of one charged with felony may make search of his person for stolen property, instruments used in the commission of the crime, or any article which may give a clue to its commission or the identification of the criminal: Reifsnnyder v. Lee, 44-101.

The fact that an officer makes search for and seizure of intoxicating liquors unlawfully kept for sale without having any warrant for such action will not render the proceedings under the warrant afterwards obtained illegal: State v. Ward, 75-637.

Further as to search-warrants, see §§ 6027-6051.

Trial by jury; due process of law. SEC. 9. The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate; but the general assembly may authorize trial by a jury of a less number than twelve men in inferior courts; but no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law.

What constitutes trial by jury: The right of trial by jury implies a trial by jury of twelve men except where the constitution authorizes trial by a less number: Santo v. State, 2-165.

The jury contemplated by this section is the jury recognized by the common law, which is constituted of twelve persons, and the legislature has no authority, in providing for jury trial under the constitution, to provide for a less number than twelve jurors. Therefore, held, that the provision (§ 4000) for a verdict by ten or eleven jurors, when the jury has been reduced to that number by sickness, is unconstitutional: Eshelman v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 67-296; Kelsh v. Dyersville, 68-137.

It is immaterial that the party complaining of the illegality of the jury is a municipal corporation. Although it may be that such a corporation has no constitutional right to jury trial, yet the statute does not profess to make any special provisions for such cases: Kelsh v. Dyersville, 68-137.

Less than twelve jurors in inferior courts: As this section provides for a trial by a less number of jurors than twelve in inferior courts, and § 11 of this article gives such inferior courts jurisdiction of offenses of an inferior grade, a trial in such a court of an offense within its jurisdiction by a jury of less than twelve is not a violation of the right of jury trial: Byran v. State, 4-349.

If, in the inferior tribunal, a party has a trial before the constitutional jury provided for such court, though of less than twelve men, he cannot, of right, claim in the face of the statute a second trial on the merits on appeal to the district court: Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153.

A defendant accused of an offense triable under the provisions of the constitution before a justice of the peace by a jury of less than twelve cannot complain of being deprived of the right of jury trial, even though he is not allowed the right of trial by jury on appeal to the district court: Baurose v. State, 1-374.

The right to one jury trial is all that is guaranteed, and that is preserved by allowing an appeal to the district court, where the cause is to be tried anew by a jury: Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572; State v. Beneke, 9-203.

The statute providing for trial by a jury of six in the superior court, unless the additional expense involved in securing a jury of twelve is deposited by the party demanding such jury, is not unconstitutional: Comers v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 74-383.

The right of trial by jury discussed generally: Trimble v. State, 2 G. Gr., 404.

Ordinance of 1787: In so far as the constitution of the state modifies the common-law right of trial by jury, and authorizes trial by a jury of less than twelve in inferior courts, it is an alteration of the provision for jury trial found in the ordinance of 1787. The admission of the state under the constitution adopted by it amounted to an abrogation by mutual consent of the provisions of that ordinance in conflict therewith: Higgins v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 60-50.

Waiver of objection to trial by less than twelve jurors: The verdict in a trial by a jury defective as to the number will be void unless the defect is waived. And where a party has no knowledge of such deficiency, his mere acceptance of the jury will not constitute a waiver of objection to number: Cowles v. Buckman, 6-161.

The fact that the party objecting to the cause being tried by a less number than twelve proceeds with the trial does not constitute a waiver of his objection: Eshelman v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 67-296.

The provisions of the federal constitution with reference to trial by jury have no bearing on the question of the right of trial by jury in the state courts: McLane v. Leicht, 69-401.

In equity cases: The right of trial by jury does not obtain in cases which are of equitable cognizance: State v. Orwig, 25-280.

As cases of mutual account are subjects of equitable jurisdiction, it is not unconstitutional to provide for a compulsory reference in such cases: Burt v. Harrah, 65-643.

The provisions (§ 2384) allowing an injunction against persons engaged in the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors are not unconstitutional as depriving defendant of the right of trial by jury. Such cases being of equitable cognizance at the time of the adoption of the constitution, and the court of equity having jurisdiction at that time to abate a nuisance, it is within the power of the legislature to enlarge the jurisdiction of the court of equity in such cases so as to allow that remedy even where property rights are involved: Littleton v. Fritz, 65-488; Martin v. Blattner, 68-286.

So the right of trial by jury is not impaired by the provision (§ 3714) that foreclosure of mortgages shall be by equitable proceedings, and that in the same action a recovery may be had on the note secured by mortgage: Clough v. Seay, 49-111.

Under the chancery practice, as it existed at the time the constitution was adopted, a person could be deprived of his liberty or his property, and such deprivation has always been regarded as having been accomplished by due process of law, although no jury trial was allowed: Eikenberry v. Edwards, 67-619.

Trial de novo on appeal: By virtue of the provisions of this section as to jury trial and of art. 5, § 4, as to method of appeal in suits in equity, every party has a right either to a trial by jury or to a trial de novo on appeal: Sherwood v. Sherwood, 44-192.

Jury trial in other cases: Where the only issue made by the pleadings was contained in a written agreement, the proper construction of which was in question, held, that it was not error to refuse defendant a jury trial: Packer v. Packer, 24-20.

It is not prejudicial error to refuse a jury trial where the questions involved are such that nothing arises for the determination of a jury: Bremer County Bank v. Bremer County, 42-394.

Offense committed in another county: The right to jury trial is not infringed by allowing defendant to be put on trial in one county for an offense committed in another county within five hundred yards of the boundary line between them: State v. Pugley, 75-742.

References: Any provision authorizing the reference of questions of fact in actions by ordinary proceedings, without the consent of both parties, would be in violation of the right of jury trial: McMartin v. Bingham, 27-234; Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Walker, 50-376.

Appraisal of property taken for public use: The appraisers appointed to assess damages resulting to a land owner from the establishment of a highway are not a jury within the meaning of this section, and, upon appeal properly taken from their decision, such owner is entitled to trial by jury: Siga- foos v. Talbot, 25-214. And see Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153.

Contempt: A statute (§ 4374) providing for imprisonment of a debtor for contempt in certain cases, where the object was to enforce the payment of a debt by summary proceedings, held in conflict with the constitutional provisions for jury trial: Ex parte Grace, 12-208.

Judgment on stay bond: The statutory provision giving to a stay bond the effect of a judgment confessed against the parties thereto is not objectionable as denying them the right of trial, or depriving them of property without due process of law. The bond amounts to a waiver of the privilege which it is competent for them to make: Cavender v. Smith's Heirs, 5-157.

Jury fee: A provision requiring a party to pay a jury fee, or increasing the jury fee, is not in conflict with this section: Adae v. Zangs, 41-536; Steele v. Central R. of Iowa, 43-109; Little v. McGuire, 43-447; State v. Verwayne, 44-621.

Waiver of jury trial in civil cases: The right of jury trial in a civil case is not an attribute inalienable in its nature and character, but rather a privilege, which may be waived or forfeited: Wilkins v. Treynor, 14-391.

Where the parties appear and a trial is had to the court without objection, it will be presumed that jury trial is waived: Saum v. Jones County, 1 G. Gr., 165; McGuire v. Kemp, 3 G. Gr., 219. And see Hawkins v. Rice, 40-455.

By consenting to a reference a party waives his right to a trial by jury, and cannot afterwards, upon a new order directing the referee to proceed, object and claim a jury trial: Hewitt v. Egbert, 34-485.

The right to jury trial is waived by failing to demand it when the cause comes up for trial: Davidson v. Wright, 46-383.

By making default a party waives his right to a jury trial: Chute v. Hazleton, 51-355.

The fact that actions of different kinds are by agreement submitted together does not change the method of trial as to either. Such submission amounts only to waiver of jury trial: Leighton v. Orr, 44-679.

The right to such trial will be waived by failure of the party to take proper steps to secure a transfer of the cause from the equity docket to the law docket, where by reason of the nature of the case it properly belongs: Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 33-422, 490.

Where, on filing an amended petition, a cause was improperly transferred to the equity docket, and no motion to transfer it to the law docket was made before answer, held, that error in the kind of proceedings would be deemed waived, and defendant could not demand a jury trial: Gibbs v. Coonrod, 54-736.

As to jury trial in criminal cases, see § 10 of this article and notes.

Due process of law; what constitutes: Due process of law means in the due course of legal proceedings according to those rules and forms which have been established for the protection of private rights. It was intended thereby to secure the individual from the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government unrestrained by the established principles of private rights and distributive justice: Foule v. Mann, 53-42.

Therefore, held, that § 4283, limiting the remedy against a sheriff for wrongful levy to a recovery on the indemnity bond given by the plaintiff in execution, was void in so far as it defeated the right of the person whose property was illegally taken to sue for the specific recovery thereof: Ibid.

The rule in respect to due process of law, stated in a general way, is that every one is entitled to the protection of those fundamental principles of truth and justice which lie at the basis of all our civil and political institutions: Trustees of Griswold College v. Davenport, 65-633.

The provision (§ 4195) requiring that, before action can be brought against an officer for wrongful levy of a writ of attachment upon property of a person other than the one against whom the writ is directed, notice of the rights of such owner must be given to the officer in writing, is not unconstitutional as depriving the party of his property without due process of law: Cheadle v. Guittar, 68-680.

A person may be deprived of property by his own negligence. Also lapse of time may prevent recovery by reason of the statute of limitations, and existing remedies may be taken away and new ones given, all without infringement of due process of law: Ibid.

The meaning of the phrases "due process of law," "due course of law," and "course of the common law," discussed: Mason v. Messenger, 17-261.

Partition proceedings: Judgment in proceedings for partition of property, brought against a defendant served by publication only, held not void as depriving the defendant of his property without the benefit of judicial proceedings according to the course of the common law: Ibid.

The provisions authorizing a sale of property in a partition suit when division thereof cannot be made are not unconstitutional as depriving the party of his property without due process of law. When parties by contract assume the relation of tenants in common, the law fixes their respective rights, one of which is that the property may be divided, and, if necessary, sold to effect that object: Metcalf v. Hoopingardner, 45-510.

The provisions of certain statutes of the territories of Iowa and Wisconsin providing a method for partition of a tract of land known as the "half-breed tract," held unconstitutional as providing for proceedings to determine private rights in a method not in accordance with due course of law: Reed v. Wright, 2 G. Gr., 15.

Claim for improvements on land: Rev., §§ 2274, 2275, allowing a money judgment for the value of improvements to be rendered against the owner of the land in proceedings under the occupying-claimant law, held unconstitutional under this section: Childs v. Shower, 18-261.

The provision (§ 1892) giving to any one who drains mineral land, even though without consent of the owner, one-tenth of the mineral taken therefrom, held not unconstitutional as depriving the owner of his property without due process of law: Ahern v. Dubuque, etc., Mining Co., 48-140.

The short foreclosure of mortgages on real property by notice and sale without action in court, as at one time allowed, held unconstitutional as depriving the owner of his property without due process of law: Thatcher v. Haun, 12-303.

But under the constitution of 1846, which did not contain the clause relating to due process of law, held, that such a proceeding was not unconstitutional: Boyd v. Ellis, 11-97.

A proceeding in equity should be classed as due process of law: McLane v. Leicht, 69-401.

Proceedings in rem against lost goods and property, and against estray animals and against unknown owners of property, have been too long sanctioned to be now called in question as not being due process of law: Kinney v. Roe, 70-509.

License: A permit to sell intoxicating liquors for lawful purposes, granted in pursuance of statutory provisions not requiring the payment of any compensation for such privilege, is not property in such sense that the party having the permit cannot be deprived thereof without due process of law: State v. Schmidt, 65-556.

Other cases: The provision (§ 1972) authorizing double damages in an action against a railway company for stock killed through failure of the company to maintain a fence along its track does not interfere with the constitutional protection to property nor deprive the company of its property without due process of law: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

Proceedings by fence-viewers being provided for by statute in the exercise of the authority of the legislature to provide special tribunals to determine the rights of the parties under proper rules applicable thereto, such provisions are not unconstitutional although they may operate to deprive the party of his property without the intervention of judicial proceedings or without allowing him a trial in court upon the facts passed upon by such fence-viewers: McKeever v. Jenks, 59-300.

The provisions of the amendment to the federal constitution guarantying due process of law, etc., have no application to the state courts except as expressly so provided, but, in the absence of such express provision, are merely restrictions upon the federal government: Boyd v. Ellis, 11-97.

Contempt: A person cannot be imprisoned in pursuance of an order of the court in an investigation authorized by statute, but unusual or unheard of at common law or in the known and regular course of the administration of the law through courts of justice: Ex parte Grace, 12-208.

But the power to punish for contempt without the intervention of a jury is not in violation of due process of law: Ibid.

Statutory provisions (§§ 4364-4378) not in accord with the common law, but more nearly like the proceeding in chancery, by which a debtor may be subjected to examination as to whether he has property, not exempt from execution, liable to the satisfaction of an execution against him, and may be imprisoned for contempt in not turning over such property to apply on such indebtedness under order of the court, are not in violation of the requirements of this section as to due process of law: Eikenberry v. Edwards, 67-619.

Taxation: The state has the taxing power, and where property is taken in the valid exercise of that power, the owner is not deprived of it without due process of law: Allen v. Armstrong, 16-508.

But there are indispensable prerequisites to the exercise of the power which cannot be omitted without violating the constitutional provision as to due process of law: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that Rev., § 784, making a tax deed conclusive of the regularity of all prior proceedings, was unconstitutional: McCready v. Sexton, 29-356, 390.

Due process of law means ordinary judicial proceedings in court, and has no reference whatever to the taxing power. Where property is taken in the due exercise of that power, it is not taken without due process of law: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

Therefore, held, that the constitutional provision was not violated by a law authorizing local taxes in aid of railways: Ibid. But see Hanson v. Vernon, 27-28, and cases cited.

At no time, nor in any court, nor before any tribunal or officer, has the tax payer the right to have a constitutional jury impaneled for the purpose of determining the rate of the levy of taxes or the assessable value of his property: Davis v. Clinton, 55-549; Dunlieth, etc., Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55-558.

Where an exemption from taxation is provided for by the general laws of the state, any subsequent legislature is not thereby deprived of the power to alter the law and remove the exemption: Slimer v. Jacobs, 62-392.

The rule that the owner of property shall not be deprived of it arbitrarily and without due process of law renders it illegal to enforce against such property a tax as to the assessment and levy of which the property owner has had no notice nor opportunity to be heard in pursuance of general statute or special provision: Gatch v. Des Moines, 63-718.

Property cannot be taken for the payment of taxes under a special assessment made without notice to the property owner and opportunity to be heard, at least where the assessment is made under a statute or ordinance providing for assessment according to benefits: Trustees of Griswold College v. Davenport, 65-633.

So held where a city council was charged with the duty of determining whether any part of the costs of constructing a sewer should be paid out of the general revenues of the city, and if so, what part, the balance being payable by special assessment upon abutting property: Ibid.

Courts are not necessary to taxation; and it is generally agreed that property taken for non-payment of taxes is not taken without due process of law, if the tax payer is afforded an opportunity to be heard in relation to the tax, though it be only before the officers clothed with power to assess: Ibid.

If there is any ground upon which a tax cau be upheld which has been levied without notice to the tax payer and without an opportunity to be heard, it is incumbent upon the party claiming its validity to show that the notice would have been unavailing: Auer v. Dubuque, 65-650.

Want of notice of assessment and levy are objections which cannot be urged as against an action to recover costs of construction of a sewer under §§ 649, 650: Ditloe v. Davenport, 74-66.

See, further, as to taxation, notes to art. 1, § 18, and art. 3, § 30.

Eminent domain: A party cannot complain that his property has been taken for public use without due process of law when it has been taken for a highway by proper proceedings, and his claim for damages has been disallowed, and he has not taken the proper steps to have the disallowance corrected on appeal: Tharp v. Witham, 65-566.

Proceedings for the assessment of damages for the construction of underground drains by one land owner through the property of an adjoining land owner, authorized by 20 G. A., ch. 188 (see § 1878), held unconstitutional because not providing for an appeal from the action of the township trustees in case no damages are awarded. The non-assessment of damages by such trustees cannot be regarded as due process of law unless there is a right to appeal to a tribunal where such assessment can be made by a constitutional jury: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

As to taking private property for public use, see, further, notes to § 18 of this article.

And in general, as applicable to this section, see notes to §§ 10 and 21 of this article.

Rights of persons accused. SEC. 10. In all criminal prosecutions, and in cases involving the life or liberty of an individual, the accused shall have a right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury; to be informed of the accusation against him; to have a copy of the same when demanded; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for his witnesses; and to have the assistance of counsel.

Criminal prosecution: A proceeding before a magistrate or court in the name of the city, accusing defendant of the violation of a city ordinance, is a criminal prosecution: Davenport v. Bird, 34-524; Jaquith v. Royce, 42-406; State v. Vail, 57-103; Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61-672; Creston v. Nye, 74-369.

Speedy trial: The requirement of this section as to a speedy trial must be construed in a reasonable manner, and if the defendant demands a jury trial in a superior court after the jurors have been discharged, the case should be continued to the next term: Creston v. Nye, 74-369.

Trial by jury: A defendant has the right to trial by jury at some stage of the proceedings in a criminal prosecution: Ibid.

The right to trial by jury is not infringed by the provisions of § 11 of this article, that a certain grade of offenses may be tried summarily: See notes to that section.

See, further, as to jury trial, notes to preceding section.

Waiver of trial by jury: As the defendant in a criminal prosecution may waive a statute enacted for his benefit, he may consent that the trial proceed with a jury of less than twelve jurors, and will be bound by the verdict rendered: State v. Kaufman, 51-578.

But defendant cannot waive a jury trial and consent to a trial by the court, there being no provision by which the court, without a jury, has jurisdiction to try the issues of fact in a criminal case: State v. Carman, 63-130; State v. Larrigan, 66-426.

Right to be confronted with witnesses: Dying declarations may be received according to the rules of evidence without violating the provision of this section giving the accused the right to be confronted with witnesses against him: State v. Nash, 7-347, 377.

But this right is violated by allowing the introduction of a certificate of a notary public as to the fact that a bill of exchange has been protested, when such fact is material in establishing the guilt of the accused: State v. Reidel, 26-430.

Where a deposition has been taken on behalf of the prisoner and filed in court, it is not error to allow the prosecuting attorney to read the same in evidence, it not appearing that the prisoner sought or desired to withdraw it from the files before the trial of the case: Nash v. State, 2 G. Gr., 286.

Depositions of witnesses, or minutes of evidence on preliminary examinations, are not admissible as against a defendant in a criminal prosecution: State v. Collins, 32-36.

The provisions of § 2195 as to method of determining the question of sanity by commissioners are not in violation of this section: Blackhawk County v. Springer, 58-417.

The admission in evidence upon a criminal trial of testimony of witnesses given in a preliminary examination, which witnesses have since died, is not in violation of the right to be confronted by witnesses under this section: State v. Fitzgerald, 63-268.

As defendant is entitled to be confronted with the witnesses against him, if a witness for the prosecution is subpoenaed from another state and the costs are afterwards taxed to the prosecution, such witness should be paid by the county for the distance traveled outside the state as well as in it: Westfall v. Madison County, 62-427.

The provision about being confronted by witnesses is not applicable to the proceedings before a grand jury: State v. Smith, 74-580.

This privilege of defendant has no reference to record evidence, and in a prosecution for bigamy record evidence of the first marriage of the defendant may be introduced: State v. Matlock, 70-229.

And in a prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors the monthly statements of a pharmacist, filed in the county auditor's office as required by law, are admissible in evidence against him: State v. Smith, 74-580.

The provision in the constitution of the United States and in the statutes of the state that defendant shall not be required to be a witness against himself is not violated by introducing in evidence reports made by him as required by law, and properly made matter of record, which tend to show violation of law on his part: Ibid.

Waiver of privilege: The right to be confronted by the witnesses against him is personal with the accused and not jurisdictional,

When indictment necessary. SEC. 11. All offenses less than felony, and in which the punishment does not exceed a fine of one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for thirty days, shall be tried summarily before a justice of the peace, or other officer authorized by law, on information under oath, without indictment, or the intervention of a grand jury, saving to the defendant the right of appeal; and no person shall be held to answer for any higher criminal offense, unless on presentment or indictment by a grand jury, except in cases arising in the army or navy, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war or public danger.

[As to indictment and the number of grand jurors, see amendment inserted as [sec. 15] at the end of art. 5.]

Jurisdiction of justice of peace: Where there is nothing appearing affirmatively on the face of the proceedings before a justice of the peace showing want of jurisdiction, defendant cannot complain that the evidence shows an offense which can only be prosecuted on indictment: State v. Sipull, 17-575.

A justice of the peace has jurisdiction over violations of city ordinances. The jurisdiction of the mayor in such cases is not exclusive: Jaquith v. Royce, 42-406.

When a defendant is tried before a justice for an offense of which the justice has not jurisdiction the district court does not acquire jurisdiction on appeal from the judgment of the justice: State v. Carpenter, 23-506.

The provisions allowing a trial in a summary manner before a justice of the peace or other officer, in cases here specified, is not in violation of the right of trial by jury guaranteed in § 9, and in art. 2 of the ordinance of 1787. The right to one jury trial is all that is guaranteed, and that is preserved by allowing an appeal to the district court, where the cause is to be tried anew by a jury: Zelle v. McHenry, 51-572; State v. Beneke, 9-203.

The corresponding section of the Const. of 1846, held prospective, and applicable not only to offenses cognizable by justices of the peace at the time of its adoption, but also to those which should thereafter be made so cognizable: Bryan v. State, 4-349.

Extent of punishment in justices' courts: Where an ordinance provided that, in case of non-payment of a fine, defendant should be imprisoned for a period of time longer than that authorized by the constitution for imprisonment on conviction in an inferior court, held, that the ordinance was not void, but that it might be enforced up to the limit of the punishment allowed: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47-597.

The provision of statute authorizing the imposition of a fine of one hundred dollars, and the imprisonment of defendant until the fine and may be waived; so held in a case where, by consent of the accused, a written transcript of the testimony taken on a former trial was read to the jury in place of recalling the witnesses themselves: State v. Polson, 29-133; State v. Fooks, 65-452.

Compulsory attendance of witness: This section does not give defendant the absolute right to have a prisoner in the penitentiary or jail produced as a witness. The order which the court is authorized to make in such cases under § 4929 is discretionary: State v. Kennedy, 20-372.

and costs are paid, does not make the case one which is beyond the jurisdiction of the justice, although the length of imprisonment for non-payment of fine and costs may extend beyond thirty days. The imprisonment for non-payment of fine and costs is not a punishment for the crime, but a method of enforcing payment: Alberison v. Kriechbaum, 65-11.

The provision that only offenses which are punishable by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not to exceed thirty days, are within the jurisdiction of a justice, is not violated by allowing different offenses of the same kind by the same person to be joined in one information before a justice of the peace, although the aggregate of the fines imposed under such information may exceed one hundred dollars: Jackson v. Boyd, 53-536.

Right of appeal: If defendant gives proper notice of appeal there is nothing which the justice can do which will deprive the party of his right to such appeal, and therefore the justice cannot be liable in damages for refusing an appeal, or committing the party without appeal, whatever may be his motives: Anderson v. Park, 57-69.

There is no provision for a review of errors of law only, in a criminal case tried before a justice of the peace. The provisions as to writs of error in civil cases are not applicable in criminal prosecutions: Part of Lot, etc., v. State, 1-507; State v. Flinn, 51-133.

The provisions of Rev., § 5094 (not now in force), giving the state as well as defendant the right of appeal from the judgment of a justice of the peace in a criminal trial, held not in conflict with the provision saving to defendant the right of trial by jury on appeal from a justice of the peace in a criminal case: State v. Tait, 22-140.

But these provisions were held to be unconstitutional as being in conflict with the following section, providing that "no person shall, after acquittal, be tried for the same offense:" State v. Van Horton, 26-402.

Unauthorized indictment: An indictment for an offense, the punishment for which does not exceed a fine of one hundred dollars or imprisonment for thirty days, is not authorized, and all proceedings thereunder are unauthorized and void. So held in case of an indictment for illegal sale of intoxicating liquors: Walters v. State, 5-507; State v. Koehler, 6-398; State v. Shawbeck, 7-322.

Conviction of lesser offense: Where defendant is indicted for an indictable offense, but is found guilty of a lesser degree thereof, or of an offense necessarily included in the offense for which he is indicted, he may be convicted and punished for such lesser offense, although exclusive jurisdiction thereof is given to a justice: State v. Shepard, 10-126; State v. Jarvis, 21-44; Orton v. State, 4 G. Gr., 140.

So, under an indictment for larceny, charging the value of the goods stolen to be more than twenty dollars, the district court has jurisdiction to try defendant and sentence him, if found guilty, although the jury find the value of the goods to be less than that amount: State v. Stingley, 10-488.

And the question whether the offense is tri-

Twice tried; bail. SEC. 12. No person shall, after acquittal, be tried for the same offense. All persons shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses, where the proof is evident, or the presumption great.

What constitutes jeopardy; dismissal of prosecution: A dismissal of the proceedings, either by the court or by the district attorney, after the trial has commenced, unless in the cases authorized by statute (§ 6015), will operate as an acquittal: State v. Callendine, 8-288.

The fact that material witnesses for the prosecution cannot be called because their names are not indorsed on the indictment will not be such a peremptory or controlling cause as to justify the court in dismissing the case: Ibid.

But where, in an indictment for burglary, the defendant is also charged with assault with intent to commit murder, merely for the purpose of bringing the case within the aggravated punishment provided by § 5191, the charge of such assault may be dismissed after defendant has entered a plea of former acquittal of such assault: State v. Struble, 71-11.

Continuance: Where the names of the witnesses for prosecution have not been indorsed on the indictment defendant may be required to consent to their introduction under § 5806, notwithstanding the defect, or consent to a continuance; but he has no right to ask a verdict nor insist on the procedure as a former jeopardy when again put on trial: State v. Parker, 66-586; State v. Falconer, 70-416.

Discharge of jury: The fact that in the exercise of sound discretion the jury is discharged for failure to agree does not entitle defendant to be released as having been once in jeopardy: State v. Vaughan, 29-286.

Where, after all the evidence had been introduced, the judge, on receipt of a telegram announcing the sickness of his wife, adjourned court for a few days to go home; and subsequently, by telegram, adjourned court over able as a misdemeanor or a felony is to be determined by the value of the property alleged in the indictment or information, and not by the value ascertained by the verdict of the jury: State v. Church, 8-252.

Indictable offenses: The provision of this section that offenses of a certain grade shall be prosecuted only on indictment by a grand jury does not limit the power of the legislature to prescribe the form and constituent elements of an indictment, and authorize one as good and sufficient which would not be so at common law: State v. Bevans, 37-178.

The number of the grand jury is left to legislative regulation: State v. Ostrander, 18-435.

The provision of the federal constitution, that no person shall be held to answer for an infamous crime except upon indictment, is applicable alone to the exercise of power by the federal government, and is not a restriction upon the legislative authority of the state: State v. Wells, 40-662.

Offense committed before adoption of constitution: The provisions of this section held inapplicable, under art. 12, § 3, to an offense which was committed prior to the adoption of the constitution: State v. Axt, 6-511.

the term, held, that there was sufficient cause to warrant the adjournment, and that defendant could not, on a subsequent trial, plead previous jeopardy: State v. Tatman, 59-471.

Defective verdict: Although defendant is put upon trial on a good indictment, yet if the verdict is so defective that no judgment can be rendered upon it, it may be set aside and defendant again put on trial. The defective verdict will not amount to an acquittal: State v. Redman, 17-329; State v. Arthur, 21-322.

Punitive damages, when awarded for a criminal act, do not constitute a punishment in such sense that one who should also be criminally punished for the same act would be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense: Hendrickson v. Kingsbury, 21-379.

New trial on appeal from justice's court: A defendant, acquitted before a justice of the peace in a prosecution for a crime over which the justice has jurisdiction, cannot be again tried upon an appeal to the district court, taken by the state, even though the statute may so authorize; so held under Rev., § 5094, since repealed: State v. Van Horton, 26-402.

Offense against state and city: An ordinance of a city punishing an act which is punishable under the laws of the state is not, on that account, void. The act may be punished under both without violating any constitutional principle: Bloomfield v. Trimble, 54-399.

Fraudulent acquittal or conviction: Where the former conviction or acquittal was procured by the defendant by collusion or fraud, it may be treated by the state as a nullity and disregarded, and a new prosecution commenced: State v. Green, 16-239.

In such case the burden of proof is on the state to establish the fraud: State v. Maxwell, 51-314.

Conviction of lower degree: Where a defendant has been convicted of a lower degree of the offense than that for which he was indicted and put upon trial, such conviction operates as an acquittal of the degree for which he was tried, and if he appeal and secure a reversal, he cannot be again tried for any higher offense, or higher degree of the offense, than that of which he was convicted: State v. Tweedy, 11-350; State v. Clemons, 51-274.

Nor will the fact that defendant, being put on trial a second time for the higher degree or higher crime, is again found guilty of only the lower degree or lower crime of which he was previously convicted, render the error in improperly putting him on trial a second time error without prejudice: State v. Tweedy, 11-350.

Second trial for higher crime: A conviction or acquittal of a minor offense will not bar prosecution for a greater one, or for a higher degree of the same offense, except that an acquittal of manslaughter will bar an indictment for murder. Therefore, held, that a conviction for assault and battery would not bar a prosecution for assault with intent to do great bodily injury: State v. Foster, 33-525.

A former conviction or acquittal of the crime of petit larceny will bar a subsequent prosecution for larceny from the person, although the first offense is a misdemeanor triable before a justice of the peace, and the other is a felony: State v. Gleason, 56-203.

Where same act constitutes two crimes: A previous prosecution for an act as constituting one crime will not bar a subsequent prosecution for a greater crime committed in the same act. For instance, a prosecution for assault will not bar a subsequent prosecution for a riot committed in the same transaction: Scott v. United States, Mor., 142.

Proof of the commission of an assault upon one person will not sustain an indictment for assault upon two; therefore, under a subsequent indictment for assault and battery upon one of the persons named, defendant could not show, under a plea of former conviction or acquittal, a judgment under an indictment for assault upon two. But under an indictment for an assault by two, either one may be acquitted either on a joint or on a separate indictment: State v. McClintock, 8-203.

Where the same essential element is included in two or more crimes, as, for instance, larceny in the crimes of larceny from a dwelling-house in the night-time, and robbery, a previous conviction or acquittal for one of such crimes will bar a subsequent prosecution for the other. In the prosecution for the one crime the defendant might be convicted of the included crime: State v. Mike-sell, 70-176.

For other cases see notes to §§ 5744-5750.

As to conviction of lesser degree or included offense, see notes to §§ 5850, 5851.

Right to bail: Where a bail bond recited that defendant was charged with "feloniously killing two persons," held that, as the offense was not necessarily punishable with death, bail might be allowed, and the bond was not void: State v. Klingman, 14-404.

This section applies to §§ 5561, 5562; and a party charged with murder in the second degree is entitled to bail notwithstanding the language there used: State v. Hufford, 23-579.

Habeas corpus. SEC. 13. The writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended or refused when application is made as required by law, unless, in case of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

Military restraint: A return by respondent that he is a military officer of the United States holding the person restrained for the crime of desertion, awaiting trial by court-martial, is sufficient, and the prisoner will be remanded: Ex parte Anderson, 16-595.

A soldier while on furlough is not within the jurisdiction of the military authorities, and may be arrested by civil authority without conflict: Ex parte McRoberts, 16-600.

Military. SEC. 14. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be kept up by the state in time of peace; and in time of war no appropriation for a standing army shall be for a longer time than two years.

Quartermen soldiers. SEC. 15. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war except in the manner prescribed by law.

Treason. SEC. 16. Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open court.

Bail; punishments. SEC. 17. Excessive bail shall not be required; excessive fines shall not be imposed, and cruel and unusual punishment shall not be inflicted.

Rev., § 3276, making officers of municipal corporations personally liable for failure to levy tax to pay off judgments, etc., held not to impose an unusual fine nor an excessive punishment upon such officers: Porter v. Thomson, 22-391.

The penalties provided for violation of the intoxicating-liquor law (§ 2384), held not excessive within the constitutional provision: Martin v. Blattner, 68-286.

Bail required in a certain case, held not excessive: State v. Wells, 46-662.

Eminent domain. SEC. 18. Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation first being made, or secured to be made, to the owner thereof, as soon as the damages shall be assessed by a jury, who shall not take into consideration any advantages that may result to said owner on account of the improvement for which it is taken.

Eminent domain: Power to take private property for public use is one of the sovereign powers of the state. It is a necessary attribute of sovereignty in the state, rather than any reserved right in the grant of property to the citizen: Noll v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. R. Co., 32-66.

Public use: This section prohibits, by implication, the taking of private property for anything but a public use. The question as to when public exigencies demand the exercise of the power is solely a question for the legislature, upon whose determination the courts cannot sit in judgment; but the question as to what is such a public use as to justify the exercise of the power is for the courts. However, if a public use be declared by the legislature, the courts will hold such use public, unless it manifestly appears from the provisions of the act that it can have no tendency to advance or promote such public use: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

Therefore, held, that 11 G. A., ch. 127, authorizing the taking of private property for the establishment of a private road, was unconstitutional: Ibid.

But a provision (§§ 1949-1952) for condemnation of right of way for a public highway or railway to mineral land, the right of way thus condemned to be public, is not unconstitutional as taking private property for private use: Phillips v. Watson, 63-28.

The act of 20 G. A., ch. 188 (see § 1878), authorizing proceedings by which land owners might acquire the right, upon payment of the damages assessed, to lay underground drains through the property of an adjoining land owner in other cases than those where by reason of the wet or swampy condition of the land the public health requires it, held unconstitutional as providing for the taking of private property for other than public use: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

What constitutes a taking; security: The object of the provision of this section requiring security for compensation is to protect and compensate the owner in case his land is entered upon pending proceedings for an assessment of its value, and if, after final determination thereof and before payment of the damages assessed, the occupancy of the land is abandoned, the owner's title and right of possession can be extinguished only by the payment of the damages assessed. Although entry is permitted at once upon security being given, such right of possession is but temporary and permissive until the compensation finally determined is paid. In case of failure to perform the obligation and pay such com-ensation, no right is acquired by the giving of security; and if the security given becomes unavailing to the land owner by way of compensation when the damages are finally assessed, possession can be retaken by him unless such compensation is paid: White v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 64-281.

Assessment by jury: An assessment of the damages by a jury of three persons appointed as provided by Rev., § 1065, held an assessment by jury as required by the provisions of this section: Des Moines v. Layman, 21-153. But see, contra, Sigafoos v. Talbot, 25-214.

A party cannot be deprived of his property without provision for a judicial proceeding either originally or by appeal: Ragatz v. Dubuque, 4-343.

Benefits: Under this section benefits to accrue to the property from the proposed improvement are not to be estimated: Deaton v. Polk County, 9-594; Israel v. Jewett, 29-475.

Benefits to result from the construction of the improvement as well as from the use thereof are to be excluded: Frederick v. Shane, 32-254; Bland v. Hixenbaugh, 39-532.

Therefore, in an action for damages for breach of warranty by reason of the existence of a right of way upon land conveyed, the advantages resulting from the construction of a railway upon such right of way cannot be taken into account: Koestenbader v. Peirce, 41-204.

Advantages to the land resulting from its better drainage will not be taken into account in estimating the deterioration in value by reason of the taking of a portion thereof for the right of way of a railroad: Britton v. Des Moines, O. & S. R. Co., 59-540.

Taxation; not taking private property for public use: Legitimate taxation is not the taking of private property for public use without compensation within the constitutional provision. The protection afforded the citizen by the government is the just compensation required: Morford v. Unger, 8-82.

There are limits beyond which the legislative discretion cannot go in subjecting property to taxation; and while the judiciary will not interpose in every case of injustice or of oppression, yet this power may be so unreasonably and unjustly exercised as to amount to the taking of private property for public use without compensation: Ibid.

Taxation of agricultural lands, etc., for municipal purposes: An unreasonable extension of the limits of an incorporated city, by which land needed only for agricultural purposes is brought within the city limits and subjected to municipal taxation, without deriving any advantage from municipal control, is unconstitutional under this section, even though it is provided that it shall be assessed only at its value for agricultural purposes: Ibid.; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16-271.

But where property included within an extension of the city limits was situated within three hundred feet of the old limits, and used for pork house, etc., and the streets of the city were laid out and worked to and beyond the property, and the surrounding property was laid out into lots and blocks, held, that the proceeding by which it was brought within the city limits was not unconstitutional: Butler v. Muscatine, 11-433.

The doctrine of Morford v. Unger, supra, with reference to the extension of city limits, is also applicable to lands used for agricultural purposes within the corporate limits as originally laid out: Buell v. Ball, 20-282; Deeds v. Sanborn, 22-214.

Where a tract of land within the extended limits of the city lay near one of the principal streets, and was so surrounded as to receive current benefits from the expenditures made by the city as well as permanent increase in value, held, that it was liable to municipal taxation: O'Hare v. Dubuque, 22-144.

Lands included within an extension of the city limits, but used exclusively for agricultural purposes, and not affected by the current expenditures of the city, nor being enhanced in value by being within the corporate limits, held not subject to municipal taxation: Dezman v. Fort Madison, 30-542.

But property which is held for the opportunity of bringing it into the market as city lots is not entitled to exemption. So, if land within the city limits is used for the purpose of dwellings or business, it cannot ordinarily be claimed to be exempt from taxation, even though the city fails to open or improve the streets leading thereto: Durant v. Kaufman, 34-194.

Municipal taxes from which farm property within the corporate limits is exempt are those levied exclusively for municipal purposes, such as to support the police, lights, water, sewerage, fire department, local government, etc.; but such property is not exempt from taxes voted by the city in aid of a railway, which might be levied as effectually upon property not included within the city: Sears v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 39-417.

A tract of one hundred acres within city limits, used only for farming purposes and having no houses thereon, but against which streets abut, and adjoining an addition laid out in lots and partially improved, held subject to city taxes: Brooks v. Polk County, 52-460.

The fact that land included within the city limits is used for agricultural purposes will not render the taxation thereof illegal, it not being shown that it is used exclusively for such purposes, nor that it does not derive such benefit from the expenditure of municipal taxes that it is properly subject to such taxation: Tubbesing v. Burlington, 68-691.

The doctrine under which agricultural land included within city limits is exempt from municipal taxation is not applicable to railway property under the statutory provisions for the taxation thereof: Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Hamilton County, 73-313.

For other cases where facts were considered as determining whether the property was properly subject to municipal taxation or not, see Fulton v. Davenport, 17-404; Davis v. Dubuque, 20-458; Hershey v. Muscatine, 22-184; Deeds v. Sanborn, 26-419; Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12-112.

Cities should not be allowed, against the will of property owners, to include within their limits lands which are not needed for city purposes, and are not benefited by being within the corporation, for the purpose of deriving revenues therefrom: Evans v. Council Bluffs, 65-238.

Such land should be allowed to be severed from the city upon proper proceedings being taken, and upon such severance should not be held liable for indebtedness of the city incurred during its attachment to the city: Ibid.

Moneys and credits of non-resident: The provision (§ 1296) subjecting to taxation in this state moneys and credits belonging to a non-resident, but under the control and management of an agent in the state, held not in conflict with the provisions of this section, as providing for the taking of private property for public use without compensation: Hutchinson v. Board of Equalization, 66-35.

Compensation: While the right to take private property for public use is conditioned upon compensation, the taxing power is not thus limited: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

A special participation in the benefits of a particular tax on the part of the tax payer has nothing to do with the right to impose the tax. The identical revenue collected by the special tax may be used for purposes from which the tax payers of whom it was received derive no benefit: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

Not subject to judicial control: The taxing power being one of the sovereign powers vested in the general assembly by the people, and not being limited either expressly or by implication, the judicial power possesses no authority to limit it: Ibid.

Tax in aid of railroad: The imposition of a tax to aid in the construction of a railroad is an exercise of the taxing power for a public purpose though it be for a private profit, and statutory provisions authorizing such taxation held not unconstitutional: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9; McGregor & S. C. R. Co. v. Birdsall, 30-255; Bonnifield v. Bidwell, 32-149; Kenwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 47-511; Snell v. Leonard, 55-553; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67-728.

Under a former statute, with similar provisions, such taxation was held to be illegal: Hanson v. Vernon, 27-28; King v. Wilson, 1 Dillon, 555.

Just compensation: The provision as to "just compensation" means that the person whose property is taken for public use shall have a fair equivalent in money for the injury done him by such taking. This compensation should be precisely commensurate with the injury sustained from the taking of the property: Sater v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road

Co., 1-386; Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288.

It is only when the damages are properly assessed that they are to be paid or secured. The compensation must be ascertained in the mode prescribed by law: McCrorry v. Griswold, 7-248.

A payment of the damages assessed is a condition precedent to the right to enter upon and take the land under the right of way act, and if the property is taken before such compensation is made, the owner may proceed as against a trespasser: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 10-540; Daniels v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 35-129.

The provision (§ 1919) allowing the taking of property pending an appeal in the condemnation proceeding is not unconstitutional: Peterson v. Ferreby, 30-327.

If no damages are claimed, or if the appraisers appointed in the manner prescribed by law ascertain that the claimant is entitled to no damages, and no appeal is taken from their decision, the property owner cannot enjoin the condemnation of his property on the ground that compensation has not been made: Connolly v. Griswold, 7-416; Dunlap v. Pulley, 28-469; Abbott v. Board of Supervisors, 36-354; Tharp v. Witham, 65-566.

And if his claim is rejected as not filed in proper time, he cannot resist the opening of the highway on the ground that he has not had just compensation: Dunlap v. Pulley, 28-469; Abbott v. Board of Supervisors, 36-354.

Compensation for property taken for public purposes is guaranteed by this section of the constitution only where the usual and ordinary forms and remedies provided by law are adopted by the person desiring to obtain such compensation, and if he fails to avail himself of such remedies he cannot be permitted to complain. So held where a land owner whose property was taken for a public highway, and whose claim for damages was disallowed by the board of supervisors, failed to appeal from such action: Tharp v. Witham, 65-566.

Public highways: There is no doubt of the power of the legislature to provide for the condemnation of right of way for public highways upon notice by publication in newspapers or posted notices. The proceeding is in the nature of a proceeding in rem in which the court acquires jurisdiction of the property which is the subject of the adjudication: Wilson v. Hathaway, 42-173.

When the location of a road over a party's land is changed, he should be allowed compensation for the additional damage caused by the change and no more: Israel v. Jewett, 29-475.

Vacation of highway: Where a person has only the right to the use of a highway which pertains to the general public, he cannot maintain an action for damages by reason of its vacation. Such proceeding is not the taking of private property within the constitutional provision: Ellsworth v. Chuckasaw County, 40-571; Brady v. Shinkle, 40-576.

Streets: The use of land for a street is a public purpose for which it may be taken upon rendering compensation, and the court will not review the decision of the city authorities holding that the public interests require a street to be established: Cherokee v. Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot, etc., Co., 52-279.

Use of streets by railway: The legislature may authorize the use of the streets of a city by a railway company for the construction and operation of its road without compensation being made to the city or to adjoining property owners. But the city may have property acquired for other authorized purposes which could not be so taken without compensation being made: Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 24-455.

The provision (§ 623) authorizing a city to grant to railroads right of way through its streets upon condition that compensation for damages be paid to abutting property owners is twofold in its objects: first, to secure to the city control over its streets; and secondly, to secure to property owners compensation for damages. And in a particular case, held that although the first object could not be accomplished, owing to prior rights having been conferred by another railroad upon the company in question, nevertheless, the second object being a proper one, the statute would be upheld as constitutional: Drady v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 57-393.

Improvement of streets: Levying a tax upon property abutting upon a street to pave such street is not an exercise of the right of eminent domain, but of the power of taxation: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

The compensation provided by § 635 for damages resulting from changing the grade of a street is not intended as compensation for the taking of private property for public use, and the constitutional provision as to compensation has no application: Meyer v. Burlington, 52-560.

Right of way for railways: When a right of way is, by statute, taken for the use of a railway company, it is in contemplation of law taken by the state for public use and not simply for the private use of the company in whose behalf it is taken, although the compensation be paid by the company. The easement thus acquired is in the nature of a grant from the state to the company for the uses and purposes fixed by law, and when the company fails to carry out the purposes of the grant the state may transfer the easement to another company upon compensation being made to the former company: Noll v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. R. Co., 32-66.

Destruction of buildings to stop fires: An ordinance of a municipal corporation authorizing the destruction of buildings to stop the spread of fire is not an exercise of the power of eminent domain, but a regulation of the right which individuals possess to destroy private property in cases of inevitable necessity: Field v. Des Moines, 39-575.

Mill-dams: The statute allowing the taking of private property for the purpose of erecting mill-dams is constitutional: Burnham v. Thompson, 35-421.

Prohibitory liquor law: The legislature being the supreme judge and guardian of the public health, safety, happiness and morals, may, if the traffic in certain property is deemed detrimental or dangerous to these public interests, prohibit it, and declare that property illicitly held, kept, or used, shall be forfeited and destroyed; and such a provision is not one authorizing the taking of private property for public use: Santo v. State, 2-165, 216.

The provision making the judgment for the wrongful sale of intoxicating liquor a lien upon the property in which the business is carried on is not the taking thereof for public use: Polk County v. Hierb, 37-361.

The present statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors cannot be said to unlawfully deprive the owner of such property of his property without compensation, at least unless it be made to appear that such property was owned by such party prior to the enactment of the prohibitory statute of 1895: McLane v. Leicht, 69-401.

Imprisonment for debt. SEC. 19. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, on mesne or final process, unless in case of fraud; and no person shall be imprisoned for a military fine in time of peace.

The provision (§ 4374) for imprisonment of debtor for contempt in refusing to turn over property, etc., is not in conflict with this section: Ex parte Grace, 12-208. (But such provision is in conflict with § 10 of this article. See same case in notes to that section.)

Petition. SEC. 20. The people have the right freely to assemble together to counsel for the common good; to make known their opinions to their representatives, and to petition for a redress of grievances.

Attainder; ex post facto law; obligation of contract. SEC. 21. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall ever be passed.

EX POST FACTO LAWS.

Defined: An ex post facto law is one which makes acts innocent when done criminal, or if criminal when done aggravates the crime, increases the punishment or reduces the measure of proof. The term applies only to criminal laws. Retrospective or retroactive laws are not in conflict with the constitution of the United States or this constitution, except when they interfere with vested rights: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26-340.

An ex post facto law is a retroactive criminal law, and a statute which does not make an act already done a crime, although it subjects the person guilty thereof to liability, cannot be ex post facto: Polk County v. Hierb, 37-361.

A change in the law by which petit larceny was made cognizable only before a justice of the peace and not upon indictment, held not to affect the statute as to the punishment of larceny so as to prevent punishment, under the statute, of grand larceny committed prior to the taking effect of the change: State v. Church, 8-252.

Where the elements of the crime are not affected by change in the statute, but only the amount of punishment, it is not necessary that the indictment show whether the crime was committed before or after such change: State v. Keylets, 74-499.

Retroactive laws: A constitutional provision is not to be given a retrospective operation unless the words employed show a clear intention that it shall have that effect: Burlington Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48-133.

Retrospective laws, as distinguished from ex post facto laws, are not necessarily unconstitutional: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112, 117.

Legislation operating retrospectively, to render binding and effective contracts before invalid, is not in conflict with the constitution. It does not impair the obligation of contracts, nor, as between the parties thereto, disturb vested rights: Tilton v. Swift, 40-78.

Legalizing acts: In order to a rightful exercise of the legislative power to cure a defective proceeding, the legislature must have possessed the power to authorize the result by a prior legislative enactment: but it is not necessary that it might have accomplished the result in the precise manner adopted to cure the defect; nor is the power of the legislature to cure defective proceedings limited by the fact that but for such curative act the defective proceeding would be wholly invalid or inoperative: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26-340.

The power of the legislature to cure defective or irregular proceedings is not limited by the fact that but for such curative act the proceedings would be wholly inoperative; and held, that where the legislature has the power to authorize by general law the levy and collection of special taxes by municipal corporations without limitation as to rate, the legislature may rightfully legalize levies made in excess of lawful authority: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112.

As the legislature might provide by law that a conveyance should impart constructive notice without acknowledgment, so it may by a curative act provide that defective acknowledgments to instruments, which have been duly recorded, shall be legal and valid, notwithstanding such defects; but such curative acts cannot affect rights of third parties which have vested before their passage: Brinton v. SeEVERS, 12-389; Newman v. Samuels, 17-528; Ferguson v. Williams, 58-717.

But held that such acts legalizing conveyances defectively acknowledged were applicable only to conveyances which, without acknowledgment, would have been valid, but not to instruments (as, for instance, deeds of married women under the law as it then stood) which, unless acknowledged in the manner required, were void: Heaton v. Fryberger, 38-135.

A retrospective law authorizing an act, or curing defects in a proceeding which the legislature might have previously authorized, is not unconstitutional: McMillen v. County Judge, 6-391; Huff v. Cook, 44-639.

Therefore an act legalizing the establishment of a county road is not unconstitutional: Bennett v. Fisher, 26-497.

A valid curative act cannot be passed where the act to be cured is prohibited by the constitution: Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44-122.

While retrospective legislation may be proper under some circumstances, held, that a retrospective statute validating a deed by the chairman and clerk of the board of supervisors of a county, conveying to a railroad company certain swamp land belonging to the county, together with a cash indemnity to which the county was entitled from the United States, such cash indemnity not being included in the original contract of sale of said swamp land to the railroad company which the electors had approved as required by law, was invalid: Palmer v. Howard County, 45-61.

A law which purports to legalize an act of a municipal corporation which it had no lawful power to do, not in mere matter of form but in substance, is invalid. The legislature cannot legalize the passage of an ordinance which it could not specifically authorize in the first instance: Independent School Dist. v. Burlington, 60-500.

As the legislature cannot amend corporate charters by special laws, it cannot legalize the passage of an ordinance not authorized by such charter: Stange v. Dubuque, 62-303.

But an act legalizing the action of a county superintendent in attaching territory of one district to another, not justified by the circumstances so as to render the original action valid under the statute, may be passed, as no general statute could be made applicable, and therefore the constitutional prohibition against special statutes does not apply: Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 62-616.

Where a note individual in form was in fact given in payment for insurance of school buildings, and was signed by the officers of the school district with their individual names, affixing the words "President," "Secretary" and "Director," held, that the statute legalizing all contracts made by school officers for insurance of school buildings, as well as evidence of indebtedness therefor, and relieving the members from their individual liability, was not applicable: American Ins. Co. v. Stratton, 59-696.

If the legalizing act is invalid it will not affect the former act: Lytte v. May, 49-224.

A legalizing act merely operating to carry out the intent of the parties, which would otherwise be defeated by formal defects, is valid. So held as to § 3553, legalizing conveyances of real estate by foreign executors: Smith v. Callaghan, 66-552.

IMPAIRING OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

Re-enactment of statute: The obligation of contracts is not impaired by the re-enactment of a statute in existence at the time the contract was made: Bridgman v. Wilcut, 4 G. Gr., 563.

Subsequent contracts: A law enacted prior to the formation of a contract cannot be objectionable as impairing the obligation thereof: Davis v. Bronson, 6-410.

Negotiability of bills and notes: A statute attaching the attributes of negotiability to instruments which have not been previously negotiable, and thereby cutting off defenses as against an innocent holder, cannot be made applicable to contracts already in existence: Griffey v. Payne, Mor., 68; Harlan v. Sigler, Mor., 39.

But a provision that, in case of assignment of such an instrument, suit may be brought in the name of the assignee instead of that of the original payee for the assignee's benefit, merely affects the remedy and may be applicable to assignments already made: Harlan v. Sigler, Mor., 39.

Although the legislature is not prohibited from changing the remedy on a contract or the rules of evidence that shall be brought to bear upon it, yet a statute authorizing the defense of fraud to be set up as against a bona fide holder for value of a negotiable instrument acquiring the same before maturity can only apply to contracts made after the taking effect of the statute: Temple v. Hays, Mor., 9.

Divorce: A legislative divorce is not a law impairing the obligation of contracts: Levins v. Steator, 2 G. Gr., 604.

The decision of a court declaring a contract void is not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts. So held in case of bonds issued by counties in payment for stock in railroad companies, where the bonds were held void: McClure v. Owen, 26-243; Railroad Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall., 511.

Change in judicial decision cannot be allowed to render invalid contracts which, when made, were held to be lawful: Thompson v. Lee County, 3 Wall., 327.

Where a state has passed no law nor put any construction upon any law impairing the obligation of a contract then in existence, but changes its policy or construction of the state constitution in regard to a class of contracts, the validity of any one of that class of contracts will be determined by the law then in force: Railroad Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall., 511.

Effect of sealed instrument: The statute allowing the want of consideration to be pleaded in an action on a sealed instrument does not impair the obligation of the contract when applied to an instrument executed out of the state, where the common-law rule making the seal conclusive as to the consideration is in force: Williams v. Haines, 27-251.

A state bankrupt law does prima facie impair the obligation of contracts, and is unconstitutional and void, except in case the debtor and creditor are domiciled in the state where the discharge is granted and the law was in existence at the time when the contract was made: Collins v. Rodolph, 3 G. Gr., 299.

The appearance of a non-resident creditor for the purpose of opposing the discharge of the insolvent will not constitute a waiver or abandonment of his exemption from the effect of such discharge: Ibid.

A discharge under a state insolvent law does not discharge a debt due to a citizen of another state, no matter where the debt was contracted or made payable, unless the creditor has appeared and submitted to the jurisdiction of the court by becoming a party or claiming a dividend: Hawley v. Hunt, 27-303.

Legal tender notes: The act of congress making United States notes a legal tender in payment of debts previously contracted is constitutional: Wilson v. Tribblecock, 23-331; Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 33-422, 503.

Attachment: The actual service of an attachment upon property creates a real lien thereon which nothing subsequent can destroy but the dissolution of the attachment. Therefore, held, that an act exempting property of persons in the military service of the United States from levy or sale was not applicable to property already levied on by attachment: Hannahs v. Felt, 15-141; Ryan v. Wessels, 15-145.

Existing vendor's lien: The right to a vendor's lien, arising by virtue of contract of sale and conveyance without express reservation thereof, at a time when such lien was recognized, held not to be affected by subsequent legislation (§ 3111) declaring that such a lien should not be recognized or enforced after conveyance by the vendee, unless reserved by conveyance, mortgage or other instrument duly executed and recorded: Jordan v. Wimer, 45-65.

License: A license to sell intoxicating liquors is not a contract between the state and the person licensed, giving the latter vested rights, but is a mere temporary permit issued in the exercise of the police power, and subject to the direction of government, which may revoke it as it deems fit. Such power of revocation may be exercised by a municipal corporation where the license has been issued by it under authority of law: Columbus City v. Cutcomp, 61-672.

Dower: The widow's right to dower becomes vested at the time of the husband's death and cannot be changed by a subsequent statute: Burke v. Barron, 8-132.

A statute increasing the extent of the widow's dower right cannot be made to operate against the purchaser of land conveyed by the husband before the taking effect of the statute: Davis v. O'Ferrall, 4 G. Gr., 168.

Liability of wife's property: A change in the statutory provisions relating to the liability of the wife's property for debts of the husband which diminished such liability (§§ 3393, 3394), held not applicable to a contract entered into before such change took place, although proceedings were not commenced nor the property seized until after the change: Schmidt v. Holtz, 44-446.

Taxation; change in law: A change in the revenue law as to the mode of enforcing a tax does not impair the obligation of contracts: Haskel v. Burlington, 30-232.

A statute as to the method of enforcing the payment of taxes may be made applicable to taxes delinquent at the time of its passage, as well as those to become delinquent in the future: Sully v. Knehl, 30-275.

Exemption from taxation is not a vested right, and may be taken away at the will of the legislature: Shiner v. Jacobs, 62-392.

Land dedicated to city for public use: Where, by dedication, the title to property is vested in a city for special public purposes, the legislature cannot authorize the city to sell the land in violation of such trust: Warren v. Mayor of Lyons City, 22-351.

Right to taxes not earned: A statute providing that taxes voted in aid of a railway company should not be collected until the company complied with the conditions entitling it to receive such tax from the treasurer, held not to interfere with vested rights: Harwood v. Case, 37-692.

Penalties on railroad taxes: While penalties already accrued upon a tax in aid of a railroad cannot be taken away by the repeal of the statute under which the tax is voted, there is no vested right in the continuance of such penalties: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69-648.

Corporate franchises; police regulation of: While the legislature may not deprive a corporation of rights vested under its charter without infringing an implied contract between the state and the corporation that there shall be no change in the laws existing at the time of incorporation which shall render the use of the franchise more burdensome or less remunerative, yet a corporation cannot complain of the passage of statutes in the nature of police regulations, although they may operate to its disadvantage: Rodemacher v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 41-297.

Therefore, held, that the provision (§ 1972) making railway companies absolutely liable for damages caused by fires set out by their engines was not unconstitutional as applied to railways previously chartered: Ibid.

The statute (21 G. A., ch. 76) requiring foreign corporations doing business within the state to file articles of incorporation with the auditor, and receive permits to transact business, and subjecting them to penalties for doing business without such permit, held constitutional: Goodell v. Kriechbaum, 70-362.

Right of municipal corporation in taxes levied: A municipal corporation acquires a vested right in taxes already levied under existing laws, which cannot be destroyed by a subsequent statute releasing property from the payment of such taxes: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56; Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47-196; Burlington v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 41-134; Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 62-616.

Laws affecting the remedy: The legislature has the power to change the remedy and remedial proceedings upon contracts, and as to them the law in force when the remedy is pursued prevails unless there be statutory provisions preserving the old remedy. So held as to the method of sale under a judgment recovered after the change in the law as to appraisements in an action upon a contract made before such change: Babcock v. Gurney, 42 154; Holland v. Dickerson, 41-367.

A citizen has no vested rights in a particular course of practice in the courts nor to a particular remedy. Remedies are within the control of the legislature, subject to the restriction that the obligation of contracts shall not be impaired and all remedy for the enforcement of rights under a contract shall not be taken away. Retrospective laws which affect pending suits and give a new remedy, modify an existing one, or remove the impediment in the way of a legal proceeding, are not unconstitutional: Tilton v. Swift, 40-78.

Statutes may constitutionally be enacted changing the remedy existing when the contract is made, if they preserve existing remedies in substance and with integrity, and do not destroy or embarrass the remedies existing when the contract is made so as substantially to defeat the rights of a creditor. A law merely limiting the amount of the costs recoverable does not so affect the remedy as substantially to defeat the rights of creditors. So held in regard to a statute (§ 3034) limiting the amount of attorneys' fees taxable as costs upon foreclosure of school-fund mortgage: Kossuth County v. Wallace, 60-508.

A law which, by construction, gives a new and more efficient remedy upon a contract does not impair its obligation: Van Metre v. Wolf, 27-341.

A change of statutory provisions relating to the production of testimony may be made applicable to suits before commenced: Wormley v. Hamburg, 40-22.

A retrospective statute, regulating the remedy but not affecting subsequent rights, is constitutional: Johnson v. Semple, 31-49.

So held as to a statute rendering a motion for a new trial in an action at law unnecessary in order to bring before the supreme court, on appeal, the question as to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the judgment: Ibid.

Proceedings are to be had in accordance with the statutes in force, even though they may have been passed subsequent to the commencement of the action: Ballard v. Ridgley, Mor., 27; Inghram v. Dooley, Mor., 28.

Rules of practice of a court cannot be regarded as vested rights which may not be modified by a subsequent statute. A party has no vested right as to a particular course of practice: Brotherton v. Brotherton, 41-112.

A change in the statute regulating the place of bringing action to foreclose a mortgage, by which the action is authorized to be brought in the county where suit on the note may be maintained instead of in the county where the property is situated, is not such a change in the remedy as to be unconstitutional as to mortgages previously executed: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Gleason, 56-47.

An amendment to the statute in reference to changes of venue, held not to affect any vested right as applied to actions pending: Eikenberry v. Edwards, 71-82.

The right to a particular mode of procedure is not a vested right which the state cannot change or abolish: Drake v. Jordan, 73-707.

Redemption and appraisement laws: An appraisement law providing that property levied upon under execution can only be sold at a certain proportion of the appraised value is unconstitutional as applied to contracts entered into before its passage. The law in force when the contract is made necessarily forms a part of the contract and fixes the rights and obligations growing out of it, and any substantial change in the law of the remedy which shall lessen its efficiency or burden it with any new conditions and restrictions comes within the constitutional prohibition:

Rosier v. Hale, 10-470; Landis v. Abrahams, 11-284.

A law depriving a judgment debtor of the right to have his real property appraised, or sold subject to redemption, is not unconstitutional as impairing vested rights: Holland v. Dickerson, 41-367; Babcock v. Gurney, 42-154.

But a change in the law regulating judicial sales, by which appraisement is allowed in cases where the right before did not exist, is unconstitutional in its application to sales under judgments rendered upon contracts made before the change in the law took effect: Olmstead v. Kellogg, 47-460.

A law giving a right of redemption from sales under foreclosure of mortgage in cases where it did not exist at the time when the mortgage was made impairs the obligation of the contract and is unconstitutional: Malony v. Fortune, 14-417.

Valuation and appraisement laws in general are not applicable to sales under judgments existing prior to their enactments: Burton v. Emerson, 4 G. Gr., 393.

A judgment is not a contract within the provision of the constitution prohibiting legislation impairing the obligation of contracts, and valuation and appraisement laws may be applicable to a judgment for costs rendered before the enactment of such laws: Sprott v. Reid, 3 G. Gr., 489.

Valuation laws, so far as they do not impair the obligation of the contract, are applicable to executions under a judgment upon a contract entered into before they take effect: Coriell v. Ham, 4 G. Gr., 455.

Exemption of pension money: The act exempting property purchased with pension money from liability for indebtedness arising under contracts previously entered into (as provided in § 4306) is unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts: Foster v. Byrne, 76-295.

Statutes of limitation relate to the remedy and not to the substance of the contract, and may therefore be made to operate upon prior contracts without impairing their obligations: Mattby v. Cooper, Mor., 59.

If a substantial remedy is left for the enforcement of the contract, the fact that by the statute of limitations a particular action for its enforcement is completely barred will not render such a statute unconstitutional as to existing contracts: Ibid.

The statute of limitations found in Code of '51 and Rev. of '60, held not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts, since the right to sue upon accrued causes of action was not cut off: Campbell v. Long, 20-382.

Extending time for defending: Laws which merely change the remedy are not liable to constitutional objection, although the remedy may be deemed less convenient than the old one, and may in some degree render the recovery of debts more tardy and difficult; but in altering the remedy the obligation of the contract must not be so impaired that the rights of the party in it are in effect destroyed or the remedy rendered hardly worth pursuing by reason of being burdened with new restrictions. Therefore, held, that statutory provisions giving a defendant who should be in the military service of the United States, or of the state, the right to a continuance in actions pending or afterwards to be brought, did not impose on the remedy such new burdens or restrictions as to impair its benefit, and that therefore such restriction was not unconstitutional as to contracts already existing: McCormick v. Rusch, 15-127.

Extending time for bringing suit: A law extending the time within which action may be brought upon a contract is not unconstitutional: Edwards v. McCaddon, 20-520.

Nor is an act extending the time within which a defendant might answer in proceedings to foreclose a mortgage open to such objection: Holloway v. Sherman, 12-282.

Prohibition of action upon judgment: The provision (§ 3726) prohibiting an action upon a judgment within fifteen years from its rendition, without leave of the court, held not unconstitutional when applied to judgments rendered before its passage, as impairing their obligation. Although it takes away one remedy, it leaves a complete one: Watts v. Everett, 47-269.

Resident aliens. SEC. 22. Foreigners who are, or may hereafter become residents of this state, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and descent of property, as native-born citizens.

This section does not change the common-law rule as to non-resident aliens, and a resident alien, to take advantage of its provisions, must be such at the time of descent cast: Stemple v. Herminghouser, 3 G. Gr., 408. But the section does not restrict the power of the legislature to extend the same privileges to other foreigners than those named (per Cole, J.): Purczell v. Smidt, 21-540; and it confers upon resident aliens the right to transmit as well as to acquire real property by descent (per Dillon, J.): Ibid.

No vested right in pending action: The bringing of a suit vests no right to a particular decision, and the case must be determined on the law as it stands when the judgment is rendered: Huff v. Cook, 44-639.

Right to hold office: Therefore, where a woman elected to the office of county superintendent was held unqualified to fill that office, and subsequently a law was passed providing that no person so elected should be deprived of office by reason of sex, held, that on appeal taken after the passage of the act the statute would be given effect, and the judgment of the court below was reversed: Ibid.

In the absence of any express constitutional provision it is competent for the legislature to abolish an office, increase or decrease the duties devolving upon an incumbent, and add to or take away from his salary. It is also within the legislative power to add to or change the method in which vacancies may occur, and make such changes applicable to existing offices and those holding them: Bryan v. Cattell, 15-538.

Slavery. SEC. 23. There shall be no slavery in this state; nor shall there be involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime.

Imprisonment for contempt for the violation of an injunction, under the prohibitory liquor law, against maintaining a nuisance, is not involuntary servitude, within the prohibition of the constitution: Martin v. Blattner, 68-286.

Reservation of rents. SEC. 24. No lease or grant of agricultural lands, reserving any rent or service of any kind, shall be valid for a longer period than twenty years.

Rights retained. SEC. 25. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others, retained by the people.

The theory of the constitution is that all powers not vested in the general assembly remain in the state: State ex rel. v. Wapello County, 13-388.

"There is, as it were, back of the constitution, an unwritten constitution which guaranties and well protects all the absolute rights of the people" (per Beck, J.): Hanson v. Vernon, 27-28, 73. But see Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9, 18, and note to art. 3, § 1.

Intoxicating liquors. SEC. 26. No person shall manufacture for sale, or sell, or keep for sale, as a beverage any intoxicating liquors whatever, including ale, wine and beer. The general assembly shall by law prescribe regulations for the enforcement of the prohibition herein contained, and shall thereby provide suitable penalties for the violation of the provisions hereof.

[By the nineteenth general assembly (Joint Res. No. 8) the following proposed amendment was agreed to, as having already been in due form agreed to by the previous general assembly (18 G. A., Joint Res. No. 8). By 19 G. A., ch. 172, in pursuance of a previous statute authorizing submissions of constitutional amendments at special elections (§ 63), this proposed amendment was submitted to the people at a special election to be held June 27, 1882. By proclamation of the governor, dated July 29, 1882, this proposed amendment was declared adopted.]

For irregularities in entering this amendment upon the journals of the eighteenth general assembly, and a want of agreement between the amendment as there entered and as subsequently agreed to by the nineteenth general assembly, this amendment, as submitted to and adopted by the people, did not become a part of the constitution: Koehler v. Hill, 60-543; State v. Johnson, 61-504.

ARTICLE 2.—RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

Electors. SECTION 1. Every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of this state six months next preceding the election, and of the county in which he claims his vote, sixty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or hereafter may be authorized by law.

[By proper legislative action a proposed amendment striking the word "white" from the first line of this section, as it originally stood, was submitted to the electors at the general election in 1868 and adopted.]

The registry laws: This section confers upon persons possessing the qualifications mentioned therein the right to vote, which right cannot be impaired by legislation. But the legislature may regulate the exercise of the right, and provide a method for determining whether persons proposing to vote possess the required qualifications. A registry law is therefore not unconstitutional: Edmonds v. Banbury, 28-267.

Residence: Where a student entered the state university at Iowa City while still a minor, making his father's home in another county his residence during vacations, and receiving support from his father, without having any definite intention of making Iowa City his home after graduation, held, that he was not a resident of the county in which he was attending school, so as to be entitled to vote there on coming of age: Vanderpael v. O'Hanlon, 53-246.

If a person has actually removed to another place with the intention of remaining there for an indefinite time, and making it a place of fixed residence or present domicile, it is to be regarded as his domicile, notwithstanding he may entertain a floating intention to return at some future time. The place where a married man's family resides is generally to be considered his domicile: State v. Groome, 10-308.

Persons in military service: A statute providing that citizens of the state in the military service should have a right to vote at all elections authorized by law, whether at the time of voting they were within or without the state, and providing for the opening of polls and holding of elections wherever a regiment or battalion of Iowa troops was stationed, held not unconstitutional: Morrison v. Springer, 15-304.

Privileged from arrest. SEC. 2. Electors shall, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the days of election, during their attendance at such elections, going to and returning therefrom.

From military duty. SEC. 3. No elector shall be obliged to perform military duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

Persons in military service. SEC. 4. No person in the military, naval, or marine service of the United States shall be considered a resident of this state by being stationed in any garrison, barrack, or military or naval place or station within this state.

Insane. SEC. 5. No idiot or insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to the privilege of an elector.

Ballot. SEC. 6. All elections by the people shall be by ballot.

General election. [SEC. 7.] The general election for state, district, county and township officers shall be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November.

[By proper action of the legislature (19 G. A., Joint Res. No. 12, and 20 G. A., Joint Res. No. 13), the foregoing section was submitted to vote of the electors at the general election in 1884, and by them adopted.]

ARTICLE 3.—OF THE DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

Departments of governments. SECTION 1. The powers of the government of Iowa shall be divided into three separate departments: the legislative, the executive and the judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any function appertaining to either of the others, except in cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted.

This section does not prohibit the judicial department from passing upon the legality of the acts of the officers of the several departments; as, for instance, to compel the auditor of state by mandamus to issue a warrant for payment of salary of an officer, where the auditor has refused to act: Bryan v. Cattell, 15-538.

The charter of a city, conferring upon the mayor judicial authority, is not in conflict with this section. The mayor of the city is not a part of the government of the state of Iowa: Santo v. State, 2-165, 220.

Provisions (§ 580) for proceedings in court for the annexation of contiguous territory to a city, held not in conflict with this section: Burlington v. Leebriek, 43-252, 258.

See, further, notes to following sections.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

General assembly. SECTION 1. The legislative authority of this state shall be vested in a general assembly, which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives; and the style of every law shall be—"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa."

General scope of power: In ascertaining the power of the legislature under the constitution, the courts look not at what the instrument authorizes but at what is prohibited: McMillen v. County Judge, 6-391.

The legislature possesses sovereign legislative power over all subjects except such as are prohibited to it in the state constitution: Boyd v. Ellis, 11-97.

The general assembly possesses all legislative authority not delegated to the general government or prohibited by the constitution. The constitution, as applied to the legislative department, is a limitation and not a grant of power: Morrison v. Springer, 15-304. And see State v. Hockett, 70-442.

The rule in construing the state constitution is that the state legislature may exercise all rightful legislative powers which are not expressly prohibited or necessarily included in the prohibited powers: Purzell v. Smidt, 21-540.

All the legislative authority inherent in the people is vested in the general assembly, and the legislative power of the general assembly is therefore supreme, except as it is bounded by the limitations written in the constitution: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9, 18.

The power of legislation is vested in general terms in the general assembly, and thereby there is conferred upon that body the authority to legislate upon all rightful subjects, unless prohibited from so doing expressly or by clear implication: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633.

And see notes to art. 1, § 25.

While the constitution vests the legislative power in the general assembly and it may legislate on all subjects not prohibited by express words or necessary implication, yet under the constitutional provision placing the educational interests of the state under the management of a board of education authorized to legislate and make all needful rules and regulations in relation to schools, held, that the power to legislate on such subject was thereby denied to the legislature: District T'p v. Dubuque, 7-262.

Legislative divorces: Under the terms of the organic law providing "that the legislative power of the territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation," held, that the territorial legislature was invested with as much power as is usually vested in an unrestrained legislative body, and that such power included the power to grant legislative divorces, even where the grounds for divorce were not such as to entitle the party to relief in the courts: Levins v. Sleator, 2 G. Gr., 604. (But under this constitution, art. 3, § 27, legislative divorces cannot now be granted.)

The taxing power being one of the sovereign powers of the state vested in the general assembly, and not being limited by the constitution as to the kinds or classes of property subject to taxation, the general assembly has general legislative authority to subject all kinds and classes of property to taxes for all proper purposes: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633.

It being within the proper scope of legislative authority to pass general laws for the levy and assessment of taxes, the passage of a general law curing and legalizing the levy and collection of taxes irregularly or illegally levied is also an exercise of legislative authority and not an encroachment upon judicial power: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112.

Taxation is an attribute of sovereignty. It is one of the powers necessary to the life and existence of the state, and, unless restricted in the fundamental law, the power of the state is full and ample to subject all species of property within its limits to taxes for all lawful purposes: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633.

Property cannot be taxed until authority therefor be conferred by the legislature, and the manner of imposing taxes authorized by law must be followed: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Davenport, 51-451.

No property can be taxed until the law-making power authorizes and requires it to be done, and if it has been authorized only in a particular way, that alone can be pursued. It cannot be done in another: Tallman v. Treasurer of Butler County, 12-531.

Without express legislative enactment or constitutional provision the property of the people cannot be subjected to taxation: Appanoose County v. Vermilion, 70-365.

Judicial revision of legislative action: Where the legislative authority reserves to itself the power to act under certain circumstances, the existence of such circumstances is to be determined by it, and a court cannot call into question the propriety of its action: Miners' Bank v. United States, 1 G. Gr., 553.

The judicial branch of the government has no power to determine whether an act of the legislative branch is wise or unwise, nor has it power to declare an act void except in cases where the statute in question is plainly, palpably, and without doubt, repugnant to some provision of the constitution: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64-275.

And see notes to art. 5, § 1.

Delegation of legislative power: The legislative authority being vested in the general assembly, it is not competent for it to submit the question whether an act shall become a law to the vote of the people. Therefore, held, that a statute providing for a submission to vote, in each county, of the question as to whether a prohibitory liquor law should be in force in that county, was unconstitutional, and that the act itself was in force throughout the state without such submission: Santo v. State, 2-165, 203; State v. Beneke, 9-203.

So the license act of 1857, containing a provision that the prohibitory law of 1855 should not be repealed in any county except by a vote of the people of that county, was held unconstitutional: Gebriek v. State, 5-491.

Held, also, that a statute providing for the submission to vote in each county of the question whether a previous prohibitory liquor law allowing the sale of wine and beer should be repealed within that county, and the sale of wine and beer prohibited, was unconstitutional: State v. Weir, 33-134.

Held, also, that a statute which prohibited stock from running at large, and was a valid enactment in itself, but contained a section providing that the act should not be enforced in any county until adopted by the electors of that county, was in force throughout the state without any such submission to vote, the provision for a submission being unconstitutional: Weir v. Cram, 37-649.

But a statute allowing the county judge to submit to vote in each county the question whether sheep and swine should be allowed to run at large was held not unconstitutional as being a delegation of legislative power, inasmuch as the law itself was in force without such vote, and the people of each county were simply authorized to adopt its provisions as a police regulation: Dalby v. Wolf, 14-228.

Although the general assembly cannot delegate to the people the right to make or repeal a law, it has not been held that the state cannot delegate legislative power to municipal corporations within proper bounds: State v. King, 37-462.

It is not unconstitutional to provide, in an act enlarging the boundaries of a city, that it shall only take effect after its acceptance by the city council: Morford v. Unger, 8-82.

A statute empowering cities of a certain grade to establish superior courts by vote is not unconstitutional as providing for an exercise of legislative power by the people. The statute itself is in force without any vote, but simply confers upon cities an option to be exercised by vote to avail themselves of the power conferred: Lytle v. May, 49-224.

A statute conferring upon cities authority to be exercised at their discretion is not void as delegating legislative power. Such statute confers authority which the city may exercise or not, as it chooses: Des Moines v. Hillis, 55-643.

The voting of aid to railways by a county is not in derogation of the legislative power vested in the general assembly: Dubuque County v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 4 G. Gr., 1.

Sessions. SEC. 2. The sessions of the general assembly shall be biennial, and shall commence on the second Monday in January next ensuing the election of its members; unless the governor of the state shall, in the meantime, convene the general assembly by proclamation.

As to the powers of the general assembly at an extra session, see note to art. 4, § 11.

Representatives. SEC. 3. The members of the house of representatives shall be chosen every second year, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the second Tuesday in October, except the years of the presidential election, when the election shall be on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, and their term of office shall commence on the first day of January next after their election, and continue two years, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

[By the amendment [sec. 7] inserted at the end of art. 2 the election now occurs uniformly in November.]

Eligibility. SEC. 4. No person shall be member of the house of representatives who shall not have attained the age of twenty-one years; be a male citizen of the United States, and shall have been an inhabitant of this state one year next preceding his election, and at the time of his election shall have had an actual residence of sixty days in the county or district he may have been chosen to represent.

[By an amendment to the constitution properly proposed (17 G. A., Joint Res. No. 5; 18 G. A., Joint Res. No. 6), and adopted by vote of the electors at the general election in 1880, the words "free white" were stricken from the second line of this section.]

Senators. SEC. 5. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and place as representatives; they shall be twenty-five years of age, and possess the qualifications of representatives as to residence and citizenship.

Number and classification. SEC. 6. The number of senators shall not be less than one-third nor more than one-half the representative body; and shall be so classified by lot that one class, being as nearly one-half as possible, shall be elected every two years. When the number of senators is increased, they shall be annexed by lot to one or the other of the two classes, so as to keep them as nearly equal in numbers as practicable.

Elections determined. SEC. 7. Each house shall choose its own officers, and judge of the qualification, election, and return of its own members. A contested election shall be determined in such manner as shall be directed by law.

Quorum. SEC. 8. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to transact business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

Authority of the houses. SEC. 9. Each house shall sit upon its own adjournments, keep a journal of its proceedings, and publish the same; determine its rules of proceedings, punish members for disorderly behavior, and with the consent of two-thirds, expel a member, but not a second time for the same offense; and shall have all other powers necessary for a branch of the general assembly of a free and independent state.

Protest. SEC. 10. Every member of the general assembly shall have the liberty to dissent from or protest against any act or resolution which he may think injurious to the public or an individual, and have the reasons for his dissent entered on the journals; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall, at the desire of any two members present, be entered on the journals.

Privilege. SEC. 11. Senators and representatives, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, shall be privileged from arrest during the session of the general assembly, and in going to or returning from the same.

Vacancies. SEC. 12. When vacancies occur in either house, the governor, or the person exercising the functions of governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

Doors open. SEC. 13. The doors of each house shall be open, except on such occasions as, in the opinion of the house, may require secrecy.

Adjournments. SEC. 14. Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting.

Bills. SEC. 15. Bills may originate in either house, and may be amended, altered, or rejected by the other; and every bill having passed both houses, shall be signed by the speaker and president of their respective houses.

Approval. SEC. 16. Every bill which shall have passed the general assembly, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the governor. If he approve, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon their journal, and proceed to reconsider it; if, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses, by yeas and nays, by a majority of two-thirds of the members of each house, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within three days after it shall have been presented to him (Sunday excepted), the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the general assembly, by adjournment, prevent such return. Any bill submitted to the governor for his approval during the last three days of a session of the general assembly, shall be deposited by him in the office of the secretary of state within thirty days after the adjournment, with his approval, if approved by him, and with his objections, if he disapproves thereof.

An act is not passed by the legislature until it is approved by the governor, who, for such purpose, is a part of the legislature: United States v. Fanning, Mor., 348.

The copy or certificate, in the printed acts, of the approval by the governor, is but evidence of the fact, and is not essential in order that the act may take effect. It is the approval of the original bill filed in the office of the secretary of state which is required to give the act validity: Dishon v. Smith, 10-212.

In case a bill is submitted to the governor for his approval during the last three days of a session of the general assembly, and he neither signs nor returns it with objections before the adjournment, it becomes a law only in case he subsequently approves it; and the filing of the bill within the thirty days mentioned, with the secretary of state, without approval or disapproval, will not give it the effect of a law: Darling v. Boesch, 67-702.

The fact that a law passed thirty-four years previously did not bear the signature of the governor, held not sufficient to render the act void. The presumption would be that the act became a law by failure of the governor to return it within proper time after its presentation to him: Collins v. Laucier, 45-702.

Majority vote. SEC. 17. No bill shall be passed unless by the assent of a majority of all the members elected to each branch of the general assembly, and the question upon the final passage shall be taken immediately upon its last reading, and the yeas and nays entered on the journal.

Receipts and expenditures. SEC. 18. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public money shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the general assembly.

Impeachment. SEC. 19. The house of representatives shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the senate. When sitting for that purpose, the senators shall be upon oath or affirmation; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

Who liable to; judgment. SEC. 20. The governor, judges of the supreme and district courts, and other state officers, shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor or malfeasance in office; but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under this state; but the party convicted or acquitted shall nevertheless be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment according to law. All other civil officers shall be tried for misdemeanors and malfeasance in office, in such manner as the general assembly may provide.

Members not appointed to office. SEC. 21. No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit under this state, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such term, except such offices as may be filled by elections by the people.

Disqualification. SEC. 22. No person holding any lucrative office under the United States, or this state, or any other power, shall be eligible to hold a seat in the general assembly. But offices in the militia, to which there is attached no annual salary, or the office of justice of the peace, or postmaster, whose compensation does not exceed one hundred dollars per annum, or notary public, shall not be deemed lucrative.

Failure to account. SEC. 23. No person who may hereafter be a collector or holder of public moneys, shall have a seat in either house of the general assembly, or be eligible to hold any office of trust or profit in this state, until he shall have accounted for and paid into the treasury all sums for which he may be liable.

Money drawn. SEC. 24. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law.

Compensation of members. SEC. 25. Each member of the first general assembly under this constitution shall receive three dollars per diem while in session; and the further sum of three dollars for every twenty miles traveled in going to and returning from the place where such session is held, by the nearest traveled route; after which they shall receive such compensation as shall be fixed by law; but no general assembly shall have the power to increase the compensation of its members. And when convened in extra session they shall receive the same mileage and per diem compensation as fixed by law for the regular session, and none other.

Laws, when to take effect; publication. SEC. 26. No law of the general assembly, passed at a regular session, of a public nature, shall take effect until the fourth day of July next, after the passage thereof. Laws passed at a special session shall take effect ninety days after the adjournment of the general assembly by which they were passed. If the general assembly shall deem any law of immediate importance, they may provide that the same shall take effect by publication in newspapers in the state.

An act not now in force, conferring upon the governor authority to publish acts of a general nature, and providing that they should take effect from such publication, held unconstitutional as delegating to the governor the power given to the legislature to determine what acts should go into effect by publication: Scott v. Clark, 1-70; Pilkey v. Gleason, 1-522.

Under the provision found in a former constitution, that statutes should take effect only when published and circulated by authority, held, that the publication without legislative authority was not sufficient to bring the statute into operation: Calkin v. State ex rel., 1 G. Gr., 68.

Further, as to publication and taking effect, see the statutory provision, § 37, and notes thereto.

Divorce. SEC. 27. No divorce shall be granted by the general assembly.

A divorce granted by the territorial legislature held to be valid, where it did not appear to have been granted for causes over which the district courts had jurisdiction: Levins v. Steator, 2 G. Gr., 604.

Lotteries. SEC. 28. No lottery shall be authorized by this state; nor shall the sale of lottery tickets be allowed.

A contract in furtherance of a lottery scheme held void: Guenther v. Dewein, 11-133.

Acts; one subject; expressed in title. SEC. 29. Every act shall embrace but one subject, and matters properly connected therewith; which subject shall be expressed in the title. But if any subject shall be embraced in an act which shall not be expressed in the title, such act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title.

Act to embrace but one subject: The intention of the provision of this section prohibiting more than one subject being embraced in the same act was to prevent the union in the same act of incongruous matter and of objects having no connection or relation. But there must be some limit to the division of matter into separate bills and acts. It cannot be held that each step should be embraced in a separate act. The unity of object is to be looked for in the ultimate end designed to be attained, and not in the details looking to that end: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280.

Therefore, held, that an act containing sixty-six sections, entitled "An act in relation to certain state roads," in which forty-six roads were established, others vacated, and provisions for the relocation of still others were made, was not in conflict with the constitutional provision: Ibid.

An act entitled "An act for revising and consolidating the laws and incorporating the city of Dubuque and establishing a city court therein," held not objectionable as embracing more than one subject: Davis v. Woolnough, 9-104, 107.

The act of 1855 for the suppression of intemperance, held not to embrace more than one subject, the several provisions therein being but so many steps fairly conducive to the end or object expressed in the title: Santo v. State, 2-165.

The statute (§ 2421) prohibiting the sale of malt or vinous liquors within two miles of city limits, and giving cities authority to regulate and license the sales of such liquors within those limits, held not unconstitutional as containing more than one subject: State v. Shroeder, 51-197.

The fact that the title of an act embraces more than one subject will not affect its validity: Ibid.

The act of 20 G. A., ch. 143, amendatory of prior legislation, intended for the suppression of the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and providing for additional penalties and remedies against the violators of the statute, does not embrace more than one subject under the prohibition of this provision: Martin v. Blattner, 68-286.

The statute in relation to school bonds (§§ 2961-2964) is not unconstitutional as embodying more than one subject: Ackley School Dist. v. Hall, 113 U. S., 135.

Subject to be embraced in title: Provisions made in an act entitled "An act to amend an act to incorporate the city of Muscatine," for enlarging the corporate boundaries of said city, held to be sufficiently specified in the title: Morford v. Unger, 8-82.

Provisions for excluding territory from the limits of cities already incorporated are sufficiently covered by the title of an act "for the incorporation of cities:" Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11-482.

Section applied: See Duncombe v. Prindle, 12-1.

Every law prescribing duties must have the sanction of liabilities; therefore, held, that the statutory provision (§ 2002) prescribing the liabilities of railroad companies in certain cases, etc., was sufficiently embraced in the title of the bill in which it was originally enacted, which was "An act in relation to the duties of railroad companies:" McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20-338.

Statutory provisions as to the method of enforcing a judgment against a municipal corporation are sufficiently connected with the subject of the chapter on executions, under which they are found, not to be objectionable under this constitutional provision: Porter v. Thomson, 22-391.

Where an act in one section legalized the organization of a school district, and in another legalized the acts of the officers thereof, held, that the second was so connected with the first that it was sufficiently embraced in the title "An act to legalize the organization of the," etc., or at least that the invalidity on this ground would extend only to the second section: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26-340.

In an act to amend the charter of the city of Keokuk was inserted a section purporting to legalize elections previously held to determine whether the city council should subscribe to the stock of a certain railroad; held, that such section was not in any sense an amendment to the charter, and the object was not embraced in the title, nor germane to anything contained therein, and the section was, therefore, void under a statutory provision (§ 669) containing similar provisions in reference to ordinances: Williamson v. Keokuk, 44-88.

A section contained in an act entitled "An act providing the place of bringing suits in certain cases," designating upon whom service might be made in such cases, held germane to the subject expressed in the title: Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Highsmith, 44-330.

The statute reorganizing the judicial districts and providing for the election of additional judges is not in conflict with this section: State v. Emmons, 72-265.

Local or special laws. SEC. 30. The general assembly shall not pass local or special laws in the following cases:

For the assessment and collection of taxes for state, county, or road purposes;

For laying out, opening, and working roads or highways;

For changing the names of persons;

For the incorporation of cities and towns;

For vacating roads, town plats, streets, alleys, or public squares;

For locating or changing county seats.

Laws general and uniform; boundaries of counties. In all the cases above enumerated, and in all other cases where a general law can be made applicable, all laws shall be general, and of uniform operation throughout the state; and no law changing the boundary lines of any county shall have effect until upon being submitted to the people of the counties affected by the change, at a general election, it shall be approved by a majority of the votes in each county, cast for and against it.

General and special laws: A statute which operates upon a particular condition and attaches to it certain consequences, so that whenever that condition exists such consequences follow, is a general and not a special statute: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112.

A law which affects all persons who may be brought within the relations for which it provides is a general and not a special law within the meaning of those provisions of the constitution prohibiting the passing of special laws in cases where general laws may be made applicable. Therefore, held, that the statute regulating the liability of railway companies for injuries to employees is general and not special, within the constitutional prohibition:

McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20-338; Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36-52.

Special laws as to taxation: This prohibition of special laws for the assessment and collection of taxes is not infringed by the provision (§ 1291) allowing a debtor to deduct the amount of his moneys and credits in listing his property for assessment: Macklot v. Davenport, 17-379.

A law remitting penalties upon taxes not paid within a certain time is not a special law within the meaning of this provision: Beecher v. Board of Supervisors, 50-538.

A curative act legalizing the levy and assessment of taxes made for a year when no law authorizing any levy and assessment was in force, held not in conflict with this section: Boardman v. Beckwith, 18-292.

For the incorporation of cities and towns: The legislature cannot pass a special act amending the charter of a municipal corporation. Such act would be in conflict with the clause prohibiting special acts for the incorporation of cities and towns, and would be a law not of general and uniform operation in a case where a general law could be made applicable: Ex parte Pritz, 9-30; Davis v. Woolnough, 9-104; Hetherington v. Bissell, 10-145; Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14-214.

This provision is not violated by a law empowering cities and towns incorporated under a special charter to amend such charter: Von Phul v. Hammer, 29-232.

Applicable to municipal corporations: A law applicable to all cities and towns existing under special charter is not unconstitutional, even though it be considered an amendment of their charters: State v. King, 37-462.

A law establishing a special court in a particular town named, and providing for the jurisdiction, etc., thereof, held unconstitutional, as being in fact an amendment to the city charter, and as being a local and special law in a case where a general law could be made applicable: McGregor v. Baylies, 19-43.

An act which operates upon a particular condition, and attaches to it certain consequences whenever that condition exists, is not in conflict with this provision. So an act applying only to cities under special charters was held not unconstitutional, although it could apply to but few cities: Haskel v. Burlington, 30-232.

A statute validating the acts of municipal corporations in levying special taxes in excess of the legal limit, to pay judgments, held constitutional: Iowa R. Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112.

As the legislature cannot amend the charter of a city, it cannot legalize an act of such city not authorized by the charter, as such an act would be equivalent to an amendment: Independent School Dist. v. Burlington, 60-500; Stange v. Dubuque, 62-303.

By the constitutional provision that no corporation shall be created by special laws, it was not intended to repeal city charters already granted: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

The provision of art. 8, § 12, authorizing the general assembly to amend or repeal all laws for the organization or creation of corporations, or granting of special or exclusive privileges or immunities, by a vote of two-thirds of each branch of the general assembly, has reference exclusively to corporations for pecuniary purposes, and does not authorize the amendment of the charters of municipal corporations by special statute: Ex parte Pritz, 9-30.

The statutory provisions relating to the enforcement of judgments against municipal corporations are not in any proper sense amendments to the charter of a city, and are not obnoxious to this constitutional prohibition: Porter v. Thomson, 22-391.

Although the passage of a local or special law incorporating a certain school district would be in conflict with the constitutional provision above referred to, yet a curative act legalizing a defective organization thereof is not unconstitutional. In such case a general law could not be made applicable: State ex rel. v. Squires, 26-340.

Other cases of special laws: A special act authorizing the building of a particular railroad, held not in violation of the provision of this section, for the reason that the object of the act was to execute certain trusts confided to the state to secure the building of a railroad on a particular route: Clinton v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 24-455.

Statutes legalizing official acts done without authority are not invalid on account of being special statutes, for the reason that a general statute could not be made applicable in such cases: Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 62-616.

An appropriation is necessarily made by a special act, and is not invalid because not general and uniform throughout the state: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64-275.

All statutes punishing criminally the violation of law, or providing for the prevention of crimes, are special in their character, and do not come within the restriction that they shall be of uniform operation with respect to different crimes. They may provide remedies and penalties as to nuisances, for instance, committed by the sale of intoxicating liquors, which are not extended to other cases of nuisance: Martin v. Blattner, 68-286.

An act providing for the holding of terms of court in a particular county at a place other than the county seat is not unconstitutional. A general law could not be applicable in such case: Cooper v. Mills County, 69-350.

The statutory provision (§ 235) reorganizing the judicial districts and providing for additional judges relates to subjects of legislation where a general law could not be made applicable: State v. Emmons, 72-265.

Uniformity of taxation: The restriction upon the power of taxation that taxes must be uniform is applicable generally to the principle or plan of taxation, and not to specific or particular taxes. It means that all individuals and all classes shall be uniformly taxed, and that all must contribute uniformly with like individuals and like classes to these burdens. The manner of imposing the burden must of necessity be left to the discretion of the legislative branch of the government: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

An act providing a special method of taxing express companies held not unconstitutional: United States Ex. Co. v. Ellyson, 28-370.

The mere fact that land in question being that of a non-resident was taxed higher than corresponding lands of residents will not be sufficient to show that there has been a discrimination against non-residents and will not render the tax title void: Beeson v. Johns, 8 S. C. Rep., 352.

The statutory provision (§ 1281) with reference to assessment of railroad bridges across the Mississippi and Missouri rivers is not unconstitutional, being of uniform operation with reference to the class of bridges therein mentioned: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74-283.

Uniform operation: As to the requirement that laws shall have a uniform operation, see art. 1, § 6, and notes.

Boundaries of counties: The provision that no law changing the boundary of a county shall have effect until submitted to the people of the counties affected, applied: Duncombe v. Prindle, 12-1.

Extra compensation. SEC. 31. No extra compensation shall be made to any officer, public agent, or contractor, after the service shall have been rendered, or the contract entered into; nor shall any money be paid on any claim, the subject-matter of which shall not have been provided for by pre-existing laws, and no public money or property shall be appropriated for local or private purposes, unless such appropriation, compensation, or claim be allowed by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly.

Oath of members. SEC. 32. Members of the general assembly shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be), that I will support the constitution of the United States, and the constitution of the state of Iowa, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of senator (or representative, as the case may be), according to the best of my ability." And members of the general assembly are hereby empowered to administer to each other the said oath or affirmation.

Census. SEC. 33. The general assembly shall, in the years one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and every ten years thereafter, cause an enumeration to be made of all the inhabitants of the state.

Apportionment. SEC. 34. The number of senators shall, at the next session following each period of making such enumeration, and the next session following each United States census, be fixed by law, and apportioned among the several counties according to the number of inhabitants in each.

Districts. SEC. 35. The senate shall not consist of more than fifty members, nor the house of representatives of more than one hundred; and they shall be apportioned among the several counties and representative districts of the state according to the number of inhabitants in each, upon ratios to be fixed by law; but no representative district shall contain more than four organized counties, and each district shall be entitled to at least one representative. Every county and district which shall have a number of inhabitants equal to one-half of the ratio fixed by law, shall be entitled to one representative; and any one county containing in addition to the ratio fixed by law one-half of that number, or more, shall be entitled to one additional representative. No floating district shall hereafter be formed.

[By proper legislative action proposed amendments striking the word "white" from each of the last three preceding sections as they originally stood were submitted to the electors at the general election in 1868 and adopted.]

Ratio of representation. SEC. 36. At its first session under this constitution, and at every subsequent regular session, the general assembly shall fix the ratio of representation, and also form into representative districts those counties which will not be entitled singly to a representative.

Districts. SEC. 37. When a congressional, senatorial, or representative district shall be composed of two or more counties, it shall not be entirely separated by any county belonging to another district; and no county shall be divided in forming a congressional, senatorial, or representative district.

Elections by general assembly. SEC. 38. In all elections by the general assembly, the members thereof shall vote viva voce; and the votes shall be entered on the journal.

ARTICLE 4.—EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Governor. SECTION 1. The supreme executive power of this state shall be vested in a chief magistrate, who shall be styled the governor of the state of Iowa.

Election and term. SEC. 2. The governor shall be elected by the qualified electors at the time and place of voting for members of the general assembly, and shall hold his office two years from the time of his installation, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

Lieutenant-governor; returns of elections. SEC. 3. There shall be a lieutenant-governor, who shall hold his office two years, and be elected at the same time as the governor. In voting for governor and lieutenant-governor, the electors shall designate for whom they vote as governor, and for whom as lieutenant-governor. The returns of every election for governor and lieutenant-governor, shall be sealed up and transmitted to the seat of government of the state, directed to the speaker of the house of representatives, who shall open and publish them in the presence of both houses of the general assembly.

Election by general assembly. SEC. 4. The persons respectively having the highest number of votes, for governor and lieutenant-governor, shall be declared duly elected; but in case two or more persons shall have an equal, and the highest number of votes for either office, the general assembly shall, by joint vote, forthwith proceed to elect one of said persons governor, or lieutenant-governor, as the case may be.

Contested elections. SEC. 5. Contested elections for governor, or lieutenant-governor, shall be determined by the general assembly in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

Eligibility. SEC. 6. No person shall be eligible to the office of governor, or lieutenant-governor, who shall not have been a citizen of the United States, and a resident of the state two years next preceding the election, and attained the age of thirty years at the time of said election.

Commander-in-chief. SEC. 7. The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the militia, the army, and navy of this state.

Duties. SEC. 8. He shall transact all executive business with the officers of government, civil and military, and may require information in writing from the officers of the executive department upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

Execution of laws. SEC. 9. He shall take care that the laws are faithfully executed.

Vacancies. SEC. 10. When any office shall, from any cause, become vacant, and no mode is provided by the constitution and laws for filling such vacancy, the governor shall have power to fill such vacancy, by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the general assembly, or at the next election by the people.

Convening assembly. SEC. 11. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the general assembly by proclamation, and shall state to both houses, when assembled, the purpose for which they shall have been convened.

The general assembly, when it is convened in special or extra session, has full legislative authority, unless its business is restricted by some constitutional provision. Its action is not confined to the special purpose for which it is convened, and it may enact any law at such session that it might at a regular session: Morford v. Unger, 8-82.

Message. SEC. 12. He shall communicate, by message, to the general assembly, at every regular session, the condition of the state, and recommend such matters as he shall deem expedient.

Adjournment. SEC. 13. In case of disagreement between the two houses with respect to the time of adjournment, the governor shall have power to adjourn the general assembly to such time as he may think proper; but no such adjournment shall be beyond the time fixed for the regular meeting of the next general assembly.

Disqualification. SEC. 14. No person shall, while holding any office under the authority of the United States, or this state, execute the office of governor, or lieutenant-governor, except as hereinafter expressly provided.

Term; compensation of lieutenant-governor. SEC. 15. The official term of governor, and lieutenant-governor, shall commence on the second Monday of January next after their election, and continue for two years, and until their successors are elected and qualified. The lieutenant-governor, while acting as governor, shall receive the same pay as provided for governor; and while presiding in the senate, shall receive as compensation therefor, the same mileage and double the per diem pay provided for a senator, and none other.

Pardons. SEC. 16. The governor shall have power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons, after conviction, for all offenses except treason and cases of impeachment, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law. Upon conviction for treason, he shall have power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the general assembly at its next meeting, when the general assembly shall either grant a pardon, commute the sentence, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. He shall have power to remit fines and forfeitures, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law; and shall report to the general assembly, at its next meeting, each case of reprieve, commutation, or pardon granted, and the reasons therefor; and also all persons in whose favor remission of fines and forfeitures shall have been made, and the several amounts remitted.

See the provision of statute (§ 6110) and notes.

Lieutenant-governor to act as governor. SEC. 17. In case of the death, impeachment, resignation, removal from office, or other disability of the governor, the powers and duties of the office for the residue of the term, or until he shall be acquitted, or the disability removed, shall devolve upon the lieutenant-governor.

President of senate. SEC. 18. The lieutenant-governor shall be president of the senate, but shall only vote when the senate is equally divided; and in case of his absence, or impeachment, or when he shall exercise the office of governor, the senate shall choose a president pro tempore.

Vacancies. SEC. 19. If the lieutenant-governor, while acting as governor, shall be impeached, displaced, resign, or die, or otherwise become incapable of performing the duties of the office, the president pro tempore of the senate shall act as governor until the vacancy is filled, or the disability removed; and if the president of the senate, for any of the above causes, shall be rendered incapable of performing the duties pertaining to the office of governor, the same shall devolve upon the speaker of the house of representatives.

The statutory provision (§ 1232) for the suspension by the governor of other officers elected by the people as here provided is not unconstitutional: Brown v. Duffus, 66-193. As to mandamus against executive officer, see notes to art. 3, § 1.

Seal of state. SEC. 20. There shall be a seal of this state, which shall be kept by the governor, and used by him officially, and shall be called the great seal of the state of Iowa.

Grants and commissions. SEC. 21. All grants and commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of the people of the state of Iowa, sealed with the great seal of the state, signed by the governor, and countersigned by the secretary of state.

Secretary, auditor and treasurer. SEC. 22. A secretary of state, auditor of state, and treasurer of state, shall be elected by the qualified electors, who shall continue in office two years, and until their successors are elected and qualified; and perform such duties as may be required by law.

ARTICLE 5.—JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

Courts. SECTION 1. The judicial power shall be vested in a supreme court, district court, and such other courts, inferior to the supreme court, as the general assembly may, from time to time, establish.

Judicial authority: The provisions (§ 580) for proceedings in court for the annexation of contiguous territory to a city are not unconstitutional as conferring upon a court powers not judicial in their nature. The question as to whether the conditions therein mentioned exist, or whether, under the circumstances, justice and equity require the annexation, are of a judicial character, and their determination may properly be vested in the judicial department: Burlington v. Leebrick, 43-252.

The charter of a city, conferring upon the mayor judicial authority, is not in conflict with the constitutional provision that the three departments of government shall be distinct. The mayor of a city is not a part of the government of the state of Iowa: Santo v. State, 2-165, 220.

Power to declare statute unconstitutional: The constitutional provision that no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of the three departments of government shall exercise any function appertaining to either of the others does not prohibit the judicial department from passing upon the legality of the acts of the officers of the several departments: Bryan v. Cattell, 15-538.

To the judicial department is intrusted the power to decide all questions of constitutional law. It belongs to that department, as a matter of right and duty, to declare every act of the legislature made in violation of the constitution, or any provision of it, null and void; but the violation of the constitution should be clear and apparent before the act should be declared void: Reed v. Wright, 2 G. Gr., 15.

To declare an act unconstitutional and void is the exercise of the highest power of the court and is not to be resorted to unless it becomes necessary. It is the duty of the court to give an act such a construction, if possible, as to avoid the necessity and uphold the act: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280.

The power of the court to hold an act of the legislature unconstitutional and void, while everywhere admitted, is of the most delicate and responsible nature, and should not be resorted to unless the case be clear, decisive and unavoidable: Santo v. State, 2-165, 208; McCormick v. Rusch, 15-127.

It is the duty of the court to give a statute such construction, if possible, as will maintain it rather than one which will render it unconstitutional: Santo v. State, 2-165, 208; State ex rel. v. County Judge, 2-280; Duncombe v.

Prindle, 12-1; Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21-221.

The supreme court will not consider constitutional questions unless it is necessary for the disposition of the case: Bond v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 67-712.

The court will not decide the constitutionality of a statute unless it be necessarily involved in a case which cannot be disposed of without such decision. If there is any other point upon which the case can be decided, the constitutionality of the statute will not be passed upon. Parties cannot, by waiving other questions, form an agreed case upon which the courts will decide the constitutional question: Dubuque & D. R. Co. v. Diehl, 64-635.

Where a party assails the constitutionality of a statute and goes into the supreme court as appellant, that court will scrutinize the record with considerable strictness to see whether the determination of the constitutional question is necessary to the decision of the case: State ex rel. v. Rosencrans, 65-382.

Appellate courts will not decide questions of constitutional law, unless absolutely necessary, when the bench is not full, or when all the judges cannot assist in the determination: McClure v. Owens, 21-133.

A statute should not be supported unless its constitutionality is so obvious as to admit of no doubt: Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11-482.

A court should declare an act of the legislature void only when it violates the constitution so clearly, palpably and plainly as to leave no doubt or hesitation in their minds: Morrison v. Springer, 15-304.

It is an elementary principle in determining the constitutionality of a statute that any reasonable doubt must be solved in favor of the legislative action, and the act sustained: Gates v. Brooks, 59-510.

The authority and power of the court to annul an act of the legislature in conflict with the fundamental law is universally acknowledged, but this authority should be exercised only when the statute is clearly, palpably, plainly and beyond reasonable doubt in conflict with the constitution: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

It is fundamental that a statute should not be declared unconstitutional unless it is clearly so: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67-199.

The court is not authorized to pass upon the justice or expediency of a statute. Expediency and public policy and state necessity are not within its domain. Therefore the court has no authority to annul an act of the legislature as unconstitutional unless it is found to be in clear, plain and palpable conflict with the constitution: Ibid.

Where the legislature had passed an act appropriating a sum of money to aid a private corporation in testing the validity of the barbed wire patents, held, that the courts had no jurisdiction to inquire into the question whether such an appropriation was wise or not: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64-275.

Under the provision of the constitution that a special statute should not be passed in cases where a general law could be made applicable, held, that the legislature is not the sole judge of whether a general law can be made applicable, but that the special law might be declared unconstitutional for the reason that a general law applicable to the subject might be framed: Ex parte Pritz, 9-30.

Where the statute allows an appeal from the action of the board of supervisors in establishing a road, a court in determining such appeal may pass upon the constitutionality of the act under which the road is laid out: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

Construction of the constitution: To arrive at the meaning of words used in a section of the constitution, sections preceding and following it, having reference to the same subject-matter, must be read and considered, unless the words to be construed have such a clear and express meaning that there can be but one conclusion as to what was meant: Allen v. Clayton, 63-11.

Where, after considering previous and subsequent sections relating to the same matter, there is any doubt as to the meaning of the language used, then the court may consider, first, the evil intended to be remedied; second, the debates on the subject in the convention which framed the constitution; third, the contemporaneous legislative construction of the constitution; and fourth, the practical construction adopted by the people: Ibid.

Effect of unconstitutionality: Where money is paid under mistake of law as to the unconstitutionality of a statute, there being no charge of fraud, duress, deceit or mistake of fact, it cannot be recovered back: Kraft v. Keokuk, 14-86.

So held where a license fee for the permission to sell intoxicating liquors had been paid to a city in pursuance of a provision of a statute which, after the expiration of the time for which the license was granted and the enjoyment of the privilege by the person paying the tax, was declared unconstitutional: Ibid.

Unconstitutionality of part: Statutes which are partly in conflict with the constitution will be held void no further than as to those parts which are unconstitutional. Provisions which are within the legislative authority will be enforced. The same rule applies in case of the ordinance of a city. But if the parts of the statute or ordinance be necessarily connected and dependent, the whole must fail with the void part: Keokuk v. Keokuk N. L. Packet Co., 45-196; Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S., 80.

An act void in part as unconstitutional is not necessarily void in toto. If sufficient remain to effect its object without the aid of the invalid portion, the latter only shall be rejected and the former shall stand: Santo v. State, 2-165, 205.

Therefore, held, that the prohibitory act of 1855, one section of which provided that it should take effect from a certain date provided it was adopted by a popular vote, became a law although the provision for such submission was unconstitutional: Ibid.

Where an act was in three sections, the subject-matter of the first and third being properly embraced in the title, held, that these portions were constitutional, although the second section referred to a subject-matter not embraced in the title: Henkle v. Keota, 68-334.

When one section of a statute is void and others valid, and it evidently appears that one section is the compensation or inducement for the other, and the connection between them is such as to warrant the belief that the valid part would not have been passed alone, then the whole should be held void. But, in a particular case, held, that one section was not an inducement to, but was entirely distinct and separate from, the other portion of the act, and that the balance of the act was valid although that one section was unconstitutional: Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47-196.

Where a portion of a statute is unconstitutional, and that portion affects the validity of the entire statute, it must all fall: Geebrick v. State, 5-491.

Where a city ordinance provided that an offense should be punished to a greater extent than the city had authority to inflict punishment, held, that a conviction thereunder would authorize the infliction of punishment up to the limit of the authority of the city: Keokuk v. Dressell, 47-597.

Decisions of other courts as authority: In questions arising upon the construction of the laws and constitution of this state, the supreme court of the United States is not the final arbiter, but it is required to look to the courts of this state for the rules of construction of its laws and constitution: McClure v. Owen, 26-243.

The construction given to the constitution of a foreign state by the court of last resort of such state will be regarded as authority by the courts of this state: Brown v. Phillippis, 16-210.

Superior and inferior courts: An inferior court is one from which an appeal lies to a superior court, and over which the latter has a supervisory power and control. Courts may be organized not inferior to the district, provided they be inferior to the supreme court: Hetherington v. Bissell, 10-145.

A statute for the organization of a city court possessing in some respects a co-ordinate jurisdiction with the district court, held not unconstitutional under such provision: Davis v. Woolnough, 9-104.

In general, with reference to this section, see Laird v. Dickerson, 40-665; Iowa Land Co. v. Soper, 39-112, 123.

Supreme court. SEC. 2. The supreme court shall consist of three judges, two of whom shall constitute a quorum to hold court.

As to the number of judges, see now § 177.

Judges elected. SEC. 3. The judges of the supreme court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the state, and shall hold their court at such time and place as the general assembly may prescribe. The judges of the supreme court so elected, shall be classified so that one judge shall go out of office every two years; and the judge holding the shortest term of office under such classification, shall be chief justice of the court during his term, and so on in rotation. After the expiration of their terms of office, under such classification, the term of each judge of the supreme court shall be six years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified. The judges of the supreme court shall be ineligible to any other office in the state, during the term for which they shall have been elected.

Jurisdiction. SEC. 4. The supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction only in cases in chancery, and shall constitute a court for the correction of errors at law, under such restrictions as the general assembly may by law prescribe; and shall have power to issue all writs and process necessary to secure justice to parties, and exercise a supervisory control over all inferior judicial tribunals throughout the state.

Law and equity: A marked distinction is made between law and equity, and the two jurisdictions should be kept distinct and not confounded: Cooper v. Armstrong, 3 G. Gr., 120.

And see on this point notes to § 4392.

Appeals: The provision (§ 4402) prohibiting appeals in cases where the amount in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars, unless the judge shall certify the question on which the decision of the supreme court is desired, is not unconstitutional as taking away the right of appeal and trial de novo in equity cases as provided by this section. Such statutory provision is a mere restriction or regulation upon the right of trial de novo: Andrews v. Burdick, 62-714. And see notes to § 4402.

Jurisdiction: See notes to § 4392.

Errors at law: The provision (§ 4398) dispensing with the necessity of a motion for new trial to secure review of actions at law is not in conflict with this provision. Previous to that statute the ruling of the lower court on a motion to set aside the verdict as contrary to the evidence was reviewed as a matter of law, and the section referred to simply acts as a standing motion for new trial: Coffin v. City Council, 26-515.

District court and judge. SEC. 5. The district court shall consist of a single judge, who shall be elected by the qualified electors of the district in which he resides. The judge of the district court shall hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified; and shall be ineligible to any other office, except that of judge of the supreme court, during the term for which he was elected.

This section does not prevent a judge from holding court in another district than his own, by exchange, under the provisions of § 230: State v. Stingley, 10-488.

Since the amendment of the constitution with reference to the judicial districts (art. 5, § 10), and the statutory provisions increasing the number of judges (§ 230), more than one judge may properly hold the district court in a county at the same time: State v. Emmons, 72-265.

When a judge is authorized by statute to perform a judicial act in vacation, his act, when done, has the force and effect of an act done by the court: McLane v. Granger, 71-152.

Jurisdiction. SEC. 6. The district court shall be a court of law and equity, which shall be distinct and separate jurisdictions, and have jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters arising in their respective districts, in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

The district court is here invested with all the powers of a court of law, and those of a court of equity, and the distinctions between the two jurisdictions is removed. This distinction the legislature cannot take away: Claussen v. Lafrenz, 4 G. Gr., 224.

Held, that in a proceeding in equity the court possessed no jurisdiction to render in favor of the party such judgment as he might show himself entitled to at law: Roberts v. Taliaferro, 7-110.

The jurisdiction of the district court is not limited by the provisions giving justices jurisdiction in cases where the amount does not exceed one hundred dollars: Nelson v. Gray, 2 G. Gr., 397; Hutton v. Drebbilis, 2 G. Gr., 592.

The jurisdiction of the district court, which is a superior court of general original jurisdiction, can only be taken away by express words or irresistible implication. Therefore, held, that Rev., § 2395, which prohibited the bringing of action in that court on claims against an estate for a mere money demand, except with the approbation of the county court, was not intended to take away the jurisdiction of that court, but merely as a restraint on the plaintiff: Sterritt v. Robinson, 17-61; and that the failure on the part of the plaintiff to obtain such leave must be set up as a defense, and could not be made the ground of a collateral attack on the judgment: Cooley v. Smith, 17-99.

Further, as to the jurisdiction of district courts, see Laird v. Dickerson, 40-665, 669.

Conservators of the peace. SEC. 7. The judges of the supreme and district courts shall be conservators of the peace throughout the state.

Style of process. SEC. 8. The style of all process shall be "The State of Iowa," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in the name and by the authority of the same.

An original notice is not "process" within the meaning of this section: Nichols v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co. 4 G. Gr., 42.

"Process" defined. "Prosecutions," as here used, are such criminal prosecutions as shall be instituted and prosecuted before the tribunals provided for in this article, under the statutes of the state, and do not include prosecutions for violations of city ordinances. The latter may be in the name of the city: Davenport v. Bird, 34-524.

The expressions "State of Iowa" and "The State of Iowa" are essentially the same: Hariman v. State, 2 G. Gr., 270.

An indictment in which the presentment is "in behalf of the state of Iowa" is good, although the expression "In the name and by the authority of the state of Iowa" is a more appropriate style. It need not be expressed in each proceeding in the conduct of a prosecution that it is made "in the name and by the authority," etc.: Wrocklege v. State, 1-167.

A prosecution to recover a fine should be in the name of the state, and not in the name of the treasurer of the county to which the fine would go when recovered: Rogers v. Alexander, 2 G. Gr., 443.

Salaries. SEC. 9. The salary of each judge of the supreme court shall be two thousand dollars per annum; and that of each district judge one thousand six hundred dollars per annum, until the year eighteen hundred and sixty; after which time they shall severally receive such compensation as the general assembly may, by law, prescribe; which compensation shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected.

Judicial districts. SEC. 10. The state shall be divided into eleven judicial districts; and after the year eighteen hundred and sixty, the general assembly may reorganize the judicial districts, and increase or diminish the number of districts, or the number of judges of the said court, and may increase the number of judges of the supreme court; but such increase or diminution shall not be more than one district, or one judge of either court, at any one session; and no reorganization of the districts, or diminution of the judges, shall have the effect of removing a judge from office. Such reorganization of the districts, or any change in the boundaries thereof, or any increase or diminution of the number of judges, shall take place every four years thereafter, if necessary, and at no other time.

[AMENDMENT.] At any regular session of the general assembly, the state may be divided into the necessary judicial districts for district court purposes, or the said districts may be reorganized and the number of the districts and the judges of said courts increased or diminished; but no reorganization of the districts or diminution of the judges shall have the effect of removing a judge from office.

Since the adoption of this amendment the legislature has power to provide for the election of more than one judge in a district, and to authorize two or more judges to hold court in the same county at the same time: State v. Emmons, 72-265.

When chosen. SEC. 11. The judges of the supreme and district courts shall be chosen at the general election; and the term of office of each judge shall commence on the first day of January next after his election.

Attorney-general. SEC. 12. The general assembly shall provide, by law, for the election of an attorney-general by the people, whose term of office shall be two years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.

County attorney. SEC. 13. The qualified electors of each county shall, at the general election in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-six, and every two years thereafter elect a county attorney, who shall be a resident of the county for which he is elected, and shall hold his office for two years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.

[By proper legislative action (19 G. A., Joint Res. No. 12, and 20 G. A., Joint Res. No. 13) a proposition to substitute the foregoing for the original section was submitted to the electors at the general election in 1884, and by them adopted. The original section was as follows:

SEC. 13. The qualified electors of each judicial district shall, at the time of the election of district judge, elect a district attorney, who shall be a resident of the district for which he is elected, and who shall hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.]

Carrying into effect. SEC. 14. It shall be the duty of the general assembly to provide for the carrying into effect of this article, and to provide for a general system of practice in all the courts of this state.

The grand jury. [SEC. 15.] The grand jury may consist of any number of members not less than five, nor more than fifteen, as the general assembly may by law provide, or the general assembly may provide for holding persons to answer for any criminal offense without the intervention of the grand jury.

ARTICLE 6.—MILITIA.

Who constitute. SECTION 1. The militia of this state shall be composed of all able-bodied male citizens, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, except such as are or may hereafter be exempt by the laws of the United States, or of this state; and shall be armed, equipped, and trained, as the general assembly may provide by law.

[By proper legislative action a proposed amendment striking the word "white" from this section, as it originally stood, was submitted to the electors at the general election in 1868 and adopted.]

Exemption. SEC. 2. No person or persons conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms shall be compelled to do military duty in time of peace; provided, that such person or persons shall pay an equivalent for such exemption in the same manner as other citizens.

Officers. SEC. 3. All commissioned officers of the militia (staff officers excepted) shall be elected by the persons liable to perform military duty, and shall be commissioned by the governor.

ARTICLE 7.—STATE DEBTS.

Credit not to be loaned SECTION 1. The credit of the state shall not, in any manner, be given or loaned to, or in aid of, any individual, association, or corporation; and the state shall never assume, or become responsible for the debts or liabilities of any individual, association, or corporation, unless incurred in time of war for the benefit of the state.

Limitation. SEC. 2. The state may contract debts to supply casual deficits or failures in revenues; or to meet expenses not otherwise provided for;

but the aggregate amount of such debts, direct and contingent, whether contracted by virtue of one or more acts of the general assembly, or at different periods of time, shall never exceed the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; and the money arising from the creation of such debts shall be applied to the purpose for which it was obtained, or to repay the debts so contracted, and to no other purpose whatever.

In determining the state indebtedness the indebtedness of the counties of the state is not to be considered: Dubuque County v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 4 G. Gr., 1.

Losses to school funds. SEC. 3. All losses to the permanent school, or university fund of this state, which shall have been occasioned by the defalcation, mismanagement, or fraud of the agents or officers controlling and managing the same, shall be audited by the proper authorities of the state. The amount so audited shall be a permanent funded debt against the state, in favor of the respective fund sustaining the loss, upon which not less than six per cent. annual interest shall be paid. The amount of liability so created shall not be counted as a part of the indebtedness authorized by the second section of this article.

The school fund belongs to the state, and it same inviolate: Des Moines County v. Harker, has solemnly pledged itself to maintain the 34-84.

War debts. SEC. 4. In addition to the above limited power to contract debts, the state may contract debts to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, or defend the state in war; but the money arising from the debts so contracted shall be applied to the purpose for which it was raised, or to repay such debts, and to no other purpose whatever.

Question of incurring debt submitted. SEC. 5. Except the debts hereinbefore specified in this article, no debt shall be hereafter contracted by, or on behalf of this state, unless such debt shall be authorized by some law for some single work or object, to be distinctly specified therein; and such law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax, sufficient to pay the interest on such debt, as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt, within twenty years from the time of the contracting thereof; but no such law shall take effect until at a general election it shall have been submitted to the people, and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all money raised by authority of such law, shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt created thereby; and such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each county, if one is published therein, throughout the state, for three months preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people.

Legislature may repeal. SEC. 6. The legislature may, at any time, after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same; and may at any time forbid the contracting of any further debt, or liability, under such law; but the tax imposed by such law, in proportion to the debt or liability which may have been contracted in pursuance thereof, shall remain in force and be irrepealable, and be annually collected, until the principal and interest are fully paid.

Tax imposed distinctly stated. SEC. 7. Every law which imposes, continues, or revives a tax, shall distinctly state the tax, and the object to which it is to be applied; and it shall not be sufficient to refer to any other law to fix such tax or object.

ARTICLE 8.—CORPORATIONS.

How created. SECTION 1. No corporation shall be created by special laws; but the general assembly shall provide by general laws, for the organization of all corporations hereafter to be created, except as hereinafter provided.

It was not intended hereby to repeal city charters already granted: Warren v. Henly, 31-31.

Local or special laws for incorporation of cities and towns prohibited, see art. 3, § 30.

Property taxable. SEC. 2. The property of all corporations for pecuniary profit shall be subject to taxation the same as that of individuals.

Taxation of corporations: This section requires the legislature to provide for the taxation of such property the same as private property, and an act releasing such property from city taxes is void: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633, 642; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39-56. And see Iowa R. Land Co. v. Woodbury County, 39-172.

A statute relating to the taxation of express and telegraph companies held not in violation of this provision, for the reason that it made such property liable to taxation in the same manner and to the same extent when held by individuals as when held by a body corporate: United States Ex. Co. v. Ellyson, 28-370.

Taxation of shares in an incorporated company, which may have some value in addition to the interest in the capital stock by reason of the good-will, etc., of the business of the corporation, does not result in such inequality of taxation between the shareholders in the corporation and individuals holding property similarly employed as to make such taxation unequal: Davenport Nat. Bank v. Board of Equalization, 64-140.

Railroad property: So held, also, under 14 G. A., ch. 26, regulating the taxation of railroad property: Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47-196.

No constitutional rights are infringed by providing a different method for assessing railroad property than that provided for assessing property of the same nature belonging to other owners: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67-199.

As to taxation of railroad property in general, see Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 16-348; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Dubuque, 17-120.

Taxation of water-works: The fact that a company operating water-works is exempted from taxation in part payment for water furnished the city does not render the provision a violation of the constitutional requirement as to taxation of corporate property: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396.

State not to be a stockholder. SEC. 3 The state shall not become a stockholder in any corporation, nor shall it assume or pay the debt or liability of any corporation, unless incurred in time of war for the benefit of the state.

The state as stockholder in corporation: The provision of this section is not violated by authorizing aid to be voted by counties of the state towards the construction of a railway: Dubuque County v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 4 G. Gr., 1.

An act making an appropriation to a corporation to assist it in testing the validity of the barb wire patents, held not unconstitutional under the same provision: Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64-275.

Municipal corporation. SEC. 4. No political or municipal corporation shall become a stockholder in any banking corporation, directly or indirectly.

Act creating banking associations. SEC. 5. No act of the general assembly, authorizing or creating corporations or associations with banking powers, nor amendments thereto, shall take effect, or in any manner be in force, until the same shall have been submitted, separately, to the people, at a general or special election, as provided by law, to be held not less than three months after the passage of the act, and shall have been approved by a majority of all the electors voting for and against it at such election.

This restriction upon legislative authority to pass or amend acts authorizing or creating corporations or associations with banking powers is not intended to forbid the repeal by the legislature of acts organizing banks, it being required, however, by § 13 of this article, that such repeal be by a two-thirds vote: Morseman v. Younkln, 27-350.

State bank. SEC. 6. Subject to the provisions of the foregoing section, the general assembly may also provide for the establishment of a state bank with branches.

Special basis. SEC. 7. If a state bank be established, it shall be founded on an actual specie basis, and the branches shall be mutually responsible for each other's liabilities upon all notes, bills and other issues intended for circulation as money.

General banking law. SEC. 8. If a general banking law shall be enacted, it shall provide for the registry and countersigning, by an officer of state, of all bills, or paper credit designed to circulate as money, and require security to the full amount thereof, to be deposited with the state treasurer, in United States stocks, or in interest-paying stocks of states in good credit and standing, to be rated at ten per cent. below their average value in the city of New York, for the thirty days next preceding their deposit; and in case of a depreciation of any portion of such stocks, to the amount of ten per cent. on the dollar, the bank or banks owning said stock shall be required to make up said deficiency by depositing additional stocks; and said law shall also provide for the recording of the names of all stockholders in such corporations, the amount of stock held by each, the time of any transfer, and to whom.

Stockholders responsible. SEC. 9. Every stockholder in a banking corporation or institution shall be individually responsible and liable to its creditors, over and above the amount of stock by him or her held, to an amount equal to his or her respective shares so held, for all its liabilities accruing while he or she remains such stockholder.

The provision of this section rendering stockholders in a banking corporation or institution individually liable to an amount equal to their respective shares, applies only to banks of issue and not to banks merely of discount and deposit: Allen v. Clayton, 63-11.

The liability of the stockholder is not limited to a proportional sum, nor is it affected by any fraud or wrong of the officers of the bank or a receiver, and he cannot delay recovery in order to secure contribution: Stewart v. Lay, 45-604.

On this subject, see § 1646.

Bill-holders preferred. SEC. 10. In case of the insolvency of any banking institution, the bill-holders shall have a preference over its other creditors.

Suspension of specie payments. SEC. 11. The suspension of specie payments by banking institutions shall never be permitted or sanctioned.

Amendment or repeal of charters; exclusive privileges. SEC. 12. Subject to the provisions of this article, the general assembly shall have power to amend or repeal all laws for the organization or creation of corporations, or granting of special or exclusive privileges or immunities, by a vote of two-thirds of each branch of the general assembly; and no exclusive privilege, except as in this article provided, shall ever be granted.

The provisions as to liability of railroads (§§ 2002, 2007, 2008) are not unconstitutional as in conflict with this section: Bucklew v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-603; Central Trust Company v. Sloan, 65-655.

This section has reference exclusively to corporations for pecuniary purposes, and does not authorize the amendment or repeal of laws for the organization or creation of municipal corporations, in violation of art. 3, § 30: Ex parte Pritz, 9-30.

ARTICLE 9.—EDUCATION AND SCHOOL LANDS.

1.—Education.

Board of education. SECTION 1. The educational interest of the state, including common schools and other educational institutions, shall be under the management of a board of education, which shall consist of the lieutenant-governor, who shall be the presiding officer of the board, and have the casting vote in case of a tie, and one member to be elected from each judicial district in the state.

Who eligible. SEC. 2. No person shall be eligible as a member of said board who shall not have attained the age of twenty-five years, and shall have been one year a citizen of the state.

How elected. SEC. 3. One member of said board shall be chosen by the qualified electors of each district, and shall hold the office for the term of four years, and until his successor is elected and qualified. After the first election under this constitution, the board shall be divided, as nearly as practicable, into two equal classes, and the seats of the first class shall be vacated after the expiration of two years; and one-half of the board shall be chosen every two years thereafter.

First session. SEC. 4. The first session of the board of education shall be held at the seat of government, on the first Monday of December, after their election; after which the general assembly may fix the time and place of meeting.

Limited. SEC. 5. The session of the board shall be limited to twenty days, and but one session shall be held in any one year, except upon extraordinary occasions, when, upon the recommendation of two-thirds of the board, the governor may order a special session.

Secretary. SEC. 6. The board of education shall appoint a secretary, who shall be the executive officer of the board, and perform such duties as may be imposed upon him by the board, and the laws of the state. They shall keep a journal of their proceedings, which shall be published and distributed in the same manner as the journals of the general assembly.

Rules and regulations. SEC. 7. All rules and regulations made by the board shall be published and distributed to the several counties, townships, and school districts, as may be provided for by the board, and when so made, published, and distributed, they shall have the force and effect of law.

Power to make. SEC. 8. The board of education shall have full power and authority to legislate and make all needful rules and regulations in relation to common schools, and other educational institutions, that are instituted, to receive aid from the school or university fund of this state; but all acts, rules, and regulations of said board may be altered, amended, or repealed by the general assembly; and when so altered, amended, or repealed, they shall not be re-enacted by the board of education.

The legislature has thus full power to make needful regulations, and this power has been given to district boards; and in the absence of abuse of such power being shown, the rules of such boards will not be held unconstitutional (per Cole, J.): Burdick v. Babcock, 31-562, 571.

Under this section, held, that a statute providing a full system of public instruction for the state was unconstitutional, on the ground that the legislature had no authority to pass such an act, the powers in reference to such matters being committed to the board of education: District T^p v. Dubuque, 7-263; High School v. Clayton County, 9-175.

High schools are deemed a part of the common school system of the state, though they are not to derive any support or assistance from the school fund: High School v. Clayton County, 9-175.

Under the provisions of this section, authorizing an amendment by the legislature of regulations of the board of education, held, that an alteration of an act of the board so as to extend and apply its provisions to unincorporated as well as to incorporated cities and towns was an amendment which the legislature might properly make: Fort Dodge City School Dist. v. District T^p, 15-434.

Governor ex officio a member. SEC. 9. The governor of the state shall be, ex officio, a member of said board.

Expenses. SEC. 10. The board shall have no power to levy taxes, or make appropriations of money. Their contingent expenses shall be provided for by the general assembly.

State university. SEC. 11. The state university shall be established at one place without branches at any other place, and the university fund shall be applied to that institution, and no other.

Common schools. SEC. 12. The board of education shall provide for the education of all the youths of the state, through a system of common schools, and such schools shall be organized and kept in each school district at least three months in each year. Any district failing, for two consecutive years, to organize and keep up a school, as aforesaid, may be deprived of their portion of the school fund.

Held, that the expression "all youths" prohibits any distinction being made between white and colored children: Clark v. Board of Directors, etc., 24-266; Smith v. Directors, 40-518; Dove v. Independent School District, 41-689.

Compensation. SEC. 13. The members of the board of education shall each receive the same per diem during the term of their session, and mileage going to and returning therefrom, as members of the general assembly.

Quorum; style of acts. SEC. 14. A majority of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; but no rule, regulation, or law, for the government of common schools or other educational institutions shall pass without the concurrence of a majority of all the members of the board, which shall be expressed by the yeas and nays on the final passage. The style of all acts of the board shall be, "Be it enacted by the board of education of the state of Iowa."

Board may be abolished. SEC. 15. At any time after the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, the general assembly shall have power to abolish or reorganize said board of education, and provide for the educational interest of the state in any other manner that to them shall seem best and proper.

The board of education was abolished by 10 G. A., ch. 52, § 1.

2.—School Funds and School Lands.

Under control of general assembly. SECTION 1. The educational and school fund and lands, shall be under the control and management of the general assembly of this state.

Permanent fund. SEC. 2. The university lands, and the proceeds thereof, and all moneys belonging to said fund shall be a permanent fund for the sole use of the state university. The interest arising from the same shall be annually appropriated for the support and benefit of said university.

Lands appropriated. SEC. 3. The general assembly shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of intellectual, scientific, moral, and agricultural improvement. The proceeds of all lands that have been, or hereafter may be, granted by the United States to this state, for the support of schools, which may have been or shall hereafter be sold, or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new states, under an act of congress, distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several states of the Union, approved in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heir, and also such per cent. as has been or may hereafter be granted by congress, on the sale of lands in this state, shall be, and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all rents of the unsold lands, and such other means as the general assembly may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the state.

See notes to § 7, infra.

Fines, etc., how appropriated. SEC. 4. The money which may have been or shall be paid by persons as an equivalent from exemption from military duty, and the clear proceeds of all fines collected in the several counties for any breach of the penal laws, shall be exclusively applied in the several counties in which such money is paid, or fine collected, among the several school districts of said counties, in proportion to the number of youths subject to enumeration in such districts, to the support of common schools, or the establishment of libraries, as the board of education shall from time to time provide.

For statutory provisions, see §§ 2994 and 4606.

It is not contemplated that the fees of the prosecuting attorney in enforcing the collection of the fines, etc., due to the school fund shall be deducted from the whole amount collected. The term "clear proceeds" evidently refers to a case of forfeiture of property or payment of funds in orders or warrants: Woodward v. Gregg, 3 G. Gr., 287.

The double damages authorized by § 1972 to be recovered against railroad companies is not a fine such as is contemplated in this section, but is simply a measure of damages: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

Proceeds of lands. SEC. 5. The general assembly shall take measures for the protection, improvement, or other disposition of such lands as have been, or may hereafter be reserved, or granted by the United States, or any person or persons to this state, for the use of the university, and the funds accruing from the rents or sale of such lands, or from any other source for the purpose aforesaid, shall be, and remain, a permanent fund, the interest of which shall be applied to the support of said university, for the promotion of literature, the arts and sciences, as may be authorized by the terms of such grant. And it shall be the duty of the general assembly, as soon as may be, to provide effectual means for the improvement and permanent security of the funds of said university.

Agents of school funds. SEC. 6. The financial agents of the school funds shall be the same that, by law, receive and control the state and county revenue, for other civil purposes, under such regulations as may be provided by law.

Distribution. SEC. 7. The money subject to the support and maintenance of common schools shall be distributed to the districts in proportion to the number of youths, between the ages of five and twenty-one years, in such manner as may be provided by the general assembly.

An act as to distribution of the school fund, held unconstitutional as in conflict with this section: District Tp v. County Judge, 13-250.

ARTICLE 10.—AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

How proposed; submission. SECTION 1. Any amendment or amendments to this constitution may be proposed in either house of the general assembly; and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two houses, such proposed amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election, and shall be published, as provided by law, for three months previous to the time of making such choice; and if, in the general assembly so next chosen as aforesaid, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each house, then it shall be the duty of the general assembly to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner, and at such time as the general assembly shall provide; and if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments by a majority of the electors qualified to vote for members of the general assembly, voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of the constitution of this state.

[Statutory provisions as to submission, see §§ 59-63, page 14. For amendments, see art. 1, § 26; art. 2, §§ 1 and [7]; art. 3, §§ 4, 33, 34 and 35; art. 5, §§ 10, 13 and [17]; art. 6, § 1.]

It is the design and intention of this provision that the proposed amendment should be so entered upon the journals that it can be known from an examination of such journals what it is that has been agreed to by the houses of the general assembly; and such entry is the highest evidence of what the amendment is which is agreed to by each house. Therefore, where it appeared from the journal of the senate of one general assembly that the proposed amendment, as passed by it, was different from the same amendment as concurred in by the subsequent general assembly, and submitted to and voted upon by the people, held, that it was not legally adopted and did not become a part of the constitution, although the joint resolution of the general assembly first acting upon the amendment, which was signed by the presiding officers of the two houses and by the governor, and preserved in the office of the secretary of state, showed such amendment to be the same as that subsequently concurred in and submitted; also, held, that the recital in the joint resolution of the general assembly which submitted said amendment to vote of the people, that it had been agreed to by the previous general assembly, was not conclusive upon the court: Koehler v. Hill, 60-543.

The provisions as to the amendment of the constitution are not simply directory, and the legislative department is not the sole judge as to whether or not they have been complied with, but the courts have jurisdiction to inquire into the question whether these requirements have been observed, and if not to declare the amendment invalid: Ibid.

More than one. SEC. 2. If two or more amendments shall be submitted at the same time, they shall be submitted in such manner that the electors shall vote for or against each of such amendments separately.

Convention. SEC. 3. At the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and in each tenth year thereafter, and also at such times as the general assembly may, by law, provide, the question, "Shall there be a convention to revise the constitution, and amend the same?" shall be decided by the electors qualified to vote for members of the general assembly; and in case a majority of the electors so qualified, voting at such election for and against such proposition, shall decide in favor of a convention for such purpose, the general assembly, at its next session, shall provide by law for the election of delegates to such convention.

ARTICLE 11.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Jurisdiction of justice of the peace. SECTION 1. The jurisdiction of justices of the peace shall extend to all civil cases (except cases in chancery, and cases where the question of title to real estate may arise), where the amount in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars, and by the consent of parties may be extended to any amount not exceeding three hundred dollars.

The jurisdiction of justices in such cases is not exclusive, but concurrent with courts of record: Nelson v. Gray, 2 G. Gr., 397; Hutton v. Drebilbis, 2 G. Gr., 593.

Counties. SEC. 2. No new county shall be hereafter created containing less than four hundred and thirty-two square miles; nor shall the territory of any organized county be reduced below that area; except the county of Worth, and the counties west of it along the northern boundary of this state, may be organized without additional territory.

An act organizing the county of Crocker held unconstitutional under this section: Garfield v. Brayton, 33-16. lature from establishing a second county seat in a county already organized: Trimble v. State, 2 G. Gr., 404.

This section held not to prohibit the legis-

Indebtedness of political or municipal corporations. SEC. 3. No county, or other political or municipal corporation shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner, or for any purpose, to an amount in the aggregate, exceeding five per centum on the value of the taxable property within such county or corporation—to be ascertained by the last state and county tax lists, previous to the incurring of such indebtedness.

What indebtedness excessive: Outstanding warrants as well as bonds are to be taken into consideration in estimating the indebtedness. The constitutional inhibition applies to indebtedness incurred in any manner or for any purpose: Council Bluffs v. Stewart, 51-385.

It applies to indebtedness already due as well as that to become due: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396.

If the corporation has money in its treasury to meet its indebtedness, the issue of warrants to any amount, however great, over the constitutional limit, will not be a violation of such provisions: Dively v. Cedar Falls, 27-227.

The indebtedness here contemplated is different from an obligation to pay. A contract under which a certain sum within the constitutional limit was to be paid each year would be valid, although the entire amount of the obligation of the contract was greatly in excess of the constitutional limit: Ibid.

This section applies not only to a present indebtedness, but also to such a one as is payable on a contingency at some future time, or which depends on some contingency before a liability is created; but it must appear that such contingency is sure to take place, irrespective of any action taken or option exercised in the future. Therefore, held, that an ordinance of a city authorizing the erection of water-works by a private company, with the provision that the city might, at its option, purchase them in the future on certain terms, etc., was not the incurring of an indebtedness: Burlington Water Co. v. Woodward, 49-58.

Bonds issued in payment of a valid judgment, not exceeding the constitutional limit when rendered, will be valid, although at the time they are issued the limit of indebtedness has been reached. The issue of such bonds does not increase the indebtedness: Stowar City v. Weare, 59-95.

The constitutional limit does not relate to interest and coupons upon bonds legally issued, and although they may swell the total indebtedness to a sum in excess of the constitutional limit they will be valid: Durant v. Iowa County, Woolworth, 69.

Bona fide holder: Bonds issued in excess of the constitutional limit are void without regard to the good faith and want of notice of the holder: McPherson v. Foster, 43-48; Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44-122.

An order or warrant issued in excess of the constitutional limitation is void. Such order not being negotiable, a bona fide holder will acquire no rights thereunder: National State Bank v. Independent Dist., 39-490.

A party contracting with a city, whereby indebtedness is created, must at his peril take notice of the financial standing and condition of the city, and whether the proposed indebtedness is in excess of the constitutional limit: French v. Burlington, 42-614.

Lien: The statute (§§ 3324, 3325) giving to holders of bonds issued in excess of the constitutional limit a lien for material furnished by them upon a building in which it should be used, held unconstitutional, in that it was sought thereby to render the corporation liable for such improvements beyond its constitutional limit of indebtedness: Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44-122.

A guaranty by a municipal corporation which is beyond the constitutional limit is void: Carter v. Dubuque, 35-416.

Estoppel: Tax payers of a city do not, by failure to object to the contracting of an indebtedness in excess of the constitutional limit, estop themselves from insisting upon the invalidity of such indebtedness: McPherson v. Foster, 43-48.

Portion invalid: If a part of the indebtedness is in excess of the constitutional limit, the portion within the limit will be valid and enforced, while the portion beyond the limit will be held void: Ibid.

Where, in such a case, bonds were issued bearing the same date and for portions of the same indebtedness, held, that the bonds would be considered valid for the pro rata proportion of the indebtedness not in excess of the constitutional limit: Ibid.

Judgment bonds: Bonds issued in payment of a judgment recovered on debts contracted in excess of the constitutional limit are valid in the hands of innocent holders: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 52-26.

Restraining tax: It is not ground for restraining the collection of a tax that, when collected, it will be applied to an unconstitutional indebtedness: Strohm v. Iowa City, 47-42.

No defense: In an action against a city for damages by reason of negligence in the care of its streets, it is no defense that the city is already indebted beyond the constitutional limit: Bartle v. Des Moines, 38-414; Rice v. Des Moines, 40-638; Thomas v. Burlington, 69-140.

An indebtedness, strictly speaking, cannot be created, except by contract, either express or implied, and the indebtedness prohibited by the constitution is such as is created by the voluntary action of both the debtor and creditor: Thomas v. Burlington, 69-140.

So where the city has unlawfully collected taxes, an action to recover back taxes thus unlawfully collected will not be defeated by reason of the indebtedness of the city beyond the constitutional limit: Ibid.

Current revenues: A city has a right to obtain and apply its current revenues to the payment of its ordinary and current expenses, even as against a judgment creditor; and where the contract made by the municipal corporation pertains to its ordinary expenses and is, together with other like expenses, within the limit of its current revenues, and such special taxes as it may legally and in good faith intend to levy therefor, such contract does not constitute the "incurring of indebtedness" within the meaning of the constitutional provision: Grant v. Davenport, 36-396.

This constitutional limitation is applicable to the expenses of necessary as well as convenient improvement of the streets. It matters not for what purpose the indebtedness is incurred; it is prohibited for any purpose in excess of the limit, unless it can be reasonably shown that it can be liquidated and paid from the ordinary current revenues of the city: French v. Burlington, 42-614.

In ascertaining whether the contemplated indebtedness is within the current revenue, such revenue as is absolutely certain to be received from the collection of taxes may be anticipated to at least some extent, and an indebtedness accordingly contracted: Ibid.

In ascertaining the whole resources of a city, taxes levied should be regarded as available assets up to the time of the annual tax sale, but after that period the burden is on the city to show that such taxes have any value which can be counted as available for the purpose of meeting a proposed indebtedness: Ibid.

Uncollected taxes: In ascertaining the entire indebtedness with reference to the constitutional limitation, uncollected taxes and the levy for the current year will not be taken into account as reducing such indebtedness (explaining French v. Burlington, 42-614): Council Bluffs v. Stewart, 51-385.

The tax lists are not made until after the equalization in June, and are not completed until after the levy of taxes in September. And where a tax was voted in May, which was in excess of the five per cent. limit as based upon the tax list of the previous year, held, that it was not proper to consider the assessor's lists of the current year as showing that such tax was not in excess of the constitutional limit: Wilkinson v. Van Orman, 70-230.

Where the question was whether, at the time certain orders were given by the secretary of a school district upon the treasury, its indebtedness exceeded its constitutional limit, it appeared that certain lands included in the tax list were not valued therein, and that the taxes thereon were marked paid, held, that evidence as to the value of such lands was admissible, subject to the right of defendant to show the rate per cent. of the taxes and the amount paid, and thus ascertain the assessed value: Wormley v. District T^p, 45-666.

What corporations: This constitutional provision as to the limit of indebtedness is applicable to school districts: Winspear v. District T^p, 37-542; Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44-122.

Also to cities organized under special charter prior to the constitution: Scott v. Davenport, 34-208; Council Bluffs v. Stewart, 51-385.

Previous contracts: The adoption of the constitutional provision as to limit of indebtedness did not impair any contract previously made, although in excess of the limit imposed; but any provisions of a city charter authorizing the contracting of indebtedness in excess of the limit fixed were thereby repealed: Scott v. Davenport, 34-208.

The fact that, as a result of the incurring of the indebtedness, the city is to acquire valuable property productive of revenue, does not take the case out of the constitutional provision: Ibid.

A contract for gas, made before the constitutional limitation was adopted, held binding, although the effect was to impose an indebtedness in excess of the limit: Davenport Gas, etc., Co. v. Davenport, 13-229.

Contracts for improvements: The provisions of a city charter limiting the amount of indebtedness which the city council might contract for borrowed money, held not applicable to indebtedness contracted for making improvements: Rice v. Keokuk, 15-579.

Where a city enters into a contract with a contractor for the building of a sewer with the agreement that the contractor shall accept in full satisfaction for the whole work certificates of assessment made upon the property adjacent to the sewer, such contract does not create a debt against the city within the meaning of this section: Davis v. Des Moines, 71-500.

Boundaries. SEC. 4. The boundaries of the state may be enlarged, with the consent of congress and the general assembly.

Oath of office. SEC. 5. Every person elected or appointed to any office, shall, before entering upon the duties thereof, take an oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States, and of this state, and also an oath of office.

How vacancies filled. SEC. 6. In all cases of elections to fill vacancies in office occurring before the expiration of a full term, the person so elected shall hold for the residue of the unexpired term; and all persons appointed to fill vacancies in office, shall hold until the next general election, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

Where there was a failure to elect a county officer at a general election at which such office should have been filled, and the incumbent held over, qualifying anew as required by statute, held, that he filled a vacancy only, and his successor should be elected at the next general election: Dyer v. Bagwell, 54-487; Boone County v. Jones, 58-373.

This section explicitly defines and prescribes

the term of office of a person who is appointed to fill a vacancy in an office where the statutes authorize the filling of such vacancy by the board of supervisors, and such board cannot afterward, except for the causes recognized by statute, remove the person appointed before the expiration of the term: State v. Chalburn, 63-659.

Land grants located. SEC. 7. The general assembly shall not locate any of the public lands which have been, or may be granted by congress to this state, and the location of which may be given to the general assembly, upon lands actually settled, without the consent of the occupant. The extent of the claim of such occupant so exempted, shall not exceed three hundred and twenty acres.

Seat of government; state university. SEC. 8. The seat of government is hereby permanently established, as now fixed by law, at the city of Des Moines, in the county of Polk; and the state university at Iowa City, in the county of Johnson.

ARTICLE 12.—SCHEDULE.

Supreme law. SECTION 1. This constitution shall be the supreme law of the state, and any law inconsistent therewith, shall be void. The general assembly shall pass all laws necessary to carry this constitution into effect.

Laws in force. SEC. 2. All laws now in force, and not inconsistent with this constitution, shall remain in force until they shall expire or be repealed.

Any provisions in a city charter inconsistent with the constitution (as, for instance, with § 3 of the preceding article) were repealed by the adoption of the constitution: Dively v. Cedar Falls, 27-227; Scott v. Davenport, 34-208.

Proceedings not affected. SEC. 3. All indictments, prosecutions, suits, pleas, complaints, process, and other proceedings pending in any of the courts, shall be prosecuted to final judgment and execution; and all appeals, writs of error, certiorari, and injunctions, shall be carried on in the several courts, in the same manner as now provided by law, and all offenses, misdemeanors, and crimes that may have been committed before the taking effect of this constitution, shall be subject to indictment, trial, and punishment, in the same manner as they would have been had not this constitution been made.

A crime committed prior to the adoption of punishment under the provisions of the prior this constitution, held subject to trial and constitution: State v. Axt, 6-511.
